MCT performer, ex-football pro Zachery dies following assault

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

A popular Midland Community Theatre performer and former professional football player died early Tuesday morning following an assault.

James Zachery, 36, was chased and attacked by several men in the 1300 block of East Industrial Road about 1 a.m., according to witnesses.

Before being transported to the hospital, he told police several men assaulted him. He later lapsed into unconsciousness and died in the emergency room.

Police Department spokesman Sgt. David Garcia said police officers were called at 1:10 a.m. and told a man was lying on the ground just south of the railroad tracks. He said witnesses reported seeing Zachery chased by several men.

Singer Michael Jackson agrees to pay 14-year-old accuser an undisclosed amount said to be in the millions of dollars.

Pop star Jackson settles child molestation lawsuit

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Michael Jackson settled a child molestation lawsuit Tuesday on terms that left his 14-year-old accuser "very happy" and the singer proclaiming his innocence.

Terms of the out-of-court agreement were confidential, although a source put it at at least $10 million.

The settlement probably could end the criminal investigation, experts said, but Jackson's problems were far from over.

"I am very happy with the resolution of this matter," said Larry Feldman, attorney for the boy, now 14. The boy, Feldman told reporters, was also "very happy with the resolution of this matter."

Feldman said nothing in the settlement pertained to the criminal probe. He also didn't rule out

Clinton airs '94 agenda

President pushes health-care, welfare reforms

■ State of Union speech issues 'call to arms' to American people on several domestic fronts.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Proclaiming progress on his promises to break gridlock and revive the economy, President Clinton challenged Congress Tuesday night to move together on health care and welfare reform this year. "Our work has just begun," he declared in his first State of the Union address.

Upping pressure on Congress to pass the health-care reform plan that is the centerpiece of his domestic agenda, Clinton — who has yet to veto a bill — threatened to veto any measure that does not meet his standard of universal coverage.

"It is inevitable and imperative" that the health-care system be overhauled, Clinton said, calling it an issue on which "the people are way ahead of the politicians."

Turning to crime, Clinton voiced strong support for legislation that would put 100,000 more police officers on the beat, send three-time felons to prison for life and ban assault weapons.

"Violent crime and the fear it provokes are crippling our society, limiting personal freedom and fraying the ties that bind us," Clinton said, sounding a theme popular both among both Republicans and Democrats.

First lady Hillary Rodham Clinton, the president's chief adviser on health care, was seated in the gallery between AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland and Jack Smith, the chief executive officer of General Motors.

She was given a standing ovation when Clinton referred to her work on health care.

■ Analysis

WASHINGTON — His agenda is crowded and pitfalls abound, but after a skittish first year President Clinton had no complaints as he proclaimed the State of the Union strong but said "it must be stronger still." After all, he was finally working off his own script.

Looking back in his State of the Union address, Clinton could rightly brag of an economy on the rebound and an end to the days of certain gridlock. But while he unquestionably has put an activist stamp on Washington, there isn't as yet a Clinton legacy, for the nation or his Democratic Party.

That is where 1994 comes in, if Clinton can persuade Congress to keep close to the script he outlined Tuesday night.

In a hectic first year, Clinton signed family leave and motor voter laws, reversed some Republican abortion policies and made a first dent on the path of deficit reduction.

But so much of it seemed inevitable: Jittery markets left no choice but trimming the debt, and most of the legislation had been bottled up in years of Republican vetoes and partisan gridlock. Clinton, it seemed, frequently was working off a script that

December jobless rates in Midland, Odessa take steep 1 percent drops

Unemployment rates in both Midland and Odessa showed sharp 1 percent drops for December, according to figures released Tuesday by the Texas Employment Commission.

But Jacquen Moseley, manager of the Midland TEC office, said the improvement could be deceptive.

"This is not an indication we've had a wondrous resurgence in the economy," she said. "These numbers are probably a fluke, as it were, and it could be some of the figures are reflecting a delayed reaction to November events."

Some clouds, mid-60s on tap

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a high in the mid-60s and west winds at 15-25 mph. Tonight should be fair with a low around 30, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Thursday should be partly cloudy with a high between 55-60.

After an overnight low of 48, Tuesday's high reached 63, compared to the record high for that date of 83 set in 1952. The record low was 15 set in 1940.

STATE

Much of Texas was covered Tuesday by clouds, but underneath it all were unseasonably warm temperatures. More of the same is expected today.

South Texas was caught under mostly cloudy to cloudy skies Tuesday because of a flow of warm, moist air from the Gulf of Mexico.

Those clouds brought scattered showers and thunderstorms to south-central and southeast Texas. More showers were developing in the lower Rio Grande Valley.

Afternoon temperatures ranged from the mid-60s in the western part of the region to the 80s in the lower valley.

The forecast for the region calls for a cloudy to mostly cloudy overnight with scattered showers and thunderstorms today.

The clouds should remain today, with a chance of showers and thunderstorms over much of the region. Lows will be in the 50s and 60s and highs will range from 70 in the Hill Country and 80s in the lower Valley.

Low clouds and fog persisted across the Permian Basin and Concho Valley on Tuesday while the rest of West Texas had mostly sunny skies.

The clouds and a chance for showers was expected through this morning, with the rain possible becoming freezing rain overnight in the northwestern sections.

Skies likely will be partly cloudy for most of the region through tonight with lows ranging from the upper 20s in the Panhandle to near 50 in the Concho Valley and Edwards Plateau.

Highs today will be from the 40s in the Panhandle to the mid-70s along the Rio Grande River.

Midland statistics

Today: partly cloudy, high in the mid-60s, west winds at 15-25 mph.
Tonight: fair, low around 30.
Thursday: partly cloudy, high between 55-60.

the 7.5 percent recorded in December 1992.

In Odessa, the rate fell to 7.6 percent from 8.6 percent and stands below the 10 percent seen last year.

According to the TEC, the civilian labor force fell 500 to 49,000 during the month, just below the year-ago level of 49,200.

Ms. Moseley said this decline is most likely due to housewives, students and others who had taken Christmas jobs leaving the workforce before the end of the year.

Of those in the labor force, 46,400 were employed, the same as the previous month and above the year-ago level of 45,500.

Total unemployment fell to 500 — most likely due to those who left the labor force — and was at 2,600 in December, down from 3,100 in November and from 3,700 last year.

Ms. Moseley cautioned that the figures released Tuesday are estimates and subject to revision next month.

She said her office has been busy with unemployment claims, and while job listings started off slow at the first of the month, she said they are picking up steadily.

Among the TEC's metropolitan statistical areas, Midland ranked seventh, tied with Fort Worth-Arlington and San Antonio. Odessa was ranked 19th among the MSAs.

Bryan-College Station had the lowest unemployment rate, 3.1 percent, followed by Austin with 3.8 percent, Amarillo with 4.4 percent, and Dallas and Victoria, each with 5.2 percent.

The highest unemployment was in McAllen-Edinburg-Mission, 14.4 percent.

Statewide, the unemployment rate fell to 6.3 percent from 6.9 percent in November, and down from 7.4 percent in December 1992.

Last month there were 8,404,900 Texans at work, and 566,000 unemployed, the TEC reported.

State to combine city, Odessa rates

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Beginning with January's unemployment rates — due in February — the Texas Employment Commission will combine Midland and Odessa into one metropolitan statistical area — the Odessa-Midland MSA.

Mark Dermitt, a labor analyst with the TEC's Midland regional office, said that, though separate statistics will be kept for both Midland and Ector counties, there will no longer be any separate accounting for employment by industry.

"They will be joint statistics for mining employment (oil and gas extraction) for both counties and trade for both counties."

Dermitt said the initial request was made by the Odessa Chamber of Commerce and agreed to by the Midland Chamber of Commerce as well as both city councils.

"Both chambers went along with the idea because it lets them present a larger MSA to compete with Lubbock," he said. "When you join the two, it shows a larger labor force than separately. According to interviews with the chamber people, they believe this puts us in a higher category of businesses interested in a certain community or labor force . . . This larger labor force can be an influencing factor to let the chamber look at a wider scope of businesses.

"It's going to be interesting to see how this develops and its impact on future economic development and marketing."

He said that once the Office of Personnel Management agreed to the merger of the two MSAs, the TEC began linking the employment-by-industry data of the two counties and has finished restructuring 1992 data and is about finished with 1993 data.

ficers found him, Garcia said.

"He had injuries, some bumps and scrapes," he said.

Garcia said doctors told officials that Zachery's injuries didn't appear to be life threatening.

Memorial Hospital and Medical Center spokeswoman Laurie Johnson said Zachery was treated by an emergency room physician "from the moment" he was brought into the hospital (at 1:37 a.m.) by a Fire Department ambulance.

Zachery died at 4:30 a.m, the hospital reported. He was pronounced dead at 5:25 a.m. by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine.

Zachery's body was sent to the Dallas medical examiner for an autopsy.

"The cause of death has not been determined. At this time, it is being carried as an aggravated assault," Garcia said. "We don't know that the injuries were the cause of death, so we're not calling this a homicide."

Scheduled as a soloist performer at MCT's "Follies" fund-raiser Saturday night, Zachery was set to perform several solo numbers and a scene from the musical "Big River," which he starred in as slave Jim in the March 1992 MCT production. He also starred in MCT's June 1992 production of "Driving Miss Daisy."

"We are all just stunned. He had a lot of friends here at the theater," said Rene Brister Chambers, director of "The Follies."

"Everybody here is crying. James was universally liked. He will be greatly missed," she said.

Zachery's football career got off to a running start when he became a star player at Midland High School. He later played briefly for the New York Jets and then spent an eight-year stint in the Canadian Football League with the Edmonton Eskimos.

He also was involved in theater at Midland High School and performed in several Canadian theater productions. He returned to Midland after retiring from professional football. Zachery had worked as a fitness coordinator for the Central YMCA.

His father, Galberson S. Zachery, and brothers, all were well-known locally as outstanding football players. Zachery Field, a football practice field adjacent to Midland High School, was named for the elder Zachery, who died in 1984.

Zachery is survived by his mother, Dorothy Zachery, and his eight brothers, Galberson Zachery Jr., Earl Ray Zachery, Clarence Ray Zachery, Eddie Dean Zachery, Sammy Lee Zachery, Jerry Don Zachery, Terry Don Zachery and Carlos Wayne Zachery.

Services for Zachery are pending with Thomas Funeral Home.

Persons with any information about the assault may call the Midland Police Department at 685-7108.

SETTLES: Deal could end criminal probe

having the boy testify in any criminal proceeding.

"Nobody has bought anyone's silence," Feldman said.

"We have been talking to the district attorney all along," he said. "The district attorney has taken all of our evidence."

Nonetheless, the out-of-court settlement is a blow to the criminal probe. Had the case gone to court, prosecutors could have used the testimony and depositions in their pursuit of criminal charges.

"You could call it the rich man's exemption in a child molestation case," said Harlan Braun, a prominent Los Angeles defense attorney. "What it means is the person who buys off a minor gets away with it. It turns these sex cases into a private dispute."

Feldman and Jackson attorneys Johnnie Cochran and Howard Weitzman met privately in the chambers of Superior Court Judge David Rothman before the announcement.

"We signed off on the deal. That was it," Feldman said.

Jackson didn't issue any statement but insists he didn't do anything wrong. He will speak out about the case at an undetermined time, his attorneys said.

"Michael Jackson has maintained his innocence since the beginning of this matter and now, since this matter will soon be concluded, he still maintains that innocence," Jackson's attorneys said in a statement.

"The resolution of this case is in no way an admission of guilt by Michael Jackson. In short, he is an innocent man who does not intend to have his career and his life destroyed by rumors and innuendo."

The lawsuit filed in September alleged that Jackson, 35, committed sexual battery, seduction, willful misconduct, intentional infliction of emotional distress, fraud and negligence in a campaign to entice the boy last year.

Based on the boy's allegations, authorities in Los Angeles and Santa Barbara counties began a criminal probe that has continued for five months. No charges have been filed.

An out-of-court settlement in the civil case could severely diminish the state's criminal probe because, in California, victims of sexual abuse can't be forced to testify against their will.

"There's little reason the boy's parents would want to see their child exposed to public scrutiny and media scrutiny in a criminal trial," UCLA law professor Peter Arenella said. "It's very likely the boy won't want to cooperate, and the state lacks the authority to force him to cooperate by threatening him with contempt."

Los Angeles District Attorney Gil Garcetti said the settlement won't affect his criminal investigation.

"The District Attorney's Office is taking Mr. Feldman at his word that the alleged victim will be allowed to testify."

THEMES: Clinton turns to his own agenda

(From 1A)

would have been awaiting any Democratic president.

Not any more.

Health care, welfare reform and a revamping of school standards and vocational training programs, centerpiece themes of his campaign and popular with the middle class, anchor his agenda for a year sure to be complicated by the sheer complexity and cost of proposed solutions and the reality of approaching elections.

"These are the issues he most wants to bear his personal stamp, and they are issues that matter most to people out in the country," said Clinton adviser George Stephanopoulos.

And while crime didn't have much to do with Clinton's election, it is now of paramount concern, in part because worries about the economy are receding. But also because senseless violence is no longer isolated in America's inner cities but a disease of middle class America as well.

So as he wove crime into his agenda Tuesday night, Clinton went beyond joining the chorus for more prison cells, more cops on the beat and tougher sentences.

With newfound political capital, a scarce commodity in this administration, Clinton added to his script an appeal perhaps only a president can make, asking the nation to go beyond thinking about what to do about crime and explore the hows and whys.

"Our problems go way beyond the reach of government," Clinton said. "The American people must want to change within if we are to bring back work, family and community."

In doing so, Clinton was also trying to recast his Democratic Party as one dedicated to government yet well aware of its limits, its inability to legislate community values and personal responsibility.

"More than anything else, he has to assert himself as the moral leader of the country," said Al From, president of the centrist Democratic Leadership Council and a Clinton adviser. "The end of 1993 brought new stature to his presidency. Now he has to make health care and welfare and crime a national cause. If he does, he will take over what has been the Republican issue base in presidential campaigns for most of the past 25 years."

Yet with that ambitious agenda came reminders that one knock on Clinton is that he tries too much at once. And Republicans already have settled on an election-year theme that will complicate the president's task. They say Clinton's speeches would make most conservatives proud but he then makes a liberal retreat and favors the heavy, costly hand of government.

"What is President Clinton going to do when push comes shove?" asked Senate Republican leader Bob Dole. "Is he going to be for a tough crime bill or for tough rhetoric."

according to a police report.

Police also arrested a fourth person, 20-year-old Julie Aycock, at an undisclosed location, according to the report. Charges have not been filed on the younger Ms. Aycock, according to a jail official, who expects bond to be set for the four sometime today.

Earlier Tuesday, police found what may have been the vehicle Clark and Haggard used in their escape.

A blue vehicle matching the description of that used by the escapees was found in the parking lot of Apple Creek Apartments, 4000 W. Illinois Ave., according to police officials.

Clark, of Hobbs, N.M., was being held in Ward County on charges of robbery. On Jan. 8, he pleaded guilty to the Sept. 9, 1993, robbery of Bank One, 2301 W. Wall St. in Midland.

Haggard was serving a 24-month prison term in Ward County for sending a letter, dated Oct. 19, to Chief U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton in which he threatened to kill the judge. According to a court affidavit, Haggard claimed he sent the letter because Bunton had not acted on previous letters Haggard had sent.

Haggard had been serving a sentence in the Midland County Detention Center for sexual assault at the time he sent the letter. He was sentenced to the Ward County Jail because of his disruptive behavior in jail.

AIRS: Clinton sees 'hopeful beginning'

(From 1A)

Senate GOP Leader Bob Dole signaled a fierce election-year battle lies ahead over health care, as he sharply criticized Clinton's plan.

"More cost. Less choice. More taxes. Less quality. More government control. Less control for you and your family," Dole said in remarks prepared for after Clinton completed his speech. "That's what the president's government-run plan is likely to give you."

Dole called instead for a more modest proposal that he said would offer greater access to health care for all.

Clinton's speech was punctuated numerous times by applause and Democrats gave him an occasional standing ovation. Stony-faced Republicans kept their hands in their laps as the president discussed his prime objectives for the next year.

Clinton took advantage of — and some of the credit for — the improving economy to call for Congress to "continue our journey of renewal" by enacting the remainder of his domestic program.

"We replaced drift and deadlock with renewal and reform," Clinton said.

He addressed the nation at a time when both the economy and his own approval ratings are on the upswing.

"My fellow Americans, what is the state of the union? It is growing stronger. But it must be stronger still," he said.

Clinton devoted scant attention to foreign affairs in his speech, although he underscored U.S. determination to support Russia's struggle with democracy and economic reforms. And he said his administration was determined to build a relationship with China, adding "we will insist on clear signs" of human rights improvements.

One danger that still confronts the world, he said, is "fanatics who seek to cripple the world's cities with terror."

In the speech — one of Clinton's longest, at 70 minutes — the president made a strong pitch for overhauling the nation's welfare system at the same time health-care is reformed.

His welfare proposal — yet to be introduced — would put a two-year limit on benefits, coupling it with new education and job training programs.

Russia promises farm-subsidy program

MOSCOW (AP) — Russia's government promised a colossal farm-subsidy program Tuesday that seemed likely to set off another round of inflation and undermine already faltering market reforms.

The announcement came as the fate of the last aggressive reformer in the government, Finance Minister Boris Fyodorov, rested in President Boris Yeltsin's hands.

Fyodorov, who helped brake big-spending programs like the one announced Tuesday, resigned last week in a Cabinet shake-up that raised doubts both at home and abroad about the future of market reforms in Russia.

Yeltsin has not yet said whether he will accept Fyodorov's resignation and there were reports the two men might meet today.

Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin, meanwhile, went to Russia's agricultural heartland to unveil a farm program that could cost 100 trillion rubles — hundreds of millions of dollars — in the next few years, the Interfax news agency said.

He also said the government will spend 4 trillion rubles in the next few months to pay bills, wages and agriculture subsidies from 1993.

Virtually the only way the government can spend this kind of money is to print it — the classic recipe for runaway inflation.

In what could be a warning to Yeltsin that he faces a fight if he decides to keep Fyodorov, Chernomyrdin had his central banker and his agriculture minister at his side.

Fyodorov had said he'd stay in the government only if Central Bank chairman Viktor Gerashchenko — whom he blames for granting inflationary credits to state enterprises — and Agriculture Minister Alexander Zaveryukha — a collective farm director in the Soviet era — were removed.

In another sign of the new government's mood, First Deputy Prime Minister Oleg Soskovets said a special commission he heads will begin regulating key elements of the energy and natural resources sectors.

Interfax quoted Soskovets as saying the Commission on Urgent Questions will regulate price of fuel, electricity and rail transport. Reformers had pushed to liberalize prices in these areas in an attempt to open up the economy.

Amid these signs the new team was moving briskly to reshape policy, the possibility remained that Fyodorov, 35, might stay in the government.

Chernomyrdin had refused to act on his resignation, passing the buck to the president, who has so far been silent.

Yeltsin's office said the president, who cut short a trip to St. Petersburg, had not yet received Fyodorov's resignation.

Chernomyrdin and his team insist there will be no backsliding on reform.

"No one can suspect the government of going back on reform," he told regional officials in Oryol when announcing the farm program.

Oryol is in Russia's "black earth" breadbasket, a region that voted heavily for extremist Vladimir Zhirinovsky in the December parliamentary elections.

The election gave Russia a parliament dominated by nationalists and Communists who oppose market reforms and tight monetary controls.

The new Cabinet reflects this voter backlash. It is dominated by advocates of continued subsidies to Russia's Soviet-era agricultural and industrial behemoths, even at the expense of higher inflation.

Fyodorov and other reformers have warned the price of keeping such promises could be inflation of 30 percent a month or more. Fyodorov is credited with bringing it down to 12 percent in December.

In Washington, the chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee warned Russia and the Clinton administration may oppose further aid to Moscow unless it gets tough on inflation. Rep. Lee H. Hamilton, D-Ind., said the central bank was undercutting U.S.-supported reform programs by printing billions of new rubles.

Redefined mission in Somalia discourages many U.S. soldiers

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — Discouraged U.S. troops are withdrawing from Mogadishu's streets faster than expected and moving to the heavily guarded seaport and airport to await ships and planes for the trip home.

Two months before the U.S. military is scheduled to finish removing its 5,300 soldiers from the capital, the sand dunes and beaches at the airport are crowded with tents.

Most U.S. bases and strongpoints around the city have been turned over to soldiers from other countries who are staying in Somalia as U.N. peacekeepers.

The American soldiers, the backbone of the operation, must finish withdrawing by March 31, along with their helicopters, howitzers, armored personnel carriers and anti-tank missiles. Many people believe that will leave U.N. forces far more susceptible to attacks by Somalis.

Somali militias, which appear to be rearming in Mogadishu, already have taken over four posts that the reorganizing U.N. forces abandoned.

On Tuesday, a Somali child threw a hand grenade at the entrance of the Wahiliye Hotel 10 minutes after U.S. diplomat Stevenson McIlvaine left following a meeting with an ally of Ali Mahdi Mohamed, whose men control northern Mogadishu. The boy fled, and seven Somali civilians were wounded.

At the airport, many U.S. soldiers appear discouraged by a mission that went from a successful humanitarian operation that ended a famine to battles in the streets of southern Mogadishu when they were put in the role of policemen trying to arrest the faction leader who controls that sector, Mohamed Farrah Aidid.

Many believe that when their friends and families think of Somalia, they do not recall images of Marines carrying food to starving children. Instead, they picture a Somali mob dragging the body of an American soldier through the streets last October.

"I think a lot of people are going to think nothing was accomplished here because this country is still in a state of disarray," said Cpl. Dennis D. Hill, 23, of Baltimore, sitting near the helicopters he and his buddies use to keep a lid on Mogadishu by flying over it day and night.

"Stopping the famine was a great success, but Americans are waiting to see a government formed in this place in the middle of nowhere," he said.

At the other end of the airport, on an Indian Ocean beach, Lt. Michael Mammay, 25, of Savannah, Ga., commands a platoon of howitzers pointed at downtown Mogadishu.

The howitzers were rushed in after a battle Oct. 3 that killed 18 American soldiers and wounded 77. That was when President Clinton decided all U.S. troops would be pulled out by March 31, and when U.N. troops stop pursuing Aidid.

For three months, Somali militiamen have stopped firing mortars at U.N. forces because they know the howitzers shoot 95-pound, laser-guided shells that can level their position a few moments after they open fire.

"We keep the peace here because we have the biggest stick in town," Mammay said proudly, pointing at the big guns. "But the thing that determines whether soldiers win or lose is the political goal. In the Persian Gulf, the goal was to take back Kuwait. In Somalia, the goal was unclear."

After pausing to cover his ears while a huge military plane roared past and landed on the runway only a few yards away, he added: "Maybe it's hard to win humanitarian operations. It's not a war."

Spc. Starling Jones, a 24-year-old soldier from Columbus, Miss., who is proud that U.S. troops came to Africa to help Somalis, does not think Americans will regard Operation Restore Hope as a victory.

Sitting in a steamy airport building, he said: "This humanitarian mission was a success. ... But once it changed from being humanitarian to getting shot at, it should have been over and done with. If we're going to help someone out, even a sister country, we should only stay until we're getting mistreated and we're risking our lives, then they don't need our help."

After U.S. Marines first landed on beaches outside Mogadishu on Dec. 9, 1992, they quickly ensured that emergency food supplies got through to the starving people of Somalia. American troops were cheered by crowds of Somalis from all its warring factions until the standoff began with Aidid.

U.S. to deploy Patriot missiles in South Korea

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The Clinton administration is planning to ship Patriot anti-missile batteries to South Korea, senior administration officials said Tuesday.

The anti-missile batteries were requested by Gen. Gary E. Luck, the senior U.S. commander in Korea, and the move is supported by the Pentagon. President Clinton has not yet formally approved the request, but senior officials said he likely will. The White House began consulting members of Congress on Monday about the move.

"I think there will be a positive decision," a senior official said.

In military terms, the case for sending the Patriots is straightforward. North Korea has threatened to suspend the armistice on the Korean Peninsula if the United States pushes for economic sanctions to put pressure on Pyongyang to end its nuclear weapons program.

U.S. military officers say the North Korean threat is probably a bluff, but it is one the United States cannot ignore.

If North Korea attacked South Korea, U.S. intelligence officers said, it would launch its arsenal of Scud missiles at airfields and ports in South Korea to try to blunt air attacks and slow the pace of reinforcements.

The Patriot anti-missile batteries would improve the protection of those airfields and ports and reduce North Korea's ability to make a successful pre-emptive attack, the officials said.

The Patriot system is designed to protect airfields and other military bases by knocking the incoming missiles off course or destroying them in the air.

The Patriots deployed in Saudi Arabia in the Persian Gulf War performed this narrow task reasonably well but were not effective in shielding large populated areas from attack.

One official said that "about three dozen" Patriot launchers would be sent to South Korea.

"It would make some sense to pre-position Patriots" in South Korea, said Brig. Gen. Robert G. Jenkins, the commander of the 51st Fighter Wing Command, which is based at Osan Air Base in South Korean.

Some former Bush administration officials had been urging such a move. Before the crisis, U.S. military planners had seen a need to place Patriots in South Korea as part of a general upgrading of U.S. defenses there.

The new tensions, however, while making the military need far more urgent, has made the diplomatic ramifications much more sensitive.

One senior U.S. military official said some State Department officials had been wary of sending the Patriots to South Korea, apparently fearing the move could upset the talks with the North Koreans on ending Pyongyang's nuclear weapons program.

'Bush Mission' is exciting addition

Plans for the American Airpower Heritage Museum's exhibit honoring "The Bush Mission" — the one during which President George Bush, then a young naval aviator, was shot down but recovered — at the Confederate Air Force's (CAF) headquarters at Midland International Airport, as explained by Frank Cahoon, American Airpower Heritage Foundation chairman, are truly exciting.

And the exhibit, which will be featured in the CAF's Hangar, sounds particularly appropriate. Cahoon, noting that the exhibit is intended to be historical, said, "Presidents, after they are no longer in the presidency, become historical figures." He's correct, of course.

It's equally appropriate that the exhibit will center not upon Bush's later life or his political pursuits, but will "hone in on the mission he was flying when he was shot down and recovered by the (USS) Finback submarine."

Of course, it's difficult for any American to overlook an individual's later accomplishments, particularly those of someone such as Bush who went on to become president of the United States. But it's important to do so in order that true perspective can be devoted to a singular event.

That focus will be accomplished by dividing "The Bush Mission" into seven areas — "A Call to Arms," "The Machines," "Military Intelligence," "The Briefing Room," "Weapons," "The Flight," and "The Rescue."

In another regard, it's noteworthy that Bush, who had entered the war as the Navy's youngest aviator, was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross for his heroics on the mission.

World War II was not won through the individual effort of any one person. Rather, when wars are won it is due to the combined bravery and effort of countless individuals who put country above their personal survival.

"The Bush Mission" will doubtless call attention to a single mission in a man's life during World War II and show how that mission affected our wartime effort. We're looking forward to its opening!

ANOTHER VIEW

L.A. mass-transit system could help with next one

The secret is out. Los Angeles does have a mass-transit system, and it works. The earthquake has now driven tens of thousands of commuters to give it a try. It is hard to think now of any good that might rise from the rubble, while the city is still in shock. But if the San Francisco-Oakland earthquake in 1989 is any guide, thousands of Angelenos will never again commute by car. Their switch to mass transit will make Southern California a better place to live and work.

In this tragedy there is opportunity. BART, the Bay Area Rapid Transit rail system, says 20 percent of the daily riders it gained when the Bay Bridge was out are still riding its trains.

Most of the broken freeways in and around Los Angeles must be rebuilt. The Santa Monica Freeway is the busiest stretch of highway in America. Reconstruction is a must. But fixing all the area's damage will take years; even now, four years after the San Francisco-Oakland quake, none of the four freeways that were knocked out are fully back.

Now, as Los Angeles recoups, local, state and federal authorities must resist rebuilding everything as it was before, only stronger. Rather, they must seize every chance they get to advance mass transit instead of pouring more concrete.

The Los Angeles Metropolitan Transportation Authority has already doubled the length of Metrolink commuter trains and added buses to existing lines. Metrolink trains that carried a total of 500 passengers a day from Santa Clarita to downtown Los Angeles before the quake are now carrying 4,000 passengers per train. (A bemused headline in The Los Angeles Times last week lamented "The Metrolink Will Never Be the Same" — meaning the same comfortable ride with plenty of room.)

The MTA will also spend $100 million for four new commuter rail stations, extending Metrolink farther north, and for still more buses within the next three weeks. Old freight tracks may also be resurrected for passenger trains.

Los Angeles is already embarked on a multibillion-dollar 30-year transit expansion plan, but the languishing Southern California economy has threatened to slow it down. The earthquake's impact says it should be speeded up — with more federal aid, as well as local effort.

Los Angeles did not have its last earthquake on Monday, only its latest. Improved mass transit would help it cope with the next one.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, Jan. 26, the 26th day of 1994. There are 339 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Jan. 26, 1788, the first European settlers in Australia, led by Capt. Arthur Phillip, landed in present-day Sydney. (The party included 700 convicts from England.)

In 1841, Britain formally occupied Hong Kong, which the Chinese had ceded to the British.

In 1861, Louisiana seceded from the Union.

In 1870, Virginia rejoined the Union.

In 1911, the Richard Strauss opera "Der Rosenkavalier" premiered in Dresden, Germany.

Inman case rings bizarre, pathetic

WASHINGTON — The withdrawal of Bobby Ray Inman as President Clinton's nominee for Defense Secretary was a bizarre and pathetic epilogue to a distinguished career in which Inman quietly played the role of cop over the excesses of the intelligence community.

Anderson

Many sources in the intelligence community believe that if Inman had been at the CIA in 1985-86, instead of resigning in 1982, there would have been no Iran-Contra affair.

Inman was one of those rare government officials whose honesty and integrity could be trusted. He was rare because he didn't use national security to effect political censorship. Thus, on some occasions, we would delete material from the column that he identified as potentially harmful to intelligence sources and methods.

We were not alone. As he made public in his recent press conference, Inman had been designated from the time of the Carter administration as a point of contact — not a leaker.

Never did Inman cause us to kill an entire column, or even change one substantially. Instead, the deletion of otherwise unessential information preserved America's ability to gather valuable intelligence on terrorists and other enemies in the future.

For example, we were once asked to delete a reference to "National Security Agency sources." We had included it to establish credibility on the column's information. Inman argued persuasively that by identifying NSA, we would be tipping enemies to the fact that the intelligence was based on "intercepted communications," the agency's specialty, which might lead to the shutting down of those communications. We didn't hesitate to drop it; nor did Inman ever suggest we abort the rest of the column, which was unflattering to his own intelligence community.

Why did we trust Inman? Because from our own independent reporting, we had reason to believe he was a man of sound judgment whose principles were firmly rooted in the Constitution and the people, not the preservation of power for one administration or another.

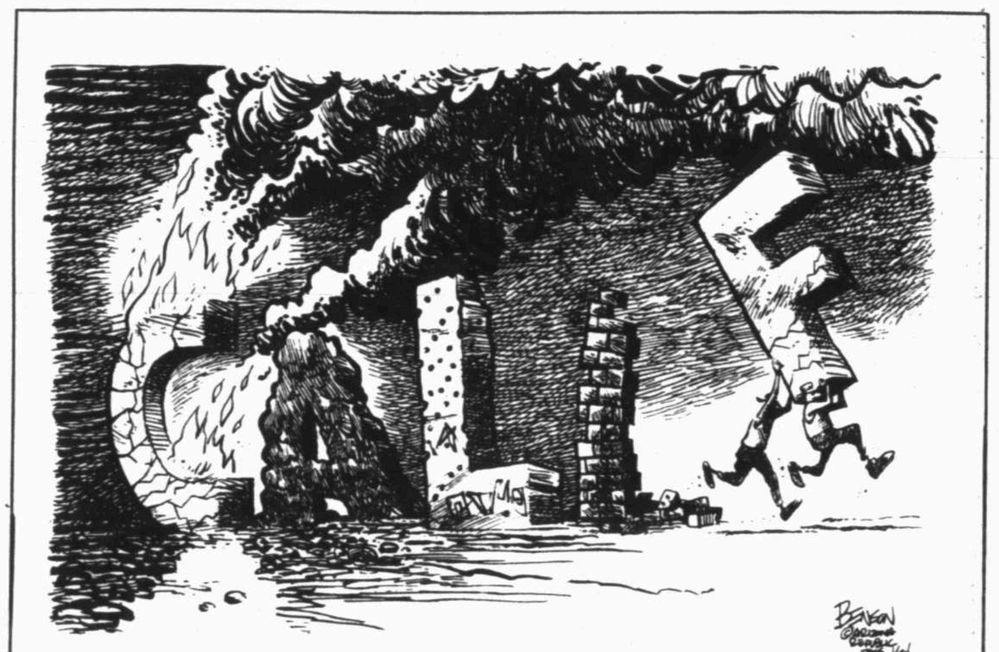

Back in October 1980, we first broke the story of Edwin Wilson, who led a ring of ex-CIA and Special Forces agents who were secretly supplying Libyan dictator Moammar Gadhafi with explosives and special training.

When Wilson heard the CIA might move against him, he arranged through a congressional friend to meet with the top man in naval intelligence, Adm. Bobby Ray Inman, at a Washington lunch in 1976.

Inman left the meeting knowing Wilson had to be stopped. He ordered Wilson be fired from the task force.

These were the types of judgment calls — grounded in undying respect for the Constitution and fertilized by an awesome intellect — that made Bobby Ray Inman one of the outstanding public servants of this century. We are saddened that such a record of achievement was irreparably blemished by the strange events of last week.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Pundit discovers intents and purposes

"To my horror and embarrassment," writes Yisroel Epstein of New York, "I was informed recently — and in public — that the phrase I had always thought was for all intensive purposes was, in fact, for all intents and purposes. After the revelation, of course, the phrase began to make some sense."

Safire

In an account of a football game between Cornell and Penn, Jack Cavanaugh wrote in The New York Times: "And it was altogether fitting that today's game ended, to all extents and purposes, with a dramatic defensive effort."

James Weidner of Merchantville, N.J., clipped this usage and sent it in with the comment: "Granted, extents could conceivably fit the context of the article, but just what is the usual expression after all?"

The expression is to (sometimes for) all intents and purposes. This mondegreen was spoofed recently on the literate NBC sitcom (or litcom) "The John Larroquette Show." One character uses the phrase correctly and is "corrected" by another, who claims the phrase is for all intensive purposes; a third authority then makes swimming motions and argues it is for all intensive porpoises.

The humor columnist Dave Barry, making sport of word mavenhood, began a column with "It's Mister Language Person, for all intense and purposes." Evidently this solecism is widespread enough to rate delighted satiric treatment in many media; it is my job, as a straight-ahead language person, to trace its true etymology before exploring the cause of its confusion.

Off with its head: it was Henry VIII, in an act promulgated in 1546, who included the prepositional phrase "to all intents, constructions and purposes." After members of Parliament made it their own, Joseph Addison shortened it in a 1709 edition of The Tatler: "Whoever resides in the World without having any Business in it . . . is to me a Dead Man to all Intents and Purposes."

As in much archaic legalese, the synonyms were married in a phrase to cover all shadings of an aim to accomplish, much as "null and void" and "devise and bequeath" gave lawyers a comfortable feeling of nailing down a meaning. (O.K.; ancient attorneys will hold that you devise real estate and you bequeath other items; sue me.) In today's synonymy, intent is more specific, as in "legislative intent," while purpose is general, like "purpose in life."

In his Dictionary of Modern Legal Usage, Bryan Garner derides terms like to all intents and purposes and at all relevant times as often being "flotsam phrases." Some say flotsam is what floats and jetsam is what sinks. Most authorities hold, however, that flotsam is wreckage of a ship or its cargo that floats on the surface of the water, and jetsam is what is jettisoned or tossed overboard. Someday, somebody will ask you that and you will be ready.) I disagree; the intent of to all intents and purposes is to denote practicality, as if to say "when it comes right down to it."

To come right down to it, then, why do some people say "to all intensive purposes"?

It's the Mondegreen Factor. A mondegreen is a word that is construed as it is actually heard, not as the speaker intends it to be heard. It was noted in this space long ago that the most saluted man in America was Richard Stans: allegiance is pledged every day by millions of kids "to the republic for Richard Stans." Some begin the pledge with "I led the pigeons to the flag." Remember that phrase in "The Star-Spangled Banner" about "grapefruit through the night"? And the ever-good Mrs. Murphy of the 23d Psalm? "Shirley, good Mrs. Murphy, shall follow me all the days of my life."

Although some linguists have called this stumblepunning "unwitting paronomasia," the better word is mondegreen. Coiner is the writer Sylvia Wright, who noted in a 1954 Harper's article that some children happily sang in church of "Gladly, the cross-eyed bear," when the hymn was "Gladly the cross I'd bear." She remembered the Scottish ballad "The Bonny Earl of Murray" and how she had recited it as a child: "They hae slain the Earl Amurray,/And Lady Mondegreen." The damsel bleeding loyally beside the slain Earl was in her romantic imagination, of course; the last line was written and laid him on the green.

Psychiatric treatment to change in 1994

One of the big changes we'll see in 1994 is the way in which people with psychiatric problems are treated. All the health plans have traditionally been reluctant to pay for mental illness and have now imposed a time limit on how long a patient is allowed to feel really lousy.

Buchwald

While pills are playing their role in helping patients, the one-on-one 50-minute therapy session is rapidly sinking in the west.

As my insurance adjuster complained to me, "Psychiatrists take too long to find out why a person is afraid of heights."

"They are sluggish," I admitted, "but psychiatry is one of the few medical art forms where you let the patient set his own pace."

"Exactly," he said, "and insurance companies don't like it one bit. If the doctor can't find out what's bugging his patient in a couple of office visits, then we say the doctor should turn in his couch."

"What would replace it?"

"As of now a psychiatrist cannot rush his patient's story. The person seeking help is the one who has to discover what is wrong with himself. This could take — and has taken — 10 years. Neither the doctor nor the person he is caring for is in a hurry, particularly if someone else is paying the bill.

"Let's say that a man hated his mother because she never packed him a decent school lunch and he became anorexic because she forbade him to eat airline food. The psychiatrist spots this in the first week, but he can't tell his patient what's bugging him until the patient gains the knowledge himself through a revealing dream, preferably in the second or third year.

"Now suppose the same patient goes into a group therapy session with other disoriented people.

"The patient says, 'I am anorexic because I have no appetite for airline food, and I think I hate a member of my family, although I can't yet identify which one it is.'

"Now the guy sitting next to him says, 'You're full of it, and you're a crybaby besides. No one likes airline food, and you'd be crazy if you ate those meals — so get off it because most of us have to catch the last bus home.'

"Can you see the difference between this therapy and the one with only the doctor? The patient responds, 'I know it's more than that. If I could only plumb my subconscious to discover which person made me hate airline food, I would be cured.'

"The woman next to him says, 'Does her name start with an M?'

" 'It could,' the patient says, fidgeting in his chair.

" 'How about an O after the M?'

" 'Please don't spell it out,' the patient implores.

"Someone else yells, 'T, then H, and E.'

"And when the last person adds R, the patient crumbles to the floor in a fetal position and cries, 'Mother.' With one group session, our insurance company can save $10,000."

"So that's where psychiatry is going," I said.

"What choice do we have? The patient either tells his story to a doctor who just nods his head while the patient snows him, or he tries it out on a group of people who are on to him before he takes his overcoat off."

"That isn't what Freud had in mind," I told him.

"That's because Freud never charged our insurance company $150 for a 50-minute session."

O'Leary: Radiation tests follow guidelines

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Energy Department is still conducting more than 200 radiation experiments involving humans but is following strict ethical procedures and gaining proper consent, Secretary Hazel O'Leary said Tuesday.

Most of the experiments involve low-level trace doses of radiation under guidelines in effect at the department since 1991, she said.

"As far as we have been able to ascertain, the department is not conducting any experiments that violate medical, ethical standards or the Nuremberg codes," she told the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee.

Following disclosure that numerous questionable radiation experiments had been conducted during the Cold War, several senators had expressed concern some might be continuing.

What assurance is there that there are not "rogue operators out there" who, despite stringent government regulations and guidelines, still may have experiments under way without proper patient consent? asked Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, the Senate panel's chairman.

Mrs. O'Leary, who concedes she may have opened a "Pandora's box" by pressing for a government-wide records search on past radiation testing on humans, said President Clinton soon will direct all federal agencies to immediately halt any experiments where consent might be in question.

Within her department, she said, "we're pretty certain that everyone is following the spirit and intent" of rules on ethical conduct of human experiments.

While providing no details, Mrs. O'Leary said there are between 200 and 260 experiments involving human subjects being conducted by her department or by its contractors, mostly involving tracer doses. She estimated the department was spending about $50 million for the projects.

She said that information about each of the experiments was being assembled and would be put into a computer by mid-March and be available for public review.

In separate testimony, officials from the departments of Defense, Veterans Affairs and Health and Human Services reiterated that they were pressing paper searches within their departments for all information about past radiation tests involving humans.

Veterans Affairs Secretary Jesse Brown said he had been distressed to learn that the VA during the early 1950s had created a secretive "Atomic Medicine Division" and that he is attempting "to piece together why this was done, what if any secretive activities it engaged in and the consequences."

But he has yet to learn even when the division began its operation and when it concluded.

Brown said he found it repulsive that veterans who fought for this country "were tricked" into taking part in experiments about which they had limited or in some cases no knowledge.

Meanwhile, Defense officials said that as of Jan. 1, 205,472 individuals had been identified as being exposed to radiation as a result of atmospheric nuclear tests, mostly in the 1950s. Another 195,753 were part of the occupation force at Hiroshima and Nagasaki in Japan when the United States dropped atomic bombs on those cities.

Air Force Major Gen. Kenneth Hagemann told the committee that in most cases the soldiers were exposed to extremely low doses. He said in about 1,600 cases, individuals received doses that exceed today's federal standards for occupational exposure.

The hearing by Glenn's committee was the first Senate inquiry into the human radiation testing issue since Clinton, spurred by an internal review by Mrs. O'Leary in her department, ordered a wide-ranging search of government records to learn more about past radiation tests.

Collie swallows 8-inch knife, lives to tell the tail

By Kiley Armstrong
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — If there's a championship for chow hounds, 9-month-old Apple unquestionably takes the cake.

Oh, yes — did we mention the cake knife, too?

Humans at the Animal Medical Center are still marveling over the Border collie that swallowed a large chunk of devil's-food cake and an 8-inch knife — and lived to wag about it.

"She must have a guardian angel," her owner, Eric Fuchs, concluded.

The tail, er, tale began Friday night.

While Fuchs was out playing bridge, Apple hopped onto the table and helped herself to a piece of cake.

"We're three men sharing an apartment. We leave things in weird places all the time," Fuchs said Tuesday. "Though why somebody left a carving knife in the cake is beyond me."

One of the roommates, Claudio Fernandez, came home to find Apple was sick as a you-know-what.

Fernandez rushed Apple to the hospital, where X-rays revealed the knife in her belly.

■ More nation news/4C

"It's really funny now. But on Friday night, my head, I thought it was going to explode," Fuchs said. "They thought she was going to die."

"Pulling the knife out was kind of a scary thing," said the surgeon, Elaine Caplan. "It was just amazing the knife didn't slice through the esophagus."

Apple came home Monday, bearing a 13-inch incision and lapping up all the attention.

Already, "She wants to play," said Fuchs.

Ms. Caplan said the 33-pound black and white dog survived because she swallowed the 4-inch handle first, instead of the 8-inch blade.

Apple wasn't the Animal Medical Center's first sword-swallowing dog: A beagle survived a similar feat 10 years ago. "And I once pulled a whole blanket out of a Doberman," Ms. Caplan said

A Midland County Detention Center inmate is still at large after escaping through the wire-mesh netting in the center's recreation area earlier in the month. Three Midland women were arrested two days later for aiding in Martinez's escape. Maria Esquivel, 24, Rosa Galindo, 44, and Juanita Gonzalez, 35, were charged with facilitating a felony escape.

Cowboy Christmas tree stands tall

Mighty football fur glistens with Dallas glory

■ Local photo store displays Juanita Stigen's unique tree decorated with Dallas Cowboy memorabilia.

By Jimmy Patterson
Special Projects Editor

Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram

Juanita Stigen has worked on her Cowboy Christmas Tree — displayed at Photo Express, Wadley at Garfield — for the last four years.

For Juanita Stigen and thousands of other Dallas Cowboy fans just like her, it must seem like Christmas in January — again.

Ms. Stigen, though, just may be the only one of those Dallas fans who has commemorated the Cowboys' playoff success with a Christmas tree that remains up more than a month after the holiday.

The Cowboys will make a return trip to the Super Bowl this Sunday in Atlanta. And like last year, Dallas will meet the Buffalo Bills, losers of three straight "ultimate games."

The Cowboys and their fans may be entertaining thoughts that a repeat of last year's 52-17 clobbering is again in the offing come Sunday.

A lifelong Cowboy fan, Ms. Stigen said she has worked on her Cowboy Christmas tree for the past four years, even though she's been collecting Cowboy memorabilia for the last decade.

"It's taken about four years of searching and scrounging," Ms. Stigen said. "I add a little more to it each year. This year, I got to add the Super Bowl ornament."

The Cowboy Christmas tree is on display at the Photo Express at Wadley and Garfield. Being in such a high-traffic area has brought numerous comments from customers who do business at the store, not to mention a couple of monetary offers.

"One man offered me $700 for it, but I just can't part with it," Ms. Stigen said. "Another woman offered $500, and I've had a lot of comments from people who come in."

The tree features Cowboy ornaments, player game cards and small footballs. Cowboy pencils take the place of icicles, and three dozen tiny wooden football players that have been repainted in Cowboy colors by Ms. Stigen hang on the tree. Also included on the tree are football lights, small pennants, and a skirt patterned after the Cowboys Cheerleaders' uniform. Atop the tree is a Cowboy helmet.

"The top of the tree is really interesting," Ms. Stigen said. "I was at a flea market in Dallas with my daughter-in-law, and she started saying, 'I found it! I found it!' It was an old lamp with the Cowboy helmet as the lamp shade, and that's what's at the top of the tree."

Some of the ornaments have been made by her grandchildren; other items on the tree have been donated by family members who have been keeping up with the tree's progress.

Ms. Stigen says she puts up three Christmas trees at her home each holi-

'Wacky professor' has clean-Earth message

■ 'Phelonius Pflugelhorn' wraps environmental teachings inside jokes.

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Professor Phelonius S.T. Pflugelhorn, A.K.A. Soren Petersen, combined magical tricks and environmental education before an audience of almost 700 youngsters from area schools in a Tuesday show.

Sponsored by Keep Midland Beautiful, Petersen dressed in the distinctive top hat and lab coat of Prof. Pflugelhorn for four shows Monday and Tuesday at the Midland High and Lee High school auditoriums.

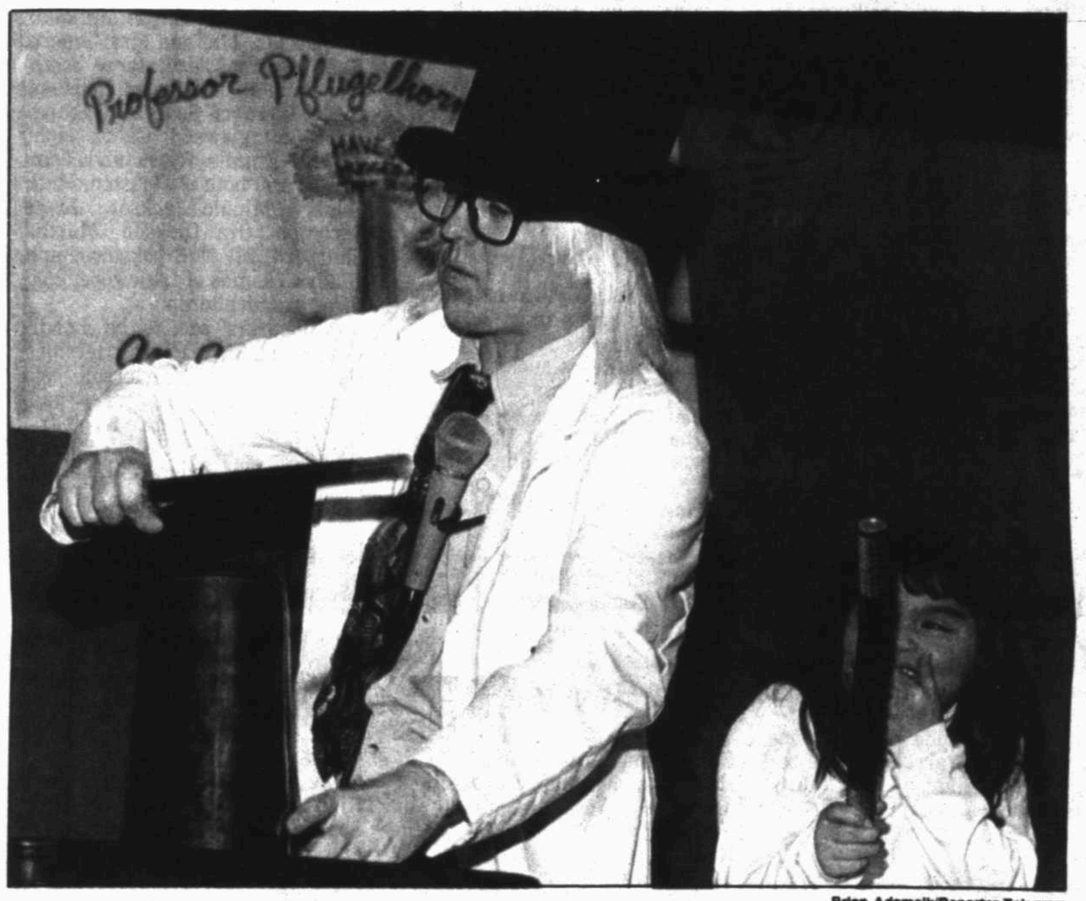

Using magic and humor tailored to the young student, Petersen drives home his environmental messages. Repeating after Prof. Pflugelhorn, all students present took the Environmental Pledge: "I, your name, your name, no — your name, your name, promise to take care of the environment, to keep Midland beautiful and to reduce, reuse and recycle. I will not litter. I will be good to plants and animals. And I will never ever repeat things other people tell me."

Petersen said he became environmentally conscious at an early age. "I'd ride my bike to school, then I'd recycle home."

Petersen admits his campy humor is geared specifically to young children. "High school kids would boo you off the stage in two minutes," he said. "But here it's fun. The kids walk away happy and they've learned something without ever knowing it," he added.

Moudy decides to bow out of race for county judge

Moudy

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Ray P. Moudy, a Midland lawyer who is a reluctant candidate for Midland County judge, said on Tuesday that he will not actively seek election to the four-year post.

But by law, he is still a candidate.

"I regret that my decision has been made after the time the (Texas) Election Code permits withdrawal from the race," said Moudy, who is bowing out of the Republican Party race for undisclosed personal reasons.

However, his name will appear on the ballot along with those of Jeff Norwood, 29, former chief of staff to Texas Railroad Commissioner Barry Williamson; Teresa Clingman, 40, prosecutor in the Midland County District Attorney's Office, and Jim Prince, 57, Midland businessman.

The winner of the primary race will be without Democratic Party opposition in the Nov. 8 general election.

Moudy, 65, filed on Jan. 3 — the filing deadline — as a candidate for the nomination in the March 8 primary.

According to the election code, a candidate "may not withdraw" from the primary after the 62nd day before the election. That means Moudy would have had to withdraw his candidacy on

Egan targets development, roads in her re-election bid

Egan

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

District 4 City Council member Claudia Egan, 42, announced on Tuesday her bid to seek re-election. She emphasized her dedication to constituents and promised continued promotion of economic development and public safety.

"Realizing that each new day brings new challenges, I will remain accessible to citizens and to all employees of the city," Ms. Egan said before a group of supporters at City Hall.

"It is my belief and philosophy that progress cannot be made without the input from taxpayers, no matter how small or large the scope of any issue," she said.

Ms. Egan said she will make sure tax dollars are spent on "areas and needs of highest priority."

That includes her continued support of federal Community Development Block Grant funds for paving roadways, clearing weedy lots and removing dilapidated buildings, she said.

In addition, she will work toward paving streets in her district. Two, she has targeted are Colombian Drive in Permian Estates and a portion of Bentwood Drive at the Bowie Drive intersection.

Economic development also was a concern of Ms. Egan.

Family sometimes has four doctors in the house

By Jenny Strasburg
Associated Press

SAN ANGELO — No telling what medical specialties the Alexanders might have included in their immediate family tree, if only they hadn't run out of offspring.

There are three physician sons and all of them have now returned to practice in their hometown.

Dr. Eugene P. Alexander and his wife, Libby, still live in the same modest home in which they brought up Ross, John and Robert.

Warm with paneling and pictures of trios of boys, it's the house where Ross and John shared a childhood room and where Robert grew up as L.B. His father said L.B. first stood for Little Brother and, later on, other names only a brother would put up with.

The Alexander sons are different, but each was drawn to the world of medicine by their father's contentment with that profession since he opened a private practice in 1950.

"It's probably the same way it happens in a lot of other fields, where someone goes into the same profession their parents went into," said Ross Alexander, the eldest and a dermatologist like his father.

"He enjoys doing what he does, and he has a good lifestyle."

"No night calls!" piped in the fatherly Alexander, roaring momentarily in laughter as he is apt to do. His sons grinned.

"I suppose if he'd been an OB (obstetrician) with no backup, it might have made a little difference." Ross added.

John, the middle son, eyed veterinary medicine as a boy.

"The vet I was working with . . . told me I needed to go into medicine," John recalled. "The patients will talk to you, but they won't bite you."

None, so far, at least, has bitten John Alexander, a radiologist, but he does get called in during the night sometimes.

Robert Alexander, the youngest, returned to San Angelo in August and now operates a practice in orthopedic and spine surgery.

Robert was the last to finish medical school at the University of Texas Medical Branch at Galveston, the last to occupy the Galveston apartment all three boys called home during their years there.

In hindsight, said John, the family probably should have bought that apartment, having paid rent there more than 12 years.

The Alexander brothers' first recollections of their father's vocation involve periodic visits to his office, when they'd occupy themselves while he saw patients or dictated notes.

"(We'd) piddle around," said John, "mess around in the waiting room, or push the buttons and talk on the intercom."

The quieter, younger Robert, according to his family, consistently maintained that he was going to be "the real doctor" in the family.

"So when somebody breaks their leg in the middle of the night," father Alexander interjected, the "real doctor" gets to get out of bed and go to the hospital.

Robert's claim to fame, his family testified, is he played on one of the few San Angelo Central High School Bobcat football teams to beat Permian High School twice in a row.

What about present-day sibling rivalry?

John proclaimed his radiology association is "independent" from the hospitals and therefore "gets along with everybody," but the other two Alexander brothers work with competing clinics.

Texas is no stranger to medical dynasties. A recent article in Texas Medicine lists family after family of doctors, some three or four generations strong.

But few of those find an entire family practicing in their hometown, particularly if it's not a large city.

Besides family, said the Alexander brothers, San Angelo has safer streets, advantages for children, and familiarity.

"I know all the surgeons here," said Robert, "and they know me."

"It makes it kind of nice," John added.

REPUBLICAN: Name to stay on ballot

(From 1B)

Jan. 5 — two days following his filing.

"It is my understanding that my name will remain on the primary-election ballot, notwithstanding my decision to no longer actively seek the office," he said.

Moudy, a former executive of financial institutions in Midland, said he will "not engage in any campaigning activities and will not participate in any organized meetings to which opposing candidates have been or will be invited to attend."

He indicated that he would not endorse a candidate for the judgeship.

The candidates are seeking the $60,000-a-year post held by Midland County Judge Charles W. "Bro" Seltzer, who is not running for re-election.

Seltzer, 45, is one of four Republicans who are campaigning for judge of Midland County Court-at-Law Number 2, a post held by Judge James Fitz-Gerald III, who is retiring from the bench. A lone Democrat is seeking his party's nomination for the county court-at-law judgeship.

Before filing for county judge — the presiding officer of the Commissioners' Court and the county's chief fiscal officer — Moudy had one other experience in campaigning for political office.

That was in 1964, when Moudy, then a Democrat and Midland's city judge, won the Democratic Party nomination for county attorney by defeating Brown Bailey in the primary election by a vote of 4,270 to 3,638.

But in the November general election, Moudy lost the county-attorney's race to Republican Clint Starr in a close — 9,903-to-9,614 — race.

"I have no regrets," Moudy said of his 1964 campaign, "other than the fact I lost the election."

While Moudy acknowledged the possibility that he could be voted in as county judge despite not campaigning, he said his winning the race would be most improbable.

"Yeah," he said, "but it's not likely."

TREE: Stigen predicts Cowboy victory

day season with each sporting a different motif. The Cowboy tree on display in her business has always been the most popular.

Describing herself as a Cowboy fan through thick and thin, she has long since forgotten the fiasco when team owner Jerry Jones rolled into Dallas and promptly dismissed coaching legend Tom Landry. Now, she is a fan of both Jones and Johnson, and says, "I stay with them all the way whether they're 50 points ahead or 50 points behind. I'd rather watch the Cowboys play and get slaughtered than watch any other team win."

When Johnson rocked the previously silent and proper NFL coaching world and all but guaranteed a victory over the 49ers in last week's NFC championship, Ms. Stigen said her first thought was, "Hip, hip, hooray. Now I can relax and enjoy the game."

As for Super Bowl XXVIII, Ms. Stigen. has another not-so-bold prediction: "The Cowboys are going to blow them out again." And to follow that up, she has a prediction that could be considered a little more daring: "Leon Lett is going to keep that ball going over the goal line this time."

Cowboy fans can only hope.

Richards asks Clinton to weigh Alamo City job training project

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards has told President Clinton that a San Antonio project could serve as an example for national welfare reform.

In a letter Tuesday, Richards called Clinton's attention to Project Quest, a public-private initiative that combines job training with private sector employment.

"We have proven in Texas that there really does exist a way to learn and earn your way off welfare," Richards wrote to the president.

Project Quest is funded in part by a $2.5 million grant from the governor's office and by the city of San Antonio.

Now in its second year of a two-year experiment, the pilot program provides custom-designed job training for people that qualifies them for an existing job in the community.

Businesses have pledged more than 500 jobs for Project Quest graduates that pay at least $7.50 an hour and provide health benefits, Richards said.

"The initial investment per participant is $10,800. In three years of employment, the taxes the person pays as a working member of society will repay this initial investment of government," Richards wrote to Clinton.

She said that using such programs to end the cycle of welfare for a 25-year-old mother of two would save the government more than $55,000 in a 10-year period for costs of AFDC, food stamps and Medicaid.

Friendly fire may have killed officer in Waco, ATF agent says

By Kelley Shannon
Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — A federal agent testified Tuesday it is possible one of his bullets struck a fellow officer during a shootout with followers of David Koresh at the Branch Davidian compound.

Agent Keith Constantino of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms was the first ATF officer to tell jurors in a federal murder trial that friendly fire may have occurred amidst the Feb. 28, 1993, gun battle at the compound near Waco.

In another defense triumph, U.S. District Judge Walter Smith permitted questioning of agent Bill Buford about planning of the failed raid.

Buford testified he first favored surrounding the compound and ordering a surrender, but later changed his mind and agreed it should be a "dynamic entry" which relied the element of surprise.

Constantino testified he, Buford and agent Glen Jordan encountered gunfire as they entered an upstairs compound room containing weapons. Both Buford and Constantino said they fired at and hit two separate gunmen who were wielding AR-15 rifles.

The agents said they also fired through walls at an unseen enemy.

Constantino said one of Jordan's wounds was from a 9mm "Hydroshock" bullet, which testimony has shown ATF agents were using. There is no evidence indicating that type bullet — which expands like a flower upon impact — was found among the Branch Davidian weaponry.

"All I was told was several months after this was over was that a 9 mm Hydroshock was taken from his arm. With that in mind, it could have been a ricochet ... could have been a direct hit. I don't know," Constantino said.

Constantino said he did not know exactly where Jordan was in the room when he was hit.

Buford testified the agents fired at least 75 rounds into the room as bullets sprayed at them.

"It was intense. I remember thinking to myself I can't believe I'm not getting hit because the rounds were coming in at such a volume," he said, adding he later was wounded in the buttocks.

Buford testified he was involved in the raid planning because he was the leader of an ATF "special response team" and because he had experience with large raids.

After seeing the terrain around the compound and after interviewing former Branch Davidians and learning about a large weapons cache inside, Buford said he agreed a surprise "dynamic entry" was preferable.

"I felt like in order to protect the women and children on the inside of the compound, I felt like a dynamic entry was the safest way to do it to save lives," said Buford.

In other testimony Tuesday, agent Gary Orchowski identified defendant Livingston Fagan as a goggle-wearing gunman who wielded an AR-15 rifle and shot at him during the raid.

Orchowski was the second ATF agent to identify Fagan in court as a gunman. Agent Eric Evers, who worked with Orchowski in the Houston office, also identified Fagan.

Under cross-examination, Fagan's lawyer, Rocket Rosen, and Orchowski clashed over whether the agent was identifying Fagan because he recognized him or for some other reason.

Rosen noted that Orchowski had seen Fagan on television. He also questioned why no pictures of other black Branch Davidian residents were included in a photo lineup. The agent also acknowledged he never gave investigators a specific description of his assailant other than to say he was a black man.

Rosen has asked that Fagan be tried separately so that he can call defendants Brad Branch and Clive Doyle as witnesses. Their lawyers say Doyle will testify he saw Fagan inside the Davidian compound during the shootout and that Branch will testify he saw another black man outside shooting.

It is unclear whether the two will testify in this trial because they are defendants.

Judge Smith has not ruled on the request.

Eleven defendants are being tried together and could face up to life in prison if convicted of the murder and murder conspiracy charges.

Parents of slain Scottish oilman visit Texas

By Stefanie Asin
N.Y. Times News Service

HOUSTON — The parents of Andrew De Vries, a Scottish oilman who was shot and killed by a Houston homeowner who mistook him for a burglar, arrived here Tuesday to retrace their son's final hours.

Gelt and Fiona De Vries timed their trip to Houston to coincide with a grand jury's scheduled review Friday of the killing.

The De Vries want to draw attention to the shooting of their son, who, they claim, was murdered. His mother and stepfather also want to revisit the spots where De Vries, 28, had been on Jan. 7, the night he was killed.

"There are so many members of the family who need to know what happened on his last night," Lindsay De Vries, a sister who did not make the trip to Houston, said in a telephone interview from Dundee, Scotland. "They want to see where he was and try to work out how he was feeling and what could have scared him so much."

The De Vries family has been outraged that homeowner Jeffrey Agee was not immediately charged after he shot De Vries twice after the Scotsman climbed into Agee's back yard and knocked on his door at 4 a.m. on Jan. 7.

The shooting occurred after De Vries, 28, and fellow Scot Sydney Graves, both in Houston on business, spent the night drinking at a bar and a woman's home. While being driven to their hotel by the woman and her husband, De Vries began acting strangely — once grabbing the steering wheel of the car.

The two were let out in an affluent west Houston neighborhood, where De Vries reportedly knocked on several doors.

De Vries apparently rang the doorbell of Agee's house twice and hid. He then jumped the backyard fence and banged on the glass doors. Agee said he shot the Scotsman, fearing for his family's safety.

Police initially reported that De Vries and Graves had been drinking heavily, but toxicology reports showed that De Vries had a .08 blood alcohol content — below the .10 standard for intoxication in Texas.

The fatal shooting was referred to a grand jury without charges.

Family members are convinced that De Vries did not mean harm to the homeowner, who they say should be charged with murder. They could not persuade authorities here to press charges, so they are planning to file a wrongful death suit.

De Vries' parents flew from Scotland Tuesday to try to influence the grand jury's upcoming decision in the case. Their plans may include a protest outside the county courthouse Friday.

"They want to get it across that he had no malicious intent," Lindsay De Vries said. "He isn't just another statistic. He was such a wonderful, wonderful person."

The De Vries are staying with an unidentified Houston woman who is sympathetic with the family's situation.

While here, they are planning to meet with state Rep. Harold Dutton, D-Houston, for advice on pursuing a federal investigation into the matter.

Family members have said in the past they would like to meet with Agee.

Indian group wants street in front of Alamo sealed off

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — An American Indian group wants to close a road in front of the Alamo that it says once served as a burial ground containing as many as 1,000 bodies.

Gary Gabehart, president of the San Antonio-based Intertribal Council of American Indians, said he wants to prevent the desecration of Indian and Spaniard graves.

"You don't drive over a cemetery," he said. "Our people need to be in a final resting place — and that's not out in the street or in the gutter."

Councilman Bill Thornton said he backs efforts to have the street closed to traffic, as well as the return of any artifacts and burial items to the tribes of descendants.

"This ground was very clearly, clearly a cemetery that held Mestizos (those of Indian and Spanish decent), Native Americans and Spaniards," he said.

A former Bexar County archivist — transcribing birth, death and marriage records from San Antonio's five Spanish missions — said he found proof the site is a cemetery.

John Leal said the bodies were buried in front of and inside the mission, as was common with Franciscans.

But not all believe the claim.

"There have always been rumors of bodies, cannons and gold buried in and around the Alamo for years," said Anna Hartman.

Prison director outlines policy on unused beds

By Clay Robison
N.Y. Times News Service

AUSTIN — The Texas prison director acknowledged Tuesday that more than 6,000 beds sit empty in state prisons but said a federal court order prevents the state from using them to relieve overcrowded county jails.

Prison director Andy Collins disputed findings by the state comptroller's office that the extra space can be used to ease pressure on county jails, crammed with a record backlog of 29,000 state convicts.

"This is the phantom bed issue. There is a significant number of beds out there that are not being used, because we agreed not to use them," Collins said. "There are 6,200 beds, but they are 6,200 nonusable beds."

In a negotiated settlement that ended a 20-year-old prison reform lawsuit brought by inmates over crowding and other conditions, the state agreed to limit the population of some prison units and to increase the population of others only if additional showers and other support facilities were installed.

With county officials demanding relief from the state, Gov. Ann Richards has directed the Texas Department of Criminal Justice to cooperate with the comptroller in "maximizing occupancy in the prison system."

The governor and other state leaders recently announced an emergency plan to accelerate construction of 15,000 new prison beds at a cost of more than $300 million.

Auditors reviewing the prison system for Comptroller John Sharp said they believed many of the 6,200 empty beds can be used if the state refits some of the state's older prisons with required facilities.

Auditors also questioned whether prison officials are keeping an excessive number of prison cells empty to provide flexibility in separating inmates, such as those kept in solitary confinement or those requiring medical attention.

"All we're saying is we need to inventory those beds, find out which ones we can do (use) by building up support services and figure out if there's some better management we can do," Sharp spokesman Greg Hartman said.

Collins said prison officials believe it would cost less to increase capacity by building new prisons rather than remodeling old ones. And he denied officials were keeping an unnecessary number of beds open for classification purposes.

State Sen. John Whitmire, chairman of the Criminal Justice Committee, said Texas should consider challenging federal court-ordered limits on the prison population so that the state can take more convicts off the counties' hands.

"If I was in charge, I would maximize the population numbers and even surpass them, if necessary, and take my chances explaining to the court," the Houston Democrat said. "These are not normal times. Ruiz (the prison reform settlement) was a prescription for normal times."

Attorney General Dan Morales and the governor opposed the idea.

"It's just like inviting a federal judge to come in and take over the prison system again," Richards spokesman Bill Cryer said.

Don Lee, an aide to Harris County Judge Jon Lindsay, said the comptroller apparently "has found out what we've been arguing for years."

Even if state prison standards were relaxed, inmates would be better off in state facilities than in overcrowded county jails, where several violent disturbances have erupted recently, Lee said.

"Is it better to be in a cellblock where you have to go to another cellblock to take a shower, or to be sleeping on the floor next to the toilet?" he asked.

Jobless rate decreases to 6.3 percent

AUSTIN (AP) — The state unemployment rate dropped to 6.3 percent in December, down from 6.9 percent in November, the Texas Employment Commission reports.

Much of the reason for the drop in the jobless rate was due to hiring during the holiday season, John Kruse, a TEC labor market analyst said Tuesday.

Last month there were 8,404,900 Texans at work, and 566,000 unemployed, the TEC reported.

The 6.3 percent unemployment rate last month represents more than a full percentage drop from the 7.4 percent rate in December 1992.

Although the state unemployment rate decreased, Tyler's increased by 4 percent. But Robert Sullivan, a TEC labor market analyst from Longview, said the jump was because several large companies had temporary layoffs.

"They do that every year at Christmas time. Usually we adjusted for those temporary layoffs. This time it kind of slipped by," he said.

Rates of unemployment in the urban areas of Texas as announced by the TEC for December, compared with November figures (in parenthesis) included:

Abilene 5.8 (6.5)
Amarillo 4.4 (4.8)

Child born to American soldier has no proof of citizenship

By John MacCormack
N.Y. Times News Service

SAN ANGELO — The day Matthew James Thomas was born in Gorgas U.S. Army Hospital in Panama City, Panama, Gen. Manuel Noriega was holed up across town and U.S. soldiers were shooting it out with Noriega's followers.

"They had told me I would be flown out, but it didn't happen. I was at my due date," recalls his mother, Army (CQ) Sgt. Sheila Cook, now stationed at Goodfellow AFB here.

Cook, and her husband, Willie Thomas, from whom she is now divorced, were American citizens when their second child was born on Christmas Day 1989, five days after the start of the U.S. military invasion of Panama.

When she was transferred from Panama several months later, her travel orders identified her daughter, Jessica, and her new son, Matthew, as U.S. citizens.

But four years later, Matthew, a dark-eyed, pizza-loving scamp, is a child without a country. He has no birth certificate or any other document to prove his American citizenship.

"Sometimes when he acts up, I tell him, 'If you only knew. You can't prove I'm your mother,'" joked Cook.

"I've talked to the Immigration and Naturalization Service in San Antonio three times, the U.S. State Department, the Pentagon, the U.S. Embassy in Panama, the vital statistics office of the Panama Canal Commission, the office of U.S. Rep. Lamar Smith (R-San Antonio), the Army Inspector General, the American Civil Liberties Union, the law college at St. Mary's University in San Antonio, Amnesty International, President Clinton's hotline, and several agencies in Washington that help with foreign births," said Cook. She has a thick sheaf of correspondence from various agencies attesting to her efforts.

"So far, nobody can tell me how I can get him a birth certificate," she said.

Her commanding officer, Lt. Col. Ralph Ball, said: "It is a special situation for which there is no precedent, and without a precedent there is no policy, or procedure or statuatory guidance."

There is no question that Matthew was born to Cook. Gorgas Army Hospital has provided records of the birth and two follow-up checkups, and Cook has a family videotape of herself in the hospital bed with her new-born son.

Matthew's dilemma can be traced to his being born in a country that was falling apart around him.

According to a diplomat who looked into the case, the war disrupted the customary civil procedures between Panamanian and U.S. officials to record births.

"Most Panamanian government offices did not begin operation until February 1990. Thus, your son was not registered at the Civil Registry, and it is not possible for you to obtain a Panamanian birth certificate for him at this time," wrote Wesley Parson, U.S. Consul in Panama in a 1992 letter to Cook.

But this explanation hasn't persuaded anyone.

"When I went to INS, the lady said, 'We can't help you. He was born out of the country. You can't prove he's your son.' On the second visit, I saw someone else, and she said to get a lawyer," the mother recalled.

"On the third visit, the lady argued with me for 45 minutes that I couldn't have gotten the baby out of Panama without some type of documentation. Finally she gave me a form to fill out, and said to submit it with $90 and good luck," said Cook.

"When I called the presidential hotline, I had to sit through all these tapes and questions about Clinton's policies. ... Finally a lady came on the line. I was in tears. I said, 'Can't someone get this child a birth certificate or a green card?' She said that type of information is normally not passed on to the president of the United States.

"I asked Congressman Smith's office, 'How can you justify this to me? You have pregnant illegal aliens coming across the border. They have a baby, and that baby is automatically a U.S. citizen, but you can't give my baby a birth certificate or a green card, and both his parents are U.S. citizens.'" They said bring the paperwork in and they'd go back through INS," she said.

Jo Anne Powell, in Smith's district office here, talked to Cook again last week and said she will talk to the INS regional director if necessary. "I will follow this wherever I need to go," Powell promised.

So far, Cook said, the inconveniences of Matthew's stateless status have been relatively minor.

"I couldn't claim him as a dependent on my income tax, and that cost me $1,700. I couldn't register him for soccer because they wanted a birth certificate," she recounted.

"But I have to go to Korea in September for one year, and my kids are going home to my mother in Alabama. He can't go to school there without a birth certificate," she said.

Commission to finalize TU rate increase

AUSTIN (AP) — The Public Utility Commission meets today to finalize an 8.9 percent TU Electric Co. rate increase that the company has said would be devastatingly inadequate but that others contend is too high.

The $431.5 million overall increase would mean a 9.3 percent average increase for residential customers and 7.3 percent for businesses, compared with what they were paying last summer, said PUC spokesman Guillermo Garcia.

That's less than the 15.3 percent increase the Dallas-based electric company had requested and began collecting on an interim basis last August, as allowed under state law, while the case was pending before the PUC.

The higher request would have meant a $760 million revenue increase for TU Electric, Texas' largest utility. It serves 2.2 million customers, most of them residential.

The new rates — assuming that the three-member commission stands by its earlier action in the case — mean customers would see refunds. Preliminary estimates by the company had put those refunds at $4.50 to $5 per residential customer.

Residential customers' bills would vary from the 9.3 percent overall increase based on how much electricity they use.

For example, a residential customer who uses 500 kilowatt hours of electricity in the winter would pay $44.96, a 3.7 percent increase from the $43.37 paid before interim rates took effect, Garcia said.

Someone who uses 1,000 kilowatt hours in the winter would pay $76.83, a 10.8 percent increase from the previous $69.34, he said.

In the summer, the rates would go up 7.9 percent for 500 kilowatt hours, from $43.37 to $46.81, Garcia said. For 1,000 kilowatt hours, the increase would be 8.5 percent, from $80.74 to $87.61, he said.

TU Electric spokeswoman Joan Hunter said company officials hope that now the commission has had a chance to review the figures "that they will reconsider the impact on our financial integrity" and make adjustments to increase the company's revenue.

Company Chairman Erle Nye has said the revenue decisions made by the PUC would make it impossible for the company to earn an adequate return on its investment, and a lawyer for the company has said its bond rating is in jeopardy of being downgraded.

"It's really a concern that affects the company and customers alike," Ms. Hunter said. Higher costs to borrow money based on a lower credit rating ultimately will mean higher rates, she said, and an impaired financial condition affects long-term planning and reliability.

Pauken to challenge Meyer for top GOP post

AUSTIN (AP) — Tom Pauken, a longtime Republican Party activist, says he will challenge incumbent Fred Meyer for the job of state GOP chairman.

Pauken of Dallas said Tuesday he believes new leadership is needed that is "more issue-driven."

Pauken, 50, started his involvement with the Republican Party in the early 1960s. He has twice run unsuccessfully for Congress.

"The Republican Party really needs to rekindle the spirit that we had in the Reagan era," he said.

Meyer, 65, has been Texas GOP chief since June 1988.

He said the state Republican Party has broad grassroots support and that the number of GOP elected officials in Texas has increased 60 percent since he became chairman.

The election of a state party chairman starts March 8 at precinct conventions and concludes at the State Republican Convention in Fort Worth on June 10-11.

Court grants stay of execution to state inmate

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — An inmate scheduled to die early today for a 1989 murder has been granted a stay.

Jessie Gutierrez won a stay late Monday from the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals in Austin.

Gutierrez, 28, had been scheduled to die before dawn today for the Sept. 5, 1989 robbery-murder of a College Station jewelry store employee.

Dorothy McNew, 42, was fatally shot in the head and about $500,000 worth of gems and jewelry were taken in the robbery.

Gutierrez and his brother, Jose Gutierrez, were arrested about a week later in Houston. Both brothers were convicted of capital murder and sentenced to die by injection.

Prices unchanged

NEW YORK — Fears of shrinking stockpiles and forecasts of more frigid U.S. weather combined to push heating oil and gasoline prices higher Tuesday, but the price of crude oil remained unchanged.

West Texas Intermediate for near-month delivery finished at $15.17 barrel, the same level as Monday.

Traders said the primary reason for the market's strength was the advance of a strong Arctic high pressure system moving into the Midwest and East Coast states, heralding a return to the snowy frigid weather that gripped much of the nation last week and increased demand for fuel.

That demand also raised expectations that the petroleum industry's weekly figures on supplies, released after the close of trading Tuesday, would show a significant drop in stockpiles. Those forecasts proved correct.

The American Petroleum Institute said crude oil supplies dropped to 328.71 million barrels in the week ended Friday from 333.54 million the week before.

PBPA meeting

Dr. Ray Powell, New Mexico Commissioner of Public Lands, will be the guest speaker at Thursday's meeting of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association. The meeting will be at the Petroleum Club beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Powell, appointed Land Commissioner in May 1993, is still a practicing veterinarian specializing in wildlife rehabilitation. Prior to assuming his Land Office duties, he was a special assistant to New Mexico Governor Bruce King, working in the areas of natural resources, environment and health.

Cost is $15 per person and reservations are required by calling 684-6345.

Dollar retreats

NEW YORK — The dollar ended mostly lower Tuesday against most major currencies following a mixed performance overseas. Trading was quiet.

The dollar was later quoted in New York at 111.01 yen, down from 111.70 yen yen Monday.

But the dollar was higher against the British pound compared to Monday's trading. Sterling fetched $1.4950 in New York, down from $1.4955.

Stocks sink

NEW YORK — The stock market lost its upward momentum Tuesday as prices fell on profit-taking in extremely heavy trading.

The Dow Jones industrial average shed 17.45 points to close at 3,895.34.

Declining issues outnumbered advancing ones by about 3 to 2 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Consumer confidence continues rise

Report: Barometer of faith in economy hits highest level since September 1990

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Consumer confidence in the economy rose in January for the third straight month to reach the highest level since September 1990, a research group reported Tuesday.

The widely followed monthly survey corroborated other statistical evidence of a healthier economy and suggested the momentum will continue through the first quarter of 1994.

"This is not an immaculate conception," said Fabian Linden, head of the Conference Board's consumer research unit. "It results from what's going on out there."

Economists said the findings from the New York-based Conference Board showed American consumers are feeling financially secure enough to spend and borrow more, partly because inflation is tame and interest rates are low, making life more affordable.

The Conference Board's monthly index of consumer sentiment gained 3.4 points to 83.2. The measurement has gained about 23 points since October and now stands at the highest level since an 85.6 reading in September 1990.

Calculated on a base of 100, the consumer confidence index is derived from responses to a survey sent to 5,000 households nationwide that asks questions ranging from home-buying plans to local job conditions. It's considered a useful indicator for assessing consumer willingness to borrow and spend, critical elements for sustainable growth in the economy.

Twice as many survey respondents expected business conditions and family incomes to improve in coming months as those who foresee declines, the survey showed.

Despite the improvement, Linden and others said the survey reflected an underlying nervousness about the relatively barren job market, which only recently has shown signs of improvement like other economic barometers.

More than a third of survey respondents said they felt employment opportunities remained sparse, and only a relatively small number expected the employment situation to improve in the near future, Linden said.

Furthermore, the results were compiled before the California earthquake and a freeze in the East, which disrupted life in the country's two most heavily populated regions and could weaken the confidence data in coming months.

Nonetheless, economists said the survey results seemed to reflect at least some improvement in the job market. Despite a sluggish growth rate in new jobs, the national unemployment rate fell to a three-year low last month of 6.4 percent.

"The fact is, you've seen steady, albeit slow, growth in employment," said Kathleen Stephansen, senior economist at Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette Securities Corp. in New York.

"With interest rates down, people seem to have more cash on hand, more purchasing power," she said. "I think that generally speaking, people are starting to see results in the economy."

Some said the improvement in confidence may have been almost entirely due to whatever meager job growth has filtered through the economy in recent months.

"People described jobs as hard to get, but they are getting them," said Richard Berner, chief economist at Mellon Bank, a large banking company based in Pittsburgh.

Time Warner: Interactive TV real this time

MIAMI (AP) — This time, said Time Warner's chairman, "the electronic highway is for real."

"I think it's right to describe what lies ahead as a defining moment in the evolution of television," Gerald M. Levin said Tuesday at the annual conference of the National Association of Program Television Executives.

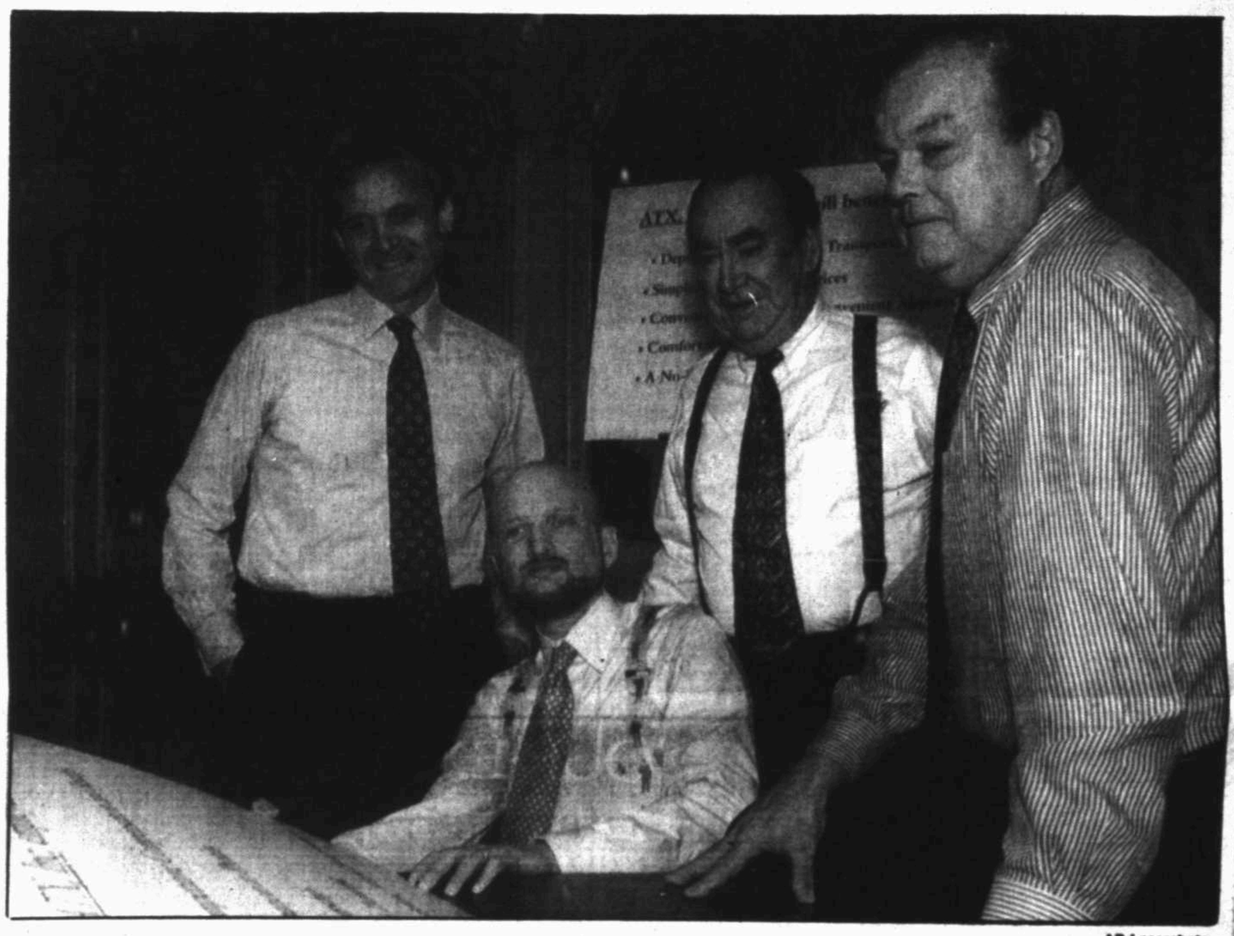

What's different this time after past false starts is "a new technological architecture" that Time Warner, one of several major players in the field, will harness when it begins testing a full-service interactive network in Orlando later this year, Levin said.

Simply put, interactivity is "TV's ability to function as a VCR," he said.

Levin likened the media revolution to the stunning theory that the sun, not the Earth, is at the center of the physical universe.

It will allow TV viewers to watch anything they want at any time.

"Interactivity brings consumers from the periphery of the software universe into the center, allowing them to make minute-to-minute decisions about the information, entertainment and even advertising they bring into the homes," he said.

IBM reports profit for fourth quarter

NEW YORK (AP) — IBM is making money again.

The world's biggest computer maker on Tuesday reported earnings of $382 million for the final three months of 1993. It was its first profit since June 1992 and the result of massive workforce cuts and changes in top leadership and product strategy.

The results, which were forecast, gave International Business Machines Corp. a positive end to its worst year ever with an $8 billion loss. They also showed the company is still adjusting to a marketplace that has dramatically changed in recent years.

IBM's fourth-quarter earnings translated to 62 cents per share. It lost $5.5 billion, or $9.57 per share, in the same period a year earlier due to restructuring charges. Without the charges, the company would have lost $45 million, or 8 cents per share, in that quarter.

Revenue was $19.4 billion in the latest quarter, down from $19.6 billion a year ago.

Census: Hard times drop American households' net worth

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hard times and sagging real estate values pulled down the net worth of American households by 12 percent — that's nearly $5,000 apiece — between 1988 and 1991, the government said Tuesday.

The Census Bureau report also showed that in every category of investment — real estate, retirement and savings accounts — black families own less than white families.

The years covered by the report included an eight-month economic recession that cost more than 1 million workers their jobs.

Falling real estate values caused much of the $4,849 decline in median net worth after accounting for inflation. Rising prices of stocks, cars and trucks, and retirement accounts helped offset the losses.

Real estate was America's investment of choice. Fifty-four percent of the average household's wealth was in a home, rental property or other real-estate holdings.

Savings accounts and other interest-earning accounts were the second biggest investment: 14 percent.

The boom years of the 1980s did little to lift Americans' net worth. Households' median net worth in 1988, $41,472, was little changed from the $42,934 recorded in 1984. Both figures were adjusted for inflation.

Median means that half the households had net worth — assets minus liabilities — of more than $41,472 and half had less.

Between 1988 and 1991, the net worth of the median white household plummeted $5,796, while the net worth of black and Hispanic households changed little.

Even so, the nation's largest racial group remains a continent of plenty in a sea of want.

The median white household was worth $44,408. The median black household was worth about a tenth of that: $4,604.

"Basically, black households have so much less net worth because they haven't accumulated as much as white households, and that's due to differences in income and earning power," said T.J. Eller, the Census Bureau demographer who wrote the report.

Blacks' homes were worth less than two-thirds of whites', their retirement accounts were worth only a third of whites', their savings in interest-earning accounts were worth one-fourth of whites'.

Hispanic households had median net worth of $5,345. Hispanics are a cultural group and can be of any race. Their investment pattern was similar to that of black Americans.

Talbots begins construction on Midland store

By Mella McEwen

Construction has begun on TALBOTS, to be built at Loop 250 and Garfield Avenue, just west of the Colonnade at Polo Park shopping center.

A spokeswoman for the retailer said a late April or early May opening is anticipated.

Talbots offers women's apparel, including sportswear, weekend wear, career clothing and special-occasion dresses. Shoes and accessories also are offered.

The company was established in 1947 as "The Talbots" by Rudolf and Nancy Talbot in Hingham, Mass. It was acquired in 1973 by General Mills and in June 1988 became part of Jusco Inc., a leading Japanese retailer.

Talbots operates 339 specialty retail stores, including 258 Talbots, 37 Talbots Petites, 24 Talbots Kids, three Talbots Intimates and nine Talbots Surplus stores in 44 states and the District of Columbia, and eight Talbots stores in Canada.

Midlander Donna Pippin and her daughter will own and operate THE CHAPEL, located at 350 N. Midland Drive.

Pippin describes The Chapel as a full-service chapel.

"The customer can come here, let us know what he wants and we'll handle all the details. They can get married and have their reception here. We can arrange for a Justice of the Peace, but the customer will have to furnish his own minister and take care of the marriage license."

She likened it to a Las Vegas chapel "without all the glitz" and said she decided to open the business because "unless you belong to a church or a country club, there's not a lot of options to where you can get married. This is an alternative."

The Chapel will have a small grand opening on Saturday.

MARTINEZ FUNERAL HOME of Odessa has purchased the Grace Chapel Funeral Home located at 602 S. Main St.

Al Torres will serve as funeral director of the full-service facility, which will be renamed to include both the Martinez and Grace Chapel names.

On the move is ASIAN MARKET, which is now located in the Lone Star Plaza, 4411 W. Illinois Ave.

Owner Larry de Guzman said customers can buy food cooked at the store or buy the ingredients to prepare their own recipes.

"We carry different kinds of groceries from different countries like China, Japan, Korea, Thailand, Pakisan, India, the Philippines. We have spikes, beans, flours, and we have noodles from Indonesia, Singapore and Malaysia."

Hours are 10 a.m to 7 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 2 to 6 p.m. Sundays.

Second Menendez jury appears deadlocked

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jurors in the Lyle Menendez murder trial said they were deadlocked Tuesday, and a judge ordered them to try to reconcile their differences. They later retired for the day without reaching a verdict.

Jurors were given special instructions by Superior Court Judge Stanley Weisberg to determine the nature of the deadlock. After briefly resuming their 24th day of deliberations, they recessed until Friday.

The brothers are charged in the 1989 shotgun slayings of their wealthy parents.

The jury for Lyle's brother, Erik, also declared a deadlock on Jan. 13. Weisberg declared a mistrial after 19 days of deliberations and several unsuccesful attempts to prod Erik's jury into reaching a verdict.

One of Lyle's attorneys, Jill Lansing, said she thought the earthquake on Jan. 17 had jolted the jury into giving up. The jury resumed talks on Monday.

"I think it is not coincidental that this jury, which had been working a long time, never indicating that they couldn't reach a verdict, does so almost immediately upon coming back to begin deliberations following the earthquake," she said.

Weisberg asked jurors if damage to their homes and associated pressures pushed them to declare a deadlock. All of them shook their heads in the negative.

At another hearing, Weisberg asked if further instructions from him or clarification of the law could help break the impasse.

One juror told the judge "the gap is too wide here."

Another said that some jurors didn't seem to understand the law. But the foreman then said he thought even if the law was clarified on specific points, "it wouldn't make a difference."

The judge ordered the jurors to resume deliberations and consider one more time whether there was any "reasonable probability" that they could resolve their differences.

After jurors sent Weisberg a note saying clarification wouldn't help, he gave them a new set of verdict forms complying with a legal precedent known as the Stone instruction. It seeks to find out if jurors have discounted the most serious charge of first-degree murder and moved on to consider a lesser charge.

The jury then recessed.

Jose and Kitty Menendez were killed by a barrage of shotgun fire in the family room of their Beverly Hills mansion. The brothers claimed they killed in self-defense after years of abuse.

Los Angeles creeps toward normalcy

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Children trooped back to earthquake-battered schools and frightened residents started straggling home from soggy, makeshift settlements Tuesday as the city kept creeping toward a warped normality.

President Clinton asked Congress for $7.5 billion to rebuild highways and get families and businesses back on their feet following the Jan. 17 earthquake whose death toll rose Tuesday to 61.

And the city's 5.6 million commuters refined techniques for threading the maze of crumpled concrete, driving long detours, car-pooling and — to their own amazement — riding the train.

Lesson plans gave way to counseling sessions and group discussions as the 640,000-student Los Angeles Unified School District — the nation's second-largest — resumed classes for the first time since the Friday before the quake.

"I guess it's safer to be here than at home," said 14-year-old Monica Renderos at James Monroe High School in Sepulveda, near the quake's epicenter in the San Fernando Valley. "At home you run around like an idiot. Here they tell you what to do.

"If they say it's safe here, it's safe."

District officials weren't immediately able to provide attendance figures. Several principals in the hard-hit San Fernando Valley reported attendance was 40 percent to 60 percent of normal.

About 65,000 students had no classrooms to return to because 76 schools were closed by quake damage. Fifteen schools which serve 11,200 students were to reopen today.

There were signs that thousands of people were finally leaving Red Cross shelters and tent cities where they had been living because fear of aftershocks kept them from returning to homes that were declared safe. Rain and temperatures in the high 40s appeared to accomplish what bureaucrats, priests and social workers had failed to do in days of pleading.

"Yes, I'm afraid, but I'm sick," said Jerman Ruiz, as he left a tent at Lanark Recreation Center with his wife and daughter, bound for a creaky apartment. "What can I do?"

About one-third of all people in tents and shelters over the weekend were "voluntarily" homeless, said James Lee Witt, director of the Federal Emergency Management Agency. The rest had homes that really were too damaged to safely live in.

The total number of people living in Red Cross shelters and National Guard tents declined overnight from 15,672 to 11,788, agencies reported.

FEMA estimated that 14,110 houses or apartment units are uninhabitable. The agency has received 64,674 applications for assistance ranging from temporary rent subsidies to grants and loans.

Long lines have been reported at state unemployment offices after people tried to go back to work, only to find their businesses closed.

"I've never done this. I don't even know what I'm doing," said Maria Johnson, 66, who came to the unemployment office in San Fernando because the J.C. Penney store where she has worked for 21 years was too damaged to open. "We don't know if it will reopen or not," she said. "We just have to wait."

Other developments:

■ The death toll climbed to 61 with the death of a woman who was injured in a car crash the day of the quake. The Los Angeles County coroner also added an 88-year-old man who died of a heart attack and hip fracture. The coroner now lists 57 deaths. Four other deaths, one in San Bernardino County and three in Los Angeles County, have been independently confirmed by The Associated Press.

■ Residents were allowed to retrieve their belongings from the Northridge Meadows apartment complex, which collapsed and killed 16 people.

■ The Small Business Administration has received 44,555 applications for loans, including 40,000 to repair homes, 3,200 to repair businesses and 1,400 for general damage. The home loans are intended for business people who must get their homes fixed before they can work on their businesses, said Tom R. MacKenzie, assistant regional adminisrator.

■ Scuffles broke out among hundreds of people who lined up for emergency food stamps in South Central Los Angeles. No one was hurt in the incidents at two centers, police said.

If Congress approves the president's request for $7.5 billion in aid, it would be the biggest sum of emergency funds ever advanced by the federal government, Housing and Urban Development Secretary Henry Cisneros said at a news conference in Los Angeles.

Republican Gov. Pete Wilson welcomed the president's announcement.

Unmanned spacecraft takes off for lunar exploration

VANDENBERG AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — An unmanned spacecraft roared off a launch pad Tuesday on a seven-month journey to shoot the moon as part of the first U.S. lunar exploration mission in 21 years.

Clementine I will use sensors built by the Defense Department for missile defense to make pictures of the moon and an asteroid called Geographos.

Data collected when Clementine points its instruments at the moon next month and Geographos next summer will be merely a byproduct of a $75 million-plus mission primarily intended to test new defense technology.

The key instruments are five advanced sensors designed for detecting and tracking missiles, said the Defense Department's Ballistic Missile Defense Organization, which jointly sponsored the mission with NASA.

A two-stage Titan 2G booster, a converted ballistic missile, lifted Clementine off at 8:34 a.m. and sent it southwestward over the Pacific.

"It went up and it's out of sight and it's making history," said Sgt. Kirby Lindner.

Contact with the spacecraft was achieved several hours later as planned. "Everything's going fine," said Tech. Sgt. Joel Ragan.

The mission is designed to test the detection capabilities of the sensors, using the Earth, moon and Geographos as targets.

Clementine will stay in Earth's orbit for about seven days, then begin a looping trajectory to enter the moon's orbit on Feb. 20.

The mission is the first lunar exploration since the Apollo moon missions ended 21 years ago. The last, Apollo 17, landed in December 1972.

Clementine will spend two months in two different orbits around the moon, mapping the entire surface.

The spacecraft will then leave lunar orbit on a four-month trip to Geographos, passing within 75 miles of the asteroid on Aug. 31.

The mission is expected to end after seven months.

The Clementine I cost $55 million, and the Titan and other launch costs added another $20 million to the mission, said Lt. Col. Michael Stepp. Stepp did not know the cost of running the mission, but said it was not included in the other figures.

The mission is the Defense Department's first deep space experiment, meaning the spacecraft will leave the Earth's orbit.

Built by the Naval Research Laboratory, Clementine is less than 4 feet in diameter and just over 6 feet in length. Including fuel it weighs 933 pounds.

Stepp said the primary objective of the mission is to demonstrate technology advances for long duration space flights.

■ Midland High overcomes 21-point deficit to defeat Lee in a key District 4-5A contest.

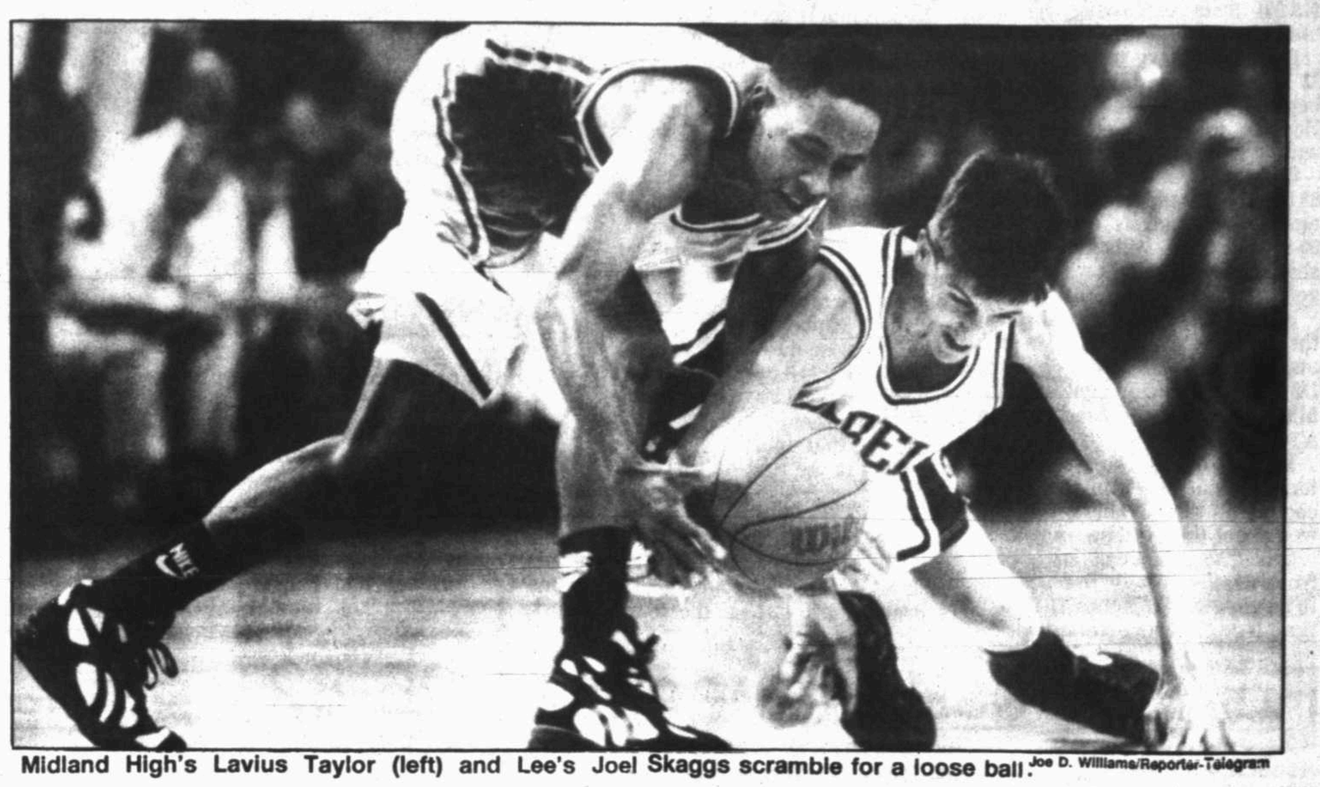

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

The once given-up-for-dead Midland High Bulldogs, fueled by the desperation of a tight District 4-5A basketball race, erased a 21-point Midland Lee lead to take a 64-61 win over the Rebels in what MHS coach Jack Stephenson ranked as the top win over Lee in the 15 years he has coached at Midland High.

The Bulldogs trailed Lee by 50-29 early in the third quarter, but ate chunks out of the Rebel margin like one would eat an ice cream bar on a 100-degree summer afternoon, finally taking the lead less than 13 minutes later with 2:12 left in the game, 62-61, on a short jumper by 6-6 senior Jason Kopp.

It was a lead the Bulldogs held as neither team scored until the four second mark when MHS' Jumon Hailey iced the win with two free throws.

MHS nips improved Lady Rebels

■ Amy Alcala leads Lady Bulldogs to a thrilling 53-43 fourth-quarter win over Midland Lee.

By Amy Wolfenbarger
Staff Writer

The smiles on the faces of Midland Lee coach Elisa Kail and Lady Rebel senior guard Susan Seay told a different story than the final tally on the Chaparral Center scoreboard Tuesday night.

Although the Lady Rebels came out on the losing end of a 53-43 District 4-5A contest with cross-town rival Midland High, everyone in the stands and on both sides of the ball knew that the Lee team had come to play.

"We won the mental battle," said Kail, not showing a bit of disappointment.

Before the game no one, except the Lee players, was sure of that fact after the Lady Rebels were blown out of Chaparral Center by Midland 74-38 Jan. 4, the first meeting of the two teams.

But from the tipoff, the Lady Bulldogs and the witnesses knew that although the Lady Rebels did not come out ahead at the final buzzer, their performance was sparkling.

Only an 18-point second half performance by Midland High's Amy Alcala would deny the Lady Rebels their moment in the sun.

Doubling her eight-point first half with eight third-quarter points, Alcala helped MHS pull away from Lee after the score was tied at 7-7 in the first quarter and 18-18 at halftime. Then Alcala scored 10 of Midland's 21 points in the final period as the Lady Bulldogs pulled away for the victory.

Midland High, which clinched a playoff spot Friday against Abilene, continued to plow through the district standings and improved to 25-3 overall and 9-0 in league play. The Lady Rebels, however, fell to 8-14 and 1-7 and are just one game away from elimination from the state playoffs.

However, Kail and Seay said the Lee performance Tuesday will carry over to the next game with San Angelo Central. A win over Central would keep Lee in the playoff hunt despite having won only one game. A Lady Bobcat win would eliminate the Lady Rebels.

"If we play like this Friday night we'll beat Central," Kail said. "They're on a little bit of a down note after coming here and losing to Midland."

Seay added, "This will carry us over. If we play like we did tonight against Central, we'll come out on top. Plus, we're playing in our gym."

The Lee performance notwithstanding, the Lady Bulldogs did come out on top. But with starters Julie Chancellor and Karie Cornelius absent for most of the second half, it was up to fellow starters Alcala and Michel Ann Thompson and reserves Casi Madison and Jamie Rand. Cornelius left the game at halftime with an injury and Chancellor picked up her fourth foul early in the third period.

But there was nobody but Alcala who Midland coach Jim Raughton would rather leave it up to.

"Amy is capable of taking over a game and she did,"

Lady Rebs claim first district win

■ Midland Lee outshoots Midland High 21-5 to pick up win in first-ever district game.

By Mike Butts
Staff Writer

On the scoreboard, it took Midland Lee's Lady Rebels a while to establish themselves as the better soccer team Tuesday. But on the field the Lady Rebels took the upper hand in their game with Midland High from the start.

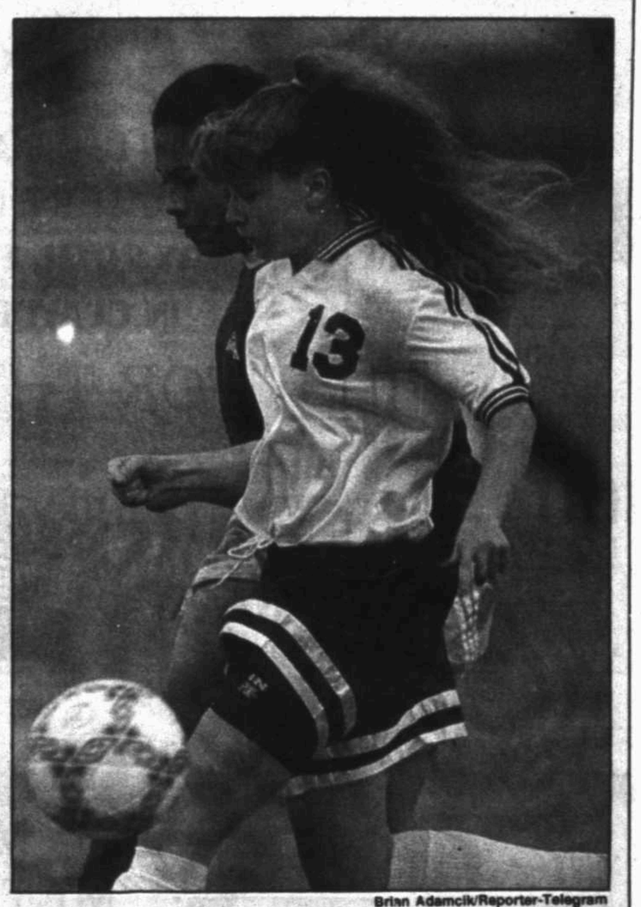

Lee used a second-half penalty kick from Angie Boyd and another goal from Erin Blinka to get a 2-0 win over Midland High at the Lee soccer field in the first district game ever for both teams. The Lady Rebels (5-1 overall) controlled the ball from the start outshooting Midland 21-5. They play last year's District 5-5A winner San Angelo Saturday in San Angelo.

"We felt confident going in and the girls did excatly what they needed to do," Lee coach Van Gravitt said. "It gives us some confidence going to San Angelo Saturday."

A combination of denying defense and control offense kept the ball in Midland's half of the field most of the game. The score was 0-0 at halftime, but Lee had eight shots on goal at the break and Midland High (4-3) had two.

Lee goal keeper Dusty Shumake made only one save in the first half but it was a critical one. Thirty-three minutes into the half Midland High's Amber Middleton was fouled in the keeper box and the Lady Bulldog's Jacque Ketter lined up for a penalty kick with the score at 0-0. Shumake dove to her

By Bill Petitt

Midland College golfers Chad Campbell and Lance McCullough will remain teammates for the next two seasons. Both announced their intentions to play golf for the University of Nevada-Las Vegas.

The commitment is a non-binding oral agreement by the players. Players cannot sign with a school until the first week in February.

Nevada-Las Vegas is ranked among the top five programs in Division I golf according to several publications, said Midland golf coach Delnor Poss.

Earlier, Shawn Savage signed with the University of Houston during the early signing period in November.

"I think it speaks highly of our program that we could have three players sign on to play for traditional top-five type programs," said Poss. "This just adds to what has been a tremendous year so far. I think it will take some of the pressure off of them this spring and will help them mentally as we prepare for a run at the (JUCO) national championship."

Campbell, a native of Andrews, was the Western Junior College Athletic Conference medalist in 1992-93. He was the medalist at the Central Texas Shootout and the Ranchland Hills Tournament in the fall semester and finished in the top five in two other tournaments.

McCullough, a sophomore from Victoria, British Columbia, Canada, was the most consistent golfer for the Chaps last fall. In seven tournaments, McCullough captured medalist honors at the High Country Shootout, the Odessa Invitational and the Sierra Blanca Tournament and finished among the top five in four other tournaments.

Midland High clips Lee in shootout, 1-0

Staff Report

Midland High's Toby Walker scored a shootout goal to give his team a 1-0 District 5-5A win Tuesday over Midland High. Walker's shot gave the Bulldog's a 3-2 win in the shootout at Midland High in the opening league game for both teams.

Midland High, a district favorite, ran its record to 6-0 in the game. Lee, which has been picked to challenge for a third-place loop finish, fell to 5-2 in the defensive battle.

"I think we played very well," Lee coach Eddie Bull said. "We've been listening to how good they were all year and our kids rose to the occasion and played them off there feet 0-0. We have a good ball club and I believe a lot of people in this city know that now."

Both teams had six saves in regulation, Bull said.

"It went back and forth. They had their opportunities and we had ours," Bull said. "There were some good saves by both keepers and good defense by both teams."

Lee's Jeremy Keener and Jaspar Havermark had their team's shootout goals. Lee will host San Angelo Central, which has not played yet in district, Saturday at 2 p.m.

Walker chipped the winning goal in over Lee keeper Scott McLeod's head as McLeod was advancing.

Bull said his team's primary goal is to get back to the playoffs and that he doesn't think any district team will go undefeated. The two teams play again Feb. 19.

"We get a chance to play these people later and that's all that we can hope for," Bull said.

Cleveland came back for an 88-82 lead before the Rockets charged again. The Rockets crept within 90-89, but Chris Mills hit a 3-point shot for the Cavaliers with 1:42 to go.

Hakeem Olajuwon's basket cut the deficit to 93-91 with 1:32 to play and after Olajuwon blocked Daughtery's shot and got the ball, Maxwell's 3-pointer gave Houston a 94-93 lead.

Mario Elie hit two free throws for the final points of the game, cooling off the Cavaliers, who had won six of their last seven games.

BOYS: MHS rallies to grab victory

From 1D

"This ranks No. 1," said a shouting Stephenson. "I've been in about 35 of these games with Lee and the last win is always the biggest, but I've never had a team come so far behind in a game that meant so much as this one.

"I told our kids at the half about the time we came back from 26 points down against Odessa Permian, but this game meant a lot more."

MHS outscored Lee by a 35-16 margin in the second half, but no shot was bigger than Kopp's four-time rim bouncer that finally plunked into a waiting net to give MHS the lead before 2,500 screaming fans.

"I was praying it would go in, but it hung up there forever," Kopp said of the shot. "I should have been following the shot, but I was trotting backwards looking at the ball. I just had a feeling it was going to fall."

Kopp led MHS scorers with 14 points, but he also had 12 rebounds.

"We kept our heads up and just kep pounding away. It feels really good," Kopp said.

Donald Carter, who had 12 points for MHS, said, "This puts us back on course. It felt really bad when we were down so far, but we knew we shouldn't be that far behind. We just kept coming."

Back on course is a 5-2 mark in 4-5A and sole possession of second place behind 7-0 Abilene Cooper while Abilene High and Lee are left in the crucial third place position with 4-3 marks. MHS also has an advantage over the other two teams with three of its last five games in the MHS gym, including both Abilene schools. Lee must play three of five on the road down the stretch, including two trips to Abilene. It was a tough one to give away.

"Tough?" Lee coach Jon House answered. "I guess you could say that. I don't ever remember giving up a 21-point lead. I think that's a first for me. It was just a game of two halves, but Midland High picked the right half to play. You have to give them credit for that."

Lee put on a first half clinic, forging a lead as large as 18 points by hitting 14 of 15 shots from the free throw line. Joel Skaggs, who had 20 points in a loss to MHS in the first half, came back with 19 points, both career best games. But the numbers didn't lessen the loss for him.

"The loss ruins anything I might have done," Skaggs said. "When you lose like this, those are just numbers up there."

Midland's Ryan Bradberry scored eight of his 13 points in the second half and John Marc Sanon had a big game with 13 points and seven rebounds. Hailey had nine points and seven boards.

Lee's leading scorer on the season Sean Low had 12 points, but he hit only four of 21 shots from the field. He and Skaggs were the only Rebels in double figures. Skaggs fouled out with just over five minutes left in the game.

"I worked all weekend on a game plan for Lee," Stephenson noted, "but we got away from it in a hurry. We came back in the second half and ran the plan with some more double teaming. We didn't think Lee could handle pressure very well and we were able to turn it around."

The victory gives Midland High a sweep of Lee this year. MHS has now won 11 of the last 14 against Lee. Stephenson didn't let that note escape either.

"The Lee boosters made up this degrading, humiliating T-shirt that shows all the ways they beat Midland High. We've worked hard all year to get basketball off that T-shirt. Now it's officially off."

In junior varsity action, Lee took a 62-49 win over the Bulldogs as Mark Holly scored 20 points. Lee had 14 points from Craig Sawyer and 10 from John Thurman. MHS had 13 points from Charlie Juarez and 12 from Brian Knottek.

GIRLS: Lee grabs share of first place right to stop Ketter's shot and Midland's best chance to score in the game.

From 1D

"I could tell where she was going by the way she ran at the ball," Shumake said.

Ketter's shot was not a bad one, Midland coach Scott Hodkinson said, it was just a good save by Shumake. Gravitt called the save a turning point in the game.

The Midland Lee coach told his team at halftime that if it kept getting the opportunities it was getting in the first half Lee would score. It only took the Lady Rebels two minutes into the second half to do just that for their first score in District 5-5A play.

Forward Stephanie Smith apparently scored on a short-range shot, but it was disallowed because Midland's Tina Richardson was called for a hand ball. Boyd was good with the ensuing penalty kick to make it 1-0 Lee.

Boyd had a second penalty kick later in the half. But this one went almost straight at Midland keeper Cathryn Vadaza who blocked it. Boyd's rebound shot was over the net.

At the 26th minute of the second half Lee got its second score when Blinka, a sophomore forward, knocked a shot in the left side of net from just in front of the goal. Smith had an assist on the play.

Midland High did not get its first shot on goal until the 31st minute of the first half.

Lee controlled the ball even more in the second half when they had 13 shot on goal to Midland's three. Hodkinson said he thought his team would have to play very good defense to win.

"We knew that we we're going to have to emphsize defense but we still had some good chances to score," Hodkinson said. "They're goalie made a great save."

Vadaza had a good game for Midland. She finished with eight saves and saw much more action than Shumake. She went high for a save off a shot by Lee's Rochelle Roberts just before the half.

Gravitt praised the hard play of his team.

"Something we stressed from day one in practice was being aggressive and going to the ball all the time," Gravitt said.

The win puts Lee tied for first place in the district.

"(The win) is huge partly because you don't want to be climbing uphill in district race and just as important is the confidence factor," Gravitt said.

Midland High is off Saturday before playing at Odessa Permian Tuesday.

Female athletes file suit against Virginia Tech

ROANOKE, Va. (AP) — A federal class action lawsuit filed Tuesday by 12 female athletes at Virginia Tech accuses the university of discriminating against women athletes by denying female sports clubs varsity status.

"There are sacrifices a true athlete must make to succeed, but being victimized by sex discrimination should not be one of them," said Kathy Jones, one of five field hockey club members joining the lawsuit.

The other plaintiffs are members of the women's softball, lacrosse and crew clubs. The lawsuit was filed in U.S. District Court in Roanoke by the National Women's Law Center on behalf of all women who want to participate in varsity athletics at Virginia Tech.

Club members must pay their own way to travel to their games, are given access to equipment only after the varsity teams are finished and cannot receive athletic scholarships.

The Blacksburg school has women's varsity basketball, soccer, track, volleyball, tennis, cross country and swimming teams. But the lawsuit said women make up 41 percent of Virginia Tech's enrollment and only 21 percent of varsity athletes. The lawsuit asks the court to order the university to elevate the women's clubs to intercollegiate teams.

The lawsuit alleges that Virginia Tech's athletic program violates Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972, the federal law prohibiting sex discrimination in education, and the equal protection clause of the 14th Amendment.

In October, an internal review concluded that Virginia Tech spends a disproportionately small amount of resources on women's sports. At a board of visitors meeting Feb. 14, a study committee intends to present a plan to address the inequities over the next five years, Virginia Tech spokesman Larry Hincker said.

"We believe we have been making good progress toward gender equity," he said. "We believe the plan will address their concerns," he said of the plaintiffs.

Virginia Tech in the past two years has upgraded salaries of women's sports coaches and increased spending on women's sports by $140,000. Athletic director David Braine said the plan would add significantly to the operating budget, but school officials decline to reveal the estimate before the board considers the plan.

GIRLS: Lee gains momentum despite loss

(From 1D)

Raughton said. "She's that kind of player."

She immediately got to work, taking advantage of two Lee turnovers in the first 50 seconds of the second half to score twice and break the tie and pull Midland to a 22-18 lead. Another Alcala layup and a twisting jump shot in traffic put the Lady Bulldogs up 26-22 at the 4:31 mark.

Rand then hit two 18-footers to give MHS a 32-27 lead at 2:29 before Lee post Krissy Woodard hit with 2:04 left to pull the Lady Rebels back to within 32-29 going into the fourth period.

Lee finally tied it up at 36-36 on a Woodard bucket with 4:57 to play. But Alcala hit from 10 feet and Chancellor, back into the game after sitting out most of the third period with four fouls, hit two free throws to pull Midland to a 40-36 lead with 4:29 to play. In all, Chancellor iced five-of-six foul shots in the fourth.

Then Madison, a quick defensive player, redirected a Lee pass and managed to tie the ball up and the possession arrow gave the ball to Midland which scored the next time down the floor on a Chancellor to Alcala connection with 3:35 to play.

Alcala continued to take matters into her own hands, grabbing a defensive rebound and driving the length of the floor for a layup. On the very next play, Alcala swiped the ball from Lee point guard Dee Kendricks and drove for a layup to put Midland in a commanding position with a 48-38 lead with 2:35 remaining.

"Amy was determined," Kail said. "She wasn't going to lose that game."

Alcala added, "I know how we would have felt if we had lost this game. I knew it would be a tough game and I knew they (Lady Rebels) had nothing to lose and we had everything to lose."

In Monday's junior varsity game, the Lady Bulldogs kept their undefeated district record intact as well, with a 42-28 win over Lee. Ogonna Merritt led MHS in double figures.

Medicine caused Wright's reaction, says his agent

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Luther Wright, the rookie center of the Utah Jazz, was having a bad reaction to a prescription drug when he was arrested for disorderly conduct at a highway rest stop, his agent says.

Wright, 22, was arrested early Monday in Tooele County and was jailed for 12 hours before he was released.

According to a police report, Wright told Tooele County Sheriff's deputies he was "high on Ritalin and marijuana" when taken into custody.

But his agent, Sal DiFazio, said hospital tests indicate Wright had taken no illegal substances, including marijuana.

Wright was taking Ritalin to combat Attention Deficit Disorder, a condition marked by an inability to concentrate and found mostly in hyperactive children.

"Luther said a lot of things in this manic state that were off the wall," DiFazio said Tuesday night at a Delta Center news conference. "He was ranting and raving is the best way to put it."

The weekend incident happened about 14 miles from Tooele and 15 miles west of Salt Lake City when a deputy was waved down by a motorist on Interstate 80 about 4 a.m. MST Monday.

When the deputy stopped, he saw a man waving his arms with a 5-foot stick or brace in one hand and what appeared to be a leg brace in the other, the deputy's report states.

Wright started running toward the patrol car, waving the object in his hand. The deputy pulled his pistol and yelled at Wright to stop and to lie on the ground. The deputy handcuffed him, searched him and took him to the patrol car.

Wright was taken to the Tooele County Jail and cited for disorderly conduct.

Scott Layden, the team's director of operations, said Wright had an "adverse reaction to prescription medicine on Sunday.

Permian Basin Open improves

There have been some changes made for the 1994 Nike Permian Basin Open golf tournament, including the time of the tournament, the length of play and the money payout.

The third annual Nike Permian Basin Open will be held Aug. 25-28 at Mission Country Club this year.

The Pro-Am will be held on Wednesday, Aug. 24. In the past, that event has been on a Thursday, but the acutal tournament has grown from 54 holes to 72 holes this year with regular tournament play running Thursday through Sunday. The final cut will be on Friday with two day finals Saturday and Sunday.

The purse for the 1994 event has been raised from $150,000 from previous years to $175,000 by the PGA, with the winner taking home $31,500.

That means more fund raising for tournament director Brad Allen, but that move is already underway.

"We have a strong commitment from the Southwest Convenience Stores this year. 7-11 will be the official sponsor of the tournament and will be a ticket outlet for the Permian Basin," Allen said.

Also, Jack and Don Wood, who donated $25,000 to the tournament last year through their sponsorship from Western National Bank, have doubled that donation for this year through their contribution through the 7-11 stores.

Money raised from the tournament will benefit the Medical Center Development Corporations (MCDC) and will allow MCDC to buy necessary medical equipment for the nursery and pediatric units at Medical Center Hospital.

"There are 30 PGA Nike tournaments throughout the country. Medical Center Hospital is delighted to be a part of such a prestigious organization, said Glen Atkins, tournament chairman. "Not only can spectators in the Permian Basin enjoy great golf, but they can also be assured that the profits are going toward a worthy charity."

More than 500 volunteers are needed to make the golf tournament a success. If you are interested in participating, call MCH Community Relations at 1-335-1242.

Report: Gillooly ties attack to Harding for plea bargain

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The grand jury investigating the Nancy Kerrigan attack was extended until after the Olympics begin, while NBC News reported Tuesday that Tonya Harding's ex-husband implicated her in a plea bargain deal that could be worked out this week.

Court documents revealed Tuesday that the grand jury hearing the case was extended to Feb. 18, six days after the Winter Olympics open in Lillehammer, Norway, and three days before skaters draw their turns to perform.

And NBC reported that sources close to the case said Jeff Gillooly, who had previously denied any wrongdoing, now says he and Harding plotted to injure Kerrigan.

NBC said Gillooly is working on a plea bargain agreement that could be completed before the end of the week.

The Detroit Free Press on Tuesday quoted an unidentified source as saying Gillooly was trying to "cut a deal" by implicating Harding.

"Gillooly has told investigators that he could serve her up on a silver platter," the source told the newspaper.

Neither Gillooly's attorney, Ron Hoevet, nor authorities would comment on whether Gillooly was trying to make a deal.

"It's impossible for him to be quoted by investigators in the case because he hasn't spoken to them," Hoevet told The Oregonian newspaper in response to the Free Press report.

Dennis Rawlinson, Harding's lawyer, said Tuesday his client has done nothing to warrant being taken off the Olympic team.

NBC said it's sources detailed a Harding legal strategy that would maintain she was involved in a coverup out of fear of Gillooly and Shawn Eckardt, her 310-pound bodyguard. Harding, who the NBC sources said will maintain she found out about the alleged plot only after-the-fact, will point out that in divorce papers she accused Gillooly of violence and abuse.

The U.S. Figure Skating Association, which has said it will wait to hear from investigators before deciding if Harding will stay on the Olympic team, did not respond directly to the new grand jury deadline.

"We haven't been explained the ramifications of that right now," USFSA spokeswoman Kristin Matta said by telephone from Colorado Springs, Colo. "Officials have not discussed the details of that deadline with us yet."

The grand jury has until Feb. 18 to complete its work, but could issue its report earlier.

The USFSA has until Monday to submit the team roster to the U.S. Olympic Committee, but can make substitutions up until Feb. 21.

"There is no change," U.S. Olympic Committee executive director Harvey Schiller said about Harding's status on the team.

A source familiar with the U.S. team told The Associated Press the USFSA will give its list to the USOC on Sunday and that the USOC has until 4 p.m. MST Monday to submit it to Lillehammer. Individual skaters on the U.S. team are asked to show up in Lillehammer the second week in February, but are not required to do so.

"An athlete competing in women's skating could be out of the country on the 18th, get there the 19th and compete," the source said.

Bart Gori, a spokesman for the FBI in Portland, said authorities could not stop Harding from travelling to Norway unless she was charged.

Gori also said the grand jury needs more time because it has subpoenas out all over the country.

"If I were the D.A. — it would be unfair — I'd have to put the Olympics aside and be painfully cognizant of everybody's rights and not rush to a decision," Gori said.

Norm Frink, deputy district attorney for Multnomah County, said in a supporting affidavit filed with the request for an extension that the grand jury was not finished with its investigation. The grand jury had been scheduled to finish its report by Feb. 3.

"Some evidence first gathered during grand jury testimony has created the necessity of further investigation which will take some time and cannot be completed before the grand jury term," he said in the affidavit.

"I anticipate this investigation could lead to other witnesses being called to testify before the grand jury."

The extension was granted by Donald Londer, presiding judge in Multnomah County Circuit Court.

Both Harding, who won the national championships earlier this month in Detroit, and Kerrigan, who was knocked out of competition when clubbed on her right knee Jan. 6, were chosen for the Olympic team Jan. 8.

Since then, Gillooly, Eckardt and two other men have been charged with conspiring to injure Kerrigan and questions have been raised over what role Harding played, if any.

Meanwhile, Harding skated with a video camera at practice Tuesday and taped photographers who crowded one end of her practice rink at the Clackamas Town Center shopping mall.

"How do YOU like it?" she asked sarcastically.

Harding skated for about an hour, falling twice during a routine that included triple Axels and other jumps.

Harding's attorney released a statement saying it would be unjust if Harding were removed from the Olympic team.

"We are pleased that many representatives of the United States Olympic Committee and the United States Figure Skating Association continue to view the allegations against Tonya with an open mind," said the statement, issued by attorney Dennis Rawlinson.

"Tonya has done nothing that would warrant her removal from the team. It would be manifestly unjust and contrary to well-established legal principles to remove Tonya from the team on the basis of unproven charges.

"Tonya wants us to pass along her best wishes to Nancy. We all hope Nancy's recovery is quick and complete."

Eckardt has reportedly told authorities that Harding helped plan an alibi, made phone calls to find out Kerrigan's practice schedule, and urged him to hurry up with the job.

Others charged in the case are alleged hit man Shane Stant, and Stant's uncle, Derrick Smith, who is accused of driving the getaway car.

Sabatini, Graf roll into semifinals

■ Australian Open

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — The best medicine for Gabriela Sabatini was a couple of sets against Jana Novotna at the Australian Open.

Sabatini, who woke up Tuesday morning with severe dizziness and nausea, took advantage of Novotna's sloppy play to win 6-3, 6-4 at night and advance to the semifinals.

"I was very fortunate that I had to play in the evening, because if I had to play during the day I don't think I was going to make it," she said. "At the beginning I was really tired, but after I started to move a little bit more and I started to get into the match more, I started to feel better."

The fourth-seeded Sabatini will play No. 2 Arantxa Sanchez Vicario in one of Thursday's semifinals. The other will match top-seeded Steffi Graf against No. 10 Kimiko Date.

Graf defeated Lindsay Davenport 6-3, 6-2 in a duel between two of the hardest hitters in women's tennis.

Graf, a three-time champion who has not lost a set so far in the tournament, took advantage of Davenport's lack of speed by rifling forehand passing shots beyond the reach of the lumbering 17-year-old.

"She hits the ball so hard and she keeps you on the defensive. She just controls the points," Davenport said of Graf. "I've never played someone who hits it as hard as she does."

Davenport, 6-foot-2 and 165 pounds, was seeded No. 16 and playing in her first Grand Slam quarterfinal. She often froze Graf with blistering forehands and sharply angled two-handed backhands, but was too slow to give Graf much trouble.

"Because she's that big and tall, I think it's a bit more difficult for her to move," Graf said. "I think she knows physically she can get in better shape, and that's probably why she's not moving as well as she can."

Date became the first Japanese player to advance to a Grand Slam semifinal in more than two decades with a 6-2, 4-6, 6-3 defeat of third-seeded Conchita Martinez.

A right-hander who hit several shots left-handed during the match, Date was cheered on by fans with red and white Japanese flags painted on their faces. Some fans bowed to her after the victory.

The only other Japanese woman to reach a Grand Slam semifinal was Kazuko Sawamatsu, who reached the 1973 Australian Open semifinals. Jiro Sato reached four Grand Slam men's semifinals in the 1930s.

"It is a hard thing to reach this stage being Japanese, because we are not very big people and my height and strength is not perhaps very strong compared to opponents," the 5-foot-4, 117-pound Date said through an interpreter.

Sanchez Vicario reached the semifinals for the fourth straight year. She won 7-6 (7-3), 6-4 to end the Grand Slam career of Manuela Maleeva-Fragniere, who is retiring next month after a 13-year professional career.

The men were to play their quarterfinals Wednesday. The matchups were No. 1 Pete Sampras vs. No. 10 Magnus Gustafsson, No. 3 Jim Courier vs. No. 5 Goran Ivanisevic, No. 4 Stefan Edberg vs. No. 6 Thomas Muster and No. 9 Todd Martin vs. unseeded MaliVai Washington in an all-American battle.

Novotna, seeded fifth, made 39 unforced errors to only 10 for Sabatini.

Summit announces $5.5 million expansion plan

HOUSTON (AP) — Arena Operating Company, hoping to keep its primary tenant, the Houston Rockets, announced a $5.5 million expansion plan for The Summit Tuesday and questioned the feasibility of a proposed downtown domed stadium.

Kenneth Schnitzer, managing partner of Arena Operating Company, said Tuesday's announcement was part of a two-phase expansion program that would eventually add 750 to 1,000 seating capacity to the 16,611-seat arena.

"When the Rockets make an in-depth study, we feel they'll conclude The Summit is a superior faeility for the future," Schnitzer said. "Our charge to the architects was to give us a facility equal to or better than the NBA standard."

Rockets owner Leslie Alexander and Houston Oilers owner Bud Adams have expressed interest in a new downtown domed stadium that would be home to both the Rockets and Oilers.

More Sports/8D

The Oilers recently announced plans to go forward with efforts for the downtown facility. Alexander declined comment on Schnitzer's announcement.

The Rockets' lease extends through 2003, Schnitzer said, but Arena is vitally interested in keeping them as tenants. He said Arena receives about $2 million annually from the Rockets.

"If the Rockets left the Summit, it could very easily cause the Summit to shut down," Schnitzer said. "At this point it would be the city's problem. It would become a burden to the city and the taxpayers."

The Summit is owned by the city and operated by Arena Operating Company.

Schnitzer said his company's earnings from The Summit were about $350,000 to $400,000 annually.

"So, it's not hard to figure out what the loss of $2 million in revenues would mean," Schnitzer said.

Schnitzer said a downtown domed stadium would not be the answer for the city's pro sports franchises. He pointed to the sightlines involved in the Alamodome, where the San Antonio Spurs play their home games.

"Go to San Antonio and attend a Spurs game," Schnitzer said. "Be sure to take your field glasses. You'll need them. There is no intimacy."

The bidding:

Opening lead: Six of ♠ South, declarer at six no trump, found the safety play to ensure the slam against any 5-0 club break. Unfortunately, failure to handle the closed-hand entries with sufficient care permitted a killing defensive countermove.

North-South had agreed to a 15-17 range for an opening bid of 1 NT, so South valued the hand as too strong for that action. Once South clarified the strength of the opening bid, North leaped straight to slam.

Warned off a club lead, West attacked with a spade. Declarer won in hand with the ace and made the safety play of a low club. That guaranteed four tricks in the suit no matter how it was distributed. West followed low and the ten won. Declarer returned to hand with the ace of hearts and led another club.

This time West grabbed the queen of clubs and returned a heart. Declarer won with the queen, but all was already lost. Since declarer had no more entries to hand, only three tricks could be taken in clubs. Declarer tried the diamond finesse for the fulfilling trick. No luck.

Better entry management would have landed 12 tricks. Suppose declarer won the first trick in dummy, came to hand with the ace of hearts and led a club. West must play low and the ten wins. South returns to hand with the queen of hearts to lead another club and West must rise with the queen. Now, however, declarer still has the ace of spades as an entry. A spade from West will be won on the table, the ten of clubs cleared and a spade to the ace allows declarer to cash the ace and king of clubs for 12 tricks—three spades, three hearts, two diamonds and four clubs.

Maximilian Schell defends words as compliments, not harassment

LOS ANGELES — Maximilian Schell said he wasn't harassing a former entertainment executive when he commented on her breasts. He was complimenting her.

The actor is being sued by Diana Botsford, who claims he made graphic comments about her breasts and asked her to bathe with him.

"After 10,000 years of intense studies of the female bosom — from cavemen to the Renaissance to the decoltes of the 19th century — our society has come to the conclusion that it is an offense to find the female bosom beautiful," Schell said Monday in a statement.

"For all lovers of art, this is a very sad day," he said.

Botsford, former vice president of post-production at Kushner-Locke International, said she rebuffed Schell but the experience last August caused her to quit her job.

The two were working on "Candles in the Dark," a Family Channel movie Schell starred in and directed.

The lawsuit, filed two weeks ago, seeks unspecified damages.

SYDNEY, Australia — There was almost a tattoo beneath the stuffed shirt of Britain's Prince Charles.

There was almost a tattoo in Prince Charles' stuffed shirt.

The prince paid a visit Tuesday on a homeless youth refuge in Surry Hills, a seedy Sydney suburb. He admired the tattoos of a former drug addict and said he nearly got one himself while serving in the Royal Navy 20 years ago.

"I had a friend who had an eagle on his chest. I really liked it and was thinking of having one, but I never got round to it," Charles said.

The prince was on the first of 12 days in Australia. His visit is regarded as an attempt to improve his popularity here and in Britain.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Baby Boomers know all the words to the "Brady Bunch" theme song, but the actress who played Marcia is singing a different tune.

Maureen McCormick is taking a stab at a country music career.

"Country has always been my favorite kind of music," she told The Tennessean in a story published Tuesday. "I love songs that tell stories. Words to me are the most important thing."

McCormick, 37, played the eldest daughter on "The Brady Bunch." She recorded a solo album in the 1970s. McCormick and some of the other Brady kids toured as a musical group one summer.

"Unfortunately quite a few people were tone deaf, so that made it kind of difficult," she said.

NEW YORK — Bluesman Charlie Musselwhite turns 50 on Monday, but he doesn't feel old.

"Keepin' music in your heart keeps you young at heart," he said. "Fifty doesn't feel any older than 20 or 30 — I feel at the peak of my powers."

Alligator Records will celebrate Musselwhite's birthday with the release of "In My Time."

Fellow bluesman Buddy Guy already sent Musselwhite a birthday tribute. Guy said he's amazed when he watches Musselwhite perform.

"I would stand on stage and say, 'I just can't believe my eyes . . . a white man is playing the blues harp,' " Guy said. "It's a God-given talent that he has. I think he's a big part of whatever we've done with the blues."

NEW YORK — Hunk-about-town John F. Kennedy Jr. is coming to TV this spring, as host of a local series about unsung heroes.

Kennedy will introduce three or four segments on each half-hour edition of "Heart of the City," which will air on WNYC-TV, a PBS affiliate.

Kennedy, unemployed since leaving the Manhattan district attorney's office in July, is doing the job pro bono.

"He's already taped a few of the introductions," station publicist Judith Weiss said Tuesday. "He's been terrific. He's made suggestions. He's happy to be able to help people who are helping others."

One of the segments is about an organization that promotes bicycle transportation, a familiar subject to Kennedy, an avid bicyclist.

Other subjects include a group of corporate professionals who try to raise the self-esteem of homeless kids in Brooklyn shelters and a program in which retirees on Staten Island teach prisoners to read.

The series will air for six consecutive weeks, beginning March 23.

Lett overcomes media day anxiety

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

ATLANTA — This was Leon Lett's day of dread.

The NFL mandated that he would have to appear at Super Bowl media day and explain why he was so accident prone.

Why, Leon, didn't you let the ball alone on Thanksgiving Day in a blunder that made the Blooper Hall of Fame?

What, Leon, will you do the next time you recover a fumble in the Super Bowl? Will you do a hot-dog dance and have Don Beebe slap the ball away again a yard from the end zone?

Sweat. It soaked through Lett's jersey as he flopped down on the Georgia Dome's 20-yard line. Sweat. It poured from his forehead and made the palms of his hands slippery.

"It's time to put it all behind me," whispered this gentle 6-foot-6er from tiny Fair Hope, Ala., who has such long arms it's like passing a ball through tree limbs.

By now others have noticed Lett's tortured appearance.

The crowd grows as he sits and sweats, fanning his face for air with his huge hands.

The "Big Cat" is trapped. The soft-spoken introvert, who plays a mean right defensive tackle for the Dallas Cowboys, has no place to run.

He'll talk.

"I want to get it over with," he said.

It was a snowy Thanksgiving, and Lett forgot that a blocked field goal produces a live ball only if it's touched by the defending team. Lett did. Miami recovered and kicked the game-winning field goal as time expired.

The star-crossed Lett hadn't spoken to reporters since. Until Tuesday.

"I got some great letters and I answered everyone of them that was positive," Lett said. "Fans can make too much of just one play. I don't want to say what I was thinking.

"But I thanked God when we beat the New York Giants, won the division and the home-field advantage. It meant I didn't hurt the team."

By now, the crush of bodies was overwhelming.

"I can't breathe, don't get behind me," The Cat said, springing to his feet with astonishing agility.

He fanned his face and sweat ran into his eyes. He pawed at his eyes until he could clear them.

Lett tried to explain what he would do if he recovered a fumble Sunday. In last year's 52-17 victory over Buffalo, Lett set a Super Bowl record by returning a fumble 64 yards. The laughs came, however, after Lett slowed down and tried to jive his way to a touchdown. Beebe came from nowhere to slap the ball out of Lett's hands at the 1-yard line and the ball rolled out of the end zone for a touchback.

No touchdown! Buffalo's ball.

This summer at training camp, Lett said, "I tried to give the crowd a show. I'll never forget what happened."

Asked again Tuesday, Lett smiled and said, "If it happens again, I'm going to run like hell. Beebe won't have a chance to catch me."

Oddsmakers in Las Vegas have made Lett a 200-to-1 shot to score the first touchdown on Sunday.

By now it was all too much for the claustrophobic Lett.

Only 11 minutes into his interview, Lett left.

"He's a shy guy, a little shell-shocked," said Dallas public relations director Rich Dalrymple. "He's from a small college at Emporia State. Not many big crowds there."

Defensive end Charles Haley blamed the media, saying "some of them make it look like all he can do is fumble the ball. Not that he is fixing to become a great player."

Offensive tackle Nate Newton said he encouraged Lett to open up.

"I hammered him and told him to come out and talk," Newton said. "I told him to get it over with."

There was more misery ahead for the agonizing Lett.

The NFL's Reggie Roberts ordered him to return to the interview. Lett reluctantly did so, sitting in a seat, wringing his hands around a towel.

Bennett explodes at media day event

ATLANTA (AP) — Buffalo linebacker Cornelius Bennett was offended, to say the least, when asked Tuesday if the Bills could win Sunday's Super Bowl game against Dallas after losing the last three.

"What kind of question is that?" he shot back, repeating the question four more times while staring down the reporter who asked it.

"No, we're going to lose," he said sarcastically. "Don't ever ask me that kind of question. That's stupid."

Bennett insisted he was not fazed by the last three Super Bowl losses, including last year's 52-17 debacle against the same Dallas Cowboys who stand in the Bills' path again.

"Hell, yeah, I think we're going to win," Bennett said. "Do you just think we came here to lose the thing? Do you think we came to the previous three Super Bowls just to lose?

"I'm not going to answer that damn question. That's stupid. I'm ticked off that you asked me that. I don't like it. ... I never come here to lose. I never come to the Super Bowl to lose."

Fans support Bills in quiet in enemy territory

DALLAS (AP) — Dana Barber can see Texas Stadium, home field to the Dallas Cowboys, from his office window. It's a sight that stirs his competitive spirit.

Barber, you see, is a Buffalo Bills fan.

And like other Bills fans who are willing to show their true colors on the job, where friendly rivalries are nurtured and tolerated, Barber has learned to avoid public displays of support here in Cowboys country.

Barber admits he won't repeat the error he made last year when he ventured out before the first Cowboys-Bills Super Bowl matchup dressed in Buffalo duds and thought he'd be killed.

"It's hard because you know no one likes you," Barber said Tuesday. "You don't go outside without your Bills covered up."

Barber, who moved from Niagara Falls, N.Y., to Dallas about two years ago, works inside a cubicle bedecked with things red, white and blue. Hanging from the ceiling are homemade posters that declare the senior systems analyst a tried-and-true Bills fan. Coffee mugs, desk-top flags and pennants round out the picture.

Barber and several other New York transplants that work at Occidental Chemical Corp. plan to watch the big game but not without hearing loudly from the other side.

"It's going to be a war," Barber said of the party he'll attend on Sunday with some Cowboys fans.

Sporting a white turtleneck with a buffalo on its collar, Colbert complained about the difficulty in finding Bills' gear in Big D. In fact, she is awaiting the arrival of a "care package" from her son in Buffalo.

"There is no Bills' paraphernalia in this city. I looked," Barber said, adding that clerks laugh at him when he asks for it.

Governor wants to bet with Cuomo

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards has her ticket for Sunday's Super Bowl game but hasn't yet decided on a fitting wager to make with New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, a spokesman says.

Bill Cryer, Richards' press secretary, Tuesday said Richards plans to attend the game in Atlanta between the Dallas Cowboys and the Buffalo Bills.

"I think someone gave it (the ticket) to her, but I don't know who," Cryer said.

Last year, Richards wagered Cuomo some Texas jalapeno peppers while the New York governor put up Buffalo chicken wings. After the Cowboys beat the Bills 52-17, Richards donated her edible winnings to an Austin homeless shelter.

Cryer said the governor's staff was working on an appropriate wager for this year's rematch.

"We'll come up with something," he promised.

Meanwhile, Texas Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry proposed a wager of cheesecakes with his New York counterpart, Commissioner Richard McGuire.

In a letter, Perry said he was certain of the outcome.

"Buffalo's habit of losing the Super Bowl is a winning tradition for Texas," Perry wrote. "We really enjoyed winning the mediocre New York wine last year -- it cleaned those saddles up real nicely."

While Richards will be attending the big game in person Sunday, her seat may not be as exclusive as the one she enjoyed last year.

Both Richards and Cuomo watched that game on television at the White House with President Clinton.

Vitamin E vs. arthritis?

Could taking vitamin E prevent some of the joint damage from arthritis? It may be worth a try, according to accumulating evidence.

Vitamin E is a well-known antioxidant that helps neutralize oxygen-free radicals that promote inflammation and joint damage. And new evidence indicates that many people with inflammatory joint diseases are low in vitamin E, leaving their joints poorly defended against inflammatory destruction.

For example, a new British study found that 30 subjects with inflammatory joint disease had less vitamin E in the synovial fluid of their knee joints than healthy subjects.

Previous studies by Finnish investigators found that patients with both rheumatoid arthritis and juvenile arthritis had very low blood levels of vitamin E.

Presumably, the vitamin E is rapidly consumed in attempts by the body to fight off the inflammatory attacks. Thus, researchers speculate that arthritis victims may need more vitamin E to shield joint tissue from inflammation. How much might work? Such tests have not been done. but 400 to 600 international units (IUs) of vitamin E daily are considered safe and might help.

Night calories add more

How much weight you gain may depend on when you eat — and not just on how much you eat. That's the intriguing conclusion of a new French study.

In fact, if you want to discourage weight gain, you are better off to eat your calories in the morning than in the late afternoon or wee hours of the night, the study suggests.

Researchers first noticed that night workers tended to gain more weight even though they ate the same amount of food as day workers. Could it be due to changes in metabolic (calorie-burning) rates that varied by time of day?

To find out, the French researchers had subjects eat the same meal at 9 a.m., 5 p.m. and 1 a.m. and then measured the rate at which they burned off calories. Surprisingly, the later they ate, the lower the burn-off and the more calories stored and turned into weight gain. Specifically, in the morning they burned off 24 percent more calories than in the afternoon and 45 percent more calories than late at night.

The message: Calories seem to count for more as the day and evening wear on. So if you are worried about weight, eat more of your calories at breakfast and avoid heavy meals at night.

Skin-cancer vaccine

Melanoma is an insidious and aggressive form of skin cancer whose incidence is increasing faster than that of any other cancer. Once it spreads, it's usually fatal within six to eight months. The January 1994 Reader's Digest reports that a vaccine is being tested at the John Wayne Cancer Institute in Santa Monica, Calif.

The vaccine — developed from melanoma tumor cells that are grown in tissue culture and then irradiated — is unique in that it's given after the advent of the disease. It was tried in individuals with advanced cases of metastic melanoma. Among the 136 patients receiving the vaccine, the rate of five-year survival increased fourfold compared to a control group receiving other immunotherapy.

Smokers' defense

If you smoke, your antioxidant defenses are undoubtedly in a weakened condition, making you more apt to get sick. That's the conclusion of recent research.

A new Harvard review of current research noted that smokers eat less antioxidant-rich fresh fruits and vegetables and are less likely to take vitamin supplements. And the more cigarettes they smoke, the less antioxidants they eat.

Further, smokers are in double danger, because they need more antioxidants to stay on a par with non-smokers. Harvard researcher Eric Rimm cites several studies showing lower blood levels of beta carotene in smokers even when they take beta carotene pills and eat the same amount of antioxidant foods as non-smokers.

The bottom line: Smokers should buck up their intake of antioxidants — in addition to considering quitting.

Study shows boys become sprinters in their young teens

By Ira Dreyfuss

WASHINGTON (AP) — All healthy children are potential aerobic athletes — at least until they mature enough to be something else, a researcher says.

Some could grow into distance runners while others become sprinters or weightlifters; however, the difference doesn't start to emerge until early puberty, said Dr. Oded Bar-Or.

Before puberty, children are more capable of extended runs and other aerobic exercise, Bar-Or said. Kids at play tend not to run for more than seconds, but studies show they can handle longer efforts if they want, he said.

The change appears as boys develop more of what are termed fast-twitch muscle fibers that generate bursts of power, the Canadian researcher said. As girls grow into women, their fast-twitch fibers develop as well, but to a lesser extent.

Puberty thus leads to what's termed specialization, as some athletes develop an ability to compete in sports that favor fast-twitch muscle fibers and others compete in aerobic activities based on what are termed slow-twitch fibers.

This means there's little value in trying to focus children's exercise programs toward developing adult power-sport champions before children develop fast-twitch fibers, said Bar-Or, professor of pediatrics and director of the Children's Exercise and Nutrition Centre at McMaster University in Hamilton, Ontario.

Children can benefit from weight training, but it seems that the exercise mostly trains nerves to recruit more muscle fiber to respond, rather than

Physician: 'Malpractice is driving doctors a little crazy'

Associated Press

American doctors today practice defensive medicine — they tend to over-X-ray, over-medicate and even over-operate in order to satisfy their patients and avoid malpractice suits.

The result, Dr. Michael Oppenheim wrote in an article in a recent issue of Cosmopolitan, is that patients face the expense and aggravation of too many tests, X-rays and other procedures.

"The malpractice situation is driving American doctors a little crazy," Oppenheim wrote. "We're forced to do things to avoid getting sued that most of us agree don't prevent lawsuits anyway."

One problem is X-rays — they are routinely ordered for injuries when they are not necessary or could wait for future developments without harming the patient.

"Doctors also order huge numbers of unnecessary blood and urine analyses, cultures and electrocardiograms," Oppenheim wrote.

As for penicillin, Oppenheim said 90 percent of patients who say they're allergic to penicillin really aren't. But if a patient even hints at a penicillin allergy, no doctor will use it.

Alzheimers patients use 'Safe Return'

By Greg Smith

NEVADA, Iowa (AP) — At first, there was the memory loss so common to Alzheimer's patients. Myrtle Fitzgerald could no longer remember things that had been ingrained in her since childhood, such as family recipes.

Then came her wandering, even under the watchful eye of Don, her husband.

"I lost her a couple of times. She was always on the go," he said.

Once, during a trip to the grocery store, he didn't know what happened to her until he saw police in the parking lot.

"I noticed the police car and an officer talking to a lady. I figured that was a good place to start.

"This lady turned around and said, 'Is that her sitting in the front seat of my car?' I looked and sure enough, it was Myrtle sitting in there."

Some Alzheimer's patients aren't as lucky as Mrs. Fitzgerald, 73, who has been living at a care center in Story City since last February. Some wander and aren't found.

The national Alzheimer's Association is encouraging families to enroll loved ones in its new Safe Return Program. For a $25 one-time fee, patients receive bracelets and necklaces inscribed with their name and a toll-free, 24-hour telephone number linked to a nationwide network of 17,000 police agencies.

The family also received labels that can be sewn into Alzheimer's patients' clothing and a wallet with an identification card.

Memory loss, confusion and disorientation are some of the more recognizable symptoms of Alzheimer's disease, which afflicts four million Americans.

Wandering "is a significant part of this disease," said Carol Dingeldey, national coordinator for the association's Safe Return Program.

"I think every caregiver should keep in mind that even though a person with Alzheimer's disease has not exhibited wandering behavior and it may not be a problem behavior at any particular point, every individual who has the disease is at risk of wandering," she said.

More than 2,100 people patients have been enrolled in the program since its inception last April, according to Linda Robertson, a spokeswoman for the Alzheimer's Association in Chicago. To date, she said, the program has helped find 38 missing patients.

"It's a program designed to help the person with Alzheimer's but it also gives peace of mind for family members," Dingeldey said.

Georgia Grant, executive director of the Heart of Iowa chapter of the Alzheimer's Association, said 70 percent of Alzheimer's patients "wander at some period."

Why?

"They don't feel at home where they are and they're looking for their childhood home. That's an impossible thing to find. Sometimes it's just that they want the physical exercise.

"Some of them will walk 24 hours a day. They cannot rest," she said.

Alzheimer's disease is the fourth leading cause of death in adults after heart disease, cancer and stroke. It not only robs its victims of their memory, it eventually breaks down their health to the point where 24-hour care is required.

Fitzgerald said constantly watching Myrtle, his wife, was "in a lot of ways" like keeping track of a toddler. Eventually, the couple's children encouraged him to take her to the Story City center.

"My youngsters were very much alarmed. They said, 'We don't want to lose both of you. Don't you keep mother home long enough that it's just going to wear you down,'" he said.

Feet prone to many problems

By Dr. Michael Freedman

NEW YORK (AP) — More than 75 percent of us will suffer some kind of a foot problem during our lives. It's a problem that's hard to ignore since most of us spend about 25 percent of our waking hours walking or standing.

Our feet undergo tremendous stress. In the course of an average day, they can be subjected to loads equivalent to several hundred tons.

If that isn't enough, certain medical conditions, such as diabetes, arthritis, poor circulation and obesity, can worsen foot problems.

The foot is a complex design of 26 bones, 33 joints and an intricate arrangement of tendons, muscles and ligaments, so it's no surprise that it is prone to any one of a number of problems.

Although aching feet can be attributed to a number of causes, experts agree that the main culprit is shoe size, especially as we grow older.

With aging, the metatarsal bones of the feet tend to spread out as we walk. A shoe size that was right in our early adulthood is likely to be a tight squeeze 20 or 30 years later. Even the healthiest people can suf-

Experts disagree on mammography

By Dr. Gillian M. Newstead
Associated Press

Women between the ages of 40 and 50 must weigh the evidence, consult their doctors and make their own decisions.

Women under the age of 50 now face a dilemma about mammography, X-ray examination for the early detection of breast cancer.

The National Cancer Institute, a federal agency, and the American Cancer Society, a private non-profit organization, are in the unusual position of making almost diametrically opposite recommendations about the value of periodic mammograms for women aged 40 to 50.

The National Cancer Institute recently reversed its longstanding recommendation that women between the ages of 40 and 50 have mammograms every year or two.

The Institute no longer recommends routine mammograms for these women on the grounds that studies have not confirmed measurable benefit in terms of lives saved for this age group.

To support its stand, the institute cited a large-scale Canadian study in which periodic mammograms for under-50 women produced no apparent reduction in breast cancer deaths.

That study has been widely criticized, however, on both medical and technical grounds. Critics say the mammograms were poorly done and poorly interpreted, and that more high-risk women were in the group that received mammography than in the group that did not.

Another argument used against periodic mammograms for under-50 women is that breast cancer appears to be more malignant and less treatable in younger women, and thus early detection is less useful in this age group.

But the American Cancer Society strenuously objects to the change, and it is supported by other professional groups. For example, the American College of Radiology has affirmed its recommendation that women under the age of 50 have annual mammograms.

So what should a woman do?

For a women over 50, the answer is clear. There is solid evidence that annual mammograms for women in this age group can save a significant number of lives by detecting breast cancer in its earliest stage, when treatment is most effective and is less traumatic.

Women under 50 who are in high-risk groups — for example, those with a family history of breast cancer or with suspicious lumps in the breast — are still advised to have mammography every year or two.

My belief — and the belief of many radiologists — is that every woman over the age of 40 should be screened every year.

But the most recent data indicate that while breast cancers grow at a faster rate in younger women, they can be treated with good results as in older women if detected early enough. Indeed, the faster growth rate is cited by many doctors as supporting the need for early detection by annual mammograms in women under 50.

While the incidence of breast cancer is much higher in older women, one of every five cases occurs in women under 50.

The only way the scientific debate can be settled is by a long-term, large scale trial that would have to enroll half a million under-50 women to produce statistically satisfactory evidence.

Meanwhile, women between the ages of 40 and 50 must weigh the evidence, consult their doctors and make their own decisions.

Dr. Gillian M. Newstead is assistant professor of radiology at New York University School Medical Center.

Diabetics learn better ways to live with their condition

By Elaine Ayala
N.Y. Times News Service

AUSTIN — Leona Alvarado knew eight years ago that she had diabetes. A physician told her she had to change her lifestyle to control the condition. But he didn't tell her much else.

She left the office with a prescription for insulin pills and a murky idea about diet and exercise. For eight years, she did little to change her diet or exercise, and she never learned to check her own blood sugar.

But times have changed.

These days, with a growing awareness of self-care and political pressure to bring down the costs of health care, the medical profession is beginning to empower patients to become involved and not depend on a pill or an injection to absolve them of responsibility.

As nurse Terri Knox of South Austin Medical Center's Diabetes Patient Education Program notes, diabetes is a condition that can be managed by the patient — but it takes some homework.

So patients like Alvarado are being sent to school — diabetes school, that is, such as the Diabetes Patient Education Program, which last year earned South Austin Medical Center an American Diabetes Association Certificate of Recognition. As such, it is one of 23 in Texas (including several in the Austin area) and 329 in the nation so classified.

HEALTH-CARE professionals count Alvarado lucky. She is one of an estimated 830,000 Central Texans with diabetes, but at least she knows it. Experts believe half are unaware they suffer from the condition in which blood cells don't receive the sugar (or energy) they need which can trigger dizziness, headaches, frequent urination, frequent thirst and blurred vision.

Alvarado has another advantage. Over two days, she sat in a classroom with three other diabetics and a few of their relatives to learn what diabetes is, how they can cope with their inability to produce or use insulin correctly and how to stay out of the hospital with the more serious complications of the disease such as blindness, stroke, heart disease and nerve damage in the feet and legs that can lead to neuropathy and amputation.

Still, Alvarado isn't exactly having a good time. She doesn't want to go on a diet. She insists she already does a lot of walking at work, and that shopping for and cooking her and her husband separate meals will be costly and time-consuming.

And the rhetorical question she has for nurse Sharon Synder is, "How come my husband eats anything he wants and doesn't exercise and doesn't have anything?"

The class laughs with her. So does Synder, who remarks, "Kind of gets on your nerves, doesn't it?"

Letting out the frustration is part of the process, says Knox, who has coordinated the year-old program and seen almost 80 patients through it. The important thing for participants to remember is that they're not alone. Others have managed to enjoy a diet low in fat and sugar and high in carbohydrates. Dietitians say it's actually a good diet for everyone.

AND IN THE program's group setting, the participants "get so much more ... because they interact with one another," Knox says.

Many diabetics have come to love exercising and enjoy a better quality of life because of it. Studies have shown that diet, exercise and regular blood-sugar monitoring — home kits are on the market — reduce the risk of complications and the cost of health care.

Knox had been educating diabetics on a one-on-one basis for seven years, but believes the program has made a significant difference in the lives of its graduates. What's surprising is that while some insurance companies have seen the benefit of education, Knox says, others refuse to cover the cost of classes.

But the winds of reform have caught up with Leona Alvarado. A new job and a new insurance company led to a new physician, who put it plainly. "He said I was going to take these classes if I was going to be his patient.

"I'm never on a diet," Alvarado says shyly, looking up at her daughter Yolanda Pearson, who has been forced into the role of school marm. "I'm always eating junk food. Pies, cookies, ice cream," she says, squeaking out an embarrassed laugh. On the first day of class, Alvarado's blood-glucose exceeded 400, a reading that Knox reported to Alvarado's physician.

A healthy reading ranges from 70 to 120.

PEARSON IS glad her mother's doctor forced her to attend class. "I wanted her to start exercising and change her eating habits — and her cooking habits. Changing the way you cook will change the way you eat." So she takes notes for her mother on foods to avoid and foods to focus on.

Pearson learned something in the class, too. Something that scared her. Diabetes is hereditary, and one in eight Mexican-American adults gets the disease, a rate three times higher than for other Americans. Studies show indigenous populations — that is, Native Americans and Mexican Americans — show a genetic disposition to the disease.

Knox knows that nothing in the program can force a patient to change. But she hopes knowing the ease with which others have managed and understanding the drastic consequences of not taking precautions will motivate them.

So far she has seen positive results, measured against the patients' expectations of themselves rather than against others. One diabetic who must use a walker vowed to walk the length of her trailer each day. For that patient, success has meant walking three and four times the length of the trailer, she says.

Knox especially likes one component of South Austin Medical Center's program: a contract she and the patient sign. Before they leave the classroom, they set some "behavior change goals" down on paper.

The patients decide what's doable, Knox says. They don't have to eradicate fat from their diets, but perhaps they can promise to eliminate candy bars. Follow-up has shown many exceed their expectations.

The contract says, "I believe that I can successfully accomplish these three goals over the next three to six months."

Leona Alvarado has vowed to lay off bread and tortillas, substitute a piece of fruit for pie at dinner and walk 20 minutes at least three times a week.

Small changes add up, Knox says. And in about three months, she and Alvarado will compare notes to determine just how much.

Smoke could lead to fire for couple

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I have been married for 16 years to a woman who chain-smokes. I used to be a chain-smoker, too, but I quit two years before we met.

Van Buren

I dislike the smell of smoke, and her second-hand smoke isn't doing me any good, so I asked her if she would please try to quit smoking. She said, "No, I enjoy it."

Then I asked her if she would mind going out on the patio to smoke, and she replied, "Yes, I would mind; this is my house, too."

I said, "Well, how about dividing the house into 'smoking' and 'no smoking' zones?"

She said, "No, that's stupid."

Abby, she refuses to compromise. What can I do? — SECOND-HAND SMOKER

DEAR SMOKER: As I see it, since she is unwilling to compromise, unless you want to leave her, you will have to leave the area in which she chooses to smoke.

Have you considered joint counseling for your troubled marriage? You both need to know why she insists on punishing you — and why you continue to permit it.

DEAR ABBY: With regard to the graduate and his bickering relatives: I'd like to tell you how my daughter handled that situation. (I am her mother.)

Her college graduation is in June. Included in her invitations are me, my first husband (her father), my second husband (he raised her), my third (and present) husband, her father's second wife, his new girlfriend, and the families on both sides.

My daughter told us both: "I want everyone there, and I expect all of you to behave yourselves."

Abby, I couldn't agree more. After all, this is her day; we are supposed to be adults, and if we can't make the effort to get along for one afternoon, then we are the ones who need to grow up. — NO BICKERING IN PHOENIX

DEAR NO BICKERING: Well said. Please let me know how your daughter's graduation turns out. Congratulations, and good luck to you and your daughter.

DEAR ABBY: After reading the letter from "Hurt in Euclid, Ohio" about people who don't answer letters promptly — and because I happen to be one of those people — may I have my say?

I have a friend (actually, she's more of an acquaintance) who lives in Indiana and writes me long, flowery letters several times a year.

I also have a husband, two kids, four dogs, a full-time job, plus a part-time job helping my husband, and I flat out do not have time to write letters. My friend in Indiana is a stay-at-home mother who apparently loves to write letters. I do not. I prefer to keep in touch by telephone.

I hope "Hurt" will be a little more understanding when it comes to her letter-writing campaign. — EXHAUSTED IN TENNESSEE

DEAR EXHAUSTED: I know that you echo the sentiments of many people in the other 49 states and the District of Columbia. So, to you and all the other like-minded folks who find letter-writing a chore or a bore, make no apologies for unanswered letters. Continue to stay in touch with friends and relatives by telephone to let them know that you are among the living.

MALPRACTICE: Doctors, patients concerned about medical costs

(From 1E)

"Breaking out in an annoying rash after you've told the doctor of an allergy is like being rear-ended in your car," Oppenheim wrote. "In legal terms, your case is a sure winner; you'll always collect some money. The doctor will have a loss on his record, a boost in his malpractice premium, and some explaining to do whenever he applies for a job."

He added penicillin costs three cents per pill and, except in those seriously allergic, has few wide side effects. Good substitutes cost $1 per pill and often are unpleasant to take.

Cesareans are another area of concern. Oppenheim wrote that cesarean sections now approach 30 percent of all births, compared to 5 percent in 1970.

"This statistic is wildly high," he wrote, "and fears of malpractice are partly responsible. A cesarean is somewhat safer than vaginal delivery for the baby, but three to five times as likely to kill the mother. A good obstetrician needn't worry about being sued? No. The odds are 100 percent that it will happen. All obstetricians are sued sooner or later."

You can't avoid defensive medicine, Oppenheim wrote, but you can minimize the risk by following the following rules:

■ Stop behaving like an American. Americans love action, machines and the latest technology and doctors tend to give it to them. You should tell your doctor you don't want a test, surgery or medication unless it is really necessary.

■ Have a regular doctor. "Seeing a doctor who doesn't know you guarantees the maximum amount of defensive medicine (emergency rooms are notorious for this)," Oppenheim wrote.

■ Go where they practice medicine by the book. "If you don't want an unnecessary cesarean, go to a medical school clinic," he wrote. "Obstetric residents there are still learning, so they stick closer to the book and perform far fewer cesareans. Or don't see an obstetrician at all. Use a family practitioner or a licensed midwife."

■ Understand your medical problems. Listen carefully when a doctor makes a diagnosis. Ask questions. Oppenheim said doctors are too eager to diagnose allergies to drugs such as penicillin. It is worthwhile to see an allergist to confirm a penicillin allergy.

■ Don't hint. "When patients hint they need medication or a test," Oppenheim wrote, "a doctor may worry they'll be upset if he refuses."

SPRINTER: Development of young athletes is researched making muscle grow, Bar-Or said. Young athletes do well in explosive-power sports such as gymnastics because the events rely on coordination, he said.

(From 1E)

"Relatively speaking, we feel their lungs and heart are more developed than their muscles — and lungs and heart is really what we mean by aerobic fitness," Bar-Or said.

Bar-Or and Israeli colleague Bareket Falk attempted to find the time in a young athlete's life at which specialization starts. Their study was published in Pediatric Exercise Science, the journal of the North American Society of Pediatric Exercise Medicine.

The study followed 31 young people ages approximately 11-18 over 18 months. The subjects were classified by stage — pre-, middle- or late-puberty. They were tested at least four times on their aerobic and anaerobic abilities.

Early and middle pubescents had the greatest differences in ability, the study said. This means anaerobic development in these younger pubescents was coming along faster than the increase in aerobic development, Bar-Or said. The increase in late puberty was minor by comparison.

Bar-Or and Falk found wide variations in anaerobic development from individual to individual. Sprinting and weight-lifting, for example, are considered anaerobic activity.

And when they tried to track the development as the younger subjects grew older, they found they didn't have enough cases to draw statistically valid conclusions.

However, when the paper is placed in the context of similar projects, a pattern of anaerobic development in early puberty emerges, Bar-Or said.

The study gives strong evidence that prepubescents have not begun the specialization process, said Dr. Lyle J. Micheli, director of the division of sports medicine at Children's Hospital in Boston.

But it does not answer another question — the possible effect of exercise training, or whether specialization takes place simply as part of normal growth and development, Micheli said.

FEET: Precautions can help solve problems

(From 1E)

fer aching feet as the cushioning layers of fat on the soles of the feet gradually thin out in our later years.

Outside of serious foot problems that may require a medical evaluation, most disorders can be stopped before they start by:

■ Choosing well-fitted shoes with firm soles and soft, roomy uppers for everyday wear.

■ Keeping your feet fit by regular moderate exercise, such as walking.

■ Bathing feet regularly. It's especially important to clean between the toes and dry thoroughly.

■ Helping tender spots to heal by using pads, cushions or heel cups.

Milk substitute is just not real thing

By Linda Anderson

I read somewhere that, although the human body needs the nutrition of dairy products for life in general, in specific a lot of people really do outgrow their need for milk. They develop an intolerance or even an alergy for milk.

Anderson

Must be something to that, because I've seen a couple of products lately designed for people who like milk but just can't drink it.

One of these products is called Vitamite Non-Dairy Beverage. It's packaged just like a half-gallon of milk, and is even located in the milk section of the dairy case at the supermarket.

Well, how could I resist trying something that looks like milk, is stored like milk, pours like milk but isn't milk? The youngest taste-tester was as intrigued as I was, (in fact, she discovered the product in the first place) so we bought a carton to see if it also tasted like milk.

Cost for a half-gallon of Vitamite is $1.89.

Label advertising claims the product is a "Homogenized/Pasteurized" with "Vitamins A & D Added, Lacatose-Free, Non-Dairy Beverage," that is also "Cholesterol-Free, Low Sodium, Low in Saturated Fat" and made with "No Tropical Oils" especially "For People Who Can't Drink Milk!"

Moving around to the side label, you can read advertising that gets more specific: "Vitamite is a non-dairy milk alternative which is lactose and cholesterol free and it's low in sodium.

"Vitamite is animal fat free, contains calcium (25 percent RDA per 8 fl. oz. serving) and contains only one gram of saturated fat per serving.

"Vitamite is recommended for people who suffer from nausea, abdonimal cramps, bloating, gas, diarrhea or otehr symptoms related to intolerances to milk or who wish to reduce their intake of saturated fats or cholesterol."

Then it has a little side comment: "Those with protein sensitivity and other allergies should consult a physician before using this product."

Then it gets back to advertising: "Use Vitamite whenever 2 percent milk would ordinarily be used: for drinking, for baking and cooking, on cereal and in coffee. Vitamie will not set instant pudding and custard."

And we're even given a toll-free phone number for more information: 1-800-443-3930.

Well! That covers a lot of territory. The taste test was — call it interesting. The youngest taste-tester said Vitamite tasted like water. I though it tasted like water with a kind of creamy aftertaste.

I even brought the carton to the office, but no one really wanted to taste it.

I suppose if you really cannot drink milk and you miss it, Vitamite might be a good option. For us, I don't think we'll try it again — unless and until we need to.

Price listed is from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.

Smith, Thomas catching on

■ The pass-catching abilities of running backs Emmitt Smith and Thurman Thomas could give their opponents more headaches than their running abilities.

ATLANTA (NYT) — Mention Emmitt Smith and Thurman Thomas — Super Bowl XXVIII's sensational pair of running backs — and the first thing that comes to mind is what both do best: snatch a handoff from the quarterback and run for glory.

But in this Super Bowl rematch between the Buffalo Bills and the Dallas Cowboys, the defenses will spend extra preparation time for Thomas and Smith as pass receivers.

These guys can kill you softly through the air as easily as they can mercilessly on the ground.

"They are very similar that way," said linebacker Dixon Edwards of the Cowboys. "They both enjoy having receivers that get up field and force defenses to double them. They have tight ends that are good over the middle with those receivers, so, the linebackers have to drop deeper into coverage.

"And then pow! It's a dump here o. a screen there or a flare to those guys out of the backfield and the next thing you know they have 20 yards. They are exceptional at making the first tackler miss after the catch. I'd guess the Bills are talking about this. I know Jimmy Johnson will more than once before we mix it up with the Bills."

In his first season Smith caught 24 passes, then 49, 59 and this season 57 despite missing the first two games. He gathered 10 passes for 61 yards, including a 5-yard scoring catch, in Dallas' regular-season finale and victory against the Giants that clinched the National Football Conference East title and home-field advantage throughout the conference playoffs.

Smith caught nine more in playoff games against Green Bay and San Francisco, including an 11-yard scoring grab against the 49ers.

Thomas has compiled the following totals for receptions in each of his Bills seasons: 18, 60, 49, 62, 58 and 48. In playoff games against the Raiders and Kansas City he caught eight passes and averaged 10 yards per catch.

Smith is most often used as a receiver in the flat or on short, hook patterns near the middle. Thomas is master of the screen pass — especially the middle screen — and he is more of a deep, downfield receiving threat than is Smith.

Thomas' ability as a receiver is a big reason why he has led the league in total scrimmage yards gained in each of the last five seasons, a National Football League record.

"The difference in that has been the yards gained as a receiver," Thomas said. "If they didn't use me that way, it wouldn't have been possible to lead in scrimmage yards. I pride myself on that, my pass catching abilities. It adds another dimension to our offense and to my game. You're always searching for new ways to get the ball."

Smith is not sure why he is only now gaining recognition as a receiver.

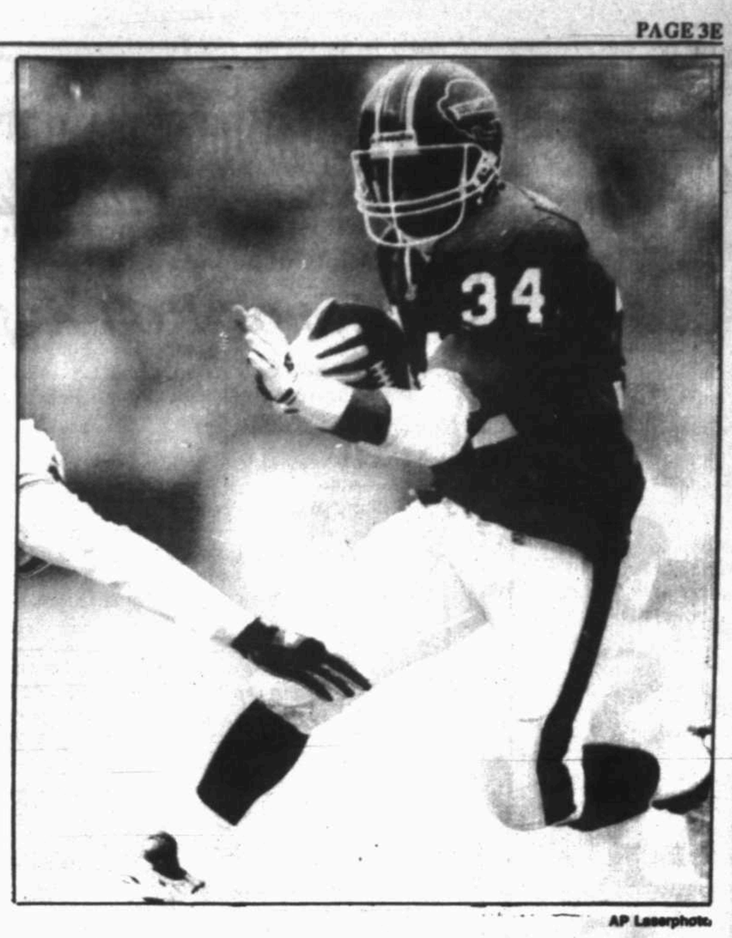

"I feel I've always been able to catch the ball, back in high school, through college and in the pros," Smith said. "The numbers in my career say so. It makes you a better player and more of a threat. I don't worry about catching it deep downfield because we've got guys that excel at that. I'll take the dump routes. It's not where you catch it. It's where you wind up after the catch."

Both players are masters at delay routes. They hide inside the linemen, occupy a defender for an instant as if they are blockers and then break free for easy catches.

"You watch both of these guys as runners and then add the double threat they possess as receivers and it is spooky," said the Dallas offensive tackle, Mark Tuinei. "It's not all natural. They obviously work at it."

Both defenses will at first attempt to thwart these backs as pass catchers with linebackers. If that doesn't work, look for the safeties to rush to the aide.

"Each defense will want to stop the run first, force the pass and then come after them with the pass rush," said Darren Woodson, a Dallas safetyman. "That's just basic football."

Atlanta gets early taste

ATLANTA (AP) — The Super Bowl is giving Atlanta huge downtown crowds, worldwide media inspection, expensive hotels and a cop on every corner this week. It's a taste of what the city will get — in even larger doses — when the Olympics come in two years.

Atlanta, a major convention city, routinely hosts large crowds of visitors and has been the site of two recent World Series. But no event here has offered the combination of a worldwide television audience, an onslaught of 76,500 big-spending sports fans and the sheer hype leading to Sunday's NFL championship game at the Georgia Dome.

"It's maybe a whiff of what is to come," said University of Georgia economist Jeffrey Humphreys, who has studied the expected economic impact of the Super Bowl and the Olympics. "The Olympics will dwarf the Super Bowl."

Everyone from hotel operators to police to transportation officials to the organizers of the Olympics will be taking notes this week on how the city handles the Super Bowl.

"We can't afford to make any mistakes," said Valerie Ferguson, general manager of the Hyatt Regency Atlanta, a downtown convention hotel.

"It's certainly our first large sporting event of this nature. That can serve as a trial for how we handle future sporting events," said Daryl Toor, spokesman for the Atlanta Convention and Visitors Bureau.

Beyond the Olympics, city leaders want to bring the Super Bowl back in the year 2000.

"The biggest thing is we've got to put the game on in such a way that the NFL will vote to bring it back," said Leeman Bennett, the former Atlanta Falcons coach who heads the city's Super Bowl host committee.

For Atlanta's image makers, the past week has been rough. The former head of Hartsfield Atlanta International Airport was convicted in a sensational federal corruption trial. And a broken water main during a cold snap forced the mayor to ask residents to skip their baths for two days.

AP Laserphoto

Dallas fans from left Claudia Houghton, Bekki Adams, Candy Whitely and Lecia NcNair, could be among an onslaught of football fans around the world to converge upon Atlanta, which is hosting its first Super Bowl.

The Super Bowl provides a big stage from which Atlanta can prove, before the Olympics come, that it really is a big-league city.

"The nation wants to see why this brash city is suddenly a sports mecca. The world still confuses us with Atlantic City and is not sure why the underdog city was chosen for the Olympics," Toor said.

In recent weeks, the convention bureau and downtown businesses have organized groups of volunteers to pick up trash and clean off graffiti, Toor said, adding that police plan to have a strong presence downtown so that visitors will feel secure.

Police officials did not return a telephone call Tuesday seeking comment on Super Bowl security plans. They have said previously, however, that most of downtown Atlanta will be closed to automobile traffic Sunday except for motorists with special passes.

Watching the traffic flow carefully will be members of the Atlanta Regional Commission, a planning organization that is working on a transportation plan for the Olympics.

"We're not saying the Super Bowl is the same kind of thing we're planning, but we do feel we can learn a bit by seeing the number of vehicles and people," said Julie Brown, a member of the ARC transportation staff.

Bob Brennan, spokesman for the Atlanta Committee for the Olympic Games, downplayed the similarities between the Super Bowl and the Olympics. The Olympics will be spread over 16 days and will have much tighter security, he said.

"The Super Bowl is one event, a large event," Brennan said. "But we do 260 events."

Nevertheless, Brennan will be at the game Sunday, observing press box operations. And other Atlanta Olympic officials will be watching how preparations for the game unfold.

"Certainly, it's something we can learn from," he said.

Many of the international journalists in town for the Super Bowl are dropping by ACOG headquarters to do stories on the Olympics. And NBC, which is televising the Super Bowl and the 1996 Olympics, will present a one-hour TV special before the game Sunday previewing the Atlanta Olympics.

Aikman's head still fuzzy

ATLANTA (AP) — Two, three, four times, Troy Aikman reviewed the details of his NFC championship game knockout, repeating over and over how the concussion had erased almost all of Sunday from his memory.

Was it scary? someone wondered.

Aikman smiled thinly, and seized the straight line the way a quarterback does a defense.

"You know," he said evenly Tuesday, "I don't remember."

There are some benefits to getting a knee to the head, after all. The frightening parts are forgotten. It also happens to be one of the hazards of his profession, something Aikman accepted a long time ago.

He is the kind of quarterback some football architect might have drawn up on a blueprint — 6-foot-4, 222 pounds, blond hair, blue eyes. There is an angry scrape on one elbow and a couple of nicks on his hands, souvenirs of his job, worn like badges of honor.

And, yes, he can't remember Sunday.

"It's part of the game," Aikman said matter-of-factly. "As long as you're going to play, you can't be too concerned — unless it starts happening on a continuing basis."

There was a time, though, when sacks seemed to be part of the Dallas Cowboys offense. And Aikman, suffering through a 1-15 rookie season, was the sackee.

Drafted No. 1 in 1989 as the first building block in the reconstruction of the Cowboys, Aikman took his licks.

"It's hard to put into words, to explain how miserable 1-15 was," Aikman said. "It was the toughest year I ever went through. If that had continued, I could not have played past my first contract."

The turnaround came a year later when Norv Turner was hired as offensive coordinator and installed the offense Aikman had used in college, an attack designed to take better advantage of the weapons Dallas had.

"He throws the ball real well," wide receiver Alvin Harper said. "It's a ball you don't have to work for. You just have to run up under them."

Aikman is a star now, celebrated on the cover of a new NFL comic book, equipped with a $50 million, eight-year contract that is the league's richest, owner of one Super Bowl ring and favored to capture another on Sunday.

He is California Cool, a guy who looks like he'd be perfect on a surfboard, riding a wave. And yet, there is plenty of Oklahoma left in him, too.

When he woke up in the hospital Sunday, doctors asked him where his next game would be.

"Henryetta," he said.

That's Henryetta, as in Oklahoma, where he has a street named after him. He was an all-state quarterback for the Fighting Hens before matriculating, first at Oklahoma and then at UCLA. That was many passes and sacks ago.

Aikman knew right away, though, that the Hens would not be able to host this celebration of professional football. "The stadium only holds 2,000," he said.

The Georgia Dome with its 72,000 seats is a much more appropriate venue. Not that it makes all that much difference to Aikman. He has been described as unflappable. "I think that's accurate," he said.

He would have to be to keep all of this in perspective. He is basically a down-home guy, who happens to get, oh, 1,000 or so fan letters every week.

That is what happens to Super Bowl MVPs. And don't think that winning one extinguished Aikman's desire to do it again.

"Once you've been to the Super Bowl, it makes you want to go back that much more," he said. "Those guys who haven't gone feel a drive and a hunger to do it. And once you've done that, it makes you want to go back.

"If you don't reach the Super Bowl, the season's a failure. The whole reason you play is to win a Super Bowl. Anything short of that is really not what you set out to do. That's my outlook on the season."

He plays with a confidence, a conviction that he and this team will be successful. "This offense is too good, with too many good players," he said. "I expect us to win every game."

Right now, he only needs to win one more.

Flights added from Dallas to Atlanta

FORT WORTH (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys and Buffalo Bills have made it to the Super Bowl in Atlanta and now several airlines are trying to help their fans get there, too.

Delta Air Lines and American Airlines said Tuesday they've expanded the number of seats available on flights between Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport and Atlanta's Hartsfield Airport.

Delta, which is based in Atlanta and has 12 daily flights between the airports, is adding two 144-passenger 727 flights and is substituting larger planes on other flights where demand is high.

Fort Worth-based American is adding to its normal schedule of 28 flights per day out of Atlanta for next Monday in an effort to get Super Bowl revelers back home.

"We're not just adding flights, the flights we are adding are with much larger aircraft than we would normally have," American spokesman Tim Smith said.

American is adding an extra plane for its Monday route connecting Buffalo and Atlanta through Raleigh-Durham, N.C., Smith said. Delta did not announce any plans to alter its schedule of three non-stop flights between Buffalo and Atlanta.

EQUAL OPPORTUNITY EMPLOYER

310 General Help Wanted

Distributorships Now Available

PART-TIME INCOME OPPORTUNITY

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has early morning routes which need to be filled with dependable individuals with reliable transportation. Often asked questions:

➥ Is it worthwhile for adults also?

YES! 95% of our Distributors ARE adults! Morning Routes are attractive for:

★ ADULTS who have fulltime jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job!
★ MOTHERS who can't justify a small job AND daycare, because as a Distributor, you do not need daycare!
★ COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
★ SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added retirement income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends!

➥ How much money can I make as a Distributor?

Depending on the size of the route(s), from $350 to $800 monthly, in some cases...even more!

➥ OK...but how long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday-Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, depending on the size of the route(s). Also some time is needed each month to collect from subscribers. Many Distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in the subscribers papers and having payments mailed to them. Some collecting in person will be necessary though, particularly on some routes more than others.

➥ When do the papers have to be delivered by?

Papers must be on the yards by 6 am Monday-Friday, and 7 am on weekened mornings.

➥ Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, most Distributors do take days off by finding a friend, family members, or another Distributor to substitute for them!

➥ What else?
