City to sound warning sirens

BIG SPRING — The city will test its emergency warning system Thursday afternoon.

City Manager Hal Boyd said residents should not be alarmed when they hear the warning sirens because he has scheduled a test of the system for 12:30 p.m. The cable warning system will be tested as well, he said.

Boyd said the test was set for Thursday because the weather is expected to be clear.

The city's siren system is used to warn citizens when there is "eminent danger of a tornado," Boyd said.

Windham's license revoked by state

BIG SPRING — City officials were notified recently that the Texas Water Commission has revoked the wastewater operator's license held by W.W. Windham.

Public Works Director Tom Decell said he received a letter last week from the TWC saying that the former city official's class B wastewater operator certificate of competency had been revoked. Windham, water and wastewater superintendent in Big Spring from August 1983 until he resigned in September 1984, was convicted in February for falsifying reports to the Environmental Protection agency.

Windham was sentenced by a U.S. district judge to five months in federal prison after a jury ruled that Windham intentionally altered reports to the EPA, a violation of the Clean Water Act.

Sparling: No explanation

BIG SPRING — Charlene Sparling, who last month was told she had a job as the County Judge's secretary and then a day later found out she did not, said she still has not found out why following a closed executive session with County Commissioners Monday.

She suspects she may have been the victim of gossip and wanted to find out what was said and who said it.

"They wouldn't tell me," said a visibly upset Sparling after she left the executive session which lasted more than an hour. She said that before commenting further, she wanted to wait until any possible further action by County Judge John Coffee or commissioners.

Asked if the situation is over or not, Coffee replied, "I don't know."

Commenting on the purpose of the executive session, Coffee said, "She asked for a hearing and she was given a hearing."

YMCA to honor McMahon Friday

BIG SPRING — About 150 people made reservations for tomorrow's dinner honoring Clyde McMahon Sr.

Gary Wollenzien, director of the Big Spring Family YMCA, said interest in the $20 per couple dinner exceeded his expectations. The YMCA is honoring McMahon for his "distinguished service to the YMCA and the community of Big Spring." The appreciation dinner, which will be at the Big Spring Country Club, will begin at 7 p.m.

Special guest Dr. James M. "Bo" Hardy of Tennessee will present McMahon a signed copy of his latest book, Developing Dynamic Boards, when the program begins at 7:30 p.m. Hardy began his career in Big Spring, serving as director of they YMCA. McMahon was chairman of the Y board.

Wollenzien said McMahon generally tries to avoid the spotlight but is accepting the honor with good humor.

"He wasn't too thrilled," Wollenzien said of McMahon. "He is such a humble person. (Volunteers) don't do the type of things they do volunteer-wise for the glory. They do it for the community."

House adjourns with no school finance reform

By PEGGY FIKAC
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — Buoyed by the House's failure to override his veto of a $555 million school finance reform bill, Gov. Bill Clements predicted the Legislature will quickly pass a measure he can accept.

"I think a compromise will be reached that will be acceptable to everybody concerned and will be an excellent bill," Clements said.

"I think in a matter of another week we'll have it all done and everybody can go home and have a good time," he said.

"We will continue to negotiate, work with the governor and find out what issues that we can compromise with him." — House Speaker Gib Lewis

The House adjourned for this special session Tuesday, three days before a court deadline for overhauling the school finance system. It mustered a 92-55 vote to override Clements' veto, largely along party lines and short of the 100 required.

House Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, said he expected Clements to call lawmakers back for a new session as soon as today. If so, it would be the Legislature's fourth special session on school finance, and a record sixth since last year's regular session ended.

"We will continue to negotiate, work with the governor and find out what issues that we can compromise with him," Lewis said. "One thing I am trying to prevent and I'm going to try the best I can is not allow a (court) master to write a school plan for the future of Texas education."

The Democrat-controlled Legislature designed the bill — which was vetoed by the Republican governor — to answer a unanimous Texas Supreme Court order to make more money available to poor schools.

If a measure is not enacted by Friday, a court-appointed special master will present the first draft of his own plan.

Clements wouldn't say when he will call lawmakers back into session. He has said lawmakers have until June 21 to enact a bill, because that is when court master William Kilgarlin will file his final plan in state court.

Unsafe systems as high as 30 percent

By PATRICK DRISCOLL

BIG SPRING — As many as 30 percent of county septic systems are unsafe, the County Commissions learned Tuesday, and the Sheriff's Office may start issuing citations.

The court may consider at its June 11 meeting the request to allow citations for violations of a septic systems ordinance passed by commissioners in October. The citations would be handled through justice of the peace courts.

Penalties are $20 to $200 for the each offense, according to state statutes, County Judge John Coffee said. Each day of violation constitutes an offense.

James Luck, city/county chief sanitarian, said there are three or four people known to be in violation of the October order. They would be notified immediately, he said. He estimated that as many as 3,000 of some 10,000 county residents could be operating unsafe septic systems.

"There may be more than that," Luck said, "We've taken no real survey. I would estimate that at least 20 or 30 percent of county residents have systems that need to be replaced or have systems that need to be brought into compliance with the order."

Unsafe systems include cesspools, those with steel tanks

Obscene calls

More than a prank

By RUTH COCHRAN
City Editor

BIG SPRING — Pranksters may take great delight in making phone calls in the middle of the night, but telephone companies are more than annoyed by harassing calls to their customers.

Companies such as Southwestern Bell Telephone continue to develop more sophisticated methods for detecting crimes committed on the telephone. Bill Gilliland, Bell's area manager for external affairs, said Bell is introducing technology to Texas that will allow obscene callers to be nabbed more quickly.

In other parts of the state, the company is introducing a service that will allow customers to dial a code on their telephone as soon as they receive an obscene or annoying call, Gilliland said. The code sends the number of the telephone used by the obscene caller to the phone company, he said. The process notifies Bell personnel immediately that an obscene call was made from that number, he said.

An even more sophisticated process named "Caller ID" will soon may become vailable to customers in Austin, Gilliland said. For about $100, customers can purchase a small piece of equipment that will give them a digital read-out of the telephone's number from which a call is made, he said.

The equipment allows customers to screen their calls, Gilliland said, and in the case of an obscene call, the customers knows the phone number from which the call was made.

Big Spring customers, however, will have to catch its telephone criminals the "old fashioned" way: with a Line Identification request, commonly called a phone trap.

Gilliland said person who think they are receiving obscene, annoying or harassing calls are urged by Bell to follow these suggestions which are printed in their telephone directories:

- Hang up at the first obscene word. Hang up if the caller remains silent the second time you say hello.
- Do not give any information, such as your name or address, until the caller has been properly identified.
- Advise children and guests no to give out any information.

Gilliland said a variety of types of calls are considered criminal.

"Any obscene language would most definitely be obscene calling," he said. "Obscene can be four-letter words or abusive-type language — which would fall into the harassing stage."

Harassing calls also include the person who either don't say anything or breathes hard into the receiver, he said. Annoying calls include people who hang up when the phone is answered, he said.

"If you receive very few of those (hanging up)," Gilliland said, "it could be a misdirected call. It should be a very infrequent thing."

However, if calls persist,

Bill Cregar: A lot of changes in 25 years at Elbow

ELBOW — After 25 years at Elbow Elementary School, Principal Bill Cregar is retiring to a life of fishing and golf. Cregar, standing by a mural of a buffalo painted in his honor in the school gymnasium, will be feted at an open house Thursday, 11 a.m. to 6 p.m., at Elbow.

By DEBBIE LINCECUM
Staff Writer

In his 25 years as a elementary school principal, Bill Cregar said he has seen a lot of changes.

He has instigated many of those at Elbow Elementary, including a computer in every classroom, a new image of the school administration and growing self-confidence among students.

Cregar will retire from his post at the elementary school effective June 15. A look back on his work in the Forsan school system is a quarter-century success story.

In 1965, he began teaching in what was Forsan Elementary. Moving to the site at Elbow the following year, he began to implement programs to improve his students' environment.

The young students have moved into the computer age: Every classroom has a computer. Students are proficient at basic use of the keyboard by fourth grade, and have access to math and English programs in grades one through five.

"They all need to be computer-literate," Cregar said. "These kids are growing up in a technological era."

A motto for the year is chosen to bring students and teachers together and give them a goal, he said. This year, "School without failure" hangs in the entry hall, reminding students, teachers and visiting parents of the remarkable success rate of Elbow students.

"I have not seen a failure at this school. There are times we need to extend the grade a little, if a child needs to catch up, but no child fails," Cregar said.

Gone is the image of principal as a tall, scary man wielding a paddle, Cregar said. The top administrator has worked to change his image with the kids.

He said he invites every child into the main office on their birthday to receive a card. When punishment is necessary, Cregar said the kids are not frightened of him.

"I do have to discipline them ocasionally," he said. "I believe in punishment for the act, not against the child. They have to know you still love them."

"I have not seen a failure at this school. There are times we need to extend the grade a little, if a child needs to catch up, but no child fails."

An increase in involvement by parents sees them at work as volunteers and on an advisory committee which assists teachers in reviewing student progress.

His goal for the students, Cregar said, is that they leave Elbow prepared for whatever they face next. "I want our kids to be able to go to school at Forsan or anywhere their family might move and do well," he said.

Cregar's work at Elbow has not gone unnoticed. Parents and

Baby abductor turns herself in

WAXAHACHIE (AP) — The 14-year-old mother of a baby abducted from a Waxahachie hospital last Friday says she can almost sympathize with the woman accused of taking the infant.

Kimberly Denise Deckard, 19, of Dallas turned herself and a small child in to Abilene authorities late Tuesday.

Authorities were conducting tests to positively determine the baby's identity.

A kidnapping warrant has been issued for Ms. Deckard and bond has been set at $50,000, said Waxahachie Police Chief Ted Garber. He said Waxahachie detectives also took a set of the baby's footprints to Abilene to help identify him.

Abilene police say Ms. Deckard told them she took the baby from the Baylor Medical Center in Waxahachie to try to compensate for the child she recently lost to a miscarriage.

Charges filed against teacher

HOUSTON (AP) — Charges of injury to a child have been filed against two Houston elementary school teachers who are accused of bruising a 9-year-old boy with a wooden paddle, police say.

Sgt. Bill Staney with the Houston Police Department's child abuse section said the two teachers at Nat Q. Henderson school, Christine Cross, 26, and Melanie Darthard, 25, told police they only verbally disciplined the third-grader, whose name was not released.

Faye Bryant, HISD deputy superintendent for campus management, said the teachers were assigned to administrative duties in the district office pending completion of the district's investigation.

More action may be taken against the teachers after the investigation is finished today, she said.

Staney said the boy originally was "popped" three times on May 21 by his third-grade science teacher for disrupting class.

The next day, however, the boy's former first- and second-grade teachers, Darthard and Cross, took the boy out of class and each hit him four times on the buttocks. The boy did nothing to provoke his removal from class for a second paddling, Staney said.

DA asks court to overturn ruling

CONROE (AP) — Montgomery County District Attorney Peter Speers is going to the U.S. Supreme Court to appeal a ruling that allowed Clarence Lee Brandley to be freed from Texas' death row.

Speers mailed a petition to the U.S. Supreme Court Tuesday asking the nine judges to hear his appeal of Brandley's case.

Brandley was convicted in 1981 in the death of Cheryl Dee Fergeson, a Bellville teen-ager found strangled at the school where Brandley worked as a janitor.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals overturned Brandley's conviction in December, saying prosecutors erred by focusing on Brandley to the exclusion of any other leads in the case.

Speers claims the appeals court ruling is overly broad and unreasonable.

Civil suits take back seat

AUSTIN (AP) — Civil lawsuits are being delayed because Austin's only federal judge is busy trying criminal cases that vastly outnumber the amount of civil suits pending.

U.S. District Judge James Nowlin said Wednesday that parties in non-criminal trials are just having to wait because the cases take a back seat to drug cases.

Reps' fear: Here comes the judge

AUSTIN (AP) — Moments after the House failed to override the governor's veto of the Legislature's school finance reform plan, one lawmaker voiced the words many said they fear: "Here comes the judge."

The judge is a former Supreme Court justice, William Kilgarlin, the court-appointed special master who will write a school finance plan if lawmakers and Gov. Bill Clements fail to do so by Friday.

"I can see the 'Today' show in the year 2002 when they make the announcement that the Texas Legislature — House, Senate and governor — have all quit and the Supreme Court's named a master to run the state of Texas because they can't get anything done down there at all," said Rep. Mark Stiles, D-Beaumont.

After the House failed on a 92-55 vote Tuesday to override Clements' veto of the Legislature's $555 million school finance plan, it adjourned its current special session. Senate leaders said they would follow suit.

But lawmakers will be called back to try again, Clements promised.

Those who urged the House to override Clements' veto said they fear the results if the court master takes over.

They noted that in recent years the state has lost lawsuits and been placed under federal court supervision of prisons and mental health facilities.

"Do you want to let the courts run our schools?" asked Rep. Doyle Willis, D-Fort Worth, who called the override vote his most important in 35 years in the Legislature.

Last October, a 9-0 Texas Supreme Court ruled that the $13.5 billion-a- year school finance system was unconstitutional for discriminating against poor school districts.

The high court ordered that more money be made available to poor schools, and District Judge Scott McCown, who supervises the case, named Kilgarlin to write a finance plan if none is enacted by June 1.

"There are four great (state government) programs. You've got the highways, you've got the prisons, you've got the schools and you've got the hospitals," Willis said.

"The courts already have the prisons and the hospitals and if you don't vote to override this veto, they're going to have the schools."

Officer, suspect injured in struggle involving gun

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A 25-year-old San Antonio man has been charged with attempted capital murder after taking away an officer's gun and trying to shoot it at him, authorities said.

Ernest Gutierrez was being held in lieu of $100,000 bond Tuesday night after being arraigned by Magistrate Quon Lew.

Gutierrez had taken away the gun from officer Jaime Aleman in a scuffle, and pulled the trigger of the weapon, authorities said. But Aleman had already disarmed the weapon by removing its ammunition clip.

"I give him a lot of credit for his presence of mind, especially since it was an unprovoked attack," said Lt. Tom Polonis, who commands the repeat offender project to which Aleman is assigned.

"It was a life-and-death situation at that point. I think he felt that if he couldn't control his gun, then the best thing to do was to disarm it."

Aleman, 30, sustained several minor injuries in the fight that occurred Tuesday afternoon. He was treated at a San Antonio hospital, then released.

Gutierrez, who was wanted on an arrest warrant charging him with delivery of heroin, also had to be treated for injuries suffered in the fight. He also was complaining about pain from a gunshot he suffered a week earlier.

"It was a life-and-death situation at that point. I think he felt that if he couldn't control his gun, then the best thing to do was to disarm it." Police Lt. Tom Polonis.

Police say the suspect rushed the police officer after the officer began asking about a man wanted on a narcotics warrant at a residence in south San Antonio about 2:15 p.m.

As the fight moved up and down the street, the officer drew his 9mm semiautomatic pistol, but the suspect began grabbing trying to grab it, Polonis said.

Still locked in a close-quarters fight, the officer then removed the clip and the round in the chamber by pressing on a magazine release button on the weapon's handle.

Other officers arrived and subdued the suspect just after he had aimed the gun at Aleman and tried to fire it.

Polonis said officers are taught during training to empty their weapons if they feel they cannot hold onto them during a struggle.

Witnesses said the fight lasted 5 to 10 minutes.

Two dead in natural gas blast

HEIDELBERG, Miss. (AP) — Emergency workers burned off gases still leaking today from a runaway oil and gas well that exploded, killing two workers and injuring four others.

Most of about 200 people evacuated after the Tuesday afternoon series of explosions returned home Tuesday night. Those within a one-mile radius were told to wait until the well is capped, Jasper County civil defense director Joe Stringer said this morning. He said 60 to 65 people were kept away from their homes today.

Crews cleared away debris from the collapsed rig in hopes the capping could be completed by afternoon.

Officials used flares and flame throwers Tuesday to set fire to the escaping gas, said Jim Maher, director of the Mississippi Emergency Management Agency in Jackson.

Duke's ban passes Louisiana House

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — A bill sponsored by former Ku Klux Klan leader David Duke to ban affirmative action easily passed the Louisiana House.

The 66-28 vote Tuesday sent the measure to the Senate. The vote crossed party lines; 13 representatives abstained.

"You can camouflage things but racism is racism," said one opponent, Democratic Rep. C.D. Jones, who is black.

He added, "You still must understand that we live in the United States and federal law takes precedence over the Louisiana Legislature, and thank God for that."

Duke, a former KKK grand wizard elected to the House as a Republican from a nearly all-white district in 1989, argued that affirmative action seeks to "eradicate discrimination by putting in a policy of discrimination."

"This bill simply prohibits racial discrimination in hiring, promotion, scholarships," he said. "There is no justification to discriminate against someone who works hard, who is qualified for a job."

Leak forces launch postponement

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA said it will be late tonight before engineers can pinpoint two hydrogen leaks that forced cancellation of today's launch of Columbia and its $150 million observatory.

The planned 12:28 a.m. liftoff was scrubbed just six hours before launch after sensors detected rising levels of hydrogen gas in Columbia's engine compartment. The gas leak occurred while the shuttle's rocket propellant tank was being loaded with liquid hydrogen and liquid oxygen.

NASA spokesman Bruce Buckingham said today that all of the propellant must be vented from Columbia's big external tank before workers can search for leaks in the maze of plumbing in the spacecraft's aft engine compartment.

Buckingham said that it will be late tonight or early Thursday before NASA engineers know for certain what repairs are needed.

Earlier, NASA spokeswoman Lisa Malone said it will be "at least several days" before another launch attempt.

Con artists claiming to be Census takers

WASHINGTON (AP) — An 80-year-old North Carolina woman was tied up and robbed by two men she thought were census workers. Con artists claiming to be census employees charged Houston residents $50 after helping them complete their forms.

"Anytime you have something this big, the scam artists are going to come out of the woodwork," said Larry Bryant of the census' regional office in Los Angeles.

There are 200,000 to 230,000 official census enumerators combing the countryside, knocking on doors of those people who failed to complete the form sent this spring, said agency spokesman Mark Mangold.

Isolated incidents of con artists posing as census workers have occurred during every census, said Ray Bancroft of the census promotion office.

In an effort to cut back on such crime, the agency provides each worker with a red, white and blue badge identifying the holder by name and I.D. number as a "U.S. Census Enumerator," and a large black satchel with a red, white and blue patch that says "U.S. Census 1990."

"Often the people who fall victim ... are the elderly or the low income population, the segment of the population that can least afford it," said Noe Balli of the census' regional office in Dallas. "Anybody who wants money, they're obviously not census employees."

In the North Carolina case, the woman initially allowed only one man into her home and was having a "nice conversation" with him when the doorbell rang and the man told her it was his partner, said Tom Smith Jr. of the Charlotte, N.C., office.

"They tied her up and commenced taking some valuable things from the house as well as her car," Smith said, adding that she was not physically injured.

In Houston, people identifying themselves as census workers went to homes and helped the occupants complete the questionnaires, charging them $50, Balli said.

Another Houston resident complained that someone identifying himself as a census worker called credit information and credit card numbers, Balli said.

In Colorado, a woman identifying herself as a census worker asked an elderly woman for money. The request was refused and the elderly woman called officials, said Ron Ritschard of the Denver census office.

Israelis intercept guerrilla attack

NIZZANIM, Israel (AP) — Palestinian guerrillas in speedboats today launched an assault on Mediterranean beaches crowded with Israelis, but soldiers killed four raiders and captured several others, the military said.

No Israelis were reported killed or injured. Thousands of them were forced off beaches south of Tel Aviv, where they had come on the Shavuot holiday or Festival of Weeks, which marks the giving of the Ten Commandments.

The raid was the largest Palestinian infiltration attempt by sea since March 11, 1978, when a dozen guerrillas from PLO chief Yasser Arafat's Fatah faction came ashore and hijacked a bus on the coastal highway north of Tel Aviv. Thirty-three people were killed and 82 wounded in the incident.

Israel armed forces radio, reporting on today's raid, said the mother ship came from Libya and the guerrillas had planned to kill civilians in Tel Aviv.

Greece, U.S initial defense pact

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Greece and the United States today initialed a new defense pact allowing U.S. bases to remain on Greek soil for the next eight years.

"The agreement on defense has been initialed," said Kiki Munshi, press attache of the U.S. Embassy in Athens, contacted by telephone.

The United States has four bases and about 20 smaller installations around the country. Earlier this year, Washington announced it was closing two of the bases as part of a worldwide cost-cutting drive.

On Monday, the government spokesman said the accord would be signed between four and six weeks after it has been initialed.

The initialling of the agreement ends nearly a year of limbo in Greek government policy on defense ties with the United States. Two coalition governments had frozen negotiations on the accord.

The previous five-year agreement, covering defense and economic ties between the two countries, expired in December 1988.

Arabs divided on approach to U.S.

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — A summit of Arab leaders called today for economic sanctions against countries that encourage the emigration of Jews to Israel and the continued Israeli occupation of Arab land, a senior PLO official said.

The move by 16 countries meeting here followed bitter debate over how far to go in expressing their discontent with the United States for its Middle East policies and a mass migration of Soviet Jews to Israel.

The resolution marked a victory for hard-liners led by Iraq and the Palestine Liberation Organization over moderates headed by Saudi Arabia and Egypt.

The hard-liners have been demanding tough action to block the expected emigration of as many 750,000 Soviet Jews to Israel in the next few years. Tightened U.S. immigration quotas are being blamed for the large volume.

The moderates have been arguing against using the Arabs' economic wealth as a political weapon, and have been battling to avoid provoking tension.

Weatherman raps the forecast

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Charts and graphs are mighty boring, weathermen can leave you snoring; but use some rap and fate be willin', you'll know real soon if it's hot or chillin'.

To add some spunk to weather reports, a syndicated forecaster rapped to the music of Technotronic on Tuesday, and his word was heard from Boston to Kansas City.

"Somebody put me up to it last week," said Elliot Abrams of AccuWeather Inc., which supplies local forecasts to radio stations across the country. "They said the only thing they haven't heard me do was a rap version."

Listeners in Pennsylvania and Ohio heard the version Tuesday. Stations in Boston, Cincinnati and Kansas City had rap reports Monday.

"Elliot has a lot of poetic lines in his system and they're trying to get out," said Mark Helms, executive editor at KYW-AM, an all-news station in Philadelphia. "It's not something we would try every day."

Accommodating the disabled

"We're sorry but we have only one handicapped room, and it is booked." That's what Cyndi Jones, publisher of a San Diego-based magazine on issues affecting the disabled, was told when she went to an East Coast conference this month and couldn't get through the door to her hotel room. She and her husband finally found accommodations eight miles away. Then the conference center turned out to be inaccessible. "I started to cry," said Jones, who contracted polio as a child. "I felt the pain of 43 million Americans who are daily degraded and humiliated."

The tears, frustration and downright discrimination suffered by those whom life has already dealt disproportionate agony will be sharply curtailed if the Americans with Disabilities Act is approved by a House-Senate conference committee and signed into law by President Bush. It would extend to people with physical or mental disabilities the same kind of protection against discrimination that the landmark Civil Rights Act of 1964 gave to minorities and women.

Employers would be prohibited from discriminating against a qualified job seeker even though a disability might affect the applicant's ability to walk, talk or breathe. The emphasis would rightly be on providing reasonable accommodations. People who have recovered from mental illness or from diseases such as cancer or heart ailments could not be coldly shown the door.

Hotels, restaurants, theaters, convention centers, doctors' offices, retail stores and other establishments would be barred from turning away society's most vulnerable citizens. Businesses would be under a new obligation to physically accommodate the handicapped and make new offices, plants and stores accessible. Buses, commuter trains and other transportation services would have to be readily usable by the wheelchair-user.

The leading critics of the Americans with Disabilities Act — primarily in the business community — dispute neither the necessity nor morality of dismantling discriminatory barriers that confront disabled Americans in the work place, public accommodations, transportation facilities and even telephone services. Instead, they cite the cost of compliance and potential for litigation, saying the law would be an invisible tax on business.

The legislation is not nearly so onerous as they would have us believe. Major corporations back the new protections. Businesses with federal contracts or grants have complied with similar rules for years. The employment provisions would exempt firms with fewer than 15 workers. There is a "hardship clause" for businesses able to show that required changes would be too costly or disruptive. Companies that have begun to meet disabilities-access rules say that most cost concerns are overblown.

Penalties for discriminatory practices have been a key source of disagreement. Should punishment be limited to injunctions to halt biased actions and back pay for victims of employment discrimination? Or should there be punitive damages and jury trials in the case of intentional discrimination? While it would be desirable to limit the liability of a business owner who is truly trying to comply, the law must have enough teeth to ensure that disabled persons are accorded their full civil rights.

Through the Civil Rights Act, the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 and the Education for All Handicapped Children Act of 1975, the United States has brought millions of members of disadvantaged minorities into the social and economic mainstream. It's time to end the daily humiliation of one of America's largest minority groups.

The line-item veto: A bum idea

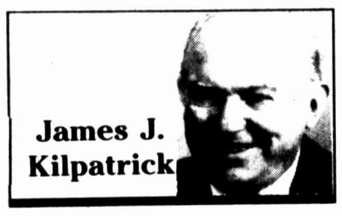
By JAMES J. KILPATRICK



James J. Kilpatrick

WASHINGTON -- Arguments over the line-item veto boil down to the distinction between that which is persuasive and that which is convincing. Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois, the chief advocate of this executive device, is persuasive. In the end his arguments are not convincing. This is a bum idea that Congress should abandon.

The senator's case is to this effect: Congress in recent years has adopted a parliamentary tactic that is unfair to a president and bad for the country. The trick is to wrap hundreds of individual appropriations into one bulging package and to drop the thing on a president's desk. A message is attached: Take it or leave it.

Many of the items in such an omnibus bill never would survive a straight up-or-down vote on the floor. They are the stuff with which pork barrels are filled. Often these frivolous or extraneous items sneak into a bill without even a moment's hearing in committee.

To remedy the situation, Simon proposes an amendment to the Constitution: "The president may reduce or disapprove any item of appropriation in any act or joint resolution, except any item of appropriation for the legislative branch of the government." By a majority vote in each house, the vetoed item could be restored. Simon's resolution has cleared committee and is headed for the floor.

Simon notes that 43 states accord substantially this power to their governors. As governor of California, Ronald Reagan used his line-item veto 943 times. He was never overridden. Over the past seven years, Illinois governors have reduced or eliminated items that have saved $2 billion. Former Presidents Nixon, Ford, Carter and Reagan support the amendment. President Bush has asked repeatedly for it.

The Senate Judiciary Committee conducted hearings on Simon's amendment on April 11. There the opposition made a convincing case against it. Orrin Hatch of Utah summed up the principal argument in a single sentence: "I think it would result in a massive shift of power from the legislative to the executive branch."

Exactly so. Our Constitution rests upon two solid foundation stones. The first is federalism, which is not involved here. The second is the separation of powers among the executive, legislative and judicial branches. For 200 years these powers have rested in a nice equilibrium. The system hasn't been perfect — the judiciary often has assumed disturbing power — but it has worked.

The Simon amendment would upset the balance in critical ways. Given the power of line-item veto, a president would be in a dominant position to wheel and deal, to trade for votes on his own projects, to practice a kind of genteel extortion. Let us suppose that a president is truly determined to have his way on a manned station in space. The Senate is cool; the House is barely lukewarm. Along comes a massive bill to provide supplementary appropriations. It contains a hundred pet projects beloved by their sponsors.

Well, says the president, if you gentlemen will give me my meritorious space station, I won't veto your unwarranted dams. A deal is struck. The cats and dogs stay in the bill. Nothing useful has been accomplished. And the line-item veto has functioned not as a scalpel, but as a billy club.

Wholly apart from objections based upon principle or pragmatism is a technical third point raised by Oregon's Mark Hatfield. He says the line-item veto, as a practical matter, isn't what it's cracked up to be. It simply would not accomplish what Simon believes it will accomplish.

Sixty percent of the budget, representing entitlement programs and interest on the debt, couldn't be reached by a line-item veto. Three-fourths of the remainder is military spending. That doesn't leave much.

Moreover, most appropriations are by generalized "accounts," such as a military construction account. Individual items within an account may be described in a committee report, but they do not appear in the bill itself.

The fact that 43 governors have a line-item veto is interesting but irrelevant. States can spend money but they cannot print money. Their powers of appropriation thus have built-in limitations.

If it is not necessary to amend the Constitution, it is necessary not to amend the Constitution. No compelling case has been made for a dangerous transfer of enormous political power to future presidents. The Senate should kill the resolution.

Ex-health nut breaks

By LEWIS GRIZZARD

Lewis Grizzard

My friend Rigsby, the health nut, had that look in his eye.

"I did it," he said.

"Did what?" I asked him.

"I had breakfast."

"So did I," I said. "What's the big deal?"

"I had a real breakfast," Rigsby answered. "For ten years all I've had for breakfast are things that are supposed to be good for me.

"I've eaten enough oat bran to qualify for the Kentucky Derby. I've eaten more yogurt than a 112-year-old Russian. I've eaten so many bananas on my granola, I'm growing hair on my back and twice a day have a serious urge to go hang upside down on a tree limb."

"But breakfast is our most important meal," I said. "You should be eating healthy in the morning."

"I don't care," said Rigsby. "Man can't live on fiber alone. He must also have an occasional scrambled egg."

"You ate an egg?" I asked him in disbelief.

"Four," Rigsby answered.

I don't remember the last time I had an egg. I think it was during the Eisenhower administration.

"Aren't you afraid of getting too much cholesterol," I asked Rigsby.

"I've got to die of something, and if an egg doesn't get me something else will."

"What else did you have?"

"A Belgian waffle," said Rigsby. "With butter and syrup all over it."

"That's a lot of sugar. What about hypoglycemia?"

"What about it?"

"Well," I attempted to explain, "you could become faint, disoriented, and develop diabetes."

"Yeah," said Rigsby. "I also could get run over by a beer truck, but I'm still going to cross the street."

"Did you eat anything else?"

"I had some bacon."

"Bacon, studies show, can cause cancer."

"And I ate some white toast."

"No nutritional value there. You should have eaten whole wheat."

"And some pancakes."

"On top of the Belgian waffle? Are your affairs in order?"

"And some hashed brown potatoes."

"All that grease. Who's the executor of your will?"

"And three chocolate donuts."

"You won't live until Christmas."

"And some leftover pizza from the night before."

"Our Father, who art. . ."

"And a Little Debbie Snack Cake."

"We're going to miss you."

"And a pot of coffee."

"Decaf, of course."

"High test."

"I'm looking at a dead man."

"And you know what else?" Rigsby asked me.

"What else?"

"I'm going to do it again in the morning."

It takes a real man, I suppose, to stare death square in the eye. I think I'll go over to the Waffle House and drool.

Advice to grads, just ask

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

Dear Grads:

It's that time again.

You've been sweating for 12 long years to reach this point, and by gummy, you've made it.

You're graduating.

While this is most certainly a time for celebration, there is one small matter that continues to bother me about this time of year.

Why, would you tell me, hasn't anybody asked me to deliver the commencement address?

I've rationized this for the past couple of years as an oversight on somebody's part. Surely, I said to myself, they'd ask — if only they knew that there was this semi-literate person just chomping at the bit to deliver the graduation speech.

So, in my annual graduation column last year, I practically prostituted myself in search of somebody — anybody — to let me be their featured speaker.

Did I get any offers?

Ha-ha-ha.

Not only did I not get any requests, one principal, who shall remain nameless, went so far as to suggest that as long as he was alive, he would do everything in his power to keep me off the dias.

I think he was joking, but you never can tell about professional educators.

Anyway, it's graduation time once again, and once again I'm all dressed up with no place to go, figuratively speaking.

I'm trying not to take this whole thing personally, mind you, but three years with zilch-o invitations to show for them could make one just slightly paranoid.

Thank goodness I'm not paranoid, eh?

Regardless of the reason, however, the problem still exists, and I'm having trouble understanding why. It's not as if I have severe anti-social behavior or anything like that, for Pete's sake.

Maybe the problem is that I limited myself the last time I made the offer. Maybe the good, old, "you are the future" speech is just too darn passe nowadays.

Maybe I need to expand the old resume a bit.

Hmmmm, I just may be on something here. What if you had a variety of possible themes to choose from, such as:

- The "you are the future" speech — What the heck, somebody may still buy it.
- The "you are the Pepsi Generation" speech — In which I come out on the stage dressed like Michael Jackson and tell you how we can solve all the world's problems is we just love each other a little more.
- The "Henny Youngman" speech — I walk out in a tuxedo, and the first words out of my mouth are, "Two grads walk into a bar . . ."
- The "George Bush" speech — "Read my lips — no more classes."

There are more, of course. Just tell me what you want. I'm easy.

Anyway, I'll let you get back to all of your planning and celebrations.

Have fun, folks. Lord knows you've earned it.

Annual Spring Band Concert proves entertaining

Forsan

by
KATHRYN HOLLINGSHEAD
Call 267-1429

Forsan's annual Spring Band Concert was staged Thursday night to a crowd of about 500. The sixth grade band initiated the performance, impressing relatives and friends with "Let's Go Band!", "When the Saints Go Marching In," and "La Cucaracha." The Alto Sax Quartet, comprised of Lee Patterson, Bryan Newton, Cara Evans and Brandi Nelson played a selection they will perform at State Competition next month.

The seventh grade band serenaded the audience with "The Bugler Rocks," "Disco Drums," and "Don't It Make My Brown Eyes Blue." The Brass Sextet, Cory Long, Joey Conaway, J.J. Hollingshead, Jason Parker, Amy Roberts and Ginger Harrison, also statebound, played their competition selections.

The high school band regaled the crowd with the "Peacemaker March," "The Battle of Jericho," "On Broadway" and "Rock 'N Roll Forever!"

Director Bob Fishback arranged for the audience to see the Forsan Band's No. 1 rated marching band performance on film.

The seniors came forward to present Fishback with the traditional fish and a "Gift certificate for a night on the town in appreciation of all the nights you spent with us."

Senior band members Teresa Averette, Melissa Elliott, Ingrid Gamble, James Lopez, Isidro Rodriquez, Ginger Harrison, Joey Hinkel, Keith Lesueur, and Tera Sims played the school song for the last time, while the audience rose, and were joined by the entire band to play the Forsan fight song one more time.

Ginger Harrison's picture adorned the program, announcing her as the 89-90 John Philip Sousa Award Winner.

Students honored

Twenty-four Elbow Elementary fifth grade students were honored in a special assembly last week. Principal Bill Cregar presented 20 students with Presidential Academic Fitness Awards, embossed seal certificates signed by President Bush, Secretary of Education Cavazos and Cregar.

Heather Cooper, Kim Crownover, Brenda Franklin, Robert Hillger, Travis Hiltbrunner, Deana Johnson, Leslie Osburn, Doyle Rice, Veronica Serrano, Ryan Toomire, Brandy Vess, Brandon Curry, Cassie Henkel, Randy James, Nicole Johnson, Stefanie Kennedy, Shannon Lepard, Dan Riley, Jennifer Schaefer and Clay Thixton qualified for this award by maintaining at least an overall B plus average for the last two years and scoring at least 80 percent on the standard achievement tests.

Butch Bailey, Mandy Ussery, Cody Carlile and Christina Gunnels were awarded the Silver Award for extraordinary effort.

President Bush was quoted as saying, "The Nation must invest in its young people, giving the knowledge, skills, and values to live productive lives." This program was instituted in 1983 to honor students who have achieved outstanding academic records.

In the same assembly, Cregar honored the parents and others who have volunteered time to help at school. "We certainly wish to express our appreciation to all of the parents and friends who have volunteered their time and effort all this year to help back up work by the teachers and staff. You have helped enrich the lives of all our students by showing them you care enough to be involved," stated Cregar. Hundreds of hours were invested in our elementary school children by volunteers this year.

Receiving special recognition for volunteer work were Kathy McDiffitt, Jimmy and Debra Wallace, Gerry Marino, Lisa Nichols, Pam Phillips, Donna Whetzel, Debbie Spivey, Cindy Breyman, Tammy Schrecengost, Jackie Osburn, Valerie Sneed, Dale Humphreys, Regina Newton, Janice Hopper, Liz Hedges, Polly Cantu, Pam Crouch, Vickie Reed, Marty Whetsel, Kim Savell, Kaye Lane, Susan Alexander, Vera Hamill, Mary Ann Hartin, Dale and Cliff Ferguson and Derrell Baggett. Thanks to all of you.

Courthouse tour

Elbow third graders toured the Howard County Courthouse last Friday. Teachers Richard Light and Rhonda Rothell delivered the students into Kay Kennemur's hands, who gave them the grand tour. The 8-10 year olds visited the Justice of the Peace office and met China Long, and Judge John Coffee, and were cerimoniously fingerprinted in the sheriff's office. The group viewed the records office, where birth certificates are kept, and Mr. Mims showed the children the county maps. Each child was given a sucker, and the group was back at the school in time for lunch.

Woman's obesity has been longtime load

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: So "Slim and Satisfied" thinks no one would tell an obese person, "Gee, you're fat! Why don't you go on a diet?" Well, it's happened to me dozens of times. Total strangers have stopped me on the street and said, "You have such a pretty face, have you ever tried — (Weight Watchers, Optifast, Nutri-System, Overeaters Anonymous, TOPS, Diet Center, Jenny Craig, hypnosis, or that wonderful doctor who does stomach-stapling surgery)?"

I've had people come up to me in restaurants and say, "Do you really think you should be eating that?" (The "that" could be anything from a salad to dessert; they don't think a fat person should be eating anything, period.)

Hairdressers and makeup specialists have told me that it's pointless to bother about my hair or makeup, weighing as much as I do. And buying clothes is a nightmare. I either order mine by mail or have them made by a seamstress. If I enter a clothing store to buy a gift for someone, a salesperson is sure to approach me and say, "Sorry, we don't carry your size here."

I broke my arm in a car accident two years ago, and while waiting in the emergency room, a doctor appeared and said, "Boy, you really should lose some weight!" As if my weight had caused my broken arm! Most physicians believe that all fat people are lazy, weak-willed and undisciplined, rather than people who could be suffering from a genetic or metabolic problem.

I am 36 years old, and have been on more diets than I can count. A pediatrician put me on Metrecal when I was 8; another doctor gave me a 600-calorie-per-day diet when I was 11; still another put me in the hospital for a medically supervised fast when I was 13.

For the past year, I've been working with a great counselor who understands obesity. She has helped me more than all the diet doctors and weight-loss groups combined. I am learning to understand the connection between eating and hunger, which was lost in all those years of bingeing and dieting.

I know I'll never be thin because I'm genetically programmed to be fat — but I hope to find my natural weight through a program of learning to eat from hunger.

I hate exercising, but I do it every day, because I know it's important (for both fat and thin people) for health reasons.

Abby, you've done a terrific job in educating the public about obesity and discrimination against fat people. You have helped fat people stop hating themselves and to understand that they have a physical problem — not a lack of willpower. I know this is too long for your column and you'll have to trim it, but please try to print some of it. I speak for so many people. — LOOKING BEYOND LOOKS

DEAR LOOKING: I haven't trimmed a word, because every word you've written is essential to your message. Please write again when your mission has been accomplished — as I know it will be. I want to print your success story as an inspiration to others who are also "Looking Beyond Looks."

Kahlua-Colada Parfaits hint of relaxing on an island hideaway thanks to the tropical mingling of pineapple, coconut and rum with the cool combination of Kahlua, ice cream and cookies.

Offer chocolate lovers a new way to indulge in their favorite flavor by whipping up a Kahlua Ice Cream Pie. You'll sweeten the disposition of even your most overheated guests.

And, when "adult kids" drop in, treat hem to Kahlua Ice Cream-'N-Cookies Sandwiches. They're easy to store in the freezer, so you'll be ready to impress with a cooling snack.

This week's Recipe Exchange features recipes from the Kaulua Kitchen.

KAULUA-COLADA PARFAITS

8 purchased macaroon cookies
½ cup Kahula
1 quart vanilla ice cream
1 (20-ounce) can crushed pineapple in juice, thoroughly drained
8 teaspoons rum
¼ cup shredded coconut, toasted
Fresh pineapple wedges, optional

In each of four parfait glasses or 12-ounce wine goblets, crumble on cookie. Sprinkle each with 1 tablespoon Kahula. Top with ¼ cup ice cream in each glass, then spoon layer of pineapple over ice cream layers and sprinkle each with 1 teaspoon rum. Repeat layers to use remaining cookies, Kahlua, ice cream, pineapple and rum, ending with ice cream. Sprinkle with toasted coconut and garnish with pineapple wedges, if desired. Serve immediately.

KAHLUA ICE CREAM PIE

1 (9-ounce) package chocolate wafer cookies
½ cup unsalted butter, melted
½ cup plus 2 tablespoons Kahlua
1 teaspoon espresso powder
3 ounces semi-sweet chocolate, chopped
1 tablespoon unsalted butter
1 pint vanilla, coffee or chocolate chip ice cream
1 pint chocolate ice cream
¾ cup whipping cream, whipped
Chocolate-covered coffee beans

In food processor, place about half of cookies, breaking into pieces. Process to make fine crumbs. Repeat with remaining cookies. Add melted butter and process with on-off pulses, just to blend. Spread crumbs evenly over bottom and side of 9-inch pie plate. Press 8-inch pie plate onto mixture to pack down. Shape crumbs evenly on rim, pressing to mold. Bake at 325 degrees F for 10 minutes. Cool completely.

In small saucepan, heat 6 tablespoons Kahula and espresso powder over low heat until warmed and espresso powder dissolves. Stir in chocolate and 1 tablespoon butter and stir until melted and smooth. Cool completely.

Transfer vanilla ice cream to mixer bowl and allow to soften slightly. Add 2 tablespons Kahlua and beat on low speed to blend. Spread over bottom of cooled crust and freeze until firm. Spread cooled chocoalte sauce over ice cream in pie. Freeze until firm.

Transfer chocolate ice cream to mixer bowl and blend in remaining 2 tablespoons Kahula as above. Spread chocolate ice cream over sauce in pie. Freeze until firm.

To serve, pipe decorative border of whipped cream on pie around inside edge. Garnish with chocolate-covered coffee beans.

KAHLUA ICE CREAM-'N-COOKIES SANDWICHES

1 quart vanilla, chocolte, chocolate chip or coffee ice cream
1 teaspoon espresso powder
¼ cup Kahlua
32 3- to 4-inch store-bought cookies, such as oatmeal, chocolate chip, macaroon, sugar or an assortment of flavors
4 ounces semi-sweet chocolate, melted

Transfer ice cream to mixer bowl and soften lightly. Add espresso powder (may be omitted if using coffee ice cream) and Kahula and beat on low speed to blend. Place in freezer until almost firm.

Scoop about ¼ cup ice cream onto each of 16 cookies. Top each with another cookie and press until ice cream comes out to edge of cookies and a flat sandwich is formed. Arrange on tray and freeze until firm.

Remove ice cream sandwiches from freezer and drizzle chocolate in random fashion over tops. Freeze to set chocolate, then wrap each sandwich in plastic and store until needed.

Kahlua Colada Parfaits with the tantalizing taste of Kahlua, pineapple, coconut, rum and vanilla ice cream will transport you to an island paradise.

Increasing fiber intake

Although fiber contains no protein, fat or carbohydrates, it is an essential part of the diet.

"There is considerable evidence that diets high in fiber can lower blood pressure and cholesterol level, thus reducing the rish of heart attack. A high fiber diet also can help an individual lose weight, prevent intestinal diseases and even certain types of cancers such as breast cancer and prostate cancer," said Cindy Rowell, outpatient dietitian at Methodist Hospital.

Dietary fiber comes from plant cells only. It is actually the part of the plant that the human body is unable to digest, but fiber still works to improve health.

"In order to reap the benefits of a high fiber diet, Americans should increase their current consumption of about 11 grams of fiber daily to between 20 to 30 grams daily because of adverse side effects," said Rowell.

To increase fiber in the diet, Rowell suggests choosing cereals, breads and pastas made with whole grains and whole-grain flours. Select foods from the fruit and vegetable group such as apples, pears, peaches and potatoes with the skin. Cooked dry peas and beans are also an excellent source of fiber.

The following is a recipe for make-it-yourself high fiber cereal.

HIGH FIBER CEREAL

2 cups oats
2 cups wheat bran or oat bran
2 cups wheat germ
½ cup slivered almonds
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 cup rye or white flakes (optional)
1 cup dates
1 cup dried fruit

Add fresh fruit and a little sugar or honey just before serving. Makes 11 cups.

Expectant mothers, children vulnerable to foodborne illness

What makes these groups particularly susceptible?

Dr. Mitchell Cohen at the Centers for Disease Control, Atlanta, explained: "Any illness a pregnant woman contracts can affect her unborn child who immune system is too immature to fight back." To a lesser extent, Cohen said, newborns and children under one are also more vulnerable because of underdeveloped immune systems.

But you can control the risks. By following the basic rules of food safety, whether you're eating at home or out, you can act to prevent foodborne illness.

Eating out. Everyone likes eating out, but to protect yourself from possible illness, make sure your food is well-cooked. Don't eat any partially-cooked hamburgers, rare roast beef, raw or underdone fish or raw oysters. Also avoid foods with raw or undercooked eggs, like Caesar salad. Don't eat any unpasteurized dairy products like imported soft cheese or raw "natural" milk.

These foods have on thing in common — they can contain bacteria or other harmful organisms that could make you quite sick.

At home. You need to be careful at home too. Take perishable food straight home from the grocery. Use meat, poultry and fish withing a day or two to freeze it. Never eat raw or undercooked meat, poultry, seafood or eggs. Meat and fish should be cooked all the way through and soups and casseroles should "bubble." Don't nibble uncooked cookie dough containing raw eggs.

Make sure your baby's formula doesn't get contaminated with bacteria or other organisms. How could this happen? Say you've been cutting raw chicken or steak, then fit the liner into your baby's bottle without washing your hands. Your hands could be a source of foodborne bacteria.

The cat question. If you're pregnant and don't have a cat, this isn't a good time to get one. If you're pregnant and already have a cat, someone else should be cleaning out the litter box. Why? Cat feces can contain a parasite that can cause an illness called toxoplasmosis. If you touch anything the cat's feces have touched, like litterbox contents, then touch food without thoroughly washing your hands, you may become ill.

Another foodborne bacteria, Listeria monocytogenes, can also cause miscarriage and illness in newborns. Listeria has been found in unpasteurized milk, imported cheese, hot dogs, lunch meats and spreads.

To control listeria, refrigerate any food marked "refrigerate." Don't buy or use foods that are past their "use-by" dates. Don't keep lunch meats or spreads more than two weeks after you buy them. And use or discard open packages in 3-4 days.

More questions? Call the toll-free Meat and Poultry Hotline at 1-800-535-4555, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. weekdays.

Court to review federal regulations on abortion counseling

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court agreed today to review federal regulations that bar government-financed family planning clinics from counseling about abortion.

Critics of the regulations, issued by the Reagan administration in 1988, allege they violate free-speech and abortion rights.

At stake is the future scope of a federal program with a $200 million yearly budget. The program funds over 4,000 clinics serving some 5 million low-income women nationwide.

In other action, the court:

— Agreed to decide whether states may impose mandatory life sentences without possibility of parole for people convicted of possessing large amounts of drugs.

The justices said they will study the appeal of Ronald Harmelin, convicted in Oak Park, Mich., of possessing more than 650 grams of cocaine.

— Broadened the protection against double jeopardy, saying that a motorist who pleads guilty to drunken driving in a fatal accident may not be prosecuted later for homicide.

The 5-4 ruling in a case from New York extends so-called double jeopardy protection against multiple prosecutions for some criminal defendants. The court said someone convicted of a relatively minor offense generally may not be retried on more serious charges based on the same alleged conduct.

— Rejected an appeal by two Ku Klux Klan groups and four men ordered to pay more than $800,000 for organizing a demonstration that turned into a violent attack on civil rights marchers in Georgia.

The court, without comment, let stand a ruling that the punitive-damages award did not violate the free-speech rights of the KKK and its sympathizers.

— Increased the federal government's power to keep some criminal defendants behind bars while they await trial, even if a key bail law was violated.

The justices, by a 6-3 vote, spared the government from having to free on bail some defendants deemed to be dangerous or a risk to flee before trial.

— Refused to revive a lawsuit in behalf of a child abused after Illinois officials placed her isn the home of her aunt and uncle.

The court, without comment, turned away arguments that public officials should not be shielded from federal suits when they knowingly expose children to abuse in foster homes.

A federal appeals court in New York upheld the ban on abortion counseling but other federal courts ruled it is unconstitutional. The high court's decision, expected sometime in 1991, should resolve the conflicting rulings.

The family planning program, enacted by Congress as Title X of the Public Health Service Act, pays for creating and operating family planning clinics. The 1982 law forbids clinics to use the federal money to perform abortions, but initial regulations let the clinic staffs tell women about the abortion option.

After those regulations drew fire from anti-abortion groups, the government barred clinics from using federal money to advise women that abortion is an option or to refer them to abortion clinics.

The newer regulations say federally funded clinics may not "encourage, promote or advocate abortion as a method of family planning" or distribute written materials on abortion.

The regulations also require a family planning clinic that receives federal money to keep physically and financially separate any abortion clinic it might operate without federal money.

New York state and New York City officials, the directors of two family planning clinics, Planned Parenthood and other organizations challenged the 1988 regulations in federal court.

Feeding the stars

Honolulu — A trainer feeds some of the eight Atlantic bottle-nosed dolphins at the Dolphin Quest program at the Hyatt Regency Waikoloa in Hawaii earlier this year. The constant demand for dolphins at theme parks, aquariums and swim-with-the-dolphins attractions such as Dolphin Quest has sent prices for the animals soaring.

Nazi experments found scientifically worthless

BOSTON (AP) — Nazi medical experiments on concentration camp prisoners were more than brutal and unethical, a report today concludes. They were also bad science.

Researchers and ethicists have been debating whether the results of German experiments conducted during World War II should be used by modern-day experts studying the effects of cold on the body.

At the Dachau concentration camp, Nazi doctors plunged prisoners into icy water, often for hours at a time, so they could test various methods of rewarming them.

Some experts have contended that regardless of their source, the data should still be used to help doctors treat hypothermia, or low body temperature. Others believe that no matter how valuable the information, it should be ignored because of the unacceptable methods used to obtain it.

The latest report concludes that this long-running ethical debate should end, because the Nazi data has no value to anyone.

"The implication was that there was this great information, and we could save lives if only we could use it," said Dr. Robert L. Berger, a surgeon at New England Deaconess Hospital in Boston.

After reviewing the original Nazi data, however, Berger discovered that the experiments were so poorly set up and carried out that the results cannot be believed.

"The data are useless," he said. "It's not scientific. It should be rejected outright. There should be no ethical discussion over it. You don't discuss scientifically useless data. You discuss data that have scientific merit but were obtained in an unethical fashion."

Berger presented his findings and conclusions in today's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

In an accompanying editorial, Dr. Marcia Angell, the journal's executive editor, said, "The notion that there exists a treasure trove of valid information on hypothermia, from which we are voluntarily and fastidiously holding ourselves aloof, seems to be baseless."

Ethicist Arthur Caplan of the University of Minnesota, who organized a conference last year on Nazi science, said other Nazi research into such areas as genetics and anthropology has already been absorbed into the mainstream of science.

"Berger appears to give a persuasive argument that there is not much to argue about with respect to hypothermia," Caplan said. "That doesn't mean the ethical debate about Nazi science and medicine should be dismissed out of hand."

Dr. Robert Pozos of the University of Washington, who in the past has advocated use of the Nazi results, said after reading Berger's report that the experimenters' scientific methods were "atrocious." He added, "My opinion is that the data should not be referenced" in other research papers. "It should not be used."

The experiments were intended to find the best way to treat victims of hypothermia, especially German fliers who were shot down over the cold North Sea. Male civilians of various religions and nationalities, as well as Russian prisoners of war, were forced to participate.

The subjects were plunged into a tank of ice water, often naked, and then rewarmed with various methods. Some died after spending several hours in the tank. Others were killed by the rewarming, which included throwing the men into boiling water.

Berger found that such basic details as the men's ages, nutritional status, general health and blood pressures were missing. Also frequently unrecorded were many particulars about the experiments and their results, such as water temperatures, length of time in the water and the survival rates after various rewarming methods.

Some findings were so physiologically improbable that they were probably fabricated, Berger concluded. Among these was the conclusion that people die of hypothermia in the water only if their necks are submerged.

He also noted that Dr. Sigmund Rascher, the chief experimenter, was accused of faking other experiments and had sold saddles, riding breeches and handbags made from human skin.

Rascher was eventually executed by the Germans for kidnapping children. He had claimed that his wife had three babies in quick succession after age 48. The hoax was intended to please Heinrich Himmler, head of the German concentration camps, by proving that the growth of the Aryan people could be speeded up by extending women's childbearing years.

teachers recently nominated him for the prestigious "Principal of the Year." He was named Best Principal in Region 18. Now his resume and accomplishments are being measured against 19 others across Texas in competition for Best Principal in the State.

The announcement of the winner will come two days before Cregar's retirement officially begins.

Cregar said "retirement" may leave him busier than while he was "working." He will pursue his hobbies, hunting and fishing at his cabin on Lake Thomas, as well as regular golf games.

Most important will be his continued work with the kids at Elbow, he said. He plans to volunteer in the school music program beginning in the fall.

"I want to give back some of what was given to me here," he said. "I don't want any money, just to be able to work with the kids and see them grow."

A reception begins at 11 a.m. Thursday for Cregar at Elbow. It will continue in the foyer until 6 p.m. Parents, former students and community members are invited. Refreshments will be provided.

The reception is co-hosted by the Elbow teachers and the parent-teacher organization, the PAT club.

SWCID to get building

By DEBBIE LINCECUM
Staff Writer

A new building will soon become part of the SouthWest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf campus, president Bob Riley said Tuesday at the regular meeting of the Howard County Junior College District board of trustees.

Formerly the Non-Commissioned Officer's Club at the old Webb Air Force Base, the building is adjacent to SWCID and was previously owned by the city of Big Spring. If all goes well, Riley said, it will become the new Student Union when the district completes its purchase.

"The city turned the building over to GSA (General Services Administration) to help us get it. This has been about eight or nine months ago. We applied for it last summer and now we're real close to having it," Riley said.

The building is in good condition for the most part, Riley said. It contains an auditorium, food service facilities and dance hall, all perfect for use by the college, he said. Repairs to the heat and air conditioning units will be the major work needed, he said.

The hiring of four new employees was approved by board. Hired were:

- Lynn Simpson, biology instructor at South Plains College, as an addition to the Howard College department.
- Larry Beavers, formerly of Concho Career Institute, to join the automotive technology department.
- Dean Perkins, to take a part-time position as assistant director at the San Angelo campus.
- Sue Ann Hicks, a former consultant to the college's nursing program, as dean of nursing.

Resignations were accepted from four employees of the district:

- Keith Sibley, learning assistance coordinator at SWCID.
- Sophia Crawford, librarian assistant at SWCID.
- Diane Linhart, SWCID dean of students.
- Jerry Moller, Howard College dean of continuing education.

In other business, Riley announced the open house for the Davis Fitness Center on the Howard College campus, to be held Sunday at 2 p.m.

Riley said preparations for the next school year are underway in many areas. Residence halls are already at 85 percent occupancy, he said. The new halls are expected to be finished by the August 15 deadline.

The board approved a bid for furniture to go in the new halls. Collegiate Products, Inc. of Tulsa, Okla. will furnish the rooms and lounges for $24,709.

that are 25 years old and cinder block tanks, Luck said. Installing a tanks costs from $1,300 to $2,500, he said. Upgrading one costs about $1,000.

Of the three or four people that would be notified of violations, at least one would have to replace a tank, Luck said.

"He encroached on (the legal distance of) his neighbor's well," Luck said.

He said issuing citations would enable violations to be handled through the justice of the peace courts instead of having people arrested and brought to county court. Luck already has the legal authority to sign arrest warrants, he said, but that would be innappropriate and time consuming.

"I'd rather not do that if I don't have to," he said. "I don't want to harass the general public in that way."

The citation would simply be a non-moving environmental violation of the wastewater septic systems code to be issued by a sheriff's deputy, he told commissioners.

"We are attempting to protect our underground water stream and neighbor to neighbor relationship," said Luck, who has inspected and approved 22 county septic systems since October.

In other business Monday, commissioners:

- Agreed to petition for membership in the Big Country Resource Conservation and Development Council. Benefits for members include getting help with flood prevention and fixing washed-out roads, commissioners said.
- Added seven more citizens to an Overall Economic Development Plan Committee, bringing the total to 51. The committee will provide technical input into an economic plan to enable the county to apply for grants, public work projects and other ventures to attract industry.
- Voted to close the county library at noon on July 28 so employees can attend the county picnic.

Martin County, Stanton say no to incinerator

By MARCELLINO CHAVEZ
Staff Writer

STANTON — Martin County Commissioners and Stanton City Council members voted Tuesday not to allow the construction of an incinerator in the county.

The commissioners voted 3-2 against a host agreement with All-American Environmental Corp. of Brooklyn, N.Y., during their Tuesday morning meeting. Later that day the City Council voted unanimously against the proposal.

The host agreement would have paved the way for All-American to construct the incinerator in the southeast part of the county.

Church of Christ minister James Johnson presented the strongest opposition to the proposed incinerator. Johnson, who along with city and county officials toured a similar incinerator in McIntosh, Ala., recently, said he was unconvinced the burner could be operated safely.

"Gentlemen, from talking to Joel Franks, (a specialist in charge of maintenace supervision at Ciba-Geigy) I believe there are some inherent dangers that this company cannot guarantee," Johnson said. "There are some byproducts that when burned . . . are very toxic.

"There is a risk also to the city government and you as members that if All American Enviromental Corporation does not follow the rules, you can be held liable."

Johnson also presented a petition with more than 300 signatures opposing the incinerator.

One of the major questions concerning the incinerator was its filter system.

Joseph Capp of All American had defended the system earlier by saying, "The filter used to screen toxic by-products will be a combination wet scrubber and dry filter system. The $1.5 million filter system costs about twice as much but is better than either a wet-scrubber system or a dry filter. We believe the combination hybrid is the best way."

Another issue that Johnson raised was All American's land needs.

"At first they (All American Enviromental Corporation), said they needed only 40 acres for the incinerator. Now Mr. Capps is asking for 50 to 70 acres. What do they really want?" asked Johnson.

Johnson reminded the council that All American was asking for an additional 160 acres.

"Why are they asking for more land? To me it's a coincidence, because that's the amount the Enviromental Protection Agency requires for a landfill," he said.

County Judge Bob Deavenport added, "They have quoted different figures. They have stated different things at different times."

The vote was taken at about 12:20 p.m. Deavenport and commissioners Ronnie Deatherage and James N. Biggs voted against the agreement, while commissioners Donald L. Tollison and E.D. Holcomb voted in favor of the proposal.

In other business, the commissioners heard a report from Craig Graves on better air-conditioning at the Community Center. The proposal would place Geo-thermal heat pumps at the center. Along with the heat pumps, a proposal on insulation was also recommended, with the total cost to the county for both propositions listed around $70,000.

Obscene calls

Gilliland said it's important to contact the phone company's local service representative.

"When the person contacts the busines office we would go over these steps," he said. "If they want some action, we would refer them to the Big Spring Police Department or the Howard County Sheriff's Office.

"We work very closely with the law enforcement agencies. They have a form that gives us permission to determine what number the call is coming from."

Big Spring Police Lt. Terry Chamness said if a citizen makes a complaint about annoying or harassing calls, the department makes a report then gives the telephone company a Line Identification Request, or asks for a phone trap.

Gilliland said the information is entered into the computer at the central office, which keeps track of all calls going through its system.

The person receiving calls is instructed to log the time and date of the annoying call and notify Bell's business office, he said. The computer matches calls made to the person with calls entered in the person's log, Gilliland said.

The phone company can then determine which from which telephone the obscene or harassing call was made, he said.

"This information is then provided back to the local law enforcement agency be it the police department or the sheriff's department," Gilliland said. "At that time whatever happens then is up to the local law enforcement agency and the customers receiving the calls."

Chamness said the department tries to determine who was making the obscene or harassing calls from the telephone in question.

"We'll contact the people who own the phone and go out and question them," Chamness said. "A lot of time it's kids playing with the phone."

The department takes statements about why the calls were placed, Chamness said, "and if it's a prosecutable case, we'll go ahead and turn it over to the county attorney."

The offense is a class B misdemeanor, Chamness said, and maximum punishment is a fine of $1,000 and a jail term of 180 days.

Gilliland said there has been no epidemic of harassing calls, although the numbers do run in cycles.

"We have quite a few of these but I don't consider it a major problem," he said. "If our customers are being annoyed by the telephone, we still consider it a major problem.

"It's more a frequent thing — more than occasional. And, it kind of runs in cycles. We'll go a while with none and its seems there're spells where there're a lot of calls being received."

Gilliland said the cycles generally peak when children are out of school. Chamness said Big Spring has a problem like any other city, but many of the calls are placed by children.

"We get our fair share like any city does," Chamness said. "We do get the same thing — especially when we're dealing with children. On holidays and when school's out during the summertime we get a lot more."

Chamness cautioned parents that letting their children make annoying calls ultimately can result in removal of the telephone.

"It is a crime and the phone company does have that right," he said. "Mom and Dad can lose their phone because the calls can be traced."

nominees, but Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said he expected senators to finish that task today and be summoned into another session.

"I fought to the bitter end," Lewis said after abandoning an effort to turn around votes in the House. The Senate voted to override Clements last week, but both chambers must do so by a two-thirds margin for a bill to take effect over a governor's objections.

In urging an override vote, Rep. Mark Stiles, D-Beaumont, said: "I do not believe that we are going to get a better piece of legislation out of this Legislature."

In vetoing the bill last week, Clements spoke against the half-cent sales tax increase lawmakers want to help fund the measure. He also predicted the bill would lead to a state income tax and higher local property taxes, and he said he wants more reforms in the way education is administered.

But Rep. Ernestine Glossbrenner, D-Alice, the bill's sponsor, said, "This bill does not require an income tax. It does not require heavy additional local property taxes."

Rep. Eddie Cavazos, D-Corpus Christi, said after the House adjourned that a court-written plan is looking more attractive to those who represent poor school districts and feel they have already compromised too much to try to win Clements' approval of a bill.

"We've done the best we can, and they won't accept it. That's fine. Let them try to deal with a master," said Cavazos, chairman of the House Mexican American Legislative Caucus.

Kilgarlin has said because he cannot raise state taxes, his plan could divert state aid from wealthier to poorer schools. The $13.5 billion-a-year school finance system relies on state money, local property taxes and some federal funds.

The way the school reform bill was written, if no additional money was pumped into the system state aid also could be shifted from wealthy districts to poor ones.

Time to start putting odds on LL tournament

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

Little League season is winding down and it's about time to start thinking about the City Little League tournament.

The Little league tournament is a double elimination affair which features all 17 Little League teams in the county.

This tournament is one of the best sporting events in the Spring City. Since my five-year tenure in Big Spring, I can't remember a single city tournament that wasn't exciting.

Steve's stuff

Last year was a really great tournament, because it seemed like the old mentor prevailed against all the new kids on the block.

I'm talking long time American League manager Johnnie Hobbs, who heads the Colts. The Colts were one of the favorites last year, mainly because they were the defending champions. But there were perhaps four teams that had better shots of taking the title from the Colts.

It looked bad when the Colts lost their opening tournament game, a 8-7 decision to the International League Tigers. But the Colts rebounded by winning six straight games; on their way to winning their second consecutive league title.

Their 9-4 win over the IL Tigers in the finals was a thing of beauty. The Colts did some wild base running, swiping 10 bases against the puzzled Tigers.

But like last year, it seems the power is riding in the International league. Last year the IL had the best overall performance, as the Tigers finished second, the Rebels third and the Indians fifth.

This year the International League Rebels and Indians still have strong teams. In three games, the Indians hold a 2-1 advantage. It's the only games either team has lost. They still have one more league confrontation left however.

Guess who's leading the American League? If you said the two-time defending champ Colts you're right. Hobbs and Crew are currently 6-0 in play, and the rest of the teams are a couple of games back.

One team that has been really hot is the National League Rangers, who currently lead their league with a 9-3 record, two games ahead of the Ponys. The Rangers have won six of their last eight games, moving from first to third place.

A mystery team that seems to be a strong contender is the Coahoma Lions, the only county team still sporting a perfect record. The 12-0 Lions have already clinched their league title, and also beaten everyone in the American Little League.

How they stand up against International League and National League teams remains to be seen.

It's going to be an unpredictable tournament that's for sure. There won't be a team that that goes uncontested through the tournament. Can the Colts threepeat? Are the Coahoma Lions for real? Can The Rebels reach that elusive goal they just missed last year? Will the Rangers stay hot? Can the Indians take over the fort?

These questions plus many more will be answered in a couple of weeks.

Players guilty over Johnson's firing

CINCINNATI (AP) — There's plenty of guilt to go around in the New York Mets clubhouse over the firing of manager Davey Johnson.

His players took it personally Tuesday when Johnson, who led them to a World Series championship in 1986, was replaced by coach Bud Harrelson. Johnson, known for his easy-going approach, was unable to shake the club out of a two-season decline.

The strongest reactions came from Darryl Strawberry and Kevin McReynolds, both of whom said they probably would leave the team when their contracts expire. Strawberry's contract ends after this season, McReynolds' after next season.

"This pretty much finalizes my future. I can't see me coming back," Strawberry told The (Newark) Star Ledger.

McReynolds said, "Davey was a friend, I like him a lot. I can't see me coming back here after my contract runs out."

Other players toned down their remarks.

"It's just a shame we didn't play better," pitcher David Cone said. "You cut through all the fat, and that's what it comes down to. That's why Davey lost his job."

"I think we all feel like we let Davey down," pitcher Ron Darling said. "I think some of us had differences with him, but we respected him."

Strawberry also praised Johnson.

"Davey did a super job in this organization," Strawberry said.

"For us to play the way we've played is disgusting."

The timing of the firing took some players by surprise, but not the move itself. After a 3-5 West Coast trip this month marred by ragged play, they expected a shake-up.

"Everybody thought something was going to happen. Whether it was a trade — which still may happen — or something in the front office, we didn't know," Cone said.

General manager Frank Cashen flew to Cincinnati on Monday night to break the news to Johnson. The manager knew as soon as they met Tuesday morning that he was gone.

"When he walked in his first words were, 'Frank, it's been a great run and I thank you for giving me a chance,'" Cashen said.

The players went to Riverfront Stadium several hours early for their game against Cincinnati, won by the Reds 2-1. They were informed of the change by Cashen and protected from the media by a locked clubhouse door.

Later, even players who had publicly questioned Johnson's moves felt guilty that he lost his job over their 20-22 record. The disagreements didn't seem so pronounced.

"It was like a family relationship," said Darling, who has bristled over his demotion to the bullpen. "He was always trying to tell me what to do and I was always rebelling. We've had our differences."

Darling said the firing might provide a needed breather for Johnson.

"When you start managing, you

Clyde finds shooting touch

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The home cooking still tastes great in Portland. And this time Clyde Drexler was sitting at the table.

Drexler emerged from a playoff shooting slump to score 32 points, including the go-ahead free throws with 34 seconds to play, as the Trail Blazers beat the Phoenix Suns 120-114 Tuesday night to take a 3-2 lead in the Western Conference finals.

The Blazers, who are 9-0 at home in the playoffs, can clinch their first appearance in the NBA championship series in 13 years with a victory Thursday night in Phoenix, where they have been blown out twice in the series.

For Drexler, who was 13 of 24 from the field and had 10 rebounds, the game was a vindication of sorts. His outside jumper had been missing in action — he went into the game shooting 40.5 percent in the playoffs — and he'd taken a beating in print.

Golden State coach Don Nelson was quoted as saying he was overrated and selfish. San Antonio's Willie Anderson called him a dirty player.

If the Suns win at home Thursday night, they'll play Game 7 Saturday in Portland, where Phoenix has now lost 20 in a row.

The Suns had a five-point lead with 6:23 remaining, but couldn't hold it.

Phoenix trailed by as many as 12 points in the first half before rallying to take a 106-101 lead with 6:23 left. A four-point play — a 3-pointer by Drexler and a free throw by Kevin Duckworth on the play — helped bring Portland back.

The Trail Blazers tied it 109-109 on a short jumper by Terry Porter with 4:59 to go. Phoenix had four chances to regain the lead before Jerome Kersey's two free throws put Portland ahead with 2:54 left.

Then Drexler's dunk on a fast break made it 113-109 with 2:30 to play.

Mark West made one of two free throws with 1:53 to go before Dan Majerle scored inside to make it 113-112 with 1:16 left.

Chambers then made two free throws for a 114-113 Phoenix lead with 47 seconds to play, but the Trail Blazers regained the lead when Drexler was fouled by Majerle and made both free throws.

After Majerle missed a shot for Phoenix, Jeff Hornacek grabbed the rebound, but lost the ball in a scramble. Williams was fouled on the play and gave Portland a 117-114 lead with 15 seconds left.

Hornacek missed a 3-pointer with six seconds to go, Kersey got the rebound and made one of two free throws with 5.2 seconds left.

Kersey had 21 points and 11 rebounds and Porter scored 19. Kevin Johnson had 28 points and 14 assists and Chambers 22 points and 13 rebounds for the Suns, but he was just 6-for-21 from the field.

A 16-1 run — including two 3-pointers by Porter — gave the Trail Blazers a 25-18 lead with 3:05 left in the first period after a strong start by Phoenix.

The Suns narrowed the margin to 33-31 on Kevin Johnson's three-point play with 9:47 left in the first half. But an 11-2 Portland spurt boosted the margin to 44-33 on Porter's 18-footer 6:37 before intermission.

The Blazers stretched the lead to 12 twice in the second quarter before settling for a 64-57 halftime advantage.

Drexler, averaging 18.7 points in the playoffs, was 8-for-15 in the first half, when he scored 18 points and had eight rebounds.

The Suns outscored Portland 8-1 to start the second half, tying the score 65-65 on Johnson's 20-footer with 9:06 left in the third period. The score was tied again, 67-67, before the Blazers used a 14-4 run to pull ahead by 10.

Phoenix narrowed the margin to six later in the quarter and trailed 91-84 after Kersey fouled Eddie Johnson on a shot from halfcourt at the buzzer. Johnson made one of the two free throws.

Kevin Johnson had 17 points and seven assists in the first half for Phoenix. Chambers scored 12 points, but was only 3-for-12 from the field.

After being outrebounded in two one-sided losses in Phoenix, the Blazers had a 29-19 advantage on the boards in the first half, including an 11-5 edge in offensive rebounds.

Struggling Agassi avoids upset

PARIS (AP) — The purge of top seeds at the French Open stopped today. Andre Agassi, the top man left in the tournament, overcame a sluggish start to win in straight sets and women's first seed Steffi Graf breezed despite allergy problems.

Fourth-seeded Gabriela Sabatini also won, although she blew two match points in the second set before advancing to the third round as well.

French Open

A day after No. 1 Stefan Edberg and No. 2 Boris Becker were eliminated to leave him atop the men's draw, the third-seeded Agassi moved his pink-and-black tennis outfit and screaming shots to center court, and beat Canadian qualifier Todd Woodbridge 7-5, 6-1, 6-3.

The American struggled early, blowing a 4-0 first-set lead and holding off five set points. He turned it around just as quickly and allowed Woodbridge just four games the rest of the way.

There was none of the surliness that marked Agassi's first-round victory. In fact, he was cheered [illegible] by thousands of children at the tournament for a school holiday, and did some showboating at the end, hitting the ball into the stands after match point and jumping over the net.

Graf beat Jennifer Santrock 6-1, 6-2 and said afterward that she was troubled by sinus and ear problems diagnosed as an allergy to "something in Paris — the clay, the air or something." She has had similar medical problems at past French Opens.

The way Graf played against Santrock, there was not even a hint she was feeling less than 100 percent.

Santrock, from Plano, Texas, made the tournament as a "lucky loser" from qualifying when former champion Hana Mandlikova withdrew with an injury. She won her first-round match over Britain's Sarah Loosemore, but against Graf her luck ran out.

The world's top women's player, out to regain the French Open title, breezed through the first set and broke in the fifth game of the second set, wrapping up the victory in just 51 minutes.

Sabatini had a tougher time before defeating Susan Sloane 6-0, 5-7, 6-1.

Also among the winners on the third day of the clay-court Grand Slam were eighth-seeded Andrei Chesnokov of the Soviet Union, who beat Jean-Philippe Fleurian of France 7-6, 6-1, 6-0; 13th-seeded Jim Courier of the United States, who beat Milan Sjreber of Czechoslovakia 7-6, 6-1, 2-6, 6-2; and 1988 runner-up Henri Leconte, a 6-4, 6-2, 6-1 winner over Bruno Oresar of Yugoslavia. Women's 11th seed Jana Novotna also advanced with a 6-1, 6-1 victory over Brenda Schultz of the Netherlands.

Plenty went wrong for Edberg and Becker on Tuesday.

Two European teen-agers, Sergi Bruguera and Goran Ivanisevic, knocked the top two seeds out of a Grand Slam tournament in the first round for the first time in history, and left the men's field wide open.

"I think this is going to be one of the most exciting French Opens, because someone unexpected could win it," Courier said.

In accomplishing their historic twin killing, Bruguera and Ivanisevic may have given Ivan Lendl an added hurdle to clear in his bid for a desperately sought first Wimbledon championship and handed a tiny London suburb — rather than Paris — the chance to host the top men's tournament in the world next week.

Bruguera and Ivanisevic provided an extra 12 days of grass-court practice to the world's two top grass-court players, Becker and Edberg, who between them have won four of the last five Wimbledon's titles.

Bruguera beat Edberg, the top seed in the men's field and breathing down the absent Lendl's

San Jac freshman handcuffs No. 1 team

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo. (AP) — San Jacinto freshman Robert Henkel pitched "an incredible game" in his coach's mind, beating top-ranked Seminole, Okla. 7-2 to send his club against second-rated Middle Georgia tonight in the National Junior College World Series.

Henkel, who struck out eight and scattered five hits, said he was "dead tired" at the start of the eighth inning with San Jacinto leading 7-1 Tuesday night.

When Seminole made it 7-2, Coach Wayne Graham went to the bullpen for David Klvac, who shut down the Trojans the rest of the way.

Seminole, 88-4, has finished second in the national tournament three times, twice to San Jacinto and once to Middle Georgia.

"We have to come out and do the job," Trojan Coach Lloyd Simmons said. "The past is past."

Middle Georgia, 50-4, and third-ranked San Jacinto, 59-10, are the only unbeaten teams left in the tournament, while Seminole, Treasure Valley and Mesa each have one loss.

San Jacinto took a 2-0 lead over Seminole, 88-4, on John Abercrombie's first homer, a two-run shot in the first. Abercrombie led off the third with a solo homer and the Gators made it 5-0 that inning on Joe Sommer's two-run triple.

The Gators got their sixth and seventh run in the seventh by capitalizing on a wild pitch, and error, a double by Wade Sholmire and a single by Jason Choate.

Seminole scored a run in the third on a walk, an error and a fielder's choice, and made it 7-2 in the eighth on another error that allowed a runner in. The Trojans, who came into the national tournament batting .377 as a team, managed just five hits.

Mesa's Scott Dukes drove in four runs and Eric Alexander sent three more across Tuesday as Mesa, Ariz., survived a four-hour, poorly pitched game to eliminate Normandale 13-11 earlier Tuesday.

Mesa, 38-20, jumped to a 4-0 lead in the second that started with Mario Munoz's solo homer. The Thunderbirds got a two-run homer from Dukes in the third. Mesa starter Albie Lopez earned the victory.

Normandale, finishing its season at 31-5, got close in the fifth when Bryan larson's grand slam made it 9-7. Starter Steve McNamara, the first of six Lion pitchers, took the loss.

Treasure Valley's Cody Kosman hit a solo home run in the bottom of the eighth against Louisburg to snap a tie and lift the Chukars to their 8-7 victory.

The win eliminated Louisburg, 48-5, from the tournament.

Treasure Valley, 48-15, took a quick 5-0 lead in the first on a home run by Boe Simmons and RBI singles by Ryan Seidler, Snawn Barrett and Kosman, who drrove in two runs. The rally chased starter Shane Lay

Lewis might skip Goodwill Games

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Carl Lewis, long billed as one of the star athletes in the Goodwill Games, indicated that he probably would not be competing in th July event at Seattle.

Lewis, winner of six Olympic gold medals, the world record-holder in the 100-meter dash and unbeaten in 62 consecutive long jump competitions, said the decision on whether he competes would be up to The Athletics Congress.

TAC, the national governing body for track and field, adopted a rule in December disqualfying any athlete not competing in the national championships from the Goodwill Games.

Player gets off easy for punching cop

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Portland Trail Blazers rookie Cliff Robinson pleaded guilty to punching a policewoman outside a Portland bar and was sentenced to a year of probation and fined $250 for fourth-degree assault, a misdemeanor.

Multnomah County District Judge Nely Johnson also ordered the 23-year-old player to perform 50 hours of community service and to undergo counseling for anger management.

NCAA takes bundle from Wolfpack hoops

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The NCAA has stripped North Carolina State of 90 percent of the school's net earnings from men's basketball tournaments during the two years a former player admitted accepting money in violation of collegiate rules.

In February, Charles Shackleford, who now plays with the NBA New Jersey Nets, admitted accepting more than $60,000 from two men during his final two years at N.C. State. He said one payment had been from a sports agent seeking to represent him and the other had been a loan that he since has repaid.

The NCAA prohibits students from accepting money from fans or athletic-program boosters while competing in intercollegiate athletics. Students who do so are ruled ineligible.

The payment of $365,180 to the NCAA will come from money raised by the athletic department, such as revenue from ticket sales and television contracts, said Harold Hopfenberg, NCSU's outgoing athletics director.

Becky French, NCSU counsel, said Tuesday that no decision would be made on whether to file suit against Shackleford to recoup the loss until related criminal investigations were concluded.

"We don't want to intervene and file a civil suit while a criminal investigation is going on," French told The News and Observer of Raleigh. "When that is over, we will definitely make a decision."

N.C. State was informed of the latest penalty in a letter dated May 22 from David Berst, the NCAA's assistant executive director for enforcement. That letter, addressed to Chancellor Larry Monteith, was made public Tuesday.

The fine would have been much greater if the Wolfpack had done better in the 1987 and 1988 tournaments, Shackleford's sophomore and junior years. The team lost in the first round both years, bowing to Florida in 1987 and Murray State the next year.

Berst asked the university to return the tournament earnings "as soon as possible," but set no deadline.

neck in the hunt for the world's No. 1 ranking.

Then Ivanisevic beat Becker, the second seed and defending Wimbledon champion.

First-round losses by the first two seeds never occurred before in any Grand Slam tournament. And so Lendl's strategy of skipping the French Open, where he would have been the favorite, to get an extra week's grasscourt practice at a local tournament in Beckenham, England, next week, appeared to be in tatters — and Beckenham might be getting some high-class late entries.

"Obviously, I won't be playing any more on clay," Edberg said after Bruguera, a 19-year-old from Barcelona, Spain, beat him on center court 6-4, 6-2, 6-1.

Becker was in a bit less of a rush to the lawnmower after losing to Ivanisevcic, an 18-year-old from Split, Yugoslavia.

Ironically, for a tournament where upsets usually come in bunches during the first two days, Edberg and Becker were the only seeds to lose Tuesday.

The teen-age brigade near the top of the women's rankings all advanced, led by second-seeded Monica Seles and defending champion Arantxa Sanchez Vicario.

Seles, 16, shut out Katia Piccolini of Italy 6-0, 6-0, while Sanchez Vicario, 18 years old and seeded third, beat Noelle Van Lottum of France 6-1, 6-3.

Other winning women included No. 6 Manuela Maleeva, No. 7 Mary Joe Fernandez, No. 10 Natalia Zvereva and No. 16 Laura Gildemeister, along with unseeded Jennifer Capriati, the 14-year-old American ranked 28th and making her Grand Prix debut.

Winners among the men's seeds were No. 4 Andres Gomez, No. 5 Aaron Krickstein, No. 7 Thomas Muster, No. 10 Martin Jaite, No. 14 Magnus Gustafsson and No. 12 Juan Aguilerra.

age in dog years," he said.

Dave Magadan, another who has feuded with Johnson, felt no joy in his departure.

"You don't like to see anybody get fired," he said. "Now I know what other teams go through.

"Frank (Cashen) is not the bad guy. We have a hand in his firing."

The first sign of change came during the team's meeting with Harrelson, who insisted that the club's curfew and other rules of conduct be followed.

"We discussed the rules that have been in existence since '84, which I think players really didn't pay attention to," Harrelson said. "I think they agree they've been abusing the set-down rules for a while. I think they agree it's in the best interest of the club to start living up to those rules."

An example: both Magadan and Cone said they didn't know what the curfew was.

"He's just tightening up the rules. That's how I'd describe it," Darling said.

Harrelson is considered more outspoken than Johnson, whose easy-going approach was second-guessed in the media. Cincinnati coach Sam Perlozzo, fired as a coach last year by the Mets, said there's no telling whether a more direct approach would work.

"When I was there, I probably would like to have seen Davey get a little more upset with the guys," Perlozzo said. "I don't know if that would have worked, but I would have liked to have seen him try.

"He felt people were professional people, that he didn't have to babysit them. That's what he believed. There's no easier man to play for than Davey. If you can't play for him, you shouldn't be in the game."

Players agreed with Cashen that they've lost the attitude that carried them to a National League East title in 1988. Strawberry said getting that back will be the biggest challenge.

"It's so hard," he said. "I don't know what you have to do to get that killer instinct. I hope we get it back because it's not really there now."

"Buddy will be OK," pitcher Dwight Gooden said. "But it's the same situation, pretty much. We've got to win."

NEW YORK (AP) — Mel Gibson takes along a lot of baggage when he hits the road to make a movie — his wife and six kids.

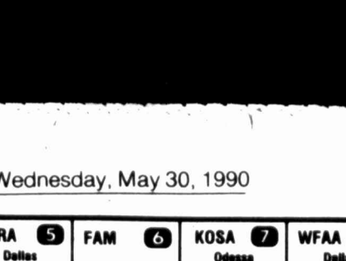
"I couldn't concentrate otherwise," the actor said.

"I get more done when they're around because I know where everyone is and I can relax," Gibson said in the June 4 issue of People magazine.

The youngest in the Gibson brood is 5 months and the oldest is 9.

Gibson, 34, who stars with Goldie Hawn in the romantic comedy "Bird on a Wire," said his 5-year-old son Will wants to follow in his acting footsteps.

Gibson said he asked the boy why and Will responded, "'So I can take your place when you die.'"



MEL GIBSON

CAROL BURNETT

"He was quite serious," Gibson said. "It was rather sweet and cracked me up."

NEW YORK (AP) — Carol Burnett is ready to get mad. The actress says she used her 12-year hiatus from weekly television learning how.

The comedian and star of NBC's "Carol & Company" said in the June 4 issue of People magazine that her suppression of anger contributed to the 1982 breakup of her 20-year marriage to Joe Hamilton, executive producer of "The Carol Burnett Show."

With the divorce and some therapy since that show went off the air in 1978, Burnett said she came to realize "nobody is going to drop dead if I tell them I don't like something."

"There's a way to explain how you feel in an honest, straightforward way, instead of stuffing your feelings," she said. "I'm finally learning to say, 'I don't want to,' or, 'I'm not happy with this.'"

County, city say no to incinerator

By MARCELLINO CHAVEZ
Staff Writer

STANTON — Martin County Commissioners and Stanton City Councilmembers voted Tuesday not to allow the construction of an incinerator in the county.

The commissioners voted 3-2 against a host agreement with All-American Environmental Corp. of Brooklyn, N.Y. during their Tuesday morning meeting. Later that day, the city council voted unanimously against the proposal.

The host agreement would have paved the way for All-American to construct the incinerator in the southeast part of the county.

"There are some byproducts that when burned . . . are very toxic. There is a risk also to the city government and you as members that if All American does not follow the rules, you can be held liable." — James Johnson.

Strongest opposition to the proposed incinerator came from local Church of Christ minister James Johnson. Johnson, who along with city and county officials toured a similar incinerator in McIntosh, Ala. recently, said he was unconvinced the burner could be operated safely.

"Gentlemen, from talking to Joel Franks, (a specialist in charge of maintenace supervision at Ciba-Geigy) I believe there are some inherited dangers that this company cannot guarantee," Johnson said.

"There are some byproducts that when burned . . . are very toxic," he added. "There is a risk also to the city government and you as members that if All American Enviromental Corporation does not follow the rules, you can be held liable."

Johnson also presented a petition with more than 300 signatures opposing the incinerator.

On of the major questions concerning the incinerator was its filter system.

Joseph Capp of All American had defended the system earlier by saying, "The filter used to screen toxic byproducts will be a combina-

Officials search for family

EL PASO (AP) — Social workers are trying to find the family of a man with Down's syndrome who was found wandering around a school.

The man, about 24 years old and known only as John Doe, can perform simple tasks and only understands simple commands, such as "take a shower" or "eat," his physician, Dr. Bernardo Ng, testified at a hearing Tuesday.

The hearing was held to determine where the man should be placed.

County Court-at-Law Judge Herb Cooper said he would withhold a ruling on committing the man to an institution until his family can be found or social workers determine the best place for him.

The man was picked up by police in front of an Elementary School May 21 after he tried to get on a school bus with special education students.

House fails to override finance veto

AUSTIN — Texas House Speaker Gib Lewis gavels voting to a close after lawmakers failed to override Gov. Clements' veto of a school finance reform bill Tuesday. The House failed by eight votes in the override attempt.

By PEGGY FIKAC
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — Buoyed by the House's failure to override his veto of a $555 million school finance reform bill, Gov. Bill Clements predicted the Legislature will quickly pass a measure he can accept.

"I think a compromise will be reached that will be acceptable to everybody concerned and will be an excellent bill," Clements said.

"I think in a matter of another week we'll have it all done and everybody can go home and have a good time," he said.

The House adjourned for this special session Tuesday, three days before a court deadline for overhauling the school finance system. It mustered a 92-55 vote to override Clements' veto, largely along party lines and short of the 100 required.

Stanton's representative, Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, voted in favor of the override.

House Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, said he expected Clements to call lawmakers back for a new session as soon as today. If so, it would be the Legislature's fourth special session on school finance, and a record sixth since last year's regular session ended.

"We will continue to negotiate, work with the governor and find out what issues that we can compromise with him," Lewis said. "One thing I am trying to prevent and I'm going to try the best I can is not allow a (court) master to write a school plan for the future of Texas education."

The Democrat-controlled Legislature designed the bill — which was vetoed by the Republican governor — to answer a unanimous Texas Supreme Court order to make more money available to poor schools.

If a measure is not enacted by Friday, a court-appointed special master will present the first draft of his own plan.

Clements wouldn't say when he will call lawmakers back into session. He has said lawmakers have until June 21 to enact a bill, because that is when court master William Kilgarlin will file his final plan in state court.

The Senate continued working Tuesday on confirmation proceedings for gubernatorial nominees, but Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said he expected senators to finish that task today and be summoned into another session.

"I fought to the bitter end," Lewis said after abandoning an effort to turn around votes in the House. The Senate voted to override Clements last week, but both chambers must do so by a two-thirds margin for a bill to take effect over a governor's objections.

In urging an override vote, Rep. Mark Stiles, D-Beaumont, said: "I do not believe that we are going to get a better piece of legislation out of this Legislature."

In vetoing the bill last week, Clements spoke against the half-cent sales tax increase lawmakers want to help fund the measure. He also predicted the bill would lead to a state income tax and higher local property taxes, and he said he wants more reforms in the way education is administered.

But Rep. Ernestine Glossbrenner, D-Alice, the bill's sponsor, said, "This bill does not require an income tax. It does not require heavy additional local property taxes."

Rep. Eddie Cavazos, D-Corpus Christi, said after the House adjourned that a court-written plan is looking more attractive to those who represent poor school districts and feel they have already compromised too much to try to win Clements' approval of a bill.

"We've done the best we can, and they won't accept it. That's fine. Let them try to deal with a

Quake kills seven in Romania

By EDITH M LEDERER
Associated Press Writer

BUCHAREST, Romania — A strong earthquake struck Romania today, killing seven people, injuring more than 100 and heavily damaging buildings in Bucharest and other cities, police said.

The temblor was felt in the Soviet Union, Hungary, Greece, Turkey and Bulgaria, but no casualties or serious damage was reported in those countries.

In Bucharest, where large chunks of concrete and plaster crashed onto sidewalks, two people were killed and several were injured when they jumped from windows or balconies on first, second and third floors.

Thousands of frightened residents in the city of 2.2 million peole fled into streets littered with fallen debris.

Maj. Nicolae Bucur of the Police General Inspectorate in Bucharest said two people died in the port city of Braila and one each in the cities Buzau and Brasov and in Prahova County, all north of the capital.

The largest number of injured were in Brasov, the mountain industrial and tourist town 105 miles north of Bucharest, where 42 people were hurt.

In Golden, Colo. the U.S. Geological Survey said the earthquake measured 6.5 on Richter scale with an epicenter 100 miles north of Bucharest.

The earthquake, which rumbled across the Carpathian mountains, struck at 1:40 p.m. (6:40 a.m. EDT). The Carpathians run through eastern Romania, the western border of the Soviet Union and southwest Poland.

BUCHAREST, Romania — Rubble and broken glass litter a downtown Bucharest street after an earthquake measuring 6.8 on the Richter Scale shook Romania and the Balkans Wednesday. At least seven people were killed in the quake.

In Bulgaria, the state BTA news agency said the temblor was felt nationwide but there was minor damage only in Silistra, a town on the border with Romania. A nuclear power plant in Kozlodoui on the Danube river was closed.

In the Soviet Union, the quake knocked out telephone lines and shook buildings in at least three of the country's 15 republics: Russia, the Ukraine and Moldavia.

In Moscow, 1,000 miles east of Bucharest, the quake rocked buildings, and U.S. officials closed the older U.S. Embassy, which is 10 stories tall.

"It's an old building, and when the upper floors shook we called around other places in town and closed the building as precaution to do safety checks," said embassy spokesman Jim Bullock.

One of the two people killed in Bucharest, shop assistant Petruta Lungu, died when she was hit by a collapsing balcony as she ran outside after the quake struck, police said.

The Fire Department said two small fires were reported, one in an apartment and another in the chemical laboratory of a high school.

Jeremy Sutton-Hibbert of Glasgow, Scotland, staying in an apartment in a 10-story building in Bucharest, said: "The walls of the bedroom crumbled with plaster falling. Stuff came flying off shelves and all the plaster came off the ceilings."

tion wet scrubber and dry filter system. The $1.5 million filter system costs about twice as much but is better than either a wet-scrubber system or a dry filter. We believe the combination hybrid is the best way."

Another issue that Johnson raised was All American's land needs.

"At first they (All American Enviromental Corporation), said they needed only 40 acres for the incinerator. Now Mr. Capps is asking for 50-70 acres. What do they really want?" asked Johnson.

Johnson reminded the council that All American was asking for an additional 160 acres. "Why are they asking for more land? To me it's a coincidence, because that's the amount the Enviromental Protection Agency requires for a landfill."

County Judge Bob Deavenport added, "They have quoted different figures. They have stated different things at different times."

The vote was taken about 12:20 p.m. Deavenport and Commissioners Ronnie Deatherage and James N Biggs voted against the agreement, while Commissioners Donald L. Tollison and E.D. Holcomb voted in favor of the proposal.

In other business, the commissioners heard a report from Craig Graves on better air-conditioning at the Community Center. The proposal would place Geo-thermal heat pumps at the center. Along with the heat pumps, a proposal on insulation was also recommended, with the total cost to the county for both propositions listed around $70,000.

Bail upheld by court

AUSTIN (AP) — The 3rd Court of Appeals has affirmed a trial court order setting bail at $350,000 for Louis Talley in the capital murder of his wife and the man with whom she was living.

Talley, 45, had argued that the bail was excessive, amounting to a denial of bail, the court said Wednesday.

He has admitted killing Lillian Talley, 37, and M.G. "Andy" Anderson, 43, at an apartment complex two years ago but said he shot them in the heat of anger.

The appeals court, in an opinion by Justice Bob Gammage, noted that several witnesses for the state had testified that, if released on bond, Talley "would be a threat to his own safety and that of other family members, particularly his son, a grand jury witness."

Documents: Geren is richest Texas congressman

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pete Geren is the richest Texan in the House of Representatives, records show.

The Fort Worth attorney and investor elected to the 12th district seat last September has assets of at least $4.4 million, according to federal disclosure documents released Tuesday.

Geren, a Democrat, was elected last September after former Speaker Jim Wright resigned amid allegiations of ethical improprieties.

The newest member of the Texas congressional delegation is also among its wealthiest.

Rep. Craig Washington, D-Houston, has assets exceeding $800,000, the records show. He, too, could be a millionaire, but the disclosure forms do not require precise enough answers to be certain.

Washington took office in January after he was elected to the 18th district seat left open when Mickey Leland died on a humanitarian mission in Ethiopia.

Geren's 27-page disclosure statement, the longest in the delegation, lists about $46,000 in earned income in addition to the $22,375 he made in Congress since his swearing-in. He made more than $200,000 from real estate and oil investments.

The list of Texas' millionaire lawmakers includes:

- Geren with assets of $4,492,118 to more than $8,705,000
- Jack Brooks, D-Beaumont, with assets of $2,312,019 to more than $3,525,000
- Bill Archer, R-Houston, who listed assets to the dollar of $1,901,864
- Ralph Hall, D-Rockwall, with assets of $1,745,024 to more than $3,345,000
- Jake Pickle, D-Austin, with assets of $1,386,043 to $3,385,000
- Marvin Leath, D-Waco, with assets of $1,235,012 to $2,400,000.

Those nearing the million-dollar mark are:

- Washington with assets of $806,012 to more than $1,260,000
- Charlie Stenholm, D-Stamford, with assets of $784,025 to more than $1,535,000
- Jack Fields, R-Houston, with assets of $716,004 to more than $1,000,000
- Steve Bartlett, R-Dallas, with assets of $517,024 to more than $1,055,000.

The forms require that values be listed only by broad category. For example, Smith listed the worth of his 2,200-acre ranch near Premont as at least $250,000.

Some members are precise. For instance, Rep. Martin Frost, D-Dallas, said his 1984 Toyota Van was worth $3,525 and his 1985 Pontiac Sedan $4,550. Archer listed a coin collection worth $16,326.

In addition to their assets, members of Congress and most other federal officials are required to disclose their investments, speaking and appearance fees, most liabilities and gifts.

master," said Cavazos, chairman of the House Mexican American Legislative Caucus.

Kilgarlin has said because he cannot raise state taxes, his plan could divert state aid from wealthier to poorer schools. The $13.5 billion-a-year school finance system relies on state money, local property taxes and some federal funds.

The way the school reform bill was written, if no additional money was pumped into the system state aid also could be shifted from wealthy districts to poor ones.

No shirt? No shoes? No problem at country store

By BOBBY BURNEY
Tyler Courier Times Telegraph

COKE, Texas — No shirt? No shoes? No problem at Coke Country Store.

You don't need all the essentials of proper attire to shop or eat at the small market. You don't even have to have money.

"People call up here right before we're leaving sometimes and ask us to leave something out by the front so they can pick it up later," said store owner Linda Martin.

"It's usually there for them to get. They come in later and take care of the bill."

Being able to leave some bread or fresh tomatoes out on the doorstep is one reason Mrs. Martin and her husband Johnnie decided to move from Tyler in 1977 to the far northern portion of Wood County. Situated about 10 miles away from Winnsboro, Quitman, Yantis and Como, Coke is isolated without being too far out of the way.

School kids go to class in all different directions and the telephone exchange is listed as Sandy Creek. The village might have an identity crisis if not for the store, which would be downtown if there were such a thing.

The country store, with its grill and fresh vegetables, has been in continuous operation since the early 1900s, said Mrs. Martin, who has owned it since 1988.

"I think there have only been about seven or eight owners since it was opened," she said. "It used to be a general store, a long time ago.

It carried shoes, clothes — things like that. A man asked me not too long ago if we were going to start carrying those things again. I said, "Tom, when you drive a horse and buggy into town, then we'll sell what you want."

Clean and uncluttered, the store is stocked with some of the modern necessities of rural living. Gas pumps out front, groceries, plumbing and hardware supplies inside. It conforms to the architectural norm of the early 1900s — long and thin — though it is noticeable for not having anything on either side to constrict its shape. Near the top of the 10-foot high ceilings are two air-conditioners, helped out by old ceiling fans.

The store is housed in a red brick building, the most noticeable building in the small community besides maybe the old school house which now serves as a community center.

Two farm roads converge to make the center of Coke, population somewhere between two dozen and several hundred.

"I'm not sure what Coke covers," said Mrs. Martin when asked the community's population. "If you go a quarter of a mile in any direction, you're out of town. I live right down the road and I'm really out of Coke.

"I'd say there are 25-30 people who actually live between the signs. But there's probably 200 or 300 that live in the area who say they live in Coke."

Amerada Hess, an energy exploration company, has an operation down Farm Road 69, and those workers along with dozens of local dairymen make up most of the store's clientele. The open-closed sign on the door says hours are 6 a.m. to 6 p.m., but Mrs. Martin is usually there earlier, fixing a home-cooked breakfast.

"We open at 5:30 in the morning with eggs, biscuits and gravy. Every morning," she said. "And people start coming in as soon as the door's open. You can get everything for breakfast that you can get anywhere else, except for Eggs Benedict and fancy things like that. We'll fix just about anything."

"Even if we don't know how to cook it," chimed in Tonya Harvick, Mrs. Martin's daughter and store employee.

They obviously know something about preparing food, because the four mismatched tables and accompanying chairs are full "90 percent of the time" during breakfast and lunch runs, Mrs. Harvick said.

A female customer who was taking a Coke (no relation to the town) break at one of the tables said the place "vibrates" with activity during the noon hour. At other times, "it's a good place to come and relax and eat a meal," she said.

Personal service makes the grill a favorite of locals. While Mrs. Martin puts the toppings on a cheeseburger, Mrs. Harvick drapes her arms around Bill, an octogenarian who frequents the store, and catches up on what's happening in his life.

Out-of-towners drop in more than before, Mrs. Martin said, as they are on their way to one of the four lakes within a 10-minute drive. Coke the community gained notoriety in the 1980s when Coke the soft drink changed its formula. Some people still remember the coverage in the Dallas media, she said.

"We get a lot of Dallas people, especially on weekends," she said. "Some people remember the stories on the Dallas TV."

The metroplex visitors must beware of the pedestrian lifestyle in Coke, where you're as liable to see a tractor parked in front of the store as a car.

"You have to be careful of the slow-moving vehicles. We have trailers, tractors and farm equipment," Mrs. Martin said. "And then there's some people who drive cars that just don't drive over 35 miles an hour for any reason.

East Texas corn grinder sought-after man

By EDWARD GATELY
Nacogdoches Daily Sentinel

STOCKMAN, Texas — Way out in Stockman, yellow corn grows tall and Horace "Scooter" Francis' corn grinder always is in big demand for residents hungry for homemade cornbread and cornmeal-fried fish.

"I just like foolin' with that corn because there ain't nobody else left to do it," he said of his corn-grinding operation. "You can make cornbread, and fry fish and hushpuppies with it. When my mama makes cornbread dressing, people will run three miles to get some."

Born in Stockman, Scooter was reared on the same farm which he says was in his family "since before the Titanic sank."

Each year he grows, harvests and grinds his own corn into cornmeal. He also grinds corn for farmers throughout Nacogdoches and other neighboring counties. "The only other corn grinder in the area is near Diboll," he said. "There's not many of them still turning and most who were have already passed on. I've been growing corn all my life. We get them from all over wanting me to make cornmeal."

When harvest begins in September, Scooter once again will crank up his tractor-driven corn grinder.

"The corn's got to be dry before you harvest it," he said. "Some of the guys get hungry and pick their corn too early. I've had my corn grinder 15 years. It takes two people to run it and it's hard work. This man in Sacul finally sold it to me without telling his wife. It almost caused a divorce."

On Saturdays during the fall, when residents travel in droves to have Scooter grind their corn, the job usually is more "a good time" than a chore.

"It can grind 200 pounds an hour, but sometimes we ain't in that big a hurry," he said. "We have a lot of fun with it. A lot of boys come by and we just start yakking. Some people bring two years' worth of corn!"

In the meantime, the corn grinder is silent and the corn growing in East Texas still is too young to pick. When it begins ripening, Scooter can count on having lots of friends over for conversation every Saturday.

"Don't nobody know who Horace Francis is, but they know Scooter," he added.

Wake Up!

IT'S TIME FOR BREAKFAST!

The mood of breakfast is ever changing—adapting to busy lifestyles and appetites that yearn for both savory and sweet tastes.

Breakfast can be a quiet time—enjoying a slice of coffee cake alone with the morning paper. It can be an energizing time—zipping out the door with a nutritious, power-charged breakfast drink. Or, breakfast can turn into brunch—a time of celebration with an array of omelettes, waffles, muffins and a gathering of good friends.

Whatever your breakfast mood, make sure that you start the day with nutritious, healthful foods. It's easier than you think! The secret lies in choosing the right ingredients.

Fruit is always a smart breakfast choice. And what could be easier or more delicious than California cling peaches. Golden, juicy cling peaches are available in both halves and slices, packed in natural juice or extra light syrup so they are not overly sweet. Available all year round, thanks to the convenience of cans, cling peaches turn SUNRISE PEACH FRAPPÉ into an energy-boosting, flavor-packed treat.

Cereal is also a smart breakfast choice. Nabisco® 100% Bran cereal is packed with beneficial dietary fiber and toasty, nutty flavor, yet it is low in fat. But don't restrict yourself to eating it cold out of a bowl. Try stirring it into waffle batter for VANILLA BRAN WAFFLES or into a coffee cake batter such as PEACHY KUCHEN for a flavor and nutrition boost.

If your mood swings towards eggs but you want to keep your cholesterol in check, PUFFY MIXED FRUIT FRITTATA will come as a delightful surprise. Made with Egg Beaters® 99% Real Egg Product, this oven-baked omelette is lighter than air yet has only 215 calories and less than 1 milligram of cholesterol per serving. Egg Beaters tastes just like eggs because it is a real egg product, but with all of the cholesterol and fat removed. Convenient, too, Egg Beaters can be stored in the freezer then defrosted at a moment's notice either in the microwave or under hot tap water.

A plain omelette is satisfying and nutritious, but an omelette topped with chunky mixed fruit is truly delicious. Generous chunks of peaches, pears, pineapple, grapes and cherries make up this colorful mélange. Chunky mixed fruit has all of the flavor of just-picked fruit with none of the peeling or preparation. Keep several cans on hand so you'll be ready when the mood strikes.

So, don't let the chilly winds of winter keep you in bed. All of these breakfast choices follow the American Heart Association's Recommended Dietary Guidelines. Wake up! It's time for a healthful and delicious breakfast.

Feeding baby right

By Dr. Richard C. Theuer

What to feed your baby first

One day, you and your baby will reach the magic milestone of solid food. When that happens, you will be faced with many questions about what are the right foods to feed your baby first—and what is the best for your baby's growth and development.

It is important to remember that baby food exists for only one reason: To help you help your baby make the transition from a totally liquid diet of a single food like breast milk or infant formula, to the wide variety of foods that your family eats.

The objective is to gradually introduce your baby to the foods that make up a balanced diet.

Start slowly

A balanced diet contains cereals, dairy products, meat, fruits and vegetables. No one single food is absolutely essential. Keep this in mind if someone tells you that a particular food that you do not like or you never heard of "just has to be" in your baby's feeding dish.

The most critical rule on starting solid food is to start with single foods, not combinations or mixtures. The reason is that you need to check for reactions to foods when you start a baby on solids.

A baby's systems are immature and delicate, so we have to be careful not to go too fast. Starting with a single food lets you check your baby's reaction and find out exactly which foods agree with your baby.

Why rice cereal

In America today, most babies get rice cereal as their first solid food. Doctors traditionally recommend rice cereal because it is less allergenic than other cereals and very easy to digest.

Rice cereal contains less fiber than other cereals, so it is easier to digest. The dietary fiber so good for adults is not so wonderful for little babies, because their stomachs are small and can hold only so much.

The food babies eat should be very digestible. Also, dietary fiber ends up in your baby's diaper, and carries with it nutritionally essential minerals that your baby's body needs.

You can feed other foods first—check with your doctor. Fruits, vegetables, and even meats are fine, depending on what your baby is getting as his or her liquid feeding.

Ensure a balanced diet

Some doctors recommend meats as the first food for breast-fed babies in order to make sure that they continue to get enough protein when they start solids.

Breast milk has just enough protein for your baby, but if very low protein fruits like applesauce, pears or peaches become a big part of the diet, he or she may not get enough protein.

Meats are rich in protein and help to balance the overall diet. Half a jar of a baby meat or poultry product provides five to six grams of protein.

Bananas are a favorite first. If you mash a banana yourself, make sure that the banana is ripe. As a banana ripens, the starch of a green banana is converted naturally to simpler and more digestible sugars. That's why a ripe banana tastes sweet.

Check ingredients

If you want to start with commercial baby food banana, be sure you read the ingredient list very carefully. What you want is banana baby food without ingredients like sugar or starch filler.

Ingredients that are okay are: Water for preparation, vitamin C and citric acid, which enables the manufacturer to prepare bananas without over-cooking them.

Commercial baby food is made with ripe bananas to make sure your baby gets a highly-digestible food.

Are you a vegetable lover? There is no problem starting your baby on vegetables if you follow a few rules.

Certain vegetables, such as spinach, beets, turnips and collard greens, can be a problem for very young babies because they may contain substances that babies should not get. The immature body systems of very young infants cannot break down these substances very efficiently.

Appropriate vegetables

Most vegetables that are popular for adults, like the yellow vegetables—carrots, squash and sweet potatoes—are fine for babies. In fact, these are the most popular vegetables for babies today.

Some vegetables popular with adults are usually not recommended for baby. For example, high-fiber vegetables, such as broccoli and brussel sprouts may give your baby a lot of gas.

Finally, there are the traditional green vegetables, peas and green beans. Peas are rich in protein because they are legumes. Green beans are high in fiber, which may be why they are not as popular for baby feeding as they were several years ago.

Sometimes it is easy to forget that the first new food fed to some babies is not solid at all. Juice is sometimes the first non-milk food introduced.

It is just as important to watch for reactions when juice is fed. Babies new to solid foods should get single juices at first, not combinations or mixtures.

Many doctors recommend that you delay giving your baby orange juice. Orange juice is more likely to cause food reaction than other juices.

Whatever food you start with, be comfortable and confident, and watch how your baby reacts. You and your baby are beginning a journey into the world of food variety. You are your baby's tour guide to a balanced diet, on the road to good nutrition and good health. Good luck!

Fascinating cookbook explores the world of opera

Opera lovers everywhere will be delighted by the publication of a beautiful new book about the world-renowned Metropolitan Opera. What sets this book apart from others about the opera is that it is a cookbook.

The Metropolitan Opera Cookbook (Stewart, Tabori & Chang, $30.), edited by noted food writer Jules Bond, is sure to receive an enthusiastic welcome from opera lovers, as well as food lovers in search of new and exciting recipes.

Why a cookbook? In the book's foreword Placido Domingo answers this question. He writes, "There has always been a strong connection between opera and food; for instance, I have never heard of a dish named after a famous writer or actor or painter, but there are many recipes named after singers and composers."

Furthermore, Domingo asserts that "opera lovers are usually romantic, emotional people who love life and therefore are interested in one of the great joys of living—food! And because people who are really interested in food are likely to know how to prepare it, most opera fans have learned their way around the kitchen."

Just as with any Metropolitan Opera production, the cookbook draws upon the talents of the entire opera company, including the people behind the scenes. Besides the stars, those who contributed recipes include members of the orchestra and chorus, dancers, directors, board members and many others.

Each recipe is accompanied by a brief biography and, sometimes, a photograph of the contributor.

In addition, the book includes recipes that have been handed down from opera stars of the past, as well as recipes inspired by legendary performers such as Enrico Caruso and Nellie Melba.

The recipes include longtime family favorites and regional specialties. They range from simple dishes that can be prepared quickly, to more elaborate concoctions that you could serve proudly at the fanciest dinner party.

There is even a recipe, contributed by Aage Haugland, for a drink called The Ho-jo-to-ho Cure, whose ingredients are Danish beer, Danish schnapps, five cloves of garlic, an egg yolk and five chlorophyll tablets! Haugland claims that this potion, and bed rest, will cure a cold overnight!

While you might hesitate to serve this one to family or friends, there are plenty of other recipes in the book which are time-tested and guaranteed to please.

For example, there is Anna Moffo's Ossobuco alla Moffo, a veal dish that Moffo says has been one of her "very special" recipes since 1957, and Dorothy Kirsten's Braised Lamb Shanks, which were a "special favorite" of Kirsten's husband's golfing pals.

In fact, many of the stars who contributed recipes to The Metropolitan Opera Cookbook also shared some of their food-related thoughts and memories. In addition, there are anecdotes about the opera and its stars, past and present. These, along with the book's many photographs, contribute to its sense of nostalgic charm.

The photographs alone, in fact, are well worth the price of the book. There are over 100 of them, 36 in full color. There are portraits, photographs from famous operas and candid shots of the stars relaxing (and eating).

Other photos showcase finished dishes and exquisite table settings, complete with Tiffany tableware, antique serving dishes and opera memorabilia.

Want to impress your guests? Serve them Zarzuela de Mariscos, a spicy seafood dish popular in Spain—and tell them that you got the recipe from Placido Domingo.

Or, for a dish that's delicious, yet can be prepared quickly and easily, try Luciano Pavarotti's recipe for Pennoni al Tonno.

Either dish is sure to contribute to a truly memorable meal, especially if you play your favorite opera recording while you cook and dine. And, if you sing along with the record, you may even improve your singing voice! P6897517

Medical Utopia for Americans: oriental secrets to health, longevity and sexual vigor

Americans could benefit from an "oriental medical system" for health improvement and well-being, recommends a recognized oriental medical expert, Andrew Kim, author of Discover Natural Health.

This time-honored, "Super Scientific Medical System" can enhance your quality of life through non-surgical methods. The system uses a natural approach instead of chemical drugs, curing the causes rather than suppressing the symptoms, yet it is home-based and inexpensive. Many complicated health problems can be treated successfully by this system. That's why this oriental system is called "Medical Utopia for Americans."

This unusual book lists over 200 beneficial foods selected from 5,000 remedies treating over 30 common maladies including how to reduce cholesterol, high blood pressure, obesity, and treat arthritis and insomnia.

Five different kinds of beneficial foods, including the potato, can help to reduce cholesterol. Seaweed and brown rice can help overcome weight problems. Wonder Soup, which includes these ingredients can provide the same benefits.

A Los Angeles man who ate the oriental "Miracle Soup" for seven weeks has experienced the following results; "After 30 years of medication, I am finally able to get my diabetes under control. My weight is down from 210 to 184, my blood sugar content has dropped from 257 to 127, and my cholesterol level has dropped from 237 to 139. Furthermore, my blood pressure is down from 170 to 135 over 70."

His doctor shook his hand, smiled broadly at him and said, "Congratulations, you have just extended your life through ancient oriental techniques."

Wonder Soup, an exotic, oriental "Miracle Soup," can help lower blood pressure, blood sugar, cholesterol, weight and flush out body poisons. All the ingredients in Wonder Soup are available in any grocery store. One of them is the potato, which absorbs and removes cancer-causing substances, changes the blood's PH from acid to alkaline, improves oral hygiene and prevents tooth decay.

"You can banish wrinkles forever with nuts, eggwhites, and honey," says Mr. Kim. Insomnia can be treated by eating green onions four or five times a day. Warm milk, a footbath and honey are some of the other beneficial treatments for this symptom. A stiff neck and shoulder can be relieved by applying a paste of crushed garlic and wheat flower. This is one of the eight remedies included in the book.

Says a hollywood actress, "After undergoing radiation treatment for breast cancer, I discovered acupuncture, herbs, and supplements. I began to get stronger, my digestion improved, the pain of past surgeries left me and I was on my way to recovery. The cancer has not returned, even after five years."

An eighty-year-old man also had an exciting success story. He explains, "My right side was paralyzed from a stroke, Fortunately, three acupuncture treatments helped me recover completely. It worked like a charm. I am walking and living proof that this wonderful medical achievement really works."

Discover Natural Health also contains various sex techniques to help improve health and longevity, keeping you vital and energetic while preventing many kinds of disease.

Find out how you can slow the aging process in the chapter, Stay Young Forever by tapping into some of the many other ancient oriental health secrets revealed in Kim's fact-filled book.

"This comprehensive book," according to Mr. Kim, "brings 5,000 years of oriental health secrets to the western world for the first time. It provides a do-it-yourself approach to health that integrates mind and body."

This book is honored as one of the Top Five in the health category of the Benjamin Franklin Trophy, "Book of the year."

Discover Natural Health is available only by mail. Send $14.95 plus $3.00 postage and handling to Kim's Publishing, 7824 Peachtree Ave, Suite 102, Panorama City, CA 91402.

Within 30 days you must see a remarkable and wonderful change in your health. Otherwise, return the book and get a full, prompt refund. Because of the broad appeal of this unique book, it also makes an ideal gift for anniversaries, birthdays, and other special occasions.

When you order, you will receive a free gift, while supplies last: " Magic at the tips of Your Fingers," useful oriental acupressure techniques anyone can use for beauty and better health.

"Love and food are equally vital to our sanity and survival," according to an old Oriental sage. T3906641

Healthful TV snacks with kid appeal

Experts now say that proper nutrition in childhood can greatly influence later eating habits, as well as reduce or prevent health risks ranging from obesity to cancer, clogged arteries and heart disease.

Parents know that children love between-meal munchies, and snacks and children seem inseparable. This is especially true during the winter months when youngsters spend more time indoors, and the amount of time spent watching television and snacking increases.

Realistically, you cannot expect your youngster to always eat healthful snacks, such as carrot sticks while watching "Bugs Bunny" or a bowl of oat bran while watching "My Little Pony." But, there are wholesome treats you can add to your menu that are fun to eat, and still contribute to a healthy diet.

Here are some tips on healthy food and beverage snack alternatives. These treats have kid appeal and are ideal for when children are watching TV.

- Air-popped popcorn is fun to munch, and it's high in fiber and low in fat. Skip the butter and use as little salt as possible. Beware of the store-bought microwave varieties, which often contain added fat and sodium. Be sure to read the labels.
- Apple sauce is a convenient and healthful snack that is fun to eat. It has no fat, and its natural sweetness appeals to kids of all ages. The single serve containers are also perfect for lunch boxes or backpacks. Motts® offers single serve apple sauce in a variety of flavors—including natural, cinnamon, Dutch apple spice™, peach, strawberry and mixed fruit. And apple sauce is an easy and tasty way to add more fruit to your child's diet.
- Pretzels are a big hit with children. They're crispy, crunchy and much lower in fat than potato chips or corn chips. Unsalted pretzels are an even healthier option.
- Offer your kids 100 percent fruit juice instead of colas, which have little nutritional value. But be sure to watch labels to ensure that the juice you're buying is the real thing. Fruit "drinks" are often diluted and, as a result, offer less nutrients. For a special warm winter treat, try heating apple juice and mixing it with cinnamon.

HOW DO YOU EXPECT YOUR KID TO KEEP HIS NOSE CLEAN IF YOU DON'T?

They're the worst kind of hypocrite. Parents who warn their children about using drugs while they themselves are abusing drugs. What parents don't seem to realize is that it takes more than a good sermon to keep kids on the straight and narrow. It takes a good example. Without it, kids are likely to wind up abusing drugs just like Mom and Dad.

If you want your son to be strong.

If you want your daughter to have the willpower to walk the other way, practice what you preach.

Because you can't control your children if you can't control yourself.

No-bake fruitcake: A taste of the tropics

Caribbean cuisine is the latest trend in American dining. Meals are typically relaxed and unhurried. And though the main course may be highly seasoned, the dessert is always cool and exotic.

No-Bake Tropical Fruit Cake is a perfect example of this tradition. Sweet papaya, pureed with a touch of rum, is the main fruit flavor. The smooth papaya texture combined with strawberries and cubes of angel food cake makes a delightful flavor combination. The fruit cake shape depends on Knox® Unflavored Gelatine in the recipe.

Gelatine assures that this tropical treat will be creamy but maintain its shape on even the hottest days. The subtle taste sensation can be enjoyed to the fullest, because Knox adds no flavor of its own and showcases the natural fruit flavor. Try this recipe when you want an impressive make-ahead dessert to serve after an unhurried dinner.

NO-BAKE TROPICAL FRUIT CAKE

- 3 medium papayas (about 1 lb. each), peeled and sliced
- 2 quarts water
- 2 envelopes Knox Unflavored Gelatine
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 3 eggs, separated
- 3/4 cup milk
- 1/3 cup rum
- 1 cup whipping or heavy cream, whipped
- 1 pint strawberries, sliced (about 2 cups)
- 1 quart cubed angel food or sponge cake

Coarsely chop enough papaya to equal 4 1/2 cups; reserve remaining slices for garnish.

In large saucepan, bring water to a boil; add chopped papaya. Continue boiling rapidly, 5 minutes; drain. In blender or food processor, puree enough chopped papaya to equal 2 cups; reserve remaining chopped papaya.

In medium saucepan, mix unflavored gelatine with 1/4 cup sugar; blend in egg yolks beaten with milk. Let stand 1 minute. Stir over low heat until gelatine is completely dissolved, about 5 minutes. Stir in pureed papaya and rum. Pour into large bowl and chill, stirring occasionally, until mixture mounds slightly when dropped from spoon.

In large bowl, beat egg whites until soft peaks form; gradually add remaining sugar and beat until stiff. Fold egg whites, then whipped cream, sliced strawberries, remaining chopped papaya and cake into gelatine mixture.

Turn into 9-inch springform pan; chill until set. Garnish with reserved papaya slices and, if desired, additional whipped cream.

Makes about 12 servings. P7897688

An in-depth look at unusual Italian pasta dishes

No matter how much you love Italian food, the immense diversity of the cuisine never ceases to amaze and please. Regional variations, plus the age-old inventiveness of Italian cooks, have resulted in a culinary legacy which is as broad as it is fascinating.

A marked awareness of the way the flavors of different foods marry characterizes dishes from all over Italy, providing a thread of continuity between the culinary achievements of even the most disparate regions.

One of the most sensitive chroniclers of Italian cuisine is Giuliano Bugialli and, in his most recent volume, Bugialli on Pasta (Simon & Schuster), he takes on the task of codifying authentic versions of pasta dishes from the Trentino to Apulia.

A cook of great distinction in his own right, Bugialli is also extremely knowledgeable about the history and lore of Italian cuisine, and writes with a distinct voice of authority. This makes his most recent cookbook an excellent resource for cooks who are serious about learning about and preparing Italian food as it is prepared in Italy by that country's fine cooks, who are as likely to be found in the home kitchen as behind the scenes in a restaurant.

In fact, while numerous relatively familiar pasta preparations are included by Bugialli in his book, the majority are less common, and some are so rare as to be unfamiliar even in Italy. These at times require equipment difficult to obtain, making the recipes more of historic rather than current interest.

However, they are the exceptions; most recipes in Bugialli on Pasta can be prepared by the home chef, many with extreme ease, though some of the recipes calling for homemade pasta dough require a degree of expertise on the part of the cook. This degree of expertise can be attained even by novices, by following Bugialli's extremely clear and accurate instructions, which are accompanied by detailed step-by-step drawings that leave little in the preparation procedure to casual interpretation.

The culinary appeal of the recipes themselves is outstanding. From a myriad of pasta and bean recipes, such as Pasta with Chick-Peas, Roman Style, and Pasta with Black-Eyed Peas, to recipes for Gnocchi Baked with Melting Cheese and Naked Ravioli with Gorgonzola, the volume is a gourmand's delight.

Among the outstanding recipes are the diversity of Fresh Regional Pastas from throughout Italy—a handful of Agnelotti recipes from Piedmont in the north, unusual Buckwheat Pasta recipes from Lombardy, stuffed "Three-Cornered Hats" from Tuscany, and Crepes in Broth from Abruzzi in the south.

Below are two recipe selections from Bugialli on Pasta. The first, Sedanini alla Crudaiola (Pasta with Uncooked Vegetable Sauce), is a refreshing preparation which hails from Apulia. If the Sedanini shaped pasta is unavailable, Bugialli suggests substituting any short tubular pasta two to three inches long and 1/2 to one inch in diameter.

The second, from Campania, is Penne alla Pizza (Pasta in the Style of Pizza).

SEDANINI ALLA CRUDAIOLA
(Pasta with Uncooked Vegetable Sauce)
Serves 4 to 6

- 1 1/2 pounds fresh ripe tomatoes
- Coarse-grained salt
- 2 medium-sized cloves garlic, peeled
- 1/2 teaspoon hot red pepper flakes, to be added to marinade (optional)
- Juice of a medium-sized lemon
- 4 medium-sized inner white celery stalks, well scraped
- 1/2 cup olive oil
- Salt and freshly ground black pepper
- 1 pound dried sedanini pasta, preferably imported Italian

To Cook the Pasta

- Coarse-grained salt

To Serve

- 20 large sprigs Italian parsley, leaves only
- 15 large fresh basil leaves, left whole

Blanch the tomatoes in salted boiling water, then remove the skins and seeds, leaving the tomato fillets whole. Place tomatoes in a crockery or glass bowl along with the garlic and hot red pepper flakes if used and pour the lemon juice over. Cut the celery into pieces the same size as the pasta and put them, along with the oil, in the bowl. Season with salt to taste and abundant black pepper, but do not mix. Cover the bowl and refrigerate for at least 1 hour or until needed.

Bring a large pot of cold water to a boil over medium heat, add coarse salt to taste, then add the pasta and cook it for 9 to 12 minutes depending on the brand. Meanwhile, mix the tomatoes with the other ingredients and coarsely chop the parsley. When the pasta is ready, drain and transfer it to a large serving platter, then pour the sauce over. Mix the pasta and sauce together very well, then sprinkle the parsley and basil all over, mix again and serve.

PENNE ALLA PIZZA
(Pasta in the Style of Pizza)
Serves 6 to 8

- 1 medium-sized stalk celery
- 1/2 medium-sized red onion, peeled
- 1 large clove garlic, peeled
- 10 large sprigs Italian parsley, leaves only
- 2 medium-sized carrots, scraped
- 20 large basil leaves, fresh or preserved in salt
- 2 pounds ripe, fresh tomatoes; or 2 pounds canned tomatoes, preferably imported Italian, drained
- Salt and freshly ground black pepper
- 3 tablespoons olive oil
- 1 pound dried penne, preferably imported Italian

To Cook the Pasta

- Coarse-grained salt

To Bake

- 1 tablespoon olive oil
- 8 ounces mozzarella cheese, cut into about 1/4-inch thick slices
- 1 teaspoon dried oregano
- 30 black Greek olives in oil, drained and pitted
- Salt and freshly ground black pepper
- 2 tablespoons (1 ounce) sweet butter, cut into small pieces

Coarsely chop the celery, onion, garlic, parsley, carrots and 5 of the basil leaves all together on a board. Put chopped ingredients in a medium-sized saucepan. If using fresh tomatoes, cut them into pieces. Add fresh or canned tomatoes to pan, cover and cook, over low heat for 1 hour, stirring every so often with a wooden spoon. Pass the contents of the pan through a food mill, using the disc with the smallest holes, into a second saucepan. Add salt and pepper to taste and the oil; cook for 10 minutes longer.

Meanwhile, bring a large pot of cold water to a boil and preheat the oven to 375°. When the water reaches a boil, add coarse salt to taste, then add the pasta and cook it for 8 to 11 minutes depending on the brand: that is, 1 minute less than normal for al dente.

Use the tablespoon of oil to heavily coat a 13 1/2- x 8 3/4-inch glass baking dish. Drain the pasta and place it in a large bowl. Add the still-hot tomato sauce, the mozzarella, oregano, olives, remaining basil leaves torn into thirds, and salt and pepper to taste. Gently but thoroughly mix all the ingredients, then place in the oiled dish. Spread the butter pieces over the pasta, cover the dish with aluminum foil and bake 15 minutes. Serve hot directly from the dish. P7898947

JUST DESSERTS

Historically, blueberries have heralded the arrival of summer. They become a part of everyday life during the warm weather.

These tangy delights seem to appear at every meal in some form; they are stirred into pancake batter, baked into muffins and pies, tossed in fruit salads, sprinkled on ice cream and yogurt, and top the traditional cheesecake with style.

The small blue wonders were an important year-round staple of the American Indians. Dried wild blueberries were added to their soups, stews and meat dishes.

When the colonist arrived, they made wild blueberries a choice ingredient in traditional American cuisine.

Today's blueberries are cultivated and harvested en masse. Although the fresh blueberry season stretches from early May on into September, the peak season is mid-June to mid-August, when more than 60 percent of all North American blueberries are harvested.

When ripe, blueberries should be plump and firm, with a light grayish bloom.

Fresh blueberries are perishable and should be refrigerated until they are used. Once chilled, they will last at peak flavor for two weeks. At room temperature, they soon loose their freshness. Blueberries should not be washed until it's time to use them.

Great for the dieter or anyone who loves these tangy, refreshing treats, fresh blueberries have only 41 calories per half-cup.

Blueberries have to be the easiest type of fruit to prepare and serve—there is no peeling, pitting, coring or cutting. Just rinse and serve!

Here are a few bright blueberry recipes from the North American Blueberry Council. And July is National Blueberry Month—so now is the perfect time to try one of these summer treats!

BLUEBERRY CLUSTERS

- 1 pkg. (11 1/2 oz.) milk chocolate morsels
- 1/4 cup vegetable shortening
- 2 cups fresh blueberries, washed and dried
- 3 dozen 1 1/4 inch candy liners

Combine over hot (not boiling) water, milk chocolate morsels and shortening; stir until morsels melt and mixture is smooth. Remove from heat. Gently fold in blueberries until well coated with chocolate. Spoon by rounded measuring teaspoonfuls into candy liners. Chill in refrigerator 20-30 minutes until chocolate is set.

Yield: About 3 dozen clusters

Note: Blueberry clusters may be kept at room temperature up to one hour. If chocolate becomes sticky, return to refrigerator.

BLUEBERRY MERINGUES

- 3 egg whites, at room temperature
- 1/4 teaspoon cream of tartar
- 1/2 cup granulated sugar
- 1 cup fresh blueberries

In electric mixer bowl, combine egg whites and cream of tartar. Beat at high speed until egg whites are foamy. Gradually add sugar and continue beating until egg whites are very stiff and glossy, but not dry. Fold in blueberries. Line baking sheets with brown paper. Drop meringues by spoonfuls onto paper about 2 inches apart. Bake at 275°F for 40 minutes or until firm but not browned.

Yield: About 2 dozen.

BLUEBERRY GRAHAM CRACKER TORTE

- 1/2 cup butter or margarine
- 1 cup sugar
- 3 eggs
- 3/4 cup milk
- 2 cups fresh blueberries
- 1 1/2 cups graham cracker crumbs
- 1 cup all-purpose flour
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- 1 teaspoon baking soda

Cream butter and beat in sugar. Beat in eggs, one at a time. Stir in milk. Combine blueberries, graham cracker crumbs, flour, baking powder and baking soda. Add all at once and beat until batter is smooth. Pour into a greased 8-inch spring-form baking pan. Bake in preheated moderate oven (375°F) for 50 minutes to an hour or until top is richly browned. Serve warm or cold topped with sweetened whipped cream or whipped topping.

The hot fudge sundae comes of age

Americans have long been indulging themselves with ice cream and chocolate sweets. When these two great tastes came together in the hot fudge sundae, it was a match made in heaven and a joy for anyone with a sweet tooth!

This old-fashioned treat, created at the turn of the century, was originally found only in local ice cream parlors and soda shops. Ice cream historians tell us that because soda was banned from being served on Sunday, the combination of soda, syrup and ice cream, called a "soda," was banned as well. But when the soda was removed, the new concoction of ice cream and syrup was named a "sundae" in honor of the day.

In the past, people delighted in an evening spent at the local soda shop, but that luxury doesn't always exist today. Nowadays, things tend to be measured by the microwave and the clock. As a matter of fact, the invention of the microwave helped to inspire a variety of new products which help Americans keep up with the fast-paced world in which we live.

One used to go to the movies for a taste of the hot buttery popcorn served there, but now all you have to do is pop a packet in the microwave to achieve the same results! This is also true with microwaveable milkshakes or burgers; you don't even have to leave your home to sample fast food fare anymore!

Even the ice cream sundae has kept up with America's demand for convenience and quality. General Foods has come out with the first fudge sundae frozen on-a-stick. It's called Baker's™ Fudge-tastics™—Ice Cream Sundaes on-a-stick. This delicious treat is a combination of premium vanilla ice cream covered in chocolate, with a fudge center that's actually thick and gooey.

This new-fashioned version of an old-fashioned standard retains the sinfully good taste of the ice cream parlor hot fudge sundae with the added convenience of being within easy reach—right in your freezer.

So treat yourself to a taste of the past. Whether it be an evening at the local ice cream parlor (if you can fit it in!), or a trip to your local supermarket, a good old-fashioned fudge sundae sounds great any day of the week!

Cookbook offers a distinctive array of main course soups

Even if you only think of serving soup as a last resort for a light supper, or as a comforting bit of TLC when loved ones have the sniffles, Lee Bailey's Soup Meals (Clarkson N. Potter, $19.95), is sure to convince you that soup can be the centerpiece of a thoroughly delightful meal.

In his inimitable style, Bailey demonstrates that there is a main course soup worthy of virtually any occasion. From light and delicate to stick-to-your-ribs robust, a multitude of delicious options is presented in this attractive volume.

In his introduction, Bailey points out that one of the advantages of serving soup as a main course is that it can be prepared in advance, which "frees you to indulge in other flights of fancy which you would perhaps otherwise not bother with."

Indeed, the intricate assembly of a glistening vegetable terrine, the last-minute stirring-together of muffin batter, or the whipping up of a delicate dessert souffle, are all much more easily executed when the main dish takes little or no last-minute attention. Happily, Bailey includes recipes for such "flights of fancy," in addition to the almost three dozen soups that appear as the focal point of these meals.

Subtitled Main Event Soups In Year-Round Menus, this cookbook offers a wide range of warm and cold-weather meals, each of which is built around a particular soup, and each of which is stunningly photographed by Tom Eckerle.

In addition to appetizer, soup and dessert, each menu also includes a recipe for bread, muffins or crackers. The result is a delightful variety (there are 28 menus) of meals that are nicely balanced—both in terms of tastes and textures and in terms of the preparation time necessary for each of its individual components.

Each menu even includes a section called "Here's How," in which Bailey provides pointers on how to coordinate the various elements.

Classified under the broad categories of "Warm-Weather Meals" and "Cold-Weather Meals," the menus range from a Green Pea and Ham Soup Dinner, which begins with a flavorful Tomato Souffle and ends with an all-American Strawberry-Apple Crumble, to a Steak and Mushroom Soup Dinner, in which Baked Potatoes with Caviar and a luscious Pear Pudding Cake are the elegant accompaniments.

A summertime Asparagus Soup is served chilled, after a silky Gravlax Mousse with homemade Mustard-Dill Mayonnaise has set the stage for this delicate luncheon; a simple Veal and Chicken Terrine, Bran Muffins and Fresh Fig Baked Custard round out the wintertime Lamb and Beet Soup Lunch.

Sections called "Variations on Summer Soup Meals" and "Variations on Winter Soup Meals" provide additional recipes for soups, first courses, breads and desserts, and encourage the creation of mix-and-match menus.

"Some Good Salads" and "Some Good Sandwiches" offer just that. From Onion and Avocado Salad to Grilled Tuna with Roasted Peppers, these are excellent options for serving as part of a soup-centered meal—or on their own.

Reproduced below, Bailey's recipe for Sweet Potato Vichyssoise makes a lovely summertime soup. Served chilled, the golden coloring of the sweet potato is highlighted by streaks of cream topped with fresh chives. It is a lovely variation on the traditional vichyssoise.

Best of all, assembling the soup is a snap—and it can be prepared ahead and refrigerated until serving time.

The recipe for light, crispy Corn Wafers is also reproduced from Lee Bailey's Soup Meals. These, too, are quite easy to make—and they will add a distinctive touch to even the simplest of meals.

FROM LEE BAILEY'S SOUP MEALS (CLARKSON N. POTTER, $19.95)

SWEET POTATO VICHYSSOISE

- 2 1/2 pounds sweet potatoes (approximately)
- 1 3/4 cups sliced green onions (mostly white parts)
- 5 cups rich Chicken Stock
- Salt to taste
- White pepper (optional)
- 1/2 cup heavy cream
- Chopped fresh chives

Preheat oven to 400 degrees.

Place potatoes in the oven and bake until soft, about 1 hour.

Meanwhile put green onions in a large saucepan with about 1 cup of the chicken stock. Simmer until tender, about 15 minutes.

Scoop out the cooked sweet potato pulp (you should have about 3 cups). Place pulp in a food processor along with the green onions and chicken stock in which they were cooked. Puree, then return to pot and add remaining stock. Simmer a few minutes longer. Salt to taste. You can add a little more stock if the soup is too thick and a dash of white pepper if desired. Refrigerate soup until ready to use.

To serve, stir in cream and top with chopped chives.

Serves 6 to 8.

CORN WAFERS

- 3/4 cup white cornmeal
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1 cup boiling water
- 2 tablespoons (1/4 stick) margarine, melted
- Unsalted butter

Preheat oven to 425 degrees. Grease 2 cookie sheets or coat with vegetable cooking spray.

Mix cornmeal and salt in a bowl and pour in boiling water, stirring all the while to keep lumps from forming. Stir in margarine.

Drop 1 tablespoon at a time onto the cookie sheets. This batter should be liquid enough to spread out into a 3-inch circle. If it doesn't spread, add a bit more water. Bake until golden brown around the edges and crispy, about 20 minutes. Serve with sweet butter.

Makes approximately 36 wafers.

CHICKEN STOCK

- 3 pounds chicken wings, backs, or other bones
- 1 medium veal knuckle, cracked
- 4 quarts water
- 3 large onions, peeled and cut in half
- 2 large carrots, scrubbed and cut into large rings
- 2 medium leeks, carefully washed and cut into large rings
- Several large shallots, peeled but left whole
- 1 large bay leaf
- 8 parsley sprigs
- 8 large ribs celery with tops, broken into large pieces
- 1 teaspoon dried thyme
- 1 tablespoon salt
- 2 teaspoons freshly ground black pepper
- 1 whole clove

Select a stockpot large enough to comfortably hold all the above ingredients. Place the chicken, veal knuckle, and water in pot and bring to a boil. Skim foam, and add all the other ingredients. Bring back to a boil and reduce to the lowest possible heat; you want this to be barely simmering. Continue cooking for about 2 1/2 hours, skimming occasionally as necessary.

Strain the cooked stock through a damp cheesecloth-lined colander. Discard all solids. Cool and refrigerate the stock. When fat has congealed on top, remove and discard it. The stock may be used as is or frozen.

Mix and match for the perfect bicycle

(F) The "mix and match" concept took the fashion world by storm some years ago. A coordinated grouping of garments and accessories allowed fashion-conscious consumers to put together personalized outfits reflecting their individual tastes.

A high-technology version of the "mix and match" approach is now available from a number of bicycle manufacturers in Japan. Using computerized systems, precision measuring techniques, advanced materials and manufacturing expertise, they have developed custom order systems that enable knowledgeable consumers to construct their dream bikes—with delivery in only a few weeks

These special Custom Order Systems were originally introduced in the manufacturers' home market, and have become widely popular among Japanese bicycle consumers. They are now being offered by an increasing number of suppliers in the U.S.

Details of the systems vary. Many incorporate "high-tech" features such as on-the-spot CAD (computer-aided design), computerized order systems allowing thousands of variations, precise measuring techniques to size major components, customer design input, simultaneous facsimile transmission of completed orders and air freight delivery of the finished product.

All stress customized, quality bicycles within a surprisingly short time frame.

The systems start with precise measurements of arm and leg length and other critical rider dimensions to ensure an ideally configured bicycle. Most Japanese manufacturers offer this special custom plan for several types of bicycles—sport, racer, triathalon, ATB/MTB (off-road), and/or fitness—and for multiple models within each type.

Frame size is specified in increments as small as 10mm. There is usually a choice between advanced new alloys or more standard materials. And then the customer is on to components such as seat, post, gearing, derailleurs, handles and wheels. With all these mixing and matching choices, there are literally tens or even hundreds of thousands of possible combinations.

To complete the bicycle's full fashion appeal, the customer is offered extensive color and finish options, encompassing single, double and even triple color patterns, matte or metallic finishes, and a wide palette of hues from which to choose. The finishing touch is a bicycle version of the traditional monogram: Imprinting the owner's name on the fully customized bicycle, often with choices of style and location.

The result: A one-of-a-kind bicycle reflecting the customer's decisions on mixing and matching at every step, and delivery in less than a month.

For more information on Japanese Custom Order Systems, please contact the Bicycle Section, JETRO, New York, 1221 Avenue of the Americas, New York, NY 10020. T5897021

Sensible advice for switching to diet of healthier foods

If it's true that "you are what you eat," then many Americans have reason to be concerned. The typical American diet, high in fats, cholesterol, salt and sugar, and low in fiber and some essential nutrients, has now conclusively been shown to be a contributing factor in many cases of high blood pressure, coronary heart disease and some forms of cancer, as well as various other maladies.

Dietary changes are almost always in order for those who suffer from nutrition-related disorders; your doctor can give you advice and guidance. But, even if you and your family are in good health, with normal blood pressure and cholesterol levels, you may be thinking about modifying your diet to make it more healthful.

However, the transition to healthier foods is not always easy, as many people have discovered. If you are used to eating many processed foods, or a diet heavy in such things as red meat, white bread, and butter and sour cream, you may have difficulty changing your diet, or convincing your family of the necessity of doing so.

One problem people have when they try to modify their diets is that they don't know what choices they have. General guidelines, such as "Eat more fiber," don't really help if you don't know which foods are rich in fiber, or if you're not sure how to cook with whole wheat flour or brown rice.

Fortunately, there are many books available which can help you to choose healthy foods and to cook them in ways which will appeal to you and your family. However, you should choose a cookbook carefully. Beware of books which make outrageous claims. If it sounds too good to be true, it probably is. Remember, changing your diet will not be easy; you should not try to do it overnight.

Also, be aware that just because a food is "natural" does not necessarily mean that it is good for you. Eggs and butter, for example, are natural foods, but you should avoid them if you are trying to restrict your cholesterol intake.

Natural foods, however, are almost always better for you than highly processed foods. This is the premise which inspires Rodale's Basic Natural Foods Cookbook (Fireside Books/Simon & Schuster), by Charles Gerras and the staff of Rodale Press.

This book will tell you how to replace ingredients you use every day with more healthful alternatives, and how to select and prepare vegetables, grains, legumes, soyfoods, meats, fish and a wide variety of other ingredients. In addition, there are charts listing calorie, vitamin and sodium content of various foods.

Reproduced here, from Rodale's Basic Natural Foods Cookbook, is a recipe for Stuffed Cabbage. This filling dish is sure to be popular with your family, and is a great way to get kids to eat vegetables.

STUFFED CABBAGE

- 1/4 cup uncooked brown rice
- 1/3 cup water
- 3 tablespoons olive oil
- 1 medium-size onion, finely chopped
- 1/2 medium-size green pepper, finely chopped
- 1 1/2 cups thinly sliced mushrooms
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 1 1/2 teaspoons minced fresh mint or 1/2 teaspoon dried mint
- 1 medium-size tomato, finely chopped
- 1 teaspoon dried oregano
- 1/2 teaspoon soy sauce
- 1/4 cup sunflower seeds or pine nuts
- Cayenne pepper, to taste
- 12 large cabbage leaves
- 1 1/2 cups thin tomato sauce
- 1/2 lemon, thinly sliced
- Chopped fresh mint

Bring rice and water to a boil in a 2-quart saucepan. Cover, reduce heat to low, and cook until water has been completely absorbed, about 10 minutes.

Add 2 tablespoons of oil, the onions, and green peppers to the rice. Cook over low heat, stirring frequently, until vegetables are limp. Then stir in mushrooms, garlic, mint, tomato, oregano, and soy sauce, and cook gently, uncovered, until liquid from the tomato has been absorbed. Add sunflower seeds or pine nuts and sprinkle with cayenne. Remove pan from heat and set aside.

If cabbage leaves have thick ribs, trim backs of the ribs even with the leaves, keeping leaves intact. Steam just until color deepens.

Gently place leaves in a single layer on a clean surface. Place a tablespoon of stuffing at base of each leaf. Fold leaf end over stuffing, then fold in sides, and roll. The finished roll should look like a short, fat cigar.

Place a thin layer of remaining oil over the bottom of a heavy saucepan large enough to hold all the rolls in a single layer. Pour 3/4 cup of the tomato sauce into the pan, add cabbage rolls, seam-side down, cover with remaining tomato sauce, and simmer, covered, for 45 minutes.

Place lemon slices over cabbage rolls and simmer an additional 20 minutes. Before serving, garnish with chopped mint.

4 servings.

For many people, making the switch from processed to natural foods is not enough, because they also need to reduce the amount of fat, cholesterol, salt or sugar they consume. Luckily, there are more specialized cookbooks available, such as The New American Diet (Fireside Books/Simon & Schuster), by Sonja L. Connor, M.S., R.D., and William E. Connor, M.D., and The Control Your High Blood Pressure Cookbook (Doubleday), by Cleaves M. Bennett, M.D., and Cristine Newport.

The New American Diet is not a typical diet book, for it offers a three-phase plan for changing your eating habits for life. The first half of the book contains valuable nutritional information and advice; the second half is a compilation of recipes, many of them labeled "quick" or "easy," for cooks in a hurry.

The recipe reproduced here, for Chicken Cacciatore, is one of The New American Diet's "easy" recipes. The authors suggest that you serve it with pasta, a salad and French bread. Remove the skin from the chicken breasts to make this a low-fat, low-cholesterol dish.

CHICKEN CACCIATORE

- 4 chicken breasts
- 2 tablespoons flour
- 1 tablespoon oil
- 2 tablespoons chopped onion
- 1 can (6 ounces) unsalted tomato paste
- 1/2 cup white wine
- 1/4 teaspoon white pepper
- 3/4 cup chicken broth
- 1/2 bay leaf
- 1/8 teaspoon thyme leaves
- 1/2 teaspoon basil leaves
- 1/8 teaspoon marjoram leaves,
- 1 cup sliced fresh mushrooms

Roll skinned chicken breasts in flour. Saute in the oil until browned. Remove from skillet. Saute onions in remaining trace of oil. Add remaining ingredients and stir together. Replace chicken breasts in skillet and spoon sauce over top. Simmer the chicken, covered, for 45 minutes or until tender.

Makes 4 servings.

The Control Your High Blood Pressure Cookbook offers help for those who want to control their high blood pressure without medication and lose some weight in the process. The book offers information about the causes and control of hypertension, and provides plenty of tips about shopping for and preparing healthful foods, adapting recipes to make them lower in salt, fat and cholesterol, and eating nutritiously away from home.

The recipe which follows, for Cajun Fish Fry, is a tasty, low-fat alternative to greasy, deep-fried fish sticks.

CAJUN FISH FRY

Serves: 4

Ingredients

- 1/4 cup whole wheat flour
- 1/4 cup whole cornmeal
- 1 teaspoon garlic powder
- 1 tablespoon minced or powdered onion
- 1 tablespoon chopped parsley
- 1 tablespoon Vegit seasoning
- Cayenne or black pepper, to taste
- 4 fish fillets
- 1/2 cup plain low-fat yogurt or 1/2 cup skim milk

Method

In a bowl, combine flour, cornmeal, and seasonings. In another bowl, place yogurt or nonfat milk. Heat iron skillet or heavy frying pan. Spray with nonstick product such as Pam, or lightly oil. Dip fish fillets first in yogurt or milk, then dredge in flour-cornmeal mixture. Place in hot pan, fry briefly, flip and fry on other side. Serve while hot! Garnish with lemon wedges. Horseradish is a good condiment to serve with this crisp fish dish. P5895990

AN INSCRIPTION on "The American Immigrant Wall of Honor" at Ellis Island is a most meaningful gift. This year is the last chance to give this special gift for Mother's and Father's Day. Photo provided by: Andrew Holbrooke.

Mother's and Father's Day gift: Honor your family's heritage

This year's most powerful and lasting Mother's Day and Father's Day gift may be placing Mom's or Dad's name on the American Immigrant Wall of Honor at Ellis Island, the only national monument where Americans can honor their family name and celebrate their immigrant heritage.

Americans can place the name of a parent or ancestor on the Wall of Honor permanently for as little as $100. Proceeds help fund the Ellis Island restoration project and Immigration Museum.

The American Immigrant Wall of Honor, a special exhibit in the new Museum, will be dedicated to reflection on the poignant immigrant experience. Names for the Wall can be given as a gift this year only. After that, the Wall will be complete and the participants secured forever as part of the Ellis Island Immigration Museum.

"It's a once-in-a-lifetime chance to honor somebody you love," said Stephen Briganti, president of the Statue of Liberty-Ellis Island Foundation, which oversees the mammoth project.

"The Wall is a way to say "thank you" to parents, grandparents or other relatives who faced the risk and hardship of immigration to give us all an opportunity to live in America," he continued.

In fact, about 100 million Americans alive today—40 percent of the population—can trace their roots to one or more of the 17 million immigrants who passed through Ellis Island.

Whether your ancestors passed through Ellis Island or some other port, you can honor them on the Wall. As of February, 1989, over 60,000 names have been registered for The Wall of Honor, including immigrants from 94 countries on every continent.

The Wall of Honor will be a highlight of the Ellis Island Immigration Museum, which will be New York's third-largest museum when completed. Near the famed Great Hall, in which every Ellis Island immigrant's future was determined, the Wall of Honor is expected to draw 1.5 million visitors a year.

To secure a place on the American Immigrant Wall of Honor, call the Statue of Liberty-Ellis Island Foundation at 212-883-1986. Or write to the Foundation at P.O. Box Ellis, New York, NY 10163.

Tales of love and marriage

What makes a happy marriage or causes a divorce is one of the most difficult things to identify even though practically everyone has some strong opinions on the subject. Some find marriage frightening because in trying to create something beautiful, there is always the chance of failure or loss and indeed the beautiful things in life are the most perishable.

These fundamental questions about marriage are sensitively and deeply explored in an impressive new paperback anthology of short stories called Wives and Husbands (Mentor Books/New American Library). Twenty of today's prominent fiction writers recount stories of absolute devotion, of heartbreak, of rare intimacy.

In "Caviar" by F. Coraghessan Boyle, a silent, private tragedy unfolds when a childless couple takes in a young medical student as a surrogate mother. In Robert Hemenway's "The Girl Who Sang with the Beatles," a husband tries desperately to come closer to his pretty young wife, even if it means entering with her into the loneliness of insanity. Doris Lessing's "To Room Nineteen" is a terrible, chilling account of how empty a "perfect marriage" can be. "Getting On" is author Roxana Robinson's bittersweet interpretation of "until death do us part."

Wives and Husbands is alternately grim and uplifting, sweet and sorrowful. Perhaps a little heavy for honeymoon reading, this important collection is nevertheless a fascinating prism through which to look at love and marriage.

Save time and money with a reverse osmosis unit

Tex-Pure Drinking Water Systems, 1719 Gregg, introduces Sean George, new delivery and office helper at Tex-Pure. Sean will be working hard to provide many area customers with ice and bottled water during the up-coming months.

With the hot summer looming upon us, Tex-Pure Drinking Water Systems, 1719 Gregg, can put purified water and ice at your fingertips; easily, conveniently and economically.

"Sometimes we can rent a Reverse Osmosis system for less than it would cost to rent a dispenser and haul containers to be filled," said Ellouise Swinney, who along with her husband Don, own Tex-Pure. Renting a unit is certainly more convenient, you always have water when you need it. Tex-Pure takes care of maintenance on all units they lease and in most cases can tie the unit back to automatic ice-makers in your refrigerator. Units can be installed in homes, rented property, apartments, mobile homes, and businesses.

Water dispenser rentals are important to the business of Tex-Pure, along with home and business water delivery and emergency ice delivery.

Tex-Pure stocks a variety of bottles including 2- and 5-gallon bottles with spigots. Plastic table top dispensers are available, as well as a handy, battery-operated pump for 5-gallon bottles.

"We are proud of the service we give to homes and businesses — we deliver water when the customer needs it, not just when 'we're in the area,'" says Ellouise. "Our water comes in sterlized containers."

Weekly or more often, as required by the Texas State Department of Health, Tex-Pure's water product is tested. Also, on a monthly basis, an independent laboratory samples the water from the front faucets (for customers who bring bottles in to be filled.) "We're not in any other type of business — except water services, therefore, we devote all our time to the quality product you expect and deserve," Ellouise said.

Tex-Pure has 16 regular commercial customers, such as Fina-Mart, Neighbors and Star-Stop, which require ice delivery daily. They also deliver on an emergency basis to customers whose ice-making ability has been hindered in some fashion.

The firm's refrigerator truck can be seen parked at many festivals and activities, making the use of Tex-Pure's ice product a county wide affair.
