Killer Bees' Ouster Eyed By Clements

A-J News Services

AUSTIN — Gov. Bill Clements said today he was considering declaring the 12 "Killer Bee" Senate seats vacant and calling special elections to replace the missing senators.

"I think they're acting like some spoiled children," Clements said. "We may spank them."

Clements said he would ask Attorney General Mark White about legal precedents for declaring the missing senators' offices vacant because their five-day absence from the Capitol has paralyzed the Senate and blocked action on a bill the dissident legislators say is rigged to create a presidential primary favorable to Republican candidate John Connally.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said today the "Killer Bees" are expected to return at 3 p.m. to their jobs in the Senate following the five-day absence.

Hobby said he had talked with one of the 12 absent members, who advised him that the Senate should recess until 3 p.m.

"I'm sure the absent members will return and we can resume the normal business of the Senate," Hobby told other senators. He said the Senate would stand at ease until 3 p.m.

The "Killer Bees" had said they would return at midnight tonight, but Clements said their stalling tactics have increased the possibility of a special session that will cost taxpayers millions of dollars.

"It's certainly more a possibility than it was before," Clements told reporters at an impromptu news conference.

"That's just another side effect of these spoiled children and their behavior that is going to cost the taxpayers millions of dollars in a special session.

Hobby conceded Monday there was little prospect the Texas Legislature would pass a presidential primary bill before the session ends May 28.

"I doubt very seriously that the bill is going to be passed," Hobby said.

Hobby refused to pull down the measure, however, saying, "To reward behavior of this sort is obviously not wise."

Twelve senators — dubbed the "Killer Bees" for their persistence in stalling bills they oppose — went into hiding Friday and eluded a statewide search by Texas Rangers to keep the Senate from having a quorum and prevent action on the primary issue. Their absence also prevented the Senate from acting on any other legislation such as a controversial wiretapping bill or products liability controversy.

The 19 remaining senators met with Hobby Monday night and discussed but quickly dismissed a move to drop the statewide alert for the arrest of the 12 missing senators as a conciliatory gesture.

The lieutenant governor did decide to postpone until today any move to temporarily replace the missing senators on key negotiating committees. Hobby had indicated he would name "acting conferees" to fill in for the absentees Monday afternoon to allow joint House-Senate conference committees to work on a compromise school finance plan and other key issues.

Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, one of the 12 "fugitive" senators, tantalized Hobby Monday with a telephone call saying he was driving in from Dallas and would be at the Capitol around noon.

Brooks later issued a statement through his Houston office, however, saying he had not abandoned the "Killer Bees" and only offered to meet with Hobby to "try to negotiate a settlement of the stalemate that has paralyzed the Senate."

Hobby's proposal for a separate presidential primary in March, 1980, would allow conservative Democrats to vote

White Verdict Ignites Mob

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Police used tear gas to break up a mob of about 5,000 angry demonstrators, many of them homosexual, who stormed City Hall and set police cars afire after a jury ruled the killings of Mayor George Moscone and gay Supervisor Harvey Milk were manslaughter — not murder.

Dozens were injured Monday night and damage was estimated at $200,000. Police arrested 20 persons, mostly for looting. One had thrown a brick at an officer, police said.

Early today, the city was quiet. Some 14 police officers stood in front of City Hall, where the grounds were still littered with debris and glass shards. Charred patrol cars had been towed away.

The city's gay community had expected the jury to find former Supervisor Dan White, who admitted the killings, guilty of murder in last fall's City Hall shooting. A verdict of first-degree murder, sought by the prosecution, could have brought the death penalty. Under the verdict of voluntary manslaughter, White could be free in less than five years.

After the verdict was announced, the demonstrators gathered and marched on City Hall as the sun set.

The demonstrators used iron bars to smash the doors of the ornate domed building, set cars afire and rampaged through the streets around City Hall. Chanting, they pelted City Hall with rocks, tomatoes and eggs.

Several persons were injured by flying glass when the doors were smashed, and police used Mace to control the crowd. Tear gas cannisters left a pall of acrid mist over the melee.

More than a dozen police cars and private vehicles were set ablaze and their gasoline tanks exploded.

Supervisor Carol Ruth Silver was struck in the face by a rock. Her injuries reportedly were not serious.

When the verdicts were announced, Mayor Dianne Feinstein issued a statement saying they were "very hard to handle. As I look at the law, this was a murder — two murders."

At 1:15 a.m., after the mob had been dispersed, she promised a "major police presence in the city" today to control any further rioting. "I know feelings are running high in the city and I understand and I share them," she said. "But there is no excuse for this kind of violence."

Milk, the first avowed homosexual elected to the Board of Supervisors, would have been 49 today.

The maximum sentence for White, 32, under the jury's verdict would be just less than eight years.

White had admitted shooting Moscone and Milk in their offices last Nov. 27, after trying to convince Moscone to reinstate him to a supervisor's seat he had resigned. Milk opposed reinstatement.

White's defense was mental illness.

When the seven women and five men on the jury brought in their verdict, they were grim-faced after six days of deliberations, and nearly a month of being sequestered in a hotel during testimony.

They refused to talk about the verdicts, but one juror, white-haired Grayce Jackson, described the jury as "very tense, very upset."

White bowed his head when the second verdict, for Milk's death, was read. There was a collective gasp in the packed 92-seat courtroom. And outside it, reaction was swift.

Many in the city's large homosexual community, estimated at one-sixth of its 660,000 residents, marched from predominantly gay Castro Street to City Hall. The demonstration began peacefully, with shrill whistles and angry chants. Some protesters carried placards reading, "Avenge Harvey Milk." Then came the march to City Hall, and the violence.

Moscone was shot twice in the body and twice in the head at close range with a .38-caliber revolver. Milk was shot a moment later.

Auto Taxes Bill Wins Approval

AUSTIN (AP) — House-Senate negotiators decided today to exempt all personal cars from property taxes but leave school boards and city councils free to tax them if they can stand the political heat.

The conferees on a bill (HB1060) implementing the 1978 Tax Relief Amendment also agreed that it should take effect with tax notices sent out this year.

But the conferees agreed to give school districts an out if district officials feel they cannot make up new rolls based on new rules for taxing farm and ranch land and giving elderly Texas bigger homestead exemptions.

A school board, after issuing notice and holding a public hearing, could delay the tax reductions until 1980.

Rep. Tim Von Dohlen, D-Goliad, said the conferees should stick with 1979 implementation of the Tax Relief Amendment.

"The public expects it," he said, and most school districts already know the productive value of agricultural land within their boundaries.

"I kind of agree with Tim. I know it will be hard. I know they will scream and holler, but they can do it," said Rep. Wayne Peveto, D-Orange.

There was virtually no discussion of taxation of cars, with the House negotiators simply agreeing with the Senate position that individual and family autos should not be taxed unless local governing bodies are willing to stand the heat of re-imposing them.

Still to be resolved are two major issues:

— Reimbursement of the estimated $450 million in revenue that school districts would lose because of tax cuts imposed either by the Tax Relief Amendment or the bill implementing it.

House members provided a reimbursement formula in their bill, while the Senate wants to return the money through the normal state school aid formula.

— How to measure the state's economic growth. The Tax Relief Amendment limits increases in state spending to the rate of growth of the Texas economy.

The Senate wants the Legislative Budget Board to determine the growth rate.

BULLETIN

AUSTIN (UPI) — The Texas House today approved and sent to the governor legislation abolishing the state's 10 percent interest ceiling on home mortgage loans and establishing a new ceiling that would allow interest rates to rise as high as 12 percent.

Audit Of CETA Program Fails To Uncover Fraud

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A "literal" audit of the local operations of a federal job training program turned up approximately $148,000 worth of questions, but uncovered no fraud, an auditor told South Plains Association of Government board members this morning.

Charles Cole of Kelly, Cole and Co. told board members his firm was asked by the Department of Labor to perform a financial and compliance audit of Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) funds from October 1, 1976, through June 30, 1978.

That audit was submitted to the Department of Labor in November, Cole said, and awaits SPAG answers to questions raised in the audit.

Cole said his firm "did a very literal audit and questioned anything not in exact compliance" with federal regulations.

"We found no evidence of fraud," Cole said, adding the $148,409 worth of questions may be resolved when SPAG submits its explanations.

"There has been substantial improvement in CETA operations," Cole said.

On questioning by Councilwoman Carolyn Jordan, Cole acknowledged "the preponderance" of the problems occurred in the first 12 to 13 months of the audit period.

SPAG board president Medlin Carpenter labeled disclosure of the audit "premature" and suggested that an ad hoc committee be appointed to explore the audit in depth once the Department of Labor completed its examination.

With board approval of that idea, Lubbock County Judge Rod Shaw, Mrs. Jordan and Post Mayor Giles McCrary were named to study the audit and report back to the board.

On questioning about why the audit was not presented to the SPAG board until today, Cole said SPAG management was aware of the audit and Carpenter said he attended the exit interview for the audit in November.

Cole said it was his understanding the audit would be presented to the Department of Labor before being presented to the SPAG board since the federal government was paying for the audit.

"The process has not been completed at this point in time," Cole said.

Some of the procedures questioned in the audit included "some instances where we couldn't find documentation on certain participants as to their eligibility," and some participants not meeting residency requirements within certain parts of the city of Lubbock.

Also this morning, the SPAG board received its annual audit and accompanying management letter which recommended certain procedural changes.

Cole suggested "closer control over

CHARITIES FEEL MONEY PINCH

Inflation Squeezing U.S. Generosity

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Inflation is putting the squeeze on American generosity.

Officials of major charities say they face a three-pronged problem: It is harder to raise money, costs are going up and appeals for help are increasing.

"It's really rough," said Martin K. McAnally, senior vice president of the United Way of Greater St. Louis. "We have been hit more and more for emergency situations related to things like being able to pay gas and electric bills.

"The volunteer agencies are no longer able to keep up with requests for that kind of help. We just don't have the money."

McAnally said the chapter has raised $21.3 million for 1979 — about 7 percent more than it did last year. "But it's not even coming close in terms of increased service requests," he said.

The picture varies from area to area and charity to charity. An Associated Press spot check showed, for example, that in Tucson, Ariz., where the economy is booming, charities are in good shape. And the hardest-hit associations appear to be local, social service groups rather than organizations with national affiliations.

On a general basis, Fred Schnaue, director of public relations for the American Association of Fund-Raising Counsel Inc., said: "Charities are having a tough time."

Schnaue said, however, that "overall giving has risen." From 1977 to 1978, he said, contributions to charities increased 9.4 percent, a little more than the rate of inflation.

Individuals gave $32.8 billion to charity last year, 82.9 percent of the total and 11.4 percent more than in 1977.

The biggest chunk of the money — 45.6 percent — went to churches and religious groups, Schnaue said. Educational organizations got 14 percent, causes related to health and hospitals received 13.8 percent and the remaining money went to social welfare, the arts, civic groups, etc.

Schnaue said he could not predict what will happen in the coming year, but added: "Obviously, the other components of the economy ... hurt giving to some degree."

William Schweinler, executive director of the Kansas division of the American Cancer Society, said his group normally can expect a year-to-year increase in contributions of 7 percent to 12 percent. "But we are working hard now just to keep even with last year."

A similar story came from Dan Henroid, director of the Easter Seals chapter in St. Louis. "We have seen kind of a flat maintenance if not a slight erosion" in contributions, he said. At the same time, Henroid said, the chapter is getting "more and more of a call for our kind of assistance not from people who are poor, but from middle-class people who have never had to ask for help before."

Thunderstorms Strike Texas

A-J News Services

Violent thunderstorms dumped several inches of rain on the Texas Hill Country and Central Texas Monday night, and lightning touched off blazes that emptied Austin's firehouses.

Flood warnings and watches and severe thunderstorm warnings were posted throughout Texas Monday as the thunderstorms rumbled eastward from the Northwest Texas area.

Meanwhile, on the South Plains today, rainfall appeared to be coming to an end — at least for a couple of days — but not before most of the area got a good soaking.

Six of 29 area stations reporting rainfall through Monday night measured more than 2 inches of precipitation. Thirteen of the 29 stations had more than 1 inch of precipitation.

Lubbock garnered the most rainfall of the 29 stations reporting with 3.11 inches of rain up to 8:45 a.m. today. However, the biggest unofficial total was at New Deal, where one resident reported 5 inches of rain through Monday night.

Second on the area list was Floydada with 2.88 inches. Silverton was next with 2.80, followed by Locketville with 2.57; Abernathy, 2.41; Plainview, 2.30; Brownfield, 1.75; Levelland, 1.67; Littlefield, 1.65; and Olton, 1.41.

Other stations reporting significant rainfall through Monday night were Seminole with 1.20; Spur, 1.19; Paducah, 1.18; Matador, .90; Crosbyton, .82; Muleshoe, .75; Tahoka, .60; Tulia, .58; Snyder and Morton, both .56; Muleshoe Wildlife Refuge, .53; and Jayton, .42.

Reporting lesser amounts were Dimmitt with .40; Post, .38; Lamesa, .29; Plains, .14; Hereford, .03; Friona, .02; and Big Spring, trace.

The rains were expected to be a boon to area farmers — particularly many dryland farmers who had lacked sufficient moisture to plant.

Lubbock's rainfall brought the total for the year to 8.60 inches, almost double the 4.38 recorded at this time last year.

An upper level disturbance moved eastward today over the South Plains, producing a clearing trend and warmer weather. Conditions should be fair tonight and Wednesday and warmer Wednesday. The high temperature today was expected to be in the mid-70s with the low tonight predicted in the mid-50s.

The high temperature Wednesday is expected to hit the mid-80s.

The extended forecast by the National Weather Service for Thursday through Saturday predicts scattered mainly afternoon and evening showers and thunderstorms with warm afternoons and near seasonal nighttime temperatures.

The high temperatures Thursday through Saturday are expected to be near 90 degrees and the lows at night in the upper 50s.

Elsewhere in Texas, more than 4 inches of rain fell in the Central Texas area as severe thunderstorm, tornado and flash flood warnings were prompted from north of Dallas and Fort Worth to Houston and South Texas.

Roads were reported under water at one time in Sherman, north of Dallas, and Breckenridge, west of Fort Worth.

Flood warnings were issued for the Colorado River from Austin to Bastrop, the Little River in the Cameron area, and the San Gabriel River in the

Canadians To Choose Between Trudeau, Clark

TORONTO (AP) — Canadians from Eskimo settlements above the Arctic Circle to the steel and glass canyons of major cities today choose the government that will lead them into the 1980s and through the gravest crisis in their nation's 112-year history.

The choice is between the Liberal administration of Pierre Elliott Trudeau, the flashy, tough-talking French-Canadian who has been prime minister for the past 11 years, and the opposition Progressive Conservatives, led by untested 39-year-old Westerner Joe Clark.

In a two-month campaign, Trudeau appealed for support in the name of national unity, saying only he could keep separatist-minded Quebec province from seceding and splitting the country in two. Clark told Canadians that for the sake of a troubled economy it was time for a change at the top.

The opinion polls showed the two major parties dead even at about 40 percent each in the popular vote. But because of the peculiarities of Canada's parliamentary system and political patterns, analysts gave the Conservatives a slight edge.

It would be the first Conservative government since 1963, and Clark, the career politican who would head it, Canada's youngest prime minister.

An expected 70 percent of Canada's 14.5 million eligible voters were casting ballots for their representatives in a newly expanded 282-member Houseof Commons. Polling places were open to 8 p.m.

The party winning the most seats generally forms the government and its leader becomes prime minister for a maximum mandate of five years. In today's election neither major party is expected to win a clear 142-seat majority. The one winning a plurality can expect to rule as a minority government for a year or two, longer if it can get firm support from a minor party.

Trudeau, 59, spent most of the campaign's final day at his country retreat near Ottawa, then traveled to Montreal and watched the Canadiens defeat the New York Rangers for the Stanley Cup hockey championship at the Montreal Forum.

Clark's last campaign hours were spent in his home province of Alberta, in Canada's West, the base from which he worked his way up from running campaign errands to member of Parliament and leader of his national party in a surprisingly swift climb.

The campaign in the end came down to the issue of these two personalities.

During his many years in power, Trudeau, wealthy, intellectual, perfectly bilingual in French and English, angered many Canadians with his occasional arrogance and solo style of governing. Clark said Trudeau's strong central government, suppressing the provinces' self-assertiveness, actually was a divisive factor in the country.

The youthful Conservative chief, uninspiring in manner and appearance, bland on the stump, short on experience, left many Canadians worried about his abilities to lead the nation. Trudeau said Clark would be a weak leader, a "headwaiter" serving up whatever the provinces wanted, and would let Quebec go off on its own.

Clark's theme was "Let's get Canada working again." He assailed the Trudeau economic record, pointing to 10 percent inflation, 8 percent unemployment and huge government deficits. He proposed new programs to aid private business and big tax cuts, including U.S.-style deductions for mortgage-interest payments.

Ed Broadbent, leader of the socialist New Democrats, the third-strongest party, denounced Trudeau for the inflation and unemployment, dismissed the Conservatives as lackeys of big business, and called for greater government intervention in the economy and industry.

He also demanded that Canada throw out the U.S. multinationals that control much of this country's rich natural resources.

Broadbent's NDP is expected to win 20 or so Commons seats. Trudeau said during the campaign he might consider trying to cling to power with the support of the New Democrats even if the Conservatives win a few more Commons seats than his Liberals.

The prime minister summarized his basic appeal in one of his final campaign appearances.

The voters, he said, must elect a government that will "ensure that all together we will help each other, the rich and the poor, the French and the English, north and south, east and west."

But Trudeau's national unity issue, a complicated question of constitutional law and tangled history, never caught on with the voters outside Quebec — most of whom think French-speaking Quebec simply will never secede, and some of whom would just prefer that it did.

Trudeau said his strong central government, which has substantial support in Quebec, could face down the separatists who now rule the province. Clark says his plans for constitutional reform and decentralization of power would give Quebec the autonomy it wants and keep it in the Canadian confederation.

But some Canadians worry that a Conservative government, whose support is almost totally in English Canada, would polarize the country further along French and English lines.

Russian Fans Uncontrollable At Elton John's Rock Concert

LENINGRAD, U.S.S.R. (AP) — British rock star Elton John's first concert in the Soviet Union erupted into a frenzy, with nearly 4,000 Russian fans dancing on their seats or in the aisles.

Uniformed Leningrad police and other Soviet officials were helpless to control the screaming, clapping mobs Monday night.

"I was determined to make it successful," the 32-year-old singer told reporters after the concert. "That's the biggest achievement I've ever received as an artist."

After the 2½-hour performance, which John ended with a spur-of-the-moment rendition of the Beatles hit tune, "Back in the U.S.S.R.," young people at first refused to leave the Oktyabrsky Concert Hall. "El-ton, El-ton," cried the teen-agers who surged below the stage.

Outside the hall, at least 2,000 youths spilled over wooden barriers and a human chain of police just to catch one more glimpse of John, who stood in his dressing room window and waved to the crowd.

"I'm so delighted. The kids are incredible," John said.

An official with the Soviet concert agency, Goskontsert, which had arranged the British star's appearance after months of negotiations, said: "I've never see anything like this. Never."

John said young Russians were "starved" for Western rock 'n' roll music, and for well-known performers from Europe and the United States to visit the Soviet Union.

"Maybe this is the start ... I hope it's a break in the barriers," he said.

No Western rock star as well known as John has ever been allowed to tour the Soviet Union. Monday night's performance was the first of four concerts he will give in Leningrad, followed by four more shows at Moscow's Rossiya Hotel.

The British rocker noted that after 10 years of performing to huge audiences all over the West, "I needed a challenge so we said, 'Let's try Russia.'"

Before John even walked on stage, scores of young people were gathered outside the hall trying to beg a ticket from foreigners and passers-by. Tickets were said to be selling on the black market for 100 rubles — $150 — each.

John greeted his audience by saying "Dobry vecher" (Good evening) and gave a short bow as fans admired his purple satin tunic-and-pants outfit worn with a black, gold-spangled scarf.

The audience ranged from middle-age women in bouffant hairdos to jeans-clad, leather-jacketed teen-agers in the rear of the hall.

Groups of teen-agers ran up to the stage in between songs to give the singer flowers, for his autograph or get a kiss on the cheek until concert hall ushers blocked off the way to the stage.

One group of well-wishers was even expelled from the hall.

The atmosphere electrified when percussionist Ray Cooper arrived on stage in an eerie, dramatic swirl of smoke and pulsing strobe light that sent the Soviet crowd whstling and cheering.

The two performers launched into expert renditions of their famous hits, including "Saturday Night," "Tommy" and "Crocodile Rock."

They brought both young and old leaping to their feet with the chart-topping tune "Benny and the Jets."

Cooper and John urged the crowd to clap and sing along. Hundreds streamed down the aisles to crowd in front of the stage, to the distress of Soviet officials.

Actor's Health Failing

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Johnny Weissmuller is being transferred to a convalescent home because his health — not his mind — is failing, says an attorney for Weissmuller's wife.

Albert Coombes on Monday disputed statements by Jack Staggs of the Motion Picture and Country Hospital, where the 74-year-old former "Tarzan" movie star is staying. Staggs had indicated the actor is suffering from "psychological problems."

"The move was only necessitated by fear that medically he might need 24-hour care," Coombes said. "The problem is that Johnny has several medical conditions that could endanger his life, were he to be unattended for a period of time."

Mayor Eyes Fourth Term

BOSTON (AP) — Kevin H. White, elected mayor of Boston in 1968, says he will try for an unprecedented fourth successive term.

WHITE

White met Monday with Vice President Walter Mondale and House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass. The group scotched rumors that President Carter might offer White an ambassadorship to give O'Neill's son — the state's lieutenant governor — a shot at the mayor's job.

White, a Democrat, is in his third four-year term. He is the only Boston mayor to have served 12 years. The term was increased from two to four years shortly before his arrival.

Nkomo Cautions U.S., Britain

NEW YORK (AP) — Guerrilla leader Joshua Nkomo says he couldn't care less if Britain and the United States choose to recognize the new government of Rhodesia.

NKOMO

But, he cautioned Monday, both should take pains to avoid the wrath of black Africans determined to bring majority rule to their continent.

"They should be very careful not to place themselves in a difficult situation, so when the situation changes — and it is changing — they are not on the wrong side," Nkomo told The Associated Press in an interview.

"I am not concerned, because it would not change our situation," Nkomo said of the six-year guerrilla war for black rule. He said the war would bring down Rhodesia's new government this year.

Jagger To Pay Bills

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bianca Jagger will get some financial help from her estranged husband, Mick, to pay for medical repairs after a rollerskating accident.

Jagger's attorneys said he was in England Monday, but Mrs. Jagger was present when a judge ordered the rock star to pay his wife $12,000 in temporary support and up to $2,500 for her medical bills.

Superior Court Judge Harry Shafer also ruled Monday that Jagger must deposit $35,000 to be held for paying Mrs. Jagger's attorney fees as the couple's bitterly disputed divorce case proceeds.

Shafer delayed testimony on the question of Mrs. Jagger's monthly support for herself and the couple's child, 7-year-old Jade, pending the outcome of a support hearing in England.

Mrs. Jagger appeared at the hearing leaning on a cane. She injured her knee last week in a rollerskating accident.

Neighbor Halts Burglary

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A sharp-eyed neighbor helped foil a weekend burglary attempt at Barbra Streisand's Bel-Air home, according to police.

MISS STREISAND

Detective Gerald Winkle said Monday that officers recovered $30 from Carol McClure, 42, of Oklahoma City, after arresting her at Miss Streisand's home Sunday. The officers were summoned by a neighbor who was keeping an eye on the home while the actress-singer was gone.

Miss McClure was booked for investigation of burglary.

Fair Warning

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — When Robert Melton was arrested and charged with the robbery of a convenience store, he told officers they weren't going to be able to keep him in jail.

The Lighter Side Of Today's News

According to police spokesman Billy Tinsley, Melton was placed under $20,000 bond and sent Monday to the Tuscaloosa County Jail.

A little more than two hours later, Tinsley said, the 27-year-old Melton asked to use a telephone and, instead of going into the phone booth, ran to the street, jumped into a waiting car and disappeared.

Said Tinsley: "Obviously he was a man of his word."

Korea Sees Increase In Deficit

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Soaring costs of oil and other imported goods will drive South Korea's trade deficit to a record $3.6 billion this year, surpassing the 1974 deficit of $1.9 billion, according to the Korean Development Institute's latest projection.

The nation's current account deficit also will hit a record $2.3 billion this year, $300 million higher than the previous record of $2 billion in 1974, the state-financed institute reported today.

One estimate values this year's oil imports at $3.3. billion, up from last year's $2.1 billion. South Korea entirely depends on imports for oil.

The government at the start of the year hoped for a $2.5 billion trade deficit, with exports and imports estimated at $15.5 billion and $18 billion, respectively.

The government also planned to hold the nation's current account deficit below $1.4 billion, compared with last year's $1.1 billion.

Korean imports have been outpacing exports since the start of the year, spurred by the government's import liberalization policy, partly to fight inflation due to shortages of consumer and other goods.

As of May 15, consumer and wholesale prices were reported to have climbed 10 percent since the start of the year.

Ambassador Confirms Massacre Of Students

PARIS (AP) — The Central African Empire's ambassador to France today confirmed the recent massacre of children in his country, resigned his post in protest and asked France for political asylum.

Sylvestre Bangui told a news conference at the Paris embassy that he also has demanded his government remove him from his post as a general in the imperial army.

"If I had to put on that uniform now, with what the army has done, I would blush if I could," Bangui said.

The Paris section of the London-based human rights organization Amnesty International reported last week that on April 18 troops of Emperor Bokassa I's imperial guard killed about 100 school children between the ages of 8 and 16.

Citing "numerous, varied and reliable sources, both African and European," Amnesty said the children were stabbed, stoned and beaten to death because of their demonstrations against the government.The students were protesting government regulations requiring them to buy and wear uniforms to school, Amnesty said.

Bokassa has denied any children were killed.

"I accuse the Central African regime of having murdered its own children, endangering the future of the country," Bangui said. "You have to be without a heart to murder children marching with arms raised and shouting for the rebirth of the Central African Republic."

The country, a former French colony, was known as the Central African Republic before Bokassa proclaimed himself emperor and changed the name of the country in December 1976.

Bangui said he received his information about the "dark night" of April 18 from members of the army in the Central African Empire. He said he has formed a "Liberation Front for Ubanguis."

The ambassador said he submitted his resignation to the emperor Oct. 30, but it had not been acted on. In view of the events in his homeland, he said he made the resignation effective today.

Bangui stressed that his action was personal, that he was addressing reporters as a private citizen and that he asked his colleagues at the embassy not to get involved in his decision.

Amnesty said Friday that it had received new information backing up its original reports of 100 deaths.

Bokassa, who is attending a Franco-African summit in Kigali, Rwanda, said Monday that no children were massacred. However, a report in the Paris daily L'Humanite Monday, quoting a French woman who just returned from the Central African Empire, said Bokassa was at the scene of the murders.

The woman said she had not seen the killings, but had talked with survivors and families of missing children.

Bikinians Seek Relocation To Hawaii

HONOLULU (AP) — In 1956, the people of Bikini Island left their tiny spit of sand in the Pacific Ocean after the U.S. government said the move would lead them to the "promise land."

But today — 23 years later — the islanders say the assurances proved hollow; the promised land, a prison.

The Bikinians now live on Kili Island, another atoll in the Marshall Island group, which they call "our prison island." They are considering relocating to Hawaii until it is safe to go home.

However, Adrian Winkel, high commissioner of the U.S. Trust Territory, said Monday radiation levels on Bikini Island — devastated by nuclear test blasts — won't be low enough to allow permanent habitation for another 30 years.

Winkel, members of the Bikini-Kili Council, and representatives of the Marshall Islands, are on Hawai Island this week to discuss relocation. An inspection tour is scheduled today.

He emphasized talks are only in the exploratory stages and said there are other possibilities. One alternative calls for the United States to acquire part of an atoll for relocation.

At a news conference at the Hawaii State Capitol Monday, the Bikini-Kili Council members issued a brief statement saying they agreed to allow atomic testing on their island in exchange for a promise that it "would lead us to the promise land."

"We are still awaiting the promise land," they said.

In 1968, the Bikinians said they were told by late former President Lyndon Johnson that their island was "perfectly safe" from radiation poisoning. Many moved back only to find themselves forced to move again last year after tests showed they were being exposed to dangerous radiation levels.

"We do not know who to believe any more. We do not understand why the U.S. cannot take away the contaminated earth," Council members said.

"We are looking for a place until the radiation leaves the island," they said. "We want to see if our ways can follow the Hawaiian ways."

CATERPILLARS CHANGE COLOR

PEORIA, Ill. (AP) — That's not a pigment of your imagination — the Caterpillar Tractor Co. has decided to change the color of the familiar bright yellow paint on its equipment for the first time since 1933. Beginning July 30, Caterpillar will use a brownish-yellow, approximately the color of a manila envelope. Gale Ekstrand, a Caterpillar chemist, said new federal rules guiding the use of lead-based paint would make it too expensive to continue using the old paint.

KIDS-ONLY CLUB

Fish Bowl Games Provide Fun

By SHARI LEWIS

Pitch-a-Penny-in-the-Goldfish-Bowl games have been great favorites at carnivals for years and years. Here's how you can set one up in your yard:

Fill a large tub or kiddie pool with water. (Inflatable pools are perfect!) In the middle, submerge a round fish bowl or any curved dish which is open at the top. Just make sure the bowl can be seen by the people pitching the pennies.

Players stand 3 to 4 feet away (depending upon how old they are and how long their reach is) and try to toss pennies into the sunken bowl.

It looks easy. It isn't. The water makes the pennies slip and slide and drift around and only a few will get into the bowl. Give a point for each penny that does get in.

If you and your friends (or your club) use this pitching game as part of a carnival, put no limit on the number of tosses since your club will collect and keep all of the pennies in the bottom of the tub for your treasury.

YESTERDAY'S BRAIN TWISTER: How is it possible for two fathers and two sons to divide 21 $1 bills evenly among themselves, with each receiving an equal number of bills?

ANSWER: The two fathers and two sons consisted of a grandfather, a father and a son. Therefore, each would receive 7 $1 bills.

Dutch Order Retrial Of Menten

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — The Dutch Supreme Court ruled today that millionaire Pieter Menten should stand trial again on charges of complicity in a World War II massacre of 20 to 30 Polish Jews.

The verdict was greeted with shouts of joy from the public benches which were jammed by more than 100 onlookers, many of them members of the World War II Dutch Resistance movement.

Outside the courthouse, about 200 anti-Menten demonstrators, some wearing the Jewish Star of David, paraded with banners on the steps and laid flowers and wreaths there.

Menten, a veteran art dealer who will be 80 on Saturday, was not in court to hear the verdict. The five judges ruled that the new trial will take place in Rotterdam.

The court upheld a public prosecutor's appeal against a lower court decision Dec. 4 that set Menten free on grounds of his undocumented claim that he had received a promise of immunity from former Dutch Justice Minister Leen Donkert in 1953.

"We cannot be satisfied that any such promise was indeed made," said the court's president, Judge Maarten Moos, in delivering judgement.

He added that Menten might have had expectations of immunity if a promise had been given, "but this court accepts the view of the experts in testimony that no promise or decision was ever proven."

Justice Ministry spokesmen said it would be up to the Rotterdam Public Prosecutor's office to decide whether a warrant should be obtained for Menten's arrest while he awaits trial.

The spokesmen said they knew where to find Menten but would not disclose his whereabouts. According to his representatives Menten has been secluded at a secret address in the Netherlands since his release from jail.

The Supreme Court's ruling means that Menten will go on trial once more on charges that he took part in the 1941 execution of 20 to 30 Jews at the Polish village of Podhoroce, now part of the Soviet Ukraine. This was the charge on which he drew a 15-year jail term at his 1977 trial in Amsterdam.

After Menten was released from jail last December, Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin attacked the court decision as an outrage and described the white-haired Dutchman as "a war criminal of the worst category."

Begin's government later tried unsuccessfully to persuade Dutch authorities to extradite Menten. The Dutch also turned down a Soviet extradition request which said that Menten "should not escape responsibility." Polish officials registered their "deep indignation" over the earlier court ruling.

Menten's battle to avoid prosecution started three years ago. Acting on a tip from an Israeli journalist, the Dutch magazine Accent carried reports linking the millionaire with Nazi killings.

Shortly after the war he served an eight-month jail term for collaborating with the Germans, but charges at that time did not include atrocities. He has always denied such involvement.

After a lengthy investigation which included opening mass graves on Soviet territory, Dutch police went to arrest Menten at his 40-room mansion near Amsterdam in Dec. 1976.

They found he had fled the country hours earlier. Two weeks later, he was tracked to a hotel near Zurich and extradited to Holland. He remained in custody from that time until his release last December.

DR. LAMB

Angry About Impotence

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — This is very important to me so I hope you'll answer my question. I'm married and 38 years old. For the last four to five years we haven't had any sexual relations because my husband is impotent. What does this do to me physically and mentally? I'm frustrated and depressed and feel old and angry. I'm mad at him all the time. Is this natural?

DEAR READER — Assuming that your husband is somewhere near your age group, it is certainly not natural for him to be impotent.

I'm sending you The Health Letter number 3-12 on Impotence so you can better understand the many different causes of this problem. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

It's important to realize that impotence is a symptom. It can be caused by many different things.

When you don't have a normal married life, it's much easier to feel that you're not loved. That in itself leads to frustration. There's no real evidence that the absence of sex will cause you physical or medical harm but your reaction to not having sex can. After all, whatever else sex is it's one way of expressing closeness and affection for your mate. By the time older people reach the stage in life that sex is often less important to them, they will have built up a basic, sound, emotional relationship to each other and have a full appreciation of how much they mean to each other with or without sex. It's not the only way of expressing affection.

Your husband should see a physician to gain an understanding as to why he is impotent. Once the cause is understood, then meningful measures may be taken to do something about it.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a very afraid 14-year-old girl. I am positive I have breast cancer. My chest is so very small and I have big lumps in both of them. They don't hurt very much until now. When I get jabbed or something like that, it hurts. I can't sleep on my stomach either. Please tell me who to turn to. I'm not very close to my parents so I don't really want to tell them. What doctor should I go to? If this goes untreated, how long will it take until I die? Will it be painful? Please help me.

DEAR READER — It's most unlikely that you have cancer. I presume from your letter that you mean you have some lumps in your breast. At this age of your development these are probably related to endocrine changes in your body. You're growing up.

In any case, I know you'll feel a lot better if you do see a doctor since you are concerned about it. If you have a school physician that you're able to see or a school nurse, that would be a good person to see. Or if you have a family doctor, go talk to him or her.

It would really be nice if you'd learn to talk to your mother about such problems. She's been through a lot of things and you might be surprised how smart she is. If you learn to share some of your problems with your mother, maybe the two of you will be a lot closer than you feel that are right now.

Israel To Take Firm Stand

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel plans to take a tough stance on Palestinian self-rule when it opens talks with Egypt and the United States in Beersheba Friday, sources said.

The sources, who asked not to be identified, said the Cabinet on Monday adopted proposals even more specific on the future of Palestinians in the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip than those drafted by Prime Minister Menachem Begin.

Israel will demand the right to expropriate uncultivated private land as well as public land, apparently for new Jewish settlements, the sources said.

The document the Cabinet adopted states explicitly, the sources said, that the Israeli military government will be the source of authority for the autonomous regime — meaning, in the Israeli view, that Israel could dismiss a self-governing Arab council if it oversteps its mandate.

Before the Cabinet adopted its position, Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan and Defense Minister Ezer Weizman asked to be removed from the six-man Israeli negotiating team, Cabinet Secretary Arieh Naor said after the six-hour meeting.

Both men acceded to pleas from other Cabinet ministers and agreed not to withdraw from the team, but only if the Cabinet adopted its position as a set of guidelines and not an official working paper to be presented to Egypt, the sources said.

In announcing the plans, Naor said the plans are considered guidelines for negotiations, implying room for maneuver and compromise. He said the government intended the self-rule plan to apply only to Palestinian inhabitants of the occupied areas, and that Israel would continue to control the land and resources.

Begin leaves today for a four-day visit to London, where he is to meet with Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance for informal talks on the Palestinian autonomy plan. Vance, who is to be in Beersheba for the ceremonial opening of the negotiations on Friday, is in London for talks with Britain's new Conservative government.

Begin also will meet with new British prime minister, Margaret Thatcher, opposition Labor Party leader and former Prime Minister James Callaghan and members of the Jewish Community.

In Beirut, Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organzation said Israeli gunners and Christian militiamen on Monday fired on the Rashidiyeh Palestinian refugee camp and the town of Ras el Ein, both of which are south of Tyre, 12 miles north of the Israeli border, but the Israeli militiary command said it was unaware of the alleged incident.

The PLO did not give casualty figures. There are about 13,000 refugees at the camp.

The Israeli command said Israeli naval patrols recently intercepted a Beirut-bound Latin American cargo ship carrying German-made Mercedes vehicles for an orphanage in Beirut that it says is a front for the PLO. The spokesman did not identify the ship or give its port of origin. He said the ship was released after the vehicles were removed.

Iranian Court 'Leader' Scoffs Senate Action

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — The self-proclaimed chief of Iran's central revolutionary court scoffed at the U.S. Senate's denunciation of summary executions and said the assassination of the deposed shah would be a "fitting answer to American senators."

Sheikh Sadegh Khalkhali also challenged a statement by Foreign Minister Dr. Ebrahim Yazdi Monday that Khalkhali was not the legitimate head of the central revolutionary court.

Yazdi said the Senate's resolution had referred to statements by Khalkhali as coming from the president of the central revolutionary court. "So far as we have investigated, Mr. Khalkhali is neither the chief of revolutionary courts nor even a member of (any of) the courts," Yazdi said.

But in an interview in the newspaper Bamdad, Khalkhali insisted, "I have been and still am an Islamic judge." Without reasserting that he was head of the central court, he said, "I have signed orders for many executions and I am proud of it."

Khalkhali said on May 13 that the shah, his brother Gholam Reza, wife Farah, mother-in-law Farideh Diba and several top aides had been sentenced to death and that "anyone" who kills them would be fulfilling the orders of his court.

At a mass rally later, he read what he said was written approval of the sentences given by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, spiritual leader of the revolution.

In a statement published today, Khalkhali repeated his order, saying, "We want freedom-loving people of the world to execute the shah the sooner the better to serve as a fitting answer to American senators, including Senator Jacob Javits and his supporters."

Khalkhali has said Javits, R-N.Y., and his wife have criminal records in Iran and were being sought by Iranian authorities.

Yazdi said Monday he had lodged a strong protest with the U.S. government over the May 17 Senate resolution, sponsored by Javits, that condemned the summary executions in Iran.

Former Astronaut Predicts Growth

CHICAGO (AP) — Former astronaut James Lovell predicts a growth in telecommunication markets over the next two decades that may rival the expenditures on the Apollo moon program.

Now a director of the North American Telephone Association, Lovell said in a recent speech that the explosion in new equipment and services should add some $20 billion or more to the current $50-billion-a-year telecommunications industry. The Apollo moon program cost about $25 billion.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

Who Needs 'The Big E?'

THE LONGER President Carter presses his campaign for a separate Department of Education, the harder it is to believe him when he says he's making a good faith effort to run the government more efficiently.

There is useful government reorganization and then there's the type that results in a separate department for education. It's easy to get across the idea that education is terribly important and therefore it deserves cabinet status.

It's easy, that is, if you go along with the notion that everything terribly important needs to be done by the government.

THE STREAMLINING ably outlined in recent congressional testimony by James McIntyre, director of the Office of Management and Budget, can be accomplished within the present department (HEW).

For example, McIntyre said that "unnecessary duplication and fragmentation" exist in the process for issuing regulations. Clearing routine rules can take 1½ years now.

"The Department of Education will cut this time approximately in half by eliminating 15 offices from the clearance process." Well, then, why not just eliminate them now, without creating a new department?

A separate department merely provides the illusion of reform. Unless all education-related items were to be plucked from their present jurisdictions and lumped together to create The Big E, the new department would carry less clout than education does even in its present inadequate form.

But why, for example, would uprooting a program like manpower-training from its niche in the Labor Department enhance its effectiveness?

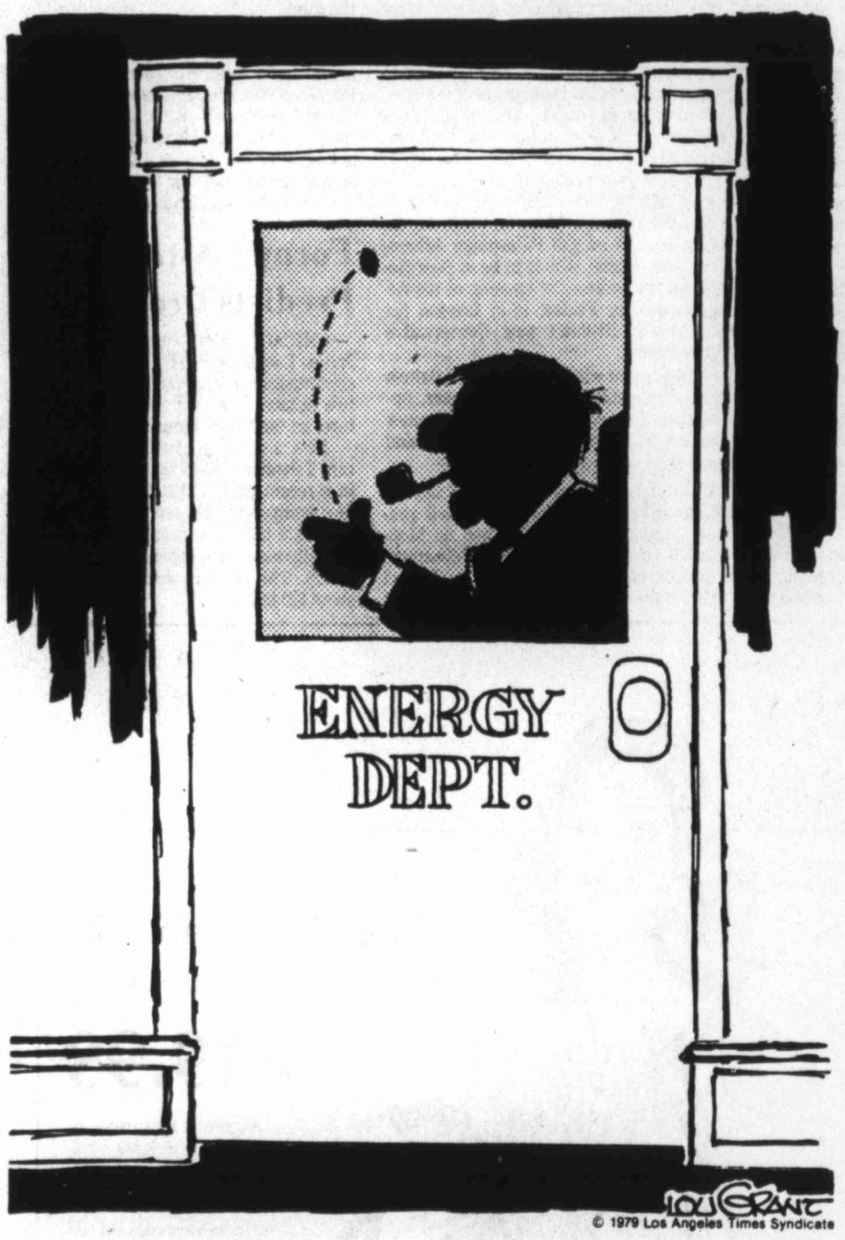

THE BILL as it now stands, said The Wall Street Journal editorially, would include in the new department mainly the organizations now in HEW and overseas schools run by the Department of Defense.

"But once a new department is created," The WSJ went on to point out, "a President could reorganize other agencies into it without congressional approval."

If the new department stays small, it mostly will be a colossal waste of money. If it grows, not only will it waste even more money but present the more serious dangers inherent in educational centralization.

Experience leads us to fear that a federal Department of Education would enter our local communities like the Man Who Came To Dinner—a guest to whom, it might be, we could never say "Good-bye."

A RECESSION could be just the catalyst that would trigger into full bloom a movement already drawing converts because of inflation and a guilty conscience over American wastefulness.

In Lubbock and elsewhere across the country, more and more families are learning to keep and recycle clothes, appliances, furniture, etc.

It's not out of economic necessity—although strained family budgets certainly make the idea appealing—that most families are doing this.

Even among the affluent, garage sales are growing in popularity. Begun as a way to get rid of household "junk" in return for a little pocket change, these now have become a favorite shopping place for middle-class housewives.

They can find decorator items, conversation pieces, even clothes, that still have a lot of life left in them, for a fraction of their original cost. When they tire of them, there's always another willing buyer at one's own garage sale.

Most people have learned in recent years, too, that they don't "have" to have a new car every year or two.

Buying the biggest, fanciest new home that two salaries can afford still is the rage—but, more and more, couples are rediscovering the delight of buying an older home and re-doing it to suit themselves.

Runaway construction costs and enormous interest rates are adding to the appeal of such a decision.

THERE STILL ARE millions of families, of course, who never buy anything that isn't new—and usually at a more expensive store—and power to them if that's what they like.

The new informal life-style being enjoyed by more and more Americans, though, puts less emphasis on material possessions and even less on the practice of "keeping up appearances."

You can hardly tell any more whether a guy is driving an old car because that's all he can afford or because it's just not important to him how old and ugly the thing is as long as it gets him where he's going.

Ooops. I just revealed to you why I wrote this column. Wouldn't want anybody to think I'm still driving an 8-year-old car in bad need of a paint job because I can't afford anything better...

Holmes Alexander:

Treaties Made To Be Broken?

BALTIMORE, Md.—With SALT II, verification of treaties is again to the fore.

Their making and breaking had reverberated through history, for nations are notoriously without scruples—stealing, killing, lying are expected with the international struggle for power.

President John Kennedy, by subterfuge, which is what we must guard against in SALT II, broke 14 anti-intervention clauses at the Bay of Pigs. The U.S. hired Cuban refugees and others to invade the island, and compounded the debacle by failing in it.

Such is the nature of treaties. They are a game of cheat 'em.

This awareness works like acid in the minds of the anti-SALT senators—Jackson, Garn, Glenn, Wallop, Helms, among them—as the debate warms up even before the treaty has been presented.

TECHNOLOGY HAS added tricks to the deck of cheat 'em, and subterfuge is more probable than outright violation.

Stalin was admitting what Churchill well knew, and zestfully attempted against his own allies, planning to hit the "soft underbelly" of Europe in order to intercept the Russians rather than aid them with a Second Front in Western France.

He and Roosevelt bribed Stalin with territorial gains in the Kuriles and elsewhere, to break the neutrality treaty with Japan and stab that treacherous nation in the back with a six-day war. Dishonorable and degrading is the cheat 'em game we play in treaties.

The Russians have proved themselves better at it than we are.

THE 1976 ELECTION related to Stalin's broken promise on Poland's freedom and was costly to Candidate Ford who soon afterwards was playing the treaty game in Vladivostok, a forgotten stab-in-the-back scene where we tried to knife the Bolsheviki in World War I.

The holy Woodrow Wilson authorized that America strike against a government which the very next Democratic President, Franklin Roosevelt, recognized as soon as he could. The late Chip Bohlen, former U.S. Ambassador to Moscow, tells us in his 1969 "Afterword":

"Nearly 20 years after Stalin's death; the political philosophy of the Soviet Union remains unchanged. There may be some slight theoretical variations, particulary on the non-inevitability of war.

"The fact of the matter is that ideology in Moscow today is what it was in 1934 when I first stepped on Russian soil. That is why the word 'Bolsheviki' describes the Russian rulers as accurately today as it did in the 1930s, and why I have used the term throughout the book."

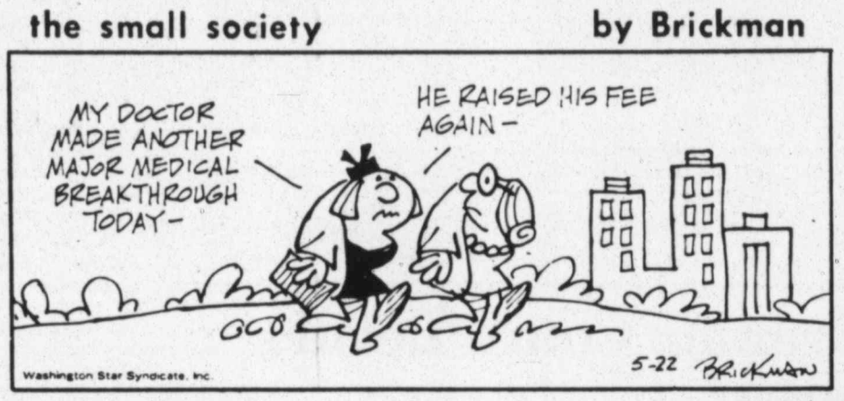

No agreement we make can be taken as binding, for the Russians will laugh up their sleeves while they sign.

Even our tangle-brained President understands this, and will peek at the Soviet weapons with every U-2 and blackbox that we still have left since the fall of Iran, the estrangement of Turkey and the eastward drift of West Germany. Without these advance bases, we are as eyeless as Sampson.

But Carter presses for SALT II on the senseless theory that any treaty is better than none. Better thinking would tell him that the best move is a crash program of rearmament.

It has everything to recommend it—military safety, scientific rejuvenation, industrial employment, business recovery regardless of inflation. By withdrawing from the treaty game of cheat 'em, we have nothing to lose but our shirts.

Sylvia Porter:

'Fire Alarms' Warn You May Get The Ax

"YOU'RE FIRED!"

In the emerging phase of economic slowdown, probably to be followed by a stall and then quite possibly by a downturn, it is virtually a certainty that these dread words will be heard with increasing frequency throughout the land.

Whether they're disguised as you're "discharged," or "terminated," or "phased out," or "dismissed," the meaning will come down to one painful fact: you've lost your job.

But if you're aware of the early warning signals, the news shouldn't come as a surprise at all. And if you're sufficiently prepared to take advantage of the early warnings, you well may prevent the ax from being lifted in the first place, much less falling on you.

WHAT ARE those "fire alarms"?—as they're called by Robert Half, president of Robert Half Personnel Agencies, New York-based company reported to be the world's largest financial executive, accounting and data processing employment specialists.

* For no apparent reason, your desk suddenly seems unusually clear. You feel you're being given little, if any, new work to do. The flow of interoffice memos being sent to your attention has dwindled to a trickle.

Any of these developments could be a warning signal that your job with your company is in serious jeopardy.

* Subordinates to you are receiving promotions—legitimate upward moves—but you are being skipped over and stay where you are.

THAT'S ABOUT as clear a sign as you could get that your superiors at the company have decided you're "dispensable."

* In comparison with employes in comparable positions to yours (within your company and/or within your field), you are highly paid. This can be an extremely serious drawback as the economy falters, or if your company has financial difficulties of its own.

Your boss well may decide to fire you rather than cut your salary—and by so doing, risk turning you into a disgruntled employe, the type of worker no company wants to have around.

Another aspect of this signal is a bigger-than-average slice out of your paycheck if your company is compelled to make an across-the-board pay cut in order to cope with adverse developments.

* BE WORRIED IF your superior, who always in the past has relied on you to handle important special projects, begins assigning the choice projects to another employe.

Also a cause for alarm would be being asked to share your secretary or assistant with a new employe, while others in your office or part of the factory continue to have their own secretaries and other assistants.

At the same time, you notice changes in your boss's behavior toward you. Say that in the past you have become accustomed to a warm greeting each morning. Now, if you meet in the elevator on the way to work, you're given the silent treatment.

Each of these signals may seem insignificant by itself. Together they add—and don't fool yourself.

* IMMEDIATELY BE on guard if a "consultant," brought in to study your job during this emerging phase of "tightening up," asks you extraordinarily detailed questions about what you do and how you do it.

Perhaps your company is merely trying to streamline your function, as you were told in advance.

But it's also possible that the overly inquisitive consultant is gathering information to be passed on to the man or woman who will replace you.

* While psychological tests are rapidly returning to favor, watch out if you—a long-time employe—are suddenly asked to take an aptitude test.

This could mean the boss is getting prepared to tell you that you're really not qualified for the position you have held for years—and he (or she) just discovered this from the test.

* Start wondering whether or not your job is in jeopardy if your employer becomes too critical—or not critical enough.

Too much criticism means dissatisfaction with your performance; lack of constructive criticism may mean you're not going to be around the company long enough to benefit from it.

* AND THE final warning signal: a merger, acquisition, sell-out or whatever. There never is room for two executives or two middle-managers performing the identical function.

If your firm is acquired, start job-hunting at once—or get a new contract at once.

Taken individually, Half cautions again, the warning signals could be false alarms. If you spot a cluster, it's the real thing.

John D. Lofton:

SALT II Can't Be Sold 'As Is'

WASHINGTON—A Carter administration lobbyist who will be attempting to sell the SALT II agreement to the Senate says of Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., that he is "one of two critical senators in this debate," and "one thing we can be sure of is that he'll make up his mind on the basis of the facts."

Well, this is undoubtedly true, and it is very bad news for the administration.

Because when he looks at the facts, Nunn, an extremely influential member of the Armed Services Committee, sees a world that is very different from the world as viewed through the rose-colored glasses of President Carter and his fellow SALT-sellers.

In a recent talk in Chicago, Sec. of State Cyrus Vance spoke of America's "extraordinary strength" and pooh-poohed what he called the "distorted proposition" that the U.S. is in a period of decline in the world.

ASSERTING THAT "America's military strength today is formidable" and in "balance" when compared to the Soviets, the secretary vowed: "We will not be overtaken by the momentum of Soviet military programs."

The day after Vance spoke, Nunn spoke to the U.S. Chamber of Commerce here about what he called a very timely and important question: What is the condition of our national security, and how will it be affected by the SALT II treaty?

Comparing the two texts, it does not seem that the two men are describing the same world.

Concerning the question of our military balance vis-a-vis that of the Soviets, Nunn says: "Today, our military margin for error has narrowed." He notes that in strategic nuclear armaments, the Soviets have eliminated the decisive advantages the U.S. once enjoyed, and appears to be embarked upon a drive "to obtain nuclear superiority."

IN THE REALM of tactical or theater nuclear forces, which are critical to the defense of Western Europe, the Soviets not only have erased a longstanding NATO superiority, but are developing forces with growing advantages over those of NATO.

With respect to conventional military power, says Nunn, the Soviets have created forces that have expanded and modernized an already preponderant army.

They have constructed a blue-water Navy to challenge the U.S. fleet. They have also, for the first time, developed a capability to threaten the U.S. economic lifelines to the Third World. The senator says:

"It is readily apparent that present trends are adverse. If they are permitted to continue, our remaining advantages will disappear and the security of the U.S. and its allies will be jeopardized in the 1980s.

"In the space of little more than 15 years, the U.S. will have moved from a position of overall military superiority to a position that can perhaps best be characterized as clinging parity."

Nunn agrees with those who believe that arms control is a moral imperative.

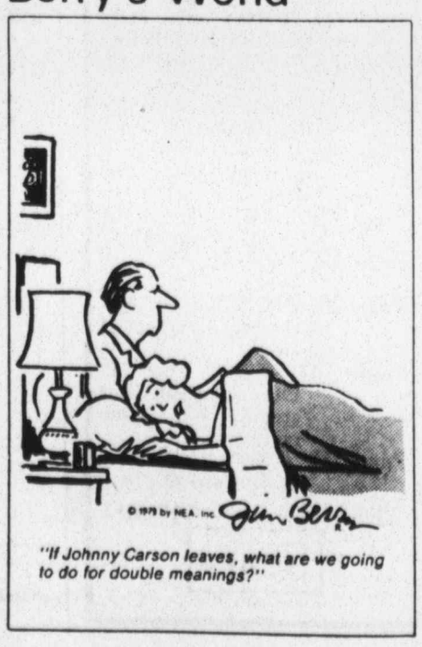

Quoting Carter as having said, "Americans are committed to maintaining a strong national defense," the senator says that if Carter meant by the word "maintaining" that the present military balance and trends within it are an acceptable foundation for our nation's future security, "I respectfully disagree."

AGAIN QUOTING the President as having said, "We will continue to compete effectively with the Soviet Union," Nunn says: "If the President seeks to imply that we have been effectively competing in defense efforts during the past decade, then I respectfully disagree."

The problem facing President Carter is that he did mean what he said and he did seek to imply what the senator says. The President sees one world and an increasing number of senators sees the world as Sen. Sam Nunn sees it. And this is why Jimmy Carter's SALT II agreement will not be ratified without being drastically altered.

An irate demonstrator walked up to a power plant the other day, rolled up his sleeves and said, "Put up your nukes."

Panel Steps Up Asbestos Search

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer protection officials, facing a possible end to the controversy over asbestos in hair dryers, now are turning their attention to use of asbestos in other common products.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission endorsed last week plans by 11 major companies to offer millions of consumers free modification of asbestos-containing hair dryers or replacement models.

The commission then directed its staff to try to identify other household products containing asbestos and to design a program to regulate any problems.

"Asbestos is a ubiquitous product in the environment and in consumer products," said Susan King, head of the commission.

Asbestos is a recognized cause of cancer when breathed by humans.

The commission staff, in a memorandum to the commissioners, noted major difficulties in the undertaking. "There is presently available only bits and pieces of information concerning the use of asbestos in consumer products," the staff said.

One study done for the commission last year found more than 100 consumer products that might contain asbestos. But the study, which listed hair dryers among the products, received little attention at the time.

Other products the study said might contain asbestos under certain manufacturing conditions were such everyday products as toothbrushes and car mufflers.

However, that study was based largely on a search of published sources and patent reports, not on a thorough investigation of where asbestos actually is used. It later was criticized for not raising more of an alarm about hair dryers.

A staff memorandum said information is lacking in such areas as the number and kinds of household products containing asbestos, whether any of them put asbestos fibers into the air and whether the fibers are of a size that can be breathed by humans.

The commission authorized the staff to draw up a Federal Register notice asking for information on asbestos in products. The notice, which will have to be approved by the commissioners before it is published, would "invite public and industry comment on the basic question — whether the commission should do anything at all."

The staff suggested the major emphasis of future inquires be on household consumer appliances, including furnaces, ranges, toasters and ovens.

"A housewife wants to know when she uses a pot holder if over the years there will be any asbestos released. Now that the red flag of hair dryers has been so thoroughly waved around, we need to give people a sense of security," Commissioner Sam Zagoria said.

Commission acceptance of the plans by the 11 companies rules out legal action against firms making hand-held hair dryers containing asbestos. The 11 manufacturers and retailers covered by the agreement are all of those the commisson staff had said distributed hair dryers presenting an unreasonable risk to consumers.

Obstetricians Conclude Bigger Babies Better

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — Bigger babies are better babies, according to obstetricians an gynecologists who are counseling mothers-to-be to forget about dieting during pregnancy and put on an extra 25 to 30 pounds.

Writing in "The Florida Medical Association Journal," Dr. Charles S. Mahan, a University of Florida obstetrician-gynecologist, cites recent studies that substantiate the new viewpoint on pregnant women's nutritional needs.

"In the past, when mothers produced babies that weighed less than 5½ pounds at term, people remarked how tough these little wrinkled babies were and how well they survived compared with babies born prematurely at similar weights," Mahan said.

"However, during the past few decades we have learned to our dismay that these small, tough babies often remain stunted in growth and never catch up. Worse than that, they have a much higher chance than the average size baby of developing mental retardation and severe learning disabilities as they grow older."

Not even overweight women should shed pounds during pregnancy, Mahan wrote, because it is more important for the health of their babies that they eat well. Dieting can wait until after the baby is born.

"Patients who are underweight have the more serious problem as far as a prognosis for pregnancy outcome and should be strongly encouraged to supplement their diet to gain enough weight to be within normal range for their height at the time pregnancy begins," he said.

Mahan said studies by the university's College of Medicine indicate most of the pregnancy problems experienced by patients under 16 years of age relate directly or indirectly to their nutritional status.

"Because of their rapid growth, teenagers often need foods that are high in vitamins and iron and foods that will supply extra calcium," Mahan said.

Teen-age women who are pregnant and women who are on strict vegetarian diets should take dietary supplements of certain vitamins and folic acid as well as iron, zinc and chromium, which are not found in plants.

Posse Rides To Special Olympics

By BEVERLY O'BRIANT
Family News Staff

The Bexar County Sheriff's Posse from San Antonio will be in Lubbock today and Wednesday to begin a long trail-ride to Austin, carrying the Special Olympics flag and torch to the site of the meet which begins Monday.

Lubbock has been chosen as the site for the beginning of the ride. The riders will visit Ballenger School today and offer the children rides on their horses. Tonight, a barbeque will be held in the Lubbock State School campus for the residents, riders and others involved in Special Olympics. Lubbock Jaycees, the Volunteer Council of the Lubbock State School and other individuals will be present.

During the barbeque, the residents will be able to participate in a "mock trailride" on the back part of the campus. The Bexar County Sheriff's Posse, the Lubbock Rangers Riding Club, the Abernathy Riding Club, Hi-Riders and the Lamb County Riding Club will hold a "playday" of riding events to entertain the group.

Wednesday, the Bexar County Sheriff's Posse will leave Lubbock for Austin, carrying with them a lighted torch presented by one of the Lubbock participants in the Special Olympics. They will begin their trip near South Loop 289, travelling along Highway 87. Local riders will escort the ten San Antonio riders as far as possible. Any riders along the way are free to go along to Austin. Their route will bring them to Tahoka, Lamesa, Big Spring, Carlsbad, San Angelo, Brady, Llano and finally, to Austin.

Along the way, the group will stop and speak to various civic and church groups about the Special Olympics. The speaking activities of the group are strictly promotional. Each year, the Sheriff's Posse chooses a different point of origin for their annual trailride to Austin.

The riders will arrive in Austin Sunday, as will most of the participants in the Special Olympics. During the opening cermony Monday, one of the students from Lubbock will light the torch in Memoral Stadium on the University of Texas campus, the site of the meet.

The Sheriff's Posse, after their long ride, will remain active during the Special Olympics. They will spend their week timing events, catching softballs and helping in whatever way possible.

The state level of the Special Olympics will begin Monday and continue through May 30. There are 3,343 registered participants in the Texas meet, making the competition the largest track and field meet in the world. Thirty youngsters from Lubbock will be going to compete in the meet.

Some of the field events to be held at the Special Olympics are the 50 meter dash, 100 meter dash, 200-and 400-meter runs, 200-and 400-meter relays, high jump, gymnastics, frisbee throw, softball throw and standing long jump.

Following the state meet, at least 100 athletes from Texas will be participating in the International Special Olympics, to be held in Brockport, N.Y.

Herbal Remedy Still Used By Some In Indonesia

By KENNETH L. WHITING

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — Jamu is an all-purpose potion that tastes as bitter as bile to the uninitiated, but millions of Indonesians swear by regular doses of the herbal mixture.

There is said to be a jamu for everybody, at every stage of life, from womb to tomb.

A survey by the Ministry of Health estimated that 80 percent of the population of 142 million take jamu at least once in their lives. Many insist on a daily dollop.

If you are sick it promises a cure, and if you are not ill it's supposed to tone muscles and smooth the complexion. Different blends help you sleep or stay awake, gain or lose weight.

Besides serving as a substitute for aspirins, vitamin pills and cold tablets, a variety of jamu brands tackle such complaints as asthma, baldness, venereal disease, malaria, leprosy, diarrhea, pimples, kidney stones, piles and high blood pressure.

Jamu is both folk medicine and big business.

Some families mix it from ancestral recipes. Indonesians tell of being forced by their mothers to swallow jamu as an all-purpose tonic, much as American kids might be given castor oil or, in earlier generations, sulfur and molasses.

Female peddlers lugging several bottles of "home brew" sell the most popular formulas on the sidewalks of Jakarta, largely as a pick-me-up for passersby.

For individuals seeking expert advice, the proprietors of special shops prescribe from their stocks of roots, barks, leaves, seeds, flowers, berries, seaweeds and other exotic ingredients.

As the country becomes increasingly urbanized, city dwellers tend to rely on hundreds of compounds packaged by big manufacturers such as Air Mancur (fountain) and Djago (rooster). These firms plus Nyonya Meneer are the Big Three of jamu-making, controlling an estimated 70 percent of the market.

The modern Nyonya Meneer line comes in liquid and capsule form in addition to the traditional powders, said Charles Ong.

Ong, a grandson of the founder and a 1976 graduate in business administration of Miami University in the United States, is the company's marketing manager.

"Nyonya" means Mrs. "Meneer" was originally menir or ground rice, a nickname given Ong's grandmother who, according to company lore, was fed medicinal herbs as a child to keep her healthy when rice was scarce.

She later created a mixture of herbs and the C.V. Jamu Nyonya Meneer Company was founded in Semerang, Central Java, in 1919 to produce it. It now employs 600.

Nearly all ingredients are gathered from the farms and forests of Java. Ong said raw materials were purchased from middlemen who in turn got them from villagers.

Gross sales and profits are as secret as the recipes of its products. Maria Kalalo, Nyonya Meneer's daughter, is keeper of the formulas.

"The recipes are kept in a safe with a combination known only to Mrs. Kalalo," Ong said. She commutes from her Jakarta home to Semerang when a fresh batch must be mixed.

Government statistics provide few clues about the jamu industry.

"You may be sure the three largest companies are enormously profitable multimillion-dollar businesses," said one official. He said jamu was exported to other countries in southeast Asia, the Middle East, United States and the Netherlands.

"The value of some herbal preparations has been acknowledged for years," said an American doctor employed in Indonesia by an oil company.

The ministry of health studies new jamu products, but there are no official curbs on wild claims made in advertisements.

If you need a minor miracle to set an opposing contract, conduct the defense as if that particular distribution exists. Here's a case in point.

The bidding was, in part, dictated by the fact that both sides had a 60 part score. West contemplated interfering with a takeout double over the two heart response, but prudently decided that would be too risky with such poor suits and insufficient values. East could take no action since the opponents had bid two of his better suits.

West led the two of diamonds, and declarer fell from grace when he ducked in dummy. He should have realized that if the deuce were fourth-best, and there was no reason to suspect otherwise. East was marked with a singleton king or queen. If West had both honors, he would have led the king. There was the additional danger that West's lead was a singleton.

East won the king of diamonds and paused to consider the defense. If West held the ace of clubs, the defenders could get two club tricks. It was likely that the defenders would score a spade trick, but that still left them two tricks short of defeating the contract. Those two tricks had to come from diamond ruffs, and West had to have two entries. The only suit in which West could have these entries was clubs.

Since this was the only real possibility for the defense, at trick two East shifted to a low club! He worked out that, unless his partner also held the ten of clubs, West would have no second entry. Note that if East leads the queen of clubs, declarer could foil the defenders' plans by refusing to cover, thus denying West the vital second entry.

Declarer played the king from his hand, losing to the ace. The defense was clear. West reverted to a diamond. East ruffed and returned a low club. West won the nine and gave his partner another diamond ruff. East exited safely with his last trump, and no matter what declarer did, he still had to lose a spade trick. Enterprising defense was rewarded with a one-trick set.

Frances Barnhart envied girls who could wear fitted clothes-especially bikinis.

Thanks to Pat Walker's, she now has a 24" waistline

And that, she says, is something she never dreamed was possible.

But then, lots of dreams come true at Pat Walker's Figure Perfection Salons, International—and yours could be among them. Here's Ms. Barnhart's story:

Having been a housewife and mother for 10 years, I decided it was time for a change . . . to get out of the house and get a job. Hearing that a Pat Walker's Figure Salon was coming to [my] area, I got very excited and knew that I would enjoy that type of work.

I never liked to admit I had a weight problem, so I attributed my 33" waist to a large bone structure. I envied all the girls who could wear fitted clothes and especially bikinis. I had always worn long blouses and coverups to hide my large abdomen. When I did diet, I always lost weight in all the wrong places—my arms, legs and bust—but never where I needed it—my waist and tummy.

[At] Pat Walker's I learned I could still eat all the foods I enjoyed without giving up anything except the 27" I've lost . . . The beautiful part of it is that I did it with help from my co-workers and most enjoyably with my patrons. It's nice to know there is a place you can go when you need help with a figure problem and where people understand . . .

Ms. Barnhart now enjoys a career as manager of a Pat Walker Salon.

Don't wait any longer

. . . to find out what Pat Walker can do for YOU! Now is the best time. In fact, we invite you to come in for a FREE treatment and figure analysis, without charge or obligation. All you have to do is call to reserve time for your complimentary appointment. We await your call—and hope to hear from you soon.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: Now that the summer season will soon be upon us, how about some help for us poor suckers who have summer cottages?

We've had our cottage for eight years, and each summer we grow more popular than the summer before. Friends and relatives come in droves to enjoy themselves in the sun and partake of our food and drink. They stay anywhere from a weekend to a full week. They always come empty-handed, of course.

We have even written notes in advance saying, "We are sorry, but we can't have you this year," — but they come anyway. Why are some folks so thick? We bought this place to get away from these people.

We don't want to seem cranky, but we'd like to entertain the guests we really want, without all these others "surprising" us. We're tired of running a free hotel, and are thinking of selling. Can you help us?

DEAR ABBY: You are so right when you say, "Live your life one day at a time."

After 13 years of a happy marriage, beautiful children, a successful husband (due to my help), a beautiful home and all the trimmings, my husband informs me that he is just not "happy" anymore!

At the same time, my brother's wife has decided the same thing. Strange? Not really. She is divorcing my brother (they also have a lovely home and two beautiful children) so she can marry my husband.

Need I tell you how much hurt and unhappiness these two selfish people have caused everyone involved?

So, here I sit, still in shock, very hurt and bitter, thinking of how wise your philosophy is. "Live your life one day at a time."

That's all any of us really has. Sign me ...

DEAR ABBY: My husband is convinced that shampooing his hair will cause it to fall out.

Arnold is 25 and good-looking, but he's got this thing about losing his hair because his father was bald at 40. He never brushes his hair because if he sees a few hairs in his hairbrush he practically freaks out! And if he wakes up and finds a few hairs on his pillow, it spoils his day.

He's a wonderful guy, but you don't know how hard it is to sleep with a man who hasn't washed his hair since last July. Help! Maybe he'll believe you. I've given up.

His Wife

Dear Wife: Tell Arnold that I said cleanliness and massage promote the growth of human hair. He stands to lose more hair (and friends) if he allows rancid oil to collect on his scalp.

Parents Should Discuss Sexuality With Children

By ELLIE GROSSMAN

NEW YORK (NEA) — "What — me talk to my teenager about sex? He (or she) probably knows more about it than I do. Besides, no one talked about sex when I was growing up and I'm embarrassed discussing it. My kid probably doesn't want to hear anything from me, anyway ..."

Typical attitudes from typical parents around the country, according to Dr. Michael Carrera, president of the American Association of Sex Educators, Counselors and Therapists and professor of Health Sciences at New York's Hunter College.

Typical and, in many ways, not valid.

Oh, they're sound enough as far as parents blushing and stammering around the subject in front of their children. What do you expect from people reared in a repressive society? "There's also a lot of ambivalence on the parents' part," he says. "What language do I use? What should I take a position on?" It's far easier to look that teenager in the eye and tell him to work hard and put his money in the bank.

But by avoiding the subject, you're leaving him to the mercy of society in general, and television in particular, which, Carrera says, "see sexuality as a pelvic rather than a wholistic concept.

"Sexuality actually refers to a whole person," he continues. "How it feels to be a man or a woman with all those variables — psychological, intellectual, social and sexual. Unfortunately, many of us are taught that sexuality has to do only with physical equipment, and that has a pernicious effect. Since we've also helped sustain the notion that there's a different set of rules and regulations for sex, that further confuses the matter."

So what's a parent to do? First of all, he says, face up to the idea that "there is no such thing as sexual morality. There's only morality which dictates our choices and decisions in all areas. The role of parents is to make clear what their own value system is, how they see things generally. For instance, I tell my youngsters not to be self-distructive or exploit other people and that their bodies are beautiful."

Contrary to what you think, offspring do want to hear what you have to say. That's another conclusion Cerrera has come to after nine years as an educator in sexuality, and host of more than 200 "parent and teenage sexuality" seminars around the country.

"Teenagers want to know how to make decisions, what alternatives there are and they want that information preferably from their parents. But this really doesn't happen," he says.

They learn about sex from their friends, most times, which is understandable because "going to people with similar concerns is often supportive. It makes them feel they're not alone or strange in what they're feeling." The only thing is they come away, most of the times, with myth or misinformation.

Still, while they want parental input, they also don't want it; they'll start telling me what to do; they'll start asking me just what it is I am doing, the youngster thinks.

Worse yet, Carrera says, "Many young people are angry because parents often assume they're sexually active and know everything there is to know about sex in these times."

Ironically, that first assumption can breed the fact. "I'm convinced that adults set up self-fulfilling prophecies for young people," he says. "We sense a teenager is doing all kinds of wild things and we treat him that way so he, in turn, may think this is how I should act. This is what's expected from me."

Some pretty picture and one your local school won't enchance, Carrera says. "Sex education is taught separately in the schools and that only reinforces the idea of it as something apart from all other aspects of life. Ideally, it should be taught as part of science or literature or history, when appropriate.

It should be taught, in fact, in the home because parents — society and TV notwithstanding — are "still the most powerful influence on young people's values and development." Ideally, it should start when a small child first touches himself.

"The parents should say that's a vagina or a penis, instead of that's an ah-ah," and progress, as the child does, from there. But if you said "ah-ah" years back and still can't call a spade a spade comfortably, Carrera says that can be a plus.

"Admitting vulnerability to your child, saying this topic embarrasses me, gives the conversation a humanness and young people really appreciate that."

That point is, finally, if the parent doesn't try, perspiration, stuttering and all, his child is destined for the same ordeal with his or her own children — generation after generation embroidering the problem.

"I think parents should look at that," he says. "They should think, if my youngster is going to reach his full potential as a human being, this is an area we should communicate about."

So get the topic going some way and then "try to listen to your youngster in a way that communicates a certain amount of support, even if you disagree with him. The skill comes in accepting him as a young adult making decisions about sexuality and allowing discussions to develop values which he may reject. And try not to judge."

"Of course," he concludes, "that's tough." But no one ever said it wasn't.

Proposal Aimed At Auto Thefts

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bipartisan team of senators introduced legislation today aimed at hamstringing "chop shop" operations in which cars are stolen and then disassembled so the parts can be sold.

"An automobile theft takes place in this country every 32 seconds," Sens. Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del., and Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., declared.

They said auto theft is no longer "a teen-age lark" but a $4 billion-a-year industry that the FBI regards as "one of the most lucrative illegitimate businesses today."

Their bill would require automobile manufacturers to provide stronger locks and stamp body parts with identification numbers to make their resale more difficult.

Biden and Percy said representatives of the Departments of Justice, State, Transportation, Commerce and Treasury and the Office of Management and Budget helped them draft the bill.

"This legislation provides law enforcement officials with the necessary tools to stem the tide of professional auto theft," they said.

"At one time, auto theft was almost exclusively a teen-age lark resulting in nothing worse than a joy-ride. The recovery of the stolen car routinely occurred in a matter of days, if not hours.

"But now the joy-ride is over. Stolen cars are no longer routinely recovered."

The senators said the lucrative "chop shops" operate in almost every major metropolitan area in the country.

"Stolen cars are taken to clandestine garages where they are quickly 'chopped up' or disassembled by trained crews," they said. "The body parts, which presently have no identification numbers, are then sold for exorbitant profits to individuals in the legitimate auto repair market."

"Organized crime has muscled into the auto 'chop shop' business through violence and intimidation and is now trying to expand its control," said Percy, the ranking minority member of the Senate subcommittee on investigations.

He said the subcommittee, which is looking into organized crime, was told by the FBI that at least 16 murders in Chicago and four in New York had been traced to "chop shop" operations.

The senators said such operations have caused the price of automobile theft insurance to soar, particularly in large cities. They said Boston motorists pay 11 times the national average of $29 per vehicle, New York drivers nine times the average and those in Chicago six times the average.

But Biden said the problem is not confined to big cities.

"Even though none of the largest U.S. cities is located in my own state of Delaware, we have the 12th highest auto theft rate in the nation," he said. "That means my constituents are paying dearly for the right to own a car."

A TEAR FOR THE DUKE — Actress Maureen O'Hara wipes away a tear as she and Elizabeth Taylor appear before a House subcommittee Monday in Washington, which is considering legislation calling for a congressional gold medal to be struck in John Wayne's honor. House Pondering Wayne Medal

WASHINGTON (AP) — John Wayne, who brought law 'n order to the American West single handedly, who fought and won World War II dozens of times, is taking Congress without a struggle.

"Few people are given the title, 'The,'" Rep. Barry Goldwater Jr. was saying. "There's The President — The Pope — The Queen — and The Duke."

John Wayne, the Duke, 71, hospitalized for treatment of cancer, is going to have a congressional gold medal struck in his honor. No doubt about it.

The Senate already has approved the idea, and the House of Representatives is certain to do the same. Specifically, the legislation would authorize the president to present the gold medal to Wayne and authorize the Treasury Department to strike bronze replicas for sale to the public.

Only 83 Americans have been so honored. And most of them — George Washington and Andrew Jackson to name two — didn't make movies about wars and the West. They lived them.

A House banking subcommittee met Monday to kick around the the idea of a medal for Wayne. It wasn't a hearing, it was a love feast.

Rep. Thomas Evans, R-Del., remembered growing up as a kid in Seaford, Del., shelling out 11 cents to watch John Wayne on the big screen. "And 11 cents meant something," he said.

"I learned a lot from John Wayne and I think America learned a lot from him because he set the standard for American manhood," he said.

Evans, 47, grew up on John Wayne. He was born three years after The Duke made the first of his 200 films.

From the President of the United States, in a letter to Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., subcommittee chairman:

John Wayne's "true grit helped win the West, World War II, and the hearts of thousands of us across the country and the world."

From Goldwater, R-Calif., sponsor of the medal legislation in the House:

"Suffice it to say that this award will represent a sincere 'thank you' from his government and fellow citizens for a lifetime of loving his country with a fierce loyalty and more than a little pride in its goodness and despite its faults."

From a tearful Maureen O'Hara, actress, for 39 years a friend of Wayne, and his co-star in "The Quiet Man:"

"To the people of the world, John Wayne is not just an actor, and a very fine actor. He is the United States of America."

From Elizabeth Taylor:

"He's tough as an old nut, soft as a yellow ribbon ....

"Kids today and myself talk about cool. Well, Big John is one cool cat. He is a giant and he will be with us always."

Archeologists Find Evidence Of Earliest American Town

WASHINGTON (AP) — The earliest town site yet found in British-settled America has been unearthed on the banks of the James River in Virginia.

Treasures turned up in three years of painstaking excavation include the only two military "close" helmets ever found in the New World, the earliest examples of British-American pottery and a skeleton from the first major Indian massacre, complete with wounds from scalping.

The discoveries were made during excavations at Carter's Grove Plantation. The project was financed by the National Geographic Society, which announced details today.

Scientists from colonial Williamsburg, which owns the Carter's Grove property, began digging in 1970 looking for traces of outbuildings from the 18th century plantation.

Instead, they found remains of a settlement at least 100 years older. In 1976 the diggers came across the remains of Wolstenholme Towne, the earliest trace of an English settlement in America.

"What makes these new discoveries so important is that nothing of the Jamestown settlement and fort dating from 1607 has ever been found," said Ivor Noel Hume, resident archivist at colonial Williamsburg and chief of the project.

"Thus, the remains of buildings and artifacts unearthed at Wolstenholme provide us with our earliest evidence of life and death in colonial Virginia," Noel Hume said in a National Geographic magazine article.

Although archeologists know from surviving records pretty much where Jamestown, the earliest successful English settlement in America, was founded in 1607, its remains have never been found and they believe the original site was washed away by the river.

Foundations from later Jamestown buildings survive, but not the original stockaded settlement. Wolstenholme Towne, named for one of the principal stockholders in the sponsoring company, was established in 1619 a few miles downriver from Jamestown. It was a year before the Pilgrams landed at Plymouth, Mass.

In 1622, more than a third of Wolstenholme Towne's citizens were killed in an Indian uprising which swept the Virgiia settlements. Efforts were made to revive it, but the town and surrounding plantations gradually disappeared and stayed hidden for 3½ centuries.

The archeologists found several graves in the lost village, but the most interesting one contained a skeleton they think may have been Richard Kean, military aide to the plantation's governor. Death was attributed to a blow on the front of the skull by a cutting tool, such as a spade.

An iron-shod spade was found nearby which fit neatly into the cut. Survivors of the massacre left reports of Indians infiltrating the settlement as friendly visitors and then attacking them with their own tools.

Two helmets, of the old style which completely covered a soldier's head and face, and the back plates of two suits of armor were found at the site, and are the earliest artifacts of this date and type found in this hemisphere.

Thatcher To Visit Paris Next Month

LONDON (AP) — On her first visit overseas since becoming prime minister, Margaret Thatcher will go to Paris next month for a working lunch with French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing, it was announced Monday.

Mrs. Thatcher will make a one-day trip to the French capital on June 5, accompanied by Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington, at the invitation of Giscard d'Estaing.

This will be Mrs. Thatcher's first meeting with the French president since the May 3 general election in which her Conservatives ended five years of moderate socialism under the Labor Party of James Callaghan.

The two leaders are expected to discuss prosects for the world economic summit in Tokyo in June and the European Common Market, particularly what the British see as their disproportionate share of the nine-nation community's budget.

U.S. Senate Criticizing Nations

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With popular opinion dictating that few new laws need passing, the Senate has been engaged in passing resolutions suggesting how other governments ought to act.

Last Thursday it passed a resolution condemning Iran's summary execution of political enemies, and on Monday it voted to urge West Germany to extend or abolish the statute of limitations for prosecuting Nazi war criminals.

Central in both resolutions was Sen. Jacob Javits, 75-year-old ranking minority member of the Foreign Relations Committee, eloquent defender of human rights around the world, respected for his mental acuity by colleagues of all political stripes, and a Jew.

Now under federal and New York City police protection after Iran declared him and his wife "criminals," Javits rose on the Senate floor to speak on behalf of the resolution directed at Bonn. At the same time he referred to the uproar in Iran caused by his resolution of last week, sounding conciliatory, not at all like a man who may be marked for death.

Javits took note of the "the angry reaction from a people with whom we also are friendly," the Iranians. He said he hoped they would receive the resolution in the same spirit of friendship he was sure the Germans would.

"Just because the shah is gone, at the will of the people, it doesn't change our friendship" with the people, he said.

"I have no anger. I have no feeling whatever except serenity with the posture of our country. When it's right, its right is a matter of enormous national pride and that's the way I feel about both of these matters."

Later, Javits said in a statement, "The Senate has spoken to the Iranian people as friends and to the government of Iran with which we wish to be friendly. ... I hope very much that the people of Iran, and the government of Iran will see the situation in that light."

On the Nazi war crimes question, the Senate passed the resolution by voice vote without dissent, joining the House which early adopted it 401-0. It does not have force of law.

The resolution was sponsored principally by Assistant Democratic Leader Alan Cranston, D-Calif., who was a foreign correspondent in Germany during the Nazi regime.

West Germany's statute of limitations applicable to war crimes will expire at the end of this year unless it is extended.

"We are very friendly with the government of the federal German republic," Javits said. "We are as friendly with them as we are with any government on earth." He said he was certain the resolution would be received in Germany "in a most warm, friendly and brotherly fashion."

Solons Tell Of Eluding Death Plot

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressmen who flew into Burma's opium-producing Golden Triangle say they narrowly missed an assassination ambush by drug traffickers.

"We were in and out of Burma before this mortar and machine gun attack and individual assassination attack was to take place," Rep. Robert K. Dornan, R-Calif., said. "They planned to mortar the helicopters and then kill every member of the crew and us."

Reps. Dornan, Lester L. Wolff, D-N.Y., Henry Hyde, R-Ill., and Stephen Neal, D-N.C., called a news conference today to disclose details of the plot last January.

They were in Burma on a fact-finding trip by Wolff's select House Narcotics Committee.

Dornan said Monday that U.S. officials told the congressmen two weeks later that several hundred troops with mortars and machine guns planned to shoot down their helicopters and kill the entire party. He said the troops worked for an opium warlord.

Dornan said the party missed assassination because it went into Burma two days early after cancelling a stop in Taiwan, shortly after President Carter's decision to withdraw U.S. recognition of Taiwan's government.

"The attack was not aborted or thwarted," Dornan said. "The attack merely did not come off because of a series of events that started with Carter's decision to recognize Red China."

Dornan and Neal said Central Intelligence Agency and State Department officials told the congressmen back in Washington they learned of the planned ambush only after the congressmen left Burma.

Neal said he did not recall the officials saying several hundred insurgents were involved.

Dornan said "The intelligence people told us they felt that Leo Ryan's being killed was an ugly precedent."

Rep. Leo Ryan, D-Calif., had been shot to death with four other people at an airstrip in Guyana November 18 while investigating James Jones' Peoples Temple cult there.

"This was only two months later, so it looked like open season on congressmen," Dornan said.

The congressmen said the planned assassination ambush was not disclosed earlier because the CIA told them disclosure might endanger their source.

The news conference was scheduled after the story was leaked to columnist Jack Anderson.

Hart Assessed Prison Term

PRYOR, Okla. (AP) — Gene Leroy Hart, acquitted in the 1977 slaying of three Girl Scouts at a summer camp, was sentenced to three years in prison Monday after pleading guilty to a variety of charges.

The seven charges to which he pleaded guilty included three for second-degree burglary; one for possession of a firearm; two for malicious injury to public buildings; and one for escape.

District Judge Byron Ed Williams ruled the sentences will run concurrently.

Hart also is serving more than 100 years in sentences for previous convictions of rape and burglary.

Hart was found innocent in March of three first-degree murder charges for the June 13, 1977, sex slayings of the Girl Scouts near Locust Grove, Okla..

Experts Say Panic Buying Cause Of Gas Crunch

NEW YORK (AP) — The great toilet paper shortage began fairly simply.

Johnny Carson made a joke on the "Tonight" show a couple of years ago about supplies of toilet paper being tight. There really was no shortage — until Carson's joke.

In a matter of days, toilet paper became a rare commodity. Americans, believing Carson was serious, bought every roll of toilet paper they could get hold of. Soon, lots of people had several weeks' supply of toilet paper — but stores had virtually none.

That phenomenon is known as panic buying. And many experts say it's a chief cause o the current gasoline crunch.

There is little question that there actually is a shortage of gasoline — demand for the fuel has been going up at a 4 percent annual pace, while oil companies, compensating for a shortage of crude oil, have cut back shipments to dealers by about 10 percent.

But analysts say that shortage should have been easy to manage. The lines which have appeared in California and elsewhere, they say, have been due not so much to the shortage itself as to motorists' perception that the shortage is worse than it actually is.

That perception — built from news reports, rumor and personal experience with gas lines — has worsened the situation, analysts say.

"If you wake up in the morning, turn on the TV and see a news story about long gas lines, you're going to think, 'Wow, I better go out and buy some gas,'" said one oil industry executive.

"As I drive around and I see people in lines at gasoline stations I think I can't afford to let my car get down to a low level," said Michael Canes, an analyst at the American Petroleum Institute, a Washington-based industry group. "It inclines me to think I must fill up earlier to avoid that."

If enough people have the same thought, they can cause serious problems for the nation's gasoline supply.

Analysts say that what happens in a panic-buying situation is that motorists start pulling up to gas pumps as soon as the gas gauge reaches the three-quarters mark, instead of waiting until their down to one-quarter of a tank, as is normal.

The origins of this are varied. Many analysts say panic buying is tripped by the first signs of tight gasoline supplies — news that companies are cutting shipments to dealers or that gas stations are closing Sundays, cutting hours or limiting sales to a few gallons.

By saying "top it off" instead of "fill 'er up," motorists are setting off a whole chain of events that analysts say can lead to trouble.

To begin with, the difference between running around with a quarter tank of gas and three-quarters of a tank is about 10 gallons. If all of America's 134 million cars and trucks made that change, 1.34 billion gallons of gasoline would shift from the distribution system to gas tanks. That's a 42-day supply, an amount called "absolutely staggering" by Larry Goldstein of the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation, an industry group.

While that probably would never happen, a recent American Automobile Association check of 40 cars coming into a Washington, D.C., gas station found only two actually low on gas. The rest were topping off.

And topping off creates problems. It takes just about as long to buy two gallons of gas as it does to buy 10. Although the pumping time is a bit longer for 10 gallons, the time to pull up, give your order, have the pump nozzle put into your tank, put the nozzle back, replace the gas cap and pay is just about the same no matter how much gas is bought.

So five motorists buying two gallons each take about five times as much time as one motorist purchasing 10 gallons.

"You get more visits per person into gas stations, and under queueing theory, you must take up more time at the pump," said the petroleum institute's Canes.

That time translates into lines. And those lines, and news reports of them, cause more people to think about topping off. Hoarding starts, further depleting supplies and forcing gas stations to close earlier. And motorists, seeing stations closing, rush to buy gas before stations close, causing them to shut down even earlier.

In other words, panic begets panic.

"The characteristics, the physical phenomena that cause this behavior do feed on themselves," said Canes.

Eventually, analysts say, the panic-buying fever wears off, and supplies return to something like normal. But no one is sure when that will happen, though there are suggestions on how to hasten it.

One possibility is to replace maximum purchase limits — which analysts say encourage panic buying — with minimum purchase levels.

"I think one thing that every state should require is a minimum purchase of $5," said Goldstein. "That will force people to keep from topping their tanks.

"If everybody bought 10 gallons," he added, "It would be faster than if everybody bought two gallons — because you'd have everybody in line that many fewer times."

Coalition Plans Ruling Appeal

WASHINGTON (AP) — A coalition of farmworkers' groups is planning to appeal a court ruling that allows 10-and 11-year-olds to pick crops that have been sprayed with pesticides.

U.S. District Judge John H. Pratt ruled Monday that Labor Secretary Ray Marshall "did everything he possibly could" to safeguard children by regulating the exposure they receive to chemicals.

But Diane B. Cohn, attorney for the National Association of Farm Worker Organizations, said she would appeal Pratt's decision, which affects about 4,000 children who pick strawberries in Washington state and Oregon and potatoes in Maine.

The Labor Department says 10-and 11-year-old children can pick the short-term crops provided employers follow rules for pesticide spraying. The government rules ban some chemicals and require employers to apply for approval before hiring children.

Ranchers, Feeders Competing For Limited Crop Of Calves

WASHINGTON (AP) — One of the ironies of the cattle business is that a farmer or feedlot operator who has the grain to fatten cattle for the slaughter market is in hot competition with other farmers and ranchers who have the grass.

Steady moisture the past few months, including heavy rains that have bogged down spring field work and triggered floods in many areas, has produced lush pasture growth in many parts of the country.

The Agriculture Department said Monday in a newsletter being sent to subscribers that cattle feeders — those who use grain-based rations to "finish" cattle for slaughter — represent only one group at the moment that is "bidding for a limited number of feeder calves selling for record prices."

"They must compete this spring against 'stocker' operators buying calves to go back on grass and against farmers and ranchers who've decided to defer calf sales until fall," the report said.

"If you're a stocker operator with abundant pasture, you're in a good position to buy expensive calves and probably still turn a good profit. But you'll want to watch the market closely and guard against holding them too long."

The basic reason for all this i the reduction by 16 percent in the U.S. cattle herd, from a peak of 132 million at the start of 1975 to around 111 million last January.

"This reduction has made additional grazing land available in most areas," the report said. "Also, because the 1979 grazing season is beginning with excellent moisture conditions around the country, there is the likelihood of a good grazing year and abundant hay supplies if these conditions continue."

Many cattle breeders — the cow-calf operators — are holding back some of their feeder calves, including some who are buying additional calves to put in pastures this spring.

When grass is abundant, it is the cheapest feed of all to "grow" a calf to a heavier weight. Thus, top prices are being paid for these lightweight animals.

Sudden drought and a deterioration in grazing could force a surge in marketings this summer, meaning more steers could be available for feedlots. But cow-calf operators will have to think more than twice about selling off heifers, if they are serious about herd expansions.

Another factor confronting feeders, the report said, is the possibility of a slump this fall in prices of slaughter cattle. Many are simply balking at "paying the higher prices required to outbid stocker operators."

The stocker operator, however, also must be careful, remembering that supplies of feeder cattle generally peak in the fall.

"That's when calves from the spring calf crop, stocker cattle held over on grass, and heifers not retained for the cow herd typically enter the feedlot," the report said.

Concern Grows Over HSCH's Financial Status

By KIM COBB
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The question is no longer whether Health Sciences Center Hospital will run out of money — but when.

Monday's meeting of the Lubbock County Hospital District Board of Managers indicated hospital district officials are growing more concerned with the teaching hospital's uncertain financial situation.

The increasing concern was evidenced by a proposal to ask county commissioners to appoint a blue ribbon committee to explore, among other things, alternate sources of revenue — including a wider tax base.

LCHD Executive Director Gerald Bosworth has repeatedly stressed that by the end of the year the hospital could face a cash shortfall of more than $900,000. This projected shortfall does not take into consideration a current $4 million state grant which will run out this year.

The Board of Managers is preparing a presentation to the county commissioners which will probably accompany the request for a wider tax base. Several board members have expressed doubts that the commissioners will be receptive to increasing the hospital's county subsidy in light of recent problems in the hospital's billing system.

Financial reports for March indicate that though the amount in accounts receivable (uncollected bills) is up, collection has been stepped up for accounts more than 30 days old, more than 60 days old, and more than 120 days old. This indicates that hospital officials are starting to catch up on the institution's staggering backlog of unpaid bills.

In a meeting of the board's Finance Committee (which also met Monday) committee chairman C. Wayne Smith said expenses were down last month, but revenue was down also. The decrease in expenses was not enough to put the hospital's financial situation ahead.

Bosworth claims the biggest problem the hospital is facing is its inability to fill its beds. Admissions are running behind expectations, he said.

Bill Stinnett, the hospital's associate director for finances, said the hospital would have come close to expected revenue figures had hospital occupancy come up to expectations.

"Had we had the volume, we would have come pretty close," Stinnett said. "The volume is what's causing the shortfall at this point."

The board discussed two approaches to strengthening the hospital's financial picture.

Stinnett is working on a study of projected receipts for Health Sciences Center Hospital, to predict "where, down the road, we could conceivably run out of cash."

Board member Don McInturff hesitated to supply funds for an auditor's survey of Stinnett's report, however. He found it difficult to authorize the spending of more money when facing "bankruptcy", just to have the auditor say, "Yes, you're facing bankruptcy."

The board voted to get an auditor's estimate before approving the appropriation.

In another approach, Bosworth called for the formation of a county commissioners' "Blue Ribbon Committee" to study alternate forms of revenue for the hospital district as well as the projected economic impact of the hospital on the community over the next few years.

Bosworth predicted a study of the hospital's contribution to the community would be "very revealing", adding that the hospital and medical school add to the economy through continued construction jobs as well as retail sales growth.

Bosworth quoted what he called a "conservative estimate" of expected community benefits, claiming Lubbock's economy could be stimulated between $1.2 billion and $1.5 billion over the next ten years.

Hospital district officials will ask for the formation of the "blue ribbon committee at Tuesday's meeting of the county commissioners.

LCHD May Eliminate Rotating Deliveries

In a move to fill some of Health Sciences Center Hospital's empty beds, Lubbock County Hospital District officials are considering scrapping Emergency Medical Services (EMS) delivery-on-rotation system for a policy of mandatory delivery to the teaching hospital.

But the chief of the emergency section at Methodist Hospital — one of those admitting EMS rotation patients — says area health care could suffer if Health Sciences Center Hospital shoulders the responsibility of patients currently shared among three city hospitals.

Dr. Millard Carnrick spoke to the LCHD Board of Managers Monday, saying he doesn't think Health Sciences Center Hospital is adequately staffed to handle the extra patients.

Under the rotation system, emergency victims are asked if they have a hospital preference. If the individual has no preference, EMS attendants alternate between the emergency rooms at Health Sciences, St. Mary's and Methodist Hospital.

Abandoning the rotation system would mean that patients without a hospital preference automatically would be delivered to Health Sciences Center Hospital. Facing an unexpected problem of low admissions, the administrators for Health Sciences hope the increased emergency deliveries would fill more beds.

"There are strong indications health care would best be served by continuing the rotation," Carnrick said.

LCHD Executive Director Gerald Bosworth defended the plan, saying Health Sciences "is doing an excellent job" of providing emergency care for persons brought in by EMS.

"The question is whether you have the capabilities to handle them all," Carnrick countered.

Carnrick told the Avalanche-Journal he was speaking for himself, but Methodist Hospital administrator George Brewer said the emergency room chief spoke with the approval of his office.

"We can only make our presentation to the hospital district board and explain what we think is the best method of taking care of the patient," Brewer explained.

"They (Health Sciences) don't have the experience or the volume or the physicians to take care of the load," Carnrick added.

"This hospital has the capability to care for more patients," Bosworth said. He told the Avalanche-Journal that the majority of people transported by EMS do have a hospital preference and that a relatively small number of people are therefore divided between the three hospitals on the rotation plan.

Board members said the hospital district has a right to the non-preference EMS patients since EMS is funded by the hospital district. Discussion of the proposal was tabled until the board receives a written opinion from the Lubbock Crosby Garza County Medical Society on the matter.

In other business, the board adopted a policy to "writeoff" bad debts for the hospital. The policy calls for debts which have remained uncollected for a certain period of time — with no expectation of collection — to be transferred from the accounts receivable section of the hospital's balance sheet to an allowance for uncollected debts.

Though the debts would be removed from active business transactions, the hospital would still maintain a file on the debtor assuming the debt might be paid at a future date. Keeping a record of the debt would also allow the admitting office to check a patient's file by computer to insure the prospective patient has not already incurred unpayable debts at the hospital.

The Board of Managers approved two programs of reimbursement for the hospital:

The first plan calls for payment to be made for hospitals providing kidney donors for transplants at Health Sciences. The payment would be provided by Medicare and would not cost the hospital anything.

The second plan calls for funding of high-risk maternity cases by a group called the South Plains Health Providers.

Crime Panel Halts Expenditures

By JEFF McCASLIN
Avalanche-Journal Staff

In an effort to hold down its mounting debt ceiling, the Lubbock County Crime Prevention Council's executive committee decided in a special meeting last week to suspend all future expenditures unless authorized by the board of directors.

LCCPC President Mal Cleland, reporting on the special meeting to the council this morning, said the organization still owes $9,400 in outstanding debts while the bank balance shows $2,815 in receipts from the Business Crimes Symposium held May 3.

Cleland said that although the council needs to come up with about $6,600 to meet the debt load, the executive committee decided the LCCPC should raise $20,000 during its first year of operation.

"I don't think it (raising $20,000) is a major undertaking," Cleland said, adding he will ask the fund-raising committee to meet and discuss possible funding efforts.

Cleland also told the council that the executive committee decided to observe Roberts' Rules of Order at all subsequent meetings to keep the LCCPC apolitical.

"We should put it in the by-laws of this council that we will follow Roberts' Rules of Order and stay out of the political arena," he said. "We must not become involved in political issues."

Criminal District Attorney John T. Montford said Operation Identification, which was launched three weeks ago, is moving slowly, but meticulously, down the road of helping curtail crime in Lubbock.

"It's too early to tell the statistical effects of Operation Identification but my feeling is that the citizens know our county is getting tough on crime, and Operation Identification is the key to cutting down the crime rate.

"This project is not going to cut down the number of burglaries overnight, but the street talk I've heard is in favor of law abiding citizens."

Montford said all the markers purchased for Operation Identification should be checked out by the end of the summer, adding it will take some time because the city is being canvassed on a block-to-block basis.

Three young offenders who are serving time in the state prison at Huntsville visited Lubbock last week as a preview of a program that will be available to schools by the Concerned Citizens Crime Commission.

Ray Chapman, who represents the Concerned Citizens on the LCCPC, said the youthful offenders presented their life stories on the road to crime and how they plan to rehabilitate themselves to fit back into society.

Chapman said the program won't cost the council any money but is very beneficial to students in teaching them what happens to young criminals.

The council also approved supplying local realtors with logos and information sheets on Operation Identification but requiring them to purchase their own marking devices to help new homeowners mark valuable items.

The LCCPC also accepted the resignation of Rick Childers as treasurer and nominated council member Nat Kizer to fill that position. He will also act as purchasing agent for the council.

Childers' cited lack of time and extra work load in his position as administrative assistant to Mayor Dirk West as reasons for his resignation.

Before adjourning this morning's meeting, Montford lauded the group's efforts to curb crime in the Lubbock County area.

"As Criminal District Attorney I would like to say I think this council has done an outstanding job in preventing crime. If you look back five months ago, what crime prevention did we have then?

"I think we've come a long way since we got this thing started and hope we can continue."

The LCCPC will meet every first and third Tuesday at 7:15 a.m. in the Emergency Operations Center in City Hall.

Local Teen Reports Stabbing Attacker

By JACK DOUGLAS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A 15-year-old girl has told authorities she stabbed a man in the middle of the back after he kidnapped her, threatened her with a nail-pronged board and raped her on top of a table.

However, the Lubbock teen-ager did not notify city police of the incident, which she said occurred Saturday night, until shortly after 9 p.m. Monday.

The report, handed over to the sheriff's department because the assault allegedly happened in the county, appeared to be filled with unanswered questions.

"We're trying to find out what happened now," sheriff's Capt. Alton Hobbs said this morning.

While the girl said she seriously injured her attacker by sticking a knife in his back just below the shoulder blades, Hobbs and police say they have not received any report of a stabbing victim matching the suspect's description from local hospitals.

However, a West Texas Hospital spokesman told police Monday night that the girl arrived at their emergency room two nights ago and was told to go to Health Sciences Center Hospital, where Rape Crisis Center representatives can be consulted.

A report states the girl was to be accompanied by a center representative and meet with deputies today, then prefer charges at the district attorney's office. But Hobbs said the girl had not been heard from by late this morning.

A report at the sheriff's department says the girl met the suspect at a club in East Lubbock, and went with him "voluntarily" to a barbecue restaurant near County Road 28 and FM 2641. However, the report later states the girl told deputies she was forced to go to the scene north of the city where she was raped.

The teen-ager reportedly told authorities she was at the East Lubbock club and wanted to go to her aunt's house. She said the suspect agreed to drive her to the residence. But once there, the man allegedly told the girl she would have to go with him, and when she tried to get out of his car, he reportedly hit her in the face.

The complainant said the man drove to the restaurant, got a board with a nail protruding from one end and ordered her to the back of the building.

She said the man threw her on top of a table and raped her. She said that after the assault she stabbed the man when he turned to walk away.

The knife reportedly was lying on top of the table.

Deputies were told the girl jumped up and ran to a girlfriend's car and was driven to a local motel where she frequently stayed. Reports did not indicate what the victim' friend was doing near the scene.

The girl said that at the motel she cleaned up, and her friend helped her wash blood off her clothes.

The girl told deputies the suspect's name, and described him as a black man about 25 years old. Hobbs said the suspect had not been contacted by late this morning.

The girl reportedly told authorities she waited two days before deciding to report the incident because she was scared of the man, and he was known as a "bad dude."

John Lennon Skips Meet Of Beatles

LONDON (AP) — Ex-Beatle John Lennon was the only one of the famous four to miss a weekend reunion celebrating the marriage of rock guitarist Eric Clapton to George Harrison's former wife, Patti Boyd, the London Daily Express reported Monday.

The reunion of Harrison, Paul McCartney and Ringo Starr took place at Clapton's mansion home at Ewhurst, Surrey, about 20 miles from London, the paper said.

The gathering may have been the closest the Beatles have come to a full musical reunion since they broke up in 1969. Lennon, who lives in New York was the only one absent.

The three ex-Beatles, joined by Clapton, performed on a makeshift outdoor stage before 200 invited guests. They sang 1960s Beatles hits such as "Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band."

The gathering celebrated the recent wedding in Tucson, Ariz., of Clapton and Harrison's first wife, Patti, who was divorced from th ex-Beatle in 1977 after 11 years of marriage.

Harrison, 36, has also remarried. He wed his Mexican girlfriend, Olivia Arras, last September and they have one son, Dhani. They live near Oxford.

McCartney, 36, who lives in Britain with his American wife Linda, and Starr, 38, a tax exile in the United States and now concentrating on acting, have pursued their own careers with success since the Beatles' breakup.

Admiral To Decide Cadets' Punishment

NEW LONDON, Conn. (AP) — Six cadets at the U.S. Coast Guard Academy, including three due to be commissioned Wednesday, could be dismissed for allegedly possessing marijuana or drug paraphernalia.

A decision was expected today from Rear Admiral Malcolm E. Clark, academy superintendent. The cadets' names were not divulged, and no criminal charges were expected to be filed, an academy spokesman said.

The marijuana was found during a search of several dormitory rooms at the school, said Lt. George Whiting, academy spokesman. He said cadets found with marijuana in previous years have been dismissed.

Senate Refuses Cut In Aid For Syria

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate refused today to cut $45 million in conditional economic aid for Syria after being told there still is "a distinct chance" Syria will join the Middle East peace process.

The Senate voted 58-34 to retain aid for Syria as it began work on legislation that finances a $4.4 billion security assistance program for 60 countries around the world. The bill authorizes actual budget outlays of $2.8 billion.

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., contended that all of the funds earmarked for Syria should be eliminated because of that nation's continuing hostility toward peace efforts in the Middle East.

Proxmire said Syria has been hostile to United States interests, has occupied large chunks of Lebanon, financed and harbored Palestinian terrorists and done all it could to upset the peace treaty between Egypt and Israel.

Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., acknowleged that Syria has taken all of those actions but said the possibility of U.S. aid still should be extended to give the United States leverage in furthering the peace process.

Javits said the aid should not be considered a reward but should be kept available because "there may be an opportunity where it can be used constructively."

He noted that the bill provides that none of the funds shall be made available unless the president certifies such aid is in the national interest of the United States.

Sen. Richard Stone, D-Fla., said that while Syria has been hostile, "there are some recent indications that there is a hope of change" in Syria's attitudes and actions.

"I think that in the next few months there is a distinct chance" that attitudes will change, he said, and a "distinct opportunity" for peace.

Both Javits and Stone are strong Senate supporters of Israel.

Stone noted that the legislation still has to go through the congressional appropriations process. He told Proxmire he would co-sponsor legislation ending aid for Syria if that nation's attitudes don't change over the next few months."

Javits said that in the "crazy" pattern of emotions and politics in the Middle East, Syria's hostility toward the peace process "could change tomorrow."

As it reached the Senate floor the authorization bill was $109 million below President Carter's request for fiscal 1980 and $32 million below last year's spending level.

It contains funds to finance the peace package, including $1.7 billion for Israel and $751 million for Egypt.

The legislation authorizes spending levels for a number of security supporting assistance programs, mostly in military credit sales which require relatively small budget outlays.

Board Considers Hard-Sell Citibus Advertising

By NANCY ALLEN
Avalanche-Journal Staff

With gasoline prices rising, Citibus needs a hard-sell advertising campaign to entice residents to ride the bus rather than drive their cars, the Lubbock Transit Advisory Board was told Monday.

Saying he agrees with Mayor Dirk West that Citibus needs a more "functional, hard-sell" advertising campaign, Phil Price, of Phil Price Advertising Inc., presented what he called a "stark, direct" media strategy.

"The cute ads served their purpose," Price said , "but with gasoline prices heading for a dollar a gallon, we have a different situation, a different market and will need different advertising."

West last week called for Citibus advertising aimed at getting white collar workers, who traditionally drive their cars, to ride the bus. Transit coordinator John Wilson agreed the higher price of fuel might get more people out of their cars and onto the bus.

Price said the new ads, which are subject to approval by city council, would emphasize that Citibus offers Lubbockites "an alternative" to driving.

"Ride Citibus, and save gas for the fun trips," was the bottom line on many of the ads he presented to the board.

In other business, board members heard a request by a representative of the League of Women Voters for transit service to the Lubbock City and County Health Departments.

Darlene Buckberry, president of the league, said in light of the "steady rise in client utilization of the health department," the board should consider at least a trial run to the facility located at North University Avenue and Jarvis Street.

Mrs. Buckberry cited figures from a recent league survey at the health department which indicated 106 clients a week would be interested in bus service, of which 46 percent came from East Lubbock.

In response to the league request, which was made on behalf of the maternity and well-child clinic clients, the board ordered a transit department feasibliity study of the situation.

Wilson said the study, which he estimated would be completed in late July, also would include transit department findings on the feasibility of service to the Lubbock International Airport. "I've received quite a few calls for bus service there, too," he said.

Wilson reported Citibus ridership was up one percent during April, with revenue slightly down.

Revenue for the year to date, however, is "above what we had projected," Wilson said. Looking ahead to the end of the present fiscal year on Sept. 30, he projected "we should be slightly under budget for the year — but it will be tight."

Citibus's experimental Route Four, which ran from Monterey Shopping Center to the South Plains Mall via 82nd Street, was deleted May 14, as a result of a City Council vote May 10.

Transit board members had voted last month to ask council for an additional $5,645 to extend the route's 90-day trial period until the end of the present fiscal year.

The route was added in January. Low ridership prompted Wilson's original recommendation that it be deleted.

SIMONS DIES — Col. Arthur "Bull" Simons died Monday afternoon at Baylor Hospital in Dallas. Simons, 60, had been hospitalized since suffering a heart attack while skiing in Colorado in March. Simons, shown at a news conference following the successful raid to free two businessmen from an Iranian prison, also led an unsuccessful raid on Son Tay prisoner of war camp 30 miles north of Hanoi. Commando Leader 'Bull' Simons Dies

DALLAS (UPI) — The retired Army colonel who led the 15-man "sunshine boys" commando team into riot-torn Iran in February to successfully engineer the escape of two corporate employees has died at the age of 60.

Commando leader Arthur "Bull" Simons had said he was fortunate to do several things in his life and the escape mission for Texas millionaire H. Ross Perot's Electronic Data Systems Inc. "was one of them."

Simons, who suffered a heart attack while vacationing in Colorado in March, had been hospitalized for sometime at Baylor Medical Center in Dallas where Perot, his longtime friend and the financial backer of the Iran escape, lives.

Simons of Red Bay, Fla., died at the hospital Monday afternon of heart faiure.

"It is difficult to describe a friendship between two men that, after months without contact, allows one to call the other, ask him for help that involves risking his life, and receive a commitment over the telphone," Perot said late Monday. "That summaizes my relationship with Col. Simons. As my friend, he went to Iran, placed his life at risk and refused to accept payment for his services.

"When we returned to Dallas, he watched the wives and children of the rescued men joyfully and tearfully greet their husbands and fathers. After a few mintues, he looked sternly at me and said, 'I just got paid for the trip.'"

But Simons had had praise for Perot, himself, after the mission, saying he was "dazzled by the human qualities of it."

Simons' Army career spanned World War II, Korea and Vietnam with most of his time spent with special forces teams. He retired in the mid-1970s and was acclaimed as one of the Army's finest leaders of all time, particularly in leading raids behind enemy lines. Perot had termed Simons a new American hero.

In 1970, Simons led a raid 300 miles into North Vietnam to the outskirts of Hanoi to free POWs from the Son Tay prisoner of war camp. The POWs had been removed from the camp before the commando team arrived.

Although the team was under fire much of the trip, it escaped without casualities.

The Iran mission was equally as successful. EDS engineers Paul Chiapparone and Bill Gaylord were rescued from a Tehran prison without injury during Iran's bloody revolution. The code name for the 15-man commando team that pulled off the escape was the "sunshine boys."

"My family, the people at EDS and I were fortunate to know this special man. Today is one of the saddest days of my life," Perot said of Simons' death.

Memorial services were scheduled in Dallas at 9 a.m. Wednesday and a military funeral was set later in the day at Barrancas National Cemetery in Pensacola, Fla., where Simons was to be buried alongside his wife who died in March of 1978.

Simons was survived by two sons, a brother and a sister.

Pair Charged In Burglary

Two Lubbock men, including one who was shot by police early Monday, were charged with burglary Monday in a break-in at an Avenue A lumber company.

They are Porfirio Salazar, 21, of 3314 Harvard St., who was treated and released at Methodist Hospital after being shot in both legs by a patrolman, and Pedro Palacios, 30, of the Frontier Motel, No. 8.

The criminal district attorney's office recommended their bonds be set at $15,000 each.

Salazar and Palacios were apprehended after officers answered a burglar alarm about 12:45 a.m. Monday at Veazey Cash Lumber Co. at 2701 Ave. A.

Patrolman John Tucker arrested Palacios, he reported, after his police dog found the suspect inside the east part of the building.

While the dog held the first man at bay, officers said, the second ignored orders to stop and crawled out through a small hole made by glass having been broken in a door.

Outside, Cpl. Larry Jenkins shot the man in the legs with a shotgun after he again refused to stop and tried to run away.

Police information officer Bill Morgan said the dog was highly excited during the arrests and that Tucker had to control it to keep Jenkins from being attacked when Jenkins entered the building briefly before rushing back outside in pursuit of the second man.

"They're non-discriminatory," Morgan said of the police dogs.

STATES MAY BE LIABLE

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Insurance Institute for Highway Safety says states and state officials may find themselves liable for damages caused by drivers who were licensed despite poor driving records in other states. The institute's general counsel, Andrew Hricko, said the states or officials may open themselves to liability because they failed to check the federal government's National Driver Register before issuing licenses.

Official Expects Rabies Increase

EL PASO (UPI) — Although a severe outbreak of rabies along the U.S.-Mexico border appears to have slowed during the summer, the number of cases will probably rise again in the fall, a health official predicts.

The Center for Disease Control at Atlanta, Ga., said El Paso had the largest number of rabid dogs reported in the United States this year, but health officials also reported outbreaks of the disease in animals in Eagle Pass; Piedras Negras, Mexico; in the Imperial Valley of California and neighboring Mexicali, Mexico, and at Tijuana, Mexico.

"It seems the worst is behind us," said Dr. Boris Velimirovic, chief of the Pan American Health Organization's border field office.

He attended a meeting Monday of health officials from El Paso, Mexico and New Mexico who have been combatting rabies among the dog and skunk populations of the area.

"We would expect to see a downturn in the summer," added Dr. Lea Hutchinson, chief of veterinary services for the El Paso City-County Health Department, which imposed a rabies quarantine Sunday. "I would expect to see an upturn in the fall."

Hutchison said a classic symptom of rabies, also known has hydrophobia, has stricken animals' inability to drink water, leading to rapid dehydration during the hot summer months.

El Paso officials said they had confirmed 17 cases of dog rabies this year, three rabid dogs and eight rabid skunks had been found in adjoining Dona Ana County, N.M., and Mexican officials reported 47 rabid dogs.

Dr. Heriberto Perez-Gonzalez, director of the Juarez Health Center, said a door-to-door campaign had resulted in vaccination against rabies of 33,211 dogs, despite public resistance in his city to both the mass innoculation program and the treatment of humans exposed to the disease.

Perez-Gonzalez' latest estimates showed only five persons had been bitten by rabid dogs, but that 970 persons had been exposed, 361 persons started treatments and 186 completed treatments against the disease. He blamed the outbreak on wild animals, particularly in the outlying colonies of Juarez.

He said health teams had discovered some Juarez residents hid their dogs or complained they could not afford the 20 pesos (less than $1 U.S.) or vaccinations, and some exposed residents were reluctant to seek treatments.

"We have to exaggerate things for them so that through fear they come in for treatment," the Mexican physician said.

The quarantine which went into effect Sunday supplements a leash law for dogs and cats, which already was in effect in El Paso County. It adds an average fine of $28.50, or as high as $200 a pet, for any animal found running loose during the rabies threat.

Hutchinson said the law also restricts commercial shipments of dogs and cats to some states and nations, but some airlines would still ship pets if the owners presented certificates of vaccination from veterinarians.

Davis, Girlfriend Plan To Wed This Week

FORT WORTH (AP) — Cullen Davis and his longtime girlfriend, Karen Master, will marry this week, after his divorce becomes final, the multimillionaire industrialist says.

He declined to reveal the exact date.

"I don't want to let the cat out of the bag too much. Let me just say it will be this week," Davis said.

A close friend said, however:

"The wedding will probably be Thursday. They want to be married as soon as the divorce is final."

Mrs. Master, who has been married once previously, was a key witness for Davis at two criminal trials — when Davis was accused of murdering his 12-year-old stepdaughter during a shooting spree at the Davis mansion in August 1976 and when Davis was accused of putting out a contract on the life of his divorce court judge.

Mrs. Master testified Cullen was in bed with her at the time of the shooting, and Davis was acquitted. Several months ago, she corroborated his story that he was "just playing along" with Charles David McCrory, his former employee-turned-informant, when they discussed various murder plots, and a hung jury resulted.

Priscilla, who was wounded in the 1976 shooting incident, was Davis' second wife. Their marriage was ended last month in a ruling of District Judge Clyde Ashworth. In the divorce decree, the judge awarded the couple's $6 million, 20-room mansion to Davis and gave Priscilla 30 days to get out.

She has to pay him $50,000 a day if she isn't out by Wednesday, which is also the last day she can appeal the divorce decree. Her friends said she plans no appeal.

Davis said his marriage to Mrs. Master will be a quiet affair at a friend's home in Fort Worth, with only a few couples on hand.

"It won't be at Karen's and it won't be at the mansion. We want to keep it very small and very private," Davis said of the wedding.

Texan Says Oil Crisis To Persist

NEW HAVEN (AP) — The American public should not expect any quick solution to a petroleum shortage that has been decades in the making, House Majority Leader James C. Wright said Monday.

"We tend to ride along, fat, dumb and happy until the prices get us by the throat and we demand solutions immediately," the Democratic congressman from Texas told a business leaders' luncheon.

The government is making some progress toward controlling oil prices and the broader problem of inflation, Wright said, but the key is increasing domestic energy production.

"The shorter the supply, the higher the price," he said.

Dependence on foreign oil, Wright said during an earlier news conference, is "probably the most serious threat to the independence of the United States."

Without a reversal of the trend, the nation's growing reliance on foreign oil will reach the point "where U.S. policy won't be made in Washington but in Riyadh (Saudi Arabia) and Tehran (Iran)," he said at the Connecticut Business and Industry Association lunch.

The government is making some progress on its long-term plan to deal with the energy dilemma by curbing waste and increasing domestic sources of energy, he said.

Wright disagreed with those who claim the current gasoline shortage is an oil company ploy to boost prices.

"I wish it were as simple as that," he said. "Ever since the mid-1950s we've been using more (oil) than we've been finding."

Price controls on oil that came later discouraged new exploration, Wright added.

The energy and inflation problems must be attacked together, he said, because the $45 billion annual cost of importing foreign oil creates a strong upward pressure on prices.

But Wright declared that an even more difficult problem is increasing the nation's level of productivity.

U.S. employers must join in the effort to increase our country's industrial output, he said, and government must continue efforts to streamline its operations.

U.S. Rep. Robert N. Giaimo, D-Conn., who joined Wright on the program, said the United States must exert more pressure on Japan to accept more U.S. goods.

He said productivity will continue to be a problem in this country into the late 1980s, when there will be a decline in the number of young people entering the labor market.

Airline Story Incorrect

A story concerning changes in airline service in Sunday's Avalanche-Journal failed to note that Texas International Airlines has permission to fly between Dallas-Fort Worth Airport and Lubbock, but has set no official start-up date.

Also, Braniff International is dropping two daily flights from DFW to Lubbock, but none from Lubbock to Dallas, as was stated in the story. The four daily outgoing flights have been rescheduled but not dropped. Beginning in June, Braniff flights will leave Lubbock for Dallas at 6:30 a.m., 9:35 a.m., 2:35 p.m. and 7:35 p.m. during the week.

TUFTS TO SELL INVESTMENTS

MEDFORD, Mass. (AP) — Tufts Universiy trustees are going to begin selling the school's investments in companies doing business in South Africa as a protest against that nation's policy of racial apartheid. About $6.4 million of Tufts' total $31 million endowment is invested in corporations with business in South Africa, according to Tufts treasurer C. Russell de Burlo.

Colombians To Release Americans

HOUSTON (AP) — The Colombian government agreed Monday to let firefighter William Spradley and his friend, Roy McLemore, out of jail for $60,000, said a Houston Fire Department spokesman.

Dale Everitt said he was told the men were fined $20,000 apiece for civil violations, and their combined attorneys fee was $15,000. He said doctor's fees for Spradley and transportation for the men out of the South American country come to $5,000 more.

"It pretty much adds up to buying their freedom," Everitt said.

But Houston firefighters will not be raising the release money, he added.

"All the department is doing now is contacting the relatives and helping in communications," Everitt said.

The men have been in Colombia since April 29, when, Spradley said, the men began a flight to Venezuela to pick up oil drilling bits.

The firefighter, who moonlights as a pilot, said their twin-engine plane was forced down in Colombia by engine trouble. He said Indians shot him in the back and kidnapped McLemore when they landed.

Energy News Puts Damper On Market

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market remained stuck in neutral today amid renewed energy worries.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials slipped 1.04 to 841.39 by noontime.

But gainers held a slight edge on losers in the over-all count of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Wall Street got some unpleasant news overnight in the form of word that Algeria had posted a sharp increase in the price of its light high-quality crude oil.

Analysts said the news raised fears of further price hikes by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries when the cartel holds its semi-annual meeting in Geneva at the end of next month.

Brokers said another damper on the market was uncertainty over the future course of Federal Reserve credit policy. The Fed's policy-setting Open Market Committee meets today.

Fairchild Camera & Instrument rose ⅜ to 64 in active trading. The stock jumped 7½ points Monday after the company agreed on a $66-a-share takeover plan with Schlumberger Ltd.

Caesars World fell 5 to 64⅝. The company said the Securities and Exchange Commission staff apparently plans to recommend a civil action against the company and its chairman, Clifford S. Perlman.

The company said the SEC staff alleges that it failed to disclose personal dealings by Perlman with companies that did business with Caesars World.

The NYSE's composite index dropped .05 to 56.36. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .02 at 181.20.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 12.84 million shares by noontime, up from 9.70 million at the same point Monday.

Referendum Measure In Bad Shape

AUSTIN (AP) — The sponsor of a proposal giving Texans a limited right of initiative and referendum says it is badly wounded, if not dead.

Needing 100 votes for approval, the constitutional amendment received an 84-34 tally in the House on Monday — five fewer "aye" votes than when it came up last week.

Rep. Carlisle Smith, D-Grand Prairie, the sponsor said he was not ready to pronounce the measure (HJR3) dead, "but I am saying it is wounded."

Smith said he might ask the House to reconsider Monday's decision "if I think we have the votes to pass it." But time is running short.

The legislative session ends at midnight, May 28. Should the House ultimately approve an initiative and referendum proposal, the Senate — paralyzed since last Friday by the absence of the 12 "Killer Bee" senators — still would have to act.

Gov. Bill Clements reiterated Monday night he would call a special session if the Legislature failed to submit initiative and referendum to the voters.

He said he probably will call a special session after the lawmakers adjourn next week.

Clements appeared to be distressed as he received his first news of the defeat from a reporter at the Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport Monday night as he returned from Connecticut.

"They killed it?" he asked, apparently surprised at the vote.

Asked if he would now call a special session, he responded bluntly, "I probably will."

"It may be in their perception that they decided a special session is inevitable, and that this undoubtedly will be one of the issues of the special session," the governor said.

Smith said he thought the governor had no choice but to call a special session.

Rep. Craig Washington, D-Houston, urged rejection of the measure because, he said, it would undermine the representative system of government.

"If you represent your people and I represent my people, there is no better representative form of government than us. ... I trust a system that allows intelligent decisions to be made by informed people," Washington said.

Smith said the people of Texas want initiative and referendum and should get the chance "to speak on whether they want this kind of system. It will carry every county in the state, and you know it."

He urged each House member to "share just a little part of your chair" with the citizens.

Smith's proposal would let Texans, by petition, put initiative issues for new laws and referendum measures to repeal unpopular laws on general election ballots. If voters approved the proposals, they would go before the Legislature, which would have to act.

If the Legislature rejected or amended a measure it received by initative or referendum, the voters again would receive the issue and could pass their original proposal over the Legislature's head.

Critics of the proposal say it makes it too hard to get an issue on the ballot because a petition would have to be signed by 15 percent of the total number of voters in the last gubernatorial election.

Jurors Ponder Punishment For Thornton

A 140th District Court jury at midday was deliberating punishment for 20-year-old Ricky Don Thornton in the Feb. 8 holdup of a Lubbock meat market.

Thornton, of 2207 E. Cornell St., was convicted of aggravated robbery after an hour and 10 minutes of deliberation Monday afternoon.

He was accused of holding up Newburn's Meat Market at 215 Quirt Ave. with another man, Ralph Eugene Evans, 18, of 3314 E. Cornell St., who was convicted of aggravated robbery in the case last week and given a 10-year probated sentence.

Market owner Gary Newburn Monday identified Thornton as the man who held a shotgun on him while Evans took $50 from the cash register.

Assistant Criminal District Attorney Mark McBride, head of the aggravated robbery prosecution unit for the criminal district attorney's office, argued after testimony in the brief trial was over that Newburn was more credible than witnesses for the defense.

Three witnesses called by defense attorney Lane Arthur testified that Thornton was taking his brother to work at a steel company while the robbery was taking place between 7:30 a.m. and 7:40 a.m. Feb. 8.

Thornton's mother said he was asleep in the living room until she awakened him to drive to a Lubbock motel and take his brother to work. She said he returned home about 8:15 a.m. and that Evans arrived there while he was gone.

A woman who was staying at the motel testified that he arrived there between 7:30 a.m. and 8 a.m., and a co-worker of the brother at the company said the two brothers were there a few minutes before 8 a.m.

The motel was about six miles from the Thornton home, Mrs. Thornton said.

Because of two prior felony convictions, the charge against Thornton has been "enhanced," and he faces a possible sentence of 99 years or life.

The minimum sentence the jury can assess is 15 years. It does not have the option of giving probation.

Bungling Spy Returning To Battle Evil Forces

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Secret Agent 86, the bungling superspyy of the old "Get Smart" TV series, is back in business, this time as the hero of an $8 million movie, "The Adventures of Maxwell Smart."

Good old Max girds himself once again in a battle against the evil forces of KAOS which threatens international tranquility with a "nude bomb" capable of destroying all known fabrics which exist on earth.

All that stands between worldwide strk nakedness and the status quo is Maxwell Smart, a thin line of defense indeed.

Naturally, beady-eyed, adenoidal Don Adams plays the cocksure little spy.

From 1965-1970 "Get Smart" was a top-rated series and remains something of a cult attraction. It is telecast in 67 countries and in scores of cities in the United States.

The show's popularity convinced Universal Pictures the world is ready for a movie spoofing the James Bond films.

No one is happier about the return of the little twerp than actor Adams.

"He's the same Maxwell Smart — a klutz," Adams beamed. "He still uses the shoe telephone and a whole array of weird gimmicks in his fight against KAOS which is an international organization of evil and rottenness.

"Max always cops out when he blows an assignment. He never admits he's wrong — and he's never right.

"He doesn't work for his old bosses at 'Control' anymore. He's employed by 'PITS,' a counterspy network of good guys."

Adams is the only member of the TV cast appearing in the film. Ed Platt, who played his old boss, is deceased. Barbara Feldon, Agent 99, who was Maxwell's girl Friday, will not be back.

Instead, Maxwell, who retains his Agent 86 status, has acquired three female assistants, Agents 36-22-34 — Pamela Hensley, Andrea Howard and Sylvia Kristel.

He's also gained a secret weapon, a deskmobile which converts into a car with cruising speed of 40 miles an hour. The blotter folds into a windshield and dashboard. It is equipped with cannons and other deadly weapons.

In the past nine years Adams has bounced around. He starred in two unsuccessful series, "The Partners" and "Don Adams' Screen Test." He also appeared in guest shots in episodic TV and toured in "The Owl And The Pussycat" with his wife, Judy Luciano.

But he is indelibly linked in the minds of millions to Maxwell Smart, klutz.

"I played Maxwell so long I actually became the idiot," he said, laughing. "I couldn't leave him behind me. During the series I began using my own daily experiences for material in the show.

"There was no problem in picking up his characteristics and that nasal, stacatto voice. It's like fingernails on a blackboard.

"I'm taking him down a tone or two for the movie because of the magnification on the big screen. The picture itself is a combination of James Bond and 'The Pink Panther' character, Inspector Clouseau.

"James Bond is a super guy, handsome, debonaire. He's surrounded by great looking broads. He always does the right thing. Guys in the audience live vicariously through him.

"Max is what the ordinary guy would really be like if he was made a secret agent. Men can identify with him. He bungles his way through to victory in a triumph of ineptitude.

"Max is great to play because I'm so locked into the character. People on the street still yell, 'Hi, Max.' They never call me Don."

Adams, a perfectionist, seldom watched his show in its salad days. The imperfections bothered him. But before starting "The Adventures Of Maxwell Smart," his first movie, he began tuning in returns.

"That show is played five times a day in Los Angels," he said. "Segments are run back-to-back at 11:30 and midnight. Now I think the show is hilarious. I find myself laughing out loud.

"In the old days I got involved in the scripts and did a lot of improvisation on the set. I'm improvising as much as I can in the movie when I find I can make Max funnier.

Broadway Comedy Offers Thin Plot

By JAY SHARBUTT

NEW YORK (AP) — Okay, right to the point: "Murder at the Howard Johnson's" is the kind of motel comedy you wish they'd kept at the front desk until the maid found time to change the plot.

The tale here, such as it is, is so predictable it almost shouts "Here I am, Daddy!" the minute we spy Tony Roberts and Joyce Van Patten together in a Hojo room a week before Christmas.

They respectively play Mitchell Lavell, a dashing single dentist, and Arlene Miller, a married woman. They are lovers. They plan to kill her dull husband, Paul (Bob Dishy), a used-car salesman.

At this point, the plot thins. And we've two more scenes to go. As this is a comedy, you suspect Paul and Arlene later will try to kill Mitchell, then Mitchell and Paul will try to dispatch her.

By gum, it happens in "Murder," which bowed Thursday night on Broadway, sight gags, shouts and dentist and used-car jokes akimbo.

Played in the broad — like from here to Ohio — manner, we learn she is Mitchell's patient and he violated his sacred dental vow to fool only with the tooth, the whole tooth and nothing but the tooth.

Now, they've lured the unsuspecting hubby, also a patient, to the motel and will drown him in the bathtub. Sighs she: "Poor Paul. He's going to hate this so much." Paul arrives.

She makes a last-minute plea for a divorce, Mitchell offers 50 per cent off on future dental fees, but it's no go. The attempt is made, the plotters exit, but the victim survives.

Next time, same room, it's the 4th of July and she's plotting suicide, having caught Mitchell with another woman. But she calls both Paul and the dentist before departing this world.

Paul arrives first. A reconciliation occurs after he tells her he's been attending classes in self-realization so he won't be so shallow. They decide to slay her unfaithful lover.

Which prompts one of the few funny lines in the play. She gives her slightly dim husband a gun and asks if he knows how to use it.

"What's to know?" he shrugs. "You aim, you shoot and five days later you're back on the street."

He hides in a closet, Mitchell arrives, much thrashing about ensues and she flees them both. And, we learn, she studies with and then decamps with the guy who taught Paul's self-knowledge class.

Next time, same room, it's New Year's Eve and the boys plot to kill her — by hanging her from a scaffold they've built in the room — and put the blame on her new beau. They lure her to the room.

Alas, the rope, bought on sale, has a flaw. You know what happens at the first yank. It's the same thing that happens with the script by Ron Clark and Sam Bobrick. It fails.

In this "Murder," directed by Marshall W. Mason at a brisk clip, the very capable Roberts and Miss Van Patten do their best under trying circumstances.

But the best under these circumstances is Dishy, whose funny, wild-eyed mugging and burglar's timing is so good you wish the comedy he's in matched his talent. Alas, it doesn't.

"Murder at the Howard Johnson's" would be tolerable as a one-shot situation comedy on TV, where you expect the fare to be thinner. But on Broadway, no way.

What other critics said:

Richard Eder, New York Times — "Murder at the Howard Johnson's comes in only three flavors; all of them vanilla ..."

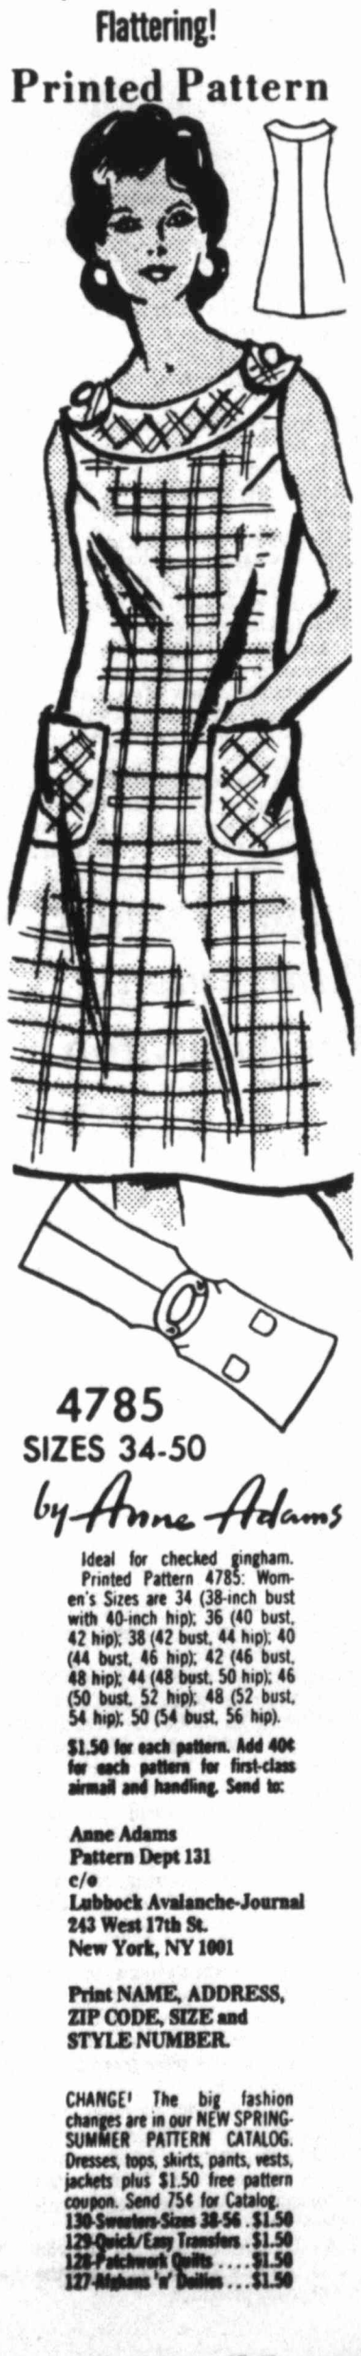

" 'Murder' ... is a comedy of suspense in the sense that after a fairly funny start the comedy is mainly suspended."

Douglas Watt, New York Daily News — "The play fits the setting: all veneer, determinedly cheery, and as sincere as the welcoming embrace of a game show host. ... The entire play might better have been reduced to a 10-minute television sketch."

Strong Earthquake Goes Unnoticed

PALMER, Alaska (AP) — A strong sea-born earthquake failed to shake up many Alaskans despite the fact it measured 6 on the Richter scale.

Robert Epply, chief of the Palmer Observatory near Anchorage, said the Saturday night quake was "felt strongly" in Kodiak, Dillingham and other parts of Western Alaska. However, a spokeswoman at the National Weather Service office in Kodiak said Sunday she was awake all night and felt nothing. No injuries were reported. Officials said the quake was centered about 170 miles southwest of Kodiak in the North Pacific Ocean. The Richter scale is a measurement of ground motion. A 6 on the scale defines a quake capable of severe damage.

GSA Officials Say Theft Problem Getting Worse

BY DONALD LAMBRO

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Government property worth millions of dollars — from high priced electric typewriters to calculators — is being stolen each year from federal office buildings — and officials say it is getting worse.

General Services Administration, which manages the security of some government buildings, says thefts from federal offices occur throughout the country, but nowhere is the problem more severe than in Washington.

According to GSA figures compiled for United Press International, thefts of both federal property and personal possessions of government employes solely within the Washington area last year totaled almost 3,000 items valued at nearly $525,000.

This year's total is expected to pass that figure. In the first three months of 1979, thieves stolem 1,252 items valued at over $277,000. If that trend continues, more than $1 million in property will be stolen this year from government offices in the nation's capital alone.

Nationlly, GSA says that $2.5 million in articles were stolen last year from GSA-owned or leased buildings. But that is a fragmentary figure at best, because GSA manages less than 2 percent of the 495,000 federally-owned or leased buildings here and abroad.

"It's getting worse, much worse," said a GSA security official concerned with keeping the statistics. "For some reason this year they are stealing more than ever before."

From January through March of this year, thieves in Washington stole 184 typewriters, 188 calculators, 10 automobiles, 170 "miscellaneous" items, and 788 personal items. The typewriters usually are expensive electric models; the calculators range in value from small hand-held models to costly desk-size jobs.

Some GSA officials say the problem stems from not enough security personnel guarding building entrances. Others blame Congress' "open building" policy which in recent years has allowed easier public access to government facilities.

Ironically, thefts in the first quarter of 1979 have been highest in some of the best protected buildings.

The Pentagon reported almost $65,000 in stolen articles, including 79 typewriters, 68 calculators, and 44 personal items such as handbags, fur coats and radios. Of this total, $47,662 worth of goods were stolen from the building in January alone.

By comparison, the Pentagon's thefts totaled nearly $180,000 last year — including 72 typewriters, 126 calculators, 96 in miscellaneous items, plus 136 personally-owned items — one of which was an employe's Continental Mark IV car.

Even the highly-guarded Central Intelligence Agency is not immune. Last year the CIA Building had possessions valued at $3,630 stolen, mostly in personal items. Yet in the first three months of this year $1,000 in goods have already been taken.

Nowhere is this year's rash of thefts worse than in the departments of Health, Education and Welfare and Agriculture.

HEW's three main office buildings last year reported over $27,000 in thefts, two-thirds of it in personal possessions. During January through March of this year, thefts in the buildings zoomed to nearly $30,000, much of it in expensive equipment.

Last February, thefts in one HEW building jumped to $13,314 from the previous month's total of $2,779. Pushing the month's total up was a major heist on Feb. 1 in which thieves hauled out government typewriters, calculators and radios totaling nearly $5,000, and later, a reading machine valued at $3,000.

In an adjoining HEW building, 23 electric typewriters were stolen in the same one month period.

"They always go right for the expensive IBM models," said a GSA security officer. "They're easy to fence."

Meanwhile, the two main Agriculture Department buildings have lost more than $12,000 to at least 72 thefts in the same three month period. This compares with $42,243 in thefts last year, which provided thieves with 22 typewriters, 33 calculators, plus 53 other pieces of equipment.

The State Department in the same three months was robbed of nearly $25,000 in merchandise, including three valuable art works. Last year State had $15,469 in thefts, with thieves hauling out 23 pieces of office equipment.

Thefts in the Commerce Department last year hit $22,436, including 14 typewriters, 23 calculators and 72 other pieces of property. This year could be worse: figures through March show $10,400 in thefts, including 36 pieces of equipment.

In the first quarter the Labor Department headquarters had $13,643 in thefts, including five calculators, though the bulk of the thefts were personal property of employes. But this was more than all of 1978 when thefts totaled $12,235.

The Forrestal Building, housing the Department of Energy, had $4,250 in thefts in the same period.

Flu Vaccine Effort Draws Few Crowds

ATLANTA (UPI) — The American public took little interest in the most recent federal effort to provide free influenza vaccine, possibly a reaction to the disastrous 1976 swine flu imminization program.

The national Center for Disease Control says only 1,033,073 free flu shots wer given to high risk individuals during the last inflienza season — October 1978 through March of this year — although million to 3.5 million doses of vaccine were purchased and made available.

Congress appropriated $8.2 million last August for the immunization program, shortly before the beginning of the "flu season." The vaccine doses were shipped to state health departments for distribution to eligible people.

In contrast to the abortive swine flu effort, aimed at immunizing 100 million Americans, the scaled-down 1978-79 effort was targeted for high risk people — those 65 or older and people with chronic diseases. There are an estimated 40 million in that category.

About 43 million people were immunized against swine flu. That $135 million publicly financed program was halted by the CDC after it discovered a statistical relationship between the vaccination and the Guillain-Barre syndrome, a sometimes fatal paralysis.

"The swine flu experience may have had something to do with it (the low level of immunizations in the 1978-79 program)," said Dr. David Brandling-Bennett of the CDC's immunization division.

However, Brandling-Bennett said a survey taken to pinpoint the causes for the public apathy indicated long delays in funding the program and getting the vaccine to the state health departments were the major reasons why more people did not avail themselves of the free shots.

Condemned Killers Petition High Courts

STARKE, Fla. (AP) — Two condemned murderers, their pleas for life rejected by Florida's courts, placed their hopes on federal judges in four cities today as their scheduled executions crept closer.

John Arthur Spenkelink, 30, and Willie Jasper Darden Jr., 45, will die in Florida's electric chair at 7 a.m. and 8 a.m. respectively on Wednesday — unless their lawyers can find sympathetic courts.

Requests for a stay of execution for Spenkelink were scheduled in New Orleans before the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. Attorneys for his cause were also in Washington, seeking a justice of the Supreme Court who would grant a stay.

Darden's lawyers were granted an afternoon hearing to ask a Tampa federal judge for a stay, and turned to the Florida Supreme Court in Tallahassee to appeal a rejected plea for a rehearing in the court where he was sentenced to death.

Meanwhile, in Tallahassee, police said 15 to 20 anti-death penalty protesters were keeping a vigil outside the mansion of Gov. Bob Graham, vowing to stay until he grants reprieves. Graham, who signed the death warrants Friday, said the protesters could stay "as long as their action does not infringe on other people's legitimate rights."

"I have in no way given up hope that there'll be an intervention," an ailing Lois Spenkelink, 67, said Monday evening in Starke after visiting her son at Florida's toughest prison. Friends said she cried after the visit, and when she met reporters she simply read her brief comment and did not answer questions.

Spenkelink, a California prison escapee when he came to Florida, was sentenced to die for the murder of Joseph Syzmankiewicz, 45, of Detroit, an Ohio parole violator who was traveling with Spenkelink when slain in a Tallahassee motel in 1973.

Darden was sentenced to death for the murder of James Turman, who surprised Darden during a robbery of Turman's furniture store in Lakeland.

The prisoners' chances to escape the heavy oak chair at Florida State Prison had diminished considerably Monday.

"When the Florida Supreme Court turned down that appeal, that limited all our options," said Joe Ingle, director of the Southern Coalition on Jails and Prisons of Nashville, Tenn.

He was referring to the highest state court's rejection Monday of appeals on behalf of both condemned men.

The court unanimously rejected an argument that prosecutors didn't give Spenkelink's attorneys proper notice about points the state raised in his murder trial. It was the fourth Spenkelink plea turned down by the state Supreme Court.

The court also denied, 4-3, an argument by Darden's attorneys to the effect that the North Carolina native was denied due process under Florida's clemency procedure, in which the governor and Cabinet review a case before a death warrant is signed.

Spenkelink and Darden lost in other courts, too. A Tallahassee federal judge refused to stay Spenkelink's execution, and the trial judge in Bartow who had sentenced Darden denied a rehearing.

If the execution goes forward, Spenkelink and Darden would be the first men executed in the United States since Gary Gilmore died before a Utah firing squad in 1977. Unlike Gilmore, who chose not to fight execution if the alternative was to be life in prison, Spenkelink and Darden have been exercising all their legal options.

The men would be the first executed in Florida since 1964. Spenkelink would be the 65th white and Darden the 133rd black to die in the state's electric chair.

Spenkelink has asked that on his last day he be able to see his mother, sister and girlfriend — and some anti-capital punishment protesters, who have become his friends.

Until now, at least, prison Superintendent David H. Brierton has forbidden anyone but family members, attorneys and a few others from going near the prison. Reporters and death-penalty opponents are kept several hundred yards from the prison's main gate.

Brierton said he expected perhaps as many as 300 protesters here for an evening candlelight vigil.

The prison superintendent said there was calm resignation on Death Row, home of 131 men. One woman is also under a death sentence.

Minchew Describes Deliveries

WASHINGTON (AP) — Daniel Minchew testified today that on at least three separate occasions he delivered envelopes stuffed with more than $1,000 in campaign contributions and Senate expense funds to Sen. Herman E. Talmadge for the senator's personal use.

On his second day of testimony before the Senate Ethics Committee, Minchew said except on one occasion the payments to Talmadge were made in the senator's private office in $100 bills.

Minchew, who has acknowledged making personal use of some of the funds from the secret bank account, said he is not sure precisely how much money he distributed to Talmadge or members of his family.

Minchew was asked if Talmadge was aware he was spending some of the money from a secret Washington bank account on himself.

"He was aware," Minchew said calmly. "He was aware because I told him I was having a lot of expenses.

"He (Talmadge) said take care of yourself out of this and I did. I regret having done so."

Once the senator's closest aide, Minchew said the secret account was set up after Talmadge complained of not having enough cash to meet his day-to-day personal needs.

He said Talmadge personally approved diverting campaign contributions and Senate expense funds into the account, which remained in use during most of 1973 until October 1974, when Minchew left Talmadge's staff to become a member of the International Trade Commission.

Minchew was imprecise on exact amounts he provided to Talmadge and other members of his family.

"I do not have an exact recollection of how much Sen. Talmadge got," Minchew said under questioning by special committee counsel Carl Eardley.

"But on several occasions — at least three — I gave him envelopes containing money, never less than $1,000."

The committee has cited Talmadge for five specific allegations of financial misconduct, including the conversion of campaign contributions for his personal use.

Talmadge's former administrative assistant said he once put $500 in cash in an envelope addressed to Mrs. Talmadge, and placed it on the senator's briefcase for delivery to her. There was never any confirmation that the money was delivered, he said.

Committee investigators have concluded that Minchew used about $16,000 of the money which passed through the secret account in the Riggs National Bank of Washington and that $5,000 was placed in the account and then withdrawn for legitimate re-election campaign use, leaving about $18,000 unaccounted for.

NRC Postpones Plant Licenses

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government, wanting to use the lessons it learned from the near-catastrophe at the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant, will not issue new licenses for nuclear plants for at least three months.

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission agreed Monday to the waiting period proposed by Harold Denton, director of its Office of Nuclear Reactor Regulation.

Only a few nuclear power plants are expected to be affected by the three-month hiatus, said Roger Boyd, director of the NRC's Division of Project Management.

At the same time, General Counsel Leonard Bickwit was asked to look into the NRC's legal authority to adopt a formal moratorium on nuclear plant licensing.

The commission's action came as the city of Lancaster, Pa., went to court to try to halt a planned discharge of radioactive wastewater from the disabled Three Mile Island plant.

The city asked a federal district court to stop the discharge until the federal government prepares an environmental impact statement showing the plan is safe. The city contends its drinking water could become contaminated by the discharge.

Also Monday:

—The House passed and sent to the White House a measure that gives broad powers to the special commission named by President Carter to investigate the Three Mile Island accident.

—Rep. James Weaver, D-Ore., released a task force report on the accident that suggested the failings of instruments and equipment played a larger part in the accident than operator error.

"I saw no operator error not closely related to design or equipment error," he said.

He also asserted that a similiar mishap "not only could happen again but ... is likely to at any time" at another plant.

Denton, in his proposal, called for temporarily reassigning about 15 NRC staff members to form a "Lessons Learned" task force. That group would review at least a dozen issues raised by the March 28 accident at the central Pennsylvania plant.

Among the issues are operator training and licensing; accident analysis; equipment, instrument and control requirements; emergency preparedness, and the NRC's role in responding to an accident.

Denton said it would take about a month to determine how the accident's lessons could be applied to other nuclear plants seeking licenses and to order necessary changes.

Then, it could take plant owners another month to comply, he said. An NRC review could take still another month.

Boyd said three units in Davie County, N.C., could be ready for operating license consideration "no sooner than June" and two units at Inola, Okla., no sooner than July.

Construction licenses could come up for consideration almost immediately for a reactor unit at Salem, N.J.; in June for units at Mineral, Va., and Avila Beach, Calif., and in July for one at Daisy, Tenn.

The lawsuit filed by Lancaster noted that 105,000 people drink from its water system. Some of the water comes from the Susquehanna River only five miles downstream from the stricken plant's discharge pipes.

The suit was filed against the NRC, whose spokesman, Frank L. Ingram, said he could not confirm that the commission approved the discharge plan. "Any plan approved would be made public," he said.

But the suit charged that the NRC approved, without public notice, the plan to decontaminate 250,000 gallons of wastewater now in the plant's auxiliary building.

The suit said beginning in early June, the water would be passed through a decontamination facility now under construction outside the building, and then dumped into the river.

Gasoline Production Boost Urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration, its energy policy under new attack today in Congress, is urging oil refiners to boost their production of gasoline to help ease shortages at service stations.

Refineries have been asked by federal officials to "help ease the immediate shortage by increasing the rate of use of available crude oil and gasoline stocks," says Deputy Energy Secretary John F. O'Leary.

Current oil and gasoline reserves could be tapped by as much as 380,000 barrels a day through the end of August, O'Leary said Tuesday in written testimony for the Senate Energy Committee.

Such a step would permit gasoline supplies to reach about 96 percent or 97 percent of last year's level and "help reduce long lines at gasoline stations," O'Leary said.

The statement appeared to reflect a significant change in administration policy, which previously had stressed the importance of building heating oil stocks for next winter — even at the expense of gasoline production.

However, O'Leary said crude oil and gasoline stocks could be drawn down "by a total of of about 42 million barrels by the end of the summer without causing serious operational problems."

Meanwhile, House Democrats were meeting today on a proposal to put Democrats on record as opposing the president's decision to lift price controls on domestic crude oil.

Leaders of the move said it was possible that a vote by the Democratic caucus on their resolution might be postponed until Wednesday.

Sen. Donald W. Riegle, D-Mich., chairman of the Senate Banking subcommittee on economic stabilization, criticized the administration today for blaming energy shortages on Congress.

"Wherever one assigns the responsibility for this situation, there is clearly a stark absence of coherent leadership on this issue," Riegle said. His panel opened hearings on how the gasoline shortage is affecting independent oil suppliers and individual service station owners.

Rep. Toby Moffett, D-Conn., organizer of the stop-decontrol campaign, predicted victory for his resolution at the caucus of all 276 House Democrats. But he said today that an expected poor turnout might postpone the vote until Wednesday.

"If we get a quorum, we have the votes," Moffett said. "I'd be shocked if we didn't win on a recorded vote."

However, obtaining the majority turnout needed for a quorum has often proved difficult in attempts to put the Democratic Caucus on record on controversial issues and Moffett said he's not taking anything for granted.

A staff study prepared for a House Commerce subcommitee claimed Monday that oil decontrol, combined with new federal gas pricing rules and inflation, will drive up the price of gasoline at least 20 cents a gallon by 1981.

Moffett's resolution would put House Democrats on record in favor of continued price controls on oil.

Although without legal force, such a vote would deal a heavy psychological blow to an administration energy policy still reeling from House rejection of the president's standby gasoline rationing plan.

"It's an attempt to gain momentum and send a signal to the White House," Moffett said in an interview. "At this time, we're gaining every day as House members get more and more angry."

Moffett said he also intends to offer a block-decontrol amendment on the House floor when the House considers legislation authorizing various Energy Department programs for fiscal 1980.

U.S. Attorney Opens Case Against Pate

Former Plains State Bank officer Ben Pate is charged with misapplying $141,200 in several 1976 and 1977 transactions, Assistant U. S. Attorney Bob Slough said in opening statements in Pate's trial this morning.

Dapper defense attorney Leon Taylor of Albuquerque, N.M., told the jurors in a deep and booming voice that "evidence will show" Pate "did not violate any law" during the transactions.

Testimony in what is expected to be a three-or four-day trial was scheduled to begin at midday in U.S. District Court here.

The jury was chosen Monday.

Slough said Pate was indicted in March for accepting a $35,000 check for deposit on July 8, 1976, from a prominent depositor when he knew the account on which it was drawn to be insufficient, and for more than $100,000 in bank transactions involving a drive-in restaurant he was having built in Plains.

It was the first time the amount of money allegedly involved had been publicly disclosed.

Taylor, his dark hair combed back and eyes scanning the jury, said Pate was not accustomed to handling the prominent depositor's account and did not know the $35,000 check would not be covered.

He said the restaurant was being built on a "turnkey" contract and that there were no improprieties.

He also said the last two counts of the seven-count indictment, alleging "certain false entries" in bank records, were unfounded because Pate was truthfully writing in government questionnaires that there had been no misconduct by bank officers.

Pate, mayor of Plains, was the bank vice president and cashier when the alleged misconduct took place.

Thunderstorms Strike Texas; Area Skies Expected To Clear

Georgetown area due to the threat of lowland flooding.

The North Texas rains drifted slowly eastward into East Texas after daybreak and much of South Texas still was under a thunderstorm warning at midmorning.

The rain in Southeast Texas moved offshore this morning with a few light to moderate showers reported on the Coastal Plains.

Decreasing cloudiness was expected from the west today. Temperatures were expected to range from the low 90s along the Rio Grande to the 70s and 80s elsewhere.

Austin was one of the cities hardest hit by the nighttime thunderstorms.

Wet streets there may have contributed to the death of an 8-year-old Austin boy Monday. Tony Hernandez died after he was struck by a pickup truck.

Three Austin firemen were injured when lightning struck nearby as they battled a church fire. All were taken to Brackenridge Hospital for observation.

Fire officials blamed lightning for the church fire and minor blazes at seven Austin homes. At one time, all vehicles were away from the city's 23 fire stations, officials said.

At Temple, 70 miles north of Austin, Cary Williams, 14, was swept into a flooded drainage ditch and carried under two bridges before he managed to grab a tree and hang on until students from Travis Middle School rescued him.

Authorities also searched today for a fourth person feared drowned in Southwest Texas after floodwaters transformed the peaceful Devil's River into a torrent Sunday night and early Monday.

Three bodies were recovered Monday near Texas 163 about 16 miles north of Comstock in Val Verde County, near the Mexican border. The victims were identified as Brad Elliott, 14, and his 12-year-old brother Byron, both of Ozona, and Del Rio resident David Sanchez, in his late 20s.

Department of Public Safety official said they would continue to search for the boys' father, Larry Elliott, who was missing and feared drowned.

The Devil's River tragedy occurred late Sunday, DPS investigators said.

Four members of the Elliott family survived including Martha Elliott, mother of the drowned boys, her 3-year-old daughter and two relatives, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Sparling, of Tulsa, Okla.

for John Connally in the Republican primary without forfeiting their right to participate in Democratic primary elections in May for state officeholders.

The arrangement, even more than benefiting Connally, would help protect conservative Democratic incumbents who fear their re-election bids will be jeopardized by a mass exodus of conservative Democrats to the GOP presidential contest.

Hobby had adamantly refused to negotiate directly with the missing senators and accused them of disregarding their legal duties as legislators.

"How do you negotiate?" he asked. "When you negotiate, it implies a belief in the word of the other person. These people have broken the most sacred oath they've ever taken. I'll negotiate with them when they're here." Hobby said he agreed to meet with Brooks Monday but the Pasadena senator never came.

The lieutenant governor refused to comment on whether he plans to strip the missing senators of key committee posts when they return but said he hopes relations will not be unduly strained.

contracting agencies," and that separate books be maintained for each of SPAG's major subcontractors. However, board members seemed at odds over the meaning of the recommendations in the management letter.

Mrs. Jordan noted the board received "a letter like this every year" and said it is "not unusual for you (Cole) or any auditing firm to present a letter suggesting changes."

Cole agreed, saying the management letter is a "common practice in the industry," but said it is "not a common practice to give it to the board of directors."

Shaw questioned why board members had just received the audit and letter dated in January, but Cole explained the documents are dated when field work is completed on the audit.

Monday's State Legislative Activity

AUSTIN (UPI) — Happenings Monday in the Texas Legislature:

Legislation establishing a $22 million program to help needy older Texans pay utility bills is unconstitutional, Attorney General Mark White said.

Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, chairman of the Senate Human Resources Committee, had asked for the attorney general's legal opinion on the constitutionality of the bill by Sen. Jack Ogg, D-Houston.

White said the state constitution would have to be amended before Ogg's bill could be valid in Texas. The attorney general said the constitution prohibits grants of public money to individuals for private purposes, and said Ogg's utility aid bill does not qualify as a public purpose.

"A program to provide assistance for payment of utility costs for needy aged individuals would require the passage of federal legislation or a Texas constitutional amendment," White said.

Six groups opposing a Senate abortion bill contended the proposal is an attempt to harass doctors.

"This bill mandates a higher standard of care for a fetus surviving an abortion than for a premature child that is born alive," the groups said in a statement.

"The bill is an attempt to harass doctors and discourage them from performing second trimester abortions by awarding the fetus the same rights, powers and privileges as other citizens," said Peggy Romberg of the Texas Abortion Rights Action League.

Other groups supporting the statement were the Texas Women's Political Caucus, Texas Family Planning Association, Texas Civil Liberties Union, Women's Equity Action League and the National Organization for Women.

The House has tentatively approved a bill making it a misdemeanor to use live animals in the training of greyhounds.

Rep. Bob McFarland, R-Arlington, said rabbits are commonly used to train the racing dogs, and kittens and puppies sometimes are used.

He said mechanical lures can be used equally well in training the dogs.

"Rabbits are warm-blooded animals. They feel pain, but they have no choice, they always lose," he said.

The bill requires one more vote in the House before being sent to the Senate in the final week of the session.

The House approved a bill regulating advertisements of notaries public in Texas in an effort to provide help for Mexican aliens.

The bill, which passed the Senate earlier, prohibits notaries from advertising in any language other than English unless the advertisement notes that the notary is not a lawyer.

Backers of the bill said attorneys in Mexico are known as "notarios publico", and Mexican aliens often are confused into believing notaries in Texas are trained as lawyers.

Energy Leaders Discuss Fuel-Saving Programs

PARIS (UPI) — Energy ministers from 20 leading industrialized nations decided today to speed up energy-saving programs throughout the non-Communist world because of the fast growing shortage of imported oil.

Concluding a two-day session of the managing boards of the International Energy Agency, the ministers called for greater international cooperation to solve the looming energy crisis and urged a more equitable sharing of oil resources.

Western ministers also signed 12 cooperative projects to step up research and development of new oil and coal technology, geothermal and solar energy and energy conservation.

The ministers decided that IEA countries will take immediate steps to carry out energy saving measures including appropriate pricing policies — a move to make petroleum products more expensive to cut their consumption.

If voluntary measures will prove insufficient, mandatory action will be taken including a possible limitation of gasoline consumption in the summer vacation time so as to save fuel for heating in winter time.

The ministers, however, for the time being shelved a demand by Sweden for the activation of the standing IEA oil-sharing mechanism. The ministers agreed that by putting into effect the system for the benefit of Sweden, which is experiencing a minor oil supply shortfall, they might create panic on the world oil market where speculative buying already has driven up prices skyhigh.

The ministers said in a final communique that "energy supply and demand problems are serious and likely to continue, and that immediate and strong action is urgently needed."

They cautioned that the recent Iranian crisis and subsequent shortages of oil supply have clouded the outlook on the world oil market.

"This situation could produce major economic constraints for industrialized and developing countries in the next few years," the final communique warned. "The world energy supply situation will be tight for the foreseeable future.

"In particular, the oil supply systems have reduced flexibility and will be vulnerable to further disruptions. Ministers stressed the need for greater internationl cooperation in resolving world energy supply problems and the need for equitable distribution of available oil".

The ministers confirmed their countries' decision taken earlier this year to reduce their demand for oil on the world market in the order of 2 million barrels per day, which would correspond to about 5 percent of IEA consumption.

BIG MONEY, SMALL PACKAGES — George R. Halprin, regional director of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration, holds two packages from the suitcase that held 26.4 pounds of cocaine with a street value in excess of $6 million that the DEA displayed Monday following the arrest of two men. The two men were arrested after an investigation that began about two months ago and DEA agents negotiated for a delivery of cocaine that brought about their capture. (AP Laserphoto)

Bundy Requests Recess In Pre-Trial Hearings

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UPI) — Theodore Bundy says he needs more time to contradict testimony of a dental expert who says impressions of Bundy's teeth fit bite marks on the buttock of slain Chi Omega sorority coed Lisa Levy.

Circuit Judge Edwart Cowart agreed to hear arguments today on a requested 24-hour recess of pre-trial hearings on defense motions seeking to throw out crucial parts on the state's case and move the trial out of Tallahassee.

Bundy, a former Utah law student, contends that being surrounded by police officers and forced to confer with attorneys in a crowded holding cell in the county courthouse or in his cell at the county jail has interfered with preparation of his case.

At the jail, he said, he must whisper to keep inmates on each side from overhearing discusions of "sensitive" information. In addition to a recess, he also is asking Cowart to direct the sheriff to let him use the visiting booth at the jail for meetings with his lawyers.

Bundy goes on trial June 11 on charges of killing Miss Levy, 20, and Margaret Bowman, 21, in their Florida State University sorority house beds on Jan. 15, 1978. At least one of the women was raped and Miss Levy was bitten on the breast and buttock.

Most on Monday, the start of the second week of pre-trial motions, was devoted to testimony from Dr. Richard R. Souviron, one of 41 American dentists recognized as an expert in comparing teeth impressions with bite marks.

Testifying against a backdrop of enlarged photographs of Bundy's teeth and the victim's buttock, showing the double bite marks, Souviron said Bundy's broken, jagged and crooked teeth are "very, very unusual," making the comparison relatively simple.

He went through a highly technical explanation of how he arrived at the conclusion that overlays of the impression of Bundy's teeth fit the bite marks.

The defense brought in a nationally recognized dental expert, Dr. Dwayne Devore of the University of Maryland, to try to dispute some of Souviron's findings, but he did not testify Monday. The judge suspended the rule against letting one witness hear another's testimony and allowed Devore to remain in the courtroom while Souviron testified.

Defense attorney Michael Minerva couldn't shake Souviron's confidence in his bite mark comparisons, but got him to admit that while there are guidelines, the dental field has not yet published a set of uniform standards for making such determinations.

He also said some experts use other techniques.

"Because bite mark evidence is relatively new," he said, "the requirements for accuracy are, in my opinion, far greater than they should be."

Lawmaker Questions Paying Of Inmates

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Nebraska congressman is questioning the legality of paying $10,540 a year in federal job training funds to a prison inmate serving a life term for murder and armed robbery.

The Labor Department said Monday it is looking into the allegations by Rep. John Cavanaugh, D-Neb., who says millions of dollars nationwide are being misspent on long-term prison inmates from federal training and job funds intended for the economically disadvantaged.

He said the money, administered by the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act, is going to murderers, rapists and armed robbers who have little chance of being paroled or released.

Cavanaugh said a review of one of the CETA-funded programs, at the District of Columbia's Lorton Reformatory, turned up these examples:

— A central facility administrative clerk serving a life term for murder and ineligible for parole until 1988, was paid an $8,902 annual salary.

— An inmate serving a life term for murder and robbery was paid $9,838 a year to work as a central facility culinary cook.

— An annual salary of $9,838 a year was paid to an inmate serving 27 years to 84 years for three counts of rape. He worked at the prisonas a plumber.

None of those inmates met the Labor Department's definition of unemployed persons eligible for CETA employment, Cavanaugh said.

He asked Labor Secretary Ray Marshall to recover all the funds "wrongfully expended" under the CETA program.

Labor Department spokesman Frank Greer said officials "will take a close look" at Cavanaugh's allegations.

"If there are any violations, we will take appropriate actions, possibly including a move to recover funds," Greer said.

Officials in the department defended the use of federal funds to train inmates who are about to leave prison so they can find productive employment when they are released. But they admitted that payments to prisoners serving long sentences would appear to be an abuse of CETA funds.

The congressman acknowledged that the practice of compensating prisoners with CETA funds is legal in cases where the inmates would be released in a "reasonable" length of time.

According to Cavanaugh, in 1978, the D.C. Department of Corrections hired at least 27 inmates who had been convicted of rape, murder and armed robbery at a cost of more than $200,000 to the CETA program. More than 170 inmates are receiving salaries this year, he added.

Cavanaugh complained that taxpayers are paying twice — through the $9,800 per-prisoner, per-year cost of food, clothing and shelter at the prison and through the salary payments.

Inmates with prison jobs are never charged more than $2 a day for room and board no matter how much they earn. They also are not required to make support payments to their dependents.

Cavanaugh said no effort is made to determine whether those dependents are on public assistance which could be saved if the dependents received some of the inmates' earnings.

And, he pointed out that inmates are not required to make restitution to the victims of their crimes.

"The great unfairness of the use of CETA funding to pay salaries of incarcerated criminal offenders is that the criminal offender ends up being treated twice as good as the poor, hard-working, honest citizen attempting to learn a job skill and become a self-sufficient, contributing member of society," Cavanaugh said.

Mating Of Pandas Fails Once Again

WASHINGTON (AP) — Don't listen for the patter of tiny giant panda feet about the National Zoo this year. The curtain has fallen on a disappointing fourth honeymoon for notables Hsing-Hsing and Ling-Ling.

"We're still getting over the shock," Bill Xanten, curator of mammals, said Monday. He said the pair's 1978 performance had led to great expectations for this year's mating season.

But the two wound up an unsuccessful 12-day fling at romance last Saturday.

There was no weight excuse this time. On advice from Chinese pandologists, Ling-Ling had been slimmed down from 295 pounds to 250 and Hsing-Hsing from 285 to 260.

"There were a lot of things this year that we weren't expecting," said Xanten. "For one thing, the female's heat cycle lasted only 5½ days this year as opposed to 13 last year."

As last year, said Xanten, there was loud vocalizing, bleating, nips, squeals, ritual fighting and attempts to mate. But it was all on a less intense scale than the improvement zoo officials had expected.

Hsing-Hsing is 8 now; Ling-Ling, 8½. According to Peking, giant pandas don't reach sexual maturity until at least 6. This leaves many mating seasons ahead.

But Xanten said he isn't optimistic at all about next year. "We were optimistic this year."

"Every single year is different. In 1976, she hurt her foot. In 1977 there was a little promise. After 1978, we were hopeful because of the behavior we saw."

Now it's back to the drawing board and think sessions, comparing tapes and checksheet data with last year's, Xanten said.

What next?

Xanten didn't rule out artificial insemination as a means of providing America's youngsters with the baby panda many of them write and ask about.

"If we're going to have panda cubs and can't get them through natural means, that's a strong consideration," he said. Many of the pandas in the Peking zoo reportedly are born through this method.

"Last year they had one panda birth that was the result of artificial insemination," said Xanten.

Meanwhile, Hsing-Hsing and Ling-Ling are back in their twin cages, chomping on bamboo and playing the clowns as usual.

"They don't realize how many people they disappointed," said Xanten. "But we still love them."

Halfway around the world, Japanese zoo officials were having no better luck with their pandas, female Lan Lan and male Kang Kang. Lan Lan seems interested in mating, the Japanese experts said, but Kang Kang prefers playing with a swinging tire.

"We thought mating season was at hand. We opened the screen partition, but Kang Kang wouldn't respond. So we called off their matrimonial date," Shiro Nakagawa, chief of the panda project team at Ueno Park Zoo, told reporters.

The Japanese hope to become the first experts outside China to have their pandas produce cubs.

Activist's Wife Asks Brezhnev For Mercy

MOSCOW (AP) — The wife of exiled Jewish activist Vladimir Slepak appealed today to Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev to show mercy and permit him to join his family in Israel because his health is seriously deteriorating.

In a telegram which Jewish sources said Mrs. Maria Slepak sent to the Kremlin, she said her husband had been hospitalized a second time at his place of exile in the Chita region of Siberia.

Earlier this year he was reported to be suffering from pneumonia.

"We have been waiting to leave for Israel for more than nine years," Mrs. Slepak wrote. "All our family is living in Israel. I appeal to your mercy and good will to let my husband leave the Soviet Union."

Slepak's second son, Leonid, received a visa to leave last month and joined his older brother Alexander, who emigrated in 1977.

Statue Of Dog Still Stands

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — Standing in front of an old three-story house here is a 4-foot-tall, 340-pound iron statue of a Labrador retriever.

It has been there for three-quarters of a century, having weathered attacks from vandals and pranksters.

It is believed the statue was erected after the dog had performed some heroic deed. It is also believed the dog's name was Rover.

Mrs. Robert Carrel, whose family bought the house in 1970, says the dog is a hero to children now growing up in the neighborhood. And tour buses slow down and sometimes stop for a better look at the dog.

"If we sold our house and moved, we could never take the dog," she says. "It would be a terrible thing to do."

$20 BILLION IN SECURITIES MOVED

CHICAGO (AP) — Securities with an estimated value of $20 billion have been transferred from Continental Bank's main vault to a new trust department vault four blocks away. The move of seven million pieces of paper — 80 tons — may be the country's largest transfer of securities ever, bank officials said. Moving vans began hauling the 1,500 boxes of non-negotiable securities along LaSalle Street at 6:30 a.m. Saturday, and finished by early afternoon. Officials said the transfer "went off without a hitch — smooth as silk."

Refugees Say Many Dead In Nicaraguan Fighting

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Refugees reported "many dead" on both sides from three days of fighting between Sandinista guerrillas and President Anastasio Somoza's troops in northern Jinotega.

National guard officers reported only one soldier killed in the city 100 miles north of Mangua and said troops were mopping up "the few sharpshooters still in houses."

But refugees arriving in Managua Monday reported numerous casualties. They said they couldn't be more precise because they were in a hurry to flee Jinotega.

They said about 300 guerrillas took over the city of 40,000 Saturday night after an attack on the small national guard garrison.

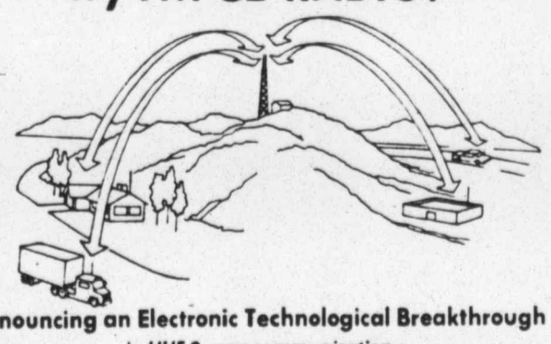

One victim was the president of the Red Cross in Jinotega, Enrique Pereira Moreno, shot to death Sunday while attempting to aid children caught in cross fire, the Red Cross announced.

The battle in Jinotega was the latest clash in almost daily fighting that has killed hundreds since the guerrillas were overwhelmed by troops in a two-week uprising in September that left some 1,500 dead.

The Sandinistas take their name from a Nicaraguan rebel who fought the U.S. Marine occupation that put Somoza's father into power in the late 1930s.

Wyoming Governor Must Make Pipeline Decision

By E.T. McCLANAHAN

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (UPI) — The emptiness of Wyoming has long been its chief asset, in the view of many who reject city life. Between its remote mountain ranges the prairies roll away like inert seas, and for years if someone mentioned Wyoming most people thought of mountain men, cattle or grizzly bears.

But that image has changed rapidly since the state's energy boom, an economic transformation which received its chief impetus from the Arab oil embargo in 1973. Now Wyoming is known for its industries that produce the raw materials of energy — minerals such as petroleum, uranium and coal.

Since its boom began, the state has had to confront increasingly complex issues with implications extending far beyond its borders.

This week Gov. Ed Herschler, alone, must decide one of the most difficult of these: whether to allow a Houston-based energy company to proceed with plans for a $1.8 billion coal slurry pipeline to the Texas Gulf Coast.

The controversy reaches far beyond Wyoming, touching such varied concerns as Indian water rights, interstate compacts, railroad freight rates and the soaring cost of electricity. The issue has split environmentalists and led Montana officials to guarantee a court battle if Herschler approves the pipeline.

Plans for the project, proposed by Texas Eastern Transmission Corp., were announced to surprised Wyoming state lawmakers early in the 1979 Legislature. The company wanted the Legislature's approval for use of Wyoming water in the proposed pipeline, capable of carrying 25 million tons of crushed coal a year to Houston-area power plants still to be designated.

The basics of the plan are as follows:

Up to 42,580 acre feet of water a year — enough to supply the needs of a city of 150,000 — would be diverted from the Little Bighorn River south and west of where it flows into Montana. The water would be stored in a reservoir (or reservoirs) and the first 20,000 acre feet would be used in the slurry line. The rest would be made available to the state.

It was the latter feature that made it tantalizing to the lawmakers, who ultimately granted Texas Eastern authority to export the water. The approval, however, was tied to Herschler's decision, which must be made Wednesday.

If he disapproves, Texas Eastern's project is finished unless the company plans another battle in the 1980 legislative session.

Mixing coal with water and pumping it through a pipeline (a slurry) is not a new idea, but cheap gas and oil has made it uneconomical up to now. Although the concept was patented in 1891, the only pipeline now operating in the United States is the 273-mile Black Mesa line from northern Arizona to Nevada.

Backers of slurrying coal point to advantages such as diminished environmental impact in comparison to railroads — pipelines run underground — and their increased reliability. Pipelines do not derail, nor do they tie up traffic in small towns, as do mile-long coal trains.

But slurry pipelines touch one of the most emotionally charged issues in the West: water.

Because of this, Herschler — a former rancher — has been no friend to such projects. In 1974 he made opposition to another slurry line a significant part of his first election campaign. In addition, railroad unions, a chief source of support for the governor's Democratic Party, have lined up against pipelines.

Herschler also may be influenced by a resolution against the Texas Eastern proposal adopted last month by the state Democratic Central Committee.

One of the questions Herschler has raised is the amount of water that will be left to the state. Texas Eastern has said it will be around 20,000 acre feet a year, but the governor said in a recent speech that it could go as low as 7,500 acre feet in a dry year.

The Texas Eastern project has been an especially difficult issue for Wyoming environmentalists, who generally favor the export of the state's coal for burning elsewhere. Even so, a key environmental group, the Wyoming Outdoor Council, has announced opposition to the proposal on the arguments that the water used in the line may become locked into interstate commerce. The state thus may never be able to turn off the spigot if it ever wanted to.

WOC is also concerned about maintaining adequate streamflows in the river for fish and wildlife, and some environmentalists have voiced concern that the water not used in the pipeline would be turned over to energy companies for more industrial development.

"Obviously it's a tough issue," said WOC President Leslie Petersen. "Some of our best people are on the other side of it."

One of those was Marilyn Kite, a WOC board member and Laramie, Wyo., attorney who worked as a lobbyist for Texas Eastern during the 1979 Legislature. But she has no qualms about her position on the issue: "Environmentally, it's a pretty sound, clean thing to do," she said.

But there are those who say the project will never be built because of bureaucratic and legal obstacles. For one thing, it must comply with Wyoming's complex Industrial Siting Act, a law governing construction of large industrial projects. And the company must win approval from the U.S. Forest Service for the storage reservoir in northern Wyoming.

In Montana, Attorney General Mike Greely argues that the Yellowstone River Compact applies to the Little Bighorn River. If true, this would mean that its water may not be exported without the approval of the other signatories to the pact, North Dakota and Montana. Greely has promised a lawsuit to resolve the question unless Herschler kills the project.

An assistant Wyoming attorney general denies that the compact applies to the Little Bighorn. "It's our view that the Little Bighorn is excluded from the Yellowstone River Compact," said Jack Palma. 3

There is, however, an ambiguity: although Palma said the compact excludes the river from its allocation provisions, it includes the stream in the geographical area of the Yellowstone River basin.

Plainsmen Invade El Paso

By BOB BAJACKSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

EL PASO — Bobby Moegle felt so good after the Plainsmen won the bidistrict series over Pampa that he reserved ten motel rooms in Austin for the first part of June.

Disch-Faulk field on the University of Texas campus will be the site of the state high school baseball finals next month. And Saturday, when Monterey won its 14th bidistrict championship, Moegle liked the Plainsmen's chances of qualifying for a second consecutive trip to Austin.

But 48 hours later, as the Plainsmen were loading on the bus to make the trip to El Paso, the Monterey mentor had modified his feelings.

Today, Monterey and El Paso Austin opened a best-of-three regional series here. The single game was to begin at 5 p.m. CDT.

After today's game, the series will move to Lubbock and Lowrey Field. The two teams will play a single game on Friday at 4 p.m., and if a third game is necessary, it'll begin at 11 a.m. Saturday.

"When you make it to the regionals, you're playing one of the 16 best teams in the state," said Moegle. "We may lose a game. We may lose two."

Moegle is hoping Kent Potts (9-2) can get the Plainsmen off on the right foot. The junior righthander will pitch for Monterey, while the Panthers will counter with Doug Woods (9-1).

Moegle chose Potts to throw the first game of the series despite a control problem that forced Potts to leave the hill after only one-third of an inning of work in the first game of Pampa bidistrict series.

"At first I thought Kent's arm was just a little tired because he pitched so much during the nonconference season," said Moegle. "But I think he was wild (against Pampa), because he's had too much rest. Now, I'm hoping he'll be ready to go."

Meanwhile, Austin coach Leon Antwine describes Woods as a finesse pitcher.

"He's not overpowering," said Antwine. "Doug's greatest strength is his ability to confuse hitters."

Monterey will bring a 28-7 record into the action, while Austin stands 19-6 after whipping Ysleta in bidistrict.

"I think the difference in the series could be which team handles the playoff pressures the best," said Moegle. "We've been in this situation before, and though we're looking at El Paso as a vacation, we're not going to let it get in the way of the importance in the game. I think El Paso's trip to Lubbock will distract their concentration."

Monterey will meet an Austin team that is designed around speed. Antwine makes it no secret that the Panthers are going to test Monterey catcher Kelly Smith's arm on the base paths.

Panther leftfielder Gregg Quinn (.444) is the batter who makes things happen for Austin. Quinn stole 11 bases during the district season, but during the bidistrict playoffs, the Panthers leftfielder had five steals in just two games.

"I don't think it's any secret that our speed is our main weapon," said Antwine. "We don't have a real power hitter, so we rely on speed to score runs."

Around the Panther infield will be Junior Salas at first, Ray Lopez atsecond, Ray Macias at shortstop, and Gilbert Cavarillo at third. In the outfield, Austin will have Quinn in left, Polo Miranda in center and Eddie Burciaga in right. Handling the catching will be Fernie Salas with Tony Bravo acting as the designated hitter.

Qualifying Resumes

Golfers tried again today to qualify for the U.S. Open.

The regional qualifying is under way at Hillcrest Country Club after Monday's 36-hole action was washed out by heavy rains.

The top four players from the tournament here will qualify for the next round of eliminations, to be held at Dallas.

NCAA Slaps Shepard

HOUSTON (AP) — The National Collegiate Athletic Association has notified University of Houston quarterback Darrell Shepard he will be ineligible to participate in any post-season bowl games for the rest of his college career at UH.

Shepard and UH officials had appealed for reinstatement of his eligibility for post-season games. Houston spent the 1977 season on probation after the NCAA accused the Cougars of recruiting violations involving Shepard and his purchase of a car.

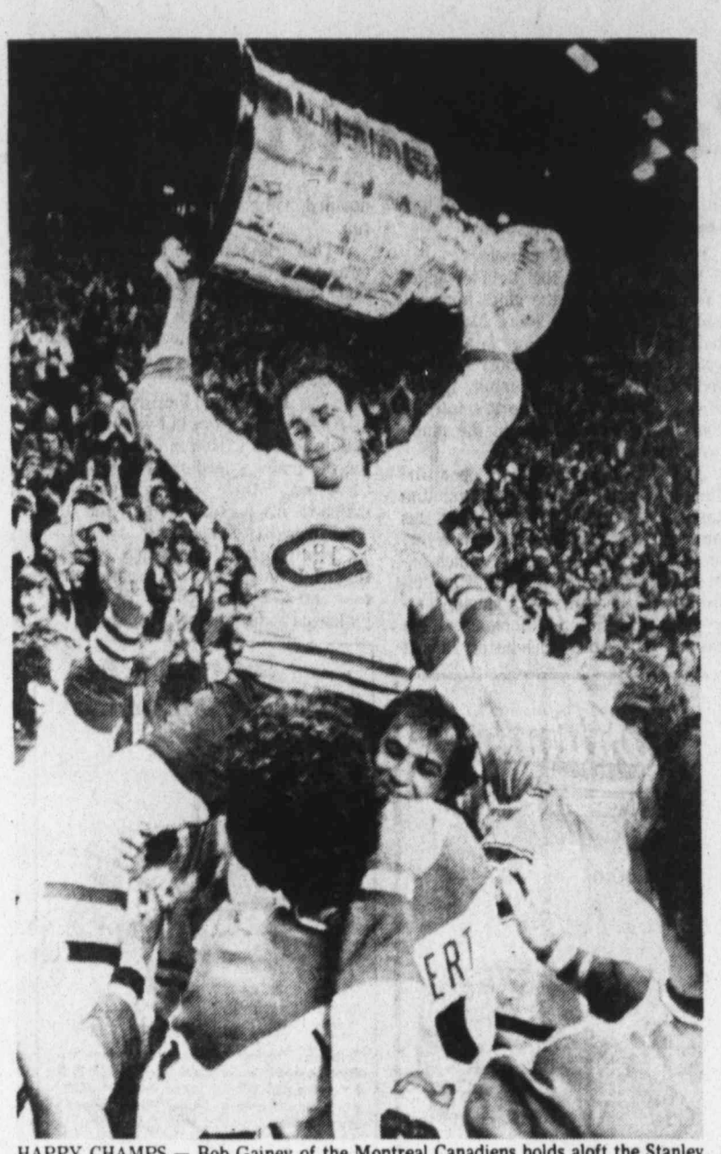

"I think they made the wrong decision," UH athletic director Harry Fouke said. "He is eligible to play 33 of the 36 possible games, most of them against the closest rivals, but he will not be able to participate in bowl games.

"I don't think there's much we can do about it right now."

The NCAA letter said Shepard could transfer to another school and become immediately eligible. However, to transfer to another Southwest Conference school, Shepard would have to get unanimous approval of the other eight SWC schools.

Shepard was red-shirted his freshman year with the Cougars and is eligile this fall for participation in the regular season. But if the Cougars go to a bowl game, Shepard would have to stay behind.

The NCAA has sanction over all bowl games.

Tigers Pound Guidry

By The Associated Press

Even Ron Guidry has his off-days.

And it was one of those days Monday night against the Detroit Tigers.

"My control was too good — I kept hitting their bats," joked the New York Yankee ace after giving up a career-high 13 hits and losing a 3-1 decision to the Tigers.

"They were just hitting the ball. I thought I threw well," added the Cy Young Award winner who had never before given up more than 10 hits in a game. "I kept the ball in play and they just got a few hits that fell in. And that's the name of the game."

While the Tiger hits were falling in, the same couldn't be said for the Yankees. Detroit's winning pitcher, Jack Billingham, could thank a splendid defense for that.

"If I was a spectator, I would have loved to have seen this game," said Billingham, who pitched an eight-hitter. "There were some great plays behind me and double plays really helped me out."

The last time that Guidry faced the Tigers (just last Wednesday), the lefthander put on a 13-strikeout performance while whipping Detroit 6-2. What was the difference this time?

"He was just getting the ball up more than he does normally," said Yankee Manager Bob Lemon. "They didn't hit many hard."

Steve Kemp singled in the winning run for Detroit in the seventh inning. With the game tied 1-1 going into the Tiger seventh, Ron LeFlore led off with a double down the first base line just out of the diving reach of Chris Chambliss. Lou Whitaker, who was 3-for-3, sacrificed LeFlore to third and Kemp lashed his tie-breaking single to left. Lance Parrish hit a solo homer for the Tigers in the eighth.

Mariners 12, Royals 7

Willie Horton smashed a three-run homer and Dan Meyer collected a single and two doubles, powering Seattle over Kansas City. Glenn Abbott, who hadn't beaten the Royals since July 1976, got roughed up for four runs in the first but, with seventh-inning relief help from Shane Rawley, improved his record to 2-5 behind the 15-hit Mariner attack.

Twins 7, Rangers 6

Hosken Powell's RBI double capped a three-run rally in the ninth inning to lead Minnesota over Texas. Mike Marshall gained his 11th save of the young season, preserving the victory for Pete Redfern, 2-0, with a ninth-inning appearance. Sparky Lyle, 3-3, who attempted to stop the Minnesota rally in the ninth, was the loser.

Jose Morales singled to open the Minnesota ninth off Texas starter Jon Matlack. Lyle replaced Matlack at this point and was greeted by Butch Wynegar's single. Willie Norwood's pinch-single scored Morales and John Castino followed with the game-tying single, scoring pinch-runner Rob Wilfong. Jim Kern relieved Lyle and pinch-hitter Powell doubled home Castino for the winning run.

"They (the Rangers) took two games away from us up there (in Minnesota)" said Twins manager Gene Mauch. "If you play enough games, it's going to go both ways. They were tough on Marshall up there, too, with some funny hits off him. But that's all history."

Blue Jays 8, Indians 1

Rick Bosetti drove in two runs with a double to key a five-run outburst in the fourth inning, leading Toronto over Cleveland, Dave Lemanczyk, 4-2, matched his victory output for 1978 when he had a 4-14 record.

Twenty-year-old Dan Ainge collected three hits in four at-bats, scored three runs and added one RBI in his first major league appearance for Toronto.

Atlanta Stops Astros

By The Associated Press

The 1979 stories of Bob Horner and Mike Schmidt are a study in contrasts. But Monday night, the slugging third basemen were headed in the same direction — around the bases.

Horner's three-run homer paced Atlanta to a 7-5 victory over Houston while Schmidt's 15th home run of the season, tops in the major leagues, led Philadelphia to a 5-3 triumph over St. Louis.

"I don't thing anything else can go wrong," said Horner, who was sidelined in the first game of the season with an ankle injury and returned to the Braves' lineup just last week. "It all happened at once, the ankle injury and the arbitration."

Horner, whose home run was his third this season, currently is involved in a contract dispute with the Braves. It has gone to arbitration but there's been no indication of a settlement date.

"In my situation, I have something to try to prove to myself," added Horner, the NL Rookie of the Year in 1978. "I'm swinging the bat real well and that pleases me. I feel I can play under any circumstances."

Against Houston, Horner's decisive blow followed a double by Gary Matthews and a throwing error by Enos Cabell on Jeff Burroughs' grounder. It came off reliever Bo McLaughlin, 1-2, and made a winner of Phil Niekro, 5-6.

"The layoff didn't hurt Horner at all," mentioned Braves Manager Bobby Cox. "He's still the same hitter he was last August."

Phillies 5, Cardinals 3

While Horner has had a spring he wouldn't mind forgetting, Schmidt is off to a memorable start. The Phillies star is batting .293 and has knocked in 34 runs. Nine times he's had the game-winning hit.

"Pete Rose is rubbing off on me," said Schmidt, crediting Philadelphia's off-season free-agent acquisition for improving his own attitude. "He gets everybody excited. That makes me all the more confident as a ballplayer. He shows emotion, he takes errors and outs hard. It's a joy to play with Pete Rose."

Padres 3, Dodgers 2

Eric Rasmussen won his first game of the season after losing four by firing a five-hitter and outdueling Andy Messersmith, who tossed a six-hitter. San Diego won the game on Kurt Bevacqua's one-out RBI single in the ninth.

"That's the best I've seen him pitch," said the Dodgers' Derrel Thomas, a former Padre. "That's the first time I've seen him throw that much junk. He must have been watching Gaylord Perry."

Pirates 4, Expos 2

Willie Stargell belted his seventh homer in his last nine games and Bert Blyleven won his first game in three decisions this year. Ed Ott and Omar Moreno also homered for the Pirates and Tony Perez slammed one for Montreal.

Canadiens Cop Stanley Cup

MONTREAL (AP) — After winning six Stanley Cup championships since 1968 on the road, Montreal's mighty Canadiens decided it was time to give hometown fans another view of the victorious skate with the coveted trophy.

And captain Serge Savard and veteran center Jacques Lemaire did just that Monday night after the Canadiens whipped the New York Rangers 4-1 before a packed crowd of 18,076 at the Forum.

Everything came up "4s" for Montreal. It scored four goals, two by Lemaire and one each by Rick Chartraw and Bob Gainey. After losing the opener of the best-of-seven showdown with New York, the Canadiens roared back to win four games in a row, giving them a fourth consecuutive National Hockey League crown.

Just 11 days earliers, the Canadiens were on the verge of surrendering the Cup, trailing the Boston Bruins 3-1 in the third period of the seventh game of their semifinal series. They rallied twice and then pulled out a victory on Yvan Lambert's overtime goal.

Raiders Sign Netter

The Texas Tech tennis program took another step forward Monday when coach Mark Hamilton signed Midland College netter Jose Rivera to a national letter-of-intent.

Rivera, who graduated from El Paso Irvin, is the second tennis signee this year — and the second to come out of Midland. Earlier this spring Jeff Bramlett of Midland High signed with the Raiders.

"We were very fortunate to get Jose," said Hamilton. "A lot of schools have been talking to him. But he knows Jeff (Bramlett) pretty well, and I think that had something to do with his decision."

Rivera won the Western Junior College Conference championship in the No. 1 position this year. As a senior in high school, Rivera reached the Class AAAA doubles semifinals before being eliminated.

"Jose can play for us probably as soon as he gets here," said Hamilton. "He's already beaten Mike Moss and Trey Schutz of Texas A&M this year. Heck, that was more than we could do."

Moss and Schutz played in the Nos. 3 and 4 positions for A&M this year. And when the Raiders tangled with the Aggies, Moss defeated Harrison Bowes and Schutz was also victorious over David Crissey.

Bowes and Crissey graduated in May, and the Raiders also lost one other player, Randy Clayton, who dropped out of school.

Hamilton said he is seeking players that can make an immediate contribution to the Tech tennis team that was 1-8 in Southwest Conference competition last year. He is hopeful that he can sign two more junior college players before the end of the week.

Perry, Conaway Win Specialties

Chuck Perry and Curtis Conaway, who led Monterey to the district track championship, continued to win in post-season meets.

Competing in an invitational meet at Fort Worth over the weekend, Perry won the high jump with a leap measuring 6-10, and Conaway won the mile in 4:18.7.

Perry won his second straight state championship in Austin two weeks ago, and Conway placed in the 880.

Q. On fourth down from the 5-yard line, a team throws a pass which falls incomplete in the end zone. What yard line does the ball come out to in the NFL?

—W.B. Alexander, Bellville

A. The 5-yard line. Before 1975, it would have come out to the 20. The rule was changed to encourage touchdown attempts. The original rule was made because the owners of that day wanted to discourage "cheap touchdowns," which is the way they regarded the effete forward pass.

Erxleben Can't Kick About Saints' Pact

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The New Orleans Saints have signed their No. 1 draft choice, kicker Russell Erxleben of the University of Texas, to a six-year, million-dollar contract.

The contract was signed Monday, but no terms were announced. However, reports indicated it may have made Erxleben the highest paid kicker in professional football history.

The contract — a series of six, one-year pacts — reportedly included a $300,000 signing bonus and a sliding salary that will average about $150,000 plus bonuses.

Erxleben, both a punter and a kicker, holds the NCAA field goal record with a 77-yarder against Rice in 1977. He made three field goals of more than 60 yards and 11 of more than 50 yards.

Asked if he thought his distance would be cut by the National Footbal League rule which forbid use of a kicking tee, Erxleben said it might be reduced about 10 yards a kick. But he said he didn't expect any trouble kicking off the artificial turf in the Superdome.

As a combination kicker, he scored 120 of 134 extra points attempted in college and 49 of 78 field goals. He punted 214 times for a 44.2-yard average, with a hang time on punts consistently more than five seconds.

Most NFL teams have a separate kicker and punter, but Erxleben said he plans to keep on kicking both ways.

He said coaches' resistance to having only one kicker might be because it would require two replacements if the kicker got hurt.

Probation For Memphis?

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Memphis State University will escape a major National Collegiate Athletic Association penalty for recruiting irregularities, a Memphis newspaper reports.

The NCAA's committee on infractions has decided to put the Tiger football program on probation for one year, The Commercial Appeal reported in its editions today. The Memphis State basketball program will not be penalized, the morning newspaper said, quoting sources close to the investigation.

Results of a 2½-year NCAA investigation into allegations of recruiting violations were delivered Monday to Memphis State president Billy M. Jones. But neither Jones nor the NCAA would say what the letter contained. Jones refused to comment on the letter until he had discussed its contents today with Dr. Roy Nicks, state Board of Regents chancellor.

Under NCAA procedures, the association does not reveal what action it takes against a school until the school's officials decide whether t appeal the committee'sdecision. If Memphis State accepts the decision, the NCAA will announce the penalties.

According to the Commercial Appeal article, the Tiger athletic program will suffer more than a public reprimand, but less than a multi-year probation and loss of scholarships that would be a major blow to the school's athletic recruiting program.

Fitch Leaves Cavs

RICHFIELD, Ohio (AP) — When it came to the final moments of his nine years as coach and general manager of the ClevelandCavaliers, Bill Fitch unashamedly shed tears.

Fitch, the 46-year-old quip-master and admitted basketball junkie, asked for and was given his release from the final two years of his current contract with the National Basketball Association team.

"Sometimes the actors need a new stage," Fitch said, his voice choking with emotion as he and Nick Mileti, team president and majority owner, made the announcement Monday.

Fitch said he went to Mileti following this past season and talked about his future with the club.

"He said 'think about it and take your time,'" Fitch explained. "I talked to some people that I respect, I went on vacation for 10 days and I talked to a couple of (NBA) clubs. I just think it was time for a change."

The Cavaliers slipped to 30-52 last season, missing the NBA playoffs for the first time in four years. However, Fitch, the only coach in the expansion-born team's history, said that had little bearing on his decision.

There has been speculation that Fitch will be the next coach of the Boston Celtics, but about his future he would say only, "If I stay in basketball and go elsewhere — and I think the chances are 90 percent that I will — I just want to give myself 24 or 48 hours of breathing room before I do anything."

NAIA In Fiscal Bind?

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Kansas City Times quoted unnamed sources within the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics today as saying the 43-year-old organization is in deep financial difficulty.

"Finanially, we're as low as we've ever been," one NAIA official said in the copyright story. "When Al Duer (former executive director) left, there was a big reserve. but now there is none, we have nothing to fall back on. And we're in trouble."

Harry Fritz, director of the Kansas City-based NAIA, which serves 515 small-school athletic programs aroound the country, denied the charges.

"I don't know where you got your information, but there is no crisis problem," Fritz said. "There is a continual financial problem, but most organizations have concern about meeting expenses. We have to watch our P's and Q's."

The newspaper said sources within the organization who wished to remain anonymous took a different view. They indicated the situation is so severe the NAIA might fold within two years if the fiscal outlook continues to decline.

"Everybody's near panic," said another NAIA official. "There's a real worry about expenditures, needless expenditures. There is concern, and it is quite justified."

Fritz, who became executive director in April 1976, said he feels "better about the financial situation of the NAIA now than any time since I've been with it. We don't need money to exist, just to exist as an organization. But we do in order to exist and do all the things we'd like to do. We've been very jealously guarding our reserves at the appropriate level."

Father, Son Team Fields Top Birds

The father-son team of Kurt and Keith Lowe won the Lubbock Racing Pigeon Club's Houston Race, beating out Max Gillit by less than a yard per minute.

The race was over a 460-mile distance. The Lowe's bird flew the distance at a speed of 972.51 yards per minute.

This week the club will race from Beaumont.

The Lubbock Homing Pigeon Club flew during the past weekend from Houston, and seven pigeons made the trek in one day.

Bill Chisum took first at 1067.34 yards per minute. Denny Thomas and Ralph Delgado took second and third respectively. The first five places were filled by Blue Raider pigeons.

The Lubbock Homing Pigeon Club will fly this week from Austin's 350 mile station and end the season the following week from New Orleans' 750 mile station

DRAGS POSTPONED

AMARILLO (Special) — Rain once again forced the postponement of action in the South Central regional of the National Hot Rod Association Winston World Championship Series at the Amarillo Dragway Monday. The event will resume with elimination races at 2 p.m. July 8.

JC Tennis Meet Opens

WACO (AP) — Jim Powell of Cumberland College (Tenn.) went against Jeff Savage of Prince George's Community College today to get the national junior college tennis tournament under way.

Their contest, scheduled for an 8 a.m. start, was in the first flight. The tournament has six flights of singles and three flights of doubles.

The tournament's top seed is Mike Brunnberg from Miami Dade South, Fla. No. 2 is Karl Richter of Odessa College.

Odessa tied for the championship last year with Midland College and New Mexico Military institute.

Coaches predict Odessa will repeat as champion, with Miami Dade South or Midland giving the strongest competition.

Among last year's returning players is Jose Rivera of Midland, who won the singles championship in the fourth flight last year but who is playing in the first flight this year as fourth seed.

Masked Bandit Strikes City Convenience Store

Police Monday night received their first report of a robbery of a business in almost a month, and the suspect — possibly a Dallas Cowboy football fan — remained at large this morning.

Belle Perez, clerk at the 7-Eleven convenience store at 4201 Boston Ave., said a bandit wearing a Dallas Cowboys ski mask held up the business about 9 p.m., and made off with $40 cash.

The clerk said the bandit, who never displayed a weapon but kept a hand in his pocket as if he had one, asked for a package of cigarettes.

She said that when she told the man how much the item cost, he said, "Just give me the cash and we'll call it even. Just give me the large bills."

The suspect was described as white, about 25 years old, 5 feet 8 inches tall and muscular. He was clad in a brown raincoat over a black coat, blue jeans and brown gloves.

The last business robbery police investigated until Monday night was on April 24 at an Avenue A tire repair shop.

In a reported assault about 11 p.m. Monday, a 21-year-old man told police he was beaten up after being asked to leave a local nightclub because he was dancing with another man.

The complanant said he was dancing with a male friend when the manager confronted him and ordered both of them to leave. He said he told the manager he could dance with anyone he pleased.

Reports indicate a crowd gathered, and the victim and his friend decided to make a hasty exit. The man said that once outside the nightspot, several men jumped him and beat him up. The victim required medical treatment for a cut over his left eye.

A 24-year-old Lubbock woman said that a man grabbed her about 9:30 p.m. Monday, and when she kicked him, the suspect displayed a knife and stabbed her boot.

The receptionist told police she was walking out of a gate near her apartment when confronted by the knife-wielding suspect. She said she kicked the weapon out of the man's grasp, and that he picked it up and ran off, "laughing very crazy-like."

She said she apparently had come into contact with the short, blond white man before, because she remembered hearing "that crazy laugh."

A convenience store manager said a male customer in the store about 6:30 a.m. today had his pants unzipped and was exposing himself while he paid for a bottle of juice.

Reports indicate the man made his purchase and walked out of the store without saying a word. He drove off east on Fourth Street.

The suspect was described as a tall white man, in his 20s or 30s, wearing a brown coat and jeans.

A city policeman said he was on routine patrol shortly after midnight Monday when he saw a man in a Fourth Street nightclub parking lot push a woman off her feet and into the mud. He said he then watched the man get into a fight with the woman's male escort.

The officer said he broke up the fight and arrested the 18-year-old Lubbock man for fighting and suspicion of public intoxication.

Reports state the man was combative until he was placed in the patrol car and was en route to the county jail. The arresting officer said the man then became talkative and started crying.

Theresa Gay Mitchell, a 16-year-old Estacado High School student, was treated and released from West Texas Hospital Monday after she was reportedly beaten at the school about 7:30 a.m.

Miss Mitchell told police that a young black male cornered her outside the school cafeteria and started hitting her on the head and shoulders. She said the man was 18 to 25 years old, of medium height and heavy build.

Steve Smith of Glazer's Wholesale Drug Co. in Amarillo told police he is missing $3,000 in cash, $7,000 in liquor and a $10,000 truck after the driver of the truck didn't return to Amarillo Saturday night.

Smith said the suspect, a white male, about 18 to 25 and of medium height and build, has not been seen since he made a delivery to Cecil's Liquor Store Saturday morning, where he collected $3,000 cash.

In reported burglaries and thefts, Roddy Lee Neel of 1516 28th St. said that about 1 a.m. Monday he discovered his house burglarized and $1,133 in property stolen, including coins, guns and a Home Box Office television accessory.

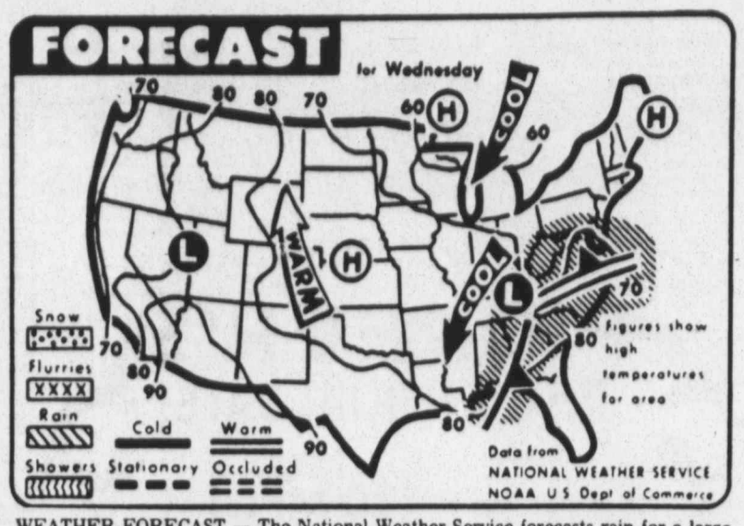

Cecil Harvey Puryear of 1717 Ave. K complained that someone took a $90 banjo from his room sometime between 8:30 a.m. Saturday and 7:30 a.m. Monday.

J.V. Adcox, operator of Adcox Pharmacy at 3801 22nd St., reported that thieves stole $200 worth of drugs sometime between 3 p.m. Sunday and 8:30 a.m. Monday.

Jane Bassinger of 8509 Jordan Dr. told police that a young, white female stole her mail Monday morning. Mrs. Bassinger said her son saw the young woman get out of a 1976 red and white Cutlass and take the mail from the box. The boy said the woman, who was about 18 to 25 and had light brown hair, left driving north on Jordan Drive.

George Schrandt of 4511 59th St. said thieves removed all four tires, valued together at $800, from his car sometime Sunday night or early Monday.

Mickey Carlen told police that burglars carted off $3,100 worth of paint sprayer equipment from a garage at 3524 Marshall St. sometime between noon Sunday and 10 a.m. Monday.

Life Flight Service Set

By NANCY ALLEN
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Air ambulance service, designed for long distance transport of critically or terminally ill patients, will begin serving the South Plains from Houston June 1.

The service, called Life Flight LD, will be offered by Hermann Hospital. It is patterned after a similar hemisphere-wide air ambulance operated since 1972 by St. Anthony's Hospital in Denver, Colo.

Life Flight LD will operate a turboprop jet, medically equipped to carry three patients. Each flight will carry a registered nurse trained in emergency treatment, and a one-pilot crew.

The long distance service is an outgrowth of Hermann Hospital's helicopter emergency transport service, which covers a 130-mile radius from the Houston-based Texas Medical Center.

Life Flight LD stems partially from Houston's interest in the terminally ill, according to a spokeswoman for Hermann Hospital.

" People come to Houston from all over the country for cancer treatment at M.D. Anderson Hospital," she explained, "and when their treatments are finished they want to go home.

"Often they are too ill and come from too far away to be moved any other way," she said.

Critically ill patients who need specific treatment only available in a distant city also could benefit from the service, according to the spokeswoman.

Patients can be transported to and from any locations which have adequate landing facilities for the plane. Hermann Hospital plans to serve the continental United States, Canada, Mexico and South America.

St. Anthony's Hospital reports that in their five years of operation, "Flight for Life" planes have taken patients to 28 states, Canada, Mexico and Costa Rica.

Cost for the Houston-based service will be based on a $1.35 charge per mile from Houston, $35 for each hour the flight nurse is in attendance and a one-time $100 take-off fee. Medicines used during the flight also will be charged to the patient.

The Life Flight LD plane will be in Lubbock Wednesday, arriving at 1:30 p.m. at Avtech Aviation. The public is invited to inspect the aircraft at that time.

Muleshoe Man Shot In Head

An elderly Muleshoe man was in critical condition this morning at Methodist Hospital, suffering from a gunshot wound to the head.

Ollie Jones, 83, was found shot once in the head shortly after 9 a.m. today at his home, Muleshoe Police Chief Johnny Richards said.

"We're still investigating it. It could have been an accidental shooting," Richards said.

The victim was shot with a .38-caliber pistol, according to the chief.

Textile Import Issue Holds Up Agreement

WASHINGTON (AP) — Special Trade Representative Robert Strauss is off to China Friday to try to resolve the issue of Chinese textile exports in a new U.S.-China trade agreement.

The issue of textile exports is the chief stumbling block holding up a formal trade pact between the two countries. Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps said Monday the formal agreement could be ready for Congress to consider as early as the middle of June. Mrs. Kreps, who just returned from China, said the United States wants an agreement that would prevent a sudden, disruptive increase in textile imports.
