KIMBLE COUNTY CONTRACTOR SHOOTS NEGRO IN SAN ANTONIO

J. T. Coleman was up from San Antonio last week and related the incidents connected with the recent pistol practice on a negro that it was supposed was preparing to enter the Coleman home to burglarize it. Mr. Coleman first saw the negro making an attemp to hide under the rear steps, as he and Mrs. Coleman left the garage to go into the house. He had a 32 caliber pistol with him which he used to compel the negro to come out in the open and throw up his hands, while Mrs. Coleman went into the house to get a larger caliber pistol.

Mr. Coleman says this is the fourth time his house has been visited by burglars during the past year,but is the first one he has been able to catch. The bullet that broke the arm will be given Mr. Coleman as a souvenir.

Mr. Coleman is well known here, as a member of the firm of Coleman and Jenkins, Contractors, who built the good roads along the O. S. T. in this county. The following is from one of the San Antonio papers:

Negro Shot While Fleeing.—

The shooting of a burglar at the J. T. Coleman home, detectives believe, will have a tendency to slow down the operation of burglars which has been unusually active here recently.

Seven shots were fired by Mr. Coleman, four taking effect in the negro, who gives Houston Texas, as his home. Accompanied by Mrs. Coleman, Mr. oleman reached home at 7:20 o'clock. Mrs. Coleman detected the house-breaker as he was hiding beneath the steps at the rear of the house. She called her husband's attention to the discovery.

Getting the pistol from his pocket, Mr. Coleman grabbed the intruder, pulled him from his place of concealment and held him at bay while Mrs. Coleman summoned the police. Suddenly and while negro was standing with hands over his head, he bolted in awild dash to escape Commands to "halt" went unheeded. Seven shots failed to stop the fleeing crook.

Bullets in Leg and Arm

Police Captain Stevens and Detectives Wilson and Hartman were first to reach the scene. The negro, had apparently, had made his escape. Detective McManus brought about the capture of the negro a few minutes later, just as he was preparing to make a further getaway in a service car. Examination discloses the negro was severly wounded. Mounted Officer Padron reached the scene shortly afterwards and the wounded man taken to the Robert B. Green Memorial hospital. Examination disclosed the negro's right arm was shattered by a bullet. Another bullet had pierced the wrist and two bullets had lodged in his right hip.

The negro, 27 years old, recently came here from Houston Dectives believe him a professional house-breaker and responsible for other crimes here.

KIMBLE COUNTY SCHOOLS GET RUAL AID

Judge Weaver H. Baker, Ex-Officio County Supt. has spent most of the past week with the Rural School Inspector from Austin, and gives us the list below showing the amount of aid each school has been granted so far, and the amount promised when certain necessary conditions are complied with. The London School, as shown below has not received aid, but has been promised $300, and the conditions under which it was promised have already been complied with.

This is the first state aid money that the schools of Kimble county have ever received, as no application for aid from the Special Rural School Appropriation has heretofore been made.

	Paid	Promised
Junction	$400.00	$800.00
Segovia,	$125.00	$125.00
London,	None	$300.00
Cleo,	$ 75.00	$ 75.00
Copperas,	$ 75.00	$ 75.00
Red Creek,	$250.00	$250.00
Roosevelt,	$145.00	$145.00
Noxville,	$125.00	$125.00
Telegraph	$130.00	$130.00

Mr. W. E. James of the Department of Education, inspected each of these schools and submitted in writting the bring each school up to the standard required by the department of education, before the unpaid portion of the rural school aid would be released. In no instance will the improvements cost as much as the unpaid portion of the aid. His suggestions for the most part consist in the recommending the floors of each school building be oiled, sanitary drinking fountains installed, which can be made by obtaining an ordinary barrel and inserting two bubbles, one for boys and one for girls, and keeping the barrels covered, building two closets, properly screened, and arranging the lighting of each building so that it will come from the left and rear of the pupil when seated. Special stress was placed on the care of free text books.

All the specifications necessary to obtain this aid is set out in the school laws of the state or prescribed by the department of education, and can be obtained by any trustee or patron without cost by writing to the Department of Education.

The standard required of schools for first aid are more lenient than for succeeding years. A school to receive aid the second time and thereafter must have not less than fifty cent special school tax and measure up to the standard rebuired by law in detail.

It is to be regretted that all the schools of the county are not in a position to obtain this aid because of a lack of equipment and building. Each tax payer of this county pays his share of the taxes from which the rural school fund is derived and unless the school of your district can measure up to the standard and get its pro-rata part of the aid, the taxes thus paid are lost to to the tax payers and the community. This is the seventh year in which rural school aid has been available upon application by a properly equipped school. There will be at least one more chance to receive this aid as only half of the appropriation has been used and the chances are that the Legislature will help schools in the future that are willing to help themfelves as it has the past years.

Conditional aid was promised several schools not shown the above list for next year. The money shown has actually been received and promised for this year.

Roosevelt School Tax Carries By Good Majority.

The special election held at Roosevelt last Saturday to determine whether the tax rate would remain at 25 cents or be raised to 50 cents, resulted in a vote of 19 to 31 for the increase Several voted against the tax on account of the money stringency, and not because of any desire to prevent the school from being greatly improved by the extra revenue derived from the increased tax. Roosevelt is a progressive community and the people there are all to gether when it comes to doing things for any good cause. There was not "scrap" so to speak on the queston of raising the tax to the minimun required for receiving state aid in the future. The Roosevelt school received $140. and a promise of $45.00 more when the conditions are met. Miss Walton was the teacher for the past term which ended March 31st. The aditional tax money will enable the trustees to employ two teachers for the next term.

The Parents-Teachers' Association is an active factor in that community, and will continue their work through the summer. At a recent meeting Misses Eva and Eunice Good all, Della and Bertha Parker, Ruth Surber and Cleo Richardson were appointed as acommittee to get up a play that will be given some time inthe early part of the summer. A pie Supper will also be given after the play is rendered. The proseeds from both to go for the school.

PRESSED back step by step by the preasure of events, the rulers of the world are at least approaching fundamental causes. That is the meaning of the Genoa Conference. The last makeshift which the money manipulators tried was the proposal to cancel all the war debts—a most humane thing to do, if it benefited human beings in the large; but a most inhuman thing to do if it only gave a false monetary system a new lease of life. With that makeshift refused, the rulers are now face to face with the sources of supply—material, labor and management. Exalt these and inevitably you put money back into its natural place as the servant of these. It could have not been done had another money poultice been permitted. Geona is the world's first step back to economic foundations.

HOPE EDEN WELL KNOWN MIND READER VISITS JUNCTION

Mrs. Norman R. Frescott, known on the stage as Hope Eden arrived in Menard on Monday April 19th. where she was met by her brother, Geo. W. Cousins. She is here visiting Mr. Cousins and his family, while her husband is in New York to arrange new booking for the performances they give together. She came here from Oklahoma City. She has made the Keith Circuit in the North-east and recently the Majestic Circuit in Texas, finishing at the Majestic in San Antonio the week of March 20th.

The following is an extract from an interview of Mary Carter carried in the San Antonio Evening News of March 21st.

She might have a sub-deb or even a sophomore in any city high school, judging from the exuberance of her spirits, the youthful lines of her figure and the beauty of her. Hope Eden, the miracle girl, with Frescott, the master mind, is amazing San Antonio with the ability to delve into the secret chambers of the human mind in a headline act on the current bill at the Majestic Theater. She is a lovely looking young thing She has the titian hair of a Burne-Jones portrait, the rose petal skin that goes with the red hair, very blue eyes, long lashes that make you green with envy, and a school girl charm of manner.

"Of course you want to know how I do it, " she laughed. "Well I am going to tell you," Hope Eden said with a contag ious laugh that sweep her dressing room like a rush of a south breeze on a summer day.. First let me tell you that I am "most difficult to interview"—a Boston reporter told me so. Even More. She said that it was mostextraordinary the way I refuse to settle down to being questioned. I asked what she wanted to ask me and she said:

"I wsh to know what you know of the seventh dimenson and what place it has in your line of work." Now you know why I refuse to settle down. Con't you?" Miss Eden said as she stood grammar-school girl fashion, first on one foot and then on the other.

" To begin with, what I do, the type of work I use in my act anyone could cultivate as I have done and carry it on. It is purely a matter of concentration. There is nothing supernatural at all in this act. While I was reared in an atmosphere of spiritism, and many of my relatives claim to be mediumistic. I do not use this to receive thought-waves.

"It is telepathy, nothing more My mind simply becomes a receiving instrument for the messages for the sages that are sent out from the auditorium through the transmitter, who is a perfectly nice young man—very nice," she said as she looked at her wedding ring," to me that is all, you see.

Hope Eden must be very young. This is the deduction When I was looking over the photograph to select one for a cut, she said of several pictures: "Oh, please don't use any of these, they look so child-like and so unsophisticated. Ipreand so unsophisticated. I pre-ried."

Special invitations have been sent out by the Hi-Y Club to all the surrounding towns and schools to urge all older boys to be present to hear this man who has created such a sensation among the boys of Texas as a result of his addresses to the Older Boys Conference at A. & M. College last January.

Ex-prize fighter, a Pacific Coast welter weight champion, holder of American record in the twenty-six mile marathon race, aswimmer and fancy diver of unusual ability and with all those physical accomplishments, a man four square who realizes that the all round man is the one neccessary to win and that physical accomplishments alone will not win but that above all a man must have character which will stand the test of temptation.

First 10:30 A M High School Auditorium. To all boys fourteen years and over.

Second 12: Noon. Luncheon for leading business men.

Third 2:30 P. M. High School Auditorium. To all boys fourteen years and over.

There will be no charge what ever for those addresses, Mr. Rimmer's expenses is being borne by the local Hi-Y Club. A registration fee for out of town boys will be asked however to provide dinner and entertainment for the boys while in Kerrville. The registration fee is the small amount of fifty cents, for which every boy will receive a tag entitleing him to the various features.

A special boy's orchestra will provide music before every meeting and nothing is being left undone to make this day the largest in the annals of boy life in this section of the country.

Letters have gone to all school men requesting the coperation of all schools and parents and special deputation teams will cover all schools bringing the special invitations

Autos will cover all the leading roads to Kerrville for the purpose of bringing all boys to Kerrville who have not a way. These cars will be placecarded so it will be possible to distinguish them. COME ON BOYS A GOOD TIME IS CERTAIN.

Community Building and The Home Newspaper

Every right-minded man or woman is proud of their home, proud of their town and community and proud of their immediate section of the State. Those not so disposed should move away from it. Also, every man or woman is constantly striving to improve their own condition, by working for the common good of the community. The condition of the individual is in a large measure left to himself to deteriorate or improve, but the stability, progress and desirability of the community is dependent on the combined efforts of all the members of the community and the institutions within it.

When properly supported and properly managed, what other institution in a community can perform a more necessary service in its development and progress than a newspaper? The loyalty of the people of this community to The Junction Eagle cannot find an equal in the entire country. The support it receives from the people of Kimble County is a constant incentive to create the very best that can be had in the way of a newspaper that will serve the needs of the community.

During the past two decades, Kimble County has made unusual progress towards a better and happier life for all. During the next few years, it will make even greater progress. The Eagle will keep pace with this onward march, and will direct every effort to giving the people a newspaper that will serve their needs and merit their continued unqualified support.

The progress of the community will depend on your knowledge of what is going on at all times. When you know what other people are doing, you will know better what to do yourself. There can be no better way of obtaining this necessary information than through the columns of the Eagle.

WILL FILL PARRISH DISTRICT MAY THIRTEEN

"Thirteen,, is going to be a feature in the thirteenth congressional district on May 13, for the governor issued his proclamation calling a special election to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Lucian W. Parrish, the same to be held on Saturday, May 13. This gives the candidates more than thirty days to campaign in, and one can be elected, therefore the 13th will be most unlucky for the also-rans.

There are twelve counties in the thirteenth district, Coke, Denton, Wise, Montague, Clay, Jack, Young, Archer, Wichita, Wilbarger, Baylor, and Throckmorton.

The clerk in the department of state usually makes one copy of election proclamation for each county and one for his own files. That would make a total of thirteen

SPUR FETERITA A FAVORITE GRAIN SORGHUM

Spur Feterita is the name of a new and distinct variety of grain sorghum developed by plant breeding work by the Texas Experiment Station at Spur, Texas.

Spur Feterita is the first highly improved named variety of feterita which has been developed and widely distributed in the United States.

The unimproved feterita, commonly grown, possesses certain defects and its improvement is highly desirable.

Spur Feterita has a thicker stalk than kaffir, milo, or unimproved feterita. It stands up better in storm or at maturity than the unimproved feterita, and does not grow so tall as the unimproved feterita. Spur feterita has a compact well filled seed head and it produces a high percentage of grain. It is well adapted not only to planting in season, but, also, a very late planting.

Its yields have exceeded yields of unimproved feterita by approximately eight bushels to the acre.

We have one thousand pounds of this seed on hand that will be sold to our customers at cost.

It has been publicly announced that the Corsicana Realm of the Ku Klu Klan, agreed at a meeting held by the organization in Corsicina last week, to disband. In this regard the Corsicana Commersial of Saturday said:

This is the beginning of a perfect day as far as the people of Corsicana are concerned for it is a certainty that there is to be no more dissension, discord or suspicions among our people the Ku Klux Klan at a meeting held in their hall attended by the majarity of its present membership unanimously agreed to honorably disband and to pledge their efforts hereafter as individuals to law enforcement, their obligation being to assist officers in prevention and detection of crime.

If the above report is true, there are evidently a number around Corsicana that have awakened to their full duty of citizenship. A man may be wrong honestly believing his position is correct, but when the light dawns on him, it takes remarkable courage to acknowledge he was wrong. This is what all Klansmen must ultimately decide, and of course the members possessing real manhood will do as the Corsicana members have done, and turn their misdirected efforts to improve the machenery of justice outside the established system of government, towards assisting the legal agencies in enforcing law and order and creating a stronger and better government for the people, by the people.

STATE CAPITAL NEWS

IMPORTANT NEWS ITEMS FROM THE CAPITOL ARE ARE REPORTED HE RE EVERY WEEK.

From Austin STatesman:—

State to Fight for Possession OF Old Capitol Cornerstone.

Before the State of Texas relinquished posession of the cornerstone of the old state capitol, its claimant Otto Stolley of Austin, will have to prove beyond any doubt his title there to, according to First Assistant Attorney General E. F. Smith. In the meantime the stone will continue to repose among the archive in the state library.

Stoley claims it is understood, that he acquired the stone from a man who purched rocks, stone and other material salvaged from the old temporary capitol.

Assistant Attorney General Smith said that Stoley is asking $5000 for the conerstone. The latter also maintains that the stone was taken from the primises of a house he owned situated in Hyde Park, a residential section of Austin, with out his concent.

The question of the ownership of the stone may have to be settled by the legislature when it convenes next January.

Fifteen Pardons and Paroles Cancelled By Govener Pat Neff

During the past two weeks it was ascertained Saturday, Governor Neff has cancelled fifteen conditional pardons or paroles and directed that these fifteen convicts heretofore released from prison be returned to the penitentiary to serve out their terms.

Several of these pardons and paroles were granted by Gov. Neff and others by former Gov Hobby. Cancellations were made chiefly because those who had been released had violiated some law or had been guilty of some conduct unbecomming a good citizen.

In commenting on the matter the Governor made it clear that those released on paroles or conditional pardons would be returned to the penitentiary if they were guilty of any conduct not in keeping with an allround good citizen. Governor Neff pointed out that last week in the Frazier case, appealed from Erath county, the court of Crimnal Appeals handed down an opinion the the Govenor had an right to revoke at any time he saw fit a condition pardon.

John T. Smithe Plans to Make Test of Redistriceting Bill.

Following a conference with the Attorney General todoy, Representative John T. Smith, Representative in the Legislature from Travis County, announced he will file Thursday or Friday a petition for writ of manddamus in the District Court of Travis County to test the constitutionality of the repassed by the last legislature.

This will obviate the necessity of the Attorney General's department rendering an opinion on the validity of this act as has been contemplated. The The ommission of Swisher County from the provisions of the bill raised serious doubts in the minds of many as to the validity of the law.

The mandamus will be directed against County Chairman Patterson and will be to compel him to file the name of Representive Smith on the official ballot under the provisions of the new law. Refusual of the County Chairman to file the name will test the constitutionality of the act.

Mrs. Coleman Highsmith has moved her house on the same lot with Otto Oxford, which places it about a half block nearer the street.

Car Burns on School Ground.

A Maxwell Car belonging to Dr R. H. P. Wright caught fire last Wednesday afternoon on the school ground as the children were leaving for home and burned completely up. The car was with in three feet of the three-room school building when the fire was discoverd, but was pushed away to prevent catching the building on fire. The cause of the fire is unknown, but is supposed to have caught from a short in the wiring. The tank was full of gasoline but did not explode. Several men who were there just after the car began burning removed the tires, but were unable to put out the fire.

Episcopal Ladies Make Success of Easter Tea.

The ladies of the Episcopal Church gave an Easter Tea Saturday afternoon at the Hamer Company's Store for the benefit of their Guid. Delicious Cake, Sandwiches, Tea and coffee was served until a late hour. Many pretty Easter baskets of home-made candy was sold before the Tea had hardly opened.

One of the interesting features of the Tea, was a large Easter cake made and donated by Mrs. Jim Moore, which chances were sold for and amounted to, $27.50. These chances were put into a box and little Charles Luke Mains, of Menard, Texas, drew the name of F. L. Wilson to be the lucky winner. Mr. Wilson was not in town so the cake was sent to him, which he immediately refusd to cut, and presented back to the ladies of the church to share among themselves. But instead a beautiful box of the cake was sent them with the Easter lillies on the box, and the remaining part was sold out by the slice at the tea.

The hospitality of Mr. Hamer was certainly appreciated by the members and the many compliments the ladies received on the coffee that afternoon, was due to the fact that they used Hamer's Best Folgers Coffee.

The net proceeds were $70.50

Methodist Church
Weekly Notes.

Sunday was a red letter day for us. The Easter program was well rendered to the largest crongregation we have had since I have been in Junction.

We are very greatful to those who had charge, and also to all who took part on the program. I think every one must have felt a great desire to live a better life.

The services for the entire day were very satisfactory.

The District Conference will conven at Brady, Wednesday, the 25th. at 9 o'clock. Delegates from Junction and also members by virture of their office are as follows: W. B. Buster, Mrs. Roy Blackburn, Alton Miller, Mrs James Ragland, Mrs. R. L. McIntyre, E. O. Bode. Alternates: C. R. Stevenson and Miss Eva Goodall.

Rev J. T. King, of San Angelo, held our second Quartrly Conference at Copperas the 9. We had a very pleasant conference and a good attendance. I trust that we are about ready to launch out and get away from the shore.

Our Mission as a church is to bring the lost to the Savior, and not to dictate the policies and plans of the community. The churches of the community should be united in their efforts to advance every interest that will bring the greatest blessing to the citizens. But when any one tries to have everything their way, you may rest assured that they will break down and divide the community. The moral influences of Christianity ought to dominate, and when they do, we will have greater institutions, and a greater Junction.

R. L. McIntyre.

Baptist Church
Weekly Notes

Sunday morning promises to be an enjoyable service with us. Prof. Marshall and the Howard Payne girls will be present and sing. I know that our people will show their appreciation of their kindness by attending in large numbers.

Friday night the Girl's Auxiliary entertaned their friends with a delightfull social on the church lawn. Some forty boys and girls were present. After a lot of games and a good spread they closed the evening with some nthusiastic singing.

Mrs. Marsh and other grown folks from the Sunbeam Band and the Primary Sunday School gave those little folks an egg hunt. It was popular as forty seven hunted for the hidden treasur.

Our Sunday School was again very interesting and well attended. Mr. Schraub and Mr. Baker supplied for Messrs Hodges and burt who were out of town that day.

After the Sunday morning services the pastor and family were taken to the home of frinends on Cedar Creek where a wholesome Kimble county dinner was served to a number of guests. Cedar Creek citizens are noted for their community gatherings. Their egg hunt in the Randle pasture was a happy time, and then it was this pastor's privilege to speak a while to those good people about the history of the Easter Celebration and the meaning of the resurrection to us.

There can be no doubt that this is the crisis of the Seventy Five Million Campaign. It has been just two and one-half years since the pledges were taken, and if we can come up to the Convention with half of the seventy-five million paid it will be a much greater achievment than when we went over the top in taking the pledges

Come help us have a gracious Sunday.

CHAPTER I.

When Johnnie comes marching home again,
Hurrah! Hurrah!

Hurrah! Hurrah!

The ladies they will all turn out,
And we'll all feel gay, when Johnnie comes marching home again!

The old man and the little boy, his grandson, sat together in the shade of the big walnut tree in the front yard, watching the Decoration Day Parade," as it passed up the long street; and when the last of the veterans was out of sight the grandfather murmured the words of the tune that came drifting back from the now distant band at the head of the procession.

"Did you, grandpa?" the boy asked.

"Did I what?"

"Did you all feel gay when the army got home?"

"It didn't get home all at once, precisely," the grandfather explained. "When the war was over I suppose we felt relieved, more than anything else."

"You didn't feel so gay when the war was, though, I guess?" the boy ventured.

"I guess we didn't."

"Were you scared, Grandpa? Were you ever scared the Johnnies would win?"

"No. We weren't ever afraid of that."

"Well, weren't you ever scared yourself, Grandpa? I mean when you were in a battle."

"Oh, yes; I was." The old man laughed. "Scared aplenty!"

"I don't see why," the boy said promptly. "I wouldn't be scared in a battle."

"Wouldn't you?"

"Course not! Grandpa, why don't you march in the Decoration Day parade? Wouldn't they let you?"

"I'm not able to march any more. Too short of breath and too shaky in the legs and too blind."

"I wouldn't care," said the boy. "I'd be in the parade anyway, if I was you.

"I Wouldn't Care," Said the Boy. "I'd Be in the Parade Anyway, if I Was You."

If I'd been in your place, Grandpa, and they'd let me be in that parade, I'd been right up by the band. Look, Grandpa! Watch me, Grandpa! This is the way I'd be, Grandpa."

He rose from the garden bench where they sat, and gave a complex imitation of what had most appealed to him as the grandeurs of the procession, his prancing legs simulating those of the horse of the grand marshal, while his upper parts rendered the drums and bugles of the band, as well as the officers and privates of the militia company which had been a feature of the parade. The only thing he left out was the detachment of veterans.

"Putty-boom! Putty-boom! Putty-boom-boom-boom!" he vociferated, as the drums—and then as the bugles: "Tu, ta-ra, tara!" He addressed his restive legs: "Whoa, there, you Whitey! Gee! Haw! Git up!" Then, waving an imaginary sword: "Column right! Farwud march! Halt! Carry harms!" He "carried arms." "Show-dier harms!" He "shouldered arms," and returned to his seat.

"That'd be me, Grandpa. That's the way I'd do. And as the grandfather nodded, seeming to agree, a thought recently dismissed returned to the mind of the composite procession and he asked:

"Well, why weren't you ever afraid the Johnnies would whip the Unions, Grandpa?"

"Oh, we knew they couldn't."

"I guess so." The little boy laughed disdainfully, thinking his question satisfactorily answered. "I guess those ole Johnnies couldn't whipped a' flea! They didn't know how to fight any at all, did they, Grandpa?"

"Oh, yes, they did!"

"What?" The boy was astounded. "Weren't they all just reg'lar ole cowards, Grandpa?"

"No," said the grandfather. "They were pretty fine soldiers."

"They were? Well, they ran away whenever you began shootin' at 'em, didn't they?"

"Sometimes they did, but most times they didn't. Sometimes they fought like wildcats—and sometimes we were the ones that ran away."

"But the Johnnies were bad men, weren't they, Grandpa?"

"No."

The boy's forehead, customarily vacant, showed some little vertical shadows, produced by a struggle to think. "Well, but—" he began slowly. "Listen, Grandpa, listen here! You said—you said you never got scared the ole Johnnies were goin' to win."

"They did win pretty often," said the grandfather. "They won a good many battles."

"I mean, you said you never got scared they'd win the war."

"No, we were never afraid of that."

"Well, but if they were good men and fought like wildcats, Grandpa, and kept winning battles and everything, how could that be? How could you help bein' scared they'd win the war?"

The grandfather's feeble eyes twinkled brightly. "Why, we knew they couldn't, Ramsey."

At this, the little vertical shadows on Ramsey's forehead became more pronounced, for he had succeeded in thinking. "Well, they didn't know they couldn't, did they?" he argued. "They thought they were goin' to win, didn't they?"

"Yes; I guess they did. But you see they were wrong."

"Well, but—" Ramsey struggled. "Listen! Listen here, Grandpa! Well, anyway, if they never got scared we'd win, and nobody got scared they'd win—well, I don't see—"

"You don't see what?"

"I see." And his grandfather laughed again. "You mean: If the Johnnies felt just as sure of winning the war as we did and kept winning battles, why shouldn't we ever have had any doubts we were going to win? That's it, isn't it?"

"I guess so, Grandpa."

"Well, I think it was mostly because we were certain that we were right."

"I see," said Ramsey. "The Johnnies knew they were on the side of the devil." But at this, the grandfather's laugh was louder than it had been before, and Ramsey looked hurt. "Well, you can laugh if you want to!" he objected in an aggrieved voice. "Anyway, the Sunday school sup'intendent told us when people knew they were on the devil's side they always—"

"I dare say, I dare say," the old man interrupted, a little impatiently. "But in this world mighty few people think they're on the devil's side, Ramsey. The South thought the devil was on our side, you see."

"Well, that kind o' mixes it all up more'n ever."

"Suppose you look at it this way: The South was fighting for what it believed to be its right to be a country by itself; but we were fighting for 'Liberty and Union, now and forever, one and inseparable.' There's the reason we had the certain knowledge that we were going to win the war. How plain and simple it is!"

Ramsey didn't think so. He had begun to feel bored by the conversation, and to undergo the oppression he usually suffered in school. The earnest old voice of the veteran was only a sound in the boy's ears.

"Boom—" The veterans had begun to fire their cannon on the crest of the low hill, out at the cemetery; and from a little way down the street came the rat-a-tat of a toy drum and sounds of a fife played execrably. A file of children in cocked hats made of newspapers came marching importantly up the sidewalk under the maple shade trees, and in advance, upon a velocipede, rode a tin-swording personage, shrieking incessant commands but not concerning himself with whether or not any military obedience was thereby obtained. Here was a revivifying effect upon young Ramsey; his sluggard eyelids opened electrically; he leaped to his feet and, abandoning his grandfather without preface or apology, sped across the lawn and out of the gate, charging headlong upon the commander of the company.

"You get off that 'locipede, Wesley Bender!" he bellowed. "You gimme that sword! What right's you got to go bein' captain o' my army, I'd like to know! Who got up this army, in the first place, I'd like to know! I did, myself, yesterd'y afternoon, and you get back in line or I won't let you b'long to it at all!"

The pretender succumbed; he instantly dismounted, being out-shouted and overawed. On foot he took his place in the ranks, while Ramsey became sternly vociferous. "In-tention, company! Farwud march! Col-lumn right! Right-showdier harms! Halt! Far-wud march. Carry harms—"

The army went trudging away under the continuous but unheeded fire of orders, and presently disappeared round a corner, leaving the veteran chuckling feebly under his walnut tree and alone with the empty street. All trace of what he had said seemed to have been wiped from the grandson's mind; but memory has curious ways. Ramsey had understood not a fifth nor a tenth of his grandfather's talk, and already he had "forgotten" all of it—yet not only were there many, many times in the boy's later life when, without ascertainable cause, he would remember words and sentences spoken by the grandfather, though the listener, half-drowsily, had heard but the sound of an old, earnest voice—and even the veteran's meaning finally took on a greater definiteness till it became, in the grandson's thoughts, something clear and bright and beautiful that he knew without being just sure where or how he had learned it.

CHAPTER II

Ramsey Milholland sat miserably in school, his conscious being consisting principally of a dull hate. Torpor was a little dispersed during a fifteen-minute interval of "Music," when he and all the other pupils in the large room of the "Five B. Grade" sang reluctantly fractions of what they enunciated as "The Star Spangled Banner"; but afterward he relapsed into the low spirits and animosity natural to anybody during enforced confinement under instruction. No alleviation was accomplished by an invader's temporary usurpation of the teacher's platform, a brisk and unsympathetically cheerful young woman mounting thereon to "teach German."

For a long time mathematics and German had been about equally repulsive to Ramsey, who found himself daily in the compulsory presence of both; but he was gradually coming to regard German with the greater horror, because, after months of patient mental resistance, he at last began to comprehend that the German language has sixteen special and particular ways of using the German article corresponding to that flexible bit of a word so easily managed in English—the. What in the world was the use of having sixteen ways of doing a thing that could just as well be done in one? If the Germans had contented themselves with insisting upon sixteen useless variations for infrequent words, such as hippopotamus, for instance, Ramsey might have thought the affair unreasonable but not necessarily vicious—it would be easy enough to avoid talking about a hippopotamus if he ever had to go to Germany. But the fact that the Germans picked out a and the and many other little words in use all the time, and gave every one of them sixteen forms, and expected Ramsey Milholland to learn this dizzying uselessness down to the last crotchety detail, with "When to employ Which" as a nausea to prepare for the final convulsion when one didn't use Which, because it was an "Exception"—there was a fashion of making easy matters hard that was merely hellish.

The teacher was strict but enthusiastic; she told the children, over and over, that the German was a beautiful language, and her face always had a glow when she said this. At such times the children looked patient; they supposed it must be so, because she was an adult and their teacher; and they believed her with the same manner of believing which those of them who went to Sunday school used there when the Sunday school teachers were pushed into explanation of various matters set forth in the Old Testament, or gave reckless descriptions of heaven. That is to say, the children did not challenge or deny; already they had been driven into habits of resignation and were passing out of the age when childhood is able to reject adult nonsense.

Ramsey Milholland did not know whether the English language was beautiful or not; he never thought about it. Moreover, though his deeper inwards hated "German," he liked his German teacher, and it was pleasant to look at her when that glow came upon her face.

Sometimes, too, there were moments of relaxation in her class, when she would stop the lesson and tell the children about Germany: What a beautiful, good country it was, so trim and orderly, with such pleasant customs, and all the people sensible, energetic and healthy. There was "Music" again in the German class, which was another alleviation; though it was the same old "Star Spangled Banner" over again. Ramsey was tired of the song and tired of "My Country 'Tis of Thee"; they were bores, but it was amusing to sing them in German. In German they sounded "sort o' funny," so he didn't mind this bit of the day's work.

Half an hour later there arrived his supreme trial of this particular morning. Arithmetic then being the order of business before the house, he was sent alone to the blackboard, supposedly to make lucid the proper reply to a fatal conundrum in decimals, and under the glare and focus of the whole room he breathed heavily and itched everywhere; his brain at once became sheer hash. He consumed as much time as possible in getting the terms of the problem stated in chalk; then, affecting to be critical of his own handiwork, erased what he had done and carefully wrote it again. After
