272 Die In Worst U.S. Airline Disaster As Jumbo Jet Falls In Chicago Suburb

CRASH SCENE — Firemen and other emergency personnel continue to survey wreckage of an American Airlines DC-10 that crashed near Chicago's O'Hare Airport with massive loss of life. Landing gear assembly seen here was among the largest pieces of the plane. Bodies of passengers and crew were scattered throughout the burning debris. Some persons near the crash site suffered minor injuries. (AP Laserphoto)

DC-10 Loses Engine In O'Hare Takeoff

CHICAGO (AP) — An American Airlines wide-bodied jet, loaded with 272 Memorial Day weekend travelers, crashed nose first and broke apart in flames Friday, just after takeoff from O'Hare International Airport. Authorities said all aboard were killed in the worst air disaster in U.S. history.

Seconds before the Los Angeles-bound DC-10 jetliner crashed, one of its three engines fell off and landed on the runway, said Chicago Fire Commissioner Richard Albrecht. He said the plane hit nose first about a half-mile from the O'Hare runway in an abandoned airfield in Elk Grove Township.

Lee Alfano, police chief of the nearby community of Des Plaines, said there were no survivors from the crash, which occurred at 3:03 p.m. CDT under clear but windy skies.

Rescue workers walked through the smoking rubble, marking bodies with 4-foot-high metal stakes topped by red, yellow and black streamers. The yellow streamers indicated two to three bodies, the red one body and the black five bodies. About 50 stakes had been set out.

Several Injured

Several persons on the ground were injured by debris, at least two of them seriously enough to require hospitalization.

As darkness fell, floodlights were brought to the crash site and rescuers and investigators said they would work through the night looking for bodies and clues.

Neal Callahan, public affairs officer for the Federal Aviation Administration in Chicago, said a recording of conversations between the pilot and the control tower indicated the tower knew on takeoff there was trouble.

"The only thing we do know for sure is that he didn't have time to talk to the control tower," Callahan said.

Asked by reporters whether the plane should have been able to fly with one engine missing, Callahan said:

"Yes, it should fly, no question about that, but that's one thing that will be determined in a further investigation." The National Transportation Safety Board sent investigators from Washington.

Engine "Came Off"

Michael Laughlin of Toronto, who filmed the plane's descent with a still camera from a window inside an O'Hare terminal, said the engine "came off and flew backwards and fluttered to the ground" before the plane plummeted.

"I had to force myself to shoot," he said. "I couldn't believe what I was seeing."

John Zuccaro, who saw the crash from the ground, said: "Underneath the left wing was on fire. Stuff was coming out — like white vapor.

"It had to be gas," Zuccaro said. "It was coming out from the left wing. And the thing started turning over. As soon as it was turned over it was going down fast."

Roy Mueller, manager of the Oasis mobile home park near the disaster site, said, "We heard a loud rumbling. We went to the door and we saw this airplane flip-flopping in the air. It bellied over and went straight down.

"One of my superintendents just came back from the field and he said, 'There's bodies scattered all over.'"

City Files Countersuit Naming Co-Op In Annexed Area Clash

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

THE CITY OF LUBBOCK answered a South Plains Electric Cooperative lawsuit Friday with another lawsuit.

In a 41-page answer and countersuit, city attorneys ask that the co-op be enjoined from providing electric service within Lubbock without obtaining a franchise from the city and be ordered to pay the city at least $130,000 in damages.

The legal action is in response to a suit filed by the co-op nearly four weeks ago asking that the city be enjoined from serving the 160-acre High Country Addition annexed by the city last year.

The co-op claims it is the only electric company certified by the Public Utility Commission to serve the area, but Lubbock Power and Light has made preparations to serve residents of the area when it develops.

However, the city alleges that the utility commission certificate was nullified when the High Country Addition became part of the city and "the regulating authority for the issuance of such certificates since annexation is the governing body of the City of Lubbock."

The city charter requires utility companies to obtain the consent of the city to use city streets and alleys, the document says.

That consent is given in the form of a franchise that contains the "terms and conditions of use and requires the annual payment of a sum of money for such franchise, normally based on a percentage of gross revenues of the franchised entity," the petition says.

"Since Plaintiff (the co-op) has obtained neither a franchise from the City of Lubbock nor a certificate of convenience and necessity from the governing body of such municipality to provide retail electric service within the corporate limits, its said service is accordingly not 'lawful.'"

Any ruling that the co-op does not have to comply with city franchise laws "would render the Public Utility Regulatory Act unconstitutional in whole or part under the Constitution of the State of Texas and the United States Constitution," the petition says.

Such a finding would "infringe upon the Constitutional Home rule powers of the City of Lubbock," constitute a donation of public property to a private use as prohibited" by state law and be a denial of "equal protection of the laws" by subjecting some, but not all, utilities to franchise requirements.

Because the city received $2.1 million in franchise revenues in the 1977-78 fiscal year, nearly $670,000 of which came from electric utilities, "any limitations upon the franchise authority of the City of Lubbock would create an immediate and substantial injury to municipal operations," the document says.

Other utilities are required to inform the city where utility lines are placed, but the co-op installed electrical power lines "at locations not specified" posing "a personal danger and risk to all others authorized to make excavations" by the city.

Without "safeguards and inspections" the co-op installed "a dangerous underground electric line outside the right-of-way where it exposes adjacent property owners to unconscionable risk.

"This imposition of risk upon the City of Lubbock...and the detrimental effects upon the coordinating and inspection procedures and practices of the City of Lubbock, have cast a burden of loss, harm and injury upon the City of Lubbock as an entity and the citizens of the City of Lubbock which is irreparable and for which there is no adequate remedy at law," the

Happiness Key Given Graduates

TO FEAR God and keep his commandments is the way to be happy, graduating seniors of Lubbock Christian High School were told Friday night.

Bill Brown, owner of Bill Brown Insurance Agency, addressed the class, illustrating his talk by converting the book of Ecclesiastes and the story of Solomon into a narrative five-act drama.

Each act, Brown said, illustrated how wisdom, wealth, worldly pleasure and power led to unhappy death.

Brown stressed that Solomon had all things men seek in order to gain happiness, but the king still died a lonely man.

Brown told class members to ask themselves the question, "Will we have to learn by experience all of the things that will not bring happiness before we

Malena Badell and Tim Walker spoke on the topic, "Dream a Dream and Live a Life" before their classmates in the Municipal Coliseum.

Walker quoted Robert Kennedy, who said, "Other men see things as they are and ask 'Why?' but I dream things that never were and I say 'Why not?'" Walker added that the saying was borrowed from George Bernard Shaw but "the basic intent of the idea remains unchanged."

He said that "certain things exist simply because they do, but other things exist because they should. It is these later realities that often have their foundation in a dream.

"Clearly dreams are an important part of life; and therefore, we should all learn to dream a dream, live a life," he continued.

He said that dreaming and living have dual meanings "split between the past and the future, for yesterday's dreams are the source of the ideals, hopes and goals which will shape our lives tomorrow."

Walker spoke of ideals, hopes and goals.

"Ideals may serve as a transition between the cold steel-gray world as it is, and the warm, rosy world as it ought to be," he said.

He added that hopes are the "source of optimism" and that they help to maintain the innate buoyancy of human nature."

He called goals "the most individualistic of all dreams. That is as it should be.

Dunbar High School

"EITHER WE WILL Find a Way or We Will Make One" was the theme for Dunbar-Struggs High School graduation ceremonies Friday in the Municipal Auditorium.

Student speakders were Jill Michelle Smith, Patsy June Lockhart and Thomas Roy Braxton.

Miss Smith appealed to her classmates' courage and daring, saying that "if we as individuals are to find or make the way that is truly ours, we must risk ourselves and our abilities, dare to believe in ourselves, even when no one else believes in us."

She said that the courage to think and to act are imperative to succeeding in life.

"First we must have the courage to think as individuals, for conformity of thought usually stems from lack of thought," said Miss Smith. "Next we must have the courage to act.

"That which keeps many people from accomplishing what they would is fear, fear of failing and in nothing are they more mistaken. Failures should bring anything but shame, for they are the battle scars of those who tried."

She added that "we must start from where we are. Few, if any, have succeeded who waited until all the conditions were 'just right' before starting."

Miss Smith concluded, "Think, act, and try again — these are the essentials. Leave any one out and success will not come."

"Miss Lockhart also urged her fellow graduates to aim for success.

"Graduating from high school is only the first step," she said. "We must be determined to go on and to find the things in life which are necessary to reach our goals, and achieve success.

"Many of us may not have an easy time in finding the things necessary to acheive

LUBBOCK HIGH School graduating seniors were urged Friday by four of their classmates to celebrate their individuality.

The 343 graduates received their diplomas in a ceremony at the Civic Center.

"The human race advances only by the extra achievements of the individual," Shelby told his classmates. "You are the individual. One who is truly an individual does not feel that his ideas are small and insignificant."

Shelby said that though "the importance of popularity is stressed...if one truly values his individuality, he would not sacrifice his uniqueness for the sake of popularity."

Rudy Alvarado asked his classmates to believe in themselves by becoming aware "of the uniqueness of our own experience."

Man has always gained knowledge through experience, he said, and even unpleasant experiences can give him the "strength and knowledge to stand up for what he believes."

Upon graduation, he continued, "We go off as separate individuals, knowing that these unique experiences we've shared throughout our lives at Lubbock High will be aiding us as we look toward experiences to come."

"One of the most valuable lessons learned as a Westerner is the ability to communicate with people of other backgrounds," she said. "You and I have had the

Texas Legislature Rates 'An F' On Governor's Report Card

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements said Friday he was still giving the Legislature an "F" on his report card, but he held some hope there would not have to be a special session.

Shortly afterwards, the House buried Clements' hopes of getting a Senate-approved bill that would allow wiretapping in narcotics cases by refusing to let a committee consider the bill, 69-71.

"These two are in deep trouble," Clements told his regular weekly news conference, refering to the measures on wiretapping and initiative and referendum.

"It still may be necessary to call a special session but perhaps we can avoid it.

"If they will get on their horse and get down to work, they can get the job done," Clements said.

Howeyer, Clements added, he would call a special session if initiative and referendum are not approved.

"I am set in concrete on that, and I've been saying that for a week," he said. "and if they do not pass a wiretap bill, I will include that in the special session."

Clements said the timing of a special session would depend on what the Legislature leaves undone. Action on a general appropriations bill or a school finance bill would require a quick special session because the new state fiscal period begins Sept. 1.

"On the other hand if a session is needed to take care of initiative and referendum, I would call that when most appropriate ... maybe 1980," he said.

A 1980 special session could hit legislators just when they want to be home campaigning. He reportedly has threatened in private talks with some lawmakers to use wiretapping and initiative referendum as campaign issues in legislative races.

Clements said the idea of letting voters initiate legislation was unpopular with lobbyists because "they would lose a certain amount of control with legislators."

The governor said he had 35 to 40 persons working daily on the compromise general appropriations bill "looking for things for me to cross out of it."

The governor said Sen. Bill Meier, D-Euless, was sponsoring a new bill that would set aside the extra $360 million in state revenue, reported this week by the comptroller, for tax relief only.

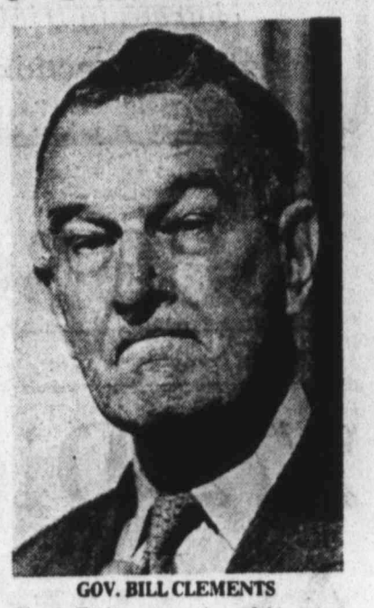

"I fully support this bill," Clements said. "This extra revenue should be returned to the people. There is no reason for the legislature to spend it."

Comptroller Bob Bullock said the additional revenue resulted from unexpected increases in tax revenues, particularly oil taxes and franchise taxes on record corporation profits. Sales tax revenue will be down the next two years, Bullock said.

Clements also had bad news from the House Friday on another of his prime demands, more control by the governor over state agency budgets. The House measure, a proposed constitutional amendment, got a 79-66 vote, far short of the 100 votes needed to send it to the Senate.

He said another measure that would give him power to designate chairmen of state commissions and board that he appoints "probably would not go."

On the other hand, Clements said, a number of his recommendations have been approved by the Legislature including a bill to let him remove appointees he has named, a plan to merge three energy-related agencies into one statewide energy council, and expansion of state offices in Washington and Mexico City.

GOV. BILL CLEMENTS

Hope Fades For Clement's Wiretap Bill

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements' hope for getting a bill through this legislative session legalizing electronic snooping as a tool to crack drug cases vanished Friday

The House refused, 69-71, to suspend its rules and allow the House Criminal Jurisprudence Committee to hold an immediate public hearing on the bill without posting public notice.

Without that authorization, the bill is dead, because House rules require five days' notice, and the legislative session ends at midnight Monday.

Clements said earlier in the day that wiretapping would be on his agenda for a special session, if he calls one on some other issue.

Rep. Lynn Nabers, committee chairman, who openly opposes the bill as it came from the Senate only yesterday, made the motion to allow a hearing.

He said he made the motion because the bill was "a major issue of the governor, one I think we ought to give the courtesy to him to run with the issue."

But Nabers' comments indicated he had to mentally hold his nose to make the motion.

"I've tried to keep an open mind on the proposal. ... It's not just a wiretap bill, it's a bugging bill," the Brownwood lawyer told reporters after the vote.

He said he was certain there would "be a concentrated effort to pass that bill in a special session."

"A lot of calls were made this morning in support of it," he said. Asked who made the calls, he said local sheriffs and the Department of Public Safety.

"Some of my committee received some of those calls," Nabers said.

Clements' bill, passed by the Senate on Thursday, 22-7, would have allowed electronic surveillance only in narcotics cases. Local police departments could not own wiretapping equiment, and all listening devices would be in the custody of the DPS.

In addition, a tap could be installed only with the approval of the presiding judge of the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals, and an unauthorized tap could result in a 10-year prison sentence.

The Senate confirmed the appointment of Harrel "Eddie" Chiles as a North Texas State University regent by a 28-3 vote.

Some of the Fort Worth industrialist's remarks, often heard in statewide radio spots encouraging voters to "fire" politicians, were called "totally ignorant" by Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena.

A bill that would permit the state to prosecute law officers and prison guards who violate prisoner's civil rights was sent to the governor. Officers who kill prisoners in their custody could face a maximum life sentence if the measure is signed into law.

The proposal, sponsored by Sen. Jack Ogg, D-Houston, cleared the Legislature after the Senate voted 30-0 to accept House amendments.

A custodian of public records who refuses to release those records could be sent to jail and fined up to $1,000 under a bill passed by the Senate.

The measure, sponsored by Sen. Bill Moore, D-Bryan, and Rep. Paul Ragsdale, D-Dallas, was sent to the governor on a voice vote.

A proposed constitutional amendment that would allow the Legislature to authorize banks to use unmanned teller machines was cleared for voter scrutiny.

The Senate accepted a House-made change, 31-0. The proposal will be placed on a November statewide election ballot.

Another proposed constitutional change that would send most criminal appeals to existing courts of civil appeals was approved by a 107-28 House vote.

A proposal to give Gov. Bill Clements more authority to scrutinize the state budget failed in the House. Representatives voted 79-66 for the measure, far short of the 100 votes needed.

The measure, a key part of Clements' program, would have authorized the Legislature to pass a law in 1981 enabling the governor to move money from agencies with a surplus to those with unforeseen needs.

The governor also could have been authorized to block an expenditure or order one if an agency refused to spend funds approved by the Legislature.

The creation of the state's largest water district to import out-of-state water to the Texas High Plains was tentatively approved by the Senate on voice vote.

The bill creating the Ogallala Water Import Authority — which would include most of the state overlying the vast underground Ogallala water formation — faces another vote before the House can consider Senate changes.

Senate Confirms Chiles As University Regent

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate confirmed the appointment Friday of Harrel "Eddie" Chiles as a North Texas State University regent despite a senator's comment some of Chiles' public remarks are "totally ignorant."

Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, also expressed concern that Chiles "might have a real problem" trying to serve as a regent.

"He approaches every issue with an open mouth and a closed mind," said Brooks.

Several other senators supported Chiles in Senate speeches.

Chiles, president of the Western Corp. in Fort Worth, was confirmed 28-3, with Brooks and Sens. Oscar Mauzy, D-Dallas, and Gene Jones, D-Houston, voting against him.

A vote on Chiles' confirmation was postponed twice so a few senators could listen to tapes of some of Chiles' radio advertisements, which urge Texans to "fire" politicians who do not represent the people.

Chiles declares in one ad, "I think our government should defend our shores, deliver our mail and fire half the bureaucrats today, the other half tomorrow and leave us alone."

Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, said he was voting for Chiles despite his "idiotic views."

Brooks described Chiles' remarks as "intemperate, to some extent irresponsible ... and to a great extent completely uninformed and ... yeah, totally ignorant — Sen. (Bill) Moore's helping me out a great deal."

Brooks smiled and nodded at Moore, D-Bryan, who apparently had supplied the phrase "totally ignorant."

Sen. A.R. Schwartz, D-Galveston, said the radio commercials were "no worse than some other commercials I've heard. They're about the level of what you'd expect from a fellow running for governor."

Sen. Bill Meier, D-Euless, predicted Chiles would be an asset as a regent by "bringing business judgment" to the board.

"He is a self-made man who started with virtually nothing and through the free enterprise system has been very successful," said Sen. Tom Creighton, D-Mineral Wells. "He is opinionated, if you will, and very dedicated."

"He's like a lot of us. He's had a lot of hard knocks in life ... he's very qualified," said Sen. E.L. Short, D-Tahoka.

Sen. Roy Blake, D-Nacogdoches, said Chiles reportedly had commented he did not care whether he was confirmed — "he had all the jobs he needed."

"That's the kind of men we need," said Blake.

Thunderstorms Missed Most Area Towns

Although forecasters say there is a 40 percent chance of rain for the South Plains today, thunderstorms that cropped up over the region Friday afternoon apparently missed most area towns.

The National Weather Service issued a severe thunderstorm warning for Gaines, Yoakum and Terry Counties shortly before 6 p.m. However, local residents reported no more than trace amounts of rain.

But in Eastern New Mexico, Hobbs was hit about 6 p.m. by a thunderstorm bringing marble-size hail and heavy rains that produced street flooding. The city's civil defense director said that 1.2 inches of rain fell in Hobbs within an hour, but aside from widespread stalling of cars, no damage was reported.

Friday's storms were produced by a combination of an inflow of Gulf moisture and an upper level low pressure system moving slowly into the region from California. As the low continues its eastward march, weathermen say, the chance for widely scattered thundershowers averaging about a half-inch of rain will remain in the Memorial Day weekend forecasts.

Lubbock area temperatures are expected to be reach 75 degrees today before dropping into the upper 50s tonight.

Mostly cloudy skies should continue to blanket the region, accompanied by 15-20 mph southerly winds.

Ogallala Water Import Board Approved By Texas Senate

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate tentatively approved a bill Friday that would create the largest water district in Texas — the Ogallala Water Import Authority — to bring out-of-state water to the Texas High Plains.

The authority would include all of the state overlying the vast underground Ogallala water formation, except Borden, Crosby, Dickens and Garza counties.

"Where you going to get the water?" Sen. Roy Blake, D-Nacogdoches, asked Senate sponsor E.L. Short, D-Tahoka.

"That's the $64 question or a little better even than that," replied Short.

He said the authority was needed to even explore for water.

"We'd love to help you out, but if we did there wouldn't be anything there (East Texas) in the future," said Sen. Ed Howard, D-Texarkana.

Sen. Bob Price, R-Pampa, said the authority would be "looking to Arkansas and the Mississippi River, hopefully to import water."

The authority could accept state loans but not grants.

It also would have the power to issue bonds and to levy property taxes of up to 50 cents on each $100 to finance the authority's projects.

The Duke Named 'Texas Ranger'

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements made John Wayne an honorary Texas Ranger Friday, saying the movie star is "a man whho has exemplified what the Texas spirit and the Texas Rangers are all about."

Clements also set aside Saturday as a special day of tribute to the actor, who is battling cancer in Los Angeles.

Wayne portrayed a Texas Ranger in "The Searchers," one of his many movie roles.

Clements said the unusual honor had been bestowed on the movie star by the State Public Safety Commission, the policy board over the Texas Rangers law enforcement organization.

"John Wayne has brought enjoyment and entertainment to countless citizens throughout the world during his career," Clements said. "He is a great American and a real patriot.

The governor said the framed certificate was being sent to Wayne Friday.

Solon Views Soviet Threat

HAUPPAUGE, N.Y. (AP) — The United States faces a dangerous threat from the Soviet Union over the next five years, according to Sen. Patrick Daniel Moynihan.

Speaking here Thursday at the 80th annual dinner of the Nassau County Bar Association, Moynihan said the military balance between totalitarian states and the free world has shifted against democracies and the Soviets now realize their strategic advantage.

"We are facing a period of most onerous peril," the New York Democrat said. "We're going to have the worst the five years of our national life. God have mercy on this republic."

Moynihan, a former U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, said the five years ahead will be years of tension, problems and setbacks of a magnititude "we have not known before as a people."

Moon Walk Talk Set

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — Astronaut Neil Armstrong, who admits he'd rather talk about something else, has decided to hold a press conference next month on the upcoming 10th anniversary of his walk on the moon.

ARMSTRONG

"On the fifth anniversary, we were deluged with requests and he turned them all down," said Al Kuettner, University of Cincinnati director of information. "When he came here, he was determined he was going to be a farmer and a university professor.

"He tried ignoring them. He tried not answering. But they just kept coming."

Armstrong has turned down most requests for interviews since he joined the University of Cincinnati faculty in 1971. University officials said the increasing number of requests brought by the upcoming anniversary helped bring about a decision to hold the June 11 conference.

Armstrong also will appear, this time with other astronauts, at a news conference to be held by National Aeronautics and Space Administation in Washington on July 20, the anniversary of man's first walk on the moon.

'Roots' Relic Burned

HENNING, Tenn. (AP) — State fire marshals are investigating a fire that heavily damaged the house where Pulitzer Prize-winning author Alex Haley first heard tales of his African ancestors.

"Arson is believed to be the cause," Police Chief George McKee Jr. said Thursday. "There was no light meter hooked up and the house was not occupied."

The blaze broke out early Thursday morning and volunteer firemen from Henning and nearby Ripley fought the flames for more than five hours, McKee said.

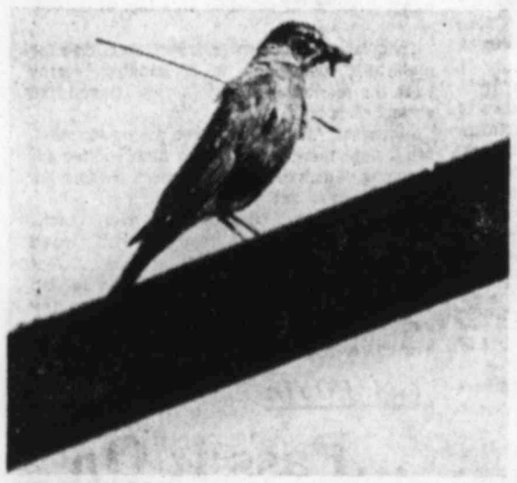

HALEY

The two-story frame house was built in 1918 by Will Palmer, a successful lumber dealer, who was Haley's grandfather.

It was on the house's front porch that Haley listened to his grandmother tell the family legend that led the onetime Coast Guard chief petty officer to search out his African roots.

Haley's 1976 book, "Roots," is the story of how his family was descended from an African who was sold into slavery in the 1700s. In addition to becoming a best-seller, the story became an award-winning television series.

The house was dedicated as a national historical place two years ago during ceremonies attended by Haley.

Sexy Nun Photo Defended

NEW YORK (AP) — Ralph Ginzburg, who once spent eight months in jail for publishing an obscene magazine, pledged financial support Friday for a City College of New York campus newspaper that lost its funding after printing a sexually explicit photograph of a woman dressed as a nun.

GINZBURG

Ginzburg said he had promised Alex Coroneos, news editor of The Observation Post, he would fund the paper's publication next semester, from September to January.

Ginzburg figures the cost will be about $3,000. He said he would pay the printer's bills or buy ads in the paper in an equivalent amount. The ads would be signed, "From a Friend," he said.

Students at the college voted Tuesday night to cut off financing of the newspaper.

"My own taste and sensibilities are as violently offended as are anyone else's over the crude photograph they published, but something far more important than taste is involved here, namely freedom of press," said Ginzburg, who publishes Moneysworth and American Business and operates a 200,000-member book club called "The Erotic Art Book Society."

Dog Snuffs Out Blaze

COURTLAND, Ala. (AP) — Buck the German shepherd is a firefighter. He has hated fire since his mistress, Mrs. Turner Roberts, was injured in a kitchen blaze about a year ago.

And his master, Turner Roberts, thinks Buck may have saved his life when a fire broke out Wednesday night in a van parked in the carport of their home.

Roberts said the dog apparently used a jacket to snuff out a blaze ignited by a hand-held spotlight he had carelessly left on the seat of the van.

When company came to visit, Roberts said, he left the spotlight and the dog in the van while he went inside the house.

Two hours later he came out.

"When I opened the door, a cloud of smoke blasted me in the face and Buck jumped out with my jacket in his mouth," Roberts said.

"It was charred around the edges and was still smoldering."

Roberts theorized that the dog had dragged the jacket from the back of the seat, put out the fire, then shook the jacket until it stopped burning.

He said the van's tank was filled with gasoline and it probably would have exploded in the carport.

Since his wife was burned, Roberts said, Buck has been known to grab burning newspapers in his mouth and shake them until the flames go out.

Carter Seeks Demo Assistance In Dealing With U.S. Problems

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter conceded on Friday that the public sees its political leadership as suffering from "paralysis, stagnation and drift" and asked Democrats to close ranks behind him in dealing with the nation's problems.

In an appearance before the Democratic National Committee's spring meeting, Carter said the country faces severe problems and that the public obviously has doubts about whether elected officials are equal to the challenge.

The president also said he looks forward to the 1980 elections, despite the problems he faces.

Carter told the Democrats he was not announcing his plans to seek re-election, "but I have never backed down from a fight."

The president said if he does run, he will take his effort to every precinct in the nation "and I have no doubt it would be successful."

In a blunt address to the party leaders, Carter warned the Democrats that the public sees the government, which the Democrats dominate, as stricken with "paralysis, stagnation and drift."

"The American people do not like it, and neither do I," he said. "You are leaders of our party. I need your help and support. If those of us in positions of responsibility are unwilling to take the heat, to make unpopular decisions, to stand up and fight for them, to offer answers to complex questions, then we will have failed in our hour of history.

"We have never failed our country, we Democrats, and I don't believe we will fail it now," he said.

Carter's comments came at the close of a turbulent week of intra-party squabbling, including the beginnings of a movement to dump him from the Democrats' 1980 ticket.

Earlier in the week, the House Democratic Caucus rejected Carter energy policies in harsh language. And five House Democrats announced plans to seek an alternative to Carter for the next presidential nomination.

Democrats in Cleveland also were putting together a movement to draft Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., for the party's presidential nomination.

But Carter got lengthy standing ovations before and after his appearance and was interrupted by applause several times, despite his blunt message.

"Too many Americans today watch the spectacle of politicians grappling with the complex issues of energy and inflation," Carter said. "They see the demagoguery and the political timidity and wonder if we who are in office are equal to the challenge."

Carter said Congress was being "pushed and pulled in every direction by hundreds of well-financed and powerful special interests" and accused the lawmakers of wasting their time and clouding the issue on energy.

"The times we live in call for plain talk, call for political courage," Carter said.

Carter said, however, that he was not attacking Congress and part of the problem stems from the public's inability to accept national problems, especially energy problems. But he faulted Congress for failing to act on petroleum questions, health care costs and other critical issues.

Survivors Of Light Plane Crash Recovered In Idaho

CHALLIS, Idaho, (AP) — For 15 days, Brent Dyer and Donna Johnson huddled in the snow-covered remains of a small airplane, living on sunflower seeds, candy and moss from stream beds, and burning gasoline from the wreckage to keep warm.

For five more days the two Canadians wandered through the rugged White Cloud mountains, before finally stumbling onto an abandoned mine where they found help Thursday.

"They were happy to be back with people," said Custer County Sheriff Sid Teuscher. "Dyer mentioned several times he wanted a hot fudge sundae, and they were enjoying coffee."

Their story launched a renewed search Friday for the pilot, Norm Pischke, 35, who set out on foot days ago to get help and hasn't been seen since.

Searchers on Friday spotted the downed plane, a Cessna 172 Skyhawk, about 20 miles west of the mine site where the two survivors found help. They expect to find the body of Miss Johnson's father, Donald Johnson, 50, who authorities said apparently died of injuries a few days after the crash.

The light plane crashed May 5 en route from Livingston, Mont., to Boise, Idaho. A search for the missing plane was abandoned one week later.

Authorities said the pilot was flying to Boise to pick up a puppy.

The survivors stumbled onto the abandoned Livingston mine, 45 miles southwest of Challis at the end of the Big Boulder Creek Road, on Thursday. They were met by Elmer Swanson, who works in the area.

They were treated for minor cuts, bruises and frostbite and released Thursday night from the North Custer Medical Center.

Dyer, 25, and Ms. Johnson, 18, both from Estevan, Saskatchewan, had breakfast Friday at a motel in Challis. Motel clerk Tom Butts said they would not discuss their ordeal until they could see family members, who he said were en route from Canada.

"I would say they are amazingly well for what they have been through," said Dr. Richard Maxwell, who examined the pair. "It's a pretty emotional thing for these two to go through."

Teuscher said the pair lived off some candy and sunflower seeds from the plane and moss from stream beds. They burned gasoline from the plane in an effort to ward off cold and snow, which had almost covered the aircraft.

Five days ago, Dyer and Miss Johnson apparently decided no one was going to come looking for them, the sheriff said.

"All they know is they walked around for five days, and we don't know if they were walking in circles or what," he said.

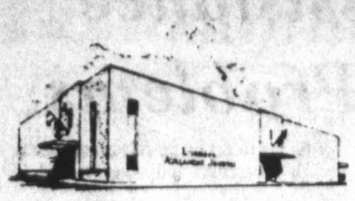

The two seemed in good spirits and were excited about calling their families in Saskatchewan, Teuscher said.

More than 30 Civil Air Patrol planes searched for the craft in valleys along the Montana-Idaho and Wyoming-Idaho borders, without ever covering the area where the crash occurred.

Teuscher said the plane could have been as much as 400 miles off course when it crashed.

Mexico Still Berating 'Uncle'

HINTS OF NEW problems for the U.S. in Latin America were given credence the past few days on two fronts.

In one instance, Panamanian officials reacted angrily to debate in the U.S. Congress over efforts to tighten the financial arrangements associated with the Panama Canal Treaties.

In another, Cuba's Communist President Fidel Castro, made an official visit to Mexico, where he was warmly received by President Jose Lopez Portillo and thousands of cheering residents.

DURING HIS visit, his first to Mexico since launching his "liberation" of Cuba from that nation's shores, Castro, and Portillo, took repeated jabs at the U.S.

Both men joined in praising the "progress" made in Cuba since Castro's takeover, in pledging continued friendship and in painting Uncle Sam as a greedy giant refusing medicine to needy Cubans and equal treatment for Mexicans in the U.S.

It was a script which could have been written in Moscow. And it also was one which says something about the growing anti-American feeling in the Caribbean.

CASTRO'S VISIT, coming as it did in the wake of President Carter's somewhat cool reception and public tongue-lashing in Mexico, should not be lost on the State Department, or Congress.

While every effort should be made to mend fences and seek to work with Mexico, and other Latin American nations for that matter, Washington can not continue to ignore the fact that the thrust of official statements and popular propaganda coming out of such diverse points as Panama and Mexico is one that the United States is working against the interest of this vital area.

The pitch is predictable in that it is one being played in most Third World countries —that the U.S. and other Free World nations "owe" the peoples of those nations a living, or some sort of remuneration for past real or imagined wrongs.

THE TRUTH of the matter is that the U.S. needs Mexico's oil and Mexico realizes this.

But, trade agreements, friendship treaties, even more friendly attitudes toward Mexican nationals who seek to come to the U.S. are two-way streets.

If Mexico and her leaders want to truly work out a new understanding at all levels, it can be done much more quickly and amicably if Mexico shows more restraint in its wild accusations and friends it chooses.

Incentive Not Penalty Needed

A 2-TO-1 VOTE by the House Democratic Caucus to oppose phased deregulation of domestic oil prices shows again how far removed from reality the liberal wing of the party has become.

Since it is non-binding, the 138-69 vote by House members representing the President's own party is first and foremost a political embarrassment to him.

If translated into formal action, however —an unlikely move—the vote to oppose lifting the price controls would be a signal to the price-gouging Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries that Americans lack the will, insight and political wisdom to become more nearly self-sufficient in the production of energy.

OPEC COUNTRIES thus would be free to continue jacking up the world price of oil, as they have done in recent years, with complete assurance that domestic production would continue to be discouraged by price controls.

Under those controls, the price of gasoline has gone up about 16 cents a gallon in the last year due to failure of Carter administration foreign policy coupled with increasing dependence on oil imports at any price.

Failure of anti-business liberals to understand this basic economic fact of life, and to concede that the oil companies kept America adequately supplied with energy at low prices until the politicians began over-regulating them, is a direct cause of the current energy crisis.

Rather than free the industry to solve the problems the politicians have caused, the liberals appear determined either to hold down the price of domestically produced oil or to tax away the increased revenues in such a way that there would be no incentive to find and produce more of it.

THE WAY TO SOLVE the energy supply and price challenges now facing America is to turn the industry loose, giving it every encouragement to develop nuclear, coal and solar power systems while recovering and using oil supplies in the meantime.

Tax incentives, not tax penalties, are needed to keep the wheels of American industry and commerce churning rather than take the defeatist un-American attitude that we must conserve our limited resources and be satisfied with a lower standard of living for all time to come.

If the politicians will quit demagoging for their own purposes and give Americans the straight facts and an econony less encumbered by regulations and not so overburdened by federal spending, the speed with which the energy shortage and runaway prices would moderate would be amazing.

M. STANTON EVANS:

Trade Data Obscured Behind Secrecy Veil

WASHINGTON—I have just come from Federal court where I have filed a suit, on behalf of myself and the National Journalism Center, to obtain release of certain information concerning trade between the United States and the Soviet Union.

By way of background, the National Journalism Center is an organization, of which I am a director, that engages in investigative research, publication, and the training of student journalists.

Other directors include Allan Ryskind of Human Events and Ralph K. Bennett of Readers Digest. In addition, the center has an advisory board of 15 publishers, editors, and other professional journalists.

The information we are trying to obtain concerns the precise goods, technologies, and designs that American firms are trading to the Soviet Union, the companies who are engaged in these transactions, and the dollar amounts of the sales involved.

THESE ARE data which are presently made available in only the most sketchy fashion, or not at all, by the American government. What we do know about such trade is hardly reassuring.

From the researches of scholars such as Antony Sutton and Miles Costick, and the statements of such businessmen as J. Fred Bucy, president of Texas Instruments, it is apparent numerous items have been traded to the Soviet Union which in various ways have strengthened the potential of its war machine.

Among the items made available to the Soviets have been jet-engine technology, miniature ball-bearing technology required for missile guidance and so-called "MIRVing" (fitting missiles with multiple warheads), sophisticated computers, and so on.

THE PROBLEM IS that our information on such questions is fragmentary, based on data scholars are unable to unearth and information that happens to surface in the course of political debate.

The public has been deprived of systematic data on this subject by a policy of official secrecy.

For the past two years, the National Journalism Center and I have been trying to get from the Department of Commerce the kind of information that is the subject of our suit.

At every stage in this process of inquiry, our appeals have been denied.

The stated reasons for this denial have been two-fold. One, that release of such data is exempted from Freedom of Information disclosure because it would give away trade secrets of the companies receiving export licenses.

SECOND, THAT disclosure of such data would somehow not be in the "national interest." While numerous legal complexities are involved in all of this, I will hazard the view that both these explanations are on their face implausible.

That the desire for confidentiality in this area is to protect the trade secrets of one company from the prying eyes of another seems extremely doubtful.

Competitive firms in the computer business, for example, have a pretty good idea of who is selling what to whom, and in the matter of trade with Moscow undoubtedly know a great deal more about each other's sales than does the American public.

It is the public, not the competitor, that is being denied this information.

THE "NATIONAL interest" argument is even more implausible. Obviously, the Communists know who is trading with them, in what quantities, and with what strategic implications.

By what possible stretch of logic can it be argued that data fully known to the Soviet Union should be denied to the American people? In my opinion, the real reason for the denial is otherwise:

The fact that, if the American people were fully aware of the nature and extent of such trade, they would demand a tightening of the laws concerning it.

I believe the administration shares this assessment of the likely public attitude—hence the desire to conduct this policy as much as possible under the cloak of secrecy.

It may be that I am wrong about all this, and that the American people, if fully informed about our policy in this area, would support it wholeheartedly. But that is something we will never know until the veil of secrecy is lifted.

GEORGE F. WILL:

The Tracks Of Time

The museum exuberantly leaps across "The Main Line of America."

To get from the museum's main section to the one on the other side of the tracks, you pass down a walkway toward the luminous blue of the stained glass windows created by Marc Chagall in honor of—really—the fine arts in America and the memory of His Honor, Richard J. Daley.

Its setting and its history make the Art Institute, 100 years old last Thursday (May 24), a symbol of this city, and an illustration of an admirable relationship between commerce and culture.

But Chicago still is a working class city of those small, proud houses you pass on the way in from O'Hare airport.

It still is, to some extent, Carl Sandburg's city of the broad shoulders, hog butcher of the world, stacker of wheat, and all that.

Yet in addition to being a great blue-collar metropolis, and because it is that, it also has a magnificent museum.

Its collection is less comprehensive than that of New York's Metropolitan or Washington's National Gallery, but it is second only to those American museums, and its collection of Impressionists is unsurpassed in America.

IT IS A monument to the entrepreneurs, and civilizing women, who built Chicago after the 1871 fire.

The Art Institute was begun as a brave assertion of civility in a rough-and-tumble city.

Those who have done the asserting through the years have included some of the most famous names in American business—Armour, Palmer, Ryerson, Field, Ward, McCormick.

But as a Chicagoan has written of the Art Institute, "in a larger sense, it is also a product of numberless stockyard laborers and department store clerks, plant employes and sawmill workers, all of the anonymous hordes whose toil built the fortunes that purchased it. In that sense, they built it with their own rough hands."

The rough, or at least unpolished manners of some of the men who bought the Institute's first paintings provoked ridicule.

WHEN A Chicagoan said of his purchase of fine Dutch paintings, "They are corkers, every one of them," a New York newspaper said, merrily:

"(W)e have no doubt whatever these corkers are the largest specimens...that Mr. Hutchinson could find in Europe.

"He probably paid $1,000 a foot for them, and we assume the citizens of Chicago will give him a triumphal procession along the lakefront when they arrive, carrying them and him in huge floats, drawn by a team of milk-white Berkshire hogs."

But when the laughter died, Chicago had a collection of corkers, built with the self-confidence characteristic of the city.

Without waiting for learned opinion to give its imprimatur to the Impressionists, Chicagoans made pilgrimages to Monet at his lily pond, and with the help of a friend, Mary Cassatt, the American painter, they made superb use of their money.

TODAY THE Institute has more dues-paying members (65,000) than any other American museum.

In the mid-1960s, about 750,000 people visited it each year. Now 1.5 million do, and two million when there is a popular special exhibit.

There is a general boom in museum attendance, and no single explanation seems satisfactory.

There is, of course, more leisure time; and a larger portion of the population has attended colleges.

But it also is true that museums are one measure of society's attitude about the present.

The more complex and bewildering the world seems, the more people think they should know about the past.

IT IS A splendidly ornate space that suggests how relatively impoverished our senses are in today's public places.

And it is altogether right that works by two alumni of the School of the Art Institute, Thomas Hart Benton's "Nighthawks" and Grant Wood's "American Gothic," elemental American urban and American rural, hang side by side, beside the railroad tracks, in the elemental American city.

DONALD F. GRAFF:

Odd Man Gets Fill

THE HORROR scenes coming out of California these days aren't the work of the Hollywood studios.

They are being played out at gas stations where multiblock lines are the rule, rudeness is common and punchouts not infrequent in a too-much-demand for not-enough-supply situation the state is trying to control with its "even-odd" rationing system, permitting motorists to fuel up on alternate days according to license plate numbers.

The term is well chosen, the last word being a particularly apt description of the performance of many motorists under the pressure of the emergency.

THE KING may be gone but the sport of kings is back in business in Iran.

A dispatch from Tehran reports that the luxurious race track the shah opened only last year has been permitted to reopen after the revolution's religious leaders decided that racing does not violate the Koran's prohibition of gambling.

It was decreed that placing bets on horses is permissable since it is merely "wagering."

Sure, sure.

IN A FOLLOW-UP to the showing in West Germany of the American-produced TV dramatization of the Nazi era, "Holocaust," the national radio network and the government's Office for Political Education polled viewer reactions with some interesting results.

Fifty percent of adults said that they had learned things from the series they had not known about that period of their own national past and the percentage was even higher for the 14-19 age group—70 percent.

Compared with the polls taken before the showings, approval of the 1944 plot to assassinate Hitler jumped from 49 percent to 63 percent.

There was no change on one point, however. For a steady 30 percent of respondents, Nazism remains a good idea badly carried out.

The more things change...?

JUST A little bit late, the Soviet press has finally gotten around to reviewing the hit American movie of a few years back, "Saturday Night Fever."

It's worse than a bomb, as far as the weekly Sovietskaya Kultura is concerned.

By means of a constant bombardment of disco, "the stereotype of the new behavior is forcibly dinned into our heads."

Well, maybe so. At least that last is a subject the Soviets know plenty about.

FOR AMERICAN firms anxious to keep a step ahead in the race to do business with China, a New York importer has come up with the perfect new item of office equipment.

It is a Chinese typewriter, the real thing from Shanghai and equipped with 2,500 characters, presumably sufficient to record all the steel mills, hotels, soft drinks and other Western wonders the mainlanders are so eager to buy.

Available for $1,750, it is capable of writing forward, backward, up and down. At that price, that would seem about the least that ought to be expected of it.

★

STILL ON HIGH prices, there's some good and bad news about beverages.

Coffee rose in price 280 percent during the period 1967-78, according to the Consumer Price Index review of the American Council of Life Insurance.

That's the bad news. And if it's enough to drive you to drink, here's the good news. During the same period, whiskey prices went up only 23 percent.

VIRGINIA PAYETTE:

Back For Seconds

EVERYBODY RETURNS from England with plans to go back and see the places they didn't have time to visit. I'm going back to the places I did get to—but didn't get to see.

I got a peek at some of them...once or twice I even got inside for a few minutes:..and a few I knew were just down the road but couldn't be worked into the timetable.

It was a fascinating switch on the "if-it's-Tuesday-it-must-be-Belgium" bit. Toss eight working journalists into a bus for a five-day tour of 13 quaint country inns and what you get is "if it's Tuesday, we must be behind schedule."

The guides were great. They took us to all the famous tourist attractions and described them glowingly—but they wouldn't let us out of the bus.

Had to hurry on down the road to the next famous spot, which we were allowed to look at through the windows.

WE GOT OUR first hint of how it was going to be on the first morning when we "assembled in foyer" and climbed aboard for a 90-minute tour of London.

The lady in charge, who acted out three centuries of British history in an hour and a half, whisked us past dungeons, cathedrals, the Tower of London, the Houses of Parliament, Trafalgar Square and London Bridge—talking a monarch-a-minute and never once opening the door.

Off to St. Paul's cathedral, where we all piled out for an inside look at the most celebrated church in London. But they were ordaining a bishop that morning; no lay persons allowed.

Back in the bus for a blurred glimpse of Hyde Park on the way to Oxford. But the Oxford town fathers were in a snit about too many tourist buses rattling past its hallowed halls, so we were shuttled off to Blenheim Palace.

TROUBLE IS we were "running a little late" and our elderly lady guide was forced to do her thing at 78 instead of 33. She gave it her best shot, leaping over ropes and scurrying through gilded rooms, but the poor soul was quite breathless at the end.

Next morning we "assembled in foyer" at Stratford-Upon-Avon for a tour of Shakespeare country, and this time we had to rush to make it to the Dirty Duck pub for lunch and a matinee performance of "Cymbeline" at the Royal Shakespeare Theater.

We did squeeze in a visit to Will's daughter's house and to his burial place in Holy Trinity church. Then it was off to Anne Hathaway's Cottage.

Next stop was Arden Farm, where Shakespeare's mother was born. We stopped for 10 minutes and gazed through the windows while the guide told us all about it.

BACK TO Stratford, passing Shakespeare's birthplace, to the Dirty Duck where "lunch" was a stand-up sandwich at the bar.

That night we bedded down in Cirencester, where Roman ruins abound but which we couldn't see in the dark. So they opened up the Corinium Museum and we looked at models. Next morning we "assembled" for the dash to Bath.

This was a 30-minute caper which a startled guide had thought was going to be two hours.

She settled for a whirlwind ride past the famous "royal crescent" buildings, pointing out that "just up that street is a glorious abbey which you can't see from here...and around that corner is the Victoria art gallery which you don't have time to visit...and here are the 2,000-year-old Roman baths and you have just 20 minutes."

ON OUR WAY to Stonehenge we got lucky. The driver missed a turn and wound up in Salisbury. So, since we were there, our guide pried 30 minutes out of the schedule for a tour of the 700-year-old cathedral.

Then back to Stonehenge, where we circled the prehistoric monuments in 15 minutes. Nearby were the mysterious "white horses" carved into ancient chalk hills.

So it went. And if you've been paying attention, you'll note there wasn't much time allotted for shopping. Which didn't matter much because nobody had any money.

I came home with most of my traveler's checks untouched, uncashed and unspent, which pleased Old Dad enormously. Wait till he finds out that what I brought back will just about cover the tab to rent a car for a return pilgrimage to Oxford...Bath...the Cotswold countryside...and maybe even a long, leisurely lunch at the Dirty Duck.

L.M. BOYD:

...Pass It On

OUR LOVE and War man's files contain various brief accounts of how unattached men and women have gone about meeting prospective matrimonial partners.

Among these: A young widow in San Francisco apprenticed without pay in the shop of a toupee maker. Within six months, she was married. But a year later, she was divorced. "I knew I had no prejudice whatsoever against bald men," she said. "What I didn't know was I can't stand bald men who wear toupees."

Court Order Frees Furr's To Continue Corporate Operations

By KAY BELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Fort Worth Federal Judge John Flowers Friday signed a temporary court order allowing the financially-troubled Furr's Inc. to continue its operations as a "debtor in possession" pending the firm's reorganization under Chapter XI of the Bankruptcy Act.

Attorney Henry Simon Jr., who along with J.K. Skillern is representing Furr's in Fort Worth, said Friday's meeting of company executives, attorneys and creditors in Flowers' Fifth Circuit Court office to discuss the order provision, "went just fine."

"Everything is going according to schedule and progressing very well," Simon said.

Friday's order includes a provision that will secure all future deliveries to the company with a lien on current inventory. That means that should a creditor not receive payment for future shipments, he would be allowed to repossess certain Furr's property that is worth the amount of that debt.

No provisions have been made for payment of the unsecured $60 to $70 million Furr's owes, but Simon said the initial meeting of the creditors tentatively is set for the first week in July. The order gives Furr's until July 1 to file budgets covering all quarters of operation up through the end of calendar 1981.

With the help of the order, Simon said, "We have promised attorneys for en Furr's."

Furr's attorneys contacted about "100 creditors" — who are owed some $30 million — of almost 2,500 crediotrs before filing the order. Members of an unofficial ad hoc committee of 11 major creeditors gave their consent to the request.

Also included in the order, which is necessary to permit Furr's to stay in business, is the requirement that Furr's close all 10 stores in its Phoenix division and offer for sale all leases, fixtures and inventory. Company officials say part of their financial woes stem from the Arizona stores and originally had planned to close at least two of the outlets.

Furr's stocks the Phoenix stores from its Lubbock distribution center and claims aggressive competitors in Phoenix are responsible for the losses there.

Attorneys for both Furr's and creditors and Flowers are scheduled to meet again this weekend to discuss possible reparations for suppliers who have shipped goods to the company within 10 days prior to the filing of the bankruptcy petition. Some creditors expressed fears that their shipments will not be secured under the temporary order.

Two complaints submitted by creditors have been placed on hold until the meetings can be held this weekend.

Among Furr's major trade creditors are Gold Bond Stamps Company, owed $5.12 million, and Sperry & Hutchison-son, owed $1.5 million.

Lubbock creditors include: Borden Company, $506,606; Plains Poultry, $374,848; Calmaine, $308,267; Coca Cola, Lubbock, $197,001; Rainbo Baking of Lubbock, $196,536; Bell Dairy Products, $109,055; and Baird's Bakery, $93,854.

Furr's sales exceeded $5 million with a net loss of $2.3 million reported for fiscal 1977. A fully audited 1978 financial report has not been released.

Simon said the arrangement Furr's will file with its creditors will not erase the company's debts, but will provide a step-by-step method of payment.

Smaller creditors ordinarily are paid off first for ease of administration, he said. But the plan of payment must be approved by 51 percent of the creditors — that percentage based upon both the number of creditors and the amount owed them.

The privately-owned supermarket chain is chaired by Roy K. Furr. Furr and the company's newly appointed president, Pat Murphy, were in Fort Worth Friday for the "debtor-in-possession" discussion. They are expected to remain through the weekend for the remainder of creditor meetings.

Furr's Cafeterias Inc., a publicly-owned firm, is headed by Roy Furr's brother Don. Furr's Cafeterias Thursday reported its earnings will be cut $160,000, or seven cents per share, because of a small ownership in Furr's Inc.

Democrats Praise Killer Bees Of Texas

AUSTIN (AP) — A resolution praising the Texas "Killer Bees" senators for their opposition to a split presidential primary measure was adopted Friday by the Democratic National Committee.

The Killer Bees blocked Senate consideration of a separate-day presidential primary measure by staging a quorum-breaking walkout for five days.

The resolution, adopted by the committee without dissent, praised the 12 senators "for their courageous dedication to the principle of party integrity."

Calling the proposed split primary "basically unfair," the committee urged "all Democrats to assist and join them (split primary opponents) in their effort."

Texas Democratic Chairman Billy Goldberg of Houston introduced the resolution at the committee's meeting in Washington, according to the state Democratic party.

Carter Taking Refuge At Camp David Retreat

CAMP DAVID, Md. (AP) — President Carter flew here by helicopter Friday for a long holiday weekend.

A brief hailstorm swept over the presidential retreat half an hour before Carter's arrival and more bad weather seemed likely.

Record Holiday Crowds Park Cars, Jam Planes, Buses, Trains

By The Associated Press

The Memorial Day weekend began tragically Friday, when a plane loaded with holiday travelers crashed shortly after take-off from O'Hare International Airport in Chicago. It was the worst disaster in U.S. aviation history.

An American Airlines DC-10 carrying more than 270 persons crashed and burned at midafternoon. Police at the scene said there were no survivors.

American spokeswoman Mary Rose Noel said the plane, en route to Los Angeles, lost an engine on takeoff. And a witness, Robert Anderson, said the plane was banking, and continued the bank until it was "almost upside down," before it struck the ground.

Elsewhere, record numbers of Memorial Day weekend travelers wanting to avoid the uncertainty of the gas pumps jammed trains, buses and planes Friday.

Airline bookings were heavier than usual, partially because of the United Airlines strike, bus companies were putting extra vehicles in service, and Amtrak passenger train reservation offices were swamped. Some trains were booked solid.

The National Safety Council estimated that between 500 and 600 people would be killed in traffic accidents this weekend, compared with an average of 380 on a non-holiday, three-day weekend. But Jack Recht, the council's statistics manager, noted that the estimate was made before the gasoline shortage became acute in some areas, and said he believed the estimate would be too high.

Some resort operators had made prior arrangements to ensure sufficient gas for their patrons, like Grossinger's and other hotels in New York's Catskill mountains, which were arranging for stations to give preference to hotel guests.

Other resorts reporting their rooms filled had advertised that they were only a tankful of gas from major cities.

The demand for gasoline by holiday travelers led to a new idea in merchandising in Richmond, Va., where Capitol Floors and Decorating Inc. advertised that, through Memorial Day, it would give away a gallon of gasoline for every square yard of floor covering purchased.

"We've been getting a lot of traffic," said Capitol Floors manager Brian Dillistin. "We expect to do real well with it."

An Associated Press survey found that many stations across the country were running low on fuel as the end of the May allocation period nears. In addition, many station operators, faced with dwindling supplies, said they planned to take all or part of the weekend off.

A survey of 5,973 stations by the American Automobile Association found that 59 percent plan to be open on Saturday, 46 percent on Sunday and 61 percent on Monday.

In California, where gasoline supplies have been the tightest, merchants at most popular parks and resorts said they were optimistic that the shortage had passed its worst stages.

Hotels were filled nearly to the limit in Anaheim, next to Disneyland, and in Reno and Las Vegas, Nev. Three Reno gas stations promised to stay open 24 hours throughout the weekend.

At Ocean City, Md., Ed Ellis, who owns three Exxon stations along the beach, said: "I think we've got lots of gas for everybody that's going to want it and my best advice is just come on down and have a good weekend — we can get you home."

Drivers in Tennessee were promised that they would either find gasoline or get help from state troopers carrying cans of gas in their cruisers. But state Safety Commissioner Gene Roberts warned motorists not to try to carry spare gas cans in their owns cars "because I can't think of anything more dangerous."

Tennessee Energy Authority Director Ed Spitzer said the state had released 1 million gallons of gasoline from an emergency reserve to help stations stay open.

The first anniversary of casino gambling was being observed in Atlantic City, N.J., and hotels and motels were "all close to being totally booked," said city spokesman Carlo Sardella.

Atlantic City stations had an increased fuel allotment, Sardella said, and "many stations closed up during the week to make sure there was enough gas for the weekend."

Amtrak, which has suffered from budget pinches and dwindling ridership, was doing heavy business and spokesman Brian Duff, in Washington, said "there may be some standees on some trains."

All Amtrak trains were being given extra cars where cars are available, Duff said, and extra trains were being added, including a dozen on the Washington-New York run.

The heaviest rail usage outside the Northeast was in California on the Los Angeles-San Diego line, Duff said. Through Wednesday the six daily trains on that route had carried 107,260 passengers this month, well past the 98,837 carried during the full month of April, which had been the line's record.

An estimated 2 million calls were made last week to Amtrak's reservations center in Washington, Duff said, but roughly three-fourths of those calls got only busy signals. Amtrak is training 100 new clerks, he added, and the telephone company is "demanding" that more trunk lines be installed because the high volume affects other telephone customers.

Greyhound and Trailways bus line officials predicted a 25 percent increase in ridership this weekend, and Trailways estimated a 70 percent increase in California.

Greyhound has been running three and four buses on some routes to accommodate the overload, said Jim Redel, Greyhound manager at Kansas City, where the bus terminal was packed Friday morning.

Larry D. Dratzer, assistant manager for Greyhound in the Baltimore-Washington area, said he expected 20 percent to 30 percent more passengers this weekend than on past Memorial Day weekends, largely because of the fuel shortage.

Travelers who preferred to go by air were hindered somewhat by the 55-day strike against United Airlines. Although the airline reached a settlement with its machinists Thursday, it won't be able to get back in operation on most routes until Monday.

Other airlines were jammed with passengers.

Pacific Southwest Airlines has added six flights a day from San Diego to Las Vegas and four flights from Los Angeles to Las Vegas. Hughes Air West has added two flights from Las Vegas to Burbank, Calif.

TWA spokesman Larry Hillyard in Kansas City said almost all flights were leaving with every seat filled. He said there were no delays and no extra flights because "we don't have the equipment to do so, we're using everything we have now."

Exxon Makes Record Takeover Bid For Manufacturing Firm

NEW YORK (AP) — Exxon Corp., the naton's largest oil company, offered Friday to pay $1.165 billion to acquire a manufacturing company Exxon says is needed to develop a device that would cut power consumption in electric motors.

The offer for Reliance Electric Co., if approved, would be the largest cash takeover in the history of American business.

Reliance President B.C. Ames said the offer would be considered by Reliance's board "at an early date." Reliance and Exxon have been holding merger discussions, which Exxon called "business-like and friendly."

The offer for Reliance was for $72 a share, nearly twice the price of the stock when Exxon said May 18 it was interested in making an acquisition.

Exxon claims its new device will make electrical motors more efficient and could save the equivalent of 1 million barrels of oil a day by 1990, equivalent to 6 percent of current oil consumption.

"Reliance has the necessary manufacturing and marketing expertise to enable this significant energy-saving technology to be rapidly commercialized," Exxon said.

Oil companies have come under fire, from President Carter and others, for spending money for things other than the development of new energy sources. But Exxon Chairman C.C. Garvin Jr. said that criticism should not apply to the Reliance deal.

"Exxon believes its commitment to its new energy-saving technology, as reflected by the acquisition of Reliance, will also further national objectives of more efficient energy use and energy conservation," he said.

Garvin also said the costs of acquiring Reliance would not reduce Exxon's "expenditures for energy resource development," but some analysts questioned that claim.

"By using cash, they are really diverting cash away from oil exploration," said Alan Benasuli, an analyst for the Wall Street firm of Drexel Burnham Lambert. "I'm surprised they didn't use stock."

Exxon would not have any trouble paying for Reliance, Benasuli said, noting the company has about $5 billion in cash.

Even if Reliance accepts the proposal, it could run into trouble on antitrust grounds. The Justice Department said it is looking into the offer.

Exxon is the second-largest industrial company in the country, behind only General Motors. It would still be No. 2 if it took over Reliance, which ranks 262nd.

Reliance, based in Cleveland, makes electric motors, telecommunications equipment and Toledo scales, among other products. It earned $64.6 million on sales of $666.3 million in 1978.

Reliance stock was trading at $36.50 on May 18 on the New York Stock Exchange when Exxon said it was interested. It closed at $48.25 Thursday and rose $12.375 Friday to close at $60.625 after the offer was announced.

In addition to offering $72 a share for Reliance common stock, Exxon offered $201.60 a share for each share of Reliance convertible preferred stock.

The previous high for a cash takeover offer was $1.125 billion, made by Brascan Ltd., a Canadian firm, for F.W. Woolworth Co. Woolworth is fighting that proposal, which is still pending.

Government Delays Fuel Tank Hearing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government Friday postponed for six weeks a public hearing on a possible safety defect in the fuel tanks of 1970-73 Ford Mavericks and 1971-73 Mercury Comets.

The hearing had been set for next Tuesday, but was delayed until July 13 at the request of the Ford Motor Co. Ford said it needed more time to evaluate an initial finding by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration that a defect exists.

The agency announced last month that its tests showed the fuel tanks in the Mavericks and Comets are potentially dangerous and could explode into flames in rear end rashes.

The agency said it had received reports of 26 Maverick and Comet rear-impact collisions which caused fuel spillage and fire and resulted in 31 deaths and 19 injuries.

Ford and other interested parties will have a chance to comment at the July hearing, to be held in Washington.

The inquiry could lead to a recall of the estimated 974,000 affected cars still in use. A total of 1.1 million were manufactured.

Ex-Banker Found Innocent By Federal District Jury

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A federal district court jury Friday afternoon acquitted former Plains banker Ben Pate on all seven counts of a federal indictment charging him with misapplication of bank funds.

The jury returned its verdict after 2 1/2 hours of deliberations to end the week-long trial, and Pate and several members of his family gasped and sobbed as U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward read, "Not guilty on all counts."

It also was a victory for Albuquerque, N.M., criminal lawyer Leon Taylor, who said afterwards that he has not lost a case in 4 1/2 years but "was worried about my streak" in the Pate case.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Bob Slough, his face drawn, hurriedly left the courtroom as soon as the jury was dismissed.

Pate, mayor of Plains in Yoakum County and former vice president and cashier at Plains State Bank, was indicted in March by a Lubbock grand jury on five counts charging him with financial misconduct and two counts of making "certain false entries" on government questionnaires in 1976 and 1977.

The first count charged him with ordering a $35,000 check paid on the account of depositor Edward Hunter of Lubbock, who is now deceased, on July 8, 1976, when, the government claimed, he knew that a deposit Hunter made that day with a check on a Lubbock bank probably was not covered with sufficient money in Lubbock.

He also was accused of misconduct by writing $77,000 in checks on an account he had opened at the Plains bank for the construction of a drive-in restaurant he was having built in Plains.

The government contended there was misconduct because the account had insufficient funds to cover the checks after they were written. But Pate testified Thursday that he had arranged financing at a Brownfield bank and an Andrews savings and loan institution and paid the checks with lump-sum financing from the other sources.

With his booming voice reaching every corner of the cavernous federal district courtroom during final arguments Friday morning, Taylor asked in relation to one count involving a $30,000 loan made to a contractor building the restaurant, "Where, anywhere in here, is there anything wrong with that? Where did he violate the law, where did he embezzle, where did he cheat?"

Taylor said the loan later was paid in full and that the bank "didn't lose a dollar" in any of the $141,000 in transactions over which Pate was accused.

He called all of the government charges "frivolous and without merit."

Lubbock Prepares For Memorial Day Activities

Lubbockites will pause with the rest of the nation this weekend to honor the country's war dead with the annual observance of Memorial Day Monday that traditionally ushers in the vacation season.

Lubbock will have three ceremonial observance programs sponsored by veteran's organizations.

There will be ceremonies at 3 p.m. Sunday at the City of Lubbock Cemetery. Services are scheduled at 10:30 a.m. Monday at Resthaven Memorial Cemetery and at 11:15 a.m. at the Peaceful Gardens Cemetery near Woodrow.

The firing squad from Estacado High School's Junior ROTC unit and the Color Guard from Lubbock High School's Junior ROTC unit will be in attendance at the three services sponsored by the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, World War I Barracks and the groups' auxiliaries.

Numerous governmental offices and institutions will be closed Monday.

The Lubbock City Hall and Lubbock County Courthouse will be closed Monday, as will the city's banks and savings and loan institutions.

Also slated to be closed Monday are the federal agency offices in Lubbock, as well as state agency offices including the drivers license office at the Texas Department of Public Safety Saturday and Monday.

Memorial Day observances in Lubbock will be highlighted Wednesday, the traditional day Memorial Day, by a special formal monthly retreat and memorial-type service at Reese Air Force Base.

The event begins at 4:42 p.m. Wednesday in front of the 64th Flying Training Wing headquarters building at Reese AFB.

During the event, Lt. Col. Arnold G. Johnson, installation chaplain at Reese AFB, will give a few remarks in honor of all those who served in the U.S. Armed Forces during the Vietnam conflict. Monday through June 3 has been designated Vietnam Veterans Week throughout the nation.

Also scheduled during the ceremonies at Reese AFB, which are open to the public, are a three volley rifle salute by the Reese AFB honor guard, a flyover of four T-38s, and presentation of awards.

Shooting Trial Jury Deadlocks

A 140th District Court jury, after three hours of deliberation Friday, was unable to reach a verdict in the attempted murder trial of a former nightclub bouncer, accused of shooting a young Tahoka man at a Lubbock club last December.

Jurors said afterwards they deadlocked with nine jurors wanting to convict defendant Jesse Glenn for aggravated assault in the shooting of 21-year-old Joe Clayton "Clay" Dodson and three wanting acquittal.

The panel entered the jury room at noon Friday after hearing final arguments from First Assistant Criminal District Jim Bob Darnell and defense attorney Bennie House of Houston.

Darnell waived his right to opening arguments, and House spoke for nearly an hour in defense of the 32-year-old Glenn, whom he described as a passive person who shot Dodson out of fright because he thought Dodson was pulling a knife.

House strongly emphasized the testimony of Lubbock police detectives Joe Hargrave, Aubrey Stark, Rivie Garrett and Lloyd Brown who testified for the defense that Glenn has a good reputation for being peaceful and truthful.

Dodson, shot in the head outside a 5203 34th St. club last Dec. 3, has been paralyzed on the right side of his body and able to speak only with a severe speech impediment since the shooting.

Darnell first defended Dodson by saying, "Sure, Clay Dodson was upset. Wouldn't you be upset if you were there with six friends and you were the only one asked to leave?"

Disputing a defense claim that the .357 magnum pistol with which Dodson was shot in the head discharged accidentally, Darnell held up the pistol and said, "You've got to put your finger on the trigger and pull it, and that's exactly what Jesse Glenn did.

"He can stand up here and apologize, but he wasn't sorry that he pulled that gun out.

"There is one person who has not been able to testify, and that's Clay Dodson, and he'll never be able to because of what that man did," Darnell said, turning and pointing at the stocky, mustachioed defendant.

The jury began deliberations on the case a few minutes after 11 a.m. today.

Two Leaking Gas Bombs Found In Army Arsenal

DENVER (AP) — The Army said Friday that two leaking Weteye nerve gas bombs have been fond among 896 of the weapons being tested at the Rocky Mountain Arsenal here before shipment to Utah.

The Army said "miniscule" amounts of deadly nerve agent GB were found in the airtight shipping containers encasing the two bombs. The released nerve agent represented no danger to the public or arsenal workers, the Army said.

But an Army enlisted woman assigned to the testing program at the arsenal remained hospitalized Friday after showing symptoms similar to nerve gas poisoning.

Spec. 5 Denise Garnett, 23, of Englewood, N.J., was in stable condition at Fitzsimons Army Medical Center in Denver, where she had been taken Wednesday night, a medical center spokesman said.

The Army said Thursday that blood tests indicated that she had not been exposed to the GB agent and that there was no contamination of her clothing, work area or the vehicle in which she had transported samples drawn from the shipping containers of the nerve gas bombs to the laboratory.

Testing of the bombs will continue, but discovery of the "leakers" will result in a reassessment of the decision to fly them to Utah, said Maj. Lee De Lorme, an Army spokesman in Washington.

Utah Gov. Scott Matheson has filed suit in U.S. District Court in Salt Lake City to halt the Army's plans to fly the bombs from Denver to the Toole Army Depot in the western Utah desert starting June 11.

The two leaking bombs will be destroyed at the arsenal after further testing to determine how the leaks occurred, De Lorme said.

An arsenal spokesman, Michael Watt, said 231 bombs had been tested by Friday.

The Army had said before the testing began that it would reassess the transfer of the bombs if any "leakers" were found at the arsenal.

"Right now, we want to continue the testing," De Lorme said. "We want to find out the size of the problem. If it is just two, that is one problem."

The bombs were to have been moved to Utah last June, but that was delayed after the discovery during routine inspection that three of them were leaking. Another leaking bomb had been found in 1975. All four leaking bombs were destroyed at the arsenal.

Radiation Drives Families To Evacuate

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — About a dozen families left their homes Friday after state officials confirmed that high-level radioactivity had been found in animal life near a former underground nuclear test site.

About half the families returned to the area later in the day after Gov. Cliff Finch declared that they were not in immediate danger, said Grady Lewis, chief deputy of the Lamar County sheriff's office.

The area was sealed by state officials, and a special governor's task force announced after a closed meeting that it would seek a federal grant and equipment to complete a study by scientists.

Finch said the 1,400-acre test site would be closed to the public to permit scientists to do the work and "not because of any danger to persons passing through the area." Only one or two homes are located immediately adjacent to the fenced-in test site area.

Finch urged the evacuation after the University of Mississippi reported that scientists had found radioactive and deformed toads, frogs and a lizard above the Tatum Salt Dome, a shelf of salt used in the 1960s for nuclear explosions.

Evacuation was urged for residents living within 1½ miles of the site, which is in a sparsely settled area of south Mississippi about 90 miles north of New Orleans.

Finch appealed for residents living near the dome to move out as a precaution while scientists collected information on the radioactive contamination. He said it would take two or three days to investigate and determine a recommendation for inhabitants of the area.

The governor said state health officials had assured him that sodium 22, a radioactive element found in the animals, posed no danger to area residents unless they ate contaminated fish and other wildlife or drank polluted water.

"If there is any danger, we will immediately notify the people so their lives would be protected," Finch said. "However, I repeat there is no immediate danger to anyone in that area."

He said the radiation was found in only a few of more than 100 samples collected at the dome in recent weeks.

Finch said he was asking federal officials to examine classified documents on the Tatum tests and report to state experts potential dangers, including possible radiation leaking from the dome.

He said that if the government failed to cooperate, he might seek a court order.

"The safety of the people has got to come first," Finch said. "I do intend to find out from the classified information what, if any, findings would create or possibly create any possible danger to the people of this state."

Chief Sheriff's Deputy Grady Lewis of Lamar County said officials began helping residents move out early Friday.

"It's a sparsely populated area of rolling hills and pines — I'd say about 15 families live within a mile and a half of the dome," Lewis said.

Sheriff Marvin Breazeale said a couple of families would not leave.

"They asked me if this was a forced move and I told them it was voluntary," he said. "They said they would stay with their cattle."

Ola Saul, 50, refused to leave her home and cattle and said: "I'm not leaving until there's a cordon around my place when I'm gone. If it's that dangerous, then they should put up blockades."

She said she was not worried about nuclear contamination when the government set off the explosions more than a decade ago, "but I had a lot more faith in the government then than I have now. Right now I have zero."

Red Cross Offers Eight Courses Here

The Lubbock County Chapter of the American Red Cross announced that five multimedia first aid classes, along with three other beginning and advanced first aid classes will be held in June.

Three multimedia first aid classes will be held June 5-7 from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Classes will be held at the Lubbock Fire Training Center on Municipal Drive, north of Meadowbrook Golf Course. The second clinic will be held June 9, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Red Cross office at 1313 Ave L. The last multimedia first aid classes will be held June 11-12 from 6 to 10 p.m. at the Red Cross.

A cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) class will be offered June 4-5 from 6 to 10 p.m. at the Red Cross.

Advanced first aid classes will be conducted June 7, 14, 21 and 28 and July 5 and 21. Classes will be held from 6:30 to 10:30 p.m. at the Red Cross offices.

Standard first aid classes will be held June 18, 19, 20, 22 and 25 from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. at the Red Cross.

Interested persons may enroll by contacting the Red Cross offices at 765-8534. Classes are free; however, a materials fee will be charged for books and course materials.

Federal Grand Jury Sets Date For Reconvening

A federal grand jury which reportedly is considering an extensive federal drug investigation will reconvene in June, Assistant U. S. Attorney David Bass said Friday.

The grand jury adjourned 2 1/2 weeks ago after meeting for two days and has not met since, Bass said.

Bass, who apparently has been presenting evidence to the grand jury, declined to say on what date the panel will reconvene.

Statues Installed After Controversy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The great Capitol statue stalemate ended quietly today. The busts of Richard M. Nixon and Lyndon Baines Johnson were installed in the Senate without ceremony or fanfare, thus ending a 12-year impasse.

The two marble likenesses were rescued from the oblivion of a storeroom in the bowels of the Capitol, carted to the second floor of the Senate and inched into place.

The honor is not due the two men because they served as president of the United States. Rather it is bestowed because both were vice presidents and as such, president of the Senate.

By tradition and law the Senate honors each of its presiding officers with a bust in marble.

For awhile it seemed that a peculiar combination of vanity, protocol and politics might cause the tradition to evaporate.

Nixon served as vice president from 1953 through 1961. After he left, office sculptor Gualberto Rocchi of Milan, Italy was commissioned to do the vice presidential bust.

But when it arrived in 1967, Nixon's associates and some members of his family said it bore little or no resemblance to him.

So it was sent back to Italy for reworking. But when the new version arrived, Nixon was president and decided that his bust as vice president could wait for installation until after he left the White House.

By this time Johnson, who served as vice president from 1961 until he succeeded John F. Kennedy as president, had commissioned his own bust by artist Jimilu Mason, a family friend.

But he said it wouldn't be appropriate to have his likeness installed until Nixon's image was in place.

The long delay in placing Nixon's bust held back work on the busts of all other vice presidents.

In fact there has been no new vice presidential bust since the installation of the bust of former Vice President Alben Barkley, who served under President Harry S Truman.

Those eligible for the Senate's vice presidential collection include former vice presidents Hubert H. Humphrey, Spiro Agnew, Gerald R. Ford, Nelson A. Rockefeller and Walter Mondale.

Agnew resigned from the vice presidency in disgrace in 1973 after pleading no contest to a tax evasion charge.

But that apparently does not disqualify him. The collection includes the bust of former Vice President Aaron Burr, who was tried for treason and acquitted and who killed Secretary of the Treasury Alexander Hamilton in a duel.

Although there had been talk in the past about ceremonies to honor the busts of Nixon and Johnson, there are no such plans now.

Capitol officials said such dedication ceremonies have only rarely been held.

New Mexico Sets Juvenile Juries

CLOVIS, N.M. (AP) — Teen-agers will serve as jurors in cases involving juvenile offenders under a program being initiated next month in the 9th Judicial District.

The 13-to 17-year-old jurors will be responsible only for sentencing, the district attorney's office said earlier this week.

The idea of juvenile juries originated in Deerfield, Ill., three years ago. Officials there say it has reduced delinquency by 50 percent.

District Attorney Bill Bonem of Clovis said he hopes the program, the first in New Mexico, will have a similar effect on juvenile delinquency.

Clovis and Portales, the two cities covered by the 9th Judicial District, have more than 1,000 juvenile crime cases a year, and the teen-age juries will be handling most of those beginning in mid-June, he said.

Court officials are currently processing some 300 applications from area high school and junior high school students who have volunteered to serve as jurors.

CRIME WAVE

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — A Canadian news correspondent recently quoted Pakistan's law minister as saying that stern Islamic punishments are needed because the country has become lawless. After the interview, the correspondent visited a city mosque.

Odd Couple Take 'Proud Boy' From Gallery

A man with a broken arm and a woman wearing a long pink cape walked out of a Lubbock art gallery Friday with a bronze statue and a lithograph, together valued at $1,900, police said.

The art theft occurred between 9:30 a.m. and 12:10 p.m. Friday at the the Baker Gallery of Fine Art at 1301 13th St.

The gallery owner, James G. Baker, 61, described the male suspect as white, about 50 years old with curly brown, graying hair and a ruddy complexion. Baker said the man had a new-looking cast and sling on his left arm.

The female suspect was described as white, about 45 years old wearing large glasses and a knee-length pink cape.

Stolen from the gallery was a bronze sculpture about one-foot tall entitled, "Proud Boy," valued at $1,000.

Also stolen was a black and white lithograph entitled "In the Spring," valued at $900.

A store employee said he noticed the couple in the gallery for 30 minutes looking at the two art pieces before they disappeared from the upstairs of the gallery.

Baker told police the gallery remains dark until a customer wants to see the art. A salesperson at the gallery told police he noticed the same couple standing in the dark in the gallery looking at the missing pieces on May 11.

A thief at the Teaching School of the First Christian Church in Lubbock Friday stole the billfolds of a teacher and a mother visiting her child's class, police said.

The two thefts occurred between 11:10 and 11:30 a.m. Friday at the school at 2323 Broadway.

Antoinette Sue (Toni) Williams, 38, of 6606 Norfolk told police she left her purse in her child's classroom when she accompanied the class to the playground. When she returned to the room, she noticed her billfold, containing $240 cash, was missing from her purse.

The class's teacher, Bettie R. Wimberley, 42, of 4933 47th St., also reported that her billfold, containing only $4 cash, was missing from her purse in the room.

A chicken thief stole 20 whole chickens from a Lubbock fried chicken restaurant Friday. Richard James Sivage, 36, owner of Rich's Chicken at 1212 Quirt Ave. told police that someone broke into the business between 12:45 a.m. and 8:45 a.m. Friday.

Taken from the business were the chickens, valued at $40, and a calculator valued at about $120.

Entrance to the building was gained by breaking the glass out of the drive-in window and crawling through it, police said.

Police Friday surprised two Lubbock men, who alledgedly had just finished taking hubcaps off five cars parked on a nightclub parking lot near 19th Street and Orlando Avenue, according to reports.

A man flagged down a patrol car shortly after midnight and told police he had seen the thefts. The officers said they confronted the suspects, ages 19 and 23, after watching them throw several hubcaps into their vehicle.

After taking the men into custody, one of the suspects broke free and ran. However, the man was chased down behind a motel on Brownfield Highway, reports state.

Found in the men's car were about 15 hubcaps, liquor and car stereo systems, according to police. The suspects were booked into the county jail.

In other activity, John Alden of Lubbock, said he got out of his car in front of his residence about 11:45 p.m. Thursday and was assaulted by a man demanding money.

Alden, 23, told police that when he said he had no money the man struck him in the face. The suspect reportedly told Alden he would return after he had a "few beers," and that Alden better have some money when he came back.

Reports indicate the suspect did not return, and the victim was not seriously injured. Alden's assailant was described as a tall, heavy white man between 26 and 35 years old. The black-haired suspect was clad in a black cowboy hat and western wear. Reports state the man was known to carry a sawed-off shotgun.

A break-in between Wednesday afternoon and 6:45 a.m. Thursday at Plains Body Works netted burglars more than $17,000 in stolen property, according to police.

The items, including tools and tires, were taken from the shop at 3920 Ave. H and vehicles parked in the business' garage, reports indicate.

Shelby W. Hardee of 624 39th St. said burglars entered his residence between 8 a.m. and 3:15 p.m. Thursday and made off with $2,300 in stereo equipment.

Wanda Adams told police her loss amounted to $500 when someone entered her apartment at 2304 Fifth St. and stole a purse, containing eight rings and a pistol. The woman's door was opened between 10 p.m. and 10:30 p.m. Thursday when the theft apparently occurred.

A business office at 1405 N. University Ave. was burglarized between midnight and 2:45 a.m. today, and owner Oscar Paul Power told police $951 in property was stolen, including a television, stereo and microwave oven.

Police Investigating Thefts At City Hall

By JACK DOUGLAS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Someone is having success stealing cash and property from city hall offices, and police say they feel the guilty party may be municipal employees with a handy key.

Police Sgt. Doyle Nelson said the problem began about six months ago and there have been no arrests made yet.

However, he said it appears the thief or thieves have a key to the offices,because there is no sign of forced entry and most of the offices are locked during non-working hours — when the thefts are thought to have occurred.

Employees who have reported thefts in their offices so far include city information officer Vaughn Hendrie, municipal court administrator Dale Branaman and secretary Yvonne Baldwin.

And $1,037.51 was discovered missing in early April from a vault in the Lubbock Power & Light office, which is housed in the same building with city hall and the Lubbock Police Department.

LP&L utility office manager Leona Maxwell said that the theft apparently was committed by a city employee. The utitlity company is owned by Lubbock.

The most recent discovery was made Thursday when an audit, called for by Branaman, revealed that $310 cash was missing from an account in the municipal court's record division. Branaman also reported a radio speaker stolen from his office during the past two weeks while he was on vacation.

Hendrie said he entered his office May 9 and found that a city-owned camera and personal camera had been taken. The loss, which included an electronic camera flash taken off Hendrie's desk, amounted to more than $800.

Hendrie's office door was not locked, but the city hall's outer doors were locked the night the theft apparently occurred. "Obviously, someone with a key came in," Hendrie said, adding that it may have been an city employee or former employee.

Nelson said police have interviewed about eight city workers, and that several have taken polygraph tests. However, the ongoing investigation has not resulted in any arrests.

Nelson said whomever is responsible for the stealing "very possibly" draws his income from the city.

"Seems like everything comes up missing at night," police Capt. Wayne Love said.

Mrs. Baldwin said that since the thefts began, many employees have become more cautious, and Nelson said some have been warned not to leave valuable in their desks or filing cabinets.

Mrs. Maxwell said the money taken from the LP&L vault apparently occurred during the day, and that an employee with the utitlity company has been dismissed for "incompetence" in connection with the missing money.

Snyder Man Dies In One-Car Mishap

SNYDER (Special) — Kenneth Wayne Wortham, 48, of Snyder was killed late Thursday in a one-car accident just outside the city limits of Ira, near Snyder.

The accident occurred at 8 p.m. Thursday as Wortham was driving north on State Highway 350. He died at 10:40 p.m. at Cogdell Memorial Hospital in Snyder. Department of Public Safety officials said Wortham's car ran off the road and overturned. He was the only occupant.

Services for Wortham will be at 2 p.m. today in Bell-Seale Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. J. E. Newsom, pastor of Agapa Christian Fellowship, officiating and the Rev. Doug Stenburg, pastor of Union Methodist Church, assisting.

Burial will be in Snyder Cemetery under direction of Bell-Seale Funeral Home.

The Korean War veteran was a pumper for Chevron Oil Company and had lived in Snyder since 1962. He was a native of Rotan.

He married Sue Neves Sept. 30, 1954 in Lovington, N.M.

Survivors include his wife; three sons, Kenneth of Odessa and Bruce and Byron, both of Snyder; a sister, Mrs. Chester Mann of Colorado Springs, Colo.; and two brothers, R. Q. of Wink and Byron of Odessa.

Muleshoe Resident Dies In Hospital After Shooting

Jones was found shot once in the head with a .38-caliber pistol Tuesday at his home. A ruling on the cause of death is being withheld pending completion of an investigation by Muleshoe police.

Police Chief Johnny Richards said the gunshot wound was self-inflicted, but that he doesn't know if the wound was accidental or intentional.

Jones was pronounced dead at 2:30 a.m. Friday by a hospital doctor.

Services for Jones will be at 2:30 p.m. Sunday at the Singleton-Ellis Funeral Home Chapel of the Times with David Cox, minister of the Muleshoe Church of Christ, officiating.

Burial will be in Muleshoe Cemetery under the direction of Singleton-Ellis Funeral Home.

Jones had been a Muleshoe resident since 1941. He was born in Tennessee and married Myrtle Lanning on Jan. 9, 1921, in Vinson, Okla. He was a Baptist.

Survivors include his wife; two sons, Dennis and Buddie, both of Amarillo; a daughter, Joy Beaton of Wilcox, Ariz.; two sisters, Vada Alexander of Amarillo and Opal Castle of Wichita Falls; three brothers, Hix and Dewey, both of Mangum, Okla., and Ray of Salinas, Calif.; six grandchildren; 12 great-grandchildren; and two great-great-grandchildren.

ELECTION SCHEDULED

DICKENS (Special) — The Dickens Cemetery Association will elect new officers Wednesday at its 10:30 a.m. at the senior citizens building here.

Plainview Resident Opposes School Board Hiring Policy

A-J Correspondent

PLAINVIEW — Plainview resident C. M. Peterson told about 50 persons at a public meeting here Friday that if the Plainview School District wants to rehire Dr. Glenn Harrison after his official retirement date, it should not "create a job just for him."

Peterson objected to the board's decision May 10 to hire Harrison past his announced retirement date of June 30. He said the move was "a plan to pay an employee, through a cover-up office, to do nothing."

The board decided to hire Harrison as a consultant effective on the date of his retirement as school superintendent so that he could qualify for additional retirement benefits.

Peterson said he had no objection to Dr. Harrison being hired for a "productive" job or to the board's rehiring him for a period long enough to qualify him for the added retirement benefits. But, he said, "Creating a job for him is illegal, and morally wrong." Peterson said.

State House-Senate Negotiators Agree On Compromise Tax Bill

AUSTIN (AP) — House-Senate negotiators agreed on a compromise tax relief bill Friday that guarantees school districts will be repaid $192 million a year for any breaks they give taxpayes.

Final passage of the bill, which was prompted by voters' approval of the Tax Relief Amendment last November, will be up to the House and Senate.

Then the measure goes to Gov. Bill Clements who has demanded "meaningful" implementation of the amendment.

Decisions made by the 10-member House-Senate conference committee Friday also would guarantee that no school district could get more state reimbursement money by reducing its tax appraisals and no district would lose money if it raised appraisals.

Legislators earmarked $450 million last summer to reimburse school districts for revenue they would lose by giving taxpayers new homestead exemptions and tax breaks for farm and ranch land in production.

The compromise bill uses only $384 million because it was determined that the revenue losses would not be as great as originally estimated.

If a school finance bill does not pass, the tax relief bill would provide a full $192 million each year in reimbursement to school districts.

If a school finance bill is passed, only $100 million a year would be reimbursed in the tax relief bill, with the rest of the reimbursement flowing to districts through a revised state aid formula.

Another provision of the tax relief bill would remove intangible taxes, household personal property and homesteads from the formula used in figuring local school taxes, if the school finance bill does not pass. This would give local school taxpayers some relief.

Agricultural values already have been added to school tax assignments.

The entire agreement on reimbursement expires in two years, which will give the 1981 Legislature a chance to pass new legislation after the actual effect of homestead exemptions and taxing on agricultural values is determined.

The bill becomes effective with this year's tax collections unless a school district specifically postpones re-evaluation of farm and timberland until 1980.

Other provisions of the bill would:

— Exempt all cars owned by a family and not used to produce income from property taxes unless school boards and city councils reimpose the unpopular automobile taxes now levied in some Texas cities.

— Provide a $5,000 exemption for residence homesteads from school taxes, plus another $10,000 for the elderly and disabled.

— Limit increases in state spending to Texas' rate of growth according to personal income unless a five-member board, including the governor and other top officials, decide on a better measurement of growth in the Texas economy.

Government Eyes Food Markups

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A 4.1 percent increase in retail beef prices last month at time of stable cattle prices prompted the Agriculture Department Friday to order a stepped-up investigation of middleman and grocery prices.

Howard Hjort, the department's chief economist, said costs added to beef and pork after animals leave the farm until purchased in the supermarket have risen 30 percent over the past year.

Lag May Be To Blame

Thus, costs added by middlemen and grocery stores increased at a rate about three times the rate of general inflation, Hjort said.

Part of the explanation could be a lag in the time it takes to move beef to the supermarket, Hjort said.

"But I believe it is fair to say that it appears on the surface to be extremely difficult to justify an increase on the order of 30 percent over the past year," he said.

He said he ordered Agriculture Department economists to work with experts from the Council on Wage and Price Stability, the Commerce Department and the Bureau of Labor Statistics to see if increases were justified.

Flaw To Be Sought

He said the wage-price council has authority to request information from grocery stores for the study. The experts also will try to determine if there is a flaw in Agriculture Department and other government price-monitoring.

Cattle prices, which have skyrocketed over the last year, have been relatively stable since about mid-March and hog prices have declined, Hjort said. Retail pork prices declined 1.7 percent ast month.

Spot checks of daily and weekly retail prices by Agriculture Department economists had indicated that overall food price inflation of 0.9 last month should have been about half as large, he said.

Thus, the increase "came as somewhat of a surprise," Hjort said.

Certificates Losing Appeal To Savers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's recent change in the maximum interest rates for money market certificates apparently has made them less attractive to savers, according to a report released Friday.

The certificate accounts at federally insured savings and loan associations rose $5.8 billion in April, the lowest monthly increase since September 1978, according to a statement from the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

"A slowdown was expected in April as a result of the mid-March change in money market certificate regulatory ceiling rates, which made commercial bank rates equal to those offered by thrift institutions," board chairman Robert H. McKinney said in a statement.

He added that the certificate rates are "somewhat less competitive when compared with returns available on marketable securities."

Arabs Rejoice As Israelis Depart El Arish In Sinai

EL ARISH, Egypt (AP) — Israeli soldiers lowered their flag, packed up and drove away Friday, returning this Sinai capital to Egypt after 12 years of occupation. Arabs danced in the streets with joy.

Sixty miles to the east, representatives of Israel, Egypt and the United States conferred briefly for the first time on self-rule for Palestinians in the West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip.

In southern Lebanon, Israeli artillery pounded guerrilla positions of the Palestine Liberation Organization, Lebanon radio said, but the Israeli military command denied the report. The radio said Reihan, Nabatiye and Aichiye, were shelled, killing one person and wounding many.

Pandemonium erupted in El Arish as people belly-danced in the streets and wept for joy. The turnover ceremony was marred only by a brief shoving match. In Alexandria, President Anwar Sadat watched the changeover ceremony on television and later told reporters, "this is is a very moving moment I am extremely happy."

Hussein Darwish, an El Arish carpenter who commuted three years to Israel to make $20 a day, more than he could earn here, said:

"It is better to live under Egyptian rule than have Israeli money."

Pushing and shoving followed with at least one demonstrator knocked to the ground before Egyptian police rushed to the scene.

At one point the crowd threatened to get out of hand when several excited demonstrators grabbed an Israeli soldier's rifle. But after a tugging match the soldier held on to the weapon.

"Today El Arish, tomorrow Gaza and Jerusalem," the demonstrators shouted in unison as the Israelis drove jeeps and trucks back and forth along the edge of the crowd to keep them from moving en masse to the site of the ceremony only a few hundred yards away.

Citizens began signing "biladi biladi," Egypt's new peace anthem, and others chanted "Sadat, hero of peace."

The celebration spread into the town of 40,000. Old men in flowing robes and students danced in the streets to the beat of bedouin drums. Women wailed as they lined up in the streets to watch Egyptian soldiers enter the city for the first time since the 1967 Middle East war.

The return of El Arish and a 425-square-mile chunk of the Sinai was the first phase of occupied Sinai withdrawal asset forth by the Israeli-Egyptian peace treaty.

El Arish is a fishing center on the Mediterranean, 90 miles east of Port Said and 175 miles northeast of Cairo.

Egyptian officials wasted no time in establishng their new administration. Convoys of army trucks loaded with office furniture and personal belongings streamed into the city.

The red, white and black flag of Egypt flew from most private cars and buildings. Banners welcoming Sadat, due in the city Saturday, crisscrossed the streets.

Hebrew signs were quickly pulled down and Arabic onlookers cheered.

Some Israelis seemed dazed.

At the Beersheba meeting, Egypt called for "self-determination" for Palestinians who want an independent state. Defense Minister Kamal Hassan Ali said Israel's 1967 annexation of East Jerusalem was "null and void" and that Jewish settlements on the occupied West Bank "have no legal validity."

Interior Minister Yosef Burg, who heads the Israeli delegation, said "autonomy does not and cannot imply sovereignty."

Israel, Egypt Talks Begin With U.S. Aid

BEERSHEBA, Israel (AP) — Israel and Egypt, with American participation, began talks on the Palestinian issue Friday and their tough opening positions on the meaning of autonomy indicated long and difficult negotiations are ahead.

Egypt called for "self-determination" for Palestinians who want an independent state. Defense Minister Kamal Hassan Ali said Israel's 1967 annexation of East Jerusalem was "null and void" and that Jewish settlements on the occupied West Bank "have no legal validity."

Israel responded that it would never agree to a Palestinian state for the 1.1 million Palestinians on the West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip.

Interior Minister Yosef Burg, who heads the Israeli delegation, said "autonomy does not and cannot imply sovereignty," adding: "we must by definition reject a priori (beforehand) an independent Palestinian state."

He did not mention Jerusalem, apparently since Israel does not consider discussion of Jerusalem's status a subject for negotiation.

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance urged both sides to show "maximum restraint and far-sightedness" and called for suspension of hostile acts and statements."

Vance also asked the two sides to start work on a solution for Palestinians living outside the West Bank and Gaza — an issue ignored in previous talks and not spelled out by Vance. He repeated assurances to Israel that any autonomy plan must guarantee Israel's security.

The meeting, largely a ceremonial opening, came several hours after Israel lowered its flag in the Sinai town of El Arish and Egypt regained control of a 425-square-mile chunk of the Sinai in the first Israeli withdrawal from occupied territory under the Mideast peace treaty.

Spenkelink Executed For Murder

STARKE, Fla. (AP) — Silent and wide-eyed, John A. Spenkelink went to his death in Florida's old, oak electric chair Friday, ending a case that became a milestone in the nation's debate over capital punishment.

SPENKELINK

Spenkelink, rejecting a chance to make a last statement, sat strapped, gagged and hooded in an austere death chamber at the Florida State Prison as a black-hooded executioner threw a switch and 2,300 volts of electricity surged through the convicted murderer's body.

First In 12 Years

He was the first prisoner executed against his will in this country in more than 12 years.

The lanky 30-year-old's hands curled and blackened as the first of three jolts shot through him at 10:12 a.m, sending smoke into the death chamber. A doctor listened three times to his heartbeat before declaring him dead at 10:18 a.m.

Spenkelink, who was condemned for killing a fellow drifter in a Tallahassee motel in 1973, was taken from his holding cell for the last walk just minutes before he died.

His final gambit in a six-year legal battle failed moments earlier, when the U.S. Supreme Court voted 6-2 to refuse, for the sixth time, to hear an appeal.

Florida Gov. Bob Graham, who had signed Spenkelink's death warrant May

See Related Stories Page 17, Sec. C

18, gave the prison superintendent the final go-ahead in a telephone call from his Tallahassee office at 10:11.

Opponents of capital punishment gave all they had to the Spenkelink case, fearing that if he went many of the more than 500 others on the nation's death rows would follow.

Although Spenkelink was white, foes of the death penalty say it is used most often against minorities. A black prisoner, Willie Jasper Darden Jr., had originally been scheduled to die with Spenkelink, but he won a stay.

The U.S. Supreme Court struck down death penalty laws in 1972 and Florida was the first state to write a new one. Now 32 states have death penalty statutes and two more take effect July 1.

Spenkelink was strapped immobile in the three-legged chair called "Old Sparky" when a curtain was raised, making him visible to 32 witnesses at 10 a.m.

Spenkelink couldn't speak. A heavy strap bound his chin. "He looked terrified and helpless," said Tom Slaughter, an Associated Press writer who was one of nine news media witnesses. "His eyes were wide open."

Superintendent Present

Prison superintendent David Brierton, who chose the time of the execution, was in the death chamber, a look of sadness on his face.

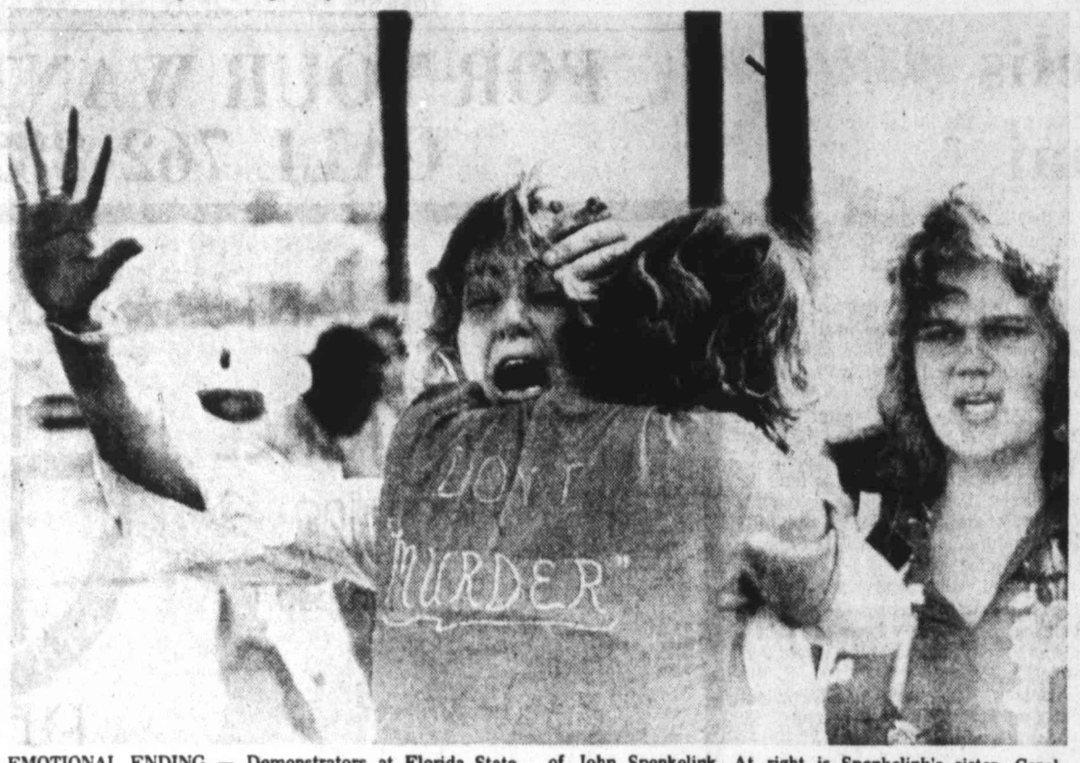

Behind a wall, a hooded executioner threw a switch to send a series of charges through Spenkelink's body.

The execution started 12 minutes late, heightening the tension among the several dozen protesters and the dozens of reporters who gathered in a field a quarter-mile from the prison. Executions traditionally start a little late to give time for last minute phone calls or stays of execution.

With less than two hours left in his life, Spenkelink delivered a written epitaph to Feamster during the minister's last visit to the death house.

"Man is what he chooses to be. He chooses that for himself," Spenkelink wrote. He also took Holy Communion.

And the minister said Spenkelink told him: "When this comes down, I hope that some good will come of it."

272 Killed As DC-10 Jetliner Crashes After O'Hare Takeoff

"The plane was in the air, and the young fellow in front of me said, 'Look at that.' I looked over and he said, 'The engine fell off.' We watched the plane as far as we could. He went on a fairly level course and gained just a little teeny bit of altitude, and then he nosed off to the left, the wing went down and it was just one solid mass of flame all at once."

Robert Anderson, who was driving nearby when the plane crashed northwest of Chicago, said the plane was "almost vertical and I almost started to scream because I knew it would not come out of it.

"It continued almost upside down. As it impacted, flames shot out to where I thought my face was going to be singed," Anderson said. "When I looked back, it looked like an atomic bomb explosion."

Other eyewitnesses said the left engine came loose, and then the plane banked to the left, shuddered for a few seconds and struck the ground, hitting on its nose and left wingtip at about the same time.

Witnesses also said the plane appeared to be traveling at an unusually slow speed for a jetliner taking off.

Callahan said FAA investigators "have listened to the tapes, and after the routine they obviously had their hands full."

A temporary morgue was set up at an American Airlines hangar at O'Hare. Chicago police sent 10 police vans to help remove bodies, which were being wrapped in blue plastic bags.

Deputy police chief Charles Pepp told rescue workers to "put as many in (the vans) as you can, but don't stack them. Treat them like your own personal family."

Highways in the area quickly became jammed with rush-hour motorists and hundreds of people gathered at the grisly scene, including residents of the Oasis trailer park.

O'Hare, the world's busiest airport, shut down briefly, disrupting heavy holiday traffic, but later some runways reopened. Departing flights were delayed an hour or more.

The non-stop flight was due to leave Chicago at 2:45 p.m. CDT and to arrive in Los Angeles at 4:42 p.m. PDT. The same jet had landed at O'Hare at 1:05 p.m. CDT, as Flight 630 from Phoenix, Ariz.

American identified the pilot as Capt. Walter H. Lux of Phoenix, Ariz., the copilot as James R. Dillard of Chicago and the flight engineer as Fred Udovich of Chicago. Lux, a former Air Force pilot, had been flying for American since 1950.

The worst previous U.S. air disaster occurred exactly eight months ago on Sept. 5, 1978, when 144 persons died after a Pacific Southwest Airlines jetliner collided over San Diego with a small private plane.

The co-op should be ordered to pay the city at least $130,000 because "it would be inequitable and unconscionable to permit (the co-op) to retain the moneys it earned using the interests and benefits derived from a franchise granted by (the city) without being granted such a franchise."

Without obtaining a franchise, the co-op "is a trespasser" and owes the city "general and special damages reasonably valued at $130,000."

The city also asks that the co-op:

— Provide "at its own expense" complete maps or plats showing the location of their "improvements and uses...over and under the streets, avenues, alleys or public grounds of the City of Lubbock."

— Be enjoined "from further installation of facilities, including those now in progress, without notice of their location and providing plats of same, and then only at such locations consisten with the needs of all other users as may be approved by the City under the terms of a franchise agreement."

— Be enjoined from providing electric service inside the city except in those areas already being served until obtaining a franchise or certificate of convenience and necessity from the city.

— Obtain a certificate or franchise or have city customers terminate their electric service at a "reasonable future date" set by the court.

The city's answer to the original suit questions whether such an action can be brought against the city at all, except by the state, and asks that the Public Utility Commission and the state through its attorney general be made parties to the litigation.

When an area served by an electric cooperative is annexed into a city, the co-op only is authorized to serve those customers it was serving when the area was annexed.

In the High Country Addition, the co-op's customers were limited to "scattered and isolated wells and farm homes, none of which were actually located within the precise area now platted and being developed for urban residential use," the answer says.

The co-op's request for an injunction against further LP&L expansion in the High Country Addition should not be granted because LP&L is observing a "voluntary abstinance from actually furnishing retail public utility service" except to municipally-owned facilities, the document says.

A suit virtually identical to the one filed against the city was filed by the cooperative last year. That led to an injunction against LP&L serving a different annexed area and the case is now on appeal before the 7th Court of Civil Appeals in Amarillo.

North Carolina Fire, Explosion Kill Five

SHELBY, N.C. (AP) — A burning clothing store exploded Friday evening, killing five persons, including four firemen, who were buried beneath the rubble of a collapsed wall, authorities said.

"We've got four Shelby firemen and one gas department employee dead," said Capt. Harold Smith of the Shelby Police Department.

Twenty-seven persons, mostly firemen and bystanders, were injured by flying bricks and glass, officials said.

"The building just shook from top to bottom, and then it just blowed," said W.W. Lynch, a Shelby businessman who was standing across the street from the store when it exploded. "I don't see how anybody could have escaped."

Firefighters and other rescue workers began searching the rubble after the blaze was brought under control around 9:30 p.m., and recovered the last of the five bodies shortly afterward, officials said. Levon Kennedy, assistant Shelby fire chief, had said that he expected them to find more bodies, but officials said later that they believed no more victims were buried in the rubble.

Gasoline Costs Lead Big April Jump In Prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — The biggest spurt in gasoline prices since the 1973-74 Arab oil embargo sent consumer prices jumping 1.1 percent in April, and more sharp increases at the pump are coming, the government said Friday.

Gasoline prices shot up six percent in April, but food, housing and other energy costs also continued to advance rapidly during the month to sustain inflation at a 13.2 percent annual rate through the first four months of 1979, the Labor Department reported.

50 Percent Annual Rate

Gasoline prices alone were rising at a 50 percent annual rate, based on increases since the start of the year.

The high inflation rate gouged a big hole in the typical consumer's pocketbook in April, as real weekly earnings declined by a record 2.6 percent from March, the department said. Real weekly earnings refers to how much money a consumer has to spend for goods, services and taxes after taking inflation into account.

President Carter's chief economic advisers blamed surging energy, food and housing prices for the high inflation rate.

Alfred E. Kahn, Carter's chief inflation adviser, admitted that seven months after the president's anti-inflation program was instituted, there's "not a hell of a lot" the government can do to moderate rising costs for those necessities.

AFL-CIO President George Meany, recalling the administration's plea last October for six months to prove its inflation-fighting effort could succeed, said that April's report "proves that the program is a flop."

Gravestone Of Guidelines

United Auto Workers President Douglas Fraser said business pricing policies that are fueling inflation "have turned out to be the gravestone over the burial plot" of Carter's voluntary anti-inflation guidelines.

Charles E. Schultze, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, said "substantial rises in energy prices in the U.S. and around the world are occurring with the end not yet in sight."

Kahn said the government is unable to do anything directly to stop oil-exporting countries from jacking up prices or to force food and housing prices to ease. That is because the main causes for rising energy, food and housing costs are beyond the reach of Carter's voluntary price guidelines, he said.

One thing the government will do, said Kahn, is investigate whether the oil industry is violating either the government's mandatory price controls or Carter's voluntary guidelines for refining. He said suspicions have been raised because there apparently have been "much greater increases in gasoline product prices" than would be explained by the rise in crude oil costs.

The six percent jump in gasoline prices was the largest monthly increase since a 7.3 percent advance was recorded in March 1974, just as the oil embargo was ending, the Labor Department said.

The 0.9 percent rise for food and beverages in April was the lowest in four months. Even so, food prices were up nearly 12 percent from April 1978 and are advancing so far this year at an annual rate of more than 15 percent.

Housing prices last month advanced 1.1 percent, the third straight month that prices have risen one percent or more. In the past 12 months, housing costs have gone up nearly 11 percent.

The 13.2 percent annual inflation rate so far this year is nearly double the 7.4 percent rate that Carter projected last fall when he announced his anti-inflation program.

For the 12 months ending in April, real weekly earnings declined 4.6 percent, also a record drop, the Labor Department said.

Woman, 55, Dies Of Gunshot Wound

A 55-year-old Lubbock woman died Friday night about an hour after she was shot in the head in the bedroom of her home.

Mona Daniel of 4707 21st St. died at 9:55 p.m. at Methodist Hospital.

Police said when they arrived at Mrs. Daniel's residence about 8:40 p.m., they found her on a bed in an upstairs bedroom. A 9-millimeter automatic pistol was found on the floor by the bed, police said.

Justice of the Peace L.J. Blalack ruled the death a suicide. The body was taken to Franklin-Bartley Funeral Home.

can know the truth about it?"

There is an element of truth in the statement that experience is the best teacher, Brown said. "Experience is a teacher, that is true, and one can learn by experience how not to be happy," Brown said. "But the sad part of it is after we have learned the lesson, it is too late for it to do us much good and we have little time left for happiness."

Brown told the 69 graduating seniors not to be like Solomon, but to learn from the story of Solomon and his writings that happiness can be found only through love and trust of God.

Every man and woman searches for happiness, Brown said, even if they haven't stopped to think about their quest. He said he chose the book of Ecclesiastes to illustrate how happiness can be found because of the book's simultaneous simplicity and difficulty.

"The reason for this," he said, "is they do not read it with the key thought in mind...the purpose for which it was written." Brown said the book's purpose was for people to learn how to find happiness.

Valedictorian Rhonda Greene told class members, "I am convinced that each of our lives will be a life that is worthy to be lived. I believe that we will all strive to be the best we can and that our lives will be full of happiness and joy."

She told her peers that although it would be difficult to leave behind the life they had known for 12 years, they must progress in life to other experiences.

Pat Reznik, salutatorian, encouraged class members to begin fulfilling dreams and accomplishing goals.

"Whether we want to admit it or not," Reznik said, "we need God more than ever to guide us through our future. Our past has been fun and we can remember it that way. But now we must concentrate on what we want out of our future lives."

Diplomas were awarded by Gary Goff, principal; Clark Self Jr., trustee; Harley Tefertiller, superintendent; and James Satterwhite, junior high school principal and counselor.

The invocation was presented by faculty member Mark Pittman and the benediction was presented by faculty member Joe Bell.

Civilization thrives upon variation."

Miss Badell quoted Groucho Marx, who described a dream like this: "I had a wonderful dream last night; don't miss it!"

"That was a man who had faith his dreams would one day be a reality," she said. "And he was right in doing so because 'dreams are the stuff life's made of."

She described Martin Luther King Jr's dream of a world undivided by racism and prejudice and said, "His was the dream worth dying for. Are yours?"

Miss Badell also described the dream of Henry Kissinger to become a learned and respected man. "He went through many obstacles to see his dream into reality, but eventually he became Secretary of State of the United States," she said.

She described the courage of people like Helen Keller, who had the courage to fulfill her potential. "She was a woman who was blinded in her infancy, and she traveled thw world stressing the importance of diligence, and never giving up," said Miss Badell.

She encouraged the class to be courageous and to realize their potential.

The class was presented by Jay Gordon, assistant superintendent for instruction, to school trustees Lynn Stafford, Brad Crawford and Giles M. "Buddy" Forbess.

The introduction was given by principal Max O'Banion and the master of ceremonies was Archie Moore, senior class president. Terry Barron, student body president, gave the invocation.

success and we will have to make or create a new and unique way toward the future," she added.

She said that patience is also important in achieving success. "Patience is an important factor because some of us will have to work harder than others to achieve the same outcome and some rewards in life don't come as easily as others."

Braxton spoke of the search for meaning in life, saying that "since the beginning of time man has sought to better himself and the conditions of the world. He has searched for truth, wisdom, morals, religion and education.

"As part of mankind, we must find our place in society and continue the search for our ideas, occupations and goals," he continued.

He said that man has always looked to the past or future to escape the present, but that "our feet must be firmly planted in the present where we are preparing and training to make our contributions to the world."

The master of ceremonies was Michael Brassfield and the invocation was given by Guadalupe Baldazo Jr.

chance of not only sharing our lives with others, but also learning to appreciate those of different walks of life."

She also mentioned the Lubbock High traditions that make the students unique. "We are molded by these unique experiences as the Westerner Class of 1979. No other group of people have had our extraordinary moments."

Said Linda Shrimplin, "No other person will ever reach the same place and achieve the same goals. You are you. Life has given you the opportunity to be a unique individual.

"However, before you can ever take advantage of your opportunities you must first know what you want to make out of your life," she continued.

She said, "You must first have the desire in your heart and the goal in your mind to be the best person that you can possibly be. Once you know what you want, you then must start working for the opportunity to fulfill your goals."

Diplomas were given to the graduates by school board members Harold Harriger and Jose Ramirez following presentation of the class by Dr. E.C. Leslie, assistant superintendent for administration.

The master of ceremonies was senior class president Robert Rangel and the introduction and recognition of honor graduates was given by principal Knox Williams.

The invocation was given by Tim Garrett and class achievements were reviewed by Liz Aker.

Music was provided by the choral department under direction of Garland Jarvis and by the orchestra under direction of Boyce Wyrick.

Top Grads From Lubbock High Schools

The top graduates of each of the city's five public high schools have been announced, with all eleven students posting a 3.90 grade point average or better. Seven of the graduates have a 4.0 cumulative average, or all A's in high school.

Graduation ceremonies for Coronado, Dunbar and Lubbock were held last night. Cermonies for Monterey and Estacado will be at 8 p.m. today.

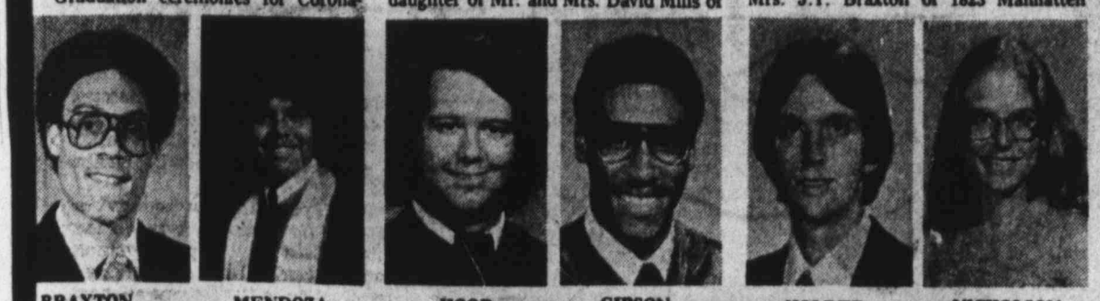

Three Coronado graduates tied for top honors with each having a perfect 4.0 average. Mary Alice Mills, 18, is the school's top graduate. Miss Mills is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Mills of 4510 13th St. Other top seniors include Karla Dodd Kell, 17, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ted Kell of 5210 43rd St., and Joe Neely Gregg Jr., the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe N. Gregg of 4803 12th St.

Council Members Seek Funds For Wives' Trip

DENTON (AP) — City Council members want the city to pick up the tab for their wives, but not for city utility board members, on a trip to the American Public Power Association convention in Seattle June 15-21.

The councilmen approved expenses for themselves, the city manager, the city utility director and their wives in a 3-1 vote earlier this week. One councilman was absent.

The vote came after several residents questioned the amount of money the city would spend in sending the group to the convention.

"I feel the wives should go, just not at public expense," said councilman Ray Stephens, who cast the lone dissenting vote.

Stephens said later he will not attend the convention.

"When I was planning to go and my wife was going, we decided we would pay her way to Seattle ourselves. I don't think the wives should have their trips paid. They aren't elected by the citizens," he said.

He also questioned the importance of the convention.

Atomic Garbage Poses Hot Problem For Nuclear Industry

RICHLAND, WASH. (NEA) — When Enrico Fermi demonstrated the first nuclear chain reaction in 1942 he created a most noxious problem for public sanitation. As nature demands, the split atom leaves waste, in this case toxic waste, and the problem is how to dispose of the radioactive garbage.

Fermi himself said the refuse could simply be buried. But where? Every time authorities have found an appropriate graveyard over the years, they've also found sociopolitical hostility. To date, 11 states have prohibited the United States, from using their outbacks as final resting places.

Now, however, the decades-old dilemma may be on verge of solution. Scientists increasingly believe the basaltic formation in south-central Washington may make an ideal rubbish pit. And, happily, many residents here not only agree but are formally offering their region for the prospect.

Mike McCormack, a Democrat who represents the locale in Congress, has introduced legislation to designate the 570-square-mile Hanford Nuclear Reservation as a national repository for nuclear wastes. The unprecedented invitation has received enthusiastic support from the area establishment.

The area establishment is the nuclear industry, as it happens. And this is the reason the region wants the atomic garbage. The Hanford facility is one of the largest nuclear centers in the world, and locals want to keep it this way. Radioactive garbage, then, will insure continued prosperity.

That prosperity began here in Fermi's time. Nineteen days after the atom was split in Chicago, the government came to the Washington desert to build the first plutonium processing plant. Richland had a population of 280 then. Hanford was to turn it into a vitally important energy complex.

Today Richland's population is more than 30,000, and the number of people in the immediate vicinity has grown by a factor of 30. The Hanford plant is worth $2 billion, not counting the land, and its budget is $600 million annually. In all, nearly 12,000 people here work for the reservation.

Indeed, this is now Atomicville, U.S.A. And the nuclear influence is immense. There is an Atomic body Shop, an Atomic Bowling Lanes, and Atomic Plumbing Co., and an Atomic TV Service. There is not yet an Atomic Garbage Company, but residents are working hard to establish one — a large one.

It will have to be very large. Since Fermi, the United States has generated more than 156 million cubic feet of radioactive refuse. That's about 75 million gallons, an amount that could double by the year 2000. At present the deadly waste is collected in temporary storage tanks around the country.

Actually, Hanford already stores a good deal of the rubbish. There is nearly a million cubic feet of it here. Hanford officers say the reservation has been accomodating the poison from the first. They say this management experience will be convenient if the base becomes a permanent repository.

Not that waste management here has been fool-proof. Millions of gallons of radioactive swill have leaked into the earth. Other amounts have been poured purposely on the soil. At one time so much waste leeched into the nearby Columbia River that it was the most radioactive waterway in the world.

But Hanford executives insist that much of the leaking has been caused by the temporary nature of the storage. Once a permanent solution is applied, they say, leeching will stop. The materials will be held securely and indefinitely in deep and impenetrable holes in the subterranean basalt.

This basalt forms the foundation for nearly 100,000 square miles of Eastern Washington. Test holes indicate it is at least 11,000 feet thick at Hanford, and it may be twice that. Hanford's Frank Standerfer says the rock is stable, dry, and could accept America's nuclear waste for centuries.

Thus the government is presently conducting a waste test on a Hanford mountain. The plan is to bury heaters in the earth to judge whether the rock will accept the high temperatures of radioactive material. If so, it's all but certain the reservation will receive repository status by 1981.

And, Richland residents couldn't be happier for it. The older people here processed the plutonium for the bomb that destroyed Nagasaki. Their sons and daughters are now building plants to generate electricity. The atom has been a good neighbor, and folks show it more respect than fear.

Besides, there is the question of prudence. Momentum is building in the nation to outlaw nuclear power unless a waste disposal site is found soon. If nuclear power goes, so goes the nuclear industry, and possibly, the Hanford reservation. No one here wants to see a population of 280 again.

Homebuilt Rocket To Make Space Flight

By TOM TIEDE

SARATOGA, Calif. (NEA) — Robert Truax says his mildly boggling notion was conceived three years ago. He had built the jet-powered motorcycle on which Evel Knievel failed to jump Washington's Snake River Canyon, and now he, Truax, had another spectacular idea for the adventuresome stuntman.

TOM TIEDE

He proposed to construct a sub-orbital rocket and send Knievel into space as the world's first private astronaut.

Knievel was quick to approve the plan, and advance $3,000 for its preliminary research and design. Later, however, he had second thoughts and abandoned the project. He said he would do almost anything on a motorcycle; on the other hand, well, rocket ships are not made with wheels on them.

So that was the first negative for Bob Truax's intention. Since then there have been many others. A private rocket ship? Preposterous. Aeronautics specialists say Truax is dreaming. Government space officers say he's supremely naive. Virtually no authority gives him any chance at all.

And yet Truax, a retired Navy captain, insists he can and will launch an ordinary citizen into space within the next two years. He says he won't put anyone on the moon, merely some 50 miles up, but he intends to do it solely with private ingenuity, and without governmental assistance.

Truax calls it "Project Private Enterprise." And what he's doing is building a space program in the back yard of his home. He's already fashioned a 24-foot prototype "Volksrocket," and he's started on a pair of similar flight vehicles. The target date for takeoff is the summer of 1981 or 1982.

Truax says he will first launch an unmanned flight. And since he will use a recoverable vehicle, something even the government has not yet tried, he will technically be able to use the same ship for the manned launch. That, he says, should increase reliability and reduce risk for his astronaut.

Not that the manned flight will be worry free. Truax describes his enterprise as an extremely low-cost effort, which is to say $1 million, and therefore "our risks will be somewhat higher than those taken in the government program." Actually, Truax expects to lose one of his vehicles in tests.

Those tests will probably be on the California coast, and the unmanned and manned flights will follow soon after. The vehicles will be upright for launching, and will be powered by four Rocketdyne RL101 engines. The engines, designed for the government's Atlas rocket, use kerosene and liquid oxygen.

Truax says his ships will be restrained on the pad until the engines reach a full thrust of 1,000 pounds each. When the astronaut is aboard he will sit in a crouch at the top of the 25-inch diameter vehicle, in voice contact with monitors. The lift-off weight of the ship will be 3,100 pounds.

Truax expects the manned rocket to go 30,000 feet in 60 seconds, and 113,000 feet in 100 seconds. At that point the one-stage ship will be traveling 2,500 mph, and the rocket engines will burn out. Then the ship will arc upwards for 30 more miles, drop, release a parachute and fall into the ocean.

The manned flight is scheduled to take about 10 minutes to splashdown. Truax says the mission will be tracked all the way by AN/MPQ-10 radar. He intends to spend $85,000 to hire two ships, two helicopters, and a team of frogmen to make certain that both astronaut and Volksrocket are recovered.

That, anyway, is the plan, and before anyone gets the feeling it's some kind of pipe dream it should be stressed that Bob Truax is not without impressive credentials. At 62, he has been professionally involved with rocketry for nearly 40 years; in fact, he's a pioneer of the industry.

Truax, an engineer, set up the Navy's first Jet Propulsion desk in the 1940s, when the world was still snickering at Robert Goddard. Truax spent 29 years in the Navy, and in that time was instrumental in the programs ranging from Thor to Minuteman. He won a Legion of Merit for originating the Polaris concept.

Truax also was one of the first experts to lecture government on the cost effectiveness of space flights. And he's not forgotten that it never listened. This is the taproot reason for Project Private Enterprise, he says: "I want to prove that rocket flights need not be so damned expensive."

Truax believes it will cost him $450,000 to build three space vehicles, and $200,000 more for testing and modification. Therefore, he expects the cost of launching the first private citizen into space to be less than taxpayers spent to design the suit worn by the first government man in space.

Of course, Truax concedes that his project relies heavily on technology for which the government has already paid. Each piece of equipment used for his program has been developed for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. He is therefore saving millions on the billions previously spent.

He has an oscillograph, for example, that cost $14,000 when the military used it in the atomic energy program; he got it second hand for $76. Also, he has three inertial platforms that the government developed at a total cost of $25 million; he picked them up in surplus for only $36 each.

Truax says he regularly does for $1.98 what federal scientists do for $198, or even $198,000. This kind of savings is always possible, he adds, and he's not the only rocket advocate to think so. As it happens, private citizens in Germany are also working on the idea of cheap, dependable space flight.

The German effort is incorporated under the name "ORTRAG," which in the language means "Orbital Rockets and Transportation Company." The firm has developed a vehicle that burns diesel fuel with an oxidizer, and has become the first non-governmental entity to successfully launch a space mission.

The ORTRAG launching took place last year in Zaire, Africa. Another test is due this month in the same place. Dr.

Locust Love Call Heard

By ROBERT C. RADCLIFFE
National Geographic News Service

WASHINGTON — Another noisy spring is upon us, as the love-call of the 17-year locust is heard from Connecticut to North Carolina.

It's one of the most awesome and overpowering sounds in nature, the piercing din of millions of these large insects that seem to appear from nowhere.

Suddenly, one spring morning, the ground is riddled with half-inch holes and the locusts are on everything, crawling and flying from one perch to the next. They are responding to a biological clock that began ticking 17 years earlier in one of the longest and strangest life cycles of the insect world.

The Eastern seaboard will swarm with members of brood 2 this year, the National Geographic New Service reports. Though spectacular, their appearance won't be as incredible as the 1970 simultaneous emergence of 13-year locusts and brood 10, the largest population and most widespread of all the 17-year variety.

They are natives only of this part of the world, east of the Rockies. In 1633 the newly arrived Pilgrims of Plymouth, Mass., were astonished one morning when they beheld "a numberous company of Flies which were like for bigness unto Wasps or Bumble-Bees.

"They came out of little holes in the ground, and did eat up the green things, and made such a constant yelling noise as made all the woods ring of them, and ready to deaf the hearer."

Turning to their Bibles, the Pilgrims concluded these "locusts" were akin to the living clouds that chewed Egypt into devastation. Indeed, they seemed to call out "Pharaoh, Phaaaa...raoh!"

The Pilgrims were confused. Entomologists say 17-year locusts are not actually voracious locusts, but harmless cicadas that eat nothing above ground during their final six weeks of life.

Looking like inch-long-crawfish as they emerge from their holes, they immediately climb tree trunk or branch, fasten their front feet, and start molting.

Clip 'n' Cook

VEGETARIAN LASAGNA

1 large onion, chopped
2 cloves garlic, minced
1 med. green pepper, chopped
4 med. zucchini, coarsely chopped
½ cup chopped celery
5 tbsps. olive oil
2 cans (1 lb. each) tomatoes in tomato sauce
1 can (8 oz.) tomato sauce
1 can (6 oz.) tomato paste
½ cup dry vermouth
1 med. carrot, chopped
¼ cup chopped fresh parsley
2 tsps. oregano
1 tsp. each: basil, salt
½ tsp. thyme
¼ tsp. pepper
9 wide curly lasagna noodles, cooked following package directions
2 cups (1 lb.) ricotta
12 oz. mozzarella cheese, cut in thin slices
1½ cups grated Parmesan cheese

In large fry pan, cook onion, garlic, green pepper, zucchini and celery in oil over medium heat for 15 minutes, stirring frequently. Stir in tomatoes, tomato sauce, tomato paste, vermouth, carrot, parsley and seasonings; bring to a boil, stirring to break up tomatoes. Reduce heat and simmer covered, for 30 minutes. Remove cover and boil to reduce sauce to measure five cups.

In a roast pan, spread about one fourth sauce over bottom of pan. Arrange three noodles on top; dot with one third ricotta; arrange one fourth mozarrella cheese on top, and sprinkle with one fourth Parmesan cheese. Repeat procedure twice. Spread remaining sauce over all; top with remaining mozzarella cheese, and sprinkle with remaining Parmesan cheese. Bake at 350 degrees 30 to 45 minutes or until bubbly. Let stand five minutes before cutting into squares.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY DR. PAUL E. RUBLE

Dear Dr.Ruble: I'm going to have my bladder "tied up." What exactly is meant by this? Also, I had a hysterectomy years ago. Would that make any difference in the surgery? This seems to be a problem with many women, so I'm sure your answer would be of interest to a lot of us. — Mrs. B.R.

I'm sure it will be. The urinary bladder is a cause of great trouble for a lot of women past 40. Understanding a bit about how it is constructed may help you understand the surgery.

The bladder is a reservoir for urine. In the normal healthy adult it measures about five by three inches and holds about a pint of urine. During growth years it becomes snugly attached to various nearby structures by strong ligaments and muscles. This arrangement works fine and does nicely through a normal lifetime. Unfortunately, for women especially, other forces take their toll on the supports — childbirth and tumors of the uterus chief among them. With age the bladder does tend to sag a bit anyway. The danger is that there will be a "puddling" of urine, itself an invitation to various infecting organisms. Many women complain of annoying frequency of urination and other symptoms of bladder sag.

For some, the time arrives to adjust matters surgically — as you say, to "tie it up." Surgeons once did, indeed, actually tie the bladder to various nearby structures with stitches into the bladder itself. That is almost never done today. Newer techniques have been developed to adjust the supporting muscles themselves, which works much better. The risk is low and the surgery usually results in relief from the urinary problems. Your hysterectomy should have no bearing on the outcome.

Dear Dr. Ruble: A few years ago the doctor told me I had shingles. They were on both sides under my ribs. Now, I have them again and am trying to get rid of them on my right side. They are much more painful this time. My doctor told me that my age makes the difference in regard to the pain. He admitted he may have been mistaken about my having them before. What do you think? — Mrs. D.M.

Everything points to a mistaken diagnosis years ago. Shingles (herpes zoster) is a virus infection and almost always affects one side only — the side in which the specific nerve has been inflamed by the virus. Also, shingles is practically always a one-time thing, although there can be recurrence of the pain after it subsides.

The older one gets the more trouble one has with shingles, both in degree of pain and its duration. There's no way to get rid of shingles. Like other viruses it must run its course. For more on this, see my booklet, "Facts About Shingles." For a copy send 20 cents to cover printing and handling. Enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope and send to Dr. Ruble, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

• • •

Dear Dr. Ruble: My daughter has sinus trouble and she smokes. I tell her that is causing the trouble. She sees doctors for it, but gets no help. A word from you might help. — M.Y.S.

Here are two words: stop smoking.

• • •

Dear Dr. Ruble: Is low blood sugar a threat in pregnancy? — J.J.

If you mean can a woman with low blood sugar can have a successful pregnancy, the answer is yes, she can. In fact, blood sugar tends to rise slightly during pregnancy. High blood sugar is another matter, and must be carefully controlled in pregnancy. Nevertheless, you should tell your obstetrician about your low blood sugar condition.

• • •

Dear Dr. Ruble: What is the best kind of cough medicine to use? — Mrs. P.E.

A persistent cough is a matter for a good examination. For the occasional cough from a respiratory infection most of the over-the-counter preparations are sufficient to soothe the throat. If not, one containing codeine (by prescription) is effective. The codeine suppresses the cough center of the brain.

• • •

Dear Dr. Ruble: Should an infant on the bottle be given water? — J.S.M.

Infants need sufficient liquid like anyone else. Most get it in their milk. If a particularly heavy and concentrated formula is used, extra water feeding is needed. At least it should be offered between feedings.

Low blood sugar is often the cause of faintness, headaches, visual and emotional disturbances. To learn how it can be identified and brought under control, write to Dr. Ruble, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611, for a copy of "Help for Hypoglycemia," enolosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 50 cents.

Dr. Ruble welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Hints from Heloise

HI THERE:

I have a little system I figured out all by myself about something that was a problem to me, so thought I would pass this along.

When I buy a new blouse, I try to keep all the care instructions intact because it's much easier on laundry day to just read and separate.

As we all know, some of those little labels really irritate the back of your neck and you want to tear them out, but then it gets hard to remember which ones are hand wash, cold wash, etc.

I decided to come up with my own code system.

As soon as I get home and take the garment out of the bag, I check the instructions. If the label says machine wash, I rip that offending little tag right out.

When washday arrives, if there is no care tag in the garment, then I know it is machine wash and I do all of my stuff in cold water, so no worry.

Hope this helps relieve the itch, scratch and irritations that come from those little devils.

In fact, I wish all manufacturers would put the care instructions on the side seam and that would take care of the problem altogether. — Hugs, Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

If anyone has an old wig they don't use anymore I have found the best use for them.

I put my old wig on top of a stick, then tie an old pair of pantyhose around the stick so they will flop in the wind.

Put this in my garden and no bird ever dares to get the goodies.

I have been doing this for years and even gave old wigs to my friends. They, too, love the results as they have a good crop of vegetables and fruits.

Also, people get a good laugh when they see only a "head" bobbing in the breeze. — Ilse Kershner

DEAR HELOISE:

A nice wedding remembrance (or at least a practical one) is to make a tub scrubber from the squares of nylon net used to wrap rice or confetti. — Winnie Pitman

DEAR HELOISE:

My neighbor and I save money by giving each other home permanents. We both like the little sponge wrappers that come with one particular brand, but do not always buy that one to use — usually get what is on sale at the time. So I decided to try washing those little sponges to use again, rather than throw them away and be without one the next time we needed it for a permanent.

I put them in the nylon bag I use to wash my hose in and washed them with a gentle load and they came out like new. Have re-used them three times so far.

Another few pennies saved! — Ann Ammond

DEAR HELOISE:

I'd like to pass on a tip my cousin told me while we were having a cup of coffee which was too weak as I had used a different brand.

She said to add a little bit of instant coffee to our cups instead of wasting a whole pot of expensive brewed coffee.

Tasted great! — Denise

DEAR HELOISE:

One can easily make a collar extender for a husband's shirt, using a shirt button and a piece of strong thread.

Simply start as when sewing on a button in the regular way, but leave an extension of almost one-half inch of thread between the button and shirt collar.

When he puts his tie on, the extension won't be noticed. — Mrs. Crystal Keller

Oh-h-h, a lot of guys' poor necks are gonna love you for this super hint. And it's such an easy way to be rid of those choking collars. You're a pal! — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

I am a very loyal reader of your column and have discovered and used many helpful hints over the years.

I had accumulated many small bars of wrapped soap from hotels and motels during our travels over the years.

I have found many ways to make use of them. Now I have discovered another use for the miniature soap bars — for little children.

Our little granddaughter has her own soap dish in her bathroom. Her mother has found that the soaps are just the right size for a 2½-year-old to hold both at the sink and in the bathtub.

I hope this idea of little soap for little children will be useful to others. Our little one sure gets a kick out of her very own soap.

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

A really good player knows the correct way to play all card combinations. All else being equal, he knows that while correct technique doesn't always win it sure pays off in the long run.

South lost the club finesse at trick two. Back in his hand with a second diamond he entered dummy with a heart, led the four of spades and finessed with his queen. So far so good. He was using correct technique because had he led dummy's 10 spot and East held the singleton king, he would have set up the nine in the West hand.

Back to dummy again and the five of spades was led to his jack. West showed out and there was no way left for South to pick up the four spade tricks he needed for the slam.

It was also bad technique. The lead of the 10 of spades at this point in time would have been a sure winner unless West had held back the king of spades the first time. However, in that case the slam was doomed from the start.

Ask the Experts

Today's article describes one. When South failed to lead the 10 from dummy the second time he led spades, he had made a play that could hurt him but could not help him.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I wish you would find room for this poem. I'm sure it would help a lot of people with very young children and large families who are always saying:

Send a Picture of the Baby:
Got your 20th letter today,
Ending line went this way:
"Whenever you get a chance one day,
Send a picture of the baby."
Today we got your 14th call.
Everyone is fine and all.
But send a picture of the baby."
Friends and family, we love you a lot,
That picture is 20 bucks a shot.
It's money we just haven't got,
So send a quarter for the baby.
We think it's just a great idea,
So send a quarter here and there,
And maybe by this time next year

— From Mother Of The Baby — In Green Bay

Dear Mother: When people ask for a picture of the baby, they don't mean send a $20 portrait. A snapshot will do. So — loosen up, put one in the mail and forget the poetry, Mrs. Browning.

Dear Ann Landers: I've just read your reprint of your message to "Meant Well" and I agree that guilt after children have been raised does no good.

Kindergarten and first grade teachers like me see many little people whose lives are made unnecessarily difficult by well-meaning parents. We are able to compare their children with others the same age in an objective manner. Some youngsters are not permitted to exercise their own judgment and are kept much too dependent. Others, given too much freedom, become tyrants. They run their parents' lives and try to run everyone else's.

Many children receive so little preschool preparation, they need another year of kindergarten or first grade to enable them to cope successfully with their peers.

We don't claim to be 100 percent right all the time, but if parents would cooperate with us, their children would benefit handsomely. Please print this message — especially for moms and dads who think we are mean because we ask that Mary or Johnny repeat a year. — First Grade Teacher

Dear Teacher: I hear you loud and clear — and what you say makes a lot of sense. Too bad so many parents resent any criticism about their youngsters. Please, Mom and Dad, listen to what this teacher is saying. She WANTS to help.

WHAT'S UP?

Bucky Dent meets 6-year-old fan Nancy Thomas.

What's up in making friends?

The biggest handicap experienced by many of the 35 million Americans with disabilities is not their inability to walk, see or hear. Instead, it is the attitude of others toward them.

Here are some pointers to remember when meeting a person with a disability from New York Yankee Bucky Dent, a member of the National Easter Seal Sport Council.

- Relax. If you don't know what to do or say, allow the person with the disability to help put you at ease.
- Explore mutual interests. The person likely has many interests besides those connected with the disability.
- Offer assistance if asked or if the need seems obvious. Don't overdo it or insist on it.
- Talk about the disability if it comes up naturally — without prying. Be guided by the wishes of the person.
- Appreciate what the person can do. Remember that his or her difficulties may stem more from society's attitudes and barriers than from the disability itself.
- Be considerate of the extra time it might take for a person with a disability to get things said or done. Let the person set the pace in walking or talking.

Most of all, remember that the person who has a disability is a person — just like anyone else.

What's up in debts?

Still waiting for your brother-in-law to repay that five spot you loaned him back in 1953? Then you may have some sympathy for Uncle Sam.

According to the State Department, foreign nations owe the U.S. government $45.7 billion, excluding World War I debts. These are the leading debtors:

Nation	Debt
Israel	$4.2 billion
India	3.5 billion
Britain	3.2 billion
Pakistan	2.6 billion
Korea	2.5 billion
Brazil	2.4 billion

And seven more nations — Indonesia, Turkey, Egypt, the Soviet Union, Taiwan, Spain and Chile — each own the United States more than $1 billion.

What's up in laws?

Remember Murphy's Law? That's the one holding that anything that can go wrong will.

Omni Magazine recently asked its readers to submit similar axioms. These were the winners:

1. It always takes longer than you expect — even when you take this law into account.
2. If rats are experimented upon, they will develop cancer.
3. The second is never as good as the first.
4. With extremely few exceptions, nothing is worth the trouble.
5. It's bad luck to be superstitious.
6. No child throws up in the bathroom.
7. The other person's attitude depends on which direction the money moves between you.
8. When solving for unpaid bills (U), where outgo (O) is greater than income (I), then the problem may not be simplified to "IOU" but only to "I-OUourt costs."
9. One man's "simple" is another man's "huh?"
10. Whenever man comes up with a better mousetrap, nature invariably comes up with a better mouse.

What's up in books?

Some books are too rare to be found on the shelves of the nation's libaries. And others are too racy.

But these books may not be there simply because they are too popular. They are the most-requested titles at libraries in 150 U.S. cities, according to the American Library Association.

BIRTHDAY ALMANAC

Compiled by the editors of The World Almanac

May 27 — Vincent Price (1911-), the actor who made his Hollywood debut in 1938. He has appeared in numerous films but is best known for his horror-movie roles which include "House of Wax," "The Fly" and "The Raven."

May 28 — Jim Thorpe (1888-1953), the athlete who won the pentathlon and decathlon events at the 1912 Olympics, but was stripped of his medals because he had played professional baseball in 1911 and was therefore not an amateur. He later played professional baseball and football, and was the first president of the National Football League.

May 29 — John F. Kennedy (1917-1963), the 35th President of the United States, 1961-63. He was elected to the U.S. Senate in 1952 and defeated Richard Nixon in the 1960 presidential election. On Nov. 22, 1963, he was assassinated in Dallas, Tex.

May 30 — Benny Goodman (1909-), the clarinetist and bandleader who is known as the "King of Swing." He headed the first jazz concert ever held in Carnegie Hall in 1938.

May 31 — Fred Allen (1894-1956), the humorist who started his career in vaudeville as a juggler. His greatest popularity was on radio. His program, featuring Allen's Alley, began in 1932 and lasted until 1949.

June 1 — Marilyn Monroe (1926-1962), the actress whose fame surpassed that of any other entertainer of her time. Her films include "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," "The Seven-Year Itch" and "Some Like It Hot."

June 2 — Thomas Hardy (1840-1928), the 19th-century British novelist and poet. His novels include "Far From the Madding Crowd," "The Return of the Native" and "Jude the Obscure."

Couple Married 71 Years 'Never Had A Cross Word'

CROSS LANES, W.Va. (AP) — Bennett Cobb and Clora Casto were childhood sweethearts.

"We just liked one another," he reminisced. "It went on every day just like it did when we were first married. Me and her never had a cross word."

That was on Jan. 8, 1908.

Seventy-one years ago.

All he had in the world was $55. But he had not a worry in the world.

"Worry will shorten your days," he says.

They were wed on her mother's farm in Jackson County, 40 miles away, and moved in for 17 years.

Their legacy is one of happiness and four generations: six children, ranging in age frm 54 to 70, 16 grandchildren, two dozen great-grandchildren and one great-great-grandchild.

In his 93 years, Cobb says he has never been seriously ill, never even had a fever.

Clora, who is 90, has to use a walker to get around their trailer home because of a broken hip she suffered nearly two years ago. She also has a heart ailment.

Cobb traded horses and worked as a herdsmen on dairy farms all of his life.

"I enjoyed my work," he says. "If you enjoy what you're doing, you'll live longer. I'm surprised we've been living this long. The Good Lord has been good to us."

"I'm old and helpless, but I don't feel in the way," says Clora. "I still enjoy my life."

They do their own cooking. He does the grocery shopping and helps with the dishes. Their oldest daughter, Mrs. Opal Taylor, 70, lives next door and often looks in on them.

Cobb and his wife passed up the serious arguments, but life never passed them by. They took their marriage vows seriously.

"We had no serious arguments, just little ups and downs," he says. "We'd just pass them up and go ahead. We always had a pretty good living. We took a vow and we got along very nicely."

Ailing Senior To Graduate On Schedule

HOUSTON (AP)— Ricky Guevara, dressed in his red cap and gown, will receive his high school diploma Saturday in a sterile glassed-in hospital room that his been his home and his classroom since March.

Only a few months ago, Ricky was an active 18-year-old, a member of the Rio Grande City football, baseball and track teams. He was making plans to attend Texas Southmost College in nearby Brownsville.

His only problem was a persistent infection of the tonsils, an ailment that resisted all medication.

After a physicial examination, a doctor then gave his diagnosis and prognosis: Ricky had leukemia and less than a month to live.

After treatment at M.D. Anderson Hospital, Ricky was able to continue his studies with the help of tutors.

The past months, he said recently, have gone by quickly, although getting used to his isolation was difficult.

"There is really no contact with people. You're in here all the time. It's just a 10-by-10 foot room, almost like a jail."

An administrator from Rio Grande City High School plans to fly to Houston Saturday to present the diploma to Ricky.

Mrs. Guevara said, "I spent the first four weeks here crying and praying."

With the leukemia in remission, Ricky is to be released from the hospital within the next cuple of weeks. He said his college education may have to wait a semester or two, but eventually plans to follow his career goal in law enforcement.

But right now, "the first thing I am going to do when I get out of here is go to church and then I'm going to get a good mean--Mexican food," he said.

Senator To Try Again For Passage Of State Aid To Physicians Bill

By RUTHANNE BROCKWAY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A bill to provide state aid for resident physician salaries at teaching hospitals failed by one vote for the second consecutive day Friday, and its Senate sponsor said the bill's fate now is "too close to call."

Sponsored by Sen. Chet Brooks of Pasadena, the bill needed the votes of two-thirds of the Senate members present. It failed by one vote both Thursday, when the vote was 20-11, and Friday, when the margin was 17-9.

Brooks will attempt to pass the legislation again today.

Supporters of the bill said that four of the senators missing from the floor Friday afternoon when the issue came up would have voted in favor of the bill had they been present.

But during the debate on the bill Friday, Sen. Tom Creighton of Mineral Wells vigorously opposed the measure, shouting, "People in Texas, in my opinion, are tired of spending, spending, spending."

Originally the Legislative Budget Board estimated the legislation would cost the state $27.6 million in fiscal year 1980 to pay a portion of the salary of some 1,845 graduate medical students in residence at Texas teaching hospitals.

Rep. Chris Semos of Dallas sponsored the bill in the House where it passed March 21. But Senate amendments to the bill slashed the funds to $2.6 million for the biennium and if the bill passes the Senate it must return to the House for approval of the revision.

Brooks estimated the $2.6 million figure would cover approximately 5 percent of a resident's salary. "It is by no means any major relief," Brooks said.

But Creighton said it was a token amount in a "foot in the door bill" and that later the figures would increase.

Not surprisingly, officials at Lubbock's teaching hospital strongly support the bill. "Any dollars will be of help and most welcome," Gerald Bosworth, executive director of Lubbock's Health Sciences Center Hospital, said. "I can't say enough positive about the passage of this bill."

HSCH and other hospitals affiliated with the state's seven medical schools would be affected by the bill which has been introduced in previous legislative sessions.

"This is not the first time for this bill, but it has its best chance ever this session," an aide to Brooks said.

If Brooks does manage to gain passage of the bill before the legislative session ends at midnight Monday.

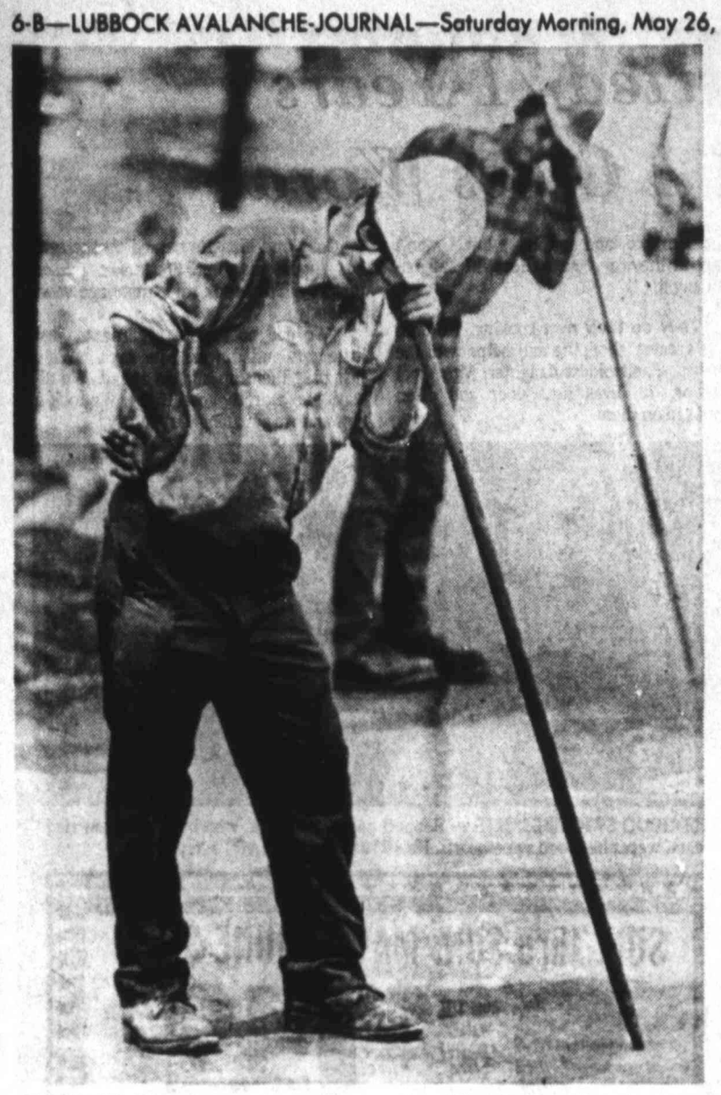

Gov. Bill Clements indicated in March that he had reservations about the bill, saying that communities which built teaching hospitals knew what they were getting into when they agreed to build.

Sen. E.L. Short of Tahoka indicated if the bill passes the Senate, supporters will push a "hard-core" lobbying effort to urge Clements to sign the bill.

Pontiff Lays Down Law To Professors

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II on Friday decreed professors at Roman Catholic universities should refrain from challenging basic church doctrine or face dismissal from their posts.

The pontiff said new research should never be at the expense of Church Magisterium, that is papal and hierarchical teaching.

The pronouncement came in an 87-page "Apostolic Constitution" — a papal decree which tightened Vatican control over some 126 Church-run universities around the world.

The decree put an end to a controversial experimental period the Polish pope's predecessor, Paul VI, had launched in 1968 in the wake of the 1962-1965 Vatican Ecumenical Council.

The decree broadly hinted to a students' role in administering the universities, but left it up to the statutes of individual bodies to go into specifics.

"In studying and teaching Catholic doctrine, fidelity to the Magisterium of the Church is always to be emphasized," the decree said. "Hypothetical or personal opinions which come from new research are to be modestly presented."

The decree concerned those Roman Catholic universities or faculties specializing in religious teaching, such as theology, ethics and Biblical studies.

It ordered these universities to spell out in their statutes "for what reasons and in which ways a teacher can be suspended, or even deprived of his post" and also "how the students can for serious reasons be suspended from certain rights or be deprived of them or even be expelled from the Faculty."

The document, entitled Sapientia Christiana—Christian Wisdom — from the opening words of the official Latin text, was the result of the work of three popes.

Paul VI was about to release it when he died last August. His successor John Paul I had reportedly revised it in part and was planning its release when he suddenly died after just 34 days as pope last September.

But Vatican sources said the final decree carried the imprint of John Paul II's strong character, emphasizing doctrinal conservatism. In the foreword to the document, the Polish pope said he issued it "after long and careful consideration of the matter."

The decree capped years of debate in the church over what some sectors regarded as Paul VI's exceeding liberality in allowing controversial theologians, such as Hans Kung in Germany and Eduard Schillebeeckx in Holland, to continue teaching in Church-run universities training future priests. Subjects at issue ranged from Christ's divinity to papal infallibility to the sinfulness of birth control devices.

Pope Paul's prevailing attitude was to let local bishops handle individual cases.

But in Friday's decree Pope John Paul II emphasized centralized control.

He ruled that all teachers need Vatican clearance before obtaining tenure. He demanded of them "full communion with the authentic Magisterium of the Church, above all, with that of the Roman pontiff."

The new rules apply to 126 Roman Catholic Eclesiastical universities and faculties from Argentina to Poland to Zaire. They included those in the United States in Baltimore, Chicago, St. Louis and Spokane.

Bible Teacher Plans Conference Talks

Bible teacher Charles Simpson is the featured speaker at a Covenant Life Conference at Pleasant Ridge Baptist Church, 801 Slide Road, today through Sunday.

Other speakers of the conference are Glen Roachelle, senior pastor of Metroplex Fellowship in Dallas/Fort Worth; Jim Moore, senior pastor of Fountain Life Fellowship in Ruston, La.; Bill Mayne, senior pastor of Southwest Fellowship in Midland; Joe Garlington, a preacher with several music albums to his credit; and Big John Hall, recording artist and gospel singer.

Services for the conference begin at 7:30 p.m. today with Hall leading special music and Roachelle speaking.

Services continue Saturday at 9:30 a.m. with Moore speaking on family life. Garlington and Simpson will speak at the 7:30 p.m. service Saturday.

Simpson is also speaking at 10:30 a.m. Sunday, the last day of the conference. The conference concludes with a 6:30 p.m. service Sunday.

Simpson is a Bible teacher who emphasized practical application of Scripture with "how-to" clarity, according to a church spokesman. His ministry encompasses family relationships, the Holy Spirit and covenant life.

For 14 years, he pastored Bayview Baptist Church in Mobile, Ala. Prior to ordination, he studied at William Carey College and New Orleans Baptist Theological Seminary.

Baptists Set Leadership Laboratory

Sponsors of the lab are the Lubbock Baptist Association, special services division of the Baptist General Convention of Texas, and the church recreation department of the Baptist Sunday School Board.

The lab is designed for all youth leadership, church staff members, volunteer youth ministers, Sunday School teachers, church training leaders and others.

The lab is intended to help laymen and church staff improve youth ministries in their churches, according to a spokesman.

Topics include the Use of Recreation in Youth Ministry, Improving Youth Sunday School, Understanding and Counseling Today's Youth, Creative Bible Study Experiences, Youth and Family, Discipleship — Developing Leaders Among Youth, Social Events — Fellowships, Banquets and Parties, Creative Youth-Led Worship, The Whys and Whats of Youth Ministry, and Youth Publicity — Keeping Them Informed and Involved.

Lab leaders include Don Mattingly, special services coordinator of the Baptist Sunday School Board church recreation; Barbara Kent, youth curriculum writer and teacher from Plainview; Dan Kent, associate professor of religion at Wayland Baptist College in Plainview; Phil Hall, director of Our Home Retreat Ministry in Austin; Mike Horton, family life minister at Lubbock First Baptist Church; John Glover, minister of music and youth at Pampa First Baptist Church; Charlie Elliot, minister of activities and recreation at Midland First Baptist Church; David Hairel, associate minister of music at Lubbock First Baptist Church; Bailey Stone, pastor of Odessa First Baptist Church; and Jerry Morris, youth minister of Paramount Baptist Church in Amarillo.

Some Church Leaders Did Believe In Ghosts

LONDON (AP) —The Church of England has pulled a dusty skeleton from its cupboard: a report of an inquiry into spiritualism which was kept under wraps for 40 years.

It reveals that a majority of the church investigators believed in the possibility of communicating with the spirits of the dead while others found it nonproven.

Among the latter, a scientist testified that after hundreds of experiments with mediums and water diviners, he found "there was less than one chance in 10,000 that any of the alleged paranormal phenomena was genuinely paranormal."

The 15,000-word report, titled "Archbishop's Committee on Spiritualism," lay under a now-expired 40-year embargo with other private papers of Archbishop Cosmo Gordon Lang who died in 1945.

In 1936, Lang invited 14 prominent churchmembers "to investigate the subject of communications with discarnate spirits and the claims of spiritualism in relation to Christian faith."

Their eventual report showed they could not agree and Lang sat on it. Perhaps the decision not to publish was because the difference of opinion was so sharp, says Archdean of Durham Michael Perry.

He printed the report in the quarterly "Christian Parapsychologist" which he edits for the church's Fellowship for Psychical and Spiritual Studies.

The archdeacon said that when Lang received the report, World War II was in the air and "the church had other things to do in 1939 than be torn by controversies of this kind."

The archdeacon says the present Archbishop of Canterbury, the Most Rev. Donald Coggan, would do a service to Christians by initiating new studies of the paranormal for the church to consider.

Lang was prompted to the inquiry by a surge of interest in spiritualism. Mediums were in demand and seances had become fashionble.

New Orleans Minister To Address Baptists

Dr. Landrum Pinson Leavell II, the seventh president of the New Orleans Baptist Theological Seminary and former pastor of the First Baptist Church in Wichita Falls, will be the pulpit guest for all three services Sunday at the First Baptist Church, Broadway and Avenue V.

Services Sunday at the church are at 8:15 a.m., 10:45 a.m. and 7:30 p.m.

Dr. Leavell holds a bachelor of arts degree from Mercer University in Macon Ga., where he was a member of Kappa Alpha fraternity. Ordained to the ministry in July, 1948, he entered New Orleans Baptist Theological Seminary where he received a bachelor of divinity degree in 1951 and the doctoral degree in theology in 1954 with a major in Greek New Testament.

His pastorates in Mississippi include Union Baptist Church, Magnolia; Crosby Baptist Church, Crosby; and First Baptist Church, Charleston; and First Baptist Church, Gulfport.

He pastored the Wichita Falls church from December, 1963, to January, 1975, when he accepted his present position with the New Orleans seminary.

He has held the vice presidency of the Southern Baptist Convention, presidency of the Pastor's Conference of the Southern Baptist Convention and membership on the Baptist Sunday School Board and the Home Mission Board. He also served the Baptist General Convention of Texas as president.

From 1970 to 1978, he authored a number of religious books, which were published by Broadman Press of Nashville, Tenn. His latest book, "Sermons For Celebrating," was released in May, 1978.

A 1968 sermon, titled "America At The Crossroads," won him the George Washington Honor Medal Award from Freedoms Foundation of Valley Forge, Pa.

He is married to the former Jo Ann Paris of New Orleans, a graduate of Ward-Belmont and Sophie Newcomb College. They have four children.

CHURCH BRIEFS

Rev. Davis Price, minister of Lubbock's Covenant Presbyterian Church, is attending the United Presbyterian Church General Assembly in Kansas City, Mo., through Wednesday. He is attending as the Palo Duro Union Presbytery minister-delegate.

• • •

The senior high fellowship of Covenant Presbyterian Church will go on a trip to Six Flags Over Texas in Arlington during the Memorial Day weekend. The group will leave the church at 9 a.m. Saturday and travel to Arlington, where they will stay for two nights at the First United Methodist Church there. After attending early morning worship services Sunday, the group will tour Six Flags Over Texas.

Mexican Baptists Attend Meeting At Civic Center

Joel Tanana from Tapachula, Mexico, will be the Bible Study leader for the convention.

Evangelist Tommy Garza of Fort Worth will give the annual sermon June 25. Eliseo Aldape, Mexican Baptist Convention of Texas president and pastor of Lubbock's Arnett Benson Baptist Church, will speak during the June 26 session.

Clark Scanlon, Foreign Mission Board secretary for Middle America, will speak at the closing session June 27.

The key speaker at a preconvention rally, scheduled for June 24, will be Miguel Angel Diaz, director of evangelism for the Mexican National Baptist Convention.

The day sessions on June 26 and 27 will feature meetings of the Pastors' Conference, the Women's Missionary Union, Baptist Men, youth and others of the convention.

Further information may be obtained by writing Domingo Chapa, Arnett Benson Baptist Church, 201 N. Boston Ave., Lubbock, Tex., 79415.

Churches Combine Memberships

A-J Correspondent

TULIA — Tulia's First United Methodist Church and Trinity United Methodist Church formally merged membership recently in a special service here.

The two groups became one congregation, known as First United Methodist Church, by common consent and official action of both congregations.

A total of 57 members from Trinity merged with First United Methodist Church, which at the uniting service numbered 298 members attending, the best attendance for a morning worship service this year. Five new members also joined the merged church at the service.

A church dinner in the First United Methodist Church's fellowship hall recently celebrated the church merger and also honored the church's graduating seniors.

The immediate predecessor of Trinity Church was Trinity Chapel, a small rural church located 18 miles northeast of Tulia. In 1956, under the ministry of E.G. "Gene" Snodgrass, the church was moved to Tulia. Approximately 40 years earlier the same building had been moved from Memphis, 80 miles away.

Trinity Chapel had been on the Vigo Park Circuit. In four years after Trinity United Methodist Church was established in Tulia, it had five pastors, Snodgrass, Rev. Rex Newkirk, Rev. Don Merriman, Rev. M.E. Counterman and Rev. David Ray.

COAL-FIRE CONTROLS

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency will require stringent pollution controls on new coal-fired power plants, a multi-billion dollar effort designed to purify the nation's air, EPA administrator Douglas Costle announced Friday. The controls, which will affect 350 power plants which the agency estimates will be built by 1995, will cost utilities an estimated $55 billion, the EPA said.

City Application For Grant Approved

A City of Lubbock application for $3.9 million in federal Community Development funds has been approved by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen announced Friday.

The funds, which will become available June 1, primarily will be used for housing rehabilitation in low and moderate income neighborhoods in Lubbock. The Arnett-Benson neighborhood is expected to received the largest portion of the grant, with $643,877 earmarked for the area.

Other projects which will be funded include remodeling the house in the Buddy Holly Recreation Area for use as a party house, remodeling Rogers Park Community Center, paving the Copper Rawlings Community Center parking lot, making improvements on Canyon Lake No. 6 and beginning land acquisition for a park in Overton South.

Money also was approved for handicapped housing units in Greenfair Manor and Hub Homes, as well as a study of the need for handicapped housing in Lubbock.

WTJC Will Conduct Fifth Bible Camp

SNYDER (Special)—Western Texas Junior College will host its fifth annual Bible Camp for students in grades seven through 12 from July 8-14.

Fees will include lodging in the college dormitories, meals in the college's Student Center cafeteria, recreational activities and some class materials.

Ford Bows Out Of 1980 Election Bid, Maybe

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former President Gerald R. Ford declared Friday he has no intention of running for the 1980 Republican presidential nomination, but "I learned a long time ago never to say never."

"I have no plans nor expectations of becoming a candidate for any political office," Ford told a Washington Press Club luncheon.

In what has become a standard speech, Ford also said he would play no favorites among the candidates seeking the 1980 GOP nomination. Ford said: "They're all my friends. I will not favor one over another during the pre-convention contests."

Ford served two years in the White House and was defeated in 1976 by Democrat Jimmy Carter. Ford became president in August 1974 when Richard M. Nixon resigned in disgrace as a result of the Watergate scandal.

Most speculation among Republicans, including several presidential hopefuls, has been that Ford will not enter the 1980 race.

In his speech, Ford continued to criticize the Carter administration for "mishandling" the economy while voicing general support for the Democratic president's foreign policy.

He said he intends to study thoroughly the forthcoming strategic arms limitation treaty before taking a position on it.

He did not rule out speculation that he might offer his opinion on the SALT accord before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee or even on the Senate floor.

Looking back on the 1976 campaign, Ford repeated the assertion made in his recent book that he might have beaten Carter if he had received more support from Ronald Reagan, his principal rival for the nomination.

"I don't think that Gov. Reagan was as ardent in my behalf after the convention as he might have been," Ford said.

Nigeria Reaches Top Of Oil Price Ladder

NEW YORK (AP) — Nigeria joined Algeria at the top of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries price ladder Friday, raising its price $2.45 a barrel and putting pressure on OPEC to put through a hefty price increase when the cartel meets next month.

The new price for Nigerian oil, among the world's finest, is $20.96 a barrel, according to Petroleum Intelligence Weekly, a newsletter that covers the oil industry. The new Nigerian price and increase are similar to those announced earlier this week by Algeria.

Price Of Gold Continues Climb

NEW YORK (AP) — The price of gold continued is month-long climb Friday, jumping more than $5 an ounce to new peaks in Europe while the dollar gained in New York and was mixed in markets abroad.

The dollar's gain against most major currencies in New York came despite news of continued high inflation. The Consumer Price Index rose 1.1 percent in April, its third month of increases of 1 percent or more.

"The dollar had a decent upside, which is surprising given the CPI figure but obviously some were expecting worse," said one New York dealer. Trading volume was described as moderate.

Gold closed at $270.625 an ounce in Zurich, a rise of $6.25 since Wednesday. The Zurich market was closed Thursday because of the Ascension Day holiday. In London, gold closed at $270.25, slightly down from the afternoon fixing of $270.60 but $5.25 above Thursday's closing rate.

Church Loses Court Battle In Extradition Proceedings

LONDON (AP) — The Church of Scientology Friday lost a London court battle to prevent two of its members from being extradited to the United States on charges of counselling and procuring burglary of American government offices.

But the church immediately announced an appeal to the Divisional Court in London and said that if necessary it will pursue the appeal through the Houe of Lords and the European Court, which has jurisdiction because of Bitain's membership of the European Economic Community.

Magistrate William Robbins, giving his decision in the Wells Street magistrates court, rejected the defense argument that the case is of a political nature ruling out extradition under British law.

Robbins held instead that the U.S. authorities had established their case for extradition of Mrs. Jane Kember, 41, a Briton born in Kenya when Kenya was a British colony, and Morrison Budlong, 30, an American.

They are wanted for trial in Washington, along with other Scientologists, in connection with the removal of documents from Washington offices of the U.S. Justice Department and the Internal Revenue service.

Mrs. Kember is a senior executive and Budlong is a researcher at the Church of Scientology headquarters at East Grinstead, south of London.

Attorneys for the U.S. government alleged that members of the sect, under instructions from Mrs. Kember and Budlong, who was born in Tampa, Fla., infiltrated American government departments and burgled documents.

Counsel for the Scientologists, Louis Blom-Cooper, Queen's Counsel, did not deny the burglaries but had argued that the aim was to obtain official secrets of interest to the Church of Scientology and so was of a political nature and thus not an extraditable offense.

The U.S. government's attorney, David Tudor Price, had told the court that the burglary charges were ordered after sect members reported unearthing documents by Interpol, the Paris-based international police organization, about L. Ron Hubbard, who founded the Church of Scientology in the United States in 1954.

Throughout the nine-day hearing before Magistrate Robbins, there were constant references in evidence to claims that the Central Intelligence agency and other American intelligence departments were trying to infiltrate the Scientologists' organization.

Giving judgment for the U.S. government, Magistrate Robbins said: "At the end of the day it seems to me that what we have here is two parties locked in litigation. One enters the building of the other to obtain documents for use in litigation. This is the nub of the whole matter.

"I really cannot consider this as a matter of state or, as has been suggested, high politics. I cannot see this in any way."

The magistrate then said that Blom-Cooper for the defense had put the church in the category of an entirely responsible organization with very high idealistic aims.

"But allegations of serious offences had been made against it and the U.S. government had to look into them," he added. "What I have got to bear in mind is that the U.S. government is required to protect the public."

By appealing against the magistrate's decision in favor of extradition, Mrs. Kember and Budlong are free to stay on in Britain until the next round of court proceedings.

The Scientologists immediately predicted "a long and rocky and hazardous path" for American government attorneys allocated to the case.

David Gaiman, international spokesman for the Church of Scientoloy, said in a statement to The Associated Press:

"The American government came to court asking for extradition for burglary, perjury, obstruction of justice et al.

"Unfortunately, the magistrate did not conceive he has the authority to view this as political.

"But we are very pleased as we go to the Divisional Court with many hundreds of pages of evidence on the record of what the magistrate called 'administrative overkill' and what I call administration crimes against the First and Fourth Amendment of the U.S. Constitution.

"The U.S. government attorneys still have a long and rocky and hazardous path to travel before either Budlong or Kember come near to their grasp.

'There is no doubt that the American Justice Department lacks the moral stamina to win this befoe first the Divisional Court, secondly the House of Lords, and thirdly the European Court.

"They have only to lose once to fail in extradition proceedings."

Sure, one of these days I'll be marching out in cap and gown with a diploma in my hand to take my place in that world of ours. Lots of things I'll be needing then besides a degree . . .

I'll need what they call character! And a sense of values! I'll need ethical principles, moral standards. A deep awareness of the meaning of duty, of honesty, of integrity. And on the way to all of these I'll need to discover a Faith by which to live.

There are strong churches in our community, with fine programs of religious education. I think my parents expect to start me in Sunday School.

But I have't yet commenced. My most important beginning hasn't begun.

Please Dad! Please Mom! Think about my commencement.

SAFE AND SECURE — Swaddled in the traditional way, but resting on the tailgate of a station wagon, babies sleep through a cattle roundup at the Warm Springs Indian Reservation in Oregon. Ranchers, loggers, and hotelkeepers, the 2,300 members of three tribes have a gross annual income of nearly 50 million and their financial security seems assured.

Oregon Indian Tribes Achieve Security

By WILLIAM J. O'NEILL
National Geographic News Service

WASHINGTON — Many people picture America's Indians as living poverty-stricken lives on desolate reservations.

Census figures indicate this applies to more than 38 percent of the nation's estimated 827,000 Indians. But it doesn't apply to Oregon's Wasco, Warm Springs, and Paiute Indians.

The 2,300 members of the Confederated Tribe of Warm Springs Indians have become entrepreneurs whose gross annual income is nearly $50 million, says National Geographic writer David Boyer.

"Forty-one years ago, when the Indians opted for self-government, their baseline was poverty," he reports in the magazine's April issue. "Today they're financially better off than many white Americans of the desert around them."

They have become ranchers, whose high-spirited horses fetch good prices as rodeo broncs, and loggers who operate their own sawmill and plywood plant.

They're also resort operators, hosting business conventions and vacationers at a new $8 million hotel. Kah-nee-ta lodge offers everything from golf, tennis, riding, and fishing to sumptuous dinners with imported wines, Boyer discovered.

The U.S. government drove the Indians from their Columbia River fishing grounds in 1855 and resettled them on the edge of the desert. Boyer finds it ironic that the Indians now rent rooms to bureaucrats fleeing urban pollution for a few days of clean air and unspoiled scenery.

The turning point for the three tribes came 11 years ago, when they won their campaign to be reimbursed for lands taken from them a century earlier.

"They spent $100,000 to have Oregon State University make an economic feasibility study of their reservation. They bought a sawmill and a plywood plant. Then they built the lodge, and now they're talking about building a $30 million hydroelectric plant on the Deschutes River."

Tribal members receive pensions at age 60. Confederation profits last year provided every man, woman, and child with dividends of $75 a month and a Christmas bonus of $1,200.

Although Cornett calls the tribes "the most viable Indian society in the country," some problems persist. Boyer cites alcoholism and turned-off youth as the gravest ones.

"We've got some good young cowboys," Nelson Wallulatum told him. Then the Wasco chief added: "But what we need is not so much rodeo champions as college graduates."

One of these is Kenneth L. Smith, a Wasco who majored in finance. From an ultramodern office building, he oversees tribal operations that employ more than 1,000 people, with an annual payroll of $12 million.

Smith believes that with financial success the tribes will gain more independence. But the stresses, "We're going to stay Indian."

"We started American history," he said. "And we are going to stay in it till the end."

First Concern In Home Fires, Saving Lives, Property Next

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Is your home a fire trap?

Stop and think before you answer. Are you taking your safety for granted, assuming that it will always be someone else who's hit — not your family?

The Department of Housing and Urban Development says more than 6,000 people die every year as a result of fires in the home. Being prepared for emergencies can mean the difference between minor damage and total destruction

Your first concern in case of fire should be human life. "Putting out the fire in order to save your personal property is secondary," says a HUD guide. "Don't fight a fire if there is any chance of being trapped."

If the fire is a small one, unlikely to spread, you can tackle the flames yourself. Fire extinguishers can be valuable, but different types of fires require different types of equipment.

A pressurized water extinguisher, for example, can be used to put out fires involving things like paper, wood, cloth, rubber and plastics. It is not suitable for use on oil, appliances, cooking grease or gasoline fires. Read directions carefully before you buy.

Some household fires can be put out, or at least contained, relatively easily; others require a call to the experts. Here, from HUD, are some suggestions for handling some of the most common problems:

—Smoke from an electric motor or appliance: Pull the plug or otherwise turn off the current. If there are flames, pour on water after the electricity is off.

—Smoke from a television: Keep clear of the set; the picture tube may burst. Call the fire department and shut off power to the circuit.

—Deep fat fryer: Turn off the heat and, if you can get close enough without getting burned, cover with a lid. Do not try to move the appliance or put out the fire. Call the fire department.

—Clothing fire: Don't run. Lie down. Roll over and over. Try to get the clothing off, if you can do so without pulling it over your head.

A HUD guide, "People and Fire," provides information on a wide variety of safety topics. It costs $1.30 and is available from the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 93G, Pueblo, Colo., 81009.

Electric appliances post a particular hazard. Too much electricity passing through wiring heats it so insulation and surrounding material start to burn; a spark leaping across a gap can ignite vapors; and hot surfaces on applcances like toasters can touch off paper, wood or cloth.

There are several basic steps to take to avoid electrical fires:

—Don't overload the circuit. Add up the wattage of all the lights and appliances on each circuit. If the wattage of the appliances used at any given time exceeds 1,800 watts for a 15-amp circuit or 2,400 watts for a 20-amp circuit, you're in trouble.

—Never replace fuses with one having a higher ampere rating. Circuits in most older homes should use 15 amp fuses; newer homes generally can take 20 amp fuses. Special heavy-duty circuits for electric stoves and other appliances may require 25 or 30 amp fuses.

—Don't use an ordinary extension cord for any appliance which uses a lot of electricity. An appliance which uses more than 600 watts should be equipped with a special cord with 14-gauge or 16-gauge wires. HUD warns that extension cords may be labeled "heavy duty" when their wiring is no thicker than normal. If in doubt, don't use such a cord.

—Check cover plates over outlets and switches. If they feel hot, the wiring may be loose. Shut off the power and tighten connections.

Aerial Photography Art Rated Vital

By DONALD J. FREDERICK
National Geographic News Service

WASHINGTON — Aerial photography, once the pastime of eccentrics and daredevils, has become indispensable in the modern world.

Archaeologists, explorers, and geographers rely on it. So do foresters, geologists, traffic experts, real estate men, and soil-erosion specialists. Military intelligence would be lost without it.

Archeologists take to the air to photograph the countryside, seeking evidence of ancient ruins in patterns invisible from the ground. Cartographers make overlapping aerial pictures of the terrain. These are fed into an optical device which produces a stereo image. The picture is then translated into a topographic map of the area photographed.

But it is from space that some of most dramatic pictures of the earth have been beamed. Satellites have captured almost all of the earth's land surface, giving rare new insights into such things as geologic formations and the location of new mineral deposits.

Images from space also have been used to census crops over large areas, to monitor spring runoff of mountain snows, to detail insect infestations, and to assess quickly the damage from catastrophic floods, reports the National Geographic Society News Service.

Satellite-borne cameras and other sensing devices also have paid big dividends by showing patterns in weather systems, the earth's crust, or ocean currents that are often difficult to detect from the ground.

For example, last winter satellite pictures beamed on television showed the progress of crop-killing frost in Florida during the night, enabling citrus growers to know when they should turn on heating devices in their groves.

But it wasn't until 1930 that the first natural color photograph was made from the air. It was a view of the United States Capitol taken by Melville Bell Grosvenor of National Geographic from the dirigible Mayflower.

Recalled Grosvenor, "The pilot in charge of the Mayflower was given a signal, the motors were momentarily shut off to eliminate vibration, and the big bag floated quietly while the brief exposure was made."

SEEING EYE STAMP

MORRISTOWN, N.J. (AP) — The U.S. Postal Service is scheduled to unveil a 15-cent stamp Jun15 commemorating the 50th anniversary of Seeing Eye Inc., the nation's major supplier of "seeing eye" dogs. The stamp features a picture of a German shepherd dog in harness held by a man and the legend "Seeing For Me." It was unveiled here Thursday by Morristown Postmaster J. Robert Tracey.

Locust Love Call Heard

Within a few minutes, the brown carapace hangs empty like a discarded jacket. Nearby, the young adult is drying its wings.

Males begin to make noise, vibrating drumlike plates on their sides. After mating, females crawl out on the limbs and twigs and start drilling holes with sawlike egg-layers.

Each female may pump up to 600 eggs into dozens of holes. After six weeks the branches are crawling with minute larvae. They soon fall to the ground and dig into the nearest crevice to begin 17 years of solitary tunneling, hibernating, and growth.

The tiny, sawed holes weaken the branches, which snap off or hang like flags. Other insects may damage the trees through these wounds, but some trees appear to grow stronger after such natural pruning.

The 17-year locust's only defense against birds, squirrels, cats, dogs, and man is in numbers. As many as 40,000 may pop out of the ground beneath a single big tree.

The back "W" on each of the wings has long brought forth predictions of war. American Indians considered the cicadas' surprising appearance a bad omen, but the tribes also feasted on them with relish.

An adventurous naturalist claims that the plump insects, fried or boiled in a milk stew, taste better than oysters or shrimp.

Cigarette Lighter Saves Man's Life

CHICAGO (AP) — A Chicago man's smoking habit may have saved his life Friday when he was robbed and shot at a rapid transit station, police said.

Authorities said a cigarette lighter deflected a bullet aimed at the heart of Maurice Williams, 22. About $120 was taken in the robbery and Williams walked away with a bruised chest.

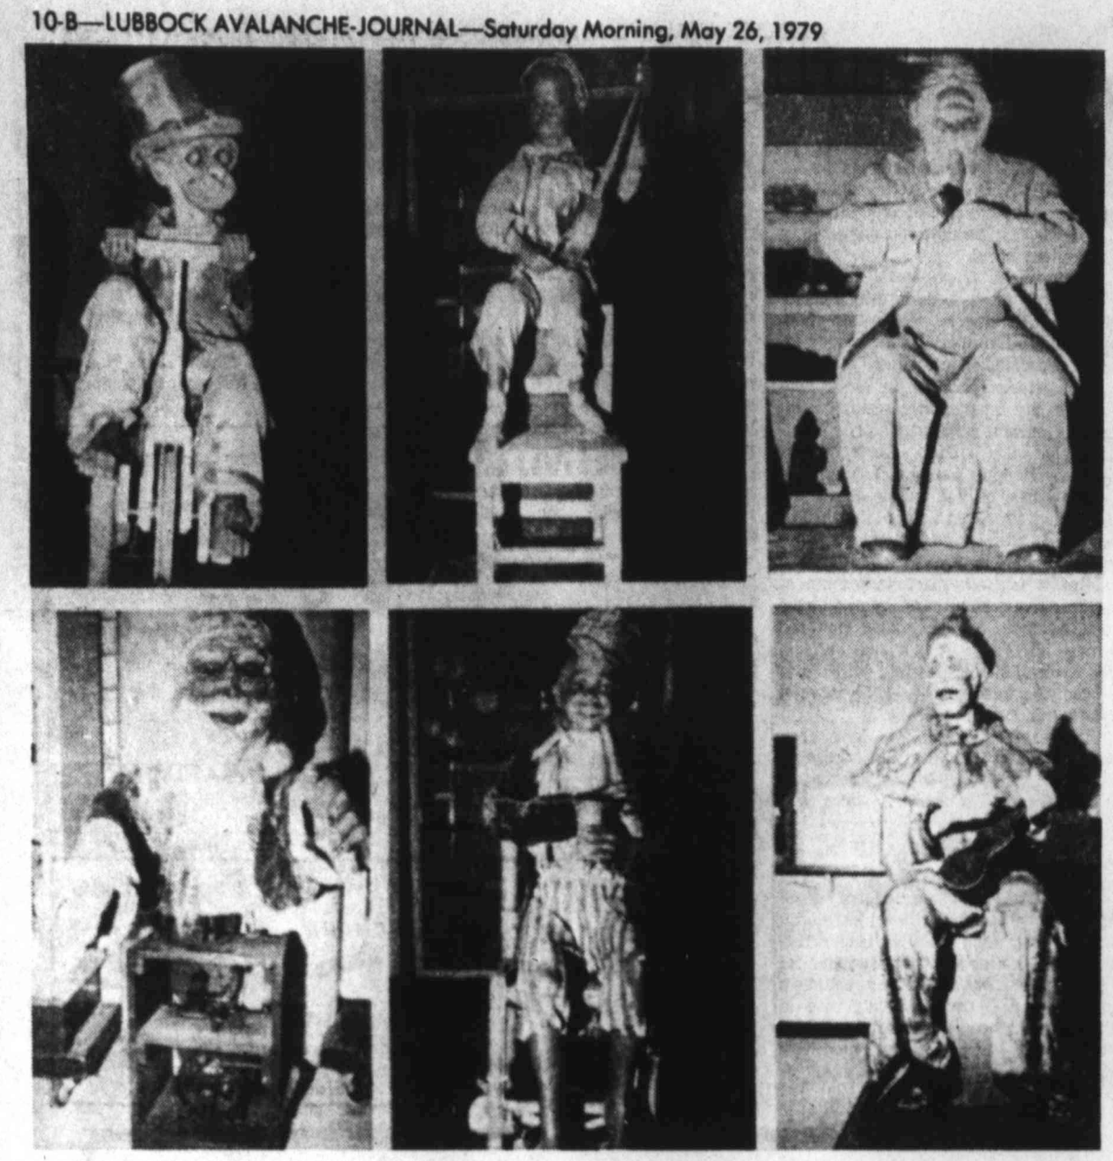

Police said two men approached Williams from behind and demanded his money. When he refused, one of the men drew a small caliber gun and fired at Williams' chest.

The bullet hit the cigarette lighter in his shirt pocket, but Williams fell to the ground stunned. The robbers took his money and fled.

Senator Fights Boredom With Naps

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. S.I. Hayakawa, R-Calif., the Senate's oldest freshman, says he is just resting his eyes and fighting off boredom when he closes them during President Carter's briefings on such issues as the energy crisis and SALT II.

But some of his collagues say the 72-year-old Californian has been observed dozing — And even snoring — in the presidential meetings.

The cat nap controversy surfaced last week during a White House meeting between Carter, California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., several state legislators and the entire California congressional delegation. The subject was California's energy shortage.

Several congressmen and state legislators told reporters Hayakawa had slept through most of the 45-minute discussion.

On Thursday, Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., said he didn't know about that but he had seen Hayakawa dozing two weeks ago when Carter briefed Senate leaders on the emerging U.S.-Soviet strategic arms limitation treaty.

Cranston said several people sitting near Hayakawa told him the senator "was snoring" during the briefing on SALT, which Cranston called "the most important issue facing mankind."

Since his arrival in Washington in January 1977, Hayakawa has been observed nodding off at other functions including Senate committee meetings, formal dinners and Senate sessions.

He initially refused comment on his energy snooze but finally addressed the issue at a news conference Thursday.

"Different people see different things depending on what they are looking for," he said.

He said he was not asleep but "bored" by the energy meeting. Although his eyes "may have been closed" it was "only for short periods — like one or two minutes."

"I don't fall asleep around here nearly as much as I did at San Francisco State," said Hayakawa, a world renowned linguistics expert and former president of that university.

"Things were really boring there."

Although no one raised the issue of Hayakawa's fitness to serve in the Senate, the senator produced a terse letter from the Senate doctor as proof of his good health.

The letter, signed by Dr. Freeman Cary, read: "Sen. S.I. Hayakawa has received routine health maintenance in this office since he has been a member of the Senate. His overall health is excellent for a person of his age."

Serious Soviet Nuclear Accident Discussed By U.S. Scientists

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government scientists said Thursday they are convinced a serious nuclear accident occurred two decades ago at a Soviet nuclear waste disposal plant, causing a wide area to be heavily contaminated with radiation.

There have been reports for years, based on claims by two exiled Soviet scientists and CIA documents, that the accident probably took place in the Ural Mountains in early 1958 and claimed the lives of hundreds of people.

The Soviet government has never confirmed such an accident.

S.I. Auerbach, director of environmental sciences at the Oak Ridge National Laboratory, told the Nuclear Regulatory Commission "the evidence leaves us convinced" an area of at least 25 square kilometers, or possibly much larger, was heavily contaminated.

In a report presented Thursday to the NRC, the scientist concluded that the area in Cheliabinsk Province northeast of the city of Kyshtym during the winter of 1957-58 received radiation doses much higher than amounts from a nuclear weapons fallout.

Auerbach said the scientists at Oak Ridge, a government atomic testing laboratory, reviewed 115 articles and reports in Soviet journals as well as information obtained by the CIA and claims by an exiled Soviet scientist who studied the accident.

Auerbach said no attempt was made to evaluate the effects of the accident and radiation on people in the area, but he did not rule out the possibility of "high numbers of casualties" and suggested further studies into the matter.

The accident was first discussed publicly in the West in 1972, when Zhores Medvedev, a Soviet biochemist now living in London, wrote that nuclear wastes near the first Soviet atomic power plants "somehow exploded" and carried radioactive particles over 1,000 square kilometers.

Medvedev claimed hundreds of persons died of radioactive poisoning and the CIA documents, made public in 1977, supported the assertions, quoting Russian sources as saying "hundreds of people perished ...."

Auerbach said, however that Medvedev's conclusions as to the cause of the accident and the extent of damage — 1,000 square miles — has not been fully supported.

The U.S. scientists said the occurrence of a nuclear explosion apeared highly unlikely, but another type of explosion or fire in the nuclear waste disposal plant may have occurred.

Furthermore, Auerbach said, the Soviets may have all along used the region's river and lake system to dispose radioactive wastes and, therefore, had a chronic release of contamination in the mountainous region.

"This accident got them (the Russians) to see the light" about the danger of nuclear radiation, Auerbach said.

Rule Application Delayed On Franchise Disclosure

WASHINGTON (AP) — Enforcement of the Federal Trade Commission's rule on franchise disclosure has been put off.

The rule will require persons selling franchises to report detailed facts about the business before the customer makes an investment.

The regulation was to have taken effect July 21, but has been put off to Oct. 21 because of a large volume of comments from the public.The agency said it needs the time to study the comments while preparing guidelines for enforcing the rule.

FATAL BLAZE

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Three persons were killed and another was critically burned Friday when fire gutted an Akron apartment. Dead are Wilbur P. Brown, 35, Eleanor Edwards, 38, and Carol Ratliff, 41, all of Akron, the Summit County coroner's office said. In critical condition at Akron Children's Hospital Medical Center burn unit was David Hardy, 32.

Sharper Economic Slowdown Forecast

TOKYO (AP) — Chairman of the board of the First National Bank of Chicago, Robert Abboud, said Friday that the economic slowdown in the U.S. economy at the end of 1979 "will be sharper than most people expect."

Abboud predicted a stronger U.S. economy will emerge in the 1980's hen savings will be traslated into productivity and expanded U.S. exports.

Rare Wine Auctioned At Stiff Price

By CATHY HORYN

CHICAGO (AP) — An 1806 bottle of Chateau Lafite-Rothschild was sold for a record $28,000 Thursday to a Syracuse, N.Y., liquor store owner at an auction of rare wines. The sale price exceeded experts' predictions by nearly $10,000.

The top bidder was Charles F. Mara, 31, who said he came to the Heublein Premiere National Wine Auction confident that he would take the famed Lafite home.

Bidding on the Bordeaux, believed to be one of the last two 1806 bottles in existence, reached a frenetic pace within minutes after the opening bid was struck at $8,000.

A flurry of bid cards fluttered through the crowd of nearly 600 as the price climbed toward $15,000, erasing the previous world record price of $14,200 for a similar 24-ounce bottle set in 1976.

It appeared as though $16,000 was the signal for the more timid to bow out, leaving only two men to duel for possession of the vintage Bordeaux, a bottle akin to that said to have been appreciated by Thomas Jefferson.

Several times Mara appeared to have reached his limit, but just as the auctioneer, J. Michael Broadbent of Christie's auction house in London, was about to signal the final bid, Mara raised his card, No. 155, and the jousting continued.

Once the price reached $20,000, the standing-room crowd began to surge toward the center aisle, gasping as bidding climbed to unexpected heights. Vargo conceded defeat at $27,000.

"I had a price tag of $20,000," Vargo said. "I went $5,000 to $6,000 over that, but that's neither here nor there."

Vargo, who had lost last year to Memphis restaurant owner John Grisanti in bidding for a similar Lafite vintage at Heublein's Atlanta show, said he had hoped to win the bottle to "carry it into the 21st Century." Referring to Mara, he added, "I hope he does the same."

"I feel great," Mara said. Referring to Jefferson's appreciation of the 1806 Lafite, Mara said he felt he was part of history and intended to keep the bottle corked for awhile.

"All I can say is that we own it and it's mine."

Wine experts predicted the Lafite would go for $14,000 to $18,000. At the Atlanta show, an 1864 jeroboam-bottled Lafite (120 ounces) sold for $18,000 to Grisanti, who used it for promotional purposes.

Peter Egan, a spokesman for Heublein, said the Lafite is in storage at the wine distributor's headquarters in Farmington, Conn. and will be shipped to Mara once he pays his bill.

Heublein, which conducts the nation's largest annual wine auction, will take a 25 percent commission. Egan declined to say who commissioned Heublein to sell the Bordeaux.

Another record was set earlier in the day when Bert Bidwell, a sporting goods store owner from Aspen, Colo., paid $8,000 for a lot of six 1887-1897 Inglenook wines. The top price previously paid for a California wine was $516 a bottle. Bidwell paid $1,333.

Slot Machines Banned By Maine Gambling Bill

AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) — Gov. Joseph Brennan Thursday signed a bill banning one-armed bandits and closing a loophole in Maine's gambling law that made slot machines a multimillion-dollar business last year.

The ban gives non-profit organizations licensed to operate nickel and dime games 90 days to remove 400 machines from American Legion halls, private lodges, bars and hotels.

"This is really a bill to preserve the quality of life in Maine," said Brennan. He said slot machines are an "open invitation" to the "type of people we don't need in this state."

But veterans groups, which stand to lose thousands of dollars in revenue, will launch a petition drive next week seeking a public referendum on slot machines.

The 208 non-profit organizations licensed to operate electronic slot machines in Maine last year earned $1.2 million. About $3.2 million was paid in winnings or went to the distributors for rental fees and service charges.

"We have volunteers from all over. We'll organize the whole state," vowed Lloyd Trufant, commander of the South Portland VFW.

"We're not going to take this lying down."

The South Portland VFW, which was one of the first non-profit organizations to install slot machines under Maine's 5-year-old charity gambling law, earned $72,000 from three slots in 1978. The ban on slot machines came as a surprise.

Back in January, there was support for a bill banning slots in bars and motels, but banning the slots entirely was not believed politically feasible.

But the veterans groups and private lodges did not wage much of a fight against the governor's campaign, and after the Senate voted overwhelmingly last week in favor of the ban, the House followed suit.

EVIDENCE DUMPED

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Heroin found by a private store security guard who made a citizen's arrest of a suspected thief may not used as evidence in court, the California Supreme Court has ruled. The 6-1 decision handed down Thursday reverses the conviction of Virginia Zelinski in Los Angeles County Superior Court for possession of heroin because the heroin was found during an illegal search.

YOUR PERSONAL BIORHYTHMS

By Bernard Gittelson, Author of "Biorhythm: A Personal Science"

The personal science of biorhythm can tell you how your day will go. Now you can judge the highs and lows of not only yourself, but loved ones and friends, and celebrities and stars. Biorhythm, our newest scientific discipline, is the study of the built-in natural cycles that powerfully influence our behavior.

BIORHYTHMS FOR MAY 26, 1979

PHYSICAL
Criticals: 10, 22, 33, 45, 56, 68 ..... Off balance day
Highs: 1-9, 23-32, 46-55, 69-75 ..... Feel peppy today

EMOTIONAL
Criticals: 7, 21, 35, 49, 63, 77 ..... Fragile emotionally
Highs: 1-6, 22-34, 50-62, 78-85 ..... You are confident today

INTELLECTUAL
Criticals: 6, 23, 39, 56, 72, 89 ..... Less discerning than usual
Highs: 1-5, 24-38, 57-71, 90-95 ..... Innovate all day
Lows: 7-22, 40-55, 73-88 ..... Easy to make mistakes

Enter your own permanent numbers in the chart in the bottom right-hand corner. To figure your own permanent numbers, follow these three steps:

Step 1: From the year chart, find the numbers corresponding to your year of birth. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

Step 2: Now find the corresponding number for the month you were born. If your month is February, and your year numbers were preceded by a B, your month numbers would be 8 for Physical, 3 for Emotional and 31 for Intellectual. Enter your own numbers in the figure chart for Step 2.

Step 3: In the figure chart, enter your day of birth three times, one each for Physical (P), Emotional (E) and Intellectual (I). (If you were born on April 3, for instance, place a 3 in each column.)

Add the three columns to derive your permanent biorhythm numbers for your Physical, Emotional and Intellectual cycles. Now you can refer to today's rhythms.

These numbers are yours permanently. Check them each day for your biorhythm reading.

CB Radios Legalized In South Africa

By JUDY YABLONKY

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — South African "good buddies and ladies" got an official "10-4" to take to the air waves this month, when Citizen Band radios were legalized here.

John Bishop, chairman of the Citizen Band Association of South Africa, said the CBASA expects 250,000 licenced CB users nationwide by the end of this year.

"Since legalization (May 1), CB is experiencing a mini-boom," Bishop said in an interview, "What began as a fad borrowed from the United States soon will be a totally South African phenomenon."

The CBASA is a coordinating organization for the CB clubs forming daily now, Bishop said, with more than 100 affiliated throughout South Africa.

"Clubs are being formed at a prodigious rate," Bishop said, includingseparate clubs for blacks, Indians and mixed-race persons in white-minority-ruled South Africa.

Citizen Band radios began trickling into the country three years ago and CB pirate operators went on the air in violation of the country's Radio Act which outlawed private two-way radio use by non-licensed individuals. Much of the use, both in English and in Afrikaans, was for social chit-chat — making contacts, setting up dates and even playing chess.

Licenses for CBs and other two-way communications devices then were available only for security reasons to farmers, members of civil defense teams, motor clubs and commercial security firms.

Last year and early this year, dozens of CB owners were arrested and appeared in court, charged with violating the Radio Act. They paid fines of up to $300 and their sets were confiscated.

Now, however, after pressure by the now-defunct South African Citizens Band Radio Association, and submission by SACRA to the Department of Posts and Telegraphs of proposals to put CB under government regulation, Citizen Band radio use received an official '10-8" or in-service, from the authorities.

As SACRA pointed out last year, South Africa needs CB. In a country of long distances and low population densities, with a high vehicle accident rate, and faced with the prospect of increasing urban terrorism, a rising crime rate, more border violations and attacks on lonely farms, police and authorities need all the help they can get.

Since legalization, discount houses offer cut-rate specials on a wide variety of rigs, and new specialty stores, selling only CBs and aerials and the like, are opening on every street. Stands set up at the Rand Show, a local agricultural and industrial show, attracted hundreds of potential buyers.

Three South African publications, all monthly magazines, now cater to CB enthusiasts. and local jargon and call names have begun to reflect their South African origin. For example, a "mopane worm" is a speed trap.

New rules and regulations guiding the owning and operating of CBs in South Africa follow the United States', Bishop said. "They seem to have used FCC (U.S. Federal Communications Commission) regulations as a guide in formulating regulations here," he said.

In the United States, 40 channels have been turned over to CB Use, while in South Africa, only nine channels, numbered 19 through 27 — all in the 27.185 to 27.275 megahertz range — are allocated.

In the greater Johannesburg area, the nine channels already are congested, with 20,000 CBers on the air, Bishop said.

Under licensing regulations, the licensee must be 18 years old, conversations are limited to five minutes and CB cannot be used for business or communications between fixed points.

Shooting Victims Suing Retailer Of Firearms

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Two victims of a 1977 shooting at Club 89 and their families have filed lawsuits totaling more than $10.5 million against Sears Roebuck & Co. for selling the gun to the assailant.

The lawsuits were filed in U.S. District Court in Omaha Thursday by Patricia Allon and Hilary Hoesing, both injured in the Nov. 26, 1977, incident when Ulysses L. Cribbs opened fire on the night club with a 12-gauge shotgun, killing a deputy sheriff and wounding 25 other persons. The lawsuits contend Sears should be held liable for damages because a local Sears outlet allegedly sold the shotgun used in the shootings.

Judge Stands Firm On Decision

DOVER, Del. (AP) — Superior Court Judge Robert C. O'Hara decided Friday that he was right when he dismissed evidence against reputed voodoo practitioner John Preston Rooks Sr. and acquitted Rooks of a murder charge in 1977.

Last month the Delaware Supreme Court indicated it disagreed with O'Hara and asked him to reconsider his decision. But O'Hara reiterated his position Friday, and now the case goes back to the Supreme Court for another ruling.

The Supreme Court could overrule O'Hara and order a new trial for Rooks, 38, a Milford truck driver who was accused of masterminding the stabbing of grocer Frank Snyder, 55, in his home in Milton in November 1974.

Rooks' current whereabouts is unknown. The Supreme Court has noted that Rooks could be a victim of double jeopardy should he face another trial on the same murder charge, but the court has not ruled on that issue yet.

Two other men charged with participating in the Snyder murder — George L. Reynolds, 24, and Thomas R. Young, 29 — were convicted. Reynolds gave police several diffeent statements after his arrest, and in one of those statements said Rooks took part in the murder.

That statement was the state's strongest evidence against Rooks, but Judge O'Hara would not allow it into the trial. The judge said it appeared that Reynolds implicated Rooks because of promises of leniency, and therefore the statement was tainted. Prosecutors were forced to drop the case, and O'Hara acquitted Rooks.

The state appealed to the Supreme Court, which said last month that plea bargaining is an acceptable way of obtaining the cooperation of witnesses.

Dandelions Offer Food, Drink, Even Medicine

By ROBERT C. RADCLIFFE
National Geographic News Service

WASHINGTON — Dandelions have a place in the world — besides in your lawn.

Through history they have yellowed the chins of countless kids determining who likes butter — and sometimes whose sweetheart is whose.

They have cured warts with the milky juice of their stems. They have been linked into miles and miles of necklaces. The latex from their stems provided small amounts of synthetic rubber during World War II.

But, more than anything, they have been food, drink, and medicine. Here's an attempt by the National Geographic News Service to brighten up the dark side of the dandelion.

It is true that dandelions are enemy aliens, brought to the New World by the Pilgrims, who considered them big medicine against a variety of human complaints. Today some ungrateful gardeners have suggested responding in kind, sending to Europe a much-respected plant that is a natural American — poison ivy.

However, for centuries Europeans have claimed dandelions are good for tired blood, sluggish kidneys, skin disorders, rheumatism, sleeplessness, nervousness, and for toning up the liver, spleen, and pancreas, among other organs.

The very name that science has for the dandelion — Taraxacum officinale — is Latin for "the official remedy for disorders."

Ralph Waldo Emerson once wrote that a dandelion is a "plant whose virtues have not yet been discovered." But for centuries bright yellow sherry-like wine has been produced from dandelions, and frustrated gardeners might go along with the thought: "If you can't beat 'em, eat 'em!"

Dandelions have been credited with more food value than tomato juice or spinach. The herb — as it's often called — is strong in vitamins A and B and in carbohydrates, and also has a lot of calcium, phosphorus, and protein. A pound of raw dandelion greens contains about 200 calories.

The Wall Street Journal was not first with the idea when it recently proclaimed, "Dandelions are potentially attractive to the budget conscious in these inflationary times." Historically, for many people dandelions have been one of the world's great free vegetables.

Blossoms — the yellow flowers — can be sauteed or added to the batter of pancakes and waffles. Roots can be scraped, baked several hours, and ground into a sleep-inducing coffee substitute. Leaves can be dried for dandelion tea.

Dandelion greens — the leaves picked before they become bitter when the blossoms appear — are favorites for spring salads.

A family in Wilton, Maine, has been canning leaves since 1896. This year Adrian Wells and his father, Vance, hope for five crops from their 6.5 acres planted in flourishing rows, a sight that might give nightmares to a suburban gardener.

Growing dandelions commercially, Wells says, involves one major problem: keeping his dandelions free of a tenacious weed elswhere known as grass.

SOLAR HEAT UNVEILING

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — The first solar-heated rest areas on Wisconsin highways — and among the first in the nation — opened Friday on Interstate 90-94 near Poynette, the Department of Transportation said. The rest areas cost more than $2 million, including grading, paving parking lots, septic tanks and buildings. The solar heating system, which cost $64,468, is designed to satisfy about half the facilities' space and water heating needs, the agency said.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A good day and evening when you are able to articulate very well and express yourself exactly as you wish. Take time to plan a more efficient course of action for the future.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A day when you can accomplish a great deal in outside activities. You can easily gain personal aims at this time.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Find some new outlets that could bring you added income in the days ahead. Set up a better budget that can be easily followed.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Taking part in activities you enjoy is a sensible course of action today. Talk over the future with family members.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You can easily handle confidential matters now and get fine results. Your hunches are accurate at this time.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Know what is expected of you by good friends and try to please them. You can gain personal aims now if you're not discouraged.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) A good day to contact influential persons who can help you in career matters. Not a day for foolish wasting time.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You are alert now and new opportunities that can help you get ahead in your line of endeavor. Avoid one who is hypocritical.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) If you organize your obligations well, you can rid yourself of them more intelligently. Find a more modern system.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Make plans for having more abundance in the days ahead. A better attitude with mate brings excellent results now.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Doing those things that friends expect of you will bring about better relations. Take time to improve your appearance.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Think over how best to express your talents more efficiently and derive greater benefits from them. Be logical.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20) Study your surroundings and make plans for improvements. A good time to engage in favorite hobby wth congenials.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY...he or she will be one who is highly sensitive and will understand how to become successful by using the fine talents in this nature to advantage. A most inventive mentality here as well as one with great physical attractiveness.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Architect Boosting Earth-Sheltered Homes For Americans

By ADOLPHE V. BERNOTAS

LYME, N.H. (AP) — An award-winning architect says 20th Century Americans should take a lesson from rabbits and cave-dwellers and return to Mother Earth for shelter.

Don Metz lives in an earth-sheltered house that he dug into the top of Baldtop, a hill overlooking a spectacular panorama of the Connecticut River Valley.

"See the mildew, the dungeon, the damp and the dark," he jokes as he guides a visitor through his airy, light-filled mountainside castle, which is not at all cave-like, although grass grows on its roof.

Metz built his first earth-sheltered home in Lyme in 1972, the Winston House, for which he won the 1974 Architectural Record Award for Excellence for House Design.

That was before "OPEC reared its ugly head," he says. That house would cost only half as much to heat as a normal home after the oil price increases by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

He wanted to blend that house into its environment and literally built it into a mountainside. The savings on fuel were a bonus.

Mother Earth, after all, is relatively cold or hot only on the surface. Eight feet into the ground, the temperature is almost constant. In New England, that's about 55 degrees year-round.

"Throughout history, people have used the earth for shelter, especially in arid climates. It's nothing startingly new," says the 38-year-old architect.

While in New England earth-sheltered dwellings make for efficient heating, Metz is using the constant-temperature principle in Texas to build an efficiently cooled house.

"I can't understand why they haven't been doing that for years out there to save on air-conditioning," Metz says.

Since the Winston House, Metz has built his own home, Baldtop Dugout, is building, has built or plans to construct similar structures in Maine, Montana, Michigan, Iowa, Virginia, Massachusetts and Vermont.

The success of his earth-sheltered homes has led him to begin eliminating his work on above-ground architecture and concentrate on earth-sheltered buildings.

He has founded Earthtech, a corporation specializing in earth-sheltered homes. Earthtech is building a prototype of a structure for the mass home market.

The only special requirement for an earth-sheltered house is that it be built on a well-draining southerly facing slope to take advantage of the sun's light and heat.

"It's an average mom and pop family home," he says of the Earthtech house, a 2,000-square-foot structure of three bedrooms costing about $75,000 to build, about 10 percent more tha a conventional above-ground house.

Although the initial cost is higher, savings are substantial on fire insurance, maintenance and heating, he says.

The building essentially is made of concrete and concrete blocks, insulated from the surrounding earth. Timbers support the roof and the earth above it. Fire insurance rates are low "because you can't burn it," he says.

The concrete-and-earth also stores heat absorbed from the southerly sun. Heating costs are halved, he says.

Metz is not the only architect designing earth-sheltered homes. Others also build and sell plans for such structures. But Metz notes that some of the structures "indeed are like caves — few windows, very grim."

His Baldtop Dugout is remarkably un-cavelike. The curved southern wall is almost all window. An overhang provides cooling shade in the summer. Interior rooms are illuminated by skylight. Additional ventilation is provided by air cowls that protrude through the sod on the roof.

"When you say earth-sheltered, people think of dampness and dark — their cellar. But if a cellar's got air and light it would be as dry as anything else. If you insulate properly, you have no problems with moisture," he says.

No special technology or materials are used to build his earth-sheltered houses. "Some of the things are put together in different ways," he says, "but it's nothing that a contractor can't do."

New Connecticut Bill Makes Marriages Legal

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — An undetermined number of married couples in Connecticut have been saved from a potentially embarrassing situation they probably did not realize affected them — not being legally married.

Gov. Ella Grasso has signed into law a bill validating marriages that were otherwise legal except for the fact that the marriage license was issued in a town other than the town in which the marriage was actually performed.

The problem first came to light a few months ago when a Stamford couple, in the midst of a divorce, found that technically they were not married legally because their marriage license had been issued in Norwalk.

The bill, signed Thursday, also allows a person who was divorced in a foreign country to get a license for a new marriage if he or she will swear that they cannot reasonably obtain a copy of the foreign divorce decree.

New Zealand extended the vote to women in 1893, while women had to wait until 1918 in Canada, 1919 in Britain and 1920 in the United States.

Boat People Rescue Told By Captain

HONG KONG (AP) — A British captain who rescued 982 Vietnamese refugees in the South China Sea five days ago said Friday the Vietnamese were dumping a dead baby into the sea when he approached two leaking, jampacked boats.

Speaking to reporters onboard the 7,545-ton "Sibonga", Capt. Healey Martin said had he not picked up the refugees, they faced "certain death."

With tears in his eyes, the 41-year-old captain from Northern Ireland said one of the refugees remarked that "they had buried five babies at sea the night before."

His wife, Mildred, close to tears, said "I saw a dead baby floating in the water. It was a sight I'll never forget."

The Sibonga is moored two miles outside Hong Kong waters. It was refused entry into this British colonypending word from the government if the refugees will be accepted by already crowded camps.

Martin said the Vietnamese were picked up about 100 miles south of Vietnam while his ship was en route to Hong Kong from Bangkok.

The freighter arrived off Hong Kong Thursday morning and a government spokesman said a full investigation was under way.

Pointing to the refugees huddled under awnings to escape the sizzling sun, the capain said: "the majority of the children out there would not have survived another 48 hours."

Captain Martin, said he does not regret picking up the refugees.

"I don't know of any master of a British ship who would have behaved differently," he said.

He said 600 of the refugees were crammed like sardines aboard a 65-foot long, 10-foot wide boat. The other was a 45-foot-long, 10-foot wide boat.

A number of the refugees interviewed said they had paid gold worth $2,000 to leave Vietnam. Mamie Ho, a 24-year-old woman from Ho Chi Minh City, formerly Saigon, said the refugees paid their money to a middleman and "he paid it to the authorities."

"There were officials watching us stepping onto the boat. They had a list with all the names," she said, adding she could not identify the officials.

Second Man Seeks Record With Snakes

HARTESBEEPORT, South Africa (AP) — In another two days, Peter Snyman hopes to lift a champagne toast to a perpetual entry in the Guinness Book of Records — 50 days and 6 hours in a den of deadly vipers.

But already another South African has come forward to challenge Snyman's feat. He is Chris Otto, 45 from eastern Natal province. All he needs, he says, is a sponsor.

"People are making too big a fuss over Snyman's achievement. I have no fear whatsoever of snakes and I see no problem in being in their company for a long period," Otto said, recalling his lifelong fascination with keeping poisonous snakes.

Trendler said the conclusion of Snyman's feat — if it ends peacefully — will be marked by a spot of champagne. And for the snakes? "Oh, I don't think the record means much to them. They haven't displayed much emotion about it."

For the 24 black mambas, Egyptian cobras, puff adders and boomslangs — all highly poisonous African snakes — the presence of the slight, bespectacled and mostly motionless person has meant little more than a warm body to cuddle up against on chilly evenings.

Trendler said the snakes have largely gone about their normal business mating, resting, slithering, feasting twice weekly on live mice, rats and baby chicks, and occasionally fighting.

"We've had to replace a number of snakes that were killed by others. They're not immune to each other's venom," Trendler explained.

The most recent incident was last Tuesday, when both a boomslang and a black mamba latched onto opposite ends of a mouse and began ingesting it.

All went well until their noses met. Then the larger mamba simply opened its jaw wider and began ingesting the boomslang. With half the other snake down its long throat, the mamba suddenly convulsed and died.

"We believe the boomslang bit the inside of the mamba," Trendler said.

The previous record for living with deadly snakes was set at the same park by Trevor Kruger, who sat for 36 days in 1975. He died in an auto accident two weeks later.

Snyman originally planned to add four days to Kruger's record, but when his 40 days and 40 nights were up he decided to add 10 days for insurance.

He is allowed only 30 minutes a day outside the cage a day.

BREATH OF LIFE

WELLESBOURNE, England (AP) — Kelly Chaman, 4, is alive because neighbor Mick Wilkins stopped off at the pub before going home. Wilkins later gave the little girl mouth-to-mouth resuscitation when she stopped breathing. Doctors said the alcohol on Wilkin's breath had stimulated Kelly's brain and saved her.

Homebuilt Rocket To Make Manned Flight

Kurt Debus, a one time NASA executive who is now an ORTRAG consultant, says the company hopes to one day launch satellites, at reduced costs, for client nations and corporations.

By the way, the German idea of reduced costs does not completely coincide with that of Project Private Enterprise. ORTRAG's unmanned launching reportedly cost $25 million, or 25 times what Bob Truax wants to spend on manned flight. Dr. Debus says he can't imagine how Truax intends to fly for $1 million.

Sometimes, perhaps, Truax can't imagine how either. But right now he's concerned more with financing than budgeting. He says he has spent about $15,000 of his own money so far, and that leaves him $985,000 short. He says he's tried to solicit corporate backing, "but they won't even answer my letters."

Truax says he is certain he can sell television rights to the manned flight itself, " only the networks are not willing to give anything in advance." Hence he is casting about for fund raising schemes; "If, say, Atlantic City wants to have the launching there, and pay for it, I may be willing."

'VOLKSROCKET' — Robert Truax would like to put several people in space in the next few years. If he succeeds, space travel may become an accessible, though expensive, carnival ride. But he's not going. "I'm more important on the ground. Besides, do you think I'm really crazy?"

Truax may also be willing to sell advertising space on his vehicles. An STP sticker would be nice. Or maybe "Honk If You Love Jesus"? Someone has suggested that he allow signature graffiti, at $10 apiece; since the rocket has 23,000 square inches of skin, the names could bring in $2.3 million.

Interestingly, one name that will be on the vehicle may bring in $100,000 alone. That's the amount that a Peruvian immigrant named Dann Correa has agreed to pay for the privilege of being Truax's astronaut. Truax believes the astronaut will achieve instant glory and renown — and should have to pay for it.

Happily, Correa, 26, can afford the fee. Though he came to America in 1971 as a pastry folder in a tortilla factory, he has since bought the factory. He now nets $20,000 a month at the Mission Bell Bakery in nearby Redwood City, and he's opened a fast food restaurant and an appliance plant as well.

Correa is a pilot and sky diver. He is married and has a 6-month-old child. He believes his chances of surviving the Volksrocket flight are about nine in 10. Yet that is better than the odds given Alan Shepard Jr., the first astronaut; before him, no one was certain man could even live in space.

To be sure, no one is certain Correa can live in the Volksrocket. But the would-be subject believes the risk is worth it. If necessary, he insists he will borrow on his businesses to help finance the private enterprise flight. "Once I go up," he adds, "then maybe many others will follow."

Truax certainly hopes others will follow. He would like to put several people in space in the next few years, including women. Then his plan is to apply for air worthiness certification at the Federal Aviation Agency, and after that send anyone into sub-orbit who can pay for it.

The cost of a ride would be steep. At least $10,000 a ticket. But there is nothing else to prevent space travel from going carnival. The FAA says anyone of any age may build or fly a rocket ship, so long as simple regulations are observed. One regulation forbids shooting rockets into clouds.

And so, hurry, step right up! The barnstorming era of space flight may be about to begin. Thrills, chills, and anyone can do it. Anyone, that is, except Bob Truax. He will never take one of his rockets aloft. "I'm more important on the ground," he says. "Besides, do you think I'm really crazy?"

The United Nations predicts Mexico City will be the world's most populous urban area in the year 2000, with a population of 31 million.

Terrorists Kill Spanish Soldiers

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Two terrorists disguised as laborers mowed down a general, two colonels and their military chauffeur in a grenade and machine-gun attack Friday on a Madrid street in the bloodiest assault yet against Spanish Army officers.

The Basque separatist group ETA claimed responsibility for the killings in calls to newspapers in Madrid and in the northern Basque city of Bilbao.

Those deaths and the killings of a police inspector and an 18-year-old bystander in a gunfight in Seville raised to 5 the number of persons slain in Spanish political violence this year.

The interior minister, Lt. Gen. Manuel Ibanez Freire, said Seville police engaged four terrorists of the Maoist GRAPO guerrilla group who had planned to assassinate an army lieutenant colonel. Police initially reported one officer and one terrorist killed, but Ibanez Freire said the victims were a youth caught in the crossfire and an inspector.

He reported one guerrilla was captured and said police found a large quantity of explosives in his apartment. The shooting began when the four terrorists in a car ignored a police order to stop, he said.

Seville and Madrid police were investigating the possibility of a connection between the two attacks, but they noted that the Basque and GRAPO terrorist groups do not coordinate their actions.

Defense Minister Agustin Rodriguez Shagu anounced after the Madrid assassinations the cancellation of ceremonies planned in many cities Sunday for Armed Forces Day. He said the only observance would be in Seville, where there would be a "homage to the Spanish flag" ceremony followed by a military parade Sunday with King Juan Carlos in attendance.

Witnesses to the Madrid attack said the gunmen, clad in blue overalls, stood by the roadside as the official car drove by. They first riddled the slow-moving car with more than 50 rounds of machine-gun fire, then opened a car door and tossed in a grenade when the vehicle stopped.

The officers were killed instantly inside the car and the driver died shortly after being admitted to a hospital, police said. The terrorists fled in a waiting car, which was found about two miles from the scene. Roadblocks were set up on all roads to and from the Spanish capital in a search for the two men, authorities said.

The dead were identified as Lt. Gen. Luis Gomez Hortiguela, 69, head of the army's personnel department; Col. Agustin Laso, an aide; Col. Juan Avalos Gomariz, the general's secretary, and the chauffeur, Luis Gomez Borrego, an army private.

Gomez Hortiguela was the highest-ranking military man killed by terrorists in Spain since Basque separatists assassinated Adm. Luis Carrero Blanco in 1974. Carrero Blanco was deputy prime minister at the time.

The ambush site was only a few blocks from where another army general and his aide were shot and killed last July. It is in a northeastern section of the city frequented by the military.

Much of the political violence in Spain this year has been claimed by ETA, which is fighting for an independent homeland in northern Spain. However, the Maoist organization GRAPO has taken responsibility for a share of the violence and recently threatened more terrorist action after one of its leaders was shot to death by police.

The latest assassinations came only one day after Parliament approved new measures in an effort to curb terrorism.

Sign Up For Independence

When young people sign up for newspaper route work, they are really signing up for independence. The kind of independence that goes with earning your own money, running your own business and dealing with people on a one-to-one basis.

Our carriers are young business men and women. They provide a vital service, handle their own finances and reap a handsome profit from their efforts. What better training to prepare them for the future?

If you are interested in stepping into the business world and declaring your own independence, contact our carrier manager right now. He'll give you all of the important facts about carrier work. Then, if you are still interested, he'll provide the pen and show you where to sign . . . even if your name is John Hancock.

Reporter Tells About Death Of Spenkelink

By THOMAS E. SLAUGHTER

STARK, Fla. (AP) — It seemed like an eternity.

The first jolt of 2,300 volts of electricity was in his body. He sat there rigid, his hands clenched.

I wondered if he was dead.

Then I saw smoke rising from his leg and knew it was over.

There is nothing pleasant to say about what I saw Friday morning, when John Arthur Spenkelink was put to death in the small beige-painted death chamber at Florida State Prison.

The witness room is separated from the death chamber by a wood and glass partition. We were shielded from the preparations by venetian blinds drawn over the windows.

After we were screened by a metal detector and relieved of notepads and pens, we were ushered into the room a few minutes before the scheduled 10 a.m. execution.

When I entered the room, the first two rows of four rows of folding chairs already were taken by 13 official witnesses, each a volunteer. We, the reporters, sat behind them.

I was afraid — afraid because I had never before watched an execution. Afraid because I don't like watching people die.

Then 10 a.m. came and went. First we were quiet. One of the eight prison officials standing behind us sat down. He was pale and took off his coat.

The minutes dragged on. I heard what I thought were chains in the death room. A minute or so later, prison guards began covering the small square window panes in the door at the far left side of the partition to prevent any glimpse of the preparations.

I sat in that room with 31 other people I didn't know, waiting to watch the execution of a man with whom I had never spoken.

As the minutes passed and the execution was inexplicably delayed, hushed conversations grew louder, becoming almost casual. One of the official witnesses told the man next to him matter-of-factly that he hadn't been able to get to sleep until 4 a.m. Another man in the front row stood up, apparently to relieve his tension, then sat down.

I began to wonder whether yet another stay had been granted.

Then someone in the death chamber raised the venetian blinds — leaving until the last the central one with the direct view of the chair.

I will not forget what I saw. I was stunned. John Spenkelink already was strapped in his chair. I had thought that he would be brought into the death chamber after the blinds were raised.

His eyes met mine. They were open wide and seemed moist, almost imploring.

It was the most helpless expression I have ever seen.

John Spenkelink was bound in this manner:

—A leather harness or helmet covered his shaved skull, held closely by a strap that seemed to press his chin into his face.

Inside that cap was a fine-grained sponge which had been soaked in salt water to increase its electrical conductivity. On top of the cap there seemed to be a piece of metal resembling a wing nut.

—Wide leather straps bound him tightly to the massive oak chair, holding him across the chest and binding his arms, thighs and calves.

—He was wearing a white shirt rolled up at the sleeves and blue trousers. The right trouser leg was rolled up, and a leather cuff with a strip of metal electrode was attached to Spenkelink's shaved calf.

The blinds were raised at 10:11. Less than a minute later, a man wearing heavy gloves lowered a black blindfold from the helmet-like cap that would send the current charging through Spenkelink. The fabric hung like a veil, covering his whole face.

And without warning, the first jolt surged at 10:12 a.m. At that point I didn't notice the executioner, but I was riveted by what was happening to Spenkelink.

His body lurched. His hands began contracting; the index finger of his left hand pointed toward us as his other fingers curled. His right hand was clenched in a fist. Both hands turned blue, especially near the fingertrips.

I stood in my chair and saw smoke from Spenkelink's calf. A few inches below the cuff, there was a three-inch wound. It looked as if his skin had split, but there was no blood. I had expected to smell burning flesh bt, thankfully, I didn't.

At 10:14, two minutes after Spenkelink received the first of three surges of electricity, another man in the death room removed the chest strap, unbuttoned Spenkelink's shirt and raised his T-shirt.

Then a prison doctor listened to Spenkelink's heart through a stethoscope, backed away and looked toward prison warden David Brierton, who was standing in the death room. No one moved.

Again, we waited. the Rev. Tom Fearnster, who had visited Spenkelink over the past two years, spoke out in the witness room. Although the individuals in the tableau of the death chamber couldn't hear him, the Episcopal priest said: "I hope you gentlemen are praying that this is a just and merciful punishment."

For the first time, I caught sight of the executioner. He was standing behind a floor-to-ceiling partition in a far corner of the death chamber. Through a slit for him to view the execution, I saw two eyes looking through holes cut in a black hood. His identity is withheld, but he receives $150 for his work.

The doctor, whose name was not disclosed, stepped over to Spenkelink's rigid and masked form again. Again, he checked for a heart beat. Again, he stood back.

I wondered whether Spenkelink was dead or alive.

At 10:18, six minutes after the first surge, the doctor again approached the chair. He first checked for a heart beat, then for a pulse. Then he lifted the black blindfold and peered into each of the motionless figure's eyes.

He stepped away again and nodded to Brierton. John Spenkelink was dead. The blinds were lowered. I walked outside, into the sunshine.

Five Minute Session By Supreme Justices Upheld Death Verdict

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lawyers trying to save John Spenkelink's life ran out of time at 9:50 a.m. Friday. After a week of frantic legal maneuvers, the Florida murderer's fate was sealed in a five-minute secret meeting of the nation's highest court.

It was 9:45 a.m. when eight Supreme Court justices gathered in the large, decorous conference room where their private deliberations are held.

Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr. had referred the matter of John A. Spenkelink's life to the full court. He had received the condemned man's emergency request — an application for a stay of execution — earlier in the morning.

At 9:50, the court voted 6 to 2 not to interfere. Reporters and prison authorities in Starke, Fla., were given the word minutes later.

At 10:13 a.m. — 23 minutes after the justices made their decision — a hooded executioner threw a switch at the Florida State Prison.

Ramsey Clark, who struggled unsuccessfully in the last hours to keep Spenkelink alive, said he grieved for the man he had never met. He said he grieved, too, for the nation.

"The imperative need for our time is a reverence for life," said Clark, the former attorney general and a recent addition to the Spenkelink legal team. "I would hope America would soon abandon this barbaric practice."

Seven days before Friday's execution, Florida Gov. Bob Graham had signed Spenkelink's death warrant. The warrant condemned him to the electric chair at 7 a.m. Wednesday — the ultimate punishment for the 1973 murder of Joseph Syzmankiewicz.

Then began a frenzied, and eventually futile, legal effort to overcome the warrant.

Help was denied by a federal trial judge in Florida, a three-judge panel of the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans and Supreme Court Justices William H. Rehnquist and John Paul Stevens.

A coalition of lawyers opposed to capital punishment then went to a federal appeals judge in Atlanta and to Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall. The lawyers succeeded minutes after midnight Wednesday in obtaining stays of execution.

But the stays did not last long.

Minutes after noon Thursday, the full Supreme Court voted to set aside Marshall's postponement of the execution. A new 5th Circuit panel of judges overturned the Atlanta judge's stay late Thursday night, and Florida immediately set a new execution time — 10 a.m. Friday.

Spenkelink's lawyers were running out of time.

The husband of an Atlanta lawyer rushed to catch a late-night plane for Washington. He arrived at the Supreme Court building in his bedroom slippers.

He carried the documents that represented Spenkelink's last legal gasp. He handed the papers to Clark shortly before 7 a.m.

Clark in turn gave them to Supreme Court Clerk Michael Rodak, and Rodak submitted them to Powell, who is the "circuit justice" with responsibility for Florida cases.

Even as this last effort was being considered, a small group of demonstrators opposing the death penalty waited across the street from the Supreme Court building. Word of Spenkelink's death reached them moments after the execution.

They moved their peaceful protest onto the marbled plaza of the Supreme Court itself. Thirteen persons were taken into custody by court police who accused them of unlawful entry and demonstrating on Supreme Court premises.

Clark told reporters he hoped Spenkelink's death would not mean eventual executions for the more than 500 persons on death rows across the nation.

"America doesn't really have the heart for it," he said.

Demonstrator Michael Kroll of Washington was less optimistic. While being led to a paddywagon, Kroll said, "The nightmare begins."

Spenkelink Followed Brief Trail To Electric Chair

TALLAHASSE, Fla. (AP) — John A. Spenkelink started a turbulent career of petty crime and armed robbery at the age of 13. The good boy who went bad died in the electric chair Friday at the age of 30.

His family said it all started after he found his father's body in the family car in California.

Spenkelink was about 12 at the time. A hose connected to the car's exhaust ran into the car.

Before Bernard Spenkelink died, however, he had taught his son to smoke and he bragged that the boy could hold his liquor.

Spenkelink was caught in a car theft when he was 13.

Spenkelink, from Buena Park, Calif., was sentenced to death at age 25 for murdering a hithchhiker he had picked up after fleeing a California prison, the Slack Canyon Conservation Camp near Big Sur.

He had picked up Joseph Syzmankiewicz, 45, an Ohio parole violator, somewhere in Nebraska.

Their odyssey ended on Feb. 4, 1973, in Room 4 of the Ponce de Leon Motel in Tallahassee, where Syzmankiewicz was shot twice in the head and once in the back. Spenkelink later told a court Syzmankiewicz had forced him to submit to a homosexual act at gunpoint.

Spenkelink then fled 2,300 miles, back to California, but was caught six days later and returned to Florida. He was convicted and, five days before Christmas 1973, sentenced to death.

His 67-year-old mother, Lois, moved from California to Florida several years ago to be near her son. She lives in the North Florida town of Starke, about 11 miles from the Florida State Prison where her son died.

Spenkelink told interviewers he read the Bible but wasn't particularly religious. "I'm not using no religion for no sympathy," he said. "It's my own personal thing."

He has spent many hours drawing pictures — of other inmates, of a pair of praying hands. He once sent his mother a sketch of the electric chair done in red, white and blue. "The Spirit of '76," he titled it.

Brumm Tells Of Motel Murder

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — A man who was acquitted of the same murder for which John A. Spenkelink was electrocuted Friday says "it isn't fair" that Spenkelink was sentenced to die while he went free.

"I'll be honest. It isn't fair," Frank Brumm, 26, who now lives in Racine, Wis., told the Tallahassee Democrat in an interview this week.

"But I changed and, you know, that's about the only thing I can say in my defense. I rehabilitated myself," he said.

Brumm said he is glad he never uttered a word in court about how Joseph Syzmankiewicz came to die in a Tallahassee motel room.

Spenkelink had said it was self-defense. Brumm, a hitchhiker Spenkelink picked up before he shot Syzmankiewicz, tells a different story.

"He told me he had this friend he had to get rid of and he'd give me $1,000 if I'd help him get rid of him. And I agreed ... I suggested he shoot Joe in the back," Brumm said in the interview.

Brumm said "it was a funny feeling" when Spenkelink's face flashed across the television screen last week as being condemned to death in Florida's electric chair for the Feb. 4, 1973, slaying.

The same jury that had convicted Spenkelink found Brumm innocent on Nov. 28, 1973. Both were charged with first-degree murder.

"When I went to trial, I did the smartest thing I could do. I kept my mouth shut," Brumm said.

Now he's safe to talk about it — the U.S. Constitution prevents anyone from being tried twice for the same crime.

Brumm said he helped finish off Syzmankiewicz after Spenkelink shot him in the head and chest.

"Joe wasn't dead yet," Brumm said. "So John handed me the hatchet and told me to hit him. So I hit him across the temple with the back side of the hatchet."

He held the gun while Spenkelink slammed the hatchet across Symanckiewicz's head some more, Brumm said.

Further Executions Predicted In Wake Of Spenkelink's Death

As capital punishment opponents mourned the electrocution of John A. Spenkelink with prayerful vigils Friday, partisans on both sides of the controversy predicted his execution would embolden other states to follow Florida's lead.

Georgia State Rep. Wayne Snow, a proponent of capital punishment, predicted "one or more" of the 68 prisoners on that state's death row would be executed this year.

"Many states were waiting for this to occur. Since it has now happened, we will probably see expedited enforcement of capital punishment laws in Georgia," he said.

"As an official of this government," said Florida State Rep. Bill Sadowski, "I regret that this state has put itself in the position of national leadership in regards to this most questionable course of conduct."

Calling the execution of Spenkelink, a convicted murderer, "official homicide," Henry Schwarzschild of the American Civil Liberties Union Capital Punishment Project noted that the execution was the first since Gary Gilmore faced a Utah firing squad in January 1977.

"First Utah, now Florida. The state role of bloody dishonor is growing," he said. "The question is how many lives will be taken by American executioners before the death penalty is abolished."

Attorney John Carroll charged from the Southern Poverty Law Center in Montgomery, Ala., that the Florida attorney general's office made "a concerted effort to intimidate the courts" in opposing further delays of Spenkelink's execution. He said the result is that it may be "harder to get stays of execution in the future."

Carroll represents John Louis Evans, who won a stay six hours before he was to die on April 5. At Alabama's Holman prison, Deputy Warden Charles Jones said Evans had no comment on the Florida execution. He said 39 other death row inmates were "real quiet."

Prison officials across the nation reported that condemned prisoners in death row cells were subdued when they learned of Spenkelink's execution.

Civil rights activists said they fear the execution of Spenkelink, who was white, will pave the way for capital punishment against the minority groups and the poor.

"The tragedy behind the execution is that the judicial system is willing to sacrifice one white person so that the multi-execution of black young men can take space," said the Rev. Albert Sampson of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

Former U.S. Attorney Gen. Ramsey Clark, who filed the unsuccessful petition Friday seeking a U.S. Supreme Court stay, expressed grief when he learned of Spenkelink's execution.

He said it represented "a tragic moment in our history as we rejoin the nations that seek to control their populations by killing people."

Organized death penalty opponents — among them, the ACLU and the NAACP's Legal Defense Fund — vowed to continue to fight for the abolition of capital punishment. Others simply protested.

"I don't represent any particular group," said Tence Wolfe, a tearful mother of two who staged a solitary six-hour vigil Friday in a Miami park. "Just say I represent life. Instead of blood on your hands, put life in your heart."

About 15 persons stood vigil on the steps of the U.S. Courthouse in Hartford, Conn., in a protest they said they organized at the last moment when they learned Spenkelink would be executed.

"Although the state of Florida is supposedly doing the killing in the name of the people, it's not being done for us," said protester Sheldon Prine.

Twenty members of the Virginians Against the Death Penalty stood a mournful vigil outside the State Penitentiary in Richmond Friday. Their spokesman, the Rev. Emmett Cocke, said they were protesting "the kind of society that produces criminals and then executes them."

"There is certainly no joy when someone is killed, even by a legal process,' said Virginia Attorney General J. Marshall Coleman. "But it makes clear that the public can express its anger in an appropriate and legal way against those who violate our laws in a violent and capricious manner."

Numerous ministers, priests and church-related groups spoke out against the death penalty. In Philadelphia, the American Friends Service Committee commented that the "death penalty restores no victim to life. There is no conclusive evidence that it acts as a deterrent to crime."

But the Rev. Calvin Eaves of Richmond's Clover Hill Baptist Church said that a day of mourning for the victims of violent crimes would be appropriate. He added: "I can't shed too many crocodile tears over this."

Condemned Man's Mom 'Never Gave Up Hope'

STARKE, Fla. (AP) — Lois Spenkelink, much in evidence around Florida State Prison while her son had a chance to live, was grieving in seclusion Friday at the moment he died.

Mrs. Spenkelink, 67, was a constant visitor to the media gathering during the past week while the nation's courts decided the fate of her 30-year-old son, John, a convicted murderer.

After most of her visits to the prison, even though late at night, she would stop to talk to reporters headquartered in a field a quarter of a mile from the prison complex.

White-haired and obviously in ill health, Mrs. Spenkelink would be assisted from a car by friends and family members. With the aid of a wooden cane, she would shuffle slowly up to the microphones and television cameras.

"John still has faith. He's calm. He's strong ...

"It's hard for me to understand how people can claim to be Christian and still believe in the death penalty ...

"Gov. (Bob) Graham, I am calling on you to issue a stay and save my son, my only son."

She never said John didn't kill Joe Syzmankiewicz in a Tallahassee, Fla., motel room in 1973. Spenkelink did not deny it either. Self-defense, he said.

But Graham didn't issue a stay, and neither would the U.S. Supreme Court halt the execution.

And when John Spenkelink was strapped into Florida's electric chair just after 10 a.m. Friday, Mrs. Spenkelink, her daughter, Carol, son-in-law Tim Myers and a few close friends were off by themselves somewhere in this small, north Florida community.

A family spokesman said Mrs. Spenkelink was grieving but holding up.

She never gave up, even in the last hours. Friday morning, she placed calls to Presdent Carter, Sen. Edwar Kennedy and Gov. Graham but didn't reach any of them, the spokesman said.

Death Row Population In 32 States Reviewed

OXFORD, Miss. (AP) — One of two convicted murderers scheduled to die Monday won a stay of execution Friday, and state attorneys said they also expected the second man's execution to be put off.

U.S. District Judge Orma Smith granted a defense motion to stop the scheduled execution of John Buford Irving III pending a hearing on his appeal.

Also on Friday, the Mississippi Supreme Court denied a motion by Johnny Lewis Washington to order new proceedings in the trial court, but a federal court hearing was scheduled for later in the day.

Irving won his stay after state courts also rejected his request for an order directing the trial court to reopen his case.

Mississippi has not executed anyone since 1964.

"It could take a year or longer for these men to exhaust all state and federal appeals," said Marvin White, special assistant in the state attorney general's office.

Irving, 23, was convicted in the 1976 murder of Gambrell Ray, who was felled by a shotgun blast during an armed robbery at his rural store in Pontotoc County.

Washingon, 25, was convicted in the fatal shooting of J.K. Woods, a store owner in Columbus, during a 1977 robbery.

The execution dates were set for the men earlier this month after the U.S. Supreme Court refused to hear their appeals.

Irving had contended the law did not require a jury to specify what constituted aggravating circumstances warranting death.

New Alabama Bill Ups Drinking Age

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — The Alabama House of Representatives has passed a bit of tongue-in-cheek legislation raising the legal drinking age from 18 to 50.

Rep. Curtis Smith of Clanton had introduced a bill to raise the drinking age from 19 to 21. But Rep. Cecil Wyatt of Montgomery told Smith on Thursday that his proposal was not tough enough, and he offered one aimed at 50-year-old citizens.

The amendment quickly won approval.

U.S. Booklet Discusses Tornado Preparedness

WASHINGTON (AP) — If you live in areas often threatened by tornadoes a community preparedness plan can do a great deal to help ease the threat of deaths and injures.

"Tornado Preparedness Planning" costs $1.40 and is available from the Supgerintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C., 20402. Order stock number 003-017-00434-1.

Trade Body Studies Newspaper Chains

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Federal Trade Commission official said Thursday the commission will "continue to place a high priority" on its study of concentration of ownership in the news media.

"We are preparing a comprehensive issues paper on all aspects of media concentration for a commission policy review session next December," Alfred F. Dougherty Jr., told a Senate committee.

Dougherty, director of the FTC's Bureau of Competition, said that "the commission's options ... run the gamut from routine antitrust monitoring of media mergers and activities on a case-by-case basis to recommending new legislation."

"Regardless of the options recommended or chosen, however, I can assure you that we shall continue to place a high priority on the analysis of all of the issues raised by trends toward increasing concentration and conglomeration in the media," he said.

Dougherty testified as the Senate Small Business Committee began two days of hearings described by Sen. Robert Moran, D-N.C., who presided, as "a fact-finding inquiry."

"There is some evidence to support the proposition that newspaper chains are likely to present more homogenous news to the nation than would independent papers," Dougherty said.

"That does not mean that all the news will be centrally controlled or that local editors of chain papers will have no autonomy or that independent papers will be particularly diverse; it simply means that some tendency to homogeneity may exist in chains."

Michael Pertschuk, FTC chairman, voiced concern "as a citizen" with the decline in the number of independent newspapers but "the question is, can and should anything be done about it, and the answers are very murky."

Ellen Berland Sachar, a vice president and financial analyst with the New York stock brokerage firm of Paine Webber Mitchell Hutchins Inc., testified that 72 percent of the daily newspaper circulation in the United States is in the hands of a few newspaper groups. On the other hand, she said, no single group controls more than six percent of that circulation.

"At the rate that individually owned properties have been selling out to chains recently, roughly 50 per year, it could be argued that there will be no individually owned properties left by the year 1992," Miss Sachar said.

But she said it was impossible to tell whether "an increase in group ownership in newspapers necessarily leads to a decrease in editorial diversity." She suggested a study by an independent research group to determine "just how the public gets its information and which media voice or voices is (or are) indeed dominant."

"It is a trap, I think, to try to equate local, independent ownership with 'quality' or to hint that chain ownership connotes an absence of quality."

The Tennessean is an independent newspaper which has a joint operating agreement with the Nashville Banner, owned by the Gannett newspaper group.

Siegenthaler also testified, "Who is to say who will control these chains a decade or two from now? It could be the oil and energy conglomerates, the huge banking-insurance holding companies, or shadow operators whose sources of wealth are questionable. Should Mobil or Gulf own Gannett or Knight-Ridder, the integrity of the press would suffer."

Witnesses on Friday will include John H. Shenefield, assistant attorney general in charge of the antitrust division of the Justice Department, and James K. Batten, vice president of Knight-Ridder Newspapers Inc.

Nerve Gas Bomb Leaks Revealed

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Army has found two leaking nerve gas bombs among 896 being tested before transfer from Colorado to Utah, a spokesman for Gov. Scott Matheson said Friday.

Mimi Charles, acting press secretary, said Col. Alonzo Williams of the Rocky Mountain Arsenal, Denver, where the bombs are being tested, informed Matheson of the "leakers."

Matheson has filed a federal suit trying to stop the transfer, scheduled for June 11, on grounds it will endanger people in Utah and Colorado.

Meanwhile, an Army enlisted woman, assigned to the detail testing the bombs, remained hospitalized Friday after showing symptoms similar to nerve gas poisoning.

Williams said blood tests on Spec. 5 Denise Garnett, 23, of Englewood, N.J., "positively exclude" that she was exposed to the nerve gas.

Former Jailer Charged In Theft

EDINBURG (AP) — A former Hidalgo County chief jailer was arrested Friday for allegedly stealing over $10,000 from an insurance company he worked for.

Guadulupe Betancourt, 34, was named Wednesday in a sealed indictment returned here. Betancourt is also a former city commissioner from the South Texas town of Elsa. He had been a claims adjuster for Farmers Insurance Co.

In October of 1978, the insurance company notified local officials about a possible theft from the firm. According to Edinburg police reports, the company became concerned after sending a routine questionnaire to a man who had filed a claim through Betancourt. The man reportedly said he had been paid $1,300 in cash by the adjuster. Company records reportedly indicate the company isued a $4,250 check to cover the man's insurance claim.

State District Judge Joe Cisneros set a $5,000 bond on the eight-count indictment after Betancourt surrendered Friday.

The covering on the tip of a shoelace is called an aglet.

THE STORY—The scoreboard tells the story as El Paso Austin pitcher Cerjio Martinez rocks and fires towards the plate in the seventh inning of the regional playoff baseball game at Lowrey Field Friday afternoon against Monterey. Austin Zaps Monterey 3-1

If you were keeping score, the play went 7 to 6 to 3. For Monterey, it meant the end of the baseball season.

El Paso Austin used a designed pickoff play in the bottom of the sixth to turn the momentum its way for good and claim the regional championship at Lowrey Field Friday afternoon. The Panthers defeated the Plainsmen 3-1 to win the best two-of-three series in two outings.

Pinkerton took a wide turn around second, and El Paso Austin left fielder, Greg Quinn threw the ball back into the infield to shortstop Ray Macias. Macias then fired a low strike to first baseman Junior Salas, who left his position to cover second. Salas tagged Pinkerton out, which caused jubilation from the entire Panther team along the first base line. Meanwhile, the play silenced the Plainsmen bench along the third base line.

"It was a close play, but we had him out," said Salas. "He (Pinkerton) was going full speed, so I knew he was going to over run the base."

According the Panther first baseman, what makes the play work is the runner seeing the Austin shortstop out of position to make a play at second.

"The runner thinks that no one is over there," said Salas. "As soon as I see Macias (the shortstop) move away, I come in and cover the bag."

With the victory, the Panthers (21-6) will advance into the quarterfinal play against R.L. Turner of Carrollton (22-9). Turner also won its regional series in two games against Arlington Sam Houston. The loss ends the Plainsmen's season at 26-9.

"I definitely feel the pickoff play was the key to the game," said a solemn Monterey coach Bobby Moegle. "The grounder and the fly ball would have allowed him to score. Then in the final inning we would have been playing for one run instead of two."

After Pinkerton was called out, designated hitter Kent Potts hit a grounder to second, which would have moved the Plainsmen to third. Then first baseman Tom Bevins flew out to center field. The fly was deep enough for Pinkerton to score.

In the seventh, Monterey was forced to play conservative baseball. With one out, the Plainsmen had runners at the corners. But because the fleing runs were on base, Moegle decided not to gamble.

After catcher Kelly Smith opened the inning by flying out to deep left centerfield, leftfielder Bart Burgess started the Plainsmen's final rally effort by doubling to right center. Next, Steve Coleman, who started the game on the mound but moved to third base when his throwing arm stiffened up in the sixth inning, grounded sharply to Panther shortstop Macias. The ball bounced off the Austin shortstop's glove, and by the time he recovered, Coleman beat the throw to first by a step.

Martinez, however, won the dual as he got Dixon to slap the ball hard on the ground towards the second base bag.

Watson Takes Memorial Lead

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — With the wind-chill factor announced at 13 degrees, Tom Watson fought his way through cold, wind and rain to an incredible, no-bogey, 3-under-par 69 that gave him 4-stroke command Friday in the second round of the Memorial Golf Tournament.

"One of the best rounds I've ever played," said a deeply satisfied Watson, the only man in the elite, invitational field able to escape without a bogey in the dreadfully difficult conditions.

"I got away with a good round today," said Watson, the year's leading money-winner and gunning for a fourth title of the season. "I didn't make many mistakes. It's hard not to look at all the trouble out there. But I combatted it pretty well."

His 142 total, 2 under par, was the only subpar total for two trips over Jack Nicklaus' Muirfield Village Golf Club course, which was shortened from its usual 7,101 yards to 7,004 because of the howling winds.

There only was one other round under par this day that would be more typical of Scotland's Muirfield in November than Ohio's Muirfield Village in May. That was a 71 by Terry Diehl, who had a 150 total.

By way of contrast, Lee Trevino — a notorious warm-weather player — finished a round of 81 and announced he'd play no more in this tournament despite a 155 total, comfortably in the cut for the final two rounds. That's 11 over par. The previous high cut figure for the tour year was 5 over par.

More than one-third of the field failed to break 80. The scores ranged up to a 92 — 20 over par — by Roger Maltbie, who won the first Memorial tournament in 1976.

Arnold Palmer was 81-156. Hale Irwin was 80-153. U.S. Open champ Andy North shot 76-155. Masters champ Fuzzy Zoeller had 74-153. PGA titleholder John Mahaffey was 78-156. Jerry Pate was 85-158. Andy Bean was 82-158. Defending champion Jim Simons failed to qualify for the final two rounds at 79-159.

"It was a day when 75 or 76 was a pretty good score," observed Watson, generally regarded as the man most likely to succeed host Nicklaus as golf's No. 1 performer. He was bundled into a rain suit on top of a shirt and two sweaters, one of which he purchased in a hasty trip to a shopping center just before teeing off.

"These have been two of the most difficult days to play golf I can remember in a long, long time," said Nicklaus, who said he was pleased with his round of 73 that left him in a tie for second at 146, 2 over par.

He shed his big, bright-red mittens long enough to birdie the last tw holes, one of which scred on a shot out of casual water at the bottom of a fairway bunker. He was 3 over par before that, and then followed with an 18-foot birdie putt on the final hole. "That turned a decent round, under the conditions, into a good round, under the conditions," Nicklaus said.

He was tied with Tom Kite and Peter Jacobsen, who got into the tournament as the fourth altenate. Each had varied adventures.

Kite shot a 72 but had to hole a 133-yard, 9-iron shot for an eagle-2 to do it, and three times got it up and down from 100-120 yards short of the green. "I think you'll find that's fairly typical," he said.

"It was brutal out there. I feel like a drowned rat."

Jacobsen shot 74 and had an even greater struggle. He hit only 6 greens in regulation and used only 23 putts.

Indy Qualifying Reopened

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The U.S. Auto Club decided Friday to reopen qualifications for Sunday's Indianapolis 500 to 11 cars bumped from the field after a last-day rules clarification in the final weekend of time trials.

The unprecedented special qualifying session will be held at 9 a.m. today, the day before the $1 million race. The last time more than 33 cars started the race was in 1933 with 42.

Richard Mamer, sponsor for driver Dana Carter, said he was notified that USAC had upheld appeals of racing teams that claimed the rules clarification on the size of turbocharger exhaust pipes gave their competitors an unfair advantage on the final day of qualifying.

Mamer said Tom Binford, chief steward for the race and a member of the USAC board of directors, told him extra qualifiers would receive prize money equal to 33rd place and there would be no reduction in money for the original field.

Thursday, a USAC proposal to reopen qualifying was abandoned when owner-driver Jim McElreath and Don Biederstedt, owner of Eldon Rasmussen's car, refused to sign a waiver that would have allowed more than the traditional 33 cars to start the race.

The rules clarification allowed the inside diameter of exhaust pipes to be as small as 1.47 inches. The standard opening is about two inches, and drivers said the smaller size allowed them to override manifold pressure valves and gain additional horsepower and speed.

Reese Tourney Tops Weekend Golfing

By CHUCK McDONALD
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

It's been nearly a year now, but Friday at the Reese AFB golf course the club regulars were still talking about it.

Yes sir, that was some kind of tournament that Mark Heise and Jim Kearney turned in during last year's Memorial Weekend Partnership at the base. The duo shot rounds of 60-60-61 en route to a runaway 35-under victory in the championship flight.

Only Kearney returns this year, but even with a different partner (James McIntyre) his team has to be considered a definite favorite.

Besides the Reese affair, several other area tourney's are underway in the South Plains. The Sam Hameed Partnership at Levelland began Friday and the Jim Rallis Memorial gets underway today in Clovis along with the Lamesa Country Club Partnership. All the tournies are 54-hole affairs.

But it's doubtful that any golfers will duplicate the feat turned in by Heise and Kearney last year. They still speak about it with awe in the Reese Clubhouse.

"I'd never seen anything like it," said one golfer. "Thirty-five under is just incredible— those two are just flat-out good."

"The amazing thing," said Reese pro David Davis, "is that they could have had three straight 60's. Both Heise and Kearney had short birdie putts on the 18th on the last day."

But both the men finally missed a short putt and, alas, had to settle for a 35-under. Still there were some great shots necessary just to sniff a score that low.

"I remember a shot that Heise hit that landed out on the Levelland highway," said one Reese veteran golfer. "But you know what he did on his next shot? He left the ball sitting about two feet from the hole and wound up with a par."

"Even if both Heise and Kearney were coming back it would be nearly impossible for them to duplicate the kind of scores they had last year," he said. "You just don't shoot like that all the time.

According to the Reese club officials, over half of the 64 teams entered in the tourney come from non-Reese personel. Action begins with a shotgun start at 8:30 this morning and another group will tee off at 1:30 in the afternoon. After today's scores are turned in Davis and his assistants will place the teams in four different flights.

However the 6-stroke betterment rule will be in effect in regard to how teams are seeded today. If a team shoots sixs strokes (or lower) on Sunday than it did on Saturday then it will move up to a higher flight.

"I'm hoping this will keep people from sandbagging their scores to get into a lower flight," said Davis.

The tournament will offer over $2,000 worth of merchandise to the outstanding golfers but the competition will be strong for all that loot.

"The father-son team of Dick and Rick Alexander will be strong," said Davis. "So will Bucky Sheffield and John Shepperson and Mark Jarrett-Rex Robertson are also real good golfers. And of course we've got to remember Kearney and McIntyre," he added. "From top-to-bottom we've got plenty of good golfers."

However those were just some of the golfers the Reese pro mentioned. Mainly he was impressed with the overall depth of the field calling this year's group, "the best we've had in years."

In case of rain on either Saturday or Sunday the action will be made up on the next day. If inclement wheather strikes on Monday the winner will be determined by the scores turned in through the first two days. If there are two days of rain the tourney will be rescheduled.

Sonics Head Home For Round Three

Whatever you call it, t has enabled the Seattle SuperSonics to even their National Basketball Association championship series against the Washington Bullets at one victory apiece. And with the next two games scheduled for the Kingdome Sunday afternoon and the Coliseum Tuesday night, (because of a baseball game in the Kingdome) the Sonics flew home Friday feeling good.

"When we went to Washington, we knew we had to have at least a split," said Wilkens. "Now we're happy to be home. We should have close to 40,000 people at the Kingdome Sunday, and that should be super."

The Sonics drew even in the best-of-seven playoff finals thanks to a sticky defense that limited Washington to 30 second-half points as Seattle beat the Bullets 92-82 Thursday night.

But coach, isn't a zone defense illegal in the NBA?

"I'm not accusing them of violating the rules," replied Motta. "The way the zone rule is written, maybe what they were playing was legal. I don't know. That's up to the fathers of our league to decide."

Since the Sonics never were called for playing a zone by Thursday night's officals, it looks like it the Bullets are going to have to figure out a way to deal with that defense.

"The pressure lies with the coaches to break the zone," said Bullets forward Elvin Hayes, who was shut out by Seattle's Paul Silas in the fourth quarter Thursday night. "We have to come up with something."

The Washington players agreed that Seattle's defensive pressure forced the Bullets away from their normal game. "They prevented us from running the plays we wanted by trapping so much," said Bobby Dandridge, who was moved from forward to guard in the fourth quarter only to be blanked in the final 10 minutes by Seattle's Dennis Johnson. "They don't play an illegal zone like Atlanta or New Jersey, but they're very effective at double-teaming and trapping."

"We were the number one team in the league in defense this year," pointed out Seattle guard Gus Williams, his team's top scorer with 55 points in the finals. "If we play defense Sunday like we played it Thursday, we'll have the same results."

"Our half-court trap press has bothered them," he said. "And we'll continue to use it until they solve it."

Braves Suffer 'Big Blow', Says Cox

ATLANTA (AP) — "It's a big blow," said Atlanta Braves Manager Bobby Cox upon learning that Dale Murphy, the National League's runs batted in leader, would be lost for six to eight weeks with torn cartilage in his left knee.

The 23-year-old Murphy, in only his second full major league season, was batting .348 with 13 home runs and 36 RBI when he stretched for a Phil Niekro throw Monday night while catching the veteran knuckleballer.

It originally was thought that a few days rest would be sufficient but further tests Thursday determined an operation was necessary.

"I felt it pop when I went to my right to catch one of Phil's knuckleballs," said Murphy. "It put a lot of pressure on the inside of my left knee and I knew something had happened. The knee filled up with fluid the next day and was very painful."

Cox said, "They found a complete tear in his knee, and it (surgery) has got to be done."

"It's not a medical emergency," Murphy said Thursday after conferring with team physician Dr. Robert Wells, "but Dr. Wells feels that it will take surgery to correct. The knee just isn't capable of taking the strain of playing."

"Dr. Wells said it was the kind of injury that you might be able to play with for a couple of days, but that it would act up again unless it's corrected by surgery," said the 6-foot-4, 195-pound Murphy.

"It's really a terrible shame," said Braves center fielder Barry Bonnell, "The way he was going, he was a cinch to make the all-star team. And then, this ..."

New Rocket Owner Plans Some Changes

HOUSTON (AP) — Albuquerque, N.M., businessman George Maloof purchased the National Basketball Association Houston Rockets for an estimated $9 million Friday and said his first act would be to offer the head coaching job to assistant Rocket Coach Del Harris.

The sale must be approved by a two-third majority of the NBA board of governors.

"One of the first things I will do as owner will be to ask Mr. Harris to become the head coach," Maloof said. "I've talked with Del before and I've been very impressed."

So where does that leave present head coach Tom Nissalke, who has been rumored in line for the general manager's position?

"I do need good basketball minds and I would think if Mr. Nissalke would accept the general manager's ob this would fill a void for me," Maloof said.

Present general anager Ray Patterson probably will stay within the Summit organization, although he refused to comment on his future at Friday's press conference.

Harris said earlier that he would want the final word on any player transactions if he assumed the head coaching job.

Maloof's negotiating team of Bud Reynolds, comptroller of the Maloof Distributing Co. and Paul Robinson, his personal attorney, had been dealing with representatives of Greenway Plaza. Ltd., owners of the Rockets, since Tuesday.

Maloof had been trying to complete the deal to buy the Rockets for more than a week but a lease agreement and concessions at the Summit played a major role in lengthening the negotiations.

The Rockets ownership had been unsettled since Feb. 1977 when Houston developer Kenneth Schnitzer headed a group that rescued the franchise from financial troubles.

The new Rocket owners will pay a lease over the next five years of 12½ per cent on gross gate receipts at the Summit. Negotiators for the Arena Operating Co., which holds the lease to the city-owed facility, had sought a 15 per cent agreement.

Snyder Hurler On Elite Team

Sid Everton, the Snyder pitcher-infielder who combined a .371 batting average with a 10-2 pitching mark and an earned run average of 0.89, has been named Player of the Year in District 3-AAA.

Albert Lewis of Snyder was named Coach of the Year. Lewis guided Snyder to a 22-8 record and the Tigers play the winner of the Borger-Pecos series in the regional playoffs next week.

The second baseman was James Goolsby, a Lamesa junior who batted .217. Raul Romero, a Brownfield senior who hit .288, was the third baseman. The shortstop was Richard Crayton, a Snyder senior who batted .322. Toby Neves, a Snyder junior who hit .283, was the catcher. The outfield included Mitch Mackey, a Snyder senior who hit .466, Jim Murphy, a Brownfield senior who hit .326, Bobby Degrate, a Snyder junior who hit .240, and Mark Dobson, a Brownfield junior who hit .281.

The pitchers included Everton, Roy Lee Tealor, a Brownfield senior who was 6-8 with an ERA of 1.60, and Armando Morales, a Lamesa senior who was 7-8 with a 1.14 ERA.

Sports Notes

Plainview Names New Cage Coach

A-J Correspondent

PLAINVIEW — Bob C. Moore, an Amarillo native who was basketball coach at El Paso Fabens last season, was named head boys' basketball coach Friday by the Plainview School Board.

His record as a coach is 427 wins, 197 losses in basketball, and in one year of coaching football at Dalhart he posted an 8-2 record.

Moore will replace Richard O'Hara who has resigned to take an administrative position in the Weatherford, Okla., school system.

Forster Returns To Dodger Lineup

By The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Reliever Terry Forster has been removed from the Los Angeles Dodgers' disabled list and was eligible to pitch for the National League team against Cincinnati Friday night, it was announced earlier in the day.

J.T. Thomas Starts Comeback Attempt

PITTSBURGH — Cornerback J.T. Thomas, who earned two Super Bowl rings as a starter for the Pittsburgh Steelers, began his comeback attempt in earnest Friday at the club's "rookie camp."

"I feel I can play, but I don't think it will be easy," said the 28-year-old Thomas, who missed all of last season with a blood disorder.

Meanwhile, No. 1 draft pick Greg Hawthorne, a running back from Baylor, was absent from the opening drill after apparently being thrown for a loss in an airport dash.

Newman To Compete At Le Mans Race

MONTE CARLO, Monaco — Film star Paul Newman will compete in the Le Mans 24-hour road racing classic in France June 9-10 with a team aiming for an outright victory in the prestigious event.

"I finished fifth at Le Mans last year, and this time, we are pitching for outright victory," said Barbour.

Stram Reaches Settlement With KC

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Hank Stram, former coach of the Kansas City Chiefs, has reached a settlement with the National Football League club on the amount of money it owed him when he was fired in 1974. The amount of the settlement was not disclosed.

"The parties have worked out their differences, and part of the settlement was that there would not be a statement to the amount f the settlement," Joseph J. Kelly, Stram's lawyer, said Friday.

Stram's suit against the Chiefs had been scheduled to go to trial in U.S. District Court next month.

Deadline Nears For Pepsi Race

From 600 to 1,000 runners are expected to compete in the Diet Pepsi 10,000 Meter Run at 9:30 a.m. June 9 at the Texas Tech track.

The entry fee is $3.50. Entry blanks can be picked up at local supermarkets and the Swift Foot sporting goods' store at 3602 Slide Road. The deadline for mailed entries is June 8.

The male and female first place finishers will win an expense-paid trip to Denver, Colo. to compete in the regional race July 21. The national race will be in September in Purchase, N.Y.

The race will be conducted in more than 80 cities across the nation. This isits first year in Lubbock. The series began last year in more than 30 cities.

All runners will be registered on the day of the race. All participants will be given a t-shirt and a computerized card with the times of runners from last year's event.

Redskins Ink Pair Of Linebackers

WASHINGTON — The Washington Redskins announced Friday the signing of two linebackers, draft choice Monte Coleman of Central Arkansas University and free agent Ken Geddes, formerly with the Seattle Seahawks.

Coleman, an all-conference college safety and linebacker and the first Central Arkansas football player to be drafted into the National Football League, was picked by the Redkins as an 11th-round draft choice.

Colorado Lays Down Skiing Laws

DENVER (AP) — Legislation designed to spell out legal responsibilities of skiers and ski area operators was signed into law Friday by Gov. Richard Lamm.

The measure resulted from weeks of discussions and hearings involving legislators, attorneys and ski industry representatives. Colorado Ski Country USA, the state's industry group, played a key role in the drafting of th bill. It imposes criminal penalties, up to a $300 fine, against skiers who use a closed trail, skiing while impared by alcohol or drugs, leave the scene of a ski collision or skiing from a ski area onto adjacent private land.

Queen Coach Considers Dallas Job

A-J Correspondent

PLAINVIEW (Special)—Dean Weese, coach Wayland Baptist College Flying Queens, said Friday he had not decided whether to accept the head coaching job with the Dallas Diamonds, one of six new teams in the fledgling Women's Professional Basketball League.

Weese, 43, said he probably will make his decision Tuesday.

In six years at Wayland, Weese teams have won nearly 87 percent of their games and compiled a 194-30 record.

Weese, whose teams won 13 district titles and three state crowns in his 15 years as Spearman High School's girls coach, said he has discussed the Dallas job with his family several times. It is "something they can handle whichever direction we go," he added.

The Houston Angels defeated the Iowa Cornets three games to 2 to win the first championship series in the WPBL last season.

Other teams include the New York Stars, the New Jersey Gems, the California Dreams, the Chicago Hustle, Minnesota Fillies, Milwaukee Does, San Francisco Pioneers, Baltimore-Washington Metros and unnamed teams in St. Louis, Philadelphia and New Orleans.

The league's 36-game season is expected to begin about Nov. 15 and its college and eligible amateurs draft will be held June 11-12 in New York City.

Steinbrenner Supports Martin

CLEVELAND (AP) — In his strongest statement of support on the subject, New York Yankee owner George Steinbrenner said Friday, "Billy Martin is my manager in 1980."

Speaking in a public forum program carried on local radio, Steinbrenner repeated the scenerio he arranged last July when Martin quit as manager. Bob Lemon took over but five days later, Steinbrenner stunned the baseball world by bringing Martin back to a thunderous ovation on Oldtimers Day at Yankee Stadium and announcing the manager would return in 1980.

"Lemon wanted to manage another year and then become general manager," the owner said Friday. "Billy is my manager in 1980."

There were many who doubted that Martin would ever pilot the Yankees again, especially after the fiery manager was involved in a fight in Reno Nev., last November with local sports writer Ray Hagar.

Hagar filed criminal and civil suits against Martin but dropped both actions this week when the matter was settled out of court. Martin appeared in Reno Thursday to apologize to the writer, who also received a reported $7,500 from a local basketball team as part of the settlement. Martin had been in Reno to promote the team when the incident with Hagar occurred.

Steinbrenner again said Friday that he would sit down with Martin to discuss the facts of the settlement. When he agreed to bring Martin back, it was with the understanding that Billy would stay out of trouble. The Reno affair was just the kind of trouble Steinbrenner feared and it seemed that might end Martin's chances of returning. But Friday's remarks by the Yankee owner indicated that Martin had survived the crisis.

On other subjects, Steinbrenner said that assuring educational opportunities for children, dignity for the elderly and new life for embattled cities are farm more important than sports.

Steinbrenner told the Cleveland City Club that until those domestic problems are properly addressed, "We have no damn business giving away money to anybody anywhere in the world."

He spoke of driving through New York's slums on leaving Yankee Stadium after a game and imagining the children there saying to him, "Steinbrenner, if you were standing there on the corner and somebody drove up in a big car and said, 'Son, you can be anthing you want to be when you grow up,' would you believe it?" Answering his own question, he said, "No way!"

As for the role of sports, he observed, "Sometimes it helps take your mind off our real problems."

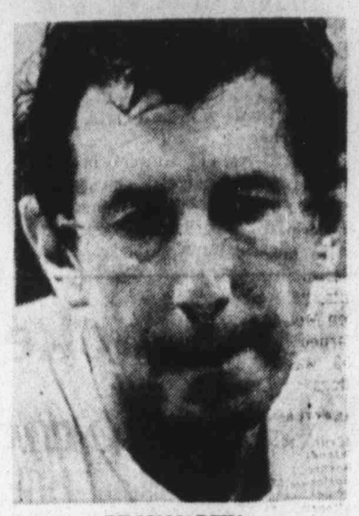

Steinbrenner, who spoke without notes for a half hour and then fielded questions from the audience, said at the outset, "I get into trouble because I'm always accused of saying what I think."

On other topics, he said:

•He wouldn't want his daughter to be a reprter assigned to cover the Yankee's locker room. But on women reporters given such assignments, he added, "They have a right to be there if they take what comes with it."

•He has a slogan on his desk that proclaims, "Lead, follow or get the hell out of the way."

BILLY MARTIN

•"You've got to treat a major league team like a business." Steinbrenner said that for years, wealthy team owners treated their clubs like toys, letting general maners make all the decisions.

By CHUCK McDONALD
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

After sifting through offers from nearly every school in the Southwest Conference, Monterey high jumper Chuck Perry finally made up his mind Friday and signed with Texas A&M.

It was quite a scoup for the Aggies who snatched Perry right out of the heart of Red Raider country. Perry is the first AAAA leaper to win back-to-back state titles in the high jump.

As a junior he won it in 1978 with a leap of 7-0 and then came back this year to claim the crown with a jump of 6-10.

"If I had gone to Tech," explained Perry, "I would would'nt have had any competition in workouts. Besides A&M is one of the only schools that offers a program in the field I want to major in —oceanography."

The only other SWC school with a program in oceanography, according to Perry, is the University of Texas.

"And at Texas they've got so many foreign athletes that they can't afford to give a full scholarship to anyone who is competing in just one event," said Perry.

But it wasn't just a love of the ocean and a desire for competition that swayed Perry's mind toward the Aggies. For one thing he's got his heart set on the 1980 Olympics.

"I want to do better everytime I jump in a meet," said Perry. "I want to improve—that's why the state meet was sort of a let down for me. I should have gone over seven feet. But I didn't."

"I want to get up to 7-4 by next spring," he added. "Of course that would be some kind of improvement."

American high jumpers can qualify for the Olympic trials with a leap of 7-2½. But they have to be able to do that consistently, says Perry.

Although the Monterey senior, who'll graduate tonight, has never done better than 7-0— his potential could still be untapped.

At 6-6 he competed in basketball at Monterey and never even began preparations for track until after the cage season had ended.

But now, says Perry, it's all going to be track.

"They've got a wieght coach at A&M who has developed a program just for high jumpers," he said. "I've never been able to get on a weight-lifting program specifically for track. During the summer I was always getting built up for football."

"I think I'll be able to get more individual coaching at A&M than I could anywhere else. " he said. "They've got three or four track coaches alone. And Jimmy Howard is jumping for them—he's already gone 7-2½.

"So I'll have some competition—and that's the best thing you can have in practice."

But every time a Lubbock athlete leaves the city for a SWC school the question always arises, why not Tech? But Perry said he didn't feel any pressure to stay at home.

"My coaches just wanted to make sure that I went to the best place for me," he said. "And my mom and dad left the decision up to me also. My dad helped me listen to what the coaches said and told me who was telling the truth but still—he left it up to me."

"I'm real pleased with A&M," he said. "I think it's one of the best schools in the nation."

Raider Women Fail To Qualify In AIAW Meet

EAST LANSING, Mich. (Special)- Texas Tech runners failed to qualify for the finals of the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics Women track and field meet as the Raiders 440-relay team failed to advance in Friday's prelims.

The relay team consisting of Pam Montgomery, Sharon Moultrie, Tonya Jones and Felecia Freeman ran a 47.9 and placed seventh in their heat. The team qualified for the track meet with a 46.85 time.

Texas Woman's University and the University of Texas at El Paso were the only two Texas schools to advance to the relay semifinals as the meet was plagued by chilly temperatures and high winds for the second consecutive day.

Tech qualified for the meet in the long jump, discuss, javelin and the 100-meter dash. However, none of the entrants advanced past the preliminary rounds at the meet on the Michigan State University campus.

Seattle Sinks Rangers With Doubleheader Sweep

By The Associated Press

Leon Roberts' two-run homer carried Seattle to a 5-3 victory over the Texas Rangers in the nightcap of a doubleheader Friday he drilled three singles to lead the Mariners to a 3-2 victory in the opener.

Rick Honeycutt, 2-5, scattered seven hits in the nightcap. Dock Ellis, 1-3, was the loser.

In the opener, Seattle starter Mike Parrott went 62-3 innings, yielding four hits, before getting relief help from Byron McLaughlin and Shane Rawley, who earned his fifth save. Doyle Alexander, 2-3, was the loser, lasting only 32-3 innings.

BREWERS 3, A's 2

Gorman Thomas singled home the winning run with two out in the eighth inning and Sixto Lezcano clubbed a pair of home runs, lifting the Milwaukee Brewers to a 3-2 victory over the Oakland A's.

Loser Bob Lacey, 1-2, who relieved starter Craig Minetto in the seventh, walked Lezcano with two out in the eighth and Paul Molitor singled him to second. Thomas, with just three hits in his previous 39 times at bat, singled to score Lezcano.

WHITE SOX 6, ANGELS 1

Ross Baumgarten allowed one hit in eight innings — Bobby Grich's leadoff double in the seventh — and Lamar Johnson drove in four runs for the second consecutive game to lead the Chicago White Sox to a 6-1 victory over the California Angels.

Baumgarten, 5-1, a rookie left-hander who will be 24 years old on Sunday, defeated Nolan Ryan, who proved no puzzle to the White Sox although he blanked them on two hits last Sunday.

ROYALS 4, TWINS 3

Amos Otis had three hits and drove in two runs, including the game-winner in the ninth inning, as the Kansas City Royals nipped the Minnesota Twins 4-3.

Otis doubled off loser Mike Marshall, 7-4, to score Willie Wilson, who led off the ninth with his second triple of the game. The light-hitting Wilson, who also had three hits, laced his triple to left with the Twins' outfield playing shallow.

Minnesota lost a 2-1 lead when Kansas City's Darrell Porter slammed his sixth home run of the season to lead off the sixth inning against starter Roger Erickson.

METS, PIRATES DELAYED

The game between the New York Mets and the Pittsburgh Pirates was halted in the bottom of the 11th inning because of fog with the teams tied at 3-3 and will be replayed in its entirety at a future date.

Umpires ordered the suspension after Pittsburgh left fielder Bill Robinson lost Joel Youngblood's fly ball in the heavy fog at Shea Stadium leading off the Mets' 11th.

CUBS 3, PHILLIES 0

Barry Foote's two-run homer in the fourth keyed a 3-0 victory for the Chicago Cubs over the Philadelphia Phillies as Lynn McGlothen and Bruce Sutter teamed up on a four-hitter.

Bill Buckner, who had four hits — including a pair of doubles — scored the Cubs' first run in the third after his first double and Dave Kingman's RBI single.

GIANTS 6, BRAVES 4

Pitcher Bob Knepper sent the San Francisco Giants ahead in the fourth inning with the first home run of his major league career — a shot which tied a major league record and gave the Giants a 6-4 victory over the Atlanta Braves.

The teams tied the big league record by totalling five homers in one inning.

Monterey Stumbles 3-1

Martinez (7-3) went the distance in picking up the victory. Coleman (7-2) took the loss.

The Monterey righthander breezed along for five innings until he ran into control problems in the sixth. Coleman walked the first two batters he faced in the inning, before Moegle called on Potts. Until that time the Plainsmen sophomore pitcher had struckout seven and allowed just one hit.

Potts struckout Panther centerfielder Polo Miranda, but then had a hard time finding the plate to the second man he faced leftfielder Quinn. Quinn walked to load the bases.

That brought up rightfielder Eddie Burciaga. Burciaga sent the third pitch Potts threw over the head of Monterey leftfielder Burgess. Burciaga wound up at second with a double and first baseman Salas, third baseman Gilbert Calvillo and Quinn all scored.

Monterey's first and last run of the season came in third.

Barron then brought the Plainsmen rightfielder the remaining 90-feet by grounding out to third baseman Calvillo, who scooped up the ball wide of the bag.

Mays Takes Second Place In Track Action

Tech's Greg Lautenslager ran a 3:45.8 in the preliminaries of the 1500-meter run to qualify for the finals today at 7:30 p.m.

Ricky McCormick of Tech will run in tonight's invitational mile.

"I'm very pleased with the way James and Greg ran," Tech track coach Corky Oglesby said. "James got boxed in and still managed to place second and Greg ran the equivalent of a 4:02. mile."

This meet is considered a tuneup for the NCAA finals, scheduled next weekend in Champaign, Ill. Mays has qualified for the NCAA meet in the 800 meters, and both Lautenslager and McCormick qualified in the 1500-meter run last week at the tri-conference meet in Austin.

Cut Shot Wins At Ruidoso

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M. (AP) — Cut Shot made it look easy as she posted a 5-length win in the feature race Friday at Ruidoso Downs.

Lions Sign Buff Star

PONTIAC, Mich. (UPI)—Third-round draft choice Bo Robinson, a fullback who broke West Texas State rushing records set by Duane Thomas and Mercury Morris, has signed a contract for undisclosed terms with the Detroit Lions.

"We had him rated among the top 20 players in the country," said coach Monte Clark of the Lions. "He is a breadaway runner with good lateral movement for a fullback.

Robinson gained 3,542 yards during his college career.

Foyt Has Nothing More To Prove At Indy 500

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A.J. Foyt doesn't have to prove anything to anybody. In an unparalleled career, the 44-year-old grandfather is still the one driver in championship auto racing whose name commands instant recognition and respect, whether you like him or not.

Foyt still draws attention just by walking through Gasoline Alley; he still gets ovations from the crowds and the cheers from screaming teenagers, and he still wins more races than anybody else.

Foyt will make his 22nd straight start in the Indianapolis 500 on Sunday, a record for the world's richest auto race, and he will be seeking his fifth trip to Victory Lane. Nobody else has won more than three times.

It was in 1958 that the young Texan made his debut at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, when he was described, prophetically, as "a fast rising star" in the Speedway fact book.

"Although his career in racing has been short by way of comparison to other rookies," the 1958 press book noted, "Foyt has showed unusual promise which has earned him a driver's test" in the car driven by then-national champ Jimmy Bryan.

"Practically unheard of insofar as national competition was concerned two years ago," the fact book continued Foyt "moved into the headlines during the 1957 season as a steady midget campaigner. His smooth, easy driving style soon caught the attention of big car owners and earned him a chance in both Midwest sprints and national championship competition. He gave a good account of himself in both divisions."

In 1957, Foyt competed in five championship races, placing 26th in the final point standings. He came to Indy the next year, then competed at Monza where he attracted the attention of many European racingfigures. Then he drove in nine other U.S. Auto Club championship races and placed among the top 10 finishers three times.

The maturing driver finished 10th in his second Indy race in 1959 and ranked fifth in the final USAC standings. The next year, despite a 25th-place finish in the 500 because of a clutch failure after 90 laps, Foyt claimed the first of his record six national driving titles.

Foyt won his first 500 and repeated as national champ in 1961, then added USAC crowns in 1963, 1964, 1967 and 1975. He added Indy titles in 1964 and 1967. In 1974, Foyt finished 15th, but he improved his position each of the next three years, ending up third in 1975, second in 1976 and first in 1977.

Last year, Foyt tied for the second-fastest qualification speed but finished seventh. He qualified this year on the outside of the second row. In 21 seasons, he has won a record 63 championship events. No one else ever has won more than 35.

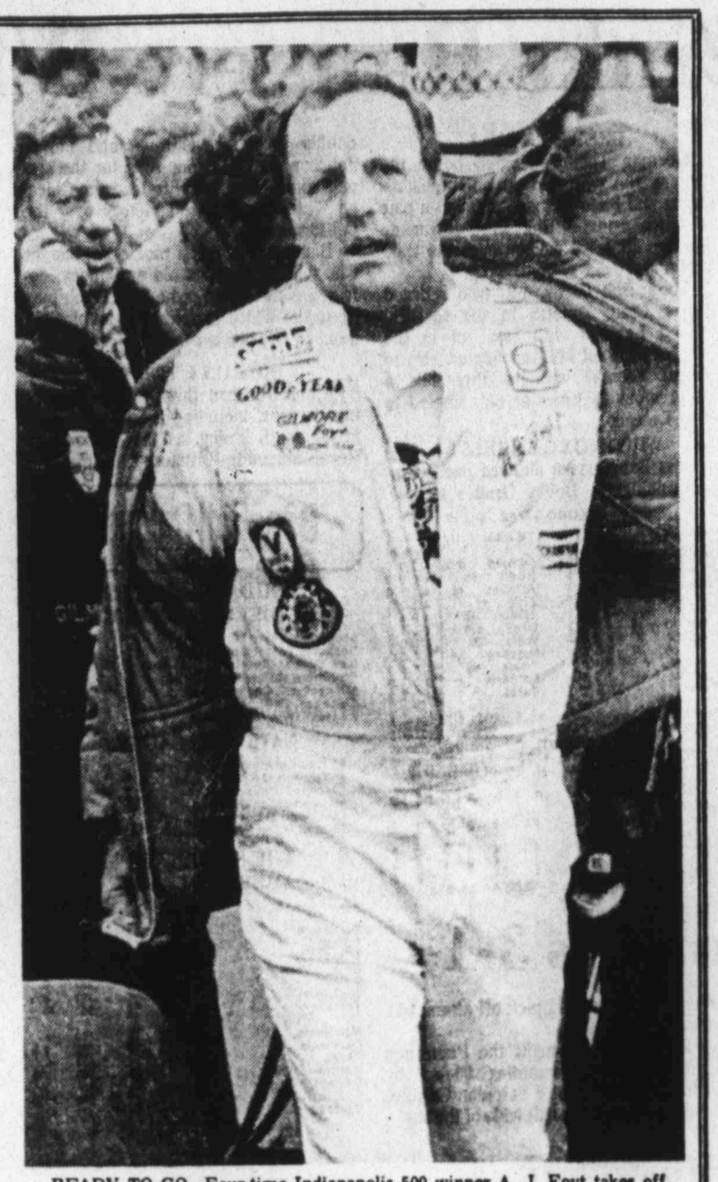

Foyt was an original director of Championship Auto Racing Teams, a group of dissident car owners and drivers that broke with USAC late last year in a dispute over control of racing. But Foyt quickly came back to USAC, a move that created a lot of bitterness among some CART people. He was also denounced by CART as a ringleader in the unsuccessful attempt to keep six CART teams out of this year's 500.

Foyt has denied he had any part in USAC's action that later was overturned in federal court.

"I guess when you've won as much as I have, people say, well, you know, A.J. gets everything the way he wants it," Foyt said.

"People know me and I guess that's the reason I get in arguments with the press. Because I believe in telling the truth if it hurts you or it don't. When I make mistakes, I admit 'em. But when I don't make mistakes I'm not going to let somebody else tell me I made mistakes, and this is the way I've been all my life. I'm not going to change at this stage."

Foyt, who holds nearly every Indy 500 record already, needs to compete in the 1980 race to become the only driver in history to drive here in four decades. And he has hinted retirement is at least 2-3 years away.

Burleson Out

BOSTON (AP) — Shortstop Rick Burleson will not be able to play for the Boston Red Sox for three games begiing Sunday, following withdrawal of an appeal of his three-game suspension, the team said Friday.

Burleson was suspended for shoving substitute umpire Lester Pratt on May 16 at Fenway Park in Boston. He and the Major League Players Association appealed but then dropped the appeal.

The Red Sox said American League President Lee MacPhail informed the team of the withdrawal on Friday and told Burleson his suspension will begin Sunday in the game against Toronto and will continue Monday and Tuesday in games against Texas.

Vilas Advances At Italian Open

ROME (AP) — Top-seeded Gullermo Vilas of Argentina started and finished strongly, surviving two match points, and bat Adriano Panatta of Italy 6-1, 6-7, 7-5 Friday to advance to the semifinals of the $200,000 Italian Open Tennis Championships along with three Americans.

Vilas plays unseeded Gene Mayer in Saturday's semifinals. Mayer ousted countryman Terry Moor 7-6 6-3 in a battle of underdogs.

Mayer, however, was suffering from an upset stomach, organizers said, which forced him to withdraw from his doubles match and raised doubts on his presence on the court Saturday.

Second-seeded Vitas Gerulaitis had more problems than expected in his 6-4, 6-2 triumph over young Gianni Ocleppo of Italy.It took the American star four games to gain control of his service, and then the match for Ocleppo was over.

Vilas appeared headed to an easy victory over Panatta, but then the Italian took the tie-breaker 7-5 to win the second set and continued placing his service effectively, jumping to a 4-2 lead in the third set. Vilas rallied with his baseline steadiness and managed to tie the score 4-4 only to see the Italian take the lead again.

Vilas svived two match points in the 10th game, saving the first with a rare ace on the clay surface of the Foro Italico courts and the second by placing a forehand right down the sideline. The Argentine southpaw tied the score 5-5 and broke the Italian's service in the 11th game.

In the 12th game, it was Vilas who had to venture to the net for a winning forehand volley that prevented Panatta from breaking his service. The Argentine then wrapped up the game after almost three hours of play winning his service and the third set 7-5, disappointing a crowd of nearly 10,000 persons.

Vilas said the heat bothered him.

"It was very hot, it was a tough match and Panatta kept the pressure on me. I felt well because my breathing has improved greatly after my tonsils were removed," he said.

"I lost the second set because I was unlucky in a few crucial points and Panatta played well as he kept on doing down to the finish, keeping his cool even on the match points I had."

In the Gerulaitis-Ocleppo match, the American had taken a 3-0 lead, but then Ocleppo came back at 4-4 as the American blew a shot for a 5 lead.

Gerulaitis rarely managed to put his first service shot over the net and at one instance he slammed his racket against his leg and shouted "just once" as his service went into the net. The American, though, regained his steadiness, took the first set 6-4 and then rolled to a 6-2 victory in the second.

Raider Fems Qualify For Link Event

Texas Tech golfers Mary DeLong and Linda Hunt have qualified to compete in the NAIAW (National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women) Golf Championships June 13-16 in Stillwater, Okla., according to Tech women's golf coach Jay McClure.

Miss DeLong and Miss Hunt will be the first Raiders ever to compete in the national tournament. They were selected on the basis of the average score for their lowest ten rounds of the season.

Miss DeLong, a freshman from Cour d'Alene, Idaho, was the Raiders' low scorer in all seven tournaments this year, and set a Tech record of 74 in one round. Her ten sub-eighty rounds gave her a 77.6 average, the eighth best qualifying score in the tournament.

Miss Hunt, a sophomore transfer from Houston Baptist, was the twenty-second qualifier with an average of 79.8. The cutoff is 80.

"Something like this is very good for our program," McClure said. "Mary and Linda are both playing well, and they're capable of turning in good scores. Last year's winning score of 299 figures to a 75 per round, and both of our golfers are close to that."

Miss DeLong is preparing for the tournament at the golf course where she works in Idaho. Miss Hunt is practicing at Lubbock Country Club.

Bench's Home Run Production May Slow Down

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Cincinnati Reds catcher Johnny Bench said that in his home run production may be down in the future.

"I may not hit that many home runs anymore," Bench said in a recent interview. "If your swing is somewhat inhibited, what can you do?"

The 31-year-old Reds catcher has been known for his home run hitting ability throughout his baseball career. His 325 homers (not counting post season games) are second among catchers in major league history behind Yogi Berra of the New York Yankees who had 358.

The two-time National League Most valuable Player and perennial all star has hit two or more homers in a game 15 times in his career, including a pair of three-homer games. He has nine career grand slam home runs during his career.

Bench's problem is a back ailment which has bothered him during the last few seasons and it's hurting him again this year.

"It's just that same thing," he said, "a sprained joint. I have a growth down there. I probably was born with it. And maybe the years of catching ... it's just not a good strong feeling. It's there. It's not going to improve much."

Bench compensated for the problem by changing bats Wednesday night.

"The one I used is a little lighter," he said. "it has no knob. I choked up, opened my stance, and just tried to make contact. I don't think there's anything else I can do."

With the new bat, Bench cracked his first homer Wednesday since April 20 off of San Francisco pitcher Vida Blue.

Pond Leads World 600 Qualifying

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Lennie Pond led the final day of qualifying Friday for Sunday's $363,000 World 600 stock car race at Charlotte Motor Speedway.

Driving a Chevrolet, the Chester, Va., driver posted a lap of 157.348 mph on the 1.5-mile banke track to head the list of 31 drivers who closed out the field for Sunday's NASCAR Grand National event.

Thirty drivers qualified Wednesday and Thursday, with Neil Bonnett taking the pole Wednesday with a speed of 160.125 mph in a Mercury. Richard Petty will start the race on the front row beside Bonnett by virtue of his 159.825 mph in his Chevrolet.

In addition to Pond, J.D. McDuffie was among the last drivers to make the field. His speed of 157.165 in a Chevrolet made him the second fastest, behind Pond, in Friday's action.

The field was originally slated for 40 cars but a 41st spot was added Friday for Ronnie Thomas of Christianburg, Va.

Thomas did not push his Chevrolet fast enough to make the field in regular qualifying but his spot was added because he is among the top 20 drivers in points in the lucrative Winston Cup standings. Drivers accumulate points through their performances in Grand National races and any driver in te top 20 who did not make the World 600 field was eligible for a spot at the back of the pack.

Sunday's 600 mile event, longest on the NASCAR circuit, is scheduled to start at 12:30 p.m. It will be preceded Saturday by a 300 mile race for Grand American cars, which are similar to the powerful, late-model Grand Nationals.

Soccer Fan Dies Following Game

LONDON (AP) -One man was killed and another seriously injured as Scottish socr fans went on the rampage on a crowded Glasgow-to-London express train early Friday.

One man was found dead from stab wounds and another was found badly injured and rushed to hospital.

Eye witnesses said the dead man, 20-year-old John Murray died after going to the aid of a girl who was being molested.

More than 500 Scottish soccer fans were on train, one of 16 carrying more than 8,000 fans to Saturday's international match against England at Wembley.

Among other incidents reported on the train, which was stopped by police at Warrington, Lancashire, where all passengers were interviewed by police, was the theft of $240 from a girl passenger. Five other passengers were treated at a hospital for minor injuries.

CULT FILM IN TOWN — Accustomed to her son's strange obsession with death, Vivian Pickles watches skeptically as Bud Cort aims a revolver at her head in "Harold And Maude." The black comedy was directed by Hal Ashby, who went on to film "Bound For Glory" and "Coming Home," and stars Cort and Ruth Gordon in the title roles. It has reached cult status, playing years in European cities. The action is punctuated by Cat Stevens' songs. "Harold And Maude" will be screened at midnight tonight at Showplace Six.

Religious Leader Shot Down In Iranian Terrorist Attack

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Gunmen shot and wounded a religious leader Friday who is a reputed member of the secret Islamic Revolutionary Council that controls Iran.

The Forghan group, which has killed two revolutionary leaders in the last month and is pledged to continue terrorist attacks, claimed responsibility. Ayatollah Hashemi Rafsanjani, a close associate of revolutionary leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, was shot twice in the stomach after he answered the door at his house in northern Tehran and struggled with three assailants, according to reports assembled by Iranian reporters.

A spokesman at Tehran's Martyrs' Hospital told the Associated Press that Rafsanjani was undergoing surgery for removal of two bullets, one of which had damaged a kidney. Earlier, the official Pars news agency reported the religious leader was in satisfactory condition.

Shortly after the shooting, in which Rafsanjani's wife reportedly received a minor gunshot wound in the arm, a caller to the newspaper Bamdad said Forgan was responsible for the attack. The mysterious underground group uses a mixture of leftist and Islamic rhetoric in its communiques.

State radio said "millions of people" participated in a second day of emotional rallies Friday denouncing the United States for its criticism of Iran's system of revolutionary trials and executions.

Rafsanjani, 50, was a major speaker Thursday at a rally in Tehran, the Iranian capital. He said the hands of U.S. Senators were "stained with blood," as he denounced a Senate resolution which last week expressed "abhorrence" of Iranian executions. At least 222 persons have died before firing squads since the Islamic revolution overthrew the monarchy of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi in February.

Rafsanjani was the third senior member of Iran's revolutionary movement to be shot in about a month. On April 23, Gen. Mohammad Ali Gharani, the new government's first chief of staff, was shot and killed in the yard of his home.

On May 1, following May Day labor demonstrations in Tehran, Ayatollah Moreza Motahari, a member of the revolutionary council, was shot and killed as he left a dinner party.

Forghan took responsibility for the assassinations. A communique attributed to Forghan earlier this month said the group would kill all members of the revolutionary council and a number of top government officials. The group's messages also charged that Iran is slipping into a dictatorship of the clergy.

Reporters in the capital estimated that 80,000 people took part in the Tehran rallies and a march to the U.S. Embassy, slightly fewer than the estimated 100,000 protesters the day before. State radio reported effigies of President Carter and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin were burned during the protests.

Other protesters carried an effigy of Uncle Sam which bore the communist hammer-and-sickle symbol, the Israeli Star of David and the British Union Jack, a sign that protesters considered all these forces responsible for meddling in Iran.

In Washington, the State Department deplored the anti-American demonstrations outside the U.S. Embassy, and called on all authorities there to try to "calm emotions."

The embassy was festooned with banners, including one that read "death to the U.S. Senate." Protesters chanted slogans such as "Iranis victorious, American corruption is defeated." Embassy personnel kept a low profile as revolutionary guardsmen stood watch at the eight-foot-high compound walls. One unarmed American stood inside the compound near the front gate with a walkie-talkie.

Iran has postponed the arrival of U.S. Ambassador Walter L. Cutler in protest against the Senate vote, but there have been no incidents reported involving American business interests or citizens here.

Margaret McQuade of Oakland, Calif., a spokeswoman for a group of foreigners whose spouses are Iranian citizens, said she knew of no recent incidents involving her American friends.

"I think Iranians know the difference between the American government and the American people," she said.

Khomeini, architect of the revolution, last week blasted the Senate resolution, but at the same time said "we must see what is he reaction of the American nation. Does it have the same reaction as the U.S. Senate?"

The demonstrations, however, marked a resumption of internal conflicts among political and religious factions. While Thursday's protests were a massive show of unity against the United States, scuffling among rival groups broke out in front of the block-long U.S. Embassy compound.

Italy annexed Ethiopia in 1936.

Film Employee Accused Of Fradulent Scheme

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A former Paramount Pictures employee has pleaded innocent to grand theft charges stemming from an alleged scheme involving almost $500,000 in phony photocopying fees.

Freeman Gibbs Packard Jr., 36, entered the plea at his arraignment Thursday on three counts of felony grand theft before Superior Court Judge Carlos Velarde. The defendant is free on $15,000 bail.

Packard and his Hollywood roommate, Richard Joseph Koplar, were arrested Dec. 7 in connection with the scheme. Koplar was cleared in April when a Municipal Court judge ruled there was insufficient evidence to hold him.

Packard was a production coordinator at Paramount for three years and was responsible for having television scripts photocopied for actors and production workers.

In many cases, the studio does its own photocopying, but outside firms sometimes are hired when there is an overload.

Overblown Film Has Chilling Moments

Filmeter is compiled by Dick Kleiner in Hollywood and the N.E.A. staff in both Hollywood and New York.

NEW RELEASE

WINTER KILLS (R) — Jeff Bridges, John Huston, Anthony Perkins. Thriller. Based on the Richard Condon novel, this is an overlong and overblown story of a presidential assassination which is remarkably like the Kennedy assassination. It is also a story of a powerful family. Some effective and chilling sequences, but others are almost surrealistic and ludicrous. GRADE: C-plus.

GENERAL RELEASE

CHAMP, THE (PG) — Jon Voight, Faye Dunaway, Ricky Schroder. Drama. Franco Zeffirelli has dusted off the old classic about the ex-champ and his son and the rick lady who used to be the kid's mother. He pulls out all the stops — no shob it left unsobbed — and it's a treat for the love-to-cry set. But it is overlong and very over-sentimental. Young Ricky Schoder is the best child actor in years, however. GRADE: B.

HANOVER HUNTER (R) — Robert DeNiro, John Cazale, John Savage, Meryl Streep, Christopher Walken. Drama. This is a powerful, memorable look at three Pennsylvania steel workers who go off to fight in Vietnam. Director Michael Cimino has created images you may never forget. It is long and some of it is forced, but it remains a classic film. GRADE: A.

LITTLE ROMANCE, A (PG) — Laurence Olivier, Arthur Hill, Sally Kellerman. Romantic comedy. This one will enchant you. A pair of teen-agers find each other, and find innocent romance, against a background of Paris and Venice. With lovely music and beautiful photography, this has fun, excitement and all the good things. GRADE: A.

LOVE AT FIRST BITE (PG) — George Hamilton, Susan Saint James, Arte Johnson. Comedy. You'll hate yourself in the morning, but you'll laugh while you're watching this spoof of the Dracula story. This time, Drack is back as a crack lover, in the present, and it's all done for fun. Enjoy. GRADE: B.

MANHATTAN (R) — Woody Allen, Diane Keaton, Michael Murphy, Mariel Hemingway. Romantic comdey. Allen is back in his personal groove — writing, directing, starring — and back in the area where he functions most witfily. That's the man-woman, husband-wife, boyfriend-girlfriend continuing war. This is done in black and white, and it's beautiful, funny and crisp. Only flaw: a little familiar. GRADE: B-plus.

(Film grading: A -superb; B -good; C -average; D -poor; F -awful)

County Going Broke Via Trial Excesses

CARMEL, N.Y. (UPI) — Putnam County, N.Y., say it cannot afford another major trial this year.

There had not been a murder trial in the county — one of the state's smallest — for five years until this year, when there were two.

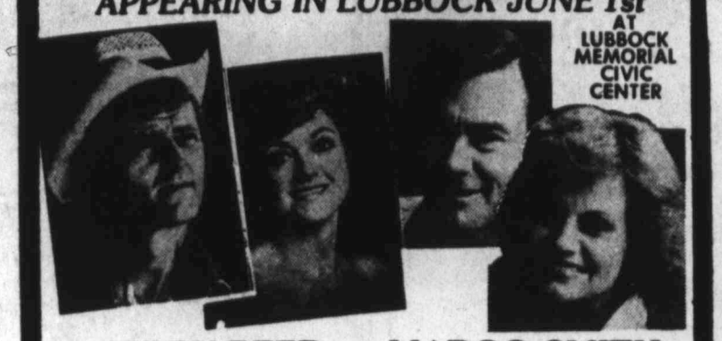

Putnam Finance Commissioner John Duffy said the district attorney's office already is running $6,000 in the red and has no more money should another major trial come up.

The two murder cases involved Serge Motti, convicted of killing an internationally known dog trainer, and John Pucci, who was found guilty of slaying a Montreal drug dealer.

Duffy said that based on the previous five years of having no murder trials, the county had only budgeted enough to cover routine court expenses.

USDA Official Urges Food Price Probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department's chief economist said Friday he has asked for a special inquiry into what made food prices go up so much in April, including a review of the way government statistics are collected and analyzed.

Howard Hjort disclosed the probe shortly after the Labor Department announced new consumer price figures for last month.

He said Labor's report of a 1 percent increase in food prices from March to April (0.9 percent, including beverages) "came as somewhat of a surprise to our people" who make spot checks of prices on a daily and weekly basis.

According to the Agriculture Department surveys, Hjort said the April increase should have been less than 0.5 percent.

The department's daily and weekly surveys are limited to grocery stores in New York City, Virginia and in some West Coast areas, Hjort said.

"Those were indicating that we should have expected an increase in food prices much below what was reported today," he said.

Labor Department statistics are based on much larger samplings, but Hjort said differences between those and the figures gathered by his department normally are much smaller than the discrepancies in the April statistics.

He said the department will work with the Council on Wage and Price Stability and the departments of Labor and Commerce in the probe.

But Hjort said the investigation will include a look into what is behind an increase in the marketing spread — the difference between what farmers get and consumers pay for food.

For example, he said, middleman price spreads for red meat — which include costs of processing and selling the products — were up 30 percent from a year earlier in April and appear to be continuing higher.

"There is some evidence in our review of marketing spreads data that the increase in spreads for beef and pork, particularly beef, are excessive," he said.

Hjort said the investigation will probe into prices at retail stores as they relate to those at the farm "and follow through the chain to see if increased costs of labor, energy, all those factors ... were justified" in the increase last month.

"The other possibility is that there is some flaw in the data collection and reporting system within the Department of Labor," he said. "We want to probe into both aspects of the possible situation."

Hjort said his department's own methods of spot-checking food prices also will be studied.

Cattle prices at the farm level have held fairly steady for the past two months and that this "implies that we should be seeing relative stability in retail beef prices," he said.

Supermarket prices of pork have declined but still have not matched the drop in the prices farmers get for live hogs. Thus, Hjort said, consumers probably will see some further decline in retail pork.

Hjort predicted that the retail food price index for May will show a further slowdown when the statistics are announced a month from now.

The department's earlier prediction that retail food prices overall this year will average around 10 percent above 1978 still is valid, he said.

Alfalfa Weevil Threatening Artesia Crops

ARTESIA (Special) — "Alfalfa farmers in New Mexico are being challenged by a determined foe, relatively new to this state — the alfalfa weevil," says Larry Gholson, extension pest management specialist for New Mexico State University.

"The weevil has been a serious alfalfa pest in most alfalfa growing areas of the United States but only recently has invaded New Mexico."

In 1974, about 9,000 acres of alfalfa were sprayed for weevils. By 1978, more than 50,000 acres were sprayed.

"This year, that acreage will increase again due to virtually a 100 percent infestation in the eastern portion of the state and major infestation along the Rio Grande and in the Fort Sumner area," Gholson says.

"While it's too late for the early season management, producers will face critical decisions during the next few weeks," Gholson says.

Many fields which were treated earlier are now getting a heavy reinfestation of adult weevils.

The first cutting removes much of the weevil's food source. So the weevils feed heavily in and under the windrows, and on new growth from the regrowing crowns.

"Farmers should check daily after the first cutting to see if the fields are being damaged by resident weevils," Gholson says.

"One insurance plan would be to treat fields with heavy adult populations prior to cutting. Use a short residual material and it should take a good deal of pressure off the regrowing alfalfa."

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Soybean and grain futures drifted mostly lower Friday on the Chicago Board of Trade as traders sold contracts before the holiday weekend.

Corn futures held their ground, closing fractionally mixed after the Agriculture Department reprted unusually large new corn export sales last week. The department said 3.5 million tons were sold during the week, the largest amount in the last two marketing years. Some 60 percent of the corn was shipped to the Soviet Union, an analyst said.

Soybean and wheat futures drifted lower, partly in response to commission house selling and an absence of commercial buying.

At the close, soybeans were ¾ to 3½ cents lower, July $7.34¾; wheat was 4 to 5¼ cents lower, July $3.54¼; corn was ¾ cent lower to ¼ cent higher, July $2.65¼; and oats were 1 to 1½ cents lower, July $1.50¾.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

THE GRAIN SORGHUM TARGET PRICE still has not been set at the level dictated by the Agricultural Act of 1977.

So says the Grain Sorghum Producers Association, which has called for a congressional investigation of the U. S. Department of Agriculture's failure to administer the feed grain program in accordance with the law.

Elbert Harp, executive director of the Lubbock-based GSPA, has written Rep. Thomas Foley, D-Wash., chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, requesting a formal hearing on the problem.

Harp said the purpose would be to ensure that the USDA administers the feed grain program as Congress intended.

A FORMULA FOR DETERMINING SORGHUM target prices was established in the act of 1977. The formula is tied to the cost of production, which is calculated annually by the USDA.

Harp said the GSPA is asking that this formula be applied.

Dr. Howard Hjort, director of economics for USDA, has admitted that the formula has not been applied in determining the 1979-crop target price.

"There is in fact a discrepancy," Hjort said earlier this year in testifying before the House Subcommittee on Livestock and Grains. "The $2.30 per bushel will have to be increased very likely to $2.35, in order to be consistent with the law."

The GSPA contends the increase should be greater — 10 to 18 cents, depending upon which USDA cost of production figures are used.

BUT EVEN THE FIVE-CENT INCREASE mentioned by Hjort has not been implemented, Harp pointed out, and the USDA now has indicated it does not intend to raise the sorghum target.

The $2.35 per bushel target price would translate into $4.20 per hundredweight. At $2.30 per bushel, the target price is $4.11 per hundredweight.

"The grain sorghum farmers of the United States are in critical economic condition at this time," Harp said in the letter to Foley.

"They need all possible help to survive the present low prices. The tenant farmers in the United States produce over 50 percent of the grain sorghum.

"The USDA's latest figures on cost of production to tenant farmers is $5.02 per hundredweight. On May 15, the average price received by producers throughout the United States was $3.62 per hundredweight, and this is after paying storage and interest on grain from harvest time until the middle of May.

"THIS IS AN AVERAGE NET LOSS of $1.40 per hundredweight, plus storage and interest," Harp said.

"The 59-cent deficiency payment for the 1978 crop certainly does not bridge that gap. The loss probably will be larger in 1979 due to the increased cost of production and prospects for another bumper crop.

"We need your help."

Agricultural Fuel Shortages Feared

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Agricultural fuels are "down to the bottom of the barrel" and some spot shortages may be experienced next week by Midwest farmers in the middle of a weather-delayed planting season, federal energy officials warned Friday.

The warning came at a background briefing by Department of Energy officials in Kansas prior to their discussions with officials and prime suppliers from 10 Midestern states.

Dwain Skelton, a resources development engineer with the Region 7 energy office, said that if good weather holds and farmers continue to work their fields "diesel fuel on the farm level could be in short supply by Monday."

Skelton said one of the problems is that farmers are hoarding much the same as motorists in California, where energy officials say the topping off of automobile gasoline tanks led to severe shortages.

Asked if there would be restrictions placed on farmers who have some fuel available, Skelton said: "We will look at those who are out of fuel and help them first."

Diesel supplies are tight throughout the United States, with prices up sharply. Besides farmers, the fuel is crucial to railroads, bus lines, trucking companies and shipping lines.

Energy officials estimated that the May diesel fuel shortage for farmers would run between 4 percent and 9 percent. Skelton would not speculate on the outlook for the winter wheat harvest, about four to five weeks away. He said he did not see any new supply sources and added, "if the demand continues, we will have to allocate as best we can."

Skelton said the shortage was created primarily because of a 7 percent to 8 percent decrease in production. He blamed that situation on lower crude oil imports and bitterly cold winter conditions that forced the shutdown of some refineries.

"We have experienced extremely heavy production out of the refineries the last two years," Skelton said. "They are just like a car. You can drive a car only so hard, and then it's going to be hard to get it ready for the next trip."

Cattle Futures Down, 15 To 85 Points Lower

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Cattle futures closed 15 to 85 points lower led by October which tumbled the 150 limit level for a time Friday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. Sales totaled 29,063 cars. The market reacted after briefly gaining 25 in December.

Aggressive selling was paced by the cash connected commission house and forced prices to the lowest in one week. The easier turn to beef and fears on increased competition from pork touched off much of the selling as did trimming of long lines ahead of the holiday weekend.

Wholesale beef was unchanged at 108½ cents a pound, f.o.b. river points. Cash cattle were steady to up 25 cents with the best top $75 per hundredweight. Slaughter was 124,000 head. The major markets are expecting about 17,400 head on Monday.

Feeder cattle futures closed 15 to 60 lower led by April on 4,045 contracts. Prices tumbled 140 after briefly posting a gain of 12.

The reaction pressed the market to one week lows, down more than two cents from Thursday's highs. Selling spilled over from the live cattle pit and also followed easier trend to cash beef. Traders looked for increased competition from pork and also expected lesser interest following filling of holiday needs.

The market tumbled to new season's lows in October through February at the lowest since last July. Weakness in other pits spilled over and traders noted mostly lower cash hogs despite sharply reduced arrivals. Products continue to give ground following the sharply increased slaughter Thursday.

Wholesale hams were off 3 to up ½ at 68¾ to 70½ cents a pound, f.o.b. river. Cash hogs were off $1.50 to up 75 cents with the best top $45.50 per hundredweight. Kill was 317,000 head. Receipts at the major terminals on Monday are expected to total 37,800 head.

Pork belly (bacon) futures closed 20 to 110 lower pacee by February which yielded 130 early. Volume was estimated at 6,506 cars. Early gain of 50 was quickly erased.

Weakness in most cash hogs, despite light arrivals, touched off much of the selling as did heavier than expected kill Thursday. Weakness in cash bellies more than offset the reduction in local storage stocks. July and August prices moved to the lowest since March 1978.

There have been 228 deliveries thus far. Wholesale bacon was off 1½ to 3¼ cents at 40 to 43 cents a pound, f.o.b. river.

Stock Mart Ends Mixed

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market, virtually ignoring news of a big leap in consumer prices, finished mixed Friday with stocks involved in corporate takeovers providing much of its strength.

Analysts had expected the announcement by the Labor Department that consumer prices had risen 1.1 percent in April, 13.2 percent on an annualized basis.
