Reagan may touch on issues affecting Basin

From Staff and Wire Reports

WASHINGTON — The Permian Basin oil industry could get its first hint tonight of President Reagan's intentions toward proposed elimination of percentage depletion and intangible drilling costs.

In his fourth annual State of the Union address to Congress, the president is expected to endorse the plan he ordered for simplifying the income tax system while leaving open the option of changing elements of the proposal before sending it to Capitol Hill.

Oilmen are hoping that one of the options left open will be the issue over percentage depletion and intangible drilling costs, which, if passed, could severely restrict the flow of investment capital into the industry.

Some political observors believe if Reagan singles out the oil issue in his speech, it would be tantamount to sending up the battle flag. On the other hand, if he does not single it out or mention it by name it could mean he is still considering the options on it.

Tonight's speech to a joint session of the House and Senate, which coincidentally falls on Reagan's 74th birthday, will be broadcast live at 9 p.m. EST by the major television and radio networks.

One official who read the speech called it the president's "vision of the future, the heart and soul of Ronald Reagan."

Reagan is expected to report that the economic program he launched in 1981 has spurred strong growth but that the government must now turn its attention to the record-high deficits that came with his recovery plan.

The budget he sent to Congress on Monday would increase spending by $14.6 billion to $973.7 billion in fiscal 1986 with substantial cuts in domestic programs and continued increases in military spending.

The budget projects a fiscal 1986 deficit of $180 billion, down from this year's estimated $222.2 billion in red ink.

White House Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan, asked Tuesday how specific Reagan would be about his plan to overhaul the income tax system, said: "He'll back it." But Regan added the president would not go into great detail about the tax simplification proposal.

Other White House sources, discussing the speech on condition they not be identified by name, said Reagan would reiterate his commitment to a modified "flat tax" system as the best means of simplifying the present federal income tax.

Stockman again steps out of administration's fold

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

An Analysis

WASHINGTON — Open the woodshed. David Stockman may be coming back.

Stockman, the administration's bad boy, was before the Senate Budget Committee Tuesday to defend the 1986 budget he masterminded for President Reagan.

Instead, he veered from the party line, depicted American farmers as greedy and conceded that the Pentagon probably didn't need all of the $314 billion it wants and President Reagan thinks it should get.

Along the way he said some harsh things about the priorities military men assign to their own retirement perks.

"I haven't been able to get anything done on military retirement downtown; it's a scandal, it's an outrage," the budget director said. He didn't need to add that the White House, where his No. 1 client lives, is downtown.

"The institutional forces in the military are more concerned about protecting their retirement benefits than they are about protecting the security of the American people," Stockman said. "When push comes to shove they'll give up on security before they'll give up on retirement."

Stockman conceded that "I'll probably be in hot water for saying it, but I'm going to say it because it's about time it was said."

If confession is good for the soul, Stockman's must be in fine fettle.

It's been three years since he last shook up the town. While preaching supply side economics to Congress, he confessed to the tape recorder of reporter William Greider that he had his doubts.

Greider, then an assistant managing editor for the Washington Post, did a story for Atlantic Monthly. Before the magazine had even reached the newsstands, Washington was reading photocopies and buzzing.

Man's club a 'hit;' Even truckers stop

By BOB SPRINGER
Associated Press Writer

AP Laserphoto

Another truck makes an opening in the wall of 924 Club in Banner, Ill.

BANNER, Ill. — When truckers lose their brakes and have nowhere else to go, they drop in on Cotton Upchurch.

"It's ruining my business. You know, people are leery of coming here after one of these accidents," Upchurch said Tuesday, one day after a tractor trailer laden with scrap iron plowed into the kitchen of his 924 Club.

Upchurch's bar and restaurant, which sits at the foot of a steep hill where two highways merge, has been hit three times in the past 14 months by careening trucks.

One year and three days ago, a pickup truck hauling a trailer full of hogs rammed the kitchen. Two months before that, on Dec. 8, 1983, a lumber truck lumbered down the Illinois Route 9 hill, through the U.S. Route 24 intersection and into the deep-fat fryers.

"I'm afraid to go into the kitchen myself to cook anymore," said Upchurch, 61, who has owned the property for 11 years and hopes to hang on until he's ready to retire in four years.

"I've had nine or 10 trucks through here in 10 years," he said. Four hit the building, the others stopped or overturned in the parking lot.

So far, no one has been hurt. Upchurch has been lucky, too, because each of the errant trucks was insured and paid for repairs to his club.

He blames his problem on poor highway design. "The trucks have no place to go when they come down the hill and lose their brakes."

Upchurch has written state and local highway officials about the problem. "They keep telling me they're going to do something, but they haven't done anything."

One solution he won't accept is moving.

"This place was here before the intersection was there," he said. "I'm going to stay here till they either kill me or I retire."

But he said he is losing money every time the club closes for repairs, which have taken from a week to more than a month, and from lost business.

"After about a year, a lot of people forget and start coming back," he said. "Then I get another truck."

Midland oilmen donating natural gas

From Staff and Wire Reports

SAN ANTONIO — Two Midland oilmen — Cyril Wagner Jr. and Jack E. Brown — say they will donate about $10 million in natural gas over the next four years to provide rate relief for needy utility customers in San Antonio.

The gift was announced Tuesday. It is the largest ever for the utility's 3-year-old Project WARM — Winter Assistance Relief Mobilization — which helps pay the winter gas and electric bills of customers deemed needy by City Hall.

City Public Service officials said the gift would increase by 10 times the pool of money that can be used to supply the rate relief.

The philanthropists, who comprise Wagner & Brown Partnership, were described by CPS Trustees Chairman Glenn Biggs as "a pair of low-key personalities who have earned high respect within the industry."

Under terms of their gift, Wagner and Brown will sell up to 3 billion cubic feet of gas through 1989 to CPS.

But instead of making payments to the gas producers, CPS will deposit the money into its Project WARM account, the San Antonio Light reported.

CPS General Manager J.K. Spruce said the value of the gift will vary depending on the amount of gas produced by certain Wagner & Brown wells in the next five years. But he estimated it will be at least $6 million.

Project WARM has helped 6,000 needy families with about $150,000 a year since 1982, Spruce said.

"Now the project will receive about $2 million a year," he told The Light.

"There is no way I can adequately express our appreciation for this contribution," said City Councilman Ed Harrington. "It is hard for us to conceive the critical nature of this need."

Farmers included in substitute water bill

From Staff Reports

AUSTIN — Additional funding for agricultural water programs and other acquisition programs are included in a new water bill which Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, plans to substitute for a bill he and other legislators filed earlier.

The legislation would authorize up to $1.2 billion in new state bonds.

The substitute measure, to be offered today by Montford at a meeting of the Senate Natural Resources Committee, calls for a two-year pilot program establishing low-interest loans for agricultural water conservation systems among other agricultural provisions.

If the pilot program is successful, the Legislature could authorize $200 million in agricultural water conservation bonds, under Montford's measure.

Initially, the Texas Water Development Board would be authorized to use up to $5 million of current bond proceeds for the program.

"If the (pilot) program doesn't pan out, then we'll scrub it," said Montford, adding the House version of the water plan isn't very sympathetic to agricultural needs.

Sen. Bill Sims, D-San Angelo, said he would have to see Montford's bill when the committee meets at 2 p.m. today before judging it. However, he said, "It sounds better than the one last time (two years ago). It's a loan rather than a grant. It's a step forward." Sims represents Midland in his 25th district.

Montford said Tuesday he hasn't talked with Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, who heads up the House Natural Resources Committee, about the substitute measure. "He's been pretty busy and so have I," Montford said. "I'll try to resolve it with him."

Water may make Mars colony possible

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — A Texas A&M University scientist says the abundance of water on Mars makes the prospect of establishing a colony on the planet more than science fiction.

The Mariner and Viking spacecrafts have provided detailed information on Mars and show it to be much more hospitable than the moon, said Duwayne Anderson, associate provost for research at A&M and a longtime researcher for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

"Water can be used to supply fuel needs of a colony because it can be decomposed with electricity made from solar energy and converted into hydrogen and oxygen. In this way sunlight can be used to manufacture a clean burning, pollutant-free fuel," Anderson said Tuesday.

Mars' soil is volcanic like some of the most fertile soil on Earth. Anderson said an atmosphere and shelter for agriculture could be created with construction of a dome or other suitable structure.

In addition, the gravity on Mars is greater than that of the moon, meaning life could be easier and more like that on Earth.

Besides satellite photographs, scientists have gained knowledge about Mars by comparing its icy conditions with those of Antarctica, he said.

Anderson is familiar with Earth's southernmost continent from his days as chief scientist with the National Science Foundation.

New college readies for first semester

By JAN TAYLOR

MOUNT PLEASANT, Texas (AP) — The Northeast Texas Community College has celebrated its first birthday, and college officials are working to get ready for the first day of classes this fall.

The college district was created by voters in Camp, Morris and Titus counties Jan. 21, 1984, by an overwhelming majority.

Since then, college trustees and officials have been working to get the facility built, hire personnel and provide an organizational structure for the college.

Dr. Wayland K. DeWitt, college president, said the foundations have been poured for the three vocational education buildings, the math and science building, the social science and humanities building and the administration building.

In October, BFW Construction Inc. of Temple, Texas, was awarded an $8.4 million contract to build the college. Construction is expected to be completed by late July.

"They have started erecting steel in the vocation buildings," DeWitt said. "They've poured a little out of sequence because during our cost-cutting procedures, we made some changes in th student union building."

Those changes required adjustments in the shop drawings, he said. So, to stay on schedule, steel erection began a little earlier than expected on the other buildings.

Work also has begun on the parking area, DeWitt said.

In the personnel area, most of the administrative personnel have been hired, the president said.

A developmental education director has yet to be hired. There also is the possibility of a position to include the Northeast Texas Community College Foundation and public information, he said.

The foundation was formed in December to accept gifts and bequests on behalf of the college, DeWitt said.

The first gift was from Thelma Harling, who presented the college with a $5,000 check to establish the Billy Means Merit Scholarship Award. Besides that, she provided for $50,000 of her estate to be added to this fund, DeWitt said.

Interest from the foundation funds will be used to provide scholarship money for students, he said.

Applications for staff members also are being received, he said, adding that, "During the next few months, we'll be involved in the selection of staff."

Also during the next few months, citizens' advisory committees will continue meeting with college officials. Dr. Jack Foreman, director of occupational education for the college, said a number of such meetings already have been held.

"Basically, we're trying to meet with the advisory committee for each area," Foreman said.

For example, the first citizens' advisory committee meeting was on the emergency medical field. A number of medical people, including nurses and administrators, attended.

Not all the people on the committees are from the district, said Mike McCallum, associate director of vocational education.

The steering committee for the advisory committees insisted experts be brought in, he said.

As a result, Foreman said, one Plano resident attended a meeting last week, and two others from Plano will be attending a meeting this week.

In the meantime, DeWitt and Michael Bruner, vice president of fiscal affairs, have been to Austin and found out what funding the legislators are planning for state education systems this year.

"We're continuing to plan with our original goals in mind, recognizing the 35 percent budget reduction we have received from the state Legislature," DeWitt said.

He said he hopes some adjustments will be made as the legislative period goes on.

"We're feeling very positive about our progress," DeWitt said. "Our goal will continue to be to provide the best possible program for the budget we end up with."

Wanted: Willing walrus watchers

NOME, Alaska (AP) — The pay is good, the hours flexible, but the job may not be for everyone. "Walrus watchers needed," reads a want ad in the Bering Straits Native Corporation's latest monthly newsletter.

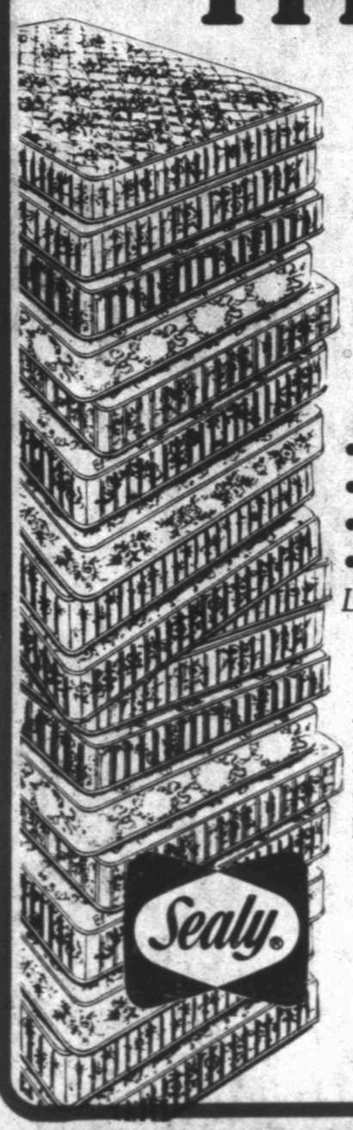

"Are you a subsistence hunter in need of cash?" asks the notice. "Do you live in Wales, Shishmaref or Diomede and speak Eskimo? Do you want to learn more about the marine mammals that you harvest?

"If you answer yes to all the above questions, then the Eskimo Walrus Commission might have a job for you."

Walrus watchers, officially called "field monitors," are paid $10 an hour to keep track of the village's kill of marine mammals, explained Doreen Buffas, secretary for the walrus commission.

They help the commission deal with harvest quotas that state and federal wildlife officials set for Eskimo subsistence hunting, she said. The hours are "very flexible," but she said the number of positions is limited — one for each of a handful of coastal villages in western Alaska.

Inmate may not be executed because witness was hypnotized

Chester Wicker

GALVESTON (AP) — A Texas prison inmate should be spared from execution Monday because "hypnotically enhanced testimony" was used to convict him of abducting a woman and burying her alive on a Galveston beach, his attorney argued.

Chester Lee Wicker, 36, was sentenced to die for the April 4, 1980, slaying of Suzanne Knuth, 23, a student and librarian at Lamar University.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals on Monday voted 7-2 against granting a stay. Attorney Charlotte Harris of Houston took the case to U.S. District Judge Hugh Gibson of Galveston on Tuesday.

Gibson scheduled a hearing for 9 a.m. today.

Wicker's appeal challenges the legality of information from an eyewitness whose recollections changed while hypnotized, according to Ms. Harris. The woman had seen Mrs. Knuth abducted.

"Before the hypnosis she gave a description of what she saw, including describing the victim as an overweight woman and a few other inaccuracies," Ms. Harris said.

Asked about Wicker's chances of being executed Monday, she said, "In trying to believe in our system of justice, I'd like to say (his chances are) slim."

The Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles has scheduled a Friday hearing on Wicker's request for a postponement.

The U.S. Supreme Court in October refused to review the case, which initially was affirmed by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals last February.

Wicker's appeals have challenged the indictment, arrest and admission of his confession as evidence.

The indictment charged Wicker with killing Mrs. Knuth "by choking with his hands and by burying the said Suzanne Knuth alive."

Wicker, a ninth-grade dropout who served in the U.S. Marines from 1965 to 1967, previously had been sent to prison twice on sexual assault charges.

Wicker told police he pulled Mrs. Knuth into his car on a Beaumont street and took her to Bolivar Peninsula, where he attempted to rape her. He then dug a hole in the beach and buried her.

Autopsy results indicated the woman was alive when she was buried.

In an interview with a psychiatrist, Wicker said he had been involved with drugs for several years and that he began collecting pornography at age 13.

"The patient stated that he looked at these magazines almost every day and that this occupied a great deal of his time and that he tended to spend a lot of time daydreaming and fantasizing about sexual activity," psychiatrist Edward Gripon reported to the court.

Wicker told police that Mrs. Knuth tried to jump out of his car. They struggled and the victim wound up on the ground. Wicker said he could not determine if she was dead.

Police recover abandoned van carrying body

HOUSTON (AP) — Police say they have recovered the stolen van that was carrying the body of a San Augustine County official back to East Texas for burial.

The abandoned van, with a body in the back, was found Tuesday night near downtown Houston, said Lt. Ron Cobb of the Houston Police Department.

"They (the thieves) apparently didn't realize there was a body in the back when they took it. When they did, they ditched it," Cobb said.

But police asked the Harris County medical examiner's office to make sure the body was that of James Doherty, county attorney of San Augustine County since 1951, Cobb said.

Doherty, 59, died Monday at Methodist Hospital, where he had undergone a triple bypass operation.

His widow, Jamie Doherty, said she was still trying to cope with her husband's death when she was told of the bizarre theft.

Doherty's family hired a transport company to take the body back to San Augustine, about 135 miles northeast of Houston.

But the unmarked 1985 Chevy Suburban was stolen in Houston when the driver stopped to make a telephone call, Cobb said. The driver, Michael Cortez, said he left the keys in the van.

"It happened so fast. I didn't see anybody," Cortez said.

The Odessa Diagnostic Imaging Center wishes to announce that one of the latest methods in diagnostic testing —

MAGNETIC RESONANCE IMAGING

— will soon be available to the people of West Texas and New Mexico.

- Magnetic Resonance Imaging (MRI) is a new device which allows physicians to examine the human body without radiation.
- MRI can detail body functions and structures and detect abnormalities at early stages. It adds new dimensions to medical diagnoses in conditions such as multiple sclerosis, brain and spinal cord problems and abnormalities of various parts of the body not detectable by any other method currently used.

Odessa Diagnostic Imaging Center — first in West Texas and New Mexico to offer the MRI — provides the latest in diagnostic equipment:

- C.T. Scan

WEATHER SUMMARY

National Weather Service NOAA U.S. Dept. of Commerce

AP Laserphoto Map

The National Weather Service forecasts snow Thursday for the Great Lakes and Midwest; rain for Georgia and South Carolina; and cold temperatures for interior regions.

Warmer temperatures expected in Basin area

From Staff and Wire Reports

Warmer temperatures will be greeted by Midlanders Thursday as the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport forecasts fair skies and lows in the mid-20s tonight, becoming sunny with highs in the upper 50s in the afternoon. Variable winds at five to 10 mph will become southerly at less than 15 mph Thursday.

Tuesday's high of 55 was 23 degrees below the record high of 78 set in 1951. This morning's low of 26 was 15 degrees above the record of 11 set in 1982.

NATION

A storm dumped snow from the Midwest to New England today while rain spread across the South and sub-zero temperatures gripped much of the North.

Snow was falling from Minnesota across the Great Lakes, upper Ohio Valley and much of the northeast. Heavy snow blanketed eastern portions of Pennsylvania and New York.

At 1 a.m. EST, 4 inches had fallen in New York City and 3 inches at Allentown and Harrisburg, Pa.

A winter storm warning was in effect for much of southeast New York and northern New Jersey, with predictions of up to 8 inches of snow.

Travelers' advisories for snow were posted for Vermont and much of eastern New York and warnings of snow and freezing rain were issued from New York City across to West Virginia.

Rain, freezing rain and sleet hammered the mid-Atlantic coastal region and rain was widespread across the Carolinas, Georgia and the central Gulf Coast region.

Rain spread along the northern Pacific Coast and snow was falling over the northern Rockies.

Mengele's 'mock trial' continues

By ARTHUR MAX
Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM — The man who caught Nazi war criminal Adolf Eichmann says Israel considered a commando raid to capture Josef Mengele, the Auschwitz "Angel of Death," after he eluded Israeli agents in a posh Buenos Aires suburb.

Isser Harel, a former Israeli intelligence chief, made the revelation in Jerusalem, where a mock trial is being held this week by Jews who survived Mengele's experimentation on twins and dwarfs at Auschwitz concentration camp in his quest for a race of genetically superior Germans.

Harel said he doubted Mengele could be extradited and suggested he should be assassinated if found.

Harel also disclosed Tuesday that he ordered Israel's Mossad intelligence agency to break up neo-Nazi movements in Europe in the early 1960s.

Mengele, believed to be living in Paraguay, is the Nazi most wanted by those seeking to capture and try war criminals. He is accused of sending 400,000 people to gas chambers and picking others — mainly twins and dwarfs — for his crude genetic experiments.

"If it is impossible to bring him to trial, I would find another solution, a final solution for Mengele," he said.

Harel, 70, retired in 1963 after 15 years as Mossad's director.

Eichmann, who directed the Nazi plan to exterminate European Jews, was kidnapped from Argentina and hanged in Jerusalem in 1963.

Harel said that during the Eichmann operation he confirmed a report that Mengele was living in Buenos Aires. He said that while Eichmann was held for 10 days in an Argentinian safe house, Harel's agents planned the capture of Mengele, only to discover shortly before moving in to take him that the fugitive had left the address a few weeks earlier.

Three times in the next two years agents picked up Mengele's trail, but the constant watch of armed bodyguards prevented any move to seize him, said Harel.

He said Israel abandoned considerations to capture Mengele in a raid because the government feared an international uproar might undermine the impact of the Eichmann trial.

Harel said Israel traced other Nazi criminals who could not be brought for trial, "and we dealt with them in a different way."

He said one was Albert Zukors, who was accused of killing Jews in Latvia and who was assassinated in 1966. Harel refused to give details or say how many other war criminals were found.

Mossad launched an intimidation campaign against neo-Nazis in the 1960s after swastikas began appearing at Jewish sites worldwide, with the first desecration coming on Christmas Day 1959 in West Germany, Harel said.

Texas survivor may testify during observance

EL PASO (AP) — A Texan who still has nightmares about the horror he suffered at the hands of Nazi Dr. Josef Mengele may testify today in Israel at a week-long congress of Holocaust survivors.

Frank Klein of El Paso told the El Paso Times Tuesday night he may be called to testify today at a hearing where authorities hope to bring more evidence against Mengele, who is thought to be hiding in South America, in an attempt to bring the former concentration camp doctor to justice.

Klein and his twin brother, Otto, were among about 100 sets of twins who survived Mengele's experiments at Auschwitz.

In a telephone interview Tuesday from Jerusalem, Frank Klein told the Times he and Otto may be called to testify today at the final day of a hearing, where twins are recounting Mengele's experiments on them.

"I always thought it was important to tell the world about what happened to us, and I wanted to see the other people," Klein told the Dallas Morning News in an earlier interview.

"I said if there's going to be a get-together I'm going to be there," he added. Klein, who is awaiting a kidney transplant, packed up the dialysis machine he uses four times a day, hired a nurse to accompany him and went to Jerusalem.

Of his twin brother, whom he sees once a year, he said, "We're very close. I have this recurring dream of my brother being taken from me, and I wake in a sweat."

Otto lives in Geneva, Switzerland.

The brothers were 12 years old when they entered Auschwitz. Klein said he remembers Mengele as a tall, polite man. But he can't forget the experiments the doctor performed, and he hopes the hearings will help bring Mengele to justice.

"I hope people will realize what he did to children," Frank Klein said. "The medical exams, the blood tests, the test on your eyes, ears, nose...everything."

The Klein twins and their sister were freed Jan. 27, 1945. Their parents died in the Holocaust.

Klein described the hearing as traumatic and emotional for almost everyone involved.

And he still does not know all the effects the experiments had on him. Klein said he has been on the kidney dialysis for more than a year. Nightmares and depression caused him to have a nervous breakdown 25 years ago.

SPEECH

It was a year ago, in his State of the Union address, that Reagan called for "a plan for action to simplify the entire tax code so all taxpayers, big and small, are treated more fairly."

After nearly a year of study, Regan, who was then secretary of the treasury, produced a proposal for eliminating most brackets in the progressive tax system, and most deductions as well, in an attempt to design a tax structure in which all but the poorest wage earners would bear a fair share of the burden.

Reagan has said he likes the Regan plan but has indicated it may undergo some changes before he formally submits it to Congress. That has been interpreted in some quarters as a reluctance on Reagan's part to accept the overhaul scheme, which could substantially increases taxes on the wealthy.

The plan faces some opposition from within the administration and from some of Reagan's staunchest backers, who argue it would hit investors hardest and discourage capital growth.

The plan has come under some fire, particularly from representatives of charitable organizations who maintain it would discourage people from contributing to charities by eliminating deductions for small contributions and lowering tax rates in general, thus eliminating part of the incentive for major givers in the highest tax brackets.

But one source who has seen Reagan's speech said the president would make "a strong commitment to tax simplification" and the flat-tax concept in an attempt to put to rest suggestions that he doesn't really support the Regan plan.

An underlying theme of the message, according to unidentified officials quoted by The New York Times, will be an effort by the president to reach "all Americans," including members of minority groups, some of whom have attacked the administration's social welfare policies and budget cuts.

Reagan is expected to emphasize his endorsement of an array of programs helping minority groups.

Office of Management and Budget Director David Stockman pauses during his appearance Tuesday before the Senate Budget Committee.

AIDE

Republicans were aghast, Democrats were delighted, and Ronald Reagan was not amused. He called Stockman in for a little chat over lunch.

Using language usually reserved for arms violations by the Soviets, the White House explained that "the president expressed his grave concern and disappointment about the issues raised by the article." Stockman offered to resign, but the president declined the gesture.

"My visit to the Oval Office for lunch with the president was more in the nature of a visit to the woodshed after supper," said Stockman, once a Michigan farm boy. In other words, he got a spanking.

He said he had worried "too publicly" about the messed up economy and the overgrown budget and "I am grateful to the president for this second chance."

That was a characteristic thing for a young man who prepared for the pulpit before he got into politics.

Until Ronald Reagan came along, Stockman was barely known outside the Michigan district he represented in Congress for two terms. Reagan, on advice of young Republicans in Congress, chose him as director of the Office of Management and Budget.

He became the high priest of "supply side economics," with its single-minded preoccupation of cutting taxes, cutting the size of government, cutting away the underbrush so free economics could flower.

After Greider published the article, Stockman became the target of attacks. "He damaged himself; he damaged the president's program," said Howard Baker, then the Senate majority leader.

"What disturbs me is that ... he is asked to stay on and represent the administration," said Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio.

That was in Ronald Reagan's first term. But now it's the second and a spanking might not be enough.

There have been reports that Stockman wants out. Getting into a war with the Pentagon might be one way of doing it.

DONATE

Brown, who was reared in San Antonio and founded the partnership in 1962, said "there are two reasons for doing this."

"One is the City Council and the other is CPS. We know some of your problems here, and we knew that these people knew how to cut through the red tape.

"We knew we could talk to them, and that they could get it done," he said.

Brown also said the gift was made to San Antonio instead of Midland because it was "needed more here than in the Midland area."

A family of four with a monthly income of less than $850 can qualify for assistance by applying through the city's Department of Human Resources and Services. The average monthly assistance payment toward utility bills that average between $100 to $150 a month is $35, said John Gonzalez, Project WARM coordinator.

WATER

Craddick's House committee is expected to approve an amended version of the original bill today. If the House and Senate versions differ, a conference committee will have to work out a compromise.

The water plan currently calls for $600 million in state bonds for reservoir construction and sewage treatment plants, and the House Natural Resources Committee this week amended the bill to include an additional $200 million in bonds for flood control projects for coastal regions.

Montford's substitute also adds $200 million in bonds for "water acquisition projects," such as regional water and wastewater treatment systems, as well as reservoir construction.

An analysis supplied by Montford's office says the bonds will give the Texas Water Development Board ability to encourage regional solutions to water problems.

Because state participation is expanded, the substitute measure deletes a $250 million commitment to the bond insurance program, which Montford said is "no more advantageous than just a straight bond program."

Other agricultural provisions of the substitute set up a cost-sharing program for agricultural water conservation systems; a program of grants to water districts for technical assistance, training and equipment purchases to aid on-farm conservation; and a cost-sharing program for soil and water conservation land improvement measures such as brush control.

Under the cost-sharing program for conservation systems, the Texas Department of Agriculture would be authorized to offer rebates of up to 10 percent or $4,000 for purchases of high-efficiency equipment, including drip systems, surge valves and soil moisture meters.

If Montford's substitute is approved by the Legislature, voters would consider the funding provisions this November, instead of November 1986 as outlined in the original water bill.

'Amadeus,' 'Passage' leading nominees

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — "Amadeus," the drama of Mozart's tormented final years, and "A Passage to India," the saga of natives vs. their British rulers in 1920s India, today scored a front-running 11 nominations apiece for the 57th Academy Awards.

"The Killing Fields," the story of an American correspondent and his native assistant in war-torn Cambodia, and "Places in the Heart," a young widow's struggle to keep her farm and family in Depression Texas, followed in the Oscar nominations with seven each.

All four films were nominated for best picture of 1984, along with "A Soldier's Story," a murder mystery among black soldiers at a World War II Army camp.

"Amadeus" contributed two best-actor nominations for its players — F. Murray Abraham as Mozart's villainous rival, Salieri, and Tom Hulce as the impish Mozart.

Others nominated were Albert Finney, the burned-out consul of "Under the Volcano," Sam Waterston, the New York Times reporter of "The Killing Fields" and Jeff Bridges, the gentle space visitor of "Starman."

Three actresses, all previous Oscar winners, won nominations for their portrayals of beleaguered farm women: Sally Field, "Places in the Heart"; Jessica Lange, "Country"; and Sissy Spacek, "The River."

Also nominated were Judy Davis, the English traveler of "A Passage to India," and Vanessa Redgrave, who played Olive Chancellor in "The Bostonians."

Ralph Richardson received a posthumous nomination for his supporting role as the eccentric lord of the manor in "Greystoke: The Legend of Tarzan, Lord of the Apes."

Dog which bit woman at shelter

From Staff Reports

The owner of a dog who bit a pregnant woman outside a grocery store Friday evening, turned in the dog to Midland Animal Control Tuesday afternoon.

"The victim made a positive identification," said Rice Freeman-Zachery, information officer for the organization. "The dog is under quarantine for 10 days."

The dog's owner will be charged three dollars a day for the length of the dog's stay, said Ms. Freeman-Zachary.

The attack occurred Friday outside the M Systems grocery store near Scharbauer and A streets at around 7:30 p.m. The victim was bit on the right leg by the dog, described as "a mixture of beagle and foxhound." The dog's owner was using a pay phone at the time and did not have the dog on leash, according to reports.

Concern over recent rabies cases in the area led to fears that the pregnant victim could have been bit by a rabid dog.

"The dog had tags and its shots, though," said Ms. Freeman-Zachery.

City secretary group's president

From Staff Reports

Midland's city secretary, Bill Clanton, has been named president of the City Clerks and Secretaries Association of West Texas.

The announcement was made today at the Election Law Seminar in Odessa. Clanton previously had served as vice president.

The City Clerks and Secretaries Association of West Texas, which parallels Texas Municipal League Region 4, covers 25 counties in West Texas, bounded by the cities of Andrews, Colorado City, Presidio and El Paso.

Tena Walker, Odessa city secretary, was elected secretary-treasurer.

Sanctuary movement workers' trial moved

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — The trial of two sanctuary movement workers charged with transporting illegal aliens has been moved to Houston because of pretrial publicity.

U.S. District Judge Filemon Vela, who denied defense motions to dismiss charges against Jack Elder and Stacey Lynn Merkt, ruled Tuesday that news coverage surrounding the case was too great to select an impartial jury here, said defense counsel Lisa Brodyaga.

Jury selection was scheduled for Feb. 18. Vela, who twice denied motions to remove himself from the case, will preside.

Elder and Ms. Merkt are accused of conspiring to smuggle and smuggling and transporting two Salvadorans from the Rio Grande to a bus station in McAllen last November.

Elder is the director of Casa Oscar Romero, a shelter for Central Americans in San Benito. Ms. Merkt is a volunteer at the Catholic Church-sponsored shelter.

On Tuesday, about 100 prospective jurors were summoned for the case.

The judge asked members of the panel to raise their hands if they had any knowledge of the case and if they had any reaction.

About half of them raised their hands. Later, they were asked to step out of the courtroom as attorneys began to question the other jurors individually.

Ms. Brodyaga said that in questioning about five jurors individually it was apparent most had an opinion about the case and thus Vela granted the motion.

The trial is the second on similar charges against the pair.

Elder was acquitted last month in Corpus Christi on charges of transporting three Salvadorans from the Casa Oscar Romero shelter to a bus station in Harlingen last March.

Ms. Merkt, a volunteer at the Roman Catholic Church-sponsored shelter, is on two years' probation on a similar conviction last May in Vela's court.

Vela's gag order, forbidding parties involved to discuss the case in public, still is in effect so attorneys could not talk about their reactions.

But Elder's wife, Diane, said the defense team was happy with the venue change.

"Jack and Stacey stand a real good shot at an impartial jury," she said.

Defense attorney Steve Cooper argued Monday, the second day of pretrial hearings, that most people in the Valley knew about the sanctuary movement and the previous trials and that they had made up their minds one way or another.

Cooper called to the stand four witnesses on that motion, including the president of an anti-sanctuary movement group.

Mike Rodriguez said his group, Concerned Citizens for Church and Country, was not against the pair personally, but said they ought to be punished, if indeed they broke the law. About 15 members of the group picketed outside the courthouse on Monday, carrying American flags and placards, some of which read "Deport Aliens," "Support Border Patrol."

Pastor: Sanctuary movement tests nation's character

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — The nation's will and character will be tested by the Central American refugee sanctuary movement and the government crackdown against it, says the Rev. John M. Fife, one of its leaders.

Fife said the movement "has raised profound questions about this nation. What kind of people are we? What kind of traditions do we want to maintain? What kind of nation is this?"

Addressing the Democrats of Greater Tucson on Monday, Fife said issues surrounding the sanctuary movement focus on whether it is political or religious in nature and whether it is legal or illegal.

Fife — pastor of Southside United Presbyterian Church — and 15 others involved in the movement in Arizona and Mexico were indicted last month on alien-smuggling charges and are to stand trial April 2 in Phoenix.

Its members contend that the movement is not violating United States or international law in aiding people it says are fleeing political oppression and violence. The government contends that undocumented aliens coming into this country from Central America are doing so for economic reasons.

Fife accused the U.S. government of violating international law, and said its actions in cracking down on the movement have thrown the sanctuary issue into the political arena.

The movement, Fife added, is asking political and civic groups to "look at the moral question." He said the sanctuary movement would ask the Pima County Board of Supervisors and the Tucson City Council to adopt resolutions supporting the church-sponsored movement.

Couple who 'loves kids' adopts jawless boy

CHICAGO (AP) — Three-year-old Joey, who was born without a lower jaw and still breathes and eats through tubes, will leave the hospital Friday for the first time in his life.

Joey, one of hundreds of hard-to-place children around the country, finally has a home, thanks to Charlene Williams and her husband.

"I love kids," says Mrs. Williams, the 40-year-old mother of six who adopted Joey. "We play with all kids. My husband started playing with Joey, and that's how the relationship started."

Mrs. Williams said she and her husband will "be his moral support, be there for him, be there just to love him."

"There aren't that many resources out there for a kid like Joey," said Mary Martone, the hospital social worker who has handled Joey's case. "Families willing to take on someone like him are few and far between."

In Illinois, about 200 such children are being cared for in foster homes and another 110 in residential centers, said Gary T. Morgan, administrator of the adoption program of the Department of Children and Family Services. The agency hopes to place 65 such youngsters with adoptive parents in the next two years.

The CAP Book, published by the Council of Adoptive Parents in Rochester, N.Y., lists about 800 such hard-to-place children around the country.

Joey was born without a lower jaw; his windpipe and gullet were sealed off.

Children with such defects rarely survive, said Dr. Paula K. Jaudes, an assistant pediatrics professor at the University of Chicago who was in charge of Joey's care. Doctors saved him at birth by making an air opening in his throat.

Joey, who will turn 4 in April, has lived at La Rabida Children's Hospital and Research Center since he was a few days old. Since birth, he has had to breathe and eat through tubes.

The child has had at least six operations, including two attempts to construct a lower jaw and chin — first out of plastic, then out of bone taken from the boy's skull. Both attempts failed and years may pass before technology makes the operation possible, Ms. Jaudes said.

Officer: General put ceiling on troop estimates

NEW YORK (AP) — An active-duty Army officer said he found his testimony "very difficult" to give but accused retired Gen. William C. Westmoreland of putting a ceiling on Vietnamese troop estimates that understated enemy strength by 200,000 people.

As a result, the 1967 analysis of enemy forces given to President Lyndon B. Johnson, senior U.S. decision-markers and the American public was "corrupt," Col. Donald W. Blascak said Tuesday.

Westmoreland says he was libeled by a 1982 CBS documentary, "The Uncounted Enemy: A Vietnam Deception," and is suing the network for $120 million. The show charged that in 1967 Westmoreland concealed information showing that communist forces during the Vietnam War were much larger than had been believed.

Westmoreland, 70, who commanded American forces in Vietnam from 1964 to 1968, is now retired. He contends no information was suppressed and CBS distorted the story of an honest disagreement among intelligence officers to make it appear that he deliberately misled his superiors.

Blascak, now a senior intelligence officer for V Corps in Frankfurt, West Germany, served as an intelligence officer with the Military Assistance Command Vietnam (MACV) and later with the CIA in Vietnam during the 1960s.

Hesitating at times and saying he found his testimony "very difficult" to give, Blascak said that in 1967 he told former CIA intelligence specialist Samuel Adams — a defendant with CBS at the trial — that "there had to have been a ceiling placed on the numbers" by "the very highest level" of authority in Saigon.

Blascak defended estimates by Adams, who served as a paid CBS adviser for the documentary.

"I came to a very quick judgment that Sam's analysis of enemy strength was on (target), as were analyses with the (CIA)," said Blascak.

Blascak also detailed a dispute over the enemy's strength that occurred in August 1967. He described a meeting at CIA headquarters in Langley, Va., that was attended by various military and intelligence agencies to prepare "our best estimate" of enemy troop strength.

The final figure was to go into a Special National Intelligence Estimate to be distributed to the president, defense secretary and other U.S. leaders.

Blascak said intelligence officials, who favored counting self-defense or militia forces for a total near 500,000, and military leaders, whose 300,000 estimate did not include the self-defense forces, could not reach an agreement.

Finally, the intelligence people gave in, he said.

Raid nets 'hit list,' cache of weapons

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — A Ku Klux Klan leader and two other men were arrested and deputies seized a "hit list of officials" and a cache of paramilitary weapons, authorities said.

The list was found during the Monday night raid on the suburban house, which was joined by the FBI and drug agents, Jefferson County Sheriff Mel Bailey said Tuesday. He declined to reveal the names on it.

The three men arrested were identified by police as Klansman William D. Riccio, 28; Gerald D. Smith, 21; and Kevin C. Bryan, 18. They were charged with violating narcotics laws.

Law enforcement agencies also were "pursuing possible additional charges," said FBI spokesman Tom Moore.

Documents taken from the house included one that indicated Riccio was a member of Aryan Nations, a white supremacist group under investigation in connection with armored car robberies and terrorist activities in the West, said FBI agent Cecil Moses.

He said another document identified Riccio as state organizer for the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan.

The FBI declined comment on the purported "hit list."

Moore said officers seized shotguns, rifles, semi-automatic and automatic weapons and a sizeable cache of ammunition, plus bullet-proof vests, gas masks and other paramilitary items.

He said some members of the Aryan Nations "are being investigated as a result of armed robberies of Brink's armored cars and other violent acts."

CBO: Economic recovery to continue

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite record deficits, congressional economists today predicted continued economic recovery for the next two years, with unemployment falling below 7 percent and inflation remaining under 5 percent.

"Budget deficits, even of the size recently experienced and projected for the next several years, are unlikely to have a sudden destructive impact on the economy," the Congressional Budget Office said in its annual economic report to the House and Senate.

However, the report cautioned that if large deficits persist without congressional action, "runaway debt" would eventually stifle the economy.

The end result could be "stagnating or perhaps even declining standards of living, deteriorating public services, or reduced defense capabilities," the report said.

"Even though the damage may be initially difficult to detect, it would become progressively more difficult to undo," it added.

Release of the report by the non-partisan agency came as the Senate Budget Committee prepared for its second day of hearings on President Reagan's record $974 billon budget.

Rudolph Penner, the budget office director, was scheduled to testify both on the report and on the president's budget.

In the absence of deficit-cutting action, the federal deficit — now hovering at just over $200 billion — will rise to $296 billion by 1990, the report said.

Reagan's budget, which recommends $39 billion in domestic spending cuts, would reduce the deficit to $180 billion by 1986 and — administration officials claim — decline further each year thereafter.

The budget office forecasts "generally favorable economic performance through 1985-1986."

It predicted that the unemployment rate would drop from its 7.2 percent level of last December to an average of 7.1 percent through 1985 and to 6.9 percent in 1986.

Inflation was forecast at 4.2 percent this year, up from 3.5 percent last year.

Banks attack Reagan farm credit program

WASHINGTON (AP) — With the battle heating up over a farm credit crunch, the Reagan administration is rolling out a remodeled loan guarantee program it insists will bring relief and allow spring planting to proceed.

But farm-state lawmakers and representatives of agricultural banks labeled the rescue package too small and too restrictive even before today's formal announcement.

"I cannot embrace a program that offers too little assistance and too little hope, a plan that is inadequate to meet the needs of the farm economy," said Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan.

While members of Congress were pressing at least a dozen bills to flesh out the administration plan, President Reagan's budget director, David Stockman, was accusing agricultural interests of political "blackmail" in trying to secure loan guarantees for farmers.

"For the life of me, I cannot figure out why the taxpayers of this country have the responsibility to go in and refinance bad debt that was willingly incurred by consenting adults" on the chance they might profit from rising farmland prices, Stockman said Tuesday while defending administration budget cuts before the Senate Budget Committee.

"The one group that's had the greatest budget excess in the past five years — $60 billion in farm subsidies — starts the log rolling by demanding more. It's a little discouraging," he said.

But in response to a question from Sen. Bob Kasten, R-Wis., about credit relief for farmers, Stockman said some help would be offered.

"We are probably going to have to do something because there's a drumbeat, the political demands are so great, because basically we have been threatened with a blackmail situation," Stockman said.

He said he hoped that in response, the administration will "get some help in biting the bullet" on cutting farm price supports, mentioning those for dairy products and wheat in particular.

Thomas Olson, president of the Lisco State Bank in Nebraska and chairman of the Independent Bankers Association's committee on farm banks, said the administration package was objectionable because it requires lenders to forgive part of a borrower's interest costs or principal in return for a federal guarantee of part of the loan.

NATION in brief

Lid slams down on 'Great Toilet Seat Controversy'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The lid has finally been closed on the Great Toilet Seat Controversy with a big defense contractor agreeing to drop the price from $640 to $100 each for the units for Navy planes.

Lockheed Corp. said Tuesday it was dropping the price "to prevent this becoming an unnecessary diversion during congressional discussions of the national defense budget," according to a wire sent to Navy Secretary John Lehman by Lockheed president L.O. Kitchen.

But before Lockheed's statement, Sen. William Roth, R-Del., held a Capitol Hill news conference, waving one of the plastic covers for P-3 planes and calling it "just another illustration of the lack of cost effectiveness in Pentagon procurement."

In recent months, the Pentagon has been plagued by high prices for a wide range of spare parts, including $16,571 for a three-cubic-foot refrigerator for crew snacks and drinks during the long flights of the P-3s on their submarine-hunting missions.

Originally, Lockheed billed the Pentagon $640 each for the 54 seats. But the $100 price will result in a refund to the Defense Department of $29,165, Kitchen noted.

CBS will air disclaimer

ATLANTA (AP) — CBS, responding to complaints by city leaders that "The Atlanta Child Murders" unfairly accuses them of railroading convicted murderer Wayne Williams, will tell viewers that the made-for-television film is not a documentary.

The network and Atlanta leaders, who unsuccessfully sought air time to rebut the five-hour movie, announced Tuesday that a verbal and written disclaimer would be broadcast before each installment Sunday night and Tuesday night.

The announcement will say: "The following presentation is not a documentary but a drama based on certain facts surrounding the murder and disappearance of children in Atlanta between 1979 and 1981. Some of the events and characters are fictionalized for dramatic purposes. Certain scenes may be disturbing to young viewers. Parental discretion is advised."

Midway through each night's installment, the network will run a shorter announcement advising parental discretion. CBS said its on-air advertisements also would include a statement about parental discretion.

Farms' sale rescheduled

SYLVESTER, Ga. (AP) — Federal officials will reschedule the foreclosure sales of two farms postponed when about 150 farmers drowned out the open-air auction with a protest song set to the tune of "Home On The Range."

Small Business Administration spokesman Clarence Barnes said his agency sympathizes with farmers but was forced to collect on the delinquent debt on the farm owned by B.A. Parks and his son, Ray.

Barnes said Tuesday's sale would probably be rescheduled for April.

Barnes said the Parks' made no payment on a 3 percent, $96,500 disaster loan since November 1979.

Thieves show no quarter

DENVER (AP) — The Secret Service has joined the hunt for thieves who dragged away 975 pounds of new quarters — $13,000 worth in 13 bags — from a warehouse leased by the Denver Mint.

The coins were stored in the warehouse while a $10 million addition to the mint is under construction, said mint superintendent Nora Hussey.

Police said marks in the show showed the 75-pound bags apparently were dragged to a vehicle Sunday night.

The loss will be covered by the storage company's insurance, Ms. Hussey said.

Firefighters mourn dead

CHICAGO (AP) — About 2,000 Chicago firefighters, joined by some from as far away as New York, escorted the caskets of three firemen killed in what police call an arson-for-profit scheme.

Funeral services Tuesday for Capt. Daniel Nockels and firefighters Michael Forchione and Michael Talley were attended by scores of dignitaries and about 1,500 other mourners.

Look to future

The thought of peering into the future and prognosticating what will come to pass has intrigued mankind almost since the dawn of time. Maybe that's because the ability to foretell the future gives present-day man a feeling of control over the course of his life.

However unfortunate it may be, a look into the past gives man ample reason to ponder his prognosticating ability, chuckle at his visions of things to come and grin sheepishly at his exuberance for that glittering, gleaming tomorrow.

Not that foretelling the future isn't possible with a degree of accuracy for some forward-thinking intellectuals, mind you. The future has been foreseen in many cases with uncanny detail. But not with any unerrant consistency.

Consider this: In a recent edition of The Futurist, an article sampled some of the prognostications rendered between 1894 and the 1950s. The article found the predictions ranged from the "sublime to the silly" and included "vast apartment complexes housing most of the North American population under huge glass skylights; everyday space travel with quick trips to exotic planets; automobiles powered by nuclear reactors; an airplane in every garage; personal robots to take the drudgery out of housework; disposable dishes to wash down the drain; death rays that, with a single concentrated zap of electricity, could destroy people, vehicles and structures."

The article went on to note that "many of the visions, especially those from the early part of the twentieth century, were infused with great optimism, if not utopianism, and the vast possibilities of science and technology as a force for social change."

Yet society has been changed — is being changed at this moment — by technological advances that have shaken the world. If all prognostications do not come to pass — or fail to meet man's lofty expectations in total — does that necessarily mean the engineers, scientists and inventors of yesteryear who looked into the future were total failures? Hardly.

Man must be allowed to dream and, more than that, to follow his dreams. For in those dreams the future waits.

A gratuitous snub

For all their ivory tower pretensions and lofty disdain for the less honorable motivations of ordinary people, educators are not always able to rise above streaks of pettiness in themselves.

This certainly has been demonstrated in the refusal of Oxford University to grant British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher the honorary degree which is routinely conferred on premiers with an Oxford background. Mrs. Thatcher therefore, becomes the first Oxford-educated prime minister since World War II to be denied the degree.

"The Congregation," Oxford's assembly of professors, tutors, fellows and administrators, voted by more than two to one against the degree in civil law for Mrs. Thatcher. The stated reason for this action was her government's cuts in funds for education and research. Or can a whiff of male chauvinism be detected in the vote?

Another unvoiced reason for the snub could be the resentment of intellectuals over the continued support Mrs. Thatcher enjoys from the British people. Her situation is similar to that of President Reagan whose immense popularity in the U.S. is utterly incomprehensible to his political foes.

Mrs. Thatcher is certain to survive the slight with more grace than her detractors have shown. When informed of the vote at Oxford, Mrs. Thatcher, who studied chemistry there, winningly said she felt honored just to be considered for the degree.

Another View:

Duet of despots

The U.S. State Department has actually apologized to the communist Polish government, which allows no free elections, press or independent labor unions, for a Radio Free Europe broadcast that implied Poland is similar to Nazi Germany and Prime Minister Wojciech Jaruzelski similar to Adolf Hitler.

Poland regularly complains about Radio Free Europe, a U.S. government-financed, Munich-based station that beams programs to Eastern Europe but Washington has brushed such protests aside until now.

Bowing to the Polish Foreign Ministry's complaint, the State Department called the broadcast offensive and said it was "in very poor taste."

"The U.S. government regrets any implication of similarity between Nazi Germany and present-day Poland and particularly between Adolf Hitler and Gen. Jaruzelski," the statement said.

True, there are differences. For one, the Nazis were homegrown tyrants whereas Warsaw's despotic government is Moscow-manipulated.

Last May, Jaruzelski, hat in hand, traveled to Moscow where he heard Soviet President Konstantin Chernenko warn that the USSR would not tolerate any changes in the Soviet bloc's (which includes Poland) communist system.

Dutifully echoing his Kremlin masters, Jaruzelski noted that "there can be no deviation from Communist Party policies in Poland." He then received the Order of Lenin, an award granted only to those who follow Kremlin orders.

Another difference: Jaruzelski rules with an iron fist but professes democracy; Hitler never pretended to be democratic.

However, setting aside the Nazi leader's independence from foreign control and his refusal to mask his disdain for democratic rule, he and Moscow's satrap, Jaruzelski, are controlled among the long line of political despots who have plagued freedom-loving people throughout history.

The State Department owes an apology to Radio Free Europe.

JACK ANDERSON

Does U.S.-Soviet peace wait in stars?

WASHINGTON — In a move that could lead to better Soviet-American relations, President Reagan and Chairman Konstantin Chernenko have approved the idea of establishing ties between America's Young Astronauts and Russia's Young Cosmonauts.

Jack Anderson

This raises new hope that by exchanging visits and sharing dreams, Young Astronauts and Young Cosmonauts might lead the way to peaceful cooperation in space.

In behalf of the Young Astronaut Council, I wrote a letter to Chernenko proposing the affiliation. I pleaded that we are passengers together on a great spaceship called Earth, which cannot be broken into pieces, with the Soviet Union and the United States assigned separate orbits. The letter was hand-carried to Moscow last month by my daughter Tanya.

Two weeks later, the Soviet Embassy called to report that Chernenko had read the letter and that his response was "positive." Then the Soviet diplomat inquired cordially, "Did Tanya enjoy her visit to the Soviet Union?"

I said she had a glorious time and had come home favorably impressed. "Too bad she doesn't write the column," retorted the Russian, with a chuckle.

What are the next steps?

First, I have invited the Young Cosmonauts, with White House approval, to send a delegation to watch a space launching and tour our space facilities. "From this small beginning," I wrote, "I look forward to the day that our astronauts and your cosmonauts will explore the vast cosmos together. We are merely scratching the surface of knowledge so profound, so illimitable, so beyond our present understanding that we should waste no time nor energy on petty disputes."

Second, each Young Astronaut will be encouraged to write a letter to a Young Cosmonaut, explaining why they should become friends and what they might hope to accomplish together in space. Those who write the best letters will be selected for future exchanges, all expenses paid. Other exciting prizes will be offered.

Third, the International Aeronautical Federation has adopted the Young Astronaut program as the best way to achieve "peace through space." Under the federation's auspices, the Young Astronaut program will be offered to other nations and ties will be sought between Young Astronauts and Young Cosmonauts around the world.

Every generation, if it is to fulfill itself, needs a dream to inspire it, an adventure to ennoble it. Seldom have young people had the incentive that space now offers.

For half a millennium, the spirit of maximum adventure has awaited new Columbuses and Magellans. Now, for our children, it is at hand and on a scale far more vast.

Footnote: The Young Astronaut Council is recruiting 6-to-16-year-olds for future space exploration. All who sign up will be eligible to participate in the "Letter to a Young Cosmonaut" contest. For particulars, write to the Young Astronauts, 1015 16th Street, N.W., Suite 905, Washington, D.C., 20005.

If the Young Cosmonauts accept our invitation to attend a space launching, their host will be Pepsi-Cola, one of the sponsors of the Young Astronaut program. Another sponsor, Disney World, will invite the Young Cosmonauts to its Florida resort.

ARMING THE CONTRAS: Since the congressional cutoff of U.S. military aid to the Nicaraguan contra guerrillas, the anti-Sandinista forces have been getting weapons from "surrogate CIAs" — countries friendly to the United States that are willing to keep the arms and ammunition flowing as a way of ingratiating themselves with the Reagan administration.

One ironic result of this arms traffic is that the anti-communist Nicaraguan guerrillas are being supplied with Soviet-bloc weapons.

The three biggest arms sources for the contras — now that the CIA's arsenal has been put off limits — are Israel, Egypt and South Africa. Each country has been sending the contras Soviet-made arms captured from various guerrilla groups or, in the case of Egypt, provided originally by the Kremlin.

The Israelis captured huge quantities of weapons from the Palestine Liberation Organization in Lebanon. The South Africans captured Soviet weapons in occupied Namibia and during sorties into Angola. Both countries stoutly deny sending any arms to the contras, but a short, cryptic press communique in Israel last year disclosed that auditors had discovered the "disappearance" of more than $250 million worth of arms from military warehouses in the past three years.

In the jungles of Nicaragua not long ago, my reporter Jon Lee Anderson saw Egyptian army submachine guns of Soviet design in the hands of contra guerrillas. Egypt has been getting its arms from the West in recent years, and apparently is unloading some of its huge stock of Soviet weapons, acquired in the 1960s and 1970s when the Kremlin had hopes of making Egypt a Soviet satellite. Like Israel and South Africa, Egypt denies sending arms to the contras.

In addition to the "Big Three," the contras have been getting aid from other countries on an unofficial basis. The suppliers include South Korea, Taiwan, Venezuela and Colombia. And contra sources say that since last August, when the CIA aid pipeline finally ran dry, they have been successfully soliciting "private aid" in the United States. They have been most successful, they said, with individuals who used to work "in the U.S. government" and now are employed by defense contractors.

ART BUCHWALD

Other man's weather always 'greener'!

Talk about messengers of bad news — nothing beats the TV weather people. They chuckle in front of their maps of the United States, while all of us gaze at them with fear and loathing.

Art Buchwald

The trouble with the TV weather report is that it brings out the worst in all of us.

The other evening I was watching my weatherman on the late-night news and he said, "A cold arctic blast is coming down from Canada and will sweep across the Great Plains carrying freezing temperatures, snow, ice and wind."

"What are you smiling at?" my wife wanted to know.

"Better them than us," I said.

"But the people in the Great Plains are Americans, too."

"They're used to it," I replied. "Great Plains residents all come from hardy Scandinavian stock, and a minus-42-degree wind chill factor to them is a grand soft day."

The weatherman was waving his hands all over the map.

"A storm now over the Pacific will produce six inches of rain in Southern California and Arizona."

"Serves them right," I said. "They're always bragging how great their weather is, and it's time they got a taste of the elements. If they can't play tennis in Southern California they close the schools."

"You're being awfully cruel," my wife said.

"When it comes to weather, it's every man for himself."

The weatherman continued. "A Yukon express jet stream will bring record low temperatures to the state of Texas."

"It's about time," I said.

"What have you got against Texas?"

"Remember during the petroleum crisis when they put bumper stickers on their cars telling the Northeast to freeze to death?"

"They didn't mean it," my wife said. "That's just the way Texans talk. I feel for anyone who is cold."

"Don't cry for Texas," I told her. "All they have to do if they start shivering is go out in the back yard and fill up a pail with oil and throw it in their burners."

The weatherman was now pointing at New York state.

"The hardest hit part of the country was Buffalo, which had 30 inches of snow this morning, and is still digging out tonight."

"How do you feel about Buffalo?" my wife wanted to know.

"Anyone who stays in Buffalo during the winter knows what they're in for. Besides, I can't remember one weather report in the last six months that didn't show people digging out in Buffalo. You have to be pretty dumb to live next to Lake Erie."

"Kentucky, Tennessee and Georgia can expect freezing rain because of this high-pressure system coming up from Mexico," the weatherman continued.

"So what," I spoke back to the TV screen. "We never promised them a rose garden."

My wife was becoming annoyed. "You're no fun to watch the weather with."

"Look, the only reason they tell you what the weather is like in other parts of the country is so people who aren't affected by it can enjoy it. Bad news is good news if it doesn't happen to you."

The weatherman continued. "This freezing rain will be pushed north by the high, and we can expect two inches of snow in the Washington area by tomorrow's rush hour."

I couldn't believe what I had just heard, and looked up to heaven. "Why us?"

South Korean opposition leader ends exile in U.S.

Kim Dae Jung

WASHINGTON (AP) — South Korean opposition leader Kim Dae Jung, ending two years of American exile, is returning to his homeland where he says "dangers await me" in his struggle to restore democracy.

Kim, who was leaving Washington today, said the South Korean government may try to place him under house arrest. But he also said he expects a warm welcome from as many as 50,000 supporters who plan to greet him at Seoul's Kimpo airport Friday.

Although Kim said he has been assured he won't be imprisoned upon his return, he made clear at a press conference and in remarks to supporters at a send-off banquet Tuesday night he expects the government to try to prevent him from preaching democracy to the people.

Kim planned to leave Washington at 10 a.m. EST on a two-day return flight with a brief stop in Chicago and an overnight stop in Tokyo on Thursday. He is scheduled to arrive in Seoul at 11:30 a.m. Friday, which is 8:30 p.m. Thursday CST.

Kim said government agents went to his home in Seoul twice on Monday "under the pretense" of providing security. He said he thinks the government of military dictator Chun Doo Hwan will try to place him under house arrest, an action he said could touch off anti-government protests by his followers.

'I think if they put me under house arrest, there will be some protest from our people," Kim said. But he said if the government "is moderate" in its treatment of him, "I will also be very moderate so that my return will not result in creating any instability."

Kim's return has been given extraordinary publicity in the United States by a group of American and Korean supporters, who say they hope to prevent a recurrence of the reception given Philippines opposition leader Benigno Aquino Jr., who was shot dead in 1983 on his return to Manila after two years of American exile.

Kim will be accompanied on the flight by a group of prominent Americans, including two members of Congress, Rep. Edward F. Feighan, D-Ohio, and Rep. Thomas M. Foglietta, D-Pa. Kim feted members of the delegation and about 200 other supporters at a send-off banquet at a Korean resturant in suburban Washington Tuesday night.

"I go with the strong support of my American friends," Kim said. But he added that he didn't know "whether I can maintain my life" once he gets there.

Kim recalled in an AP interview on Saturday that he had met with Aquino in Cambridge, Mass., in April 1983 when Aquino was about to end his exile and Kim was just starting his.

Rep. Ed Markey, D-Mass., who spoke at the banquet, but who is not a member of the delegation, noted that Kim will lose his "security blanket" of American supporters after he arrives back in Seoul. He said it will be essential for Kim's safety "to keep the spotlight" of world publicity on him.

Pope arrives in Rome after grueling 12-day tour

ROME (AP) — Pope John Paul II arrived home today after a grueling 12-day tour of Venezuela, Ecuador and Peru and a brief visit in the Caribbean nation of Trinidad and Tobago.

The papal plane landed at Rome's Ciampino military airport an hour behind schedule, ending John Paul's 25th trip outside Italy and his sixth to Latin America since he became pope in 1978.

The pontiff's last public appearance in Trinidad and Tobago was at a Mass in a seaside stadium, punctuated by rhythmic chants and steel-drum band music.

He was greeted by 40,000 people and a rousing song, "Raise Your Hand If You Love The Pope," a take-off on the fast-paced calypso standard "Raise Your Hand If You Want To Jam."

He praised the lively Caribbean nation for its racial and religious harmony.

His stay in relatively prosperous Trinidad was in sharp contrast to some of the isolated, poverty-stricken jungle spots of his 17-city tour of Peru, Ecuador and Venezuela.

As the visibly weary but smiling pope left the stadium, fireworks were set off and the swaying crowd sang "Hallelujah" to a calypso beat. He was given a special, star-shaped calypso headdress.

Afterward, he attended a brief reception at the residence of the president —the largely ceremonial head of state of the moderate, democratic former British colony. The government presented the pope with an album of steel band music, and a calypso singer, known as the Roaring Lion, sang for him.

Cut and Shoot weathers identity crisis

EDITORS NOTE — The name Cut and Shoot stems from the Montgomery County town's early reputation as a boisterous community.

By JOHN HANAN

CUT AND SHOOT, Texas (AP) — A town hall suffering an identity crisis has settled a long-standing controversy over a community never quite certain of its own name.

Documents now prove the tiny town just east of Conroe is Cut and Shoot — with the "and" fully spelled. So the structure is officially the Cut and Shoot Town Hall.

The rustic log cabin had looked like anything but the municipal government meeting place that it is.

"People thought it was nothing but a beer joint, right there by the fire station," said alderman Gene Douget. At a meeting a few months ago, he suggested a sign to clear up any disreputable misconceptions.

But the town suffers its own identity crisis, if not in name at least in spelling. Various sources refer to it as Cut and Shoot, Cut'n Shoot, Cut & Shoot, or Cut'N' Shoot, and there are probably others.

"We started getting the sign together, so we thought we better get it right," Douget said.

The city fathers consulted the not-so-ancient chronicles and spoke. They checked the charter, drafted in 1969 when the town was incorporated, and found it spelled Cut and Shoot.

Not Cut'n Shoot, And not Cut'n' Shoot. And not Cut & Shoot.

Cut and Shoot, with the "and" spelled out fully and with no capitalization. The charter's spelling made it onto the town hall's sign and into official use.

The words, "Town Hall — Cut and Shoot, Texas," now grace the building's front, over the unpainted cedar exterior. Looking at the 30-foot by 40-foot hall made out of logs, you can see how it might have caused confusion. As Douget says, "You know the old Western saloon with the porch on it? It looks just like that."

Citizens need wonder no more. "A lot of people wanted to know where the town hall was. It's been sitting there all the time," Douget said.

And they need wonder no more how to spell their town's name, though a host of references offer conflicting advice on the correct form.

Diets must be well-balanced to be effective

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have read enough to know that carrying around too much weight can lead to all sorts of bad things, such as high blood pressure and diabetes. But can't dieting also cause a lot of problems? — Lou, Boston

Solomon

Dear Lou: You are absolutely correct in pointing out the serious health risks associated with some types of diets. That is why the diets I prescribe for my own patients ae based on nutritious, well-balanced meals.

Other approaches to weight loss, such as the use of the very-low-calorie liquid protein diet a few years go, can have serious consequences, including death.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I can see why doctors tell their patients to cut down on the amount of salt they have. If a doctor tells me that too much salt can cause high blood pressure, I have to believe him because I am not a scientist. But if a person does heavy physical work or plays a strenuous game of ball and sweats a lot, I don't see why it would not be a good idea to take salt tablets. Would you please explain what is wrong with my reasoning? — Dave, San Antonio, Texas

Dear Dave: The human body tends to conserve its supply of minerals even in workers or athletes who are active in hot, humid weather. These individuals require additional fluids to replace what has been lost, not salt. In addition, salt tablets are concentrated and can irritate the stomach.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Although I am in my thirties and am married and have a family, my mother is just as concerned about what I eat as she was when I was a child. She uses my brother as an example of what she calls a "good eater," while I am considered a "poor eater." But my brother is well over six feet tall, while I'm a couple of inches under six feet. Yet, at 165 pounds, I don't feel as if I'm wasting away. My mother reads your column and I would appreciate it if you would make some comment about this. — Mr. W.J., Orlando, Fla.

Dear Mr. J.: A man who is a couple of inches under six feet tall and who weighs about 165 pounds is far from the scrawny weakling that, according to the magazine advertisements, used to get sand kicked in his face. On the basis of your letter, I would speculate that your mother's concern about food goes beyond its nutritional value.

I don't know if this will help, but you can explain that your brother requires more calories because he is taller. If both of you consumed the same number of calories and engaged in the same activities, you might gain weight while his weight would remain unchanged.

For George, Cambridge, Mass.: The American Health Foundation has reported that high blood cholesterol levels in children may be associated with coronary heart disease when they are older. Therefore, children should be instructed about the benefits of following a low-fat diet and exercise.

Town foregoes nickles to cash in on big bucks

BRYAN, Ohio (AP) — People who once complained about having to feed nickels and dimes into parking meters here are now plunking down dollars to buy them.

City officials decided free parking would save the city the money it spent to empty and maintain the meters, so they put the 300 coin-gobblers on sale for $7 apiece. So far, more than 100 have been sold to people who are using them as doorstops, paperweights, yard decorations and conversation pieces, said Mayor Bill Runkle.

Reed Fox, a retired canning equipment manufacturer, bought 11 parking meters.

He has turned a few into gag gifts, but kept some for his own fun. One was installed at the bar in his remodeled garage, where Fox tells guests they can belly up until the meter shows red.

Rebs' Dickens leads Steers to slaughter

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

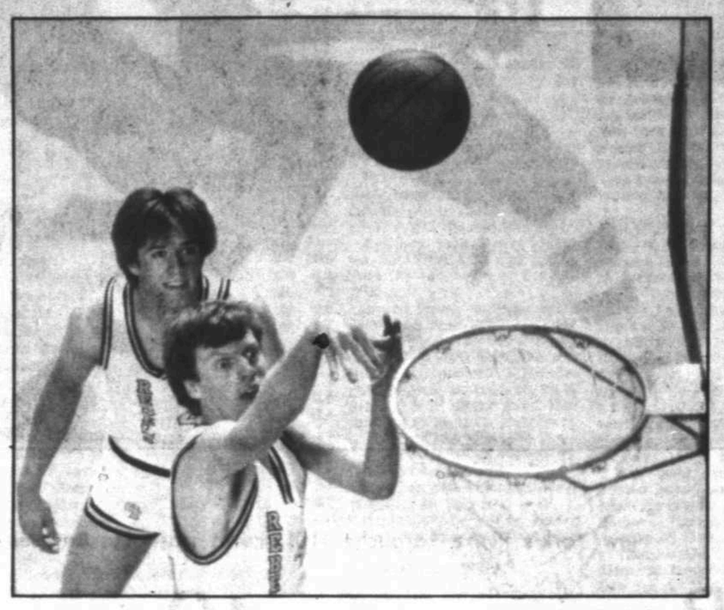

Midland Lee post Anthony Dickens hit the "Daily Double" at Chaparral Center Tuesday night as the District 4-5A leading Rebels bombed the hapless Big Spring Steers, 92-50.

Dickens' "Daily Double" consisted of 22 points and 16 rebounds, both season highs for the senior. Dickens hit eight of 16 shots from the field and six of eight from the charity stripe while swiping everything that came off the boards on both ends of the court. It may have been his most dominating game as a Rebel.

Dickens, who went into the game with a 7.4 points per game average, usually gets his points from the mistakes of his teammates under the offensive boards. Tuesday against Big Spring, the lanky lad took more shots than he normally does and he liked the feeling.

"Yeah, I shot a little more than usual, but I felt my shot was there tonight," said Dickens after the performance. "I've been getting ready for the games and I can't wait until the next one."

And the next one is a big one. The Rebels carry their league leading 9-2 record into the hostile confines of the Abilene High gym where the Eagles are unbeaten in district play at home. AHS is 8-3 along with San Angelo and the Eagles know a victory over Lee could throw the championship race into a mad scramble.

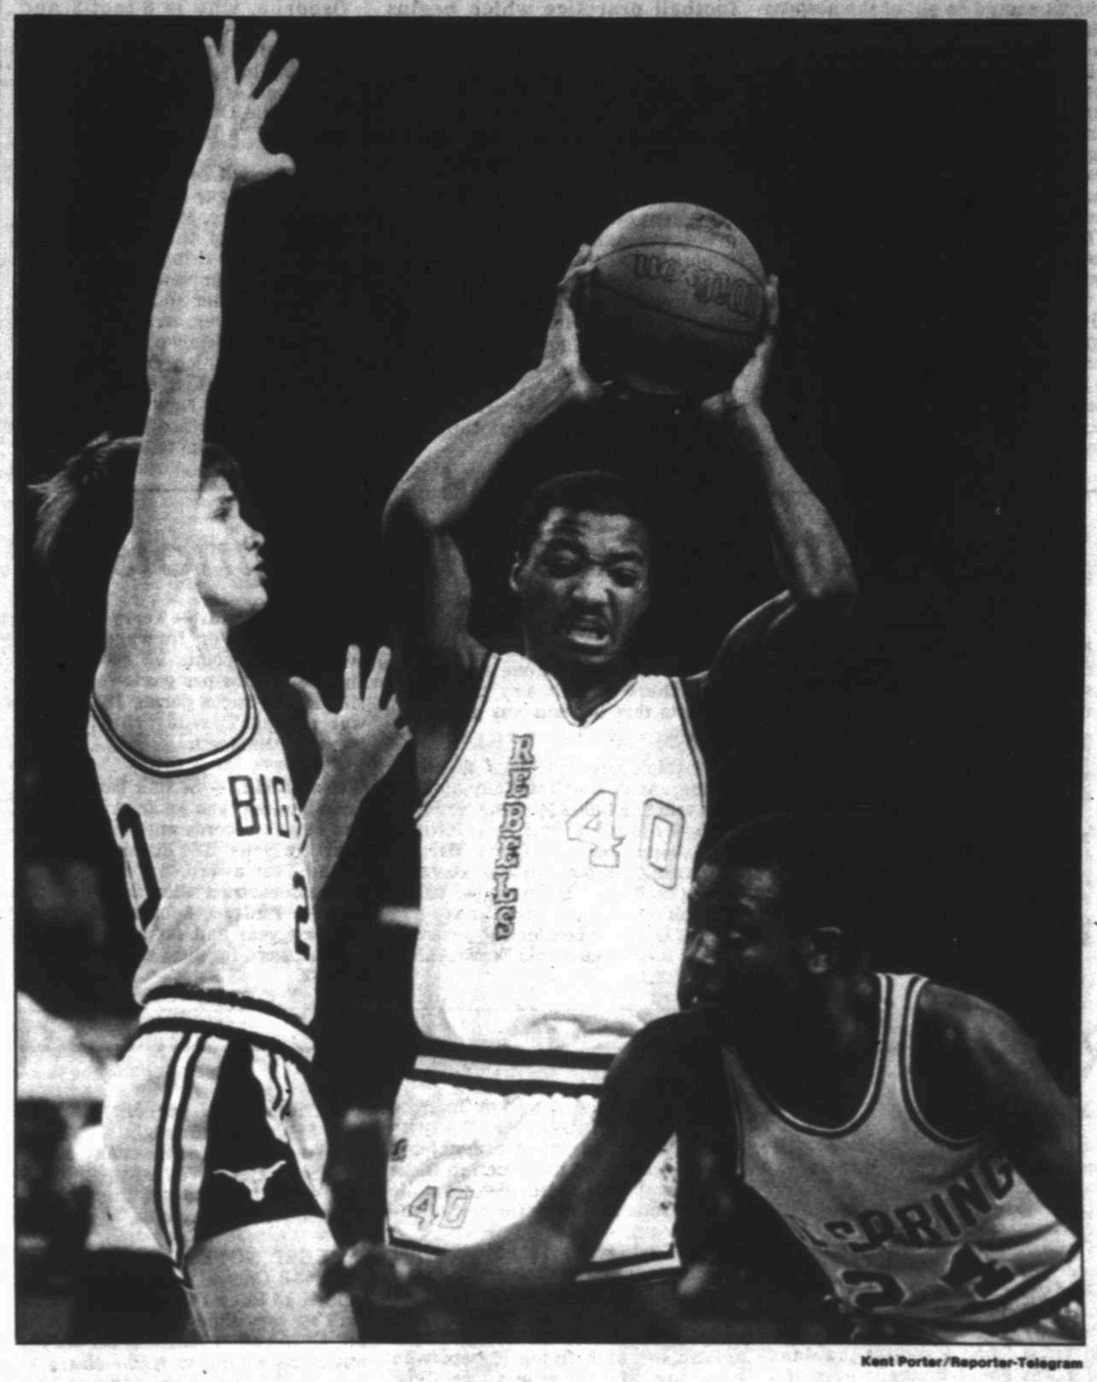

Kent Porter/Reporter-Telegram

Tim Hill knows this shot is money in the bank and Midland Lee teammate Jack McCranie agrees during this action against Big Spring Tuesday night at Chaparral Center.

"They're all big games in this league," noted Lee coach Paul Stueckler. "All we can say right now is that we have a one-game lead over the field with three games left to play. You tell me how big the Abilene High game will be?"

In addition to Dickens' 22 points, Brian Marczynski hit for 18 despite sitting out most of the second half. Marczynski scored 16 in the first half. Raymond Morney, who also had a lot of bench time, had 14 points and Derek Westbrook had 10.

'Dogs' playoff hopes dimming

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

SAN ANGELO — Midland High's realistic chances of earning a District 4-5A playoff berth in 1985 were dashed against the rocks here Friday night as the San Angelo Bobcats won an 84-72 decision over the Bulldogs.

The loss left MHS with a 6-5 district record and a full two games out of second place behind San Angelo and Abilene High, which ran over Odessa High Tuesday, 88-72. There are only three district games left to play.

Odessa Permian also saw its league playoff hopes smashed in a tough 64-62, double overtime, loss to Abilene Cooper. Permian is also 6-5 and in the same boat as the Bulldogs.

The Bulldogs, who trailed by as many as nine points in the fourth period, rallied to cut the Bobcat margin to 73-70 with 1:21 left in the game. San Angelo's Brian Ross, who had 16 points, and MHS' Darrell Davis, who led all scorers with 38 points, traded baskets before the roof caved in on the Purple Pack.

Davis bumped into Willie Blakey and a strange intentional foul was called. Blakey hit the free throws for a 77-72 margin and then Ottoway Perryman stole the ball from MHS and took it in for a score for a 79-72 margin with 45 seconds left. The game was over after the Bulldogs got a walking

Umpires quit so Lendl, Stefanki make own calls

DELRAY BEACH, Fla. (AP) — There they were, Ivan Lendl and Larry Stefanki, playing tennis on the stadium court, just the two of them, with the score of the match being shouted from the vicinity of the press box.

Umpire Luigi Brambilla of Pomezia, Italy, had left his chair and the court on this first day of the $1.8 million Lipton International Players Championships ... and the linesmen followed.

"We have played a few times without the umpire knowing the score, but never without an umpire," top-seeded Lendl said after his Tuesday night match.

"The Ivan Lendl-Larry Stefanki first-round match stands as played," the Men's International Professional Tennis Council said in a statement. "Mr. Lendl wins 6-2, 6-0 and moves into the second round even though the match was completed without compliance, with the point penalty of the chair umpire and without a chair umpire.

"Chief of Supervisors Ken Farrar is making an investigation of the facts and the results will be published as soon as possible."

THE TOP two women's seeds, Martina Navratilova and Chris Evert Lloyd, will make their debut today on the Laykold courts at Laver's International Tennis Resort, Navratilova facing Molly Van Nostrand and Lloyd meeting Corinne Vanier of France.

The women's final will be held Saturday, Feb. 16, and the men's singles championship decided on Sunday, Feb. 17. Both winners will collect $112,500.

The men's No. 3 seed, Sweden's Mats Wilander, also will play his first-round match today, taking on Mike DePalmer.

Wilander's Swedish Davis Cup teammate, Henrik Sundstrom, was the highest seeded player to fall on Tuesday as the No. 3 seed was ousted by Marko Ostoja of Yugoslavia 6-2, 6-2.

In other upsets, Brad Gilbert of Piedmont, Calif., eliminated No. 16 Ramesh Krishnan of India 6-3, 6-3, and Steffi Graf downed fellow West German Sylvia Hanika, seeded 16th in the women's singles, 6-2, 6-4.

Two seeded Swedes, No. 4 Anders Jarryd and No. 8 Joakim Nystrom, had little trouble advancing into the second round. Jarryd stopped Balazs Taroczy of Hungary 7-6, 6-3 and Nystrom defeated Switzerland's Heinz Gunthardt 6-3, 6-2.

Other victorious seeds on the opening day of this new two-week extravaganza, the first two-week tournament to be started since the end of World War II, included No. 7 Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia, No. 8 Zina Garrison, No. 10 Carling Bassett of Canada, No. 12 Barbara Potter, No. 13 Andrea Temesvari of Hungary and No. 15 Catarina Lindqvist of Sweden in the women's singles.

In the men's field, No. 15 Ben Testerman of Knoxville, Tenn., struggled before eliminating Libor Pimek of Czechoslovakia 6-4, 6-7, 6-2.

With Lendl leading 3-0, 40-15 in the second set, the big Czech right-hander hit what both players thought was a long serve. But no call was made and Lendl took a 4-0 lead.

BEFORE STEFANKI began to serve, he went to Brambilla and asked the umpire if he had seen the ball on Lendl's serve.

"I just asked him one simple question," Stefanki said. "That's basically what happened."

But what happened after that caused the bizarre ending of the match.

Brambilla informed Stefanki that he was timing him and he had only 30 seconds to put the ball in play. He then said 15 seconds, then assessed Stefanki a point penalty for delay of game.

That brought Lendl to the umpire.

"I thought it was ridiculous," Lendl said. "He's (Stefanki) one of the nicest guys on the tour. He never curses or throws his racket or anything."

But when Brambilla began speaking to someone else, the players returned to the court and resumed play.

"After we played six points (and went to deuce), he (Brambilla) said, 'Let's start over again,'" Stefanki said. "We said we would play from deuce.

"He sat in the chair and he said, 'Now we play guys.' "

When Lendl and Stefanki played out the game — from deuce — Brambilla got down from the chair and left the court, the linesmen following him.

"Ivan was directing traffic out there," said Stefanki. "We were having fun and it was totally in control. The match wasn't close and we just wanted to have some fun for the people who paid their money to come see us play.

"In a situation like that, there was no need to get real technical. I was getting crushed.

"I think the fans liked it. I did."

SUNDSTROM CAPTURED the first two games, breaking Ostoja in the second set. But then the Yugoslav ripped off the next six games to take the opening set.

Ostoja, who is ranked 116th in the world on the Hewlett-Packard-ATP computer, got the only service break in the second set, that coming in the third game.

Sundstrom, who upset John McEnroe in the first-day singles to give Sweden a commanding 2-0 lead in its Davis Cup final against the United States in December, a match the Swedes won, said he wasn't playing well and "my back was bothering me, but not that much."

The windy conditions bothered several players, including Lendl, Jarryd and Maleeva.

Give Lewis a break, he won didn't he?

Will somebody please tell me what Carl Lewis did to deserve what he's getting from the American press and public?

Wait a minute, let me guess. He 1) ran over a dog, three kittens and a crowded schoolyard crossing in a pickup truck; 2) voted Communist, 3) spied for the Bulgarian secret police, 4) stole the Mona Lisa, 5) shot Santa Claus, 6) endorsed cigarette smoking on public transportation.

Maybe he did all of the above.

Whatever. This is not the young man who did what only one other man in the history of track and field ever did — win four gold medals in the Olympics. It can't be that one.

This is not the young man who is good to his mother, polite to strangers, minds his own business and is, certifiably, one of the greatest athletes who ever lived.

This can't be the Carl Lewis who is a functioning capitalist, who plays by the rules, contributes to charity and who seized an American flag and trotted around the Olympic track with his three teammates at the Coliseum last summer.

Can't be the same fellow. That Carl Lewis would have been given a ticker-tape parade down Broadway, the keys to the city, a reception at the White House.

I mean, that's what they did for the last guy who did what Carl Lewis did, Jesse Owens. Right?

That's what they always do for a guy who takes apart the Olympic Games like these guys did, right? People shower them with job offers, put their pictures on cereal boxes, name streets after them, sculpt statues of them.

Certainly, they are beloved public figures like Babe Ruth or Pete Rose or Joe Namath or Knute Rockne or somebody. This is America, right?

I mean, the guy wouldn't be the subject of a vicious whispering campaign, the object of hostile press notices? They wouldn't, for heaven's sakes, boo him, now, would they?

What's going on here? Have I got the wrong country?

First of all, what did the man do? I mean, have I got the wrong guy?

Didn't he win the 100-meter run in 9.9, the best Olympic time ever at sea level? Didn't he win the 200 in Olympic-record time of 19.8? Didn't he win the long jump, tying the longest Olympic jump ever at sea level?

I mean, what do you want, guys?! You want him to cure the common cold, multiply loaves and fishes, free the slaves, raise the dead?

I mean, what did the man do? Let's hear it!

THE LAST time I looked, he was standing at attention on the victory stand, his hand over his heart while the anthem was being played. He wasn't yawning, pouting, sneering. He was wearing shoes. He looked kind of proud, for crying out loud. Maybe that's where he went wrong. He should have said he was busy.

It's hard to please some people. But Carl Lewis, for some reason, offended the flower of world journalism and, for all the good his four gold medals have done him to date, he might as well have gone 2 for 4 in his Olympic events.

But, if they treat him this way in victory, imagine what they would have done if he had lost. He'd have had to change his name.

It's an American tradition to give the accused, any accused, a chance to confront his accusers and defend himself. At least, it used to be.

So, I put a call in to this public enemy to see if he had anything to say for himself.

In any court of law, most of what has been said about Carl Lewis would be thrown out as irrelevant, immaterial, inadmissible and hearsay.

The bill of particulars would pretty quickly narrow down to the charge that he passed up four chances to crack the world and Olympic record in the long jump in the Los Angeles Games last summer. The fact that his first jump that day was good enough to win the gold medal by a foot never entered the thinking of the crowd who booed him.

"People take no notice of the fact I was on a four-gold medal program," Lewis said. "I had only won one to that time. I had run two heats in the 200 that day. I had this soreness in my groin. It had grown cold in the Coliseum. The long-jump final was delayed because of the hammer throw. The Olympic Games are not a time for record tries and the conditions were such that day that a try at a record so remote and of such magnitude as the long jump was completely out of the question."

Wasn't the successor to Jesse Owens obligated to go for more than the gold, to go for history? Lewis thinks not. "You must remember Jesse Owens was not that well known before his Games (Berlin 1936). Times were different then. He did not have the media involvement I had to deal with. He did not, in a real sense, have the pressure on him.

"There's a lot more to it. Jesse had a hard time supporting himself and his family. He had a struggle and he had to put up with criticism, too. His legend grew as people realized what a thing he had done."

But, didn't Lewis feel snubbed, if not insulted, at being passed over as sportsman of the year by the editors of Sports Illustrated and as sportsman of the year by the U.S. Olympic committee?

"I think the press has portrayed me as something I am not. I think the public has perceived me as they portray me. I am perceived as arrogant. I am not. I am positive. I do not deal in negatives. I am not rude. I am not an arrogant person. I have known a lot of arrogant journalists. But I have never been one to disregard journalists. They don't offend me. I don't know why I offend them."

Probably because it's no longer enough to run faster, jump farther, or train harder, you also have to talk better, dance nicer and be kinder and spend time with anyone who wants you to.

When people come along who do all that, of course, then we burn them at the stake.

Osborne 'doing very well'

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Nebraska football coach Tom Osborne was reported "doing very well" Tuesday after a nearly three-hour double-bypass heart operation, his surgeon said.

Dr. Deepak Gangahar said Osborne was in stable condition Tuesday afternoon in the hospital's intensive care unit.

But Osborne, who will be 48 on Feb. 23, should be out of the hospital within a week and jogging again in two to three weeks, he said.

During a news conference at the hospital Tuesday afternoon, Gangahar described Tuesday morning's surgery, which consisted of bypassing two vessels in the left anterior descending artery, one of three coronary arteries. The vessels were 99 percent blocked, Gangahar said.

There were two blockages in the one artery, Gangahar said, one on a main artery, the other on a branch of that artery.

Instead of using veins from the legs, as in a standard bypass operation, Gangahar said he "peeled off an artery behind the breast bone to use as a conduit."

He said it was an advantage to use the internal chest artery because it is about the same size as the coronary artery.

"On the long haul, the mammary artery grafts have a better chance of staying open," Gangahar said.

Both Gangahar and cardiologist Dr. Walt Weaver called the elective surgery "routine." Osborne chose the surgical procedure over two other options because it would enable him to be ready for spring football prarctice which begins April 1.

"At any time, there are six million people with coronary artery disease," Weaver said. "By virtue of having the operation, Osborne is safer than people walking around the streets who don't know it."

Gangahar said though Osborne's artery was blocked, the coach has "excellent heart muscle."

Weaver said he'll recommend Osborne "continue his clean-living lifestyle," including running.

He said Osborne could improve his diet, but that "it's tough on the recruiting circuit to find the spartan diets."

The doctors said Osborne will have to take it easy for four to six week, mainly because of the chest incision.

"It takes awhile," Weaver said. "The chest incision is the kind ... that hurts when you laugh."

Osborne said before the operation that he hopes Cornhusker fans won't worry about his condition and asked that fans not send cards or flowers.

He said the bypass surgery won't make him consider leaving the coaching profession or drastically changing his lifestyle.

Osborne, who is 6-foot-3 and weighs 204 pounds, said he noticed while jogging the past six or eight weeks that he wasn't running as easily as usual. After about three-quarters of a mile, Osborne said he would experience "a little discomfort in my chest.

"The worst it ever was," he said, "was at the Sugar Bowl. I felt more discomfort there. Mabye it was just the pressure of the bowl, or the Booker Brown thing. And there's more humidity in New Orleans."

Brown, a former Southern California and pro player, accused Osborne of illegal recruiting practices from 12 years ago, which Osborne vehemently denied. The coach took a polygraph test in New Orleans, and said the entire episode distressed him and caused him to lose sleep.

Bay City's Dykes likes Illinois

FOOTBALL — Hart Lee Dykes of Bay City, Texas, one of the nation's top high school receivers, says he is leaning toward a college football career at Illinois.

"I'll probably go to Illinois," said Dykes, a 6-foot-5, 212-pound athlete who completed his visit to the UI campus Monday.

But Dykes said he wouldn't make a decision before next Monday — two days before NCAA letters-of-intent may be signed. "We're hopeful, but we don't want to get everyone excited," said Illinois Coach Mike White. "A lot can happen between now and next Wednesday."

But, as is typical during recruiting season, the rumors began to fly.

Dykes' mother, for one, said Tuesday there wasn't any truth to reports that her son was going to Illinois.

"I think he'd tell me if he was going, and he hasn't said anything," she told The Dallas Morning News.

Dykes also has been considering Oklahoma, but said Coach Barry Switzer does not call the pass as often as White. "If I want the ball, Illinois is the place," said Dykes.

Dykes also is considering several other schools including Texas A&M and UCLA...

BASKETBALL — Terry Cummings, a power forward who averaged 24.8 points, 9.5 rebounds and 3.6 assistas per game for the Milwaukee Bucks during January, was named Tuesday the NBA Player of the Month.

BASEBALL — Second baseman Juan Samuel, who set several club and league records and won The Sporting News' 1984 Rookie Player of the Year award, has signed a one-year contract with the Philadelphia Phillies. Samuel, 23, hit .272 last year and set a new NL rookie record for most stolen bases with 72.

REBELS

BUT THIS was a night for the Lee bench as all nine Rebels who played scored.

Lee Dixon, despite a four of 16 night from the field, had nine points off the bench, his highest outing since scoring 12 against Big Spring in the first half. Dixon also had a slam dunk to send Lee over the 90-point barrier.

"I knew I had a shot at the dunk and I was going to try it even if I missed," said Dixon, who was taking some kidding for all the shots he took in the game. "The dunk wasn't my first. I had one against Levelland earlier in the year."

Tim Hill had a fine night with six points, breaking a streak of six games in which he hadn't scored. Jack McCranie also came off the bench with six points, a season high. Kenny Staehling, who had gone five games without scoring during one stretch, scored five for the second game in a row.

WHEN YOU are playing a team that hasn't won a district outing, you expect to win and Lee did that with ease. But it also gave Stueckler a chance to look at his bench in more depth and he had to like what he saw. It adds to the confidence of the whole team.

Big Spring got 15 points from Mike Leuschner, 13 from Benard Williams and 10 from Brian Mayfield, but the Steers could muster only one quarter of competition against the high flying Rebels, who have now won three in a row since losing to San Angelo.

The Steers led most of the first quarter and by as many as four points as Lee got off to a rugged start. But a Dickens' bucket with 39 seconds left in the period knotted the score at 12-12 and Westbrook followed with a steal and a layup for a 14-12 Lee margin, the first time of the night that Lee held the lead.

It was all over after that as Lee outscored the Steers by 21 points in the second period. Lee ended the game with a 44 percent shooting eye from the field, but when you get 89 shots, you usually win. Big Spring hit a meager 37 percent, but had only 51 shots on the night.

"We did get off to a shaky start," said Steuckler. "We had to go to the full court press to get them going. That seemed to ignite us."

REBEL NOTES: Lee has Abilene High, 3-8 Odessa High and 6-5 Midland High left on the schedule. That isn't an easy slide down the stretch, but all the other teams in the league might be willing to trade places to own Lee's one-game edge at this point in the campaign...

and Blakey, who had 22 points, again connected at the free throw line to ice the game.

Despite the loss, Davis had an awesome night, hitting 14 of 29 from the field and 10 of 13 from the free throw line for 38 points. He also had 13 rebounds. Davis was one point shy of his career high.

Perryman led the Bobcats with 24 points.

Matt Sears hit for 14 points for Midland High with a seven of 10 shooting eye, but no other Bulldogs were in double figures. Elvin Mackey scored only two points and missed a big part of the game due to an eye injury.

Abilene High's Cliff Johnson led four Eagles in double figures with 32 points against Odessa High. Kirt Robinson had 15, Joe Agnew 11 and Mickey Russell 10 in the romp over the Bronchos. OHS got 18 from both Tracey Blaylock and Keith Smith and 16 more from Allan Bailey, but couldn't stay with the Eagle firepower.

Cooper pulled off the stinging upset over Permian when Darrin Hopper hit a 15-foot jumper with three seconds left in the second overtime. Had Hopper missed the shot, the game was headed for a third extra period.

Hopper had 12 points while Fred Starks led all scorers with 21. Permian, which had erased a nine-point deficit to tie the game at end of regulation, got 14 points from both Curly Alford and Terry Williams and 10 from Jimmy Davis.

NHL Roundup

Islanders 7, Flyers 5

NEW YORK — Mike Bossy became the first National Hockey League player to score 40 goals in eight consecutive seasons as he collected a goal and four assists Tuesday night, leading the New York Islanders to a wild 7-5 victory over the Philadelphia Flyers.

Bossy, who is bearing down on his eighth 50-goal season in as many years in the NHL, connected for No. 40 at 8:26 of the second period when he blasted a 35-foot slapshot over the stick of Flyers' goaltender Darren Jensen.

Bossy's linemates, John Tonelli and Brent Sutter, also had big nights as the Islanders won for the third time, with one tie, in four meetings with Philadelphia this season. The third-place Islanders trailed second-place Phialdelphia by five points in the Patrick Division.

Capitals 4, Maple Leafs 1

TORONTO — Gaetan Duchesne scored once and added an assist in the third period Tuesday night to spark the Washington Capitals to a victory over the Toronto Maple Leafs.

The Capitals took a 1-0 lead into the third period and withstood a brief Toronto comeback bid before Duchesne deflected defenseman Larry Murphy's shot past Tim Berhardt for his 13th goal of the season at 3:20.

Dave Christian's 19th goal of the season at 11:44 gave the Capitals a 3-0 cushion before Toronto's Peter Ihnacak spoiled Pat Riggin's bid for his third shutout of the year with a goal at 13:26.

Rod Langway scored his second goal of the season into an empty net with two seconds remaining.

Flames 4, Canadiens 2

MONTREAL — Paul Reinhart broke a 2-2 tie with a power-play goal at 13:53 of the third period and Lanny McDonald scored his second goal into an empty net in the dying seconds, enabling the Calgary Flames to defeat the Montreal Canadiens.

Reinhart's goal — his 18th — came only 41 seconds after Montreal defenseman Chris Chelios was penalized for putting his hand on the puck in the Montreal zone. At the time, the Canadiens already had a man in the penalty box — Mike McPhee, who had been sent off with the Flames' Charlie Bourgeois for roughing less than a minute earlier.

With the 4-3 manpower advantage, the Flames deftly passed the puck inside the Montreal blue line. Al MacInnis and Kent Nilsson set up the play, with Nilsson sending a pass to Lanny McDonald, who slid it across the goal mouth to Reinhart. The Flames' defenseman had only to crack the puck into the empty side to the right of goaltender Steve Penney.

Kings 7, Rangers 5

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Center Bernie Nicholls scored two goals Tuesday night and the Los Angeles Kings held off the New York Rangers at the Forum.

Trailing 3-2 in the second period, the Kings scored four unanswered goals to take a three-goal advantage into the final period.

Cougars need antifreeze to fight cold game starts

HOUSTON (AP) — The University of Houston basketball team has stalled at the start of its last four games and run out of gas each time at the end.

The Cougars will take a four-game losing string into tonight's Southwest Conference game at Hofheinz Pavilion against the Texas Longhorns.

Part of Houston's problem has been their cold start in each of the last four games.

Houston combined for six of 30 shots during the first five minutes in the consecutive losses to Texas A&M, Southern Methodist and Texas Christian and went three for 15 in the first 10 minutes of a 77-76 loss to Illinois on Sunday.

"I think they run out of gas trying to come from behind all the time," said Coach Guy Lewis, who faces the possibility of a five-game losing streak for the second time in his career.

"When you are up by 10 it's no problem but when you are three down it's catastrophe," Lewis said.

The Cougars, 13-8, also have been victims of hot shooters during their losing streak.

Illinois had a double-barreled arsenal of Anthony Welch and Doug Altenberger. Welch hit eight of eight in the first half and Altenberger was six of six in the first half.

In an earlier game, TCU's Dennis Nutt scored 28 points against the Cougars and wished he could play all his games in Hofheinz.

"The rim looks 10 feel around for me here," said Nutt, who has had a series of good shooting performances in Hofheinz.

Two of Houston's current losses have been in Hofheinz where the Cougars have lost only 25 games in 14 years.

"The rim is so soft, the ball just bounces off and into the net," Altenberger said. "I guess they need it to be soft because they jam so much."

The Cougars' Phi Slama Jama dunking show also has fallen on hard times with only sophomore Rickie Winslow continuing the tradition with a team high 38.

A year ago, when the Cougars advanced to the Final Four for the third straight time, Akeem Olajuwon led the team with 85 dunks of the team's 194 for the full season.

Team meetings have also been ineffective.

Cougar co-captains Eric Dickens and Reid Gettys called for a team meeting following Saturday's 85-80 loss to TCU.

"They played about the same but I still like team meetings and have always encouraged them," Lewis said. "It's good for the players to be communicating."

Tech double teams Midwestern

LUBBOCK (AP) — The backcourt duo of Bubba Jennings and Tony Benford combined for 40 points Tuesday night to lift Texas Tech to an 86-74 over scrappy Midwestern State in a non-conference college basketball game.

Jennings hit 13 of his game-high 23 points in the first half as the Red Raiders broke open a tight game with a 14-7 spurt to close out the period and grab a 45-34 lead.

Benford added a season-high 17 points for Tech, which upped its record to 13-7.

Midwestern, which pulled no closer than 10 points in the second half, was paced by Robert Harris' 16 points. Ricky Cobb added 14 and Frank Rainer chipped in 13 for the Indians, who fell to 13-9.

The only other Raider in double figures was Vince Taylor, who scored 11.

Lady Longhorns defeat Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — Top-ranked Texas used a 15-2 spurt midway through the second half Tuesday night to break open a close game and coast to a 79-60 victory over Houston, extending the Lady Longhorns' skein of consecutive Southwest Conference wins to 90.

Junior Fran Harris led the charge with 19 points and sophomore Andrea Lloyd added 18 points and 10 rebounds for Texas, which improved its record to 19-2 for the season and 10-0 in league play.

Houston's Sonya Watkins scored a career-high 31 points to lead the Cougars, 13-6 and 5-4. Monica Lamb, Houston's 6-5 center, was held to just six points and three rebounds before fouling out.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Thursday, February 7, 1985

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: The changes that take place now and in spring will affect your financial holdings in a positive way. Your apprehension over a child or job fades. A friend comes to your aid when the chips are down. Get out and about more. Socializing boosts both your spirits and career. You have a lot to be thankful for. Forget past mistakes. Romance looks very rewarding. Sir Thomas More, authors Charles Dickens and Sinclair Lewis, music man Eubie Blake, actor Eddie Bracken, the Baltimore Orioles' Benny Ayala, the Los Angeles Dodgers' Burt Hooten and relief ace Dan Quisenberry were born on this date.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Stick to your plans and this can be a highly productive work day. Others seek you out. Listen to what they have to say -- your help will be deeply appreciated. Romance sizzles.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A business trend looks promising. You are able to put a long-cherished plan into operation. Do not neglect your personal relationships. Your friends and family miss you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Things take a turn for the better where business or romance is concerned. You feel inspired and accomplish a lot. Your co-workers are eager to hop on your bandwagon.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): New business makes this a happy, productive day. Mate or partner is a tremendous asset. Put your intellect to good use and others will be dazzled. Pay more attention to appearances.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Listen to what your sixth sense tells you and make new gains in business and romance. Everything goes according to plan for a change. You come up with some terrific ideas. Consult experts.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be a good listener. Your patient, sympathetic nature brings out the best in others. Curb a tendency to act restless and you will find the domestic harmony you seek.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A broken promise is upsetting but could eventually work to your advantage. Curb a tendency to eat or drink too much. Your powers of persuasion are at their peak. Approach influential people.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be open to suggestions. Good advice helps you get ahead. A close friend appreciates your impulsive nature. Aim high if searching for a new romantic partner. The ideal mate shares your values.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Show greater initiative and you will earn the respect of those in authority. Use your artistic talents to decorate a home or office. You thrive in a peaceful, harmonious environment.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Work at a steady pace today. Lunching with an old friend puts you in a cheerful mood. Postpone making any major personal decisions. A good evening to relax at home.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): An excellent day to widen your social horizons. Several surprises are part of the picture. Shoppers find wonderful bargains. Discuss your feelings with someone close to your heart.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Curb a tendency to over-react. Acting on impulse could lead to embarrassment later on. A Scorpio enters the romantic picture. Go slow on making a commitment; you need to know a lot more.

Opening lead: Seven of ♠.

With two rounds to play in the 1984 European Junior Championships, Italy led France by a substantial margin. The penultimate round saw a clash between the two leaders, and this was the first board of the match.

The French reached a heart slam on the auction shown. After North's reverse, South made a strength-showing forcing bid in spades. A cue-bidding sequence followed, and East doubled four spades for the lead. That was a decision that was to come back to haunt him later in the play.

Against six hearts West duly led a spade. Declarer won in dummy, came to hand with the king of diamonds, in the process felling the queen, and ruffed a spade on the table. He cashed the king of trumps, overtook the queen with the ace and led two more rounds to reduce the hand to this position:

The distribution was reasonably clear. Declarer cashed the ace and jack of diamonds, then ruffed a diamond in hand. East had wanted to score the king of spades, and now declarer obliged him. He exited with his queen of spades to throw East on lead, and the forced club return presented declarer with his contract.

In the other room the Italians languished in game and made only 11 tricks, so the French picked up a substantial swing. They went on to win the match and the championship.

Columbia selling Rockefeller Center land

NEW YORK (AP) — The Rockefellers have agreed to pay $400 million for the 11.7 acres of land under Rockefeller Center, which they have rented from Columbia University for the past 50 years.

The prime mid-Manhattan real estate is located between 48th and 51st streets, from Fifth to Sixth avenues, and the original 13 buildings of Rockefeller Center still sit on it. They include the RCA building, Radio City Music Hall, the Associated Press building and the ice-skating rink.

The announcement that the Rockefeller Group would buy the land from Columbia was made Tuesday, one day after the Columbia Board of Trustees approved the sale. The transaction, which works out to more than $34 million an acre, is expected to be completed later this month.

Columbia University plans to invest the proceeds of the sale in government securities and expects to make quadruple the $11.1 million it been receiving in rent each year from the Rockefellers.

For the Rockefellers, the deal "creates a whole new era of opportunity," with the possibility of improvements and new construction for the complex, said Richard Voell, the Rockefeller Group's president and chief executive officer.

Columbia had owned the land since 1814. John D. Rockefeller Jr. rented it and in 1931, despite the Depression, started work on the complex.

Thirteen buildings were built on the Columbia parcel. Later, six other buildings were erected on another 11 acres owned by the Rockefellers and their tenants. That part of the development was unaffected by the sale.

Garlic lovers gather for Kentucky festival

Lewin

COVINGTON, Ky. (AP) — There's no mistaking true garlic lovers — they know who they are and, usually, so does everyone else.

About 150 revelers jammed a northern Kentucky restaurant Tuesday night for a festival dedicated to the fragrant bulb.

The highlight of the evening was the naming of Miss Garlic 1985, Helen Lewin, a 64-year-old Fort Wright woman who mugged for the cameras with a giant papier-mache garlic.

"It's amazing. These people can work up a frenzy over this stuff," said Mick Noll, owner of Mick Noll's Covington Haus. "The interest is more than I anticipated."

Noll, who operates a German-American restaurant across the Ohio River from Cincinnati, decided on the Garlic Fest as his way of participating in Cincinnati's annual Italian Week. Although other cities have garlic festivals, he figured it was a good chance to celebrate the seasoning here.

Carson

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — Ed McMahon could have altered his usual "Here's Johnny" introduction of his boss Johnny Carson to "Hairs Johnny" when Carson strolled on stage with a beard after 23 years as a bare-faced host of the "Tonight Show."

"I've been off the past week," Carson explained on Tuesday night's show. "First weekend, I didn't do much. That's why I didn't shave. It's kind of nice to rest the face. Two days later, I was still resting the face."

Carson, 59, said the scruffy, salt-and-pepper whiskers would be temporary, however, because they would clash with some of his stock comedy characters.

Carson has only once deviated from the tailored suits and sports jackets he wears each night. That was years ago, when Carson showed up in a trendy Nehru jacket, which "lasted one night," said publicist Joe Bleeden.

Shields

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — Princeton University sophomore and actress-model Brooke Shields will lead an aerobic dance class for students, faculty members and alumni starting next week, a university spokesman said.

"It is my understanding that she wanted to do this," spokesman George Eager said on Tuesday.

Ms. Shields will teach two classes a week for a maximum of 35 students, Eager said, refusing to say when the classes are scheduled to begin or how many people have signed up for the non-credit course.

Eager said the course will be held on campus, but would not elaborate because "we might be creating a security problem."

Eager said students frequently lead intramural, extra-curricular activities in which they have expertise.

The second semester of the academic year began this week at the Ivy League school.

NEW YORK (AP) — History has repeated for Simon Estes, the bass-baritone who sang the "Porgy and Bess" role of crippled Porgy on crutches eight years ago in Zurich.

Estes, who tore cartilage and tendons in his knee in rehearsal Tuesday, said he would appear in crutches again in tonight's Metropolitan Opera premiere of the George Gershwin folk opera.

Stage directions call for Porgy, who is onstage for much of the three-hour opera, to play the role entirely on his knees.

Estes, who said his injury was "extremely painful," said he sang many of more than 30 Zurich performances on crutches after a similar knee injury in 1977.

MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP) — Singer Margaret Whiting, who first sang the hit song "Moonlight in Vermont" for lonely GIs 42 years ago, made her first visit to the state this week.

Miss Whiting introduced the song in 1943. It was composed by Karl Suessdorf, with lyrics by John Blackburn.

"I think it took off because the war was on. Men and women abroad heard it, and it reminded them of home," Miss Whiting said.

On Tuesday, she sang the song to a joint session of the state Legislature and Gov. Madeleine Kunin signed a "Moonlight in Vermont Day" proclamation.

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Construction of the Ronald Reagan Presidential Library here could begin in 1987, subject to the approval of Reagan and Stanford University trustees.

The site overlooking the university chosen by a trustees was unincorporated Stanford property next to the school's Center for Advanced Study in Behavioral Sciences.

The site would have less impact on neighboring communities than the other two proposed sites because it can be reached by extending an existing road to the school's golf course, said Stanford vice president Robert Frelen.

He cited studies from other presidential libraries that show about 66 vehicles would visit the library every hour, mostly during weekends and off-peak commuter hours.

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Self-styled "country outlaw" singer Willie Nelson has run afoul of the Internal Revenue Service, which has accused him of civil tax fraud and is seeking more than $2.2 million in unpaid taxes and penalties.

The agency claims that during the four years from 1975 through 1978, Nelson significantly understated his taxable income through under-reported earnings and improper deductions.

According to an IRS "Notice of Deficiency" sent last October to Nelson and his wife, Connie, "all or part" of the alleged underpayment of taxes for 1975 through 1977 "is due to fraud, which is attributable to Willie H. Nelson."

As a consequence, the agency assessed a 50 percent penalty — a total of $730,597 — for the alleged fraud.

In addition, the IRS assessed another penalty of more than $23,000 for 1978, charging that part of the underpayment of tax for that final year "is due to negligence or intentional disregard" of federal tax rules and regulations.

MOSCOW (AP) — The 48th game of the world chess championship between title holder Anatoly Karpov and challenger Garri Kasparov has been postponed until Friday because Karpov is taking a timeout, the official news agency Tass reported today.

The game had been set for today.

Karpov leads 5-2 in the match, and needs one more win to retain his title.

The 48th game already has been delayed twice by technical timeouts in connection with a change of venue for the long match. Chess officials have moved play from the Hall of Columns to the Sport Hotel in southern Moscow.

Knicks snap 15-game losing skid, beat Sonics by two

Associated Press

Although Seattle isn't exactly home sweet home for the New York Knicks, it turned out to be a good spot to break a 15-game road losing streak.

The Knicks, who in their last two road games blew a 15-point lead before losing by one against the Los Angeles Lakers and allowed the Golden Warriors to end their 16-game losing streak, almost lost another heartbreaker Tuesday night before defeating the Seattle SuperSonics 110-108.

It was New York's first National Basketball Association victory away from home since Nov. 23 and only its third in 25 road games this season.

"It's been a long time," said Knicks forward Bernard King, who scored 12 of New York's last 20 points and finished with 29 points overall.

"It means a lot to get a win on the road," said Darrell Walker, who added 18 points and eight assists for the Knicks.

Referring to Seattle's late rally from a 10-point deficit in the second half, Walker said, "The home team always is going to make a run at you. We held them off, and Bernard hit some key buckets down the stretch."

Lakers 113, Rockets 104

Los Angeles got a season-high 40 points from Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and beat the Rockets in Houston for the 12th straight time despite sterling performances from Twin Towers Ralph Sampson and Akeem Olajuwon.

Sampson had 33 points and 15 rebounds and Olajuwon 30 points and 13 rebounds for the Rockets.

The Lakers scored 14 straight points late in the third quarter to take an 88-80 lead, but Houston rallied to tie the score 98-98. But a three-point play by Abdul-Jabbar with 3:31 left put the Lakers in front for good.

Celtics 110, Bulls 106

Boston won for the 40th time in 49 games, beating Chicago behind the strong stretch play of Larry Bird and Kevin McHale.

McHale scored 12 of his 29 points in the final six minutes and Bird collected 13 of his 27 in the fourth quarter to help the Celtics hand Chicago its first home loss since Dec. 29, a span of eight games.

Rookie all-star Michael Jordan scored 41 points for the Bulls.

Suns 108, Nuggets 103

Walter Davis, playing only his second game of the season because of a knee injury, scored 10 of his 14 points for Phoenix in the fourth quarter, including the go-ahead jumper with 1:05 left against Denver.

Davis hit a baseline jumper to give the Suns a 104-103 lead 25 seconds after Alex English, who led the Nuggets with 31 points, scored Denver's final points with two free throws.

Nets 119, Pistons 117

New Jersey cooled off Detroit as Buck Williams scored a career-high 33 points and grabbed 17 rebounds.

The Pistons, who had won 14 of their previous 16 outings, managed a 106-106 tie with 5:15 left, but Williams scored four straight points to put the Nets ahead to stay. Detroit had a chance to send the game into overtime, but Williams got his last rebound when Isiah Thomas missed a shot in the lane with two seconds remaining.

Blazers 126, Jazz 106

Mychal Thompson scored 21 points and rookie Sam Bowie equalled his season-high with 19 to lead Portland to an easy triumph over Utah.

The Trail Blazers raced to a 35-19 lead after one quarter, maintained the 16-point advantage at halftime and led by as many as 29 points in the third period.

Mavericks 112, Hawks 103

Jay Vincent scored 16 of his 28 points in the second quarter to help Dallas pull away from Atlanta in a game played at New Orleans.

The game was tied 28-28 after the first 12 minutes, but the Hawks never caught up after the Mavericks outscored them 26-16 for a 54-44 halftime lead.

Kings 135, Spurs 116

Eddie Johnson scored 30 points against San Antonio as Kansas City ended its four-game losing streak and posted its largest victory margin of the season.

The Kings turned the game around in the second period, outscoring the Spurs 31-14 to turn an eight-point deficit into a 61-52 halftime lead.

Syracuse coach upset with ref's call that cost Orangemen victory

Associated Press

Coach Jim Boeheim of sixth-ranked Syracuse knew his team had been beaten, but he was not entirely sure by whom.

Boeheim watched the Orangemen lose 67-66 at Boston College in a Big East Conference game Tuesday night on two Michael Adams foul shots with one second left. Then, he cried foul himself.

"Players are supposed to decide the games, not the referees," Boeheim said.

Adams was awarded the two shots after taking a long pass from Trevor Gordon, then throwing up a long, desperation shot that fell short of the basket. As he dribbled in for the shot, he collided with Syracuse forward Andre Hawkins, who was called for a blocking foul by the referees.

"The guy's 40 feet from the basket, throwing the ball in the air," Boeheim said. "It's no foul. If anything, it's a charge."

Adams' two free throws came after Syracuse's freshman center, Rony Seikaly, missed the front end of a one-and-one with six seconds to play.

Syracuse now is 15-4 and 6-4 in the conference, while Boston College is 16-5 and 5-5 in the Big East. The Orangemen had won four in a row, including a victory over No.2 Georgetown.

While disagreeing sharply with Boeheim's account of the final play, Boston College Coach Gary Williams was sympathetic.

"It's a tough call, I'm sure, for Syracuse, but we had a couple of tough ones, too," Williams said, pointing out that "Syracuse shot 22 free throws, we shot 10."

Dwayne "Pearl" Washington led Syracuse with 17 points, and Rafael Addison had 16. Adams and Roger McCready scored 16 points apiece for Boston College.

THE ONLY other game Tuesday night involving a ranked team also was in the Big East where 19th-ranked Villanova defeated Connecticut 79-71 at Storrs, Conn.

Villanova held off a mild Connecticut rally, getting 23 points from Dwayne McClain and another 19 from Harold Pressley to improve its record to 15-5 and 7-3 in the Big East. McClain, second in the conference in shooting percentage, hit 10 of his 12 shots, and Pressley was 6-for-6 from the field.

Villanova never trailed in the game, although Connecticut cut the margin to six points late in the contest.

Greenwood girls romp; Boys lose to McCamey

From Staff Reports

McCAMEY — The No. 2 ranked Greenwood girls basketball team kept their steady drive toward a Class 2A playoff berth running smoothly Tuesday night with a 71-68 victory over McCamey.

Meanwhile, things are getting a little rockier for the Greenwood boys as they dropped as they dropped a 40-36 decision to fall from the district ranks of second half unbeaten teams.

The Lady Rangers clinched a bi-district playoff berth in the first half of the split-season by posting a 5-0 record. They are 3-0 in the second half and have recorded a 22-1 record enroute to their No. 2 state ranking.

Deonna Dean topped Greenwood's scoring efforts with 20 points while Marla Morgette added 15 and Kendra Turnbow added 12. For McCamey, Michele Tesch was the top scorer with nine points.

Currently, Greenwood and Wall are half a game behind district leaders Reagan County and McCamey because of Friday's snowstorm which postponed the two team's meeting. They'll make up the deficit tonight when they meet at Greenwood at 6 p.m. 7:30 p.m.

Air Force steps aside so UTEP can schedule SMU

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. (AP) — The Air Force Academy football opener against Texas-El Paso — originally scheduled for Sept. 7 — has been moved up to Aug. 31, Labor Day weekend, the academy announced Tuesday.

"UTEP requested the change in order to play Southern Methodist University on Sept. 7. I felt that, if possible, we should accommodate a Western Athletic Conference school with this schedule change," said Col. John Clune, the academy's athletic director.

"It will also work well for the academy because Aug. 31 (a Saturday) is parents' weekend at the academy, as well as Labor Day weekend, and we hope to have a large crowd in Falcon Stadium for our opener."

"It will also give us two weeks to get ready for our game Sept. 14 against Wyoming in Laramie. Coach (Fisher) DeBerry has indicated to me that a team makes the most progress between the first and second games of the year and the open date hopefully will be another advantage for the Falcons."

In all, the 1985 Falcon football schedule features six home games. The games and their dates are: UTEP, Aug. 31; Rice, Sept. 21; Notre Dame, Oct. 5; Utah, Oct. 26; San Diego State, Nov. 2; and Army, Nov. 9.

Rounding out the Falcons' 12-game schedule are road games at Wyoming, Sept. 14; New Mexico, Sept. 28; Navy, Oct. 12; Colorado State, Oct. 19, Brigham Young, Nov. 16; and Hawaii, Nov. 23.

Foreman picks boxing to go the distance against critics

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Former heavyweight champion George Foreman believes that attempts to ban boxing are futile.

"Boxing will never end," he said Tuesday. "People will get tired of professional football and basketball. They're just watered down boxing, anyway. Everybody needs a pure shot of scotch sooner or later."

Foreman, now a minister in Houston, also doesn't feel that professional boxers should be required to wear headgear.

"Boxing is a rough sport and it takes rough people to compete," said the 1968 Olympic gold medal winner. "Some people are born rough and can handle it. Others can't."

The American Medical Association and other groups have called for the abolition of boxing because of what they view as the inherent dangers in the sport. Others have called for improved safety equipment in boxing.

Foreman, in Omaha to honor a Boys Town High School student who won a college scholarship, said he exercises regularly, but exhibiting an ample waistline, he indicated his efforts were not entirely successful.

"I get tired of holding that stomach in," joked the 36-year old former titleholder, who weighs nearly 300 pounds. "I want to let it all hang out."

New rules for old game

By RENEE TAWA
Dallas Times Herald

LEWISVILLE (AP) — In the spirit of oversize tennis rackets, large baseball mitts and short downhill skis, golfer Bob O'Neal has created an edge for the weekend duffer.

Neal, president of Dallas-based American Golf, has thrown out some of the hallowed traditions of the game and replaced them with 36 special rules to give high handicappers a chance at par.

On courses that adopt American Golf rules, cups are 6 inches in diameter instead of 4¼, and players may move the ball away from obstacles such as trees, among other things.

The Oak Ridge Park Municipal Golf Course in Lewisville is the only Dallas area course that offers American Golf, and there reportedly are 20 other courses nationwide that have followed suit.

Purists may object to bending the rules that have not changed much since the game first was played in a cow pasture in Scotland more than 300 years ago. But O'Neal, who founded the company in November, said there is nothing easy about his version.

On a recent sunny day, for instance, O'Neal stood on an Oak Ridge putting green and watched a golfer miss an American Golf hole.

"You see, it's still difficult," O'Neal said. "It's not a gimme putt, is it? You have to keep good mechanics because the 6-inch hole tends to lull you."

O'Neal, a 58-year-old retired pharmaceutical company president, concocted American Golf after five years of study and 25 years as an above-par player. He has bought color ads in national golf magazines and sent information packages to 13,000 golf courses. Pros who sign up pay a $400 membership fee and monthly dues of $120 to $150 a month, depending on whether they have nine or 18 holes. In return, they get the oversize cups, rule books and consulting services.

O'Neal predicted his game will become par for the course within 10 years. The game is not intended to replace the version sanctioned by the United States Golf Association, he said. American Golf is designed to appeal to the 13 million players who shoot 88 to 120 rather than the 4 million who shoot scratch to 87, O'Neal said.

OAK RIDGE golf pro Bob Veal said the game is just plain fun.

"We've had such good response not only from the high handicappers but my group itself. We shoot around par," he said.

With the larger cup, the average golfer should make 96 percent of all three-foot putts, 70 percent of six-footers and 50 percent of 12-footers, O'Neal said.

And the obstacle rule allows golfers to improve a ball's lie (the place where it lands) by a club length in any direction except closer to the hole. American Golf also allows players to take a practice swing in a sand trap and remove twigs or others obstacles in the putting line.

For golfers like Walt Casey, who plays American Golf twice a week at Lewisville, the game is the best thing since metal replaced hickory in shafts.

"We never will be good golfers," Casey, 76 admitted. "It (American Golf rules) gets it where we can enjoy it. As long as they got it, I'll play it this way."

O'Neal acknowledges that American Golf has critics, but he defends the rules as valid. "The person who understands golf knows it's extremely difficult," he said. "You can take a person who never bowled in his life, and he can get a strike. You'll never get someone who's never played golf who can go and make par."

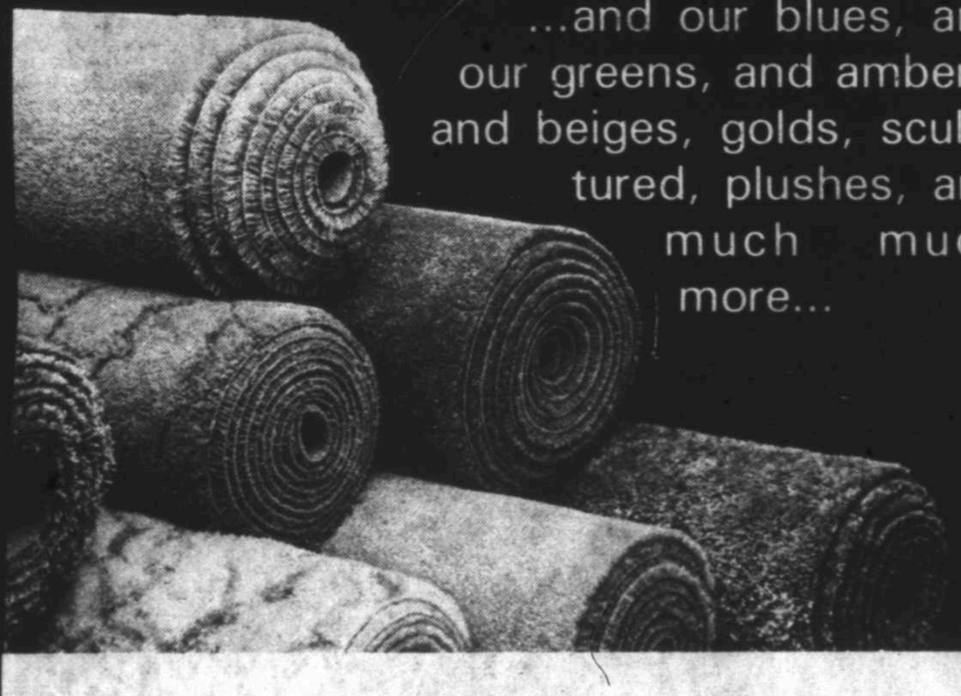

ESPN adds five commentators to USFL broadcasts

NEW YORK (AP) — Jim Simpson and Paul Maguire, ESPN's primary team for telecasts of United States Football League telecasts for the past two seasons, will be joined by five commentators this season, the cable network announced Tuesday.

In addition to Simpson, Roger Twibell and Fred Manfra will handle play-by-play and Mike Adamle, Marv Levy and Ed Biles will join Maguire as color analyists. Don Heinrich, who worked for ESPN the past two years, has been dropped.

ESPN will televise an average of three USFL games a week

Odessa hospital sues state, radiologist

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

AUSTIN — Odessa Medical Center Hospital "forced the issue and that's unfortunate" by filing suit against the state of Texas and an Odessa radiologist, the assistant chief of the state attorney general's antitrust division said Tuesday.

Responding to allegations made by MCH and doctors with Odessa Radiology Group in the suit filed Tuesday morning in a Travis County district court, Assistant Attorney General Steven Baron denied his office had "threatened litigaton under the 1983 Antitrust Act unless its demands were met."

Baron also denied the suit's claims that the AG's office "demanded that the contract be amended." He insisted that the Jan. 22 letter he sent to hospital and other county officials was meant as an alternative to court action.

Since October, the antitrust division has been investigating the long-standing exclusive contract between the radiology group and MCH. "We have concluded that the contract unnecessarily restricts the freedom of hospital patients and their physicians to select a radiologist of their choice," said the letter.

The suit names the state and Dr. V.T. Reddy as defendants. Reddy's application to be added to the MCH radiology staff was denied in April 1984.

The Ector County hospital is joined in the lawsuit by five members of Odessa Radiology Group — the partnership which has provided exclusive radiology treatment to MCH patients for more than 20 years.

Drs. Robert F. Lewis, Ralph F. Bowman, Charles C. Nicolette, James A. Sheehan and Radames Martinez Jr. are listed as the members of ORG in the suit.

MCH and the radiologists do not dispute that the contract is exclusive. "The hospital agreed not to appoint any other person to staff the radiology department except as provided by the contract," says the suit.

Their position is that the exclusive contract, which is not uncommon practice at hospitals across the country, is necessary to:

— Ensure complete and continuous physician coverage in the radiology department and emergency room.

— Guarantee radiology services to all patients, whether or not they can afford to pay.

— Provide "smooth and efficient operation" of the department.

In other cases, the U.S. Supreme Court has ruled exclusive contracts are acceptable at hospitals for effective administration.

Baron suggested the situation was different in the Midland/Odessa area because of the lack of competition for medical services, such as radiology.

While larger markets encourage competition, Baron said that in this area "the choices are limited."

"The reality is that hospital patients and their physicians for all practical purposes are captive and must use ORG for their radiological needs," said Baron's letter. "Such a complete lack of choice cannot promote high-quality, low-cost health care."

Baron said a countersuit was a "possibility." While admitting his office was concerned with Reddy's problems, "Our concerns go well beyond Dr. Reddy's particular situation."

The contract between ORG and MCH is for one year, with an automatic renewal clause.

In the Jan. 22 letter, Baron suggested this contract be amended so:

— Non-ORG radiologists can schedule work or use the MCH radiology equipment after proving "professional competence and qualifications" by formal application.

— Non-ORG radiologists be allowed to use the facilities when that doctor is requested by a patient.

— Use of the MCH facilities be split so ORG retains at least 50 percent of the time each month.

The letter also suggested the automatic renewal provision be eliminated from the contract and MCH solicit bids on the service each year before awarding the contract.

Reddy, who continues to practice in Odessa, threatened to file suit against MCH in April 1984, but no suit is on record.

Also last week, three of ORG's current radiologists, MCH Administrator Sam Glenney and Board Chairman John Commander were named in a lawsuit filed by a former hospital employee. The suit lists more than $2.6 million in damages and charges the defendants with conspiring to have 55-year-old Raye Delcore fired and with slandering her.

School renovation bid OK'd

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

A low bid submitted by Lee George Construction Inc. of Big Spring was accepted by Midland school trustees for the $1 million renovation of San Jacinto Junior High School.

The $1,012,830 bid was $28,770 over the original estimate and $16,970 less than the second low bid submitted by Oasis Builders Inc.

Other bids were submitted by J.W. Cooper Construction Inc., HBF Construction Inc., Munn Construction Inc., Pace Construction Company Inc., and Rose and Son Inc.

During a special meeting of trustees Tuesday, architect Terry Harden, Midland representative of Geren Associates/CRS, said the seven month time schedule would allow the project to be completed by Sept. 1 if construction proceeds immediately.

Monies from a 1982 bond issue will be used to finance the project, according to Dr. James Maley, assistant to the superintendent and board of trustees.

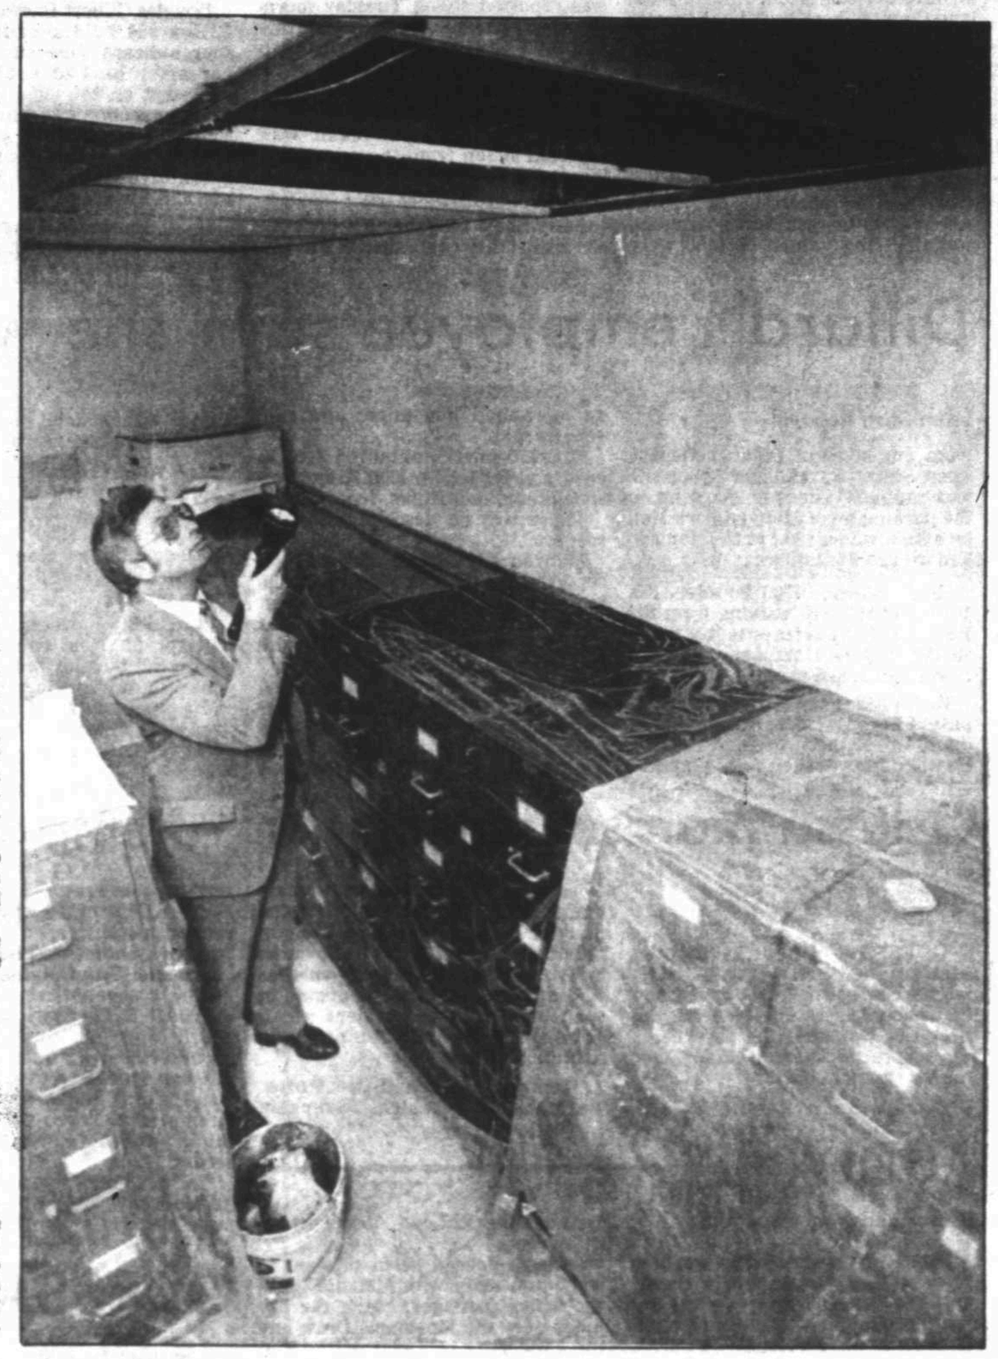

"We conferred with our attorney and he advised us that the money from the bond issue would extend to this project," Maley said.

Plans for the remodeling and expansion of the building include a 10,400-square-foot administration and classroom addition located on the north side of the existing classroom area between the auditorium and cafeteria. The entrance to the new administrative offices will serve as the main entrance to the school. The existing administrative offices will be remodeled to provide additional classroom space as well as a book and conference room.

Furthermore, the plans call for a 1,440-square foot addition to the existing band room, treating all exterior windows with insulation and stucco to prevent leaking, replacing 425 light fixtures within the building, creating 14 additional staff parking places in an area located west of the kitchen and resurfacing the existing parking lot.

The architectural drawings also specify narrowing and paving an existing island in the east-side parking lot to prevent unnecessary maintenance, Maley said.

Midland County Sheriff's Chief Deputy Robert Settles peers into a leaky area in the ceiling of the Central Files and Records Room in the basement of the courthouse.

Midland County Courthouse leaks still a problem

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Water leaks which have caused spotting and occasional minor flooding of the sheriff's department in the Midland County Courthouse's split-level basement are still springing forth.

On Tuesday, water was dripping into the sheriff's Central Files and Records Room and onto four-drawer filing cabinets, which were protected by sheets of clear plastic.

"I've come in here a couple of times, and it was soaked," said Special Services Capt. George Thompson.

"The problem has been here many years," noted Chief Deputy Robert Settles.

"Up periscope," jested Lt. Hugh "Buzz" Buzzell, who briefly ducked into the wet room.

Sheriff Gary Painter noted the "leaks are a continuing problem."

Midland County Commissioners have contended with courthouse leaks since 1974, when the 1929-30-vintage courthouse was renovated and expanded by the addition of a column-supported fifth-floor jail. The commissioners had consulted with the building contractor, J.W. Cooper Construction Co. of Odessa, and Midland architect Joe Bill Pierce in trying to stymie the leaks before they finally approved and accepted the renovated building.

"It's leaked from the time we finished the jail," said Commissioner Win Brown. "We've had all kinds of experts...to correct it. It has really been a headache for us. It's a problem."

Workers have used caulking material and applied sealant to the courthouse deck — the walkway — just above the split-level basement to stop the leaks. They even installed gutters and drains to route the water from ceilings to the drain buckets. One make-shift drainage system is in the sheriff's Evidence Vault.

"We caulked it and did everything we could think of," Brown said. "It defies logic."

He said Cooper had "made a stab at it."

"The leaks actually were never repaired," said Thompson, "but they diverted the water by putting in some drainage."

The leakage into the Central Files and Records Room seems to be coming from the walkway.

"We're getting to the point where we are going to have to do something or change things around and not use this room," Settles said.

A room near the Midland County Law Library had sprang leaks, as did the sheriff's office.

Only last week, a sweat joint in a ceiling-level waterpipe near the Communications Room in the sheriff's basement complex partially flooded the corridor and radio room.

"Any time you put a waterline in the ceiling, you're asking for it," noted Bill Harral, the county's consulting engineer.

The leaks are associated with rain and snow.

Earlier last month, County Clerk Rosenelle Cherry's first-floor west-side restroom flooded from sewage piped from the fifth-floor jail and somehow connected to the clerk's offices. In the past 10 years, the overflow has bubbled through commodes and, most recently, through a lavatory, and even seeped into the adjoining Justices of the Peace Courtroom. The commissioners are considering repairing the apparent plumbing flaw.

Local medical group takes stand against proposed dump site

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

The Midland County Medical Society Tuesday took a stand against a proposed nuclear waste dump in Deaf Smith County in the Texas Panhandle.

"It's a potential problem for people here in Midland," said Dr. Paul Talboys, president of MCMS. "The proposed dump site is located above the Ogalalla aquifier, a prime water source for several hundred thousand people living in West Texas."

According to the MCMS, the Department of Energy proposes to store 70,000 metric tons of high-level nuclear waste which "will be significantly radioactive for 100,000 years."

"The effectiveness of long-term storage technology for these periods of time is totally untested," said Talboys. "The medical society views that public health threat of any potential for radioactive contamination of the aquifier with extreme concern."

The resolution, passed at the MCMS's last monthly meeting, will be presented to the Texas Medical Association for adoption at its semi-annual meeting in April in San Antonio.

The dump site, near Hereford in Deaf Smith County, has also received the attention of Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, who is holding a planned hearing on the government proposal Monday at Hereford High School.

"I find it hard to believe that the Department of Energy would seriously consider planting a threat of this magnitude directly underneath the principal source of fresh water for the Southern High Plains," Bentsen said recently.

Bentsen also said that he had received complaints that the dump threatens to poison the Ogallala Aquifier and that land values have decreased in the area since the county was targeted as one of three areas in the nation under consideration for a repository for spent nuclear fuel and other nuclear waste.

Residents asked if they think 'We're better together'

Most Odessans say good things about Midland

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The natural rivalry sparked between two adjoining cities has been fueled through the years by man-made disputes.

From squabbles between ranchers in the late 1800s to the latest tussle over the Monahans Draw — Midland and Odessa are known for their feuding.

Odessans polled Tuesday on their feelings about Midland and its residents had mostly good things to say.

Some commented, then asked that their comments not be used. Others commented, but asked that their names not be used. And there were those with bad feelings about Midland.

The advertising campaign, "Midland/Odessa: We're Better Together," has been noticed, but few of those polled felt it had changed their attitude about Midland.

"It seems to be a clean town," said Michele Huebner, a 41-year-old student at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

Jeff Vinson

Jay Roberson

Robert Rothstein

Habib Pasdar

Despite the media campaign and moves for cooperation by political leaders, the rivalry between the two cities persisted, she said. "It'll probably take longer than a year, it's so ingrained."

"(Midland's) pretty far away," said Jeff Vinson, a 23-year-old Odessan who said he was job hunting Tuesday. "I've been there a couple of times."

Vinson said his feelings about Midland have not changed in the past year.

He, Ms. Huebner and several others joined in their criticism of Midland's road system.

Noting "I only go to Midland for concerts," 25-year-old laborer Jay Roberson said he often became lost trying to find his way around "the Tall City."

"If there is a rivalry, they're doing themselves a lot of harm," said Dr. Robert Rothstein, a 58-year-old professor of communication and education at UTPB.

"I think there's some hostility," he said, noting the hard feelings that remain over the struggle for UTPB, which was to be located at a midway point, but ended up in Odessa.

Some Midlanders' feelings 'in-between' about Odessa

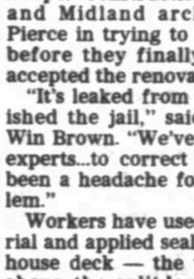

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

It's been a year since the "Midland/Odessa — We're better together" media campaign began. After a brief lull, those billboards, advertisements and radio and television commercials extolling the virtues of cooperation will begin again next month.

To see if modern marketing techniques have been able to put a dent in the two cities' traditional rivalry, the Reporter-Telegram asked 12 randomly selected Midlanders what they thought of Odessa. Some wanted to be more neighborly and some wanted to keep the feud going, but most fell somewhere in-between: I like Odessans well enough, they seemed to be saying, but I wouldn't want one to marry my sister.

"I think it's a good town," said Lupe Maskew, a homemaker who lives at 500 N. Terrell St. "I like Odessa — maybe just to visit."

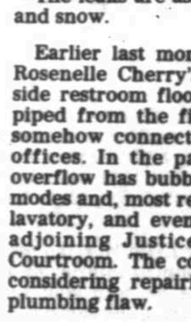

"It's OK, but I'd rather live in Midland," said Mona Samaniego, 503 N. Fort Worth St. Ms. Samaniego, a maintenance worker, said the media campaign was a good idea because the cities "are growing closer and closer together."

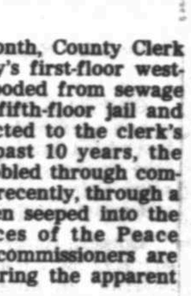

Dawn Kirby

Sam Valenzuela

Katie Kidd

Dave Johnstone

"They're like Fort Worth and Dallas," said Judy Bell, 4315 Neely Ave., who works at Grandy's. Ms. Bell thought the two cities should cooperate with each other instead of competing against each other, and Dawn Kerby, 4101 Crestgate St., agreed.

"They need to work together," said the homemaker, who approves of the media campaign: "Anytime you have positive publicity you have a positive reaction." Though a Midlander, Ms. Kerby thinks Odessa has at least one advantage over her hometown.

"I was over there this morning and I was amazed — I went from one end of town to the other without hitting a red light."

According to Sam Valenzuela, 1007 W. Washington Ave., relations have improved since he was a boy growing up in Midland.

"There was a boundary — you couldn't go to Odessa," said the truck driver. "Now teen-agers can go there and not get beat up."

Ruby E. Wright, 77, of Midland died Sunday at a local nursing home following a brief illness.

Services will be at 3 p.m. Thursday in the Thomas Funeral Home chapel with the Rev. George Ivy and the Rev. M.R. Thomason officiating. Burial will follow in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Thomas Funeral Home.

Mrs. Wright was born Sept. 18, 1907 in Hobson County. She was married to Ocie Wright Dec. 31, 1938 in Mount Vernon. They had lived in the Midland area since 1946. She was a member of the Church of God.

Survivors include her husband; two sons, Joe B. Scott and Glenn Wright, both of Midland; three brothers, Clyde Jones of Kerrville, Arnold Jones of Monroe, La., and Richard Byers of Garland; 16 grandchildren; and 20 great-grandchildren.

Pallbearers will be Carl Hollums, Cecil Hart, Fred Jones, Danny Pruitt, John Hendricks and Larry Oldham.

Mary Wilcox

BIG SPRING — Mary Wilcox, 87, of Big Spring died Tuesday.

Services will be at 11 a.m. Thursday in Nalley-Pickle and Welch Rosewood Chapel with burial in Mount Olive Memorial Park.

Mrs. Wilcox was a member of First Presbyterian Church and had been a lifetime resident of Big Spring.

Forrest Hart

CRANE — Forrest Hart, 70, of Crane died Monday in an Odessa nursing home.

Services were to be at 2 p.m. today in the Richard W. Box Funeral Home chapel with Bob Hawkins officiating. Burial was to be in the Crane County Cemetery under the direction of the Richard W. Box Funeral Home of Crane.

Hart was born March 19, 1914 in Stroud, Okla. He had been a resident of Crane for 19 years.

Survivors include two sons, Lloyd Hart of Midland and Michael Hart of Crane; a sister, Edith Winkleman of Suguine; a brother, Lloyd Hart of Odessa and five grandchildren.

Lois A. Hill

BIG SPRING — Lois A. Hill, 76, of Forsan died Monday in a Big Spring hospital.

Services will be at 2 p.m. Thursday in Nalley-Pickle and Welch Rosewood Chapel with burial in Trinity Memorial Park.

Mrs. Hill was a member of Sandsprings Church of Christ, had been employed at Hemphill-Wells and Webb Air Force Base, was a member of the American Legion Auxiliary Post No. 506 and had been a resident of Forsan since 1945.

Councilman Godfrey files for re-election

From Staff Reports

Godfrey

Councilman David Godfrey, who has held Place 3 on the Midland City Council for two years, announced he has filed for re-election, but for District 1 under the new single-member district plan.

An independent businessman, Godfrey said he is seeking re-election because he "would like to continue to work for the progress of Midland. Our new system of government will be a challenge to us all and will require experienced leadership, which I feel I can bring to the council."

The single-member districts will "be new and different, but I don't foresee any great difficulty" working under the concept, he said.

During the next two years, he would like to see the city budget balanced without tax increases and expects that goal could be reached by 1986.

"I feel we're moving toward that," he said. "We've come through some very difficult economic times which reflected the situation in the community. As a whole, we've turned the corner. Last year we made $36,000 and we had started the year with a $2.5 million projected deficit. We had to go back into the budget twice during the year. We could wind up with a surplus by the end of 1985."

A determining factor on that budget is sales tax revenue generated from the 1 cent charged by the city on all taxable items.

Godfrey feels the major accomplishments of the Midland City Council during his tenure include acquisition of a site for the new Midland Air Park at no cost to the taxpayers, the lease of 120,000 acres of water rights in Winkler and Ector counties for Midland, and the progress made in reconstruction of Midland streets, such as A and Garfield streets.

He has experience in oil and gas, ranching, banking and real estate. He also has served as chairman of the Reagan/Bush and Phil Gramm campaigns and is a member of the Chamber of Commerce, Midland County Bar Association, West Texas Chamber of Commerce, State Bar of Texas, First Baptist Church of Midland and the State Republican Executive Committee.

Godfrey is a former board member of the Midland Jaycees, Midland County March of Dimes, past president of the Midland County Young Republicans and volunteer for Midland United Way.

Godfrey and his wife Roxie, a former school teacher, have a son and a daughter.

Midland woman reports she was robbed

From Staff Reports

A Midland woman reported Tuesday night she was pulled from her car and robbed by two men and two women who pulled up behind her at an intersection, according to Midland County Sheriff's Office reports.

Sherry Ruth Sander, 4305 Andrews Highway No. 512, told sheriff's deputies she was at an intersection on Main Street at 10:30 p.m. when her car stalled. Four people, one holding an automatic weapon, drove up behind her and pulled her from her car, according to reports. About $300 in cash and a diamond solitaire ring valued at $400 were taken, she said.

Sheriff's deputies are searching for the suspects, who were known to Ms. Sander, according to reports.

A white 1978 Ford Thunderbird was reported stolen Tuesday morning from a residence at the Airline Mobile Home Park. According to Clara Franco Acosta, 867 Hawaiian, the car was taken from her residence between 8 a.m. and 9 a.m.

More than $750 in cash was reported stolen from the counter at Warfield Truck Terminal on FM 1788 and County Road 126.

Betty Shaw told sheriff's deputies she laid the cash down on the counter while working the cash register at about 5:30 p.m. Tuesday. When she turned back to the counter, an undisclosed amount of cash had been taken from the stack of money, reports said.

Douglas Gilbert Harwood of Route 7, Box 904, told sheriff's deputies four hubcaps were stolen from his car after he had a blowout and parked it on the side of FM 715 at the intersection of County Road 130. The hubcaps, valued at a total of $600, were taken from the 1977 Buick Riviera between 5:30 a.m. and 8:30 a.m. Tuesday.

Hazel Matthews, Route 1 Box 144 A 7, told sheriff's deputies a green air compressor was taken from her residence between 8 a.m. and 8:15 p.m. Tuesday. The loss was placed at $380.

A 16-year-old girl was reported missing Tuesday from her residence at the Westgate Mobile Home Park, Space 66. According to a report filed by James Rouse, Virginia Renee Rouse was last seen at her house at 1:30 p.m.

The girl was wearing a red coat, black T-shirt and jeans. She is described at 5-feet 8-inches tall, weighing 140 pounds with brown hair and brown eyes. The girl has a small scar on her right eye, according to reports.

Dillard's employee says she was mugged

From Staff Reports

An employee of Dillard's Department Store told Midland police she was mugged Tuesday morning in the parking lot of Midland Park Mall by a man who hit her in the stomach and shoved her into a car.

Emily Risner, 4700 Boulder, No. 1015, said she was walking from the Fairmont Apartments to work shortly before 11:30 a.m. when the man approached her.

He hit her in the stomach when he passed her right side, causing her to double over, according to reports. He then shoved her into a parked car, grabbed her purse and ran, reports said.

The $70 purse contained $131 in cash, a paycheck for $251.75 and personal items and papers, reports said.

There was no description of the suspect.

Mildred Chambers, 2804 Kessler, reported the theft of a gold and diamond ring which was given to a person Friday as collateral on a loan but was not returned as agreed. The ring is valued at $1,450.

Mrs. Juan Alderete, 731 N. Clay, told police her home was burglarized and $4,400 worth of items were taken. According to reports, entry was gained by breaking a window in a door with a metal object between 8:30 a.m. and 2:45 p.m. Tuesday.

Mrs. Alderete said she returned home from work to find a $300 microwave oven, $3,000 video cassette recorder, $300 television set, $1,000 gold dinner ring, $1,500 set of wedding rings and a $300 silver watch missing.

Donna Kay Loveless, 2600 N. Loop 250, Apt. 313, told police her apartment was burglarized between 10 p.m. Monday and 5 p.m. Tuesday and a $325 gold necklace was taken from a jewelry box.

There were no signs of forced entry.

Chuck McClure reported Tuesday an equalizer and amplifier valued at a total of $1,090 had been taken from the Master's Club, 3700 N. Edwards, sometime since Saturday. There were no signs of forced entry into the night club.

A police officer on patrol early this morning discovered a broken window at the Taylor Petroleum Co. gas station, 2500 W. Front. According to reports, Larry McCowin told police the window was valued at $200 and a plastic jug containing an undetermined amount of coins appeared to be the only item missing.

Odessa man sentenced for attempted capital murder

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — About 14 months after an undercover drug bust left two narcotics officers wounded and a suspected drug dealer dead, the second of two surviving defendants was sentenced Tuesday in an Ector County District Court.

Gerald Leon Hardin, 32, of Odessa, was sentenced to 15 years imprisonment for attempted capital murder as part of a plea bargain agreement. Hardin, also known as Kelly Grandstaff, still faces charges of criminally negligent homicide in connection with an accident which claimed the lives of three people in Austin.

Hardin was arrested Dec. 9 after leading police on a high-speed chase through northeast Odessa neighborhoods, which ended when his bullet-riddled truck stopped on a curb in front of an home on Tanglewood Dr.

Michael Grant Matheny, 33, died during a shootout at the LaQuinta Inn, 5001 E. Highway 80 in Odessa, which broke out during an undercover drug deal. Two undercover officers, Phil Harrold and Jim Dickson, were wounded as they attempted to force their way into the room where the deal was to occur.

The dead man's widow, Jana Denise Matheny, 22, was sentenced to three years in prison for attempted capital murder and later to eight years for delivery of cocaine. The two sentences are to run concurrently.

James Walter Torrence, 45, was indicted in February 1984 for delivery of cocaine to Ms. Matheny. Prosecutors have indicated the case against Torrence may not be strong enough to bring to court.

According to Ms. Matheny's testimony during her August 1984 trial, Torrance supplied the money used to purchase the cocaine and supplied Hardin and Matheny with the guns they were carrying Dec. 9.

Murder suspect out on bond

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — The 26-year-old Odessan charged with murder in connection with a Sunday night slaying was free on bond again this morning after being arrested Tuesday for attempted murder.

Odessan Harry Lynn Herring was arrested for attempted murder on a warrant alleging he wounded his estranged wife during the same incident in which Allen Dale Smith, 28, of Odessa, was shot to death.

Leslie Faye Herring, 28, was in stable condition at Medical Center Hospital, according to police.

Ms. Herring, the suspect's estranged wife, was wounded in the leg by Herring after he forced his way into a northside residence and found the woman and Smith in an upstairs bedroom, according to reports.

Herring was arrested Tuesday, but released after posting $10,000 bond. He had posted $30,000 bond after his arrest for the murder of Smith.

Herring was arrested by a sheriff's deputy who spotted the man walking near where the shooting occurred. According to reports, Smith was killed and Ms. Herring wounded at about 2:45 a.m. Sunday in the residence located at 1112 E. 52nd St. in Odessa.

According to police, he turned himself in after the second warrant was issued.

MIDLAND

Though he wishes "they wouldn't have so many killings over there," Valenzuela also approves of the media campaign. But Katie Kidd, 2300 N. A St., isn't sure it's such a good idea.

"I think it's irritated people — it just reinforces the idea that there's a difference" between the cities, said Ms. Kidd, an associate producer with a local production company. But she does think the cities should cooperate more.

"I like Odessa. I think they're really important to our economy. Like the campaign says, we're better together."

For Dave Johnstone, though, the cities are better off apart.

"They ought to stay separate. I just don't like Odessa — it just seems kind of sleazy to me," said Johnstone, P.O. Box 50402, a truck driver.

And Mike McLeod, 4508 Patman Pl., agreed.

"Odessa doesn't seem to want to work as a team with Midland," said the office manager, citing the disputes over the Monahans Draw and the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

"All of a sudden they kind of pull the rug out from under us (with UTPB) and stick it in Odessa," he said. "All this bickering — it seems like nothing's ever done to benefit both cities."

McLeod admits he might be prejudiced because he used to play football for Midland High School. But Kathy McCasland, 4402 Leddy Dr., is a sophomore at Lee High School, and she said she had nothing against Odessa.

"There's nothing wrong with it as far as I'm concerned. But I think we should have won that last football game."

ODESSA

"Cooperation seems to be very difficult between the two of them," said Rothstein, a resident of the Petroplex for the past 10 years.

He suggested the rivalry continued because leaders, not the people, were reacting to "some old hurts."

Already a convert himself, Rothstein said he hoped the media campaign had sparked cooperation in Midland/Odessa.

There were those with bad feelings about Midland.

"Here is better than over there," said Habib Pasdar, a 32-year-old restaurant manager in Odessa. Recalling his one year working in Midland, he said "They're just like businessmen, here they work together," he said.

Two men asked that their names not be used, but said they liked Midland. One credited the opening of State Highway 191 as a step toward bringing the two cities together.

A Monahans resident rated Midland over Odessa and questioned the need to bring the cities together.

"Leave Midland where it is," said Jo Gary, a 63-year-old convenience store manager shopping in Odessa. "I think it's a great town."

GROUP

The MCMS hopes to stir up legislative lobbyists from the Texas Medical Association.

"We would like to get TMA to further publicize the danger in hopes that they will work through the state legislative process," said Talboys.

Since the TMA will not discuss the resolution until its meeting, no official comment was available.

"The TMA officially has taken no stand on high-level nuclear waste sites," said Mark Meyer, a spokesman. "If it does take a stand, it would be presented for vote by the House of Delegates." The House of Delegates is th policy making body of the TMA.

"If a bill is introduced, any lobbying would be handled by them," said Meyer.

The Midland County Medical Society is composed of local physicians who, according to their charter, "hope to make effective the opinions of the profession in all scientific, legislative, public health, material and social affairs."

The group also has a grievance committee to handle complaints and problems from the community.

"If someone feels that they have been overcharged, or if there is a concern over the quality of care, it is presented to the committee and reviewed," said Talboys.

The medical society also has a board of censors who review credentials for all new society members.

"If there is a problem with a physician and we get enough complaints, we can refer to the State Board of Medical Examiners," he said.

But according to Talboys, unity among physicians is a major purpose behind the society.

"Physicians are generally a very fractured group," he said.

Construction of a portion of the administrative offices and band hall will begin immediately, according to Maley. The remainder of the work is scheduled to take place during the summer.

In other action, trustees set April 8 — the Monday following Easter — as a school day to make up for the school day canceled due to bad weather Feb. 1. The day originally was scheduled as a holiday. Good Friday, April 5, will be a school holiday as originally planned.

State law requires public schools to conduct classes 175 days per school year. The rescheduling of classes for April 8 brings the MISD calendar to 175 days of instruction.

Jail Lt. Richard Sexton said the jail's roof still leaks.

One-time sin palace to be women's museum

CHICAGO (AP) — Al Capone's Depression era sin palace — a once opulent hotel that was home to mobsters and madams — is about to become a museum honoring the virtues of women.

The old Lexington Hotel, a one-time brothel and headquarters and home for mobster Capone and his henchmen, will be converted into an international women's museum and research center in time for Chicago's 1992 World's Fair.

The project, developed by the non-profit Sunbow Foundation, a women's organization, will showcase achievements by women around the world in politics, arts, health and science and will honor groups such as the Girl Scouts.

While the museum will be a repository of women's history, it will not ignore the storied past of the Lexington, which had 10 underground tunnels and a dozen secret staircases.

"We're trying to make this into a cultural structure," said Patricia Porter, Sunbow's executive director. "I'm not sure linking Capone to us would be real cool. But we will have something in his honor."

The 10-story, 400-room Lexington, now vacant, opened in time for the 1893 Columbian Exposition. President Grover Cleveland honeymooned there. Foreign dignitaries and members of high society rubbed shoulders in the lavish ballroom.

But during Prohibition, Capone moved his criminal empire from the Metropole Hotel across the street to the Lexington. And "Scarface" was undoubtedly king of his castle.

"He so bullied the owner he couldn't do much of anything," said Ms. Porter, who did extensive research on the hotel. "He paid something like $18,000 a year to live there."

From 1928 to 1932 part of the Lexington, decorated with crystal chandeliers and Italian marble, was converted into a brothel, she said.

Capone's personal digs and lavender tub were on the fifth floor.

The South Side hotel still reflects its days of intrigue.

"We found 10 tunnels underground that go in different directions...and a dozen secret staircases," Ms. Porter said. One was behind Capone's medicine chest.

On another floor, a mirror hid a door that led Capone to other buildings where his bookies conducted business.

"We found another room where Capone's bodyguards had shooting galleries," bricked up for target practice, Ms. Porter added.

The Lexington tried to clean up its image after World War II, changing its name to the New Michigan Hotel. But the neighborhood deteriorated and the hotel closed in 1980.

It is, however, a national and city landmark, having received such designation by the City Council.

Is monkey face on Mars just in eyes of beholders?

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A mile-long monkey's face silently stares at the stars from its perch on Mars, according to a group of scientists who believe the strange profile was left as a cosmic calling card hundreds of thousands of years ago.

The 30 scientists, known as the Mars Investigation Group, believe two photographs sent back from Mars in 1976 by the Viking spacecraft indicate the existence of an ancient civilization, Richard Hoagland, group member and science writer, said.

The photos show what appear to be four huge pyramids lined up symmetrically with the face about six miles away, suggesting a parallel with Stonehenge, the ancient monument of huge stones in England, Hoagland said.

"Geometrically, the face could be seen in profile (from the pyramids) as the summer solstice sun rose over it" an estimated 500,000 years ago, he said in a telephone interview from Berkeley.

National Aeronautics and Space Administration officials and other skeptics contend the figures were accidentally formed by natural elements or by the play of light and shadow.

Larry King, a NASA spokesman in Mountain View, Calif., said he doubts the previous existence of life on Mars and likened the face to "the man on the moon."

But Dr. C. West Churchman, a professor at the University of California at Berkeley and the group's principal investigator, said there are too many details pointing to the possibility of an extinct Martian race.

"It's hard to believe that all that symmetry could have been done by winds and sand as we know it on Earth," he said in a telephone interview from Philadelphia. "If it had just been the face, I would not have been that convinced. But the fact that these (pyramids) are lined up in a certain way with the face makes me inclined to believe that there was (an ancient civilization)."

The two Viking photographs were taken at different times of day, reducing the chance that the figures were illusions cast by tricky shadows, Hoagland said.

Refugees cheer ex-Cambodian leader

CAMP DAVID, Thailand (AP) — Prince Norodom Sihanouk visited thousands of his cheering Cambodian followers at this refugee camp today, and said China will teach Vietnam "a second lesson" if Hanoi's forces overrun all resistance groups fighting the pro-Vietnam government in Phnom Penh.

Meanwhile, Thai military sources said Vietnamese forces were driving westward toward a string of Khmer Rouge rebel positions in the hilly, thick Cambodian jungle. The Vietnamese forces were advancing under the cover of heavy artillery and mortar fire.

Sihanouk told reporters during the emotional three-hour visit to the camp that Chinese leader Deng Xiaoping promised leaders of three rebel groups that, "If we are knocked down or completely defeated, they will certainly intervene, and teach Vietnam a second lesson."

He said China has promised to apply pressure by putting more soldiers along its tense border with Vietnam. China claimed it taught Vietnam "a lesson" in early 1979, when it launched a 17-day border incursion to "punish" Hanoi for invading Cambodia and toppling the pro-Chinese Khmer Rouge regime.

Under the Khmer Rouge, hundreds of thousands of people died during campaigns against intellectuals, church members and people who had worked with previous governments. There were also many deaths during mass collectivization drives that forced urban residents to work in the countryside.

Chinese Foreign Minister Wu Xueqian said Jan. 29 that China might teach Vietnam a second lesson because of what he called Hanoi's stubbornness on the Cambodian and Chinese-border conflicts.

During their current dry season offensive, Vietnamese soldiers have overrun seven camps of one resistance group, the non-communist Khmer People's National Liberation Front. They now have turned their attention to the Khmer Rouge.

However, they have not attacked Sihanouk's bases on the Thai-Cambodian border, including his headquarters at Tatum. About 30,000 refugees moved 5.6 miles from Tatum to Camp David last April as a precautionary measure.

Also known as Green Hill, it is named after David Mortan, a senior U.N. aid official who strongly lobbied for moving the Tatum refugees here.

Terrorists strike out at Iranian targets

By The Associated Press

Terrorists were reported to have struck Iranian targets in Tehran and Frankfurt, West Germany, this morning as Iran celebrated the sixth anniversary of the Islamic revolution.

In the Iranian capital, two terrorists riding a motorcycle hurled grenades at a government building, killing one man and wounding two guards, Iran's news agency reported. The agency said police shot and killed one attacker, wounded the second and arrested a third man in the attack

In Frankfurt, police said arsonists struck the offices of Iran's Bank Melli in the downtown area. One man was injured while fleeing the burning building, police said.

Both attacks occurred at 8:45 a.m. local time, but in different time zones. It was not known if there was any coordination between the two.

But they coincided with a warning by a spokesman of the leftist Iranian Mujahedeen Khalq (People's Warriors) resistance group in New York that the underground movement would be launching a fresh anti-government offensive in Iran beginning today.

There was no claim of responsibility for the Tehran attack, but Frankfurt police said a group calling itself the "Fedajin Royal Iranian Monarchy" telephoned the West German news agency DPA in Bonn and claimed responsibility for the attack.

The Islamic Republic News Agency said only one of the grenades exploded in front of the accounting office of the Foundation for the Oppressed (Mostafazin) on Khorramshahr avenue in north Tehran.

The agency, monitored in Cyprus, identified the attackers as "U.S. mercenary agents."

The news agency said the explosion was the work of enemies of the Islamic Republic who sought to overshadow 10 days of ceremonies marking the sixth anniversary of the revolution that overthrew the monarchy and established Islamic rule under Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

Khomeini returned to Iran from exile on Feb. 1, 1979.

WORLD in brief

Journalists, Israelies deny reports of terrorist attack

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Lebanon's state radio said today that more than 100 Israeli soldiers were killed or wounded in a truck bombing in south Lebanon, but reporters in the area and Israeli military sources said the report was false.

Apparently the report arose from confusion over an apparent suicide car bombing on Tuesday that Israeli officials said wounded 10 soldiers of the occupation force near the Bourj Al-Shemali Palestinian refugee camp outside the southern port city of Tyre.

A second attack Tuesday in the same area injured two more Israeli soldiers, according to the military command in Tel Aviv.

Nabih Berri, a Shiite militia leader who is Lebanon's state minister for south Lebanon, also used the figure of more than 100 killed or wounded, referring to the Tuesday attack in a speech today.

But reporters in south Lebanon denied the casualty toll was that high and said there had been no truck bombing at all today. An Israeli military spokesman also denied there was any such incident today, and Israeli officials in Tel Aviv insisted that the truck bombing Tuesday had injured only 10 soldiers.

Arabs 'concern' Britain

LONDON (AP) — The Foreign Office has summoned Syria's top diplomat and told him there was "grave concern" about four suspected Arab terrorists who were deported last week from Britain, a spokesman said.

Diplomatic sources said the envoy was asked Tuesday to explain why three of the four suspects were traveling on Syrian Public Service passports, which suggested they had some connection with the Syrian government.

A Syrian spokesman in London said the four were part of a commercial delegation visiting Britain at the invitation of a British company.

Press Association, Britain's domestic news agency, quoted unidentified government sources as saying the four were believed to be an assassination team whose target was the head of the Palestine Liberation Organization in London.

The Syrian charge d'affaires, Zouhewir Namani, "was left in no doubt about our grave concern about the circumstances which led to the deportation last week of Syrian passport-holders," said a Foreign Office spokesman, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Jewish activist sentenced

MOSCOW (AP) — A Moscow court has sentenced Jewish activist Alexander Kholmyansky to 18 months in a labor camp on charges of possessing live ammunition, dissident sources say.

Kholmyansky was arrested last summer after agents of the Soviet KGB secret police searched his Moscow apartment. At the time, his wife said the searchers had placed a pistol and ammunition in the apartment.

Officials originally charged Kholmyansky with possession of a firearm, but the charge was changed to possession of live ammunition during his two-day trial last week, the sources told Western reporters Tuesday. The sources spoke on condition they not be identified.

Kholmyansky, who has been refused permission to emigrate, was active among a group of Jews who gave Hebrew lessons to young people in Moscow and other cities without official approval. At least three other unofficial Hebrew teachers have been sentenced to labor camps on a variety of charges in recent months.

Class center of controversy

SKANDERBORG, Denmark (AP) — An unruly class of sixth-graders has become the center of a national controversy because a school psychologist wants to use a TV camera to show them and their parents just how bad they really are.

Both parents and officials at Morten Boerup School in Skanderborg approved the plan, but a nationwide parents organization called the idea "sinister."

Denmark's minister of education, Bertel Haarder, said he would not interfere as long as the students' parents give their unanimous consent.

School psychologist Joergen Steen Hansen suggested filming the children to let them and their parents see how their behavior looks and then discuss it, according to news reports.

Capture Hearts With Special Foods

A Valentine Meal to Remember!

If you have trouble finding the right Valentine's Day cards and gifts to express your feelings, let your loved ones know just how special you think they are with a Valentine's meal made just for them.

Since nothing satisfies like a thick, juicy beef steak, you're sure to win hearts when you headline the menu with Broiled Sirloin Steak with Wine Sauce. While the meal-sized steak is delicious simply broiled, it becomes holiday-special served with a flavorsome Madeira wine sauce accented with mushrooms and green onions. Fortunately for the busy cook, broiling a tender sirloin steak couldn't be easier. For best results, you will want to place the steak the proper distance from the heat for its thickness and time it carefully, broiling just to rare or medium.

Since steak and salad naturally go together, include Salade Jardin on your Valentine's menu. Crisp, delicately-flavored iceberg lettuce is teamed with fresh mushrooms, cherry tomatoes, green onions and capers, then tossed with a home-made lemon-oil dressing. When selecting iceberg lettuce, look for a head that is "springy-firm," giving slightly to gentle pressure. Don't be concerned if the core end is brown; this is simply nature's attempt to seal the cut made during harvesting or trimming.

For dessert, say "Be mine!" deliciously with Cherry Amaretto Cream. This in-the-pink creation is studded with tart, flavorful cherries and topped with an elegant cherry sauce laced with amaretto liqueur. While this heart-shaped dessert will bring a chorus of "oohs and aahs," it's easily made with convenient cherry pie filling.

With this collection of festive foods, you'll not only be giving your special Valentine a memorable meal, you'll also be providing them with many valuable nutrients they need to be healthy and happy. Beef sirloin steak is an excellent source of high-quality protein and many vitamins and minerals including thiamine, riboflavin, niacin, iron and zinc. Iceberg lettuce in the salad is high in natural fiber but low in sodium and calories and contributes Vitamins A and C as well as potassium, thiamine and other minerals to the diet. Even the dessert plays an important role in a well-balanced diet, thanks to the cherries that are high in Vitamin A.

Broiled Sirloin Steak with Madeira Wine Sauce

1 or 2 beef sirloin steaks, cut 1 to 1-1/2 inches thick
Salt Pepper *Wine Sauce

Place steak on rack in broiler pan so surface of 1-inch steak is 2 to 3 inches from heat and 1-1/2-inch steak is 3 to 4 inches from heat. When one side is browned, season, turn and finish cooking on the second side. Season. Steaks cut 1 inch thick require 18 to 20 minutes for rare and 20 to 25 minutes for medium. Steaks cut 1-1/2 inches thick require 25 to 30 minutes for rare and 30 to 35 minutes for medium. Serve with Wine Sauce, if desired.

*Wine Sauce

- 2 tablespoons butter
- 1 cup sliced mushrooms
- 1/2 cup sliced green onions
- 1/4 cup water
- 2 teaspoons cornstarch
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 cup Madeira wine

Cook mushrooms and onions in butter, stirring occasionally, about 4 minutes. Combine water, cornstarch and salt; add to vegetables, stirring constantly. Stir in wine and cook slowly 4 minutes, stirring occasionally. Yield: 1 cup sauce.

Salade Jardin

- 1 head iceberg lettuce
- Lemon-Oil Dressing*
- 6 to 7 cherry tomatoes, quartered
- 4 to 5 mushrooms, thinly sliced
- 1 green onion, thinly sliced
- 1 tablespoon capers, drained
- 3/4 cup garlic croutons
- 3 tablespoons freshly grated Romano or Parmesan cheese

Core, rinse and thoroughly drain lettuce. Refrigerate in plastic bag or container to crisp. Prepare Lemon-Oil Dressing. Tear lettuce into bite-sized pieces to measure 6 cups. (Refrigerate remaining lettuce in plastic bag for future use.) Place torn lettuce, tomatoes, mushrooms, green onion and capers in salad bowl. Toss gently with dressing. Add croutons and cheese and toss again. Serve immediately. 4 to 6 servings.

*Lemon-Oil Dressing

Combine 1-1/2 tablespoons lemon juice, 1 minced small garlic clove and 1/8 teaspoon each salt and sugar. With a fork or whisk gradually beat in 1/4 cup olive oil. Yield: 1/3 cup dressing.

Cherry Amaretto Cream

- 2 envelopes unflavored gelatine
- 1 cup cold water
- 1/4 cup sugar
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1 can (21 ounces) tart cherry pie fill
- 2 cups (1 pint) whipping or heavy cream, whipped
- 1/4 teaspoon almond extract
- 2 tablespoons amaretto liqueur

Sprinkle unflavored gelatine over cold water in saucepan; let stand 3 to 4 minutes. Stir over low heat until gelatine is completely dissolved, about 5 minutes. Add sugar, lemon juice and salt, stirring to combine. Stir in 1-1/2 cups cherry pie fill. Chill until mixture begins to thicken slightly. Fold in whipped cream. Pour into 2-quart mold; chill until firm. Meanwhile combine amaretto with remaining cherry pie fill and cook slowly 2 to 3 minutes. Cool slightly. To serve, unmold dessert onto serving plate; top with cherry sauce. Yield: one 2-quart mold.

Add Oriental Flair to Family Dinner

Sometimes all it takes to turn an ordinary meal into an extraordinary dining experience is to present favorite family foods in new and intriguing ways. With a little kitchen creativity, beef round steak, vegetables and lettuce can become Oriental Beef Stir-Fry, an exotic entree sure to make any meal a special occasion.

Strips of beef top round steak as well as red onion rings and small whole mushrooms are quickly stir-fried in garlic and ginger-flavored oil. Tomato wedges are added for color and all is enhanced with a soy and sherry sauce. You'll find top round steak an excellent choice for stir-frying for the top round is the most tender of the round muscles. Top round steak also helps to stretch the food dollar for it is less expensive than many other tender steaks.

On a novel serving note, the beef and vegetables come to the table on a bed of shredded lettuce. While the cool, crisp lettuce offers pleasing flavor, texture and color contrasts to the beef it also helps keep the entree's calories in check.

Cheery Cherry Cups carry out the Oriental theme tastefully for dessert. Inspired by cherry tarts, they feature crispy cups, made by frying eggroll skins, and a bright red cherry filling that's flavored with vanilla butter and nut flavor and sprinkled with coconut. You'll enjoy preparing and serving this unusual dessert that illustrates the versatility and high quality of convenient canned cherry pie filling.

Oriental Beef Stir-Fry

- 1-1/4 pounds beef top round steak, cut 1 to 1-1/4 inches thick
- 1 head iceberg lettuce
- 1 tablespoon cornstarch
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- 1/4 cup soy sauce
- 1 tablespoon sherry
- 1/4 cup oil
- 1 clove garlic, cut in half
- 2 slices fresh ginger root
- 1 large red onion, sliced
- 8 ounces (about 2 cups) small mushrooms
- 1 large tomato, cut into 12 wedges

Partially freeze steak to firm and slice diagonally across the grain into very thin strips. Core, rinse and thoroughly drain lettuce. To shred, halve head lengthwise, place cut-sides down and slice crosswise with stainless steel knife. Refrigerate shredded lettuce in plastic bag to crisp. Combine cornstarch, sugar, soy sauce and sherry; pour over steak strips, stirring to coat. Heat 2 tablespoons oil in large frying-pan or wok until hot. Add garlic and ginger root and cook 5 seconds, stirring constantly; discard. Cook onion 3 minutes, stirring frequently. Add mushrooms and cook 2 minutes. Remove and keep warm. Drain marinade from steak strips; reserve. Quickly brown steak strips in remaining oil, stirring constantly. Add marinade and heat through. Stir in onion, mushrooms and tomatoes and heat through. Arrange lettuce on large platter. Serve beef stir-fry over lettuce. 5 to 6 servings.

Cheery Cherry Cups

- 1 can (21 ounces) tart cherry pie fill
- 1/2 teaspoon vanilla butter and nut flavor
- Oil for frying
- 6 eggroll wrappers
- 2 tablespoons flaked coconut

Combine cherry pie fill and vanilla butter and nut flavor in saucepan and cook slowly 5 minutes. Cool. Heat oil in deep fat fryer to 365°F. (Pan should not be more than half full.) To prepare cups, fry an eggroll wrapper 30 seconds. Place bowl of soup ladle in center of wrapper to form cup and cook in hot fat approximately 45 seconds. Drain on absorbent paper. Repeat with remaining wrappers. Place approximately 1/2 cup cherry pie fill in each cup. Sprinkle each with an equal amount of coconut. Yield: 6 cherry cups.

Weight-watching season arrives

By LOUISE LAGUE
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

About this time of year the line at Weight Watchers runs all the way down the corridor, and the slick salesfolk at health clubs are rubbing their hands with glee as they rattle the tissue paper on the new contracts in triplicate.

In the mornings armies of joggers in new suits appear just as the stars fade, huffing and puffing and ultimately deciding to walk.

Even people who don't join things are looking at each other and saying, as we do at our house, "I'll never eat again."

This is hogwash. Of course we will eat again, in about two hours. The question is, what?

If someone did a study of how people eat differently in January and February than they do in December, I'll bet the results would be interesting. In December they eat chocolate; in January it's celery.

In December they drink eggnog; in January it's skim milk. Let us pause here for a moment to reflect on the wonderful fact that both our bodies and our spirits crave leaner provisions in February; then let's go on a diet.

Oh, dreadful word. Let's not make it dreadful. Let's just cook things that are lower in carbohydrates and fats and see if we don't all feel better in a few weeks.

It is definitely true that everything under the sun tastes better with butter all over it, but forget that. Let's remember instead that lots of other things taste wonderful — tomatoes, for example. Garlic. Fish. Fruit. Vegetables of all sorts.

Nothing much is new in the world of weight loss, except that the government has recently told us again that butter and beef are bad guys, and last year, you'll recall, they told us that we can do with a lot less protein.

So the wise cook this year is thinking about lots of vegetables, a little margarine, a little grain (whole wheat, it is hoped).

The new thinking for the modern lo-cal cook is not meat garnished with vegetables in the old American-agrarian style, but vegetables garnished with protein — bits of fish, chips of chicken, shreds of cheese — in the Oriental style. Not to put too Pollyanna-ish a face on this, but that idea opens up lots of possibilities.

Another idea to keep in mind is that while crudites have their place — lunch boxes, hors d'oeuvres and panic snacks in the refrigerator — they are mighty tiring as a staple. Go ahead, cook vegetables. It's not hard. They feel less like deprivation.

Diets are more successful when longer-lived, and longer-lived when pleasant. Don't eat things you don't like. If you don't like cottage cheese and grapefruit, eat muenster cheese and oranges. Why torture yourself unnecessarily?

Try taking the emphasis off eating and putting it on drinking. Invest in no-cal things to drink. If you hate your tap water, buy a bottle of exotic water and drink six to eight glasses of it out of an exotic iced glass every day.

Try different kinds of herbal teas. Try diet tonic with lemon. (In a moment of virtue last summer, I discovered this tastes a great deal like a gin and tonic.) Drink hot bouillon and pretend you're on a luxury liner. All this fussing around will keep your hands busy and your stomach full.

If you like to cook, make a fetish of diet cookery. Reproduce sauces without fats. Serve long, glamorous, spare meals — clear soup with flecks of scallion, lettuce hearts with buttermilk dressing, something on a skewer with a tablespoon of interesting rice, a baked apple or a fruit salad, gallons of ice water in a gorgeous pitcher and black coffee or decaf afterwards.

Of course we all know what to do; the problem is getting ourselves to do it. I can't help you there. Well, maybe just a little bit. People who are really, really successful at dieting have one thing in common: They don't hate it.

ANYTIME VEGETABLE SOUP

46-ounce can tomato juice
46 ounces water
6 envelopes beef bouillon
1 celery stick, cut up
1 cup sliced fresh mushrooms
2 cups shredded cabbage
3 zucchini, sliced
1 cup green beans
4 carrots, peeled and chunked
1 onion, finely chopped
3 cloves garlic, chopped
Salt and pepper to taste

Put everything in a large pot, cover and cook until vegetables are tender. Season to taste. Improves with age.

GREEN BEANS NICOISE

4 cups fresh green beans
Salt
1 small onion, minced
2 tablespoons olive oil
2 tablespoons wine vinegar
Fresh ground pepper to taste
4 ounces flaked white tuna packed in water
2 tablespoons grated parmesan

Snap ends off the beans and cook in boiling salted water until tender. Drain and toss with onion, oil, vinegar, ½ teaspoon salt and pepper. Chill. Toss again before serving. Split between 2 plates, garnish each serving with half the tuna and half the parmesan. Serve with a light interesting bread like pita or garlic melba rounds. Makes two servings.

SKINNY CREAMY SALAD DRESSING

1 tablespoon mayonnaise
1 cup buttermilk
1 clove garlic, crushed
1 tablespoon vinegar
Pepper, salt and paprika to taste

Put everything in a blender and puree; chill before using. Makes two servings.

CHICKEN PAPRIKA

2 whole medium chicken breasts, split and skinned
2 tablespoons margarine
1 small onion, thinly sliced
¾ cup tomato juice
1 tablespoon paprika
¼ teaspoon salt
Dash pepper
1 tablespoon cornstarch
½ cup plain yogurt
1½ cups hot cooked noodles

In skillet, over medium heat, brown chicken in margarine about 15 minutes. Remove chicken and drain on paper toweling. Add onion to skillet, cook until tender. Drain. Stir tomato juice, paprika, salt and pepper into skillet with onions. Add chicken. Cover; simmer for 35 to 40 minutes until tender. Remove chicken to platter and keep warm. Skim fat from pan juices. Stir cornstarch into yogurt. Stir ½ cup pan juices into yogurt mixture; return all to skillet. Cook and stir till thickened; do not boil. Serve chicken and sauce over noodles.

Makes four servings.

SCALLOP KABABS

1 tablespoon olive oil
2 tablespoons soy sauce
1 tablespoon lemon juice
½ teaspoon fresh ground ginger
½ teaspoon dijon mustard
1 pound fresh scallops
12 cherry tomatoes
2 medium onions, quartered

In a glass dish, combine oil, soy sauce, lemon juice, ginger and mustard. Marinate scallops at room temperature for an hour, covered. On 8 skewers, alternate scallops, tomatoes and onion quarters. Broil 5 inches from heat for 7 minutes on each side, basting with marinade as you turn.

Makes four servings.

FRUIT SALAD CASSIS

½ cup orange juice
¼ cup cassis
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 cup melon balls
1 fresh peach, sliced
1 fresh pear, sliced
1 large banana, sliced

Combine the juice, cassis and lemon juice. Pour over the cut up fruits in a bowl, toss, cover and chill.

Corn keeps on popping

By DIANE SAVAGE
Copley News Service

Of all the popular snack foods around these days, there's one that is actually good for you: popcorn.

It's a must at the movie theater and an inexpensive way to feed a crowd of guests. It's fun to make, but even more fun to eat — handful after crunchy handful.

Like potatoes, popcorn often is unfairly accused of being fattening, when it is what's put on these foods that adds the real calories. You can't smother any food in butter and expect it to keep you in bikini shape.

A whole cupful of dry-popped popcorn (sans butter, of course) has a mere 25 calories — and about 40 calories when popped with oil. There are a number of inexpensive dry-popping machines on the market that use hot air to pop the kernels. Dry-popped is better for you, and tastes better, too, in my opinion.

If you've ever wondered what makes popcorn pop, here's the secret. When a kernel is heated, the moisture inside turns to steam. When enough pressure builds up the hull explodes, and the starchy interior blossoms into view (but not for long).

Store unpopped corn in air-tight containers to protect it from drying out. Kernels must retain moisture to pop well.

Popped corn will stay fresh for several days when stored in plastic bags and kept in a dry place.

POPCORN HEAVEN

2 tbsps. butter or margarine, melted
¼ cup honey
1 tbsp. each grated orange and lemon peel
¼ tsp. cinnamon
2 qts. popped popcorn
½ cup golden raisins
½ cup chopped, dried apricots
1 cup sunflower seeds
1 cup Spanish peanuts

Combine melted butter, honey, citrus peel and cinnamon; drizzle over popcorn and toss. Sprinkle in remaining ingredients, tossing gently to mix. Makes about 2½ quarts.

SAVORY PARMESAN POPCORN

2 qts. popped popcorn
¼ cup butter or margarine, melted
½ cup grated Parmesan cheese
½ tsp. onion powder
½ tsp. garlic salt

Pour melted butter over popcorn, tossing gently. Sprinkle with remaining inredients and toss to mix.

Serves about 8.

QUICKIE CARAMEL CORN

4 qts. popped popcorn
1 cup peanuts, walnuts, or pecans
½ cup shredded coconut
½ cup butter or margarine
½ cup packed brown sugar
½ cup molasses

Preheat oven to 350 F. Combine popcorn, nuts and coconut in 11x17-inch metal roasting pan; set aside. Melt butter in medium-size saucepan over medium-low heat, then stir in brown sugar and molasses. Bring to gentle boil and cook, stirring often, for 5 minutes. Drizzle hot syrup over popcorn mixture and stir to blend. Bake, uncovered, in preheated oven 15 to 20 minutes, stirring every 5 minutes. Allow to cool before serving, or store in tightly covered container for up to one week.

Today's steaks need sauces' help

By MERLE ELLIS

My wife and I were in New York recently visiting friends who have an apartment on the upper East side near the Lobel Brothers meat market, the Tiffany's of meat markets. We had tickets to see Dustin Hoffman in Death of a Salesman and I figured, "What the heck? Why not a steak dinner after the show?" I bought four strip steaks from Leon Lobel for $87.60. What the heck! Once in a lifetime, right?

What a night! Dustin Hoffman provided one of the most exciting evenings I have ever spent in the theater. And those steaks, simply broiled and served with a sliced tomato and onions salad, pan-fried potatoes and a Sebastiani Zinfandel, were the best I've had in years!

Beautifully marbled, well-aged steaks like that require very little to achieve greatness. Unfortunately, you don't find meat like that in most markets these days. Most steaks today are far too lean to be memorable, even with the help of Dustin Hoffman. They need a little help from a sauce.

I am convinced that the reputation the French have achieved as masters of sauces was developed over the years because their beef was less than the best and they had to do something to mask the fact.

The simplest of sauces to make for steaks are the ones made simply by stirring a bit of booze and a touch of imagination into whatever is left in the pan after you have cooked your steak. The process is called deglazing and it adds immeasurably to the flavor of today's steaks.

To make a sauce by deglazing, first pour off all but about one tablespoon of the fat that has cooked out of the steak. Then put the pan back over medium-low heat and add about ¼-cup of an appropriate liquor, which can be a bit of the wine you plan to drink with the meal, some brandy (the classic) or whatever strikes your fancy. You can, if you must, deglaze the pan with stock, or, for that matter, even with plain water. However, without a bit of the booze the sauce definitely will be lacking.

Cook, stirring to loosen and dissolve all of the good stuff that stuck to the bottom of the pan. Continue cooking until the sauce has reduced in volume and thickened slightly. Stir in two tablespoons of butter and you have a wonderful sauce.

BORDELAISE SAUCE

3 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons flour
1½ cups beef stock
1 cup dry red wine
¼ cup finely-chopped onion
1 teaspoon thyme
1 tablespoon brandy
1 tablespoon lemon juice
Salt and pepper
1 tablespoon chopped parsley

Melt butter in heavy pan over low heat; add flour, blending well, and simmer for several minutes. Add beef stock and stir until sauce thickens.

Combine wine, onions and thyme in a second pan and cook until reduced to ⅓ cup. Strain into first pan; add brandy, lemon juice, salt and pepper and simmer 4 to 5 minutes. Stir in parsley and serve.

BEARNAISE SAUCE

¼ cup white wine
¼ cup white wine vinegar
½ teaspoon dry tarragon leaves
3 green onions with tops, minced
1½ sticks butter
3 egg yolks, beaten

Boil wine, vinegar and minced tarragon and onions in a non-aluminum saucepan until reduced to approximately 2 tablespoons; let cool. Melt the butter in a separate pan and let it cool slightly. Strain the wine mixture into the top of a double boiler over simmering water. Whisk in the beaten egg yolks. Add the melted butter in a thin stream, stirring constantly with a wooden spoon until the mixture thickens.

Recipes helpful on snowy days

By BETTY WILSON
Hearst News Service

Don't let an unexpected winter storm or illness catch you with bare cupboards. It's a good idea to set aside food now to feed the family during three common emergencies — snowy days, power failure and illness.

Bread and milk are two perishable foods that most families do not store in quantity. Consequently, that's what you may find lacking after several homebound days. Eliminate that problem by keeping a package of nonfat dry milk on hand for use in hot cocoa, cream soups and pudding.

Crackers make a convenient substitute for bread, and baking mix lends itself to a variety of quick breads. Frozen dough is less convenient than baking mix, although once it's cut it will thaw to raise in a short time. Try some as English muffins.

In most emergencies, a well-stocked home freezer will furnish meat, fruit and vegetables. A supply of ready-to-use canned food is more convenient, though, since it doesn't need thawing. Rice and pasta cook quickly and stretch meat to feed a crowd.

In case of power failure, peanut butter, processed cheese in jar and canned beans store well at room temperature and are good sources of protein. Ready-to-eat cereals, jelly, nuts, dried fruits and popcorn carale boosters in any emergency.

In case of a power failure it is wise to leave the freezer unopened. A well-filled freezer will keep frozen foods safe for two days if the door remains closed.

Remember, a power failure may mean not being able to heat foods. In that case, canned fish or meat, tomatoes, baked beans or peas and peanuts are a few suggestions for foods that are palatable when served at room temperature.

Families that eat most meals at home fare best in emergencies. The pantry of foods for emergencies is essential for those who eat out often and leave cupboards bare.

MEDIUM WHITE SAUCE
2 tablespoons margarine
2 tablespoons flour
1 cup boiling water
⅓ cup nonfat dry milk

Melt margarine in heavy saucepan. Remove from the heat. Add flour and stir until smooth. Gradually add boiling water, stirring to keep smooth. Sprinkle dry milk over the surface and stir until dissolved. Return the mixture to the range. Over low heat, cook, stirring constantly until bubbles form. Use in cream soups, casseroles and with cooked vegetables. Makes one cup.

CREAM OF TOMATO SOUP
1 cup medium white sauce (recipe above)
¼ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1 cup tomato juice or canned tomatoes, blended smooth

Heat white sauce in heavy saucepan. Add seasonings. In a separate pan, bring the tomato juice or puree to a boil. Slowly add the hot tomato juice or puree to the hot white sauce, stirring constantly to avoid curdling. Makes two cups.

PEAS AND PEANUTS SALAD
1 package (10-ounce) frozen green peas, thawed
2 cups peanuts
⅓ cup salad dressing
⅓ cup sour cream
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce

Mix uncooked peas and peanuts together. Mix salad dressing, sour cream, lemon juice and Worcestershire sauce together and blend into peas and peanuts. Refrigerate for at least two hours. Serves eight.

SAUERKRAUT SALAD
1 can (27-ounce) sauerkraut
¾ cup sugar
1 cup celery, diced
¼ cup onion, diced
1 cup green pepper, diced
3 tablespoons vinegar
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1 teaspoon celery seeds or caraway seeds

Drain the sauerkraut in a colander and rinse with cold water. Drain for 15 minutes. Cut into one-inch pieces with kitchen scissors. Transfer to a large mixing bowl.

Add the remaining ingredients. Mix well. Store covered in the refrigerator up to four weeks. Serves 10.

COCOA MIX
2 cups cocoa or carob powder s sugar
8 cups nonfat dry milk
⅛ teaspoon salt

Sift or mix ingredients together to store in a covered container. To prepare one quart cocoa, add 1⅓ cups mix to one quart warm water. Heat to serving temperature, but do not boil.

To prepare one cup cocoa in microwave oven: Pour one cup water into a 10-ounce mug. Stir in ⅓ cup cocoa mix. Microwave on full power for one minute. Stir and continue to cook for 30 seconds. (Watch carefully, as milk products boil over quickly.)

BRUSSELS SPROUTS CHEZ NOUS
4 cups (1 quart) Brussels sprouts
3 tablespoons butter
⅓ cup small white onions sliced wafer-thin
⅓ cup chicken stock
Salt and white pepper to taste
2 teaspoons chopped fresh parsley
1 teaspoon snipped fresh chives

Cook Brussels sprouts in a small amount of rapidly boiling salted water, tightly covered, for about five minutes. Drain and keep warm. In a sizeable heavy skillet, melt the butter and over low heat saute the thin onion rings until they are barely soft, stirring often. Add the stock, season rather highly with salt and white pepper, and simmer for five minutes. Add the Brussles sprouts and cook, basting the vegetables constantly, until they are just tender but not overly soft. Serve at once, sprinkled with parsley and chives. Serves six.

Drinks warm cold days

Hearst News Service

Now that the bone-chilling cold has settled in for what looks like its annual winter's nap, it's time to sit down by the fireplace and warm up. And certainly one of the most enjoyable ways to do that is with a nice, hot drink.

We're not talking hot chocolate here. Somehow, there's nothing like a warm mug of some sort of spirits to take the sting out of "apres ski" or "apres" anything outside in the frigid elements.

And there's nothing simpler. Many of the classic hot drinks — like mulled wine, hot-buttered rum, Irish coffee and Tom and Jerrys — are simple to make. Many can be made not only on the stove but in a covered pan over or in the fireplace, for a different slant on entertaining. Accompany them with snack foods — chips, crudites, dips, cookies, cake — and you have an instant warmup for a party

Once, rum was considered the main choice for warm spirits, aside from an occasional Irish coffee. That's no longer the case. Today's warmers range from flaming brandy numbers to sizzling tequila heart-stoppers.

But before you start concocting your own hot drinks, a few hints. First, don't use more than the recommended amount of liquor; if the drink is too strong, it won't be drinkable until it's lukewarm — and then, why bother? Secondly, remember to use low heat, to avoid unintended flameups. Heat drinks slowly and covered, and never boil — to avoid depleting the alcoholic content.

Remember to heat the mugs, heat-safe glasses or cups you intend to serve in — a few minutes in a warm (not hot) oven or in the plate-warming cycle of a dishwasher should do the trick, or you can rinse them with hot water. Or you can leave them sitting on the fireplace (not too close to the flames) for a cozy touch. If you'd like to make your warmers ahead of time, a Thermos should keep them piping hot until you're ready to serve.

And do remember a garnish — a cinnamon stick, a slice of fruit, a grating of fresh nutmeg, etc. — can make a hot drink as pleasing to the eye as to the sytem.

All that being said, here's a selection of winter warmers from "The Drink Dictionary" by Lionel Braun and Marion Gorman and "Mr. Boston Deluxe Official Bartender's Guide." All these recipes make just one drink, unless otherwise noted. "Skoal!"

IRISH COFFEE
4 ounces hot black coffee
1 or 2 teaspoons superfine sugar
1½ ounces Irish whisky
1 to 2 tablespoons whipped cream

Pour hot coffee into cup or glass (tall glasses with handles are standard, but a sturdy wine glass will do). Add sugar according to taste and stir until dissolved. Add Irish whisky. Top with whipped cream. Do not stir (drink through cream).

Hint: Add one-half ounce of Irish cream liqueur for "double Irish coffee."

MULLED WINE
1 teaspoon superfine sugar
¼ cup water
5 ounces dry red wine
1½ teaspoon lemon juice
1 to 2 dashes orange bitters
1 pinch ground cinnamon

Combine sugar and water in a small saucepan and stir over low heat until sugar dissolves. Remove from heat and add wine, lemon juice, bitters and cinnamon and stir. Pour into warm mug and stir with red-hot metal skewer.

TOM AND JERRY
2 eggs, separated
½ ounce golden rum
⅛ teaspoon baking soda
2 ounces superfine sugar
1½ ounces brandy
3 to 4 ounces milk, hot
Freshly grated nutmeg

Put egg whites in a small bowl and beat with a rotary beater until they form soft peaks. Place yolks in separate bowl and beat until foamy. Add yolks to whites and, using a rubber scraper, fold together lightly and evenly. Sprinkle one-half ounce rum, baking soda and sugar on top of egg mixture and blend with a small whisk. Divide mixture into two mugs. Divide remaining rum and brandy in each mug. Then divide hot milk in each mug, and stir. Sprinkle nutmeg on top.

Serves two.

Note: Don't make ahead of time.

HOT BUTTERED RUM
3 ounces dark rum
3 to 4 ounces cider
1 teaspoon butter
2 or 3 whole cloves
Freshly grated nutmeg
1 cinnamon stick

Put rum in a warm mug, In small saucepan, heat cider over low heat until it simmers, and add to mug. Add cloves, sprinkle with nutmeg. Float pat of butter on top of drink and stir with cinnamon stick.

HOT GROG
4 ounces boiling water
2 ounces dark rum
1 teaspoon superfine sugar
1 ounce 151-proof rum
3 to 4 whole cloves
1 thin orange slice

Put boiling water in warm mug. Add dark rum, sugar and over-proof rum. Stir. Add cloves and orange slice. Let drink steep for one or two minutes before serving.

Valentine's Day treats taste sweet

By DESIREE VIVEA
Copley News Service

After the Christmas rush has died down, the weary postman gets a brief rest. The holiday cards and packages all are delivered and it's back to business as usual — until early February.

Then comes another annual onslaught, when the bright crimson hearts and pastel flowers of Valentine cards fill mailboxes with greetings of love.

Feb. 14 is the day when heartfelt messages of devotion fly on Cupid's wings to those we adore. Why do we set aside this particular day to honor these tender sentiments?

According to legend, Valentinus was a Roman priest during the reign of Claudius II. It is said that he gave assistance to outlawed Christian martyrs, and that he refused to acknowledge the popular Roman gods. Imprisoned and condemned to death, Valentinus befriended the blind daughter of his jailer. One account claims he miraculously restored the girl's eyesight during his captivity.

On the eve of Valentinus' execution (Feb. 14, in the year 270), he composed a farewell note to the maiden and signed it "From Your Valentine." From his grave sprouted a pink almond tree, symbol of abiding love, and valentinus later was canonized to become St. Valentine.

The origins of exchanging decorated cards on St. Valentine's Day have been lost in antiquity, but some believe the tradition began with Valentinus himself.

Today, we remember those we love with red hearts, fragrant flowers and, of course, candy.

Create a batch of sweets for your sweetheart with today's microwave delights.

ROCKY ROAD BITES
1 (12 oz.) pkg. chocolate chips
2 tbsps. butter or margarine
1 (14 oz.) can sweetened condensed milk
2 cups Spanish peanuts
1 (10½ oz.) pkg. miniature marshmallows

Place chocolate chips in small glass bowl and microwave at medium (50 percent power) for 3 to 5 minutes, until melted. Melt butter in glass custard cup and stir into chocolate. Add milk, stirring until slightly cooled. Add peanuts and marshmallows, blending well, then pour mixture into 13x9-inch baking dish that has been lined with waxed paper. Refrigerate for at least 2 hours. Remove from dish and peel off waxed paper. Cut into small squares and store, covered, at room temperature.

Makes about 20 squares.

CHERRIES JUBILEE
2 (16 oz.) cans dark sweet cherries
3 tbsps. cornstarch
1 tbsp. lemon juice
1 tsp. grated lemon rind
Pinch salt
⅓ cup sugar
⅓ cup brandy
Ice cream

Drain cherry syrup from cans into 2-quart glass casserole. Stir in cornstarh, lemon juice, lemon rind, salt and sugar. Microwave, uncovered, 5 to 6 minutes on high, stirring after 3 minutes. Add cherries to thickened sauce and stir gently to blend. Measure brandy into glass measure and microwave 30 seconds on high. Pour 1 tablespoon heated brandy into metal tablespoon. Drizzle remaining brandy over cherries. With lighted match carefully ignite brandy in tablespoon and pour over cherries. When flame has subsided, serve over ice cream.

Makes enough for 8 to 10 servings.

SUNDAY SUPPER
Tuna Burgers & Coffee
Mocha Sundaes & Coffee

TUNA BURGERS
6 slices bacon, cut in half crosswise
1 large egg
Two 6½ or 7-ounce cans tuna, undrained
1 teaspoon prepared mustard
⅓ cup mayonnaise
1 tablespoon minced onion
1 slice bread, trimmed and crumbled
6 hamburger buns, split
6 tomato slices

Cook bacon and drain. Beat egg slightly; add tuna, mustard, mayonnaise, onion and bread; mix well. Spoon onto bottom halves of hamburger buns, covering edges. Broil about 6 inches from high heat until browned — about 6 minutes. Top each with a tomato slice and 2 pieces of bacon. Cover with tops of buns that have been heated or lightly toasted. Makes 6 servings.

Wedding ring sometimes fatal link for industrial workers

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the bride who insisted that her husband wear a wedding band prompts this: I am a superintendent at an industrial plant in Macon, Ga. After two accidents, both caused by rings, I posted an order that no employee was to wear a ring while working.

This rule was enforced until a mechanic was assigned from the general maintenance department. He was not under my control, but I saw a wedding ring on his finger and asked him to remove it — and I explained why.

He said, "My wife put that ring on my finger, and I intend to wear it until the day I die!"

Well, he didn't die, but two days later he came close. An electrical circuit on a welder was completed when he accidentally brushed against it with his ring.

Maybe branding is the answer. — JOHN D. NAPIER

DEAR JOHN: If branding would save a life, I'm for branding. Many years ago I had a letter from an electrician's wife who said that her husband had worn a wedding ring for years, had gained weight and couldn't get it off. It seems his wedding ring had worn a tiny hole through his insulated glove, and a fatal contact was made. When his lifeless body was examined, the only sign of injury was a small burn where his wedding ring had encircled his finger.

Now I tell wives: If your husband works around machines or electricity, if you really love him, insist that he leave his wedding ring at home! Sentiment is a poor excuse for wearing a ring if it can cause the loss of a finger, hand, arm or a life.

DEAR ABBY: Do I ever have a bone to pick with you! Now you say that dentists whose practice is limited to school children should work from 3 p.m. to 9 p.m. and all day Saturday, so kids won't have to miss school for dental appointments.

You sure have your nerve! Dentists are people, too. They get married and have kids of their own. When are they supposed to see their own kids — on Sunday afternoons?

The dentist may be "Doctor" to his patients, but he is "Daddy" to his children. — DENTIST'S WIFE (MOTHER OF FOUR)

DEAR WIFE: A person who chooses a specialty should be prepared to practice during hours that will accommodate his patients. And by the way, Mother, some dentists are "Doctor" to their patients, but "Mama" to their children.

DEAR ABBY: Please set me straight. If my credit cards are stolen or lost, is it true that once I report the loss or theft, I am not responsible for the charges on my card?

I was also told that under federal law, regardless of how much the thief charges on my credit card, I cannot be held responsible for more than $50 per card.

Did I hear right or not? — MAC IN THE BIG APPLE

DEAR MAC: You heard right. But in order to protect yourself against credit card fraud, you should have a neat little booklet, "Who's Got Your Number?"

It's put out by the Consumer Affairs Office of American Express Co. and the Federal Trade Commission. It explains how to guard against credit card fraud. It also explains the legal rights and procedures for victims of fraud.

This valuable little booklet can be obtained for free by writing to: Consumer Affairs Office, 19th Floor, Dept. DA, American Express Co., 125 Broad St., New York, N.Y. 10004. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request.

DEAR ABBY: I am a young divorced mother, and my problem is that when I get asked out on a date, I end up paying the baby sitter.

I have had to turn down a lot of chances to go out because I couldn't afford a baby sitter. I'm on a tight budget, and things like food and clothes come first.

Correct me if I'm wrong, but isn't the man supposed to pay for the sitter? I hate to ask in advance if he plans on paying, but maybe that's what I should do.

Please answer in your column. I'm sure other young mothers have come up against the same problem. — MOMMY

DEAR MOMMY: The man is not "supposed" to pay for the baby sitter. But if he offers, it's all right to accept. (Do not ask him in advance.)

Consider making a deal with other young mothers in your neighborhood — sit with their children, and in return they can sit with yours.

Boiling cause of vitamin loss in foods

Hearst News Service

Vitamins — we all need them, and most of us know it, which is why we down billions of dollars of multivitamin supplements each year. And that's why many of us try to get a balanced diet.

But did you know you may be cooking many vitamins out of your food? According to Gail Becker, manager of the Vitamin Nutrition Information Service, vitamins can easily go the way of smoke up the chimney if you're not careful. And that means that what looks like a balanced diet can actually be deficient.

"Vitamins are sensitive to a variety of environmental factors including light, air, moisture and heat," Becker says. "Because of this sensitivity, the nutritive value of food can be greatly affected by storing, preparation and cooking methods."

Vitamins, she adds, also can be affected by the pH of the environment and by stages in the preparation chain: harvesting, processing and storage. But the largest loss of vitamins often comes in the final preparation, whether at home or in a restaurant or institution.

During cooking, vitamins can be destroyed by heat, oxidation or other chemical reactions, she says, or they may be "leached" into cooking water or meat drippings — making the part that's often discarded more vitamin-packed than the part that's eaten.

In general, Becker says, vitamins can be categorized as:

— Highly unstable: Included in this category are vitamin C (ascorbic acid) and thiamin (vitamin B1).

— Somewhat unstable: Included in this category are folic acid, pyridoxin (vitamin B6), Riboflavin (vitamin B2), pantothenic acid, vitamin B12, vitamin A/carotenes, vitamin E and vitamin D.

— Generally stable: This category includes niacin and vitamin K.

Which factors exactly determine vitamin loss? According to information from the service, they break down into two categories:

— Vitamins in animals: Before cooking, fluctuating storage temperatures, excessive trimming of fat and discarded thawing juices can cause vitamin loss. During cooking, discarded drippings, leaching (as in stewing and braising) and heat cause losses. While serving, keeping meat warm on a steam table can cause further losses. And in leftover use, reheating can do more vitamin damage.

— Vitamins in vegetables: Before cooking, excessive chopping, dicing and cutting that increases the surface-to-volume ratio of the pieces, and prolonged washing or soaking cause vitamins to flee. In preparation, cooking with excessive water, cooking with excessive heat, cooking too long or uncovered, or use of bicarbonate can lose more vitamins. Again, keeping vegetables warm on a steam table steams away vitamins, and with leftovers, reheating again and storing beyond one day can cause large losses in vitamins.

Which are the best and worse ways to cook for vitamin retention? The service says for animal vitamins, the best methods (in order) are broiling, frying, microwaving and roasting. Less successful are stewing and cooking in a crockpot. The worst are braising and boiling.

For vegetables, the service says the best ways (in order) are microwaving, boil-in-bag, stir-frying, steaming and cooking in a sauce-pan with little water (a one-to-eight ratio is recommended). Baking is not as good.

New Englander takes to hominy

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

DEAR CECILY: The cooking of various regions of the United States attracts me. As a result, I was interested in a column of yours about whole hominy and its popularity in the South. I tried the brunch style hominy, bacon and egg recipe you gave and liked it very much. Can you tell me how to use whole hominy in a dish I could serve for lunch or a light supper. — NEW ENGLANDER.

DEAR NEW ENGLANDER: I was delighted to have your letter because I've just tested a lunch or supper dish made with whole hominy — one I have never come on before. It's a salad that makes a fine main course if you preface it with a hot soup and serve a hearty dessert. — C.B.

HAM AND HOMINY SALAD

1 tablespoon butter
1 medium onion, finely chopped (½ cup)
1 tablespoon all-purpose flour
⅓ cup water
¼ cup cider vinegar
¼ cup sugar
14½-ounce can white or golden hominy, drained
1 cup diced (¾-inch) cooked ham or lean boneless smoked pork shoulder butt
⅓ cup finely diced celery
Pepper to taste

In a 10-inch skillet melt the butter; add the onion and cook gently, stirring often, until wilted. Thoroughly stir in the flour. Off heat, gradually stir in the water and vinegar, keeping smooth. Stir in the sugar. Cook over moderately low heat, stirring constantly until thickened. Stir in hominy, ham, celery and pepper; heat thoroughly, stirring occasionally. Serve hot or very warm.

We go out of our way for you

Grocery shopping isn't just a matter of groceries. It's a matter of people. Because it's the people who run a supermarket that can really make a difference in your shopping experience.

That's why we design our stores so that every square inch of an Albertsons is someone's pride and joy. And no matter who that someone is – a Checker or a Store Director, a Courtesy Clerk or a Department Manager – they'll always go out of their way, so you don't have to.

That's what Albertsons is all about.

Unusual combination makes tasty light pancakes

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

LIGHT SUPPER
Soup & Bread Basket
Spinach Corn Pancakes
Cake & Coffee

SPINACH AND CORN PANCAKES

½ pound spinach
⅓ cup plus 1 tablespoon all-purpose flour
1 large egg
1 large egg yolk
5 tablespoons corn oil
1 cup milk
7-ounce can whole kernel corn, drained (⅔ cup)
Pinch of nutmeg
Pepper to taste
Butter

Trim heavy bottom stems from spinach; wash and cook in water clinging to leaves until they wilt. Drain and press out liquid; chop coarsely — there should be ½ cup. In a medium bowl wisk together flour, egg, egg yolk and oil; gradually wisk in milk, keeping smooth. Stir in spinach, corn, nutmeg and pepper. Cover and refrigerate for one hour. Melt 1 teaspoon butter in a skillet (about 4 inches across the bottom) over moderate heat; add a scant ¼ cup spinach mixture and cook until golden brown on bottom side — a few minutes. Turn with a wide spatula and brown other side. Keep warm in a low oven while cooking the remaining pancakes. Makes 12. Adapted from "New Classic Cuisine" by Albert and Michel Roux (Barron's).

Dollar surges

LONDON (AP) — The dollar, which has been rising all week, hit new all-time highs early today against the currencies of Italy and France. Gold bullion prices edged higher.

The dollar fell in Tokyo but rose against most major European currencies. European traders said the dollar posted most of its gains late Tuesday and was holding steady at slightly higher levels.

The dollar has been bolstered since Monday by renewed market expectations of a rise in U.S. interest rates. In addition, traders have cited sentiment that central bank intervention will have limited impact in breaking the dollar's climb.

Midmorning dollar rates compared with levels in Europe late Tuesday included:

--2.7350 Swiss francs, down from 2.7352.

–9.8340 French francs, up from 9.8265.

–3.6462 Dutch guilders, up from 3.6450.

–1,980.50 Italian lire, up from 1,978.50.

--1.33335 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3345.

The value of the British pound eased to $1.11165 from $1.1130.

After rising for two consecutive sessions, the dollar slipped to 259.75 yen in Tokyo, down from 259.85 yen. Later in London, the U.S. currency was quoted at 259.50 yen.

London's five main bullion dealers fixed a recommended midmorning gold price of $303.45 an ounce, up from $301.80 late Tuesday.

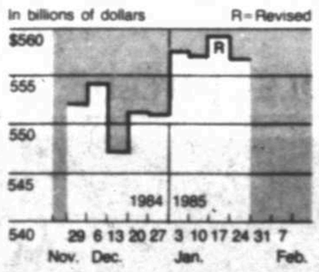

In Zurich, gold was bid at $303.40, up from $302.50.

Gold was quoted at $302 in New York late Tuesday.

Silver was bid at $6.22 an ounce, up from $6.195.

Volcker reiterates his call for budget cuts

By The Associated Press

Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker has renewed his call for Congress to make deep budget cuts, saying the United States cannot rely indefinitely on foreign investors to help finance the U.S. economy's huge credit needs.

The sizable inflow of foreign capital into the United States partly reflects demand for the strong dollar, which again broke records against three other currencies Tuesday.

Sales of new U.S. cars, meanwhile, fell 4.1 percent in late-January compared with a year earlier, but sales for the full month climbed 3.5 percent, the major automakers said.

Volcker said continued reliance on foreign capital to finance huge U.S. government and private credit needs eventually "undermines the confidence" of investors who lend their money on U.S. markets and "then you have the crisis."

"We, I hope, are a long way from that kind of situation ... but it's raising enough alarm bells we ought to be concerned about it," Volcker told the Joint Economic Committee.

Volcker gave no figures, but noted that foreign investors — attracted by high U.S. interest rates, which boost the dollar, and by confidence in the stability of the U.S. economy — have been pouring savings into this country steadily.

"We're a big, strong country and we can continue to attract that capital for some time, particularly if confidence remains in our economy," he said.

But he said that "favorable psychology" has limits and eventually would evaporate in the face of continued unchecked deficits. "Some day it will jump up and bite you," he said.

The dollar rose to all-time highs against the Italian lira, French franc and Spanish peseta for a second straight day Tuesday.

The dollar also set new highs against the currencies of Denmark and Norway, and established 13-year highs against the West German mark and Dutch guilder and a seven-year high against the Swiss franc.

While domestic car sales fell in the final 10 days of January, sales for the full month were the highest in six years. The percentage changes are based on sales per day, since there was one more actual selling day last month than in January 1983.

In the Jan. 21-31 period, sales fell to 26,850 a day from 28,002 daily. For the month, however, sales rose to 24,155 a day from 23,337 and were the highest for the month since 24,429 cars were sold daily in January 1979.

In late-January, Chrysler Corp. said its sales rose 18.1 percent, while Ford Motor Co.'s climbed 4.1 percent. Industry leader General Motors Corp., rebounding from strikes late last year, said sales edged up 1.2 percent.

—New York financier Carl Icahn, who owns 4.85 percent of the common stock of Phillips Petroleum Co., offered to buy Phillips for $8.1 billion, or $55 a share in cash and securities. He gave the company until the close of business today to respond or he will go directly to its stockholders.

Tycoon takes step toward bankruptcy

DALLAS (AP) — His father was a legendary wildcat oilman who laid the foundation for one of Texas' great fortunes. And Clint Murchison Jr. carried on the tradition until he fell on hard financial times and ill health.

Now hardly able to speak or sign his name, which appears on lawsuits running into the millions, Murchison has taken the first step toward bankruptcy.

The ailing tycoon's woes nearly landed on his front doorstep Tuesday as foreclosure proceedings were about to begin on the 25 wooded acres that surround his Dallas mansion. Murchison-owned Klimanorm Corp., owner of the land, filed for protection from creditors in bankruptcy court Monday.

Murchison, 61, who suffers from a degenerative physical condition, sold his beloved Dallas Cowboys football franchise a year ago because of his financial bind.

"Maybe the sale of the Cowboys was the beginning of the end," said head Murchison attorney Philip I. Palmer Jr. "When he sold the team, there were a lot of stories about his declining health. And a number of banks panicked — there was an effective run on his estate."

The Texas tycoon had planned to work out a debt repayment plan without taking refuge in bankruptcy court, Palmer said. But an El Paso bank didn't want to wait and had planned to auction off the 25 acres that surrounds Murchison's posh mansion.

"That was the triggering event," Palmer said Tuesday. "And bankruptcy law halts that foreclosure."

Few in Dallas business circles would have expected the Murchison name to be on a bankruptcy protection petition. The wheelings and dealings of his father, Clint Murchison Sr., were legendary, and the wealth of Clint Jr. and his family was well-known — he had even once been portraited on the cover of Time magazine.

"Clinton Murchison Sr. was the epitome of Texas oilman wheeler-dealer," Palmer said. "He would have fit right in to the television story 'Dallas.'"

Monday's maneuvering in bankruptcy court came on the heels of last Friday's gathering of more than 30 of Murchison's biggest creditors, Palmer said.

"We made several proposals to them and invited them to investigate his assets," Palmer said. "Now I presume I'll hear from them one way or another — either in court or some other way."

Palmer said Murchison's net worth is about $250 million, and at one time he had controlling interest in more than a hundred corporations ranging from real estate to silver mines in Mexico and an Oklahoma company that recycled cattle manure.

Forbes magazine even rated him as one of the nation's richest men in 1984.

But now, more than 50 creditors are trying to wrest about $200 million from his estate on scores of business deals that went awry, Palmer said.

Icahn said to oppose Phillips dismantling

NEW YORK (AP) — Financier Carl Icahn, who is offering to buy Phillips Petroleum Co. for $8.09 billion, is not planning to dismantle the huge oil company, Wall Street sources say.

The sources, who spoke only on condition they not be identified, say Icahn would sell some Phillips assets if he succeeds in his bid for the company, but no more than the company already contemplates selling.

Icahn declined comment on his plans and refused to elaborate on a letter to Phillips' chairman, William Douce, which outlined his offer of $55 a share in cash and securities for the stock in Phillips he does not yet own.

The offer was disclosed Tuesday by Phillips, which said it was seeking additional information on the bid and Icahn's sources of financing before evaluating the offer.

Icahn, who owns 7.5 million shares, or 4.85 percent of Phillips' stock, said that if Phillips did not agree to cooperate or match his offer, he would take his bid directly to shareholders.

Phillips also said it had not changed plans to hold a special shareholders meeting Feb. 22 to vote on a proposed restructuring of the company that Icahn opposes as "grossly inadequate."

That restructuring would require Phillips to sell about $2 billion in assets, a figure the sources said Icahn also was aiming for. The sources said Icahn would consider selling Phillips' North Sea oil holdings and the Aminoil energy business that Phillips recently acquired from R.J. Reynolds Industries Inc. for $1.7 billion.

The sources said Icahn was attracted to Phillips by its large cash flow and because he would be able to buy petroleum reserves in the United States at a "bargain price" of around $7.20 a barrel of oil equivalent. That compares with $14 to $20 a barrel for finding and developing U.S. oil reserves.

Analysts said there were many uncertainties surrounding the offer, including Icahn's plans to borrow $4.05 billion to finance the takeover.

Carl Icahn

"He (Icahn) may smoke out another deal," said Warren Shimmerlik, an analyst who follows Phillips for the investment firm Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith Inc. "The question is whether this sets off a new chain of events, whether it invites another offer."

Icahn is one of several Wall Street speculators who accumulated millions of shares in Phillips after an investor group led by T. Boone Pickens Jr., the chairman of Mesa Petroleum Co., agreed on Dec. 23 to drop its takeover bid for Phillips. Pickens' group had been offering $60 a share for Phillips' stock.

Pickens, whose group still holds 8.9 million Phillips shares, more than Icahn, said the votes behind those shares remain pledged to Phillips' management, although the group can sell its stock at any time.

After Icahn's proposal was disclosed, Phillips' stock spurted up $2.87½ a share to close at $50 Tuesday, the most active issue on the New York Stock Exchange. More than 5.1 million shares changed hands.

Mexico will not boost oil production to offset cuts

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico won't boost exports to make up for revenue lost because of its reduction of $1.25 per barrel in the price of light Isthmus crude oil, Energy Secretary Francisco Labastida Ochoa said Tuesday.

He also said the decision, announced Monday night, means a loss of $300 million to Mexico per year. Labastida Ochoa spoke to reporters after ceremonies marking the national holiday honoring the 1917 constitution in Queretaro, 138 miles northwest of the capital.

The announcement from the Energy, Mines and State Industry Department said, "The reduction in the price of Isthmus affects us, but not catastrophically. The contraction in the income of foreign exchange that it supposes is manageable for our economy."

The reduction had been expected after most members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries reduced light crude prices by $1.41 per barrel last week. Mexico is not a member of the cartel but generally follows its price guidelines.

The department's announcement, reiterated Tuesday by Labastida Ochoa, said Mexico plans to increase its export volume to an average of 1.5 million barrels a day in 1985.

That restores production to the normal level existing for the past three years before a temporary reduction of 100,000 barrels per day put into effect last fall in line with oil exporters' efforts to curb the international glut.

The Energy Department said the 1.5 million barrels per day level of exports "would be reached gradually as market conditions permit."

The announcement noted that Mexico is the world's fourth largest petroleum producer and the third largest exporter.

"Because of that, Mexico will not compensate for the loss of income derived from the reduction in the price of Isthmus crude with an increase in the volume of exports, since a surplus of crude could provoke a continuous drop in prices, which would bring greater problems than benefits," the statement said.

Isthmus light, whose reduced price is $27.75 per barrel, makes up about 45 percent of Mexico's total oil exports. The statement said the price of extra-heavy Maya crude will remain unchanged at $25.50 a barrel.

Oil is the country's No. 1 source of foreign exchange earning, representing about 75 percent of export income badly needed to meet payments on the massive foreign debt of $96 billion.

About half of Mexican exports go to the United States. Labastida Ochoa reiterated on Tuesday the Mexican position that no more than 50 percent of oil exports will go to any one country.

Texas helping GM select site

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Economic Development Commission will help General Motors evaluate potential Texas sites for the automaker's new Saturn manufacturing plant, officials say.

The Saturn project is GM's latest effort at building a compact car to compete with the imports.

Harden Wiedemann, executive director of the commission, Tuesday said GM's subsidiary Argonaut Real Estate "has asked us to help them shoulder some of the burden for the Texas communities interested in the plant."

General Motors is expected to choose a site for the Saturn plant by late spring or early summer, Wiedemann said.

OIL & GAS REPORT

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Midland gains dual completion

Staff Reports

A dual well has been finaled in the Strawn and Fusselman zones of the Warfield field in Midland County.

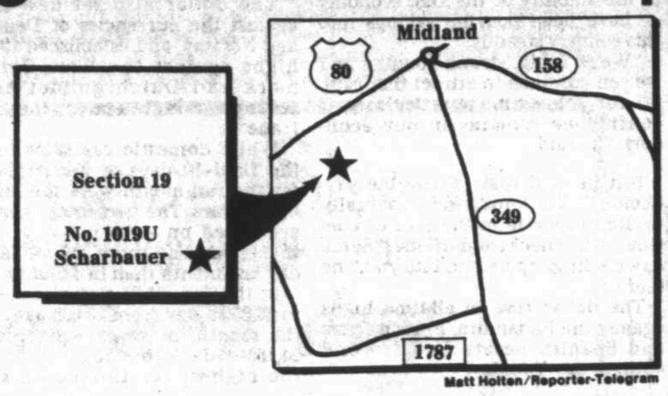

HERITAGE RESOURCES, INC. tested the No. 1019U Scharbauer in the Strawn zone to flow 118 barrels of 118 gravity crude, 218 Mcfpd and 8 barrels of water. Gas-oil ratio is 1,847:1. The Strawn was perforated from 10,181 to 12,657 ft., acidized with 34,500 gallons of 15 percent NeFe and fractured with 40,000 gallons.

Tptal depth of the well is 13,206 ft. Final casing set was 7 inches at 13,206 ft.

On a ground elevation of 2,823 ft., the well topped the Strawn at 10,168 ft. and the Devonian at 11,722 ft.

The well is located 990 ft. from south and 990 ft. from east lines of Section 19, Block 40, T-2-S, T&P survey, 9.85 miles southwest of Midland.

Scheduled as a 13,500 ft. wildcat, there is no test yet on the lower Fusselman zone.

Fusselman well tests for 80 barrels crude

RK PETROLEUM CORP. tested the No. 25-1 RK-Superior to pump 80 barrels of oil and 74 barrels of water from the Fusselman zone of the Epley field in Martin County. The Fusselman was perforated from 11,150 to 11,170 ft., open hole, and acidized with 550 gallons of acid.

Slated as a 11,500 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 11,215 ft. Final casing set was 5 1/2 inches at 11,100 ft.

On a ground elevation of 2,695 ft., formation tops include the Yates at 2,288 ft., Base of the Clearfork at 6,782 ft., Dean at 8,326 ft., Strawn at 10,116 ft., Lower Mississippian at 10,670 ft., and the Devonian at 10,972 ft.

The well is located 1,250 ft. from north and 2,300 ft. from east lines of Section 25, Block 36, T-1-N, T&P survey, seven miles north of Stanton.

District 7C gets two gas producing wells

Two strong gas producers have been completed in District 7C.

C.F. LAWRENCE & ASSOCIATES, INC. tested the No. 1 Shannon "I" for a calculated absolute open flow of 751,120 cubic feet of gas. The well is flowing from Upper San Andres perforations 2,098 to 2,113 ft., which were acidized with 1,500 gallons.

The well was drilled to 2,400 ft. and plugged back to 2,340 ft. Final casing set was 5 1/2 inches at 2,400 ft.

Location of the well is 990 ft. from south and 1,850 ft. from west lines of Section 10, Block A, ELRR survey, 18 miles east of Iraan.

The completion adds a sixth producer to the Virlaw (Upper San Andres) field as well as extending the Virlaw 5/8 of a mile north-northeast.

ROCO PETROLEUM, INC. tested the No. 4 South Aldridge in the Tokeen (Mississippian) field for a calculated absolute open flow of 650 Mcfpd. The well is flowing from Mississippian perforations 4,514 to 4,518 ft., which were acidized with 500 gallons.

Drilled to 4,875 ft., the well is plugged back to 4,562 ft. Final casing set was 4 1/2 inches at 4,675 ft.

The well is located 812 ft. from south and 3,843 ft. from east lines of Section 25, GWT&P survey, a half mile northeast of Content.

Bright rebuffed in Dallas bank takeover

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Federal Savings has rebuffed a $98.6 million takeover bid from H.R. "Bum" Bright, a Dallas millionaire who said he wants to create a "financial juggernaut."

Dallas Federal announced Tuesday it rejected Bright's offer for the savings association to enter a non-binding understanding for acquisition of all of its outstanding stock.

In documents filed with federal regulators, Bright offered $98.6 million, or $30 per share. That was about 1.5 times the book value of Dallas Federal, whose stock was $21.47 per share at the end of the third quarter.

A combination of Bright Savings and Dallas Federal would have created the second-largest savings association in Texas, with more than $4.4 billion in assets.

The owner of Bright Savings Association said he won't make another proposal to Dallas Federal.

Bright made his proposal Saturday in a letter to Dallas Federal that required a response by 2:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Dallas Federal officials said Tuesday that they rejected the offer because it did not contain specific terms and did not allow enough time for adequate consideration.

Bright already controls a substantial number of Dallas Federal shares, holding 9.7 percent of the company.

TYCOON

Last year alone, he was sued for more than $100 million by creditors who claimed he defaulted on loans in connection with real estate and business ventures around the country.

Murchison's mind and his sense of humor are as sharp as they ever were, Palmer said. But he said that physically, it is tough for Murchison to get out of his wheelchair or dial a telephone.

"It's poignant," Palmer said.

But Murchison's declining health is just one explanation offered for the fall of his financial empire. Some attribute it to bad business investments, others to an hyperextension of his bank accounts.

Still others say it's because of family squabbling that ensued after his brother, John, died in 1979 and Murchison's sister-in-law filed suit. That court battle forced him to liquidate many of his holdings.

A hearing has been scheduled in state district court Thursday on whether creditors can force the public auction of the Murchison estate to recoup their debts.

Although Klimanorm filed for bankruptcy, Murchison's creditors still could seek a judgment of involuntary bankruptcy against him. If that happened, his assets would be frozen and a court eventually could determine how his debts would be met.

Stock market gains

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market resumed its rally today after a sluggish opening.

Aerospace, telephone, steel and financial issues paced the gainers.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off 4.85 in the previous session, recovered 2.87 to 1,288.10 after two hours today. The measure hit a record high 1,292.62 on Jan. 29.

Gainers held nearly a 2-1 lead over losers on the New York Stock Exchange, whose composite index rose 0.31 to 104.73.

Big Board volume totaled 58.99 million shares at noon EST, against 65.08 million at that hour Tuesday.

Stocks have rallied strongly over the past month amid investor confidence about economic growth in 1985.

Investors also appeared to be buying stocks as an alternative to interest-bearing vehicles like bonds and money market mutual funds.

BUSINESS MIRROR

Everyone's for cutting deficit, but few agree on where to start

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — In the abstract almost everyone, everywhere is for cutting the deficit — Democrats and Republicans, president and Congress, rich and poor, the folks on Main Street and the brokers on Wall Street.

In the specifics they differ. Some want defense spending cut, others want taxes raised, and some seek cuts in social services. But overall they agree, as on few other issues, that Washington must get its finances in order.

But why?

Haven't those unprecedented budget deficits — almost $111 billion in 1982, more than $195 billion in 1983 and just over $175 billion in 1984 — done more good than harm?

Haven't they, for example, spurred economic recovery, put people back to work and helped government provide social, medical, educational, environmental, financial, business, transportation, municipal and other services?

True, to some extent.

But they have also kept interest rates up, raised the cost of housing, forced the dollar's value so high that American exporters cannot sell their goods abroad, and perhaps worsened the finances of less developed nations.

Overall, however, Americans so far have had a ball with borrowed funds, and the worst of the consequences foreseen by critics haven't yet darkened the horizon. But those who study the situation say a storm is gathering.

When the storm breaks is a matter of conjecture, but some analysts believe it could happen this year.

After analyzing the problem, the Committee for Economic Development lists four principal reasons for believing that recent and projected budget deficits "are extraordinarily damaging and must not be tolerated."

The CED, an independent group of 200 business executives and educators, begins its list with the contention huge deficits are likely to undermine the long-run potential for balanced economic growth.

It argues that more rapid economic growth cannot provide enough revenue to close the budget gap, as some students contend. If the economy were spurred to greater growth, the CED says, inflation and higher interest rates might ensue.

And those higher interest rates, it argues, become more significant as capacity utilization rises and competition develops between public and private sectors.

Gradually, it says, high interest rates add to the prices of exports, and deny capital for plants, equipment and housing, thus reducing the economy's capacity to achieve improved productivity and higher living standards.

Second on its list is the belief that deficits add to instability here and abroad and, because of the threat of higher interest rates, increase the potential for domestic and world financial crises.

High rates, it contends, can cause financial, social, and political upheavals in developing countries, with "a particularly dangerous potential for the entire financial system of the Western world."

Next, it states, huge and rising federal budget deficits over the next five years and beyond would make it impossible for Washington to make regular payments on the federal debt.

Net interest costs in the federal budget once ran no more than 2 percent of the gross national product, or total of all goods and services produced. But projections show percentages double that by 1989.

In effect, says CED, such percentages would mean one-third of every dollar that government was free to spend — which had not already been earmarked for some special purpose — would be used just to cover interest payments.

CED analysts ask that you consider this: With the publicly held federal debt projected at $2.5 trillion in fiscal year 1989, a one percentage point rise in interest rates would add $26 billion a year to the deficit.

Finally, the CED study concludes that failure to close federal budget gaps "would increasingly undermine respect for any kind of rules and procedures for budgetary discipline."

President Reagan might add another:

Failure to bring the budget under control would signify continued growth of government at the expense of private initiative and enterprise, which is the antithesis of a basic goal of his administration.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Don't judge CD's value by it's passbook cover

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I bought a certificate of deposit from a savings and loan association with which I had never done business before. The passbook I received seems rather skimpy. It has a couple of pages of very fine print and does not list my address. The CD's maturity and renewal date is written as "one year, 364 days." Other S&Ls and banks I've dealt with always gave me very elaborate documents. Do I have cause to worry?

A. Not as long as that S&L is a member of the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. FSLIC coverage protects each depositor's money up to $100,000, as does Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. coverage at every FDIC-member bank.

Don't fret about what you consider to be a "skimpy" passbook. Some S&Ls and banks give fancy-looking certificates to CD holders. Others don't. Some simply provide statements produced on computers.

Just be sure to read that passbook's fine print, so that you understand all the terms of the CD — a contract between you and the S&L.

There's nothing wrong with having a CD due to mature in exactly one year, 364 days. S&Ls and banks can write CDs with any maturities — including odd-sounding numbers of days. When that CD matures, you'll have your choice of either getting your money from that S&L or renewing the CD.

Tree crusher

This tree "crusher" is used to convert overgrown forest into a productive moose habitat. The machine has a 10-inch pipe to bend, or break trees. Three wheels, two on either side and one in the back, shatter the wood pieces.

Text and photos by Associated Press

The crack of shattering wood pierces the roar of the 318-horsepower diesel engine. Three wheels, each six feet in diameter with six-inch cutting blades, methodically chew 60-foot trees into 20-inch logs.

It's a rough, meandering ride on an ungainly machine resembling a tricycle being driven backwards — but with 40 tons of steel on the move nothing stands in your way.

The Alaska Department of Fish & Game (ADF&G) is trying to convert an overgrown forest on the Kenai Peninsula into more productive moose habitat.

Most commonly called "crushers," they operate in areas where aspen, birch and willow have grown beyond the reach of the moose, leaving them with only tree trunks instead of succulent buds and branches.

Crushing makes room for new growth, which does not have to compete for light and water with taller trees and other vegetation.

Throughout this century, a series of wildfires has remade the face of the peninsula and turned it into one of Alaska's richest wildlife habitats, but now biologists have turned to the crushers to help them manipulate the environment to the benefit of the moose.

Three of the monster machines built by R.G. LeTourneau Inc., of Longview, Texas, were purchased by the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service (USFWS) in 1970 to speed reforestation.

The operator's cab sits over the front wheels. A pusher bar, made of 10-inch pipe, juts ahead 12 feet off the ground to bend or break the trees, and the huge wheels finish the job. The rear wheel is mounted on a massive gear to provide the steering and crush the trees which pass directly under the 16-foot wide machine.

Because of their tremendous weight and the mushy terrain, the crushers can operate only in winter. When it gets down to about 15 degrees, the trees are brittle enough that most snap with the first nudge from the pusher bar. But even stubborn ones are no match for the power of the machines.

"We never found a tree big enough to stop us," says Dick Kivi, who ran the crushing program for the USFWS in the 1970s. Although designed to handle only 20- to 24-inch diameter trees, the crushers are slowed only by overturned root systems, he says.

Looking like some sort of prehistoric monster, the crusher is swallowed as it makes a turn into the dense timber.

At 38 feet long and 14 feet tall, the machines can plod at a pace of 3 mph but they usually move at about 2 mph when working. Under optimum conditions they can reduce three acres to rubble every hour.

Moose eat young birch trees in Skilak Lake Loop, Alaska, where the crushers converted the forest to a moose habitat. The moose cannot eat the large trees, but they thrive on the smaller growth.

Despite the sound and fury, the crushers don't seem to bother the moose much. Al Johnson, a ADF&G seasonal employee who runs the operation, says the first time moose see a crusher they run away. The second day the moose just trot away. And by the third day, they barely get out of the way, he says.

"They're (eating) the stuff we just knocked down," says Johnson.

Because of the climatic and soil conditions on the Kenai, tree growth is relatively slow. Johnson says it would take another 120 years before any of the crushed trees would have been big enough for commercial use.

"There's no market for timber in this part of Alaska, and I really don't see any in the future," says Johnson, a University of Minnesota forestry graduate who worked in the upper Midwest before coming to Alaska.

Given the management policies of the federal agency, it's unlikely the timber would be sold anyway, says Johnson.

All three crushers usually work together, traveling in staggered formation so no straggling trees are left. But unlike the work done in the 1970s, the crushing now is done in irregular patterns, creating a mosaic of dense forest interspersed throughout the target area.

Ted Spraker, the ADF&G biologist who supervises the program begun last year, says the state has learned from the mistakes made by the USFWS.

The crushing in the 1970s tended to follow straight lines, clearing huge, regular tracts. Some cleared areas were as much as a mile across. "That offended a number of people from an aesthetic standpoint," says Mike Hedrick of the USFWS.

The state is striving for a more natural look, with open expanses no more than 400 yards wide. It also is incorporating visual screening from roads and trying to avoid the "corn row effect," Spraker says.

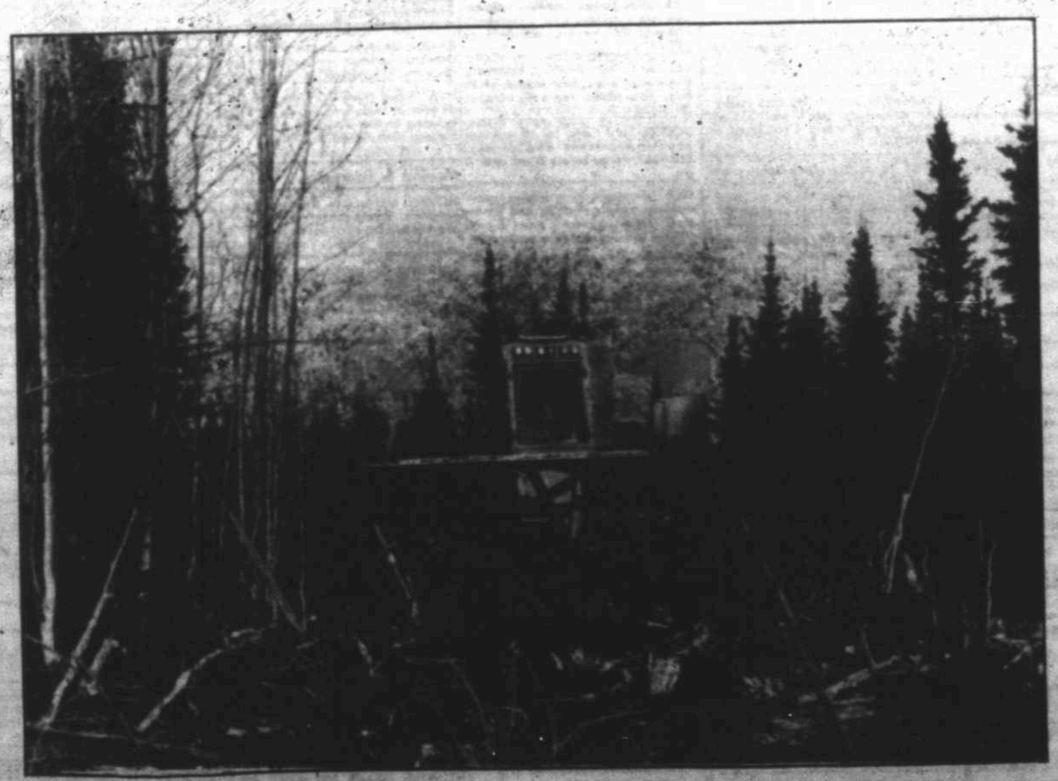

"The main purpose of habitat improvement is diversity, an area containing new growth, middle-aged trees and old growth," says Spraker.

For a variety of political and financial reasons, the USFWS got out of the crushing business in 1978. They drove the three crushers to the area where the state now is working and virtually abandoned them.

But the state was convinced of the value of the work. One study of areas crushed in the 1970s, projected that over a 25-year span, 120 more moose would use a given acre of crushed land than if the same area had not been crushed.

So when the federal government put one of the crushers up for sale, the state was the high bidder at $20,000. Seeing that the state intended to resume the program, the USFWS ended up transferring the other two to the state for about $4,000 to cover the paperwork.

Until 1980, the affected land was known as the Kenai National Moose Range and its sole purpose was to foster moose. But after the Alaska National Interest Lands Conservation Act was passed, the area was renamed the Kenai National Wildlife Refuge and the federal government's focus shifted to managing the land for all wildlife species.

The crushers snap trees and grind them with their 6-foot-in-diameter wheels. By crushing selected areas, the shorter growth is stimulated.

Skilak Lake Loop is peaceful a year after the area had been cleared by the crushers, which cut the 60-foot trees into 20-inch logs.

Windscape... easy living at its best

Every apartment is near a large, well lighted parking area. Each of these areas feeds directly into a major street to make access fast and easy. Large open spaces, swimming pool and beautiful landscaping create a very relaxed and pleasant setting.

All apartments have large living areas with focus on the wood burning fireplace. Well equipped kitchens are perfect for meal preparation or entertaining. Downstairs apartments have patios while upstairs apartments have sundecks. Closets are unusually large.

Washer/Dryer Available at no Extra Charge.
