Britain still making war preparations

WASHINGTON (AP) — With the British armada in the South Atlantic reportedly ready to go on "full war alert," British Foreign Secretary Francis Pym is concluding talks today with Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. on the Falklands crisis.

Pym planned to return to London tonight after meetings with Haig and National Security adviser William Clark. Officials said Pym might also meet with President Reagan.

British sources held out no hope for a breakthrough during Pym's visit here and were pessimitic that a military confrontation could be avoided in the dispute with Argentina.

After five hours of meetings Thursday with Haig, Pym was asked about the possibility of a peaceful settlement.

"There is always hope," he said, "but I have never disguised the difficulty of it."

At issue were the British demand for self-determination for the Falkland Islanders and Argentina's insistence that its claim to sovereignty over the area is non-negotiable.

British defense sources said Thursday the entire 61-ship armada in the South Atlantic would go on "full war alert" tonight when it came within reach of Argentine aircraft.

War readiness for the Royal Navy at sea means off-watch personnel sleep in their clothes, carry gas masks and life jackets at all times, spend only two minutes taking a shower, wear tin hats on upper decks and stop wearing nylon clothing to reduce risk of burns in action.

Argentina's president, Gen. Leopoldo Galtieri, visited the islands Thursday and ordered the 9,000 Argentine troops deployed there to defend them "until the ultimate consequences and the last drop of blood."

See related stories, Page 8A

Galtieri, dressed in combat fatigues, became the first Argentine head of state to visit the islands, which Argentina calls the Malvinas. He visited the capital of Stanley, renamed Puerto Argentino after Argentina seized the islands from Britain on April 2.

There were reports Thursday that British destroyers and troops were within striking distance of South Georgia, the Falklands dependency defended by an estimated 140 Argentine soliders. It lies about 800 miles east of the Falklands and about 1,100 miles from the Argentine mainland.

The small number of Argentine troops on South Georgia led to speculation Thursday that Britain might make its first military move there.

Asked about that possibility, an Argentine military officer said, "And after that, what do they do?"

Diplomats agreed that the big question was what Britain would do when its fleet reached the main islands.

Press Association, the British domestic news agency, reported the cabinet was deeply divided between hawks who favor a quick military strike and doves who counsel further talks.

Quoting an unidentified government source, the agency said, "The 'pull trigger' lobby appeared to have a majority."

Britain's strategy from the start has been to regain the islands through negotiations, using the threat of military force to pressure the Argentines.

"While we are making every effort to make a peaceful settlement, the use of force cannot be ruled out," Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said Thursday.

Cross, who lived on County Road 60 East in Midland, was pronounced dead at the scene by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine at 12:30 a.m. today. His body was taken to Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home. Water, energy lead concerns

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

After more than a year of study, the Texas 2000 Commission has defined seven areas that could impact Texas' booming economy if not properly handled, according to the executive director of that organization.

Dr. Victor Arnold, speaking Thursday afternoon to the West Texas Chamber of Commerce convention in The Midland Hilton, pinpointed those seven areas as water, energy, agriculture, transportation, research and development, government finance and relations with Mexico.

"Any one area could put a damper on Texas' booming economy if not nurtured," he said. But with this study, "We plan to avoid the crisis and to benefit the most from these resources."

Scarcity of water in the future holds the greatest potential for disrupting the economy, according to Arnold. "There is no substitute for water" when it runs out, he said.

THE TEXAS 2000 Commission, in its March report that culminates more than a year's worth of work, is calling for "innovative state action. We will have to break the time-honored traditions. We need to develop and implement a statewide system for management of the ground water. Currently, there is no conservation here."

In addition to conservation and water quality projects, Arnold cited importation of water from other states as a necessary means to keep up with the demand.

Turning to energy, Arnold noted that Texas' economy is dependent upon one energy source and that is petroleum. The commission in turn has recommended the state begin pushing development of sub-economic resources, such as solar and wind energy and to continue using nuclear power.

"THERE ARE 100 billion barrels of oil in the ground that we can't get out with current technology," he said, adding that the state should encourage development of that higher technology.

Lewis lists Texas' economic attributes

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

The availability of labor, the climate and, most importantly, the condition of the state government are three reasons why Texas has achieved a high economic status, according to State Rep. Gibson Lewis.

"It is a complete understatement to say our state is wealthy, vibrant and growing," the representative from Tarrant County said Thursday during a session of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce convention at the Midland Hilton.

He cited Texas as the third largest state in population and bank deposits, 18th in per capita income, 46th in taxes and 13th in average incomes.

He also noted the low unemployment rate and low number of state employees per 1,000 people. Texas is also at the top of the list in the percentage of state funds spent on education, he said.

Due to the "pay as you go approach" of the state government, Lewis said taxes have not increased in the last decade. With a tax valuation of over $13.3 billion in 1982 which is expected to increase to $14.6 billion in 1983, Lewis said the state possesses an advantage over many others "because we have a surface to work from and not a deficit."

"The government in Texas has always reflected our true American heritage: less government is better gov-

For first time since '65, consumer prices down 3.3 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices, down for the first time since 1965 and the most since 1953, fell at an annual rate of 3.3 percent last month, the government reported today.

Plummeting gasoline prices, the product of the persistent recession and and worldwide oil glut, posted their sharpest drop on record, as did fuel oil prices.

Today's Labor Department announcement of March price activity means checks for the nation's 36 million Social Security recipients should rise an average of $27 beginning in July.

The 0.3 percent seasonally adjusted decline in the March index further confirms economists' predictions that the recession, which has persisted since the summer, is moderating the spiral of increasing prices.

At the White House, deputy presidential press secretary Larry Speakes said: "Today's good news is evidence of the dramatic progress made in this area."

"We believe it is because of our consistent economic policy, which has cut the rate of increase in federal spending, our support of a stable monetary policy and our policy of non-intervention in the market place. All Americans are experiencing the benefits of the lower inflation rates."

Murray L. Weidenbaum, chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers, told a congressional committee:

"Cutting the rate of inflation has meant that the consumer's dollars are going a lot further today than if inflation had stayed up there in those double digits. If shoppers are buying a pound of hamburger or a loaf of bread, chances are they are not paying any more today than a year ago."

If prices fell for 12 straight months at March's rate, the yearly decline would be 3.3 percent. The annual rate reported by the Labor Department is based on a more precise calculation of monthly changes than the figure the department makes public.

All the increases are adjusted for normal seasonal variations.

For the first three months of the year, inflation rose a small 1 percent, the lowest quarterly gain since 1965, today's report said.

Clayton Williams reveals large oil property sale

Clayton Williams Jr., Midland independent oil and gas operator, today announced the sale of oil and gas properties in the Burleson County portion of the Austin Chalk Trend to Petro-Lewis Corporation, a Denver-based company, for $110,500,000 cash.

The sale, which involves 152 wells, is effective May 1, and closing of the sale is to be completed by May 1.

The properties involved in the deal have been operated by The Williams Company, one of several Midland-headquartered companies owned by Williams. Williams said that company still owns about 550,000 acres and 79 wells in the Austin Chalk area and will continue to operate the properties. Currently, the company is utilizing three drilling rigs in the Trend, with a completion average of four wells per month.

Williams said the sale to Petro-Lewis involved 13,000 acres. He added that after the sale he and his companies have a remaining daily production of 6,200 barrels of oil and 74 million cubic feet of gas. He also has more than 2,300,000 acres under lease throughout most of the oil and gas producing basins in the United States. The Williams company maintains exploration and production offices in Midland, San Antonio, Fort Stockton, Giddings,

Midland man satisfactory after accident

A traffic accident at the intersection of Mineola Street and Louisiana Avenue early Thursday morning resulted in hospitalization for one person and minor injuires to three others.

Listed in satisfactory condition today at Midland Memorial Hospital with a broken jaw and facial lacerations was Wille Grimes, 26, of 1707-A North Marienfeld.

According to police, Grimes was southbound on Mineola and attempting a left turn onto Louisiana when his 1966 Volkswagen and a northbound 1977 Oldsmobile driven by 19-year-old Jerry Oudems of 401 E. Dormard collided at the intersection. Oudems and two passengers in his car were not seriously injured, according to police.

A 6-year-old Midland boy escaped with minor injuries after he was hit by a car in the 3200 block of West Wall Avenue about 3:55 p.m. Thursday.

Released following emergency treatment at Midland Memorial Hospital was Jerry Danker, 6, of 3206 W. Kansas Ave. Police said he was crossing the street in the middle of the block when he was struck by an eastbound car driven by Don Stalenski, 26, of Odessa. No charges were filed.

Mexican suspect in shooting death

ANDREWS — A 28-year-old Mexican national was arrested in Marfa Thursday in connection with the shooting death of a convenience store clerk during a robbery in Andrews Tuesday night.

The suspect, whose identity is being withheld by Andrews County Sheriff Wayne Farmer pending futher investigation, is in custody in Andrews County Jail.

According to one report, the man was arrested as he was boarding a bus bound for Mexico. A statewide all points bulletin had been issued for a man in his mid-20s described as 5 feet, 7 inches in height, slenderly built, with frizzy hair, light-colored shirt and carrying a bedroll or sleeping bag.

A man fitting that description was sighted in Big Spring at 1 a.m. Wednesday and, later that morning, hitchhiking west along Interstate 20 47 miles east of Van Horn.

Autopsy ordered on 5-month-old boy from Odessa

ODESSA — Ector County Justice of the Peace Robert Pine has ordered an autopsy to determine what killed a 5-month-old Odessa baby who was pronounced on arrival at Medical Center Hospital early this morning.

According to police, an investigation was launched when bruises were found on the back and stomach of Tony Tyrone Pesina after he was taken to the hospital by ambulance from his home at 1409 S. Crane, Apt. 26, about 6:50 a.m today. It is not known when the autopsy results will be available.

Odessa Police Department to reactivate SWAT team

ODESSA — The Odessa Police Department is reactivating its SWAT (Special Weapons and Tactical) team, according to Public Information Officer Lt. Rusty Baker, who said: "There's no immediate need for it, but we want to be prepared in case of an emergency."

Baker said the team will consist of officers under the age of 35 who are in excellent health and physical condition and who will still handle their regular duties. They will undergo extensive training by professional instructors and selection of team members is scheduled to get under way in late May.

Although Odessa once had a SWAT team, it was disbanded in the wake of high officer turnover that has since stabilized. The decision to reactivate it came last week, according to Baker.

Water, energy lead areas of concern

Arnold noted that Texas is the No. 1 cattle state in the nation. And in 1980, it ranked third in agriculture cash receipts. But water scarcity is threatening a slowdown in agriculture, he said.

To adjust to the changing water picture, Arnold suggested new crops and new technologies be implemented "in order to survive. Texas boasts some of the finest agriculture research in the country. We recommend more of this."

Transportation needs will increase as the population jumps 50 percent by the year 2000, according to the executive director. "The challenge is to keep roads and highways in good repair while expanding the system."

To succeed at this goal will take a cooperative effort of public and private services, he contended. In its recommendation, the commission suggested a needs assessment study be made that would look at demands up through the year 2000 "so a transportation plan can be drawn up."

He also suggested user fees be set aside to pay the increasing cost of all forms of transportation. "The state should shift the burden of paying transportation costs to users of the systems. And the revenues from the users fees should go directly to the system that generated them. Don't cream them off the top and send them hither and yon."

AND THAT USER FEE also applies to the state gasoline tax. Arnold said the 4-cents-a-gallon tax should go directly back to roads and highways. "You don't have that now."

Noting that research and development is tied into all these areas, Arnold described it as a necessary tool to accomplish goals within the areas of water, energy and transportation.

"R and D is about as sexy as a rock, but it is the backbone of economic growth," he said. "In Texas it is more than a means to a number of ends."

Texas, Arnold continued, should become a "complete center for new technology, second to none in the world."

The state's major source of financing — the petroleum industry — will decline in the future, according to Arnold, and that means a reduction in state revenues. "Decline in fossil fuel production is inevitable. Texas needs to diversify its economy" to avoid a bleak future.

Presently, he said, Texans are "uncertain about the new federalism, uncertain to tax ourselves for new services."

Cutbacks in federal funding to states appears crystal clear for the future, and Texas must deal with it now, he urged.

"The Texas 2000 Commission recommended that the governor and state legislature create an economic advisory council to monitor changes in the revenue and spending. We also recommend development of a demographic economic model to track and project changes in the state's economy. No one now has a handle on it."

Although relations with Mexico fell at the bottom of the list, Arnold said its importance isn't equated with its position. If Texas ignores the economic situation in Mexico today, "we will live to regret it. If you think we have visitors from Mexico now, you haven't seen anything yet. Texas should act in an advisory capacity in negotiating good foreign policy with Mexico."

Out of these seven areas, said Arnold, the commission came to four general conclusions.

—Basic issues in each of the areas are closely interwoven.

—An increased research and development area is fundamental to Texas' future.

—Federal resources to help finance activities of state and local governments are being cut severely.

—The March report should be regarded as the beginning of a sustained process.

In concluding, Arnold noted the commission during its work stuck to the broad principle of keeping the role of government at a minimum and preserving the tradition of local autonomy and responsibility.

White confident he will win gubernatorial election

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Mark White was exuding an air of confidence Thursday night when he attended a reception in his honor at the Petroleum Club.

Mark White

Not only does the attorney general believe he will win the Democratic gubernatorial primary on May 1, but he also stated he could beat incumbent Republican Gov. Bill Clements in the November general election.

White is one of six candidates hashing it out in the Democratic primary. While he is considered one of three frontrunners, the other two men said earlier this week during campaign stops in Midland that they were planning on a runoff. Those hoping to force a runoff are Bob Armstrong, currently state land commissioner, and Buddy Temple, a member of the Railroad Commission.

"A poll shows we have increased our lead. And if we work hard in the last eight days we should be able to win without a runoff," White said, adding that he was shown to be taking 55 percent of the votes.

And polls also are showing "we're ahead of Clements," White added.

Denying that he was using the attorney general's seat as a stepping stone to the governor's chair, White said he didn't make up his mind about running for the state's top post until last November.

White claimed he has been focusing his attention on this campaign to the issues and expressed a hope that his opponents would start telling the truth about him.

"I've been telling the truth about my opponents. I haven't made any statements about Temple that weren't true," he said.

But with barely a week to go before judgment day, the campaign apparently had boiled down to each of the three men answering charges made by the other two as White delved into his own answers.

"I am not for a 30 percent severance tax on oil and gas. My vote shows that I'm opposed to increasing that tax," he said in answer to charges made by Temple. Continuing on this Temple train of thought, White charged that the RRC member has been rubber-stamping utility companies' rate increases and accepting campaign contributions from those firms.

"The public utilities are guaranteed a fair rate of return on their investments" but they shouldn't get more than a fair share, according to White.

Criticized by his opponents for using outside counsel on some cases, White replied: "Gov. Clements wanted to hire extra outside lawyers in the federal prison case. We had hired outside lawyers in the Howard Hughes case before I took office. We just continued it; that was the most complicated will case in the history of Texas and you don't switch lawyers mid-stream. And in the case involving desegregation of higher education we hired Washington, D.C., attorneys. We felt they would better speak the language of the federal government, and we succeeded."

Remarking that "my opponents say I've been a lousy attorney general," White proceeded to list what he called achievements of his term: "We're fighting the Windfall Profits Tax in court right now in Wyoming," and Texas won its suit against General Motors for deceptive trade practices.

Turning to issues, White focused on education and retention of classroom teachers. He called for increasing teachers' salaries to retain those already in the classroom and to attract new ones. He also pushed for restoring discipline in the classroom.

Lewis praises state economy

ernment," Lewis said.

However, problems do exist in Texas and Lewis discussed a few of them that could involve major legislation such as financing of public education and higher education, shortage of water, renovation and construction of state parks, and a revision of the prison system.

Although Texas spends a larger percentage of funds on education than most states, Lewis said that the next legislative session will consider changes in the public education system. He cited teacher salary increases as "always an issue," adding that an emphasis will be placed on teachers retention. Different methods of financing public education as well as changes in curriculum and standards will be "argued and debated," he said.

Faculty raises and tenure for higher education instructors will probably be dealt with by legislators, and the distribution of permanent university funds could see some action.

He added that the reinstitution of an ad valorem tax would be considered during a special legislative session.

Environmental issues, including the shortage of water, the need for more state parks, particularly in urban areas, and the proper disposal of nuclear waste could be the target of potential major legislation, he said.

Revisions to driving while intoxicated laws, the overcrowding of prisons and early paroles also will be issues debated during the session.

Amendments to mass transit proposals in urban areas, especially Houston and the Dallas-Fort Worth area, most likely will be challenged by legislators.

Long-range challenges faced by Texas legislators include providing adequate services for a fast-growing population, providing alternatives for energy when oil and gas reserves decrease, increasing agricultural development and examining all of the state's water needs for the next 100 years, he said.

Houston, Jackson, Miss., Tulsa, Okla., Denver, Colo., and Columbus, Ohio.

Williams said the sale to Petro-Lewis doesn't effect three other Williams companies which operate in the Austin Chalk area — Clajon Gas Company, Wil Gas Co., and ClayCo Pipeline Co.

Clajon is an intrastate pipeline company which operates a 700-mile pipeline system currently handling about 270 million cubic feet of gas per day in four West Texas counties and nine counties in southeast Texas.

Wil Gas owns two gasoline plants in the Austin Chalk Trend, one at LaGrange in Fayette County and the other near Bryan in Burleson County. The two plants have a total processing capacity of 275 million cubic feet of gas daily and area currently processing about 230 million cubic feet per day.

ClayCo is an oil purchasing and transportation company which operates 75 trucks and an oil pipeline in southeast Texas. The company moves about 40,000 barrels of oil a day.

Key West threatens to secede from Union

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP) — This island town's officials say they're seceding from the Union in a half-serious effort to provoke the government into dismantling an illegal-aliens checkpoint on the only road to the mainland.

Key West, which stands like a stinger at the end of the scorpion-tail chain of islands that form the Florida Keys, becomes "The Conch Republic" today at a flag-raising ceremony to protest the checkpoint that caused a 19-mile traffic jam last weekend.

Mayor Dennis Wardlow said if it takes a civil war, Key West will start one — and then apply for foreign aid.

City officials say the roadblock is killing tourism in the island chain, and Key West natives, known as conchs, and other residents have been especially dependent on tourists since the U.S. Navy pulled out of town in 1974 after 150 years.

"This is only partly humorous. There's a great deal of anger in this town," said Townsend Kiefer, a writer and civic activist who has been named minister of foreign affairs in the new government.

U.S. District Judge C. Clyde Atkins in Miami ruled Thursday that the checkpoint set up Sunday on U.S. 1 was within the Border Patrol's authority to stop illegal immigrants.

"By establishing that border, they have declared us a foreign nation," said Wardlow, whose new title will be prime minister.

"We're tired of the U.S. government picking on little Key West," he said. "I guess they think we're kidding, and we're not."

About 30 officials and civic leaders in this island city of 25,000 permanent residents have been given new jobs in the new "government" ranging from secretary of underwater affairs to minister of nutrition.

City officials planned to lower the Stars and Stripes at high noon today and replace it with a blue banner emblazoned with a yellow sun and pink conch shell. They even talked of issuing currency — "conch coins" and "bubba bucks" — and cars around town Thursday sported bumper stickers reading: "BORDER PASS."

"We're not quite to the point of ordering machine guns for the shrimp boat fleet, but this is a town of individualists, for the most part, who are quite fed up," Kiefer said.

Officials say tourism had already been hurt by traffic jams on the two-lane causeway into town, water shortages and the arrival of 125,000 Cuban refugees in the Mariel boatlift here two years ago.

Wardlow claimed hotel bookings were down 27 percent since the roadblock was put up.

The roadblock just south of Florida City on the mainland has netted 34 illegal aliens, 150 pounds of marijuana and three grams of cocaine, but merchants say tourists avoid the Keys.

Correction

A story in Wednesday's Reporter-Telegram mistakenly said Terry Lynn Kaufman was recently paroled from prison after serving and earning one year, five months of a 15-year sentence for forgery. Instead of a 15-year sentence, she had been sentenced to two years. The Reporter-Telegram regrets the error.

Study: School savings take awhile

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although taxpayers might expect the cost of running a public school system to drop right away when enrollments decline, a government study says it takes three to five years for most savings from classroom vacancies to be realized.

The National Center for Education Statistics reported that public school enrollments fell steadily from 1972 to 1980, from a peak of 42.5 million to 38.3 million.

However, the Department of Education agency said that despite the enrollment decline of almost 10 percent in elementary and secondary schools, costs rose almost 127 percent, from $38.3 billion in 1971 to $86.9 billion in 1980.

"When expenditures are adjusted for inflation to 1980 dollars, however, the increase amounted to only 16 percent..." the center said. "The services purchased for $38.3 billion in 1971 would cost $74.9 billion in 1980 dollars."

The actual school bills were $72.4 billion in 1978 and $78.3 billion in 1979. But after taking inflation into account, the center said the adjusted figures fell from $89.3 billion in 1978 to $89.3 billion in 1979 to $86.9 billion in 1980.

This amounted to a 3.2 percent drop over two years while enrollment fell 4.5 percent.

Many school districts have had a hard time explaining to local taxpayers why their tax bills were rising while enrollments fell.

"Net savings from declining enrollments are not fully realized in the year of the decline," the center said.

Most savings do not show up for several years "largely due to the continuation of fixed costs such as operation and maintenance of the school plant, student transportation and indirect expenses for professional services," it said.

Inflation propelled costs upward, as did mandates from Congress to improve and expand services for the handicapped and other students with special needs, it said.

The public schools spent an average of $2,269 for each student in 1980. That was up from the actual $903 or, adjusting for inflation, $1,766 per pupil spent in 1971.

The post-World War II baby boom ended in 1964. The age group in elementary school started to drop in 1968, while the secondary school age group did not start to decline until 1975, the center said.

One reason for the upward pressure on school costs was that the percentage of students in high school rose from 29 percent in 1971 to 32 percent in 1980, it added.

"A general rule...is that secondary students cost approximately 1.5 times as much to educate as elementary students," it said.

Players find unusual use for bones

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The University of Pittsburgh is investigating charges that undergraduate students pulled and kicked seven human skulls onto a field before a rugby match, horrifying their opponents.

Spokeswoman Daryl Clemmens said Monday night that a student judicial board was looking into the allegations.

Clemmens said Pitt officials were worried the incident could hurt the university's organ donor program. Top transplantation get transplanted.

"We wouldn't want people considering organ donations to get confused over what to be a misuse of anatomical parts."

Reports are that a group of rugby players put the skulls onto the field before matches with a team in Huntingdon in Huntingdon County.

Officials were shocked by the display, and said that the skulls be removed, the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette reported today.

Games were started and the Pittsburgh A and B teams won their matches by scores of 4-0 and 1-0, according to the newspaper.

The incident allegedly occurred March 20 in Lions Gap, four miles from Huntingdon. Police in the Huntingdon County community said they knew of the incident, but declined comment.

Juniata College, a student at nearby, Juniata College, said some of the skulls had skin sections on them with identification tag.

"Some of them [the unidentified skulls] were pulled on the field," Gazette reported. "It was pretty gruesome. I was sick and I think everybody else on the team was," he said. There are a couple of other people (on the team) going into medicine and we were horrified."

Ms. Clemmens said she was not permitted to identify the students and couldn't say how many students allegedly were involved.

"There was some question whether all the people said to be involved are Pitt students," she said.

Ms. Clemmens said materials allegedly were removed from the Pitt dental school, although no police report was filed.

"Some materials were taken from the anatomy lab in the school of dental medicine, but they were subsequently returned," she said.

"We are trying to decide whether there were any laws broken," she said. "The only thing we found is the possible transportation of human bodies without having a license, like a mortician would have to have. From our point of view, the only laws that may have been broken were the possible thefts of anatomical parts from our laboratories."

City Magistrate Andrew Kurta said he was unfamiliar with case.

Ms. Clemmens said Pitt officials were notified in early April about the incident by Dr. Arnold Tilden, dean of students at Juniata College. Tilden declined to identify any of the Huntingdon players, but said none are students.

Ms. Clemmens said she doesn't know how soon the judicial panel will complete its inquiry and make a recommendation to Conney Kimbo, vice chancellor of student affairs.

If it warrants, the panel can recommend various disciplinary actions against the students, from a reprimand to expulsion, she said.

Town finds many residents subpoenaed

SEDALIA, Mo. (AP) — The mayor, the postmaster and dozens of other people in this tiny town have been subpoenaed in a federal investigation into the killing of a rifle-toting bully who was shot as 60 people stood by.

During a coroner's inquest the dead man's wife identified the person who she said pulled the trigger on a shotgun street July 10. But despite her report and a county grand jury inquiry, no one has been charged in the killing of Ken Rex McElroy, 45.

The FBI is investigating the case and a federal grand jury is scheduled to convene next week in Kansas City, said U.S. Attorney Robert Ulrich. He gave no further details.

The investigation has taken some residents by surprise, including Sarah Hartman, who said she knew of people who had been subpoenaed to appear before a federal grand jury in Kansas City on April 27 and 28.

"The rumor's there's around 70 of them," Mrs. Hartman said.

Her husband, Jim, the town postmaster, said he received a subpoena ordering him to appear before the grand jury April 29.

Susan Marie Bates has been selected queen of the Midland Morning Lions Club. A senior at Lee High School, she will compete for district queen in Big Spring this weekend. She is a member of the Student Council, band, flag team and Golf Course Road Church of Christ.

Governors request that poor's money not be cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — Saying the poor are already suffering financially, the nation's governors are asking Congress to refrain from making more cuts in federal aid to the needy.

"I know some cuts had to be made, and you made them last year," North Carolina Gov. James Hunt told the House Ways and Means public assistance subcommittee.

"We're living with them. It's tough, but things are tough all over. We're simply asking, 'Don't cut us again!' Times are hard. We're talking about people, food, shelter," Hunt said.

Hunt, chairman of the National Governors' Association's human resources committee, said that even maintaining current spending levels into next year would leave the states with less money because of inflation.

With local economies severely depressed, Hunt said federal assistance to the states has dropped 25 percent in the last year, affecting many services for the needy.

Rebuild work begins

Work crews from Tall City TV Cable Co. are working in the area south of Cuthbert Avenue this week during the Rebuild program, according to a spokesman. And the company is announcing the opening of its customer service department.

The five contract crews are working in Phase I of the Rebuild program, which extends south of Highway 158 and east to Andrews Highway. The work involves replacing every line, anchor and drop of cable and often means the worker must be in a backyard or up a pole to accomplish the job. The first 40 miles of Phase I will be turned on 36 channels between May 1 and May 15.

Dixie Anderson from the Greenfield, Ohio cable system will serve as customer service representative. Under the system, a customer can call or come by the office with the billing problem. Ms. Anderson, who has 12 years of experience in cable, may be contacted at 694-7722, extension 23 or 24. Address of the office is 2530 S. Midkiff Road.

Rotary holding district conference here

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

District 573 of Rotary International includes 47 Rotary clubs from Midland-Odessa to the Panhandle.

And, according to James A. Speer, representative of Rotary International President Stanley E. McCaffrey, the district contains much more than a large number of members.

Speer, who is in Midland this weekend for the 25th Annual District 573 Rotary International Conference, said Midland's district has provided beneficial services for the entire community.

"Rotary's motto is service above self," Speer, who lives in California, explained at the Midland Holiday Inn Country Villa Thursday. "That's an almost impossible thing to live by, but it is an objective."

The district, presently under the leadership of John R. Seay, governor, has given over $600,000 to the Rotary Foundation over a period of years. Area members have also instigated the Rotary Youth Leadership Awards (RYLA) which includes trips to New Mexico for chosen young people. The students are accompanied by adults from various fields of employment who share their experiences with them for one week. Over 160 people are involved in the RYLA, Speer said.

Rotary International presently is operating in 157 countries, with over 19,000 Rotary clubs and 900,000 members. "Rotarians are everyone," he said with a smile.

"World peace and understanding is Rotary's theme. We are eager to know about world-wide events. We're in so many countries we feel it is important for them to determine what their particular needs are," Speer explained.

"But we have left a lot of autonomy or individuality to each of the clubs," he added.

Internationally, Rotary has sent nearly 1,800 people to other counties this year. "They have to cross boundaries," he said, explaining that the members act as "ambassadors" from the United States.

The Health, Hunger and Humanity Program (HHH), which was started in 1979, is operating in 13 countries. Over four million cases of vital vaccines, such as polio, tetanus and measles, have been donated through this program.

"There are 1.2 billion people in the world that are destitute," Speer said. "We're just scratching the surface, but we feel like we're doing something to help."

Besides providing scholarships for journalists, teachers of the handicapped and technical trainees, 130 undergraduate and graduate scholarships also are given, Speer said.

And in many cases, Rotary has improved relations between various countries.

"We are not behind the Iron Curtain now," he said.

"Rotary's motto is service above self. That's an almost impossible thing to live by, but it is an objective."
— James A. Speer

"It takes a free society and a free government to permit it. We had 16 clubs in Iran but lost them when the Ayatollah took over."

But, he hastened to explain, that doesn't mean that Rotary will not operated in Iran someday.

According to Speer, the first Rotary in Europe was in Madrid, Spain. When Franco took over he "cut Rotary out because he wanted absolute control.

"But as soon as he left, Rotary came back," Speer said, adding that he was present when one of the original members of Madrid's Rotary came to San Francisco to reclaim the charter some 40 years later.

Many highly ranked government officials are involved in Rotary, he noted. "Rotary often acts as a go-between for two countries. It can get things done when sometimes the governments can't.

"People have to have confidence in the organization. They have to trust it," he added. "We don't do as much as we'd like to, but we feel we serve as a catalyst to bring people together."

Hepatitis cases could be reduced

CHICAGO (AP) — There will be 50,000 fewer cases of a serious form of hepatitis in the United State within five years after a new vaccine becomes available, probably this fall, a doctor predicts.

Dr. Charles Iber, professor of medicine at the University of Maryland, made the forecast in a telephone interview to discuss the new vaccine against hepatitis B virus, which infects an estimated 200 million people worldwide and strikes an estimated 200,000 people each year in the United State.

He said the vaccine also could reduce liver cancer.

Hepatitis B kills about 1 percent of its victims in its acute phases and has no cure. It has been estimated to cost the U.S. economy $750 million a year.

The vaccine is produced from human blood and recently was approved by the Food and Drug Administration. It is the subject of a series of scientific reports in today's issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

The reports suggest that use of the vaccine in areas where hepatitis B virus is native should prevent new infections and eventually lead to a sharp drop in the number of hepatitis carriers.

"Among the group who take the vaccine, we expect 95 percent to 98 percent efficacy," said Dr. Harvey J. Alter of the National Institute of Health. "That means the vast majority of people who are susceptible will no longer be susceptible."

Alter said it was "unfortunate" the vaccine's cost probably will limit its impact in underdeveloped nations, where hepatitis B is most prevalent. The recommended dose of three shots in six months will cost $100, he said.

Research is under way to develop a cheaper, synthetic vaccine.

Among those most susceptible to the hepatitis B virus are dentists, workers in blood baks and pathology labs, mentally retarded people, workers in institutions, and male homosexuals.

Iber said by the time dentists complete a lifetime practice, they have a 50 percent chance of being infected with the virus.

The virus hits younger people, and about 10 percent of those infected will have health complications, such as cirrhosis, Iber said.

In some areas, doctors have linked liver cancer with the virus. A previous study of 22,707 men in Taiwan found the risk of liver cancer was 223 times greater among those who were carriers of the virus than among non-carriers.

There are about 800,000 hepatitis B carriers in the United States, researchers said.

Television stations to switch networks

KMID-TV, Channel 2, will become a primary affiliate of the ABC Television Network later this year, James E. Duffy, president of the ABC Television Network, and Ray Herndon, vice president and general manager of Midessa Television Company, Inc., have announced.

At the same time, KTPX-TV, Channel 9, the Permian Basin's current ABC affiliate, announced today that it will be switching to NBC, according to Bob Good, station manager.

KMID-TV has been an affiliate of the NBC Television Network since it went on the air in December 1953, and is owned by Midessa Television Co., Inc., Midland. According to Herndon; the switch from NBC to ABC will take place in early fall.

"We are delighted to begin a partnership with Ray Herndon and his management team," Duffy said in commenting on the new affiliate in the Midland-Odessa market.

"Our decision to change affiliation reflects an overall philosophy as we plan for the 1980s," Herndon commented. "Together with the number of technological changes we're making in our physical plant, we feel the diverse, innovative ABC programming, combined with our local efforts, will enable KMID to best serve West Texas in the coming years."

KMID serves West Texas and parts of Southern New Mexico, covering 27 counties and a 100-mile radius from its location midway between Odessa and Midland.

Herndon has been vice president and general manager of KMID since he joined the station 26 years ago. He is one of the original members and a past president of the Texas Association of Broadcasters. He was responsible for negotiating the new affiliation agreement with Richard N. Savage, vice president, ABC Television Network.

KMID's station manager is John Foster, who has held that position for six years, and who has been associated with the station for more than 22 years.

"The actual negotiations have been concluded with ABC," Foster said, "and we're hoping to air their programming starting in the fall, with Monday Night Football."

Midland viewers probably won't miss a day of NBC programming, however, since KTPX has announced that it will switch to the NBC network at the same time as KMID changes to ABC. "We will be switching to NBC," Good said this morning, "and we are delighted that we have that opportunity."

The exact date of the switch is still uncertain, but it will take place before the start of the fall season. "We would probably switch the dame day," Good said.

The other television station serving the Midland-Odessa market is KOSA-TV, Channel 7, CBS, based in Odessa.

Retesting for PKU, cretinism encouraged for some infants

ATLANTA (AP) — Newborn infants who are discharged from hospitals before they are 1 day old should be rechecked for a genetic illness that can cause severe mental retardation, health officials said today.

The national Centers for Disease Control said a retest also should be conducted for another disease, cretinism, if the original test is done before the infant is 24 hours old. Cretinism, or congenital hypothyroidism, also can cause mental retardation.

Years ago, infants routinely were kept in hospitals for at least four days after birth, allowing time to conduct accurate blood tests for phenylketonuria, or PKU, and cretinism, said CDC epidemiolotist Steve Sepe.

But in recent years, infants have been discharged from hospitals as early as one day after birth, which is too early to conduct accurate tests for the illnesses, he said.

If the PKU test is administered before the infant is 1 day old, "it won't show up on the test," Sepe said.

PKU is a genetic metabolic disorder that can lead to seizures and severe mental retardation.

Cretinism is a congenital disease characterized by an inactive thyroid gland, which produces growth hormones. The illness can cause delayed or improper development and mental retardation, Sepe said.

The CDC, in its Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report, agreed with recommendations by the American Academy of Pediatrics Committee on Genetics that every infant should be tested for PKU and cretinism.

The committee also recommended that infants who undergo screening for the illness when they are less than 1 day old should be rechecked for the disorder before the third week of life, the CDC said.

"We're trying to educate the pediatricians to know that if the child he is seeing is a one-day in-and-out delivery that it might be a very good idea to get another (test)," Sepe said.

Early detection and treatment of the PKU and cretinism can prevent mental retardation and other complications of the illnesses, the CDC said.

Sepe said the diseases are "quite common." Each year in the United States, about 300 infants are born with PKU and about 750 are born with cretinism, he said.

A recent study suggested that PKU may remain undetected.

Longview Rep. Mike Martin and his wife Debbe, at the Travis County Courthouse Thursday where prosecutors agreed to dismiss a felony perjury charge against Martin. Instead, Martin pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor perjury charge. He was fined $2,000, must resign his legislative seat and must not seek re-election.

Martin pleads guilty to misdemeanor perjury

By KATHY BAKER

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — When half the prospective jurors said they thought a state representative had staged his own shooting as a publicity stunt, defense lawyers agreed to a plea bargain.

"I don't think we had a snowball's chance in hell," said defense lawyer Frank Maloney, representing state Rep. Mike Martin, charged with aggravated perjury.

Martin, 30, was near tears as he pleaded guilty in Austin to a reduced charge of misdemeanor perjury, paid the maximum $2,000 fine and agreed to resign from the Legislature and not seek re-election.

Half of the 34 potential jurors questioned Thursday in Fredericksburg said they believed Martin staged his own shooting last July, Maloney said. The trial was moved to Fredericksburg — 10 miles southwest of Austin — on a change of venue.

"We got a message to Fredericksburg," he said.

The Longview Republican was charged with lying to a Travis County grand jury last summer when he denied staging his own shooting.

In the plea bargain, Martin acknowledged only that he lied when he told the grand jury he "did not cause his sister-in-law, Diane Martin, to rent a car on or about the 29th day of July, 1981."

Investigators said the car was used to stage the shooting.

Martin told investigators he thought a religious cult had ambushed him outside the trailer he lived in while in Austin. Later, Martin's cousin, Charles Goff, said he shot Martin as part of a publicity stunt. Goff was never charged.

Aggravated perjury is a third-degree felony with a possible penalty of up to 10 years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

"My feeling was that, in view of the situation in Fredericksburg, that we were facing a potential 10-year sentence," Maloney told reporters after the brief hearing.

Travis County District Attorney Ronald Earle said prosecutors agreed to the lesser charge because "it accomplished the result we thought was important. He stands convicted as a liar and he has resigned as a public servant."

Maloney, who called his client "one confused young man," said Martin "has never admitted staging his own shooting," and now believes Goff, either acting alone or with someone else, shot him.

But Maloney said he thinks Martin did "firmly believe" he was the target of a satanic cult called, "Guardian Angels of the Underworld," when he offered that explanation to investigators.

Martin lied about the rental car because it was used for a purpose that "would have been embarrassing to him," not because it was used in the shooting, Maloney said.

Opponents say not affected

LONGVIEW, Texas (AP) — Republican officials and state Rep. Mike Martin's two opponents say the legislator's plea bargain agreement to resign his office and not seek re-election this year won't alter the outcome of the GOP primary.

"It won't affect me at all," Hilda Booth said. "He was low-key anyway. He hadn't been doing any campaigning."

Candidate Mike Fetter agreed.

"I feel Mike was politically in trouble regardless of the legal proceedings. I don't think this is going to change voters minds one way or the other," he said.

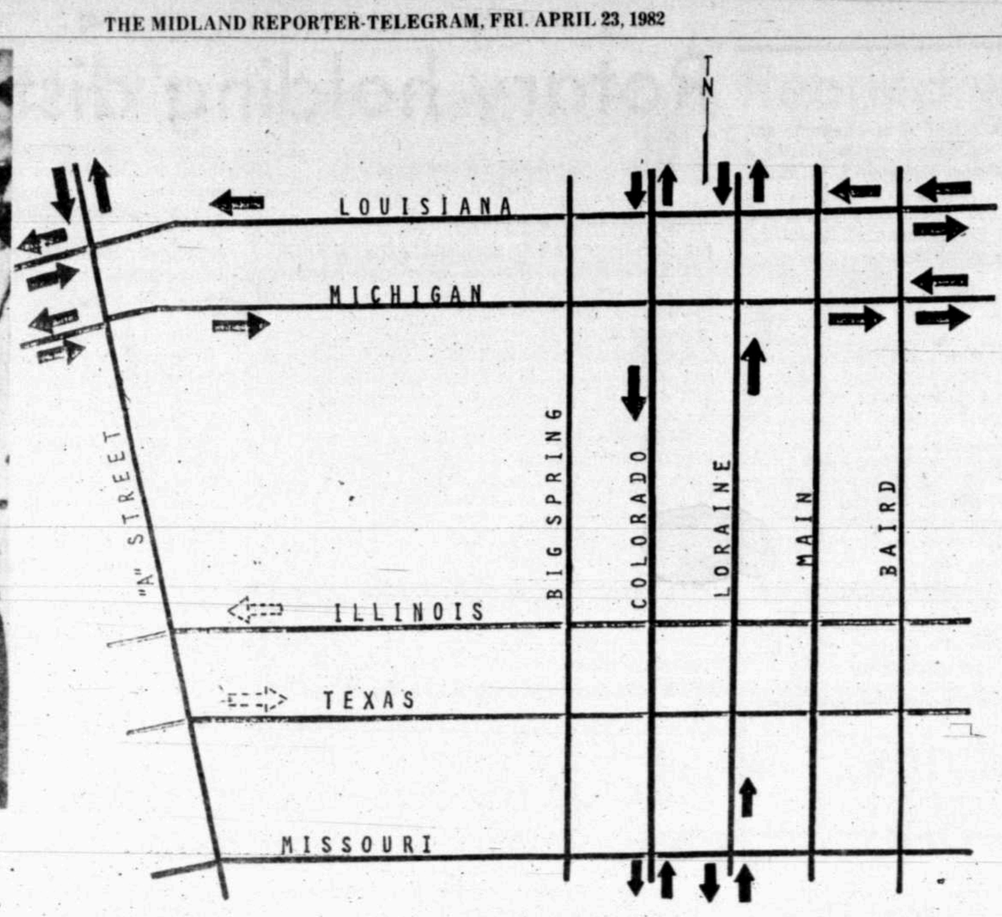
Gregg County Republican Chairman Tom Hall said Martin's name already was on the voting machines at the county courthouse and on ballots mailed to absentee voters, but that votes for Martin will not be counted.

"I just hope and pray he doesn't get but just a minor percent of the vote," Hall said. "But the reaction I've been getting is that he would have been way down on the list."

Hall said a special election called by the governor would be necessary to fill Martin's unexpired term, which runs through December.

Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle said Martin's agreement to resign and withdraw as a candidate will not prevent him from running in the future.

Martin had been charged with lying to a Travis County grand jury when he said he did not stage his own shooting last July. His cousin, Charles Goff, later said Martin recruited him to fire the shotgun as a publicity stunt. Martin suffered a minor elbow wound.



Colorado, Loraine streets to be one-way

Just as motorists were finally getting accustomed to traveling one-way on Louisiana and Michigan streets, the city is ready to try another one-way pairing.

On Saturday, Colorado and Loraine streets will switch to one-way traffic.

Colorado will be one-way for southbound traffic. Northbound traffic will utilize Loraine. Both streets will be one-way between Louisiana on the north and Missouri on the south.

Southbound traffic on Loraine at Louisiana will be restricted to right turns only, since Louisiana recently was designated one-way westbound.

In the near future, Illinois and Texas will switch to one-way traffic.

Texas will be one-way for eastbound traffic while Illinois will accommodate traffic westbound. Both will be one-way between L Street on the west and Baird on the east.

Bailey loses right to drive

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Attorney F. Lee Bailey's right to drive in California has been suspended for six months because he refused to take a blood-alcohol test when he was arrested on drunken driving charges in February.

The state Department of Motors Vehicles sent a notice of the suspension to Bailey's Massachusetts address Wednesday, the same day he was acquitted in San Francisco of drunken driving.

The suspension, which takes effect May 5, is separate from the charges on which he was tried. The department said it was based only on the famed criminal defense lawyer's refusal to take a blood, breath or urine test to determine the amount of alcohol in his blood.

Houston city councilman cleared of bribery charges

By JAMES R. KING

HOUSTON (AP) — City Councilman Jim Westmoreland, claiming the $5,000 he accepted from a port commissioner was a campaign contribution and not a bribe, says he'll probably use the money to "throw a party."

A federal grand jury quizzed Westmoreland for more than three hours Thursday and then decided not to return an indictment.

Prosecutors had argued the money was intended to buy Westmoreland's help in steering a city health insurance contract to a particular company.

Westmoreland, commenting on the case publicly for the first time, admitted receiving the money from Port Commissioner John Garrett, but he said it was a campaign contribution.

Westmoreland

"I told them the true facts and they believed it and came in with a no-bill," the smiling councilman told reporters. "I've spent 2½ years of my life walking with an anvil around my neck."

The alleged scheme was part of the FBI "sting" operation in which federal agents posing as insurance company representatives tried to expose corruption among elected officials and labor leaders.

Attorney Thomas McDade, who represented Westmoreland, said earlier that the grand jury already had an indictment against the councilman "typed up." Westmoreland also said he feared before testifying that he would be indicted.

But U.S. Attorney Daniel Hedges said the panel voted to take no action in the case because of insufficient evidence.

"Brilab is over. I'm thrilled," Westmoreland said.

Westmoreland said after he took the money from Garrett on Jan. 21, 1980, he deposited it as a campaign contribution, assuming it was donated by Prudential's Political Action Committee.

"About seven days later the news broke that it was a Brilab sting operation," he said. "So obviously I couldn't report it as a contribution from the Prudential Political Action Committee because I knew that it wasn't."

He said the money is still in his campaign fund, and he said he will probably use it to "throw a party."

The victims of the sting, Garrett and labor leader L.G. Moore of suburban Deer Park, were convicted, fined $10,000 and each sentenced last month to five years probation.

Moore, regional director of the International Union of Operating Engineers, and Garrett, have filed notice of appeal of their conviction.

Lawyer charged with attempted murder

HOUSTON (AP) — A lawyer who allegedly tried to persuade a Canadian author to help him obtain what he thought was a non-detectable poison has been indicted on charges he tried to kill his bedridden wife.

William A. Chanslor, 50, was charged Thursday with solicitation and conspiracy to commit murder.

Chanslor was arrested Wednesday at a hotel near Houston Intercontinental Airport after allegedly paying an undercover agent for ricin, a poison more potent than Cobra's venom.

Constable James Hodson of the Ontario Provincial Police said Chanslor believed the substance could not be detected after death by normal forensic methods.

Chanslor was held in city jail in lieu of $40,000 bond.

According to the indictment, Chanslor contacted Canadian author John A. Minnery last month to try to obtain the poisonous substance. Minnery wrote a series of books entitled "How to Kill."

Minnery told Ontario police about Chanslor's inquiry and agreed to use an undercover agent as a go-between to deliver the poison, Hodson said.

Sears goes into stocks market

CHICAGO (AP) — Shoppers at Sears, Roebuck and Co. stores in eight U.S. cities this summer will be able to buy not only clothing and other traditional merchandise, but also stocks, insurance and real estate, according to plans announced by the nation's largest retailer.

Sears, which diversified recently into investment and real estate, will open financial service centers in July at its stores in Atlanta, Chicago, Dallas, Denver, Houston, Los Angeles, Washington, D.C., and San Francisco metropolitan areas, Chairman Edward R. Telling announced.

Telling said the centers will offer consumer services including stocks, options, mutual funds, real estate brokerage services and mortgage insurance.

Last December, Sears acquired the investment firm of Dean Witter, Reynolds and the Coldwell, Banker real estate company.

Telling said in a speech to a group of financial analysts Wednesday that the new centers are part of the huge retailer's plan to become the nation's largest producer of consumer financial services.

He said three changes in the economy helped shape Sears' plan: A better climate for personal savings, the restructuring of financial institutions and the growing dependency of the United States economy on other nations.

Japanese farmers fight import liberalization

TOKYO (AP) — Eight thousand Japanese farmers marched to the gates of the American Embassy today to protest liberalization of farm imports. Politicians and consumer groups joined the growing ranks of those opposing increased imports as a threat to Japan's national security.

Many in the demonstration, organized by the Central Union of Agriculture Cooperatives and 18 other farm organizations, carried anti-import placards and wore headbands saying, "Stop import liberalization."

Speakers said increased farm imports from the United States and other countries would deal a "crushing blow" to Japanese farmers. Liberalization, particularly for beef and citrus products, has been urged by the U.S. government to help offset Japan's $16 billion surplus in its trade with the United States.

Japan already is the largest single foreign buyer of U.S. farm products, purchasing $6.7 billion worth last year. Feed grains and soybeans make up the bulk of U.S. sales, but beef last year was limited to 47,300 tons valued at $158 million.

AGRICULTURE

On May 7, the government is expected to announce a liberalization package to expand access to the Japanese market in an effort to quiet the clamor by Americans and Europeans for restrictions on Japan's exports of manufactured goods.

U.S. agriculture officials have been particularly insistent that Japan make the import of more American beef and citrus products possible. However, some analysts suggest this would be more symbolic than real because Japan already buys meat from Argentina, Australia and other countries.

The protest today came several hours before Vice President George Bush arrived for a two-day visit during which he will touch on the trade friction in his talks with Japanese officials.

On Thursday, the Parliamentary Committee on Agriculture, Forestry and Fisheries, in a rare display of unity by members of both the ruling Liberal Democratic Party and the opposition including the Communists, unanimously adopted a resolution opposing the easing of import barriers.

Even consumer groups, who presumably might welcome cheaper beef and citrus products, appeared to be putting patriotism before pocketbooks.

"Food imports are not an economic problem but a matter of life and death," said Naokazu Takeuchi, spokesman for the Japan Consumers Federation, which has asked Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki's government to block farm imports.

Takeuchi said cheaper food prices — Japanese shoppers pay about twice as much for food as Americans do — must take second place to food self-sufficiency.

"We can't trust the lives of 117 million Japanese to American farmers," he said.

This concern stems from the Nixon administration's ban in 1973, without advance notice, on U.S. soybean exports to Japan.

Efforts to eliminate chemical residues in meat renewed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department is planning to introduce a new program to tackle the old problem of chemical residues showing up in the nation's meat supply.

According to informed sources in the department and in the meat industry, the program will involve an effort by USDA and producer groups to reduce or eliminate residues of drugs before cattle, hogs and other livestock are sent to market.

The sources, who asked not to be identified, said the program probably will be announced next week.

According to one of the sources, the program will be called TRAP — an acronoym which stands for "total residue avoidance program."

The department, through the Food Safety and Inspection Service and the Extension Service would work with state and local agencies, producer groups and others to educate farmers on the residue problem and how to solve it through better management.

Further, according to the sources, industry and government researchers are working to develop simple new tests which farmers could use to check meat animals and poultry for chemicals before they are sent to slaughter plants.

Actually, the idea of a "total residue avoidance program" has been in the development stage for nearly a year. The task now is to put it to practical use at the farm level.

The Food and Drug Administration sets tolerances or allowable levels for various drugs found in carcasses of slaughtered animals. Sometimes, however, the chemical residues exceed the allowable levels.

Currently, the USDA has under review a proposal announced last month to extend another testing procedure to detect excessive antibiotics in animal and poultry carcasses at the slaughter plant.

The procedure is called STOP — swab test on the premises — and has been used successfully since 1979 to detect the presence of antibiotics in slaughtered dairy cows.

Consequently, the department proposed to extend its use to veal calves, beef cattle, sheep, swine, goats, horses, chickens, turkeys, ducks and geese.

By using STOP, slaughter plant inspectors can tell within 18 hours if a carcass has any trace of antibiotics. Normally, samples would be sent to a laboratory for tests, a procedure that often takes one to two weeks and sometimes longer. During that time, the carcasses are held at the plant.

If the STOP test is negative — no antibiotics present — the carcasses are allowed to proceed through the marketing chain. If positive, laboratory tests are required.

Corn supply at record high; Loan extension possiblities pointed out

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new quarterly inventory by the Agriculture Department shows the nation's corn supply is record large for this time of year.

Supplies of sorghum grain, barley, wheat and soybeans also were up from a year ago, the department's Crop Reporting Board said. Reductions from year-earlier levels were reported for oats, rye and flaxseed.

The report said Thursday that corn stocks totaled 5.07 billion bushels on April 1, up 27 prcent from 3.99 billion a year ago. Of the total, 3.57 billion bushels — 70 percent — were stored on farms.

Sorghum grain inventories, at 461 million bushels, were up 47 percent from a year ago. Farm storage accounted for 125 million bushels or 27 percent of the total.

Wheat stocks totaled 1.55 billion bushels on April 1, up 17 percent from last year's 1.33 billion. Farm stocks were 748 million bushels, accounting for 48 percent of the total.

The soybean inventory was 1.05 billion bushels, up 2 percent from a year ago. That included 591 million bushels stored on farms, 56 percent of the total.

Barley supplies were reported at 226 million bushels, up 11 percent from a year earlier; oats, 237 million bushels, down 8 percent; rye, 5.67 million bushels, down 17 percent; and flaxseed, a record low of 3.56 million bushels, down 18 percent.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary John R. Block says that farmers who have federal price support loans on 1981-crop corn and sorghum can extend those for an additional six months if they choose.

"This option is being offered because prices for these commodities are currently low," he said Thursday.

Farmers who want to extend their loans should contact local offices of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, Block said.

Price support loans normally mature after nine months, at which point the farmer can pay off the loan and then sell or use the grain as he sees fit. Or he can choose not to repay the loan, in which case the government assumes ownership of the commodity and the debt is canceled.

The basic national average price support loan rate for 1981 corn is $2.40 per bushel. If it is corn in the government's farmer-held reserve program the rate is $2.55 per bushel. Sorghum loan rates are $2.28 and $2.42 per bushel, respectively.

Market prices, by comparison, average about $2.58 per bushel for corn and $2.36 per bushel for sorghum, according to the department's latest five-day price average.

WASHINGTON (AP) — World soybean production in 1981-82 now is estimated at 86.9 million metric tons, down 700,000 tons from indications last month, says the Agriculture Department.

All of the decline resulted from the drop in Brazil's soybean crop prospects, now indicated at 13.5 million tons against 14.2 million forecast in March, the department's Foreign Agricultural Service said.

The U.S. soybean output from the 1981 harvest was 55.3 million metric tons, up from 48.8 million in the drought-ridden 1980 crop year.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds and is equal to 36.7 bushels of soybeans.

Overall, world output of major oilseeds was estimated at 171.3 million tons, up from 158.9 million in 1980-81, the report said.

That included: Soybeans, 86.9 million tons in 1981-82 and 80.6 million last year; cottonseed, 27.5 million and 25.6 million; peanuts 18.3 million and 16 million; sunflowerseed, 14.1 million and 13.2 million; rapeseed, 12.3 million and 11.4 million; sesameseed, 1.8 million and 1.6 million; flaxseed, 2.03 million and 2.1 million; copra, 5.06 million and 5.13 million; and palm kernel 1.56 million and 1.48 million.

Grange, bankers join opposition

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration has been joined by the National Grange and the American Bankers Association in opposing any formal moratorium on repayment of federal farm loans.

Both told a Senate subcommittee on Wednesday that a moratorium like one endorsed by a House panel would be unfair to the vast majority of farmers who have managed to pay their bills on time despite the depressed farm economy.

Edward Andersen, master of the Grange, said a moratorium was not needed because the administration has the authority to defer loan payments in individual cases where it's necessary.

James Eatherly of the American Bankers Association, agreed, adding, "Lumping together all loan problems would permit abuses, and deferral across the board is not fair to other borrowers in the same situation."

Agriculture Secretary John Block and top USDA credit officials, backing President Reagan's plan to rein in the widening lending operations of the Farmers Home Administration, have repeatedly pledged to Congress that they are doing everything possible to keep financially troubled farmers in operation.

Although delinquencies on FmHA loans are now running about 10 percent higher than a year ago, they say the FmHA is using loan deferral, payment rescheduling and other methods to keep farm liquidations at a minimum.

Meanwhile, the NFU said in its weekly newsletter that Senate and House agriculture committees not only should support releasing the $600 million in FmHA funds but should go on record in favor of raising price support loan rates on the major crops.

U.S. rabbi, his followers ousted

Wrecking crews ready to raze Yamit

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Soldiers broke into a bomb shelter held by the last group of ultra-nationalist Jews in the Sinai Desert town of Yamit today and hauled out militant U.S. Rabbi Meir Kahane and his dozen followers.

Another group of students who had barricaded themselves atop an 80-foot war memorial in Yamit left peacefully.

Bulldozers and wrecking crews neared the end of their mission to raze the town's 1,500 housing units before Israel turns eastern Sinai over to Egypt on Sunday. The ultra-nationalists had resisted orders to evacuate, saying the Sinai is part of the biblical land of Israel.

The students and the Kahane group had threatened violent resistance, and at one point the rabbi's disciples vowed to kill themselves if troops tried to remove them.

The army said earlier that all other resisters to the withdrawal had been evicted. Today's action in Yamit was broadcast live by Israel and Army Radio reporters.

Four police dragged Kahane from the bunker. His followers, mostly young American Jews, screamed as they were loaded onto police vans. It was not known if they were booked on any charges.

Defense Minister Ariel Sharon, responding to criticism of the decision to obliterate Yamit, said Egypt was no less eager than Israel to see the town destroyed because it feared Jews would try to return there after the withdrawal.

Prime Minister Menachem Begin told members of his Likud party that it took 5,000 soldiers to evacuate 1,200 resisters from the town in a three-day struggle.

Envoys begin negotiations

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Israeli envoys began negotiations with Egyptian counterparts today to settle the final unresolved border dispute in the Sinai Desert, two days before Israel withdraws from the area.

The envoys arrived from Jerusalem with U.S. Secretary of State Walter J. Stoessel, who has been shuttling between between both nations for a week to insure the pullout proceeds smoothly.

"We hope to solve today the border question," said David Kimche, director general of Israel's foreign ministry who led the Israeli delegates. Stoessel said he anticipated the talks would be "constructive."

Heading the Egyptian delegation was Butros Ghali, minister of state for foreign affairs, who an aide said was annoyed because Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir did not attend. Israeli officials said Shamir was too busy.

Israel is scheduled to withdraw from the eastern third of the Sinai on Sunday under terms of the 1978 Camp David peace accords. The Jewish state seized the desert from Egypt in the 1967 Middle East war but has already returned most of it.

The remaining border dispute centers around several hundred square yards in Taba in the southern Sinai, south of the Israeli port of Eilat on the Red Sea at the head of the Gulf of Aqaba.

Israel has built a beach hotel in an area claimed by Egypt, which has been trying to persuade the Jewish state to withdraw from the disputed area and make it a no-man's land until the question is settled by arbitration.

On Thursday, Egyptian Foreign Minister Kamal Hassan Aly said he hoped the dispute could be resolved before the Israeli pullout, which Israel's Cabinet has reaffirmed will take place on schedule.

In the northern Sinai town of Yamit, Israeli soldiers seized remaining bands of Jewish extremists today who had defied Israel's pledge to return the Sinai. Bulldozers began wrecking the town.

As the deadline drew near, Cairo newspapers reported that Egyptian police, technicians and other officials were moving into Rafah, Sharm el-Sheikh and other border regions to establish offices, take over power stations and set up food distribution centers.

The al-Ahram newspaper, closely linked to the government, said celebrations on the return of Sinai would be restrained to avoid lavish displays at public expense.

The late Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, who signed the Camp David accords that led to peace with Israel, had planned three days of celebrations. He was assassinated Oct. 6.

Egyptian officials said they were uncertain whether Sadat's successor Hosni Mubarak would participate in any flag-raising ceremonies.

British task force plans air blockade

LONDON (AP) — The British task force heading for the Falkland Islands will try to impose an air blockade to isolate the 9,000 Argentine troops there, and military experts expect it also to jam Argentine radar and communications and land marines for sabotage missions.

The task force commander, Rear Adm. John Woodward, told correspondents aboard the carrier Hermes the aerial blockade will be one of his first actions when his fleet gets close to the South Atlantic archipelago this weekend.

The troops Argentina has poured into the islands since its invasion April 2 have been supplied and reinforced by air since British submarines imposed a sea blockade around the islands 11 days ago.

The British experts believe that although the Argentine air force's 240 combat planes outnumber the task force's 20 Sea Harrier vertical take-off fighters 12-to 1, that edge will be greatly reduced by the worsening weather as winter closes in and the Argentine planes' limited range from their mainland bases.

"Only a small number of their planes have all-weather capability," said John W.R. Taylor, editor of the authoritative annual "Jane's All the World's Aircraft." "Many don't have any radar, which limits their usefulness at this time of year."

The Harrier is faster than the aging U.S.-built A-4 Skyhawks used by the Argentine navy and air force and can outmaneuver their faster Mirage III and Israeli-built Dagger interceptors.

"The Harrier is a new dimension in air combat," said Taylor. "I don't think the Argentines have had any experience of facing something like it."

The British "jump jets," Harriers, by deflecting the engine exhausts that give them vertical thrust, can change direction suddenly in combat. That causes attacking planes to overshoot, leaving them vulnerable to the Harriers' Sidewinder heat-seeking missiles.

In recent simulated dogfights between Harriers and U.S. warplanes, the British jets won eight and the Americans only two.

The fleet carries electronic equipment that can jam Argentine radar and possibly deflect their British-built missiles, defense experts told The Associated Press. It should also be able to jam communications between the mainland and the islands and possibly signals between units on the islands.

"Electronic counter-measures are going to play a very important part in this confrontation," said Taylor.

The deteriorating weather will add to the hazards of a major amphibious landing. But Taylor and other specialists predicted Adm. Woodward would land small teams of commando saboteurs at isolated inlets along the Falklands' thinly guarded coastline.

You might call her 'Argentine Annie'

LONDON (AP) — An Argentine counterpart of Tokyo Rose has taken to the air to tell the men of the British fleet how much happier they would be back home instead of in the South Atlantic, a radio ham in England reported.

John Hurn, a 73-year-old businessman, said he picked up the soft-voiced woman Thursday on the 16-meter band. He said she spoke in faultless English and interspersed her remarks with recorded songs about death.

Hurn dubbed the woman "Argentine Annie" and recalled the Japanese-American woman who broadcast propaganda from Japan to allied servicemen in World War II.

Lebanese factional fighting claims 13 more lives

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The assassination of a pro-Iraqi political leader in northern Lebanon touched off a night of fighting between rival leftist Moslem militias in which 13 people were killed and nine were injured, police reported today.

A police spokesman said the dead in the northern port of Tripoli included 11 innocent bystanders, all members of one family. A rocket hit a paint storage depot, set it afire, and a man, his wife and nine children living on the floor above burned to death.

The battle was touched off by the slaying of Talal el-Etri, 30, the local leader of the pro-Iraqi Baath Socialist Party, and an aide who were shot and killed on the doorstep of el-Etri's home by gunmen from an unidentified rival group, the spokesman said.

The two factions fought through the night with machine guns and rocket-propelled grenades in four residential neighborhoods of Tripoli, Lebanon's second largest city 50 miles north of Beirut.

The fighting slacked off at dawn but sniping kept tension high, the police official added.

Lebanon's 1975-76 civil war between rightist Christians and an alliance of leftist Moslems and Palestinians produced dozens of rival armed factions which frequently fight for local dominance. The central government has not been able to rebuild security forces strong enough to disarm the bickering militias and enforce law and order.

Reconnaissance flights by high-flying Israeli jets continued over Beirut today, shaking the tense Lebanese capital with sonic booms and drawing anti-aircraft barrages from Palestinian guerrillas. But there was no indication that any of the planes were hit.

Israeli reconnaissance flights were intensified before and after Wednesday's massive air assaults on guerrilla strongholds south of Beirut in which 23 people were reported killed and radar stations, arms depots and artillery positions were destroyed.

Carson's attorney will attempt to prove entertainer wasn't drunk

Carson

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Johnny Carson's attorney says he'll prove the entertainer wasn't drunk when he left a Los Angeles restaurant in February.

At an arraignment Thursday, attorney Robert L. Shapiro entered an innocent plea for the host of the "Tonight" show who was charged with drunken driving after a police officer stopped his car on Feb. 27.

"We will be able to show and prove that Mr. Carson was not intoxicated," said Shapiro, who also represented lawyer F. Lee Bailey in a drunken driving case in San Francisco on Wednesday.

After a seven-day trial, a jury found Bailey innocent.

Carson, who is on vacation from the NBC late-night show and did not appear at the hearing, also pleaded innocent through his lawyer to charges of driving without a license in his possession and failure to have a valid registration sticker on his license plate.

All the charges are misdemeanors.

Sinatra

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An appellate court has restored a paternity suit against singer Frank Sinatra Jr. and ordered it returned to Orange County Superior Court for trial.

The District Attorney's office filed the suit on behalf of Mary Wallner, 40, and her daughter, Renee, now 9, after it learned she had collected welfare payments. The county, under state law, can demand repayment from the fathers of children who receive welfare.

Superior Court Judge James Smith dismissed the suit on grounds that Ms. Wallner had settled out of court with the 38-year-old son of Frank Sinatra for $22,500. In the agreement, the younger Sinatra did not admit he was the father of the child.

But the 4th District Court of Appeal agreed that since the child had not been a party to the settlement, she was entitled to pursue the case.

Sinatra's offer to pay $3,000 in back welfare payments was rejected by the county, which demanded he declare himself the father.

Deputy District Attorney Manuel Ramirez had argued in the appeals court that the child bears a striking resemblance to Sinatra and has the same hereditary skin disorder. He said a blood test taken in 1974 indicated there was a 93.5 percent probability that Sinatra fathered the child.

SANTA CRUZ, Calif. (AP) — After a 3½-month separation, comedian Dick Smothers has filed for divorce from his wife, Linda.

Smothers, 42, who plays the straight man to his brother, Tom, in the Smothers Brothers comedy team, cited irreconcilable differences in the dissolution petition filed in Santa Cruz Superior Court April 15.

The couple were married Oct. 31, 1972, and separated Jan. 1, according to court records.

Dick Smothers, along with his two sons by a previous marriage, operates a Santa Cruz County winery. He recently resumed his comedy career.

NEW YORK (AP) — Three "commuters" have taken up permanent residence at the Port Authority Bus Terminal here.

"The Commuters," a work by sculptor George Segal, was unveiled Thursday at the newly renovated terminal.

The three life-size figures, cast in bronze with a white patina, stand in front of a bus terminal entrance gate and wait to board a bus. It is a scene often observed by Segal, a 57-year-old North Brunswick, N.J., resident who has used the terminal for 30 years.

Segal said his sculpture stems from his own "personal, emotional experiences" in the bus terminal.

He has done other works on the same theme — "Bus Station," "To All Gates" and "Bus Driver," which is in the collection of the Museum of Modern Art.

The Port Authority paid $400,000 for the work.

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Astronaut Sally Ride, the first American woman chosen for a space mission, is "very well qualified to be part of a space shuttle crew," says the man who will be her commander.

Robert Crippen, who flew the space shuttle's first mission a year ago, said Thursday that Ms. Ride will play a significant role in testing the shuttle's ability to retrieve satellites.

She also will serve "essentially as a flight engineer on ascent and reentry," Crippen told the Forum Club of the Palm Beaches.

Scholarship fund set up for dropouts

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) — A custodian whose annual take-home pay is about $8,500 has donated $1,000 a year to help pay for the college education of high-school dropouts.

John Clarke, who dropped out of school when he was 16, has started a special scholarship fund for dropouts who earn their high school equivalency diplomas through the General Education Development program.

Clarke, now 60 and a bearded, white-haired custodian at Broward Community College, went back to school himself four years ago and got his degree. He can't say enough nice things about the GED program.

"Talking about GED gives me energy. I just want GED students to know they're not second-class citizens," he said in an interview published Thursday in The Miami Herald.

School gets gift from Khomeini

SPRINGDALE, Ark. (AP) — Ninth-grade civics students who mailed blue and gold socks to world leaders received a message said to be from the hand of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, but Iranian officials may have been confused by the school's mascot.

In addition to the socks representing the school colors, the students earlier this year sent 65 world leaders handbooks with covers depicting the school mascot — an Indian warrior.

The students asked that the leaders send a pair of old socks or some other response, and many did. But Iranian officials contacted at the Algerian Embassy, which represents Iranian interests in this country since the two nations broke diplomatic ties, showed more interest in the warrior than the socks.

"When the Algerian Embassy called they asked us if we were on an Indian reservation," said civics teacher Ron Duncan. "I told them no and then they asked if lots of Indians attended our school."

Ali Mohammadi, an Iranian student who lives in the Washington, D.C., area, said he will deliver gifts from the ayatollah to the junior high school today. Duncan said Mohammadi is to present a prayer robe, a book of prophets and a handwritten letter from Khomeini.

Crime's ugly reality

Faced with a nearly constant rise in the crime rate, more and more states throughout the nation are rethinking the concept of rehabilitating criminals and instead resorting to tougher penalties to get career criminals off the streets.

A recent Justice Department study performed at American University in Washington indicated, for example, that only Maine and Pennsylvania do not now have existing laws or pending legislation for habitual or repeat offenders. And at least 17 states have enacted or introduced legislation within the past five years to get career criminals off the streets, according to a study by the National Council on Crime and Delinquency.

The reasons for this citizen backlash were explained recently by Ohio State Rep. Edward J. Orlett who introduced a measure in that state calling for mandatory sentencing for some felonies. That measure was approved unanimously. Orlett says, "Society has a right to protect itself against criminals for a specified period of time."

During the 1960s and the early 1970s, at least, the predominant philosophy for coping with the criminal element centered around rehabilitation. Perhaps that was an offshoot of the humanitarian concepts so widely embraced during that time frame. But since then society has been plagued by a steadily rising crime rate not helped in the least by the fact that many supposedly rehabilitated criminals freed to live in harmony with society have fallen back into illegal ways.

To combat this rising crime rate society now apparently has determined to attack the problem at its roots — the repeat criminal offender. We think it is the right course to take. Certainly every effort should be made to rehabilitate those offenders who are susceptible to rehabilitation and who can re-enter society and co-exist as productive, contributing members of that society. That should be society's shining hope for criminals.

But the evidence is all too clear that there are those criminals who simply cannot be rehabilitated and must be kept separate from society. They are the habitual criminals, the repeat offenders. It is true that society will still be burdened with them even when their freedom has been taken from them. But that cost can be reduced to a minimum through certain practices such as having them grow their own food, clean their own cells and so forth.

Once a person proves himself unfit to be a part of society, that society loses all but the most minimal responsibility to provide for his most basic needs. That, from all indications, is the reality we are beginning to face up to in dealing with this rising crime rate.

Exercise your right

Midland voters will have the opportunity Saturday to decide the outcome of a single election — the next trustee who will occupy Place 6 on the Midland Independent School District board. The two candidates are Joe Golding and Charleen Rosebery.

Because there will be only one race on the ballot, interest in the election likely will be lacking and a small voter turnout is predictable. That does not relieve voters of their responsibility. The two candidates have worked long and hard in their individual campaigns and are deserving of your participation in Saturday's election.

It will take only a few moments to cast your ballot for the candidate of your choice. Please take that small amount of time and do your part in shaping future policy of the school district. Voting is a right and it is a privilege, but it also is a responsibility in this country. Please do not take that responsibility lightly.

Another View:

An embarrassing period

The administration's "new federalism" plan has entered that embarrassing period when everyone knows that its ailments are terminal but no one wants to pronounce the case hopeless. The White House has assured the public that, despite press reports to the contrary, "constructive discussions" with state and local officials are still in progress on all phases of the plan. The governors say that they will assume the negotiations are still alive until they receive official notice otherwise.

It would be surprising, nonetheless, if the parties were to reach agreement on legislative specifications any time soon, even more surprising if Congress were to find time to consider such legislation in this session, and truly astounding if anything like the administration's proposals were to become law within the next couple of years. This unfavorable prognosis arises partly from the the administration's ill-considered choice of responsibilities to "swap" with states and localities. The trouble is aggravated by the suspicion of many governors and mayors that the proposals are motivated not by a concern for the untidiness of the federal system but rather by a desire to unload major parts of the federal budget onto their shoulders.

These failings might be remedied. What cannot be fixed is the flawed notion that any plan — however finely conceptualized or carefully politicked — can, in one grand sweep, rearrange the course of any major part of American government. The passion for grand reforms is not, of course, peculiar to this presidency. Every president in recent memory has had majestic designs for tax or welfare reform, urban revitalization, youth employment, overhaul of the federal system or government reorganization. These proposals have followed a drearily predictable path.

A new administration, flushed with victory, hastens to produce a plan making good on campaign promises of major reform. There is a lot of press attention, and Congress promises swift action. Details are worked out, flaws become apparent. The whole thing looks a lot more complicated. Negotiations drag on, everyone loses interest. No one is impolite enough to call the idea dead, but nothing ever happens. A new administration comes along and starts the whole thing over from scratch.

This process wastes a good deal of time, effort and political capital. Worse yet, many good but modest ideas embedded in these comprehensive schemes get lost along the way. The administration has already run that risk with Social Security. The negative reaction to its plans for major overhaul forced the administration to consign consideration of Social Security's imminent difficulties to the twilight zone of a bipartisan commission. Streamlining federal-state relations may now suffer a similar fate.

It is not too late to avoid this pattern in the other major social reform still on the administration's drawing boards, that of health care programs. The fact that those proposals have slipped their due date by several months may be a sign that the original plans for sweeping change have been modified as a result of more careful study of the complexities of the health-care system. When you set out to change the world, you need to know what you're doing.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Alternate energy programs dying on vine

WASHINGTON — The worldwide oil glut, which has brought down prices for gasoline and home heating fuel, has lulled the American public into a false sense of well-being. And it has apparently put officials at the Energy Department to sleep.

Jack Anderson

The federal bureaucrats — who are paid to know better — apparently feel that the oil-producing countries will never get their cartel together and send Americans back to the gas lines of 1973 and 1979. They are behaving as if the Arab sheiks, whose wealth depends on high oil prices, will be unable to agree on joint action to ensure that their only salable product commands the highest possible market price.

With incredible shortsightedness, the government energy agency has been systematically killing programs that would develop solar, geothermal and fossil-fuel alternatives to the country's dependence on oil. They have also taken a ho-hum attitude toward energy conservation, despite evidence that such fuel-saving techniques have been the major factor in lessening American dependence on imported OPEC oil.

Fortunately, the administration's devil-may-care attitude toward energy conservation has met spirited opposition among members of Congress, who will be the first to feel the heat if their constituents suddenly find themselves back in gas lines or shivering in their homes when OPEC gets its act together.

Possibly for lack of a better target, congressional critics of the administration's conservation policies have zeroed in on Joseph J. Tribble, assistant energy secretary for conservation. He's a loyal team player and has made no challenge to the liquidation orders on conservation programs he's been getting from the White House.

Rep. Richard Ottinger, D-N.Y., chairman of the House Conservation Subcommittee, is building a case for Tribble's resignation. Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., has called Tribble "an undertaker, not an administrator." And even Mr. Mild Manners himself, Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., told Tribble, "If I had known then what I know now, I never would have voted for (your confirmation)."

What has particularly infuriated Congress is Tribble's administration of the $215 million appropriated above the Reagan administration's budget request for energy conservation programs this year. The lawmakers thought they had sent an appropriate message to the Energy Department with their appropriation, but they discovered to their dismay that the bureaucrats were simply ignoring the message and dismantling the programs anyway.

Here are some examples assembled by my associate, Peter Grant:

— Since 1977, the government has subsidized the insulation of more than 830,000 homes of low-income families. Over DOE indifference, Congress approved $144 million to keep this and similar programs going. Only now is DOE finally distributing this year's funds. As a result, many states had to curtail their weatherization projects during the cold winter months.

— The federal government is the nation's biggest energy consumer — $8.9 billion worth last year. Uncle Sam's consumption dropped 6.3 percent since the first oil crisis. Yet one-third of the conservation program's staff has now been fired, and government consumption of energy is rising.

— In 1975, Congress instructed DOE to set efficiency standards for the 13 products, from refrigerators to TVs and humidifiers, that consume 23 percent of the nation's energy. It was estimated that this could save $15.2 billion to $19.3 billion worth of energy by the year 2005. Yet Tribble's office early this month announced that no standards would be set for these energy guzzlers.

WADING IN THE SLUSH: Between 1976 and 1979, the Internal Revenue Service sent special questionnaires out to 1,301 corporations, looking for evidence of illegal slush funds — caches of cash that can be used for under-the-counter political contributions or other improper purposes.

Somewhat surprisingly, nearly one-sixth of the corporations managed to incriminate themselves in their responses to the questionnaire.

"A total of 201 possible illegal corporate slush funds were identified," an IRS summary states. Of these, 147 cases were referred to the agency's criminal investigations division.

Deeper digging cleared almost all of the suspect firms, however. "There were 18 cases referred to the Department of Justice and one case referred directly to the U.S. Attorney's office," the IRS reported.

Criminal indictments were returned in at least five cases, and at least four resulted in convictions.

DIPLOMATIC DIGEST: Dr. Fred Ikle, under secretary of defense for policy, told Congress recently that "one of the most dangerous and most neglected of all the terrorist movements (is) the Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia." He said the Armenian group's stated goal is to seize the eastern third of Turkey and "unite it with the Soviet Union." Sources said the terrorists, who have claimed responsibility for killing a dozen Turkish diplomats in various countries, have their headquarters in Beirut.

— On at least two occasions, aircraft carrying military supplies from Moscow touched down at Gander, Newfoundland, on their way to Nicaragua. Canadian authorities have now closed off this refueling stop for the Soviet planes.

INSIDE REPORT:

New, bitter U.S.-Israel dispute surfaces

WASHINGTON — Israel's sponsorship of an anti-PLO cadre of Palestinian "leaders" on the West Bank has collided with official policy of the American consulate in East Jerusalem, fomenting a new, bitter but still-undercover U.S.-Israeli dispute.

Rowland Evans

U.S. diplomats have attempted in a series of private moves to convince Prime Minister Menachem Begin and the increasingly-powerful defense minister, Ariel Sharon, that there will be no yielding on the American consulate's work in the West Bank.

Robert Novak

But the campaign against Consul General Brandon Grove, characterized as "vicious" by one U.S. official, may intensify. Israeli officials are lobbying congressmen and senators to pressure the Reagan administration. In response, Secretary of State Alexander Haig has passed firm warnings to Israeli Ambassador Moshe Ahrens to tell his government: Stop harassing Grove. This new U.S.-Israeli dispute is a harbinger of serious problems ahead as the Reagan administration, following the April 25 Israeli withdrawal from the Sinai, must finally come to grips with the Palestinian issue.

Moves against Grove heated up on March 30 when Sharon, in an unnoticed interview in Hebrew, was questioned closely by the party organ of Begin's Likud coalition. In the plain speech for which he is justly famed, Sharon roasted Grove and the Reagan administration and accused the Americans of surreptitiously backing a Palestinian state in the West Bank.

"To this day," Sharon said, "the U.S. consulate in East Jerusalem is very actively fostering extremist elements" in the West Bank. The consulate is doing this dirty work by continuing to help "various so-called voluntary organizations" — Catholic and other religious and relief charities.

Ever since Israel seized East Jerusalem, the West Bank, Gaza and the Golan Heights, these organizations have administered congressionally-voted relief funds for the dispossessed Palestinians, helping to support educational institutions, hospitals and other agencies trying to ease the lot of the occupied Palestinians.

Israeli politicians have always detested the presence of the U.S. consulate in what they claim is their capital city, while the U.S., not recognizing Jerusalem as Israel's capital, keeps its embassy in Tel Aviv. Though treating the consulate as a boil on its body politic, Israel nevertheless has not seriously tried to lance the boil — until now.

The change is linked to Sharon's new hard-line policy in the West Bank, which started with the ouster of the elected mayor of El Bireh. Following the precepts laid down by Menahem Milson in the May 1981 issue of Commentary magazine, Sharon insists that the U.S. must actively aid Israel in ending what Milson called "the PLO's political dominance" in the West Bank.

But the conversion of West Bank political sentiment that is strongly pro-PLO to something more acceptable to Israel may prove impossible. Most Palestinians have been pushed toward nationalism and the PLO by Israel's long occupation, particularly its insistence on populating ancient Arab lands with Jewish settlers.

Milson was named by Sharon as the civilian administrator of Israeli-occupied Arab territories soon after publication of his Commentary article. In that article he said the U.S. must give its "support and cooperation" to Israel's new campaign aimed at "freeing (the Palestinians) from the grip of the PLO." That explains the Israeli government's hostility to Consul General Grove who, under U.S. law, is continuing to direct U.S. aid through long-established Palestinian channels and not through the new "village leagues" Sharon and Milson are trying to build up.

From the top down, U.S. officials are concerned and upset about Israel's tough moves against Palestinian officials chosen in free elections approved by previous governments of Israel. So as of now, Brandon Grove's orders are solid: Change nothing.

But on the larger question of the future of the West Bank, no such determination is yet visible.

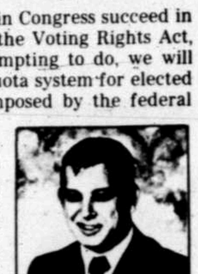
CHARLEY REESE

Equal rights should apply to everyone

If the liberals in Congress succeed in tampering with the Voting Rights Act, as they are attempting to do, we will end up with a quota system for elected local officials imposed by the federal courts.



Charley Reese

Most fair-minded people have no objection to a law which would stop local bureaucrats from cheating people out of their right to participate in the election process. That is what the present voting rights act does.

The liberals, however, want to change it in such a way that a mere absence of elected minority officials would constitute "proof" of discrimination. In other words, if 12 percent of the voters are members of a minority and 12 percent of the elected officials are not minority members, then there's been discrimination.

Nonsense. The right to vote does not guarantee that your preference for candidates will be shared by a majority. Nor should one assume, as these racist liberals apparently do, that members of a minority will always vote only for a minority candidate. Nor should you assume that everybody who has the right to vote will bother to exercise that right. It's always been my contention that members of minorities are not like whites — inclined to be apathetic about the election process.

The liberal position on this bill is only a reflection of the liberal position on civil rights in general, which has been to upend our traditional concepts of justice and law and shift the burden of proof to the accused and away from the accuser.

If I believe that you have injured me, financially or physically, and go into court to seek damages, the burden of proof is on me to prove that I have in fact been injured and that you, in fact, did it.

If the state believes I committed a crime, the burden of proof is on the state. I, the defendant, go into court with an assumption of innocence.

Not so in civil rights matters. The way the federal bureaucrats have worked it is that an allegation of discrimination becomes a judgment of the accused's guilt and he must bear the burden of proving his innocence.

This is an injustice we should not allow in a free society. There is no surer way to create division and bitterness in a society than for the government to impose a double standard on its citizens. Segregation was a double-standard system but so is reverse discrimination; and if one is wrong then so is the other.

Setting up quotas, whether for jobs or school openings or business opportunities, is flat, naked discrimination by law against those people who are denied an opportunity to compete on their merits. Implicit in such programs is the racist assumption that members of minority groups really are inferior and cannot compete on an equal opportunity basis.

Eighteen years after the Civil Rights Act of 1964, it is time for black political leaders and white liberals to make up their minds: Are blacks equal or inferior to whites? If they are equal, as I believe they are, then let them compete on their individual merits like the rest of us. If they are inferior, then go ahead and admit it and design some really effective paternalistic programs to compensate for their deficiencies.

It is ironic that some black political leaders and some white liberals are doing to the black American the very same things that they accused bigots of doing. Treating him as a special case who must be dealt with differently than a white and who is judged by a different standard than is applied to a white.

If that isn't racism, then grits aren't southern. Racism is abhorent to me. Our goal should be a color-blind society. It is a moral crime for politicians to pit one group of people against another for their own selfish purposes.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, April 23, the 113th day of 1982. There are 252 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On April 23, 1969, a Los Angeles jury sentenced Sirhan Sirhan to death for the assassination of Sen. Robert Kennedy. The sentence later was changed to life in prison.

On this date:

In 1533, the Catholic Church declared the marriage of Catherine of Aragon to England's King Henry VIII as void.

In 1792, the French national anthem, "La Marseillaise," was written during the French Revolution.

In 1940, more than 200 people died in a dance hall fire in Natchez, Miss.

And in 1975, the Vietnam war was declared over as the South Vietnamese cabinet resigned, making way for a communist takeover.

Sea World doubles as agency for recovery of sea animals

By BETH MOHR
Copley News Service

A short time ago, a couple on their regular walk along the Pacific Ocean beach just south of Encinitas, Calif., noticed a sea lion pup sitting out among the rocks. They thought it was resting and went on.

The next morning, the pup was still there, this time lying down. The couple realized the small animal was caught helplessly out of water.

What to do? Should they try to put it back into the water, get it some food, or call some animal protection agency?

They decided to ask Sea World, in nearby San Diego, for advice.

Lucky for them, and lucky for the baby sea lion.

Sea World, more than a marine entertainment center, is the only agency in the area licensed by California Fish and Game and with personnel trained to recover and rehabilitate injured or sick marine mammals and birds.

"People who try to take care of marine animals on their own usually make things worse for the animals and themselves," said Jim Antrim, Sea World's curator of mammals.

"YOU MUST REALIZE that these are wild animals. When a human being approaches them, they react just as most wild animals react. They turn and scoot back into the ocean as fast as they can or, if they are too severely injured or too ill to escape, they will try to protect themselves by biting whoever comes near. The bites are nasty and often become infected."

If, by some remote chance, a person is able to get a baby seal or sea lion home, the pup is likely to die from improper food and care.

Antrim estimates that about 90 percent of the animals they rescue are California sea lion or harbor seal pups. The majority of the approximately 150 rescues made each year occur during storms when rough waters push the animals onto shore. Ten were picked up during a recent storm.

"Most of the babies are beached after becoming separated from their mothers," Antrim said. "They depend on their mothers for food, so when we get them they are usually suffering from malnutrition. That predisposes them to secondary diseases and problems which must be properly treated if they are to survive."

Sea World crews respond to calls in a pickup truck filled with nets, cages and other rescue equipment. When the animal arrives at Sea World, it is taken to an examining room containing a laboratory.

"Every animal is given a complete examination including tests of blood, urine and stool samples," Antrim said. "X-rays are taken if indicated. Diagnosing a marine mammal is a lot like diagnosing a person."

The mammals often are afflicted with parasites including lung and intestinal worms and liver flukes. One of the most frequently diagnosed problems is pneumonia.

ANESTHETICS FOR examinations or treatments are avoided if possible. Unlike humans, sea mammals are not involuntary breathers.

"For that reason, anesthetics are dangerous for them," Antrim said. "We give as little anesthetic as necessary."

Treatments prescribed by Sea World veterinarians range from special diets to repair of fractures.

Diets for the rescued animals are bound to include vitamin supplements. Sea World's laboratory contains a multi-tiered cabinet about the size of an executive desk. Each tier holds row after row of small plastic cups filled with tablets of various colors for daily dispensing to the various mammals.

Despite the care given rescued animals, only slightly more than 50 percent survive. Of that 50 percent only about 5 percent become "fully fit and healthy" enough to be returned to the sea to defend and forage for themselves, Antrim explained.

"In an agreement with the National Marine Fisheries Service, we make most of the others available to our sister Sea World in Orlando, Fla., zoos, aquariums and research centers such as Scripps Institution of Oceanography," Antrim said. "Those with chronic medical problems, including blindness, epilepsy and partial paralysis are maintained for display here."

THE SCARS of some of those in the beached animal display at Sea World are clearly evident.

One sea lion is blind. Antrim explained that it was beached with a fractured skull, probably caused by hitting into rocks. Another sea lion has a ringlike scar around its neck — it was caught in a noose by humans who dragged it to the beach and left it with severe neck injuries. Several of the sea lions have large curved scars on their bodies from shark attacks. Other animals have scars which suggest injuries by boats or rocks.

Jones calls for changes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Air Force Gen. David Jones, outgoing chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, is urging that major organizational changes be made in the highest ranks of the military.

Jones, retiring June 30 as the nation's top uniformed officer, spoke Wednesday before the House Armed Services investigations subcommittee. He advocates enhancing the powers of the JCS chairman to make him the primary military adviser to the secretary of defense and the president.

Currently, the chairman and the uniformed chiefs of Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps serve in that role collectively, which Jones says causes serious problems.

Committees can perform valuable functions, "but they are notoriously poor at running things," Jones told the panel.

Train derails leaking toxic gas

PITTSBURG, Texas (AP) — Three overturned tank cars began leaking toxic gas and forced the evacuation of seven homes after a freight train derailed while crossing a rotting bridge about four miles west of this Northeast Texas town, officials said.

The only injury reported Thursday was to a railroad employee, who was released from a nearby hospital after being treated for inhalation of vinyl chloride.

Herpes possible without sex

Dear Dr. Solomon: I know a girl who has herpes but says she did not get it from a boyfriend. Is this possible? — George, Salt Lake City, Utah

Dear George: I assume you are asking whether genital herpes may occur in a woman through other than sexual contact. The answer is "yes." Genital herpes may occur by self-inoculation from an oral herpes infection.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I hurt my back while working out at a local gym. One of the instructors there said I should keep on working out and the pain would go away. I tried this but I soon had to stop because it was getting worse. Do you recommend exercise for back pain? — Greg, Akron, Ohio

Dear Greg: Dr. Stanley F. Katz, an orthopedist in private practice in Los Angeles, says that bed rest is the best possible treatment for back pain. Exercise plays a part, but this does not include continuing to work out while in pain. Rather, it refers to specific exercises designed to strengthen abdominal muscles and stretch back muscles, reducing the load on the spine.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I obtained a divorce after 14 years of marriage and I decided to have some cosmetic surgery to get rid of some of the lines around my eyes and mouth. I was surprised when the doctor told me to think it over and come back in a few months. Wouldn't you think an adult woman would be old enough to decide for herself whether she wanted the surgery? — Mabel, Chapel Hill, North Carolina

Dear Mabel: People who are in the midst of an acute emotional experience such as divorce or the death of a spouse should not be making decisions about cosmetic surgery. I can't be certain about your motivation, but some people believe the surgery will cure their emotional problems, which, of course, it can't.

The doctor's advice that you think it over for a few months is sound and I hope you follow it, rather than shop around for a doctor willing to perform the surgery.

Dear Dr. Solomon: If smoking causes lung cancer, why don't all smokers get lung cancer? — Fred, Jackson, Miss.

Dear Fred: If the excessive consumption of alcohol causes cirrhosis of the liver, why don't all alcoholics get cirrhosis of the liver? And if driving recklessly at high speeds results in death from automobile accidents, why don't all reckless drivers die in automobile accidents? There are many more questions I can pose, but I think I've made the point.

Each person is different, and not everyone is equally susceptible to the same risks. Dr. Alvin Kotake, of the University of Chicago, has suggested that a certain enzyme system that causes the breakdown of toxic chemicals taken into the body may determine which smokers get lung cancer and which don't. The point is that some people even survive Russian roulette, but I wouldn't recommend it as a form of entertainment for anyone interested in preserving his or her health.

Al Topping some kind of hero

Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON — His name is Allan H. Topping and, unlike the popular fictional television series of the same title, he's a legitimate "great American hero."

He will be honored at a surprise party here Friday exactly seven years after he saved hundreds of Vietnamese by getting them on the last commercial flight out of Saigon as South Vietnam was falling to the communists. Saigon was abandoned in flames four days later.

Because Topping, who had been in charge of Pan Am's Saigon office since December, 1972, was afraid he would be prohibited from taking as many Vietnamese aboard the 747, and for safety reasons, "I didn't even tell the U.S. ambassador (Graham Martin) until the plane was on the ground and I was at the airport."

"I told his secretary," Topping recalled in an interview, "to tell Ambassador Martin that this is the last plane. No one really knew about it except myself and the Pan Am headquarters staff until the very last moment."

WHO'S GIVING the suprise party ?

The Vietnamese who have never forgotten. Eighty-five percent of the passengers were Vietnamese, many of them disguised as Pan Am employees in uniforms that Topping gave them. "We had nine employees who decided to stay behind," he said sadly.

Pan Am is flying many of the Vietnamese here for the Friday evening shindig at the Embassy Row Hotel. Topping has been told only that his superiors want him here "for some sort of brainstorming session."

He will be awarded a plaque that reads simply: "In Appreciation Of Your Efforts On 25 April 1975 We Thank You." Engraved on it will be the names of eighteen Vietnamese who still work for Pan Am and organized the party. Topping today manages Pan Am's operations at John F. Kennedy Airport in New York.

He also has worked in Tokyo and San Francisco as well as spending six months in Peking setting up the airline's inaugural flights into the People's Republic of China. But he still recalls that spring day in Saigon as if it were yesterday.

"A decision was made by the South Vietnamese to abandon certain areas of Vietnam. So the North Vietnamese just started coming south and no one stopped them. We probably had one of our best load factors ever," Topping said with a smile. The maximum legal capacity of the Boeing 747 was 375 seats.

"We had 460 people on board so we were sitting on the floor, doubling up, lying in the aisles. The crew was all volunteer. I'll tell you, on the runway itself, we held for an unusual, er, an extended amount of time because there were reports of groundfire a few hundred yards away," he said.

"BECAUSE OF THE high risk involved...from the standpoint of insurance and so on," the final flight had to be a charter "designated by the State Department and a scheduled flight at the same time so we would be covered by 'war risk' insurance," Topping explained.

"It could have been a disaster," he admitted. Only a few days earlier a World Airways DC-10 charter from Da Nang had mangled the bodies of dozens of Vietnamese clinging to the plane's wings and sucked into its powerful jet engines. "I just didn't want that to happen in Saigon," Topping said.

"As we approached that date (April 25), the crescendo was building up to mass chaos and confusion like you saw when they took (Martin and his staff) off from the embassy rooftop — that type of thing," he said. "Everybody was funneling into Saigon as the last haven to get out."

"I could visualize a 747 just being overrun by thousands of people ...if they knew that was our last flight. That's why no one really knew about it."

There was another reason for keeping it secret — to get as many Vietnamese as possible aboard that last flight. Pan Am subsequently gave many of them jobs. "They are still working for us today," Topping said. He's not bashful in his admiration for the Vietnamese.

Acid guru discovers Nixon plumber

Hearst Feature Service

SAN FRANCISCO — You've heard of Hope and Crosby and Abbott and Costello. You've heard of Sturm und Drang. Now meet the newest and hottest stand-up duo on the circuit — Liddy and Leary.

Improbable as it sounds, those long-time antagonistics, G. Gordon Liddy and Timothy Leary, have taken to the lecture circuit to engage across the country in a series of debates that prove — if nothing else — that show business is a tent of rather largish dimensions.

What ever engendered this unholy alliance? Sixteen years ago the two first met when Liddy and a squad of state troopers stormed into Millbrook, Leary's hedonist headquarters, to arrest the former Harvard professor for taking LSD and engaging in S-E-X.

Liddy says he had 24 troopers with him and that Leary was nabbed naked from the waist down. Leary remembers it differently: only 16 troopers and he was fully dressed.

"As far as I know," says Leary, "we've failed to agree on a single topic ever since."

Of course the two went on to other forms of infamy: Leary as the Pied Piper of psychedelia and Liddy as a famous plumber. Both ended up behind bars for their endeavors.

"Tim is blessed with a marvelous Irish wit," says Liddy of Leary. "This of course does not redeem his ideas, which I find to be 180 degrees out of phase with mine and 180 degrees out of phase with common sense."

Common sense, to Gordon Liddy, means that the world is "a bad neighborhood." Liddy calls plain prudence what Leary considers paranoia. And do-gooders, says Liddy, are doing no good. "Charles Colson came to me in prison and asked me if I had seen the light," Liddy says. "I told him I wasn't even looking for the switch."

For their San Francisco debut, Liddy was dressed in a Republican blue blazer with a Hollywood gold chain around his neck. Leary was at his collegiate best in a sweater and sneaks. They both willingly mugged for the cameras. "It's all show biz," affable Liddy says with a grin.

Why are they doing this? "To make a living," Liddy explains frankly, suggesting that since he was disbarred the only livelihood left open to him is that of a professional quasi-pop figure. As for Leary, he'll be the first to admit that he is to the spotlight as a moth to a candle.

Project to join Israel, Egypt in first research

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — An Egyptian-born Texas A&M oceanographer and a former A&M administrator have conceived a three-year $4.3 million marine research project that they say will link Israel and Egypt in scientific cooperation for the first time.

The United States also is involved in the project dreamed up in 1978 by oceanographer Sayed Z. El-Sayed and Robert Abel, an administrator at Texas A&M at the time.

El-Sayed is chief scientist and technical director of the project, which will formally be announced in Egypt Saturday.

The program will investigate Middle East aquaculture, productivity of Mediterranean fisheries, shoreline erosion and protection, and the management of freshwater lakes. One lake, Kinneret, provides 40 percent of Israel's drinking water.

Abel, former director of the National Sea Grant program and president of the New Jersey Marine Sciences consortium, says this is the only program in which Egypt and Israel share technology.

Saturday's announcement will come at the International Red Sea Conference on Marine Science at Al Ghardaga, Egypt, El-Sayed said Wednesday.

The program will be funded by the Agency for International Development and several private foundations, he said.

Ascertaining the Mediterranean's potential for sustaining given stocks of fish is one project among several concerning food production, El-Sayed said.

THE BUTCHER
'Spring' lamb

By MERLE ELLIS

If you are one of those who waits until this time of year to enjoy "Genuine Spring Lamb," you had best enjoy lots of it between now and the first Monday in October — after that, you may never see "Genuine Spring Lamb" again.

The nation's sheep producers are seeking the replacement of the term "Genuine Spring Lamb" with a more appropriate name — something like "Fresh American Lamb" or "Genuine U.S. Lamb," with no references to spring.

According to regulations of the United States Department of Agriculture, only those lambs slaughtered between March 1 and October 1 may be stamped "Genuine Spring Lamb." This leaves five months of the year when lamb is perceived as being of lesser quality.

Some 42 to 45 percent of the lamb in this country comes to market during those five months, and it is every bit as young, tender and of as high quality as that marketed between March and October.

The term spring lamb is outdated. It may have had some meaning 45 or 50 years ago when most lambs were born in the fall and marketed in the spring, but the industry has changed. The term is as archaic and misleading as the term spring chicken.

Lamb is raised in almost all of the 50 states, with well over half of those contributing to the commercial lamb crop. The marketing season varies in different areas of the country, depending largely upon climate.

For example, in California, Arizona, certain sections of the South and in the milder areas of the Northwest, lambs are born in the fall and early winter.

These become the early-lamb crop and are ready for market in the early spring.

They are the first to qualify for the mark of distinction as "Genuine Spring Lamb."

Most lambs, however, are born in the winter and in the spring. These are raised in the high country of Colorado, Idaho and Montana. They stay in the high country during the spring and summer to take advantage of the lush vegetation available for a period of five or six months. They make up what is called the "late lamb crop" and many don't make it to market before October — past the time to be called "Genuine Spring Lamb."

It is a generally accepted fact within the industry that the lamb crop is available the year around. The "milk-fed, grass-finished season" runs from April through October and the "grass-fed, grain-finished season" from November through March, with considerable overlap along the way.

There are times during the year when lamb is a bit more abundant and, therefore, apt to be a good buy. Spring may have nothing to do with the quality of lamb, but it (along with fall) is a good time to buy as far as price is concerned.

This may, indeed, be a good time to put some lamb in the freezer.

We've received a number of calls and letters taking us to task for telling readers they could use small amounts of aluminum foil for "shielding" when cooking meat in a microwave oven. Litton says:

"Small pieces of aluminum foil may be used to prevent over-cooked spots on large pieces of meat."

Amana says the same thing.

Carol Friedman of Friedman's Microwave Sales and Classes says:

"As long as you have more food surface exposed than foil, you will have no problem. Simply put a little knee sock on the leg or wing of a turkey or chicken, for instance, and they will not overcook. The same is true for a strip of fat on a roast. Just remember to have more food surface exposed than foil."

WARDROBES THAT WORK
Alternative to ruffles

By MARY T. MILLICAN
Fashion Consultant

Dear Mary,

My problem is not as major as it is frustrating. I'm 53 and don't like ruffles and full skirts. I wear jeans most of the time as I don't work, but when I do go out I like to dress well. I wear mostly conservative clothes and enjoy a tailored look. It seems that the stores carry everything for young girls, or the clothes look "dowdy." Where do I go to shop?

Your problem is not a hard — or unusual one! The frustration you feel is preventing you from looking further! Several local stores have begun to cater to working women and women over 30. Some stores have up-dated their stock and are carrying lines such as Prophecy, Ellen Tracy and Liz Claiborne. You have to look past the frills and displays and look in the racks of skirts, blouses, dresses, etc. Don't look only in the size you normally wear, try one size larger and one size smaller as all manufacturers vary in fit. Ask a salesperson to show you what you are looking for. An A-line or straight skirt may run smaller than a fuller cut skirt. Don't be afraid to try Junior sizes — just go up one size for a better fit. Most stores display the most current looks and their best-sellers up front. Basics and classics are not as easily found, but they're there — don't give up! If you can find a store you like and a good salesperson, she can usually order things for you, or will call you when a style you wear arrives in that store. I know this is a tall order, but where there's a will, there's a way. I can't recommend stores through the paper, but would be glad to do so in person or through the mail.

Dear Mary,

Please give us a short dissertation on evening wear. I go out for dinner and cocktails quite often and feel that many women are a little too casual these days. There are plenty of places for the ladies to "go casual," shouldn't they get dressed up a little for the nicer places and country clubs?

When dining out it is so much nicer to "dress" for dinner. The long dress has seen better days and can still be seen at special events and during the holidays, but today the cocktail length (just at or below the knee) is quite popular, and may be worn for a longer period of time. A simple dress in a flattering neutral color, black, or cream is a good investment to make, as it looks completely different by changing out accessories, jewelry and shawls.

Pants and tops are very suitable now, especially in silks and rayon blends. As the summer goes on, a simple camisole, skirt and shawl will look elegant and understated with proper jewelry. Wear your best beads in the evening. A strand of ivory over a black camisole is striking! Experiment with your jewelry and accessories. Most of all, keep dressing for dinner and set the pace for others — it only takes one!

Send your questions, as well as requests for further information on wardrobe consultation to Mary T. Millican, P.O. Box 8878, Midland 79701.

'Jukebox junkies' restore jukeboxes

By FRANK GREEN
Copley News Service

SAN DIEGO — The days of bopping down to the local malt-shop to dance to the music of Harry James and Glenn Miller on the jukebox are long gone.

It's an era that Greg and Gary Breed — 23 and 24 respectively — never experienced.

But they're making up for lost time.

They are jukebox junkies, collecting and refurbishing not the big, gaudy modern models with cabinets made of formica and metal, but rather the classic, strikingly beautiful "light-up" machines produced during the heyday of the jukebox industry in the 1930s and 1940s.

Located in a hobby room at the back of their parents' Pacific Beach home are 12 of these colorful music boxes, all of which were made between 1936 and 1949.

Each of the finely crafted wooden cabinets houses the original phonograph and between one and two dozen 78 rpm records. They are laden with chromium moldings, garish color panels and multicolored translucent plastic behind which glow 15-watt light bulbs.

"Our father was into restoring old radios. We used to help him," said Greg Breed, dropping a nickel into a Wurlitzer Model 600 jukebox, built in 1938. "So it was kind of natural that we got into collecting and restoring old jukeboxes."

Their odd avocation started while they were rummaging for old radios with their father at a local swap meet in 1976. There they found their first jukebox, a Wurlitzer 1015 from 1946. It was love at first sight, and the brothers eagerly plopped down $400 of their savings — earned from odd jobs — to buy the machine.

Within months, they were adding to their collection. They attended local swap meets and took out classified ads in national music trade publications. They began to get calls from dealers of music memorabilia across the country, offering assorted models for "bargain-basement prices," said Gary. "Guys in Kansas and Idaho would call saying, 'We've got another one for you.' At the time, I think that they thought we were a little odd collecting these things. But, no more."

Since they started collecting in 1976, they have watched prices skyrocket. "We used to be able to get a jukebox in fairly good shape for between $400 and $800," said Greg. "Now, they go for thousands of dollars."

He estimated that the 12 restored machines in their private collection are each worth between $6,000 and $8,000.

"Suddenly, it's a fad. Everybody from 40 years old and up wants one of these things in their playrooms," moaned Gary. "Consequently, they're not only getting more expensive, but harder to find."

Among local jukebox junkies whom the Breeds introduced to the hobby are Ernie Lee and his brother-in-law, Bill Rhodes.

Lee, 43, purchased his first classic jukebox — a Wurlitzer 1015 — five years ago. He now owns 13 completely restored music boxes, valued at about $75,000.

"I started buying them mainly because I liked the unique woodwork and the workmanship that they put into them in earlier days," said Lee, a cabinetmaker. "Besides, I'm an antique sort of nut — a real nostalgia-type person."

Rhodes, who works for a replating firm, said that he frequently gets orders from people around the country who want him to replate the chrome on their jukeboxes. "You'd be surprised at how many people there are out there with these jukeboxes and how many people there are looking for them," Rhodes said.

Nibbling healthier than smoking

By SHIRLEY BRIGHT BOODY
Registered Dietitian
Copley News Service

Dear Shirley: My husband gave up smoking a year ago, but started nibbling and raiding the refrigerator instead.

In order to keep his weight down, I suggested he nibble on carrots and chew sugarless gum, which he did. Unfortunately, he has become hooked on gum and carrots. He goes through two large packs while at work during the day, a two-pound bag of carrots from the time he gets home until the time he goes to bed.

I heard recently that a man got blood poisoning and his skin turned orange from eating too many carrots, and that sugarless gum can cause looseness in the bowels. What can you suggest? How can I stop this compulsive nibbling? — Mrs. M.R.

Dear Mrs. M.R.: It is true that excessive amounts of carrots can cause the skin to become yellow, which disappears when the carrots are not eaten.

Keep a variety of other fresh vegetables handy for your husband. Try chilled celery, cucumber, zucchini, jicama sticks, radishes, cauliflower and broccoli.

Hot fresh popcorn, tossed with small amounts of melted corn oil margarine and a dash of salt or herbs is a great low-calorie snack.

Excessive sugarless gum chewing keeps the digestive track constantly stimulated by triggering the flow of digestive juices and enzymes, even though it contains no calories. Some people may react adversely to constant gum chewing.

You cannot stop your husband's compulsive nibbling. Only he can stop himself. Don't make an issue out of it, just provide a variety of low-calorie healthful snacks and thank God he is not smoking.

Dear Shirley: We enjoy your column here in Augusta, Ga.

I can't seem to lose weight and I'm trying to figure out what to eat. What I need is an expert like yourself to tell me exactly what I should eat three meals each day.

I am looking for something unusual, such as eating the same food at each meal each day. If you can tell me or give me a simple diet plan, I am sure I can follow it.

I am 66 years of age and weigh 180 pounds and am 5 feet, 11 inches tall. The only exercise I get is on the golf course and working around the house. I've been retired for 16 years and have a few physical problems which preclude strenuous exercise. I can't do much walking and I use a cart on the golf course.

Please recommend a 30-day diet plan for me. — Mr. T.C., Sr.

Dear Mr. T.C.: I am delighted that you are playing golf and are interested in your diet and health. I would not suggest that you eat the same foods each meal every day for 30 days. It would become very boring, tiresome and is nutritionally unsound.

I would rather see you take a variety of foods and develop eating patterns that will keep your weight down, since your exercise is limited. Skip fat, gravies, fatty meats, sugar and excess salt. Try this diet and vary the kinds of meat, fish, fowl, fruits and vegetables, breads and cereals, and diary products:

Breakfast
½ cup fruit (fresh)
3-4 oz. protein (eggs, cottage cheese, fish)
1 slice whole wheat toast (small pat corn oil or safflower margarine)
1-2 cups coffee or tea or decaffeinated coffee

Lunch
1 cup mixed green salad with 1 tbsp. low-calorie dressing
3-4 oz. meat, fish, fowl, cheese, egg
½ cup fruit (fresh)
1 glass (8 oz.) skim milk

Dinner
5-6 oz. meat, fish, fowl, cheese, egg
½ cup fresh vegetables
1 cup salad (1 tbsp. low calorie dressing) or cooked vegetables
½ cup fruit (fresh)
1 glass (8 oz.) skim milk

Use this pattern of eating for 30 days, and when your weight is down, gradually increase the size of the servings slightly until your weight remains constant.

If you desire information on my safe and proven home weight control program, send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Shirley Bright Boody, P.O. Box 1038, Rancho Mirage, CA 92270.

International Order of Who?

By DEBBYE HALE
AP Writer

GURDON, Ark. (AP) —So much has happened lately in this little southwest Arkansas town of 2,707.

Last month, there was that big basketball game — the one where the Class AA Gurdon Go-Devils beat Class AAAAA Little Rock Hall for the state championship.

And, in February, the town became the headquarters of the International Order of Hoo-Hoo.

Who?

"Hoo-Hoo International — The Fraternity of the Forest Products Industry," says the group's executive secretary, Russell McClain, a retired psychology professor and copy editor for the New York Times.

The Hoo-Hoos supposedly originated in 1892 when six lumbermen stranded by a flood spent the night in Gurdon's Hotel Hall and decided to organize something different for men of their trade.

"I think they got to drinking a little," said Joyce Taylor, who's helping publish The Log & Tally, a magazine for the 9,000 Hoo-Hoo members. Some live as far away as Canada and Singapore.

"There're all kinds of stories about where they got the name," McClain, the city's mayor, says.

Hoo-Hoo literature said that the name originated when one of the founders spied a single tuft of hair on the head of a fellow founder and whimsically dubbed it "hoo-hoo."

"They didn't want it to be like any other organization," McClain said. "So, they adopted a black cat as their symbol. Everybody else thought it was bad luck, and they wanted to adopt it as their symbol of good luck."

The order's chief officer, "the snark of the universe," is Dan Brown of Klamath Falls, Ore. His title comes from a Lewis Carroll poem, "The Hunting of the Snark."

Members must earn half their income from a lumber-related function. But the rule is flexible. McClain got in by owning about 40 acres of wooded land and by being mayor of a lumber town.

The Hoo-Hoos moved the headquarters from Norwood, Mass., to Gurdon because overhead would be cheaper, because Gurdon was the group's birthplace and because of the log building.

To become the headquarters, the Gurdon Hoo-Hoos had to replace the building's plastic toilet seats with wooden ones. "They try to have everything wood," McClain said.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

How to fix a clogged vacuum cleaner hose

DEAR READERS:

Have you ever hooked your canister or tank-type vacuum cleaner all together, only to find it's a dry run — no suction, just dirt still on the floor?

Remove the hose and drop a marble, or some small object down into the hose. If it quickly comes out the other end, then a clogged hose is NOT the problem. But if the marble is sluggish, or doesn't come out at all, then you've got a problem that can be easily solved.

Take a long piece of stiff wire, such as a coat hanger, and put a little hook on the end. Push it down through the hose, being careful not to poke in INTO the hose.

If you come to an immovable object, gently prod and twist the wire until you free the clog. Once free, drop the marble back through to make sure it's completely open.

Also, check for any cracks or breaks in the hose where air can be escaping, thus cutting down on the suction. Mend any tears with plastic tape.

You'll see a difference! — Heloise

RAINBOW CAKE

Dear Heloise: To make a rainbow cake, divide white cake batter into five equal sections.

Into each section add one-fourth teaspoon of a packaged drink mix (more if you want a darker color): grape flavored makes purple, lime for green, lemon is yellow, orange makes orange, and cherry or strawberry makes the red color.

Not only does the drink mix color the batter, but it flavors it as well.

Care is needed when layering the cake so as not to mix the colors. Layering by tablespoonfuls seems to work the best.

A pretty cake for that special event that's most definitely one of a kind. — A Reader

PACKING TIP

Dear Heloise: When packing plastic bottles of liquid, be sure the bottles are no more than ¾ full. Remove the cap (or pull up the nozzle) and squeeze out all the air.

While still squeezing the bottle, put the cap on tightly, causing a dent to remain in the bottle.

This should prevent any leaks. — P.C.V.

MENU PLANNING

Dear Heloise: At that next coffee klatch, how about having all the ladies bring a week's worth of menus?

We all get in a rut when it comes to the day in day out drudgery of meal planning.

Two heads are always better than one, so put your heads (and ideas) together and you'll have enough interesting dishes to last quite awhile, or at least until the next coffee gathering. — Gloria Medina

SHORT STEMS TO LONG

Dear Heloise: While I was making a flower arrangement in a tall vase, some of the flower stems were too short.

So, I just put the shorter stems into a straw, cut the straw off at the appropriate length and had a beautiful, even arrangement! — Kelly Wise

DEAR ABBY

Use names of friends, not labels

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: We have recently moved from a rather conservative Midwestern town to Portland, Ore., where attitudes are much more open and liberal. We now find ourselves socializing with a very interesting and delightful group of friends that includes several gay couples among the straights. We have questions regarding etiquette involving gays:

How does one address a written invitation to a gay couple who are living together if one doesn't know the name of the "spouse"? Would it be proper to address it to "Mr. John Doe and Friend"?

When introducing a gay couple to a stranger, is it proper to say, "This is So-and-so and his lover"? (I have heard some gays refer to their partners as "my lover.")

Would it be proper to introduce a gay couple as "Mr. Jones and his live-in friend, companion or partner"? Or does one just leave the relationship unexplained?

Thanks for any help you can give me. — FROM THE CITY OF ROSES

DEAR FROM: When addressing two people who live together, if you don't know the name of both parties, find out and use both names on the envelope: "Mr. John Doe and Mr. Paul Friendly."

When introducing a gay couple to a stranger, it is not necessary to explain the relationship.

Never presume or label anyone as "lover, partner" or anything else. Use the person's name.

DEAR ABBY: How do you tell a middle-aged woman to change her clothes and use some kind of deodorant? For the last six months this woman has worn the same soiled pantsuit to work every day. This is a business office, and she not only looks terrible, she smells bad.

She is a good worker and good-natured and we hate to hurt her feelings, but something has to be done. She also wears a dirty wig to work nearly every day. I wonder if she knows it can be shampooed.

Please help us. — HOLDING OUR NOSES

DEAR HOLDING: If this woman has one friend in the office, ask that friend to have a heart-to-heart talk with her. If no one wants to confront her, it is the responsibility of the office manager or head of personnel to do so. It would be a kindness.

DEAR ABBY: Please print this for those who will use any kind of excuse to get out of jury duty. If they realized that they could be holding a fellowman's future in their hands, they wouldn't be so quick to duck jury duty.

I say this because I served on a jury once, and I am proud to say that I deadlocked a jury because I had a doubt in my mind concerning the guilt of the man on trial. I repeatedly heard, "Let's get this finished. I've got to get back to work!" And, "Don't embarrass the judge by dragging this case on!"

I refused to give in. And I convinced my fellow jurors to re-examine the evidence. When they did, the young man was found innocent! Today he is a practicing lawyer. Had he been found guilty, he would have gone to prison for 20 years!

My heart feels good, knowing that I made a big difference in that man's life. — DID HER DUTY

DEAR DID: Thanks for a worthwhile contribution to this space.

Tips for gardening

By SHARON A. HILLIS
Midland County Extension Agent
Home Economics

Rising food costs make gardening, even on a reduced scale for urban dwellers, more attractive in the '80s than it has been since World War II with its Victory Gardens.

The Midland County Extension Service held a gardening program during its "Texas II in '82" Short Course Thursday.

The two-hour "Planting Texan" segment of the crash course was held at the Midland Girl Scouts Service Center, 901 W. Dengar.

Aside from the economic aspect of gardening, consider, too, the advantage of getting out into the open air — recommended by health experts, but all too often neglected.

Or perhaps you just want to make your surroundings more beautiful.

Gardening, whether for economic, health or aesthetic reasons, is definitely advantageous to the body, the eye, the mind, the purse.

CONSIDER YOUR SPACE

A great deal of space is not necessary for a garden. Just a few square feet can give you room for plants you want if carefully chosen.

Gardening can even be done in containers on a patio or veranda. Do not consider your lack of outdoor space an obstacle to indulging in gardening.

Problems with soil-borne diseases, nematodes or poor soil can be more easily overcome in a container garden.

BASIC REQUIREMENTS

Think about plant needs. They are four: sun, soil, water, location.

Most plants need all of the sun's rays they can get for good growth. Do not plan a garden, vegetable or flower, in shaded areas.

As to location, place the garden where you can visit it frequently. If a vegetable garden is your goal, the plants most likely will bear produce that will require harvesting every day.

The soil must, of course, be fertile. West Texas has its own peculiar soil properties which can be modified with the proper fertilizers and/or additives to form a proper growing medium.

A garden in the Midland or West Texas area will of necessity need irrigation, so plan its location where water will be convenient.

THE NECESSARY TOOLS

Gardening tools need not entail a large investment.

A tiller is ideal if you are planning for a large plot. But for the most part, a spading fork, shovel, hoe and rake are all the tools the urban gardener will really need.

PLANT SELECTION

Plan for vegetable types which will do well in your area. Consult your County Extension Agent for aid in type selection.

For example, broccoli, cauliflower and most leafy vegetables are cool-weather lovers, so will not prosper in summer's heat. Others, such as okra and eggplant will not grow well until the soil has become adequately warm.

OTHER FACTORS

Mulch of various types can be used to combat excessive evaporation of moisture in the garden and also to reduce the weed problem.

If you garden you will encounter the insect problem, but there are effective means of controlling these, as well as plant diseases.

Pre-register for the next session by calling 682-9481, extension 437. The fee is $5.

Education in real estate important

By JAMES M. WOODARD
Copley News Service

The increasing complexities of today's real estate transactions has sparked a "boom" in real estate education.

Never before has education been so important in the real estate field. It's a top-priority requirement for any practitioner who values his competence and credibility in working with clients.

It's also important to consumers who need to buy or sell a home — or want to start a real estate investment program. And the fact that consumers are generally more knowledgeable and sophisticated than ever before adds pressure on the professionals who must continually update their knowledge in a rapidly changing market.

Responding to this intensified thirst for knowledge, the National Association of Realtors as well as state realtor associations are beefing up their educational programs for members.

A greater variety of subjects are being addressed, keyed to the most pressing educational needs in the current market (e.g. creative financing techniques). More seminar sessions are being scheduled, and more books and other printed materials are published.

Communications techniques to facilitate the increasing flow of information are being modernized.

For example, a seminar series for real estate brokers was beamed via satellite to huge TV screens in Holiday Inn conference rooms throughout the country. Many groups of brokers viewed the "live" educational presentation in their own community.

In an increasing number of states, brokers and salespersons must not only meet certain educational requirements and pass a stiff exam before being granted a license; they now must receive a specified amount of "continuing education" if they are to retain their license.

As a 110-year-old gentleman recently commented while being interviewed by Johnny Carson, "Education is a lifetime proposition. It's never completed." That's particularly true for today's real estate professionals who must keep themselves knowledgeable in a complex and changing field.

Another indication of the growing importance of education is seen in the formation of the Real Estate Educators Association (REEA). Even though this nonprofit group is less than two years old, it has already attracted nearly 500 members from points throughout the country.

The membership includes a wide variety of persons who are either full-time professional real estate educators or at least actively involved and interested in real estate education.

The range of session subjects planned for the upcoming REEA national conference, set for June 13-18 in West Palm Beach, Fla., indicates the type of information communicated to members. "The real estate educator and inflation" and "classroom teaching techniques" are subject examples.

Other planned subjects are "National real estate research centers," "The new real estate finance," "Real estate education at the college level," and "Computers in real estate."

Also, a REEA-sponsored consumer education award program will culminate and winners announced at the REEA conference. Entries are now being accepted (until May 15). Any form of real estate education, keyed to a consumer audience, may be entered, it was announced.

Persons interested in more information about REAA and its programs are invited to write: Real Estate Educators Association, 310 N. Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill. 60610.

All this increasing concern about real estate education is ultimately focused on the consumer — buyers and sellers of homes and other real estate. If the consumer is to be informed and receive competent and knowledgeable guidance from real estate professionals, there must be effective educational programs.

Q. Are land prices increasing as rapidly as home prices?

A. No. Prices of land parcels are generally declining. They will drop by about 5 percent by the end of 1982, it is predicted by the Homer Hoyt Institute in Washington, D.C.

Inquiries are invited and may be answered in this column. Write: James M. Woodard, 825 N. San Marcos Road, Santa Barbara, CA 93111.

White wine boom

By DAN BERGER
Copley News Service

We've all heard about the white wine boom in the United States. White wines outsell reds four to one and many former cocktail-before-dinner fanciers are switching to white wine.

Why, then, would Landmark Vineyards in Sonoma sell its 1980 Riesling and Gewurztraminer at $24 a case wholesale? At that price, a retail shop could take a full markup and still sell the wines for $3 a bottle.

The reason these two well-made wines recently were closed out lies in the kind of premium white wines the American public wants. In a word: dry.

Most white wine sold in the United States today is jug wine, generics that are a bit sweet and offer little if any varietal character. These are everyday wines, beverage wines, and most of it sells for about $4 for 1.5 liters, which makes each four-ounce glass cost about 32 cents.

Landmark's 1980 Gewurztraminer first hit the shelves about a year ago, priced at $6 a fifth — three times the cost of jug wine. Unquestionably it's better wine than almost anything found in a jug. It is spicy and matches well with highly spiced foods such as curry and all forms of Chinese cooking.

But recently, in the Riesling and Gewurztraminer vineyard Bill and Michele Mabry planted while they were students at UC Davis a decade ago, workers were cutting vine trunks off halfway up the stalk and were placing small chips of other vine stock in a T cut into the bark.

This T-budding, after about a year, will convert these Riesling and Gewurztraminer vines to producing Chardonnay. Landmark is switching to classical varieties, and they're not alone. Many are dropping Riesling because, "Riesling is a hard sell, no matter how good it is."

That was the comment of Peter Richter, wine maker at Mark West Vineyards in Forrestville. Mark West T-budded five acres of Gewurztraminer last summer to Chardonnay, and next year owner Joan Ellis may bud over another five acres to Sauvignon Blanc.

Richter explained why Riesling, in particular, is an awkward variety to handle in the field:

"First of all, every year we have the debate of: do we leave it on the vine and go for a late-harvest style of wine? And it's harder to pick. The clusters are lighter and the pickers want more money."

Also, most Rieslings are made with 1-2 percent residual sugar, and thus are not table wines. Among the few dry Rieslings are those from Chateau St. Jean and Rutherford Hill. Soon, Freemark Abbey will release a dry Riesling.

Gewurztraminer has another problem, besides the fact it, too, is usually made a touch on the sweet side. (When it's made dry, it can develop an unattractive bitterness.) The variety's main problem is: it's hard to pronounce. One winery sales director said he is asked for "that wine that starts with a G?" (Pronounce it guh-vurtz-tra-mee-ner.)

Because of that problem, some wineries have made wines using both Riesling and Gewurztraminer in the blend and are calling them by proprietary names.

Buena Vista has a wine it calls Carneros Spiceling; Balverne makes Healdsburger. Both are light, slightly spicy, chillable, quaffable aperitif wines.

Spiceling was named by Buena Vista President Hubertus von Wolffen, evoking his German heritage. This 60 percent Gewurz, 40 percent Riesling has a slight residual sugar and good acidity. Price hasn't yet been set.

Healdsburger is 70 percent Gewurz, 22 percent Riesling, 8 percent Scheurebe and likewise has a clean, crisp finish. Suggested retail on the 1981, out soon, will be about $5.50.

The pattern has been set: premium Riesling and Gewurztraminer from Napa and Sonoma is on the wane.

Speaking of Buena Vista, this old Sonoma County operation has had a resurgence under former wine maker Rick Williams and recently under the new enologist, Don Harrison.

Williams, an erratic but brilliant wine maker, was responsible for Buena Vista's highly impressive 1977 Cabernet Sauvignon "Cask 34" as well as a number of other wines including late harvest Rieslings that challenge the best ever made in California.

'Hard skin' arthritis

ATLANTA (AP) — To nearly 250,000 Americans who suffer from this perplexing form of arthritis, scleroderma means much more than "hard skin."

According to the Arthritis Foundation, scleroderma is a connective tissue disease that causes a thickening and hardening of the skin, and sometimes inflammation in internal organs such as the heart, lungs, kidneys or intestinal tract. It strikes two to three times more women than men, and most often starts between the ages of 20 and 40.

"Some cases of scleroderma are mild," says Dr. Frederic C. McDuffie of the Arthritis Foundation. "Sometimes only the skin, muscles or bones are affected. But in cases where the internal organs become inflamed, scleroderma can be severe enough to be life-threatening."

Like other forms of arthritis, there is no cure for scleroderma. It can, however, be controlled and relieved through a combination of drugs and other treatment methods prescribed for each individual patient.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Saturday, April 24, 1982

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Barbra Streisand and Shirley MacLaine celebrate this birthday with you, as does "Real People's" John Barbour, who was born in Toronto, Canada. A mystery will soon be solved, bringing you new financial gains. Although others can give you good advice, you have to make your own decisions. A business venture helps you build a strong foundation for the future. Count on romance to be very exciting. Conflicting emotions could pull you in two different directions at once. Look for new outlets for your administrative skills. A community project or political campaign would benefit greatly from your organizational talents. Consult family members.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Have a frank talk with the boss. It will clear the air and open up new opportunities for you. Romance puts you on cloud nine. Age differences do not matter; forget them.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Someone who claims to love you is trying to control your life. Adopt a new attitude and stress will disappear. A valuable possession that was lost now reappears.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A postponement gives you a chance to turn a negative experience into a positive one. Re-evaluate a business relationship. It may not be in your best financial interests.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your friendships and your work complement each other. Secret transactions can be highly profitable. A meeting with a former romantic partner is featured.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Concentrate on completing jobs already under way. Review tax and insurance matters. Someone close to you will ask a big favor. Try to help, but do not loan money.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Some pleasant surprises are in store for you where romance is concerned. Don't let minor irritations get out of hand. Pay greater attention to detail. Learn more about your field.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A new career is a real possibility but will require weekend study or research. A wedding or family reunion is the setting for a romantic encounter. Dress your best!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Hold tight to your faith, but make certain that you are not indulging in wishful thinking. Artistic projects can mean extra income. Get back into circulation to make interesting new friends.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Appearances are very important now, so be discreet. Socializing between employer and employee could present a sensitive problem if romance develops.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): If you have been doing double duty lately, consider taking a break. Family members will be delighted if you can get away for a few days. Mate plays games at your expense.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Member of opposite sex engineers drama that captures your attention. Luck favors your efforts to get ahead at work. A new financial proposition eases tension.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Family members rally around when they realize that you may be facing a crisis. Their actions lift your spirits. Low prices may not guarantee a bargain.

Opening lead: Queen of ♡.

The secret to many hands is counting. But that in itself is not enough to secure the winning line. You must also be able to draw the right conclusions from your calculations.

Even with his good six-card suit, North's bidding is aggressive. His five clubs was ace-asking in the methods used by the partnership, but he might have also checked on kings — a grand slam that could depend on a finesse is not winning bridge!

West led the queen of hearts, and declarer was not overjoyed with his contract. He won the ace, cashed the ace of diamonds and reentered dummy with the queen. When West discarded a heart on this trick, East could be counted for four diamonds. Declarer took the proven finesse for the jack of diamonds, then cashed the king of spades to make sure that West was void and that East had started with seven cards in the suit. Now twelve of East's cards were known. Declarer cashed the king of hearts to establish that East's thirteenth card was a club. His distribution was now proven to be 7-1-4-1.

The rest was easy. Declarer led a club to the ace, and claimed the rest of the tricks when the king fell. But wait a moment! Since West was known to have four clubs, why did declarer play for the drop of the king, considerably against the odds, instead of taking the finesse?

No, declarer had not taken a peek at the hands. He was simply applying the knowledge he had of the hand. Declarer had only nine tricks in hearts, diamonds and spades. Therefore, he needed four tricks from the club suit. Since clubs were known to be 4-1, if West held the king-fourth, declarer could not make more than three tricks in the suit with the help of two finesses, and he would go down. The only chance for his contract was that the king was singelton, and declarer played for it!

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. Budget negotiators focus on outline

By CLIFF HAAS

WASHINGTON (AP) — White House and congressional negotiators, disagreeing on major issues, are winding down their search for a bipartisan budget compromise by focusing on an outline rather than a detailed plan for achieving lower deficits, sources say.

Several participants in the secret talks said late Thursday they expect the bargaining session at the White House today to be the last in the month-long series of discussions, regardless of whether agreement is reached.

The sources, who asked not to be quoted by name, said the negotiators appear to have abandoned efforts to gain a detailed compromise on President Reagan's deficit-ridden budget — including decisions on tax increases and cuts in government benefit programs. But they said the negotiators still hope to agree on specifics in some less controversial areas.

Instead of firm decisions on politically sensitive issues of revenue and spending, the negotiators might settle for merely setting targets that Congress would be asked to meet, the sources said.

Such a solution would preserve the appearance of averting a stalemate while playing down the failure to achieve agreement on a wide range of proposals to cope with ballooning budget deficits.

Under that approach, White House officials and members of Congress could agree on the need to raise taxes by a certain amount without having to resolve the impasse over whether to modify or drop the 10 percent cut in personal income tax rates scheduled for July 1983.

House Democrats have demanded a change in the tax cut but Reagan has insisted that it remain intact.

Negotiators had been grappling with options to reduce deficits to $93 billion in 1983 and $40 billion in 1985. Administration officials have privately conceded that without action by Congress, the deficits will reach $180 billion this year and $240 billion in 1985.

Deficit-reduction options considered during the talks include:

—Measures to help raise about $30 billion in additional tax revenue next year and $125 billion over three years. They include a 4 percent tax surcharge for upper-income taxpayers and an oil import fee or other tax on energy products.

—A proposal to reduce and stretch out cost-of-living increases for Social Security and other benefit programs for three years.

—Reducing Reagan's defense buildup by $28 billion over three years.

—Freezing hundreds of domestic spending programs.

Sources said Rep. Richard Bolling, D-Mo., on Thursday withdrew a series of suggestions he had offered Wednesday night, including an indication that House Democrats might accept a three-month delay in this summer's cost-of-living increase for Social Security recipients if Reagan proposed it.

However, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., remained adamant against either a delay or a reduction in the annual cost-of-living increases, a Democratic source close to O'Neill said.

Reports that Bolling had floated several ideas at Wednesday night's meeting fueled optimistic comments by some of the negotiators.

But prior to Thursday's bargaining session, O'Neill told reporters he was not optimistic about chances for a budget compromise.

Chagras' bond hearing to be 'in camera'

By MACK SISK

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — At the request of the defense and over the objections newspaper attorneys, a U.S. magistrate agreed to close today's bond reduction hearing for two alleged co-conspirators in the slaying of a federal judge.

U.S. Magistrate Robert O'Connor granted a request to close the hearing while the court considered two motions defense lawyers said should not be heard in open court.

Attorneys for The San Antonio Express-News and the San Antonio Light objected to the "in camera" hearing on grounds the secrecy violates the public's First Amendment right to know about court proceedings.

However, O'Connor advised newspaper lawyers to take the matter up with Chief U.S. District Judge William S. Sessions and ordered the hearing for Joseph Chagra, 35, and Elizabeth Chagra, 28, to resume today behind closed doors.

The hearing on motions to reduce Chagra's $1.6 million bond and Mrs. Chagra's $1.1 million bond has been drawn out into its third day, and O'Connor has said after the proceeding ends he will order a pre-bond investigation before he rules.

Defense attorneys called six witnesses in an effort to show that if the pair intended to flee, they would have done so before the highly publicized indictments were returned last week.

The pair is accused of conspiring with imprisoned drug trafficker Jamiel "Jimmy" Chagra, 37, and convicted hitman Charles V. Harrelson, 43, to murder U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr., who was shot to death May 29, 1979, in San Antonio.

Grand jurors accused Jimmy Chagra, who is the husband of Elizabeth and brother of Joseph, of paying Harrelson about $250,000 to kill Wood.

FBI agent Ronald Iden testified Thursday that Joseph Chagra participated in narcotics deals and two murder contracts Jimmy Chagra allegedly attempted to arrange while being held at the federal prison in Leavenworth, Kan.

Iden testified Jimmy Chagra asked fellow convict Jerry Ray James, who prosecutors said has agreed to be a government witness, to take part in the drug deals and to arrange the murders of two men.

The agent testified Jimmy Chagra indicated in conversations with James that "Joe was in charge of the outside operations" for the alleged narcotics deal and had tried to find the address of one of the murder targets.

Defense attorney Billy Ravkind called Jimmy Chagra a "chronic liar" and contended Joseph Chagra was not connected with the alleged prison conversations.

Meanwhile, Harrelson was brought here from the state penitentiary at Huntsville Thursday to await arraignment next Wednesday on the murder charge.

Harrelson appeared before O'Connor Thursday and signed documents necessary to obtain a court-appointed attorney.

He asked O'Connor to appoint Brownsville lawyer Thomas G. Sharpe Jr.

Sharpe and Houston attorney Percy Foreman defended Harrelson in 1971 on charges he killed Hearne grain dealer Sam Degelia Jr. in 1968 for a fee of $2,000. The trial ended in a hung jury. However, Harrelson was convicted the next year and sentenced to 15 years in prison. He was paroled in 1978.

Bush worth a mint in Alaska

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Vice President George Bush was worth about $7,000 an hour to Alaska Republicans, officials say.

During a three-hour refueling stop in Anchorage Thursday on his way to the Far East, Bush drew about 65 of the party faithful at $250 per person to a private reception.

Later, about 350 people paid $25 apiece to hear Bush say the Reagan administration has kept its promises to cut taxes, slow government spending and reduce regulations, and that it doesn't intend to change its course.

After deducting expenses, Republican National Committeeman Eldon Ulmer estimated the quickie fund-raiser netted the GOP about $20,000.

Bush was en route to Tokyo to begin a two-week tour of South Korea, Singapore, Australia and New Zealand.

Man sues attorney

BROOKLYN CENTER, Minn. (AP) — A man who didn't find out for nearly a year that his age discrimination suit had been dismissed has been awarded $246,000 — from his former lawyer.

Harold Chase's suit was dismissed when his lawyer, Walter Weyhrich, failed to appear at a pretrial conference, according to court records. Weyhrich never appealed the dismissal and Chase didn't know the status of his suit until he hired another lawyer.

The second lawyer, Judith Oakes, discovered the suit had been dismissed while trying to find out when the trial was scheduled.

"Mr. Chase was very, very upset," she recalled, and filed suit against Weyhrich last October.

State employees lose trucks, data processors, typewriters

BOSTON (AP) — State employees apparently have misplaced or lost dump trucks, cars, expensive electric typewriters, copying machines and data processors worth an estimated $10 million, a legislative committee says.

"We're missing everyting from paper clips to automobiles to dump trucks," Rep. Kevin Fitzgerald, D-Boston, chairman of the House Post-Audit and Oversight Committee, said Thursday.

Fitzgerald said his committee can't even document what is missing because statewide inventory controls and record-keeping practices are so shoddy.

"We've tried to get specific information on what's missing and we just can't do it," he said.

An estimated $10 million worth of equipment purchased with tax dollars has been lost in the past three years, said Fitzgerald, who based his estimate on the committee's review of 25 state agencies.

Partially as a result of this loss, state spending on equipment has more than doubled since the 1978 state bookkeeping year. About $11.1 million was spent on equipment that fiscal year, compared to $23.5 million in fiscal year 1980.

Legislation is being introduced to tighten inventory procedures, number all equipment and to make annual equipment inventories mandatory for all state agencies, Fitzgerald said.

The situation has become so severe that Statehouse officials have ordered office workers to bolt typewriters to their desks so no one walks off with them.

Book fills in details of night man has forgotten

By VERN ANDERSON

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — For nearly eight years, Cortney Naisbitt remembered few details of the event which shattered his life, referring to it merely as "the accident." Everyone else knew it as one of the most brutal crimes in Utah history.

Naisbitt was a 16-year-old high school sophomore when he had his first solo flight in a plane eight years ago today. That night, bubbling with elation, he entered the Hi-Fi Shop, a music store. He was greeted by mayhem and murder.

When Naisbitt became conscious of his hospital surroundings four months later, he remembered none of the horror which had left him maimed and three others, including his mother, dead.

He remained hospitalized as two young airmen from nearby Hill Air Force Base were tried and convicted for the robbery-murders amid a public outcry enhanced because the victims and their families were well-known and respected.

Pierre Dale Selby, then 21, and William Andrews, then 19, were sentenced to death one day after Naisbitt left the hospital.

Today Naisbitt knows every detail of that April 22, 1974, night in the Hi-Fi Shop basement.

He knows he and four others were bound and then forced to drink a caustic drain cleaner, that 18-year-old Michelle Ansley was sexually assaulted, that all five were shot in the head and that the only other survivor, Orren Walker — his 20-year-old son dead beside him — had a ballpoint pen kicked into his ear as he played dead.

Naisbitt, 24, learned all the details earlier this year when he was given the manuscript of a book about the crime and its devastating effect on the Naisbitt family. "Victim: The Other Side of Murder," written by lawyer Gary Kinder, will be published in August.

Naisbitt said his father — fearing an emotional crisis for his son — was at first reluctant to let him read the manuscript. He relented when Naisbitt pleaded, "It's killing me not knowing what happened to me."

Page after page, Naisbitt read avidly, at times feeling strangely detached from events as they unfolded, at other times profoundly moved by all his family had endured in his behalf.

"It sounded like a story about someone who just happened to have my name," Naisbitt said in an interview. "But I shed quite a few tears when I read it."

Naisbitt's esophagus, ruined by the caustic fluid, was surgically replaced with a section of his bowel. He also sustained partial loss of movement in his right arm — which keeps him from flying planes — and still suffers tremendous headaches. But he says his most difficult adjustment was an emotional one.

"I had become fairly dependent on my dad for just about everything and needed to break away," Naisbitt said.

He's made progress. Last year he moved into his own home. He's working as a computer-clerk at Hill AFB — "It seems kind of ironic to me" — and he hopes to make it into a college nursing program.

His father, Dr. Byron H. Naisbitt, an obstetrician, remains his best friend and a kind of hero in his son's eyes. Does he have others?

"Superman, partly because I feel like him, with bullets bouncing off. My head stopped a bullet," Naisbitt smiles.

Meantime, Selby and Andrews have had six stays of execution while on Death Row at Utah State Prison and their appeals have twice reached the U.S. Supreme Court. Their attorneys, however, believe a recent Utah Supreme Court decision, if applied retroactively, could overturn their clients' death sentences.

Last fall, ruling in another murder case, the court established a new standard for sentencing in capital cases. The court overturned a judge's ruling that the death penalty was mandated when aggravating circumstances outweigh mitigating circumstances.

The high court said a jury or judge must find "beyond a reasonable doubt" that aggravating circumstances outweigh the mitigation and that the death penalty is justified under the circumstances.

Defense attorneys contend the old standard was applied in the Hi-Fi case.

Naisbitt believes there's a good chance his attackers will never be executed.

"I think our justice system is right, but also wrong," he said. "Everyone should have a fair trial and the right to one or two appeals, "but this constant appeal, appeal, appeal, appeal trick that the lawyers play, that's where our justice system falls in the dumps."

What would he say to Selby and Andrews, given the opportunity?

"I'd just probably say one word — why?"

Cortney Naisbitt doesn't remember the robbery eight years ago at the Hi-Fi Shop in which he and three others were forced to drink a caustic liquid and then shot. After reading a book about the incident, he now knows what occurred.

Having patience like pulling teeth

BATTLE CREEK, Mich. (AP) — Sometimes, extracting courtesy from harried public employees is like pulling teeth.

But that apparently wasn't the case with Flint Miller, a receptionist at the Calhoun County Prosecutor's office.

Miller, 23, was confronted one morning earlier this week by an angry man who demanded to see Miller's boss, County Prosecutor Conrad Sindt. Miller said the man wanted to file a complaint because "someone beat him up and broke his dentures."

When the man was told he would have to file a complaint with police and was refused entry to the office, he removed his false teeth and hurled them at Miller, despite a glass security barrier separating the two.

The teeth sailed through an opening in the glass, struck Miller's typewriter and fell on the floor, the receptionist said.

Nixon's former defense counsel comes out of the closet

By ESTES THOMPSON

ROANOKE, Va. (AP) — Samuel A. Garrison III was a rising star: At 27, prosecutor in his hometown. At 29, staff lawyer for a House committee in Washington. At 30, a staff lawyer for the vice president of the United States. And at 31, chief Republican defense counsel in the Watergate hearings.

But then a business venture failed, and at age 38, he was sent to federal prison for embezzling $46,000.

Now, at 40, Garrison has served his sentence, has declared personal bankruptcy, has been disbarred and divorced, is unemployed — and says he's living off food stamps and other public assistance. His former partner stands accused of conspiring to have him killed.

Garrison also admitted being homosexual — and, he said, lost a chance at a good job on Capitol Hill because of it.

"It's a major splash of cold water, to put it mildly," Garrison said in a recent interview.

"I WAS ACCUSTOMED to a certain amount of success. ... I think pride was definitely a key element in my downfall, the inability to admit that I'd screwed up."

Garrison said he forfeited a chance for a job as counsel to a House subcommittee recently when he told the congressman sponsoring him that he was homosexual.

Garrison said the congressman, whom he wouldn't identify, had convinced other subcommittee members that Garrison's criminal record and disbarment were no problems. But the gay issue killed his prospects for the job, he said.

He isn't ashamed of being gay, Garrison said, but is ashamed of embezzling the money.

Since getting out of prison in 1980, Garrison's employment has consisted of a year as a researcher at a Fairfax law firm. He gave up that job when it seemed he would get another one in Washington, and the firm has since hired a replacement.

He is almost penniless.

HIS $140,000 home in Roanoke, the antiques that furnished it, and his diesel Mercedes were sold in bankruptcy proceedings. His marriage ended in divorce in 1980 after 17 years.

Nine years go, Garrison was appointed to direct the Republican defense of former President Nixon during impeachment hearings before the House Judiciary Committee.

You could reach him through the White House switchboard in those heady days. He was featured in national articles about the impeachment inquiry.

Then Garrison came home to Roanoke to practice law, and that's when the slide began. His new daily routine bored him, he said, and he invested in a restaurant-disco venture for diversion.

He said he "really got in over my head" financially, and so began embezzling from a bankruptcy account he supervised.

The business venture eventually failed, losing thousands of dollars for Garrison and his partner, Dr. John Gardner Jr. of Roanoke.

IN 1980, HE pleaded guilty to embezzlement and was sentenced to a year and a day in federal prison at Maxwell Air Force Base. He was released after serving about four months.

Virginia State Police later charged Gardner with conspiracy to have Garrison murdered. Authorities say Gardner, who is awaiting trial, met with an undercover Virginia State Police agent posing as a hitman.

Despite his problems, Garrison hopes to work as a lawyer again.

"I think I have a genuine optimism about the long-term view," he said. "I have been gratified and surprised to the extent to which other people have been willing to go to try to help me along during the hard times."

In the last year and a half, Garrison said, he has told family and friends that he is gay. His 17-year-old son David, who lives with him in a Fairfax apartment, and his 15-year-old daughter, Lisa, who lives in Roanoke with her mother, have been supportive.

Gayness doesn't affect his job qualifications, he adds.

"I WAS GAY when I was elected commonwealth's attorney and served, but people didn't know it," he said. "I was gay when I worked for the vice president, but people didn't know it. I was gay when I worked on the impeachment inquiry, but people didn't know it.

"I'm out of the closet in the sense that there's no one — relative, friend or whoever — that I mind knowing about it," he said. "All I want is to be accepted as I really am without playing roles anymore...

"You see, gayness has been the greatest single burden of my life," Garrison said. "Now I feel, that with all the cards out on the table, that I have more peace with myself and just a generally better feeling about my interaction with other people than I have ever had in my life."

"I was gay when I was elected commonwealth's attorney and served, but people didn't know it. I was gay when I worked for the vice president, but people didn't know it. I was gay when I worked on the impeachment inquiry, but people didn't know it."

Lincoln Brigade members may finally be recognized

By ERIC NALDER
Hearst Feature Service

SEATTLE — Frank Alexander's legs still ache from grenade wounds he suffered fighting fascists as part of a rag-tag brigade of American volunteers during the Spanish Civil War 45 years ago.

Max Farrar's voice still rises in anger when he recalls the red-baiting he suffered at the hands of the FBI during the 1950s, just because he, too, fought against German, Italian and Spanish fascists during the forgotten Spanish war in the late 1930s.

And Bob Reed, another American volunteer, said the lessons of Spain aren't far behind us. The United States now has a role in Central America that is much like the role of the Germans and Italians in 1936 Spain — supporting fascists at the expense of fledgling democracies, he charged.

Alexander, Farrar and Reed are aging veterans of the Abraham Lincoln Brigade, a loose-knit army of 3,500 U.S. citizens — idealists and leftists — who faced incredible dangers to smuggle themselves into war-torn Spain during the mid-1930s.

While the U.S. government remained neutral, they joined international forces defending the elected government of the Spanish Republic against insurgent fascists led by Franco and supplied by Hitler and Mussolini.

"This was a bunch of raggedy volunteers — some too young, some too old — who had little military training, but they really wanted to go to Spain," said Reed, 67, who was slightly wounded three times in terrifying battles.

The fascists won in Spain, and brigade members left the country defeated. Franco ruled Spain until he died in 1975, despite his old ties to Hitler.

More than half of the Lincoln Brigade members were killed and three quarters of the survivors were wounded.

Feelings about brigade members are changing today. A few liberal members of Congress are now pushing a bill that would give Lincoln Brigade members the recognition and rights of American war veterans.

Recognition hasn't come easy to the Abraham Lincoln Brigade. The bloodied and fatigued volunteers were cheered when they returned home. But it wasn't long before they were accused of siding with communists. The Soviet Union was the only country that lent support to the Spanish Republicans, and that taint soon spilled over to brigade volunteers.

Half of the surviving volunteers — including Alexander, Reed and Farrar — served in the U.S. military in World War II. But the Defense Department relegated some to secondary duties, derisively labeling them, "pre-mature anti-fascists," Reed said.

After World War II, Lincoln Brigade volunteers were caught in the anti-communist fervor that gripped America. "The FBI would come to the job and say, 'Get rid of that guy' — pointing at me. I was kicked off job after job," said Alexander, who is now 74.

Farrar, 77, said he was kicked out of a cook's job at Boeing after six months of employment and later was chased away from a window-cleaning job, "all because I was a security risk."

Alexander faced double jeopardy because he was black. While in Spain, he recalled staying alive on donkey meat and garbanzo beans as he fought with an old carbine against modern tanks and airplanes. Italian artillery shells screamed in every few seconds.

"What we lacked was enough planes, artillery, tanks and heavy stuff," said Reed, who was recently honored by the city of Seattle for his work at a social agency.

Doctors and patients discovering house calls once more profitable

By The Los AngelesTimes-Washington Post News Service

FULLERTON, Calif. — The curly-haired man, his husky 6 feet, 4 inches clothed in a brown sport coat, white shirt and plaid slacks, knocked on the ranch house door. "May I come in?" he yelled. "I can't hear your feeble voice."

Hefting a large black bag, he entered a small, cluttered living room where a tiny, white-haired woman in a blue pants suit sat in a corner easy chair. Her nearby cane and television channel selector indicated she rarely left the spot.

The man chided her: "Your lungs are all shot and yet you keep this house so cold — it's cold right now!"

"WELL," SAID the old woman, obviously used to this repartee, "you left the front door open."

It could have been nothing more than a spirited visit between old friends, except that the man was a doctor and he was making, of all things, a house call.

This was not Marcus Welby, the television character often jokingly referred to as the last American doctor to make house calls, but Dr. Marcus Gartner, one of a number of real-life West Coast physicians who are part of a startling comeback for what most doctors consider a relic.

When the nation was younger, towns smaller and transportation more primitive, doctors often went to their patients' homes for the sort of jocular visit enjoyed by Gartner, 45, and his patient, Jane Gagnon, 80. But the automobile made it easier for patients to travel, and the population boom deluged the limited numbers of doctors, who soon found that spending an hour to reach and treat just one patient was wasteful and expensive.

NOW, MEDICAL schools have done so well catching up to the population boom that some cities have a glut of doctors. As a result, small companies are springing up that specialize in arranging home visits by licensed physicians.

The trend is more advanced on the West Coast, where the attractions of western life have brought an abundance of doctors, reduced the crowds in waiting rooms and left free time in some doctors' schedules. Dr. Leonard D. Fenninger, vice president of medical education and scientific policy for the American Medical Association, said many of those doctors "are beginning to realize that there are observations that can be made in the home that cannot be made in the hospital."

In some cases, however, the impetus for house calls is more financial than professional. Physicians in the most doctor-saturated areas find they have to make them simply to earn a living. In Portland, Ore.; Orange County, Calif.; Los Angeles and San Diego house-call services have had some problems getting established, but finding enough doctors willing to do house calls has not been among them.

When Cele Jameson, formerly a business manager for an ambulance company, started a house-call service at Portland's Holladay Park Hospital in December 1980, about 300 doctors inquired about what turned out to be 15 available positions. "I put an ad in the Portland Physician, and, good heavens, we were swamped," she said.

ACCORDING TO AMA figures, the number of physicians in the United States grew from 334,028 in 1970 to 467,679 in 1980, a 40 percent increase, far exceeding the 8 percent growth of the general population. Even the numbers of "primary care" doctors — the general practitioners, internists, pediatricians and obstetricians who handle most common ailments — increased after a slight drop in the 1960s. They numbered 186,227 in 1980, a 36 percent increase from 1970.

Noel Lehr, 45, and her son Craig, 27, began their Doctors' Housecalling Service in Fullerton to serve Orange County last year after Craig, a chemical engineer, could not get a doctor to visit him as he lay sick and dizzy in a Louisiana hotel room. The Lehrs were also annoyed that Noel's mother, for whom they had arranged a special room in their home, had to move to a convalescent home because they could not find a doctor willing to make regular home visits.

Their service is making money now, Craig Lehr said. They arrange five or six calls a day for about 20 doctors on their list, including Gartner.

Gartner, with 20 years of experience as a general practitioner in Orange County, said that when he began to make calls regularly for the service "there were complaints from other doctors. They think it doesn't fit into the scheme of things. They think patients should go to the local emergency rooms. Well, I'm a director of a local emergency room, and I can tell you that is an expensive way to practice medicine."

HOUSE-CALL SERVICES charge about $50 to $70 per visit, roughly splitting the fee with the doctor. Gartner, who also has his own office specializing in care for the elderly, calls regularly on some of his own patients and usually charges them about $30, the amount Medicare would pay for an ordinary call.

The Center City Hospital in San Diego set up a house-call service in January in response to intense competition for patients among private hospitals in the area, according to the service's director, Dawn Ainsworth. A house-call service made sense, she said, because "we have a lot of elderly people who have relocated to San Diego and cannot get around well, and we have a lot of tourists here who don't know their way around."

Indeed, many callers to the southern California services are hotels and motels with guests who suddenly need a doctor.

Local residents, who assume no one does house calls anymore, have taken longer to discover the service, but their portion of the business is growing.

Michele Mayberry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Glen Hurd, will represent the Tall City Lions Club at the district convention in Big Spring today and Saturday. She is a junior at Lee High School.

Man wants to be stoned for committing sex crime

HACKENSACK, N.J. (AP) — A U.S. Army Reserve officer on active duty in the Pentagon has pleaded guilty to a sex charge and told a Superior Court judge he should be stoned to death as punishment, a prosecutor says.

Lt. Col. James L. Blauvelt, 41, told Superior Court Judge Fred C. Galda that he believed the appropriate punishment was set forth in the Scriptures — that he be stoned until dead, Assistant Prosecutor Roger Daly said.

But Blauvelt told the court he would be willing to proceed with the judicial process, Daly said. He faces 10 to 20 years in prison and a $100,000 fine. Daly said he feared that Blauvelt would commit suicide.

Blauvelt told the court that between August 1980 and August 1981 he had oral sex with a boy who had been staying at his family's Saddle River home. Blauvelt also keeps an apartment in Virginia.

Associated Press meeting to feature Kirkpatrick

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The Associated Press will hold its annual meeting here Monday, marking the opening of the American Newspaper Publishers Association's traditional "newspaper week."

Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan will speak at an AP luncheon following the meeting.

The AP meeting, which is expected to draw 1,200 newspaper and broadcast executives from every state, will include the election of six directors of the news cooperative and a speech by Jeane Kirkpatrick, U.S. ambassador to the United Nations. Three of AP's foreign correspondents — Victoria Graham, Larry Heinzerling and Thomas Fenton — will discuss events in China, Poland and Central America.

Jack W. Tarver, vice chairman of Cox Enterprises Inc., who is stepping down as chairman of the AP after six years, will preside at the meeting. Keith Fuller, president and general manager of the AP, also will speak.

Other speakers scheduled at ANPA sessions during newspaper week include Sen. Edward M. Kennedy and Rep. Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill, both Democrats of Massachusetts; Air Force Gen. David C. Jones, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and shuttle astronauts Jack R. Lousma and C. Gordon Fullerton.

The AP Board of Directors, in a report prepared for distribution on Monday, focused on what it described as a year of violence: "Violence to world leaders, violence to the economy, violence to Polish hopes for freedom, even violence to the baseball season."

The 21-member board also cited the work of several individual staffers, including photographer Ron Edmonds of the Washington staff, whose dramatic pictures of the attempted assassination of President Reagan won him the 1982 Pulitzer Prize for spot news photography and AP Special Correspondent Saul Pett, whose 8,500-word profile of the federal bureaucracy brought him the 1982 Pulitzer for feature writing.

The board reported continuing challenges to news gathering: AP staffers, like other Americans, were barred from Iran; the Polish government cut off communications after the imposition of martial law; AP writer Cynthia Stevens was expelled from South Africa on grounds the government refused to dislose.

"More than ever," the board said, "the world seemed to be a sensitive network of interlocking interests, hopes and apprehensions. A tug at one corner was felt in every strand. The demand for thorough reporting, objective analysis and interpretation seemed more urgent. Not by coincidence, the AP's staff, foreign and domestic, stood at an all-time high (of 2,600), enabling the cooperative to meet its steadily increasing responsibilities."

The board reported technological as well as editorial advances. It said the number of satellite earth stations in place at member newspapers increased from 100 at the start of 1981 to 409 at the end of the year. In photos, the board said, the AP introduced a portable picture transmitter enabling a photographer to send black and white or color pictures to any receiver in the United States.

The board reported that newspaper membership reached a high of 1,435 in 1981. Radio and television memberships also reached a high of 3,831 last year. Membership in The Associated Press Radio Network rose from 789 to 795.

The AP, which was founded in 1848, is the world's largest and oldest news gathering organization. It reaches people in more than 100 foreign countries as well as in the United States. New bureaus were opened last year in Grants Pass, Ore., and Grand Junction, Colo., raising the number of domestic bureaus to 123. The AP had 76 bureaus in 60 foreign countries last year and this month opened a bureau in Toronto, its first in Canada.

The nominees for the board of directors are: Robert C. Achorn, Worcester (Mass.) Gazette; James E. Burgess, Racine (Wis.) Journal-Times; Katherine Fanning, Anchorage (Alaska) Daily News; Robert G. Marbut, Ypsilanti (Mich.) Press; John F. McGee, Charleston (W.Va.) Daily Mail; W.S. Morris III, Augusta (Ga.) Chronicle and Herald; James H. Ottaway, Jr., Oneonta (N.Y.) Daily Star; Joe R. Seacrest, Lincoln (Neb.) Journal; Darrow Tully, Phoenix (Ariz.) Gazette and Arizona Republic; and George W. Wilson, Concord (N.H.) Monitor and Patriot. Achorn, Marbut, McGee and Morris are incumbents. Tarver, the other incumbent [illegible] seek re-election.

New Jersey fires thought to be arson

LITTLE EGG HARBOR TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — Thousands of evacuated residents are back home today after three suspicious forest fires scorched more than 5,000 acres in southern New Jersey.

Investigators were to walk through miles of smoldering woodlands today to try to determine what caused Thursday's fires.

Fire officials speculated the blazes — two in Ocean County and another Burlington County about 15 miles northwest — may have been set deliberately since all three broke out within an hour of each other, a state fire warden said.

"We're having fires spring up all over the place," said Fire Warden Joseph Hughes. "They're very suspicious and probably arson."

The fires began in the eastern region of the Pine Barrens, a 1.1 million-acre area of sandy-soiled forests, much of which is protected by state and federal environmental laws.

The most dangerous fires because of nearby populated areas were two in Ocean County. Together, they spanned 1,700 acres of pine, oak and underbrush in Little Egg Harbor Township and in nearby Eagleswood Township, about 20 miles north of Atlantic City, Hughes said.

He said officials, in assessing property losses today, would attempt to determine how many homes were destroyed or damaged.

Lt. Chris Silva of the Little Egg Harbor Township police said the largest Ocean County blaze began as a small brush fire on Poorman's Parkway and eventually engulfed more than 1,500 acres. It left a low, pale haze and the smell of burned pine through most of the county.

"What it did was come right down the woods," which were mostly uninhabited, he said. Strong, steady winds fanned the flames.

Another 200-acre blaze damaged only woodlands, officials said.

At least three people were treated at Atlantic City Medical Center's Mainland Division for minor injuries from the fire, said a spokeswoman who declined to give her name.

About 3,000 residents were evacuated from parts of this community and neighboring Eagleswood Township, Silva said. All returned to their homes by 9 p.m.

The largest of the fires, the one in Burlington County, was still burning overnight. It began around 2 p.m. in remote Penn State Forest in Burlington County and was six miles long and about a mile wide at one point, said Jim Staples, a spokesman for the state Department of Environmental Protection.

Maj. Harold Spedding, state police emergency management agency coordinator, said the Burlington County fire had damaged 3,500 acres by Thursday night.

He said many brush fires also would continue to burn as a result of the smoldering blazes in Ocean County.

Portions of several major roadways, including Route 539 and the Garden State Parkway, were closed for a time because of reduced visibility.

Hundreds of firefighters battled the flames. Five fixed-wing airplanes helped spread water, and authorities also used several 6,000-gallon tankers

Brown to seek disaster aid for fire victims

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — A roof-hopping firestorm that left 1,500 people homeless and blackened more than 50 buildings apparently claimed no lives, officials say.

Damage in the mile-square area was estimated at $50 million. State officials Thursday sought disaster aid for those affected.

Residents evacuated after Wednesday's firestorm, whipped by gusting winds, hoped to return home to collect personal items today after officials finished searching the charred ruins for bodies.

"We've turned up nothing," said a relieved police Sgt. Harry Easley who helped investigate reports that a 90-year-old man had been trapped in a burning building. "They've completed that search," he said.

The disaster fueled a slow-burning controversy over untreated wood-shingle roofs in Southern California.

Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. joined Assemblyman Richard Robinson, a Santa Ana Democrat, in pressing for urgent state legislation restricting use of roofs untreated by fire-retardants.

Anaheim fire officials say the prevalence of wooden roofs allowed the rapid spread of the blaze.

Rep. Bill Dannemeyer, a Republican from Fullerton, said residents would be allowed back into the fire area today. But Easley said no one would go back until the weekend.

"They will probably not be allowed back until Saturday at the earliest," Easley said. Red Cross workers would accompany residents into the devastated area, he said.

Dannemeyer also said he has contacted the White House about obtaining federal disaster aid. And Brown announced he would ask President Reagan to declare the burned-out neighborhood a federal disaster area, making residents who lost homes eligible for temporary federal housing and grants of up to $5,000 each to help offset their losses.

All-People's Congress plans week-long protest

WASHINGTON (AP) — A coalition protesting President Reagan's cutbacks in social programs and increases in military spending plans to launch a week-long "National Days of Resistance" with a march on the nation's capital May 1.

The protest will be a "dramatic expression of the suffering, discontent and anger of millions of working and poor people who have become the targets of Reagan's lethal program of cutbacks, racism, sexism and war," says Sahu Barron of the All-Peoples Congress, which is organizing the demonstration.

The coalition is made up of organizations claiming to represent the poor, the aged, the handicapped and ethnic populations and activist groups backing abortion and homosexual rights and opposing U.S. involvement in El Salvador.

It is demanding restoration of domestic budget cuts and major reductions in military spending, an immediate moratorium on plant closings and the reopening of plants that have already shut down.

"Each and every advance in social welfare of people in this country that has ever been made — whether it be unemployment insurance, Social Security, affirmative action, food stamps — has been won when people banded together," Ms. Barron said.

"Now, at a time when the Reaganites have unleashed an all-out offensive against the hard-won gains of over five decades, our message is that it is time to put our marching shoes on again," she said.

The coalition also is demanding full rights for homosexuals and illegal aliens, an intensified federal commitment to civil rights and affirmative action and an end to U.S. support for South Africa's apartheid government.

Also planned is a May 1 protest rally in Knoxville, Tenn., at the opening of the World's Fair, a Los Angeles rally supporting rights for illegal aliens and a demonstration in Miami backing political asylum for Haitian refugees.

Other regional demonstrations by students, gay rights activists and senior citizens also are planned, Ms. Barron said.

The All-Peoples Congress staged a protest earlier this year at the Agriculture Department, demanding that the government immediately distribute all federally owned commodities to poor people.

It also was involved in a New York demonstration last month to protest Reagan's policies. The president was in New York to receive an award from the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

Real mother demands son back from adoptive parents

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The adoptive father of a 2-year-old boy says the youth would be scarred emotionally if forced to return to his biological mother.

The young woman surrendered her infant for adoption in 1979, but now wants him back.

"I don't care what the legal aspect of it is," The Milwaukee Journal quoted the adoptive father as saying. "We are his family. We are his mom; we are his dad."

Circuit Judge William D. Gardner was expected to rule today on whether the mother's decision to terminate her parental rights was legal, since she was a minor when she gave up the child.

The woman was 17 years and 9 months old in July 1979 when she told then-Circuit Judge Fred St. Clair that the child's conception was the result of a rape. She said she wanted the child "brought up right with a family." She said she knew her decision was irrevocable.

By law, a guardian must approve a juvenile's decision to give up parental rights. But the transcript shows St. Clair handled the matter as if the woman were an adult, and within days the child was placed in a suburban Racine County home.

The boy, now almost 3 years old, has lived there ever since.

"Can you imagine?" asked the 40-year-old adoptive father, who the Journal said asked not to be identified. "Can you imagine him saying, 'Goodby, Mama, goodby, Daddy?'

"I think the kid would die," he said. "If there's anything such as a broken heart, he'd have one. It would be a scar on his mind for the rest of his life."

When the family, which also has an older adopted daughter, sought to finalize the boy's adoption in Racine County Probate Court, they were told something was amiss with the termination of parental rights.

"They said it wasn't anything for us to worry about, that they would catch up with the girl," the adoptive father said.

A lawyer appointed to be the girl's guardian in 1979 and a social worker were unable to locate her.

Last fall, the district attorney's office filed a petition asking for involuntary termination, alleging that the mother had abandoned her child and was an unfit mother.

But in October the young woman walked into a social worker's office and demanded the child.

Battle unsues over nominees to Legal Services Corporation

By GEORGE E. CONDON JR. and OTTO KREISHER
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — A leading Democratic senator earlier this week blasted as "a 14-carat bigot" one of two Californians named by President Reagan to the board of the Legal Services Corporation as all the nominees for the board came under attack in a fiery Senate hearing.

Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., called the appointment of former Sacramento appellate judge George E. Paras to the board that oversees legal services for the poor "a disgrace," repeatedly returning to Paras' much-publicized opposition last year to Gov. Brown's appointment of Cruz Reynosa to the California Supreme Court.

The lengthy clash between Paras, who defended calling Reynosa a "professional Mexican," and the Democratic members of the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee was the latest act in a long-running battle between conservatives — led by President Reagan — and liberals over the fate of the eight-year-old LSC.

The hearing, which ended without a formal vote on the nominees, provided some solace to backers of the LSC when all nine presidential appointees told the committee they opposed the President's efforts to strip the corporation of its funding.

Several witnesses urged the committee to reject all nine nominees, noting that eight are white, all are male and all are representives of the organized bar.

MORE SPECIFICALLY, several witnesses singled out for opposition four nominees, including Marc Sandstrom, executive vice president and general counsel of Great American Federal Savings and Loan, the newly named corporate parent of San Diego Federal Savings and Loan.

Sandstrom, who did not attend the hearing because of financial business in San Diego, was attacked on two fronts — his position with San Diego Federal and his membership on the board of the conservative Pacific Legal Foundation.

Noting that both San Diego Federal and the foundation are contesting actions brought by LSC lawyers, Bari Schwartz, executive director of the Coalition for Legal Services, said, "so many potential areas of conflict are likely to arise that we believe it would not be appropriate" to confirm Sandstrom's appointment.

Schwartz said the Legal Aid Foundation of Los Angeles has filed "over 20 separate complaints of unlawful consumer practices" in the last four years against Great American Federal to go with 36 such complaints by the Los Angeles Office of Consumer Affairs and 23 by the Office of Public Counsel.

These cases resulted, he said, from the institution's "purchase of commercial paper from companies which have sold defective merchandise to low-income consumers or have used illegal credit practices in connection with such sales."

SANDSTROM, IN SAN Diego, said the accusations against him are "inaccurte, baseless and groundless" and discounted the possibility of conflict of interest.

On Great American Federal's situation, he said, "The charges they refer to represent one-tenth of one percent of the firm's business."

That business is expected to be explored May 14 when Sandstrom and another appointee who was absent at the hearing are set for a separate hearing.

The clear target of the hearing, however, was Paras whose earlier attempts at explaining his "professional Mexican" remark only embroiled him in deeper controversy.

Eagleton was irate over Paras' comments in a St. Louis interview when he said, "There are such things as professional blacks, or professional Greeks, professional Dagos, professional Jews — people who put their ethnic origin ahead of everything else. That's what I meant."

In a lengthy exchange with Eagleton, Paras defined a professional black as "someone who dedicates his entire life to black causes not for the sake of the black causes along the way of service but by way of putting aside ultimate considerations of the good of America as a nation — all of us — but for one specific group."

PARAS TOLD Eagleton, however, he neither knew nor had read about anyone he would designate as a professional black, Jew or "Dago" and said he would only name professional Greeks if threatened with contempt of Congress.

Eagleton then dismissed his comments as "incendiary, reckless and defamatory" to which Paras replied, "If you conclude that I am a bigot or a racist, obviously you should vote against me."

Later in the hearing, Eagleton said, "You are, for want of a better word, a 14-carat bigot."

In a brief rejoinder, Paras said, "I am no more of a bigot than you are, senator, and I know you are no bigot.

"My sin, apparently, was that Justice Reynosa was a sacred cow in California and I shouldn't have attacked him," he said.

After the hearing, the committee began to poll its members on the appointments and some results may be available today.

Stevens seeks cuts in spending for NATO

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Ted Stevens, who has criticized Europe's commitment to defending itself, says he will seek cuts in U.S. spending for NATO operations.

The Alaska Republican, chairman of the Senate defense appropriations subcommittee, said he intends "to make an attempt to substantially reduce the cost of operations in Europe this year."

Can Egypt,Israel really make peace work?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Israel's final retreat from Sinai on Sunday should be proof that peace is not an impossible dream in the Middle East. But the return of the land to Egypt is getting scant attention in the Arab world or elsewhere.

Instead the focus is on Lebanon, where Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization may come to blows again. Former President Jimmy Carter is clamoring for more forceful U.S. diplomacy, and Israel is winning little praise for yielding the Sinai buffer and taking military risks in the interest of peace.

What should be a first step toward an overall settlement, reducing the danger of another Middle East war, is to most of the world a trivial event. Jordan, Saudi Arabia and the rest of the Arab states are maintaining their boycott of peace talks with Israel despite the surrender of Sinai.

Most Arab governments remain suspicious of Egypt, although less of President Hosni Mubarak, who is moving rapidly to mend relations, than they were of his slain predecessor, Anwar Sadat. The pressure is building on President Reagan to put heat on Israel to relax its control over the West Bank of the Jordan River and Gaza and give ground in the stalemated negotiations over Palestinian autonomy.

The three Camp David partners, Israel, Egypt and the United States, by all odds should be taking bows for making peace work. Instead, after Sunday, all three will face new demands — Israel to clear the way for a Palestinian state, Egypt to rejoin Arab ranks, and the United States to abandon the Camp David formula for another approach.

And yet, Israel and Egypt seem determined to defy the skeptics and strengthen their economic, cultural and diplomatic ties. This week, their ambassadors, Moshe Arens of Israel and Ashraf Ghorbal of Egypt, talked optimistically in interviews here of the two countries eventually drawing as close as the United States and Canada.

"We would love to see that," Ghorbal declared. He said Egypt stands ready to be "the broker of peace" between Israel and the other Arab states.

For his part, Arens declared "the door is wide open" to cooperation with Egypt in all fields.

Unfortunately, their optimism is not widely shared.

Carter, who presided over the hectic 13 days at Camp David in 1978, says the Reagan administration's failure to take a more active role in the Middle East has jeopardized chances for a wider peace.

"There's a tension and an absence of trust and good will that existed when (Israeli Prime Minister Menachem) Begin and Sadat and I were embracing each other and clasping hands," he told Atlanta newspapers last weekend. "That time is gone — maybe not permanently."

Other critics say Reagan should have appointed a personal representative to take charge of flagging negotiations over Palestinian autonomy.

Widows want to stop IRA funds

Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — Georgina Gordon waved from the living room window as her husband and two children started the drive to school in Londonderry, Northern Ireland.

"They got to the front of the window when the car exploded," she said, recalling the incident that occurred four years ago. "It was blown apart."

Her husband and 11-year-old daughter died in their seats. Her 8-year-old son had been ejected and was lying critically injured in the street.

"His eyes were in his cheeks, his hair was burnt back. He looked half dead," said Mrs. Gordon.

Her story is not new. Nor is it out of the ordinary. Religious strife has plagued Northern Ireland for centuries, accompanied by bloodshed on behalf of both the Protestants and Catholics.

Gordon's husband was a social worker and part-time policeman in the province's British local militia. She and two other widows, whose husbands also worked as British security officers, are touring this country to build public support for the police forces and an end to the killings in Northern Ireland.

"Because they wore a uniform, they were a target," said Sylvia Deacon, one of the five founding members of Widow's Mite.

The Londonderry-based Widows' Mite claims to be a non-political and nonsectarian group dedicated to unity in Northern Ireland.

The group said it opposes all terrorism, whether the violence is initiated by British loyalists or supporters of the Irish Republican Army, an almost exclusively Catholic movement to end British rule and Protestant domination.

Yet the widows' husbands allegedly were killed by members of the IRA, and the IRA is the focus of the group's attack. They do not talk of reported atrocities by police officers or terrorists who act on behalf of the British.

The women said they want to convince Americans to stop sending money to the IRA. Their interviews in this area were set up by the British consulate here.

"We are here to dry out their funds because we believe then we can dry out the terrorists," said Bill McMurdo, a Scottish management consultant who is acting as the group's spokesman.

McMurdo was referring to NORAID, the Northern Ireland Aid Committee. NORAID contends it raises funds in the United States for victims of violence and families of political prisoners in Northern Ireland.

Britain has long charged that most of the money is used to buy sophisticated weaponry and explosives for the IRA.

Although there are scores of political and social reasons behind the fighting, the appeal by women of Widows' Mite is emotional.

Their pleas are punctuated with gruesome descriptions of death — reminders that they are living victims of a seemingly endless conflict.

Ms. Gordon's son survived the bomb blast, although it cost him the sight of one eye, damaged his hearing and necessitated plastic surgery. She said her other daughter, who was three when she witnessed the explosion, had nightmares in the following years. Gordon suffered a nervous breakdown.

Deacon's husband was a full-time sergeant in the Ulster Defense Regiment when he left his wife and four children at home one night in 1973. Deacon said IRA members kidnapped him at a bar and then held him for two days while he was tortured and interrogated.

"His body was found on the roadside," she said. "He was hooded and his hands and feet were tied. He had been shot six times. He was shot in the groin. The last place the muzzle was placed was in his right ear and then they pulled the trigger."

Marlene Wilson's brother and husband both were members of the Royal Ulster Constabulary, Northern Ireland's police force. Her brother was in a patrol vehicle in March 1972 when machine guns opened fire from behind hedges.

The Newspaper BIBLE

IT'S EITHER/OR; NOT BOTH/AND

What I am saying is that those who offer food to these idols are united together in sacrificing to demons, certainly not to God. And I don't want any of you to be partners with demons when you eat the same food, along with the heathen, that has been offered to these idols. You cannot drink from the cup at the Lord's Table and at Satan's table, too. You cannot eat bread both at the Lord's Table and at Satan's table. (I Corinthians 10:20-21)

Don't be teamed with those who do not love the Lord, for what do the people of God have in common with the people of sin? How can light live with darkness? And what harmony can there be between Christ and the devil? How can a Christian be a partner with one who doesn't believe? And what union can there be between God's temple and idols? For you are God's temple, the home of the living God, and God has said to you, "I will live in them and walk among them, and I will be their God and they shall be my people." That is why the Lord has said, "Leave them; separate yourselves from them; don't touch their filthy things, and I will welcome you, and be a Father to you, and you will be my sons and daughters. (II Corinthians 6:14-18)

And if you are not faithful with other people's money, why should you be entrusted with money of your own?

For neither you nor anyone else can serve two masters. You will hate one and show loyalty to the other, or else the other way around--you will be enthusiastic about one and despise the other. You cannot serve both God and money." (Luke 16:12-13)

Falling grant trend continues

Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON — Federal grants to the states in the last year of the Carter administration registered their smallest increase in 20 years, rising just 3.6 percent to $94.8 billion and will show a dramatic drop in the first year of President Reagan's term, administration officials reported Wednesday.

White House aides said that if Reagan's budget proposals are accepted, total federal aid will drop by 4 percent in fiscal 1982 and by another 10 percent in fiscal 1983.

The federal government is now in the midst of the 1982 fiscal year that will end on Sept. 30, 1982, and discussions are now underway between the White House and Congress on the shape of the 1983 budget.

The nation's governors who had agreed to Reagan's cuts in funds for 1982 are lobbying hard against additional cutbacks in fiscal 1983.

The statistics disclosed Wednesday are the latest available. They show that the Carter administration had begun a downward trend in federal contributions to the states for often federally sponsored programs which are run by states.

A $3 billion increase in Medicaid payments during the 1981 fiscal year — the last Carter budget — accounted for the lion's share of the modest increase in federal aid.

But grants for general government purposes decreased for the first time in two decades, from $57 billion to $54.9 billion.

Democrats told they may regain power

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrats stand a chance of tilting the balance of power back in their favor in this year's elections but they should go easy in trying to pin the nation's economic ills on Republicans, a Democratic pollster says.

Peter Hart told 100 Democratic candidates arriving here Wednesday night for a three-day issues seminar and pep talk that American voters are not likely to display outright hostility to the GOP as they have in some past mid-term elections when a Republican was in the White House.

"Huge chunks of the electorate are trying to tell Ronald Reagan and Congress to undo some of the things" that occurred last year, he said.

"But it's not sufficient for Democrats to say we're not Republicans because most people still hold Democrats primarily responsible for our economic decline," he added.

Sobering advice also was offered by Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., who said Democrats can bounce back in 1982 only if they capitalize on GOP weaknesses by offering well-reasoned alternatives that keep alive Democratic ideals.

For example, he said, simply attacking Reagan's plans for increased defense spending will not be enough.

"We need to spend more money to modernize the military," he said. "But not the way President Reagan is. He's throwing money at military problems."

Bernard Aronson, policy director of the Democratic National Committee, scoffed at analysts who say Democrats are no longer the majority party. He predicted that Reagan's 1980 landslide will be "the shortest lived political realignment in history."

Republicans "may have all the money, but, by God, we have all the heart and talent," exulted Lynn Cutler, the committee's vice chairman.

"Every time you turn around the Republicans have dropped another issue in our laps," crowed Sen. Wendell Ford of Kentucky.

But Peter Hart, reflecting on recent polls showing that the nation's confidence in Reaganomics is slipping, would say only that 1982 will be "a good Democratic year, not a banner Democratic year."

The most recent Associated Press-NBC poll showed 15 percent of those questioned said they have more confidence in Reagan's program than a year ago and 34 percent said they have less confidence.

Peter Hart predicted that Democrats will benefit from the perception that Reagan is not committed to help the elderly and protect the social security system.

"The American public has written Ronald Reagan off on that issue no matter what he says about it," he said.

The Democratic conference is taking place at one of this city's more modest hotels, a few minutes drive from Capitol Hill. The agenda includes discussions on such major issues as the economy, defense and nuclear arms control. The candidates also are being offered a one-hour class titled "On Camera TV Techniques."

Now's time to summerize winter-weary car

WASHINGTON (AP) — The summer travel season is approaching, and now's the time to get that winter-weary car ready.

With the passing of winter's cold, many cars can use an annual tune up, and if you have many potholes or other rough roads, it probably could use a wheel alignment, too.

While some people can do this work themselves, most need to find a mechanic or service center.

When you've chosen a firm, check with the local Better Business Bureau to see there have been any complaints about it.

If possible, get the estimate for the work in writing. And leave your phone number and instructions to call for permission if work is necessary that will exceed the estimate by more than $10 or so.

There are also car care jobs you can do yourself. Remembering to do simple things can help avoid car trouble later on.

Keeping track of your tire pressure is important, as is checking the oil at least every other time you fill the gas tank.

Many people overlook checking the automatic transmission fluid from time to time. This must be done when the car is hot. If the fluid level is below the full mark on the dipstick, add fluid — not motor oil. This should be checked again after about 50 miles of driving. If it is low again, a mechanic should check the car.

For explanations of many home car maintenance procedures the government has a pamphlet called "Car Care and Service." It sells for $1.75 and can be ordered from the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 104K, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

5-5A to run finals tonight

The District 5-5A track meet got underway at Memorial Stadium at noon today with field event finals, but the majority of the points will come at 7 p.m. when the running finals are slated to start.

All field event finals were expected to be completed by early afternoon, with a 1:30 starting time the latest start. Running preliminaries were to start at 1:30 p.m. with the top qualifiers moving to tonight's finals.

The 3200 meter finals will kickoff tonight's action at 7 p.m., but there will be a delay between that event and the 8 p.m. start of the 400 meter relay. The meet is scheduled to end with the running of 1600 meter relay at 9:45 p.m.

The 5-5A meet this year has added a junior varsity division and the JV's will run first in each event.

This is the most important meet of the year for the district runners since the top two winners in each event earn a berth for next week's Region I meet in Lubbock on the Texas Tech oval.

Cincy halts Atlanta's streak, 2-1

Braves assume role of hunter

By ED SHEARER
AP Sports Writer

ATLANTA — It's a one-day jump from the hunted to the hunter for the Atlanta Braves now that their record-setting 13-game winning streak has ended.

"It's interesting that we have a chance to start being a spoiler now," Manager Joe Torre said Thursday night after the Cincinnati Reds handed the Braves their first setback of the 1982 season, 2-1 behind the strong 6-hit pitching of Bruce Berenyi, 3-1, and Tom Hume.

"We've got a team with eight straight victories coming in now," Torre said, alluding to the start of a 3-game series tonight with the red-hot San Diego Padres, 3½ games off Atlanta's pace in the National League West race.

The Reds-Braves clash was the only game in the NL Thursday night.

ATLANTA HAD A number of chances to keep the streak alive against the struggling Reds, who snapped a 3-game losing string. The Braves stranded 10 base runners, including five in the final three innings.

Berenyi scattered five hits before leaving with one down and the bases loaded in the seventh. Hume, who claimed his third save, retired the first two batters he faced to quell that threat and also got out of a jam in the eight when Bob Horner walked and reached second on a passed ball.

Berenyi, who also singled home the winning run in the fifth, said he was pleased to end Atlanta's streak, but Hume said the streak wasn't on his mind.

"My first thought was we won and we did need a big victory," Hume said. "I felt no different because it stopped a record. I just hope it gets us on a roll."

"Anybody in that situation wanted to be the one that ended it," said Berenyi, who called his game-winning single "pretty lucky."

THE REDS got their first run off Bob Walk, 2-1, on consecutive singles by Larry Biitner, Paul Householder and Wayne Krenchicki and Berenyi came through with his hit to left field one out later.

Torre said the Braves were quiet when they first arrived in the dressing room.

"I told them I was proud of them," he said.

"We had plenty of opportunities to win," said first baseman Chris Chambliss. "There was no pressure at all. Everybody was relaxed.

"We told everybody what we were trying to do was win the pennant, not break any records. We didn't expect to go 162-0."

THE BRAVES got their only run in the second without a hit. Dale Murphy and Chambliss each drew walks and advanced on a wild pitch, with Murphy finally scoring on Bruce Benedict's infield grounder.

Relief ace Gene Garber said he felt no relief that the streak had finally ended.

"It's never a relief to lose a game," he said. "I'm sorry to see it end. We fought right to the end. We didn't give up at all."

Pack girls hold down 2nd

After first round of regional golf

LUBBOCK — After the first round of the Region 1 Girls Golf Championship the Midland High golf team holds down second place behind Westwood High. Westswood holds a 36 stroke lead over the Lady Bulldogs with the final round round scheduled for today.

With third place, Bryan High, only three strokes behind Midland, coach Mary Baird is more concerned about holding on to second place, and a trip to Austin for the state finals, than winning the regional title.

Referring to Westwood's lead Baird said, "It would be tough to make up that many strokes. Frankly I'm more concerned with staying in second place."

Baird said that the weather was cold and miserable on the par 71 Meadowbrooke course.

Kelle Mobley shot an 84 to lead the MHS team, a score that put her in second place behind Samie Browne (81) of Temple for Medalist Honors.

Also in contention for medalist is Lady Bulldog and District 5-5A Medalist, Janice Littlefield, who shot an 86 to tie with three golfers in third place.

"Although Janice and Kelle played well, as a team we didn't play as well as we wanted to," Baird said.

Karen Wagner, competing in her first tournament for MHS, shot a 109. Shelle Parker came in with a 111 and Karen Cox soared to a 136, rounding out the scoring for the Lady Bulldogs. Only the four best rounds from each team count in the scoring.

Midland Lee finished the initial round of play tied with Amarillo High for fifth place with a 426 total. Coronado High, of El Paso, is in forth with a 407 team total.

Leila Lockhart, who shot a 98, was the only Rebel to finish the course under the century mark. Gayla Strickland finished with a 101 and sophomore Lesa Burnett shot a 111. Joni Fry had a 116 and Staci Childers carted a 127 for the Rebel team.

Caldwell grounds Jays, 7-0

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Mike Caldwell had the drop on the Toronto Blue Jays.

"I tried mainly to keep the ball down and not throw too hard," said the Milwaukee Brewers' left-hander after feeding the Blue Jays a steady diet of sinker pitches Thursday night.

As a result, the Blue Jays continually beat the ball into the dirt and hit into 15 groundouts and Caldwell wound up with a four-hitter and a 7-0 victory.

"Sometimes a sinker-ball pitcher will overthrow," Caldwell explained. "The ball won't get to the plate any faster, but you don't get good movement. What it amounts to is the ball stays high and you make a bad pitch.

"I watch Tommy John of the (New York) Yankees whenever he pitches against us or he's on TV. We're both left-handed sinker-ball pitchers, and I study his mechanics and how he pitches to certain hitters. What I learn from watching Tommy is that I don't have to throw hard as long as I keep it low."

While Caldwell was keeping the ball down, Milwaukee teammates Ben Oglivie and Cecil Cooper were getting it up, into the seats at Milwaukee's County Stadium. Oglivie belted a two-run homer and Cooper lined a bases-empty shot.

The complete game, incidentally, was Caldwell's first since last June 8 and his first shutout since Sept. 13, 1980.

"This was the Mike Caldwell we need," Milwaukee Manager Buck Rodgers said. "He pitched super. If our starting pitchers give us a chance to get a lead and put pressure on the opposition, we're in business."

Tigers 3, Yankees 1

Chet Lemon hit a two-run homer and Jack Morris scattered six hits to lead Detroit over New York. The triumph was the Tigers' sixth straight.

Lemon smashed his first homer of the season, off Tommy John, 0-3, after Lou Whitaker opened the third inning with a bunt which Yankee third baseman Graig Nettles bobbled for an error.

That erased New York's 1-0 lead on a run in the first inning when Dave Collins tripled and scored on a single by Jerry Mumphrey.

Morris, 3-1, walked only one and struck out four.

"He threw me the same pitch he struck me out on, " said Lemon, who went down swinging in the first inning. "It was a fastball down and in. He surprised me the first time because he very seldom comes in on you. He got Here's a stumper: Who is Lawrence Hooper?

If Lawrence Hooper went on a quiz show and challenged the contestants to guess his occupation, the panel would hardly feel stumped.

Hooper is young, black, 6-feet, 6-inches tall, powerfully built, an admitted athlete with a wing span of 90 inches, and the general questioning would seem to be simple:

"Is there a ball connected with what you do?"

"Well, kind of."

"Do you score points for a living?"

"Yes, hopefully."

"Do you do it outdoors in sunlight or under lights?"

"Yes."

"Do you have a nickname like 'Butch,' or 'Clutch,' or 'Magic'?" "Well, yeah, in high school they used to call me 'Birdman.' Now, they call me 'Chip.'"

OKAY. CASE closed. He's the wide receiver for the Pittsburgh Steelers, right? Wrong. Okay, he's the No. 1 draft choice of the Dallas Cowboys, an All-Arkansas fullback, right? No, not right. Well, then, he's the new left-fielder for the New York Mets? Nope. Well, is he the WBA light-heavyweight champion? No, he weighs 210. Okay, he's a 20-rebounds-a-night point guard for the Nets? The Bucks? No, he doesn't particularly like basketball.

Give up? Well, he's one of the best 20 tennis players in the world. He plays the sport where you'll never get a black eye or a busted knee, and you get to keep all your teeth and ears, and the worse thing that might happen to you is your right elbow might swell. Lawrence plays the sport of royalty, not of teamsters. To the seeds, he is Lawrence Barrett Hooper III, son of a physician, and he is known in parts of the world where Willie Mays would draw a blank.

ONE OF the mysteries of tennis is not that a Chip Hooper is in it, it's why there aren't hundreds of Chip Hoopers. To be sure, the game is not your every day street game. But neither is it polo. It requires no more space than basketball, no more equipment than baseball, and less of either than football.

It is a game which relies on speed, quickness, reflexive agility, strength and stamina. It may be the most grueling physical sport there is next to boxing, although the introduction of the tie-breaker may have made it less so. It would seem to the practiced eye that anyone who can play baseball, run track, or throw a jab can play tennis. How it has remained a sport of Philadelphia Main Liners, European dukes and earls, and the descendants of people who used to own railroads beggars explanation.

Chip Hooper doesn't even recall exactly what threw him into the game. Someone, he vaguely recalls, gave him "an orange and white" nylon tennis racquet when he was a grade schooler. At the time, he thought he was going to become a more traditional long-jumper or triple-jumper. But a condition he identifies as "Osgood Slaughter's Disease," a malfunction of the growth of the bones in the joints, put him on the tennis courts. "Other kids were playing cowboys-and-Indians. I was playing tennis," he recalls.

RAISED in Sunnyvale, Calif., Dr. Hooper's son had little difficulty finding competition but, when he enrolled at Memphis State, he found the level of play self-defeating. You can't perfect tennis wiles playing against a backboard – or people who play like one. Chip transferred to the University of Arkansas where he shortly became All-American.

But, if you think of the worst things a tennist can have — flat feet, arthritic elbow, sore back — and multiply if by two, you come up with Hooper's burden, a condition of the eyes known as "pteryglum." It's easily treated. All you have to do is stay out of the wind and sun and dust. I mean, librarians wouldn't even know if they had it. But Chip Hooper knew he had it. He made his living in the worst conditions for it. He required two operations to remove the film cast over his eye.

Off the court for 18 weeks, Hooper returned to a base line as the 235th-ranked player in the world. But, when he knocked off Peter Fleming and Roscoe Tanner (ranked No. 17 in the world) tennis sat up the realization that Hooper was suddenly No. 18 in the world, an incredible jump of 217 places overnight.

Chip takes his game and new ranking into the $200,000 Pacific Southwest Open at the Los Angeles Tennis Club this week. There, he'll get a shot at his peers: Jimmy Conners (No. 3 in the world), Johann Kreak (No. 10), Roscoe Tanner, and Brian Teacher (No. 13). If he beats them, no panel will ever again mistake him for a tight end or offensive rebounder. In fact, the panel will need masks.

Cubs, Diablos to try again with two tonight

After a second rainout Thursday night, the Midland Cubs and El Paso Diablos will endeavor to salvage what's left of a five-game series with a doubleheader at 6 p.m. tonight in Cubs Stadium.

The teams stand at 1-1 for games thus far, Midland winning the opener 7-1 while El Paso rebounded to win the Tuesday game, 7-2.

Following tonight's action, Midland launches a 10-game road trip in Amarillo while El Paso, after 15 days on the road, heads home for its Dudley Field opener against San Antonio Saturday night.

Frank Williams and Mike Brecht combined for a five-hitter and teammates Greg Baker and Sean Toerner drove in three runs each to lead the Shreveport Captains to a 9-1 win over Tulsa in Texas League baseball action Thursday.

In another game, the Arkansas Travelers and the Jackson Mets split a doubleheader. The Mets won the first game, 5-2, and the Travelers got the nightcap, 4-2.

The Captains managed a five-run sixth inning that was highlighted by Baker's three-run. Williams, now 2-1, allowed just four hits in seven innings.

Brecht struck out four in two innings of relief and gave up just one hit.

Three of the Travelers' runs in the second game came in the third inning on a single, a throwing error and a fielder's choice.

Larry Reynolds scored on Jack Ayer's long double to right centerfield in the seventh.

NBA mini series resume

Suns in must-win fray

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

The Phoenix Suns were embarrassed and frustrated. They'll have to do something about that right away or they'll also be on vacation.

The Suns were blasted 129-113 by the Nuggets in Denver in the first game of their best-of-three National Basketball Association playoff mini-series. Phoenix must win at home tonight to force a third game Saturday night at Denver.

"We played an excellent first half and found ourselves still down by three," said Suns center Alvan Adams. "That was frustrating right there."

Even worse for Phoenix, it was outscored by 19 points in the third period as the Nuggets, the NBA's highest scoring team, shot 73 percent from the field in those 12 minutes.

"It was embarrassing," noted Suns guard Walter Davis. "Everyone thought it would be a lot closer game. They didn't do anything differently except play maybe a little better defense. We weren't aggressive at all.

"We can't wait for them to make mistakes. We have to force them and go hard for the whole 48 minutes. If we don't, it's an early vacation for all of us."

The New Jersey Nets, Houston Rockets and Atlanta Hawks also face playoff elimination tonight. New Jersey was routed 96-83 at home by Washington in Game 1 and must win on the Bullets' court to stay alive. The Rockets, NBA finalists last season, dropped a 102-87 decision to the Sonics in Seattle in the opener of their matchup, while the Hawks were belted 111-76 by the 76ers in Philadelphia.

If the first-game losers in those series manage victories tonight, they will force decisive third games on Sunday at the sites of the openers.

Washington bullied the Nets under the boards in the opener, something Nets Coach Larry Brown says must change.

"Their size is certainly a factor," said Brown, mentioning 6-foot-11 rookie Jeff Ruland, who had 18 points and 20 rebounds in Game 1, and 6-10 Rick Mahorn (16 points, six rebounds, four blocked shots). They hurt us off the boards. But we played right into their hands. We didn't move their defense. We shot too much from the outside, putting them in rebounding position."

The Nets also did not hit enough from outside, making just 36 percent of their field-goal attempts. Ray Williams, the top Nets' scorer, hit only 4-for-19 for 11 points.

Houston's Moses Malone was held to 20 points and 12 rebounds, a major fac-

GOLF

AUSTIN, Texas — Heavy rains at the Onion Creek Golf Club forced cancellation of the first round of the 72-hole, $450,000 Liberty Mutual Legends of Golf Tournament.

HOCKEY

NEW YORK — The New York Rangers of the National Hockey announced that they had decided to keep Madison Square Garden as their home, and not to exercise an option to play home games at the Meadowlands Arena in New Jersey.

BOWLING

AKRON, Ohio — Steve Cook won six out of eight matches and took a 163-pin lead over Joe Hutchinson after four rounds of bowling's richest event, the $200,000 Firestone Tournament of Champions. Cook, the defending champion, has a 7,329 total.

Rain stymies Legends play

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The law of averages finally caught up with the $450,000 Liberty Mutual Legends of Golf Tournament, but officials were hopeful they could squeeze in the first round today over water-logged Onion Creek Golf Club.

For the first time in the five-year history of the tournament, rain forced a Thursday cancellation of 18 holes.

"This has never happened to us before," said tournament chairman Bill Bass. "We'll just go to a 54-hole format. You can't expect these guys to play 36 holes in one day."

Golfing greats 50 years and over are eligible to play in the unique best-ball tournament with a first-place prize of $100,000.

Bob Rosburg, still nursing an abcessed tooth, and partner Gene Littler are defending champions. They won $35,000 each last year.

Twenty-four teams have been entered into this year's event which will be nationally televised by NBC Saturday and Sunday.

Some 19,000 fans jammed the course Wednesday to witness the pro-am.

"It was the biggest Wednesday sale we have ever had and we had a big advance," said Bass. "Hopefully this cancellation won't hurt us too bad. Saturday and Sunday are our big days — particularly Sunday."

Some of the players who were nursing slight aches and pains were glad for the delay.

Julius Boros is overcoming open heart surgery and has lost 20 pounds.

Coach abuses football officials

Athens gets year penalty

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Referee Choice Humphries remembers Athens coach Bob Davis before the Rockwall game as being as cordial as any man he had ever met.

"Then we kicked off and I became the enemy," says Humphries.

Humphries told the University Interscholastic League that Davis and his players cursed game officials and accused them of cheating in Athens' 35-14 loss to Rockwall, and police failed to protect them after the game.

"People, I was scared," Humphries said Thursday.

The UIL state executive committee responded by placing Athens on one-year probation in football with the understanding that Athens would tighten security at football games.

Despite probation, Athens can play for district and state titles next year.

"We're just telling them they had better not do something of this nature again," said UIL executive director Bailey Marshall.

Humphries, a Tyler teacher, said Davis charged onto the field at halftime of the Sept. 21 Class 4A pre-district game, pointed a finger in his face and cursed him.

Davis admitted calling Humphries "gutless," but denied he cursed the officials.

After the game, Humphries said Davis "continued to make insulting remarks" and told him "to take the game ball home with me."

"I did, and I'm sorry for it," said Davis. "I told to keep it, I thought he had earned it. Those were my exact remarks."

Davis said 292 yards in penalties were called in the Rockwall game, including 182 yards against Athens.

"We were at fault in the Rockwall game, and I take full blame," said Davis.

In a separate complaint, official Dan Carroll of Mesquite said after the Ennis-Athens junior varsity game, Davis threw the lock to the officials' dressing area across the room and said, "You're the sorriest excuse for men I've ever met."

Carroll said 75 fans waited outside, and the officials "had to take vulgar abuse" on the way to their cars. "I am not overstating the fact, the coach put each of us and our safety in jeopardy," Carroll said in a written statement.

"I was mad," Davis recalled, "and I said, 'I don't know how you men can go look at yourselves in the mirror after that call."

The call was an inadvertent official's whistle that Davis said erased a fourth-down Ennis loss with less than a minute to play and Athens leading 14-7. Ennis got the play over and threw a 50-yard touchdown to win 15-14 for the JV district title.

"I'm at a complete loss as to what we did at the Ennis junior varsity football game" to get a complaint, Davis said.

Sam Fowler, assistant superintendent at Athens, said the school would strengthen its security at football games. "We'll meet you at your car ... you just let us know what you want us to do," he said.

Old golfers just keep hooking away

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

Old golfers never die. They just fade away. Hook away. Blast away. And keep those birdies singing.

Indeed, they must be the most imperishible of all our sports heroes.

The game's "Golden Oldies" feed it up again today in their annual showpiece, the Legends of Golf, over the picturesque Onion Creek Golf Club in Austin, Texas.

Arnold Palmer, 52, is there, superbly tanned and fit, sure to be taking that familiar hitch at his trousers, jerking on his glove and striding the fairway in quick, resolute steps as if going to settle an old feud.

There's Sam Snead, "Slammin' Sammy," as the cliche slingers have called him for four decades, with a swing that should be preserved in jars like sweet honey although he celebrates his 70th birthday next month.

HANG AROUND and you can get a look at two others whose styles are so smooth and relaxed you expect them to take a snooze at the top of the backswing, namely Julius Boros and Gentle Bill Casper, each a two-time winner of the U.S. Open.

Boros, 62, is coming off recent double bypass heart surgery. Casper, 50 last June, is making his Legends debut, as is Gay Brewer, 1967 Masters winner.

The roll call of golfing greats is impressive ... Miller Barber, who won renown as "Mr. X" ... Art Wall, 58, Mayters champ, who has scored more than 20 holes-in-one ... the 63-year-old Tommy Bolt, once the terrible tempered Mr. Bang ... Argentina's Roberto DeVicenzo, with more than 150 international victories ... Gene Littler, the game Californian who overcame a 1972 operation for cancer of the lymph glands to return to the tour and win five tournaments ... and the others.

They never lose their lustre.

NO OTHER sport, except possibly baseball, is so deeply steeped in tradition. Names such as Old Tom Morris, Harry Vardon, Francis Ouimet, Walter Hagen and Bob Jones are still revered.

At the Masters, people flock to watch Gene Sarazen, 80 and beknickered, strike the first ball and play the starter's round hardly breaking step. Arnie's Army is always on the march.

There is no career-extending vehicle for old football players. In baseball, the legends come out a few times a year in uniforms that are too tight and make a mockery of their old skills in Old Timers Games. Proud Joe DiMaggio refuses to don pinstripes for those charades. Aging tennis players, the Don Budges and Pancho Gonzalezes, gave a veterans' tour a fling but it hasn't proved a total aesthetic and financial success.

Only the golfers have found that there can be life after 50.

Golf is not a a fiercely athletic or contact sport. So golfers tend to persevere longer than other athletes. Sarazen and Snead are prime examples. It's also a game that appeals to an older segment of society — corporate types who spend weekends playing $2 and $20 Nassaus with club cronies.

BUT THE revived spectator appeal can be traced directly to the dream of a New York TV producer, Fred Raphael, who 15 years ago had been successful with a globe-girdling taped show called Shell's Wonderful World of Golf. He sold the idea of a veterans' tournament to NBC.

The first Legends, a better ball team event, was staged in 1978 at its present site. There was disappointment when Ben Hogan declined to play. Sam Snead and a Hogan look-alike, Gardner Dickinson, won the inaugural event, 17 under par.

The tournament lacked a sponsor for the first two years. Interest was lukewarm. Then came the spectacular marathon playoff in 1979 which lapped over into prime time TV.

WHAT ENUSUED was pure drama.

The two teams began belting each other with spectacular birdies — five of them in six holes. Playing brilliantly, they were sinking 20 and 30-foot putts to stay alive. DeVicenzo finally clinched it with a 10-foot birdie, his fourth straight, on the sixth extra hole.

Liberty Mutual immediately signed a five-year contract as sponsor. NBC was quick to extend its contract to televise the closing rounds Saturday and Sunday (3-5 p.m.)

Rangers, Bruins, Blues hang on in NHL

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

The New York Rangers, Boston Bruins and St. Louis Blues are hanging on by their skate blades. The Vancouver Canucks, meanwhile, are just hanging around, waiting to see whether they play the Blues or the Chicago Black Hawks in the semifinals of the National Hockey League's Stanley Cup playoffs.

On Wednesday night the Canucks became the first team to reach the final four when they knocked off the Los Angeles Kings 5-2 in the fifth game of the best-of-seven Smythe Division finals.

Vancouver had never even won a playoff series before this, its 12th season in the NHL. They made it past the first round by dousing the Calgary Flames before knocking off the Kings.

The Blues stayed alive in the Norris Division finals with a 3-2 overtime victory over the Black Hawks. Like St. Louis, the Rangers and Bruins are down 3-2 in their divisions and one loss away from elimination.

The Rangers, on spectacular goaltending by Eddie Mio and a pair of goals by Don Maloney, beat the New York Islanders, the defending NHL champions, 4-2 in the Patrick Division finals. And the Bruins, who once led the best-of-seven Adams Division finals 4-2, dropped their third in a row to Quebec, the Nordiques winning 4-3 as Peter Stastny scored two goals and assisted on one by his brother, Marion.

THE THREE remaining divisional finals could be decided tonight in Chicago Stadium, New York's Madison Square Garden and the Colisee de Quebec. Any series tied 3-3 in games after that will be decided Sunday night.

The Black Hawks don't want to end up the way the Kings did. Los Angeles started the playoffs with an upset, knocking off Wayne Gretzky and the Edmonton Oilers in the first round, only to come out flat and fall to the Canucks.

Chicago started out equally impressively, shocking the Minnesota North Stars, who had made it to the Stanley Cup finals last year and had won the Norris Division with ease this season.

Mike Allison of the New York Rangers registers elation after a third period goal that beat Islanders, 4-2, in Stanley Cup playoff game.

"We just have to do it the hard way. We always do," said Chicago defenseman Bob Murray, suggesting the Black Hawks could have been far more aggressive in Wednesday night's game against the Blues.

THE KEY to St. Louis' victory over the Black Hawks, according to Blues center Bernie Federko, was tight checking — but it may not be as easy next time out.

"Chicago's got a smaller arena. It's tougher to play a close-checking game there than it is here," said General Manager-Coach Emile Francis.

Like the Kings and Black Hawks, the Nordiques started off the playoffs with a major upset, knocking off the arch-rival Montreal Canadiens.

"It took a little while to get over the Montreal series. It was a very emotional series, especially for the French players. In the first two games ... we were emotionally drained," said Quebec goalie John Garrett.

Since then, they've beaten Boston three in a row and have steadily worn down the Bruins.

"THEY'RE getting a little bit tired," Peter Stastny said of the Boston players. "They're not able to skate the way they did in the first two games."

Contrary to the Blues' skating advantage at home, Madison Square Garden has been a disadvantage to the Rangers. They've won only one of four playoff games there and have lost both against the Islanders, 4-3 and 5-3.

Davis admits he never opposed rule

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Al Davis has admitted that he never formally opposed the National Football League rule that is keeping him from moving the Oakland Raiders to Los Angeles.

However, the Raiders' managing general partner said under cross-examination Thursday in the retrial of an antitrust suit against the NFL that he "put the issue squarely in front of the (NFL) membership in other ways."

Davis testified that he had told the other club owners that he was in opposition to the rule that prohibited a team from moving without approval of three-fourths of the league's teams.

When he first joined the NFL, it took a unanimous vote for a club to move. That was changed to three-fourths by a vote of the owners in 1978.

Will draft really help tailenders?

By BOB OATES
The Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

The NFL's worst teams (New England and Baltimore) will draft first this year, as usual, and the first (San Francisco's 1981 champions) will be last.

How much will this help New England and hurt San Francisco?

Not much, probably. The evidence of many years suggests that the inverted aspect of the draft is overrated as a tool for recruiting winning personnel.

It helps, of course, on the first round. But subsequently, skill and luck are the determining factors.

Look at it this way: Suppose the 49ers assume that winning the Super Bowl has cost them the entire first round. And suppose they consider that in drafting last on that round they're actually drafting first on each subsequent round. From this point of view they can have the best draft in the league.

For the first round isn't decisive in building a winning team. What counts is the sum of the draft — the players acquired on all rounds.

The latest to prove the truth of this is, of course, San Francisco — which drafted half its Super Bowl secondary (Eric Wright and Carlton Williamson) on the second and third rounds a year ago — when they were the 40th and 65th players chosen, respectively.

In retrospect it is plain that Wright and Williamson were passed over by many teams that could have used defensive help.

This year two other things will have more to do with successful NFL recruiting than the inverted draft:

—Signing the right free agents.

Last spring Dallas was more successful in the free-agent market than in all 12 rounds of the draft, signing two starters (defensive backs Everson Walls and Michael Downs) after the draft was over.

—Evaluating small-college players correctly.

Small-college players and free agents will figure even more prominently on NFL rosters this year for a reason that is the same in both instances, namely, the college freshman redshirt rule of four years ago.

That rule took the heart out of the 1982 draft — keeping many fine prospects in college for a fifth year this fall. As one result, Ohio State incredibly has 42 seniors on its varsity football roster.

Often recommended, once tried, the freshman redshirt rule has been reinstated by the NCAA starting this season. What it means is that freshmen who don't play in varsity games can have four subsequent seasons of college football, or five college years in all.

It also means that for the pros four years hence, there will be another drought in the college crop.

The rule appears to be unquestionably helpful to immature college freshmen — taking game pressure off at the same time it allows them to practice with the varsity. And if it confuses the NFL, who in the NCAA cares?

Steve Carlton shows 0-4 record after two weeks

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The baseball season is less than two weeks old and Steve Carlton, one of only four three-time Cy Young Award winners, is winless with four defeats.

But manager Pat Corrales says he isn't worried.

It's the worst start in the 17-year career of one of baseball's outstanding pitchers. Last year he had 11 starts before he lost his first game and went on to lose only three more during the strike-ridden season.

The 37-year-old Carlton doesn't talk to the press, so Corrales and pitching coach Claude Osteen were asked about his pitching.

"There is nothing wrong with Carlton," Corrales said Thursday. "If we catch the ball behind him, he ought to be 2-2. Unfortunately we didn't and he's 0-4."

"When we start playing like we're capable, Lefty will win," observed Corrales, whose Phillies are 3-9.

Corrales said he and Carlton have talked about the slump.

"But what can I tell him? He sees the same things I see. He knows there is no sense criticizing (teammates). It won't help," Corrales said.

The manager insisted there is nothing wrong with Carlton's arm.

"When we get a little momentum behind him he'll be all right. As far as I'm concerned he's pitched like he's supposed to pitch."

Osteen also contends there is nothing wrong with the arm of the pitcher who holds the modern National League record of six one-hitters and has won 262 major league games.

"He's throwing the ball all right," said Osteen.

"It doesn't matter who we run out there, the way we're playing we're going to lose. Still, if you watched the same games I watched, he should have won two of them," Osteen said. "I have all the confidence in the world he can turn things around if the team turns around."

Carlton's statistics in four games over 23 2-3 innings are 29 hits, 21 runs (18 earned), 12 walks and 22 strikeouts. His earned run average is an uncharacteristic 6.75. The Phillies have made three errors behind him.

Mariners defeat Twins

ahead of me 1-2 and I was looking for a pitch away and he busted it in on me. The second time, I was just looking for the baseball."

Indians 4, Rangers 3

Joe Charboneau and Rick Manning each drove in two runs to power Cleveland over Texas.

Len Barker, 2-1, held Texas hitless until a single by rookie Mike Richardt in the fifth. The Indians' starter left after giving up two walks and a single in the seventh, and Dan Spillner came n to record his first save of the season.

Charboneau's sacrifice fly in the first inning got Cleveland's first run home. Then in the third, Charboneau doubled home another run and Manning tripled in two.

Frank Tanana, 1-2, was the loser.

Mariners 8, Twins 4

Jim Essian belted two hits and drove in two runs to highlight a seven-run third inning and Richie Zisk added a two-run double in the same frame as Seattle defeated Minnesota.

Mike Moore, 1-2, the nation's No.1 selection in last June's amateur free-agent draft, registered his first major league victory as he pitched 52-3 innings and gave up three runs.

The Twins jumped ahead 2-0 in the third on RBI singles by Gary Ward and Kent Hrbek, but in the Mariner half of the inning, Seattle sent 12 men to the plate as it turned five hits and four walks into seven runs.

Pete Redfern, 1-2, was the loser.

"It would have been nice to have had a shutout or a no-hitter, but I'll take it," Moore said about his first big league win. "I've been struggling with my pitches. But I had a talk with Lach (Seattle Mariner Manager Rene Lachemann) and he said to go throw fastballs and not to worry about being too fine."

Sports With a Living Room View

Lining up college skeds not that easy

By LARRY SIDDONS
AP Sports Writer

Kevin O'Malley has a better idea now of what professional sports teams go through in preparation for a player draft.

O'Malley is executive producer of college sports for CBS, which this fall butts heads for the first time with old-hand ABC in telecasting NCAA football games.

The two networks have a four-year contract worth a total of $263 million with the NCAA. With that kind of money involved, each company, of course, wanted the best possible schedule of games, and it was there that O'Malley was introduced to the fine art of the draft.

"You have to have your scouting done and know not only what you want, but also what the other guy needs," he said. "In the past, there was just one network, which could pretty well pick what it wanted, when it wanted it. Now with two networks, there had to be a draft-type system."

THE FIRST part of the networks' scheduling was done earlier this month via conference telephone calls. These covered the "special" games — four each for ABC and CBS, to be played at night, on weekdays or in the traditional Saturday afternoon slot.

"It means moving some games around, because we have the opportunity for weeknight prime time," O'Malley said. "The schools were very cooperative, but if they see where a change might affect their competitiveness, they won't go along.

"For example, we had one team in mind with a wishbone offense that we asked to move a certain game up to start the season. But the coach said he'd rather not do that, because it would give the opposition all of preseason training to prepare for the wishbone."

Picking the "specials" also meant considering what regular programming would be involved, O'Malley said.

"For instance, the early part of our fall schedule contains a lot of tennis from the U.S. Open," O'Malley said, "so we set one of our goals as a game on the Friday after Thanksgiving."

CBS got it in Oklahoma-Nebraska.

"AT THE same time," O'Malley continued, "we knew ABC would have baseball in the early fall, and we didn't want to ignore that part of the schedule."

So, as another "special," CBS persuaded Pittsburgh and North Carolina to break some commitments and agree to play in prime time Thursday night, Sept.9.

"We expect Pitt to be ranked No.1, and having them on a national telecast the week the national rankings come out is a real plus," he said.

Notre Dame and Southern California are coming off disappointing seasons, but they're still big drawing cards for TV football fans. So, CBS used a third "special" bid for their game Saturday, Nov.27. It also went for the Army-Navy game to cap its season Saturday, Dec.4.

"We got three of the first four games we wanted," O'Malley said. "We lost Texas-Arkansas."

That Southwest Conference showdown will be seen Dec.4 on ABC, where the other three "specials" are defending national champion Clemson against Georgia Labor Day night, Sept.6; Michigan-Notre Dame Saturday night, Sept.18, and Alabama-Auburn Saturday, Nov.27.

THE GEORGIA-Clemson and Michigan-Notre Dame games will be played at night in stadiums not normally equipped with lights. Portable lights will be installed, and that, according to broadcast industry sources, will cost ABC a total of $100,000 in lighting fees, in addition to the $1.5 million-a-game rights fees it already is paying.

The Michigan-Notre Dame game will, in fact, be the first night game ever played on the home field of the Fighting Irish, and it may never have been agreed to without a hastily arranged flight to Ann Arbor, Mich.

According to industry sources, Michigan Coach Bo Schembechler was afraid that the portable lights at South Bend, Ind., would be inadequate. So the president of the company that will handle the lighting flew to the Michigan campus to ease Schembechler's mind, the sources said. The coach finally gave in.

Daniel heads LPGA field

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — One of the largest LPGA fields ever, headed by defending champion Beth Daniel, is shooting for the $22,500 first prize in the $150,000 Orlando Ladies Golf Classic.

Among the 121 pros teeing off today were 57 of the top 60 money winners on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour. Daniel won the 54-hole event last year in a five-player sudden-death playoff.

Among the favorites are Nancy Lopez-Melton and former winners Daniel, Donna Horton White (1979) and Jane Blalock (1980).

CMSU faces sports cut back

WARRENSBURG, Mo. (AP) — A continued funding shortage prompted a recommendation that six of Central Missouri State University's intercollegiate teams be shifted to club status, Athletic Director Al Molde said at a news conference Thursday.

Molde recommended the change for the men's tennis, golf and wrestling teams and the women's tennis, field hockey and gymnastics teams. The men currently compete in the NCAA and the women's teams belong to the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women, said CMSU Sports Information Director Bill Turnage.

If approved, the school would have intercollegiate teams competing in football, basketball, volleyball, baseball, softball, track and field and cross country.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Doyle

Keep investment in money market

By BILL DOYLE

Q. We are a retired couple with a small income, plus Social Security. We have $16,000 in a money market mutual fund, which has been yielding about 12 percent. We have been advised to transfer the $16,000 into an "option income mutual fund," which yields 18 percent. What are your feelings about this?

A. Don't do it. If you transfer the $16,000 from a money market fund to mutual fund dealing in options, you'll move the money from a safe investment into one that might or might not work out.

The money market fund you named in your letter, like other money funds, has done well by producing a good yield and should continue to do so. The option income fund you named has been an investment bomb. The record book shows that, in the latest 12-month reporting period, people who invested in it lost money.

An option mutual fund invests in common stocks and then sells "call options" on the stocks it owns. A call option involves the sale of a contract, which gives the person who buys that contract the right to buy the stock named in the contract at a fixed price for a specified period of time.

The seller of the option collects a "premium" and really takes on no risk — other than that the market price of the stock involved will rise to the "striking price" named in the option and the stock will be "called away" and will have to be sold.

The buyer of the option takes on a risk, because the option will become worthless if the stock doesn't reach the striking price before the option expires.

So, selling "covered call options" against stocks already owned is really a conservative thing. And you might think that mutual funds practicing this method would be big winners. The unhappy facts are that most such funds have not produced good investment results.

I suspect you have been "advised" to switch your investment by a broker or some other salesperson who would collect a fat commission on the money you would move into that option income fund. My advice is to stay with the money fund, a "no-load" fund on which there is no commission charge.

Q. Why do the per share values of money market mutual funds remain constant, while the per share values of other mutual funds go up and down?

A. Money market mutual funds invest in "short-term money market instruments," such as U.S. Treasury bills and notes, federal agency obligations, repurchase agreements, certificates of deposit, bankers' acceptances and commercial paper, all of which are debt obligations due to mature within a short period of time.

Recently, the average maturity of securities of investment held by money market funds has been a bit more than 30 days. Unless there are defaults on some of those investments, the funds know they will get the money they have invested back when the securities mature.

Those investments are sort of like money in the bank. Money funds can, therefore, use accounting methods — all approved by the Securities and Exchange Commission — to keep their per share values constant at either $10 or $1.

Other mutual funds invest in stocks and bonds. And, as we all know, the market values of stocks and bonds can fluctuate. A mutual fund holding stocks or bonds can never be certain what price it will receive when it sells the stocks or bonds it holds.

So, a mutual fund holding stocks or bonds must adjust its per share value every day. It does that by adding up the market values of all the securities it holds, plus its cash and any other assets. From that number, it subtracts anything it owes — its liabilities. It then divides the resulting figure by the number of shares it has outstanding — owned by investors. That produces the fund's net asset value per share — the actual dollars and cents value behind each share on that day.

Financial advisors' jobs not among the easiest

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — There is never an off season for investment advisers, which is to say that during bad times as well as good they stand ready to tell you where to put your money.

There are several reasons for this, not the least of which is the need to earn commissions to finance food on the table, and, perhaps among the more successful ones, a Mercedes or two in the garage.

But these are difficult times for advisers, times of great perils, of extremes, of change. And if they figure it all out, which hasn't always been the case, you might say they will have earned their commissions.

Tough days because of the rare possibilities, the extremes of which may be summarized as (1) the collapse of the economy like a worn out star, or (2) the economy being catapulted to the economic stratosphere.

Thomas Gies, a University of Michigan economist, aptly described the situation in a speech this month. We are, he said, either on the brink of doom or on the threshhold of the greatest golden age ever known.

It's that tough to figure out, it seems, and the investment advisers will tell you, a tough way to make a living.

The adviser, however, cannot be indecisive; he must reach conclusions, even when they represent a break with his old habits and a break with the economic past, as for example, in forecasting disinflation.

What's so hard about that? Only that inflation has been with us now for 15 years or so, long enough for people to assume it was like the bachelor uncle, a family member, something to live with forever.

But inflation has dropped sharply in the past year. The producer price index has risen only 4.1 percent, and the consumer price index, to be released today, is up only 7 percent or so in the past 12 months.

That's disinflation, which you should be reminded is not deflation. The latter is when prices actually fall from earlier levels. In contrast, disinflation is a slowing of the rate at which prices rise.

Over the decade and a half of rising inflation, investment advisers put their customers into tangible investments they felt would inflate the most: gold, real estate, collectibles, commodities, raw land.

Suspicious of paper money in any form, people bought up anything that might become rare, comic books and fine art alike. In so doing they tipped the demand-supply scale which, in effect, made the sought-after items relatively rare indeed.

Now, expecting more price stability, advisers are almost uniformly reversing themselves, advising clients to get into financial assets: stocks and bonds and other liquid assets that do best in stable times.

That brings up the other side of the new thinking, which is to get out of collectibles. They earn no interest, advisers point out. Gold? The typical advice: A poor investment during disinflation and strength in the dollar.

But nobody really knows, do they? The advisers could be all wrong. In fact, there's a school of thinking that says the consensus is likely to be wrong and that if you're smart you'll bet against it.

Wildcatters honor Mitchell

By LESLIE HAINES
Energy-Business Writer

Houston oilman and developer George P. Mitchell, chairman and president of Mitchell Energy and Development Corporation, was honored by the Wildcat Committee Thursday night at the Midland Petroleum Club.

Mitchell and many of the officers of his company, both from Houston and Midland, attended the reception.

The son of Greek immigrants, Mitchell attended Texas A & M University. His latest project, a research and development center to be built at the Woodlands north of Houston, demonstrates his unique appreciation for higher education.

"We don't have in the Southwest anything that compares to Route 128 around Harvard and MIT, or the Stanford Research area, the silicon valley, or the Research Triangle in North Carolina, therefore we think this is the most appropriate place in the Southwest," to create such a research center, Mitchell said.

The Houston Area Research Center will be a 650-acre academic complex including Phase Two of the Texas Medical Center, facilities of the University of Houston, Rice University and A & M, as well as the new north campus of the University of Houston, pending approval by the Texas Legislature, he said.

The boards of regents of the three universities have already approved their participation in the project, to be financed partly by The Woodlands Development Corporation, another of Mitchell's companies.

"The Woodlands is a partial answer to the problem of how to better urbanize a city, better than they've done in Cincinnati, Cleveland, Washington or Detroit," for example, he said. "Houston deserves the attention, but it may take 20 years for this to really have a dynamic impact. It's a synergistic effect between the Texas Medical Center, the three universities, and the University of Houston north campus."

In spite of his real estate successes, which promise to be even better this year, 75 percent of Mitchell Energy and Development Corp. is devoted to oil and gas exploration and development.

"I've drilled 5,000 wells and 800 wildcats," in my career, Mitchell said.

"In oil and gas, we're in trouble now, but it will get better later. For at least a year it will be tough, but hopefully we can get some decontrol on gas."

Mitchell said the corporation cut its budget from last year's figure of $532 million to $409 million, "and we have since cut it to $365 million in the last two weeks. Seventy-five percent of this is for energy. We may have to cut it again," depending upon the price of oil.

While it's too early to tell how well Reaganomics will work, Mitchell said President Reagan must work to reach a compromise on the federal budget, and get the $100 billion deficit down.

"I think he and Tip O'Neill are playing poker. It's extremely important for all of us, here in Midland and elsewhere. He should cut back defense as a compromise, so he can get entitlement cuts. If we give it a year or two, it has a good chance of working."

Mitchell said he would favor an import tax on oil, but not on domestic oil, and that he's looking hopefully for some relief from Federal Energy Regulatory Commission rulings.

"All independents should be involved (with monitoring federal regulations)," he said. Mitchell is on the executive board of the Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association (TIPRO).

Lower rate in use

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Interior Department has begun accepting offshore oil leases at a reduced royalty rate, a spokesman said Thursday night.

Traditionally offshore elases have called for payment to the government of 16.67 percent of production revenues from any producing wells, but some have been signed at 12.5 percent, the usual onshore rate, said the spokesman, Harmon Kallman.

"Other rates by may be used in the future in conformity with a 1978 law requiring the department to experiment with various royalty rates to see what brings the most bids and revenu, Kallman said.

A few bids in the past have been accepted at very high rates, up to 80 percent, with no initial payment for the right to drill, he said. He said he believed those tracts had been unproductive.

Ron's specialty engine exchange

Ron's Auto Engine, at 401 N. Terrell, is just over one year old. The firm, owned by Ron Van Meter, opened in March 1981. The ever-growing demand for auto service has made it necessary to remodel and expand the facilities twice since the opening. Services have also been expanded.

They continue to specialize in remanufatured engine exchange. These engines are pre-run and tested and guaranteed 90 days or 4,000 miles on cars and 30 days on trucks. These motors can be installed in most models of cars in 48 hours with appointment. You may buy an engine and install it yourself if you prefer.

Ron's Auto Engine uses the Sun diagnostic performance analysis for precisison tune-ups. Auto tune-up parts are stocked for fast service and you may wait in our office.

Two new services now offered are courtesy car to return you to your home or office while your vehicle is being repaired; and wrecker service exclusively for Ron's Auto Engine customers.

Oil field and fleet vehicle service will lower the operating costs by keeping units operating at peak efficiency. Individual service records on each vehicle can be provided if requested.

Ron's recommends periodic steam cleaning for engines. Removing oil, grease and dirt prolongs the life of your motor. The dust in this area is particularly corrosive to metals.

If you need a high performance motor, Ron's has the expertise and famous-name components to build you a superior engine.

Harold Ervin, owner of B & B Appliance Service at 1009 N. Midkiff Road, services all makes and models of vacuum cleaners. Stop by the shop or call Ervin at 697-2369.

Ervin knows vacuum cleaners

Harold Ervin, owner of B & B Appliance Service, 1009 N. Midkiff Road, probably knows more about vacuum cleaners than anyone in Midland. A 27-year veteran in the field of vacuum cleaner repair, Ervin can access the problem and give you a free estimate of the repair cost in a matter of minutes.

A former serviceman trainer for Hoover, Ervin says he'll do "anything that has to be done" to a vacuum cleaner to keep it operating at maximum efficiency. Ervin has all parts available for Hoover upright vacuums made in the last 20 years.

What's more, Ervin does all the repairs himself. "If something doesn't work, there's no one to blame but me," he says.

But he says he is not in the sales business. "My only buisness is service," Ervin says, "and there will be no high-pressured pitch to buy a new machine in my shop."

With the low overhead, B & B Appliance can offer low repair costs. For example, Ervin says any vacuum cleaner can be repaired for under $20.

Along with rpairing all makes of vacuum cleaners, Ervin also repairs somesmall apliances and says he specializes in mixer repair.

Check with B & B Appliance if youare in the market for a re-built vacuum cleaner.

Open from 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Friday, B & B Appliance features general vacuum cleaner repair with overnight service.

WHY PRESCRIPTION DRUGS CANNOT BE RETURNED
Sometimes a medicine prescribed for you by your physician does not accomplish the desired result, or has a disturbing allergic effect on you which is not beneficial. Your physician will direct you to stop taking that medicine and will usually prescribe another.
Unlike other pharmacy products, which are guaranteed by their maker, prescription drugs cannot be returned for a refund. Pharmacists are responsible for the potency and purity of prescription drugs. Once they have left the pharmacy and are no longer under our supervision, we could not dispense them in a prescription for someone else. You would not want a medicine returned to us by a sick person.
YOUR DOCTOR CAN PHONE US when you need a medicine. Pick up your prescription if shopping nearby, or we will deliver promptly without extra charge. A great many people entrust us with their prescriptions. May we compound and dispense yours?

Queen Beatrix calls for cooperation

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Queen Beatrix of the Netherlands, on a visit marking 200 years of Dutch-American friendship, visited the shrines of American independence and called on all nations to work together.

In a message urging greater cooperation between the United States and Europe, the Dutch monarch deplored the present tendency "to go our own separate ways and to turn our backs on the rest of the world."

"It is an attitude which runs directly counter to the mission of our age," the queen told 600 people Thursday at a luncheon of the World Affairs Council of Philadelphia. "No longer can we or may we think exclusively in national terms. Instead we must take account of global imperatives.

"The future holds out immense challenges to us all, so immense indeed that they can be met only if we act in unison," she said.

PLO does not retaliate

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. officials are using indirect channels to plead with leaders of the Palestine Liberation Organization to restrain from retaliating against Israeli raids that killed at least 60 people in southern Lebanon, sources say.

Striving to guarantee Israel's withdrawal from the Eyptian Sinai, U.S. officials were said to be gratified that the PLO has opted not to respond to the Israeli air attacks violating a 9-month-old American-negotiated ceasefire.

"There are Israeli extremists who would like to move in and wipe out the PLO and there are PLO extremists who would like to wipe out the Israelis," one diplomatic source said.

U.S. diplomats were said to have passed the word Thursday that the Israeli strikes at PLO positions inside Lebanon may have been an incitement aimed at provoking a PLO response to justify a long-expected Israeli invasion of Lebanon.

"We have certainly gotten assurances from both sides that they see the usefulness in maintaining a ceasefire," said an informed U.S. official who asked not to be identified by name.

The PLO promised such restraint even while denouncing the Israeli attacks as "aggression."

Barred by U.S. policy decisions from contacting the PLO directly, American diplomats used indirect channels to plead with PLO leaders to preserve the ceasefire, sources said.

"We are urging calm," one official said. "We are trying not to say things that would cause sharp reactions any place. The thrust is to ease tension, not to exacerbate the situation."

The U.S. official acknowleged that the situation remains tense "because there are elements on both sides that would like to do more." But he said that the Israeli government has reaffirmed its intention to abide by the ceasefire and that PLO leaders "have said as much also."

Israel is scheduled to turn the Sinai back to Egypt on Sunday. The Israelis captured the territory in the 1967 Arab-Israeli war. Its return is one of the principal achievements of the Camp David agreements which led to the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty.

The United States is anxious that the transfer be accomplished without a hitch so that negotiations can go forward under the Camp David framework on achieving autonomy for the 1.3 million Palestinians living in the Gaza Strip and West Bank territories still occupied by Israel.

"We are gratified by the responsible positions adopted by the parties to avoid taking actions that could lead to a breakdown in the ceasefire," said State Department spokesman Dean Fischer.

Our reputation is included at no extra cost.

When you buy a used car, you're really buying a lot more than just the steel, aluminum, and other materials that go into the construction of an automobile. You're also buying a pledge from the dealer to work for your total satisfaction.

That's why a car dealer's reputation is one of his most important products. But really, his reputation is not just made by his promises. A good reputation comes from hundreds of happy, satisfied customers...people who tell other people about being treated fairly.

Here are some examples of excellent values that could help contribute to our reputation in the future:

Just see us today and work out your best deal. Take delivery by June 6, 1982, and Ford will send a check direct to you. Limit one per customer. Or if you prefer use the cash back to reduce your down payment.
