1365 CHECKS ARE RECEIVED; 1200 ARE STILL DUE

By Joe C. Williams, County Agent

Thirteen hundred sixty five checks totaling over $66,000.00 have been received in the county agents office, these checks representing the first rental payment on the 1935 contracts. Checks were received on those contracts only that were not adjusted either upward or downward and on those farms only that were under contract in 1934.

It is estimated that there are yet to come into the county some 1200 more checks on the 1935 sign-up. Bale Tag Acceptances Received. Acceptances on the 1934 bale tags or Tax Exemption certificates were received in this office Tuesday, and probably by the time you read this article will have received the checks.

Each producer who pooled the tags for sale through the National pool will receive a statement showing the amount of the first payment received, the amount of the final settlement, the number of pounds pooled, pounds sold, and pounds that are being reissued for use on the 1935 crop or to be pooled. After the checks are issued there will be a period of 10 days in which to decide if you want to pool the new tags or use them on the 1935 crop.

It is stated by the Washington office that the pool will be liquidated within 120 days from the time that the tags are pooled. These checks will be ready for distribution as soon as possible after they are received in the agents office.

4-H Club Work
Sixteen boys met last Saturday morning at the C. D. Applegate farm in the Five Mile district and learned the art of caponizing young cockerels. These boys learned that the chickens are in better condition for caponizing after having been penned up for at least 24 to 36 hours with out feed and water. Out of all the young roosters caponized only one died from the operation. Some of the boys wanted to take capons as demonstrations for their 1935 work. All boys who complete their demonstrations will be awarded a trip to Carlsbad Cavern it is planned.

New Star Route Mail Carriers Start July 1st

As a result of the advertisements for competitive bids for carrying the mails on star routes and bids submitted the early part of this year, Lamesa has four new carriers who will take charge of the routes under four year contracts beginning the first of July.

Obe Wilson, who has carried the Lamesa-Snyder route (No. 50301) for the past year will be succeeded by H. G. Edwards of Tahoka, Texas. George Towns, who has served on the Lamesa-Patricia route (No. 50302) for the past year will be succeeded by Vernon Peel of Fashling, Texas. Bill Watson and the Bus Line will continue on the route from Lamesa to O'Donnell under temporary contract for another year. Ollie Lightfoot, carrier for the past three years on the Lamesa-Seagraves route (No. 50304) will be succeeded by Lloyd Grimes of Palo Pinto, Texas. Claude F. Geiven, for the past five years carrier on the Lamesa-Sporenberg route (No. 50305) will be succeeded by Raymon Orlando Styron of Lamesa. Box service to patrons is required on all these routes except to O'Donnell and Snyder. The new carriers are already in Lamesa acquainting themselves with their respective routes and work. Postmaster Dyer requests the fullest cooperation of all the patrons of the routes in order that the least possible inconvenience may be caused incident to the change of carriers. He states that it will help greatly if patrons will furnish complete lists when called for of all persons receiving mail at a certain place or box, to have all mail directed to routes, and particularly to have a good box properly erected and the name painted on it so that it may be plainly read in approaching the box. He believes that with this cooperation there will be few causes for complaint.

Mrs. F. C. Warnick and Mrs. Bill Warnick visited friends in Lubbock Saturday.

Government Men Make Report On CCC Camp

200 BOYS TO BE IN LOCAL CAMP

According to the government men in Lamesa this week the CCC Camp will be in operation here within the next fifteen days. This statement was made here this week as government men were making a survey of the work to be done by the soil erosion camp in this county.

In a letter received by the Chamber of Commerce from the Ready-cut House Company of Houston, who secured the contract for furnishing the materials, they stated that they had contracted with the government to cut and deliver F. O. B. Houston to the government materials for the local camp. They state that they have nothing to do with the erection of the camp, but for local parties interested in the erection of the camp to get in touch with Quartermaster, 8th Corps Area, Ft. Sam Houston.

Mr. Gorman, of the Government Employment office here is corresponding with government officials and it is hoped that local labor will be used for the erection, although no definite word has been received regarding this to date.

We understand that some 200 boys will be sent to the CCC camp here, these to come from other communities other than Lamesa and Dawson county. All our CCC boys will be sent to other camps.

Wheat Production In County Expected To Be 100,000 Bu.

Wheat production in Dawson county is reported above the normal. The average production per acre is reported to be eight to ten bushels per acre. The grain is now turning and will be ready for harvest by the last of June or the first of July, according to farmers who have grain for the harvest.

It is estimated that the county will yield 100,000 bushels of wheat this year. Considering the fact that Dawson county is yet young in the matter of wheat production, this is considered a good yield.

Farmers over the county are coming more and more to the idea of wheat production, since this crop has proved itself here and the county has gone in strongly for dairying and winter pastures seeded in the fall field are supplied by wheat, so states leading dairy and wheat farmers of the county.

LAMESA LIKELY TO GET NEW P. O. IN NEAR FUTURE

With the passing by the house of representatives June 21, of the second deficiency bill which included an appropriation of $58,000,000 for public buildings, the city of Lamesa was put on the eligible list for a new Federal building. The amount appropriated for the local building was $86,000.

Congress recommends in this bill which now goes to the senate, that the treasury and postoffice departments select buildings from a list of approximately 1,200 cities, of which Lamesa is included.

It is estimated that out of the appropriation, about 433 cities will be provided buildings. It is now up to Lamesa to see that she is one of the 433 cities out of the total list of 1,200 eligible cities.

A number of other South Plains cities were included in the list including our neighboring cities of Tahoka, Brownfield, Big Spring.

ACCURATE BRAKE TESTING DEVICE

A brake testing device which is described by engineers as ideal for its accuracy and simplicity is employed by the Brooklyn Edison Co., of Brooklyn, N. Y. This public utilities corporation employs a large fleet of cars which are kept in top notch condition. The device consists of a fifth wheel upon which is mounted a speedometer that is checked for exactness by the New York Police Department as well as the Stewart Warner Co., makers of the instrument. When the brakes are applied a gun is fired, discharging a slug against the ground, leaving a distinct mark. The speedometer needle is stopped at the speed at which the car was running when the brakes were applied. It is simple, then, to measure from the mark made by the gun to the point directly below the gun, where the car was brought to a stop. Thus the exact speed of the car is known as well as the exact number of feet and inches in which the stop was made. The fifth wheel is counter-weighted so that it follows the ground accurately. A recent test on the Hudson car shown above recorded stops in phenomenally short distances, averaging about half the distance considered satisfactory by police departments.

1000 Families Are Homeless from Floods

Austin, June 25.—More than 1000 families were left homeless and approximately 5,600 relief cases will be reopened as a result of devastating floods that swept through Texas last week. Tabulation of reports from relief administrators in 51 counties showed that 6,130 additional families were in need of assistance as a result of the high water.

The survey showed 150 homes of relief clients destroyed and 753 homes damaged.

Some 300 houses of non-relief clients were destroyed, and 1,500 houses damaged.

Bulk of the loss appeared to be in the counties along the Colorado river. Principal sufferers among the counties already reported are Travis, with 140 homeless and more than 600 homes destroyed or damaged; Bastrop with 500 damaged homes, and a check-up was yet to come from Wharton and Matagorda counties.

In Northeast Texas, Fannin county reported 300 damaged homes; Bowie county reported 250 families temporarily homeless.

In the Hill country, Kimble county reported 30 homes destroyed, 25 damaged and 31 families homeless.

West of San Antonio, Medina county reported 25 homes destroyed, 275 damaged and 45 families homeless.

Extent of the damage in Brazoria, Matagorda, McMullen, and Cameron counties was yet to be determined. In the latter country, a project has been rushed through to permit relief workers to aid in reinforcement of strained levees.

Old-Timers To Meet At Stamford Reunion

Stamford, Texas, June 25.—A courageous race of men—the cowboys and cattlemen who carved a rich empire from the trackless plains of the Southwest—will be honored at the Sixth Annual Texas Cowboy Reunion to be held here July 2, 3 and 4. Sturdy cowhands who saw service on the range or trail no less than 35 years ago will be special guests of the reunion.

The old timers have their own organization with some 1,000 members and hold their "round-up" and election of officers during the Reunion each year.

Members of the association who are in good standing are issued attractive metal badges which entitle them to free admission to the rodeo and grandstand, a chuck wagon dinner at noon each day, admission to the square dance every night and other courtesies.

Assembling of these grizzled veterans of the range to renew early friendships, talk over old times, swap yarns and maybe enter the oldtimers calf-roping contest is one of the distinctive features of the Cowboy Reunion.

Mute evidence of the ever-thinning ranks of these bold knights of the rope and saddle was noticed last year when a memorial service was held for fifteen members who had died in the preceding twelve months.

The oldtime cowboys have their own headquarters building on the Reunion grounds, a unique stone structure which they call the "bunkhouse." When the building was constructed about a year ago, scores of cattle brands of the Southwest, representing ranches of the past as well as those now in operation, were carved in the stones which form the curved wall around a spacious terrace. The building overlooks the Reunion grounds and is near a pretty little lake, now brimming full of water from recent rains.

Another handsome hand-made saddle is offered as top prize this year in the old-timers calf-roping contest which is limited to cowboys 55 years of age or over. Ed Powers of Breckenridge won the contest last year over 47 other veterans who roped.

John Gist, veteran cattleman of Odessa, is serving his second year as president of the old time cowboys organization and his successor will be elected at the coming meeting. Other officers are Clyde Burnett, Benjamin first vice-president; Joe Mathews, Albany, second vice-president; A. J. Swenson, Stamford, treasurer; Chas. E. Coombes, Stamford, secretary; W. H. Cousins, Dallas, historian; V. Ribble, Crowell, range boss; Fred Franklin, Guthrie, wagon cook; C. F. Ratliff Midland, wagon boss; Virgil Hudson, Haskell, horse wrangler.

The directors are Lewis Ackers, Abilene, chairman; Doc Ellis, Spur, John C. Burns, Fort Worth; Tom Burnett, Iowa Park; Tol Ginn, Aspermont; Claud Jeffers, Matador; John Davis, Throckmorton; and Frank Rhoades, Throckmorton.

PRESBYTERIAN CHILDRENS CLASS TO MEET SATURDAY

The Communicants Class for boys and girls will renew its meetings on this coming Saturday at two p. m. All boys and girls between the ages of seven and thirteen are urged to be present for a half-hour study of the Bible and of Christian doctrine. The place: First Presbyterian Church.

PRESBYTERIAN SERVICES

The evening worship will again be omitted at the First Presbyterian church this coming Sunday. Sunday school and morning worship with sermon will be at the usual time. The sermon by the pastor the Rev. Eugene H. Surface, will be on the theme "Christian Experiment and Experience." The text for the sermon is John 7:16-17.

LIVESTOCK MUST BE KEPT OFF STATE HIGHWAYS

The last session of the Texas Legislature passed a new law, Senate Bill No. 143, making it a misdemeanor for any person owning or having control of domestic livestock to permit same to roam at large unattended on the right-of-way where same is enclosed by fences on both sides.

The penalty for such a misdemeanor is a $200 fine and each day constitutes a separate offense.

The grazing of livestock on highways is a danger that causes many accidents, has caused the death of many travelers, damage to cars and a loss to ranchmen. The observance of this law will be appreciated by everyone who travels on the highways.

The Highway Department has recently started a beautification program, in which trees and shrubbery have been set out on the highway, and they ask the cooperation of every loyal citizen in the enforcement of this law, to the end that our highways can be made more beautiful and pleasing to travel.

Tractors with lugs are also barred by law from traveling or crossing paved highways.

L. B. Reed made a business trip to Lubbock last Thursday.

LAMESA GIRLS ATTENDING SUMMER CONFERENCE

Two girls from the First Presbyterian Church, Elizabeth Smith and Geraldine Richardson, are attending the Annual Young Peoples Summer Conference this week being held at Buffalo Gap, 12 miles south of Abilene. The Conference began Monday and closes Sunday. The mornings are filled with classes, the afternoons with rest and recreation, and the evenings with various kinds of popular services. A large concrete swimming pool is one of the attractive features of the recreation. This is one of the eight Conferences which the Presbyterian Church, through its Board of Christian Education with headquarters in Philadelphia, conducts throughout the United States.

RELIEF CASE LOADS ARE RE-EXAMINED

Austin, June 25.—State Relief Director Adam R. Johnson early in the week told county administrators and chairmen of county relief boards that he is "greatly disturbed" by rumors from several counties to the effect that "as soon as the group which is in the county conducting a re-examination of our case load leaves, we will reopen the cases which they are closing."

Re-examination of relief cases in Texas and other states was begun about a month ago at the order of federal relief officials, and is expected to be completed in about two or three weeks. The examination was undertaken to establish the validity of cases receiving public assistance.

"This is, of course, an evidence, not only of disregard for instructions from this office, but also of complete misunderstanding of the objective of this organization and wholehearted lack of cooperation with this office," Johnson said.

"The case load recheck which we are making is primarily for the protection of those eligible for relief in that we have a limited amount of money to distribute to the various counties in Texas, every dollar of which needs to go to the source intended. For even though we succeed in eliminating all ineligible, on account of the material reduction in relief grants, the available budgetary allowances for those who are in actual need are extremely meager. Thus, it behooves every one of us to do our utmost to see to it that our eligible clients are not further penalized by having to share their small dinner pail with ineligible. This recheck is costing our government a great deal of money which will be absolutely wasted if you fail to do your duty in carrying out its purposes.

"Your case load, following the re-examination, will be carefully scrutinized as to re-openings and any indication that we find of a board, administrator, or anyone else, re-opening of cases legitimately closed, will be just grounds for the discontinuance of their services unless such re-openings are justified by reputable affidavits which will be forwarded to this office.

"We hope that the rumors that have come to us are unfounded; and we do not want you to think that you stand indicted. We simply want to impress you with our earnestness and determination to clean our relief rolls of all ineligible, and that we are not going to stand for any abuses of our efforts in this respect," Johnson concluded.

ON TEXAS FARMS

"Cut out the old dewberry and blackberry vines now," says J. F. Rosborough, Extension horticulturist. "Leave three or four of the new canes and when they get three feet or better, top them," he says. "All this makes for increased production next year. Also, picking will be easier.

Tomatoes are suckering too much due to recent rains, Rosborough states. The thing to do is to pinch back all except two or three suckers and when these have set a cluster of fruit pinch their tops off so all the strength of the plant will go into development of quality tomatoes.

Old railroad ties for posts with two strands of wire run between two and four feet above the ground doubled the yield of berry vines owned by Manco Morrow of Marion county. The berries were trained to grow on the wires. Morrow has been able to sell all that he grew and is increasing his patch to an acre.

If the rows in her garden were laid end to end and 334 more feet were planted, Hilda Thielman, second year club member of the Lamar Girls Home Demonstration Club in Fort Bend county, would have to hoe one mile of garden. She has reported 366 feet of dewberries, 488 feet of tomatoes, 1206 feet of leafy vegetables, 2478 feet of other vegetables and 488 feet of peanuts, making a total of 4846 feet. To date she has gathered 44 pounds of fresh vegetables and 21 gallons of berries for use at home.

Misses Merle and Hazel Shipp and Mrs. Pauline Vaughn visited relatives in Littlefield for a few days last week.

THE MAN FROM YONDER

by HAROLD TITUS

sential. They were infected with Elliott's fire.

Standing on the bank within the circle of freight Dawn McManus seemed to snuggle close to Able Armitage, face pallid even under the ruddy glow of flames. Her eyes followed just one figure; that of Ben Elliott. Commanding, resourceful, a human dynamo, he was.

Shortly after midnight the supply team drove up from camp, the cook drew back blankets which had covered its burden, commenced putting generous pieces of steaming steak between slices of bread and the cook poured coffee from huge pots for the men who swarmed around the sleigh.

Her Eyes Followed Just One Figure: That of Ben Elliott.

A team came creaking up from the siding, its sled laden with steel rails, fish plates, spikes and track-laying tools.

Back to the decks in the woods went the locomotive; down it came again, bearing more logs. These were let down to a pile which rose almost to the track level. When it was three feet higher nearly half the work would be finished.

Workers staggered through the snow bearing a steel rail. It went into place; fish plates clattered; wrenches set nuts and spikes put the rail secure on ties.

So when the locomotive, leaning stem from its old joints, lumbered down with its next burden, the loader was set out on this length of new track and began the task of filling in the far side of the ravine, leaving a sluiceway through which the waters of the stream gurgled and surged.

Blackmore joined Able and Dawn on the bank where the freight truck topos lights from the snow. The old justice turned an inquiring gaze on him and the buyer shrugged.

"Two o'clock," he muttered. "He's got less than six hours left to turn the trick."

"It doesn't seem humanly possible," Able said slowly.

"I'm beginning to think," Blackmore replied, "that the man isn't human. This thing would've stopped most men I know without a try. But not Elliott!"

Three o'clock, and the foundation on the south side of the river was in. Four, and the jammer was swinging logs rapidly into that gap. . . . Five, and the heads of men working doggedly on the southern crib were up to the level of the old ties.

Daybreak found them throwing the last load of logs into place and the pallid light of the early day revealed Elliott's face drawn and gaunt and colorless; his eyes burned brightly, strangely dark.

"His only chance is that the local'll be late," Blackmore moaned to Able.

Six o'clock, and broad axes shaped the logs on which ties would rest, and up from the siding came a team at a trot, and behind it another. These were men from Tincup who had heard of the work going on. They left their sleighs and looked at the emergency trestle and then stared at one another and shook their heads in amazement. Things like that just didn't happen, they seemed to be thinking.

Then came a battered cutter, with old Tim Jeffers driving alone, to see what was to be seen.

"Heard the shots in town last night," he told Able. "Come mornin' I drove this way."

The old justice nodded grimly.

"You guessed, then."

Tim spit angrily. "The lad was gettin' too close to his mark to suit some folks. It seems."

Seven o'clock, and men staggered up the embankment bearing a rail. Five minutes later it rang and sang as the spike went home, and another, the last, was brought up.

The gap was bridged, the last spikes were going in; the particular job was done, but tension screwed up and up, as a fiddle string is tightened. . . .

It was seven-thirty, and far off a locomotive screamed.

"The local!" Blackmore gasped.

"She's at Dixon. . . . In a half hour, now. H—l, the boy's licked!"

A half hour! A half hour in which to move six standard cars laden with a heavy scale of saw logs over that grade! Two trips. Ben Elliott had estimated it would take. Two trips for the leaking old locomotive to drag them the three miles to the siding and puff its way back and trundle the other three over the hill and down the slope. It was a half mile climb from river to summit with a better than four per cent grade. A good locomotive of even small tonnage might take them over at once; but not the old rula that stood sending its plume of smoke into the morning air up the track yonder. And if those logs were not put down for the train even now screaming its way toward the siding, Ben Elliott was beaten.

He straightened, flinging away his maul, saw the last nut tightened on the final fish plate and then, holding up both hands, face fixed toward the locomotive with its string of cars waiting around the bend and up the hill to the northward, he began to run.

Holding them there? When the trestle was ready? Men wondered why, audibly, excitedly, stirred from their weariness by this strange move. Instead of high-balling them on, Elliott was holding them back!

"Come on; we'll drive it!" a teamster cried and his sled at once swarmed with men as his horses started toward camp and the train at a heavy gallop.

CHAPTER VII

The cars of veneer logs were coupled, their air hoses dangling, because the Hoot Owl never boasted air brake for its trains. The locomotive panted asthmatically and leaking steam trailed off into the forest. McIver, the engineer, stood beside his cab, wiping his hands slowly on a ball of waste and his fireman hung out the gangway as Ben came running up.

"You'll have to take 'em . . . all over at once," Elliott panted. "Local'll be there in . . . fifteen minutes! If they're not at the siding in time for the local, we lose! You've got to run for it, Mac, and pick up enough speed going down to carry you over."

McIver rolled the waste and eyed his employer. Then he shook his head slowly.

"Tough luck for you!" he said. "But with that rotten steel on a cold mornin', and no telling what that trestle'll do when weight hits it. . . . He shook his head again and looked Elliott in the eye. "I got kids," he said simply. "So's the fireman."

Some of the frate glare which had been in Ben's face dwindled. He, too, stared briefly down the track.

"Kids, yes," he said softly. "I can't ask a man with kids to try it. Mac. No hard feelings. I'll take a shot myself."

Teams clinked up, then, horses frost covered. Ben surveyed the crowd that pressed about the engine and swung up to the step.

"I'm going to take her over myself," he said. "If I get across that hump, with this load pushing me, I'll need a brakeman. I'm not going to ask anyone of you to ride. Maybe we'll pile up. But if we do get to the top, I can't stop her alone at the mill. Without air, with frost on the steel, we'll go into the pond. There's fifty dollars in it for the man who'll ride with me!"

They looked hard at him, and then, almost in unison, their faces turned down the track. To watch was to know what was in their minds: the dangers of that curve, with rusty steel so cold; the problematical strength of the trestle they had built through the night.

"Fifty dollars . . . against a broken neck," Ben said and his voice trembled a bit. He drew his watch. "We've got eleven or twelve minutes to catch the local. . . . I'll urge no man. . . . Fifty dollars . . . and a long chance. Any takers?"

He saw Dawn McManus standing behind the group. Her face was white, dark eyes wide and frightened.

No man moved for a moment. Then, quite simply, without a word, Tim Jeffers peeled his heavy sheepskin coat, took a peavey from a man beside him and advanced.

"Never mind the fifty, Elliott. . . . It's my neck."

Ben smiled, then. It seemed as though he were so weary from effort and strain that he must have cracked and cried had he not smiled. He said no word. He swung up to the cab as the safety valve popped and steam commenced blowing off.

Ben threw more coal into the fire box, looked at his water gauge, shoved the reverse lever down into the corner and opened the throttle. The little old locomotive gave a sharp, an almost startled, bark as valves released their power, sending from its stack a great puff of cumulous vapor into the still morning air. The drivers spun and she let go a rapid series of exhaust coughs. He shut off; opened again, and this time the tires found purchase. The stack came out, the cars moved and, journals squealing, belching and stuttering, they broke over to the down grade.

Elliott had her wide open, now, and the loads, on that grade, ran easily despite the biting cold to their journals. The rock and pitch of the engine were beyond belief. It seemed as though its weight must carry the light steel from its spikes as the careening threw tons of strain first one way and then the other.

The curve at the trestle's approach rushed up the valley toward him and through Elliott's mind swam all manner of misgivings. It seemed at the moment that if by any freak chance the wheels should stay on the rails, then those rails must surely give before the strain that the train's flight would exert as it took that curve. He threw one quick glance backward to see Tim Jeffers crouched on his high perch as a circus rider might stand on his boldly galloping steed. The old man chewed briskly and, as he caught a flash of Ben's face, spat and made one impressive gesture with a mittened hand, bidding the younger man get outside.

Ben had done all that he could do in the cab. Nothing within his power would be of avail if they left the track and, inside, he would have no chance at all should the wild run come to its end in the smoking waters of the river.

And so he backed into the gangway between tank and engine and slid down to the step, clinging to the hand rails, staring ahead, ready to let go if the worst, and the highly probable, happened.

The curve was there, a train's length beyond.

It was there, the length of their locomotive ahead. . . . The trucks took it with a screech and a bounce and a grind. She turned sharply and Ben thought he felt her tipping, tilting, the step beneath his feet rising as the force that strove them off at a tangent asserted itself. . . . He swung far out, to give her that much more balance, and they were straightening out with the loads thundering and clanking and leaping behind and he breathed deeply, realizing that for the interval his lungs had not functioned.

Elliott looked back again. Tim's knees were bent still lower. He was leaning far to the right and he nodded sharply as if in triumph.

And now they charged at the bridge, at that rough, new crossing of Hoot Owl. The engine bounced and quivered and seemed to stumble as she took the newly laid track. But she slammed back to balance and her tires chewed the frost, and they were over and charging the rise beyond!

Ben clambered back into the cab and tugged at the throttle, cursing because it would not open wider. He strained as though by his very posture to help the machinery meet that demand upon it. Nobly, the little locomotive breasted the rise; bravely she lunged into that hill with the exhaust roaring fit to beat the rusted, burned stack from her. She spat cinders and smoke high into the air and the steam clouds from leaking gaskets enveloped Elliott, curling about him, shutting off his view. They were slowing now. The roaring drum of the exhaust had dropped now to a sharp panting.

They were half-way up "before he touched the reserve lever. He let it down slowly, a notch at a time, using every last inch of the momentum he had gained. Up, now, three-quarters of the way. Ben could see the rails on the bit of level going at the top. Up another train's length, slowing with each foot gained. Afar off, across the snow-blanketed country, a plume of white vapor trailed a break in the forests. That was the local, crossing the river, swinging in toward his siding.

"Go it, girl! Go it, girl!" he yelled at the engine, swinging one fist. She shoved her nose over the crest, seeming to weave it from side as in distress. Her drivers slipped and spun a half turn; caught on sand, held. She began a stuttering, dying puff. The sound wavered. She seemed to stop. . . . and cleared her cylinders with a short belch.

She was on top. Her last breath had turned the trick.

"Hold to it, old timer! Hold to it!" Ben croaked.

The first car gained the crest. The locomotive was on the down grade, now; the second car coming across the peak. The third car rumbled over the top and Tim Jeffers, dropping his peavey, wormed along the logs and flopped down to the brake wheel as Ben shut her off, set the brakes and with a boyish swing of one arm yanked on the whistle cord to set her voice screaming.

Back on the last car's Tim clutched brake wheels. Out on the first, Ben Elliott drove the shoe home. The ancient locomotive dug her heels in and settled back. Down and down they went on the frost slick steel, gathering speed that was as alarming as the slowing of their pace had been a moment before. But with every train length traveled Tim Jeffers was setting more brakes against the humming wheels.

She slid, she slipped, she squealed and complained and clattered her way down that final mile. They had her under control at last and slowly they

YOU ALWAYS GET BETTER QUALITY AT NO HIGHER PRICE WHEN YOU BUY A FIRESTONE TIRE WITH FIRESTONE NAME AND GUARANTEE

Tires may look alike on the outside, but on the inside where blowouts start, they are different. Firestone Tires are made blowout-proof by Gum-Dipping, a patented extra process which soaks every strand with pure liquid rubber. In fact, every 100 pounds of cotton cords absorb eight additional pounds of liquid rubber. This special process prevents internal friction and heat, the main cause of blowouts. No other make of tire is Gum-Dipped, yet you pay no more for Firestone blowout-proof protection.

The make of tires you buy for your car becomes a matter of vital importance when you realize that in 1934 alone 43,000 accidents were caused by blowouts, punctures and skidding.

Firestone High Speed Gum-Dipped Tires hold all world records on road and track for safety, speed, mileage and endurance — undisputed evidence that Firestone Tires are not only blowout-proof but give greatest protection against skidding.

THERE ARE THREE QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS THAT WILL SOLVE YOUR PROBLEM OF WHAT TIRES TO BUY

1 "Will the tread give me the greatest traction and protection against skidding?"

Recent tests by a leading University show that Firestone High Speed Non-Skid Tires stop a car 15% quicker than any other of the leading makes.

For eight consecutive years Firestone Tires have been on the winning car in the dangerous Pike's Peak Race where a skid means death. This is undisputed evidence that Firestone gives car owners greatest protection against skidding.

2 "Are they blowout-proof?"

Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires have the most amazing records for being blowout-proof of any tires ever built. In the gruelling 500-Mile Race at Indianapolis, May 30th, every one of the 33 cars was equipped with Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires. Kelly Pettilo won the race and broke the record over this 26-year-old rough brick track without tire trouble—in fact, not one of the 33 drivers had tire trouble of any kind.

Ab Jenkins drove his 5,000 pound car on Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires over the hot salt beds of Utah, 3,000 miles in 23½ hours, at an average speed of 127.2 miles per hour, with temperatures as high as 120°, without tire trouble of any kind. These are most amazing proofs of blowout protection ever known.

3 "Without sacrificing these two important safety features will they give me longer mileage, thus making them the most economical tires I can buy?"

Firestone High Speed Tires not only give you more than 50% longer wear, but also lowest cost per mile. This is made possible by the tough, wear-resisting tread built with higher shoulders and a wider, flatter contour. This thick, rugged, scientifically designed tread is held securely to the Gum-Dipped cord body by Firestone's patented construction of two extra layers of cords under the tread. This is a special construction feature not used in any other tire. Unequalled mileage records by thousands of car owners add undisputed evidence of the longer wear and greater economy of Firestone High Speed Tires.

FLOODS MAY CAUSE TYPHOID EPIDEMIC

Austin, Texas, June 25.—Recent floods may be responsible for an epidemic of typhoid fever, declares Dr. John W. Brown, State Health Officer. Flood conditions have prevailed over most of the state and unless the utmost precautions are observed to prevent this disease the monetary loss from illness may equal the property loss.

Typhoid fever is often called a "filth-borne" disease. It can only grow into epidemic proportions under conditions which are unsanitary. A typhoid epidemic means that water, milk or food have been contaminated with germs from the body discharges of a patient or carrier. Contamination of milk or food by flies is favored by a lack of sanitation.

The prevention of typhoid fever is peculiarly a matter of community responsibility. In cities large and small most urgent control measures are those providing for (1) proper disposal of human excreta through sewage disposal plants and toilets of sanitary type; (2) safe public and well water supplies; (3) extermination of flies; (4) healthy food handlers; (5) supervision of disease carriers and (6) public milk supplies of high quality with the added safeguard of careful pasteurization.

Inoculations with vaccine increase individual resistance to typhoid fever. Such treatments are advised for exposed persons and those who, thru travel or change of residence are subject to varied water, food, and milk supplies. For the rank and file of our population, reduction of deaths and sickness from preventable disease like typhoid fever is largely dependent upon carrying out the six above mentioned measures.

INDUSTRIAL SURVEY PLANNED FOR TEXAS

Austin, Tex., June 25.—Governor James V. Allred announced this week completion of plans for a far-reaching industrial survey designed to provide jobs, attract outside capital into Texas and rehabilitate dormant and ruined industries.

The governor revealed that Dudley P. South of Houston, an industrial engineer of exceptional training had already done several weeks work in determining the feasibility and possibilities of the survey. Mr. South, a graduate of Rice Institute and Columbia university, close associate of Dr. Walter B. Pitkin will head the survey.

Governor Allred, pointed out that an industrial survey of Texas, with particular reference to getting men and women off public relief rolls into gainful private occupation, had been recommended by the Democratic party in its convention last September.

"Inauguration of the Texas Industrial Survey," the Governor said, "with Dudley P. South as director, offers almost unlimited possibilities for co-ordinating public and private initiative to the end that jobs for the jobless will be provided and the entire industrial welfare of the state be promoted."

"We have already received assurances of cooperation from leading civic organizations, including chambers of commerce throughout the state, the University of Texas and Southern Methodist University, as well as many public spirited citizens. An advisory council composed of prominent commercial and industrial leaders in Texas, will be announced shortly. Also, a co-ordination committee, composed of several men who have worked with Mr. South in the preliminary surveys and will assist him in furthering the work."

The governor released a statement from Mr. South briefly outlining objectives of the survey as follows:

"The function of this survey is to make available for all business enterprises such data as will enable them to expand their work, undertake new development, hire more men, and judiciously invest more capital."

"There are also many major industries outside of Texas which do not have important branches in the state and which could profitably establish such branches. We hope to furnish them with data that will convince them of the wisdom of coming here."

"The survey will be entirely impartial with respect to the different cities and sections of the state and will make its findings available to all. It invites the cooperation of all institutions which have been doing this sort of work on a local or regional scale; and we have already received assurance of help from many of these."

"National and world opportunities for Texas business enterprises will be studied. We hope to increase the scope of the survey and this increase will come steadily if we receive the cooperation we have been encouraged to expect."

Mr. South is a veteran of the World War, having served with the signal corps in the Meuse-Argonne, St. Mihiel and other offensives. He is married and has two children.

Luncheon Club Hears Scout Program

The Lamesa Luncheon club had a good crowd Tuesday noon. Also one of the best programs it has enjoyed for several weeks.

Dr. Loveless and J. D. Dyer arranged the program which centered around boy scout activities. Mr. Dyer presided at the head of the table and introduced the numbers.

Mrs. Carl Rountree and Miss Laura Kirk entertained delightfully at the piano and with violin while the boys ate. The music was unusually good.

Dr. J. C. Loveless delivered the invocation. Owen C. Taylor led the singing.

Ed Noret was the principal speaker and kept the boys in an uproar of laughter as he told of his preparation for the speech and his early experiences in Lamesa. He stressed also the seriousness and good in the Scouting movement. He closed with a scouts searching question, as applied to fathers "Am I Trustworthy?"

Harold Williams and Raymond

Steele, local scouts gave an account of their recent encampment, which was highly enjoyed. It was announced that Harold Williams would go to the Washington Jamboree and so would Homer Simpson, Harold to represent the Lamesa troops and Homer with the band from Iraan.

The richest joke of the year was "pulled" by Joe Williams, county agent. He and the Western Union man had faked a telegram that said Lamesa would have a negro CCC camp. He read it, and then the argument started. It was serious for ten minutes. Pro and con. All agreed that Lamesa would rather have a white camp, but some feared if we protested too loud we would not get a camp at all. Others said it would be best for us if we got no camp if we had to take negroes. When Joe announced it was a joke and was pulled for the fun of it, well his life wasn't worth much.

Miss Eleanor Ragle, home economics instructor in the local high school, left Saturday for Rals where she will spend the summer with her parents.

JUDGES BEDROOM IN DISTRICT CONTEST

Miss Bess Edwards, Assistant State Home Demonstration Agent, was in the county Wednesday afternoon and night. Her purpose was to judge the winning bedroom in Dawson county, which is a bedroom improved by Arleen Drennan, club girl in the Woody community. Dawson county is one of 18 counties in District 2 that is conducting the bedroom improvement demonstration with the club girls.

When Miss Edwards was here she stated that Arleen's room was the 15th room she had judged and all had been perfect in order and cleanliness.

Carl Peterson, who has been doing jury duty in the Federal court at Lubbock completed his service at that place last Friday.

STATE HIGHWAY ENGINEER TO SPEAK HERE

Word has been received from Mr. G. M. Garrett, Division Engineer of the State Highway Department, stationed in Lubbock, that he would be present and speak at the Business Mens Luncheon Club next Tuesday noon, July 2.

After the luncheon the highway committee of the local chamber of commerce will confer with Mr. Garrett on local highway matters.
