"If We Are Dead When You Find Us We Are Saved"

SALEM, Ky., Aug. 12.—(AP) A story of prayer meetings rather than human suffering was brought out of the Hudson zinc and spar mine today by five miners imprisoned in its depths for 155 hours.

It was a cheerful tale, of Randolph Cobb, first of the quintet to see the sunlight again. It recounted how during the long hours without food and with but little water the men became convinced in the simple fashion of the western Kentucky folk that their souls were saved.

One of them did not yield until long after the others did and he was the subject of long prayer and when they emerged this morning on their cloth caps was pencilled this message:

"If we are dead when you find us, we are saved."

Refused to Save Self.

Seven men were woking on a special night shift at the mine near here when collapse of a wall blocked the outlet at 10 o'clock last Thursday night. Two of them escaped, and Roy James could have saved himself also, but he ran further back to call the other four and found himself cut off.

The five, George Castiller, Harry Watson, U. B. Wilson and Randolph and James, ranging in age from 27 to 35 and all married save Wilson, spent their time in prayer and song. When they finally were rescued by the unremitting force of 200 men working in relays, they were in fairly good condition except that Castiller had wrenched his back in falling off a scaffold when the cave-in occurred.

Their clothes, heavy with the mud of the mine pit, were cut from their backs at the mine's first-aid station where they were taken amid cheers of the workers and the mingled laughter and tears of friends and relatives and, then they were ready to go home and tell their stories.

Tells Story of "Pull In"

Cobb told an Associated Press correspondent about what happened under ground as follows:

"Two of the boys were on the ground at the time of the accident and one of them shouted 'the cuts pulled in' and rushed for the shaft. Two of us just fell off the sloping scaffold on which we were working and met the rushing waters.

"The water hurled Wilson and James down but they caught some timber and climbed clear. The rest of us climbed up, too, and began figuring. We figured the water was gorged below. We did not know it was to the shaft.

"We laid there till Friday morning, I guess, and then we all got victory from God except James. He wailed. We prayed on then until Sunday morning. We had only our carbibe lamps. I told them I was going to do some writing. I turned to James and said 'Roy, are you right or wrong? I'm going to put down what you say.'

"Put it Down."

"Roy said 'I don't know what to do.' Then turning his eyes toward heaven and said 'put it down I'm saved.'

"We had a grand and glorious meeting then and were living on the Lord's love when they found us."

The men had carried no food into the mine and had only a small supply of water, but when it gave out they caught drippings in a tobacco can. They had four matches between them and their carbibe miners' lamps and by burning the lamps one at a time they maintained a little light for a long time. They did not know how long, for as one of them said they lost count of time and were glad of it. It was not so hard to wait when they did not count the days.

The others, whose stories were along the same lines as that of Cobb, agreed that nobody lost hope of being rescued except Castiller, and he gave his comrades final instructions for care of his family in event he died before rescue came. The men were cheered most of the time by the sound of the drills, which three impatient squads of workers were driving under direction of engineers and shortly before they finally were reached they saw a light.

"Crime Trust" Leader Pays With His Life

MARYLAND PENITENTIARY, BALTIMORE, Md., Aug. 13.—(AP)—Richard Reese Whittemore, head of a now shattered "million-dollar crime trust," was hanged this morning for the murder 18 months ago of Robert H. Holtman, a Maryland penitentiary guard.

BALTIMORE, Md., Aug. 12.—(AP)—Richard Reese Whittemore tonight was prepared to die, the last slender thread of hope on which his life rested having been snapped by United States Supreme Court Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes' denial of a writ of error at his Beverly Farms, Mass., summer home today.

The bandit leader, who fatally wounded Robert H. Hamilton, a guard, in an escape from Maryland penitentiary on February 20, 1925, took the final advice of the decision calmly.

"That was all I expected," he said.

Whittemore was convicted of first degree murder on May 21, after having escaped conviction by a jury disagreement in Buffalo, N. Y., where he was tried for murder in connection with the killing of a bank messenger during a $93,000 holdup.

Wife Collapses.

Mrs. Margaret Whittemore, the condemned man's wife, was in a state of collapse when word reached her that the last possible move had failed.

The hour of the execution was set for a few minutes after midnight, eastern standard time.

Whitemore asked that his last meal be an Italian dinner and Warden Patrick J. Brady granted the request.

Although at outs with the law from the age of short trousers, Richard Reese Whittemore's criminal career ieft him cast in a petty role until, at the age of 25 and with a noose dangling above his head, he crowded into the space of a few months most of the highlights of a fiction bandit's life.

He was a comparatively little-known gunman, with a prison reputation for being "hard," when, serving a term for burglary, he walked out of Maryland penitentiary on Feb. 20, 1925, with the keys of a mortally wounded guard. Thirteen months later, when a New York police night patrol picked him up as a suspicious character after a chase at guns' points from the door of a night club, he was the active head of one of the east's most successful criminal organizations of recent years.

Whittemore goes to the gallows for slaying the guard—Robert H. Holtman—the first important act for his brief, spectacular career. Holtman, his skull crushed by an iron bar, died two days after Whittemore escaped. Whether Whittemore actually was guilty of other murders laid by police at his door or that of his gang, may never be known.

Set Million Goal.

Baltimore, New York, Chicago, Cleveland and Buffalo were included in the Whittemore gang's scope of operations. Many lucrative hauls were made from New York jewelry establishments. The "million dollar crime trust," so dubbed later by police because of the fabulous goal set, and reported nearly reached when the crime organization was shattered, revealed itself as an almost entirely self-supporting crime unit when police dug into its secrets. It had its own private "fences" for receiving stolen goods and maintained its own channels of disposal, realizing a much higher profit on its loot than is usually the case. The profits were apportioned among the gang members, the apportionment being made by Whittemore, who personally superintended its operations. So successful had the gang's system been, that police at first declined to make public the details of a confession of Anthony Paladino, one of Whittemore's henchmen, on the grounds that it set a dangerous example.

The gang's breakup was rapid after Whittemore and two companions visited the Charlie night club in the early morning of March 19, last. He was trailed from the door by a roving patrol, forced from his automobile several blocks away, and taken to headquarters, where his identify was established. The remainder of the gang were rounded up one by one, largely through a police watch on Mrs. Margaret Whittemore, the bandit chief's wife, who was living with him in a downtown hotel.

TANK BLAZES FOR 9 HOURS

Burns in Midst of Prairie's 142-Tank Farm At Coffeyville

COFFEYVILLE, Kan., Aug. 12.—(AP)—The 35,000-barrel tank which was struck by lightning on the Prairie Oil and Gas company's tank farm two miles northeast of Caney this morning completed its ninth hour of burning without having boiled over at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon. They usually boil over within six or eight hours, oil men say.

The tank was full of crude oil when the shaft of lightning wrenched the top off and set it afire. The explosion was terrific. The present loss is estimated at $70,000. There was 142 tanks on the farm, the nearest about 300 feet from the burning tank. FOUR PISTOL SHOTS WOUND MRS. GEORGE

Corpus Christi Woman Held Following Encounter Here

DIVORCE INVOLVED

Four soft-nosed bullets from a pistol of Mrs. Perry Sherman of Corpus Christi may spell death for Mrs. Mary George of Wichita Falls, following an encounter between the two on upper Bluff street at dusk Thursday night in which Mrs. Sherman shot six times a few minutes after she had first seen the other woman coming up the street with P. J. Sherman, her husband. Mrs. George was at the general hospital late Thursday night, where, following an operation it was reported that she was resting well but that her condition might easily become serious.

Mrs. George herself spent the night at the city jail and will be turned over to the county this morning when, it was stated Thursday night by H. B. Bishop of the district attorney's office, charges will be filed against her, dependent upon Mrs. George's condition. P. J. Sherman, Mrs. Sherman's husband, was held, booked for investigation.. Police say Mrs. Sherman told them she saw her husband and Mrs. George coming up Bluff street from the porch of the residence at 2004 Bluff street just as it was getting dark, that she went up stairs to her room then she said, secured a .25 calibre off-brand automatic which she had in a valise and came back down to the porch.

Hid Behind Pillar.

"There I hid behind one of the pillars, she was said to have told officers, and when they came up even with me I shot. I jumped down off the porch then and shot some more.

The husband himself had little to say. "Mrs. Sherman," he stated, "had been jealous of me since last April. Her suspicions were ill founded. There was nothing to them."

According to the story told by Mrs. Sherman to officers she and her husband were married in 1910 and had lived for a long while at Corpus Christi, with an occasional period spent in Wichita Falls. "He met Mrs. George last summer when we were here," she declared.

Tells of Divorce Case.

She declared that in April, while she was in a hospital at Kerrville her husband came to Wichita Falls. On August 3, she related, she was summoned here to answer a divorce suit which had been filed by him. Upon her contest the suit was dropped, she stated.

Since the dismissal of the divorce proceedings she had stayed in Wichita Falls and had occasionally seen her husband and Mrs. George, she said.

She told police that she had received letters threatening her in the event that she should come here, and that there had been phone calls and telegrams to that effect also.

"Where did you get the gun," she was asked.

Her answer was "It belongs to my father-in-law. Just before I came up here I found it in his clothes and brought it along for protection. I had never taken it out of the valise though until tonight.

Mrs. Sherman is a well appearing dark complectioned woman of medium height, age 37. She is the mother of two boys age 14 and 16. Her husband is 36 years old, she told officers. Mrs. George is about 35 years of age and the mother of two nearly grown boys.

Englund, of Wittenberg, Wis., Mrs. C. P. Sorness of Reedsport, Ore., and Mrs. E. J. Torvie of electra and fifteen grandchildren.

She was the daughter of John and Ingerborg Swenbolt, pioneer Norse-Americans who spent their entire lives in the betterment of America. The book "Norse-American Women," says she was a "mother to the orphans, and a friend to the friendless."

Mrs. Homme was born in Pine Lake, Waukiska county, Wis., in 1845, and lived for fifteen years in Winchester, Wis., but upon the death of her husband, Rev. E. J. Homme, she lived with her children, part of the time in Glendale and Minneapolis, Minn., and at last coming to Electra.

Fifty years afo Rev. Homme, husband of the deceased, endowed a beautiful orphanage for the Lutheran Children of America which still stands as a silent tribute to the splendid work, and several brick buildings, on a wonderful campus in Wittenburg, is still ranked as one of the best known institutions of its kind in this country, not only in the state of Wisconsin. This is known as the Home Institution at the present time.

Liquor Issue Forecast for Ohio

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Ohio may become the battle ground of another wet and dry political fight this fall as a result of the primary victory of former Senator Atlee Pomerene, democratic nominee for the United States senate.

Pomerene, long regarded as a liberal, defeated his Anti-Saloon league indorsed opponent, Miss Florence E. Allen, Ohio supreme court justice, by a goodly margin in Tuesday's primary, and now stands ready to campaign against his republican opponent, Senator Frank B. Willis.

That Willis will force the wet and dry issue to Pomerene was regarded as likely by political leaders, in as much as Willis had Anti-Saloon league backing in the primary.

Pomerene after serving 12 years as an Ohio senator was defeated in 1920 by Senator S. D. Fess in the republican landslide.

There are now over 200 Catholic nuns from Mexico here. Arrangements are being made to place a number of them in convents and hospitals in this country.

Question of more reparations.

READ THIS FIRST.

MERRY LOCKE, pretty and twenty and gay, falls in love with ANTHONY GAINES, a young lawyer. Merry has been a flirt from the time she was sixteen. But with Tony Gaines she is really serious.

Shortly after they meet, Tony wants her to elope with him. But Merry, who cares so much for him that she wants to be perfectly honest with him, confesses to him how fickle she has always been. So they decide to wait six months before they marry, in order that she may be sure of herself.

Merry falls in her course at business school and decides to take it over. But her father dies suddenly and MOMS, her mother, is left with four expensive daughters on her hands. The only one of them who is earning anything is CASSIE, who is stenographer to MORLEY KAUFMAN, a broker with whom she's in love. HELEN, the oldest sister, marries. JINNY, the youngest, stays at home to help Moms with the work.

MERRY finally takes a position in LILLIE DALE'S little beauty shop. It pays only ten dollars a week, and Cassie points out to Merry that if Tony really loved her he wouldn't let her work, but would marry her at once. She adds that he would have given her a ring, too, if he really "meant business." The first doubt of Tony and his sincerity, creeps into Merry's mind.

The next night his mother returns to town from a long visit and Tony breaks a date with Merry to spend the evening with his mother. Cassie warns Merry that if he honestly intended to marry her he would have brought his mother to call on her, at once. "He's just kidding you along," says Cassie, and Merry begins to believe her. That night she lets DERRICK JONES, a college youth who lives next door, make love to her, as he often did during the months before she met Tony Gaines. The following night Tony gives her his mother's old engagement ring, and Merry heart-brokenly confesses that in her jealousy and doubt she let Derrick kiss her.

Tony goes away. A week later Merry goes out with BILL ERSKINE, a friend of Morley Kaufman, who tells her that Tony is going away to Montana to live. One night a letter comes for her. Moms tells her it is on the hall table.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XX.

But the letter was not on the hall table.

There was nothing on it but Merry's own little brown handbag and the dog-eared telephone book.

She looked under the handbag and shook out the pages of the phone book. No letter.

She got down on her hands and knees, and hunted for it on the carper under the table.

Then, at last, she pulled out the table itself from the wall to see if the letter could have fallen behind it. But it had not.

"Moms!" Merry called at the top of her voice, "there isn't any letter here for me."

"Of course there is," Moms called back in an annoyed tone. "Wasn't I just looking at it, not ten minutes ago? It was right there on that table!"

She came into the hall, untying her gingham apron.

"I'll find it for you," she said briskly. "You go out and eat your supper while it's nice and hot."

Merry's supper was laid on a clean white cloth at one end of the kitchen table. Baked beans in a red stone jar. Vegetable salad, crisp and cool. Fresh biscuits and a tall glass of iced tea.

The kitchen was cool, and filled with the pale glow of the fading sunset. Beyond the screen door the backyard stretched green and smooth to the little vegetable garden that Dad had always tended so lovingly.

Jinny was sprinkling it now.

Every now and then she called over the back fence to Derrick Jones, who was cutting the grass in the next yard.

"That's a nice warm job you've picked for yourself, Jonesy," Merry heard her say to him in her shrill young voice, "I'll cool you off—" Her words ended in a giggle.

The next minute she aimed the garden hose at Derrick, soaking him from head to foot with the flying stream of water.

Then, as he started for her, she dropped the hose with a wild shriek and dashed down the driveway. Derrick, dripping wet, jumped the back fence and streaked after her.

A minute or two later there were screams of laughter from the front porch where he had evidently caught her.

"Children!" thought Merry, wondering what she had ever seen in Derrick Jones. He was two years older than she. But compared to Tony Gaines, he seemed to her the most callow he-flapper under the sun.

"Moms is right," she said to herself. "A girl is a grown woman at twenty, but a man the same age is nothing but a child."

While she was stacking her dishes in the sink Moms called to her.

"I can't imagine what's happened to that letter," she said, shaking her head in a puzzled sort of way. "I've looked high and low for it—and it's just nowhere to be seen! I can't imagine what's become of it!"

She looked around the shabby hall with its faded carpet and cherry-colored woodwork, as if it could tell her where the letter was.

Then she looked back at Merry.

"It was a long white envelope with the name of some law firm in the Shalimar building, printed up in one corner of it—" she began.

"The Shalimar building!" Merry cried, breathlessly. "The Shalimar building! Why, then it must have been from Tony! Oh, I've GOT to find it now!"

Once more she frantically shook out the worn pages of the telephone book. Once more she hunted all over the floor, lifting everyone of the small rugs that covered the places where Moms had mended the old carpet.

Then she wheeled around suddenly, to the telephone and gave the number of Tony's house.

"I'll call him up and ask him what was in the letter," she said to Moms, one hand over the mouth-piece.

Moms shook her head and tightened her thin lips.

"I'd never call him up," she said grimly. "I'd never call any man!

She made up her mind to bury her pride, and telephone him.

Wait until he calls you up! It never pays to chase men. They like to do all the chasing themselves!"

Merry paid no attention to her. She wasn't listening to her. She was listening only to the sound in her ear—the sound of central ringing Tony Gaines' house.

Her heart, her brain, and every nerve in her body seemed to be waiting for him to answer.

Moms talked on. "If you girls would only listen to what I tell you once in a while you'd get along better," she was saying, as she went around the hall, kicking the rugs back into place. "When I was a girl, did I telephone the young men I knew? I did NOT, let me tell you!"

"They didn't have phones when you were a girl, Moms," spoke up Jinny, coming in from the porch looking flushed and ruffled.

"They did, too!" snapped Moms. "How old do you think I am, for goodness sakes!" And don't you be so pert or you'll go upstairs to bed!"

Merry put one hand over the mouthpiece of the telephone.

"Did you see a letter of mine on that table a while ago, Jinny?" she asked enxiously.

Jinny shook her red head.

"Maybe Cassie did," she answered. "She was sitting here in the hall for quite a while, waiting for Morley Kaufman."

"Where is she now?" asked Merry sharply. "It would be just like her to open that letter and read it. She's so nosey!"

She turned to the telephone as central spoke into her ear. "They do not answer," said central, and with a little groan Merry hung up the receiver.

With slow, dragging feet she went upstairs to her own room.

"Cassie may have put the letter up here for me," she thought; but without much hope. Cassie wasn't given to doing kind acts for anybody.

There was no long white envelope tucked among the bottles and boxes that cluttered the dresser. Nor was it in Cassie's room when Merry went there to look for it.

As she started back to her own room an automobile horn honked hoarsely below the windows. Looking out, Merry saw Derrick backing his "tin can," as he called it, out into the street.

Beside him, proud as a peacock, sat Jinny!

"Now, I just wonder what they're up to," Merry said to herself, a puzzled look in her sea-green eyes.

She watched the little car until it vanished into the leafy tunnel of trees that arched Chester street in the summer time.

Then, with a shrug, she turned back to her mirror and slipped out of the dress she had worn all day.

In the deepening dusk of the room her reflection glimmered like silver. Against its whiteness, Tony Gaines' ring of gold and pearl gleamed brightly. It caught Merry's eye, and a sudden thought flashed into her mind.

His ring! That was why he had written to her! To ask her to send back his ring!

"Well, I just will" Merry found herself saying bitterly, as she held it in her palm and looked down at it. "I'll send it back this very night!"

She went to the head of the stairs.

"Moms!" she called down into the darkness, "have you a little cardboard box that you don't need?"

The screen door slammed as Moms came in from the porch and up the stairs.

"What do you want with a cardboard box?" she asked, curiously, standing in the doorway of Merry's room.

"I want to send this back to Tony Gaines," Merry answered. She held the ring out on the palm of her hand.

Wide-eyed, Moms stared first at it and then at Merry.

"When did he give it to you?" she asked. "Why didn't you show it to me? Why do you keep everything from me as if I were your worst enemy instead of your mother!" Her voice was shaky.

"No, I don't," Merry answered. "I would have told you about this ring—only—only—" She couldn't go on. She shook her head and turned toward the window with brimming eyes and quivering chin.

She was still standing there with her back to the room when her moth-

BOMB BLAST KILLS CHILD

"Dud" Found On Farm Kills Boy and Injures His Pal

HOUSTON, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Bruce Franks, 8-year-old farmer boy, is dead and his brother, Kenneth Franks, 12, is in a serious condition from nervous shock at a hospital here due to the explosion of an old airplane bomb late yesterday on the Franke Farm near Genoa.

The two boys, playing in a hay field, where their father was at work, found two bombs, relics of war days, probably dropped by an Ellington Field aviator in a practice flight.

The father told the boys the bombs were "duds" and considered them harmless. The boys built a fire and attempted to melt the lead from the bombs. The mother and father were watching the boys, when suddenly there was a terrific explosion. The father rushed forward. Both boys stood up, and the parents rejoiced for a moment that the children were unhurt.

Dies In Ambulance

Then the father noticed a piece of the bomb in the shoulder of the younger son. He was bleeding profusely. The father tried to stop the blood and called an ambulance, but the child died from loss of blood before the hospital was reached.

Bruce Franke had a jagged wound in his shoulder and was burned about the face. Kenneth was burned about his face and arms and had a gash in his left cheek.

The airplane bombs were 18 inches long, weighed several pounds and were covered with rust and dirt through exposure to the weather.

Law Investigates

Major B. A. Law, commander of the Thirty-Sixth Division air service of the Texas national guard which traing at old Ellington, said the present training unit of the national guard is not a bomb squadron and the bombs dropped during the war were over the east end of Ellington and not in the direction of the Franke place. He went to the scene of the accident to investigate the circumstances.

RANDALL CO. HARVEST ON

Wheat and Oats Yield In Panhandle County Unusually High

CANYON, Aug. 12.—The wheat and oats harvest has been completed in Randall county, and the yield has been unusually high. The county average for wheat, according to County Agent J. W. Jennings, is fully 27 bushels per acre, with much of the yield far above this.

C. C. Stewart, living a few miles from Canyon, made an average of 44 bushels per acre on 61 acres.

R. D. Gist, although his harvesting as interrupted by rain and hard winds made an average of slightly more than 30 bushels per acre on a 1,000 acre tract. Another farmer made an average of 30 bushels on a 950 acre tract.

"Combines" Used on Farms.

The threshing machine will have little work in Randall county this year, for practically all the wheat was cut with combines, which cut, thresh and grade the wheat for size, and then it was loaded onto trucks and was loaded on trains within a few hours of the time the heads were cut.

Some fields were using as many as four combines at one time, and keeping from six to ten trucks busy hauling the golden grain to the markets.

Favorable Weather.

Most of Randall county had no rain during the harvest. There was little wind, and only a small amount of the rank grain was wasted by falling or getting wet. Due to the use of improved machinery, and the general use of trucks for hauling, there was no labor shortage in this county.

er banged a box down on the dresser, some five minutes later.

"Now, then, Merry!" she began in firm tones, "I want you to turn around here and tell me what's wrong. After all, I'm you're mother, and I've a right to know what's happening in your life. Have you and Tony quarrelled?"

Merry, standing with downcast eyes, nodded her head.

"He was jealous of me," she said, telling her mother only a part of the truth.

Moms nodded. "I thought so!" she cried. "I was sure of it that night when you were out with Morley Kaufman's fat friend—"

"But Tony didn't know I was out with Bill Erskine," Merry cut in. "I haven't seen him since then."

Moms stared. "Of course, he knew you were out that night," she said. "Didn't I tell you he was here that night?"

Merry groaned. "No—you never told me," she answered, her voice heavy with despair. "Oh, Moms, why didn't you tell me about his being here?"

"Well, I suppose because I forgot about it!" her mother snapped. "It's a wonder that I don't forget to breathe with all the work and worry I have lately! Why, yes, Tony was here that night. He came right after you drove away, and I told him where you were. I had to tell him. He asked me."

"Everything's against me," she thought. "First, Moms forgets to tell me Tony was here. Then he writes to me and the letter gets lost. I must be jinxed!"

But there was still the telephone. Still the chance of getting him on the wire, to ask him to come over to see her.

"If I could just see him for a minute or two!" she thought, desperately. For she was sure that once she was in Tony's arms she could make him forgive her—make him take her back—make him take her with him to Montana, or wherever it was that he was going.

She made up her mind to bury her pride, and to beg him to take her back.

"He's just got to! He's just got to!" she said to herself as she flew downstairs once more.

"Oh, Lord, please let him be at home! Let him answer the telephone!" she found herself praying silently, as she gave the number of the Gaines house. "I've just got to talk to him tonight!"

Almost at once a woman's voice spoke in her ear.

"Yes?" it asked quietly.

"May I speak to Mr. Gaines—to Mr. Anthony Gaines?" Merry's breathless voice shook.

"Who is this, please?" the cool voice asked, and Merry told who she was.

"Oh, yes, Miss Locke! Well, Tony's gone out of town, Miss Locke," the voice went on. "You knew he was going out to Montana, didn't you? He left the house not more than an hour ago."

Merry never knew what she answered. She never remembered hanging up the receiver and stumbling out onto the front porch.

Her mother found her there an hour afterward, face downward on the cushions. She shook her by the shoulders gently.

"Wake up, Merry," she said. "You can't sleep out here. You'll get your death of dampness in this night air."

Merry sat up. "I wasn't asleep," she answered in a cold, dull voice, and went upstairs.

"Well, I've nothing left now but my job," she said aloud to her reflection in the mirror. "But—I should worry!"

She was too broken-hearted to know that she was. Too broken-hearted to cry, even! She felt nothing but a great weariness, like a runner after a long race.

She got into bed and slept dreamlessly all night. That night marked the finish of something sweet and fine that had touched her life with magic. Something that never came again.

RUM ROW ON ITS LAST LEGS

Andrews Sees Severe Blow To Whole Bootleg Industry

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Rum row faces immediate extinction and bootleggers have been dealt a severe blow in the sale of their home products, in the opinion of General Lincoln C. Andrews, who has just returned from negotiating an agreement with Great Britain to curb rum running.

The agreement General Andrews believes is the first of its importance ever to be reached through non-diplomatic channels.

"Instead of trying to come to an understanding through diplomatic correspondence which is very difficult to understand some times, and very slow process at best. The British government out of their natural sense of law and order were good enough sports to invite us to come and sit around a table with them and clear up these matters in this novel way," said General Andrews.

While the general refused to discuss the nature of the agreement arrived at with Great Britain, reports that the conference was "125 per cent successful," the administrative machinery provided for in the agreement is to be found on 'exchange of information and evidence'" he said "and will tend to stop illegal shipping operations."

The eight recommendations in the agreement have been approved by the British foreign office and by the United States department of state and will go into effect at once, according to General Andrews.

Gas in Whiskey Doesn't Worry Bootleggers at All

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—(AP)—After canvassing the first results of the "government's 'gas' attack on bootleggers, prohibition officials have decided that something more than gasoline must be added to alcohol to make it completely useless for beverage purposes.

At a conference today between Acting Secretary Winston of the prohibition forces and James M. Doran the chief prohibition chemist, Doran reported that the bootlegger's chemists are getting wise to methods of eliminating the gasoline and that some new means of changing the taste of alcohol must be devised.

Saffron Skin from Sour Bile

South Georgian Drives Out Enormous Quantity Sour Bile with Dodson's Liver Tone

After a long period of the worst form of weakness and the terrible feeling of sickness that comes from a system loaded with sour bile, Mr. Sam Puckett says: "When I kept getting those bilious attacks reckon I took enough calomel to kill a mule. Got worse all the time. Finally I turned saffron color all over. My wife happened to read about Dodson's Liver Tone in the Weekly Constitution, so we drove to town and got a bottle. It was like magic. It drove quarts of sour bile out of me as black as ink. From that day I have felt as if I had a new liver, and whenever I begin to feel weary and bilious, with no appetite, a dose of Dodson's Liver Tone puts me to rights."

This wonderful, quick-action, liver starter ought to be in every household, if for no other reason than to stop the use of dangerous calomel. Dodson's Liver Tone is pleasant to take, even for children, and never makes you sick.

Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by every druggist who sells it. A large bottle costs but a few cents, and if it fails to give easy relief in every case of liver sluggishness and constipation, you have only to ask for your money back.—Adv.

COUNTY BROKE; PRISON OPENS

Lack of Funds for Trial Lets Choate Go Free

GAINESVILLE, Texas, Aug. 12. (AP)—Lack of court funds to pay for a trial in Love county, Oklahoma, has given liberty to Tom Choate, held in connection with the killing of Dr. J. V. Jenkins, Gainesville, dentist, on his ranch near Burneyville, Okla., in November, 1925.

Choate was released on bond of $2,500 Thursday after being in jail at Marietta, Okla., for nine months. No date for the trial has been set because the county court's funds are said to be exhausted.

Dr. Jenkins was shot while he slept in his ranch house. In a death bed statement, he named Choate as his assailant. Later Mrs. Jenkins, Sam Carpenter and Tom Jefferson, the latter two employed on the Jenkins ranch were arrested. Jefferson is said to have stated to officers that he fired the shots at Jenkins but owing to the doctor's death bed statement that Choate fired the shots authorities have been holding both men. Mrs. Jenkins is out on bond and Carpenter was released.

A ROMANCE OF OLD KENTUCKY

KENTUCKY is a land of political romance today as it was a land of heroic pioneer romance in the days of Daniel Boone and his pathfinders and Indian fighters. Kentucky is the land of mountains as well as the land of valleys.

Kentucky has its land of mountain fastnesses as well as its blue grass regions. Kentucky was the home of Jno. W. Langley. He was 10 times the congressman from that state.

His district is made up of mountain counties, and the mountaineers are republicans almost to a man. Indeed the tenth district is one of the great republican strongholds of the state which was half union and half confederate in the days of civil strife.

John W. Langley is a convict. He was given a term in the federal penitentiary by a jury in federal court for conspiring to violate the federal prohibition act. He was taken from his seat in the house to a cell in the pen at Atlanta. He is there today.

He resigned before he put on the stripes of a convict. His wife, Mrs. Edith Langley, asked the people of the district to elect her and MC to fill the unexpired term of her husband. She lost by a small majority.

Then she announced as a candidate for the regular term, and in the primary balloting she won over her male rival by a large majority. Now she will be elected to congress unopposed by an independent or a democrat. There are no democrats to speak of in the 10th district of Kentucky.

Democrats, according to the newspaper correspondents, are as scarce as angels visits in that district and almost as rare as white black birds. John W. Langley, convict, is the editor of a prison newspaper.

He is a man of considerable ability and for 20 years he has beaten down all opposition in his district until the pro sleuths of the federal department of justice, caught him in their drag net. Now while he is finishing his term in the penitentiary, his wife will be holding down his old seat in the house of congress.

It was sentiment that won for her the nomination. It was friendship for the man in the prison cell. She is not a lawmaker. She is ignorant of the fundamentals of government. She has had no training for public service. She knows nothing of economics. As a lawmaker she will be as valueless as a pet kitten.

John W. Langley has protested his innocence all along and appealed to his former constitutents to elect his wife to a seat in congress until he has been released from the penitentiary and able to begin life all over again.

She will take down $10,000 a year. She will have two secretaries to assist her in her role of federal lawmaking. Now why should sentiment rule in the selecting of public servants? Because a man is a convict there is no reason why his wife should be elected to office unless she has the qualifications to fill that office.

There is no reason why the widow of a dead lawmaker should be sent to Washington to assist in making the laws unless she has had training along the proper lines and has some of the qualifications necessary for public service.

STOCKMEN DEMAND RATES

STOCKMEN demand lower freight rates. Indisputable records and statistics of western railroads which carry 90 per cent of the livestock of the country, show that livestock is paying at least 66 per cent more per hundred pounds on an average for equal distances hauled than the average of all freight, is the claim made by Sam H. Cowan, attorney for the American National Livestock association. Similar evidence further shows, according to Cowan, that it cost the carriers no more per hundred pounds for equal distances to haul livestock than the average of all other freight.

For this and sundry other reasons the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers association and a number of other livestock producers organizations have petitioned the Interstate Commerce Commission for a reduction of livestock rates to the pre-war level. Furthermore the legal voice of the livestock association says, although the commission recently denied the western carriers petition for a general rate increase of 5 per cent, which case had been consolidated with the livestock interests' complaint, the complaint of the livestock producers has not been dealt with by the commission and the livestock rate matter stands just where it did when the Hoch-Smith resolution was passed by congress.

It is the contention of the livestock associations and their attorneys that the livestock industry has recovered somewhat from the post war depression but still is carrying a considerable burden that can be lightened only by a return to pre-war freight rates. If there is a return to pre-war freight rates, then there will be a return to pre-war wage schedules for the million employes of the American railways. Now how will it be possible for the Interstate Commerce Commission to bring about the change in rates and wages.

CALIFORNIANS IS THE THING

CALIFORNIANS know the value of publicity. They have sunshine to sell and they spend millions of dollars advertising their product. California politicians know the value of publicity. John B. Elliott of Los Angeles has the center of the stage. That is, he had it for a second and then he lost it. He is a candidate for United States senator. He needed publicity. He discovered a plot of New York democrats to capture all the offices in California and tammanyize the golden coast state.

This is not all. He discovered a plot in all the Pacific coast states and all the Rocky Mountain states to make the voters the pawns of the political leaders of New York, the political leaders of the democratic persuasion. John B. is a wonder. He hibernates in the shadow of the McAdoo palace, and he let loose his bolt in order to save all the mountain states and the Pacific coast states from the political domination of the New York democrats.

A pipe dreamer, fresh from a Chinese opium joint in San Francisco, could not of played it better. California is a republican state, that is, when Hiram Johnson is a republican. When Hiram sharpens his tommyhawk and leads his braves on the warpath, there is a chance for the democrats to pick up a governor or a senator. Hiram may put on his war paints later in the campaign. If so that political blood is letting will be the order of the day.

As for the fascinating and facetious John B. Elliott, his chance for winning a seat in the United States senate is as remote as the election of Major Patricio OKeefe to the high office of the governor of Texas. Speaking of politics, Senator Thaddeus W. Carraway of Arkansas let out a whoop the other day that was very significant.

Thaddeus declared that Governor Al Smith did not have a look in, and as for William Gibbs McAdoo, he isn't even a possibility. Thaddeus is of the opinion that the republicans will pick a mediocre for the head of their ticket and the democrats will pick an unknown of the same intellectual weight as the hand-picked standard bearer of the republican leaders.

Thaddeus thinks he speaks for millions of democrats, including those of Arkansas. He has been nominated for another term of six years by his admiring fellow citizens. And all the while Calvin Coolidge smiles and, like Brer Rabbit, "says nuffin."

SPEAKING OF ADVANCEMENT

SAN ANTONIO is more than a city of Spanish-American romance, more than the home of the Alamo, and more than a place where the sunshine and song and music and mirth are ever in evidence. San Antonio has 700 factories in operation and 100 have been added during the past year. In the near future Texas will be more than a billion dollar agricultural state. It will be a $2,000,000,000 manufacturing state. This is the way it is written in the book of destiny.

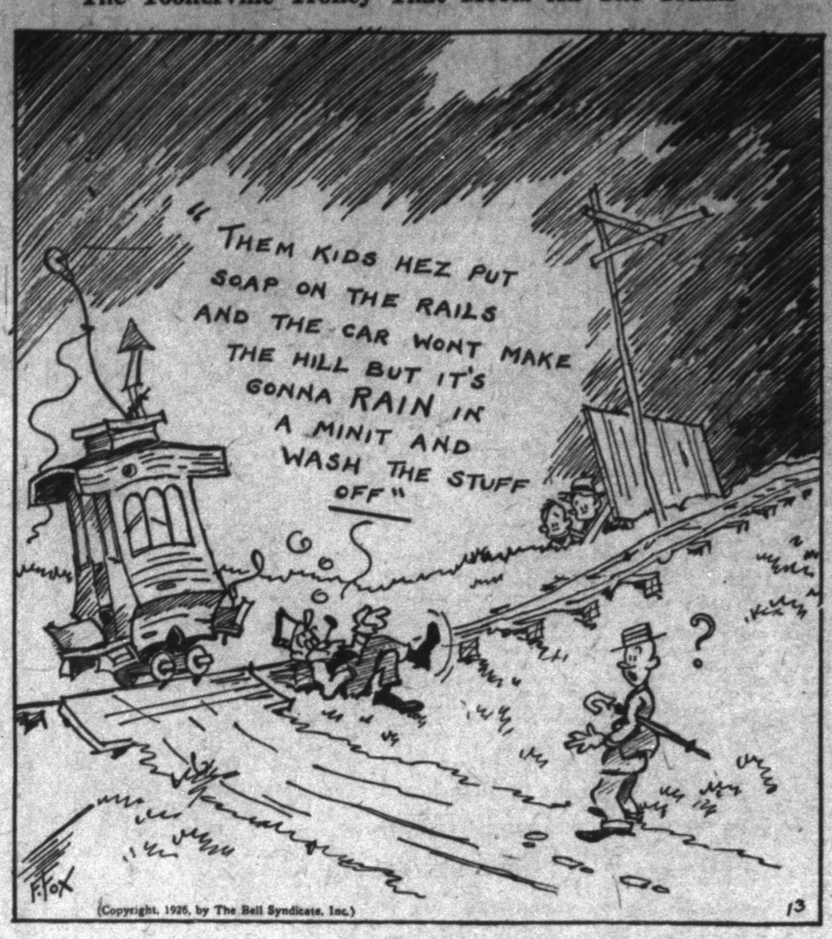

PAROLES FOR PRISONERS

NOW it is said that 897 convicts were paroled from the three federal penitentiaries in a year. This shocked attorney general, John Garibaldi Sargeant of Vermont, and when paroles for 206 convicts recommended by the federal parole board were handed to Garibaldi, he reversed the recommendations of the parole boards.

John Garibaldi is a Vermonter. He believes in a high tariff and good trusts. He is of the opinion there are no criminal trusts in existence. However, he does not believe that a rum runner should be paroled. He does not believe that a rum seller should be paroled. Rum running is a high crime in the eyes of John Garibaldi and rum selling should learn the culprit on the gallows high or behind the bars of a penitentiary for his natural life.

There are 7,000 convicts made so by federal courts on McNeil Island, Cal. John Garibaldi is going to keep them there to make atonement for their sins and their crimes against the law. No more paroles.

CHAPTER THIRTY

"Good heavens!" Lou cried. "You don't mean—"

"I do mean. Just like that, our cute little friend, the assistant state manager. He put an old bathrobe around me with his own paternal hands, and then took my arm and hurried me off toward the stairs while I was frantically tying the cord around my waist to hold the filthy thing together. The curious thing about it—I see that now—is that I didn't even put up a protest. But I must have been completely dazed. Certainly I was about as clearheaded and effectual in my actions there for the next three or four minutes as if I'd been a badly frightened child of four.

"As I try to remember it now—I never in my life was so confused about anything—it seems to me that the egg was trying to be nice to me in his quaint way. He was talking, I remember that—in a nasal tone that was meant to be fatherly—or at least avuncular. Out of the side of his mouth. And with a horribly intimate manner."

Bee made an unhappy wry face. And Lou realized then that she was near to crying. "As if we understood each other, we two, and ought to be great friends. There was something about these rehearsals costing fifty dollars a minute, and we mustn't keep Mr. Czevek and Mr. Green waiting. And all the time I was submitting. Just letting myself be swept along. The first thing I knew we were on the stage and over by the big frame. Czevek came wearily over to me. He had a little strip of golden gauze in his hand. Just a narrow strip. Perhaps two yards of it."

"What was that for?"

"That, my dear child, was the costume."

"No?"

"Yes. Now you listen. I've got to get this off my chest. Czevek slung the gauze over his shoulder and picked me right up and stood me on a box in the frame. I heard the Egg call for lights, and then the baby spots that were set inside the top of the frame came on and blinded me. I heard Czevek say, 'Just stand here, my dear.' He and I seemed to understand each other, too, in a gently intimate way—and then he cooly untied that rope around my waist and began taking off the bathrobe, and I—hit him."

"You—"

"Hit him. Right in the face. I don't know how boxers ever protect their thumbs. Mine's a fairly sprained. She rubbed it with an aggrieved look. "But, Oh, I hit him. You see. 'Id come to."

"I gather as much."

"Yes. I'd come to. I hi thim hard. He just went back a step and put his hand to his nose and looked at me. The Egg shouted something and came rushing over. The girls in the bathrobes squealed and huddled some. I don't know where Ralph was. I rather think he'd had the decency to keep out of it altogether. I got down off the box and told the great artist what I thought of him."

"I'm afraid you didn't have much of a case."

"Didn't have any. Of course, I'd agreed to everything. They all thought I knew what I was doing. But I didn't dwell on that side of it then. I was too mad. It was partly the atmosphere. It came over me all at once. The thought that I was to be exposed in that horribly conspicious way to interest the visiting buyers from Cincinnati and Kansas City. I must have made quite an attractive picture with my face red. . . . I was crying—and clutching at the bathrobe to hold it on me, bawling out the great artist with about the urbane graciousness of a drunken street walker. And then I got down the stairs somehow and shut myself in the dressing room and put on my clothes. It didn't help any to realize that I had to go back across that stage to get out. But I did it, as soon as I could stop crying and that awful laughing. The Egg caught me at the stage door and said that Mr. Green wanted to talk to me, but I broke away from him and ran up the alley. I went up to Central Park and tried to put in an hour or two trying to walk it off. Then I guess I dropped in at a picture house. Finally I came down to the rooms and changed my clothes. One thing's sure, I sha'n't try that flapper game again. Even for a living. I'll scrub floors first. And now, here I am. Lou, I'm wrung . . . ."

The upshot of the little experience appears to be that I don't belong in Broadway shows. I don't quite know where I do belong or how I'm going to keep alive, but—"

"Of course they're not all like that," said Lou.

"No, but—"

"You said a thing awhile back"—Lou, musing—"that stuck in my mind. You said: 'There's just one healthy force in the human critter, and that self-interest,' and you added something like this: 'If everybody'd look out for himself and only for himself, there'd be a lot fewer people needing help.'"

WHAT TODAY MEANS TO YOU

BY MARY BLAKE.

Leo.

Today's planetary aspects are adverse, until the evening, when they show a decided improvement. Nothing of an extraordinary nature should be essayed today, and the greatest good will be achieved by concentration on the daily customary duties. The feelings that will be engendered by the conditions will not, if allowed to gain control, conduce to either harmony or peace. Irritability will be sensed, and there will be even present a tendency to make a mountain out of a molehill, to the detriment of your own disposition and to the discomfiture of those around you. In the evening, quiet and peaceful relaxation—both mental and physical—will give good results.

Children born today are destined, according to the signs, to experience a variety of ailments during their infancy and early childhood. Regular and proper nutrition will rob most of these ailments of any serious character but, until well along in their 'teens, they will require more than ordinary care and watchfulness in their early days, thye will be peevish and querulous and difficult to manage as, however, they develop physically, they will become less self-centered, and more interested in others than in themselves. They will not be lacking in ambition and, gifted with persistency, promise to be fairly successful.

If today is your birthday, you are very reliable and dependable and your trustworthiness is cheerfully conceded by all who know you. In addition to these outstanding characteristics, you are determined and energetic. Your chief motive in working so consistently for success is not the material reward that usually awaits those who persevere, but rather is it the glory of achievement; the satisfaction of "something attempted, something done." You are always keen to excel above all others in anything that you tackle and your aims are far-reaching, and your ideals are high. You temperament, although you assume an outward air of indifference, is a very sentimental one and, fortunately for the happiness of your home life, you, amongst and with those that are dear to you, let yourself go. You are sympathetic nad large-hearted. You would rather help the undeserving than run the risk of refusing assistance to the deserving.

Successful people born this date are:

Mrs. Lucy Stone, reformer.
Felix Adler, educator and reformer.
Henry L. Abbot, military engineer.
Arthur S Hickley, inventor.
Morris Jastrow, philologist.

Questions From the World of Love Answered by a Noted Authority

"No Woman Has Yet Arrived or Shows Any Sign of Arriving at the Point of Grace Where She Can Behold Another Person Making a Pie Without Putting Her Finger in It," Observes Dorothy Dix of Her Sex.

Every now and then I am forcibly reminded of the fact that the millennium will have arrived when we learn to mind our own business.

But it will be an Eveless Eden without a single woman in it.

For no woman has yet arrived or shown any signs of arriving at the point of grace where she can behold another person making a pie without putting her finger in it.

This has always been her bane. She has broken her heart over other people's sorrows. She has lost sleep over other people's worries. She has brought on more nervous prostration trying to run other people's affairs, and thereby stirred up more heart burnings and bitterness and strife, than all other causes combined.

Not being able to mind one's own business is a distinctly feminine mania. The average man feels that he has about all he can do to run his own affairs and trouble enough of his own without borrowing his neighbor's. The average woman attends to her business in the intervals when she isn't trying to manage other people's.

And the queer part of it is that by some quirk of feminine logic this unwarranted meddling in other people's affairs is accounted a virtue.

A woman's definition to another woman who is a selfish creature is one who attends strictly to her own business and doesn't bob in with some remedy of her own when the children next door have the croup.

This inability to tend to her own business and leave other people to run theirs is at the root of the servant problem. We are always wondering why men can keep their employes when housewives can't keep theirs. It is because when a man hires a clerk he gives him freedom to do his work pretty much as he pleases so long as he gets satisfactory results, but a woman's can't do that. She stands over her servants while they are at work with a continual "do this" and "do that" until she drives them crazy.

It is because there are too many cooks that so much good broth is spoiled, and if the mistress would attend to her affairs a little more in the house, and let her maids run theirs in the kitchen, she wouldn't have to get up so many mornings and get the breakfast because the servant lady had taken herself and her exasperated feelings to some other meddling housekeeper.

PRINCE TURNS SCIENTIST

Wales Gets Away With Learned Paper at London.

LONDON, Aug. 12.—(AP)—The royal family chaffed the Prince of Wales over his inditing of an address to be made before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, but the ubiquitous feir-apparent to the British throne won plaudits from the sages. Sir Oliver Lodge said the fear of the royal family that the prince might make a mess of the address was disproved by his able efforts

Lyrics of Life

By Douglas Malloch

LIKE BROTHERS AND MEN

A fellow can follow the wide world alone,
When the sea's like a pond, when the harbor is known,
But the morn brings a wind and the sea feels a gale,
And then there is needed a man for the sail,
A man for the rigging, a man for the wheel,
And even a man in the cabin to kneel.
The wind from the east starts to whistle again,
And then we must face it like brothers and men.

And life's like the sea: though a fellow can fare
The valleys of pleasure, a devil-may-care,
Heed little of counsel, care little for kin,
The wind turns around, and the shutters blow in.
It's all very well when it's all very well,
And then there's a different story to tell.
For grief at the window is sobbing again,
And then we must face it like brothers and men.

Then you I'll be needing, and you needing me;
We sail life together, the same as the sea,
Our money won't help us, our satins won't save,
When a storm breaks the heart as a storm breaks the wave.
A fellow can follow the wide world along,
When the sea's like a pond and the harbor is known,
But time brings us many a trouble again,
And then we must face it like brothers and men.

What Do You Know About It?

DAILY SCIENCE SIX.

1. Who are the Magyars?
2. Are the Prussians pure Germans?
3. Are the Finns Scandinavians?
4. Are the modern Greeks the same as the old Greeks?
5. Are the Turks white?
6. Is the kinship of races determined by similarity of language?

Answers to these questions in tomorrow's Record News.

Tower of Babel.

The Biblical tradition of the origin of language is that the workers on the tower of Babel were halted in their vainglorious task by being stricken not dumb but with each a separate tongue. Science knows no final cause for the differences in language, but it knows that a Chinese baby can learn English as readily as Chinese, so the difference isn't really racial. But closely related races sometimes speak widely different tongues. In the last century all the Slavic races of Europe, many of whom were under the dominance of Germany and Austria, met in a congress to unite their racial and political aims. They found though that their speech was so diverse that the only language they all had in common was German, and so were obliged to hold the congress in the hated tongue.

Now what do you know about that?

Answers to yesterday's questions:

1. Owls and bats have especially keen hearing, with marvelously complex ears.
2. Cats and rats have a most sensitive organ of touch located at the base of their whiskers.
3. Most insects have a very keen scense of smell; they probably smell through their body pores, as they have no real noses.
4. Hawks and eagles have very powerful sight.
5. Owls and to some extent rats have poor sight at least by day.
6. Birds have horny nostrils, and hence not a very good sense of smell.

CAN'T LISTEN TO JAZZ

But How Not to Is Problem for Visiting Music Master.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—(AP)—The enigma of the sphinx seems easy compared with the task laid out for the person who will be assigned to guard the ears of Pietro Masigna from all jazz music during his coming trip to America. The composer has referred to the syncopated blare as "an American abomination," or whatever those words are in his soft Latin language. An agreement has been made to keep all jazz notes from the classical ear, and the contractions of the second part are trying to seek the advice of Ulysses who deafened his crew to the sirens.

THEN AND NOW
By Rogers Terrill

When writing, last November, to the girl I used to love,
I wished her joy down here below and future peace above.
I did not use the honeyed words that I had used before;
I told her I regretted that we two should meet no more.
Though kind, I wrote quite firmly, and I sought to make it plain
That it were best we two should never meet or write again.

But THAT was in November! Now it's August . . . and it's hot!
A warming sun shines brightly on a well remembered spot.
We swam there oft together when our new love was divine,
So now, with summer temperature, I'm dropping her a line.
It opens: "Mary Darling!"—which I think is rather cute—
And in it I request of her my long lost bathing suit!!

OVERHEARD AT THE JENKINS' PICNIC
By Jennie Highham

"Well, we've got a flat tire, so let's stop and eat!"—"Oh, for land's sake! I wish we hadn't started!"—"Take your feet off those jelly rolls!"—"Daddy, what kind of ants are those?"—"Shut up! Who suggested this picnic, anyway?"—"Now look! You've spilled the lemonade in my lap!"—"Mamma, little Jimmy's fallen into the river!"—"Daddy, Clifford mixed poison ivy leaves with the lettuce!"—"Those must have been mushrooms instead of toadstools, because I ate seven and I feel all right!"—"I wanna go home!"—"Oh Daddy, there's part of a spider in your sandwich!"—"This butter tastes funny. It tastes like grease!"—"Great Scott! Then I must have buttered the front wheel of the car!"—"Shut up, now! You suggested this blank, blank outing!"—"Let's go home!"

I'M THE GINK

I'm the gink who insists on telling you of my lost financial opportunities. I tell you of the time I started to put a thousand on margin in something that would have made me thirty thousand. Something always made me miss. I would have made a million if I had invested just a few thousand here in this stock. Of course, I never have and never will make anything. I just like to tell about what my second guess shows might have happened. I make the chances all mine.

OIL INDUSTRY NOW STRONG

Past Seven Months Best The Business Has Known

TULSA, Okla., Aug. 12.—While the position of petroleum is stronger than it has been since the end of the World war, it appears to be taking a slight softening. The statistics show that the first seven months of 1926 were undoubtedly the most prosperous that the industry has enjoyed.

Crude oil production still grows, despite a slowing up in the Texas Panhandle; lower prices for Spindletop on the Gulf coast, and other incidents. Consumption, including exports, continuous large and no real uneasiness is experienced over this development.

Until a few weeks ago it appeared possible that 1926 would see consumption exceed production, thus reversing the form that has prevailed since 1918 of witnessing net oil supply exceed demand. The slowness of production to come from behind made many economists ponder over where new sources of production would be found, but this fear seems now groundless.

Withdrawals of crude from storage for the first five months of 1926 are estimated by W. J. Wollman and company experts at 15,000,000 barrels, and for the past 12 months at 24,000,000 barrels. They report that crude reserves were reduced at the rate of about 100,000 barrels a day for the first five months and now at around 65,000 barrels a day.

BEBE DANIELS AS A SAILOR MISS IN THE PARAMOUNT PICTURE "THE PALM BEACH GIRL"

The things that happen to men who do down to the sea in ships are as nothing compared to the thrilling experiences that befall a country girl who goes down to the bay in speed boats. This can easily be verified by a visit to the Strand theatre, where Bebe Daniels in the title role of "The Palm Beach Girl" churns up the Florida waters at 60 miles an hour.

Here is a comedy that was built for speed and laughs. With Bebe cast as the chief speed-maniac and mirth-provoker, there is plenty of both. As the little country girl suddenly thrust into the society maze of Palm Beach, Bebe has a splendid opportunity to make ample use of her inimitable comedy gifts. Needless to say, her performance is perfection itself, for she plays her part with a blithe buoyancy that is delightful and a seemingly reckless disregard for life and limb that is startling.

From the moment she arrives in Florida to visit her wealthy aunts and is mistaken for a colored girl because her face is smudged, Bebe's troubles begin. Thereafter, they multiply rapidly as she tries to adapt herself to the ways of the smart set, falls in with bootleggers and attempts to operate a speed boat. The high point of hilarity and excitement is reached in the big race, which she wins despite the fact that her boat runs wild and almost wrecks everything in sight.

Interwoven with the strenuous action is a pleasing little romance which comes to a happy climax when Bebe captures the most eligible millionaire bachelor in Palm Beach. Lawrence Gray gives an excellent account of himself as the wealthy and handsome society youth.

Erle Kenton, the director, has given the production a fine finish and dash in keeping with its expensive atmosphere, and the Florida backgrounds are pictorially beautiful. The picture is based on the story by Byron Morgan and the play, "Please Help Emily" by H. M. Harwood. Forrest Halsey is to be congratulated for a smooth and snappy scenario.

BORDER ROAD STIRS JUBILEE

Five Hundred From Magic Valley Celebrate At San Antonio

SAN ANTONIO, Aug. 12.—(AP)—San Antonio and the Rio Grande valley celebrated the realization of a long-time dream Thursday, when some 500 residents of the valley section commingled in an all-day jollification in this city in commemoration of the acquisition of a direct railroad connection between the two cities.

It was a public jubilee over granting by the interstate commerce commission of the application of the Southern Pacific system to extend its San Antonio and Aransas Pass line south from Falfurrias into the heart of the Rio Grande valley.

Fervor was lent to the celebration by the presence of President W. R. Scott, president of the Southern Pacific, and other high officials, who had just been through a long drawn-out fight before the interstate commerce commission for permission to build the line.

The spirit exhibited toward the celebration by the Missouri Pacific system, which as the only line now serving the Rio Grande valley, opposed granting of the application on the ground that no need existed for a new road, was the subject for much favorable comment from all sides. The Missouri-Pacific operated one of the two special trains which were run to accommodate those who wanted to come to San Antonio for the occasion.

Canyon City Man Reaches Border on Way From Mexico

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Commandant General Arnulfo Gomez of Vera Cruz announces that the bandit Vidal Tenorio has been surrounded in the mountains by federal troops. General Gomez has said he intends to get Tenorio dead or alive.

Vidal Tenorio was said in dispatches from Mexico City in May to have been at the head of the bandits who kidnapped J. W. Shanklin of Canyon, Texas, and held him for ransom. Shanklin is chief of the colonizing department of the El Potrero sugar mill in the state of Vera Cruz. The sugar concern is said to have paid 5,000 pesos ransom for his release.

LAREDO, Texas, Aug. 12.—(AP)—J. W. Shanklin, manager of the Hacienda El Portero sugar plantation in the state of Vera Cruz, Mexico, who was captured by Mexican bandits headed by Vidal Tenorio June 1, and held for 20,000 pesos ransom, arrived in Laredo today enroute to Canyon.

Shanklin says he was captured by Terorio and his bandits near the plantation and taken to the mountains. His friends met the bandit's messenger and paid the ransom money in cash and he was released and returned to his plantation about 10 days later.

He says he was not mistreated or tortured by the bandits, as they only held him for ransom. Federal troops came to his rescue and in the fighting that ensued six of the bandits were killed, but Vidal Tenorio, their leader, made his get away.

Trained Animals in Big Circus

Children of this city and vicinity are paying strict attention to the calendar, as the days are numbered and very shortly the Carl Hagenbeck-Great Wallace circus, the largest of all training animal shows, will be in our midst, scattering joy waves among the grown-ups, as well as the kiddies.

The Hagenbeck-Wallace circus is scheduled to give two performances, afternoon and night, on August 16, and the circus tents will be pitched on the grounds at Bateman Addition. Surprise after surprise and novelty after novelty are promised those who attend the circus.

Youngsters are already preparing to rise early on circus day, for it appears that the unloading of the special Hagenbeck trains is one of the seven wonders of the world to them. The grown-ups are also prepared to make their day's work a bit shorter, with the excuse of "taking the children to the circus."

Money has not been spared by the management this year in assembling a program that contains the best of the American as well as the European and Oriental headliners. A city ticket office will be established on circus day at Renfro's Drug store, where tickets will be sold at the same price as charged on the circus grounds.

CLEAR DOG'S CHARACTER

AUSTIN, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Fourteen "character witnesses," most of them members of the Delta Chi fraternity of Texas university in corporation court here, cleared a German police dog of the suspicion of viciousness and Fay Lee, Austin newspaper man, of the charge of keeping a vicious dog.

A driver of a laundry wagon was the complaining witness. He said he filed the charge against Lee, after the dog hat bitten him in the arm.

Lee is a member of the Delta Chi fraternity, and the evidence showed the dog is owned by the fraternity, rather than by Lee alone.

SPUDDERS TAG WACO IN PAIR

Kiefer Turns in 10-2 Win, Estell Cops Second, 11 to 7

By BLONDY CROSS

Base hits, pent up in the Wichita Falls bat pile the day before when Waco and Oscar Tuero held the Spudders to a 1-1 tie, broke their bonds yesterday at the Gardner emporium.

Clubbing Jake Freeze in the first game at a deadly clip and shooting Jimmy Priesmuth, the southpaw, full of holes in the second, Carl Williams' walloping warriors broke under the wire with a double victory. Joe Kiefer, the underslung righthander, copped the opening tiff by a 10-2 score. Tom Estell, the spitter, won the extra attraction by a 11-7 count.

Kiefer was never in danger and probably could have blanked the opposition had he not eased up momentarily in the seventh stanza behind a mammoth Wichita Falls lead.

The punching ability of George LaFayette, Alexander Metzler and Lyman Lamb accounted to the greater extent for the initial victory. LaFayette and Metzler each manufactured three safeties. Lamb got a pair. Lucy and Metzler each homered.

Lamb Gets Well.

Lamb proved the most dangerous man of the afternoon, injecting base biffs at sufficiently opportune stages to drive across a total of eight runs. Hardly had the second game swung way before he combed a second home run off Priesmuth's delivery. Blows of the quadruple variety, incidently, became somewhat tiresome before festivities ceased. The noble athletes developed a sudden mania for parking the ball. Lapan, DeFate, Turgeon and Boggess also contributed non-stoppers during the nightcap.

The demon DeFate, though jungle heaving once, turned in a semi-sensational defensive game at short. Metzler went back on a couple of dirty drives and beat the boys out of near base hits.

Youngster keeping the score board in center field got excited and shoved the first game an inning ahead of itself. After Waco had batted in the eighth everybody made a grand dive for cover, thinking the melee was finished, but the ball players finally were herded back onto the diamond and played it out. Some of the high and lofty minded bugs who were on hand still think the teams batted an extra inning, but as usual, they're all wrong.

Spuds Start Early.

Kiefer turned back the visitors in order for a starter and then the Spudders stepped out and grabbed a couple in the last half of the first. LaFayette opened with a bingle over second and Turgeon coaxed a pass. Jenkins shot a single to center that West nearly shoe-stringed. The blow loaded the sacks. Lamb followed with an arching one-baser to the same sector. LaFayette and Turgeon cantered home, but Tut was nabbed off second on the throw from West to Pratt when the Spudder over-ran the base. Benton bounded into a double erasure, Ussat to Pratt to Shires.

The Spudders cluttered the sacks in the second with singles by Metzler, Query and LaFayette, but there were too many outs sandwiched in between blows for anybody to negotiate the distance to home plate.

Five in Fifth.

Metzler opened the fourth frame with an explosive sock that sent the sphere whistling high over the score board. The blow augured possibly that was to come, for although Spudder guns were silent the remainder of the couplet they errupted sufficiently along with an error and combination of walks in the fifth to manufacture five markers. LaFayette began the procession with a shot to short too hot to handle. Turgeon and Jenkins drew free transportation. Lamb was called out on a fast play, Freeze to Shires, LaFayette scoring. The great Pratt messed up Benton's bounder with result Turgeon tabulated and Rabbit drew a life at first. Metzler followed with a right against the port barrier for two sacks, scoring Jenkins. Benton went to third and came home on DeFate's sacrifice rocket to deep left. Query walked and Kiefer scored Metzler with a single to right center. Freeze was derricked and Henson went to the mound. LaFayette, up his second time during the round, forced Kiefer at second.

Then Lucy Homers.

Jenkins got on in the sixth when Ussat kicked his grounder and scored in front of Lamb's homer to left, bringing the count up to 10-0.

Kiefer slowed down in the seventh and Waco struggled over for a pair of tallies on a double to left by Boggess, an aviation to right by Ussat that went for two bases when Lambie lost the ball in the sun and a single through short by Keyes.

Wichita Falls opened the second game with more fireworks, by Lucy. A walk and an error put Turgeon and Jenkins on, then Lamb stepped into one of Jimmy's wrong-handed slants for a ride over the left field fence.

Waco nudged Estell for a run in the second after two were away on a double by Ussat, a balk and McNamara's single. The home guard pulled right up and scored three more during the stanza. Lapan led off with a full-length four-bagger over the left center wall. Estell walked. LaFayette outfooted a bounder to third and hoofed it clear around to this base when Briscoe's quick throw to first found Pratt counting his money and Shires pulled in. Estell, of course, scored. Turgeon fouled to the bindketch and Jenkins hit one off the end of his bat to left, scoring LaFayette, but was thrown out himself attempting to annex second on the single. Lamb, like all great home run hitters occasionally do, struck out.

Then Choco Does It.

DeFate evaded a goose egg for Wichita Falls in the third by socking a home run after there were two down and it had begun to appear the advance was halted. Sacks were empty at the time of the wallop.

LaFayette doubled against the upper tier of the right garden boundary in the fourth and Turgeon followed with a lofty bit of aviation over the left center fence. These two runs were all for the inning.

The cellar habitues broke out with four base hits which coupled with three wild pitches, an error and a walk produced a quartet of runs in the fifth. West, McNamara and Priesmuth injected singles and Pratt connected for a double. Priesmuth's blow came in the form of a tap over Turgeon's head on rebound when the pitch hit Jimmy's bat while he was endeavoring to dodge.

Henson was shoved into service again at the start of the Spud fifth. He came away shaken but without casulty as far as the inning was concerned, and took a drubbing in the sixth. singles by Lamb and Metzler followed with DeFate's double to left, scoring two runs.

Boggess found West on base in the seventh and biffed Tom four cushions to port. The home run brought Waco's total score up to seven.

That's all.

MARLIN, Texas, Aug. 12.—(AP) The czar of baseball, Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis of Chicago, has taken a hand in the Gulf Coast league controversy H. A. Dupuy, president of the league said in a statement to the Associated Press here Thursday.

President Dupuy announced that he had acceded to a request from Landis that he forward a statement of the affairs of the league made at the time of Dupuy's application for an investigation.

Dupuy recently refused to resign as president of the league as requested by league directors. The organization is composed of Corpus Christi, Laredo, Mission and Victoria

MATTY STILL SITS ON TOP

Welter Champion Weathers Romonoff's Stormy Attack

BY BLONDY CROSS.

Matty Matsuda, the Jap, still reigns unhampered over the welterweight division, or throughout the south and southwest, at least.

The ever-complacent, unemotional gum-chewing Nipponese weathered a stormy attack of toeholds, splits and headlocks flung on him by the tornadic little Billy Romonoff, claimant of the Dixie championship, in the feature melee of the Wichita Falls mat association's weekly card staged last night in a packed and jammed arena at Eleventh and Ohio.

Romonoff had all the better of the early going, in fact, drew first blood, so to speak by copping the initial fall. Belligerent Billy following a series of wrangles with the third man in the ring, wrestled not so heatedly on the return and lost second honors without giving fandom the fast exhibition of battling he had enacted while beating Matsuda in the opening clash.

The writer served in the capacity of referee. During the earlier stages of the fray, Romonoff put a number of extra trimmings to the match by refusing on every occasion to break immediately upon being told to do so while entangled with the ropes. He had to be pulled loose by force.

Blustering Bill is a great showman. At one stage he found himself outside of the ropes. Matsuda charged for him, nevertheless, but at the referee's command retreated to the center of the ring. Just by way, no doubt, of giving the populace a little side attraction, Bill slipped in under the hempen strands and grabbed yours truly by a leg. He broke loose just as quickly as he had applied the hold, backed away from a short open-handed hook to the chin.

Romonoff Quits Ring.

Romonoff, apparently highly insulted, bellowed his disdain for a referee who couldn't keep out of the way and then would deliberately hit a fellow. Sacre! Doggone, Chingow! What an outrage!

Pressed by Matsuda, Romonoff turned to the real business in hand and after scrapping furiously the better part of ten minutes, worked into a standing leg split ala combination jiu jitsu thumb pressure to the side of his opponent's knee and won the fall, pinning the brown-skinned athlete's shoulders. The whole thing took 25 minutes flat.

On the return, Matsuda evened the count in 18 minutes actual grappling, but time was taken out for Romonoff who jumped from the ring with the declaration he would wrestle no longer with the writer refereeing.

Romonoff's sudden decision came after he first had refused to disentangle himself from a mess of arms and legs and ropes, finally was dragged out by the referee and in return struck the referee in the mush with his hand. Nope, he didn't leave because he felt ashamed of himself. He departed because the referee unassumingly retaliated with a few short arm jolts to the collar bone and a couple of opened-handed slaps to Billy's noble brow. A person will forget himself sometimes, especially when another person deliberately slaps him in the face.

Bill vaulted the ropes, declaring refusal "to fight two men at once."

He finally was prevailed on to continue the match, providing "he had to fight only one man," or as the announcer put it, "providing the referee didn't hit him any more."

Get the Gloves.

Romonoff made no agreement not to hit the referee, so at the first opportunity when coming from the ropes he dished out another sideswipe to the map, but received nothing in return. Shortly afterward, Matsuda got across with a combination of a crotch hold and bar arm lock winning the fall.

Then, Romonoff balked again, evidently miffed this time because the referee had NOT returned blow for blow. Matsuda placed salve on his antagonist's feelings by allowing Matchmaker Alec Ross to officiate the third fall.

With a new arbiter on the canvas, Romonoff became imbued with a more ambitious spirit and swarmed all over Nippon's wrestling exponent, forced the Jap into one tight situation after another and seemed several times on the verge of dethroning the welter king. Heretofore, both clever users of flying holds, had checkmated each other at the aerial stuff but suddenly Matsuda slipped over with a flying headlock that intimated what was to come. A few seconds later, the Jap put on the first and only flying mare of the engagement, flipped Romonoff over a shoulder and came down on top of him, pinning him flat. They had wrestled 28 minutes.

Record Wins.

Tommy Record won from Yaqui Joe on default. The Indian and Kentuckian put on an exceptionally fast and hard exhibition all the way. Joe won the first fall in 36 minutes with a body slam, closing with an arm scissors and wrist lock. Record had the better of the return set-to but won in freakish manner. The Indian had raised his opponent on high for any slam, twisted and tripped, falling flat of his back with Record coming down on top with full force. The blow knocked the Yaqui cold. Matsuda, the Indian's trainer and caretaker, refused to let him return for the third fall.

Ted Scott, Canadian middleweight amateur titleholder, beat Big Boy Mitchell in nine minutes and a half with a crotch hold. It was a 10-minute limit curtain raiser.

Dutch Mantell, since he refuses to meet Gorman, should be brought down for Romonoff. The two, no doubt, would pull a hilarious battle and throng the arena with spectators.

Tribe Closes With Sox, Winning, 5-0

CLEVELAND, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Cleveland and Chicago finished their series for the season today, Cleveland winning, 5 to 0, it being their ninth victory of the season. Miller kept the Chicago hits well scattered and registered his second shutout of Chicago this season. He started the campaign by blanking the White Sox with three hits.

Manager Speaker, of the Indians, made three doubles. The St. Louis Cardinals dropped off enroute from Boston to St. Louis and watched the game.

Whitehaired Manager for Wills Calls Dempsey Champ Liar; Jack Allowed to Fight Tunney

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—(AP)—The state athletic commission today gave its unqualified approval to the Dempsey-Tunney heavyweight title battle and ordered Promoter Tex Rickard to go ahead with all arrangements to stage the fight at the Yankee Stadium on September 16 in spite of the fact that Dempsey has not received his license and has no immediate prospect of getting it.

While the commission was jamming through this action, in a snappy half hour session, declaring Dempsey in good standing on all counts and recommending that he be given his official permit, the outer offices of the boxing board were thrown into an uproar by a fiery tilt between the champion and Paddy Mullins, grey-haired manager of Harry Wills, that nearly ended in the pair coming to blows.

Mullins incensed by the refusal of the commission to give him a further hearing, and the apparent shelving of his lingering hopes of matching his big negro with the champion, set off the spark of a long smouldering feud by spurning Dempsey's greeting as they bumped into each other in a crowd of newspaper men and other onlookers.

Calls Jack a Liar.

Mullins accused Dempsey of "double crossing," in his various dealings for a match with Wills, then called the champion a "liar," as the latter denied sending a telegram of reassurance from Los Angeles last March on articles signed with the Coliseum club of Chicago. In spite of his white hairs and 50 years, the squat-figured Mullins jumped to his feet, his face livid with anger, as Dempsey turned away with a remark that "its a good thing you're too old."

"I'm not too old to take you on," shouted Paddy, raising his first. "If you wont fight my fighter, I'll lick you."

Others Intervene.

Intervention by calmer spirits, including Gene Normile, one of Dempsey's business agents, prevented the clash from going further but Mullins flung a final bomb shell when he charged that he had been offered and refused $50,000 to withdraw the challange of Wills for a title match, now on file with the commission.

"I wont reveal now who made that offer, but I'll do so at the proper time. This whole thing has been a frame up and I can prove it."

The flareup between Dempsey and Mullins provided the most dramatic event of the day, but caused scarcely more sensation than a new rift between the members of the athletic commission and the license committee, thus upsetting prospects that the champion would be granted his license to fight Tunney.

Calls Dempsey A Liar to His Face

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Paddy Mullins, grey haired manager of Wills, and Jack Dempsey nearly came to blows in a heated argument outside the boxing commission office today.

"You may be the champion, but you also are the biggest liar in the world," Mullins shouted at the champion.

Dempsey's face was aflame with rage.

"It's a good thing you are an old man," Dempsey cried.

"I may be old, but I can lick you," Mullins replied. "You are afraid of Wills. You double crossed us."

Gene Normile, Dempsey's personal representative stepped between them and led the title holder out of the building.

Lucy Lamb by driving over eight of the 21 runs scored by the Spudders yesterday pulled up to within striking distance of the leaders in the race for the watch and cash purse which are to be awarded the winners of the Spudder run-getters' drive closing Sunday with the Beaumont double header at Athletic park.

Lamb yesterday morning was 11 runs behind Jenkins. Tut knocked a run across yesterday afternoon so now Lamb's only four runs behind.

The race started July 15. The two Spudders batting across the most runs over the 30-day span cop the prizes.

BELL MEETS HIS MASTER

Gotham Youth Baffles Lone Star Nester at All Turns

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Berkeley Bell, Austin, Tex., a favorite for the national junior tennis title was defeated in his quarter final match by Julius Seligson of New York, 6-3, 6-2.

The victory of Seligson, national indoor junior title holder, was a dramatic, crushing upset. Bell had been seeded No. 1. Sligson, a short fat youngster, took Bell's wicked chop strokes and sent them flying back to the service line, time and again keeping the ball in play throughout and seldom trying for a killing shot. Bell found his best strokes coming back all the time and he found no weak spot in Seligson's sensational playing of his ground strokes.

Bob Seller of San Francisco, coast junior title holder, ran true to form in winning over Donald Strachan, Philadelphia, 8-6, 7-5, but the coast star almost met his match in Tilden's protege. Strachan had set point at 6-5, in the opening set but Seller playing spectacular tennis when behind came through to take the set. Seller went into a good lead in the second set but Strachan tied it at 5-5. The effort spent Strachan's strength, however, and Seller swept through the semi-final bracket, 7-5.

Large Bill and Mary K. Victors

RYE, N. Y., Aug. 12.—(AP)—William T. Tilden and Miss Mary K. Browne gained final brackets in the men's and women's New York state championships at the Westchester Biltmore Country club today. Rain prevented semi-finalists in the other half of each draw from finishing their matches.

Tilden, who won his way into the semi-finals by doubling up last Sunday, the first day of the tournament, met B. I. C. Norton today and easily vanquished him, 6-1, 6-3. In the finals the national champion will meet the survivor of the Vincent Richards-Francis T. Hunter and Alfred H. Chapin, Jr.-Louis Hayden quarter-final matches.

Miss Browne's trip into the finals was gained at the expense of Mrs. Helen G. Lockhorn of Connecticut, state champion, 6-1, 6-1. Helen Wills, playing her semi-final match with Mrs. Helene Pollack Falk of New York, won the first set at Love and stood two all in the second set when rain halted activities for the day.

One surprise was the defeat of Cranston Holman of Leland Stanford university, number 9 in the national ranking, at the hands of B. I. C. Norton of St. Louis, ranked number 10, by the score of 6-2, 7-5.

Richards easily won two matches against Ernest Kuhn of New York and Nathaniel W. Niles of Boston. He started his semi-final match against Hunter, but this was stopped by rain.

JAKE SHADES JEEMS TWICE

Burns and Walkup Heave 2-1 and 1-0 Victories Over Shippers

FORT WORTH, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Jake Atz, Cat skipper, did unto the Exporters Thursday as he had done unto the Steers, the Panthers taking two of the neatest games played here in some time, 2 to 1, and 1 to 0, making six straight for the Dixie champions.

Holzhauser turned in an even better card, except for the run column, than did Walkup in the second chapter, allowing but two hits. Benny Burns went the route for the Cats in the first game and put up what looked like a mark for Walkup to shoot at. The win still leaves Paul Watchel untouched for the next affray.

SHREVEPORT, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Charles Barnabe let the Bears down with four hits and the Sports won the second game of the series 11 to 1. The visitors made only a single up until the eighth stanza when Mitze made the second safe blow, a two base hit. Flaskamper's double past third a hit batsman and Dodie's single scored San Antonio's only run in the ninth. Couchman was touched for seven runs in the first four innings. Ward started the fifth and gave up four tallies in that round. In the last three innings, he escaped without a tally. Score:

Buffs Storm Over Herd For 6-2 Win

DALLAS, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Houston stormed through the usually air-tight defense of the Steers and won Thursday, 6 to 2.

Tink Riviere wilted in the seventh and Turkey Gross booted three bounders during the game. The reliable right-handed hurler looked over 14 safe swats that whizzed past him before he ducked under the showers. Five of these came in the eighth inning and four Buff runs were moulded, with none out, when Slim Love relieved Riviere.

Ken Penner atop the hill for Houston was in excellent form and allowed only eight hits. Score:

My Favorite Stories

By IRVIN S. COBB

The tourist was one of that type which for some mysterious reason are more numerously encountered abroad than at home. He was doing the cathedral towns of England, not because he particularly was interested in English cathedrals either, but because the guide book advised him to do so.

Near the close of a glorious spring afternoon he stood on the greensward facing Canterbury cathedral with his legs planted far apart, his cap on the back of his head, his hands rammed deep into his trousers' pockets, his cigar stuck into one corner of his mouth, and on his face an expression betokening profound boredom.

The celebrated Canterbury chimes were ringing for vespers, filling all the air with silver melody, when a side door of the cathedral opened and there issued forth a little, plump, pink-cheeked, benevolent clergyman. He approached the visiting stranger and in cultured tones said to him:

"I take it, sir, that you are a stranger?"

"Hey?" inquired the American cupping one hand about his ear.

The clergyman raised his voice:

"I assume, sir, that you are not a resident of these parts?"

"Nope," said the American. "I hail from Nebraska. It's durned good state, too—best in the Union. You ought to come out there some time, Elder, and give us the once-over."

"Eh—quite so," said the reverend gentleman. "Then," he continued, "since you are newly-come to this place it must seem to you, even as it does to those of us who dwell in these cloistered and holy precincts, that the music of our glorious bells comes floating down to one almost like the voice of the Almighty Himself, seeking through the medium of their old brazen throats to communicate the message of peace on earth, good will to man, to us His children here below."

"Which?" inquired the visitor, inclining his head somewhat.

"Er—what I meant to say was," stated the clergyman, "is that one must carry away from here, after hearing our chimes, the conviction in his soul that really he has been in communication with Deity itself—that the voices of the angels have cried out to him. Er—is it not so my friend?"

The American shook his head.

"I'm sorry, parson," he said regretfully, "but them damn bells is makin' so much noise I can't hear a word you say!"

Reservations have already been made in Seattle, Wash., to sail about Aug 20. They will reach Alaska about Sept 2.

Waggoner Refinery Makes Additions

ELECTRA, Aug. 12.—An improvement program is being carried out at the offices of the Waggoner Refining company, west of this city. The improvements include a second story to the offices, work being begun this week. Increased business of the refinery and the recent completion of the big casinghead gasoline plant at Rock crossing have necessitated an increase in the office force and consequent increase in office space it is stated.

BOLL WEEVIL GETS WORSE

Only in Piedmont Section Is Damage Reported As Lessening

TALLULAH, La., Aug. 12.—(AP)—Except for the Piedmont sections of Georgia, North and South Carolina, boll weevil infestation is increasing generally over the cotton belt, it was announced at the Delta laboratory here today.

The past fifteen days, however, have shown a decrease in cotton hopper although their infestation is general thorughout the cotton belt with the exception of North Carolina where only a few severe cases have been reported in the Piedmont section.

Heaviest infestations in Texas were reported in the south central portion although they were prevalent in the central and eastern portion. In Arkansas they are increasing in the eastern portion in the delta counties and in Oklahoma they are increasing in southeastern section of the state.

Numerous in Louisiana

Weevils are numerous in Louisiana with high infestations in both the southern and the northern sections of the state. In northeastern Louisiana they are seriously damaging many fields, and local areas in Mississippi reported considerable damage while a general increase in infestation was noted over the state.

Infestation is general in southern Alabama, but lighter in other sections of that state and southern Georgia while no reports of weevils came from north Georgia and the Piedmont section of that state and North and South Carolina.

A light infestation in North Carolina was unusually light throughout the state.

Hopper Damage Varies

Although many localities reported that cotton showed no recovery from the depredations of cotton hopper in others it was fruiting fairly well. Heaviest damage was done in the eastern half of Texas in the river bottoms of Oklahoma, Northern Mississippi and Western Tennessee. The insects were reported general over Alabama with the heaviest damage over the northern and central sections.

Severe damage was reported in the Piedmont region of Georgia and South Carolina, with scattered reports of damage in other sections of Georgia.

Leaf worms were reported scattered throughout Texas, Southern Oklahoma, Arkansas, Louisiana and Northern Mississippi, with defoliation of cotton common in south central Texas.

Tut, Tut! Tut Has Rival Now. New Tomb Found

STOCKHOLM, Aug. 12.—(AP)—A royal Greek tomb said to rival in splendor that of the Egyptian King Tut-Ankh-Amen, has been unearthed near the ancient city of Asine, on the southern shores of the Peloponnesian peninsula, Greece, by a Swedish archeological expedition.

Preliminary reports published here say the discoveries during the fourth annual digging, now about to close, have been greater than those of all the previous ones combined. They include masses of materials throwing new light on Greek life as far back as 300 years before the Christian era.

Vases and ornaments in great quantities have been found, and among the contents of the royal tomb, dating approximately from 1500 B. C., where several ornate gold pieces and unique weapons. One of the first things encountered in the so-called "lower city" was what remained of a Russian bath with marble lined tubs for hot and cold water. Some of the underground plumbing was found to be in such good condition that it could be used today, Dr. Otto Frodin, head of the expedition reports.

GREAT FARM YEAR FORECAST

Prices Lower, But Crops More Than Make Up For It

HOUSTON, Aug. 18.—According to present indications the producers of farm and ranch products in Texas will have one of the most prosperous years they have had in a long time, the August crop report off Schutz, government statistican, said here today.

While the price of cotton is considerably lower than that of last year, it continues, the prospects are that the crop will be in the neighborhood of half a million bales greater. The wheat, oats, corn, grain sorghum and hay crops as a whole are in better condition than any year since 1919. Cattle, sheep and goats and swine are at a high level. Early truck crops added many millions to the state income, but the later crops as well as melons and peaches have not been marketable at satisfactory prices. No section of the country is in a better condition than the wheat belt of Texas, Oklahoma and Kansas."

Condition Improves.

The Texas cotton crop on August 1, had a condition of 73 per cent of normal, compared with 45 per cent a year ago and 66 per cent on August 1, 1924. With a planted area of 18,849,000 acres and a condition well above the average, if insect and weather damage do not prove too great during the month, a surprisingly large crop can yet be made.

While the injury from the cotton hopper has subsided to a great extent, weevils, boll worms and leaf worms have become very active in a large percentage of the counties. Picking is becoming general in the south district and will extend into central Texas after mid-August. Very few of the other states have as high a condition as a year ago and more than average deterioration was suffered during the month.

Corn Crop Excellent.

Over the south half of the state the corn crop is made and in other sections it is maturing rapidly. A production of 103,492,000 bushels is indicated, the highest since 1923 when 96,440,000 bushels were estimated. In 1919 Texas produced 95,000,000.

Some early rice is being harvested in the Bay City territory, but the main crop is late in many localities owing to the poor start it had.

The season lately has been favorable and if wet weather later does not interfere with the harvest yields at least as good as the average should result. The condition is estimated at 87 per cent of normal which indicates a probable production of 6,059,000 bushels. A year ago the condition was 85 per cent resulting in a production of 6,048,000 bushels.

PROSPEROUS FALL FOR TEXAS SAYS R. R. HEAD

DALLAS, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Prospects for a prosperous fall are brighter in Texas than in any other territory served by the Burlington Lines, C. G. Burnham, Chicago executive vice president, said here Thursday.

Mr. Burnham is inspecting the Burlington system. He arrived in Dallas from Colorado, via Fort Worth, Wednesday, coming over the Fort Worth and Denver, Burlington property. Frank E. Clarity, vice president and general manager of the Denver, accompanied him to this city.

Oral arguments before the interstate commerce commission on the Denver's application to extend its line into the south plains region have been completed, Mr. Burnham declared. No decision is expected, however, he said, until the commission members return from the fall vacations.

The Trinity and Brazos Valley line, Burnham added, will be ready to enter Dallas with its passenger service as soon as trackage arrangements through the Union Terminal here can be arranged.

BOWIE IS FOR

a blue-jacket in the United States navy, and finally ran second in a field of six for the post of attorney general."

"We, who have known him since his childhood," the resolution further states, "commend him to the people of Texas."

Passed Thursday.

The resolution was passed Thursday afternoon at an organization meeting of an "Allred for Attorney General club" here. The meeting was held at the offices of the Bowie Chamber of Commerce, more than 200 Montague county citizens attending.

The resolution follows:

From the people of Montague county to the people of Texas:

James V. Allred, affectionately known to us as "Jimmie," was born here in Marech, 1899. He shined shoes in a local barber shop; sold newspapers on the streets and kept up his school work, graduating in the Bowie high school as valedictorian of his class. Was substitute mail carrier for his father; took a commercial course at a local college; went to Rice Institute, and worked at a filling station to pay his way; war came, he volunteered at the age of 19, and enlisted in the service of his country; returned, became court reporter, with the help of his brothers, spent one year in law at Cumberland university, securing his law license by examination under the laws of Texas; was soon admitted into partnership with one of the strongest firms at Wichita Falls. He was appointed district attorney by Gov. Pat Neff, and was elected to the office at the succeeding election. Later he resigned, and went back into the same law firm as a full partner, remaining with this firm until he became a candidate for attorney general in April, 1926.

Always Made Good.

As newspaper boy and bootblack, Jimmie Allred was a success; he made a splendid court reporter; as district attorney he showed himself to be absolutely without any sense of fear and equipped to meet the ablest lawyers at the bar, his record being equal to that of any of the splendid lawyers that have held this position in his district.

We have known him and watched him with pride as he builded to success. Clean, upright, courageous, industrious, efficient, he has justified the hopes and the admiration of his warmest friends. As a lawyer he is painstaking, hard working, capable and resourceful, a safe counsellor and an advocate in the court house able to meet the strongest.

We, who have known him since his childhood, commend him to the people of Texas, with the confident assurance that they will make no mistake in nominating him and electing him to the office of attorney general. He will appreciate their support scarcely more than the people of Montague county, who take a personal pride in his achievements and who feel justified in saying that all Texas will be proud of the brilliant record he will make as his own home folks.

NEW YORK COTTON.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—(AP)—A further decline at the opening of the cotton market today was followed by moderate rallies on less favorable weather and crop advices but after selling up from 16.12 to 16.27, December reacted to 16.13 and closed at that figure. The final tone of the market was steady, but final prices were 16 to 22 points lower.

The market opened easy at a decline of 13 to 17 points under a renewal of recent selling movement which appeared to be stimulated by relatively easy Liverpool cables, combined with recently increased ideas of the crop. October sold off to 16.32 and January to 16.13 during the early trading, making new lows for the movement, but offerings were smaller after yesterday's heavy liquidation and after the initial selling had been absorbed, prices rallied on covering and trade buying.

Reports of cloudy and showery weather in the eastern and central belts were regarded as likely to forecast the spread of insects, and there were many private reports complaining of damage by boll worm, leaf worm, army worm, also of increased boll weevil activity.

There was a renewal of spot house selling on the late decline which was attributed to hedging together with realizing by early buyers and a renewal of liquidation. Most of the active months made new lows for the day in the late trading with October selling off to 16.21, while March closed at 16.31. Private cables attributed the easier ruling of Liverpool to hedge selling, together with local, Manchester and Continental selling but said there was a moderate cloth inquiry from India and some speculative buying of yarns.

Exports today 4,441 bales, making 89,513 so far this season. Port receipts 9,980. U. S. port stocks 658,823 bales.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 12.—(AP)—The cotton market was more two sided today than it has been and was fairly active. The general trend of prices were reactionary, the market starting off lower owing to Liverpool cables proving much more unfavorable than due.

After declining 21 points on all active months in the first hour of trading mainly on the disappointing course of the foreign market prices had a good rally later in the morning owing to rain in the belt. Prices recovered practically all the early loss and advanced to within one point of yesterday's close but during the afternoon turned reactionary again on favorable noon weather reports, dropping back to within a couple of points of the early lows. The close was steady, showing net losses for the day of 17 to 20 points.

At the start first trades showed losses of 12 points on active positions and prices continued to ease off during the first hour until October traded down to 16.14, December to 16.03 and January to 15.96 or 21 points down from the previous close on all months. These prices proved to be the lows of the day.

The market started to rally at the beginning of the second hour and shortly after mid-session October advanced to 16.34, December to 16.19 and January to 16.15, or 17 to 20 points up from the lows. These levels proved to be the highs.

The market eased off during the afternoon and closed near the bottom but steady. Exports for the day totaled 4,441 bales.

N. Y. Stocks

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Revival of speculative and investment interests in the railroad shares, several of which sold at new high levels featured the resumption of the upward movement in today's stock market. Industrials had a temporary sinking spell when selling pressure was renewed against some of the recent leaders soon after the opening, but strong buying support was quickly forthcoming and the subsequent recovery continued through the rest of the session, with closing prices generally around the highest of the day.

Two of the most important developments of the day took place after the close of the market. One was the declaration of a stock dividend of 50 per cent on the common stock of the General Motors corporation in addition to the regular quarterly cash distribution of $1.75 which will also be paid on the additional common stock. The other was the raising of the New York federal reserve rediscount rate from 3½ to 4 per cent. The first change since April 22 when the rate was cut from 4 to 3½.

Most of the day's business news was constructive in character. The federal reserve board reported record breaking industrial activity in the fiscal year ended June 30, the department of labor stated that the country was on a fairly satisfactory employment basis, stocks of refined copper were reported to be the lowest in many years, wholesale gasoline prices were advanced one cent a gallon in the middle-west and leading sugar and rubber executives reported improvement in those industries.

Owing to the uncertaintly regarding the General Motors dividend, trading in that stock was of a nervous character. It opened 3 1-3 points higher at 206⅓, advanced to 207 and then dropped to 198 under heavy selling of bear sellers who apparently acted on the theory that there were huge "stop loss" orders around the 200 mark, which, if touched off, would lead to a wide open break.

The principal commodity markets lost ground. Active wheat futures dropped about a cent a bushel on suggestion that the Canadian government crop estimate probably was too low. Cotton sold down 16to 22 points on favorable weather reports. Raw sugar was unchanged and coffee closed unchanged to five points lower.

Call money renewed at 4½ per cent and held steady at that figure all day. Funds were in plentiful supply all day and some loans in the "outside market" were reported as low as 4¼. Time money and commercial paper rates wer unchangd.

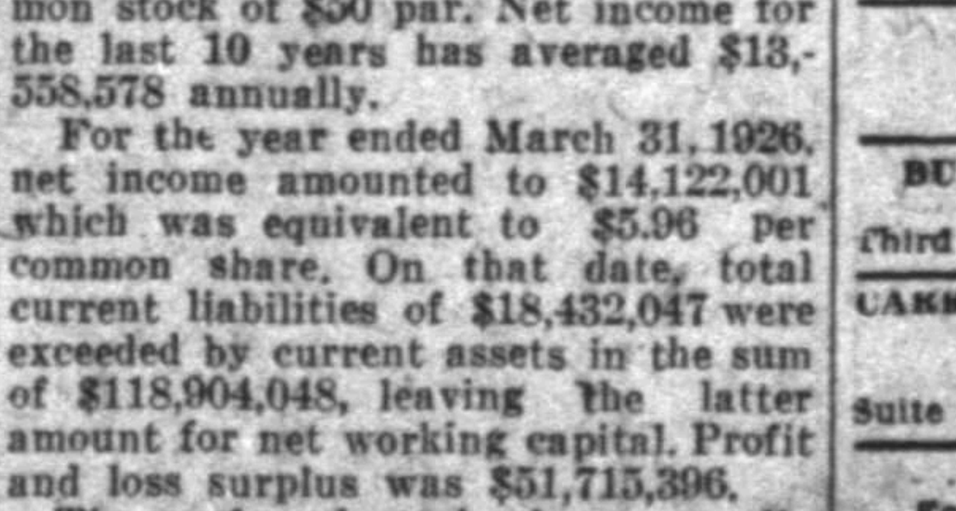

Renewed heaviness of the paper currencies of Europe featured the irregularly lower foreign exchange market. Demand sterling was slightly easier around $4.85⅝ with some of the selling undoubtedly inspired by the increase in British imports. Frenche francs sold down another five points to around 2.70 cents with small recessions also taking place in the Belgian, Italian and Spanish rates.

CHICAGO GRAIN REVIEW.

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Persistent talk that the Canadian government crop report has under-estimated the wheat yield in Canada 40,000,000 bushels tends to depress wheat values today. Largely as a result the wheat market closed heavy, half to 1¼ cents net lower, with corn unchanged to ¼ cents higher, oats ⅛ to ¼ cent off, and provisions unchanged to 50 cents down.

Much notice on the part of wheat traders was given to a statement from a Chicago crop expert who has completed a tour in western Canada, and who says that the three prairie provinces will raise at least 335,000,000 bushels, which is nearly 40,000,000 bushels more than the official estimate. Information from Canadian private sources was at even greater variance from the Canadian government figures, and said the official total is 40,000,000 to 60,000,000 bushels too low.

Failure of any export business of consequence to develop gave a further downward impulse to wheat prices.

Corn prices rallied on account of Kansas and Iowa crop reports apparently confirming more or less damage. Demand for oats was slow. Provisions lacked support from buyers.

Ku Klux Again To Parade at Capital

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—(AP)—The ku klux klan would like to parade again up Pennsylvania avenue from the peace monument at the foot of Capitol Hill to the treasury.

A formal request for a permit to march September 13, has been received by Major Edwin B. Hesse, superintendent of police, from L. A. Mueller who signed himself as the "representative in the District of Columbia" of the organization.

The letter said that members would march in full regalia with visors up, as they did on August 8, of last year. The permit would be issued Major Hesse said, as a matter of routine.

Commissioner Cuno Rudolph said that two weeks ago klan representatives asked him informally about parading while masked but that he told them they could not do so.

GOULD QUITS AS SECRETARY

Resignation Accepted By Rotary Club After Four Years

Acceptance of the resignation of John Gould, secretary of the Rotary club, was made by the board of directors recently, and was announced Thursday at the regular meeting of the club at noon at the Kemp hotel. Tom Smock was elected to fill out the unexpired term. Expression of appreciation for the faithful service of Mr. Gould who has been secretary for the last four years, was made by Albert Myles, president of the club.

An unusual feature was introduced by the program committee when members of the club were called on to discuss or tell something about their businesses. Among the speakers were: Al Biedenharn, J. H. Allison, C. W. Beavers, L. L. Bennett, E. H. Eddleman, Al Burnside, Bob Collier, Milo Connelly, Eddie Brown, Walter S. Curlee, George Dashner, Carl Williamson and Charlie Reid.

A "classification quiz" was conducted after the talks and according to Hubert M. Harrison those who know most about their respective businesses were J. M. Isbell, L. L. Albritton, J. Wilkie Talbert and W. W. Brown. Frank Keim would tell the least about his and Jack Barnard is the biggest bluffer of the talkers, he said. Leonard Grayson was acting chairman of the program committee.

A group of musical numbers was given by Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Underwood. Mrs. Underwood played and sang two of her own compositions, "The Eagle," and "Irish Philosophy," and a duet of her arrangement of Cadman's "At Dawning," was sung. J. S. Pitman introduced the entertainers.

He is survived by his father, Charles E. Bebout, who was formerly a deputy sheriff and city police officer, his mother, a brother, Commodore, and two sisters, Clarissa and Patsy Mae.

SANTONE PROPERTY SOLD

Consideration $310,000 in Real Estate Deal Thursday

SAN ANTONIO, Aug. 12.—(AP) A. Y. Baker of Edinburg Thursday bought the George W. West homestead at the corner of Travis and Navarro streets, diagonally across from the St. Anthony hotel. The consideration was $310,000.

Baker, who has been sheriff of Hidalo county since 1912 said he will improve the property for business purposes shortly, although his plans along this line are yet undeveloped.

She Threw Coffeepot And Coffee Too, Says Husband

Enforced participation in a game of "hop-skip-jump" on a downtown street of the city and the throwing of boiling coffee at him constitute acts of excessive cruelty, a Wichita Falls husband alleges in a divorce petition filed in the 78th district court Thursday. Wherefore the husband, a righteous man if you please, who contributed in no manner to these acts of unconscionable cruelty, asks that all bonds of matrimony between him and the defendant be severed upon hearing of the suit.

The plaintiff's petition alleges that on June 24 of this year the "missus" threw a pot of boiling coffee at him in a fit of anger. Later, on August 6, she used a pistol in chasing him down a street in the city's business section, it is stated. The two were married in 1907.

STATE AID FOR PEASE BRIDGE

Parnell, Back From Austin, Says Appropriation Is Agreed Upon

The state highway commission began negotiations Wednesday for the purchase of the toll bridge across the Pease river between Crowell and Quanah it was stated Thursday by J. D. Parnell, senator from this district, following a visit to Austin during which time he conferred with the highway commission.

Built 5 Years Ago

The bridge across the Pease river was built five years ago by the Austin Brothers Bridge company and has been operated by them since as a toll bridge, one of the few in the state except over the boundary streams. At the time of its construction Foard and Hardeman counties retained an option by which at the end of the five year period they might purchase it from the construction company by the tender of $12,000.

The negotiations which the highway commission is starting, Mr. Parnell stated, involve the raising of $3,000 by Foard county, $3,000 by Hardeman county, which $6,000 the highway commission will match with another $6,000 appropriation of its own. In order for the state highway commission to make legal its appropriation for the purchase of the bridge it was necessary to designate the road between Crowell and Quanah as a state aid project, Mr. Parnell stated. This was done approximately a month ago.

Wickline Here Today

George Wickline of Austin, engineer for the state highway commission, will be in Wichita Falls today, Mr. Parnell stated, and will inspect the bridge preparatory to final action. He will also be taken to the new free bridge under construction across Red river and make an inspection of that project preparatory to paying the first estimate as prepared recently by the contractors.

Mr. Parnell was accompanied to Austin by C. G. Willie of the Quanah chamber of commerce.

Both filled a number of speaking dates for the Fergusons prior to the first primary.

Archer Must Open Road to Get Aid

Archer county must open the road southeast from the Wichita Falls-Seymour highway to Archer City before the state highway commission will appropriate funds for its maintenance, State Senator J D Parnell stated Thursday on his return from Austin where he conferred with the highway commission on the matter. The state highway commission Wednesday designated the road south from Red river through Electra, south out of Electra to the Wichita Falls-Seymour highway, and southeast, thence, to Archer City, as a state aid project and assumed full maintenance costs on that portion of the road in Wichita county due to a "superior type of construction." The Archer county portion of the road has never been opened, it is stated.

Judge Harvey Harris, former Wichita county judge, was largely instrumental in securing the designation for the Wichita county road, it is said.

JIM HINTS AT COURT ACTION

Could Keep Moody Off The Ballot in November, He Says

AUSTN, Aug. 8. — (AP) — Even though Attorney General Dan Moody should win the democratic nomination in the run-off primary, his name "could be kept off the general election ticket in November," because of alleged campaign contributions from other candidates, Thursday's issue of the Ferguson Forum, mouth-piece of James E. Ferguson, asserted in an editorial.

"The vital question to the voter is will he or she lose a vote by voting for Mr. Moody. It would appear from reading the law that such would be undoubtedly the case," the editorial said.

The editorial referred to contributions of $250 each made in the names of Representative Satterwhite and R. L. Bobbitt, of Laredo, who were candidates for the 40th legislature. Both made affidavits that they simply acted as agents in transmitting the donations, and did not contribute a penny.

The editorial was taken here to mean that Ferguson has not abandoned thei dea of bringing court action to bar Moody's name from the ballot. An intimation of this intention was given by his attorney Monday at Dallas before the democratic state executive committee.
