Angelo has support to win, observers say

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

HOUSTON — Midland's Ernest Angelo can win re-election to the Republican National Executive Committee today if he can convince his backers to stick around the state GOP convention, observers said Friday.

Roy Farrell, the Dallas County coordinator for Pat Robertson's presidential campaign, is running hard to stop Angelo's bid for a fourth term as Texas' national committeeman. He is wooing delegates' votes by promising "some new leadership, some fresh ideas."

Angelo's backers are stressing the Midland oilman's "irreplaceable experience," commitment and conservative credentials. His campaign literature features a photo of Angelo shaking hands with President Reagan.

Both sides distributed thousands of posters, buttons and flyers Friday, papering the George R. Brown Convention Center with their political paraphernalia.

Although Robertson's forces — presumed Farrell backers — hold no more than about 40 percent of the convention delegates, the timing of today's vote concerns Angelo's supporters. The NREC election is the last item on the convention agenda, coming after a late-afternoon speech from Robertson.

"If people leave or the convention strings out, that could be a problem," said state Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland and an Angelo backer.

Supporters of both men and independent observers agreed with that analysis.

Craddick and outgoing state GOP Chairman George Strake said Angelo otherwise seems to have the vote locked up. "He's got the key people," Craddick said.

But Richie Martin, Robertson's Texas campaign manager now working for Farrell, predicted a close vote. "It's a toss of the coin at this point," Martin said.

Both men had a chance to sell their wares to the convention for five minutes Friday afternoon.

Angelo reminded the delegates of his start as a Republican block worker and his state and national roles in Reagan's 1976, 1980 and 1984 campaigns.

He called for GOP unity, saying that Democrats and "the national media" will try to divide and destroy the Reagan coalition.

"The conservative cause is alive and well," Angelo said. "I'm proud to be known as pro-family, as pro-life, as one who believes that Ollie North is an American hero."

Farrell said Texas has "the responsibility to light the way" toward re-establishing morality in the country. "The old formulas and outworn slogans can no longer be our guides as we set out upon the great frontier of the 1990s," he said.

He complained of Texas GOP leaders "bringing the Washington mentality to Texas," of Republicans' failure to "take on" Democratic U.S. House Speaker Jim Wright and of "lip service" on abortion.

"I don't want to hear about the tremendous 'strides' we are making in the pro-life movement," Farrell said to thundering applause. "Tell the million and a half babies who were murdered last year about 'strides.' What I want to hear is not 'strides.' What I want to hear is that abortion is outlawed forever in America."

House panel will investigate Wright

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

Wright

HOUSTON — Americans should apply the "lesson of Watergate" to the House Ethics Committee's decision to investigate Democratic House Speaker Jim Wright, the Republican congressman leading the charge against Wright said Friday.

The bipartisan House panel voted unanimously Friday morning to investigate the Fort Worth Democrat. The six charges include unusually high royalties on a book Wright wrote, improper lobbying on behalf of oil companies and financial institutions and the possibly illegal use of congressional payroll.

U.S. Rep. Newt Gingrich, D-Georgia, called Wright a student of Lyndon Johnson's "wheeler-dealer style" of government. "He is a man who systematically breaks the rules in a way which makes it extremely dangerous to have him third in line to be president," Gingrich said at a news conference here.

"It's the lesson, I think of Watergate. No one in the American system is above the law."

Republican National Committee Chairman Frank Fahrenkopf said the Wright case needs something stronger than a House Ethics Committee investigation. He recommended the House appoint a special prosecutor similar to the one investigation Republican Attorney General Ed Meese.

"It's got to be a level playing field," Fahrenkopf said at a news conference after speaking to the Republican State Convention.

Bush says Dukakis resorts to 'oldest ploy in game'

Bush

DENVER (AP) — Republican presidential candidate George Bush said Friday that Democratic rival Michael Dukakis resorted to "the oldest ploy in the game" by accusing Bush of using dirty campaign tactics.

"Already, we're hearing charges of 'mudslinging' from the other side," Bush told a unity gathering featuring four of his vanquished GOP rivals as well as Republican officials and activists from Western states.

Earlier, Bush told reporters he had shifted his campaign into a more aggressive attack on the Massachusetts governor after "getting hit for six months" by the Democrats. "This is going to be a fun campaign," the vice president said.

In his speech, Bush said, "I look forward to the next two months, because this is the defining time. This is the time when the American people will begin to focus on who we are and what we stand for, not compared to others of our party, but compared to each other."

"Bob Dole, Jack Kemp, Pete du Pont, Al Haig...they're all good men and tough competitors," Bush said. "I never liked the strain of finding differences with my fellow Republicans."

Before Bush spoke, he was praised by Dole, Kemp, du Pont and Haig. And television evangelist Pat Robertson sent a letter saying he couldn't make the event because of a scheduling conflict, but that Bush had "earned and deserves" the support of conservatives.

"You've got to have experience, and George Bush has it all over Michael Dukakis, day after day after day," Dole said.

Kemp said Bush is "our nominee, and very frankly, I look forward to working with Bob and Al and Pete and Pat to make sure we have a Republican in 1988."

Bush said his new campaign strategy, beginning with a Thursday speech in which he cited many differences with Dukakis on specific issues, "represented a turning point."

"It's my job now not just to say what I'm for, but to give the American people the facts about Governor Dukakis," he said. Bush said Dukakis should understand that.

"Governor Dukakis is a tough campaigner — just ask (onetime GOP gubernatorial rival) Ed King — and I expect the same from him," he said. "I am not going to be deterred from telling the truth."

Earlier, Bush had said he wasn't surprised that the Dukakis camp protested his charge of Thursday — that the Massachusetts governor is a liberal posing as a moderate.

But in a chat with reporters aboard Air Force Two en route to Denver for the unity gathering with some of his defeated Republican opponents, the certain GOP nominee said Democrats are trying to hide Dukakis' record.

At the same time, Bush, a late 1940s Yale graduate, offered no apology for labeling Dukakis a political figure born of "Harvard Yard's boutique," saying it was meant as a statement about the governor's supposed intellectual elitism, rather than as a statement about class.

Shortly after Bush attacked Dukakis on a broad range of foreign policy and domestic issues on Thursday, the governor's press secretary issued a statement saying Bush was panicked by his relatively low standing in the polls and was resorting to "mudslinging and tearing down."

Scandanavia openly deals with AIDS

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Sweden, the host of the fourth international conference on AIDS, is campaigning against the deadly disease with the same matter-of-fact openness that marks its attitude toward sex.

Swedes and other Scandinavians discuss AIDS in schools, make condoms easily available, and in some places provide free hypodermic needles to drug addicts.

Tests to detect exposure to the AIDS virus are free to military conscripts, pregnant women and prison inmates. Volunteers can be tested at any psychiatric or venereal disease clinic.

Scandinavia's public education campaign, aimed largely at teenagers, is conducted with explicitness that might be startling in more conservative parts of the world.

Even some Danish TV viewers complained about one ad showing a woman slipping a codom on her partner. The ad stressed that safe sex can be fun.

The Scandinavian model for campaigning against AIDS will be one aspect of the conference beginning Sunday.

Smokers tend to have other bad habits, study finds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Heavy smokers tend to snack more than non-smokers, according to a government study that observes that people who smoke also tend to have other bad health habits.

Smokers are more likely than non-smokers to sleep less than six hours daily, to skip breakfast, to be physically inactive and to be heavier drinkers, according to the National Center for Health Statistics.

In addition, although the study found that smokers in general were less likely to be overweight, that was not the case for men who smoked heavily.

And while many smokers were less likely than non-smokers to snack regularly, heavy smokers snacked more, the study reported.

People tend to put their health at risk in a number of different ways, and the report found "more risk-taking behavior and less attention to the healthier practices of life" among smokers, Charlotte A. Schoenborn of the health statistics center said Friday.

"Among male smokers, overweight was related to the number of cigarettes smoked daily, but not in the expected direction," the report said.

"Prevalence of overweight among males smoking 35 cigarettes or more daily (27.2 percent) was similar to that of males who had never smoked (28.1 percent)."

Ms. Schoenborn said she found those statistics surprising.

"It may be just a consumption-oriented lifestyle, smoking a lot and eating a lot, for heavier persons," she suggested in a telephone interview.

By comparison, 19.4 percent of men who smoked 15 or fewer cigarettes daily were overweight.

For women, the overweight rate was 24.9 percent for those who had never smoked, 19.7 percent for those who smoked more than 35 cigarettes daily and 19.3 percent for those smoking 15 or fewer.

The male group found most likely to be overweight consisted of former smokers, at 30 percent. For women, 23 percent of former smokers were overweight, more than smokers but fewer than those who had never smoked.

Overall, smokers tended to snack less than non-smokers, but heavy smokers consumed more.

Some 39.3 percent of men and 37.6 of women who never smoked reported snacking daily. But for people who smoked 35 or more cigarettes daily, the snacking rate was 42.5 percent for both sexes.

Among those smoking less than 15 cigarettes daily, 34.7 percent of men and 32.7 percent of women snacked daily.

The report is based on a detailed analysis of the 1985 National Health Interview Survey, based on interviews with 91,351 people. It was the first complete study comparing smoking and other health-related factors, Ms. Schoenborn said. It is to be repeated in 1990.

While the data in the report was collected three years ago, Ms. Schoenborn said health statisticians "don't think the relationships (among these factors) change a lot in that period of time."

Other findings included:

— About one-fourth of smokers reported sleeping six hours or less daily, compared with 21 percent of non-smokers. Almost one-third of the heavy smokers sleep less than six hours.

— Skipping breakfast was more common among smokers. More than one-third of current smokers said they never ate breakfast, compared with 18 percent of those who had never smoked.

Retreat teaches migrant students how to cope

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

Roberto Manriquez was an illegal alien and knew no English when an extended family vacation to West Texas turned into a permanent move from Mexico eight years ago.

Roberto, now 18, was then and is now one of the Midland Independent School District's migrant students.

A migrant student is one who travels either away from or to a school district because he and/or his family is involved in work, usually agricultural, that takes them to different cities or states.

A migrant student often suffers academically and emotionally from the constant moving, explained Delia Barrera, an expert in migrant student programs from the Pharr Independent School District.

This week, 16 MISD migrant students such as Roberto attended a "Life Management Skills" retreat to help them learn skills they need "to be in control of their lives," Ms. Barrera said Friday.

A migrant student often misses as much as half a year each school year because he is uprooted when it is planting or harvest time and his family must assume contractural obligations formed with their employer, she said.

Often the entire family is contracted to do the agricultural work so the student must leave school.

By law, a migrant student has the option of working by day and attending school at night, or withdraw early in the semester to complete the work with the stipulation he continue school when the services are no longer needed, Ms. Barrera explained.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Thunderstorms forecast

From Staff and Wire Reports

A slight chance of afternoon thunderstorms exists for the weekend, forecasters at the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport said.

Today there is a 20 percent chance of late afternoon thunderstorms, with the percentage decreasing to less than 20 percent for the night and Sunday.

The high today will be in the low 90s and winds will be from the southwest at 10-20 mph.

Tonight the low will be in the upper 60s.

Sunday should be partly cloudy with a high in the mid 90s.

The record high for Friday was set in 1958 when it hit 103, while the record low for this morning was set in 1973 when it dipped to 51.

STATE

A weak cold front kept high temperatures moderate across Texas on Friday as a surface high-pressure ridge moved across the Lone Star State.

The front, nearly stationary, stretched from the upper coast near Galveston, across South Central Texas into the middle Rio Grande plains south of Del Rio.

Widely scattered showers and thunderstorms were falling from Del Rio to Uvalde near the frontal zone. High, thin clouds streaked the skies over much of North, East and West Texas, while scattered to broken low- to mid-level clouds covered southern sections.

High temperatures were in the 90s over far West and deep South Texas, with readings mostly in the 80s elsewhere. Extremes ranged from 79 degrees at Amarillo in the Panhandle to 98 degrees at Laredo on the middle Rio Grande Plains.

The National Weather Service predicted isolated to widely scattered thunderstorms over parts of the Panhandle, lower Pecos Valley and along the Rio Grande plains.

Skies should be fair to partly cloudy through Saturday. Lows should be mostly in the 60s and 70s. Highs Saturday will be in the 80s and 90s except in the Big Bend valley where the mercury will climb above the century mark.

NATION

Dry weather prevailed across much of the nation Friday as a large high pressure system responsible for record low temperatures pushed moisture that had been over the eastern half of the nation out to sea.

Showers and thunderstorms continued in Florida and along the southern Atlantic Coast. A wind gust to 39 mph was reported at Jacksonville, Fla., and pea-size hail fell at Fernandina Beach, Fla.

Thunderstorms developed Friday afternoon in the central and southern Rockies and in the Del Rio, Texas, area.

Showers continued in parts of Washington state, with a half-inch of rain at Bellingham and around a quarter-inch at Tacoma and Seattle in the six hours ending at 2 p.m. EDT.

Scattered frost and freezing temperatures were expected Saturday morning in some of the valleys of the northern and central Appalachians.

Today's forecast called for thunderstorms scattered over the Rocky Mountain states and southwest Texas, showers over parts of Washington and Oregon, and scattered to numerous showers and thunderstorms in central and southern Florida.

Midland statistics

Today: Partly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of late afternoon thunderstorms. High in the low 90s with winds from the southeast at 10-20 mph. Tonight: Partly cloudy with less than a 20 percent chance of evening thunderstorms. Low in the upper 60s. Sunday: Partly cloudy with less than a 20 percent chance of late afternoon thunderstorms. # Two Odessans remain jailed on attempted capital murder charges

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Two men remained in the Ector County jail today on charges of attempted capital murder for allegedly firing about 35 shots at a near westside Odessa apartment complex unit in the early morning hours of May 27.

Bond for Albert Llanez, 20, was set at $50,000 on an attempted capital murder charge by Peace Justice Julian Pressly after he surrendered Thursday to sheriff's deputies. However, Llanez remained jailed Friday because of a parole violation.

Blas Andrade Pineda, 25, 2410 W. 9th St., remained jailed Friday in lieu of $100,000 bond on a charge of attempted capital murder in connection with the apartment complex shooting incident after surrendering to sheriff's deputies Thursday.

Llanez and Pineda had been sought on arrest warrants issued by Peace Justice R.G. Hungerford based on information supplied by witnesses during investigation of the shooting incident on June 3.

A search warrant for an Eidson Street residence issued that same day by 244th District Court Judge Joe Connally produced a weapon believed used in the apartment complex shooting incident and resulted in a charge of possession of cocaine being filed against Ruben Rodriguez, 22. He was jailed on the charge but released after posting bond of $7,500.

A high speed chase that began in the late night hours of June 3, when officers attempted to stop a vehicle similar to one described by witnesses to the shooting incident, resulted in charges being filed against two individuals not believed involved in the shooting.

Charges of possession of cocaine and evading arrest have been filed against Horacio Jose Herrera, 20, 29 Paradise Circle, in connection with the high speed chase. Herrera was released Monday after posting a $7,500 bond on the cocaine possession charge and a $500 bond on the arrest evasion charge.

According to Sheriff's Capt. Gene Kloss, Herrera was owner of the car involved in the high speed chase, but was not driving the car at the time of the chase.

Robert Llanez, 19, a passenger in the car during the chase, was jailed on a charge of resisting arrest. He was jailed and later released after posting bond of $1,000 bond.

Transwestern Pipeline to no longer transport gas from New Mexico field

From Staff Reports

Transwestern Pipeline Co. said Friday it plans to continue the suspension of all purchases or transportation of natural gas from a field in New Mexico.

Wednesday, Transwestern, a subsidiary of Enron Corp., suspended taking natural gas from wells producing from the Abo formation in an area north of Roswell, because testing indicated the presence of arsenic compounds. Initial analysis indicated the compounds were occurring naturally in the gas stream from the field.

"The presence of these compounds posed potential operating, environmental and health risks," said Stanley C. Horton, vice president of marketing & production for Enron's interstate pipelines, which include Transwestern. "Because of these possible risks, producers in the area were informed we would discontinue purchasing or transporting their gas until a thorough analysis proved it safe to resume shipments."

Approximately 600 Abo wells in the area can produce a total of about 95 million cubic feet of gas per day (MMcfgd). Immediately prior to the suspension, gas from the formation was flowing at a rate of about 60 MMcfgd. Transwestern has arranged for substitute gas supplies which do not have this problem. It has experienced no shortages and anticipates no interruption of gas service to customers in California.

"This potential problem was brought to our attention by Southern California Gas Co., Transwestern's primary customer," Horton said. "Testing was begun immediately to find the cause and content of the substance, which then led to the decision to notify the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and shut-in the Abo field."

Horton also noted that Transwestern has offered its technical assistance, where possible, to the affected gas producers in helping them study this potential problem so that they can return their gas to an acceptable quality as soon as practicable.

MIGRANTS

Students in this category are often behind when they return to classes or enroll late in the semester and miss further instruction when they need to leave school during the semester.

"Sometimes the parents are educated, but a majority of these students are the first generation to graduate from high school," she said, adding that these students are high dropout risks.

Emotionally, migrating can make for a lack of self-esteem because they are constantly leaving newly made friends and are not able to participate in extracurricular activities, Ms. Barrera said.

Roberto, whose family moved to Midland from Tuxpan Jalisco, Mexico, said he thought about dropping out of school last year when his mother and father were both without jobs and they had no way of supporting their eight children aged 18 to 9-years-old.

"My dad looked for yard work, but that only paid about $15 or maybe $25 for a big yard."

But he said he realized "if you don't get any education, you can't do anything in life."

Roberto worked last summer and supported the entire family, but went back to Midland High School this fall.

He will start school this fall as a junior.

There is pressure and feelings of guilt growing up in a migrant family, he said, but the seminar taught him to not use drugs to combat those emotions.

Roberto likes horses and wants to be a veterinarian, he said. The seminar this past week also taught him to "know people better," he said.

"Know their taste in foods, clothes and thoughts," he said. "Think of others and not yourself."

AIDS

It is drawing 6,500 experts from 125 countries to discuss scientific and social aspects of acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

AIDS has hit Denmark the hardest of the Scandinavian countries, afflicting 257 people and killing 134 of them. Authorities estimate that as many as 15,000 Danes are infected with the AIDS-causing HIV virus.

Norway's National Health Directorate has established a special AIDS unit to monitor the illness, which has killed 48 of Norway's 81 recorded AIDS victims. Another 688 Norwegians are registered HIV carriers and an estimated 2,500 others may have the virus.

An estimated 1,839 Swedes are known to carry the HIV virus. The AIDS Delegation, a task force in Sweden's Social Ministry, says 89 Swedes have died of the 192 who contracted the disease.

The Scandinavians have had a reputation for sexual freedom since the 1967 Swedish movie, "I Am Curious — Yellow," brought nudity to legitimate filmmaking.

That image has been exaggerated by their lack of shyness about discussing sex and their lifestyles. Sexual experimentation among teenagers is accepted here.

Marriage also has gone out of fashion.

Only half the Swedish couples who establish households go through a wedding ceremony, and about half of Swedish children are born to unwed parents. But separation is about as common as divorce in other industrial countries, the experts say.

In Swedish schools, where sex eductation begins in the pre-teen years, students can obtain free condoms simply by asking the school nurse, said Brigitta Hessulf of the AIDS Campaign.

Swedish authorities sent 4 million pamphlets to homes earlier this year to explain in graphic detail how the disease is transmitted, she said.

The drug culture also is a campaign target. Danish addicts can anonymously obtain syringes from pharmacies and from dispensing machines. In Sweden, a pilot program that will allow addicts to exchange used needles for new ones is nearly complete in the southern university town of Lund.

In Norway, needles can be bought cheaply.

The education campaign has not been an unqualified success. A survey of 4,000 Swedes published Wednesday noted that misconceptions still are common.

WRIGHT

"If the Democrats are going to go to the American people this fall and raise some kind of a 'sleaze factor' or whatever it might be, they've got to realize that people who live in glass houses can't throw stones."

"It's important that someone from outside come in, who is not aligned with the Republican Party or Democratic Party, someone who has no axe to grind, someone to come in and look at the allegations."

If the Democrat-controlled House uses televised open hearings like the Iran-Contra investigation to look into Wright, Gingrich said, the Democrats can hold the upper hand on ethics issues.

"The standard we're now setting for the executive branch — that we're willing to risk embarrassing our allies and we're willing to risk revealing our secrets," he said, "it seems to me should be applied to the legislative branch in a standard which says we're willing to risk embarrassing Jim Wright's allies and we're willing to risk revealing Jim Wright's secrets."

U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm, who's had several well-publicized run-ins with Wright, sounded a more cautious note.

"I would be the last person on earth to never accuse him of not having bad judgment, not being wrongheaded," Gramm said. "I would have to say, given my limited personal experience, that I don't think Jim Wright's a crook."

Midlander loses GOP panel seat

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

HOUSTON — In a razor-close race here Friday morning, Midland lost a representative on the State Republican Executive Committee.

By a vote of 129.8 to 127.2 Midland's Jack Ladd lost his bid to represent Senate District 25 on the SREC to Bob Groseclose of San Angelo.

Groseclose replaces Dean Rucker of Midland, who resigned his seat in February when Gov. Bill Clements appointed him a district judge.

Most of the voting in the Ladd-Groseclose race broke down along geographic lines. Midland County delegates at the State Republican Convention voted 58-0, with two abstaining, in favor of Ladd. Tom Green County cast all 43 of its votes with Groseclose.

The 25th Senate District caucus voted unanimously to elect Willie Lawley of Comfort as its female representative on the SREC. Lawley replaces Cindy Brockwell of New Braunfels, who chose not to run for re-election.

The sprawling 25th District covers 39 counties, stretches from El Paso to San Antonio and covers the Texas Hill Country and the southern half of the Permian Basin.

Veterans' Peace Convoy says Customs won't seize vehicles

STATE

LAREDO (AP) — The Veterans' Peace Convoy said Friday that U.S. Customs officials told the group it would be allowed to continue its trip to Nicaragua, and that no vehicles would be seized at the border.

"We have told them that based solely on their failure to post a bond, we will not seize their vehicles," said Kenneth Brumfield, resident agent in charge of Customs in Laredo.

Brumfield said that the government never intended to seize vehicles, and that Customs had allowed one convoy bus to cross the border on Wednesday without paying a bond.

Gerry Condon, a member of the convoy's steering committee, said the group probably will leave the United States on Monday.

"They (federal officials) obviously don't believe that it's in their interest to have this standoff here," Condon said.

Some convoy members, holding placards, began a vigil Friday on one of the international bridges in anticipation of crossing the border.

The convoy had planned to leave the United States last Wednesday on its southward journey with a load of humanitarian aid, but U.S. Treasury Department officials informed them that the trip would violate trade restrictions imposed on the Central American nation in 1985.

Some 30 tons of food, clothing and medical supplies for humanitarian purposes would be allowed as exceptions to the embargo, the government told the convoy, but the 37 vehicles carrying the cargo would not.

Treasury's Office of Foreign Assets Control said the group would have to apply for an export license, post cash bonds equal to the value of the trucks, cars and buses, and give assurance the vehicles would be returned to this country within 30 days.

A Treasury spokesman in Washington said Friday afternoon that Foreign Assets had not changed its position.

"The Customs Service has developed an alternative means by which convoy members can return the vehicles to the United States" with documentation, said James Purser, chief Customs inspector in Laredo.

Brumfield said Customs would make notations about the vehicles before they cross, such as vehicle registration numbers, and turn the information over to Foreign Assets.

"We are doing nothing more than we would do with any other exported vehicle," Brumfield said. "If any action is taken after that it will be by the (Foreign Assets Control)."

Condon said the group plans to leave vehicles in Nicaragua, but never intended to be out of compliance with the law.

The Treasury spokesman, who asked not to be identified, said the convoy's literature stated that it planned to defy the embargo all along.

The convoy began May 21 from different regions in the United States, and arrived in Laredo Tuesday night.

The Treasury spokesman said that the convoy had been notified late in May of a need to secure licenses for exporting the vehicles.

"They never sent us a letter," said Tom Hansen, a member of the convoy's Washington D.C., staff.

Judge wants divorcing couples identified

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Judge Margarito Garza says he no longer will accept divorce cases filed only under the initials of the couple.

Initials in some cases are usdd to obrbtre thd hddnthties of couples.

"Any petition that does not carry a full name as to the petitioner and respondent will be rejected by this court and my clerk will call it to my attention," the judge wrote in a memo to 148th District Court to District Clerk Oscar Soliz.

"If people are too ashamed to let the world know that they are getting divorced, they should stay married," Garza wrote.

Divorce petitions are public record and appear regularly in many newspapers around the state, including the Corpus Christi Caller-Times.

Garza asked Soliz to call the new policy to the attention of anyone who is filing a divorce suit.

An example of what the judge objects to is a case already filed in 148th District Court in the following style:

"In the matter of:
"H.J.W.
"and
"G.M.W."

The case involves a woman who is suing her husband for divorce after 23 years of marriage. Neither of their names is mentioned anywhere in the divorce petition.

An answer the husband's attorney filed also refers to the couple only by initials.

Soliz said he cannot refuse to accept such a case if the petition is in order, and that cases are assigned randomly by computer.

In initials-only cases assigned to Garza's court, Soliz said he will ask attorneys to modify the papers to fit with the judge's specifications.

Judge Joaquin Villarreal of the 347th District Court said he disagrees with Garza's stance on the subject.

Villarreal said a divorce "is a personal matter between husband and wife. If the two parties don't want the public to know they are getting divorced, it's fine with me."

Plane crash victims involved in medicine

ELGIN (AP) — Two Panhandle hospital administratorr. a hospital board member and a physician were killed Friday when a single-engine plane flipped and crashed in a field near this Central Texas community, authorities said.

Killed were Douglas Holmes, Roy Henry Grunden and Jerry Weatherly, all of Perryton, about 110 miles northeast of Amarillo; and V.S. Christopher, 41, of nearby Booker, said Ochiltree County Shdriff Joe Hataway.

Holmes, 36, an X-ray technician, served on the board of directors of Ochiltree General Hospital; Weatherly, 46, was hospital administrator; and Grunden, 34, was nursing administrator, Hataway said. Grunden had recently moved to Perryton from Childress, he said.

Christopher, 41, was a doctor in private practice in Ochiltree and Lipscomb counties and recently opened a home for the elderly in Booker, Hataway said. Christopher owned the airplane, he said.

The men were headed to Austin for a meeting, Hataway said.

Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Mitch Barker identified the plane as a Cessna 205. It crashed about seven miles south of Elgin, some 25 miles east of Austin in Bastrop County, in a grassy field off of Farm Road 1704.

The FAA reported losing the plane on radar at 8:45 a.m., said Department of Public Safety spokesman Mike Cox. The wreckage was found at 8:51 a.m. by a DPS helicopter on a training mission from Austin, he said.

Barker said the plane had been on an instrument landing approach when radar and radio contact were lost.

Bastrop County Deputy Sheriff Con Keirsey said witnesses told him it sounded as though the plane had engine trouble before the crash, and it appeared the pilot was trying to land in the field. Witnesses said the engine sputtered and stopped, then the plane flipped and crashed nose-down.

The propeller was buried in the ground. The plane broke into pieces, with the tail section the largest piece to stay intact.

Jim Childress, who lives across the street from the field where the plane crashed, saw the accident. He was working in his garden when he heard the plane approach.

"He was having engine trouble. It was spitting and sputtering. He was trying to land it," Childress said. "When he lost power, it just went upside-down on him."

DPS spokesman David Wells said it was not known who was piloting the plane.

Justice of the Peace B.T. Henderson of Bastrop said the consensus appeared to be that the crash was caused by engine failure.

"Whether it was caused by lack of fuel or a malfunction of the engine itself has not been determined," Henderson added.

The National Transportation Safety Board is conducting an investigation into the crash with the assistance of the FAA, Barker said. He said he did not know when the investigation would be completed.

Sandra Dawkins, a clerk-typist with the board, said an investigator was to be at the crash site, and no further information was immediately available.

Officials say boy spoiled by attention

EL PASO (AP) — A deaf-mute boy found wandering in Mexico has become spoiled by an army of reporters paying him lots of attention, his caretakers said Friday.

The 7- or 8-year-old boy, who authorities believe could be an American survivor of a plane crash that killed his family, had been scheduled to view some airplanes Friday at El Paso International Airport so officials could see whether he recognized any.

But child welfare workers in Mexico postponed the trip indefinitely to allow the restless boy's ego to deflate.

"Because of too much attention he's been receiving, he's starting to be a little tiresome," said Joel Bustamante, judicial director of the System of the Integrated Family, the agency caring for the child in El Paso's sister city of Ciudad Juarez, Mexico.

"He's not acting like himself," said Pat Ayala, spokeswoman for the Texas Department of Human Services, which is working with Mexican authorities to find the boy's relatives. "They (DIF officials) want to restore normality in his life."

Both officials said Friday that reporters will not be given nearly as much access to the boy as they had since the boy's story became widely publicized a week ago by The Associated Press.

Sabat, as the freckled, brown-haired boy has been named by his Mexican guardians, has been photographed, stared at and entreated to draw pictures in recent weeks by reporters from England, France, Mexico and all over the United States.

On Thursday alone, reporters from two Oklahoma City TV stations visited Sabat, in addition to a reporter from People magazine and two journalists from London, Ms. Ayala said. The day before, reporters from the National Enquirer took a look at the boy.

"The other kids feel left out," Ms. Ayala said.

Sabat's story is compelling because so little of it is known. He is deaf and can't talk, so he communicates by drawing pictures and gesturing. His pictures seem to indicate that he survived the crash of a four-seat, single-engine airplane that killed his parents and sister.

He was found wandering near downtown Juarez last November, and televised and broadcast appeals in Mexico failed to turn up any kin. After Mexican authorities noticed Sabat preferred hamburgers and hot dogs over Mexican fare and responded more enthusiastically toward American cartoon characters, they contacted their Texan counterparts.

The FBI and Human Services have fielded hundreds of phone calls from people offering tips and asking whether they can adopt Sabat. The Center for Missing and Exploited Children has supplied the FBI's El Paso office with information on approximately 20 young boys who roughly fit Sabat's description, but no firm leads have turned up, officials said.

The DHS has had to assign one worker full-time just to handle adoption inquiries, Ms. Ayala said. Potential adopters face long odds: if the boy's relatives can't be found, a Mexican family likely will adopt him.

"Unless we're able to make a positive identification as a U.S. citizen or even a legal resident, he remains in Mexican custody," she said.

There is some conjecture that Sabat is from Oklahoma because he recognizes the outline of that saucepan-shaped state, said Juan Ramon Hernandez, director general of DIF in Juarez. He also becomes excited and points at himself when he sees a U.S. flag, Hernandez said.

When shown an Oklahoma map, Sabat points vaguely to the northwest corner of the state, Ms. Ayala said, adding, "It's hard to tell if he recognizes that part of the state or whether he was just playing with his finger."

Doctor says AIDS carrier hasn't told partners about his condition

EL PASO (AP) — Health workers say they can do nothing yet about an AIDS carrier who allegedly has sex with high school students without using condoms or informing his partners about his condition.

Two people complained to the El Paso City-County Health District that they learned only after having sex with the man that he had earlier tested positive to the virus that causes acquired immune deficiency syndrome, said Dr. Laurance Nickey, director of the health district.

But Nickey said Friday that neither complainant wants to file a public, criminal complaint with police — and that nothing can be done to stop the man until he is charged with a crime.

"It is a very deadly serious situation," Nickey said.

Officials said the man has been diagnosed as testing positive to the AIDS virus and suffering from chronic illness. That means he does not yet have AIDS, but that he can transmit the disease.

The man, whom officials refuse to identify by name, age, ethnicity or neighborhood, has sought counseling with the Rio Bravo Association, said Jaime Perez, director of the AIDS hospice and counseling center.

Perez said he knows the man has had unprotected sex with male high school students, but he doesn't know the students' identities.

Perez said he advocates quarantining the man in accordance with a new state law that gives state district judges the power to order AIDS carriers to be put under house arrest if they continue to endanger the lives of others.

The man would have to be charged with assault or assault with intent to murder in order to be quarantined, Nickey said.

The health district sent a letter June 2 to the man, telling him to stop having unprotected sex with uninformed partners or suffer the legal consequences, but the man has not yet replied, Nickey said.

"He is knowingly infecting other people," Perez said. "So I see nothing wrong with incarcerating or putting him under house arrest. This man was making a mockery of the suffering we deal with every day... "

Contra leader asks for additional U.S. military aid

Calero

WASHINGTON (AP) — Following the collapse of the Nicaraguan peace talks, a Contra leader on Friday called for a resumption of U.S. military aid to the rebels, saying the alternative could be Sandinista annihilation of his forces.

Meanwhile, Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., urged the White House to propose an aid package for the Contras that matches the amount of military assistance he said the Soviet Union provided to the Sandinista government during the first three months of this year. He put the amount at $105 million.

The Contra leader, Adolfo Calero, indicated he felt that was a reasonable amount. The rebels have received no military aid since Feb. 29. President Reagan's last military aid request for the Contras was rejected by the House on Feb. 3.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Reagan was "disappointed at the Sandinista rejection of the Nicaraguan Resistance proposal to achieve democracy and an end to the war in Nicaragua."

Fitzwater said the president had directed State Department counselor Max Kampelman — who is planning to visit Central American democracies to discuss the recent U.S.-Soviet summit in Moscow — to "seek the views of the leaders of the democracies on the current situation in Nicaragua as well."

Rep. David Bonior, D-Mich., a leader of the anti-Contra forces in the House, called for additional efforts to achieve a peace settlement before a new military aid request is considered.

"This is no time to be talking of military aid," he said.

The Reagan administration blamed the Nicaraguan government for the breakdown in talks, but said no decision had been made about whether to ask Congress for more aid for the insurgents.

Presidential spokesman Fitzwater said, "I think that in view of the Sandinistas' actions here, their unwillingness to negotiate in good faith, their unwillingness to instill democratic reforms, you may well see a press for Contra aid from members of the Congress and from people in Nicaragua and from other sources, but at this point we have made no decisions."

"While there are no talks scheduled, we still hope that a peaceful solution can be achieved," Fitzwater said. "It is clear that the lack of progress is due to Sandinista intransigence over democratic reform."

He said that "without clear or lasting democratic reforms being implemented, the Contras cannot be expected to make unilateral concessions. We urge that the Sandinistas show the same good will in the negotiating process that the resistance has exhibited during these talks."

Calero told a news conference the aid was needed because of Sandinista threats to wipe out the insurgents if the latest round of peace talks did not produce a final settlement to the Nicaraguan war.

"The only alternative we have in the face of those threats is to defend ourselves. And to defend ourselves we need military aid. We should get military aid," Calero said.

Calero spoke a day after the leftist Sandinista government and the Contras broke off peace talks in Managua although both sides said a temporary truce would remain in effect.

Calero blamed the Sandinistas for the failure of the talks, saying they "are horrified by the mere thought of democracy."

Nicaraguan Defense Minister Humberto Ortega, head of the Sandinista delegation, had said Thursday the Contras held "irrational positions" and maintained an "anti-negotiation attitude against the peace."

An unexpected development in the talks was a disclosure by Paul Reichler, an American lawyer who works for the Sandinistas, that he had been holding secret talks with Alfredo Cesar, the chief Contra negotiator, for nearly four months.

Reichler said he had struck a deal with Cesar but that Cesar was unable to persuade other members of the Contra directorate to go along. Both Cesar and Calero are in the five-member directorate of the Nicaragaun Resistance. Cesar is considered to be the most liberal member, and Calero reflects the conservative wing of the organization.

Cesar called Reichler's account "completely false."

Calero said he wants to hear more about the alleged discussions from Cesar but made it clear he opposes back-channel negotiating.

He said Reichler asked him for a private meeting when the two were in Managua recently. "I said no thank you. That's my attitude on backroom talks," Calero said.

The goal of the latest negotiating round, which began on Tuesday, was to end the war and install democratic reforms, in accordance with a preliminary peace plan signed on March 23 in Sapoa, Nicaragua.

The discussions had been described as the fourth and final round of a series which have taken place under an interim truce.

House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, expressed disappointment at the breakdown in the talks, saying he had believed the two sides were near agreement. "I don't lay blame because I don't know what happened," he said.

Reagan wants to sell U.S.' most sophisticated warplane to Kuwaiti

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration said Friday it wants to sell up to 40 F-A-18 warplanes to Kuwait, which would be the first Arab state to get America's most sophisticated fighter-bombers.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater announced the proposed sale and said the triggering of a 50-day process under which Congress could block the proposed $1 billion sale was imminent.

The sale would be part of an administration policy of arming Persian Gulf nations endangered by attacks spilling over from the 7-year-old Iran-Iraq war. Gulf states have also benefited from U.S. naval cover for tankers plying the oil routes.

Congressional opposition to the sale is likely, however, from members who have noted that Kuwait, like other Arab nations, is technically in a state of war with Israel. Some lawmakers also have complained that U.S. arms sales to the region will contribute to an already-dangerous weapons buildup in the gulf, without enhancing U.S. security.

State Department officials met privately with members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on Thursday in an effort to allay some of those fears.

Richard W. Murphy, assistant secretary of state for Near East affairs, said last month that the administration favored the sale of advanced aircraft to Kuwait, but Friday's announcement was the first on-the-record word that the F-A-18, produced by McDonnell Douglas, was chosen over other candidates.

F-A-18s, the newest jets in the U.S. Navy's carrier-based arsenal, are twin-engine craft vith the lZtest dlectronic guidance systems. Kuwait chose these planes because they could hit targets throughout the gulf and could make a quick transition between bombing and interception missions.

Pentagon officials said also considered were F-16s, older planes with dual capability but less versatility to change roles quickly, and the F-15, which is a high-performance fighter with limited bomber capacity.

Only Australia, Canada and Spain — all formal allies of the United States — have been permitted to buy F-A-18s.

If Kuwait purchases all 40 planes authorized, the contract would be worth about $1 billion for McDonnell Douglas, which competes heavily with the French makers of the Mirage 2000 jet.

A State Department arms expert said Friday that one of the arguments the administration could make to Congress is that if Kuwait is denied permission to buy F-A-18s, it will turn to Mirages, giving the French manufacturer the profit.

Hispanic man's death triggers rioting

PERTH AMBOY, N.J. (AP) — Emotions ran high Friday in the wake of two nights of rioting, and Hispanic leaders called for an end to what they see as a history of police brutality against members of their community.

The rioting Wednesday and Thursday was triggered by the fatal shooting of one Hispanic man and the wounding of another by an off-duty policeman.

Rock-throwing rioters broke store windows, looted and toppled a car in a display reminiscent of the 1960s.

Some said the rioting was the work of opportunist troublemakers using the recent shooting as an excuse to wreak havoc in this normally quiet industrial community evenly divided between whites and Hispanics.

Mayor George J. Otlowski decided Friday against a curfew or closing bars and liquor stores, saying that would only increase tensions. He said Hispanic leaders should work with members of their community to restore calm.

Hispanic leaders responded by calling for the ouster of the police chief.

The violence was touched off when off-duty narcotics officer Allen C. Fuller shot and killed Carmen Coria and critically wounded Coria's brother, Matteo, outside a bar early Monday.

Authorities are still investigating the case, but Fuller has said he fired at the men because he believed his life was threatened by Carmen Coria, who he said approached him holding a bottle. Fuller was suspended with pay pending the outcome of the investigation.

Middlesex County Prosecutor Alan Rockoff said his office will present its findings to a grand jury.

On Wednesday, small bands of people leaving a city council meeting threw rocks through store windows and burned out trash cans.

The problems worsened Thursday night when 1,000 marchers at a funeral for Coria confronted police, who wore riot gear in anticipation of trouble. Small bands of people also dispersed through the business district, smashing store windows with rock-filled plastic bags and toppling at least one car.

Police arrested 20 people and some officers were hospitalized after being hit with rocks.

Hispanic leaders called for a special prosecutor to investigate the shooting, but Otlowski said the county prosecutor could handle the case.

Members of the Hispanic community interviewed Friday said Coria's shooting brought to a head tensions between the police department and Hispanics.

"This is just the result of years of abuse," said Sam Cruz, a member of the Hispanic Community Ad Hoc Committee and one of Thursday night's marchers. "We couldn't control them in the streets. We don't want no violence."

Eddie Rodriguez, a lawyer for the Coria family, called for police Chief Edward Mullen to step aside, blaming Mullen for Thursday night's clash.

"We have communicated to the mayor the desire of the community to end all real or perceived police overaction or inaction in many instances where our people have been mistreated," Rodriguez said.

On a street corner near the riot scene, a Hispanic man identifying himself only as Manny said police officers frequently abuse suspects by pushing them roughly, using bad language and in some cases punching and kicking them.

"They should have a little moderation. They should have a little more justification when they're throwing a guy around. That's all. Be a little more moderate," said Manny.

The mayor declined to comment further on Fuller, but said the 109-member police force had at least 12 allegations of brutality in recent years and "three or four" officers had been fired or resigned because of such allegations.

Otlowski and police officers who spoke on condition they not be identified said most of the rioters were people commonly in trouble with the law, taking their frustrations out against the city for reasons that have nothing to do with racial tension.

"Some of these guys last night I see every day," said one officer who asked his name not be used. "Some of them don't even live here."

In August 1966, an anti-loitering ordinance appeared to set off four nights of violence after a Hispanic man was arrested. Hispanics said the ordinance violated their custom of visiting with friends on the street. They also complained then of rough treatment by police and of being ignored by the community.

California quake stops clocks, sloshes pool water

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A rolling earthquake jolted a large area of cental and Southern California on Friday, closing a vital aqueduct, catapulting rocks onto a freeway, sloshing swimming pool water and scaring residents.

No injury or serious damage was immediately reported, but authorities shut down the 440-mile California Aqueduct after the quake knocked out electrical power to at least two pumping stations.

"That aqueduct services over half the water in Southern California," said senior operator Gene Palilla of the Metropolitan Water District. There was still a supply of water in reservoirs supplying the region, officials said.

The quake's preliminary magnitude was estimated at 5.2 on the Richter scale, said Robert Finn, spokesman for the California Institute of Technology seismology laboratory in Pasadena.

He said it occurred at 4:06 p.m. and was centered about 70 miles northwest of downtown Los Angeles or 33 miles south-southeast of Bakersfield.

A series of aftershocks also were measured by Caltech, with the biggest measuring 4.0 at 4:22 p.m., said Riley Geary, a seismic analyst.

"It was not on the San Andreas Fault," said Steve Bryant, another seismic analyst at Caltech. The University of California Seiosmographic Stations in Berkeley said the quake also registered magnitude 5.2.

The quake ruptured the 200-mile Garlock fault, the state's second-longest after the San Andreas, said Lucile Jones of the U.S. Geological Survey.

She said the quake was the largest this century on the Garlock, which historically has produced quakes up to about magnitude 7 every 500 years.

The epicenter was on the Grapevine, where Interstate 5 climbs out of the San Joaquin Valley and into the Tehachapi Mountains, said Amy Branch of Caltech.

The quake caused minor warping of a floor at the state prison at Tehachapi, about 30 miles east of the epicenter, said deputy warden Chuck Stowell.

The quake catapulted rocks onto the northbound lanes of Interstate 5 near the Grapevine, but traffic continued to flow while crews cleaned up the rocks, said the California Highway Patrol reported.

Transportation secretary advocates drug tests for interstate truckers

WEST HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (AP) — U.S. Transportation Secretary Jim Burnley called Friday for drug tests for up to 5 million drivers of interstate trucks, passenger buses and vehicles carrying hazardous materials.

"We must act to identify those commercial drivers who abuse drugs and get them off the roads. When one drugged truck or bus driver goes out on the road, he not only puts the lives of many people in danger, he gives the entire work force a bad reputation," Burnley said.

His announcement at a news conference here follows similar proposals unveiled in March for the aviation industry and in May for railroads.

There are no firm statistics to indicate how many truck drivers are drug abusers, Burnley said. But he cited a June 1987 test of 317 tractor-trailer drivers in Tennessee that showed 15 percent of the drivers tested positive for marijuana, cocaine or prescription stimulants.

He also noted a survey of 1,300 truck drivers in Florida in which 36 percent said they sometimes drove under the influence of drugs.

"When society has a drug problem, no segment of our population, from welfare recipients to Wall Street brokers, is exempt from it. The trucking industry is clearly vulnerable as well," Burnley said.

"Operating these large, heavy vehicles requires that a driver be fully alert and in complete control of his mental faculties," he added.

The proposed rule would cover 3 million to 5 million people who drive commercial motor vehicles weighing more than 10,000 pounds, vehicles that transport 16 or more people or vehicles that transport hazardous materials. School bus drivers and city bus drivers would not be affected by the proposal, he said.

The Department of Transportation is proposing five types of drug testing: pre-employment, random, post-accident, as part of a physical, and for reasonable cause when a trucker is suspected of using narcotics.

Burnley did not suggest a budget or method of payment for the drug testing plan.

In Washington, the American Trucking Associations endorsed the effort but expressed concerns about how the tests would be implemented.

Lana Batts, a legislative specialist at the trade organization, said there is concern the tests would focus on drivers for large companies and not reach many of the estimated 400,000 owner-operator drivers and those driving for small companies.

The Transportation Department has suggested small companies or independent operators might join together to develop a testing program.

Batts said the trucking companies favor legislation calling for roadside drug tests for truckers to be established as a pilot program in four states. That legislation has passed the Senate, but has yet to be considered in the House.

Burnley said he would ask for help from the industry and the public in seeking effective ways to reach independent truckers.

The program calls for those whose positive drug tests are confirmed in follow-ups to be barred from driving in interstate commerce. Depending on circumstances, the employee could be reinstated upon successful completion of a rehabilitation program.

The program does not cover alcohol abuse because states already have strict laws governing drunken drivers, he said. Burnley added that studies have shown truck drivers use less alcohol but more stimulants than the public.

Vatican officials meet with Soviet church's clergymen

WORLD

By MARK J. PORUBCANSKY

MOSCOW (AP) — Two of the Vatican's highest officials met with clergymen of an underground Catholic church Friday in the first official contact since Josef Stalin crushed the church more than 40 years ago.

Their meeting at a Moscow hotel was kept quiet by both sides and was a contrast to the official celebration of the 1,000th anniversary of Christianity in what now is the Soviet Union.

Friday's event in that observance was a gala at the Bolshoi Theater attended by Raisa Gorbachev, wife of Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev. American evangelist Billy Graham and Rabbi Arthur Schneier, head of the Appeal of Conscience Foundation of New York, were among the speakers.

Members of the delegation said two bishops and three priests of the Ukrainian Catholic Church met at the hotel with two cardinals from the Vatican: Secretary of State Agostino Casaroli and Johannes Willebrands, head of the Secretariat for Christian Unity.

The meeting and the appearance of the Soviet leader's wife at a religious event emphasized the changing attitude of the Communist Party, which is officially atheist.

"The meeting was very warm and fruitful. It gave us much hope and strength," said Ivan Gel, a lay leader of the Ukrainian Catholic Church who accompanied the church delegation to the hotel. "This kind of official meeting was the first in more than 40 years."

He said previous contacts were informal, at lower levels, and Friday's meeting would not have been possible without the reforms Gorbachev is making in Soviet society.

It lasted 90 minutes, three times longer than scheduled, Gel said.

Vatican officials would not talk about the meeting. Members of the Ukrainian delegation canceled a news conference, saying they had promised not to discuss it further and were returning to the Ukrain later Friday.

No information was available about whether Pope John Paul II addressed the issue of Ukrainian Catholics in a letter to Gorbachev brought by Casaroli, the No. 2 Vatican official.

Religious groups must be registered with the government, which puts strict limits on the practice of religion. Officials have not recognized Ukrainian Catholic groups, making their religious services illegal.

Officials say the Ukrainian Catholic Church numbers 4-5 million believers, primarily in the western Ukraine. It was forcibly assimilated into the Russian Orthodox Church in 1946 when Stalin consolidated his control over lands captured at the end of World War II.

Gel said 11 bishops were imprisoned under Stalin and only three survived to carry on the consecration of other bishops and priests.

"The meeting was very warm and fruitful. It gave us much hope and strength. This kind of official meeting was the first in more than 40 years."

— Ivan Gel, a lay leader Ukrainian Catholic Church

Bishops Safron Kurchaba and Pavlo Vasilik led the Ukrainian Church delegation to the meeting Friday, said Gel, who accompanied the group to the Sovietskaya Hotel but did not attend the meeting.

The Russian Orthodox Church opposes recognition of the Ukrainian church but has said it will discuss the issue with Vatican representatives in Finland later this month.

Others at the Bolshoi said Mrs. Gorbachev, dressed in a gray suit and red blouse, sat in the front row of about 80 church and government dignitaries. She listened to several hours of speeches and chatted with church and government officials.

Schneier said Mrs. Gorbachev blushed when he turned from the audience, faced her and said, alluding to the biblical story of creation:

"You have been a trusted and devoted helpmate to your husband. Your presence here is more than symbolic. It shows that as his helpmate you are in sympathy with his cause and in support of his pronouncements on the rights of believers."

Graham said, according to a text of his remarks, that he was "encouraged by reports that there is a new readiness on the part of both churches and the state to face the mistakes of the past, and to seek together to find new ways of expanding the religious rights and opportunities of believers and religious groups within the framework of your socialist society."

Patriarch Pimen, head of the church, called Gorbachev a "tireless architect of perestroika and a herald of new political thinking," the official news agency Tass reported.

It said others present included Vice President Pyotr N. Demichev; Nikolai V. Talyzin, the first deputy premier, and Konstantin Kharchev, head of the government Council for Religious Affairs.

CULLIGAN DRINKING WATER SYSTEM GIVEN SEAL OF APPROVAL!

THE ONLY WATER TREATMENT MANUFACTURER THAT HAS RECEIVED THE NATIONAL SANITATION FOUNDATION'S LISTING FOR REDUCTION OF 11 WATER CONTAMINANTS

The nation's leading environment and health standards and certification organization, the National Sanitation Foundation, has granted its official Listing Mark and authorization to use it to Culligan International Company's Aqua-Cleer H-82 drinking water system.

Culligan's Aqua-Cleer H-82 system is the first drinking water system to be listed under National Sanitation Foundation Standard 58. The Aqua-Cleer H-82 is a reverse osmosis system representing the best technology available to reduce a wide variety of undersirable contaminants, such as lead, sodium and nitrates, at the point-of-use.

"This mark is an unprecedented third-party certification for our system," says Donald Mahlstedt, vice president of Culligan, household products division. "No other water treatment manufacturer has received the Listing for reduction of these contaminants."

The listing under these standards is specifically for reduction of the total dissolved solids, hexavalent chromium, trivalent chromium, arsenic, barium, cadmium, flouride, lead, mercury, selenium, asbestos and nitrate. In addition to contamination reduction testing, NSF also verifies that product materials do not impart impurities into the water. All of these chemicals are regulated by the EPA under the Safe Drinking Water Act and are potentially harmful if ingested in significant quantities.

Development threatening many African languages

ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast (AP) — When Gregoire Dhomanse steps out the door of his birthplace, he enters a world where no one speaks his language.

Dhomanse, a retired mason, lives in Blokauss, once a village on a sleepy lagoon, whose inhabitants spoke a language called Ebrie.

Now their village is a neighborhood in Abidjan, surrounded by modern skyscrapers, super highways, shops and apartment buildings. Gone are their fields of yams, cocoa and coffee.

And like many other Africans, the people of Blokauss must speak French to be understood outside their neighborhood.

The Ivory Coast has about 60,000 Ebrie speakers, in Blokauss and other villages along the coast. Their distinctive language and culture are threatened by modern development, population growth and the increasing reliance on French.

"The development can't be stopped," said Koutouan Cassien, a retired primary school director, living in Blokauss. "Our future is the future of Ivory Coast."

The more dominant African languages are succeeding in taking over the functions of European languages, said Joseph Opala, an American linguist and anthroplogist at the University of Sierra Leone, but he added: "As major African languages gain in importance, many local African languages on the periphery will undoubtedly become extinct."

Some African languages, such as Hausa, a widely spoken commercial language in Niger and northern Nigeria, have adapted well to European culture, said Malam Moussa, director of adult literacy education in Niger. He added that Hausa has become a richer language because of the adaptation.

Many reasons are given for the demise of Africa's smaller languages, but the influence of European culture and the growth of dominant African languages play a part.

In countries like the Ivory Coast, French became the principle means of communications because none of its 50 tribal languages became dominant. In Kenya, the emergence of Swahili kept English from becoming the lingua franca.

Ivory Coast's rapid economic development also accelerated the dominance of French. The country also has a well-developed educational system, which has stressed French and pushed national languages into the background.

"Africans are nervous that if their languages disappear, part of them will disappear as well," said Kuadio Jeremie, director of Institute of Applied Linguistics at the University of Abidjan. "We are in a position where we haven't fully adapted to European culture, nor completely abandoned our own culture."

What has emerged in Africa is a system called "diglossia," where European and African languages serve different functions in society, said Opala.

European languages, he added, were used on a formal level for government and commerce. African languages were spoken informally as street and traditional market languages.

"Words that represent new things are borrowed and adapted to the language," said Moussa, a Hausa speaker. "It's natural."

When automobiles arrived in Hausaland they were given the name "mota," which is similar to the English motor. In Zimbabwe, Shona speakers use "motocari," an adaptation of motor car, the British term for automobile.

Some nations, both former French and English colonies, have rejected demands that one tribal language be made their official language on grounds it would risk polarizing different ethnic groups.

"It's a question of political will," said Professor Niangoran Bouah, an anthropologist at the University of Abidjan. "Besides, French has all the advantages the other languages don't. It is an official language, a technical language, a work language and the international diplomatic language."

Niger has shown that, even in former French colonies; local languages can flourish. In 1973 it implemented an experimental primary education system aimed at making students literate in their own language. There are now 30 such schools providing an alternative to the regular primary schools where only French is used.

Bouah said he believes Ivory Coast should introduce local language instruction into the national educational system, but it may be too late.

"We are well engaged in the development of French, and I wonder if we will ever be able to return to maternal languages," he said.

Local languages remain strong in former British colonies because they were left alone, said George Kahari, a Zimbabwean linguist and African literature scholar at the University of Zimbabwe.

He noted that Zimbabwe, formerly British Rhodesia, has a strong tradition of African literature published in local languages, especially in Shona, the principle national language.

On the other hand, "the French insisted they were bringing a cultured, civilized language to Africa and actively promoted its domination over local languages," he said.

East Germany discusses plan to pay survivors

POTSDAM, East Germany (AP) A U.S. official on Friday discussed with East German leaders a plan that for the first time would provide payments from this communist nation to Jewish victims of the Nazi Holocaust.

U.S. Deputy Secretary of State John Whitehead met with Foreign Minister Oskar Fischer to discuss details of East German plan, made public by the official ADN news agency Wednesday.

"We welcome the announcement," Whitehead said.

The ADN dispatch said East Germany was prepared to lend "humanitarian aid" to Jewish survivors of the Holocaust living outside its borders.

East German officials previously had argued that their nation, which was formed in 1949, bore no legal or moral responsibility for the actions of Adolf Hitler's Third Reich.

Whitehead said Friday that the amount of payments "is currently being discussed."

On Monday, Heinz Galanski, chairman of the West German Jewish Council, said East Germany was prepared to pay up to $100 million to Holocaust victims.

Whitehead that he and Fischer would meet again within a few days again to discuss the issue.

"We hope this matter can be resolved in the near future," Whitehead said.

More than 6 million Jews were killed under Nazi rule.

In 1952, the Luxembourg Agreement covering reparations was signed by the World Jewish Congress and West Germany, but not by East Germany.

Since then, West Germany has paid more than 80 billion marks — worth $48 billion in today's currency exchange — to Holocaust survivors.

Whitehead indicated that there was an urgency in providing the additional aid.

"It is a tragic situation (the plight of Holocaust survivors) because the victims, if you think about it, are now quite elderly. There are only a small number of them left," Whitehead said.

Man suspected of stabbing mayor arrested, has house bulldozed

JELAZOUN, Occupied West Bank (AP) — The army arrested a 26-year-old Palestinian suspected of stabbing an Israeli-appointed Arab mayor and bulldozed his cinderblock house Friday in the Jelazoun refugee camp.

The army said Khamis Jawdat Faraj had stalked Hassan Tawil, 74, the mayor of El Bireh, and knifed him as an act of Palestinian nationalism. Tawil was critically wounded.

Elsewhere in the West Bank, troops ordered about 100 Israelis out of the village of Beita, where the Israelis were planting olive trees to protest the army's uprooting of orchards and demolition of 14 Arab houses.

The uprootings and demolitions were in retaliation for an April 6 clash between villagers and Israeli settlers in which two Palestinians and a 15-year-old Jewish girl were killed.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir returned from a five-day trip to the United States and told reporters he urged Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze to support direct peace talks between Israel and its Arab neighbors.

The army said in a statement it arrested Faraj on Thursday night.

A large yellow bulldozer leveled the three-room house where Faraj lived with his 60-year-old mother. Only an almond tree, plum tree and rose bush were left standing.

Before sending about a dozen vehicles and two bulldozers into Jelazoun, the army imposed a curfew and cut electricity to the camp where about 5,000 Palestinians live. It is about 20 miles north of Jerusalem.

Troops removed belongings from the house and found Marxist and Palestinian nationalist literature inside. Then one of the bulldozers rumbled up to the one-story house and knocked it down, raising a huge cloud of dust.

"They are destroying our house — I don't know what for," said Nozha Faraj as she watched.

The army said her son had been detained several times previously for alleged participation in anti-Israeli disturbances.

According to the daily Haaretz, Tawil, who was stabbed Tuesday, was able to identify his assailant. Tawil said the man asked him for help in obtaining a passport before stabbing him.

In Beita, troops uprooted the trees being planted by an Israeli group called "Committee for Beita." They threw one of the saplings onto the highway. The move prompted the Israelis to shout: "Shoot the trees!"

The Israeli group seeks reparations to villagers whose homes were destroyed or damaged by the army in punishment for the clash.

Jewish settlers and the army initially blamed Arab villagers for the death of Israeli teen-ager Tirza Porat, but an army report later determined she was killed by a bullet fired by an Israeli guarding the group.

According to U.N. figures, 204 Palestinians and two Israelis have been killed since the uprising began on Dec. 8. About 5,000 Arabs have been injured and 5,000 arrested.

After Moslem prayers in Gaza City on Friday, troops fired tear gas to disperse about 50 protesters who threw rocks at soldiers from rooftops and chanted "PLO, Israel No!"

Also Friday, Arab newspapers reported the army arrested two more Palestinian reporters and a writer. The army has detained 21 Arab journalists for six months without trial to try to curb the Palestinian press, which it blames for inciting unrest.

Statue unleashes 'new Dreyfus affair'

PARIS (AP) — Nearly a century after the famed Dreyfus Affair divided France, a statue of Capt. Alfred Dreyfus has unleashed a debate over anti-Semitism, racial hatred, and the National Front party.

Culture Minister Jack Lang, who commissioned the statue and spoke when it went on public display Thursday, said the attitudes that led to the Jewish army officer's false conviction for treason survive in today's France in the form of the extreme-right National Front.

The party's head, Jean-Marie Le Pen, ran on an anti-immigration platform in April's first-round presidential elections and took a surprising 14.4 percent of the vote.

"The National Front is the party of the anti-Dreyfusards," he said, three days before runoff elections for National Assembly.

Le Pen denies accusations of racism and anti-Semitism.

The Dreyfus affair was launched by French author Emile Zola in his broadside "J'Accuse" (I Accuse), which charged that false evidence with anti-Semitic motives was used to frame Dreyfus on charges of giving military secrets to the Germans.

The case raged for years, dividing France into pro-Dreyfusards and anti-Dreyfusards. Zola fled the country to avoid punishment for libel but was later cleared.

The 11-foot-tall statue, which shows Dreyfus standing at attention and holding a broken saber upright in front of his face, sparked a public debate even before it was finished.

In 1985, Lang proposed placing it in the Ecole Militaire courtyard where Dreyfus was stripped of his rank and dishonored in a ceremony on Jan. 5, 1895.

When the statue by sculptor Louis Mitelberg was completed in 1986, the conservative government of former Premier Jacques Chirac decided not to put it on public display.

Lang said he hoped the statue could be displayed near the courthouse in central Paris where judicial proceedings eventually cleared Dreyfus of any guilt 12 years after he was exiled to Devil's Island. Dreyfus later was reinstated as a major in the army and received the Legion of Honor.

So far, the city administration under Chirac, who remains mayor of Paris, has balked, Lang said. Because the Tuileries is national property, the city's agreement was not needed to place the statue there.

Soviets say U.S, Pakistan violate accord

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze on Friday accused Pakistan of violating the accord on the Afghan war by continuing to give arms to the rebels, and he said the United States is partly to blame.

At a news conference, he repeated a Soviet Foreign Ministry statement that if violations continue, the Soviet Union may be obliged to review the nine-month schedule for troop withdrawal stipulated in the accord.

The United States and Soviet Union are guarantors of the Afghanistan agreement signed by Afghanistan and Pakistan on April 14 in Geneva.

In another development, the United Nations on Friday called on the world community to donate more than $1 billion over 18 months to help the people of Afghanistan resettle their war-shattered nation.

Pakistan and Afghanistan agreed not to interfere in each other's internal affairs under terms of the Geneva accord, and many observers say Pakistan's training and arming of Afghan guerrillas is a clear violation. The United States also supports and has supplied arms to the rebels and is Pakistan's major arms supplier.

In his statement at the Soviet Mission on Friday, Shevardnadze said in answer to a question: "When we criticize Pakistan for non-compliance, for non-observance of its obligations under the Geneva agreement, we also, of course, have in mind the United States."

"If Pakistan is violating the Geneva accords, of course, the United States, too, bears a portion of the responsibility," he said.

He said that if violations by Pakistan continue, "then we may have to review the schedule of withdrawal of Soviet troops, and we believe this would be quite legal."

Diplomats said that Shevardnadze's statement was his first criticism of the United States by name for aiding Afghan rebels.

In a speech to the General Assembly on disarmament Wednesday, Shevardnadze also indirectly criticized the United States on the Afghanistan issue and said U.S. actions could harm the possible settlement of other regional issues.

Under the Afghan accord, the Soviet Union agreed to withdraw more than 110,000 troops over nine months, beginning May 15. About a third are to be withdrawn in the first three months.

Afghan leader Najib said this week that 34,000 Soviet troops have left, while Soviet officials said 15,000 had been withdrawn.

Prince Sadruddin Aga Khan, the coordinator of the United Nation's humanitarian and economic assistance program for Afghanistan, said a $1.2 billion relief program is needed to see the Afghan people through two crop cycles.

The nearly decade-long war between the communist government in Kabul and the Moslem rebels has crippled agricultural production in Afghanistan.

The $1.2 billion amount "is not the total needs of Afghanistan, but what we, after a very careful estimate, what we feel can be absorbed," Sadruddin said.

Italian women rally for 'society without violence'

ROME (AP) — A 30-year-old woman who was seized and raped by three young men in Rome's historic center has become a rallying point for Italian women seeking to be able to walk the streets alone at night in safety.

M.C., as the Italian press identifies her, has unwittingly galvanized a campaign for tougher laws against sexual assault and challenged the age-old taboo in Italy that women shouldn't be out alone after dark.

"Rome is splendid by day, but by night for any woman who ventures into the street, it's only dark and dangerous," said Tina Lagostena Bassi, a leading attorney for women's causes who helped represent M.C.

In 1986, 1,149 rapes were reported to police in Italy, according to the latest government statistics, but women's groups say many more cases go unreported.

None has attracted more public attention than the ordeal of M.C., whose rape March 6 in the heart of the capital and the trial of her three attackers has been front-page news in Italian newspapers and subject of an editorial in the Vatican's daily newspaper.

On March 26, two days after her attackers were convicted and each sentenced to prison for four years and eight months, more than 100,000 people marched through central Rome in a demonstration for women's rights.

M.C. appeared on the podium at the end of the rally, the biggest women's demonstration in the capital since the pro-abortion marches at the end of the 1970s.

"We want a society without violence," Carla Passalacqua, one of the rally organizers, said as women of all ages from all parts of Italy, ranging from olive pickers from Calabria to computer programmers in Milan, marched past.

"We're in a very grave situation now," she added. "No woman can walk the streets alone at night without fear of being raped. But today we are saying she should be able to."

According to police and court testimony, M.C. was assaulted by three men near Piazza Navona, one of central Rome's most popular squares, as she walked home at about 1 a.m. after dinner with friends.

The three, all in their early 20s, were arrested by a policeman who happened on the scene. The policeman testified that he found the three men lined up with their pants down in front of the woman, who he said was half-naked on the ground, her face bloodied, in a dark corner.

"Aw c'mon, you don't want to arrest us for something like this?" one of the men was quoted by Italian media as telling the policeman.

M.C. was taken to a hospital, where she was reported as telling authorities: "Yes, they were raping me. Two boys were holding me by the arms and another was trying to do something with me."

The woman, with short dark hair and eyes covered by dark sunglasses, testified in the trial that she could not remember exactly what happened after the men approached her.

The defendants, who were described by their families as good, law-abiding "boys," gave conflicting testimony. One admitted to having sex with the woman, but all claimed that she had initiated the encounter.

The packed courtroom burst into chaos when a defense lawyer, Augusto Addamiano, said in closing arguments that M.C. decided to accuse the three of rape "rather than admit that she was willingly performing obscene acts in a public place."

The judge, Antonino Stipo, ordered police to clear the courtroom as feminists and the defendants' relatives screamed at each other and at the lawyers.

Hours later, the judge announced the three were guilty of rape, performing obscene acts in public and causing injury. Their lawyers have appealed.

"This trial was emblematic," Mrs. Bassi, one of M.C.'s lawyers, said in an interview. "It's one of so many cases. But I'm happy with the attention the trial received. In a way, it's women re-claiming their rights to go out alone and do what they want."

The notion that women shouldn't be out on the street alone at night was raised by the defendants' parents.

"What was that woman doing at 1:30 in the morning walking around alone?" Giacomo Putti, father of one of the three men, told Italian newspapers. "A respectable person is at home at that hour. What was she looking for?"

When a reporter asked why his son was out so late, the father responded, "They're boys. A pizza with friends, then they go around to have fun."

An editorial in the L'Osservatore Romano, the Vatican newspaper, criticized the parents for expressing "wonder that a woman should walk around alone at that hour, rather than being upset and expressing pain for the crime committed by their sons."

Book advises on surviving hijacking

By STEVE KATZ

LONDON (AP) — Not only does it offer tips on how to live on seawater or finding your way out of a jungle, Martyn Forrester's new survival manual has advice on how to get through a hijacking.

Martyn Forrester claims his "Survival Skills Handbook" includes the first "how-to" guide for hijack hostages.

"The book is about survival in any situation...whether your plane has crashed or whether you're in a situation where you are trapped, you're a hostage," he said in an interview.

"The main premise of the book is that you'll survive if you think you can. No situation shows that better than the hostage situation."

Most of Forrester's suggestions involve coping mentally with being held hostage.

Captives should "keep busy with mental activity and avoid depression," he writes. "Always remember that the captors can control your body, but they cannot control your mind."

Hostages should try to establish a rapport with their kidnappers, he advises, but adds that "logic is not valid in this sort of situation: relate on an emotional level."

Communicating with a nervous, trigger-happy hijacker can be risky, he says, but "it's something that's worth trying if you physically can."

The book also suggests precautions for international travelers worried about hijackers: don't wear military-style clothing or carry military identification papers.

"You'd be surprised at the number of people who get on airplanes in camouflage military jackets and dog tags around their necks," Forrester said.

The book also recommends that air passengers carry family photographs in their passports or wallets.

"They will make you appear a family person with dependents, and a less likely candidate, it is hoped, for execution."

Forrester said the book's section on hostages and hijackings contains "tried and tested" ideas, as well as "theoretical models of people who are dealing in this field,...clinical psychologists who are actually involved in hostage situations."

With hijackers becoming more sophisticated, he said, potential victims need to be better prepared.

In a hijacking, he said, "what you can do to physically help yourself is incredibly limited. But what you can do to keep yourself sane is entirely up to you. You either help yourself or you don't."

Forrester, 35, says he gained his expertise while undergoing military training courses in Britain.

He has never been involved in a hijacking, and admits his expertise is more on the techniques, but an expert on terrorism who reviewed Forrester's suggestions agrees that publishing them is a good idea.

Bernard Adamczewski of the London-based Institute for the Study of Terrorism found the advice for hostages sensible "provided you can take it in."

"Most of such advice is really common sense," he said in an interview, "and some people can't be calm in such circumstances."

While mental preparation is important, Adamczewski said, the book's best advice is that international airline passengers should carry as little identification with them as possible.

"The Survival Skills Handbook" is available in Britain and other English-speaking countries, and Forrester hopes to publish it in the United States soon.

He maintained that with his advice, travelers will at least be able to find comfort in the fact that they have done something to protect themselves.

"They can actually think: 'Right, I'm scared about the journey. I can take those labels off my suitcase. I can make sure I've got a nice picture of my wife and kids, or husband, in my wallet. So at least if I am stuck in that situation, I've done what I can,' " he said.

Astronomers find example of Einstein ring

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — The first apparent example of an Einstein ring, a celestial illusion predicted by the famed physicist more than 50 years ago, has been discovered by astronomers.

They found an elliptical ring they believe occurs because radio waves are bent by the gravity of a distant cosmic object. The discovery, reported today in the British journal Nature, was made by Jacqueline N. Hewitt of Massachusetts Institute of Technology and other radio astronomers.

The scientists believe the sighting is another example of a gravitational lens.

During the past decade, several other celestial mirages have been spotted. A galaxy relatively close to Earth acts as a lens, bending the light emitted by a more distant object. In most of the other examples, the result has been the appearance of two objects where only one actually exists.

However, the latest probable gravitational lens is bending radio waves, rather than light, into a ring.

Albert Einstein speculated in 1936 that such things exist but are too small to see. That was before the development of radio astronomy.

Hewitt's discovery was made with the National Radio Astronomy Observatory's VLA, or very large array, telescope near Socorro, N.M. It was based on observations in 1986 and 1987.

Affinity From Thomasville

A simple, straight-forward style for the contemporary bedroom

Scandinavian settlers in America brought with them an appreciation for subtlety in the design of their furniture as well as function as an art form. Smooth, straight lines reign where heavy ornamentation once ruled. Thomasville celebrates the merging of Scandinavian and American influences in the creation of Affinity, a bedroom and occasional collection.

Affinity presents the deep texture of red oak solids and knotty oak veneers, hand-rubbed to a soft patina with a special finish called "Flax," a rich honey tone. Fingertip pulls are hidden beneath the handsome molding that frames each door and drawer, maintaining the integrity of the straight lines.

Horned Frogs feature strong Midland flavor

Football

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

ODESSA — "The Color Purple" runs deep from where "the West Begins" to West Texas' "Tall City."

They currently call it Texas Christian University, but the Horned Frog football team could almost be classified as Midland High, east campus, plus a Rebel, who dropped Maroon for Purple.

No matter how you look at it, TCU has five Midland athletes who are looking to the 1988 Southwest Conference football campaign as seniors and ready to help.

"We have 32 seniors coming back, so we are a veteran football team," said TCU football coach Jim Wacker Friday after speaking to more than 150 coaches at the annual Odessa Coaches Clinic at the Holiday Inn Center. "And I think you can safely say that Midland is going to play a big part in what we accomplish this season."

Wacker says that former Midland High star Jeff Daily will start for the Frogs at center this fall.

"Jeff is a fifth year senior and is our fastest lineman with 4.8 speed in the 40," notes Wacker. "He has started some games for us in the past, but the job is his this year after spring training."

Wacker is also expecting big things from Darrell Davis, who is almost a legendary three-sport performer at Midland High.

"Darrell had a tremendous spring and has come a long way," said Wacker. "He is our fastest defensive end and weighs around 245 pounds. Davis has tremendous potential, but he needs experience.

"It really hurt us last fall when we lost Darrell for the season in our first game against Boston College. We feel like he might be one of the best ends around if he had been able to play all last year. There is no question that he is one of our strongest pass rushers."

Wacker also noted that running back Scott Ackroyd and flanker Allan Foret, two more former MHS stars, will be used this year.

"Ackroyd is one of our backup running backs and Foret missed the last three weeks of spring training due to an injury. We are hoping that both will help us down the road this year."

Wacker made a big change this spring with his other Midlander, Coy Stewart, who was an All-State offensive lineman at Midland Lee in 1983.

"We switched Coy to tight end and we hope that we can use him much more this way," said Wacker. "Coy never got the size we expected. He weighs between 230 and 235, but that's not really big enough for an offensive tackle. Coy is a great young man and we feel this move will help both the team and him."

This is the year in which Horned Frog fans have been waiting for. It was from that 1984 recruiting season that TCU was judged as one of the four best hauls in the country. Now seniors this should be the year.

Still, Texas A&M is the heavy favorite to win the SWC title for a rare fourth consecutive time. That doesn't bother Wacker, who chooses to remain un-bee-leeve-ably optimistic.

"If you're not optimistic now, you are in a world of hurt," Wacker cracks. "I've never lost a spring game. I don't really get nervous until you start reading all the pre-season football magazines. That's when you read that everyone is going to go undefeated and Joe Blow is going to gain 2,000 yards. That's when I get nervous, but those magazines aren't out yet.

Mustangs' Mayfield ready to ride

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

BIG SPRING — Sure, every father sees something special in his own child. Gary Mayfield was no exception.

Mayfield, a Mobil Oil Company employee in Big Spring, said there was something unique about the athletic ability of his older son Brian that was apparent even when Brian was six and seven years old in the Little Dribblers youth basketball program at Lamesa.

"He was always advanced, even though when he started playing (with the Little Dribblers), it was the first time he had been involved in sports," the elder Mayfield said.

"Then when he began playing school sports (still in Lamesa), you could really see he had advanced beyond the abiltiy of the other kids."

Some kids are early bloomers — great Little Leaguers but high school busts. Brian Mayfield is still in full flower, however.

After one of the most acclaimed high school sports careers in recent West Texas history and attention from scouts in four sports, Brian signed a national letter-of-intent in November to play basketball at Southern Methodist University.

While he averaged 28 points and 14 rebounds per game for the Steer basketball team as a senior, Mayfield had plenty of athletic options at this time last year.

Major college football coaches desired his services as a defensive back and punter.

College track coaches liked his prowess in the hurdle and jumping events.

And even the New York Yankees came a-calling, giving him hope that he couls have been selected in the recent major league baseball draft.

But the 6-foot-6, 190-pounder scotched much of the speculation about which way he would turn when he told Steer football coaches that he wouldn't be coming out for his senior season on the gridiron.

"I pretty much made up my mind that's what I wanted by the end of the (1986-1987) school year," Brian said. "I wanted to get in the gym last fall and work on my game.

"After a long season of football, it takes a month of get in shape for basketball and then the season's half over. I wanted to work on the finer points of my game in the fall instead of getting them halfway through the season."

Mayfield said he was questioned about his decision by folks both at school and in the community. But former Big Spring football coach Quinn Eudy didn't have any problem with the decision.

"I didn't agree with him," Eudy said. "But that was his decision.

"He's one of the three best natural athletes I've ever had and he's intelligent. Those two factors make for a good athlete."

By the time he decided to forego football, Mayfield had already been contacted by many, many schools for his basketball ability.

Gary Mayfield said the attention his son received from basketball recruiters almost certainly increased as a result of his decision to forego football.

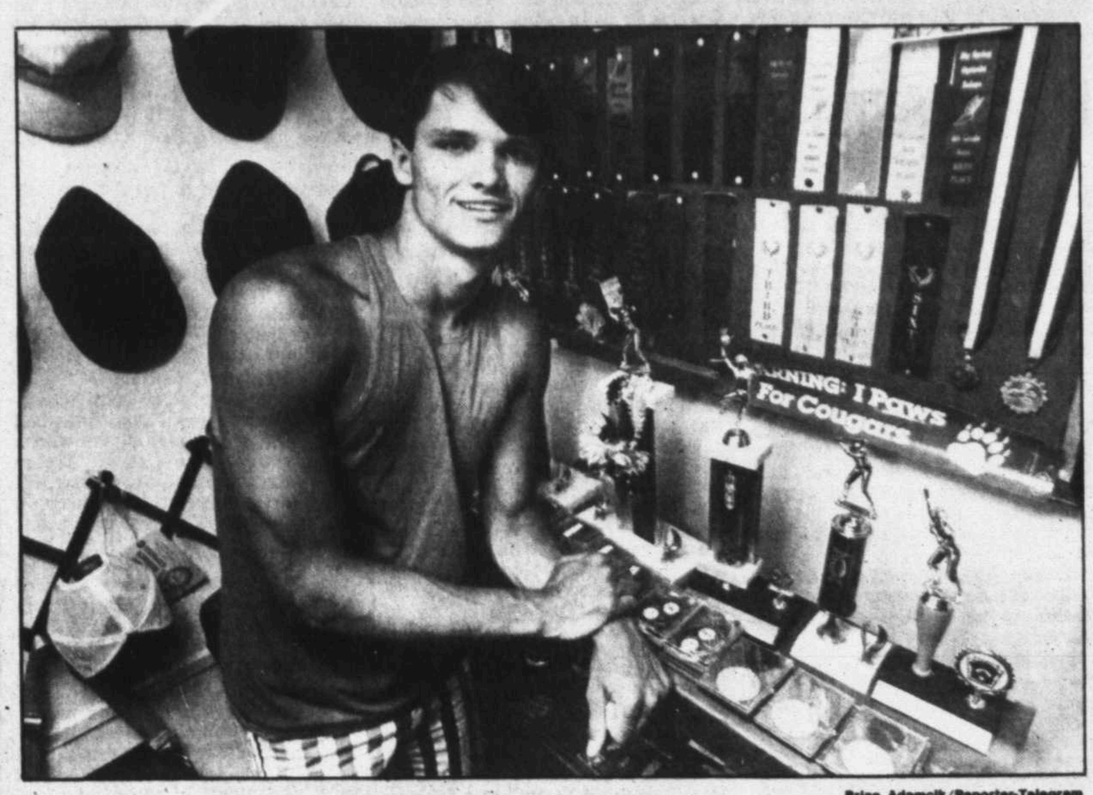
"In college, you specialize and when a college coach sees an athlete is dedicated to one sport he becomes more interested.

"Basketball is what I like to play the best," Brian added.

Brian first thought about scholarships when he was promoted to the Big Spring varsity as a freshman. "That's when I really thought I had a chance."

But Mayfield's rise to the top really didn't start in Big Spring. Both Gary and Sandy Mayfield were top high school athletes in Lamesa, and that's where Brian got started also.

Please see BRIAN, Page 6B



Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

Brian Mayfield relaxes at his Big Spring home with visions of athletic accomplishment dancing through his head. The 6-6 former Steer will attend Southern Methodist University this fall.

Midland swim team in fourth

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Sports Writer

City of Midland swimmer Alan Reed fought tooth and nail the whole way and wound up winning the senior boy's 1500 freestyle during first day action at the West Texas Invitational Swim Meet, held Friday at the Doug Russell Swim Center.

After day one, City of Midland swimmers were in fourth place with 71 points while the Houston-based DADS Swim Club was first with 116.

For a one-mile swim, Reed's event was as close as could be expected as, by four-tenths of a second, the former Lee High School swimmer defeated 26-year-old Rick Bodor of the DADS Club.

Reed, who overtook two of his competitors along the way, said he, "just kept a steady pace all the way and finally caught up in the end."

A 19-year-old student at Texas A&M University, Reed was red-shirted during his first year on the Aggie swim team, but will compete on the varisty level in the upcoming school year.

Meanwhile, 12-year-old Clay Brown of Midland took first place in the boy's 11-12 400 freestyle event while 14-year-old Matthew Houston landed a second-place in the 13-14 400 I.M.

Brown, a swimmer since age seven, bested his competition by just over one second in the tightly contested race.

"He was right behind me the whole way," Brown said. "I stayed with him ... in front of him and I thought I had it. I kicked out of my turns real well."

Cooper wins 2nd straight state title

HS Baseball

Associated Press

Having lost to Westwood twice during the regular season, Abilene Cooper made amends when it counted holding off the Warriors 7-4 Friday night to seize a second straight Class 5A state championship.

Playing before a crowd of 5,444, the Cougars combined for six runs in the fourth and fifth innings to slide past Westwood.

The win avenges 11-8 and 6-4 losses to the Warriors at the start of the season.

Cooper had also lost to Midland High twice during the regular season.

The Cougars, who finished as runner-ups in their first appearance in the tournament in 1967, collected their 30th win in the title game against seven losses.

Last season Cooper bombed San Antonio MacArthur 13-3 in the title game.

The Warriors lost to Houston Bellaire in the 1986 championship game.

Lance Grider, who came into the game unheralded at 3-2, mastered the Warriors, 32-8, for six innings. The junior righthander struck out eight while allowing four walks and five hits.

Jason Satre, 17-2 during the season and the winner in Cooper's 4-3 semifinal win over Eagle Pass, mopped up in the final inning.

Bert Inman started the game for Westwood but did not last past the third after giving up three hits, three walks and four runs. He ends up 6-1.

Phillip Carpenter's run scoring single in the second handed Cooper and early lead, but the Warriors came back with a run in the bottom of the third on Travis William's double in the rightfield gap.

Carpenter sparked the Cougars with three hits and an RBI, while Williams clubbed a pair of doubles and picked up two RBI.

The Cougar's big inning came in the fourth when they put together three singles and two walks to grab a

The Midland High Bulldogs, headed by Most Valuable Player Eric Boyt, dominated this year's 4-5A All-District baseball team, placing eight of their starting nine players on one of the three teams named. The Midland Lee Rebels, who finished third in the district hunt, placed five members on the all-star team.

Midland High head coach Tim Whalen, who led the Bulldogs to their second playoff appearance in three years, received honors as Coach of the Year.

Bulldog catcher Scot Mowles and outfielder Tony Perez were named to the first team, along with second baseman Jason Stone, who was named the squad's utility infielder. Stone was the only sophomore who received All-District honors.

Seniors Durian Jenkins, pitcher, and utility outfielder Blaine McAnally head the list of Lee Rebels named to the first team. Paul Bacon was also named to the squad as designated hitter.

ON THE mound, Boyt recorded a 0.51 earned run average through 41 district innings, striking out 48 and yielding just 22 hits while running his record to 5-1.

Boyt, a graduating senior, hit .425 and led MHS in RBI (16), game winning RBI (3), hits (17), at bats (40) and stolen bases (12).

Mowles, also a senior, finished fourth in team batting for the Bulldogs, hitting .361, and secon in RBI with 15. Defensively, Mowles proved a wall-like backstop, being tagged with only two passed balls all season.

Error-free centerfielder Tony Perez also landed a first-team spot. Perez won the Bulldog batting title, hitting .429 and scoring 17 runs, also a team high. Perez was second in hits (15) and tied for the team lead in doubles with Boyt (3). Perez started the district season off on a torrid pace, going 8-for-10 and either scoring or driving in nine runs in the first two games.

Jason Stone, MHS's second baseman was named utility infielder, after finishing the season with only one error, early on in the district race. Stone's batting average rose after virtually every game, as he finished with a .320 batting average.

LEE PITCHER Durian Jenkins finished the season with a 6-2 record through 67.1 innings pitched. The senior's ERA was 3.23 and he recorded 61 strikouts in district play. At the plate, Jenkins led the Rebels in at bats (37), runs scored (16), hits (14), average (.378) and stolen bases (16). Jenkins was also third in RBI with six. Along with teammate Paul Bacon, Jenkins had two tripies for the team lead.

McAnally, at utility infielder, also had a hot bat, finishing third in Rebel batting with a .344 average. McAnally also led with three doubles and 11 RBI. Bacon, the All-District DH, finished the season with a .303 average, 14 runs, two doubles and two triples.

The league's runner-up, Abilene Cooper, landed an additional six players on All-District. Abilene High, Odessa Permian and San Angelo each placed one player on the first team.

Pistons hope Silverdome is sweet

NBA Finals

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — The mission is clear for Detroit Pistons: beat Los Angeles in three straight games at the Silverdome and the NBA title is theirs.

"We obviously had to win one to win the series and obviously we've accomplished that," center Bill Laimbeer said of the two games played in Los Angeles. "Now we have to protect our home territory and we win the series.

"The Lakers are a terrific team, home or away, so that won't be easy. We'll have 45 to 50,000 screaming maniacs behind us and that ought to help us."

The third, fourth and fifth games of the championship series will be played Sunday, Tuesday night and Thursday night at the Silverdome.

The Lakers, who won Game 2 108-96 on Thursday night, must win one of those three games to force the series back home and keep alive their hopes of becoming the first repeat champion since 1969.

"I think we established how we wanted to play — aggressive defense," said Byron Scott, who had 24 points for the Lakers. "We know what we had to do in Game 2. Now we have to take it to Detroit. We haven't attacked on the road, but Sunday we will attack. We're going to be ready."

"Whether it's 2-3 or 3-2, our whole objective is to get back to L.A.," Coach Pat Riley said.

The Lakers' 26-15 road record during the season was the best in the NBA, but they are 2-5 on the road in the playoffs, including four straight losses.

After shooting 39.8 percent from the field and losing Game 1, the Lakers held Detroit to 32.5 percent shooting in the first half of the second game. The Pistons shots 43.5 percent for the game.

But a 17-5 second-half rally by the Pistons turned a 75-63 deficit into an 80-80 tie with 8:26 remaining in the game.

James Worthy then scored six of his 26 points, including two baskets on offensive rebounds, leading an 11-2 run that put the Lakers in front 91-82.

Dennis Rodman, who scored 10 of his 12 points in the fourth quarter, led a comeback that got the Pistons within three, but they could get no closer. With Los Angeles leading 97-92, a possible steal and breakaway by Rodman was negated by confusion over a 24-second clock shot ruling.

"We had an opportunity to win two games, but we only got one," Pistons forward John Salley said. "We proved we could play with them and that's what counts. Now we can go home and get the job done there."

It was the first time in 12 playoff victories that the Lakers have won despite shooting below 50 percent from the field. They shot 45.4 percent Thursday night, but their defense came through.

High-scoring forward Adrian Dantley led the Pistons with 19 points, but he was scoreless in the fourth quarter and made only five of 10 shots. He was 14-for-16 and scored 34 points in Game 1.

"I thought we got a good defensive effort, and we didn't let one player dominate like Adrian Dantley dominated the other night," said center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who scored 15 points after missing his first five shots in the first quarter.

While Worthy and Scott rediscovered their scoring touch, it probably was Magic Johnson's effort that saved the Lakers.

5-1 advantage. They chipped in two more in the fifth to make it 7-3 after the Warriors scored two in the bottom of the fourth.

Sinton 4, Waco LaVega 0

Jaime Sepeda pitched five innings of one-hit baseball and Sinton blanked Waco LaVega 4-0 Friday to capture the Class 3A state championship at the University Interscholastic League State Baseball Tournament.

Sepeda replaced his cousin Steve Sepeda in the bottom of the third with Sinton leading 2-0 and held the Pirates in check for five straight innings. Only a base on balls in the fourth and a single in the seventh prevented the big junior righthander from a perfect outing.

Apple Springs 11, Maud 6

Wilbert Denning struck out 13 batters to lead Apple Springs to an easy 11-6 win over Maud for the Class A title at the University Interscholastic League State Baseball Tournament.

The senior righthander fell two strikeouts short of the Class A record for strikeouts that was set Thursday evening by Maud's Joey Missildine. In one stretch in the fourth and fifth innings Denning fanned five in a row.

Shelbyville 11, Blanco 1

Matt Mathews went 3-for-3 with three runs batted in as Shelbyville romped past Blanco 11-1 in six innings and won its first Class 2A state championship in the University Interscholastic League State Baseball Tournament.

Thompson warns against overconfidence

WASHINGTON (AP) — Coach John Thompson said Friday that the U.S. Olympic men's basketball team can win a gold medal this summer, but can't expect to get it on reputation alone.

"We're definitely capable of repeating," Thompson said, referring to the gold medal the U.S. earned at Los Angeles in 1984. "But we can't just walk out on the floor and assume we're going to win. If there's any evidence of that, it's what happened in Indianapolis."

The U.S. men's basketball team lost to Brazil last year in the Pan American Games.

Thompson and assistant coaches George Raveling and Bill Stein will be overseeing two-a-day practices at the Georgetown University campus through Tuesday as they prepare the U.S. Select men's team for the six-game European tour that begins next Thursday.

Former all-Americas Rex Chapman and David Robinson are among the dozen or so players who will travel overseas in an effort to improve their chances at making the final 12-man squad.

"Winning is secondary to evaluating the players," said Raveling, who will coach the team in Europe. The tour begins in Finland and continues through France, Britian and Austria before concluding in Spain.

Raveling is convinced that the United States will have a much more difficult time winning the Olympic gold medal this year than it did in 1984.

Rangers lose on Canseco blast

Associated Press

Jose Canseco hit his major league-leading 16th home run Friday night, a two-run shot in the ninth inning that lifted the Athletics to a 7-6 victory over the Texas Rangers, snapping Oakland's six-game losing streak.

Dave Henderson, who had a career high four hits, singled with one out in the ninth, moved to second when Mitch Williams, 1-2, was called for a balk, and scored ahead of Canseco.

Eric Plunk, 4-1, who pitched a scoreless seventh and eighth, got the win. Dennis Eckersley pitched the ninth for his major league high 20th save.

Ruben Sierra's two-run homer helped the Rangers send starter Bob Welch to his earliest exit in 116 starts.

The Rangers battered Welch for five runs and seven hits in three innings and one batter in the fourth before Gene Nelson relieved. It was the shortest stint for Welch since 1984, when he lasted three innings for the Los Angeles Dodgers against the Chicago Cubs.

Texas staked starter Paul Kilgus to a 6-2 lead into the sixth. But Mark McGwire led off with a homer, his first in 80 at-bats and 12th of the season. Dave Parker walked after hitting a towering drive deep into the right-field stands that was higher than the foul pole but was ruled foul.

Dale Mohorcic relieved and picked Parker off first. But Mohorcic was ineffective, yielding two runs as he allowed singles to four of the next five batters. Walt Weiss and Carney Lansford drove in runs before Jose Cecena relieved to retire Dave Henderson on a force play.

Oakland got two runs in the first when Henderson tripled in Lansford, who drew a leadoff walk, and scored on Canseco's infield out.

American

Texas made it 4-2 in the third. Scott Fletcher led off with a single and Sierra hit his second two-run homer in as many games.

Two outs later, Larry Parrish hit a 405-foot solo homer, his sixth of the year and first since May 17. It was Parrish's 21st career home run against the A's, the most he has hit against any American League opponent.

A fielding lapse by right-fielder Canseco resulted in two more Texas runs in the fourth. With runners on second and third, Pete O'Brien's single got by Canseco, who then threw wildly to third, allowing Sierra to score.

White Sox 1, Brewers 0

Greg Walker singled to score Darryl Boston in the 10th inning and lift the Chicago White Sox to a 1-0 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers Friday night.

Walker's hit past first baseman Joey Meyer into right field for the first run off Teddy Higuera, 5-4, in 24 innings. Higuera, who shut out California 1-0 on three hits Saturday, got his fourth complete game this season.

In the 10th, with one out, Higuera walked Harold Baines and Boston was inserted as a pinch runner. Boston stole second and reached third on a throwing error by catcher B.J. Surhoff, setting up Walker's game-winning hit.

Orioles 5, Yankees 3

Mike Boddicker pitched a seven-hitter and Eddie Murray hit a two-run homer Friday night, leading the Baltimore Orioles over the New York Yankees 5-3.

The Orioles scored three unearned runs in the first inning, helped by first baseman Jack Clark's error, and Murray's homer in the fifth provided insurance.

Boddicker, 3-8, won his third straight decision since ending his team-record 13-game losing streak. Boddicker, who struck out nine and walked three, is the winningest Baltimore starter. He pitched his second complete game in 13 starts.

Tigers 2, Indians 1

Jeff Robinson got his sixth consecutive victory and Alan Trammell snapped a seventh-inning tie with a home run as the Detroit Tigers edged the Cleveland Indians 2-1 Friday night before the major league's largest crowd in nearly two years, 71,188.

Robinson, 7-2, and undefeated since losing to the Red Sox on April 21, beat Cleveland ace Gregg Swindell for the second time in six days. Robinson allowed only an unearned run, struck out four and walked three in seven innings of work.

Blue Jays 3, Red Sox 0

Rance Mulliniks had three hits and Dave Stieb pitched a four-hitter for 6 2-3 innings as the Toronto Blue Jays took advantage of defensive mistakes by the Boston Red Sox for a 3-0 victory Friday night.

Stieb, 8-3, issued four walks and struck out four as the Blue Jays, who turned three double plays and beat Boston for the fifth time without a defeat this season.

Twins 3, Mariners 1

Kirby Puckett's two-run double in the fourth inning led the Minnesota Twins to their third straight victory, a 3-1 decision over the Seattle Mariners Friday night.

Puckett's hit provided his seventh game-winning RBI of the season and his sixth in the last 19 games.

Allan Anderson, 3-3, pitched 6⅓ innings for the win. Jeff Reardon pitched the ninth for his 16th save. He has gone 11 straight appearances without allowing a run.

Braves need 13 innings to beat dogged Astros

Associated Press

Andres Thomas scored the go-ahead run on an error and Ron Gant and Paul Runge drove in two more runs each in a seven-run 13th inning as the Atlanta Braves defeated the Houston Astros 10-3 Friday night.

Dave Smith, 2-3, yielded singles to Thomas and Gerald Perry to start the 13th and Thomas scored when third baseman Denny Walling couldn't handle Dale Murphy's grounder.

Murphy took second on Gary Roenicke's walk and scored along with Perry on Gant's single.

Pinch-hitter Runge drove in two more runs with a single. Thomas and Perry, each batting for the second time in the inning, had RBI singles.

Cubs 7, Cardinals 3

Rookie Mark Grace had his first four-hit game to lead a 19-hit attack as the Chicago Cubs defeated the St. Louis Cardinals 7-3 Friday night.

The 19 hits, 18 of them singles, equaled the Cubs' high for the season. Rafael Palmeiro and Shawon Dunston each had three hits.

Rookie Jeff Pico, 2-1, making his third major-league start, allowed nine hits, struck out two and walked four before giving way to Pat Perry in the ninth with none out and runners on first and third. Perry allowed an RBI single to Bob Horner.

Cris Carpenter, 2-1, lost for the first time in his professional baseball career, covering seven games this season with Louisville of the American Association and six starts with the Cardinals.

National

Expos 5, Mets 2

Hubie Brooks hit a three-run homer to back the seven-hit pitching of Dennis Martinez and Jeff Parrett as the Montreal Expos defeated the New York Mets 5-2 Friday night.

Martinez, 6-6, won his third straight decision as he allowed seven hits, struck out three and walked four. After pinch-hitter Mookie Wilson led off the ninth with a single, Parrett came in and retired the next three batters to earn his fourth save.

Ron Darling, 6-4, lasted only 4 1-3 innings and had his three-game winning streak snapped. The Mets' three-game losing streak equals their longest of the season.

Phillies 12, Pirates 10

Von Hayes' two-run double highlighted a six-run eighth inning as the Philadelphia Phillies twice rallied from five-run deficits to defeat the Pittsburgh Pirates 12-10 Friday night.

With the Pirates leading 9-6, Chris James walked and Phil Bradley doubled with one out in the eighth to chase reliever Barry Jones. Milt Thompson greeted Jeff Robinson, 3-2, with a two-run single.

Pinch-hitter Darren Daulton singled and Greg Gross was hit by a pitch before Juan Samuel singled to score Thompson with the tying run and extend his hitting streak to 15 games. Hayes' followed with a double to left-center.

Winning Colors in line for history

NEW YORK (AP) — Winning Colors will say goodbye to the boys Saturday when she tries to win the Belmont Stakes, which has become known as "Woody's Race."

A victory in the 1½-mile Belmont would make the front-running winner of the Kentucky Derby the first filly to win two Triple Crown races. She finished third in the Preakness.

"We're not looking to run against colts any more," trainer D. Wayne Lukas said Friday. "It doesn't serve her purpose."

Five colts will oppose Winning Colors, and one of them, Cefis, is trained by Woody Stephens, who won five straight Belmonts before finishing sixth in 1987.

The filly's main opposition is expected from Risen Star, who finished third in the 1¼-mile Derby, then won the 1 3-16-mile Preakness.

Belmont

Risen Star, a strapping son of Secretariat, the 1973 Triple Crown winner, turned in a sizzling workout Friday. With excercise rider Cowboy Jimmy Nicols in the irons, Risen Star worked three-eighths of a mile in 33 3-5 seconds, with a first quarter in 22 1-5.

"I was looking for 35-36," trainer Louie Roussel said. "It was too fast, but it's over with now and there's nothing we can do it about it."

Nichols was not disturbed.

"He done it easy," he said. "He come back good. There's not a horse in America as sharp as he is right now."

Winning Colors scored three straight wire-to-wire victories before the Preakness.

"Given fractions that are relatively fast. She's going to be up there by herself," Lukas said. "If anyone goes with her, they'll compromise their chances.

"I think Forty Niner compromised his chances in the Preakness. That's just a fact."

Forty Niner, who was second by a neck after laying off the pace in the Derby, dueled with the filly for the lead for almost a mile in the Preakness. Stephens was accused by Eugene V. Klein, Winning Colors' owner, of sacrificting the colt just to get the filly beat.

Forty Niner, who finished seventh in the Preakness, will not run in the Belmont.

Roussel said that if Forty Niner had not challenged Winning Colors in the Preakness, Risen Star would have.

Younger players lead Westchester

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — Loren Roberts scrambled to an even-par 71 Friday and led a group of lesser-known players atop the standings after the second round of the $700,000 Westchester Classic.

Roberts, a non-winner in seven seasons on the PGA Tour, completed two trips over the Westchester Country Club course in 137, five under par — the lowest sub-par total for a 36-hole lead on the Tour this season.

"It was work today. I hit it all over the place," said Roberts, who clipped two trees, scored two bogeys and a double bogey and pitched in from 50 yards for one of his four birdies.

With two rounds to go in the chase for a $126,000 first prize, Australian Steve Elkington, Bill Buttner and rookie Brandel Chamblee shared second at 138, a single stroke back.

None of the four players atop the leader board has a career finish higher than third. Collectively, they have missed the cut in 26 of 49 starts this season.

But no one did any better in the tricky winds.

"It was pretty windy," Elkington said after his 70. "It was very hard to pick a club. You couldn't tell where the wind was coming from.The wind made the greens a little firmer. It was difficult to get it close to the hole."

Gowan maintains narrow lead at Rochester tourney

PITTSFORD, N.Y. (AP) — Caroline Gowan, playing in the first group off the tee, struggled to an even-par 72 Friday but maintained a one-shot lead after the second round of the $300,000 LPGA Rochester International tournament.

Gowan, who shot a 67 Thursday, finished with 36-hole score of 5-under-par 139 and then watched as her closest challengers came up short.

LPGA

Rookie Danielle Ammaccapane, who had an opening-round 68, held the lead for six holes before bogeys on the 16th and 17th holes dropped her to even-par 72 for the round and into second place for the tournament at 140.

Casper birdies secure TPC lead

PONTE VEDRA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Billy Casper birdied four straight holes Friday en route to a 68 that gave him a one-stroke lead over Charles Coody after two rounds of the Senior Tournament Players Championship.

Casper, winner of 51 regular PGA Tour events and eight more as a senior, emerged from the pack with six birdies and two bogeys for a 36-hole total of 7-under-par 137.

Coody, who joined the senior tour last July and has yet to win a tournament, also shot 68 with six birdies and two bogeys on the par 72, 6,646-yard Valley Course at Sawgrass Country Club.

Bruce Crampton and 60-year-old Gardner Dickinson shot 68 and 69, respectively, to trail Coody's 138 total by one stroke. Bill Collins (68), Bob Rawlins (72) and Bob Charles (73) finished day at 4-under-par 140.

Six players, including two-time Senior TPC winner Arnold Palmer, were still on the course when play was suspended for 52 minutes because of a late afternoon thunderstorm.

Coach fate to be decided

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Ken Adams' fate as coach of the United States Olympic boxing team will be decided Saturday at a hearing of a U.S. Amateur Boxing Federation committee.

Adams reportedly was asked to leave the team's training camp last month after an incident involving Kerstan Dahl, a federation official. Adams was said to have grabbed Dahl during an argument.

BRIAN

"Lamesa has a Little Dribblers program where you play on an eight-foot goal until you're 10 years old. I started playing when I was six years old, and I think that program helped me a lot."

Brian's Little Dribblers team got second in the nation when both Mayfield and future Lamesa High standout Cedric Mason were nine-year-olds.

The Mayfields moved to Big Spring before Brian's eighth-grade year and the by-now rapidly growing athlete immediately asserted himself in football, basketball and track.

He capped his football career as a junior by punting five times for more than a 50-yard average in the Class 4A playoffs against Hereford. Also, he intercepted 10 passes that season.

Then in the spring of 1987, Brian was sixth in the high jump at the Class 4A state meet. An ankle injury hampered his 1988 track season, however.

Don't get the idea that Brian is a one-dimensional kind of guy — his mom and dad wouldn't stand for it.

"Our boys knew they had to work for what was worthwhile," Gary Mayfield said. "That's just the way it's always been.

"Brian has always taken honors courses at school," proud dad added. "Anybody who can carry an honors load and excel in athletics has the basis for a bright future."

Brian never made below a B grade in his high school courses.

No wonder 60 to 70 colleges were after him. No Proposition 48 casualty here.

SMU jumped on the Mayfield bandwagon early in Brian's junior year.

"They came to see me play in a tournament my junior year," Brian said. "I didn't know they were there, but we started writing back and forth with them."

"Arizona and (Texas) Tech were also pushing it pretty good, along with Air Force, Texas and Baylor," Brian added. Only Arkansas and Texas A&M among Southwest Conference schools failed to show interest in the multi-sport standout.

But SMU ended up with the prize. "It will be a good challenge," Brian said. He will major in either business or pre-dentistry.

"It's a smaller school and I like Dallas," Brian said. "There should be lots of opportunties there after graduation."

Not even the departure of head cage coach Dave Bliss to the University of New Mexico has shaken the Mayfields' resolve that SMU is the place for Brian.

"We're disappointed that the coach is leaving, but it's still a fine academic school."

Mustang assistant coach Paul Graham, the only member of Bliss' SMU staff still there, said Mayfield should be able to compete for playing time on the wing as a freshman.

"He's a phenomenal athlete," Graham said. "He's potentially an impact player.

"His skills fit in with the way we like to play," Graham said. "He's going to be able to contribute."

The only question is how much?

"Athletically, he's fine," Graham said. "But he's going to have to get used to the transition game, the travel and the pressure."

If the adjustment proves to be too much, Brian says he could always try to latch on to some college as a punter. But he's not really thinking that way.

"College is a whole new step up," he said. "It will take time to make the transition.

"The pros? (after college). I really don't know," he said. "If I do, it would be great.

"If not, I hope to have a good college career."

Battling the flu and severe diarrhea, Johnson played 42 minutes and had 23 points, 11 assists and seven rebounds.

"If I show my teammates I'm sick, it's a big letdown," Johnson said. "They look to me and I've got to let them know I'm here to play.

"Going back to Detroit down 0-2 would have been one of the deepest holes I've been in and one of the deepest holes we've been in as a team."

"A&M should be the favorite. Anytime you win three SWC titles in a row, you have to be favored," noted Wacker before adding, "but since I've been in the SWC, no team has gone undefeated. In that respect, A&M isn't a dynasty and that's encouraging to the rest of us."

TCU has traditionally been a strong recruiter of West Texas athletes and Wacker hasn't changed that practice.

"No where in the world do high school athletes take football as seriously as they do in West Texas and I like that," says Wacker.

It was Wacker who gave Odessa Permian's Shawn Crow a scholarship when all others ignored him. Why?

"Shawn gained 2,200 yards and this district (4-5A) is as good as there is in the state. You have to look at a kid like that," said Wacker.

"I think everyone was concerned about Crow's speed, but I don't think anyone questioned his toughness. We were even concerned about his overall speed, but he showed this spring in track that he was one of the best hurdlers around. He even surprised us.

"It really isn't unusual for a kid to be overlooked or not recruited by a lot of other teams. Tony Jeffery wasn't recruited by anyone but us and he was one of the best running backs in the league last year. Things like that happen a lot."

Wacker believes that his team is physically good enough to win in the SWC, but it's the mental aspect of the game that must be conquered.

"Our kids have to believe they can win against anyone we play. Take last year. Going into our last three games, we have a great shot at the Cotton Bowl. We lose to Texas Tech by one point late in the game after we had come up with a big second half rally to take the lead. Then we lose to Texas by three points and were leading A&M with 7½ minutes to play before they go 80 yards to go ahead. We have to overcome those kind of finishes.

"And after that kind of finish, I'm here talking to coaches about 'getting the most from players and staff.' It's a strange world."

Chaney confident about landing Rockets' job

HOUSTON (AP) — Atlanta Hawks assistant coach Don Chaney said Friday that he feels confident about his chances of becoming the next head coach of the Houston Rockets.

"I'm just overjoyed that I could get an opportunity to coach in Houston and to coach the Rockets," Chaney said in a telephone interview with KRIV-TV.

The Houston Chronicle quoted a source Thursday night saying Chaney would be the Rockets coach.

Rockets General Manager Ray Patterson and owner Charlie Thomas said earlier that Chaney was the leading candidate to replace Bill Fitch, fired Monday.

"I've always wanted to return to Houston and work there with a pro team in Houston," Chaney said. "I'm just overjoyed that I have an opportunity to do that."

Chaney said his interviews with Patterson were positive.

"I've had several interviews with him (Patterson) and I feel real good about the interviews," Chaney said.

Patterson would neither confirm nor deny the report Thursday night. "There's nothing final on it," Patterson said.

Brown could sign with Spurs

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Kansas coach Larry Brown could become the highest-paid coach in the NBA if and when he signs a contract to coach the San Antonio Spurs, two newspapers reported Friday.

Sources told the San Antonio Light and the San Antonio Express-News that Brown could receive $3.5 million for five years if he agrees to replace fired coach Bob Weiss.

The Express-News also reported that bonus incentives could amount to another $1 million over the five-year period. The bonus clauses would involve the Spurs making the playoffs, advancing in rounds, winning conference titles and the NBA title.

Brown, who is in Lawrence, Kan., conducting a summer camp, has declined to talk specifically about an agreement in principle being reached.

Judge orders Kirk to stand trial

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Rejecting a claim of grand jury bias, a federal judge ruled Friday that former Memphis State basketball coach Dana Kirk must stand trial on charges of income tax evasion and obstruction of justice.

Kirk, who was fired by Memphis State shortly before his indictment in November, 1986, said he expected a more favorable review of his claim that prosecutors poisoned the grand jury against him.

"You never know what's going to happen, similar to playing a ballgame and you're down to the last second. But I was surprised," Kirk said.

His lawyers vowed to appeal the ruling, but U.S. Attorney Hickman Ewing Jr. said the trial probably will begin in September or October.

"We don't think you can appeal at this point ... on a pretrial ruling of this type," Ewing said.

Drug suspects escape through floorboards of police wagon

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Four drug suspects pried apart the wooden floorboards of a police wagon and escaped, triggering a review of the aging vehicles, police said Friday.

"I suppose it's embarrassing," Lt. Gary Hall said of Thursday's escape from a wagon estimated to be at least 20 years old.

Two of the four men were quickly captured, but the two were still free Friday, Hall said.

"Over the years the floorboard had cracked and deteriorated," Hall said. "Somehow the suspects managed to loop a shoestring around the cracked board, pried it up, broke it and pulled up some other boards."

The men slithered through the 24-by-30-inch hole and fled, he said.

The four men had been arrested for investigation of narcotics sales. They were locked in the wagon at the Hollywood station for transfer to police headquarters.

"Most of the paddy wagons have steel floors," Hall said. "They'll have to put some sheet metal in this one and I guess check them all citywide."

MY HERITAGE

Our family Bible is a venerable volume. It has been passed from generation to generation, going to the oldest each time, and now, as long as I live, it shall be mine.

I have always been fascinated by this wedding picture of my Grandmother and Grandfather Harris, which has always been located at the page which records their marriage. I recall when this peppery, little gray-haired lady showed me the picture for the first time. Her fingers were old and wrinkled—trembling as she turned to it.

Notice that a church appears not once, but twice, in the drawings. I have always thought this symbolic because the Church was such an important factor in Grandmother's life. Her Faith upheld her through many dark times, and what was important was that she communicated it to all of us. Another priceless inheritance from my Grandmother—her Bible and her Faith.

LIFESCOPE

Horoscope or Lifescope? Which Will You Believe?

HEAR THE WORD of the Lord . . . Don't act like the people who make horoscopes and try to read their fate and future in the stars! Don't be frightened by predictions such as theirs for it is all a pack of lies. Their ways are futile and foolish.

Persist then with your incantations and your many enchantments, with which you have wearied yourself from your youth; perhaps you will be able to profit; perhaps you will inspire terror. You have advisors by the ton - your astrologers and stargazers, who try to tell you what the future holds. But they are as useless as dried grass burning in the fire. They cannot even deliver themselves! You'll get no help from them at all.

So why are you trying to find out the future by consulting witches and mediums? Don't listen to their whisperings and mutterings. Can the living find out the future from the dead? Why not ask your God?

"Check these 'witches' words against the Word of God!" He says. "If their messages are different than Mine, it is because I have not sent them; for they have no light or truth in them."

The secret which the king has demanded, the wise men, the astrologers, the magicians, and the soothsayers cannot declare to the king. But there is a God in heaven who reveals secrets.

When the Holy Spirit, who is truth, comes, He shall guide you into all truth, for He will not be presenting His own ideas, but will be passing on to you what He has heard. He will tell you about the future.

"For I know the plans I have for you," says the Lord. "They are plans for good and not for evil, to give you a future and a hope. Ask Me and I will tell you some remarkable secrets about what is going to happen here."

Religious writer retires after 40 years

RELIGION

NEW YORK — The byline "Frances Smith" has appeared thousands of times on articles in numerous languages that appeared in publications ranging from a now-defunct St. Louis daily to church and secular publication on every continent.

After 40 years of work in the field of journalism, Ms. Smith is retiring from her post as director of the New York office of United Methodist News Service.

In a brief resume lacking self-promoting adjectives, she has listed her major interests — religious news, international affairs and social action. Her career has combined these interests in a remarkable way.

George Cornell of the Associated Press, dean of U.S. religious news writers, said Ms. Smith knows the religion field "better than most academics or bishops. Her reporting is straight, clear and dependable as a rock. She really rolls out the copy voluminously, crisp and clean."

Cornell said Ms. Smith may well have turned out more copy than anyone else in church communications. He listed Geneva, Switzerland; Nairobi, Kenya; Vancouver, Canada; "and a long, blurring list of other places" where Ms. Smith has reported the news of religion.

But she didn't start out writing religious news. Fresh from college, she began on the police beat, covering police courts, criminal courts and police headquarters for the St. Louis Star-Times during World War II. "It was quite an education," she recalled.

"When the men returned (from the war), I went to New York. After applying at "Newsweek," "Scientific American" and other publications, I got a job with a labor union paper." She became assistant editor of "Justice," the International Garment Workers' Union newspaper, where she worked six years before leaving on her first trip to Europe.

Daughter of a YMCA executive and sister of two Presbyterian ministers (one now a college president, the other minister of a university church), Ms. Smith grew up in a family of fledgling intellectuals. She attended the University of Texas, Austin, where she majored in creative writing and did postgraduate work in journalism.

On entering the world of journalism, she found it a man's world. News weeklies had male writers and editors; women were researchers. The "New York Times" hired copy "boys" to be trained as reporters. No females need apply.

Ms. Smith was an editor at "Presbyterian Survey" and "United Church Herald," and associate editor for the biweekly journal of opinion, "Christianity and Crisis," working with founding editors Reinhold Niebuhr and John Bennett. "In those days," she said, "there were giants in the land."

Her first ecumenical experience was in 1953-54, when she accredited 600 press representatives for the mammoth World Council of Churches' second assembly in Evanston, Ill., and assisted Methodist Communciations pioneer Ralph Stoody in the pressroom.

She went to World Council headquarters in Geneva 20 years later as editor of its weekly Ecumenical Press Service and an information officer.

She has known all four of general secretaries of the World Council of Churches — from W. A. Visser't Hooft to Emilio Castro. Her time in Geneva coincided with that of Eugene Carson Blake, another Presbyterian and her frequent bridge partner. She also worked with Philip Potter, the first Third World head of the Council.

During her days with the World Council of Churches, Ms. Smith traveled to Thailand, India, Kenya and Ethiopia, where she met Emporer Haile Selassie. At dinner in 1968 at the World Council of Churches assembly in Uppsala, Sweden, she was seated next to Martin Niemoeller, German church leader famous for his resistance to Hitler.

Other prelates and potentates she met included the Ecumenical Patriarch of Constantinople and the King of Greece.

"My most difficult assignment was running a press operation outside Bangkok, Thailand. Tuberculosis patients were turned out of the Red Cross center so we could sleep in their beds — but we didn't worry because the conference had nurse Nita Barrow."

Dame Nita, then with the Council's Christian Medical Commission, is now Barbados' ambassador to the United Nations. She has been mentioned frequently as a possible next president of the U.N. General Assembly.

Since 1976, Ms. Smith has covered the United Methodist General Board of Global Ministries, Commission on Christian Unity and Commission on the Status and Role of Women; the Church Center at the United Nations; and the National and World Councils of churches, among others.

Ms. Smith intends to stay in the Columbia University section of New York. She is a deacon and head of the ecumenical committee at her neighboring Riverside Church.

She hopes to continue traveling, "seeing some of the places I've missed. I may pop up at a church meeting now and then if someone needs a stringer, and I'll continue to enjoy the cultural life of New York."

Flintlike integrity; accuracy; dependability; a true professional — these descriptive terms are just some of those mentioned at three farewell parties held in Ms. Smith's honor this spring.

As Cornell said, Ms. Smith is a delightful human being, a loyal friend — "funny, lighthearted, cynical about poses and pretenses; a true-blue straightshooter."

Wilbert Forker, a former ecumenical colleague now in the Bahamas, said Ms. Smith's career could be a "yardstick to any aspiring young journalist: integrity, confidence and a quest for making known the truth in a simple yet profound unamabiguous language."

Schuller blames cutbacks on TV scandals

Hearst News Service

When television ministries evolved from the mid-1970s into an estimated billion-dollar-a-year business by 1986, there seemed to be viewers and donations enough to go around for a fast-expanding crowd of practitioners.

Suddenly, the television ministries were rocked by the Jim Bakker and Jimmy Swaggart scandals. The biggest hits decimated the Bakkers' South Carolina empire and dealt body blows to Jerry Falwell in Virginia and Oral Roberts in Oklahoma.

California, too, is suffering aftershocks. It is host to some of the powerhouses in the religious ratings wars. And despite the differing styles — ranging from the Rev. Robert Schuller's upwardly mobile positivism to the Bible study approach of Fred K. Price's "Ever Increasing Faith" show — these television ministries have not been immune.

Schuller announced cutbacks this month in his "Hour of Power" positive thinking television ministry show emanating from the Crystal Cathedral. Some 40 of 250 employees were being let go, with projected 1988 donations of $26 million, down $8 million from 1987.

Schuller's show has ranked second of all television ministries to Swaggart's for several years. But Schuller's audience has dropped from 1,963,000 households in 1986 to 1,556,000 households this year. His show was seen in 213 markets in 1985, but is down to 168 this year. Before this, Schuller had said he felt immune to the crashing of televangelist idols.

"Something pretty drastic has happened in the past few months," said Jeffrey Hadden, University of Virginia professor of sociology and co-author of the best-selling book, "Prime Time Preachers."

"Schuller has not been afraid to drop stations when they weren't generating a lot of revenue, but the drop from 213 to 168 is significant. You can't take away from the reality that the number of markets that television ministers appear in are declining. And that speaks to shrinking audiences."

How far they've shrunk depends on your source. Hadden says the best study is a Gallup Poll that noted that there are 65 million people who watch some religious television regularly. A recent Annenberg School of Communications study placed the television faithful pool at 13 million, down from a peak of 18 million in the 1970s.

In a December address, Schuller himself blamed the Bakker scandal, the stock market crash and the September 1987 decision by New York City-based superstation WOR-TV to stop carrying paid religious programming, which cut Schuller's audience by 10 percent.

"There may not be a direct causal link between Schuller's troubles and the televangelist scandals," said Todd Lewis, professor of communications at Biola University in La Mirada, Calif. "But people have become cynical and are quick to turn away if there is even a hint of a scandal."

William Martin, Rice University sociologist and an expert on television ministers, said that virtually every public opinion poll shows that every major television minister has lost a substantial amount of trust from the public except Billy Graham. And every minister who asks for money has suffered from the Oral Roberts fiasco, in which the Tulsa, Okla., preacher said God would kill him if he didn't collect $8 million by March 31, 1987.

What ties Schuller to the crowd with suffering collection plates is that he, too, in his soft-sell way, asks for money. And despite his moderation, there is no question Schuller is also the star of his show. No matter that he avoids political agendas, there is something in that stardom that has put his ministry in the same economic ebb tide with Pat Robertson, whose Christian Broadcast Network cut 465 jobs from a workforce of 2,500 last year to head off anticipated losses of $28 million.

RELIGION IN BRIEF

Jehovah's Witnesses to have conventions

A series of 120 district conventions of Jehovah's Witnesses, designed to attract about 1,330,000 delegates, has been scheduled for this summer in the United States and Bermuda.

Stanley Weigel, spokesman for the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York, sponsor of the meetings, said the conventions will be conducted at 57 different sites in six languages.

Locally, Frank K. Barr, manager of two conventions set for the Amarillo Civic Center Coliseum, said the four-day seminars would attract 10,000 delegates from West Texas, western Oklahoma, southwestern Kansas and eastern New Mexico.

Theme for the convention is "Divine Justice" and attention will be directed at many of the serious problems confronting humanity, especially the breakdown of the family unit in modern society, Barr said.

"History reveals the futility attached to seeking human remedies to problems that require divine solutions," he said. "The program will highlight the wisdom and work required to succeed in meeting the challenge of our times and help build strong spiritual values into the family structure."

At the conventions, hundreds of missionaries serving in foreign fields will talk about their work.

"We will hear reports from throughout the world that will help us to see the situation worldwide and the progress being made by our ministerial activity in 210 lands," Barr said.

Brown speaks at school

Elder Victor Brown, chaplain and vice president of Student Enrollment at Southwestern Adventist College, was a guest speaker for the graduates at the Seventh Day Adventist Elementary School.

His address was titled "Double Winner." In delivering it, he asked such questions as "What will be the story of the rest of your lives?"

"You can be a double winner in spite of the fact that many people are too self-centered to attain this goal," Brown said.

Being a double winner means to practice the Golden Rule, and the promised power to do this is found in Matthew 6:33, Brown said.

"A loser says, 'I'll never win. What's the use to try?' A winner says, 'I'll beat you.' A double winner says, 'I'll help you win, and we'll both win,'" said Brown.

A reception and presentation of gifts was held in the school building.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Socializing more will help you feel comfortable with others. Your patience will be tested by mate or offspring. Withhold your political opinions unless asked directly. Travel is a source of delight.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Self-doubt disappears when you end a second-class relationship. Put your needs first next time. You have great inner strength. Pursue your goals with confidence. Stay free of entanglements with neighbors.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You are attracted to someone you never really noticed before. Once you feel established in business, you will have more time for romance. Ask partner to be patient. Temporary sacrifices are necessary.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Travel could lead to wonderful luck where business or romance is concerned. A phone call brings good news from a faraway loved one. Partner deserves a second chance. Be less judgmental!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): An older person feels rejuvenated after visiting offspring or grandchildren. A romantic refusal may not be permanent. Play a waiting game. Avoid unnecessary spending. Postpone purchasing luxury items.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): An attractive member of the opposite sex is eager to make a commitment. You may not be ready. A relative or close friend helps you reach an important decision. Your spirits soar!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Romance is more rewarding than in the recent past. Stubbornness could work to your advantage today. Remain true to your principles. Attend a small gathering of friends tonight.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A change of lifestyle merits consideration. Curb entertainment costs. A difference of opinion could lead to an amazing disclosure. Knowledge is power; use what you learn wisely.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your intuition tells you the best way to handle a financial matter. Pay attention! Spend some time preparing for tomorrow's appointments. Doing homework will pay off handsomely. Resist distractions.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Try to stick to previously made plans. Travel is risky, and so are agreements that might not hold up. Lost documents or items surface in strange places.

Cosby's 'son' graduates with honors

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Malcolm-Jamal Warner, who plays Bill Cosby's decidedly unacademic son in the top-rated NBC television show, has graduated from Professional Children's School with high honors.

At Thursday's graduation, Warner, 17, was cheered on by one of his co-stars on "The Cosby Show," Tempestt Bledsoe, 15, who plays a younger sister. In his role as Theo Huxtable, Warner struggles through his homework while dreaming of flying.

The actor said his first plans were to "buy myself a new car."

After lunch with his family, Warner went back to work Thursday evening in "Three Ways Home," a three-person play at the off-Broadway Astor Place Theater. He was treated to cake at an onstage party afterward.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Randy Travis, Barbara Mandrell, Reba McEntire and other country music stars appearing at this year's Fan Fair remember what it was like to be a nobody.

"It's been four years ago that I had my first booth at Fan Fair. Very few of 'em (fans) came to see me. Not many at all," said Travis, who won four awards, including entertainer of the year, at the annual Music City News country music awards on Monday.

Up to 24,000 people were in town for the annual fair, which features concerts and 365 autograph booths at the state fairgrounds for fans to meet favorite artists up close. This week's fair began Monday and wrapped up Friday.

Miss Mandrell recalled she and sisters Irlene and Louise fixed up their booth themselves the first year they attended the event.

"And I sat in it full time, the whole time it was open, every day. And I would be sitting there for as long as 15 minutes at a stretch before anybody would stop to get an autograph," she said.

Miss McEntire said at her first Fan Fair in 1976, she was pretty much ignored. "People would come by...and ask, 'Where's the bathroom?' or 'When are the Statler Brothers gonna be here?'" she said.

Carter

ATLANTA (AP) — Former first lady Rosalynn Carter, calling the plight of the homeless mentally ill one of the biggest problems in America, is raising funds to build homes for them.

At a gala at the Carter Presidential Center on Thursday night, Mrs. Carter told guests $1 million was needed to build Phoenix House, a residence that could accommodate up to 250 people a year. About $250,000 has already been raised.

"I do not think there is a more critical issue in America in 1988 than the homeless mentally ill, and I want you to help me improve this situation in Atlanta," said Mrs. Carter, chairwoman for Project Interconnections.

She said nearly a third of Georgia's estimated 15,000 homeless are believed to be mentally ill. Project Interconnections has proposed building three other centers in addition to Phoenix House.

DALLAS (AP) — Famed pianist Van Cliburn is set to perform in Dallas for the first time in 11 years at the inauguration next year of the new home of the Dallas Symphony Orchestra.

The concert at the Morton S. Meyerson Symphony Center is scheduled for Sept. 8, 1989, a symphony official said Thursday.

The Dallas Symphony and the Public Broadcasting Service have been discussing a possible national telecast of the Cliburn concert, according to a source at the network.

The pianist, who lives in Fort Worth, began to perform again recently after 11 years. He accepted President Reagan's invitation to perform at a White House dinner for Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev last fall.

Cliburn could not be reached by The Associated Press on Friday.

The $79 million Meyerson center will hold its first music-making event with an orchestra concert on Sept. 6, 1989. The invitation-only performance will feature violinist Isaac Stern as guest soloist.

Douglas

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — "Wall Street" bad guy Michael Douglas made his first appearance as a court witness when he testified during a murder trial.

Douglas, who won an Academy Award for his role as a greedy tycoon in the film, was called as a character witness Thursday at the murder trial of David P. Thompson, a beer importer accused of killing his landlord with a .357- caliber Magnum.

Douglas testified he met Thompson six times in 1986 when he was considering investing in the importer's firm. He said he never saw Thompson show signs of a hot temper.

Thompson displayed "good business acumen and good marketing skills," said Douglas, who saw some make-believe court action as a police officer in the 1970s television series "The Streets of San Francisco."

Donahue

WESTPORT, Conn. (AP) — Phil Donahue has been exchanging sharp words with an architect and a historian after demolishing a modernistic house next door to his Tudor-style mansion.

"Why didn't somebody take care of this building?" the talk show host said after he had the 26-year-old all-concrete house razed Wednesday. "Where were all these caring people when the building was unoccupied?"

Some local historians described the experimental house as the affluent town's most architecturally significant building, a sculpture as well as structure.

Donahue, who bought the house and 7.2 acres of land around it for $6 million two months ago, said he didn't know about the house's architectural significane and that he wanted more space, privacy and security for his wife, actress Marlo Thomas, and their family.

John M. Johansen, the architect who designed the house, said: "This wasn't a very exemplary act from a public figure. And they've nicknamed him 'Mr. Sensitivity.'"

"I still get knots in my stomach when I think about it," said Mary McCahon, Westport's architectural historian. "It was a wonderful building. The best design in Westport."

The Rev. Earl "Boots" Hedberg, who left the priesthood in 1975, poses in Hamilton, Texas, recently. Hedberg, 59, celebrated Mass again last summer and his 12-year-old son served as altar boy.

'Father Boots' returns to his flock

By DIANE WINSTON

HAMILTON, Texas (AP) — In the beginning there were boots.

One pair of pointy-toed, black leather boots and another pair of two-toned snakeskin.

They called the man who wore them "Father Boots."

To his parishioners in Central Texas, the Rev. Earl "Boots" Hedberg was a tough-talking, snuff-dipping, beer-swilling Catholic priest who had hustled jobs at the Cotton Bowl, roughnecked in the oil fields, operated radio for a Navy rig, and flew to Da Nang and the Demilitarized Zone to bless the fighting boys in Vietnam.

Those in his flock thought they knew Father Boots. They thought they had tamed the wild side of a hard-luck loner, an unorthodox priest whose own father had worried about little Earl's attitude.

And then Father Boots fooled them all.

On Feb. 9, 1975, Hedberg announced he was taking a year off from his parish duties in Marlin. Six days later, he wed in a Las Vegas civil ceremony.

Afterward, Hedberg found work as a suburban Waco police officer and learned carpentry in the Arkansas outback. Eight years and two children later, Hedberg realized he'd made a mistake. His wife divorced him and he returned to Texas.

He wanted his old job back.

"I knew dang well I was supposed to be a priest," said Hedberg. "I went to the bishop and told him I wanted to come back."

It would be four more years before church authorities reinstated him in an active ministry, a not-unheard-of occurrence, but in Hedberg's words "a miracle." When Hedberg first celebrated Mass again last summer, his 12-year-old son served as altar boy while his 14-year-old adopted daughter watched.

"I hadn't introduced myself yet," Hedberg recalled. "A woman turned to my little girl and asked, 'Who's that priest?' When my little girl answered, 'That's my dad,' the woman's eyes got as big as saucers."

At 59, Hedberg's shaggy blond hair is turning gray and his walrus mustache is stark white. His broad face is etched with lines and his lustrous blue eyes peek out under snowy eyebrows. Hedberg once was voted the best-looking boy in his senior class, and an insouciant charm still surfaces, despite his spiritual discipline and personal disappointments.

These lessons have taught him a simple message.

"You have to get out of yourself and help others," Hedberg said, explaining his frequent visits to local hospitals, jails and shut-ins. "When I go to prison and the guys say, 'Why are you here?' I tell them in The Beatitudes Jesus said, 'As you do to the least of your brethren, you do to me.' "

Hedberg's homespun homilies are woven from a rich and rugged life. He has seen the world and then some. He has slept in log cabins, flophouses and Navy barracks. He has prayed while driving an 18-wheeler bound for Tyler and withstood an atomic blast just miles from ground zero in the Marshall Islands.

His home today, the rectory at St. Thomas, is sparse. He stores a copying machine in the living room and keeps several coffee makers in the kitchen. On his white bedroom walls hang two crucifixes and a Snoopy plaque praising "Super-Dad."

Outside, hills of mesquite and live oaks roll into the horizon, and there are birds, foxes and varmints to feed. A breezeway links the rectory to the simple A-frame church.

St. Thomas is designed for service. There are no pews, just movable plastic chairs with kneelers so the sanctuary can double as a recreation hall.

The parish extends over 600 square miles. When Hedberg came in August, 10 families attended Sunday Mass. Now there are 30 families, and Hedberg also holds weekly Masses at two nearby prisons, a private home in Carlton and a Presbyterian church in Adamsville.

Bishop John McCarthy believes he's found the perfect place for his peripatetic priest.

"He's where he belongs," said McCarthy, the Austin diocese bishop who personally guided Hedberg's petition for reinstatement through the Vatican bureaucracy. "It's the cowboy nature of the territory. Earl goes up and down those roads like an old-fashioned, horseback-riding minister."

For a Nebraska farm boy, Hedberg cuts a convincing Western figure. He wears a black cowboy hat, dips and spits wintergreen snuff, and blurs his words in a Texas drawl. And there are, of course, those boots.

Hedberg's granddaddy was a hard-shell Baptist preacher. But Hedberg's parents, from Swedish and Pennsylvania-Dutch stock, reared him and his three brothers outside the church. Hedberg grew up during the Great Depression, and the family moved frequently. In 1936, Hedberg's father took them to Custer, S.D., while he worked for the Civilian Conservation Corps. Ten years later, he was with the military, and the family lived in Italy and Germany.

After graduating from an American high school in Munich, West Germany, Earl Hedberg returned to the States. He spent a year in the Navy and then roved the country, hitching rides and hustling work. When the Korean War broke out, he enlisted again and served as a radio officer on a command ship. It was during those months at sea that Hedberg's faith developed.

"On board ship, you read a lot," Hedberg said, an ever-present cup of black coffee at hand. "You either read sex books or religious books. I read the religious books."

A plain-spoken man, Hedberg searches for words to describe his conversion. He explains it as a slow process of recognizing that he wanted, more than anything else, to help people.

"I wanted to be a brother and go to Africa and help people,' " Hedberg said, recalling what led him to St. Mary's Seminary in Houston. "Then a father said it was better to take care of souls and to try to be a priest."

Hedberg served 13 years as a priest in Taylor, Bryan, West and Marlin and also as a Marine chaplain before his troubles began. He doesn't like to talk about the circumstances surrounding his departure from the priesthood except to say he wanted some time out. He stalked criminals in Waco and dug ditches in Arkansas. He worked 50 hours a week to support his family but his marriage still didn't work out.

"The problem with most marriages is that one person wants to change the other," Hedberg says. "Sometimes, I think my faith ruined my marriage."

When his wife divorced him and returned to Texas, Hedberg followed. He stopped in Waco where an old friend, Monsignor Mark Deering, took him in.

"He looked like a bent piece of material," said Deering, the pastor at St. Louis Catholic Church. "He was down and out, but he used to be one of us."

Deering asked Hedberg to live at the rectory and found him a job driving a truck. He also led Hedberg back to a spiritual life.

Black Mormon now presides over rites at Denver temple

EDITOR'S NOTE — Ten years ago, the Mormon Church began admitting blacks to its priesthood. While its missionaries have achieved remarkable success in Africa and elsewhere abroad, at home they labor to dispel the bitter legacy of 130 years of racial exclusion.

By MICHAEL WHITE and VERN ANDERSON

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Mormon elder Joseph Freeman today guides his white brethren through sacred temple rituals that just a decade ago were denied him because of his black skin.

"I think I have been greatly blessed. I feel my life has been very much fulfilled," said Freeman, who twice monthly performs rites in the church's Denver Temple.

"I may never be a rich man, but I don't care to be. The riches I have are to have a good family, to teach my children the gospel."

The ban ended June 9, 1978, when the late church President Spencer W. Kimball announced he'd received a revelation from God opening the priesthood, held by all worthy Mormon males older than 11, to black members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

But despite the church's startling success among blacks since then, particularly in Africa, it still labors at home to overcome the ban's legacy: a lingering perception that Mormonism is a faith for whites.

The church numbers 8,500 members in Nigeria and 5,000 in Ghana and is growing by about 2,000 converts a year in each country. New missions have opened recently in Zaire, Liberia, Zimbabwe and Sierra Leone.

In predominantly black Haiti, the church reaps more than 70 converts monthly.

Blacks in the American South hold leadership positions once open only to whites.

"I started out being exotic and ended up being generic," said Alan Cherry, one of the few American blacks baptized before 1978.

NOR DOES THE legacy of the ban appear to have slowed the church's overall growth. Since 1978, the church says its membership has nearly doubled from 3.8 million to 6.5 million worldwide.

Black members say deliberate racism is extremely rare among white Mormons. Rather, they say, blacks and whites struggle with cultural and economic barriers that can undermine the most sincere fellowships.

"The first question I get is, 'Where did you play ball?' " said Van Williams, a black employed in the church's public communications department. "When I say I didn't, then in their minds I'm either a pimp or a drug dealer. I'm still struggling with people who won't accept me for who I am, but I won't let that affect my beliefs."

Like many black Mormons, Williams is skeptical of the church's claim of a divine origin for the doctrine. "I choose to look at it as something that man placed and God removed," he said, echoing a view shared by independent Mormon scholars and at least one high-ranking church official.

The late Hugh B. Brown, a member of the Council of the Twelve and a counselor to former church President David O. McKay, never accepted the ban as doctrine and nearly engineered its reversal, said Brown's grandson, Edwin B. Firmage.

Ten members of the Twelve, which assists the governing First Presidency, voted to lift the ban in 1969. Firmage said the vote was nullified when the council's senior active member, Harold B. Lee, returned to town.

Little evidence indicates the policy originated with church founder Joseph Smith; it was not among the dozens of written revelations he left before his 1844 assassination in Illinois. As articulated by Smith's successor, Brigham Young, the ban was rooted in the belief that black Africans were descendants of the biblical Cain, cursed by God for murdering his brother, Abel.

CHURCH LEADERS in 1969 reiterated the policy was divine doctrine taught by Smith and every succeeding Mormon prophet, but by 1978, months before the ban's demise, they were saying that only God knew the reason why.

A decade later, that apparently remains the official view. Elder Dallin H. Oaks, a member of the Twelve, said in an interview that theological arguments trying to buttress the doctrine were largely speculative. God doesn't give reasons for his revelations, he said.

"We can put reason to revelation. We can put reasons to commandments. When we do, we're on our own. Some people put reasons to the one we're talking about here and they turned out to be spectacularly wrong," Oaks said.

Mormons define priesthood as the authority to act in the name of God, and membership is a prerequisite to any appointment in the church's lay leadership or to performing such rites as baptism, temple marriage and healing the sick.

Freeman, for instance, was not permitted to bless his infant sons before Kimball's revelation. A white member of the priesthood gave the blessings instead.

"There were restrictions which, in a worldly sense, were hard to accept," said Freeman, who two days after the ban was lifted became the first black ordained to the faith's priesthood since the faith's infancy, when at least two blacks held priesthood offices.

Among Africans, the restriction appears to have made less difference. "They don't seem to take it the way I think I would if I had been involved," said Reed Clegg, a missionary in Ghana and Nigeria in the early 1980s.

AS EARLY AS 1946 the church was receiving inquiries from Nigerians who had read church missionary tracts or articles. The Nigerian government, however, refused to admit missionaries until the policy was dropped.

The appeal of Mormonism also spread to Ghana. When missionaries arrived in the two countries, they were greeted by thousands eager for baptism.

Among American blacks, memories of the ban haunt missionary efforts. But black and white Mormons alike say economic and social barriers are more divisive than church doctrine.

"I would say that where you have black middle-class converts coming into middle-class congregations, the prognosis is good," said Armand Mauss, a Washington State University sociologist who has monitored the progress of black Mormons. "Where you have lower-class blacks being converted to middle-class congregations, that's not good."

Mauss cited surveys taken from 1972 to 1985 by the National Opinion Research Corp. that suggested white Mormons were slightly more tolerant of blacks than non-Mormon whites. But when racial tensions flare, they take their toll of fledgling black converts already sensitive to the church's image among non-Mormon friends and relatives.

In Greensboro, N.C., black baptisms averaged six to 12 a month in the early 1980s, but a majority fell away after racial incidents, said John McCoy, a black who sits on the high council of the Greensboro Stake, or diocese.

Among those who left the church was McCoy's wife, taunted with epithets by 11-year-olds she was teaching in Primary, the church's organization for children.

"A very few whites, two or three, were still prejudiced and they let the blacks know it. It made the rest of the whites feel bad because the blacks were judging the church by them," said McCoy, a member of eight years.

Worried at the erosion among black converts, local leaders offered them a choice, to continue attending mixed congregations or form their own with black leaders. They unanimously picked the latter.

Since then, the number of active black participants has risen from about 50 to more than 200.

Black Africans eager to join Mormon Church

Associated Press

The first Mormon missionaries to Nigeria and Ghana were greeted by whole congregations of converts awaiting baptism into a church that for more than a century had refused to ordain blacks to its priesthood.

"They came to us," said former missionary Reed Clegg. "We could have baptized thousands. They were living the gospel, paying tithing, holding meetings, before we arrived."

When the late Mormon Church President Spencer W. Kimball ended the 130-year exclusion of blacks from the church's all-male priesthood on June 9, 1978, he paved the way for one of the most extraordinary episodes in the faith's long history of missionary work.

Blacks have also converted by the thousands in many predominantly black Caribbean countries and in Brazil, where many of the church's 250,000 members claim black ancestors.

But the story of Mormon growth in Africa stands apart. For decades, thousands in Nigeria and Ghana who had read Mormon books and tracts implored the church to send missionaries to baptize them. But it wasn't until the doctrine forbidding black priests was abolished that African governments would grant visas to Mormon missionaries.

In one year, the first missionaries — two elderly couples — baptized nearly 2,000 converts. A decade later, Nigeria has 8,500 church members, Ghana 5,000, with membership growing by about 4,000 a year in the two combined.

Missionaries returning from African service tell of villagers walking more than 50 miles round trip to attend church meetings, of baptismal services lasting for hours to accommodate all the converts and communities where religion in general was of urgent concern.

Church leaders assert they could multiply by many times the rate of growth in Africa if they wished. But they are moving slowly to build a solid base of black leadership, and they say the strategy is paying off.

In May, visiting officials from Salt Lake City ordained the first black African stake president, a lay leader who presides over several congregations, in the Nigerian city of Aba.

In South Africa, controlled by the apartheid system of racial separation, the number of black converts is also on the rise.

The church could not estimate their number because its membership records do not note race, but blacks attend Sunday meetings and worship in the Johannesburg Temple alongside whites, said Elder Neal A. Maxwell, who supervises church activities in Africa.

Black Africans are aware of the church's old policy of denying priesthood membership to blacks, but it appears to have made little difference to them.

"They are not as interested in it as we are. For them, that's that. They are grateful for (the change), but their eyes are on the future and they don't seem quite as caught up in it. It's not a big thing for them," said Maxwell.

Despite the success, proselytizing in Africa has raised new challenges to a church long acquainted with missionary work in far-away places. Among the more difficult is the popular tradition of polygamy.

Scores of potential converts have been denied baptism because of plural marriage, a practice the Mormons themselves once embraced but officially dropped in 1890 as a prerequisite to statehood for Utah.

Rendell Mabey, who led the first missionary contingent, said the problem arose on a grand scale in a congregation organized years before the missionaries arrived. When Mabey went to the village to baptize the people, he learned about half were polygamists.

Woman says she's 'free at last' in Mormon Church

By DAVID BRISCOE

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cleeretta Smiley says she's "free at last" in the Mormon Church's new Washington, D.C., Second Ward, but her 25-year-old son, a Sunday School teacher, wishes the church had more appeal for young blacks.

A decade after the church began admitting blacks to priesthood, the sole urban Mormon congregation in Washington, which is 70 percent black, is mostly white and struggling to convert and keep black members.

Ward leaders could think of only two black families who attend church together. Most members are singles or couples and few stay in the ward long. The 400-member congregation is about 40 percent black, but at a recent Sunday service with 100 people, only about one-fourth were black.

Yet officials of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints say some of the black members, particularly more-recent immigrants, are faithful members, and they are having a subtle impact on traditional Mormon services.

A former Nigerian legislator, Rufus Olumba, teaches in his native "agbada" robes and headdress to a mostly white priesthood class. The lessons are out of the church manual, but Olumba adds unique phraseology and experience to Mormon doctrine.

Mrs. Smiley, the ward's public communications director, has heard the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. quoted in church.

"What this church has given me is such a high level of freedom. I'm free, I'm free at last in that ward," she said, consciously echoing King's words.

Mrs. Smiley, whose husband left her and won custody of two of their four children after she joined the church three years before the ban on black priests was lifted, said she and other black Mormons tried for years to get an inner-city ward, which was finally established in May 1987.

Before that, the city had been divided like a wagon wheel, with its wards radiating out into the suburbs along the lines of the spokes. That scattered the few black members among the suburban wards.

Beverly Campbell, a Washington-based church spokeswoman, said the church earlier avoided having a city ward because it didn't want the appearance of segregating church members.

Now, although the gleaming Mormon temple in Kensington, Md., is a suburban landmark, the city's Mormons have no chapel.

On Sundays, the church leases part of the National Press Club, turning the modern downtown center into a not-so-typical Mormon wardhouse, with bishops conferences in a 13th-floor lounge overlooking the city, Sunday School classes in rooms named for famous journalists and sacrament services in a hall where the nation's newsmakers address the Washington press.

Campbell acknowledged the church faces a challenge in attracting black Americans.

"The gospel is ever true and ever the same. It does not change," she said. "And yet, the people of other cultures must feel a spiritual and emotional binding with the spiritual message. That is sometimes missing."

But in a church that now prides itself in attracting all races and nationalities, there aren't enough active black members to raise the issue of segregation.

Mrs. Smiley's son Robert said the church has little appeal to inner-city blacks, who still view it as a white, racist institution.

"The church has the basic principles," he said, "but it has to change with the times." A graduate in industrial technology, he said one of his major complaints about the church is the dullness of its music.

At a recent service, the congregation sang several traditional, slow Mormon hymns — a sharp contrast to the lively gospel music of Washington's predominantly black Protestant churches.

Poachers, smugglers mar advancement

Hearst News Service

ORANGE WALK DISTRICT, Belize — Tree thieves are getting on John Masson's nerves.

Masson, the manager of Houston-based Coca-Cola Foods' land here, had a shouting match a few days ago with the manager of an unauthorized logging crew. Each threatened to go for his shotgun before tempers cooled.

Now, Masson spies still more trouble coming down the road — a timber truck. These, he says, are the people he told not to take logs.

They stop to talk — no raised voices this time — in the local Creole dialect. The boss admits his logs don't bear the "crowfoot" — a hammered imprint showing the government royalty was paid.

Such are the trials of doing business where timber poachers share the territory with archaeological looters and marijuana smugglers, where development plans are scrutinized by foreign environmentalists concerned about tropical deforestation.

This land was all once owned by Belize Estate and Produce Co. It is mainly dense forest, dryer than rain forest and with richer soil but still home to a dazzling array of wildlife — jaguars and jaguarundis, toucans and tapirs, crocodiles in streams and lagoons.

Belizean Barry Bowen acquired Belize Estate's 700,000 acres in 1983, intending to clear a large area to plant fast-growing trees for a massive, wood-burning power station.

The plan fell through, and Bowen almost lost the land to a Panamanian bank. He kept about 300,000 acres when Coca-Cola Foods and a partnership of Texas businessmen Walter Mischer and Paul Howell each obtained nearly 200,000 acres in a 1985 deal.

Coca-Cola Foods' plan to grow oranges here — now shelved with only a remote chance of revival, said spokeswoman Michelle Beale — was pummeled by critics who thought tropical rain forest would be bulldozed.

Now, Coca-Cola Foods plans to give the government 42,000 acres for a park and 10,000 acres for small farms, sell 93,000 acres to Belizeans and keep about 50,000 acres in case it resurrects the citrus project.

Thick smoke spreads through Lagoon Bank, a work camp at Mischer and Howell's Yalbac Ranch & Cattle Corp., from a large, burning pile of trees and brush. John Loskot, a Belizean who manages the company's operations here, says it represents one stage in clearing the land for cattle.

Loskot wades into a luxuriant pasture to point out how well an African grass is doing on this soil. "There can be 300 to 400 head here — a nice little herd of cattle," he says.

Yalbac's development plans filed with the Belizean government said cattle would arrive 18 months after the start of clearing about a year ago. But company officials now say it won't happen that soon.

"We're not going to do the traditional American venue — zoom in, do our thing and ask questions later after spending money uselessly," company President John Storms said.

People have trouble believing that Yalbac is still deciding what to do, Storms said. "It's horrible to be here telling the truth and for everybody to be suspicious of you."

Company officials tell environmentalists who inquire that reports of plans to clear 50,000 acres were wrong. They say they foresee clearing 5,000 acres for cattle and partly clearing 5,000 acres for crops, leaving taller trees for shade.

Storms said Yalbac officials consider concerns about tropical deforestation. "It's extremely important to all of us, but it's something that has to be taken in the context of the country overall," he said.

"If we take 5,000 of 193,000 acres, it doesn't seem like a horrible imbalance, especially if the 5,000 acres gives a great deal of economic stimulus to the country to tackle other environmental problems, like improving sewage treatment."

Yalbac will not pursue Bowen's idea of tree plantations feeding a plant to produce all of Belize's electricity, which does not appear economical and sure to raise strong objections from environmentalists.

And Bowen has replaced his dream of a wood-fired power station with a very different vision, building lodges for tourist visitors. If the first project succeeds, Bowen envisions similar developments at other Mayan sites on his land, linking them with trails and roads.

Belize struggles with development crisis

Officer: Country 'is last chance to do it right'

Hearst News Service

BELMOPAN, Belize — This small nation stands at a crossroad in its national struggle to advance above poverty.

Its forests, unlike those in the other Central American countries, are not widely ravaged by peasants desperate for food and ranchers eyeing the export market.

Officials here think they can balance conservation and development to avoid extensive deforestation.

"It seems to me that the two things can live together fairly easily," said Dean Lindo, minister of agriculture, forestry, conservation and fisheries.

The task is crucial, said Dennis Glick, the World Wildlife Fund's senior program officer for Latin America. "Belize is the last chance to do it right. Unfortunately, we don't have that opportunity anywhere else in Central America."

Reducing food imports is a key government goal, but Lindo said Belize's tiny population — about 171,000 people of mixed African, American Indian and European descent — minimizes pressure to clear forests, which cover 80 percent of the country.

Still, conservationists here worry that the influx of foreign investors, encouraged by the ruling United Democratic Party's free enterprise orientation, could overpower the best efforts to control development.

"It's very serious because we're at such a brink here of so much happening so fast," said Janet Gibson, a vice president of the Belize Audubon Society. "You just can't know the facts of everything."

Some agricultural projects failed, disrupting the environment, because foreign investors did not do their homework on soil types and other factors, said James D. Woodson Jr., a Phoenix-based consultant who does work in Belize.

"The national debate between advocates of cautious and rapid development is a chronic conflict," the newspaper Amandala said in a recent editorial. Help in resolving it is now being offered by the Programme For Belize, a new coalition of conservation groups including the World Wildlife Fund, Nature Conservancy, New York Zoological Society and Massachusetts Audubon Society.

The Programme is raising money for acquisition and management of densely forested land for a national park. Also, it is helping Belizean officials plan development compatible with environmental protection.

Its effort arose from a controversy over Coca-Cola Foods' plan to grow oranges in Belize. Environmentalists in several countries criticized the plan, fearing wide forest-clearing. The U.S. company, based in Houston, denied that but put the project on hold, citing unfavorable economic conditions. It also offered 40,000 acres to the government for a reserve.

Recently, that prospective park's size nearly quadrupled when the Programme bought 110,000 acres from Belizean businessman Barry Bowen. He also donated 8,000 acres and said he plans to manage all but about 3,000 of his remaining 182,000 acres as a private reserve for nature-oriented tourism.

Meanwhile, John Storms, president of Yalbac Ranch & Cattle Corp. — a partnership of Texas businessmen Walter Mischer and Paul Howell that owns 193,000 acres in the area — said it is moving cautiously on its tentative plans, which include crops, cattle and a possible private reserve.

Bill Burley, the Programme's planning and research director, hopes to work with the Yalbac Corp. "Unless they move with haste, I think we can work out a (land) management regimen as a joint cooperative effort" by all property owners near the park, he said. "It will take a lot of talking and diplomacy."

Land acquired by the Programme could become part of a three-nation park with forests in Mexico and Guatemala, said Arnold Brown, a former business executive who heads the Programme's fund-raising.

Wilbur Garrett, editor of National Geographic, mentioned the idea last year in a proposal to reduce poverty in the region: "This pristine jungle area with its unique wildlife and pre-Columbian ruins could become as environmentally important and well-known as the Serengeti Park in East Africa."

Burley is helping Lindo's ministry prepare Belize's Tropical Forestry Action Plan, one of 50 such projects in various countries being based partly on a report Burley helped author at the World Resources Institute.

Two years of work on the Belize plan started last month, aided by international development agencies. It will set priorities for protecting endangered areas and map out the revival of Belize's timber industry, Burley said.

There is wide agreement here that forestry regulations and practices need reform. Timber was once the economy's bulwark — a man with an ax appears on the national seal. But wood now accounts for only 1 percent of exports.

When Belize, formerly British Honduras, gained independence in 1981, Great Britain left behind what a British consultant called typical colonial forestry laws, aimed only at exploiting the resource, said Martin Meadows, a board member of Belize Audubon.

"From 1638, people have been trying to make a quick buck in Belize — everything was taken out, nothing was put in," said Milton Jamail, a University of Texas faculty member who studies Belizean history and politics.

Belizean forestry officials now set minimum growth limits for trees that can be cut and collect royalties. But a lack of funds badly hampers enforcement, Meadows and others agree.

Creating the world's first jaguar preserve and other actions prove the government wants to protect forests, Lindo said. Belizean officials tell foreign groups urging them to undertake more conservation projects that financing is the only thing holding the country back.

> "The national debate between advocates of cautious and rapid development is a chronic conflict." — Amandala, Belize newspaper

"We'd love to do it," Lindo said. "We have the will, but someone will have to put up the money."

Another problem is posed by immigrants growing subsistence crops of corn and beans, like Anthony Longsworth and his neighbors along the Hummingbird Highway just south of the tiny capital of Belmopan.

Longsworth is trying to forge a better life for his family by carving a farm from the jungle. It is an ordeal of clearing and burning. He hopes his efforts will gain him legal squatter's rights to the land.

A small cloth bag of fruit seeds holds his future — about 300 seeds. "It's not very many," he admits, "but it's a start."

Belizeans say the jungle was so tall here just a few years ago that traveling the rolling, rutted road was like being in a tunnel. Now, small farms replace the forest in many areas.

Government estimates of recent illegal immigrants to Belize range up to 20,000. An amnesty program drew little response from people who had run away from repressive governments, one official said.

Some refugees were given farm plots, Lindo said, "but I think we'll have to extend that so we can place them on agricultural land. No more cutting down trees."

The immigrants' slash-and-burn farming is not extensive yet, Lindo said. "Obviously, we'll have to stop it, but it means we'll have to evolve a policy about what to do with these people."

Brazilian street kid writes book

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — Aulo Collen was once a street kid. He has razor-blade scars on his left arm to show for it. He escaped 15 times from a detention center. Crime seemed the only way.

Today he is 18 years old and has a steady job as a computer programmer.

But he has another proud accomplishment: He is the author of a book about his life on the streets — "Mais Que a Realidade" (More than Reality).

"You know," he said in an interview in December after publication of his book, "that street children are like precious stones that need to be polished so that they can shine and become something of value."

Collen was abandoned by his prostitute mother when he was 3 months old. Once old enough, he was on the streets of Sao Paulo, stealing and begging.

In his book, he describes his childhood in a juvenile detention center and on the streets.

A detention center, he wrote, is "a school where the only thing you learn is how to become a beggar or a thief or a murderer, because that was how we were treated."

In the interview, Collen said, "It was so bad at the detention center that to escape the brutality, I tried to kill myself at least five times.

"No one really cared about us. No one took the trouble to teach and prepare us to earn an honest living."

Each time he escaped he was captured and sent back, often to be punished with severe beatings, he said. He was 13 when he fled for the last time and became a street kid.

In his book, Collen said he stole bracelets, watches and necklaces from passers-by and sold them "to shady characters and sometimes to the cops."

"I always felt that if I had a decent chance I could make something of myself. I always knew that I was born to be more than a street kid."

His chance came in 1985 when he entered an experimental school for needy children opened by the Sao Paulo State Department of Education.

Social Worker Reinaldo Bulgarelli, who befriended Collen on the streets said, "Collen succeeded in leaving the streets and started a new life because he is extremely intelligent, persistent and knows how to assert himself — traits that will prevent him from becoming another Pixote."

He was referring to Fernando Ramos da Silva, a slum youth who seemed headed for a better life when at the age of 12 he starred in "Pixote," the 1980 internationally acclaimed Brazilian movie about street children.

But Ramos failed in other acting parts and returned to the slums, where he became a petty thief.

In 1987, at the age of 19, he was shot and killed by police during a robbery attempt.

Noriega supporters to be barred from U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan issued an order Friday barring top Panamanian government and military officials known to support Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega from entering the United States.

An official said it is believed that several hundred Panamanians would be affected by the order.

In a proclamation that prompted a quick denunciation and a threat of retaliation by the Panamanian government, the president said Noriega and his handpicked president, Manuel Solis Palma, "are preventing the legitimate government of President Eric Arturo Delvalle from restoring order and democracy in that country."

Accordingly, he said, "I have determined that it is in the interests of the United States to restrict the entrance into the United States as immigrants and non-immigrants of certain persons who formulate or implement the policies" of Noriega and Solis Palma.

Under the president's proclamation, Secretary of State George P. Shultz will designate those Panamanian nationals who, with their families, will be barred from entering the United States because of their role in aiding the Noriega regime.

He said the order would not be enforced in such a way as to conflict with international obligations of the United States or to prohibit the entry of individuals into the United States to submit to U.S. government legal proceedings.

Boris Moreno, director of the Panamanian National Information Service, denounced the order and warned that his government might retaliate in kind.

"We could not care less about any lists made up by the Reagan administration," Moreno said in Panama City. "The United States is free to make as many lists as it wants of Panamanians it does not want to admit there, just as we can make our lists of U.S. citizens we do not want in Panama."

The Reagan administration has sought unsuccessfully to induce Noriega, who is under indictment on drug trafficking charges in Florida, to yield power to Delvalle in Panama.

Panamanians on the list who attempt to come to the United States would be stopped at U.S. ports of entry or they would be denied visas at U.S. consular offices, the official said.

Bakkers say they're working on plan to get back on the air

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Evangelists Jim and Tammy Bakker said Friday they don't have the money to buy back PTL, but they're preparing to submit a plan to the bankruptcy trustee that would allow them to go on television and "quite a bit else."

"We don't have money in the bank. We haven't asked for people to put money in the bank. We will launch a campaign, perhaps in the next few days; to do some of that," Bakker said at a news conference.

He said he had promises of support from some businesses in Rock Hill and Fort Mill, near PTL's Heritage USA headquarters, but he wouldn't provide names.

"We have commitments from various people. The finances is not the problem. This is a very spiritual problem," he said.

Bakker, who met privately on Thursday with bankruptcy trustee M.C. "Red" Benton, said he's drawing up a proposal that would put the PTL founders back on television.

"We are preparing in the next 48 hours a plan to present to Mr. Benton and that would include air time and quite a bit else," Bakker said.

Asked if he would use the air time to raise money, Bakker said he and his wife want to use most of the time helping people.

"My goal is to spend most of my time ministering. We have something that we want to say. We've learned a lot... We want to spend time helping hurting people, to help people that are going through similar situations," Bakker said.

"Needless to say, we're going to have to have help to pay the bills," he added.

Thursday's meeting was Bakker's first detailed discussion with Benton.

1. Help your reader visualize the item you have for sale. You will sell your merchandise much more quickly if you include a very specific and accurate description of the item in the ad copy. You should include all of the essential details of an effective one-column ad—age, condition, size, brand name and price.

2. Let your reader know when and where to contact you. There is nothing more frustrating then trying to make a call only to receive no answer. Don't make it difficult for potential buyers to contact you! Be sure to include in your ad the hours you will be home to answer inquiries about the items you have to sell. Remember, a potential customer probably will not call twice!

3. Don't use abbreviations. Nvr. frust. a pot. cust. w. abb. You want to make the process of reading your ad easy for your potential customer. Most readers will not take the time to try to decipher confusing ad copy. Limit your use of abbreviations to the following ten: approx. (approximately), ave. (avenue), blvd. (boulevard), bldg. (building), condo (condominium), rec. room (recreation room), refrig. (refrigerator), rd. (road), sq. ft. (square foot), st. (street).

Consider what a Jetta has to offer: 1.8 liter fuel-injected engine, rack and pinion steering, front-wheel drive, power-assisted disc brakes and a long list of standard features that bring new meaning to the words "fun to drive."

Come in and see for yourself. Take a test drive. You'll quickly understand why these Jetta models are so popular. And this financing rate will only make them more so.

*Financing only at participating dealers to qualified retail buyers through VW Credit, Inc., on new Jetta GL, GLI 16V, and Carat. Delivered by 6/30/88. See your dealer for details. Dealer contribution may affect consumer cost.

Now Pick.

It's tough when they look so similar. And so with apartments. Many communities look similar, but looks can be deceiving. So how do you pick the good apple in the bunch?

Begin by looking at a Balcor Community. Saddle Club Apartments have been individually designed for their location. And developed to be worthy of the highest honor you can give it - to call it home.

But there's more...something at the core of each Balcor Community that can't be seen at all. And that's a passion for service. Saddle Club management professionals will go out of their way to ensure that your neighborhood is what you expect it to be. The very best.

So look beyond the first blush on the apple. And you'll pick Saddle Club every time.

Expect the Best.
