Western Bank's fate still debated

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Business/Oil Writer

Negotiations in Dallas are continuing as FDIC officials search for a new owner for Midland's Western Bank, said Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. closing manager Frank Norris late this morning.

The bank closed its doors at 3 p.m. Thursday.

Norris said negotiations with "several parties" in attempts to finalize a full purchase assumption of the bank were continuing.

No formal action had been taken at presstime.

But a spokesman in Washington said the agency was working to resolve the situation today.

Among the bids submitted for the bank Thursday was one by United Bank in Midland, said United president Don Jones.

"We hope to know whether or not we are the successful bidder by late this afternoon or in the morning," Jones said late this morning.

He added that United's bid was structured so that the Andrews Highway facility will open as a branch office of the downtown bank if it is accepted by the FDIC.

Other banks, which have not been identified, also are bidding for Western.

For the second time in as many months, and for the fifth time since the onset of the energy industry's woes in 1983, a Permian Basin bank has been declared insolvent by its directors and placed in the hands of the Texas Banking Commissioner for liquidation.

Thursday at 3 p.m., Western Bank's directors turned the 14-year-old bank's $72.8 million in assets over to Commissioner James Sexton, who in turn appointed the FDIC receiver of the failed institution.

While the FDIC sought a suitable buyer for the failed bank, more than 13,300 former depositors contemplated the future of their accounts which totaled about $68 million, an FDIC spokesman said.

If a buyer can be arranged to assume the deposits it is likely that the bank would re-open early next week under the new name with little additional disruption of service for former Western customers, Norris said.

"Deposits and the checks and accounts of those customers would be fully assumed by a new owner," he said. "This is the scenario we are still working toward."

Closure creates varied problems for customers

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Business/Oil Writer

Gary Jackson sure doesn't need another week like this one.

Last Sunday morning a 3 a.m. call from his employer told him that his company's operations had been suspended. Up to that point, Jackson had been a station agent for Frontier Airlines.

Then Thursday afternoon, a week after his former employer filed Chapter 11 bankruptcy officially leaving him without a job, Jackson first heard a televised report that Western Bank — his bank — had failed.

"The oil company my wife had worked for went belly up less than two months ago, so we were both at home when we heard," Jackson said.

"Although we figured there was nothing I could do by coming down, I wanted to see for myself what was going on," he said, standing outside the bank's locked doors awaiting some word from the FDIC officials huddled inside.

Jackson was one of several disgruntled customers hoping to get word of the future of their bank.

"These things don't happen over night. Why doesn't somebody say something before it's too late?" challenged Donza Dawson.

Hijackers open fire; At least 100 people wounded

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — Four gunmen holding a hijacked Pan Am jumbo jet opened fire on the passengers without warning today, and first reports said at least 100 people were wounded.

Associated Press correspondent Iqbal Jaffery reported from the airport that passengers and security forces were taken completely by surprise when the gunmen began firing inside the cabin with automatic weapons.

At least 26 ambulances rushed out to the Boeing 747 as terrified and wounded passengers streamed off the jetliner. The wounded included many women and children.

There was no immediate word on any deaths.

Pakistani army commandos who had been on standby at the airport rushed to the plane, but it was not immediately clear if they had clashed with the hijackers.

A wounded passenger said as he was lifted into an ambulance, "All of a sudden they started firing. Nobdy was expecting it."

Arabs armed with machine guns and explosives had seized a Pan Am jumbo jet with about 400 people aboard at Karachi airport and demanded an American crew fly them to Cyprus. The government said the gunmen killed an American passenger and wounded three airport workers.

State Department spokesman Peter Martinez confirmed that the American had died, identifying him as Rajesh Kumar, who was born in Kenya and lived in California.

A Pan Am spokeswoman in New York said 41 other Americans were believed on the New York-bound Boeing 747.

The gunmen, who security officials said were Palestinians, told Pakistani officials by radio they had planted explosives on the plane.

"No American should approach the aircraft. Otherwise we will give them a tough fight. We will not commit suicide," said the hijack leader, identified only as Mustafa.

In Cyprus and Lebanon, conflicting claims were made linking the gunmen to pro-Libyan and pro-Iranian groups.

Civil Aviation Administration director general Khurshid Manwar Mirza said they demanded an American flight crew come aboard and fly the plane to Cyprus, where they wanted to free Palestinian hijackers jailed in Larnaca. He said they wanted the crew to include a speaker of Arabic.

In exchange, they offered to release "at least the women and children and perhaps more," said Mirza, who was negotiating with the hijackers from the control tower.

He told The Associated Press that a Pan Am flight crew was flying in from Frankfurt, West Germany. The plane's original three-member flight crew escaped through an emergency hatch when the gunmen seized the plane at about 5 a.m.

Record rainfall could continue

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

Midlanders apparently will continue to be soaked by record-breaking rainfall with a 70 percent chance for showers predicted throughout the day.

A rainfall record was broken in Midland between 6 p.m. Wednesday and 6 p.m. Thursday when 4.31 inches were recorded, said Constantine Pashos with the National Weather Service.

This is the most rain that has ever dropped in September during a 24-hour period, he said.

A flash flood warning continues to be in effect for today with the chance of rain decreasing to 40 percent tonight, the National Weather Service reports.

The drenching rains are expected to let up by Saturday with a 20 percent chance predicted.

Fourteen weather-related traffic accidents were reported Thursday by the police and several roads around town were closed due to flooding after 3.39 inches of rain fell.

At about 11 a.m. Thursday the Department of Public Safety was called to tow a stalled out car stranded in flood waters at Interstate 20 and Texas State Highway 307, a department spokesman said.

In Odessa portions of the northern city limits were declared a disaster area at 4 p.m. Thursday by Ector County Judge Jan Fisher and Mayor Don Carter.

About 120 families were surronded by waist-high water in northern Odessa after more than 3 inches of rain fell Thursday, said Katherine McCain, director of the Ector County Red Cross Chapter.

Ms. McCain said a shelter at the National Guard, 4401 Andrews Highway, was provided overnight.

However, Corp. Lauren Clendening with the Texas State Guard said no one sought shelter last night.

Ms. McCain said most families who left their homes sought shelter with families and friends.

The state guard will continue to be on standby today to help evacuate people if flooding begins again with a 70 percent chance of rain expected in Odessa today, Ms. Clendening said.

Odessa police reported no road closings or major accidents.

In Crane, residents reported more than 5 inches of rainfall Thursday, but no major problems.

In Big Spring, where several roads had been washed out earlier in the week by heavy rains, 2 to 4 inches of rain fell on the already-soaked area.

OPEC member explores pricing

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

DALLAS — Suave, articulate, educated at Cambridge and George Washington University, fluent in Spanish and English, Alirio A. Parra has the right stuff.

The economist, who has more than 30 years experience in international energy affairs, would be at home at the helm or on the board of any American oil company. But fate has dealt Parra a loftier hand.

As Venezuela's representative to OPEC, he is one of a handful of men able to change the economy of the entire world with a single vote.

Associated with OPEC since its inception 26 years ago, a former energy advisor to the World Bank, few are more qualified to understand and comment on the actions of OPEC than Parra.

In an interview Thursday in Dallas, where Parra had come to address a seminar on the effects of low oil prices, he was able to provide the media with new insight into the design, mechanics and motivations of OPEC.

While OPEC actions strongly determine the economy of the Permian Basin, the event marks the first time the Reporter-Telegram has had a face-to-face interview with a voting member of OPEC.

Q: Now that OPEC has established a temporary accord, where does it go from here?

A: I don't see the temporary accord becoming permanent. It was meant to be an emergency measure to move us back from the brink and give us a chance to examine some alternatives.

Q: Can the accord be enforced?

Rain forces Septemberfest into County Exhibit Building

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Staff Writer

Rainy weather has prompted officials to move Septemberfest from the Museum of the Southwest to the Midland County Exhibit Building on east Highway 80.

"With approximately six inches of rain sitting on the ground at the museum, the decision was made to move the event," Cindy Stephens, publicity chairman for Las Manos, said Thursday.

"Even if it stops raining, there is a concern that the grounds will be too wet for spectators to enjoy Septemberfest."

The Preview Party, slated for 7 p.m. to 10 tonight, will be held inside the museum.

Admission is $50 per couple and includes food and beverages and a silent auction.

"The art work won't be there," said Mrs. Stephens. "I know we're calling it a preview party, but at this late date we have no choice but to set the art up at the exhibit building and to keep the caterers at the museum."

The hours for Septemberfest remain the same — 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Saturday and noon to 5 p.m. Sunday.

Cost of admission is $2 for adults with those under 12 being admitted free.

This marks the 17th year that Las Manos, the auxiliary organization for the Museum of the Southwest, has sponsored this two-day arts and crafts fair.

An artist's work is chosen on the basis of quality, the work's price range and its sellability.

Price range for works varies from under $5 to $2,000.

Clements says HJR 72 would help Texans

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Republican gubernatorial nominee Bill Clements said today that the Legislature should approve spending "stagnant" funds instead of raising taxes.

On a 19-city fall campaign, Clements told a group of journalists and supporters here that his six-point plan would not only bolster the state economy, but create new jobs in Texas.

"Almost one million new jobs were created in Texas during my term in office," Clements said.

Reagans' anti-drug speech gets unusual attention

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — The White House is staging an extraordinary buildup for a speech on prime time television by President Reagan and his wife Nancy intended to mobilize Americans in a war against illegal drugs.

The Reagans will address the nation at 8 p.m. EDT on Sept. 14 from the family quarters of the White House.

Announcing the speech Thursday, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said "this is an unprecedented event," the first time a president and his wife have delivered a speech together on television.

He said the Reagans, working together, already have started writing the speech.

"When the chapter on how America won the war on drugs is written, the Reagans want this speech to be viewed as a turning point," Speakes said.

"It will be a message which strikes at the very essence of what our society is all about," Speakes promised. "It will be a message of concern and a message of compassion.

"The Reagans hope to make September 14 a special night for this country."

Usually the White House provides only the time and place for a presidential speech, and sometimes the topic.

In this case, Speakes read a lengthy statement that he later described as a 15-minute monologue to set the stage for the Reagans' appearance.

"They wanted to do it together from their home to our homes, as parents and friends as well as the president and first lady," Speakes said.

"They want to stress the importance of all segments of our society pulling together in a common, determined effort to rid the nation of drugs."

Mrs. Reagan has been a leader in the fight against drugs for several years, and the president seized upon the politically popular subject several weeks ago, pledging to fight for the elimination of drugs in the workplace and in schools.

Speakes said the Reagans "will make clear that theirs is a deep commitment to making our society a drug-free society. It is something which they take as seriously as anything on the national agenda.

"They realize that one group cannot do it alone, and Sunday night they will appeal for the help of every citizen to assist in this effort," the spokesman said. "The Reagans will seek to mobilize the country as it has never been mobilized before."

Announcement of the speech comes as Congress prepares to return to Washington next week, with a Democratic package of anti-drug legislation awaiting action in the House.

With a pricetag estimated at $2 billion to $3 billion, the House bill would beef up law enforcement efforts, tighten Customs controls and increase educational and treatment efforts.

Speakes said questions of funding and legislative steps are being reviewed by six working groups which will deliver recommendations to the White House domestic policy council.

"This is something that is — goes beyond spending money, but it will be an effort to mobilize society to take a stand on drug abuse," Speakes said.

While characterizing the speech as a personal appeal from the Reagans, he said the president "may talk about some of the things that he's decided to do policy-wise."

Despite the political appeal of a war on drugs, Speakes said, "There won't be a word of politics in this address."

Speakes said the White House has contacted television networks about carrying Reagan's speech. "They expressed a great deal of interest and a desire to do their part," he said.

Three major networks — ABC, CBS and NBC — refused to give Reagan airtime in July to broadcast his speech on U.S. policy toward South Africa.

OIL

A: One can never be totally confident about such matters. But rather than focus on what we may not do, I would rather focus on what we have done. We have moved the world away from the brink. We were very close to seeing $6 oil.

Q: If the OPEC accord sticks, what kind of oil prices can we expect for the near term?

A: The price is now $15 to $16. I would expect that price to continue for a number of weeks. What the price eventually will be depends on the accord and how well the industry manages inventories.

Q: What will be the long-term price?

A: I cannot speak for the organization, but there has been much talk of a price range of $17 to $19 a barrel.

Q: Will deeper cuts in OPEC's current 16.8 million barrels per day production limits be needed to drive prices up to the $22 level?

A: Yes, but nobody is talking about $22 oil.

Q: Has OPEC lost its power to control oil prices and is its demise likely?

A: I have been hearing about the demise of OPEC for the last 20 years. I don't think so. It's not the same old OPEC, we are not the OPEC of the 70s, when we supported rigid prices, but we will not die.

We now seek price equilibrium and fair market share. The question is, can we do it alone?

Q: What does OPEC consider fair market share and how do they determine it?

A: It is a subjective decision. OPEC can live with 20 million barrels per day as its share. It is uncomfortable with 16 million, where it is now, and very, very uncomfortable with 14 to 15 million barrels per day as its share of world production.

Q: Is it time for a new organization to take the place of OPEC in setting world oil prices — say an organization of world petroleum producers?

A: We already have that de facto, with discussions and agreements between OPEC and other producing nations now taking place, but I do not think we will see a formalized organization of world oil producers.

Q: Will OPEC remain the long-term swing producer in setting oil prices?

A: Over the long-term, I see OPEC as a coordinator of supplies, planning supplies while making certain there is adequate incentive for exploration and development.

Q: Can the Iran-Iraq conflict cause the OPEC accord to come apart?

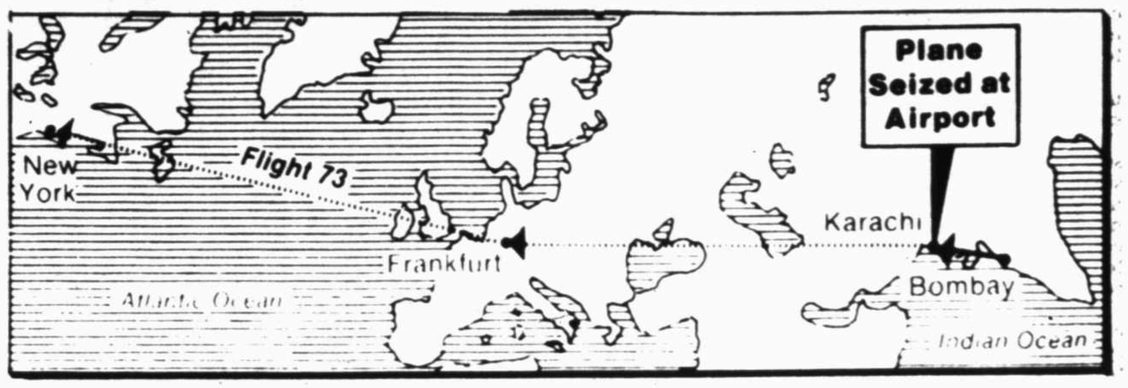

A: There is no way I can predict that, but I think Iran's recommendation to exclude Iraq was a good one.

Q: Since both countries together contribute only 5 percent of OPEC's production, has any thought been given to trying to achieve an accord without either nation?

A: That's a good point. Yes, there has been serious discussion on the matter.

Q: You have mentioned that non-OPEC producers throughout the world would be expected to contribute production cuts go an oil price stabilization plan. Would the U.S. be expected to make such production cuts?

A: No. The U.S. is a mature market. We would not expect production cuts from the U.S.

But Mirza said Cyprus' government told Pakistan the plane would not be allowed to land there.

He said that at Pakistani officials' request the hijackers moved back to 11 p.m. (2 p.m. EDT) their deadline for a flight crew to come aboard. Two earlier deadlines were extended and the hijackers never specified what would happen if a flight crew was not provided.

Mirza said police and troops had been pulled back from around the plane. "We are not bothering the hijackers in any way," he said.

U.S. Embassy officials in Islamabad said they could not comment on the negotiations.

In Washington, a Pentagon official said the aircraft carrier Forrestal and an unspecified number of smaller warships today cut short a port call in Naples, Italy, and set out for the central Mediterranean as a precaution in case the hijackers should fly to Cyprus.

The official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, did not specify what action the ships might take.

In Cyprus, an anonymous caller to a Western news agency said a previously unknown group called the Libyan Revolutionary Cells was responsible.

CLEMENTS

"Today more than 707,000 Texans are out of work."

Clements said his plan would involve implementing House Joint Resolution 72 to get cash moving.

Clements explained HJR 72 is a constitutional amendment approved last November by 52 percent of Texas voters. It calls for the redistribution of $2 billion in state revenues resting in "stagnant" funds.

When asked if the legislature's special session accomplished anything, Clements responded by attacking White.

"When I was governor I took a series of actions to control spending. They were successful," Clements said.

"Mr. White, because he was inexperienced in running a large organization, dismantled what I put in place.

"Real utiliazation of agency prioritization tables — gone under Mark White. Accurate counting of full-time equivalent state employees — gone under Mark White. Internal and operational audits — gone under Mark White. Volunteer teams of businessmen and women to recommend reforms to improve effectiveness — gone under Mark White.

"The litany of broken promises by Mark White is not forgotten by Texans. Mark White promised not to raise taxes.

"He gave the state a $4.6 billion tax increas, the largest in history. As governor, Mark White has recommended, supported or signed into law a tax bill every year in office.

"Texans know that Mark White has a 'Mondale Mentality" when it comes to state government fiscal policy.

BANK

If no buyer can be found, the FDIC is prepared to begin paying off insured depositors, Norris said. In that event, those depositors with account balances under $100,000 will receive a government check for the full balance.

Uninsured depositors — those with holdings in excess of $100,000 — would get receivership certificates for the uninsured amount.

An FDIC spokesman in Washington said that about $1.7 million of the Western deposits, in about 100 accounts, is uninsured.

Then, once liquidation of the bank's assets could be completed, excess proceeds would be distributed to certificate holders on a pro rata basis, the spokesman said.

A team of about 80 FDIC personnel arrived shortly after the lock-up to begin the task of auditing Western's accounts.

Norris, who is from FDIC's regional office in Dallas, said that at least a portion of the auditors were expected to work through the night.

Norris said several known potential buyers were invited to a informational bid meeting by the FDIC Wednesday.

United's Jones said his company was one of those invited to take part in the Dallas meeting.

The possible bidders were told that if certain events didn't occur on Thursday then the insolvent bank would become FDIC property.

Thus, the bidders had a 24-hour head start in deciding whether to bid on Western.

Those invited were required to be in-state operations, because new interstate banking regulations approved by both houses of the Texas legislature are yet to be signed by Gov. Mark White and have not become effective, Norris noted.

However, the FDIC could not solicit or accept any bids until its 3 p.m. appointment as receiver on Thursday.

In addition, despite rumors that certain local banks were bidding on loan packages from Western Bank, Norris said that any bids on any portion of the banks operations would be premature before a decision on a complete assumption of the bank's operations has been made.

Banking Commissioner Sexton issued a prepared statement citing "a concentration of energy related loans and the bank's liberal lending practices in granting that type credit in the early 1980s" as causes of the bank's asset, earning and capitalization problems.

"A remission of sorts had been experienced until the recent decline in oil prices gave rise to substantial further losses and a depleted capital structure," the statement continued.

According to Reporter-Telegram reports, Western showed steady significant growth on both sides of its balance sheets over the six years through the beginning of 1985.

Since 1978, the earliest figures available, Western deposits grew from $17.8 million to more than $88 million by year-end 1984.

Year-end 1985 figures were virtually flat with the preceding year, actually slipping by $130,000. By the end of the second quarter of 1986, total deposits had slid to about $70.6 million.

At that time bank president Bill Parker cited reduced cash flow into the city as the primary reason for the decline in deposits and said the retrenching was a conscious decision of "shrinkage by design" in line with overall economic activity.

Parker has been unavailable for comment since the bank's closing.

It has been less than two months since the FDIC began liquidation of Permian Bank in Odessa, issuing government checks to depositors whose holdings were below the $100,000 FDIC insured limit.

The three other Midland-Odessa area banks to close since October 1983 are First National Bank of Midland, Metro Bank of Midland and National Bank of Odessa.

Western is the 16th Texas bank to fold in the state in 1986, the highest number ever in one state in a single year, eclipsing both Oklahoma and Nebraska, where 13 banks failed last year. The Western closing brings the national total for the year to 99.

CLOSING

Ms. Dawson propped her small son, Casey, on her hip as she waited, then confronted FDIC closing manager Frank Norris when he emerged from the failed bank.

"What are we paying customers supposed to do for money?" Dawson asked.

Norris explained that until pending negotiations with bidders regarding sale of the bank were completed, no one knew whether new owners would reopen the bank or if the FDIC would be forced to liquidate the accounts as it did Odessa's failed Permian Bank in July.

"I know that I will get my money back, it's just a matter of time, and inconvenience," surmised Midlander Jerry Roberson, president of Check-Rite.

"I'm more concerned with the treatment of loans held by the bank," he added.

"Even if they do find a buyer, it's up to the new owners which loans they take over. And I just financed a home with Western."

Other customers echoed Roberson's disbelief of the bank's quick switch from an active bank soliciting new deposit and financing business to a failed financial firm in the hands of receivers.

"I'd been following their published financial statements for some time, and it looked like they were in pretty good shape," said a customer who did not want to be identified.

"I just moved all my business and personal accounts from another city bank over here last week," added another.

He said that despite a few persistent rumors about the health of Western, he was convinced of its soundness.

Still other former bank customers found out about the collapse through unusual sources.

Midlander Jane Pearson tried to use a Western check to buy stamps at the Post Office when her check was refused.

On her way home, she stopped in at her bank to find out why.

The notices posted inside the windows confirmed the bank's closure.

"For the first time, I'm thankful of being too busy. I didn't make it in to the bank this week to deposit the receipts from my home-based mail order business," Ms. Pearson said.

The failure caught Ms. Pearson off guard.

She assumed Western was continuing business as usual. "Last week it didn't appear otherwise," she added.

Midland computer expert Ike Terry, who works for NCR, tried to make an automatic teller machine withdrawal down the street.

"The transaction was denied because of 'error 319.' Because of my job, I knew that 319 means 'system down,'" Terry explained.

He stopped in to find out why the system was down, "and found out the whole bank was down."

Girl pulled from washer

GARDEN GROVE, Calif. (AP) — A 3-year-old girl was trapped for several minutes inside a running washing machine at a laundromat before a man broke the glass door and saved her, police said Thursday.

The child was playing with her 8-year-old cousin and 7-year-old sister in the laundromat late Wednesday when she crawled inside the machine, Lt. Jack Stepanovich said.

A customer had already placed coins in the machine but had taken out the clothing because he believed the machine wasn't working, Stepanovich said.

The girl "climbed inside the washing machine, and her sister shut the door," Lt. Larry Hodges said. "The machine started filling up."

In past years, artists displaying their works in Septemberfest booths have been from outside Midland.

When Septemberfest opens Saturday, works by four local artists will be found among the 69 artists' booths set up at the Midland County Exhibit Building.

"The object of Septemberfest has been to bring outside art to Midland," says Deanna McGuire, Septemberfest chairman.

"However, we were the only art show here that didn't handle local artists.

"Septemberfest has developed such a fantastic reputation with artists from all over the United States, and many artists depend upon this type of exposure to sell their work."

Ms. McGuire said Las Manos has decided to let local artists apply with the understanding that the jurying process is quite objective.

"We don't know who the artists are when their slides come up, and the work has to meet our criteria," she said.

The local artists included this year are Cynthia Wolfe, Leslie D'Allesandro Hill, Michael Banschbach and Charles Pruitt.

The festival also will feature food and beverage booths, live performances and a Kinderfest for children.

Miller Lite is bringing in Efren Herrera, former place kicker for the Dallas Cowboys.

He will be visiting with the children and signing autographs.

Also, American Airlines has donated two tickets to anywhere the airline flies in the continental United States for a free drawing which will be conducted Sunday.

Septemberfest's 6th annual Run for Fun, sponsored by James E. Borron, United Bank, Miller Lite and the Midland Jaycees, will begin at 8:30 a.m. Saturday at Centennial Plaza.

Registration forms may be found at Borron's, local YMCAs or they may be filled out at 6:30 a.m. Saturday at Centennial Plaza.

"Septemberfest is a wonderful fun oriented family weekend," Mrs. Stephens said.

"People look forward to this event every year, and we plan to have this year be no different than the past 16 years regardless of the inclement weather."

Hotel fire kills 14

KRISTIANSAND, Norway (AP) — Fire raged through an 11-story hotel this morning, killing 14 people and injuring many of the 121 people evacuated down ladders and by helicopter, police said.

One of the victims jumped to his death from a window of the Hotel Caledonien, the Norwegian news agency NTB reported.

Between 50 and 60 hotel guests were taken to a hospital, but most were treated and released, police spokesman David Stamnes told national NRK radio. Nineteen people were still being treated for shock and injuries, he said, adding that the fire had been brought under control.

"Some guests panicked. Some were screaming out of open windows," 36-year-old Arne Gudem of Stavern, one of the survivors, said on the radio.

Legislator still wants to retire bill's number

AUSTIN (AP) — Rep. Lena Guerrero wants her colleagues to approve a measure to guarantee there would never be another House Bill 72.

The Austin Democrat wants to retire the number 72, not the historic 1984 public school reform bill that carries the number. She wants HB72 to be stricken from the list of numbers assigned to legislation.

HB72 has become an overwhelming burden for a bill to bear, she said.

"It is fair to assume that any measure labeled House Bill 72 and considered by the Legislature in the near future would gain undeserved notoriety, resulting in unnecessary confusion for members and the public alike," Ms. Guerrero said in a resolution.

Landmark legislation in Texas usually takes the name of its subject or sponsors. The previous major education legislation in Texas was known as Gilmer-Aikin, named for its sponsors. But the 1984 school reform act — which made sweeping changes in education, including adding the no-pass, no-play rule — may be the only bill in Texas history that became commonly known by its number.

As Ms. Guerrero points out in her resolution, HB72 is "almost universally known" as HB72.

The measure was sponsored by Rep. Bill Haley, D-Center, and Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur.

Haley said he does not know why the bill became known as HB72 instead of Haley-Parker or Parker-Haley. The numerical designation stuck even after Gov. Mark White tried to brand the bill as "The Educational Opportunity Act of 1984."

> "I am disappointed that the leadership of this House wouldn't allow me to debate a simple resolution like that. Yes, I was serious about that."
> — Rep. Lena Guerrero

Ms. Guerrero's proposal would instruct the House clerk to "refrain from assigning the number 72 to any bill introduced in this House...until this House determines that the name 'House Bill 72' is no longer widely associated" with the education bill.

The resolution did not get a committee hearing in the special session that ended Thursday, but Ms. Guerrero said she would reintroduce it in the next special session, which begins Monday.

"I am disappointed that the leadership of this House wouldn't allow me to debate a simple resolution like that. Yes, I was serious about that," she said.

Either by coincidence or design, HB72 in the special session that ended Thursday also was filed by Haley. It was a bill that would reduce the no-pass, no-play suspension to three weeks, instead of six weeks, for the first failing grade.

Haley initially said it was coincidence, but later confessed, "I thought I was going to have to introduce about 36 other bills to go to it."

Former senator named to fill ceremonial post

AUSTIN (AP) — Sen. Ed Howard, hailed as the "conscience of the Senate" during his 7½ years in office, has been selected as that body's assistant presiding officer.

Howard, 49, resigned April 13 to become an Austin lobbyist for the law firm of Jenkins, Hutchison and Gilchrist, but due to the Texas Constitution he remains in office until his successor takes over.

A runoff election Sept. 13 will choose his replacement.

Five senators decided not to return for the 1987 Legislature but only Howard and Sen. John Sharp, D-Victoria, have not served as Senate president pro tempore.

Howard, with three years seniority on Sharp, was chosen unanimously Thursday for the chiefly ceremonial role. He apparently will serve only until Monday, when the next special legislative session starts.

Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, said, "Another colleague noted that perhaps we will give Sen. Howard a chance to make the Guiness Book of Records for a having a brief term as president pro tem."

Howard, D-Texarkana, did not attend the 30-day special session that ended Thursday. Prior to the session, he said because of "my employment and to avoid any questions of impropriety or conflict of interest," he would not participate as a senator or represent a client on any matter.

Seventeen of the 27 other senators present Thursday spoke on Howard's behalf, with several referring to him as the "conscience of the Senate."

"Integrity — I think that's the word that all of us would use to describe Ed Howard. He did it with integrity, and he did it with conviction," said Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan.

Sen. J.E. "Buster" Brown, R-Lake Jackson, said, "I think we can all use Ed Howard as a good model."

"He has, indeed, been the conscience of the Senate," said Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock. "You're going to be missed, and God bless you in your endeavors, and please take that conscience into the lobby, OK?"

Howard responded to his election by saying, "It's been 7½ years of experiences that are a lifetime, and that's what makes this place so very special."

'Jogging Burglar' taken into custody

AUSTIN (AP) — The "Jogging Burglar," wanted since 1979 and listed among Texas' most wanted fugitives, has been arrested, Gov. Mark White's office announced Thursday.

Cledis Clark Weatherford, 45, was taken into custody Wednesday in Phoenix, according to a release from the governor's office.

Weatherford was known as the "Jogging Burglar" because he wore jogging suits when casing residential neighborhoods for burglary targets.

He has been wanted since he failed to show up in December 1979 to begin serving a federal prison sentence, the release said. The nationwide search for Weatherford was coordinated by the U.S. Marshal in Tyler.

Man sentenced to death for woman's murder

VICTORIA (AP) — A one-time Eagle Scout must pay with his life for the murder of a banker's wife, a jury decided after deliberating less than four hours.

Lesley Lee Gosch, 31, was sentenced to die by injection Thursday for the September 1985 shooting death of Rebecca Jo Patton in a San Antonio suburb.

"I'm satisfied justice was done," Assistant Bexar County District Attorney Sam Ponder said. "It was the proper verdict."

Gosch stared at his attorney Rick Woods through thick eyeglasses as a court clerk read the jury's verdict saying Gosch would pose a threat to society and that the slaying was deliberate.

Woods said he is confident the verdict will be reversed.

"He was found guilty because the case was tried by guilt by association," he said. "There is a lot of error in this case."

The attorney said Gosch was not surprised by the sentence. Afterward, Gosch talked to his grandfather, Wesley Gosch, who is also his adopted father.

"I'll see you as soon as I can," the younger Gosch told the 74-year-old. "OK, dad, take it easy."

During closing arguments Thursday morning, prosecutors contended Gosch masterminded the botched extortion and Mrs. Patton's murder. They asked for the death penalty.

Woods, however, asked, "Is death the only solution?" He said giving Gosch the death penalty would not resurrect Mrs. Patton.

Gosch was convicted of capital murder in the case Tuesday.

Mrs. Patton, 42, was shot in the head seven times by Gosch during an extortion attempt in her Alamo Heights home, testified accomplice John Laurence Rogers.

Rogers, 32, testified Gosch planned to abduct the woman and use the ransom to pay for a flight out of the country to avoid a prison sentence on a federal weapons conviction.

Testimony showed Gosch had run-ins with the law as a teen-ager with a conviction for the 1972 robberies of two San Antonio pharmacies.

Inman to step down as MCC chief

AUSTIN (AP) — Bobby Ray Inman, a former Navy admiral and ex-deputy director of the CIA, says he will step down as chief of the MCC consortium of high-tech research firms at year's end.

Inman, 55, told The Associated Press Thursday night that he wants to switch from the research side of the high-tech fence to the manufacturing and marketing side.

Microelectronics and Computer Technology Corp. is "a healthy organization now, and I thought it was the right time to leave. I'm very eager to get on with doing other things," he said.

MCC includes 21 companies involved in high-tech research aimed at improving computer capabilities. It was considered a major coup for Texas and Austin when MCC decided at the end of 1982 to locate here.

Inman, who has been MCC's most widely visible participant in gaining support for the research effort, said he informed the MCC board Wednesday that he doesn't want his contract renewed when it expires at the end of December.

"I had to make a decision now or stay for another year," he said. "I had planned at first to stay for only three years, but agreed to stay one more year last year."

He said he plans to change his career course because "my concern is steadily growing about how U.S. industry is using the technology we were researching."

"I want to prove that U.S. companies can stay competitive with the Japanese and that we can still make money," said Inman, a 29-year veteran of the U.S. Navy.

Inman, who joined MCC in January 1983, became director of the National Security Agency in 1977 and was selected by President Reagan as deputy director of the Central Intelligence Agency in 1981. He left the CIA in 1982.

Gov. Mark White lobbied hard to bring MCC here. More than 300 people are involved in the consortium in seven areas of computer research.

Investigators seek dead officer's vigilante diary

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Investigators in the shooting death of San Antonio policeman Stephen Smith were looking for a vigilante diary they think Smith may have used to record acts of vandalism and possibly assassination.

The San Antonio Light reported Thursday investigators believe Smith kept such a diary.

The newspaper also said the book may have been lost because the police department "failed to secure Smith's apartment after his death, and the officer's belongings were removed."

Smith, a seven-year veteran of the police force, was shot by fellow officer Farrell Tucker on Aug. 18.

Since then, authorities have said they were investigating whether other individuals might be involved in Smith's alleged vigilante activities.

Chaplain convicted of sexually molesting boys

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A 30-year-old assistant chaplain at Randolph Air Force Base has been convicted of sexually molesting three young boys — one of them at the base chapel on Sunday — and sentenced to four years' confinement.

As part of the sentence handed down at a court-martial Thursday, Sgt. George D. Barnes was also ordered to forfeit his salary and allowances and will get a bad-conduct discharge at the end of his prison term.

Barnes, who had pleaded not guilty, sat quietly as Military Judge Lt. Col. Mark S. Anderson returned the sentence after deliberating one hour.

Prosecuting attorney Capt. Edward Goldner argued that Barnes, who faced a maximum of 23 years' confinement, was a pedophile with little chance for rehabilitation.

Three boys, aged 10 and 11 at the time the incidents occurred last year and the year before, used a doll during the court-martial to identify where they said Barnes had fondled them.

The boys said they didn't speak up earlier because they were scared to admit they had been molested. Barnes was found guilty of molesting one boy at the base chapel during Sunday activities and the other two boys at his home.

One of the three was a troubled youngster who recently had been released from a home for disadvantaged boys, said Air Force psychologist Capt. Nancy Slicner. She said the boy was severely affected by the molestation.

"You've got a kid who has got a great number of problems to begin with and then you add to that," Capt. Slicner testified. The boy "has been cheated, mistreated and abused by everyone."

STATE in brief

Judge: Hermann trustee must produce records

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal judge ordered a former Hermann Hospital Estate trustee to produce financial documents after an attorney charged the man had attempted to conceal or divert assets to avoid paying a million-dollar judgment to the estate.

Tony Alexander, estate attorney, told U.S. Bankruptcy Judge D. Leal on Wednesday that former trustee John Coffee has failed to report about $825,000 in assets. Coffee also has used his own assets to obtain about $250,000 in loans for his son and daughter-in-law, the attorney charged.

Coffee's attorney, Tony Hale, denied Alexander's allegations.

Leal ordered the former trustee to produce documents detailing cash receipts and disbursements and the backup documentation for the promissory notes.

A state court ruled Coffee sold bank stock to the estate at inflated prices and ordered him to pay $1 million in punitive damages and to buy back about $2.7 million in stock from the estate.

Coffee was ousted as a Hermann trustee in February 1985, just one day before being indicted on state charges of theft and perjury involving the alleged misuse of estate funds.

Policeman sentenced

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A 32-year-old San Antonio policeman, suspended after being snared in a sting operation and charged with burglary, has been sentenced to three years in prison on an unrelated weapons charge.

Ernesto Trevino pleaded guilty to one federal count of possessing an Uzi machine gun in exchange for the dismissal of seven other charges stemming from a raid on his house April 14.

The Uzi, two silencers and several other weapons were seized, authorities said.

Trevino's lawyer, Ralph Lopez, said the policeman was seeing a psychiatrist and should be given a probated sentence.

U.S. District Judge Ed Prado included as part of his sentence that Trevino enter a drug treatment program and undergo psychiatric counseling at the Federal Correctional Institution at Big Spring.

The state burglary charge alleges that Trevino stole a $1,200 piece of surveying equipment from Star Erection Co. after answering a bogus burglary call phoned in by police as a sting tactic. Police said they had a video tape of Trevino taking the equipment and later found it in the trunk of his car.

Socialite indicted in death

BEAUMONT (AP) — A Beaumont socialite was indicted by a grand jury in the shooting death of a former caretaker on her ranch.

Rosine McFadden Wilson, 59, was charged with murdering Joseph Perkins, 56, of Groves, Jefferson County District Attorney James McGrath said.

Mrs. Wilson was released on $25,000 bond, said James Huebel, a spokesman for the Jefferson County Jail.

The grand jury heard almost 11 hours of testimony and deliberated about 20 minutes before returning the indictment.

Mrs. Wilson was invited to testify but did not, McGrath said. Her husband, retired bank president Will E. Wilson, 70, took the stand, the prosecutor said.

The victim's wife, Marie Perkins, 51, testified that Mrs. Wilson shot Perkins at the entrance of the ranch near LaBelle, the Houston Chronicle reported.

Mrs. Wilson had said earlier that the couple had been fired as caretakers at the ranch. She said she was holding the gun when it accidentally fired during a confrontation with the Perkins at the ranch.

Administration aims to 'strike deal' with Soviets on cutbacks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, set to open another round of nuclear weapons talks with a high-level Soviet delegation, may ease its proposal for a 50 percent reduction in strategic bombers, missiles and submarines, a U.S. official said Thursday.

The aim is to strike a deal with the Soviets, whose most recent position calls for more modest cutbacks. Even so, the two sides remain far apart on "Star Wars," the potential use of space to defend against attacking missiles.

The talks at the State Department over two days are designed to clarify the U.S. and Soviet positions before negotiations resume in Geneva on Sept. 18.

The talks went ahead even while Nicholas Daniloff, an American reporter, remained in prison in Moscow facing a possible spy trial.

Charles E. Redman, a State Department spokesman, indicated on Thursday the U.S. delegation would bring up the arrest of the U.S. News & World Report correspondent.

"The issue is being raised at all appropriate diplomatic contacts," he said.

Redman renewed the U.S. call for Daniloff's release. He said "failure to resolve this satisfactorily cannot help but have a negative effect on U.S.-Soviet relations."

Another U.S. official said the Soviets had failed to respond to a U.S. proposal to free Daniloff in exchange for an understanding that Gennadiy F. Zakharov, a Soviet physicist arrested in New York last month on spy charges, would be released until his trial.

The official, who spoke only on condition of anonymity, said Daniloff was, in effect, a "hostage" and that there was growing sentiment within the administration to retaliate against the Soviets. He said the actions that might be taken included the expulsion of Soviet diplomats.

The chief Soviet negotiator, Victor P. Karpov, heads the Soviet delegation, while Paul H. Nitze, a senior U.S. adviser, is in charge on the American side.

The two groups met last month in Moscow. According to the U.S. official, the sessions were "very negative."

The Soviets have resisted any agreement to curb either strategic missiles or medium-range nuclear weapons based in Europe unless the United States curbs its Star Wars plan, known formally as the Strategic Defense Initiative.

The search for an anti-missile shield involving lasers, particle-ray beams and other futuristic technology threatens to extend the arms race into space, Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev has said.

Apart from that dispute, the two sides are in disagreement on how to reduce their long-range bombers, missiles and submarines.

The new U.S. proposal, if approved by Reagan, would back off his demand for a 50 percent cutback and move closer to the overall reduction of about 30 percent urged by the Soviets.

But it still would compel the Soviets to make some hard choices about their arsenal of heavy land-based missiles and sharply scale down the destructive force of their nuclear armories.

The official said Reagan had suggested a "less sweeping" strategic weapons cutback in the letter he sent to Gorbachev in July.

New ceilings would be set for various categories of weapons, including a limit of 7,500 intercontinental ballistic missile warheads and cruise missiles, the official said.

The Soviets had proposed a ceiling of 8,000, while the United States would have allowed no more than 6,000.

Gorbachev has yet to reply to Reagan's letter. In the meantime, Ron Lehman, the U.S. negotiator in charge of strategic nuclear weapons, worked out the new formula, the official said.

The proposal was discussed Wednesday at the Old Executive Building by senior arms control advisers and their aides from the State Department, the Pentagon and other branches of the government.

Peres' bold step

The toxic cloud that tragically killed more than 1,500 residents of Cameroon in Africa overshadowed Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres' unusual visit to that African nation. Yet the significance of the visit should not go unobserved.

The presence of Peres there marked a major diplomatic milestone. Peres went to renew relations with Cameroon, which had been broken off with Israel 13 years ago. He was the first Israeli prime minister to visit black Africa in 20 years. And he was able to make Cameroon the 73rd country with diplomatic ties to Israel, despite threats from Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi against African leaders contemplating relations with Israel.

Peres has made impressive inroads in restoring Israel's respectability with countries who cut diplomatic relations to protest the 1967 and 1973 Israeli-Arab wars. Earlier this year, Spain and the Ivory Coast, another African country, renewed relations with Israel.

Peres also met with King Hassan II of Morocco last month, and Israeli diplomats talked to Soviet officials in Helsinki, Finland, the first formal contact with the Soviet Union in 19 years. Hassan and the Soviets both declared that their talks resulted in nothing tangible. The meeting with the Soviets lasted only 90 minutes. However short on substance, the fact these talks took place represents a symbolic victory for the Israelis.

Peres, head of the national unity government for the past two years, will leave behind him an Israel considerably less isolated when he hands power to the next prime minister, Yitzhak Shamir, in October. The Israeli prime minister succeeded partly because he's perceived as a moderate by other countries. Shamir is a hard-liner less apt to make friends in Africa or the Arab world. But timing also helped Peres. Falling oil prices diminished the clout of the Arab countries, which have been trying for years to turn Israel into a diplomatic outcast. And, Israeli experts believe the American bombing of Libya emboldened African leaders to defy Gadhafi and meet with the Israelis.

It was a bold move on Peres' part because the Arab nations hoped to destroy Israel. The Israelis went to war to show the Arabs they will survive through superior military force. The ruthlessness of the Israeli defense helped the Arabs convince dozens of countries to break ties with the young Jewish state.

As time has passed, it should have become evident that Israel is here to stay. It's highly likely more countries will accept that now and renew relations with Israel.

Taking a step to remove the isolation of Israel is a dramatic move and Peres is to be commended.

Editorial on 55 faulty

In your Aug. 29th editorial regarding the 55 mph speed limit you say, "Like it or not, the 55 mile-per-hour speed limit saves lives ..." There is no proof that the 55 mph speed limit saves lives.

While it is true that highway deaths fell in 1974, after the law was enacted, the death rate has been on a steep downward trend since motor vehicle statistics were first compiled in 1923. From 1966 to 1976, the drop was continuous, from 5.7 to 3.3 deaths per million vehicle miles (National Safety Council). The death rate has continued its decline in the eighties in spite of the fact that compliance with the 55 mph speed limit is also declining.

A statement that speed kills is also not true. Collisions sometimes kill. Speed variance is the major problem, according to Dr. Charles Lave, a former member of the committee that studied the costs and benefits of the 55 mph speed limit at the Congress' request. His assertion is that slow drivers are no less a hazard than speeders.

The autobahn in West Germany makes up 2 percent of that nation's roadway system, and has no speed limit. The autobahn carries 50 percent of the traffic at a death rate of 1.08 fatalities per 100m vehicle miles traveled, a lower death rate (1.12 death per 100m vehicle miles traveled in 1985) than the figure for U.S. rural interstate highway travel with a 55 mph speed limit. Draw your own conclusions.

As in all editorials, you should have your facts straight before drawing conclusions.

Don't limit Hispanics

Recently, in reading a copy of the Valley Morning Star of Aug. 10th, State Democratic Party Chairman Bob Slagle was reported as saying, "You and I know that all a Mexican-American wants is an even break to get to be a middle-class American..."

Slagle's statement clearly defines the differences between the Republican party and the Democratic party. The Republican party wants more than just "middle class" status for Americans of all ethnic backgrounds. Each American should aspire to higher goals and incentives that encourage him or her to achieve them.

The Republican party recognizes that many Americans of Hispanic descent have surpassed "middle class" status in the fields of education, medicine, business, and sports and we are especially proud of many Americans of Hispanic heritage such as United States Treasurer Katherine Ortega; Texas Attorney General candidate Roy Barrera, Jr.; Federal Judge Ricardo Hinojosa; United States Federal Bankruptcy Judge Manuel Leal; and many others who have reached these lofty goals with the help of the Republican party and a strong two-party system.

Chairman Slagle, please take notice. Republicans do not assign limits of achievements to the middle class levels. We prefer to say that in America and in Midland, the sky is the limit.

Midland County Republican Party

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, Sept. 5, the 248th day of 1986. There are 117 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Sept. 5, 1836, Sam Houston was elected president of the Republic of Texas.

On this date:

In 1698, Russia's Peter the Great imposed a tax on beards.

In 1774, the first Continental Congress assembled in Philadelphia.

In 1882, the nation's first Labor Day parade was held in New York.

In 1905, the Treaty of Portsmouth ending the Russo-Japanese War was signed in New Hampshire after President Theodore Roosevelt mediated the settlement.

In 1939, the United States proclaimed its neutrality in World War II.

In 1945, Iva Toguri D'Aquino, a Japanese-American suspected of being radio broadcaster "Tokyo Rose," was arrested in Yokohama. She was convicted of treason in 1949, served six years in prison, and was pardoned in 1977 by President Gerald R. Ford.

In 1972, 11 Israeli athletes and the five Arab terrorists who had taken them hostage were killed in a shootout with West German police during the Munich Olympics.

In 1975, President Gerald R. Ford escaped an attempt on his life when Lynette "Squeaky" Fromme, a disciple of Charles Manson, attempted to shoot the chief executive in Sacramento, Calif.

One year ago: Crowds of black and mixed-race youths in South Africa hurled rocks and gasoline bombs at white-owned residences near Cape Town and East London.

Best 'junketeer'? Sen. Pressler wins it

WASHINGTON — Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., is our choice for the 1986 Allen Ellender Memorial Trophy.

This is our own junketeering award, named for the late Louisiana senator who bewildered foreign leaders and drove U.S. diplomats to distraction as he careened around the world, often lecturing heads of state in impenetrable Cajun French dialect.

Jack Anderson

We've reported on Pressler's two-day exercise in personal diplomacy in Monte Carlo, when he learned of Prince Rainier's deep resentment of plans to close the U.S. consulate in Nice, France.

The stopover in Monaco was only part of Pressler's swing through Italy and environs during a 10-day investigation last spring of U.S. "bilateral relations" with the so-called "mini-states of Europe."

Actually, Pressler has a long way to go before he'll match the influential Ellender, whose voluminous reports of stupefying banality were always properly published by the Foreign Relations Committee. When Pressler prepared a modest report on his Easter junket, the committee refused to publish it — a stunning putdown for the chairman of the subcommittee on European affairs. Pressler had to make do with entering it in the Congressional Record, like any local newspaper clipping or constituent's wedding anniversary congratulations.

Pressler's trip appears to have created maximum confusion among the Foreign Service personnel who had to make arrangements for his whistle stop tour. No one seems to have had a clear idea of Pressler's purpose.

According to cable traffic seen by our associate Lucette Lagnado, the Rome embassy was initially under the impression that Pressler was looking into "consulate closings." This sounded plausible, since consulates were to be shut down in Nice and in Seville, Spain, and Trieste, Italy. However, one cable noted, "the senator did not manifest any interest in visiting Trieste." Few people do.

Then the Rome embassy was informed that the point of Pressler's visit was to "expand his sensitivity to Northern Italy." In line with this laudable goal, he would visit Florence, Milan and Bologna.

Next the embassy learned that Pressler, who is also a member of the Special Committee on Aging, wanted to investigate Italy's treatment of the elderly.

While he was in the neighborhood, Pressler decided to drop in on the Most Serene Republic of San Marino, a tiny hillside nation completely surrounded by Italy, and notable chiefly for having had a government dominated or heavily influenced by the Communist Party for the past 40 years. As luck would have it, Pressler's visit coincided with the semi-annual pageantry surrounding the inauguration of the two co-regents who rule the little country.

The Florence consulate cabled Washington that the senator would be "warmly welcome" at the festivities, but warned: "Senior San Marino officials are generally unavailable for bilateral discussions during the inauguration period, due to ceremonial responsibilities."

Undeterred, Pressler went to San Marino and met the country's secretary of state, who solemnly informed him that mini-states are in a position "to offer solid moral and idealistic contribution in the biggest of battles undertaken on the international scene," according to Pressler's unpublished report.

Finally, the senator was invited to dinner by U.S. Ambassador Maxwell Rabb and his wife in the elegant Rome embassy. There was one disappointment, though, involving a movie actor who apparently is sometimes available for celebrity duties. "Roger Moore and wife regret they will not be able to return to Italy in time to dine with the senator," the embassy cabled to Washington.

UNDER THE DOME: Opposition is growing in Congress to the administration's openhanded sale of Stinger anti-aircraft missiles to military forces it supports. It's no secret that the deadly hand-held weapons have gone to the Afghan guerrillas. What worries congressional critics is that Stingers in the wrong hands could easily be used for terrorist purposes, such as shooting down commercial airliners. The missiles remain in working condition for up to 12 years, which means tight security is needed. Yet that's just what most rebel groups lack.

MINI-EDITORIAL: Among the sour features of the tax-reform bill is the deduction allowed for the expenses of job-hunting by actors. While actors arguably should be given a helping hand by the government, we suspect the job-seeking deduction will be flagrantly abused by the very ones who need help the least. How many extravagant junkets by superstars, we wonder, will be paid for by the taxpayers on the pretext that someone is casting for a new flick in Paris, Rome or Tahiti?

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Hostage journalist a gun to Reagan's head

WASHINGTON — When the Ayatollah Khomeini seized American hostages in Iran, the waffling and timorous Carter administration reaction caused such a wave of revulsion here as to carry Ronald Reagan to the presidency.

William Safire

When Mikhail Gorbachev's KGB seized an American hostage in Moscow, Reagan's sluggish Western White House immediately put out word that this would not affect arms control negotiations or plans for a summit. Even Carter would have responded with more backbone.

The central fact is that the American correspondent Nicholas Daniloff is a hostage. He was seized for a single purpose: to create a false counterpart to a Soviet spy arrested in the U.S. in the act of handing over cash for secrets.

What do we do about it? Our top priority is to assert our national interest, refusing to reward hostage-taking. The second priority is to secure swiftly the release of the entrapped and imprisoned American newsman.

The first trap to avoid is the "accused spy" label. The Soviet United Nations official, arrested while passing money for information, is an accused spy. The American newsman, grabbed by eight KGB men after a sealed envelope was thrust in his hands, is an "imprisoned newsman."

Equivalency is the Russian propaganda game; we should have no part of it. Gorbachev is trying to create a value — a captured spy — out of nothing, to balance the man we caught red-handed. We cannot tacitly accept this while formally rejecting it.

The second trap is "let's not blow this out of proportion." After all, the minimizers will say, this is just the usual tit-for-tat espionage stuff; such minor irritations must not be permitted to hinder the great business of arms control negotiations.

But the real proportion of this brutal power play is enormous. The trick of creating a false value by the simple assertion of a lie, to be traded for a real value, is an old Russian negotiating practice. If we swallow it here, we will be confronted with it at the summit. We are obligated to demonstrate that bargaining chips cannot be created out of thin air; otherwise, all negotiation is meaningless.

The third trap is to Kremlinologize it all: you see, there are these good guys, led by smiling Mike, open and forthcoming, eager for an end to the arms race, who are opposed by the sinister forces of the KGB. We have to understand his problems with the hard-liners and reactionaries, and recognize that he needs some face-saving way of working out this ploy by his opponents within.

Baloney. Gorbachev toadied his way to the top via Yuri Andropov of the KGB; he has his own men in all the top positions there, and has purged the top echelons of the party hierarchy and the Red Army of the old Brezhnev faction. The correspondent for U.S. News & World Report is Gorbachev's personal hostage.

The final trap is to let this widen the split among advisers at home. The professional sherpas and would-be summiteers will soon be accusing the press of putting its own interest ahead of the nation's, and denouncing the "exploitation" of this little misunderstanding by unregenerate hawks who want no arms control.

At issue is the degree of our willingness to tolerate Gorbachev's contempt for the freedom of one American, which means all Americans. In assuming we would go along with the deal of trading a legitimate newsman for a real spy, the new Russian leader has miscalculated profoundly.

Nothing Reagan and his hipdeep-in-molasses crisis managers do now should be allowed to contribute to that miscalculation. No deal is possible that ties the release of our newsman to their spy; that way is appeasement of the creation of false negotiating chips, and intolerable danger to any American on Russian soil.

As long as Daniloff remains in his cell, sitting on the cot with him is arms control, summitry, obscene grain subsidies, cultural exchanges, the works. The hostage is the gun Gorbachev holds to Reagan's head, precluding all civilized dealing.

The way to resolve this crisis is clear: let Gorbachev call the unconditional release of Daniloff "a unilateral gesture of good will." He will deserve no thanks for stopping the further descent of Soviet behavior into diplomatic state terrorism, but he will get plenty.

In setting his own ominous precedent of taking an American hostage, Gorbachev — let us hope mistakenly — has declared not just a renewal but a sharp escalation of cold war. It is for him to undeclare it.

CHARLEY REESE

Society needs way to spot, help Pat Sherrills

Predictably, the tragic shooting deaths in Edmond, Okla., recently have produced the ritual outcry about guns and missed the main point entirely.

Patrick Sherrill, the 44-year-old postal worker who killed 14 people and wounded another six before killing himself, was a sick man and we, as a society — with all our knowledge and all our social service agencies — completely missed helping him.

Charley Reese

It may be comforting to focus attention on the inanimate objects with which he expressed his explosive rage, but they are not the problem. It may be comforting to those who love mythology to point out that he was a ex-Marine or a Vietnam veteran but neither of those things were the problem.

The problem was a miserable, lonely human being, taunted by neighborhood kids as Crazy Pat, who managed to live 44 years without receiving the help he obviously needed.

Many people like Pat Sherrill simply self-destruct and end up in the suicide statistics, which rarely make news. Others may explode in less dramatic ways or kill themselves slowly with drugs or booze.

Occasionally one, like Sherrill, will explode in a melodramatic fashion and take several innocent lives in the process. Then they make news. But how sad that the news and the attention tend to focus on the irrelevant, rather than the relevant.

I know it's not easy to spot people who are suffering from mental illness, especially when they are out of reach of a family, but we ought to work on this problem and not just sweep it under the rug by imagining that we can pass anti-gun laws or increase security or buy more metal detectors and solve it that way.

I do not see why we, as a society, cannot devise and fund a system that will do a better job of spotting people who are in deep trouble and providing them with the help they need.

We have a monitoring system to identify people with venereal disease; in many states we require blood tests for marriage licenses to spot other potential health problems. Somewhere along the system that a person traverses in his day to day life there must be some points where potential mental problems could be noted and some action taken.

Sherrill had, for example, a history of discipline problems. Well, are we still mentally in the Middle Ages where we think people who have problems adjusting to the normal workaday world are possessed by demons or are inherently just mean?

Few of us are probably entirely sane most of the time. Sanity, to use Karl Menninger's definition, is a day to day process of keeping more or less in touch with reality. We deviate when we daydream, fantasize or rationalize. Most of us, however, manage to swing back and stay in touch.

Some people, for different reasons, have more difficulty, but they are all trying. They are all trying to cope. They are all trying to survive. Pat Sherrill wasn't born a killer. Somewhere along the line the world became too much for him and the more he tried to cope, the more he failed, and the more he failed, the more frustration built up until it turned into rage.

It's too late to do anything for Pat Sherrill or for the 14 people he killed, but there are other people out there who need help.

Living and coping is more difficult these days for a number of reasons, and it's time that we recognize that people need help in mental illnesses just as they need help with defective hearts and livers.

The knowledge to help in most cases exists. It is, rather, a problem of distribution.

Unfortunately for the mentally ill, their symptoms are not as socially acceptable as a runny nose or shortness of breath. Their symptoms too often are judged in moral terms and produce hostility or avoidance rather than recognition and compassion.

Reagan still firm with South African sanctions

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan is standing pat with limited sanctions against South Africa, despite pressure in Congress for tougher steps and a White House admission that moderate action has not produced enough results.

Reagan sent a message to Congress on Thursday that left open the possibility of additional sanctions later against the white-ruled government in Pretoria after consultation with key allies.

For the time being, however, he renewed for another year a prohibition on the sale of Krugerrand gold coins, a ban on computer sales to the South African government, a moratorium on bank loans to the South African government and a ban on the export of U.S. nuclear technology to Pretoria.

The sanctions would have expired Tuesday unless renewed by Reagan, who is on vacation at his ranch in the Santa Ynez mountains near here.

Assessing the impact of the U.S. action so far, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said, "It clearly has not done what we intended for it to do.

"The intention was to bring about a change in South Africa," he said. "They have made some progress but not nearly enough."

White House sources in Washington said discussions are under way with some congressional leaders in hopes the administration can work out a sanctions package milder than those approved by the House and Senate, or a new presidential order strong enough to satisfy Congress.

The White House also is expected to try to defuse congressional pressure by naming a black diplomat as ambassador to Pretoria.

Edward J. Perkins, now the ambassador to Liberia, is expected to be chosen, but Speakes said he had nothing to announce about a new envoy.

The House has approved a total trade embargo against South Africa, while the Senate has approved a less-harsh measure that would, among other things, impose a partial trade embargo and ban new U.S. investments in and banks loans to South Africa.

Additional sanctions could be added by Reagan to the executive order first signed a year ago, Speakes said.

However, he said he "just can't speculate on a timetable" for a presidential decision.

The white-minority government in South Africa has insisted it will not be intimidated by sanctions from Western countries aimed at forcing an end to apartheid, the country's legal system of racial segregation and denial of voting rights and other privileges to blacks.

Reagan, in his message, said, "The failure of the South African government to take adequate steps to eliminate apartheid, that government's security practices, including the recent imposition of another state of emergency, and the persistence of widespread violence continue to endanger prospects for peaceful change in South Africa and threaten stability in the region as a whole."

Radon needs to be 'under drinking water regulations'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Radon, a radioactive gas believed to kill thousands of people every year, should be brought under drinking water regulations, the Environmental Protection Agency says.

Radon dissolved in water and carried into households through faucets, showers and laundries probably accounts for 30 to 600 deaths from lung cancer each year, EPA officials told a news conference Thursday.

The officials said that in some New England communities, which they did not identify, radon originating in the water could account for 50 percent of a home's radon concentrations.

In addition to radon, the agency said it wants to bring natural uranium under its drinking water regulations. Water-borne uranium probably causes one to 10 of the nation's 2,000 annual bone cancers and also can harm the kidneys. Most uranium is found in the Southwest and the Rocky Mountains.

An estimated 5,000 to 20,000 deaths originate with radon arising directly out of the soil and concentrating in houses, the officials said.

Radon originates in the radioactive decay of radium, itself formed in the chain of elements that originate with the decay of natural uranium. The gas is inert and decays in a few days, but the radioactive elements it forms, notably polonium, can lodge on dust particles and be carried into the lung to remain for years, irradiating the tissues.

Army may stay in Bolivia

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Army soldiers and helicopters probably will stay in Bolivia to assist that country in mounting drug raids beyond the originally anticipated 60 days, the Defense Department says.

Robert Sims, chief Pentagon spokesman, would not say Thursday precisely how long the six Blackhawk helicopters and 160 soldiers manning them would remain in Bolivia. But he said he "won't argue" with published reports that suggested the operation would continue past the middle of this month.

"At a point of time in the future, and that's not been determined, our people will leave," Sims said.

Bolivian government officials were quoted in La Paz last month as saying the drug raids had disrupted 90 percent of the country's cocaine trade and that Bolivia would ask the Reagan administration to allow the soldiers and helicopters to remain in the country for a longer period.

The helicopters were sent to Bolivia on July 14 at the request of the Bolivian government to provide airlift service to police agents mounting raids against suspected cocaine laboratories in the tropical Beni flatlands.

FCC wants more regulation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government plans to ask for public and industry comment on ways to streamline the rules regulating telephone company profits.

The regulations may cost more to administer than they are worth in consumer benefits, said Alfred C. Sikes, assistant secretary of commerce for communications and information.

"We are not proposing deregulation so much as reformed and more efficient regulation," Sikes said Thursday.

The Federal Communications Commission limits American Telephone & Telegraph Co. to 12.2 percent annual return on its investment. The local Bell Telephone Companies are limited to 12 percent on the interstate portions of their business.

Combat bravery awarded

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Maryland man, whose 18-year-old son lobbied on his behalf, will receive a Silver Star medal tonight for bravery during combat in the Vietnam War.

Thomas E. Butt Jr., 40, of Rockville, will receive the medal for heroism during ceremonies at the Marine Barracks in Washington, the Pentagon announced Thursday.

Butt's Marine company commander had recommended he receive the award shortly after a battle on March 30, 1967, but the citation and supporting paperwork were destroyed in a subsequent mortar attack and the matter never pursued, the Marine Corps said.

"The award is being presented as a result of the efforts of Butt's son, Michael, 18, who wrote to the commandant of the Marine Corps, telephoned congressional representatives and tracked down his father's company commander," the corps added in a prepared statement.

Saturday: partly cloudy and warmer with a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms and a high in the mid 80s. Southeast wind 5 to 15 mph.

Gaines and Andrews counties: Tonight: mostly cloudy with a 30 percent chance of showers and thunderstorms and a low around 60. Wind light and variable.

RAIN

No new road closings or other problems were reported, however.

The heavy rains did minor damage to some bridges along U.S. Highway 90 in Brewster County, and Texas 207 north of Floydada was closed because of high waters Thursday afternoon.

Several smaller roads was closed in Dawson County, as were many city streets in Lubbock.

Department of Public Safety and police officials said there were surprisingly few accidents, most of them minor fender-benders.

Two Alpine women — Jesusita Reyes, 67, and Nora Pallanez, 62 — drowned after high water swept them from their cars, said Alpine Police Chief Ruben Melgoza on Thursday.

Flooding damaged several buildings, streets, sewer lines and railroad tracks in Alpine, Melgoza said, but no one was evacuated.

The upper-level trough that has been moving across the South Plains all week wreaked havoc on Lubbock and the surrounding area Thursday as skies dumped up to 3 inches of rain on the city.

Although that trough appeared to have moved out of the area by late Thursday, the National Weather Service said another foul-weather front was expected to head that way today.

The new front, which drenched the Midland-Odessa area Thursday, was moving through the Wichita Falls area today, and the NWS said it will probably mean more rain for the South Plains during the next several days.

The National Weather Service posted flash flood watches for the Concho Valley, Permian Basin, most of the Southwest Texas mountains and the Big Bend country today and for the valley and the Big Bend tonight.

A total of 30 counties were included in the watch. Another flash flood watch covered most of North and Northeast Texas today.

The watch area was generally north of a line from San Angelo to Shreveport, La. It also included Collin and Denton counties of North Central Texas.

Weather service radar at 6:15 a.m. showed an intense thunderstorm over the city of Denton, moving east at 15 mph. Police said some streets were flooded to the bottoms of cars.

The NWS said thunderstorms dumped heavy rains in the Wichita Falls area and high winds blew a roof off a building near Perry on Thursday evening.

Plainsmen bring grid season to Bulldogs

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

The Lubbock Monterey Plainsmen will bring with them today the start of the 1986 high school football season at 8 p.m. in Memorial Stadium where the speedy Midland High Bulldogs lay in wait.

However, MHS coach Doug McCutchen would just as soon see the Plainsmen bring in some sunshine instead of a game ball.

"Know any way we can turn off the spigot?" asks McCutchen. "I'd just as soon open the season on a dry field, but that doesn't look possible. I'd feel a lot better about the game if we had a dry field."

OF COURSE, McCutchen enters the 1986 season, his third at the school, with a bevy of speedy backs, who figure to make fast tracks for the goal throughout the year. Rain, however, is one added enemy the 'Dogs don't need.

Monterey has not beaten a McCutchen team, but this one has a new look since Mike Crutcher is now the head coach, replacing the long time grid boss James Odom, who retired at the end of last season.

That's an additional concern for McCutchen in an opener where there are questions abounding about the "new Plainsmen."

"We've only seen Monterey in one scrimmage and it seems to us that they are playing better than we have seen them in the past two years. They don't have the speed and quickness we have, but they have cut down on all the things they used to do, and consequently, doing it better. They have a lot of returning starters and that concerns us," said McCutchen.

Crutcher says, "We haven't changed a great deal from the past. After all, I've been in this program for 13 years. We don't expect Midland High to be much different than they have the past two years when they kicked us pretty good. We aren't doing as many things as we did in the past. We just hope we can do the things we do well."

CRUTCHER WOULD like to see his team get off to a fast start against MHS since Monterey is coming off two sub-par seasons. The Plainsmen won only one district game a year ago.

"We're anxious to get started, but I'm afraid that the Bulldogs are more than we want to tackle at this stage. Our kids have worked hard and they need something positive to happen," said Crutcher.

"I can't see why Midland High won't be a contender in that district and I know how tough it can be. The Bulldogs have great speed, their quarterback is a good thrower, they have a great defensive front four, a great secondary and their tight end looks good. There's not much lacking that I can see."

Tonight's game is still a reunion of sorts for Crutcher, McCutchen and MHS assistant Davis Corley, who all attended Texas Tech at the same time.

"I have a lot of respect for Doug. We went to Tech at the same time and I had some classes with Davis," said Crutcher.

McCutchen jokingly responded, "Well, you might say Davis and Mike were students. I was just there at the time."

With heavy rains hitting Midland this week, it will be interesting to see if the Bulldogs can untrack the likes of Tyrone Oliver and Anthony Adkison, two tracksters who can be dangerous in the open field.

MHS quarterback Jaime Madrid, who looked good in the Pecos scrimmage, makes his first start and defensively, McCutchen will have his eyes on linebackers Chris Dean, Clyde Govan and Clif Coleman. That position was a concern for MHS coaches going into the season and Govan and Coleman are juniors.

MONTEREY FEATURES a big offensive front line with returning starter Cory Stovall anchoring at center with a 226-pound frame and tackle Jeff Anthony at 224. The Plainsmen have a junior quarterback in Max Stephenson and running back Kelvin Joseph is small at 140 pounds.

Midland High enters the game healthy, but Crutcher may be without two starters. Guard Tim Andrews has a sprained ankle and may not start while free safety Brian Pierce will probably miss the game with a bad achilles tendon.

"We've got to get Pierce well. We've got to have him this year. He's the key to our defense," says Crutcher.

Rain or not, the two teams will open it up tonight and Crutcher is probably hoping there is more rain in the forecast.

"Is it still raining in Midland?" he asked Thursday. "What's the forecast?"

Well, it's one McCutchen probably doesn't want to hear.

'Huskers to play, but penalties loom

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Nebraska football Coach Tom Osborne said he's pleased the NCAA delayed the suspension of 60 players but said the school may forfeit a game if its appeal of the penalties is denied.

The NCAA on Thursday said the players on the eighth-ranked Cornhuskers, 53 of whom were suspended for one game and seven others for two games, may compete in Saturday's nationally televised opener here against 11th-ranked Florida State.

Nebraska officials had asked that the suspensions be delayed until an NCAA subcommittee considers the appeal Tuesday.

"We're pleased with the stay in that it gives us all an opportunity to draw a breath," Osborne said. "Now we just have to go out and play well."

David Maggard, chairman of the NCAA Council Subcommittee on Eligibility Appeals, said denying a stay of the suspensions would have been unfair to the players if the appeal is upheld.

"We believe that the uniqueness of this case merits delaying the implementation," Maggard said in a statement released by the NCAA.

Osborne said that if the appeal of Wednesday's decision by the NCAA Eligibility Committee is denied, Nebraska might forfeit a game rather than field a team comprised mostly of freshmen and redshirt players. The team's second game is Sept. 20 at Illinois.

Nebraska's Tom Osborne

Nebraska officials also would not rule out legal action. Osborne said the school could seek an injunction in district court.

Nebraska's request for a stay of the suspensions was based primarily on the players' rights to due process, officials said.

"I think the major point was the right of the individual for an appeal," Nebraska faculty representative Jim O'Hanlon said at a news conference.

"We've had a very cooperative day with the NCAA," Chancellor Martin Massengale said. "We look forward now to playing the game Saturday under normal conditions with our players, and we think we'll have an exciting football game."

Officials said the appeal will be discussed by telephone Tuesday with the Subcommittee on Eligibility Appeals. Osborne said he doesn't know when the National Collegiate Athletic Association will rule on the appeal.

Don Bryant, assistant athletic director at Nebraska, said players would not be available for comment before Saturday's game.

Osborne declined to release a list of the players to be suspended but said they include the Cornhuskers' top three quarterbacks and top three I-backs. Most of the suspended players provided complimentary passes for people not authorized to use them, according to Osborne.

The Eligibility Committee gave Nebraska an option of suspending at least 10 players per game over a number of games, instead of holding all the players out of the Florida State game, NCAA spokesman Dave Cawood said.

Massengale said the penalties were "on the strong side." He declined to say what penalty, if any, the football program deserved for the infractions.

Nebraska officials declined to discuss the basis of their appeal. But Osborne said NCAA investigators would not have learned about 5 percent of the infractions without the players' help.

"By being honest and trying to cooperate, here's what we've got," Osborne said. "You really kind of wonder what kind of business you're in."

Osborne declined to predict how the controversy would affect his team Saturday night.

Florida State Coach Bobby Bowden said he expects Nebraska to play an emotional game.

"They ought to be a hornet's nest now," he said. "If they did have to suspend somebody, they'd be mad as hornets. They're going to be mad as hornets anyway."

Culpepper uncovers hoax

LUFKIN, Texas (AP) — The Lufkin High School football coach thought he had a talented running back in a new student who called himself Roderick Johnson.

But a 50-mile car ride with the player in tow yielded his true identity. Robert Johnson, a two-time All-District 18-3A running back for Center High, had assumed the different identity to play football a fifth year.

"Needless to say, we're very happy that we caught it when we did," said Lufkin coach Pat Culpepper, who is a former Midland High coach. "If we had played him in a football game, we would've had to forfeit that game. And if we hadn't found out about it until the end of the season, it would've cost us a whole season."

The youth was dismissed from the Panther team Wednesday.

Robert Johnson never graduated from Center and tried to use Roderick Johnson's name to enter Lufkin High School, get his diploma and gain an extra year of football, coaches say.

The hoax was uncovered just three days before the running back was scheduled to start in the Panthers' football season opener against Jasper.

Center Head Coach Jack Powell called the situation bizarre.

"I've never had this thing happen before," he said. "I've never even heard of it happening."

Robert Johnson could not be reached for comment by The Associated Press.

A woman in the Lufkin High School registrar's office, who asked not to be identified, said Thursday that he still was a student at the school but was not in class.

LSU placed on one year probation by NCAA

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Louisiana State's football program faces no serious penalties under a one year probation imposed by the NCAA for 15 recruiting violations.

LSU will not have to give up any bowl games, television revenue or athletic scholarships, Chancellor James Wharton said Thursday after the NCAA announced its action.

"In terms of sanctions, we're very pleased," Wharton said. "It came out about like we expected."

He said the censure and probationary period LSU faces "means we will be under very close scrutiny and will be continuously evaluating our policies and practices."

The NCAA did take limited sanctions against LSU assistant coach Terry Lewis, who provided transportation and a meal to J.R. Ambrose in Sweetwater, Tenn. He will not be allowed to recruit off-campus for one year.

LSU has 15 days to decide whether it will appeal the findings of the NCAA. Wharton and other LSU officials were to meet later to discuss any possible appeal.

"I can't speak for coach Lewis, who has his own individual rights," Wharton said. "I'm just delighted all we will be losing is one service by one person for one year."

LSU disputed five of the 15 charges, and the NCAA lifted all but one, which involved an assistant coach selling game tickets.

The alleged violations ranged from cash payments to free meals for players, and most were described as minor by both LSU and NCAA officials.

The action contrasted sharply with that takeen by the NCAA against Nebraska, which had 60 players suspended for Saturday's nationally-televised game against Florida State. The suspension was stayed Thursday by the NCAA, and an NCAA subcommittee will hear an appeal Tuesday.

The players were accused of distributing complimentary tickets to people other than immediate family members or students, the only people eligible to receive them under NCAA rules.

TV picks upon 4-5A, but....

KPEJ-TV, the new kid in the Permian Basin's sports market, is making a bid to cash in on the popularity of District 4-5A football.

KPEJ, Channel 24, will replay 10 games involving District 4-5A football teams, beginning at 8 p.m. Saturday when the station will carry the tape delay of the Odessa Permian-El Paso Coronado matchup with Chuck Gibbs doing the play-by-play.

THE NEW station, which went on air this summer, has hired a film crew from Trans Global Productions to do the games.

It sounds like a great treat to the Permian Basin, which is always hungry for its high school football, but this effort sours somewhat when you read over the schedule.

The station must be draped in black and white banners, with MOJO signs on every door. KPEJ plans to replay no less than six of Permian's nine games this year.

That's surely going to create a lot of viewers here in Midland. Midland High's game with Permian is set for replay at 7 p.m. on Oct. 4 and the Lee-San Angelo game will be replayed at 7 p.m. on Nov. 1. That's all the TV coverage for Midland teams planned and not one of those games is from Memorial Stadium.

Odessa High, long a step child to Permian in Odessa, gets exposure four times.

It looks like to me that KPEJ is doing itself more harm than good in the long run with a schedule like this. Maybe it will take them a year to learn that people have fierce loyalties to their football teams in West Texas and Permian isn't the only team around.

Granted Permian's program is worth watching, but this is a little overboard. It's no wonder why Permian is willing to let the Lee-Permian game slide by without a live broadcast when, in effect, they have their own TV station.

It seems incredible to me that a game like the MHS-Lee matchup would be passed up. That seems like the least concession the station could make to the outsiders.

At any rate, FOOTBALL '86 opens on all fronts tonight weather or not we're ready. Here's a look at how they will come out:

Midland High 21, Lubbock Monterey 7: A slow turf isn't exactly what "Speed, Inc." is looking for, but the Bulldogs still look tough enough to dip water.

Midland Lee 28, Lubbock Coronado 0: Just in case you thought the Rebels were going to unveil a torrid passing attack, forget it. This one will be a Wishbone victory all the way.

Odessa Permian 42, El Paso Coronado 10: Coronado is leaving the Sun City for the Wet Basin and it really doesn't make any difference with a Border team. Still, this one will keep the wolves away from new Permian coach Gary Gaines' door for at least another week.

Amarillo Palo Duro 18, Odessa High 13: If the score is worse, all of District 4-5A is in trouble. Permian kicked Palo Duro pretty good in a scrimmage and the Dons are supposed to be one of the good teams in the Panhandle.

San Angelo 24, Austin Anderson 7: The Bobkitties have four games to get ready for 4-5A action and they're going to look strong when they get there.

Brownwood 21, Abilene Cooper 14: The 4A Lions have a new coach and Brownwood fans are using this as his test to replace Gordon Wood. Pitty him if he loses.

Abilene High 13, Wichita Falls Rider 8: Larry Pullin steps into 5A with a successful debut, but it won't be easy.

Mustangs have ambitious schedule

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

Homer Jackson, football coach at Midland Christian, can find one thing good about opening his season at home against No. 1-ranked Christoval Saturday: They can only get easier the rest of the season.

Jackson returns for his third season in guiding the six-man attack of the Mustangs, and he has some premier letterman joining him. Seven of those letters are juniors back for their third varsity season. Among the four seniors, three are returning lettermen.

"We had a pretty good bunch of athletes in that junior class. I've had them since they were freshmen and I've seen them move up through the ranks," Jackson said. "Now that they are juniors, they feel like they can take more authority on the team. They have a little more confidence in themselves."

A pair of juniors, Tony Corona and Kevin Wallum, are the cornerstones of the Midland Christian offense in 1986, and both are a threat to break it to the end zone from anywhere on the field.

"Tony led our team in total yards as a sophomore and Kevin is our best passer," Jackson said. "They're both very important to our team. Tony has really muscled up over the summer and he's been breaking a lot of tackles in practice."

Corona comes at opposing defenses from the triggerman slot in Jackson's offense which means he is a threat to throw the ball nearly as much as he is to run with it.

Wallum lines up at the traditional quarterback spot and he will look for receivers David Johnson, Wade Emmert and Coy Taylor as well as Corona.

Forming the offensive front are center Ron Patteson, Taylor and Johnson, who in the offense-oriented six-man game double as blockers and receivers.

On defense, Taylor, Emmert, Johnson and Corona go both ways. Taylor (5-9, 170) and Emmert (5-9, 150) are the ends, while Corona anchors the linebacking duo with Johnson (5-11, 165) on the other side.

Russ Pridemore plays the safety and release man in the defensive scheme, while senior Jamie Cloyd is the nose guard.

Kendall Holt, a senior out for his first year of football, should also see a lot of playing time if he continues to improve in practice.

"My goal when I came here three years ago was to make Midland Christian more competitive with the public schools that play six-man football," Jackson said. "We've made some good strides toward that, but we've got a ways to go. We were 6-4 last year, but we play nearly all public schools this year.

"We may not be as good because we have a tougher schedule, but we'll be exciting, I know that much."

Joining Jackson on this year's coaching staff are longtime assistant Gordon Awtry the defensive coordinator and John Smith in his first year with the Mustangs.

Walls' walkout infuriates Schramm

DALLAS (AP) — Everson Walls' abrupt walkout in a contract dispute only days before the Dallas Cowboys' season opener amounts to desertion and "it certainly doesn't sit well with me," team president Tex Schramm said.

The 26-year-old cornerback, whose nine interceptions last season led the National Football League, left the club after practice Thursday and said he would not return until the team renegotiated the last two years years of his five-year contract.

Dallas opens the season Monday night in a nationally televised game at Texas Stadium against the New York Giants, whom the Cowboys consider their biggest hurdle in their bid to repeat as NFC East champions.

"I don't think we'll negotiate under blackmail conditions," Schramm said Thursday night.

"If he makes the decision not to play in the game, then that'll have to be his decision. He will have to accept the responsibility of deserting his team on the eve of what might be one of its biggest games," Schramm added.

Walls' agent, Steve Weinberg, told WFAA-TV Thursday night that the Cowboys promised in 1983 to renegotiate the final two years of Walls' contract if he had met certain performance standards by 1986.

Walls met those standards, but the Cowboys responded with an offer that would make the all-pro cornerback only the 12th-highest member of the Cowboys and only the 25th-highest paid defensive back in the league, Weinberg said.

The team was willing to offer more money only if Walls agreed on a new four-year contract, Weinberg said.

Dallas coach Tom Landry said the timing of Walls' walkout bothered him.

"I would think it would have to come as a surprise to anybody. After all, we're here to play football," Landry said. "Of course, it's a problem with his contract. I don't get involved in that part of it very often, and I don't have any comments about that."

The Cowboys are reeling under the weight of an 0-5 record in exhibition play, and the defensive secondary was already one of the club's biggest question marks because of the holdout of 1985 starter Dextor Clinkscale and the release of Dennis Thurman.

Schramm said, "I don't remember a case where we have ever had a player walk out on the eve of a game. It certainly does not sit well with me."

Early in training camp, when it became known Clinkscale was holding out for more money, the club said he would be fined $1,000 a day until he reported.

Schramm said if Walls carried out his threat, "he would be subject to an automatic fine, but this goes beyond that. I think when you get to the point of four days before the opening of the regular season and you walk out, that's a little different from not reporting on the first day."

Schramm declined to elaborate on the steps the Cowboys would consider above a fine.

"I don't know what our options are. Certain options are available if a player leaves and stays out for over five days. But I don't know if that would be applicable or not, since he could miss the game and return and still be back within the five-day limit," Schramm said.

Weinberg said that, on Walls' instruction, he filed a grievance against the Cowboys on Thursday with the NFL Players Association.

The grievance seeks an arbitration hearing and an order forcing the Cowboys to renegotiate in good faith with Weinberg on the last two years of Walls' contract.

In 1983, the Cowboys signed four veteran players to three-year contracts, but refused to give Walls a three-year contract, Weinberg said.

Walls agreed on a five-year contract as a result, Weinberg said, after Schramm and Cowboys vice president Gil Brandt proposed inclusion of a clause that promised renegotiation of the last two years if Walls achieved 200 points under a system set up by Brandt.

Indians winning basement battle

Associated Press

The battle for last place in the American League East is pretty much one-sided at the moment.

The last-place Milwaukee Brewers, riding a six-game losing streak, are playing like they want to stay there. That's good news for the Cleveland Indians, who took advantage of the Brewers' slumping pitching staff to pile up a 15-4 victory Thursday night.

Despite the outcome, Cleveland Manager Pat Corrales saw good things ahead for both clubs.

"I know these two clubs are battling to get out of last place, but I'll tell you something: you just wait a year or two and we're going to pass some ball clubs. Not just us — both clubs," Corrales declared.

Corrales, whose Indians moved a fraction of a percentage point ahead of Baltimore into fifth place in the American League East, has reason for future optimism with budding sluggers like former Midland Cub Joe Carter and Cory Snyder.

Carter, 25, went 4-for-5 Thursday night and hit his 25th homer of the season, a grand slam. Snyder, a 23-year-old rookie brought up in June, hit two three-run homers — Nos. 19 and 20 this season — in the first and eighth innings to pace the 17-hit Cleveland attack.

"I thought he would hit 15 homers, but he got off to a good start," Corrales said of Snyder. "He strikes out a lot, but he comes out the next day with a fresh approach."

Added Snyder: "I just go out and take whatever comes. I don't have any goals. This is my first time around. Maybe another year around I'll start setting some goals."

In the only other American League game Thursday night, Kansas City blanked Chicago 1-0.

The 15 runs were a season-high for the Tribe, which improved its record to 67-68. The onslaught gave rookie left-hander Scott Bailes the luxury of allowing four runs and nine hits in five innings and still improving his record to 10-8.

"Our only goal right now is to win as many games as we can," Corrales said.

The stated goal of Milwaukee Manager George Bamberger, meanwhile, is to "get out of this slump."

The key to the most recent Brewers' slide has been poor starting pitching. It happened again Thursday, as Tim Leary, 9-12, spotted the Indians a 4-0 first-inning lead and lasted only three innings.

A week ago, the Brewers had the best earned run average in the league, 3.88. It since has zoomed to 4.09.

"I really have no answer," Bamberger said. "Our pitching's not well at all. It's unfortunate to hit a slump this time of year. It's dangerous this time of year."

Bill Schroeder, one of three Brewers catchers, didn't have a solid explanation for the pitching slump either.

"They're young. Maybe they're getting a little tired," Schroeder said.

But he said the Brewers are too talented and too proud to go out of the season losing.

"We'll be all right. We snapped out of it before (the All-Star break)," he said. "We don't want to finish in last place."

Royals 1, White Sox 0

Mark Gubicza and Steve Farr teamed on a three-hitter and Lonnie Smith's RBI single in the bottom of the eighth inning gave Kansas City its victory over Chicago.

White Sox starter Jose DeLeon and Mark Gubicza of the Royals matched two-hitters for six innings. DeLeon had retired 12 straight batters, but left the game because of stiffness in his right arm, and Bill Dawley, 0-6, took over to start the seventh.

Baseball

The host Royals took advantage of an error for the game's only run. Rookie Kevin Seitzer led off with a single and Rudy Law followed with a sacrifice bunt. Third baseman Dave Cochrane fielded the ball, but shortstop Ozzie Guillen failed to handle the throw for an error, putting runners on second and third.

Smith then singled for Kansas City's third run in 37⅓ innings.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Expos 4, Giants 2

When the National League season got underway, the Montreal Expos were counting heavily on Bryn Smith, an 18-game winner in 1985.

What they were looking for was the type of effort he gave them in Montreal's 4-2 victory over the San Francisco Giants Thursday night.

Smith checked the Giants on five hits over eight innings, striking out seven and walking just one.It was reminiscent of last year, when his 18-5 record and 2.91 earned run average helped the Expos stay in contention for most of the season.

Yet it was a far cry from the way Smith has pitched for most of this year, a season in which he has struggled to repeat the peformance that made him one of the league's most dependable hurlers a year ago.

It's been a frustrating campaign for the bearded right-hander, with no one realizing that more than Smith himself.

"I know I haven't done the job I should have this year," said Smith, who raised his record to 10-8 with his second consecutive victory. "Maybe I took too much for granted after last year and didn't work as hard as I should have.

"For the first part of the year I tried to be like Cy Young and it just didn't work. I was trying to be too fine and pinpoint my pitches. I was overcautious instead of being aggressive and going after hitters.

"Lately I've been getting back to being myself. Maybe it's because the pressure of the pennant race is over, but it's good to be back."

While Smith seems to have found his old form late in the season, the same can't be said about his San Francisco counterpart, Mike LaCoss, who continued his second-half slump by losing his eighth straight game.

LaCoss, who hasn't won since July 13, gave up only five hits in six innings, but allowed all four runs as his record dropped to 9-11.

The Expos struck quickly, as as Tom Foley led off the first inning with an opposite-field single to left. Mitch Webster sacrificed Foley to second and Tim Raines' infield out sent him to third before he scored on Andre Dawson's base hit to right.

Foley made it 2-0 when he hit his first home run of the season with two outs in the fifth.

The Expos chased LaCoss when they added two more in the seventh. Andres Galarraga, reactivated before the game after spending most of the last two months on the disabled list, drew a a leadoff walk and scored on Vance Law's double off the center field wall.

Frank Williams came on and struck out Dann Bilardello before giving up a run-scoring single to Smith.

That was all the offense Smith needed. He carried a three-hit shut out into the ninth, but surrendered home runs to Candy Maldonado and Chili Davis before leaving in favor of Jeff Reardon, who struck out three to earn his 29th save.

"I wasn't thinking homer," said Maldonado, who leads the Giants with 13 homers. "I was just trying to start a rally because we're the type of team that can come back late in a game."

Lee V-ballers place second

From Staff Reports

The Midland Lee volleyball team recently placed second in the Amarillo Invitational Volleyball tournament, running the Rebel volleyball record to 5-8 for the year.

Coach Janice Baulch's Rebels won a hard fought, 15-9, 2-15, 16-14, decision over Pampa in the first round of the tournament and came back with a sound 15-5, 15-9 win over El Paso Irvin to gain the tournament finals.

In the finals, Lee lost to host Amarillo High by a 15-7, 15-1 margin to finish second overall.

Daphne Rhoads and Dana Jones were Lee players to earn All-Tournament honors.

The Rebels travel to Seminole this weekend for another tournament.

According to Culpepper and Powell, Johnson passed himself off as Roderick Johnson — a student at Center but a non-football player — and got Roderick Johnson's transcripts sent to Lufkin. School officials considered the transfer of papers as routine.

The problem arose, however, when the real Roderick Johnson showed up for classes on the first day of school Tuesday.

Culpepper ended up driving to Center, about 50 miles northeast, with Johnson in tow so Powell could make a positive identification of his former player.

Powell said Johnson wanted to graduate from high school after failing to do so at Center.

"He told me, 'Coach, I just wanted to get a high school diploma,'" Powell said. "He's not a bad kid.

Miroslav Mecir celebrates after upsetting No. 7 seed Joakim Nystrom Thursday in the U.S. Open quarterfinals.

Becker survives unseeded Srejber

NEW YORK (AP) — It took Boris Becker a lot longer to realize how badly he was routing Milan Srejber than it took the crowd at the U.S. Open.

Becker, the two-time Wimbledon champion and No. 3 seed here, surged into the semifinals Thursday with a 6-3, 6-2, 6-1 victory over the unseeded Srejber. The West German star dismantled the Czechoslovak's big serve, toying with his opponent in the last two sets.

But it was not until the 81-minute match was nearly over that Becker recognized how lopsided it was.

"I'm looking at the scoreboard when it is 6-3, 6-2, 4-0 and saying, 'What the hell is going on, this is a quarterfinal match?'

"Then I felt a little sorry for the crowd," Becker said.

THERE WERE 20,773 people in attendance and they booed Srejber repeatedly for his uninspired performance in which let passing shots sail by without lifting his racket. Then, the crowd took to sarcastically cheering Srejber every time he won a point — which was 27 times in the last two sets.

Srejber hadn't met a seeded player en route to the quarterfinals.

"He is a strange guy off the court and I don't think many players talk to him," Becker said.

Srejber didn't want to talk much after the match.

"Last time I won, now I lost," Srejber said. "He's a good player."

In the other men's quarterfinal on Thursday, No. 16 Miloslav Mecir, Srejber's countryman, upended No. 7 Joakim Nystrom 6-4, 6-2, 3-6, 6-2.

Becker meets Mecir, whom he has beaten three times in four matches — including the quarterfinals at Wimbledon this year — and top-seeded and defending champion Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia plays No. 4 Stefan Edberg of Sweden in Saturday's semifinals.

Today's women's semifinals featured the top three players and No. 7 Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia.

Chris Evert Lloyd, seeded second and seeking her seventh Open crown, faced Sukova in the first match. Top-seed Martina Navratilova, winner of two Opens, played No. 3 Steffi Graf of West Germany in the other semifinal.

The men's doubles final also was held today, with No. 3 seeds Mats Wilander and Nystrom of Sweden opposing No. 4 Andres Gomez of Ecuador and Slobo Zivojinovic of Yugoslavia.

"Mecir is the most difficult guy on the tour to play, I think," Becker said. "One day he can't play, the next day he wakes up and is unbeatable.

"The main thing is it is so difficult to read his shots. He hits the ball flat but wings it."

Mecir is getting to be known as a Swede killer. In the fourth round, he eliminated Wilander, the second seed. On Thursday, he raised his record against Sweden's best players to 18-3 over the last two years by taking Nystrom.

Mecir's superb court coverage and deep approaches kept Nystrom off-balance all day.

"I think Joakim was passing today much better than Mats," Mecir, 22, said. "And I think my ground strokes were better."

Though he is not fond of playing outside of Europe, Mecir admitted he was "very happy with making the semifinals of such a big tournament."

BECKER WAS a little surprised to see Mecir get so far.

"I know him pretty well and I talked to him after his first match," Becker said. "He tells me he can't move on this court and he wants to go home.

"Now he is in the semifinals.

"Maybe all the Czechs are a little strange."

Mecir doesn't put himself in the class of a Lendl or Becker — yet.

"I think there are many things to improve," said Mecir, who is Czechoslovakia's top Davis Cup player because Lendl no longer plays that event. "I think there's still many things to learn. It is very difficult to say one of the players is a complete player because every player has some weak parts of his game and I think I have many of them."

Cancer halts Greenberg

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — For Hank Greenberg, the success that put him into baseball's Hall of Fame carried into later life as a baseball owner, general manager and pioneer of player's rights.

Greenberg, who hit 331 home runs in a career spent mostly with the Detroit Tigers, died Thursday at his home. He was 75, and had been suffering from cancer for 13 months, according to a statement issued by Arn Tellem, law partner of Greenberg's son, Stephen.

Greenberg, who broke into the major leagues in 1930, was one of the top sluggers of his time. He was the American League's most valuable player in 1935 and 1940, and had a .313 career batting average.

He retired after playing the 1947 season with Pittsburgh, and the following year Greenberg bought a share of the Cleveland Indians from Bill Veeck. Greenberg was an owner and general manager of the Indians through 1958 and a vice president of the Chicago White Sox in 1959 and 1960.

Greenberg was given credit for helping build the 1954 Indians who won an AL-record 111 games before getting swept in the World Series by the New York Giants.

Greenberg, during his time as a baseball executive, also helped lead the fight for the pension plan for the players.

In 1938, he hit 58 home runs, tying him with Jimmie Foxx for the most home runs hit in a season by a right-handed batter. He led the league in homers and RBI four times each.

Mize impresses self with seven-under 64

B.C. Open

ENDICOTT, N.Y. (AP) — Larry Mize impressed at least one golfer with his opening-round performance at the $400,000 B.C. Open.

"I'm really pleased with myself," Mize said Thursday after shooting a 7-under-par 64 for a one-stroke lead over Rick Fehr. "I played real solid. It's one of my better rounds. I didn't miss but one green and I hit most of the fairways.

"I played well last week (at the Federal Express St. Jude Classic) and I think this is a continuation."

Two strokes off the lead were Bill Glasson, Bobby Wadkins, Mike Smith and Brett Upper.

Mark Hayes, Brian Claar, Bobby Cole and Harry Taylor finished at 67, while Chip Beck, Gene Sauers, Evan Schiller, David Peoples and Dick Mast had 68s.

Mize registered seven birdies in his round over the 6,966-yard En-Joie Golf Club layout that began on the 10th tee, including ones on his last four holes.

He birdied the par-5 third hole, parred the next two, then strung together his four birdies, including a 20-foot putt on the final hole.

"Usually, three is my limit," Mize joked of his rush of birdies.

Mize has been yet to win this year on the PGA Tour but he finished second at the Tournament Players Championship and the Kemper Open.

The chilly, blustery weather conditions "made it a little tougher than normal," but Mize said the course suits him.

"I like this golf course," Mize said of the tight, water-filled layout. "You have to hit it fairly straight. I think it suits my game."

Fehr also had seven birdies, including three going into the clubhouse. But a bogey on the par-5 fifth hole cost him a share of the lead.

Fehr called the round "not my Grade A play."

"I'm thrilled with the score, but not with the way I got it," Fehr said.

Giants picked over Cowboys

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Football Writer

ABC couldn't be happier. It's got Herschel Walker making his NFL debut on prime time Monday night.

Lionel Manuel couldn't be happier either, and Lionel Manuel is liable to play a bigger role in the Dallas Cowboys-New York Giants game than Herschel Walker.

Two years ago, the Giants' underrated wide receiver turned Everson Walls in several different directions at once. Twice. The Giants won both games.

Last year, the Cowboys beat the Giants twice on fluky plays and Lionel Manuel didn't play the second time.

It's nice for the Cowboys (and ABC) that they have Walker to team with or spell Tony Dorsett in the backfield, and it's instructive to remember they blew out Washington on the opening Monday night of 1985.

But Mike Renfro, their most reliable wide receiver, is injured and they're not that good a team — 0-5 in exhibition games may actually mean something.

The Cowboys are favored by 1½ points. You get three points for the home field but New York gets more for Lionel Manuel. GIANTS: 24-13.

Cleveland (plus 10½) at Chicago

Believe it or not, this is one of the tough games on Chicago's schedule.

The Browns catch the Bears coming off motorcycle and oil filter ads and book promotion tours. "The type of football we played gives you a headache," Chicago Coach Mike Ditka said of last week's game against Buffalo.

A couple of things to ponder along with the 10½-point spread:

1. Bernie Kosar is neither the world's most experienced quarterback nor the most mobile.

2. Last season's Bears wandered aimlessly through the Bucs, Colts and Lions but beat the Patriots (twice), Redskins, 49ers, Cowboys, Jets, Giants and Rams by a combined score of 245-33.

Cleveland is better than the former and probably not as good as most of the latter. And Chicago may be looking ahead to Buddy Ryan's return next week. BEARS, 20-14.

NFL Picks

Raiders (plus 3) at Denver

When last sighted, the Broncos led the Raiders 14-0 at halftime. Then the Broncos self-destructed, it started to snow and Los Angeles won in overtime, winning the AFC West title and knocking the Broncos out of the playoffs.

It probably won't snow this time. And it's time for John Elway to stop letting leads fritter away. BRONCOS, 17-7.

Miami (minus 2) at San Diego

Marino vs. Fouts. Let's see ...71-70? 65-60? Or only an NBA halftime score, like 51-48?

Nah. Defense reigns. DOLPHINS 41-35.

Eagles (plus 5½) at Washington.

A curious game.

The Redskins tend to start slowly and Buddy Ryan may know how to harry Jay Schroeder.

Until further notice, a starting backfield of Junior Tautalatasi and Mike Waters doesn't scare anyone, particularly behind the Eagles' offensive offensive line. REDSKINS 24-10.

Jets (minus 5½) at Buffalo

Welcome to the NFL, Jim Kelly. That's Mark Gastineau lying on your nose and Joe Klecko with his paws around your ankle. JETS 31-13.

Other Games (HOME TEAMS IN CAPS):

NEW ENGLAND (minus 9½) 27, Indianapolis 13.

San Francisco (minus 9) 31, TAMPA BAY 13.

MINNESOTA (minus 3½) 26, Detroit 20.

L.A. Rams (minus 3) 27, ST LOUIS 21.

NEW ORLEANS (minus 3) 17, Atlanta 10

Black fans set boycott for Beaumont football

Promotions of white coaches cause concern

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — Blacks here plan to start a boycott of high school football games today, but black athletes say they will still battle it out on the field when football season opens.

Last March, some black community leaders drafted a statement condemning Beaumont Independent School District practices, which they said promoted white coaches and administrators over black ones. Friday is the first day called by the group for the boycott, offically termed a "stay away."

"I am going to participate in the stay away," said black school board member Zenobia Bush. "My daughter is very upset because I am going to make her stay away from games. As long as the protest movement goes on, I will not let her go."

Ms. Bush's daughter is a sophomore at West Brook High School.

Ms. Bush resigned as secretary of the Beaumont school district Wednesday to protest what she termed racially segregated policies, but will remain on the board as a member.

Part of the controversy started in February, when the school board merged four Beaumont high schools into two. There were two black and two white football coaches at those schools. Both white coaches got head coaching positions after the mergers of South Park with West Brook, and Charlton-Pollard with French — the latter two forming Central High School.

"The coaches have a valid protest that the district just won't listen to," Ms. Bush said. "They (school officials) are closing their eyes and hoping it will go away."

But black football players say they will continue to play.

"I have relatives who don't want me to play," said Central senior Darrin West. "But I'm playing for myself. They didn't want me to play because of racial problems like blacks getting demoted. But if one man's better than the other, I hope he gets the job. That's how I feel."

Sophomore Jack Read, one of six white players out of 51 practicing at Central, said no one has mentioned racial problems.

"We just went through two-a-days together and we're all just getting along," he said.

Mike Mitchell, who was head coach at Charlton-Pollard and is now head junior high varsity coach at Central, says there is no racial problem among the coaches or players.

The other black school board member, Johnnie Ware, said the only participants in the boycott he knew of would be the ones who engineered it.

"I plan to go to the game Friday because I'm on the school board which sponsors (the team)," he said.

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar rose moderately today against most major currencies in Europe's foreign exchange markets. Gold prices rose.

Dealers said currency trading was quiet and not much movement was expected during the day. They thought the American currency would fall over the next few trading sessions.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar fell to a closing 154.75 yen from Thursday's 155.05. Later, in London, it was quoted at 155.00 yen.

Other dollar rates at midmorning, compared with late Thursday:

- 2.0303 West German marks, up from 2.0270
- 1.6450 Swiss francs, up from 1.6375
- 6.6525 French francs, up from 6.6425
- 2.2863 Dutch guilders, down from 2.2875
- 1,399.50 Italian lire, up from 1,399.00
- 1.3865 Canadian dollars, down from 1.38725

In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.4995, cheaper for buyers than Thursday's $1.5060.

After the hectic surge in gold which rose to three-year highs in Europe on Wednesday, bullion opened in London at a bid price of $413.00 a troy ounce, compared with late Thursday's $406.00. At midmorning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $418.25.

In Zurich, the noon gold bid price was $418.25, up from $406.00 late Thursday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold rose by $8.62 to close at a bid $413.13.

Gold was quoted in New York late Thursday at a bid $409.75, up from $403.50 late Wednesday.

Platinum prices rose again in London because of continuing anxiety that South African supplies might not be maintained during the current unrest.

The London free market in platinum was trading today at $662.00 a troy ounce, up from $644.50 late Thursday.

T-bill yield falls

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interest rates on short-term Treasury securities fell again sharply in the weekly auction Tuesday to the lowest level since mid-1977.

The Treasury Department sold $7.82 billion in three-month bills at an average discount rate of 5.12 percent, down from 5.32 percent last week. Another $7.82 billion was sold in six-month bills at an average discount rate of 5.17 percent, down from 5.35 percent last week.

The rates were the lowest since three-month bills sold for 5.04 percent on July 1, 1977, and six-month bills averaged 5.17 percent on June 13, 1977.

Unemployment rate declines

WASHINGTON (AP) — Civilian joblessness, falling for the third straight month, dropped to 6.8 percent in August as a six-month slide in manufacturing employment ended, the government said today.

Employment rose to a record 110,155,000 as 240,000 to 275,000 jobs were created last month, the Labor Department said.

That sent the unemployment rate down 0.1 percentage point to its lowest level since January. The unemployment rate has fallen 0.5 percentage point since May.

The largest job gains last month were recorded for business and health care services, where 65,000 jobs were created. Construction jobs were up 55,000, a figure that matched the July gain.

But the best news was in manufacturing jobs. The department's monthly survey of business establishments showed such employment rising for the first time since January, adding 19,000 jobs to bring total factory employment to 19,135,000. Some 350,000 factory jobs had been lost through July.

"This is a welcome change from the string of successive job losses we experienced" earlier in the year, Janet L. Norwood, the commissioner of labor statistics, said in testimony prepared for the congressional Joint Economic Committee.

"Moreover, almost 60 percent of the industries ... had employment increases over the month," she added, noting that overtime averaged 3.5 hours per week in factories, another positive employment sign.

Job losses in the ailing oil and gas industry, however, again surged last month. The Bureau of Labor Statistics said 10,000 workers lost their jobs in August, compared with a decline of 4,000 in July. In the first half of the year, industry losses had averaged 20,000-25,000 a month.

As for last month's overall job growth, the department said its monthly household survey showed an increase of 275,000. But the separate payroll survey put the gain at 200,000, a figure that would have been 240,000 were it not for several strikes, officials said.

The household survey considers strikers as being employed, while the payroll survey does not.

Another unemployment calculation, which includes the nearly 1.7 million members of the armed services stationed in the United States, stood at 6.7 percent in August, also a drop of 0.1 percentage point from July. The military total was up 25,000, the first increase in four months.

State jobless rate rises

By JIM WARREN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas unemployment rate dropped slightly in August, but the improvement does not signal any major upsurge in the job market, the Texas Empolyment Commission reported Friday.

The statewide unemployment rate in August stood at 9.1 percent, compared to 9.3 percent in July, said James Barnes of the TEC's Labor Market Analysis division. But the employment situation actually grew worse in August, Barnes said, with the seasonal adjustment figured in.

A year ago, the unemployment rate was 7 percent in Texas.

"Normally, there is a little bit of a decrease (in August) because of the student drop-off in the job market," Barnes said. "There's a good deal of seasonaly adjustment in July, but in August we don't have much adjustment so the seasonal drop isn't that surprising."

Seasonally adjusted, the unemployment rate in August was 9.2 percent, while the adjusted rate in July was 8.7 percent. Texas continued to lag behind the rest of the nation, which posted an adjusted rate of 6.8 in August and an actual unemployment rate of 6.7 percent.

"Things really aren't any better than they were last month," Barnes said. "In fact, we're probably a little worse."

The TEC will not have August city unemployment rates until later this month, Barnes said.

Dow Jones jumps to record high

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Oil and technology stocks came to life Thursday, spurring the Dow Jones industrial average to a record close, and producing the strongest trading volume on Wall Street in six months.

With oil issues having a particularly strong influence, the Dow rose 38.38 points, to 1,919.71, coasting past its previous record of 1,909.03, set on July 2.

Investors, apparently becoming more and more convinced that oil prices will not slide back to the depressed levels of earlier in the summer, snapped up energy issues. And hints that the nation's economy might be strengthening helped the shares of technology and other concerns sensitive to economic growth.

"It feels good," said Jon Groveman, head of equity trading at Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co. "The question right now is whether this is the beginning of a new move or the end of the old move."

With the Iran-Iraq war heating up, and the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries able to push oil prices 60 percent higher than they were four weeks ago, energy stocks have experienced an impressive revival of late.

On top of that, said Frederick P. Leuffer, an analyst at Cyrus J. Lawrence Inc., institutional investors have been ignoring oil stocks during the third quarter, and now have to fill a gap in their portfolios before the period ends. "They don't want to show their clients that they hold none of the best performers of the quarter," he said.

Most oil issues were up sharply, and the Dow was helped by Exxon's 1¾-point jump to 70¾. Chevron's 1⅛-point gain to 46⅝ and Texaco's ½-point rise to 35. These are three of the 30 stocks in the Dow index, and two others, USX Corp., and Du Pont, also have substantial oil and gas holdings. USX rose 1, to 20⅝, and Du Pont gained 3¾, to 87.

Occidental Petroleum, trading ex-dividend, led the active list for the second consecutive day, falling ⅛, to 29½. Mobil was up 1½, to 38¾, while Phillips Petroleum was the second-busiest stock, up ½, to 11⅛.

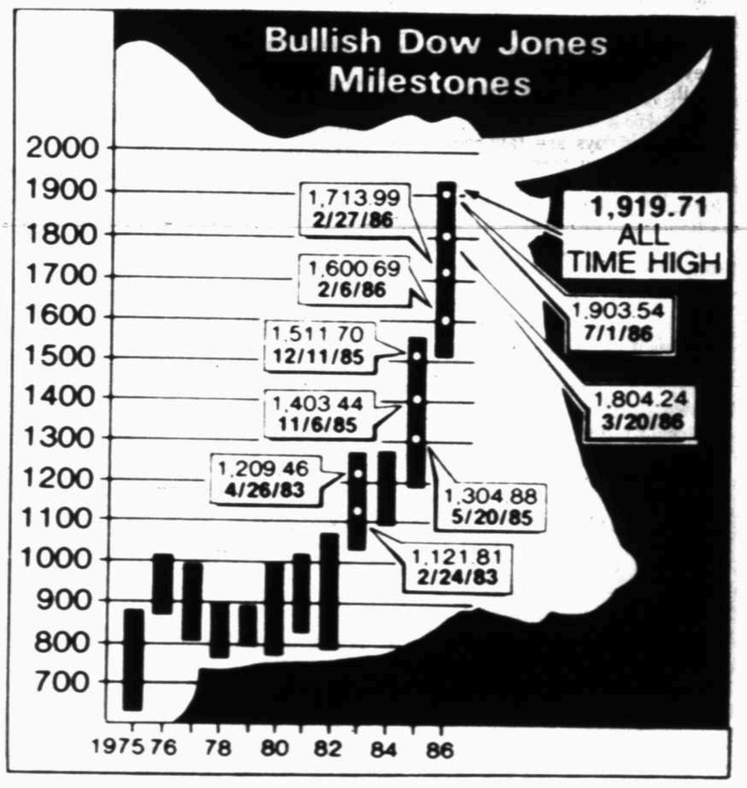

The rally on Wall Street was not limited, however, to just oil issues or the 30 Dow stocks. The New York Stock Exchange index rose 2.01, to 145.75, and the Standard & Poor's 500-stock index gained 3.75, to 253.83 — both records.

The average share on the Big Board gained 56 cents, and advancing issues swamped losers, 1,289 to 435. Trading volume, with only moderate help from buying programs, soared to 189.4 million shares, making it the seventh-busiest session ever.

It was also the most activity since 199 million shares changed hands last March 21. Wednesday's volume was only 154.3 million.

While stock prices were up from the start of trading Thursday, the market was given a nudge in the afternoon by rumors that the United States and its allies might coordinate interest rate cuts. It was also helped by a relatively positive forecast issued by Robert Prechter, a widely followed market analyst.

The American Stock Exchange index, with its heavy representation of energy stocks, rose 3.60, to 277.02. And in over-the-counter trading, the Nasdaq index jumped 2.15, to 381.03.

Speaker says cooperation key to state's future

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA - Retired Admiral Bobby Inman, president and chief executive officer of Austin-based Microelectronics and Computer Technology Corporation (MCC) told those attending a Midland-Odessa leadership alumni gathering at UTPB he plans to leave MCC.

"My own interest has indeed changed," Inman said. "I consider my job at MCC about done. In the not too distant future I will go on to a second phase and I'm going to be looking at how do we focus, not on creating it (technology), but on applying it and applying it faster and I hope to do that in Texas," Inman stated.

"We were attracted to come to Texas," Inman said, "as much by the can-do attitude as by anything else."

Inman opened his remarks to the joint Midland-Odessa leadership alumni group by saying, "I have heard about the legendary competition between these two cities. I'm not unfamiliar with legendary competitions," he said, recalling that as a UT Austin graduate he has a lot of friends and acquaintances who went to Texas A&M.

To demonstrate his point, Inman explained the site selection process for MCC, noting that 57 cities and 27 states vied for the location.

March 18, 1983, he said, the final hearing before selection opened in Chicago and faced "huge delegations" from six states, including Texas.

"When it came time for Texas, the new governor came in to make a presentation before we were to hear from the three cities that were bidding, Austin, Dallas and San Antonio," he said.

Inman recalled the Texas governor had two gentlemen with him, the UT chancellor and the Texas A&M chancellor. "They were very articulate in working together," Inman said, noting that he stopped the proceedings to tell his 11 fellow members of the committee "that they were watching a minor miracle, that in my day, the presidents of those systems would have scarcely have spoken to one another and here they were, talking about working together," he stated.

"That's clearly what's also happening in Midland-Odessa," he said, "and that's a very important part of the future for this region. And then, when that Midland-Odessa connections is also working together with Dallas-Fort Worth and Austin-San Antonio and Houston-College Station, maybe we'll get this state oriented in the direction of its real future," stated Inman.

The MCC head said he sees oil, gas and agriculture continuing to be important to the State of Texas, "but they're going to change," he said.

"Change is being produced much faster than we are ready for," Inman said. "The collapse in the price of oil, controlled by foreigners who have little interest in our own prosperity, agriculture facing the reality that we're dealing with large surpluses around the world and we're dealing with changing fast-changing processes in agriculture," he stated.

"In the very near future," Inman said, "agriculture and energy are going to be very high tech enterprises and their demands are going to parallel the demands of us in the state, for indeed, for the future, it's our human resources that take first place, not the bounty of the land," he said.

Inman observed that when we were primarily depending on resources of the land "we needed a few people with vision and capital, but the bulk of demand for the human resource side was: good work ethic and good physical stamina."

"The world that beckons out there," Inman said, "the high tech impact for survival in agriculture and energy and all the other areas where growth beckons, the demands on human resources are much greater than they have ever been in the past. The first line of defense, the first line of defense for growth," he said, "is investment in education at all levels."

Inman stated that, "We're going to have to move vocational education up to the post secondary level, draw as large a percentage of that student body (as we can) into breadth courses."

The reason students must have much broader educational backgrounds, he said, is that even if they don't go to college "they're likely to change their career field four or five times in their working adult lives," stated Inman.

The retired admiral said he had looked at the Austin school system and was amazed that there was a 25 percent dropout rate. "Then I looked

Taiwan agrees to purchase U.S. cotton

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fabric manufacturers in Taiwan have agreed to buy $75 million worth of American cotton, most of it grown in Texas, U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm said Thursday.

About 70 percent of the cotton to be bought is expected to be provided by Texas growers, Gramm said.

He said the Taiwan Cotton Spinners Association will buy 700,000 bales of raw cotton fiber for $75 million.

"This marks the largest purchase by Taiwan in at least five years. In fact, last year Taiwan bought only 35,500 bales of U.S. cotton," the senator said.

The sale will be handled by the Southern Division of the American Cotton Shippers Association, which includes Texas, Arkansas, Missouri, Louisiana, Tenmnessee and Oklahoma.

Incentives offered by car dealers came too late to boost domestic auto sales for the last half of August.

Nation's retailers report sales gains

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

The nation's major retailers reported Thursday improved sales for August, led by a round of back-to-school buying in the week before Labor Day.

The increases come after months of sluggish sales and suggest a long-awaited turnaround in consumer spending, according to some analysts. The August sales increases ranged from a 4.3 percent sales gain for Sears, Roebuck & Co. to a 40 percent jump in August sales for Wal-Mart Stores.

Overall, sales rose about 6.7 percent in August, compared to a year ago, and sales were up 3 percent from July, said Edward Johnson, director of the Johnson Redbook Service in New York.

"It's a nice indication that consumers aren't going to sleep," said Johnson, who expects moderate sales increases for the rest of the year. Some analysts cautioned, however, that record high levels of consumer debt and an expected boost in auto sales later this year could combine to slow the pace of retail sales during the last four months of the year.

Sarah A. Stack, an analyst with the Los Angeles investment company of Bateman Eichler, Hill Richards, said that overall "the sales gains are just moderate."

Retailers said they were encouraged by a surge in back-to-school buying during the last week of August, and several chains said results exceeded expectations. "Back-to-school merchandise is selling well," said Bernard M. Fauber, chairman of Kmart, which reported a 7.4 percent year-to-year gain. "We expect fall sales to continue strong."

The back-to-school season, which normally runs from mid-August to mid-September, is viewed as a barometer for fall and winter sales.

James Newton, president of the Economic Perspectives market research company in Delaware, Ohio, said back-to-school sales were important because if consumers did not want to buy new merchandise then, "there's no reason why they'll want it at Christmas."

Several retailers, including J.C. Penney and Sears, said August sales were also helped by sales gains in home furnishings. Analysts have expected home furnishing sales to pick up as a result of the increase in home sales that has resulted from lower interest rates.

Car sales below 1985 levels

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

DETROIT — Those discount financing programs offered by the domestic auto makers that have sent consumers rushing into dealer showrooms came too late to boost monthly sales in August.

Sales of U.S.-built cars in the final 10 days of August were the second-best ever posted for the period but still down 12 percent from the record pace in August 1985, the auto manufacturers reported Thursday.

Industry officials were quick to point out that the new incentive programs offering two-year car loans ranging from 2.9 percent by General Motors and Ford to 0.0 percent by American Motors were introduced very late in the month and will not show up fully until September sales reports.

Domestic new car sales skyrocketed to record levels late last summer when the manufacturers, in a move similar to this year's round of incentives, introduced 7.7 percent discount financing on left-over 1985 models. But those programs were kicked off by General Motors on Aug. 15, compared to an Aug. 28 introduction date this year.

"We couldn't catch last year's sales record for August 21-30 because it was the first full sales period under the 7.7 percent program," said James G. Vorhes, vice president of GM sales and service. "However, with only three days of sales impact from the new program, this year's passenger car deliveries were the second highest for August 21-31 in history."

Midland Southwest sees higher earnings

From Staff Reports

Midland-based Midland Southwest reported results for the second quarter of 1986 were better than for the same quarter of 1985.

However, the company had to take a non-cash, non-recurring charge of $3.5 million, writing off the excess net book values of oil and gas properties, a charge triggered by sales price reductions and changes in reserve estimates in the second quarter.

Midland Southwest saw total revenues of $5.3 million for the second quarter, down from $6.023 for the same quarter of 1985. Total costs and expenses were also reduced, from $7.2 million in 1985, to $5.8 million in 1986. Net loss, before extraordinary item, was $514,000 for the quarter, a 57 percent reduction from the $1.19 million loss in 1985.

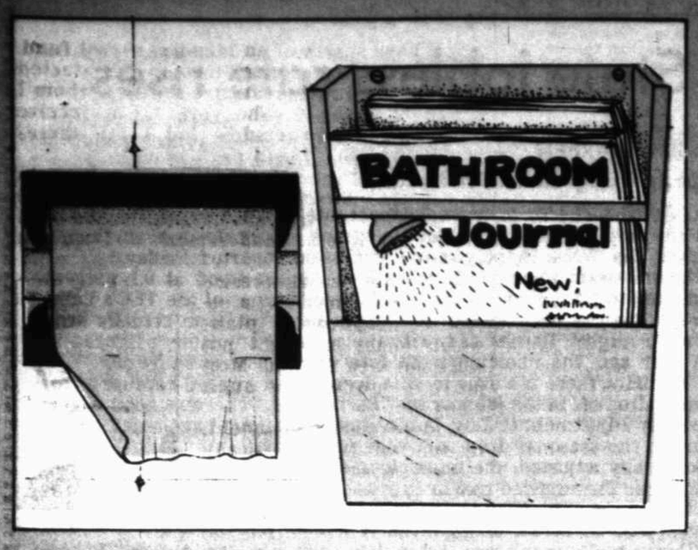

This translates into a second quarter loss per common share of $1.19, up from $.27 for the same quarter in 1985.

For the first six months of 1986, ended June 30, the company had revenues of $10.4 million, down from $11.3 million in 1985, and costs of $11.9 million, down from $15.2 million a year ago. Loss for the first six months was $1.4 million, down from $3.9 million last year.

"Many of the company's customers in its contract drilling and equipment and supply sales segments have severely reduced their spending budgets based on a revised outlook for the industry," Gail A. Siler, chairman and president of the company noted in his letter to shareholders. "While it is difficult for the company to operate these segments on a positive cash flow basis, every effort is being made to remain competitive and operate effectively."

He continued: "TRhere is room for cautious optimism. The OPEC producers recently agreed on a short-term production control plan which has had a positive influence on crude oil prices and could result in even further increases if a long-term unified position can be maintained. The company has recently witnessed an increase in contract drilling activity. We remain firm inour resolve to compete agressively in the markets we serve."

WHAT'S NEW IN BUSINESS

Private reading

One in three Americans read while in the bathroom.

Those statistics have inspired Michael S. Cohen to publish The Bathroom Journal, a digest-size periodical that will offer a selective mix of articles on life-styles, health and the arts.

"We want to become a fixture in the bathroom, just like the toilet," says the Cleveland businessman.

The 26-year-old is already flush with excitement over the possibilities such a magazine offers, going so far as to quit his job to dedicate his full time to the project. To date, he has sold $23,000 worth of subscriptions for the publication.

According to Cohen, the first issue will feature stories on high-tech bathtubs and the 25th anniversary of Mr. Bubble bubble bath.

Subscribers will also receive a plastic magazine rack suitable for mounting — presumably next to the Charmin.

What's in a burger?

Responding to pressure from attorneys general in 12 states, five of the nation's largest fast-food restaurants have agreed to disclose to consumers what is in their food.

McDonald's, Burger King, Jack-in-the-Box, Kentucky Fried Chicken, and Wendy's restaurants agreed to disclose calorie counts, ingredients and food additives, as well as protein, carbohydrate, cholesterol and sodium levels of their food in company-owned outlets.

Each restaurant also will provide a hotline to answer consumer questions, and franchisees can provide the information on a voluntary basis, California officials said.

Most restaurants and fast-food chains provide nutritional information only from their corporate headquarters and only to consumers who request it.

JOBLESS

The department said the overall civilian employment growth was concentrated among white workers. The unemployment rate for whites fell from 6.0 percent to 5.8 percent. The rate for adult men was down from 6.2 percent to 5.9 percent.

The jobelss rate for black workers rose from 14.0 percent to 14.6 percent after declining from 15.1 percent in June.

The department offered these rates for other population groups:

—Adult women, 6.1 percent, unchanged.

—Teenagers, 17.7 percent, up from 17.5.

—Black teens, 37.4 percent, down from 41.6.

—Hispanics, 11.0, up from 10.5.

Overall, the number of unemployed Americans dropped 163,000 in August to 8,027,000. That figure does not include the estimated 1.1 million "discouraged workers" who have given up looking for jobs and are not counted in the unemployment rate.

Prior to today's report, several economists had said there were indications that declines in factory employment may be coming to an end despite the record $18 billion trade deficit in July.

John Hagens, an economist for Chase Econometrics of Bala Cynwyd, Pa., said Americans could be expected to resume buying more U.S. goods, rather than imported, because of the rising value of the dollar.

Michael Evans, who runs an economic forecasting firm in Washington, agreed that the end to long-term manufacturing job losses may be near.

"Things are getting better despite the bad trade numbers," Evans said. "While foreign goods may maintain their current market share, I don't think they are going to increase it anymore."

Meanwhile, the economists said the service-producing sectors of the economy continues to produce tens of thousands of new jobs each month.

SALES

For the month, domestic new car sales were off 6.1 percent. Of Detroit's Big Three, only Chrysler posted a sales gain, up 6.2 percent. GM and Ford said their sales were down 8.7 percent and 9.3 percent, respectively.

Despite sales declines by the top Japanese makes, import sales were up 13.1 percent in August.

Analysts said the increase by imports was due almost entirely to the success of new entries into the market. Hyundai, the Korean car company, has been reporting increased monthly sales since it began selling cars in the U.S. in February.

Of the major Japanese imports, Toyota said its sales were off 17.7 percent, Nissan's sales dropped 2.9 percent and Honda reported a 1.9 percent decline. Mazda and Subaru also reported declines for the month, down 8.9 percent and 12.4 percent, respectively.

INMAN

at another statistic that was even more startling," he said. "Nine out of 10 inmates in our prisons are school dropouts."

"So there are a great many reasons why we've got to focus on keeping a much larger number (in school) and raising their general knowledge level."

In addition to keeping more students in school, Inman said, "We've got to put in place training and retraining facilities to quickly shape, to give in a very few weeks, the specific skills that people are going to need to move into the workplace, whether it's going to be an automated factory, an automated office of an insurance company, or a service industry," he said.

In addition to providing students with broader general education, Inman said foreign language programs should be learned if we hope to successfully compete in the international market place. He cited the example of a small Illinois acity that had a sister city relationship with a Japanese town. When a major Japanese manufacturer was looking for a location the Illinois city was chosen as the site because the school system offered Japanese as an optional course, Inman said.

Hunts ordered to transfer bankruptcy cases to Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — A federal judge Thursday ordered the Hunt brothers of Texas to take steps to transfer their bankruptcy cases from New Orleans to Dallas.

The Hunts responded by filing a motion seeking the removal of the judge, U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders, from all legal matters pertaining to Hunt interests.

Sanders decision, issued in a written opinion, was a blow to the Texas billionaires whose lawyers had argued they should be allowed to choose the site of their bankruptcy cases.

Sanders ordered the Hunts to file a motion for the transfer by noon next Thursday. Failure to comply is punishable by civil contempt, Sanders' order said.

The judge also ordered Hunt companies to file at 4 p.m. each day a status report on their compliance with his order.

Hunt attorney Stephen Gordon said it would be up to the court in New Orleans to approve the move to Dallas. He also said the Hunts will appeal Sanders' order to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Jerry P. Jones, a lead attorney for the banks, was in a meeting Thursday but said he was not commenting to the press about the judge's order, according to his secretary, Dyan Wilson.

Placid Oil Co., one of its subsidiaries and a trust of William Herbert Hunt, filed petitions under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy laws last Friday in New Orleans.

In requesting that Sanders be removed from hearing cases involving them, the Hunts' motion said: "It is a matter of public record that the Hunts have a long history of advocating political positions opposite to Judge Sanders." The Hunts have long been conservative politically.

Lawyers for the Hunts argued Wednesday before Sanders that the companies have a right to have their bankruptcy petitions heard in New Orleans, especially since Louisiana is where most of the assets are. "That's where the property lies and it's very inconvenient and difficult" to bring witnesses to Dallas, Gordon said Thursday.

But banks seeking payment of $1.5 billion in debts from the Hunts said the bankruptcies could be handled more efficiently in Dallas.

Hunt, Nelson Bunker Hunt and Lamar Hunt own Placid, one of the world's largest private oil companies.

Earlier, Placid Oil, several Hunt trusts and Penrod Drilling Co., one of the world's largest drilling ventures, sued 23 banks because they refused to refinance loans to the company, which alleged a conspiracy to destroy Placid and another Hunt company, Penrod Drilling, one of the world's largest drilling companies.

Those same banks want to foreclose on millions of dollars worth of property owned by Placid. Placid's bankruptcy blocked foreclosure.

In his 10-page opinion, Sanders said that the largest unsecured creditors of the Hunt companies are in Texas, while only one of the top 20 creditors is in Louisiana.

U.S. will seek further curtailments in steel imports

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States will ask Taiwan, Sweden and Canada to curtail surging steel imports, which could undermine President Reagan's plan to give steel makers relief from foreign competition, trade officials say.

U.S. Trade Representative Clayton Yeutter said Thursday that negotiators will request talks with the three nations immediately.

"I am greatly disturbed that in July, we registered the largest single monthly (import) increase among nations not covered by the president's steel program since it began in September 1984," Yeutter said in a prepared statement.

"This cannot continue. Countries without voluntary restraint agreements must not be allowed to undermine the program by taking advantage of restraints negotiated with other nations," he said.

In 1984, the administration embarked on a program designed to reduce the foreign share of the American steel market from about 25 percent to about 18.5 percent, except for an additional 1.7 million tons of semifinished steel.

The program, which relies on 18 voluntary restraint agreements with leading steel-producing nations, succeeded in holding imports to 23.6 percent of the U.S. market during 1985, its first full year.

Canada, which has traditionally held as much as 3 percent of the American steel market, was not asked to participate in the program, in part because its industrial economy is so closely linked with that of the United States.

Taiwan and Sweden were not included because their steel imports were not considered significant. Each traditionally holds less than 1 percent of the American market.

But Canadian steel imports increased 24 percent in July, capturing about 4 percent of the U.S. market, according to Yeutter. Imports from Sweden and Taiwan increased 53 percent and 33 percent, respectively, although they still hold less than a 1 percent market share, Yeutter said.

He said that some of the July increases were attributable to seasonal shipping patterns, but that he wanted to ensure that "this blip does not become permanent."

"We are requesting these meetings to make our trading partners understand the current conditions in the U.S. market and to demonstrate that maintenance of their traditional market share will require a cutback in shipments during the remainder of 1986," Yeutter said.

Yeutter's action was swiftly praised by Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., chairman of the Senate Steel Caucus, who called it "good news for the domestic steel industry."

The domestic steel industry blames sluggish demand and subsidized foreign imports as primary reasons for plant shutdowns and bankruptcy filings. Steel industry employment is down 56 percent since 1977, from about 452,000 to about 200,000, according to the United Steelworkers.

Texas Air lowers fares, says it will purchase Eastern

ATLANTA (AP) — Texas Air Corp.'s Continental Airlines subsidiary, freshly emerged from bankruptcy protection, announced $99 New York-Hawaii and transcontinental fares Thursday, as well as incentives that include travel credits for purchases on a company-sponsored Visa card.

Though Continental described it as a unique and aggressive marketing campaign, industry analysts called the move "an advertising gimmick" and "more smoke than fire."

Meanwhile, Frank Lorenzo, Texas Air's chairman, said the company's stalled $676 million purchase of ailing Eastern Airlines will be completed this fall. However he refused to specify how the airlines would resolve the Department of Transportation's rejection of the merger.

Lorenzo and Continental executives spoke in Atlanta, where they were attending a convention of travel agents. Texas Air is based in Houston.

Continental said it would issue, in conjunction with Columbus, Ohio-based BankOne, a Visa card that allows users to accumulate mileage in the airline's frequent flier program, at the rate of one mile per dollar amount charged.

The card will be issued for six months free use, said Continental's marketing vice president, James V. O'Donnell. After that, there will be a $35 annual fee. He did not specify the interest rate but called it competitive.

The airline also announced a $99 New York-to-Hawaii one-way fare, but passengers must buy round-trip, nonrefundable tickets and travel on Mondays or Wednesdays. All travel must begin by Nov. 30.

In addition, the airline said it would offer a $99 transcontinental fare good through Dec. 15. Restrictions include one-month advance purchase, a Saturday night stay and travel on Tuesdays or Wednesdays.

Other incentives were directed toward college students and senior citizens.

"That's pretty limited. ... there's more smoke than fire," said Morten S. Beyer, president of Avmark Inc., an aviation consulting company in Arlington, Va. "They've built a pretty high fence around that."

"I think it's more showbiz that anything else," Beyer said in a telephone interview. "The frequent flyer doesn't constitute more than 5 percent to 10 percent of the market and (the program) doesn't do anything for the man in the street."

Louis Marckesano, an airline analyst with Janney Montgomery Scott Inc. in Philadelphia, said by telephone that the fares are "more of an advertising gimmick than anything."

Marckesano said the company would need to have 70 percent to 80 percent of its seats filled to make money at the lower fares. Continental said 67.6 percent of its seats were filled in July.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Mutual fund share values known to fall periodically

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I have shares of an income mutual fund. As I am in need of more income, I contacted the registered representative through whom I bought the shares. She says I can receive monthly checks but adds that a few shares would have to be sold each month.

As I see it, the number of shares I own would be depleted. But she claims that would not be the case, as the dividends the fund pays would offset that. I do not understand this. Can you explain?

Doyle

A. The registered representative is recommending a periodic withdrawal plan, which might or might not work out well for you. Most mutual funds have such plans.

Under this arrangement, the fund would automatically redeem enough full and fractional shares each month to provide you with a check. Meanwhile, the dividends the fund declares would automatically be reinvested to buy more full and fractional shares.

It stands to reason that, if the dividends at least equal your withdrawals, the number of shares you own will not be depleted. But, if your withdrawals exceed the dividends, your shares will gradually diminish in number.

However, there's a more important factor to take into consideration — the total value of your investment. The value of the mutual fund's shares can rise or fall, taking the total value of your investment up or down.

If the fund's "total return" — dividends, plus an increase in share value — is greater than your withdrawals, the total value of your investment will rise. On the other hand, if the total return is less than your withdrawals, your investment will shrink in value.

Remember that there have been periods when mutual fund share values fell, thereby producing negative total returns. There will be similar periods in the future. Over the long term, however, the vast majority of mutual funds have produced good total returns. So, as long as you don't set your withdrawal sights too high, you won't run a big risk by taking monthly checks.

My suggestion is to start by making withdrawals at an annual rate equal to 8 percent of the present value of your fund holdings. Then, if the fund performs well and the value of your investment increases, raise your withdrawal rate. Just don't go too far out on the withdrawal limb.

• • •

Q. Rather than take money out of a mutual fund gradually, wouldn't it be better to redeem all my fund shares when prices go up?

A. Absolutely, assuming you know when that's going to happen. If you have that clairvoyance, you shouldn't be investing in a mutual fund. You should be running one. You would do better than lots of fund managers.

• • •

Q. Can I transfer my investment from a mutual fund to a credit union, without paying taxes?

A. Yes, if you have a loss. No, if you have a profit.

To get your money out of the mutual fund, you must redeem the fund shares you own. The difference between your "basis" — the amount you invested in those shares — and the money you receive from the redemption is either a profit or a loss.

If you have profit, it's taxable as a capital gain.

• • •

Q. We recently became great-grandparents for the first time and would like to invest $2,000 for the baby's college education. What type of mutual fund would you suggest?

A. The natural choice is a no-load growth mutual fund.

No-load means there's no commission charge when you buy the fund shares. And steer clear of funds with 12b-1 plans and/or rear-end redemption fees. Those infamous 12b-1 plans increase funds' expenses and reduce share values. Rear-end fees take bites when shares are cashed in.

Growth mutual funds hold common stocks with past records and/or future potential of rising in value, taking the fund share values higher.

Have the fund shares registered in gift to minors act form, with one of the baby's parents as custodian of the account.

Man pursues perfect karate chop

SIOUX CITY, Iowa (AP) — Tim Thomas smashed up more 10,000 board feet of perfectly good pine over the weekend, reducing the wood to truckloads of rubble in pursuit of a world record for breaking boards karate style.

"My hands are pretty sore," the 26-year-old martial arts entrepreneur said Tuesday. "There's quite a lot of swelling, but they started coming around a lot better than I thought."

The South Sioux City, Neb., man started bashing the one-inch thick, eight-inch long boards at 4 p.m. Sunday and would have broken the Guinness Book of World Records mark of 10,065 boards at 7:30 Labor Day morning if he hadn't had to wait for a fund-raising ceremony.

Thomas was breaking boards to raise money for the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

Founder of LTV still a fighter

DALLAS (AP) — Jim Ling survived a debilitating disease that left him temporarily paralyzed, almost killed him and still gives him pain.

He endured the humiliation of seeing more than one new brainchild go bankrupt and suffered the loss of control of LTV Corp., the giant $8.2 billion steel-aerospace-defense company he created, then watched fall to bankruptcy 16 years after his departure.

Today, the man who wrote the book on building conglomerates remains a vigorous fighter, seemingly undaunted by his setbacks.

"I believe there are some opportunities in the reorganization of oil and gas companies and certain opportunities in the aeronautical field," he says, without being specific.

Then he launches into an 80 mph off-the-record monologue about his future plans, shifting and changing courses so many times it is virtually impossible to follow his train of thought.

Ling, the "L" in LTV, says he was surprised when the parent of the nation's second-largest steel company filed for reorganization July 17 under federal bankruptcy laws.

Though he has been quoted as saying the company should have trimmed its steel assets instead of taking on more with the purchase of Republic Steel in 1983, Ling says he won't second-guess the management at the company he founded.

"My 15 years speaks for itself," he says.

LTV (previously Ling-Temco-Vought) got its start 39 years ago when Ling, with Navy electronics training but no high school diploma, formed his own electrical contracting business.

Jim Ling

He had quit high school in Hugo, Okla., at the age of 15, saying he had enough credits to graduate but lacked the patience for a diploma.

"I probably read 10 times more than most people. My appetite was insatiable to learn all about the environment I was in. That was technical as well as political," he says, explaining his remarkable process of self-education.

Under his leadership, LTV acquired Chance Vought Aircraft; Greatamerica Corp., the parent of Braniff Airways; National Car Rental Co.; and, finally, Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp., which many believe proved to be his undoing because of the debt it created.

Ling insists the $425 million steel acquisition was not really the reason he was forced to resign as chairman in 1970 in what has been called the "Palace Revolt" so often that even Ling refers to it that way.

But he refuses to discuss the underlying reasons, saying it would "not be productive."

At age 63, Ling still is dark-haired, with piercing brown eyes that look from behind dark-framed glasses.

He is president of Hill Investors Inc., a private investment company he doesn't want to discuss. He complains that he's already pestered enough by securities brokers without publicity.

Dubbed by national magazines in his heyday as the "Big Dealer from Big D" and "The Merger King," Ling these days works in a modest building that blends into the background of the downtown skyline. He has long since sold the $3 million mansion he built, referred to by at least one friend as the "Taj Mahal."

His downtown suite of offices is small, but decorated with Chinese urns and Chinese floral prints, heavy paintings and dark furniture.

When he walks the short distance from his office to the receptionist's desk, the remnants of his terrible disease aren't even noticeable. But Ling calls his walk the "Guillain-Barre shuffle," thanks to remaining paralysis in both feet. A painful burning sensation lingers as well.

In 1981, Ling was diagnosed as having Guillain-Barre syndrome, which affects the nervous system, causing numbness and paralysis.

At the peak of his illness, he could move only an eyelid and required a tracheotomy, a respirator and intravenous feeding.

Cookie business not always sweet

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — When the smell of freshly baked chocolate chip cookies first drifted out of Debbi Fields' small shop in Palo Alto nine years ago, not a single customer traced it back to the door of Mrs. Fields Cookies.

By the end of that morning, Fields knew she was well on the way to losing a bet with her investment counselor husband, Randy, who told her she would do less than $50 in business her first day.

"Here I am armed with all this belief that it's going to be great, it's going to be wonderful and I'm going to have a lot of fun ... and I didn't have a single customer," Fields told 2,100 businesswomen gathered in Los Angeles at the Governor's Conference on Women in Business.

"It looked very obvious to me that I was failing," she said. So Fields loaded a tray with her cookies and walked down the street giving them away. It worked.

"People followed me down the street and I made not only $50, I made $75!" said Fields, an upbeat, cheerleader-like speaker who occasionally had to compete with the crinkling of bags of Mrs. Fields Cookies that had been distributed in the audience.

The 29-year-old Fields told the audience that "I'm here to say that dreams do come true.

"You have to love what you're doing.... You've got to have fun, or else life is like one long dental appointment."

Today, the privately held Mrs. Fields Cookies has 350 stores, all company owned, in 25 states and Hong Kong, Japan, Australia, Canada and England. The Park City, Utah, company, with more than 3,000 "team members," will do more than $100 million in business this year and will operate about 420 stores by year-end, she said.

And gourmet chocolate chip cookies like those peddled in Fields' shops have achieved incredible popularity, becoming a snack of choice of young urban professionals.

But behind the success of the soft oversize cookies, she said, is a lean management structure and a computer system that lets the company track such things as daily sales and staffing at each store. Then there's Fields fanatical commitment to quality, backed by her many surprise visits to stores and her oft-repeated philosophy that "good enough never is."

The booming cookie business has drawn many entrepreneurs who have found that business is not always sweet, Fields said in a interview.

"There still are many, many cookie companies," she said. But "the business is perceived as being very easy, and yet it requires a lot of day-to-day management. It requires a lot of commitment to quality.

"What we have seen is the success (of the company) depends on people" because so much of the daily operations are "judgment calls" at the store level, Fields said. But if a manager wants to share an idea with Fields, "you don't have to talk to Mary, Joe, Bob and Mark to get to me."

Fields does not see any slowdown in her business as consumers seek out new waist-expanding treats, although she is constantly testing new recipes on her family for introduction into the stores.

Billionaire files suit after investment goes bankrupt

DALLAS (AP) — Billionaire computer magnate H. Ross Perot is seeking $200 million from a Dallas developer and a New York bank because he claims they hid financial information from him involving his investment in a Houston hotel.

Perot filed suit in state district court in Dallas against developer William T. Criswell and Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co. shortly after the Hyatt Regency West in Houston filed for bankruptcy protection on Tuesday.

The founder of Electronic Data Systems Corp. claims the bank, which provided construction financing for the hotel, and Criswell misled him, concealing financial information and diverting money from the hotel to a Dallas office building.

The 400-room hotel is owned by a Perot-Criswell partnership in which Criswell is general partner and Perot is a limited partner.

Sharon Criswell, president of Criswell Development and wife of the developer, said, "There is nothing in the situation that justifies this kind of a lawsuit."

She said the Hyatt Regency West had "outperformed its competitors ... But it's in Houston."

Perot said he personally guaranteed a $30 million loan to keep the Hyatt Regency West in Houston out of financial trouble.

But after Perot's loan was made, Criswell diverted his own money to a downtown Dallas building, the Allied Bank Tower, allowing the Houston hotel to slip into bankruptcy, Perot alleges.

He claims he was misled in investing his money and was never told the Hyatt Regency was on the brink of bankruptcy.

Perot invested $8.3 million to become a limited partner in the hotel in 1983 shortly after it opened. Last year, when the project was refinanced, Perot agreed to become a guarantor on a $30 million mortgage from Bank of America, attorneys for Perot and Criswell said.

Thomas Luce III, Perot's lawyer, said the suit claims that Criswell breached his obligation as general partner and his obligation to finance the hotel.

The hotel will remain open under the management of the Hyatt Regency Corp., Mrs. Criswell said.

Perot's attorney said he expects Bank of America will try to collect on its $30 million mortgage from Perot.

To regain market share, IBM introduces faster PC

New York Times News Service

BOSTON — In its recent efforts to ward off a raft of low-cost competitors in the personal computer market, the International Business Machines Corp. has slashed prices, tossed in free software and touted its tradition of reliability — all to little avail.

So the world's largest introduced a significantly faster version of its PC-XT — the first major change in its basic PC design since IBM entered the personal computer business in 1981 — in hopes of bringing some of its largest corporate customers back into the fold.

The $3,995 entry, called the PC-XT Model 286, is built around the Intel 80286 microprocessor, the same chip that powers IBM's top-of-the-line PC-AT.

IBM's move came just as several key competitors are preparing new assaults on the personal computer market. The Sperry Corp., which is merging with Burroughs, was scheduled to introduce its new entry this week, and the Digital Equipment Corp. is expected to begin its latest effort to enter the personal computer market with a system that runs IBM software and connects painlessly to Digital's own line of powerful VAX minicomputers.

And next week, the Compaq Computer Corp. will become the first of the leading personal computer manufacturers to introduce a model that uses the next-generation Intel chip — the 80386. The move is considered a risky one for Compaq, which usually waits for IBM to lead the way in leapfrogging existing technology.

Like the AT, the new PC-XT model allows several users to share the processing power of the Intel 80286 through remote terminals. And like the AT, the new unit's internal memory can be extended to more than 12 million bytes, or more than 20 times the memory of the older XT model.

The new PC is not likely to dampen speculation about IBM's next move. Company officials have already said they plan to make it far more difficult for low-cost competitors to copy IBM technology, which probably means a new, more powerful machine making extensive use of proprietary IBM chips rather than off-the-shelf parts.

THE MOST INFORMATIVE OIL SHOW EDITION EVER

Now in its most severe downturn in history, the domestic oil and gas industry awaits the turnaround. It has been down before, and will be up again, maybe sooner than we think. How did the industry get to this point and where do we go from here? The 1986 Oil Show Special Edition of the Midland Reporter-Telegram will attempt to answer these questions and more, with relevent stories, interviews and statistics about the long and near-term history of the domestic oil and gas industry. This edition promises to be one of the most informative oil editions ever produced by the Reporter-Telegram.

White says budget negotiations continuing

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Gov. Mark White said state leaders are not folding their tents up, despite the ending of a special session which fizzled out shortly after noon Thursday.

Another special session will begin Monday.

Gov. Mark White, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and House Speaker Gib Lewis each maintained that the Legislature had made some progress — but obviously not enough — toward solving the $3.5 billion state deficit.

All three stuck to the positions that produced the 30-day stalemate: White backing steep cuts and a temporary tax increase, Hobby calling for fewer cuts and more taxes and Lewis holding out for a tax-free, stopgap measure.

"We are not folding our tents and we're not going home," White said as he signed the resolution calling lawmakers back to town at 11 a.m. Monday.

"There should be no break in stride in these efforts. Things are moving in the right direction. Negotiations are ongoing, and we're going to continue working to hammer out the differences."

The governor has asked to address a joint session of the Legislature at noon Monday.

The special session cost taxpayers about $9,500 a day.

The House formally adjourned at 11:50 a.m. Thursday, with the Senate following suit a half hour later.

While most of their colleagues left town, the 10-man House-Senate panel negotiating $320 million in differences over budget cuts continued to meet for several hours.

The conferees said they hoped procedural maneuvers in the next session will allow them to quickly continue where they left off.

"Even though we were not able to do it all in 30 days, we made progress," Lewis said. "I can see the big spotlight at the end of the tunnel."

"We can probably be out of here in two or three weeks."

Hobby also claimed "substantial progress" on the deficit. "There's light at the end of the tunnel," he said, "but I'm afraid it's the headlight of a train coming through."

The House passed or proposed more than $2 billion in savings during the 30-day session, with the Senate approving about $560 million of that.

The speaker said he would continue to push for passage of the remainder, which he said can keep the treasury solvent through next year.

"If we are short at that time, I think you'll see a tax bill," Lewis said.

Representatives and senators introduced 157 bills and 19 proposed constitutional amendments; 19 bills and one proposed amendment passed both chambers. They included:

— Two bills and one amendment allowing interstate and branch banking. Voters will decide on the branch banking amendment to the Constitution at the November general election.

— A bill legalizing pari-mutuel wagering on horse and dog racing. Although sponsors say White will probably veto that bill, the governor said Thursday, "I have not reached a decision on that."

— One bill reducing the paperwork load for pubic school teachers, and another increasing school districts' authorities to expel unruly students.

— A bill saving the state $70.5 million by eliminating a 3-percent pay raise for state workers scheduled to take effect Labor Day.

— A bill retaining in the treasury $240 million in interest on sales tax collections that otherwise would have gone to Texas cities.

— An early retirement bill for state workers and a bill moving the state payday from the last day of the month to the first of the next month. Together, they save about $240 million.

Alpine woman swept to her death after Bible study class

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

ALPINE — Minutes after a Bible study class, 67-year-old Jesusita Reyes met her death.

The death was the second spurred here by flooding as another 62-year-old woman had died earlier Wednesday evening when her car was swept into a creek by rushing water.

More than 3 inches of rain fell Wednesday night in Alpine, a town of 6,000 about 200 miles southwest of Midland.

The flooding struck all over West Texas, causing havoc for many towns and cities. Earlier in the week, a Big Spring woman also had drowned.

Mrs. Reyes died Wednesday evening after a wall of water swept her and her car away.

The lifelong Alpine resident was taking two friends home from Bible study school around 10 p.m. Wednesday when her car stalled out in front of a woman's house, said Rosario De La O, one of Mrs. Reyes' two daughters.

The three women decided to stay at the house because of radio weather warnings, Mrs. De La O said.

But, before going into the house, Mrs. Reyes returned to her car, possibly to get her purse.

She was swept away by rapid waters. Her body was found in Alpine Creek about two blocks away from her car, which also had been moved by the water, said Alpine Police Chief Ruben Melgoza.

Along with her two daughters, Mrs. Reyes raised one son and was a member of the Our Lady of Peace Catholic Church.

The other woman, 61-year-old Nora Pallanez, was also a member of Our Lady of Peace Catholic Church and a lifelong resident of Alpine.

Mrs. Pallanez's car was swept into Alpine Creek while she was fording a railroad crossing at 11th Street around 9:30 p.m. Wednesday, Melgoza said.

Mrs. Pallanez and her husband, Matilde Pallanez Jr., were returning in separate cars to their westside home after visiting friends on the northside of Alpine, said Gracie Rodriguez, one of Mrs. Pallanez's five daughters.

Taking a different route home than his wife, Pallanez did not realize anything was wrong until his wife failed to show up, Mrs. Rodriguez said.

"When he got home and she never made it back, he started looking for her. But he never thought she had been involved in an accident," Mrs. Rodriguez said.

Melgoza said he and several officers saw Mrs. Pallanez's car swept from the intersection while they were patrolling Alpine.

"When I approached the intersection, I saw the car being swept away. The minute she started crossing the tracks the water took her car and dumped it into Alpine Creek. She attempted to exit and we last saw her halfway out of the car," Melgoza said.

Melgoza said he and several officers followed the car as it was swept underneath five bridges until it came to a rest. The car was empty when police reached it, he said.

Mrs. Pallanez's body was found around 8:30 a.m. Thursday about 3 miles from her car by a private twin engine plane patrolling the area, Melgoza said.

Residents watch rising waters nervously

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

John Disch had to leave work early Thursday put his furniture up on blocks to escape flooding.

"I came home from work to see what we could do," said Disch, standing in shin-deep water in his front yard at 1406 Maberry St. as the day-long rains began to clear up Thursday afternoon.

But Disch's furniture was saved when rains stopped around 3 p.m. Thursday after dumping 3.29 inches on the city.

Before the rains stopped, Disch and several of his neighbors spent the morning nervously watching water from Cowden pond go across their lawns and up to their front doors.

As water crept up her driveway, by 1 p.m. Thursday, Annie Fay Neil, 1400 Maberry St., said she had seen enough and called son-in-law to rescue her.

"This is the highest I've seen it in a long time," said Mrs. Neil, who has resided for 30 years at the house on the eastside of Cowden Park.

Another neighbor, John Savage, 1404 Maberry St., said he was frustrated at the continuous flooding along the park.

"This is not an unusual situation. They've (the city) never provided any drainage out of town. With West Texas as flat as it is, they ought to be able to get it out of town. It's obvious from the first few times this has happened their plans are inadequate," Savage said.

Savage said the park pond overflows every time it rains heavily.

"It's like building a canal going nowhere," he said.

But Public Works Director Fred Baker said, "Those lakes are playa lakes designed to detain water and we pump it out after the rains are over."

Streets must be clear of water before pumps can transfer additional water to them, he said.

Cowden's excess water was pumped down Garfield Street into Scharbauer Draw.

Continuous rains Wednesday night and Thursday morning prevented city crews from pumping water out of many lake parks, he said.

Baker said the storm's break at about 3 p.m. Thursday was a "lifesaver."

Along with a 1,000 gallon a minute pump at Cowden Park, three 3,000 gallon pumps are working to clear the swollen pond at Wadley-Barron Park, Baker said.

If the rains stop, Baker said Thursday that it will probably take a day-and-a half to pump water out of the parks.

Midlander charged with distribution of child pornography

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A Midland businessman who was indicted by a federal grand jury in Tulsa, Okla., for allegedly distributing child pornography said today the accusation against him is unfair and the "situation is a total fiasco."

The man, Ernest Schmeltzer, and seven others were charged with distributing child pornography.

Two others were indicted for distributing adult pornography.

"I am aware of the situation," Schmeltzer said today, and denied that he had any part in distributing pornographic materials.

"There is no truth to it — not their truth anyway. I'm not involved in anything like that."

"We all have our curiosities and fantasies that we explore from time to time," he said. "I enjoy certain things in Playboy and Penthouse (magazines). You're different because you are exposed."

Schmeltzer said he has not been served an indictment and has not been officially notified of his indictment but said he was aware of the investigation.

Schmeltzer said he was in China on business last year when law-enforcement officers "raided" his home and disturbed his wife and 4-year-old daughter.

"I have enough grief as it is," he said. "The search was rather illegal in my opinion."

He said officers confiscated Playboy and Penthouse magazines, and some "hardcore" adult magazines and movies.

He said that Sheriff Gary Painter used the raid to "grandstand."

Painter, who said he personally wasn't in on the search, said his deputies and U.S. federal postal inspectors were involved, however.

"They found out what they were looking for — evidently," Painter said.

He said Schmeltzer's comment of the sheriff grandstanding was "not worthy of a comment."

"They (officers) did come in my home," Schmeltzer said. "It was extremely untimely. I was in China. Gary Painter and the authorities were aware I was not in town."

U.S. Attorney Layn Phillips in Tulsa said two of those indicted were charged with the interstate transportation of obscene matter, The Associated Press reported.

He said the material distributed in the adult pornography cases depicted sexual activities with animals.

Named for distribution of child pornography in the federal grand jury indictments handed up Thursday were Schmeltzer; Bill Williams, 50, of Cisne, Ill.; John Vincent Raines, 29, of West Palm Beach, Fla.; John Irvin Bancroft, 68, of Port Orange, Fla.; Richard Thomas Bresnahan, 50, of Rensselaer, Ind.; Ronald David Groll, 50, of St. Louis, Mo.; Kevin Bonnier, 35, of Cudahy, Wis., and John Ballard, 25, of Apple Valley, Calif., according to the AP.

Charged with violations of the adult obscenity statutes in the interstate transportation of obscene materials were Albert E. Youngblood, 62, of Detroit; and Carlos Wright, 57, of Marshall, Ark.

Odessan gets prison time for transporting volatile chemical

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A 25-year-old Odessa man who admitted he was "sorry" for shipping a volatile chemical in his baggage aboard a Dallas-to-Midland American Airlines flight on March 15 was sentenced to five years in prison on Thursday by U.S. District Court Judge Lucius D. Bunton.

"I'm sorry for what I done," said the defendant, Wayne Ross Brunson. "I know it was wrong."

His attorney, David Smith of Odessa, said Brunson's "degree of culpability in this crime is carelessness. This really is just a crime of stupidity."

The judge concurred.

"I agree that what you did was stupid," Bunton said. "I can't condone stupidity."

The judge said Brunson's actions endangered a "whole plane-load of people" who could have been killed" had the chemical exploded or caught fire.

The bottle containing the corrosive and volatile chemical, acetic anhydride, was discovered by airline personnel after it had broken.

The chemical is used to make fibers, plastics, pharmaceuticals, dyes and explosives.

A Federal Bureau of Investigation background check of Brunson indicated that he made his living by picking up the chemical at "drop site" and transporting it to "speed labs" where it could be converted into illicit methamphetamine — the stimulant called "speed."

Brunson, who pleaded guilty, had asked the judge for probation.

UTPB to offer advanced electrical engineering plan

From Staff Reports

The University of Texas of the Permian Basin will offer a master of science degree program in electrical engineering to meet the needs of local industry, UTPB officials said.

UTPB will begin offering courses in January 1987 in cooperation with the University of Texas at El Paso.

Credits earned in UTPB control engineering courses may be applied to the master's program, said Dr. Thomas Hyde, professor and chairman of engineering.

He said the program, approved by the University of Texas System Board of Regents Aug. 15, is perhaps the only joint engineering program offered by two UT institutions.

Hyde said UTEP will offer at least 12 hours of course work in the Midland-Odessa area, making it possible for students to earn a master's degree without leaving the Permian Basin to attend classes.

Students will complete the course requirements in four semesters, taking one course each through UTEP and UTPB per semester.

Prospective students should obtain application forms and send official transcripts of all prior college course work to the UTPB Admissions Office.

Midland, Odessa grand juries to join forces

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

Grand juries from Midland and Odessa will join forces Wednesday to investigate the twin cities' drug problem, said District Attorney Al Schorre.

"We're going to have to come up with some novel approach to solve the problem in both communities. We need total cooperation between the two of us," Schorre said.

Odessa and Midland law enforcement officials will speak on the cities' drug problem before the two grand juries 10 a.m. Wednesday at the Ector County Grand Jury Courtroom.

The juries also may review drug related cases for indictments.

"Law enforcement agencies cooperate, but the more we interface with them, the more effective, we'll be," Schorre said.

Ector County District Attorney Eric Augesen agreed.

"I'd like to see a lot more cooperation. They cooperate when it's necessary, but I would like to see a joint effort between the two daily.

"We've really grown to be one big city. Your problems are ours and ours are yours. We have to work as a unified force or we're letting the criminals work against us," he said.

Augesen said a computer linkup between the two cities' police departments would help track those criminals fleeing back and forth to escape justice and would help monitor stolen goods.

"A lot of burglaries occur over there and the products are sold here. In Odessa a lot of burglaries occur and the products are sold in Midland. With a joint effort, maybe we could crack that," Augesen said.

Up to 90 percent of all burglaries are drug-related, Schorre said. And many other crimes can be directly traced to drug use, he said.

Many burglars turn out to be addicts, citing drug dependency as the reason for their crime, Schorre continued.

Wednesday's meeting may be the first of several between the grand juries to find facts on the cities' drug problem and come up with suggestions, Schorre said.

The meetings between the juries is unusual, he added.

"I know of no other community in the state that has done this," he said.

The grand juries will examine how bad the problem is, what can be done about it, and where resources to combat the drug problem should be placed.

The two 12-member grand juries have the power to advise and make suggestions to the law enforcement agencies and the county commissioner courts.

Augesen said the joint meeting came about after the Ector County grand jury was amazed at the number of drug-related crimes and decided to investigate.

"They became interested in it and they have the power to investigate anything they chose. I'm delighted at their doing so because it's the biggest problem we have in this area," he said.

DEATHS

Nora Pallanez

ALPINE — Nora Pallanez, 61, of Alpine died Thursday of accidental drowning.

Rosary was to be today at 5 p.m. at the Our Lady of Peace Catholic Church in Alpine. Mass will be at 4 p.m. Saturday at Our Lady of Peace Catholic Church with the Rev. Bill Ryan officiating. Burial will follow at the Holy Angels Cemetery under the direction of Geeslin Funeral Home of Alpine.

Mrs. Pallanez was born Sept. 18, 1924, in Marfa and was a lifelong resident of the area. She was an active member of Our Lady of Peace Catholic Church. She had been employed by the True-Value Hardware Store for the past 16 years.

Survivors include her husband Matilde "Wacky" Pallanez; four daughters, Gracie Rodriguez of Alpine, Lupita Molinar of Midland, Gilda Moseley of Fabens, and Becky Pallanez of Dilley; two sons, Tony Pallanez of Midland and David Pallanez of Alpine; her mother, Ester Dominguez of Alpine; two sisters, Nina Wilcox of El Paso and Elodia Sotelo of La Quinta, Cal.; two brothers, Abel Dominguez of Marfa and Manuel Dominguez of Carlsbad, N.M.; and seven grandchildren.

Suspicious absentee ballots prompt county investigation

MARSHALL (AP) — A big batch of absentee ballot applications arrived at county offices in alphabetical order, prompting an investigation that authorities say could result in misdemeanor forgery charges.

Harrison County District Attorney Bonnie Leggat said Thursday that local and state election officials found what appear to be forged applications for absentee ballots for a Texas Senate runoff.

Ms. Leggat said irregularities were found in about 150 applications for the mail ballots. The batch of applications for absentee ballots, in alphabetical order, was received in the mail Wednesday by the Harrison County elections office.

County Elections Administrator Patsy Cox became suspicious and turned over the applications to the district attorney's office.

"It appeared that four to five people, perhaps, signed all of the 150 applications," Ms. Leggat told the Shreveport Times. "They were all marked disability as the reason for requesting an absentee ballot."

Texas election laws allow voters to request mail ballots if they are over 65 or are disabled. The names of voters in Marshall voting Box 3A, a predominantly black area, were listed on the applications.

"We contacted most of them, and the vast majority of them had not requested an absentee ballot by mail," Ms. Leggat said. "A lot of them were agitated because they always voted in person and they anticipated voting in person this time."

She said some voters who intended to go to the polls in person might be denied the right to vote if a mail ballot had been requested in their name without their knowledge.

Possible misdemeanor forgery charges could result from the scheme, and the investigation is continuing into other possible charges, Ms. Leggat said.

ODESSAN

"I'd like a second chance if you'd give it to me," he said, explaining he was getting married and wanted to start his life anew.

His attorney said Brunson's arrest "got him on the straight-and-narrow path" and spurred a turn-around in his life.

"The statute in the case is directed toward terrorist activity," Smith said. "Terrorists should be punished."

The judge imposed sentences in other cases:

— Tommy Claude Derington, 26, of Midland was sentenced to 179 days in a jail-type facility and was placed on probation for five years for possessing cocaine with intent to distribute the controlled substance. Derington was operating a delicatessen in Midland when he was arrested by Midland police for selling cocaine last April.

Derington, who told the judge that he "came from a very stable environment — my home," admitted that he "really messed up."

"I really had no good reason" for dealing in drugs, he said. "I had no reasonable reason for doing it. I really fouled up. It caused my credibility to be diminished." Derington said he is "starting a new life...I've never done this (dealt in drugs) before, and I don't believe I will again." He said he wanted to "re-establish myself in the community."

His attorney, Sandy Torres, said Derington knows "the difference between right and wrong," had a solid employment history, commands a "good salary," but "was not a very sophisticated drug dealer."

Derington indicated that he had reformed and was a law-abiding citizen.

"It was only after you got picked up (by police) you got religion," Bunton said.

— Jesus Fernando Cuevas-Sanchez, 40, of Odessa, was sentenced to two years in prison for possession of marijuana with intent to sell the drug. He had been arrested on May 15 by police for carrying 20 pounds of marijuana in his car and having an additional 60 pounds of the drug in his home.

"I think this man is basically a honest man who got sidetracked," said his attorney, Robert Harris.

— Jose Sauceda-Medina, who had failed to appear in court on a charge of smuggling aliens into the United States, was sentenced to 84 days in jail and was placed on a five-year probated sentence. "I just wish to ask you for your mercy," Sauceda-Medina told the judge, "and this shall not happen again."

— Joe Segovia Morin was sentenced to two years in prison for violating terms of his probation by failing to report to his probation officer and failing to get permission of the officer to move out of state. He had left Texas for Michigan to work as a fruit picker to support his wife and five children.

"He's resourceful," said his attorney, Al Walvoord. "He overlooks the details of probation. He did not have it branded on his soul."

Bunton complimentec the defendant for being "so concerned" about the welfare of his wife and children.

But Bunton sentenced him to prison rather than placing him on probation again. "Reporting is not in your system."

Medical record group holds workshop for local district

From Staff Reports

The fall workshop of the Texas Medical Record Association's local district will be held Sept. 20 in Midland, according to Kim Graves, District II-B president.

District II-B covers the West Texas area and includes Midland, Odessa, Iraan and Big Spring and has a membership of about 50.

The workshop is scheduled for 8 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. and will be held in the Medical Staff Conference Room at Midland Memorial Hospital, 2200 W. Illinois Ave. Five hours of Continuing Education credits will be given.

The workshop is structured to meet the needs of medical records personnel and personnel from doctors' offices, insurance companies, home health care agencies and company business offices who deal with medical terminology or coding, said a hospital spokesman.

Speakers will include Carol Valles of El Paso, Region II director of the Texas Medical Record Association; Stephen Wiesenfeld, M.D., allergist and immunologist; Ann Maddox, director of the Medical Records Technology program at South Plains in Lubbock; Robert Reid, administrator of Glenwood, a new psychiatric treatment facility to be built in the Midland/Odessa area and Elisa Hall, M.D., pathologist.

Registration fee is $20 per person and must be mailed by Sept. 11 to Joyce Laub, Accredited Records Technician, P. O. Box 3585, Midland, 79702.

Local pops concerts rescheduled

The Midland-Odessa Symphony Pops Concerts scheduled for this weekend have been moved to 8 p.m. Sept. 13 at Midland College and 8 p.m. Sept. 14 at Odessa's Freedom Park.

"Because of the weather and the ground condition in both Midland and Odessa and the forecast we received for this coming weekend, we are moving our pops concerts from this weekend to next weekend," says Connie Linsler, general manager for the organization.

Five locals jailed on drug charges in lieu of bond

From Staff Reports

Five Midlanders remain in Midland County Jail in lieu of $50,000 bond each on drug charges after their arrest late Wednesday at a local residence.

Janie Olgin, 25, 921 E. Edwards St., Corina Martinez, 24, 912 E. New York Ave., Javier Granado, 22, and Arturo Granado, 18, both of 1203 South St., are being held on charges of possession of a controlled substance. The bond on each was set at $50,000 by Justice of the Peace Judy Massingill.

Guadalupe Ramirez, 39, of 510 N. Lee St., was charged with possession of a controlled substance and possession of cocaine, and is also being held on $50,000 bond.

Sheriff's officers arrested the five Thursday following a raid on a residence in the 500 block of N. Lee St. Heroin valued at about $1,000, cocaine valued at about $120, and several items believed taken in some local burglaries were recovered.

In other reports, Midland police are investigating several burglaries.

Police Roundup

Robert Burnett, 4506 Cloudcroft, told police three bicycles valued at $550, and an AM-FM cassette player valued at $300 were taken from his residence. About $225 worth of damage to a motorcycle dash was also reported.

The items were taken between 8:30 p.m. Thursday and 1:30 a.m. today, according to reports.

An AM-FM cassette stereo valued at $200 was reported stolen from a vehicle in the 700 block of W. Dormard Ave.

Reports said the item was taken Wednesday sometime between 9:40 and 10:40 p.m.

Police are also investigating the burglary of a vehicle that was parked in the 400 block of Sunset St. The victim, Angel Gamboa, reported a .22 caliber rifle valued at $200 was taken Thursday between 10 a.m. and 11 a.m.

Odessa air show to feature WW II planes, Navy jets

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — An air show featuring World World II "warbirds," aerobatic aircraft, sailplanes, a U.S. Navy balloon, and U.S. Navy jet aircraft similar to the ones flown in the movie "Top Gun" will be on display here Saturday at the Ector County Aviation Appreciation Day.

The event will include the 11 a.m. formal dedication of the Ector County Airport as "Schlemeyer Field" in honor of Roy Schlemeyer, an Odessa aviation pioneer.

The show will begin at 8 a.m. Saturday when the U.S. Navy Balloon Team will offer free tethered balloon rides.

From 9 a.m. to 10:30 a.m., flour bombing and spot-landing contests will be held among pilots. During the morning, aviation hobbyists will fly their radio-controlled model airplanes. Models will be displayed in the Roadrunner Aviation Hangar.

Aircraft will include quarter-scale models of the P-47 Thunderbolt and the F4U Corsair.

The air show will begin at 1 p.m. and will include performances by skydivers and demonstrations by pilots in aerobatic aircraft, sailplanes, Confederate Air Force "warbirds," military jets, and helicopters.

The CAF will present a flight of four BT-13 Valiants in precision formation. A U.S. Air Force T-37 jet trainer will make a low pass, and two U.S. Navy T-2 Buckeye jets, similar to jets used in the "Top Gun" movie, will be on display.

Admission to the air show is $2 for adults and $1 for children under 12 years of age. Schlemeyer Field is just north of Odessa off the Andrews Highway — U.S. Highway 385.

In case of foul weather, aviation buffs are urged to call airport manager Lynn McLaughlin at 335-3021 to inquire about the status of the air show.

Officials: Inmate population nears overcrowding limit

DALLAS (AP) — Texas prison officials say the inmate population level is within a fraction of a percentage point of triggering a court-ordered admissions shutdown plan to control overcrowding.

The Texas Department of Corrections' inmate population on Thursday was just 79 admissions short of exceeding the limit imposed in 1983 by U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice, despite addition of 75 beds this week.

Justice, to resolve an overcrowding complaint by prisoners, approved an agreement in which TDC officials would not accept more inmates if it reached 95 percent of its official capacity.

TDC spokesman David Nunnelee said the tally at midnight Wednesday was 38,255, or 94.80 percent of its 40,352-bed capacity.

The prison population on Tuesday came the closest ever to triggering the shutting of TDC's front doors. The inmate count of 38,226 represented 94.85 percent of capacity which was 40,302, without the 50 beds added Wednesday.

Officials said 25 beds already had been added on Monday.

"We've always said it was a matter of time before we reached the limit," said TDC spokesman Charles Brown. "We are doing all we can to comply" with the judge's order.

Officials said the population total has hovered above 94 percent for about a year, but the system had been working with a cushion of a couple of hundred beds.

In July and August, the system recorded record-high levels of new admissions, averaging more than 140 new admissions per day.

ACCUSED

If convicted for distribution of child pornography, each of the alleged offenders could receive a sentence of up to 10 years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

Conviction for the interstate transportation of obscene matter could result in up to five years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

Ronald A. Hoverson, special agent in charge of the Oklahoma City FBI, describes those indicted as being collectors of child pornography.

Hoverson said the items seized during the arrests show the sophistication of those dealing in child pornography, some of whom were able to make their own pornographic movies.

The FBI agent said the arrests were in the mid-level of the child pornography industry.

He said the investigation has not resulted in the arrests of the major producers of child pornography.

Two of Mrs. Pallanez's seven children — Tony Pallanez and Lupita Molinar — live in Midland.

Both women will be buried Saturday in Alpine's Holy Cross Cemetery. The two women were the first victims to drown in the normally dry Alpine Creek, said Melgoza, who has worked 12 years for the city.

"This is the first time I've ever seen it this strong and this rough.

"I doubt there was any way anybody could have prevented this. No one could have foreseen this," Melgoza said.

Firewood cut now will be dry when winter comes

It's not too early to cut firewood for the coming winter. Firewood cut now will be dry by the time cold weather rolls around.

It takes as much as a year for split and stacked firewood to reach an 'air dry' condition. This is when 20 percent of the wood's weight is water. However, four to six months storage will dry wood enough to use.

Stack your wood off the ground, in an open area to allow air circulation. Covering the wood pile to keep off the rain will speed up the drying process.

When cutting firewood, safety should be a primary consideration. A chainsaw is probably the most dangerous piece of equipment most people ever handle. Chainsaws cause more than 30,000 accidents each year, mostly due to operator carlessness.

If buying firewood, be sure you know what you're getting. First, ask if the wood is green or dry. Then, check on the amount and price. Firewood is often advertised for sale by the cord, but the seller usually means a 'face' cord.

A cord of wood is a stack 4 feet wide by 4 feet high and 8 feet long. A face cord is a stack 4 feet high and 8 feet long, but the pieces are only 18 to 24 inches long. From the front, or 'face', it looks like a cord, but is only one-third to one-half a cord. A pick-up load of wood is generally equal to a face cord.

Plan to cut or buy your firewood early so that it will be ready to burn once the winter season sets in.

A drop in U.S. cotton prices has sales moving briskly, and that means farmers need to keep a wary eye on market developments. U.S. cotton prices dropped about 40 cents a pound at the beginning of August, and this, combined with a weaker dollar, is expected to substantially increase world trade, discourage foreign competitive production and increase cotton consumption. Since recently anounced provisions for implementing cotton certificate programs on inventory adjustment and first handler certificates have added momentum to cotton sales, producers might consider using pricing strategies such as options and futures to accomplish price insurance and at the same time benefit from a possible upward price move.

While 1985 was a tough year economically for Texas farmers, 1986 likely will be worse. Preliminary data show Texas farm receipts far below levels of the first half of 1985. Even with some improvement in livestock prices over the last half of the year, overall farm receipts will be considerably less than in 1985. U.S. crop prices the first half of this year were down 13 percent from levels a year ago. On the positive side, however, fuel and interest costs have been down and will help the net farm income situation. Farmers need to build their business around financial and price risk management as they move ahead.

Hormone may send dairy cows 'tripping through production records'

AGRICULTURE

By DON KENDALL

WASHINGTON (AP) — In perhaps a year or two, dairy farmers may be able to give cows a daily injection of a new synthetic drug that will boost milk production sharply. And that could trigger another shakeup in the nation's beleaguered dairy industry.

A team of Agriculture Department analysts say the new genetically engineered chemical may be the biggest advance yet in many years of rising milk production and improved efficiency of dairy producers.

The chemical that could send cows tripping through the production record books is a bovine growth hormone, popularly called BGH. Its technical name is bovine somatotropin, a protein hormone produced naturally in the pituitary gland of cattle.

Among the hormone's metabolic functions is its regulation of a cow's milk output, requiring the animal to eat more as milk production is stepped up.

At least four pharmaceutical companies are pushing for commercial development of the synthetic version, possibly as early as 1988.

The possibilities for the use of BGH has stirred controversy among dairy farmers, economists, environmentalists, critics and consumer advocates. Its development is favored by the Reagan administration.

A report in the September issue of USDA's Agricultural Outlook magazine describes how recent breakthroughs in genetic engineering techniques allow the BGH gene to be transferred from animals to ordinary bacteria.

The bacteria then can be reproduced at relatively low cost, making the purified product available for commercial use, a process similar to that used to produce human insulin and interferon.

But BGH has not been approved by the Food and Drug Administration for commercial use, although it has been cleared for research under controlled conditions, and the sale of milk and meat from experimental cows injected with BHG has been approved.

The report was written by Richard Fallert, Carolyn Betts and Boyd Buxton of the department's Economic Research Service, and could be a major step by the agency to help calm some of the heated debate over BGH and what may lie ahead for dairy farmers.

Other new dairy technologies cited in the report include embryo transfer, improved environmental management and microcomputers to assist in feed, financial and herd management. All are aimed at producing more milk at lower cost.

But BGH is the hottest item, and some of the most important unknowns are economic, including the possible effects of BGH on milk production and prices.

Critics of BGH say the new synthetic booster's development is ironic, in view of the U.S. milk surplus and the government's ongoing $1.8 billion program to help dairy farmers send more than 1.5 million cows to slaughter over an 18-month period that began last April 1.

The report notes that the impact of dairy technology is not new and that milk production per cow has more than doubled since 1955, reducing the number of cows required.

Research has found that under controlled conditions, milk yields increase 10 percent to 40 percent within three days of initial injections of BGH, when administered during the latter two-thirds of a normal 305-day lactation period, the report said.

Although the best time for daily BGH injection, or implanted slow-release pill if one is developed, is still being studied, results are greater during the middle and latter stages of lactation, rather than in the early part of the period, when milk yields normally tend to be higher.

Thus, increases of 10 percent to 40 percent over the final 215 days of lactation can translate into an increase of 7 percent to 28 percent annually.

"A common misconception is that there is a 40 percent increase in milk production during the full lactation period," the report said.

Exotic taste changes reflected in store displays, food chain

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

In a Los Angeles supermarket, a middle-aged shopper squinted intently at a recipe for "Polynesian french fries" pasted to a homely brown tuber. It was a taro root, which Polynesians don't make into french fries but traditionally boil and mash into poi, hardly a fast-food specialty.

Other shoppers examined more than a dozen varieties of squash — from the standard banana, zucchini, summer and crookneck squashes to chayote (resembling a pale green brain), green and yellow versions of table queen squash, turban squash, gold nugget squash and dumpling, spaghetti, kabocha, butternut and acorn squashes.

One who tried her hand at spaghetti squash, based on a recipe attached to the melon-size vegetable whose cooked flesh resembles pasta, said she also consulted "my corner ethnics" and came up with "a Japanese-Jewish-Italian spaghetti squash — it was wonderful!"

No doubt about it, people's tastes are changing. And the changes, on display in the nation's supermarkets, are making their mark all along the nation's food chain.

— Growers are turning to exotic, and profitable, crops.

— Enterprising wholesalers are seeking high-value agricultural novelties.

— Astonished retailers have seen long-neglected produce departments develop star quality as a draw for customers.

— Consumers are doing such things as dipping edible buds into egg batter for deep frying, and sauteing unusual peppers for side dishes or Mexican fajitas.

All this spells new and profitable sales opportunities for those who can develop and satisfy consumer tastes for full-grown but miniature vegetables, golden spiny "jelly melons," fresh herbs, red pears, white tomatoes, elephant-heart plums, pepino (a lemon-sized melon) and babaco (a melon masquerading as a cucumber).

A major factor behind the proliferation of such specialty items in supermarket produce departments is apioneering Los Angeles-based wholesaler Frieda Caplan, a feisty grandmother who said she got into the wholesale business because the odd hours allowed her to nurse her daughter, Karen, now president and chief operating officer. (A second daughter, Jackie, handles national sales.)

Her company, Frieda's Finest Specialty Produce Inc., in its quarter of a century of existence has opened up market after market for new items in an era when overall demand for food is leveling off in this country as family size shrinks.

Over the years, Caplan has been credited with elevating the fuzzy and dusky Chinese gooseberry into the now-familiar kiwifruit and with finding farmers willing to invest in growing such formerly imported items as cherimoya, a custard-like fruit from South America.

This year, Caplan is seeking to broaden demand for the dozen varieties of specialty squashes she has helped bring to market. Working with her hand-picked growers, she is orchestrating the flow of squash, week by week and grower by grower, to assure retailers of a year-round supply of the colorful vegetables.

"I'm trying to find a niche for each farmer," she explained.

In a similar way, David Berkley has founded a thriving retail business as a purveyor of specialty foods and fine wines in the posh new Pavilions shopping center in Sacramento, Calif. Berkley knows that his clientele — generally young, curious, affluent, health-conscious and short of time — expects to see something different and fresh at his place than they find at the neighborhood supermarket. So he carries field-ripened and organically grown farm-fresh fruits and vegetables to complement a daily array of elegant, oven-ready entrees.

"There's no reason for me to do stacks and stacks and stacks of iceberg lettuce. What we do is a selection of lettuce and green leaves that are not generally available," he said.

Berkley calls this "niche marketing" and, like Frieda Caplan, he works with local farmers to obtain what his niche demands — like organically grown blueberries from the nearby foothill town of Loomis and prime-quality beef from Harris Ranch near Coalinga.

Farmers, faced with heavy debt and falling prices, have turned to the exotica of agriculture as a simple survival technique. In short, summed up Kenneth R. Farrell, who directs the National Center for Food and Agriculture Policy: "Steak and potatoes are giving way to sushi and tofu."

Specialty crops help assure farmers of better prices and more stable markets. And the diversification that accompanies such farming gives them the flexibility to shift gears when any single specialty market turns sour.

Bill Fulton of Fulton Farms in Troy, Ohio, near Dayton, grows a special strain of corn to specifications set by Cornnuts Inc., which produces the crunchy snack in Oakland, Calif. In exchange, Fulton is guaranteed a price for his crop before it is planted, a rarity in the produce business.

Mike Beyries and a partner formed Enfant Riant Escargot, which he describes as the nation's only snail cannery, after discovering "that there was a demand for escargot in this country, but zero production." The plant in Petaluma, Calif., buys ordinary California brown snails from bedeviled citrus, avocado and kiwi growers, fattens them, purges their digestive systems, then cans them. They are sold through Macy's, Neiman-Marcus, specialty shops nationwide and such celebrated restaurants as Chez Panisse in Berkeley, the Americana Restaurant in Kansas City, Mo., Jasper's in Boston, Escargot in Chicago, and Tavern on the Green in New York City.

Providing snails to Enfant Riant (laughing child) has in itself become something of a secondary crop for Charles E. Whipple, manager of the Ojai Land Co., in Ventura County. "We turned a real negative problem into something positive," he said. "In fact, there's a little bit of profit. If you figured in what you would have to spend to control them, it's a lot better to remove them physically — and get paid for it."

One side effect of shifting national food tastes is reflected in efforts by many hard-pressed growers to find ways to latch onto more of the retail food dollar, out of which they earn less than 30 cents.

RICHARD MINZENMAYER

Aphids of one or more species sap strength of nearly all plants

Nearly all plants are host to one or more species of aphid, a kind of insect that draws sap from plant tissue. Some aphid species feed on foliage, others on twigs, branches, flowers, fruit or roots. If left unchecked, aphids can stunt plant growth, deform leaves and fruit and cause galls on leaves, stems and roots.

Many aphid species excrete a sticky substance known as 'honeydew.' This secretion falls onto leaves, twigs and fruit and stimulates the growth of a black, sooty mold. This mold not only mars the appearance of plants but may restrict photosynthesis. Honeydew also attracts ants and flies and is a nuisance on cars, chairs, tables and other objects.

Aphids are small (about one eighth of an inch long), soft-bodied, pear-shaped insects of many colors such as green, black, gray, yellow or red. Some are winged during certain times of the year. Generally, aphids can be recognized by their cornicles, a pair of tubelike structures projecting from the rear of their bodies. The projections vary in length and width, depending upon the species. (One group of aphids, the most common member of which is the wooly apple aphid, does not have cornicles.)

Aphids reproduce faster than any other insect. The life cycle for most aphids is about five to six days.

Aphids attack a variety of houses and landscape plants. The effects the insects have on the plants are also varied. They (1) feed on plant sap, (2) inject toxic salivary secretions on plants during feeding and (3) transmit viruses which cause plant disease.

Close, frequent inspection of trees and shrubs is important in detecting and controlling new aphid infestations, as well as in determining overall aphid populations. Since aphids reproduce so rapidly, damage often occurs before large populations are noticed.

When insecticides are the only means of controlling aphids, use products containing diazinon, dimethoate, acephate (Orthene®), malathion, Meta-systox-R®, methoprene, synergized pyrethrins, pyrethroids, disulfoton or dormant oil. Some formulations injure tender ornamental plants. The manufacturer generally includes precautions on the label when phytotoxicity is a danger. to avoid unnecessary damage, apply the insecticide only to plants specified on the label. Mix according to directions and aply the recommended dosage.

Treatment of large trees or groups of trees is difficult for homeowners. Most homeowners do not have the large-volume, high-pressure spray equipment necessary to effectively apply insecticeds to trees. Without adequate applications equipment, homeowners should secure the services of a local pest control operator or landscape maintenance firm.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: A favorite hobby could help you supplement your income. As your work environment becomes more pleasant, your productivity rises. Special talents will come to the fore when you need them. Do not back out of an agreement or your reputation could suffer. Romance is more exciting than in the recent past.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Comedienne Jo Anne Worley, patriarch Joseph P. Kennedy, the Marquis de Lafayette, Chicago social worker Jane Addams, the Flying Tigers' Gen. Claire Chennault and actress Jane Curtin of TV's "Kate & Allie."

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Forget about business today. This is not a good time to contact influential people. Lend a helping hand to a loved one. A parent looks to you to solve a problem.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Postpone making any major moves. An impulsive act could prove costly. Avoid taking financial risks. Spending time with a close friend who shares your interests is very rewarding in romance. Be open to new ideas.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Recognize that a current relationship may not be all you hoped for. Look for ways to boost the value of your property. Emotions run high at home or work. Be diplomatic.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be realistic when others offer impractical suggestions. Sound investments are linked to old friends. Take things nice and easy in romance. A hasty commitment could lead to second thoughts.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If necessary, ask family members or friends to take over certain obligations. Wonderful bargains can be found at yard sales and swap meets.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Saturday employment could be the answer to a temporary cash problem. Perform more services for yourself. Beware of a stranger who asks too many personal questions. Your reputation is at stake.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Influential person will not grant special favors today. Avoid taking any rash actions. A financial matter requires delicate handling. Seek the advice of a close friend or relative. Keep a low profile.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) Moderation is essential now. Keep spending down. The social scene is busy and happy. Dress casually but attractively. You could meet someone very special today. Exchange telephone numbers! Romance could follow.

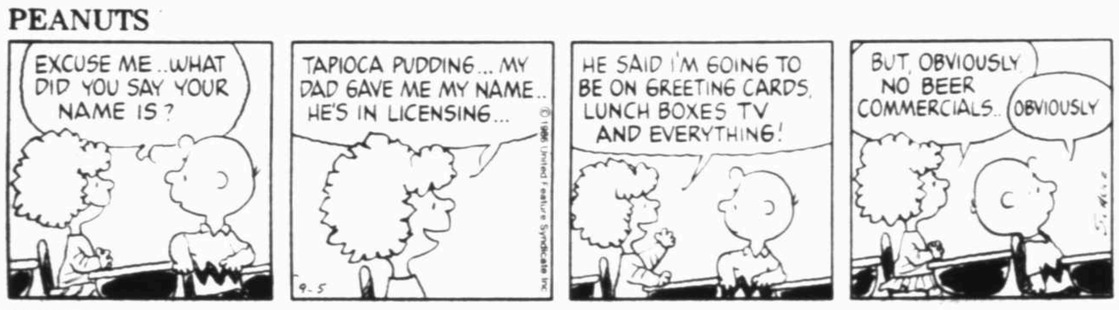

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Domestic affairs require your attention. Travel is best postponed. Make do with what you have to avoid spending extra money. Important documents should be scrutinized with greater care. Read the fine print.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Concentrate on building savings. Be a bit more daring in social situations and you will find it easier to make friends. You regain your enthusiasm for a special project or individual.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Asking a favor of a family member will probably bring a favorable response. It may not be in your best interest to have blind faith in someone. Review your financial options.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Take stock of your talents and resources before volunteering to aid a community project. You attract all the creative people at a social event. Seek out those who share your interests.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2 ♠	5 ♠	Dble	Pass
5 ♠	Pass	6 ♠	7 ♠
7 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Two of ♠

It was late in an evening filled with good bridge and even better wine. South, looking at his hand through burgundy-colored spectacles, decided it was worth a game-forcing artificial two-club opening bid. West decided the vulnerability was in favor of a leap to five clubs. North made the only sensible bid in the auction—his raise to six spades. That brought East to life with a sacrifice bid of seven clubs and South, at peace with the world at large, saw no reason not to bid a grand slam in spades.

In a world with justice for all, West would have had a diamond to lead. As it was, he led his lowest club to show interest in a diamond shift should his partner gain the lead—although there are those who would not worry what partner returned so long as he won a trick to get on lead!

Fortunately, Bacchus had not affected declarer's playing skill. He won the ace of clubs, ruffed a club and came to hand with a trump to ruff his last club. A heart to the ace served as the entry to run his spades, and with one trump left to play dummy was down to K-10 of hearts and a diamond, while declarer held a trump, a heart and the two of diamonds. West's holding was immaterial, and East held the Q-J of hearts and the only other diamond still in the game.

When declarer led his last trump, he could afford to part with the table's diamond. East was not in such a fortunate position. He had to hold both hearts, so he let go his diamond in the hope that it was his partner, and not declarer, who held the deuce. Declarer's diamond and dummy's king of hearts took the last two tricks.

Rather adds 'courage' to salutation

NEW YORK (AP) — Dan Rather has been giving Americans some advice when signing off the "CBS Evening News" — courage.

Rather's previous salutation was: "For CBS News, Dan Rather. Thank you for joining us. Good night." This week, he added "courage" before the "Good night."

"Don't overanalyze it. There's no deep, hidden meaning," Rather told The Associated Press on Thursday. "It's a greeting and salutation that I've been using with friends for years. It's not a preachment. I just like the sound of the word."

Rather admits he went too far on Wednesday, when he followed Bill Moyers' report on the Texas-Mexico border by using the Spanish version, "coraje."

"It was an ill-advised lark," he said.

There's been no decision on whether the signoff will be permanent, but in the meantime, that's the way it is.

Goldberg

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Whoopi Goldberg, star of "The Color Purple," has married cinematographer David Claessen, her publicist said.

Miss Goldberg was married Monday evening, Nan Leonard said Thursday. But she didn't know where in Las Vegas the couple wed.

Her personal manager, Sandy Gallin, and agent, Ron Meyer, will be hosts at a small party this weekend in Beverly Hills to celebrate the wedding, she said.

Miss Goldberg, who has a 12-year-old daughter, Alexandria, by a previous marriage, is filming the Warner Bros. movie "Burglar" in Los Angeles, Ms. Leonard said.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Two paparazzi wanting to shoot pictures of Brooke Shields were prevented from entering an area in a park where the movie star was working on a film.

Photographers Alan J. Oxley, of SIPA Press in Miami, and Ray Fairall, representing Photoreporters in New York, arrived Wednesday morning to get pictures of Miss Shields at Hanna Park, where she was being filmed in scenes for "Brenda Starr."

But she remained shielded all day by production workers as the photographers waited for her to emerge from her mobile home near the park entrance.

DETROIT (AP) — Mayor Coleman Young appeared with Detroit Pistons basketball star Isiah Thomas to declare Sept. 27 "No-Crime Day" in the nation's sixth-largest city.

"The challenge is to do something to take control out of the criminal's hands and place it back into the hands of our citizens," Young told a news conference Thursday. "No-Crime Day" will be an annual observance that will include activities aimed at dealing with crime issues in the city.

A non-profit committee, which includes Detroit-area celebrity supporters Thomas Hearns, Earvin "Magic" Johnson, Dave Bing, Aretha Franklin, Emanuel Steward and Milt McCrory, will oversee and develop projects planned for the day, said Thomas, the committee's chief spokesman.

No-Crime day will feature a citizens march along Woodward Avenue in Detroit. Events to follow No-Crime Day include No-Crack Week, in early October to address the dangers of "crack" cocaine, and a "No More Devil's Night" to eliminate the annual arson fires in Detroit the night before Halloween.

HOUSTON (AP) — A management dispute between country-western singer Johnny Lee and Gilley's Club owner Sherwood Cryer has ended with the dismissal of two federal lawsuits, officials said.

U.S. District Judge James DeAnda, in an order released this week, dismissed countersuits filed by Lee and Cryer after the issues were setled out of court.

The settlement effectively ends long-term contracts between Cryer and the singer, attorneys for both sides agreed.

"They're talking again," said Cryer's attorney, J.L. Jay. "What was a misunderstanding has had an amicable resolution."

Cryer had filed suit in state court against Lee, claiming the singer breached a 1979 agreement by making himself unavailable for performances and recordings.

Cryer's suit was moved to federal court after Lee filed a countersuit there seeking $15 million.

Lee's suit claimed Cryer cheated him out of profits from the movie "Urban Cowboy" starring John Travolta that was filmed at the club in Pasadena.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jazz singer Ella Fitzgerald is doing well after open heart surgery and may be moved this weekend to a private room, officials said.

Miss Fitzgerald, 68, was in stable condition Thursday night at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center, where she underwent a coronary bypass Wednesday after being admitted Aug. 19 for tests, hospital spokesman Ron Wise said.

Miss Fitzgerald could be transferred from the intensive care unit to a private room this weekend, he said.

A spokeswoman for Miss Fitzgerald said the singer's concert engagements for the remainder of 1986 had been canceled.

The entertainer, known as the "First Lady of Song," was hospitalized with congestive heart failure after becaming ill in her hotel room following a July 26 performance in Lewiston, N.Y.

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Buddy Holly's original Crickets are set to play together tonight for the first time in years to celebrate the 50th birthday of the late rock 'n' roll musician.

Jerry Allison, Joe B. Mauldin and Niki Sullivan, the original Crickets, will also be inducted into the Lubbock Musical Hall of Fame at a ceremony Saturday.

Holly, born Sept. 7, 1936, in Lubbock, died in a plane crash in 1959 at age 22.

The nostalgia concert, scheduled for 7:30 p.m. at the Civic Center, is part of the Lubbock Music Festival Week and features Bobby Vee and Bo Diddley, two other stars of early rock 'n' roll fame.

Songwriter Sonny Curtis, a member of the Crickets but who never toured with Holly, will also be presented with a plaque.

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — A scheduled Sept. 14 concert to help raise $8 million for the homeless and hungry has been canceled because promoters were unable to sign a star able to fill 61,000-seat Sullivan Stadium.

"We had a lot of people saying, 'Call me back,' with only one committed," Lynn Hartness, executive director of Boston for the World, said Thursday.

"There was not a groundswell of support that there was the year before," Hartness said. "Nobody wants to be involved with something that's not going to be big."

COPING WITH JOB LOSS

Job-hunting frustrations test reader's religious beliefs

By JIM MAY and MARTI VERMILLION

May

Vermillion

DEAR COPING: I have been reading your column now for several months and I'm not sure you'll want to answer my question in your column or if there even is an answer. I was brought up to believe in God and to believe that whenever I had a problem all I had to do was pray with faith and do what I could do and God would answer my prayer. But after 18 months of being unemployed and of prayer and of interviews and resume revisions I feel as if God isn't hearing my prayers or that He even knows I'm alive. Where does God fit into all this when He seems so silent? I'd like to hold onto my faith but I'm beginning to feel betrayed by God or those who taught me He is real. — WONDERING IN MIDLAND

DEAR WONDERING: We feel that your questions are probably questions being asked by many in our area who are religious and perhaps have also found themselve discouraged in their faith. We are believers but don't claim to be theologians, so we submitted your questions to a minister friend, Tom Vermillion of Golf Course Road Church of Christ, and will share his response with you:

DEAR WONDERING: For many of us, the toughest test of faith in God is not found in response to an untimely death, a tragic accident or violence such as the recent tragedy at Edmond, Okla., but rather in the face of long-term problems that seem to defy resolution even though we continue in prayer and attempt to remain positive. We are an instant society in which terrible events are resolved in less than an hour every night on the television networks. The "long term" is almost un-American, and when God chooses the long term for the resolution of our problems, we get terribly frustrated. We may even begin to believe He has ignored our plight.

Yet if we examine the Scriptures, we see many of those whom God held in high regard were slow to receive resolution to their suffering. Job was on the ash heap for months, suffering physically and emotionally, while his friends whipped him with their philosophizing about his tragedy, and trying to identify what he had done wrong to deserve such punishment. The true issue was not, "Why has this happened?" but "Now that this has happened, how shall I respond?"

There is a story of a man who passed a sculptor's shop each morning as he walked to work. One day he saw a huge block of stone in the window of the shop, and each day he watched with interest the progress made. But the work was slow and the man became bored — he began to walk past the shop day after day without taking any notice of what was happening in that window. One day, however, a figure of a stallion in stone stopped him in his tracks. The horse was complete in every detail and almost seemed to breathe. The man was overcome and entered the shop to speak to the sculptor. Finding him in the back beginning work on another block of granite, he asked the man how he was able to start with a piece of stone and create such a work of art. The sculptor replied, "It's very simple really. I just take a hammer and chisel and chip away everything that doesn't look like a horse."

We need to be certain that our expectations for life as believers are consistent with what God has said. Otherwise we begin to believe that God doesn't hear or care or know who we are. Yet in reality, He is there applying the chisel as gently as possible to get the job done.

DEAR COPING: The thing that gets me most about losing my job is that after four years of college and 20 plus years of experience as an executive secretary, I am going to have to go back to school in order to find another job. I have no word processing or computer experience; therefore, I have been passed over many times in the past four months for jobs. No one offers in-house training on these contraptions though I am convinced I could learn one very quickly. It doesn't see fair that with all my education and experience, I can't find a job. I feel cheated that my previous employer (with whom I spent six years) never went to word processing or computer like it seems everyone else has! It is devastating to me knowing that I cannot qualify for a secretarial job in Midland because I am so far behind the times. Would I have been better off to have stayed with a larger company rather than go with a cheap old-fashioned independent? I was expecting to retire with him; rather I was thrown back into the unemployment line. I feel hate for him and find myself secretly hoping he goes bankrupt after what he did to me. Am I wrong to feel this way? I feel that my whole life is falling apart. — AV

DEAR AV: We really see two questions in your letter. The first addresses issues of career selection, employer selection and training. We would suggest you first consider what skills you have and enjoy, where you would want to use your skills and what kinds of organizations need your skills. The full process is detailed in Richard Bolles' book, "What Color Is Your Parachute?"

The second question addresses the frustrations associated with suddenly being jobless. We Americans place so much emphasis on our jobs, we feel a significant equity in it. When we lose it through no fault of our own, we often feel a strong sense of betrayal. This feeling, combined with a sense of loss of control and helplessness, often generates feelings of anger and resentment. These emotions are normal, but most who have angered have discovered that it is destroying us too. We would encourage you to share your feeling with a family member or a trusted friend. Richard Bolles points to the experience of numerous people, who after becoming unemployed, discovered that they had many talents they had not put to use, and their unemployment gave them an opportunity to make fuller use of themselves and their talents. Good luck on your journey and let us know how you are progressing!

DEAR ABBY

Arrest scares children

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Recently an incident occurred at my children's school that upset me. Two third-grade boys were caught stealing candy and money from a teacher's room. One boy did not show up for school for a few days. When he returned, he told the kids he had been away "camping." The other boy, however, received a different punishment. He had a history of causing trouble at school, so his father suggested (and the principal agreed) that the boy be given a good scare. The principal called the police, and two police officers came to the school and told the boy he was under arrest. This "arrest" took place in front of the other students. The boy was handcuffed and led to a police car, presumably to be taken to jail, although I doubt that the incident was carried that far.

No explanation was made to the children about the "arrest," but my children came home wide-eyed, convinced that policemen do arrest little kids as they had seen it with their own eyes.

I was furious about the way the matter had been handled. When I spoke to the other parents, I was shocked to learn that many of them thought this type of scare was good for the children. I still disagree. What do you think? — ROSWELL, N.M., MOM

DEAR MOM: I agree with you. The end does not justify the means. What will the children think when they learn — and they surely will — that policemen do not arrest little kids; that those whom they trusted and respected the most — their parents, teachers and officers of the law — lied to them and had staged a phony arrest to scare them? I think, in the end, that scheme will do more harm than good.

DEAR ABBY: Can you please tell me why restaurant owners keep their restaurants so dark you need a flashlight or a match in order to read the menu? It's ridiculous. Most people would like to see what they're eating. At least I do.

Am I an oddball? Or do people really enjoy going to a restaurant and sitting in the dark? — NO BAT IN PORTLAND

DEAR NO BAT: I speak only for myself, but I agree, when the waiter has to bring a flashlight to the table in order to read the menu, it's time to lighten up. Read on for another common complaint from a diner:

DEAR ABBY: Why do so many of the finer dining rooms have "background" music so loud that the customers have to shout in order to be heard? My wife and I were invited to one of the nicest restaurants in the city, and had a miserable time because we couldn't even carry on a conversation with the couple who treated us. It was our anniversary and we had looked forward to a nice visit, but it was impossible.

Please print this to let restaurant owners and managers know that most diners, especially the older ones, find it very difficult to converse with loud, so-called background music going on. If folks want to hear music, they will go to a concert. Good eating places do not need music at all. Thank you. — QUIET, PLEASE!

DEAR QUIET: You can say that again.

David Brenner gets 'Nightlife' of his own

ENTERTAINMENT

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

If late-night television gets any more crowded with talk shows, pretty soon you won't be able to find a good re-run anywhere.

Johnny Carson and David Letterman pretty well have NBC sewn up after the 11 o'clock news. Joan Rivers, longtime Carson stand-in, will be on her own with a show syndicated by Fox Television.

Now comes David Brenner, a frequent guest on everyone else's show, with one of his own. The appropriate title: "Nightlife."

The show takes its first bow Sept. 15 at midnight, right after Ted Koppel's "Nightline." One hundred stations have signed up for the show nationwide.

Brenner enters the nightside of television quietly, keeping his elbows to himself, rather than setting off sparks as Joan Rivers did when she broke from Carson to go on her own.

There's room enough for everyone after prime time, Brenner says, his show and theirs, and "I don't want to knock anyone off. ...There's no animosity between me and them."

And he has nothing but the warmest of things to say about Carson, television's king of late-night talk. "He's the best," said Brenner. "He's the best because he's the most talented." He's like Saran Wrap and ice cream, said Brenner. "Nothing wraps better than Saran Wrap and nothing tastes better than ice cream. Flavors come and go, but the basics, chocolate and vanilla, are still the most popular. He's the best."

According to Brenner, those who choose to tune in his show will get just the flavor they want.

"King World," which is syndicating the show, "did extensive research into what the public needs in programming," said Brenner. "They found the public wants alternative programming at a half-hour length late at night."

So, "Nightlife" will be a half-hour show, with a program that is so alternative that Brenner won't even discuss in detail how the show is shaping up.

But a few things are clear: The show's musical director, who receives solid billing — "Nightlife" starring David Brenner with Billy Preston — is expected to be a key part of the show.

"Billy Preston will attract some new faces to television who've never been on before," said Brenner.

Preston, who got an early start in music, played the church organ and directed the choir at the age of 7. He went on to tour and perform with such acts as the Little Richard Band, Sam Cooke and Jerry and the Pacemakers. For a time, during his association with Apple records, he was known as the fifth Beatle. This will be his second shot at television — he hosted "Shindig" in the '60s.

The show will be produced (Bob Tischler) and directed (Dave Wilson) by two "Saturday Night Live" veterans, which should add an unpredictable touch.

"This is not going to be a standard talk-variety show," said Brenner. "The half-hour sets it apart. You know they (Tischler and Wilson) will do different things. You know we don't have a warmed-over producer and director off the talk-show circuit. We've hired two very creative, innovative guys. It's only natural to assume it'll be a very different show."

For instance, there'll be no opening monologue as a standard feature. Some sort of grabber up front, Brenner promises, but not necessarily a standup. And "Nightlife" is intended as a theme as well as a title.

"Say we find a guy in Washington who's responsible for lighting the Capitol dome and keeping it lit all night," supposed Brenner. "That's a 'Nightlife' person."

Brenner's show will be on at different times in different markets. Depending upon the city, he might find himself up against any of the other three main night-timers.

"We're a different animal from the other shows," he said. "They're like two land masses squared off across from each other. We're going through the channel between." Brenner was asked to pilot this ship through the narrows relatively late in the show's planning stage, he said, and he agreed to take the job only after being assured of two things.

Brenner wanted to base the show in New York, where he lives, rather than join the television exodus to Hollywood, and he wanted creative control of the show. "Those are the things that have kept me off television before," he said.

Brenner grew up as a teen-age gang leader in West Philadelphia. His leader-and-class-cutup personality earned him selection as class president and class comedian in high school. He went on to Temple University and earned a degree in communication with honors. He credits his father, Lou, a vaudevillian, with giving him his sense of comic timing, which has held him in good stead in a career of standup comedy.

After years as a popular talk-show guest star, he flirted with series television twice. In 1976, he recalled, he did seven episodes of a show called "Snip," with Leslie Ann Warren, a show with a setting similar to that of the movie "Shampoo." The situation in this comedy included Brenner living with his ex-wife, and there was a black manicurist and a gay beautician. The show was rejected by a network as being too offbeat, Brenner said. It ended up playing well in Australia.

He also remembers working up a situation comedy with Dick Clark and trying to sell it. The program was rejected by a West Coast network executive, Brenner said, for being too family-oriented.

Later, during a stint in Atlantic City, he related the experience with the West Coast executive to Bill Cosby. Cosby laughed. "He told me, 'That's the same guy who turned down my show.'"

With David Brenner and Joan Rivers joining television's after-news group of talk and variety shows, here's how the late-night lineup looks for this fall.

— David Brenner: His "Nightlife" show begins Sept. 15, airing five nights a week.

— Johnny Carson: His "Tonight" show will continue on NBC.

— David Letterman: The "Late Night" show will continue to follow Carson.

— Joan Rivers: Her new program, titled "The Late Show Starring Joan Rivers," debuts Oct. 9. It will occupy a one-hour timeslot.

Violence erupts as Communist-led strike attempt fails in Chile

WORLD

By EDUARDO GALLARDO

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — A Communist-led strike attempt failed to paralyze the country but erupted in scattered anti-government violence, leaving one demonstrator dead, four policemen wounded and more than 300 people arrested.

Army, navy and police patrols broke up street barricades and demonstrations in Santiago and five other cities, where the two-day protest against military rule was called to continue today. Scores of bombings were reported Thursday.

The Democratic Popular Movement, a Communist-Socialist coalition, organized the strike to try to wear down the 13-year-old government of President Augusto Pinochet.

But the main opposition Christian Democratic Party refused to support it, and most Chileans went about their business. The protest, aimed mainly at halting public transport by force, was far less disruptive than one backed by all opposition groups two months ago.

"The situation in the country is absolutely normal," said Alfonso Marquez de la Plata, the labor minister.

"A work stoppage as such did not happen," said German Correa, secretary of the leftist coalition. "But we are seeing a positive mobilization against the dictatorship."

The government said a navy patrol shot and killed a 21-year-old man Thursday night when he tried to burn a commuter bus in the ocean resort city of Vina del Mar. A riot policeman was wounded in Santiago when a grenade exploded under a flaming barricade that he was trying to kick from a street.

Two other policemen and a child passer-by were wounded when extremists sprayed a police van in Santiago with machine gun fire, the government news agency ORBE reported.

A fourth policeman was shot while guarding the Santiago home of human rights activist Enrique Palet, who had received right-wing death threats.

Police reported arrests in Santiago, Valparaiso, Concepcion, Arica and other cities.

The Christian Democrats, in a major shift, backed away from the strike to avoid association with what they said were the Marxist coalition's violent tactics. Correa accused the centrist party of failing to abide by a joint commitment "to fight against the dictatorship."

Government spokesman Marcelo Venegas said security forces in Santiago arrested 15 "subversives" Thursday in raids that turned up an unspecified quantity of weapons and explosives.

Eight unarmed civilians were killed during the strike July 2-3, one of the most disruptive protests since Pinochet overthrew President Salvador Allende, an elected Marxist, on Sept. 11, 1973.

Aquino, Moslem rebel leader to negotiate end to 14-year revolt

By RUBEN G. ALABASTRO

JOLO, Philippines (AP) — President Corazon Aquino and a Moslem rebel leader today agreed to negotiate an end to a 14-year-old separatist revolt that has killed at least 50,000 people in the southern Philippines.

Mrs. Aquino and Nur Misuari, chairman of the separatist Moro National Liberation Front, met for two hours at a Roman Catholic convent.

In a joint statement issued after the meeting, they said they agreed "to support the continued cessation of hostilities" while holding further talks.

The Moro front has spearheaded the Moslem insurgency in about a dozen provinces on Mindanao, the Philippines' second largest island, and in the Sulu chain of islands farther south. Fighting has been reduced to isolated skirmishes in recent years.

Misuari returned a few days ago from a 10-year exile in Libya and Saudi Arabia. On Thursday, he declared himself head of a separate nation in the south.

"I am not your enemy," Mrs. Aquino was heard telling Misuari as they sat face-to-face in a small room. Misuari, wearing fatigues and a green beret, called her "Your Excellency," and she called him "Nur."

As Mrs. Aquino and Misuari talked, about 200 rebel fighters and dozens of marines stood facing each other outside the convent gate. There were no signs of tension or hostility between the groups.

Mrs. Aquino discarded protocol by meeting Misuari in Jolo, a rebel stronghold. She flew aboard an air force plane to Jolo island, part of the Sulu chain 600 miles south of Manila.

"I am not your enemy," Mrs. Aquino was heard telling Misuari as they sat face-to-face in a small room. Misuari, wearing fatigues and a green beret, called her "Your Excellency," and she called him "Nur."

The joint statement said the two leaders agreed to form panels for talks expected to focus on autonomy for Filipino Moslems who number about 5 million in a predominantly Christian nation of more than 50 million.

Misuari on Thursday told a guerrilla congress in a rebel-held coconut plantation that the Mindanao region was a separate state and he was its head.

Aides to Misuari said before the congress that although he favored establishing an independent Islamic state he would settle for autonomy if that is what Filipino Moslems want.

Mrs. Aquino has ruled out secession but is willing to grant Moslems autonomy. A commission drafting a new constitution in Manila has approved a provision on Moslem autonomy in the draft charter.

Another rebel leader, Al Haj Murad of the Moro Islamic Liberation Front, said his guerrillas will ignore any agreement that does not include them. Dimas Pundato, a third rebel group, has not issued a statement.

The Moslem uprising began after Marcos imposed martial law in 1972. Marcos was ousted by Mrs. Aquino in February in a military-civilian revolt.

The Marcos government, with the help of Libya, reached a cease-fire with the Moslems in 1976 but the truce collapsed several months later and the fighting flared. The government said then that at least 50,000 people had died in the fighting.

The Moslems soon broke up into three factions and, with the rebel ranks dwindling, the fighting died down.

A crowd of residents estimated by the local radio station at 10,000 welcomed Mrs. Aquino at the airport and an adjacent military camp.

From the convent, Mrs. Aquino and her party proceeded to the airport for the flight back to Manila, stopping for about 30 minutes at an air force base in Zamboanga city where she told a crowd of about 2,000 that "all is well with us and Misuari."

She said she told the officials who were against her trip to Jolo for security reasons: "I am not afraid to face any danger. I am ready to face anything and if I have to make sacrifices, gladly I will do it, if only to achieve peace for all."

WORLD IN BRIEF

American bomber crashes during NATO exercises

OSLO, Norway (AP) — An American A7 Corsair II fighter bomber based on the USS carrier Nimitz crashed off Norway during NATO exercises, and the pilot was missing, a U.S. spokesman said today.

It was the second American accident in the exercise in seven days.

The spokesman, Capt. Ed. Schrock, said the light attack jet crashed Thursday in the North Sea about 80 miles off the coastal town of Floroe in western Norway.

He identified the missing pilot as Lt. Donald Matson II, 28, of York, Pa. Allied officials said the plane was based in Jacksonville, Fla.

The plane was taking part in the three-week NATO exercise codenmaned "Northern Wedding."

Eight American servicemen were killed Aug. 29, the first day of the excercise, when a U.S. Navy CH-46 helicopter with 21 people on board crashed upon take-off from the carrier USS Saipan off Bodoe in northern Norway. Only two bodies were recovered.

Italians get U.S. warning

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

ROME — Special envoy Vernon Walters Thursday warned the Italian government that the United States would not hesitate to launch a new military attack against Libya if it discovered the North African country was behind any new attacks on U.S. citizens or interests, but he stopped short of asking the Italians to take any new punitive steps, according to senior Italian officials.

"We were not asked to take any new steps against Libya," sources said. "Walters came only to furnish us with new, if still inconclusive evidence, that Libya might be getting ready to give new support for terrorists actions."

The sources said that even Walters admitted the information was vague and far from concrete.

Official sources close to Italian Prime Minister Bettino Craxi described the talks Thursday as "good ...better than we had anticipated" because they said that Walters had not demanded new European sanctions against Libya, a request European officials had expected.

Walters, on a personal mission to West European capitals for President Reagan, delivered that message directly to Craxi and senior Italian Cabinet members during a series of meetings Thursday before going to Paris Thursday night for a meeting with French Prime Minister Jacques Chirac.

Iran object of protest

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

MOSCOW — The Soviet Union has made a muted protest to Iran in connection with the boarding of a Soviet freighter in the Persian Gulf, the Foreign Ministry said Thursday.

A ministry spokesman, Gennady I. Gerasimov, said the ship, the 11,750-ton Pyotr Yemtsov, has been released and the issue is all but closed. The Soviets' temperate response may indicate the government's unwillingness to set back its relations with Iran, which have improved slightly in recent months as Iran has agreed to resume natural gas sales to Moscow.

The Iranian navy halted the freighter Tuesday, went on board and escorted it to an Iranian port, Bandar Abbas, to search for possible arms and war-related goods that might be headed for Iraq, Iran's adversary in a six-year-old war. A senior Iranian navy official in Tehran said Thursday that the freighter was free to go after its cargo had been inspected.

U.S., Soviets resume talks

New York Times News Service

GENEVA, Switzerland — The United States and the Soviet Union resumed talks Thursday at an unannounced location in Bern, the Swiss capital, on halting the spread of chemical weapons, an American Embassy spokesman said.

At the same time, a separate group of American and Soviet experts also resumed talks in Geneva on nuclear testing issues, U.S. officials said.

Both sets of talks are expected to last two days and are part of a continuing round of U.S.-Soviet meetings that could lay the groundwork for a second summit conference between President Reagan and Mikhail S. Gorbachev, the Soviet leader. U.S. officials refused to disclose the location or the agenda for either set of talks.

The talks in Bern follow a meeting on non-proliferation held in Bern in March, and a series of U.S.-Soviet meetings on various other chemical weapons issues held sporadically during this year.
