Carter issues report on rescue mission

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter says even if the rescue mission in Iran could not have been completely successful, it would have been "a deeper failure" not to try.

In a solemn report to the nation Tuesday night, Carter vowed: "We will not forget our hostages and we will continue to take whatever steps are necessary and feasible" to secure their release.

But he also said that freedom can be gained for the 53 hostages only if Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, Iran's Revolutionary Council and the militants are persuaded unanimously to let them go — a task he all but called impossible.

"We cannot deal with inhumane people who have no respect for international law, who violate the tenets of their own religion and then persecute innocent people who are American citizens and deprive them of their freedom for six months," Carter said during a nationally broadcast news conference.

Carter condemned as "a horrible exhibition of inhumanity" the public display in Tehran of the bodies of eight American commandos who died in the aborted raid.

"This has aroused the disgust and contempt of the rest of the world and indicates quite clearly the kinds of people with whom we have been dealing in a peaceful effort to secure a resolution of this crisis," Carter declared.

For this "ghoulish action," Carter mostly blamed the militants in control of the U.S. Embassy — castigating them as terrorists — but also assigned responsibility to Ayatollah Sadegh Khalkhali, the Revolutionary Council member who presided over the episode.

Carter called the display of bodies "a vivid indication" of the difficulties he faced in dealing with the Iranians.

He described Iran's leaders as people "who cannot speak for their own country and who constantly change their position and even constantly change their identity."

The president said it would take "a unanimous decision by terrorists, the top officials, the Revolutionary Council and the Ayatollah Khomeini before this crime can be terminated" and the hostages held since Nov. 4 freed.

Carter defended the rescue attempt, which caused Secretary of State Cyrus Vance to resign, saying, "There is a deeper failure than that of incomplete success, and that is the failure to attempt a worthy effort, a failure to try."

This sentiment was shared by the returned raiders, even the wounded ones he visited Monday in Brooke Army Medical Center near San Antonio, Tex., said Carter.

"They all shared a common message to me and to the American people," he said. "The first message was one of regret — deep regret — that they had failed to carry out the mission as planned. The second one was an expression of thanks to me for giving them the honor to attempt to deliver to freedom the American hostages. And the third was a request expressed almost unanimously by them to be permitted to try again."

Carter was asked if he believed the commandos could have safely removed all the hostage from the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, and responded: "Obviously, an operation of this kind would have had some risk, but we were convinced that the hostages could be removed successfully and safely."

Even if the operation had met "without complete success," Carter said, it would have ended a crisis that is destablizing the Iranian society.

The president also disclosed that when the idea of a rescue mission was first conceived last November, it was "to be undertaken had the hostages been injured in any way," rather than in desperation to break the stalemate.

Despite his indignation at the "desecration of the dead," Carter said, "We will continue to try for a peaceful solution." He said that allied economic sanctions "might very well be a factor that would bring the Iranians to realize it's much better for them to release the hostages unharmed and resolve this crisis."

He gave no indication of success, however. In fact, his report was pessimistic in its acknowledgment that unanimity was required among Irans fragmented forces.

The administration's approach until now has been to concentrate on persuading President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr and other council moderates in hopes that the militants could be undercut with the Ayatollah's support.

Iranians invade embassy in London

LONDON (AP) — Gunmen forced their way into the Iranian embassy opposite Hyde Park today, taking a police officer guarding the building hostage, Scotland Yard reported. Shots were heard inside the building.

The police said two and possibly three gunmen were involved and identified them as Arabs from southern Iran who are seeking autonomy for their region, Khuzestan, which they call Arabistan. Frequent incidents are reported in the oil fields there. Iran is mainly a non-Arab nation.

Witnesses said two girls in headdresses ran out of the building when the gunmen took over.

Nearly three hours after the 11.30 a. m.—6:30 a. m. EST—breakin, police said they had established that the hostage policeman was "so far uninjured."

"As far as we know at the moment no one else in the building is injured," a Scotland Yard spokesmman said.

About 50 policemen with firearms and bullet-proof vests, including sharpshooters and members of the crack anti-terrorist squad, surrounded the three-story embassy.

A spokesman said "a number of shots" were reported heard inside the embassy at the takeover.

The spokesman said the gunmen were believed armed with rifles and possibly other weapons.

"We know our officer is being held by at least two men and there's a possibility of a third," said a Scotland Yard spokeswoman.

She said it was not known immediately how many staff members were inside the embassy. Witnesses at the scene reported some women and men fleeing just before police arrived.

Attempts to reach the embassy by telephone were not successful.

The Foreign Office said the mission has a diplomatic staff of about 25, plus an undisclosed number of non-diplomatic personnel.

Scotland Yard said the officer grabbed by the gunmen was a member of the Diplomatic Protection Group, which guards foreign missions in London, and was armed with a revolver. He was not immediately identified.

Mrs. Angela Gardener, receptionist at the Royal College of Practitioners next door to the embassy, said she thought there was a man hiding in the garden.

"A window cleaner burst in here and said that he had heard two or three shots fired from inside the embassy," she reported.

Carter names Muskie

He has been Carter supporter

WASHINGTON (AP) — From the Panama Canal to Iran, Edmund S. Muskie's Senate voting record shows few deviations from White House foreign policy positions.

Indeed, the man President Carter has picked to be secretary of state says it is important for the administration to project an image of stability around the world.

And in Muskie, a 22-year senator from Maine who first came to national prominence as the Democratic vice presidential candidate in 1968, Carter also chose a man more of political than diplomatic breeding.

Although Muskie, 66, has concentrated domestic affairs in the Senate and acknowledged that "I am not a foreign policy technician," Carter praised him during Tuesday night's nationally televised news conference as "extremely well qualified" because of his broad experience, bipartisan esteem and "international reputation."

He said Muskie's political experience, including an unsuccessful run for the 1972 Democratic presidential nomination, made him familiar with the entire nation and its aspirations.

The president said Muskie and Warren Christopher, who will remain as deputy secretary of state after being bypassed for the top job, "will provide continuity for our foreign policy."

Muskie supported Carter's decision to try to rescue the American hostages in Iran, the bold but unsuccessful move that prompted Cyrus R. Vance to resign in protest Monday.

"We do not regret the attempt (to free the hostages). After all, it was a response to kidnapping and blackmail," Muskie said. "We do not rule out the use of any appropriate means which might end the confrontation and bring sanity back to Iran."

Muskie told reporters he has no doubt of Carter's confidence in him. "The president has left no doubt in my mind...that I will be the foreign policy spokesman," Muskie said when asked about his standing in view of the frequent clashes between Vance and the president's national security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski.

Muskie's Senate record, including service on the Foreign Relations Committee, is typical of a Democrat who offers strong support to a president from the same party.

He sided with Carter on most of the president's most controversial foreign policy positions, including the Panama Canal treaties, the decision to scrap the B-1 bomber, the sale of advanced fighters to Israel, Egypt and Saudi Arabia and maintaining economic sanctions against Rhodesia.

Although he took no formal position on the SALT II treaty with the Soviet Union, Muskie was counted as a strong proponent of arms control and a virtually certain vote in favor of the strategic arms limitation agreement.

As chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, Muskie argued against proposals, also opposed by Carter, to raise the defense budget by 3 percent to 5 percent, saying security "is not that simple."

Like Carter, Muskie changed his view of the Soviet Union after its military incursion into Afghanistan. "Betrayed, yes, that's the word," he said. On detente, he said, "We thought it was in this country's best interests. She (the Soviet Union) just ran out on us."

After heading a U.S. mission to the People's Republic of China in November 1978, Muskie advocated a formula recognizing Peking while maintaining unofficial ties with Taiwan — almost identical to what the administration worked out a month later.

Muskie's only significant break with Carter came over the Turkish arms embargo, first imposed in 1974 to punish Turkey for the invasion of Cyprus. Muskie voted to retain the embargo in 1978 when the administration wanted it repealed.

Further back, Muskie was among Democratic senators who supported the war in Vietnam in its initial stages but turned against it. By the time he sought the Democratic presidential nomination in 1972, he said he regretted not having opposed the war in 1966 and advocated a deadline for withdrawal by U.S. forces.

Carter, for his part, has indicated several times his high opinion of Muskie. In 1976, Muskie was nearly tapped to run for vice president again; he and Walter F. Mondale were the finalists for that nomination. Last year, Muskie was Carter's envoy on a European trip.

Officially, Muskie remained neutral in this year's presidential campaign, but he was friendly to Carter.

Lance acquitted by Atlanta court

ATLANTA (AP) — Former U.S. budget budget director Bert Lance was acquitted today on nine counts of bank fraud after a 16-week trial. A mistrial was declared on another three counts because the jury was deadlocked Lance's attorneys asked U.S. District Judge Charles A. Moye Jr. to declare directed verdicts of acquittal on the three remaining counts. Moye said he was not ready to decide immediately, but called attorneys for both sides into his chambers.

"We're delighted about the not guilty verdicts," Lance said. "It's what we thought all along it would be. We're terribly delighted and pleased."

The jury also acquitted or failed to come to a decision on charges against Lance's three co-defendants, Thomas Mitchell, Richard Carr, and Jack Mullins.

Mitchell was the only defendant found innocent on all charges.

Lance was found innocent on nine charges of misuing the funds of two Georgia banks he headed to make loans to his wife, son and three friends.

Despite more than 50 hours of deliberations, the jurors could not reach a decision on two counts charging Lance lied in financial statements and one count charging that a loan Lance made to co-defendant Carr through the National Bank of Georgia was a misapplication of bank funds.

On Tuesday, prosecution and defense lawyers met privately with Moye just before the jurors were sent home, but afterwards the attorneys said they had been admonished not to reveal anything about the discussion.

Lance is a close friend of President Carter. His co-defendants are north Georgia businessmen and have been friends of Lance for years.

The jurors first announced they were deadlocked on Saturday, after 33 hours of deliberation spread over six days.

Moye informed the jury Monday of their sworn duty to reach unanimous verdicts, then on Tuesday urged them to consider the cost of the proceedings and the effect on the defendants if the case is not resolved.

Republicans outnumber Demos in Midland absentee voting

Midland County residents voting absentee totaled 1,352 at the close of absentee balloting at 5 p.m. Tuesday, according to the Midland County clerk's office.

Republicans outnumbered Democrats by more than two to one in casting their ballot. For the GOP candidates, there were 882 persons who voted in the County Courthouse. Another 200 requested ballots mailed to them.

Only 366 Democrats trekked to the courthouse to mark their ballots, while another 84 asked that ballots be mailed to them.

There are 35,653 registered voters in Midland County. Those who didn't vote absentee will have from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. Saturday to voice their opinion in either the Republican or Democratic races at one of 27 precincts.

Midland's teachers get 15 percent salary hike

By DAVID CAMPBELL
Staff Writer

It wasn't exactly what the teachers wanted. But it was close.

School trustees on Tuesday granted Midland instructors a salary adjustment from 25 percent above the state minimum salary to 32 percent above the state, representing an average 15 percent increase.

To pay for that raise, Midland property owners will receive a three-cent increase in taxes.

Also in the three-hour session, the board heard a report regarding the establishment of an outdoor learning center and approved regular agenda items.

In the original motion by Trustee Ron Britton, Midland instructors would have received what they asked for at the April 15 meeting — 35 percent above the state minimum salary. That would have represented an 18 percent increase in wages.

However, the board amended the motion for a 32 percent salary adjustment above the state scale and approved it 5-to-1 with Britton dissenting.

Apparently, the compromise resulted when the board realized that granting the teachers' original proposal would require cutting all programs across the board by 10 percent without raising the school tax rate.

"I KNOW THE PROGRAMS and materials are not going to be sufficient with a (18 percent) salary raise," said Trustee Joyce Sherrod, a former teacher. She suggested the 15 percent hike would give the teachers what they wanted — an increase — and still allow the district to continue with the programs and supplies the teachers require.

Britton said he favored granting the teachers' original proposal in exchange for a better working relationship between Midland instructors and the board.

"I'll eat the comments and the calls from the taxpayers, my feelings and my property increases," the new trustee said. "But next year I may be the other side's (the taxpayers) advocate if I don't see a change in the ...attitude of everybody working together," he cautioned teachers.

"If we are going to pay No. 1 (salary) in the state, we ought to be No. 1 (academically) in the state," Britton added.

Kerry Davis, spokesman for the teachers' group, afterward said the instructors appreciate the district's efforts.

"THE TEACHERS WOULD feel good about the 32 percent (above state minimum salary)," he said. "It does show that the district is behind us.

"Of course we would have liked to have had the 35 (percent above state minimum). We (teachers) realize that what we like and what we get is very different in many situations," Davis added.

The teachers' spokesman also said the salary adjustment would not require cutting any of the district's programs.

Earlier, trustees delayed action until May 27 to study the feasibility of establishing a pilot program involving an outdoor learning center.

Avalanches feared at volcano

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — Fearing tons of ice and rock could crash down from Mount St. Helens' north face, Washington state officials have asked Gov. Dixy Lee Ray to completely close off parts of the volcano.

The Mount St. Helens Watch group, consisting of Emergency Services Department officials, sent the request for proposed "red" and "blue" hazard zones to the governor Tuesday, said Rick Lavalla of the department.

The group's action follows reports earlier this week from the U.S. Geological Survey that the Goat Rocks area on the northwest face of the volcano had bulged 20 feet in four days.

Scientists say this is a possible sign that the north flank is breaking away or that lava — molten rock — is pushing its way up through the interior of the volcano toward a violent eruption.

Ray declared a state of emergency in the two counties surrounding the peak in southwest Washington immediately after the 9,677-foot mountain began erupting March 27. But there has been limited access to the mountain itself for property owners, loggers and scientists.

"The hardest thing is to convince people of the danger," said Lavalla. "The mountain looks serene, so people can't fathom 4,000 vertical feet of earth, rock and ice plunging into the lake (Spirit Lake) in less than two minutes."

At least four glaciers, some 130-feet thick could be involved in a devastating slide, said Lavalla.

The watch group recommends dividing the area adjacent to the mountain into red and blue zones.

The red zone would encompass the mountain and immediate areas to the west and south and the entire Spirit Lake area on the north and east. No one would be allowed in this area.

The blue zone would extend five miles around the red zone to a point 15 miles east of Interstate 5. Although workers could use the area during the day, no overnight use would be allowed.

Thunderstorms due tonight

Midlanders can expect a chance for thunderstorms tonight, followed by cooler temperatures on Thursday.

The National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport is predicting a 30 percent chance of thunderstorms tonight with southwesterly winds at 10-15 mph.

Tonight's low should be in the low 50s with Thursday's high expected in the mid-70s.

Tuesday's high of 87 fell short of the record high for the date of 95 set in 1947. The overnight low of 61 was 20 degrees off the record of 41 in 1960.

The raindrops that you may have heard during the night amounted to only a trace of precipitation recorded at the National Weather Service. The total for April remains at .86 inch, while the yearly total stands at 1.64 inches.

Andrews, Rankin and Big Spring also report traces of precipitation.

Muskie attracts broad support

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The unexpected appointment of Sen. Edmund S. Muskie as secretary of state is attracting broad bipartisan support and is being hailed as a shrewd political move likely to boost President Carter's ratings with Congress and the voters.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., a leading critic of Carter administration foreign policy, predicts the nomination of the Maine Democrat, a former governor and presidential contender, will move through the Senate "with lightning speed."

The appointment seems likely to defuse much of the smouldering congressional discontent caused by the failed hostage rescue mission in Iran and the resignation of Secretary of State Cyrus Vance because he opposed that move.

It seems likely also to head off the potentially politically embarrassing confirmation hearings that might well have occurred had Carter named an insider to head the State Department.

And it goes far to calm the troubled waters of the government's internal politics by placing a member of the Senate's inner circle at the center of administration foreign policy decision-making.

"This is a fascinating appointment from the political sense," said a Senate insider who prefers to remain anonymous. "This is exactly the sort of politically astute thing Lyndon Johnson would have done."

An anaylysis

The appointment comes at a low point for the administration. The president's re-election chances are increasingly seen as suffering from a perception that his administration's handling of foreign policy is inept.

The president's ratings in public opinion polls have been slipping from the high point they reached in the first wave of unity caused by the seizure of the hostages in November.

Carter narrowly lost a recent primary in Pennsylvania and the Michigan caucus, taking one less delegate in each than Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.

The Muskie appointment left Kennedy at a loss for criticism.

"He's a man that will sift through the facts, make a thorough examination, and then come to a responsible judgment," Kennedy said, adding that he believes Muskie will prove a competent secretary of state.

But Rep. Robert Bauman, R-Md., who heads the American Conservative Union, questioned Muskie's qualifications for the job. He said the appointment clearly was political.

Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., called the nomination "a shrewd political move."

The appointment of a senator avoids a "difficult confirmation hearing and a full and embarrassing airing of the details of the aborted rescue mission," Dole said.

"By selecting a senior senator from the New England region, and a man with strong ethnic ties, President Carter will perhaps gain ground with groups that he has previously been losing," Dole said.

At his news conference Tuesday night, Carter denied allegations Muskie is not qualified and gave this summing up of the case for his appointment:

"Sen. Muskie has more than 20 years experience in the Senate. He's been very heavily involved in foreign affairs there as a member ... of the Foreign Relations Committee.

"He's played an active role in nationwide campaigns throughout this country as a vice presidential candidate and also as a presidential candidate himself. ... I think he's highly sensitive about the aspirations and ideals of our country that ought to be mirrored in its foreign policy."

It is clear that the appointment of a man of Congress to the president's Cabinet long has been an objective of ranking Democrats concerned with the continual spate of bickering and distrust between those at the White House and those at the Capitol.

Senate Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia, calling the 66-year-old Muskie "a rock of reason," made clear his relief.

"The Senate can be assured that at last there is an individual in the administration that understands the Senate, that understands the legislative process," Byrd said.

County library participates in 1980 Texas Reading Club

Midland County Library is among nearly 400 libraries throughout Texas participating this year in the Texas Reading Club. The program is sponsored by the Texas State Library and participating libraries.

Young readers will take part in activities built around "Sports Splash," the theme selected for 1980. The nearly universal interest in sports that range from solitary activities like jogging to team sports like baseball and football gives them appeal for most young readers. And libraries have books about sports that range from how to play the games through biographies of famous players to novels and stories with sports themes.

Most important of all, young Texans who participate will sample the fun of recreational reading. Today's public libraries include a wide range of books and other printed material for young readers. Summertime is vacation time, but skills honed by vacation time reading will be sharp for the year ahead.

"One of the most serious problems we face today is the deterioration of reading ability among young people," said Dr. Dorman H. Winfrey, director of the Texas State Library. "We know, however, that people of all ages who develop the habit of reading for recreation become good readers. Reading is a recreational activity with both immediate and long-term benefits."

Special activities that encourage regular visits to the library have been planned by James L. and Carol H. Thomas of Denton. He teaches in the North Texas State University School of Library and Information Sciences, and she recently completed a doctorate in special education at the University of Virginia. They are the parents of two sons.

Loiterers get 99 citations

BIG SPRING — Big Spring city police last week issued 99 citations in an effort to get youthful loiterers off of the lots and sidewalks of Gregg Street, one of the city's busiest roadways.

Apparently the tactic worked.

Five patrolmen issued the tickets in the wake of a city council order to clean up the streets and lots of trespassers, said City Manager Don Davis.

The city, Davis said, had gotten "lax in our enforcement of criminal trespass law," and councilmen decided to set up a "goon squad" to clear the streets of loiterers.

Most of the citations issued were for criminal trespass. Others were for public intoxication, driving while intoxicated, driving without a license, discharging fireworks and a traffic warrant.

Mother charged with murder

ODESSA — Charges of first degree murder and injury to a child were filed Tuesday against an Odessa mother in the death of her two-year-old child April 8.

Bond for Rosa Lopez Trevino was set at $30,000, $25,000 for first degree murder and $5,000 for injury to a child.

Charges stemmed from a house fire at 2008 W. County Road in Ector County in which 2-year-old David Anthony Trevino died.

The house was occupied by Pete and Rosa Trevino and their son. Officials said they found the child in the middle of the bed in the combination living room-bedroom.

According to Ector County fire officials, Mrs. Trevino said she was in the bathroom when she heard a fire. She left the bathroom and went outside, walking past the child on her way through the house, officials said.

The fire apparently started near the front door to the living room and bedroom.

Motorcyclist dies in Odessa crash

ODESSA — A 17-year-old Odessa motorcyclist died late Tuesday night after being dragged 8 feet when he was pinned under an automobile after a traffic accident.

Michael Edwin Cain of Odessa was pronounced dead at the scene by an Ector County justice of the peace.

According to a police department spokesman, a vehicle driven by Patricia Anne Keener, also of Odessa, and Cain were eastbound in the 300 block of West 38th Street. Both vehicles were attempting to turn north onto Robertson Avenue when they collided. The motorcycle skidded approximately 4 feet before impact, the spokesman said.

A passenger on the motorcycle received minor injuries.

Midland teachers get pay increase

Soil and Water Conservation District, and other Midland conservationists presented a 90-minute report about the project and its program.

The 46-acre outdoor learning center would be located in Hogan Park. Maintenance would be done on a cooperative basis between city Parks and Recreation Department and the Midland Soil and Water Conservation District. The school district would provide an instructor at the center.

THE PROJECT WOULD provide students with an opportunity to learn about ecology, Dwyer said. Students would be given an insight to wildlife habitats, clean air, energy, and soil and water conservation, he added.

Joe Huckstein of the Texas Education Agency explained that other school districts in the state are trying similar programs.

Although the area will be fenced, vandalism could become a problem, trustees noted. Huckstein said major vandalism is not a problem with other school districts because of community pride with their projects.

A fence would prevent motorcyles and automobiles from entering the area, said Wayne Kohout of the Parks and Recreation Department. But, persons on foot would have access to the area, he admitted.

In another action, trustees commended the work of the Parent Teacher's Association volunteer program. Betty Edgar, president of the organization, reported on progress made by the volunteer program with the partners in reading project, outside speakers in the classroom and school improvement and beautification projects.

THE BOARD GRANTED a request from the city Parks and Recreation Department and the Alamo YMCA to use school facilities for their summer programs. However, that use is conditional upon when the district starts its renovation and repair work on the schools, trustees said.

Improvement of telephone services in the school district was delayed by trustees pending further study.

Other actions receiving trustee approval included student transfers from Greenwood and Ector school districts, personnel resignations, bills payable, investments and bids on cafeteria cleaning supplies.

Unit 'frustrated' by rescue attempt

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Fifty members of the Delta Group commando unit were grim-faced as they returned to Fort Bragg and one expressed frustration that their mission to rescue the American hostages in Iran was canceled.

"You've got a mission. You know you can do it, and somebody tells you to pull out," one of the men told reporters as the group walked through Fayetteville airport Tuesday.

If the others shared in his frustration with the pullback order, they weren't willing to talk to reporters about it.

The mission was aborted after three of eight helicopters were disabled. In leaving a rendezvous point in Iran, another helicopter collided with a C-130 transport, killing eight Americans.

The Delta Group, which also is known as Operation Blue Light, is made up of about 300 persons from all U.S. military services. Based at Fort Bragg, the anti-terrorist unit reportedly is controlled directly by the Pentagon.

Defense Secretary Harold B. Brown said after the ill-fated mission that 180 men were involved.

Those returning Tuesday flew to Fayetteville aboard Piedmont Airlines Flight 250 from Atlanta.

At the Fayetteville airport, they quickly walked through the terminal to more than a half-dozen dark green Army vans, station wagons and staff cars waiting outside and were driven off, apparently to Fort Bragg.

Some of the men carried small military briefcases. Most wore leisure suits or sports clothing with open-neck collars.

At Hurlburt Field, Fla., today, the Air Force honored five airmen from the small Florida Panhandle base who died during the aborted rescue attempt.

Families of the casualties and at least one survivor of the raid were to attend the open air ceremony.

An American flag at half mast waved in the morning breeze as preparations for the ceremony began in Hurlburt's Air Park.

Airman First Class William Tootle, 21, of Casselberry, Fla., was one of three Hurlburt airmen injured in Iran. He returned to Hurlburt Tuesday afternoon, saying he would be willing to go on another mission like the Iranian raid.

The Hurlburt dead were Capt. Charles McMillan, 29, Boise, Idaho; Tech. Sgt. Joel Mayo, 34, Bonifay, Fla.; Capt. Richard Bakke, 33, Long Beach, Calif.; Capt. Lyn McIntosh, 33, Valdosta, Ga.; and Capt. Harold Lewis Jr., 35, Mansfield, Conn.

On Tuesday, an estimated 2,000 persons attended a memorial service at New River Marine Corps Air Station near Jacksonville for three Marines killed in the collision in Iran.

"We are proud of them," said Lt. Col. W.D. Kalas, commander of the unit from which the three volunteered for the rescue mission. "They are now part of the mystique of our Marine Corps."

Each man died "for a nation and a people he loved," Kalas said. "That is a hero's sacrifice."

Eulogized were Staff Sgt. Dewey Johnson, 32, of Dublin, Ga.; Sgt. John Davis Harvey, 21, Roanoke, Va., and Cpl. George W. Holmes Jr., 22, Pine Bluff, Ark.

Draft opponents plan filibuster

WASHINGTON (AP) — With President Carter's draft registration plan rolling toward another victory in Congress, opponents say a Senate filibuster probably is the last chance to stop the plan.

Carter's blueprint to spend $13.3 million to begin registering young men this summer was approved by an unexpectedly wide 8-4 vote Tuesday in a Senate Appropriations subcommittee. The full committee plans to debate the issue Thursday, and Senate aides predict easy approval there.

The plan already has passed the House.

"I think the ball game's over," said one Senate aide, who asked not to be identified and whose boss opposed registration.

"They have the votes in the full committee," another aide, Jack Robertson, said. His boss, Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., has vowed to wage a filibuster on the Senate floor to try to block action on registration.

Robertson said the subcommittee vote "was much worse than we had thought" it would be. It easily was the biggest victory margin yet in five major congressional votes this year on registration.

Even administration officials had worried that they might lose the subcommittee vote, but had expressed confidence in the outcome in the full committee.

Two Republicans who opponents had thought would vote in the subcommittee against the plan — Sens. Paul Laxalt of Nevada and Harrison Schmitt of New Mexico — voted instead with the administration.

"The volunteer force is a shambles. The reserve force is a shambles. The Selective Service structure itself is a shambles," Schmitt said.

"We were very disappointed the subcommittee did not have the courage to reject presidential policies which implement military solutions to our foreign policy problems," said David Landau, a leader of registration opponents outside Congress.

Senior members of the Senate Armed Services Committee — Democrats and Republicans alike — spent 90 minutes at the subcommittee's meeting, laying out arguments for registration.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., said advance registration would save three months in mobilizing troops in an emergency.

Nunn and Sen. John C. Stennis, D-Miss., the Armed Services chairman, said a draft probably will be needed.

However, Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., cited a Selective Service report that said advance registration would save only seven days.

Sens. Charles McC. Mathias, R-Md., and Henry Bellmon, R-Okla., said registration was only a piecemeal solution to the more serious problem of keeping experienced personnel in the service.

129 ballots cast for Boyd

BIG SPRING — Hal Boyd, who needed only one vote to get elected to the Big Spring City Council, instead received 129 votes.

Boyd was the only candidate in a runoff election held Monday; his two opponents earlier had withdrawn from the race.

But, Texas state law required that a run-off be held although only one name was on the ballot.

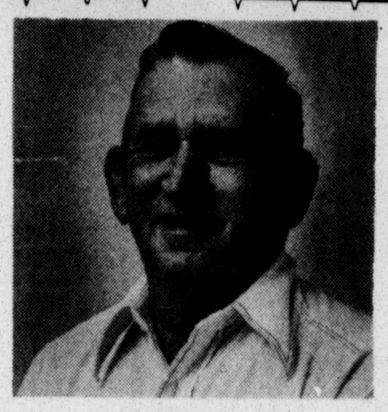

The taxpayers' cost of the election, held at five polling places, was $950.

BUSINESS MIRROR

Red ink smears business reports

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — You can't judge the health of business by oil company profits, and proof of it is coming just about every other day now in red-inked financial reports, layoffs and requests for bailouts.

General Motors, biggest manufacturer of all, reported first quarter profits down 87 percent to $155 million, or 52 cents a share. Ford lost $163.3 million. Chrysler is expected to report a $400 million loss.

Auto industry layoffs now exceed 200,000, and if the total stays below the 250,000 or so layed off in the recession of 1974-1975 everyone who studies the industry will be surprised. The future is bleak.

Chrysler has been pleading and cajoling its bankers into line so that it can show the federal government it is still viable and worthy of receiving Washington's guarantees that the loans will be repaid.

Those close to the action feel certain that some government guarantees will be forthcoming, but the Transportation Department indicates it has reservations. The Chrysler operating plan, it states, is premised on optimistic assumptions for the sale, among other items, of large cars.

The skies aren't any friendlier to business. Pan American World Airways reported a record-high deficit of nearly $75 million for the first three months of the year. Fuel and fare regulation were blamed.

Pan Am wasn't alone, except in the size of its loss. American, United, Trans World, Braniff and Western also dipped into the red, in part due to seasonal traffic factors, but also because of soaring costs.

Banking has problems. In Philadelphia, the nation's 23rd largest bank, First Pennsylvania, once known for its innovative ways, is in such financial trouble that the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. has had to step in with $500 million of rescue funds. The bank lost $5 million on operations and another $1.4 million on securities in the first quarter.

FDIC officials maintain that First Pennsylvania's problems are unique rather than indicative of an industry condition, but strains exist in other institutions because of market conditions, including explosive increases in their cost of money, which is their raw material.

Savings banks and savings and loan associations have been hurt badly, being forced to pay increasingly higher rates to attract savings, while holding as assets low-rate mortgages made years earlier. Regulatory officials have warned that some of them might be forced to merge.

The deteriorating condition of business is perhaps clouded in the public mind by a long string of oil company profit reports that appear regularly every three months, and by the fact that the year-to-year increase in corporate profits for 1979 exceeded 20 percent.

However, as with paychecks, the numbers are inflated. Inflation last year exceeded 13 percent and has been around 18 percent so far in 1980. Inflation-adjusted numbers are more meaningful and maybe even ominous.

Using that technique, many companies that reported big profits suffered real losses instead. Many companies failed to cover their dividends. What was called profit was really an illusion; and what they paid out as dividends was taken not from profit but from capital.

In other words, and assuming the inflation-adjusted figures tell a reliable story, some of the biggest companies in America are slowly being liquidated, consuming yesteryear's profits and investments.

Now with the country pitching into recession, and with American industry notoriously poor in dealing with a "shrink" economy, the sight of red ink and layoffs and bailouts could become commonplace.

Livestock auction report

The Southwestern Livestock Auction Co. ran through 625 head of cattle Tuesday in a market that was generally steady with last week's prices. Feeder steers were $1 higher per hundredweight. Feeder heifers were steady. Packer cows were $2 higher and topped out at $46.50 per hundredweight. Packer bulls were steady.

Here's a rundown on the market:

Steers weighing 600 to 700 pounds were auctioned for $59.50 to $64.50 per hundredweight; 500 to 600 pounds, $64.50 to $68; 400 to 500 pounds, $72.50 to $75; 300 to 400 pounds, $82.50 to $95; under 300 pounds, $92.50 to $98.50 per hundredweight.

Heifers weighing 600 to 700 pounds were sold for $55 to $57.50 per hundredweight; 500 to 600 pounds, $57.50 to $59; 400 to 500 pounds, $59.50 to $62.50; 300 to 400 pounds, $62.50 to $70; under 300 pounds, $72.50 to $85 per hundredweight.

Cows utility went for $44 to $46.50 per hundredweight.

Canners and cutters were auctioned for $38 to $40 per hundredweight.

Not enough breed cows were sold to test the market. Most cow-and-calf pairs were weighed out by the pound.

Lee, epidemiology professor at the University of Washington; Dr. James E. Master of suspense films dead at 80

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — His murderers showed up in shower stalls, his victims in potato sacks. But Sir Alfred Hitchcock, whose mastery of terror chilled movie audiences for half a century, died peacefully of natural causes at the age of 80.

The portly British-born "Hitch" was perhaps the film industry's best-known director. A popular television series made his pouting profile instantly recognizable to millions of Americans.

In more than 50 movies, Hitchcock created a legacy of suspense classics — "Psycho," "The Birds," "Rear Bindow" and "Spellbound." Yet he never won an Oscar for direction.

Hitchcock, plagued by kidney failures and arthritis, died at his home Tuesday after suffering ill health for a year. His family, including Alma, his wife of 54 years, was with him.

Despite a heart condition that necessitated a pacemaker, Hitchcock was preparing another thriller at the time of his death — "The Short Night," the tale of a real-life British traitor whose duplicity led to the deaths of 42 agents.

"There was nobody like him," said actor James Stewart, a favorite Hitchcock player. "I have lost a great friend, and the world has lost a man who made a tremendous contribution to our business."

Hitchcock's first American-made film, "Rebecca" in 1940, won a best-picture Oscar, and the movie Academy presented him with the Irving G. Thalberg award in 1968. Last year, Hitchcock was given the American Film Institute's Lifetime Achievement Award.

Alfred Hitchcock

Hitchcock's stylized treatment of his favorite themes — violence, suspicion, guilt and confession — his clever use of the tracking shot by a camera that was always moving and his genius for the clever plot twist gave universal recognition to the label, "Hitchcock film."

His work encompassed all manner of the macabre, but one scene from "Psycho" may be remembered as the high moment of Hitchcockian suspense. It is the shower scene, in which innocent bather Janet Leigh is brutally knifed by Anthony Perkins. For weeks afterward, horrified moviegoers checked the curtains twice before showering.

"He always executed his suspense with taste; he never offended you" said Perkins. "You were scared by it, but pleasantly."

The imposing Hitchcock persona — drooping lower lip and ghoulish "Good eeevening" set to the tune of "Funeral March of a Marionette" — became his signature on the TV series, "Alfred Hitchcock Presents." He delighted in the opening and closing appearances in which he poked fun at commercials.

"One of television's great contributions," he said in 1966, "is that it brought murder back into the home where it belongs. Seeing a murder on television can be good therapy. It can help work off one's antagonisms. And if you haven't any antagonisms, the commercials will give you some."

The television exposure helped movie-goers who searched each film for the single appearance by the director.

In "The Lodger" in 1926, Hitchcock played a reporter because "we had to fill the screen." The appearances became a trademark.

The "Lifeboat" cameo presented a challenge because the movie took place entirely in a survival craft. He solved the dilemma with typical humor — appearing in a newspaper ad for weight reduction.

But Hitchcock shied away from the limelight. He limited his social life to small dinners at home where the cuisine and wine met his high standards. At a lunch in 1966, he spoke of his private terror — the sound of a hand smacking a ketchup bottle.

"As a result of this sound, some horrible looking red goo slowly emerges from the neck of the bottle and lays itself over some perfectly innocent French fried potatoes which never harmed anyone in their life."

Born Aug. 14, 1899, the son of a London poultry dealer, Hitchcock was educated in a Jesuit seminary and at the University of London. He began his career in 1925.

Americans soon claimed him as their own, nominating him for four Academy Awards, and he became a naturalized U.S. citizen in 1955. England recognized him in January when he was knighted by Queen Elizabeth II.

Of his 54 films, Hitchcock once listed among his favorites "Spellbound," "Lifeboat" and "Psycho." His last projects, including "Frenzy" in 1972 — in which a victim wound up in a potato sack — and "Family Plot" in 1976, were commercially successful but not considered among his best.

Despite the tensions of his films, he once blamed his constant battle with his weight on a placid temperament.

"That's very healthy and should mean a long life," he said, knocking wood. "It's better not to worry about unnecessary things."

Funeral services will be held Friday at the Church of the Good Shepherd in Beverly Hills.

THE NEWSPAPER BIBLE

Will Messiah really die?

Now My soul is deeply troubled. Shall I pray, 'Father, save Me from what lies ahead'? But that is the very reason why I came!

Father, bring glory and honor to Your name."

Then a voice spoke from heaven saying, "I have already done this, and I will do it again."

When the crowd heard the voice, some of them thought it was thunder, while others declared an angel had spoken to Him.

Then Jesus told them, "The voice was for your benefit, not Mine.

The time of judgment for the world has come—and the time when Satan, the prince of this world, shall be cast out.

And when I am lifted up [on the cross], I will draw everyone to Me."

He said this to indicate how He was going to die.

"Die?" asked the crowd. "We understood that the Messiah would live forever and never die. Why are you saying he will die? What Messiah are you talking about?"

Jesus replied, "My light will shine out for you just a little while longer. Walk in it while you can, and go where you want to go before the darkness falls, for then it will be too late for you to find your way.

Make use of the Light while there is still time; then you will become light bearers." After saying these things, Jesus went away and was hidden from them.

CBS, ABC share top prime-time ratings almost evenly for last week

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS and ABC split the Top 10 in the prime-time ratings race for the week ending April 27, with ABC, runnerup to CBS in the recently completed season, finishing first for the seven-day period by less than half a point.

CBS' "60 Minutes," the top-rated program in the 1979-80 season that ended April 20, was No. 1 for the week, with ABC's newsmagazine, "20-20," an impressive fifth, figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co. showed.

ABC, in the most recent prime-time survey, claimed the No. 2 show to "60 Minutes," "That's Incredible," with another ABC program, "Three's Company," third.

The rating for "60 Minutes" was 24.9. Nielsen says that means of all the homes in the country with television, just under a quarter saw at least part of the newsmagazine.

ABC's rating for the week was 16.8 to 16.4 for CBS and 14.6 for NBC.

"Baryshnikov on Broadway," from ABC, finished 17th for the week, and NBC's new sports-oriented series, "The Sunday Games," was 19th. ABC's first-ever broadcast of the movie "Lady Sings the Blues" was No. 29 for the week.

With the aborted attempt to rescue the American hostages in Iran, all three networks cut into regular programming with special coverage. CBS News' report pulled the highest rating, good for a 44th place finish. NBC's program was No. 55 and ABC's finished 68th.

In addition to ABC's special report on Iran, the bottom five included ABC's "Goodtime Girls" in 66th place, NBC's "Prime Time Saturday" 67th, "United States" on NBC 69th and an ABC "News Closeup" on the dangers of uranimum No. 70.

Here are the week's 10 highest-rated shows:

"60 Minutes," with a rating of 24.9 representing 19 million homes, CBS; "That's Incredible," 24.6 or 18.8 million, and "Three's Company," 23.4 or 17.9 million, both ABC; "M-A-S-H," 21.5 or 16.4 million, CBS; "20-20," 21.3 or 16.3 million, ABC; "Dallas" and "Dukes of Hazzard," both 21.1 or 16.1 million, both CBS; "Flo," 20.9 or 15.8 million, CBS, and "Love Boat," 20.7 or 15.8 million, and "Taxi," 20.6 or 15.7 million, both ABC.

Microwaves may heat human bodies

By DANIEL Q. HANEY

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Using no more power than a lightbulb, small doses of microwaves can warm people just as effectively as microwave ovens roast turkeys, says a Harvard physicist.

Professor Robert V. Pound says that home microwaves can produce radiant heat that should be able to cheaply and safely supplement furnaces to keep people warm.

The innovation, he said, "could contribute importantly toward alleviating the developing world energy crisis."

Pound, who outlined his idea in the latest issue of the journal Science, says this kind of radiation is no more dangerous than the heat waves from a fireplace or wood stove.

When a microwave generator is installed in a room, he says, the waves will heat the people, not the air. So even when the air temperature is low, people will feel toasty.

The only drawback, Pound said, would be that walls, ceilings and floors would have to be covered with metal foil in order for the microwave heating to be efficient. The foil, which could have decorative facing, would reflect the microwaves and bounce them around the room.

Furniture would also have to be designed so that it wouldn't absorb and thereby waste the microwaves.

Pound maintained in his article that microwaves might eliminate the need for space heating in some climates, while "in others, heating of buildings might be reduced to a level sufficient only to avoid freezing and discomfort from contact with cold objects."

Pound said that in a room where the air is 50 degrees, 60 watts worth of microwaves would make a person feel as though the temperature is 72. Two people would require twice as many microwaves.

Not everyone in the room may like the same temperature. So those who want to be cooler could wear clothing with metallized threads that screen out some of the microwaves.

Russian scientists have found that workers exposed to microwave radiation for many years suffer abnormally slow heart beats, chest pains, insomnia, headaches, irritability and memory loss. However, American researchers have not duplicated the findings.

Pound said the heating radiation is safe because the microwaves would be very short — only one centimeter long. The waves in a microwave oven are 12 centimeters. These very short waves would penetrate only the skin, and Pound said they fall within federal safety limits.
