his wife. No one was injured, and the man remains in city jail this morning under $10,000 bond. Two shotguns, two rifles and a pellet gun, in addition to a .22 caliber pistol found later, were located in the mobile home of the man who had kept officers at bay for 30 minutes.

Possible tragedy averted

Suspense reigns as police capture suspect, seize guns

By DANNY REAGAN

"You in bed? It looks like there might be a shootout," came the voice from the telephone late Thursday night.

The voice was City Editor Walt Finley. He had heard on the Herald's police scanner that lawmen were surrounding a mobile home at a local trailer court where a man, with a stockpile of weapons, was threatening officers.

The incident started with a routine domestic call at 10:37 p.m. to the police station reporting a man threatening his wife with a gun. When investigating Officers Jerry Pruitt and John Burson arrived, they were welcomed with the sight of a carbine rifle being pointed at them out of the window of the trailer. The man had reportedly situated a gun in every room of the structure, preparing for a major confrontation.

At first glance, upon arriving at the scene, the situation looked normal enough. No one was in sight, so I drove onto the grounds.

"YOU BETTER SLOW down," came a voice from behind a nearby car. And then the scene drastically changed. As I ducked down in my car and brought it to a halt, I could see dozens of people crouched behind cars in the parking lot, and various trailers.

A number of citizens were carefully peering out of curtained windows and half-open doors.

The police perimeter was established three or four mobile homes down the lot. There were also a dozen patrol cars and unmarked vehicles surrounding the area. The loud speaker barked out the same message from one of the cars:

"This is the Big Spring Police Department. You are surrounded. No one has been hurt . . . let's keep it that way. Come out with your hands over your head."

I got out of my car and hurried over to the nearest cluster of residents hidden behind other cars.

A plainclothesman carrying an automatic rifle came running our way, motioning to some people who had just stepped from their car.

"GET IN YOUR HOUSE," he shouted.

"Our house is up there," one woman responded, indicating the direction of the surrounded mobile home.

"Well get behind your car," the lawman said, turning again toward the sealed-off area.

A man crouching behind the same car as I said that the man in the trailer "up there" had shot at his wife, but he hadn't heard anything else since the first shot.

Most of the people who were seeking shelter behind vehicles in the parking lot had been removed earlier from their homes by Sgt. Alvis Jeffcoat. He and other officers had seen to it that residences in the immediate vicinity of the surrounded one had been evacuated.

The neighbors waiting for the outcome of the situation talked little as they huddled on the asphalt with cars for their protection. There were some looks of concern, but mostly everyone just sat quietly.

THE FACES and voices of officers hurrying from one vantage point to another showed starkly the concern and urgency of the situation.

For 15 minutes, all that could be heard was the blare of the "bullhorn" and the constant barking of the neighborhood dogs, evidently unaccustomed to so many strangers around.

The dogs were barking so loud, the call from a nearby policeman's portable radio almost went unheard.

"We have one man out," the crackling voice stated. The time was 11 p.m.

I hurried to the trailer where a man was slowly emerging. A dozen police officers had their guns aimed at the man's head. Police had finally talked the man out with calm assurances and the threat of use of tear gas.

The man offered a minimum amount of resistance, and officers quickly had him handcuffed and into a waiting patrol car.

THE MAN'S WIFE and children had managed to get out of the house safely before police arrived at the scene.

Detective Leroy Spire, after a search with fellow officers of the residence, said that the carbine rifle that had been pointed at officers had been found, in addition another rifle and two shotguns. Police continued the search in and around the mobile home for the gun that the man supposedly used to shoot at his wife. The gun was found later that night.

Capt. Sherrill Farmer confirmed that the gun found was the .22 caliber pistol used in firing one shot at the man's wife. Farmer indicated there was one bullet hole inside the trailer.

The man remained in city jail this morning and was arraigned on an aggravated assault charge before Judge John Coffee later. Bond was set at $10,000.

RESOLUTE ACTION and cool law enforcement procedures by local police averted a possible tragedy. The subject was taken without a shot being fired by lawmen.

"Wasn't he the same one who tried to stab his wife two days ago," said one man, referring to the suspect.

"No, that was the man who lives over there," said one woman, pointing to a different mobile home.

"You hear all kinds of screaming going on out here, so you don't pay any attention to it anymore," said yet another woman.

Flu ruled out

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP)—Federal Scientists today eliminated influenza and fungi as possible causes of the mysterious "legionnaires' disease." They said test results point toward a toxic substance as a cause for the disease that has claimed 25 lives.

"The epidemic has peaked and is on its way out," Dr. David Sencer, director of the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta told a news conference there.

The toll rose to 25 today, up from two from the earlier count of 23. But both deaths were from cases that had been discovered earlier.

A CDC spokesman also said that it was unlikely that the disease was caused by a virus.

Don Berreth, public information officer at the CDC, said:

"No virus of which we are aware would have gone undetected thus far," he said.

However, Pennsylvania state Health Secretary Leonard Bachman said he was not as ready as Dr. Sencer to rule out a virus as the cause.

"Our emphasis is shifting definitely toward toxins, some sort of chemical agent," he said. "That still does not rule out the slower-moving viruses."

But there was a general feeling of relief among all the researchers that the disease was not some form of flu.

"I think all of us can breathe a sigh of relief that this is not flu," said Dr. Sencer.

He added, "We still have no firm evidence of any secondary transmission," meaning the disease is not contagious.

Researchers admitted they still haven't been able to identify the specific cause of the disease despite four days of tests in a state laboratory in Philadelphia and the CDC.

"What we know is really what we don't know. It is possible we'll never know," Sencer said at his news conference.

All the persons who got the disease in the past two weeks attended or had some contact with a state American Legion convention in Philadelphia last month.

Sencer said that chemistry tests for toxic agents are more complicated than those which have eliminated influenza as a possible cause and that he could not say when results of the tests might show what kind of toxin caused the illness.

Hoping to stay in air for 30 hours

Stanton pilot-designer up and away towards record

OSHKOSH, Wisc. — At long last, Leon Davis of Stanton, Tex., began his assault on the closed course circuit flying record lifting off at 6:15 a.m., here today.

Hopefully, Davis will remain in the air for about 30 hours, using the Burlington, Wis., airport as his second point of passage. That is 75.5 miles removed from the Oshkosh port. He hopes to cover 3,000 miles on a flight that will be closely monitored by ground observers, who will check his estimated 20 passes for barometric pressure readings. Any touchdown during that time would void Davis' chances for a new record.

The record of 1,639 miles is now held by Bert Rutan of California and was set last year.

DAVIS ORIGINALLY had planned to fly from the Howard County Airport several weeks ago in quest of the record, using the Sweetwater airport as a turning point.

Inclement weather kept him on the ground in Big Spring. Davis chose the Oshkosh port as a base of operations because the Experimental Aircraft Convention was held there recently, a meeting he attended.

The DA-5A aircraft he is flying weighs about 600 pounds, exclusive of the fuel the plane is carrying. The motor of the unique craft has about 65 horsepower. It was flown to Oshkosh by Allen Frazee of Mesa, Ari. One of Davis' sons, Harold, of Petaluma, Cal., actually owns the plane.

When the craft lifted off the runway, it carried 84 gallons of fuel, which must last Davis the entire flight.

Rules of the record flight dictate that he must land at the Oshkosh airport. If all goes well, that will happen about noon Saturday.

The Davis family has plans on returning to West Texas next week.

The three younger children will enroll in public schools in Stanton.

Clearance for the flight were obtained without trouble from the Federal Aviation Administration. Davis has been on the scene since last Friday but the flight has been delayed by low ceilings, thunder bumps and a mishmash of adverse weather. When he finally took off, the weather was ideal. The craft flies at about 155 miles per hour under normal conditions.

Focalpoint

Action/reaction: Scurry manholes

Q. After all the money spent getting Scurry Street redone, some of the storm sewer manholes are not level with the street. Whose responsibility is this? When will they be redone right?

A. The storm sewer manholes are a little bit lower than the street, according to city officials. They are dangerous if they are higher. There are no plans to change them. Harry Nagel, city manager, said, "Scurry Street is now the smoothest street in the city. We hope the citizens living on that street don't get all upset about a slight rumble as they go over the manholes."

Calendar: Softball meet

Contestants and spectators are needed for the Howard County Sheriff's Posse playday due to begin at 8 p.m. Saturday at the arena on the Andrews Highway.

Offbeat: Hasn't lost case since '72

BIG LAKE, Tex. (AP) — The Reagan County attorney says he hasn't lost a case before a county jury since 1972.

But he hasn't won any either.

He says he simply hasn't had the opportunity to try any.

Jack P. Schulze, the attorney for this Far West Texas county, said Thursday that County Judge W.T. Mills has refused since 1972 to set criminal misdemeanor cases for trial.

Schulze said he's asked the Texas Judicial Council to investigate Judge Mills.

Earlier this year, said Schulze, his office dismissed 200 cases dating back to 1968 because they were "too old to prosecute."

Schulze said he has 50 cases on the docket now "ready to go to court tomorrow" in this county of 3,300 residents.

Schulze did acknowledge, however, that Judge Mills will take an occasional guilty plea.

County United Way goal set at $134,000

Objective in this year's Howard County United Way campaign will be $134,000, an increase of 1.5 per cent over last year, it was announced at Thursday evening's budget session conducted in the Chamber of Commerce offices.

Agencies which share the money raised by campaign workers were cut an average of 6.4 per cent because of allowances for shrinkage and other factors.

Last year's budget was $131,975. Of that amount, $7,500 was deducted from surplus funds. If this amount had not been in surplus, the budget would have had to be $139,475. After all agencies are paid this year, the surplus will just about have been exhausted.

Also, the committee has been allowing $5,000 for shrinkage, considered not enough for a budget of this size. For that reason, the allowance for shrinkage has been increased to $7,500.

If the additional $2,500 had been added to last year's budget, it would have amounted to $141,975, an unrealistic figure in the eyes of the budget committee.

Campaign and operating expenses this year was figured at $10,000, the same as last year.

By agencies, the amount granted by the committee included:

American Red Cross, $14,500; Girl Scouts, $10,000; West Side Center, $1,000; Dora Roberts Rehabilitation Center, $17,500; Permian Basin Planned Parenthood, $2,000; YMCA, $18,500; Lakeview YMCA, $6,500; Salvation Army, $17,500; Big Spring Boys' Club, $6,500; USO, $500; Webb AFB Youth Activities, $6,500; Howard County Family Service, $3,500; Boy Scouts, $12,000.

The Combined Federal Campaign will actually initiate the United Way drive for funds the morning following Labor Day (on Sept. 7).

Dearl Pittman, who has assumed the dual role of campaign president and general chairman, presided at Thursday's meeting. Clyde McMahon gave the budget report. Charles Beil was introduced as a new vice-president of the UW committee and, as such, will take an active role in the upcoming drive.

Pittman said he had not yet named all his committeemen for the 1976-77 campaign but expressed confidence the full complement would be available by the time the drive officially starts.

Red tape delaying flood aid

LOVELAND, Colo. (AP) — Colorado officials say federal red tape is preventing victims of the $50 million Big Thompson Canyon flood from receiving emergency food stamps.

Sens. Gary Hart and Floyd Haskell said Thursday night they had been assured after a conversation with Agriculture Secretary Ed Stamp "the hold-up would be resolved by noon tomorrow."

But at the flood area, a spokesman for the local department of social services said he wasn't so sure. Mike Hadwick said he had been told it was futile to seek a change in the government regulations.

As the dispute over relief efforts flared, skin divers and searchers armed with special mechanical devices continued their search of the devastated canyon for more bodies.

Eighty bodies had been brought to a makeshift morgue and refrigeration units, and officials feared the canyon was still a tomb for dozens more victims.

Their efforts to use scent dogs to hunt for bodies mostly unsuccessful, authorities switched their attention to mechanical sniffers capable of detecting gases emitted by decaying bodies.

Food stamp program officials cut some of the regulations on Wednesday to eliminate the normal three-day wait for applicants.

But they refused to authorize the 30-day allocation of stamps for persons claiming to be victims of the flood.

District supervisor Bernard Franta, summoned to Loveland from Dallas, Tex., was reported by a spokesman not to feel "an emergency designation is needed at this time."

But a spokesman for Haskell said the state's two senators had been assured a switch in policy would be ordered. Marty Wolf said Haskell and Hart "didn't get into specifics" in their discussion with an aide to Butz.

But Wolf said "There will be two unhappy senators" if the change isn't ordered.

Hadwick, processing food stamp applications from flood survivors, said the heads of those approved for the federal benefits had to pay almost as much as the stamps are worth.

One man, who listed a net weekly income of $150, had to pay $142 for a month's supply of stamps valued at $166, Hadwick said.

Hadwick said the unidentified family lost most of its possessions in the flood which flashed down the canyon on Saturday night.

Hadwick said it was easy for federal officials to reject applications from more than two dozen families, but added, "I'm the one who has to say, 'You're not eligible.'"

He added the number of applicants for food stamps was apparently being kept low by "survivor grapevine" rumors that stamps weren't available.

Police beat Woman reports threat

A 26-year-old Big Spring woman reported to police at 9:12 Thursday night that a man had entered her home and threatened her.

Lt. Arvin Henry, and Officers Jimmy Wallace and Allen Parrish arrived at the scene and arrested a 30-year-old man for aggravated assault and public intoxication.

The woman told officers that the man apparently became enraged when his car wouldn't start, and began kicking the front door of her residence. He then gained entrance to the house, grabbed the woman and pointed a gun at her.

According to police reports, he then told the woman that the gun would make too much noise, and pulled a knife on her. He then held the knife at her throat and told her to hold her breath and "it wouldn't hurt."

The woman then told officers that the man heard a noise at the front door and went to investigate. The woman then slipped out the back door.

Jack L. Weaver remained in city jail today after failing to post a $5,000 bond set by Judge Bobby West, charged with threatening the woman with a knife.

Ricky Heffington, 1412 W. 3rd, reported to Officer Jimmie Hensley that two men had stopped him on the street and asked to borrow $2.

When he produced his wallet, the men took it and ran. The amount of cash taken was placed at $120.

Farm 'Hog talk' courses set

LUBBOCK — "Plain hog talk" will be the thrust of three area swine production short courses slated for Lamesa, Plainview, and Lubbock Aug. 10-11-12 which will focus on problems associated with swine production.

County Extension Agent Lee Roy Colgan says that the same program will be presented for each of the area clinics. The Lamesa meeting will be an evening event and the programs for Lubbock and Plainview will be in the afternoon.

On Tuesday, Aug. 10, the short course will be at 7:30 p.m. It will be held at the Dawson County Community Building at the fairgrounds in Lamesa. The next day, August 11, the event takes place at the South Plains Electric Coop, 110 North Amarillo Road in Lubbock, beginning at 1:15 p.m. And on Thursday, August 12, the Hale County Agricultural Center in Plainview at U.S. Hwy. 87 and Business ByPass will be the host for the program, again at 1:15 p.m.

Subjects to be included in the discussion are reducing disease losses other than by death, the current status of pseudorabies, and rat and bird control in swine operations.

Program speakers are Dr. Gilbert R. Hollis, area swine specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, W.B. Thomas, Extension Service swine

Farm markets

NEW YORK (AP) — Cotton futures No. 2 were higher in midday dealings today.

Buying by textile mills and other commercial interests firmed futures prices.

The average price for strict low middling 11-16 inch spot cotton advanced 77 points to 72.86 cents a pound Thursday for the 10 leading markets, according to the New York Cotton Exchange.

Midday prices were $1.10 to $2.45 a bale higher than the previous close. Oct. 77.30, Dec. 75.00, and March 75.00

AFTER MEETING WITH GOP DELEGATES — Republican presidential candidate Ronald Reagan waves Thursday prior to entering a car after meeting with GOP delegates in an effort to gain their support at Brooklyn Republican Party headquarters in New York.

Ford hunts running mate, Reagan hunts delegates

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford is hunting for a vice presidential candidate but Republican challenger Ronald Reagan, who already found one, is busy hunting convention delegates in his running mate's home state.

Presidential spokesman Ron Nessen has confirmed that Ford will wait until after the GOP convention in Kansas City to name a running mate. But he said Ford has expanded the list of Republicans whose advice he will consider in making that choice.

The President sent letters to 350 GOP mayors and elected local officials Thursday to ask their views on a vice presidential nominee. He already had asked the opinions of all 4,518 delegates and alternates to the convention, all Republican members of the Senate and House and some high-ranking party leaders.

Meanwhile, Reagan and his running mate, Sen. Richard Schweiker, head into Pennsylvania today hoping to add to the six new delegates they picked up in

New York and New Jersey on Thursday.

The joint campaigning effort won the pledged support for Reagan from two delegates in New York and four in New Jersey. But the former California governor still trails Ford in an Associated Press delegate survey, with neither candidate having the 1,130 delegates needed for nomination.

Ten days before the convention's start, Ford has 1,100 delegates to Reagan's 1,035. The AP total counts only those delegates publicly stating a preference or legally bound — not those leaning toward a candidate.

Pennsylvania now stands 76 for Ford, 10 for Reagan and 17 uncommitted. The uncommitted delegates are prime targets of the Reagan-Schweiker hunt, but Schweiker says he feels Pennsylvania's support of the President may be eroding.

In campaigning with Schweiker in Mississippi, New York and New Jersey, Reagan has claimed that adding the liberal Schweiker to the conservative Reagan team boosted the campaign.

"I'm very optimistic. I don't believe we lost support any place," he said Thursday. He said Schweiker's selection "was aimed at November, not August."

Schweiker added: "We believe this is the only kind of base that can beat Jimmy Carter." He said the Democratic ticket of Carter and Sen. Walter Mondale of Minnesota would beat a GOP ticket headed by Ford.

A possible running mate on the Ford ticket, former Texas Gov. John Connally, said Thursday it would be "difficult" for him to turn down an invitation to run with the President.

While asserting that he is not a candidate for the job, Connally said at a gathering in Detroit that if it were offered, "I'd have to have a long, detailed discussion about it."

Connally heatedly labeled attempts of some GOP congressmen to scuttle his consideration for the Ford ticket by linking him to the Watergate scandal as "a hatchet job."

"I wasn't involved in Watergate. It only seems to me that they want to hurt the President," he said.

In Washington, Sen. Henry Bellmon, R-Okla., defended Connally. He called criticism of Connally's nomination by Rep. Paul Findley, R-Ill., "unfounded, unfair and a disservice to the nation."

Findley had said in a letter to Bellmon that adding Connally to the Ford ticket would prove "a disaster."

"Connally is indelibly associated in the public mind with Watergate. His nomination would put the ticket on the defensive throughout the campaign," Findley wrote. Connally earlier had been criticized by Reps. Thomas Railsback, R-Ill., and William Cohen, R-Maine.

Connally was found innocent of charges that he had taken a bribe to gain an increase in milk prices, in return for political contributions to Richard Nixon's 1972 re-election campaign.

Hitchhiked to Big Spring Angelo escapee celled following surrender

A man who had tried to enter the Big Spring State Hospital Alcoholic Unit Wednesday afternoon, returned to Tom Green County Jail in San Angelo late Thursday after escaping with three other prisoners Wednesday morning.

J.W. Nowlain, 28, who was being held on a Class A misdemeanor theft complaint at the time of the escape, was back in the same jail late Thursday pending the filing of a felony escape complaint.

Adolph Supak, information director at the hospital, indicated that even on a voluntary basis, no one can be admitted to the alcohol treatment ward when charges are pending.

Supak was not sure if the man had indicated to officials at the hospital that he was a fugitive from justice.

Sheriff Odell Wagner said Nowlain walked into the sheriff's office about 4 p.m. Thursday and "turned himself in."

Wagner said Nowlain told him "he'd hitchhiked to Big Spring and hitchhiked back" after the escape and "spent the night in some pasture around here."

In presenting the hospital's award of $50, and an engraved medallion from Hospital Corporation of America, administrator Norman Knox said, "Elaine is the kind of employee we are called to the Ward's parking lot to investigate a collision between a car driven by Francille Caddell, Lot 23, OK Trailer Court, and a parked vehicle.

In the Town and County parking lot, Officer Gary Porter also investigated an accident involving a car belonging to Clifton Shakky, 2700 Apache.

Nashville Aug. 23. Should she emerge the national winner, she will receive $1,000 in HCA stock plus a bronze bust of the founder of HCA, Dr. Thomas Frist, Sr.

Eighteen employee judges used a five-point criteria in arriving at their decision in selecting Mrs. Arnold:

- 1) the person having the most positive effect on other people
- 2) the person having made a significant contribution to the improvement of patient care
- 3) the person whose day-to-day performance is dependable, consistent, and people oriented
- 4) the person whose contribution may be overshadowed because of his humility and modesty
- 5) the person who has demonstrated unusual concern for the welfare and happiness of patients and has performed extraordinary acts of human kindness.

"She is, without a doubt, a very reliable and responsible person, making the most sensible and rational judgements and decisions in times of greatest stress," one employee's ballot stated. "It is never the slightest imposition to her to do extra things for the patient," another said. "She really cares."

"Once she heard about a patient out on one of the floors who was having a terrible problem with bedsores. Always concerned about any patient in the hospital, Elaine approached the doctor about a new technique she had learned to alleviate this painful ailment."

"It is now being used successfully as a regular routine," one said. "She is willing to bend the rules, even in ICU, if it will calm or reassure a patient or member of the family." She is the total nurse, they said. "I have seen her leave a social gathering quietly to go to the phone to find out how a patient is getting along."

Mrs. Arnold has been at Malone-Hogan Hospital for two years, coming here with her husband, Rick, who is stationed at Webb as a T-37 instructor. She was born and raised at New Providence, N.J., and graduated from the Seton Hall University with a Bachelor of Science in Nursing. She is a member of the American and Texas Heart Association, as well as the American Association of Critical Care Nurses.

A strenuous effort paid off

The battle for the passage of the Nuclear Fuel Assurance Act was one of the closest and toughest ever. Big Spring officials had begun to fear that opposition to the act, which would permit private companies to enrich uranium, was mounting in the House.

THESE FEARS were confirmed late Friday when Cong. Johnathan B. Bingham, a Democrat who represents the Bronx in New York, produced a surprise amendment late in the afternoon after 95 congressmen had already left.

Bingham rallied the anti-nuclear forces and won the vote 170-168.

But Big Spring's congressman, Omar Burleson of Anson, was not caught asleep. He prevented the final passage of the bill in that form and got a reprieve until Wednesday. This gave the pro-energy forces a chance to go to work.

In Big Spring the Chamber of the Commerce industrial officials did go to work. With an effort coordinated by John Currie, president of State National Bank, the Washington lawmakers were contacted about the bill.

The Big Spring men found that many congressmen were not informed about the provisions of the bill — and about what the alternatives would be should it fail.

It was clear to Currie, Industrial Team leader Roger Brown and the chamber's industrial manager Tom Roy that every vote would be absolutely essential in the Wednesday showdown. Many Big Spring citizens and officials became involved in the efforts.

Cong. Burleson did an outstanding job of bringing the pro-energy forces together, and he devised a strategy that would enable the Bingham amendment to be voted on again. This gave the bill another chance to pass in its original form.

Many other friends of West Texas helped, especially former Big Spring Texas Electric Service Co. district manager Don Womack who now represents the firm in Washington.

The showdown came on the Bingham amendment at 10:30 a.m. Wednesday, and it went right down to the wire with a 192-192 tie. Then House Speaker Carl Albert broke the tie in favor of private enrichment. The Bingham amendment was beaten 193-192, and the bill went on to pass 222-

168. But another close one looms in the Senate which also must approve the measure for it to become law.

THE SENATE VOTE may be as close as the one in the House. The Wall Street Journal said Thursday that strong opposition is expected there from anti-nuclear forces.

Currie was absolutely correct Wednesday when he said, "The importance of one vote cannot be over-emphasized. In the Senate, one vote can often be far more important."

In this election year, Congress is itching to adjourn and go home to politics. The lawmakers are not particularly anxious to handle a hard-fought issue, especially with so much legislation stacking up.

The bill continues to have a perilous journey, but it is now only a Senate vote away from being sent to President Ford for his signature, a certainty since the bill is a Ford Administration proposal.

Schweiker no?

William F. Buckley, Jr.

The first item on the news over the radio the other morning was that the New York State Young Americans for Freedom have met and resolved to support the nomination of Ronald Reagan, but to oppose Richard Schweiker as his running mate. This also is the position of Congressman Robert Bauman of Maryland. It is a position which deserves to be treated as something more than mere pique. And, in the days ahead, it may rise into prominence as the crystallizing sentiment of Reagan backers. The implications of the position are complex and fascinating:

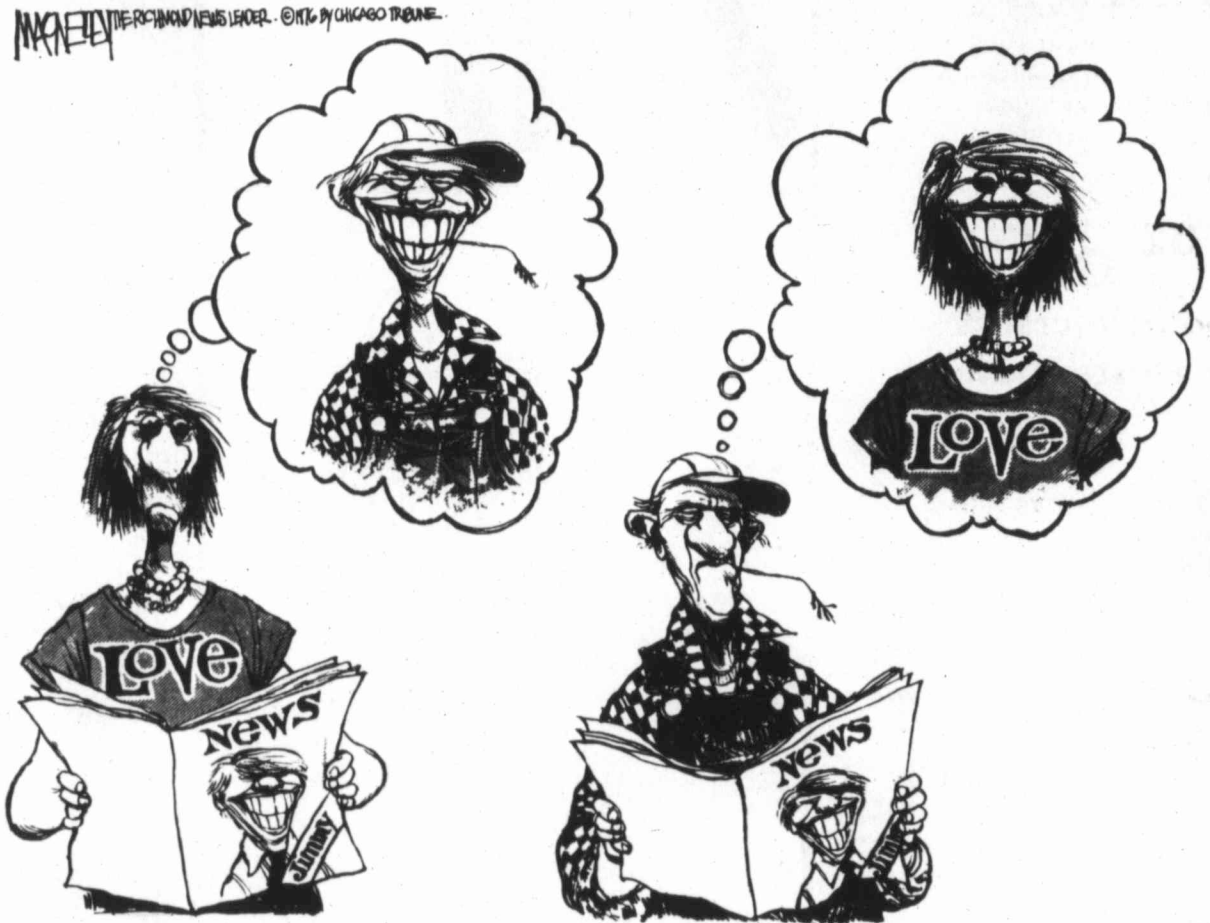

1. IN THE FIRST place, we are reminded that there was no such thing as an absolute right of a candidate to designate his running mate. If it were so, then Mr. Ford's hold over the presidency would not have that slight feeling of illegitimacy that now encumbers it. Mr. Ford is thought of as not-quite-a-President for the simple reason that he was never confirmed by a Republican convention. If the convention's confirmation were constitutionally perfect, then it would not have perturbed that Gerald Ford was merely the designee of Richard Nixon. He would have the equivalent backing, even as now Rockefeller would be considered legitimately the Vice President.

2. Reagan has said, three weeks before the convention was scheduled to meet, that he would endorse Schweiker. Reagan's critics among conservatives are getting around, however slowly, to sorting out two questions which, in the original confusion, were made to sound like one. The first point is, Do they or do they not prefer Reagan as presidential candidate over Ford? That is one discrete question. The second is: Are they willing to go along with Reagan's electoral strategy by naming Schweiker as Vice-Presidential candidate?

The answer to the first may be a resounding Yes; the answer to the second may be a resounding No. Ronald Reagan hasn't said, after all, that he will not accept nomination as President unless he is pre-assured that the convention will nominate Schweiker. He has gone no further than to say that he will designate Schweiker as his first choice. That there should be as much resistance to Schweiker tends to magnify the importance of the convention as a body of men brought together to exercise, subject to their mandates, and there are none respecting the choice of Vice President — their own judgment.

3. A repudiation of Schweiker at the same convention that nominated Reagan would certainly be unusual, but then during the past two or three seasons American politics has been specializing in the unusual. It would be a way of saying to the republic: We desire to put our best foot forward, and he is Ronald Reagan. As regards Mr. Schweiker, it is our opinion that he has a great deal to learn about Republican principle before he can lay claim to the second spot on the ticket.

ANY SUCH statement, sent out from Kansas City to the rest of America, runs grave risks of antagonizing those whose principles are akin to Schweiker's. But let us not forget that it is a course of action open to the convention.

Old 'tip' for all you sneezers

Dr. G. C. Thosteson

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I enjoy your column very much. May I share a "tip" with you that might help your readers, especially after a major abdominal operation?

When my 21-year-old son recently had an appendectomy, his roommate, who had one earlier, warned him that a chance sneeze might give him great pain. He suggested he hold his hand over his incision to try to lessen the pain. I was surprised no one suggested a good way to prevent an unwanted sneeze.

As my mother taught me years ago, if one presses tightly below the nose (where a mustache would be) with one's finger, a sneeze can be stopped dead in its tracks. My son found himself about to sneeze twice after his operation and was very grateful that this trick worked. —M.M.D.

It usually does work. How generally the method is known I cannot say, but it is certainly effective for most. Happy to pass it on.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Will you please explain electric shock treatment for heart fibrillation? How effective is the treatment in regulating the heart beat, and is it dangerous? — Mrs. L. M.B.

Better explain fibrillation first. That is a series of rapid contractions of the heart resulting in an irregular beat.

Electrical shock therapy consists of placing electrodes on the patient's chest and applying currents in short spurts. Such stimulation can bring back a normal heart action.

It is an emergency procedure and is done without hesitation when the circumstances are right. Many heart attack victims have been saved by the presence of electric shock equipment in ambulances. It can even restore a beat to a heart that has stopped. It is not dangerous.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Can you give me any information about "wry neck"? What is it? I have such pain, soreness and aching in my neck from one side to the other. What causes this? Could it possibly be an arthritic condition? I do have arthritis in my back and spine.

I try exercises as much as I can and am using heat. I take no medication. — Mrs. R.W.

It is called "torticollis." The muscles on one side of the neck are in a more or less constant state of spasm (contraction) and this causes the head to tilt toward the shoulder in that direction. In attempting the correct things people try to twist the head in the opposite direction.

In young children the cause is usually a birth defect. Treated promptly with skillful head manipulation the condition can be corrected.

In adults the causes are varied — an injury (as whiplash), an inflammation of the muscles (myositis), nerve injuries in the spinal area, or arthritic changes in the spine. In fact, anything that places pressure on the nerves controlling the neck muscles can be a fault.

Torticollis is stubborn to treat, and standard therapy, such as heat, massage and exercises, is often fruitless. However, certain exercises are more helpful than others. I suggest you consult a local rehabilitation center and find out about the proper exercises. I could list some here for you, but I find that trying to do such things in print is often more confusing than helpful.

I should add, too, that the cases of wry neck I have seen are more often than not associated with tense individuals or those undergoing mental strain. The usual treatment along with a mild sedative has sometimes brought relief.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What does left gluteal bursitis mean? — Mrs. P.

It means bursitis of the left buttocks area. Bursitis is inflammation of the bursa, which is a small, fluid-filled sac between joint ends that make movement easier.

Arthritis sufferers can be helped. Dr. Thosteson's booklet discusses many types of arthritis and related joint diseases as well as effective treatments and medications. For a copy of "How You Can Control Arthritis," write to him in care of the Big Spring Herald. Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 35 cents.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

My answer

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: Why do so many ministers seem to have difficulty with their own children? I am a minister with four children, only one of whom professes to be a Christian. What went wrong? — Rev. R.E.

DEAR REV. E.: I cannot speak about your specific situation, since I do not know all the facts. However, I too have been disturbed by this question, and have observed several common problems that sometimes cause difficulties with ministers' children.

First, I'm afraid some ministers become so occupied with church affairs that they neglect to spend time with their families. Of course, ministers should be diligent in their work, but it should not lead them to neglect their own families. I believe we have a deep responsibility if God has given us a family, and we must devote a great deal of time to it. This is true of ministers as well as anyone else.

Second, sometimes ministers are so concerned that their children should be "model children," that they are unintentionally harsh and unloving in their discipline. A child who has not experienced real love at home will probably not pay much attention when we talk about the love of God from the pulpit. In fact, this may very well lead to rebellion later on.

The problem, of course, is not just with ministers' children. We need a rediscovery today of the joy and opportunities of Christian family living. All Christians with children need to devote themselves to family life, and need to teach their children by word and example about the love of God.

Big brotherism?

Around the rim

John Edwards

Bill Clayton, Texas speaker of the House of Representatives, has submitted six recommended changes in criminal law for a task force to consider. One of them is legalization of wiretapping under state law.

District Attorney Robert H. (Bob) Moore III, who will be defending criminals as part of a private practice after Jan. 1, favors wiretapping of organized crime with some reservations.

RICKY HAMBY, who now defends criminals and who is the only nominee for district attorney in the general election, does not.

"I can't imagine the situation wherein I could condone wiretapping," Hamby said.

"There's something basic in a man's right to privacy," Hamby continued.

"No doubt it would result in more convictions of criminals. I feel the right of citizens that would be violated is far more important than the fact a few citizens may be abusing that right," the nominee for district attorney said.

"I see shades of creeping Big Brotherism whenever you mention wiretapping," Hamby commented.

"Today, it might be the criminals that have their telephone conversations wiretapped, but tomorrow it might be the Baptists or Sagittarians," Hamby concluded.

Moore commented: "In a general sense, I think you have to analyze the expectation of rights of privacy an individual has under the Constitution."

Self-destruction

Robert Novak

WASHINGTON — Once it became apparent this week that the Schweiker ploy was luring no delegates to Ronald Reagan, President Ford's political operatives breathed deeply of a heady new reality: they were suddenly free from the spectre of Reagan losing the nomination but dictating everything else at Kansas City next month.

THE FORD campaign had privately resigned itself to swallowing vice-presidential demands of some 1,000 Reagan delegates, even if that meant a Ford-Reagan ticket. Within 24 hours after ultra-liberal Sen. Richard Schweiker was unveiled as Reagan's running mate, emancipated Ford agents were brainstorming about unlimited vice-presidential possibilities — a woman, a black, maybe even a Democrat. That reflected their belief that Reagan, in a single stroke, had destroyed his influence over the Republican present and future.

This looms for conservatives as the bitter fruit of the Schweiker gamble. Even in defeat, Reagan had seemed likely to emerge from Kansas City as the party's dominant figure, armed with reputed adherence to principle and a fiercely loyal legion of admirers. Today he has neither, thanks to his futile bid for a handful of delegates.

Accordingly, the prospective post-convention outlook is changed radically. Until Schweiker's selection, Reagan at worst figured to emerge narrowly defeated from Kansas City with even more influence over the nominee than Robert A. Taft wielded after Chicago in 1952. Now however, whether narrowly or badly beaten (and it may well be badly), Reagan becomes irrelevant in Republican affairs.

Non-ideological campaign manager John Sears, designer of the Schweiker gambit, was interested only in winning — not in exercising authority as a loser. It is now clear that those 40-odd Reagan delegates supposedly sequestered by Sears in Northeastern state delegations were but phantoms. Feeling unable to compete with the White House in piecemeal courtship of delegates, Sears saw a desperate gamble as the only alternative to defeat.

WHILE OVERESTIMATING Schweiker's impact on Northeastern delegates, Sears erred more seriously in believing the loyalty of Reagan delegates would withstand the Schweiker shock. Loyal to a cause rather than a man, the Reaganites in fact are incomparably less tolerant of ideological deviation than are the practical politicians backing Mr. Ford.

Nor did other key figures in the Reagan organization, carrying much better conservative credentials than Sears, either understand the quality of Reagan's constituency or seek to preserve the candidate's credibility. Incredibly, there is no evidence of a strong fight against Schweiker waged within Reagan's high command. Even Reagan chief delegate hunter Anderson Carter, nationally renowned as a hard-nosed conservative, made no protest.

What is truly astounding, however, is that Sears sold Reagan himself on Schweiker — apparently without much difficulty. Although Reagan's desire to influence the party was a genuine reason for challenging the incumbent President, that motive was forgotten, just as he was about to realize it.

Sears is a skilled political mechanic who prefers his operations veiled even from his own staff, much less outside supporters — duplicating Reagan's "Certainly, one has the right to expect privacy and freedom from intrusion in his own home," Moore said. "And he should reasonably expect the right to privacy in his telephone conversations."

"HOWEVER, I feel the expectation of right of privacy in the home is greater than one might be entitled to expect as to the telephone in that if one doesn't want it heard just don't say it."

"And, under existing law, the state has the right to invade the right of privacy and enter one's home with a search warrant upon a showing to an impartial magistrate that there exists probable cause to believe that a crime is being committed or fruits or instrumentalities of a crime are being concealed," Moore said.

"This being so, I see no reason why, upon the same kind of showing of probable cause, the lesser right of expectation of privacy in phone conversations under proper circumstances could not be invaded," Moore argued.

"Of course, any potential invasion by government or the states of individual rights must be very carefully outlined with strong safeguards to prevent abuse," he said.

"On the whole, I find the idea of wiretapping repugnant but out of necessity in the realm of highly sophisticated organized crime can see how its benefits could overcome expectations of rights invaded," Moore added.

own inclinations. That blocked any preview for Reagan of the shock and disillusionment that Schweiker would generate.

REAGAN WOULD have quickly learned the truth had he checked in advance with one of his earliest and most ardent champions, Rep. Philip Crane of Illinois. A 45-year-old author and Ph.D. in history, Crane is typical of Reagan's zealots in preferring principle-without-victory to victory-without-principle.

When Reagan telephoned Crane after the fact to defend his move, Crane responded in untypically harsh invective attacking Schweiker's rampant pragmatism. Reagan "seemed kind of stunned," Crane reported, and appeared unaware of just how liberal Schweiker's voting record is. Bloodied but unbowed in braving the monolithic Illinois Republican party apparatus all year, Crane suddenly lost heart for future battle.

So has Tom Ellis, the tough Raleigh, N.C., lawyer who saved Reagan's candidacy last winter by overriding the national campaign organization and raising enough money for a statewide televised half-hour of Reagan which won the North Carolina primary. At a meeting of Southern Reagan leaders in Atlanta last weekend, Ellis helped lay plans for a platform fight at Kansas City which he hoped would nominate Reagan and was sure would put Reagan's mark on the party. The Schweiker shock eliminated his enthusiasm for such rigorous combat.

While not following New Hampshire's Gov. Meldrim Thomson into outright abandonment of Reagan, the Phil Cranes and Tom Ellises will go to Kansas City as the walking wounded of a lost war rather than militant acolytes of a sacred cause.

Big Spring Herald

Mailbag

Dear Editor: In reference to an article in the Aug. 3 Herald about the Air Force training a women's anti-terrorist team to assume combat status overseas, I had some questions come to mind.

First, I don't care how well it did its job, a well-trained team of men would be much better, why not use the best you have? Second, there is a law against sending women into combat. Is the Air Force above the law? Third, if the use of women in combat was such a good idea, why was it abandoned nearly a thousand years ago? And I guess lately, has this nation lost every shred of its character and guts?

Washington ordered the women back with the luggage in 1776 when he found that they totally destroyed the moral quality of his troops.

In case of combat even the bees have sense enough to protect the queen bee, for they know that the nation is lost without her.

Putting women in combat could bring a return of the barbarism of the middle ages. I don't think a nation that would expose its young women to such a fate deserves to see another celebration of its birthday.

Did you ever see a good infantry outfit cut up a home guard or people's defense unit? If they are trained, tough terrorists will give a good account of themselves and God pity the woman who falls into their hands. They won't.

Teton Dam built in 'poor place'

WASHINGTON (AP) — A geologist told Congress Thursday that the Bureau of Reclamation chose a poor place to build the Teton Dam and then failed to adequately study and review the information on the bedrock for the project.

The bureau, said University of Montana geology professor Robert R. Curry, also seemed to have an "over-optimistic faith" that the tendency of some of the dam's supporting rock to absorb water was a minor problem.

The dam broke near its right abutment on June 5, emptying its reservoir swiftly into the Idaho farmlands, killing 11 persons and causing an estimated $1 billion in property damage.

Curry said the U.S. Geological Survey had found there also could be possible seismic risk when the dam's reservoir was filled, but that the bureau failed to adequately explore the agency's information.

The bureau's response to the seismic issue, Curry told an investigating House government operations subcommittee, was apparently only to install seismic monitoring equipment at Teton.

This response is apparently what is planned for the proposed Richard B. Russell Dam on the Savannah River in Georgia, said Curry.

"It does no good to know that the dam does or does not induce earthquakes if the dam is not designed to accommodate the largest expected earthquake that could occur in the region of the dam site," Curry said.

A break in the Russell dam would threaten federal nuclear production facilities below the dam, Curry added, saying the seismic risk evaluation to date has been inadequate.

Marshall K. Corbett, an Idaho State University geologist also testified that the bureau failed to give extensive study to the Teton area geology. In the future, Corbett said, the government could profit from establishing independent review boards for site selection.

Corbett added that the bureaucratic nature of government could have been a contributory factor in that no one man or team of men saw the project through from its inception to the filling of the reservoir, which was taking place when the dam broke.

R.R. Robinson, the bureau project construction engineer for Teton, testified that his checking did not indicate the filling of the reservoir was causing any problems, so the order was given to fill the reservoir to the spillways.

H. Anthony Ruckel, a lawyer who argued an environmentalist organization suit to stop Teton construction in 1972, said the dam was built despite expert opinion that the construction was inviting disaster.

Jobs and political considerations, said Ruckel, propelled the project past objections on environmental and safety grounds.

Jesse Owens gets medal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Olympic hero Jesse Owens has been awarded a Medal of Freedom by President Ford, who told the 1936 track and field champion that "your character, your achievement, always will be a source of inspiration."

Owens, the black athlete who outraged Nazi dictator Adolf Hitler by winning four gold medals in the Berlin Olympics 40 years ago, was given the nation's highest civilian honor at ceremonies in the White House east garden on Thursday.

Viking looks for organic 'letters'

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — If life were words and sentences, then the experiment that Viking's minilaboratory begins today would be a search for individual letters.

The organic analysis of Martian soil could turn up "letters" — actually organic molecules — pointing to past or present life on the red planet.

The organic analysis instrument, called a gas chromatograph mass spectrometer (GCMS), will comb the soil for those basic units from which larger "building blocks" of life are formed.

If no such molecules are found, scientists say, chances are small that there is life in the soil picked up by Viking. That wouldn't mean there isn't life elsewhere on Mars, however.

Three separate biology instruments are looking for life processes — growth, metabolism, respiration — but have not yet found anything definitely interpreted as life.

The 40-pound GCMS aboard the lander will test soil that scientists hope was deposited by the telescoping Viking scoop arm on July 28. They're not sure any dirt got into the test chamber, and the arm is currently stuck and unable to obtain any more.

The GCMS "is simply designed to detect organic matter," Dr. John Oro, a member of the molecular analysis team, said Thursday. "It is not designed to tell whether the organic matter is old or young, was caused by life or not."

Organic compounds are those based on carbon. Some organic molecules are related to life and some are not. It is as if Viking stumbled into a game of Scrabble, and it will be very hard to tell if any "letters" it finds once made up a "word" — a living organism — or were merely units that never were part of a meaningful structure.

BRONZE GOD ON DISPLAY — This 1,000-year-old bronze god worshipped by millions of Hindus will go on public display Wednesday in Pasadena, Calif. It will be the first American showing of the statue called Siva Nataraja which means lord of the dancers.

Art collector makes dealStolen idol returned to India

WASHINGTON (AP) — A 1,000-year-old bronze god worshipped by millions of Hindus and mysteriously smuggled out of India is returning to its homeland under an agreement between millionaire art collector Norton Simon and the Indian government.

But Simon gets to exhibit the idol before it is returned to India.

The first American showing of the Siva Nataraja — meaning "Lord of the Dancers" — is scheduled for next Wednesday in Pasadena, Calif., and is part of a deal between Simon and the Indian government.

And if an out-of-court settlement between the two sides works, the exhibition will mark the beginning of the end of a worldwide hunt by India to recover the idol, which vanished from the Sivapuram Temple in Tamil about 20 years ago.

Under the compromise, Simon promised to return the Siva to India and India agreed that Simon's foundation could keep and display it until May 1985 in any country with which India has a diplomatic relationship.

Emphasizing the resolve of New Delhi to pursue title to the million-dollar statue, Indian Ambassador T.N. Kaul will attend the showing at the Norton Simon Foundation Museum in Pasadena. Diplomats here expect him to use the occasion to voice Asian resentment at ever-increasing losses of art objects from their lands of origin.

The four-armed god, dated by scholars to the 10th century, is portrayed dancing in a ring of cosmic fire. The Siva weighs 262.8 pounds and stands 4½-feet high.

Litigation in California, New York and London courts preceded Simon's settlement with India. One provision guarantees Simon against new legal action for possessing what India regards as stolen property. But India reserves its right to prosecute anyone who may have been implicated in the removal of the idol from its temple.

The Siva was dug up with five other sculptures in 1952. New Delhi left it in the shrine where it could be worshipped, and in 1954 it was sent to a restorer for treatment. Two years later a statue was returned but Douglas Barrett, keeper of oriental antiquities at the British Museum, discovered during a 1958 visit that it was not the real Siva but a modern replica.

A search of nearly 14 years began. India called on Interpol to help find the treasured idol. Then, confirmation came that the Siva work had been legally acquired.

Bicycle safety, repair program

Webb AFB NCO's of class no. 7TA are sponsoring a bicycle safety and repair program Saturday morning at Birdwell Park.

The program is part of the NCO leadership school's base-community relations project, and will provide children of all ages free minor repairs and registration of their bikes with the Big Spring Police Department.

The event will last from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m., and a new bicycle will be given away to a child in need, designated by the welfare office.

Big Spring merchants donated parts and money for the project, and an NCO spokesman stated that "everyone was extremely helpful."

Any funds left over from the project will be donated to the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

School is starting soon, and all parents are urged to bring their children and bicycles to the park to prepare them for the coming year.

The motto of class number 7TA is "Leadership through effort, ability and pride."

U.S. girl swims channel

DOVER, England (AP) — Seventeen-year-old Tina Bischoff of Columbus, Ohio, has completed a swim of the English Channel in unofficial record time of 9 hours 3 minutes.

Miss Bischoff swam from Shakespeare Bay in England to France on Thursday under windy conditions. The new record will not be official until the Channel Swimming Association has a report from an official observer who accompanied the swimmer.

The previous record for a one-way 22-mile swim was 9 hours 35 minutes, set 11 years ago by Barry Watson of Britain, swimming from France to England.

Up to $250 creditStudent tax breaks proposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate is recommending a $250-a-year tax cut to help students pay their way through college or vocational school.

The special credit would start out at $100 next July 1 and rise by $50 a year until it hit the maximum $250 in 1980.

If the student had a job and filed his own tax return, he could subtract up to $250 from taxes owed. Otherwise, the tax credit would go to the student's parents or spouse, whichever paid his college expenses for tuition, books or fees. The credit does not cover room and board expenditures.

The credit, written into a multibillion-dollar tax bill Thursday, would cost the U.S. treasury $1.1 billion a year when fully effective. No similar credit was contained in the House version of the tax bill.

The Senate also: —Approved a sweeping revision of the estate tax, which would reduce government revenues by $2 billion a year. The effect would be to exempt from the tax all but the richest 2 percent of estates. Current law applies to the top 7 percent. The House is considering similar legislation.

—Voted a $500-a-year tax credit, which is subtracted from taxes owed, to help athletes train for the U.S. Olympics or Pan-American games teams. Organizations that foster development of Olympic athletes would be assured tax-exempt status, and citizens who contribute to such groups would be allowed a tax deduction.

The young athletes would be allowed a credit of 20 percent of the first $2,500 of training costs.

—Twice rejected efforts led by Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, to kill the massive tax bill and retain only the provisions extending individual tax cuts through Dec. 31, 1977.

Once the Senate approves the over-all bill, possibly tonight, a Senate-House conference committee must work out countless differences in the Senate's tax-revision package and one approved by the House last year.

Muskie, chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, contended the bill is so full of special-interest provisions and "tax give-aways" that it threatens the new congressional budget-making process.

—Approved a new program allowing a worker to avoid taxation on the premiums paid by his employer for a group legal-service plan. This provision, if upheld by the House, could lead to widespread legal-aid plans in much the same way that firms now buy health insurance for their employees.

Abbie Hoffman one step ahead

NEW YORK (AP) — Crawdaddy magazine wants to send a check to its new travel editor for payment for his first article. Trouble is, they don't know where to reach travel editor Abbie Hoffman.

Hoffman, the fugitive founder of the Yippie movement, has been keeping one step ahead of the law since jumping bail in April 1974 while awaiting trial as an accused cocaine dealer.

PLEADS FOR CAUTION — Lewis Jackson, 6, sits by a sign he put in his Vancouver, Wash., front yard last week after a fast car struck his dog Herbie. The dog is recovering, but Lewis wanted to be sure that drivers drive slowly from now on.

Jobless rate rises second month

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unemployment increased for the second month in a row in July, rising from 7.5 to 7.8 per cent, and leaving more people out of work than at any time in the past seven months, the government said today.

At the same time, however, the Labor Department said about 400,000 more people found jobs in July, pushing total employment to a record 87.9 million.

But the pickup in hiring since the recession has apparently lured into the job market thousands of workers, particularly adult women, who hadn't bothered to look for a job when times were tight.

The number of people without jobs in July rose 280,000 to 7.4 million, the most since 7.8 million couldn't find work in December. The 7.8 per cent unemployment was the highest since an identical level in January.

The 7.5 per cent unemployment rate in June was an increase over the 7.3 per cent level in May. The June-July increases represent a threat to the administration's projections that unemployment will slip below 7 per cent by December.

The number of Americans holding jobs advanced to a June record, but the number of unemployed swelled to the 7.14-million level. And that was the largest number of people out of work since January, when 7.29 million were unemployed.

The growth rate in the economy was cut in half in the second quarter of this year and goes a long way toward explaining why unemployment didn't improve much over the first six months of the year.

Soviet nuclear test probed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some key defense officials are admitting that the Pentagon may have oversold the prospects for worldwide sales of about 3,000 new U.S.-built F16 fighter planes.

Not a single new F16 sale has been announced in the 14 months since Norway, Denmark, Belgium and The Netherlands agreed to buy 348 of the planes.

The Pentagon had dangled the opportunity to share in a worldwide F16 sales bonanza before the four NATO nations at a time when they were considering whether to buy the U.S. plane or a competing French Mirage F1 fighter.

After much behind-the-scenes maneuvering by rival French and U.S. officials, the four European allies finally chose the F16 over the Mirage in June 1975. Their deal with the Pentagon guaranteed them, among other things, a 15 per cent share in parts production for any F16s bought by "third countries."

With the U.S. Air Force and the four NATO countries planning to buy a total of 1,000 F16s, the Pentagon forecast made in 1974 and 1975 suggested that "third country" sales could total about 2,000 planes.

But so far, Pentagon officials say only a few countries have indicated a definite interest in the F16 even though its $6.7-million price makes it cheaper than other new U.S. fighters.

Although conceding that the Pentagon may have overstated the anticipated demand for the F16, officials deny there was any intent to mislead the NATO allies or the U.S. public.

"I guess there are too many other good planes around," one official said ruefully.

He mentioned the U.S. Air Force's heavyweight F15 fighter, the Navy's F18 and a new lightweight, high-performance French Mirage 2000.

Iran, this country's biggest arms customer, is rated the best prospect to buy F16s, possibly 200 of them. Israel also is reported to want F16s, but only after it pays for 25 or more F15s, which cost about $17 million each. Canada is considering a possible F16 purchase, but no more than that at this time.

The treaty had been held up while U.S. and Soviet negotiators completed a parallel pact prohibiting peaceful underground explosions in excess of 150 kilotons. The two treaties then were sent for ratification to the Senate July 29, the same day the Soviets ran their second test. A kiloton is equivalent to 1,000 tons of TNT.

Both Tass, the Soviet News agency, and Pravda, the Communist party newspaper, informed Russian readers last spring that no Russian tests prohibited under the pact would be carried out as long as the United States observed the agreement.

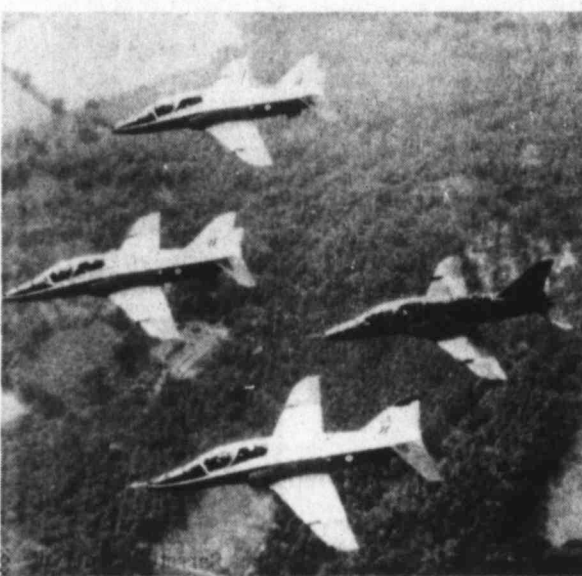

At the White House, spokesman Ron Nessen said "the rough range they're (analysts) looking at straddles 150 kilotons. It could be above or below."

The analysis is hampered so far by limited information about the terrain of the two Russian test sites and by what U.S. officials call "a rather wide band of uncertainty in regard to the exact yields of these explosions."

However, officials say preliminary indications appear to point to a Soviet infraction of the treaty's intent — but not the legal letter of the accord since the pact has not yet been ratified by the Senate.

The suspicious blasts occurred July 4 at Semipalatinsk, in the south central region of the country, and July 29 at Azgir near the Caspian Sea. The question is whether they had a force in excess of 150 kilotons, the ceiling agreed to by then-President Richard M. Nixon and Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev in Moscow in 1974.

Reporters traveling in Iran with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger were told Thursday that the Russians may have violated the spirit of the agreement. Officials here claimed the Russians had said last spring that the Soviet Union did not intend "to take any action incompatible with the provisions of the treaty," on the understanding the United States would also observe its provisions.

HAWKS IN THE SKY — Four Hawk jet aircraft fly in formation recently previewing the ground attack and training plane that will debut in operational service in the Royal Air Force by the end of the year. Don't try to hide couple's split

DEAR ABBY: Last year, our daughter was married in a beautiful church wedding, after which she moved to another state. She is back home now (alone) for what friends and relatives assume is a "visit." Actually, Doris (not her real name) has left her husband, but nobody knows it yet. We have asked her not to announce it because we still have hopes that she and her husband will patch up their differences. But Doris insists that there's no chance for a reconciliation.

Abby, what should we tell people when she stays and stays? Doris says she wants to see a lawyer here who's a friend of her father's, but we're urging her to wait a while. Once she sees a lawyer about a divorce, the cat will be out of the bag and the whole town will start talking. She says she doesn't care, but we do.

Doris is 23 and her husband is 25. She refuses to say why she left him. How should we handle this?

DORIS' MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: What's to handle? Your daughter is an adult, and since she has asked for no advice or counsel from you, the best thing you can give her is your wholehearted support. Your biggest concern seems to be "what to tell people." Tell them the truth!

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letter from the woman whose husband reads all the time. It annoyed her, but I can understand how he feels because that's the way I am. You might call us "bookaholics."

I always have something to read with me. I read if I'm eating alone or taking a bath. I read while I'm walking down the street or waiting for a red light. I read while waiting for an elevator, or standing in line at a checkout counter. It makes the time go faster and calms my nerves.

If I don't have something to read, and I have a few minutes to spare, I become very upset and even physically sick.

SEATTLE BOOKAHOLIC

DEAR BOOKAHOLIC: I'm all for reading, but reading while walking down the street or waiting for a red light can be hazardous to one's health.

DEAR ABBY: Just to put an end to the controversy about why a man would wear only one earring: MY reason is simple—I lost the other one.

Nicholson, Thurman vows exchanged

Miss Deloris Ann Nicholson became the bride of David Judson Thurman in August 1st ceremonies, at the Calvary Hill Baptist Church in Dallas. Miss Cindy Lester, of Big Spring, and Albert Thurman, the bridegroom's brother, were honor attendants. Other attendants were Pat Wadsworth and George Knight. The ushers were Dick Nicholson, of Big Spring, and Randy Nicholson, of Tulsa, Oklahoma, brothers of the bride, and Carroll Estes, of Corpus Christi. The Thurman's will make their home at 8615 Forrest Hills Blvd. in Dallas.

The parents of the bride are Jean Nicholson of Lubbock and R. P. Nicholson of Big Spring. Mr. and Mrs. Fred Thurman are the parents of the bridegroom.

Scout troop back from Colorado hike

Troop 401 returned from a week in the state of Colorado. They left Big Spring on a Saturday morning, spent the night at Hyde Park outside of Santa Fe, New Mexico, and visited the ski area there. Sunday afternoon they arrived at St. Elmo, Colorado, and set up camp. The scouts explored all areas around St. Elmo. Some of the scouts backpacked into the mountains and spent the night on the trail. Also a side trip was made to Royal Gorge, Colorado. Thursday morning the troop went to the Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs, toured the academy and points of interest in the area.

Sponsors on the trip were Gene and Jo Gresham, Jerry and Evelyn Delatour, Lee and Rouleen Freeze, Tom Fettes, Dell Burks, and Scoutmaster Charles Burks. The troop left Colorado Springs Saturday morning and returned to Big Spring that night. Troop 401 meets at 7:30 each Monday night behind the Kentwood Center. Charles Burks is the Scoutmaster and everyone is welcome to come and visit.

MRS. CHERI KANTRO

Pharmacy job for women, too

By CAROL HART

Mrs. Cheri Kantro highly recommends her profession to other women, although it is a field that has been predominately male for many years.

Cheri is a registered pharmacist, one of few in this area. Cheri and her co-workers at Leonard's Pharmacy believe that she is the only registered woman pharmacist in Big Spring.

Although it is a field demanding work and concentration, Cheri says "I love it. I am really happy with it."

She spends her time working in Leonard's, Professional Pharmacy, and the pharmacy located in the Malone-Hogan hospital complex.

Why is it a good field for women? Cheri explained that the field offers good money and choice of working hours. She added that "the work is fast. It keeps you on your toes."

The Distributive Education program in high school led Cheri to her present career. She was employed half a day in a pharmacy in her home town of Pampa, where the pharmacist there convinced her to pursue a degree in the field. She attended Southwestern Oklahoma State University. "It is the highest ranking pharmacy school in the nation," said Cheri.

College was tough, according to Cheri. She said that there is a lot of work involved in gaining a degree. She added that the pharmacy program is a five-year plan.

Cheri graduated from college in December 1975, and worked in Snyder from January to May. She began working in Big Spring after she was registered.

It was in pharmacy school that she met her husband, Frank. He has been employed in a pharmacy in Colorado City for several months. Cheri drives to Big Spring six days a week, as the couple makes their home near Colorado City.

Cheri's stay in Big Spring will be a short one, because her husband has purchased a pharmacy in Idaho. She will be working in Lubbock.

Cheri said that she hates to leave Big Spring because "the people are friendly here. This has been my best job." Her co-workers at Leonard's agree that they will hate to see her leave.

Couple wed forty years celebrates

The Rev. and Mrs. George R. Harrington of Big Spring will celebrate their fortieth wedding anniversary this Saturday, August 7, at Highland Church of God, 6th and Settles. Guests are invited to come and go from 5 to 7 p.m., and at 6 o'clock the couple will renew their marriage vows in a ceremony conducted by their son-in-law, Rev. David Stephenson of Lubbock.

The Harringtons pastored the First Church of God here from 1950-1952, returning in 1961 to assist Miss Arah Phillips in beginning Jack & Jill Kindergarten. They have recently moved to Big Spring for a third time, as interim pastors of Highland Church of God. Mr. Harrington is a native of Coahoma, a son of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Harrington. Mrs. Harrington is from Florida. The couple have three children: Mrs. David (Georgetta) Stephenson of Lubbock, Mrs. Eston (Diane) Hunter of Jacksonville, Florida, and Miss Hope Harrington of Chicago. They also have five grandchildren: Jeff and Greg, and Julie Hunter of Florida, Ronnie and Andy Stephenson of Lubbock.

Rev. and Mrs. Harrington regret that personal invitations could not be sent to each friend in the area, and they extend a cordial welcome to all who wish to attend the celebration.

Baptists seek remedies to family troubles

GLORIETA, N.M. — Statistics indicate the family is in serious trouble.

Last year, more than 1,000,000 divorces were granted, and one marriage in every four was a remarriage.

The moral and social crisis of our day could be family stability.

One effort to answer the cries for help seen in these statistics is the first national family enrichment conference for Southern Baptists. Nearly 1,000 concerned family members, church staff workers and professionals attended the Glorieta conference to seek ways to strengthen the existing family unit and minister to persons who are victims of divorce, widowhood or single parenthood.

Joseph W. Hinkle, secretary of the Southern Baptist Sunday School Board's newly-created family ministry department, expressed the philosophy behind the week-long effort in the expanded program of family ministry.

"To me there is no greater challenge in our nation today than that of helping families," said Hinkle. "I believe in the family and I'm committed to meeting its needs. Marriage and the family are sacred and are a part of God's plan, his first institution."

For many persons here this week, the challenge is being met. They are finding something to take back with them.

Belinda and Dennis Brice, El Paso, Tex., said the family ministry department-sponsored national meeting "has given us many helps for our own marriage. We've been through some rough times as a couple, but as a

ABA mission sponsor okays missionary

Midland's Tall City Missionary Baptist church voted to sponsor Walter Smith, Midland, as missionary in Big Spring.

The church has sponsored several meetings of a mission in Big Spring, which meets at 12th and Rannels.

"The response has been very encouraging," Smith said. "There has been at least 20 present at each of the Sunday meetings."

The mission meets Sundays at 2:30 p.m. and on Tuesdays at 7:30 p.m.

Both the Tall City church, located at 3500 Anetta, and the Big Spring mission are affiliated with the American Baptist Association.

Visitors to the local mission so far have been from as far away as Odessa, Abilene, and Henderson.

Everyone is invited to attend the mission's services, Smith said.

result of this week, we realize we're not alone."

"The National Family Enrichment Conference is the most positive and realistic step the Southern Baptist Convention has taken," Brice concluded, expressing hope that National Enrichment Conference will become yearly occurrences.

"Very refreshing," responded Martin Duvall, when asked his reaction to the week. A pastor from Bloomington, Minn., Duvall noted that "the family is just beginning to merge as an area of concern in many

Bridge of love rescues young Mexican girl

DALLAS — A bridge of love and concern by Texans has stretched across the Rio Grande to rescue a doomed three-year-old Mexican girl, surgeons said at Parkland Hospital here.

Doctors and churches have linked compassionate hearts and skilled hands to provide new life for beautiful brown-eyed Lupe Olivares born with her bladder on the outside of her abdomen.

At a year of age, the tiny youngster had already suffered severe kidney damage and was expected to die of kidney failure or other complications.

"Give her up. You have nine other children," people told Lupe's mother.

"If I had twenty other children, I couldn't give up hope for Lupe," cried Natalia.

Then Lupe's parents heard about a Longview Baptist pediatrician, Dr. B. Robert Comer, doing volunteer medical missions in Mexico under sponsorship of the Texas Baptist Rio Grande River Ministry and First Baptist Church, Longview.

They found Dr. Comer near Matamoros at a Children's Home sponsored by First Baptist Church, Brownsville. When Dr. Comer saw Lupe, he told the Olivares, "I would like to take her to Dallas where some surgeons I know can help her."

Aided by First Baptist Church, Longview, Lupe was flown to Parkland Memorial Hospital, Dallas, where the first of three complicated operations was performed.

"Christians have joined hearts and hands across the River in a saga of love that transcends national boundaries and denominations," said Texas Baptist Executive Director James H. Landes.

"The results have been new life for a precious little girl," said Texas Baptist River Ministry Coordinator Elmin Howell.

After Lupe's first trip to Dallas, First Baptist, Brownsville, has paid the travel for the child and her mother. The church has also paid for Lupe's medicine and doctor's bills in Brownsville.

Members of Second Mexican Baptist Church, Dallas, have opened their homes to Lupe and Mrs. Olivares while they are in Dallas.

Mrs. Olivares said she has professed Christ as Savior and for about a year she and other members of her family have attended the Refugio Baptist Mission near Matamoros.

The surgical teams, headed by Dr. Terry D. Allen of Parkland, a urologist, have given their time and skills for Lupe, and the hospital hasn't charged either.

"It's been a rewarding experience," said Dr. Allen when he did a follow-up examination of Lupe in Dallas last week.

Dr. Allen said Lupe had already suffered some irreversible damage to her kidneys and must regulate her water intake to avoid becoming dehydrated. As she grows older, the tendency to become dehydrated may decrease, he added.

Lupe, who has been given an opportunity for a normal life through the love and concern of friends across the river, smiled warmly and waved goodbye.

Crestviewers return from mission trip

A group of Crestview Baptist Church members recently returned from a mission trip to Ojos Caliente, Mexico.

Among those who made the trip were Mr. and Mrs. John Markle and daughter Diana, Mr. and Mrs. Doug Brann and family, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Odom and family, Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Bedford, Buddy Manning, Kenneth Platte, Pat Ray, Broadus Welborn, Gail Grose, Ramona Lawson, Laura Wilkerson and Jim Wilkerson.

In addition, four members of the Mexican Baptist Church made the trip. They include the Rev. Basilio Esquivel and his three sons.

Purpose of the trip was twofold. The first mission was to preach the gospel, the second was to help in the construction of a 20x12 foot adobe house, where rabbits could be raised for food. The animals need such a structure to protect them from the intense heat.

The Rev. Mr. Esquivel preached and, on one occasion, interpreted for the Rev. Jim Wilkerson as he delivered a sermon.

The rabbit program has been started so that the people of Ojos Caliente might have a steady diet of meat. The temperature often rises to 110 degrees in the summer time. For that reason, it is not difficult to

Episcopal priest leads conference

AUSTIN — An Episcopal priest, educator, and degreed lawyer will be the guest leader for the 12th annual Texas Faith and Order Conference Oct. 21-23 at Casa San Jose (formerly St. Joseph's Retreat House) in San Antonio.

The Rev. Reynell M. Parkins of Knoxville, Tenn., professor of the sociology of housing in the School of Architecture and director of the Housing Research and Development Center, University of Tennessee, will address the 1976 Conference theme, "What Shall Christians Value?"

Sponsored by the Texas Conference of Churches, the Faith and Order Conference is the major annual program of the Conference's Division for Christian Unity, chaired by the Rev. Dr. Sidney Roberts of Fort Worth.

Approximately 120 Roman Catholic, Protestant and Greek Orthodox clergy and lay leaders from across the state are expected to attend the Conference. Registration applications will be received beginning late July through ecclesiastical unit offices of TCC-member denominations and at the TCC offices here.

The Rev. Parkins, a former TCC vice president, is recognized nationally as an outstanding educator and innovator, a highly sensitive and creative Christian leader, and an articulate, dynamic speaker and lecturer.

A committed ecumenical churchman, he received the B.A. degree in sociology from New York University, the J.D. degree from New York University School of Law, and the M.D. degree from Episcopal theological Seminary.

The Rev. Parkins, formerly professor of architecture and planning at The University of Texas at Austin, also has served on the faculty and staff at St. Mary's University and Trinity University in San Antonio and the Episcopal Seminary of the Southwest in Austin. He taught for some 10 years in the Canal Zone public schools.

Organizing rector of a tri-ethnic parish in Corpus Christi, the Rev. Parkins has been heavily involved as organizer and consultant in housing and varied community action programs. The Rev. Parkins is a member of the American Association of University Professors, the Association of American Institute of Planners, and the International Platform Association.

'Fall Festival' this weekend

The Sacred Heart Catholic Church is presenting its "Fall Festival" this Saturday and Sunday at the local church.

There will be all sorts of games, darts, cake walks, roulette, a fortune teller, a country store and baseball in store for all interested people.

Mexican food will highlight the event, and $1,000 worth of savings bonds will be given away Sunday to a lucky raffle ticket holder.

The public is cordially invited to attend the Festival.

NEW YORK (AP) — To a questionnaire about new worship materials, pastors of four North American Lutheran denominations have responded with an overwhelming approval of using contemporary language.

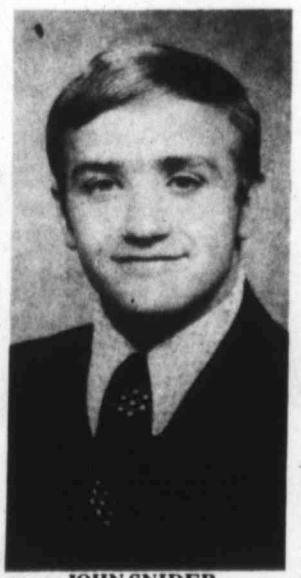

Coahoma gets new minister

John Snider is the new minister of the Church of Christ in Coahoma.

Originally from Sundance, Wyo., where he attended high school, Snider later enrolled at the University of Wyoming, where he remained for one year, majoring in business. He then transferred to Abilene Christian University in Texas, where he switched his major to Bible. He graduated from that school in 1973.

Snider qualified for a master's degree in Ministry of Evangelism in 1974 from the same school.

He is married to the former Patty King of Meadow, Tex. They have a son, Chesley Kyle, born last

JOHN SNIDER

March 31. John began preaching in high school in Sundance, Texas, while attending ACU, was involved in various campaigns in Texas; was youth minister in Pecos during the summer of 1972. He preached in Weinert while in graduate school. He and his family then worked in Sterling, Colo. for two years.

Mrs. Snider is also a graduate of ACU with a degree in speech therapy.

The Coahoma Church of Christ is having a Vacation Bible School the week of August 9-13. It will be each morning from 9:00 a.m. to 11:00 a.m. Theme of the school is "Life Together in a Christian Family."

The American Quest

First came the convictions... solid rock-like convictions... about man and his rights... convictions about God and the gifts with which He generously blessed mankind. Then, came a search to implement these convictions; the result was our Declaration of Independence.

American liberty like America itself had its beginning in the quest for spiritual identity. In the wilderness itself the pilgrim fathers searched and labored to build a civilization based on their religious convictions. They probed their minds and hearts and discovered that they shared a common vision of "one nation under God." Again, the Declaration was the inspired result.

If our third century is to be one of "independence," like the two that have preceded it, all of us must continue this quest, and maintain this eternal vigilance of faith and religious commitment.

Briscoe's highway plan criticized

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP)—Comptroller Bob Bullock and Common Cause have become the first to publicly criticize Gov. Dolph Briscoe's plan to shift more state money into highways.

Bullock said Briscoe's plan would eat up a "once healthy state budget surplus."

Katy Davis, state director of Common Cause, said the proposal was irresponsible.

The governor announced Wednesday he will ask the legislature for a package of bills that would increase highway spending by $825 million over the 1978 and 1979 fiscal years without raising new taxes. The money, in effect, would be siphoned away from other state programs.

Bullock added the governor's proposed highway spending to other items that he has proposed and said only $209 million would be free for improvement or expansion of state programs by the legislature.

He included, however, $692 million for state employee and teacher pay raises. Briscoe has instructed his staff to prepare such a proposal but has not publicly declared it is part of his legislative program.

The comptroller's calculations do not "even include the rosy dream of a $1 billion fund to hold in trust against the day when the oil and gas wells run dry," something Briscoe favors, Bullock said.

Bullock said that while he favors additional funding for highways, he does not think it should be done through statutory dedication of funds. That, he said, would be "government by straitjacket."

Ms. Davis said the governor's priorities were scrambled.

"There is no reason on earth why improving our prison system, improved health care delivery systems, mass transportation, better regulation of utilities or a more equitable education system for our children should take a back seat to Texas highways," she said.

"If funding highways is that important in the governor's legislative program, then he should abandon this phony 'no new taxes' stance, rather than take the meat cleaver to the rest of the state budget."

Police search car for murder weapons

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP)—Fort Worth police have obtained warrants to search the car of millionaire T. Cullen Davis and the residence of his girlfriend in connection with the killing spree at the Davis mansion earlier this week.

Justice of the Peace Bob Ashmore issued the search warrants, which led to the speculation that the weapon used in the slayings of two persons has not been found.

Police found five weapons at the residence of Karen J. Master, Davis' girlfriend, where the wealthy industrialist was apprehended after the Tuesday morning shootings that also wounded two others. Another weapon was also discovered at the $6 million mansion.

The two survivors of the Davis mansion killings remained under hospital care Thursday and both were responding favorably to treatment for bullet wounds, officials said.

Doctors said socialite Priscilla Davis, 35, was in good condition and that 21-year-old Gus Gavrel Jr.'s condition remained fair.

Davis is charged with murder in the shooting deaths of Stan Farr, 30, his estranged wife's boyfriend, and Andrea Lee Wilborn, 12, Mrs. Davis' daughter by a previous marriage.

Davis, who is free on $80,000 bond, also is charged with attempted murder in the wounding of his wife and Gavrel, a friend of the Davis family.

CHINS stirs trouble with Youth Council

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP)—Texas Youth Council director Ron Jackson says a group of youngsters called CHINS are "causing us unmitigated hell."

CHINS stands for Children in Need of Supervision—kids who have been in lots of trouble but who have not been declared delinquent by a court.

Jackson appeared before budget examiners for the legislature and the governor's office on the TYC's budget request for 1978-79.

Not counting its three children's homes and four training schools for delinquents, the agency is requesting $17.5 million in 1978 and $14.1 million in 1979—roughly double the present appropriation.

State assistance for community-level rehabilitation efforts would increase from $2.1 million in the coming year to $2.5 million in 1978 and $3.4 million in 1979.

Gov. Dolph Briscoe held up expenditure of much of those funds this year until Atty. Gen. John Hill issued an opinion saying, in effect, that he had misinterpreted the appropriation bill rider giving him certain review powers.

The budget document recommends repeal of a state law allowing commitment of CHINS to council institutions or, alternatively, revision of the 1975 law that prohibits the council from mingling them with delinquent youngsters. Most CHINS now are placed in the council's Corsicana or West Texas children's home.

Bond denied for murder suspects

HOUSTON (AP)—A state judge has denied bond for Paula Cantrell Derese, accused of murder in the deaths of her parents.

Visiting State District Court Judge Stanley Kirk denied the bond Thursday after Mrs. Derese pleaded innocent to the charges.

Mrs. Derese, 26, and Vernon McManus, 33, a former college football coach, have been indicted on capital murder charges in the deaths of Mrs. Derese's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Cantrell of Baytown.

Mrs. Derese told police she found her parents with their throats cut in their fashionable Baytown home early July 25 when she returned home from a date.

Kirk denied the bond after hearing three witnesses, including Mrs. Derese's former husband. A similar bond hearing is scheduled sometime next week for McManus.

Kirk said if Mrs. Derese were freed on bond, there was a "reasonable expectation that the accused would commit acts of violence that would constitute a continuing threat to society."

Asst. Harris County Dist. Atty. Stu Stewart said the state will seek the death penalty for Mrs. Derese and McManus. Both remained in custody of Baytown police.

Stewart said pretrial motions will be heard Sept. 3 and that he hopes the case can come to trial within 90 days.

The indictment returned against Mrs. Derese and McManus alleged they planned the slayings to collect life insurance and the Cantrell's estate.

Richard Mahan, Mrs. Derese's attorney, said he would appeal Kirk's bond denial to the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals.

Mrs. Derese's former husband, Herbert William Derese, a Port Arthur refinery worker, testified that to his knowledge his former wife did not hate her parents and that she was not known to him to be a violent person. He said he and the couple's son, Chad, 2, had been on a lake trip when the Cantrells were slain.

Former resident of Big Spring drowns in San Angelo reservoir

SAN ANGELO — Robert Curtis, 76, of 2981 Arrowhead in Abilene and formerly of Big Spring, apparently drowned about 9:30 p.m. Thursday while fishing in the O.C. Fisher Reservoir here.

The ruling came from Justice of Peace Richard Self. Circumstances surrounding death were investigated by Tom Green County deputies.

Alexander was believed to have been fishing alone. The body was found face down in an inflatable innertube, with fishing equipment, a deputy said. A vehicle owned by Alexander was found on a nearby road.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander lived in Big Spring about five years ago, when they moved to Abilene. He was an engineer, assigned to Lake E. V. Spence. Active in church work while in Big Spring, Mr. Alexander was a deacon at the First Presbyterian Church there.

Funeral arrangements likely will be completed in Abilene.

Pokes-Rams reminisce old times Saturday

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Dallas quarterback Roger Staubach will lead the Cowboys against the Los Angeles Rams Saturday night at the Coliseum, a place where he's had some good times and some bad times.

In the 1972 edition of the exhibition meeting with the Rams here, Staubach tried to barrel his way over Los Angeles linebacker Marlin McKeever. The Cowboy quarterback wound up sidelined with the only serious injury of his career, a separated shoulder.

Then in last year's exhibition match against the Rams, Staubach saw Los Angeles roll to a 35-7 victory.

But he and the Cowboys got revenge when it counted. Staubach, playing one of his finest games, completed 16 of 26 passes for 220 yards and four touchdowns in the Cowboys' 37-7 drubbing of the Rams in the NFC championship game last season.

Staubach, 34 and heading into his eighth season with Dallas, may have slowed a step for this year's exhibition affair with Los Angeles, but he said he's wiser.

"I'm a passer," said the Cowboys' artful dodger, "but running is part of my total game and I have confidence in it."

"But I'm a little smarter now. I'll dive to the ground after I've gotten a first down in some instances."

Looking back on the injury he suffered four years ago, Staubach said, "I was wearing these flimsy, dinky shoulder pads and it was stupid for me to have them because I do run."

"I haven't been hurt badly since then, but now I'm wearing specially built shoulder pads. They're bigger and can absorb more hits."

"Last year I began to benefit from my experience," He continued. "Hopefully, it's going to help me even more."

Staubach said he'd learned that his way wasn't always the best way.

"I've always had a strong belief in myself physically to get things done," he said. "I was always going to do it my way whether it was to run or throw. But of course I've learned that isn't the right way."

"A few years ago, if I didn't see something I liked, I just tried to shove the ball in there, or I took off running," he explained. "I believed I could do anything. I could at times, but other times I was hurting the team. Now I'm more selective."

More selective doesn't exclude running, however. "Running may or not shorten my career," Staubach said, "but I'll take my chances."

COWBOYS FACT SHEET

THIS WEEK — The Dallas Cowboys (0-1) visit the Los Angeles Rams (1-0) on Saturday night in Memorial Coliseum. The Cowboys dropped their pre-season opener at Oakland last Saturday, 17-14, while the Rams were having an easy time subduing the new Tampa Bay club, 26-3.

SERIES STANDING — In regular season and playoff action, the terms have won five games each. In pre-season games, Los Angeles is ahead 9-7. Last year the Rams beat the Cowboys 35-7, in the pre-season opener for both clubs. In Dallas for the regular season lid-lifter, the Cowboys won, 18-7. In January, in the NFC championship game in the Coliseum, the Cowboys won, 37-7.

KICKOFF — 9 p.m. CDT Saturday. (7 p.m. Los Angeles time).

TELEVISION — Telecast nationally at 9 p.m. (Dallas time) by CBS-TV, Channel 4 in Dallas, with Pat Summerall and Tom Brookshier.

RADIO — KRLD (1080) in Dallas, KFJZ (1270) in Fort Worth and the Cowboys Radio Network with Verne Lundquist and Chris Needham.

THE COACHES — Tom Landry is starting his 17th season as the Cowboy's head coach with a career record of 126-90-6. In the past nine years, Landry has accumulated a 101-37-2 mark.

Chuck Knox is entering his fourth year as head coach of the Rams. He has a 34-8-0 record and piloted the Rams to a third straight NFC West title in 1975.

Oklahoma feels confident Oil Bowl Saturday night

WICHITA FALLS, Tex. (AP) — The Oklahoma schoolboy all-stars, sporting two Oklahoma University-bound quarterbacks, may have their best chance in years to win the Oil Bowl Saturday night over a Texas all-star team missing some potential stars.

All-state quarterbacks J. C. Watts of Eufaula and Bruce Taton of Tulsa Hale will lead an Oklahoma team that Coach Brooks Mosier "guarantees" will score some points.

"We are going to score," says Mosier. "I feel like this because we have put in more offense than Texas and I feel like we have an advantage because we had 23 players from our all-star game and Texas had 10, so a majority of our guys have had an extra week of playing."

Watts and Taton, both headed for the OU Sooners, are blessed with two good wide receivers — Kenneth Blair of Oklahoma City Classen and Johnny Scott of Fairfax.

The Oklahoma schoolboys, facing a 23-6-1 series deficit, have 10 future Oklahoma University players, with Northeast Oklahoma the next highest representative with three.

In addition, the Sooners have six future players on the Texas All-Star roster, including starting quarterback Darrol Ray of Killeen. Missing from the Texas roster are such stalwarts as Curtis Dickey of Bryan, Sammy Bickham of Plano and Olympic sprinter Johnny Jones of Lampasas.

"We know Oklahoma can throw the ball offensively and we hope to do both running and throwing," said Texas all-star Coach Tom Gray of Mesquite.

In addition to Ray, the Texas backfield will have fullback Barry Joiner of Killeen and a trio of tailbacks who are expected to split time — Steve Rhodes of Dallas Spruce, Jimmy Lockhart of Dallas White and Sam Bailey of McKinney.

The Oklahoma running corps will be led by Paul Ameen of Midwest City and Tom Robertson of Oklahoma City Marshall.

"If we don't control the line of scrimmage it will be the longest night we ever had," said Texas assistant

Dub Largin of Wichita Falls Hirschi. "We've got to put on a good pass rush."

Leading the defensive charge for Texas will be noseguard Melvin Jones of Klein, linebacker Lance Taylor of El Paso Coronado and Jon Paul Monreal, who was touted for his play in the recent Texas North-South all-star game.

Ben Freuhauf of Midwest City and Steve Nicholson of Tulsa Memorial are expected to be standouts for Oklahoma.

Kickoff at Wichita Falls' Memorial Stadium is 8 p.m. Texas won 20-6 last year.

No more overtimes for Oilers please

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oilers and New Orleans Saints, losers in their first National Football League exhibition games, meet in the Astrodome Saturday night to try to get the pre-season kinks worked out.

New Orleans Coach Hank Stram, under orders from Saints owner John Mecom Jr. to win games and hold the line on spending, lost a 20-14 decision to Pittsburgh in his debut as Saints coach.

The Oilers, 10-4 last season under Coach O. A. "Bum" Phillips, lost their opener to Stram's former employer the Kansas City Chiefs, 9-3 in overtime.

The Oilers will try to win this one in regulation time. They have been in three overtime games and lost all three.

Houston lost a six-quarter American Football League championship game to the Dallas Texans (who became the Kansas City Chiefs) in 1962 and lost to the Dallas Cowboys in 1974.

"We beat ourselves," Phillips said of the Oilers' pre-season opener. "Every time we had a good drive going, we killed it with penalties."

Cluck loses two-hitter

Knights suffer 1st loss

BROWNWOOD — The error bug bit deep into the Big Spring Knights Wednesday night costing them four runs and their first post-season defeat to host Brownwood 5-1 in the Texas Teenage Junior League Tournament.

Big Spring committed seven errors in the game, but it was three in the first inning which allowed four unearned runs to score. This fielding lapse wasted another brilliantly pitched game by Ricky Cluck. He struck out 11 while allowing just two hits — both singles — and three walks.

With the defeat, the going gets rougher for the Knights. To win the state title they must struggle through the losers' bracket and beat the survivor of the winners' bracket in a doubleheader Saturday night.

Their first step came this morning versus Temple, which eliminated Hillsboro yesterday 13-1. Palestine was also eliminated from the field by Spring-Klein 13-3. Snyder sent Martha into the losers' bracket 10-1.

If the Knights won this morning's battle they will play the winner of the Spring-Klein — Matha game, being played this afternoon, at 9:00 tonight.

Not only did the Knights waste a well-pitched game last night, but they also wasted a slew of base hits. They outhit Brownwood six to two, but the only run they could muster came in the third when Cluck knocked in Freddie Martinez with a double.

Ben Watson had a triple and single, Mark Poss had two hits and Carols Mata one.

Peter Pearce picked up the win for Brownwood. Greg Clements and Derwin Williams registered the winners' two hits.

Not cheering this time

Fairbanks vs. friend

The last time he saw Joe Washington, Coach Chuck Fairbanks stood on the sidelines cheering on the young freshman halfback. Tonight, four years later, Fairbanks will be on those same sidelines trying to devise a way to stop him.

The change in the coach's allegiance occurred, of course, when the two parted the college scene at Oklahoma for the pros — Fairbanks to the New England Patriots and Washington to the San Diego Chargers.

Those teams will oppose each other in a National Football League preseason game, one of two scheduled tonight.

The site makes the Fairbanks-Washington confrontation even more interesting — they are returning to Owen Field at Norman, Oklahoma, the first pro game to be played there since 1959. A crowd of 40,000 is expected to cheer their old favorites.

The other game will match two neighbors, the Washington Redskins and the Baltimore Colts at Baltimore, a battle between two of the NFL's powerhouses.

Oklahomans get still another chance to greet their old heroes on Saturday afternoon when the Cleveland Browns play the Atlanta Falcons in the first pro game ever at Stillwater, Okla., home of Oklahoma State.

On Saturday night, Buffalo will play at Cincinnati, Minnesota at Kansas City, New Orleans at Houston, Dallas at Los Angeles in a nationally televised game, Tampa Bay and Green Bay at Milwaukee, Chicago and Seattle at Spokane and St. Louis and Oakland at Phoenix.

Two games will be played Sunday afternoon, Miami at Detroit and Denver at San Francisco. On Monday night, the New York Jets play at the New York Jets and Pittsburgh plays at Philadelphia.

Washington will not be the only former Oklahoma player. Sooner fans can cheer. The game will almost resemble an alumni affair with San Diego also bringing in former Sooner guard Kevin Grady and former Sooner assistant coach Rudy Feldman.

Fairbanks has five ex-Oklahoma players — tight end Al Chandler, running back Leon Crosswhite, nose guard Raymond Hamilton and linebackers Rod Shoate and Steve Zabel.

Each team opened preseason play with victories last week — San Diego beat Philadelphia 20-7 and New England stopped the New York Giants in overtime 13-7. Washington, in his pro debut, ran for one touchdown and rushed for 38 yards.

The Redskins and Colts also opened on successful notes last week and are expected to play their regulars a good portion of this neighborhood rivalry. Baltimore has a bit of an added incentive, having been beaten by Washington four straight times in exhibition games.

DON ROBBINS

LARRY HORTON

Who am I to argue with the Associated Press, Texas Football and the 1976 edition of Football 5-AAAA over what team is going to win the 5-A title? I was in Pennsylvania at this time last year and spent the entire football season in Houston.

Well, I'm the guy who picked the Pittsburgh Steelers to win the Super Bowl and Kansas City, Philadelphia and Cincinnati to win pennants in their respective divisions this season.

Okay, okay, I'm also the one who picked the American League to win the All-Star game, the Red Sox to win the AL East and (oh it smarts) changed my AL West choice to the Texas Rangers (due undoubtedly to brain-washing by Herald editor Troy Bryant).

Regardless, I can't see the Odessa Permian Panthers defending their 5-4A title. The only have nine lettermen, including four starters, returning from last year's state runner-up squad.

And that magnificent defensive squad which allowed just 38 points last season is spread over college campuses from Oskosh to Timbuktu — only two lettermen (one starter) are returning.

It's debatable how much significance to give to their returning offensive team since last year's unit was next to last in both total yards and points scored.

If not the Panthers, who do I think will win the 5-4A title? That will come later in the month when The Herald previews all the local teams, concluding with the 5-4A teams. First team on the list is the Forsan Buffalos this Sunday.

Enlightened Robbins back

Big Spring football coach Don Robbins said he enjoyed his stay in Houston for the coaching school, but it was good to be back in West Texas.

"Good coaching school, well organized, but it felt good to get back to West Texas — and a breath of fresh air," he said.

"Enjoyed seeing old friends — I hadn't seen for years — and meeting new ones. I was enlightened by the new equipment and apparatus they had on display, plus the sessions we attended on the latest coaching and training techniques."

Robbins had some bad news for the upcoming season. "We lost two good linebackers — Bill Stark and Greg Brodman. Stark moved to Houston and Brodman to San Antonio. It's possible the results of the impact study for Webb might cost some more players before the season's over."

He also put a crimp in my Permian theory. "Don't put too much stock in how many players they lose," Robbins said, "last spring they had 85 working out with the JV's and 85 working on the varsity — plus several kicking specialists."

"The were so uniform in their physique and everything else it was impossible to tell the starters from the non-starters. Most boys there don't get to start until they're seniors so they always have a big turnover."

"Remember, they played 14 games last year. That's like getting a month's head start in training over the rest of the district."

Well I still don't think Permian will win, but I have to admit I'm not as sure as before.

Horton here for visit

Larry Horton, who resigned as Big Spring's baseball coach in June to go into the business world, is back in town visiting friends.

He brought up an interesting point for those who think major league baseball players are over-paid.

"In a book about Mickey Mantle," Horton said, "the author says, 'Think of all the great young ball-players you've ever seen — about one out of four ever gets to play professional ball. And of those only one of ten ever sees as much as a cup-of-coffee in the major leagues.'"

Interesting Larry, but from now on you'll have to spend your time reading Up the Organization, The Peter Principle and Winning by Intimidation. Come to think of it, coaches probably read those books.

Saint Baum turned loose

We just heard the New Orleans Saints cut their fourth string quarterback Jim Baum. They said he couldn't get his signals straight.

Astros lose to Philosopher Jones

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — San Diego Padres' pitcher Dave Freisleben says he's adopting the philosophy of his teammate—18 game winner Randy Jones.

Before Thursday night's 4-3 victory over the Houston Astros, Freisleben had lost eight straight games. Then he got three pieces of advice from Jones—relax, concentrate, react.

"I had Randy write it inside my cap so I didn't forget," said Freisleben.

Freisleben used the game to improve his record to 7-9, and appeared on his way to his fourth shutout of the season until the ninth inning. Leading 4-0, he was pulled by Padre manager John McNamara after giving up a leadoff single to Jose Cruz and then following a strikeout of Ed Herrmann with a walk to Rob Andrews.

"I really wanted the shutout and I wasn't happy about being taken out," Freisleben said, "but that was the manager's decision and I guess he thought I was tiring."

Freisleben struck out six and walked four during his 8 1-3 innings of work and nearly wound up with nothing for his effort when the Astros continued their rally off ace Padre reliever Butch Metzger.

With two out, pinch hitter Leon Roberts singled in one run and Enos Cabell two more to close the deficit to 4-3 before Metzger got out of the jam by getting Cesar Cedeno to pop short.

The game was a scoreless pitching duel between Freisleben and Mike McLaughlin until the fourth when Padre third baseman Doug Rader ripped his sixth homer of the year to put San Diego up 1-0.

Undefeated Pink Panthers challenge best in Texas

WEBB AFB — The Pink Panthers, who recorded the first unbeaten season in Webb Women's Softball League annals, will be going against some of the top teams in the state this weekend, as Webb hosts a "head on collision in the West."

Twenty-six teams from throughout Texas, excluding the metropolitan areas, are scheduled to begin the round-the-clock double elimination tournament here at 7 p.m. tonight. The Panthers will play their first game at 9 p.m. on Diamond-1.

The top two teams in the state tourney will advance to the National Women's Softball regional contest later this month. The Pink Panthers finished in the upper division of the state tournament last year in Abilene. It will be the second year in a row that the state finals have been held in West Texas.

The top two clubs the Panthers will have to contend with are expected to be Schlitz-Waco, from Waco, and Harris Acoustics from Abilene who are the odds-on favorites to meet head-on in the finals. Both clubs have impressive season statistics and tout speed and power.

The Panthers have the same credentials with a perfect season under their belts and four of the top five hitters in the leagues on the squad. Pitching star Jan Harrison set a league strikeout mark this year as the Panthers had only one tough game all season.

At least 50, and possibly 51 games will be played before the state champ is named. The finals are expected to begin at 5 p.m. on Sunday with the "if necessary" game at 6:15 p.m.

The other local representative in the tourney is the Veterans' Hospital squad, champions of the Big Spring Women's Softball loop.

Games are free and open to the public.

Expected to view the action is W. W. "Bill" Keethan, president of the International Softball Federation, the governing body for 26 million softball enthusiasts in 117 countries.

Blyleven, Rocketless Rangers blank Twins

ARLINGTON, Tex. (AP) — Bert Blyleven thought he was leaving Minnesota for Rocket City, U.S.A., when he came to the Texas Rangers June 1.

Blyleven believed the Rangers housed an arsenal of power hitters that would make pitching much easier than it was for the puncheon Twins.

However it's been one-run-and-Bert-you-hold-em since his arrival.

Blyleven scattered six hits in a 1-0 victory over California Thursday night in a typical struggle for the 25-year-old right-hander on the mound trying to hold the fort for the weak-hitting Rangers.

"I tried to kick myself in the tail from the sixth inning on to keep the ball down because I knew I didn't dare make a mistake," said Blyleven.

Blyleven's fear is understandable. Texas gave him only six runs in his first six games. He has four shut outs in his 12 games with the Rangers yet he is only 5-7 since he came here. Blyleven went a stretch of 36 innings in which he had only three runs to work with.

California's Gary Ross was the victim of a fielding lapse that cost him the game in the second inning. Jeff Burroughs waited a pop fly to short centerfield that outfielder Dan Briggs and second baseman Jerry Remy let fall unmolested.

Playing a round with the pros

This is the first of a daily series the Herald will be carrying on how the club pros play the local courses hole-by-hole.

Comanche Trail Municipal Golf Course

Bobby Howell
P.G.A. Professional

Comanche Trail Municipal Golf Course pro Bobby Howell shot a 64 on his course last week, but he says we should ask Bob Rogers how to play the first hole. Rogers conquered the hole with a hole-in-one on April 11 while playing in Big Spring Golf Association Louisiana Draw.

"It was cloudy and windy that day," Rogers said, "The wind was blowing against me, so I used a driver. I hit it well and it went in — that's all there is to it."

The white markers were set back at 253-yards that day, where they have been most of the season.

Howell says, "When the wind is with you, you can use a three-iron, but when it's against you, you need a driver. And you're lucky if you reach the green. Generally you're left with a chip shot after you drive."

TOP VIEW

HORIZONTAL VIEW

There used to be a water trap about 10-yards in front of the green, but its dried-up now. If your ball lands there you get a free drop back on the fairway.

"Sometimes, after a big rain, it fills up with water. You still get a free drop if you go in the water."

Strange honeymoon

with Marj Carpenter

Back in 1923, Sig Rogers, longtime Big Spring resident, claims that he and his dad and most of the rest of the family accompanied his brother from Indiana to California on his brother's honeymoon.

That must have been a strange honeymoon, but Sig maintains that since his dad paid all the bills, the brother didn't mind too much.

They traveled in two cars, one a Buick roadster and the other a big Caddy with an electric shift. The father drove the Caddy and the brother the Buick. Sig went along for the ride.

All of the ladies in the group wore knickers to travel in. The kippers became popular again in the early 70s.

That roaring group from the Hoosier State came through Big Spring in 1923. They wanted to see some cowboys and Indians. They didn't see any Indians but they did see some cowboys, complete with hats, boots, and chaps riding along the fence outside of Big Spring. They roared along in their cars about 15 to 20 miles per hour waving madly at the entire group.

The Rogers' traveling group was more than traveling. They were musicians and were playing for dances on the way. They played at Colorado City, Coahoma, Big Spring and Stanton.

In Stanton, they played in a tin building. A hail storm hit and nobody could hear the music. In some of the towns, the courtroom was used for dances. The chairs would be moved back and a dance held right in the courthouse.

The cowboys in those day wore their spurs, even on the dance floor and a lot of them would get all tangled up while dancing. Sig recalls that he was thankful that they didn't wear their guns when they danced.

He recalled that in those days, the roads were more like trails and there were no signs. "You just stayed on the most likely road and hoped that you would get where you were going."

He also recalls that now and then they'd get up on a mountain road and have to back down. "And the cars were always getting hot and we could have to stop and let them cool off." One time out in Arizona, they were letting the car cool down and a bunch of cowboys came along with guns. They thought that the group was outlaws and that they were in trouble.

They later discovered that the cowboys just stopped to help. Sig's little sister, who made the trip, later married a real cowboy who herded cattle when he was a boy through Stanton and Big Spring. Sig was personally more impressed with the fact that he also played the fiddle.

Rogers and bunch eventually made their way back to West Texas and have lived around here ever since.

But they all still remember Big Brother's honeymoon trip where they fiddled, guitar and sang their way from Indiana to California. Come to think of it, it probably was a real exciting honeymoon, even with the bridegroom's parents, brothers and sisters along on the trip.

That's one of the tales I heard recently, while catching up on my mail while out ridin' fence.

Marchers protest bomb

WASHINGTON (AP) — Antiwar activist Philip Berrigan and his wife, Elizabeth McAllister, were among a dozen antinuclear demonstrators who began a vigil outside the Pentagon to mark the 31st anniversary of the atomic bombing of two Japanese cities in World War II.

The demonstrators distributed leaflets opposing the growth of U.S. nuclear weaponry, asking, "When is enough?" They said the vigil, which began Thursday, would continue today and would resume on Monday.

The atomic bombing of Hiroshima occurred 31 years ago today on Aug. 6, 1945.

214 felony indictments remaining on docket

With District Judge Ralph W. Caton on vacation half of the month, little action was taken in Howard County's 118th District Court during July.

caseload is in Howard District also includes Martin County, the 118th Judicial and Glasscock counties.

Judge Caton granted probation to defendants waiving grand jury consideration and pleading guilty to three offenses. Remaining on the criminal docket were 214 felony indictments.

District Attorney Robert H. (Bob) Moore III filed five motions for revocation of probation.

Judge Caton revoked probation in two cases, sending two men to prison for a total of eight years in sentences.

In civil action, attorneys filed 62 suits, and Judge Caton disposed of 47. This left 1,347 cases on the civil docket Aug. 1.

Judge Caton saw one application for a writ of habeas corpus filed and acted on one application.

No new juvenile cases were filed, and no old cases decided.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, AUGUST 7, 1976

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A number of minor problems are apt to arise, but you have the ingenuity and resourcefulness to handle them efficiently and intelligently.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to April 19) A bigwig will now give you the support you want and you can do much to improve your vocation. A public matter should also be handled willingly and well. Show you have true ability.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You are able to get valuable advice from an out-of-towner if you go after it now. Be more understanding of new contacts as well as of regular associates. A kinder attitude toward mate is wise.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Keep your part of any agreement made and show appreciation for good business allies. You can have more rapport with loved one if you use the right kind of psychology.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Try to understand what associates need and you operate more efficiently. Good day for civic work. Relax tonight.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Plan a better method of operating where your duties are concerned. See about improving health. Evening can be a sociable one.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Plan early for recreation you want to have in the company of others, but set up appointments so all goes well. Praise loved one more.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Put your home in order so you are more at ease when you entertain. Some new business idea is proposed that can be fine for the future.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Make necessary appointments early and keep them on time. Evening is fine for relaxation and entertainment.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Study financial affairs well and see where you can cut down on expenses. Talk matters over with an expert and heed advice given.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19) Clear up any personal problems you have and then enjoy an evening with good friends. Dress for the occasion.

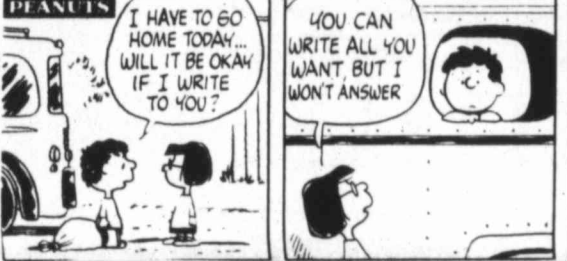

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 19) Plan how to make your daily routine more efficient. Much happiness with mate is possible in the evening.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Decide what it is you want most in life and then take the right steps to achieve it. Join a group affair that can prove to be enjoyable.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY he or she will have a natural ability to organize and build a successful life because of the innate intelligence here. There is also beauty and charm here, and the sky is the limit provided you do not permit others to spoil your child early in life.

The Stars impel, they do not compel. What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

CB on 100 FM channels

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Protesters orchestrating demonstrations over the air, prostitutes soliciting customers and police fighting back with electronic jamming — all are possibilities envisioned in a federal government study of the future of citizens band radio.

The wild proliferation of the small-talk medium could cause international protests in the next few years as CBers snarl world-wide communications, the report speculates.

And through it all, the Federal Communications Commission may be powerless to step in and regulate the chaos.

The report was prepared by Arthur D. Little Inc., a private consulting firm, for the White House Office of Telecommunications Policy.

In a series of scenarios, the study speculates about developments in telecommunications over the next 15 years. The scenarios are not predictions but, in the words of the study, are "futures" — they could happen.

The report also envisions: —The American Telephone & Telegraph Co. carrying all television service into homes over phone lines. TV stations stop broadcasting on the air.

—The U.S. Postal Service jeopardized by competition from private firms. The rivals deliver color facsimiles of letters into homes over the telephone network and electronically provide newspapers and magazines that can be read on television screens.

—A government-run communications satellite system that carries educational programs, medical information, defense data and also competes with private carriers, such as AT&T.

The CB scenario envisions antibusing demonstrators using radios to organize riots. But by 1977, it says, police will have learned to jam CB conversations by broadcasting noise on the channels.

Other uses will create problems as well. Lookouts will warn bandits of approaching police, and prostitutes will cruise the streets broadcasting their offers.

In 1977, the scenario says, scrambling equipment will be on the market that will allow private conversations. And there will be calling equipment that will let CBers dial base stations as though they had telephones.

In 1978, the report says, increased sunspot activity will cause American CB conversations to skip thousands of miles, disrupting communications in Europe and South America. This will bring complaints to the United Nations.

By 1979, the FCC will have virtually abandoned efforts to enforce its rules. Faulty CB equipment will interfere with television and FM radio.

By 1980, 100 FM channels will be freed for CB use. The sound quality on these channels will be better.
