COMING SUNDAY

Dawn's early light

In the early morning hours, the world seems to take on a different appearance. In Sunday's Lifestyle section, staff photographer Paul Gilbert catches the hustle and bustle of Midland's pre-dawn activities.

Family practice

The odds of a lawyer becoming a judge seem to increase with age, but it's an even rarer occasion when two brothers decide to don the black robes. Sunday's Reporter-Telegram tells the story of the Baskin brothers who hopped aboard the bench.

Journey of love

It's been a spiritual journey that's taken Sister Mary Jean Audette from the business community to a Catholic convent, a Jewish law school and finally to Midland. Read about this woman and her goals to aid the poor in Sunday's Reporter-Telegram.

Confirmation of O'Connor seems assured

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supreme Court nominee Sandra Day O'Connor is sending out the word: she shares the views of many conservatives.

But the Senate Judiciary Committee has yet to find out — even though most of its members appear anxious to know — if she will be a truly conservative Supreme Court justice.

As her confirmation proceedings entered what's scheduled to be their final hours today, that fact did not seem to matter.

Ten of the committee's 18 members already have gone on the record as supporting Mrs. O'Connor's nomination, and confirmation by the full Senate appears assured.

In more than five hours of testimony Thursday, the first woman ever nominated to the nation's highest court divulged these personal views:

—She abhors abortion.

—She thinks it "inappropriate" for women to participate in combat during times of war.

—She opposes forced busing to achieve school desegregation.

—She favors the death penalty for certain crimes.

—She believes a 67-year-old legal doctrine that bars the use of evidence seized illegally by police may be adding to the nation's crime rate and perhaps is being applied too stringently.

—She favors a limited role for the nation's courts.

But, as she has since the Capitol Hill hearings began Wednesday, Mrs. O'Connor emphasized that her "personal views and philosophies" would not affect her Supreme Court votes.

And she disavowed any hint that she will be President Reagan's conservative envoy to the court. "I was not asked to make any commitments about what I would do or how I would resolve any issue to come before the court," she said about her pre-nomination conversations with Reagan.

About abortion, the issue generating the most committee questions during the hearings, Mrs. O'Connor said Thursday, "It is simply offensive to me. It's something that's repugnant to me and something in which I would not engage."

But she told conservative Sen. Jeremiah Denton, R-Ala., that "we are obligated to recognize that others have different views" and that the Supreme Court's landmark 1973 decision legalized abortion.

Asked by Denton about women in combat, Mrs. O'Connor said, "I have never felt, and do not feel, that it is appropriate for women to participate in combat ... in a battlefield situation."

The 51-year-old state appeals court judge, recalling that for one year she endured 75-mile round-trip bus rides between her family's ranch and her school, said busing "can be a very disruptive part of any child's education."

For that reason, she said, she opposes mandatory busing to combat racial desegregation.

But how a Justice O'Connor would view such a busing order is not known. On Wednesday, Mrs. O'Connor said she thought it sometimes "appropriate" for federal judges to impose orders calling for drastic remedial steps to remedy intentional constitutional violations.

Home sweet Home

One resident has decided not to get involved in helping out Midland's housing shortage by letting the public know his garage at 2205 W. Lousiana Ave. is not for rent. As the influx of people into Midland increased this summer, and the available housing disappeared, there have been reports of people renting garages to newcomers seeking a roof over their heads.

U.S., Israel form 'strategic partnership'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and Israel may conduct joint military exercises as part of their new "strategic partnership" to protect the Middle East from any Soviet threat, Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. says.

The strategic relationship between the two nations became a key theme of the meetings between President Reagan and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin despite Begin's denunciation of the pending $8.5 billion U.S. weapons sale to Saudi Arabia.

Haig cautioned Thursday that the new relationship has practical limitations, especially because of budget constraints in the United States.

He described it, however, as "the strategic relationship, the strategic partnership, the alliance, if you will, between Israel and the United States."

As the Begin visit continued this morning, the Israeli delegation met with Haig and U.S. special envoy Philip Habib to discuss plans for continuing the Middle East peace process.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., then had a private meeting with Begin. He reported afterward that he believes the Israeli official's visit has been "a public relations success."

However, Jackson said he believes that the Reagan administration's offer of stronger strategic ties to Israel is merely an effort to detract attention from the debate over the proposed sale of sophisticated radar planes to Saudi Arabia.

He said the pending sale is an example of foreign policy bending to the wealth of an oil-rich nation. The senator also said that sending advanced-technology spy planes to the Middle East might give the Soviet Union an intelligence bonanza, adding, "You'd have to b out of your mind to do it."

The sale "will go either way in the Senate by one or two votes," Jackson said. 'That's too close a margin for a president to conduct foreign policy ... I think it would be wise for the president to withdraw this nomination."

Meanwhile, both Begin and U.S. leaders predicted Thursday a quick and successful conclusion to new talks aimed at granting autonomy to the Arab residents of the Israeli-occupied West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip.

Begin said the long-stalled Israeli-Egyptian talks, scheduled to resume Sept. 23 in Cairo, "hopefully" would be concluded by the end of the year. Haig said he hopes they will be over by next April.

Jackson gets life in Dennis shooting

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Lee Roy Jackson sat idle, mute and expressionless Thursday as a jury adjudged him guilty of murdering a 61-year-old Midland grocer March 12.

Later, the jury reviewed portions of Jackson's past criminal record, which ultimately will net him life in prison as a habitual criminal.

The six-man, six-woman jury in Judge Vann Culp's 238th State District Court deliberated two hours before finding that Jackson, a 34-year-old ex-convict, had shot grocer William Isaac "Bill" Dennis about 9 a.m. March 12 at the counter of Bill's Drive Inn Grocery, 1308 N. Lamesa Road, with a .38-caliber pistol. Stacks of money which Dennis apparently had been counting at the time were undisturbed.

Jackson had claimed that he accidentally shot Dennis in a grudge-induced verbal bout and that he was sorry he had shot and killed the grocer.

"I didn't see any indication of remorse, so I'm not all that impressed," District Attorney Vern Martin had told the jurors in his closing arguments.

In the punishment phase of the trial, the jury deliberated 45 minutes to decide that Jackson had at least two prior convictions — burglary in 1969 and escape from prison in 1971. That determination meant an automatic life sentence for the defendant.

Martin, the chief prosecutor in the three-day trial, said that a life sentence would fit the crime and was appropriate for Jackson.

"Rehabilitation obviously hasn't worked in his case," Martin had opined.

His co-prosecutor, David Joers, referred to a "bunch of other convictions" against Jackson.

Housing panel named

In an effort to ease the critical housing shortage, the Human Relations Council announced today it has appointed a committee to study a means of establishing emergency housing in Midland.

Formed with the direction of Mayor G. Thane Akins, the committee consists of Akins; County Judge William Ahders; Betty Sheeler, director of the Midland Housing Association; the Rev. Robert Lathan; Allen Byers of The First National Bank and a member of the Objectives for Midland program; Robert Barnes with the Crime Prevention Unit of the Midland Police Department; Ray Moudy with Citizens Savings & Loan Association; and Kimberly Modisett, executive director of the Human Relations Council.

This group will search for ways to establish emergency housing for persons who have just moved to Midland and can't locate shelter.

"The Human Relations Council recognizes the severity of our problem, as there is no existing emergency housing for persons moving to Midland. We would like to ensure that such a facility will become a reality," Ms. Modisett explained.

"More importantly, we need to act now, because people are coming to Midland seeking jobs, which are plentiful," she continued. "But there is a problem. There is no housing and a facility of this nature would be a Band-Aid approach. But at least it would be better than nothing, which exists now."

Midland's many schools filling citizens' needs

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

As one of the speakers at the second session of Midland Awareness put it, "I firmly believe that we have the exact kinds of schools that we, as citizens of Midland, want."

And the disappointingly small group of concerned citizens who attended the program Thursday night in the First National Room of the First National Bank did not walk out thinking otherwise.

From the kindergartener through the student enrolled in the Adult and Continuing Education program at Midland College, the session, sponsored by the Human Relations Council, dealt with the various programs and structures designed for the community's needs.

With the projected peak enrollment for the Midland Independent School District, which is usually hit in October, set at 16,091, and the enrollment figure as of Wednesday already at 16,208, Dr. James Mailey, MISD superintendent, told the audience that the district is going through two trends.

A SHARP INCREASE in the elementary schools and a more gradual declining process in the secondary schools is, according to Parker

Chicano English seeking recognition

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Some linguists believe a dialect spoken by some Mexican-Americans should be considered a separate variation of English, much as Black English has been accepted in the past couple of years.

"We're trying to do something similar to what has been going on in Black English which has been recognized as a separate variety of English," said Gustavo Gonzalez of the University of California at Santa Barbara.

About 40 linguists, educators and speech specialists from across the country are attending a three-day research conference at the University of Texas at El Paso, the first such conference to deal exclusively with Chicano English. The conference ends Saturday.

"The major thing we're trying to accomplish is to describe just what Chicano English is," Gonzalez said. "We're trying to see just what is the difference between Chicano English and standard English."

The researchers say determining that Chicano English is a legitimate variation of English could spell differences in bilingual education approaches and in the way the Mexican-American community looks at itself.

Jacob Ornstein-Galicia, a UTEP professor emeritus who organized the conference, said some Mexican-Americans are discriminated against because of the way they speak Chicano English.

"If I go in and ask for a job speaking Chicano English, then the man who's doing the hiring may say, 'He's got a bad accent. People won't be able to understand him.' And he won't hire me whether my accent is incomprehensible or not," Ornstein-Galicia said.

"We need to study the dialects and find out what their meaninng is in our culture," said Ornstein-Galicia, who added he planned to publish the findings of the meeting to help spread interest in Chicano English.

Gonzalez said the forms taken by Chicano English usually depends the person's level of fluency in English.

He said the dialect can include plugging Spanish words into otherwise English sentences, dropping words,s misusing standard English verb forms, using different intonations and forming "Spanglish" words that combine Spanish and English.

"It depends on how fine the analysis is," said Gonzalez. "It may show in ways that are almost imperceptible to the lay person, but would be perceptible to a linguist or speech specialist."

Gonzalez said for example, a Mexican-American might say, "He don't want it to be like that," stressing the word don't which they pronounce as doan.

He said Chicano English also often substitutes Spanish ords such as Bato for guy, comal for tortilla pan and que paso or que tal for what's happening.

Gonzalez said recognition of Chicano English could help Mexican-Americans be more comfortable with their ethnicity.

"It will be a question of self-identity," he said. "I'm not so sure we have gotten over the stigma that our dialect of Spanish is OK. Now, if we can do the same with Chicano English - show that it's acceptable - then we will be getting somewhere."

Ornstein-Galicia said a better understanding of Chicano English eventually may lead to a better understanding of the Mexican-American community and prejudices some Mexican-Americans face.

"The last stronghold of one of the strongest prejudices in the world is against accents," he said. "A person may tell you, 'Why, I'm not prejudiced against anybody or any group.' But when it comes to standard English, they are prejudiced."

Sunday Through Tuesday

West Texas: Fair and mild Thursday and Friday except widely scattered thunder storms southwest becoming partly cloudy and a little warmer with scattered showers and thunderstorms most sections Saturday. Highs Thursday lower 80s north to mid 90s south warming to mid 80s north to upper 90s southwest Saturday. Lows ranging in the 50s north to the 60s south through Saturday.

Texas area forecast

West Texas: Fair and mild Thursday and Friday except widely scattered thunder storms southwest becoming partly cloudy and a little warmer with scattered showers and thunderstorms most sections Saturday. Highs Thursday lower 80s north to mid 90s south warming to mid 80s north to upper 90s southwest Saturday. Lows ranging in the 50s north to the 60s south through Saturday.

North Texas: Clear to partly cloudy and warm through Saturday. Widely scattered thunderstorms northwest Saturday. Highs 85 to 95. Lows 65 to 75.

Area can expect mild temperatures

Mild temperatures are expected to continue greeting residents of the Permian Basin for a few days, and additional rainfall is a possibility Saturday.

Afternoon highs are expected to reach the upper 80s under partly cloudy conditions that allow for a 20 per cent chance of rain Saturday, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. The month's precipitation total remains at 0.82 inch and the 1981 total at 11.16 inches.

The high Thursday reached 91 degrees, considerably below the record century mark set in 1964, while the low of 68 failed to challenge the alltime low for the date of 50 degrees set in 1935.

Winds are expected to be 5-10 miles per hour and southerly tonight, shifting to north and northeast Saturday.

Diamond earrings and ring stolen

In theft complaints to police during the past 24 hours, Katherine Hightower of 4406 Princeton Ave. told officers diamond earrings and a diamond ring worth a total of $2,500 were taken from her residence sometime in the past week.

Four tires and wheels valued at $1,100 were said to have been stolen from the Tall City Welding Co. at Florida and Marshall Streets. And Joe Carrasco of 4511 Anetta reported the theft of a doberman pinscher worth $400.

Crew abandons burning Japanese ship

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Fire raged through the hold of a 570-foot Japanese freighter hauling automobiles today, forcing 15 of the 22 crewmen to abandon their ship, the U.S. Coast Guard said.

The research ship Cayuse was nearby this morning to pick up crewmen from the listing freighter Blue Hawk, which caught fire about 700 miles southwest of San Francisco.

A C-130 Coast Guard airplane was circling overhead, according to Petty Officer Jim Edwards.

Other merchant vessels were on their way and the Coast Guard Cutter Morgenthau left San Francisco this morning for a 28-hour voyage to the scene, Edwards said.

There are no reports of injuries.

Edwards said the 13,667 ton ship, carrying 538 automobiles, was listing about 10 degrees as seven crewmen remained on board to fight the fire. He did not know if it was in danger of sinking.

"Personally, it sounds to me like they're just trying to salvage it," Edwards said.

"Apparently, it's getting pretty bad. They've abandoned the radio room because it was getting too hot."

Edwards said the crew is using a portable radio to coordinate rescue efforts. Ship personnel said they did not know how the blaze started.

The fire was first reported at 6 a.m. Thursday, but Blue Hawk officers declined an offer for help at that time, according to Edwards.

As the ship's supply of fire fighting equipment and oxygen tanks ran low, the fire grew, Edwards said. The ship's officers asked the Coast Guard to help at 9 p.m. Thursday.

The C-130 aircraft was dispatched to oversee the firefight and to drop emergency supplies, if needed. Edwards said the ship is out of helicopter range.

Traffic controllers may be prosecuted

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department says it is determined to prosecute fired air traffic controllers charged with violating a federal no-strike law, leaving the possibility that some could serve up to a year in jail on a felony conviction.

Lawyers for the controllers union said at least 80 controllers, many of them local union leaders, still faced criminal indictments for violating a law that prohibits federal employees from striking. The maximum penalty on the felony is a $1,000 fine and one year and a day in jail.

Lowell Jensen, head of the Justice Department's criminal division, told union attorneys this week that the government "intends to proceed with all criminal cases" stemming from violation of the no-strike law.

Justice spokesman Art Brill confirmed Jensen's remarks and said Thursday that his views reflect the department's policy since the strike began Aug. 3. The latest indictments were returned Wednesday in Alexandria, Va., against three controllers.

Kenneth Conklin, an attorney for the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization, accused the administration of being "vindictive" in its pursuit of the felony convictions.

"These are people who for the most part are Vietnam veterans and many who hold the Bronze Star," Conklin snapped in a telephone interview.

The question of whether to pursue such convictions also has divided the Reagan administration. Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis, who has spearheaded the government's offensive against the controllers, opposes sending any of them to jail, but acknowledges that the final decision on whether to prosecute is up to the Justice Department.

About 65 to 70 other controllers still face criminal contempt charges for violating various court orders issued in the first days of the strike, union lawyers said.

Some of those controllers also could go to jail. In New Orleans, six local union leaders are awaiting sentencing after being found in criminal contempt. U.S. District Judge George Arceneaux says only that he will impose no sentence longer than six months.

Five controllers in Tulsa, Okla., have been sentenced to 30 days in jail for criminal contempt, but the conviction is under appeal. No controllers are in jail now. Those under indictment have been freed on bond, Conklin said.

Originally 102 separate courts issued temporary restraining orders prohibiting a strike, the union says. The orders were largely ignored and many of them expired and were not renewed when President Reagan declared the controllers permanently fired Aug. 5.

More than five weeks after Reagan fired the nearly 12,000 striking controllers, the legal battles have shown little sign of subsiding:

—PATCO lawyers are fighting court orders in New York City and Washington that leaves the union and its leaders liable for more than $5 million in fines for violating court orders against a strike.

—A federal judicial panel will hear arguments Sept. 24 in Concord, N.H., on a union request that the 69 remaining civil cases in dozens of courts be consolidated into one.

—The three-member Federal Labor Relations Authority will hear arguments Sept. 16 on a government request that PATCO be stripped of its right to represent the controllers. The union has vowed to fight the decertification battle to the U.S. Supreme Court — if necessary.

—The government faces a long legal battle in its firing of the strikers. Thousands of controllers already have formally challenged the dismissals and union lawyers acknowledge many of the cases will end up in the courts.

Meanwhile, there is little evidence that large numbers of controllers are trying to get their jobs back. And only a handful of those who have tried have been successful.

Midland's schools fill citizen's needs

Humes, president of the MISD board of trustees, due to the influx of new families in Midland tending to have more elementary-age children than secondary-age ones.

With two new elementary schools already in the process of planning due to last spring's bond issue, Humes said, "I have a feeling that before they open, we will have another bond issue for one, maybe two, more elementary schools.

Mailey stressed the importance of a sharply strengthened relationship between the students, teachers and parents. He said that the average daily attendance is terrible. According to him, the average of students in class last year was 91 percent.

Mailey explained there should be at least an average of 95 percent and that parents should check up on their children to make sure they are attending regularly.

He also said attendance is important because the district intends to promote students on the basis of effort and achievement.

"TO BE SUCCESSFUL in our schools, a student has got to be there and has got to work," he said.

Mailey said that pupil discipline is an area that must be continuously improved. The administration is going to work hard on the prevention of drug and alcohol abuse by the students, he noted, saying they also will deal with criminal authorities in cases of students bringing alcohol or drugs to the campuses.

Dr. Joe Baressi, MISD deputy superintendent, explained different programs, such as the Gifted and Talented and honors programs, available for kindergarten through high school students.

Starting with the cluster coordinators in the elementary schools and going through the accelerated content classes in junior high and freshman schools and the early entrance program to Midland College for high school seniors, Baressi explained the progress of programs designed for those students with superior academic ability.

Kay Sowders, president of the Midland PTA, stressed the importance of the administration, school board and parents working together to further improve education in the Midland schools.

She said there were more than 7,200 PTA members in Midland last year, and the state organization is responsible for the improvement of many programs used in the Midland district.

Dr. James Mailey, superintendent of the MISD addresses Thursday night's Midland Awareness seminar at The First National Bank. Mailey stressed the importance of the relationship between students, teachers and parents.

THE STATE PTA was helpful in getting legislation passed that increased teacher salaries and raised state funds for the Gifted and Talented program. Another two bills which are expected to improve school attendance raises the legal drinking age from 18 to 19 and strengthens anti-drug laws.

Mrs. Sowders said it is important for parents to support teachers in their disciplinary actions and, at the same time, for teachers not to be inhibited by parental involvement.

She feels that, due to the overcrowding in the elementary schools, the teacher to student ratio will decrease but that parental involvement will maintain the link.

Nell Furgeson, chairman for the Volunteers in Public Schools program, agreed that parental involvement not only helps parents understand the different programs available for their children, but also can relieve tasks done by the teachers to free them for working more closely with students.

She cited volunteers in tasks such as Partners in Reading, storytelling, library assistance and classroom supervision as helping teachers, thus giving them more time to work with students on an individual basis.

And the benefits for volunteers are many. "A smile from a child will last a long, long time," she said.

Dr. Jess Parrish, president of Midland College discussed the importance of Midland College and its programs to the community. He said that the college's role is not only for students who plan to transfer to a university after completing two years at MC, but also to provide a community service for Midland adults.

THE COMMUNITY college's ability to act and react to the needs of the community are a vital asset over a four-year college.

Dean Camil Dakel said the college can create courses for the needs of most individuals. "There's a saying that you can't have everything for everyone, but that's not exactly true in our community," he said. Midland citizens have a wealth of abilities and specialties that they can offer the community.

Wanda Phillips said that MC served about 1,000 students last year in the Adult Basic Education program and the English as a Second Language program.

According to her, there are 15,000 to 20,000 Midlanders who are high school dropouts. She reasoned that they have jobs due to the employment opportunities here, but that many of them are probably doing menial jobs and drawing minimum wage.

"There is an opportunity for a second chance," she said.

And that opportunity stretches from kindergarten students through adults in Midland.

Jackson gets life sentence in shooting of Dennis

ney R. Sandy Torres in defending Jackson, was uncharacteristically docile and meek in the punishment phase of the trial. He had been bullish in asking for acquittal or a lesser finding, such as negligence, but had lost his fervor after the jury returned the murder verdict.

"It's awfully difficult for a defense attorney at this stage," Garza had said. "Mr. Jackson is guilty," he told the jury, "because you say he is guilty, and I respect your verdict."

In a statement signed by Jackson on March 16, Jackson indicated that he had shot Dennis as the two quarreled at the counter in what reportedly turned out to be the climax of a series of conflicts between the grocer and Jackson.

In his "confession," Jackson said that Dennis had suspected him of shoplifting and attempted to frisk him; Jackson resented the search. Later, Jackson accused the grocer of shortchanging him by $3.

And, according to the confession, Dennis had told Jackson not to patronize his business if he didn't like the way the grocery store was being operated.

But Jackson returned to the grocery store a few days later to buy cigarettes and chewing gum. That was on the morning of the grocer's death.

On the witness stand in his own defense, Jackson calmly said that the shooting was accidental. He contended that he had walked into the store with his mother's pistol in his waistband only because his life allegedly had been threatened by a 31-year-old fellow Midlander, who had killed Jackson's brother in self-defense in a bar-room brawl in May 1980. The defendant said he was out to protect himself should the rumored threat be factual.

"Mr. Jackson may have been guilty of misjudgment in going (back) in that grocery store and in not heeding his (Dennis's) prior words of not going in his store," Garza said in trying to persuade the jury not to return a murder finding. He said that Jackson simply had "pulled it (the firearm) out for self-protection and then the gun went off."

"He did it in self protection," Garza said.

Martin, however, pooh-poohed the theory that Jackson had shot the grocer out of self-protection and that Dennis, according to the defendant, was reaching for something, possibly a club, after the grocer had told Dennis to leave the store.

"What does a reasonable person do when somebody asks him to get out of the store?" Martin asked rhetorically.

"He gets the hell out of the store," he replied.

The district attorney speculated that Jackson had re-entered Dennis's store on the morning of March 12 "to get even or to rob him or both. I don't know...He may have just been mean."

LSS board meets today, Saturday

The Board of Directors for Lutheran Social Service of Texas meets at 1 p.m. today and at 9 a.m. Saturday at Grace Lutheran Church, 3000 E. Golf Course Road.

In addition to the 20 members from cities throughout the state, the meeting will include Bob Greene, president of the LSS administrative offices in Austin, and the bishops of each of three major Lutheran Church bodies in Texas. They are the Rev. August Wenzel, the American Lutheran Church; the Rev. Philip Wahlberg, the Lutheran Church in America; and the Rev. Glenn O'Shoney, the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod.

Agency business expected to be conducted during the two sessions includes a review of the 1982 work plan, plus programs and budget.

The local area office at 2705-A W. Michigan Ave., which covers the 17-county area of the Permian Basin, provides services that include adoption, foster care, unplanned pregnancy counseling and mutual service homes for pregnant women.

The LSS board meets quarterly throughout the year in geographic areas in Texas where agency services are located. Membership on the board is composed of elected persons for a two-year term.

A highlight of the two-day meeting will be an evening dinner today held at Midland Lutheran Church, 2705 Michigan Ave. coordinated and sponsored by the local office of the LSS, the meal will be served by the American Lutheran Church Women of Midland Lutheran Church.

Following dinner, Lori Haaland will lead a group singing and the Handbell Choir of Midland Lutheran will present a musical program including "Parade of the Wooden Soldiers," "When Morning Gilds the Skies" and "Carillon."

Also presented on the program will be a panel of birth mothers who have relinquished babies to the agency for adoption. This panel will be co-led by Lael Cordes, director fo the Permian Basin office, and Margaret Stewart of the West Texas office. Gary Dewey, director of two Adult Day Activity Centers in El Paso, will close the presentation with a slide show.

Big Spring boy dies in house fire

BIG SPRING — Paul Spears, 13, of Big Spring was killed in a northside house fire here early today.

Big Spring Fire Department received the call at 1:58 a.m., and when units arrived the structure was engulfed in flames, said Fire Chief Jim Ryals.

The boy was one of several persons sleeping in the house when the fire erupted. Ryals theorized the blaze may have been the result of a gas stove which "blew out."

While Ryals indicated that "at this time it's not a suspicious fire," arson investigators were at the scene early today.

The structure was totaled in the blaze.

Defensive driving vital in small cars

By SUE ALFORD
Traffic Safety Planning
Midland College

The U.S. Department of Transportaton estimates that by 1986 more than half the cars in use will be small cars. And yes, it will probably happen in thriving communities like Midland as well as in less affluent areas.

So, with the coming shift to small cars, it is essential that defensive driving skills be exercised by all in the traffic mix but especially by drivers of small cars...after all, we are the ones who are going to get hurt the worst in an accident with a large car.

The areas of special concern to small car drivers will be listed, with the key being the reader remember we're talking about shorter, narrower and lighter cars.

Seat belts: The small car's hard, sharp interior is closer to passengers than in a standard sized car: thus, it is essential we use lap and shoulder belts.

Power: Remember the small car - with the exception of designed sports cars - have less power than the large car. That situation requires small-car drivers to allow more room to merge into traffic, avoid hazards, etc.

Visibility: This covers two areas, seeing and being seen in the tarffic mix. The driver's vision in a small car is lower and at a different angle - and that complicates seeing around larger vehicles to pass, entering a road, changing lanes or even just seeing traffic signs and signals. Be aware of this and compensate by extra space and alertness.

Then, when we're sure we can see, make sure we can be seen. Again, extra space, use of headlights, a tap on the horn and a bright paint job will help us be seen. But, most importantly, establishing eye contact with the other driver will assure we've been seen.

Braking and tires: These handling features in a small car often feel "differnet" from a large car. Be aware of your car's abilities. Of particular concern is braking on front-wheel drive - again a different feel.

Road and highway design: The roads, as they are now designed were geared for larger vehicles and drivers at a higher eye level. Thus we small-car drivers must exercise more caution on the road...to medians, road signs and signals, curves and other structures. The median can be especially troublesome in that instead of redirecting a small vehicle it can roll it.

Wind: Wind, whether natural or large-vwhicle generated, can cause a swaying effect in small vehicles. In either event, maintain a steady grip on the wheel and allow plenty of rom around other vehicles.

Then, of course, there are many other common sense issues. The two-second rule for following distances applies to small cars; signaling intensions is imperative; a seat belt or proper restraint for everyone is imperartive and the driver being positioned comfortably should not be sacrificed for backseat passenger comfort.

Bloch challenged death sentence

AP Laserphoto

Richard Bloch, co-founder of H&R Block tax preparation service, walks with one of his three daughters, Nancy Jacob. After surviving lung cancer, Bloch started The Cancer Hotline, a unique cancer information service.

By ROBERT MACY
Associated Press Writer

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Annette Bloch took a stick and scrawled the promise in the wet sand of a Florida beach, a vow that challenged the death sentence the family doctor in Kansas City had imposed on her husband.

"We Shall Return."

Then, on a gray weekend in 1978, she and husband Richard Bloch, co-founder of the H&R Block chain of 8,000 income tax service offices, went to Houston to learn his fate.

"Dick, you are a very sick boy," a doctor at the M.D. Anderson Cancer Clinic told Bloch. "We are going to make you a lot sicker, but we are going to cure you. We are going to cure you so that you can work for cancer."

It was the first ray of hope for the Blochs since his family physician told him months earlier that he had lung cancer.

"It is malignant," the doctor told him. "It is inoperable. If I were you, I would get my estate in order."

Bloch, 52 at the time, had everything a man could desire. He was semiretired from the business he and brother Henry had built from a dream. He had a loving wife, three daughters, four grandchildren and a beautiful home. He traveled to exotic destinations for several months each year.

A death sentence was the last thing on his mind.

"I was devastated," he said, recalling the stinging pronouncement at a Kansas City hospital. "I was full of questions, but I did not know what to ask or whom to ask.

"My mind was so blown that I could not recall that I had ever known anyone who had cancer. I had momentarily forgotten that my uncle had died from it less than eight years before and we had watched my wife's sister painfully pass away from it."

Bloch asked the doctor if there were any treatment. He was told there was, but it would only make him sicker and could not save his life. He says if he had accepted the doctor's verdict, he would be a dead man, "no doubt about it."

Today Bloch's lung cancer is in total remission and doctors say he faces no greater threat from the disease than does the average person.

Bloch's frantic search for answers and the promise of the Houston doctors prompted him to form The Cancer Hot Line, a unique information service he's expanding nationwide.

In the year since its inception, the hotline has spread to Memphis, Tenn., and Little Rock, Ark., with programs planned soon in Fort Worth and Gainesville, Fla.

The Cancer Hot Line is staffed by volunteers who have had cancer or had experiences with the disease they can share with callers. Bloch himself works half-days, fielding questions from around the country.

Deeply tanned, blue eyes dancing, Bloch talks excitedly about the hotline and a companion Cancer Treatment Panel. He figures there are three keys to beating cancer:

-Prompt treatment. "Don't put it off. Cancer is never as treatable as it is today."

-Proper treatment. "Cancer grows geometrically — one cancer cell divides into two, two into four, etc. Most cancers can be cured if they're treated when discovered. But if you're having a general doctor try different things on you while the cancer grows, you're in bad shape."

-Thorough treatment. "A doctor often says 'I cut it all out,' but there's no way a doctor can cut it all out because he can't see everything in your body. One million cancer cells would be the size of a pin head. How can they find one cell in, say, your wrist?"

Above all, Bloch says, get a second opinion. "Any doctor treating a cancer patient without a second opinion is not practicing medicine, but trying to play God," Bloch said.

Bloch said the Kansas City hot line handled 265 calls in August. Some callers seek advice, some an emotional crutch. Others are family members calling to see how to cope with the problem.

The other part of Bloch's program is the Cancer Treatment Panel — medical experts who meet weekly with as many as four cancer patients and their families to review their records and sometimes suggest alternative treatment. The experts are an oncologist, a surgeon, a radiologist, a pathologist and a psychiatrist or psychologist, all of whom volunteer their time.

Burros disappearing from Brazil

PETROLINA, Brazil (AP) — The little burros known for centuries as the stubborn but lovable beasts of burden that are the poor farmer's best friend are disappearing from Brazil at an alarming rate, according to authorities.

Officials say the animals are being sold to slaughter as dog food, canned meat and other products in the United States, Japan and Western Europe.

The Agriculture Ministry in Brasilia has ordered a halt to the indiscriminate slaughter of female donkeys and horses, as well as their mule offspring unless they have proven illnesses or physical defects. It said the five-year program is intended to "preserve an endangered species."

Ministry press spokesman Antonio Caraballo Barrera said the nation's equine population has decreased in 10 years from 17 million to 7 million head. The animals must be protected, Caraballo said, "because they are of fundamental importance, especially in the northeast, where they offer a source of milk for children and ... serve as long distance transport, withstanding work with few demands, and little need for food and water."

Poland's 'Labor Year'

While the United States was celebrating Labor Day, Poland was celebrating what historians may eventually describe as its "Labor Year."

The past 12 months has been a time in which the Polish labor union, Solidarity, rose up with rebel yells against its communist overlords. A revolution which seemed to have minimal chances of success at first ended up by winning a high degree of independence for millions of laborers and farmers.

The significance of this "Labor Year" was underscored in the past few days by a meeting in Gdansk. The city became the site of the first independent national labor convention ever held anywhere in territory reigned over by the Soviet Union.

The chief speaker at this historic convention was Solidarity's courageous leader, Lech Walesa. His keynote was simple, and challenging:

"Solidarity will not allow itself to be split and destroyed."

The most dangerous of the challenges is the Soviet Union's threat of retaliation. Even as Mr. Walesa was addressing Solidarity's 892 delegates, Moscow announced that 100,000 Russian troops were engaging in maneuvers near Poland's borders.

Mr. Walesa obviously took note of the menacing maneuvering by warning his fellow freedom fighters: ". . . the struggle has just begun, and it will be difficult."

Solidarity was born of difficulty, and has lived with it. It has been intimately acquainted with struggles against odds for the past year.

The Walesa address was a message the Kremlin cannot ignore, and which the free world should cheer:

"Solidarity is and will remain, no matter if anybody likes it or not. Together we will fashion the Poland we have dreamed of . . . There is no turning back from the road we opened in August (1980)."

Poland's "Labor Year" stands as a sturdy milestone in the history of mankind's yearning to be free.

A patient militant

To refer to a civil rights leader as a "quiet militant" seems contradictory.

Militancy suggests impatience. Quietness implies patience. Roy Wilkins described himself as a quiet militant, and the term fit him perfectly during his many years as director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

There were some Americans who thought Mr. Wilkins was too militant. He was never satisfied. No sooner would the NAACP win a case in court, or get an anti-discrimination bill through Congress, than Mr. Wilkins was back demanding more.

There were others who thought he was not militant enough, especially during the strident civil rights battles of the 1960s, when he spoke out against the concept of "black power," seeing it as a step away from the principle of nonviolence which the NAACP defended.

With his quiet militancy Mr. Wilkins wore down the resistance of a white-dominated society which long had refused to recognize the injustice of its inherited customs and institutions of racial segregation and discrimination. Mr. Wilkins was wise enough to realize that such a society could not be changed overnight, but also perceptive enough to see that without the unremitting pressure of organizations like the NAACP it would not change at all.

Roy Wilkins was born in 1901 into the world of Jim Crow, separate schools and hiring windows where blacks need not apply. He left behind a far different America. His epitaph should speak not only of what he accomplished for the advancement of "colored people." Our entire society is better for having opened the doors of equal opportunity to the persistent knocking of Mr. Wilkins and the patient militants of the NAACP.

TODAY IN HISTORY

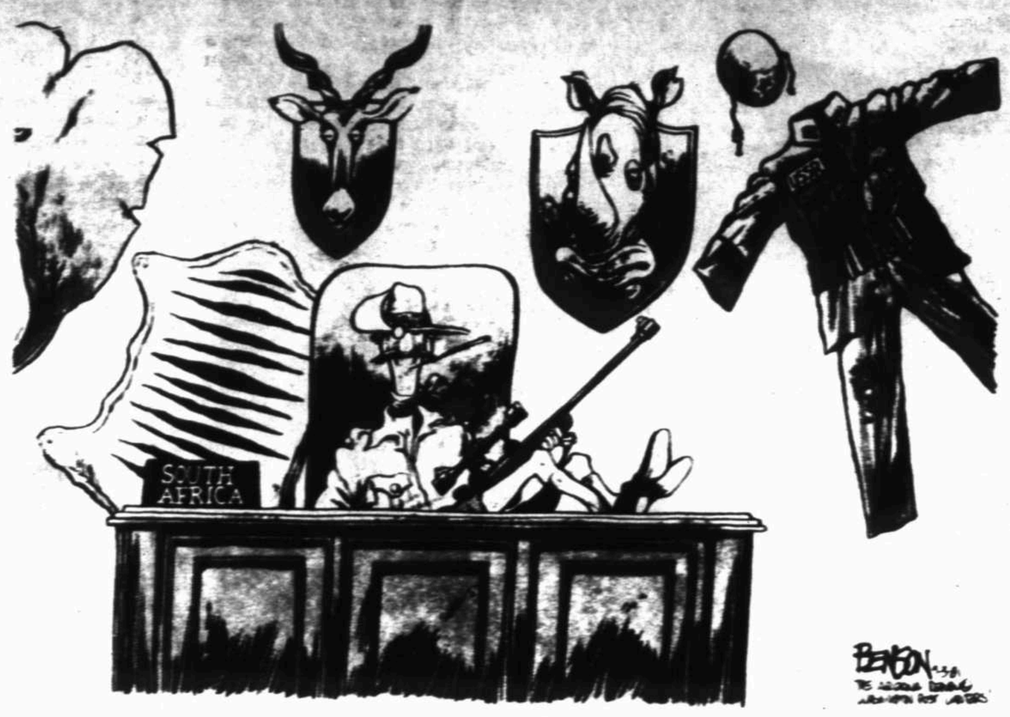
Today is Friday, Sept. 11, the 254th day of 1981. There are 111 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Sept. 11, 1973, Chile's President, Salvador Allende Gossens, was deposed in a military coup. The new leaders said Allende committed suicide rather than surrender.

On this date:

In 1830, the Republic of Ecuador was established and granted a constitution under which it was to be part of the Confederation of Colombia.



WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Justice 'stage-managed' Williams hearing

WASHINGTON — The Justice Department's pursuit of Sen. Harrison Williams, D-N.J., led the prosecutors to commit a long list of improprieties. Not the least among them was the stage-managing of the Senate investigation into his ethics.

Jack Anderson

In effect, they tried him twice on the same dubious evidence. The Senate should have made its own independent determination of Williams' guilt in the ABSCAM case. The presence of the ubiquitous prosecutors in the Senate wings raises a troubling question: How far should the executive branch be allowed to go in its efforts to drive a United States senator out of office?

Williams wanted the Senate Ethics Committee to conduct a full investigation, not just rely on the government's tainted evidence. Instead, Justice Department officials were allowed to guide the committee from backstage. They consulted with staff investigators and briefed the senators in closed sessions.

Long before Williams was found guilty, courtroom observers spotted a frequent visitor huddling with ABSCAM prosecutor Thomas Puccio during the trial. The mysterious stranger was identified by witnesses as the Ethics Committee's counsel, Donald Sanders. This hardly reflects an independent investigation by the legislative branch.

The senator requested extra time to prepare his case and present it at a public hearing. He was turned down. Yet the committee granted the Justice Department months to prepare its case against Williams — which was presented to the senators behind closed doors.

This Star Chamber presentation — Williams was not allowed to be on hand to confront his accusers — did not persuade all the members that Williams was guilty of wrongdoing. Several were convinced the Justice Department didn't have a case against him.

In fact, a source close to the committee told my associate Indy Badhwar that at one of the closed sessions a Justice Department official conceded that the facts did not match the law. The committee should have subpoenaed the prosecution records immediately. Instead, then-chairman Howell Heflin, D-Ala., gave the department an additional three months to make a case against Williams.

In earlier columns, I have cited strong evidence of government misconduct in Williams' prosecution. Here are just a few of the improprieties that I can document:

— Williams had an unblemished record when the Justice Department set out to get him. By the FBI's own admission, the agents began their investigation "with a clean slate."

— Despite a total absence of any reason to suspect Williams, the FBI unleashed a convicted con man, Mel Weinberg, to lure the senator into the ABSCAM trap. The FBI knew Weinberg was a liar, cheat and criminal. Yet he was given virtually a free hand to weave a web of lies in order to entrap a U.S. senator.

— This closely coincided with word to Williams that he could get in trouble if he supported Sen. Ted Kennedy, D-Mass., in the crucial New Jersey primary. Williams told me the warning was carefully worded and would have to be described more as a hint than a threat. Yet it's no secret that then-President Jimmy Carter, who controlled the Justice Department, felt menaced by Kennedy.

— Weinberg kept raising the bait in the ABSCAM trap until it reached a staggering $100 million. As the agent of a phony Arab sheik, Weinberg promised Williams a $100 million loan to develop a titanium mine that belonged to two friends. Even chief FBI agent John Good acknowledged the sum "was almost an irresistible inducement for any normal human being."

— In any event, it is not illegal for a senator to negotiate a business loan from a wealthy Arab. Williams and his friends were seeking financing for a legitimate business venture.

— The senator indicated he might acquire an interest in the mine. But he made it clear that he planned to put the stock in his own name and disclose his interest in the mine. Such open ownership would have made it impossible for him to seek government contracts for the mine.

— Thus the FBI agents clearly were failing in their effort to induce Williams to engage in criminal activity. So they instructed Weinberg to encourage the senator to solicit government contracts. The suggestion that he commit a crime positively originated with the government, with high-level approval.

— Williams never committed the crime that the FBI minions urged upon him. But he allowed Weinberg to persuade him — in return for the dangled $100 million loan — to impress upon the fake sheik that once the mine was working, that would "guarantee" getting government contracts. Weinberg carefully coached the senator what to say.

— Thus Weinberg led the senator the incriminating statements and choreographed his performance before the hidden FBI cameras. The unsuspecting Williams was assured that he could be loose with his statements because, as Weinberg put it, "it's all talk, all bullshit."

— The senator still held back; he never offered to seek government contracts. But he either kept his mouth shut or indicated agreeability when others suggested he'd go after government contracts. He went along with this because he had been told it was "meaningless."

— The prosecutors admitted in their confidential papers that they had no case against Williams. So they tried to trap him into taking a cash bribe, but the senator turned it down with an emphatic "No, no, no, no."

Nevertheless, he was subsequently tried on the very charges the prosecutors had decided would not stand up.

Intellectuals victims of own naivete

Intellectuals sometimes serve a useful function. I have to say that since by definition I am one. An intellectual is anybody who makes a living peddling his thoughts (and you thought it meant someone who was smart). Still, a lot of intellectuals are as useless as milk spigots on a boar hog.

Charley Reese

For one thing, a lot of intellectuals don't know anything about life or human nature. They have led sheltered lives. The world they think exists doesn't exist. Consequently, a great deal of their theories and recommendations are cockeyed. They are navigating with a broken compass.

B.F. Skinner spent nearly a quarter of a million bucks in grant money to discover that you can influence behavior by rewarding good behavior and punishing bad. Any old aborigine nanny could have told him that for nothing.

We might cure intellectual naivete by requiring all candidates for graduate degrees in the social sciences to spend a year as a policeman, a morgue attendant, or an emergency room orderly. Aspiring economists should be forced to spend a year as a common laborer. That way they might at least discover that the entire globe is not inhabited by middle and upper class urban Americans.

But intellectuals are also as prone as anyone else to allowing their selfish interests to color their thinking. That's why when you ask professional educators to study the problem of public education they almost always conclude that the answer is more pay and less work for professional educators.

I got a good chuckle recently when a university social scientist "studied" the problem of local jails and concluded that jailers need a college education. You could just see the guy visualizing a new department of corrections of which he would be the head. If we listen to academics, all policemen and jailers will have to earn Ph.D.'s before they can collar a drunk or turn a key.

One of the most lucrative rackets intellectuals have going is the grants game. Billions of dollars are spent on useless studies by people who are professional studiers.

A couple of academics once got a $40,000 grant to determine why people own handguns. Now any fool can sit under a tree for two minutes and arrive at that answer. People own handguns for: (1) use as tools; (2) for protection; (3) for sports or recreation; or (4) for the pleasure and investment of collecting them. Sure enough, $40,000 later, our academic wizards discovered this. If you can think of any useful public purpose this expenditure served, I would like to know it.

Blame for a great portion of bad government must rest with the intellectuals. They have managed to make a mess out of our domestic and foreign policies by giving bum advice to politicians so dumb they take it. Where do you think ridiculous standards and regulations originate? In academia, the closest thing to Alice in Wonderland you are going to find this side of the rabbit hole.

One solution might be to shut down every other university and to raise the academic standards in the remaining ones so high, for both faculty and students, that we could choke off the flow of mediocrity. All you would have to do is require fluency in more than one language and you would eliminate 80 percent of the students, faculty and administrators.

It's one thing to open the doors of higher education to the poor and quite another to open them to the stupid. Today it's difficult to tell a college graduate from a non-graduate or a faculty member from an aluminum siding salesman. In our misguided zeal, we have converted most institutions of higher learning to nothing more than vocational schools for white collar workers.

The sad part is that this present system doesn't nurture that small percentage of really bright minds we so desperately need for leadership in every field.

INSIDE REPORT:

White House vacation days travel costs exceeded budget

WASHINGTON — Senior officials in the administration grumble that coast-to-coast commuting during President Reagan's August vacation constituted blatantly wasteful government spending, reflecting a general lack of interest in setting an example at top levels of the Reagan team.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

The worst case came when Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and budget director David Stockman traveled west in an Air Force courier jet for a meeting on defense spending. Weinberger, a Californian, went to his San Francisco home after the meetings in Southern California. While the plane stayed in California to await Weinberger's return, another Air Force jet was deadheaded west to pick up Stockman and return him.

Cost of a courier roundtrip: $15,000 in fuel alone. To some insiders, the profligate expenditure on such flights shows a mindset in the White House oblivious to personal cost-cutting.

NO MERCY FROM REAGAN

President Reagan's resistance to advice that he rehire some striking air traffic controllers is being buttressed by the 6,000 controllers who refused to walk off the job.

Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis, in personal checks with more than 200 key air traffic control stations around the country, was told with brutal candor by controllers who did not walk off the job: There will be "real trouble" if any strikers are rehired. Those who stayed will refuse to work beside the erstwhile strikers.

The only exception to that ban are some 200 strikers who wrote letters to the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) soon after the strike began saying that they had been coerced or harassed by the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization (PATCO) into walking off the job. Their cases are being examined, and many will be rehired.

WHEELER-DEALER'S RETURN

Dwayne O. Andreas, a famed wheeler-dealer from bygone days, reappeared unexpectedly to confront budget director David Stockman at a closed-door political reception in Springfield, Ill., with a series of proposals to help gasohol production by his Archer Daniel Midland grain trading firm.

Andreas has been out of the limelight since getting in hot water over political contributions to both Hubert H. Humphrey and Richard M. Nixon. But he came down from his home in Minneapolis and paid $500 to attend a Sept. 1 political fund-raiser for a gasohol enthusiast, Republican Rep. Paul Findley of Illinois, with Stockman as the star attraction. Unlike most other events on Stockman's tour, the Springfield reception was closed to the press.

Andreas, an intense and articulate political veteran, pleaded for restrictions on competing ethanol and sugar imports. But Stockman said no, arguing that the Reagan economic program was based on general recovery rather than "parochial" help for individual industries.

REAGAN'S COATTAIL TEST

Ronald Reagan will test his presidential coattails for the first time in two fund-raising events in Richmond Sept. 24 for State Attorney General Marshall Coleman, the Republican nominee for governor against Democratic lieutenant governor Chuck Robb.

Reagan has hinted at a second appearance for Coleman later in the campaign before the Nov. 3 election if needed. He is, therefore, putting his prestige squarely on the line in a close race.

The Richmond engagement will feature Reagan at a $100-a-head "rally" for 1,200 of the party faithful, followed by a cozy dinner party for 100 couples that evening — at a high-rise $2,500 per couple. If Reagan's further help is needed, it might be linked to his scheduled appearance at the Yorktown, Va., bicentennial Oct. 24 to celebrate the British surrender in the Revolutionary War.

TEDDY'S DOG DAYS

Blue-collar Democrats have lost their love of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, at least for now, but find former vice president Walter F. Mondale still to their liking.

The decline of Kennedy showed up starkly in our interviews in blue-collar New Jersey suburbs of Philadelphia last week. Kennedy seems sure of re-election next year in Massachusetts, but our interviews point to trouble on the national front if he again should seek the Democratic presidential nomination.

Asked the routine question whether they have a "favorable" or "unfavorable" opinion of Kennedy, more than half of the voters who voted the Democratic ticket in 1980 said unfavorable. In contrast, Mondale was given a 3-to-1 favorable rating.

MARK RUSSELL SAYS

We have so much admiration for the Polish Solidarity workers and yet our fired air traffic controllers are treated as non-persons. In Warsaw, they must be wearing yellow ribbons for PATCO.

●

If this situation had occurred a year ago, the controllers would be working today. Carter would have fired them, then when Reagan took over, he would have given the controllers and their wives a free weekend at West Point.

●

Now, the controllers seem to have such blind faith in their cause, PATCO is becoming more of a cult than a union.

●

You have to wonder at the religious zeal of these followers of union chief Robert Poli as he dishes out the ideological Kool-Aid.

Witnesses support Cooke's immunity claim

By ROBERT B. CULLEN
Associated Press Writer

ANDREWS AIR FORCE BASE, Md. (AP) — Witness after witness is supporting Air Force 2nd Lt. Christopher Cooke's claim that he was guaranteed immunity from prosecution on espionage charges — even if he initially lied about his contacts with the Soviet embassy.

In the third day of Cooke's court-martial Thursday, three more officers added corroborating testimony to support defense attorney F. Lee Bailey's charge that the Strategic Air Command reneged on its agreement.

Bailey has moved for immediate dismissal of the charges against Cooke — that he conveyed defense information to officials of the Soviet Union and did not report his contacts with them.

Cooke, former deputy commander of a Titan II nuclear missile launch crew, could be sentenced to more than 50 years at hard labor if convicted on all counts.

Officers with the Air Force Office of Special Investigations testified Thursday on the period from May 5, when Cooke was picked up by OSI agents, to May 22, when he completed a lie detector test.

Maj. William Snyder, at the time the OSI's legal counsel, said he conferred by telephone May 5 with Brig. Gen. Claude Teagarden, the staff judge advocate, or chief counsel, for the Strategic Air Command. In the Air Force legal system, SAC has the responsibility for deciding whether to prosecute or whether to grant immunity.

Snyder said Teagarden directed OSI to pick Cooke up and advise him of his right to counsel, but "if he requests an attorney, to press on" with the interrogation without providing one.

Snyder said he told Teagarden, "Sir, you can't have it both ways," meaning that the Air Force had two options:

—Interrogate Cooke without a lawyer, which might improve the chances of learning what he had told the Soviets but would jeopardize any future efforts to prosecute him.

—Advise him of his rights and let him have a lawyer, running the risk that the attorney would advise him to say nothing, but avoiding the risk that a future prosecution might be jeopardized by failure to observe Cooke's right to counsel.

Cooke was interrogated for four days without counsel. On May 7, he made a statement saying he visited the Soviet embassy to get information for an academic paper he was writing, but he refused to take a lie detector test to verify it.

Snyder said that on May 8, he conferred again by telephone with Teagarden. He said they discussed the terms of an immunity offer for Cooke to induce him to take the lie detector test.

He said Teagarden approved an offer that would give Cooke immunity if he took a lie detector test and the test showed he was telling all he knew about his contacts with the Soviets.

Snyder said he drafted an immunity agreement which was relayed to Cooke on May 9 by Lt. Col. Jerome Hoffman, the OSI agent conducting the interrogation.

Another OSI officer, Col. Charles Torpe, said he recalled the negotiations with Teagarden just as Snyder did. He said he had no recollection that Teagarden had stipulated that the lie detector test had to verify Cooke's May 7 statement in order for the immunity offer to be valid.

Teagarden, in pre-trial depositions, has maintained that he only meant the offer to apply if the lie detector test verified Cooke's May 7 statement.

Another OSI officer, lie detector test administrator Gerald W. Craig, said that on May 9 he was at Langley AFB, Va., where Cooke was being interrogated, and was in the room when Hoffman called Teagarden to doublecheck terms of the agreement.

Craig said it was also his understanding that the immunity agreement would apply no matter what Cooke told the investigators, as long as he was telling the truth.

He also said he heard Hoffman ask Teagarden whether "CINCSAC," meaning the SAC commander-in-chief, Gen. Richard Ellis, agreed with the immunity offer. Hoffman has previously testified that Teagarden told him it did.

The Air Force says only Ellis had the right to grant immunity, and Ellis has denied doing so.

Grieving father 'expected judge to be more harsh'

CHICAGO (AP) — "I expected the judge to be more harsh than that," a grieving father said after learning that the man convicted of killing his daughter could be out of prison in 11 years.

Wayne Birch, 24, was convicted three months ago of killing Venira Curtis, 22, in June 1980.

He pleaded insanity, but Cook County Circuit Judge Lawrence Genesen rejected that. However, at a capital punishment hearing, the judge decided against the death penalty, citing mitigating evidence that Birch was emotionally distressed.

On Tuesday, the judge sentenced Birch to 25 years in prison.

"Birch could be released in 11 years, if not sooner," prosecutor Paul Kelly said bitterly.

Recalling his daughter's death, Arthur Curtis said Wednesday that Birch cornered Venira on the front porch of the South Side home where she lived with her parents. Curtis heard shots outside the house and ran to the porch, where he saw his sobbing daughter on her knees, begging for her life. Birch stood over her, training a gun on her head.

Curtis said, "She looked up at me: 'Save me, Daddy, please save me! I've done nothing wrong!'

"I pleaded with him not to kill her. I said, 'Kill me and let her live.'

"Then he pulled the trigger. He took his time. He seemed to enjoy it."

Curtis, a 56-year-old semi-retired postal worker, is heartbroken over the death of Venira, one of his five children.

"I worked two jobs all my life so I could send my children to the Catholic schools," he said. "What did I do wrong? Why did this happen?"

Venira and Birch had been high school sweethearts, but their relationship crumbled in 1979 and she began seeing another man.

Officials agree to review facts before revamping Texas prisons

By LEE JONES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — U.S. Justice Department officials have agreed to review a statement of facts before proceeding with a court order calling for a complete revamping of the Texas prison system, state Attorney General Mark White said.

White met with the Justice Department's new civil rights chief Thursday and later said he hopes to see a federal turnaround in the Texas prisons case.

White and Pike Powers, one of the state's outside lawyers hired for the case, met privately with Brad Reynolds, head of the Justice Department's Civil Rights Division.

"I told them the court (U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice) had mischaracterized the facts in the case — believed all the prisoners and none of the guards. ... They said, 'Write it down for us, let us see what it is and we'll make a review of the situation, and if that is the case, it will have an impact on the decisions we make in the case,' " White said.

The Texas Attorney General said he would prepare some written materials about current prison conditions and present them at a later meeting.

The Justice Department, under the Carter administration, led the courtroom attack that resulted in the ruling that Texas must revamp its prisons at a cost of millions of dollars.

White said he wanted the Justice Department to understand that facts in the case had changed, largely as a result of appropriations made and bills passed by the 1981 Legislature.

The U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans is scheduled to hear Texas' appeal Dec. 18.

Meanwhile, the attorney for prisoners who won their case in federal district court expressed fear the Reagan administration's Justice Department would bargain away gains made in court.

William Turner of San Francisco, who represented prisoners, said in a telephone interview he feared the Justice Department might be contemplating concessions to settle the case short of a full appeal.

Turner said he informed Deputy Assistant Attorney General Jim Turner by telephone that the "case obviously cannot be settled without our participation on behalf of the plaintiffs."

He said he also told the Justice Department official that he hoped the "civil rights division would not for political reasons compromise the interests of the prisoners they so ardently sought to represent when they intervened in the case."

"I know I on behalf of the prisoners could not give up anything the prisoners won in court unless they received a substantial quid pro quo. I know the state hasn't offered me anything. ... I hope the Justice Department doesn't crumble as did the Nixon-Mitchell administration on desegregation in 1968," Turner said.

"This is redolent of that kind of caper," he added.

Turner said he "would not be surprised" if the Justice Department's discussions with White dealt with a recommendation by President Reagan's task force on violent crime that the federal government fund state prison construction.

Wayne B. Williams, charged with murder in the slayings of two of 28 black Atlanta boys, leaves Fulton County Jail in Atlanta Thursday for a hearing on motions in the upcoming trial.

FBI agent testifies Williams knew why he was stopped

ATLANTA (AP) — The man accused in two of a string of 28 slayings of young blacks knew, without being told, why he was stopped by police in the predawn hours of May 22, an FBI agent has testified.

"This is about them boys, isn't it?" agent Greg Gilliland quoted 23-year-old Wayne B. Williams as asking.

The agent said Thursday at a court hearing that officers had just stopped Williams' car on an interstate highway near a bridge crossing the Chattahoochee River west of Atlanta.

Gilliland said Williams asked him why he was being stopped. When the agent refused to answer, Williams mentioned the multiple slayings case.

Thursday's hearing was to consider a motion by Williams' attorneys that any statements he made to officers on that occasion be suppressed because authorities lacked probable cause to stop him.

But prosecutors told Superior Court Judge Clarence Cooper that no evidence was seized during the search of Williams' car, and defense attorneys cannot claim there was an unreasonable search or seizure.

The judge made no ruling on the matter.

Williams, a black free-lance photographer, is charged with murder in the slayings of Nathaniel Cater, 27, and Jimmy Ray Payne, 21, the 28th and 26th victims in the string of killings being investigated by a special police task force.

Two days after Williams was stopped on that bridge, Cater's body was found floating in the river several hundred yards downstream. Payne's body had been found in the river near the same spot in April. Five other victims in the series of slayings also had been found in area rivers.

William's attorney, Mary Welcome asked Officer Carl Holden, captain of the stakeout team, why he decided to order Williams stopped on the morning of May 22.

"Because there had been a loud splash, the car was seen on the bridge and it was three o'clock in the morning," Holden replied. "There had been a lot of people thrown off the bridge, or so we thought, or so we'd been told. In my mind, that was pretty suspicious."

Solidarity calls for free elections

By GEORGE BRODZKI
Associated Press Writer

GDANSK, Poland (AP) — The independent Solidarity labor federation adjourned its first convention after demanding free national and local elections in a direct challenge to the Communist Party's control of Poland.

The 896 delegates also adopted a policy statement Thursday demanding that workers be given control over the hiring and firing of managers at state-run enterprises and more say in how those organizations are run. It also called for public control of the media and freedom for "political prisoners."

Tass, the official Soviet news agency sharply criticized the congress as an "anti-socialist, anti-Soviet orgy" that foreshadows an attempt to restore capitalism to Poland.

A Western diplomat in Moscow characterized the Tass attack as "pretty tough, about the strongest language we have seen in a long time."

A Soviet armada of 60-80 ships — one of the largest fleets seen in the Baltic Sea since World War II — was expected to stage an amphibious landing over the weekend only 15 miles from Poland, according to the Danish Defense Intelligence Service.

The naval maneuvers are in conjunction with widespread war games involving some 100,000 Soviet troops near the Polish border.

In Washington, the State Department said Moscow appears intent on reminding its allies and Poland in particular about its "military might." But spokesman Dean Fischer said there is no indication the maneuvers mean the Soviets plan to intervene in Poland.

In an apparent reference to the Soviet maneuvers, the Solidarity congress issued a declaration saying, "The actions of various forces creating a sense of external threat will not deprive us of the will of struggle for the ideals of August 1980...." Solidarity, the first independent labor federation in the Soviet bloc, was formed in the summer of 1980 following a crippling wave of strikes that began in the shipyards of Gdansk.

Solidarity leader Lech Walesa closed the six-day session, saying, "We must build a Poland such as our fathers couldn't. Let us put personal ambitions into our pockets."

Walesa, who faces re-election when the congress reconvenes Sept. 26 to choose new leaders and consider an economic program, easily defeated a challenge to his leadership and strong central control of the union.

By a margin of 500-343, the delegates voted to allow regional union chiefs to sit on Solidarity's ruling presidium after Walesa urged them to be "fast, operative and a little dictatorial" when it comes to calls for immediate industrial democracy in Poland. Walesa is both the Gdansk regional chief and the national union leader.

The call for free elections came after delegates agreed to shelve a proposal that would have deleted a clause from Solidarity' charter that acknowledged the Communist Party's leading role in Poland.

Martin to seek change of venue?

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — District Attorney Ronald Earle says he doubts an attempt to move Rep. Mike Martin's perjury trial to another city would succeed.

Earle commented after Martin, R-Longview, and his newly hired attorney, Frank Maloney of Austin, made a brief court appearance Thursday and Maloney mentioned a change of venue.

"Where would he change venue to? ... He'd have to move it out of the continental United States because there has been a good deal of publicity everywhere. People in Austin are remarkably fair, and I'd be surprised if a change of venue is pursued," Earle said.

Martin created a surprise of his own when he appeared in court with Maloney, a high-powered, high-priced defense lawyer that Earle called one of the city's best. Just days before, Martin said he probably would request a court-appointed attorney because "I do not have the funds to hire one myself."

Maloney, past president of the Texas Criminal Defense Lawyers Association, has represented such public figures as former House Speaker Gus Mutscher, former Sen. David Ratliff, former Sen. Jim Bates and former Insurance Commissioner Joe Hawkins in their brushes with the law.

Last year, Maloney was attorney for Rusty Kelley, executive assistant of Speaker Bill Clayton, during Clayton's federal trial on corruption charges arising from the FBI's Brilab investigation.

Clayton was acquitted, and Kelley never was charged, but Maloney's fee set him back by about $20,000.

Martin is accused of lying when he told the Travis County Grand Jury under oath that he did not stage his own shooting July 31 at the trailer court where he lived during a special legislative session.

He didn't have a lawyer at the time, and Earle said Martin wouldn't have been indicted for anything if he had invoked the Fifth Amendment or told a story that converged with those related by other witnesses.

Charles Goff, a cousin of Martin, said he shot Martin in a "controlled hit" designed to wound him and gain sympathy and publicity for a state Senate race in 1982.

Goff said Martin paid him and also promised him a high-paying state job to act as trigger man.

Martin was wounded in the left arm by several 0-0 buckshot pellets at about 2:30 a.m. He told police he did not see his assailant and had no idea who would shoot him. Later he said it was a satanic cult, "The Guardian Angels of the Underworld." Still later, he blamed poltical enemies.

The perjury indictment could get Martin two to 10 years in prison and up to $5,000 in fines if he is convicted.

Earle said his office also is continuing another investigation of Martin involving "finances." He would not elaborate, but sources say the DA's office is looking into whether Martin took an illegal corporate political contribution.

Unspent funds returned to treasury

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown said Thursday he is returning to the state treasury a total of $600,000 that had been appropriated to his department by the 1979 Legislature.

"For the second biennium in a row, I have found it possible to return unspent funds to the treasury," Brown said in a statement.

Three killed in Denton hit-and-run accident

DENTON, Texas (AP) — Police have launched a search for the driver of a blue pickup truck believed to have been involved in a hit-and-run in which a father and his two young daughters were killed while riding bicycles.

Kelly Amanda Blanchard, 2, was pronounced dead at the scene after the Wednesday night accident, and her father, Robert Earle Blanchard, 43, died later at Westgate Hospital.

Kristie Michelle Blanchard, 10, died Thursday morning at Methodist Hospital in Dallas after undergoing surgery for head and abdominal injuries. She had been transported by helicopter.

The truck was last reported sliding through a nearby intersection where a bicycle seat was found, Cummings said.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Saturday, September 12, 1981

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: The late beloved french star Maurice Chevalier was born on this date, as were Olympic great Jesse Owens and that famous Baltimore newspaperman/lexicographer /critic H.L. Mencken. Several important changes will affect your lifestyle in the year ahead. The way in which you handle these new developments will determine how successful you will be. Count on your natural curiousity to help you do the right thing! Romantic partner may feel that it is difficult to get to know the real you. Try to spend more time with those closest to your heart. Your conservative ways have a favorable effect on you finances.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Family pride leads you to make a difficult decision. You will have the full support of your loved one! Ask a special favor and it will be granted. Show your appreciation.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Romance will be uppermost in your thoughts this weekend. Get routine chores out of the way early so that you can enjoy yourself. Resist the temptation to splurge when out shopping.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Mixed trends are indicated, but by afternoon you should be able to take charge. You may be feeling somewhat restless. Accept a social invitation. You will have a better time than anticipated.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Postpone travel and be careful not to go overboard when shopping. For those who are unattached, the romantic outlook appears brighter.

LEO: (July 23-Aug. 22): Complete your shopping and household chores early in the day. Devote more time to personal matters. Keep in touch with loved ones. Make peace with someone you may have wronged.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A friend may be trying to tell you something. Become a better listener! Court the favor of an influential. He or she holds the key to your future success.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Delve into the files and rummage through books. Research, study can lead to increased profits. Leave the evening free for reading or catching up on your domestic chores.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Postpone making important decisions. You need to employ greater diplomacy to keep a personal relationship intact. Exercise special care when handling mechanical devices.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A confusing domestic situation requires that you be extra cautious this weekend. Financial problems are easier to solve than anticipated. Catch up on household repairs.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan 19): Tend to your family responsibilities before putting any new irons in the fire. Romance enjoys highly favorable influences. Choose partners with special care.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Do not be afraid to display your talents. Various conflicts could be inhibiting love and marriage. Try to be more patient. Sort out any recent misunderstandings.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You receive encouraging news today. Share the glad tidings with loved one. Keep spending within reasonable limits. Make sure you really need the items you see on sale.

GOREN BRIDGE

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2 NT	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Five of ♡.

If you want to test your defensive skill, cover up the South and East hands and play along with Tim Seres of Australia, one of the world's great players.

You lead the five of hearts, dummy plays low and partner's nine is taken by declarer's king. The ace of diamonds fells partner's king and declarer continues with a low diamond. Since there is nothing to gain by holding up, you win the queen and partner sluffs the two of clubs. What card do you lead to the fourth trick?

Before you make a snap answer, consider what you know about declarer's hand. Obviously, he holds both the ace and queen of hearts, since partner would have played either of those cards to the first trick if he held it. Also, he started with the ace-jack of diamonds and, if partner's two of clubs is to be believed, at least one of the high honors in clubs is in his hand.

If declarer has a high honor in each black suit, he surely has nine tricks available. So the only chance to defeat the contract is to hope that declarer started with both high clubs and that partner has both high spades.

West must, therefore, shift to a spade. But not any spade! You must shift to the jack of spades. This fine play caters to declarer holding a doubleton ten of spades—that card is pinned. Whether or not declarer covers with dummy's queen, you must score four spade tricks to defeat the hand. Seres found the play, as we are sure you did. (Note that if you shifted to a low spade, declarer simply plays low from dummy and makes his contract.)

We do not admire South's two no trump opening bid without a spade stopper. However, he did have a problem, and three no trump was the only game contract that had any chance of success. Even then it required sparkling defense by West to beat the contract.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. For a copy and a scorepad, send $1.75 to "Goren-Four Deal," care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 259, Norwood, N.J. 07648. Make checks payable to Newspaperbooks.

Fishing youngsters take studies to sea

By CAROL WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

PORT TOWNSEND, Wash. (AP) — While snapping hooks and cleaning fish for a living, Travis Goodrich teaches himself math, science and English. Not bad for an 11-year-old.

The Port Townsend youth is among 60 students in a migrant education program for fishing families. The students now take their studies to sea, instead of dropping out of school for weeks or months at a time.

The migrant correspondence-school program offers relief to families who follow the West Coast fisheries for a living.

"In the past, a lot of families weren't able to take the kids, so it was a mad scramble to find places to put kids and dogs and cats and plants while Mama and Papa went out fishing," said Anita Fraser, whose 7-year-old son accompanies his father on occasional trips.

Mrs. Fraser says she could keep her son home all the time, but she likes to get him involved in their family business.

"I feel good about the fact that my child knows what Papa's doing when he's gone," she said.

Travis and his parents go to Alaska during the summer for the halibut and salmon seasons. The sixth-grader hopes to get much of his year-end studying out of the way during the trip from Washington's Olympic Peninsula to Alaska's Bristol Bay.

Travis said he was saving some of his fishing income so he could go to college and become a naval architect.

Some of the students in the federally funded program live on boats year-round, stopping in port only to make repairs and replenish supplies. For those students, migrant education teacher Penny Kelley devises an individual program that can be self-taught with help from parents.

Other families live in port most of the year, but have to take their children with them for the spring and summer fishing seasons.

For those students, Ms. Kelley works with the regular classroom teacher to find out what the student will miss during the season. She packages lessons designed to help the student keep up with the rest of the class.

Education was hit-or-miss for some fishing families before the Title I Migrant program was introduced to the peninsula.

Don Rasmussen, a 15-year-old Chimacum sophomore, used to miss the last week of school every year to accompany his father to Alaska. Last spring he tried enrolling in an Alaska correspondence program. He didn't get his study materials for three months, and when they arrived, they were for the wrong grade level.

This season, he is in the Port Townsend program, which is open to anyone in the United States whose family fishing business interferes with normal school enrollment.

"I don't really like doing it myself," Don said of the at-sea study, adding he sometimes has trouble motivating himself to study when there is fishing to do. But he wants to finish high school and take a trade-school course in brick masonry so, like his father, he will have another skill to fall back on.

"On some boats, the kids are actually a working part of the crew," said Ms. Kelley. "It would be a hardship if they couldn't go."

Port Townsend schools started the migrant program after a fisherman in the area was threatened with jail because he took his children from school each spring, said Janet Fudala, director of special education for the district.

Ms. Kelley sends packaged lessons with the students when they cast off, and as the students complete the work, they mail back their papers for grading.

The student returns to the regular classroom when the fishing season is over, theoretically having kept up with the rest of the class, Ms. Kelley said.

Validity of screening methods questioned

By NORMA MEYER
Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — A police psychologist reportedly rejected a young applicant because she was a virgin and, therefore, too naive.

— A civilian traffic officer was found psychologically unfit because he got angry when people raised their voices.

— A 10-year veteran of a Midwestern police force was disqualified by a psychologist because the man had shot at the back tire of a truck years earlier.

Yet, other police officer hopefuls who have been labeled somewhat immature by psychologists have passed the screening to be accepted into law enforcement careers.

The need by law enforcement agencies to grab recruits, and the subsequent lowering of psychological screening standards by the Los Angeles Police Department, raises the question about the validity of screening.

There is debate whether the screening actually weeds out potentially violent applicants or those who may crack in a high-stress situation.

What is the rhyme or reason behind the psychological screening methods — that ominous-sounding term that denotes a procedure beyond a layman's questioning?

Even psychologists who screen applicants for various police agencies aren't sure. They admit their colleagues could reach different conclusions from the same test. That fact is borne out by applicants, who, rejected by one police department, are found to be psychologically fit by a neighboring agency.

And the differences are exhibited by the disqualification rates, which range from 3 percent in the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department to, until recently, 50 percent in the Los Angeles Police Department.

"You cannot find a psychologist who can do validated testing to show who would make effective deputies and who would not," said Dr. John Stratton, director of psychological services for the Sheriff's Department.

"To my knowledge, there is no such test," he said.

Dr. Alice Pitman, who does psychological screening for 50 police departments, disagrees.

Man jumps onto World Trade Center

Parachtist John Carta, a former Green Beret, approaches the roof of the south tower of Manhattan's World Trade Center.

AP Laserphotos

Carta is led away by officials after his successful jump onto the 1,325-foot tower.

NEW YORK (AP) — John Carta will have to drop into Manhattan Criminal Court on Oct. 13 and explain to a judge why he parachuted from a plane onto the top of one of the world's tallest buildings.

"It was like driving the car," the 35-year-old New Rochelle resident said Thursday following his descent onto the 1,325-foot south tower of the World Trade Center. "I really had a good time doing it. It was worth it."

With a blue smoke flare strapped to his ankle, Carta dove from a plane about 10,000 feet above the twin towers. Unfurling a multicolored parachute, he made a perfect landing on the south tower's observation deck.

Parachutists have jumped from the towers to the street, but never before had anyone attempted to jumped onto the buildings.

Upon landing he was taken by Port Authority police officers for questioning. Later, he was issued a summons for "illegal parachuting," an offense that can carry a $50 fine.

Carta said he has been skydiving for 12 years and has jumped from as high as 14,000 feet. The unemployed stonemason, a former Green Beret helicopter gunner in Vietnam, said he had prepared for the jump by twice visiting the observation deck as a paying customer.

Once he was airborne, "I judged my approach, ready to turn off and land on the clear area by the river if everything wasn't just right," he said. "Your horizontal as well as your vertical approach has to be just right.

"I knew where I was going to put the canopy," Carta continued. "I was coming in at about 20 mph, maybe faster, and applied full brakes. I landed right on target inside the barbed wire fence."

Carta said he made the jump because "... I've looked at the World Trade Center for years, and it offered the greatest challenge."

He joined an elite group of adventurers who have used the two towers as a stage. On May 16, 1977, George Willig climbed up the sheer face of the center's north tower, and on Aug. 7, 1974, Philippe Petit walked across a wire stretched between the two towers.

Kleindienst breaks down on witness stand

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Former U.S. Attorney General Richard Kleindienst broke into sobs on the witness stand during his perjury trial and said he was a victim of a multimillion dollar insurance scam.

The 58-year-old Kleindienst, now a Tucson lawyer, was on the stand for nearly five hours Thursday as the surprise first witness for his defense. He was expected to resume testifying today.

He is charged with 12 counts of lying under oath to the State Bar of Arizona about his knowledge of a complex 1976 insurance fraud scheme to siphon millions of dollars from a Teamsters Union fund.

KLEINDIENST served as counsel for Joseph Hauser, the mastermind of the fraud who later was convicted of bribery conspiracy charges.

At one point, Kleindienst told the Maricopa County jury: "I was one of their victims. I was not one of the co-conspirators."

He began sobbing as he was asked about testimony of former insurance executive John Boden.

Boden was an associate of Hauser's in 1976 and testified during the trial under a grant of immunity from prosecution. Boden said Kleindienst advised him that funds of Family Provider Life Insurance Co. — an Arizona firm secretly controlled by Hauser — should be used to buy another insurance company, National American Life Insurance Co. of Louisiana.

"Any problems resulting therefrom could be fixed up later," Boden quoted Kleindienst as saying.

BUT KLEINDIENST testified Thursday: "We couldn't have discussed anything like that. Why he said that I'll never know. It's changed my life and that of my family."

He began sobbing and Judge Gerald Strick called a 15-minute recess.

Kleindienst, composed and smiling, was back at the witness stand within 10 minutes. When court resumed, he told Strick: "I want to apologize to the court for my emotional outburst."

In describing the deal for National American Life Insurance, Kleindienst said the required down payment was $2 million and Hauser only had a certified check for $1.8 million.

Kleindienst testified he doubted a regular company check would be acceptable for the remainder, so Hauser left and returned later with a briefcase containing $200,000 in cash.

Kleindienst testified earlier that he asked then-Teamsters President Frank Fitzsimmons in 1976 "to do me a favor" by verifying that a firm Kleindienst was representing, Old Security Life Insurance Co., was the low bidder and qualified for a contract with the Teamsters health and welfare fund.

"I TOLD him I would appreciate any help you can give me, and he said he didn't see any problems," Kleindienst said.

Fitzsimmons called back and affirmed Old Security was the lower bidder and was qualified for the contract, Kleindienst said. Old Security later handled claims for a number of companies involved in the siphoning scheme.

Chief defense attorney Michael Scott said he would rest his case in four or five days. The prosecution rested Tuesday after 11 days of testimony.

After a hearing Wednesday out of the jury's presence, Strick directed a verdict of acquittal for two of the perjury counts on which Kleindienst was indicted, leaving 12 standing.

PROSECUTOR Ron Collett said most of the perjury counts focus on Kleindienst's contention he did not know of Hauser's illegal use of premiums from Teamsters Union health and welfare funds that were held by Family Provider, secretly controlled by Hauser.

A few days after receiving the first premium payment from the Teamsters in 1976, Family Provider paid a $1.8 million "dividend" to another Hauser company. J.N. Trimble, Arizona insurance commissioner at the time, declared the dividend illegal and ordered the money returned to Family Provider.

Ministers arrested

WINDSOR, Ontario (AP) — Twenty-three American clergymen attending a Detroit convention have been arrested on charges of carrying firearms into Canada, authorities said.

"We're just going through routine searches, and we're coming up with the guns," Marc Baillargeon, acting superintendent of Canadian Customs at the Detroit-Windsor Tunnel, said Thursday. He added the guns ranged from .357-caliber Magnums to .22-caliber revolvers.

Sixteen ministers have been charged and released on $500 bond since Wednesday, while seven others were being processed Thursday night, said a Windsor police sergeant who refused to give his name.

He said the ministers were in Detroit for the national meeting of the National Baptist Convention U.S.A.

The sergeant said some were fined $200 or $300 and some were given suspended sentences, adding "nobody's got a jail term yet."

Customs officials would not say if the weapons were confiscated.

"We go by the license plates," noted Baillargeon. Most of the ministers are from the South, as are most people caught entering Canada with firearms, Baillargeon said.

Home Spa water purifier can make tap water tasty in minutes

Business News
Advertising and Publicity Paid For By Firms In These Columns

The Home Spa water purifier is one of the simplest, easiest, most efficient, trouble-free and economical water purifiers on the market today.

The Home Spa is portable — no electricity or expensive plumbing is needed. You can take it with you wherever you go. If you have a water cooler with a five-gallon jug, you can fill it in about 10 minutes with Home Spa filtered water for less than 10 cents. If you are now buying bottled water, you can save up to $20 a month and more with the Home Spa.

House plants, pets, and goldfish will thrive on Home Spa filtered water. Beans will cook up in much less time with water filtered through the activated charcoal filter in the Home Spa. Nature's water, that comes through your faucet, with the impurities and chlorine removed, is much more healthful than distilled water with a few minerals added.

The following are quotations from leading magazines on the subject of water and activated carbon (charcoal.)

READER'S DIGEST: "At present the most promising technique for dealing with chlorine and organic chemicals is the remarkable purifier, activated carbon."

NEWSWEEK: "One of the sure methods guaranteed to remove undesireable pollutants is to run the water through ACTIVATED CARBON."

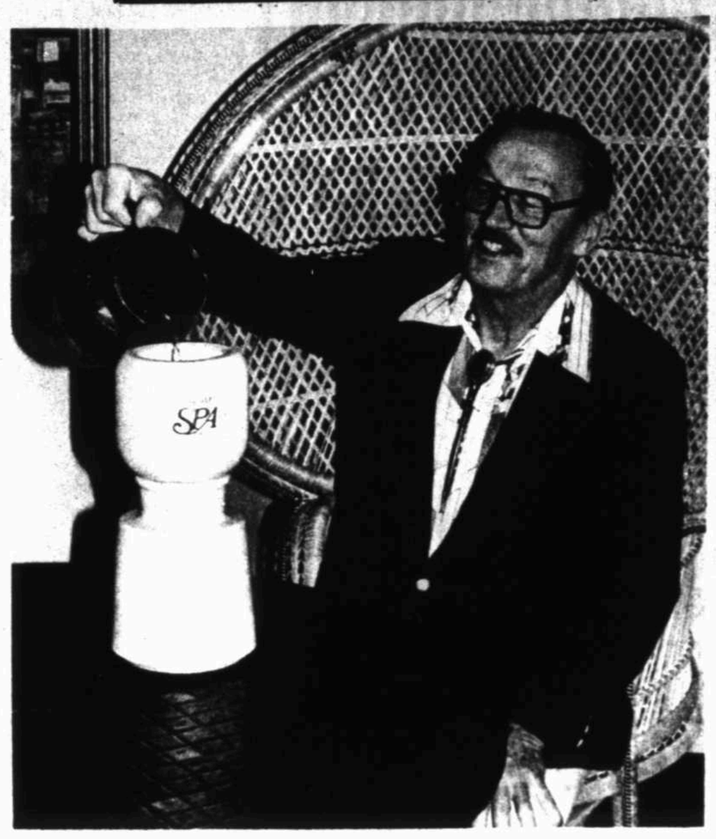
AMERICAN HOME: "An activated carbon filter eliminates toxic organic pollutants and is excellent for eliminating non-toxic objectionable elements such as chlorine, hydrogen sulphide, and turbidity. No home should be without one."

The Home Spa dispenser retails for only $24.95, is made of durable polyethylene, and will last for many, many years without showing wear. It comes complete with one filter. Replacement filters are only $8.95 and will purify approximately 500 gallons of tap water. For a limited tnme, ACME MARKETING is having a special sale on replacement filters, 3 for only $21.90. They are sealed in plastic and will last indefinitely.

Any purchaser who is not 100% satisfied with the performance of the Home Spa may return it for a full refund. This guarentee is in writing, given with each purchase.

ACME MARKETING is located at 3103 East 31st St. in Odesssa. They also have filters for automatic ice cube makers, drinking fountains, and ice machines. Filters on automatic ice cube makers on home refrigerators not only purify the ice cubes, they keep your ice maker from clogging up, saving you high plumbing bills.

Acme Marketing is also headquarters in the Permian Basin for DMSO solvent, (Dymethyl Sulfoxide.) 99.9% undiluted, 99.9% pure. You shouldnt settle for a lesser grade. Call Tony for more information, 367-6977.



Tony Rogers, Acme Marketing, Inc. at 3103 E. 31st St. in Odessa, shows how simple and easy it is to transform city or well water into odor-free, sparkling mountain spring water without electricity or plumbing. The activated charcoal filter removes chlorine, sulphates, rust, algae and other pollutants, giving you nature's pure, healthful water for less than two cents a gallon. Call Tony at Acme Marketing for more information or home delivery, 367-6977.

Make Christmas orders early at The Oak Leaf bookstore

Judy Hubbard, owner of The Oak Leaf bookstore at 13 Oak Ridge Square, reminds those who are planning to special order books for Christmas gifts to place those orders immediately. Allow a couple of months for your books to arrive here safely and avoid disappointment, is the word from Judy. Call her at 682-2428, if you are unable to get out just now.

Of course, the Oak Leaf always has a complete selection of fine quality books and paperbacks on hand. Currently in stock are some really good looking leather bound collector-type books, including popular editions on Western Art. At Oak Leaf, find David J. Murrah's exciting "C.C.Slaughter — Rancher, Banker, Baptist," the story of a pioneer in West Texas ranching. At one time, "Slaughter Country" stretched from just north of Big Spring two hundred miles northwestward to the New Mexico border west of Lubbock. Books of the Southwesst are a specialty at Oak Leaf.

The sportsman or woman will enjoy "Earl Campball — The Driving Force," written by Sam Blair, and "Off the Court," by Arthur Ashe with Neil Amdur. Everyone will admire LeRoy Neimans "Horses."

Children's selections include lots of really pretty picture books. One, "The Art of Maurice Sendak" by Selma G. Lanes, is great good fun not only for the little ones, but also for their adults.

Gift shop at Oak Leaf from non-literary displays, too - frames, miniatures, desk items, etc. Custom gift wrapping is offered on in-store selections as well as on gifts purchased elsewhere.

The Oak Leaf carries a large stock of plain stationary for monogramming and offers one day service on any printing order, including Bibles, greeting cards, napkins, playing cards, and matchbook covers.

Back to Christmas: not only are there boxed cards at Oak Leaf, but manufacturers' albums of cards. Now is exactly the right time to order from these albums.

The Oak Leaf is open at 13 Oak Ridge Square from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., six days a week. Phone numbers are 682-2428 or 682-0263. Visa and Mastercharge cards are accepted.

El Paso crime becoming international problem

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — What began as a local attempt to combat juvenile crime in El Paso has become an international issue that some say can only be resolved by a treaty between the United States and Mexico.

The problem is what to do with juveniles who illegally cross into the United States from Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, and commit crimes in El Paso.

El Paso officials thought they had found the solution. More than two years ago, they reached an oral agreement with juvenile authorities in Juarez under which youths caught committing crimes in El Paso would be placed in a juvenile detention center on the Mexican side of the Rio Grande.

The youths would be held in the center, the Tribunal de Menores, for up to three months on the decision of a Mexican administrative judge.

"It was working beautifully," said District Judge Woodrow Bean II. "The crime rate here went down last year. We're one of the only places in the United States where it went down.

"Those juveniles over in Juarez knew that if they were caught over here, they were going to be taken to the detention center, so they didn't come over here," he said.

Juvenile authorities on both sides of the border were pleased with the arrangement, but there was a hitch.

In December, a Juvenile Probation Department employee named Margaret Ingle refused to take some juveniles to Juarez and was fired. She complained, saying it was illegal for the El Paso County officers to take prisoners into a foreign country.

This spring, the county Juvenile Board, composed of the county judge and district judges, ruled that the process indeed was a violation of a Texas Constitution clause that prohibits "banishing" convicted criminals from the state. The board reinstated Ms. Ingle and ordered the Juvenile Probation Department to find another way to deal with juvenile delinquents from Mexico.

The decision was reached on a 4-3 vote. The area's judges still are divided over it.

"I voted to leave it the way it was and if, at some future date, the court told us we were doing something wrong, then we could do something different," Bean said. "I think (the other judges) were just scared of it."

The decision was cemented by a memorandum written by District Judge Edward S. Marquez which said the agreement also violated the U.S. Constitution's clause giving the federal government sole power to enact agreements with other nations. Marquez said the process also denied the youths of the constitutional guarantees to due process and equal protection under the law.

"My brief outlines why the procedure we had before, while working well, was illegal," the judge said. "It didn't appear we were doing any harm until we really got into it and researched it."

The judges found that police were arresting the young illegal aliens on suspicion of a crime and sending them to the county Probation Department, run by Xavier Banales.

Banales said his staff would try to determine whether the youth was an illegal alien and a juvenile and whether there was probable cause to detain him. If the youth had a record of crime in El Paso, the department could take him to court and eventual detention in the state juvenile center in Brownwood.

Cancer researcher charged

NEW YORK (AP) — Scientists at Cornell University are questioning research a graduate student published as an influential new theory on how a cancer cell develops and say data may have been falsified.

The student, Mark Spector, denies the allegations of falsifying the data and said he will be proven right. His experiments are being reproduced to see if the results match his earlier findings.

Volker M. Vogt, an assistant professor of biochemistry at Cornell, said Tuesday he "didn't think that it was an accident" that led to the questionable findings in Spector's experiments.

Small Texas town would get three representatives

LEON VALLEY, Texas (AP) — In its wisdom, the Texas Legislature has given the 9,000 residents of Leon Valley the same representation in Congress as its huge neighbor to the southeast — San Antonio.

Under the congressional redistricting bill approved by a recent special session of the Legislature, this San Antonio suburb will be Bexar County's most represented township in the U.S. Congress.

It may also be the most represented town of its size in Texas, or the nation, with its voters helping choose three U.S. representatives.

"It's kind of a crazy deal," laughs Mayor Ken Alley, after it was discovered portions of Leon Valley were placed in three separate districts occupied by two Democrats and one Republican congressmen.

Under the redistricting plan — to be reviewed by the Justice Department under the Voting Rights Act and still subject to court challenge — Leon Valley would have the same representation in Congress as does San Antonio — the nation's 11th largest city with 785,410 residents.

For the past decade, the suburb on San Antonio's northwest side has fallen entirely within the 21st Congressional District represented by Rep. Tom Loeffler, R-Texas. Loeffler's district, the largest in the continental United States, sprawls from San Antonio 300 miles north to Midland and 400 miles west to Presidio.

But under the Legislature's recent redistricting bill, Reps. Henry B. Gonzalez, D-Texas, whose 20th District covers most of central San Antonio, and Abraham "Chick" Kazen, D-Texas, whose 23rd District goes 150 miles south to Laredo, also would represent portions of the small city.

"I have mixed emotions about it," Alley said, "whether it would be advantageous to have three congressmen or just one to give his full support out here."

Alley concedes the eventuality could lead to "some lively campaigning" in the suburb, whose proximity to San Antonio already causes some political confusion.

Judge's order affects Haitians

MIAMI (AP) — In a ruling affecting hundreds of Haitians scattered in four federal detention centers across the country, a U.S. district judge has issued a temporary restraining order halting exclusionary hearings and deportations of the refugees.

Judge Alcee Hastings issued the 10-day order late Wednesday after listening to the testimony of lawyers from Puerto Rico and West Virginia, two of the places outside of Florida to which Haitians have been transferred.

Hastings' order covers all Haitians being held at Fort Allen, Puerto Rico; Big Springs, Texas; and Morgantown, W.Va., as well as any refugees at Lexington, Ky., who have no attorney.

The order came in a class-action suit filed by the Haitian Refugee Center Inc., in hopes that hearings and deportations would be prevented until procedures are changed.

The suit charged that the government's exclusionary hearings violated the Haitians' rights. Translations from Creole were faulty and the Haitians were not informed they have the right to an attorney, an appeal and to request political asylum, the suit said.

Nine 'cats planned, two actually wild

Basin oilmen plan nine new wildcats in the region, seven in West Texas, two in New Mexico. It looks as if a couple of these projects may truely deserve the name, "wildcat."

FISHER PROSPECT

Omar Operating Co., Midland, will drill the No. 1 Mitchell, a 6,400-foot wildcat, 2 miles south of Roby.

The drillsite is 5/8 of a mile northeast of Sohio's No. 1 Jinkens, abandoned August 20, 1945 at 6,210.

This project spots 467 feet from the south, and 567 feet from the west line of section 16, block 1, H&TB survey.

GLASSCOCK WILDCAT

Hamill Resources, Inc., Houston, will sink the 8,300-foot wildcat No. 1 A.L. Houston 15 miles northwest of Garden City.

It spots 660 feet from the south, and 1,980 feet from the east line of section 25, block 35, T-2-S, T&PRR survey.

The site is 3/4 mile east of the Amoco No. 1-A Houston, abandoned July 22, 1975 at 8,400 feet.

NOLAN WAGER

Bill Fenn, Inc., Austin will try the wildcat No. 1 Valley Creek, to be drilled 5 miles northeast of Nolan.

They will hang the hole 1,582 feet from the north, and 2,290 feet from the east line of section 217, block 64, H&TC survey.

The drillsite is 1/2 mile south of the West Texas and Amarillo Oil No. 1 Holland, a 5,650-foot dry hole abandoned June 6, 1956.

PECOS REAL THING

Tenneco Oil Co., San Antonio, will attempt to drill a fairy genuine wildcat well, the No. 1 J.A. Greg 18, at a site 30 miles south of Fort Stockton.

The drillsite is 800 feet from the north, and 1,200 feet from the west line of section 18, block 2, TCRR survey.

This hole will be sunk in what appears on the map to be a little explored area.

SCHLEICHER VENTURE

Vison Inc., Midland, will drill the No. 1 Wilma Topliffe, a 6,000-foot wildcat, 6 miles northeast of Eldorado.

They'll cut this hole 467 feet from the south, and 2,100 feet from the west line of section 85, block LL, TCRR survey.

The drillsite is in the Tucker-Wright gas field vicinity, 3/4 mile northeast of Union's No. 1 Milligan, a 5,910-footer (Strawn at 5,890), abandoned January 15, 1955.

SCURRY SAPPING

Monsanto Oil Co., Midland, will undermine a proven field with the wildcat No. 12 F. Lyons, to be drilled 12 miles southwest of Snyder.

The 8,200-foot project will be sunk in the Diamond M field, where the deepest production, it appears, is found at 6,569 feet.

The stake is driven 1,200 feet from the south, and 900 fet from the east line of section 183, block 97, H&TC survey,

STONEWALLER

Ensearch Exploration, Inc., Dallas, will sink the 6,600-foot wildcat No. 1 H.L. Binson, 8 miles northwest of Swenson.

The location is 1,980 feet from the south and west lines of section 251, block D, H&TC survey.

The drillsite is in a lightly explored are, 1 1/8 miles south-southeast of Huber's No. 1 Ward, drilled to 6,691 feet and abandoned October 11, 1965.

LEA LONGSHOT

The Superior Oil Co., Midland, will sink the 15,000-foot wildcat No. 1-23 Government, 11 miles north of Buckeye, N.M.

Apparently, there is no production of a similar depth in the vicinity. What there is runs 10,500 feet and under.

The drillsite is 1,980 feet from the north and east lines of section 23, township 19 south, range 34 east.

CHAVES HOOT OWL

Mesa Petroleum Co., Midland, will sink the 3,950-foot wildcat No. 1 Eddlemann-Federal "out where the owls hoot," as they say in the Kansas oilpatch.

The drillsite, it appears, is around 22 miles west of the nearest production (Abo gas).

This owl roosts 660 feet from the south, and 1,980 feet from east line of section 8, township 7 south, range 22 east. The site is 40 miles west of Elkins, N.M.

Radioactive containers removed from dump

LAREDO, Texas (AP) — Thirty-seven cannisters containing low-level radioactive wastes were to be unearthed today at a city landfill where they were inadvertantly buried last week, state officials said.

The one-quart containers will be shipped to a low-level nuclear waste disposal facility at Richland, Wash., said Bob Free, an official with the Department of Health's Radiation Control Board.

Workers at a Laredo oil well servicing company mistakenly threw the cannisters filled with iridium sand into a metal trash bin Tuesday, Free said.

"One of our customers, Halliburton Services, dumped the containers into one of our bins by mistake and our people hauled it to the dump without knowing it was there," said Eddie Garza, president of Sanitation Services.

Garza said an official at Halliburton realized the cannisters were missing Wednesday and called the sanitation company.

"We tracked it to the landfill," Garza said.

"We had to check our truck, our people and the landfill (for contamination)," Garza said. "So far, everything has been clear."

Free said iridium is a short-lived isotope, meaning the cannisters would pose little danger if left buried and intact.

Halliburton officials initiated the search and contacted health officials in Austin when they discovered the cannisters mistakenly had been taken to the city dump, Free said.

Halliburton officials have refused comment.

"This is the only incident like this that I know of during my past six years with the department," Free said.

Two oilwells payingoff, one fizzles

Sun Oil Co. has announced a Strawn Grey sand discovery in Mitchell County, while Exxon has completed a second well in the Dorland (Fusselman) field of Howard County. Another company has announced plans to abandon a project after swabbing 33 barrels of oil plus no water from Strawn perforations.

MITCHELL DISCOVERY

Sun Oil Co., Abilene, has announced completion of its No. 26 V.T. McCabe, a Mitchell County Jameson Grey Strawn sandstone oil discovery, four miles north of Silver.

The well flowed 75 barrels of 43 gravity oil plus no water through an 11/64 inch choke from perforations between 6,690 to 6,704 feet, which had been acidized with 500 gallons, and fractured with 60,000 gallons and 84,500 pounds of sand.

It was drilled to a total depth of 7,260 feet, with 5 1/2 inch casing set on bottom. It is plugged back to 7,080 feet.

The operator has filed application for a new field designation and proposed field name of Jameson, N. (Strawn Grey sand).

Location is 660 feet from the south, and 1,976.4 feet from the east line of section 224, blk 1-A, H&TC survey.

HOWARD CONFIRMER

The Dorland (Fusselman) field of Howard County gained a second producer with the completion of Exxon Corporation No. 1 Zane Neal, 14 miles east-southeast of Big Spring.

The well flowed 106 barrels of oil (gravity not reported), plus 33 barrels of water through a 16/64 inch choke, from perforations between 8,666 and 8,701 feet which had been acidized with 5,250 gallons, and fractured with 60,000 gallons and 96,000 pounds of sand.

It was drilled to 9,005 feet, with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 9,000 feet.

Location is 1,020 feet from the south, and 660 feet from the west line of section 32, block 30, T-1-S, T&P survey.

SCURRY LOSS

Independent Exploration Co. has announced plans to plug and abandon the No. 1 Nations after swabbing 33 barrels of oil plus no water from Strawn perforations between 7,150 feet and 7,170 feet, which had been acidized with 2,000 gallons and, fracture 2,000 gallons.

It was drilled to 7,683 feet with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 7,650 feet.

Location is 2,145 feet from the south line and 1,610 feet from the west line of section 235, block 3, H&TC survey.

Oil prices announced

Shell Oil Co. recently announced that as of September 1, it will be paying $33.35 per barrel for sour West Texas and New Mexico crude, $35 for segregated intermediate oil from the area, and $35.50 per barrel for segregated Ordovician crude. All prices are for 40 API gravity oil. Crude with a gravity of 39.9 or less will be bought at somewhat lower prices.

According to the Independent Petroleum Association of America, the average price for a barrel of United States crude during the month of August was $32.50. The August 1980 price was $22.63.

Two small fields to be enlarged

STERLING OPPORTUNITY

MGF Oil Corp., Midland, will drill a 7,200-foot additon to the four-hole Triple M (Wolfcamp Lower) field.

The location is 860 feet from the South line, and 2,087 feet from the west line of section 142, block 29, W&NWRR survey.

WINKLER EXPANSION

B.J. Elliot, Kermit, will attempt to add a well to the nine-hole Henderson field.

Elliot will drill the 3,200-foot No. 2 Fred Lech "A," 7 miles northwest of Kermit. The site is 1,320 feet from the south, and 330 feet from the east line of section 33, block 74, PSL survey.

Henderson Field produces at 3,030 feet. It is on the western fringes of Kermit Field, yeilding from 2,800 feet.

The Lech's location is 1/4 mile east of Shell's 3,200 foot dry hole No. 23-WSW El Capitan.

Cody reportedly paid secret salary

CHICAGO (AP) — Cardinal John P. Cody's stepcousin was paid a "secret church salary" for six years, although several church employees said they never saw the woman at work, the Chicago Sun-Times said today.

The allegations came in the newspaper's second article in as many days claiming that Cody improperly used church money to enrich his distant relative. Thursday's story said a federal grand jury was investigating the possibility that Cody had diverted up to $1 million in church funds.

A federal prosecutor confirmed he had received allegations that Cody improperly diverted church money.

The Sun-Times said in today's copyright story that Helen Dolan Wilson of St. Louis, a Cody confidant throughout his church career, received a salary ranging from $7,200 in 1969 to $11,500 in 1975, when she suddenly vacated her 27th-floor apartment and left Chicago.

Mrs. Wilson, 74, refused comment on the Sun-Times report that she made a regular salary, and Cody declined to be interviewed about the newspaper's investigation.

According to the Sun-Times, Mrs. Wilson received the salary as an "office manager" for the Chicago Archdiocese, which has 2.4 million Catholics and is the nation's largest Roman Catholic archdiocese. The newspaper reported that several church employees at the time said they never saw her working — either at the chancery office or at Cody's official church-owned residence.

The newspaper said Mrs. Wilson was a retiree who spent winters at two Florida homes she owned while leasing the Chicago apartment.

Chancery employees and other archdiocesan officials who processed the regular church payroll account did not know about the salary allegedly received by Mrs. Wilson, the Sun-Times said.

This June 1967 photo of Pope Paul VI, second from right, accompanied by Cardinal John P. Cody of Chicago, second from left, and Helen Dolan Wilson, immediately to the left of the Pope, was taken at Cody's induction into the College of Cardinals.

The newspaper reported Thursday that for years Cody has exercised complete control over two unaudited bank accounts he set up after arriving in Chicago, allegedly diverting up to $1 million in church funds to Mrs. Wilson for such items as a home and luxury car.

DEATHS

Charles Odom

Charles B. Odom, 74, of 804 Lawson St., died Thursday afternoon in a Midland hospital.

Services will be at 2 p.m. Saturday in the Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home chapel with the Rev. Clark Ford, minister of Memorial Christian Church, officiating. Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park.

Odom was born Nov. 10, 1906, in Cookville, Tenn. He spent his early life in Oklahoma at Commanche and Duncan. Odom began working at an early age in the Oklahoma oil fields. He was married in 1929 to Wilma McBee of Healdton, Okla.

Odom moved to West Texas in 1949, and was employed as a drilling superintendent with Pure Oil Co. He worked with that company for 30 years and retired in the late 1960s. He then went to work with McCullough Tool Co. for a number of years. He was retired at the time of his death.

Odom was a member of Memorial Christian Church, Midland Masonic Lodge No. 623, Scottish Rite, the Suez Shrine Temple and the Suez Foot Patrol.

Survivors include his wife, Wilma; a son, Dr. Keith Odom of Fort Worth; a daughter, Patti Odom Smith of Grand Prairie; a sister, Mrs. Lloyd Eden of Dallas; five grandchildren and a number of nieces and nephews.

The family has asked that memorials be directed to Hospice of Midland, P.O. Box 2621, and the Allison Cancer Center.

Raymond Rasberry

SWEETWATER — Raymond J. Rasberry, 67, father of Mrs. Raymond (Beverly) Stone of Midland, died Thursday in a Sweetwater hospital.

Services will be at 10 a.m. Saturday in McCoy Chapel of Memories with burial in Sweetwater Cemetery.

Rasberry was born July 30, 1914, in Nolan County and was a lifetime resident of Sweetwater. He was married to Mary Lucille Busby Oct. 31, 1937, in Sweetwater. He was a switchman for Santa Fe Railraod 35 years.

Other survivors include his wife, two sons and six grandchildren.

Michael Stovall

Michael Stovall, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Stovall III of 2302 Belchase Court, died shortly after birth Tuesday in a Lubbock hospital.

Graveside services were to be Friday at 10 a.m. in Resthaven Memorial Park with the Rev. Malcom F. Slayter, associate minister of St. Nicholas Episcopal Church, officiating. Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home handled arrangements.

Other survivors include his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. W.D. Stovall and F.W. Lawson, all of Midland.

Memorials should be directed to Texas Tech Medical School Foundation, attention: Steve Arnold, Box 2097, Midland 79702.

Larry Evans

GRESHAM, ORE. — Services for Larry K. Evans, 49, of Portland, Ore., son of Ardell Evans and brother of LaJuan Womack, both of Midland, Texas, were Monday in Bateman Funeral Chapel in Gresham, Ore. Burial was in Willamette National Cemetery in Portland.

Evans died Sept. 10 in a Portland traffic accident.

He was born May 4, 1932, in Turkey, Texas and was graduated from high school there. He enlisted in the U. S. Navy in 1951. He married Noma L. James July 10, 1953, in San Diego, Calif. Upon his discharge from the service in 1955 he moved to Lubbock, where he lived until moving to Ventura, Calif. He had lived in Portland since 1966 and was a member of Eastside Church of Christ.

Other survivors include three sisters, his wife, a son, a daughter and a brother.

Dealing with food beats acting career

By MAGGIE WILSON
The Arizona Republic

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Actor Orson Welles' daughter Bea has finally found a "fascinating" career in a local Mexican restaurant.

"This is exactly what Father always said I should be doing" said the 25-year-old. "He was right. The restaurant business is fascinating, though I never thought so until I got into it by a fluke and began learning it."

Miss Welles is the actor's daughter by his present wife, the former Countess Paola Mori of Rome. Her half-sister is Rebecca Welles, whose mother is actress and legendary beauty Rita Hayworth.

"Mother was a nobody Italian actress — she only did it to get out of the house — when she met father in Rome. They fell madly in love, and they still are. Being a countess is no biggie in Italy, but if you marry one, you automatically become a count. So Father is Count di Gerfalco," Miss Welles said.

She spent her childhood and young adult years in Europe and came to this country about three years ago to live with her parents in the home they then owned in Sedona.

"We were gypsies all those years," she recalls. "Father traveled a lot, and mother didn't want Becky and me to grow up not knowing him. So when he moved, we moved, along with our tutors and nannies and suitcases.

"If nothing else, we learned fluency in Spanish, Italian, French, German and English," she added. "My one regret is that when we traveled to China, India and Africa, I was too young to appreciate what I was doing.

"But I've lived a lot for a person my age. If I never did anything else as long as I lived, I'd still have had a very full life."

As it is, she's been a model, journalist, actress and radio broadcaster ... "Oh, yes, and an Oxford University dropout as a student of marine biology ... Oh, yes, and I was on Great Britain's short list for the Olympic Games in 1972 for show jumping horses, but I hurt my knee and didn't get to compete."

Though she was surrounded all her life by the movie-making business, it was never her ambition to become an actress because "It's hard work, not glamorous, sometimes very unrewarding and always boring."

But learning the restaurant business is not boring, it's fascinating, she said. She is learning it from the ground up at a pair of restaurants here and plans to make the restaurant business a career.

"Meanwhile, my father won't visit me from Las Vegas where he now lives because he loves this food and fears he might blow his diet," she said. "He's lost 80 pounds on a no-salt, no-nothing diet. He has a thyroid problem that has been hell to pay in the weight department all his life.

"The fact that Mother is a fabulous cook hasn't helped any, but she's learning to do diet cooking for him," Miss Welles added. "When I visit my parents in Las Vegas now, the house is still loaded with scripts, and Dad is doing a lot of writing."

Associated Press Writer

CROW AGENCY, Mont. (AP) — A century after yielding their sacred lands, the American Indians re quietly but proudly fighting to save their colorful native nams.

"If you're called Smith, you don't get a second look.But if your name is Runs Above, you might have a problem getting credit, a job, or an apartment," said Carson Walks Over the Ice, a 34-year-old Crow Indian whose ancestors scouted for Gen. George Armstrong Custer's ill-fated cavalry.

Bending to pressure, many tribesmen changed their names decades ago to avoid discrimination and bureaucratic red tape, said Walk Over the Ice.

"My father-in-law is Thomas Bull Over the Hill," explained Walks Over the Ice, "but he's known legally as Thomas Bull. When he came to the agency, the government changed his name to Boliva Hill. Why? Because it sounded like Bull Over Hill."

A new generation has stopped srrendering the traditional names, said Walks Over the Ice.

"The young guys are saying it's not so bad being an Indian. In my dad's day, you were frowned upon, and there was discimination," he said.

Partly since his own name was lost, George Hogan, 71, a former tribal leader who farms near Custer Battlefield, suports the efforts to preserve the treasured names.

"My father's name was Long Time Ago Bear. But a major at the Carlisle Indian School named him Hogan because he felt Long Time Ago Bear was too lon. He told my father, 'You are entering modern civilization.'"

After being settled on reservations, the modern Indian usually kept his given name, but received a first name.

Sometimes, new names were bestowed on a whim.

"A friend of mine was told his name was too long," said Walks Over the Ice. "Beause he came into town, they gave him the last name of Town and because he was carrying a Winchester rifle, they made his first name Winchester.

"My grandfather was the first in the family to have a first name," recalled Walks Over the Ice. "He was name Louis. His mother was Crooked Face. The Walks Over the Ice name is only two generations old."

Remnants of rich history, the list goes on: Pretty On Top, Old Coyote, Bad Bear, Pretty Paint, Old Dwarf, Crooked Arm, Yellow Eyes, Rides Horse and Turns Plenty.

Septemberfest

Andy Lattu and friend, above, make friends at the Kinderfest Petting Zoo. In photo at right, Evan Bruno, right, son of Mr.and Mrs.R. E. Bruno, 1703 W. Storey, and Nathan Lynch, son of Mr. and Mrs.Joe Lynch, 1005 Shell, partake of the cotton candy at last year's Septemberfest. The event will open once again at 11 a.m. Saturday on the grounds of the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri. Booths placed on the grounds of the museum will hold more than 60 juried artists and craftsmen from throughout the nation. They will have their works on exhibit and for purchase. Food booths will also be plentiful. The festival will remain open until 8 p.m. Saturday and again from 12 p.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday. A preview party, by invitation only, will begin activities at 7:30 p.m. today on the museum grounds. Anyone interested in attending the party should call Jan Warlick at 682-8556.

Sewage may not be good to use in gardens

By TOM STEVENS
The Washington Post

Q: I have a chance to get some municipal sewage sludge. Is it safe to use it in my vegetable garden?

A: It now appears that the heavy metals in some sludge may be hazardous to human health, according to University of Illinois spec8alists. Gardeners who have applied it to their vegetable gardens in the past but have left it on the surface are advised to mix it thoroughly with the soil to a depth of 8 inches to help dilute the available cadmium. Gardeners are also advised not to grow leafy green vegetables in areas where sludge has been applied within the previous three years.

Q: When should broccoli be planted for fall harvest?

A: The variety "Premium Crop Hybrid," an All-America winner, matures in 58 days and should be planted at least that long before the average date of the first frost. It will survive moderate frost.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Make your own pre-wash stain remover

DEAR HELOISE:

You once had a hint in your column on how to make a pre-wash stain remover but the clipping was accidentally tossed out, much to my dismay.

If possible, could you please include it in the column again soon?

Your help in showing us how to save in these days of inflation is greatly appreciated. — Mrs. Robert Early

+ + +

How could I refuse after your kind words? Seriously, though, this is such a sure-fire remedy, and we have so many requests for it, here we go again:

Simply fill a spray bottle with a solution of one-third household ammonia, one-third liquid dishwashing detergent and one-third water. Shake well.

On laundry day, use this to spray soiled collars and cuffs and spots on clothing. As a word of caution: never, never add bleach to the solution, as a poisonous gas would be created.

For most run-of-the-mill stains, this solution works wonders and you sure can't beat the price. — Heloise

SIMPLER SEWING

Dear Heloise: A dry bar of soap rubbed on thick, stubborn seams, makes sewing them so much easier. — Mrs. C. Hickman

PLANT CARE

Dear Heloise: When your plants need to be cleaned, instead of wiping them off or misting them (which can be messy) simply put them in the shower.

Turn it on to a lukewarm, fine spray and leave them in for about 10 minutes.

Dump out the excess water and don't water them for a few days.

Your plants will be happy and healthier. — R. E. Sequin

LUMP-FREE GRAVY

Dear Heloise: If every person who cooks will buy a wire whisk — the cone-shaped, spiral kind — they will never ever have any lumps in gravy or sauces, no matter whether they are cooked or uncooked!

You can buy them in housewares departments of large stores. Use them for any liquid you can stir! — Alice Christensen

+ + +

You've hit the nail on the head this time, 'luv! This little gadget makes thickening gravy or sauces a breeze!

If the rest of you don't believe us, pick one up and try it! — Heloise

TRAVEL TIP

Dear Heloise: I save bread wrappers and when taking a trip, I place a shoe inside each wrapper.

Soiled clothes are never a worry. — Eleanor Miller

THIS COLUMN is written for you... the homemaker. If you have a hint or a problem write to Heloise in care of this newspaper. Because of the tremendous volume of mail, Heloise is unable to answer individual letters. She will, however, use your letters in her column whenever possible.

Designer clothes for well-dressed dolls

By GWEN JONES
Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES — First came designer clothes for adults, then designer clothes for teens, young children, even infants. Now, quicker than you can say "ooh la la Sasson," toy manufacturers have introduced designer styles for — who else? — dolls.

To retailers and toymakers alike, such dolly duds are a natural extension of the designer-label boom. Seeking to cash in on the craze, three toy companies — Lesney Products Corp., Mego International and Ideal — are marketing miniature fashions under some of the top labels. When the styles hit the stores recently, they took off like rockets.

Lesney unveiled the Sasson collection for its baby-faced Ginny doll, Mego presented Jordache for a Barbie-type doll and Ideal introduced curvaceous Laura and her wardrobe of Calvin Klein creations.

Thomas Castle, a toy-buyer, says that "designer labels in doll clothes are one more way to perpetuate the names." Since the concept originated in clothes anyway, it makes sense for it to be applied to dolls."

Ginny's glamorous garb, ranging from denim jeans and T-shirts to full Westernwear regalia, has caught on with consumers, if only because, at prices from about $3 to $5, the outfits are no more expensive than comparably styled non-designer miniature wardrobes. But price alone, says Castle, doesn't account for their popularity. "Many mothers," he explains, "approve of the doll for their four-to-seven-year-olds because the clothes are easy to put on and take off. They're the ones who respond to the Sasson label, not their youngsters."

It is the other way around with the Jordache doll line. Little girls age five to nine supposedly beseech their mommies to buy the toy.

For these youngsters, Mego's TV commercials underscore the slogan, "Jordache has the look that's right," which they've already heard used on TV spots for the real Jordache jeans.

Jordache was selected by Mego after intensive market research indicated that the label has strong name-awareness among the toy company's key audience — mothers aged 18 to 35.

The vast array of Jordache doll outfits includes such luxury looks as sheepskin-like jackets, harem pants, ruffled skirts, boots and luggage, which retail anywhere from $1.99 to $5.99 — roughly the asking prices for Barbie's fashions.

Unlike Sasson and Jordache, Calvin Klein's doll collection never really got off the ground. When Ideal came out with Klein outfits for a doll named Laura, retail buyers rejected her because they anticipated consumer resistance to her simulated anatomy — especially the spongy breasts — and so Ideal abandoned the product. Calvin Klein doll's wear, according to a company spokesman, isn't in the offing for this year.

Some parents may look with pleasure on the failure of Klein's doll line, for they think there's already too much emphasis on designer fashions. That's the view of Karen Trader-Moore, manager of staff education for TRW, who has a three-year-old daughter. "Designer doll clothes," says Trader-Moore, "are really too commercial. And they groom kids on being status-conscious at much too early an age.

"What I object to most, though, is advertisements for children's designer clothes. Ads like Jordache stress communicating with the body. My husband and I were amazed recently when our daughter stuck out her buttocks and sang the Jordache jeans jingle — something she obviously picked up on TV. Now, these doll clothes further reinforce that image."

To psychiatrist Flora Cox, designer doll clothes aren't harmful to a child's development so long as parents help the youngster to keep them in proper perspective.

"It is important," explains Cox, "for parents to instill in their children a sense of pride in their personal appearance. But, hopefully, parents are able to teach the difference between fashion-consciousness and self-confidence."

As more designer names crop up on the toy scene — which will happen — the challenge will grow for parents to help their kids make those distinctions.

Here's how: Treatment for a butcher block

By GENE GARY
Copley News Service

Q. I recently purchased an old home with a built-in butcher block in the counter top.

How can it be refinished or sanded? Can it be sealed with any preparation?

It is stained and not usable at present. — M.K. Niagara Falls, Ontario

A. Steel wool or sand off the balance of the present finish.

To remove any oil stains, coat with dry cornmeal or any absorbent material to draw up the oil. When this becomes saturated, brush off and replace fresh material on the stains.

Then quickly wash the block surface with warm, mild soapsuds, rinse with clear water and wipe dry.

When the wood is completely dry, I recommend an oil finish by applying a couple of soaking coats of pure, clean, raw linseed oil, which is available in sealed contaers. Allow the oil to soak for an hour, then wipe off the excess. Apply a second coat a week later, repeating the process.

This is the recommended treatment for wooden utensils or the top of a butcher block, such as yours.

Q. What is the best waterproofing paint to use on my cellar walls? They are hollow concrete block construction. The bottom row is damp.

Some say use oil-base paint, others say use latex and still others suggest swimming pool paint. I want to keep dampness out of my cellar. — Frank C., Collegeville, Pa.

A. When moisture is present, the application of a waterpoof sealant should first be made on the lower area of the walls.

A special primer that will cover porous surfaces is generally needed over concrete block. Your paint dealer has it. For information on others, cinder and slag blocks which contain iron and also both acid and alkaline substances are best painted with the swimming pool paints which are solvent-thinned and are made from synthetic rubber resins to avoid staining.

This lucky grandchild has a headstart on emotional well-adjustment, thanks to the bonding already being established with his grandparents. Increased recognition of the importance of close ties between children and the elderly has resulted in Grandparents Day, America's newest national holiday Sunday, Sept. 13. The holiday was officially designated in 1978 by President Jimmy Carter and is celebrated the Sunday after Labor Day.

Elderly are emotional guardians for the young

CLEVELAND, Ohio — Parents, move over. Letting grandma and grandpa have a hand in rocking the cradle today may prevent headaches tomorrow.

Recent studies indicate that grandparents provide a crucial role in the healthy emotional development of children, particularly in a rootless, mobile society.

The neglected status of grandparents and the elderly was a major concern for Michael Goldgar of Atlanta, Ga., and Marian McQuade of Oak Hill, W. Va., both grandparents. In 1973, they joined forces in securing legislative sanction of Grandparents Day. By 1978, Congress passed a bill, permitting President Carter to proclaim the first national Grandparents Day, to be celebrated the first Sunday after Labor Day. This year it falls on Sept. 13.

According to Goldgar, executive secretary for the National Council for the Observance of Grandparents Day, the event is gradually gaining in popularity in the midst of some controversy.

Dr. Arthur Kornhaber, a child psychiatrist in Westchester County, N.Y., welcomes the attention given to grandparents, even it it's just for one day.

"I can understand the misunderstanding on the part of the public regarding Grandparents Day, but it's not a contrived commercial holiday," said Kornhaber. "Grandparents have special privileges in different cultures, but there's no rite of passage in America. The holiday forces us to think about aging."

Kornhaber, 48, has strong views regarding the role of grandparents in society and has authored the book "Grandparents and Grandchildren: The Vital Connection."

His interest in the subject came after working with emotionally troubled children who had severe relationship problems with their parents and peers but not with their grandparents.

What followed was a random follow-up study of 600 grandparents and grandchildren. He found that, within the group, 85 percent of the grandchildren had little or no contact with their grandparents.

The most significant outcome of Kornhaber's research revealed that those children who enjoyed close ties with their grandparents had a deep sense of history and a commitment to their family roots. Grandparents, as living ancestors, also were shown to provide grandchildren with a great security and immunity against conforming to the demands of modern society.

According to Kornhaber, grandparents offer an unpressured relationship and unconditional acceptance, in contrast to parents.

Kornhaber regrets that there is such little regard for grandparents in a modern world.

DEAR ABBY

In matters regarding sex, cousin is all thumbs

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: When I was about 8, a cousin of mine who was about 13 at the time asked me to mess around with him. I didn't know anything about sex then, and we fooled around for about 15 minutes a couple of times. We also did some heavy petting, I guess you would call it.

I am now 13 and have not done any messing around since then. My cousin, who is now in 11th grade, said he learned all about sex in biology class. He said he can tell if a girl is a virgin or not by feeling her left thumb. He felt mine and said I was not a virgin. He said he is worried for me and, since he is responsible, he advised me not to go swimming in a public pool. He said I might get pregnant. Is he a liar or what? Am I still a virgin? How can I tell for sure?

I hope you won't think my questions are stupid. — DESPERATE AND WORRIED IN ALABAMA

DEAR DESPERATE: No question is stupid. I would guess that you are still a virgin, but you would need a physical examination by a doctor to confirm it. However, whether a girl is a virgin or not, she is in no danger of becoming pregnant by merely swimming in a public pool.

DEAR ABBY: Everybody has an Achilles heel. Yours, Dear Abby, is other people's smoking. Please be fair and give equal time to smokers.

When I entered the service in 1942, I smoked my first cigarette. When I quit in 1971, I was smoking 2 1/2 packs a day plus 6 or 7 cigars. In all that time, only one person complained about my smoking. She was a pretty young thing who asked me not to smoke around her because smoke "irritated" her eyes and made them itch and water. (Request granted.)

Now that the crusade against smokers has become popular, everywhere you go, people are complaining about smoke. Recently in a fine restaurant, a rude woman yelled at me across two tables, "Put out that cigar — you are in a public place!"

Abby, since smoke is the same as it was 50 years ago, it's obvious that PEOPLE have changed. Therefore, I can only infer that 90 percent of the so-called "irritation" must be psychosomatic. — MORT IN N.J.

DEAR MORT: Psychosomatic, my eye! However, you're right on two counts. Smoke IS the same (it's still an irritant) and PEOPLE have indeed changed. When they're denied clean air by smokers, they speak up. Fifty years ago they were too timid to say anything.

DEAR ABBY: Why do all those exercise programs on TV have trim, muscular men and thin women with beautiful figures leading the exercises? We fatties would feel more like exercising right along with them if they were overweight and out of shape like we are.

Obviously, those beautiful people were never fat, so what's the point? It's a lot easier to stay thin when you've been that way all your life.

I would like to see a woman who is 40 pounds overweight (like me) doing those exercises! It would give me hope. And if after a couple of months I could see some improvement in her, I would be inspired to follow her example.

Phooey on these skin-and-bone beauties! I don't even even turn on the TV to watch them anymore! — CHUNKY IN CHARLESTON

DEAR CHUNKY: I see your point. Now let's hope some sharp ad agency picks up the cue. Of course it would mean a limited career for the overweight exercise stars, who would have to be replaced by a new "fatso" every year.

(If you put off writing letters because you don't know what to say, get Abby's booklet "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send $1 plus a long, stamped (35 cents) self-addressed envelope to ABBY, Letters Booklet, 12060 Hawthorne Blvd., Suite 5000, Hawthorne, Calif. 90250.)

Psychology of color

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

After looking over a so-called Color Selector System for homes, I must admit to a certain degree of mental clutter.

Whatever happened to plain, ordinary colors, such as blue, red, green and yellow?

A recent movement to incorporate a playful use of color in new architectural design is gaining adherents, its influence spreading to owners of existing and older houses.

Pastel shades on exterior walls are being used to enhance and symbolize a building's relationship to nature. Bolder hues are being applied to exaggerate a special design element, suggest depth or, in some cases, simply to gain attention.

Colors that have been unabashedly splashed on the insides of homes now are making their way to the outside.

To find out more about all this, I carefully went through the Color Selector System, actually a catalog put out by Hunter Douglas Residential Building Products of Durham, N.C., only to find myself enmeshed in Cottage White, Satin Beige, Cameo Green, Potomac Blue, Dove Gray and Sun Yellow, to mention just a few. Since this catalog was compiled principally by design color expert Faber Birren, he seemed the logical person to question.

The concept of the system, he said, is not only to guide homeowners in selecting well-coordinated exterior colors, but also, if need be, to aid them in color camouflage techniques that can be used to mask structural imperfections.

To give a boxy house the appearance of being more angular, he said, a strong contrasting color should be used on the gutter fascia and corner posts. This forms a continuous outline of color which defines the shape of the wall surface.

In a particular case, in order to give a small house the illusion of being much larger, Birren produced this orchestration of colors:

Sun Yellow siding, Potomac Blue trim, Barn Red garage door, also Barn Red Shutters and Sapphire Blue front door. The bold color on the front door was intended as a focal point to draw attention to the entry and beckon inward.

One-fourth processed

About three-fourths of America's commercial vegetable production goes to fresh-market outlets, while one-fourth is processed.

Loan for Costa Rica

The World Bank has approved a $26 million loan to help Costa Rica finance a water-supply project in the capital, San Jose. Some 478,000 people, including about 143,000 poor residents, are expected to benefit.

Bows 20,000 years ago

Paleolithic drawings of archers indicate that bows and arrows were invented at least 20,000 years ago. As an organized sport, archery dates back at least as far as the 5th century A.D.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Exercisers have fewer heart attacks

Dear Dr. Solomon: Do people who exercise really get fewer heart attacks than those who don't? I hear a lot of people say this, but they can never tell me the source of their information. — Sandy, Bellingham, Wash.

Dear Sandy: Various studies have indicated that men who engage in vigorous exercise do have fewer heart attacks than those who do not exercise. What is not known, however, is whether people who exercise are healthier to begin with, and that is the reason for fewer heart attacks.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've heard conflicting stories about the death rate for infants in the United States. According to a television news report, the rate has fallen significantly in recent years and is now the lowest it has ever been. Yet, at a party I attended recently, a public health official who was there as a guest remarked that this country is not doing too well when it comes to infant mortality. How can the average person decide who is correct? — Vera, St. Louis, Mo.

Dear Vera: Depending on your point of view, they can both be correct. Over the past 50 years, the death rate for infants has fallen 80 percent in the United States. And for the year ending June, 1980, the rate was the lowest in our history — 12.8 deaths per 1,000 live births.

On the other hand, the United States does not measure up very well in this regard when compared with the records of other nations. Of 25 countries with populations of at least two million people, in 1978 this country ranked 16th in infant mortality rates. We may conclude, therefore, that although much has been accomplished, there is still much to be done and room for improvement.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am pregnant with my first child, and have no interest in natural childbirth; however, I do want to do all I can to make sure my child is healthy. Would it be better to avoid having an anesthetic at the time I give birth? — Frances, Valparaiso, Ind.

Dear Frances: Although some say that the use of anesthesia may prolong labor and subject the newborn child to some risk, there are no long-term controlled studies that bear this out. One investigation that was done about 25 years ago did indicate some motor impairment in babies born to mothers who received anesthesia during labor, but the design of that particular piece of research was poor, and the conclusions open to question. Whether anesthesia prolongs labor is another controversial subject.

Those who favor obstetric anesthesia, such as Dr. Brett B. Gutsche, of the Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania, maintain that it eliminates much of the stress to which both the mother and fetus are subjected during childbirth, and decreases oxygen consumption by the mother. I suggest you sit down with your obstetrician for a detailed discussion of the issue; he may be able to indicate why one or another approach would be more advisable in your particular case.

Report documents election discrimination

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A Mexican-American councilman from Houston says it is too early to tell how the Reagan administration will respond to complaints that whites are harassing and intimidating minority voters and candidates.

A report by the U.S. Civil Rights Commission on Wednesday purports to document "white resistance and hostility by some state and local officials to increased minority participation in virtually every aspect of the electoral process."

"In judging the Reagan administration, the crucial time is not here yet ... but it will be very shortly," Ben Reyes, councilman and former state House member, told a news conference.

A decision on Reagan's attitude toward minorities' voting complaints would come after appeals reach the federal level in a year to a 18 months, Reyes said.

"There is no reason to believe it (the Reagan administration) is backing away at enforcing the law," said Texas Rural Legal Aid lawyer George Korbel.

The commission's report on the 1965 Voting Rights Act was released Wednesday in Austin, Atlanta and Washington.

Two Mexican-Americans, J. Richard Avena of San Antonio and Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi, told the news conference Texas "old-timers" who run elections are among the barriers minorities must overcome to vote.

Avena, regional director of the Commission on Civil Rights, said he complained to a South Texas judge that not enough Mexican-Americans were being appointed election judges, and County Judge O.B. Gates of Jourdanton responded by letter which said, in part:

"The majority of the people who run for election judges are old-timers at running elections."

"It's these old-timers that I'm worried about," Avena said.

"You have to remember," said Truan, "that a lot of people are not bilingual and don't look kindly at people who need (language) assistance to vote."

In Atascosa and Frio counties, the report said, minorities "reported incidents in which they were harassed or intimidated in their efforts to vote."

In San Antonio during the 1980 presidential election, the report said, an election official refused to allow a voter to take a marked sample ballot into the voting booth. The report said the man insisted that he had a right to do so and asked the official to call the Texas secretary of state's office for clarification.

Company vague about stolen electronics

BY TIM REITERMAN
Hearst Feature Service

SAN FRANCISCO -- A month ago, thousands of components, some with possible military weapons applications, disappeared from a Santa Clara, Calif., laboratory that performs tests for many electronics firms.

The stolen material may be something that the Soviets would love to see or be no more technologically advanced than items purchased over the counter at electronics stores or popped into a computer game.

Some of the 14 electronics firms victimized have been so secretive that federal and local investigators still do not know precisely what has been stolen, what it is worth, what it looks like.

When police ask about the applications of the stolen items, they get vague answers from some companies or are told that the information is classified.

Santa Clara Detective Sgt. Mike Fries is skeptical about initial theft estimates of $200,000 to $500,000 to $1 million, which inspired many news stories.

Those husky figures were little more than guesses, based on faulty information, he said. "Someone blew it all out of proportion."

For one thing, he pointed out, the initial report mistakenly listed one firm as reporting 2,000 expensive missing units when, in fact, the company already had picked up the units from the testing lab. There was some duplication in the first inventory too.

Even now, there are too many unknowns for even basic arithmetic.

"One company lost 38 pieces at $8,000," Fries said reading his reports. "One lost 663 pieces at $43,000. That's $65 per unit. One company had about a thousand pieces, and no real value on it. But several companies have yet to determine the prices because they don't know.

"All I want is a nice accurate report of what happened so I can put to bed rumors of $1 million," he said.

Instead, Fries -- and the FBI for that matter -- have been investigating a burglary of an uncertain number of electronic components with an uncertain value and application.

They do know that the theft occurred at NDT (Non-destructive Testing) Laboratories sometime between Aug. 7 and Aug 10, perpetrated by unknown persons. Law enforcement sources said it was the first burglary ever at the 17-year-old privately owned firm.

Norma Liddell, a board member and wife of the owner, said that the building did not even have an alarm system at the time of the burglary, which the company estimates resulted in about a $200,000 loss.

"There seemed to be no need in the past," she said, noting that precautions have now been taken.

The company does not know the applications of the materials it tests, but Lidell noted that the items have been tested at the companies and are sent to the lab for more extensive and stringent testing.

Taken were several thousand capacitors, diodes, integrated circuits, transistors, microcircuits, micro amps and other parts that either were ready for delivery or were recently dropped off at the lab.

The firms that lost them include National Semiconductor, Hewlett-Packard, Viking, Aerotech, Signetics and Watkins Johnson, among others.

'Boy in box' gets regular classroom

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Raul Espino Jr. will abandon the plexiglass box that segregated him from his classmates and resume his studies in the air-conditioned comfort of a private school.

Raul's parents agreed Thursday, after a federal judge approved the plan, to accept the local school district's offer to pay the $1,300 annual private school tuition for the boy confined to a wheelchair and unable to control his body temperature because of an automobile accident.

"I feel we should go by what the judge rules," said Ana Espino. "Finally my son will be in a fine school where he'll have his education and he won't have to be in that box."

THE handicapped youth, who doctors say must remain in environments between 68 and 72 degrees, will attend the Windsor School after a year of fighting to get out of a 5-foot-by-5-foot cubicle built for him at Egly Elementary School.

"I think I'm going to make friends over there and it'll be OK," said Raul, who has gained national publicity as the "boy in the box."

Mrs. Espino earlier had rejected the private school offer and said she wanted her son in a public school.

U.S. District Judge Filemon Vela had given the school district until Sept. 18 to provide the 7-year-old with "an air-conditioned environment wherein he can fully interact with his non-handicapped peers."

SCHOOL TRUSTEES voted last week to pay Raul's tuition at the air-conditioned private school, and Vela said Thursday the tuition offer fulfilled his original order.

The school system built the cubicle, cooled with a window unit, when Raul entered first grade last year at Egly. His parents complained that the box segregated their son and unnecessarily restricted him.

They filed suit in federal court after losing rounds before the local school board and the State Board of Education in Austin. The Espinos cited a federal law requiring handicapped children to be placed in the "least restrictive environment."

His first grade teacher estimated he spent about 75 percent of his time in the box. He generally stayed with the rest of his classmates most of the winter and early spring months when he can tolerate outdoor temperatures in this semi-tropical part of the state.

Superintendent Raul Besteiro testified in federal court that air-conditioning Raul's classroom would open Pandora's box because other parents and teachers would object to the preferential treatment.

SCHOOL officials estimated it would cost $5,700 to install central air conditioning in the Egly classroom.

The local school district suffers from a low tax base, combined with unexpected repairs needed after Hurricane Allen and overcrowding caused in part by the continuing enrollment of illegal alien children.

A school district committee that handles special placement of handicapped students will meet Monday to consider the Windsor arrangement.

Jerry Garica, attorney for the Espinos, said Raul could be enrolled at the new school by next week.

"It's kind of a victory for everybody," said Garcia, a Texas Rural Legal Aid attorney. "Raul is out of the box. It's a victory for the school board because it was their idea."

HE SAID his clients at first were suspicious of the private school offer.

"I don't think they had anything against private schools per se," he said. "They had been fighting for so long though. Now, they're just thinking what will happen when Raul reaches sixth grade."

The Windsor School this fall enrolled 95 pupils in grades K through 5. The new, one-story structure has six classrooms grouped around a library. Each class opens to an outdoor learning center with a garden and space for science exhibits, said Co-Director Peggy Bozarth. Two staff members have masters' degrees in special education.

School attorney Tony Martinez said he was glad the Espinos will accept the private school arrangment.

"It's a tremendous opportunity. The whole facility is air-conditioned — the hallways, the library, the classrooms," said Martinez.

Vela's ruling came Thursday after a brief hearing in which Martinez asked the judge if the private school would fulfill the school district's obligation.

Since the case has been publicized, school officials have received offers from individuals wanting to pay the costs of air-conditioning a classroom. One woman from Pennsylvania contacted the superintendent with an offer.

A local air conditioning company said it would donate time, labor and equipment to install a system.

Two killed, three hurt in shooting

SPRINGFIELD, Fla. (AP) — A 28-year-old man charged with killing his ex-wife and a customer in a food store where she worked said, "I'll kill you and everything in here," before shooting, a witness said.

"I looked in the store and saw bodies all over the floor," said Springfield Police Chief Donnie Ziglar, first on the scene after the Thursday afternoon shooting. Three others were wounded.

Larry Harold Gurganus, 28, of Panama City was charged with two counts of first-degree murder and other felony charges were pending, said Bay County Sheriff's Sgt. Jerome Hughes

Gurganus was scheduled to appear in circuit court today for a bond hearing. He was being held at the Bay County Jail.

A witness said Gurganus burst into a small food store here and opened fire after his 26-year-old ex-wife, Jackie, refused to return to him.

"You're going with me," Gurganus told his former wife, a clerk at the store, said 70-year-old Roland Smith, who survived the attack.

"No, I'm not," Smith quoted her as saying.

"If you don't go with me, I'll kill you and everything that's in here," Smith said the gunman responded.

He said the outraged man ordered customers to lie on the floor and shot Mrs. Gurganus in the head at close range. Gurganus then quickly turned his gun on another clerk and other bystanders, police said.

When the shooting ended, Mrs. Gurganus and customer John W. Davis were mortally wounded. Paul Edward Greene, 54, also a store clerk, was wounded in the head, but survived and was listed in critical condition at Bay Memorial Medical Center in Panama City.

The unhushed world of the Bulldogs and Rebels

'Dogs, Mustangs shore up defenses for 'tails' shootout

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Sports Writer

ANDREWS — Midland High and Andrews were among the most prolific scoring teams in West Texas last week as the 1981 high school football season got underway, but MHS coach Pat Culpepper and Andrews boss Bill Shipman were anchoring down the chin straps this week in expectation of a defensive battle when the two teams square off here today at 8 p.m.

The Bulldogs of Midland High scored 31 points in its debut against Amarillo Tascosa last Friday while the AAAA Mustangs rolled off 46 points against AAA Seminole. The two teams combined for 77 points and one would think first hand that the pyrotechnic experts would be considering the demolition of the Mustang Bowl scoreboard.

THE ONLY trouble with that is that both teams have shown some powerful defensive skills early in the year and neither team expects to walk up and down the field without a little blood spilling along the way. Both are physical and yardage has a price to pay. The game may be heard locally on KCRS radio.

It was only a year ago that Culpepper made his infamous "we're going to kick their tails" statement and the Bulldogs paid the price when Andrews pulled the upset. However, things are much more subdued around MHS this year as the teams prepare for the annual "tails" shootout.

"I learned my lesson last year with Brownwood and Andrews," Culpepper notes. "The good AAAA teams are ahead of us at this stage of the season because of the extra week in pads at the beginning of the season. Andrews is well coached and they know what they are doing defensively. If it turns out to be a defensive struggle, they may have the advantage because we are still learning our new eight man setup. They know what they are doing and have a lot of people back on defense."

Shipman feels that the statement by Culpepper last year, which got Andrews emotionally high for the game, will have no bearing on this year's game. "I don't even think our kids remember that incident. And besides its a tough test for a 4A team to play on even terms with the 5A schools. We just hope to get out of the game with some experience because we start district play next week."

CULPEPPER is also impressed with Andrews' offense. "I think Bill (Shipman) must have gone to Edmonton, Canada, to get some of that stuff they use. They have a lot of motion and shifts — a lot of movement, but it hasn't hurt their execution. That's a great mark for the team."

The Andrews offense doesn't have the great Notre Dame runner Van Pearcy back this year, but quarterback Keith Brooks, with touchdown runs of 12, 13, 25 and 59 yards last week to go with 177 yards rushing, already has Andrews fans saying, "Van Who?" And tailback Brent Petross had 132 yards rushing.

"I hope Brooks is the team captain Friday night for Andrews so we can shake his hand. It may be the only time we ever get to touch him," Culpepper quipped. "He is certianly one of the best quarterbacks in the state."

Shipman adds, "I certianly hope Keith stays healthy all year because I think he has a chance to be the premier quarterback in the state. Even without Van Pearcy, we may be a little better offensively over all, but we don't have the depth we had last year. Of course, I would like to have Van back."

Despite the prospects of facing the stiff Mustang defense, Culpepper was delighted with the debut of his new "Dogbone" offense last week. "I'm very happy with our football team right now. They don't have an unrealistic confidence. All eight backs performed very well against Tascosa, but I was most pleased with their blocking," he said.

Culpepper was also pleased with the showing of receivers Wally Kleine and Bobby Gotavac. Also center Matt Dill and guard Victor Salas were impressive in the offensive line.

DEFENSIVELY, Culpepper noted that giant 234-pound guard Joe Goebel probably had the best game of his career and tackle Danny Rider turned in a good showing. Tackle Richard Magness is also back to full speed and will be back in the defensive lineup.

Andrews has six returning starters to the defensive unit with defensive back Jaime Gonzales, cornerback Petross, linebackers Adam Smith and Marty Slaton, defensive tackle Jeff Ashabranner and nose guard Rumaldo Falcon.

"I went out on the limb and picked Lee to win the district this year, and they couldn't score on Andrews' top unit. I think that says something of Andrews' offense," Culpepper stated.

Midland High will be without quarterback Scott Sears and fullback Bruce Sears this week. "Scott and Bruce have apparently decided not to play anymore. They have not been at practice all week and will not make the trip to Andrews. Mark Page and Raymond Chambers will take their Rebels load muskets for Tiger

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

The Midland Lee Rebels are loading their muskets for Tiger this week, Snyder Tiger that is, and it's a cat that, according to head coach Spike Dykes, could be a dangerous one to hunt.

The Snyder Tigers are coming into Memorial Stadium tonight at 8 seeking to avenge last year's 17-7 loss to the Rebels. It was a tough battle then and Coach Dykes expects it to be the same now.

"Snyder traditionally has played Midland very tough (both high schools) through the years," said Dykes. "The Lee game has always been a tough one for Lee. They've had an extra week of practice (also an extra scrimmage game this season) so I expect another knock down drag out affair."

One of the key areas for the Rebels is their running game with the talents of Calvin Riggs at fullback and Terry Thompson at tailback. There is also a third back who has proved to be a motivating force for Lee, senior tailback Troy Barber.

If not for the exploits of Barber last week against Killeen's Kangaroos, Lee could very well have returned home with a 0-0 tie under their belts instead of the 6-0 victory. The speedy tailback took a pitchout from quarterback Bart Ryan and came down the left sideline untouched for a 66-yard touchdown. On the night, Barber led all backs with 103 yards.

"Just now at this stage of our season we have a lot of improving to do if we're goint to beat Snyder," said Dykes. "We were pleased with our Killeen game in a number of areas and especially our defensive output and our kicking game, but we've got to get a whole lot better offensively."

"Offensively we lack consistency, execution and the ability to hold on to the football," he said, and added "but the great thing about that is not one of those areas can't be improved on."

Though coach Dykes was pleased with the kicking game, he felt it has a long way to go before the Rebels have it where it needs to be, and that the offensive line "certainly has to do a better job with blocking."

Blocking by the front line will play an important role for the Rebels against Snyder tonight because, according to Dykes, one of the Tiger strong points is defending the run.

"I would say their strength lies in their defense at the present time," said Dykes. "Defensively they play good defense with a Split 6. They've been very stingy on defense this year. Big Spring (Snyder's opponent in its season opener last week, a 14-13 loss) has got a great offense, one of the best running backs in the state of Texas, and Snyder did a great job in holding them to a small output."

Offensively, the Tigers will be "running a Straight-T and it's based around fullback Ray Jeffery, 170-pounds, and he's a good football player, a tough running back. Their quarterback does a good job, David Nicholson. He's a good runner and a good passer. Against Big Spring they were very consistent with their offense."

We're not a good football team yet," said Snyder coach George Byerly. "We still have to improve. We're a very inexperienced team at the moment. Midland Lee has a very physical team and we are looking forward to a tough ball game, we're looking forward to playing them."

The game may be heard locally on KBAT-AM radio.

Going into tonight's game, Lee has only one player who is questionable to play, cornerback Kevin Taylor who is nursing an injured foot. Coach Dykes feels there is a possibility he could play, but won't know for sure until game time. Other than that, the Rebels are healthy and ready for the Tiger hunt.

Dolphins put a 30-10 hurt on Steelers

MIAMI (AP) — It's been a while since the Pittsburgh Steelers have been forced to look elsewhere in the National Football League to find the winning formula.

But after a pair of losses to open the 1981 season, Coach Chuck Noll says it might not be a bad idea to follow the lead of the young Miami Dolphins.

"We're going to have to play better, that's obvious, if we're going to correct our situation," Noll said Thursday night after his team dropped a 30-10 decision to the Dolphins in a nationally televised game before a sellout crowd of 74,190 at the Orange Bowl.

"We can use Miami as a model because they are playing very well together. It was a total team victory and they impressed me very much," Noll added. "We really couldn't do anything against them."

Second-year quarterback David Woodley ran for one touchdown and threw for another and rookie Tommy Vigorito returned a punt 87 yards for a score to propel Miami, 2-0, to its first triumph over the Steelers in eight years.

Fullback Andra Franklin, the Dolphins second-round draft choice from Nebraska, bulled his way to one touchdown and Uwe von Schamann booted a 32-yard field goal as Pittsburgh saw its record slip to 0-2, the team's worst start since 1970.

The aging Steelers, who won four Super Bowls during the 1970s, again were victimized by mistakes. After seven turnovers in their season-opening 37-33 loss to Kansas City last Sunday, two Terry Bradshaw interceptions led to Dolphin scores Thursday night.

"There's no real answer to what we're going through and it's probably nothing a win wouldn't cure," said Bradshaw, who was under constant pressure from the Dolphins defense. "It's correctable. If it was one or two things it would be easier, but it has a domino effect.

"Last week it was fumbles and tonight it was missed (blocking) assignments," Bradshaw added. "We can do all the hard work of getting prepared to go out there and do the job, but we've just got to relax and play once we get out there."

Miami built a 13-10 halftime lead on Woodley's quarterback sneak and Franklin's 1-yard plunge in the second quarter, then broke the game open when Woodley tossed a 13-yard scoring pass to running back Tony Nathan and Vigorito returned a Craig Colquitt punt for a touchdown within a five-minute span of the third period for a 27-10 lead.

"He outkicked his coverage because there was enough room for me to run across the field," said Vigorito, a fifth-round draft choice from Virginia. "I just ran around the corner and didn't have do anything but run."

Rookie David Trout kicked a 23-yard, first-quarter field goal and Bradshaw hurled a 32-yard touchdown pass to wide receiver Jim Smith in the second period to account for the Pittsburgh scoring.

Woodley completed 14 of 34 passes for 161 yards and was intercepted once. Bradshaw hit 14 of 32 aerials for 210 yards, but had two passes picked off by Miami safety Glenn Blackwood.

Bradshaw also was sacked four times for 39 yards in losses.

"As far as we are concerned, we just plain had too many breakdowns in our pass protection," said Noll.

Nathan, whose second-half fumble was critical in the Dolphins 23-10 loss at Pittsburgh last season, caught eight passes for 84 yards and rushed 10 times for 77 yards.

District 5-5A members seek to improve records

District 5-5A teams were on the winning end in seven of eight games involving league members last week and they are hoping to add a few more scalps tonight.

Defending state champion Odessa Permian escaped with a 21-14 decision last week against a strong El Paso Coronado unit, but the Panthers may have an easier time of it tonight when they host Amarillo High, a team that lost to 5-5A's Odessa High, 19-0 last week.

Odessa High travels to El Paso for a shootout with Burgess, a 20-0 victor over New Mexico Mayfield last week.

Abilene Cooper, another 5-5A member expected to make a strong run at the title this year, ran into a stubborn Brownwood club last week, but came away with a 14-13 victory when the Lions could not come up with a two-point conversion try. Cooper will test Wichita Falls on foreign turf this week. Wichita Falls lost by a 9-7 count to Lubbock Coronado last week.

Big Spring, a narrow 14-13 winner over Snyder last week, travels to face another AAAA squad this week in Sweetwater. Sweetwater defeated Clyde, 28-20, last week.

San Angelo, who lost all 10 of its games last year, got off to a fast start in 1981 with a 33-7 win over Austin High. The Bobcats will be out to raise that to two in a row when they face Austin Anderson, a 21-0 loser to Victoria last week.

Abilene High was the only 5-5A squad to suffer a defeat Friday when they fell to Wichita Falls Rider, 20-6. The Eagles may have another tough test tonight when they entertain Weatherford.

PGA pros romp around 'playground' course

SUTTON, Mass. (AP) — Ray Floyd, the PGA's leading money winner this year, and his fellow touring golf pros are raving about the Pleasant Valley Country Club course — and deservedly so.

With the fairways manicured and the greens much firmer than in past years, the 7,119-yard scenic layout was like a playground for many golfers Thursday in the opening round of the $300,000 Pleasant Valley Jimmy Fund Classic.

Forty three in the field of 156 broke par 71 as the 72-hole tourney, with a first-place prize of $54,000, got under way. Another 18 equalled par, and 23 were just one over par.

Starting in early morning, with hardly a breeze, Lanny Wadkins, a 31-year-old PGA millionaire but winless on the tour since 1979, fired a 66 for a two-stroke lead.

Then came a 12-way tie for second, a group including Tom Kite whose 68 bettered his PGA leading average of 69.88 strokes per round this year.

Twelve players also were bracketed at 69, including Floyd, a former winner here who has earned $346,000 in official prize money this year.

A total of 18 players were at 70.

Mets win Texas League title

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Jackson leftfielder Rusty Tillman slammed two home runs and a triple Thursday night to boost the Mets 13-1 past San Antonio for their first Texas League baseball championship.

Jackson collected 16 hits in the error-free slugfest for 13 runs, the most scored this year.

Brewers crumble with LeFlore on base

By The Associated Press

It's only natural that Ron LeFlore, base-stealer extraordinaire, thinks that pitchers should pretty much ignore runners when they're on first base. Still, LeFlore might have a point.

If Milwaukee's Reggie Cleveland hadn't been so intent on holding the speedy Chicago White Sox outfielder close to first base in the seventh inning Thursday night, the Brewers might not have seen a 6-6 tie develop into a 12-6 loss.

But Cleveland couldn't take his mind — or his throws — away from first base. In all, the Milwaukee pitcher sent 13 pickoff attempts at LeFlore before dealing three pitches to Tony Bernazard at the plate.

"I don't think a pitcher should give that much attention to a baserunner, especially a baserunner who's going to steal anyway," LeFlore said. "He should concentrate on the hitter. Their defense broke down after that."

Did it ever! LeFlore stole his 26th base when Cleveland finally got around to pitching to Bernazard and Milwaukee catcher Ted Simmons' throw went into center field as he tried to throw out LeFlore. Paul Molitor picked up the ball and fired wide to home plate as LeFlore scored. Both Simmons and Molitor were charged with errors that paved the way to Chicago's four-run seventh.

"He (Cleveland) just kind of threw the ballgame away at that point," LeFlore said. "They stood back on their heels. They broke down and we scored a few more runs. And his throwing to first all that time has to take something out of his arm. His fastball is not going to be as quick to the plate."

Bernazard then walked and Mike Squires, who bunted, was safe at first on a high throw by Cleveland for another error. A single by Greg Luzinski filled the bases and two runs scored when Carlton Fisk's grounder skipped between third baseman Don Money's legs for another error. Pinch-runner Jay Loviglio stole third and scored on Wayne Nordhagen's sacrifice fly. Chicago had one hit in the inning.

Bill Almon hit a three-run homer and Nordhagen a bases-empty shot earlier in the game for the White Sox. Lamarr Hoyt, 7-3, earned the victory with four perfect innings of relief.

Simmons had a three-run homer for the Brewers.

Indians 4, Orioles 1

John Denny didn't pitch a shutout, which was surprising enough. Even more shocking was his willingness to talk with the press after he and Dan Spillner combined for a six-hitter. Denny struck out a career-high 10 batters but his consecutive scoreless streak came to an end after 342-3 innings — including three straight shutouts — when Ken Singleton singled home Al Bumbry in the eighth inning.

The Indians scored in the fourth on a sacrifice fly by Toby Harrah; in the sixth when Rick Manning doubled, took third after a fly ball and scored on Mike Hargrove's sacrifice fly; in the seventh on a double by Von Hayes and Pat Kelly's single and on a Tippy Martinez wild pitch in the ninth.

"I wasn't disappointed when the run scored," Denny said. "I'm just thankful the good Lord allowed me to throw the scoreless innings. I didn't want to come out of the game ... I was a little tired. I lost the snap on the ball I had early in the game. And, I lost it very quick. It wasn't a gradual thing."

Blue Jays 2, Mariners 0

Jesse Barfield slammed a solo home run in the seventh inning, giving him hits in all eight of his major league games, and Luis Leal and Joey McLaughlin combined for the shutout.

"Barfield is going to be one great ballplayer." said Blue Jays Manager Bobby Mattick, who was ejected from the game for arguing a call with third base umpire Durwood Merrill in the fifth. "I knew him as a kid when he was 17 — when I was a scout.

"As well as being a good hitter he's a great defensive outfielder with a great arm. I'm not worried about him getting a fat head, he's not that kind of a kid."

The home run was Barfield's second since being called up by the Jays on Sept. 2 from Knoxville of the Southern League.

Cardinals obtain Bair from Reds

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The St. Louis Cardinals announced the trade Thursday of two players for right-handed pitcher Doug Bair of the Cincinnati Reds.

Bair, a veteran of five years in the major leagues, is 2-2 this season with a 5.77 ERA in 24 games. Primarily a reliever, he struck out 16 batters in the 39 innings pitched, but gave up 28 runs, five home runs, and 17 walks.

In return, the Reds will get infielder Neil Fiala, who was called up from the minor leagues Sept. 1 and had no hits in three times at bat. At Springfield, Fiala hit .323 in 130 games this year. He drove in 71 runs with 149 hits, including four triples and four homes, and stole 16 bases.

The other player in the deal was identified early Thursday morning as pitcher Joe Edelen, a 25-year-old right-hander with a 1-0 record with St. Louis in 13 relief appearances this season.

Connors rips Teltscher for shot at Bjorn Borg

NEW YORK (AP) — "I can't draw you a blueprint. I'm not an architect," says Jimmy Connors, tennis player.

He easily beat Eliot Teltscher 6-3, 6-1, 6-2, Thursday night to advance to Saturday's semifinals in the U.S. Open tennis championships.

Connors, 29, who last won this tournament in 1978, said he has no plan for his next opponent — Bjorn Borg — even though theirs is one of the greatest rivalries ever in tennis.

That might be a dangerous approach. But Connors explained that he never plays according to a game plan.

"I don't know what I'm going to do yet. I won't even think about it before Saturday," he said. "That's a cause for ulcers, and I'm too young for that."

The second-seeded Borg also reached the semifinals Thursday, with a 7-6, 6-3, 6-7, 7-6 victory over ninth-seeded Roscoe Tanner.

John McEnroe, this year's Wimbledon champion who is trying for his third straight Open title, plays 15th-seeded Vitas Gerulaitis in Saturday's other men's semifinal.

Today, the women played their semifinals. Defending champion Chris Evert Lloyd faced Martina Navratilova, whom she had beaten 28 of the 41 times they had met, and third-seeded Tracy Austin played No.11 Barbara Potter.

Connors, who also won the Open in 1974 and 1976, has had what he calls a dry spell in this tourney. He has reached the semifinals every year since 1973, but the past two years he has not made the final.

"I want to win the Open more than I want to win any other tournament," he said. "I live in this country and it means more to me than any other."

Even more than Wimbledon, which he won in 1974.

This year, he ran into Borg in the semifinals at Wimbledon. Borg won 0-6, 4-6, 6-3, 6-0, 6-4.

"I tried to forget that real quick," Connors said Thursday night.

Borg leads their rivalry 14 matches to eight. More significantly, Borg has won the last nine, including two this year.

Borg, who has won Wimbledon five times, the French Open six times but never the U.S. Open, is not hesitant to discuss how he will play Connors. He just doesn't offer much detail.

place Friday. Scott and Bruce both had good games against Tascosa."

With the Sears brothers out, the Bulldogs will go with Allen Chick at quarterback and he tossed two TD passes last week. Since Chick has been working with the backfield consisting of fullback Byron Campbell and halfbacks Ricky Madrid and John Hibbitts, Culpepper will use that backfield as the starting unit this week. However, Wesley Williams, who led all Bulldog rushers with 61 yards last week, and Alex Mata will again get plenty of playing time at the halfback slots. The backfield is one area where Culpepper has some depth to work with.

The first annual Septemberfest Jog & Grog Road Race will be held Saturday over the course shown above. Registration begins at 6:30 a.m. Saturday at J.E. Borron's at 103 N. Colorado. The event is open to the public and there will be two races of two miles and 10 kilometers.

5-5A looks a bit stronger

TED BATTLES BATTLE SCENE

If the results of opening weekend were any indication, the District 5-5A race could be more competitive than a year ago.

The 7-1 record against outside foes was the best since 1978 and only the third time that the league has been 7-1 since 1975. And the only time the league raised the broom (an 8-0 sweep) coming into port after opening night in the last 10 years was in 1974.

Abilene High was the only lodge member failing to do as well or better than a year ago when the league was 6-2. The Eagles lost to Wichita Falls Rider, 20-6, in a Saturday night game, a team it had beaten 28-0 a year earlier.

BIGGEST turn-around was by San Angelo, which whipped Austin 33-7, reversing that 20-10 loss of a year ago. This is Jimmy Keeling's second year at the Central helm and the Bobcats, a long-time contender in the league until they fell on lean years in the late 1970s, have been a sleeping giant waiting for the fairy princess to pinch a cheek and wake them up. This could be the beginning. Maybe Anderson will give some indication. The Bobcats lost to the Austin school 17-14 last year. More likely, however, San Angelo's game with Brownwood will render a more reliable portent of things to come.

ODESSA PERMIAN beat El Paso Coronado, like it always does, and Odessa High blanked Amarillo, but neither margin was as decisive as a year ago. Permian beat Coronado 24-0 a year ago, the first of four straight season-launching shutouts, but this year it was 21-14, which perhaps hints that the defending state champions are mortal this year. That isn't to suggest, however, that mere mortals can't win the 5-5A title.

Abilene Cooper and Big Spring seem to be in the same old rut. Big Spring beat Snyder 13-12, which means the Steers aren't as strong in the PAT department. A year ago they won 14-13. Cooper, on the other hand, has a better kicking game. The Cougars beat the Lions 14-13, whereas a year ago it was 13-12.

MIDLAND LEE, a 13-7 loser to Killeen here a year ago, went "Down Under" to beat the Kangaroos, 6-0, in a game that had Spike Dykes worried last summer. At the time he said, he'd rather face someone with less speed, someone he was sure he could whip, "but we've got to learn to cope with speed sometime, even if it means a loss." Well, in this case, it didn't mean a loss.

The Rebels and Midland Bulldogs have switched roles this year. Midland was rated the challenger to Permian at the season's start as Pat Culpepper began his first season not only as a high school coach but a high school coach in Texas. Until 1980, Pat's background had been strictly college. Then, Jerry Zachery broke his leg in the Andrews game and after that it was a season Pat would just as soon forget.

LEE, LAST year, was in the process of building, but did such a good job of it that by the season's end the Rebels were just a step behind Permian.

This year, Spike's Rebs have been labeled the Tall City's best hope for a run at district while everybody is keeping their fingers crossed about Midland, hoping all those young questionmarks come through.

We don't know whether it is of any significance or not, only time will tell, but Brownwood and Midland scrimmaged on even terms two weeks ago and last week Abilene Cooper and Brownwood also battled on even terms, the accuracy of a toe deciding the issue. Cooper, along with Permian, is considered the co-favorite in 5-5A, so maybe the Bulldogs aren't that far behind after all.

Late Pecos TD sinks MHS Bullpups, 12-6

The Pecos Eagle junior varsity scored the winning touchdown against Midland's Bullpups with 2:18 remaining in the fourth quarter Thursday night at Memorial Stadium

A late interception for Pecos set up the touchdown. Eagle fullback Freddie Calanchi got the call to carry the ball over the goal line from one yard out giving Pecos a 12-6 lead and eventual victory by the same score.

The Eagles broke a scoreless tie in the second quarter when running back James Harris broke free up the middle and cut across field to the right sideline and raced 67 yards into the end zone for a 6-0 lead.

Midland quarterback Kyle Kitto, who in the first quarter had a 50-yard run to the Pecos 20 to put the Bullpups in scoring position before a fumble turned the ball back to the Eagles, scored after faking a pitch to the trailing back and running the final 45 yards to the end zone to tie the game at 6-6.

Neither team was able to convert a point after on any of the touchdowns.

A final scoring attempt came for the Bullpups following the Pecos fourth quarter touchdowne, and it almost ended before it got underway. Kitto sent a long pass sailing deep downfield and for a moment it looked like an interception. An alert Todd Shiplet, wide receiver, yanked the ball from the defenders' hands on the way down and held onto it for the reception at the Pecos 30. Randel Swindel then moved the ball to the 21 but the drive died and the game was over.

Two key defensive players for the Bullpups were Michael Mashburn, who recovered two Pecos fumbles, and John Altee, who recorded two quarterback sacks.

Last call for soccer

Midland Soccer Association is having its final fall season sign-up Saturday Sept. 12 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at Hogan Park Activities Building (next to Cubs Stadium) at the new soccer complex. Everyone from kindergarten through 19 years is eligible to play.

Also watch for the upcoming grand opening of the soccer complet Sept. 26.

Reb girls fall to Plains

The Midland Lee girls varsity volleyball team saw its season record plunge to 6-7 following 6-15, 4-15 and 7-15 loss to Plains Thursday on the Cowboys' court.

In the junior varsity game, the Rebels swept to 15-2 and 15-7 triumphs.

Lee played Plains three sets instead of quitting after losses in the first two.

Lee Coach Janice Baulch said, "We are improving all the time. We need to get more consistent. When we play well, we are capable of playing with the best of them."

No report was turned in on the Midland High game with Denver City that was played in Denver City. MHS carried a 4-3 record into that game.

Today and Saturday the MHS junior varsity is playing in a tournament in Snyder.

Both Tall City teams open District 5-5A competition Tuesday. Lee opens at home against Odessa High while the Bulldogs travel to Odessa to tangle with Permian.

Lee Sophs drop Pecos

Sergio Ochoa struck paydirt on 40 and 5-yard runs to lead the Midland Lee sophomores to a 35-6 win over Pecos to run their season record to 2-0.

Tim Wright scored eight points on the night. He blocked a punt and recovered it in the end zone for a touchdown and also kicked extra points after Ochoa's scores.

The Stonewall Brigade recorded two touchdowns through the air. Curtis Alexander hauled in a 22-yard scoring strike from Danny Smedley while Glen Starnes grabbed a 26-yard bomb from Jeff Motley for Lee's final score of the evening.

OCHOA wrapped up Lee's scoring when he rambled over for the 2-point conversion following Starnes' touchdown.

The sophomores are open next week. According to coach Ernie Johnson, the sophs are looking for a team to play next week. Lee sophomores next scheduled game is Sept. 24 against Odessa Permian.

The Lee JV are playing the Ozona varsity tonight in Ozona.

MC netters travel to Roswell for tourney

With just three days practice, Midland College tennis coach Leon Dulin heads into a strong open tournament in Roswell, N.M., today with practically unknown players.

"The players didn't have any workouts last week because I wanted all of them to get settled into their classes without any distractions," Dulin said.

On the Chaparral women's team, which tied for the National Junior College Athletic Association title earlier this year, Dulin has one returning letter winner. She is Karen Mannheimer from San Antonio. Helia Barriga, Donna Dickey and Laurie Runyon were on the 1980-81 team. The only freshman in talented Liz Alvarado from Odessa. Barriga is from El Paso, Dickey from San Antonio and Runyon from Midland.

The men's team includes lettermen Barry King of Illinois, Luis Zavala from Mexico and Tony Macken of Canada. King is academically ineligible this fall, but will be an open entry in the Roswell tourney. Freshman are Ken Huddleston of Wichita Falls, Richey Houdek of Midland, Tim Stallard of Odessa, Andre Peters of Plano, Monty Saul of Austin and Norm Weber of Canada.

Faust is favored in his Irish debut against LSU Tigers

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

If Knute Rockne, Frank Leahy and Ara Parseghian had been forecasters instead of football coaches, they probably wouldn't have become legends.

Gerry Faust hasn't coached a game at Notre Dame yet but he's already being mentioned in the same breath with other Fighting Irish greats. However, he's not making any predictions about his debut Saturday against Louisiana State, even though the Irish are 14-point favorites.

"My biggest worry is that I still don't know how we'll stack up against other teams at this level," said Faust. "I'll feel a lot more comfortable once I see if our players can run and throw and tackle as well as the LSU players. I feel like we should have a good football team this year but I'll know a lot more Saturday when I'm on the field and I can see how we measure up."

FAUST SAID that LSU has an advantage because it has a game under its belt, even though it was a 24-7 loss to Alabama. But the guess here is that Faust will have scalp No. 1 hanging from his belt Saturday ... Notre Dame 34-7.

The opening week of the season proved conclusively that the pigskin prognosticator didn't have enough preseason practice. The score was only 22 right and 14 wrong for a .611 percentage. And against the spread it was only 7-8 for .466.

Michigan (favored by 19) at Wisconsin: Coach Bo Schembechler doesn't think the Wolverines deserve to be ranked No. 1. But he also says he appears to have "a typical Michigan squad." That should mean something in the neighborhood of ... Michigan 27-0.

Georgia Tech at Alabama (24): A 4 p.m. CDT kickoff because Bear Bryant wants to play in the cooler part of the day without making it a night game. Nevertheless, Georgia Tech will feel the heat ... Alabama 38-6.

Wyoming at Oklahoma (31): Only other meeeting produced a 41-7 triumph for the Sooners in the 1976 Fiesta Bowl. Sounds good ... Oklahoma 41-7.

Tennesee at Southern California (18): After losing to Georgia 44-0, Tennessee might be volunteering for another whipping ... Southern Cal 35-6.

California at Georgia (17): "Georgia's defense is designed to stop the run and California virtually ignores the ground game," said Bulldogs' Coach Vince Dooley. With Herschel Walker around, a ground game isn't ignored by ... Georgia 24-17.

Nebraska (16) at Iowa: The Cornhuskers are out for revenge not this week, but rather next Saturday against Florida State. Upset Special of the Week ... Iowa 24-21.

RICE AT Texas (21): Both teams are coming off surprising seasons. Texas was only 7-5, Rice actually managed 5-6. For Coach Fred Akers' sake, the Longhorns had better do better ... Texas 35-10.

UCLA (8½) at Arizona: The Bruins were 6-0 coming into this game last year but lost 23-17. They are unbeaten again (0-0) and out for revenge ... UCLA 24-17.
