Thirty-One Years In School System Bring Retirement For Ethel Gordon

"There are no problem children - only children with problems."

Silver haired and slim, Mrs. Fred Gordon is a sincere devotee of this theory. It has been a basis for her thirty-one years service in the Olton school system.

Ethel Gordon's fervent dedication to her calling belies the fact that the calendar says she's reached Olton's mandatory age for retirement.

Dispensing discipline with love, she is repaid with respect and love. Students of her early days in Olton affectionately remind her of her "board of education."

One former student who is proud to have had her teach two of his three children frequently reminds, "Mrs. Gordon, you used to just think up reasons to use that board of education (paddle) on me."

Ethel has learned that there are more effective ways of correction or punishment.

"Looking like the child in the eye, giving them a firm squeeze on the arm and seriously asking 'We won't do that any more will we?' works much better than a paddle," she believes. With each class, she begins early to instill another of her theories, "Don't be afraid to be afraid," she advises.

She repeatedly admonishes her students to "talk about it." "You can tell me, or tell your mother or if you think you can't talk to us, there's always someone you can talk to - someone who'll always listen."

Little heads nod affirmatively and a small voice always echoes, "God."

Earlier this year, one of her small Mexican American boys solemnly inquired about the cost of one of his books. After repeatedly asking the same question, she suspected that the young man had lost his copy. A day or two later the student, bolstered by an older brother and another student, confessed that he had lost the book.

Asked why he decided to confess, he replied "They tell me I feel better," and indicated with a nod of his head, two who had been her students a year or two ago.

"I think of a teacher as more than an instructor or an indoctrinator of formal knowledge. She and the school must help in the child's social adjustment and train him in the ways of democratic living.

"We must win the child's confidence while building his self-respect. We need to praise him for work well done and encourage his efforts."

Through the years there's been many changes. Her students today have had a much broader scope of learning than those in that 1936 class when she came to Olton.

The only third grade teacher in the old school building, her curriculum included the oft-quoted "reading, 'riting and 'rithmetic". Today's students learn those on a much broader level.

Reading has become more than just recognition of words. "If you could read orally, you could read" she recalls of those earlier days. Now students must do more than read aloud, they must comprehend the written word.

"And you take advantage of special moments," she explained. A reading lesson may lead naturally into an impromptu lesson in science, geography or history.

Those early day students are the parents who shudder over "new math" although they know Ethel is right when she confides that today's students are much more knowledgeable in math.

"A child in the third grade today knows very well how to use a dictionary and encyclopedia" - a statement she could not have made when she began teaching.

Ethel gives credit for some of the third-graders' brightness to television.

Televised coverage of space flights has made that knowledge available.

A fellow teacher had a small transistor radio at school the day that the astronauts from Apollo 13 were to attempt to re-enter the earth's atmosphere and splash down in the South Pacific.

"The astronauts are going to try to come back to earth in a little while. Would you like to say a silent prayer for them?" she asked.

Each little head went down, some just briefly while others took a little longer. When each had finished she added, "Now let's keep our fingers crossed."

Lunchroom workers a little later that morning commented that the boys and girls in Mrs. Gordon's room were carrying lunch trays with crossed fingers on each little hand.

When the Apollo 13 crew did spash down safely, she reported to her students, "Boys and girls, they're safe". A big cheer and enthusiastic applause was their immediate answer.

Sorting through memories this week as she readied "her room" for another teacher came September, Ethel found numerous small notes and drawings from students of the past few years.

One especially endearing letter read, "Dear Mrs. Gordon, Each year I think 'This is the best teacher I've ever had' and the next year I change my mind. But not any more. You'll always be the best teacher I ever had".

A 1970 note reads, "Your the nicest teacher I ever had". Those little notes have enriched the memories of Ethel Gordon. And yet, it's not just students that Ethel recalls when she looks back through the years.

Teachers, too, are included in her memories - Mr. Webb, superintendent for many years; Mr. Lawson, grade school principal when she came to Olton; Fannie Bettis; "Bill" Hampton; Mae Moore and numerous others including a quiet, sandy-haired "grammar school" teacher named Fred Gordon.

Ethel and Fred were married in December 1940. With special permission from the superintendent, Ethel was allowed to complete the school year at a time when married women were not hired as teachers in the Olton school system.

In 1942, just seven weeks after their son Freddie was born, Fred began his 44-months tour of duty in the Army. That fall, with World War II scarcity of teachers, Ethel was invited to resume teaching and the single status requirement for women teachers was on its way out.

Most of her 31 years of Olton schools have been spent as a third grade teacher although Ethel has taught fourth and second grades for a brief time in the 1940's. For a while she also taught Spanish for third, fourth and fifth grade students.

The former Ethel Hulsey, she received her bachelor of arts degree in elementary education from Texas Technological College in 1934. She had entered college on "Individual approval" because she was a graduate of a non-accredited high school.

Ethel was born in DeLeon and grew up there. She attended a small four-teacher school in Comanche County and attended high school in Dickens.

While she was earning her degree from Tech, she taught in Croton and Duncan Flat, small schools in Dickens county. She also taught at Patton Springs School at Afton.

In 1950, Ethel received her master's degree from West Texas State with a major in elementary education and a minor in history.

She has been named Olton's Teacher of the Year and in 1969 was presented with a 30-year service pin.

A member of Classroom Teachers, she has served as secretary of the local chapter. She is a charter member of Lamb County's chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma, national sorority of women educators. She has held the offices of secretary and reporter.

Looking back over her years in Olton, Ethel remarked simply, "There's been a lot of good parents, to have had so many good kids."

"What you do and what you say is like a pebble in a pond - it radiates in every direction." is another creed of Ethel Hulsey Gordon.

Teaching, she believes, is like that pebble in the pond, it's reflected in the lives of many people.

And for countless boys and girls, though they be eight or thirty-eight, the ripple she's made will not be quick in fading.

Supt. Ray Schultz Resigns Position

At a called meeting of the Board of Trustees Monday night Ray Schultz submitted his resignation as superintendent of the Olton school system. He has served in this capacity since June, 1965.

A native of Clarks, Neb. Schultz was graduated from high school there in 1940. He earned his BBA in 1948 and his M. Ed. in 1950, both at West Texas State University at Canyon.

He was employed in the Canyon public schools four and a half years from September 1948 to February 1953. He served first as a classroom teacher then as business manager.

From Canyon Schultz went to Dumas. There he was business manager three and a half years before becoming assistant superintendent.

Just prior to coming to Olton he was superintendent of White Deer schools for five years. Schultz and his wife, the former Charlotte Henderson of Canyon, have three children. Two sons, Wesley, also a graduate of WTSU, both he and his wife teach in the Amarillo schools; and Joe, serving his country in the armed forces, is not taking advanced training at Fort Ord, Calif. And one daughter, Kay, who is a senior at McMurry and candidate for a degree in August. Both Joe and Kay were graduated from Olton High School.

The Schultz are members of First United Methodist Church.

Before becoming a school administrator Schultz served in the Air Force during World War II.

He is past president of District 9 Texas State Teachers Association, and a former secretary-treasurer of the Texas Association of Business Officials. At Dumas he served as president of the Area YMCA, and at White Deer as president of Lions Club.

In Olton Schultz has served on the official board of Methodist Church, and also on the board of directors of Chamber of Commerce and Agriculture. In this capacity and as a member of West Texas Tuberculosis Association he has been instrumental in getting the mobile detection unit visit in the city annually.

I have elected to accept a position with the Education Service Center, District XVI.

I regret that I will not be able to complete my contract which expires June, 1972. However, I feel that this opportunity is too great for me to pass over. I desire that this resignation become effective July 1, 1970.

It is my sincere hope that Olton will continue to upgrade our school system.

Sincerely,
Ray Schultz.

It Can Happen Here

Copied - from Henry J. Taylor

Are part of the campus disorders a Red plot? You be the judge. For a perilous feature of our day is that too many people are either too civilized, too inexperienced, too distracted or too dense to grasp the documented truth.

We are being brainwashed whenever we are told that the thrust here is not organized. The CIA and FBI both know that the center for it is in Prague, within the shadow of the Ruzyně Airport. There the immense so-called International Union of Students, financed and brain-trusted by Moscow, is supporting university anarchists here and throughout the free world.

The Kremlin departmentalizes this place into "country desks". Each section supervises a country. Cunnings, each tailors the "issues" for each country. Naturally, the IUS drums on the Vietnam issue here and "Peace! Peace! Peace!" to further a Red victory in Southeast Asia.

A Pole, Vlod Konarski, a man with a bite like a saber tooth tiger, supervises the British thrust. The IUS vehicle there is the militant Radical Student Alliance in London. Two subdivisions are supervised by Jean Bougareau, a Frenchman, and Martin Al-bein, who is Dutch.

In Eire the IUS thrust, locally called the International Movement, is based at Trinity College, Dublin. The IUS supervisor is Hardial Singh Bains, a naturalized Canadian born in India.

A Bains sidekick is Ralph Schoenman, 34, the student shepherd of the Bertrand Russell Peace Foundation - the man who concocted the mock trial of President Johnson in Stockholm in protest against Vietnam. Iron-fisted Schoenman served a "martyr" stretch in Montjoy Prison, Dublin. Britain banned Schoenman and Scotland Yard caught him. To the dismay of the CIA and FBI, Schoenman had an American passport.

In West Germany the Berlin police documented the IUS's control of Rudolph Dutschke ("Red Rudi") when Dutschke was arrested on April 11, 1968, during riots in nearly all of the West German universities.

In France the IUS thrust is supervised by Daniel Cohn-Bendit ("Before you can build you must destroy"), who is not even a Frenchman. He's German. The success, typified by the March 3 Natarre campus mayhem which saw Dean Paul Ricouer kidnaped and 125 policemen injured, has all but paralyzed French education. University faculty members are brutalized and kidnaped almost daily.

The French Parliament has enacted a university reform law. In it the campuses are supposed to be autonomous. But by staging demonstrations identical with those here the continued attacks have forced Education Minister Oliver Quichard to open France's campuses to police jurisdiction by declaring university grounds to be public thoroughfares.

President Georges Pompidou himself has stated, in desperation, that "there is no security on many major campuses in France."

I had lunch in New York not long ago with Italian Foreign Minister Aldo Moro. Italy, too, has enacted a new university reform law. Mr. Moro, himself a professor, sponsored it. "But what can we do?" he asked. "In our country, as in France, your country and throughout the free world, the Reds' technique is always to up their demands with every concession they gain."

Japanese Premier Eisaku Sato spoke similarly on his visit here. He said that last year student arrests in campus disorders exceeded 14,000 (ours exceeded 3,600) and that the IUS thrust has reduced Japanese education to a shambles. The IUS vehicle there is the immense Zengakuren student organization along with five other factions.

In addition to its thrusts in Europe, Asia, Latin America and the United States the IUS now runs terrorist training centers for African students. The CIA has uncovered them in Budapest and Warsaw and in Leipzig, Bernau and Bautzen, East Germany. These have trained and sent back to their African homelands more than 1,000 student insurgents in the past six months. The IUS's anarchists are entrenched in the colleges all the way from Morocco on the Atlantic clear down to the border of the Union of South Africa.

There's no Alfred Hitchcock mystery in what is happening here, nor the brainwashing that accompanies it. Of course, none is so blind as one who will not see. But wake up America! Our enemies are promoting a civil war in the United States. "It can't happen here" is a totally dangerous philosophy. It will happen if we still refuse to wake up and call a spade a spade.

Sorry For Americans

Copied - from Paul Harvey

On the facade of the stately Archives Building in Washington, D. C., are inscribed the words: "What's past is prologue."

A District cab driver is said to have said, "What that means is, you ain't seen nothin' yet!"

If coming events do cast shadows--

If we can anticipate our own fate by analytical hindsight--

Let's preview by review. Older parts of the world are beginning to feel sorry for the people of the United States. Like a mother or father or elder brother, they can see what we are going through and what we are headed into; they have passed this way before.

Recently in London's New Statesman, J. B. Priestley wrote, "I have been feeling genuinely and deeply sorry for the American people--the ordinary decent Americans as distinct from the bloodthirsty half-baldy riffraff."

"I am sorry for them because, bewildered, saddened or maddened, they are trying to grope their way out of a long dangerous dream."

He went on to describe how our "great country, based on a noble idea, is now tearing itself apart."

The United States until 15 years ago was an example for the world of how a "melting pot" of assorted ethnic strains and diverse views could converge without colliding.

Today's wreckage of that "long dangerous dream" is disillusioning to us but really no surprise to older nations where overpopulation has amplified and ultimately inflamed "difference."

It's tiresome to most Americans for anyone to re-recite the lessons of history, but several historians--Spengler, DeReincourt, Ferraro, Gibbon--concur so precisely in their interpretation of Rome's demise that one more instant replay might be useful.

Rome had a pioneering beginning not unlike our own, enjoyed two centuries of greatness then went into decline, decay and collapse.

In Rome the second-century symptoms of decay were vast increases in the number of idle rich and idle poor. The latter were put on a permanent dole, a welfare system similar to our own.

As the welfare system became permanent, the recipients organized themselves, became a political bloc with considerable power.

Rome's government bowed to pressure from this welfare army; would-be emperors catered to them.

The great, solid middle class was taxed more and more. Then there was an income surtax. Then the denarius, a silver coin similar to our half-dollar, had its silver content reduced, became copper colored. Then silver coins disappeared altogether.

Military service had been an honored tradition in Rome, but young men began avoiding service, took to using cosmetics, wearing feminine hairdos and garments.

Among teachers and scholars many let their hair and beards grow, wore slovenly clothes, professed indifference to worldly goods.

Morals declined. It became unsafe to walk countryside or city streets. Rioting became commonplace; sometimes whole sections of towns and cities were burned.

And finally, when confiscatory taxation and creeping inflation overcame energy and ambition, the result was stagnation and decline and Rome passed into what history had recorded as the Dark Ages, lasting a thousand years.

Magazine Article Blasts Attack On Farm Program

A blatantly distorted article entitled "Time to Say No to Big Farm Subsidies" made its way into 17.5 million homes and offices this month, thanks to the editors and publishers of Reader's Digest magazine -- and thanks to an annual postal subsidy of $9.4 million.

Thus the 25 million or more souls who directly or indirectly squeeze their livelihood from agriculture were not only injured by the half-truths and outright falsifications of the article, but are insulted as well by having to pay a part of the cost.

And this fact has not escaped the attention of Congressman David H. Henderson (D-N.C.), who is Chairman of the Post Office and Civil Service Committee. Henderson has requested that READER'S DIGEST give him space to rebut the article in a future issue, pointing out "the distortions and inaccuracies."

He also announced on the floor of the House recently that he will raise some questions before his committee about "the propriety of the second class postal subsidy being paid indiscriminately to all publications in a certain class regardless of content."

Henderson's activity in re-nouncing the infamous mouthings of the Reader's Digest's Eugene Methvin is only another small move toward reversing the tide of adverse publicity leveled against agriculture almost daily, much of it without regard for truth. But his is a well taken position and may well serve as a springboard for future action.

The Reader's Digest article characterizes payments as being made to farmers "not to grow cotton, wheat and feed grains", and this is a far cry from the truth. More nearly true would be to state that under present conditions farmers cannot continue to grow these crops without payments. Therefore they are the exact opposite of what Mr. Methvin would have his readers believe. But the majority of those who will read the article are not versed in agriculture, farm programs or their objectives. They have not been made to understand that farm programs benefit the general public by assuring adequate supplies of food and fiber at the world's greatest bargain prices.

Methvin's treacherous tale, in fact, states that the $3.5 billion of annual payments "is only part of the cost, for they also boost the prices that we consumers must pay in the market." How ridiculous can you get?

Farm program payments make up the difference between the cost of producing cotton, wheat and feed grains and the prices for which these commodities sell on the market. Without the payments, consumers would pay a much higher market price, or else be obliged to do without these commodities altogether.

Donnell Echols of Lamesa, President of the Lubbock based Plains Cotton Growers, Inc. and member of the Board of the National Educational Association for Agriculture, recently said "It is imperative that through PCG, NEIA and every other group at our disposal we let the public know the facts about farming and farm programs. In no other way can we repair the damage done by the erroneous and misleading stories being circulated by national magazines, in Congress and elsewhere."

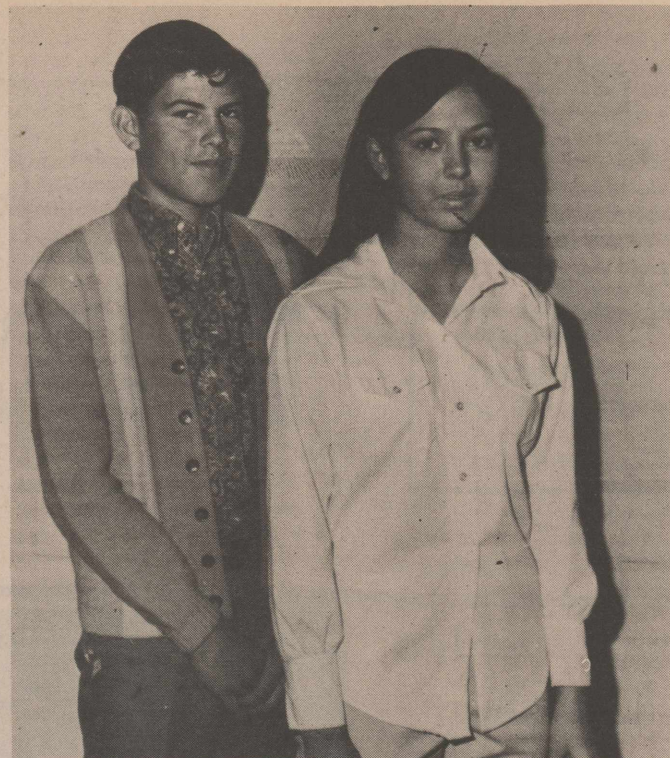

As an example of PCG efforts to combat the false image being painted of agriculture al-grams, production costs alone, with no regard for return to investment, labor and management, exceeded income from crop sales by an average of $17,193 per year per farm. Crop sales covered production costs on only one of the farms for only one of the three years.

The farmers, selected at random from Lamb, Lubbock and Hale Counties, farm an average of 356 acres. Average investment in land and equipment per farm comes to just over $215,000. Government payments per farm averaged $31,678, and when these payments are added to crop sales the average net income after taxes was $12,014 per farm -- a return of less than 5.6 percent on investments, with no allowance for management and labor.

How, then, can farm program payments be characterized as "additions to already sizeable incomes"?

The farms included in the table range from 157 up to 640 acres. Program payments go from below $17,000 up to almost $67,000, and the maxi-

STUDENTS OF THE MONTH are brother and sister, John and Melba Marroquin, named at the awards assembly held recently at Junior High School. They are children of Mrs. Connie Marroquin.

FOOD WASTE

We throw away food! A recent survey shows that American families throw away an average of two-thirds of a pound of food a person a day, reports Gwendolyn Clyatt, Extension consumer marketing specialist with Texas A&M University. Plan before you buy.

DIET CONTROL

Diet control from birth and even before may add years to a life. Minnie Bell, Extension specialist for aging at Texas A&M University, reports that in one experiment the drastic reduction of food intake by rats increased their life span by 50 per cent.

HUNGARIAN PAPRIKA

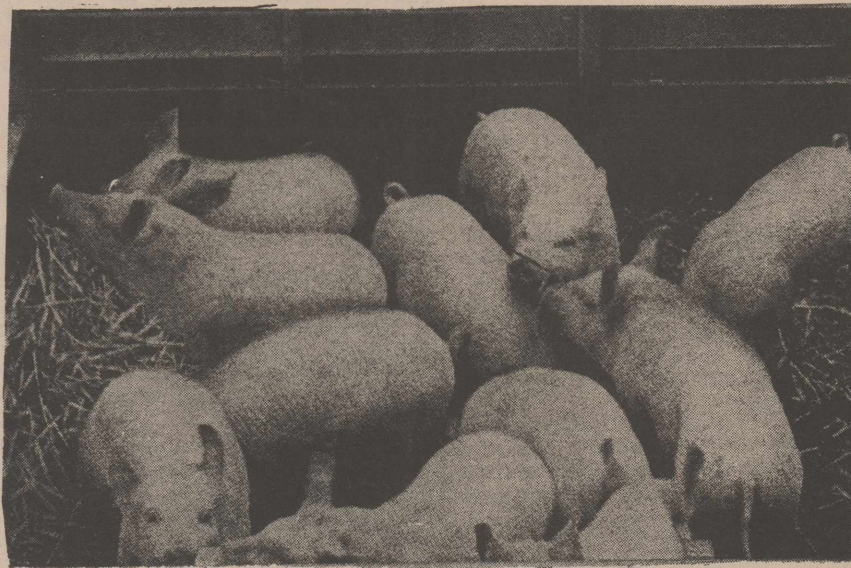

Hungarian Paprika, after an absence of 25 years to American homemakers, is being reintroduced. Unlike Spanish Paprika, used for color and appearance, Hungarian Paprika adds flavor and aroma to food, explains Gwendolyn Clyatt, Extension consumer marketing specialist with Texas A&M University.

How to avoid unnecessary service bills---and beat inflation!

It's easy to avoid unnecessary appliance service calls.

How? Just be sure something's wrong with the appliance before you call a service technician.

Proof lies in the fact that appliance service companies report on automatic washers alone, about 40 per cent of first-year service calls could be avoided.

Service calls on most appliances could be avoided by following these two simple rules.

First, learn all you can about your appliance.

Second, check a few simple items before you call a technician. Not only is it embarrassing to have a service technician tell you the machine isn't plugged in or that a fuse is blown... it can be expensive, too.

How do you learn about your appliances?

When you purchase an appliance, ask the salesman for the owner's manual and installation guide before the unit is delivered. Then sit down with a cup of coffee and read both manuals thoroughly.

The owner's manual is your textbook and the salesman and service technician are your teachers. But it is your responsibility to use them. Ask questions. Don't be satisfied with the answers until you understand your appliance completely. And keep instruction books nearby for quick reference.

If you have lost your owner's manual, write the manufacturer. His address and model number (be sure to give the model number) will be stamped or printed on the appliance.

With proper use and care, you can expect years of trouble-free operation from your appliance. However, as any other machine, appliances may need occasional adjustment.

But, before calling the service technician check these items. They are the most common sources of unnecessary service calls:

1. Electric cord. Is it plugged in? This does happen.
2. Pilot light. Is it lit? Check your owner's manual before trying to light it.
3. Power source. Has a fuse blown or a circuit breaker moved to the off position?
4. Controls. Are they set correctly? Be positive by checking your owner's manual. Give pushbuttons an extra firm push and turn dials in the proper direction.
5. Lights. If not on, check the power source. If the bulb's burned out, your owner's manual will tell you type of bulb needed for replacement.
6. Dust, lint and dirt build-up. This reduces efficiency. Washer filters (if not self-cleaning) and dryer lint screens need to be cleaned after each use. Dust and dirt can block your air conditioner filter. Check your owner's manual for instructions in changing or cleaning the filter.

Dust and dirt will also build up on the coils, back and beneath refrigerators and freezers. They should be cleaned periodically with a brush or vacuum cleaner attachment.

7. Water supply. Is water flowing into the appliance? Be sure faucets are turned on and hoses not kinked.
8. Doors and latches. Are they properly closed? Most appliances will not operate correctly unless doors and latches are closed tightly.

That's how to avoid the most common unnecessary appliance service calls. However, specific appliances have operating parts that may pose questions in your mind. These will be answered in future articles.

If you've made the basic checks and read your owner's manual and the appliance still doesn't operate correctly... it's time to call for help.

But don't call any fix-it man down the street. Get the job done right. Call your dealer and ask him to recommend a manufacturer's authorized service technician... or contact the manufacturer directly.

Your university extension center, utility home economist or county agent can be an additional source of information. Or, you may write me, Leslie Paige, Whirlpool Corporation, Benton Harbor, Michigan 49022.

By avoiding unnecessary service calls, you'll save money. That's one way to beat inflation.

Missionary Council Meets, Studies 'A Real Home'

The Woman's Missionary Council met at 1:30 p. m. in the Assembly of God Church. Mrs. W. W. Frazier led the opening song, "Where He Leads I'll Follow". Mrs. Ben Henson read the Scripture which was Job 11-5.

The topic of the lesson was "A Real Home". Mrs. De Vurn Mandrell discussed A Real Home as being like a gymnasium with walking and other forms of headful exercise required. In the mechanical duties of the home, Mrs. Ethridge Reaves told how a real home is like a health resort with the mothers being natural physicians. Mrs. Leslie Kennedy compared a real home to a haven of refuge needed because the world makes people hunger for loving sympathy which the home gives.

Other attributes of a real home are that it is like a secret society as its members are loyal to each other, and it is like a cooperative league with all flourishing where interest of each is made the interest of all.

Mrs. Gene Davis likened a real home as a Temple of worship. She showed the importance of the family altar. She read this excerpt from a publication: "In a survey of teenage opinions in five major cities the question was asked 'If you were a parent what single thing would you attempt to do for your teen-

Home Buying Assistance For Low Income Families

Many families are eligible to buy a new three or four bedroom home with a down payment of only $200.00, but are not taking advantage of this opportunity because they are not aware of the provisions of Section 235 of the National Housing Act.

"Financial help is available to enable low income families to buy their own home," according to Tom Yager, president of the Lumberman's Association of Texas, "but many are not familiar with this program. To get complete details on the provisions of this section of the National Housing Act," Yager advised, "see your local lumber dealer."

The program offers assistance in the form of monthly payments by the Department of Housing and Urban Development to the lending institutions to reduce interest cost on a market rate home mortgage insured by FHA if a homeowner cannot afford to make a conventional loan.

Wardrobe No-No's

The game of strategy is as important in men's fashions as in sports, and first impressions may depend on proper dress.

"Each man dresses to reflect his own lifestyle," says Dianne Keogh, national fashion director of Sears The-Men's Store, "and each style of dress has a variety of accessories which best suit the local look. Keeping aware of how styles and accessories change will prevent men from looking thrown together, rather than put together."

Here are style "no-no's" to avoid, according to Miss Keogh, when dressing for the '70s:

- no sports-type caps or hats with suits;
- no button-down collars with double-breasted suits;
- no old tie bars with wider ties;
- no matching tie and pocket square;
- no heavy buckles or ornamental belts with dress suits;
- no satin or high-sheen shirts with traditional styles;
- no white or bright-colored socks with suits; and
- no brown shoes with black suits, and vice versa.

Reservations are now being taken for the 14th annual Wayland Baptist College Summer Basketball Camp which will conduct its first session, July 12-18, for junior high youngsters.

A second camp for junior high players is set for July 19-25 with the Out-of-State High School camp and Non-Varsity Texas High School camp scheduled July 26 through Aug. 1. Basketball instruction will be under the direction of Wayland college mentor Bob Clindaniel, a recognized teacher of fundamentals. LEWIS LLEWELLYN

Demonstration on A College Campus

Across the country, many colleges and universities have been closed to prevent bloodshed and violence.

In the wake of the Kent State University riot in which four students lost their lives, Sen. Robert Griffin (R., Mich.) said, "Some are now pointing the finger of blame at the relatively untrained 18- and 19-year-old Ohio National Guardsmen."

"But I would point the finger of blame at the hard core of revolutionaries on some of our campuses who have been encouraged by a few radical professors and who have been allowed to run wild by nambypamby college and university administrators."

Vice President Agnew has stated, "A concise and clear set of rules for campus conduct should be established . . . and enforced — with immediate expulsion the penalty for serious violations."

The vice president also said, "We must look to how we are raising our children."

Responsibilities

The responsibility of parents to rear their children properly and the responsibility of educators to teach and train them well have been overlooked by some, but these responsibilities must be understood and accepted.

I have just come from a college campus. I saw some long-haired college boys and some short-skirted college girls, but they were all clean and orderly.

There were no disorders, no demonstrations — unless you can call the senior vespers service, which was held in the college chapel, the night before commencement, a demonstration.

In a way, I suppose, it was a demonstration. It demonstrated what the right approach to college education can produce. It demonstrated, too, what Christ can do in the lives of young people today.

I may be prejudiced about this college, of course. It is the one from which my wife and I graduated over 30 years ago and from which my youngest son has just now graduated. Admittedly, I cannot be impartial in evaluating this school.

But where else today do you find young people of whom you can be so proud that tears come to your eyes as you think of them and their sincere dedication to Christ and His cause?

Contrast

The contrast between them and the dissidents and malcontents on some other campuses is overwhelming.

While other colleges have been shut down to prevent danger and destruction, here is a campus where the graduating seniors joined in singing, "O Jesus, I have promised to serve Thee to the end."

Lest someone sneeringly retort that the education received on such a campus is inferior, let me point out that some of the graduating students ranked in the 98th and 99th percentiles — the top one or two percent — in grades received on standardized examinations taken by graduating seniors at all of the participating institutions, including leading colleges and universities all across the country.

This college — Bryan College, named for the great Christian statesman, William Jennings Bryan — has as its motto, "Christ Above All."

Maybe that would be a good motto for all of us in these days of upheaval and uncertainty.

You've been spending too much on weeds in cotton!

If you've been just cultivating, or using a chemical weed killer and not getting the control you need — either way you've been spending too much. There's a better way to get good weed control, and spend less. It's with Caparol® 80W — your partner, the weed-killer — band applied, at planting. In just one trip across the field, you plant your crop and put Caparol on in a band. This keeps the weeds out of the rows. Then, all you do is cultivate the middles. Don't spend too much on weeds in cotton again this year. Apply Caparol, in a band, at planting.

SPEAKER SUNDAY

Evangelist Raymon Carson brought the spiritual message at the 11 o'clock morning worship service in the Lubbock Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

A SAFETY MESSAGE from Dodge's TV "Sheriff" JOE HIGGINS

Look heah, boy, thet car ain't no mobile bar.

A fo' on the floor ain't meant to go with a fifth on the seat.

If ya gotta have a belt, make it a seat belt, heah.

Drinkin' 'n' drivin' don't mix, nohow. The only thing in your car that needs anti-freeze is the radiator not you.

So, don't drink 'n' drive. If you're out with the boys, limit and space your drinks. Space 'em wide apart so's your system can absorb the alcohol.

Make the last one, best if it's the last few, coffee for the road—strong coffee.

Ya'll drive careful now, heah!

Pro Wayne Allen is looking for a set of champions for his First Annual Partnership tournament May 30 and 31st. He has several good teams entered from out of town, but feels like Olton has some teams that could capture the championship. This is a 36 hole low man handicap with qualifying for flights after first 18 holes of play.

The course is in good shape and the greens are growing real fast and playing well.

The swimming pool will open June 1st at 1 o'clock. Bill Smith has the pool cleaned and at present time is working on rest rooms and boiler room. Good swimming, Monday.

General workday will also be June 1st. So all members please come out.

Well that's golfing for this week. Good golfing next week.
