$140 Billion Eyed For Carter's Plan

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — President Carter, declaring "there can be no retreat," pledged on Monday to make an unparalleled peacetime investment of $140 billion over the next 10 years to free the nation from its dependence on foreign oil.

In his second energy address in two days, Carter said the massive investment must be made "so that never again will our nation's independence be hostage to foreign oil."

He presented a list of proposals that included funds for development of alternative energy sources, improvement of mass transporation, research on fuel-efficient automobiles, development of solar power and aid to low-income families, hard-hit by rising energy prices.

Later, Carter traveled to Detroit where he promised the convention of the Communications Workers of America that he will propose a tax cut if the economy lags and unemployment climbs. He said the first target of a tax cut effort would be payroll taxes like the Social Security levy.

"If we see a real need to do something about the economy, if the unemployment rate gets too high, then I will take action," he said in a question-and-answer session with the union leaders. "But that action would not be to raise taxes, it would be to lower them."

In his Kansas City speech to the convention of the National Association of Counties, the president also vowed that the nation would cut its oil imports even more than he promised during last month's energy summit in Tokyo. He said the United States will import 300,000 barrels of oil a day less this year than the ceiling of 8.5 million he promised in Tokyo.

The address offered details of the energy policy he outlined in a speech from the Oval Office Sunday night.

The president, who worked on the Kansas City speech even as he flew to the nation's heartland from Washington, declared: "I am drawing our line of defense here and now... Overall, we are going to make the unparalleled peacetime commitment, an investment of $140 billion for American energy security so that never again will our nation's independence be hostage to foreign oil."

Carter also said he would "not hesitate to take action to avoid a serious recession." The administration acknowledged only last week that the country faces a mild recession, with unemployment rising to 6.9 percent next year from the current 5.6 percent.

The president announced that he would offer "new incentives for the production of heavy oil, oil shale and hard-to-get-at natural gas — all of which this country has in great abundance."

Carter immediately ordered an end to price controls on heavy crude oil, a viscous substance that must be heated in order to extract it from the ground.

Lifting Controls

Stuart Eizenstat, the president's chief domestic policy adviser and the key architect of his energy proposals, said Carter planned to lift controls from natural gas taken from pockets twice as deep as conventional gas fields.

Eizenstat told reporters some heavy oil is sold at $6 a barrel and that removing price controls could almost triple that price, making it more profitable for energy companies to drill for it.

A White House fact sheet said the nation has an estimated reserve of more than 10 billion barrels of heavy oil, much of it in California. The administration estimates that removing controls from heavy-oil prices will result in production of about 500,000 barrels a day by 1990.

Eizenstat said the president's latest proposals, along with previously announced policies, would help save 8.5 million barrels of oil a day overall by 1990, reducing the nation's oil imports to an estimated 4.5 million barrels a day.

The United States imported an average of just below 8 million barrels a day during the first 179 days of this year and could import more than the new quota and still stay within the self-imposed limit agreed to in Tokyo.

Other Carter energy proposals included:

• Creation of an Energy Security Corporation "outside the federal bureaucracy" to develop alternative energy sources. Administration officials said later the corporation would get $88 billion over the next decade to produce 2.5 million barrels a day of alternative fuels.

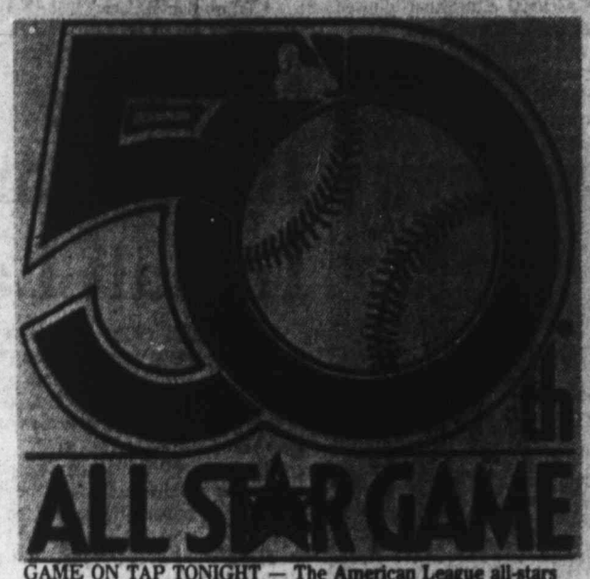

• An energy mobilization board to cut red tape blocking increased energy production and projects.

• A $5 billion program to require utilities to switch from oil to coal and a $2 billion plan for the companies to make low-cost loans to their customers

Cold Front May Bring Area Rains

By RAYNIE HARDESTY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

QUICK-building thunderclouds which triggered isolated showers and storms over the southern Panhandle and northern South Plains Monday, may develop again today as a cold front and moist air continue mixing over the area.

Forecasters predict a 20 percent chance for more rain in the Lubbock area today and a 30 percent chance tonight, as temperatures cool slightly from the passing front.

While rain doused West Texas Monday afternoon, a slow-moving tornado killed one person and injured 34 as it passed through Cheyenne, Wyo., demolishing parts of the city.

Lamb, Hale Deluged

Cloudy skies in West Texas spawned isolated thunderstorms across the area Monday afternoon and dumped up to two inches of rain in portions of Lamb and Hale counties before dissipating within an hour.

Although many areas received less than a half inch of precipitation by dusk Monday, a spokesman at the Lubbock National Weather Service said more clouds could develop and release rains over the South Plains by this morning.

As the cool front moves southward, temperatures today should reach into the upper 80s, slightly cooler than Monday's high of 92. Tonight's low should be in the upper 60s before the mercury rises into the low 90s again on Wednesday. Winds should be easterly to southeasterly at 110 to 15 mph.

The heaviest thunderstorm activity within a band stretching from near Roswell, N.M., to the Childress area, was reported in northern Lamb County near Olton.

Olton Gets Winds

Winds estimated at 60 to 70 mph were reported at Olton where almost 2 inches of rain fell within an hour about 3:30 p.m. The high winds, however, caused no serious damage except for blowing leaves off cotton plants, according to Olton farmer Larry Whitten. Light hail also was reported accompanying the storm.

Although rainfall amounts generally were slight, the showers fell fast enough to cause water to flood U.S. 87 near Abernathy, said a motorist who drove to

Prices Boosted Again By Cigarette Makers

By JOHNNY HOLMES
Avalanche-Journal Staff

MORE THAN ever before, the spending money of cigarette users is going up in smoke.

Two of the nation's largest tobacco companies Monday told their distributors they are raising the price of a carton of cigarettes nearly 15 cents, effective immediately. The other major companies are expected to follow suit later this week.

The increase is the second since about Christmas, when the tobacco companies kicked their prices up nearly 20 cents a carton.

Local distributors received telegrams from R.J. Reynolds Co. (the world's largest tobacco company) and Liggett-Meyers Co., informing them of the sudden increases. Reynolds produces such brands as Winston, Salem, Camel, Vantage and More, while Ligett-Meyers makes Chesterfields and L&Ms.

In Lubbock, the average price for a carton of cigarettes will jump from about $5.50 to $5.65, while vending packs could jump to as much as 85 cents, according to Matt Smith, co-owner of McKee Distributors here, which handles about 20,000 cartons of cigarettes weekly.

"That may not seem like so much of an increase until you realize that nearly half the cost of cigarettes is a combination of federal and state taxes," Smith said. "That 15-cent increase is really an increase of about 25 percent of the actual cost of the cigarettes."

Before this new increase, the price of cigarettes, excluding any taxes, was about $2.75 per carton. But to that amount, the federal government added 80-cent tax, while Texas added another $1.85, so the actual cost of cigarettes was only 52 percent of the retail price.

"(The new increase is) a pretty healthy increase, but it's pretty well hidden in the taxes," Smith said.

Smith said the tobacco companies offered no explanation for the increases.

"The telegrams said only that the increases were within the guidelines set by the president's Council for Wage and Price Guidelines," he said. "I'm guessing that it just costs more to get the merchandise to the public, and that it costs more to keep their representatives out in the field fulltime."

Cigarette prices have been rising nearly twice a year for the last few years, Smith said.

The only way frustrated smokers can force the price to drop or at least remain the same is to "let the cigarettes sit on the shelf," he said.

"The market will charge what the traffic will bear," he continued. "If $5.65 cigarettes are too much, don't buy them. The tobacco companies will have to lower their prices to a point where people will pay them again. It works the same way with clothes or anything else."

In the meantime, that mile walk for a Camel is rapidly becoming a most expensive one.

Hospital May Hire Management Firm

By KIM COBB
Avalanche-Journal Staff

HEALTH Sciences Center Hospital officials may not hire an individual as a new executive director — instead, they may opt for a management firm.

But at least one Lubbock physician hotly criticizes the idea, saying if it is implemented it will be "a further rape of the taxpayers."

The Lubbock County Hospital District Board of Managers came out of an hour-long executive session Monday announcing it is considering a proposal from a hospital management firm run by Highland Hospital administrator Jerry Howard. Under the proposal, the teaching hospital's administration and data processing operation would be taken over immediately.

The proposal comes only a few months after the board voted not to renew the contract of Hyatt Medical Management Services Inc. — a California management firm that helped get the hospital open but failed to keep it financially solvent.

Desperation Move Cited

Lubbock physician George Beck, who contacted The Avalanche-Journal Monday, accused hospital district board members of moving in desperation and "jumping at a pie in the sky," ignoring the advice of the experts they recently recruited.

Beck stressed that he has great respect for Howard and his ability in running Highland Hospital. But he noted that Howard's management firm only runs non-teaching hospitals that do not accept charity patients. "Their experience and goals are not the same" as those needed to run a county teaching hospital, Beck said.

Beck, an anesthiologist who is on the Methodist Hospital staff, accused board members of not consulting the four-day-old financial advisory Blue Ribbon Committee chaired by orthodontist James Granberry. Granberry could not be reached Monday night for comment.

They also did not consult the hospital administrators brought to Lubbock Thursday as financial consultants, Beck said. The visiting administrators are expected within a week to have written recommendations for helping the financially troubled district.

Board members have been looking for a new executive director since they dismissed former administrator Gerald Bosworth June 26. The board has been seeking an administrative replacement as well as a new data processing system to replace the hospital's current system, whose parent company is going out of business.

Board chairman Jack Strong called consideration of the proposal by Hospitals of the Southwest Inc. (HSI) a "stop-gap" measure, to be used simply to get the hospital back on its feet again. Health Sciences is loosing about $150,000 a week, Strong said, and probably can't afford to spend the time it would take to

Budget Cuts Ordered By School Board

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

LUBBOCK school board members Monday told school district administrators to trim $300,000 off the district's projected budget, adding that a tax rate increase might be considered to raise additional revenue.

Trustees met at 3 p.m. for the first of two work sessions to consider a general operating budget of about $41.7 million in expenditures.

The general operating budget is part of an approximate overall budget that will approach about $50 million.

The revenue for the general operating budget totals about $39.5 million, with expenditures of about $41.7 million, resulting in a deficit of some $600,000. Though the district would gain almost $835,000 in carryover funds from last year, trustee Buddy Forbess warned that such a carryover cannot be counted on every year to build up the budget.

Fears For Future

"I'm afraid in a couple of years someone is going to be looking at some gosh awful figures no one will understand," said Forbess.

"If it's going to cost us $600,000 more to operate, I think we ought to face it this year instead of next year."

Forbess added, "I don't want to vote on a deficit budget."

The newest board member, Deaton Rigsby, suggested a tax rate increase that several members said they would consider. "If we have to raise taxes to keep the level of education up, I'll vote

Lawsuit Threatened By Property Owners

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

THE LUBBOCK Property Owners Association will take the City of Lubbock to court if three charter amendments proposed by the organization are not submitted to the voters, LPOA attorney Warren Goss says.

Although Goss claims he is optimistic "good sense, knowledge and integrity will prevail" and the Lubbock City Council will call an election on the three tax limitation amendments, he says the LPOA can force the council to call the election if it refuses.

On Thursday, when the LPOA petitions calling for such an election were presented to the council, City Attorney John Ross said he thought the proposed amendments present "serious legal questions" which may prevent them from being placed on the ballot.

Specifically, Ross questioned whether the initiative process by which voters can petition the council for a charter amendment election can be used on the three LPOA amendments.

Although Ross said further study is needed of the proposed charter amendments and of applicable state law, he indicated he would recommend against calling an election unless the questions are resolved.

However, the LPOA's recourse if an election is not called, Goss says, is to file for a writ of mandamus from state district court to compel the council to submit the amendments to the voters.

Federal Suit Possible

Failing that, Goss says the organization might take its fight to federal court with claims that the rights of LOA members to due process and equal protection had been violated by the council's refusal to allow them a voice in taxation procedures.

Ross' statements regarding the election "seem somewhat premature," Goss says, adding the city attorney appears "not to be doing a very good job."

"It sounds like he's going to pose arguments regardless of the constitutional questions," Goss says.

LPOA director Elmer East, also an attorney, says Ross should be more specific about the constitutional questions he has about the proposed amendments.

The council should "follow the clear

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The government of President Park Chung-hee freed 86 political prisoners on Tuesday to mark South Korea's Constitution Day, the Justice Ministry announced. Sources said that among those freed were the Rev. Park Hyung-kyoo and the Rev. Yoon Ban-ung.

Somoza Allies Abandoning Dying Regime

MANAGUA, Nicargua (AP) — Frantic officials and business associates of the dying Somoza regime were hurriedly packing their bags, jamming airline counters and going into hiding Monday as government sources reported President Anastasio Somoza might resign as early as Tuesday.

In an unexplained move apparently linked with preparations for his government's collapse, Somoza fired more than 100 top officers of his national guard.

Government sources said Somoza met in the bunker with junior national guard officers including his son Anastasio, a lieutenant colonel, and legislative members of his Liberal Nationalist Party.

A party member said Somoza and the legislators discussed convening a joint session of the 100-member Congress Tuesday morning to name an interim president to receive Somoza's resignation. He said Francisco Urcyuo, 54-year-old president of the 70-seat House of Deputies, appeared to be a "shoo in."

It appeared doubtful that the majority of legislators required by the constitution to make the presidential change

Many Left Unsure Of Apollo Triumph's Worth

By EDWARD C. EZELL

WASHINGTON (NEA) — For many years there has hung in the office of a NASA historian a poster based on the front page of a New York City tabloid. Neil Armstrong is standing on the moon under the headline "So What!"

Being historically minded, the historian changed the exclamation point to a question mark — "So What?"

We can only give a qualified response to such a query about the Apollo program since just a decade has passed since Americans first landed on the lunar surface. Only after many years will be able to assess accurately the worth of Apollo, the national effort that allowed 12 men to set foot on the moon.

British writer Anthony R. Michaelis recently listed chronologically what he considers man's 10 most significant technological "triumphs.":

- Pyramids (c. 2500 B.C.)
- Roman Roads and Aqueducts (beginning 312 B.C.)
- Gothic Cathedrals (c. 1150 to 1500)
- Crystal Palace (1851)
- Transatlantic Cable (1858-1866)
- Suez Canal (1869)
- Eiffel Tower (1889)
- Atomic Bomb (1945)
- Apollo Program (1961-1972)
- Alaskan Oil Pipeline (1977)

Most historians could find some fault with this list. But it does remind us that sending men to land and work on its surface and returning them safely to Earth was one of our major tecnhological accomplishments.

There was a time when such an adventure would have been widely and enthusiastically praised, but the Apollo program took place during a difficult period for the United States in both its foreign and domestic concerns.

The unhappy war in Southeast Asia detracted from the glory that could have been Apollo's.

By the end of fiscal 1970, the war in Indochina had cost this country $108.5 billion. It was predicted that the conflict's "ultimate cost," including veterans' benefits and interest on war loans, would reach $352 billion.

That was twice the cost of the Korean conflict and almost half the U.S. cost of the Second World War.

Commentator James L. Clayton noted in 1973 that these were conservative figures that measured only the direct major monetary costs.

He noted: "The estimate does not include inflationary costs owing to the war, the loss of services and earnings by the 45,000 men killed in the war to date, the cost of resentment abroad, the depletion of our natural resources, the postponement of critical domestic programs, the cost of arrested training and education of our youth, the cost of suspended cultural progress ...."

Against the backtop of this unpopular war, the importance of Apollo was diminished for many, especially when they remembered that the lunar goal had been set originally to counter the Cold War challenge of the Soviets.

At home, the domestic crisis surrounding the demands of black Americans for civil rights and freedom from poverty cast another shadow on the lunar landings.

The summers of 1965, 1966, 1967 and 1968 saw riots and violent demonstrations associated with the civil-rights movement in many U.S. cities.

After Washington's 14th Street corridor was burned and looted in the summer of 1968, militant black leaders became increasingly hostile toward the space program in general and Apollo in particular. For them, the space effort symbolized the misallocation of federal dollars that could have been applied to the nation's domestic problems.

A day before Apollo 11's historic moon landing, black activist Marion Barry (now mayor of Washington) asked the press: "Why should blacks rejoice when two white Americans land on the moon when white America's money and technology have not even reached (the inner city)?"

Ralph D. Abernathy, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, and members of 25 poor black families went to Florida for the Apollo 11 launch to protest the waste of federal dollars.

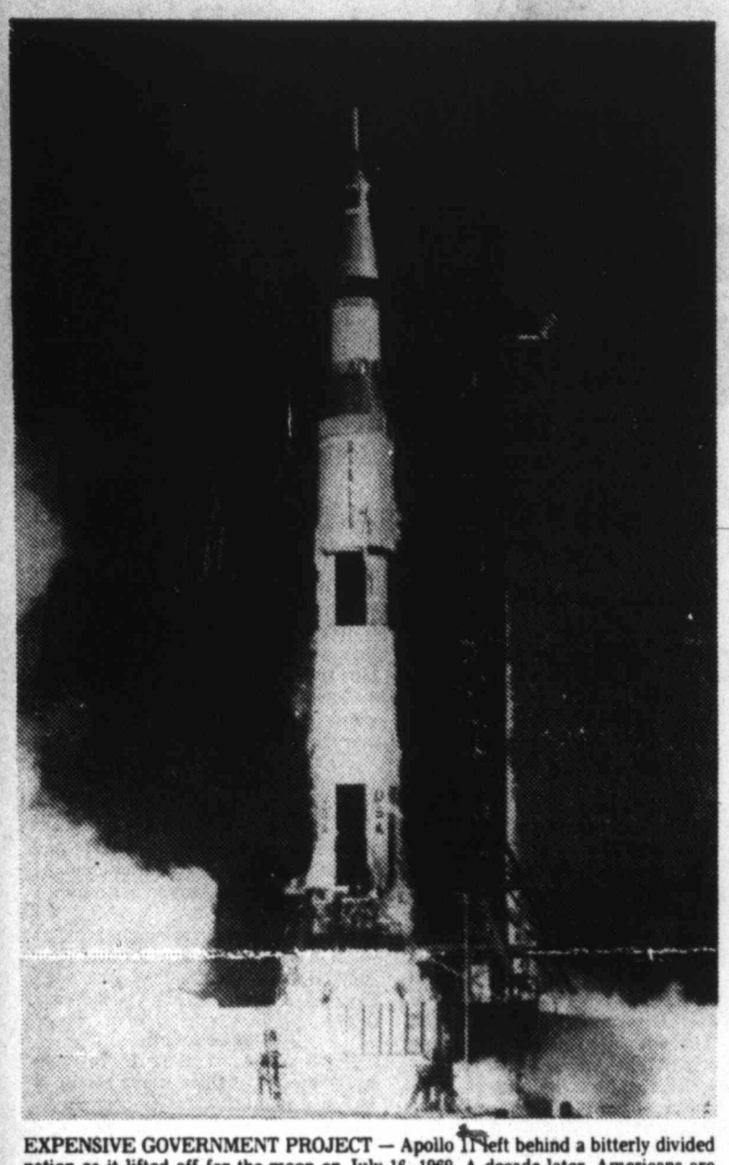

NASA Director Thomas Paine told them that it would be "a lot harder to solve the problems of hunger and poverty than it is to send men to the moon." He also noted that cancellation of the flight would not relieve the many difficulties of the poor and the hungry.

Although Paine gained the support of Abernathy and his group for that mission, the nagging feeling remained that space dollars might be spent more wisely on Earth.

A decade later, the Apollo program is still controversial in some quarters. To answer the "So What?" question, we must determine what Apollo cost and what it accomplished.

Next: Costs and benefits.

EXPENSIVE GOVERNMENT PROJECT — Apollo 11 left behind a bitterly divided nation as it lifted off for the moon on July 16, 1969. A decade later, Americans are still wondering whether the money spent on the Apollo program might have been put to better use at home.

B-57 Plane Crashes In Salt Lake City

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A B-57 bomber en route from Montana to be scrapped in Arizona crashed into a warehouse on the outskirts of Salt Lake City Monday and exploded after both crewmen bailed out, authorities said.

Giant clouds of black smoke poured out of the building following the explosion, which apparently caused no injuries.

There were initial reports the plane was carrying rockets, but Larry A. Johnson, a city paramedics spokesman, said he was told the only explosives material aboard was black powder contained in cartridges in the tail of the plane that are used to stop the engines.

Fire department officials said the crewmen were hospitalized and no one was believed missing in the building. The crewmen's condition was not immediately known.

A Federal Aviation Administration spokesman in Washington, Dick Stafford, said the pilot had "alerted the center it had altitutde fluctuations. We're told they bailed out and the plane went into an unoccupied warehouse."

But a Salt Lake City woman, Carol Android, said she was inside the building when the plane hit. Authorities at the scene said the building had been leased to auto mechanics.

"I heard a big explosion. I saw the flames all over. I kicked a door and tried to get out. It wouldn't open. I kicked it again and it opened. The whole place was on fire," she sobbed.

Firemen said there were explosives and toxic chemicals inside the building and that the powder in the plane may have exploded upon impact.

The plane crashed just south of the Salt Lake International Airport, the FAA said. It had not been scheduled to land in Utah.

Lt. Al Cochrane of Malmstrom Air Force Base, Great Falls, Mont., said the plane was en route to Davis-Monthom Air Force Base in Tucson, Ariz., to be scrapped.

More Americans Face Unemployment

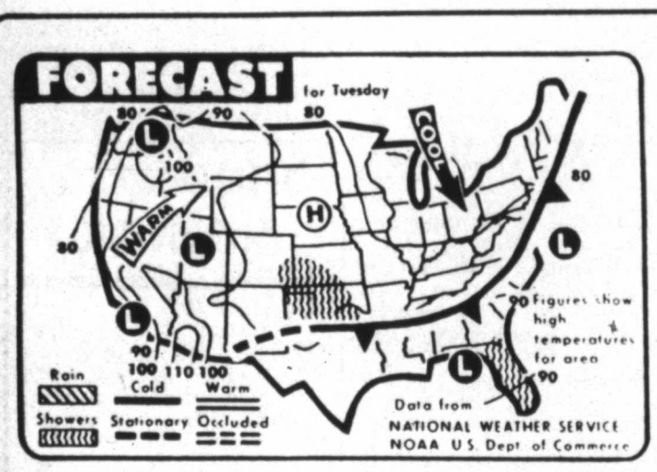

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of working Americans declined slightly during the second quarter of 1979, the first dip in employment since the 1974-75 recession, the Labor Department reported Monday.

The report was in line with Carter administration predictions that unemployment would rise this year and next as the economy heads into a mild recession.

The Labor Department said employment totaled 96.4 million during the April-June quarter, down from 96.6 million during the first three months of the year.

The last time employment fell was in the first quarter of 1975, when the number of working Americans plummeted to 84.4 million from 85.6 million during the fourth quarter of 1974.

The percentage of Americans who are 16 or older and hold jobs also declined slightly during the second quarter of 1979 to 59.1 percent, compared with a record 59.4 percent during the first quarter.

Iraqi Leader Cites Health, Steps Down

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — President Ahmed Hassan al-Bakr resigned Monday and was replaced by Saddam Hussein, vice chairman of the Revolutionary Command Council under Bakr, the Iraqi News Agency reported.

Hussein reshuffled the Cabinet, and the news agency said he assured Syria there were no plans to change the political-military alliance the two nations have pledged to form to confront Israel.

Bakr, known to be suffering from a heart ailment, had made few public appearances in recent years, during which Hussein exercised many of the day-to-day functions of a government chief.

INA said Bakr, 67, had expressed a desire to step down as president, citing health reasons.

The Revolutionary Command Council, of which Bakr was chairman, accepted the resignation, the agency said, and Hussein was sworn in during the same RCC session.

Bakr announced his resignation late Monday in a nationwide address marking the 12th anniversary of the coup that brought his ruling Baath Party back to power in Iraq after a five-year respite.

The outgoing president was one of the officers who overthrew the Iraqi Hashemite monarchy in July 1958. He held no official position until 1963 when he was appointed premier. Later in 1963 a coup ousted the Baath Party from power, and he engineered the July 17, 1968, coup that brought it back.

Hussein, 42, was regarded as the real power in the last few years, often credited with thwarting attempts to topple Bakr during his illness.

Scandals Shake Israel's Army

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The Israeli army, once protected by secrecy and considered above reproach, has been shaken by scandals that have stained its image of integrity and superiority.

A series of disclosures over the past year has revealed cover-ups, inefficiency, lax discipline and combat crimes ranging from looting to murder of prisoners. And the chief of staff, Lt. Gen. Raphael Eytan, has become embroiled in political disputes and drawn sharp criticism for granting leniency to soldiers convicted of killing Arab civilians.

It is a shock for Israelis to realize that the same army that won four wars in 30 years and carried out the daring Entebbe raid also looted and killed prisoners in Lebanon. But many observers contend transgressions always occurred but just were not publicized.

"The army isn't a sacred cow anymore," said Amnon Rubenstein, a liberal member of Parliament and a former law school dean. "People grumble and journalists write.

"What has changed in the army is the level of exposure. I think it's healthy, but people must keep this in perspective. These are exceptions," he said.

Others disagree, warning of a dangerous decline in the level of a vaunted military machine that still remains largely a citizens' army, touching the life of every Israeli.

"The army is gradually sinking to the general level of society," charged Meir Pa'il, a leftist Parliament deputy. "If it doesn't change, in a generation or two the army will reach the general level of the Middle East. Even if there is peace, we need the army as a guarantee."

Pa'il, a military historian and longtime army officer, called for Eytan's resignation during a stormy Parliament debate, earlier this month, sparked by the general's recent decisions to reduce prison sentences of two soldiers who murdered Arabs.

Eytan's leniency was the latest in a string of events that has subjected the army to some of the toughest criticism since 1973, when its initial setbacks in the Yom Kippur War shattered the aura of Israeli battlefield invincibility.

Other incidents include:

—The firing of West Bank military governor David Hagoel, 14 months ago, for covering up an incident in which soldiers fired tear gas into an Arab school during an anti-Israel demonstration. School doors were locked, and a number of Arab youths were injured jumping out of windows.

—The unprecedented firing last January of the navy commander, Rear Adm. Michael Barkai, after he was brought to trial for sexually assaulting a female officer. He was acquitted on a technicality, but the military judges said they believed the woman's complaint.

—Charges of widespread cruel treatment of young soldiers in training that brought a crackdown last year by Defense Minister Ezer Weizman. The hazing reportedly led to the suicide of a young religious recruit.

—A scathing comptroller's report on the army's 1978 invasion and three-month occupation of southern Lebanon, including the finding that because of lax discipline, mistakes and inefficiency many units went into battle ill-prepared and suffered needless casualties, and that there were 182 cases of prosecution of soldiers for looting in Lebanon.

The latest uproar came early this month when leftist legislator Shulamit Aloni revealed that Eytan had reduced from eight years to two years the prison sentence of a lieutenant who murdered at least two prisoners during the Lebanese invasion. Military censors had previously prevented publication of the case, and many details are still secret.

"What shocked me so much was that they tried to cover it up," Mrs. Aoni said. "Because the army is a small society, they don't pay enough attention to the law."

Earlier this year Eytan cut seven years off the 10-year term of a civil guard who murdered a Jerusalem Arab in a fit of rage after the guard's friend was killed by a terrorist.

People could conclude, one columnist wrote, "that the blood of any Arab could be shed at will."

The 50-year-old Eytan, a tough soldier wounded many times in battle, also has come under fire for his hard-line political views.

"He thinks all Arabs are bad and all Jews are good," said one respected military analyst. "And he doesn't trust peace. He trusts only Israel's ability to defend itself."

Last month Eytan became involved in a court battle over the controversial West Bank settlement of Elon Moreh. He filed a deposition contending that the outpost was essential for Israel's security, thereby pitting himself against many former top generals, including Weizman and Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan, who opposed the settlement.

The basic question behind all these controversies is how well the army can defend a country still hemmed in by hostile neighbors.

"Israel's army was always considered one of the best in the world, and it still is," said Moshe Arens, chairman of Parliament's Foreign Affairs Committee. "Unlike other armies, ours has to take action from time to time, so we have a chance to gauge it pretty often. I think it's doing pretty well."

No.1 America's energy problem is a very complex and multi-faceted issue. This is the first in a series in which we will take each of the individual factors involved, one at a time, and discuss the role of each.

Imported oil—part of why we're coming up short.

In 1970, the U.S. imported less than 23% of its oil. Today, we depend on other countries for about 45% of our total supply. This heavy dependence on other countries means that even small interruptions in our imported supply can cause severe problems here at home.

The unexpected revolt in Iran cut the world's oil supply by about 5 million barrels daily. Almost immediately, a world-wide scramble for the limited supply of oil still available took place. In the months that followed, some oil exporting nations did boost production somewhat, but not enough to off-set the world-wide loss.

"And what about today?"

Though oil is once again coming out of Iran, they are exporting only about 3 million barrels daily, less than two-thirds the amount exported before the revolution. Making the current supply situation even more uncertain is the fact that, except for Saudi Arabia, most of the other OPEC countries are unable or unwilling to increase production to make up for the Iran shortfall.

Events in other countries are not the only reasons why the world is coming up short—and why Americans are experiencing shortages at the pumps. But these events are a significant part of the problem.

Factors like refining capacity, increased demand, government regulations, environmental restrictions, and different qualities of crude oil have all played a role and all will be discussed in future communications.

"...And what about tomorrow?"

The fact is, we are consuming energy at an alarming rate. U.S. oil consumption has jumped by over 16% during the last three years, while U.S. oil production, including Alaska, increased only 3%.

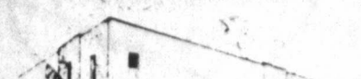

While we cannot control the availability of oil from foreign suppliers, we can and must begin developing more of our own domestic energy resources. We must, at the same time, do everything possible to conserve the energy we have now.

Thank you for listening.

AN EDITORIAL:

Mr. Carter--Answer Still Out

AS MORE DETAILS of President Carter's "make or break" energy program come to light, the magnitude of the problem, for the President and the nation, looms ever larger.

While giving the President good marks for "effort," majority opinion—among citizens and lawmakers—seems to be that of skepticism, coupled with a "give him one more chance" attitude.

Mr. Carter has proposed a program centered on conservation and finding alternate sources of energy. His problem in making it work is twofold: 1. A continued lack of confidence in his leadership, which his Sunday night and followup talks did not dispel, and 2. His "tax and spend" method of solving the energy crisis.

ON THE FIRST count, the President lapsed into his "born again" campaign rhetoric to appeal for support.

At times seeming to "preach," the President made two assumptions which the people most likely won't buy.

One is that there is a crisis of confidence among Americans in their ability to "get the job done," whatever it might be. The other is that Washington is still an isolated island and that Mr. Carter as well as the people must get through to those who run the show there.

The crisis in confidence of which Mr. Carter speaks is not in the citizens' lack of faith in themselves so much as their disenchantment with the President as a leader. While admitting he has failed, Mr. Carter and those about him refuse to address themselves to the causes—bumbling inexperience at the highest levels of government, and continued interference by the bureaucracy in the everyday affairs of everyone.

AS FOR THE President's effort to "place the blame" on a Capital out of touch with the mainstream of America, where such a ploy worked for the Georgia "outsider" 2½ years ago, it won't today, simply because most persons now perceive Mr. Carter as part of the Washington scene.

On the more concrete details of Mr. Carter's program, bits and pieces of the total picture are falling into place.

Mr. Carter projects an outlay over the next 10 years of $140 billion, most of which, he says, "must come from the windfall profits" tax on the U.S. oil industry.

The basic theme of the President's approach seems to be centered on "what already ails us," an emphasis on letting the government do what private industry must eventually do. His suggestion for an Energy Security Corporation and a national energy board hints of further federal encroachment into areas where too much government interference is already a major part of the problem.

THE PRESIDENT also has not addressed himself to other immediate problems—rampant, double-digit inflation and a foreign policy which has been in disarray from the day he took office.

This is not to suggest that Mr. Carter's suggestions should be rejected out of hand. On the contrary, at long last, the President recognizes he has problems, in his personal leadership, in rallying the nation. As we noted before he spoke, Congress and the American people should hear him out. But it is to say that there are alternatives to the President's proposals which also should be fully explored.

The months ahead aren't going to be easy. But, unlike the President, we have confidence the American people, and more importantly, American free enterprise can solve the problems if given the chance to do so.

Getting The Mail Through

"EXTREMELY URGENT" mail could be delivered by private companies under new rules proposed by the U.S. Postal Service.

Subject to public comment until Aug. 10, the regulations would waive the Postal Service's monopoly over first-class mail if it could meet either of two proposed tests.

One test would be if the mailers could show that the value of the letters would be lost if they were not delivered within a specified time.

For example, a trade association currently may be relying on its own employes to deliver daily bulletins to its members within a given city or metropolitan area.

IF THAT INFORMATION is necessary to compete equally in that particular business field, and if speedy distribution is necessary for the information to be useful, the association could apply for a waiver.

Once the waiver were granted, the association could use a third-party delivery service to distribute its bulletins.

The other test would apply to letters that the mailer would be willing to pay a minimum of $3—or twice the normal U.S. Postage, whichever were greater—to make certain of speedy delivery.

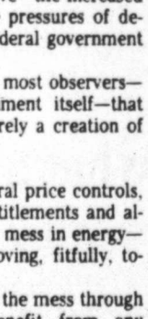

The theory here is that any sender willing to pay so high a price must think it "extremely urgent" that the mail get through on time.

While this move doesn't exactly pave the way for private enterprise to go into competition with the Postal Service on mail deliveries, it does "fill in a gap" of service that the semi-public agency can't fill.

It's a proper step.

M. STANTON EVANS:

Windfall Plan Absurd On Its Face, Elsewhere

WASHINGTON—Suppose that for the past eight years or so, watching the price of homes go up, you had been interested in selling your house on the open market, but had been kept from doing so by Federal regulation.

Now suppose that, in a sudden reversal, the government changes its mind, and decides that you can sell your house, after all, at whatever the market price may happen to be.

That would sound like pretty good news, but then you discover there is a catch:

Because housing prices have skyrocketed in the interim, you will be able to sell your home for much more than you could have eight years ago—say, three times as much. From the government's standpoint, this is a "windfall" you have done nothing to earn. It therefore says it will take away some 60 percent of the increase through a "windfall profits tax."

IT'S DOUBTFUL many people would consider that a fair arrangement. Yet, give or take a detail, that's exactly what the government is planning to do to U.S. oil companies as a condition of de-controlling petroleum prices.

The de-control is gradual rather than sudden, the margins for deciding the "windfall" are complex and variable, and the tax, as voted by the House, would be phased out after a decade.

But the basic idea is the same: An increase from a government-regulated price to the going market price is a "windfall" that should go to Uncle Sam.

The concept is absurd on the face of it, but becomes the more so when we note that the "windfall" would not exist if the government hadn't controlled the price of the product in the first place.

The whole procedure occurs because Federal planners have botched up the workings of the economy.

ALSO, CONSIDER the implications of the view that, if government thinks you haven't "earned" some increases in your income or the value of owned assets, it can take that increase away from you.

The thought is applicable not only to petroleum and houses, but to other real estate, stocks, annuities, or anything else that grows in value because of market factors.

As pernicious as the idea that private companies or individuals don't "deserve" the increased worth of assets created by the pressures of demand is the notion that the Federal government does "deserve" it.

It is by now acknowledged by most observers—including many in the government itself—that the energy crisis is almost entirely a creation of the Federal planners.

THE CRAZY-QUILT of Federal price controls, different tiers of regulation, entitlements and allocations has caused the present mess in energy—which is the reason we are moving, fitfully, toward de-control.

Since government has created the mess through regulation, why should it benefit from any "windfall" accruing from de-regulation? The argument makes no sense in simple equity.

And, even more to the point in terms of solving our energy problems, it will do nothing to produce additional gas and oil.

The urgent need of the present hour is increased production, which will not occur if petroleum revenues are diverted to the government.

REVENUES GOING to the petroleum companies, on the other hand, will inevitably spur production, by providing incentives for further exploration and drilling and capital for new technology required to recover less accessible reserves.

Thus even proponents of the tax concede it will lower expected production—perhaps by as much as half-a-million barrels of oil a day.

In the usual operations of the economy, increased demand that places an upward pressure on prices attracts resources into the marketplace that lead to development of new supplies.

That process hasn't been able to work too well in energy matters in recent years because of Federal price controls; now the planners, despite the push for de-control; seem bent on getting the same result by means of taxes.

Letters to the Editor

Arizona Reader Says Time Past For Alternate Fuels

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

Get this scene, next week or any week:

The Arabs, annoyed at our support of the Israelis, have shut off all shipments of oil to the U.S. —this means 60 percent of our supply is no longer available.

As a result, President Carter and Congress acting swiftly (if you can believe it) have instituted severe rationing. Gasoline available only for industries, armed forces, essential services—fire, police, ambulances, trucking, utilities, and some private enterprise. None for individuals! Take public transportation!, they direct.

How do you get to work, how do your kids get to school, how do you get to market, how do you, Mr. Retired, get to your golf course? Horseback? Horse and buggy? Bicycle? Business slows almost to a halt! People are laid off! There are long lines at the unemployment office! There are bankruptcies everywhere. There is chaos in the land!

The country's energy policy now is mainly one of conservation which is not adequate to combat this national disaster threat. What is missing? Good old American research and development is missing. Vigorous American research and development.

But this takes money, you say? Yes, and here's where we get it: Right now, we Americans use 902 million gallons of gasoline per day. Tax it at 25 cents additional per gallon for a daily revenue of $225 million or almost $22 billion yearly. With these funds set up a crash national research and development program using universities and other research institutions. Also assist auto makers, oil companies, and other related industries in their research. And have an inventors' phone hotline where both the kooks and genii can be heard. Soon across the country there will be thousands of our best brains working on new engines, new sources of energy, working to improve present energy efficiency.

And in the final analysis, they will not only solve and help ease many of our present problems they will create entirely new products and industries to the benefit of us all.

Ah, but you say, what about the poor people? They can't afford an additional 25 cents per gallon. It's either afford the two bits now or gasoline at $3-$5 a gallon later. So let's get on with it.

Odessa Man Sees Next Step On Oil As Nationalization

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

No wonder this country has so many problems. The House Ways and Means Committee in its report on "Crude Oil Windfall Profit Tax Bill of 1979" (HR 3919) had the following to say:

"The Committee bill...imposes a 70 percent windfall profit tax on increases in domestic crude oil prices resulting from the deregulation of crude oil prices or from excessive increases in world oil prices. This tax will reduce the profits of oil producers and royalty owners; it will not be passed on as higher prices to consumers."

It then again said:

"The windfall profit tax is an excise tax on domestically produced crude oil. While most excise taxes tend to be passed on to consumers as higher prices, this will not be true for the windfall profit tax because the price of domestically produced crude oil is set by the world price of oil. Therefore, a tax applying only to domestic producers will not be passed on to consumers as higher prices, but must instead be absorbed out of the profits of the producers and royalty owners."

The above two statements are complete falsehoods. Read both statements again and see if you can figure out how a producer can sell oil at the market price and the price not be passed on to the consumer.

There is only one way in which the producer could absorb the tax and not pass it on to the consumer. That way would result in the producer getting less money for the oil he sells than he is presently getting. He would have to be an idiot to produce and sell oil under those conditions.

The Bill was conceived in dishonesty and will be born in dishonesty. It is not a "profits tax." It is an exise tax. It is the first time in American history domestic producers have been taxed to protect foreign producers. The purpose is to discourage production and development in this country so the politicians can create such a terrible situation they can nationalize all energy production in this country. Nationalization is on its way. Just wait.

If the American consumers fall for this blatant dishonesty, they will be ruled by a Caesar and will deserve it.

Ace's Reaction To SALT II Embrace: 'Ah, Shucks!'

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

SALT II Treaty went well right up to the signing of the document.

But afterwards when the two leaders, Carter and Breeznefe, set in necking, right there in front of all those people yet, it was clear that the Russian leader, although well puckered-up to receive Jimmy's kiss, was reneging on his smooch while Carter himself was shelling peanuts!

However, the Russian dude made up for this culpable omission by prudently closing his eyes in this display of emotion between the two. Just like a maiden receiving her first kiss!

Ah, shucks!

Lubbock Man Says SALT II More 'Vital' Than Energy

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

Skylab re-entered the Earth's atmosphere and the whole world was praying that its debris would be scattered over uninhabitated areas. For the most part the debris fell harmlessly.

When our President comes down from the Mountain at Camp David, there are several issues concerning Inflation, Energy and the SALT II Treaty that must be faced up to, and Americans all must hope that his "Homing Device" is in working order.

Inflation and Energy are important, but, in my opinion, the overriding issue is SALT II, and how it can stave off Armageddon. The selling of SALT II by the administration is more fictional than factual.

The administration has spent more than a million dollars lobbying the American people, using "scare techniques" while avoiding discussion of the substance of the agreements.

It is reminiscent of the tactics employed to foist the Panama Canal treaty upon us. At that time, it was said that it would hurt the prestige of the President if the Senate did not ratify the Treaty, although the majority of Americans were against ratification. The same "prestige" item is being spoon-fed to us.

The President is only one man, but, what about the other 215 million Americans whose future freedom is in jeopardy? "Scare technique" if repeated long enough and hard will work with the help of the media. The United States has been engaged in a gradual unilateral disarmament for many years. There exists a pious hope that the Soviet Union would emulate our course of action.

The American people have never been told of this policy of unilateral disarmament or had it justified to them. As a result of this policy we are now in a position of military inferiority. The Soviets' announced goal has been the destruction of all Capitalistic countries, particularly the United States and they have never said anything to the contrary, despite all the wishful thinking in the last 10 to 15 years of the "bleeding hearts" such as Jane Fonda, Dr. Spock, Ramsey Clark, Andrew Young and others. Remember the war protestors telling us that the South Vietnamese would be better off under the North Vietnamese? Tell that to the thousands of "Boat People" adrift on the ocean.

The overriding issue for our national leadership is to follow the lead of the American people, whose common sense tells them that the surest road to Peace is unchallenged strength.

Long gasoline lines are minor compared to the fact that ratification of SALT II in its present form will hasten the Fall of the American Dream of a Free country. A militarily weak posture leaves us open to blackmail as evidenced by nonaction on the part of this administration on Cuban and Russian take-overs in Africa, the murders of American Ambassadors, desertion of Taiwan to satisfy our new China Allies (?) to name just a few of the embarrassments suffered by a once-proud and powerful nation. The administration's policy of foot-dragging and zigzagging is a cause of frustration and concern for 215 million Americans and I pray that the word brought down from the Mountain will be good for America and the world. Substance, not image-making is what I am praying for.

VIRGINIA PAYETTE:

Heck On Wheels

WASHINGTON—The unthinkable has finally happened: S-E-X has been replaced as Topic A at cocktail parties by (are you ready for this?) the gasoline crunch.

Something had to do it, I suppose. There is, after all, just so far you can go on the subject of you-know-what, at least in polite society.

But when it comes to descriptions of how they're coping in a gasless world, nobody ever runs down.

Getting up at dawn seems to be the main complaint. Local operators pry the padlocks off the pumps for about an hour every weekday morning around 7 or 7:30. And it is very hard for local matrons to get the lashes glued on, the eyeshadow blended in and the lip goo applied that early.

There are other strains. Husbands point out they have urgent duties in the city and can't waste time sitting in gas lines. Besides, what else does the little woman have to do at that hour?

MY FAVORITE solution comes from my dentist, who has taken it upon himself to beat this shortage thing by investing in a motorcycle.

Dr. William Raebeck, an usher in the church and a former professor at the Columbia School of Dentistry, is also the village's lone "hell's angel."

It hasn't been easy. First he had to pony up $800 for his red baby "hog," plus a state-approved helmet with chin straps and at least four inches of reflective material on each side. Also state-approved goggles.

Then he had to get a license to operate the thing (we'll come back to that trauma in a minute), after which he had to learn, the hard way, that some local drivers operate their automobiles the way he wields a drill.

"They look upon motorcyclists with contempt," he says in shocked surprise. "What we really deserve is their appreciation.

"Don't they realize how patriotic we are? That we're risking our lives to conserve gasoline so there'll be enough for them to drive to their tennis games?"

DR. RAEBECK, a marathon-type jogger who runs his six miles every day, says he did not become a stink-pot driver lightly. But he refused to let the government pressure him into buying "one of those little bitty cars you might possibly be able to get into, but there's no way you can get out of."

The thing is, you can own a motorcycle, but you can't drive it without a license, and getting one of those, Dr. Raebeck reports, was "a maze of such unbelievable obstacles" he almost reverted to four wheels.

"There's also an eight-page supplemental pamphlet (P-58) with urgent information for bikers, including a warning that not only must they know every rule in those 96 pages, they also have to have an automobile drivers' license before they can apply for permission to ride a motorcycle.

"ONLY THEN can you apply for a special motorcycle 'endorsement' (P-7), which will be stamped on a completely new driver's license issued after you pass the motorcycle written test (MV-2000) and vision test (MV-500, Part III)."

Part I, it seems, is a learner's permit that lets you practice-drive under the supervision of a licensed motorcyclist who is 18 or older. And you have to stay within a quarter-mile of his cycle at all times.

Once you get the hang of it, you're ready for a road test. For this you have to provide a chauffered automobile for the inspector to ride in while he eagle-eyes your cornering, signaling, figure-eights and circles.

You must also be accompanied by a licensed cyclist over 18 (not necessarily the same 18-year-old).

Finally, he adds, you must be on time and "have previously made arrangements for clear, dry weather."

After the test you surrender your learner's permit in exchange for a "receipt for surrender of motorcycle learner's permit" (MV-501.3) which is good until 12:01 a.m. of the next day.

"This is so you can drive the motorcycle home from the road test," Dr. Raebeck explains. "You do not need a receipt if you haul your bike home on a trailer or in a station wagon. You could also push it.

"And it's not a good sign if the inspector recommends that the accompanying motorcyclist drive your bike home instead of you."

THEY MAIL your report card (Report of Road Test for Motorcycle License, MV 501.3) and order you to bring it, plus both parts of your driver's license, to headquarters for the "class 7 endorsement," plus the application for your motorcycle license (MV-44T), the road test appointment stub (MV-500, Part II), and your state learner's permit (MV-500-part III).

Then, provided you didn't spin out in the middle of a vroom-vroom, you get your new license, duly stamped as a motorcyclist. Having put up with all this, the good doctor is now ready to beat the gas shortage.

And while I applaud his patriotism, not to mention his patience, I hope I will be forgiven if I add just one thing: Parties were more fun when we stuck to Topic A.

L.M. BOYD:

...Pass It On

Q. CRYONICS IS THAT process in which dead bodies are frozen at minus 320 degrees F in the hope they'll someday be rejuvenated. It was introduced into the United States in 1964. How many people have since been so frozen?

A. Probably fewer than a dozen.

If a girl is to engage in a brief career of shoplifting, she is most likely to do so at ages 15 to 17. If a boy is to do that thing, he is most likely to try it at ages 12 to 14. Or so the juvenile records indicate.

If that range of mountains has a saw-toothed profile, it's a "sierra."

Q. "What's the average weight of Japanese sumo wrestlers?"

A. About 310 pounds would be typical, though that's not a precise average. Incidentally, do you know those big boys train on beer?

Q. "How deep is the ice that covers Greenland?

A. Average depth, 5,000 feet.

Winery owners threw a big wine-tasting party. It was a test. Different colors of wines were offered. What they found out was that nobody there would drink the green wine.

'Hopper Spray Tactics Criticized

PIERRE, S.D. (UPI) — Grasshoppers on more than a million prairie acres are feeding on poisoned foilage, but ranchers grumble that government bureaucrats came up with "too little, too late" to stop the voracious critters.

Spraying on western South Dakota rangeland was conducted under the direction of the U.S. Department of Agriculture. The USDA, state government and landowners each picked up a third of the estimated $4.50 per acre cost.

Ranchers who participated in the program charge government delays, legal battles over the chemical toxaphene and too light an application reduced effectiveness and have set the stage for an even worse infestation in 1980.

"We've still got infestations up to 100 hoppers per square yard," groused rancher Howard Ireland of Belvidere of the $1.6 million program. "We had troubles getting the government going. They just wanted to wait and I think we should have sprayed earlier."

Don Anderson, Jackson County extension agent, said only a 40 to 50 percent kill rate was reported from spraying because of a late start. He said a considerable number of adult hoppers remain alive to mate and lay eggs for next summer.

Ben Kantack, state entomologist, disagreed that the spraying programs got under way too late.

"The federal program was designed to spray after the grasshopper hatch was complete and areas of high infestation that remain after spraying are due to heavy foliage," Kantack said.

Bill Burtz, who ranches along the White River in Tripp County, said spraying on his land resulted in a good kill. But he said he's not sure it was good enough.

"The hoppers that are left will be laying eggs pretty soon, and we'll probably have the same problem next year," Burtz said. "I'm a afraid it was too little, too late."

Mike McNamara, emergency assistance director for the State Department of Agriculture, said a kill count will get under way soon to determine the effectiveness of the spray program.

"The kill was down to about 30 hoppers per square yard in areas of heavy canopy," McNamara said, "which is a big reduction in population from what had been 150 to 200."

While the federal government helped western South Dakota ranchers carry the cost of spraying, those in the eastern portion of the state will be on their own.

"The federal program is only applicable to rangeland of 10,000 contiguous acres or more," McNamara said. "You would be hard put to find that" in the eastern part of the state.

U.S. District Judge Donald Porter in Pierre earlier this month granted an Audubon Society request to ban the use of toxaphene after the group said it would harm wildlife. Toxaphene proponents said neither of the two alternate chemicals, Sevin-4 and Malathion, is as effective in killing the hoppers.

Import Seminar Scheduled Today

The Lubbock Chamber of Commerce will sponsor an Import Seminar at 8:30 a.m. today in the chamber's Conference Room, 14th Street and Avenue K.

The program, designed to provide the merchants of the Lubbock and surrounding area with a generalized idea of how specific foreign nations engage in import trade, will be conducted by the International Trade Commitee of the Chamber of Commerce.

The seminar also will introduce new merchants into the international market, and help those people learn the most effective means by which to have their inventory arrive at local market places.

Local guests will speak on specific areas of specialization concerning the best ways to import merchandise. Local guest speakers include: Ron Shelley, operations manager of Texas Instruments (luncheon speaker); Ginger Chambliss of Southwestern Bell Telephone (discussing International Direct Dialing); Melvin Schneider, customs port director; and Jan Bowers of Bowers Customs Brokers.

Registration fee for the event is $10. The seminar will end after the luncheon.

Trial Witness Says Hair Found In Pantyhose Matches Bundy's

Patricia Lasko, a state hair comparison expert, told the jury she compared samples of Bundy's hair to hairs found in a pantyhose mask at the Tallahassee apartment of dance student Cheryl Thomas.

"In this situation it is highly likely that these two hairs came from Mr. Bundy," Miss Lasko said. Bundy's defense objected to that answer and Judge Edward D. Cowart told jurors to disregard it.

But prosecutors pursued the comparison.

"They were microscopically similar," Miss Lasko said of the hair samples. "These hairs either came from Mr. Bundy or from someone else whose hair is exactly like his, who happened to have been at the Dunwoody apartment to have left their hairs in these pantyhose."

Bundy, who is assisting in his own defense, sat calmly at the defense table, his brown, curly hair neatly combed. He occasionally leafed through a pamphlet on hair characteristics.

Miss Thomas, who lived on Dunwoody Street in Tallahassee, was one of five young women attacked that morning. The other four were at the Chi Omega sorority house, where two sorority sisters were killed.

Later, on cross-examination, Miss Lasko conceded that hair comparison "is not an absolute identification."

Miss Lasko said she hadn't studied cross sections of strands in comparing Bundy's hair and the pantyhose hairs. She insisted she could do a valid comparison without a cross section.

The cross-examination broke up in anger during the afternoon when the defense insisted on seeing Miss Lasko's notes, despite her reluctance. A defense attorney took them from her, and a prosecutor in turn took them away from his opponent.

Judge Cowart called a quick timeout. "Two wrongs don't make a right," he lectured the attorneys. "If I get any more problems like I had here, somebody's going to be in trouble."

Bundy is charged with the murders of Lisa Levy and Margaret Bowman and faces attempted murder charges in the vicious beatings of Miss Thomas and Chi Omega residents Kathy Kleiner and Karen Chandler.

He also is charged with murdering 12-year-old Kimberly Leach of Lake City, Fla., on Feb. 9, 1978, and with killing Caryn Campbell, a Dearborn, Mich., nurse, near Aspen, Colo., in 1975. He has been convicted of kidnapping in Utah.

Bundy escaped from jail in Colorado before his murder trial there. He was arrested in Pensacola, Fla., on Feb. 15, 1978 — one month after the Chi Omega murders.

On Monday, prosecutors tried again to tell jurors about a rambling, night-long police interrogation of Bundy two days after he was arrested. Detectives who were present say Bundy told them of feeling "like a vampire" and fearing that fantasies were taking over his life.

Cowart banned the testimony after public defenders said they tried to reach Bundy during the long discussion but were kept away from him.

Conspiracy Allegations Stall GM Contract Talks

DETROIT (AP) — The opening of contract talks covering 471,000 General Motors Corp. workers was delayed for nearly two hours Monday as top union officers met with the company's chairman and president to complain of anti-union activities.

United Auto Workers President Douglas Fraser said he had presented to GM Chairman Thomas A. Murphy and President Elliott M. Estes "what I thought was evidence that a conspiracy existed between people in management (at the company's Oklahoma City assembly plant) and the anti-union forces there."

"I was assured by Mr. Murphy that he wouldn't tolerate it," Fraser said after the initial bargaining session.

Some 2,200 workers at GM's new plant vote Thursday on whether to be represented by the UAW. The company previously promised to remain neutral in the election.

Because of that election, talks at GM were recessed until Friday.

Negotiations covering 197,000 workers at Ford Motor Co. get under way today and talks for 110,000 Chrysler Corp. workers begin Wednesday. Bargainers will be working against a Sept. 14 deadline, when the pact reached in 1976 expires.

Fraser said that Monday morning "T-shirts by the thousands (bearing anti-union slogans) were carried into the executive garage and distributed on company time."

He said the action violated agreements and assurances that the company would remain neutral in organizing drives.

GM's top man at the talks, vice president George B. Morris Jr., said he did not believe a conspiracy existed. "I know the plant manager, the personnel superintendent and a number of key supervisors. They are doing their darndest to remain neutral."

The union had frequent recent complaints about the plant, Morris said. "We checked out every charge that came to our attention. The problem is every report we get is diametrically opposed to reports that the union gets."

Fraser said he did not think Estes, Murphy or Morris were being devious, but, "Somebody's playing games with us at this point."

Defendants Seek More Evidence

By KAY BELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Attorneys for Steven Moss and Joe Leonard Jr., two of 14 persons indicted last month as alleged conspirators in a South Plains cocaine trafficking ring, Monday filed pretrial motions seeking additional government evidence against the defendants.

Both Moss, of 3102 40th St., and Leonard, of Austin, were named as co-conspirators in one of six sealed indictments returned June 7 by a federal grand jury. They are accused of transporting cocaine from Austin to Lubbock for distribution and, in a second count of that indictment, Moss is charged with possession of cocaine.

Travis Shelton, Moss' attorney, stated in his motions concerning the two indictments that because of "limited access to the government's file," Moss believes the U.S. attorney's office has other material relevant to the cases.

This other material, Shelton added in briefs supporting the separate motions, should be made available to his client "because the (indictments are) based on the very broad, vague and uncertain allegation of conspiracy by both named and unnamed co-conspirators."

Among materials sought by Moss and Shelton are transcripts of all grand jury witness testimony and any conversations that were written down with such persons before they testified, a list of prosecution witnesses, results of all scientific tests and statements made to law enforcement agents or other persons, provided such statements were recorded.

Shelton also filed a motion for a Bill of Particulars, seeking specific information about the allegations in the indictments, including when the alleged conspiracies began and ended and the alleged role of Moss in each conspiracy.

A third motion filed concerning each indictment seeks any evidence the government may have in connection with the indictments that may be favorable to Moss.

Leonard's attorney, Anthony Nicholas of San Antonio, filed three motions with the clerk Monday.

The first motion filed by Nicholas requests a separate trial for Leonard because it is "highly prejudicial to (Leonard's) name" to be tried jointly with the other co-defendants.

Nicholas also is seeking a pretrial evidentiary hearing or an order from the court that the government offer its proof of the indictment's charges "prior to the introduction of any hearsay testimony of co-conspirators."

The third motion filed on behalf of Leonard asks that if the court refuses to grant him a separate trial, he be given an additional six peremptory jury select challenges separate from those of the other defendants.

Monday was the final day attorneys could file any pretrial motions for clients facing Aug. 6 trial dates. In addition to the trials of the persons named in the indictments, including Moss and Leonard, the trial of Stephen Zane Hall also is set for the Aug. 6 docket.

Hall is charged in another indictment with two counts of possession of cocaine with intent to distribute the drug.

Carter 'Sermon' Leaves Texas Solons Generally Impressed

A-J News Services

U.S. Rep. Kent Hance of Lubbock said Monday that members of the Texas congressional delegation generally were impressed with President Carter's performance on his Sunday energy speech and are expecting legislative proposals to back it up within the next two weeks.

Sunday night after the speech, Hance was quoted by the Associated Press as saying, "Second sermon I've heard today. Bless his heart, he's trying. You can tell he's trying harder than I've ever seen him try before."

The Lubbock Democrat also said he was particularly pleased to hear a proposal for an energy mobilization board to speed top priority projects through regulatory hurdles.

"An energy mobilization board would cut out the red tape of OSHA and EPA that has blocked so many projects like the Long Beach-to-Midland pipeline that I have been fighting over for the past six months," Hance said Monday. "Government regulatory agencies have just tied the hands of progress with energy development."

The Long Beach-to-Midland oil pipeline would bring Alaskan crude oil to Texas and, by connecting with another line, to the Midwest.

Hance said government agencies to date have blocked it by requiring more than 700 permits for its construction.

The congressman said he approved of Carter's proposal to stop using as much foreign oil as possible, but that he was concerned about whether "we are going to have a no-growth policy or gradually cut back on OPEC oil and build up domestic production so there will not be a slowdown in business activity."

Asked if there is any speculation in Washington that Carter might not finish out his term because of public dissatisfaction with his administration, Hance said there is no such expectation but that strong action to back up the Sunday speech is expected.

"A lot of people are taking the attitude of 'Let's give him a chance and see what he can come up with,'" Hance said. "In the next couple of weeks, each of the things he mentioned (Sunday) night should be developed into legislation.

"I think people perceive him as an honest man and trustworthy, and they hope he can show the leadership he showed in the peace treaty between Israel and Egypt, and they're going to wait and see if he can show some domestic leadership."

The president's critics before the speech did not find any reasons to change their minds.

"I think the American people will feel they've been 'Rafshooned' again," U.S. Sen. John Tower said with reference to presidential media consultant Gerald Rafshoon.

The state's Republican senator agreed with Carter that there is a national malaise but said the president's solution took the wrong direction.

"The crisis of confidence has been precipitated by government and too much government intervention, and the president missed the opportunity to make comprehensive proposals to lighten that burden," Tower said.

His Democratic colleague, U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, was more impressed.

"The president has set forth for the nation some very major objectives. They are difficult objectives, worthwhile objectives, that deserve the support of the Congress and I am going to do my best to help us achieve them," Bentsen said.

House Majority Leader Jim Wright said the speech was excellent and called the president's program "bold and workable."

"The goals are high, but we can achieve them," the Fort Worth Democrat said before pointing to the synthetic fuel and windfall profits tax bills already passed by the House.

"There are other elements in his program which in my opinion have great merit," Wright said. "All in all, he has challenged this nation to do our best and I believe we will respond to the challenge."

U.S. Rep. Mickey Leland, a Democrat from Houston, enthusiastically praised the president's call for a patriotic, unified front and said he would be supporting specific programs when they reach the House.

Another Democrat from Houston, U.S. Rep. Bob Eckhardt, said he wants to hear the details first.

"The president didn't say a word about inflation, and the thing is you can't treat energy as a matter divorced from the word inflation," Eckhardt said.

"I think he's right that we have a great system that can meet these problems, but I'm not at all sure he's outlined what can be done to meet them. I hope he will."

U.S. Rep. Jim Collins said Carter projected powerfully enough to remind him of the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt. "It's the greatest presentation he's ever made," Collins said.

The conservative Republican from Dallas remained as hostile as ever, however, to any plan that smacks of too much government.

"All I can remember is they started this Energy Department with the same song," Collins said. "They've got to get the government out. His solution is to put the government in deeper."

Carter's observation that the nation needs a rebirth of confidence before tackling its problems drew some skeptical comments from U.S. Rep. Phil Gramm, a Democrat from College Station.

"People were confident about the future before because they had reason to be confident. I think in the last decade they have seen those achievements wane," he said. "You can't rebuild confidence by a pep talk. Confidence is built on achievement."

Gramm said the president's speech could stimulate good will, but the good will will evaporate quickly if the speech is not followed by workable programs.

Energy Department Establishes New Gas Station Profit Margins

WASHINGTON (AP) — Many motorists will pay up to 3 cents more for a gallon of gasoline but other drivers will see prices decline under new federal rules effective Monday to improve some service station profits.

The Energy Department regulations generally should boost gasoline prices in the South and Midwest, but make little difference in the East, said the National Congress of Petroleum Retailers, which represents 60,000 independent service stations. Western motorists could benefit the most from the changes, the group said.

The rules set a uniform profit margin of 15.4 cents per gallon for service stations nationwide. That limit can be raised every six months, beginning in December, to allow for inflation. Moreover, governors can raise profit margins as much as an additional 10 cents per gallon to account for local economic factors.

Under the new, uniform system, Energy Department officials hope enforcement will be easier than it has been under the outgoing system that allows a variety of profit margins.

The department says profit margins currently range from 14 cents to 16 cents per gallon, but the retailers group puts that figure closer to 12.5 cents per gallon.

This means that under the new system many service stations can increase their prices about 3 cents per gallon; others, a lesser amount; and many will be required to roll back their charges.

To help motorists keep track, all service stations must post their declared profit margins and the legal price per gallon, the Energy Department said. This also will help officials monitor prices and enforce the new regulations.

Some gasoline prices also will decline because the new rules eliminate "banking," a loophole that has allowed many stations — primarily high-volume, gas-and-go outlets — to charge far more than current ceilings allow.

Under banking, stations that took less than their legal profits when gasoline was plentiful and competition stiff, can later recoup that money as motorists pay virtually any price to get tanks filled.

Risque Harper, spokesman for the National Congress of Petroleum Retailers, said banking is most prevalent in the West, so many prices there should fall to meet the 15.4-cent profit limit.

Harper's group had sought greater relief — an estimated 16.5-cent ceiling. "The change lets dealers hang on, but it doesn't enable them to rebuild the profits they have lost due to inflation," he said.

Many independent dealers in Pennsylvania, Delaware and New Jersey closed stations to protest the old profit margins, which had been frozen since 1974. Many of those in Pennsylvania and Delaware ended their three-day strike Monday.e

"It's too early to tell whether they will be placated," Harper said. Thekey, he added, will be the reaction of governors.

"The Energy Department has passed the buck to the states ... many dealers are worried the governors won't help," Harper said.

Also designed to help the smaller, independent stations are new allocation rules issued Monday.

These rules will reduce gasoline now going to new service stations, certain priority users and their suppliers, and wholesalers that have lost customers but continue to get volumes based on past business. Some allocation rules won't go into effect until after this summer.

But retroactive to July 6, no new station will get more than 50,000 gallons per month, the Energy Department said. Officials acknowledge this will effectively prevent more high-volume stations from springing up while the current gasoline shortage continues. These larger stations typically pump about 80,000 gallons a month.

New stations in which substantial investments already have been made by July 6 will be excluded from the new rule, which will expire on October 31 unless extended, the department said.

For motorists, the Energy Department promises that pricing will be simplified by the changes.

However, the typical motorist will see prices rising some places and falling at others. This will depend on whether the station took advantage of banking, as well as its current profit markup.

In May 1978 a gallon of regular unleaded gasoline was about 66 cents. By June 1, it had reached nearly 85 cents a gallon. Energy Department officials say that in recent weeks, it has creeped up a penny or two cents a week, often enough to exceed price ceilings.

Safety Violation Charges Filed

HOUSTON (AP) — Construction workers violated a procedure but no serious damage occurred when they poured concrete over standing water at the South Texas Nuclear Poject, a hief investigator said Monday.

W.A. Crossman, an investigator for the Nuclear Regulatory Commission in Arlington, said the violation on March 22 did not affect the strength of the joint being poured.

"As far as we know the joint was fine," he said.

A Brown & Root Inc. crew was pouring cement into a form that had about a half-inch of water over most its surface.

The construction foreman and a quality control inspector stopeed the pour until the water was removed, he said. The NRC cited the company for a safety violation.

Graham Painter, spokesman for project sponsor Houston Lighting & Power Co., said HL&P and Brown & Root will brief construction crews to prevent similar incidents.

The project is a $2 billion nuclear power plant being built near Bay City in Matagorda County.

Opinions Clash On Threat Of OPEC's Investments

WASHINGTON (AP) — OPEC nations have invested so much of their oil revenues in the United States that they now have the ability to disrupt the dollar's stability and quickly set off widespread economic chaos, two private economists said Monday.

"Lines at the gas pumps could someday be succeeded by lines outside the banks," said Paul E. Erdman, an international economist and the author of "The Crash of '79."

Douglas F. Lamont, dean of the Walter E. Heller College of Business Administration in Chicago, said the Saudi Arabians "can destabilize the American dollar whenever they choose."

A third private economist, while saying he didn't believe the investments were a current threat, acknowledged they could become a problem in the future.

And a General Accounting Office official, while acknowledging that any rapid withdrawal of the investments could create lingering long-term problems, disagreed with the private forecasts that such withdrawals could have a quick but devastating effect.

The testimony came as the House Government Operations subcommittee on commerce, consumer and monetary affairs opened hearings on U.S. investments by member nations of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

There is no accurate public estimate of the amount of investments made in the United States by individual OPEC nations. The Treasury Department, which compiles the information, groups the data by region.

The witnesses estimated overall U.S. holdings by OPEC members were anywhere between $52.1 billion and $90 billion. One economist testified he believed U.S. holdings by Saudi Arabia alone could total between $40 billion and $45 billion.

All four witnesses agreed that little of the OPEC money was being invested in land or in corporations, despite speculation to the contrary. All said most of the investment was in short-term commercial paper and was concentrated in the largest U.S. banks.

Erdman told the subcommittee that "OPEC, and especially Arab, financial holdings are indeed a present and growing danger to U.S. banks, the U.S. currency, and thus the U.S. economy."

He sketched a scenario whereby OPEC nations, by quickly withdrawing their investments and transferring dollars into the currency of another country, could flood international monetary exchanges with U.S. dollars and force a devaluation.

Erdman predicted this could set off widespread runs on banks by U.S. citizens. "An international financial crisis triggered by the Arabs could develop into a national financial panic," he said.

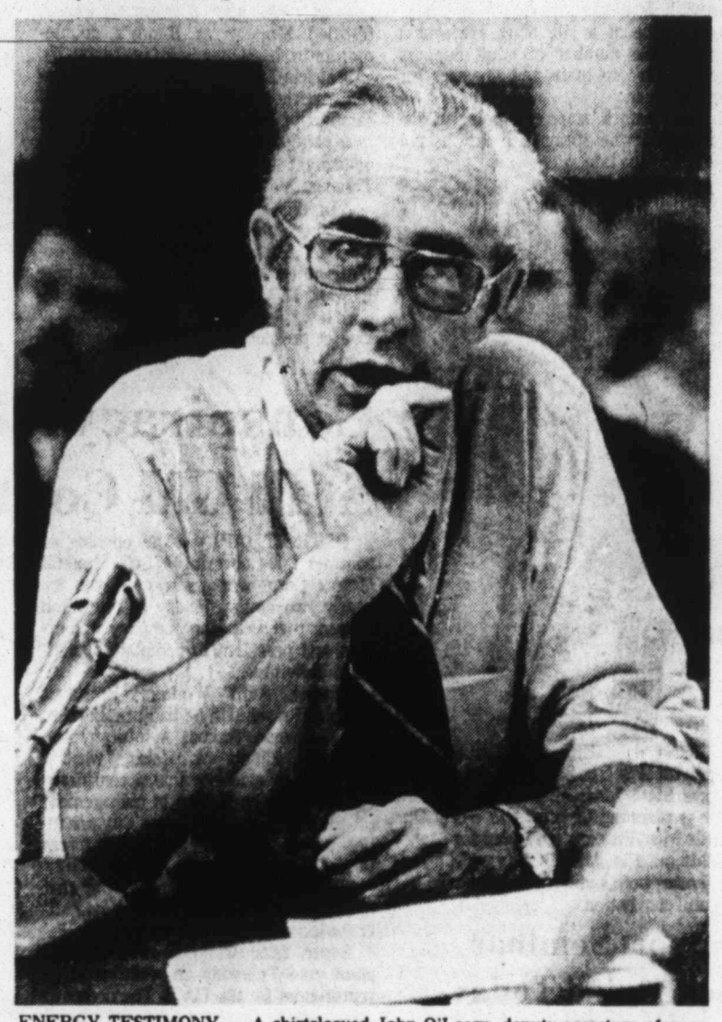

Erdman said Arab nations already had used their new-found monetary power to change a political decision of another nation.

He noted that Canada's new prime minister, Joe Clark, had pledged during the campaign to move Canada's embassy in Israel from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem.

"After he was elected, various groups on the Persian Gulf, led by the Arab Monetary Fund, threatened to remove all Arab funds from Canadian banks and to dump all their holdings of Canadian dollars if this pledge was implemented," he said.

Louis Walinsky, an economic consultant to Robert A. Nathan Associates, told the subcommittee that Saudi Arabia has acquired "a degree of influence and power over the U.S. never before achieved by any other nation in our history." He added he didn't feel the investments are "a threat as of now" but said they could become a problem in the future.

But J. Dexter Peach, director of the GAO's energy and minerals division, said "rapid liquidation (of OPEC holdings in the United States) would disrupt U.S. financial markets only temporarily." And, he said, increased cash surpluses of OPEC nations that will result from the recent oil price hike "would not lead us to change our fundamental conclusions."

Limited Estrogen Use Poses Little Cancer Risk

NEW YORK (AP) — The latest study to link estrogen to post-menopausal cancer of the uterus includes a ray of hope for women who need the hormone to control "change-of-life" discomforts.

The study released Monday says women who take estrogen for only a year or two do not greatly increase their risk of cancer.

Dr. Noel S. Weiss, who headed the study, said it means women probably can use estrogen for "hot flashes" and other temporary menopausal ailments in relative safety.

"The hope is if a woman can get by with only using the drug for a year or so, she might have the best of both worlds — it would help these acute symptoms and her risk of cancer wouldn't rise very much," said Weiss, of the Fred Hutchinson Cancer Reseach Center in Seattle, in a telephone interview Monday.

The report by Weiss, Daniel Szekely, Dallas English and Abraham Schweid is the first to examine in detail the relationship of cancer to such things as duration of estrogen use, dose and regimen.

It was published Monday in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Estrogen is used by millions of American women to replace the natural female hormone that declines after childbearing years. It also is prescribed to prevent a condition called osteoporosis, a progressive weakening of the bones.

But several studies — including the latest — have said prolonged estrogen use greatly boosts the risk of endometrial cancer, or cancer of the uterine lining. This strikes 37,000 U.S. women a year, most of them older than 50. No similar danger has been found for the use of estrogens in birth control pills by younger women.

The new study compared 322 Seattle-area women who had cancer of the uterus to 289 who did not. All were white and from 50 to 74 years old.

Although the study found a slightly elevated cancer risk after two years of estrogen use, it added that "the data were compatible with no increase at all." Weiss said the excess risk, if any, was certainly very small.

The study added that the cancer risk seems to drop when women stop using estrogen, although it never falls as low as if the women had never used the hormone.

The cancer risk also appeared to be lower for women who used small doses of estrogen — less than half a milligram a day, as compared to the commonly prescribed 1.25 milligrams. Weiss said that raises hope that low doses may be safer for preventing osteoporosis, which requires years of estrogen use.

But the new study repeats earlier findings that long use of estrogen carries a greatly increased risk of endometrial cancer.

It said the risk appears to peak at 24 times normal in women who have used the drug for 11 to 15 years, and then decreases again until women who have used the drug for more than 20 years run a risk only eight times that of women who never used the hormone.

This decrease "could represent a weeding out (through the development of cancer) of that proportion of women who have a uterus susceptible to the cancer-promoting effect of estrogen," the study said.

Since about one woman in 1,000 over age 50 gets uterine cancer each year even without using estrogen, the study said, the elevated risk for women who have used it for 11 years or more may be as high as 24 in 1,000 — or "about one of every 42 women each year."

Media Made Him Into Clown, Wife Declares Of Billy Carter

NEW YORK (UPI) — Billy Carter had to make his controversial personal appearances and endorse products to support his family because his bid to buy the family peanut business was rejected, his wife said in an article published Monday.

Sybil Carter, in an interview in Ladies' Home Journal, said accusations that her husband was trying to capitalize on the Carter presidency were not true — "He did these things to make a living."

Mrs. Carter also said that her husband's decision to seek help for alcoholism was his alone, with no pressure from the White jhouse.

She charged that during the pretreatment months the media took advantage of Billy "and put him in a mold, made him a clown or a card — whatever."

"Then they began blowing everything he said out of proportion. And when they had done that, they turned around and said to him, 'Do you really think you should have said that? It's bad for Jimmy ....'

"Well, there is something very wrong with that," Mrs. Carter said. "Billy didn't run for the presidency. You couldn't give us the White House.

"God knows he loves Jimmy and is proud of him — and Jimmy loves him and would never criticize him.

"Maybe the people in the White House have thoughts about telling Billy what to do, but they have never tried because they know Billy would tell them to go straight to hell. And he would be right."

Mrs. Carter said that after Jimmy Carter was elected president, Billy expanded the family peanut business, causing it to fall into debt temporarily.

President Carter then appointed Atlanta attorney Carles Kirbo to establish a blind trust overseeing his assets.

"Billy didn't like it," Mrs. Carter said. "He made an offer to buy the business, and it was turned down. It hurt him a lot, I think, because it was his father's business and he thought it should stay in the family.

"It was in our blood. But Billy wouldn't plead to anybody. For anything. Instead he decided to quit."

The decision to enter the Long Beach Naval Hospital's Alcohol Rehabilitation Center was Billy's alone, she said.

"I don't sway him. Jimmy doesn't sway him. Any idea he follows has got to be Billy's," she said.

Refund Scheme Defendant Enters Not Guilty Plea

U.S. Magistrate Bill Brister, who heard Garrett's plea, set the defendant's bond at $50,000 and placed his trial on the U.S. District Court's Sept. 10 docket.

Garrett was arrested July 10 in San Angelo on the tax scheme charges, which were listed in an indictment returned against him in Lubbock Jan. 16.

The conspiracy in which Garrett allegedly participated operated out of Big Spring during 1976 and 1978, according to federal agents.

Twenty-five other persons also named as conspirators already have pleaded guilty to the charges against them and have received sentences ranging from probation to five years in prison.

Europe's Parliament Mixes Strange Bag Of Legislators

To many Europeans the Parliament looks like a boring rubber-stamp organization, but it is already showing signs of life with a neck-and-neck race for the presidency between France's grande dame of politics, Simone Veil and veteran Italian Socialist Mario Zagari.

Elected June 10 by 60 percent of 180 million voters in the nine Common Market member states, the European Parliament is a momentous step toward a goal set as far back as the Eighth Century by European emperor Charlemagne, a United States of Europe.

And it has come about less than 40 years after Europe lay in ruins, broken by Adolf Hitler.

The Parliament is also a reflection of how diverse, even bitterly divided, Western Europe still is.

The sessions operate in six languages with simultaneous translation of all proceedings. Some candidates have been elected on promises to work for broadening its powers. Others got in by promising to do just the opposite.

The fact that 40 percent of Europeans did not vote indicates that a large segment of the Continent does not care either way.

College Skills Workshop Set At Texas Tech

College bound high school graduates who need to sharpen their reading, math, and study skills may enroll in a workshop to be presented July 30-Aug. 17 by the Texas Tech University Division of Continuing Education.

The workshop is intended to help students make the transition from high school to college and university level education, according to Dr. Michael Mezack, director of Continuing Education.

"Each student will be given a detailed evaluation of his or her strengths and weaknesses, as well as suggestions how to improve and maintain skills so as to better insure academic achievement in college," he said.

Reading instruction will cover comprehension skills, reading in various subject areas, basic speed reading techniques and vocabulary enrichment such as Greek and Latin roots, affixes and foreign words.

Study skills such as notetaking, outlining, highlighting, research, library review, and test taking techniques will be emphasized.

An English review of the sentence and the art of combining sentences to vary writing styles will be presented.

Students also will review basic math skills to prepare them for college classes.

No grades or credit will be given for the workshop. Students will work individually and in small groups. A certificate will be presented to each student who successfully completes the workshop.

Ellen Harris and Shirley Rekers, both of Lubbock, will instruct the courses.

Registration fee is $60 and will cover cost of instruction and all materials. Enrollment is limited to 30 students.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY DR. PAUL E. RUBLE

Dear Dr. Ruble: I am a 26-year-old woman in my fifth month of pregnancy. I have severe migraine headaches. Until becoming pregnant my doctor gave me medicine for pain and to ease the vision disturbances. Now all I can take is Tylenol (acetominophen). My pain is unbearable, lasting sometimes six or seven days. My doctors are helpless. Is there anything I can do that you know of? — Mrs. P.O.

It's a difficult problem but I'm sure you realize the need to avoid the usual migraine headache medicines during pregnancy. I hope that by the time you read this your migraine attacks will have subsided. Many women find this happens during the last three months.

For you especially, but for anyone who suffers migraine headache, I can suggest a few things to try. Diet can help. Avoid caffeine products (coffee, colas etc.), also MSG (tenderizers), nitrate-cured foods, alcohol, red wine, and cheeses. Other approaches include meditation or biofeedback technique. The latter is becoming popular, but unfortunately is not widely available. If there is a headache clinic nearby contact people there to find if there are facilities near you. Also, inhalation of oxygen for 10 minutes at a time has been tried. These methods will not hurt the fetus and may give you some relief.

Dear Dr. Ruble: What is the rule on alcohol for the person who has gout? — M.M.

A drinking spree can cause a gout attack. All alcoholic beverage should be avoided, but especially beers, ales, and wines. Distilled alcoholic beverages in moderation seem to have little effect on gout. See the booklet, "Gout — The Modern Way to Stop It." For a copy, send 35 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Ruble, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Dear Dr. Ruble: I am writing about my 11-year-old granddaughter. She has started getting bladder infections. Could the pickle juice she drinks be a cause? I tell her it's not good for her, but she drinks it all the time. Or could the soap she uses in her bath cause it? — Mrs. M.K.

Besides bath soaps, one has to consider tight nylon panties or pantyhose, a fact I've mentioned before here. It's important, too, that girls be taught good hygiene of the perineal area — between the vagina and the anus. Intestinal bacteria can easily invade the bladder because of the short urethra (urinary outlet) in females.

Some youngsters add to the problem by not emptying the bladder when they feel the urge. They may be embarrassed to ask the teacher to leave the classroom, or they delay so as not to interrupt play. Youngsters, especially those prone to bladder infection, should void regularly (every three or four hours, if possible). This reduces the time the urine has to be a convenient host to various infecting organisms.

Pickle juice is not a cause of bladder infection. But along this line I suggest you try to entice her with a pretty shade of cranberry juice. That can actually help her bladder by helping control urine acid and provide a less hospitable environment for bacteria.

• • •

Dear Dr. Ruble: What are the advantages of taking dolomite and bone meal tablets to help the pains one gets in the legs after walking any distance? I am 81 and in otherwise good health. I am taking high blood pressure medicine. — Mrs. W.H.G.

I doubt that either the dolomite (a mineral) or the bone meal tablets will help your leg problem, which is likely one of circulation. Some of this is to be expected at your age. If the pain is located in the calf and is relieved by rest, a circulation problem is probably the cause.

• • •

Dear Dr. Ruble: I am quite sure that the following question is impossible to answer. Will you try? I am 63 and still enjoy a suntan during the summer. Who discovered tanning of the skin from the sun? — R.C.

My best guess would be Adam and Eve. That's my question of the week.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

Being a mother of twins I discovered a great way to make my babies' pants for practically nothing...

A size twelve (misses) pair of pants can make size 12-month pants for the babies. Each leg has enough material for one pair of pants. It is so exciting to create something new from something old.

And when you need a larger size, check garage sales, etc. — G.R. Press

Or utilize the seat area of the pants as well. By doing so, you can recut pants of a much larger size (than 12 months) from the original size 12. Happy sewing! — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

I do not have a hint but I do have a problem. Would you have a suggestion on how to remove lime from a tea kettle? — L.A.D.

Sure do, hon.

If you will pour about half water and half white vinegar into the kettle, place on the stove and let boil for about 10 minutes, I think you will find most of the sediment has loosened.

Now shake the kettle a bit and pour off the solution and rinse well. It should be as good as new. But, if the lime has really built up, you may have to scrape the bottom with a wooden spoon to remove all of the remaining residue. Repeat the vinegar treatment if necessary. — Heloise

HINTS FROM HIM

DEAR HELOISE:

When clipping newspaper or magazine articles for reference, a photo album which has the clinging plastic overlay sheets on each page is great for keeping them in order.

Or one can use a regular three-ring notebook with the plastic insert sheets to keep the clippings in. Either way, they will always be where you can find them. — Karl Lowman

DEAR HELOISE:

This is in response to a reader's problem of not being able to find darning cotton for sock mending. The disappearance of darning cotton is, to my way of thinking, lamentable, as too often today's theory is to "throw it away and get a new one."

However, I've found a good substitute — embroidery floss.

It comes in a wide range of colors and you can control the thickness by the number of strands used.

It's also great for handsewn buttonholes. Use four strands and the buttonhole is strong, smooth and looks professional even if you're "shaky" in tackling such a job. — Kathryn Dorset

Is there a simple and inexpensive test that I can make to determine if our home is properly insulated? — Laura Miller

This certainly is a question that everyone is interested in.

We checked with one of our local insulation companies and this is what they told us:

The first frosty morning, just go outside and look at your roof. If there is frost on your roof, your home is properly insulated. If your roof is frost-free, you are in trouble, all your very expensive heat is going out through your roof.

So be sure, the next cold morning, to run outside and check your roof for frost.

Don't forget to put your shoes and robe on first! — Heloise

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I read your column regularly and although I don't always agree with your advice, I think you have a lot of common sense when it comes to raising children.

I have a perplexing problem with my 18-month-old son. He is a very active child, large and strong for his age. Just recently he began playfully hitting me. I would tell him no, and that would be the end of it. In the past two weeks, however, the playful hitting is beginning to get to me. He climbs up in my lap, says, "Hi, Mommy," then whacks me right in the face.

I believe in spanking as a last resort, and I have spanked him a couple of times for doing this, but it hasn't solved the problem. In fact, he has been hitting me even more.

The strange thing is that he never hits anyone but me. This whole thing has put a terrific strain on my patience. Can you offer a solution? — Worried

Dear Worried: First, stop hitting the child. It only teaches him that you can inflict pain and, as you have already discovered, it's no deterrent.

When the youngster belts you, tell him again, in a very firm manner, "No — you must not hit anyone." Then put him in a chair and make him sit there for 30 minutes — no TV, no toys, no books, nothing to amuse him. Thirty minutes will seem like an eternity to an 18-month-old. This punishment conveys the message that hitting is unacceptable and you are in control. And this is what you need to get across.

Dear Ann Landers: I have written you at least 15 letters during the last eight years of my life: I wrote the first time I fell in love. I wrote when he broke my heart. I wrote later when I was thinking of marriage. I wrote seeking advice during that marriage. I wrote when I began to think about divorcing him. I wrote after my divorce. I wrote when I realized I was gulping too many pills and smoking too much pot. I wrote when Mr. Wonderful came into my life.

Now I'm writing again because I am seriously considering getting married. Even though he helped me kick the habit, I'm scared. I love him more than I've ever loved anyone in my life, but I feel he deserves someone better. Shall I let him go? — The First Letter That Made It To The Mailbox

Dear First Letter: Marry him and work at making it last forever. I'm betting on you, dear.

Dear Ann: Please tell me why so many hotels won't allow pets. People do a lot more damage. I've heard of only one article stolen from a hotel by a pet. A gym sock. Humans steal pillows, draperies, bed linen, pictures, towels — everything they can get past the desk.

Dear Erie: What you say makes sense, but have you ever been kept up all night by a guest barking in the hotel room next to yours? Well, I have — and it's annoying. Even drunks respond to a complaint from the security officers, but dogs — never.

Some hands are absurdly simple. That is, they are when you are sitting in an arm chair looking at all 52 cards.

When this hand was played in a duplicate session, every South opened one notrump and that ended the bidding. Every West opened the deuce of hearts and every South won the trick.

Assuming hearts break 4-4, as they did, and assuming that no one holds five hearts, South should make his contract on the nose. But several declarers managed to get themselves set. It wasn't difficult for them. All they had to do was to attack either black suit on their own.

The winning play is a cinch. South takes his ace of hearts, runs off four diamond tricks while discarding a small black card, takes his king of hearts and leads his six spot.

If someone started with five hearts, he is down one for the hand will never make. As it is, the opponents can take two hearts and their two ace-kings before conceding the last trick to declarer or dummy.

Tune In Tomorrow

By JON-MICHAEL REED

LOS ANGELES — When Larry Block isn't wrecking havoc as resident "meanie" Cal Jamison on "General Hospital," he pursues more charitable ventures than his blackmailing soap opera character.

Larry has appeared as Tom, an eccentric worker in Mr. Hooper's store on "Sesame Street," played Mickey Potter on the defunct "Secret Storm," and has appeared in numerous nighttime TV guest roles. "But," says Block, "I've always wanted to be a Grand Prix racer. So, I took a job as a motorcycle messenger, complete with black leather uniform, when I'm not working on the serial. I wanted a taste of real life and a chance to meet real folks. Most of my clients are hospitals, to which I transfer blood, intravenous units and other supplies. Since many of the patients and hospital staff recognize me as Cal, I take the time to tour wards, handing out autographed publicity photos of the "GH" cast. Interestingly, the fans aren't hostile since they look at Cal as a rather bumbling bad guy rather than a sinister villain. But nurses who are there scored such an impressive casting coup. Says producer Erwin ("Nick") Nicholson, "When headwriter Henry Slesar presented his proposal for the new character of Nola Madison, we knew we wanted to hire the best actress available. Nola is a former glamorous movie star who has been institutionalized as a neurotic alcoholic. She's the wife of film producer Owen Madison (played by Bruce Gray) and the stepmother of Paige Madison (Margaret Colin), a young heiress who was kidnapped by a radical political group and charged with committing crimes (shades of Patty Hearst are not necessarily coincidental).

COMING SOON:

Cardinal James McIntyre Dies

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Cardinal James Francis McIntyre died early Monday at St. Vincent Medical Center where he had resided for the past three years. He was 93.

A spokesman for the archdiocese said McIntyre died at 2:30 a.m. Funeral arrangements were pending.

McIntyre had moved from New York to Los Angeles as an archbishop in 1948 and was named a cardinal in 1953.

He retired in 1970 at the age of 83 and was succeeded by Cardinal Timothy Oanning. McIntyre suffered a stroke in 1976.

McIntyre was born June 25, 1886, in New York City, son of a civil service employee. He attended public school because he could not find a space in the parochial school in his neighborhood.

When his mother, Mary Pelley McIntyre, died and his father, James Francis, became an invalid, McIntyre came under the care of Mrs. Robert F. Conley. He attended public schools and began his Wall Street career as a $3 per week errand boy on the New York Stock gexchange.

He soon became office manager for H. L. Horton and Co., stock brokers and at the age of 28 was offered membership in Fahnstock and Co., a well known firm on Wall Street.

But he turned it down and within a year, left Wall Street to enroll as a student at Cathedral College, a preparatory seminary for the Archdicese of New York. He subsequently entered St. Joseph's, seminary at Dunwoodie, and in 1921 was ordained in St. Patrick's Cathedral.

As a priest, he used some of the administrative skills he learned en route to becoming office manager for a stock brokerage firm. As Archbishop of Los Angeles, he was a skillful fund-raiser.

He was the first cardinal chosen in the western United States and was known as a conservative and a staunch defender of the papacy. He was the 12th American elevated to the Sacred College of Cardinals, Jan. 12, 1953.

The cardinal was not sympathetic to many of the changes that swept the Catholic Church in his last active duty years. He was slow to implement liturgical and other changes authorized by Vatican II.

Liberal clergy and laymen in the archdiocese clashed with the chancelley over the cardinal's resistance to change and over his failure to use the power and prestige of the archdiocese in support of the fight to solve social problems.

In 1964, two priests under his jurisdiction made headlines when they charged he failed to provide leadership in the fight for civil rights. The public controversy between the priests and the cardinal came to a climax on anelection initiative that outlawed most of California's fair housing laws.

Before the election the cardinal issued a statement that the Catholic church traditionally did not take a stand on political issues and that the initiative was political in nature. But his critics argued the issue was a moral one upon which the church should comment.

In 1967 he objected to modifications made by the Sisters of the Immaculate Heart, headquartered in Los Angeles, in their way of life. As a result of his refusal to accept these changes, many of the sisters withdrew as teachers from the 38 schools which they staffed in the archdiocese.

He strongly supported Pope Paul's controversial encyclical on birth control issued in 1968 and banished at least one priest who objected to it.

The cardinal was named by Pope John XXIII to the Central Prepratory Commission for the Second Vatican Council, and attended the first Council session in late 1962.

McIntyre made education one of his chief concerns. He was credited with establishing the Youth Education Fund for development of new schools in this four-county Archdiocese which by 1968 numbered 1.7 million Roman Catholics, double the number at the time he became Archbishop in 1948.

Selection Of Jury For Doctor's Triple-Murder Trial Begins

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The triple-murder trial of former Green Beret doctor Jeffrey MacDonald got under way Monday with the judge asking prospective jurors: "Do you believe that someone would have to be mentally disturbed to kill his pregnant wife and infant daughters?"

MacDonald, 35, is charged with the Feb. 17, 1970, slayings of his wife, Colette, 26, and his two daughters, Kimberly, 5, and Kristen, 2. Their bludgeoned and bloodied bodies were found in the family's Fort Bragg home.

MacDonald maintains that four drug-crazed hippies killed his family. He suffered 17 stab wounds in the incident.

The prosecution contends that MacDonald killed his family in a rage, then stabbed himself either as a cover-up or out of remorse. Prosecution attorneys have said they believe the slayings were triggered either by Kristen's bedwetting or by an argument with Mrs. MacDonald over an alleged affair.

The first juror selected was David I. Hardison, 50, a Harnett County independent trucker and a veteran of the state Highway Patrol and the Air Force. The second was Fred Thornhill, 27, of Raleigh, maintenance director for a developer.

MacDonald, now of Huntington Beach, Calif., where he is chief of emergency services at St. Mary Medical Center, entered the Federal Building's seventh-floor courtroom shortly before 10 a.m. with his attorneys, Wade Smith of Raleigh and Bernard Segal of San Francisco.

Tanned, graying and wearing a conservative charcoal pin-striped suit, he sat quietly at the defense table, leaning over occasionally to confer with his attorneys.

"We're confident of the eventual outcome," he had said as he walked into court.

In the courtroom were Mrs. MacDonald's parents, Alfred and Mildred Kassab of Cranbury, N.J.

At one time, Kassab attempted to take out a murder warrant on his own against MacDonald. His persistent prodding is credited with stimulating the Army to reopen its investigation and later with the convening of the grand jury that indicted the doctor.

The Kassabs declined comment. "We've come a long way, (too) long a time, to spoil it by saying the wrong thing," Mrs. Kassab said.

Working with the defense team is Dr. John McConahay, a professor of psychology and public policy studies at Duke University.

In 1975, the year MacDonald was indicted, McConahay testified for the defense when it unsuccessfully challenged the composition of the grand jury pool. The grand jury indicted MacDonald that year.

City Sales Tax Rebate Total Reported

The City of Lubbock's sales tax rebate this quarter will total $371,074, which is slightly less than its payment for this time last year, according to the state comptroller's office.

However, 1979 payments to date — $4,189,863 — are up 4 percent over total payments to date for 1978.

Statewide, rebates of the 1 percent optional tax during 1979 is running about 10 percent ahead of payments for the same period last year.

State Comptroller Bob Bullock said cities have received $241.5 million in rebates during the first seven months of this year compared to $216.3 million through July 1978.

July allocations for the more than 900 Texas cities that receive rebates will amount to $23.5 million. Dallas will receive a July rebate of $2.7 million, Houston will receive $5 million, and San Antonio will get $1.3 million.

City sales taxes are collected along with state sales taxes by merchants and other permit holders and are rebated monthly by the comptroller's office.

Other South Plains cities and towns that will be reimbursed this month are Abernathy, $1,657; Andrews, $14,728; Aspermont, $1,048; Big Spring, $46,481; Bovina, $945; Brownfield, $12,637; Canyon, $9,846; Colorado City, $6,898; Crosbyton, $1,522; Denver City, $5,357; Dickens, $1,043; Dimmitt, $6,116; and Earth, $1,078.

Charges Filed After Shooting

A 32-year-old man has been charged with attempted capital murder in connection with an exchange of gunshots with a Lubbock County sheriff's deputy last week southeast of Lubbock.

The charge was filed against Roger Earl Timmons, who remained at large Monday.

Timmons, along with two brothers from Shallowater, also was charged with burglary of a habitation in connection with a burglary at the home of an elderly woman where the gunshots were fired.

The brothers are David Willie Jordan, 18, and Charlie Jordan Jr., 21. They were jailed last week and denied bond by Justice of the Peace Wayne LeCroy.

Timmons is accused of shooting at Deputy Ron Hill after Hill refused to drop his pistol, as Timmons allegedly ordered him to do, outside the house on 114th Street and a half-mile east of Quirt Avenue.

The two brothers were arrested later at a building at 98th Street and Quirt.

Water Report States Mississippi Surplus

WASHINGTON (AP) — The lower Mississippi River Basin has enough water stored underground to triple current usage, the U.S. Geological Survey reported, Monday.

The newly released study covers the basin downstream from the Ohio River and east of the Arkansas. This includes parts of Arkansas, Illinois, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, Missouri and Tennessee.

Underground water-bearing rock, known as aquifers, underlies more than 90 percent of the area.

"About 2,600 trillion gallons of potable ground water are stored beneath the Lower Missisippi Region, or enough to cover the entire region more than 120 feet deep," said survey hydrologist John E. Terry of Little Rock, Ark., author of the report.

Terry said that while "only one-fourth of one percent of this stored ground water — 6.3 trillion gallons — is available annually for development using conventional methods ... even this small fraction is about three times current ground water use."

Prisoners, Missing Due Recognition At Reese

A jet flying show featuring the missing man formation will highlight POW/MIA Recognition Day at Reese Air Force Base Wednesday.

Chaplain Arnold Johnson will be featured speaker at the 4 p.m. special retreat, which will be held at the base flagpole.

Col. Monte Montgomery, commander of the 64th Air Base Group, will read President Carter's proclamation recognizing the day. Col. Richard Ingram, commander of the 64th Flying Training Wing, will introduce former POWs and dependents of MIAs who are present.

At the retreat ceremony, Taps will be played and a rifle salute will be fired. The Reese Honor Guard will present a special salute, also.

POWS from all American wars are urged to attend the ceremony.

Mart Posts Slight Gain

NEW YORK (AP) — Coal and diversified energy development stocks got a lift from President Carter's new initiatives but the broader stock market showed only mild reaction Monday.

Trading was the slowest it has been in six weeks.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell about 2 points in the early going and gradually recovered to post a gain of 1.37 at 834.90.

The gain, even though modest, was the first advance in a week. Analysts said that the substance of President Carter's speeches Sunday and Monday contained few surprises for traders.

"I don't think people have decided yet what they are going to do," said Alan C. Poole of Laidlaw, Adams & Peck.

Worries about the effect of a recession and rising inflation on the stock market still weigh on the market, he said.

Overall, gaining issues outnumbered losers by a 4-3 margin in the closing tally of trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

New York (AP) — Monday's national prices for New York Stock Exchange issues as of NYSE close. Prices and volume consolidated for securities also traded on other markets.

CARS AT PREMIUM — Jumbo hopper cars, such as the one in the foreground, are at a premium to handle a bumper wheat crop across the High Plains this summer. Inclement weather during the late winter and this spring, combined with massive export movements of grain, have combined as factors in the car shortage. These cars, including a boxcar, once widely used for grain movement but now less favored with the presence of hopper cars, await loading on a siding at Hereford Grain Corp., which is short of cars and expects to remain so well into the fall. Shortage Of Grain Cars Brings Open Storage Of Texas Wheat

By JIM STEIERT
A-J Correspondent

HEREFORD — With an abundant wheat crop coming in from widespread areas of the South and High Plains, elevators across the region are encountering problems acquiring a sufficient number of rail cars to move the grain to storage or marketing areas.

In fact, the railcar shortage has become an acute problem across almost the entire expanse of the traditional "wheat belt" of the Great Plains states.

Reports from some sources indicate such a glut of wheat is stacked up in elevators due to a shortage of railcars that the golden grain is being piled on the ground at elevators in the Perryton area.

Kenneth Allen of Perryton Equity indicates several million bushels of grain will be outside storage bins in that area due to lack of railcars to move the commodity, while Don Burris of Amarillo Grain Exchange claims wheat will be piled outside elevators across the Texas Panhandle before the harvest concludes this month.

Grain movement problems have yet to reach such severe proportions in the Hereford area, although there is some concern over being able to get the grain on hand here moved to market.

But while elevator spokesmen in the northern Panhandle were levelling blasts at Santa Fe Railway, the chief rail shipper in the region, for lack of sufficient railcars, a local elevator manager maintains the railroad is doing the best it can in a bad situation.

Joe Artho of Hereford Grain Corp., a major grain cooperative here, reported that his firm is placing wheat in some storage buildings company officials didn't originally intend to fill with wheat, and is looking down the road to the time when cars ordered to move the grain arrive.

It may be a long wait, possibly into the fall.

"Santa Fe gives you what they've got, regardless of how many cars you make a request for. We need 200 cars total, and it will probably be September before we get any of them. But our local Santa Fe office here in Hereford is a big help to us. They have a job to do, and they're doing it the best they can," Artho maintained.

The Hereford grainman pointed out that surprisingly good yields of dryland wheat continue, with one farmer harvesting a whopping 53 bushels per acre on dryland acreage southeast of town.

"We've already received 50 percent more wheat than we received last year, and the harvest still has at least another 10 days to go, Artho said.

Asked if the glut of wheat in local storage will cause a problem when the feedgrain harvest comes off this fall, Artho explained that the corn harvest isn't expected to cause a problem this year, because acreage is down and local feedyards will draw down stocks of corn.

"We can always put milo out on the ground. We've been doing it for years," Artho said.

Susan Metcalf, public relations representative for the Amarillo offices of Santa Fe, reported that the reasons for lack of sufficient railroad cars are myriad.

"The shortage has existed practically all year, which is unusual. We usually are short on cars for the three or four months in which harvest is underway, and in the past, that hasn't justified the cost of buying extra jumbo hopper cars. A bad winter caused a lot of trouble in getting our cars back into the areas where they are needed because they were stranded in deep snows, and then flooding, as recently as six weeks ago. That made a delay factor in turnaround time," she explained.

"Right now, farmers are harvesting a bumper crop, and they didn't move all that much grain during the past year, preferring to store it and wait to sell. Actually, we're trying to move two years' worth of grain at one time now, and that makes the situation worse than it would normally be. An unusually heavy movement of grain for export purposes also has occurred this year, and we're viewing the situation right now as an excess of demand, rather than a simple lack of sufficient number of cars," she added.

Miss Metcalf pointed out, however, that Santa Fe has the largest fleet of hopper cars of any railroad, with aproximately 13,500, and leases another 3,000 to 4,000.

"Some of our mechanical refrigerator cars are being rebuilt to help handle the grain, and the railroad is adding 141 new diesel locomotives to the fleet this year to help improve the situation. We have jumbo hopper cars on order too, and will be taking possession of them this year," she related.

"We're doing the best we can to distribute the cars equitably. There is a shortage, and there will continue to be for the remainder of the year, in all likelihood," Miss Metcalf said.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Corn and soybean futures fell and wheat futures were mostly higher Monday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Most wheat futures contracts managed to sustain price gains of up to 5 cents a bushel, mostly in response to reports of good export demand and rains in the winter wheat belt that delayed an already late harvest.

The Agriculture Department late Friday reported that the Soviet Union had bought 300,000 metric tons of U.S. wheat and Mexico another 100,000 tons.

Corn and soybean futures were unable to hold onto price increases scored early in the session in sympathy with higher gold and silver prices, however. Reports of needed rains in drought-troubled central Illinois, and an absence of commercial demand or significant other bullish developments, took prices lower.

Cattle Futures End Unchanged To 77 Ahead

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Cattle futures closed unchanged to up 77 points — led by April at the day's highs — Monday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

The market rallied after slipping 67 points to the lowest level in two weeks.

Support was uncovered after August slipped to 67.65 cents, with a cash cattle connected commission house and other houses aggressive buyers on the setback. Limit higher feeder cattle and firmer beef sparked late support.

Wholesale beef was unchanged to up one-half at 100 1/2 to 101 1/2 cents a pound, f.o.b. river. The six markets expect 12,100 head today.

Cash cattle were off $1 to up 50 cents, with the best top at $69 at Omaha. Slaughter totaled 107,000 head.

Feeder cattle futures closed 50 to 150 points higher, led by August at the limit advance. Sales totaled 4,204 cars. The market was limit up after the limit loss Friday.

Support was uncovered after prices fell 80 points to the lowest level in two weeks. Strength in most cash feeder markets and firmness in beef at noon touched off aggressive short covering and other buying, with a cash cattle connected commission house in the lead.

The six markets expect 1,600 head today. Cash feeders were weak to up $3, with the best top at $140 at San Antonio.

Hog futures closed 140 points lower to 82 points higher on 6,984 lots. Distant August posted the only loss at a new season's low. Other months were led higher by December.

Light hog runs and higher prices along with spillover buying from cattle futures brought support in the hog ring which tended to offset increased hog slaughter last week.

Deliveries are two thus far. Wholesale hams were unchanged at 59 to 64 cents a pound, f.o.b. river. The six markets expect 32,500 head today.

Cash hogs were up $1.50 to off 25 cents. The best top was $42.50 at Peoria. Slaughter totaled 310,000 head.

Pork belly (bacon) futures closed 80 to 167 points higher, led by March at the day's high. Sales topped 7,210 cars. The market rebounded after slipping 45 points to the lowest level in 1½ weeks.

Continued strength in cash bellies at noon along with mostly higher cash hogs and continued storage reductions brought support. Traders also noted larger than year ago bacon slicings, which easily offset increased slaughter.

CIGARETTES HIGHER

NEW YORK (AP) — Two major cigarette makers have raised wholesale prices by 55 cents per thousand, an increase that is expected to add 1 to 2 cents to the retail price of a pack. The increases were announced Monday by Liggett Group Inc., maker of L&M, Chesterfield and several other brands, and last week by R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., whose brands include Winston, Salem, Camel and More.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

DIRECTORS OF THE LUBBOCK-BASED Plains Cotton Growers, Inc., have adopted a 1979-80 fiscal year budget of $245,650 and elected one new member and re-elected five members to the Executive Committee.

The board also appointed five new members of the governing body from counties where directors had resigned, moved from the area, or become inactive.

In addition, members of the 50-man board discussed PCG legislative and regulatory activities and heard a report on a trade mission to the Far East by PCG Executive Vice President Donald Johnson.

The new budget, only $1,900 above the $243,750 budgeted for 1978-79, authorizes major expenditures for agricultural and utilization research projects, export and domestic market development, legislative activities, publications and area and international advertising.

THE PCG HAS ONE ELECTED MEMBER on its Executive Committee from each of six districts.

The newmember, chosen to represent producers in District 2 (Bailey, Cochran and Hockley counties) is Claude Nowell of Morton. He succeeds Lloyd Miller, also of Morton, a longtime PCG director who chose not to stand for re-election to the board in the 1979 Cochran County election.

Re-elected to the committee were:

District 1 (Deaf Smith, Parmer, Castro, Swisher and Briscoe counties) — W. L. Edelmon of Friona.

District 4 (Lubbock, Crosby and Dickens) — Tommy Fondren of Lorenzo.

District 5 (Yoakum, Terry, Lynn and Garza) — Gerald Caswell of Brownfield.

District 6 (Gaines, Dawson, Borden, Martin, Howard and Midland) — Frank Jones of Lamesa.

Appointed to fill the vacancies on the board were Leroy Bodkins and Marvin Payne, both of Hereford in Deaf Smith County; Joe M. Thacker of Roaring Springs in Motley County; and Riley Harris and James Davis, both of Silverton in Briscoe County.

THE LEGISLATIVE DISCUSSION centered around ongoing efforts in Washington to develop and pass a bill which would phase out the current disaster program and and replace it with an expanded and improved all-risk federal crop insurance plan.

The PCG is seeking to get the disaster program extended "for as long as possible," or at least until the proposed crop insurance plan has been proved an acceptable alternative.

Concerning a controversial "failure to certify" rule in farm program regulations, Johnson told the board: "We have nothing in writing but we now have reason to believe that the most onerous effects of the rule can be avoided."

The regulation, if enforced to the letter, would make hundreds of High Plains farm operators and landlords ineligible for farm program benefits for reasons completely beyond their control.

COTTON FUTURES CLOSED A VERY QUIET session mixed Monday, with nearbys around lows and off as much as 17 points and forwards up as much as 20 points.

Floor brokers said the market slipped late from highs of 70 points up in May 1980 on long liquidation in thin dealings. The trade and some speculators bought lightly at lows.

Estimated volume was a lean 2,850 contracts, with locals accounting for 1,700, according to some sources, a whopping percentage.

DO IT AGAIN

BRADWELL, England (AP) — Newlyweds Julie Hayward and Tony Mills walked down the aisle all over again in a replay of their wedding. It was the only way they would get any wedding pictures. After Julie, a 22-year-old bank cashier, married Tony, a 23-year-old laborer, at the picturesque village church last month, a thief broke into the photographer's car. The loot included the film shot at the wedding. So on Sunday, the couple and all 80 wedding guests turned up again for a rerun, a special ceremony at which Julie and Tony confirmed their vows.

Chinese Newspapers Publish News Selected By Committee

XIAN, China (UPI) — Late last year, the Shaanxi Daily published an expose of a leading provincial official whom the newspaper said went wrong.

But the offender's name was never disclosed. Why?

"That is a difficult question," Chiang Tao, a member of the newspaper's 12-man editors' committee, said in a rare meeting with visiting foreign correspondents.

"Whether to print such a name in the newspaper is not decided by the editor but by the central committee of the party."

In a question-and-answer session, Chiang demonstrated the close relationship in China between the Conmunist Party and local press.

The Shensi daily is the rural newspaper in the central province of Shaanxi (Shensi), where Chinese civilization is said to have begun along the Yellow River more than 3,000 years ago.

The paper is operated by the Communist Party committee for Shaanxi Province. Chiang placed daily circulation at 340,000 copies.

Foreigners seldom are able to meet the men who run China's local newspapers, which are said to be closer to the people than are the central party and government organs published in Peking, the capital.

Question: If there is a murder or fatal traffic accident, do you report it?

Chiang: The question is decided according to the conditions. Usually we print such news because killing is against society. We publish to educate people.

Question: What is your main responsibility to society?

Chiang: As newspapermen, we are all proparandists of the party and state. We fight against the people's enemies and we educate the people.

Question: What are the qualifications for your staff (200 editors and reporters)?

Chiang: First we consider their political conscousness, then their educational standards. Some are university graduates and some are from midddle schools.

Question: If you get a letter accusing a cadre (official) of wrongdoing, do you send a reporter to investigate?

Chiang: We do send reporters to investigate and if the letter is true the newspaper would publish the reporter's findings. For important cases, the reporter would be accompanied by party committee members.

Question: How many party members are on your staff?

Chiang: More than 50 percent of the editorial staff are party members.

Question: How is the newspaper financed?

Chiang: We publish advertising, for example new industrial products and movie ads. Each copy sells for 4 cents (3 U.S. cents). Also, we print the People's Daily and the Worker's Daily (official Peking publications printed in satellite Each year this newspaper gives 300,000 yuan ($200,000 dollars) to the party, which represents our profit.

Question: Why are provincial newspapers denied to foreigners? (Local papers are said to deal more openly with gut issues.)

Chiang: Not for political problems. The central government will decide when technical problems such as the printing quality of photographs are solved adequately for sale to foreigners. Four or five local newspapers have been approved for foreigners.

The Shaanxi Daily is printed on old-fashioned but well maintained rotary presses, built in Shanghai, on newsprint manufactured in China, where some historians say the first paper was made as early as the 2nd century before Christ.

The daily prints general sports news on Page 3. Hometown sports heroes appear on the front page. But there is no sports editor.

"Our sports news is handled by the culture and education section," Chiang said.

The editorial committeeman said topics most popular with his readers are articles dealing with Communist Party policies in rural areas and letters to the editor containing suggestions and criticisms.

Agency Eyes Underground Economy

WASHINGTON (AP) — An official of the General Accounting Office estimated Monday that as many as 20 million Americans may be part of the "underground economy," illegally escaping federal taxes on $100 billion of income a year.

"Anybody who has looked at the subterranean economy will tell you it's very large," Allen Voss of the GAO told the House Ways and Means oversight subcommittee.

Officials define the underground economy as consisting of persons who report less than they earn, including those who engage in bartering or work for cash only, and those who don't even bother to file a return.

Voss' unofficial estimate of the income involved included up to $40 billion in annual earnings from those who file no return at all, up to $50 billion from those who under-report their taxable income, and a considerable amount from organized crime and drug traffic, where, he said, "there are fantastic profits and high sales — we have no idea what the figure is."

Rep. Sam Gibbons, D-Fla., chairman of the subcommittee, said he sees evidence of the underground economy every day.

"I constantly see people who make less than I do who seem to live so much better," Gibbons said. "They buy bigger boats and bigger cars, their children spend a lot of money. There's an awful lot of unreported income somewhere."

A GAO report on the underground ecomomy, released last week, criticized the Internal Revenue Service as directing too much ot its money and manpower on auditing taxpayers who do file returns and too little toward seeking out those who do not.

But IRS Commissioner Jerome Kurtz told the subcommittee: "We will not over-react to the non-filer problem by directing a disproportionate part of our compliance effort against persons the statistics show to be largely poor, undereducated and unskilled."

The GAO report, based on 1972 information, concluded that while 92 percent of those required to file a tax return did so, about 5 million did not. That resulted in a tax loss of $2 billion, or about 2 percent of the taxes collected.

By the GAO's own reckoning, about 26 percent of those non-filers had eight years of school or less, compared with 15 percent of the 63 million who filed. Fifty-two percent had income of $5,000 or less, compared with 19 percent of the filers. And laborers and service workers make up about 33 percent of the non-filers, but only 18 percent of the filer population.

Kurtz noted the report found the IRS campaign against non-filers "is productive in terms of taxes, penalties and interest assessed against those caught" and that money should not be taken away from other enforcement programs in an effort to catch more non-filers.

The IRS chief added that not all the 5 million who failed to file in 1972 owed taxes. "The results of our programs indicate that a substantial number are entitled to refunds," Kurtz added.

Kurtz said many of those who don't file or who understate their income may not be acting out of a desire to cheat but simply can't understand the tax laws. He cited a 1975 federal study that found one-third of American adults are incompetent to handle such chores as filing a tax return. Another 25 percent were barely competent.

Even though the IRS has simplified its forms and reduced error rates, the agency has called for bids on developing even-simpler forms and tax instruction sheets, Kurtz said.

But, he added, the next step is up to Congress. "Achieving further major simplification will depend on simplification of the tax law itself," Kurtz said.

Bogus Doctor Jailed After 17 Operations

LONDON (AP) — Irish lifeguard Francis Murphy wanted to try another type of lifesaving — as a hospital surgeon — so he assumed the identity of an English doctor friend with the same surname and faked his way into at least three hospitals as a qualified orthopedic surgeon.

At one hospital he carried out 17 operations in 24 days, including an amputation, but was caught operating without authorization.

This brought him to trial at London's Old Bailey criminal court Monday. He pleaded guilty to three charges of dishonestly obtaining medical credentials and 691 pounds ($1,555) in fees between May and November 1977. Murphy, 30, was sentenced to two years in jail.

After the verdict, an unidentified source at one hospital where he had worked said all the patients Murphy treated appeared to be "perfectly satisfactory."

'Airplane!' New Playtoy For Trio Of Filmmakers

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Jerry and David Zucker and Jim Abrahams used to play together as boys in Milwaukee, where their fathers were business partners.

A decade or so later, the trio is still at play, but now their toy is a $3 million movie called "Airplane!"

It's not play exactly; making a funny movie is serious business, and the brothers Zucker and Abrahams are going about it systematically. Their system may be unique to filmmaking. At least this veteran movie-set visitor has never seen anything quite like it.

On stage 16 at the Culver City Studios, they were filming scenes in the jet mockup that is used for airline TV commercials. Jerry Zucker, a fresh-faced 29, was directing a shot in which singer Maureen McGovern, costumed as a nun, was reading a magazine called Nun's Life as the airplane started to jiggle.

When Zucker called "Cut!" longtime producer and Academy president Howard W. Koch spoke into a walkie-talkie. He was talking with David Zucker, 31, and Abrahams, 35, who had viewed the scene on instant tape in another part of the stage. Koch relayed their approval, and Jerry went on to the next scene.

The threesome wanted to list the director of "Airplane!" as Abrahams N. Zuckers (get it?) in recognition of the triple duties. The Directors Guild wouldn't buy that, and Jerry gets solo credit.

Between setups, the triumvirate convened and explained their unorthodox venture. It all started five years ago when they happened to see on television the 1957 movie "Zero Hour," directed by Hall Bartlet and starring Dana Andrews, Linda Darnell and Sterling Hayden. The plot: An airliner's flight crew is overcome by food poisoning, then a former fighter pilot takes over and lands safely with instructions from the control tower.

A great basis for a film satire, agreed the three young men, who were operating a comedy showcase, Kentucky Fried Theater, near Fox studio. They put together a screenplay, expecting the studios to snap it up. None did. They had better luck scraping up $675,000 for a movie called "Kentucky Fried Movie," based on the sketches at the theater.

The Zuckers and Abrahams wrote and produced, John Landis directed. The movie grossed $20 million, Landis went on to direct "Animal House," and our three heroes went back to "Airplane!"

"We rented a bungalow in Santa Monica, unlisted the phone number and started rewriting the script," said David Zucker. "Twenty rewrites later, we decided it was ready to offer around."

Again the studio bigshots were underwhelmed, especially by the proviso that all three wanted to direct. Avco-Embassy made a tentative offer. Then Paramount, which had produced "Zero Hour," came aboard. Why?

"We don't know exactly," said Jerry. "Maybe they were afraid we'd take it somewhere else." If it proved a hit, Paramount would thus be much embarrassed — like Universal, which declined "Star Wars."

Paramount made the stipulation that Howard W. Koch would serve as overseer for "Airplane!" He is on the set at all times like a benevolent Don Corleone, giving godfatherly counsel to the fledgling filmmakers.

"This is only the second time I've been on a movie set," admitted Jerry the director. "The first time was 'Kentucky Fried Movie.'"

"I'm enjoying myself," said Koch, who receives no screen credit. "It's a hilarious script, although it's not my kind of comedy. I go for the gentler humor based on characters with a touch of pathos. I'm more of a Neil Simon man." Koch produced "The Odd Couple," "Plaza Suite" and other Simon comedies.

What happens if the partners disagree?

"Fortunately we're an odd number," said Abrahams. "So in case of disagreement, it's two against one. But not always. If one guy is absolutely convinced he is right, the other two might give in."

The movie stars Robert Hays (of TV's "Angie") and model-actress Julie Hagerty, plus Robert Stack, Lloyd Bridges, Leslie Nielsen, Peter Graves and cameo artists Ethel Merman, Jimmy Walker and Jose Feliciano. "The film is guaranteed to offend everyone — Poles, Jews, blacks, etc.," assured Koch. It has already offended Universal Pictures, which protested the title similarity to "Airport." The matter is being arbitrated.

Material Spilled From Uranium Dam

SANTA FE, N.M. (UPI) — A uranium tailings dam operated by United Nuclear Corp. near Churchrock in northeastern New Mexico breached Monday and spilled a "significant" amount of material, a spokesman for the state Environmental Improvement Division said.

He said "preliminary information indicates that a significant amount of tailings liquid left the tailings area," but said agency officials have not determined the exact amount or the direction of travel of the spill, which United Nuclear officials advised occurred on the south side of the dam early Monday.

The Radiation Protection Section of the EID was sending a team to the area to conduct an on-site assessment of damages, the spokesman said, and the federal Environmental Protection Agency has been asked to provide aerial surveillance of the area.

He said water quality sampling teams will also be sent out to determine if the spill contaminated surface and ground waters in the area. Water contamination is one of the major concerns about such spills, he said.

The state Environmental Improvement Board is currently considering adoption of a regulation under which uranium mining concerns would have to establish a half-mile buffer zone around tailings ponds "to protect the general safety and protection of the public," the spokesman said.

Former President Hosts Gathering For Astronauts

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (UPI) — Former President Richard Nixon devoted what was probably his last large social gathering at La Casa Pacifica to America's astronauts, marking the 10th anniversary of the U.S. moon landing.

The shorefront estate, known as the "Western White House" during the Nixon administration, has been sold to real estate developers. The Nixons are expected to move into a smaller home nearby before the end of the year.

Fifteen astronauts and their families were feted Sunday afternoon by nearly 300 show business figures, Republican politicians and friends of the Nixons.

Missing were the three best known astronauts — Alan Shepard, the first American to be launched into space; John Glenn, the first in orbit; and Neil Armstrong, first to set foot on the moon on July 20, 1969.

Reporters and photographers were barred from the party and were forced to gather at a gate leading to the grounds to compile a sketchy guest list — Comedian Red Skelton, singer Rudy Vallee, actors Buddy Ebsen, Robert Stack and Cesar Romero as well as Nixon's close friend, Bebe Rebozo.

H.R. "Bob" Haldeman, Nixon's former chief of staff, cut sharply across a corner and sped past the media on his way into the estate. Haldeman recently wrote a book giving his opinion that Nixon "knew about Watergate from day one."

Rep. Robert Badham, R-Calif., who paused briefly and spoke to reporters while leaving, termed it a "typical Nixon party" — mariachi bands, margaritas and Mexican-style food.

Mrs. Nixon mingled with the guests and was said to be looking well. Also attending were David and Julie Eisenhower and their infant daughter, Jennie.

Lucky Robot New Champ Of Backgammon Players

MONTE CARLO, Monaco (UPI) —A 3 1/2-foot robot has beaten the new world backgammon champion.

"The machine was lucky," insisted the champion, Luigi Villa, a professional from Milan. "The dice were not rolling for me tonight," he complained and stamped his foot.

Villa's disappointment was shared by several fellow Italians, who surrounded him in an indignant and gesticulating mass immediately afterwards and hurled insults at the machine.

The robot, termed a gammonoid, won four of its five games in a 7-point match and walked — or rather rolled — away with $5,000 in prize money Sunday night.

The machine confined its comments after the match to a long stream of electrical impulses, which were transmitted by telephone line and satellite to a computer at Pittsburgh's Carnegie Mellon University.

"This was a fantastic victory for science," said tournament director Lewis Deyong.

"Look at this play," he enthused. "I didn't even consider this play ... this is certainly not a human play. This machine is relentless. Oh, it's aggressive. It's a really courageous machine."

The audience, lolling on plush, upholstered chairs and sipping champagne, broke into wild applause and laughter when the machine eventually won.

"They came to mock and they stayed to marvel," Magriel said. "This is certainly a great day for backgammon. This robot can really teach us something."

The robot's artificial intelligence was designed by computer research scientist Dr. Hans Berliner of Carnegie Mellon. The machine's computer program, nicknamed the "Mighty Bee" by scientists in Pittsburgh, represents a breakthrough in cybernetics — the science of computer language — which will be explained to the world's computer science community in a long, technical paper to be read by Berliner in Tokyo in August.

English Jurisdiction Ruled In Divorce

LONDON (UPI) — A judge Monday ruled English courts have jurisdiction in the divorce case of Rolling Stones singer Mick Jagger, putting a legal roadblock in Bianca Jagger's efforts to divorce her husband in the United States.

The decision, which came after seven days of private hearings, caused problems because a California judge ruled last May U.S. courts have jurisdiction in the case.

Jagger's wife, Bianca, wants the case heard in Los Angeles because divorce settlements for women generally are higher in the United States. Jagger has been fighting to keep the case in London.

"I have come to the conclusion that on the balance of fairness and also convenience, the proceedings should continue in the Family Division of the High Court in London," said the British judge who heard the case in London.

The judge, however, said Mrs. Jagger could take the case to the English Court of Appeal.

The case in California has been delayed since May pending the English court's ruling on jurisdiction.

The British judge said, however, if the case is heard in California he will stay the case in England.

Mrs. Jagger, 32, was in the London courtroom when the latest ruling was issued, but refused comment. Jagger, 36, had attended four days of the hearings, but was not present for the ruling.

The Nicaraguan-born Mrs. Jagger has named Texas model Jerri Hall as "the other woman" in her divorce petition.

Nations Factories Report Slowdowns

WASHINGTON (AP) — Operations in the nation's factories fell a half a percentage point in June, with much of the decline blamed on a slowdown in the motor vehicle and home goods industries, the government said Monday.

The June capacity utilization rate was 85 percent, down from May's 85.5 percent, said a Federal Reserve Board report.

Capacity utilization in the second quarter averaged 85 percent, 1.1 percentage points below the first quarter rate and 3 points below the 1973 high, the central bank said.

The first-quarter rate had been 86.1 percent, and the final quarter of 1978 had seen operations at 85.9 percent.

POPULATION BOOM

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's population stood at 115.3 million on March 31, up 1.01 million from one year earlier, the Home Affairs Ministry reported Monday. The total included 56,888,108 men and boys, and 58,398,667 women and girls. The ministry said the population growth rate had decreased from 1.37 million in 1975 to 1.2 million in 1976, 1.08 million in 1977, 1.05 million in 1978 and 1.01 million this year.

Ideological Schism Widens In Africa

MONROVIA, Liberia (AP) — African foreign ministers, in 10 days of often-heated debate behind closed doors, have underlined the sharpening confrontation between African friends of the Soviet Union and countries oriented to the West.

The ministers, preparing for Tuesday's opening of the annual African summit, failed to resolve any of the most divisive problems — from the western Sahara to Zimbabwe Rhodesia — on this continent of conflict and rivalries.

They did agree on issues not in dispute among African countries, such as the need for economic development, and non-recognition of the "internal settlement" in Zimbabwe Rhodesia. But on matters affecting the interests of the rival power blocs that are increasingly prominent in African affairs, the decision-making was either sidetracked or passed on to the summit of the Organization of African Unity.

The evasion of intractable problems is usual. "We tend to seek African solutions for African problems," explained an OAU spokesman. "That is why we look for conciliation rather than sharply defined decisions."

In practice, however, the conflicts refuse to go away.

The bitter Moroccan-Algerian conflict over the former Spanish Sahara has been debated fruitlessly at annual OAU summits for the past four years. The Rhodesian war has disclosed as many differences among the African countries as within the black population of Rhodesia itself.

There are three main power blocs:

•The countries that receive much of their weaponry, technical aid and ideological inspiration from the Soviet bloc. They include Libya, Algeria, Ethiopia, Madagascar, Angola and Mozambique.

•The countries that remain culturally, economically or militarily tied to their former colonial masters in Western Europe. They include Morocco, Kenya, Senegal, Ivory Coast and most of the other former French colonies.

African leaders and OAU officials dislike outsiders' pointing to these conflicting lineups. Some blandly deny that they exist and attribute them to "imperialist propaganda."

In reality, however, these groupings — with isolated variations from one issue to another — have emerged in the discussion of every major inter-African dispute inside and outside the OAU framework:

•In Zimbabwe Rhodesia, the pro-Soviet group has urged formal recognition of the Soviet-backed Patriotic Front guerrilla movement as the legitimate government, thus theoretically allowing the guerrillas to call on Cuban, East German or other outside military support.

The pro-West group, backed by many of the neutrals, would prefer that the summit call on the Patriotic Front to make a new effort to negotiate with the current bi-racial government in Zimbabwe Rhodesia.

•In South African-controlled South-West Africa, there is a similar division over supporting all-out guerrilla war by the leftist South-West African People's Organization or calling for a new attempt to seek a negotiated settlement based on a Western-backed plan. Cuban or East German involvement is less likely there because of wariness over risking a military confrontation with South Africa.

•In Chad, Nigeria has joined forces with the entire Soviet-backed group in denying recognition to the French-supported regime. The Chad dispute caused the longest and most bitter debate in the foreign ministers' meeting. To avoid a decision, the ministers barred the Chad delegation "provisionally" from the summit.

•In the former Spanish Sahara, the pro-Soviet group, with growing support from the neutrals, backed the Marxist-led Polisario guerrillas seeking independence for the mineral-rich territory. The pro-West group backed the 1975 annexation and partition of the territory by Morocco and Mauritania.

•The pro-Soviet group strongly urged the creation of an "Inter-African Defense Force" to intervene in disputes and help liberate the white-dominated countries of southern Africa. The pro-West group objected vigorously to what they said could become an instrument of Soviet influence. The proposal was shelved but not abandoned.

•Most neutrals sided with the pro-West group against a Libyan effort to bar Egyptian President Anwar Sadat from the summit in retaliation for the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty. As a result, Libya has not formally raised the issue. But Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy, who swears he will never sit at the same table with Sadat, will not attend the summit, Libyan officials said.

could be mustered for a joint session in the bunker.

On Managua's streets, many Nicaraguans seemed eager for the impending victory by Sandinista guerrillas and the end of the 42-year-old Somoza family dynasty.

"Long live the revolution!" shouted a one-legged man, waving his crutch as he waited with hundreds of other people on a line to buy food at a government distribution center.

"We're starving," said another man, Roberto Perez. "I've got six children. They have not had meat for six weeks ... and the government is selling food to people who haven't been able to work and don't have any money. When the Sandinistas get here they will give us food."

Other people jammed in around him agreed, shouting a chorus of anti-Somoza epithets. The civil war has largely halted agricultural and other production in Nicaragua.

A high-level government source said this is Somoza's final week in power.

"Whether he leaves on Tuesday or later in the week depends on the details being worked," he said.

"What we're trying to avoid is things just falling apart when Somoza leaves. We're trying to assure that a lot of people won't get killed when the national guard crumbles."

The source, who asked not to be identified, would not elaborate on the unresolved "details." But it is believed arrangements for as bloodless a takeover as possible were being worked out at negotiations in neighboring Costa Rica between the provisional government backed by the Sandinistas and special U.S. envoy William Bowdler.

Somoza has said he is worried about what would happen to the national guard, the country's combined armed forces and police, and to other supporters if he leaves.

A Nicaraguan government source said the U.S. ambassador to Managua, Lawrence Pezzullo, met with Somoza again Sunday, presumably to inform him of developments at the talks in San Jose, Costa Rica.

Some 600 to 700 "Somocistas" — members of Somoza's Liberal Party, government officials and business associates — who have been staying at Managua's Intercontinental Hotel were making rushed preparations to leave Monday. A reliable source at Managua's airport said dozens had their luggage shipped from the hotel, which is just 100 yards from Somoza's fortified headquarters, to the airport.

At the airport, hundreds of people jammed around the ticket counters, shouting and shoving in an effort to get a seat aboard the only commercial plane flying out of Managua, a 98-seat Boeing 727 of the Somoza-owned Lanica Airlines.

There are only two flights daily out of Managua, one to Miami and the other to San Salvador and Guatemala City.

In another development, the high-level source reported that Somoza had fired all national guard officers with 30 years or more experience — more than 100 men, including all generals, among them his chief of staff, Gen. Humberto Corrales, and most colonels.

Some observers suggested Somoza did this as a concession to Bowdler and the junta. Others said it was intended to give the officers a chance to flee Nicaragua and escape trial at the hands of the new government.

Whatever the reasons, it seemed to signal that Somoza has finally given up hope of holding out against the Sandinistas by force of arms.

The source said several colonels had already sought asylum at the Colombian Embassy and other officers had gone into hiding or left the country. It was learned that among the Somocistas who already had left the country were the directors of the central bank, the home-loan bank, the social security administration and the water works.

Soldiers were seen herding a half-dozen blindfolded and bound youths into a pickup truck late Sunday and hauling them away to a national guard headquarters. Groups of blindfolded and bound young men — potential Sandinistas — have been found shot to death just outside the city in recent days. On Monday two more bodies were found.

Guerrillas are reported to have been filtering into Managua in recent days, and one of the junta members, Sergio Ramirez Mercado, said over the weekend that if Somoza does not resign, "we are going to begin the battle for Managua."

The United States, long Somoza's chief ally, last month joined with most of Latin America in calling for his resignation.

Ramirez Mercado said Bowdler told junta members over the weekend, "You are the new government of Nicaragua." The rebel leader said he expects a public announcement of U.S. recognition of the government "very soon."

McGovern Asks Arms Freeze

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. George McGovern proposed Monday that the SALT II treaty include a freeze on the nuclear arsenals of the United States and Soviet Union and a commitment to enter immediate negotiations on actual reductions of strategic weapons.

The witnesses, as the committee began its second week of hearings on the treaty, were three former negotiators, all of whom said that while they wished they could have obtained greater reductions, the agreement represented a meaningful step in the disarmament process.

Paul Warnke, who became chief SALT negotiator after President Carter took office, responded to McGovern that "you can't get nuclear disarmement in a single step."

Gerard C. Smith, chief negotiator in the SALT I talks, said, "We have been proposing reductions since the start...The Soviet attitude is you have to curb arms before you can consider reductions."

U. Alexis Johnson, who negotiated the Vladivostok accords, said, "The ideal would be an agreement so comprehensive, so perfectly balanced, and so well anticipating the future that we would never again have to concern ourselves with the ominous shadows that these beasts of nuclear weapons cast over our lives.

"However, we must deal with the world as it is, not as we would wish it to be."

McGovern has criticized SALT II as failing to result in meaningful reductions in the U.S. and Soviet nuclear arsenals. He also has said he might vote against the treaty if President Carter proposes higher defense spending in an effort to win support for the agreement.

"The probability is that the weapons which the Kremlin and the Pentagon regard as the most destructive will be preserved while lesser systems are weeded out in the name of arms limitation," said the South Dakota Democrat.

He added that "the paradox of these hearings, so far, is that everyone favors arms reductions; yet, we move relentlessly toward more arms. If this paradox is not overcome, we will be doomed to a new arms race whether SALT II is ratified or rejected."

McGovern said his proposal would "mandate our negotiators to undertake immediately upon the acceptance or rejection of SALT II to freeze and then reduce nuclear weapons arsenals on both sides."

McGovern's statement brought an expression of support from Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., a hard-line opponent of the treaty.

Helms asked Warnke, "This is an arms escalation treaty, is it not?"

"Clearly, not," replied Warnke.

All three negotiators disputed testimony last week from retired Lt. Gen. Edward Rowny, who said that if the U.S. had bargained harder, the Soviets would have accepted a treaty calling for greater reductions in intercontinental nuclear weapons.

"I think a better treaty can be negotiated," said Warnke "but after this one is ratified."

Twister Slams Into Cheyenne

Lubbock from Amarillo.

By 6 p.m., most of the clouds had dissipated after dropping only spotty traces of moisture on the Hub City. Residentsi n the southern half of the city, however, reported slightly heavier rainfall than measured by the National Weather Service station at Lubbock's airport.

Skies should begin clearing by Thursday, although a slight chance for afternoon and evening thundershowers remains in the forecast through Saturday.

The mercury should soar into the 90s toward the end of the week as nighttime readings register around 70.

The late Monday afternoon tornado rolled through two subdivisions and a trailer park in northern Cheyenne Monday, destroying hundreds of dwellings and causing at least one death and 34 injuries, authorities said.

The Laramie County Coroner's office said a 14-month-old boy had been killed in the storm. His name and the circumstances of his death were not immediately released.

Expensive Homes Damaged

Capt. Merv Mydland of Wyoming Disaster and Civil Defense Agency said 150 houses in the expensive Buffalo Ridge area were heavily damaged, and 45 to 50 were destroyed, some with only fireplaces and chimneys left standing. He said the Buffalo Ridge school was "almost gone," but no children had been there at the time.

Hundreds of houses had windows blown out and roofs knocked off. Heavy debris was scattered all over the north side of the city.

There were unconfirmed reports that some persons were still trapped in their wrecked homes hours after the tornado struck. Authorities were making door-to-door searches for victims and possible gas leaks.

Joe Pettigo, a spokesman for the National Weather Service, said the 50-yard-wide tornado came in from the west at 3:40 p.m. and carved a swath about four miles long through the city before moving off to the southeast toward Colorado.

He called it "a very significant tornado" and said it caused "several million dollars damage."

mandate of the people" by submitting the amendments to the voters, East says.

"When it comes to the question of encumbering future tax revenues of the city, they ought to let the people speak," he says.

LPOA chairman Bob Green says he is unconcerned by Ross' statements because "we did quite a bit of legal research before we started this thing and we think we have as good attorneys as the city."

Intent Of Amendments

If submitted to and approved by Lubbock voters, the amendments would limit the city tax rate to the current $1.12 per $100 valuation, limit the assessment ratio to the present 60 percent of market value and require voter approval for any increase in the tax rate or assessment ratio.

Ross will give the city council his legal opinion of the amendments and his recommendation on whether they should be submitted for a vote when the council meets July 26.

President Unveils Program to finance conservation improvements.

• Improvement of mass transportation and research on more efficient automobiles. Administration aides said the program would call for spending $16.5 billion over the next decade.

• Aid to low income Americans to help them pay higher energy bills. Officials said Carter would proposed spending $2.4 billion a year for such aid. • A $3.5 billion program aimed at producing 20 percent of the nation's energy needs from solar power by the end of the century.

Nuclear Role Seen

The president, who has made few references recently to the role nuclear energy will have in the wake of the accident at Three Mile Island in Pennsylvania, declared, "nuclear power must play an important role in our energy future."

In an apparent reference to a potential political opponent Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. of California, Carter said the United States has been "working closely with Mexico and Canada" to obtain oil and natural gas. Brown has criticized Carter for not doing enough to tap those supplies.

In his Detroit session with union leaders, Carter said he's made mistakes as president but "I've learned my lesson" and now will spend more time among the people, listening to what they have to say.

"If you don't believe I've got confidence in you, then you are not going to have confidence in me," he said. "The best thing I can do is to put my faith in the American people. And God willing, I will ... to the best of my ... ability so that you will have confidence in me."

Meanwhile, OPEC leaders praised Carter's energy proposals while warning that oil consuming nations should not the pattern of increasing consumption as they did after the 1973-74 oil embargo.

Rene G. Ortiz, secretary general of the OPEC cartel, said he hoped Carter's plan "will lead to a more rational and noble use of oil and oil products."

AFL-CIO President George Meany said Carter's proposal is "long overdue and warrants the support of the American people."

In Congress, Republicans characterized the plan as an effort to save the Carter presidency, while Democrats generally praised the president.

Hospital May Hire Management Firm

The board recessed Monday, planning to meet again and to go into yet another executive session at 1:30 p.m. today. Board members will hear the rest of the HSI proposal and are expected to take some action on it.

Strong explained that the HSI operation would be different from the package offered by Hyatt. The management firm would not initiate a complete hospital takeover, he said, adding that the firm would bring in "competant people" to run the data processing services and fill key administrative positions.

If adopted, the HSI plan would be used to "help us get reorganized," Strong said. The search for an executive director would be delayed — possibly as long as a year — until the hospital is in sounder financial shape.

Newly appointed board member Dub Rushing said he contacted several management firms recently with the idea of hiring someone to help solve the immediate crisis.

Good Track Record

"These people are hospital people," Rushing said of HSI. "They have a good track record and they know Lubbock."

Howard told The Avalanche-Journal he was contacted by the board about three weeks ago. He said he volunteered to work on the LCHD "blue ribbon" committee, charged with finding some of the answers to Health Sciences' growing problems.

Howard would not say whether he had been offered the job of executive director, but admitted that in any case he would not accept it.

"No, I wouldn't take this job," he said. "Not when I've got a good one."

Before board members went into executive session Monday afternoon to hear the HSI proposal, discussion of the data processing replacement dominated both the general board meeting and the preceeding finance committee. Board members, while anxious to resolve the current system's inefficiencies, were preoccupied with the cost of installing and running a new system.

The hospital's computer system has been out of order for two weeks, preventing the processing of patient bills. More than $7 million in unpaid patient bills already had accumulated on the hospital's books before the computer breakdown.

In addition to stopping temporarily the processing of hospital bills, the computer foul-up prevented the staff from working up its monthly balance sheet — which would have indicated how the hospital's shakey cash flow situation is holding out.

In earlier action, board member Don McInturff brought up the possibility of more staff cuts to reduce hospital costs. Administrators already have initiated about 20 layoffs in addition to position cuts through attrition.

But McInturff stressed that the hospital may have to "cut the deadwood," even if it means curbing some of the institution's services as a teaching hospital.

Strong said that rather than making small cuts at every board meeting, a final decision on the maximum number of employee cuts should be made soon. The hospital should decide how many staff positions are necessary per patient bed, he said, and adjust the staff accordingly.

Job Losses Feared

George McGowan, associate executive director for operations and top man since Bosworth's dismissal, said the average for most teaching hospitals is 4.5 to 4.8 employees per patient bed. Health Sciences now has about five employees per bed, he said.

McGowan stressed, however, that the hospital's census is fluctuating, having increased from 115 to 145 patients in one week.

McGowan is scheduled to bring more information on possible employee cuts when the board meets in a called session Monday.

School Board Orders $300,000 Budget Cut

to do it," said trustee Brad Crawford.

Vote Slated Today

At the end of a seven hour session, the board asked for about $300,000 in cuts before it will vote on the budget at today's 3 p.m. session. Crawford cautioned the board, however, not to "jeopardize this system. We're here for education."

Superintendent Ed Irons indicated his staff will review possible cuts, but said that cuts are feasible only in the areas of transportation and personnel. Personnel accounts for about 78 percent of the school district's budget.

During the budget presentation, administrators asked for a transfer of 7 cents from the bond, interest and sinking fund to the maintenance fund to increase next year's carryover balance by $889,826. That figure would increase the projected carryover balance at the end of next year from $230,217 to $1,120,043.

Presently, $1.20 of the present tax rate of $1.38 per $100 of assessed valuation goes to the general fund, and 18 cents goes to the bond, interest and sinking fund to pay off the district's bonds issued for building construction.

Ballenger Principal Named

In other business, trustees unanimously named Johnnye Smith as principal of Ballenger School and James Baker as principal of Rush Elementary. Mrs. Smith, who currently is special education consultant at Ballenger, will replace Tommy Herring, who died in a June 17 auto collision. Baker, who currently is an elementary education consultant, will succeed Bill Bravenec, who died in the same collision.

During the work session today, trustees will consider an increase of $920,123 in local salary increments for teachers. Local salary increments now total $2,266,025.

The board will meet in assembly room of the administration building, 1628 19th St.

SAUSALITO, Calif. (AP) — Three young elephant seals, found near death six months ago, have waddled into the sea after being nursed back to health.

The seals — Sardine, Snow and Davenport — were taken from the metal tanks that have been their homes in recent weeks and carried in boxes by pick-up truck to Rodeo Beach at Fort Cronkhite near here.

The three mammals had been fed a generous diet of herring to regain their vigor as well as 150 pounds of fat. They learned to blow bubbles, snort and squirt water during their captivity.

International Airlines Eye Fare Increases

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — More than 60 major international airlines, faced with a fuel price explosion estimated to average 71 per cent above forecasts for this year, open talks Tuesday on increasing fares and cargo rates.

A spokesman for the International Air Transport Association, which called the meeting, said the sharpest increases might affect North Atlantic routes.

Most of the airlines expected to be represented hope for increases ranging from five to 15 per cent, effective Oct. 1, sources said.

Hans-Rudolf Hagedorn, vice director of Swissair, told a reporter he anticipated "very difficult negotiations" because some airlines were under pressure from their governments to oppose any hikes. He did not name the airlines.

"But I am sure that at the end there will be agreement," he said. "However, the increases are likely to vary strongly from region to region."

IATA spokesman David Kidd said the present aviation fuel price was about 73 U.S. cents per gallon, compared with a price of 45 cents forecast for this year by IATA last October. He said the worldwide estimated average was 77 cents for the whole of 1979.

The spokesman said the fuel price situation varies regionally, and that some purchasers using spot markets have had to pay up to $1.35 a gallon. A transatlantic flight consumes about 10,000 gallons.

The new price hikes, to apply through March 31, 1980, follow an increase of about seven per cent agreed to last April, also with fuel prices cited as the reason.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. My wife and I sold 200 shares of stock on June 13 at 30 7/8 — $30.87 1/2 a share. The next day the stock jumped to more than $40 a share, when it was announced that the company was going to be bought out by another company at the higher price.

We were not notified of this contemplated takeover. If we had been told, we would have waited at least a day before selling. I have written to the company whose stock we sold and to the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC). Don't you agree that we have a legitimate complaint?

A. This is going to be a terribly bitter pill for you to swallow, coming as it does on top of the loss of some $2,000 in potential profits. But the answer has to be a resounding "no."

A potential merger or any other bit of "material information" that might send the price of a stock up or down is supposed to be kept top secret.

When it is announced, it is required to be done by means of "full and prompt disclosure" through the news media — the wire services, newspapers, etc. The securities regulatory authorities — especially the SEC — are firm about this.

The object is to tell the world and, at least in theory, give everybody — stockholders and potential buyers of the stock — the opportunity to get the news at the same time. When a piece of material information about a stock is about to be released, trading in that stock sometimes is halted until the news is disseminated.

We know very well that trading on inside information — "tips" — will never be completely stopped. Wall Street runs on rumors. But the SEC would crucify any company that tipped off its stockholders before releasing material information to the world.

Looks like you'll simply have to chalk that $2,000 up as an expensive lesson in the ways of the securities markets.

Q. In order to transfer some stock from my name to my son's name, I signed the stock certificate on the back exactly as my name appears on the front and had my signature guaranteed by a brokerage firm. I then mailed the certificate to the New York company which is transfer agent and registrar for that stock, with instructions to issue a new certificate in my son's name.

After three weeks of not hearing from them, I wrote again, requesting they acknowledge receipt of the certificate. It has been another two weeks and I still have not heard from them. They are not listed in the telephone book and their address is a post office box number. What should I do?

A. Write to the company whose stock is involved. Address your letter to the corporate secretary. You'll find his or her name listed in the company's annual report. Let the corporate secretary know that the transfer agent and registrar isn't doing the job it's paid to do for stockholders — the owners of the company.

If you don't hear from the corporate secretary, telephone — collect.

Transfer agents and registrars usually blame brokers for delays in transferring stock certificates. Your letter puts the shoe on the other foot. I just hope you sent that certificate by registered mail.

Q. A local broker told me that the dividends paid by municipal bond mutual funds are exempt from federal income tax, only to the extent that the bonds held by each fund were issued in my home state. They might be only a small percentage of the total dividend. Can you shed some light on this?

A. That broker is dead wrong. Interest paid on all municipal bonds is free from federal income tax. When a municipal bond mutual fund, which holds many such bonds as investments, passes that money on to the fund's shareholders as dividends, the fund shareholders do not pay federal income tax on it.

Could be that the broker is trying to talk you out of municipal bond mutual funds because most of them are "no-load" funds, on which there is no commission.

Bank Robber's Wife Named In Warrant

SAVANNAH, Ga. (AP) — Barbara Bush Sellers, 32-year-old wife of convicted bank robber Willie Foster Sellers, was ordered held Monday for U.S. District Court officials in Virginia.

Mrs. Sellers was named in a Virginia arrest warrant for helping her husband elude arrest in 1977.

Sellers, 45, one of the FBI's 10 most wanted fugitives, was taken into custody June 20 at Hartsfield International Airport in Atlanta.

He had escaped from the Fulton County jail in Atlanta March 17, 1977. During his 27 months of freedom, the FBI said he had been charged with bank robberies in Texas, Arkansas, Louisiana, Missouri and North Carolina.

U.S. Magistrate Spence Greyson denied challenges to the warrant by Mrs. Sellers' attorney at a preliminary hearing Monday in Savannah. He ruled that the federal warrant and accompanying complaint were valid.

Mrs. Sellers, who lives in Baxley, Ga., with her four children, will be allowed to remain free on $25,000 bond.

A federal grand jury in Norfolk, Va., must indict Mrs. Sellers within 30 days of her June 28 arrest to continue the action against her.

Pepsi Selling Fast In Soviet Union

MOSCOW (AP) — Pepsi Cola has gone on sale in Moscow from bright red, white and blue kiosks that are drawing long lines and taking less than an hour to sell 50 cases of the soft drink.

The soft drink, the first from the West to be sold in Russia, is manufactured at a new bottling plant just outside town, the fifth Pepsi plant in the country and one of 10 the company hopes to have in operation by 1984.

The Moscow plant began operation on Friday, supplying 32 kiosks around town. The company plans to have 100 kiosks in operation by the opening of the Olympics next summer.

Pepsi Cola is sold in the Soviet Union under a 1973 agreement which gives Pepsico Inc. the right to distribute Stolichnaya Vodka in the United States.

Newsmen Tour Three Mile Island Plant

MIDDLETOWN, Pa. (AP) — Fifteen reporters donned red hard hats, radiation detection badges and name tags Monday to take part in the news media's first tour of Three Mile Island since an accident at the nuclear plant shook the world March 28.

"We've been working ourselves up to a point where we thought it was timely to brief the news media," said Bob Arnold, vice president of General Public Utilities, the holding company that owns the crippled plant.

While reporters accompanied three earlier tours by President Carter and investigating panels, this was the first time visits were arranged just for the press.

The reporters chosen for Monday's tour boarded a bus that ferried them through a chain-link gate and across a bridge leading to the island in the middle of the Susquehanna River.

Plant spokesman Bill Gross served as tour guide, leading the visitors around the grounds dominated by four huge cooling towers.

"This is the infamous Unit 2 control room," said Gross, as he opened a door to reveal a vast array of instruments, dials and red and green lights.

A harrowing series of human errors and mechanical problems left the reactor's 100 tons of uranium fuel uncovered by cooling water for nearly an hour, allowing radiation to leak into the atmosphere and raising the possibility of a disastrous meltdown.

A second unit was shut for refueling at the time and will be idled for at least another year to allow the Nuclear Regulatory Commission to hold public hearings.

Shift foreman Fred Scheimann, who ran the control room when the crisis erupted 110 days ago, pointed at two dials on one of the control room's instrument panels.

"Those were the initial ones," he said, singling out controls that should have alerted workers that auxiliary feedwater had been cut off from the damaged reactor.

"That's where we've had most of our questions up to this point," said Scheimann. "It's been a busy three months," he said.

Adorning both dials now are crumpled yellow tags that say, "Only to be opened by approved EP (emergency procedure) or shift supervisor ..."

There were no surprises or substantially new information gleaned from the tour, except perhaps that the atmosphere on Three Mile Island is considerably more relaxed than it was this spring.

Workmen went about installing insulation on huge pipes in much the same manner any factory worker acts — although the pipes carried cooling water from the world's most famous and most mangled nuclear reactor.

Reporters saw two extensive construction endeavors, both necessitated by the accident and both completed in a fraction of the time that such projects would take under less pressing conditions.

One was a new system to clean 250,000 gallons of contaminated water now stored in tanks inside an auxiliary building adjoining the reactor building.

The other was a maze of plumbing, in the basement of a turbine and generator building, which now serves to cool the damaged reactor.

The plumbing job looked impressive, although some of the yard-thick cooling water pipes relied on crude stacks of wood to keep them off the floor.

"This would normally take a year or two. We got it done in three months," Gross said of the construction projects.

"It works just like a water softener in your home ... with resin beads that will be eventually lifted out by cranes for shipment," said Gross.

Coal Liquefaction Project Raises Questions

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. (AP) — Like ancient alchemists trying to turn base metals into gold, today's scientists are eyeing coal in hopes of creating a product almost as precious in these energy-troubled times — clean fuel oil.

The government is considering paying up to half the cost of a $700 million demonstration plant to prove that fuel oil can be "squeezed" from coal, whose complex chemistry has already spawned such everyday items as mothballs and fingernail polish.

The project is a giant coal liquefaction plant. Its proposed site is in rolling farm country just north of Morgantown, bordered by Pennsylvania on the north and the Monongahela River on the east.

The plant will gobble 6,000 tons of coal a day and swallow 4,000 gallons of water a minute. In return, it will spew forth 12,000 barrels of fuel oil daily — if it works.

The liquefaction process has been under development since 1962 by Pittsburg and Midway Coal Co., a subsidiary of Gulf Oil.

Coal is soaked under high pressure and moderate heat in an oil that contains hydrogen gas, explains Carl DiBella of the Department of Energy.

The heat and pressure dissolve the coal into a sort of oily broth, and hydrocarbons free the sulfur in the coal, leaving a relatively clean liquid that can be burned.

The oil needed for the soaking process is a byproduct of liquefaction, and sulfur is removed as hydrogen sulphide, which can be reprocessed into elemental sulfur and sold in blocks.

The process, Gulf officials stress, has been proven on a limited basis at a pilot project in Fort Lewis, Wash. What remains to be seen is whether the job can be done economically on a large scale.

And because the basic raw material is coal, local residents wonder how clean everything can be kept and what the plant might mean to their daily lives.

What about the heavy coal truck traffic that will be produced? What about the storage system for the coal itself? How will dust be kept down? How will their public works and school systems stand up to demand from 2,000 construction workers and 400 permanent employees of the demonstration project?

There are fears about carcinogens being produced along with noise, air and water pollution.

"But when you read between the lines and read the full thing, there are some problems that need to be studied," she said.

Gulf has said that some of the sulfur will escape through the stacks as sulfur dioxide. Gulf estimates 2,118 tons will escape during the demonstration phase. Other pollutants will include 3,483 tons of nitrogen oxide, 493 tons of suspended particulates and 82 tons of hydrocarbons.

But those amounts are not really large in terms of power plants, said Carl Beard, head of the West Virginia Air Pollution Control Commission.

"We don't see it as a problem at all," he said, but admitted that "certainly, there's going to be degradation of the air supply."

Financing for the project, once considered by state politicians as assured, is in some doubt. The governments of Japan and Germany are committed to pay 25 percent each of the total $700 million cost, hoping to use knowledge gained in the project to decide whether it might work in their countries.

But the exact amount of federal money that will be involved in the remaining 50 percent is not resolved. The Carter administration has promised to finance one of two coal conversion projects — the plant in Morgantown or one in Newman, Ky.

"There are not very many people who are going to drop a quarter of a billion dollars" for an unproven plant, admits Robert Martin of the energy department.

"The real problem is: Can we handle it economically with very large equipment?" asked Wilbur Bull, a scientist who helped design the solvent refined coal process.

Construction on the Morgantown plant is proposed to begin in late 1980 or early 1981 with production starting in about four years.

If all goes well, it would later be expanded into a commercial plant that would use 30,000 tons of coal a day and produce 61,200 barrels of clean boiler fuel for northeastern power plants.

The commercial plant also would produce 15,000 barrels a day of naphtha, a substance used to make varnish and electrical insulation, 7,440 barrels of liquid pipeline gas and 34 million cubic feet of pipeline gas.

Economic Aide Hospitalized

Schultze was said to be suffering from an inflammation of the liver. "He withstood the surgery very well," said the spokesman, who did not want to be identified.

Schultze, 54, who is chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, entered the hospital on July 5 for treatment of a high fever.

A spokesman said surgery was decided upon when the fever failed to abate.

The spokesman said the date of Schultze's release from the hospital still is not known. "It will depend on the speed of his recovery," the spokesman said. Schultze was budget director during the administration of former President Lyndon Johnson and was an economist with the Brookings Institution here prior to being named by Carter.

AL's Ryan Hopes To Stop Nationals

ALL-STAR SITE — This is the view of the Seattle Kindome where tonight's 50th Baseball All-Star game will be played. Measurements of the diamond are shown, down the foul lines and in straightaway center field. (AP Laserphoto)

SEATTLE (AP) — Flame-throwing Nolan Ryan of the California Angels will start for the American League against crafty Steve Carlton of the Philadelphia Phillies for the National League in tonight's 50th All-Star Game.

Play will begin at 7:40 p.m. CDT.

Managers Bob Lemon of the AL and Tom Lasorda of the NL announced the starters as well as other lineup changes forced by injuries before both teams worked out Monday in the controlled climate of the Seattle Kingdome.

Lemon said he would shift Boston's Carl Yastrzemski, elected as an outfielder in the fan ballot, to first base, replacing injured Rod Carew of California, who has been sidelined for six weeks with a thumb injury. To replace Yaz in the outfield, Lemon named California's Don Baylor, who leads the majors with 85 runs batted in.

Baylor had finished 14th in the fan voting but was named to the team as a reserve.

Lasorda said he would use Philadelphia's Bob Boone as his starting catcher. Ted Simmons of St. Louis, the elected starter, will miss the game because of a broken wrist and Cincinnati's Johnny Bench, a perennial All-Star named to the team as a reserve, pulled out because of recurring back spasms.

Lasorda's decision to start Boone behind the plate with his teammate, Carlton, on the mound created an interesting and ironic situation. Carlton usually has demanded that the Phillies use veteran backstop Tim McCarver instead of Boone as his regular catcher. He had no choice in this matter, however.

Both starting pitchers are low-hit specialists. Ryan has pitched four no-hitters in his career and came within two outs of a record fifth in his last start last Friday night against the New York Yankees. He finished with his third one-hitter of the season and seventh of his career instead.

Carlton has pitched two one-hitters this season, the last one July 4 against the New York Mets, and has a record-tying five in his career.

Shortstop Roy Smalley of the Minnesota Twins, who has led the league in hitting almost all season, will lead off followed by third baseman George Brett of Kansas City. Two other Royals, catcher Darrell Porter and second baseman Frank White, bat 7-8 for the AL followed by the pitcher's position.

All-Star Game rules require that pitchers take their turns at bat and do not use the designated hitter which is part of the American League rules.

Lasorda's NL lineup opens with Davey Lopes of Los Angeles at second base and leading off, followed by Dave Parker of Pittsburgh, the right fielder, batting second.

Steve Garvey of Los Angeles, twice chosen Most Valuable Player in these games, bats third at first base, followed by third baseman Mike Schmidt of Philadelphia, whose 31 home runs lead the majors, in the cleanup spot.

The American League has lost seven straight games and trails in the series 30-18-1. Lee MacPhail, president of the AL, joked about his league's All-Star predicament.

"Losing streaks are miserable," said MacPhail, nodding at Lasorda, whose defending NL champion Dodgers reached the All-Star break in last place, 17½ games behind. "Just ask Tommy. It's tough when you're losing for a week or 10 days. But when you've got a losing streak in the All-Star Game that's lasted seven years, well that's miserable."

"Tommy told me not to worry," the NL boss said, "so I'm not gonna worry."

Travel Woes Yanks At Britis

LYTHAM ST. ANNES, England (AP) — The Lytham jinx, which has stymied Americans from winning the five British Opens held here since Bobby Jones' year in 1926, is in evidence again.

As the field of 152 started gathering Monday for pre-tournament practice, the U.S. quartet of Tom Watson, Ben Crenshaw, Gil Morgan and Mark Hayes ran into travel troubles.

First Watson, hurrying to catch his plane at Kennedy Airport in New York, picked up his wife's passport by mistake. "It doesn't look much like you," said the airport checkout woman as an embarrassed Watson got his wife to send his own passport from Kansas to New York. Then his Concorde flight was fogbound, he missed his connection in London, and had to finish the 250 miles to Lytham by road.

Fog-bound Kennedy also snagged Crenshaw's plans for an early arrival here. His flight from Texas was diverted to Newark, N.J., Airport and after a long cab journey he arrived in New York with only 10 minutes to spare to catch his plane.

With him on the same flight were Hayes and Morgan — and their luggage, including their clubs, went astray when they arrived in London. Luckily, both sets turned up Monday in time for them to get in a couple of practice rounds.

Nicklaus, who

After that, said Jack, "I feel I should be able to putt better this week."

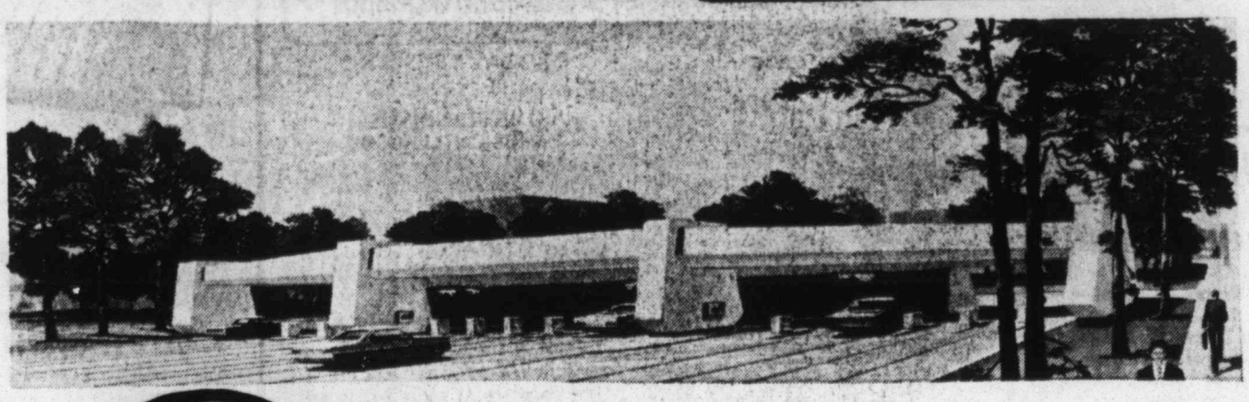

Since Bobby Jones won here 53 years ago, opens at Lytham have been won by Bobby Locke of South Africa in 1952, Peter Thomson of Australia in 1958, Bob Charles of New Zealand in 1963, Tony Jacklin of Britain in 1969, and Gary Player of South Africa five years ago.

Nicklaus' own record here is third in 1963, sixth in 1969, and third again in 1974. "I like the course, but it doesn't like me very much," he said wryly. "I could have won in 1963 if I hadn't bogeyed the last two holes and finished a shot behind Charles and Phil Rodgers, and I could have won in 1974 if I'd managed a par 35 over the last nine."

Nicklaus is rated a 7-1 shot in the betting to win for the second straight year, but the leader of the pre-tournament odds is Watson at 5-1.

Newsmen Tour Three Mile Island Plant

MIDDLETOWN, Pa. (AP) — Fifteen reporters donned red hard hats, radiation detection badges and name tags Monday to take part in the news media's first tour of Three Mile Island since an accident at the nuclear plant shook the world March 28.

"We've been working ourselves up to a point where we thought it was timely to brief the news media," said Bob Arnold, vice president of General Public Utilities, the holding company that owns the crippled plant.

While reporters accompanied three earlier tours by President Carter and investigating panels, this was the first time visits were arranged just for the press.

The reporters chosen for Monday's tour boarded a bus that ferried them through a chain-link gate and across a bridge leading to the island in the middle of the Susquehanna River.

Plant spokesman Bill Gross served as tour guide, leading the visitors around the grounds dominated by four huge cooling towers.

"This is the infamous Unit 2 control room," said Gross, as he opened a door to reveal a vast array of instruments, dials and red and green lights.

A harrowing series of human errors and mechanical problems left the reactor's 100 tons of uranium fuel uncovered by cooling water for nearly an hour, allowing radiation to leak into the atmosphere and raising the possibility of a disastrous meltdown.

A second unit was shut for refueling at the time and will be idled for at least another year to allow the Nuclear Regulatory Commission to hold public hearings.

Shift foreman Fred Scheimann, who ran the control room when the crisis erupted 110 days ago, pointed at two dials on one of the control room's instrument panels.

"Those were the initial ones," he said, singling out controls that should have alerted workers that auxiliary feedwater had been cut off from the damaged reactor.

"That's where we've had most of our questions up to this point," said Scheimann. "It's been a busy three months," he said.

Adorning both dials now are crumpled yellow tags that say, "Only to be opened by approved EP (emergency procedure) or shift supervisor ..."

There were no surprises or substantially new information gleaned from the tour, except perhaps that the atmosphere on Three Mile Island is considerably more relaxed than it was this spring.

Workmen went about installing insulation on huge pipes in much the same manner any factory worker acts — although the pipes carried cooling water from the world's most famous and most mangled nuclear reactor.

Reporters saw two extensive construction endeavors, both necessitated by the accident and both completed in a fraction of the time that such projects would take under less pressing conditions.

One was a new system to clean 250,000 gallons of contaminated water now stored in tanks inside an auxiliary building adjoining the reactor building.

The other was a maze of plumbing, in the basement of a turbine and generator building, which now serves to cool the damaged reactor.

The plumbing job looked impressive, although some of the yard-thick cooling water pipes relied on crude stacks of wood to keep them off the floor.

"This would normally take a year or two. We got it done in three months," Gross said of the construction projects.

"It works just like a water softener in your home ... with resin beads that will be eventually lifted out by cranes for shipment," said Gross.

Coal Liquefaction Project Raises Questions

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. (AP) — Like ancient alchemists trying to turn base metals into gold, today's scientists are eyeing coal in hopes of creating a product almost as precious in these energy-troubled times — clean fuel oil.

The government is considering paying up to half the cost of a $700 million demonstration plant to prove that fuel oil can be "squeezed" from coal, whose complex chemistry has already spawned such everyday items as mothballs and fingernail polish.

The project is a giant coal liquefaction plant. Its proposed site is in rolling farm country just north of Morgantown, bordered by Pennsylvania on the north and the Monongahela River on the east.

The plant will gobble 6,000 tons of coal a day and swallow 4,000 gallons of water a minute. In return, it will spew forth 12,000 barrels of fuel oil daily — if it works.

The liquefaction process has been under development since 1962 by Pittsburg and Midway Coal Co., a subsidiary of Gulf Oil.

Coal is soaked under high pressure and moderate heat in an oil that contains hydrogen gas, explains Carl DiBella of the Department of Energy.

The heat and pressure dissolve the coal into a sort of oily broth, and hydrocarbons free the sulfur in the coal, leaving a relatively clean liquid that can be burned.

The oil needed for the soaking process is a byproduct of liquefaction, and sulfur is removed as hydrogen sulphide, which can be reprocessed into elemental sulfur and sold in blocks.

The process, Gulf officials stress, has been proven on a limited basis at a pilot project in Fort Lewis, Wash. What remains to be seen is whether the job can be done economically on a large scale.

And because the basic raw material is coal, local residents wonder how clean everything can be kept and what the plant might mean to their daily lives.

What about the heavy coal truck traffic that will be produced? What about the storage system for the coal itself? How will dust be kept down? How will their public works and school systems stand up to demand from 2,000 construction workers and 400 permanent employees of the demonstration project?

There are fears about carcinogens being produced along with noise, air and water pollution.

"But when you read between the lines and read the full thing, there are some problems that need to be studied," she said.

Gulf has said that some of the sulfur will escape through the stacks as sulfur dioxide. Gulf estimates 2,118 tons will escape during the demonstration phase. Other pollutants will include 3,483 tons of nitrogen oxide, 493 tons of suspended particulates and 82 tons of hydrocarbons.

But those amounts are not really large in terms of power plants, said Carl Beard, head of the West Virginia Air Pollution Control Commission.

"We don't see it as a problem at all," he said, but admitted that "certainly, there's going to be degradation of the air supply."

Financing for the project, once considered by state politicians as assured, is in some doubt. The governments of Japan and Germany are committed to pay 25 percent each of the total $700 million cost, hoping to use knowledge gained in the project to decide whether it might work in their countries.

But the exact amount of federal money that will be involved in the remaining 50 percent is not resolved. The Carter administration has promised to finance one of two coal conversion projects — the plant in Morgantown or one in Newman, Ky.

"There are not very many people who are going to drop a quarter of a billion dollars" for an unproven plant, admits Robert Martin of the energy department.

"The real problem is: Can we handle it economically with very large equipment?" asked Wilbur Bull, a scientist who helped design the solvent refined coal process.

Construction on the Morgantown plant is proposed to begin in late 1980 or early 1981 with production starting in about four years.

If all goes well, it would later be expanded into a commercial plant that would use 30,000 tons of coal a day and produce 61,200 barrels of clean boiler fuel for northeastern power plants.

The commercial plant also would produce 15,000 barrels a day of naphtha, a substance used to make varnish and electrical insulation, 7,440 barrels of liquid pipeline gas and 34 million cubic feet of pipeline gas.

Economic Aide Hospitalized

Schultze was said to be suffering from an inflammation of the liver. "He withstood the surgery very well," said the spokesman, who did not want to be identified.

Schultze, 54, who is chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, entered the hospital on July 5 for treatment of a high fever.

A spokesman said surgery was decided upon when the fever failed to abate.

The spokesman said the date of Schultze's release from the hospital still is not known. "It will depend on the speed of his recovery," the spokesman said. Schultze was budget director during the administration of former President Lyndon Johnson and was an economist with the Brookings Institution here prior to being named by Carter.

AL's Ryan Hopes To Stop Nationals

ALL-STAR SITE — This is the view of the Seattle Kindome where tonight's 50th Baseball All-Star game will be played. Measurements of the diamond are shown, down the foul lines and in straightaway center field. (AP Laserphoto)

SEATTLE (AP) — Flame-throwing Nolan Ryan of the California Angels will start for the American League against crafty Steve Carlton of the Philadelphia Phillies for the National League in tonight's 50th All-Star Game.

Play will begin at 7:40 p.m. CDT.

Managers Bob Lemon of the AL and Tom Lasorda of the NL announced the starters as well as other lineup changes forced by injuries before both teams worked out Monday in the controlled climate of the Seattle Kingdome.

Lemon said he would shift Boston's Carl Yastrzemski, elected as an outfielder in the fan ballot, to first base, replacing injured Rod Carew of California, who has been sidelined for six weeks with a thumb injury. To replace Yaz in the outfield, Lemon named California's Don Baylor, who leads the majors with 85 runs batted in.

Baylor had finished 14th in the fan voting but was named to the team as a reserve.

Lasorda said he would use Philadelphia's Bob Boone as his starting catcher. Ted Simmons of St. Louis, the elected starter, will miss the game because of a broken wrist and Cincinnati's Johnny Bench, a perennial All-Star named to the team as a reserve, pulled out because of recurring back spasms.

Lasorda's decision to start Boone behind the plate with his teammate, Carlton, on the mound created an interesting and ironic situation. Carlton usually has demanded that the Phillies use veteran backstop Tim McCarver instead of Boone as his regular catcher. He had no choice in this matter, however.

Both starting pitchers are low-hit specialists. Ryan has pitched four no-hitters in his career and came within two outs of a record fifth in his last start last Friday night against the New York Yankees. He finished with his third one-hitter of the season and seventh of his career instead.

Carlton has pitched two one-hitters this season, the last one July 4 against the New York Mets, and has a record-tying five in his career.

Shortstop Roy Smalley of the Minnesota Twins, who has led the league in hitting almost all season, will lead off followed by third baseman George Brett of Kansas City. Two other Royals, catcher Darrell Porter and second baseman Frank White, bat 7-8 for the AL followed by the pitcher's position.

All-Star Game rules require that pitchers take their turns at bat and do not use the designated hitter which is part of the American League rules.

Steve Garvey of Los Angeles, twice chosen Most Valuable Player in these games, bats third at first base, followed by third baseman Mike Schmidt of Philadelphia, whose 31 home runs lead the majors, in the cleanup spot.

The American League has lost seven straight games and trails in the series 30-18-1. Lee MacPhail, president of the AL, joked about his league's All-Star predicament.

"Losing streaks are miserable," said MacPhail, nodding at Lasorda, whose defending NL champion Dodgers reached the All-Star break in last place, 17½ games behind. "Just ask Tommy. It's tough when you're losing for a week or 10 days. But when you've got a losing streak in the All-Star Game that's lasted seven years, well that's miserable."

All-Star Pitcher Doubts Dimensions

SEATTLE (AP) — Nolan Ryan of the California Angels, the starting pitcher for the American League in today night's All-Star Game, said Monday he doesn't believe the Seattle Kingdome, a noted home-run haven, was even as big as its published dimensions.

The three-year-old, $67 million facility, home of the expansion Seattle Mariners and the site of baseball's 50th mid-summer classic, is listed as 316 feet down both the lines.

"The dimensions are mismarked," Ryan said flatly. "I don't think they're mismarked, I know. I'd be afraid to predict how many home runs are going to be hit tomorrow night but I know that batting practice is going to be amazing.

Ryan, author of four career no-hitters and seven-one hitters, will be starting his first All-Star Game. In 1977, he refused Billy Martin's call to pitch in that game after Martin asked him to replace ailing Angel teammate Frank Tanana.

That happened just prior to the game after Ryan had made other plans since he had been ignored. There was bitterness expressed by both Ryan and Martin then. Bob Lemon, the man who succeeded Martin as manager of the New York Yankees last year and then was replaced by Martin June 18 in the Yankees' continuing game of managerial musical chairs, picked Ryan to start.

"If Ryan has a no-hitter going Tuesday night," Lemon smiled, "I just might leave him in." (All-Star rules, of course, prohibit a pitcher from going more three innings.)

"I'm not so sure now that I made the right decision then," said the 33-year-old Ryan of his refusal to play in the 1977 All-Star game. "But I was at the time and I stuck by my guns then. Last year Martin said he wouldn't take me if I was 40-0."

He has given up eight home runs this season and four of them came within the confines of Seattle's domed stadium. "I wouldn't be surprised," he said with a grin, "if it was a high-scoring game."

The National League has won 15 of the last 16 games, including the last seven in a row.

"Basically," Ryan said, "I'm going to stick to my fastball. I know a majority of their (National League) guys are fastball hitters but I haven't been as pleased with my breaking ball as I've wanted this year. I really haven't paid that much attention to how the American League has been losing these games but I'll try to keep us in the game and maybe we can get some momentum.

"I don't really think the results of the All-Star Game have been indicative of the quality of the two leagues. I don't think one game settles anything. I think the talent is pretty even. I don't think there's a jinx or anything like that. I just think the National Leaguers have performed better in this game and they've gotten the breaks, too."

Travel Woes Plague Yanks At British Open

LYTHAM ST. ANNES, England (AP) — The Lytham jinx, which has stymied Americans from winning the five British Opens held here since Bobby Jones' year in 1926, is in evidence again.

As the field of 152 started gathering Monday for pre-tournament practice, the U.S. quartet of Tom Watson, Ben Crenshaw, Gil Morgan and Mark Hayes ran into travel troubles.

First Watson, hurrying to catch his plane at Kennedy Airport in New York, picked up his wife's passport by mistake. "It doesn't look much like you," said the airport checkout woman as an embarrassed Watson got his wife to send his own passport from Kansas to New York. Then his Concorde flight was fog-bound, he missed his connection in London, and had to finish the 250 miles to Lytham by road.

Fog-bound Kennedy also snagged Crenshaw's plans for an early arrival here. His flight from Texas was diverted to Newark, N.J., Airport and after a long cab journey he arrived in New York with only 10 minutes to spare to catch his plane.

With him on the same flight were Hayes and Morgan — and their luggage, including their clubs, went astray when they arrived in London. Luckily, both sets turned up Monday in time for them to get in a couple of practice rounds.

Meanwhile, Jack Nicklaus, last year's winner at St. Andrews, had arrived in plenty of time and without incident from Berlin. He played a quiet weekend round on the championship course at Troon in Scotland with his son, Jackie, who gave him some tips about his putting.

Nicklaus, who hasn't been having much success since his Open victory last year, said he hadn't been putting well for around 18 months and was feeling downright uncomfortable with his putter. Then, said son Jackie, "You're breaking off your stroke — you're not finishing through the ball."

After that, said Jack, "I feel I should be able to putt better this week."

Since Bobby Jones won here 53 years ago, opens at Lytham have been won by Bobby Locke of South Africa in 1952, Peter Thomson of Australia in 1958, Bob Charles of New Zealand in 1963, Tony Jacklin of Britain in 1969, and Gary Player of South Africa five years ago.

Nicklaus' own record here is third in 1963, sixth in 1969, and third again in 1974. "I like the course, but it doesn't like me very much," he said wryly. "I could have won in 1963 if I hadn't bogeyed the last two holes and finished a shot behind Charles and Phil Rodgers, and I could have won in 1974 if I'd managed a par 35 over the last nine."

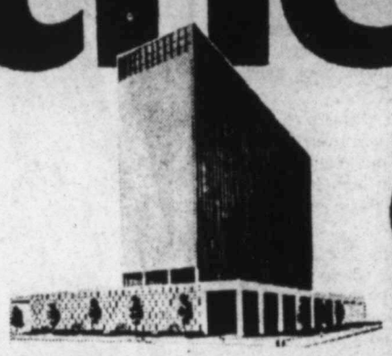

Nicklaus is rated a 7-1 shot in the betting to win for the second straight year, but the leader of the pre-tournament odds is Watson at 5-1.

Kiner Doubts HR Mark To Fall

NEW YORK (AP) — Former home run king Ralph Kiner says that sluggers Dave Kingman and Mike Schmidt are real longshots to reach the single-season records of Babe Ruth and Roger Maris.

"Both are capable of hitting 60 and 61 homers," said Kiner, the Hall of Famer who led the National League in homers seven straight years and slammed 54 in 1949 and 51 in 1947. "But it's such a tremendous feat to do, I don't think they'll get it. Many people have threatened but only Maris was able to catch Ruth."

Ruth, who hit 714 career homers, had a one-year high of 60 in a 154-game season in 1927. In 1961, Maris totaled 61 in a 162-game season.

Kingman, the powerful outfielder with the Chicago Cubs, has connected for 29 homers in the 79 games he has played this season. The Cubs have 77 games left. Schmidt, the muscular third baseman for the Philadelphia Phillies, has totalled 31 homers in the 91 games he's been in this year. His club has 71 games left.

In his record-setting year, Ruth hit his 29th homer in his 75th game and No. 31 in game 90. In 1961, Maris hit No. 29 in game 75 and No. 31 in game 77.

"The circumstances are very remote for them doing it," said Kiner, a telecaster for the New York Mets who recently announced a new series of baseball (BABE) awards to be voted by the play-by-play broadcasters from the 26 major league teams. "There's a law of diminishing returns. The closer to the record they get, the fewer good pitches they'll be seeing."

Kiner, who belted 369 homers in 10 seasons, thinks Schmidt's team gives him an advantage over Kingman. "The Cub lineup isn't backed with home run hitters besides Kingman," he said. "But Philadelphia's got more home run hitters, especially Greg Luzinski, for pitchers to worry about."

When there aren't many strong hitters on a club, hurlers can pitch a tough batter carefully or even walk him in certain situations.

"When Maris was going for the record, he had (Mickey) Mantle batting behind him," said Kiner of the other member of the awesome twosome. Mantle smacked 54 homers in 1961. "Did you know that because of Mantle batting in the cleanup spot, Maris never received an intentional walk that year?"

Kiner doesn't think it's important that Kingman plays half his games in Wrigley Field, where there are no lights. "If you're going to do it, you're going to do it," he said. "There are two sides to those tangible things. It's easier to see in the daytime, but it's much hotter and the players get more tired during the day.

"Both parks (Wrigley Field and Philadelphia's Veterans' Stadium) are good hitters' parks."

Kiner, whose at-bats per home run percentage of 14.11 is second to Ruth's 11.76, doesn't think player conditions have changed very much. But he does cite two advantages for the modern-day slugger.

"The ball is much livelier," Kiner said. "And when you hear about cross-country traveling today, just remember that airplanes beat traveling on trains any day."

COACH NEEDED

Tubbs, Banks Given Honors

DALLAS (AP) — The Texas Sports Writers Association has named basketball coach Billy Tubbs of Lamar coach of the year for winter sports and track coach Ted Banks of Texas-El Paso coach of the year for spring sports.

Tubbs' cagers won the Southland Conference title and upset Detroit in first-round play of the NCAA tournament before bowing to Michigan State.

Tubbs drew 40 first-place votes and 262 points to win over Dan Wall of Southwest Texas State. Wall's basketball team placed third in the NAIA national tournament. Wall got 21 first place votes and 247 points.

Banks got 414 points and 25 first-place votes to beat out baseball coach Cliff Gustafson of Texas with 371 points and golf coach Earl Stewart of SMU with 362 points.

Tech Signs High Jumper

Schoolboy John Paige, termed the most consistent high jumper ever to come to the school, has signed a track letter-of-intent with Texas Tech, track coach Corky Olgesby announced Tuesday.

Paige, a 6-5, 180-pounder from Killeen Ellison High School, placed fourth in the state Class AAAA track meet in May with a leap of 6-9.

During his senior year, Paige cleared 6-10 four times and was over the bar at 6-8 or better nine times. Only five other high jumpers in the high school ranks jumped higher than Paige last year, Oglesby said.

Paige cleared 6-10 once in Lubbock, at the regional meet, where he matched the height achieved by regional and state champion Chuck Perry of Monterey. Perry won on fewer misses.

"With his size and consistancy," Oglesby said, "he should be a great one. He's a sure bet to break the school record of 6-10." That record, set in 1975, belongs to Bryant Huckabay.

CHICAGO (AP) — No sooner has the visiting team finished batting in the top of the seventh inning, when Chicago White Sox fans send the chant of "Harry, Harry, Harry," reverberating through Comiskey Park.

It doesn't cease until broadcaster Harry Caray grabs the public address microphone and shouts "Awright, lemme hear ya, everybody."

Organist Nancy Faust strikes the tune "Take Me Out To The Ball Game," and Caray starts singing and urges the crowd to sing along. They need little urging either to sing or cheer.

Once it's over, Nancy runs off a chorus of "Hail, Hail, The Gang's All Here" and the shouts of "Harry, Harry, Harry," continue until the next White Sox player goes to bat.

The fans love every bit of it but some purists have accused Caray of being a cheerleader, his act "bush" and himself a "house man."

Caray flourishes with the adulation and enjoys every minute of it as does White Sox president Bill Veeck, not one to look askance at any means of putting fans in the ballpark.

"Last year Harry and Nancy were the only performers we had," said Veeck. "He somehow manages to capture his own theme that 'it's fun to go out to the ballpark' because it's fun for him. I don't know what he'd do if he couldn't be at the ball game."

"I love it," said Caray who takes special pride in his 35 years of broadcasting baseball. "I've never missed a game or an inning that I'm supposed to do. I guess I've worked 7,000 games.

"Good health has something to do with it, naturally, but I think much of my stamina comes from love of what I do. And, it pays well."

To those who would call Caray a "house man," Veeck insists the opposite is true. In fact, Caray was fired by the late John Allyn because of his criticism of players and the organization over the air.

"Sure, there are things I wish he wouldn't say," said Veeck. "But I'd be the last to contest them. The fans identify with him because he is a fan. They know he's not going to give them a lot of pablum. He's not a house man.

"He's glib and happy-go-lucky," said Veeck, "but he does his homework. He knows every player who comes along and he also knows the game which is something I can't say about a lot of guys in that business."

Allyn fired Caray at the end of the 1976 season when the American League was in the process of moving the franchise to Seattle. But Veeck came on the scene and gained control of the club and kept it in Chicago.

When Veeck took over his first response to expected questions was "I have a manager, Chuck Tanner. No, we don't have an announcer."

Veeck then replaced Tanner with an old friend, Paul Richards, but left the broadcasting situation in limbo.

"He draws more people than any player on our club or the opposition," said Veeck.

Despite being intentionally ignored when Veeck first purchased the club, Caray insists, "I always wanted to work for a guy like Veeck who is interested in the fans like I am."

Caray says he has always sung "Take Me Out To The Ball Game," but it was always to the fans in front of his booth. "It was Veeck's idea for me do do it on the PA system and get everyone involved."

Veeck always has tried to get the song and act across without much success.

"I tried it in Milwaukee, Cleveland, St. Louis, and Chicago the first time, but it never worked. Finally, I got the right guy. It does a lot for the game and gets the fans involved even if the Sox are losing."

Caray's first 25 years broadcasting baseball were with the Cardinals in St. Louis. "I never, ever, thought of being anyplace else and I even turned down offers to go elsewhere including a couple to go to New York," said Caray.

"I wasn't fired in St. Louis and I didn't quit," recalls Caray. "My contract ran out and they never renewed it."

"He's also a seller," said Veeck. "He was associated with another beer when Augie Busch took over in St. Louis. The advertising agents said he wouldn't work out for the Busch organization because of his identity with the other product. Harry asked for six months and without ever knocking the other product, he put it out of business throughout Missouri and Southern Illinois."

After leaving the Cardinals, Caray spent a year with the Oakland A's and then turned down an offer from Charlie Finley for a five-year contract and an interest-free loan to build a home on the West Coast because "I love the Midwest, my roots are here."

When the White Sox are home or at Milwaukee for a night game, and the Chicago Cubs happen to be home, Caray spends his afternoons at Wrigley Field.

"The Cub fans out there know me as well as do the Sox fans," Caray says. "I even go to Ray's Bleachers and have a few beers with the Cub fans and we have a ball.

"Let's face it, a broadcaster has to be an entertainer. This game isn't all balls and strikes. You have to have a sense of humor and, believe me, there's nothing like having fun at the old ballpark.

Giants Coach Vows Tough Camp

PLEASANTVILLE, N.Y. (AP) — Rookie coach Ray Perkins promised the Giants a tough camp and is proving to be a man of his word as he sent the National Football League team through its third day of hard-hitting drills Monday.

"We've still got a lot of work to do," Perkins said, "but I've seen a lot of good things, both offensively and defensively."

Two-a-day drills began Saturday with the first controlled scrimmage of the summer on Sunday. The physical play continued Monday as the defense, as expected, was ahead of the offense.

"I think training camp is tough, there's no way you can get around that," Perkins said. "I don't think it's as tough a camp as New England. We'll probably cut off two-a-days in 2½ weeks."

Although the veterans — except the quarterbacks — were not required to appear at Pace University until Friday, 37 of the 49 veterans on the roster showed up one week early. Combined with the three mini-camps Perkins held between April and June, the team is already a couple of weeks ahead of last season.

Most eyes have focused on the play of quarterback Phil Simms, the Giants' surprise first-round pick. Simms has been extremely tentative in both the passing and running drills but most attribute that to nervousness.

"As far as the learning process is concerned, Phil is still behind," Perkins said. "He's just fresh out of college, the other guys have been around for awhile."

One of the other guys — Joe Pisarcik, Jerry Golsteyn, Fred Besana or Randy Dean — figures to be gone by next week. There's just not enough work in camp for five quarterbacks. Pisarcik remains the odds-on choice to open the season with Simms in reserve. Besana is the early-line choice to beat out Golsteyn and Dean for the No. 3 spot.

Perkins said Emery Moorehead, coverted from wide receiver to fullback, has been impressive thus far. The coach also singled out the play of veterans Harry Carson and John Mendenhall and rookie back Ken Johnson of Miami and rookie defensive lineman Phil Tabor of Oklahoma.

The Giants announced the signing of five free agents: Vern Roberson, a safety from Grambling; wide receiver Steve Davis of Grambling; defensive back Darnll Meyers of Oklahoma State; defensive ends Jim Browning of Miami and Gary Paulsen of Colorado State.

Sports Notes

Alzado Ponders Ring Career

DENVER (AP) — Lyle Alzado, the Denver Broncos' all-pro defensive end who boxed Muhammad Ali in a nationally televisd eight-round exhibition last weekend, says he's still considering a professional boxing career.

"There have been some very interesting offers. But I am not in the position to divulge any of those things right now. I owe that to them. But it is very impressive," Alzado said by telephone Monday from the Broncos camp at Colorado State University in Fort Collins.

"I'll have made up my mind by the time the veterans get up here, (Friday)," said Alzado, 30, who won three regional Golden Gloves heavyweight titles in his youth and compiled a 44-1 amateur record.

He told The Associated Press he has been made offers in the million-dollar bracket to become a professional boxer.

"I'm in football camp right now and just thinking about what's been offered me. I still love playing football and owe it to myself to think about it for the next couple of days. To say right now I'm not going to fight would be foolish," the nine-season National Football League star said.

Czech Tennis Star Defects

BERN, Switzerland (AP) — Czech tennis star Hana Strachanova Monday called on Swiss authorities in her first official move to bid for political asylum to stay in the country.

Swiss justice ministry spokesman Benno Huber told The Associated Press the 18-year-old player, who 24 hours earlier won the women's doubles title in the Swiss Open Championshps at Gstaad, visited the federal alien police in Bern to explain her desire to stay.

Huber said she was told to formally deposit the request with local authorities in Frauenfeld, the commune where she will live for the next few weels at the home of an uncle, who gained refugee status after fleeing here 11 years ago.

Priest Answers Dome's Prayers

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The missing blood-flecked canvas on which Muhammad Ali regained his heavyweight crown from Leon Spinks has been returned to the Superdome.

"A priest brought it in," said Bill Curl, a dome spokesman. "He said a man had given it to him and asked him to turn it back to the Superdome — no questions asked.

"The thing weighs about 300 pounds. I told him we'd be glad to send somebody to pick it up but he said he had it in the trunk of his car and would bring it in.

"He said it was getting in the way of his golf clubs."

The priest did not give his name, Curl said, and he did not say who gave it to him or how.

Nobody even knew the canvas was missing until the Associated Press got an anonymous phone call from a man who said he paid $500 for it. The man asked the AP to check the Superdome to see if he actually had a unique — and possibly valuable if cumbersome — souvenir.

He said he got it from a man who said he had found it in a trash bin during a convention.

The Superdome said it was unlikely the canvas got mixed up with convention equipment. It is worth about $5,000 without considering the sentimental value. Curl said officials considered it stolen.

The man called back to the AP last Thursday and sounded distressed when he heard he was holding hot goods.

Curl said no one had checked the blood splatters or other tell-tale marks to determine for certain that the priest brought in the real thing.

"We're not going to pursue the case any further," he said. "We put it in storage. It will be repainted and re-used."

Malone Signs Richest Pact

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Rockets center Moses Malone, the most valuable player in the National Basketball Association last season, signed a three-year contract Monday, that according to his agent, makes Malone the highest paid team athlete in the world.

The Rockets called a news conference to announce the signing of free agent guard Tom Henderson to a three-year no-cut contract and Malone's signing was an added surprise.

Rockets general manager Ray Patterson said the Rockets had already agreed to give Washington, Henderson's former team, the Rockets' first-round draft choice next season as compensation for signing Henderson.

"It is fair to say that Mo's contract makes him the highest paid pro athlete for a team sport in the world," said Lee Fentress, Malone's agent. "I'd say (tennis player Bjorn) Borg makes three or four million dollars counting all of his endorsements but I know of no team-salaried athlete making more than Mo."

Fentress, however, declined to give specifics of Malone's contract, which will extend through the 1981-82 season. He also refused to compare Malone's contract with that of Denver's David Thompson, reportedly making $800,000 annually.

'Hollywood' Wants New, Larger Pact

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — The number of players in the Dallas Cowboys training camp swelled to 95 Monday, but none was as noticeable as Thomas "Hollywood" Henderson.

Living up to his self-coined nickname, linebacker Henderson rolled into camp in a chauffeur-driven, black limousine and made himself for the most part unavailable to media.

While all-pros Randy White, Charlie Waters and Cliff Harris quietly led the rest of the club's veterans into camp, the spotlight shone on Henderson.

Earlier, the flashy linebacker had told Dallas Morning News columnist Skip Bayless that he would seek renegotiation of his four-year contract worth a reported $100,000 a year.

"Hollywood is unhappy," Henderson told Bayless. "I need more money. I don't want to cause no trouble, but I'm going to talk to them about it when I get there (Thousand Oaks)."

Bill Simpson Fails Physical

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — Free safety Bill Simpson has failed his physical examination with the Buffalo Bills and will be returned to the Los Angeles Rams under the National Football League player trade agreement between the teams, Bills coach Chuck Knox said Monday.

"He injured both knees and underwent surgery," a dejected Knox said on the first day of Buffalo's training camp. "He underwent a thorough examination and on the advice of our doctor we decided not to pass him."

Another blow was suffered by the team's secondary when Knox revealed highly regarded strong safety Rod Kush of Nebraska-Omaha had broken his toe. The coached added, however, that the Bills had signed veteran defensive end Bob Bell of St. Louis as a free agent to try to overcome the defensive injuries.

The Bills also signed 270-pound defensive tackle Fred Smerlas of Boston College, the team's third pick in the 1979 draft.

Linebacker Tom Cousineau of Ohio State, the top draft pick in the NFL this year, was absent from camp and remained unsigned — the first No. 1 choice in the league to fail to sign since running back O.J. Simpson pulled the same maneuver on the Bills 10 years ago. Knox said he had not hear anything new on the situation in the past 24 hours.

Sipe Seeks '78 Repeat

KENT, Ohio (AP) — Cleveland Browns quarterback Brian Sipe said he can meet the hopes he raised at the close of last season, when he completed 70 of 113 passes for 1,088 yards and ten touchdowns.

"I was good in other games too, not just the four at the end," Sipe said Sunday. "And I think I'm perfectly capable of playing at that high level of intensity all of this year."

But, Sipe said, "I'm getting tired of talking about those four games last year, and trying to convince people they were not a fluke."

The 6-foot-1, 190-pound quarterback said he's glad coach Sam Rutigliano has expressed belief in his ability.

Falcons Look To A&I Back

SUWANEE, Ga. (AP) — The answer to the Atlanta Falcons' running game, which ranked next-to-last in the National Football League a year ago, may be George Franklin, a virtual unknown picked up on waivers a few days before the 1978 season.

The problem, however, is that Franklin, a 6-foot-3, 226-pound fullback, spent the entire season on the special teams and ran the ball only once from scrimmage, losing 8 yards.

"He's the best pure athlete on the team. . .running, throwing or catching the ball. If he'll get himself ready and want it bad, he'll be as good as he wants to be," coach Leeman Bennett said as the Falcons opened training camp Monday.

"I've got a lot of plans for him," he said. "He has great physical ability, and could possibly make a real contribution to our football team."

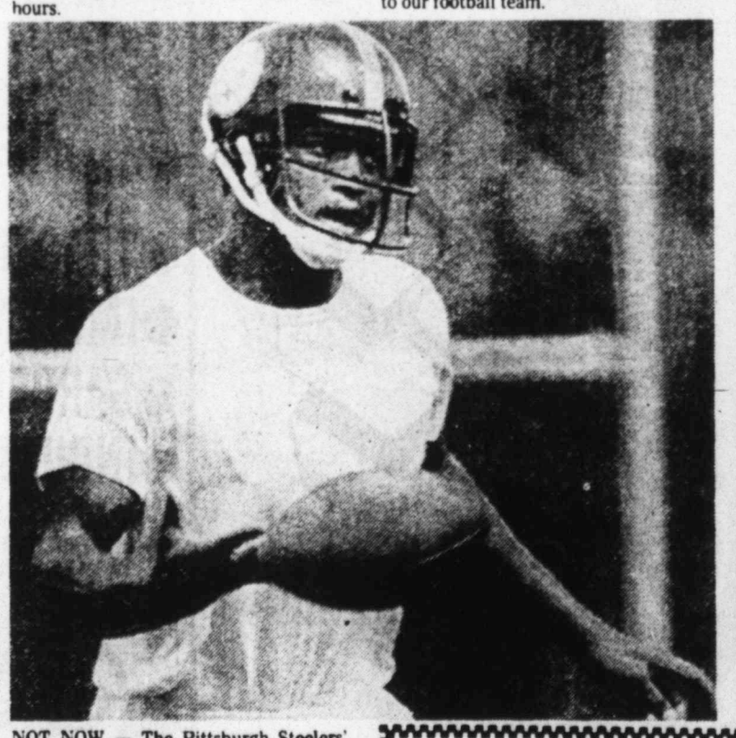

Franklin, 25, who played on three consecutive NAIA national championship teams for Texas A&I, was a wide receiver before switching to fullback when he was drafted in the second round by the St. Louis Cardinals in 1977.

A knee injury forced Franklin to sit out his rookie season and the Falcons picked him up after he was cut by the Cardinals, who tried to make him a tight end.

After being told by Bennett that he would have played more had he been at the Falcons' camp in 1978, Franklin has worked hard to learn the plays in the off-season.

"Coach Bennett was kind of skeptical about playing me because I hadn't been in for a Falcon camp," Franklin said, "but now I guess he kind of reassured himself. I love the game a lot and I can help this team, but I'm not going to say I'm going to come in here and turn the club around. I really don't know what I can do yet."

Bennett believes Franklin can be the big back the Falcons need to allow Bubba Bean, a smaller back who led the squad with 707 rushing yards last season, to switch back to halfback.

NOT NOW — The Pittsburgh Steelers' No. 1 draft choice, running back Greg Hawthorne of Baylor, flips away a football during a practice session at Latrobe, Pa. All the Steelers' rookies and a few veterans reported to camp Sunday. However, later in the workout, Hawthorne sustained a hamstring muscle pull and will be out of action indefinitely. Coca-Cola Returns To Egypt After Years Of Blacklisting

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Coca-Cola, long on the Arab blacklist for doing business with Israel, announced Monday its entry into Egypt's bubbling soft drink market.

Coke is the third major soft-drink maker in a year to be lured to Egypt, where thirst far outstrips production and soft drinks still sell for the government-mandated equivalent of a U.S. dime.

"Anything you produce here could be sold since the demand is so much higher than production," Coca-Cola's Middle East President Sam Ayoub told reporters as he sipped the first bottle of Coke made in Egypt since 1967.

Government and private soift drink plants produce annually about 70 million cases of 24 bottles each. Industry experts estimate the demand at nearly twice that amount.

Ayoub confidently predicts Coke will have half the market in two years, when he says the first real competition should begin. But Coke will have to battle two other newcomers, Seven-Up and Canada Dry's Sport Cola, as well as long-entrenched Pepsi, which is launching a revitalization program.

Seven-Up and Sport touched off a cold-drink rush last summer and together expect to turn out about 13 million cases. This year trucks carrying the foreign-made colas are besieged by vendors almost daily.

"Coke is coming? That's good news. There's no question we need more soft drinks," said black-robed Hagga Fatma, a vendor who complains that she is able to buy only about 10 cases a week and they are sold almost immediately.

But the news is not so welcome among some Egyptian economists, who worry that Egypt's open-door policy is attracting luxury items such as cigarettes and soft drinks instead of spurring local manufacture of products that would reduce Egypt's heavy import bill of about $5 billion a year.

"Coke is a big name and its coming here may have some pulling power for other Western firms," said one Western diplomat. "But in some eyes, it would be preferable to see high-technology operations that would better demonstrate Egypt's ability."

Coca-Cola goes on sale Saturday and by next year nine revamped government bottling plants will be churning out Coca-Cola with concentrate bought under license from the U.S. firm.

Thirty million cases are to roll off the recently revamped lines in the first full year of production, Ayoub said.

An agreement is to be signed next week to build a $9 million concentrate plant in the Mediterranean city of Alexandria. The plant will be wholly owned by Coke, Ayoub said.

Coke has also teamed up with Egyptian investors on a $50 million scheme to produce citrus fruit in Egypt for export to Europe and the Arab world. Fifteen thousand acres are already planted and the first crop is expected in 1984.

Coke's total investment in Egypt is about $34 million, Ayoub said, which is about half what the Egyptian government says has been invested by U.S. firms since 1974.

The Atlanta-based firm's operation in Egypt was nationalized in 1952 by President Gamal Abdel Nasser and booted out altogether in 1967 after Arab states blacklisted Coke for letting a franchise in Israel.

Despite the boycott, Coke has found its way back into the Arab world and is now sold in seven other Arab countries: Tunisia, Morocco, North Yemen, Somalia, Djibouti, Mauritania and Algeria.

"As we understand the boycott, a company can be de-listed if it contributes significantly to the economy of an individual country," the Egyptian-born Ayoub explained.

COKE IN EGYPT — Coca-Cola, banned in Arab nations since 1967, will go on sale in Egypt Saturday under an agreement with the Egyptian government. The soft drink wil be sold in 8½-ounce bottles, shown in this photograph, manufactured in Egypt. (AP Laserphoto)

Emergency Plan Needed For Reactors' Operation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate voted Monday to shut down, as of June 1, 1980, all nuclear power plants for which a state has no federally-approved emergency evacuation plan.

On a vote of 63-20, senators also decided to deny operating permits to reactors under construction in states without emergency plans acceptable to the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

It appeared that more than four dozen operating and future reactors could be affected by the Senate's decision, which comes in the wake of the nuclear accident earlier this year at the Three Mile Island reactor near Harrisburg, Pa.

Congressional officials said 39 of the nation's 70 licensed nuclear power plants are in states without government-approved emergency plans. None of them is covered by an individualized plan drawn up by a state. All facilities have emergency plans prepared by their operating utilities.

Officials said 10 plants are nearing completion in states without NRC-approved plans.

The Senate took its action as it debated legislation to authorize $373 million for the next fiscal year for NRC programs. The bill offered senators their first opportunity to tighten control over the nation's troubled nuclear industry in the wake of the Three Mile Island accident last March 28.

Final passage of the measure was expected either later Monday or today.

The House of Representatives earlier this year rejected a proposal that would have prohibited for one year the issuance of new federal licenses for plants in states without government-approved emergency plans. The issue was expected to come up on the House floor again, later this year.

Congressional officials said 12 states have nuclear emergency plans that have been approved by the federal government. But 16 states containing 39 power plants do not have federal approval.

The Senate twice rejected moves to give the NRC authority to substitute an evacuation plan of its own in a state where the government dragged its feet. One attempt, led by Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., was rejected on a vote of 40-37. A similar proposal, by Sen. James A. McClure, R-Idaho, was tabled by a single vote, 41-40.

Backers of the legislation, including Sens. Gary Hart, D-Colo., Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., and John Glenn, D-Ohio, said the federal government needed to prod the states into developing plans for dealing with Three Mile Island-type accidents.

An aide to Hart said each of the 16 states lacking in NRC-approved evacuation plans have begun work developing them.

But Johnston and others said the approach might mean a "rush to shutdown," particularly if a state's governor wanted to thwart the growth of the nuclear industry.

The measure also contains other steps crafted with Three Mile Island in mind:

•More money is provided to speed up an NRC program under which a resident inspector will be stationed at each of the nation's nuclear facilities.

Clements Raps Carter's Sunday Energy Sermon

NEW YORK (AP) — Texas Gov. Bill Clements criticized President Carter's energy speech Monday, calling it a dodge and saying Carter's plan to freeze oil imports at 1977 levels will bring on a recession.

"I don't think there's any way we can hold our imports to the 1977 level in the short term," the Republican governor said.

"That has dire implications, an ominous ring," Clements said. "What he is doing is bringing about a no-growth policy in our country that would stagnate our businesses. It will bring on a ressession and create unemployment. It is not realistic. It's a pipe dream."

The Texas governor also called Carter's Sunday night address "an echo of the other four speeches" and said "If he can't come up with a better answer than he did last night, he's going to be in the same bog-hole he's been in.

"He said all the good words and made all the right motions, but when it came down to facing up to the real world and making the hard, tough decision, he dodged."

Clements, who appeared on NBC's "Today" program, added, "What we want are specific plans — what we want is a program we can put our teeth into. Words are not enough."

Clements said Texas is already beginning to run out of oil.

"We in Texas this year are producing 600,000 barrels a day of oil less than we were three years ago, and we are on 100 per cent production — we can't produce any more," he said. "Three years from now we are going to be down, say, another 600,000 barrels.

"We are on a decline curve. So what the president is talking about is holding static to the 1977 level... Inevitably this means no growth in our economic well being. That means unemployment."

Clements also disagreed that conservation would make a significant impact on the nation's energy supplies.

"That has such definite limitations when you start talking in terms of the equivalency to millions of barrels of oil a day. Conservation will never get us where we need to go," he said.

City Men Charged In Pair Of Crimes

A 19-year-old Lubbock man, who was arrested just hours after Saturday's aggravated robbery of Poco Taco, 100 University Ave., formally was charged with that robbery, Monday.

The 18-year-old female cashier told police that a man ordered a soft drink over the restaurant's intercom and that when he pulled up to the drive-in window about 10:50 p.m., pointed a revolver at her and demanded the cash.

Also Monday, Billy Joe Berry of 1900 Fifth St., No. 12, was charged with attempted robbery in connection with a Saturday afternoon attempted purse-snatching incident.

TIME-DC Earnings Up Despite Driver Strike

Hugh C. Shurtleff, president of T.I.M.E.-DC, Inc., today announced that the company realized a profit for the second quarter even though earnings were adversely affected as a result of the 10-day teamsters' strike and industry defensive shutdown of operations which occurred at the beginning of the quarter.

Revenues for the second quarter 1979 were $44,790,000 compared to $45,732,000 for the same period in 1978, representing a decrease of 2.1%. Net earnings for the quarter were $158,000, equal to earnings of $.01 per share after deduction of preferred dividends of $132,882. This compares with net earnings of $973,000, equal to earnings of $.29 per share, assuming full conversion of the convertible preferred stock, for the second quarter of 1978.

Revenues for the six months ended June 30, 1979 were $92,845,000 compared to $87,695,000 for the same period in 1978 representing an increase of 5.9%. Net earnings for the six-month period were $718,000 compared to $1,834,000 for the same period in 1978. Earnings per share were $.17 after deduction of preferred dividends of $265,765 compared to $.55 per share, assuming full conversion of the convertible preferred stock, for the prior year.

Gains on sales of property and equipment after tax effect amounted to $106,000 for the quarter and $107,000 for the six months compared to $187,000 for the second quarter and $798,000 for the six months of 1978.

In May, the board of directors declared a preferred dividend of $.18 per share and a $.10 per share common dividend. These dividends were paid June 29, 1979 to shareholders of record June 15, 1979.

During the first six months of 1979, approximately $3,700,000 of new city equipment was put into service. Delivery of 95 new line haul tractors costing $4 million is expected during the third quarter of 1979. The purchase of the city equipment was made from internally generated funds. The maximum amount of borrowings under the company's revolving credit agreement was increased from $25,000,000 to $32,000,000 to provide funds for the purchase of new equipment.

National City Lines, the parent company, has reported to the company that it may purchase additional securities of the company from time to time, in the "open market", at such prices and at such times as National City Lines may determine, in order to give National City Lines approximately 81% of the combined total votes of T.I.M.E.-DC. National City Lines as of June 30, 1979, owned 2,075,708 shares of the company's common stock and 197,038 shares of the company's preferred stock. Such ownership represents 76% of the total votes. National City Lines acquired 5,000 shares of the common stock during the quarter ended June 30, 1979.

Ag Movement Says Apology Insufficient

AUSTIN (AP) — The American Agriculture Movement said Monday that Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown's apology for a racial slur and a display of temper did not go far enough.

The organization also said in a statement that Brown should explain why he strongly opposes creation of a purely advisory agriculture producers commission.

Craig Bryant of Austin, an American Agriculture delegate, said the statement was assembled during a weekend telephone conference of the farmers who were with Brown when he lost his temper last Tuesday.

"We accept Mr. Brown's apology to the general public, but we feel he owes a public apology specifically to the black citizens and family farmers of this state," the American Agriculture statement said.

Bryant said the group decided not to make public a tape that one farmer secretly made of the meeting in Brown's office.

He said the tape would remain with the person who made it.

Bryant said one reason for not releasing the tape is that it included remarks by Brown "against some state officials and employees that haven't been disclosed."

"Since he (Brown) is going to be in office a few more years, we want to get along with him the best we can," Bryant said.

During the Tuesday meeting, Brown reportedly grew angry and said he did not need the farmers' vote to be re-elected because "there are more niggers on a Houston street than there are farmers in Texas."

"Mr. Brown has forgotten that the people are the government and not the other way around. To slur the blacks and belittle the farmers is beyond our comprehension. It's a sad day when an elected official not only slurs the people he is elected to serve but tells them they have no right to question his actions — that he alone knows what is best," the statement said.

American Agriculture said Brown had refused to outline his objection to the proposed advisory board.

"Mr. Brown is certainly fearful of a citizens advisory commission for agriculture. The public has a right to know why," the statement said.

The statement also criticized the middle men whom American Agriculture blames for rising food prices, and Bryant said Brown has not investigated them as he should.

"We are concerned when bread prices go up because wheat prices are up. But when wheat prices go down, bread prices do not go down. The public is told that wheat prices are up, but are they told about the dockage imposed on the farmers so that he does not get that price?" American Agriculture said.

Bryant said the reference is to a practice by some grain companies in a strip running from Victoria to Corsicana of docking grain deliveries 15 cents to 20 cents a bushel if it has a yellow color.

He said a grain company will claim the color shows a loss of protein content resulting from the wheat's having been rained on and then dried. Bryant said, however, the U.S. Department of Agriculture dropped that standard two years ago.

WHEN IT COMES TO GOING THE DISTANCE, LINCOLN CONTINENTAL AND MARK V ARE FULL OF SURPRISES.

LONG-RANGE CRUISING

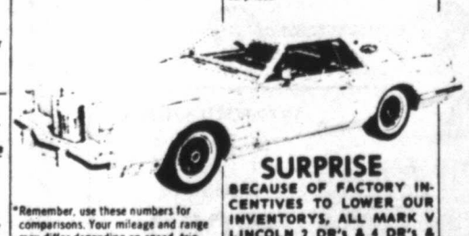

For all you long-range thinkers, there are Lincoln Continental and Continental Mark V. Two luxury cars that offer you many long-range conveniences.
As you can see by this chart, Lincoln Continental and Continental Mark V offer you respectable estimated cruising ranges.

LINCOLN CONTINENTAL
EPA EST. MPG	HWY. EST.	Fuel Capacity	EST. Range	HWY. EST. Range
12*	17	24.2 Gal.	290*	411
CONTINENTAL MARK V
EPA EST. MPG	HWY. EST.	Fuel Capacity	EST. Range	HWY. EST. Range
12*	17	25 Gal.	300*	425

*Remember, use these numbers for comparisons. Your mileage and range may differ depending on speed, trip length and weather. Actual highway mileage and range will probably be less than the highway and range estimate.

Kidnapping, Assault Reported By City Woman

Lubbock police continued searching Monday for a man a Lubbock bartender said kidnapped and sexually abused her Sunday night.

The 33-year-old woman told police Monday the gun-toting man forced his way into her car in the 6200-block of Avenue A about 11:30 p.m. as she was about to leave a nightclub and instructed her to drive south on Avenue A.

Reports indicate the suspect held a pistol on her and ordered her to stop at about 82nd Street. The woman said she thought the man knocked her out and that when she regained consciousness he was sexually abusing her.

After the woman refused to submit, she was allowed to drive back to a populated area of the city where the man got out of the car, she told police. Police said the woman was visibly shaken and suffered multiple cuts.

The suspect was described as a blond white man, between 25 and 35 years of age, tall, thin and wearing a light-colored shirt and jeans.

In other activity, Wesley Bentley of 1717 48th St. told police someone stole a shotgun and camera equipment totaling $625 from his home over the weekend. Police found no sign of forced entry.

Mrs. Foystine Murphy told police she had a $1,500 charm bracelet taken from her purse sometime between June 16 and Sunday at the International Dance Club and Studio, 5415 Aberdeen.

Johnny V. Rios of 523 40th St. told police he was in a 13th Street club parking lot about 11 p.m. Sunday when a young Mexican-American man stabbed him in the back and hip. Police had no suspects in custody Monday.

Roy Virgil Qualls, 45, of 501 42nd St. told police that about 2 a.m. today he was robbed of $150 cash by two men who had been traveling in his pickup truck on Southeast Drive.

Qualls said he and the two men were driving to get something to eat when the pair, one of whom was driving, stopped the truck, pulled him out of the vehicle and took his wallet. The victim reportedly was able to get back in his vehicle and drive off.

Both suspects were described as white men between 18 and 25 years old.

A Lubbock man said he was shot at about 1:45 a.m. today in front of a convenience store at 27th Street and Avenue Q.

Victor M. Lara, 28, of 2219 Second St. said he was walking back to his car when several persons fired in his direction. However, neither he nor his companion, Adolph Cuevos, 26, of 3813 E. Third St. was hit.

Jogger Joined By Elephant

ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP) — A startled jogger called skeptical Rochester police to report being chased by an elephant.

George Darst, out for a Sunday morning fitness run, was jogging along a northeast city street when he said he saw a lumbering pachyderm.

Police dispatched a squad car to the area and soon an officer — as startled as Darst — radioed back to the law enforcement center, "Hey, there really is an elephant out here."

It turned out the elephant had been rented from a visiting circus as a 16th wedding anniversary surprise for Jerry and Sharon Dalton. Friends were responsible for the stunt.

TORNADO DAMAGE — This portion of an affluent Cheyenne, Wyo., neighborhood was nearly totally devastated, Monday, by a late afternoon tornado. A small child was killed and a number of severe injuries were reported as a result of the windstorm. (AP Laserphoto)

Floods Leave Families Homeless

By The Associated Press

Emergency supplies of food and drinking water were trucked into mountain communities near the Kentucky-Virginia border on Monday where weekend flash floods routed hundreds of families and left millions of dollars in damage.

The body of a young woman was found in the floodwaters of Paw Paw Creek in Virginia and two other persons were missing and feared drowned in the two states.

The flooding in this rugged coal mining region was described as worse than the flood of 1977 that killed four persons and did widespread damage.

One Kentucky official said 300 persons were still unable to return to their homes and estimated damage in his state at $7 million to $8 million.

Across the border in Virginia, where Red Cross officials estimated 50 homes were destroyed and 300 were damaged, about 200 families remained stranded because of washed-out roads and bridges.

"People are staying with relatives, in campers, vans and some stayed in shelters," said Pike County, Ky., Magistrate Wade C. Justice.

Heavy rains sent creeks surging from their banks early Sunday and saturated four square miles of eastern Pike County, with most of the water converging on Phelps, Majestic and Freeburn.

The body of a Virginia woman, whose name was withheld, was recovered Monday but a man who was riding in the same car was still missing. Kentucky officials fear that 4-year-old Tommy Branham also drowned. His parents reported seeing him washed away.

"The biggest problem we have now is drinking water and food," reported Assistant Pike County Judge John Phillips. "A lot of the grocery stores were affected and we've had to truck water into the area. We sent 1,400 gallons in a short while ago."

Phillips said many of the homes in the Phelps, Ky., area are served by wells and he predicted that at least 1,000 wells will have to be pumped out and chlorinated.

The Salvation Army sent three mobile canteens to Pike County and the Red Cross established a shelter at Phelps High School.

In Buchanan County, Va., Red Cross worker Bill Meador said officials estimated that 400 to 450 families were hit by the flooding early Sunday, but about half were able to return to their homes after the water receded.

While damage was estimated roughly at $1 million to $1.5 million in Virginia, the figure could go higher as emergency crews are able to reach the hardest hit areas, said Red Cross coordinator Johnny Merricks. Officials had no communications with some of the hardest hit areas, he said.

The flooding was caused by a cloudburst that deluged the northwestern portion of the coal-producing county with nearly half a foot of rain late Saturday and early Sunday.

Some roads were washed out and numerous bridges just disappeared, officials said. Electric power and phone lines were down in some areas.

Between 60 and 100 cars were wrecked in the flood, Merricks estimated. Damage also was reported to Grundy High School and Mount Mission School in Grundy.

Most of those who had to leave their homes were able to stay with relatives, Merricks said. But he said 15 or 20 were housed temporarily by the Kelsa Church of Christ.

TWISTED REMAINS OF HOUSE — Hundreds of families were left homeless Monday night after a tornado swept through two residential areas and a trailer court in Cheyenne, Wyo. At least one person was reported killed and about 30 others were reported injured. (AP Laserphoto)

Unions Strike At Westinghouse After Collapse Of Negotiations

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Three unions, representing about 37,400 workers, went on strike against Westinghouse Electric Corp. at 12:01 a.m. EDT, Monday, following a collapse in negotiations, officials said.

There was no immediate word on whether another union, representing about 12,000 salaried employes, would join in the walkout.

"Westinghouse precipitated the strike by breaking off negotiations at 5:35 p.m. July 14 (Saturday), 30 hours before the contracts with the unions were due to expire," Mary Dresser of the Coordinated Bargaining Committee said in a statement.

The committee represented the three striking unions, the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, the United Electrical Workers, and the International Union of Electrical Workers.

"We are prepared for a long strike," said Vincent Vingle, chairman of the International Union of Electrical Workers, which has 18,500 Westinghouse members.

After talks broke off on Saturday, federal mediators scheduled a meeting Sunday morning between the three unions represented by the committee and Westinghouse management. But the meeting never took place.

"The company refused to meet with us," said Mrs. Dresser. "We were all there, just waiting for them, ready to meet."

"We showed up," countered a company press release, "but the meeting never materialized, and no further meetings have been scheduled."

About 5,000 other union employees, who traditionally bargain with Westinghouse after the big four unions settle, would be expected to honor picket lines, Mrs. Dresser said.

The walkout would be the first company-wide job action against Westinghouse since 1955-56 when a larger union force struck for 156 days.

Mrs. Dresser said local unions were holding membership meetings on Sunday. "The attitude of the people, as far as I can gather, is of quiet resolve," she said. "They know they have to go out. The contract expires and the company is not going to move."

The unions and Westinghouse agreed that the stalemate involved whether workers would pay into their pension plan. They had not under the prior contract.

"The company representatives informed the union that there would be no further negotiations on any issues until the unions accepted a contributory pension plan," said a press release from the Coordinated Bargaining Committee.

Westinghouse said: "The key issue is the Westinghouse proposal for a contributory pension plan similar to that agreed to by the three unions as well as the other unions at General Electric Co. and accepted by the GE union members within the past week."

On Thursday, the three unions turned downed a proposed three-year contract offering wage increases totalling $2 per hour, as well as cost-of-living boosts.

Westinghouse said the proposal was roughly equal to the agreement accepted last week by 120,000 employes of General Electric, but union officials said the offer "cut corners" on the GE package.

Pro-Abortion Leaders Hope To Aid Solons

NEW YORK (AP) — Pro-abortion leaders said Monday they hope to raise $1 million in an effort to save senators and congressmen targeted for defeat in 1980 by abortion opponents.

However, Robin Chandler Duke, president of the National Abortion Rights Action League, acknowledged that freedom-of-choice advocates cannot hope to compete dollar-for-dollar with abortion foes.

"We're up against an enormous force," she said at a news conference, adding anti-abortionists seem to have an "astronomical" amount of money to spend.

The National Abortion Federation, a professional group devoted to providing abortion services, issued a statement — endorsed by Mrs. Duke's lobbying group — announcing a shift from a "low-key defensive and reactive stance" to "positive and assertive action."

But when asked to define the change, leaders of both groups spoke of defensive measures — trying to save candidates under attack by abortion opponents.

"The abortion movement has relied on the legality of the Supreme Court decision of 1973 guaranteeing a woman the right to choose whether or not she wishes to have an abortion, to carry our cause," the statement said.

"In view of the continuing political pressure by the anti-abortionists, we must mount our own campaign on behalf of all women to ensure they have access to legal safe abortions throughout the country."

Terry Beresford, president of the National Abortion Federation, said her group "will make abortion a clean word because it is a clean service and a constitutional right." She announced the formation of a Legislation Action Committee to formulate pro-abortion proposals.

Mrs. Duke worried aloud that anti-abortionists would take credit for the defeat of any of their announced targets, regardless of whether the candidate's position contributed to a defeat.

Man Drowns In Plainview Pit

A-J Correspondent

PLAINVIEW — The Plainview area reported its second drowning of the summer Sunday when Santos Solis III, 20, of Halfway drowned while swimming in a tailwater pit located on the Sherwood Holley farm.

Solis' body was found about 5:30 p.m. in about 10 feet of water. Plainview Justice of the Peace Glenn Stone pronounced Solis dead at the scene and ruled the death accidental.

Officers at the scene said Solis had been swimming with his brothers, Joe, 17, and Pete, 16. The two tried to help Solis, after seeing he was in trouble, but they were unsuccessful.

The younger brothers then ran to a nearby farm house about 3:30 p.m. to obtain help, after which Hale County sheriff's deputies, Plainview police officers, volunteer firemen and Department of Public Safety troopers tried to rescue the man.

Rosary for Solis was recited Monday in the Wood-Dunning Funeral Home Chapel.

Services for Solis will be at 2 p.m. today in Sacred Heart Catholic Church of Plainview with the Rev. Rex Nicholl, pastor, officiating.

Burial will be in Plainview Memorial Park under the direction of Wood-Dunning Funeral Home.

Survivors include his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Santos Solis II of Plainview; two brothers, Joe and Pete of the home; and three sisters, Mrs. Mike Cortinaz, Mrs. Rayney Lopez and Ofelia Solis, all of Plainview.

Closing Of Famed Casinos Ordered

LONDON (AP) — Magistrates who heard tales of widespread hanky-panky ruled Monday, after six days of hearings, that Ladbroke's, the biggest legal gambling group in Britain, must close four luxurious London casinos because it is unfit to run them.

The magistrates agreed with objections by the American-owned Playboy Club and Scotland Yard, and refused to renew Ladbroke's licenses under the Gaming Act.

It was business as usual at Ladbroke gaming tables Monday night, however. The casinos may continue operating pending an appeal, which the firm said will be filed within the required 21 days.

The case centered around alleged unorthodox actions by Ladbroke's aimed at enticing gamblers away from rival clubs in London's West End. The magistrates ruled the actions impermissible.

Private detectives hired by Ladbroke's jotted down car numbers outside rival casinos and were able to trace the car owners surreptitiously through contacts in the police computer operation, the hearing was told.

Ladbroke's then invited these gamblers to free meals, sent them flowers and fruit and invited them to become members of the Ladbroke clubs in London, witnesses said.

Thousands of pounds were paid to hotel porters to introduce prospective gamblers to Ladbroke casinos, and some gamblers were paid commissions to introduce "big losers," Simon Tuckey of the official Gaming Board told the hearing.

Ladbroke's lawyers accused Victor Lownes of the Playboy Club of objecting to the license renewal through jealousy and an eye to the "rich pickings" that could follow a closedown of Ladbroke casinos.

James Fox-Andrews, lawyer for Ladbroke's, said: "The picture that has been painted of Victor Lownes as a latterday Sir Galahad, donning his suit of shining white armor emblazoned with the word 'purity,' is so ludicrous as not to merit a moment's consideration."

Lownes said solemnly after the decision: "Ladbroke casinos, like Playboy casinos, contributed to the composite glamor of the variegated scene which draws gamblers to London.

"British gaming has earned itself a reputation for the wisdom of its legislative structure and for the firmness of its administrative supervision. But its success depends upon the recognition by the general body of the industry itself that it will not tolerate any violation of the law by persons holding casino licenses."

Ladbroke's casinos accounted for half the company's $88 million profit last year. The firm's casino division, Ladup Ltd., has 1,400 employes and 19,000 shareholders.

More than $33 million was wiped off the company's stock market value in late dealings, Monday, after the ruling.

Doctor Denies Mailing Bomb

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A Tennessee physician, jailed on federal charges of sending a letter bomb to his ex-wife at a Kerrville hospital, entered a plea of innocent through his attorney here Monday.

Dr. M. Dean Loftis of Rockwood, Tenn., was indicted June 26 by a federal grand jury here on charges of sending the bomb to Francisca Loftis at Sid Peterson Hospital, where she worked as a nurse.

The bomb — a single stick of dynamite packaged in a 4-inch by 6-inch box — was disarmed without incident in the hospital basement June 13 by members of a police bomb squad sent from San Antonio 55 miles away.

Mrs. Loftis, whom court records showed was divorced from her husband last November in Kingston, Tenn., had called authorities after discovering wires as she unwrapped the package.

Loftis remained in the Bexar County Jail late Monday in lieu of $100,000 bond set last month by U.S. Magistrate Joseph F. Leonard Jr.

If convicted, Loftis could face a maximum penalty of 20 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Loftis had been arrested last month in Tennessee for allegedly failing to pay more than $9,000 in child support.
