Rich Dentist Sought As Officials Open Probe Of Tragedy

By CHARLES MILLER

WATERTOWN, Mass, Jan. 13 (US)—Helen Woodford Ruth, wife of George Herman "Babe" Ruth, the home run king in baseball, died in a mysterious fire which Friday night destroyed the home at 47 Quincy street here, where she had lived for nearly two years as the wife of Dr. Edward H. Kinder, wealthy dentist.

The burned body of Mrs. Ruth, unconscious, was taken from the blazing house by firemen. She died a few minutes later. Tonight ugly rumors began to raise their head that she might have died otherwise than because of the fire.

Funeral Held Up

The prosecuting attorney has ordered the funeral held up until Wednesday for a complete investigation.

Dr. Kinder is missing tonight and the police are seeking him to question him. It was reported that Dr Kinder had gone to New York, presumably to escape the growing scandal surrounding the tragedy of fire and death.

The charred body of the woman who was known as "Mrs. Helen Kinder," positively identified by her sisters as Mrs. Babe Ruth, was tonight acknowleged by Babe himself as his wife.

Dr. Kinder was at a prize fight in Boston Friday night when the fire occurred. He collapsed when a friend, the Rev. John W. Down, got him on the telephone and told him of the tragedy. He is declared by the police to have later reported the victim of the fire as "Mrs. Kinder."

Babe Writes Statement

With trembling hands the big bambino today held a slip of paper on which he had written the only statement he would make to the press. He read the statement aloud, crumpled the paper in his burly hand, and locked himself in his bedroom at the Brunswick hotel, his sobs being heard through the closed door. The statement said:

"I have not lived with my wife for three years. In that period I have seen her only a few times.

"I have done everything to comply with her wishes. Her death is a great shock to me. That is all I wish to say."

Whole City Stirred

The mystery surrounding the identity of the fire victim has stirred the whole of Boston and its suburbs, since the first inkling was given that "Mrs. Kinder" may have been the famous ball player's wife.

Tonight with her identification by

EMIL FUCHS TAKES HIS LIFE

Famed Painter - Sculptor Commits Suicide

NEW YORK, Jan. 13 (AP)—Emil Fuchs, internationally known painter and sculptor, committed suicide today by shooting himself in the heart on the balcony of his apartment.

Police said he had cancer for a long time and had several operations.

The body was found by a sister, Reene Fuchs, who became alarmed at not finding him when she went to the apartment to prepare his noonday meal, as had been her custom.

Police said a note addressed to the sister explained that the artist felt himself a burden to himself, his sister and the world and felt that he "might as well end it."

Too Many Cigarettes Put King Zogu Abed

TIRANA, Albania, Jan. 13 (US)—King Zogu is ill. His ailment is said to be due to too many cigarettes. The soldier dictator who recently proclaimed himself king of Albania has been ordered to stop smoking by two Vienna specialists who have been called to Tirana to treat the new monarch. King Zogu is suffering from stomach trouble which defied the best efforts of the Albanian physicians.

Two Observatories Detect Earthquakes

BRUSSELS, Jan. 13. (AP)—A violent earthquake, with its epicenter 5,000 miles distant possibly in northern Japan, was recorded at the Uccle observatory shortly after midnight last night.

CAIRO, Egypt, Jan. 13. (AP)—An earthquake shock of great intensity with its epicenter about 5,600 miles away was recorded at the Helouan observatory beginning at 2:15 a. m. today.

DIRIGIBLE ON CRUISE

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 13. (AP)—The dirigible Los Angeles sailed north along the East Florida coast today after paying a brief visit here this morning. In a message to the commandant of the Seventh Naval district Commander Rosehahl said he expected to turn the ship inland over Orlando, possibly omitting Jacksonville on the return trip to its base in St. Joseph's bay.

OFFICERS' GUNS USED TO HALT LIQUOR TRUCK

Rum Runner Loses Chase When Bullets Enter Truck Tires

HOUSE IS RAIDED

Sheriff's Force Seizes Big Liquor Container And Arrest Pair

After a chase which ended in the shooting out of all the casings on a speeding truck loaded with whisky, members of the sheriff's department Sunday night seized the truck, the driver and his woman companion, and raided the house on the Iowa Park road where buried barrels were waiting to receive the load.

Whisky Discarded

The chase started about four miles out on the Iowa Park road at 9:30 Sunday night. When Charlie Gant and Warren W. Belcher, deputy sheriffs, ordered the truck to stop, its driver put his foot on the gas and his feminine companion started hurling cartons loaded with half gallon jars of whisky to the pavement. Amid a bombardment of breaking bottles and splattering liquor, the officers, driving a Buick sedan, pursued the truck until they were forced to resort to their guns and shoot out the tires. Swerving dangerously, the big truck came to a reluctant halt and its two occupants submitted to arrest. The officers recovered a quantity of the liquor which had been thrown from the machine.

Sheriff W. G. Bralley and Sam Spence, district attorney, joined the raiding party and searched a house off the road, where six half-gallon jars of whisky and a sunken barrel with pipe connections were discovered.

Whisky For House

The barrel was buried with its top nine inches under the ground. A two-inch pipe extended up through the floor. The load of whisky, believed to have come from Oklahoma, was bound for the house, according to information in the hands of Mr. Bralley. The house was headquarters for a combination bootlegger and rum-runner who brought in his own supplies, the sheriff said.

Sam Spence took statements from the two prisoners Sunday night and charges are to be filed in the state court early Monday morning.

Mercury Below Zero in Midwest

CHICAGO, Jan. 13. (UP)—All the Central and West Central states were battling zero temperature tonight. Two cities, Devils Lake, N. D., and Duluth, Minn., reported 22 degrees below zero. Other cold places were: Charles City, Iowa, 18 below; Minneapolis, Minn., 22 below; Escanaba, Mich., 14 below; Green Bay, Wis., 20 below; White River, Ont., Canada, 40 below.

Waste Basket Used As Death Shroud by Girl

Surgeon Fails To Save Grandson As Storm Halts Plane

TEMPLE, Texas, Jan. 13. (AP)—A spectacular effort to save the life of Preston A. Childress Jr., grandson of Dr. A. C. Scott of Temple, by rushing an oxygen inhalation tent here from New York by airplane, proved of no avail when the lad died early today.

The elements defeated Dr Scott, a noted surgeon. Airplanes transporting the life-giving apparatus were forced down by snow storms in Ohio and Missouri, making it necessary to transfer the inhalation tent to a train. Had the apparatus arrived yesterday, as scheduled by air, Dr. Scott believed he could have saved the child.

DALLAS POLICE TAKE SUSPECT

Man Wounded Thrice In Exchange of Shots

DALLAS, Jan. 13 (AP)—Police bullets tonight drove Hugh Pruett, 23, sought for questioning in recent robberies here, from his barricaded house after he had been shot three times and Police Captain Bill Fritz wounded slightly.

Pruett earlier had fired on two officers who attempted to search his residence in East Dallas, and to question him in connection with a recent series of depredations. In this exchange, Captain Fritz was wounded. A call for reinforcements brought six automobiles loaded with officers. They brought machine guns but they were not used.

Pruett would not come out until he had been struck three times.

M. D. Chapman, pharmacy proprietor, identified an overcoat found in the Pruett house as one taken from him when his store was held up about two weeks ago. On the same night Chapman was robbed, four other persons were beaten by a thug in widely seperated parts of town.

Chief of Police Claude Trammell issued an official statement saying "the man" responsible for killing William Mann, 17, high school honor student, wounding Mann's young girl companion and shooting Ralph O. Sissons, taxi driver, several nights later, was "under arrest." He did not amplify this statement.

The wounded man does not fit descriptions of the perpetrator of the Mann and Sissons shootings.

Peace-Navy Tangle Ties Senate Down

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13 (AP)—A blockade in the senate growing out of the treaty-cruiser row threatens the entire legislative program of this congressional session and leaders were preparing with some anxiety today for a showdown.

Certainty that a special session will be called the spring for consideration of farm relief and tariff removes those issues from the dockets and is expected to help clear the tangle.

The first move in breaking the blockade will be taken tomorrow by Chairman Borah of the foreign relations committee when he will ask further debate on the Kellogg treaty to renounce war be limited.

King and Queen Of England Improved

LONDON, Jan. 13. (AP)—King George passed a quiet and uneventful Sunday and made additional improvement. Queen Mary also was reported better tonight, but her indisposition will keep her in her rooms a few days.

The customary Sunday morning services in the chapel of the palace were not held today because of the queen's illness. The queen will keep to her suite at least while the present cold weather continues or until she is thoroughly recovered.

W. C. MATTHEWS CRUSHED WHEN PLANE FALLS

Wichita Falls Man Seriously Hurt When Machine Drops 200 Feet

RECOVERY EXPECTED

Ship Wrecked in Accident On Henrietta Road Late Sunday

W. C. Matthews, 2140 Avenue D, was in a serious condition at the Wichita General hospital Sunday night as a result of numerous fractures, bruises and lacerations and possible internal injuries suffered Sunday afternoon about 3:30 o'clock when the airplane in which he had just taken off from Staley field on the Henrietta road crashed from an altitude of about 200 feet in a field one mile south of the airport.

A spectator at the flying field brought the injured man from the scene of the accident to the hospital, where he was attended by Drs. W. R. McAdams, M. H. Glover and H. D. Prichard. X-ray examinations revealed that the lower jaw and the right thigh had been broken, the latter in two places, while the left knee and right ankle had suffered badly torn ligaments. Serious lacerations were reported on the face and left leg, with bruises all over the body. Mr. Matthews was suffering severely from shock, according to Dr. Glover, and the extent of possible internal injuries could not be determined without further examination, it was said.

The condition of Mr. Matthews was regarded as critical shortly before 1 o'clock Monday morning, according to the statement of hospital attendants.

Plane Seen to Slip

There were few spectators at the flying field at the time Matthews took off, according to airport officials, and the fall was observed only at a distance. The ship rose from the field in an easterly direction, and turned toward the south, still gaining altitude. At it passed over the ridge south of the field, observers noticed the plane "slipping." When Matthews' ship did not appear headed for the airport a moment later, friends hurried to the field over which he had risen, and found the plane badly wrecked and the flyer unconscious.

The plane in which Matthews crashed was an army plane of old production which had been overhauled and which he purchased in Waco only a few days ago in conjunction with H. C. Hostetler of this city, it was said. Arrangements had been made for housing the ship at the hangar of the Wichita Falls Air Transport company at Staley field, according to airport officials.

Student Pilot

Associates of the injured man stated that he was a student pilot, and had credit for about 20 hours in the air prior to Sunday's mishap. That Matthews had side slipped after turning with the wind, with insufficient momentum and altitude, was the opinion expressed by other fliers who were at the field.

Hostetler, joint owner of the plane with Mathews, stated that the plane was so badly wrecked that probably only the motor would be salvaged.

Matthews is connected with the Wichita Falls and Southern railway.

Sunday's accident is the second serious airplane crash in which Wichita Falls flyers have been victims in the space of two weeks. On Sunday afternoon two weeks ago, at about the same hour, Welch W Curtin fell to his death at Graham, along with two passengers, when his motor stalled.

Youth Fatally Hurt In Friendly Scuffle

Cashion Boy Dies in Hospital Here From Concussion of Brain Received in Wrestling Match With Playmate

Wesley Arvil Lancaster, 15, of Cashion, died in a local hospital Saturday night at 11 o'clock following a concussion of the brain received Friday in a friendly wrestling match with one of his playmates at his home in Cashion.

According to information received here, the two boys were playing on the front porch of the Lancaster youth's home while waiting for his father to carry them to school. In the scuffle with the other lad the Lancaster boy fell off of the porch and was fatally injured when he struck his head on a stone column.

Funeral services will be held from the First Church of Christ in Burkburnett Monday afternoon. Burial will be in the Burkburnett cemetery. The body will be forwarded to Burkburnett Monday morning by the Hines mortuary.

The youth is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Lancaster of Cashion; four brothers, Otis, Elvest, J. D. and Billie, and two sisters, Mrs. Lillie V. Hill of California and Miss Fannie Lancaster of Cashion.

Clay Pastor to Face U. S. Charges For Eloping With Neighbor's Wife

Woman Held as Witness When She Returns Here to See Her Children; Family Reunited as Husband Forgives

Charges of violation of the Mann act will be filed before United States Commissioner J. A. Lants Monday morning against a 58-year-old Clay county Holiness preacher who several weeks ago left his wife and 10 children to elope with a neighbor's wife. The arrest of the eloping parson in or near Texarkana, is expected within the next 24 hours.

Morgan Leads Search

The filing of the charges will follow closely the apprehension here of the woman in the case, arrested Sunday afternoon by Constable Frank Morgan, who has been tirelessly on the trail of the runaway couple since their departure early in December. Appealed to by the deserted wife of the preacher and the deserted husband of the woman, Mr. Morgan has concentrated on the task of tracking the pair, his queries and correspondence reaching into three states. His efforts were rewarded Sunday when he stopped the Clay county woman just as she stepped from a bus, returning here alone in quest of her babies, she said.

While she was waiting for the arrival of her husband and children from Byers, the woman told Mr. Morgan of her travels through three states, including Oklahoma and Arkansas. Later, in a signed statement made to Sam Spence, district attorney, she included New Mexico in her account of her journey with the elderly minister. She left him, she said, in Texarkana, hurrying home for a sight of her children.

Family Reunited

The husband, bringing three children and several adult members of the family, drove in from Byers late Sunday afternoon and the constable's office was the scene of a

A. R. Gooch Victim When He Starts Into Room Of Residence

Special to The Record News

NOCONA, Jan. 13.—A. R. Gooch, city marshal, was shot and instantly killed about 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon as he was conducting a search through the home of Carl Goodspeed.

After an inquest before D. M. Painter, justice of the peace, charges of murder were filed against Goodspeed. Before the investigation was completed, Goodspeed voluntarily went to Montague, county seat, and gave himself into the custody of Sheriff Lee Husband. He did not testify at the inquest.

Shot Gun Used

Mr. Gooch, with Jeff M. Wade, Denton county deputy sheriff, entered the Goodspeed home early Sunday afternoon with a search warrant, authorizing a search for intoxicating liquor, according to a statement from Temple Yarborough, county attorney. A few minutes later, Goodspeed himself called members of the city police force. Officers found Gooch dead on the floor in front of the bath room door. A charge from a Winchester pump shot gun had entered the base of his brain from the back.

H. J. Hill, a neighbor, said Goodspeed told him after the shooting that Gooch was shot as he attempted to enter the bath room door. It is understood that Mrs. Goodspeed was at home but did not witness the shooting.

Marshal Six Months

Gooch, who was 48 years old and unmarried, had been city marshal for six months. He had previously served a four-year period as marshal at St. Jo. Before that time he acted as deputy sheriff in Denton county.

Goodspeed surrendered to officers at Montague about 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon. He was accompanied to the sheriff's office by

'Fire Bug' Clues in Burning Of Norris Church Hard to Follow

FORT WORTH, Jan. 13. (AP)—Assuming that a "fire bug" had been responsible for burning the $300,000 First Baptist church of the Rev. J. Frank Norris, militant "fundamentalist" here, authorities today sifted motives for the supposed arson.

The Rev. Norris, acquitted two years ago, on a self defense plea, of the murder of D. E. Chipps, wealthy lumberman, was in Austin when fire destroyed the building Saturday.

"Thank God they saved my study," he said on his returning to Fort Worth to view the ruined outline of the structure his work had built.

Several years ago, another of the pastor's churches burned. He was acquitted of an arson charge in the connection.

Beyond the knowledge that the Rev. Norris, a "crusading" minister, had made many enemies, the investigators had slim clues today. Discovery of blackened gasoline containers, which the church janitor said had not been seen about before, in the wrecked building, furnished first evidence that the blaze had been started by an incendiary.

Dr. Norris took up a collection to buy $2,000 worth of church music at services conducted tonight at the tabernacle, ordinarily used only in the summer.

This morning, by holding Sunday school under crowded conditions, 5,435 persons were accommodated. Many of these were in a four-story building the church owns across the street from the ruins.

Two Discordant Couples Trade Mates and Now All Is Well

"Husbands and Wives Are a Matter of Taste," Observes Dorothy Dix, and Whether Marriage Is a Success or a Failure Depends on Whether or Not They Agree With Each Other.

According to a newspaper dispatch two couples in a rural community have solved the problem of how to be happy though married by swapping partners. The A.'s, it seems, lived together like the traditional Kilkenny cats. The B.'s home life was a perpetual free-for-all fight. In both households every word was a fighting word. Neither husband nor wife could make a move without starting something.

Finally, the two inharmonious couples grew weary of warfare and decided to separate, but this left Mr. A. without a housekeeper and Mrs. A. without a meal ticket. The B.'s were in a similar position, so Mrs. A. moved over to Mr. B.'s with bag and baggage and babies, and Mrs. B. took a job in Mr. A.'s kitchen, and all, even the children, are tickled to death over the new arrangement.

In fact, so successful has it proved that there is to be a wholesale getting of divorces and marriage licenses, and the exchange of husbands is to be made permanent.

This little story is sordid or tragic, shocking or pathetic, as you look at it, but it very vividly illustrated one of the vagaries of matrimony, and that husbands and wives are purely a matter of taste, and whether marriage is a success or a failure depends not on what they are, but on whether they agree with each other.

There are thousands upon thousands of married people who are utterly miserable themselves, and who make each other's lives a hell on earth, who would be happy and contented, and be perfectly good husbands and wives to some other woman and man than the ones to whom they are united. There is nothing the matter with them intrinsically. They are decent, kindly, well-meaning people, but they just can't hit it off with the ones to whom they are married. They are utterly uncongenial, unsympathetic. They never understand each other, and everything each of them does rubs the other the wrong way.

The ability of two people to get along together is just as much a personal idiosyncrasy as whether they can eat certain foods or not. There are those to whom shellfish is poisonous. Others on whom strawberries bring out a rash. Still others who grow dyspeptic on bread and butter. It is the same with husbands and wives. The very qualities that one man may find agreeable in a wife irritate another husband to the point of madness. The very things that one woman loves a man for may get on another woman's nerves until they make her hate him.

We have abundant proof that the happiness of a marriage depends on whether a man and woman are temperamentally suited to each other, rather than on their virtues, in the fact that so many second marriages are happier than the first one was. We have all seen men during their first wife's lifetime surly, grouchy, stingy, ill-conditioned brutes, turn into jovial, good natured, liberal husbands who lavished every luxury on their second wives with an open hand.

We have seen men who were roamers, who never went home until every other place was closed up under the regime of Mrs. No. 1, become as domestic as the house cat under the sway of Mrs. No. 2, and we have wondered whether it was remorse for the way they treated their first wives that caused them to be such model husbands to their second wives.

In reality, the explanation is to be found in the fact that, at last, they have gotten wives who rubbed their fur the right way instead of the wrong way and who knew how to handle them. Possibly the dear, dead ladies out in the cemeteries regarded matrimony as a reformatory institution and felt it their sacred duty to remind their husbands continually of what poor, weak, faulty creatures they were. Or perhaps they nagged their husbands for their own good. Or perhaps they were sensitive creatures who kept their feelings spread all over the place and were always bursting into tears or going round looking like early Christian martyrs because their husbands had trampled upon their tender sensibilities.

The new wives make no claim to sainthood. They are just cheerful fellow sinners who enjoy a good time and get a kick out of all sorts of amusements, so they pal up to their husbands. Or they are not particularly good housekeepers, so they don't have a fit every time a man tramps in mud or disarranges the sofa cushions. Or they know how to jolly a man along and make him feel that he is the biggest, bravest, most w-o-n-d-e-r-f-u-l creature in the world, and that he has found a woman who can appreciate him.

Same way with women. We have all seen peevish, fretful, discontented women who are always girding at matrimony in their first marriage, blossom out in a second marriage into beaming pacifices who are ardent advocates of the holy estate. And it is because the second husband is peaches and cream to them instead of caviar.

The first husband may have been a better man than the second husband, but he was cold and starved the woman for love, while the second husband bestows caresses and tenderness upon her. The first husband may have been fault-finding, whereas the second husband jollies her, and tells her how beautiful she is, and what a marvelous housekeeper. She may have had to wheedle chiffon velvet frocks out of a tightwad first husband, but the second husband lavishes cotton upon her, and she would rather have the poor free gift than the begrudged fine one.

Having the same faults and weaknesses as others makes us wondrous kind to them. To the man who loves society and to put up a good front, it does not seem such a heinous weakness of character for his wife to want to dress well and step out of an evening. The woman who is a golf fan goes happily along with her husband to the links instead of sitting at home and bemoaning her fate as a golf widow. The couple who love good eating never ruin their meals by fighting over the size of the market bills. And so it goes, for congeniality is the only real tie that binds.

All of which I respectfully call to the attention of the unmarried, for while divorce does correct some of the misfits of matrimony, it is a messy and expensive way of paying for bad judgment.

Color Harmony To Be Keynote Of Spring Style

By GEORGE W. HINMAN Jr.

PARIS, Jan. 13 (US)—Color harmony in a multitude of differentiated fabrics will be the keynote of the coming spring.

Red is shading into rose, and rose into pink; the blue of the sea turns into the blue of the sky; daffodil yellow shades off into mustard and butter.

This genius at assembling gradations of the same color into single patterns is something for which the French are noted. Here on the eve of the opening of the great showings at the grand couturiers, the cloths offered give a hint of what the designers will use as a basis for their multiple effects.

It is for this reason that much that is worn now will pass definitely out of the picture after the showings. The combinations of black and mustard, and other such startling contrasts appear to be doomed. The more pronounced reds shading into rose, as now seen on the Riviera, are nearer the idea.

Just for the moment the new models for going south seem to be mostly red or the new shade of deep yellow that has not yet acquired a distinctive name.

Mrs. Willing Spencer of New York, who has just set out for Cannes by motor, took along a cloth coat of the popular geranium color. It was lined with beige and was distinguished by sable collar and cuffs. Under this she wore a new red crepe de chine frock of a lighter shade and an overshirt descending from a blouse of the popular jumper cut, the whole gathered in by a beige kid belt.

Worth predicts that various shades of green will be seen frequently this spring, both for daytime and evening. One Worth creation is a pale green evening frock of wide meshed tulle, with tassels of dark green.

Meanwhile Paris is being deserted, though the Russians and some Americans remain. Recently at the Maisonnette Russe, in the Rue du Monthabor, the Grand Duchess Xenia, sister of the late czar, in mourning for her mother, was seen lunching with her son, Prince Nicholas and his wife, and Prince Dolgourouki.

The princess wore the simplest of blue tailored two piece suits with a fur, while at the next table was a group of Americans that included Mrs. Richard Legalliene and Mrs. Gerald Mygatt, who wore lighter colors.

Genevive Puckett Becomes Bride Of James Dale in Pretty Ceremony

Charming in its simplicity was the marriage of Miss Genevieve Puckett formerly of Denton, and Jame D. Dale, which took place at high noon Saturday at the home of the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Dale, 1817 Huff Street.

The reception suite was attractively decorated with baskets of assorted cut flowers.

The ring ceremony was performed by Rev. Floyd Allan Bash, pastor of the First Christian church. The bridal party entered to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march played by Miss Margaret Dale, sister of the groom.

The bride was dressed in a honey beige chiffon afternoon frock and carried a boquet of creme rose buds and lillies of the valley. She was attended by Miss Louise Louderdale, who was dressed in blue chiffon.

Mr. Dale was accompanied by Leslie Carter. Immediately following the ceremony a turkey dinner was served to members of th bridal party and guests. The young couple left for a wedding trip to New Orleans. They will be at home in the city upon their return.

Mrs. Dale is the daughter of Mrs. Lula Puckett of Denton. Mr. Dale is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Dale and is connected with the Dale Oil and Refining company.

Piles Now Cured Without Surgery

The old theory that surgery was the only method by which hemorrhoids (piles) could be successfully cured has been wholly disproved. This treacherous affliction which slowly but surely undermines the health of its victims, if taken in time, can be successfully treated without recourse to surgical aid. All this is fully explained in a new book, fully illustrated and copyrighted, just published by the noted rectal specialist, Dr. McCleary, C-841 Elms Blvd., Excelsior Springs, Mo. It describes in detail the mild McCleary treatments by which more than 15,000 persons living in all parts of the United States have been cured. If you or any of your relatives or friends suffer from piles or rectal trouble in any form, write today for this free book and their list of cured patients in your community. They will be sent in plain wrapper, postpaid.—Adv.

GOOD PERFORMANCE WITH ECONOMY

THE new Ford is more than a new automobile. It is the expression of an ideal—an ideal that looks to bringing the benefits of modern transportation to all the people.

Because of this purpose, the price is low and great care has been taken to insure economy of operation and up-keep. Few features are of greater importance to millions of motorists.

Conservative figures show that the new Ford averages 20 miles per gallon of gasoline, with many Ford owners reporting greater mileage on long trips. Oil consumption is also low per hundred miles. There is a considerable saving on tires due to the balance of the car, ease of steering and perfected wheel design.

All tires used on new Ford cars and recommended for replacement are specially built by leading tire manufacturers according to specifications laid down by the Ford Motor Company. Mechanical up-keep is low because of simplicity of design and the enduring quality that has been built into every part.

FEATURES OF THE NEW FORD CAR

Beautiful low lines

Choice of colors

Quick acceleration

Smoothness at all speeds

55 to 65 miles an hour

Silent, mechanical internal-expanding six-brake system, with all braking surfaces fully enclosed

Four Houdaille shock absorbers

Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield

Economy of operation and up-keep

Reliability and long life

Zerk-Alemite chassis lubrication

Universal Credit Company Plan of Time Payments

Large corporations have proved Ford economy

Definite evidence of the economy of the new Ford is shown in the repeated and growing purchases by Federal and city governments, by police departments, and by large industrial companies which keep day-by-day cost records.

The new Ford has been chosen only after exhaustive tests covering every feature of automobile value and performance—from the time of purchase to the final trade-in. Here the Ford policy of not making yearly changes serves to protect and maintain the investment of every Ford owner. All improvements in the new Ford are made so that present owners may take advantage of them quickly and at low cost.

The economy of good service at a fair price

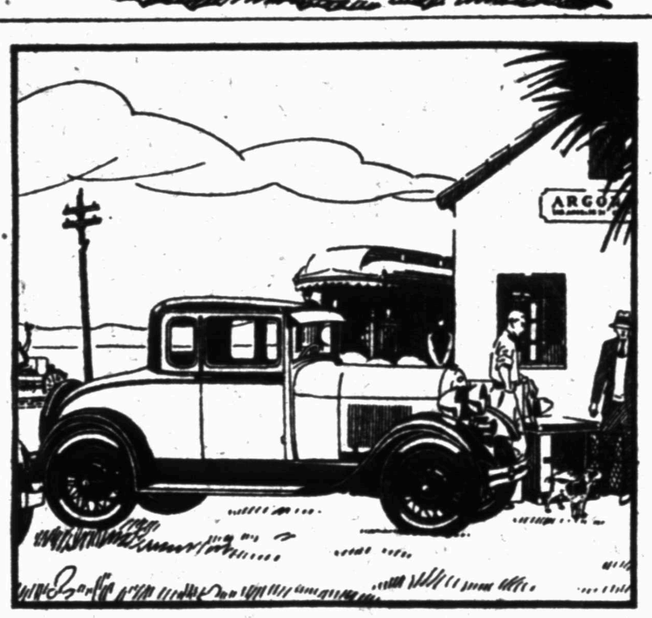

The availability of Ford dealers throughout the world and close factory supervision of all service are additional reasons for the economy of the new Ford.

It has always been our belief that a sale does not complete the transaction between us and the buyer but establishes a new obligation on us to see that his car gives him service. We are as much interested in his economical operation of the car as he is in our economical manufacture of it,

For that reason we have installed a system of controlled service to take care of all Ford car needs in an economical and improved manner. We wish all Ford owners to know what they are entitled to in this respect so that they may readily avail themselves of this service.

Ford service more important than sales

This service begins with proper instruction when you buy the car and includes a free inspection at 500, 1000 and 1500 miles. It continues as long as you are a Ford owner.

The new Ford Tudor Sedan. A splendid family car because of its economy, comfort, safety, reliability, speed, power, acceleration and ease of operation and control. Finished in a choice of beautiful two-tone color harmonies. Richly upholstered. All appointments fully nickeled.

The new Ford Coupe is a particularly good example of beauty and utility. Built to serve you faithfully and well for many thousands of miles. Equipped with Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield and four Houdaille hydraulic shock absorbers.

No matter where you live or where you go, you will never be very far from a Ford dealer who has been specially trained and equipped to give you courteous, intelligent, economical service. The cost of new parts is low because of the established Ford policy of doing business at a small margin of profit.

The purpose of Ford service is identical with that for which the car itself was built—to help you get many thousands of miles of pleasant, enjoyable motoring at a minimum of trouble and expense. "Good performance with economy" is the reason for the unusual value that is brought to you in the new Ford.

Modern Shakespeares

A NEW YORK minister complains that America is sadly deficient in men of genius.

We are very prosperous, he admits, but we have no one to lead us in the realms of art.

"Show me," he says, "an American Shakespeare, a Caruso or a Michael Angelo. America's art has become the stage; her music, jazz; her literature, the Sunday supplement."

This is, perhaps, the most common criticism made of our modern civilization. Any man who is in any way connected with any of the arts or learned professions feels qualified to occupy a lofty seat and look down, patronizingly, on our leaders in industry and commerce. The age-old snobbery of Europe, which holds that there is something essentially ignoble in being "in trade," is still with us.

Men have been a long time in the process of rising from darkness to light, and they have had various kinds of leaders to help them. They have had great poets and artists, to convince them of their own nobility and inspire them to higher intellectual levels; and they have also had more material-minded men, to take the material obstacles out of their way and give them the leisure and the means to respond to the spiritual leaders. And the mere fact that America produces more of the second kind of leaders than of the first is no indictment of American culture.

Michael Angelo, and the other great ones of the Italian renaissance, helped move the world into a new and better civilization. So did Shakespeare had his confrerers of Elizabethian England. That is what all great men, of whatever calling, always do; and it is precisely what our own great men are doing today.

We have quite a galaxy of great names in this year of 1929. We have Ford, Edison, Milliken, Wright, Rockefeller and a host of others—all of them touched with the indubitable mark of genius. They tower above the rest of us precisely as Michael Angelo towered above the ignorant Italian masses of his day. They have had the vision to see a new kind of world lying ahead of us; a marvelous new world, in which matter can become the servant of mind, and in which every soul can be freed of the shackles of poverty and drudgery that have been man's lot since the dawn of time.

They are working to bring that world into existence. It is as fine a work as men have ever undertaken. It is bringing into our modern age a strong, heady optimism—a confidence in man's ability to solve all of his problems and raise himself to the full height that his God-given powers make possible.

It is foolish to complain because we have no great poets, painters and musicians. We have another kind of work to do—work that is equally important, and, if understood properly, equally spiritual. We have great men just as the bygone ages had. And in the future, when our present-day leaders have prepared the way, it is safe to predict that we shall have the singers and the artists as well.

Obeying the Constitution

YOU MIGHT keep a careful eye on congress during the next few days to see just what it does with the Fenn reappointment measure.

During the past presidential campaign we had a great deal of talk about the necessity of obeying our constitution. The Fenn bill provides an excellent test to see whether the people who praised the constitution so loudy are now willing to live up to its provisions. The constitution requires reapportionment; a congressman who votes against the Fenn bill has little license to call other parts of the constitution sacrosanct.

There is no real, valid argument against the Fenn bill. Its ultimate fate will be a good measure of the integrity and conscientiousness of congress.

A Strange Kind of Fame

STRANGE are the kinds of achievements by which some men's names are remembered.

Harry S. Lehr recently died in Baltimore, leaving a kind of fame as peculiar as a man might gain. In the gay nineties Lehr was called the "P. T. Barnum of Society." He indulged in many odd pranks for the delectation of the 400 at New York and Newport. Once he invited friends to a formal dinner for a monkey. At another time he feted a white mule in similar fashion. Once he waded in a lawn fountain, clad in evening dress. And so on, to the great amusement of an earlier generation.

Given half a dozen decades out of all eternity to do something notable and worthy, men often get off on curious tacks. Surely, no man ever left a stranger claim to fame than Harry S. Lehr.

TREND OF FARM PRODUCTION

Bryan county has learned not to depend on cotton. Harper county is building a milk condensery. Dairying helps make Kay county, rich oil county, more prosperous. Poultry raising is being pushed in Oklahoma and Cleveland counties. Jackson, pride of Southwestern Oklahoma, with its immense cotton production, would have prosperity guaranteed every year if every farm was a dairy and poultry ranch. It's somewhat of a gamble to raise cotton and wheat, but the cow and the hen will stay by you through thick and thin.

The Day Book of a New Yorker

Broadway Chatter by Grant Dixon

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—Even if the thousands who rush through the canyons of lower Manhattan every day stopped to think of the historical significance of those famous streets, probably few would bother to wonder what those byways looked liked in the early days. To think that pigs once wallowed in the gutters where one now treads a cleanly swept pavement seems fantastic and one is tempted to believe that perhaps one pig might have done so at one time, but that it must have been an isolated case.

The fact is that there were no less than 20,000 pigs roaming the streets of New York only about 100 years ago, if we were to believe the figures of some of the city fathers who were interested in the problem at that time. Some of the indignant reformers were becoming so finicky, along about 1830 that they even objected to the large pig sty that stood way uptown at the northwest corner of Broadway and Canal streets.

Those were the days when the citizens disposed of their garbage and ashes by dumping them in the middle of the street. The method was sanctioned by law, and the city fathers nonchalantly directed that during the months of April to December the refuse should be swept to the middle of the street at least twice a week, and there it fattened the stray pigs until the spirits moved the municipal employes to cart it away.

In the fashionable "diamond-back" section of the city, according to Henry Wysham Lanier's account of old New York—a section "corresponding to our Fifth avenue from Sixtieth street north—a hog, in front of the crossing flags, rubs his itching back against the iron standard of a street oil-lamp, while a sow looks contemplatively on. And a third piglet, with curled tail twitching, trots across the street before the porter's barrow!"

This fashionable neighborhood faced Ten-Acre Park, where the City hall and old postoffice now stand. Number 219 Broadway, at the corner of Vesey street, was the residence of Walter Rutherford, an English gentleman who preferred America as a place to live. Then on up Broadway facing the park and "ending in an avenue of beautiful trees," were the homes of Rufus King, Richard Harrison and Abijah Hammond, the former home of Vice President Aaron Burr ("who has vanished into the unsettled Southwest," Mr. Lanier discovered in the records). Then there was the residence of John Jacob Astor, already the city's richest man. He had just taken the place over from Major Edward Livingston. All these homes had been "recently constructed on the formerly vacant 'fields'."

When Charles Dickens visited New York and crossed the "wide and bustling street called Broadway," he found it necessary to look out for the pigs, which trotted clumsily behind the carriages and acted as the city scavengers.

"These pigs have on several occasions been the cause of remarkable scenes, jumping about here and there and bowling over richly dressed ladies," wrote the Baron Axell Klinckowstrom of Sweden in his "Letters," after he had visited New York in 1819. The Baron thought the pigs were a "menace to health," and he pointed out that in addition to the hogs, sows roamed some sections of the town, while milk was delivered from open cans hung over the shoulders of the carriers—usually women.

Those who still say "Pittsburgh—the Smoky City," haven't been reading the papers the last year or so. They haven't noted that New York deposits more soot upon its roofs than Pittsburgh since soft coal came in vogue here.

The laundries know something about it.

"Some thrifty housewives who buy their laundry service by the pound and who weigh their wash when the route man gets it and when he returns a neatly packed box," said the manager of one of the largest New York laundries, "often wonder at the shrinkage in weight. They can hardly believe that the difference largely represents the dirt that has been washed out."

STOCK-A-DAY

AMERICAN MANUFACTURING COMPANY
5-Year Record

The American Manufacturing company makes manila and sisal rope, jute and hemp twines, oakum, bagging for baling cotton and cotton piece goods. Plants are located at Brooklyn and Victory Mills, N. Y., St. Louis, Philadelphia, Charleston and Calcutta. The concern also owns ranch lands in Texas and Mexico.

The company had a sharp reversal in 1927. Sales totaled only $14,500,000 in that year, as compared with $30,000,000 in 1926. The charge offs were lighter, so were dividends and so were new additions. It is understood that earnings in the latter part of 1928 were better than for 1927 or for the first part of 1928.

There is no funded debt. Capital stock outstanding includes $4,000,000 in 5 per cent cumulative preferred of $100 par and $8,600,000 in common of $100 par. The 5 per cent rate has been paid on the preferred since 1914. On the common payments have been at varying rates running as high as 36 per cent. The rate during 1928, on the common was 4 per cent annually and officials say they hope it will not be necessary to curtail this.

As of Jan. 1, 1928, total current assets were $11,836,256 current liabilities $6,221,973, net working capital $5,614,283 and book value of the common $172.80 a share.

The VICARION

The Astounding Story of an Invention Greater Than the Movies

Copyright by Gardner Hunting

By Gardner Hunting

Serialized by Ledger Syndicate

In the year 1935 Radley Brainard has perfected his invention, the Vicarion, so called because it permits people to live vicariously by showing them completely events out of the past, thus far outdistancing the efforts of Complete Illusions, Inc., the company which then controls all the improvements of the motion picture.

Radley first demonstrates his device to his sweetheart, Phyllis Norman; her father mother and brother, John; John's sweetheart, Carol Gould, and Brainard's Aunt Relief. While he is showing them a dinner given for a movie actress who had since died, a man suffering from amnesia staggers in the studio, and though he is unable to tell who he is, he calls Phyllis by name. Brainard dubs him Van Winkle.

Brainard shows a scene of Mr. Norman's home being robbed and then the police, who have been looking in on a similar projection, arrive with the criminal, Homer, but he escapes. Besides the large machine intended for public showing, Brainard invents a small "receiving set." While looking into one of them Carol faints.

Six weeks after the first private showing the Vicarion has been installed in all the theaters of Brainard's home city. Ferdinand Mortimer and "Jerry" Ballard, heads of Complete Illusions, call on Brainard.

"What's to prevent our taking his secret away from him? The man has to have confidants."

"They tell me he makes a confidant of nobody. He doesn't have to. He has only to tell his employes to follow certain formulae, and they don't even know what results they are getting, as they follow them. I've already had two or three of them here, applying the sweating process. You can buy what men know—but you can't buy what they don't know! Inventors may be able to match his appliances, chemists analyze his compounds, somebody may be able to copy some of his methods. But he's got his essentials surrounded with camouflage, and when it comes to knowing what it is all about, or how it fits together, nobody will discover that except by sheer luck. And speciments of that kind of luck are as few and far between as meteorites!"

The Mortimer of yesterday's reality, wraith of today's escaping gases, rose from his chair, his sheet-metal clothes falling into their original lines as if they had never been bent.

"In," he said softly, his lips privately leaning toward his partner's private ear, "if young Mr. Brainard carries his secrets in his head—wouldn't it be unfortunate if anything should—happen to young Mr Brainard.

Defeat

The Mortimer who now occupied one of Brainard's white chairs in the Brainard studio—not the Mortimer back there among the gases of his natural environment—was so still that Brainard flung his switch quickly, flooded the white room with light and looked at him. The two Czars of Complete Illusions sat gaping like a pair of tragedy masks! They breathed—with some audible difficulty, indeed—but they breathed. Brainard smiled upon them and closed the closet where he kept his little steel bombs for explosion here.

"Perhaps you noticed, gentlemen," he said, crossing toward them and taking out a cigarette, "that the clock in your office pointed to yesterday afternoon at 3:15!"

Mortimer tried to speak. He moved as if to sit up straight once more. Then he sagged as if he expected never to sit erect again. Ballard licked his lips, and licked his lips—and licked his lips! The frost seemed to have struck in from his complexion to his heart!

"Have you had enough, Ballard?" asked Brainard, "or shall I put on a rehearsal of your forehanded conversation about dusk last night with a character known around your studios as Shadow November?"

Ballard stopped licking his lips and the frost about his eyes visibly thawed and stood in moisture there. Otherwise he was motionless.

"I might just remark, Mortimer," Brainard continued, "that I have arranged so that, if I should die suddenly, what you call my secrets will be broadcast like—well, say like the ashes from an urn! So also will any interesting circumstances connected with my demise. Of course, as I said, I fully expect to die in my bed."

Ballard moved. He unclasped his hands as if they had had been locked for years. He got slowly to his feet.

"What do you expect, Brainard," he inquired huskily, "of men who see ruin written for them on the wall? Do you believe in the right of self-defense?"

"What's become of the men who preceded you in the well-known show business, Ballard?" countered Brainard. "All I expect of you if that will follow the procession! If you want to put a price on Complete Illusion studios, why—I'm going to need space. If you don't, it—doesn't matter."

Mortimer struggled to his feet. "But—but," he was gasping. "Mr. Brainard, I only meant that if anything should happen to you—"

"Nothing is going to happen to me, Mortimer, on which you will have an influence. Because you can readily see that the world is going to be a crowded little place for the man who injures or opposes me!"

He tasted the words as they passed his tongue. They were a bit more theatric than he had intended—but half the thrill in any experience came from dramatizing it.

He had a sudden half amused vision of himself in diadem, robe and scepter—and what was the use of a scepter if one did not brandish it! And he was only half amused. He had never been much given to harshness toward any one—but there was a pleasant tang about ruthlessness. He was privileged to taste that also if he liked.

"Look here, you two," he said suddenly, with a delightful sense of flinging off conventional garments of restraint, "you've headed a great monopoly—now, I head a greater one. I am monopoly! You've played with the world's emotions—I'll play with its nerves and its hearts. You've dealt in clowns and buffoons—I'll deal in the pranks of kings! You've offered 'em the fake fisticuffs of pugilists—I'll give 'em the gladiator's home-thrust! You've made 'em cry with hokum—I'll give them—can you understand?—I'll give them back their dead!"

The three other men in the white room stood like images in stone. To Brainard for an instant came back, as with the afterbreath of a swift gesture, the thrill of awe, almost of terror, that he had known when he had first looked through the door he had opened into the back halls of Time. Then laughter welled up in him again.

"That's all, I think," he ended. "You'll excuse me—I'm much occupied." And he walked out of the white room and left them there.

As he entered his private office suite his Diana greeted him as if he had waited at the door.

"A crowd of newspapermen are here—they seem to be from ever so many cities," she told him.

She had a sheaf of cards in her hand. She held them up, turning to shuffle them before his eyes, her shoulder against him—but as if she were utterly unconscious of the contact. He glanced across at staid and gray Miss Ashcroft at the desk by the window; he had had the forethought to provide a safeguard to his inexperience. He was in a mood now to wonder why. As Diana raised her eyes at his silence he looked straight into them; and she had the grace to blush, charmingly, and drop her gaze.

"You may as well tell our newspaper friends to come in, Miss Arden," he told her. "We can't hold them off forever, I suppose—and they may as well know the worst."

He went into his own office and closed the door. He shivered slightly—he was not sure whether the cause was Mortimer's ghastly begging, or Miss Arden's slim shoulder Then he lighted a cigarette.

He had kept the newspapers carefully at arm's length, denying himself to reporters, letting Van Winkle talk for him. Van Winkle was singularly discreet in what he said; he had a story of his own he preferred not to discuss. Now, however, since the great story was out Brainard must see these men. He fancied he could rid himself of them quickly.

They came in a troop—more of them than he had expected, certainly, long and short, narrow and broad, gray and brown, glib and terse. They crowded in about him in the small room where he sat, and a spokesman named Lindlay introduced himself and them. They wanted interviews and photographs and statements from Brainard for their respective periodicals, and inside experience of Brainard's doing for themselves.

They were the most disturbed group of news-gatherers Brainard had ever seen. Knowing their breed for the most utterly blase brand of human being extant, the object of their attentions was duly flattered. But the chief reaction he got out of the thing was a feeling of maturity and sophistication as compared with these panting young men—all young, whatever their ages, from his new standpoint.

But he refused to talk—then. He waited till they had fired their questions at him, then he got up from his chair.

The Press

"I have just one answer to all questions from any source, boys," he told them. Newspapermen were always boys to a man on a pinnacle, he reflected; it was all part of the joke! "You've all been in the theater down below, I suppose. I haven't much to add to what they will tell you if you are as quick of wit as you are reputed to be. Nevertheless—"

He walked across to his door and called Miss Arden.

"Show these gentlemen down into the multiple-unit room, on the tenth floor," he instructed her, as she turned up to him a face of limpid guilelessness.

They flocked after her, out and down the stairs—seventeen of them by count as they filed past Brainard at the door. He followed them. Two tried to buttonhole him—but they flinched before his look. He realized with a new sensation that growing grasp on his position was endowing him with a quality he had not foreseen. They were afraid of him—afraid of his very glance! The idea nearly cost him his grave dignity. A Caesar's glance, eh? He, Radley Brainard, suddenly possessed of the eye of majesty—the all-conquering gaze of sovereignty! But why not? He had known a boy pitcher with a new curve to acquire such a glance!

The room into which they went was lined with white fabric, like all his exhibition rooms. He had told no one that this was a bit of staging—part of a somewhat elaborately protective system, to which lenses and curtains and varying lights also belonged, for cluttering the road to his secrets was effective, but useless, paraphernalia and properties, over which intruding feet might stumble.

Here were two long rows of curtained booths in which men and women who chose to witness selections of their own by private arrangement were being experimentally accommodated.

Miss Arden left them, with a luminous backward glance at Brainard. He closed the door behind her; she did not look like one who would be apt to run away from him. He turned to his guests.

The room was filled with a soft light in which figures were easily distinguished. Brainard swung the curtain aside from a booth at hand.

"Here," he said, "sits a young man so intent on what he is seeing and hearing that we shall probably not disturb him."

A boy, perhaps 16, lay in a swinging swivel chair, not unlike that luxurious trap of barbers, a design never excelled for comfort during the enjoyment of sensations—while you wait.

His face and head was enveloped in a hood, from which extended a sack-like projection to the wall, opening horn-wise to its fastenings. He looked like a creature with its head enveloped in the small end of a gigantic white morning glory! Brainard put a hand on the boyish arm; it was rigid.

"No," he said, "we shall not disturb him. Let's see what he is looking at. If you will turn your attention to the stage at the end of the room over there I will turn what I may call the exhaust of this scene up there for you."

He snapped a key on the frame of the booth door.

"Ah, yes," he said, "the perennial Ty Cobb!"

A cloud of dust, a leaping man with a mitted hand upstretched for a high-thrown ball, a rushing form plunging into a superb slide, and the Peerless One of matchless baseball fame sat up on some home plate of yesteryear and grinned—while the roar of a joyous crowd, barely glimpsed through the murk turned the quiet of the great room into bedlam!

"Enough of that," said Brainard, snapping his key.

A sound burst from the lips of the man nearest to him, involuntary, inarticulate as an ejaculation forced from him by a blow.

"Oh, yes," said Brainard, as if he had been asked a question, "the sound creates vibrations we get out here. If we keep the scene on you'd probably smell the peanuts and the cigars and the dust. I'm not so good at explaining that—I sometimes think its a fraud of our own senses, result of autosuggestion. However, the transmitted scent is one of the features of the Vicarion which everyone seems to get."

No one else spoke. He smiled and turned to the next booth.

"Here is an old gentleman," he said, looking inside, "who is probably listening to an oration of Demosthenes—or watching them bury a Pharoah! Look!"

He threw over a switch. In the stage space at the end of the room there was suddenly the glint of sparkling water amid embowering green. A chatter of laughter and shouting arose, and a dozen white-skinned, naked boys plunged at once into the frothing backwater of an old-time mill-race! As a rainbow struck across the spray they came to the surface, shrieking with boast, and challenge, and accusation, and indiscriminate insult, in joyous, meaningless babel of youth and frolic and freedom and fun! And a tricky breeze, which fluttered a white shirt on the bank, brought out to the watching men the warm fragrance of sweet clover and June hay!

Bygone Years

Brainard turned his key, and the breathless group of reporters dropped back to the floor of the multiple-unit room.

"Man, man!" gasped Lindlay, "The old boy is back in Connecticut, himself at 14!"

"Or watching his own boys," returned Brainard, "grown up now, maybe and gone away."

No one moved. They seemed hardly to breathe, these blase scions of disillusion.

Brainard swung the curtain of a third booth, and dropped it again.

"Nice old lady," he told them, "with tears running down the side of her neck. Shall we take a look at what she sees?"

"Sob-stuff!" somebody suggested. "Prob'ly the little old worn shoe—what?"

It was that sort of lodide of cynicism with which young men often paint their nerve-ends to hide the too obvious fact that they come to the surface. Brainard turned his switch.

An old woman, with scant hair, and steel-bowed glasses askew, rocked slowly out of mists into a chair and an old-fashioned room of worsted mottoes, a square piano and a brussels hassock. Patiently she rocked, and rubbed old-fashioned cosmoline into old-fashioned cracks from suds and salt rheum in her fingers, while her cracked old voice slurred from note to note of a gospel hymn that people sang to melodeons in the days of convalescence from the Civil War. Perhaps that faintly creacking rocker, that twittering canary in his gilt cage, that old voice with its interpolated grace notes had made their homely sounds somewhere in the seventies or the eighties of the last century! As they looked, the old lady dropped her sore hands into her aproned lap and laid her head back against the tidy on her chair; in a moment she was dropping into the nap that had perhaps freshened her courage to go on living, fifty years ago!

The scene faded and went out—it had reached its rhythmic end. There was a sound in the booth at the side of the watching group, and the men stepped back as a gray, matronly woman, her hair somewhat disarrayed, her face wet, her hands on the doorposts assisting uncertain feet, came out. She looked and did not see them. She looked in Radley Brainard's face and seemed not to know that he was there. She walked out of the room like one feeling her way in a fog.

"Guess Ma's been spendin' the afternoon with Gran'ma," remarked Lindlay.

But Brainard did not reply. The woman who had been in the booth was Phyllis Norman's mother!

They followed him back to his private office. "I s'pose you can show us what went on in Wall street yesterday," said Lindaly.

"It's in your papers, isn't it?" asked Brainard. Under his breath he was damning them now, these men of the press, traditionally licensed to quiz. Presently he would doubtless be oftdamning them aloud—he might allow himself also that luxury.

"I don't mean what happened on 'change," Lindlay answered. "I mean in operators' private offices."

Brainard was wondering if the woman in the room downstairs could possibly have been so absorbed in her emotions that she had really not recognized him. Or had she known that he was showing a group of visitors a row of exhibits? He looked up at Lindlay, and hated him.

"I can also tell you where you had your last drink, how much there is in your pay envelope, what your boss said about you yesterday, and the color of your underwear!"

Lindlay was a loose figure of a man. But he straightened. "Well," he replied slowly, "where did you have your last drink?"

But some one else broke in. "But Mr. Brainard, how can you provide records fast enough for the consumption that must already be under way? I don't see——"

"I've been making them for two years. I have machines downstairs that are doing nothing but duplicating them automatically."

"But people don't all want the same thing. They'll want——"

"I know what they want."

"But," cried another, "It's all right, this giving a boy his hero and an old man his youth! But to give business men each other's secrets! Don't you see you're to—raise hell!"

"Yes," Brainard smiled grimly. Grimness seemed to be the proper note—and it covered any weak signals of triumph his yet unschooled face might fly.

"But, damn it, man, you'll kill business! You'll upset society!"

I'll be business—and society, too—if necessary."

A One-Man Game

Back in the group somebody snickered. But the man Lindlay had recovered his professional poise. "Do you think running a world is a one-man game?" he demanded.

"I can get all the help I need," said Brainard. "I told you I could look into your pay envelope."

"If I thought you weren't a fraud," returned Lindlay, "I'd think I could darn' well serve the world by spilling your brains here on the rug!"

Who We Age

Ponce del Leon was not the first man to serach for the Fountain of Youth, nor was he the last. Only a short time ago the New York Academy of Medicine, with hundreds of doctors from all parts of the United States, conferred on the medical problems of old age. Many essays were read, explaining in detail the ailments peculiar to age, but the conference brought out the fact that very little is known of how to prevent old age or greatly increase the span of life.

It is a well known fact that a premature aging may be brought on by the continual irritation of toxins or poisons from causes such as syphilis, rheumatism, lead poisoning, intestinal putrefaction overwork, lack of sleep and excesses of all kinds.

The symptoms of old age seem to be caused by anatomical changes and by lack of vitalizing internal secretions. A sluggish circulation always precedes the other symptoms of old age, and, for this reason, men who are physically active and exercise regularly appear much younger than others. The example, of Stanford Bennett, who at 50, appeared an old man and who, at 72, was an accomplished athlete, is frequently used to show the value of a healthful regime in prolonging youth.

There is much truth in the expression that a man is as old as his arteries because when the arteries become infiltered with calcium, or smaller in caliber, they do not permit a sufficient amount of blood to flow through to keep the tissues of the body properly nourished.

We are all familiar with the stooping, wisened, shortened figure of an aged person, and yet more important than the external appearance are the microscopic changes of the tissues. Between the cells, the fibrous material which holds the body together becomes more abundant so that it may actually crowd out the living cells or cut off their supply of nourishment. This fibrous material very closely resembles scar tissue and is the result of a long continued mild irritation.

If it were possible to keep the blood circulating freely enough to remove the toxins as soon as they are formed, it is possible that this fibrous overgrowth could be avoided.

Another microscopic change that is very noticeable is the accumulation of inert mineral substances, principally calcium. This accumulates most abundantly in the fibrous cartilages of the body, making them turn into a kind of bone. We speak of an aged man as being ossified because the vertebrae in his backbone may actually be joined together by this calcium deposit. So the second important thing to overcome in conquering age is to be able to prevent these mineral substances from depositing. The third change most noticeable in old people is due to a lack of the influence of the important secretions of the ductless glands, principally those of the gonads, adrenals, pituitary and parathyroid. We all know that age produces a loss of sexual characteristics, and many experimental methods have been employed in an effort to overcome this condition, such as the injection of glandular extracts, the transplanting of the glands from animals into humans, the tying of the ducts leading from the glands, and the stimulation of the glands by ray or medicines, but so far none of these methods have proved permanently satisfactory, the good results, at best, lasting only two or three years with apparently bad effects at the end of that time.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Germs and Goitre

Question—T. T. M. writes: "I am a boy of 16. Was told I have a goitre. But my neck is not large at all—you cannot see a goitre as so many people have them. I am afraid that it may later become larger. Could you tell me how I could kill the germ before it takes effect?"

Answer—There is no evidence that germs have any effect on producing goitre. The exophthalmic goitre does not show much except to make the eyes protrude. You may suffer from hyperthyroidism, the diagnosis of which must be accomplished mostly by studying symptoms as the gland does not appear to change in shape in most cases. All forms of goitre are caused from the effect of bodily toxins, and the cure depends upon the elimination of these poisons.

Cracking Jaw

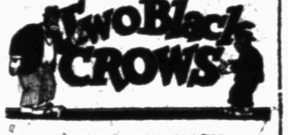

Question—E. T. writes: "I wonder if you could tell me what is wrong with my jaw. For a while the joint on the right side was stiff and had a tendency to click if I opened my mouth wide; sometimes it would crack. Now, everytime I chew there is a gritting sound as if the bones were rubbing."

Answer—The trouble in your jaw may be caused from arthritis, or it may come from an injury which is sometimes experienced when dental work is being done.

Sweating Head

Question—Mrs. Q. K. asks: "Could you tell me what makes my little girl's head so hot that her hair gets very wet. She is four years old in the best of health. Is it some kind of food that makes her blood high?"

Answer—Many children who are overweight will have the head sweat when they are playing hard. If this is not the cause I would advise you to have your little girl examined by a competent diagnostician, and not depend upon any guess which I can make through this column.

MORAN AND MACK

MORAN—Is yo' going' south this winter, Big Boy?

MACK—I might go to Atlanta.

MORAN—That ain't no winter resort.

MACK—I might go there jest th' same.

MORAN—Who tol' yo'? Yo' doctor?

MACK—No. A judge.

MORAN—Well, slap my mouth, what yo' been doin'?

MACK—Nothin'.

MORAN—That ain't NO CRIME.

MACK—It mightn't be a crime. But they IS GOT CELLS for it.

MORAN—What yo' been trangressin' now?

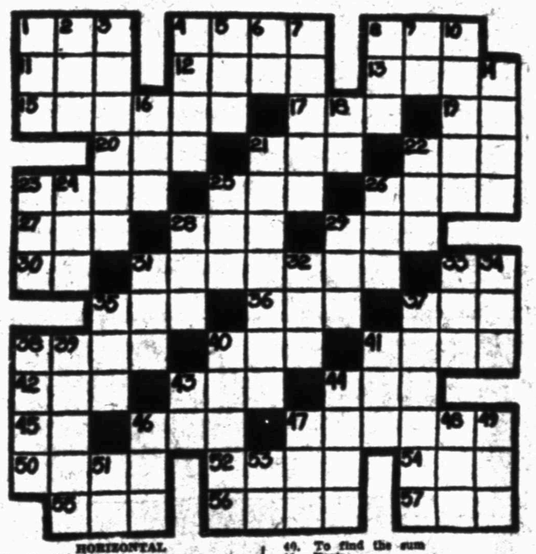

MACK—Well, I was walkin' past a poleeceman las' night when a rooster crowed. An' I was arrested.

MORAN—It ain't yo' fault because a rooster crowed.

MACK—Yes, it WAS. I shouldo CHOKED him when I first stole him.

(By The Associated Press)

Before the Southwest conference basket ball derby began it appeared that the Arkansas university quintet would romp to its fourth consecutive title.

Now that the other seven outfits have been seen it is doubtful that the champs will encounter many defeats in playing out their schedule.

Some were hopeful that Texas university, led by Holly Brock, would give the Porkers an argument, but since the Orange quintet staggered through with a 22 to 19 win over Baylor Saturday night the outlook from that quarter is not promising.

Rees Does a "Roy Riegels"

To Nona Rees, Texas forward, went the "honor" of scoring the first basket for an opposing team. He slapped one in for Baylor at a very critical point in their contest.

Southern Methodist's entry snapped out of it after two defeats by Arkansas and trimmed Texas Christian university Saturday night at Fort Worth, 34 to 25. The loss plunged the Frogs into the cellar as they likewise were victimized by the rampaging Arkansas team on its recent trip into Texas.

The two giant Arkansas loopers, Pickel and Schoonover, have piled up an impressive lead among the individual scorers, with 55 and 50 points, respectively. Brown of Southern Methodist university is in third place with 28 points, while Roberson and Eury of Texas Christian university have 25 points apiece. Johnson of Southern Methodist with 14 and Smith of Baylor with 12 are other leading scorers.

Baylor at Fayetteville

Baylor is the first school to get the assignment of bearding the Arkansas machine on its home floor. The bears will play the Razorbacks Friday and Saturday at Fayetteville, and, in all probability, be chastised severely.

Two conference tilts are scheduled Tuesday night, with Southern Methodist and the Texas Christian Horned Frogs clashing in Dallas and the Aggies playing Rice at Houston, both return engagements.

Saturday night the Mustangs will tackle the Texas university five at Austin, while T. C. U. is engaging the Aggies at College Station.

Stars Play In Florida Tennis

Borotra and Hennessey To Compete in South

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., Jan. 13 (UP)—Jock McLean, son of E. B. McLean, publisher of the Washington Post, arrived here today and plans to compete in all southern winter tennis tournaments.

He was accompanied by his brother Ned, and by Harry Breeden, guardian, and Paul Heston, tennis pro. Jock is the protegee of Heston and is said to be one of the most promising young racquet wielders in the country.

John Hennessey, national and international net man, will arrive Jan. 22 and will accompany Jock in quest of tournament honors.

Jean Borotra, the bounding Basque, has announced his intention of entering the Florida men's championship which begins here March 4, and expects to bring another outstanding French star with him.

Vernon Basketeers Beat Chillicothe by 48-23

Special to The Record News

VERNON, Texas, Jan. 13 — The Vernon high school basket ball team defeated the Chillicothe high school quintet, 48 to 23, in what was declared the fastest ever played on the Vernon court.

Vernon fans were impressed with the victory, because reserve material played the leading role in Vernon's defense, the first-string guards being out of the game, ill with influenza.

Thompson scored 19 points for Vernon to win high point honors. Moseley, center, was Chillicothe's feature player.

Harry McCurdy Released To Toledo by White Sox

CHICAGO, Jan. 13. (AP)—Harry McCurdy, former University of Illinois star, second string catcher for the White Sox for three seasons, has been released outright to Toledo of the American association.

In return, Toledo has promised the White Sox first chance on any outstanding players it may uncover this season.

Eighth Corps and Abilene Win in San Antonio Polo

SAN ANTONIO, Jan. 13. (AP)—In the opening games of the low goal event of the sixth annual Southwestern Midwinter Polo tournament here today eighth corps area headquarters defeated the San Antonio Longhorns 10 to 4 and Abilene defeated the Fort Clark Fifth Cavalry 10 to 7. Fort Clark carried a three-goal handicap.

Walker to Fight Hudkins Or Loughran at Las Vegas

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 13 (AP)—Jack Kearns, manager of Micky Walker, middleweight champion, said tonight that plans were under way for a fight at Las Vegas, Nevada, in July, probably the fourth, between Walker and Ace Hudkins, Nebraska "Wildcat" or Tommy Loughran, light heavyweight titleholder.

This Family Plans Baseball Team

The 11 boys of the family of Mr and Mrs. Thomas L. Commbs, who live five miles northeast of Wichita Falls, will form a baseball team this spring. They plan to make a tour of the country and want a manager to handle that trek. Their address is Wichita Falls, rural route 2.

In addition to the 11 boys, there are four girls in the family. All 15 children were home during the recent holidays. Archie, 23, is the eldest and Loyd W., 7, the youngest. Clyde and Clarence, 21, are twins.

Mr. and Mrs. Commbs and their family moved to Texas from Walters, Okla., two years ago.

BIG LEAGUERS TRAIN IN TEXAS

Majority of Clubs Again Condition in Florida

ATLANTA, Ga., Jan. 13. (AP)—They'll be packing the fungoes of major league baseballdom for shipment south soon with Florida delivery marked on most of them.

The boys will be moving in the "down river" direction with ten squads drilling in Florida, one in Louisiana, two in Texas, one in Arizona and the remaining pair in California.

"Grapefruit League"

Clubs of the "Grapefruit League," that mythical circuit which springs up annually along the banks of the Sewanee and Florida gulf region during March and April, will find training opposition. Five of the squads will be of the American league and five from the National loop.

Three of the squads going to Florida—the Senators, Cards and Braves—will be starting under new managers, though the names and faces of the new pilots are familiar in the peninsula state.

Walter Johnson, guiding Washington, Billy Southworth of the Cardinals, and Emil Fuchs as manager-owner of the Boston nationals, will be the latest in "boss" roles, each making his debut with a major league club.

They're Well Known

Johnson, the "Big Train," conditioned his strong pitching arm in the south many seasons; Southworth romped afield with the Giants in this sector for several seasons and Fuchs is well known as an owner.

Johnson has been wintering at Daytona Beach, Fla., and will probably go to Tampa late this month to join Clark Griffith, Senator owner, who is expected about that time. Here are the training camps and names of the managers:

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Team, Manager, Training Camp
Washington—Walter Johnson, Tampa.
New York—Miller Huggins, St. Petersburg.
Philadelphia—Connie Mack, Fort Myers.
St. Louis—Dan Howley, West Palm Beach.
Boston—Bill Carrigan, Bradenton.
Detroit—Stanley Harris, Phoenix, Ariz.
Cleveland—Roger Peckinpaugh, New Orleans.
Chicago—Lena Blackburne, Dallas.

National League

Cincinnati—Jack Hendricks, Orlando.
Brooklyn—Wilbert Robinson, Clearwater.
Boston—Emil Fuchs, St. Petersburg.
Philadelphia—Burt Shotter, Winterhaven.
St. Louis—Billy Southworth, Avon Park.
New York—John McGraw, San Antonio.
Chicago—Joe McCarthy, Catalina Island.
Pittsburgh—Donie Bush, Paso Robles, Calif.

Pennsylvania Tops Eastern Cage Loop

NEW YORK, Jan. 13 (AP)—Pennsylvania sits atop eastern inter-collegiate basket ball league today and for the moment at least, no rival appears strong enough to argue.

The league season barely is started but the first four games would indicate that if there is to be any serious opposition to Penn's march to its second consecutive championship it will have to come from Columia Lions. Columbia is the only member of the six-club circuit not yet seen in action.

Penn, which started off the season by trouncing Yale, 35 to 19, a week ago, repelled Dartmouth, leading challenger, last night, 26 to 23.

Bullet Intended for Another Man Almost Got Rickard at Henrietta

Tex Was Dead Shot But Despite Life in Wild Texas and Klondike There Was No Notch on His Gun

By JACK LAWRENCE

(Copyright, 1929, by the New York American, Inc., and Universal, Inc.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—Although George Lewis (Tex) Rickard lived many years of his life in a vivid atmosphere of six-shooters and sudden death, there is no record that he ever killed a man. During his cowpunching days he had the reputation of being one of the best shots in Texas. Both on the plains and later on in the vast solitudes of the Klondike he always went armed. But when he laid away his trusty six-shoter for the last time there wasn't a notch in it.

In the course of his romantic and tumultuous early life as a cowboy and gold miner there were a number of pot shots taken at Tex, but they always seemed to miss him.

"The nearest I ever came to stopping a bullet was one time down in Henrietta, Texas, when I was still a young feller ridin' the range," Rickard told me one day in the old garden.

"And on that occasion the shot wasn't meant for me at all. It was meant for a guy we used to call Pete the Pest. Pete used to spend all his time in the gin mills of Henrietta. He never did any work, but always seemed to have plenty of money to spend. They used to say that he was a tip-off guy for the James boys and was on their payroll.

"I never could find out whether that was true or not, but I know that when the James boys would ride into Henrietta, as they frequently did, Pete the Pest was about the only inhabitant in the place who didn't find it convenient to stay indoors until the gang had pulled out of town.

He Was the Town Pest

"Mrs. Allen Palmer, a sister of Jesse and Frank James, lived in Henrietta and they used to come there to visit her, and they'd usually bring the gang along with them. On these occasions everybody would hustle indoors and the saloons would be darkened. Everybody but Pete the Pest. He'd go roaring up and down the streets all lit up after drinking all day. Pete always began his drinking at sun-up and was generally on the ropes at sundown.

"They called him the pest because when he'd go into a saloon he'd listen carefully to all arguments that were going on. When he'd hear anybody express an opinion he'd very likely pipe up with, 'aw, you're full of soup' or something like that and take the opposite side of the argument.

"He seemed to spend his entire time looking for arguments, butting into parties where he wasn't wanted and making life miserable for all the town's best drinkers. Well, there were a couple of places where Pete the Pest was barred and these were the places that he always wanted to get into because he knew he'd have an argument before he got through the doorway.

"Pete had just pushed open the swinging doors of one of these places when a shot rang out and his big sombrero flew off his head. It happened that I was standing in front of a blacksmith shop directly opposite and that same bullet whizzed through my own hat, passing about a half an inch from the top of my skull. That was about as close as I ever came to being plugged.

"It's a funny thing, but some years afterward in Nevada I met a chap who had been cowpunching with me in Texas and Kansas and we sat down to chew the rag about the old days. Remembering that bullet that had grazed my knob, I asked him what ever became of Pete the Pest. He told me that Pete's body had been found hanging from the limb of a tree outside of Cambridge, which wasn't far from Henrietta, as Texas distances go. It was rumored he had given the James boys the wrong steer on some job that was coming off and they strung him up. But I think the town's best drinkers finally got annoyed with him because of his everlasting arguments."

The Main Enterprise

The towns of Henrietta and Cambridge must have been profitable places for the ammunition manufacturers in those days. Embalming, casket-making and professional pall bearers also must have been good rackets.

James Curtis, the wealthy ranch owner who gave Tex Rickard, the youngster, his first job at $10 a month, was murdered before the lad's eyes in a Cambridge saloon. Tex once told me that Curtis was one of the finest men he ever met.

"I lived with the Curtis family and they certainly treated me O.K." said Rickard. "It was the first time I had ever lived away from home. But Mr. and Mrs. Curtis made their place just like home to me. He must have had plenty of money. He owned thousands of longhorns out on the ranges, but he always seemed to be battling the other cattlemen, or they were battling him. In fact, the cattle owners seemed be eternally squabbling over their brands and one thing and another. Some of thes scraps had wound up in ugly shooting affairs. I guess there were a lot of the boys knocked off out there on the plains that the authorities never heard of. Shootings were so common that unless there was real foul play the sheriff's office didn't bother about them. If the boys did their shooting according to Hoyle it was all O. K. with the sheriff.

"I used to run errands all over town for Mrs. Curtis. One day she sent me out to locate Mr. Crutis because there was a man from Chicago there to see him. Curtis had gone off with a man named Van Rice, a ranch owner, to talk business. Whenever two guys had business to talk over they always headed for the nearest saloon and carried on their negotiations over the bar. It seemed to be the thing to do.

"So I went from one saloon to another looking for Curtis and Van Rice and finally found them in a place called 'the one-a-minute.' It was the best gin mill in the town. I can see right now the highly polished bar and the glittering cuspidors. It was a place frequented by the rich cattlemen. It was run by a man named Dodge, which was a good name for a Texas saloon keeper in those days.

Both Combatants Killed

"I could hear loud talking and cursing before I entered the place and just as I pushed back the swinging door I saw Van Rice whip out his six-shooter and fire three times at Curtis. My boss crumpled up on the floor with two bullets in his chest and one in his abdomen.

"I think Van Rice was going to fire again but a cowboy who had been standing behind him snatched the smoking gun out of his hand. Curtis had drawn his gun before he went down but hadn't had time to use it. As he writhed on the floor he suddenly reached over and grabbed the brass footrail and pulled himself up into a half-sitting position and took one shot at Van Rice. Of all the shots ever fired in Clay county in those days I guess that was about the neatest. It drilled Van Rice clean through the heart and he toppled over dead—killed instantly. But the sound of the last shot had hardly died away before Curtis rolled over on the floor dead.

That shoting was a seven day's wonder in Cambridge. And the toughest job I ever had was going back and telling the widow about it. She was sitting in the little parlor of her home talking to the man from Chicago and when I broke the news to her she fell right out of her chair in a dead faint.

"The man from Chicago was the head of a syndicate that was going to buy up the Curtis ranch with all its longhorns. The deal had been practically closed and if he'd arrived one day earlier I guess my boss would never have been killed. But that was the way things went in Texas in those wild days. You were here today and gone tomorrow and life insurance was high."

CORKING FISTIC SHOW CARDED

Ross Offers Stellar Program Wednesday

Alex Ross is offering a fistic show Wednesday night at his gymnasium at 821 Indiana avenue that should bring out all the enthusiasts of the sport. Ross bills it as an all-star card and "on paper" it is the best pugilistic offering by the professor in many a moon.

Cyclone Hall, the fast-stepping Childress middleweight who is enjoying a meteorlike pugilistic rise, will face Sam Riley, the clever Altus, Okla., puncher in the 10-round windup of the card. There will be six matches for a total of 34 rounds.

Battling Sturdivant, the Wichita Falls lightweight who has made many friends here for his aggressive scrapping, will meet Windy Wood of Abilene, a lad with no little reputation in that vicinity, in the eight-round semi-windup.

Howard Scott, the popular Electra lightweight, reckoned as one of the best boys of his weight around these diggings, will meet Bob Lewis, a stablemate of Hall, in a feature six-round duel.

Other bouts on the program include Jack Robinson, Quanah, vs Bill Vance, Fort Worth, middleweights, six rounds; Thomas Garland, Burkburnett, vs. Adolph Fourpon, Wichita Falls, featherweights four rounds; Young Sturdivant Wichita Falls, vs. Curly Robertson Wichita Falls, paperweights, four rounds.

DAILY DOPE

By LARRY DAILEY

JIMMY M'LARNIN has rehabilitated himself as a boxing headliner. Knocked out late in November by Ray Miller, the Chicago newsboy, Jimmy came back along the beaten trail last Friday night to score a decisive victory over Joe Glick in the first fight at Madison Square Garden since Tex Rickard's death.

Glick is rated as a foremost contender for the lightweight championship and was held as a slight favorite to beat McLarnin. But those who favored Joe reckoned not with the courage and real fighting ability of the far westerner. McLarnin showed last Friday night, as in those mills that established him as titular challenger prior to his knockout by Miller, that he has all requisities of a great fighter.

BOXING has not lost its place in interest of sports enthusiasts. Give your ring fan a good scrap and he'll pay his money to see it. The McLarnin-Glick war, which loomed as a corking scrap and fulfilled all expectations, drew the largest house that ever saw a battle in the Garden. The paid admissions were 19,510.

ON THE SAME night that McLarnin and Glick were settling their feud, Miller almost was punched into pugilistic oblivion in as startling a manner as he halted, temporarily, the victorious march of McLarnin. Miller was floored SIX times in the second round in his fight with Tommy Grogan, the Omaha lightweight—and survived to knockout his foe in the fourth round.

To survive such a beating as Miller assimilated in that second round, and to come back and win two rounds later shows the Chicagoan, like McLarnin, is imbued with that true great fighting heart which is the most essential possession of a seeker of a ring title. Or any other sports championship.

Only the most stout-hearted warrior, with the unconquerable fighting instinct to keep going in the face of such punishment, could survive to win. And only a truly great fighter could so recover his mentality and rally his physical resources to whip such a formidable adversary as Tommy Grogan was for Miller, and against such odds as faced by the boy who a few years ago sold extras in the loop.

It is with reason, as shown by his fight with Grogan, that Ray Miller ranks as the foremost contender for the lightweight championship of the world.

◇ ◇ ◇

THE GREAT crowd drawn by Glick and McLarnin almost was equalled by the throng which saw that thrilling Grogan and Miller quarrel. More than 15,000 paid to see Ray and Tommy fight their sensational bout at Detroit.

1929 Building Program at Quitaque Exceeds $100,000 in Early Survey

Special to The Record News

QUITAQUE, Texas, Jan. 13—With about one-half of January now gone, Quitaque and community have a building program that will exceed something over $100,000. After making a survey of the three lumber yards here, the managers state that there are a number of contracts estimated, and if they all materialize it will boost the building program up to $125,000 by Feb. 1.

Dr. E. C. Price his let contract to Steve Powell for a beautiful home, located on south Third street. This home will have a foundation to measure 36x50 feet and will cost approximately $5,000.

A survey of the city reveals some 25 homes now under construction, all of which will mean an expenditure of about $50,000.

Work is progressing on the $30,000 Baptist church. Most of the concrete has been poured for the foundation. A number of carpenters will assist in the construction, as soon as conditions will permit.

The 20-room rooming house of C. G. Huggins is being hastened to completion very rapidly. This will be very modern throughout, and a beautiful structure.

From indications of the building activity, starting off in this month, the figures will far exceed that of last year, which ran over half million dollars.

Ousted Chief Asks $63,600 Damages

Special to The Record News

VERNON, Texas, Jan. 13.—Trial of the suit in which former Chief of Police W. W. Gilbert is seeking $63,800 damages in connection with his discharge by the city commission has been set for Feb. 11 in the 46th district court.

Mr. Gilbert, who was ousted from the position of police chief of Vernon on Sept 11 of last year when the commission declared his post vacant, alleges that the defendants "did publicly" charge that the plaintiff was removed from a lodge hall in a drunken condition. He asks the court for $40,000 damages to reputation, $3,600 for two years salary which he alleges is due him, and for $20,000 exemplary damages. City Commissioners Lon Byars, W. O. Smith and A. J. Carpenter and Mayor H. D. Hockersmith are named as defendants in the suit.

Grandfield to Erect New Street Markers

GRANDFIELD, Okla., Jan. 13.—At the regular meeting of the city commissioners, this week, the motion carried for the city to buy 100 eight-foot poles to be used at the street intersections for street markers.

On the main intersections, two posts will be placed, carrying four street signs to the post. C. S. Tant, who is getting up a city directory, has the contract for painting the street signs and placing them on the posts. In this manner, all streets will be known by their names, making a much needed change in street markings. All houses will be renumbered.

Work on the city directory is practically completed, and the material will be turned over to the printers for publication.

Ladies Aid Play At Grandfield Pays $200

Special to The Record News

GRANDFIELD, Okla., Jan. 13.—Nearly $200 was made on the play, "Deacon Dubbs," a three-act comedy, which was presented Jan. 4 and Wednesday evening of last week, in the high school auditorium, by the Ladies Aid of the First Christian church.

The play was presented for a second time due to the fact that a large number of people did not get to see the first performance as there was a great deal of sickness and also bad weather prevented a large house. This play was one of the most successful of plays that have been presented by home talent during this season.

Girls' Glee Club To Sing at School Chapel

Special to The Record News

GRANDFIELD, Okla., Jan. 13.—The Senior High School Girls' Glee club will make its first appearance in high school assembly, Jan. 16. The two songs to be presented are "The Gypsy Trail," and "The Old Road." Uniforms have been selected to wear during performances.

Stolen Car Goes In Ditch—Negroes Nabbed

Stuck in a ditch from which two negro men were trying frantically to dislodge it, an automobile belonging to Mrs. Henry Harper, 1507 Twelfth street, was recevored by Deputy Constables John W. Sayre and Dan Ellis Saturday night.

When the officers neared the car, which had slipped off the side of the Henrietta road near the railroad pass, one negroes started to run and his companion attempted to follow him. The constables, who had thought only to render aid in a mishap, changed their plans and seized the second negro, later capturing the first. The two were placed in jail under charges of theft over $50. The automobile was returned to its owner.

WIFE OF 'BABE' DIES IN BLAZE

Mrs. Ruth's Body Identified By Relatives

relatives and by Ruth himself, the story of her romance with the one time close friend of her husband was pieced out bit by bit.

In the neighborhood where the wealthy dentist maintained his luxurious home, the Kinders were known as a devoted couple.

Mrs. Kinder and her daughter, Dorothy Kinder, were well known and popular. The little girl has been away for several days, and it was said today that she had "gone back to school."

So Babe's baby is safe, though her mother perished.

Neighbor Aids Officials

Among others aiding in the identification of Mrs. Ruth as the fire victim, today was Miss Dorothy Sweed, who lives directly opposite the Kinder property. Shown a photograph of Mrs. Ruth and Dorothy, she positively identified it as Mrs. Kinder and her daughter. Miss Sweed's mother and sister also identified the photograph.

"Dr. Kinder and his wife seemed to be entirely devoted to each other," said Miss Sweed. "When Dr. Kinder came home from Boston after learning of the fire and the tragedy, he collapsed again in our home, where he had been assisted. He dropped to the floor with a moan. Then he came to a bit and mustered up strength enough to go to view the burned body.

"I think some of the neighbors assisted him out of the house. I remember that he asked us to look after his big collie dog which had been pawing about him.

"When I first saw the fire the flames were enveloping the whole house and it was one of the worst fires I ever saw. I cannot understand why Mrs. Kinder could not get out safely unless she was actually trapped by the flames when she awoke and struggled to get to a window."

Miss Sweed's mother tonight talked of the life led by the couple in the house across the way on Quincy street.

Well Dressed

"Mrs. Kinder was always well dressed, as was her little daughter," said Mrs. Sweed. "Dorothy came home from school last summer and was often seen in and around the house. She seemed always to have plenty of dolls and expensive playthings."

And so the identity of the dead woman known as Mrs. Kinder was established.

An then there was a breath—of gossip. Suspicion. The word was sent to Babe Ruth and he arrived from New York Saturday. He seemed more shocked than surprised.

"Where is my baby?" was almost his first demand. He was straining to keep his big body upstanding as he ran toward Arthur J. Crowley, who met him at the Back Bay station.

"Where is my little girl, Arthur? I have got to see her. It isn't true, Arthur, it can't be true."

Ruth Sees Body

Crowley, a long time friend, and son of Police Superintendent Michael H. Crowley of Boston, assured him that his daughter was safe. Ruth went then to the Brunswick hotel where he always kept a suite when in Boston.

After a fitful sleep Ruth was taken to the morgue here where he identified the body as that of his wife.

And so the identity of the dead woman as Mrs. Helen Woodford Ruth—wife of Babe Ruth—was established.

On the front lawn today, near the ruined walls of the pretty house, among other debris from the fire, lay a badly burned caracul coat of expensive make. It bore the label of one of Boston's leading establishments and neighbors identified it as belonging to Mrs. Kinder.

Rosary Beads Found

On the ground nearby, where it fell from the pocket of the coat were rosary beads that belonged to Mrs. Ruth. A charred doll and some other playthings of Dorothy's were scattered about, where they fell when thrown from a window by someone during the fire.

The origin of the fire is unknown. But it started in the living room and swept through the ceiling to the floor above, trapping the only person there—the sleeping woman who was to awaken in terror to try vainly to fight her way through the fire and smoke to safety.

A neighbor was walking home. It was Mr. Sweed from across the street. He gave the alarm. The firemen came. Capt. John Kelley and his men dashed into the building to search it for possible victims. In an upstairs bedroom they found the body of a woman, unconscious, badly burned, on the floor where she had struggled away from the bed to get to the window.

They carried her out and to the house of a neighbor where she died in a few minutes.

"Nobody but a fireman could have saved anybody in the house when the fire was discovered," said Mrs. Aubrey Borchaud, of 35 Quincy street, two doors away. "There was nothing the neighbors could do. I saw the firemen rush in and I saw them bring out a body. Someone said it was a woman. I rushed over and recognized the woman as Mrs. Kinder. I told the firemen that I lived near by and for them to take her to my home.

"Later in the night Dr. Kinder came from Boston. I remembered him collapsing in the crowd in my home. All was confusion while the firemen and police worked over the woman trying to resuscitate her.

Neighbors Shocked

"It is hard to believe that the Mrs. Kinder we knew was other than the person she represented herself to be to the neighbors. I have known Dr. and Mrs. Kinder for a year and a half. We were here when they moved into this section.

"I know their little girl, Dorothy, who is about 9 years old. I was ters' school in Wellesley oretasta told that she was attending a Sisters' school in Wellesley or somewhere up that way.

"Mrs. Kinder, as I knew her, was a short, good looking but somewhat coarse woman, apparently given to a generous use of cosmetics. She was always nicely dressed."

Legally Married

Among the astonishing developments of the case tonight was the declaration by Dr. William H. Kinder Jr., a brother of Dr. Edward H. Kinder, that the dentist and the woman who was burned to death had been legally married in Montreal.

The local police tonight began an inquiry into this phase of the case in an effort to ascertain if, when and where the dead woman had obtained a divorce from Babe Ruth in order to marry Dr. Kinder.

Dr. Kinder told his brother, the latter said, that he was going to New York to break the news to Ruth. He could not be located tonight.

And then there were new angles to the gossip which sprung up and which hinted that there may be a closer police investigation.

PASTOR AIDS

His Radio Announcement Wins College Fees for Youth

The weekly Bible talk given by Rev. Patrick D. Moreland over station KGKO between 5 and 6 o'clock Sunday afternoon included two announcements whose effect will be to enable a young man who is a student at McMurry college, Abilene, to complete the current year's work.

The young man's father, who lives in the oil fields near Wichita Falls, stated to Rev. Mr. Moreland recently that a material cut in salary had made it impossible for him to continue sending the small monthly amount which he had been contributing to his son's expenses, and that unless he could get $75, the boy would be compelled to withdraw from college. Rev. Mr. Moreland repeated the father's statement over the radio here Sunday, and within a few moments received a call from a local attorney stating that he wished to supply the amount needed.

TRIFLING WIFE TO PROSECUTE

Widow Opposes Slayer Of Her Husband

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 13. (UP)—An unfaithful wife will appear as prosecutor of the man who slew her husband when Walter L. Liggett faces first degree murder charges in criminal court Monday.

Liggett, young Nashville grain merchant, shot to death Turney M. Cunningham, manager of Nashville's leading hotel, when surprised after a tryst with Mrs. Cunningham at the Cunningham home last Oct. 29. At the time of the tragedy Cunningham was accompanied by Earl Kiger, private detective and personal friend, who had watched the Cunningham home from a rented garage next door for several days.

"There's the man who wrecked my home," Cunningham is said to have exclaimed as Liggett emerged from his home at the rear door after having met Mrs. Cunningham.

Detective Kiger has said Liggett drew a pistol and fired as Cunningham was raising his revolver. It is understood, however, that the defense will claim Cunningham brandished a revolver as he made his remark and that Liggett fired in self defense.

After the tragedy both Cunningham and their 16-year-old daughter, Ovella, said Liggett and Mrs. Cunningham had been carrying on a love affair for three years.

Mrs. Cunningham said she had formed a suspicion that she and her lover were being watched on the night of the killing and that she had warned Liggett not to come into the house. He left the back door immediately and encountered Cunningham and Kiger in the alley through which he had walked on his way to meet Mrs. Cunningham.

After the murder, Mrs. Cunningham swore out a peace warrant against Liggett, claiming that he had been brutal and fearinspiring in his treatment toward her since the day she submitted to his love making.

Daly to Select Cast for Play

The cast for "Dulcie," the initial production to be offered by the newly organized Little Theater, will be selected Monday after a series of tryouts before James Daly, director.

Mr. Daley will interview aspirants for the eight masculine and the three feminine parts in the comedy all Monday afternoon and evening. The tryouts will be conducted in his office on the second floor.

The date for the presentation of the first play has been tentatively set for Feb. 8, according to plans completed at an open house for Mr. Daly held at the Forum Saturday evening. Three other plays, one of them out-of-doors, are to be produced during the season.

"Dulcie" is a three-act comedy written by Kauffman and Conley, selected especially to attract the attention and pleasure of masculine members of the audience.

Deaths

MRS. D. E. ANDRUS

Funeral services for Mrs. D. E. Andrus, 90, who died Saturday morning at the home of her son, E. H. Andrus, in the Bowman community south of Lake Wichita, were conducted from the Merkle Undertaking company's chapel at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

The body will be forwarded to Fort Worth for burial Monday by Merkle.

Oklahoma Quartet Wins Acclaim For Gospel Songs on KGKO Bill

Rev. P. D. Moreland Dedicates Sunday Radio Sermon on Jacob's Well to Oil Field Workers of Wichita Area

The Koonkaszchey Male quartet of Lone Wolf, Okla., received scores of congratulatory messages following their program of gospel songs during the laymen's hour at station KGKO Sunday afternoon from 4 to 5 o'clock, according to radio officials.

The quartet is composed of Pete Barton, first tenor; Homer Barton, second tenor; Aubrey Howl, baritone; and Roy Wadlow, bass. Miss Erma Gorman was the accompanist.

Harry Hines, lay speaker from the First Christian church, delivered a brief sermon during the hour.

Rev. Patrick D. Moreland and the mixed quartet from the Grant Street Methodist church, of which Rev. Moreland is pastor, were on the air during the "radio Bible class" hour from 5 to 6 o'clock. According to officials of the station, the Bible class now has regular hearers at points as far distant as Minnesota.

The subject of Rev. Mr. Moreland's talk Sunday was: "He Digged a Well." It was dedicated to the oil field workers in this community. He said:

"Jacob dug a well 25 centuries ago. Through all those centuries each tired and thirsty traveler who has stopped at that well has been refreshed by the labor of Jacob. There came one hot summer morning to the well of Jacob a tired figure of a man: Jesus, and his disciples. There came also to the well a woman, whose face was marred by sin. She bore a water pot. She had in her heart a deep thirst, an unrealized longing that the Man by the well recognized. Pleasure had not satisfied that thirst. Adventure and sin had not quenched it. She came, she thought, to get a bucket of water. She left cleansed and purified, her outlook on life tremendously changed. Jacob had reached across the centuries and brought her the Christ.

"When Jacob dug that well he ministered not only to the centuries, but to the Savior of men. He gave the cup of cold water to the traveler. Through Jesus he gave the cup of life to this woman.

"The lives that we live can be wholesome springs of water, deep sources of refreshment to the weary of the world. The sympathetic heart blesses the world. The kindly spirit ministers.

"So Jacob not only ministered to the centuries, but lives today because of the well which he dug."

Monday evening's program was announced as follows:

7:00 to 7:30—Chamber of commerce period.
7:30 to 8:30—Little Rovers' orchestra.
8:30 to 9:00—Zack and Glenn.

Electran Held On Jury Indictment

Charlie Streety, indicted last September on charges of assault with intent to kill, was brought back to Wichita Falls from Big Spring by Dick Morris, deputy sheriff, Sunday afternoon.

Streety was indicted in connection with a cutting affray in Electra last August. Cecil Rinehart, Electra youth, was injured in the fight. Streety was arrested by the constable in Big Spring last Friday and brought back to the Wichita Falls county jail Sunday.

Servant Houses Raided By Clothing Thieves

Almost a complete wardrobe of women's clothing was stolen from two servant houses here Saturday night between 8 and 9 o'clock, according to reports received at police headquarters Sunday.

Burglars broke into a servant house in the rear of 1903 Pearl street and escaped with five dresses, a sweater, eight pairs of hose and two uniforms.

Two coat suits, six dresses, a comb and brush, a pair of women's shoes and a diamond ring valued at $50 were reported to have been stolen from the servant quarters in the rear of 1900 McGregor.

Pastor Faces U. S. Charges

tearful family reunion. With her 4-year-old baby in her arms, the mother asserted that she was ready to come home and stay home.

The husband, in tears himself, indicated that he would receive her back in his home once the trial is over and her entanglement as a material government witness is dissolved. The constable's department, author of this reunion, left the family group to settle its own problems.

Sam Spence, working with Mr Morgan, agreed to prepare the statement for presentation Monday morning before the U. S. commissioner. Charges of wife desertion were filed against the preacher in Clay county at the time of the elopement.

THREE JAILED IN PASTOR'S MARRIAGE TO GIRL OF 11

MARION, Ill., Jan. 13 (UP)—Three men implicated in the marriage of 11-year-old Selinda Clendenin and Rev. Joseph H. Benton, blind 54-year-old Pentecostal preacher, face charges of bigamy, perjury and violation of the marriage laws, State's Attorney Roy Browning of Williamson county announced tonight.

The men involved in the charges are Rev. Benton, now held in the county jail here accused of bigamy; George Clendenin, the girl-bride's father, facing a charge of perjury for allegedly falsifying her age as 16; and Edward Haynes, her brother-in-law, who performed the ceremony allegedly knowing she was a minor.

Mrs. Hester Yuill, county juvenile probation officer of Herrin, has received word from Blytheville, Ark., Browning said, that Rev. Mr. Benton's first wife now is living there and is a member of the Pentecostal church congregation of that town. It was on the basis of that information that Benton was charged with bigamy.

Burglary Trio Escape Jail at Benjamin

The three men arrested in a local cafe last Monday night by local police and turned over to officers from Benjamin in connection with a series of burglaries in that city escaped from the jail at Benjamin Sunday night, according to information received at local police headquarters.

A barber and tailor shop in Benjamin were robbed on Sunday night, Jan. 6, of about $700 worth of tools and clothing, most of which was recovered here following the arrest of the three men, which was made by Officers W. S. Johnson and P. W. Timmons.

A fourth man, said to be a cripple, also gained his liberty in the jailbreak reported from Benjamin Sunday night, according to the report given.

KIWANIS GO TO DALLAS MEET

Nine Wichitans Attend Trustees' Gathering

A party of nine members of the Wichita Falls Kiwanis club left Sunday afternoon for Dallas, where they will attend an all-day meeting of the Texas-Oklahoma district trustees of Kiwanis Monday at the Adolphus hotel.

The annual meeting of the district trustees will be the occasion for the installation of new district officers, and J. L. Jackson Jr., who has served as lieutenant governor of the district during the last year, will turn over the business of his office to his successor, it was stated. The party planned to return Monday. Besides Mr. Jackson, Homer Sanderford, president; Don T. Haynes, secretary; Dr. R. H. Peterson, district trustee; Paul Pearson, H. D. Wolff, Julian Bobo, Jean P. Montgomery and Walter Nelson Jr. of the local club made the trip.

The regular weekly luncheon will be held Monday noon at the Kemp, it was announced, and will be featured by an address by Charles Weeks, recently arrived intensive farming expert from California, who will discuss his program of work relative to the development of a large section of land near Wichita Falls. Officials of the club stated that any persons interested in Mr. Weeks' talk, although not members of the Kiwanis club, will be welcome at Monday's meeting. Musical numbers under direction of W. E. Young will be given.

Running Gun Fight Alarms Wichitans

Residents on Taylor street in the vicinity of Avenue D were alarmed and puzzled Sunday night by an apparent gun battle between occupants of two automobiles.

Reports to The Record News said the two cars had dashed down Taylor, turning into Avenue D, while occupants of the automobiles maintained a fusillade of pistol shots at each other.

A. McKinnon reported to The Record News that he had driven his car between the two machines in the battle, narrowly escaping a collision with the last one, which had no lights. He halted his machine and watched the two cars as they continued on their course, with one man standing in each car and firing at the other. Police were unable to find any trace of the combatants, nor had officers any explanation for the affair.

Attends Cleaners' Meeting

J. C. Hanks of the Wichita Cleaners and Dyers left Sunday to attend the annual meeting of the National Association of Master Cleaners and Dyers which is being held this week in Memphis, Tenn.

Nocona Marshal Is Shot to Death

Ed Jackson, his brother-in-law. He made no statement to officers or friends. Mrs. Goodspeed followed him to Montague and held a conference with the sheriff. Mr. Husband later went to Nocona to complete his investigations.

According to statements by Mr. Hill to The Record News correspondent here, Godspeed came to his home with his shotgun still in his hands.

"I have just shot A. R. Gooch. Tell the officers to come and get me," Goodspeed said, according to Hill.

Officer Warned

Later, Hill said, Goodspeed told him that Mrs. Goodspeed was in the bath room when the officer started making his search. Goodspeed shouted for Gooch not to enter the bath room, according to the version given Mr. Hill, warning him that to do so would endanger his life.

Immediately after this the shooting followed, Hill said he was told.

Details of the affair were somewhat in doubt here tonight, as County Attorney Temple Yarborough and other officials refused to comment on the case. Although a hearing was held shortly after the shooting, officials refused to divulge the information, if any, secured in the session. Mr. Yarborough declined to confirm or deny the Goodspeed version of the affair, and likewise no information was available to indicate whether or not the officer heard the alleged warning. The county attorney gave no reason for withholding information on the case.

RITES HELD FOR BURK MAN

Third Member of Family Dies in Two Weeks

Funeral services for Wiley Dentleman, 22, of Burkburnett, the third member of his family to die of influenza during the last two weeks, were held from the Hines mortuary Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Burial was in Riverside cemetery.

Mrs. H. A. Dentleman, his mother, died in a hospital here on Jan. 1 and his sister, Miss Lillie Dentleman, died Jan. 4. Mr. Dentleman died at a local hospital Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Survivors include his father, H. A. Dentleman, and a brother and sister, both of whom are seriously ill.

City Police Arrest Archer County Pair

Two men wanted in Archer county for forgery, passing "hot" checks and jumping their board bills were arrested and released to Archer county officials by local police Sunday.

The pair were arrested here on request of the Archer county sheriff by M. A. Purdue, Fred Fountain, Elmer Thornton and W. P. Timmons, city officers.

Fight Flu With Milk, Soft Boiled Eggs

You can help to guard against the Flu by eating only good wholesome food, such as soft-boiled eggs, oatmeal, milk. Get lots of sleep. Keep away from crowds and drink lots of water. And MOST IMPORTANT be sure to keep the bowels open. The best intestinal cleanser is the simple glycerin, buckthorn bark, saline compound, known as Adlerika. This acts in ½ to 2 hours on BOTH upper and lower bowel (most medicines act on lower bowel only.)

Adlerika often brings out foul matter which may have poisoned you for months and which you would never believe was in your system.

Dr. H. L. Shoub, well-known New York bacteriologist, after testing Adlerika on living subjects, reports; "Adlerika markedly reduces the number of bacteria and colon bacilli, in addition to its intestinal cleansing action."

Give your stomach and bowels a REAL cleansing with Adlerika and see how good you feel! Just ONE spoonful gives wonderful relief in chronic constipation. GAS bloating, sour stomach and sick headache. No matter what you have tried for your stomach and bowels, Adlerika will surprise you.

It contains no aloes, calomel or senna, therefore acting without griping or discomfort of any kind. Adlerika is sold by leading druggists in tin-foiled bottles.—Adv.

WOMAN SICK THREE YEARS

Helped By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Little Rock, Ark.—"I was sick for three years after my last baby came. I could hardly walk and could not eat nor sleep as I should because I was so nervous. I took seven bottles of the Vegetable Compound and used that number of bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash and I am feeling just fine. I have a large family and do the work for all. Your Compound made me a well woman, and I have a happy home now. I always try to keep a bottle in the house and I tell everyone about it." Mrs. H. A. Adams, R. F.
