Shamir fires Peres in dispute on talks

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir fired Vice Premier Shimon Peres today in a dispute over peace talks and all the Cabinet members of Peres' Labor Party quit, collapsing the 15-month-old coalition government.

Peres' dismissal and the resignations do not take effect for 48 hours, leaving room for a last-ditch compromise. "Things could happen, the situation can change," Shamir said on Israel radio.

But reconciliation seemed remote as Labor leaders ruled out further contacts with Shamir's right-wing Likud bloc. "The compromises ... are behind us, not before us," Peres said.

The collapse of the coalition sent party leaders searching for alliances to form a new government before a planned no-confidence vote in Parliament Thursday. Both Likud and the center-left Labor Party are seeking alliances with small religious parties, who hold a swing vote.

If the no-confidence motion fails, Shamir could remain prime minister by forming an alliance with the smaller parties. If it passes, Shamir remains head of a caretaker government until a new government is formed by either Labor or Likud.

The dispute is over Labor's support of a U.S. proposal to hold peace talks in Cairo with a Palestinian delegation. The delegates would discuss plans for elections in the occupied territories on self-rule for the Palestinians.

Likud objects to involving the 140,000 Arabs in east Jerusalem in the elections.

In a radio interview, Shamir said he acted to preempt Labor's efforts to muster a majority for

Launching of new 911 celebrated

Staff Report

Red and white balloons dotted the stage at Midland Center Monday as local dignitaries stepped forward to celebrate the successful launch of enhanced 911.

"Of all the legislation we've considered, 911 does more for the individual citizen than anything," State Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, told guests at the Monday ceremony.

The system began operating March 1 — two days earlier than planned.

Joyce Britcher, Midland Emergency Communications District communications director, said system testing, which had been ongoing since December, was successful enough to go live early.

Congress approves new Soviet presidency

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Congress of People's Deputies today approved Mikhail S. Gorbachev's plan for a strong presidency, a post the Soviet leader says is essential to hold the country together as his reforms go forward.

The Congress, the country's top legislative body, also scrapped the clauses of the Soviet Constitution that guarantee the Communist Party's leading role in society, creating a multiparty system. It also legalized private ownership of factories.

"We are standing before the greatest, most meaningful step in the history of our government," Gorbachev told the Parliament.

The deputies are expected to nominate and elect Gorbachev to the new presidency. It is expected that after Gorbachev's initial term, the five-year presidency would be filled by popular election.

The lawmakers approved the measure on the presidency by a vote of 1,817 to 133, with 61 abstentions, the official Tass news agency said. A two-thirds majority of the 2,250-member Congress of People's Deputies was required for the motion to pass.

Delegates applauded when the bill passed.

The measures on the presidency, private property and scrapping the leading role of the party had earlier been approved by the Supreme Soviet, the smaller parliament that handles day-to-day business.

The vote on scrapping the party's leading role passed by a vote of 1,771 to 164, with 74 abstentions.

Lawmakers still face money fight

By Rick Brown

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Lawmakers returning Wednesday from their primary election recess will find two key school finance plans nearly ready for consideration, but money issues in the debate are far from resolved.

Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur and co-author of a Senate plan calling for $780 million in new state education aid, acknowledges that the Legislature will probably need more than one special session to reach a solution.

The assessment echoed one offered this past week by Gov. Bill Clements, who indicated willingness to keep lawmakers in Austin past May 1 if they are unable to mold a solution that avoids new state taxes.

The Texas Supreme Court set the May 1 deadline this past October, when it ruled unanimously that the state relies too heavily on local property taxes to provide money for public schools.

Such over-reliance amounts to discrimination against students who learn in districts with poor tax bases, the court said.

"We're going to be here a long, long time, because there are not going to be any new taxes, period," said Clements. The governor earlier indicated support for spending "a nominal sum" such as $200 million on school finance, so long as the money is found within the existing state budget.

"So what's new?" said Parker of the governor's position. "That's been the history of Bill Clements. Anything progressive, he's against."

Parker, who chairs the Senate Education Committee, said the plan he is cosponsoring with Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan, should reach the Senate floor for debate on Friday.

Meanwhile, a House of Representatives plan that includes a $450 million state aid increase was still in the drafting stage this past week.

Rep. Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield and chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, is working with Alice Democratic Rep. Ernestine Glossbrenner, the House Public Education Committee chairman, and Arlington Republican Rep. Kent Grusendorf to ready the bill for filing.

Another key House player, Rep. James Hury, D-Galveston and chairman of the tax-writing Ways and Means Committee, said both the House and Senate versions of education reform carry price tags that would need new tax revenues.

"As of this time, I cannot see how you could raise that kind of

Texans pick gubernatorial nominees

■ Tye students back Owens; Supporters greet Williams with Tarmac Touchdown Party — 1B

AUSTIN (AP) — Three Democrats waged a bare-fisted struggle for the gubernatorial nomination in today's primary, while a millionaire oilman making his first run for office was expected to win the GOP nomination outright.

President Bush, who maintains a residence in Houston, told reporters in Washington today that he voted in the Texas Republican primary.

"I will not tell you who I voted for. I hope everybody understands," he said.

The president also said a candidate's past drug use should not necessarily be held against him or her. The drug issue has been a thorny one in the Democratic gubernatorial race because candidate Ann Richards has refused to answer yes or no when asked if she's ever used illegal drugs.

Her main opponents, former Gov. Mark White and Attorney General Jim Mattox, both have said they have not used illegal drugs and criticized Ms. Richards for refusing to answer the question.

"I think that's a matter for the voters to decide," Bush said today. "But in my view, if somebody used marijuana, sometime ago, and is not into anything of that nature, why, no, I don't think that should be held against them."

When asked how he'd feel if the drug were stronger than marijuana, Bush said, "You're geting me involved in the Texas primary, something I don't want to do."

Turnout was brisk this morning in Dallas and Fort Worth, and fair in Houston, said officials at polling places, although there were no local predictions on the day's turnout from voting in the first hours at the polls.

"Our telephones have been very busy so far this morning, but it's hard to gauge the turnout," said Mary Kay Near with the elections department of the Dallas County clerk's office.

In El Paso, voting was light in the first hour of balloting, said Robert Rodriguez, El Paso County election clerk.

In Austin, Travis County Clerk Dana DeBeauvior said turnout is light in some precincts and heavy in others. "It appears we are headed toward our prediction of a 39-percent turnout."

The secretary of state's office predicted a turnout of 2.1 million to 2.6 million of the 8.3 million eligible voters, who can vote in either primary. Each party's choice needs more than 50 percent of the vote to avoid a runoff.

The final pre-election poll showed White, Mattox and Ms. Richards in a dead heat for the Democratic nomination, with Clayton Williams gaining more than half the Republican vote.

Williams said if he wins outright and the Democrats are forced into a runoff April 10, he will relax and "have some fun watching each of the Democrats murdering on each other."

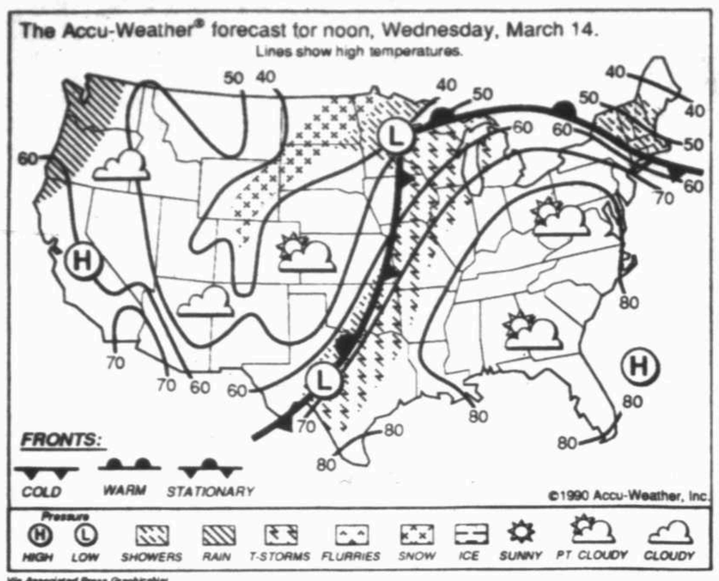

The winner in November will succeed Republican Gov. Bill Clements, who is retiring.

Ms. Richards, known for her caustic keynote speech at the 1988 Democratic National Convention in which she said then-Vice President Bush was "born with a silver foot in his mouth," held a slim lead in the latest poll.

Mudslinging has been the mainstay of the Democratic campaign. Ms. Richards accused her rivals of profiteering from public service; they lashed out at her for refusing to say whether she has used drugs.

In recent days, Ms. Richards questioned how White could afford to move into a $1.3 million Houston estate after leaving the governor's mansion in 1987.

Cloudiness, low in 40s likely

Staff Report

Partly cloudy skies are in the forecast for tonight, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport, with the low in the middle 40s and southwest-westerly winds gusting from 10-20 mph.

Wednesday is expected to be cloudy and cooler with a 20 percent chance of rain and the high reaching only near 60. Winds will shift to the west-northwest at 10-20 mph and gusty.

Monday's high of 85 was 10 degrees cooler than the record high of 95 set for that date in 1989. The overnight low of 63 was 49 degrees warmer than the record low of 14 set for this date in 1932.

STATE

A tornado watch was posted today for parts of North Central Texas in the wake of strong thunderstorms that swelled rivers and creeks with floodwaters, killing at least one person.

The National Severe Storms Forecast Center issued the watch, which also included parts of western Oklahoma, until 1 p.m.

Tornadoes, large hail, dangerous lightning and damaging winds were possible in the watch area, which includes Foard, Hardeman and Wilbarger counties.

A tornado watch for 18 counties in the eastern Texas Panhandle and South Plains was cancelled after intense thunderstorms moved out of the area, meteorologists said.

Radar at Wichita Falls showed a line of thunderstorms, some severe, stretching from near Medicine Lodge, Kan. to Gage, Okla. The storms were moving northeasterly at 40 mph.

The National Weather Service also posted a severe thunderstorm warning for Armstrong, Carson and Gray counties in the Texas Panhandle. Radar showed a severe thunderstorm in northeastern Armstrong county, north of Goodnight.

The storm, likely to produce one-inch hail and high winds, was moving northeasterly at 30 mph.

NATION

Summer-like weather continued throughout much of the eastern United States today, but in parts of the West snow was a reminder that it still is March.

The National Weather Service said temperatures up to 25 degrees above normal could be expected in much of the East through midweek.

Temperatures overnight never dipped below the 50s in much of the northern central United States. On Monday, record highs were set in nearly 100 cities — up to 95 in Baltimore, 19 degrees above the city's century-old record for the date.

Other record highs broken or tied for the date included Augusta, Ga., 88; Chicago 81; Detroit 75; Kansas City 77; and Minneapolis 69.

But the warm air flowing over snow and frozen ground created dense fog from North Dakota into Michigan.

Flooding caused by a combination of rain, rapidly melting snow and frozen ground subsided by early today in Wisconsin and Minnesota. Flooding also eased in Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas, which were hit by violent storms during the weekend.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

Heat climbs 25 degrees above normal

Associated Press

A high-pressure system pumping tropical air over the eastern United States today after breaking hundreds of heat records on Monday. The system spread deadly fog over highways and left early budding trees vulnerable to the nip of any late frost.

"I played golf yesterday, and I said then I was playing again today," said Gene Novak, a real estate manager in Baltimore, where the temperature hit 95 on Monday. "What the heck? My boss is away."

The National Weather Service forecast summery weather again today in most of the country east of the Mississippi. Temperatures up to 25 degrees above normal were expected through midweek.

Monday's high in Baltimore broke the city's 100-year-old record by 19 degrees, and from North Dakota to Georgia it was a good day for sunbathers and fishermen. Record highs were recorded in more than 100 cities.

In the nation's capital, the high of 87 was the warmest on record for any day in March. The warmth threatened to make Washington's cherry trees bloom too early for the annual Cherry Blossom Festival, scheduled to begin April 1.

In South Carolina, peach farmers worried that a late frost could nip the budding peach blossoms. "They are not far enough along to be out of damage," said Henry Nunnery of the York County Extension Office.

Dense fog caused by the warm air flowing over snow and frozen ground was reported from North Dakota into Michigan, reducing visibility to zero in places and delaying planes at airports Monday.

In Green Bay, where the day's reading of 70 broke the old mark by 15 degrees, a 100-foot-long "white wall" of fog and paper-mill smoke caused a flaming, 52-vehicle pileup that killed three people and injured 30.

A combination of rain, rapidly melting snow and frozen ground caused flooding elsewhere in Wisconsin and in Minnesota, although officials said it had subsided by early today, as did floodwaters in Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas.

Workers in Danville, Ill., near the Indiana line, built a floodwall late Monday to protect the Inter-State Water Co., whose pumps were disabled when Lake Vermilion overflowed its banks during the weekend.

Surgery at two Danville hospitals was canceled, and schools were closed until Thursday, when water is expected to be restored, said Donald Crews, disaster relief coordinator for the Vermilion County Red Cross.

ISRAEL: Coalition collapses

(From 1A)

Thursday's Parliament vote. He said the Jerusalem issue was the main obstacle.

"These differences of opinion are not so small...they exist and firstly about Jerusalem, an issue about which we are very sensitive, especially these days when we hear voices from the United States," Shamir said.

The remark was an allusion to recent statements by U.S. leaders, including President Bush, suggesting Jerusalem could be negotiable in peace talks and Bush's criticism earlier this month of building Jewish neighborhoodq in east Jerusalem.

Both Labor and Likud maintain that Jerusalem is not negotiable, but Labor favors a compromise: allowing Jerusalem Palestinians to vote elsewhere in the disputed lands.

President Bush said today his comments two weeks ago about the status of Jerusalem were blown "way out of proportion" but he declined to retract them.

"I do not want to look in any way like we're trying to mingle into the internal affairs of Israel," Bush said.

Israel radio said today that Shamir also considered submitting his resignation before Thursday, but the premier denied it.

The balance of power is held by two ultra-Orthodox religious parties who have seven of the 120 seats in the Knesset, or parliament. Labor and its allies control 55 seats, while Likud and its partners control 58.

Explaining the prime minister's decision to expel Labor from the coalition, Shamir spokesman Yossi Achimier said his boss "wants only one thing: to prevent a Paleqtinian state."

Labor Communications Minister Gad Yacobi said Shamir's decision to end the coalition ruined prospects for a Palestinian-Israeli dialogue: "The prime minister has closed the door on the peace process...for this he bears heavy national responsibility."

Palestinians described the collapse as a setback for Israel's plan to hold elections in the occupied territories as a first step in resolving the Palestinian problem.

Bethlehem Mayor Elias Freij said "I believe Israel has killed its own peace plan ... and this will have very dangerous repercussions throughout the Middle East."

Freij alluded to predictions that without an active process Arab-Israeli tensions would increase and result in violence, both in the occupied territories and from radical Palestinian groups abroad.

911: New system on line early

(From 1A)

About 6,500 test calls were made from various locations around the county, she said.

"It will only be a matter of time before this system will play a life or death role for a member of this community," said Precinct 1 County Commissioner Durward Wright.

When a caller dials 911, an operator in the city's 601 N. Loraine St. building gets the call and a nearby computer screen immediately displays the caller's address and telephone number.

The operator asks what emergency service branch the caller needs, such as fire, police, Midland County Sheriff's Office or medical services.

The operator then sets up a three-party call between himself, the caller and an emergency service dispatcher. Once connection between the caller and dispatcher has been made, the operator disconnects himself.

The $250,000 system is being paid for through finance charges in monthly telephone bills. Since April 1, 1988, a 36-cent charge has been included for residents, 85 cents for businesses and $1.35 for trunk lines.

Operators can call back to determine whether the call was an emergency, a wrong number or a prank, Czech said. If no one answers when an operator calls back, a patrol car will be dispatched to that address, he said.

Those making prank calls may face Class A or B misdemeanor charges, which carry penalties of up to a $2,000 and a possible one-year jail sentence.

money without a tax bill," Hury said.

A management review team appointed by the governor to survey Texas Education Agency operations released a report this past week that could supply some answers to that question.

The report underlined Clements' "no new tax" stance and "shows that schools are operating in an atmosphere mired in red tape and inflexible rules," the governor said.

"We have a central bureaucracy that focuses too little attention on accountability and results," he said.

The panel, consisting of ten volunteers from the state's business community, criticized teacher certification requirements as inadequate and teacher approasial procedures as ineffectual.

The team's report also decried "an ever-increasing proliferation of special student populations, each with its own curriculum, measures, teachers and administrators."

The panel said the current education system places too little emphasis on pre-kindergarten through fourth grade education. Such performance-measuring tools as the TEAMS tests are "one-dimentional" and ineffective, the group said.

In addition, "nowhere does there appear to be an institutional interest in and a capacity to access the cost effectiveness of educational programs," the report said.

"With the present educational system, it's doubtful that additional funding will result in a better product," the panel concluded.

The negative report card led the panel to include amont its recommendations ideas for revamping the TEA decision-making process that both Clements and key lawmakers say they support.

SLANDER: First witnesses called

(From 1A)

The jury, which took 6½ hours to select on Monday, includes 10 women and two men.

Presiding over the case is retired District Judge James Gregg of Granbury and formerly of Big Spring.

Gideon's attorneys are Tom Bruner of Midland and Bill Wade and Bill Moss, both of Lubbock. Smith's attorney is Tom Sims of Houston.

The case is expected to be lengthy, possibly going into next week.

Gideon, who was police chief for 10 years until retiring in 1986, had been in law enforcement for 30 years.

Quayle feels Paraguay aiming for democracy

ASUNCION, Paraguay (AP) — Vice President Dan Quayle said today he pressed Paraguayan President Andres Rodriguez for progress on human rights and is convinced Rodriguez "is dedicated to democracy."

Quayle met with opposition political leaders and planned a second meeting later in the day with Rodriguez.

The vice president, fresh from talks with President Daniel Ortega on a peaceful transfer of power in Nicaragua, said he pressed for progress on human rights in his first meeting with Rodriguez, shortly after his arrival Monday night from Santiago, Chile.

"I have already talked to him about human rights and the advancement of democracy," Quayle told reporters when asked about a State Department report that criticizes Paraguay for continued human rights problems.

"I'm convinced he is dedicated to democracy," Quayle said of Rodriguez.

No other U.S. president or vice president has visited Paraguay since the 1950s, when Richard Nixon stopped there as vice president.

Quayle and his wife, Marilyn, were honored Monday night in a gala dinner at the palace of Rodriguez, who gave the Quayles a pair of young spotted jaguars. The jaguar is native to Paraguay.

Lithuanian secession invalidated

MOSCOW (AP) — Mikhail S. Gorbachev today called Lithuania's declaration of independence "illegal and invalid" but urged patience, saying Moscow's relations with the Baltic republic would continue unchanged for now.

He said a commission was studying how to respond to Lithuania's action.

In comments to the Congress of People's Deputies, Gorbachev indicated that Lithuania's independence drive is likely to encounter formidable resistance. He said the Kremlin would not begin negotiations with the three Baltic republics on the independence they are seeking.

"We cannot talk about negotiations," he said. "You carry out negotiations with a foreign country."

But several lawmakers said it was likely Gorbachev would soften his positon.

The Soviet leader told the 2,000 deputies that Premier Nikolai Ryzhkov and a commission were studying the Lithuanian "situation." On Sunday, Lithuania's legislature reclaimed the sovereignty the nation lost 50 years ago.

Gorbachev won applause from the Congress when he said the Kremlin would not give in to demands to negotiate independence with republics seeking independence, including the other two Baltic states — Latvia and Estonia.

The Lithuanians want recognition as a sovereign state and the start of talks on secession. On Monday, the Estonians called for talks with Moscow on independence. All three republics were forcibly annexed in 1940.

Members of the Lithuanian Parliament raise cards as they vote in their first free session Monday in Vilinius, the provincial capital. Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev has called their action "illegal and invalid."

At one point, calling the Lithuanians "comrades," Gorbachev paused and then said, "I think they are comrades."

The Soviet leader made a point of welcoming the presence of Lithuanian deputies at the Congress. But Lithuanian deputy Vaidotas Antanaitis said they now considered themselves observers.

Antanaitis read excerpts from the declaration of independence, together with appeals for recognition of their sovereignty. He said Lithuania wants good relations with Moscow, and called for negotiations.

Gorbachev offered no reaction.

Another Lithuanian deputy, Algimountas Chekuolis, said he believed the Soviet leader would soften his position. "Gorbachev is a realist," he said. "He'll change his stand."

Ingrik Toome, a deputy and premier of Estonia, said Estonians and Latvians were upset by Gorbachev's statement there would be no negotiations, but added that the Soviet leader might not yet have fully explained his position.

"So far, many of his political steps have shown that he has to start these negotiations," Toome said.

The Lithuanian Communist Party chief, Algerdis Brazauskas, told reporters he met with Gorbachev early today, and "there were no reproaches, contacts have not been broken." Brazauskas lost the post of Lithuanian parliament president last weekend.

On Monday, conservative Politburo member Yegor K. Ligachev ruled out the use of force against the republic of 3.7 million people. "We will not use force," he declared, "We must resolve this by political means."

In January, Red Army troops stormed the Azerbaijani capital of Baku to put down unrest fueled by independence demands, killing dozens. In April 1989, troops killed at least 19 people in Tbilisi, the capital of Georgia, during an independence demonstration.

In order to make Sunday's declaration a reality, Lithuania must resolve a daunting array of questions, including matters of territory, compensation, the status of thousands of Soviet soldiers, ownership of factories and land, and control of the police and KGB.

Lithuanians said they expected at least a partial economic blockade by the Soviet side, which supplies all of the fuel to the republic.

The Tass news agency said Lithuanian legislators declared that their sons no longer need serve in the Soviet Army and appealed to Gorbachev to ensure the welfare of Lithuanian soldiers until negotiations start on mustering them out.

Other governments cheer action

Associated Press

Governments from Australia to Italy on Monday cheered Lithuania's declaration of independence from Soviet rule, but congratulations came mixed with caution.

The Bush administration expressed support for Lithuania's move, while saying the United States will delay formal recognition of the breakaway republic until the Lithuanians are "in control of their own destiny."

Foreign Office Minister William Waldegrave said in London on Monday that Britain is "fascinated" by Lithuania's action, but has no immediate plans to recognize Lithuania as a country separate from the Soviet Union.

The newly elected non-Communist legislature of Lithuania on Sunday voted to declare its independence 50 years after the Soviet Union annexed the sovereign state of Lithuania on the basis of an agreement with Nazi Germany.

The United States and other Western nations never recognized the Soviet Union's forcible annexation of Lithuania in 1940.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Chilean leader avoiding trial

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — New President Patricio Aylwin pledged respect for human rights Monday in a speech to a huge gathering celebrating the rebirth of democracy in Chile, but indicated he will avoid holding trials for past abuses.

Singing, flag-waving, sometimes weeping Chileans packed the 82,000-seat National Stadium, five miles southeast of downtown Santiago, to hear Aylwin — a site that long served as a dark symbol of bloody political repression.

On seizing power in a violent 1973 coup, Pinochet launched a harsh anti-leftist campaign. Thousands of suspected dissidents were rounded up and brought to National Stadium where, human rights groups say, many were tortured and some were executed.

Parliament dissolved

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — President Christos Sartzetakis dissolved Parliament on Monday, and Greece's political parties prepared for their third battle after two inconclusive elections since June.

A presidential decree posted next to Parliament's entrance disbanded the 300-member legislature and scheduled elections for April 8.

The conservative New Democracy party, with 148 seats in the last Parliament, is aiming for a majority in the elections. The socialists, with 128 seats, and the Communists, with 21, appear determined to prevent this. Three seats went to independents in November.

Premier Xenophon Zolotas will lead a caretaker government until the elections. He was appointed by the conservative, socialist and Communist parties to head an all-party government after Nov. 5 elections. But on Feb. 12, that government broke up, citing policy differences.

Tax protests continue

LONDON (AP) — Demonstrators threw sticks and stones at police during a protest Monday night at a London borough hall over Britain's new tax, officials said. Several people were injured, including some officers, and 45 were arrested, police said.

Protests have been occurring around Britain over the new tax, which will fund locally controlled spending. The uproar over the tax has contributed to a slide in the popularity of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservative government.

Three hundred police, some on horseback, confronted about 1,500 protesters in the northeast London borough of Islington Monday as the area council met to set the local tax rate.

Police said 20 or 30 people started to snake through the crowd and push demonstrators into police lines.

Gaviria leads primary

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Cesar Gaviria Trujillo, who wants to eliminate drug trafficking, end government corruption and help the poor, was easily leading in the presidential primary of the governing Liberal Party, according to election results late Monday.

Besides the presidential primary, Colombians also chose a congress, mayors, city councilmen and state assemblies in Sunday's elections.

Presidential elections take place May 26.

With 43 percent of the total vote counted, the National Elections Office said Gaviria had 1,310,000 votes, or 48 percent of the total cast for all six Liberal Party presidential candidates. In second place was former Bogota Mayor Hernando Duran with 636,593 votes, or 23 percent; third was Sen. Ernesto Samper with 488,297 votes, or 18 percent.

Canada returns trash

MONTREAL (AP) — Canada has turned up its nose and sent thousands of pounds of New York City garbage back across the border, officials say.

The trash, which originated in Brooklyn, had been sitting aboard seven trucks in the yard of a trucking company for more than a month in Delson, a town just south of Montreal.

There, it offended local nostrils, stirred some foul feelings toward the United States and was heaped onto provincial and federal agencies for action.

Officials said Monday that they had finally, formally refused the refuse and sent it home — even though there is nothing illegal about taking U.S. garbage into Canada.

Bulgarian pacts signed

SOFIA, Bulgaria (AP) — The ruling Communists, the democratic opposition and other political groups signed political agreements Monday that ensure equal terms for all parties competing in June elections.

The agreements also require that until the elections, all draft legislation must be first agreed at the current all-party talks before going to the Communist-dominated parliament for adoption, the state media reported.

Mongolian Communists gather

ULAN BATOR, Mongolia (AP) — Communist leaders met today to debate the shape of a new government for this longtime Soviet client state, and a spokesman said reformers were winning over the few remaining conservative opponents.

Before resigning Monday, the Politburo of the ruling Communist Party agreed to abolish the party's constitutional guarantee on power, hold a special party congress to choose a new leadership and hold early elections this year for a new legislature to rewrite the constitution.

"It is a crucial moment for the party," Foreign Ministry spokesman Tepbishiin Chimeddorj said today.

He said today's special meeting of the party's 120-member Central Committee could produce a new Politburo and even change its structure and name.

He said it was too early to give details of the form the new leadership of the world's second-oldest Communist country would take. The sparsely populated pastoral country of 2 million people lies between the Soviet Union and China.

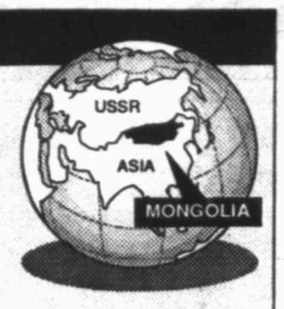

Chimeddorj said Central Committee members, meeting for a second day, had been arguing behind closed doors about the reform proposals and "practically nobody" opposed them.

"In general, we can say in the Central Committee there are radicals and conservatives. They are arguing, but the viewpoints of the conservatives also are changing," he said.

Mongolian officials did not rule out the possibility that the officials who tendered their resignations Monday might be re-elected.

Party General Secretary Jambyn Batmonh and the four other members of the Politburo resigned Monday, but he remains chairman of the Parliament and head of state. His government ti-

Mongolia At-A-Glance

Population: 2,093,000 (1989 est.), 90% are Mongol. The official language is Khalkha Mongolian.

Government: Communist.

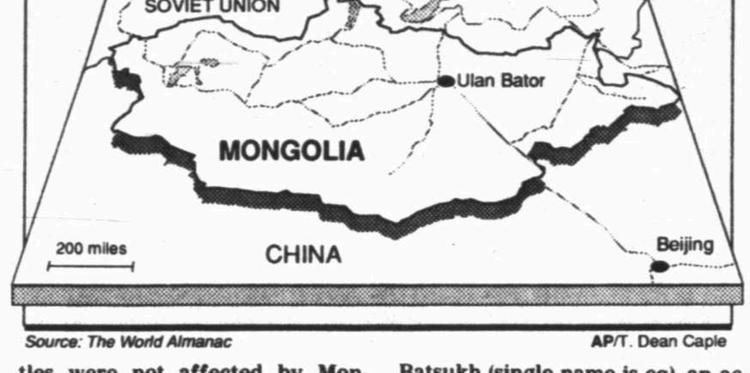

Head of State: Chairman Jambyn Batmonh.

Capital: Ulan Batar.

Economy: Main industries are food processing, textiles, chemicals, cement. Chief crops are grains. Per capita income (1984) is $1,000.00 a year.

History:

- Mongolia reached the zenith of its power in the 13th century when Genghis Khan and his successors conquered all of China and extended their influence as far west as Hungary and Poland. In later centuries, the empire dissolved and Mongolia came under the rule of China.
- With the advent of the 1911 Chinese revolution, Mongolia, with Russian backing, declared its independence. A Mongolian communist regime was established July 11, 1921.
- Mongolia has sided with the Russians in the Sino-Soviet dispute. A Mongolian-Soviet mutual assistance pact was signed January 15, 1966, and some 60,000 Soviet troops are based in the country.

ties were not affected by Monday's announcement.

Members of Mongolia's fledgling opposition said the Politburo moves were only a first step toward democracy. Since the beginning of the year, opposition demonstrations have pushed Mongolia's sleepy reform process into high gear.

"A political struggle has started, and it is only the first victory, said Batsukh (single name is cq), an activist in the New Progressive movement.

The movement today announced formation of a new wing, the National Progressive Party, to join two earlier established opposition parties — the Democratic Party and the Social Democratic Party.

The National Progressive Party's leaders said they differ from the other two opposition groups mainly in their demand for an immediate transformation of Mongolia's centralized economy into a market economyS¾.

Opposition parties are pressing for legislative elections to be held in June or July.

Mongolia in the early 1920s was the original Soviet satellite and has borrowed heavily from Soviet experience and popular culture.

Drab Soviet-style apartment buildings dot the capital, people drive Soviet-built cars past traffic police dressed in Soviet-style uniforms and, just as in Mongolia's northern neighbor, buyers queue up to make purchases.

But the reforms Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev unleashed on Eastern Europe have had an effect in Mongolia, as well. There is a new emphasis on learning languages other than Russian and the country gradually has begun opening to the outside world.

State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler pointed to the Mongolian opposition movement that surfaced in recent months and mounted peaceful rallies for democracy.

The Central Committee on Monday set a special party congress for April 10, at which a new Central Committee will be chosen.

One of the tasks of the new Parliament will be to approve a new constitution, and work on the draft has started. One of the goals of the new constitution will be to separate the roles of party and government.

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Supreme Court Judge Ertha Pascal-Trouillot today became the first woman president of Haiti in the Caribbean nation's tumultuous 186-year history.

Mrs. Pascal-Trouillot was inaugurated a day after military leader Lt. Gen. Propsper Avril, pressured by widespread protests, resigned and left the country.

Mrs. Pascal-Trouillot is to serve as interim president with a 19-member advisory council until after the country's first free elections, which could take place in three to six months.

Bush ends Nicaraguan embargo

At press conference, he calls for Central American 'Fund for Democracy'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush today lifted a five-year trade embargo against Nicaragua and asked Congress to provide $300 million quickly to help speed the transition to democracy. He said the funds should come from the Pentagon budget.

Bush also renewed his call for $500 million in assistance to Panama, where an American invasion force installed a new government last December. He said both Central American nations "need our help to heal deep wounds" after years of political and economic struggle.

Bush's 45-minute news conference coincided with a vote by the Soviet Congress granting Mikhail Gorbachev stronger powers as president. Bush said it would be "very inappropriate" for him to pass judgment on the process of reform in the Soviet Union.

It was the first time in 10 days that Bush had met with reporters, and in fielding numerous questions, he said:

—He remains opposed to higher taxes and Social Security limitations to eliminate the budget deficit. But he said he was "prepared to negotiate" with congressional Democrats over a deficit-cutting plan.

—Said a long-ago use of marijuana shouldn't disqualify a political candidate. The question arose in the context of a political flap in Texas where Ann Richards, who is seeking the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, has refused to say whether she ever used illegal drugs.

Bush also showed his zest for political combat when he said of House Democratic leader Richard Gephardt, a frequent critic, "I don't want to knock the man. Maybe he'll come up with a good idea one of these days."

Bush was asked about the telephone call he held several days go with the man who he thought — incorrectly — was Iranian President Hashemi Rafsanjani. The president admitted it was a "hoax," but said, "What's wrong with reaching out and touching someone."

"The hostages are at stake," he said.

Bush said things are going on in "back alleys" involving the fate of the eight American hostages. He stressed his determination to do all he could to free them.

The president opened his news conference by announcing that he had lifted the five-year trade embargo that former President Reagan had imposed against the Sandinista government of Daniel Ortega.

Bush called for creation of a "Fund for Democracy" to assist Nicaragua and Panama.

The president never mentioned the Contras, the rebels who received millions of dollars from the United States during the Reagan administration. But his aid request includes about $45 million to help pay costs of relocating some 10,000 Contra rebels and tens of thousands of family members from camps along the Honduran border to homes inside Nicaragua.

Bush urged Congress to speed the aid on its way by April 5 and to assist the administration in identifying Pentagon programs that could absorb the needed reductions "without having an unacceptable impact on national security."

At another point, however, he said he was prepared to submit a list of suggested Pentagon cuts on his own. "It will be done like that," he said, snapping his fingers for emphasis.

Bush's plan for aid to Panama has been bogged down in Congress over the issue of which programs would lose money to finance the assistance.

Bush called Mrs. Chamorro on Monday to brief her about the aid package, a source said.

The president paid tribute to the extraordinary worldwide move toward democracy in 1989, and said the drive for freedom "leaves us with a new challenge, how best to support newborn democracies."

"These nations need our help to heal deep wounds," he said.

North says he saw Poindexter tear up presidential finding

WASHINGTON (AP) — Oliver North says he watched John Poindexter destroy a politically embarrassing presidential document and that "I can't think of any" information he kept from his former boss in the Iran-Contra affair.

The destruction of the presidential finding depicting U.S. involvement in a straight arms-for-hostages deal with Iran was the most damaging testimony North gave Monday during his second day on the witness stand at Poindexter's trial.

"You were present when John Poindexter in his office ... ripped (the finding) into shreds?" asked Iran-Contra prosecutor Dan Webb.

"Not the way you describe," said North.

"Tear it in two," replied North.

"He threw it in a waste basket behind his desk or put it in a burn bag?" asked Webb.

The finding approved a November 1985 shipment of Hawk missiles to Iran. On the same day that he destroyed the finding, Poindexter told some House and Senate intelligence committee members he hadn't found out about the Hawk shipment until January 1986.

"Admiral Poindexter was well aware (of the Hawks shipment) ... he was aware because you kept advising him about it. Wasn't that right?" asked Webb.

"Yes," replied North.

President Reagan on Nov. 13, 1986, denied that the U.S. government was swapping arms for hostages, Webb noted, as he told North: "This document (the finding) on its face made Ronald Reagan out to be making a false statement to the American people."

"I guess so," North replied.

On cross-examining North, Poindexter's lawyer Richard Beckler tried to portray North as a mid-level staffer who was remote from the national security adviser.

"There are many things you did not tell your superiors," Beckler suggested while questioning the ex-National Security Council aide.

"I can't think of any right now," North replied, and later added, "I tried to keep my superiors apprised."

Until he was confronted with testimony he gave at his own trial last year, North maintained he didn't know his superiors were loath to use the finding as justification for the Hawks shipment.

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) — A briefing paper for Energy Secretary James Watkins was inadvertently leaked and lists various problems involving radiation contamination and reactor safety at weapons plants around the nation.

The daily briefing for Monday's operations was obtained by The Associated Press after it was sent by mistake to governors' offices by fax machine.

The two-page summary contains reports by Department of Energy operations to Watkins that were assembled by his office and were being sent back to the DOE offices.

The problems at the government's nuclear complex included "widespread low-level contamination" at a tank farm at Hanford, Wash.; the discovery of three live wires at a Savannah River reactor building that posed "imminent danger," and an effort to halt the activities of anti-nuclear protesters.

Three hours after the briefing paper was sent out, a note addressed to "all state governors" urged them to disregard and destroy the document. It wasn't known how many governors' offices had received it.

The document provides an unusual glimpse into the daily routine at Watkins' office. But DOE press secretary M.J. Jameson said it doesn't suggest an excessive number of problems. She said the report was instituted by Watkins as a way to keep tabs on all DOE operations.

"It indicates we're taking the trouble to find out what's going on and fixing it," she said.

Ms. Jameson also said she knew of no actual danger to workers or other people as a result of any of the incidents. "If there was any danger, we would have issued a press release," she said.

Among other things the document said a radiation survey in the control room of a reactor at Oak Ridge, Tenn., found that four chairs and a stool were contaminated with cobalt-60. Two chairs were disposed of and the other furniture was decontaminated.

Another item in the document said a cleanup of "widespread low-level contamination" in a tank farm at Hanford, Wash., was continuing. The efforts included cleaning of all paved roads and a radioactivity survey.

Ms. Jameson said there was a recent spill of contaminated water in the tank farm but "it wasn't hazardous to the health of anyone. It could have been if it had not been detected and cleaned up."

Other reports in the briefing paper:

—A DOE truck convoy was followed and photographed in Texas and Oklahoma last Thursday by anti-nuclear protesters in two cars. The note indicates that authorities looked into the police records of the cars' owners but found no outstanding warrants.

—A security inspector at the DOE's Rocky Flats, Colo., plant was arrested Sunday in Aurora, Colo., on suspicion of burglary, assault and rape.

Rules' changes in works at FAA

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some inexperienced Federal Aviation Administration inspectors don't have the training to prevent intoxicated crews from flying airliners, says the chairman of the House aviation subcommittee.

An FAA inspector in Fargo, N.D., allowed a Northwest Airlines jet to take off last Thursday despite a tip that the crew had been drinking for more than six hours.

"The system could fail again the same way," Rep. Jim Oberstar, D-Minn., said Monday after meeting with FAA Administrator James Busey.

Busey told Oberstar that "he was going to get their (inspectors) training upgraded to deal with situations like that," said FAA spokeswoman JoAnn Sloane.

Sloane could not provide any details of how the inspectors training would be improved.

"The FAA is going to act on this quickly or we're going to burn their behind," Oberstar said.

The three crew members on the flight from Fargo to Minneapolis were arrested upon landing last Thursday when blood tests showed excessive alcohol levels. Their licenses were revoked.

U.S. should note Armenian massacre

In this heady year of democratic revolution and high hopes, it is important to remember the darker days of our century, when millions of innocent people died at the hands of their oppressors.

The victims of mass slaughter did not all die at the hands of Nazis. Stalin or even, more recently, Cambodia's Khmer Rouge, who unleashed bloody tyranny on their civilians. And, as many Armenian-Americans recall, the Ottoman Turks massacred 1.5 million Turkish-Armenians between 1915 and 1923.

Regrettably, many U.S. officials seem to be developing a case of historic amnesia with regard to the Armenian holocaust.

Senate Minority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., led an effort to set aside April 24 to commemorate the 75th anniversary of "the Armenian genocide of 1915-1923." Initially, the measure enjoyed broad bipartisan support, but the Turkish lobby — supported by the Bush administration — succeeded in killing the resolution with a filibuster. By a 51-48 margin, the Senate voted not to cut off the filibuster.

The Bush administration argues that such a gesture would risk offending Turkey, a strategic North Atlantic Treaty Organization ally, and might jeopardize American business ties with Turkey.

Yet even President Bush is not inclined to avoid a gesture that is worthwhile, even if it could mean a loss of business.

The nation's 1 million Armenian-Americans deserve to have their time of great suffering recognized, not sandblasted off the official record.

The Turks argue that the bloody epoch of mass death was not a genocide, claiming it lacked a systematic quality. Yet, it hardly mattered to the victims if the massacre was bureaucratic and clinical or just plain barbaric savagery.

It is important that the ordeal of the Armenians be recognized; time should not be allowed to diminish the horror of the crime. Great misdeeds must be recognized as such, otherwise wounds never heal and ethnic violence simmers, waiting to erupt in kind of an eye-for-an-eye revenge.

Dole should reintroduce the resolution; this time, it should pass. Ethnic violence against minorities shreds the basic principles of American constitutional democracy. In this new era of freedom and joy, the United States must remember to show solidarity with Armenian sorrow.

Students deserved 'F'

I teach art and science at Trinity School and on Feb. 22, with a group of students from Trinity, I attended the Texas Opera Theater's production of Romeo and Juliet with other students from the Midland freshman schools and, as I was told, some English students from MHS. We were grateful for the balcony seats which were offered to us, but a surrounding group of phenomenally inconsiderate individuals totally destroyed the entertainment for anyone in the balcony and, apparently, many others in the MHS auditorium.

Since my teaching environment is nearly idyllic for me, I'm sure I don't understand why some things occur "out there" as they do, but the disgrace afforded our city by thoughtless individuals should touch the conscience of any individual with concerns for human decency.

Have you ever attended a performance of anything in which the director suddenly had to stop in mid-stream and, turning to the audience, ask for silence so that the performance could continue? I have.

How about a time when a performance was totally drowned out by the hoots, jeers, laughter and lewd comments directed at a female teacher who, while trying to bring discipline into an unruly situation, stumbled and fell noisily on the darkened stairs of the balcony? I have.

Adults acting in such a manner in public places would be arrested for disorderly conduct; the few students I saw who were successfully removed for disciplining returned in a few minutes to the folds of confusion. How can this be tolerated from those in ultimate authority?

I truly grieved for my confederate teachers and the deplorable situation with which they had to contend. I grieved for the orchestra and opera performers who had to contend with the same group and its contagious satellites scattered throughout the auditorium. For the assorted adults in attendance who got to witness the progeny of their own "me first" children, I was saddened. As my students said, they were ashamed even to be a part of the balcony! I was sorry for the majority of good kids there who were trying to act appropriately and simply enjoy a morning together but were denied these possibilities by the absence of ultimate authority.

Midland got a black eye and a resounding "F" on its report for this attempt. The dynamics involved behind such a situation will eventually destroy a community — whether from distrust and lack of confidence in those who are ordained to have ultimate authority, or from those families who choose not to teach and cherish the ideal of consideration for their fellow man.

McCarthy given credence

Victor Sheymov's revelations that the KGB had at least "two sources" of information in the U.S. State Department lends some credence to the earlier allegations of Communist infiltration of that department, posed by Sen. Joseph McCarthy. Judging by State Department performance over the past decade, information sources still exist.

However, the liberal media will very likely ignore this historical aspect of national security.

Gander findings should be disclosed

WASHINGTON — The inquiry into the worst peacetime military disaster in American history must be settled. Either the duct tape will be pried from the lips of those in government who hold this secret, or the issue will be forever consigned to silence.

Anderson

It has been more than four years since the Dec. 12, 1985, crash of a military transport plane in Gander, Newfoundland, which killed 248 American soldiers. A shroud of secrecy has kept the Canadian and U.S. governments from disclosing all they know about the tragedy.

Despite the fact that more than 100 members of Congress signed a petition to the White House last November asking for the investigation to be reopened, no hearings have been scheduled. Only a few lawmakers, such as Rep. Robin Tallon, D-S.C., appear to have the fire in their stomachs to find out whether the plane was brought down by terrorists or just ice on the wings, as the official line goes.

The answer may now be left to a small team of investigators from the General Accounting Office, which has been assigned to find out how well the Pentagon, FBI and National Transportation Safety Board handled the accident investigation. Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich., ordered the GAO investigation.

So far, all the federal agencies that have dabbled in the Gander case claim they were only marginally involved in the accident investigation that was headed up by Canadians. U.S. officials have treated this disaster as if it was only worth a quick glance.

The FBI is the most suspicious mute, keeping secret 200 of the 247 pages of its accident report. It now appears that the FBI will not even tell the GAO what is on those pages. The FBI has informed GAO investigators that they can look at some of the report if they agree not to use it in their findings.

When Congress gets the GAO report at the end of this month, the lawmakers will have to decide whether or not the Gander crash deserves more investigation.

As we have already reported, there is strong evidence to bolster the theory that the plane was blown out of the sky by terrorists. The flight was carrying American soldiers home from their peacekeeping duties in the Middle East.

For starters, four of the nine members of the Canadian Aviation Safety Board concluded in 1988 that the plane exploded because "fire broke out on board while the aircraft was in flight, possibly due to a detonation in the cargo department."

There is also growing attention being given to reports that six coffin-sized boxes were loaded onto the plane when it left Cairo. A former Pentagon investigator told us that he has reason to believe the boxes may have carried bodies of American hostages and soldiers who died in a still-secret rescue mission in Lebanon.

The Canadian government is resisting pressure to hold a coroner's inquest into the deaths.

Exxon spill controversy becoming absurd

The Valdez oil spill spectacle — a spectacle of hysteria mixed with greed — has reached critical mass as absurdity.

The U.S. government has now filed criminal charges against Exxon which, to win, hinge on proving the corporation knowingly and willfully failed to provide competent crewmen.

Reese

That's absurd on its face. Exxon would do well to fight it out in court, provided of course it doesn't have to go to court in Alaska.

First, the absurdity of the criminal charges. Even if we stipulate, just for the sake argument, Exxon officials are as calloused as an unreconstructed Scrooge about the fate of otters and sea birds, no corporate official in their right mind would be unconcerned about the fate of a multi-million dollar ship and its multi-million dollar cargo.

In other words, you can be dead sure Exxon never said to its personnel department, run down to the bars along the waterfront and find a few derelicts to man this huge ship.

Accidents do happen. Perfectly qualified and credentialed people make mistakes. Competent drivers get killed by the thousands because competence doesn't mean you can't have lapses of attention or make errors in judgment. So the criminal charges are political baloney, an attempt to shakedown Exxon and win a cheer from the environmental mob.

When are the rest of us going to accept our share of the responsibility for the Valdez oil spill? After all, Alaskans love to sell the oil. We love to burn it. If you want oil, you must move it on the high seas.

Let's dampen down the Utopian heifer dust. There are no systems, plans or schemes which will prevent future oil spills. Given the volume of oil being moved, the uncertainty of nature, the fallibility of all humans, future oil spills are a certainty.

It seems to me Exxon has acted responsibly and there is no justification for the intense hostility directed at the corporation. Once that ship hit the reef, there was not much that could be done that wasn't done. You can't assemble crews and moved them thousands of miles faster than oil can flow a few feet through a hole.

Exxon put 10,000 men on the cleanup and has spent already over $1 billion. That's a lot of money for 1,000 sea otters, 140 bald eagles, and about 37,000 other sea birds. That's a lot of money for an accident that will cause no permanent damage to the environment. Yet, in addition to the criminal charges, federal, state and private suits filed or planned total around 250. Obviously the people up in Alaska think their ship has come in and it's called, the Exxon treasury.

Yet, no one in Alaska wants to cap the wells and give up the income from the oil business. No one in the Lower 48 wants to turn off their furnaces and park their cars. That being the case, we have to recognize that oil spills and fires and explosions are a natural part of an industrialized world. We can do what we can to minimize them but we can't avoid them.

We should not, however, allow environmental extremists, political demagogues, yellow journalists, and greedy lawyers to whip us into a hysterical frenzy. Nor should we treat Exxon as if were the Third Reich. Valdez was an accident, not an act of war. Not a single human life was lost and no permanent damage was caused to the environment.

If we don't come to our senses, however, permanent damage will be done to our economy.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Exner approaching bittersweet ending

WASHINGTON — Does the name Judith Campbell Exner ring a bell?

She is a woman, now coming to the end of her life, who was used and abused by three powerful men.

Safire

Though aiming at Nixon misdeeds, the report issued by Senators Frank Church, John Tower and Gary Hart touched gingerly on an episode during the Kennedy years in which our government hired leaders of the Mafia to kill Fidel Castro.

In a veiled footnote, the report told of "a close friend of the president" who was also a close friend of Sam Giancana, head of Chicago's Mafia:

"White House telephone logs show seventy instances of phone contact between the White House and the president's friend..."

Something about the phraseology troubled me at the time; as a practiced obscurantist, I sensed an avoidance of revelation.

Finally the coin dropped: the writers were convoluting the sentences to avoid using a gender-specific pronoun.

Always "the friend," never "he" or "she"; that meant the senators did not want to reveal that the liaison was a woman, in which case the adjective "close" would suggest an intimate relationship.

It struck me that this was no ordinary peccadillo.

The president of the United States was sleeping with the mistress of the head of organized crime in Chicago.

The FBI, wiretapping the Mafioso, was picking up calls made by the woman to the president of the U.S., until J. Edgar Hoover went into the Oval Office with the evidence.

That was not all: Sam Giancana was identified as the Mafia leader chosen by the Kennedy administration to arrange the assassination of Fidel Castro after the failure of the Bay of Pigs invasion.

After being scheduled to testify about this by the Senate committee, this particular Mafioso, under police protection, was shot dead in his Oak Park, Ill., home.

This confluence of events raised enough questions to seem newsworthy, and I did a piece titled "The President's Friend"; the executive editor promptly ordered up a front-page story and Judith Campbell Exner became momentarily famous.

That column cost me the valued friendship of a fellow columnist, an admirer of JFK's who accurately predicted that most of the subsequent coverage would lip-smackingly dwell on the fooling around in the White House — how many others, cloud over Camelot, did Jackie know, etc.

It was hard to get investigators to focus on the core issue: Was the Mafia blackmailing the president, or was the president using the woman as a conduit to the Mafia?

Why was Giancana rubbed out just before he was to testify?

Too hot to touch.

Senator Tower pretended that Giancana's testimony would have been unimportant; the U.S. attorney in Chicago (Sam Skinner, now the secretary of transportation) said murder was not a federal affair.

No politician or lawman wanted to question the longtime friend and associate of Giancana's who first had an affair with Judy Campbell, then introduced her to his Mafia friend, and two months later introduced her to another friend, the candidate for president.

That double go-between was Frank Sinatra.

In later years, Mrs. Exner wrote for pay that she had passed manila envelopes between her disparate lovers; that damning assertion is uncorroborated.

She considered Giancana kind, Kennedy cold, Sinatra — who called her a "hustler," and was later awarded the Medal of Freedom by President Reagan — cruel.

The woman whipsawed by the world of power proudly points to a bedside picture of a handsome young man: the baby she put up for adoption 24 years ago — fathered by neither president, Mafioso, nor matchmaker — had tracked down his birth mother, tenderly introduced himself, and is a comfort in her last months.

Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON – In less than three years of doing business in Japan, Chris Rogers has helped win millions of dollars in sales for his company. But he is hardly satisfied. In fact, he's downright frustrated.

Rogers, 27, a Japanese speaker, is well-acquainted with Japan's corporate culture. He flies to Japan frequently in his job as Pacific Rim sales director for Bohemia Inc., the world's largest producer of laminated wood beams, located in Eugene, Ore.

"We've gone out of our way to do things the Japanese way," Rogers said recently, while complaining that in turn, Japan has hardly reciprocated with its American business partners.

To Rogers, Japan has little incentive to reduce its chronic trade gap with America.

He figured, for example, that his company could do eight to 10 times its present volume of business in Japan – except for the many trade barriers the Japanese have erected on U.S. forest product imports. At the same time, Japanese goods continue to flow into this country at a record pace, with no restrictions.

Rogers' complaint, echoed increasingly in American business circles, reflects a growing frustration with U.S. efforts to get Japan to open its markets to U.S. goods.

Those efforts are to enter another phase on Wednesday, as another round of thorny trade talks between American and Japanese officials gets under way in Washington.

The talks – dubbed "Super 301" by the participants – are aimed at eliminating an array of Japanese trade barriers that U.S. officials say prevent fair competition by American makers of everything from wood products to satellites and supercomputers.

But trade experts expect little immediate progress. In the absence of progress, sentiment is growing here for the United States to retaliate with barriers of its own.

Mindful of the pressure from American business and congressional leaders, the Bush administration has said it will not attempt to gloss over any failures in its trade talks with Japan.

"If it's a sow's ear, we'll call it a sow's ear," said Deputy U.S. Trade Representative Linn Williams, leader of a delegation involved with Japan in separate trade talks known as the Structural Impediments Initiative, or SII for short.

At issue is the continuing U.S. trade deficit with Japan, estimated at $50 billion a year for the past three years.

To date, there has been hardly any progress in either the Super 301 discussions or the SII talks.

Faced with summer deadlines to do something, the Bush administration is under growing pressure to wring concessions out of Japan.

Earlier this month, Bush pressed the issue in talks with Japanese Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu in Palm Springs, Calif., but nothing concrete came out them. On Sunday, Bush dispatched Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher to Tokyo to restate U.S. concerns.

If Bush concludes the Super 301 talks have failed, Congress has authorized him to retaliate with import tariffs of up to 100 percent on any Japanese-made products he chooses.

But U.S. trade experts say the administration is reluctant to do that, preferring instead that Japan permit U.S. negotiators to come away with some sign of success.

Enter the American forest products industry. Stephen Lovett, vice president of the National Forest Products Association, said the climate is right for progress – at least with wood products.

Lovett noted that U.S. wood exports to Japan are "not a really big ticket item" – about $2.8 billion in 1989 – and suggested that Japan could easily resolve the matter.

"It's a win-win situation," Lovett said. "If the (Japanese) government would open this sector, we could deliver high-quality materials at low cost, improving Japan's quality of life and helping to settle these trade cases."

"The issue is political," he said, adding that "you've got to turn public opinion against the government in Japan."

Lovett, whose organization represents more than 1,000 U.S. wood producers including Georgia-Pacific and Weyerhauser, said the United States should "retaliate hard – do something that makes them hurt for awhile" if the Japanese balk at concessions.

NATION IN BRIEF

1,000 rally for disabled bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Using their arms or whatever movement they could, dozens of people crawled out of their wheelchairs and up the steps of the U.S. Capitol to dramatize their demand for rights for people with disabilities.

About 1,000 people rallied at the base of the Capitol steps Monday to show their support for legislation extending rights to the disabled.

"We're not asking for any favors," said I. King Jordan, president of Gallaudet University, who also is deaf.

The focus of the protest was the Americans with Disabilities Act, which passed the Senate last year but has bogged down in the House.

The measure would outlaw discrimination based on physical or mental disability, particularly in the job market.

D.C. mayor returns

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mayor Marion Barry, arrested in January on a charge of possession of cocaine, is returning to the nation's capital after seven weeks of substance abuse treatment.

A mayoral spokeswoman, Vera Jackson, ended speculation about the mayor's whereabouts, saying he would hold a news conference in Washington later today. Barry has been enrolled in treatment centers in Florida and South Carolina since his arrest on the charge of possession of crack cocaine.

Two sides closer

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Gov. Gaston Caperton and union leaders resumed talks today in the state's first teachers strike, which has forced the cancellation of classes for half of the public school students.

Caperton spokesman G.C. Morse said no agreement had been reached in Monday's talks but the two sides were closer to a settlement.

The strike began last Wednesday in a dispute over wages and benefits. Teachers stayed away from class Monday despite a warning from the governor that they could be fired for striking in violation of state law..

Union leaders have said they won't go back to work until Caperton calls a special legislative session to consider pay raises; the governor said he won't consider calling a special session until the teachers go back to work.

Pickets spread to 46 of the state's 55 counties Monday. Classes were canceled in 29 counties, leaving nearly 150,000 of the state's 328,000 public school students at home.

Census criticized

WASHINGTON -- Minority groups are complaining that the U.S. Census Bureau isn't trying hard enough to recruit blacks, Hispanics and other minority workers as it maps plans to hire 300,000 census takers this year.

But the census bureau's Ray Bancroft said, "We've made extra efforts all across the board in reaching into the minority communities, using minority media and minority spokespersons to get support for the census...."

Bancroft said the bureau hopes to hire the same percentage of minorities that are represented in the civilian labor force.

Census takers will go door to door from late April through June, visiting the residences of those who do not return the questionnaires mailed to their homes and apartments.

The count is used to redraw congressional boundaries and appropriate federal funding for various state and local programs.

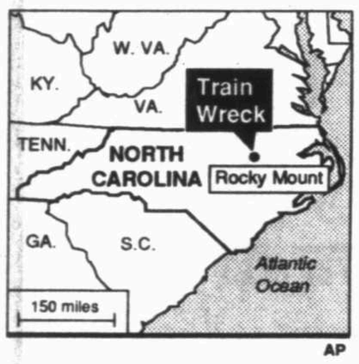

Salk vaccine OK'd

WASHINGTON (AP) — Testing of an experimental vaccine on California AIDS patients will be expanded and extended to individuals who are infected with the AIDS virus but have not developed symptoms of the disease.

The Food and Drug Administration on Monday granted permission for further testing of the vaccine developed by Dr. Jonas Salk.

The vaccine, which uses an inactivated virus, is being tested as a treatment for AIDS rather than as an agent to prevent someone from acquiring the fatal disease, which destroys the body's ability to fight infection.

Amtrak passenger train rammed, 25 injured

AP

ROCKY MOUNT, N.C. (AP) — A freight engine rammed an Amtrak train sitting at a station early today, injuring 25 people, officials said.

Amtrak's northbound 19-car Silver Meteor, which runs from Florida to New York City, was about to leave with 471 passengers when it was hit at 1:23 a.m. by an engine pulling 96 freight cars, said Amtrak spokeswoman Pat Duricka.

Twenty-five people were injured, all of them aboard the passenger train, said Lindsay Leckie, a spokesman for CSX Transporation, operator of the freight locomotive.

Nursing supervisor June Williams at Nash General Hospital said 21 patients were treated, most for sprains. All had been released by 6 a.m. except for one who was being examined for a possible compression fracture and another who was suffering chest pains.

Three passenger coaches derailed but didn't turn over, Ms. Duricka said from Amtrak headquarters in Washington.

What has been happening amounts to a virtual Social Revolution where smoking and drinking are concerned. And whether they do or don't participate, most people have strong feelings about it.

Williams confident of victory

Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram

Republican gubernatorial hopeful Clayton Williams casts his vote this morning at the Saddle Club South Clubhouse in Midland. Williams is hopeful of winning the GOP nomination without a runoff.

By Julie Hillrichs
Staff Writer

Republican Clayton Williams arrived at Midland Airpark Monday a little groggy from a whirlwind tour of Texas, but a surprise party given by supporters revived the gubernatorial frontrunner's hopes for an outright victory in today's GOP primary.

"There's a good chance we can win without a runoff," Williams told supporters at the Tarmac Touchdown Party, which was the last stop for Williams in an 11-city tour of Texas before today's Republican primary elections.

The tour Sunday and Monday gave the candidate one last chance to thank supporters and to urge Texans to get out the vote.

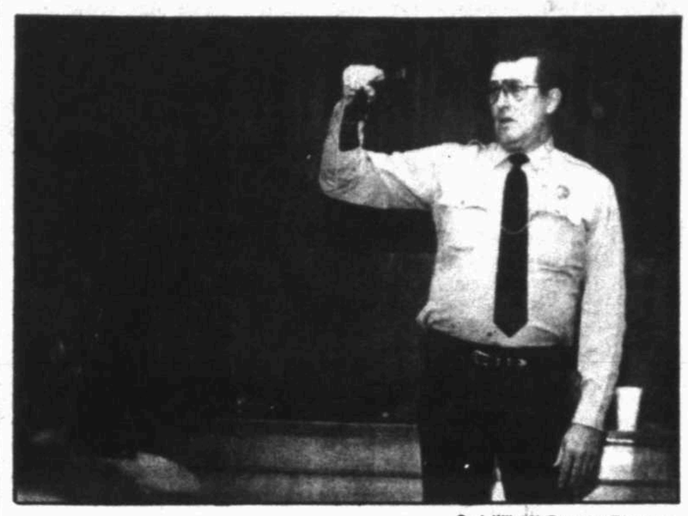

Despite six Republicans in the race, recent statewide polls have indicated that Williams is in position to win the GOP gubernatorial nomination without a runoff. The most recent polls show him with more than 50 percent of the Republican vote.

The Republicans have fielded three other leading candidates, including Texas Railroad Commissioner Kent Hance, Dallas attorney Tom Luce and former Secretary of State Jack Rains.

In the Democratic primary, State Treasurer Ann Richards, former Gov. Mark White and Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox are seeking their party's nomination.

A cautiously optimistic Williams said he hoped for an outright victory, and would remain cautiously

Officer tells class what life is like for Texas Ranger

By David Morris
Staff Writer

Sgt. Joaquin "Jack" Jackson has seen enough action in 24 years as a Texas Ranger that he can't put his finger on his most memorable case.

But he will never forget the three weeks he spent with Nick Nolte on the set of "Extreme Prejudice," a 1987 action film co-starring Powers Boothe and Rip Torn.

"I enjoyed it up to a point," said Jackson, whom Nolte used as a model for his portrayal of a Texas Ranger in the film. "Nolte called and wanted to spend three or four days with me and it ended up being three or four weeks."

After the movie was released, Jackson said, he wondered if anything he taught Nolte had sunk in.

"The movie was accurate on the dress ... and the weapons he carried," Jackson concedes. "But some of the stuff I didn't agree with at all," he said, referring to some of the more glamorized portions of the film. "A lot of people came up to me later and said 'Is that movie the story of your life?' and I said, 'Heck, no, that ain't the story of my life.'"

Jackson, who lives in Alpine, was in Midland Monday not to talk about his film consulting days, but to tell Alamo Junior High School pupils what it's really like to be a Texas Ranger.

"A Ranger has to be a lot more educated than he used to be," Jackson told a group of seventh-grade social studies pupils. "It involves a lot of criminal, scientific and forensic type work."

And, Jackson said, the image of the Texas Ranger as a gun-toting man on horseback is rapidly fading.

Although armed to the teeth himself with a shotgun, .45-caliber revolver, .357 magnum revolver, .45-caliber pistol, .223-caliber rifle and a 30-30 rifle, Jackson said today's Ranger is more likely to ride a helicopter than a horse.

He is also more apt to be found scanning a computer screen for clues than searching for tracks on some rocky bluff.

"In 24 years we've moved from horseback to computers," Jackson said. "We're turning into a computer society...and the Rangers are moving into that."

And while all 94 Texas Rangers are men, Jackson said, that could change, too.

"There's no women in the Rangers, but there will be someday," he predicted. "It's just a matter of time. I don't have any question about a woman's ability to conduct a criminal investigation."

Jackson's talk, if nothing else, cleared up a few misconceptions about Texas' most famous law enforcement organization.

"We thought they rode on horses," said 13-year-old Joye Lewis after having a look at Jackson's gun collection.

Her friend Jennifer Walker, 12, concurred.

"I thought they rode horses and didn't use helicopters and computers," she said.

Ed Wilson, Alamo social studies chairman, said he invited Jackson to speak as part of a unit on the American West.

"This makes it real," Wilson said. "It's real-life experience, not something that's just read from a book or told by a teacher."

Tye students ardent supporters of GOP candidate Royce Owens

EDITOR'S NOTE: Royce X. Owens, a Republican candidate for governor, is one of the so-called "minor candidates" who qualified for the primary ballot but did not have broad statewide support. Here, Abilene Reporter-News columnist Bill Whitaker chronicles an Owens appearance before a group of some of his most ardent fans — the students at the school where Owens works as a janitor.

By Bill Whitaker

TYE (AP) — With the primary campaign all but over, Merkel gubernatorial candidate Royce X. Owens stood before his most fervent supporters Friday and told them what he was sure he'd accomplished after so much statewide stumping.

"If I haven't done anything else, I have told millions of people where Tye Elementary and Merkel is," he said. "I've even had to spell Tye for 'em."

With talk like that, it's no wonder Tye Elementary School youngsters are firmly behind Royce, who, besides being a Republican gubernatorial candidate, Vietnam veteran and skilled rattlesnake handler, is also the campus' beloved janitor.

Certainly, one doesn't have to inquire too deeply to understand why the school paper, the Tiger Times, overwhelmingly endorsed Royce for governor.

"The whole group just really thinks he's a great guy," said 10-year-old Tiger Times Editor Bandi Kilpatrick.

When polling places close and winners are sorted out tonight, I don't suppose Royce's nine-month-long campaign will count for much, but don't try telling that to Tye Elementary kids. He's a winner in this stretch of West Texas.

To quote one youngster, "He has good standards."

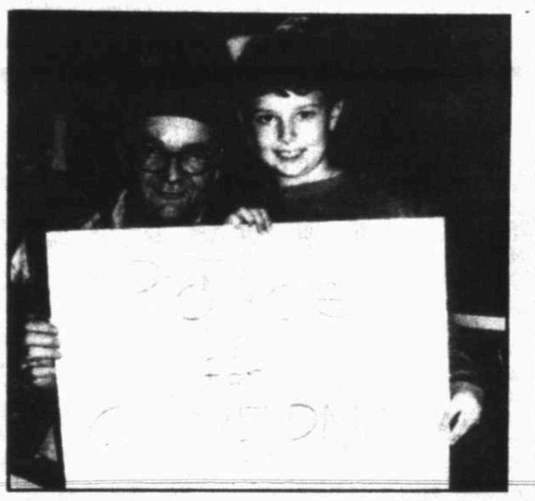

Nevertheless, when the 54-year-old gubernatorial janitor — decked out in running shoes, bluejeans and a USS New Jersey gimme cap — got up before Mrs. Gayle Maxey's fifth-grade class to do a show-and-tell on running for Texas governor, he faced tough questioning.

Still, this was clearly a sympathetic audience.

When 11-year-old Codie Carter asked Royce about the problem of crime, Royce offered that his inclination was to be pretty tough. He recalled being asked that question before by another group.

"I told 'em I could make Attila the Hun look like a Boy Scout, but I don't think anyone's ready for that yet."

Trey Holley's fears about trucks hauling refuse one way and produce the other prompted Royce to remind the 11-year-old there were quite likely laws addressing the cleanliness of such shippers. Besides, he said, such produce might "probably stink a little, but it'd be all right."

AP Laserphoto

Tye Elementary School custodian Royce Owens, with fourth-grader Bandi Kilpatrick, talked to students about what it was like to campaign for the Republican gubernatorial nomination.

A question about the speed limit — always a sore point in Texas' wide open spaces — moved Royce to suggest raising it to 70 mph because "more people do 70 than 65." However, Michael Collazo, 10, did confound Royce when he asked what was to keep motorists then from driving 75 mph or even faster.

Other topics involved the danger of building flimsy cars of plastic rather than metal ("You'd just better be a better driver"); career choices ("There's nothing wrong with being a newspaperman or custodian or waitress") and whether he could vote for himself ("You bet I'm gonna vote for me.").

Royce likes most of his opponents, though Ann Richards and Jim Mattox, he claimed, seldom acknowledged the office-seeking janitor when he was in the room. He thought it might be because he was a Republican, but Democrat Theresa Hearn-Haynes, he said, received the same shabby treatment.

Road, bridge department to get building

By Julie Hillrichs
Staff Writer

Midland County commissioners are seeking a permanent fix to the decade-long problem of overcrowding at the Midland County Barn and Maintenance Garage.

Commissioners Monday voted unanimously to buy a new 11.5-square-foot building on 15 acres of land in the Fairground Park addition for housing the Road and Bridge and Vehicle Maintenance departments.

Precinct 2 Commissioner Guy McCrary said the acquisition is part of an ongoing effort to improve the working conditions and efficiency of county employees.

"Our maintenance barn has been inadequate for many years, and money spent to upgrade the present facility would be extremely wasteful in the long run," McCrary said.

The land, which is contiguous with the County Exhibit Building property located on East Highway 80, will house the Road and Bridge and Vehicle Maintenance Departments.

McCrary said the purchase price of $182,000 will be paid in two installments, with $100,000 coming from the current year's operating funds, and the balance due in early 1991.

The transaction is expected to be finalized by the end of the month, he said.

McCrary described the property as an "excellent investment" for the citizens of Midland County because "it addresses the need for better maintenance facilities, which will improve worker productivity."

The Exhibit Building also could be expanded on to the new property if need arises in the future, he said.

Shuttle resumes journey home

FORT BLISS (AP) — Space shuttle Atlantis resumed its journey back to Kennedy Space Center atop a modified Boeing 747 today despite poor weather along the flight route, NASA officials said.

The aircraft took off from Biggs Army Airfield at 9 a.m. MST and was to arrive at Columbus Air Force Base in Mississippi three hours later for refueling, said NASA spokesman Bruce Buckingham.

A military transport plane took off 45 minutes before the jet to check on the weather, Buckingham said.

Based on weather observations during the three-hour refueling stop, a decision will be made whether to continue on to Cape Canaveral, Fla., a two-hour flight, Buckingham said.

"If they can swing around it (the rain) or beat it out," the jet will take off from Columbus and arrive at Kennedy Space Center this evening, Buckingham said.

Forecasters were reporting rain, poor visibility and low clouds along much of the route, Buckingham said.

The Boeing 747 landed at Biggs on Sunday for refueling during the shuttle's piggyback ride from Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., to Cape Canaveral. Bad weather, a threat to the shuttle's exterior tiles, has kept Atlantis grounded.

Brewster Memorial Hospital hunting for administrator

ALPINE (AP) — Struggling Brewster Memorial Hospital has begun searching for a new administrator but will not immediately replace its resigning staff surgeon, said Dorothy Stumberg, hospital district board president.

The board voted last week to accept the resignation of Hospital Administrator Don Karl, effective March 30. Karl had been at the hospital three years.

"It isn't a very good time, but we thought it was inevitable. He's a bright, bright young man ... we cannot keep him from progressing," Ms. Stumberg said.

In early January, Karl predicted the West Texas hospital would fold within two years unless rural hospitals began receiving higher reimbursements from Medicare and Medicaid programs.

Texas led the nation for the fourth consecutive year in the number of hospital closings with 15 closures in 1989. Seventy-three percent of those that closed were in rural areas. Two of the hospitals reopened later.

Brewster, a 31-bed hospital, has struggled financially for several years because of the inadequate federal reimbursements and the poverty of its older, rural patients. If it closed, the nearest hospitals equipped to handle complicated emergencies would be in Odessa, 170 miles away, and in El Paso, 212 miles away.

The hospital also is loosing its chief surgeon, Dr. Charles Gross, who planned to close his practice March 23 and move to Washington state. Ms. Stumberg said Brewster's laboratory department head, Dr. Ron Ballew, will serve as interim administrator until a new one was chosen. After Karl's replacement is chosen, the board will decide whether to replace Gross.

When called for comment by The Associated Press, there was no answer at Gross' office or at Karl's office.

Gross told the Big Bend Sentinel the number of indigent patients accepted by the hospital was too high, but did not give a reason for his departure.

"His loss is great. It's hard to keep a surgeon in a small hospital.

There are not many surgeries," Ms. Stumberg said. "He's been an asset to the hospital and he has increased our revenues and this has been a great loss to us."

Ms. Stumberg said revenues increase with use of X-ray equipment, labs, the operating and recovery rooms that are often used in surgeries.

"We've had several (surgeons) come and go. It took us a while to recruit this man," she said.

Meanwhile in Pecos, residents were awaiting the arrival of a new physician who recently signed a contract to practice medicine in Pecos. Reeves County Hospital Administrator Ron Patterson said the addition means the hospital can reconsider reopening an intensive care unit and should reduce the number of patients sent to other hospitals.

Patterson said the new physician would increase hospital revenue by $300,000 a year.

Power plant has equipment failure

GLEN ROSE (AP) — An equipment failure that triggered emergency safety systems at the Comanche Peak Nuclear Power Plant had a positive side — proving that the systems worked, officials said.

On Monday afternoon, TU Electric declared its first "unusual event" at the plant, located 40 miles south of Fort Worth. The occurrence is the least serious of emergency classifications at nuclear power plants.

A problem in the power supply to certain instruments triggered an injection of cooling water into the reactor's core, TU Electric spokesman Dave Fiorelli said. There was no danger of a radiation leak during the 55-minute event, which was declared at 3:30 p.m., he said.

The plant, which began loading fuel Feb. 9, was licensed for low-level power use in February, but has not begun producing power, TU officials said.

"It's not surprising when you're starting up to have some of these false signals generate some safety equipment ... but you want to get to the bottom of it," said Nuclear Regulatory Commission spokesman Joe Gilliland.

"It doesn't have any real meaning from a public safety standpoint or a plant standpoint because they have not started up the reactor," Gilliland said.

The president of the watchdog group Citizens Association for Sound Energy, said her group was not unduly concerned by the event.

"While it is a concern, it isn't the kind of thing the public should start packing bags and leave town about," said Juanita Ellis.

Ms. Ellis, who sits on a TU plant advisory committee, founded CASE in 1974 to expose structural flaws at the plant and force corrective action.

"It's a concern that it happened," she said. "Once it did happen, it's good to know the system did work and did shut the plant down."

And, a whistleblower who testified of construction lapses during the plant's licensing hearings in 1983, said she was not surprised by Monday's episode.

"It's not surprising in the testing stages to have problems like that," said former employee Dobie Hatley. "That's pretty common with all nuclear plants. That's why they test first."

During 1988 there were 212 unusual events reported at U.S. nuclear power plants, Fiorelli said, with most occurring during start-up and early operations.

Gilliland said the NRC would investigate the episode.

Fiorelli said it wasn't immediately known whether the occurrence would alter the plant's schedule.

"We'll be doing a full review of the event in the days to come and the results of that review will tell us whether or not this is going to have any impact on the schedule," he said.

The nuclear chain reaction is not scheduled to begin until early April, with operations beginning this summer, Fiorelli said.

The $9 billion plant took 15 years to build, and the road to its license was blocked by citizen groups who said they were concerned about safety.

But the NRC said in granting the license last month that commission staff members were satisfied that "issues that could have an impact on plant safety have been acceptably resolved."

The only other nuclear power plant in the state is the South Texas Project near Bay City.

Museums plan lecture series

Staff Report

The Permian Basin Petroleum Museum and the Museum of the Southwest are hosting a lecture series presented by the Smithsonian Institution Saturday and Sunday.

The lectures are being held at the Petroleum Museum and the Marian Blakemore Planetarium, Haley Park.

The series begins with "Computers and Aerospace," presented by Paul Ceruzzi of the National Air and Space Museum, at 2 p.m. Saturday at the Petroleum Museum.

Next up is a 7 p.m. lecture Saturday presented by Jim Zimbelman of the National Air and Space Museum. The lecture, "A Closeup Look at Mars," will be presented at the Museum of the Southwest's Marian Blakemore Planetarium.

Then, at 1:30 p.m. Sunday, Douglas Owsley of the National Museum of Natural History, will speak at the Marian Blakemore Planetarium on "Face to Face with Our Ancestors: Historic Cemetaries Reveal the Past."

The series closes at the Petroleum Museum with a 4 to 5:30 p.m. lecture Sunday presented by Owsley called "Secrets of the Human Skeleton."

Admission for each lecture is $4. For more information or to make reservations call the Petroleum Museum, Interstate 20 West, or the Museum of the Southwest, 683-2882.

Man scuffles with police

Staff Report

A 20-year-old Midland man was arrested Monday after scuffling with police officers and attempting to escape, Midland Police Department reports show.

Reports said two officers responded to a domestic dispute in the 4400 block of Lanham Street at about 11 a.m. Monday, where the man allegedly threatened them with a pair of scissors.

After dropping the scissors and being placed under arrest, the man scuffled with the officers before running out the door and jumping into the back of a truck going east on Lanham Street, officers said.

The officers ordered the truck's driver to stop, and when the suspect scuffled with them again, one of the officers struck him on the knee with a baton to subdue him, reports show.

Bond for the man has not yet been set, MPD spokesman Cpl. Jim White said this morning.

Robbery suspect caught

Staff Report

Following a Crime Stoppers tip, police arrested a Midland man Monday in connection with the aggravated robbery Feb. 20 of a 15-year-old girl, a Midland police Department spokesman said today.

Robert Micheal Lewis, 47, was arrested about 11:20 a.m. and charged with aggravated robbery. Bond was set at $50,000 by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine.

Lewis is accused of forcing the victim into a car at knifepoint at the Walgreens Drug Store parking lot at the intersection of Illinois Avenue and Andrews Highway.

The girl escaped from the car and ran into Walgreens for help, and the suspect ran away on foot, MPD spokesman Cpl. Jim White said.

Stolen were a checkbook and a set of keys, White said.

TYE: Owens talks about his campaign

(From 1B)

"She's a tough competitor," Royce said of Ms. Hearn-Haynes, "and I'm glad she's my friend."

He also gave the students an idea of what Texas was like outside of Tye, a small community of 1,600 just west of Abilene. Of the cities he visited, Houston was "biggest, but I found it easier to drive around in than Dallas or Fort Worth."

In Fort Worth, he said it was "hard to find a parking spot."

In Houston, he was charged $1.62 for a cup of coffee — and he didn't stick around to see if refills cost anything.

He enjoyed the food at a plush candidates forum at the Dallas Country Club.

"I could learn to live in that high-life of society."

He said he was sometimes the only candidate to show up at functions. When he was the only Republican to surface at a candidates forum sponsored by Texas A&M, Royce didn't hesitate to make political hay of the fact with the Aggies.

"I told 'em no one else loved 'em."

He told students he was bombarded by letters from various organizations wanting to know his positions. For instance, an organization pushing services for the aged contacted him and wanted to know his intentions.

"Well, we all age so I can relate to that good," he said.

On the other hand, he was asked if he was going to ban chocolate in the state of Texas.

"I like chocolate," he assured the kids, "so I'm not gonna ban it."

More than anything else, Royce asked the kids to rely on their own fortitude rather than counting on others — and he urged them to keep well-informed by reading daily newspapers and watching the TV news.

And when Eric Collazo asked about education, he took the same tone.

"You need to want to succeed and your parents need to want you to succeed, to guide you."

Area Bell employees honored for involvement

Staff Report

Special awards and gifts for 1989 community relations involvement were presented to 60 of the 700 Southwestern Bell Telephone employees in the West Texas area at the sixth annual Awards Dinner held recently, according to Darlene Gifford, area manager-public relations.

Bell Community Relations Teams were formed in Texas in 1983 and are active throughout the company.

Four Bell Community Relations Teams of volunteers serve 20 West Texas towns and are involved in such projects as Christmas in April, Meals on Wheels, Permian Basin Food Bank, Feed for Need and the Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children.

Categories include speakers, individual achievement and outstanding leadership awrads. Special awards went to the Telephone Pioneers for Red Ribbon activity and to the Communication Workers of America for United Way and other community involvements.

From the 55 projects reviewed, those taking top honors in Midland were Tony Thatcher, Sammye Koonce, Rick Harper, Steve Deaver and Pam Harr. Others honored were Johnny Amburn, Jeannie Brady, Cynthia Hicks, John Steele, Phil Orr, Mike Murphy, Vicky Hailey, Marie Cox and Donna Stansel.

"The involvement of our Bell employees in raising dollars through many worthwhile projects, such as the arts and crafts show, are outstanding," said Ms. Gifford. "It enables our employees to support many activities, and organizations such as the Soup Kitchen and the Children's Clinic."

OPPORTUNITIES FOR VOLUNTEERS

Why not give the best? Give yourself. Be a community volunteer. Here are a few of the opportunities currently available through the Volunteer Center of Midland.

■ Hey, can you spare a ball game or a frozen yogurt? Individuals or married couples are needed to share some time with a single parent child. Two to three hours a week of planned activities or just shared time can make all the difference in a child's life. This opportunity can be easily worked into any schedule.

■ Here's a short term project for a volunteer with a background in sociology or psychology. Assist an agency providing meals to seniors with reassessments. The home visits take approximately 30 minutes. This is a flexible, daytime opportunity.

■ Share your skills or gain office experience by helping nonprofit agencies as a receptionist or clerk. Duties may include light typing, filing, and phones. A four hour weekly commitment, daytime hours are requested.

■ The art of writing is the key to this need. Volunteers skilled in caligraphy or very neat printing are needed to write names on 900 awards. Also assistance is needed with the mailing of these awards. This short term assignment must be completed by April 15.

■ April will bring several one-time events that will utilize volunteers of all ages. Individuals, families, groups are encouraged to participate. 1. Glad-Bag-A-Thon, Saturday, March 31, 9:30a.m.- 1 p.m.; 2. Golf tournament, Friday, April 20, 7:30 a.m.-6:30 p.m.; Earth Day Recyclying Event, Sunday, April 22, 1 p.m.-5:00 p.m.; Christmas in April, Saturday, April 28.

■ Upcoming trainings: An agency that counsels sexual abuse victims has a training scheduled Tuesday, March 27-May 1.

Training for volunteers who will role model positive parenting will begin Tuesday, March 20.

■ Have a question or a problem? The only number you need is 697-HELP. Call Information and Referral Midland — 697-HELP.

For more information on how you can volunteer, please call the Volunteer Center at 697-8781.

"It would be nice to win the primary without a runoff," he said. "It would be good for the Republican Party and for Clayton Williams' body."

After the party, Williams said he planned to get a "good night's sleep" at his north Midland Home. The GOP frontrunner was scheduled to vote at 9:30 a.m. at his precinct polling place, which is the Saddle Club South Clubhouse.

Turnout was brisk this morning in Midland, said Midland County Election Administrator Bettye Calvert, although there were no local predictions on the day's turnout from voting in the first hours at the polls.

The secretary of state's office predicted a turnout of 2.1 million to 2.6 million of the 8.3 million eligible voters, who can vote in either primary. Each party's choice needs more than 50 percent of the vote to avoid a runoff.

STATE

Administration endorses full funding of SSC

Nancy Mathis
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration has endorsed full funding for the Texas-based superconducting super collider despite a possible $2 billion cost increase that must be funded solely from the federal treasury, Department of Energy officials said Monday.

Deputy Secretary W. Henson Moore said Texas Gov. Bill Clements recently declined the department's request to increase the state's contribution to the project by one-third. The governor responded that Texas has done enough with its $1 billion appropriation, Moore said.

The collider, being built near Waxahachie south of Dallas, may now cost an estimated $8 billion, instead of the $5.9 billion originally forecast. However, Moore said the exact cost estimate will not be known until July or August when two studies are completed.

The Waxahachie facilities include a 54-mile underground ring where scientists will test theories about the universe by colliding high-speed subatomic particles to reveal even smaller particles.

Moore, holding a news conference before briefing Congress Monday, said Energy Department officials met with White House chief of staff John Sununu, budget director Richard Darman, and science adviser Allan Bromley last Friday.

The president's advisers gave the green light to press for full funding for the super collider. They also approved a tentative plan for encouraging joint ventures with other nations.

"It was a unanimous opinion of all those there that the administration and the president want us to proceed with the super collider and we intend to do so," Moore said.

"After a long discussion, the determination was this country risks being underfunded in basic research. This country risks losing its leadership in science if we don't make these kinds of investments," Moore said.

He said DOE officials were searching for direction from the White House since it became clear the atom-smasher would cost more than the $5.9 billion first projected.

Problems stem from the size of magnets arraying the underground tunnel and the device that is supposed to hurl particles into the tube at nearly the speed of light.

"It couldn't be built for $5.9 billion and do the things that the new science says has to be done," Moore said.

As a funding alternative, the Energy Department asked Clements about the possibility of adding another one-third to its $1 billion contribution.

"His strong viewpoint was he did not think that was possible in Texas because of the economy there and the fact that Texas has done its part ..." he said, adding that Texas had "done a mighty thing" by contributing $1 billion.

Randy Erben, director of the Texas state office here, said the governor did agree the state may be more flexible about how its contribution can be spent.

DOE officials originally estimated that non-federal sources such as the state or foreign governments should contribute one-third of the project's original $5.9 billion cost.

However, Moore said DOE officials no longer believe they can count on greater foreign participation without giving up more joint venture contracts.

"We've concluded the ($2 billion) increase will be solely borne by the federal government and little chance that any of that money would come from anywhere else," Moore said.

The super collider's foreign participation plan is classified information. Moore would only say he plans to travel to several foreign nations in June to seek their support for the project.

Rep. John Bryant, D-Texas, a member of the House Budget Committee, said the lack of solid cost estimates is making it difficult to garner support for the super collider from other members.

Rep. Joe Barton, R-Texas, said the action by Bush officials was signficiant.

Homeless encouraged to be counted

DALLAS (AP) — The city of Dallas is offering free movies, meals and T-shirts as a way of encouraging the homeless to come out and let themselves be counted during the upcoming national census.

In a dusk-to-dawn sweep on March 20-21, census-takers in Dallas and other cities nationwide will be trying to find street dwellers, in hopes of getting a count of the homeless in America, officials said Monday.

Following a carefully constructed schedule, the census takers, who will include some homeless people, will scour shelters, streets, park benches and under bridges in hopes of getting an accurate assessment of the extent of the homeless problem.

This is the first time the Census Bureau has undertaken such a systematic tally. In 1980, the bureau performed a "casual count" of transients and found about 13,000 people at bus stations, welfare offices and street corners. Estimates of the homeless population vary widely today: from as few as 200,000 to as many as 6 million.

The Dallas homeless population is estimated at 4,000.

"Regardless of what you may think, a lot of federal program money will depend on it. You can get in this program and play or sit on the sidelines and forfeit," said Karen Boudreaux, homeless program manager for the city of Dallas.

The city has hung posters and passed out fliers in bus stations and soup kitchens promoting the count, and is offering giveaways to bring people in off the streets.

But skeptics abound.

"It's a tremendous advance and I commend them, but I think they have a real tough situation," said Barbara Bailar, president of the American Statistical Association of Washington.

Nationally known homeless advocate Mitch Snyder has called for a boycott of the census, saying that the count will find only a fraction of those without homes and the Bush administration will dismiss the problem as far less serious than it is.

"By denying the very existence of America's homeless, this effort will deny the homeless the resources they need to survive," he said.

Census workers have nonetheless planned carefully for "S-Night," which stands for "Street-Shelter Night."

Workers will fan out in every city, counting as many homeless as they can find in shelters, bus stations, under bridges, on park benches, or in hotels with nightly rates of $12 or less.

From 6 p.m. to midnight, some of the homeless themselves will be hired and trained in census taking, and those in shelters will be counted.

From 2 a.m. to 4 a.m., the counters will take to the streets, looking for people spending the night outside, and from 4 a.m. to 6:30 a.m. they will wait outside abandoned buildings and count those leaving in the morning.

Workers will not be allowed to enter boarded up structures and will be told to guess as many characteristics — such as age, race and sex — for the mentally ill, inebriated or sleeping homeless.

Houston to put best foot forward for summit

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston aims to put its best foot forward this summer when it plays host to a seven-nation economic summit that is expected to bring a $20 million financial windfall to the city.

"The whole town is turned on by the thing," George Strake, former Texas secretary of state and co-chairman of the Houston Economic Summit Host Committee, said. "We've had the most incredible outpouring of volunteer support I've seen in Houston since World War II."

More than 6,000 international visitors are expected for the summit, municipal officials said.

Barbecue, beans and broncos await delegates as organizers promise to put a "Texas spin" on the summit, scheduled for July 9-11 at Rice University.

Leaders of the world's richest nations will probably get to sample some of the ribs and beans that President George Bush has enjoyed since his days as a young Houston congressman.

The first such summit in a major American city, this year's event is also significant because of historical political changes in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe. It will come just days after Bush's summit with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev in Washington.

Talks could include such momentous issues as reunification of East and West Germany and aid to Eastern Europe. For fun, delegates could attend a rodeo and barbecue at the Astrodome and country music concert by Texas entertainers.

Tons of Tex-Mex cuisine will be available. And the owner of Otto's Barbecue, a Bush favorite, said a summit inspection team visited the west Houston restaurant to sample its food and told workers to be at the ready.

"We're supposed to do something," said Otto's owner June Sofka, adding summit officials indicated the restaurant would either provide catering or play dinner host to dignitaries after one of their working sessions.

Dignitaries will include Toshiki Kaifu of Japan and Giulio Andreotti of Italy.

Leaders of Britain, Canada, France, Italy, Japan and West Germany may also visit world-class museums, the Wortham Theatre Center opera house and the Lyndon B. Johnson Space Center in Clear Lake, about 20 miles south of downtown Houston.

The summit schedule will follow a standardized format much like that of the 15 previous annual meetings.

WATER QUALITY NOTICE

Water Quality is a growing problem in West Texas. Municipal Water is, for the most part, safe to drink, however it is extremely hard and it often tastes bad.
Many area water treating companys are using less than desirable tactics to sell their systems.
This in turn gives the water quality industry a bad image and makes it hard for honest, reputable dealers to represent their products in a straight forward and dignified manner.
We at Jack Holt and Associates/Best Water Products have been helping West Texas people solve their water problems for the past 15 years.
We don't sell bells & whistles, use scare tactics or offer free gifts.
We simply sell quality water treating products at the lowest possible prices and service what we sell. If you are interested in improving water quality for your family or business please give us a call for a free estimate at 1-800-342-5419 or 332-8939. Thank You. Jack Holt & Associates - Odessa.

STATE IN BRIEF

Man sentenced for killing teen

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston jury has sentenced a 17-year-old man to life in prison for killing a youngster who refused to surrender his sneakers.

Demetrick James Walker was sentenced Monday after jurors in State District Judge Norman Langford's court deliberated about three and a half hours. The jury convicted Walker of murder Thursday.

Walker was accused of shooting 16-year-old Johnny Bates as Bates waited at a bus stop April 1.

Evidence in the trial showed Walker wanted Bates' Nike Air basketball shoes and marched up to him, demanding, "Give me those shoes."

When Bates refused, Walker used a .22-caliber pistol to shoot him in the head.

Walker then ran away without the shoes, testimony showed. He later told some girls he would sleep well that night because he had shot someone who had refused to give up shoes and someone who lived in a rival neighborhood.

4 people hurt in collision

DALLAS (AP) — Three adults and a student who were injured when two school buses collided on Interstate 45 escaped serious injury, authorities said.

The four were treated in the emergency room at Baylor University Medical Center Monday afternoon following the accident and were released by Monday night, said Steve Trowbridge, administrator on call.

The accident occurred at the intersection of I-45 and Loop 12 shortly after 4 p.m.

The identities of the injured were not immediately available, Trowbridge said.

"None of them was admitted at all," Trowbridge said, adding that all of the injuries were minor.

Woman shot in head

IRVING (AP) — A 41-year-old man shot and killed a 28-year-old woman after chasing her through the parking lot of a suburban Dallas shopping mall, then died from an apparently self-inflicted gunshot wound, police said.

The woman was shot once in the head and the man suffered a gunshot wound to the abdomen, said Irving police Capt. Travis Hall.

The woman died at the scene and the man was pronounced dead after being transported to a hospital. Their names weren't released.

It's believed the two knew each other and might have been related, he said.

No bystanders were wounded.

After the woman was shot, the man then got into his vehicle, which struck several utility poles before coming to a stop.

A .38-caliber revolver was recovered from the man's vehicle, he said.

Pesticide to be allowed

AUSTIN (AP) — Wheat farmers will be allowed to use the pesticide Lorsban to control the Russian Wheat Aphid, state agriculture officials said.

The Environmental Protection Agency has granted a request from the Texas Department of Agriculture to allow wheat producers to use the pesticide until May 31, officials said Monday.

Wheat producers may begin using Lorsban — the trade name for chlorpyrifos — immediately but several restrictions apply to its use.

The application must be made at least 28 days prior to harvest and no grazing can be allowed for 14 days after application. Producers should contact their county Agriculture Extension agent or the nearest TDA district office for specific instructions.

Flower service starts

AUSTIN (AP) — The state highway department has begun its fourth annual Wildflower Reporting Service.

Highway workers in all 24 highway districts note stands of blooming wildflowers and share the information with other highway department offices.

Wildflower seekers can call department headquarters in Austin or the nearest district office and receive directions ot the best places to see flowers.

Trial to start in largest cocaine haul

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — A defense attorney for two men charged in Texas' largest cocaine haul says his clients were merely day laborers who had no idea they were to load cocaine until they arrived at a drug house last fall.

Gaudencio Garcia Garcia, 39, of McAllen, and Hermenehildo Rivas Sosa, 51, of Matamoros, Mexico, are charged with cocaine possession. Trial was scheduled to start today.

A third defendant, Alfonso Tristan Gonzalez, 36, of San Antonio, pleaded guilty in the state's 197th District Court in Brownsville to a charge of possessing more than 400 grams of cocaine.

Garcia and Sosa face the similar charges, stemming from the seizure last year of nearly nine tons of cocaine.

Ed Cyganiewicz, chief felony prosecutor for Cameron County, said the three men charged in the case were "mules" hired to package cocaine at the rented house, believed to be a distribution center for the drug.

The three men were arrested last Oct. 4 when Texas Department of Public Safety narcotics agents raided a house they said was "literally stuffed" with cocaine, about five miles north of the Mexican border.

Agents found 17,950 pounds of cocaine with an estimated street value of as much as $1 billion. It was the second largest cocaine seizure in the United States, behind a 20-ton recovery in a Los Angeles-area warehouse the previous week.

Defense attorney Hector Villarreal described Garcia and Rivas as merely day laborers who did not know they were to be loading cocaine until they arrived at the house.

"Can you conceive of a hypothetical situation, when they get there and there's 18,000 pounds of cocaine?" Villarreal asked a group of potential jurors Monday afternoon during jury selection. "What were these individuals supposed to do?"

Judge Darrell Hester set Gonzalez's sentencing for April 25. Punishment could range from 10 years to life in prison and/or up to a $100,000 fine.

Free car wash with oil change at Chaparral Wash & Lube

Spring car check up needs include professional oil change, lubrication

Chaparral Wash and Lube Center customers are return customers because the service is consistently professional and friendly. From left are Chaparral owner Leon Jeffcoat, customer Jack Swallow and lube center technician C.C. Banks.

Strong winds the last week have kicked up some thunderstorms and dust — no doubt your car needs some professional cleaning and polishing.

Combine that service with an oil change at Chaparral Wash and Lube Center and your car will gleam and operate almost like new again.

Stop by 2300 N. Big Spring soon and let the car professionals shine up and maintain your car for upcoming spring.

Chaparral is well known for the best car wash Midland has to offer. A free car wash is offered with each oil change at Chaparral.

Chaparral owner, Texas Tech graduate and Midland businessman Leon Jeffcoat invites you in to measure the difference that this centrally-located wash and lube center has to offer.

The friendly professionals at Chaparral Wash and Lube can help give your car the look and feel you want for unpredictable West Texas driving weather.

Come by and pamper your car with some of the extra Chaparral services you can combine with your detail car wash.

A full service car wash, which includes a wash by gentle cleansers, chamois brushes and soft water is just $7.95. Standard vans and Suburbans are just $2.00 extra.

Vacuuming, hand drying and window cleaning are included in the low price. A discount is given with the purchase of Texaco gasoline.

A free car wash is offered with each oil change in the Chaparral lube center. Prices for the oil change and lube range from $16.50 to $22.50. Pennzoil, Quaker State, Havoline and other major brands of oil are available.

Jeffcoat recommends an oil change for your car every three months or 3,000 miles. If you can't remember the last time you had an oil change, then it's surely time to have one.

You get more than just an oil change and lube in the Chaparral lube center. Technician C.C. Banks enjoys a reputation for being friendly, knowledgeable and able to trouble spot car problems.

"C.C., in addition to being personable, has many years of experience i.. car maintenance," explained Jeffcoat.

You'll also get your battery, tires, belts and hoses examined. Your vehicle is checked for important proper fluid levels, including brake, power steering, transmission and windshield washer fluids.

As a part of this service, these fluids are replenished, if your car needs it.

For an additional charge, Chaparral can install transmission oil, freon, light bulbs and windshield wiper refills.

Generally open on rainy days, Chaparral's lube center and gasoline pumps are at your service. With the purchase of gasoline or an oil change, if the clouds are threatening, you'll receive a rain check for your next car wash.

Chaparral Wash and Lube Center is conveniently located at the corner of Big Spring and Scharbauer Drive. Texaco, Visa, MasterCard, American Express and Discover cards are accepted.

Hours are 8 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. Monday through Friday and 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturdays. Call 682-8013 for more information.

Sam's Barbeque, well-known for the last eight years for its fine food and catering, is located at the corner of Lamesa Road and Scharbauer.

When you try the all you can eat dinner, no doubt you'll have a hard time choosing from the selections. Be sure to sample some of everything — pork ribs, sliced beef, barbeque chicken and homemade beef sausage.

Top your entree with Sam's famous barbeque sauce — thick, delicious and homemade. The sauce has been a trademark of owner Lee Hammond's family for generations.

To complement the all-you-can-eat meal, Sam's serves up some tasty trimmings. Try the pinto beans cooked in old fashioned salt jowls, the fresh potato salad made with a special old homestyle recipe, assorted relishes and thick Texas toast.

Not included in the price of the all-you-can-eat dinner, but worth saving some room for is a bowl of delicious cherry or peach cobbler.

Drinks are additional, and Sam's Barbeque offers a fine selection of domestic beers, Sutter Home wines and soft drinks.

Regular menu items as well as the daily specials are available in the evenings.

When dining at Sam's Barbeque, you will be in good company. A recent write up in Texas Monthly issued a rave review for the specialties of the house.

"Abandon hope, all vegetarians who enter here," said the writer. "The rest of us, however, will be in carnivore's heaven as we sample the perfectly turned out pork ribs and chicken quarters...The homemade sausage — all beef and hand stuffed in old fashioned casings — is definitive — the best we've had."

Owner Lee Hammond stressed the friendly, personable service Midlanders have come to expect from Sam's.

Combine the friendly service with the great food and put it with a special event and you have a catering service that's second to none. No number is too large or too small for receptions, oil company functions, church groups, picnics — all occasions that barbeque will fit in.

A typical turnkey catering job includes three meats with all of the trimmings and drinks. Desserts are optional. Plates, plasticware, cups, ices and buffet line tables are all provided.

For an estimate, call 682-1082.

Sam's Barbeque serves continuously from 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. and even those who do not care for barbeque will find something to enjoy throughout the serving day.

Fried chicken, farm-raised grain-fed fried catfish, chili, stews and hamburgers for kids as well as adults are all available.

- Mondays — sliced beef — $4.50
- Tuesdays — ribs — $4.50
- Wednesdays — sausage — $4.50
- Thursdays — barbeque chicken — $4.50
- Fridays — catfish fillets — $5.50
- Saturdays and Sundays — all-you-can-eat barbeque day all day — $6.95. Stop by after church and fill up on some mouth watering food.

Classical Greenery & Floral Design: St. Patrick's headquarters

Whether or not you are Irish, you can celebrate the spirit and fun of St. Patrick's Day on Saturday with help from Classical Greenery, located at 3323 N. Midland Drive (down from Jorge's Restaurant).

For example, send yourself or someone you love a St. Patrick's Day special beer basket for good luck. Small beer baskets include two beers (in green bottles, of course!) nuts, a living shamrock plant. They are priced around $20.

Large beer baskets, priced at $45, include a live green plant, three beers, Dilly Dips, two beer mugs and balloons.

Classical Greenery, which has a reputation for beautiful tropical plants, festive holiday and all-occasion gift baskets and professional party decorating, now sports a new name and a new look. Classical Greenery and Floral Design's remodeling and expansion into a full-service fresh floral design and gift showroom is open to serve you.

Stop by and see the myriad of changes, such as a walk-in display cooler. You can actually walk in to this spacious area and make your selection.

Be sure and take advantage of the continuous Classical Greenery cash and carry special. Receive a 15 percent discount on any loose cut flowers and arrangements already made up in the display cooler.

Fresh flowers and arrangements are available for all occasions, including birthday, anniversary, get well and sympathy. You can count on terrific arrangements by three designers — Peggy Parkinson, Glinda Duke and Teresa Merritt.

Peggy, with 12 years experience, specializes in party work and weddings. Glinda, also with 12 years experience, enjoys working with clients and designing custom arrangements. Teresa is presently supervising the interiorscapes.

Classical Greenery is set to hop into spring. The store is colorfully prepared for spring and Easter with chocolate mousse eggs, stuffed bunnies and terra cotta bunnies. Peggy, Glinda and Teresa will be doing many blooming garden baskets since people will want to fill their homes with color for the season.

Classical Greenery and Floral Design carries a wonderful selection of large tropical plants. They receive shipments direct from Florida, and you can be assured of finding a huge selection at a reasonable price.

European gardens are in bloom right now with a colorful display of tulips, hyacinths and daffodils. Cut flower specialties include Holland flowers and exotics such as Hawaiian flowers.

Classical Greenery and Floral Design delivers locally and offers wire service, so you can remember your out-of-town friends.

If you have a hard time visualizing how to decorate with plants for different occasions, let the professionals help. Peggy and her staff specialize in preparing flowers and plants for parties and weddings.

Classical Greenery's designers will come to your home for a consultation on your party. They will also deliver and set up your floral arrangements.

For a small rental charge, you may use for your parties a number of large vases and containers. Just ask for details.

Those who enjoy decorating with silk flowers will be pleased with the "affordable elegance" of silks from Classical Greenery and Floral Design. In stock are many of the better quality lines of silks as well as a comparable but more affordable line.

New ideas for a gift basket include "The Pamper Yourself Basket" — Bella's toiletries, shelf paper, dusting powders, soaps, bath beads and gels. Also popular are mixed baskets which include wine and fresh flowers.

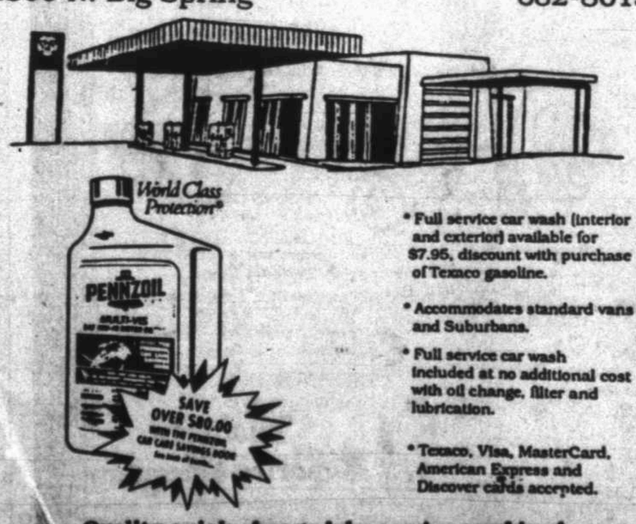

Displayed creatively throughout the showroom are new, exciting quilted cactus plants, palm trees, birds and flowers. Pottery, crystal vases, potpourri jars and a wide variety of Seasons potpourri await you. Some of the popular scents are gardenia, hyacinth and heather.

MasterCard, Visa and American Express are accepted. Store hours are Monday through Friday 8:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. and Saturdays 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Call 699-6410 for more information.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 14, 1990

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your ability to tune into people and situations will serve you well. Conscientious performance is the key to greater success. Learn to claim credit for your efforts. Your domestic life should be especially happy in July. Take a family vacation. Devoting more time to a teen-ager will prevent a generation gap from widening. October is a particularly sensitive time for romance. Be open about your feelings and mate will react in a positive way. Travel is favored in early 1991.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: physicist Albert Einstein, astronaut Frank Borman, actor Michael Caine, comedian Billy Crystal.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A good day for discussing technical matters. New ideas are sought by higher-ups. Innovative thinking is in great demand. Honesty commands respect. Be candid about what you want from your life.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Exercise greater restraint around food and drink. Take a stock tip with a grain of salt. Romantic partner is willing to go along with a change in lifestyle. Avoid making conflicting statements.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Make allowances for unsettled conditions at home and turn on the charm. Someone who is slow to anger may be equally slow to forgive. Be careful not to tread on loved one's toes.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You are commended for your past efforts. Postpone signing papers until you can obtain up-to-date information. A member of the opposite sex's vanity could be a real turn-off.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): An uneasy feeling about a pending project should not be dismissed out of hand. A candid conversation between parent and child suggests possible solutions. An affluent friend proves helpful.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Do not ignore historical facts or you could lose a competition. Your charisma and intellect make you popular when you travel abroad. Family ties are more important than ever.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A phone call or small package brings good news. Ignore someone who tries to fan your anger by repeating negative comments. A positive attitude will help you reach your goals. Romance blossoms!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Try to understand a difficult co-worker. You could solve a problem that has been plaguing you for weeks! Showing tender loving care will do wonders for your relationship. Make intelligent compromises.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): The price you will pay for something depends on how long you are willing to wait for it. Perseverance will put extra cash in your pocket. A new friendship or romance prospers.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Actively pursue the job or knowledge you want. Self-reliance will increase your earning potential. Try working alone. Self-discipline will help you overcome a weight problem.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Keep your promises or risk jeopardizing your role as a leader. A hilarious story boosts your spirits. A change in personnel could work to your advantage. Community service proves rewarding.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A student's top priority is handing homework in on time. Be firm. A business manager could show you how to boost your earnings. Interesting new friends spice up your social life.

Opening lead: Jack of ♡

At the blackjack table, the house's edge is that the dealer's second card is concealed, which forces the player to act before he knows whether the dealer has a good or bad hand. In bridge, the fact that declarer's hand is hidden can have a similar advantage.

Both North and South were aggressive in the auction. North would have liked another spade and South should have had a better suit to go on to game. But some fine card-reading and reliance on a defender's fears allowed South to sneak home.

From the opening lead and East's play of the queen at trick one, declarer deduced it was likely East had the bare king-queen of hearts. So South took the ace of hearts and immediately led ace and another club. West climbed up with the king and reverted to a heart to partner's king.

East could do no better than shift to a diamond, taken in dummy. Declarer discarded a heart on the queen of clubs, then led the queen of spades. Afraid that to cover would cost a trick if declarer's spade suit was headed by A J 10, East ducked. So did declarer.

After cashing the ace of diamonds, South came to hand with a diamond ruff to play ace and another spade. When the suit split evenly, declarer had held his losers to one trick in each suit except for diamonds. Not bad for someone who seemed to have started out with two losers in trumps, two in hearts and one in clubs.

Actress Kim Basinger receives award as Outstanding Georgian

ATLANTA (AP) — Kim Basinger declared herself "just a proud Georgian" as she picked up an award honoring her film roles and her purchase of the Georgia hamlet of Braselton.

State employees put the phones on hold and hung on the actress' every word as she was named an "Outstanding Georgian" during a ceremony Monday in the office of Secretary of State Max Cleland. She is a native of Athens.

Miss Basinger, star of "Batman" and "9½ Weeks" said her plans for Braselton are still being developed and she can't talk too much about them. In the past she has discussed building recording and film studios.

She met with the Georgia Department of Banking and Finance concerning her purchase of the Bank of Braselton, spoke to young cancer patients at a hospital and appeared Monday night at a fund-raiser for Cleland's re-election campaign.

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — U.S. Sen. Bob Kerrey has renewed his acquaintance with actress Debra Winger, lately divorced from Timothy Hutton, said a Kerrey aide.

Miss Winger and her son, Noah, were spending several days in Omaha this week during the Senate recess, said Steve Jarding, Kerrey's press aide.

Kerrey

Then-Gov. Kerrey met Miss Winger in 1983 when she was filming "Terms of Endearment" in Lincoln. Their love affair ended in the fall of 1985, but Kerrey and Miss Winger remained friends, Jarding said.

In 1986, Miss Winger married Hutton. The couple had Noah a year later. Hutton, who starred the film "Ordinary People," filed for divorce in December.

Miss Winger is a business partner with Kerrey in the Prairie Life Center, a fitness center in Omaha.

NEW YORK (AP) — It looks like the opening of Atlantic City's newest casino will have to do without an appearance by America's newest tabloid sensation. Marla Maples has pulled out.

Maples, whose relationship with billionaire Donald Trump has been the subject of extraordinary speculation since his separation from wife Ivana, had been announced as a guest at the opening of Trump's Taj Mahal on April 5.

But on Monday, a spokesman for Trump said: "After assessing the media perception of Marla Maples' attendance ... and the concerns of others involved about such speculation, she will not be attending."

"It was just a joint decision ... in view of the media speculation about the nature of her appearance there," said Chuck Jones, Maples' spokesman.

That speculation entailed suggestions that this was "some kind of date or a coming out. It wasn't," said Jones.

For the record, Trump and Jones have denied that the relationship between the developer and the model-actress was anything more than a friendship.

In an interview in the March 20 issue of the Star, Ogletree said she thought Trump and her daughter were in love. "I really can't put my finger on it," she said. "But when I see a chemistry, I see a chemistry."

Of course, her daughter told her she and Trump are just "good friends," and she's never pressed her daughter for more. "Marla's 26 years old. A grown woman. When I was 26, I didn't want someone running my life," Ogletree said.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Willow" and "Rumpelstiltskin" star Billy Barty is being sued by a TV writer who says the dwarf actor owes him $2,000 for his help on the brief-run show "Short Ribbs."

Bill Winckler, 25, of suburban Woodland Hills, said Barty has ignored a contract guaranteeing him pay for each script plus a percentage of syndication profits. The show ran from September to December.

Barty

Barty, 65, was out of town Monday and unavailable for comment, said his sister, Evelyn Barty, from the Billy Barty Foundation, which helps raise money for scholarships for short people.

TOKYO (AP) — Former Beatle Paul McCartney, who on Wednesday closes out his first tour of Japan in 24 years, has donated $250,000 to fight cancer and help clean up the eaarth.

Half of the funds will go to the Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York and the other half to the Japanese chapter of the environmental group Friends of the Earth, tour publicist Fiona Hurry said today.

"As we all know, cancer causes great suffering, and I have great respect for all those who try to lessen the pain as best they can," McCartney said in a statement. "I also have hope that one day science and medicine will find a way to beat cancer forever."

The 47-year-old rock'n'roller has been using his world tour, which began in Oslo in September, as a platform to promote the activities of Friends of the Earth.

"When I was a boy, I would never have believed it if someone had told me that one day we'd have a hole in the sky — in the ozone layer — that there would be acid in our rain, that the seas wouldn't be clean enough to swim in and the air not fit enough to breathe," McCartney said.

"All I am trying to do on this world tour is to hopefully make people think about how we're wrecking this world and ask them to challenge their politicians to act," he said.

Bush talent scout finds that enemies, ingrates go with job

By Christopher Connell

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chase Untermeyer says that being George Bush's chief talent scout is "rather like painting the Golden Gate Bridge."

"Once you finish the job, you have to start in at the other end and start painting it again," says the 44-year-old White House personnel director and Bush protege.

From a crowded office in the West Wing of the White House, Untermeyer and his staff assemble resumes and sort out the winners from the also-rans in the quest for presidential appointments.

With White House Chief of Staff John Sununu, the affable Houston-raised and Harvard-trained Untermeyer makes the final recommendations to Bush on 3,500 jobs. Untermayer and his staff also ride herd on Cabinet and agency heads in filling more than 2,000 other political posts.

Untermeyer, once a political reporter, said in a recent interview that "it's sort of a rule of thumb in this business (that) every time you make an appointment you earn nine enemies and one ingrate."

There also has been some criticism of the speed with which the White House has filled appointments. Last September, Democrats on Capitol Hill accused Bush of operating "a Swiss-cheese govermnent" riddled with high-level vacancies.

Untermeyer defends the administration's performance, saying that background checks are time-consuming and that the criticism would have been far worse "if we had slam-dunked people into jobs."

"I personally don't mind being the target of a bad news story or two in 1989 if we are spared in 1990 and thereafter a series of news stories about some cretin or boob or otherwise incompetent individual who was named to office by George Bush," he told the Heritage Foundation last year.

"You can bet that the folks writing those stories would not say, 'On the other hand, the White House in 1989 acted with admirable speed in putting this fine citizen into office,'" said Untermeyer.

In the interview, Untermeyer said the opposition turned up the heat on the pace of appointments "essentially because we had denied the Democrats ... the so-called sleaze issue."

"Practically none of our nominees has come under any controversy, whereas that happened all the time under President Reagan."

However, several Bush nominees to major posts were defeated or forced to withdraw, including John Tower as defense secretary and William Lucas as the Justice Department's civil rights chief.

In addition, Fred Bush, the chief fund-raiser for the 1988 Bush campaign but no relation to the president, was rejected as ambassador to Luxembourg after coming under scrutiny for contracts he had received from Reagan's Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Untermeyer was executive assistant to then-Vice President Bush during the first two years of the Reagan administration. He then spent five years in the Pentagon as a deputy and then assistant secretary of the Navy for manpower and reserves, responsible for recruiting, training, health and other matters for the Navy's 600,000 sailors and 200,000 Marines.

He routinely logs 12- to 14-hour days, customarily getting by on four or five hours of sleep a night.

At his desk on a recent Sunday afternoon, Untermeyer acknowledged that 1989 had "its grim points, but it had its upside, too. I also met the woman that I'm now engaged to marry."

With Scalia, Supreme Court has 'point man'

Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — Antonin Scalia often seems impatient with the pace of change on an increasingly conservative Supreme Court, but time could be on his side. The comparatively youthful justice may be using his keen intellect and missionary zeal well into the 21st century to pull the court farther to the right.

The prospect delights conservatives and alarms liberals.

His supporters call him a man of principle unwilling to accept half-measures. Detractors say he is an extremist bent on undoing key liberal precedents.

Both sides agree that Scalia, who recently turned 54 and is 30 years younger than the court's oldest member, is assuming the role of conservative point man played by William H. Rehnquist before he became chief justice.

"There is no question that since Rehnquist has become chief justice he has seen his role as less of an advocate than a consensus-builder. A vacuum was created and Scalia filled that void," said Rich Samp of the conservative Washington Legal Foundation.

Scalia's confrontational style was on display last year when Justice Sandra Day O'Connor stopped short of voting to overturn the court's 1973 ruling in Roe vs. Wade that created a constitutional right to an abortion.

Calling O'Connor's position "irrational," a frustrated Scalia said, "We can now look forward to at least another term with carts full of mail from the public and streets full of demonstrators."

American University law Professor Herman Schwartz said Scalia, an ardent foe of judicially created rights, was showing his pique.

"I think he was angry, and I think he feels (O'Connor) may have betrayed the cause. And he's a man who believes in causes," Schwartz said.

Scalia, sticking to his general policy, declined to be interviewed for this article.

Gregarious and quick-witted, he normally revels in being the center of attention. Before a reception held for him by reporters when he joined the high court, he said, "I can have more fun if it's off the record."

Assured he would not be quoted for publication, he engaged in a lively dialogue for hours as reporters peppered him with questions.

Scalia is among the court's most forceful, persistent and frequent interrogators of the lawyers who argue before the court. Using the attorneys as foils, he often appears to be trying to persuade other justices to see his views.

Justice Harry A. Blackmun said after the court's 1987-88 term that Scalia "asks far too many questions. He takes over the case from counsel."

Rehnquist once indirectly scolded Scalia from the bench after the junior justice persisted in quizzing a lawyer about a procedural matter.

"I hope when you're given an opportunity to do so, you'll address some of your remarks to the question on which the court voted to grant" review, Rehnquist told the attorney.

Scalia's critics worry that he has an agenda for overruling past decisions, particularly ones that expanded civil rights and individual liberties.

"It is as though he made a list of all the things he didn't like that the court has done in the last 50 years," said American University's Schwartz.

University of Chicago Law School Dean Geoffrey Stone, who admires Scalia's boldness, said, "The thing to keep in mind about Scalia is he does have very strong intellectual skills that will lead him to be out in front. The real question is, Will there be anyone behind him?"

Heathcote decides to leave cons to pros

By Dick Brinster
AP Sports Writer

Although he led Michigan State to the 1979 NCAA championship, Judd Heathcote doesn't talk to his current Spartans about the title-clincher of 11 years ago against Indiana State.

He talks about the lesson of Lamar, the first team the Magic Johnson-led Spartans met on the road to the championship showdown against Larry Bird and associates.

Heathcote, whose top-seeded Spartans meet Murray State on Thursday in the opening round of the Southeast Regional at Knoxville, Tenn., doesn't want Michigan State to take the Racers lightly.

"We'll talk about the upsets that have occurred in the first round, we'll talk about the upsets that have occurred in tournaments, we'll talk about our own game and how we've prepared all year," Heathcote said Monday.

He recalled scouting the Detroit-Lamar game in 1979. The winner would face Michigan State in the next round.

"It was a terrible game," Heathcote remembered. "I told my staff, 'If we can't beat any one of those clubs by 25 points I'll be amazed. And now we go in and tell those guys how good Lamar is.'

"It was a con job," Heathcote admitted. "But we came out probably more up for the Lamar game than we were for the final game against Indiana State. "

Heathcote's con job was successful. Michigan State beat Lamar 95-64.

But there won't be a con job this time.

"We'll tell them, 'Hey, we're better than this team. We have to play better' will be the approach.

"All the teams are good, some are better than the others," he's telling his Spartans now. "In terms of which game is most important in a tournament, it's the first game."

In addition to the Spartans' (26-5) meeting with Murray State (21-8), Houston (25-7) will play UC Santa Barbara (20-8), LSU (22-8) will take on Villanova (18-14) and Georgia Tech (24-6) will meet East Tennessee State (27-6).

In the East Regional at Hartford, Conn., on Thursday, the opening day of the 64-team tournament, it will be top seed Connecticut (28-5) vs. Boston University, Indiana (18-10) vs. California (21-9), Clemson (24-8) vs. Brigham Young (21-8) and La Salle (29-1) vs. Southern Mississippi (20-11).

Oklahoma (26-4), the top seed in the Midwest Regional at Austin, Texas, faces Towson State (18-12). In other games, it is North Carolina (19-12) vs. Southwest Missouri State (22-6), Arkansas (26-4) vs. Princeton (20-6) and Illinois (21-7) vs. Dayton (21-9).

In the West Regional at Salt Lake City, it is top seed UNLV (29-5) vs. Arkansas-Little Rock (20-9), Oregon State (22-6) vs. Ball State (24-6), Louisville (26-7) vs. Idaho (25-5) and Ohio State (16-12) vs. Providence (17-11).

The other 32 teams will start tournament play Friday.

With the lesson of Lamar firmly established, Heathcote can be counted on to deliver the lesson of Murray State. The Racers pulled off a big upset two years ago against North Carolina State, before losing to eventual national champion Kansas.

But Heathcote says the strength of the Big Ten Conference has prepared the Spartans for every type of team.

"We've seen just about every style of play that there is," he said. "We're not the kind of club that can go and blow anybody out. We're a blue-collar team. We don't score baskets very often in bundles."

Heathcote isn't the only coach with a theme. Denny Crum, who has led Louisville to two NCAA titles and six Final Four appearances, has his. But it's changing.

Crum, who voiced concern Sunday about playing at 4,390 feet in Salt Lake City against a team (Idaho) familiar with games at higher elevations, reversed his field Monday and said it could prove to be a positive in the long run.

"The Final Four is played at a high elevation (5,280 in Denver), so it will be a good experience to see how we handle that," Crum said.

"We could be four or five points better if we did that, which could make a difference between winning and losing," Crum said.

NCAA's Dallas site sells out

The remaining 1,000 tickets sold out Monday morning, less than 24 hours after the NCAA announced the 64-team Tournament bracket.

Winners from NCAA sub-regionals in Indianapolis and Austin will come to Dallas March 22 and 24, with the winner advancing to the Final Four in Denver.

Several Top 20 teams, including No. 1 Oklahoma, are in the Midwest Region and could advance to Dallas. Others are Georgetown, Purdue, Arkansas, and Illinois.

Two Southwest Conference teams — Arkansas and Texas — are in the 16-team Midwest Regional field.

The 1990 Midwest Regional marks the second time Reunion Arena has hosted an NCAA regional. Reunion served as host for the 1985 Midwest Regional, along with the 1986 Final Four and 1989 NCAA Midwest subregional.

Raiders find a home — again

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Raiders owner Al Davis' announcement that he would move his team back to Oakland placed Los Angeles officials in a familiar position.

After the then-Los Angeles Rams moved to Anaheim in 1979, Mayor Tom Bradley appointed a committee to find a new team. It found the Raiders, who in 1982 moved from Oakland following a stadium dispute.

Davis announced Monday that he would accept the city of Oakland's $602 million offer to return the Raiders to the Oakland-Alameda Coliseum, ending a lengthy bidding war among Oakland, Los Angeles, Sacramento and Irwindale.

"Once again we are out there looking for a football team," said committee member Bill Robertson, a Los Angeles labor leader.

The Raiders' lease with the Los Angeles Coliseum extends through 1991, and Davis said he would honor the lease.

Bradley said Los Angeles will waste no time in pursuing another NFL franchise for the city.

"One way or another, I want to ensure Los Angeles continues to have a professional football team," he said in a statement from Orlando, Fla., the site of the NFL owners' meeting where he will make the city's pitch for the 1993 Super Bowl.

"It doesn't matter whether the football team wears blue-and-gold, black-and-silver or any other color combination, the simple truth is Los Angeles needs the economic incentive and community enthusiasm a football team can generate," the mayor said.

Sacramento officials said they, too, would pursue another professional sports franchise.

"I think we accepted that a few weeks ago, that he wasn't coming," Mayor Anne Rudin said. "What it means is the Sacramento Sports Association and the (Sacramento City) Sports Commission will work to find another team and another sport to bring to Sacramento.

"The stadium is going to be built and the owners will want someone to occupy it."

Robertson and Richard Riordan, a committee member and former head of the Los Angeles Coliseum Commission, said there was still a chance the Raiders' deal with Oakland would not be completed. They said they would be ready to negotiate with Davis if that happened.

"I don't think we've given up on the Raiders, but the main priority is to have a team playing

Evans must dive into competition

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The 1990 NCAA swimming championships are this week, leaving Janet Evans little time to celebrate winning the Sullivan Award as the nation's top amateur athlete of 1989.

"Coach (Richard) Quick wasn't too keen about my coming," said Sullivan, a three-time gold medalist in the 1988 Seoul Olympics who is a freshman at Stanford. "We talked about it and he agreed to let me come after I promised to do my regular workouts."

Evans, who set one world and two American records last year, said she worked out at the Indiana University Natatorium three times a day.

"Don Wagner, the coach of my swimming club, made the trip here and supervised my workouts," Evans said. "He just made sure I was doing my routine. At this point of my career, I certainly know how to work out."

Evans was named the winner Monday night after being a finalist the past two years. Pitcher Jim Abbott, now with the California Angels, won the 1987 award and track star Florence Griffith Joyner was last year's winner.

"It's kind of like the Olympics. You realize that your name will be a part of history," said Evans, who plans to swim the mile, 500- and 400-yard freestyle events in her first NCAA championships.

"This is a hectic time for me. There was this trip, now the trip to Austin where we should battle Texas for the team title. And Florida might sneak in there," she said.

Tuesday's Question — Name the only two college teammates to score 40 or more points in the same game.

Monday's Answer — Wilmer "Vinegar Bend" Mizell was a repesenative from North Carolina in the 1970s, several years after pitching for several National League teams.

Former NFL, horse owner dies

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Gene Klein, a prominent sports and business figure who included ownership of a Kentucky Derby winner as one of many successes, died of heart failure at age 69.

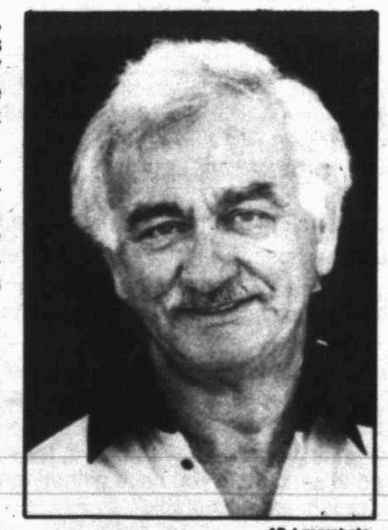

Klein, a World War II bomber pilot, started out in business selling cars by the pound, but went on to gain national recognition as the owner of both the San Diego Chargers and Winning Colors, the 1988 Kentucky Derby winner.

Klein suffered a seizure Monday at his Rancho Santa Fe home. After efforts to revive him failed, he was taken to Scripps Memorial Hospital, where he was pronounced dead at 5:35 a.m. PST, hospital spokeswoman Edie High said.

High said Klein's wife, Joyce, and a nephew were with him when he died.

Preliminary results of an autopsy indicate that Klein died of the rhythm problem related to cardiomyopathy, a heart muscle disease, High said. Klein had a history of heart problems, including a 1981 seizure while on the witness stand in Los Angeles during the Raiders' antitrust suit against the NFL.

"He did have an underlying heart muscle disease, but it had been stable and he hadn't given any indication of this problem before," Klein's cardiologist, Dr. Joseph Bonanno, said.

Klein

At the time of death, Klein and his wife had been planning to accompany former NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle and his wife on a trip to an island in the Pacific Ocean.

Rozelle said the group had intended to dine Monday night in the Rancho Santa Fe home of NBC Television sports commentator Dick Enberg.

"I can't think of anyone who had about six different full careers," Rozelle said of Klein, "beginning with the used cars."

"The world of sports will miss Gene greatly. He was highly successful in all his endeavors and well respected in the National Football League," said Alex Spanos, who bought the Chargers from Klein in August 1984 for about $80 million.

Klein had owned the club since Aug. 25, 1966, when he headed a group that purchased the team for $10 million from Barron Hilton.

One of Klein's last acts as a team owner was to help land San Diego its first Super Bowl game, which was played at San Diego Jack Murphy Stadium in 1988.

Klein was disillusioned by football's labor and drug problems and his long-running feud with Raiders managing general partner Al Davis. Klein was one of the most strident opponents of Davis' ultimately successful attempts to move the Raiders from Oakland to Los Angeles.

Ironically, Davis announced on Monday that he will move the team back to Oakland.

In Klein's 1987 book "First Down and a Billion," written with David Fisher, Klein recounted hassles with players or coaches and repeatedly ended the anecdotes by writing "Thank you, Alex" for taking the team off his hands.

Final goodbyes said to Gathers

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Hank Gathers, the Loyola Marymount basketball star who died playing the game he loved, was remembered for showing children in his impoverished neighborhood that they could take control of their lives.

"Losing someone like Hank Gathers tears a hole in this community. Our children need someone special to look to and Hank was someone special," Eugenia Lloyd said Monday during a funeral for Gathers.

Mothers carried babies and elderly men and women clutched bibles as they passed the casket mumbling prayers. Men carried weeping children on their shoulders.

The 500 sanctuary seats were filled, and about 100 people stood along the sides and in the rear. Loudspeakers projected the service outside to another 600 who stood in the sunshine.

The blue satin-lined coffin was surrounded by flowers. One 6-foot floral banner spelled out "My son." Another, with words in red flowers, recalled his jersey number "Hank MVP 44."

Teammates carried the casket down the church steps to the hearse.

Gathers died March 4 after collapsing during a game in Los Angeles. Gathers was headed upcourt after a dunk that proved to be the final two points of an illustrious career.

"He understood there was a risk," said former NBA coach Jack Ramsey, who attended the services after viewing the body with several thousand others. "He would have had a chance to play professionally, no doubt about it, but there was no guarantee. He played the game with such gusto, and that's a quality to be admired and remembered."

Democratic Rep. William Gray, who represents the North Philadelphia neighborhood where the family lives, was among those who paid tribute to Gathers before he was buried in Mount Lawn Cemetery.

"Hank fell doing what he loved to do, what he did best," said Gray, a preacher who said he had, like Gathers, played basketball in north Philadelphia's streets.

"If you have to go," Gray said, "there is no better way to go than doing what you do best. Now he's in God's hall of fame."

"Not only did he master the game of basketball, he mastered the game of love," Derrick Gathers, one of three surviving brothers, said.

Lady Chap netters play

Staff Report

Wednesday at Odessa, the Midland College women's tennis team has its first dual action of the spring season, facing Odessa College at 2 p.m., at the OC Tennis Center.

Currently ranked first among community college women's teams by Volvo ITCA, the Chaparrals have faced Odessa twice. Midland won both meetings 7-2. However, both matches came last fall and the teams have changed somewhat since then.

Freshman Janneke Garos leads MC's balanced attack. Garos took the Rolex ITCA Small College singles title and teamed with sophomore partner Sharla Barone for the Rolex ITCA Small College doubles crown. They then won a match in the Rolex Intercollegiate Indoor Championships, the first community college win in that event.

Barone proved she also could play singles, taking the Volvo ITCA Junior College Indoor title over Garos. In that same tournament, MC freshmen Alison Bradford and Maria Vago captured the doubles title.

Bradford and Vago, who were teamed in early January, advanced to the quarterfinals of a USTA professional mini-tournament in Midland. That came just a few days after Vago arrived to join the team.

Two weeks ago, Vago took the first flight singles title at the Texas-San Antonio invitational tournament. She and Bradford also won the flight one doubles crown in that event. Barone and Garos remained in Midland during the San Antonio tournament.

Rounding out the Chap squad are sophomores Maria Jimenez and Mara Lencina, plus freshman Missy O'Neill. O'Neill has been pushed for a spot in the singles line-up with some strong wins in practice this spring, along with the runner-up title in flight three singles at San Antonio.

"Odessa will be tough, especially if we don't concentrate," said MC coach Joe Williams. "The Odessa team always is pumped up against Midland, they're playing on their own courts and they usually get good fan support."

All the MC players will be on display March 19 as they present "Midland Tennis '90" at Chaparral Center.

LUBBOCK — Midland's Tony Martin drove his BMW to a Class E prepared first place victory in the Sports Car Club of America's second Solo II competition of the season Sunday at Burl Huffman Stadium.

Following Martin was another Midlander, Ken Yates, who claimed second place in the same class. Yates also drives a BMW.

The SCCA has scheduled its next Solo II competition Aprill 22 in Big Spring.

NBA ROUNDUP

Associated Press

Now you see them, now you don't. It's magic.

The Orlando Magic, that is, who set club records of 35 points in the first period and 69 in the first half. Then — poof! — a season-low 36 points in the second half as a seven-point halftime lead turned into a 130-105 loss to the Seattle SuperSonics on Monday night.

"Their trap took us out of what we were doing in the first half. We stopped rebounding and the wheels came off," Orlando coach Matt Guokas said. In the first half, he said, "We were moving and screening and taking care of the basketball, which is the key for us."

Dale Ellis scored 24 points for Seattle and Steve Johnson had six points during a 10-0 fourth-quarter run when the Sonics broke the game open. The Sonics led 92-88 after three quarters and scored on their first five possessions of the fourth period.

Ellis, playing in his third game since being sidelined Jan. 11 because of a collapsed lung sustained in an automobile accident, made 10 of 15 shots and led seven Sonics in double figures.

Spurs 92, Timberwolves 88

Terry Cummings scored eight of his 20 points in the final 6:22 and four other San Antonio players scored in double figures. David Robinson led the Spurs with 21 points, Sean Elliott each had 16, Rod Strickland added 13 and a career-high 17 assists, and Willie Anderson scored 12 points. Randy Breuer had 21 for Minnesota.

Lakers 107, Hornets 102

James Worthy scored 26 points and the Lakers took advantage of a fourth-quarter lapse by Charlotte for their fourth straight triumph and the Hornets' sixth consecutive loss.

Bucks 109, Nets 104

Ricky Pierce scored 24 of his 39 points in the second half, 10 in the fourth quarter, and Milwaukee snapped a six-game losing streak. The Bucks trailed 76-66 midway through the third quarter but got to 82-78 entering the final quarter and outscored New Jersey 16-6 to open the fourth quarter.

Warriors 112, Clippers 109

West Texas recoupes losses

In midmorning trading West Texas intermediate regained some of its weekend losses and jumped 18 cents $20.42. Posted price remains stable at $19.50.

Energy futures prices fell Monday amid concern over a high OPEC oil production estimate and unseasonably warm weather in Europe and the eastern United States.

It was the fifth straight day of declines in the markets for crude oil, heating oil and gasoline.

The contract for April delivery of West Texas Intermediate, the key grade of U.S. crude oil, fell 19 cents to $20.24 a 42-gallon barrel after declining $1.05 in the previous four trading sessions. Subsequent contract months fell as much as 32 cents a gallon Monday.

Andrew Lebow, an energy market analyst with E.D.&F. Man International Futures Inc., said traders were unsettled by a report that production by the 13-member Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries may have soared in February.

The report by the Middle East Economic Survey said that OPEC production may have hit 24 million barrels a day last month, 800,000 to 1 million barrels higher than estimated by the International Energy Agency, Lebow said.

Dollar rises, gold declines

LONDON (AP) — The dollar rose against major foreign currencies today morning in thin, cautious European trading. Gold prices were lower, fueled by the dollar's continued strength, traders said.

"The market is fundamentally pro-dollar, but the market is cautious because of possible central bank intervention," said one trader with a foreign bank in Milan, Italy.

- 1.5270 Swiss francs
- 5.7965 French francs
- 1.9275 Dutch guilders
- 1,266.05 Italian lire
- 1.1795 Canadian dollars

Dealer said many traders were on the sidelines waiting for the scheduled release of U.S. retail sales figures later today. If the figures show the U.S. economy is not slowing as much as economists believe it is, the dollar could move higher, dealers said.

Uncertainty about the German mark prior to Sunday's East German elections, relatively low Japanese interest rates, and worries about political instability in Japan have made the dollar a safe haven currency, they said.

"There is a fundamental weakening of the yen," said Tim Potter, a senior dealer at Goldman Sachs in London.

In Tokyo, where trading ends as Europe's business day begins, the dollar rose 0.67 yen to a closing 152.67 yen. Later, in London, it was quoted at a higher rate of 152.75 yen.

Stocks seesawed, Dow up 3.38

NEW YORK — Stocks seesawed in light trading Monday, with the 30-stock Dow Jones industrial average ending the day up 3.38 points, to 2,686.71.

It was the slowest session of the year, with volume on the Big Board falling to 114.8 million shares, down sharply from 150.4 million on Friday.

It was the lowest volume since Dec. 26, when 77.61 million shares changed hands in post-Christmas trading. The smallest number of shares traded this year had previously been 118.39 million on Feb. 12.

Rorer, maker of Maalox antacid products, stood at the top of the most-active list, rising 2⅛, to 65¾, as a definitive merger agreement was announced with the French company Rhone-Poulenc and new details emerged of the $3.15 billion deal.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

FAA orders airline hydraulic changes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government announced orders that airlines modify all DC-10 jetliners so they can be controlled when hydraulic systems are damaged.

The tentative orders Monday came eight months after a United DC-10-10 crashed in Sioux City, Iowa, killing 112 of the 295 people aboard. An investigation into the crash continues, but pilots said they lost hydraulic steering control after the plane's tail engine exploded.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole warned President Bush of a political backlash from voters unless the administration speeds up work on the savings and loan bailout.

The Resolution Trust Corp., the new agency created to dispose of failed thrifts, has sold only 50 of the more than 380 S&Ls under government control and "is not living up to expectations," Dole said Monday.

AT&T to share semiconductor ingredient

NEW YORK (AP) — AT&T signed an agreement to share a key ingredient used to make advanced semiconductors under the auspices of Sematech, the consortium of computer chip makers formed to boost U.S. semiconductor competitiveness.

Under the agreement Monday, American Telephone & Telegraph Co. will allow a division of Olin Corp. to make and sell a chemical used to etch extremely detailed electronic circuitry on chips.

Retail sales drop sharply

By John D. McClain

WASHINGTON (AP) — Retail sales fell 0.9 percent in February, the sharpest decline since last October, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said sales totaled a seasonally adjusted $146.5 billion after rising a revised 2.8 percent in January. Sales dropped off 1.3 percent last October, rose 0.7 percent in November and then slipped 0.3 percent in December.

Much of January's strength, which originally was reported to be a 1.6 percent gain, came from a 9.9 percent jump in automobile sales after cash rebates and low-interest financing were restored to attract prospective buyers to dealer showrooms.

The incentives remained in effect in February, but nevertheless sales fell 6.0 percent. It was the biggest drop since auto sales fell 26.5 percent in January 1987. Automobiles represent about 20 percent of retail sales.

Retail sales, representing about one-third of the nation's economic activity, are watched as a barometer of economic growth. The construction and much of the manufacturing sectors of the economy have been battered by high interest rates as the Federal Reserve kept a tight rein on credit to cap inflation.

Sales of durable goods — big-ticket items expected to last more than three years — dropped 3.0 percent last month after advancing 6.7 percent in January.

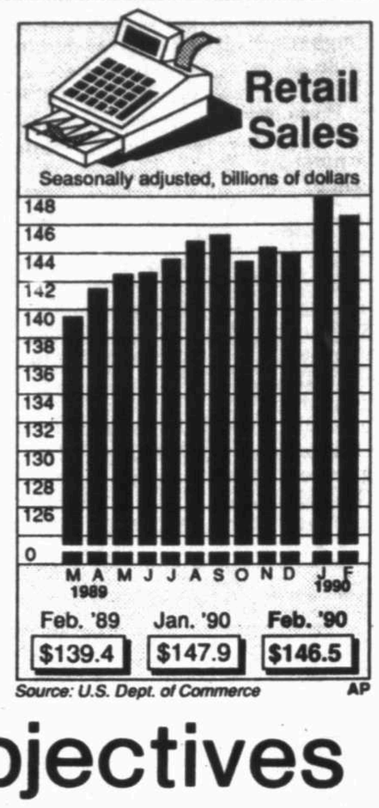

Building materials rose 1.4 percent after a 2.2 percent gain a month earlier. Furniture and other home furnishings rose 0.5 percent following a 3.6 percent increase in January.

Sales of non-durable goods such as food and clothing rose 0.4 percent, down slightly from a 0.5 percent increase in January.

Gains were posted by department stores, up 2.0 percent; apparel stores, up 1.6 percent; restaurants and bars, up 1.4 percent, and grocery stores, up 0.5 percent.

Declines included gasoline stations and drug stores, both down 0.8 percent.

For the three months from December through February, overall retail sales were up 1.2 percent.

Simmons tells Lockheed objectives

NEW YORK (AP) — NL Industries Inc. Chairman Harold Simmons, waging a proxy battle for control of the Lockheed Corp. board, contends he can increase the firm's returns by concentrating on its core defense and aerospace businesses.

Simmons, the company's largest stockholder with a 19 percent stake, told securities analysts Monday that if he wins control of the Lockheed board at the firm's annual meeting March 29, he also would force the company's smaller divisions to turn an acceptable level of profits.

The Dallas-based investor shrugged off reminders that many proxy fights by prominent takeover specialists have ended in failure, calling himself a manager, not a corporate raider. Simmons also has a $1.1 billion takeover bid outstanding for Georgia Gulf Corp.

Simmons pointed to his successes with NL and other companies as proof he is qualified to run — and improve — Lockheed. However, he had no answers about how he would go about redeploying Lockheed's assets and reducing its overhead, and said he would not know until after he had control of the board.

"You don't snap your fingers overnight," he said.

Simmons and NL President J. Landis Martin criticized Lockheed management for placing more than $2 billion in assets in its technology services and electronic systems divisions that produce little profit.

They portrayed Lockheed Chairman Daniel M. Tellep as unable to get a handle on the firm's problems and use its assets properly.

Tellep, hearing a description of the analysts' meeting, responded that the assessment "reflects a lack of understanding of Lockheed" and said Simmons and Martin were stating Lockheed's record "in a way to make their case."

Martin criticized Tellep for calling Lockheed's 1989 performance — when the company's earnings fell to $2 million from $624 million

Greyhound chairman takes goodwill ride

By Ron Word

The chairman of strike-crippled Greyhound visited hospitalized passengers, offered a reward for information about a sniper, rode a bus through Florida to prove it safe and embraced picketers before conceding he's pessimistic about a settlement anytime soon.

Greyhound executive Fred G. Currey carried on a whirlwind of activity in Florida Monday, seeking to calm public fears about the safety of bus travel after a strike that started March 2 and has erupted into violence several times.

"We made a very, very fine offer to the Greyhound Amalgamated Council. They shouted it down, just as those men are shouting on the street," he said, pointing to pickets outside the Miami station. "We will not raise fares to meet the exorbitant demands of the drivers."

A Greyhound bus in Connecticut was hit by sniper fire Monday, making it harder for all concerned to say the violence was unrelated to the strike.

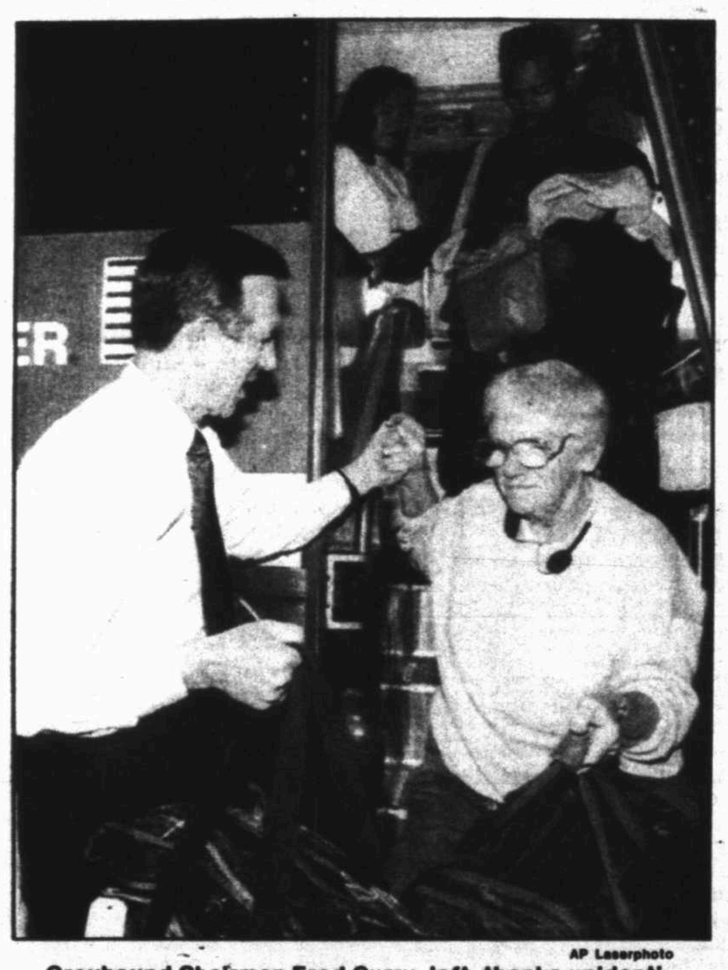

"I would say it's probably strike-related because I have been driving for 17 years and was never shot at," said union spokesman Charles True in Hartford. But pickets in Hartford denied that union members were responsible.

No one was injured in the Connecticut shooting, which occurred on Interstate 84 shortly before 11 a.m. as a New York-to-Boston Greyhound bus headed into Hartford with 19 passengers.

But the shooting in south Jacksonville injured eight and Greyhound officials quickly responded to prevent a public relations fiasco.

Agreement nearing on Venezuela debt

N.Y. Times News Service

Venezuela and its commercial bankers are moving toward a debt agreement that is expected to include a provision for substantial — but temporary — debt relief.

The relief would come in the form of a large reduction in the interest rates that Venezuela pays on its $21 billion of loans from commercial banks.

If economic conditions improve over the next several years, the interest rates would be returned toward their present level.

Commercial bankers and officials in the negotiations, which have been going on and off for more than a year, said the proposal was necessary because the bankers believe that Venezuela, unlike Mexico and Brazil, does not need debt reduction.

The country's push for it, they argue, is politically motivated to help the government win support for the difficult economic changes it put through to fight inflation.

The restructuring has pushed the country into a deep recession, with the economy declining by at least 8 percent over the last year.

If an agreement is reached that contains the temporary reduction, it would be the latest under the Bush administration's strategy to ease Third World debt called the Brady Plan, for Treasury Secretary Nicholas F. Brady.

Mexico was the first to reach an agreement under the Brady plan, which was announced a year ago.

"We are certainly moving very nicely in a very good atmosphere toward an agreement," said one banker about the Venezuela negotiations.

"In the next couple of weeks we could be there." Like others commenting on the negotiations, he asked not to be identified.

Reference more than buyer's guide

Are you still befuddled by buzzwords such as ASCII, RS-232, DTE, DCE, BBS, modulation/demodulation, and baud? Here's an excellent resource to help you "unbuzz" it all: The Modem Reference, a Brady book by Michael A. Banks.

"The Modem Reference" is actually a very modest title. The book is much more than just a buyers guide to modems. Disguised in the subtitle — "Complete Guide to Selection, Installation, and Applications" — the "Applications" part covers a wealth of information about every aspect of what Glossbrenner refers to as "the electronic universe."

An obstacle in writing books like this is that it's difficult to convey a technical subject in simple terms that people can understand without accuracy and/or completeness suffering as a result. Banks has an informal, personal, easy to understand writing style that manages this very well — he forfeits complexity without sacrificing accuracy.

One of his mottos in writing the book reflects a theme that I've tried to impart throughout this column: it's not absolutely necessary to understand everything about the way your computer or modem works.

But the fact is, the more we do understand the easier it gets and the more powerful a tool it becomes for us. And it can save you a whole lot of trouble when things don't work the way they should, which is all too often. What this comes down to is CONTROL: the more you know about why things work the way they do, the better off you are to make sure they work the way YOU want them too.

The book consists of 18 chapters and appendices arranged in five parts. Parts One and Two — Getting Started, and Making Connections — especially, should be required reading for anyone interested in working with a modem. The five chapters

RIDE: Chairman rides bus to show support

The eight passengers were hurt when someone fired a bullet through the front of a Greyhound bus Sunday night in south Jacksonville. The passengers were injured by fiberglass and shrapnel.

The two executives visited the three passengers still hospitalized. Five others were released after hospital treatment. They also visited bus riders who were put up by the company in a Jacksonville hotel overnight. Then they boarded a bus from Jacksonville to Orlando.

"Their silence is deafening," he said. Asked why he rode the bus, he said: "I took the trip because I thought it was important for Greyhound people not to be intimidated."

The latest violence came as federal mediators in Washington, D.C., met for three hours Monday for "an exploratory, informal meeting" with union officials.

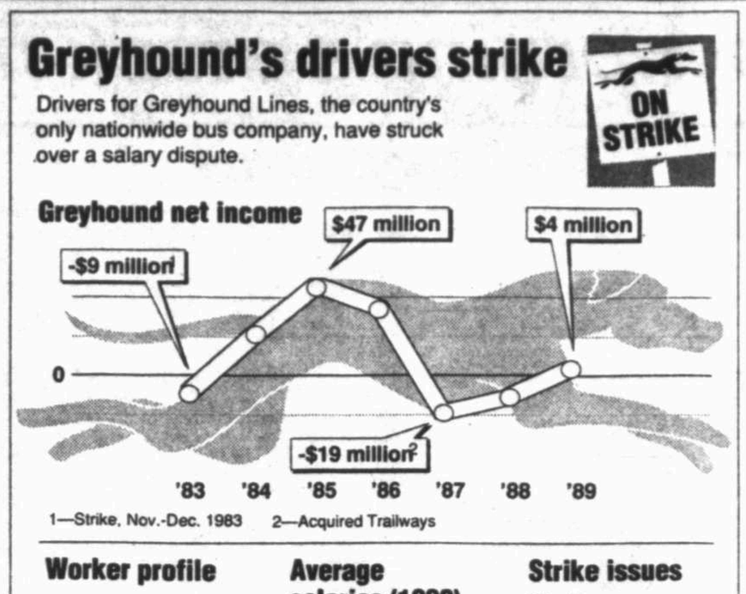

Jim Power, a spokesman for the Federal Mediation Service, said the union "agreed to the possibility of additional meetings with the mediation service and management to start the collective bargaining process again."

Greyhound said executive Vice President P. Anthony Lannie, Greyhound's chief negotiator, would meet Wednesday with the head of the mediation service, Bernard DeLury.

The company said it expected DeLury to present his recommendations for ending the strike.

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration signaled interest Monday in Rep. Dan Rostenkowski's plan to raise certain taxes and freeze domestic spending, while Rostenkowski's Democratic colleagues were far more cautious in their responses.

These responses underscored the political maneuvering set up by Rostenkowski's exhortation to both parties to get serious about reducing the federal deficit.

The White House moved quickly to project an appearance of reasonableness while at the same time affirming — in more polite language than usual — President Bush's opposition to tax increases.

But the Democratic leadership was clearly holding back, in part because of fears that the White House might be preparing to spring a trap that would leave Democrats in the position of calling for unpopular tax increases and Social Security benefit cuts.

In any event, it was clear that Rostenkowski, who outlined his plan in a Washington Post Op-Ed article Sunday, had upstaged the House and Senate Budget Committee chairmen and the rest of the Democratic leadership.

Richard G. Darman, director of the Office of Management and Budget, praised the plan as "courageous and serious," pointedly saying that it was the first the administration had seen from congressional Democrats that it considered worthy of discussion.

"We've said all along that we were prepared to discuss any reasonable proposal on its merits," Darman said in an interview Monday evening on public television's "MacNeil/Lehrer Newshour."

But Darman acknowledged that the administration opposed the two key elements of the plan by the House Ways and Means Committee chairman: the tax increases and a one-year freeze on cost-of-living adjustments to Social Security recipients.

"We do have some very fundamental objections to parts of it," Darman said.

The proposal is to increase excise taxes on gasoline, alcohol and tobacco and to raise the income tax rate of the wealthiest taxpayers to 33 percent, from 28 percent, while freezing all federal spending for a year and cutting military spending by $150 billion over five years.

The package, outlined by Rostenkowski on Sunday, is intended to reduce the budget deficit by more than $500 billion over five years and establish a basis for budget negotiations between Congress and the administration.

The House speaker, Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., called Rostenkowski's plan "a very interesting suggestion," but repeated his longstanding view that tax increases had little chance of approval without Bush's support.

American to add 39 flights

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — American Airlines Inc. announced Monday it would add 39 domestic flights beginning next month, including two cross-country flights from Newark to Los Angeles.

Also Monday, Fort Worth-based American exercised options to buy seven MD-11 jumbo jets from McDonnell Douglas Corp. The move gives American 15 firm orders for the MD-11s and 251 overall.

The route expansion announced Monday will give American, the nation's No. 1 carrier, 2,300 daily flights.

(From 4C)

He dives into the more technical aspects of telecommunications but his writing style makes easy work of it all. In fact, he includes probably the most "readable" discussion of modem speeds and the distinction between baud rate and bits-per-second that I've seen anywhere.

Many of you are still put off by the arcane terminology associated with computers and telecomputing in particular. Why, you ask, should we have to put up with terms like "RS-232C" anyway, especially when no one really knows what the heck it means in the first place? Unfortunately, techno-babble is here to stay.

All I can tell you is this: Books like "The Modem Reference" show us that you CAN understand what these things mean — you just have to make a small effort to learn about them. So quit whining and start reading. Also, mysterious terms like "RS-232C" actually make things a lot easier as soon as you do know what they refer to. It's a lot harder to say "interface between data terminal equipment and data communication equipment employing serial binary data interchange," when we can just say "RS-232C" and mean the same thing.

In Part Two, Making Connections, the author leads you through the process of dialing up another computer and takes you behind the scenes so that you can understand WHY things work the way they do.

Chapter 9, "File Transfers," is especially important because one of the main reasons for going online is to send and/or receive program and data files. The author explains, in plain English, the concepts and terms you'll come across whether you're dealing with a national data service like CompuServe or a local bulletin board like Phantom Mesa in Midland.

Parts Three and Four take a closer look at using online systems. This runs the gambit from local BBSs to E-Mail and specialized database services. Here he provides an overview of the kinds of services available through commercial online systems, communications companies, and information retrieval services, and then gives a brief, but satisfying, account of the major vendors within each category. This is where you can get a quick look at CompuServe, Delphi, MCI Mail, and Dow Jones News/Retrieval, for example.

A larger weakness really has nothing to do with the author or the material per se, but is rather a reflection of the state of the telecomputing industry — things change fast around here. Even though the book is less than 2 years old, there are parts of the text that are out-of-date. Most of this involves relatively minor points, and doesn't undermine the wealth of useful information throughout the rest of the book.

There is very little discussion of the role of digital networks, for example, and such was warranted when the book was published. With the advent of ISDN (Integrated Services Digital Network), however, this means an important and up-and-coming aspect of telecommunications is hardly mentioned. ISDN is an international standard that allows a communications channel to simultaneously carry voice, video, and data. At the Interface '90 computer conference in Dallas last week, I saw that Southwestern Bell alone has installed more than 17,000 ISDN lines to date.

A more serious example occurs in Banks' discussion of The Source in the chapter on "Full-Service Consumer and Business Networks." The Source was bought-out by CompuServe and hasn't operated since July 1989. Again, knowing this, you can simply save yourself 7 pages of reading and never miss a beat.

If this was a bigger problem, I might recommend that you wait for the next edition of the book. However, there's too much that's too good not to get in on right now. The portions that are behind the times are relatively minor, and besides, I'm not sure when a new edition will be coming out. Buy the book now and you'll be that much farther ahead.

SIMMONS: Will increase returns for Lockheed in 1988 — the results of a transitional year as the company took a number of large write-downs.

Even without the writedowns, which included $300 million for unexpected design changes on a Navy plane, Lockheed's earnings were down except for its missile and aerospace business, Martin said.

Martin also disputed a statement by Tellep that Lockheed's stock price, which closed Monday at $35.50 a share on the New York Stock Exchange, reflected an industry-wide malaise.

During the session with analysts, Martin said Lockheed sales growth was running behind other defense contractors and that the firm's stock price, which is down from a high of $54.75 over the past year, was running behind the Standard & Poor's index of defense and aerospace firms.

Analysts showed some skepticism of NL's arguments. One analyst, noting that the Standard & Poor's index includes the atypical performance of Boeing Co., said Lockheed is running on a par with other defense contractors, including Northrop Corp.

Martin called the company's 1988 restructuring plan a failure, saying Lockheed has been unable to complete the planned sale of four of its non-core businesses, has not disposed of the real estate it wanted to sell and suspended its stock buyback plan.

Tellep responded in a telephone interview that after selling three divisions, Lockheed withdrew its Calcomp unit when it did not receive fair offers. Now, however, the division "has more value at present time retained as part of Lockheed" and is returning to profitablity, Tellep said.

The real estate sales have not been completed because of environmental concerns, and Lockheed suspended its stock buyback in response to Simmons' stock pur

Liquidate Your IRA.

NCNB Texas introduces the Retirement Fund Savings account, a two-tiered money market IRA that gives your money real flexibility.

With a Retirement Fund Savings account you get the best of both worlds. First, your money earns interest at rates substantially above the passbook rates you're probably getting now. And second, your account is liquid, so you can move your money to other IRA investments whenever you want to.

7.92% Annual Yield* 7.65% Annual Rate* $10,000 MINIMUM

7.66% Annual Yield* 7.40% Annual Rate* $1,000 MINIMUM

Plus, when you roll over or transfer into a Retirement Fund Savings account with a deposit of $10,000 or more, we'll give you Ernst & Young/Kiplinger's "Guide to Retirement Security" video and handbook absolutely free.

So take a look at your current IRA rates. If they're not up to par, consider rolling over or transferring to the Retirement Fund Savings account at NCNB Texas. With great rates and flexibility, the conclusion is obvious: It's time to liquidate your IRA.

Mitchell finals six wells in North Texas

THE WOODLANDS (SWN) — Mitchell Energy & Development Corp. has announced the completion of one oil and five natural gas producers in Wise County, North Texas.

The largest gas well, the W.A. Askey No. 1, test-flowed at an average daily rate of 5.4 million cubic feet of gas on a 20/64-inch choke with 2,070 pounds per square inch (psi) of flowing tubing pressure. Perforations were in two zones of the Boonsville (Bend Conglomerate) Field between 6,058 feet and 6,191 feet.

Three other natural gas producers, the J.T. Ramsey No. 2, the Alice Meadows No. 3 and the Medora Caraway No. 4 tested at rates ranging from 3.5 to 4.4 Mmcfd.

A sixth well, the P.H. Stone No. 2, tested at 206 barrels of oil per day on a 26/64-inch choke with 280 psi of flowing tubing pressure. Three zones were perforated in the Chico West Field from 5,286 feet to 5,819 feet.

OIL AND GAS DIGEST

Mobil sells 5 percent of North Sea field

NEW YORK (SWN) — Mobil Corp. and OMV, the Austrian oil, gas and petrochemical company, have reached agreement for Mobil to sell to OMV for $200 million 5 percent of the North Sea Beryl field and its satellite fields and a proportionate interest in the associated gas transportation and processing system. Mobil retains a 45 percent interest in the properties and is the operator.

The agreement will require approval by the U.K. Department of Energy. In addition, the sale would be subject to the pre-emptive rights of Mobil's existing Beryl co-licensees: Amerada Hess (20 percent), Enterprise Oil (20 percent) and North Sea Inc. (10 percent).

Conoco selling California retail outlets

HOUSTON (SWN) — Conoco has signed a letter of intent to sell the company's 62 retail outlets in California to Ultramar Inc., which operates a refinery and Beacon branded retail units in California. The company would not provide any specific information on the sale, but did say negotiations were continuing toward a definitive agreement.

Late last year, Conoco announced the properties were being put up for sale as part of the company's long term strategy to concentrate assets in areas where the company has a competitive advantage.

Mobil confirms offshore Australia well

NEW YORK (SWN) — Mobil Corp. has confirmed that the Griffin-1 well, in which its affiliate Mobil Exploration Australia holds a 35 percent interest, has successfully tested oil. The well, which is operated by BHP Petroleum (45 percent), was drilled offshore Australia in permit WA-210-P in the Barrow Sub- basin, about 60 miles northeast of Exmouth.

The Griffin-1 flowed oil from a depth interval of 8,764 feet to 8,691 feet at a stabilized flow rate of 5,400 barrels a day through a 3/4-inch choke at a flowing pressure of 886 PSI. The well achieved a maximum flow rate of 6,400 barrels a day through a 70/64-inch choke at 593 PSI flowing pressure. Oil gravity was measured at 54 degrees API.

Further production tests on the well will be carried out over a shallower depth interval and further appraisal drilling will be required to evaluate the structure.

Mitchell Energy raises capital budget

THE WOODLANDS — Mitchell Energy & Development Corp. has announced that its consolidated capital budget for the current fiscal year has been set at $208 million, compared with $195 million of expenditures last year.

In addition, its drilling partnership, MEC Development Ltd., has budgeted $48 million, up from prior-year spending of $33 million.

Mitchell spends $16.7 million on assets

THE WOODLANDS — Mitchell Energy & Development Corp. has spent $16.7 million during FY 1990 to acquire varying working and royalty interests in oil and gas properties in Texas and other states.

The purchases add approximately 14 billion cubic feet of gas and 1.4 million barrels of oil to the company's proved and probable reserves at an average cost of about $4.50 per barrel of oil equivalent.

Arco to expand Texas City-Cushing pipeline

INDEPENDENCE, Kan. (SWN) — ARCO Pipe Line Co. has announced plans to begin the first phase of its Texas City, Texas, to Cushing, Okla., crude oil pipeline expansion program which, as transportation needs develop, can increase line capacity to 200,000 barrels per day.

APL is a wholly owned subsidiary of Los Angeles-based ARCO.

The first phase will cost an estimated $48 million and increase crude oil delivery capability to Cushing from the current nominal rate of 50,000 barrels per day to 120,000 barrels per day. This rate should be reached by the third quarter of 1990.

Expansion of the pipeline is expected to increase the quantity of waterborne foreign crude delivered to the Midcontinent area and improve the liquidity of the Cushing market in the face of declining U.S. crude oil production.

Over 17 million barrels of foreign crude have been transported on the APL system since its startup in March 1988.

A critical component of the project calls for linking APL's Texas City marine terminal to the expanded distribution network which currently terminates in Houston. This strategic link, which is expected to be completed in 1990, will give foreign shippers an additional port through which to move crude from the Gulf Coast to points north and enable refiners, crude oil marketers and the trading community to easily split cargoes for multiple delivery locations.

Significant modifications in the expansion program include:

1) A new pipeline will be installed across the Houston Ship Channel to connect APL's Texas City marine terminal with the 20-inch pipeline going north to Cushing.

2) To provide crude oil shippers maximum flexibility, APL will also connect the Texas City to Cushing system with Texaco's East Houston Tank Farm and Oiltanking's Houston terminal.

3) A new tank farm and pump station will be constructed on the north side of the Houston Ship Channel to receive crude oil from the above connections and re-deliver north to the Midcontinent.

4) A new 20-inch pipeline will be constructed from Jacksboro, Texas, to Ringling, Okla.

Stock Market Gains

NEW YORK (AP) — Prices were narrowly mixed on Wall Street today as traders again bought blue chip stocks and shied away from the secondary market.

The Dow Jones industrial average was up 2.48 to 2,689.19 as of noon EST.

Declining issues were ahead of advancers by a margin of about 5 to 4, with 574 stocks rising, 694 falling and 544 unchanged on the New York Stock Exchange.

Volume on the Big Board came to 67.69 million shares at midday, compared with 54.34 million at the same time Monday.

After opening on the downside, Wall Street began to shake off a decline in the bond market, which slumped following a Commerce Department report that retail sales fell 0.9 percent in February.

The Treasury's bellwether 30-year bond was down more than $5 for each $1,000 in face amount today, while its yield rose sharply to 8.66 percent from late Monday's 8.61 percent.

Investors, as they have done for months, sought the perceived safety of blue chip issues while avoiding many secondary stocks. Analysts said traders lack confidence in the overall market but have a surplus of cash and want to invest it somewhere.

General Motors led the NYSE most-active list, gaining ¾ to 47¾.

By Nancy Miller Lewis
Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — A brief, if not protracted, history of eyeglasses:

In the beginning, there were four principal characters who influenced baby boomers' thoughts on glasses (a category that does not include sunglasses):

Marilyn Monroe and her serious specs in "How to Marry a Millionaire." That character taught boomers that "glasses" and "gorgeous" were, of course, mutually exclusive. (The Dorothy Parker quip — "Men seldom make passes at girls who wear glasses" — became a chant.)

The cartoon dog-cum-scientist Mr. Peabody in "Peabody's Improbable History." Mr. Peabody wore thick, round glasses, which told boomers he was intellectual enough to run the Way-Back Machine and escort Sherman through history.

Jane Hathaway, the Eastern intellectual secretary on "The Beverly Hillbillies," wore the same style. (Incidentally, Carrie Donovan, fashion editor of The New York Times, today wears Mr. Peabody/Jane Hathaway hoot-owl glasses. This can only mean Donovan is smart, both in the intellectual and fashionable senses.)

Ernie, the youngest son on TV's "My Three Sons." Not handsome (like brother Robbie) nor swell (like brother Chip), Ernie taught us that pesky youngest siblings had a lot to learn and therefore should observe the lives of older children closely and clearly and, preferably, through thick, oversize frames.

YES, FOR YEARS an entire generation labored under these beliefs. No one even thought about the "glasses as prosthesis" theory, as would later be proposed in a New Yorker article. After all, bifocals were for parents, not the invincible generation.

Then, almost en masse, the boomers turned 40 and suddenly found their arms were no longer lengthy enough to allow them to read the menus at Chinois on Main. This caused the entire generation to order the entree du jour as recited by the server.

Just as things were reaching a desperate state — no one over 40 could take out-of-town guests to the Hard Rock Cafe because diners there must order from the menu — Warren Beatty was photographed in a pair of very serious specs.

Suddenly all the boomers' long-held beliefs about eyeglasses were as valid as disco songs at a Bruce Springsteen concert.

When it comes to taking a closer look at baby boomers and their eyewear, some statistics provided by Harper's Bazaar magazine initially put the subject into perspective:

Between 1946 and 1964, 78 million baby boomers were born.

About 6 million of these boomers annually join the ranks of 115 million Americans who wear glasses.

THE GOOD NEWS for the boomers, however, is that as nature takes its course, the optical industry is following suit. Now glasses are no longer merely health aids but fashionable accessories that show up in the style magazines and on luminaries such as former "Dallas" beauty Linda Gray and "Murphy Brown's" Candice Bergen.

As her company celebrates its 10th anniversary, Gherardi reflects on the which-came-first-fashionable-glasses-or-celebrities-in-glasses? question. She has no doubt that good-looking frames came first. Glasses initially became "acceptable because the quality of the product was so much more appealing."

CNS Photo

Then came the award-winning ad campaigns by firms such as LA Eyeworks, featuring fashionable types such as Shari Belafonte-Harper, Paul Belmondo, Sonia Braga, Debbie Harry, Chaka Kahn and Ali MacGraw, all wearing specs.

As consumers come eye-to-eye with all the fashionable looks in optics, buying patterns are changing: Trendies are seeking smaller-size frames and often buy a few pairs at once. There is a new focus on technology as well, with "progressive" lenses and new lightweight plastics replacing what used to be such necessary evils as bifocals and Coke-bottle-thick prescriptions, respectively.

BEN THRONTON, assistant manager at a Lens Crafters location, notes that many consumers are still into oversize eyewear "but the more progressive fashion types are buying smaller frames."

The smaller frames, Thornton notes, are not only trend-setting but a boon to eyeglass wearers who have thick prescriptions. As Thornton explains it, when the oversize look was on the cutting edge, there were some corrective lenses that were just too thick for such big frames. The smaller frames accommodate the thick corrections easily.

For the eyeglass wearer who still prefers a big frame, however, the new plastics have helped, Thornton explains. He's quick to add, though, that the new plastics "don't cut down on thickness as much as they cut down on the weight of the lenses."

Experts agree that while previously heavy prescriptions now can be reduced to featherweight, actual thickness can probably be reduced by only 30 percent.

Although frames can certainly be had for less, the price range for designer eyewear (sans corrective lenses) usually begins around $100 and can escalate to $650 and higher for elaborate glasses made in precious metals.

Revay explains that it is not unusual for clients to purchase two to three pairs — or more — of glasses at once. In addition to prescription sunglasses and ones for sports, her cutting-edge consumers (who include, among others, W. Axl Rose of Guns 'N' Roses) want special glasses for the weekend and even for glitzy evenings out. In the latter case, Revay has just the ticket — 22-karat gold frames.

— Gai Gherardi

IN ADDITION to the fashion appeal of specs, health reports linking contact lenses to various maladies have caused some baby boomers to try on glasses again. There is even a segment of boomers that combines the best of both worlds: They wear their contacts and, especially during critical business situations, put on serious glasses (with window-pane lenses) to make their points.

What boomers may not love about glasses, however, are bifocals.

"For myself, bifocals were out of the question," said Camille Faure-Bent, promotions fashion editor for Harper's Bazaar. "Being in the fashion industry, I didn't want to end up in the same lens style that my parents and grandparents wore; I knew it would add years to my face."

Progressive lenses were the answer for Faure-Bent.

Progressive lenses provide both near- and far-sighted corrections but without the line or little half-moons commonly noted in bifocals. These new lenses also do away with "image jump" as the wearer looks from the top of his or her glasses to the bottom reading portion.

At Lens Crafters, progressive lenses cost $50 to $60 more than regular bifocals.

But even with all the innovations in eyewear, there are just some times when even the experts agree it's not appropriate.

Associated Press

She may be 60 years old, but she's still a kid at heart.

That's Betty Boop, the Max and Dave Fleischer cartoon flapper who was one of the first animated characters in the movies. The Boop-oop-a-doop girl will be making a return appearance via television this year, ("Betty Boop's Hollywood Mystery") and the franchisers are ready with tie-in products. Too Cute is marketing T-shirts, shorts, pants and jackets with her likeness. Western Watches has a line of Boop watches, including one that features the siren fluttering her eyelashes in time. Betty Boop flats and tennis shoes are available from Prima Royale, and streetwear from United Stars.

Paris women's fashions sexy, feminine

By Suzy Patterson
Associated Press

PARIS — Soft and subtle or bright and brassy, this spring's styles are feminine from sexy top to high-hemmed bottom. The silhouette for the early 1990s, whether naughty or nice, is softly rounded to the female form.

The modern suit look is often based on bi- or multicolor combinations, with main interest on curvy jackets that plunge around a full bust over tiny lean skirts or soft, tulip-wrapped styles.

Flowered silks and solids of acid green, hot coral or yellow combine gorgeously at Ungaro, though in his top ready-to-wear the price tag is about $2,000 for an outfit.

The most winning jackets may be long and double-breasted, shortie rounded boleros, tulip-rounded at hems with curvy sweetheart necklines, or decorated with dazzling white lapels on navy. Karl Lagerfeld's asymmetrical scimitar shapes cut a handsome white swath on his dark suits.

Coat-dresses are very "in" this spring too, often with contrasting silk cuffs and lapels. A handsome navy version at Guy Laroche costs about $700 in Paris, slightly more in the States.

EASY ACTION is one big message of this season's lines. And if you don't go for the short skirts, there are plenty of pants to choose from.

Even there, think short. The shorts are adorable, often full and quite dressy, worn with jackets in a different color for a citified look. Top a pair of bermudas with a typically braided and gold-buttoned jacket and you've got the essence of the current nymphet style at Chanel.

There are also plenty of long and easy pants, cigarette-slim cropped trousers and bicycle tights or corsairs for those who like showing lean thighs at the beach.

Transparency is a fresh look for next summer — best at the house of Chanel where designer Lagerfeld likes to play around with chic long jackets in flesh tones of pink over similarly shaded little wisps of chiffon skirts peeping out underneath.

Look also for appealing chiffon blouses layered with floppy bows to keep the look quite modest, and don't forget the light organzas. Gianfranco Ferre at Dior is the couture master of this look. His checked black and white flouncy short trapeze duster coats with a huge bow at the neck would be a stunning addition to a chic woman's wardrobe.

SINCE COUTURE is impossibly expensive, Dior's ready-to-wear stylists have used the same idea, but for a less costly result.

There are plenty of dream themes to spark up summer days and nights. Animal stripes and spots are happy denizens of the Paris fashion zoo, still tops at Jean-Louis Scherrer, who sees spots in everything from suits to evanescent chiffon or georgette silk late-day wear.

Sailor styles still abound on the bounding fashion main, and the shops are already full of nautically inspired separates: gold-buttoned blue or white jersey or linen pea jackets, officers' or mess jackets, navy shorts and corsairs, and striped T-shirts or pants galore. Emanuelle Khanh's sailor line looks very handsome in shades of burnt siena linen.

IN ANOTHER VEIN, Yves Saint Laurent's ruffled, dotted Carmen Miranda dresses and jeweled tops borrowed from the bullring are opulent enough to attract all eyes at any kind of shindig.

His off-shoulder white or navy draped Greek dresses looked fetching as seen on models pulled down to bare a breast but are currently being sold and worn to cover the whole chest.

Besides bits of titillating immodesty like that, Paris is also betting on warm-weather holidays with lots of bare-midriff ideas, sarong skirts, strapless bustier or backless tops for dressy late-day.

Valentino teams a draped hot-colored print sarong skirt (over $1000) with neatly fitted jackets in shades of peacock turquoise or flame red linen jackets — also pricey, though similar styles can be found in less expensive labels.

Fabrics for the feminine clothes are soft and sensual, even linens and wools that never looked lighter. Cotton gabardine, poplin and piques with flowery rather than waffled weaves have a fresh appeal.

Garden catalogs planting seeds of flowering fantasy

By Erma Bombeck

It's the season of the gardening catalogs. You know the ones I mean. They're the tomes that arrive when the snow is falling and tease you with pictures of pansies the size of satellite dishes and a 7-year-old child dwarfed by a border plant.

Bombeck

If these mail-order nurseries were doing a profile on people they hoped to seduce, I'd be it: High school graduate. Native intelligence. Loves flowers. Has blind trust in anyone who has dirt under his fingernails and wears a Land's End shirt. Must be willing to believe — even that Jaclyn Smith shops at K mart. Must follow directions and plant bulbs when told, yet have courage to face disappointment that when she never sees them, she either planted them upside down or they came up and died while she was in the shower.

Plants have to be the ultimate challenge. They don't bark when they're thirsty, scratch at the door when they want air or sunshine, or bring you their dish when they're hungry. That's why I can't figure out how some plant people know what plants are thinking and the rest of us are just out of it.

The other day I took a plant back to the supermarket that died before I could unpack my groceries. The man in produce who sold it to me said, "It should be obvious that it's stressed out."

The plant hadn't done anything but ride in the front seat of a car for eight blocks. "How do you know that?" I asked.

"Just look at it," he said. "It's drooping and the leaves are curling. It's probably not happy with its present location."

He felt the leaves and looked at me. "Death by dust is a terrible way to die." That's another thing. How come everyone in this world has a time to die, but when a plant expires, someone points a finger at you and says, "You killed it"?

So why do I fill an order blank every winter with a wish list of bulbs and annuals? I guess I can't get out of my mind the story of a British housewife who bought a small plant for her living room. It seems it was a fatsia japonica, which grows 5 feet a year on a pint of water a day. When the plant grew to 17 feet long, she called the parks department to coax the vine out of her window and load it on a truck and take it away. "It was a part of the family," she said, "but it had to go."

It's the dreams of which garden catalogs are made.

DEAR ABBY

Parents should remember to keep promises

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Re the 11-year-old boy who had been promised a weekend outing with his grandma, but because he swore at his mom, he was not permitted to go on the outing: You said the punishment was unfair because the grandma was also being punished. True, but you overlooked a far more important point: Once something is promised, it should be delivered — regardless. If the child does something for which he deserved to be punished, then find an alternative punishment.

Van Buren

Many years ago, my daughter and her friend "Mary" (both in high school) broke a rule that called for some kind of punishment. Mary's parents punished her by refusing to let her go to the homecoming dance — after they had previously granted her permission.

Our daughter was also punished, but we kept our word about the homecoming dance and found an alternative punishment. We never regretted our decision. — A MATTER OF PRINCIPLE

DEAR MATTER: The principle is sound. We teach children that one's word is a sacred trust by honoring the promises that we make to them. Once something is given, it is never to be taken back.

Conversely, if a child bounces a basketball in the house and his mother says, "If you bounce that ball in the house one more time, I am going to take it away from you" — and the child continues to bounce the ball, the mother should make good her promise and take the ball away from the child.

DEAR ABBY: I've learned a great deal from reading your column. It also stirs up a lot of memories. Recently when you said, "You never forget the hurts you suffered in school," it struck a chord with me.

I went to a small high school. There were 32 kids in my class — 13 girls and 19 boys. All the girls took home economics. Ten girls were selected to serve the seniors at the banquet before the prom. It was considered an honor. I never could understand why they didn't ask all 13 girls to serve. Why only 10?

I was a good student, active in chorus and band, but I was rather shy. I weighed 90 pounds and was a 5-foot-2 string bean. I was heartbroken when I wasn't chosen to serve. The other two girls who weren't asked had boyfriends and weren't interested in serving, so it didn't bother them.

The home economics teacher had us three who were excluded sit at a table in the corner while the other 10 "practiced" — learning the correct way to serve.

I will never forget sitting there, staring down at my plate, trying to hold back the tears. After class, I ran to the bathroom and cried.

TAXPAYERS' RIGHTS, REMEDIES, RESPONSIBILITIES

Want to learn more about the property tax system? That's possible by reading a pamphlet the State Property Tax Board has written and made available at the local appraisal district office.

It's called Taxpayers' Rights, Remedies, Responsibilities and it may help you save money. Learn about tax relief available through

- homestead exemptions
- disabled veteran exemptions
- productivity appraisal for farm, ranch, and timber land
- tax deferral for over-65 homeowners

You'll learn how your property is appraised. That way, you can decide if the appraisal district's value is reasonable.

If you think it isn't, the pamphlet tells you how to prepare an appeal to the appraisal review board. You'll learn the types of protests the appraisal review board can hear and useful evidence to bring to your hearing.

Important dates in the tax year are listed. You'll know what your responsibilities are and when you are obligated to satisfy them.

Remedies is free and it's available in both English and Spanish. Ask for yours today at

PART-TIME JOB$ AVAILABLE APRIL 1

Effective April 2, the Midland Reporter-Telegram will become a morning newspaper instead of an afternoon newspaper. As a result we have several routes which will need to be re-filled with qualified, responsible individuals. Due to this one-time large number of routes becoming available, now is the best time ever to obtain a route in your area!

Often asked questions:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current carrier force is already 50% adult and 50% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:
- adults who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- youths who are involved in afternoon school functions, but want to work!

Depending on the size of the route(s), from $150 to $500 monthly! Some motor routes make even more, although currently none are expected to be available. Depending on your service record, you may qualify to move up to a motor route later!

The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the route(s). Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many carriers choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Some collecting in person will be necessary though.

When do the papers have to be delivered by?

6:00 am Monday - Friday, and 7:00 am Saturday and Sunday.

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, carriers do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!

PRODUCTIVITY APPRAISAL

MAY LOWER THE PROPERTY TAXES ON YOUR FARM, RANCH, OR TIMBERLAND

Texas law provides farmers and ranchers, and timber growers with a way to lower their property taxes, known as productivity appraisal.

If you qualify, your agricultural land will be taxed on its capacity to produce crops, livestock, or timber, instead of its value on the real estate market. Productivity appraisal can lower the taxable value of your land, and lower your property taxes as a result.

If your land has never received productivity appraisal, you must apply to the appraisal district no later than Monday, April 30, to get tax benefits for 1990. If you miss this deadline, you may still be able to apply, but you will pay a penalty. Check with your appraisal district office.

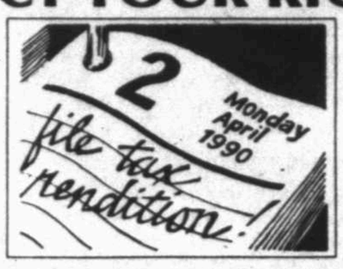

If your land already receives agricultural or timber appraisal, you normally don't need to reapply unless the chief appraiser requires you to. If an annual application is required, the appraisal district will notify you by mail.

For more information and application forms, contact the appraisal district office at the address shown below:

PROTECT YOUR RIGHTS—

RENDER YOUR PROPERTY

A rendition is a report to the appraisal district that lists all the taxable property you own or control on January 1, 1990. The form is available at your local appraisal district or you may draft a similar form.

You must file a rendition if you own tangible personal property used to produce income—such as the inventory and equipment used by a business.

The advantages of filing a rendition:

- You give your opinion of your property's value. If the appraisal district wants a higher value for your property, it must notify you in writing of the higher value and explain how you can protest that value to the appraisal review board.
- You record your correct mailing address so your tax bills will go to the right address. If your bill is mailed to the wrong address, the law still holds you responsible for paying your taxes on time or paying extra charges for late payments.
- You can also file a report of decreased value, to notify the appraisal district of significant depreciation to your property in 1989. The district will look at your property before assigning a value in 1990.

The last day for filing or postmarking 1990 renditions is Monday, April 2. You can get an extra 30 days if you ask for it in writing before the April 2 deadline.

For more information, get a free copy of the pamphlet, Taxpayers' Rights, Remedies, Responsibilities, at your appraisal district office or from the State Property Tax Board in Austin.

HOMESTEAD EXEMPTIONS

MAY LOWER YOUR HOME'S PROPERTY TAXES

A homestead exemption lowers the property taxes on your home by lowering its taxable value. For example, if your home is valued at $50,000 and you receive a $5,000 homestead exemption, your home will be taxed as if it were worth only $45,000.

You qualify for a homestead exemption if you owned your home on January 1 and used it as your primary residence on that date. It doesn't matter whether your home is a house, a condominium, or a mobile home.

Exemptions are available to all homeowners to lower their school taxes. Additional exemptions are available to homeowners who are disabled or age 65 and over. And, if you receive the over-65 exemption, you also qualify for a ceiling on school taxes. Other exemptions may be offered to homeowners by school districts, counties, cities, and special districts.

Who should apply? If you received a homestead exemption on your home in 1989, you won't need to re-apply for 1990 unless your chief appraiser requires it.

If you haven't received an exemption on your present home, or if you've moved to a new home, make a new application for 1990.

The last day to file for applications is April 30, 1990. Contact your appraisal district before then if you need more time to file.

For more information, get a free copy of the pamphlet, Taxpayers' Rights, Remedies, Responsibilities, at your appraisal district office or from the State Property Tax Board in Austin.

SR-14 On term sales only; for owner occupied properties, seller will contribute 5% down payment on behalf of buyer if offer is submitted at or above listed term price.
SR-15 _____ believed inoperable and VA will not repair.

WE NEED YOUR HELP: VA welcomes comments concerning the condition of our properties. Any improprieties should be reported to the VA Regional Office at 817-757-6869.

The offer which best serves the interest of VA will be processed for acceptance. The name of the successful offeror and sales broker will appear in subsequent publications. VA will accept cash offers up to 10 percent below the advertised term sales price. VA also will pay reasonable loan discount points and buyers' closing costs on cash offers when requested on the Cash Sale Addendum to Offer to Purchase. However, the combined loan discount points, buyers' closing costs to be paid by VA and the discount for cash may not exceed 10 percent of the term list price. Offers must be submitted at term listed price when buyers request a new GI loan with $1.00 move-in. Interest rate of available financing is 9.5 percent (APR 9.6 percent).

Purchase offers requesting VA vendee financing (Term Sales) must have VA Form 26-6705B, Credit Statement of Prospective Purchaser and Verification of Employment/Income, as outlined in Sales of VA-Acquired Properties Manual, attached to their VA Form 26-6705, Offer to Purchase and Contract of Sale. Effective June 8, 1988, all credit underwriting for purchase offers requesting VA vendee financing is being referred to Miller and Davis PC. All brokers are reminded to refer to PM letter #17-88 dated May 25, 1988, outlining these new procedures. Purchase offers not accompanied by the required employment/income verification WILL RESULT IN REJECTION OF THE PURCHASE OFFER.

Prior approval will be required by VA for the transfer of a property secured by a vendee loan if the loan is not paid in full as part of the transfer. Public Law 100-689 also permits VA to charge a one-half of 1 percent funding fee for the transfer as well as a fee for processing the approval of the transfer.

VA has properties for sale statewide. If you desire to purchase properties in other areas, please contact any sales broker located in the area in which you are interested.

FORFEITURE OF EARNEST MONEY DEPOSIT

Prior to signing the offer, broker must deposit in broker's trust account the $500 earnest money deposit. The Earnest Money Agreement (Exhibit "H") must be signed by the purchaser(s) and submitted along with the VA Form 26-6705, Offer to Purchase and Contract of Sale, on all offers. The $500 earnest money deposit will be remitted to Miller and Davis PC upon acceptance of the offer. Once a purchase offer has been accepted for processing by VA and subsequently cancelled at the request of the purchaser, the earnest money deposit WILL NOT be refunded and the purchaser will be required to forfeit the earnest money to the VA as liquidation expenses. There will be no exception to this policy. Therefore, the VA suggests that all brokers interview their buyers to assure they want the property prior to submission of an offer to purchase. VA pays 6% sales commission. Offers are subject to the provisions of VA Form 26-6705, Offer to Purchase and Contract of Sale, on which all offers must be submitted. VA Form 26-6705 must be submitted in duplicate to:
