Execution poll

As Saddam Hussein's Iraqi troops moved toward the Kuwaiti border last week, security in the war-torn Middle East again is threatened. During this latest incident, as well as during the Persian Gulf War of 1991, Presidents Clinton and Bush both hinted at "eliminating" Hussein. Lotto rolls over

No tickets correctly matched all six numbers drawn Saturday night for the twice-weekly Lotto Texas game, state lottery officials said. The numbers drawn Saturday night from a field of 50 were: 23, 13, 24, 47, 36 and 9. Lottery officials estimate the jackpot for Wednesday night's game will be $18 million.

GE to sell Kidder?

General Electric Co. has agreed in principle to sell the bulk of Kidder, Peabody & Co. to Paine Webber Group for about $670 million in stock, people involved in the negotiations said Sunday. Both sides were said late Sunday to be hammering out the terms of the deal, which would create the nation's fourth-largest brokerage house. A final agreement is expected today. The deal is a coup for Paine Webber, one of Wall Street's few remaining independent brokerage houses, which for years has been the subject of takeover rumors. But the deal also would be the end of Kidder, Peabody.

Mutant protein holds hope for reversing heart disease

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Cristoforo Pomaroli and Rosa Giovanelli had a son in 1780 in their small town in Italy, never knowing they bequeathed a genetic legacy that offers hope for reversing heart disease two centuries later.

The boy's descendants in Limone inherited a genetic defect that protects them from the scourge of Western living — fatty deposits that clog the arteries.

The 38 lucky carriers have a simple mutation in a protein of so-called good cholesterol that lets them eat red meat, sausage and butter without artery-clogging deposits.

They range in age from the teens to nearly 90. And they have never worried about strokes or heart attacks since longevity runs in the family.

Despite public rhetoric, most new jobs pay above average

By Sylvia Nasar
N.Y. Times News Service

The notion that Americans are working more for less pay is firmly embedded in public rhetoric. And it's practically gospel that the growing American economy cannot deliver the higher pay that American workers want.

No doubt many Americans are losing ground economically. But in fact most of the 5.5 million jobs the economy has added in the last 2½ years are in occupations that pay more, not less, than the average, which is now about $15.50 an hour.

This year alone, 72 percent of the 2.5 million new jobs have been for managers, from the chief executive to the branch sales manager, and for professionals, from surgeons and nurses to software programmers, accountants and high

Israel, PLO avert riot, reopen talks

■ Jerusalem apparently decides not to be deflected from the peace course, despite trauma of soldier's abduction, death.

Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Israel agreed Sunday to resume talks with the Palestinians on extending autonomy in the occupied lands, after they were suspended last week over the kidnapping of an Israeli soldier by Islamic militants.

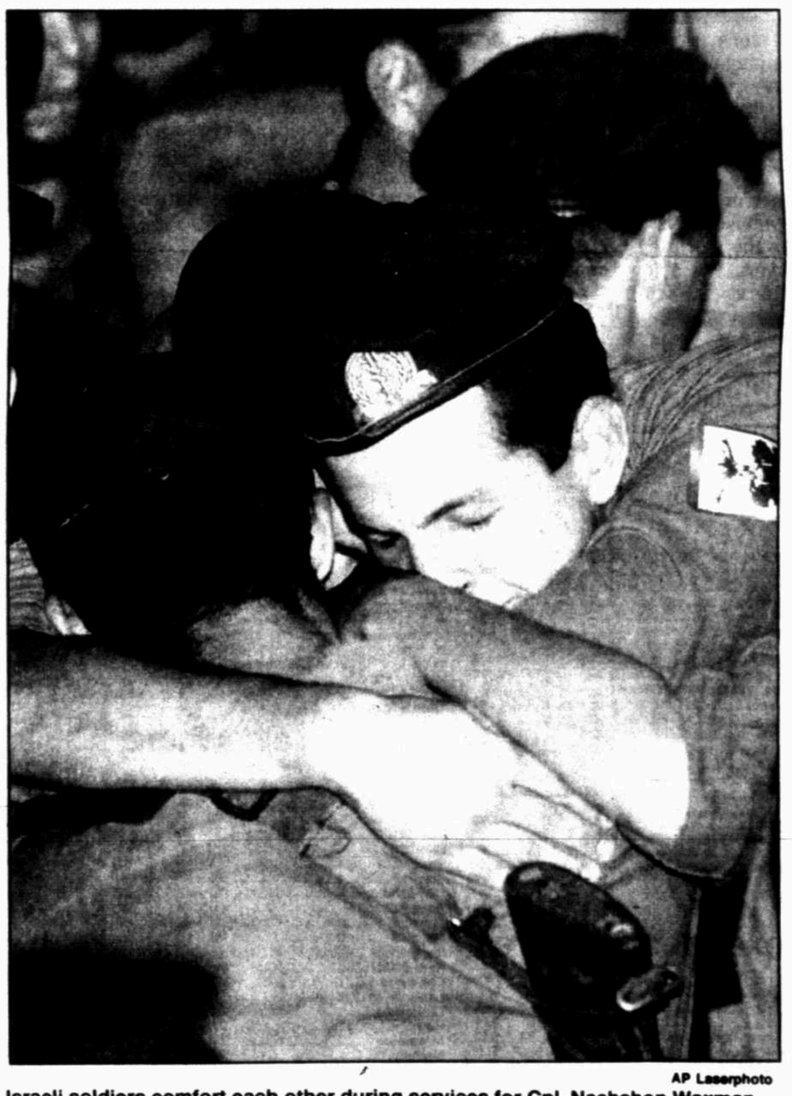

A spokesman for Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin said negotiations would resume in Cairo, Egypt, on Tuesday. PLO leader Yasser Arafat declined comment, but Palestinian sources said privately that their side would attend the talks.

The Israeli Cabinet also reopened the Gaza Strip, sealed off during the kidnapping crisis. But ministers emphasized they expected Arafat to continue with his crackdown against Hamas, the militant fundamentalist group that captured the soldier.

On another front in the Mideast peace talks, Rabin made an unannounced visit to Jordan on Sunday amid signs that Jordan and Israel were nearing a full-blown peace treaty.

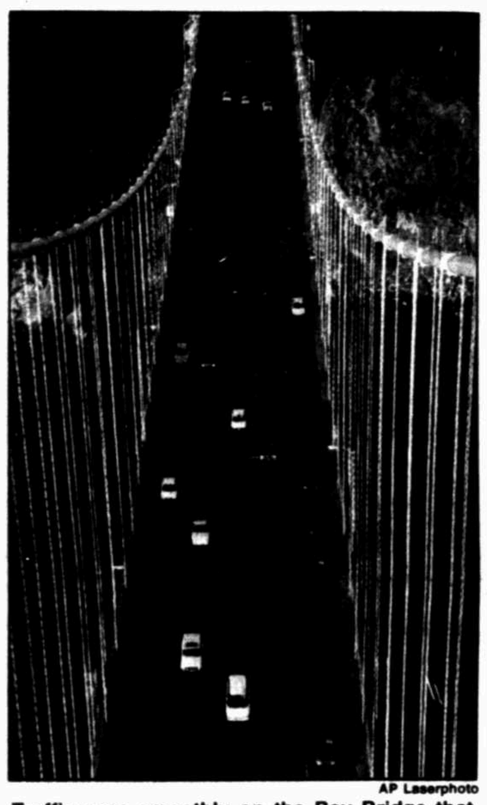

It was Rabin's third visit to the kingdom in two weeks and the fourth since July 25, when Jordan and Israel declared an end to the 46-year state of war between them. The talks also focused on water sharing and border dis-

Five years later, quake still shakes Californians

By Catalina Ortiz

APTOS, Calif. — As you walk along a narrow trail winding through a steep canyon shaded with redwoods, firs and oaks, it's hard to believe the earth below once spawned a devastating earthquake.

Yet deep within the ground beneath your feet, a deadly shudder was born on Oct. 17, 1989. Its shock waves killed 63 people and injured more than 3,700, caused $5.9 billion in damage, broke freeways and bridges and destroyed or weakened tens of thousands of buildings.

Violence kills 2 on Aristide's 1st day

Associated Press

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — A day after President Jean-Bertrand Aristide came home in triumph, violence Sunday marred his message of reconciliation and illustrated the challenge of putting Haiti's tragic past behind.

Two people were killed in the violence that began when two dozen vigilantes wielding machetes, clubs and rocks went from house to house in a Port-au-Prince slum, looking for members of a paramilitary group known to have killed and brutalized Aristide supporters.

Led by a man with "Lavalas" shaved into his head, the name of Aristide's popular movement, the vigilantes found a member of the Front for the Advancement and Progress of Haiti (FRAPH), Lorreuis Francois, and bloodied his wife's face as she told them to leave her husband alone.

A neighbor persuaded them to leave, but less than two hours later, witnesses said, Francois came outside and angrily whacked

GOP turns right, toward Reagan's legacy

By Richard L. Berke
N.Y. Times News Service

MUNCIE, Ind. — Recall the glory days of Ronald Reagan. Attack Bill Clinton. Forget George Bush. Avoid troublesome social issues like abortion. Attack Washington. Move to the right.

Six years after Reagan left the White House and two years after Bush lost the party's hold on it, Republican candidates around the country are once again trying to revive Reagan's legacy and, to some degree, his conservative legislative agenda.

An examination of campaigns for the House, the Senate and governorships nationally found that Republican candidates willing to call themselves moderates have all but disappeared. Former President Bush — who is still kept at arm's length by the party's right wing despite his fumbling embrace of it during the 1992 party convention — gets not even a passing reference from most candidates.

Still, this second attempt at a Reagan Revolution appears to be falling short of growing into a national legislative agenda, particularly the effort by Rep. Newt Gingrich of Georgia, the House Republican whip, to unify House candidates with a grand agenda called "Contract with America."

Although the contract reads like the Reagan playbook, promising to cut taxes, increase military spending and balance the budget, many candidates are

Cloudy skies again to clear

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for mostly cloudy skies in the morning, becoming partly cloudy in the afternoon, with a high near 80s and south to southwest winds at 10-20 mph. Tonight should be partly cloudy with a low in the lower 50s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tuesday should be partly cloudy with a high in the mid- to upper 70s.

After an overnight low of 61, Sunday's high reached 84, compared to the record high for that date of 92 set in 1964. The record low was 36 set in 1976.

STATE

Heavy rains made for hazardous driving conditions in many rural areas of east and southeast Texas Sunday night.

The weather capped a cloudy, showery Sunday over much of the state, with more precipitation expected Monday, according to the National Weather Service.

Some weather turned violent in south and southeast Texas, with flash flood warnings common.

College Station reported more than 4 inches of rain over three hours Sunday night, resulting in downtown street flooding. Similar rainfall covered highways with water in nearby areas in Burleson and Washington counties.

West Texas was mostly cloudy over parts of the Panhandle, but sunny elsewhere. Temperatures were generally in the 70s and 80s, with a high of 84 at Reese Air Force Base. Guadalupe Pass had the low of 69. Today there's a chance of showers and thunderstorms throughout West Texas. Highs should be in the 80s, while lows are expected in the 40s.

North Texas was cloudy and foggy with showers and thunderstorms scattered throughout the region. Paris had the region's low of 70 and Abilene had the high of 85. There should be more showers and thunderstorms today, with highs in the 80s and low in the 60s.

NATION

A storm slowly churned across the Rocky Mountain region Sunday, dumping up to 18 inches of snow in southwestern Colorado and spreading heavy rain to the Upper Mississippi Valley.

Arizona, Utah, Wyoming and Montana also reported heavy snowfall at higher elevations, including up to 10 inches near Sheridan, Wyo., and 12 inches at Fillmore, Utah.

Heavy snowfall in the San Juan Mountains of Colorado included 18 inches in Archuleta County and 14 inches in Summitville, the National Weather Service said.

As the storm system moved out of Colorado into the central Plains, showers and a few thunderstorms extended from central Kansas into south-central South Dakota.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

AVERT: Israel, Palestinians to resume talks

(From 1A)

putes, Israel radio reported.

Israel's talks with the Palestinians were suspended following the abduction of 19-year-old Nachshon Waxman, who was killed by his captors Friday night when Israeli commandos stormed their hideout near Jerusalem. A commando and three militants also died in the raid.

Fallout from the raid was still felt Sunday in Gaza, where hundreds of Palestinian police blocked roads in central Gaza City to prevent riots, then joined Israeli soldiers in defusing protests by hundreds of Islamic militants near an isolated Jewish settlement.

Violence also was reported in the West Bank, where soldiers shot and killed a Palestinian, 22-year-old Emad Edabe, near Hebron after he refused orders to halt. The army said Edabe had appeared to be committing a theft.

Under intense pressure from Rabin, who believed incorrectly that Waxman was being held in Palestinian-controlled Gaza, Arafat arrested 160 fundamentalists in a two-day sweep last week.

Arafat had been reluctant to crack down on Hamas since autonomy was established in Gaza and Jericho in May, because the movement has considerable support in the strip.

On Sunday, Palestinian police with shields and helmets formed a human chain around the Gaza's central prison, where thousands of Islamic militants had rallied Saturday, threatening to "make Gaza burn" if their arrested colleagues were not released. Some jailed fundamentalists began a hunger strike, Israel radio said.

After the police blocked eight busloads of students from Islamic University on the southern outskirts of Gaza City, the students marched toward the tiny Jewish settlement of Netzarim. Netzarim is one of several Jewish settlements which remain in the strip under Israeli army guard pending a final agreement on their status.

The students threw stones at the Israeli soldiers guarding the settlement and at Palestinian police who formed a buffer between the two groups, a Palestinian officer at the scene said.

Settlers said the rioters were armed. Israeli troops ordered the settlers to go home a machete into the first person he saw, a pull-cart driver named Jean, killing him.

Witnesses said the vigilantes came back, found Francois in his house and killed him with a single machete blow. They brought a Haitian army helmet and a uniform out into the street and set them ablaze.

Standing in the street, people watched the flames in silence.

The rampage Sunday afternoon came less than 24 hours after Aristide preached peace and reconciliation to the Haitian people in a victorious speech at the National Palace.

On Sunday, a crowd of hundreds waited while Aristide met with Maj. Gen. Jean-Claude Duperval, then yelled and pounded on the interim army chief's car when he left. Duperval said he and Aristide discussed reducing the size of the army.

Aristide's government already was moving to identify human rights violators among Haiti's military so they could disarm and fire them, sources close to the government said Sunday.

"That first process ... is supposed to be happening now," Mike Levy, an American aide to the Aristide government, told The Associated Press on Sunday.

He said special attention would be paid to the anti-gang units, which arrested and tortured Aristide supporters during the military regime that ended this month with the departure of the men who orchestrated the 1991 coup.

Aristide plans to trim the 7,450-member army to 1,500. Some of those identified for retirement will be assigned to U.S.-funded retraining or re-education programs.

But the large number of Haitian soldiers abandoning their posts in recent days makes the number uncertain.

"There may not even be 1,500 people in the army right now," Levy said.

HOPE: Mutation might reverse heart disease

(From 1A)

diet," said the University of Milan's Dr. Cesare Sirtori, who screened residents of Limone for the miracle mutation.

Ever since Sirtori discovered the mutation, called Apolipoprotein A-1 Milano for the university where he is a pharmacology professor, doctors have wondered about harnessing its power to eliminate coronary artery disease.

"Eventually it is not inconceivable that the gene could be transferred to the liver or other organs of very high-risk people who could then end up manufacturing it on their own," said Dr. Prediman K. Shah, director of the cardiac care unit at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center in Los Angeles.

Shah leads a U.S.-Swedish team examining the more immediate potential to reduce the deadly reclogging that occurs after a blocked vessel has been cleared with balloon angioplasty surgery.

In the October issue of the American Heart Association journal Circulation, Shah reports injections of a genetically engineered version of the protein dramatically reduced the reclogging of rabbits' coronary arteries.

Before and after the surgery, eight rabbits got injections of Apo Milano attached to a fat molecule that targets the proper site. Eight others got injections of only the fat molecule. Four rabbits got no treatment.

"The striking finding was in the rabbits that received the recombinant version of the Apo Milano, the amount of plaque that built up was 70 percent less than the (untreated) control group," Shah said.

Sirtori said he will publish similar results in December showing "no plaque at all" in rabbits injected with Apo Milano. Shah said Friday he will test monkeys, pigs and mice before considering human trials, a point that could take several years to reach.

Shah learned about the Limone mutation two years ago while searching for sources of synthetic high-density lipoprotein, HDL, which is cholesterol that might reduce reclogging.

He read that Sirtori stumbled upon a strange form of HDL in 1974 while examining a man with sky-high levels of cholesterol and triglycerides, but no coronary artery disease. Somehow good cholesterol was keeping the bad from wreaking havoc. Through church records in Limone, Sirtori traced the anomaly to Pomaroli and Giovanelli, then went to the town and screened every resident over the age of 10.

"I believed it was something important. I mailed samples all over Europe to colleagues. Nobody gave a damn about it," Sirtori said from Milan.

Eventually, the Swedish biotechnology firm Pharmacia A.B. began producing the laboratory version, supplying Shah.

RIGHT: Candidates turn to Reagan legacy

(From 1A)

more comfortable espousing conservatism on their own terms. That leaves Bill Clinton as the single theme that is galvanizing Republicans.

"This election is going to be a referendum on Clintonism vs. a more conservative agenda that Ronald Reagan and Dan Quayle articulate," said David McIntosh, a Republican running for the House in the Second Congressional District here in east central Indiana. "My platform is for lower taxes, less government and restoring Hoosier values."

McIntosh, who is seeking the seat being vacated by Rep. Philip R. Sharp, a Democrat, was among more than 300 Republican candidates who marched to the steps of the Capitol last month to sign the contract. But back at home, McIntosh is not making much of the document. Rather, he, like many other Republicans who trooped to Washington, is using the Reagan mantle in large part to define what he is against.

In front of his headquarters in San Diego this week, Brian Bilbray, a Republican who is trying to unseat Rep. Lynn Schenk, a first-term Democrat, also sounded a conservative call to arms: "The public is really in a state of mind where it's ready for a revolution."

Yet he, too, was reluctant to make too much of the contract, asserting that its goals "are not exactly the Ten Commandments."

The rightward, if independent-minded, tilt is significant. It would undoubtedly carry over to government if, as many analysts predict, the election leaves Clinton facing more Republicans in Congress than any Democratic president since Harry S. Truman.

Indeed, Gingrich's strategy in trying to "nationalize" the elections has as much to do with trying to set a course for those Republicans who win as influencing the races in which they are running. And even some Republicans who are tempering their support of the contract now said they would push for it once they were in office.

Bilbray, a county supervisor, asserted that even if the Republicans did not win the 40 seats they need to take control of the House, their ideology would eventually triumph. "A lot of Democrats will start changing their approach to policy making," he said.

But as a campaign tactic, it is the Democrats — eager to shift the political dialogue from attacks on Clinton — who are trying to keep the contract alive so they can depict Republicans as in lockstep with their leaders in foolishly advocating warmed-over Reaganomics.

No one has tried to draw the line more sharply than Clinton, who has derided the contract in recent days as a return to "failed policies of the past."

Still, contract or not, Republican candidates do not seem wary of the memory of Reagan's administration.

JOBS: U.S. economy delivers higher pay

school teachers. And despite its reputation for low wages, the service sector is adding most of the higher-wage jobs.

As a result, average hourly pay for all employees, adjusted for inflation, is slowly rising, government data show, not falling as so many politicians and commentators have been saying. Average hourly compensation, which includes health benefits, paid vacations, pensions and other benefits, is also rising, adjusted for inflation.

Indeed, average hourly pay has risen 2.5 percent in the early 1990s, about as much as it did throughout the entire 1980s.

"What's driving the average wage up is not so much an improvement for each individual worker but that the mix of jobs is improving," said David Wyss, an economist at DRI/McGraw-Hill, a forecasting firm in Lexington, Mass. That is, the number of higher-paying new jobs is rising faster than the number of lower-paying ones.

Other factors — bigger bonuses for executives and record amounts of time-and-a-half overtime pay for factory workers — are also helping to push up pay.

To be sure, progress on the pay front has been extremely modest compared with that of the palmy 1960s or even the troubled 1970s. Another recession could wipe out some of the gains, at least temporarily. And the increase in average pay conceals a decline in the pay of many workers, especially those with little education or experience.

Indeed, even as average hourly pay and average family income have been edging higher lately, there is evidence that hourly pay of at least the bottom half of the work force — those at the midpoint or below — continues to slip.

That may be one reason that median household income, as reported by the Census Bureau last week, has continued to stagnate after several years of economic recovery.

Labor Secretary Robert B. Reich, who is 4-foot-10, likes to say by way of illustration that averaging his height with that of basketball star Shaquille O'Neale, who is 7-1, produces an average height of 6 feet. That, he argues, shows the limitations of using an average number at a time when the gap between high- and low-paid workers is widening sharply.

But the rising average shows that the economic pie for workers as a group is growing and that there are more good jobs to go around. And it suggests that millions of men and women — in particular those with education and specialized skills — are beginning to see benefits from the efficiency-minded reorganizations that have roiled Corporate America in the last few years.

This painful restructuring, which spread from the factory floor to the service sectors in the last recession, continues to disrupt the lives of millions of workers and provoke anxiety for many more.

QUAKE: '89 temblor still affects Northern Californians

(From 1A)

Here at the epicenter of the Loma Prieta earthquake, five years later, the only traces of the destruction are a modest sign and a few fallen trees. But you don't have to go far to find it.

Empty lots gap like missing teeth on main streets in Watsonville, 15 miles to the southeast, and Santa Cruz, 15 miles west. In Oakland, 50 miles away, the Cypress section of Interstate Highway 880, where 42 people died in a ruin of collapsing pavement, has yet to be rebuilt.

Oakland's landmark City Hall is still closed, undergoing repairs expected to last another year, and many downtown businesses remain boarded up. In San Francisco, 65 miles away, the devastated Marina District has recovered, but timbers still support cracked stone archways in City Hall, and damaged freeways have yet to be fixed or replaced.

"The long-term ramifications of Loma Prieta are being felt far beyond the events of October 1989," said Jim Drago, spokesman for the state Department of Transportation.

He and others blame delays on many different things: red tape, essential engineering research, the stubborn recession that hit after the quake, public resistance to some projects and the sheer size of some repairs.

But they also believe the 15-second quake had at least one positive effect.

"It helped, I think, to focus our sight on the gallows," said Alan Lindh, a seismologist at the U.S. Geological Survey in Menlo Park. "And there's the saying that the sight of the gallows concentrates the mind."

Northern California is better prepared for a major temblor now than it was five years ago, Lindh and disaster experts believe. The region, which had not had a truly disastrous quake since 1906, really didn't know what to expect before Loma Prieta.

"Since 1989 there's been an immediacy of preparedness. Up until '89 we were talking about what might happen. '89 showed us in fact what will happen," said Richard Eisner, director of the state Office of Emergency Service's earthquake preparedness program.

The quake taught different governments and agencies how to cooperate during disasters and plan for future ones, said Lowell Hurst, mayor of Watsonville, a town of 32,000 only 15 miles southeast of the epicenter.

San Francisco's director of emergency services, retired Adm. John Bitoff, said cities like San Francisco and Oakland also have greatly improved emergency communications systems. "I'm not satisfied yet, but as I told the mayor the other day, 'You don't want me to be satisfied,'" he said.

Loma Prieta also helped ready the region for the Next One through a kind of "structural Darwinism," Eisner said.

"The earthquake in '89 brought down the worst of the hazardous structures," he said. Most were old, unreinforced masonry buildings.

And many surviving buildings that were damaged or considered at risk are being strengthened. New strengthening techniques are being used that were learned as a result of Loma Prieta, Eisner said.

After the quake, the state required local governments to set up emergency plans and let cities and counties impose stricter building standards than those required by Sacramento. The state also started a program to evaluate the safety of bridges and freeways.

"The fact of the matter is that Loma Prieta started what is really the world's most ambitious seismic retrofitting program, period," said Drago, of the transportation department. The 6.7 quake in Southern California in January, which killed 61 people and did an estimated $20 billion in damage, only reinforced the commitment to make freeways quake resistant, he said.

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — Jean-Bertrand Aristide has seen Haiti euphoric before — at the departure of dictator Jean-Claude Duvalier, the ouster of army boss Prosper Avril and at Aristide's own election and inauguration.

The promise of change has always been ephemeral, however, and it is up to Haiti's just-returned leader to change the sad course of his nation's history.

President Aristide begins with the good will of the Haitian people and the support of nearly 20,000 American troops to help meet his promise of safety for a traditionally brutalized population.

Aristide has also promised jobs, but will be unable to deliver in a traditional Haitian manner. He must convince his people that they must look beyond Haiti's No. 1 employer — the government — for work.

He must shepherd to fruition the international projects committed to Haiti. He must create an environment for new jobs in a nation set back a generation by three years of international economic sanctions.

Few specifics emerged during Aristide's address Saturday at the National Palace. Afterward his listeners wandered off aimlessly, symbolic of a happy but confused nation.

The crowd was smaller than expected; many of those personally invited didn't show up for fear that they would be targeted by Haitians who have not turned over their weapons to the American soldiers.

The president, exiled for more than three years of his five-year term, has a limited mandate, limited time, and limited power, if he makes good on his promise to stay within the bounds of presidential authority outlined in the 1987 constitution.

Expectations are high. Some of the people outside the palace said Aristide's return meant jobs and food.

The world has pledged $272 million in the next four months to help Aristide's new government, said Brian Atwood, administrator of the U.S. Agency for International Development. The U.S. government agency expects to create jobs for 50,000 Haitians in the short term and hopes businesses such as assembly plants will restart in the next few months.

But even at Aristide's welcoming ceremony Saturday, his supporters voiced fear that the international community would let Haiti down and not nurture the democracy it sent troops to restore.

For his part, Aristide plunged into meetings well into the night and all day Sunday, eager to get back to work after three years of exile.

Some supporters said his priorities would be to remove human rights violators from the army, disarm civilian militias and get rid of rural sheriffs whose feudal rule was restored after Aristide's ouster in a 1991 military coup.

Supporters such as Jean-Claude Bajeux, a socialist politician and human rights leader, say only such disarmament can guarantee the safety that would encourage investment.

Aristide must move quickly before vengeful citizens do: On Sunday, about two dozen vigilantes armed with machetes, clubs and rocks went on a rampage in a Port-au-Prince slum, seeking retribution against their former tormentors. The crowd killed one after he killed a bystander.

U.S. seeks to rebuild ties with Chinese military

BEIJING (NYT) — The Clinton administration began a new effort on Sunday to rebuild ties with the Chinese armed forces as William J. Perry became the first American secretary of defense to visit China since the military's crackdown against democracy supporters at Tiananmen Square in 1989.

The high-level visit, which has become a matter of contention in Washington, is taking place against the backdrop of expanding economic relations between the United States and China as well as differences over Chinese weapons sales, nuclear testing, and human rights abuses.

Perry said that he had come here to deal with issues like trying to dissuade Beijing from selling missiles but that he had no intention of discussing the sale of American weapons or military technology.

Explaining this upgrading of ties between the American and Chinese militaries, a senior Pentagon official said: "The United States government made a decision that in order to address these problems we've really got to talk to the People's Liberation Army, which has a significant voice in how these Chinese policies are being formulated."

In this effort, Perry is being accompanied by senior officials from the Departments of Defense, State, and Commerce, as well as from the National Security Council. Over the next three days, Perry is to meet with senior Chinese leaders, give a speech at the National Defense University, visit Wuhan and Chongqing, and inaugurate an American-Chinese commission set up to help China convert from military to civilian industries.

"China is one of the most important countries in the world, both from an economic and military point of view," Perry said.

But the Pentagon mission to China has drawn fire from critics who accuse Washington of subordinating human rights and national security concerns to economics. They assert that the Chinese military's real agenda is to lay the groundwork to acquire American military technology and note that it was Chinese troops that quashed the pro-democracy movement.

William C. Triplett, a former Republican counsel on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, has urged Congress to "squash any coordination between the Pentagon and the unrepentant, anti-democratic Chinese military."

Perry's involvement with the Chinese dates back to the Carter administration when, as a Pentagon official, he come here to help sell American military technology and contain Soviet military power. During his years out of government, Perry nurtured ties with Chinese military officials, including Gen. Liu Huaqing, a senior military leader, and Gen. Ding Henggao, minister of the State Commission for Science, Technology and Industry for National Defense.

Washington cut military ties with China after the violent 1989 crackdown. But over the past year, the Defense Department had been quietly seeking to establish relations with the Chinese.

Kohl's coalition wins by narrow margin in Germany's elections

BONN (NYT) — Chancellor Helmut Kohl's 12-year-old governing coalition suffered heavy losses Sunday in Germany's national election but held on to a narrow majority over the combined opposition, preliminary results and computer projections indicated.

"We have won the second all-German election," Kohl told cheering supporters less than 90 minutes after the polls closed, predicting that the coalition would emerge with a majority of from eight to 10 seats in parliament.

But with 3.5 million people unemployed — including more than a million in the eastern part of the country since the collapse of the Communist economy there — and total public indebtedness swollen to $1.3 trillion since reunification four years ago, Kohl paid the price for widespread disillusionment.

Computer projections by Germany's two state television networks said he might end up with only four seats more than the opposition parties, compared with a 134-seat edge up to now.

"That will be difficult, but such is life," the chancellor, 64, said, shrugging.

Rudolf Scharping, his Social Democratic challenger, conceded defeat but promised to keep giving Kohl a hard time.

He vowed to win power back for his party in the next elections, by 1998 at the latest. "It can't be excluded that the coalition will have troubles in the course of the next legislative period," he added.

Projections from early results on Germany's ZDF and ARD television networks gave Kohl and his Christian Democratic alliance and their Free Democratic coalition partners a combined 48 to 49 percent of the vote, down from the 54.8 percent they won in 1990 in the first elections after unification.

Scharping, 46, the former premier of the state of Rhineland-Palatinate, led the Social Democrats to nearly 37 percent of the vote, according to the projections, which also indicated that the environmentalist Green party had close to 7 percent.

The Social Democrats' result was better than the 33.5 percent they won in 1990, but not enough for them to form a government with the Greens without support from legislators of the former Communist Party in eastern Germany, the Party of Democratic Socialism.

Scharping said again Sunday night that he would not accept the ex-Communists' help to become chancellor.

Charles bares soul on loveless marriage in authorized biography

LONDON (AP) — In a stunning departure from royal tradition, Prince Charles bared his soul Sunday in an authorized biography that says his overbearing father forced him into a loveless marriage with Princess Diana.

"How could I have got it all so wrong?" Charles, 45, lamented in 1986 — five years after his marriage — in one of the letters quoted in the book.

Many observers saw authorization of the book as a huge gamble by the heir to the British throne — an apparent attempt to revive acceptance of him as the future king by being unusually frank.

Buckingham Palace said Charles has no regrets about cooperating for the biography, which describes him as bullied and mocked as a child and trapped in a nightmare marriage with a bored, bulimic, self-absorbed and obsessively jealous young wife.

To the dismay of traditionalists, Charles gave author Jonathan Dimbleby long interviews and unprecedented access to thousands of his private letters and diaries for the book, "The Prince of Wales."

"It is a book of very great historical importance," said constitutional expert Lord St. John of Fawsley. "It will have a major effect on the whole current debate about the monarch and the royal family . . . The prince has put his cards on the table."

The biography, "The Prince of Wales," which The Sunday Times began serializing, is the latest book about the failed marriages of Queen Elizabeth II's elder sons, Charles and Prince Andrew.

In the most recent publication, two weeks ago, Diana's former riding instructor, ex-army Maj. James Hewitt, claimed he had a five-year affair with Diana starting in 1986.

Dimbleby, a broadcaster, did not allow Charles a veto over the contents and refused to make some requested changes, Alan Percival, a Buckingham Palace spokesman told the AP.

Charles married the 20-year-old Lady Diana Spencer, a nursery school teacher and daughter of an earl, in a 1981 wedding that was watched around the globe.

The World in brief

■ Violence breaks out after rally, 11 die

CAPE TOWN, South Africa — Shooting broke out Sunday after a political rally in a Cape Town township, killing 11 people, police said.

Police said the shootings were linked to a turf war between taxi companies.

Taxi vans that shuttle commuters from their homes in the townships to their jobs in the city are the main form of transportation for black South Africans, and competition can be fierce. Taxi associations often are allied with political factions, intensifying the feuds.

Sunday's stadium rally, which attracted about 1,000 people, was organized by the South African National Civic Organization to kick off its local election campaign. The civic organization is aligned with Nelson Mandela's African National Congress.

■ Men fire shots at French ocean liner

SYDNEY, Australia — Seven heavily armed men on a small boat fired warning shots at a French ocean liner Sunday when its captain refused to allow them to board off the coast of Bougainville in Papua New Guinea.

Yvon Lalongere, the captain of the Club Med II, told the Australian Broadcasting Corp. radio network the boat briefly came alongside the ship.

The unidentified, uniformed men called out to be allowed on board.

They fired about 20 times into the air after he ignored their demands and instead sailed away.

No one was harmed and the ship was not hit, the captain said.

The ship was carrying 200 crew but no passengers on a voyage from Guam to New Caledonia.

Bougainville has endured six years of guerrilla war between Papua New Guinea troops and secessionist rebels, although the two sides have recently agreed a cease-fire.

■ Kim finally makes public appearance

TOKYO — Kim Jong Il, the son of North Korea's former leader, appeared in public on Sunday for the first time in nearly three months, partly allaying suspicions that he is ill and raising expectations that he will soon complete the process of formally succeeding his father, who died in July.

Kim appeared on Sunday afternoon in Pyongyang, the North Korean capital, at a ceremony to mark the end of the 100-day mourning period for his father, Kim Il Sung.

North Korea released television pictures on Sunday night showing Kim, flanked by other top officials, standing on a balcony overlooking a plaza filled with thousands of people. He stood nearly motionless and did not speak.

Although Kim has been presumed to be North Korea's new leader, he had not been seen publicly since his father's funeral on July 20. Nor has he assumed two high positions held by Kim Il Sung, president of the country and general-secretary of the Workers Party, North Korea's Communist Party.

Thousands on border seek to return to Kuwait

KHOR ZUBEIR, Iraq (AP) — The distinctive Iraqi army-issue orange tents stretch for two miles from the demilitarized zone, housing thousands of stateless Arabs seeking to pour back across the border into Kuwait.

"Dear Kuwait, We Are Coming," reads one banner at the camp, while another sends a veiled warning to the emirate's ruling family: "Oh Al-Sabahs, sooner or later tomorrow is coming."

The return of the stateless ones is the stuff Al-Sabah nightmares are made of.

Kuwait expelled about 100,000 bidouns — the Arabic word for "without" because they are without citizenship — after the 1991 Gulf War, accusing most of being an Iraqi "fifth column." About 100,000 still remain in Kuwait.

Their sudden appearance on the border two weeks ago, when Iraq was moving troops southward, indicates that despite Iraqi claims that the troop movements were standard maneuvers, Baghdad sought to set the Gulf on the boil again.

Iraq feels its plight under U.N. economic sanctions, which bar it from exporting oil, is being ignored despite its cooperation with U.N. cease-fire terms imposed after the 1991 Gulf War. It has allowed U.N. inspectors to dismantle its weapons of mass destruction and monitor its weapons sites.

AP Laserphoto

Stateless men known as bidoun demonstrate Saturday for their return to Kuwait from their camp about 10 miles on the Iraq side of the Iraqi-Kuwaiti border.

However, it has resisted recognizing Kuwait's sovereignty and a new U.N.-demarcated border. Baghdad offered to do so through Russia last week, but Kuwait wants U.N. guarantees that Iraq would never threaten it again.

With Iraqi troops and tanks seen headed northwards on Saturday, the bidouns remained behind to keep up the pressure. There appeared to be about 10,000 of them, mostly men; U.N. officials said there are 4,000.

Many of the banners set up in the camp on Saturday were in English, and when bidoun leaders saw TV crews they yelled out things like "There is another television team over there, can we get a demonstration going!"

Information Minister Sheik Saud al-Sabah has said the camp contains "Iraqi soldiers and intelligence agents dressed in civilian clothes." He warned Kuwait would use force, if necessary, to keep them out.

But the camp residents proffered hundreds of Kuwaiti police identification cards and certificates of merit awarded by the military.

They yelled out their old street addresses in the Jahra neighborhood north of Kuwait City and showed how the pointed folds in their headresses are distinctively Kuwaiti.

"The government of Kuwait should give me my money, my house and my wife," said a 48-year-old oil inspector who gave his name as Abu Talal. He said he did not want to use his real name because his family and a fat savings account remained behind. "I am crying all the time. What am I supposed to do?"

He said he has not talked to his family since he was arrested in Kuwait four years ago. He said his leg was broken during torture and he was accused of collaborating with the Iraqis and jailed for two years before being expelled.

Serb forces move toward major battlefront, U.N. reports

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzgovina (AP) — Backed by heavy artillery barrages, Serb forces are advancing toward strategic hilltops along the biggest battlefront in Bosnia, U.N. peacekeepers reported Sunday.

The Serbs are apparently trying to disrupt supply routes for the Muslim-led Bosnian government.

If they score further gains, taking a 4,835-foot peak called Dernak, the Serbs would dominate a vital north-south supply route for Tuzla and other north-central towns held by the Bosnian government.

A spokesman for U.N. peacekeepers, Maj. Koos Sol, said both sides are believed to have suffered heavy casualties in sustained fighting along the broad, frequently shifting front line.

The Serbs are also pressing government forces around the southwestern city of Mostar and near Konjic, a town on the road linking Mostar with Sarajevo.

U.N. officials said later Sunday that fighting was subdued on most fronts, except around Mostar and the Muslim-held Bihac area in Bosnia's northwestern corner.

The Yugoslav news agency Tanjug quoted a statement from Bosnian Serb military headquarters calling reports of a Serb offensive "completely inaccurate." It said that government troops were on the move in several areas.

Tension remained high around Sarajevo after three days of relentless small-arms fire around the besieged capital. Sol said he had no explanation for the heaviest level of skirmishing in a month.

The focus of tension is Mount Igman, overlooking the capital, where the government has balked at removing all its troops from a demilitarized zone. The Serbs have threatened a major attack if the remaining Bosnian troops are not cleared out by Thursday.

Sol said an estimated 200 to 500 Bosnian troops remained in the zone.

Backlash against gay rights takes shape in ballot measures

■ Three proposals appear in this year's elections, a sort of victory for gay rights advocates.

Associated Press

Backlash against protection for homosexuals from bigotry and bias is evident in this year's elections, with anti-gay rights measures on ballots in Oregon, Idaho and Alachua County, Fla.

But there might have been more, making just the few measures a victory of sorts for gay rights advocates who spent the year keeping similar proposals off Nov. 8 ballots in seven states.

Virtually identical, Oregon's Measure 13 and Idaho's Proposition 1 would bar state and local governments from enacting laws that shield gays from discrimination. They also would outlaw programs in public institutions such as schools that suggest homosexuality is acceptable. And they would require libraries to keep books on homosexuality away from minors.

Oregon's measure would eradicate local gay rights ordinances in Portland, Corvallis, Ashland and Eugene and undo a 1993 state law that bars local anti-gay rights ordinances.

In Alachua County, home to the University of Florida at Gainesville and 182,000 people, voters will decide two ballot measures, one to repeal a county ban on discrimination against gays and the other to forbid future ones.

The Oregon measure grew out of a failed 1992 proposal to brand homosexuals "abnormal . . . and perverse" in the state constitution.

The author is Lon Mabon of the Oregon Citizens Alliance. The Idaho Citizens Alliance is run by Kelly Walton, an old Bible school friend of Mabon.

They believe it is wrong to provide any specific protection from bias in housing or employment — civil rights guarantees already on the books in eight states (18 other states have executive orders that ban discrimination in public employment).

"I think a vast majority of Oregonians, including business owners, are pretty tolerant people. As long as someone keeps their sexual practices to themselves, I don't think their job is in jeopardy," Mabon said.

Mabon said Measure 13 protects children: "We don't want children taught that homosexuality is OK."

Polls indicate public opinion vacillates on the issue. And all but a few candidates in Oregon and Idaho, Republican or Democrat, oppose the measures.

Some Roman Catholic nuns in Cottonwood, Idaho, denounced the anti-gay initiative. The 92 sisters of the Monastery of St. Gertrude said "it fosters an attitude of hatred, bigotry and discrimination and lays a basis for denying to homosexuals basic civil rights that should be assured to all citizens."

But in Salem, Ore., Phil Matthews is nervous. He said he was fired from his job at a pest control company after his bosses learned he is gay.

"I heard the company owner in the next room screaming, 'I don't care how good of a salesman he is. We don't hire those kind,' " Matthews said.

He fears the same fate could befall other gays if voters approve Measure 13.

Equally worried is Amy Feinberg, a teacher's aide at a Christian school in Junction City, Ore.

"The homosexuals want to be able to come into our schools and foist their propaganda there," Feinberg said. "I believe homosexuality is immoral, unhealthy behavior."

Gay activists and civil rights organizations see the measures as part of a broader agenda by some conservatives using moral and religious beliefs to raise money and gain political power.

If Oregon, Idaho and Alachua, Fla., voters approve the anti-gay rights measures, they could be overturned, anyway.

North, Kennedy battle independent groups' attacks

By Richard Keil
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Democratic Sen. Edward Kennedy and Republican hopeful Oliver North have something in common: Both are fighting well-heeled enemies in addition to their Election Day opponents.

As lightning rods at either end of the political spectrum, North and Kennedy have inspired a variety of creative attacks against them — from a "Pack of Lies" deck of cards lampooning North to mailings threatening to push Kennedy off "the electoral cliff."

Such expenditures can be a deciding force in elections.

In 1988, a conservative group ran an ad about Willie Horton, a convicted murderer who raped a woman after being furloughed from prison by then-Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis. The ad is widely cited by political analysts as a key to Dukakis' loss to George Bush.

Last summer, the National Rifle Association and other groups ran ads against Rep. Mike Synar, D-Okla., who lost a primary challenge to a little-known Democrat. The independent groups ended up spending significantly more to defeat Synar than the challenger, who spent just $17,000.

In the cases of North and Kennedy, according to Federal Elections Commission records, independent opposition spending has already amounted to more than $100,000 in their two Senate races. And plenty more is planned before Election Day.

"When we submit our next report with the FEC, we'll have raised nearly a quarter of a million dollars," said Woody Holton, whose Clean Up Congress group has strayed from its usual work on environmental issues to concentrate on defeating North.

The former Marine lieutenant colonel, a key figure in the Iran-Contra scandal, is now running for the Virginia Senate seat held by Democrat Charles Robb.

Holton said most of the $93,000 his group has spent so far against North financed a statewide, door-to-door campaign in which volunteers hand out copies of a Reader's Digest article that characterized North as dishonest.

"We're trying to stay away from the thought that it's just Democrats or liberals criticizing him," Holton said. "We're saying, 'Look, Reader's Digest has the same thing to say.'"

As in many independent expenditures, the effort helps distribute negative information about North while also raising new funds for the group.

The average donation from those door-to-door visits is $15, said Holton.

Massachusetts one of few states that allows its prisoners to vote

BOSTON (AP) — Although they are 20,000 strong, they're one bloc of voters politicians aren't courting.

They live in Massachusetts' jails and prisons and are eligible to vote by absentee ballot, though no one compiles figures on how many are registered.

Massachusetts is one of only a few states that allow prisoners to vote. Maine and Vermont do as well, as does Utah — except for prisoners convicted of treason or electoral law violations.

"The Massachusetts Constitution guarantees everyone the right to vote and does not provide that people who are convicted or sentenced to prison lose that right," said John Reinstein, legal director of the Civil Liberties Union of Massachusetts.

Most states extend the voting ban to anyone on probation or parole, said Eric Lotke, a consultant with the nonprofit National Criminal Justice Commission, an Alexandria, Va.-based research organization.

Some states even deny the vote to those who have served their time.

"It speaks to the issue of why politicians feel free to speak the way they do about crime," said Jerry Miller, the commission's president.

Efforts to change Massachusetts' Constitution have failed. Bills have been introduced every year, only to die in committee.

"It always gets put into a study. It never comes out," said state Rep. Jacqueline Lewis, who has sponsored legislation.

"You have someone who rapes or mutilates a child, goes to prison for a short while, and is still allowed to vote. That sickens me," she said.

But Reinstein said it's wrong to consider voting a privilege instead of a right.

"In that case, we could take it away from a lot of people," he said. "How about people who speed? How about people who don't pay their taxes?"

Day care 'deal' to help youngsters

The importance of early-childhood education cannot be overemphasized so the notification the other day that Midland Independent School District (MISD) has acquired a day care center that closed due to a drop in student enrollment bodes well for very young students in the district's Head Start program.

Goode Beginnings Child Care Center closed recently due to a money-losing drop in enrollment, and that gave MISD the opportunity to expand its Head Start program by acquiring the facility.

According the MISD Supt. Dr. Joseph P. Baressi, the district needed to expand because "we have a waiting list right now."

The addition of the Goode facility will bring to three the number of Head Start facilities serving the children of low-income families in Midland. The other two are located at Bunche and West Elementary schools.

In this instance acquisition of the facility truly will fill a need of the local school district, while making use of a facility that Dr. Baressi noted "will serve our program well."

The building housing the day care facility, which is owned by the county, was deeded to MISD by Midland County Commissioners Court under a contract that includes a reversion clause. If the facility is ever not serving its agreed-upon purpose or purposes, it will revert to county ownership.

This appears to be wise usage of a building that will serve a definite need for a number of MISD youngsters and we commend the local governmental entities for cooperating in this effort.

JACK ANDERSON
Gulf changed for better since Storm

Washington — Just minutes after his arrival for a private visit to Kuwait in April, retired Gen. Norman Schwarzkopf was asked by a reporter about the continued threat of Iraqi ruler Saddam Hussein.

Anderson

"Saddam who?" Schwarzkopf mockingly replied. "I'm not worried about Saddam Hussein. . . . I think I've already given a description of what I think of his military strength."

Schwarzkopf's off-the-cuff comments may seem out of touch given recent events, but our experience in the Persian Gulf suggests Schwarzkopf's remarks were an accurate portrayal of the current state of military readiness in Kuwait.

Our associate Jan Moller accompanied Schwarzkopf and his family on their trip to Kuwait — the retired general's first visit since shortly after the Gulf War. Schwarzkopf was there to show his family the sights and sounds of the country he helped liberate three years earlier. The trip was kept private, partly in light of the assassination plot that greeted former President Bush during his 1993 return to Kuwait, and partly because, in Schwarzkopf's words, "the last thing in the world I wanted was the international press following me around everywhere."

Kuwait may look restored on the surface, but it's a country that's been changed forever by the Gulf War. Although scars remain, and Saddam Hussein is still rattling his saber north of the border, Schwarzkopf believes the war has added a degree of openness to Kuwait's society.

Schwarzkopf was quick to caution that Kuwait's security remains greatly dependent on keeping the international sanctions in place until Iraq fully complies with the United Nations resolutions imposed after the cease-fire — something it has failed to do so far.

"Quite frankly, I don't think Saddam Hussein is a threat to Kuwait at this time. His armor was severely beaten, his air force was destroyed, his nuclear, chemical and biological capability was destroyed," Schwarzkopf said. "What I do worry about is what happens if the sanctions eventually are lifted, Iraq starts selling oil, the price of oil goes up and Saddam starts making a lot of money. Then they use that money and start to buy technology from firms that are more interested in their bottom line than they are in what's morally right."

Although recent events have proven beyond doubt that Saddam remains a volatile and unpredictable threat to the region, our visit provided evidence that Kuwait is far better prepared to deter an invasion than it was four years ago. Several factors account for the difference:

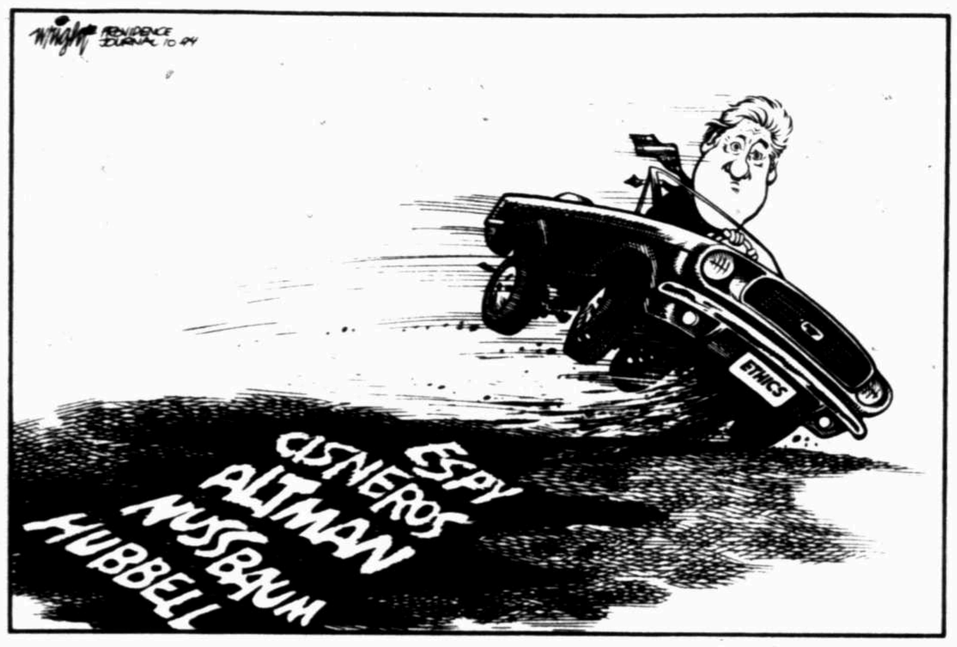

■ Better soldiers. Shortly before our departure, we saw the first demonstration of Native Fury, a joint military exercise where American, British and Kuwaiti troops defended against a mock Iraqi invasion just south of the Iraqi border. The exercise took place in the middle of the desert, amidst hundreds of Iraqi tanks left behind after the brief ground war in 1991. Though the Kuwaiti army still pales in comparison with Saddam's rebuilt forces, there is no longer a chance of Saddam launching an eight-hour invasion like he did in 1990.

■ Better equipment. Just outside Kuwait City sits a compound stocked with United States military equipment. If another invasion were to happen, Kuwait would not have to wait six months for the United States to move its military equipment into place. As recent events have shown, the new system allows an American-led fighting force to be deployed in days — not weeks and months as before.

■ More reliable allies. Two of Saddam's most prominent boosters during the Gulf War have made overtures to the other side. Where Kuwait once feared that its Arab brothers were plotting with Saddam, Jordan's King Hussein and the PLO's Yasir Arafat are now at peace with Israel. Neither party is prepared to forgo their heightened international stature by again siding with Saddam Hussein against Kuwait.

Despite the advances, nobody in Kuwait or elsewhere believes this is the last time America will be forced to intervene in the Persian Gulf. As one congressional military analyst was quick to point out: "What everyone has to remember is that if it isn't Iraq, it's Iran. If it isn't Saddam, it's Saddam II. . . . This is a prelude to at least a quarter-century of American engagement in this region."

CHARLEY REESE
Censorship nearly nonexistent in America

In the America of my puberty, National Geographic and the Sears catalog were about the raciest publications readily available to young boys full of spring sap and questions.

Reese

It's funny, looking back, to remember that no publication could legally publish pictures of an unairbrushed woman's breasts unless she was in a tribe in some jungle, in which case it was OK. Presumably American jurisprudence had decided no American male could have prurient interest in a Zulu or Amazonian Indian.

Shows you how little the government knew about 13-year-olds. At that age, an attractive girl in a thick wool sweater and a calf-length skirt can make a boy sweat like Richard Nixon at a press conference. I fell in love with a girl in a Spring Maid Cotton ad, and she was only a drawing.

But what's even funnier is to listen to people today prattle about censorship of sex.

Sex censorship in America in 1994? That's like accusing a nudist of being a clotheshorse. That's like accusing politicians of being too taciturn. That's like criticizing Bill Clinton for being decisive and frank. That's like complaining about cold drafts in hell. That's like accusing the devil of being a prude.

Caligula, Commodus, Nero and Marquis de Sade would feel perfectly at home in the United States in 1994. Nero might even be a little embarrassed. He was, after all, a poet even if he did feed people to lions and burn Rome. It's been said some people thought being eaten by a lion was preferable to listening to his poetry.

But I stray. There is nothing, and I mean nothing, in the way of sex, sadism, masochism, perversion, violence, bestiality, vulgarity, profanity, blasphemy and plain prurient weirdness that is not readily available to folks today. A kid today can suffer from ennui before the fifth grade.

The censorship in the United States today is being done by (1) the government, which, as two writers recently put it, has classified about a third of American history; and by (2) those in the political correctness gang, who try to silence everyone who disagrees with them. Even the press practices some censorship, because in some cases it's too lazy to cover any news not involving press releases and staged events.

There is censorship practiced by publishers, especially textbook publishers, but it has nothing to do with sex. They are just eliminating any piece of literature or history which might conceivably offend the contemporary political correctness gestapo. Result: boring textbooks.

At the same time all this real censorship is taking place, PC outfits like People for the American Way throw up a red herring, claiming that parents (read politically conservative Christiaps — about as powerless a group as you will find these days) are censoring schools. Out of over 15,000 school districts involving millions of students and parents, they cite a few hundred cases where somebody complained as "evidence" of what they try to portray as a big move to censor.

Pure red herring. Any parent might, and all parents have the right to, question the judgment of their hired public servants in the school bureaucracy. Some of these complaints were just objections that particular work was inappropriate for the age level of the students. I don't think, given the state of education in America, that education bureaucrats have much grounds to claim an infallible judgment.

The pity is there are so few complaints. A complaint at least indicates parental interest. But at any rate, a complaining parent does not have the power to censor. Any book not taught is readily available in bookstores and public libraries. It's not, after all, as if millions of American school children were clamoring for books to read or being denied an opportunity to read whatever they like.

As I said, Caligula would be comfortable in America '94.

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

■ Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification. Letters not including this information will not be considered for publication.

■ They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations. The shorter the letter, the better its chance of publication.

■ Only one letter per month per writer can be published.

■ Letters will be edited for length, taste and legal reasons and are accepted only on that basis.

■ We do not publish 'open' letters or copies of letters sent to others.

Because we cannot research and verify all information in letters, by publishing them we neither imply nor guarantee the accuracy of information stated by writers.

Letters should be sent to: The Editor, Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland 79702.

Voters should insist on honesty, integrity

In choosing a governor of Texas, the voters should insist on character and integrity.

I have no way of knowing the character of Ann Richards, but a widely spread rumor during the last campaign accused her of having been a narcotics addict; this was never denied.

Also, I have no way of knowing the character of her opponent, George Bush, but an old saying is that the apple does not fall far from the tree.

Bush's father, President George Bush, showed doubtful integrity and character when he deserted the conservatives who were partially responsible for his election, and who can forget the famous quote "Read My Lips?"

These two things were partly responsible for his defeat.

There is good reason for voter apathy; a pox on both of their houses. When the Tuesday arrives for the governor's election there is very good reason for the voters to go fishing.

Iraq has capability to beat U.S. in gulf

Beware! Iraq has the capability of defeating the U.S. in Kuwait because they have corrected their SCUD missile to be as dangerously accurate and reliable as China's perfected Silkworm missile; and we must presume that Iraq has the same radiation, bacterial and chemical capabilities that we possess.

The Israelis became terrified of the Iraqis in 1991 because (if the Iraqis' SCUD had been correctly instrumented like the Chinese Silkworm) Iraq could have annihilated Israel in four hours — despite the presence of the defective U.S. Patriot missile system.

Just because Iraq couldn't do it then, doesn't mean that they can't do it now. Their physical mechanics are smarter than ours!

The uncorrected U.S. Patriot missile is typically inaccurate, unreliable and the cause of friendly-fire because of an undiscovered 400-year-old technological error that compromises all of the whole world's atmospheric guidance systems, except all of China's systems and Iraq's corrected SCUD missile.

I am not privy to U.S. intelligence, so I have no inside knowledge of the alternatives available for dealing with Iraq; but I do know more about e=mc² and the Unified Field Laws than Einstein.

I knew that a Pearl Harbor situation would occur somewhere 10 days before it happened. I knew why the World War II German SPUD missile was inaccurate and unreliable even before they invented it.

Beware of a SCUD ambush in Kuwait!

Planned Parenthood invaluable to teens

I would like to take this opportunity to publicly thank Planned Parenthood of West Texas. My mother and I moved to this area when I was 17 years old. We had very little money and I was only working part-time. They provided me with contraceptives, cancer- and sexually-transmitted disease screenings. The education and counseling they provided to me proved invaluable time after time.

I feel that Planned Parenthood does more to prevent abortion than any agency I know of. They prevent abortions by providing education and counseling, including abstinence.

They provide contraceptives to women who, in America, do have the right to determine their own destiny. It is because of Planned Parenthood that I have never had an abortion. I thank you.

■ Explosion flattens home, injures owner

JENNINGS, Mo. — An explosion believed to be caused by a natural gas leak flattened one house Sunday, seriously injuring its owner and damaging dozens of other homes with debris.

The owner of the one-story brick home, James Kimble, was in serious condition Sunday night with second- and third-degree burns and lacerations at St. John's Mercy Medical Center.

When emergency crews arrived, they spotted Kimble's arm, all but buried under debris, waving for help, Police Chief James Trentham said. Kimble was alone in the home at the time of the blast at about 4 p.m.

Large chunks of the foundation were tossed about in the front yard, and debris was blown onto roofs and yards up and down the block in the St. Louis suburb.

Authorities said homes on either side of the street probably would have to be condemned. Up to 40 homes and businesses several blocks away were also affected by the blast, Jones said.

■ 70,000 protest immigration measure

LOS ANGELES — Nearly 70,000 people waving signs and Mexican flags surrounded City Hall on Sunday to denounce a ballot measure that would deny health care, schooling and other public services to illegal immigrants.

Hand-painted banners encouraged Mexican solidarity while the cry "Viva la Raza," or "Long live the people," was shouted again and again from a stage.

"We are Hispanic and all the people who are Hispanic . . . are suffering," said Victor Nunfio, a legal immigrant.

The green, white and red Mexican flags were waved from car windows, draped around the shoulders of teen-agers and held high by children.

Signs included "Stop Immigrant Bashing Now" and "These Hands Pick Your Food." Voters will decide on Proposition 187 at the Nov. 8 election.

Opponents say the measure is racist, mean-spirited and unconstitutional. Supporters say the proposal is about economics not race, and that undocumented immigrants cost the state $2.4 billion a year.

Recent polls show that the majority of Californians support the initiative.

■ Pentagon won't challenge gay ruling

LOS ANGELES — The government isn't challenging an appellate ruling that says the armed forces can bar gays for having sex but not for merely "coming out."

The Pentagon and the Justice Department allowed Friday's deadline for appealing the ruling to expire, said John McGuire, who represents the subject of the ruling, Keith Meinhold.

"I got a call Friday afternoon and was told there was a recommendation to not seek further review," McGuire said Sunday.

Justice Department lawyer Roy Hawkens did not return messages left on an answering machine at his Washington, D.C., office on Sunday.

Meinhold, who announced he is gay on national television in 1992, was discharged under old military regulations that treated declarations of homosexuality as grounds for discharge.

In its Aug. 31 ruling, the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said it was deciding only the validity of that outdated policy, not the validity of the current "don't ask, don't tell" policy.

Doctor tests limits with use of drugs for abortion

By Kiley Armstrong
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Soothing classical music wafts above a mother-and-child sculpture in the earth-toned waiting room. The setting, a Park Avenue doctor's office, belies the political and scientific upheaval within.

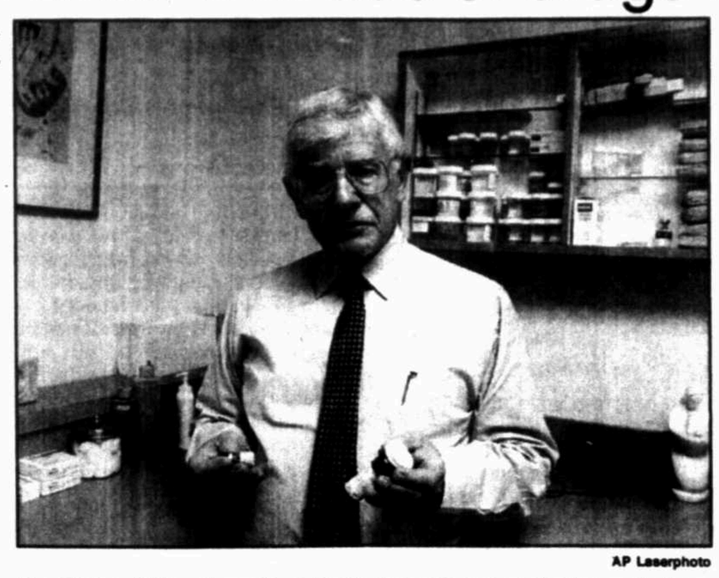

In his book-lined inner sanctum, Dr. Richard Hausknecht can't escape the unrelenting phone. Doctors and patients around the nation have heard he performs abortions with drugs instead of surgery, and many want to try it.

Hausknecht concedes he's "a little bit of a rebel." Back in the '60s, when he was a gynecology resident at Yale, he handed out diaphragms in defiance of a state ban on contraceptives that was later struck down.

He has long been distressed by delays in marketing RU486, the French abortion pill. Earlier this year, he was in the shower when the idea popped into his head: Why not offer an alternative?

He pored over American and European research on two other, available drugs.

One, called methotrexate, is a tissue-growth inhibitor used to treat cancer, arthritis and psoriasis. For decades, doctors also have used it to end ectopic pregnancies, which develop outside the uterus.

AP Laserphoto

Dr. Richard Hausknecht, a Park Avenue gynecologist and abortion rights advocate stands in an examining room at his New York office.

The other is misoprostol, an ulcer medicine that also hastens labor.

Hausknecht decided to use the drugs to induce abortions. He ran ads in The New York Times, offering "a new, safe and effective approach to the termination of early pregnancy utilizing FDA approved medications."

Since January 1993, researchers have been trying to determine whether the two drugs, used in tandem to induce abortions, are safe and effective. In the meantime, their use in a non-research setting falls into a gray area.

The Food and Drug Administration says a doctor may prescribe a drug for an unorthodox use — from time to time. But "if it's a large number of patients, or when data is being gathered systematically, it's considered research," said FDA spokesman Larry Bachorik.

Hausknecht has applied for FDA research status. He insists his technique is "not research, but innovative medical care." He has provided the drugs to 126 women.

Dr. David Grimes of the University of California at San Francisco, an FDA-approved researcher of the drugs, said doctors know too little about their effects to prescribe them even to a single patient.

Grimes is collaborating with Dr. Mitchell Creinin, who pioneered research on the drugs.

"I'm upset that this is happening," said Creinin of the University of Pittsburgh School of Medicine.

"People want it yesterday," Creinin said. "But the first person who gets harmed . . . will be the first person to say, 'You should have done more research.'"

Creinin's study is about halfway complete. Very early results showed the drug combination is safe and more than 90 percent effective.

Judicial appointments will alter courts little, experts say

By Stephen Labaton
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — While running for office two years ago, Bill Clinton promised to reshape the character of the federal courts, reversing the trend to the right under the Reagan and Bush administrations.

But given the opportunity to choose more judges in his first two years than any president in history, Clinton has made selections that are not expected to change the ideological hue of the bench, although they have won high praise for their diversity and quality.

Indeed, many experts said that the legacy of the Clinton administration's first two years on the courts would be the passage of the anti-crime bill, which promises to deluge the federal courts with thousands of new cases that were once the sole province of the states.

Overall, Clinton has been true to his campaign pledge to appoint judges of more diverse backgrounds to fill the slew of vacancies he found waiting for him as the first Democratic president in 12 years.

The large number of judges who won confirmation in the final days of the Senate term brought Clinton's appointment to a total of 129 judges, of whom almost 60 percent are either women or minorities, compared with 8 percent for President Ronald Reagan and 27 percent for President Jimmy Carter.

Political scientists, legal scholars and nonpartisan groups like the American Bar Association who have studied the new judges' records also said Clinton's choices were better qualified than those of Reagan or President George Bush.

But, perhaps paradoxically, those observers expected the newcomers would do little to alter the courts. The new judges were deliberately chosen to fit squarely in the judicial mainstream and were, by and large, replacing liberal Democrats. The vast majority of seats in the influential appellate courts, moreover, remain in Republican hands.

While Clinton's appointments are not expected to undo the effects of Republican years, according to legal experts, the crime legislation the administration pushed through Congress last month is expected to give a tremendous new impetus to a decade-long trend of transforming relatively minor infractions — historically the province of state courts — into federal offenses.

Justice Department officials said that as a result of the new law, they expected a significant increase in the prosecution in the federal courts.

FCC rethinks its policies as telephone, television converge

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer groups are asking federal regulators to make sure telephone companies, when they begin providing video services over existing phone lines, don't make all their customers pay.

The Consumer Federation of America is among a handful of public interest groups pressing the Federal Communications Commission to prevent telephone companies from raising monthly charges to cover the costs of delivering cable TV over phone lines.

The commission will consider the issue Thursday. The FCC will also review a 24-year-old rule that has led network affiliates to air syndicated programs, such as "Wheel of Fortune," during prime time.

The impact of new video services on phone bills is part of the FCC's broad re-examination of rules set nearly three years ago allowing telephone companies to carry video services over their existing networks.

The FCC says it is committed to ensuring that consumers who don't benefit from services being offered don't have to pay.

But the Consumer Federation contends that without rule changes, local telephone bills could go up $16 a month over the next 20 years to pay for cable services.

Telephone company executives dispute the consumer group's figures, saving existing federal and state regulations will prevent telephone customers from subsidizing cable ventures.

Dozens of video applications are pending, but the FCC has cleared only one company — Bell Atlantic-New Jersey — to provide video services over its existing network to residents of Dover, in central New Jersey.

To protect phone customers, the FCC told the company to keep its video finances separate from its telephone operations.

Pacific Telesis Spokesman Robert Stewart said network improvements are costly, but that doesn't mean the company will raise local phone rates.

"If CFA had its way, we'd still be hand-cranking a magneto and be shouting, 'Hello, Central?' on a box on the wall," Stewart said.

Some phone companies have asked the FCC to allow them to choose the programs carried over their video systems, but FCC officials said they doubt rule revisions currently being considered will allow this.

Changes in technology are also forcing the FCC to reconsider rules for television broadcasters — including a rule set 24 years ago to limit the three major networks' dominance of prime time.

The rule, intended to promote programming diversity, gives local stations one hour during prime time to fill with programs created by entities other than the major networks.

Blacks likelier to get death penalty, report says

■ Since 1985, Harris County sent 50 blacks, 26 whites to death row.

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Harris County has sent blacks to death row nearly twice as often as whites during the last 10 years, a growing imbalance that some capital punishment foes blame on racism, The Houston Post reported Sunday.

From 1975 through 1984, Harris County juries sentenced blacks and whites to die in relatively even numbers, The Post reported in copyright story. But since 1985, they have condemned 50 blacks and 26 whites.

"It saddens me," says U.S. Rep. John Lewis, D-Ga., a longtime civil rights activist. "I thought we had come a distance much further along. I think it represents a part of our dark past."

Some death penalty foes insist that racism has driven this growing disparity on death row. But death penalty proponents argue that a growing and increasingly violent underclass, not bigotry, has produced this phenomenon.

Since Texas resumed executions in 1976, 82 men have died by lethal injection in Huntsville.

Of those, 33 have been from Harris County, as many as Florida has executed since resuming executions in its electric chair in the mid-1970s. Only Texas, as a state, has executed more convicts than Florida.

As of Oct. 5, 111 of the 392 inmates on the Texas death row inmates were from Harris County. Four more are on the way from the county jail.

The state's three other most populous counties — Dallas, Tarrant and Bexar — have a combined 77 inmates on death row.

Those numbers have earned Harris County the unofficial title of "Execution Capital of America."

There also are eight Hispanics on death row from Harris County and three more on the way from the county jail.

(The Post said that while some Hispanics are classified as white, they are not included in any of the Sunday article's statistics. That ethnic group has not yet become part of the argument over racial disparities in death sentencing.)

The man who takes the most heat for Harris County's hang-'em-high reputation is District Attorney John B. Holmes Jr., who blames conduct, not color.

Holmes told The Post he rarely knows the race of a defendant or victim when deciding whether to pursue the death penalty. But he said he doubts that black defendants do not rate the ultimate sentence in any greater proportion than they kill.

■ More state news/3B

Since 1984, blacks have been accused in about half of Harris County's homicides and accounted for 54.8 percent of those sentenced to die, state crime figures show.

Mark Vinson, one of Holmes' chief prosecutors, believes the system is fair. Vinson is black.

American, flight attendants to begin contract arbitration

DALLAS (AP) — Nearly one year after a crippling five-day strike, American Airlines and its flight attendants' union today will start arbitration hearings that should begin the end of a two-year contract battle.

Six weeks of court-style hearings are scheduled in Dallas by the end of the year, with two more in early 1995 and a final arbitration award expected next spring or summer.

The hearings could take longer or finish early.

"We're looking forward to finally having our case heard before the arbitration panel," American spokesman Al Comeaux said. "We'd like to complete this and move on."

American and the Association of Professional Flight Attendants, which represents the carrier's 20,000 flight attendants, began contract talks on Oct. 30, 1992.

After a year of negotiations and mediation foundered, the union called a walkout on Nov. 18, 1993 — just before the Thanksgiving travel period, the year's busiest. The strike virtually shut down the airline and disrupted thousands of travelers.

The union decided to return to work Nov. 22, when President Clinton got the two sides to agree to submit to binding arbitration. American, based in Fort Worth, said the walkout cost it some $190 million.

Fallout from the strike has included ongoing legal skirmishes and friction between the two sides, and among flight attendants who did and didn't strike.

Meanwhile, the company and union have continued negotiating and have reached agreement on numerous issues, including some scheduling points that union members now must ratify, leaving a score or fewer to be settled.

But most of the key contract issues remain for arbitrators: pay, staffing, pre-funding of retiree health benefits and vacation.

"Absolutely, we believe the arbitration will be fair to us, we'll get a fair shake," union spokesman Randy Edwards said.

"We are confident that what we will get from the arbitration will certainly be better than the company's final offer last November that triggered the strike."

For its part, the airline, which is trying to reduce labor costs by $750 million a year, hopes to get contract terms that will help it face growing competition from low-cost carriers.

But Edwards said American already has some of the lower costs among major airlines.

Whatever happened to Murphy?

By John Cunniff
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK — Whatever happened to Murphy, the fellow who hangs around the marketplace trying to convince people that if anything can go wrong, it will?

This fellow has influenced a lot of people in his time, and he has a large following in spite of his simplistic approach to life. You can see and hear his influence every day in the comments of stock market gurus.

The month of October, he reminded us in recent days, is historically a very bad month for stocks. It's not to be trusted, he says. Year after year, something happens in October. Can you ever forget the crash of 1987?

Keep your eyes on the Federal Reserve, he was saying early in the month. The Fed is bound to raise interest rates, and you know what that does to corporate profits, not to mention that it drains money away into bonds and CDs.

And remember, he adds, you can't take your eyes off inflation for a minute. It's a devilish factor, he explained, one that develops right under your nose without you seeing it until it's too late to do anything about it.

Murphy was spotted in his usual hangout the other day, just before the Chrysler earnings were to be reported. They'll be down, he said. Chrysler's not much good in the third quarter, he advised.

A few of his friends nodded. Even if the profits are up it might be wise to sell because that's the best they'll do for a long time, one said.

Murphy was last seen scurrying away on Tuesday, the day Chrysler reported a 54 percent jump in third-quarter earnings to $651 million, the rapid acceptance of several new models, and a massive contribution to its pension fund.

Chrysler wasn't alone. Motorola and Pepsico also contributed to the rout, both reporting profits higher than anticipated by analysts, helping the Dow Jones industrial average climb 55.51 points.

And right before Murphy's eyes, if the glare didn't blind him, were reports that the interest yield on the 30-year Treasury bond, an indicator of borrowing costs and mortgage rates, had fallen back to 7.84 percent.

It was a bad day for Murphy and his friends, some of whom were known to be short-traders, the kind who seek to make money on declines rather advances, their idea being to borrow stock now and replace it later at lower price.

Some of them have been right enough times to persist in their beliefs, although some of the biggest of them have taken very bad hits over the past few years. Some are habitual bears who take encouragement from Murphy.

For the time being, it appears that corporate profits, and more jobs and perhaps some good news on inflation will keep Murphy and his crowd in hiding, But they'll be back, outlook unchanged.

Super stores like this one in Waco are popping up across the country, but buyer beware — experts have stragetically marketed items to make compulsive shopping almost irresistible.

Super stores without super bills

By Lynn Bulmahn
Waco Tribune-Herald

WACO — Superstores mean more convenience and more merchandise to choose from.

From groceries to clothes, electronics to housewares, everything is under one roof, attractively displayed — and ready for you to buy.

Most of the time, that's great.

But it sometimes can mean trouble for shoppers.

I recently went bananas at the newly opened Super K. For real.

On Sept. 13 the store offered bananas for only a dime a pound.

I needed bananas. I bought 5.17 pounds for a mere 52 cents.

While I was in the grocery area, I picked up a six-pack of Dr Pepper. I should have quit while I was ahead.

But then I decided to browse through the rest of the store. The pharmacy area had sinus pills and I was out. That was $4.97. Then I saw the lipstick that had been advertised in one

Funds under the gun

By Chet Currier
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — While mutual funds have struggled in the stock and bond markets this year, they've had an even harder time in the court of public opinion.

Through the late 1980s and early 1990s, the funds were routinely hailed as a booming business that brought a valuable service to investors.

Now, in much of what is said and written about them, they are being portrayed as the financial bad guys of 1994.

In the words of the National Association of Securities Administrators, a group of state regulators: "Before this year, the industry grew by leaps and bounds but managed to stay largely noncontroversial, attracting little attention from Capitol Hill and the news media.

"That calm was shattered this year with a number of serious concerns raised about bank sales of mutual funds, personal trading of fund managers and the little-known presence of derivatives in many of the funds."

Beneath all this smoke, it must be said, there hasn't been much detectable fire. Certainly nothing has emerged to date that could qualify as a mutual fund "scandal," not even a little one.

The dismissal last winter of a prominent fund manager for allegedly failing to comply with his employer's reporting requirements helped spark an inquiry into industrywide practices on personal trading.

But after the investigation was completed, chairman Arthur Levitt of the Securities and Exchange Commission reported that there was no widespread problem involving trading abuses.

A leading congressional overseer of the financial world, Rep. Edward Markey, D-Mass., went so far as to commend the funds for keeping their noses clean.

The Investment Company Institute, the funds' biggest trade association, at the same time has been asserting that "there is no widespread or systemic problem in the use of derivatives by mutual funds."

Derivatives, specialized securities whose value is often linked closely to interest rates, have been implicated in some highly publicized cases of funds that ran into trouble in recent months.

"Most have involved money market funds where the SEC already has taken steps to clarify the types of instruments that are eligible for money market portfolios — steps that have been fully supported by the industry," said Matthew Fink, the ICI's president.

Another great clamor has focused on fund shares sold in banks, and a purported lack of emphasis on the risks involved in those funds.

Givers playing by new tax rule

Associated Press

NEW YORK — As Americans make their yearend charitable contributions over the next several weeks, they will be operating under a new set of rules.

The end of the year is a peak time for contributions, motivated by a mixture of holiday season altruism and tax-planning practicality. For most people, the end of December marks the deadline to increase their deductions, and thereby reduce their tax bill, for the year.

"Although the primary motive of giving is to support a charitable purpose, tax planning plays an important role," says the accounting firm of Coopers & Lybrand in its booklet Charitable Giving in the 1990s.

This year, a new set of standards for documenting charitable contributions is in effect, having been enacted as part of the 1993 tax and budget bill.

The paperwork requirements have been increased, for instance, for any cash contribution of $250 or more.

At that level, "a canceled check is no longer sufficient," notes the Institute of Certified Financial Planners. "Now you must ask the charity for a written acknowledgement of the value of the gift, and that you received no goods or services in return.

"Religious organizations must state that contributors received only 'intangible religious benefits.'"

Many charities and other organizations that receive significant numbers of contributions have responded to the new strictures by automatically providing receipts of this sort. So the burden of extra work on contributors is minimal.

The limit also can be avoided by splitting contributions into separate pieces of less than $250 each.

"If you make payroll deductions of $50 a month to United Way, for example, you don't need written documentation from them even though the total gift for the year is $600," the financial planners' institute notes.

But if you give property for which you deduct $500 or more, a separate Internal Revenue Service Form 8283 must be submitted to substantiate its value. With property donations above $5,000, you must get a professional appraisal and attach it to your tax return.

Furthermore, if you make a contribution of $75 or more that provides you with something of value in return, such as a meal or tickets to a concert, you need to get a written statement from

Underused plans

Even though more employers are offering retirement plans, employee participation isn't growing. A recent survey by the accounting firm KPMG Peat Marwick found that 89 percent of employers with at least 200 workers offered 401k and other retirement programs this year, up from 78 percent in 1993. But only 61 percent of eligible employees participated in 401ks, the same as last year, the survey said. What's more, the average employee participating in a 401k contributed only half the maximum amount allowed. "Companies must educate employees about the opportunities which exist to help meet their retirement needs," says Roy Oliver, national partner for KPMG's compensation and benefits practice.

After NAFTA

U.S. growth companies have used the North American Free Trade Agreement to increase exports to Canada and Mexico, not relocate jobs to those countries. That's what the accounting firm Coopers & Lybrand found in a recent survey. The study said 21 percent of America's growth companies have become more active in Canada and Mexico since Congress approved the trade pact last year. Nearly all, 20 percent, are exporting goods and services. Only 5 percent have set up manufacturing facilities in the two countries, and only 4 percent are importing more goods from either nation. "Fears of jobs being lost to Mexico and Canada are unfounded, at least among the nation's fastest growing firms," said George Auxier, a Coopers & Lybrand national director.

Ups and downs

Every seasoned investor knows stock prices go up and down depending on market and economic conditions. Stein Roe & Farnham wanted to get that point across to its novice clients, so it recently gave out commemorative yo-yos to the first 1,000 children or parents who opened an account with its SteinRoe Young Investor Fund. "We wanted our young investors to understand that stocks — and mutual funds investing in them — go up and down in value regularly, but that a mutual fund is a long-term investment whose total return should be measured over a long span of time," says Timothy Armour, president of Stein Roe Mutual Funds. "The yo-yo provides a fun way of teaching an important topic."

Did you know?

About 20 percent of all new houses in the United States are prefabricated, according to A.M. Watkins, author of "Manufactured Houses," which was just released in its fifth edition. Watkins says factory-made homes are cheaper and often better constructed than most conventionally built houses. They're also available in almost any size and style, he says.

Eggs in one basket

Q: My wife and I are retired with income of about $60,000 a year. Three years ago we invested $90,000 in the U.S. Government Securities Fund of the Franklin Group. We have lost $9,000 in principal and $1,000 a year in income over those three years. We are getting very nervous and thinking of moving to a government security with a 7.5 percent coupon and a maturity date of 2016. That will give us an annual income of $6,000 and preserve our principal. Would that be a sound investment?
— Irving Strochak, Atlantic Beach, N.Y.

A: No, said Harold Evensky, a financial planner in Coral Gables, Fla., who specializes in investments. "It makes no sense to buy and hold a bond like that," he said. "The extra bang for the buck in going out to the long term is simply not that attractive."

Over very long periods, long-term bonds have produced an average return of 4.8 percent and intermediate bonds have produced 5.2 percent.

Whether you buy individual bonds directly, or invest in a bond mutual fund, you will face interest rate risk and price fluctuations, as you have already discovered. Investing directly in a government bond will assure the return of your principal at maturity, but it won't do anything more to protect you from purchasing power risk, or the risk that inflation will eat away at the value of your investment.

Suppose you invest your remaining $80,000 in the 7.5 percent bond. "If inflation is 3 percent, the purchasing power of your $6,000 annual income will be $3,130 in 20 years," Evensky said.

Mutual fund protection

Q: My broker tells me there is a guarantee of some sort that insures your assets in case a mutual fund company files for bankruptcy. Can you explain how this works?
— Ray Gerard, Woodbury, N.Y.

A: Perhaps your broker is referring to Securities Investor Protection Corp., an insurance fund that protects assets in accounts held by brokers. The fund guarantees accounts up to $500,000.

But different safeguards apply to investors in mutual funds. Any financial difficulties encountered by the fund company should not affect the fund itself. Under the Investment Company Act of 1940, mutual fund assets must be held in a separate account administered by a trustee, explained John Collins, a spokesman for the Investment Company Institute, a mutual fund trade group.

Credit cards can be useful to consumer in disputes

By Pamela Yip
N.Y. Times News Service

HOUSTON — A credit card can be used as a lever to dispute charges from a merchant that sold you a product or service.

For example, you've taken your car in for service and the mechanic has only made the problem worse. Federal law allows you to dispute the charge by telling the credit card company you won't pay it until the auto shop resolves the dispute.

The law gives you the power to fight credit card charges when they involve fraud, defective merchandise or service, or misrepresentation.

But you'd better be able to back up your beef. The law sets down specific things to be done in order for a complaint to stand up before regulatory authorities.

"Have something other than, 'I didn't like it,'" says Richard Woodward, an examiner with the Texas Office of the Consumer Credit Commissioner. "Be specific about why you didn't like it."

Don't shy away from disputing charges because you think it will be too much trouble.

"For the most part, these things (credit card disputes) are easily resolved," says Stephen Cohen, an attorney at the Federal Trade Commission, which enforces the federal Fair Credit Billing Act. "A creditor removes the charge or the customer realizes that it's their charge."

And disputes concerning unauthorized charges are typically resolved in a consumer's favor, he says.

But disputes involving the quality of a product or service don't get resolved as easily.

"These (legal protections) are very tough to put into practice because the law is not black and white," says Ruth Susswein, executive director of Bank Card Holders of America in Salem, Va., a consumer group. "It's subject to interpretation."

However, no matter what the circumstances, be prepared to fight.

In what regulators say was an unusual case, the FTC recently charged Dillard Department Stores with violating federal law by making it unreasonably difficult for consumers to remove unauthorized charges from their Dillard's credit card bills.

The FTC alleged customers who questioned charges were required to file notarized affidavits and testify in court against unauthorized credit card users.

The agency accused Dillard's of treating customers who made payments on credit card bills that included the challenged charges as having waived their claim that those charges were unauthorized.

Moreover, the company holds cardholders liable for charges by their spouses, even if they were unauthorized and state law does not impose liability, the FTC says.

Dillard's officials say the FTC's charges are "unfounded" and the agency's action will encourage credit card fraud.

"Dillard's believes that its procedures are reasonable and consistent with industry practices," James I. Freeman, chief financial officer, said in a statement.

Regulators say Dillard's practices are the exception rather than the rule.

"It seems that Dillard's goes far beyond what everybody else does," says Cohen, who is handling the case.

Card issuers say they most often encounter disputes involving unauthorized use of a card and billing errors. They advise consumers to check their credit card statements each month to make sure they made the listed charges.

If you find an unauthorized charge, contact the card issuer immediately. But a phone call doesn't trigger the legal safeguards of the Fair Credit Billing Act, which limits liability to $50 if a creditor violates the act.

To be protected under that law, a separate written copy of a complaint must be sent to the credit card issuer within 60 days of the date the first bill containing the error was mailed.

Include your name and account number, why you believe there's been a billing error, and the dollar amount involved. Be sure to send the letter to the address provided for billing errors, not to the location that accepts card payments.

It's crucial that the written complaint be sent by certified mail, with a return receipt, so that the credit card company can't say it was never received.

SUPER: Appearances can be quite costly of my magazines — the supposedly revolutionary formula that won't lose its color all day.

I just had to try some. Oops, I didn't have the coupon that was inserted in my magazine. Oh well. The package was $7.43.

On to clothing. What a cute jogging outfit! Shorts and matching top, $11.99 each.

This went on for a few more minutes. I really didn't have that much in my cart.

I went to the cashier. The total — $65.30. Sixty-five thirty? Oh, my gosh!

I went on and paid for it. It's all useful. It's all stuff I wanted — or at least convinced myself I needed it once I saw it.

All in all, those dime-a-pound bananas were the most expensive fruit I've ever bought.

My experience is not unique.

A friend tells me the canned formula for her baby is cheapest at Wal-Mart. But she pays a few cents more at H-E-B.

She knows if she goes to the discount store, she'll see some oh-so-pretty items and put them in her cart. She'll save $10 on the formula, but spend $20 to $30 on other items she'd not otherwise have thought of getting.

Women are not the only folks guilty of reckless shopping. A man once told me he avoids Sam's Discount Club. There's just too much merchandise there, he says. It's too attractive to him. He said he could go broke there saving money on all the items.

What we're all doing is compulsive shopping.

"This compulsion stuff happens all the time," said Donna Davis of the Consumer Credit Counseling Service's head office in Fort Worth.

Davis, who admits to a few bouts of impulse shopping herself, says marketers know what they're doing.

"The psychology of it all makes it too convenient," she said. "(Stores) do that for a reason. When they put all that stuff together, it's probably more expensive to shop there."

But it's not just the new superstores that can cause shoppers to empty their wallets or plunk down the plastic. If the merchandise is attractive enough, anything from a rummage sale to a swanky boutique can part you from your hard-earned pay. If you succumb to the temptation, that is.

Really, the stores are not to blame. We are. We can commit reckless shopping pretty much anywhere.

Leo Fennessey, regional manager for Consumer Credit Counseling Services of Waco, Temple and Killeen, said he doubts shoppers are any more prone to overspending at superstores than any other retail outlet.

"We Americans are pretty gullible, he said. "We don't need to be lured. If the superstores weren't there, there'd still be the old five-and-dime."

"The thing is your values, your goals, your decisions, your money management skills come into play wherever you are," agrees Charlotte Talley, McLennan County Extension agent for family consumer sciences. "It doesn't matter which store you visit. Appealing displays, new products, colorful packages and the like are always tempting."

Be it the library's used book sale or stores at a mall, our eyes can be bigger than our wallets.

"Our appetite for possessions can become insatiable and we only want more," Talley said. "Sometimes our desires outstrip our ability to pay."

Fennessey said large retailers such as Kmart are the most successful marketing businesses in the world. That's fine, as long as shoppers have the money to pay for their purchases.

But if they get over their heads in charge card bills, they need to learn strategies for coping with the temptations of the superstores, malls, discount outlets, highway outlet malls and shopping clubs.

One woman who can resist the impulse to spend lots of money is the self-proclaimed Frugal Zealot, Amy Dacyczyn.

Dacyczyn, who publishes "The Tightwad Gazette," recently wrote about impulse shopping. To avoid it, she advises deciding on what you want to buy before you visit a store or mall. Then go shopping to look at the options available.

"If you buy something for half price and buy half as much, you've spent only 25 percent as much as the person who doesn't use either strategy," she writes.

Talley has similar advice. "Plan ahead for a shopping trip," she said. "Make a shopping list and stick to it."

Grocery stores aren't the only place where a shopping list comes in handy, she said. "A list is a smart trick to help resist the temptation to overbuy," Talley explained.

Must you shun all items not on the list? Not always.

"On some shopping trips, you might find an unexpected good buy," Talley said. "You might find a substitute for an item on your shopping list that will do a better job. Such unplanned purchases can help stretch dollars."

Talley said wise buying begins with understanding yourself. When you have a clear picture of what is most important to you and your family, you'll recognize the thing that will give the greatest benefit and pleasure, she said. Then you can weigh the satisfaction of choosing one item over another.

Instead of impulsively buying everything you see.

Apparently, few people follow such advise.

Super Shopping Tips

WACO — If you want to enjoy your shopping trips more — and also enjoy the end of the month when your charge card bills come in — here are some tips from consumer experts:

- Know the difference between what you really need and what you want, said extension agent Charlotte Talley. You may need a car for transportation. You may want a Porsche, but do you need the larger expense?
- Avoid spending out of boredom or unneeded self-indulgence, Talley advises. One woman jokes that she went to a "depression" sale. It wasn't the economy that was depressed. She was.

Also, don't buy things to "keep up with the Joneses." The Joneses aren't paying your bills.

- The cost of the item is not just what's written on the price tag. Sometimes installation, operating costs and the cost of service is also a factor. Be realistic about what you can afford.
- Cash is usually the cheapest way to buy. No interest rates. For large purchases, set money aside each month. Consumer Credit Counseling Service says it's easier to set aside a small amount of money each paycheck than to come up with it all at once.
- Take advantage of seasonal bargains, said Leo Fennessey of Consumer Credit Counseling Service. Many consumer and money management books have calendars telling you the best time to buy items. For instance, air conditioners are likely to be priced higher when it's 100 degrees in the shade. After the hot weather season, they may be on sale. The reverse is true of, say, winter coats.
- Set a limit on the amount of money you plan to spend and the amount of items you plan to buy, CCCS advises. You'll be able to stick to your budget more easily.
- Look at newspaper advertising to see the prices of various items you need. Fennessey said some stores will match the others' advertised low price. But merchants are catching on, he said. He's seen some ads that don't give the individual prices. "Instead, they'll say items are from $1.99 to $3.99, or a 25 percent savings," he said. "So you can't go ... and match that."
- Buy ahead of time. Whether it be for someone's birthday or for a holiday gift, the stress of last-minute shopping leads to the tendency to overspend.
- Is that bargain really a bargain? Sometimes, stores say they're offering a rock bottom price — but their competition has outdone them. An example: One Waco store offered trouser socks for half price at $1.25. The socks were near the center aisle and there was a sign as big as Texas proclaiming the bargain. Across town, another store was closing out some of its trouser socks — 70 cents each. They were tucked away in an obscure corner of the hosiery department.
- How do you know if it's really a bargain? Often, you don't. "Tightwad Gazette" editor Amy Dacyczyn advises keeping a list in a small notebook of the common items you buy. List the prices at different stores and the dates they were offered. (As time goes on, the prices may change.)

Make sure you also write down all pertinent information — such as the brand and size(s). Take the notebook with you shopping. Anytime you see something on sale, look up its normal price. It may — or may not be — cheaper than it is at the store across town.

the charity.

This document should estimate the value of the goods or services you receive, which is then subtracted from the amount of your total payment to determine how much you have contributed for tax purposes.

Beyond that, charitable giving continues to be governed by rules that applied in previous years.

"Only individuals who itemize deductions may deduct charitable contributions," says the accounting firm of Ernst & Young in its just-published Tax-Savings Strategies Guide 1995.

If you contribute 20 percent or more of your gross income, the firm points out, any of several limits on how much you can deduct may apply.

At yearend, timing is of the essence in determining whether you can take a deduction for a contribution within a given tax year.

If a check is mailed or delivered by Dec. 31, as supported by evidence such as a postmark, it is eligible for deduction in the current year.

Contributions by credit card can be deducted currently, even if you don't pay off your card balance for months. "If you make a contribution with borrowed funds," points out Ernst & Young, "a deduction is allowed in the year you make the contribution, regardless of when you repay the loan."

But the gift must be actually charged to the credit card, not just pledged. No matter what amounts you may promise to pay, a pledged contribution does not become a deductible contribution until you make good on it.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Taxed annuities and IRA accounts

By Bill Doyle

Q: I receive a monthly annuity check from an insurance company. I understand that some of the money is taxable and some is nontaxable. Is it possible to roll over the taxable portion into an individual retirement account to continue to defer the tax?

Doyle

A: It sure sounds like a great idea. Unfortunately, the tax laws do not allow it.

Once you start receiving monthly checks from an annuity, the deferred tax on the money earned over the years has to be paid. There is no tax, of course, on the portion that you contributed -- your own money being returned to you.

The Internal Revenue Service has been letting you defer all the income tax until you started receiving your checks. Now, the revenooers want their due. There is no way around it.

You might have purchased your annuity with the idea that, in later years when you started receiving your checks, you would be in a lower tax bracket. If that is true in your case, it should soften the tax blow.

Q: My broker is trying to persuade me to invest in a tax-deferred annuity so I can accumulate money faster for my retirement. He says a variable annuity is better for me than a fixed annuity. In your opinion, which is better?

A: A lot depends on whether you plan to retire fairly soon or a good number of years down the road.

With fixed annuities, an insurance company pays you a fixed rate of return on your investment for one or more years. At each renewal period, the company adjusts the interest rate up or down. At each adjustment interval, the amount of your principal and interest is guaranteed. People who plan to retire fairly soon tend to want a fixed amount of money they can count on.

With a variable annuity, the insurance company invests your money in stocks which, as you know, go up and down in value. The principal and interest are not guaranteed. You take on some risk but have the opportunity of seeing your annuity nest egg build faster because, over the years, stocks have shown a considerably better average annual rate of return than fixed-income investments such as certificates of deposit and U.S. Treasury bills. Variable annuities, because of the risk of stock-market ups and downs, are better suited for investors who don't plan to retire for quite a while.

Q: I'm confused. There are so many options offered in the annuity plan I'm considering, I'm not sure which one I should take. I am a divorcee in my early 50s. What kind of payment option would be suitable for my situation?

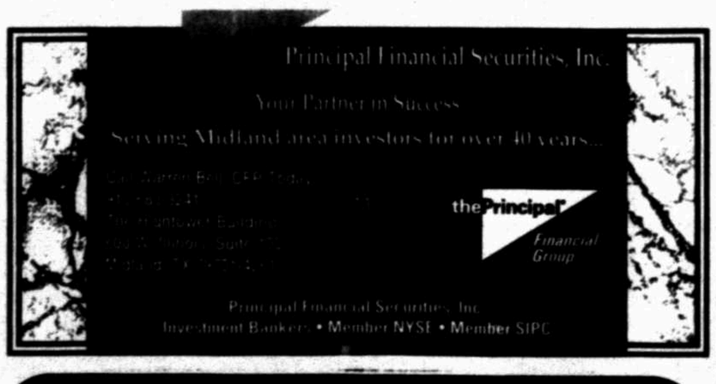

A: With annuity payment plans, there are basically three options:

- A "life only" annuity pays during your lifetime.
- A "joint and survivor" annuity pays benefits during your lifetime and that of your beneficiary.
- A "period certain" annuity pays benefits for a specified number of years, usually 10 or 20. If you die before the specified period is up, payments continue to your beneficiaries.

Texas prison system hires younger, less experienced people as guards

■ Some argue hiring trend creates problems such as the recent beating death of an inmate, allegedly by two rookie guards.

Associated Press

HOUSTON — The Texas prison system is hiring younger guards because of the system's phenomenal growth over the past years, some argue.

Therein lies one of the problems that led to the recent beating death of an inmate, allegedly by two newly hired guards, said Carol Vance, chairman of the Texas Board of Criminal Justice.

The fatal beating occurred after a recreation yard melee and other events of sporadic violence Oct. 7 at the Terrell Prison Unit outside Livingston. Officials have said the inmate was beaten in retaliation.

Two guards have been charged with murder in the death of Michael McCoy, 30, a car thief who died after being stomped and kicked in the head. Both guards started working for the prison system earlier this year.

Additional guards could face aggravated assault charges or administrative sanctions in the attacks on other prisoners.

In the first eight months of this year, the system hired 6,180 guards. An additional 10,000 to 12,000 will be hired over the next 12 to 14 months, said James A. "Andy" Collins, executive director of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice.

Prison officials are uncertain how many of those new guards meet the minimal requirements of a high school equivalency diploma — as opposed to college graduates with degrees in criminal justice, sociology or other related fields.

But officials said they are being forced to hire younger and less-experienced people to staff new prisons, the Houston Chronicle reported Sunday.

Collins said the rapid hiring means that "a good portion of the guard staff doesn't have long tenure."

However, TDCJ spokesman Glen Castlebury said the agency does not compile figures on average age or education levels of the people they hire.

Collins, who started in the prison system as a guard in 1972, said the work is harder than most people realize.

Officials quickly defended the image of prison employees after the incidents at Terrell.

But the problems there also prompted renewed calls for more extensive training of guards. Because of limited funds, however, it is unlikely guards will get more time in the classroom before they go on duty.

Retired mom resents new role as parent for child who isn't part of her own family

DEAR ABBY: I am 68 years old. My husband is 70. We raised seven children and now have 30 grandchildren. Our problem is "Sonny," our 30-year-old son who got in trouble with the law and disappeared for two years.

Van Buren

He returned this summer to clear up the trouble, and was sentenced to 18 months.

Before Sonny left to do his time, he brought his girlfriend, "Thelma," and her 7-year-old daughter to my house and asked if they could stay until Thelma found a job. (She has no skills.) Thelma registered her daughter in school, but she has made no effort to find a place of her own. She found a job and works from 2 p.m. to 9 p.m., so I have to pick up her daughter from school, give her dinner, help her with her homework, give her a bath and put her to bed. (She is NOT Sonny's child.)

Abby, not only have my husband and I lost the retirement we earned at this time of our lives, we have become maids, cooks and baby sitters for someone we never even knew until four weeks ago.

How can we tell Thelma that she must set a date to move out and be on her own? Unfortunately, she has no parents. — "MOM" TO A STRANGER

DEAR "MOM": Your son asked if Thelma and her daughter could stay with you until she found a job. She has found one; now TELL her that she must be out of your home within a specified number of days — or weeks.

Be firm, Mom, or Thelma will continue to take advantage of your generosity indefinitely.

DEAR ABBY: I care very much for an older gentleman — a widower with a large family (I'll call him Howard).

I have frequently resented the tone and disrespectful manner used by his family when speaking to him. They are impatient to the point of being downright cruel.

After I criticized a family member for humiliating him in front of numerous people, it suddenly dawned on me that Howard has a hearing problem. He often responds inappropriately to comments made to him, and his inability to hear has resulted in misunderstandings, hurt feelings, difficulty in following verbal instructions, and feeling isolated in groups.

I talked to Howard about it and he told me he had tried various hearing aids, but none has worked for him. Being a very impatient man, he probably didn't give them a fair trial, but he refuses to listen to anyone who dares to suggest that he give yet another hearing aid a chance.

Abby, if you or your readers have any suggestions on how to help this dear man, please let me know. — HOWARD'S FRIEND

DEAR FRIEND: Waste no time in taking Howard to an audiologist to have his hearing tested. If he has the type of deafness for which there is no hearing aid, he and his family should be advised.

However, in any case, his impatient and cruel family members should be made aware of his condition, and urged to exercise patience and respect.

DEAR ABBY: Does a cow have a significant udder? — MIKE HECHT

DEAR MIKE: Probably, although some may believe udderwise.

■ Dallas finds winning ignition switch against the Eagles after a slow start.

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — It's the same old story in the NFC East. The Dallas Cowboys are still the neighborhood bully.

The NFL's top-ranked defense intercepted Randall Cunningham four times Sunday while Troy Aikman threw two touchdown passes and Emmitt Smith rushed for over 100 yards and scored a touchdown as Dallas beat the Philadelphia Eagles 24-13 in a showdown for the division lead.

"This is a big step for us, a big game," Aikman said. "We're playing as well right now as we were at this point last year."

It was the 10th consecutive victory over an NFC East foe for the two-time defending Super Bowl champions stretching back to last season. Dallas, which has defeated the Eagles five consecutive times, is 5-1 and the Eagles dropped to 4-2.

"We're the better team and we proved it today," Dallas coach Barry Switzer said. "I was impressed with the way Troy kept his composure when things were going bad early. He fought off all the negatives and kept his poise. If this guy goes nuts then it's all over for us."

Smith did what he always does against Philadelphia, gain over 100 yards. In his last four games against the Eagles, he had gained 163, 114, 237, and 172 yards, respectively, against them. His 106 yards on 26 carries Sunday marked the 28th time he had rushed for 100 yards in his five-year career.

Cunningham hurt the Eagles with three consecutive interceptions which led to two touchdowns after a rapid-fire start which saw Dallas trail 7-0.

"The Eagles won the first quarter but we won the second, third and most of the fourth quarter," Switzer said.

Dallas jumped ahead 21-7 early in the third period after Darren Woodson intercepted Cunningham at the Philadelphia 31. Aikman made the Eagles pay with a 14-yard scoring strike to tight end Jay Novacek. Then Chris Boniol put the game out of reach with a 37-yard field goal in the fourth period for a 24-7 edge.

The Eagles tried to come back. James Joseph scored on a 34-yard touchdown run and Mark Woodward recovered an onsides kick. Cunningham then took Philadelphia the length of the field before Larry Brown intercepted a

Shreveport wins

SHREVEPORT, La. — Mike Johnson's three first-half touchdown passes and rain that came after halftime helped the Shreveport Pirates beat the Sacramento Gold Miners 24-12 Sunday, their first Canadian Football League victory.

The Pirates are 1-14 on the year.

No regrets

CARSON CITY, Nev. — There's no hint of bitterness in the man who could have been the home run king. Matt Williams has no regrets about a magical season cut short by the baseball strike.

Williams had 43 homers when the season ended in mid-August, and was making a run at Roger Maris' record of 61 in a season. To many fans, the premature end of his quest epitomized the anguish of an unfulfilled season.

"There's no reason to drive yourself nuts over something you can't control," he said, his placid face showing no sign of resentment. "I really don't feel anything.

"You can't control how many home runs you hit. There's no reason to be frustrated or to feel like you're chasing anyone," he said. "I don't know what my limits are, what my abilities are. I may hit more home runs next year, or I may not hit as many."

Instead of a possible October weekend in the NL playoffs and memories of a historic season, Williams was hosting a golf tournament in his hometown.

On Sunday morning, with a wind chill of 20 degrees, he was out at the Eagle Valley Golf Course. Long after former Toronto pitcher Dave Stieb won a prize for the longest drive and many golfers headed to the putting green for practice, Williams quietly walloped a couple of tee shots.

Rice's Aaron Stanley (3) breaks up a pass intended for Texas' Matt Davis (86) in a huge SWC upset Sunday.

It's a hoot, Owls win

By Michael A. Lutz
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON — The downtrodden Rice Owls no longer have to talk about the streak against No. 13 Texas.

After losing 28 years in a row to the Longhorns, the Owls' swarming defense and two touchdown passes by Josh LaRocca ignited them to a 19-17 victory on Sunday night.

The Longhorns (4-2, 1-1) in Southwest Conference games), favorites to capture the SWC title, had dominated the series since they lost to the Owls 20-17 in 1965.

Two weeks ago, Texas lost to Colorado on the final play of the game and last week they held on to beat Oklahoma on the final play. And they forced the issue against Rice with a 14-yard touchdown pass from Shea Morenz to Matt Davis with 1:27 to play.

The Longhorns tried an onside kick after that, but Ed Howard recovered for the Owls, who ran out the clock, triggering a jubilant celebration in Rice Stadium. Fans quickly overran the field and tore down the goal posts.

The Owls (3-2, 2-0) were ready from the start. They surged ahead of the stunned Longhorns in the first quarter,

Sanders burns Atlanta

■ Deion Sanders returns to his former Atlanta home, swinging and burning like a Gen. Sherman.

Associated Press

Who says the NFL has to be a team sport?

Certainly not Deion Sanders, who again starred solo Sunday in San Francisco's 42-3 rout of the Atlanta Falcons.

Playing for the first time against the Falcons in the city where he played football for five years and baseball for four, Sanders made the most of the moment.

He returned an interception 93 yards for a touchdown, got in a fistfight with Andre Rison and then sat on the bench for the second half with a groin injury. After the game, Sanders and Rison met near midfield and hugged — twice.

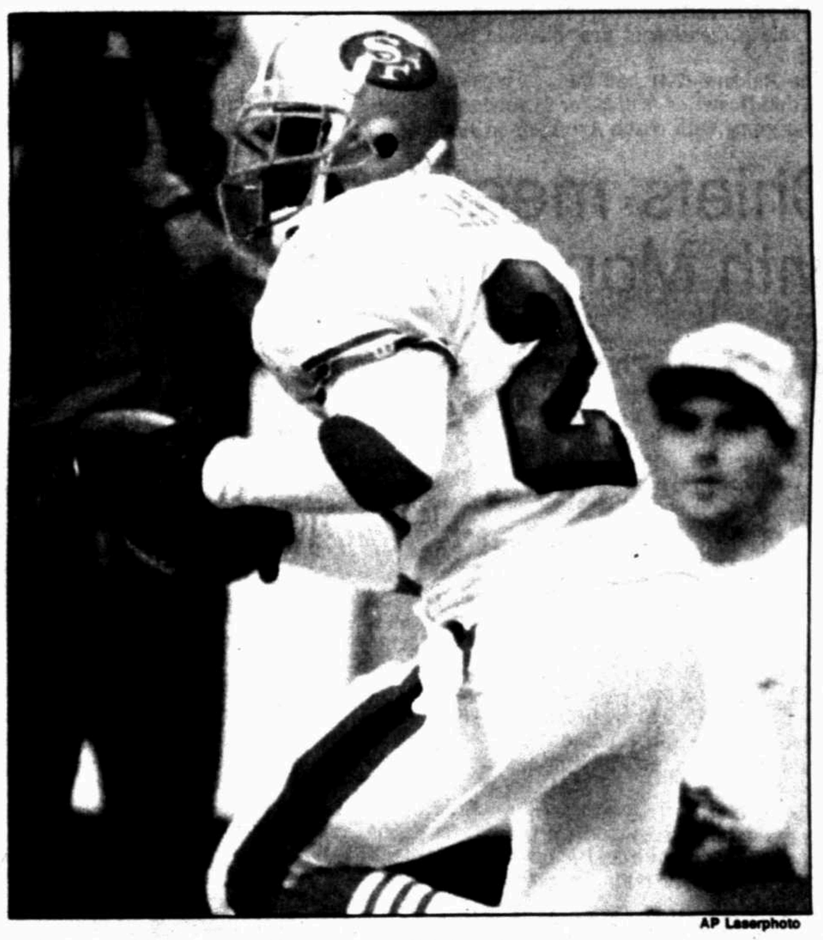

Sanders overshadowed Steve Young's near-perfect day — 15 of 16 for 143 yards and four TD passes — and left no doubt about the best team in the NFC West. The 49ers are 5-2, the Falcons 4-3.

"This is my house," Sanders said. "I built this house."

Added Young: "You see him get into a fight and you think, 'What's he doing?' Then he returns an interception 93 yards for a touchdown. It's a tribute to his playing ability."

The 49ers jumped to a 21-0 lead in the first 15:06 on Young's 10-yard TD pass to Ricky Watters, Tim McDonald's 49-yard TD return of a Craig Heyward fumble and Young's 1-yard TD pass to Jerry Rice.

Then the game went into Prime Time. Just 3:22 into the second quarter, Sanders locked up with his former teammate and when the play ended, Sanders swung first and each player got in a few punches before officials stepped in and penalized the cornerback.

Deion Sanders starts his way to a 93-yard interception return as San Francisco buries Atlanta in a key NFC West matchup Sunday.

The play led to a 34-yard field goal by Norm Johnson and set up an exciting sequence as the Falcons got the ball again and moved to the 49ers' 10 on a pass interference call against Sanders. Three plays later, Sanders intercepted Jeff George's pass raced down the sideline past the Atlanta bench. He turned and started pointing at the Falcons and talking to them as he went into his patented high-step routine.

At the half, it was 28-3 and the Falcons never had a chance as Atlanta had six turnovers. Young was replaced by Elvis Grbac early in the third quarter.

AMY WOLFENBARGER

Please, no more beach volleyball

Wolfenbarger

I never thought I would hear these words come from my mouth but it's finally gotten to that point. Please somebody, anybody, bring back baseball and hockey.

As a self-proclaimed non-fan of one of the most slow and boring games in the world, I admit I turned more than a few cartwheels when the baseball owners did not give in to the demands of the players and the baseball strike began. How many millionaires do we really need? But that's a topic for another day.

Without baseball, life on the sports desk suddenly went from hectic to, well, boring. With no baseball boxes to gather and no late games to wait for, making deadline became a joke. And it was kind of nice.

Then the hockey players were locked out by the owners because of a similar dispute. Again, no distress signs were posted. Growing up in West Texas, the first time I heard my father, the farmer, say the word hockey, he was referring to that smelly barnyard substance that was caked on his boots. (That's manure for the city folks).

By now, we're deep into football season, but unfortunately those events are usually reserved for the weekends except for the occasional Thursday night college or professional game. I mistakenly thought my second favorite sport would be enough to keep me interested.

I was wrong.

About the only thing NBC could find to fill the void for its planned baseball broadcasts was pro beach volleyball. Don't get me wrong, I'm a big fan of one of the most exciting and physically challenging sports around. And if you don't agree, check out the local high school girls teams.

Of course, there's golf. But like football, it takes place on only four days a week and while it may be a fun hobby, it leaves little to be desired as a spectator sport with its whispering announcers and slow action. Still, it's fairly entertaining when there's nothing else on the tube. There's also auto racing, but through no fault of the sport, I've never really enjoyed watching car races on television. I guess you have to be there.

Besides that, there's not much else going on. And I can only watch so many logging contests and episodes of American Gladiators.

Checked out ESPN lately? It must be reaching nightmare proportions over there at the all-sports network with two professional sports out to dry. Imagine what CNN would be like if the President Clinton and his cabinet decided to go on strike. Sure, it would be big news for a while, just like the daily countdown before the baseball strike.

Eventually, though, the viewers would grow tired of stories that say nothing. Kind of like the NHL and baseball stories that continue to say there has been no progress in reviving the season. Who cares? Wake me up when they finally decide to get back to business.

Otherwise, I'll be asleep on the couch with the set tuned to — yawn — pro beach volleyball. And although I've developed a liking for baseball in the last few years and now wish the game would come back, I'm not holding my breath. I've set my alarm for November when the real action, basketball, finally returns to fill the void.

BOYS: Defense shines

pass in the end zone.

Dallas defensive lineman Chad Hennings had two of the Cowboys four sacks.

"I was one of the spy guys who sat back and waited for Cunningham to try to run," Hennings said. "Philadelphia has a lot of weapons. They presented a tremendous challenge and we answered it."

The Cowboys, who couldn't make a first down in the first period, got their offensive machine cranking late in the first half, scoring twice in 41 seconds to take a 14-7 halftime lead.

"I don't think anyone matches up talent wise with Dallas right now," Eagles coach Rich Kotite said. "But at least they knew they were in a game."

Cunningham said it was a bad day.

"You come in here and you think you're going to pull one out but they have the best safeties and corners in the league," Cunningham said. "I had to force some balls and got intercepted. That's why we lost. I tried to make things happen."

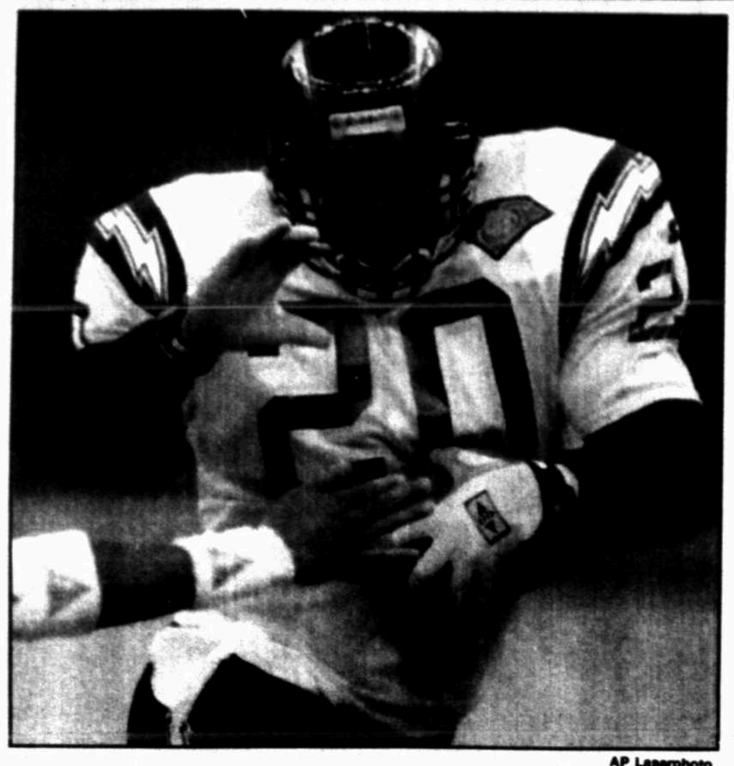

Aikman took the Cowboys on an 84-yard scoring drive in 14 plays with the payoff coming on Smith's 2-yard touchdown run. Linebacker Byron Evans helped the Cowboys by jumping offsides on a third-down incompleted pass from the 5. Smith scored on the next play.

Kenny Gant intercepted Cunningham on the next play at the Eagles 34. Two plays later, Aikman faked a slant pass to fool cornerback Eric Allen and lobbed a 16-yard touchdown pass to a wide open Alvin Harper.

Jeff Sydner returned a punt 40 yards to position the Eagles for their first touchdown, which came on a some splendid deception by Cunningham. On third- and-1 at the Dallas 32, Cunningham faked to Charlie Garner and found Herschel Walker down the sidelines for the touchdown.

The Eagles didn't score again until 5:27 left on Joseph's TD run. Cunningham's run for two points failed.

Garner, the Eagles' rookie who had back-to-back, 100-yard rushing games, was held to 57 yards.

scoring nine points before Texas ever ran an offensive play.

Rice out-gained Texas 122-8 in the first quarter, helping the Owls take a 12-10 halftime lead.

That's how it remained until the fourth quarter when a 53-yard pass from Morenz to Curtis Jackson was nullified by a penalty and the Owls took over and drove to LaRocca's 7-yard touchdown pass to running back Spencer George with 8:21 left in the game.

Rice's Emerson Allen gave Texas a chance to narrow the gap moments later when he bobbled a punt and Texas' Duane Vacek recovered at the Rice 42. But the Horns were held to a field goal attempt, which Phil Dawson missed from 47 yards out with 6:02 left in the game.

Rice hadn't led the Longhorns at the half since 1989, but the Owls knocked the favored Longhorns back on their heels before 34,700 rain-soaked fans. Rice's halftime lead over Texas was its first since it led 17-10 at the half in 1989 before losing 31-30.

Rice drove 74 yards with the opening kickoff that ended with a 24-yard field goal by Matt Huelsman, and when Josh Sumner bobbled the following kickoff, Jay Lamy recovered at the Texas 33 for the Owls.

LaRocca needed only one play to find Coston, outstretched in the end zone, for the touchdown on the first play with 5:58 left in the first quarter.

Texas was outgained 122-8 in the first quarter,

Texas played the game without starting receivers Lovell Pinkney and Mike Adams, suspended for missing a curfew.

NFL: Means helps keep Chargers undefeated

(From 1C)

Means had three TDs and 120 yards and John Carney added five field goals. The Chargers, who scored on their first five possessions, are off to their best start since going 11-0 to open the 1961 season.

Stan Humphries was 17 of 29 for 186 yards, while Means' TD runs came from 1, 8 and 16 yards. Carney's field goals were from 49, 31, 29, 29 and 28 yards. The Saints are 2-5.

Dolphins 20, Raiders 17, OT

At Miami, Bernie Parmalee rushed for a career-high 150 yards, including a 26-yard dash to set up Pete Stoyanovich's 29-yard field goal 5:46 into overtime. Parmalee also recovered a fumbled punt by Tim Brown to set up the tying TD in the fourth quarter.

Despite Dan Marino's subpar outing (17 of 37 for 186 yards and two TDs), Miami (5-2) moved into sole possession of first place in the AFC East.

The Raiders (2-4) had their own problems, with Jeff Hostetler (8 of 23 for 95 yards and one TD) arguing with coach Art Shell on sidelines after being benched late in the first half.

Cardinals 19, Redskins 16, OT

At Washington, Steve Beuerlein threw a tying TD pass with 19 seconds left in regulation and Todd Peterson kicked a 29-yard field goal with five minutes left in overtime for Arizona (2-4). Redskins rookie Heath Shuler was intercepted five times, the final time by Terry Hoage, who returned it to the Washington 12 and set up the winning kick. The Redskins are 1-6.

Rams 17, Giants 10

At Anaheim, Calif., Chris Miller (13 of 26 for 197 yards) threw two first-quarter touchdown passes — 19 yards to Isaac Bruce and 12 yards to Tony Drayton — and the Rams (3-4) handed the Giants (3-3) their third straight loss. Dave Brown had another poor outing (15 of 27 for 165 and two interceptions) for the Giants, while Jerome Bettis had 30 carries for 88 yards for the Rams. Rodney Hanpton scored on a 27-yard run for the Giants.

Jets 24, Patriots 17

At East Rutherford, N.J., Johnny Johnson rushed for 122 yards, Brad Baxter had two short TDs and the Jets overcame six sacks and two turnovers by shutting down Drew Bledsoe (22 of 41 for 242 yards and one interception). Boomer Esiason, still bothered by an ankle injury, lost two fumbles and was 12 of 17 for 107 yards.

Steelers 14, Bengals 10

At Pittsburgh, the Steelers' Neil O'Donnell (15 of 22 for 190 yards) threw TD passes of 14 yards to Ernie Mills and 13 yards to John L. Williams in just over three minutes of the second quarter. Cincinnati dropped to 0-6.

Barry Foster, the AFC's second-leading rusher, twisted his left knee on his first carry and will be out for as long as three weeks. The Steelers are 4-2.

Colts 27, Bills 17

At Orchard Park, N.Y., Jim Harbaugh threw for 206 yards and two TDs and the Bills fell out of first in the AFC East. Harbaugh was 18 of 22 before leaving in the fourth quarter with a bruised throwing hand. On Don Majkowski's first pass, he hit Floyd Turner for a 19-yard touchdown score — the Colts' first fourth-quarter TD all year — to make it 24-10 with 8:14 to go.

Penn St. new No. 1

Associated Press

■ AP Top 25 Poll

Penn State took over the top spot in The Associated Press college football poll Sunday, while Notre Dame dropped out of the rankings for the first time since 1986.

The Nittany Lions, No. 3 last week, moved up after they beat Michigan 31-24 and former No. 1 Florida lost to Auburn 36-33 Saturday.

Penn State (6-0) received 19 first-place votes and 1,487 points to gain the No. 1 ranking for the first time since winning the 1986 national championship. The Lions also are No. 1 in the USA Today-CNN coaches' poll.

Colorado (6-0), which routed Oklahoma 45-7, was second in the AP media poll with 15 first-place votes and 1,474 points. Nebraska (7-0) was third with 25 firsts and 1,463 points after beating Kansas State 17-6.

Auburn (7-0), which has won 18 straight games, was next with three first-place votes and 1,402 points. Florida (5-1), No. 1 for five consecutive weeks, fell to fifth.

Rounding out the Top 10 are Texas A&M (6-0), Miami (4-1), Alabama (7-0), Washington (5-1) and Florida State (4-1).

Texas A&M rose one spot after beating Baylor 41-21, idle Miami climbed one notch and Alabama jumped two places after defeating Tennessee 17-13. Washington remained No. 9 following a 35-14 victory over Arizona State, and idle Florida State moved up one spot.

Michigan is 11th, followed by Colorado State, Texas, Arizona, North Carolina, Syracuse, Virginia Tech, Utah, Kansas State, Duke, Brigham Young, Boston College, Washington State, Ohio State and Virginia.

Michigan slipped six spots and Kansas State dropped three. Duke rose five notches after beating Clemson 19-13.

Brigham Young, Ohio State and Virginia moved into the Top 25, while Notre Dame, Wisconsin and Oklahoma fell out.

BYU's 21-14 victory over Notre Dame dropped the Fighting Irish (4-3) out of the rankings for the first time since Lou Holtz's inaugural season in South Bend.

Chiefs meet Broncos with Montana in doubt

DENVER (AP) — The Kansas City Chiefs are a team on the run. The question is this: In which direction are they moving?

In their previous three games, the Chiefs have rushed for 66, 76 and 64 yards — figures that will get you beat in the NFL.

Indeed, Kansas City has lost its last two outings after a 3-0 start. Now, the Chiefs hope for a turnaround Monday night in a most inhospitable environment — Denver's Mile High Stadium, where they have lost 11 straight games.

Making matters worse for the Chiefs, Montana has been hobbled by a bruised hip, leaving his status in doubt for the game. Steve Bono would get the start if Montana can't go.

His counterpart, Denver's John Elway, is fully recovered from a jammed right thumb and leads a mildly resurgent team into the game.

The lack of ground production is symptomatic of bigger offensive troubles for the Chiefs. They haven't scored a touchdown in their last eight quarters, losing 16-0 to the Los Angeles Rams and 20-6 to San Diego.

Running back Marcus Allen isn't shocked by the slump.

"The way we've played, it's no surprise that we haven't scored," he said. "If we had played extremely well and hadn't scored, I would be surprised. But the last couple of games, I guess, warrant the bagels that we've got, other than the field goals."

Allen's own productivity is down as well. Coming off a season in which he was named Kansas City's most valuable player by his teammates — ahead of Joe Montana — he has rushed for just 238 yards on 70 carries and two touchdowns. If his 3.4 yard-per-carry average continues, it would be a career low.

"We don't seem to be as cohesive as we've been in the past," Allen said. "We realize that if you can't run the ball effectively in this league, your chances of winning decrease."

Last week, Allen ran for just 17 yards on 10 carries, but he did catch nine passes for 83 yards — his best receiving day since 1987.

After opening the season 0-4, the Broncos finally achieved a breakthrough, beating Seattle 16-9 last week thanks to a 5-0 turnover advantage and 103 yards rushing by Leonard Russell. He has assumed the main rushing load after Rod Bernstine's season-ending knee injury.

The Broncos, who listed 14 injured players prior to last week's game, are getting healthier. Tight end Shannon Sharpe, Elway's favorite target, is moving better after battling knee and ankle injuries earlier in the season.

Last Dec. 12, Elway threw three TD passes to Sharpe in Denver's 27-21 win over the Chiefs here. It was the Broncos' last win at home; they have lost their last three games at Mile High, usually a cinch victory for the home team.

Orioles call on Regan

BALTIMORE (AP) — Ten straight years of managing winter ball in the Dominican Republic and Venezuela finally paid off for Phil Regan.

"I've waited a long time for this," he said Sunday, holding a Baltimore Orioles jersey with his name on it.

The Orioles hired Regan as their new manager, gambling that his accumulated baseball savvy will compensate for his never having managed in the major leagues.

"Managing in the winter leagues is a good way to expedite your progress into the major leagues as a manager," Baltimore general manager Roland Hemond said. "In his case, with all of the other duties he's had, he has compiled more than enough experience."

Regan, 57, signed a two-year contract, with an option for a third year. He replaces Johnny Oates, who was fired on Sept. 26.

Regan was pitching coach for two AL teams, most recently with the Cleveland Indians this year, and spent seven years as a scout for the Los Angeles Dodgers.

"I would venture to say, and I don't think anyone could question it, that Phil Regan has seen more players than anyone in baseball over the last 10 years," Hemond said.

Regan took a break from managing his team in Caracas to travel to Baltimore for a second interview Saturday. He will return to Venezuela until his team can find a replacement.

"People asked me why I kept going back there 10 years in a row, and I can honestly say this is why," Regan said. "I wanted to be a major league manager, and one of the ways I could do that was to go to the winter leagues and show everybody that I could manage."

Regan was the only person granted a second interview among the nine considered for the job.

The others were: Cincinnati Reds manager Davey Johnson, St. Louis Cardinals hitting instructor Chris Chambliss, former Orioles Rick Dempsey and Elrod Hendricks, Baltimore first-base coach Davey Lopes, and former big league managers Bill Virdon, Buck Rodgers and Jeff Torborg.

Estes brings home first PGA tour win

Associated Press

■ Golf Roundup

SAN ANTONIO — Bob Estes, buoyed by a four-stroke lead entering the final round, shot a 1-under-par 70 Sunday to win the Texas Open for the first victory of his seven-year career.

Estes, the leader all the way, won by a stroke, covering the tight, tree-lined Oak Hills Country Club course in 19-under 265.

He set seasonal marks for two rounds (127) and three rounds (195). Still, he was pressured throughout the final round by two veterans — Gil Morgan and Don Pooley.

Each closed to within a stroke but neither could catch the steady young Texan. Morgan finished second at 266 after a bogey-free round of 67.

"A hair short," Morgan said. "It seemed like every time I got close, he'd make birdie and put (the lead) back to two."

Pooley, on the mend from back surgery that threatened his career, was another shot back at 68-267.

"A lot of fun, particularly figuring three weeks ago I didn't know if I'd ever be competitive again," said Pooley who has played only five times since surgery a year ago. "This is better than I could have ever expected. It's a great surprise to me."

No one else was in contention over the last 18 holes. Bruce Lietzke was fourth at 69-270, followed by Craig Stadler, John Wilson and Mark McNulty. Stadler shot 68 in the muggy heat, Wilson 70 and McNulty 69.

Senior Gold Rush

RANCHO MURIETA, Calif. — Bob Murphy tapped in a bogey putt to beat Dave Eichelberger on the fifth playoff hole to win the $600,000 Raley's Senior Gold Rush.

Murphy and Eichelberger finished regulation at 8-under 208. J.C. Snead and Jim Albus were two strokes back at 210.

The only hole played in the playoff was the 429-yard No. 18. Murphy and Eichelberger parred it the first four times.

Then, on the fifth time, Eichelberger pushed his tee shot out of bounds. Murphy played safely to the middle of the fairway, then three-putted from some 80 feet, the last from 1 foot.

Murphy earned $97,500 and Eichelberger $57,200.

Murphy shot identical 34s to close with a 4-under 68. He had two birdies and one bogey on each nine holes.

Eichelberger ended with a 71. He slid in a 15-foot downhill putt in the next-to-last hole to take a one-stroke lead. Murphy countered with an 18-foot birdie putt on the final hole of regulation.

World Championship of Women

NAPLES, Fla. — Beth Daniel, powered by four straight birdies to begin her back nine, shot a course record 7-under-par 65 to win the World Championship of Women's Golf.

The outcome sets the stage for next month's tournament in Japan, where Daniel and Laura Davies will be bidding to become the LPGA's top money winner and Player of the Year.

Daniel used an excellent putting touch to beat Elaine Crosby by three strokes while dealing Davies, the third-place finisher, a big setback.

Davies, who arrived at Naples National Golf Club with an $80,965 lead over Daniel in the money race, had said she wasn't as interested in winning as she was in finishing ahead of Daniel and moving closer to her first money winnings title.

Now, after collecting $105,000, Daniel trails Davies' total of $667,652 by only $10,965. The Toray Japan Queens Cup in November is the only official money event left on the schedule.

World Match Play

VIRGINIA WATER, England — After adding a world title to his U.S. Open crown, Ernie Els cautioned those who would immediately include him among the royalty of golf.

A day before his 25th birthday, the South African beat Scot Colin Montgomerie 4 and 2 in the final of the World Match Play Championship. The victory Sunday gave Els the biggest golf paycheck in European history, $240,000 — and earned him plaudits as a golfer pegged for superstardom for many years to come.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

MONDAY, OCTOBER 17, 1994

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Fine-tuning will mean the difference between success and failure. Spend more time in reflection before announcing your plans. Techniques that have worked in the past may need updating. Be flexible. Friends could misread your needs or supply incorrect information at times. Curb your temper. The more love you give, the more you will receive. Next spring is a great time to invest in real estate. A summer wedding seems likely.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: playwright Arthur Miller, actress Margot Kidder, singer Gary Puckett, movie legend Rita Hayworth.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Trust your instincts when making tough personal decisions. Valuable good will be obtained from expanding your business contacts. A telephone message or letter brings great news.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You could become involved in too many activities for your own good today. Delegate some of the work before you paint yourself into a corner. Mate or partner is unusually supportive.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Someone's erratic behavior leads to a welcome change in a business arrangement. A promotion or raise could soon be yours! Group activities hold special appeal tonight.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your impatience with old methods and customs could cause a confrontation with your partner or mate. Avoid those who chatter and zero in on work. Romance keeps you guessing.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Someone who starts a legal action may have hidden motives. Get expert advice before responding. Let reason, not impulse, be your guide. A hasty decision could bring regrets. Become a pleasure-seeker tonight.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): The spotlight is on your career and prestige. Your hopes are raised — and for a very good reason. Overseas contacts can be a valuable tool for boosting profits. Find a new way of expressing your affection.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Take your time if faced with a confusing personal problem. Romance could be on a collision course with your business interests. A period of introspective thinking helps you decide on the best way to proceed.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A casual conversation with a stranger could give you food for thought. Romance is prominent in your plans. Check travel costs. Your mate's tastes may be too extravagant for your budget. Suggest an attractive compromise.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Something you overhear today could help a dream become reality. Keep your eyes and ears open! An old friend's comments give you a new slant on recent developments. An interest in team sports is revived.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Secrecy is recommended when handling financial matters. Original ideas should be discussed only with those people directly involved with putting them into operation. Reorganize your work space. Remove any clutter from files and closets.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Teamwork should produce the kind of results that have eluded you recently. Someone bright and amusing turns romance around. A sense of obligation may pull you in several directions at one time. Be decisive.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You feel a need to talk candidly. Bring your concerns out into the open. Business negotiations are brought to a successful conclusion. Take pride in your achievements! Refine work methods and procedures to save time.

GOREN BRIDGE

With Omar Sharif and Tannah Hirsch

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q. 1 - East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K 8 ♡J 10 7 6 2 ◇Q 5 4 ♣8 3 2

The bidding has proceeded:

WEST	NORTH	EAST	SOUTH
1 ♠	Dbl	Pass	1 ♡
Pass	2 ♡	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A - This is a pretty good hand facing a partner who could make a takeout double then raise, knowing you might have a bust. At the very least you owe partner another bid, and three hearts fits the bill. That shows a willingness to play game if North has anything in reserve.

Q. 2 - Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A Q 8 2 ♡A Q 9 3 ◇6 4 ♣A 8 3

The bidding has proceeded:

EAST	SOUTH	WEST	NORTH
1 ◇	Dbl	Pass	1 ♡
Pass	?

What action do you take?

A - Had East not opened the bidding and had partner responded one heart to your one-club opening, you would have jump raised to three hearts. Since your takeout double forced North to bid, take it easy. Partner could be broke, so two hearts is enough.

Q. 3 - As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠6 ♡10 7 4 2 ◇A K J 9 8 5 ♣A Q
Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one spade. What action do you take?

A - There are those who would insist that a takeout double is the only correct call with this holding — to make sure you don't lose a heart fit; should partner bid clubs, you can always correct to diamonds. Include us out! With almost half your values in a short suit and such poor hearts, we prefer to emphasize the quality of the minor suit. Overcall two diamonds.

Q. 4 - Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A 7 2 ♡Q 6 ◇A 10 9 3 ♣K 9 5 4
Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with three hearts. What action do you take?

A - Preempts are designed to pick your pockets, but here the pickings are pretty slim. You have a minimum opening bid of which two points, the queen of hearts, are of doubtful value. You don't even have four cards in the other major. Pass, and see what develops.

Q. 5 - As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠7 4 ♡J 9 6 5 4 ◇8 7 6 2 ♣K 7

The bidding has proceeded:

WEST	NORTH	EAST	SOUTH
1 ◇	Dbl	2 ◇	?

What action do you take?

A - It might seem automatic to pass, but suppose partner has a fair hand and elects to compete with two spades? Odds are you'll land in the wrong contract. The only way to avoid being impaled on the horns of that particular dilemma is to bid two hearts. If partner then bids two spades, you can pass with a clear conscience.

Q. 6 - Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠7 4 ♡J 9 6 5 4 ◇8 7 6 2 ♣K 7

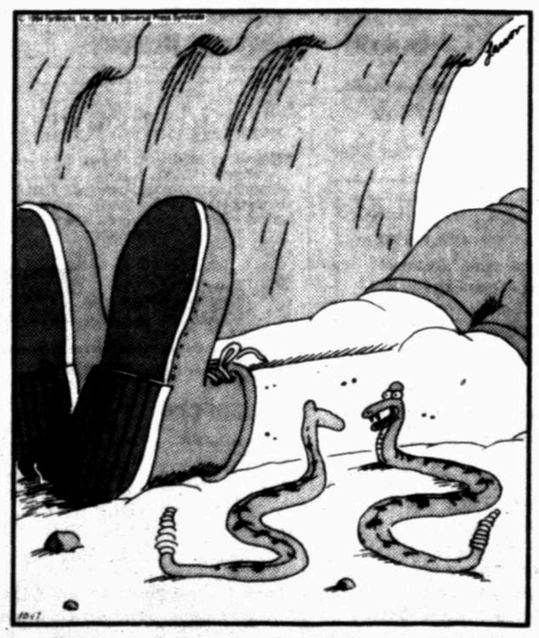

The bidding has proceeded:

WEST	NORTH	EAST	SOUTH
1 ♠	Dbl	2 ♠	?

What action do you take?

A - This is the same hand as in the previous question, but the auction is different. There were sound reasons to act at the two-level. None can justify bidding at the three-level with such a poor hand. Pass, before you get into trouble.

Kevin Costner plods on despite bloated budget of 'Waterworld'

NEW YORK — Kevin Costner is determined to complete the sci-fi adventure movie "Waterworld," despite its bloated budget.

Kevin Costner is determined to finish sci-fi film

After four months of filming on Hawaii's Big Island and more than two months to go, the movie has cost more than $100 million, the Daily News said Sunday.

Costner's salary is $12 million to play a half-man, half-fish pitted against bad guy Dennis Hopper, the newspaper said. Costner's ocean-view bungalow with butler and chef costs $4,500 a night.

Food (steak and lobsters included) and lodging for the cast and crew of about 1,500 has cost more than $25 million, the newspaper said.

Universal Pictures President Casey Silver, MCA President Sidney Sheinberg and other executives went to Hawaii for a crisis meeting. Sheinberg came away optimistic.

"I really believe this picture has enormous potential," he said. "Do I wish the movie had cost less? Of course!"

At times, Costner said, the movie "has been a mess. I try to be honest and there is no point pretending this is a normal film. The money got out of hand."

LINCOLN, Neb. — Girls can ride the sciences all the way to the top, and Sally Ride should know.

Girls can ride sciences to top — Sally Ride should know.

"Science is important to girls as well as boys," the astronaut said Saturday.

Ride became the first American woman to travel in space on June 18, 1983. She is a professor of physics at the University of California in San Diego.

She appeared via satellite from California with U.S. Sen. Bob Kerrey, D-Neb., to discuss a shipment of surplus NASA computer and science equipment to Nebraska.

"Women have a role in this society as engineers and technicians, as well as boys," Ride said in an interview afterward.

RADNOR, Pa. — "The Far Side" is fading out of print, but it will come into focus on your television screen.

Gary Larson will take his cartoon to television before retiring it Jan. 1. "Gary Larson's Tales From the Far Side" will be broadcast Oct. 26 on CBS.

He promises something different.

"This isn't a Charlie Brown special, no disrespect intended," Larson said in the latest TV Guide. "There's very little dialogue, but plenty of hideous screams and grunting."

LOS ANGELES — Edward James Olmos didn't mince words during a speech at a minority journalists conference.

Actor Edward James Olmos didn't mince words.

"We stand for what this country really is," the actor said. "What makes Los Angeles unique is the diversity of its people.It is the key to us as a human species."

"The written word has such profound power, but the problem is our history needs a very strong augmentation," Olmos told mostly Hispanic journalists at the 16th Annual Journalism Opportunities Conference for Minorities.

To make his point, he asked a white man in the front row to stand.

"Jesus should be represented by a person of color. He should have woolen hair and bronze skin," Olmos said. "I have only seen him represented by you, with white skin that almost glows."

NEW YORK — Natalie Cummings, 5, is used to seeing her mother, Maureen McCormick, project a fresh-scrubbed, nice-girl image. Ms. McCormick is, after all, the actress who portrayed Marcia, the oldest sister on "The Brady Bunch" in the early 1970s.

So it came as something of a shock to Natalie when Ms. McCormick showed her daughter a tape of the movie version of "Grease!" and told her that she would be playing the "bad girl" role of Betty Rizzo.

"Natalie said: 'Oh, no, Mommy, you can't play the mean one. You've got to play Sandy,' " Ms. McCormick said the other day. "I said, 'No, honey: I've played enough Sandys.' She'll probably be heartbroken."

Rules:

Anyone 18 years or older can enter except employees (and family members of employees) of the Midland Reporter-Telegram, Brite systems Inc., Associated Publishing Co., and their advertising and promotion agencies.

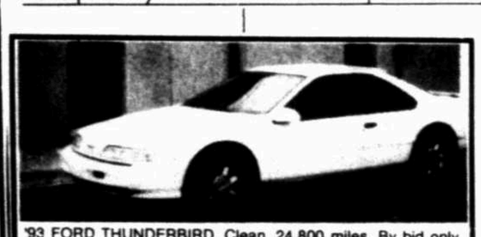

The "It's 4 U" Game is designed for people who live in the Midland and Odessa calling areas and no purchase is required to play or win prizes, although long distance toll charges may apply if you call from outside the Midland-Odessa calling area.

Look for the "It's 4 U" Game ad here and in the advertisers' service directory in the Midland Reporter-Telegram every day until November 5, 1994. Call 560-2400 and enter any four-digit advertiser's code listed in the directory. You will hear a brief advertiser's message and, if you are one of five instant winners chosen at random each week, you will win one of that week's prizes. If you are an instant winner, listen for details about claiming your prize. In order to claim your prize, you will be required to give your name, age, address and telephone number. The more often you call, the better your chance of winning a prize.

You can also enter a second chance drawing for unclaimed prizes by hand printing your complete name and address and daytime phone number on a 3"x5" piece of paper and mailing it in an envelope to "It's 4 U" Second Chance Game, P.O. Box 1650, Midland, Texas 79702, so that it is received before the deadline, October 30, 1994. Enter as often as you wish, but submit only one entry in each envelope. Entries become the property of the sponsors. None will be returned.

Each game begins at 12:01 a.m. Monday and ends at 11:59 p.m. Sunday. Each week for eight weeks ending November 5, 1994, five entries will be selected at random and will win one of that week's prize. The total value of all prizes to be awarded in the "It's 4 U" game will equal $4,000 or more. The names and cities of winners will be published in the Midland Reporter-Telegram Classified Ads page. No substitution of prizes is permitted. Only one prize will be awarded to each winner.

By entering, winners authorize the use of their names, cities or photos for publicity purposes. Winners may be required to sign an affidavit of eligibility and release. Taxes are the responsibility of winners. Void where prohibited.
