Pantless bandit

ODESSA — A man who was nude from the waist down and armed with a pair of scissors robbed a hair salon Tuesday evening, police said.

The half-dressed man who was about 30 years old, entered Kiki Hair, 1541 Parkway Drive, about 9:40 p.m. and confronted two women in the salon, police said.

The man, wielding scissors in his right hand, demanded money from one woman who complied by giving the robber her wallet containing $150. The second woman told the man she didn't have any money.

The robber then took a magazine he was holding in his left hand and hit his genital area, and made rude remarks to the women, police said.

The women then ran to a back bathroom and locked the door. The man fled.

The robber was described as about 5-foot-8, 140 pounds with collar-length black hair and a mustache.

Thousands protest

DALLAS — Thousands of high school students, some throwing bottles and stones, marched on the headquarters of the Dallas Independent School District on Tuesday to protest layoffs of 245 teachers and the elimination of 384 teaching positions. About 70 police officers in riot gear ringed the administration building just north of the downtown area, protecting school administrators inside./5B

A royal divorce?

The spotlight that never seems to waver from Britain's royal family has moved for the moment to Princess Anne and her estranged husband, Capt. Mark Phillips. Because they have now been separated for more than two years, they are now free to file for divorce. Will they? Spokesmen for Buckingham Palace say the couple have no plans to do so. The princess is seventh in line for the throne. Her husband is a former British army captain. Reports of separate romances have swirled about them for years.

Saudis boost oil stock

Move could counter Soviet Union shortfall

■ Action underlines determination to keep supplies high, prices low.

N.Y. Times News Service

PARIS — With Soviet oil production falling precipitously, Saudi Arabia has significantly increased its stocks of oil in storage to around 60 million barrels and is signaling its determination to keep worldwide supplies plentiful and prices down.

A senior official in the Persian Gulf oil industry, in a telephone interview Tuesday, confirmed a published report that the Saudis have been storing oil at the impressive rate of 400,000 to 500,000 barrels a day since July.

The report appeared in Petrostrategies, an oil newsletter published in Paris. The publication, which is close to the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, noted that Saudi Arabia would be going to the Geneva meeting of OPEC oil ministers in September "with some 50 to 60 million barrels of onshore and offshore oil stocks."

Because Saudi Arabia has the oil stored both on land and in tankers at sea, the country is in an ideal position to replace immediately any supply shortfalls, particularly from the Soviet Union.

Most other oil-producing nations are operating at capacity and do not have ample supplies in storage.

The increased storage also underlines Saudi Arabia's often-stated intention of keeping world oil prices at their present low levels — about $18.70 a barrel for OPEC oil — to encourage consumption and discourage consumers from switching to other fuels.

The Saudis are sending their message largely to the

Dynagen Inc. agrees to pay $1.4 million in penalties

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Dynagen, which on Tuesday was saddled with a $1.4 million civil penalty for violations of the Texas Clean Air Act, is to spend about $12 million in improving its synthetic rubber-producing petrochemical plant to curb air pollution, a company official said.

The fine, which initially was set at $4.4 million, may be the largest air-pollution penalty assessed an industry in Texas and one of the largest in the nation, according to representatives of the Texas Attorney General's Office and the Texas Air Control Board (TACB).

Dynagen, the Odessa-based subsidiary of General Tire & Rubber Company, the world's fourth largest tire maker, has been under pressure by the TACB to take measures to curb its air pollution.

"We are definitely improving," Tim Gorman, Dynagen plant manager, said Tuesday after Judge Tryon D. Lewis of the 161st Texas District Court in Odessa accepted the 31-page agreed judgment between Dynagen and the Attorney General.

"We are making the commitments to improve our plant," said Gorman, who recalled a salient point which civil-rights leader Jesse Jackson recently made in trying to bring harmony and understanding between Dynagen and Odessans adversely affected by the air pollution: 'We need jobs, and we need clean air.' "

Gorman said that while he is "interested in making our plant a better environmentally sound plant, I am also interested that this plant remain an economic

Gorbachev, Yeltsin press for change

■ Old bitter rivalry gives way to tense alliance.

N.Y. Times News Service

MOSCOW — Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev and Russian republic President Boris N. Yeltsin acknowledged differences Tuesday but joined together in urging the adoption of a new governing structure for the Soviet Union, based on the resurgent power of its constituet republics.

Speaking before the national Congress, the two leaders demonstrated once again that their old bitter rivalry has given way to a tense alliance that could be the key to the new shape and composition of the Soviet Union.

In a speech that blamed Gorbachev for ceding ground last winter to right-wing forces, Yeltsin paid the Soviet president a back-handed compliment by saying he had emerged from his three-day ordeal during last month's coup "a different man," who could now be trusted to help lead the country out of its crisis.

Both men pinned the fate of the future union on a vote, due today, on an emergency package that both pre-

Jury convicts woman of 'hitman' plot

■ Wanda Holloway, of Channelview, could face up to life in prison.

Associated Press

HOUSTON — A jury Tuesday convicted a Channelview woman of trying to hire a hitman to kill the mother of her daughter's cheerleading rival to further her own daughter's cheerleading career.

Wanda Holloway, 37, could face up to life in prison and a maximum $10,000 fine. Jurors, who deliberated for about six hours before reaching a verdict, were ordered to return to court Wednesday morning to begin the punishment phase of the trial.

Mrs. Holloway burst into tears after she was convicted on the solicitation of murder charge. Relatives and friends surrounded her, shouting at members of the media to stay away.

She also faced a lesser charge of solicitation of aggravated kidnapping, but no verdict was announced on that charge. State District Judge George Godwin said after Tuesday's proceedings that jurors did not have to rule on both charges.

Shortly before the verdict was announced in the packed courtroom, the jury had reached a decision in the case. But at that time, the judge told jurors to reread the charges and reconsider their decision.

They returned with their final verdict about 20 minutes later. Godwin individually polled the 12 jurors, and each agreed with the guilty verdict.

Attorneys on both sides said they could not discuss the case because of a gag order imposed by Godwin at

Town hall meeting considers response to Klan gathering

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

What action, if any, should be taken in response to a scheduled Ku Klux Klan rally at Windland Park on Saturday was discussed at a town hall meeting on Midland's southside Tuesday night.

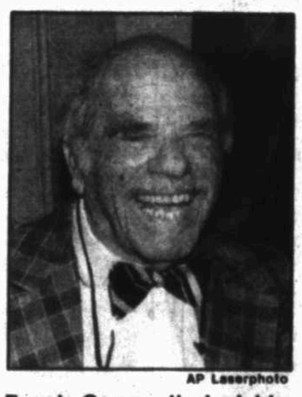

"I think there needs to be some type of response by the black community. They are coming here because of us," said Rev. Michael DeVaughn, a city councilman who hosts the monthly town hall meetings.

Most of the approximately 60 people who attended the meeting appeared to favor having a peaceful gathering to express opposition to the KKK.

A final decision on whether to have a counter-rally — and whether to have it at Windland Park — is expected to be decided at 7 p.m. Thursday night at the Federated Women's Club near Washington Park.

The impact the Klan rally, as well

Expect cloudy skies, mid-80s

Today's forecast calls for cloudy skies with a high in the mid-80s, southeast winds 10-15 mph, changing to northeast by noon, and a 40 percent chance of thunderstorms, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tonight will be mostly cloudy with a low in the lower 60s, and a 40 percent chance of thunderstorms.

Thursday is expected to be mostly cloudy with a high in the lower 80s.

After an overnight low of 67, Tuesday's high was 92 compared with the record high for that date of 101 set in 1985. The record low for today's date was 51 set in 1984.

STATE

Some sunshine peeked through clouds covering much of North and West Texas on Tuesday, but severe thunderstorms remained active. Warnings were issued in South Central Texas for powerful storms that caused street flooding in San Antonio.

Twisters touched down in Kleberg County on the King Ranch, but no damage was reported.

Abundant moisture from the Gulf of Mexico was blamed for the rain.

Surface winds remained light and variable at 5 to 10 miles an hour.

Temperatures climbed into the 90s along the Rio Grande and in South Texas, but many areas peaked only in the 70s because of the rain and cloud cover. Readings included 96 degrees at El Paso and 78 in Dalhart.

The South Texas forecast calls for partly cloudy to occasionally cloudy skies through Thursday with scattered showers and thunderstorms. Highs are expected to range from around 90 along the coast to near 100 degrees in the Winter Garden and Rio Grande Plains. Lows will range from the upper 60s in the Hill Country to around 80 along the coast.

West Texas is predicted to have increasing showers and cloudy skies through tpday. Temperatures are expected to be cooler with highs today in the 70s to 90s and 80s on Thursday. Lows will be mainly in the 60s except mid 50s in the Southwest mountains.

Forecasters expect North Texas will remain mostly cloudy through today with a lingering chance for rain. High temperatures are predicted in the 80s with lows from the mid-60s to lower 70s.

OIL: Action is Saudi effort to keep prices down

(From 1A)

price hawks in OPEC — Algeria, Iran and Libya. Those nations are expected to press for higher oil prices at the Geneva meeting scheduled for Sept. 24.

Oil industry officials said that another consideration behind the Saudi move was the widely shared expectation among oil experts that worldwide demand for oil would rise sharply in the fall and winter.

"The Saudis are quite happy with current prices and want to make sure that OPEC will be in a position to supply the market with all the oil that is needed in the fourth quarter this year and the first quarter next year," said Gary Ross, an executive of Petroleum Industry Research Associates in New York.

Oil experts expect the demand for OPEC oil in the next few months to rise to a level between 24.5 million barrels a day and 25 million.

OPEC, of which Saudi Arabia is the largest producer, is now pumping about 23.6 million barrels a day. For most oil producers, including other OPEC members, it would be difficult to raise output without spending substantially on their infrastructures.

In the immediate future, Saudi Arabia wishes to preserve its dominance within OPEC, both by showing it can respond to additional demand and by keeping prices down.

The Saudi view, officials said, is that any increase in oil exports from Iraq and Kuwait would be offset this year, at least, by a fall in Soviet exports, thus leaving Saudi Arabia as the ultimate supplier to the world markets.

Kuwaiti oil exports, which have resumed recently at the low rate of about 140,000 barrels a day, are expected by experts to rise slowly to 200,000 barrels a day over the next few months.

Soviet oil production, which exceeded 12 million barrels a day four years ago, has fallen to 10.5 million barrels a day this year and is expected by oil industry executives to tumble further.

More important, Soviet exports of oil and refined products to both Western and Eastern Europe have fallen to an average of 2.60 million barrels a day this year from an estimated 4.11 million barrels.

SOVIET: Leaders unite in urging new structure serves some form of central government — with responsibility for the military, foreign affairs and certain undefined economic functions — while transferring the bulk of power once held by the Kremlin to the republics.

Yielding to criticism, Gorbachev and the republic leaders Tuesday amended their plan for a drastic overhaul of the Soviet government, offering to keep the old Soviet Parliament alive, as a symbol of the continuity between the old Soviet Union and the confederated structure now emerging.

In an emotional and personal speech, Gorbachev on Tuesday urged the 2,000-odd members of the Congress of People's Deputies to act quickly on the emergency package before the political disintegration of the Soviet Union spreads to the economy, disrupting the vital links that still tie its 15 republics together.

Referring to criticism of his position, Gorbachev said, "Today you have a president. Tomorrow you may have another president. In any case, we are all one, side by side, and we shouldn't spit on one another."

TRIAL: Holloway could face up to life in prison

(From 1A)

the start of the trial.

"The gag order is still in effect, (so) we can't say," said defense attorney Troy McKinney.

"I'm pleased with the verdict so far," prosecutor Mike Anderson said.

Anderson told jurors in closing arguments that Mrs. Holloway had every classic motive to want Verna Heath, the mother of her daughter's cheerleading rival, kidnapped or killed.

"This is not about cheerleading, folks," Anderson said. "This is about someone who hated someone so much that it gnawed at her day and night.

"It ain't about cheerleading. It's about not getting what you want and it's about getting it above anything else."

McKinney told jurors Mrs. Holloway believed initially that her former brother-in-law, Terry Harper, was joking about having Mrs. Heath killed.

"Never anywhere on those tapes does she say, 'Terry, please go do this for me or go find someone to do this,'" McKinney said.

Nearly 80 spectators crowded into a cramped annex courtroom to hear the final arguments in the week-old trial. More than half of the seats were filled with friends and family of the Heaths and Holloways.

Prosecutors said Mrs. Holloway hoped doing away with Verna Heath would upset Amber Heath so much that the 13-year-old would drop out of high school cheerleader competitions. That would give Mrs. Holloway's daughter, Shanna Harper, a better chance to make the team.

Defense attorneys contend Mrs. Holloway was framed by her ex-husband and his brother to gain custody of her two children.

Marla Harper, Terry Harper's estranged wife, testified that her husband hoped to get back into the family's good graces by helping Tony Harper win custody of his children from Mrs. Holloway.

Tony Harper lost custody in a 1980 divorce. Shortly after she was arrested Jan. 30, he won joint custody of Shanna, now 14, and her brother, Anthony Shane, now 18.

Terry Harper, working with Harris County sheriff's investigators, secretly recorded six conversations with Mrs. Holloway in January. Harper told police he was concerned about the safety of Mrs. Heath and her daughter.

"The only thing that kept those two people from dying is that Terry Harper decided one day that it was about time to do something right," Anderson said.

Testimony showed Harper has been married seven times, and held 15 jobs in the past three years. He has been convicted of several minor charges.

CAPRA: Academy Award-winning director dies

minor strokes several years ago and had been under 24-hour nursing care.

A Sicilian immigrant, Capra lived and celebrated his new country's spirit of opportunity. He came of age as a filmmaker during the Depression, and his populist work triumphed the little man over the system, hope over despair and an optimistic vision of country and place.

"The art of Frank Capra is very simple: It is the love of the people," he remarked when he accepted a Life Achievement Award from the American Film Institute in 1982.

Director-producer Steven Spielberg said: "Frank Capra made old-fashioned American values and crying in the movies a national pasttime. He celebrated the noblest impulses of woman and man, showed all of us our dark side, and then pointed a flashlight at the way out."

Frank Sinatra said of Capra, his director in "A Hole in the Head," "Aside from his talent as a director, he was a most understanding and kind man. We were good friends and I loved him dearly."

While some called such films as "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town" and "You Can't Take it With You" sentimental "Capra-corn," the director offered more than tidy cinematic escapes. His work was in fact uplifting and exhilarating.

Capra won Academy Awards for "It Happened One Night," "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town" and "You Can't Take It With You." "It Happened One Night" in 1934 was the first movie to win the top five Oscars.

SETTLEMENT: Plant to spend another $12 million

(From 1A)

entity. We are in business to turn a profit. We manufacture a quality product."

Dynagen's high-dollar improvements, running between $3 million and $5 million each, include the wastewater-treatment plant to clean up fouled water and the thermal-oxidation unit to incinerate gaseous pollutants, including styrene, from the plant's three rubber-crumb dryers.

Dynagen's decision to install the "revolutionary" thermal oxidizer dropped the original fine assessed the company to $1.4 million from $4.4 million.

The proposed $4.4-million penalty reflected Dynagen's economic benefit in delaying compliance with the Texas Clear Air Act and TACB rules and regulations, said David Preister, assistant Attorney General (AG) in the AG's Environmental Protection Division.

Steven McDonald, University of Texas environmental economist, had computed the petrochemical company's $4.4 million in economic benefits of delaying clean-air compliance since 1987.

But rather than pay the $4.4 million, which would end up in Texas' general-revenue funds, Dynagen proposed that most of that money be spent on the oxidizer.

As result, Preister said, "We gave them a $3 million credit."

What Dynagen's Gorman called "environmental abatement equipment," including the thermal oxidizer, will increase Dynagen's cost of manufacturing rubber. However, to control that expense, Gorman said, "We are going to have to find ways to offset that by better manufacturing efficiencies."

Among United States tire makers, Dynagen will be "the first in the industry to put this type of abatement equipment in our plant."

General Tire's Dynagen, Gorman said, is going to be the best producer of synthetic rubber "as far as environmentally controlled operations in the United States go."

Dynagen's Houston attorney, Jim Smith, said Dynagen wants to operate the best synthetic-rubber plant in the world.

And Dynagen's commitment to honor Tuesday's agreed judgment and the company's various projects to clean up its operations that tend to foul both air and water "symbolizes a long-term commitment by Dynagen to stay in Texas, to stay in Odessa, and to run this plant," Preister said.

Dynagen, which has been operating just south of Odessa since the mid-1950s, fuels an $8 million annual payroll.

Since the now-settled lawsuit gained momentum, Preister said, "There has been a lot of sensitivities about (secure) jobs and how long they (Dynagen powers) are going to keep this plant running."

But since the Attorney General, "for now," has bowed out of the Dynagen case, it will be for the TACB to continue monitoring the plant's operations and improvements.

Meanwhile, about 1,000 Odessa citizens who live north of the plant are parties to a class-action lawsuit against Dynagen. They are seeking compensation for allegedly ill effects of Dynagen's air pollution.

"I hope they can be patient (while Dynagen cleans up its operations)," Preister said. "But I understand what they are going through. It's tough."

It was citizens' air-pollution complaints that catapulted the TACB into aggressively monitoring Dynagen's operations.

"I have respiratory problems you wouldn't believe," said 62-year-old Emma Robinson, who, joined by many of her neighbors, was in Judge Lewis' courtroom on Tuesday, awaiting results of the Dynagen-Attorney General agreement.

Mrs. Robinson blamed her ailments, and those of her ailing husband and asthmatic granddaughter, on Dynagen's air pollution.

"It really stinks to high heaven," she said.

Dynagen's willingness to reach an agreement with the Attorney General came more than 20 months after the state of Texas, acting on TACB investigations and citizens' complaints about obnoxious odors emanating from the Dynagen's wastewater ponds and the now-closed incinerator, had filed suit against Dynagen.

Dr. Neil Carman, the TACB's chief investigator in the Dynagen case, said that Dynagen's multi-million-commitment to clean up the plant represents "a tremendous compromise that works out to be best for all parties involved: the company, its workers, the citizens, the (environmental) regulatory agencies and the Attorney General's Office."

"The end of this to me," said Carman, "is, in a sense, like the end of a war."

RESPONSE: Most seemed to favor peaceful gathering

(From 1A)

as any counter-rally, will have on Midland youth was a major concern at the town meeting.

DeVaughn related a conversation he had with a sixth-grade student on Tuesday.

"He voiced concern that they were coming to town to kill people," DeVaughn said.

A similar experience was described by an unidentified woman.

Her son asked, "Are they going to come here and kill us and hang us on a cross?" she said.

Another woman said she was told by a black youth that one of his teachers expressed support for the Klan.

Rev. Billy Ashley spoke of the impressions that Midland youngsters will receive from what action is taken.

"Our kids are afraid and they need to see us stand up for them," he said.

"If we don't stand up now, they (the Klan) can come next week and have another meeting," Ashley said.

"I don't know what they (the Klan) are going to do or say, but we need to be there for a peaceful demonstration," he said.

There was no dissension from the crowd about the proposal to keep a counter-rally peaceful.

Alma Marshall's words reflected those at the meeting.

"It's not so much what they do, it's what we do," she said.

"There is nothing they would like better than a whole bunch of violence," Ms. Marshall said.

"I think we have to find a happy medium" between confrontation and ignoring the Klan rally, she added.

Speakers suggested that if a peaceful counter-rally takes place, white Midlanders also need to attend to show their distaste for the Klan.

There also was talk about whether the Lee High School rebel flag issue that attracted the Klan's attention last year — would create problems at this Friday night's LHS football game.

James Fuller, a MISD board member, told the crowd that "the rebel flag has not been eradicated" from Lee High School, and a confrontation could be ignited by wavers of the Confederate flag as opposed to the new school symbol.

Fuller suggested a course of action for blacks if a Confederate flag appears at the game.

"Pull your kids off the athletic teams and make a statement," said Fuller. He added that blacks should stage a walk-out at the game if the controversial flag appears.

Yeltsin calls for joint control of nuclear arms

MOSCOW (AP) — Boris Yeltsin called Tuesday for the ultimate destruction of nuclear arms and end to underground tests, and said the central Soviet government and the republics should jointly control the weapons.

"We are in favor of total elimination of nuclear weapons in Russia, Yeltsin said in an interview on the Cable News Network, adding that he first taken that position in May 1990.

The Russian Federation president reaffirmed his commitment and that of the emerging Soviet government to arms control agreements, and called for more sweeping deals.

"I think, personally, that it is not a major victory when 50 percent of nuclear weapons are earmarked for elimination in a situation when 5 percent is enough to destroy the whole world," he said. He was alluding to the most recent U.S.-Soviet arms deal, signed in July by Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev and President Bush.

Gorbachev has long called for the ultimate elimination of nuclear arms and has urged Bush, unsuccessfully, to ban arms tests.

"It is necessary to stop underground nuclear tests," said Yeltsin, noting that such tests had been banned at the Semipalatinsk range in the steppe republic of Kazakhstan, to the south of Russia.

But, he said, the test range at Novaya Zemlya in northern Russian remained open.

"This ... is a very sensitive environmental area," he said. "If we damage the environment, it will not be restored in a thousand years. We need to prevent further testing of nuclear weapons and we will call on President Bush and all the other nuclear powers to stop the tests of nuclear weapons."

He also explained the purpose of a new council, proposed by Gorbachev, Yeltsin and the heads of nine other Soviet republics on Monday, to share control of most military units, including nuclear weapons.

His position, he was, "to set up a special structure, and it is being set up, a committee, to control nuclear weapons, so that (the arsenal) is not used either by hawks or ultra-left or ultra-right wing forces or terrorists, because it is very dangerous at the present time."

"Apart from the central government, we want Russia to control nuclear weapons and to be responsible for nuclear weapons on the territory of Russia and we want to be answerable to whole international community so that we keep a finger on the button as well," he said.

Previously, only Gorbachev's central government had control of nuclear weapons, but under the proposed council, the national president would share that responsibility with the heads of republics that remain in the union.

Yeltsin said all Soviet weapons should be moved to Russian soil, which is consistent with the position of the two other republics — the Ukraine and Kazakhstan.

Soviets try to absorb, understand changes

By Serge Schmemann
N.Y. Times News Service

MOSCOW — Revolutions are all about fallen symbols and collapsed order. And however great the relief, there is an inherent grief in any death.

On a lawn across from Gorky Park, a cluster of massive statues lie broken and scattered under a sign identifying these as "sculptures of the servants of the totalitarian regime."

Children and dogs romp around them, while strollers stop to gaze somberly at "Iron Feliks," the huge statue of Feliks Dzerzhinsky now humiliatingly sprawled on his back, or a white marble bust of Nikita S. Khrushchev without a nose but with huge teeth frozen in a sickly leer.

At a nearby bakery, a saleswoman in a soiled white smock sits waiting for closing time, though the bread has long run out. "I have no idea what's going on," she acknowledges. "All I know is that I close in 30 minutes."

And at the cavernous Palace of Congresses in the Kremlin, deputies from every corner of the vast Soviet expanse rise one after another to resist or to accept the fact that they, the first elected assembly of the Soviet Union, have abruptly become irrelevent.

Leaders devote prime time to U.S. TV

N.Y. Times News Service

The two leading figures in the political upheaval in the Soviet Union, Mikhail S. Gorbachev and Boris N. Yeltsin, have both decided to take a considerable amount of time in recent days away from the events transforming their country to give interviews to American television journalists.

Both appeared in interviews on Cable News Network, and both are now scheduled to take part in an ambitious two-way interview program with a large group of Americans in a special broadcast tentatively scheduled for 10:30 CDT tonight on ABC.

The ABC News interviews will be in the form of a "town meeting," with participants from 11 U.S. cities — like ethnic Lithuanians in Chicago and Cuban refugees in Miami — specifically chosen because of a connection to the conflicts now roiling the Soviet Union, asking questions of the two leaders.

ABC News executives said Tuesday that the program was set up through longstanding ties between the network's news division and the official Soviet television organization, Gosteleradio.

But the chief reason it will happen, the ABC executives said, is that Gorbachev, the Soviet president, and Yeltsin, the Russian republic's president, and those backing them believe that the program, which will also be carried live on Gosteleradio, can produce some domestic political advantage for the two leaders.

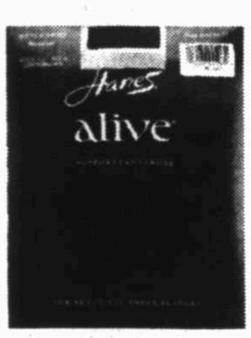

That motivation seems to have played a significant part in the growing presence of Soviet leaders on the U.S. airwaves.

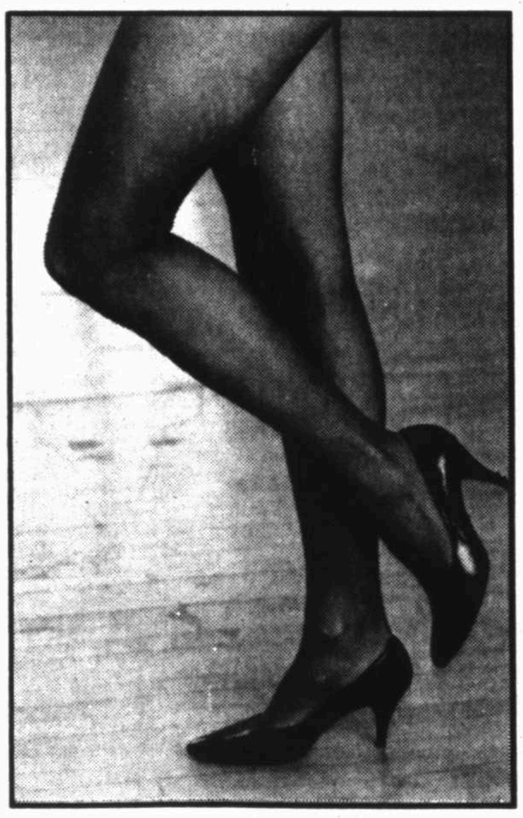

CNN followed its live exclusive interview with Yeltsin on Tuesday with a live interview inside KGB headquarters with the new KGB head, Vadim V. Bakatin.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 4, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Wonderful family experiences will help you grow as a person. In October, let higher-ups know what you want out of your career. The choices you make now determine how successfully you will handle love and money matters this coming winter. Travel is an important part of your business plan in the new year. Do what you do best and let subordinates handle what is left. Good nutrition is the key to greater energy.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: newscaster Paul Harvey, dancer Mitzi Gaynor, golfer Tom Watson, food editor Craig Claiborne.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Stick to tried-and-true methods in business but take an original approach in romance. Children require more attention. A tendency to eat or drink too much should be nipped in the bud.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): An artistic or creative idea needs further development. Research, an expert's advice, or more training may be needed! Seek practical outlets for pent-up energy. Romance is sweet.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Someone who agrees with you all the time may be trying to steal your resources. Romance enjoys highly favorable influences. If already married, you will soon see greater harmony on the home front.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Affection abounds when you learn to compromise with your mate or another family member. Real estate deals can be highly lucrative. You receive a nice compliment from someone whose opinion really counts!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Money may have to be spent on essentials you forgot about. Tackle do-it-yourself projects. An older person who boasts may be trying to show you up. Pay no attention!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A financial windfall is possible. Put any extra profits back into the business. You hear from a long-lost friend. Your love life takes a remarkable new turn without any effort on your part.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Unexpected events could force a change in plans. Your ability to adapt quickly to an emergency situation will impress higher-ups. Romantic partner must be handled with kid gloves. Share secrets with loved ones.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Morning hours are the best time to deal with an attractive member of the opposite sex. A legal matter will be settled in your favor — out of court.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your long-term plans are subject to change. Distant interests are accented. A move to another city or state holds new appeal. Widen your circle of friends.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Beware of faulty judgment. Another person's jealousy could cause you embarrassment. Focus on projects you can handle alone. Romance reaches a new plateau. Know your own heart before asking for a commitment.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Concentrate on one project at a time to make the greatest progress. An older person is a steadying force where business or career matters are concerned. Someone new adds a touch of glamour to romance.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Getting rid of outmoded methods saves you time and money. The need for greater discipline in your life is obvious. Friends help you build a new foundation. Stick to the straight-and-narrow.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are happiest when they can put their talents to work. Well-mannered and sensitive, these Virgos are offended when others act rude or crude. Long on imagination and heart, these children sometimes lack patience. Travel and service to others are their passions. They have great respect for tradition and like to take their time when pondering proposed changes. Trying to rush these deliberate Virgos will backfire.

Opening lead: Six of ♠

When, as declarer, you have two or more cards in a touching sequence, such as the king-queen-jack, it seemingly makes no difference which card you play to a specific trick. That does not mean, however, that you should play a card at random—much depends on what you want to achieve in the overall campaign, as this hand from a team match illustrates.

Looking at all four hands, if you are going to play in game, four hearts is your best shot. That contract, though, is impossible to reach in normal methods. Both Souths opened one no trump and both Norths chose to gamble on three no trump because of the six-card diamond suit.

Both Wests led a spade, and declarer's only stopper was forced out right away. That meant that declarer had to take nine tricks on the run, for if the defenders gained the lead again they had sufficient spade winners to guarantee a set.

At one table declarer led the queen of clubs to the third trick. West covered, and declarer scored one spade trick, four hearts and three clubs—down one.

The other declarer led the ten of clubs at trick three. You can build a strong case that West should cover—as the end result proved—but at the table that defender chose to follow low. Declarer continued with a club to the ace, felling the king, and was now able to score four tricks in clubs to scramble home with nine tricks.

All of which brings us to a rule which will earn you many dividends in the long run. If you are leading from a sequence, play the highest card if you want the next hand to cover; if you don't, play the lowest of the sequence. This type of combination crops up in many guises. One variation is to try to create or preserve entries to a particular hand.

Film-inspiring calculus teacher takes act to new high school

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Jaime Escalante, the calculus teacher whose coaching of inner-city students inspired the movie "Stand and Deliver," took on a new set of pupils in a different high school Tuesday.

Escalante

In June, Escalante left his 17-year post at Garfield High School in a tough, impoverished section of East Los Angeles to take up a similar job at Hiram Johnson High School.

The Bolivian-born Escalante, 60, refused to allow the media to film his first day of school, and turned down a request by Gov. Pete Wilson to visit his classroom Tuesday.

He brings with him 40 boxes of books, supplies and equipment, the promise of grants and sponsorships, and his classroom-as-theater antics.

A PBS television special by Escalante, "Math ... Who Needs It?," airs today.

His successful work with poor Hispanic students at Garfield High was chronicled in the 1988 "Stand and Deliver."

His students' scores in advanced placement calculus exams in 1982 were so stunning that administrators invalidated the results. Most of the 18 pupils retook the test and again attained passing scores.

When he started at Garfield in 1975, there was no advanced placement calculus class, which qualifies students to take a test that can earn them college credit. When Escalante taught his last class at Garfield, 576 students had passed the calculus test in the previous 12 years.

RAPID CITY, S.D. — Lou Diamond Phillips has been adopted by a Sioux family in a traditional Indian ceremony that honored him as a role model in encouraging young people to better themselves.

Phillips

The actor, who is part Cherokee, was given the name Starkeeper. The 30-minute ceremony was conducted Sunday in Porcupine, a hamlet on the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation in southwestern South Dakota.

Sioux Indians planned a ceremony in the spring, but it had to be postponed when Phillips suffered complications from a tonsillectomy and then had movie commitments. Phillips played a Mexican-Indian in the two "Young Guns" movies.

Stephan Red Bow, 70, said the name Starkeeper was chosen because Phillips is a movie star. Phillips was adopted into the Red Bow family and into the larger extended family, Red Bow said.

"It's a traditional ceremony in the Indian culture," said his wife, Mazie, who added she was proud to have Phillips as her son.

NEW YORK — Refreshed by a two-day hospital stay, Cardinal John O'Connor celebrated Mass at St. Patrick's Cathedral on Tuesday and said he'd stick around awhile.

"I got the greatest checkup I've ever had in my life," he said after being treated at Good Samaritan Hospital in Suffern for heat prostration.

"They say I have another 100 years as archbishop of New York."

Doctors subjected O'Connor, 71, to what he described Monday as "at least 350 cardiograms" and a stress test. But it wasn't all drudgery, the prelate confessed.

"I watched my first full Mets game Saturday night, and it made me wish I could do that every night, I enjoyed it so much," he said.

O'Connor said he felt "absolutely superlative" after his hospital stay, and added, "Everybody ought to try it."

O'Connor entered the hospital Saturday morning after he complained of feeling lightheaded while celebrating Mass in Monroe.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — The 50 Miss America candidates arrived by train Tuesday from Philadelphia on the last leg of a journey that included countless hours of tuning their minds and bodies.

Their goal: to wear the crown and win a $35,000 scholarship in the 71st annual Miss America Pageant.

The contestants arrived on a specially chartered train after spending the Labor Day weekend sightseeing in Philadelphia.

Miss Alabama, Wendy Neuendorf, whose state is first in the alphabetical list, got off the train first. About 250 people attended a reception in the station.

The state pageant winners got a preview in Philadelphia of the constant preening and posing that awaits them in Atlantic City. They face nearly two weeks of rehearsals, interviews and more photo opportunities.

The competition will be televised nationally on Sept. 14. The winner will succeed Miss America Marjorie Judith Vincent, who plans to complete law school at Duke University.

August finds Bush in control

Small bits of Communism were falling all around Mikhail S. Gorbachev in Moscow recently while George Bush was wondering aloud in Washington, D.C., "What is it about August?" That's a good question, but it didn't shed any light on the real issue — his handling of the crisis in the Soviet Union.

It also didn't change the fact that Bush was quite aware of the monumental event taking plan and was ready to lead the Free World. He did that with cool-handed expert leadership, even if he didn't raise the temperature of observers' blood with rousing oratory.

During that week in which the world held its breath, President Bush was doing what he does best, what he has spent his life literally preparing to do. He stayed abreast of the situation, worked the telephones to marshal support from Western leaders for Gorbachev and Russian Federation President Boris N. Yeltsin, alternately, and represented the Free World as only an individual in his capacity can do.

The smooth operation of the Bush administration during the coup against Gorbachev and the initial moves toward breakup of Soviet Communism is a credit to Bush's foreign policy expertise gleaned while serving as chief of the U.S. Liaison Office in China and, later, as the United States' ambassador to the United Nations, among other top government posts he held prior to moving into the Oval Office three years ago. In foreign affairs he's already proven twice this year that he's an outstanding chief executive — in the crisis involving Soviet Communism and in the Persian Gulf War.

Domestic affairs are a strikingly different matter for Bush and the one area in which he appears vulnerable for 1992, but the president has performed so well on the international stage and his job performance rating is so high in that regard, that even politicians who had been considering a run against him are now backing out. Tennessee's Albert Gore, a first-term U.S. senator and a leading democratic presidential hopeful, recently said he will not enter the presidential race in '92, a fact which leaves the democrats still looking for a leader.

So far Bush has performed his duties exceedingly well, as though he was the right man for the job at the right time. That is a fortunate development that has benefited both the United States and the cause of freedom around the globe.

What is it about August? We don't know, but with the results Bush has been able to achieve thus far we hope there are a few more Augusts in his political future.

Dog owner is lucky to get pets back safe

I could not believe my eyes as I read in a recent Sunday Midland Reporter-Telegram about Andy Stanco complaining about the $90 fee he was charged for retrieving his two English Pointers. If only Stanco would have seen his two dogs dodging traffic on Midland Drive and realized how close to death they came, I am sure he would have been glad to pay a mere $90 for two live beautiful pets. It was I and my two veterinary technicians, Lynn Clarke and Joe Watters, who literally risked life and limb rescuing these dogs from Midland Drive traffic.

After I examined them and vaccinated them for diseases, for which they may become exposed, I called Animal Control personnel to come get them. As all Animal Control personnel can attest, had these animals not been claimed by the owner, efforts would have been made to find homes for them.

We at this veterinary practice are very concerned about the well being of stray animals, but we feel we cannot handle all the cost in caring for every stray that comes near our clinic. Stray animal emergency situations such as those involving Stanco's beautiful and well mannered dogs, occur several times a month. In the past, we have tried to rescue the pets from traffic, examine them, vaccinate them, and then allow Animal Control to attempt to locate the owner. Guess what? None of the animals we have "rescued" have had a city tag on their collars. In fact, most of them do not have collars. So, you can see the difficulty involved in trying to find the owner. Personnel at Animal Control have always notified us when an owner claims his animal.

I feel that Stanco should be thankful for getting his pets back. I feel that the fee charged to him by Animal Control was fair. Had he come to my clinic and had his dog's examined and vaccinated for distemper, hepatitis, leptospirosis, parainfluenza, parvo and corona virus, I would have charged him $26 per dog. I donated these services, unknowingly, to Stanco.

If Stanco could ride for one day with an animal control officer, I really feel that he would be more understanding, forgiving, and thankful that he got his two beautiful dogs back.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, Sept. 4, the 247th day of 1991. There are 118 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Sept. 4, 1781, Los Angeles was founded by Spanish settlers. (Its original name: "El Pueblo de Nuestra Senora La Reina de Los Angeles de Porciuncula.")

On this date:

In 1882, the Pearl Street electric power station — built by Thomas Edison —— began operating in New York City.

Bank may have diverted funds to Iraq

WASHINGTON — Congressional investigators conducting a probe into how Iraq fueled its military machine are following a trail that leads to the doorstep of some prominent American corporations.

Employees of the Atlanta branch of the Rome-based Banca Nazionale del Lavoro are the focus of the investigation into the diversion of strategic materials to Iraq from the West. BNL, along with other banks, received billions of dollars in federally insured agricultural credits now suspected of helping to subsidize Saddam Hussein's war effort.

Anderson

Some employees in BNL's Atlanta branch already have been indicted on charges of defrauding the bank by illegally extending some $4 billion in agricultural guarantees, export-import credits and unsecured loans to the Central Bank of Iraq. Iraq managed to divert millions of these dollars to purchase weapons parts from the United States and abroad.

Moreover, evidence now being pieced together by congressional investigators suggests that some of the parts and tools Saddam required to construct weapons of mass destruction such as the "supergun" may have been financed indirectly by American taxpayers.

Rep. Charlie Rose, D-N.C., charged that, "It is absolutely clear to me that without the flow of federal agricultural loan monies to Banca Nazionale in Atlanta, weapons procurement by the Iraqi war machine would not have been possible."

Our associate Dean Boyd followed one of the money trails that started in the fall of 1988 when BNL employees issued an allegedly illegal $12 million letter of credit to Associated Instruments Distributors. Baghdad cabled shipping instructions to BNL for the parts Associated Instruments was to purchase with the letter of credit.

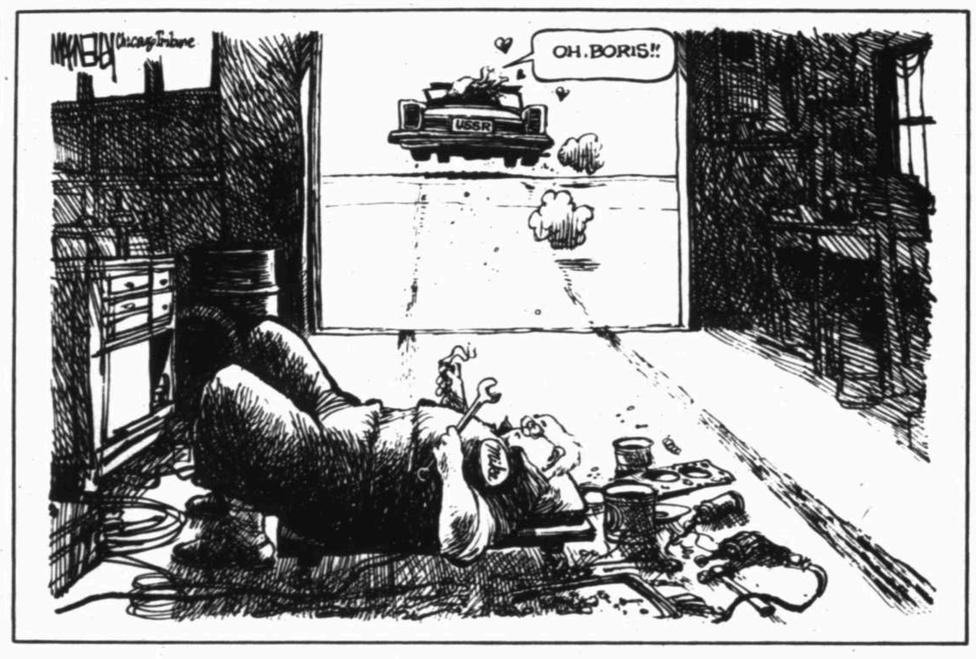

Armed with $12 million, Associated Instruments then began looking for companies that exported these goods and quickly found two. In May 1989, it extended $2.7 million to the huge German metalworking firm Krupp-Widia, and $8.5 million to a second German firm. In carrying out its end of the shipment, Krupp turned to Kennanetal Inc., a Pennsylvania-based Fortune 500 company that produces the specialized metal cutting tools Iraq was hunting for. In August 1989, parts bought from Kennanetal's German subsidiary were added to a shipment of related goods, and sent to Iraq.

Nash Rehman, president of Associated Instruments, denied allegations that his company served as an Iraqi front. But, internal company documents we obtained show that Rehman's company and two other individuals, whom Rehman only identified as "Iraqi nationals," reaped nearly $1 million from the illegal $12 million letter of credit in return for brokering the deal. Some of that money was deposited in an account at Bank of Credit and Commerce in Montreal, Canada, now the focus of a major financial scandal.

Now both Kennanetal and Associated Instruments are under investigation by the U.S. Customs Service for their role in the sale of these and other products to Iraq. Although Commerce Department officials corroborate both Kennanetal and Rehman's assertion that the export of these particular parts to Iraq was legal, congressional investigators are looking at the letter of credit used to finance the shipment, which is cited as fraudulent in the BNL indictment.

MINI-EDITORIAL — President Bush gets A-plus marks on foreign policy even from Democrats. But in the aftermath of the coup and counter-coup in the Soviet Union, questions should be raised about what Bush knew and when he knew it. Our own sources inside the CIA saw the coup coming months ago.

Pro-witch hunt outsiders want communist out

WASHINGTON — Some of us remember the imperious way Mikhail Gorbachev cut off the microphone of Andrei Sakharov when that saintly dissenter tried to protest against impending dictatorship just days before he died; for that reason, we find it hard to join editorialists who tut-tut at the "bullying" way Boris Yeltsin told the chastened Gorbachev to read out the truth from a similar rostrum.

Safire

The crowd that used to say the peoples of the Soviet empire really were born to authoritarianism, and that we should not encourage the pushy Landsbergis of Lithuania because disunion would surely lead to anarchy followed by dictatorship, now pushes this line: Let's not be beastly to the former despots in the Communist Party, the Red Army or the KGB.

"No witch hunt" is their phrase of choice; it also comes from such overnight civil libertarians as Gus Hall here and the hard-liners in Havana, Beijing and North Korea. Translated from the hypocritical, that means: Shoot if you must the 13 arrested coup-plotters, but do not harass the millions of petty tyrants, informers and social parasites who profited from the predations of Communism at the expense of their neighbors.

Unfortunately, real civil libertarians are picking up that line, arguing that the Yeltsin suspension of Pravda, seizure of party assets and reign by decree defeat the democratic purposes of the second revolution. A principled stand, that — but only if the Communists were a political party, and not a conspiracy to control the society and stamp out freedom.

I'm pro-witch hunt; that is, I would release most of the totalitarian 13 (and let them lead police to the assets hastily transferred abroad). But I would fire from the public payroll every non-elected official who was a member of the party at the time of the coup. Let them go free, and go into private enterprise or sponge off the families they corruptly enriched.

What standing do well-wishing outsiders have? They also serve who only stand and root; we should let our newly freed friends know what longtime anti-Communists abroad hope to see.

We are rooting for the thorough removal of Communists (now former Communists pretending they were good republicans all along) from appointed positions of power. They are still entrenched. They are changing their spots to meet the fashion and claiming to be bureaucratically indispensable, but they are a burden to recovery and a danger to democracy.

We are rooting for the demobilization of the armed services, the cost of which is an economic millstone. "Forty acres and a mule" was a great 19th-century idea; millions of soldiers should be mustered out and given — as their private property — land and a piece of machinery to farm it.

We are rooting for the total dissolution of the KGB. The former Communist politician (he ran sixth in a field of six for president of Russia) appointed by Gorbachev to "purge" it is Vadim Bakatin, who is showing a skill for media manipulation.

He ostentatiously fires his son, showing purity from nepotism — but retains tens of thousands of secret police who should be learning what life is like on a bread line.

He terminates the KGB board of directors — but keeps most of its members in their mid-level jobs, awaiting the moment of restoration. He transfers troops to the army — from which they can be swiftly recalled — rather than disbanding them.

He is bamboozling the reformers and the Western press by using all the ringing words we like to hear, safely denouncing his predecessor — while quietly continuing to maintain the center's coercive weapon against the republics, aggressively to suborn foreign officials, steal U.S. secrets and protect its web of well-paid traitors around the world.

Like Gorbachev, the handsome new KGB chief wants to fix the old central system, make it less political and more efficient — rather than do away with an imperial structure inimical to freedom.

In Kaliningrad, reports The New York Times's Henry Kamm, a construction worker collecting signatures for an anti-Communist petition had a fist shaken in his face by a naval officer, who barked, "We'll get Yeltsin and you." To which Aleksandras Kovetskas replied: "We feed and clothe the military, so shut your mouth." The stunned officer fled.

Kovetskas, the world is rooting for you.

Architects of coup wanted McDonald's too

One of the dramas played out in the recent coup story in the U.S.S.R. concerned the fate of the McDonald's restaurant in Moscow.

. Papers captured in Communist Party headquarters indicate that the architects of the coup intended to take over McDonald's and turn it into the Lenin People's First of May Fast Food Blini Stand. The object was to crush America's most important symbol since the advent of perestroika.

Buchwald

Fortuitous circumstances and poor planning prevented the hard-liners from doing this.

The first thing that happened was that the U.S. intelligence sources received word of the Big Mac takeover 24 hours after the coup. The White House acted immediately and warned the coup leaders that it considered McDonald's as much American soil as the U.S. Embassy.

The right-wingers, who by this time had all of Gorbachev's nuclear codes, said that they would not be cowed into giving in to the United States. They insisted that McDonald's and Estonia belonged to the U.S.S.R.

It was one of those tense moments that could have changed the course of history. Would Bush push the button to save McDonald's, or would he institute sanctions and cut off all the malted milk supplies that the restaurant depended on for its thick shakes?

Fortunately, word leaked to Boris Yeltsin about what the illegal leaders were up to. He told 5 million of his followers who were waiting in line for a bag of french fries to surround McDonald's so that the Gang of Eight could not get in.

Any time a right-wing tank driver tried to enter the restaurant for a takeout order, he was pelted with catsup bottles.

The Yeltsin supporters threw Molotov cocktails at a KGB armored vehicle that came to confiscate all the fried onions in the name of the new government.

When an army truck, operated by a young captain, arrived to bring back eight orders of McNuggets and coffee — three black, two with cream and three with sugar — to the coup leaders in the Kremlin, the crowd persuaded him to tear up the order and join them in the streets.

In the meantime, President Bush and his advisers were closeted in the situation room at the Kennebunkport Country Club. Should they keep McDonald's open to show support for the arrested Gorbachev, or surgically bomb it to prevent it from falling into the hands of the turncoats at Pravda?

The CIA advised against blowing it up because McDonald's was the meeting place for all its agents in Moscow. Most of the information the West had about the U.S.S.R. was transmitted on used napkins from the trash bin.

The Pentagon didn't think that it could protect McDonald's with less than the number of troops it mobilized for Desert Storm.

The President decided to be tough. He announced that he would not recognize the new chef at McDonald's who had been appointed by an illegal government. He also withdrew all Soviet rights to use the Golden Arches as its trademark.

Fortunately, the junta collapsed and McDonald's reopened to a cheering crowd of 6 million people. To celebrate the event, the franchise owner announced that everyone who purchased a Big Mac would receive a large soda for nothing. At their first press conference, Ronald McDonald was seated between Gorbachev and Yeltsin, which many consider to be the clown's finest hour.

Fighting threatens Croatian cease-fire

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — A renewal of fierce fighting involving Yugoslav soldiers, Croatian forces and Serb militants threatened on Tuesday to scuttle a new European Community peace plan in Yugoslavia.

The 12-nation EC called an urgent international peace conference on Yugoslavia in The Hague for Saturday. It named Lord Carrington, one of Britain's most widely respected statesmen, as its chief mediator.

Dozens of 200 cease-fire observers were leaving Tuesday for Croatia.

The Croatian stronghold of Osijek and surrounding villages in the ethnically mixed Slavonia region saw some of the heaviest clashes Tuesday. At least 16 people were killed.

The head of Yugoslavia's collective federal presidency, Stipe Mesic, appealed for peace late Tuesday. "The country is facing great trials and very grave risks," Mesic, a Croat, said on TV.

He said the presidency was asking the federal army to immediately appoint officers to oversee the cease-fire jointly with Croatian officials and representatives of Serb insurgents.

In Zagreb, the Croatian government said it was instructing its Defense Ministry to implement a cease-fire, ban the movement of its troops without prior notification and demobilize reserve units.

More than 300 people have been killed in fighting in Croatia since it declared independence June 25. Many of Croatia's 600,000 Serbs, 12 percent of the republic's population, are unwilling to live in an independent Croatia.

AP photographer Franz Pammer reported that Osijek, 140 miles east of Zagreb, echoed with constant submachine-gun and light artillery fire Tuesday. The army blocked a road to Vukovar, 18 miles to the southeast, he said.

He saw two air force planes dropping bombs on neighboring Bilje village, a last Croat stronghold in the Baranja area stretching north of Osijek toward Hungary.

In the town of Beli Manastir, Serbs claimed to have taken Bilje and Mece, the last two Croat-held villages in Baranja.

"Cease-fire, what cease-fire?" said Zdravko Mrdza, a Serbian defense force officer in Beli Mannastir. "Our Baranja is definitely free. Baranja is Yugoslavia," he said, as a big Yugoslav flag fluttered over his head.

Pammer said he saw the bodies of 10 people killed in Bilje being delivered to the Osijek hospital, and six more bodies of people killed in fighting in and around Osijek.

Lt. Gen. Marko Negovanovic, the assistant federal defense minister, said Croatian forces had fired on an army base near Osijek, wounding one soldier. He said barracks in Osijek also came under attack.

He accused Croatian forces of "flagrantly and crudely" violating the cease-fire and denied the army provoked incidents.

The Croats accuse the army of siding with the Serbs in their battles with Croatian forces. Some EC observers back their claims, and independent observers say the well-equipped army has helped the Serbs secure territory.

De Klerk rejects Mandela's plea for strikers

African National Congress President Nelson Mandela makes a statement after meeting with President F.W. de Klerk.

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — President F.W. de Klerk on Tuesday rejected Nelson Mandela's plea to free three right-wing extremist whites who are reportedly in poor condition from hunger strikes.

The African National Congress leader had called for their release on humanitarian grounds and so that they could testify about alleged government involvement in political violence.

Mandela said he met with de Klerk for over two hours, but they failed to agree on a number of issues.

"We had very serious difficulties," Mandela told reporters after the meeting. "The president is taking the position that he is not prepared to consider the indemnification of the three."

The three men, charged in a series of bombings, are demanding to be released with immunity from prosecution and have gone without food for up to two months and are reported in serious condition.

They have rejected a government offer of bail pending their trial because it included restrictions on their activities.

"On humanitarian grounds I have insisted they be released," said Mandela.

But Justice Minister Kobie Coetsee said: "We dare not weaken justice with misplaced humanitarian feelings. The principle here is far more important than the individual."

The three members of the extremist Order of the Boer Nation are facing charges connected to a series of bombings last year, mainly against facilities used by blacks, that killed one person and injured 13 others.

Mandela visited them Monday in a Pretoria hospital and said they were government agents who carried out the bombing attacks under orders from government security services. He said they should testify in court about the activities of the security services.

Mandela has accused government security services of waging a clandestine war to weaken the ANC as it negotiates with the government on sharing political power. The ANC is the leading black opposition group.

The South African Defense Forces, which have denied Mandela's charge, said the three men were not government agents.

Wim Cornelius, the lawyer for the three, said they were determined to fast to the death if not released.

Henry Martin, a British citizen, has refused food for 57 days in what is believed to be the longest hunger strike in South African history. Adriaan Maritz has gone without food for 51 days and Lood van Schalkwyk for 44 days.

Cornelius said all three have resumed drinking water after going several days without. Van Schalkwyk, who has suffered a heart attack, is receiving medicine intravenously.

"They are stable, but they are very weak," said Cornelius.

Right-wing sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said at least two of the men had connections with the National Intelligence Service, the main government intelligence agency. They had been involved in spying on dissidents, the sources said, but did not have orders to carry out bombings.

Infiltrators carried Iraq orders in island siege

KUWAIT CITY (AP) — Armed Iraqis captured on Kuwait's Bubiyan Island were carrying written orders from the Baghdad government to confiscate weapons and to infiltrate the emirate, Kuwait's deputy chief of staff said Tuesday.

Gen. Jabir Khalid al-Sabah also said the Iraqis fired on Kuwaiti forces with heavy machine guns, and that 84 Iraqis were captured, rather than the 46 reported earlier.

Iraq has denied any connection to the incident Wednesday in which Kuwaiti warplanes attacked several boats off Bubiyan and Kuwaiti troops captured dozens of men in civilian clothes on the island.

Kuwait and other Persian Gulf states have called it a major violation of the Gulf War cease-fire by Iraq.

Officials in Baghdad alternately suggested the intruders could have been smugglers and accused Kuwait of fabricating the incident to justify keeping U.S. forces in the region.

Al-Sabah provided the first public details of the fighting at the island, which has long been coveted by Saddam Hussein for its location at the mouth of the Shatt-al-Arab waterway, Iraq's only outlet to the Persian Gulf.

In an interview, the general said the intruders had documents issued by Saddam's government authorizing them to "go to that area, collect ammunition, and try to go inside Kuwait. They were told to come here or they would be shot."

"Nobody could do anything in Iraq if Saddam Hussein does not say so," al-Sabah said.

He said all the prisoners were Iraqi and they included some soldiers and four teen-agers.

"They were in civilian dress. I have an officer (in captivity) and he's in civilian dress, too," al-Sabah said.

Christophe Girod, chief delegate of the International Committee of the Red Cross, said Red Cross officials saw 45 prisoners Tuesday and expected to see the others Wednesday.

"We have registered 45 and they're all Iraqi," he said.

Al-Sabah said the battle began when Kuwaiti coast guardsmen spotted some boats approaching Bubiyan. He said Kuwaiti aircraft reported seeing people on the island as well as a "number of boats with machine guns on top of them."

A police boat sent to investigate was fired on by heavy machine guns and had to retreat, the general said.

He said four Kuwaiti air force Skyhawks and two Mirages were summoned and they attacked targets on the island and offshore after being shot at.

Al-Sabah confirmed that some intruders escaped in boats but said some of them may have been killed.

Zaire police fire on protesters; three killed

KINSHASA, Zaire (AP) — Parliament held an emergency session Tuesday after police battled pro-democracy protesters in the capital and other towns, leaving shops looted and cars burned. Witnesses said at least three people were killed.

The state-run Zaire news agency said Parliament members would "take stock" of Monday's violence and proceed with "concrete measures." It did not explain what steps might be taken.

Thousands of people were involved in the riots, throwing up barricades, burning cars and looting shops. It was not clear whether the violence started after or before police fired into the crowds, reporters said.

The demonstrations were called by leaders of the opposition to President Mobutu Sese Seko, a soldier who seized power 26 years ago. The opposition wants a national conference held to appoint an interim government and organize the first free elections since independence from Belgium in 1960.

Witnesses in the capital said they saw police fatally shoot two men and a woman. There were second-hand reports of deaths in other towns, but they could not be checked.

Zaire's ambassador to Belgium, Kimbulu Moyanso, denied anyone was killed, and the state news agency reported only that "violent scenes" occurred.

The demonstrations were called by leaders of the opposition to President Mobutu Sese Seko, a soldier who seized power 26 years ago. The opposition wants a national conference held to appoint an interim government and organize the first free elections since independence from Belgium in 1960.

Mobutu agreed earlier to allow a conference with limited powers, but it stalled in August after opponents charged he was rigging the meeting.

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Workers at a city building site have stopped work to prevent disturbing the rooftop nest and eggs of two rare and wayward falcons.

The workers' union, the builder and the site owner agreed Tuesday that work will not resume until the two eggs hatch and the chicks are able to fly.

The peregrine falcons, which often fly at speeds of up to 150 mph to catch small birds, usually nest in rugged timber country on cliffs or in high tree hollows.

"In Victoria (state) they are classified as threatened wildlife and to have them in the city is unbelievable," said wildlife officer Tony Zidarich.

TV preacher improving after surgery

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands — The condition of American television evangelist Robert Schuller was improving Tuesday after emergency surgery for a blood clot on the brain, a spokesman said.

Schuller was released from intensive care and transferred to a private room Tuesday afternoon, according to Joop Post, who runs Schuller's European organization, "Hour of Power Europe."

"We feel that he is improving every couple of hours. He is sleeping a lot and that's the best thing for his recovery," said Post.

Schuller's conditon was listed as stable, Post said.

The Dutch Reformed preacher was rushed into surgery at the Free University Hospital here Monday after his aides found him unconscious on his hotel-room floor.

He had been scheduled to leave later in the day on a tour that would have taken him to Budapest, Moscow and then Rome for an audience with Pope John Paul II.

Schuller has suffered no paralysis from the cerebral hemorrhage which resulted in a large clot between his brain and skull, the spokesman said.

Noble Prize-winning, foreign minister dies

MEXICO CITY — Alfonso Garcia Robles, the Nobel Prize-winning former foreign minister who represented Mexico at the founding of the United Nations, has died at age 80, the Foreign Ministry announced Tuesday.

The ministry said Garcia Robles, who still held the rank of ambassador, died late Monday night in Mexico City.

Garcia Robles was a co-winner of the 1982 Nobel Peace Prize for his authorship of the 1967 Treaty of Tlatelolco, which established a nuclear-free zone in Latin America and other disarmament efforts at the United Nations.

In awarding the prize, the Nobel committee said the ambassador and his co-winner, Alva Myrdal of Sweden, "helped to open the eyes of the world to the threat mankind faces in continued nuclear armament."

In his Nobel acceptance speech, Garcia Robles said the Treaty of Tlatelolco had become "an inspiration for states who want to promote a world totally free of nuclear weapons."

Radical PLO faction rejects conference

ALGIERS, Algeria — The radical Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, a faction of the PLO, said Tuesday it would refuse to attend a Middle East conference on discussing peace with Israel.

It predicted such a conference would neglect Palestinian desires for an independent homeland and reduce chances of future negotiations on a homeland.

The conference would spell "the liquidation of the Palestinian question," the militant group, led by hard-liner George Habash, said in a statement published in Algerian newspapers.

The Palestine Liberation Organization is expected to decide whether to endorse the proposed conference at an meeting of its parliament, the Palestine National Council, opening Sept. 20 in Algiers.

The United States and the Soviet Union have called for a conference this fall in which Israel and its Arab neighbors would negotiate peace agreements. Arab countries and Israel have agreed conditionally to attend. Israel refuses to participate if Palestinians with PLO ties attend.

Turk convicted for spying for Iraq

ANKARA, Turkey — A military court on Tuesday convicted a man of spying for Iraq during the Persian Gulf crisis, and sentenced him to 12½ years in jail.

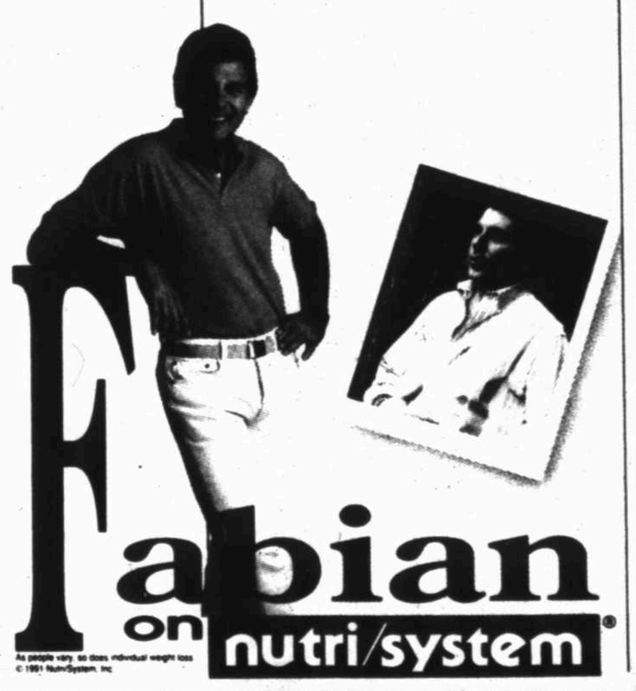

The General Staff Court ruled that Necati Oyan, a 54-year-old restaurant cashier in the Mediterranean port of Mersin, had supplied information to Iraqi intelligence in return for money.

Oyan had confessed that he was lured into spying for Iraq for $1,000 a month and was trained in the use of invisible ink.

The court rejected his defense that he had given Iraqi intelligence only fabricated reports and information compiled from newspapers. He was arrested in January. In Turkey, military courts handle espionage cases.

In December, another Turk was sentenced to 12 years on similar charges, and an Iraqi military attache was expelled for his role in that case.

Bush turns attention home; touts education plan

LEWISTON, Maine — Ending a monthlong vacation, President Bush turned his attention Tuesday to presidential politics in an address aimed at disputing Democratic charges that he has no domestic agenda.

Declaring that "our schools are in trouble," Bush used a visit to Lewiston High School to stress that parents should take a more active role in their children's education.

Bush also touted his administration's Education 2000 plan, a strategy to raise student test scores and improve schools, as the cornerstone of a domestic policy that aides said he plans to emphasize in his 1992 re-election campaign.

"If our schools fail us, we can't blame Washington – we must blame ourselves," Bush said, urging parents and businesses to take more responsibility for improving the quality of their local school systems.

The president, speaking in the school gymnasium, lamented what he called the "disintegration of the family" as one reason student aptitude tests scores are at their lowest level.

"Every kid ought to have somebody that knows his name, cares about him. But it often falls to the role of the teacher to love that kid, hug that kid," he said, noting that U.S. schools lag behind those of other nations because teachers are expected "to act as social workers and psychologists and family counselors. ...

"The teachers do an awful lot," he said to applause from the Lewiston parents.

"At the same time, we ask too little of our students," Bush said. "We shy away from demanding excellence and accountability. As a nation, we sometimes seem more worried about how our students feel than what they learn. And that's got to change."

Bush, accompanied by his wife, Barbara, and Education Secretary Lamar Alexander, stopped here on his way to Washington from Kennebunkport.

Motorman indicted on murder charges

NEW YORK (NYT) — The subway motorman whose train derailed last week, killing five people, was indicted Tuesday on murder charges, a more serious charge than the manslaughter counts on which he was arrested after the crash.

A Manhattan grand jury approved charges that the motorman, Robert E. Ray, had not been simply reckless, the standard for manslaughter, but had exhibited "depraved indifference" to human life. The authorities said he was drunk when he drove the Lexington Avenue express train.

The police have said that Ray admitted to having been drinking heavily all day before he took the controls of the train and that he "nodded off" just before the crash, which occurred as the train switched from the express to local tracks just north of the 14th Street station at Union Square.

Conviction on a charge of second-degree murder carries a minimum sentence of 15 years to life, while manslaughter carries a sentence of five to 15 years. Ray was indicted on five counts of second-degree murder, one for each death.

Service on the Lexington Avenue IRT, which was disrupted for six days as transit workers toiled round the clock to clean up the wreckage, was restored early Tuesday morning.

Depositions won't be released in rape case

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The judge in William Kennedy Smith's rape case told prosecutors Tuesday not to release the depositions of three other women who claim Smith sexually assaulted them.

Circuit Judge Mary Lupo said she wants to privately review the depositions before deciding whether they can be made public or admitted as evidence.

"I don't want the community further polluted without reviewing in advance" the depositions, she said.

Smith, 30, a nephew of U.S. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., faces trial Jan. 13 on charges he raped a woman March 30 at his family's Palm Beach estate.

Defense attorney Roy Black warned the judge that publicity is ruining Smith's chances for a fair trial. He said it has become so bad, "the only possible remedy is going to be a dismissal of the charges."

UPI seeks more concessions

WASHINGTON (AP) — United Press International asked its unionized employees for new wage and other concessions on Tuesday as the financially ailing news service began a search for hundreds of thousands of dollars in monthly savings.

The service, which just last Wednesday sought bankruptcy protection for the second time in six years, said it needs the savings "to bring UPI to financial viability."

But after meeting with company officials in Philadelphia, union leaders criticized management's savings plan and said they would seek more information at a meeting scheduled for Friday in Washington.

"Management's proposals are very destructive and more likely will kill the company than its creditors," said Wire Service Guild President Kevin Keane.

Saying it was facing losses of $485,000 per month, UPI told the union it wants to continue the current salary freeze through next June 30, instead of allowing it to expire as scheduled on Sept. 15.

Monthly losses could increase to as much as $700,000 if wage levels were fully restored, company spokesman Milt Capps said.

Officials outline projects for bond money

■ The city of Midland plans to issue $1.25 million in certificates of obligation for several projects, including a parking lot.

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

Street repairs, drainage work and the purchase of a parking lot will be funded by the issuance of $1.25 million in certificates of obligation, according a recent consensus of Midland city council members.

Other proposals, including a $200,000 fire truck and $150,000 renovation of City Hall, were ruled out in a consensus taken last week, although not unanimously. A list of projects should be approved by ordinance at a regular council meeting Tuesday.

"I would like to see that new fire truck, that pumper unit, included," said District 4 Councilman Tom Johnston. "The one it would replace is getting pretty old. It's functional, but the maintenance costs of it are going up. It's going to be more cost-effective to buy a new one."

Most of the total funded by certificates will be committed to engineering projects. The parking lot expected to be purchased, located adjacent to the Loraine Center, will cost $350,000.

Although the parking lot was appraised for tax purposes at less than $100,000, officials said its purchase will be well worth the money.

"You've got to understand that the lot, at some point in the future, may become an expansion of the Loraine Center," said At-large Councilman John Castro. "So we're not just talking about getting a parking lot for that amount." He said the lot had originally been priced at $500,000.

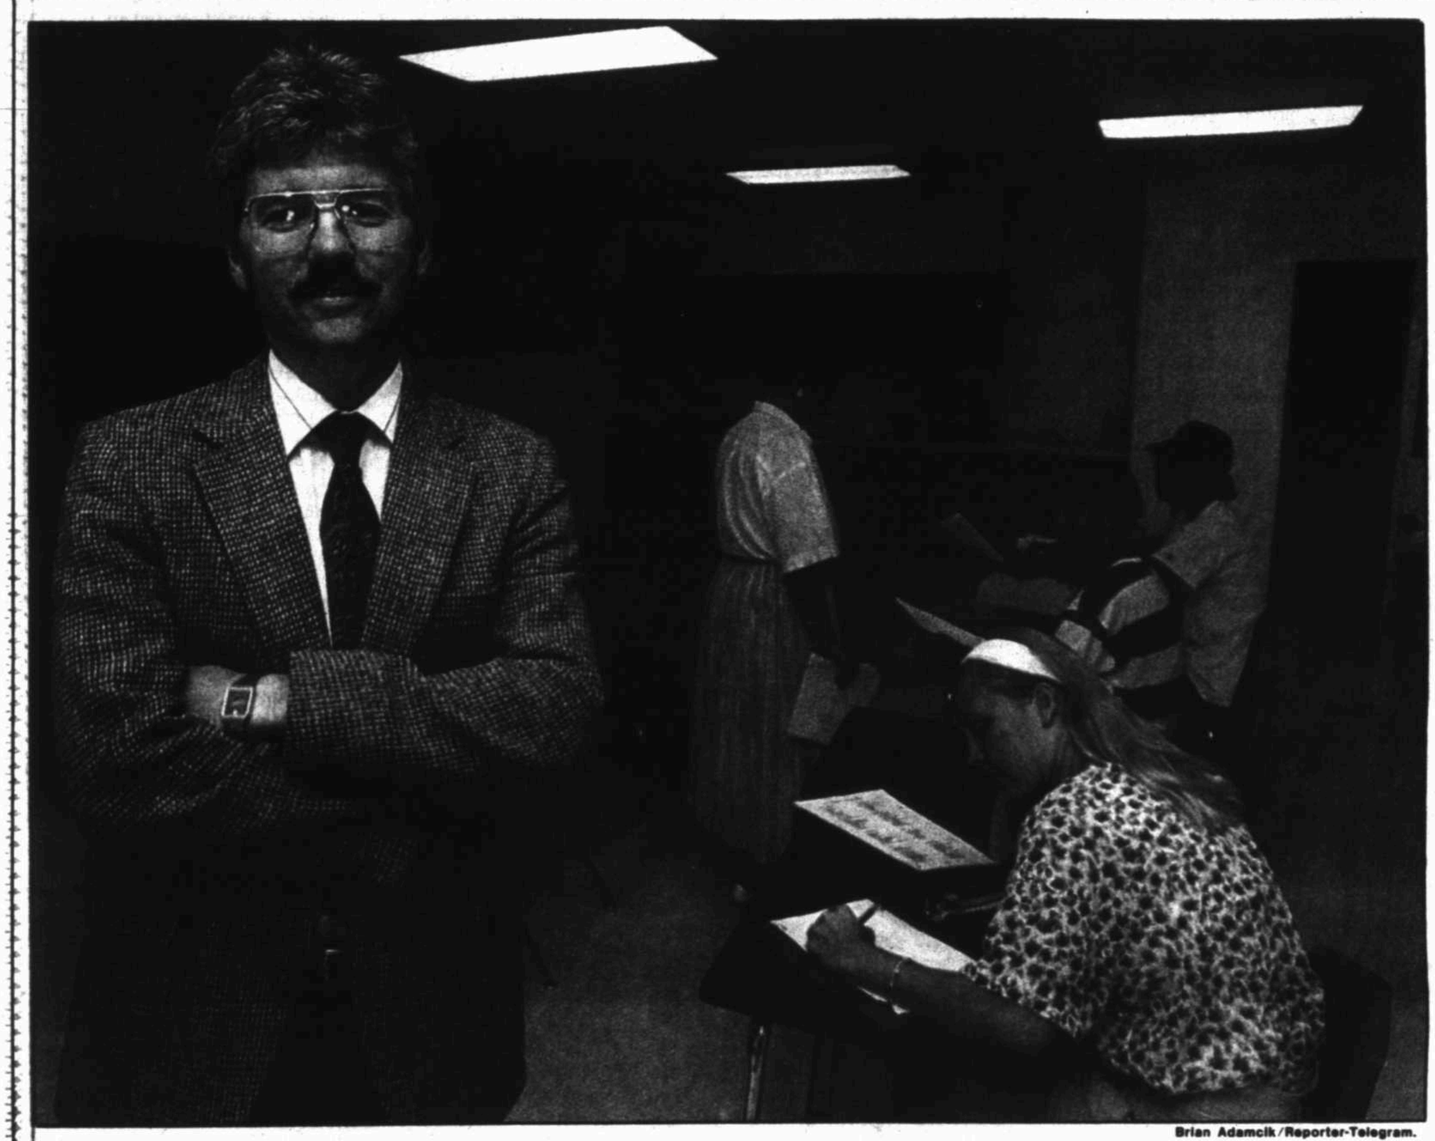

Police Chief Richard Czech said the parking would be essential at the center, which is planned to house the police force and communication systems as well as some other city offices.

"There was some parking in the basement, but that was taken out by the construction," he said. "We lost 50 or more places, and we were already short. We really need it."

City Attorney David Reagan said the lot had been appraised for the city's purposes at its proposed cost.

Engineering work — excavations, bridge repairs, curb and gutter repairs, and a study to determine if flood control should become a city utility, may be funded by the certificates. City officials said

FDIC buys campus

Midland Christian School students have normal classes

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Despite a morning foreclosure sale, Tuesday was a typical school day for the 360 students at Midland Christian School.

"We're alive and well with the best enrollment we've had in years," said Eddie Lee, Midland Christian School superintendent.

The entire campus (four buildings, a football field, baseball backstop, playground and tennis courts) was offered for sale — with the opening bid of $680,000 — at 10:30 a.m. Tuesday at Midland County Courthouse.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Crop. (FDIC), the organization which called the sale, was the sole bidder.

"We (the FDIC) were the only bidder," said Bob Carman, FDIC managing liquidator. "As a result of the foreclosure sale, we now own the property," he said.

Lee said the sale was "just another stage in negotiations" since First National Bank was declared insolvent in 1983.

The loan on the school buildings was financed with First National Bank in 1981, when the building housing the secondary classrooms was constructed.

"Initially, we had enough pledges from the community to pay total construction costs," Lee said. "But, when the economy went bust, those pledges became uncollectable. Then the bank went under and FDIC took over."

The private school, which offers programs in preschool through 12th grade, has an operating budget of $1,100,000.

Tuition pays for 80 percent of the budget and the remaining 20 percent is provided through fund raisers, according to Lee.

"We are current on all of our bills," Lee said. "We are not in financial trouble."

The superintendent added that he couldn't discuss specifics concerning financing since it still is under negotiation with FDIC. "We are doing better than we have done in several years and we will continue to work out this situation," Lee said.

Carman, the FDIC managing liquidator, said, "We are hoping for a a solution that will accommodate both FDIC's interests and the needs of the school. I am very optimistic that Midland Christian School will continue to operate."

Midland schools set new record for enrollment

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Traditionally, enrollment is greater the day after Labor Day than it is the first day of school. Enrollment the first day of school was a record-breaking 20,750. Last year's first day count was 20,077, also a record breaker.

In what is becoming an annual tradition, enrollment in Midland public schools this fall broke all previous records.

"We had 21,650 students enrolled Tuesday morning," said Joe Cummins, executive director of planning, evaluation and testing for Midland Independent School District.

Traditionally, enrollment is greater the day after Labor Day than it is the first day of school.

Enrollment the first day of school was a record-breaking 20,750. Last year's first day count was 20,077, also a record breaker.

"By Friday, enrollment was 21,605," Cummins said. "So, we were up 45 students from Friday by Tuesday, not a significant amount."

The first day figure also represents about 96 percent of the projected 1991-92 peak enrollment of 21,673.

"Last year we had a peak enrollment about the third week of school," Cummins said. "That enrollment was maintained for about four weeks before it began to fluctuate," he said.

MISD spokesperson Ted Miller said, "We have continued to increase enrollment since 1982. There has not been a drop, even during the bust."

Cummins said peak enrollments vary per grade.

"The enrollment for kindergarten through third grade peaked in March," he said. "The secondary enrollment peaked in early fall, and junior high and ninth grade remained relatively the same all year long."

Cummins said the trend of kindergarten through third grade enrollments peaking in March indicates that the district is still growing.

"The March peak is becoming typical," he said. "It shows that we still have young families moving in."

In order to accommodate the burgeoning enrollment, 64 temporary "portable" buildings (15 which were purchased this year) have been set up throughout the district.

With the passage of recent bonds to fund new construction, ground will soon be broken for a new junior high school and a new elementary school.

"Construction will be under way for the Abell Junior High School and the Barney Greathouse Elementary school before school starts next year," Cummins said. Projected completion dates of the new schools is September 1993.

"Elementary school additions will be ready by September 1992," he added.

MISD's peak enrollment the last five years for all grades follows:

Sept. 21, 1990	21,132
Feb. 16, 1989	20,331
Sept. 30, 1988	20,116
Sept. 25, 1987	19,355
Sept. 19, 1986	19,145

Death count lower than expected

Staff Report

Less lives were lost in Texas during Labor Day weekend than predicted, but many of the fatalities could have been prevented, according to Trooper Erwin Ballarta of the Texas Department of Public Safety.

It was predicted that 31 people would die on Texas roads and highways during the holiday weekend which began at 6 p.m. Friday and ended at midnight Monday.

"There were 29 fatalities," Ballarta said. "Of those 29, 14 were unrestrained. In 11 of the accidents, alcohol or drugs were a factor."

Two area fatalities resulted from accidents in Kermit and Odessa.

"We regret anyone has to die on the highways," Ballarta said, "especially when many of the fatalities could have been avoided."

The state trooper attributed the count being lower than predicted to "enforcement officers and local agencies."

Police say little about hunt for missing girl, 17

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

The investigation into the disappearance of a 17-year-old Midland girl continued Tuesday as police remained tight-lipped about specific details of the probe amid various rumors.

There has been public concern whether a connection exists between a 23-year-old man who committed suicide on Saturday and the disappearance of Elizabeth Henry on Aug. 19.

The suicide victim, Sumner Pendleton, was an ex-boyfriend of the missing girl, police said.

Detective Lt. Earl Luckey said there did not appear to be a direct connection between the suicide and the missing girl, but declined comment on whether there was any possible link between Pendleton and the on-going case.

Pendleton was one of about 200

League of Women Voters sights in on busy season

With an activity season that runs from September to May, members of the League of Women Voters are getting busy.

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

With a focus on education about the issues and voter registration, the Midland League of Women Voters is beginning one of its busiest months of the year, leaders said.

"Our activity year is September through May, so we're getting started on some of our new programs," said President Jayne Krawietz. "Also, this month is a busy time politically, so of course that means there's a lot for us to do."

The league's September activities include a month-long voter registration drive, a membership drive, a special-topic meeting and a seminar.

At a hazardous waste seminar Thursday, co-sponsored by Keep Midland Beautiful and Midland College, league members will speak about a new program beginning this month. Gayle Banschbach, league member, is organizing a series of "environmental shopping tours" at local stores.

"We want to get people to think before they buy," Ms. Banschbach said. "Since recycling options are so limited in Midland, we want to present some alternatives.

"We'll lead small groups through the stores, talking about what products are over-packaged or not recyclable," Ms. Banschbach explained. "We'll talk about buying in bulk and reusable containers, things everyone can do."

Interested shoppers can call 688-4139 for more information.

Voter registration, one of the organization's priorities, is getting special focus this month. Member Christy Reed has begun scheduling registration drives at businesses, industries and public places throughout Midland all month long.

"The registration deadline is early in October, so we make a big push this month," Ms. Reed said. "We try to register everyone, as many people as we can, all socio-economic groups."

State Rep. Tom Craddick will speak at the league's next regular meeting, scheduled for Sept. 26, at 7:30 p.m. at 906 Citation, the home of member Pat Schneider.

"Anyone is welcome to come," Ms. Schneider said. "We're hoping having Tom (Craddick) is a big drawing card. He'll discuss the legislative action that is particularly important to us, and there will be a time for questions. It should be very interesting."

A wine and cheese "getting to know you" event is scheduled for Sept. 12, at 7:30 p.m. at 1803 Country Club Drive, the home of member Cindy Braaten. The event is designed to draw the curious to learn more about the league.

"Anyone who is interested in becoming a league member would be welcome," said publicity chairperson Cindy Botes. "Board members and chairs of various activities will talk a little about what they do and what the league is about."

Both men and women are welcome in the league, Ms. Krawietz said.

"People generally think all we do is register voters," she said. "But we do so much more. We're very issues oriented."

Ms. Krawietz said the group often gets involved in philosophical discussions. They conduct and participate in a number of studies on timely issues, she said.

"We do a lot of study, look at an issue for a long period of time, whatever it takes," she said. "We never support or oppose a candidate or party, although we do take a stand on many issues."

This year, the group plans to study the quality of water in the local area, and will participate in a national study on the health care crisis in this country, Ms. Krawietz said.

PROJECTS: City considers parking lot

the money must simply be designated for the engineering department's street and drainage projects; priorities for projects to be funded will be set later this year.

"One of the things they are going to be doing is work on Mulberry Draw," Castro said. "I think that's really important. Because when we do all this (drainage) work on the west side, the water goes to the east and south. We need to improve those areas too."

Angel Stadium improvements of $200,000, originally planned to be funded by certificates, will be included in the city budget instead, City Manager Fred Poe said Tuesday. He said the money that would be used for some street work would be used for the stadium, and certificates would in turn be issued for the street work.

"That way we'll only have three issues on the certificate proposal — streets, drainage and the parking lot," Poe said.

The stadium renovation will move into another phase with the allocation, which will fund work set to begin this month, continuing until the season opens in April.

Chuck Swallow, assistant director of community services, said work at the stadium will involve preparation for addition of almost 1,000 seats.

"The Angels have really increased their attendance," Swallow said. "Crowds were up last year and up even more this year." Work associated with increased seating includes more restrooms, especially for women, relocation of a picnic area and some additional security measures, Swallow said.

The work had been included in a new six-year contract recently approved with Midland Sports Inc.

The city staff had proposed a full $2 million in projects, but councilmembers were unwilling to commit to more than $1.25 million. Approval of the total would have increased taxes by about half of one cent for one year during the repayment period.

"We try to do about a million dollars in projects each year," said At-large Councilman J.D. Faircloth. "We try to do a little bit each year instead of doing a large amount at once."

"Between the capitalization we had proposed, and what we got, we pretty much took care of everything we need," Johnston said.

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Man in jail

Staff Report

ODESSA — A 21-year-old Odessa man remained jailed Tuesday in connection with the death of Jose Gerardo Ramos, who was found shot in his car on Aug. 17, police said.

Rito Galindo Rocha was arrested Monday morning in Presidio on a warrant issued by Justice of the Peace Julian Pressly, police said.

Rocha was transferred to the Odessa jail Monday night. Bond was set at $250,000 by Pressly.

Ramos, 32, was found slumped over the steering wheel of his Buick Skylark about 11 a.m. Aug. 17. He had been shot seven times with a .25-caliber semi-automatic gun, police said.

Midlander shot

A Midland man shot three times but not seriously injured Sunday night was identified as Bruce Patterson Tuesday, police said.

The 19-year-old was shot in the chin, arm and chest by a .25-caliber gun at 501 W. Storey Street about 11 p.m. Sunday, police said.

The man was able to walk to Midland Memorial Hospital, where he was treated and released, police said.

Odessan injured

ODESSA — A 17-year-old man remained in critical condition at Medical Center Hospital Tuesday night after he was struck by a car while riding a motorcycle, police and hospital officials said.

Billy Ray Wells was transported to the hospital following the accident that occurred at 42nd Street and Andrews Highway about 3 p.m., police said.

Details of the accident were not available late Tuesday.

GIRL: Police continue investigation people detectives have questioned in their investigation of the missing girl, Luckey said.

Police responded to the Pendleton suicide at 3118 Auburn, a vacant house, at about 8:10 p.m. Saturday.

Justice of the Peace Robert Pine ruled Pendleton died of self-inflicted carbon monoxide poisoning, police said.

Pendleton apparently parked his running car in the garage of the house and subsequently overcome by the fumes, police said.

The suicide comes at a time when rumors are rampant in the community about the disappearance of 17-year-old girl, particularly in regard to a 911 emergency call Elizabeth made.

Luckey refused to comment on the contents of the 911 call which has not been made public. Luckey said revealing the contents of the call could hamper the investigation by releasing information only known by the police, the girl and someone involved in her disappearance.

On the day of her disappearance, emergency 911 received a call for help from Elizabeth. The plea was cut short by the girl's scream and the line going dead, police have said.

Officers arrived at her 3610 Apollo Court home about five minutes later. No one was there.

Police were again notified about two hours later when Elizabeth's parents, Ralph and Lynn Henry, came home and became suspicious. The lights, television and stereo had been left on; the dogs were inside; and their daughter had left home without her contact lenses paraphernalia and sunglasses she wore frequently.

The FBI and the Texas Rangers are assisting the Midland Police Department in the investigation.

Survivors tell of 11 days at sea

NEW YORK (AP) — Two men and a pregnant Texas woman who spent 11 days at sea in a rubber raft after their sailboat capsized in the savage winds of Hurricane Bob said on Tuesday that their survival had nothing to do with courage.

They survived because they believed they would live and because they were rescued before their bodies had deteriorated beyond repair, they said. It didn't take courage to catch fish with their bare hands, to drink sea water, to mend the holes in their rubber raft or to watch the sharks circling them hour after hour, they insisted.

"To me, choice is implied in courage and we weren't there as a matter of choice," said Allison Wilcox, 33, a psychologist from Austin, Texas, who went on the trip because she wanted a long weekend away from her work.

Instead she found herself in a harrowing life-or-death ordeal with two men she barely knew — the sailboat's skipper, Marc Dupavillon, 25, of Mauritius, an island in the Indian Ocean, and first mate Eddy Provost, 42, of Pawleys Island, S.C.

The three survivors spoke about their experience at a news conference at Jamaica Hospital in Queens. Sitting in wheelchairs — Dupavillon and Provost with bandages about their feet — they described how they lived for 11 days in a raft equipped with only two paddles and a repair kit.

They set sail on Aug. 16 from Little River Inlet, S.C. aboard a brand new 38-foot sloop they were taking up to Newport, R.I., for the boat's owner. There were warnings of a tropical storm of 30 knots but nothing serous enough to postpone their departure, Provost said.

Two days later, the storm became so intense, they decided to abandon the sloop for the life raft. Wilcox said she put together an emergency bag with enough food and water to last them five days only to loose it to the sea when the raft rolled over almost as soon as they had boarded it.

For the next 11 days, they struggled to survive, each in their own way.

Wilcox, who is six months pregnant, said she curled up in a fetal position to try and conserve her strength so her baby could get as much nourishment as her body could provide. She cried over a picture of her fiance that she had with her, she said.

Provost, who described himself as a "survival freak," said he kept himself busy catching fish for the others with his bare hands, mending the raft with a makeshift needle and keeping a diary on a torn piece of canvas.

"I was not a human being. I was a human doing," said Provost, who was making the trip in an effort to get his captain's license.

His wry sense of humor punctuated his comments about life at sea, especially his description of catching his first fish.

"The first one I caught by hand. It just got too close to the surface," he said. "And I grabbed it with one hand and stabbed it with a marlinspike and it bit me in the hand and stabbed me with its own trigger. I kind of laughed because I knew I would get the last bite."

Dupavillon said he tried to survive by keeping as quiet as possible.

He appeared to fare the worst of the three in the ordeal and was listed in stable condition at the hospital, while his companions were scheduled to go home Tuesday or Wednesday.

At one point, the skipper collapsed emotionally and took a knife and cut off his sweat shirt.

Woman sues newspaper

Staff Report

A civil suit alleging a woman was sexually harrassed by employees of the Midland Reporter-Telegram was filed in 238th District Court on Friday, according to court records.

The suit alleges Roselyn Oden, the plaintiff, was subjected "to intentional infliction of emotional distress" by unnamed employees during the last four months of 1990 and January of this year.

Ms. Oden was an employee and later an independent contractor for the Reporter-Telegram.

The suit describes employees "repeatedly attacking, feeling, rubbing against and making sexually provocative and harrassing remarks" to Ms. Oden.

The actions were malicious, reckless and intentionally premeditated, the suit stated.

Ms. Oden is seeking more than $150,000, the suit stated.

Nutritional nibbles help balanced diet

By Carrie White
N.Y. Times News Service

Snacks aren't incidental for growing children. They are a fact of life.

"If kids in junior high never snacked, I don't know how they would fill their nutritional needs," said Stephanie Campbell. Campbell, a registered school dietitian, doesn't believe in snacks for snacks' sake. But she goes for snacks that count.

One such snack is ants-on-a-log that she once made for her kids. Those are made by stuffing celery with peanut butter and topping it with raisins.

"Kids are so inundated with unhealthy things," Campbell said, charging that television is the big culprit there. Making nutritional foods readily available, though, can combat some of that propaganda.

"Put out a bowl full of fruit instead of a jar full of cookies," suggested Tammy Baker. Popcorn, pretzels, fruit juice are nutritious options to high fat foods such as potato chips, ice cream and gooey cookies.

A dietitian with the Dairy Council of Arizona, Baker also pointed out that parents are a big influence on how a child eats and, consequently, snacks.

"Twenty-five percent of the children in this country are obese," Baker said. That figure, she said, is significantly higher than in the past and points not only to bad eating habits but also to a lack of exercise. Again, television is a major factor here.

"Kids looks for foods that are convenient and visible," Baker said. It's important, then, not just to have the right snack, but to have it in the right location. Which means in or on a cupboard that's easy to reach or on a low refrigerator shelf.

"Kids will say 'there's nothing to eat' if it's not accessible," Baker said. Keeping dip and a container full of cut-up vegetables on a low shelf in the fridge is a quick fix for those after-school munchies.

Shelf-stable foods are another after-school option, providing children can be trusted with a microwave. But Campbell noted that may of those foods have a high sodium content. So read the label. An individual's daily salt intake should not exceed 4 grams, or 4,000 milligrams.

"Those fruit roll-ups are promoted as fruit, but they're really sugar," Campbell said. As for prepackaged drinks, some of those are just 10 percent fruit juice.

"A lot of times children see foods as either good or bad," Baker said. That response is taught.

But Baker believes variety is more important.

"You can make good foods fun," Baker said.

For sandwiches, cutting out shapes from meats and cheese or painting faces on cottage cheese using raisins, nuts and/or fruit are just some examples of making food fun.

Other good snack foods for children after school include:

- Muffins and bagels: These can be made ahead and stored in the freezer, then left on the counter to defrost during the day.
- Soup: A good choice if children are of an age that they can use a microwave.
- Crackers and cheese: Portion control is important here. If this is the snack of choice, you might want to leave a set number of crackers wrapped in foil on a counter and chunk the cheese, leaving it covered on a low shelf with the child's name on it.
- Finger gelatins: Many recipes use flavored gelatin which is high in sugar and low in nutrients. Instead, use unflavored gelatin and replace cold water with unsweetened fruit juice concentrate.
- Trail mix: Combine raisins, pretzels, roasted peanuts and sunflower seeds and store in cupboard in plastic container.

Snack chips have 'kick' to them

By Linda Anderson

OK, I admit it — I'm a sucker for new and unusual flavors in chips and other snacks. If it's barbecue-flavored, ranch-style or cheese-coated, it finds a place in my pantry.

Anderson

I surprised even myself, though, when I decided to try a package of Chee-tos Flamin' Hot cheese puffs.

In the first place, Chee-tos seem to be marketed mainly for kids (even though grown-ups eat them too); and in the second place, these Chee-tos were RED!!! Let's face it, they were more than red, they looked like they would glow in the dark.

But I bought a bag anyway and took it back to the office where it was sampled by several adventurous newsroom-types.

The bag I bought was a "Big Grab," which usually means it's about twice the size of an ordinary single-serving bag of chips. My Big Grab contained 2¼-ounces of Chee-tos (about two servings) and cost 75 cents. That's about average for snack chips.

Label advertising wasn't very much — just the fact that these Chee-tos were "Flamin' Hot" flavor cheese flavored snacks, a picture of a little devil with a hot Chee-to on his pitchfork, and the admonition, "Don't be a litterbug — Keep America Beautiful!"

The label also carried a guarantee: "Frito-Lay guarantees fresh product when this package is first opened or the purchase price will be refunded. If you have questions, comments or are not satisfied, call toll-free 1-800-352-4477 weekdays 9 to 4:30 Central Time with the product name, size and code numbers from the front of the package."

It's always nice to see a company with enough faith in its product (or products) that it's willing to provide a toll-free number for its customers' use.

In taste, the "Flamin' Hot" Chee-tos proved to live up to their name. They definitely were hot! More than one taste-tester said, as their eyes widened and teared up just a little bit, "They do have a kick to them, don't they!"

Everyone seemed to like the chips quite a bit. I know I did. But we agreed that we might like them better if the color was a touch less jarring. Just looking at them can make your eyes burn, before you've even had a bite.

Price listed is from a local store. Price at other location may vary.

DEAR ABBY

Door with moon will have a longer line

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: What is the significance of the moon or half-moon on an outhouse door?

Van Buren

I recently visited the birthplace of Herbert Hoover and saw this freshly painted outhouse with the moon on the door, and inquired of the security guard as to what it meant. He just laughed and said he'd been asked that question many times, but he's never been able to come up with an answer.

I'm sure there are a lot of people out there who are as curious as I am to know the answer. What is it? — BOB HESS, IOWA CITY, IOWA

DEAR MR. HESS: Before indoor plumbing, American privies usually had "two-seaters." The one with the "moon" on the door was for ladies and the one with the "star" was for gentlemen. That way, people who couldn't read could stay out of trouble.

P.S. I was privy to this information when I came upon "The Classic Outhouse Book," by Janet Strombeck.

DEAR ABBY: In February of 1987, my granddaughter called and said she and her husband needed a loan of $500 to pay for their baby, which was due in five months. I mailed a check to them immediately, and they sent a note with both their signatures, promising to pay me $25 until the loan was paid off. I never asked for this note — they sent it on their own.

Since that time, I haven't received a penny from them, although they have bought cars and furniture and have taken vacation trips. The final straw was when my granddaughter paid $150 for a pet snake! Abby, if they had sent me only $5 or $10 a month, I would feel that at least they were making an effort.

I continue buying gifts for Christmas and their birthdays even though I am getting a little resentful. I am not poor, but neither am I rich. I am afraid if I ask for the money they owe me, it will damage the good relationship I have with them, and I don't want to cause any hard feelings. Should I just keep my mouth shut and hope they never come to me for another loan? — SOFT TOUCH IN NEVADA

DEAR SOFT TOUCH: It's unfortunate that you let it go for so long; they probably assumed that since you never asked for the money, you didn't need it. Write them a friendly letter reminding them of their obligation and enclose a photocopy of the note they signed.

DEAR ABBY: I have had a best friend for more than 20 years. We've known each other since fourth grade. We have always been able to discuss everything and anything honestly. However, my friend has gained a frightening amount of weight during the last two years. She appears to be at least 100 pounds over her normal weight, but she absolutely refuses to talk about it. Meanwhile, she eats up a storm!

Every time I mention it, she gets angry and cuts me short. I am worried about her blood pressure and even a possible heart attack because heart trouble runs in her family. She's a beautiful, generous person anad I love her dearly, but this lady is killing herself. What can I say without alienating her?

Someone asked her recently when her "baby" was due, and it really hurt her feelings. — A HEAVY PROBLEM

DEAR PROBLEM: I assure you that no one knows better than your friend that she is dangerously overweight, but until she wants to do something about it, no one can help her, so don't nag her.

The biggest favor you can do her would be to get her to see her doctor. Talk about "health," not weight. She could have a compulsion to overeat for one of a number of reasons. Morbidly obese people need psychological help as well as a nutritious eating program, but it all has to start in a physician's office. If you can work a miracle, you may save your friend's life by starting there. Good luck.

Tips tell how to skim fat out

Associated Press

The Culinary Institute of America in Hyde Park, N.Y., has the following suggestions for reducing the fat in your favorite recipes:

- Use non-stick cookware or vegetable spray to cut down or eliminate cooking fat or oil.
- Replace cream with evaporated skim milk. Replace whole milk with low-fat or skim milk.
- Replace or blend sour cream with a reduced-fat sour cream or plain, low-fat or non-fat yogurt.
- Replace some or all ground beef with ground turkey in meat loaf, chili and casseroles. Stick to ground beef for burgers.
- Use sausages made from low-fat meats such as turkey, chicken and veal.
- Use a small amount of broth or stock instead of fat to saute vegetables.
- When making stock or using a canned stock, refrigerate until the fat hardens and can be easily lifted away and discarded for fat-free stock.
- Prepare chicken or fish by poaching, cooking in liquid (stock or wine) at a low temperature, about 170 degrees.
- Use smaller meat portions and select leaner cuts. Trim all visible fats from meat.

Dallas students protest teacher layoffs with march

AP Laserphoto

A Policeman pins a young girl to a car during protests outside the Dallas Independent School District office.

DALLAS (NYT) — Thousands of high school students, some throwing bottles and stones, marched on the headquarters of the Dallas Independent School District Tuesday to protest layoffs of 245 teachers and the elimination of 384 teaching positions.

About 70 police officers in riot gear ringed the administration building just north of the downtown area, protecting school administrators inside. The students, many of them carrying placards, were joined by some parents and teachers.

One officer was struck on the head by a bottle, said Sgt. Thomas S. Shelton of the Police Department's Special Operations Division. The unidentified officer was treated at a hospital and released. The police said about half a dozen students were arrested on charges of disorderly conduct.

"This is an unusual event in Dallas," said Robbie Collins, the director of employee relations for the district, which has about 100,000 students. "We've always been such a wealthy district. Pretty much all we've done is add on to the budget. This is the first time we've had strict scrutiny and adjustments made." Collins said the district had 8,400 teachers.

Shelton said that there were no more than about 2,000 demonstrators at any one time, but that many more people participated throughout the day. "There were a lot of comings and goings during the day," he said.

The demonstration, which started at 9 a.m. and lasted until about 3:30 p.m., drew students from high schools throughout the district.

The demonstrators were reacting to cuts in school personnel made by the school board on Aug. 20. The layoffs were the result of a yearlong battle in the state legislature over school financing. A new financing formula, which stripped wealthier school districts of state money to redistribute to poorer districts, cost Dallas $47 million in state aid.

To make up for the loss, the Dallas school board settled on a mixture of 17.5 percent increase in the property tax, program changes and the teacher cutbacks. To save the 245 teaching jobs would have meant increasing property taxes another 2.5 percent to yield $8.26 million more, Collins said.

"There were plenty of groups that didn't want the kind of tax increase that was talked about," Collins said.

Other districts in the Dallas area that suffered from similar state financing cuts decided on higher tax increases, Collins said. The Highland Park Independent School District plans to increase its taxes almost 100 percent. The nearby Plano district plans to increase its taxes 31 percent, and the Richardson district plans to increase taxes more than 20 percent, Collins said.

Collins accused schoolteachers and other district employees of "stirring up the students."

"I think there is a romance going on now with the problems the district has," he said. "I think there is a lot of misunderstanding. We have been trying to advise people for three years that this is a problem."

The protest began last week when the teachers were notified that they were being laid off.

State takes over Fort Bend County school

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Education Agency on Tuesday assumed control of Kendleton Independent School District in Fort Bend County, the first time the agency has used authority granted by lawmakers for such a takeover.

Education Commissioner Lionel "Skip" Meno appointed a management team to administer the district, which has a deficit of more than $180,000 from the 1990-91 fiscal year.

The group will try to resolve the school district's financial difficulties, and to eventually return district control to local trustees.

Kendleton trustees asked Meno to make their school district a state-operated one after they could not meet an Aug. 15 deadline to get funds to pay off the deficit, according to the Education Agency.

"I'm confident that this group of individuals will be able to resolve Kendleton's financial difficulties," Meno said in a statement announcing the new management team. "I'm also pleased that Kendleton trustees themselves requested this action by the agency. We look forward to working with the board toward a goal of allowing them to resume administration of the district as soon as possible."

TEA spokesman Joey Lozano said that the school district has had a low property tax collection rate, and that a lower-than-expected student count caused the school district to get less state money than it anticipated.

The school district also historically has had low scores on the state education skills test, and it has been overseen by a state-appointed master since 1986, Lozano said.

The school district has been rated "academically unaccredited" for a year.

A recent state law allows the education commissioner in such cases to appoint a board of managers and superintendent to oversee district operations.

Audit: Democrats are missing funds

EL PASO (AP) — The former chairman of the El Paso County Democratic Party is at the center of questions of financial irregularities in three party bank accounts.

Democratic party precinct chairmen were to gather Tuesday night to discuss whether to pursue criminal or civil action. County Democratic Chairman Danny Mena said a review of the accounts showed $13,000 in funds is missing.

Mena said a full report on the account reviews was to be given at Tuesday's meeting with an explanation of how a missing $13,000 certificate of deposit was spent.

Financial records that were investigated by certified public accountants hired by the party were from the tenure of former party chairman Carlos Humphreys.

Humphreys, a campaign manager for U.S. Rep. Ronald Coleman, D-El Paso, was elected in 1990, but abruptly resigned in early June citing family reasons.

Humphreys' attorney said he could not comment on the findings.

"I have not been provided an accounting or an audit," Carl Green said. He added that the records were reviewed in private with party attorneys.

The El Paso Herald-Post, in Monday's editions, quoted party officials who requested anonymity as saying the financial problems include a variety of bounced checks, creditor complaints about unpaid bills, commingled deposits and missing vouchers.

Man slays youth after attack on cars

EL PASO (AP) — A man was charged with murder in the shooting death of a youth police said was smashing car windows in an apparant gang attack at the man's home.

Alberto Rojas, 38, was charged with murder in the death of Hilario Rodriguez, 17. Rojas remains free on $10,000 bond.

Another man shot, Carlos Ayala, 20, was in stable condition in the intensive care unit at William Beaumont Army Medical Center Tuesday. Charges had not been filed Tuesday morning against Ayala.

Police said Rodriguez and Ayala were among a group of 10 to 15 people who early Sunday smashed the widows of cars in Rojas' driveway. The others involved scattered when the shots were fired, police said.

Rojas said he first shouted at the vandals to leave, then fired at their feet to scare them when they continued damaging his vehicles.

"I didn't know if they were going to come into my house and hurt my family," he said. "I still don't know. But I had to defend myself and my family any way I could."

Rojas' son Cesar, 17, said he was a member of a gang and said he recognized some of the attacking youths as gang members.

Dolphins deal Hill

MIAMI (AP) — The Dolphins traded wide receiver Randall Hill, their first-round draft pick, to Phoenix on Tuesday in exchange for the Cardinals' top selection in next year's college draft.

The trade was prompted by the fact that the Dolphins had "an abundance of wide receivers and it would have been a luxury to carry six through the year," coach Don Shula said.

"By getting Phoenix's first-round draft choice, this will put us in a better position to obtain defensive help, which is a more pressing need, either this year through a trade or next year in the draft," he said.

Hill, who signed with Miami on Aug. 6, played one game with the Dolphins.

Braves eye Boyd

ARLINGTON (AP) — The Braves are looking at Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd as a possible late-season addition to help in their drive for first place in the National League West.

Bill Lajoie, a special assignment scout for Atlanta, was on hand Monday night as Boyd won his first game for the Rangers since joining the American League team in July.

Boyd threw 79 pitches in five scoreless innings stretched across an hour and 54 minute rain delay as the Rangers beat the Yankees 4-1.

"If anyone wants to talk about anyone on our team, we're always willing to listen," Rangers General Manager Tom Grieve told The Dallas Morning News.

The Braves, locked in a race with the Dodgers, had pursued Boyd before the Rangers acquired him from Montreal. Since that trade, Boyd has a 1-4 record in seven starts.

Diablos nip Angels

■ Midland's first Texas League playoff appearance in nine years comes up one run short.

Staff Report

EL PASO — The Midland Angels made a ninth inning run at victory here Tuesday night, but came up one run short, 5-4, against the El Paso Diablos in the first game of the best-of-three Texas League West playoff.

Reggie Williams scored in the ninth on a single by the hot-hitting Walt McConnell, who is batting just under .400 with men in scoring position, but El Paso reliever Mark Chapman struckout Don Barbra to end the game.

The loss places Midland on the brink of elimination. An El Paso win today at 8 p.m. (CDT) would boot Midland out of the playoffs. Midland must win today and Thursday in order to get a crack at Shreveport in the Texas League Championship Series.

Midland will send rookie Phil Leftwich to the mound today against El Paso's Dean Freeland, who has been a real nemisis for the Angels. Freeland was 6-0 versus Midland last year and is 1-0 against the Angels this year in two starts.

Midland took a 2-0 lead in the first inning on two-out solo homers by Mark Howie and McConnell, but El Paso struck back with a three-run homer from Dave Jacas in the third inning for a 3-2 lead and never trailed again.

El Paso's John Finn produced what was the game winner in the fourth inning off John Pawlowski with a two-run

Philadelphia quarterback Randall Cunningham looks down a his injured left knee as he is taken off the field in the second quarter of Sunday's game at Green Bay.

NFL stars drop at alarming rate

■ Just one week into the season, some of the league's big names are already sidelined.

Associated Press

At the rate quarterbacks are dropping — four after the first week — every starter in the NFL will be out by the seventh week of the season.

And Joe Montana, Randall Cunningham, Dave Krieg and Timm Rosenbach aren't alone on the sidelines. Marcus Allen is out six weeks with an injury, Barry Sanders has bruised ribs and Bruce Smith is still recovering from knee surgery.

With the season only a week old, consider who is out of action:

— The league's MVP the last two seasons (Montana)

— The league's most exciting quarterback (Cunningham)

— Last year's defensive player of the year (Smith).

— One of the league's most exciting running backs (Sanders).

Allen, with 7,974 career rushing yards, injured a knee in the Raiders' loss to the Oilers, while the Eagles' Cunningham (knee) is gone for the season and the Seahawks' Krieg (thumb) is out at least six weeks. All were injured on Sunday.

The Cardinals' Rosenbach is out for the year with a preseason knee injury and the 49ers' Montana will miss at least three more games with an elbow injury.

The NFL's attitude? Plug on.

League spokesman Greg Aiello cited the two highlight games of Week One — the Bills' 35-31 win over the Dolphins in a game televised to most of the nation and the Giants' 16-14 win over the 49ers on Monday night.

"You always miss great players," Aiello said. "But injuries are an unfortunate part of sport. Football is more of a team game than most and the NFL has an abundance of quality players.

"With the opening thrillers like Buffalo-Miami and San Francisco and the Giants, we feel the league has picked up where the Super Bowl left off last season in terms of drama and excitement."

Beyond Smith and the quarterbacks, there are other big names still out, either through injury or holdout.

Al Toon, the Jets' Pro Bowler, is "week to week" with what's described as "post-concussion syndrome." No one knew about it until an hour before last Sunday's game and "week to week" can mean anything — two years ago, the Giants' Mark Bavaro injured a knee in the seventh game and was "week to week" for the rest of the season.

The holdouts include running back Lorenzo White of the Oilers, center Jeff Uhlenake and kicker Pete Stoyanovich of the Dolphins and cornerback Bruce Pickens, the Falcons' No. 1 draft choice.

Monica Seles blasts her way into the semifinals.

Capriati, Seles go to semis

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Jennifer Capriati, walloping serves more than 100 mph, took a giant step toward becoming the youngest U.S. Open winner in history as she reached the semifinals by toppling defending champion Gabriela Sabatini.

Capriati, at 15 already one of the strongest women in tennis, beat Sabatini for the first time in a full match, 6-3, 7-6 (7-1) on Tuesday, overpowering her on serves and groundstrokes, pounding back returns from midcourt and, at critical moments, lobbing with perfection.

"I have come this far, I hope I can go all the way," said Capriati, a year younger than Tracy Austin was when she won in 1979. Capriati is the second-youngest semifinalist in U.S. Open history, three months older than Andrea Jaeger in 1980.

Capriati next plays 17-year-old Monica Seles, a 6-1, 6-2 victor over Gigi Fernandez.

Sabatini, who had beaten Capriati in their first six matches, lost only once before — in the Canadian Open last month when she retired with a blister in the middle of the second set.

"I played a very bad tiebreaker," said Sabatini, who lacked the speed, agility and confidence at the net that she showed last year in beating Steffi Graf in the final. "I missed so many balls. I played a litle bit short and she was hitting very deep, attacking me, so I didn't have too many chances to come to the net."

Earlier, Seles, still promising to set the tennis world abuzz with her sexy new garb, put off the fashion show to concentrate on reaching the semifinals for the first time in her career.

She wore the same old outfit and had the same old strokes, and was the same young grunter knocking down the older folks.

The victim this time was Gigi Fernandez, only 27 but still a full decade older than Seles, who barely broke a sweat in winning 6-1, 6-2 in 53 minutes of tedious tennis.

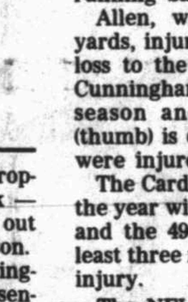

Seles, who won the Australian Open this year and her second straight French Open, is trying to add the U.S. Open to her Grand Slam achievements. Last year, she lost in the third round here, and in 1989 she lost in the fourth round.

District 4-5A openers carry weight

There is always a great deal of excitement surrounding the opening of any high school football season, but rarely do the openers carry as much weight as what we will see Friday night from District 4-5A.

Williamson

First, three league schools have new coaches — Bill Barron at Odessa High, Carlous Stone at Abilene High and Randy Allen at Abilene Cooper. That in itself will keep some wary eyes guided toward those outfits.

However, two games have even more added interest since Midland Lee hosts El Paso Andress and OHS plays against Palo Duro. Andress eliminated Lee from the state playoffs after a tie last year and Palo Duro did the same to OHS. These are rematches worthy of any opening day schedule.

Lee is 5-1-1 against Andress with the loss and tie coming from the Eagles last year. OHS is winless against Palo Duro at 0-4-2.

League favorite Odessa Permian also goes against an El Paso team (Irvin) and Mojo owns a 2-0 record there. Against El Paso teams Permian owns a gaudy 39-1-1 overall record while Lee is 24-3-1 against Border City teams, according to Tim McGraw, our 4-5A historian.

Midland High also has an interesting opener with Lubbock Monterey, according to McGraw. The Bulldogs lead that long series by a 17-16-1 count and that's about as close as you can get after 34 games.

Oddly enough Allen makes his 4-5A debut with Cooper against, who else? You guessed it — Brownwood. Allen came to Cooper from Brownwood and beat the Cougars four of the past five years.

Stone comes into the league with an opener against Stephenville, so the league should see quickly just what kind of impact these two new coaches will have. Incidentally, Stone comes to 4-5A from Tyler where he already owns a win over Odessa Permian.

Due to last year's expanded 5A playoff format, three District 4-5A teams have schedules loaded with opponents who were in the state playoffs last year. Lee's schedule lists five playoff teams (Andress, Del Rio, Palo Duro, OHS and San Angelo). Permian will play six playoff teams (Irvin, Tyler, Amarillo, San Angelo, Lee and OHS). San Angelo will also play five (Victoria, San Antonio Clark, Kerrville-Tivy, Lee and OHS).

You may have noticed from watching TV over the last week that the college goal posts this year have been narrowed from 23-feet, 4-inches to 18-feet, 6-inches. High schools basically use the same rules as college football, but goal posts in high school will remain at the 23-4 figure.

That brings up an interesting problem in San Angelo and Abilene where the high school stadium is also used by college teams. Those schools have already made adjustments. The colleges have portable poles that attach to the existing goal posts and will be taken down for high school games. College kickers in those towns, however, will be facing four upright poles during college games.

The problem won't go away that easily, however. San Angelo plays Victoria Friday in Austin's Memorial Stadium and will have to use the 18-6 posts.

It's also going to make the playoffs this year interesting in site selection. If teams choose the traditional playoff sites like Jones Stadium in Lubbock, Kyle Field in College Station and Memorial Stadium in Austin, they will have to use the 18-6 posts by directive of the University Interscholastic League, the governing body for high school athletics in Texas.

High school teams with good kickers may be thinking twice before accepting any offer in a college stadium. Losing four-feet, 10-inches in a scoring opportunity just might be construed as too heavy of a penalty to play for playing in a nice stadium.

Guzman lifts Texas over Yankees, 5-1

Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Texas won its 15th consecutive home game over the Yankees as Jose Guzman pitched a five-hitter Tuesday night and led the Rangers to a 5-1 victory.

The Yankees have not won at Texas since May 4, 1989. The AL record for consecutive home victories over one team is 22, set by the Boston Red Sox against the Philadelphia Athletics in 1945 and 1946.

Guzman (10-5) struck out six and walked three in his third complete game this season.

Jeff Johnson (5-9) gave up four runs and nine hits in a 5⅔ innings as the Yankees lost for the third time in four games.

Texas, which won its third straight, went ahead in the first on a run-scoring single by Mike Stanley. Jose Hernandez hit an RBI double in the fourth, but the Yankees pulled to 2-1 in the fifth when Guzman threw a run-scoring wild pitch with Matt Nokes on third.

Ruben Sierra hit his 20th home run in the fifth.

Ivan Rodriguez hit his second career home run in the eighth.

Orioles 8, Jays 4

TORONTO — Dwight Evans hit a three-run homer and had his first four-hit game this season, and Glenn Davis also homered as Baltimore downed Toronto.

Ben McDonald (6-8), winless in five starts since Aug. 2, allowed three runs and five hits in six innings, struck out four and walked none. Mike Flanagan finished with one-run, two-hit relief for his third save. He struck out three and walked one.

David Wells (13-10) gave up four runs and nine hits in 5⅓ innings, struck out three and walked one.

Baltimore, which ended a three-game losing streak, won for only the second time in eight games.

Angels 2, Red Sox 0

BOSTON — Mark Langston beat Boston for the third time this season and Dave Parker drove in the go-ahead run with his 2,700th career hit.

Langston (16-7) allowed four hits in 6⅓ innings, struck out three and walked two. Mark Eichhorn escaped a one-out jam with runners on second and third in the seventh and pitched a perfect eighth before Bryan Harvey finished for his 35th save.

Mike Gardiner (6-7), who had won his three previous starts, allowed six hits in 5⅓ innings, struck out seven and walked two.

Langston retired the first 11 batters in order before Carlos Quintana walked and Greenwell doubled with two outs in the fourth. Ellis Burks then grounded out.

Brewers 5, A's 3

MILWAUKEE — Robin Yount hit a three-run homer in the ninth inning and the Brewers rallied from a three-run deficit to beat Oakland.

Jim Gantner hit his first home run in four years in the seventh inning and B.J. Surhoff hit his fifth home run in the eighth.

Milwaukee then rallied in the ninth off Dennis Eckersley (3-3), who blew his seventh save opportunity in 43 chances. Bill Spiers walked, Willie Randolph singled and Darryl Hamilton hit into a fielder's choice. Yount followed with his 10th home run, his first since May 26.

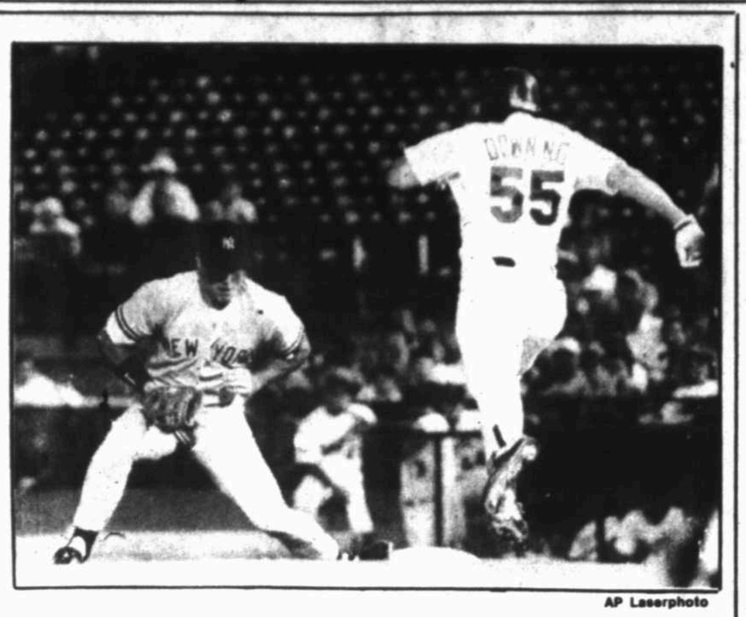

Edwin Nunez (2-1) pitched a perfect ninth.

Royals 8, White Sox 0

CHICAGO — Danny Tartabull hit a pair of two-run homers for the sixth multiple-home run game of his career and Kevin Appier pitched a five-hitter to lead Kansas City over Chicago.

Bo Jackson, in his second game of his comeback, went 0-for-4, making him hitless in seven at-bats. He struck out twice and grounded out twice.

Smoltz puts Braves back on track, 4-1

Associated Press

MONTREAL — John Smoltz pitched six-hit ball for 6⅔ innings and David Justice drove in three runs with a pair of hits as the Braves snapped a three-game losing streak with a 4-1 victory over the Expos on Tuesday night.

Atlanta started the day tied for first in the NL West with the Los Angeles Dodgers.

The Braves managed only four hits, but took advantage of five walks issued by Montreal pitcher Brian Barnes as they sent the Expos to their first loss in five games.

Smoltz (11-13) struck out three and walked three as he won for the eighth time in his last 10 decisions. Alejandro Pena, acquired from the New York Mets last week, pitched the final two innings for his first save as a Brave and his fifth of the season.

Barnes (3-6) lasted only five innings, allowing three hits and four runs. Atlanta went ahead in the first inning after Lonnie Smith led off with a single and Jeff Blauser drew a walk. Smith took third on Terry Pendleton's fly to right and scored on Ron Gant's sacrifice fly.

Mets 6, Astros 1

NEW YORK — Howard Johnson, making his first outfield start since 1986, drove in two runs to help the Mets to a victory over Houston.

Johnson doubled home a run in the Mets' three-run first and singled in another in a three-run fifth that helped Anthony Young (1-1) to his first major league win.

Young allowed seven hits over the first seven innings, walking none and striking out six. Tim Burke pitched two scoreless innings in relief for the Mets.

Astros starter Mark Portugal (10-7) helped the Mets with a wild throw in the first inning after Keith Miller led off with a walk, and Dave Magadan hit a tap back to Portugal.

Johnson doubled to score Miller from third and Kevin McReynolds doubled two more runs home.

New York made it 6-0 in the fifth on Johnson's RBI single, an RBI single by Mackey Sasser and Kevin Elster's sacrifice fly.

Reds 8, Phillies 5

PHILADELPHIA — Jose Rijo won his fourth straight start, and Chris Sabo hit a two-run homer as the Reds ended their four-game losing streak by defeating Philadelphia.

Rijo allowed nine hits, struck out four and walked one in seven innings to improve his record to 12-4. He has won 11 of his last 13 decisions covering 17 starts. Rob Dibble pitched two scoreless innings to gain his 28th save in 30 opportunities.

Padres 4, Cubs 1

SAN DIEGO — Andy Benes won his seventh straight decision, pitching a seven-hitter as the Padres beat Chicago.

National

Celebration ends as Cowboys eye 'Skins

Associated Press

IRVING — The Cowboys got Redskins-serious at Valley Ranch on Tuesday after a day of celebrating a victory in their season opener.

"When you see what Washington did to Detroit it sobers you up quick," Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson of Washington's 45-0 win over the Lions. "The Redskins were as impressive of a team as I've seen in the NFL."

"You can see why everybody picked them to be a Super Bowl contender."

The Redskins will meet Dallas at Texas Stadium in the Cowboys first regular season Monday night game since 1988, when they fell to New Orleans 20-17.

The game is the first on Monday night in Texas Stadium since Nov. 2, 1987, when the Cowboys defeated the New York Giants 33-24.

He said the Cowboys' 26-14 defeat of Cleveland Sunday "was one of the better offensive performances since I've been with the Cowboys. We had 25 first downs."

Dallas escaped the game with few injuries although quarterback Troy Aikman needed seven stiches for a cut chin.

Asked if he was pumped about being on Monday night, Johnson replied: "Not really."

"I get excited playing Washington and I know Monday Night Football is exciting for our fans and players. But if you don't perform well you'd just as soon not played in the game," the coach said.

Owner Jerry Jones was a little more demonstrative.

"It's a bigtime game," Jones said. "It's what the NFL is all about."

Jones said it's a pat on the back for the Cowboys to be back in the national spotlight in their third season under a new regime.

"I wouldn't have thought three years ago that we would be at the level we're at right now," he said. "We're just one-point underdogs to Washington. Now, that's a step-up."

Johnson said the Cowboys will have to "step-up" their game to stay with the Redskins.

"We'll have to turn it up another level to stay with them," Johnson said.

Johnson's first NFL victory, the only one of his rookie 1989 season, was against Washington. The Cowboys defeated Washington 27-17 last Thanksgiving Day and nearly knocked them out of the playoffs.

"We do seem to pick it up a notch against Washington," Johnson said.

Johnson is 3-3 against the Redskins. Last year's victory at Texas Stadium marked the first Dallas home victory over Washington since 1986. The two teams have met six times on Monday nights with each club winning three.

OPEN: Deep returns thwart Fernandez' bid for an upset

(From 1C)

Fernandez, a cousin of movie actor Jose Ferrer, didn't act much like a serious threat on the court as she sprayed 36 unforced errors in her first match against Seles, who made only 10 errors.

Seles started as if she were out to break the record for fastest match of the tournament, winning the first four games in 12 minutes while not dropping a point on serve against a player appearing in her first Grand Slam quarterfinal.

"I don't think that I was so much nervous or impressed by the event as much as by her game," Fernandez said. "She came out really strong and she was jumping all over my serve and serving really well.

"She is always fighting and thinking. She is a very smart player, very tenacious, and keeps coming at you. If you look at her you don't think she is a tennis player. She is not built like a tennis player, but her mind just keeps her in there."

Seles agreed totally with that assessment.

"I think all the great players have that," she said. "I mean, Chris, Martina, also Jimmy Connors, Mac, everybody. I think you have to have that. I mean you can't be a dead person on the court.

"Like yesterday, Connors down 5-2, a lot of players would have just given up, forget it, hey, 5-2. Connors, he fights down even to the last points. I think these are challengers, that is why they are so good."

A brief lapse in the fifth game, and a sudden spate of alert, aggressive net play by Fernandez, led to a break of Seles' service at 15-40.

But Fernandez still couldn't cope with Seles' deep returns of service, and Seles came back to close out the set at love with a forehand crosscourt that Fernandez couldn't reach.

Fernandez finally held to start the second set, then held again after five deuces in the third game to make it 2-1. Seles ran into a little resistance with three break points in the fourth game, but pulled out the game and cruised through the next three while dropping only four points.

Serving for the match, Seles again faced a break point but was saved by still another Fernandez mistake, an easy backhand return into the net. Fernandez saved two match points but succumbed on the third with a backhand that caught the net cord and bounced back.

"When she hits the ball with both hands, it is hard to read," Fernandez said. "When she is climbing all over your balls, and you don't know which way it is going to be, she is going to get a lot of winners."

Irish signal caller begins defense

Holtz stands behind Mirer as season opener draws near

Associated Press

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — Notre Dame quarterback Rick Mirer, recovered from the shock of being handcuffed and hauled off to jail by police, defended himself Tuesday against accusations of drunken and disorderly conduct.

"It was a misunderstanding, and the only thing I can say about that is I was not publicly intoxicated and my conduct was not disorderly," he said.

"I don't know what's going to happen in the next few days, but I've got nothing to hide, and I don't have to tell lies to anybody."

Coach Lou Holtz left no doubts he's squarely behind the starter who hopes to lead the Irish squad throughout the 1991 season.

He called the involvement of Mirer and linebacker Demetrius DuBose in the Friday off-campus party that attracted 500 people a "very innocent thing."

The security officer at the apartment complex where the two were arrested had instructions to call police if the crowd "became large," he said.

"The security man who called the police told me that there was no rowdiness, that there was no problem, no destruction," Holtz said.

For now, starting positions for Mirer and DuBose appear secure. Holtz said he would discipline both, not suspend either. The two still might face discipline by the university Office of Student Affairs.

No formal charges have been filed.

Although Notre Dame appeared to close ranks behind its star quarterback, the arrests caused dissension within the city police department.

An internal memo written by an acting shift commander criticizes a police spokesman for siding with Mirer, according to a report published Tuesday.

After Mirer and DuBose were released on $100 bonds, police department spokesman Lt. Norval J. Williams drove the pair to the South Bend Tribune to give reporters their side of the story.

"They weren't drunk," Williams said. "I think it was a case of them being at the wrong place at the wrong time."

Pat Bradley celebrates her 28th LPGA title.

Bradley sets LPGA record

Associated Press

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. — During rain delays at the LPGA Rail Charity Classic, Pat Bradley sat alone playing the course in her mind — getting birdies on every hole.

Then she put her imagination to work Tuesday, winning her 28th tournament and setting a 54-hole LPGA record.

"It was a very productive rain delay for me — very productive," she said.

Bradley finished the $400,000 event with a 19-under-par 197, besting the 198 posted on 54 holes by Jan Stephenson in the 1981 Mary Kay Classic. Bradley's 28th victory on the LPGA tour left her just two short of the 30 needed to automatically enter the Hall of Fame.

Danielle Ammaccapane moved into second with a birdie on the 18th, finishing six strokes behind Bradley with a 13-under 203.

Laura Davies played a lackluster final round, dropping from a tie with Bradley to seven strokes back. She finished 12- under.

Meg Mallon also finished seven strokes back, bogeying her final hole to finish at 5-under for the final round and 12-under for the tournament.

Rain and lightning forced a two-hour delay Monday, giving Bradley plenty of time to visualize breezing through the course.

STARS: Allen blames turf

(From 1C)

As always, the reason for the injuries vary.

Allen blames artificial turf.

But Cunningham went down on the grass in Green Bay when linebacker Bryce Paup hit him head-on in the knee. Montana's muscle tear isn't related to any surface.

Allen, however, speaks for a lot of players.

"I don't think there's a player in the league that likes the stuff," Allen said. "That stuff should not be used by anybody."

The prognosis?

Sanders should be back — probably this week.

And Smith's absence only makes Buffalo more exciting.

No one can stop the Bills' offense and the defense doesn't seem able to stop anyone. In the Bills' 35-31 victory over the Dolphins, nose tackle Jeff Wright dislocated a kneecap and is out four weeks.

Foursome wins RHCC Chaparral

Prices slip

NEW YORK (AP) — Petroleum prices weakened in light trading Tuesday on word that OPEC nations were spewing more oil into the global supply stream, but the market largely recovered the loss by the time trading concluded.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, the price of West Texas Intermediate for October delivery fell as much as 20 cents a barrel but rebounded to close at $22.24, off 2 cents from the Friday close. The market was closed Monday for Labor Day.

Oil trading strategists said the market initially sold on a report from the International Energy Agency that the OPEC cartel had turned up production last month to the highest level of the year, led by a big increase in output from Saudi Arabia, the world's biggest oil exporter.

The agency estimated the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries pumped 23.6 million barrels of crude in August, 300,000 barrels more than a month earlier. Two-thirds of the increase came from Saudi wells.

Another potential market mover was expected late Wednesday, when the American Petroleum Institute reports weekly tallies of domestic production, imports and stockpiles. The numbers ordinarily are reported late Tuesday but were delayed by the Labor Day holiday.

Natural gas for October delivery fell .08 cent to $1.536 per 1,000 cubic feet. Later delivery months were mixed.

The Midland office of Edward D. Jones & Co., 1509 W. Wall, will hold a workshop for new employees on the Midland Independent School District matching annuity/retirement plan today, Thursday and next Tuesday at 4:45 p.m. and 5:25 p.m. Each session will last 20 to 25 minutes.

Reservations are recommended as the meetings are designed for 10 at a time, and can be made by calling 683-1516.

T bills fall

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interest rates on short-term Treasury securities fell in Tuesday's auction.

The Treasury Department sold $10.6 billion in three-month bills at an average discount rate of 5.34 percent, down from 5.40 percent last week. Another $10.6 billion was sold in six-month bills at an average discount rate of 5.39 percent, down from 5.47 percent last week.

The three-month bill rate was the lowest since they sold for 5.17 percent on Aug. 19. The six-month bill rate was the lowest since they averaged 5.23 percent, also on Aug. 19.

Perot group looks at Continental

■ Investors led by the son of Dallas billionaire Ross Perot have talked with Continental Airlines about a buyout of current management.

HOUSTON (AP) — An investor group led by Ross Perot Jr. is talking to Continental Airlines about buying into the financially troubled carrier, an airline spokesman said Tuesday.

The Houston-based airline, which has been under Chapter 11 protection of the federal bankruptcy laws since December, confirmed Wall Street Journal reports Tuesday that discussions have been held.

Perot

Perot, son of Dallas billionaire Ross Perot, has held talks about the possibility of a buyout with Continental's current management, some of its creditors and an official from the U.S. Transportation Department.

"We have had very preliminary discussions with the Perot group as well as other investor groups," Continental spokesman Ned Walker said Tuesday. "At this stage, they are simply discussions, not negotiations."

Perot could not be reached immediately for comment. He was not in his Dallas office Tuesday.

The Journal quoted Perot as saying, "Really, we're sitting down and figuring out how the pieces come together."

The newspaper said Perot indicated the investment group could include the air express courier Federal Express Co. and two unidentified foreign airlines.

Walker refused to say which airlines were included in the Perot group and declined any further comment. Federal transportation guidelines limit foreign carriers to holding no more than 49 percent of the equity in a U.S. airline.

The Journal said Federal Express, based in Memphis, Tenn., said that it is not considering a Continental buyout, but confirmed that it had discussions about being a user of Alliance Airport, a cargo and industrial airport in Fort Worth.

The airport was developed by Perot Group, which was founded by Perot's father. The younger Perot has been trying to attract commercial airlines into locating their maintenance facilities there, the Journal said.

The newspaper said Perot's talks first centered on that possibility before they were broadened to include a possible investment.

EWC bankruptcy sticks retailers

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Hundreds of retailers and consumers across the country, including the nation's largest retailer, Wal-Mart, want an Oklahoma City-based company to make good on its extended warranties.

EWC Inc. closed its doors and filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy reorganization in mid-July, leaving unpaid repair claims on televisions, video games and major appliances.

Some companies are apparently backing up their customer's claims pending a resolution to the case, while others are not.

"In the past month and a half, we've gotten 1,000 written complaints," said Jane Wheeler, assistant attorney general in Oklahoma. "All last year, we received for the whole year 1,500 complaints."

Ms. Wheeler said an estimated 60,000 Oklahoma consumers could be affected by the case. In those terms, "it's one of the biggest, maybe the biggest" the office has handled.

EWC has reportedly sold an estimated 3 million warranties. It lists $3 million in repair claims from 1,500 service companies and 300 consumers nationwide. It also lists a $2.3 million trust fund. A reorganization plan is due in October.

Baird Trice, president of EWC, testified in court that the company's prob-

Back-to-school sales disappoint stores

N.Y. Times News Service

As children across the nation head back to school, they will be wearing fewer new clothes and shoes and carrying fewer new accessories than many retailers had hoped they would.

At many stores, back-to-school sales have been disappointing, executives say, and retailers have been forced to cut prices to generate sales.

Retailing experts say weak spending bodes ill for the rest of the important fall and Christmas shopping season, which retailers rely on for the bulk of their profits.

Retailers will not release official sales figures for August until Thursday, but preliminary reports paint a gloomy picture for merchants.

"Back-to-school has not been great," Edward A. Brennan, chairman and chief executive of Sears, Roebuck & Co., said in a recent interview. "Back-to-school has been spotty."

Sandra Shaber, an economist with the Futures Group, a consulting firm in Washington, said, "A lot of hopes have been put on consumer spending, but it has been extremely erratic."

Several bright spots exist, notably at discounters like Wal-Mart Stores Inc. and Kmart Corp.

"We are extremely pleased with our sales," said Michele Miladinov, the head stationery buyer for Kmart in Troy, Mich. "We are well ahead of last year." Hot sellers include notebooks and organizers emblazoned with a fluorescent Mickey Mouse.

Back-to-school sales are considered an important barometer of consumers' mood before the critical Christmas selling season.

Building increase points to recovery

WASHINGTON (AP) — Residential and government spending helped boost the value of new construction 1.6 percent in July, the government said Tuesday in a report that analysts said showed the building industry continues making a spotty recovery from the recession.

"These data support the impression that the industry is improving, albeit at a moderate pace," said economist Marilyn Schaja of Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette Securities Corp. in New York.

"But the real strength continues to be outside the commercial and non-residential sectors in general," added Daryl Delano of Cahners Economics in Newton, Mass.

Overall, residential, non-residential and government spending totaled a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $404.9 billion, up from $398.7 billion a month earlier, according to the Commerce Department report.

Spending in June actually fell 0.1 percent rather than posting a 0.3 percent gain as was initially estimated a month ago. That made the July increase the first since a 1.0 percent advance in April.

Residential spending rose 2.2 percent, to $161.9 billion, its third consecutive monthly increase. But the gain was entirely in the single-family sector, which jumped 5.1 percent, to $96.7 billion — also the third straight increase.

"Housing is bouncing back despite some hesitation," Delano said, noting the 8.5 percent drop in new home sales in July. Declining sales often mean a slower rate of construction.

Spending on apartment projects continued to slide for the seventh straight month. This sector, which has been slowed by overbuilding and the credit crunch, was down 6.8 percent, to $13.8 billion.

Non-residential spending inched up 0.8 percent, to $95.2 billion, after falling for two months. But the increase largely was centered in industrial projects, which rose 4.7 percent, their second consecutive gain.

"The private, non-residential sector still has some way to go before it hits bottom, particularly on the commercial side," Delano said.

He noted that hotel spending was off 51 percent from July 1990. Spending on other commercial projects, such as shopping centers, was down 32 percent.

Despite budget constraints, government spending rose 1.9 percent, to $109.9 billion, erasing a 0.2 percent loss in June.

The National Association of Accountants, which has a Permian Basin chapter, has changed its name to the Institute of Management Accountants, a move designed to more clearly reflect the group's focus.

In addition, the Permian Basin chapter reports that it has placed first in chapter competition for the second year in a row. The chapter received the Warner Trophy at the annual meeting in Chicago, given to the chapter placing first in the Warner Division, which has over 140 chapters nationwide with 125 members or less.

IMA members range from accountants and financial personnal beginning their careers to presidents and chairmen of major corporations. Certified public accountants, educators, students, and others involved with federal, state and local governments are also members.

The organization has 94,000 members and more than 300 chapters across the U.S.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Limited partnerships often offer limited options

By Bill Doyle

Q. Our question concerns the limited partnerships we bought through a broker when we retired. We invested $47,000 and now know these are not retirement types of investments. We told the broker we wanted income and safety, but he sold the partnerships to us anyway.

Doyle

Initially, we were told the partnerships would be paid off within 10 years. That was six years ago and now we cannot get any date when the partnerships will end.

The general partner and the broker tell us there is no resale market for our partnership units. Do we have any options?

A. One option is to hang on and hope everything works out. If that happens, whatever the partnership owns will be sold, the partnership dissolved and its assets distributed to you and the other partners.

Note I wrote "hope.: Many limited partnerships — "LPs," for short — have been investment disasters. An LP is run by a general partner, who collects fees — often disproportionately high in comparison to what limited partners receive.

The limited partners put up the money to purchase the real estate or whatever else the partnership owns, which can be anything from a jet passenger plane to oil wells, railroad boxcars or computers. Even Broadway plays.

While the LP operates, limited partners usually receive payments in the form of income and, sometime, returns of capital. When everything is sold, limited partners might or might not come out with profits.

However, with the word there is no resale market for your LP units, things don't look very hopeful on that score. If that LP was operating profitably, your units could be sold. There's no central marketplace for LP units, but there is an informal secondary market in which about a dozen dealers buy and sell.

You might be able to learn what dealers, if any, would buy your units and an idea of recent prices by phoning Robert A. Stanger & Co. at 900-786-9600. That's a $5 per minute toll call. The Stanger firm specializes in reports on LPs.

Q. I have limited partnership units in my individual retirement account. What must I do with them after I reach age 70 1/2 and am required to start taking money out of my IRA?

A. The easy thing would be to sell one or more of your LP units each year, so that you receive enough money to satisfy the minimum required IRA withdrawal. That mandatory withdrawal, of course, is based on your life expectancy or the joint life expectancy of you and your IRA beneficiary.

Here, we're assuming you're able to sell. That isn't always possible and it's a major reason not to have LP units in an IRA or any other retirement plan from which there must be mandatory withdrawals.

If you have other securities in your IRA, you can sell them to meet the withdrawal requirements. However, you're in a bit of a fix if you have nothing but LP units in your IRA and those units can't be sold.

In that case, you'll have to arrange for a "distribution in kind" — a transfer of LP units to some other account you have at the brokerage firm or bank trustee of your IRA. The transfer will be at net asset value of the LP units, as posted by the IRA trustee.

Q. I fear my father, who is getting along in years, made a major mistake by investing $50,000 in limited partnership units. Dad is very wealthy, so the potential loss of $50,000 would not really hurt him. What I worry about is the possibility he might be held liable for debts the partnership might incur through its operations and from law suits, etc.

I have met the general partner and, frankly, I neither like nor trust him. What do you advise?

A. That you stop worrying and relax. Assuming the partnership agreement is properly drawn, your father cannot be held liable for any more than the $50,000 he has already put up.

That's one of the big selling points of LPs. The limited partners' losses are limited to the amount originally invested.

If you are still concerned about this, my suggestion is to have the partnership papers studied by an attorney who specializes in LPs.

Comedian smacks S&L owner with wig

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A comic claiming he lost money in a collapsed savings and loan bank swatted Charles H. Keating Jr., its owner, with a powdered wig Tuesday during a break in Keating's trial.

Keating was hit with the wig outside the courtroom where he's on trial on 20 counts of duping Lincoln Savings investors into believing high-yield, high-risk bonds were safe.

Lincoln's $2.6 billion failure was the biggest ever. Many elderly investors — including at least one who committed suicide — lost their life savings on Keating's junk bonds, and the case has become a symbol of the nation's S&L disasters.

"This is for America!" yelled comedian Skip E. Lowe, pulling a powdered blonde wig from a tote bag and swinging it at Keating's head.

"The jerk! He killed people," said Lowe, a short 62-year-old.

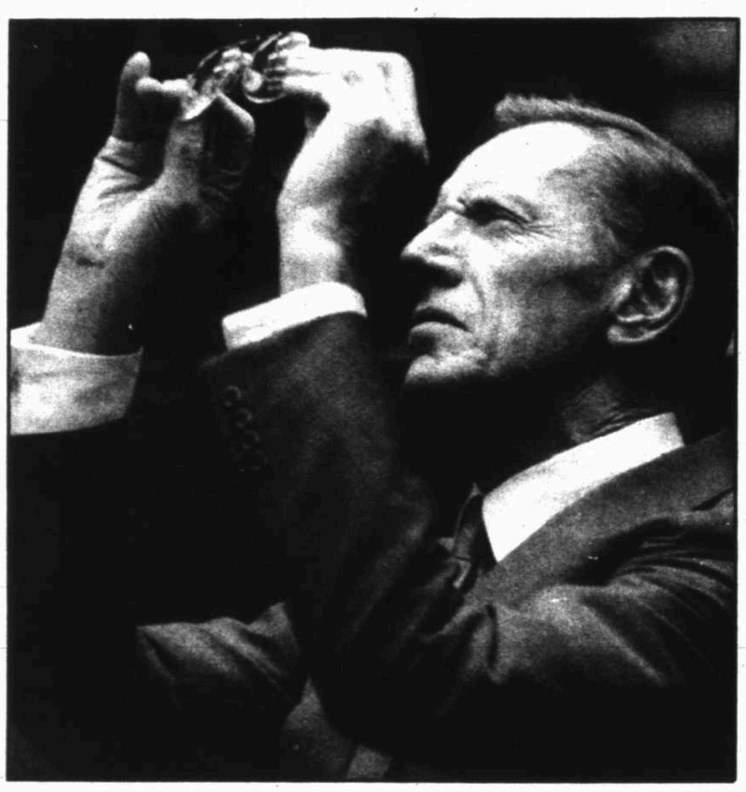

Lowe was unable to reach the head of the 6-foot-5 Keating with his wild swings. But he connected twice with Keating's shoulder, sending showers of powder into the air.

In an interview, Lowe said he lost a large amount of money he made entertaining troops in Vietnam. A friend who said she toured with him, Margee McGlory, said she lost $50,000 and Lowe lost $100,000 on bonds sold by American Continental Corp., Lincoln's parent company.

It was the second physical confrontation with Keating during his month-old trial.

At the end of the trial's first day, a 72-year-old woman who lost $5,000 on Lincoln bonds pushed her way to the front of the court and grabbed Keating by the lapels, shouting: "You took all my money away."

Like Lowe, the woman was led away by bailiffs but not arrested.

Japan officials widen scandal probe scope

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's finance minister said Tuesday his ministry is expanding its inquiry of Nomura Securities Co., which allegedly recommended a railway company's stock to customers after a client with underworld connections had made large purchases of it.

Also Tuesday, a Socialist lawmaker said a Finance Ministry document he obtained shows that Nomura, the world's largest brokerage, drove up the price of Tokyu Corp. shares, earning the underworld figure millions of dollars.

Finance Ministry officials said the document was not an official ministry report. But Kyodo News Service quoted an unidentified Finance Ministry official as saying the ministry is considering temporarily suspending Nomura from conducting business for the alleged stock manipulation.

Neither the report nor Finance Minister Ryutaro Hashimoto, testifying in Parliament, explicitly accuse Nomura of stock manipulation, which is illegal in Japan. But he said "there were problems" with its trading of Tokyu Corp. shares, and that his ministry was investigating its trading activities.

Since the far-reaching stock scandal broke out in Japan two months ago, Hashimoto, a prime minister hopeful, has been under pressure to resign to take responsibility for the ministry's loose supervision of the securities industry.

Socialist Toshihisa Matsuura said the document he obtained concludes that Nomura began pushing up Tokyu share prices after purchases by Susumu Ishii, the former boss of Inagawa-kai gangster group.

Ishii, who died Tuesday at a Tokyo hospital at age 67, had bought 10 million shares of Tokyu stock from Nomura and 14 million shares from Nikko Securities Co. between April and August 1989, according to the document.

MOONLIGHTING!

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several distributorships which need to be filled with responsible individuals.

OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current distributor force is already 90% adult and 10% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:

- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a distributor, you do not need daycare!
- COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

How much money can I make as a distributor?

Depending on the size of the distributorship from $300 to $700 monthly! Some make even more!

How long does it take?

The actually delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship. Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?

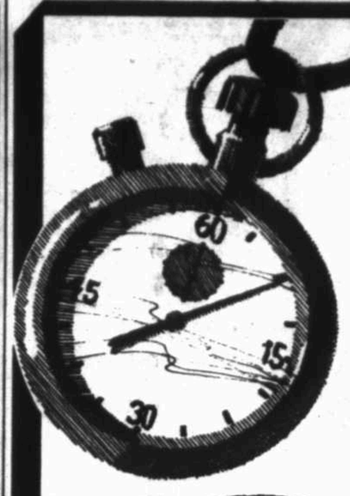

6 a.m. Monday - Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, distributors do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!
