Peace justice candidate withdraws

GOP nominee Sutton takes job in Abilene

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

"I believe that this decision is critical to my legal career. It was a very difficult decision to make." — Kent Sutton, Republican nominee

Kent Sutton, the 28-year-old Republican Party nominee for Midland County justice of the peace, has withdrawn his candidacy in the Nov. 4 general election, according to Dean Rucker, chairman of the Midland County Republican Party.

"I am sorry that I cannot represent the Republican Party in this contest," Sutton said today.

He bailed out of the candidacy to become an assistant attorney in the Taylor County District Attorney's Office in Abilene.

"But I believe that this decision is critical to my legal career. It was a very difficult decision to make."

Sutton was pitted against Justice of the Peace Robert H. "Bob" Pine, a Democrat, in the Nov. 4 general election. Pine, who has been justice of the peace since his appointment in late 1984, will be without opposition for re-election to his $35,000-a-year post.

"I'm just glad I won't have to spend this summer and fall campaigning," Pine said today. "I think he (Sutton) is doing the thing he wants to do. Now that he has his law license, there is no reason to do it (run for JP)."

At the time he had filed for candidacy in late January 1986, Sutton had not passed the State Bar of Texas examination to enable him to practice law in Texas. He has since passed the Bar exam.

"I think he's a good man," Pine said of Sutton. "I just don't want him having my job. I felt this was my job and has been for 21 years."

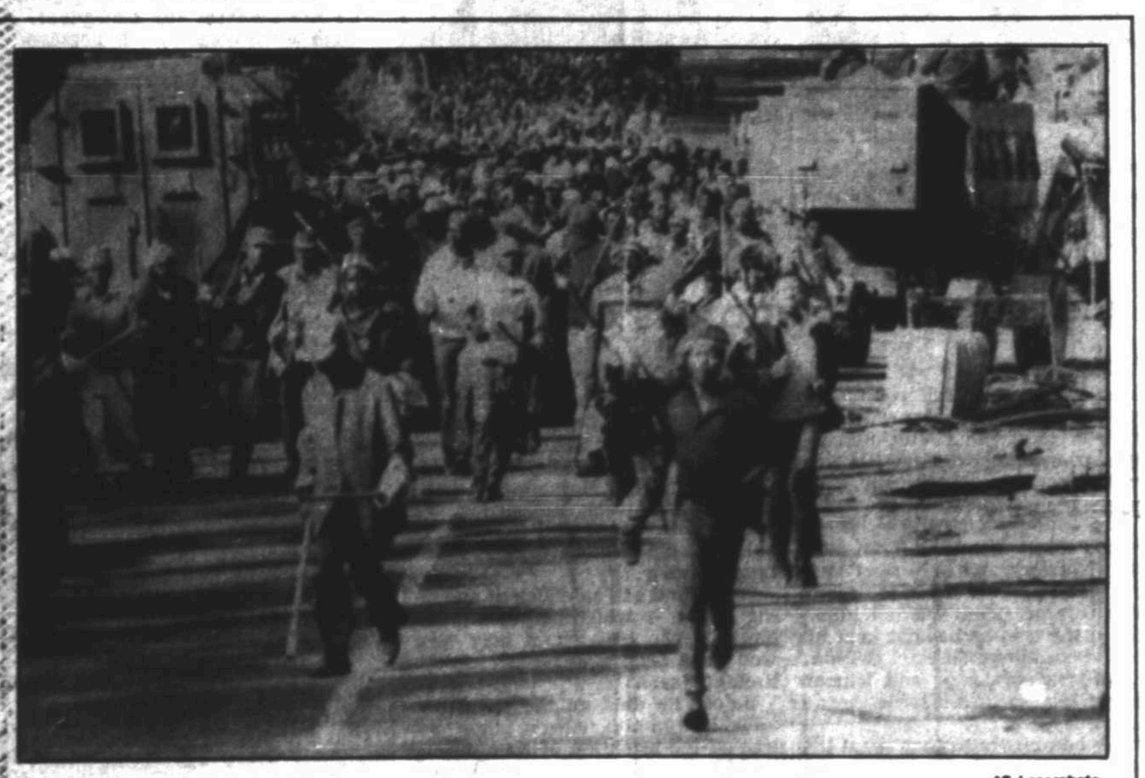

According to the Texas Election Code, the Republican Party here cannot appoint a replacement nominee, since the Democrats already have fielded a candidate and since Sutton's withdrawal was not keyed to a "catastrophic illness," Rucker said.

"We are sorry to lose an able candidate," Rucker said today, "but we wish Kent every success in his new position."

Sutton holds the law degree from the University of Tulsa College of Law. He holds the bachelor's degree in finance from Abilene Christian College, is a graduate of Midland's Robert E. Lee High School and is a Midland Jaycee.

Violence erupts in Cape Town, above, as about 1,000 Witdoeke (militant vigilantes) swarm through Defence Force lines en route to battle Comrades (radicals). A state of emergency has been declared in all of South Africa, where further racial violence is feared on Monday's anniversary of the Soweto riots.

Botha declares emergency

By MAUREEN JOHNSON

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — South Africa today declared a nationwide state of emergency and detained hundreds of anti-apartheid activists prior to Monday's 10th anniversary of the Soweto uprising.

President P.W. Botha's office announced he imposed the state of emergency, which took effect at one minute past midnight (6:01 p.m. EDT Wednesday) and covered the entire country. Botha was to address Parliament late this afternoon.

The new state of emergency was the government's most wideranging attempt to quell black unrest, which has claimed more than 1,600 lives in anti-apartheid violence since September 1984. A seven-month-long state of emergency lifted March 7 covered less than half the nation. During that state of emergency, 8,000 people were held without charge.

Under the emergency powers, published this afternoon in a government gazette, police can instruct anyone suspected of "endangering public order" to leave an area. If the order is not immediately obeyed, police can used whatever force they consider "necessary under the circumstances."

Police now also have the power the make arrests without warrants, impose curfews, seize property and ban journalists from areas of unrest.

Botha declared the state of emergency after proposals to greatly increase security powers failed to win approval from the tricameral Parliament because of objections by the Indian and mixed-race chambers.

The Azanian People's Organization, a black movement whose officials were detained today, reacted to the state of emergency declaration by urging blacks "not to be intimidated by these totalitarian measures." The group said blacks should stage strikes to mark the anniversary of the June 16, 1976 riots in the black township of Soweto.

The Soweto uprising set off a chain of violence nationwide that persisted for more than a year and claimed at least 575 lives. The riots are seen by anti-apartheid leaders as a turning point in the struggle to free South African's 24 million voteless blacks from domination by the country's 5 million whites.

China trip holds special meaning for Midlanders

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

Rowland Kwok-Ho Wong will be visiting his homeland for the first time, while Barry Beck will return to where he lived as a small boy.

Wong and Beck are among 29 Permian Basin residents departing Friday morning for a 16-day cultural trip to China. Five Odessans and 24 Midlanders will travel to Beijing (Peking) and several other Chinese cities before reaching Dongying to formalize a sister city arrangement between Midland and Dongying. About 1.5 million people live in Dongying, located on the delta region of the Yellow River. Unlike American cities, Chinese cities tend to spread out over several counties taking all rural areas within their jurisdiction, Beck said.

"A city will take in considerable rural territory in China, whereas here, when rural boundaries start, city boundaries stop," he said.

Dongying produces 22 percent of China's oil and the city's mayor, Tang Shenghai, is a petroleum engineer. The group hopes to set up both economic and cultural exchange between Midland and Dongying.

Wong, 32, the executive director of Midland's YMCA, said he hopes to establish an exchange program for YMCA teams and athletes between Midland and Dongying. But Wong said he is also excited about getting to see his homeland for the first time. Wong, born and raised in Hong Kong, left the British colony in 1974 to come to the United States. Wong said he never was never able to travel to China when he lived in Hong Kong, because the communist country was closed to most outsiders.

Wong said he expects to be welcomed home "with open arms" from the mainland Chinese.

"I expect friendliness because overseas Chinese are always welcomed home with open arms," Wong said.

Despite his heritage, Wong said mainlanders will be able to tell he's a visitor by the way he dresses and talks. Wong speaks and writes Chinese and said he hopes to promote cultural understanding on the trip.

Beck, a 43-year-old Midland civil attorney, said he has always been interested in China after living there for two years as a boy. Beck lived in one of the major port cities, Qingdao, with his parents after World War II when his dad was stationed there as a Marine officer. Qingdao will be one stop along the way to Dongying.

Changes in tax plan averted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Landmark tax overhaul legislation has cleared a major hurdle in the Senate with sponsors of the measure turning aside a series of amendments aimed at restoring tax-deductible Individual Retirement Accounts for all workers.

"Clearly, we're not going to have any major change in the outline of the bill," said Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., the Senate Finance Committee chairman.

Meanwhile, President Reagan continued to lead the cheering for the bill as he opened a nationally broadcast news conference Wednesday night saying the measure before the Senate was "one of the best poverty programs, one of the best job-creation programs and one of the best pro-family bills this country has ever seen, all rolled into one."

The administration supports the measure approved by the Senate Finance Committee, including its proposal to eliminate full IRA deductions for many Americans.

Across the Capitol, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., said today that the IRA deduction has primarily benefited only upper income people.

"It's a mighty loophole for the wealthy of America, there's no question about it," O'Neill said.

O'Neill suggested that some change in the tax rules should be made to encourage lower income taxpayers to make IRA contributions.

With the fight on IRAs out of the way, the Senate moved on today to other amendments, including a move by Sen. Charles E. Grassley, R-Iowa, to deny foreign tax credits to U.S. companies doing business in countries that support international terrorism. It was aimed primarily at Libya.

Also among the pending amendments was one by Sen. Gordon Humphrey, R-N.H., that would remove tax-exempt status from organizations that perform or finance abortions.

The president told Republican congressional leaders earlier this week that while he is opposed to abortions, he also is opposed to attaching the amendment to the tax bill.

Asked if he conceded it would be an uphill battle to gain approval of the amendment on this bill, Humphrey said, "I don't need to concede it, it's obvious." He added that he may not formally offer the amendment until next week.

Senior services to be honored

From Staff Reports

Community and Senior Services of Midland has been selected, along with 70 other organizations nationwide, to receive the Presidential Citation Award for Private Sector Initiatives.

Steve Edwards, executive director of Community and Senior Services, will receive the citation for the agency. The awards ceremony will be held at both the U.S. Chamber of Commerce and the White House on June 18.

Community and Senior Services was chosen from more than 1,500 entries for its role in finding private solutions to public problems. The Presidential awards are given to agencies and corporations in recognition for exceptional contributions to volunteerism and community service.

The President's Citation Program for Private Sector Initiatives was developed in 1984 to encourage the growth of community and voluntary services on the part of business, social service agencies and professional societies.

Community and Senior Services is a private, nonprofit social service and home health agency. It is funded by foundations, grants from the United Way, churches, corporations, individuals and revenues from the Visiting Nurse Service.

Its purpose is to determine human needs of individuals within this community which are not being acted upon by other agencies, organizations or churches.

Programs and needed services are designed and implemented to alleviate recognized concerns and/or sufferings.

TSTA attorneys again oppose TECAT in court of appeals

By GARY RASP
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Attorneys representing the Texas State Teachers Association again argued that a mandatory reading-and-writing test for teachers is unconstitutional Wednesday in the 3rd District Court of Appeals.

State lawyers again defended the test and repeated their claim that the state has the right to decertify teachers who fail to pass the Texas Examination of Current Administrators and Teachers.

Wednesday's action stems from District Judge Harley Clark's March 3 ruling that the TECAT is constitutional.

Almost 97 percent of the state's 200,000 Texas teachers and administrators passed both the reading and writing sections of the TECAT on March 10. A second test is scheduled for June 28.

The 3rd Court of Appeals heard oral arguments from both sides Wednesday but did not rule on the matter. The Texas Supreme Court is scheduled to take up a similar lawsuit challenging the TECAT June 18.

Robert Chanin, a Washington, D.C. lawyer representing the National Education Association and the TSTA in the case, argued that teaching certificates are not licenses, but rather permanent contracts between the state and its employers.

"We are not dealing here with ordinary licenses," Chanin told the court. "We are dealing here with a special certificate with special language that accorded special status."

Chanin also argued that House Bill 72, the 1984 reform measure that mandates the TECAT, directs the State Board of Education to test teachers for "substantive knowlege" in specific subject areas before administering the literacy test teachers took in March.

Assistant Attorney General Kevin O'Hanlon, who defended the statute for the state, argued that legislators did not appropriate enough funds to administer the more expensive subject matter tests. The TECAT, O'Hanlon said, is merely a "new instrument" for the state to measure its teachers' ability to do their jobs.

But Chanin countered that local school districts — not the state board — are responsible for evaluating the results of the test.

School districts "have the power, and they have the authority to hire and fire teachers," Chanin said. "The state of Texas has ultimate power unless it gives some it away, and it has."

TSTA President Charles Beard of Beaumont repeated his claim that a single test cannot adequately measure a teacher's ability to teach. "We've said all along that the removal of teachers' certificate based on one test is unlawful," Beard said.

As far as Chanin's contention that individual school boards should decide whether a teacher is qualified, Beard said, "If there are incompetent teachers in this state, there is at least a (local) supervisor who is aware of that, and they've always had the right to terminate employ-

Dear Friends,

To the many people who supported me and worked so hard on my behalf during the primary and run-off all I can say is "thank you from the bottom of my heart." Naturally, I am disappointed at the results but the worst part is the feeling that all of your efforts were wasted. For this I am truly sorry.

Interestingly enough, as I write this on Monday morning, the world has not come to an end and, though the votes came up short, I consider myself the winner because of you. I am proud that you supported my consistent positions and I intend to spend the rest of the year contributing what I can for the best interests of our community. My commitments have not changed.

Again, thank you so very much.

Most sincerely,
C. Wallace Craig

GAO says Nicaraguan aid diverted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional investigators say millions of dollars of U.S. non-lethal aid intended for Nicaraguan rebels were diverted to offshore bank accounts, the Honduran military and individuals in the United States.

The General Accounting Office, Congress' investigative arm, testified Wednesday that its review of subpoenaed bank records showed only a small fraction of the money going to suppliers who sold food, medicine and clothing to the U.S.-backed Contra rebels.

"The information that the subcommittee has received in response to these subpoenas surpassed my worst fears," said Rep. Michael Barnes, D-Md., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs subcommittee on Latin America. "It can only be described as shocking."

In one example cited by GAO, a rebel broker received $3.3 million from the U.S. government to pay for supplies listed in invoices that the rebels gave the State Department. But bank records show only $150,000 went to those suppliers in Central America, with the rest going to individuals and corporations in the United States or to offshore accounts in the Cayman Islands.

In another case, almost $1.5 million went to "the armed forces of a country in the region," including a check for $450,000 to the "commander-in-chief of the armed forces." GAO would not identify the country involved, but Barnes said it was Honduras.

Congressional sources speaking only on condition of anonymity said the check to the commander-in-chief, who was then-Gen. Walter Lopez Reyes, was endorsed by another military official.

Sources also identified one of the Cayman Island banks involved as BAC International, which is owned by Nicaraguan nationals. The Associated Press reported earlier this year that BAC International was used previously to launder CIA funds for the rebels.

The GAO's investigation into the spending of $27 million in non-lethal rebel aid comes as President Reagan presses Congress to approve $100 million in military and other aid to the rebels fighting to overthrow Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government.

GAO said it was unclear whether the diversion amounted to fraud or was used to buy weapons. Barnes said he was referring the information obtained through the subpoenas to the Justice Department for possible criminal investigation.

Frank C. Conahan, GAO's director for international affairs, said of $4.4 million already analyzed, "We can trace only $785,674 as being paid into Central America ... and only $185,434 of this amount being paid to identified suppliers.

"Instead, most funds ... were disbursed in the United States or offshore banks. A significant portion of one broker account was not paid out and remained in the account."

Bosco Matamoros, spokesman for the Nicaraguan Democratic Force, FDN, the largest rebel army, criticized the GAO's findings as "a political effort to paralyze the American support" for the Contras.

The State Department's Nicaraguan Humanitarian Assistance Office has acknowledged trouble in fully accounting for the aid, but has insisted the food, clothing and medicines are arriving at rebel camps. The State Department had no immediate comment on the new GAO testimony.

House Republicans criticized the Democrats for publicizing the problems of the Contra aid and drawing attention to the countries and individuals aiding the rebels.

Babies share need for heart transplants

Jesse's story

LOMA LINDA, Calif. (AP) — Baby Jesse's transplanted heart is beating normally but pleased hospital officials say he faces a lifelong battle against rejection and they cannot even guess how long that life might be.

The oldest survivor of a baby-to-baby heart transplant is six months old and officials said they don't have enough experience with such transplants to know what to expect.

Eighteen-day-old Baby Jesse, who received his new heart in a flurry of publicity spurred by his initial rejection for transplant consideration, is the fifth infant to receive a transplant at Loma Linda University Medical Center since November.

"Even in that first six months, we've seen on and off rejection crises," said Sandra Nehlsen-Cannarella, an immunologist specializing in tissue-typing. Adults who have survived 10 years with liver and heart transplants continue to have rejection crises, she said Wednesday.

Although Jesse should be able to live a nearly normal life, he will always have to take drugs to keep his immune system from attacking the donor heart.

Jesse Dean Sepulveda showed no signs of rejection in his first full day after the Tuesday night surgery, said Loma Linda spokeswoman Gracie Garner.

Jesse, born with a fatally defective heart, received the heart of a child born brain-dead in Grand Rapids, Mich., the same day Jesse was born, May 25.

"He's being weaned from ventilator support and everyone at the bedside is pleased with his progress," Ms. Garner said. Officially, his condition is listed as critical but stable. She said he was "waking appropriately" from the anesthetic used during the surgery and his vital signs were excellent.

Immediately after the operation, the baby was "soft and pink," said the chief surgeon, Dr. Leonard Bailey.

Chest X-rays taken Wednesday showed that fluid was clearing from Jesse's lungs — another good sign, said Dr. Bruce Branson, chairman of Loma Linda's surgery department.

Sen. Albert Gore Jr., D-Tenn., testifies before the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee.

Failure to form organ network violates law, senators charge

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration's failure to set up a nationwide computer network to match donors with people needing organ transplants violates the law, two Democratic senators said.

Both houses of Congress voted overwhelmingly in 1984 to set up the Organ Procurement and Transplantation Network and help start local agencies to procure donated organs.

But "the president has not implemented the law, he has not kept his word," Sen. Albert Gore Jr., D-Tenn., told the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee on Wednesday.

"This administration has spent the last 20 months still trying to get by without a national program and refusing to implement every single provision of the law," he said. "The cost to the country has been great. Countless families have suffered and many lives have been lost."

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., suggested that 9-month-old Alex Girard of Sharon, Mass., might have survived liver transplant surgery if a computer network had been available to help doctors find a donor more quickly.

"If we had had an efficient matching system — which had been mandated in the 1984 act, it may very well have been a different result," Kennedy said.

Before he died on the operating table last month, Alex's plight attracted the attention of Nancy Reagan. The first lady promised his parents that presidential jets would be available if necessary to deliver a donated liver.

Calvin's story

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The family of a baby with a fatal heart disease whose name was ahead of Baby Jesse's on a nationwide organ-recipient list is agonizing that their decision to stay anonymous may have been wrong, officials say.

"They may feel the reason they are not being chosen is because they didn't have someone call directly about them, or they haven't been on the news, they haven't been in the newspaper and maybe they need to do that to get a transplant," Nan Hamlyn, who coordinates the University of Louisville's organ-procurement agency, said Wednesday.

The infant at Kosair Children's Hospital, known simply as Baby Calvin, suffers from the same disease that afflicted Baby Jesse, said Dr. Constantine Mavroudis, the surgeon who will perform any transplant.

Both were born with hypoplastic left heart syndrome, a congenital defect that does not allow the left side of the heart — the main pumping chamber — to develop properly.

About 95 percent of infants born with the disease die before they are two months old, Mavroudis told a news conference Wednesday night.

He said Baby Calvin "could die at any time" and has a few weeks at the most unless a donor heart is found.

The 3-week-old infant has been on the nationwide organ-donor network since May 30, before Baby Jesse's name was added. Both babies were born May 25.

Jesse received the transplanted heart of a brain-dead Michigan infant Tuesday night in a flurry of nationwide publicity. The heart was donated after the parents heard TV news accounts of Jesse's parents' pleas for a heart transplant for their infant.

Loma Linda University Medical Center in California initially refused to schedule a transplant because it didn't believe Jesse's unwed parents could care for him properly after the operation.

"They (Calvin's parents) are frustrated. They wondered, too, if they would go public and divulge their names and say they are waiting would that help? Their main interest right now is their baby," Hamlyn said.

CHINA

"I've always been fascinated with China. We think of 100 years as being quite old. In China, of course, it's nothing at all. I have always admired their civilization, culture and art," Beck said.

The cost of the round trip is about $3,000, which some individuals are funding themselves, while others are being sent by their companies. The group was selected by invitation to travel to China, Beck said.

"We tried to invite people and tried to come up with a cross section of distinguishing people who would be representative of Midland," he said.

The Midland-Dongying Sister City Association hopes the program will grow to allow anyone who has a business to travel on future trips, Beck said. A Chinese delegation from Dongying also will be invited to visit Midland in October.

Others traveling to China include Keith Beck, a Midland High School student; Mayor Carroll Thomas, who is also a geologist; Lisa Ballew, a buyer of women's clothing; Jan Schneider, an Arabian horse breeder and homemaker; Betty Mayes, secretary-treasurer of Kodiak Oilfield Equipment; Ken Mayes, president of Kodiak Oilfield Equipment; John Landgraf, a civil engineer; Rhonda Durham, a homemaker; H.N. "Bud" Hensley, who is in oil field sales and technology; Beverly Landgraf, a homemaker; Steve Baskin, a college student; Marjorie Hill, an investor in oil and gas and a homemaker; Harold Schneider, president of United Pipe and Supply Inc.; Joan Baskin, president of the Midland Chamber of Commerce; Steve Hardin, with the chamber's economic and industrial development department; Melissa Pevehouse, vice president of Pevehouse Oil Company; Robert Reeves, a mining engineer and geologist; Elizabeth Reeves, a teacher, writer and editor; Mary Neelley, president of Neelley China Express Company and president of Neelley Public Relations & Advertising; Norma Webb, an artist, civic worker and teacher; James Hill, a general building contractor and investor; Pat Baskin, 142nd District Court judge; Lynn Durham Jr., vice president of Durham, Inc.; Charles Spence, publisher of the Midland Reporter-Telegram; Dr. Duane Leach, president of the University of Texas of the Permian Basin; Dick Dunbar, a certified public accountant; Ann Dunbar, a homemaker; Roger Dameron, president of Dameron Petroleum Corp. and Marsha Dameron, a homemaker and childbirth educator.

AWARD

Programs include the Visiting Nurse Service, Share-A-Meal, Midland Gold, Grocery Express, Seminars on the Aging Process, Counseling of older adults and families, Postal Alert, Handyman, Telephone Reassurance, as well as other special projects.

Volunteers in 1985 donated over 3,700 hours to these services and programs. There were over 5,500 participants in the programs.

Midland's Christmas in April won this award several years ago. The Christmas in April program involves volunteers making repairs on the houses of the elderly.

Winners of the Presidential Citation are requested to use their expertise and leadership in helping similar or new agencies in other areas throughout the country to develop their programs and services.

Christmas in April has assisted a number of cities nationally in implementing such a program. Community and Senior Services will use its programming concepts to aid other communities.

TDC rejects agreement on overcrowding

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Department of Corrections has turned down a proposed agreement on prison overcrowding, clearing the way for a June 23 hearing to determine if the state is violating federal court orders.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and Speaker Gib Lewis responded to the board action Wednesday by appointing a subcommittee to work with the prison officials.

"We need to identify the cost associated with compliance and the most economical and quickest way to achieve it," Hobby said in a statement.

At the same session Wednesday, the board was told a new financing plan to provide a high security unit that would house 2,250 inmates should be ready in a few days.

Hobby said TDC chairman Al Hughes and Attorney General Jim Mattox had promised their cooperation with the legislators.

After a two-hour executive session, the TDC board voted 4-4 on a motion that would have approved the proposed agreement to the contempt action in which prisoners claim the state is not following court orders against overcrowding. The tie vote killed the motion.

"It's a tremendous crapshoot," said TDC Chairman Al Hughes of the Houston hearing. He favored adopting the compromise with inmates' attorneys.

Hughes said Gov. Mark White also favored the settlement, provided it did not cost the state additional money.

Hughes said the 4-4 vote means a June 23 federal court hearing on the contempt action will proceed as planned in Houston.

"There are members of the House and the Legislature and the leadership who don't want to spend the money we have already committed to do and they think that maybe by going to court we might get some those things reduced," Hughes said.

"I am not hopeful of that," he said.

James Parsons, board member from Palestine, voted against a settlement "because I think our best option is to proceed forward with a vigorous defense and convince the court of our good faith and intents to comply."

Assistant Attorney General Scott McCown said the proposed settlement eliminated the closed circuit television sets originally demanded by prisoners, but it reinstated a provision that the state must provide recreation yards and gymnasiums by Jan. 1, 1987.

Hughes said if the judge rules against the prison system in the June 23 hearing, "The federal government will step in and issue orders that will require us to do these things."

Corrections

In an editorial Monday, June 9, it was stated that a vaccine — DTP — might be removed from production. The drug actually is DPT — diphtheria, pertussis (whooping cough) and tetanus.

• • •

In a Wednesday article on occupancy at retail shopping centers in Midland, it was reported that the Northland Center had an occupancy rate of 35 percent. That figure should have read 65 percent.

• • •

In a Wednesday story on the preliminary Midland Independent School District budget, it was reported that payroll costs would increase by 7 percent during 1986-87. That figure should have been .7 percent.

Libya threatens complete alliance with Soviets

WORLD

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Col. Moammar Gadhafi says further U.S. attacks on Libya could force his country fully into the Soviet camp.

"We are seriously considering alliance with the Soviet Union and the socialist system so that balance is achieved," Gadhafi said in a speech broadcast late Wednesday to mark the ouster of U.S. forces 16 years ago.

"We adhered to neutrality, but we found that it is useless," said Gadhafi, whose country already has strong economic ties with the Soviets and receives most of its military hardware from the Soviet Union.

The government staged nationwide festivities Wednesday commemorating the anniversary of the expulsion of U.S. forces from Wheelus Air Force Base near Tripoli, known here as "the great Libyan victory over imperialism."

The speech, in which Gadhafi urged each Libyan to contribute $800 to buy arms for a possible war with the United States, came amid persisting reports of dissension within the regime that took power in 1969.

While the official JANA news agency hailed "popular enthusiasm" in celebrating the occasion, only 2,000 spectators turned out on Tripoli's main Green Square to stand for 2½ hours listening to Gadhafi's voice by loudspeaker.

He warned of an allegedly imminent U.S. invasion by American "imperialists," backed by "the Jews in Palestine."

At the same time, Western and non-aligned diplomats reported increasing signs of differences between Gadhafi and other members of his ruling Revolutionary Command Council in the wake of April 15 air attack by U.S. warplanes.

State-run television said Gadhafi's speech was broadcast live from an unidentified location. But discrepencies between the sound and image suggested the speech was taped earlier, leaving Gadhafi's whereabouts in doubt.

About 80 Western reporters, photographers and television representatives invited to Libya for what was billed as "a historic speech" never caught a glimpse of Gadhafi.

Several diplomats said they had growing evidence of moves within the leadership to persuade Gadhafi to step aside voluntarily, at least temporarily, to allow them to tackle Libya's grave economic problems.

The twin threat of American economic sanctions and the collapse of world oil prices caused Libya's oil income — virtually its only source of revenue — to plunge to less than $5 billion a year from $22 billion six years ago.

Daily bread lines testify to widespread food shortages in a country long among the richest in Africa. Gadhafi in the late 1970s was reported to have voluntarily abandoned the leadership during a time of dissension and spent more than a year in seclusion in the Libyan Sahara.

The diplomats said a group of pragmatists among military and political leaders were trying to persuade Gadhafi to repeat his earlier withdrawal from power, but had encountered stiff resistance from the 44-year-old colonel.

Gadhafi enjoys the backing of about 30,000 Revolutionary Guards, the feared ideological watchdogs who have taken over most of the army's arsenals and munition dumps.

Moammer Gadhafi

But since the U.S. air raids, unleashed in retaliation for Libya's alleged backing of terrorism, the Revolutionary Guards, who are reported at odds with the military, have lost much of their grip.

In his often incoherent television address, Gadhafi sounded all his favorite themes including the corruption of conservative Arab regimes and his belief that Arabs would ultimately triumph over Israel.

Yitzhak Rabin speaks of withdrawal with Moslem promise of peace

JERUSALEM (AP) — Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin says Israel is willing to withdraw its remaining forces from southern Lebanon if the Shiite Moslem militia Amal agrees to keep the border area quiet.

"If Amal is ready to sit with us, even discretely, and make any security arrangements that will keep the border quiet, we see no problem in pulling our forces back across," Rabin told The Associated Press in an interview Wednesday.

The defense minister said he had told U.N. envoy Marrack Goulding earlier this month that he was ready to explore the possibility of Amal taking over in areas it controls.

"We made it clear to the undersecretary of the United Nations, Mr. Goulding, that we are ready pragmatically to check to what extent Amal is capable of maintaining tranquility," he said. "Wherever there will be tranquility there is no need for Israeli presence."

Israel has a few hundred soldiers in southern Lebanon, with much larger forces poised along the border. The Israeli army patrols a buffer zone in southern Lebanon and sponsors a predominantly Christian militia of about 2,000 fighters.

Amal, which has an estimated 6,000 fighters in southern Lebanon, is supported by the predominantly Shiite population of 1 million and controls most of the territory south of the Awali River, which is 30 miles from the Israeli border.

Rabin indicated any accord would be limited to the Mediterranean coast and villages in the interior where Amal is the strongest, and that Israel would not agree to an extension of Amal control to Christian areas of the Bekaa Valley of eastern Lebanon.

Rabin's references to a pragmatic approach and the withdrawal of soldiers from areas that remained peaceful were seen as a move toward a more flexible Israeli policy.

However, Rabin said that so far there has been no sign of a willingness on the part of the Shiites to negotiate with Israel.

"Amal has so far refused whatsoever to make any deal, openly or discretely with us," Rabin said. "Therefore we have no other way but to ... have a security zone mainly based on the South Lebanon Army" — the Israeli-backed militia.

Israel withdrew the bulk of its forces from Lebanon one year ago after the coalition government decided to abandon U.N.-mediated talks with the Lebanese army.

Shiite leaders in southern Lebanon have demanded the withdrawal of the rest of the Israeli soldiers, the disbanding of the Israeli-backed militia and the dismantling of the security zone that extends three miles to 10 miles inside Lebanon.

In a recent interview in the port city of Tyre, Amal's southern Lebanon commander Daoud Daoud said Israel should dismantle the security zone and refused "either direct or indirect negotiations" with Israel.

However, Daoud raised the possibility, first presented by Amal leader Nabih Berri, that any talks be held between governments in the framework of the Israel-Lebanon Mixed Armistice Commission, a U.N. agency set up in 1949 to monitor the truce which ended the first Arab-Israeli war.

Israel maintains the U.N. commission is defunct, because Lebanon joined in the 1967 war against Israel, and that there is no other official body with which to negotiate.

WORLD in brief

Waldheim at odds with discrimination of Jews

VIENNA, Austria — Kurt Waldheim, holding his first news conference since his election as Austria's president, said Wednesday that his victorious election campaign had been devoid of appeals to anti-Semitism and he promised to oppose discrimination against Jews.

He also said he welcomed a proposal that a commission of historians investigate his war record, and he called on Yugoslavia to release all documents touching on his service in the German army in World War II.

"I welcome all efforts in this regard because they can only help me in clarifying the situation," Waldheim said of the proposal for a panel of military historians to study his war years in Greece and the Balkans. The proposal was made this week by Simon Wiesenthal, the Nazi-hunter.

When a reporter said "the whole world" had the impression Waldheim and the conservative People's Party had made subliminal anti-Semitic appeals, he said heatedly:

"The whole world? What is the whole world? If you think the whole world is certain circles in New York, that may be true. But the whole world thinks otherwise."

Iraq, Syria work closer

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — Iraq and Syria have scheduled a reconciliation meeting that could bring about a major shift in Middle East politics, but the two Arab foes still appear to be nagged by suspicions and second thoughts.

Jordan's King Hussein, in an interview this week with The Washington Post, was quoted as saying that his mediation efforts had led to the planned session Friday between the foreign ministers of Iraq and Syria, neighboring nations at odds since 1979.

Although both countries are led by wings of the Arab Socialist Baath Party, each repeatedly has accused the other of treachery and plotting coups.

Syria recently accused Iraq of instigating a series of bus bombings. Iraq's state-run radio two weeks ago demanded the ouster of Syrian President Hafez Assad, calling him "an evil disease."

A successful meeting on Friday could lead to an encounter between Assad and Iraqi President Saddam Hussein.

France seizes Americans

LE HAVRE, France (AP) — French police arrested seven people Wednesday, including an American couple and an alleged member of the Irish National Liberation Army wanted for a Dublin murder, authorities said.

The seven were taken into custody at this English Channel port in connection with an illegal arms shipment from the United States, informed sources said.

The Americans were identified by the sources as Mr. and Mrs. William Norton of Los Angeles, and the Irishman as Sean Hughes, sought on an international arrest warrant for the killing of a Dublin policeman in 1982.

22 die in plane crash

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Two more people died of injuries suffered in the emergency-landing crash here of an Air Sinai passenger plane, officials said Wednesday, raising the death toll to 22 and leaving three survivors.

The Fokker-27 carrying 25 passengers and crew from Alexandria crashed Tuesday night near the airport as the pilot tried to land in a raging sandstorm after reporting an engine on fire.

The twin-engine aircraft plowed into the compound of a construction company about a mile from a packed amusement park, exploded and caught fire. Officials said 20 people on board were killed instantly and two died later while hospitalized.

Bush eases trade pains

TORONTO (AP) — Vice President George Bush travels to Ottawa today on a mission that both U.S. and Canadian officials say is intended to soothe tempers inflamed by trade squabbles.

The troubles began May 23 when the Reagan administration, without informing the government of Prime Minister Brian Mulroney, imposed a 35-percent tariff on Canadian cedar shingles and shakes, a kind of wooden roof tile.

Only the day before, the North American neighbors had launched a round of free-trade talks, which Mulroney's Progressive Conservative government hopes will lead to a comprehensive treaty securing a permanent U.S. market for Canadian goods.

Canada retaliated for the shingle tariff by imposing new duties on U.S. books and periodicals, computer parts and other products.

Thiokol officials make case before Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — Representatives of Morton Thiokol, builders of the booster rocket whose failure is blamed for the explosion of space shuttle Challenger, were summoned to Congress today to explain whether the rocket met design criteria laid out by NASA.

Rep. Bill Nelson, D-Fla., who rode on the shuttle mission before the Challenger explosion, produced a document Wednesday in which Morton Thiokol stated that it had tested the O-rings down to temperatures of 21 degrees as required by its contract.

"Yet, this testing was not done," Nelson said during a hearing before the House Science and Technology Committee.

He referred to a document dated May 19 titled, "Natural-Induced Environment Requirements," which he said showed tests had not been performed.

The Challenger was launched Jan. 28 after overnight temperatures that went down to 24 degrees.

Acting committee chairman Robert Roe, D-N.J., said the matter would be put before Morton Thiokol officials and those from NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center when they appeared before the committee today. Officials at Marshall, which is in Huntsville, Ala., supervise NASA's booster rocket program.

"We are calling in the private sector," he said. "The private sector has already been convicted in the press. Who is the bad guy? It is essential for us to assure the credibility of the future of the space program.

"Thiokol is the bad guy. That's what's out in front on the deck right now. They have a right to defend themselves in the court of public opinion on what the facts are. That's the reason we want the Marshall people in here at the same time."

Roe added, "They have the right to defend themselves against the evil that's floating around — that this particular company didn't do what it was paid to do."

As committee members prepared for the session, President Reagan gave the shuttle program a boost Wednesday when he said he would propose that the destroyed Challenger be replaced. Administration officials have been wrestling with that question since the accident.

Shuttle director Richard Truly told the House panel Wednesday that shuttles would never have been allowed to fly if the booster rockets had undergone the rigorous testing that has followed the Challenger explosion.

He said also that all U.S. manned space missions should have been halted in 1981 when seal failure was discovered in a booster rocket joint after he piloted Columbia on the second space shuttle flight on Nov. 12, 1981.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration should have dealt with the problem then as a major technical defect, and, if it had, the Challenger accident could have been avoided, Truly told the panel.

"If we had, prior to the first flight of the shuttle, the experience of the 1,000 tests we had done since Jan. 28 on the joint performance in the solid rocket motor, we would not have flown that design," he testified.

The congressional committee is following up on the report of the Rogers commission earlier in the week, which said that after Truly's flight, astronauts had not been told that part of a rubbery O-ring seal in an aft joint of the ship's right booster rocket had been eaten away in prior flights.

It was the breach of such a seal, in the same aft joint on the right booster rocket, that is blamed by the Rogers commission for the explosion that killed seven astronauts and destroyed the Challenger.

Reagan cites 'complacency' in shuttle disaster

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says he wants to go forward with construction of a new space shuttle to replace the Challenger, whose loss he blames on "a carelessness" that grew out of NASA's long record of success.

At his nationally broadcast news conference Wednesday night, Reagan said he was still studying the Rogers commission report on the shuttle disaster, "But I don't believe that there was any deliberate or criminal intent in any way on the part of anyone" involved in the launch that took the lives of the seven Challenger crew members.

"I think there was a complacency there," the president said in recalling the many successful missions carried out by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. "But I think it was just a carelessness that grew out of success."

Reagan said he hasn't decided how to finance a replacement for the lost spacecraft and is still trying to determine whether to use unmanned rockets to launch some of the satellites that had been scheduled for shuttle flights that have been delayed by the Jan. 28 explosion.

He added, however, "I think we should go forward with another shuttle."

During a sometimes confusing half hour of questions and answers, the president paid a rare public compliment to Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, whom he called "the first Soviet leader to my knowledge that has ever voluntarily spoken of reducing nuclear weapons."

"We want to follow up on that," Reagan said, explaining his decision to abandon U.S. compliance with the limits of the unratified, expired SALT II weapons treaty.

With several months before the present U.S. weapons modernization schedule would put the United States over the SALT II numerical limits, Reagan said, "We're going to see if we cannot persuade them to join in the things they're talking about: arms reduction."

He also confirmed the Soviets put a new arms control proposal on the negotiating table in Geneva on Wednesday but refused to disclose anything of its contents, saying he would respect the confidentiality of those weapons talks.

The president also expressed confidence that he and Gorbachev would meet later this year, despite the failure of the two sides to agree on a date.

"I still believe that he wants a summit and I want a summit, and I believe it's going to take place," Reagan said.

At another point, the president missed a reporter's question about Wednesday's Supreme Court ruling upholding a woman's right to an abortion.

Hungry 'don't know' where food is

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is still convinced that ignorance, not lack of food, is to blame for anyone who goes hungry or undernourished in the United States.

"It is difficult to believe that people are starving in this country because food isn't available," he said Wednesday night at his nationally broadcast news conference.

"I think that in many instances the people just don't know...where or how to go about it," he said. "At the same time, I find it difficult also to find any cases of starvation and undernourishment."

He defended his administration's decision to cut out a public information program for the food stamp program, saying it amounted to "literally going door-to-door, knocking on the door to tell people how to become eligible or, 'Have you gotten your food stamps today?' "

Reagan, at his news conference, said, "We are spending on nutrition more than has ever been spent before" — $18.6 billion, or $3 billion more than when he took office in 1981.

Fundamentalists seek purge of SBC 'liberals'

ATLANTA (AP) — Southern Baptist fundamentalists, newly dominant after election victories at their national meeting, are racing to reprove or remove denomination officials they see as too liberal.

Delegates launched strong attacks Wednesday on officials seen as soft on such issues as abortion and school prayer and called for an investigation of a Baptist leader who said he did not necessarily believe the Bible error-free.

Meanwhile, the denomination's president and president-elect, both fundamentalists, called for peace, love and an end to the bitterness that has soured relations among factions in the 14.5-million-member Southern Baptist Convention, the nation's largest Protestant denomination.

Those pleas won applause from the 20,000 or so delegates who remained Wednesday after nearly 40,000 voted in Tuesday's presidential election.

In four main cases, delegates asked the full convention to:

— Withdraw the denomination and its $460,000 a year from a joint Baptist lobbying agency in Washington on grounds that executive director James Dunn and other employees were misrepresenting Southern Baptists' views on such issues as abortion and school prayer. That motion was referred to a committee instead by a vote of 12,001 to 9,966.

— Require that a new head of the denomination's social concerns agency be sought "whose record and convictions about the sanctity of unborn life" are in accord with an anti-abortion position — a slap at the Rev. Foy Valentine, the current head of an agency that fundamentalists have criticized.

— Ask for an investigation of the head of the denomination's historical committee, Marion D. Lark of Henderson, N.C., who had said in a report to the gathering earlier Wednesday that he didn't think the Bible was necessarily without error on scientific matters.

— Investigate an unnamed staff member of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville, Ky., who was said to have written a paper implying "universalism," a concept that God ultimately redeems all humanity.

The newly elected president, the Rev. Adrian P. Rogers of Memphis, Tenn., pleaded in a sermon before the motions, "May God give us increasing unity. We're not enemies. We are brothers in our Lord Jesus Christ. We are built together, bound together, in it together, like it or not."

The main controversy splitting the denomination involves the insistence by fundamentalists that true Christians — and certainly Southern Baptist employees — hold strictly literalist views of the Bible. Moderates, who lost the major convention elections, allow for diverse understandings.

Whites want blacks out of neighborhood

CLEVELAND (AP) — Residents of an all-white neighborhood where a simmering racial dispute erupted into gunfire that wounded eight people and forced a black family to flee say the only way to avoid more trouble is to keep blacks out.

"Don't experiment," said Alan Morvin, 17, a high school student. "Don't put them on the street anymore. It just won't work out. I don't think it would work for any blacks."

Morvin, one of eight white residents of the neighborhood wounded by shotgun blasts Tuesday night, said he was a spectator and hadn't harassed anyone. None was seriously wounded, police said.

Mayor George Voinovich said at a news conference Wednesday, "Last night's incident underscores how important a priority this community must give to stamping out the dread disease of racism."

The FBI is investigating the shootings as a possible violation of federal fair housing provisions of the Civil Rights Act, said spokesman John Dunn.

Police say a number of whites in the area had been setting off fireworks near the blacks' home Tuesday evening before the shootings and that on April 14 the letters "KKK" were spray-painted on the home.

The shootings were in front of the home Marlene Armstrong has been leasing since February as part of a Cuyahoga Metropolitan Housing Authority program to integrate the all-white section on the city's west side which has decades-old houses valued in the $20,000 to $30,000 range.

The black family includes Mrs. Armstrong, another adult woman, a teen-age girl and a small child, said police spokesman Robert Bolton. Housing Authority records identify the occupants as Mrs. Armstrong, 45, and her two teen-age daughters.

Mrs. Armstrong said she didn't want to return to the home and did not want to move into another white neighborhood. She and her family were temporarily relocated to a downtown hotel.

Michael Spraggins, 23, was being held in jail pending an investigation of the shootings but had not been charged.

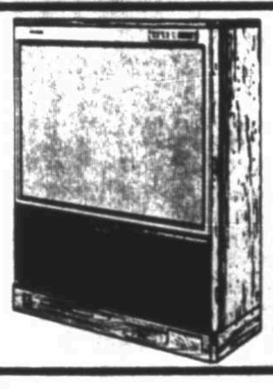

Spraggins, of suburban Parma, was visiting the Armstrongs on the night of the shootings and was running away as trouble broke out, said his mother, Annie Black, after talking to him in jail. "They shot at him first, he said."

NATION IN BRIEF

Abortion controversy fueled by court's ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) — The political firestorm surrounding abortion is being fueled, not calmed, by the Supreme Court's latest affirmation of a woman's right to end her pregnancy.

The Reagan administration and other abortion foes are vowing to fight on, finding solace in the deepening rift among the justices over the issue.

The court, by a 5-4 vote Wednesday, struck down Pennsylvania abortion regulations.

The battle "is far from over," said Solicitor General Charles Fried, the administration's leading courtroom lawyer.

The closeness of the Supreme Court's vote underscored a deepening division among the justices.

In 1973 when the court legalized abortion nationwide in a landmark case called Roe vs. Wade, the vote was 7-2. The court split 6-3 three years ago in reaffirming the 1973 ruling.

Ex-singer pleads no contest

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former rock backup singer Cathy Evelyn Smith faces a maximum sentence of eight years in prison when sentenced on her plea of no contest to involuntary manslaughter in the drug overdose death of comedian John Belushi.

Miss Smith, 38, also pleaded no contest Wednesday to three counts of furnishing and administering a controlled substance — the "speedball" injections of heroin and cocaine that killed Belushi four years ago.

"Miss Smith in no way concedes she is responsible for Mr. Belushi's death," defense attorney Howard Weitzman told Superior Court Judge David A. Horowitz, who scheduled sentencing for Aug. 18.

Canadian-born Miss Smith, an ex-drug addict, apparently was the last person to see the former "Saturday Night Live" star alive. She originally was charged with second-degree murder and 13 drug counts, charges which carried a maximum term of 25 years to life.

The no-contest pleas are the criminal equivalent of guilty pleas but cannot be used against her in civil suits.

Weir to head Presbyterians

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The Rev. Benjamin Weir, a former missionary to Lebanon held hostage there for 16 months, was elected Wednesday to lead the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)

"I am aware that we live in a complex world and my church is realizing that in my election," Weir said after his election as moderator of the denomination of 3.1 million people, formed when the Northern and Southern branches of the Presbyterians merged in 1983.

Weir, 62, defeated two other candidates, winning on the first ballot with 356 votes. He needed 323 to be selected the new leader, or moderator, by the more than 600 delegates to the 198th General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

Hunter aids fawn's birth

LEOMINSTER, Mass. (AP) — A man who performed an emergency Caesarean on a deer fatally injured by a car says he's glad his son was there to see the birth of the fawn.

"Clint got quite a shock out of it," Del Manuel said of his son. "He couldn't believe it was alive. It kind of brightened him up to know these things do sometimes happen."

Veterinarian Carl Flinkstrom of Lunenberg said Wednesday the little doe has a good chance of surviving, although fawns are difficult to raise. He expected to turn it over today to Walter Hoyt, a state Fish and Game department district manager who is licensed to care for wild animals.

Manuel, 46, a carpenter and deer hunter, said he decided to try the emergency delivery late Tuesday night after his daughter spotted the mortally wounded animal on an isolated road.

"No one was around," Manuel said. "I knew the way the stomach was pounding the little one was pretty soon due."

Officials say morale up among air traffic controllers at D-FW

STATE

GRAPEVINE (AP) — Air traffic controllers work under better conditions and morale is up at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport, where there was some criticism following the crash of Delta Air Lines Flight 191 in August 1985.

Federal officials say improvements have been made since a General Accounting Office survey reported substandard working conditions for the controllers.

Controller morale in the tower and at an air traffic route center, which monitors regional traffic, also has improved, officials said.

The GAO reported nearly 80 percent of the controllers complained that they handled too many planes during peak hours last summer. More DFW controllers said they considered air safety "poor" or "very poor" than their counterparts at other airports did.

Norm Scroggins, DFW tower manager, said he believes that may have been due to "an emotional response to quite a few things that were going on" last summer.

On Aug. 2, Delta Flight 191 crashed near the airport, killing 137 people.

Also during the summer, new policies were implemented including trippling of controllers' training hours, limiting vacations to only two weeks and banning smoking in the tower cab and radar rooms, Scroggins said.

Another policy change included requiring controllers to clear aircraft to take off and land on all four DFW runways, when previously two runways were used for takeoff and two others for landing.

The airport continues to have a problem with controllers being swamped with traffic at peak times, Scroggins said. But that problem has been somewhat alleviated by the addition over the past year of 19 full-performance level controllers, he said.

With the additional manpower and more experienced workers, overtime has been halved.

Bentsen believes Mexico should encourage foreign investment

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas sympathizes with Mexico over the effects of falling oil prices, but Mexico must face economic reality by selling some government-owned industries and changing its attitude toward foreign investors, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen said.

"Those of us from Texas can appreciate the severity of the problem when Mexico says the declining oil prices have cost their country some $6 billion. And for an economy of that size, that's a heavy hit," the Texas Democrat said Wednesday.

Speaking on the Senate floor, Bentsen praised what he said appeared to be a change in attitude toward Mexico on the part of the Reagan administration, as evidenced by Senate testimony Tuesday from Assistant Treasury Secretary David Mulford.

Last month, administration officials criticized Mexico for not doing enough to stop drug smuggling, prompting a protest from Mexico.

Mulford testified that Mexico has not gotten the credit it deserves for already taking some of the recommended steps to improve its economic situation, which includes a $97 billion foreign debt and the recent 30 percent drop in the value of the peso.

Bentsen said Mulford's testimony and reports that Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker had met with Mexican officials were "hopeful" signs that the financial crisis in Mexico will be eased for the time being.

"And I call it a financial crisis, but actually it's more properly termed, I think, a political crisis, and it's happening right next door," Bentsen said.

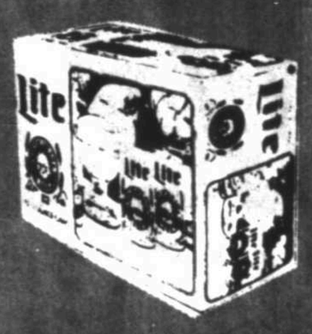

"It's a political crisis because you're seeing more and more food items being priced beyond the reach of the average Mexican citizen. It's a political crisis that's swelling the ranks of unemployment in a country that has historically suffered from massive unemployment. It's a political crisis that will continue to foment unrest and unhappiness until it's resolved," he said.

Bentsen said Mexico is going to have to sell some government-owned industries to private owners and encourage foreign investment.

Now your child can master algebra. With help from Sylvan Learning Center.

When problems with algebra threaten to hold your child back, you need to find a solution. Fast. Because the longer you wait, the further behind your child will fall.

Sylvan Learning Center can help. We'll teach your child to conquer the basics of algebra—and give him or her a better start toward a successful future.

The first step: An appraisal of your child's current abilities.
We begin by pinpointing your child's strengths and weaknesses in numeration, fractions, multiplication, time and measurement. We test for auditory discrimination and vision, as well.

Then, based on the test results, we tailor an algebra program to meet your child's needs.

The duration of the program varies. Your child may need to review and reinforce basic math skills before proceeding to the algebra phase.

A proven effective program.
The algebra program consists of pre-identified skills arranged, in sequential order, on computer disks specially designed by Sylvan.

Your child's lessons begin at the level we know he or she can handle. And they progress at a pace that will be challenging, but not overwhelming.

The program is directed by a fully certified teacher, along with specially trained instructors. There are never any more than three students per teacher, so your child is guaranteed personal attention whenever answers, support, praise or encouragement is needed.

You'll be kept informed. Your child will be rewarded.
You and your child's regular classroom teacher will be kept regularly informed of your child's progress in algebra.

When a lesson is done right or a tough problem is finally overcome, your child's achievement will be rewarded with a token, good toward gifts from the Sylvan Store. Students can redeem the tokens right away, or save for things they want.

You'll see the difference!
The results of Sylvan instruction show up not just on the report card, but also in a reward proudly displayed... an exciting recounting of the day's lesson...and a whole new self-confidence and desire to learn that you may never have seen—or thought possible—before.

The Sylvan program is individualized. Your child can start any time. If you want to see your child do better, the time is now.

Second heart transplant performed in San Antonio

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Doctors raced Wednesday to bring the heart of a Miami accident victim to San Antonio, where it was transplanted into a 56-year-old Killeen woman, a hospital spokeswoman said. It was the second such operation in San Antonio.

Emelia Hicks, who had suffered inflamation of her heart for about three years, was in stable but critical condition at UT Health Science Center following a seven-hour operation that began shortly after noon, hospital spokeswoman Renee Hermanson said.

The donor heart came from an accident victim whose family requested anonymity, she said.

A surgical team headed by Dr. P. Kent Harman flew to Miami Wednesday morning for the heart, said Ms. Hermanson. Dr. J. Kent Trinkle performed the operation.

Trinkle and Harman were among the doctors who performed San Antonio's first heart transplant a month and a half ago. That patient, 56-year-old Catherine Hooker of San Antonio, is at home and doing well, Ms. Hermanson said.

Ex-DJ gets life sentence

BRYAN (AP) — David Barnett of Bryan, a former disc jockey and radio station executive, was formally sentenced to life in prison Wednesday in the Dec. 16 slaying of his wife.

A district court jury recommended the sentence on Monday after finding Barnett guilty of the murder in the fatal shooting of his 28-year-old wife, Neva.

State District Judge Carolyn Ruffino delayed formal sentencing until Wednesday so Barnett, 42, could discuss the possibility of an appeal with his attorneys.

After the sentencing, Barnett gave notice of appeal. At the same time, defense attorneys Robert Orozco and John Quinn asked that other counsel be appointed to handle the case.

Quinn said he and Orozco asked to withdraw from the case to avoid a conflict should Barnett decide to argue that he received ineffective representation at trial. Quinn said the court's alleged failure to comply with pretrial motions filed by the defense may also form a basis for appeal.

Veteran loans extended

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas military veterans can now get three loans from the state, the Veterans Land Board voted Wednesday.

Land Commissioner Garry Mauro said the additional benefits were authorized by the 1985 Legislature and voters.

"What this means is Texas veterans can now get a $20,000 loan to buy a house and get a $20,000 loan to buy land and get a $15,000 home-improvement loan to make repairs to their residence," said Mike Connolly, board spokesman.

In the past, veterans have been able to get only one loan. However, during the next four months, beginning June 17, veterans who already have one loan will be able to apply for a loan from one or both of the remaining programs, Connolly said.

The board also agreed to reduce the minimum acreage required from 10 acres to five acres.

Sisters to pay restitution

HOUSTON (AP) — Two sisters will be paying back $50,000 after admitting they altered $180 in money orders to much larger amounts.

Janet Flowers, 38, a former U.S. postal worker from Houston, was ordered Wednesday to pay $15,000 in restitution by U.S. District Judge Carl O. Bue after she pleaded guilty to a charge of passing an altered money order. She also was assessed a three-year probated prison sentence.

Her sister, Judy Ann Davis, 28, was earlier sentenced to six months in prison and ordered to pay $22,000 after she pleaded guilty to six counts of passing altered money orders.

Prosecutors said the women got $50,000 for altered money orders they had purchased for $180.

Man arrested in stabbing

AUSTIN (AP) — A man who had been fired from his job surrendered to police Wednesday in connection with the stabbing death of a man hired to replace him, police said.

The name of the slain man, who police described as an Austin resident in his 30s, was being withheld pending notification of relatives.

Police Lt. Jerry Statton said the two men apparently got into an argument outside the suspect's residence Tuesday night.

"Apparently the suspect got fired and was arguing over his job," Statton said.

He said the victim had been hired for the suspect's job, and the two men knew each other before the firing took place.

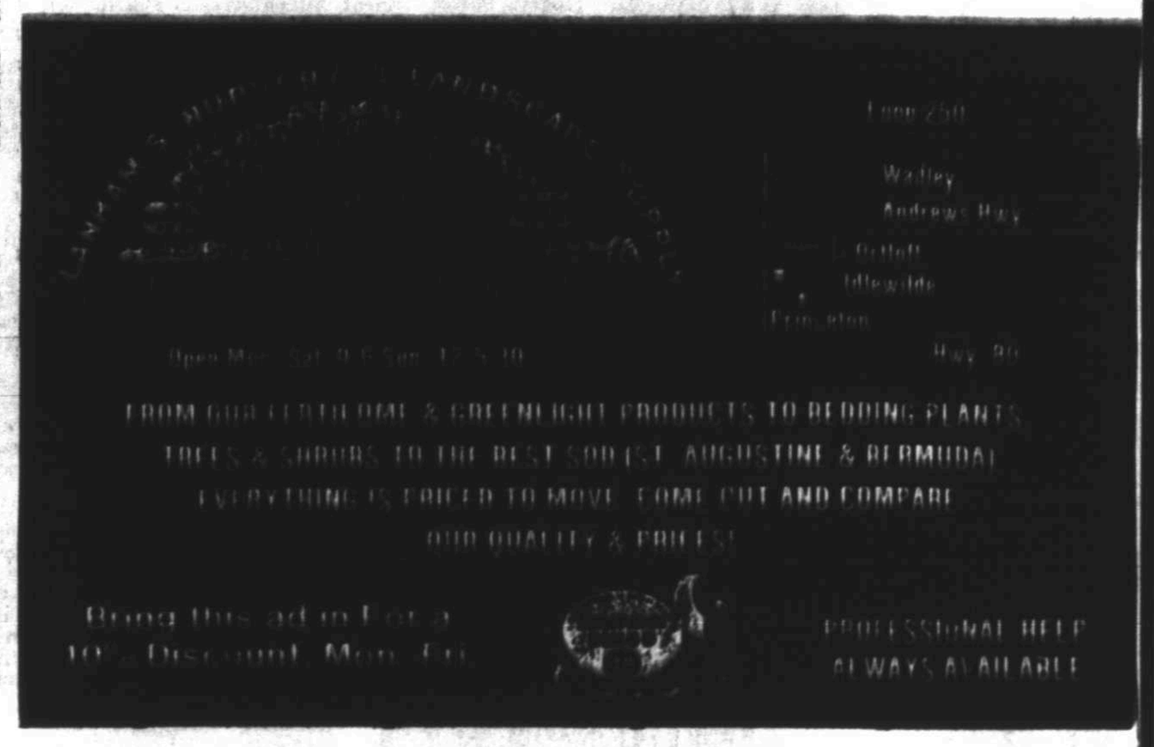

Dead executive identified

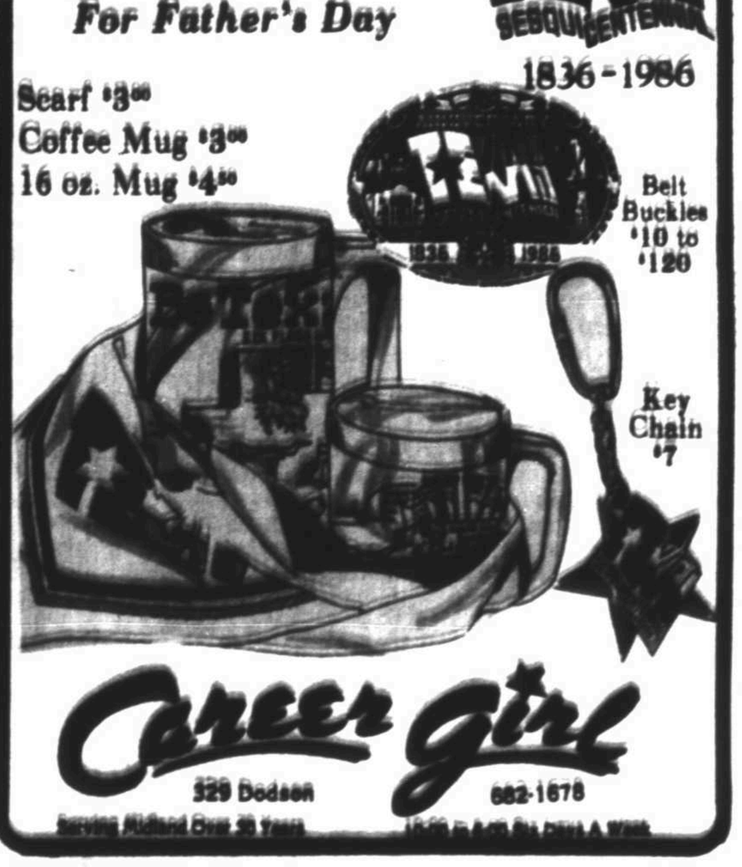

NEW YORK (AP) — A 27-year-old executive from Houston found shot to death in his Waldorf-Astoria hotel room has been identified as Gary Ebsworth.

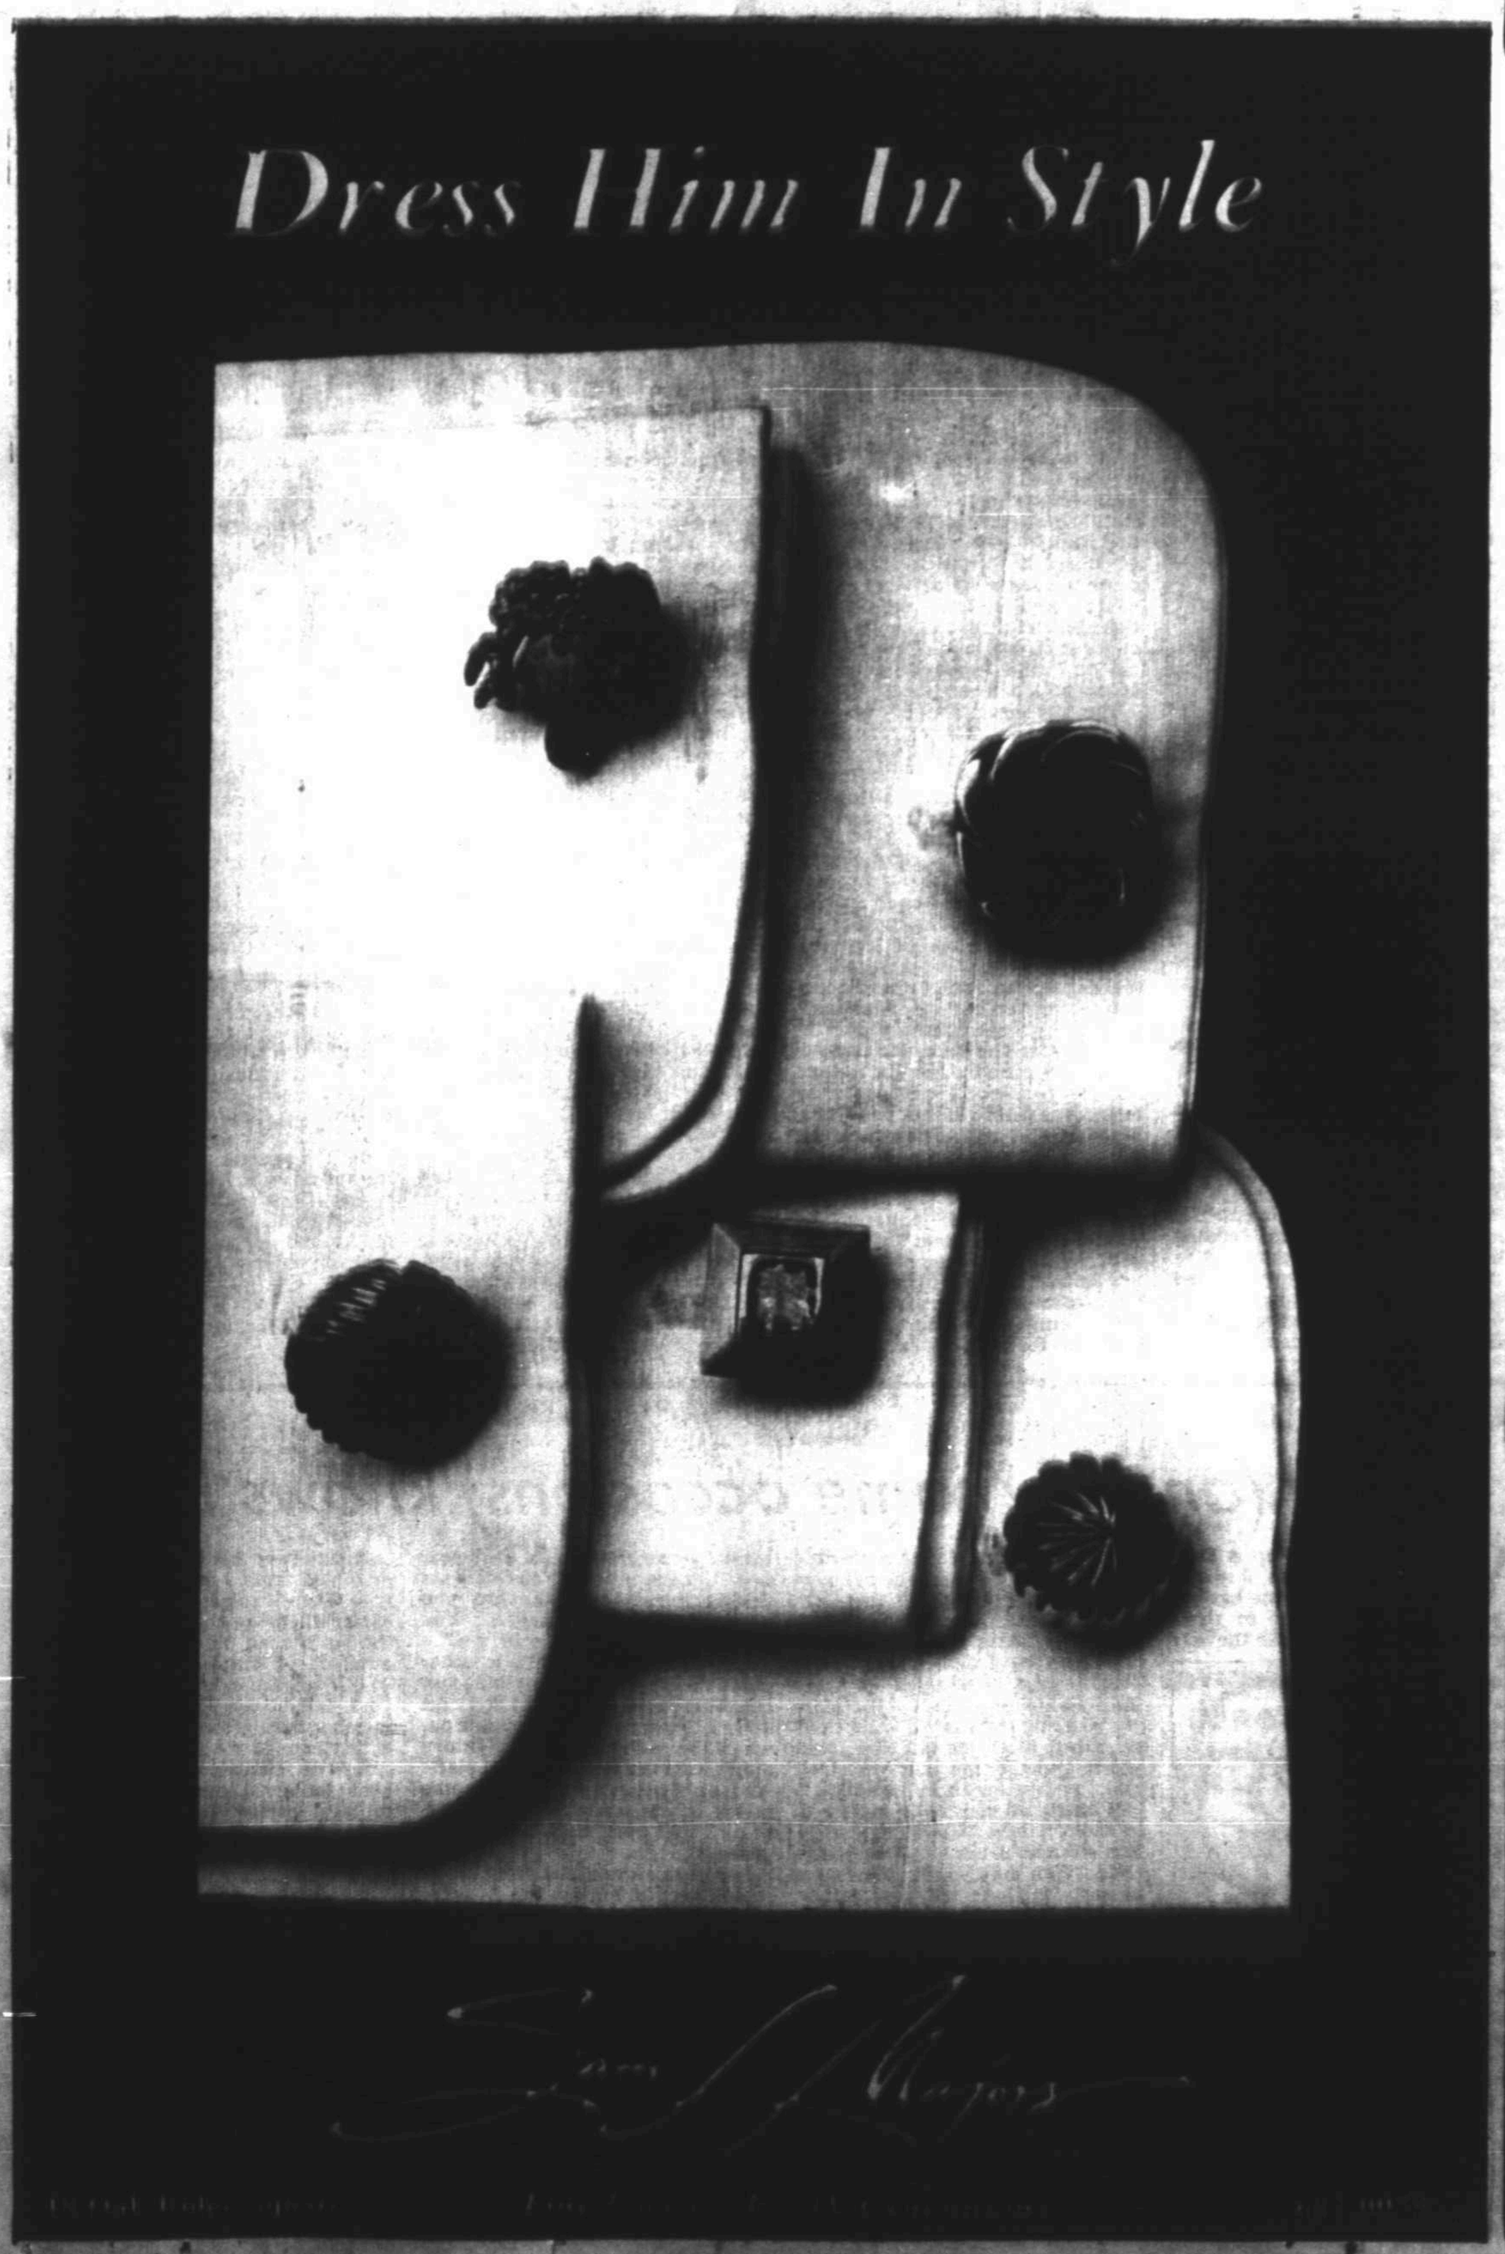

Police said his assailant left few clues. They said Ebsworth, with Mariner Corp., was shot with a large-caliber handgun.

Deputy Inspector John Flanster said detectives were investigating the possibility that Ebsworth was shot by the husband of a woman he may have met at the hotel the night before.

Flanster ruled out robbery as a motive for the slaying.

Enlightening visit

It will be with excitement and an eye to the future that a group of Midland business, civic and industrial leaders will embark on a journey to Dongying, China, on Friday.

The group, which will include Mayor Carroll Thomas, Chamber of Commerce President Joan Baskin and 29 others, should feel right at home in Dongying, which sits in the Shengli oilfield in Shandong Province. The Chinese community is Midland's "sister city" in a program which grew out of the Thouvenel String Quartet's cultural tour to China in March last year.

Of course, Midland and Dongying are unalike in many respects. One is population. While Midland stands at about 100,000 people, Dongying has nearly 1.5 million inhabitants. And, the Texas visitors will likely find numerous other notable differences. But in many regards, they'll likely learn that there are many areas wherein the two cities and two countries can learn from each other.

The program is exciting not only because of the wealth of cultural knowledge to be gleaned by the visits of various officials, but also because of the amount of information that potentially can be shared and feasibly can create a foundation for future exchanges to benefit both societies.

It's obvious that the relationship between Midland and Dongying, through these exchanges, has the potential to teach Midlanders and residents of China valuable lessons about the society across the oceans. That's important to creating a sense of mutual understanding, which can further promote the cause of peace.

We join in bidding those on the trip to Dongying bon voyage with fond wishes for an enlightening and fruitful visit.

Commentary complaint

I am writing in response to the sports editorial by Ted Battles (Thursday, May 29). I feel it might behoove Mr. Battles to be sure of his facts before shooting off his mouth!

My son was on the soccer team which was photographed for, apparently, no reason, since the newspaper had no intention of publishing the picture. I spoke with Mr. Battles on the phone Monday, June 2, after the article about the All-City soccer team came out without the picture. In answer to my inquiry as to why the picture was not run, he informed me that the newspaper has a policy against running team pictures for a number of reasons. Two of them are the high cost of newspaper photography and the workload of the paper's photographers. In view of these reasons, it seems illogical to me to send one of those "overworked" young men out to take a very costly photograph that no one intends to publish!

In answer to Mr. Battles' vindictive statements about sponsorism, all I can say is, "Look around you." Go to a high school football game, and open the program. You're going to find advertisements in it. Even at Angel Stadium, you're surrounded by sponsors! Just look across the playing field, you can't miss them. So, Mr. Battles, I fear you're wasting your time worrying about sponsorism showing up in Midland — it's been here a long time.

The man who sponsored the All-City Soccer team did so out of his pocket — certificates, pictures, articles, etc. Who could deny he deserves recognition for so fully backing a youth-oriented event? We need more people like him, not censure for those who do as he did.

As for the snide quotes about the "No Pass-No Play" rule — no one was being sneaky about invoking that rule. I have three sons in soccer, and almost every coach we have had has insisted on good academic performance. My son who made All-City has had to show his grades to his coach for a long time. That's just the way it's always been.

I have to say that I find Mr. Battles' attitude deplorable. I take extreme exception to being referred to as a "sideline piranha," and I detest Mr. Battles' biased and uninformed brand of commentary. To the publishers of our fair paper, I have to say that, if Ted Battles' nasty commentary is what you consider good journalism, then perhaps it's time we had another paper in Midland!

Later, Mr. Battles.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, June 12, the 163rd day of 1986. There are 202 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On June 12, 1939, the National Baseball Hall of Fame and Museum was dedicated in Cooperstown, N.Y. — exactly 100 years after the day Abner Doubleday is purported to have invented the sport. Historians doubt, however, that Doubleday is the true inventor of baseball.

On this date:

In 1776, Virginia adopted a Bill of Rights — the first colonial legislature to do so.

In 1838, the Iowa Territory was organized.

In 1917, the Secret Service extended its protection of the president to his family as well.

In 1963, civil rights leader Medgar Evers of Mississippi was shot to death near his home.

In 1971, Tricia Nixon and Edward F. Cox were married in a ceremony in the White House Rose Garden.

In 1978, a 23-year-old cyclist, Bryan Allen, flew the man-powered "Gossamer Albatross" across the English Channel.

Ten years ago: Ronald Reagan picked up 18 out of 19 at-large delegates at the Missouri Republican convention in Springfield in a stinging defeat for President Gerald R. Ford.

Five years ago: Major league baseball players began a 49-day strike over the issue of free-agent compensation. The season did not resume until August 10.

One year ago: The U.S. House of Representatives voted against extending a ban on U.S. support for military action against Nicaragua.

Today's birthdays: Banker David Rockefeller is 71. Movie producer Irwin Allen is 70. Actress Uta Hagen is 67. Vice President George Bush is 62. Singer Vic Damone is 58. Actor-singer Jim Nabors is 54. Jazz musician Chick Corea is 45.

Thought for today: "You can observe a lot just by watching." — Yogi Berra, baseball coach.

System itself blamed for high costs

WASHINGTON — While the $640 toilet seats and $7,400 coffee makers rile the public, the really serious waste in the Pentagon is in the less dramatic area of multibillion-dollar weapon systems. As the late Sen. Everett Dirksen observed sardonically, "A billion here, a billion there, and pretty soon you're talking about real money."

Jack Anderson

As part of our continuing watch on government waste, we have worked with Sen. William Roth, R-Del., exposing extravagance and incompetence in the Defense Department. At Roth's request, the General Accounting Office conducted a three-year study of 17 major weapon systems. Our associate Lucette Lagnado has reviewed the unreleased, 150-page findings.

The magnitude of the problem of Pentagon procurement is laid out at the start. Nearly 100 major weapon systems are in various stages of development and production. Notes the report: "The costs to acquire them may exceed $750 billion. Operating costs during their useful life will be considerably more. Most of these future costs are predetermined by basic design decisions made during early program phases."

The GAO auditors concluded, essentially, that the system itself is at fault for extravagant weapon programs. The report cites inadequate direction from the top; lack of accountability; poorly trained and motivated personnel in key positions — and counterproductive "external influences" like Congress.

The report devotes much of its criticism toward the "program managers" — usually military officers of middle rank. The GAO investigators found that many of them are simply not equipped by background, training or incentive to tackle the intricate problems of weapons procurement. By contrast, of course, the defense contractors they're up against assign their best people to the negotiations, so the Pentagon's program managers are often badly overmatched.

The report quotes former Deputy Defense Secretary David Packard, head of a commission that made a recent study of Pentagon procurement: "Major weapon systems are complex. ... They require advanced technology. We unfortunately have a system where we do not train and put the best management people in charge of these programs."

The GAO auditors agreed, saying: "Qualified program managers require appropriate experience, training and education," and many do not have it. In its examination of 34 recently appointed program managers, the GAO found that "few possessed the desired mix of experience and training."

Another reason that the best and the brightest may not wind up in procurement is that "promotion opportunities in acquisition (are) not as great as in operational fields." The perception among career military officers is that "advancement potential is limited" in procurement, compared to command positions in operational units.

The GAO report cited an earlier study that described the Pentagon's contracting officers generally as "overloaded, untrained and inexperienced."

Somewhat surprisingly, the GAO auditors named their own boss — Congress — as one of the "external influences" that complicates the system. After citing specific instances in which "Congress ... provided design direction," "Congress cut funds" and "Congress limited the weight of the missile," the GAO report observes: "When external management directs a specific design solution to meet a military capability, the program manager cannot be held accountable if that design solution does not work."

The GAO auditors asked Pentagon and industry officials about the problem of external influences. "Generally, they believe that the conditions ... will get worse," the report states.

SCANDAL OF THE WEEK: While their colleagues in control towers were sweating bullets trying to land the nation's airplanes safely, Federal Aviation Administration workers in the research and development branch were whiling away their time copying video games onto government computers. The computer chips of such popular games as "Donkey Kong" and "Space Invaders" — nearly 100 different ones — were then extracted for use at home by the employees. An unpublished inspector general's report revealed that one worker was fired and 18 others suspended or reprimanded at the FAA Technical Center in Atlantic City, N.J.

Handicapped infants: Matter of life, death

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court, an institution with the confident aura of one who does not apologize for existing, lays down the law about matters of life and death (abortion, capital punishment). This week it dealt with questions arising when death threatens to closely follow the beginning of life.

George F. Will

The "Baby Doe" case was one of statutory construction, not constitutional interpretation. The Rehabilitation Act of 1973 says no program, such as a hospital, receiving federal funds can deny participation to, or discriminate against, any "otherwise qualified handicapped individual" solely because of the individual's handicap.

In 1982, in Indiana, parents of an infant with Down's syndrome (a congenital defect involving varying degrees of mental retardation and some physical abnormalities) refused consent to routine surgery to unblock the infant's esophagus. The blockage prevented oral feeding. The child starved to death.

In response to controversy about that case, and ample evidence of other children's deaths brought on by denial of normal care (care routinely given to normal infants), the Secretary of Health and Human Services in 1984 issued regulations under the Rehabilitation Act. They required hospitals to post notices that care could not be denied to infants because of mental or physical impairments, required state child-protection agencies to protect handicapped children from "unlawful medical neglect," and required immediate access to a patient's records.

The American Hospital Association, American Medical Association and similar groups got a lower court to declare the regulations an invalid application of the Rehabilitation Act. The Supreme Court has now affirmed that invalidity, 5-3.

In his opinion for a Court plurality, Justice Stevens (joined by Marshall, Blackmun and Powell; Burger concurred in the judgment, not the reasoning) noted that the preamble to the HHS regulations stipulated that when "a non-treatment decision, no matter how discriminatory, is made by parents, rather than by the hospital," the Rehabilitation Act does not require the hospital to override the parents and provide treatment. And HHS did not show that hospitals, the recipients of federal funds, have been refusing treatment that parents have requested or courts have ordered.

Stevens said HHS equated the withholding of consent by parents with denial of treatment by hospitals. Indeed, hospitals could be sued for performing surgery without parental consent. The Court's plurality held that the HHS regulations were not grounded in need because there is no evidence of hospitals denying care "on the basis of handicap," only on the basis of parental non-consent.

In dissent, Justice White was joined by Brennan, and by O'Connor in part. White correctly said the plurality was too sweeping in rejecting HHS's right to regulate under the Rehabilitation Act. The question, White said, is whether HHS has "any authority at all" under the Rehabilitation Act to regulate medical-care decisions concerning handicapped newborns. White said, reasonably: yes.

White said that no one, including the Court's plurality, disputes what the data demonstrates: Decisions are often made to deny treatment to handicapped newborns. A survey of pediatricians showed that most would acquiesce in parents' decisions to administer lethal neglect against Down's syndrome infants with life threatening physical problems, and a significant percentage of the physicians would encourage parental non-consent. The surveyed pediatricians said they would not acquiesce in parental decisions not to treat children with the same physical problems but who were not destined to be mentally retarded.

Such decisions are discriminatory because the treatment withheld would be automatically extended to non-handicapped newborns. Were it not extended, many doctors would seek a court order to extend it.

White says there can be a regulatory role reasonably related to the aims of the Rehabilitation Act. The regulations would recognize that parental decisions about care for handicapped newborns — decisions made when parents are exhausted and distraught — are influenced by doctors and hospitals. Legitimate regulations could require recipients of federal funds, such as hospitals, to cooperate in alerting nurses and others, such as state child-protection agencies, to their responsibility not to act in a discriminatory manner regarding treatment of life-threatening problems.

Children are not chattel, and parents have de facto discretion to kill handicapped newborns through aggressive neglect. White's point is that the Rehabilitation Act authorizes a regulatory role in pulling health-care professionals and state authorities up to higher vigilance regarding professional duties and the application of child abuse and other laws relevant to such neglect.

The Court was ruling on a narrow question of administrative proprieties under a particular statute, rather than the protections implicit in, say, constitutional language such as the guarantee of "equal protection" of the laws. Thus the terms of this case miniaturized the issue.

But the issue is, daily, a matter of life and death in hospital conference rooms. Decisions taken there are shaped by the nation's moral sensibilities, and shaping those is a proper goal for federal action.

ART BUCHWALD

Father (on only some occasions) knows best

What's coming up is Father's Day. Unless I missed someone, everyone has had a father. Some of them were very good fathers like the ones in Norman Rockwell's Saturday Evening Post covers, and some of them were very bad fathers like Joseph Stalin.

Art Buchwald

What designates a father is his ability to give his seed to a woman, which will fertilize an egg, which will produce a baby in the body of the female, while everyone stands around and shakes hands with the father.

When the woman loves the father she says to him, "It looks just like you."

When she doesn't love the father she says, "There has to be a better way to spend Saturday night."

Fathers are not very good when it comes to communicating with little babies, except to wiggle their fingers and make faces. But as the child grows older the father begins to talk to it. The father's first words are, "Don't do that." If the child doesn't obey he says, "I told you not to do that, and if you do it once more you're going to be sorry." And finally, "Okay, that's the last time. Now you're going to get it if you don't quit," and so on ad infinitum.

Mothers are constantly talking to or about fathers. "You're his father. You straighten him out." Or to the child, "Wait until your father comes home," or "Don't tell your father. He'll hit the ceiling."

Where fathers are the best is when they are talking about sports — any sports. "I'll buy you a new bike if you make the Little League baseball team." "You're nobody until you can make a dunk shot." "You may be a girl but you can still play touch football."

Most fathers are bewildered by female offspring. Early in life girls discover they are not going to get much out of their mothers, but fathers are a cinch to manipulate. And so the battle begins between mothers and daughters for the heart and mind of the only male grown-up in the house. Loyalties are tested. "You're always taking her side." "She has you wrapped around her finger." "You can choose between her or me."

Just because a person is a father doesn't mean that he is anything special. There are fathers who don't deserve a Father's Day. Many cut out when the going got tough. Others didn't want the job in the first place. And still others forgot to come home. If you see such people celebrating, tell them they are not supposed to.

Here are certain things that one should keep in mind when it comes to fathers.

— Just because the father sits at the head of the table does not mean he's in charge of anything.

— At some point in a marriage — usually when the first child arrives — the mother captures control of the household and the father never gets it back again.

— When both the mother and father are working, the thing that makes the family the most happy is a large bucket of Kentucky Fried Chicken.

— Fathers who have had spent youths are far tougher on their sons and daughters than fathers who never fooled around at all.

— When it comes to television sitcoms fathers are not to be trusted in the (a) kitchen, (b) living room, (c) outdoors, (d) all of the above.

— If you are in doubt what to buy your father for Father's Day, remember most grown males can never get enough ice cream.

How do I happen to know so much about fathers? I am one. I can't claim to be a perfect father, though it would be very hard for me to think of any situation where my children were right and I was wrong.

Kids remember things about their fathers that we tend to forget. I recall once in a living room stating that I had never hit my daughter and she said, "Yes, you did. It was on June 20, 1972, at 4:06 p.m. in my room, and you hit me with your hand, and it hurt for three days."

"What about all the times I didn't hit you when you deserved it?" All she could reply to that was "I don't remember."

Millions interrupt couple's honeymoon

CARLINVILLE, Ill. (AP) — The honeymoon was interrupted for Britt and Pam Spangler, but they figured $3.25 million made it worthwhile.

The former high school sweethearts, who were married Saturday at the United Methodist Church and were honeymooning nearby, received an Illinois Lottery ticket as part of a wedding present from Pam's aunt and uncle, Denise and Charles Cadmus.

Monday, they were told it was a grand prize winner.

The ticket will pay the couple $162,500 annually for the next 20 years.

"Britt laid it on the coffee table," Spangler's mother Judy recalled, "and Pam's mother, Wilma Rhodes, said she'd take it and check it against the numbers in the paper today. She did, and we had to call them home from the motel to tell them the news."

The newlyweds don't have any special plans for the money yet, Mrs. Spangler said, but they did decide to buy a new car.

TORNADO or THUNDERSTORM

WATCH
(Conditions are right for a tornado or severe thunderstorm to form.)

WARNING
(A tornado or severe thunderstorm already is in existence.)

Conditions forecast for 8 AM Friday

In North Texas, widely scattered afternoon and evening thunderstorms extreme south and southeast, otherwise clear to partly cloudy through Friday. Slowly rising afternoon temperatures with highs in the 90s. Lows tonight 64 to 68.

In West Texas, isolated evening thunderstorms extreme south. Otherwise fair tonight. Sunny with near seasonal temperatures Friday. Highs in the 80s and 90s, except in the lower 100s in the Rio Grande Valley. Lows tonight generally in the 60s.

In South Texas, continued partly cloudy warm and humid tonight and Friday. Highs in the 90s except upper 80s coast. Lows in the 70s.

Sunny days continuing

From Staff and Wire Reports

Sunny, warm weather will continue over the Permian Basin through Friday, according to forecasters at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. Friday's high is expected to reach into the middle 90s.

Tonight, under fair skies, the low will be in the mid-60s. Winds will be out of the south at five to 10 mph, shifting on Friday to the southeast at five to 15 mph.

Wednesday's high of 86 was 18 degrees below the record high set in 1959. The 55-degree record low set for this date in 1979 was nine degrees cooler than this morning's low.

STATE

A weak cold front extended across Texas today from near Texarkana to the Big Bend, triggering an area of thundershowers in the southern part of the Edwards Plateau.

Another area of showers was located along the Gulf Coast from near Galveston to Corpus Christi. Meanwhile, most of the Lone Star State had clear skies. An exception was South Texas, where skies were mostly cloudy.

Overnight temperatures were in the 70s in South Texas and generally in the 60s elsewhere. Readings ranged from 54 at Marfa to 80 at Corpus Christi. Winds were generally below 10 mph and from the south.

The National Weather Service said skies would be fair over most of Texas, with a slight chance chance of scattered thunderstorms statewide except for the Panhandle.

NATION

Torrential thunderstorms swamped the already soggy upper Ohio Valley and Great Lakes today, flooding basements in Michigan, causing rivers to jump their banks in Ohio and Pennsylvania, and prompting warnings of further flooding.

An evacuation center was set up in the Lansing, Mich., area after floods closed many roads and flooded cellars.

In northeast Ohio, many roads were flooded as rivers and streams ran high or jumped their banks. A bridge was washed out at Kirtland on Wednesday and another bridge was in danger of being washed out in Chardon township.

In western Pennsylvania, a steel bridge was underwater in Albion and flooding was reported in Erie, Clarion and Armstrong counties.

The National Weather Service issued urban and small stream flood warnings, flash flood warnings, flood warnings or flood watches for western Pennsylvania, southwest New York and all of Ohio except the state's southeastern section.

Dollar gains

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar posted modest gains against most European currencies today in early trading. Gold prices fluctuated within a narrow range.

Traders attributed the dollar's rise to remarks by the governor of Japan's central bank, Satoshi Sumita, who expressed concern about the U.S. currency's continuing decline against the Japanese yen.

His remarks coincided with the Bank of Japan's reported purchase of about $100 million on the open market to slow the yen's rise, the traders said.

The dollar closed in Tokyo at 165.75 yen, down from 166.70 yen Wednesday. Later, in London, the U.S. unit edged up to 166.35 yen.

Selected midmorning dollar rates compared with levels in Europe late Wednesday:

—2.2140 West German marks, up from 2.2105

—1.8290 Swiss francs, up from 1.8230

—7.0550 French francs, up from 7.0425

—2.4905 Dutch guilders, up from 2.4870

—1,519.00 Italian lire, down from 1,519.50

—1.38675 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3895

The British pound fell to $1.5263 from $1.5272.

London's five main bullion houses fixed a recommended gold price of $347.95 a troy ounce at midmorning, up from $347.70 late Wednesday.

In Zurich, the metal was bid at $347.80, up from $347.50.

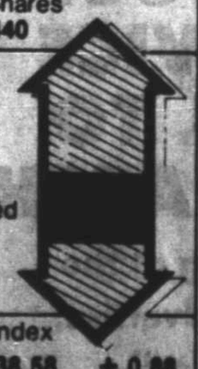

Earlier, in Hong Kong gold closed at a bid of $347.12, down from $348.11 Tuesday. Hong Kong markets were closed Wednesday for a public holiday.

Silver was quoted in London at a bid of $5.36 an ounce, up from $5.34 late Wednesday.

Oklahoma commission asked to price state's oil

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Allowing futures prices to determine the value of crude oil is a form of legalized high-stakes gambling that could lead to the collapse of the petroleum industry, a Houston energy consultant testified Wednesday before the Oklahoma Corporation Commission.

"It's a speculative activity, of trading paper and money in New York, for setting the price of petroleum ... it's the same as gambling in Las Vegas," William Edwards testified in the case of an independent oilman who is asking the three-member commission to set a minimum price for Oklahoma crude.

Thomas Elwood Kemp of Ada, owner of the Gloria Corp., and the National Association of Royalty Owners want the Corporation Commission to dust off a 1915 law granting the commission the right to set the value of a barrel of oil drawn from the sands of Oklahoma. They are asking for a minimum price of $20 per barrel.

Prices for crude oil have dropped from a steady level that hovered near $30 a barrel last year into the $13 to $14 range, testified Charles J. Mankin, director of the Oklahoma Geological Survey.

The decline has rocked Oklahoma's economy, resulting in thousands of layoffs, and is largely responsible for a $467 million shortfall in revenue the Legislature can appropriate for the fiscal year that begins July 1.

For every $1 drop in the price of oil, the state treasury loses $11 million in gross production taxes, Kemp said.

When prices drop below $20 a barrel, many wells in Oklahoma become uneconomical to operate, the royalty group contends.

"We want a fair price for our product," said Kemp, who complained that oil and other U.S. commodities are the only products sold at prices set by the buyer and not the seller.

His arguments for oil price-setting, based on the law written 71 years ago, are being challenged in the case by Phillips Petroleum Co. of Bartlesville and Scurlock Oil Co. of Oklahoma City.

"The whole premise of the act is based on the state's ability to protect the natural resources of the state — the correlative and property rights of mineral owners in the state," said Assistant Attorney General Marc Edwards.

Edwards said the issue hinged on the state's rights vs. the burden it would place on interstate commerce, the question of price fixing and whether such a measure would violate antitrust laws.

Scurlock attorney Richard Books has asked the commission to dismiss the case. Attorneys for Phillips contend the commission does not have jurisdiction in the matter of setting prices.

William Edwards testified he believes the value of Oklahoma oil would be slightly above $27 a barrel.

Basing oil prices on the futures market, Edwards said, is "absolutely wrong."

Speculative prices are the result of "game playing," Edwards said. "It's a legalized, tax-loss acceptable form of high-stakes gambling," and results in "disparities, discrepancies and abuses" between the actual value of oil and the prices paid for crude.

"It's not only obvious to me, it's sickening," the consultant said.

"If this industry continues to let these gambling actions determine the price of petroleum taken out of the fields ... the petroleum industry as we know it today is going to collapse."

Planners aim to make Texas high-tech leader

DALLAS (AP) — Texas' push to gain more high-tech jobs has taken added significance with the fall in the price of oil, political and business leaders said at a conference Wednesday.

"We have to come from behind. We have not had our eye on science and technology in the past," said Mike Waterman, chairman of the Texas Science & Technology Council, which hosted the fact-finding conference.

Gov. Mark White, keynote speaker at the gathering at Dallas' Infomart, a computer mart, said that when he created the council, "no one had any idea that oil prices would drop over 60 percent in less than 60 days.

"No one knew foreign countries would be dumping microchips on the U.S. market," he said. He cited the need to preserve the state's energy sector, saying "We have a strong commitment to geology and to develop oil and gas. There is technology in the oil and gas industry that we want to keep together."

Now it is imperative that Texas make strides in becoming the top high-technology state, "a difficult goal to achieve," White said.

He called on the oil industry to create an organization, similar to an Austin-based high-tech consortium, to explore new ways of retrieving natural resources.

White also said that state government must do more for research and become a catalyst for future developments in the high-tech field.

"Strong industries are never static," he said. "Our future will not be dominated by hydrocarbon resources."

Promoter of a tough education program during his tenure as governor, White said the Japanese have surpassed the United States in education.

"They graduate as many engineers as we do lawyers. America cannot become a nation of short-order cooks," the governor said.

Gov. Mark White

Bill Moore, chairman of Dallas-based Recognition Equipment Inc. who has served on various high-tech panels, said high-tech has the largest manufacturing segment in the country.

He said that most high-tech companies are small and that most new jobs come from those small companies.

The high-tech corridors of Boston's Route 128 and California's Silicon Valley, he said, "have reached the saturation point. Texas in particular is a focal point" for the future, he said.

White and Moore opened a two-day conference seeking ideas for a strategic plan to make Texas the preeminent technology state by the year 2000.

Oil prices surprise analysts by rising

Oil prices rebounded in a surprising technical rally on world markets Wednesday despite a report showing U.S. gasoline supplies still exceed demand in the world's largest oil-consuming nation.

Analysts had expected oil prices to continue their decline after the American Petroleum Institute reported late Tuesday that gasoline stocks increased for the fifth straight week even though the peak summer driving season has begun.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, West Texas intermediate, the benchmark U.S. crude, jumped 93 cents to $13.49 a barrel. The crude had fallen steadily since reaching $17.16 a barrel May 19.

Oil specialists attributed the price bounce to technical factors and said fundamental conditions in the glutted international market remain negative.

TWA president resigns

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Richard D. Pearson, president of Trans World Airlines, has been dismissed as president in a rivalry with a newcomer to the company, D. Joseph Corr, sources close to the company said Wednesday.

The company announced late Wednesday that Pearson had resigned. The sources close to the company said that he had been dismissed last Friday.

Top company sources said that there had been some friction between Pearson and Corr, who was named a vice chairman in April. He was brought in by Carl C. Icahn, the New York investor who controls the airline, to make the airline profitable.

Corr, who is also a TWA director, was brought into the airline by Icahn after successes by Corr at another Icahn company, ACF Industries.

In his new role at TWA, Corr has been given responsibility for carrying out the airline's overall strategy. Sources said he had told Icahn that he needed to remove Pearson to give himself a clear field to carry out his mission.

Reached in Kansas City, Mo., before TWA made its announcement late in the day, Pearson said he could not comment until the announcement had been made. He could not be reached after the announcement because he had left his house in Kansas City.

Retail sales decline

WASHINGTON (AP) — Retail sales fell 0.1 percent in May, the third decline in the last four months, the government reported today.

The report said that the May setback followed declines of 0.1 percent in February and 0.4 percent in March. In April, sales had posted a 0.4 percent rise.

In another bit of gloomy news, the Commerce Department also reported today that businesses have cut back on their capital investment plans for the current year in the face of continued economic weakness.

The department said spending on new plant and equipment, after adjusting for inflation, will decline by 1.3 percent this year, the first decline since a 1.2 percent drop in 1983.

The new estimate, based on a survey completed in May, represented a downward revision from a previous report which predicted spending would rise by 0.9 percent this year.

The department said that reductions in spending plans were widespread among various industries but that three-fourths of the total decline from the previous survey was accounted for by the petroleum and mining industries, reflecting the slump in oil drilling as a result of falling oil prices.

Making the right connections crucial in any success

Pooling economic clout on both sides of the bargaining table is far from a new concept in the natural gas business. It has tried with varying degrees of success by West Texas producers and end-users around the country.

Late last year a group of independent gas producers from throughout the Southwest tried to organize an investor-owned gas marketing group to provide member producers more leverage in finding new and expanded markets. But, Independent Gas Producers Inc. (IGPI), with its headquarters in Fort Worth, has suffered from a lack of participation, according to George Staley, one of the group's directors in Midland.

Although still in operation, the IGPI hasn't had the desired impact on finding diverse new markets for local producers' gas, Staley notes. "We really needed to attract more suppliers in order to effectively pursue new markets."

Now comes a report from Nebraska of what is in effect the flip side of the same coin.

The Nebraska Municipal Power Pool (NMPP), which buys wholesale electricity for 42 communities in Nebraska, Wyoming, Colorado and Kansas, wants to form a regional agency to purchase natural gas for many of those same small towns.

Forming a regional agency would allow towns, and other limited entities, to take advantage of increased competition in the brave, new deregulated natural gas industry. "It would essentially give them more leverage," claims H. Steve Wacker, general manager of NMPP.

Municipalities that had been relying on a single regulated natural gas supplier now have the option of shopping around for natural gas at the lowest price.

But Wacker notes many of the smaller towns lack the staff and expertise to deal with the marketplace, which the regional agency would provide. He says a group of towns would be more effective dealing with natural gas companies than would a single town.

Producers may be able to learn some lessons in cooperation and the benefits of pooling resources and expertise by dealing with buyers' groups such as the proposed Midwestern group.

One key to success in retailing is establishing an almost personal bond beyond the business relationship between shop and shopper. Local retailer Pier 1 Imports, headquartered in Fort Worth, has built just such a bond by growing up right along with the Baby Boomers who helped make the company a roaring success through the 1960s and early '70s.

The company started out 24 years ago primarily as a provider of exotic — but cheap — imported knick-knacks ideal for decorating hippie pads and college dorm rooms.

Now, many of those flower children who once flocked in in their VW Microbuses for incense and love beads drive up in BMWs seeking wicker porch furniture and home furnishings.

"Our stores have outgrown their 'head shop' image, and their limited offerings of oriental decorations and accessories," says Kelli Hayduk, Pier 1 manager in Midland.

With an eye on the changing tastes and expanding pocketbooks of its clientele, Pier 1 last winter broadened its furniture mix from its mainstay wicker and rattan — which made up 34 per cent of company inventory in 1985 — to oak and pine pieces imported from Europe.

According to figures published last August, Pier 1 had 278 stores encompassing 1.83 million square feet of selling space. By 1990, Hayduk says the company plans to nearly double that to 500 stores — a growth rate of one store every five days.

Momentum hinges on honing the stores' image as a place where modern-day baby boomers can find shopping nirvana. The company sells 12,500 items, 90 percent hand-made, from 60 countries.

The company opened its first store in San Francisco the day after Thanksgiving 1962, importing most of its merchandise from Japan, which at the time had a reputation for making cheap curios. The store was immediately popular with San Francisco's "flower children." By 1970, Pier 1 had 75 stores.

"We sold beads, incense, and bed spreads from India that people hung up to cover a hole in the wall," notes Clark Johnson, the company's chairman.

After going public in 1972 — the same year Midland's store opened — Pier 1 launched its first major expansion, tripling its number of stores to 268 by 1975. Growth continued, but without careful planning. Sales and profits deteriorated, and many stores had to close.

Johnson says Pier 1 got back on track in 1980 when it shifted emphasis from selling individual novelty items to offering higher quality, larger-ticket merchandise appealing to an older audience. For example, sales of mostly wicker and rattan furniture now generate about 25 percent of revenues, up from only 8 percent a decade ago.

Display has changed as well. Products traditionally shelved with little rhyme or reason, now are systematically arranged to give each line more importance to appeal to the typical Pier 1 customer — a college-educated woman with a family income above $35,000 a year, Hayduk explains.

The merchandising metamorphosis of the Midland store has had a dramatic effect on sales activity, even in the current down economy. Sales have increased every month this year thanks to "in-store improvements of Pier 1's shopping environment," Hayduk says.

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

McKay tests Abo gas producers

From Staff Reports

McKAY OIL CORP. reports five new Abo gas producers in the West Pecos Slope field of Chaves County, NM, including two wildcats.

McKay potentialed the No. 1 China Draw Federal, a 3,400 ft. wildcat, the flow 5.9 Mmcfd on a one inch choke from perforations 2,857 ft. to 2,984 ft. with a flowing tubing pressure of 882 psi. Pay was topped at 2,857 ft.

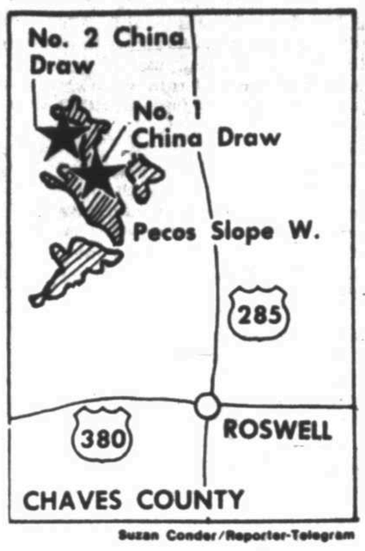

A second 3,400 ft. wildcat, the No. 2 China Draw Federal, was tested to flow 5.4 Mmcfd on a one inch choke from perforations 2,819 to 2,953 ft. Flowing tubing pressure is 915 psi, and pay was topped at 2,819 ft.

On potential test, the No. 3 China Draw Federal flowed 679 Mcfd on a one inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 920 psi. Production is from perforations 2,753 to 2,865 ft., and pay was topped at 2,753 ft.

McKay finaled the No. 4 China Draw Federal to flow 5.8 Mmcfd on a one inch choke from perforations 2,803 to 3,103 ft. Flowing tubing pressure was 790 psi., and pay was topped at 2,803 ft.

A fifth, the No. 3 Remelle Federal, tested to flow 3.5 Mmcfd on a one inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 885 psi. Production is from perforations 2,823 to 3,097 ft., and pay was topped at 2,823 ft.

The four China Draw wells are located in T6s, R23e, and the Remelle Federal No. 3 is in T6s, R22e.

Lea producer flows 444 barrels crude oil

Lea County gained an undesignated Strawn producer as NEARBURG PRODUCING CO. completed the No. 1 Wright.

The well was tested to flow 444.75 barrels of crude, 527 Mcfd and no water on a 20/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 500 psi. Production is from perforations 11,708 to 11,777 ft., no treatment reported.

Drilled to a total depth of 12,140 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, the well was plugged back to 11,924 ft. Pay was topped at 11,708 ft.

Location is 2,460 ft. from south and 760 ft. from east lines of Section 12, T17s, R37e.

Gaines find tested to pump 40 barrels oil

A Wichita-Albany discovery was reported in the Block A-28 field of Gaines County as WESTERN RESERVES OIL CO. completed the No. 2 McNeill "B".

On potential test, the well pumped 40 barrels of 38 gravity crude, 38 Mcfd and 66 barrels of water from perforations 7,283 to 7,538 ft. The interval was acidized with 6,000 gallons of 15 percent NeFe acid. Gas-oil ratio is 954:1.

Scheduled as a 7,700 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to a total depth of 7,680 ft., where 4 1/2 inch casing was set, and plugged back to 7,637 ft.

The well topped the Middle Drinkard at 7,051 ft., Wichita Albany at 7,237, and the Crump at 7,433 ft. on ground elevation of 3,473.4 ft. Pay was topped at 7,283 ft.

Location is 1,980 ft. from north and 660 ft. from east lines of Section 19, Block A-28, PSL survey, 22 miles southwest of Seminole.

Tamarack reports 17 barrel discovery

Lea County gained a second undesignated producer, producing from the Queen formation, as TAMARACK PETROLEUM CO., INC. completed an exploratory project.

Tamarack potentialed the No. 1 Maralo "3" State to pump 17 barrels of 39.4 gravity crude, 9 Mcfd and 24 barrels of water from perforations 4,840 to 4,848 ft. The interval was acidized with 3250 gallons of 7.5 percent HCL and fractured with 20,000 gallons of gelled water and 40,000 lbs. 20/40 sand. Gas-oil ratio is 529:1.

Permitted as a 4,800 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to a total depth of 4,960 ft. and plugged back to 4,918 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 4,959 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 3,764 ft., include Anhydrite at 1,770 ft., Salt at 1,872, Base Salt at 3,056, Yates at 3,216, Seven Rivers at 3,584, and the Queen at 4,422 ft. Pay was topped at 4,840 ft.

Location is 330 ft. from south and west lines of Section 3, T19s, R36e.

Culberson field gains three barrel producer

The Geraldine Ford field of Culberson County gained a modest producer as CONOCO, INC. completed the No. 141A Ford Geraldine Unit.

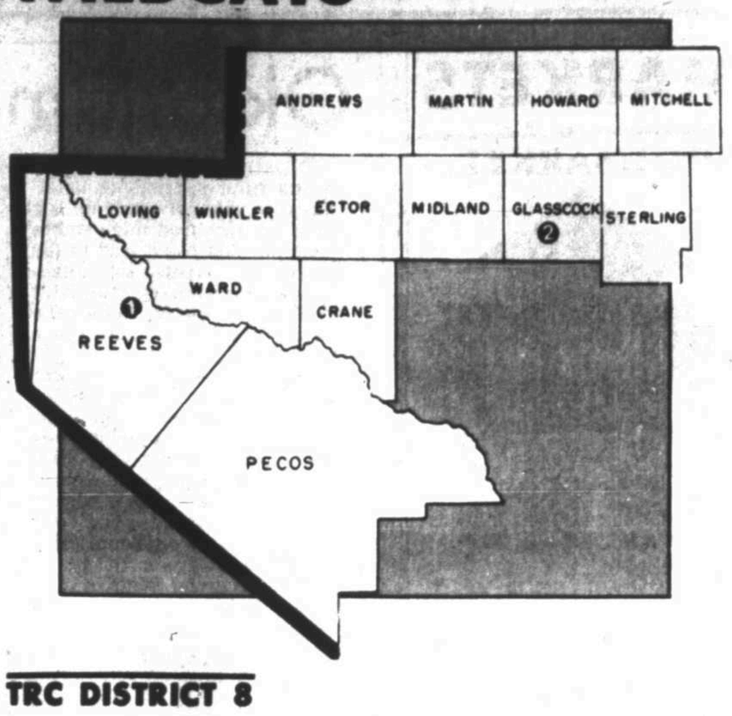

Conoco completed the well to pump three barrels of 40 gravity crude, one Mcfd and 58 barrels of water from perforations 2,580 to 2,630 ft. The interval was treated with 5,000 gallons of gel and 6,000 lbs. 20/40 sand. Gas-oil ratio is 333:1.

Drilled to a total depth of 2,750 ft. where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, the well was plugged back to 2,702 ft.

The well topped the Ramsey at 2,580 ft. on ground elevation of 3,007 ft. Pay was topped at 2,580 ft.

Location is 4,215 ft. from west and 2,930 ft. from north lines of Section 35, Block 54, T-1-S, T&P survey, six miles southwest of Orla.

OIL & GAS DIGEST

Gasoline stocks rise for fifth straight week

NEW YORK (UPI) — The nation's gasoline stocks increased for the fifth week in a row as fuel imports soared and production slipped, the American Petroleum Institute reported Tuesday.

Rising gasoline inventories, which normally decline during the peak summer driving season, have sparked concern that the United States could soon be faced with a fuel surplus since demand has been weaker than projected.

U.S. gasoline stocks moved up to 222.7 million barrels in the week ended June 6 from 219.1 million barrels the week before and were ahead of the 220.1 million barrels in storage in the same week last year, the oil industry trade group said.

Unleaded fuel, which accounts for more than 70 percent of the domestic gasoline market, swelled to 116.1 million barrels from 115.2 million barrels the prior week and 106.7 million barrels in the comparable 1985 week.

Gasoline imports jumped to 595,000 barrels a day from 350,000 barrels a day a week ago and 429,000 barrels a day a year ago.

Gasoline production wound down to 7.2 million barrels a day from 7.3 million barrels a day in the preceding week but outpaced the 6.6 million barrel-a-day rate of last year.

Earlier this week, Los Angeles gasoline analyst Dan Lundberg said the average U.S. pump price has climbed more than 7 cents a gallon since bottoming out in April and is expected to rise further.

Norway, Venezuela to discuss oil market situation

VIENNA (UPI) — The prime minister of Norway, a key non-OPEC producer, will arrive in Caracas June 18 to discuss conditions in the world oil market with Venezuelan officials, the OPEC news agency reported Tuesday.

OPECNA quoted a Venezuelan embassy official in Oslo as saying Norwegian Prime Minister Gro Harlem Brundtland will be received by Venezuelan President Jaime Lusinchi and on June 18 she will meet with Venezuelan Oil Minister Arturo Hernandez Grisanti, who is the current OPEC president.

A spokesman for the Norwegian prime minister told OPECNA that issues related to the current oil market situation would definitely be on the agenda of topics discussed in Caracas.

Brundtland will visit Venezuela, a member of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, en route to Lima to attend the conference of the Socialist International being held in the Peruvian capital June 20-23.

Norway's new government has indicated it is prepared to cooperate with OPEC to stabilize the oil market if the 13-nation cartel can agree on realistic steps to bolster prices.

The previous coalition government, which refused to join forces with OPEC, was ousted early last month because the oil price collapse has slashed Norway's oil revenues and damaged the economy.

Britain and Norway — the principal North Sea producers — are the prime targets of OPEC's campaign to flood the market with surplus crude and to force non-OPEC members to curb their output.

Texas Oil reports verdict in subsidiary lawsuit

DALLAS (SWN) Texas Oil & Gas Corp. announced that a jury had returned a verdict of approximately $108 million against one of its subsidiaries yesterday in a lawsuit entitled Texas Crude, Inc. v. Delhi Gas Pipeline Corporation, Case No. 85-7-540, District Court of Cherokee County, Texas. Plaintiff in the lawsuit claims breach of a gas purchase contract. Forrest E. Hoglund, president of Texas Oil & Gas Corp., stated, "We find the verdict shocking and excessive. No judgement has yet been entered. Our attorneys are studying the situation and we will certainly appeal should a judgement be entered. Since the matter remains in active litigation, further comment would be inappropriate at this time."

Adams Resources completes Burleson County well

HOUSTON (SWN) Robert A. Shepherd, Jr., President of Adams Resources & Energy, Inc., announced the recent completion by its wholly-owned subsidiary, Adams Resources Exploration Corporation, of a new well in the Burleson County, Texas portion of the Giddings Field. The Adams Resources Exploration B.L.M. Lewis No. 1 well in the J. Goacher Survey was completed flowing 70 barrels of oil and and 733 MCF gas with a flowing tubing pressure of 775 psi through a 24/64-inch choke from the interval 9,444-9,850 feet in the Austin Chalk formation. Adams Exco 1985 Year End Private Placement Drilling Program owns 100 percent working interest.

Louisiana oil experts predict more bankruptcies, low profits

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Many Louisiana oil and gas executives are pessimistic about their industry's general economic health over the coming 12 months, according to a survey of the Louisiana Survey Center.

Approximately 75 percent of those responding to the survey expect a rise in bankruptcies and 87 percent expect a decline in profits, said center director Archer Huneycutt of Louisiana Tech University.

"Eighty-six percent think that a minimum price of $15 to $25 per barrel is necessary for their industry to remain healthy and 70 percent believe that the price is likely to stabilize at that level in the next two to three years," Huneycutt said.

The survey was conducted in May, and results are based on responses from 201 firms employing more than five people in the oil and gas industry. Firms responding to the survey accounted for 25 percent of all such firms listed by the Louisiana Employment Security Division with designations as oil and gas extraction businesses, Huneycutt said.

The survey showed that 52.1 percent of the respondents expect the number of hourly workers to drop a great deal, while 66.3 percent said the number of drilling rigs in operations would drop a great deal, he said.

"Approximately two out of three executives favored a $5 per barrel import tax on oil," Huneycutt said.

But while he said it is difficult to tell how closely survey results match the feelings of all oil and gas executives, it indicates what many of the leaders think the next year holds.

Amoco Oil introduces new gasoline for improved performance, power

CHICAGO — (UPI) Amoco Oil Co. introduced its Ultimate Lead-Free Premium gasoline, a new product that the company said will improve automobile performance and increase the power output of modern engines.

Amoco Ultimate became available in major metropolitan areas and will be available throughout Amoco's marketing system within the next few weeks, the company said in a news release.

Amoco Ultimate has an octane content of 93 in the East and South and 92 in the Midwest, making it one of the highest octane products available, the release said. It contains no alcohols or oxygenates.

"Amoco Ultimate is a high-octane, pure lead-free, high-detergency gasoline formulated to enhance the performance of today's high-tech engines," said senior marketing vice president Sam G. Van Sickle. "It will keep a car's engine clean."

The gasoline's composition, which includes a cleaning agent, will inhibit the formation of intake system deposits and the plugging of port fuel injectors that has proved troublesome for some high-performance engines, Amoco said. The formula will also start to clean engines and dirty fuel injectors.

"As automobile technology advances, so must gasoline technology," Van Sickle said. "We believe that Amoco Ultimate, which is state of the art, is the product that can take consumers and their automobiles into the 21st century."

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Stop orders can't be place on OTC stocks

By BILL DOYLE

Q. About a year ago, I purchased 200 shares of a stock in the over-the-counter market. When that stock moved up to $8.50, I called my broker and tried to put in a "stop order" at $8. I was told I could not place a stop order on that stock.

So, I sold at the going price for a nice profit. But I don't understand why I could not place a stop order on that stock. Can you explain?

A. It's because there is no formal mechanism for stop orders in the over-the-counter market. You can place stop orders on stocks listed on stock exchanges, but not on stocks traded O-T-C.

Doyle

A stop order is an order to sell or buy a stock when it trades at a certain price. When that price is reached, the stop order becomes a "market order" and is executed at the best available price, which might be equal to, above or below the stop order price.

This can be done in stock exchange trading, because all stop orders in any particular stock are entered in the book of the specialist who makes a market in that stock on the exchange trading floor.

O-T-C trading is done through a worldwide wire network and has no trading floor. Each O-T-C stock has a number of brokerage firms acting as market-makers. But there is no central book in which stop orders can be recorded.

If you are a very good customer, you might be able to prevail upon your broker to keep an eye on the price of an O-T-C stock and sell or buy it for you when it hits a certain price. But that's asking a lot and is not a formal stop order arrangement.

* * *

Q. There was a rather heated discussion after a recent golf game. Three of us were discussing "stop loss orders," when the other member of our foursome insisted that term is wrong and should be called "stop order." Two brokers at the bar agreed with the three of us but could not convince our other player. He insisted we write you.

Can you settle this? Your answer will determine who buys the drinks at the 19th hole.

A. Next time you play, don't let that insistent member of your group drive home. He wins enough drinks to get a snootful. The correct term is "stop order."

Let's say a stock you own is trading at $20 a share on a stock exchange and you put in a stop order to sell at $18. If the stock drop to $18, your order becomes a market order and your stock will be sold — not necessarily at $18. You'll get whatever price it will bring at that moment in time.

If a lot of other stop orders to sell at $18 have been placed ahead of yours, that might send the stock's price sharply down. You could end up with less than $18 a share.

All too many brokers like to say "stop loss order," thereby giving the impression that type of order provides absolute protection against loss. That's simply not so.

* * *

Q. What determines whether a stock is listed on the New York Stock Exchange, the American Stock Exchange or over-the-counter? Is it a matter of corporate preference, or what?

A. It's a combination of two factors — where a company's management wants its stock to be traded and "listing requirements." That second factor involves such things as a company's total assets, earnings, number of shares outstanding and shareholders.

The New York Stock Exchange has the most stringent listing requirements. American Stock Exchange listing requirements are about equal to those of the O-T-C "National Market System." But there are thousands of other O-T-C stocks.

In years gone by, as a company grew and prospered, its stock usually moved from the O-T-C to the Amex and then to the NYSE. However, the managements of many companies now prefer to keep their stocks O-T-C, often because they are convinced that is a better marketplace.

Approximately 1,800 O-T-C National Market System stocks qualify for Amex listing and some 700 of those meet the financial requirements for NYSE listing.

Minister feels like kid

MISSOULA, Mont. (AP) — The Rev. Jesse R. Cavileer may be 69, but he says he feels like he's 18, and the Selective Service System apparently agrees.

Cavileer, a Unitarian minister, received a letter recently telling him he had not registered for the draft within 30 days of his 18th birthday, and that he'd better get to it.

"It's a great morale builder and it may enable me to live a whole new life," he said.

Writer calls for forced unitization

From Staff Reports

The freewheeling ways of Texas' proud independent oil drillers have always prevailed in the state legislature — but the resultant inefficient oil field production is now pricing much Texas crude out of the current internationally competitive market.

This is one of the conclusions reached by Jacqueline Weaver, professor of law at the University of Houston-University Park and author of a new book, Unitization of Oil and Gas Fields in Texas: A Study of Legislative, Administrative and Judicial Policies, published this month.

Weaver proposes that Texas enact a compulsory unitization statute to compete more efficiently.

All major oil and gas producing states — except Texas — have a compulsory "unitization" statute. Unitization is the joint, coordinated operation of all or large parts of an oil or gas reservoir by the owners of the separate tracts overlying the reservoir. Such cooperative agreements between the many owners create efficient, low-cost operations and optimal oil recovery, Weaver explains.

"A compulsory state statute forces all landowners to cooperate. In Louisiana, a state with strong unitization policies, about 64 percent of the oil produced is from unitized fields," she says. "Only about 48 percent of Texas oil production comes from fields that have been voluntarily unitized. This percentage would be higher if Texas had a law that allowed the Railroad Commission to force unitization in those fields where voluntary agreements amount hundreds, even thousands, of owners are impossible to reach."

The major effect of less unitized production is that Texas oil and gas is expensive — too expensive to survive in today's $12 to $15 per barrel market, she says.

"If we had stronger unitization laws, more Texas fields could be producing profitably at only $15 per barrel," she added.

She notes that Texas politicians tend to measure the health of the economy by how many wells are drilled, and that it is not necessarily a correct barometer. "Since we had no unitization, we drilled thousands of unnecessary wells," she says.

Unitization will not save many of the thousands of small wells which have to be shut in because they have become uneconomic, she says. However, without unitization, many oil companies will plug their uneconomic wells. Their leases will end, royalties to landowners will cease, and the field will be abandoned, even though some recoverable oil still remains underground, she explains.

If the field were unitized, many unnecessary wells would still be shut in, but the fields as a whole can be produced at lower cost, unitized leases would not expire, landowners would continue to receive royalties, and more oil would be recovered at any given price.

"Boom periods of high energy prices allowed Texas oil producers and public officials to escape accountability for wasteful and inefficient methods of production," she says. "However, historically, I have found that whenever the price of oil drops, unitization becomes more desirable. For example, in the early 1930s, the crude price dropped from $1 to 10 cents a barrel. Even at this rock bottom price, the Yates field, one of the first to be unitized in Texas, was still profitable because it cost only 4 cents a barrel to produce."

The reason that compulsory unitization never passed the state legislature is that Texas has had a "populist" philosophy which favors small landowners, small producers and small wells, she says.

Playgirl magazine takes Chapter 11

Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — Playgirl magazine has filed for protection from its creditors under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code in New York.

The monthly publication, which offers light self-help features, celebrity interviews and a variety of Man of the Month nude photographs, had been losing circulation and advertising revenue steadily for the last several years.

Playgirl Editor Tomi Lewis, reached at her office here, said that Playgirl will continue to be published and that the owners plan to keep the company's headquarters in Santa Monica.

"We're working on the October issue right now," said Lewis, who is also the corporate secretary of Playgirl, according to the bankruptcy filing.

She declined to elaborate on the company's plans and would not discuss the bankruptcy court filing.

Started in 1973, Playgirl was selling 1.5 million copies a month within a year. A decade later, circulation had dropped by 60 percent. Some advertising executives suggested that the Playgirl formula bored the career-oriented women of the 1980s.

Nudity is not enough, they said. "It's like a television show that is one-joke situation comedy. After you tell it, what's left?" said Jim Spero, a senior vice president at Doyle Dane Bernbach ad agency in Los Angeles. Spero said that Playgirl didn't offer the serious political pieces or interviews occasionally found in Playboy magazine.

Other industry observers said that it was never clear to advertisers whether Playgirl's readers were only women or also homosexual men.

"I think the biggest question was who was reading the magazine," said Tony Hoyt, the West Coast advertising manager for Cosmopolitan magazine. The magazine's owners have always insisted that it was published for women.

The magazine filed for bankruptcy court protection May 23, shortly after one of its owners, Ira Ritter, sold his share as a result of messy courtroom battle with his former partner, Stephen L. Geller.

Pennant on line as Angels roar into El Paso

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

This was a game Midland Manager Joe Maddon labeled a "must" win and Mike Cook and Kevin King teamed up to make it so as the Angels made it five in a row by beating San Antonio, 4-2, at Angels' Stadium Wednesday night.

As far as Maddon was concerned this was one Midland needed, regardless of what first place El Paso did, to stay in the hunt for the Texas League West first half pennant.

So now the race will be decided in a six game series at El Paso's Dudley Field starting at 8:30 p.m. today.

And what a difference a five-game winning streak can make. After losing the opener of the San Antonio series 9-5 following an all-night bus ride from Beaumont, Maddon, when asked what it would take to catch El Paso, said,"For us to win 'em all. So there really isn't much hope, to face reality, since we have to finish in El Paso where we never play well."

WELL, NOT a whole lot has changed. The Angels are aware that they must win four of the six, but the mental outlook has flip-flopped completely. Now winning four of six in El Paso doesn't seem that unreasonable. "The pitching is the key," says second baseman Mark McLemore. "There is no reason why we can't score the runs in Dudley just like they do."

Of course Wednesday's win was a major reason for the turn around in outlook. Mike Cook was superb as he pitched seven-hit ball to notch his third win.

The Angels hadn't lost since last they faced Shawn Hillegas, 7-4, in the opener of the series and Hillegas was nursing a 2-1 lead into the sixth. Midland's only run had come on Glen Walker's 15th homer, a low ball lined over the left field fence in the fourth.

IT WAS in the sixth that King delivered his game-winner, a two-run single to left with Raul Tovar, who had singled, and Brian Brady, who had walked to open the inning, on base.

"Hillegas had been pitching me in and out all night," said King, who last year played triple A ball at Calgary, "He had just thrown a fast ball inside, so I guessed outside and got it."

Moments later King suffered the embarrassment of being doubled off first on a chop between the mound and first that catcher David Heath had beat.

"We had the hit and run on and that means I have to take off and look for a ball hit in the air," explained King. "I thought it was a fly ball, but the ump ruled it bounced off the plate. Luckily everything came out all right."

King admitted he was a slow starter, "It's the same every year, but I think I'll contribute before the season is over." His two-run single, however, may be the contribution that could lead to a pennant.

COOK WOULDN'T admit that this was his best effort of the year, but it came close. Cook, who faced Hillegas in the opener, had only five strikeouts this time but, most important, no walks. He also had stretches in which he retired 11 straight batters from the third through the sixth and finished by retiring the final eight batters in order.

"The key for me was handling the left handed hitters. Chris Chapman, Chris Gwynn and Joe Szekley hit me hard in the first game. I didn't have my good fast ball tonight, but I managed to keep Chapman and Gwynn off balance with a change up. That and not walking anybody, the first time that has happened this season, and keeping the base runners close."

Midland's insurance run came in the eighth when Tovar walked and came around on Brady's single and an error.

Injunctions stall 4A state tourney

Associated Press

Court orders from two different parts of the state put the Class 4A state baseball playoffs on hold Wednesday.

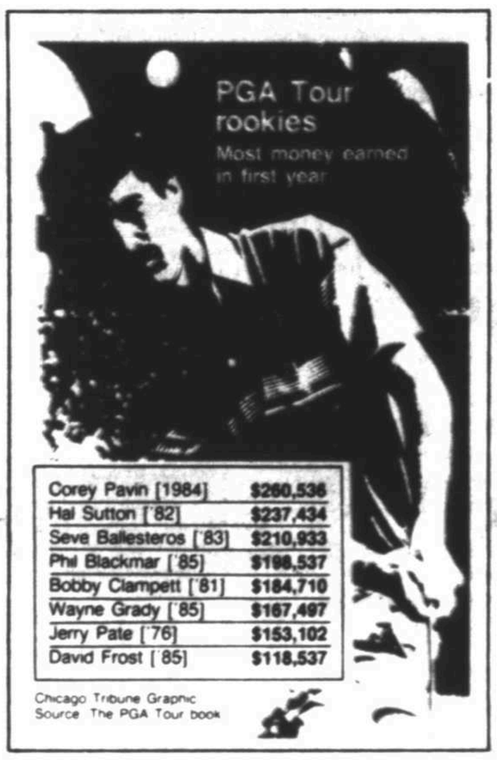

Judges in Austin and Waco blocked Class 4A play, and another in Edinburg ordered that play be moved from a field with artificial turf to one with grass.

"Because of two conflicting court orders, one issued in Waco and one in Austin, the Conference 4A state baseball tournament has been postponed until the court cases can be resolved. All other conferences will play at the time and site originally scheduled," the UIL said in a statement.

In Waco, Judge Bill Logue issued a temporary restraining order Wednesday blocking the 4A playoffs until Austin Westlake and Waco Richfield complete a best two-of-three series that was rained out last week with Westlake up 1-0 after edging Richfield 4-3.

However, in Austin, State District Judge Juan Gallardo issued an order blocking the 4A playoffs unless Westlake is allowed to participate.

Aussie strikes favorite's pose

U.S. Open

By HOWARD ULMAN

SOUTHAMPTON, N.Y. (AP) — Greg Norman has never won one of golf's major tournaments. Jack Nickluas, who has won 18, likes Norman's chances this week.

Norman, who is long off the tee but also has a fine touch on the green, said Wednesday he was ready to try and tame the Shinnecock Hills Golf Club course as the 86th U.S. Open was set to start today.

Nicklaus, the Masters champion who has enjoyed a golfing resurgence at age 46, said Norman has been "striking the ball very well" and tabbed the 31-year-old Australian as the favorite in the event which weather forecasters said would open with stiff winds blowing and the possibility of showers.

"It's a nice feather to have in your cap," Norman, who has won two tournaments in the last six weeks and tied for second in consecutive weeks in April, said of Nicklaus' statement. "I've been playing extremely well.

"Right now, I don't see anything holding me back from playing well this week."

One thing that may hold him and the rest of the 156-player field back is the wind. Gusts to 30 mph blew during Wednesday's final practice round. An already tough course with narrow fairways, heavy rough and a layout lengthened for the tournament, figured to be even tougher.

"I think the winning score is going to be over par," said Tom Watson, winless since 1984 when he captured three events and was the tour's top money-winner. "The rough is extremely penalizing."

NORMAN IS the tour's leading money winner this year with $447,109. He can add $115,000 to that by winning on the 95-year-old course that may be foreign to some players but has a touch of home to Norman.

"We play a lot of wind down in Australia, a lot of small, tight greens, fast greens, so I don't see a lot of difference," he said of the par-70, 6,912-yard spread where an ability to control shots may be more valuable than sheer power.

"Anybody that hits the ball strong left to right has got to be a favorite," Norman, who practiced with one such player, Nicklaus, Wednesday, said. "He wants to make this his fifth U.S. Open victory. He's confident.

"I just want to make it my first."

Norman ranks second on the tour in both driving distance and putting. He is sixth in reaching greens in regulation. Calvin Peete, the leader in that category, is among the favorites here because of that ability — to place the ball where he wants.

Seve Ballesteros, Bernhard Langer and Watson, who all have played well on European courses to which Shinnecock has been compared, also were considerfd pre-tournament contenders.

"I feel like I am playing quite well," said Ballesteros, who won the British Masters Sunday and has finished in the top four in his last five tournaments, all in Europe.

Ballesteros, a two-time winner of both the Masters and the British Open, will try to stop the wind from diverting his ball from its intended path.

"You have to keep the ball low as much as you can," he said.

How does he intend to do that?

"That's a secret," he said.

WATSON, THE 1982 U.S. Open winner, tied for eighth at last Sujday's Westchester Classic and thinks he could claim his second Open title at the site of the second Open 90 years ago.

"I probably spent too much time on the long game last year and not enough time on the short game," Watson said of his victory drought. "I had a very good tournament last week. I'm playing well enough to win."

Hough lasts 13 in 6-2 win

Can't finish what he starts

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Texas Manager Bobby Valentine wanted to leave veteran Charlie Hough in the game, but even knuckleballers have their limits.

"I had some thought about leaving him in," said Valentine after the Rangers' 6-2 victory over the Minnesota Twins in 16 innings.

"I wanted to leave him in to get the win," said Valentine about Hough, who worked 13 innings, the longest stint in the major leagues this year and the longest in Ranger history. "As it was, I don't think he would have finished anyway."

It finally took three relief innings from Mitch Williams and a three-run homer by Oddibe McDowell to turn back the Twins.

"The way Hough was pitching — only two sliders and 163 knuckleballs — he probably could have pitched all night. He kept saying he felt great," Valentine said, "but I felt old lucky number 13 was enough."

BUT HOUGH felt so good that he could have finished. "I'm pretty honest with him (Valentine), when I'm tired," he said. "But tonight my timing was really good. It helps that the weather conditions in here are consistent and the game was going fast."

Hough's performance overshadowed an impressive major league debut by Twins left-hander Allan Anderson, who held the Rangers to just two runs over 10 innings.

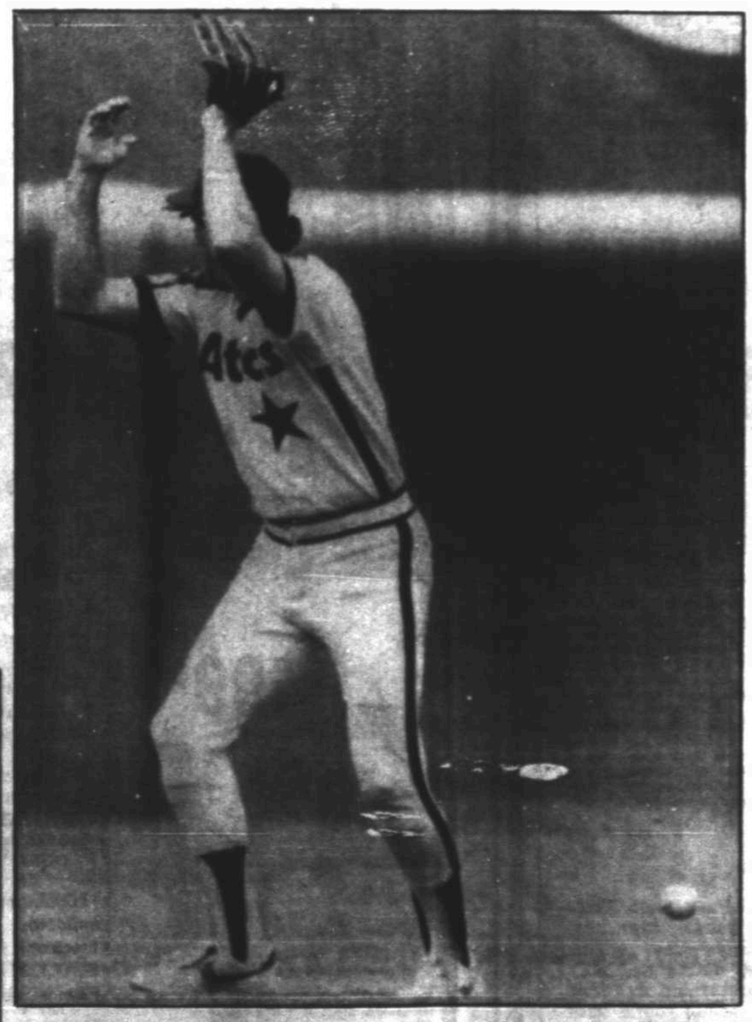

"I've heard so much about him (Hough)," Anderson said. "(Twins Manager Ray Miller) told me to just go out there and throw strikes and have some fun. I did better then I expected," he said. "I was just relieved I went that far."

Roy Lee Jackson, 0-1, the third of five Minnesota pitchers, took the loss.

MCDOWELL'S NINTH home run, on an 0-2 pitch from Jackson, came after leadoff singles by Gary Ward and Ruben Sierra, snapping a 2-2 tie. Geno Petralli later doubled home an insurance run for the Rangers.

The Rangers took a 1-0 lead in the first inning when Scott Fletcher walked and scored on a double by Pete O'Brien.

Fletcher walked again in the third inning and scored on Toby Harrah's triple to give the Rangers a 2-0 lead. Twins left fielder Mickey Hatcher missed on a diving attempt on the fly ball and the ball rolled to the wall. Harrah attempted to stretch the triple to a homer, but was thrown out at the plate.

Arledge denies NFL pressure

NEW YORK (AP) — Roone Arledge, who headed ABC Sports for most of the past two decades, is the latest witness in the USFL-NFL antitrust case to maintain that the older league never expressed its displeasure to his network about its dealings with the young spring league.

In a session marked by the kind of contentious repartee with USFL attorney Harvey Myerson that has become standard in the five weeks of the trial, Arledge told the six-person jury in the USFL's $1.5 billion antitrust suit that NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle expressed little emotion when told that ABC had given the USFL a contract for its play in the spring.

"I called Rozelle the day I made the deal," testified Arledge, who is now ABC's group president of news and sports and president of news. "He said 'I appreciate that. Do what you have to do.' In fact, the person who was most upset was the commissioner of baseball."

Earlier, the NFL introduced two documents in which a USFL owner wrote "the central focus of all USFL strategies must be to bring about a merger or accomodation with the NFL."

THE DOCUMENTS, a memo and a letter written by then Oakland Invaders owner Tad Taube, were introduced during cross-examination of USFL Commissioner Harry Usher as part of the NFL's attempt to show that it was USFL business pracitces — including a desire to merge — rather than anticompetitive practices by the NFL that have caused the younger league's problems.

Then came Arledge, a central figure in the trial to the extent that he ran the sports department at the network that televised the USFL for its three spring seasons. However, ABC declined to give the USFL a contract for its move to the fall and is still contending with the league because the network has been witholding some of its 1985 payments.

As did his former deputy, Jim Spence, Arledge denied any pressure on ABC either after it provided the USFL with its spring contract or after the USFL decided to switch to the fall. Much of the repartee with Myerson centered around remarks Arledge was said to have made to ABC commentator Howard Cosell, who is expected to testify later in the trial.

"Probably the last thing on earth I would ever do is tell Howard Cosell that Pete Rozelle objected to something," Arledge said at one point.

Arledge said that the only time he ever heard of displeasure from the NFL about ABC's relations with the USFL came in the spring of 1984, when he said there were "rumors" among some NFL owners that ABC was bankrolling the USFL's signing of high-priced players.

BUT HE vehemently denied both testimony from Usher and statements from Myerson quoting Cosell about NFL displeasure, acknowledging only that he had thought the USFL contract was a risk "but it was a risk that never materialized."

Diablos bite back, 11-2

Associated Press

El Paso's Diablos sharpened their fangs for the final stretch run Wednesday night in the Dudley Dome by devouring Beaumont 11-2. With Alex Madrid in complete control on the mound, with every Diablo having hit safely after four innings, to say the Diablos were in command would be a pitiful understatement.

El Paso primed for the final six games of the West Division first half behind pitcher Alex Madrid, who was in control on the mound. At the same time, by the fourth inning every Diablo had accounted for a hit.

Midland comes to El Paso tonight to start the final six games of the first half, and El Paso needs only a split of the series to grab the first-half championship.

"Midland has to beat us 4-out-of-6 here," Diablo Manager Duffy Dyer said. "And I have to like our chaces of splitting here. But Midland is playing well right now, too."

Elsewhere, Arkansas took sole possession of first in the East with a split of a doubleheader with Tulsa while Jackson was losing both ends of a marathon twin bill in Shreveport.

In the first Jackson-Shreveport game, supposed to be only seven innings long, saw the Mets let a lead slip through their fingers. When Bill Fultz drove in a run in the top of the 13th inning, Jackson figured it had finally wrapped up one victory and could soon get about the business of trying to grab a second one.

However, in the bottom of the 13th, Everett Graham singled, stole second and tied the game again, at 2-2, when he raced home on Mackey Sasser's two-out double. Mike Rubel's single then scored Sasser with the winning run in a 3-2 Shreveport victory Wednesday night.

Shreveport then shut out Jackson 4-0 in the second game, which didn't end until early today, to sweep the twinbill and gain vengeance for a double Jackson win in a Tuesday night doubleheader.

Meanwhile, Arkansas split a doubleheader with Tulsa on Wednesday night and moved a game ahead of Jackson in the Eastern Division. Arkansas won the first game 5-0 before falling 9-2 in the second game.

Arkansas added three more runs in the fifth inning.

The winning pitcher was Joe Magrane, who record is now 8-3. Taking the loss was Tulsa starter Rick Knapp, now 4-5.

Arkansas and Jackson also clash in a new series, which begins tonight at Jackson. In the other match-ups wrapping up first-half play, San Antonio is at Beaumont and Tulsa at Shreveport.

COURTS

Then, late Wednesday night, State District Judge Homer Salinas in Edinburg not only ruled that the games could not begin until Friday afternoon but also ordered that the contests be played on grass at Nelson Field rather than on the artificial turf at the University of Texas' Disch-Falk Field.

Before the court intervention, Westlake was scheduled to play Mercedes in one semifinal game, with the winner playing for the 4A championship against the winner of a game between Brenham and Snyder. After the rainout, the last two scheduled games of the Westlake-Richfield series were canceled and Westlake was declared the winner.

Westlake won championships in 1980 and 1984 and was a semifinalist in 1982-83.

Four of five classes open playoffs today

AUSTIN (AP) — Colmesneil, Riviera Kaufer and Victoria Stroman will defend their championships at the University Interscholastic League state baseball tournament starting today, but court orders led to postponement of the Class 4A division.

Orders issued by three different judges Wednesday over who should play in the Class 4A tournament and when and where threw that division off the ball diamonds and into chaos.

Colmesneil, 26-0 in Class A, has been to the UIL tournament four times since 1979, finishing second that year and winning championships in 1980 and last year.

Riviera in 2A also has been to the tournament four times since 1979, winning a title that year and in 1985.

Coppell, the team Riviera defeated in the finals last year, 8-1, returns this year in 2A.

Stroman defeated Pasadena Rayburn 3-0 for the 5A championship last year and is matched against Houston Bellaire in the semifinals tonight. Bellaire won titles in 1960, 1962, 1971 and 1978 and was runner-up in 1963 and 1972 but made its last appearance seven years ago.

The other 5A semifinalists are Round Rock Westwood and Arlington, led by 6-foot-6 pitcher Trent Turner.

Turner, a Texas Longhorn baseball recruit, also was Most Valuable Player in basketball in District 7-5A. He has a 14-1 pitching record, with a 1.30 ERA, and leads Arlington in home runs with four, all in the playoffs.

In Class 3A, Brownfield is the only team making a return appearance. Playing in 4A in 1964, the Cubs lost in the championship game to South San Antonio 17-1, which is a scoring record for that division.

Morocco suprise winner

MEXICO CITY (AP) — They came out of Africa without any rave notices. They were the longshots from Morocco with no soccer tradition and little respect from the rest of the World Cup community.

Now, everyone knows about them.

"Morocco has made world soccer history," said Jose Faria, the team's Brazilian coach, after the Moroccans beat Portugal 3-1 Wednesday to win Group F. The victory made Morocco the first team from Africa to make it past the first round of this soccer championship.

"For us, it is the same as if we had won the World Cup," Faria said.

They just might.

Morocco will now play with the big boys in the single-elimination Round 2 of the 24-team event. In addition to the Moroccans, England, Poland and Belgium advanced on Wednesday. Belgium tied Paraguay 2-2 and England beat Poland 3-0.

Previously, Mexico, Paraguay, the Soviet Union, France, Argentina, Italy, Brazil, Denmark and West Germany moved into the second portion of the month-long tournament.

FOOTBALL

GREEN BAY, Wis. — Quarterback Lynn Dickey is becoming a free agent because he and the Green Bay Packers could not agree on new contract terms, the National Football League club said.

Dickey, 36, has been with the club since the 1970s, serving as starting quarterback most of the time except for frequent bouts with injury. The club said that, because of unsuccessful contract talks, Dickey chose to resign with a settlement of his contract.

PITTSBURGH — Pittsburgh Steelers quarterback Mark Malone has agreed to a multi-year contract, ending five months of negotiations, according to team officials.

Terms of the contract were not disclosed Wednesday by the National Football League team or Malone's agent, Richard Bennett of Washington, D.C.

"Mark and I are happy with the contract," Bennett said.

Malone, 27, became a free agent this year after earning $315,000 last year in the final year of his previous contract.

COLLEGE BASKETBALL

NEW ORLEANS — One of the prosecution's star witnesses acknowledged that he lied on the witness stand in the first sports bribery trial of former Tulane basketball star John "Hot Rod" Williams.

Gary Kranz, 22, of New Rochelle, N.Y., said he lied about his drug use and the distribution of cocaine but insisted repeatedly that he did not lie about any of the sports bribery allegations or Williams' involvement in them.

TENNIS

EDGBASTON, England — Top-seeded Pam Shriver, the defending champion, won her second-round match against fellow American Pat Fendick 6-3, 7-6 (7-4) in the $125,000 Edgbaston Tennis Tournament.

Second-seeded Manuela Maleeva of Bulgaria beat Lori McNeil of the United States 7-6 (9-7), 2-6, 6-4 but fifth-seeded Jo Durie of Britain, seventh-seeded American Robin White and eighth-seeded Kate Gompert of the United States all lost their second-round matches.

LONDON — Top-seeded Jimmy Connors and defending champion Boris Becker of West Germany easily posted second-round tennis victories in the $237,400 Stella Artois Grass Courts Championships at Queens Club.

American Glenn Layendecker upset fourth-seeded Anders Jarryd of Sweden 7-6, 3-6, 6-1. Ramesh Krishnan of India eliminated No. 6 Brad Gilbert of the United States 7-5, 6-1 and American Robert Seguso downed No. 13 Slobodan Zivojinovich of Yugoslavia 6-4, 6-3.

GOLF

COLLINS, N.Y — Cheryl Stacy of Findlay, Ohio defeated Kris Hanson of Granite Falls, Minn. in a five-hole playoff to win the Futures Golf Tour's $12,000 Seven-Up Classic.

Stacey dropped a four-foot par put to claim her second win as a pro and pick up the $1,800 top prize. Hanson, who earned $1,300, missed earlier on an 18-foot putt for par.

BASKETBALL

PORTLAND, Ore. — The Portland Trail Blazers of the NBA have signed 6-foot-9 Spanish basketball star Fernando Martin.

Martin, 24, was the second-round choice of the New Jersey Nets in the 1985 NBA draft but he returned to Spain to play for his national team. During the last two seasons, the 220-pound forward has averaged 21 points and 10 rebounds per game.

He was a member of Spain's Olympic team in 1984, which took a silver medal after losing to the United States team.

HOUSTON — Officials of the Stouffer Greenway Plaza Hotel are trying to collect about $50,000 from Houston Rockets guard Lewis Lloyd for a five-month stay, a hotel spokesman said.

But a spokesman for the athlete said Lloyd and hotel officials were trying to determine just how much he owed because the tab included unauthorized charges by other people without Lloyd's knowledge.

Lloyd leased three rooms at the hotel from September through January, when the charges were made, Joe Riley, Stouffer Hotels spokesman said.

'Hittable' Clemens now 11-0

Associated Press

Even a long rain delay and a lack of overpowering stuff couldn't cool off Roger Clemens, the hottest pitcher in baseball.

"He wasn't overpowering. (But) when you're going good, everything falls right for you, and it is for him," Toronto's Dane Iorg said after a 5-3 loss to Clemens and the Boston Red Sox on Wednesday night.

Clemens' victory, fashioned after a rain delay of nearly three hours at the start, raised his record to 11-0. Clemens worked eight innings before Bob Stanley came on in the ninth for his 10th save.

"I got tired. It's one o'clock in the morning, that's all there is to it," Clemens said of his failure to complete the game. "But it was worth the wait."

Clemens, a 23-year-old right-hander, surrendered an RBI double to Rance Mulliniks in the first inning, then retired 16 consecutive batters before Tony Fernandes doubled in the sixth.

Overall, Clemens allowed just four hits, struck out six and walked two before Stanley pitched the ninth. Stanley gave up Toronto's last run on an RBI single by Cliff Johnson.

Boston snapped a 1-1 tie in the fourth on Don Baylor's two-run homer off Doyle Alexander, 4-8, who pitched a six-hitter.

"He was very hittable tonight," Iorg said of Clemens. "The ball Rance hit (into a stiff breeze to right in the eighth with two on), any other night it's a home run."

AL Roundup

Orioles 4, Brewers 3

Mike Boddicker and Don Aase combined on an eight-hitter and Cal Ripken extended his hitting streak to seven games with two singles and an RBI to lead Baltimore over Milwaukee.

Boddicker, 8-1, worked the first seven innings, allowing six hits, before Aase came on to register his major-league leading 17th save. Aase gave up two hits and struck out two to help Boddicker get his fourth straight victory. The loss snapped a four-game Milwaukee winning streak.

The Orioles scored three runs in the third inning off starter Danny Darwin, 3-8, for a 3-1 lead and widened it to 4-1 in the sixth inning on Tom O'Malley's two-out RBI double.

Angels 12, White Sox 11

Ruppert Jones drove in three runs with a triple and a two-run homer and Brian Downing hit a two-run homer to lead California to a wild triumph over Chicago.

The Angels led 12-6 behind reliever Doug Corbett going into the last of the ninth before Harold Baines hit a two-run homer and Tim Hulett hit a three-run homer. Terry Forster then took over for Corbett and got the last two outs.

The Angels scored three runs in the eighth, capped by Downing's homer, his sixth, off Bill Dawley.

It marked a season-high in runs and hits for the Angels, who amassed 18 hits, including three by Gary Pettis.

"When the wind is blowing out during a day game against the Chicago White Sox, it's every man for himself," California Manager Gene Mauch said. "There was no place to hide the ball."

California starter Kirk McCaskill, 5-4, lasted just five innings before Corbett relieved. Chicago starter Rich Dotson, 4-6, lasted just 3 2-3 innings.

Tigers 9, Yankees 3

Lou Whitaker had three hits and drove in two runs while Darnell Coles went 4-for-5 to lead Detroit over the Yankees, only the third triumph in the Tigers' last 12 games.

Winner Frank Tanana, 6-4, allowed three runs on seven hits over the first seven innings, while Willie Hernandes finished up for his 10th save.

Ron Guidry, 4-6, absorbing his fifth straight defeat, gave up six runs on nine hits in seven innings. Four of the runs were unearned.

"It's frustrating," Guidry said. "It's tough to overcome four unearned runs. There's just some things that aren't working out. It's tough to give a team like Detroit four runs, especially if you aren't scoring."

Indians 7, A's 4

Carmen Castillo and Tony Bernazard both hit two-run homers in the fifth inning as Cleveland beat Oakland and sent the A's to their eighth straight loss and 10th straight on the road, matching a club record.

The losing streak is the A's longest since they dropped nine straight in August 1964. With their 10th straight road loss, the A's tied a club record set in May 1961.

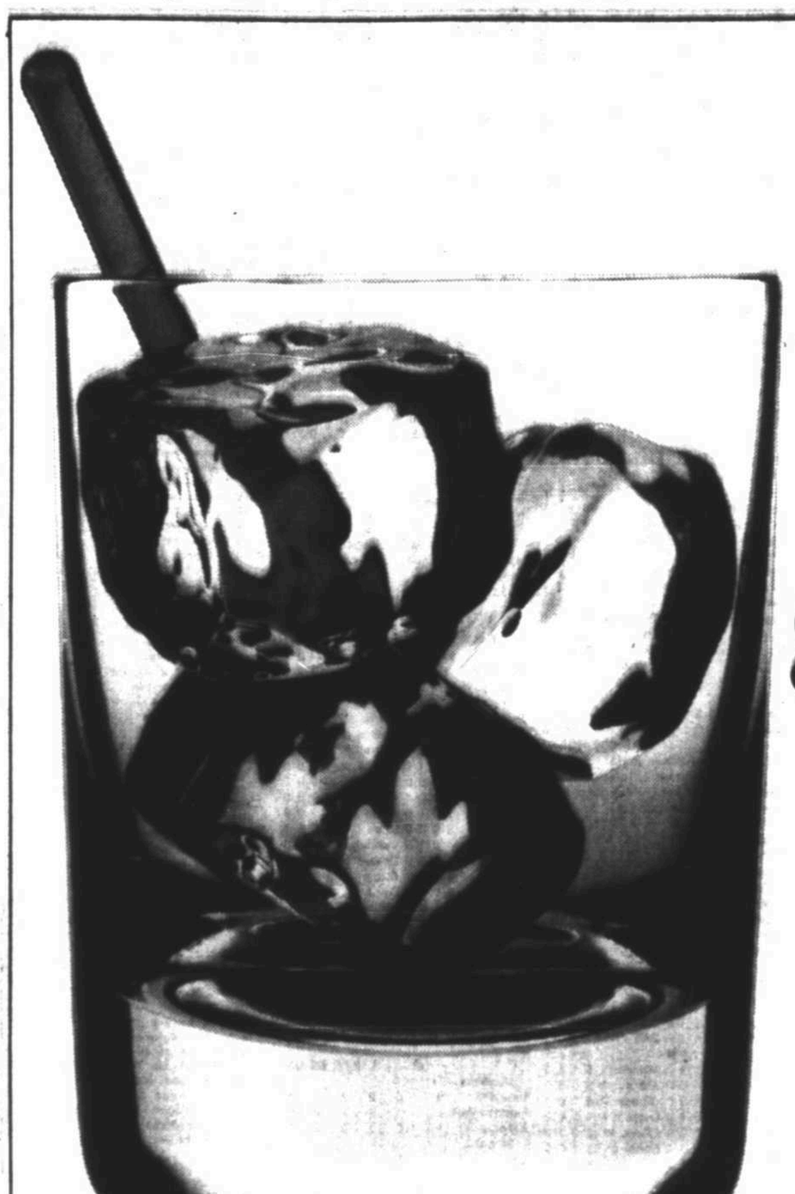

Cleveland starter Ken Schrom, 5-2, got the victory, allowing four runs on eight hits in six innings, including homers by Dave Kingman and Alfredo Griffin. Scott Bailes pitched three scoreless innings for his fifth save.

The victory was the fourth straight for the Indians.

Mariners 12, Royals 2

John Moses had three hits and drove in three runs as Seattle piled up a season-high 18 hits in routing the mistake-plagued Royals.

The Mariners, beating the Royals for the eighth time in nine games in Kansas City, chased starter Charlie Leibrandt with seven runs in the second inning and added five in the third.

Now you've got everything but the Jim Beam.

Denis Watson's U.S. Open met untimely end

SOUTHAMPTON, N.Y. — On June 13, 1985, South African golfer Denis Watson had a short putt to win the United States Open.

He made it.

But wait a minute. Don't look for his name up there on the trophy. Don't look for him to be selling Japanese cars on TV or adorning the covers of national sports magazines. Don't look for him to be among the favorites for the 86th U.S. Open here this week at Shinnecock Hills.

The record book says Andrew Stewart North won the 1985 Open.

No, he didn't. I'll tell you who won the Open: a guy who never took a shot or made a putt or read a break won it.

Your 1985 champion of the most venerable tournament of them all was — a fanfare, if you please, professor — a little known nonplayer from Amarillo, Tex., named Montford T. Johnson.

Nonplayer Johnson won the Open on the eighth hole of the opening round — for Andy North, as it happens — through a combination of quick wit, local knowledge and a minute study of the rules.

The details are the least bit complicated, so I will go slow:

— DENIS WATSON, no relation to the other one, Tom, or to Sherlock Holmes' doctor, is a superior player from Zimbabwe, formerly Rhodesia, by way of Johannesburg, South Africa. No less an authority than South African Gary Player had said he was going to be a good one. He had already won three tournaments by the time he teed it up at Oakland Hills near Detroit for the Open last year.

He was playing impeccable golf when he came up to the par-4 eighth hole in the opening round. He had a 10-footer for his par. It was slightly downhill but it had no breaks and Watson thought he had it cleverly triangulated so that it would die just at the hole.

It did. It was on line all the way. It fell into the hole for his four.

But, just a minute! Out of the crowd, roaring "like a banshee," according to Denis Watson, came, like an avenging archangel, our M.T. Johnson, waving his arms like an NBA official signaling no basket!

What was wrong with the putt? It went too slow. No change-ups on the golf course.

The United States Golf Assn., the House of Lords of golf, has a time limit on putts, it seems. No one is quite sure what it is but golfer Watson's didn't make it, M.T. Johnson said.

The USGA is interested in speeding up play on its courses — aren't we all? But golfer Watson had used up only 40 seconds.

NOW, 40 seconds to go 10 feet may seem an inordinate time, unless you're on the Hollywood Freeway in peak traffic, but the point was, Denis Watson knew he had the putt all the way.

Bear in mind, it did fall into the hole.

The USGA's Johnson was unimpressed. When the ball had hovered on the brink, Watson had used his allotted time, Johnson said. It was as if he, Watson, had been told, "Your three minutes are up, signal when through."

Master Watson not only lost his par, he was assessed two shots for not running after his putt the way you and I do when we have missed the cup by two feet on the right. Watson had delayed at the edge of the green, hoping that the ball would do what it did –fall into the hole.

That's a tough way to make a six. That's a tough way to lose a tournament.

Because, that decision cost our hero from Zimbabwe the 1985 Open. Make no mistake about that. He went on to shoot 280 for the four rounds, even par. North, the winner, unpenalized, shot 279. You don't have to be a CPA to figure out that Watson, without the penalty, won by a shot.

LISTEN! CAN you imagine if a fellow from the commissioner's office had run out on the field the day Babe Ruth called his shot and hit a home run in the World Series, announcing that Ruth had swung too slow — or too fast — that he'd had a clock on him?

What if, after Gene Tunney had got up and resumed beating Dempsey, someone from the state athletic commission had climbed into the ring to announce that, according to his watch, Tunney had been down too long, the bout was over and Dempsey had won? Would you pay off?

Wouldn't a guy in any other sport have a million storefront lawyers pleading his case — on a contingency basis in anticipation of a million-dollar settlement — if they found a client who had just been legislated out of a million-dollar championship on a technicality?

You can bet he would.

Golfer Watson didn't even hit anybody. I don't think he ever even threw a club.

You're supposed to lose a U.S. Open the way Sam Snead used to. Hit it in the sand, explode it out of the water, bounce it off trees or over greens, misread a 14-inch putt.

I DON'T know about you, but the guys I play with will wait till the ball is cobwebbed if they have to. Darkness will settle if necessary.

But the really interesting dilemma in tournament golf is that there is also a rule you must not hit a moving ball. That, too, is a penalty. That has been a penalty in the grand old game a lot longer than the too-slow putt.

So, what does golfer Watson do? If his ball is not at rest –and it clearly was not since it subsequently kept moving into the hole – he could be penalized for hitting it. Instead, he got penalized for not hitting it.

What if a guy has a 100-foot putt? Do you allot time at so much a running foot? Supposing a guy is back in the trees? Do uphill putts get more time than downhillers? Or maybe it's vice versa, since you have to hit downhill putts much more delicately than uphillers.

If you can't hit a moving ball but your 10 seconds are through and the ball is still rolling, do you have to hit it again anyway?

What if you miss the putt and the hole altogether and the ball comes to rest in a water hazard off the green? Can you just take the two-stroke penalty for putting too slowly and not have to get it out of the water?

Watson was really lucky. He needed that putt for his six. Is he lucky it fell? If it had hung on the lip for those 40 seconds and then he had to go tap it in, would that have made a seven?

Or was he unlucky that it fell in? If he had waited the 40 seconds and it hadn't fallen in, and he'd had to tap it in, maybe M.T. Johnson would have let him sign for his five? And he would have tied for the Open lead. And might have beaten Andy North in a playoff. If he putted fast enough, that is.

Padres save the day, Astros let it get away

Associated Press

NL Roundup

SAN DIEGO — Instead of talking about the one that got away, the Padres are talking about the one who saved the day after San Diego blew a huge lead to Houston but then burst their way back to victory.

Garry Templeton, mired in a season-long slump and batting .203 going into Wednesday's game, hit a bases-loaded double in the eighth inning to break a 7-7 tie and lead the Padres to an 11-7 victory over first-place Houston.

"I feel I've been hitting the ball and it would just be a matter of time before it started dropping in," said Templeton, whose hit sparked a Padres victory that had appeared to be secure after five innings, when they had a comfortable 7-1 lead.

But Houston rallied for a pair of runs in the sixth and four more in the seventh, tying the score.

Despite the loss, Astros Manager Hal Lanier said he's happy with his team's comeback in the game and with their 4-3 record on the seven-game road trip.

All four seventh-inning Houston runs were charged to LaMarr Hoyt. He relieved Andy Hawkins who left with a 7-3 lead, but he failed to retire any of the four batters he faced, giving up two hits and walking two.

Lance McCullers, 2-1, came in with the bases loaded. He threw a potential double-play grounder to the first batter he faced, Glenn Davis, but third baseman Jerry Royster had the ball go off his glove for one error and shortstop Templeton threw it away for another as two runs scored. After Denny Walling, who had hit a two-run homer in the sixth, tied the game with a sacrifice fly, McCullers stifled the Astros for only one hit.

The Padres opened the eighth with a walk by Carmelo Martinez. Bruce Bochy, who earlier hit a two-run homer, doubled pinch-runner John Kruk to third, and after reliever Frank DiPino, 1-2, walked Jerry Royster intentionally to load the bases, Templeton lined his game-winning hit down the right field line.

McCullers sacrifice-bunted in a run, and Leon Roberts accounted for the final run with an infield hit.

Dodgers 5, Reds 4

Franklin Stubbs hit his 11th homer of the season in the fifth inning Wednesday night, then returned in the 11th to single home Mariano Duncan with the winning run in Los Angeles' victory over Cincinnati.

The single hung the loss on reliever John Franco, 0-3, as the Dodgers beat the Reds by a run for a third straight night.

Los Angeles' Alex Trevino hit his first homer of the season in the sixth inning. Dave Parker answered in the seventh with his 13th homer.

Expos 4, Cardinals 3

Jim Wohlford, pinch-hitting, hit a sacrifice fly with one out in the 10th inning that scored Tim Wallach with the decisive run.

Montreal has won four straight, the last three at the expense of the Cardinals.

Wohlford's fly, off reliever Greg Bargar, 0-2, gave the victory to Jeff Reardon, 6-3, who blew a save opportunity in the ninth.

The Cardinals had rallied in the ninth to tie the score. Jack Clark hit his second double of the game and came around to score on a ground-out and sacrifice bunt.

Mets 5, Phillies 3

Ray Knight hit his eighth home run. He and Gary Carter each drove in two runs. Knight has a 10-game hitting streak.

Ron Darling, 7-2, pitched the first six innings and won his first decision after two losses. Randy Niemann, Roger McDowell and Jesse Orosco finished. Orosco got two outs for his 11th save, pitching for the sixth straight game.

Steve Carlton, 4-6, gave up all five runs on eight hits over 3 1-3 innings, three of the runs in the first inning. He had four strikeouts and a walk.

Von Hayes hit a two-run homer for the Phillies, his fourth of the season.

Braves 2, Giants 1

With two outs in the 10th inning, Ozzie Virgil hit a home run off San Francisco reliever Greg Minton's 3-2 pitch. Starter Scott Garrelts allowed only four hits in nine innings. Minton, 2-4, opened the 10th.

Atlanta starter David Palmer lasted only six innings but gave the Braves their first run with his second career homer.

Pirates 5, Cubs 3

The Pirates completed a three-game sweep of Chicago.

Rick Rhoden won his fourth straight decision, helped by his own two-run single in Pittsburgh's three-run fourth inning. Rhoden, 6-3, pitched only 5 1-3 innings and gave up seven hits, with four walks. Three relievers finished, with Don Robinson pitching the ninth inning and getting his first save.

Barry Bonds singled in a run for Pittsburgh in the third, then circled the bases in the seventh on a triple compounded with a fielding error.

Rahal mentor Trueman loses battle with cancer

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — James R. Trueman, whose racing ventures — Bobby Rahal drove his car to victory in this year's Indianapolis 500 — overshadowed his ownership one of the largest motel chains in the country, has died at 51.

Trueman died of cancer Wednesday night at his home in suburban Amlin.

Rahal drove a car owned by Trueman's TrueSports team to victory in the last two laps of the Indianapolis 500 on May 31, fulfilling a lifelong dream of both men. Rahal said as soon as he left the car, "This one was for Jim Trueman. This is the one I can give him. I think everybody knows I love him."

Trueman's gaunt appearance that day made it apparent that he was losing a two-year battle with cancer. But, with a towel draped over his head, he withstood the hot sun and the many post-race interviews.

"This is what we came here for five years ago," he said at the time. "It took us a little longer than we expected. But we've got one now, and nobody can take it away from us ... ever."

THAT WAS his last public appearance. His condition deteriorated rapidly on his return home, and he was unable to attend last weekend's racing program at the Mid-Ohio Sports Car Course, which he purchased in 1981 and made into one of the nation's premier motorsports facilities.

He died at 8 p.m. Wednesday. Funeral arrangements were incomplete.

Trueman grew up in the Cleveland area and attended Ohio State University, where he ran on the track team but had his college career interrupted by service in the Army during the Berlin crisis and never graduated.

His parallel careers in business and racing began soon after his discharge in 1960. He joined a Columbus construction company in that year, formed his own development company in 1968, and founded the Red Roof Inns motel chain in 1972, opening his first motel in suburban Grove City in 1974

He told The Associated Press in a 1983 interview that he got into the motel business when he realized he could run it more successfully than could another company he wanted to hire to build the motels.

Teen-aged victim set to testify in kidnap-rape trial

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The kidnap-rape trial of a 33-year-old former Midland man entered its third day today with the prosecution continuing to present its case.

William Mitchell Dyer is accused of abducting a 13-year-old Odessa girl from in front of Water Wonderland about 7 p.m. June 13, 1985 and raping and sodomizing her during a trip from Midland to Andrews County, then back to Ector County, where he let her out in Gardendale.

Wednesday Ector County District Attorney Eric Augustine called Martin Reiser, a nationally known California psychologist-hypnotherapist, as an expert witness on the validity of information received while a victim or witness is under hypnosis.

Tuesday, former Ector County sheriff's investigator Jesse Aguilar, now a private investigator, testified that he placed the victim under hypnosis to help her recall details of her more-the-two-hour ordeal.

The hypnosis session, according to Aguilar helped the young girl provide investigators with a description of her alleged assailant that resulted in two composite drawings of the man being produced, one with him wearing a baseball cap and the other without a cap. The session also helped the girl recall various details about the pickup truck the man was driving.

Tom Hirsch, representing Dyer, and co-counsel Anthony Foster have challenged the description of the man and statements given while the young victim was under hypnotic influence. Hirsch has specifically questioned if she might have been influenced by suggestions from Aguilar.

Aguilar explained that normal practice for investigators using hypnosis is for them to know as little as possible about the case so they will not be tempted to prompt a subject to recall details that are not in his or her memory.

Reiser, who works with the Los Angeles Police Department, which has used hypnosis in some 700 cases, said there is still considerable controversy concerning the validity information obtained from a subject under hypnosis. However, his personal experience convinces him of the validity of such information. Reiser did indicate the competency of the person conducting such sessions is a factor to be considered.

According to Reiser, there is nothing really magical about hypnosis, contrary to popular belief. Hypnotic ability, he stated, is something everyone possesses to varying degrees. All a hypnotherapist does basically, he said, is help a person reach the state of relaxation necessary to recall things that may have slipped into the subconscious memory.

More than a month after the alleged incident the young girl was watching a local television station and saw a station promotional ad which, she said, included the man she alleges kidnapped and repeatedly sexually assaulted her. The promotional ad had been filmed at an oil field servicing company a short distance from Water Wonderland and included several employees of the firm.

Dyer was arrested a short time later. He was later indicted by a grand jury on four charges of aggravated sexual assault and one count of kidnapping. He is also charged with one count of aggravated sexual assault in Andrews County.

The young victim, now 14-years-old, is expected to be called to the witness stand sometime today to confront her alleged assailant and be cross-examined about videotaped statements she made under hypnosis that have been admitted into evidence by 244th District Court Judge Joe Connally.

PBRPC favors road projects

From Staff Reports

About $5.3 million in highway improvement projects were favorably reviewed by the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission Wednesday.

Improvements to Interstate 20, U.S. Highway 80, State Highway 158 and Loop 250 are among the many projects included in a program that plans for transportation improvements in the Midland-Odessa area.

The commission also passed favorable review on West Texas Opportunities, serving 10 counties including Midland. The program is requesting $236,932 from the Texas Department of Community Affairs to be matched with $59,233 in local funds for a total project cost of $296,165. The program provides many social services including home weatherization, job training for dislocated oil field workers and farmers, and food and clothing distribution. The program's funding may be cut 4.3 percent or $10,000 this year due to federal budget cuts, said Janet Everheart, executive director of West Texas Opportunities.

The reconstruction of west 16th Street from State Highway 302 to FM 1936 in Odessa was favorably reviewed by the commission. The $1 million project will widen the two-lane road into four traffic lanes with a continuous left turn lane and two shoulder lanes. The city of Odessa's Comprehensive Development Plan is recommending designating 16th street as a major thoroughfare in the future.

In other action the commission passed favorable review upon:

— a resolution accepting the 1987-1991 Transportation Improvement Program and Annual Element for the Midland-Odessa Regional Transportation study.

— a resolution authorizing a grant application to the Urban Mass Transportation Administration for a Section 8 and Section 9 planning grant to maintain the Midland-Odessa Transit Study.

— a resolution executing UMTA grant contracts on behalf of the planning commission.

— a resolution redesignating the Metropolitan Planning Organization for the Midland-Odessa Regional Transportation study.

Young boy bitten by dangerous spider

SEGUIN (AP) — Six-year-old Josh Koenig was just getting ready for school. It was a Monday one month ago, and time for the youngster to head for classes at Lizzie M. Burges Kindergarten.

As the boy reached for a pair of socks from a drawer, he felt a small sting or bite on his hand. At first, it didn't hurt, and the boy went on to school.

Later he visited the school nurse.

"When I went to school, it started stinging a little bit," Josh recalled. "My wrist was going to sleep, and I couldn't hold it up."

Koenig

Meanwhile, the boy's parents, Jim and Chris Koenig, who manage McQueeney Mill and Grain, remembered an article they had read just a few days earlier in their May issue of Texas Parks and Wildlife Magazine.

Alerted by the fact that the bite hadn't hurt at first, Koenig went to check out the sock drawer.

"Jim went back and pulled out his sock drawer, and right there on top was this brown spider about the size of a quarter," Mrs. Koenig said.

Koenig killed the spider and showed it to county extension agents Gus Person and Eddie Harrison. They confirmed what the parents had recognized from the article. It was a brown recluse spider.

Josh's parents got him to a doctor quickly, and the doctor treated the bite and removed a small plug of skin from the boy's palm to prevent the venom from spreading.

The brown recluse, or Loxosceles reclusa, joins the black widow spider as one of only two groups of spiders considered dangerous to people, according to Texas Agricultural Extension Service entomologists J.A. Jackman and P.J. Hamman.

The two groups make up a small percentage of nearly 3,000 species of spiders living in the United States. The type of spider that bit Josh lives in many southern and midwestern states, and often lives around human dwellings, being found in bathrooms, bedrooms and closets, as well as under furniture, behind baseboards and other secluded locations, the entomologists explain.

The brown recluse is described by Jackman and Hamman as a "nonagressive spider that spins white or grayish, non-descript webs."

"Its body and legs together cover about the same area as a quarter. The coloring of the recluse varies from an orange-yellow to dark brown or almost black."

The little arachnid is identified by three pairs of eyes in a semicircle on the forepart of the head. Its eyes also form the base of a violin-shaped marking on the back, leading to the nickname "fiddleback."

The effects of a bite, authorities say, vary widely.

According to the story Josh's parents read, the reaction can run from a tender welt to inflammation, blistering over large areas, abcesses and skin destruction requiring corrective surgery, as well as in some cases nausea and other systemic problems.

The author of "Fiddleback," Mary-Love Bigony, recommends being careful around the spider's outdoor habitat such as rocks and loose bark, keeping clean all closets, cellars, attics, areas behind furniture, shaking out clothing and bedding, washing out outside areas, such as roofs and eaves, with a water hose. If you run across one, "don't swat it; brush it off gently," she said.

Josh had to wear a bandage for a few weeks, and had to forego playing T-ball with the Greenery Station A's for a time, but he has recovered with only a small scar, his father says.

But the incident with the spider has produced some community reaction, the Koenigs say. You see, they told a lot of people.

"Insecticide sales have been up since that report," Koenig says, laughing. "Exterminators are going to do a lot better business, too."

Josh himself didn't seem particularly upset, but he did take some precautions.

"He's been getting his socks out with chopsticks lately or getting his little sister to get them out," his mother said.

Midlander sentenced to 10 years in prison for robbery

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A Midland man charged with the 1984 aggravated robbery of a Midland motel was sentenced to 10 years in prison after he pleaded guilty late Wednesday to the lesser offense of robbery after his two-day trial ended in a hung jury.

Demetrius Elkins, 30, was on trial for aggravated robbery in the 1984 holdup of the Best Western motel on Interstate 20, but jurors in Judge Vann Culp's 238th State District Court sent out a note late Wednesday that they were unable to reach a verdict.

Defense counsel Edward Garza said the agreement with prosecutor Ralph Petty was worked out after it became apparent that the jury could not reach a verdict. He said that Elkins' prior conviction for aggravated robbery was the decisive factor in the agreement, which he said was in the best interest of his client. According to state records he was convicted of aggravated robbery in January 1975 in Andrews County and served eight years and nine months of a 20-year sentence.

Prosecutor Petty said that witness testimony which began Tuesday established that Elkins entered the motel lobby on Aug. 4, 1984, displayed a handgun to a cashier and left with an unknown amount of money. The cashier positively identified Elkins in court as the man who robbed her.

Petty said that Elkins' accomplice in the crime, Joyce Edwards, also testified for the prosecution. Edwards acted as Elkins' lookout during the robbery, according to her testimony. Edwards is currently serving a five-year prison sentence for burglary of a habitation, forgery, and robbery in Midland County.

Elkins was apprehended by police in the Los Angeles area about a year after the robbery, extradited and returned by authorities to Midland in September 1985.

Ice Cream Crank Off slated for Saturday

From Staff Reports

The second annual Ice Cream Crank Off will be held from 5-8 p.m. Saturday on the lawn of the Brown-Dorsey Medallion Home, 213 N. Weatherford.

The event will feature "turn-of-the-century" homemade ice cream.

Members of the Midland County Historical Commission sponsor the event in observance of the first election held in Midland County on June 15, 1885. Final plans were made when the society and the commission held their regular meeting Saturday, according to Mrs. John McKinley, who heads both groups. Tickets will be available at the front gate or may be purchased in advance by calling 682-2931. Tickets are $1.

Murals on the fence at the home were done by a group of students headed by Shelly Browder and included Lance Overstreet, Dianna Eccleston, Charlie Boyd and Jonathan Card. Kathy Nichols, Julie Greaves, Tonya Hertel and Catrina Browder also assisted in the painting.

Pine's son plays 'heavy' on 'As the World Turns'

David Pine's younger brother is a rounder...on stage. Off stage, he's a decent sort of fellow. Reticent. He's really not a jerk.

"He's playing a real rascal," brother David said of his actor-brother, Larry Pine, 41. "He's a building contractor and is just as mean as hell."

So is David...a building contractor — a real one in Midland.

"I told him he's costing me business, because he's mean, and I'm not."

Brother Larry is playing a "heavy" part on the television soap opera "As the World Turns."

"He'd make J.R. Ewing look like a piker," brother David, 42, said with pride and humor. Actor Larry Hagman plays the wheeler-dealer Ewing on TV's Dallas series.

Larry Pine, a Midlander who has transformed into a New Yorker, returns home to visit his family and friends when he has time off from work.

"He's what you call a 'heavy,'" said his father, Justice of the Peace Robert H. "Bob" Pine. "He's playing a villain-type part. He's sneaky — doing things he ought not to be doing, I guess."

For example, the other day on national TV, Larry "got the hell beat out of him." He went a bit too far in trying to seduce a woman. And fate — or a melodramatic script writer — intervened and caused a hero-type fellow to rescue her and to pound on Larry Pine in the role of Tad Channing, the handsome and debonair reprobate.

"He's a womanizer, you might say," said his father.

Now, his father would rather see Larry on Broadway or on the silver-screen rather than on the sentimental, melodramatic soap operas where interpersonal relationships undergo wild entanglements. They are not the judge's preferred pastime. He had rather remember his son as Richard Burton's stand-in when he toured with Burton and Elizabeth Taylor. Larry is a Shakespearean actor.

"Well, Daddy," Larry once told his father, "I'm doing exactly what I want to."

So, the father appreciates and loves his son anyway.

"I can't get interested in those soap operas very much," the father said. "I don't have very much time to watch them. I think they are (addictive) to some people."

Now, Larry's mother, Mary Jo "JoJo" Pine, had not watched the day-time soap opera until recently — when Larry showed up on the noon-time program.

"He's pretty bad," his own mother admitted.

Larry got embedded in drama when he was a student (Class of 1962) at Midland High School and later studied drama in college. Before he discovered his "calling," he was something of a "lost" student.

"One of the teachers said, 'I don't know what we are going to do with him,'" recalled his mother. "'We know he's smart.'"

Said his mother: "He' smart. But he doesn't pay any attention to anybody. He's talented. He does exactly what he wants to."

While he's doing soap operas, he also is appearing on live stage and is studying for roles on TV's macabre On the Dark Side.

"He's been all over the world (in acting roles)," said his mother.

Though now he is playing a "bad guy" on TV, Larry's role as the cocky Tad Channing could be cooled down, and he could be made a "good guy," said his mother.

"He feels very fortunate that he is doing something that he likes to do."

Off stage, Larry is a family man. His wife, Margaret, writes musical plays, and their 15-year-old son, Jacob, is a violinist who is "proud of his daddy."

"You'd never know he was an actor," Mary Jo Pine said of her son. "He doesn't talk about it. He's not vain."

And when he returns to Midland, it is without fanfare. "I didn't come to show off, Mother," Larry says. "I came to see you and Daddy and my brother."

Yes, Larry's mother has tuned in to As the World Turns since her son made his debut there.

"I don't (watch soap operas). I don't care for them. I think life is too mixed up anyway. I don't watch television as a rule."

One of Larry's Midland fans, Jan Cole, said "I've been watching Larry everyday. He's great. He's talented as all get-out. He's good."

Larry's mother beholds her son as something grand.

"Well," he's talented. He's beautiful in Shakespearean things. He's handsome, but he doesn't think so."

Larry "loves a live stage," Mary Jo said. "He loves an audience. That's the only thing (drama) that he's been interested in. He says he has never worked a day in his life. All he does is 'play.'"

DEATHS

Stan Cobb

Cobb

Lee High School Principal Stan Cobb, 54, died Wednesday at Midland Memorial Hospital following a brief illness.

Funeral services will be at 3 p.m. Friday at First United Methodist Church with Dr. Charles Lutrick officiating. Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

A long-time Midland educator, Cobb, began his career in 1967 as a mathematics teacher at San Jacinto Junior High School. He also taught and was assistant principal of Midland High School, and served as principal of San Jacinto Junior High School and Lee Freshman High School. In July 1983 he was appointed principal at Lee High School and served in that capacity until his death.

"We have suffered a severe loss in Stan's passing away," said Midland Independent School District Superintendent Dr. Joseph P. Baressi. "He was a highly respected school administrator, serving our school district and youth extremely well. He was loved by teachers, students and parents.

"We're all deeply saddened and wish to express our condolences to his family," he said.

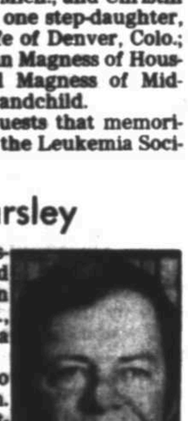

Cobb received a bachelor of science degree and a master of education degree from Howard Payne University in Brownwood. He also completed additional graduate work at Sul Ross State University and Texas Tech University.

He was a member of First United Methodist Church, Masonic Lodge No. 623, Texas Secondary School Principal's Association, and the National Secondary School Principal's Association.

Survivors include his wife, Pat of Midland; two daughters, Carolee Drake of Haslett, Mich., and Christin Cobb of Midland; one step-daughter, Jane Ann Metcalfe of Denver, Colo.; two step-sons, John Magness of Houston, and Richard Magness of Midland; and one grandchild.

The family requests that memorials be directed to the Leukemia Society of Americ.

Donald Parsley

Parsley

Donald C. Parsley, 52, of Midland died Tuesday in Las Vegas, Nev., after suffering a heart attack.

Services were to be today at 11 a.m. at St. Luke's United Methodist Church with the Rev. Jarrel Sharp, pastor, officiating. Burial was to follow at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Parsley was born Dec. 26, 1933, in San Antonio, where he was reared and graduated from high school. He attended San Angelo Jr. College and later graduated from Texas Tech in 1956 with a degree in business. He married the former Mary Lynn Booher of San Angelo in 1957. After his discharge from the U.S. Army they lived in Seattle, Wash., for a short time before returning to San Angelo. In 1963 they moved to Midland and he founded the Triangle Radiator Service. He also operated Stovall-Booher Radiator Service in San Angelo and the Radiator Service in Odessa.

He was a member of St. Luke's United Methodist Church and the Midland Masonic Lodge No. 623.

Survivors include his wife; two sons, Ricky Don Parsley of San Angelo and Chris Parsley of Midland; one daughter, DeLynn Ramby of Midland; his mother, Mrs. Audra Parsley of Clarksville, Tenn.; one sister, Mrs. Joe Frahm of Clarksville, Tenn.; and one grandchild.

Pallbearers were to be Tom Canton, Larry Clark, Gilbert Bates, Mike Watlington, Marlin Hahn and Arnold Schneeman.

Honorary pallbearers were to be Bob Hambright, Floyd Henry, Richard Fielder, John Childers and Don Brookshire.

Dorothy Walker

Dorothy Walker of Midland died Wednesday evening at a local hospital.

Services are pending with Ellis Funeral Home.

Emma Sue Avila

Avila

Emma Sue Avila, 37, of Midland died at a local hospital Tuesday evening.

Services were to be today at 3:30 p.m. at the Ellis Chapel with the Rev. Dick Spencer, pastor of Cornerstone Christian Fellowship, officiating. Burial was to be at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Avila was born Sept. 8, 1948, in Midland, where she was grew up. In 1968, she graduated from Midland High School. She married Manuel M. Avila on May 15, 1970, in Midland. She was employed with Taylor Park Day Care Center as a pre-school teacher.

Survivors include her husband; one son, Michael Joe Avila of Midland; two daughters, Myra J. Avila and Marcie L. Avila, both of Midland; one brother, Robert Gonzales of Midland; and five sisters, Rachel Gallegos and Odelia Gonzales, both of Albuquerque, N.M., Bertha Melendez of El Paso, Anna B. Gomez of Brownfield, and Christine Valdez of Midland.

Wanda Bishop

Wanda Bishop of Midland died Wednesday night at a local hospital.

Services are pending with Ellis Funeral Home.

Salvador Lopez

Salvador Lopez of Midland died early today at a local hospital.

Services are pending with Ellis Funeral Home.

Tonya Smith

Smith

Tonya Denise Smith, 12, of Midland died of injuries she received in an automobile accident in Big Lake Tuesday night.

Services will be at 1:30 p.m. Friday at the Ellis Chapel with the Rev. Bill Skaggs, associate minister of Kelview Heights Baptist Church, officiating. Burial will follow at Sunset Memorial Gardens under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Tonya was born Feb. 5, 1974, in Odessa, moving with her family in 1976. In 1985 they moved to Greenwood. Tonya was an honor society member and has been a cheerleader for the past three years.

Survivors include her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Glen Smith of Midland; three sisters, Trena Smith of Odessa, Tracie Vannadore and Teresa Smith, both of Midland; her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. O.W. Coleman of Big Lake and Mr. and Mrs. B.L. Smith of Midland; and one niece and nephew.

Court rules spectators must stand

AUSTIN (AP) — A leader of the Texas revolution once said "Texans do not stand for any man," but the state Court of Criminal Appeals disagrees.

The court ruled 5-4 Wednesday that Texans can be ordered to rise when a judge enters or leaves a courtroom.

"A direct refusal to rise upon the judge's entrance interrupts the normal proceedings of the court (and) disregards the formality and seriousness of a court's function," Judge W.C. Davis said in the court's majority opinion.

In a dissent, Judge Marvin Teague quoted Ben Milam, a Texas revolution leader who said, "Texans do not stand for any man, but only for their God."

The ruling upheld Jefferson County Court-at-Law Judge Donald J. Floyd, who found seven people in contempt of court when they refused to stand when he entered the courtroom on June 14, 1985.

The judge had ordered them to stand after they failed to rise when he left the courtoom the day before.

Charles Krupps, one of those who refused to stand, was in court to fight a charge of failing to have automobile liability insurance. The six others had accompanied him to court.

Krupps told the judge he could not stand because he was a "follower of Christ." Floyd said the seven could leave the courtroom until he was seated if they did not want to rise.

The appeals court said Floyd had the authority to order them to stand and the punishment ordered by the judge was proper.

"Any burden on their religious freedom at that point was self-imposed. Judge Floyd did not demand that they remain in the court and comply with the rising requirement," Davis wrote, adding that Floyd had shown "admirable restraint."

Teague, writing for the minority, said Floyd's action was unnecessary.

"Given the facts and circumstances of this cause, there is, very simply, insufficient reason to invoke in the cause the awesome power of direct contempt to cope with this petty form of disrespect," Teague said.

Charles Robb backs social program reform

By JIM WARREN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Presidential hopeful Charles Robb mixed Gary Hart's "New Ideas" with the "Great Society" of Lyndon Baines Johnson, his father-in-law, in calling Wednesday for an overhaul of the nation's social programs.

Robb, who left Virginia's governor's mansion in January, said Democrats must abandon old social programs that keep poor people on welfare with no hope of upward mobility.

Robb, who married LBJ's daughter, Linda Bird, spoke to the Austin Democratic Forum Wednesday as part of his work with the national Democratic Leadership Council.

Robb labeled the effort to lift indigents out of poverty by improving education and economic development "the new social challange," which may be Robb's presidential campaign slogan, said a former Democratic office holder, who asked not to be identified.

Under current federal programs, the poor have "a safety net" but no real chance of working their way out of poverty," Robb said. Democrats have a golden oppurtunity, he said, to gain strength by moving away from the status quo "and doing something about it."

Robb suggested several ways to help the lower class, such as providing extra money for inner-city schools and working to keep families together. He said the United States should restructure the welfare system to encourage indigents to work and become self-supporting citizens.

"For me, the issue is not just one of cost," he said. "In fact, as an acknowledged fiscal conservative, I'd be willing to spend as much or even more than we do today as long as I could be confident that the money would go into a system that really works."

Robb said innovative approaches and the push for reform are reasons the Democratic Party remained dominant since the 1930s. But in the 1970s and 1980s, Republicans came up with new ideas and gained on the Democrats, he said.

"We've allowed the Republicans to usurp our traditional identity as the party of economic grouth and oppurtunity and to, in many instances, depict Democrats as the party of weakness and vacillation in foriegn affairs — and we've paid a stiff price in four of the last five presidential elections," Robb said.

"There are some in our party, however, who assail any attempt to reclaim our Democratic legacy as "moving to the right,' " he said. "Instead, they cling to policies which became party orthodoxy only in the late '60s and early '70s — the fixation with wealth redistribution even as the expense of wealth creation — and the emergence of a new kind of isolationism in the wake of Vietnam."

"Our party needs to move not to the right or to the left, but forward," Robb said.

No Democrats have formally announced their candidacy for president yet. When asked if he planned to run for the nation's top post, Robb said he will work with the Democratic Leadership Council and has no announcement at this time.

Among those believed to be running are U.S. Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado, Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri, Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt and the Rev. Jesse Jackson. Political observers believe New York Gov. Mario Cuomo will seek the nomination, although he says he will not run.

Two DJs taken off air because of cash giveaway

AUSTIN (AP) — Morning disc jockey Dave Jarrott and announcer David Anderson of radio station KEYI-FM have been taken off the air indefinitely for improperly conducting a telephone giveaway, according to station management.

Assistant operations director Ken Rush said the two were suspended Wednesday morning after conducting a call-in cash giveaway. He said they were suspended because "they handled the giveaway in an unauthorized manner."

Rush said the way Jarrott and Anderson gave away money totaling $6,800 on Wednesday tied up phones and inconvenienced people. The money went to the 103rd caller.

The announcers were supposed to place the calls rather than asking listeners to call, Rush said.

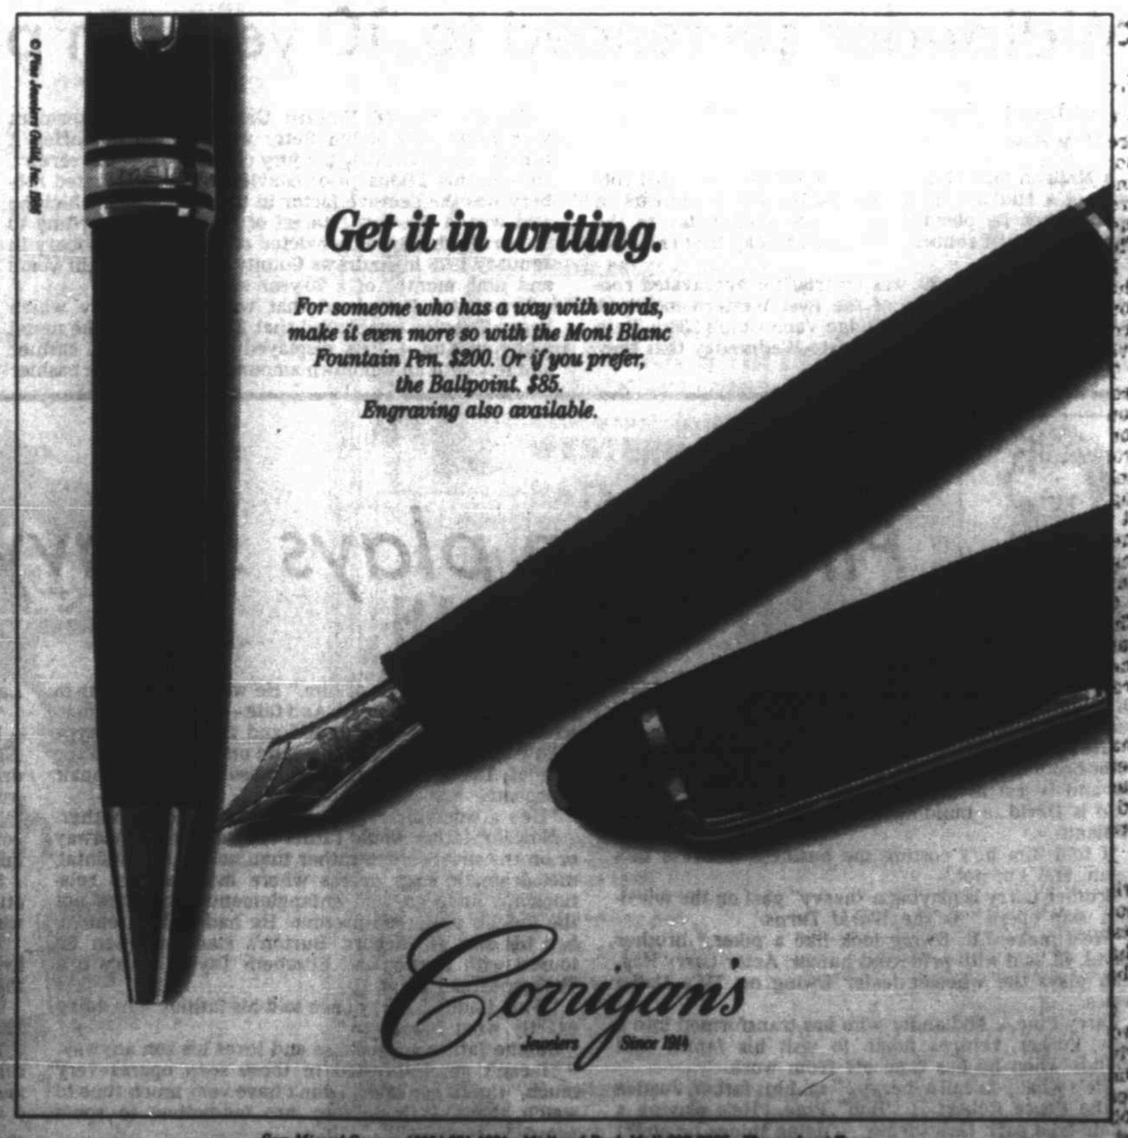

After a similar KEYI call-in disrupted telephone service for two hours throughout the city on May 15, the radio station sent a letter to Southwestern Bell officials saying they would not conduct that kind of giveaway again.

Burglary reported

From Staff Reports

The Midland County Sheriff's office reported Thursday the burglary of a north Midland county home from which items valued at $500 were taken.

Brenda Chandler, County Road 1135 North, told authorities that a silver video cassette recorder valued at $350 and a 20-gauge shotgun valued at $150 were missing. According to reports, the offense occurred Wednesday between 7 a.m. and 5:20 p.m. Entry apparently was gained through windows or a door at the rear of the residence.

MAKING THE GRADE

The Midland League of United Latin American Citizens has awarded scholarships to eight Midland high school graduates. Recipients include:

Four groups will sponsor career seminar

From Staff Reports

In an attempt to assist those who are struggling through difficult economic conditions, Midland College and three other local organizations are sponsoring a "Career Reassessment Seminar" Monday through Thursday.

Included will be 10 different workshops, each offered for two of the four nights. In addition, counselors from MC and other agencies will be available for personalized assistance.

The workshops are being offered from 6:30-10 p.m. each evening, with counseling from 6 to 7 p.m. Fee is $12 for one or as many as eight of the workshops. All sessions are being held in the Allison Fine Arts Building. Persons interested may register at the Continuing Education Department, college Administration Building, from 7 a.m.-6 p.m. through Monday or from 6-7 p.m. each night.

Co-sponsors are the Midland Chamber of Commerce, Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, and the Midland Chamber of Black Entrepreneurs, Inc.

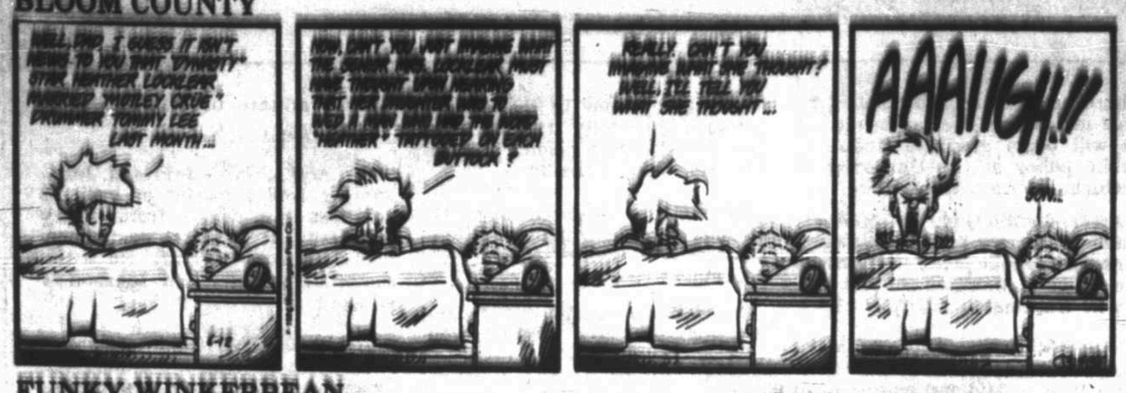

"Our goal was to bring together many of the community's resource persons and agencies to present compact, useful programs in concentrated workshops," said Wanda Phillips, program coordinator.

Topics on Monday and Tuesday will include tips on writing resumes, how to maintain self-esteem, interest testing, personnel agencies and ways they can be useful, and suggestions about tightening family budgets.

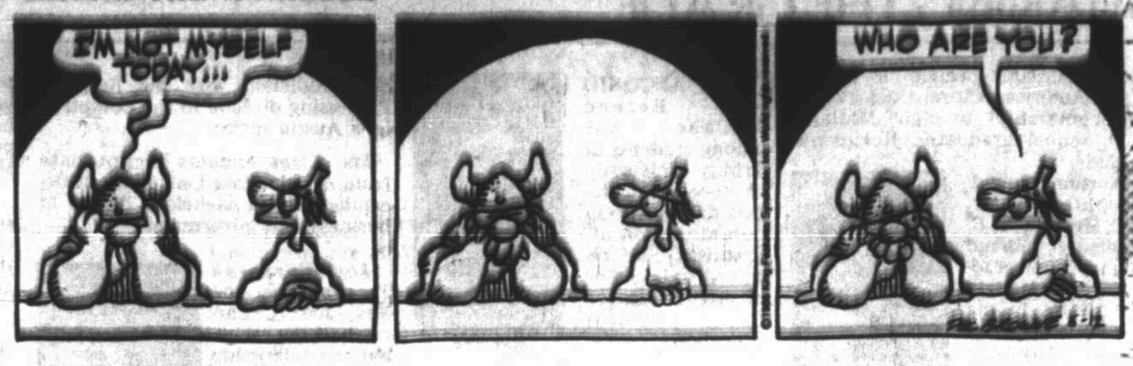

On Wednesday and Thursday, the workshops will talk about family survival during job hunting, starting an independent business, how to be successful in an interview, temporary jobs, and finding jobs that aren't listed in the want ads.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: The decisions you make now bring a new tranquility to your life. You enjoy new peace of mind as well as greater financial security. Parent-child relationships undergo a positive change. Romance hits a new high. You become more productive when your work environment improves. Be on the lookout for an opportunity to travel. New alliances boost your income. Be careful not to put all your eggs in one basket when investing.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Irish poet William Butler Yeats, tennis great Don Budge, actor Basil Rathbone ("Sherlock Holmes"), football's Red Grange, actor Richard Thomas.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Too many comforts could sap your motivation. Rethink your priorities. Plunge into a new creative venture. Hard work and a realistic savings program are the only answer to a financial problem.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You may decide to start a business that will allow you to work from home. Shrewd investments provide the money you need for a child's education. Forget about work this evening and relax.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Children will be more cooperative if you are open with them. A temporary sacrifice could bring new chances for success later on. Follow your heart in romance. Only you know what is best!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): The romantic outlook brightens as the weekend approaches. Tend to business or school details so that you can relax when you go home this evening.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your partner may be too unpredictable for you to build a solid relationship. Talk things over. You need to open new lines of communication with an authority figure. Pay debts promptly.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Gifts from an admirer could make it difficult for you to concentrate on work today. A major financial breakthrough is possible. Observe all safety rules when driving. Others may be inattentive.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A big career break could come in the next few weeks. Keep your goals in sight even when on vacation. A love relationship is on a stronger footing now.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A friendship turns into something very special. Beware of mixing business with pleasure. A romance develops that knocks you off balance. Analyze past mistakes with an eye to profiting from them.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Find new outlets for your considerable talents. Those in love give serious thought to marrying. Make a special effort to build your savings; buy necessities only if short on cash. Cooperation abounds.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Good judgment leads to new financial gains. Reward those who have been loyal and loving. Family relationships improve. You receive some very useful information in the mail. Repay favors as soon as possible.

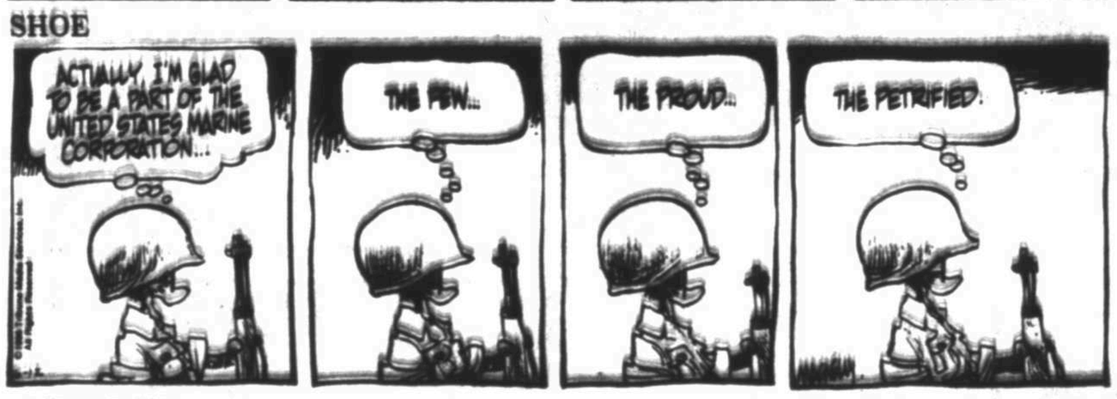

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A brilliant idea could turn the whole week around for you. Do not start doubting yourself or others will follow suit. A late summer vacation should prove very rewarding. Travel for business purposes.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Try to visualize how a project will develop. Keep tabs on costs if building a house. Real estate negotiations enjoy highly favorable influences.

You may not agree with all Marshall Miles has to say on bridge theory, but you pay attention. His ideas on the play of the cards, in particular, are well worth careful study.

In a recent article in the ACBL Bulletin, he discussed concealment of your holding. This hand highlights what he had in mind. Playing in a pairs tournament, South declares four spades after a routine auction and West leads the top of his heart sequence.

Obviously, you have only three losers, so it is a question of your best line for an overtrick. Should you use your two entries to dummy for trump or diamond finesses? Miles argues convincingly that the diamond finesses are superior. The trump finesse won't help if the suit breaks 4-0, and you have a better chance of dropping a singleton king in spades than in diamonds.

And if the diamond finesse loses, you might still be able to pick up the king of trumps with one finesse.

However, Miles points out that it might be fatal to lead a diamond to the jack at trick two. If the cards are as shown in the diagram, an expert defender could hold up the king, tempting you to repeat the diamond finesse and so lose your overtrick. If, instead, you lead a diamond to the queen, it is almost impossible for West to duck with the king, since it might be giving you a trick and the contract. With the diamond situation resolved, you know whether to use your remaining entry to the table to repeat the diamond finesse or to switch to the spade finesse. The rule: Play the higher, or highest, of equals if you don't want the opponents to duck.

Bush flying high at Expo 86

Bush

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — Vice President George Bush flew a helium-filled, saucer-like craft at Expo 86 during a four-day tour of Canada.

Bush took controls of the Hystar after a brief lesson at the Canada pavilion Wednesday and a crowd gave him a round of applause for his effort despite a somewhat bumpy landing.

Aides with Bush, who arrived in British Columbia on Tuesday, said he hoped to ease trade irritants between the United States and Canada.

Bush was scheduled to speak today to a Board of Trade breakfast before leaving for Ottawa and a meeting with Prime Minister Brian Mulroney.

Dunham

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Katherine Dunham, a choreographer whose dance company heralded black dance for decades, has been awarded the $25,000 Samuel H. Scripps American Dance Festival Award.

Her Dunham School of Dance in New York became the cradle of American black dance from 1945 to 1955, and her dance company toured Europe in the 1950s.

"She represents a rare combination of gifts: that of an artist, dedicated humanist and scholar," said Charles Reinhart, president of the 52-year-old American Dance Festival.

Dunham graduated from the University of Chicago with a Ph.D. in anthropology and has written books including "Journey to Accompong" in 1946, "A Touch of Innocence" in 1959, "Island Possessed" in 1969 and "Dances of Haiti" in 1984.

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Jerry Lee Lewis, Kool & The Gang and Robert Palmer all are signed up to perform during a 10-day show of music, daredevilry, clowns and carnival rides beginning Friday at the Mid-South Fairgrounds.

Memphis Musicfest is sponsored by The Great River Carnival, formerly known as the Cotton Carnival.

Out-of-towners signed up for the event include Aerosmith, The Fabulous Thunderbirds, Mr. Mister, Ted Nugent and John Cafferty & The Beaver Brown Band.

Music is the primary draw, but the festival will include daredevil acts by performers with the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Thrill Show.

"The gates open at noon each day and close at midnight. There's something going on all day long," said Jerry Klein, a festival spokesman.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Comedian Lily Tomlin has sued the producers of a documentary about her one-woman Broadway show, claiming they violated contract restrictions on the amount of material from that show that could be used.

The Superior Court lawsuit, filed Wednesday, seeks a court order barring distribution or sale of the documentary, "Lily," until it complies with the claimed contract provision, said attorney Daniel Sklar.

Walter Teller, attorney for producers Joan Churchill and Nicholas Broomfield, said late Wednesday he was unaware that a lawsuit had been filed and could not comment.

The lawsuit says that in 1964, Miss Tomlin signed a contract with the producers to make a documentary for non-commercial television about her role in the creation of the Broadway show, "The Search for Signs of Intelligent Life in the Universe."

According to the lawsuit, the contract specified that the film could include no more than 15 minutes of an actual Broadway performance and only 15 minutes of pre-Broadway performances that were not part of the New York stage version.

Miss Tomlin contends that when she viewed the film last February, there were 15 minutes of a Broadway performance and 15 minutes of material that is part of the Broadway version but were filmed at a pre-Broadway performance. She says she asked for the material to be removed, but it was still included when she viewed the film again in April.

The lawsuit also names the Corporation for Public Broadcasting and Public Broadcasting Service.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Hands Across America, the 4,152-mile human linkup to fight hunger, has collected nearly $28 million in donations and $8.6 million in pledges, say organizers who had hoped the effort would raise $50 million.

The biggest success, according to a statement Wednesday, was increasing public awareness about U.S. hunger and homelessness and creating "momentum for further action by communities and groups across the country."

"I feel that May 25 symbolizes the beginning of a new age in domestic activism," said Ken Kragen, the project's coordinator.

An estimated 5.6 million people stood in line along the 4,152-mile route from New York's Battery Park to the Queen Mary in Long Beach, Kragen said, with an additional 1.5 million people forming separate lines in states not on the main route.

Organizers said that despite gaps in the line they surpassed their goal of 5 million participants needed to stretch from coast to coast.

As of Monday, Hands Across America had received more than $27.8 million in contributions and had $8.6 million in pledges outstanding, organizers said.

Of the total, $24.39 million came from the 17 states through which the route passed, $3.46 million came from other states, and $8.59 million came from corporate donations.

Mercury content in fish causes concern

By SONJA HEINZE

Heinze

Q. My husband is trying to maintain his weight and finds eating fish, rather than meat, a help. Recently he has been concerned about mercury. Does all fish or just swordfish contain mercury? Is it safe to eat fish for dinner every day? Reader in Torrington, Conn.

A. Robert Price, seafood technology specialist with the University of California at Davis, advises that although mercury may be found in all kinds of fish and other foods, swordfish and tuna are the only commercially popular fish that have shown a mercury content exceeding one part per million (ppm).

Price said, "Man has eaten tuna and swordfish with concentrations of mercury higher than the established limit without signs of any harmful effect. Most experts agree that the one ppm level for fish has a considerable margin of safety built into it. There have been no reported cases of mercury poisoning in the U.S. from eating fish."

A person who eats fish every day should vary the types of fish eaten since some may be contaminated with certain pollutants. Ocean fish, as opposed to freshwater fish, generally have less of a pollution problem.

Q. What ingredients are in all hot dogs? A neighbor told me lately that eyelashes are put in them. I was shocked. J.A. Haller, Ormond Beach, Fla.

A. Hot dogs have been rumored to contain everything from cowhide to earthworms, but eyelashes is a new one on me.

The ingredients of hot dogs vary with the brand. Read the label. Most hot dogs contain meat, water, salt, sugar, spices and additives such as artificial coloring, sodium erythorbate or ascorbate, sodium acid pyrophosphate, sodium nitrate and sodium nitrite.

The meat may be all beef or a beef and pork mixture, and may or may not include heart meat or muscle from tongue, diaphragm or esophagus. If lips, snouts and ears are used, the label should say "with by-products," or something similar. Dry milk or soy flour may also be added to "beef up" the mixture.

Dr. Michael Jacobson, of the Center for Science in the Public Interest, visited one large Virginia packing house and observed that "the meat that went into hog dogs (and bologna) consisted of fat trimmed from hams and chops; the only red meat was bits that were accidentally attached to large pieces of fat. After the ingredients were pulverized and emulsified, the mixture of fat, water, protein (from dry milk or soy flour) and additives had the color of bread dough and the consistency of mud.

"The emulsion was then packed into a casing, which was coated with a brilliant red artificial coloring, and cooked. The light tan mixture darkened during the cooking due to the heat and to the action of sodium nitrate and nitrite."

Doesn't sound too appetizing, but at least there weren't any eyelashes in the mixture.

Reader Response: E. Ann Vermillion, Davenport, Iowa: "I read your column in which a reader complained about the quality of Chicken of the Sea tuna, and how even the labels look cheaper. I, too, noticed a taste difference in this tuna and found an older can to compare labels.

"The tuna was previously packed in seasoned broth and oil and is now packed in pure vegetable oil. Unless they get enough complaints and return to using the seasoned broth and oil, I will not purchase it again."

Several readers wrote complaining about the declining quality of canned tuna, even suggesting perhaps fish other than tuna were in the cans, which is highly unlikely.

Since there are so many different brands of tuna now, packed in various solutions including water, vegetable oils, olive oils and/or hydrolized protein, which is a flavor enhancer, and also tuna which is salt-free or low sodium (the absence of which definitely affects the taste).

Albacore, the most expensive because it's the scarcest, is the white meat tuna with the least fishy taste. The tan tunas, usually either from yellowfin or skipjack, have a more profound taste.

Toppels totter in taste-test

By LINDA ANDERSON

Snack foods come and snack foods go.

One of the newest to come on the scene is Toppels from Frito-Lay, a potato-based snack thin that touts the marvelousness of having the cheese topping on the outside, were snackers can see it. It comes in four cheese flavors — Cheddar and onion, Monterey Jack, cheese pizza and Oktoberfest Cheddar.

We do a lot of snacking at our house, so Toppels seemed like a natural for us to try. The adult, teen and children sampled the snack for taste, price and advertising accuracy.

Toppels are packaged in 6.5-ounce, foil-backed bags, priced at $1.49 — which, ounce for ounce, is more expensive than potato chips at $1.49 for eight ounces, or cheese crackers at $1.69 for a box. (Prices listed are from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.)

Label advertising claims "Toppels snack thins are the new cheese snack thin with two great tastes. A light crispy snack thin and a delicious topping made with real cheese."

Sure enough, a check of the ingredients listed on the label showed dehydrated potatoes (with sodium acid pyrophosphate, sodium bisulfite, BHA and BHT as preservatives) listed first. Whey, as in curds and whey (Webster's dictionery defines whey as "the thin, watery part of milk, that separates from the thicker part (curds) after coagulation, as in cheesemaking"), is listed sixth and Cheddar cheese finally shows up on the ingredients list in eighth place.

Frito-Lay, a large company with many products on the market, has the class to include a toll-free number on the Toppels label, for consumers to call if they have complaints or comments: 1-800-352-4477. An address — Guaranteed Fresh, P.O. Box 35468, Dept. 28, Dallas 75235-0084 — is also included for customers wishing to write to the company.

In the taste-test, most of the testers weren't that impressed. They agreed the snack thins were good, but not any better than our old favorites, such as barbecue potato chips, Cheez-Its and O'Grady's Au Gratin.

At around 25 cents per ounce, Toppels are more expensive than our favorites, too.

I guess we'll just stick with what we already know and like. Having the cheese on the top is not that big a deal.

Sodium content required on labels

By MARIAN FARR

Farr

Consumers should find it a little easier to cut back on sodium in their diets, thanks to a new Food and Drug Administration regulation.

Beginning July 1, the FDA will require that the sodium content be shown on any food providing nutrition information on the label. The regulation should be of help to people who are concerned about the hidden sources of sodium in processed foods.

Sodium content will be listed in milligrams per serving. Consumers can use that information to see if they are staying within the recommended sodium intake of 1,100-3,300 milligrams a day.

The FDA has defined the various terms that manufacturers may use to describe the sodium content of their products. These terms include:

- Sodium free — less than 5 milligrams of sodium in each serving;
- Very low sodium — 35 milligrams or less in a serving;
- Low sodium — 140 milligrams or less per serving; and
- Reduced sodium — the usual level of sodium for this product has been reduced by at least 75 percent.

Sodium-conscious consumers should keep in mind that a product with little or no salt is not necessarily sodium-free since at least 70 sodium compounds, such as monosodium glutamate or sodium bicarbonate, are used in processed foods.

An FDA survey shows about half the food products available would already qualify as being "low-sodium" products. Among these foods are hot and cold cereals, fresh meats and poultry, some fish, frozen vegetables and some desserts and snacks.

BETTER BUSINESS

Charter flights offer advantages

By JOHN K. SCHMIDT

Schmidt

If you are in the market for a low cost flight to Hawaii or some other vacation hot spot, a charter flight might be the answer.

A charter flight is one in which an aircraft — or portion of an aircraft — is leased to a tour operator, who in turn sells seats to travel agents to sell to their customers.

Charters offer several advantages. First, they are usually cheaper because the charter cost is prorated among the passengers after allowing a certain profit for the operator and agent. Second, charters can go nonstop to the ultimate destination, avoiding the possible inconvenience of stopping and changing planes enroute. Third, groups can travel together.

However there are disadvantages. First, because the cost is prorated over every seat, they have strict cancellation policies. Read over this policy carefully, which will be included in your charter contract. Contract cancellation provisions usually require forfeiture of your cost or a severe penalty no matter how valid the reason for cancellation.

As a second disadvantage, your contract may permit the operator to cancel the flight without penalty or recourse on your part. A typical clause in a charter contract permits the operator to cancel if the charter does not have a sufficient number of passengers.

A third disadvantage is that charters may fly at inconvenient hours: Early in the morning or late at night.

Ask your travel agent about the track record of the charter operator. Some charter operators have gone into bankruptcy or failed to provide flight accommodations, resulting in a total loss to their passengers, but this is the exception.

Only you can weigh the pros and cons in deciding whether a charter flight is right for your particular situation. Best wishes for smooth flying.

Plan ahead for easier car renting

NEW YORK (AP) — City dwellers who want to rent a car for a summer getaway should plan ahead, suggests the president of an automobile rental organization. These tips will make the transaction more pleasant and economical, according to George Badcock, president of Budget Rent A Car of Manhattan:

- Always reserve your car early — for summer weekends make your reservation by Wednesday. When making a reservation ask for a confirmation number and the name of the person taking your reservation.
- Know your needs. If you're planning a weekend or week-long vacation with the family, which requires a lot of luggage, a sedan may not provide sufficient space.
- Avoid rush hours. Rental counters are normally heavily congested on Fridays from 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. and Saturdays from 8 a.m. to noon. If possible, avoid these times.
- If you plan on renting a car every weekend, inquire about monthly rates.
- Check to see if parking is available for your rental car. Some companies have arrangements with parking lots where customers are given a substantial discount.
- If you have small children, be sure to ask when making your reservation about the availability and cost of renting a child's seat.
- Check for damages. Before accepting any rental car, be sure the car is either damage free or that any damages on the car are noted on the contract.
- Know who you're dealing with. If you plan on renting a car regularly from one location, introduce yourself to the manager of that location. After that, you can usually be assured that the car you request will be put aside for you.

"Most people who are renting a car are merely trying to get out of the outlet as quickly as possible," says Badcock. "But take a few extra minutes and you'll get the best buy for your dollar."

Fruit needs inspection

Copley News Service

Much of the produce imported into the United States contains pesticide residue, says International Wildlife magazine.

One-fourth of all the fruit consumed in this country is grown on foreign soil, where many pesticides banned in the United States are used. Only a tiny fraction of imported food shipments is inspected by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration.

DEAR ABBY

Theft at mother's nursing home worries daughter

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My mother is in a nursing home in another state. She is in a wheelchair and requires constant care. She is lucid part of the time. I am all she has.

My reason for writing: No matter what I send her, it is "lost" — or to be frank, it's stolen — within a week or two. I have been told by the staff that theft is rampant in the best of nursing homes, and they cannot control it. I was shocked when Mother's wedding ring and watch were "lost" the day after she arrived.

Before Mother's Day I was completely frustrated. I am accustomed to sending her lovely nightgowns, robes and slippers, but have been advised to send nothing of value. I want to send her a cassette player. It would be a comfort to her and I could select some "old favorites" on tape for her listening pleasure, but the people in charge have told me not to send it because it would vanish "overnight," and they cannot be responsible for it.

Mother likes the home and is very attached to some of the staff, but this problem of thievery has us stumped. Have you any practical suggestions? Other nursing homes in the area have acknowledged the same problem. — HELPLESS

DEAR HELPLESS: To accept repeated thievery as "something that cannot be controlled" is outrageous! Of course it can be controlled. Contact the local police and city attorney's office. They are experts at sniffing out thieves. Also notify the city, county and state licensing agencies — all of whose regulations are being violated by the management's unwillingness or inability to handle this problem. Nursing homes have a responsibility to those they serve. And you should not have to forgo the pleasure of giving your mother a cassette player because the management accepts thievery as an uncontrollable fact of life.

DEAR ABBY: I don't see babies and children as people who are particularly pleasant to be around. And I don't see motherhood as a particularly happy experience.

I am not a mother, nor am I pregnant; I am a very happily married 32-year-old woman. I see parenthood as the end of my happiness, partly due to my own family experiences, and partly due to the fact that 95 percent of the mothers I know complain about the problems of motherhood.

Why did they have children anyway? Perhaps you can give me some good reasons? — PUZZLED OUT EAST

DEAR PUZZLED: I could fill this column with good reasons to have children, but if you can't think of at least one on your own, perhaps you shouldn't have any. Make no apologies; it's a wise woman who knows her limitations. Motherhood is not for everybody.

DEAR ABBY: I am a young woman completely bald due to alopecia, so I wear a wig. I have adjusted to this condition fairly well, but I need a clever remark to say when I remove my wig for the first time in the presence of a man. — P. IN COLUMBUS, OHIO

DEAR P.: Don't surprise him. Tell him that you are wearing a wig and why.

If you feel you need a "clever" remark while removing your wig, you could say, "Look, I've flipped my wig over you!"

Any color as long as it's black

NEW YORK (UPI) — Packaging has come a long way since Henry Ford said his cars could be "any color, as long as it's black."

Since then, the auto buyer has learned to choose from a rainbow of colors to enhance his purchase. And supermarket shoppers encounter a myriad of colored graphics — some so recognizable they've entered the realm of Americana.

But black is back. Seven of the 14 winning entries in the 1985 Package Design Council Gold Awards were predominantly black designs.

Some leading package designers worry that overuse of black will deprive the color of its cachet.

"Black promises something special and expensive," says Fred Mittleman of New York-based Mittleman Design Associates. "When applied to frozen foods, soups, desserts or breakfast juice, it loses much of its meaning."

Mittleman said black can confuse the consumer by promising more than the product can deliver.

Group pushes economic sanctions

BY MARCUS ELIASON

LONDON (AP) — The Commonwealth group that investigated South Africa's racial crisis says tough economic sanctions against the government may offer the last chance to avert what could be "the worst bloodbath since World War II."

In a report made public Wednesday, the Commonwealth's seven-member Eminent Persons Group said it sees little likelihood of a negotiated solution to the conflict, and blamed South Africa's violence almost exclusively on policies of the white-controlled government.

South Africa today declared a nationwide state of emergency and detained hundreds of anti-apartheid activists prior to Monday's 10th anniversary of the Soweto uprising. The action was the government's most wideranging attempt to quell racial violence.

More than 1,600 people, most of them black, have been killed in 21 months of violence linked to apartheid, South Africa's system of segregation under which 5 million whites dominate 24 million voteless blacks.

The Commonwealth group stopped short of recommending economic sanctions outright, but said they are a weapon South Africa fears and has used effectively itself against neighboring black nations. The group said not imposing them encourages Pretoria to drag its feet on reform.

It also viewed sanctions as a way of showing South African blacks that change can be brought about without violence, and added: "Such action may offer the last opportunity to avert what could be the worst bloodbath since World War II."

The report, based on five months' research and meetings in southern Africa, is likely to put new pressure on Britain's Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher to bow to majority Commonwealth sentiment and agree to sanctions.

The group was set up last October by the 49-nation Commonwealth, an association of Britain and its former colonies, as a compromise between the majority's stand and Britain's rejection of sanctions.

The report is the most exhaustive study of the problem by a diplomatic group since South Africa was plunged into racial turmoil nearly two years ago.

Led by former Prime Ministers Malcolm Fraser of Australia and Dame Nita Barrow of the Bahamas, and former military leader Olusegun Obasanjo of Nigeria, its mission was to analyze the situation and recommend what action the Commonwealth nations should take.

The group said its mission was scuttled by South Africa's raids on African National Congress targets in three neighboring black states last month, and its insistence that the ANC permanently renounce violence rather than just suspend it during negotiations.

"Its (Pretoria's) obduracy and intransigence wrecked the Commonwealth's initiative," the report charged.

In its 118 pages, the report accuses the South African government of self-delusion, being "unrealistic and wholly unreasonable," and being out of touch with the thinking of South Africa's blacks.

The group conceded that some steps have been taken to ease the effects of apartheid, but does not see any government readiness to dismantle the system.

"The harshness of apartheid, in many of its manifestations, has been and is being softened," the report said. "But the essential pillars remain: the 'homelands' policy (of making blacks live in mostly impoverished, nominally independent areas), the Population Registration Act (listing every South African's race at birth), the Group Areas Act (dictating racially segregated living)."

"To the casual visitor, apartheid may appear to be on the way out," the report said. "In its essential elements, it remains very much intact."

The group said it did not believe that the release of jailed black leader Nelson Mandela would lead to uncontrollable violence by blacks. "Provided the negotiating process was agreed, Mr. Mandela's own voice would appeal for calm. We believe his authority would secure it," the report said.

The group says many whites are ahead of their government in seeking change. "The government can still rely on carrying the majority of the white community if it takes bold decisions to bring peace and prosperity to the country as a whole," the report said.

Crossroads women arrested during Cape Town protest

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Dozens of women from Crossroads were arrested today at the gates of Parliament in Cape Town while protesting security force operations in their battle-torn black shantytowns.

The women, some with children bundled on their backs, gathered at an Anglican cathedral then marched to Parliament. They carried placards denouncing the security forces and accusing them of siding with vigilantes in factional fighting at Crossroads, the complex of squatter camps outside Cape Town.

At least 21 people have been killed and about 300 wounded since Monday in battles between thousands of anti-apartheid black militants, who call themselves "comrades," and black vigilantes. Previous reports put the toll at 17, but the number increased as more deaths were confirmed.

The Red Cross estimated today that as many as 70,000 people have been burned out of their shacks either from this week's fighting or a series of clashes last month in which vigilantes set fire to neighborhoods controlled by the militants.

Anglican Bishop Desmond Tutu, the 1984 Nobel Peace Prize winner and archbishop-elect of Cape Town, conferred with vigilante leaders in Crossroads on Wednesday and said he hoped to arrange peace talks between them and leaders of the militants.

"It's like watching the workings of a plot of a very bad novel coming together," he said after his trip into the camps. "It is so nightmarish."

Capt. Jan Calitz, a police spokesman in Cape Town, said no fighting was reported at Crossroads this morning. He also said he had no details on the arrests outside Parliament.

Reporters who witnessed the march on Parliament, however, said several dozen women were arrested, including some who scuffled with police.

There have been widespread allegations by clergymen, relief workers and opposition politicians that the security forces have sided with the vigilantes during the conflict.

According to some of these critics, the government is trying to tighten its control over Crossroads by moving residents of squatter camps controlled by the militants to a settlement area farther from Cape Town and giving vigilante leaders control of upgraded housing planned for the burned-out areas.

CAN YOU IDENTIFY CLASSIC T.V. THEME SONGS?

GAME RULES:

The Midland Reporter-Telegram, A.M. 1510 KMND Memory Music T.V. Game is based on skill in identifying (6) T.V. show theme songs each week. There will be 12 weekly games beginning Monday, April 7th and ending Friday, June 27th. There will be weekly 1st, 2nd, and 3rd place winners.

Two excerpts from each of the (6) T.V. show theme songs will be broadcast over A.M. 1510 KMND each week. Excerpts will be broadcast at least six, times daily between 6:00 AM and 6:00 PM Monday through Friday. Each show's two excerpts will be broadcast at least twice during the week, with both excerpts from each theme (12 total) being broadcast at least once by 6:00 PM Thursday of each week.

Excerpts will be numbered one through six. The answer (the title of the show) must be printed or typed on the correspondingly numbered line on the official Midland Reporter-Telegram A.M. 1510 KMND, Memory Music TV Game Entry Form. Each week's official entry form will be published Monday, Tuesday, and Thursday in the Midland Reporter-Telegram. Hand drawn facsimilies of the entire entry form will be acceptable, BUT MACHINE DUPLICATED COPIES ARE PROHIBITED.

CONTESTANTS MAY ENTER ONLY ONCE PER WEEK. The weekly game number must be marked on the lower left of the envelope on the address side. Envelopes must be postmarked by midnight Friday of each week. NO POSTAGE MACHINE CANCELLED ENVELOPES WILL BE ACCEPTED. ONLY ENVELOPES BEARING THE CORRECT POSTAGE AND CANCELLED BY THE U.S. POSTAL SERVICE OR ENTRIES HAND DELIVERED TO THE CONTEST ADDRESS BY 6:00 AM SATURDAY WILL BE ACCEPTED.

The weekly first prize will be awarded to the entrant with the most or all (6) TV shows correctly identified. In the case that more than one entrant has all the shows correctly identified a drawing will be held. 2nd and 3rd will be awarded to the two entrants with the most correct answers respectively. Again in the case more than one entrant having identified all (6) TV shows, a drawing will be held to determine 2nd and 3rd place winners.

The correct answer and the theme song itself along with the two excerpts will be played back twice on A.M. 1510 KMND Saturday morning between 6:00 A.M. and noon. Answers will also be published in Sunday's Midland Reporter Telegram. Weekly winners will be announced each Wednesday afternoon by A.M. 1510 KMND and in the Midland Reporter-Telegram.

It is not necessary to purchase the Midland Reporter-Telegram to play the game. Copies of the MRT are available for free examination at the Midland Reporter-Telegram, 201 East Illinois and the Midland County Public Library.

All winners must sign a release form acknowledging that both the Midland Reporter-Telegram and A.M. 1510 KMND shall have the right to publish, publicize and broadcast his/her name, picture, voice and the fact that he/she won a prize. If the winner is a minor, a parent or guardian must sign a minor's release form prior to the prize being awarded. Winners are responsible for all taxes incurred on prizes.

Judge's decisions will be final in any interpretation of the rules of this game. Employees of the Midland Reporter-Telegram, Bakcor Broadcasting, Inc. and members of their immediate families are ineligible. The Grand Prize, a cruise on The Mississippi or Delta Queen Steamboat is worth up to $4,000. Does not include bar tab, shore tours or gift shop purchases. It may be used at your convenience based on a 30 day space available basis. It includes round trip airfare to New Orleans. Cruise must be taken by April 1, 1987. Grand prize may not be exchanged.

The winner of the cruise will be determined by a drawing at the end of all 12 weekly games. All weekly 1st, 2nd, and 3rd prize winners will be entered in the drawing.
