Congressmen ready to end pay increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of Congress are ready to beat a midnight deadline and deny themselves a 51 percent pay raise that the public clearly doesn't want them to accept.

Raise opponents cleared the path for rejection votes in both houses today, after they engineered the collapse Monday of House Speaker Jim Wright's suggested alternative, a 30 percent pay increase.

Wright, D-Texas, reluctantly scheduled today's vote on "a simple resolution of disapproval" that would require suspension of the rules and a two-thirds majority. Lawmakers for and against a raise predicted passage.

The speaker conceded after his forces were beaten decisively when they tried to adjourn the House, let the full raise become law at 12:01 a.m. Wednesday and then schedule a Thursday vote to scale back the increase to 30 percent. The opening move in that strategy failed on a 238-88 vote.

As Monday wore on, everything appeared to fall in place for opponents of the raise. Senate Majority Leader George J. Mitchell, D-Maine, whose chamber voted 95-5 last week for a differently worded rejection bill last week, said he would schedule a prompt vote on the House version. Passage requires a simple majority.

Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said President Bush would sign the rejection measure despite Bush's personal support for the raise.

Public clamor against the raise has been growing each day. A weekend Gallup poll asked 1,001 adults from Friday through Sunday whether they favored or opposed increasing congressional pay from $89,500 to $135,000, the amount of the proposed increase.

The results, with a four-point margin of error, showed 82 percent opposed with only 15 percent in favor.

The raise was recommended by a presidential commission. Its rejection not only would keep congressional pay stuck at $89,500, but would prevent federal judges and top Bush administration officials from getting a similar increase.

Some lawmakers said an across-the-board rejection would be devastating because the executive branch cannot compete with private industry and colleges for managers and scientists. They also said an increase is needed to stop the drain of federal judges leaving the bench for lucrative law practices.

Bush, at a late afternoon news conference, was asked if he would sign legislation that vetoes the pay raise.

He reminded reporters "I said I would support" the raise, but never directly answered the question.

But Dole said: "I understand he'll sign it. He needs to do it by midnight so the judiciary doesn't get a big step while everybody else is being stepped on."

Handling of issue draws ire

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas Democrats are complaining about Republican demogoguery toward a $45,500 pay raise while at least one GOP congressman complains the Democratic leadership handled the issue "horrendously."

Rep. John Bryant, a Dallas Democrat, said there was "a great deal of irresponsible demagoguery, people running to get in front of a parade."

He said he saw one congressman tell a television reporter that "we beat down this pay raise" on Monday. But the same Republican asked him privately how he could help Wright "hold the fort" and let the raise take effect.

"It was the worst example of hypocrisy I've ever seen," Bryant said.

House Speaker Jim Wright caved in to opponents Monday and agreed to let a vote be taken today on the raise.

One of the pay raise's first supporters, Rep. Marvin Leath, a Waco Democrat, said he would now vote against it. Leath is also calling for a ban on honoraria, the fees members receive for speeches and appearances before special interest groups, and thinks the spouses of members of Congress should not be allowed to hold high-paying jobs.

"If we're going to stop all perceptions of conflict, let's go all the way, then maybe everyone will come to the table and deal reasonably, without the demagoguery."

One Texan in Congress who has a spouse with a high-level federal job is Republican Sen. Phil Gramm, whose wife, Wendy Gramm, is chairman of the Commodity Futures Trading Commission.

One immediate casualty of the raise appears to be a plan to ban lawmakers' receipt of fees for speeches and appearances. These often are paid by special interests seeking to influence legislation.

Many members of Congress who accept the money said they do so to supplement an inadequate income.

Pair shares shelter of old car

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Joseph Bowden and Jesse Griffin turned to the the Salvation Army for help Monday, but only because the cold weather had become so unbearable they needed hot showers to warm themselves.

Like other homeless people, the two companions have found refuge at the local shelter since temperatures hit record-breaking lows this past week.

In fact, during the past four days the Salvation Army shelter has become home to more than 27 people who lack permanent housing for one reason or another.

Some are out of work and don't have any choice but to take to the streets, while others prefer that way of life, said Harvey Harwell, commander of the local Salvation Army post.

"You can't force them to live any other way," said Harwell, who has resigned himself to the fact that few American cities have escaped the influx of people forced to live on the streets — the Tall City included.

The Salvation Army doesn't turn anybody away from the shelter unless they are intoxicated or unruly, said Harwell.

In recent days, homeless mothers and their children have been put up in hotels across town because the 27-bed shelter is too full to accommodate everyone, he added.

"I'm shaking so bad I can hardly stand it," said Bowden, who has been living on the streets most of the past four years.

Looking forward to a shower and a hot cup of coffee, Bowden and Griffin planned to warm themselves enough to head back to their temporary shelter — an early-model Ford LTD parked at the Twin City Paint & Body Shop.

Huddled under sleeping bags to stay warm, Bowden and Griffin are the third pair of homeless men who have sought shelter in the car since winter arrived, according to the shop's owner, Bill Hartley.

"The only heat we have is the body heat between me and Jesse," said Bowden, who's been living in the automobile this past week because temperatures below freezing made it unbearable to survive out on the streets.

Normally, the duo would find shelter in abandoned buildings or spend the nights in parks and under bridges. However, the recent cold snap left them no choice but to hunt for a warmer sanctuary.

"I was raised in this country and I've never seen it this cold this long. The wind is what eats you up when it's cold like this," he observed.

Bowden, an unemployed roughneck who's been out of work since 1985 when the bottom fell out of the oil industry, has moved in and out of homelessness.

He suffers from the condition known as angina — cramping chest pains caused by a lack of oxygen to the heart muscle — and worries about the effect the cold weather will have on his health.

"In the wee hours of the morning, it (the cold) will eat you alive. It's pretty tough out there right now," he said, looking back on the good ole days when he was a steward aboard an off-shore oil rig in Southern Louisiana and later cooked at a Beaumont country club.

When the oil boom hit West Texas, Bowden headed this direction to find work as a roughneck. The bust followed a few years later and Bowden and Griffin, also an unemployed oil field worker, have been forced to survive on a limited amount of food stamps and what little work was available.

The duo often eats at the Blessings for Obedience Soup Kitchen on South Terrell Street, where Griffin describes the food as "outstanding."

"That soup was so hot today you couldn't eat it for a few minutes," he said. "And the people down there are beautiful."

Bowden prefers to stay away from homeless shelters. "I guess I'm just too independent for that," he said, adding that there's not much difference between street life and overnight stays in a motel room.

"A motel is just as lonely. It's the lonliness that will drive you nuts," he said.

Cold snaps power lines; Second front to follow

From Staff and Wire Reports

Power lines in Odessa fell prey Monday to the sub-freezing temperatures cursing the state of Texas, an official says.

And forecasters say a "warm" spell expected here by week's end should be ousted early next week by another nasty cold spell.

Nearly 2,400 TU Electric customers were without power after a northwest Odessa mainline broke in half, said Darrell Prcin, district customer service manager.

This morning, another 1,900 customers in the University Gardens area lost electricity, but the cause of the outage was still undetermined, Prcin said.

Monday was the third consecutive day a new all-time low temperature was recorded in Midland, a forecaster at the National Weather Service said.

The low Monday plummeted to nine degrees and broke a 7-year-old record low of 11 degrees, said John Frazar, a meteorological technician.

Congressmen spend cautious praise on S&L plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional leaders are offering cautious praise for President Bush's plan to bail out the savings and loan industry, but many are wary of his proposal to sock the taxpayers for about half the $90 billion initial cost.

Bush on Monday offered a complex financing scheme mixing tax dollars with higher insurance premiums paid by banks and S&Ls.

He also called for an overhaul of the financial regulatory system aimed at preventing S&L problems from recurring, vowed to pursue wrongdoers in the industry and pledged to protect insured deposits. He recommended no direct fee on depositors.

"In all the time since creation of the deposit insurance, savers have not lost one dollar of insured deposits and I am determined that they never will," the president said at a news conference.

Under the Bush plan, which must be approved by Congress, the government would sell $50 billion in 30-year in bonds as needed over three years to finance the cost of closing or selling about 350 failed institutions. That's in addition to the $40 billion pledged last year by regulators to rescue and prop up 223 institutions.

Insurance premiums paid by financial institutions, combined with tax dollars, would pay the interest on the bonds and meet regulators' 1988 commitments. Money to pay off the principal on the bonds would come from the S&L industry.

Sen. Donald W. Riegle, D-Mich., the chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, said Bush had presented "by and large a sensible proposal" and that "the structural reforms make sense."

However, Riegle said the taxpayer cost was "a substantial amount of money" and said he was concerned it would cut into other programs such as the fight against drugs and education.

Bush's budget director, Richard Darman, said the public would shoulder 54 percent of the burden over the 30-year life of the plan.

Probe of Tower charges taking longer than anticipated

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush stood by Defense Secretary-designate John Tower as an FBI investigation into new allegations of drinking and womanizing dragged on beyond the expected date of completion.

Bush said at a White House news conference Monday that the 63-year-old Tower should not have to withdraw his name based on unsubstantiated rumors about his personal life.

"I think people would not want a person to step aside, given rumor, particularly if the rumor is baseless," the president said. "And the problem is the process is taking a little longer than I would like, and yet, I think the Senate has got to do what they're doing — looking at these allegations very carefully."

Bush added, however, that if any rumors or innuendoes turned out to be "a substantive allegation of this nature, of course it would concern me."

The ranking Republican on the Senate Armed Services Committee, Sen. John Warner of Virginia, had said Friday that the panel expected to receive the final FBI report Monday and vote on the Tower nomination either today or Wednesday.

But Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., the chairman of the committee, said Monday that the panel had not received a report on the new allegations, which congressional sources have said deal with womanizing and drinking. Nunn also said that the panel has not decided when it will vote on the nomination.

Meanwhile, committee member Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., when asked whether the new allegations centered on a relationship involving Tower and a Russian ballerina who may have been a KGB plant, said the report had been checked out previously and there was "no credibility" to it.

Nunn disputed a statement Bush made that the FBI has looked into the new allegations and "the committee now has" the report. "We've done some talking back and forth but we've received no report whatsoever," he said.

WEATHER SUMMARY

COLD

Saturday's and Sunday's temperatures dipped to eight and 10 degrees in setting new records.

Temperatures by this coming Saturday should range from the mid-20s to the mid-50s. Forecasters today didn't predict precipitation for the weekend locally, though cities to the north may get snow Friday or Saturday.

The cold system due here early next week originated in Canada, but isn't packing the bitterness associated with the current cold system, Frazar said.

STATE

Slightly warmer temperatures are on the horizon although Texas remained in the grip of very cold Arctic air today.

A slight warming trend was expected to begin over most of the state Wednesday, but forecasters warn of the possibility of more freezing precipitation across portions of the state later this week.

There were patches of light drizzle in extreme South Texas where skies are mostly cloudy early today.

A winter weather advisory was in effect through tonight for Southeast Texas and the lower coastal plains with occasional freezing drizzle expected in Southeast Texas, the coastal bend and Lower Rio Grande Valley. There is a slight chance of snow flurries early Wedesdany over the South Plains. It will be partly to mostly cloudy over most of the state.

Lows tonight will be from zero to five above in the Panhandle and in the 20s along the Rio Grande and in extreme West Texas, in the upper teens to mid 20s across North Texas and in the teens and 20s over most of South Texas except in the 30s along the lower South Texas coast.

Highs Wednesday will be in the 20s and 30s over most of West Texas, ranging upward to near 50 in the Big Bend area of Southwest Texas, in the 30s across North Texas and in the 30s and 40s in South Texas.

NATION

Snow was falling in the Great Lakes and the Southwest and freezing rain stretched from the Appalachians to Texas' Gulf Coast after another day of record-breaking cold.

Forty-one cities tied or set record lows Monday in 10 states, mainly between the Pacific Coast and the Rockies. They included Ely, Nev., where a reading of 30 degrees below zero was the lowest temperature ever recorded there.

Snow reached from northern New York state across the Great Lakes region to Minnesota and North Dakota. Buffalo, N.Y., received 5 inches in the six hours that ended at 1 a.m. EST.

Snow also was falling in northeast New Mexico and the Texas Panhandle.

Freezing rain was falling over parts of the Virginias, Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and the lower Texas Gulf Coast. Rain was scattered from southeast Louisiana to North Carolina.

Winter storm warnings and advisories for sleet and freezing rain have been posted from the southeast Texas, Louisiana, much of Mississippi and northwest Alabama.

Advisories for snow squalls have been posted over portions of western and northern New York state. A snow advisory was issued for southwest and south central New Mexico, and freeze warnings were posted for southwest Arizona and the valleys and lower deserts of Southern California.

Today's forecast called for snow with some sleet scattered across much of Arkansas, Tennessee and Kentucky, and freezing rain along the Texas Gulf Coast and over interior portions of Louisiana and Mississippi. Light snow was forecast to extend from Montana across the Dakotas and northern Minnesota to Upper Michigan, and from New York state to northern New England.

Cold kills 64, threatens citrus, livestock

Associated Press

Southwestern farmers struggled to save their citrus crops today and Idaho ranchers searched for livestock smothered in seemingly bottomless snow drifts as a deadly arctic air mass shattered more weather records across the nation.

Ice covered vast parts of the Southeast and Texas, causing power outages, filling hotels and causing hundreds of auto accidents on glassy roads. New Orleans went ahead with its soggy Mardi Gras, but other Louisiana towns decided that this Fat Tuesday would be spent indoors.

At least 64 deaths have been blamed on the weather since Jan. 31, when frigid air broke out of Alaska.

Among the latest was a 59-year-old Chicago man found frozen to death Monday outside a metal shop where he often sold aluminum cans, police said. In Washington state, divers found the body of a 53-year-old orchard worker whose car broke through the ice in Osoyoos Lake. Two young brothers drowned in Kentucky after falling through thin ice on a pond. And an 84-year-old woman died of exposure in Dunnville, Ky., after slipping on an icy sidewalk and falling into a ditch.

With the cold front stopped in its tracks, no immediate relief is expected. The cold continued to plague virtually the entire nation, but especially the western third.

In Idaho, Gov. Cecil Andrus declared a state of emergency Monday in rural Clark County, and the National Guard was expected to help ranchers today as they searched drifts as deep as 15 feet for buried cattle and sheep.

County Commissioner Ab Laird said he lost more than 600 sheep, 700 cows and dozens of heifers and bulls on his property near Dubois in eastern Idaho.

"They were all young cows, all pregnant, all ready to calve," Laird said.

The Idaho Department of Fish and Game is working to save nearly 500 trumpeter swans that have been unable to feed on a frozen fork of the Snake River. At least 20 of the swans have died so far. The flock represents a quarter of the species' population in North America.

In California, Texas and Arizona, citrus farmers fretted as temperatures dropped below freezing in usually temperate growing areas.

"If the weather forecast is correct, we're looking at a high probability of serious damage," said Ray Prewett, executive director of Texas Citrus Mutual, a McAllen-based growers' organizations.

Growers brought out smudge pots and turned on giant fans to keep crop-damaging frost from settling. In California's San Joaquin Valley, one grower reported temperatures dipping to 19 degrees Monday.

Today's low at 2 a.m. EST was minus 37 degrees in Craig, Colo.

More than 40 record lows were set Monday, and the record cold continued today in several cities. Sacramento, Calif., broke a 106-year-old record with 26 degrees, and San Francisco, which had its coldest February day ever with 31 degrees on Monday, rose to 32 today, a record for the date. Colorado Springs, Colo., was 11 degrees below zero. Las Vegas hit 19 degrees and Winnemucca, Nev., tied its record low of minus 18. Seattle-Tacoma International Airport was a record 23 degrees.

Chicago's low of minus 4 marked the first subzero readings of the year there, and helped fill homeless shelters.

In New Mexico, a fierce snowstorm dumped so much snow at Taos Ski Valley that it couldn't be measured. The resort's gauge only goes to 110 inches — just over 9 feet — and it was lost somewhere under the snow.

SAVINGS

"In my view (that) would be a little high," said Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan,. "It would begin to crowd some of these other programs Congress wants, like education, the environment. ... I would propose we shrink the taxpayer impact."

The spending is structured to help the president meet his "no new taxes" pledge by minimizing the impact on the fiscal 1990 budget that Bush will present to Congress on Thursday. Taxpayer spending would amount to $11.1 billion during the remainder of this fiscal year, but would dip to $1.9 billion in 1990. It would bounce back to $6 billion in 1991.

Bush's plan also would increase the insurance premium paid by S&Ls from the current $2.08 per $1,000 of deposits to $2.30 from 1991 through 1994, dropping to $1.80 after that. Banks' premiums would rise from 83 cents now to $1.20 in 1990 to $1.50 after that.

Administration officials who spoke after Bush left the news conference stressed that the money raised by the higher bank premiums would go into the banks' own insurance fund, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., and would not directly pay for S&L problems.

However, the money raised by the bank premiums would count as revenue on government balance sheets. Thus, the government would be able to spend several billions of taxpayer dollars a year without adding to the budget deficit.

"There is a lot of blue smoke and mirrors in the plan," said Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., a member of the House Banking Committee. "I estimate that the convoluted (scheme for selling the bonds)) will end up costing the taxpayers $600 million to $1 billion a year."

Banks and savings and loans likely would try to pass on at least a portion of the higher insurance premiums to consumers, possibly in the form of lower interest rates on savings accounts.

"I would hope that wouldn't happen, but there's no guaranteeing what the institutions will do," Bush said. "Nothing is without pain when you come to solve a problem of this magnitude."

Treasury Secretary Nicholas F. Brady said competition from money market mutual funds and other investments would prevent S&Ls from passing on much of the cost. He acknowledged that some banks and S&Ls may get into trouble because of that.

TOWER

"We have not had anything delivered to us, and we are awaiting on it, so the status quo is right where it was," Nunn said as he and Warner emerged from a meeting that lasted nearly two hours.

Nunn, asked about reports that the committee had received new allegations about Tower, said, "I don't want to get into that."

Senate Republican leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., not a member of the committee, said at a news conference that Tower's confirmation chances had probably not been hurt by delay in a vote. "We should get the nomination out," Dole said.

Bush said he fully endorses Tower, a former Texas senator who served as chairman of the Senate Armed Services panel, but he added: "If somebody comes up with facts, I hope I'm not narrow-minded enough that I wouldn't take a look. But I am not going to deal in the kinds of rumors that I've seen reported and then knocked down and then reported and then knocked down."

Tower, meanwhile, participated in White House sessions on the defense budget, both on Saturday and again on Monday, said White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

RAISE

Assuming the full raise is defeated, any elimination of the $26,850 that House members can retain in honoraria — or the $35,800 that senators can keep — would be a move to reduce lawmakers' pay. Senators already have unanimously approved an honoraria ban for themselves, but made it conditional upon the full raise becoming law.

Also left dangling was a proposal to end a loophole in federal law that allowed 190 House members to accumulate $39 million in leftover campaign cash, which could be converted to their personal use. A bipartisan House negotiating team agreed to eliminate the loophole if the raise went into effect.

House Majority Whip Tony Coelho, D-Calif., then countered with the ill-fated motion to adjourn until Thursday, but opponents easily defeated the move.

House Republican Leader Bob Michel, R-Ill., who had never joined the outspoken pay raise opponents in his party, voted with them.

A House Democratic leadership aide, speaking only on condition he not be named, said Michel had not opposed Wright's effort to let the raise become law and then scale it back. But Monday morning, the aide said, Michel informed the Democrats he would oppose adjournment if the matter came to a vote.

REACT

Gramm has been an opponent of the raise, but both he and his wife would have benefited from the increase, which also would have raised the salaries of federal judges and other top-ranking employees.

Several Texans say the raise doesn't stand a chance now. "It was on a track to doomsday," said Rep. Albert Bustamante, a San Antonio Democrat. "I think the raise is a dead duck," said Rep. Charlie Stenholm, a Stamford Democrat.

Rep. Jack Fields, a Humble Republican, said even Democrats on the House floor Monday were saying Wright, a Fort Worth Democrat, has handled the red-hot pay raise poorly.

"People within his own party are really wondering about his leadership, his ability to grasp the major issues," said Fields. Wright is the nation's highest-ranking Democrat "and he can't handle this. He should not have let this go on so long."

"We think it's horrendous, that it was handled very poorly," Fields said of GOP reaction to the tussling over the 51 percent pay raise. "There was absolutely no reason for us to go through the trauma of the past two months."

Fields said it was Republican opponents who forced the issue to a roll call vote, and that the Democratic leadership only agreed after "the speaker read the tea leaves and realized he was losing ... public support."

But Stenholm said Wright handled the issue as best he could and it was "unfair for a lot of people, the Senate and the bipartisan leadership, to put the speaker on a limb and stand all the heat and all the pressure."

U.S. Rep. Lamar Smith, R-San Antonio, who represents Midland in Congress, said Monday that he was glad the vote would take place.

"In calling for a vote on the 50 percent pay raise, he (Wright) finally heard the voice of the nation," Smith said. "This shows that our government is a government of the people, by the people and for the people. My position remains unchanged. I oppose the pay raise and will vote against it. This is good news for all of us. Democracy can work, and the credit in this case belongs to the American people," he said.

"The American people won today. There's no doubt about it. It means that they can force things to happen."

U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton said in Midland today that he would be "disappointed" were Congress to reject the pay increase.

"If they don't want to take the raise, that's fine," he said. "If they don't think they deserve it, that's fine, too."

But, Bunton said, "In my opinion, it is a bad thing to hold us (federal judges) hostage for their raise. That's exactly what they they are doing."

And Bunton said that the "honorariums ought to go regardless of whether they (Congressmen) get the raise. We (judges) are not entitled to that (honorariums for speeches) right now."

Congressmen and Senators "supplement their salary," he said, and federal judges "don't get any supplements. And that certainly isn't fair."

It was the speaker who had originally announced, with silent support of the House Republican leadership, to keep the House adjourned until after the pay raise took effect at 12:01 a.m. Wednesday so that members would see their salaries raised from $89,500 to $135,000. Although the Senate voted the raise down last week, it could still take effect without a House vote.

But as the pressure mounted for a vote, the speaker changed course and said a vote would be taken after the raise took effect to lower it to 30 percent while banning honoraria. House members can keep 30 percent of their salaries in honoraria.

The lastest twist in the highly charged wrangling, however, could imperil or delay efforts to do away with honoraria, some Texans said.

Bustamante said it will be "talked to death, but the system will stay as it is. There will be no reform."

But Combest believes the move to ban honoraria and pass other campaign reforms will likely only be delayed.

Stenholm, however, said he thinks honoraria will be banned, and House members will end up making less.

"Honoraria are gone too, unfortunately," Stenholm said. "A big pay cut for Congress is coming down the pike," Stenholm said.

Jury selection about complete in North's Iran-Contra trial

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — The judge in Oliver North's Iran-Contra trial was on the verge of seating a jury today, after spending six days searching for prospective jurors who missed or didn't pay attention to North's nationally televised congressional testimony.

On Monday, five women and one man were added to a jury pool which now has 38 people, with U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell hoping to build that to at least 44.

"I expect to be able to put a jury into the box tomorrow," said Gesell. A 12-member jury with six alternates will be chosen from the pool to hear the case against North, who is accused of shredding evidence and lying to Congress to cover up the Iran-Contra affair.

Among those questioned Monday was a nurse who said she had heard that North was involved in "selling firearms" to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels, but knew nothing more about it.

Asked by John Keker, head of the team of three prosecutors, whether she might have trouble judging another person, she replied, "I might." Later, when pressed by Gesell about whether she could fairly determine guilt or innocence, she said "I think I can do that" and was sent into the jury pool.

A postal worker sent into the pool said she had "heard" North's name and remembered a heavy flow of mail coming through the post office for him when he testified before Congress in July 1987.

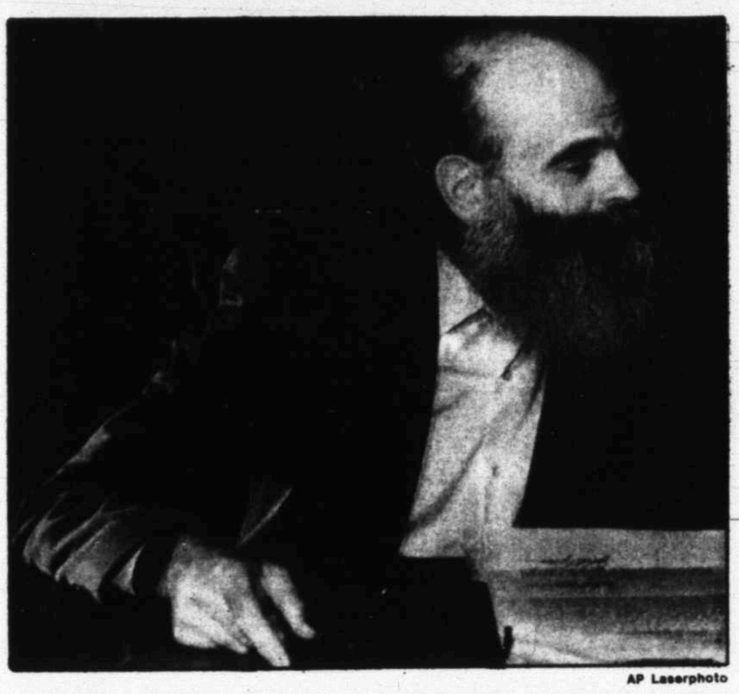

An office building maintenance worker said he would "walk past the TV" in the summer of 1987 when North was giving immunized testimony to Congress, but otherwise paid no attention to the congressional hearings. He was sent to the jury pool over the objections of North lawyer Barry Simon.

"My understanding is that he saw pictures on TV. He didn't watch it," Gesell said.

Simon objected to all six of Monday's selections, saying they had been exposed in one way or another to the fired National Security Council aide's 1987 testimony in which he detailed many of the activities for which he is now accused of crimes.

After Monday's jury selection proceedings, Gesell held a closed-door hearing at Keker's request "concerning his classified document problems," according to a notice issued by the judge.

The National Security Agency has objected to disclosure of classified information in North's trial and took its concerns to the Justice Department, government sources have said. But Attorney General Dick Thornburgh declined to step in on the NSA's behalf to halt use of the information, said the sources.

R. Gene Simmons waits in a Clarksville, Ark., courtroom Monday, the first day of his trial in the deaths of 14 family members around Christmas 1987.

Jury selection process begins in Simmon trial

CLARKSVILLE, Ark. (AP) — A man accused of killing 14 relatives in a Christmastime rampage went on trial Monday for the slayings, even though he has said he is ready to die for his convictions of two other murders.

Two of the 89 potential jurors were excused during preliminary questioning Monday. After that, individual questioning began to select a panel for the trial of R. Gene Simmons.

A housewife who cares for five children and a 76-year-old retired civilian employee of the Air Force were the first two people selected Monday as jurors.

Earlier Monday, Circuit Court Judge John S. Patterson denied a motion to let the jury decide whether the deaths of Simmons' relatives were part of the same criminal episode in which two people were killed in Russellville on Dec. 28, 1987. Simmons, 48, was convicted May 12 for those slayings and sentenced to death. He told Patterson he was ready to die and did not want his sentence appealed.

The state indicated it would call 20 witnesses in the current trial. The defense indicated it would call three.

Simmons' first trial was moved to Ozark because of publicity in Russellville, and the second trial was moved to Clarksville for the same reason. Patterson addressed that issue when he asked the potential jurors, "Is there anybody who has not heard anything about this case?"

Nobody raised their hand.

Patterson told the jury that he realized that "the court cannot make you just wipe things out of your mind and forget it," but that verdicts must be based upon a higher quality of evidence than what is sometimes reported by the media.

The new trial is for the shooting and strangulation deaths of Simmons' wife, Becky, 46; their seven children; two of the children's spouses; and four of Simmons' grandchildren, one of whom relatives say he fathered by incest with one of his daughters.

Patterson also presided over Simmons' earlier trial.

Simmons surrendered after the shooting spree that left two people dead and authorities then went to his home 14 miles north of Russellville. They found five bodies. The next day, they discovered seven bodies in a grave and found the bodies of two babies in the trunks of cars.

Prosecutor John Bynum said he would ask for the death penalty. The jury could give Simmons life imprisonment without parole.

Navajo chairman's son describes coverup deal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The son of the controversial chairman of the Navajo Nation says he, his father and a family friend planned a coverup last year for favors the father received before the tribe agreed to an expensive land deal.

The chairman of the nation's largest Indian tribe, Peter MacDonald Sr., received a $25,000 loan, a leased BMW automobile and other benefits from Byron T. Brown, an old friend, shortly before the Navajo tribe agreed to buy a 491,000-acre ranch from Brown and another acquaintance, a Senate investigator said Monday.

The tribe paid Brown and K. Tom Tracy $8 million more for the tract than those two had paid for it hours earlier, said the investigator, Eugene Twardowicz.

The July 1987 sales of the Big Boquillas ranch in northern Arizona have been criticized since they were made and are now under investigation by a federal grand jury in Phoenix.

But a special investigative panel of the Senate Select Committee on Indian Affairs, scrutinizing allegations of fraud and mismanagement on reservations and in federal Indian programs, learned Monday of the benefits MacDonald allegedly received before the land purchase.

Twardowicz gave the committee documents showing that the purchasers of the land had incurred expenses in 1987 including the $25,000 loan to the chairman, a $4,000 down payment for the leased car and two $900 monthly installments for the automobile.

Peter MacDonald Jr., subpoenaed to appear before the panel and testifying under immunity, said he, his father and Brown met about five times in 1988 to work out their story that MacDonald Jr. had sought the loan and the car.

MacDonald Jr., 33, said allowing it to appear that MacDonald Sr. sought the money and the car "looked bad," since Brown was involved in the Boquillas deal. He said it was his father who asked him to go ahead with the coverup.

Asked by committee counsel Kenneth Ballen why he allowed himself to become involved in the concocted story, MacDonald Jr. said, "Because I love my father."

Brown and Tracy purchased the ranch for $26.2 million in July 1987 from the Tenneco West Co.

Extended Coverage

By Terry Korthauer

There's an old saying that "you can't have too much protection," and that certainly makes sense when it comes to auto insurance. It doesn't have to cost a lot to be effective.

★★★

Your liability coverage -- not only for your car, but everywhere -- can be increased dramatically for very little with an umbrella policy. It protects your assets in case of a large award against you.

★★★

Another place to beef up protection: medical payment coverage in case of accident. Even if you have good medical insurance of your own for your family, this endorsement covers nonfamily members riding in your car, so that their bills can be paid without a law suit against you.

★★★

Another plus: medical-payments coverage in auto policies often includes funeral benefits.

★★★

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 8, 1989

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Be conscientious about relationship and financial matters and this year will be very good to you. Your health improves when you reduce everyday stress. Family ties are enhanced by a change of attitude on your part. You may have to sacrifice some of your prized independence, but the results will more than compensate. It is important to be practical at work.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Lana Turner, author Jules Verne, actors James Dean, Nick Nolte and Jack Lemmon, comedian Robert Klein.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A conservative approach is your safest bet today. There is a new emphasis on independence. Call on hidden reserves. Mate or partner would like to make a greater contribution. Be receptive.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Make a special effort to control extravagance. Meet family responsibilities with enthusiasm. A new partnership makes the future look rosier. Your social life brings joy. You find yourself in great demand!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A conflict between financial needs and desires could arise at a critical time. Consult experts on inexpensive solutions. Business will benefit from new social contacts. Host several small gatherings.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Greater emphasis on your image and positive thinking will bring wonderful results. Boost your earning power by enrolling in workshops to learn high-tech skills. Romance is surprising. Hold onto your hat!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A breakdown in transportation or communications could occur. Social activities interfere with your busy work schedule. Enjoy the extra attention you receive from that special someone. Romance looks glorious. Dress elegantly tonight.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Teamwork is essential to early completion of a major project. Trade ideas with an associate who is in your corner. Success comes when you are calmer and quieter in business negotiations.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Look forward to increased productivity and prosperity. Resist the temptation to use inside information. The risks are too great. Take stock of a co-worker's virtues. You may be underestimating this person.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Self-discipline is needed to complete pressing work assignments. Seek the cooperation of an associate who is only too willing to give you input. Postpone a romantic encounter until another day.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): An unexpected reunion could lead to a close encounter. You need to think twice about seeing a business associate socially. Reduce clutter at home.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Discretion is a most valuable asset in a business or romantic intrigue. Wait for the right time and place to reveal your true feelings. News from abroad relieves tension over finances.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You are able to communicate more effectively now. Look for a chance to run the whole show. Influential person will be deeply impressed. Be considerate. Consult mate before issuing invitations.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A lazy or extravagant streak could land you in trouble. Spruce up your wardrobe without spending a fortune. Give gossips a wide berth.

Opening lead: Five of ♡

We first came across this theme some 35 years ago in a par contest. We were impressed by it then, and still think it would fool most experts.

The bidding was unremarkable. South could not afford to probe for a spade fit with three spades because, should partner be forced to rebid four clubs, the most likely game of three no trump would have gone by the boards.

West made a normal fourth-best lead and declarer saw that it was imperative to win the trick. Since he needed to set up dummy's clubs to make his contract, he led that suit at trick two. The queen appeared from West. A delighted declarer won with the king, only to find he had lost his contract when East showed out on this trick.

Since declarer needed only six club tricks to make his contract, he could have protected against a 4-0 break by allowing West to win the queen. However, give full marks to West for a brilliant falsecard.

An almost equally intriguing position arises if West follows with any other card to the first club lead. Again, declarer should play low from dummy—he cannot even afford the finesse. If East follows to the club, the suit can be run since the break is no worse than 3-1 and the ace-king will draw the outstanding clubs. And if East shows out, when declarer gets back to hand he can take the marked finesse for West's queen (now you see why it's wrong to finesse the jack on the first lead of the suit) and still take six tricks in the suit.

Pulitzer-award winning historian Tuchman dies following stroke

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Barbara Tuchman was remembered upon her death as the popular historian whose 1962 "The Guns of August" reminded the superpowers of the dangers of diplomatic miscalculation as they teetered on the brink.

Tuchman

The two-time Pulitzer Prize winner and author of 10 books, including the current best seller "The First Salute," died Monday at a hospital in Greenwich following a stroke. She was 77.

"'The Guns of August' had a tremendous impact on President Kennedy and all who went through the Cuban missile crisis," said William Manchester, author of "The Death of a President" and writer-in-residence at Wesleyan University in Middletown.

Tuchman's latest book, "The First Salute," a look at the American Revolution and the Dutch revolution that preceded it by 200 years, has been on The New York Times best-seller list for more than nine weeks.

She said last fall it would be her last book because of failing eyesight.

Tuchman won the Pulitzer for history for "The Guns of August" in 1962 and "Stilwell and the American Experience in China" in 1971. The latter work was hailed as "brilliant" by America's pre-eminent China scholar, John K. Fairbank of Harvard University.

In 1978, she was awarded the Gold Medal for History of the American Academy and Institute of Arts and Letters.

She also wrote "The Proud Tower," a story of Europe before World War I, and "A Distant Mirror: The Calamitous 14th Century," which traces the tumult of the period by following the career of a feudal lord.

"The Guns of August," which established her reputation, examined how the military buildup in Europe led the Great Powers to bungle their way into World War I.

It was a favorite of President Kennedy because of its lessons for leaders in the nuclear age, said historian Arthur Schlesinger Jr., a Kennedy adviser. Kennedy presented a copy of the book to British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan.

"What he felt was that 'The Guns of August' was a clear demonstration (of) the extent that miscalculation got people into war," Schlesinger said in a telephone interview.

Writer John Hersey, who worked with Tuchman on the issues of censorship and freedom of speech for the Author's League, called the book "a kind of parable for our times, to make us realize where some of our policies might lead us."

Tuchman was born Jan. 30, 1912, in New York City and graduated from Radcliffe College in 1933. She lived in Greenwich.

She expressed pride in the fact that she never gained an advanced degree and was not an academic, saying during an interview last fall that "a Ph.D. would have ruined me."

Although some professional historians criticized some of her work as shallow, others praised her as a writer whose broad scope and lively style made history exciting for the general reading public.

"'The Guns of August' was a superb book," said John M. Blum, Sterling professor of history at Yale University. "It would have been a very picayune professional historian who had any objections to it."

"As an historian, I belong to the How rather than the Why school," Tuchman wrote in an autobiographical sketch. "I am a seeker of the small facts not the big Explanation; a narrator not a philosopher. ..."

"With each book I approached nearer, as I hope, to my goal of presenting history as literature."

Tuchman began her career as an editorial assistant and occasional correspondent for The Nation, which her father, investment banker Maurice Wertheim, bought in 1935 to save from bankruptcy. She covered President Roosevelt's 1936 campaign and the Spanish Civil War.

Tuchman's mother, Alma Morgenthau, was a sister of Henry Morgenthau Jr., Treasury Secretary under President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

HILLSBORO, Ohio (AP) — Country singer Johnny Paycheck, after pleading to a judge for mercy, was taken to jail Monday to begin serving a 7-to-9½-year sentence for his conviction in a 1985 tavern shooting.

Paycheck

It was Paycheck's second sentencing in the case and was the same term he received at the original May 1986 sentencing.

Paycheck, 50, a native of nearby Greenfield, pleaded for leniency, saying he needs to earn money in concerts because his wife has cancer, they have no health insurance and he is paying cash for her medical treatments.

"If I'm taken away, my wife will be dead in six months," Paycheck told Judge Darrell Hottle in Highland County Common Pleas Court in southwest Ohio.

But Hottle, after hearing testimony from Paycheck and four character witnesses, gave Paycheck the same term that he ordered in 1986. The 4th Ohio District Court of Appeals ordered the resentencing hearing, saying Paycheck should be given a chance to present testimony that might persuade the judge to shorten the sentence.

Paycheck, whose real name is Donnie Lytle, was convicted of aggravated assault, tampering with evidence — for discarding the handgun he used — and use of a firearm during a felony.

Paycheck was handcuffed after his sentencing and taken to a Hillsboro-area jail to await his transfer later this week to a state prison.

Paycheck, who now lives in Cadiz, Ky., had been free on $50,000 bond. The singer is best known for his 1978 hit, "Take This Job and Shove It."

ATLANTA (AP) — Pulitzer Prize-winning cartoonist Doug Marlette, whose syndicated comic strip "Kudzu" revolves around life in a small southern town, is leaving his native Dixie for the Big Apple.

In his resignation letter Monday, Marlette said he resigned as the Atlanta Constitution's editorial cartoonist because he was upset by the resignation of editor Bill Kovach three months ago.

Kovach, who hired Marlette away from The Charlotte (N.C.) Observer in April 1987, resigned in a dispute with senior executives.

"I have spent many sleepless nights over the last two months trying to find a way to stay here," Marlette wrote Arnold Rosenfeld, who took Kovach's place as editor of the Atlanta Journal and the Atlanta Constitution, which are published by Cox Enterprises.

"As a native Southerner, I came here inspired by the vision of Bill Kovach for world-class journalism in this region so richly deserving of it," wrote Marlette, who will join Newsday on New York's Long Island.

Nuclear problems can't be ignored

Three of the nation's top nuclear-weapons plants are in the midst of a colossal foul-up that threatens America's national security.

The three plants in South Carolina have been shut down because they pose serious risks to people and the environment.

The complex once produced tritium, a radioactive gas that increases the power of nuclear weapons. All were closed last spring after cracks were found in their cooling systems. That posed risks of serious nuclear accident. New cracks have been found since the original discoveries were made.

The plants cannot be repaired or reopened for at least a year — if then. The Defense Department has a nine-month supply of tritium. The United States thus faces a material shortage in producing some of its nuclear weapons.

That is, however, only the surface of a deeper problem. Even if the three South Carolina plants are fixed and returned to production, all must soon be replaced because of their age. However, it takes about a decade to build a new plant. In the meantime, the United States faces a tritium shortage.

The United States got into this mess because nuclear-weapons plants are exempt from the stiffer regulation that covers the nuclear-powered production of electricity. Weapons plants are not supervised by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission which regulates civilian atomic facilities. Much of today's troubled scene could have been avoided if civilian-type rules were enforced.

The U.S. Department of Energy, which is charged with such responsibilities, estimates that it will cost between $92 billion and $120 billion to eliminate the present environmental and human risks. The Department has an annual budget of about $1 billion.

There are few if any immediate answers to these critical problems. But the old days of indefinite postponements are no longer possible. Energy Secretary-designate James Watkins needs a lot of help — soon. Even if he receives support, many risks remain.

Taste of autonomy

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir of Israel has dished up a new Palestinian peace plan: Autonomy Pie.

The recipe is simple: Peel away Israeli civil administration from the West Bank and Gaza, while leaving the bone of military control. Toss into a hot oven, to kill the intifada bacteria. Then add a touch of "full autonomy"-brand yeast to let expectations rise. Bake for an undisclosed amount of time. Serve this meaty pie as an hors d'oeuvre before Israelis and Palestinians sit down at the same table to talk.

At first glance, Shamir's pie looks like warmed-over Camp David Accord, Stage II; it repeats Menachem Begin's unrealized proposal for talks leading toward Palestinian autonomy under Israeli control. It smells like good-old Likud leftovers. It tastes, well, unpalatable to the Palestine Liberation Organization.

But before the Palestinians in the occupied territories toss away Autonomy Pie, they should insist that Shamir sample his own cooking.

The recipe has three basic ingredients: Palestinian autonomy, Israeli military security and unconditional negotiations — all necessary for a healthy transition from Israeli domination to Palestinian independence. Healthy? Here's three reasons why:

■ Even if Israel recognized the independence of a Palestinian state, which it now denies, there would have to be a transition from Israeli to Palestinian control. Autonomy would be a necessary step in that transition.

■ If the Palestinians believe that Israel will pull out of the territories without establishing security guarantees on the ground, not just in writing, then they'll be throwing rocks for a long time. Israel's security concerns are legitimate. Its people's safety must be guaranteed.

■ If talks are to succeed, they must be truly unconditional. This means that Shamir may really be saying, sotto voce: OK, you stop throwing rocks and start building a Palestinian government infrastructure, and we'll talk about anything, even independence.

Of course, Shamir won't utter the heretical words: Palestinian state. It's simply not in his Likud lexicon; in contrast, Labor has proposed a Palestinian entity tied to Jordan.

But recent history shows that leaders from conservative wings of the political spectrum, Begin and Ronald Reagan to name two, have made dramatic reversals resulting in diplomatic breakthroughs.

Shamir, for all his hawkish talk, is looking more like a heavily armed dove. He is not saying no to negotiations. He is saying: Palestinians, you run your local government and we'll take care of our security. Then we'll talk, without preconditions.

For young Palestinian rock-throwers willing to face Israeli guns, that sounds like a taunt. But for older Palestinians who understand the danger of instant independence torching the West Bank and Gaza into cauldrons of internecine violence, autonomy is not a bad word.

The hidden ingredient in Autonomy Pie may be freedom, if only the Palestinians will taste it.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's highlight in history:

Twenty-five years ago, on Feb. 7, 1964, the Beatles' "invasion" of the United States began as thousands of screaming fans welcomed John Lennon, Paul McCartney, George Harrison and Ringo Starr at New York's John F. Kennedy International Airport.

On this date:

In 1812, author Charles Dickens was born in Portsmouth, England.

In 1827, the first ballet performed in the United States, "The Deserter," was presented at the Bowery Theater in New York.

In 1885, author Sinclair Lewis was born in Sauk Center, Minn.

In 1904, a fire began in Baltimore that raged for about 30 hours and destroyed more than 1,500 buildings.

In 1948, General Dwight D. Eisenhower resigned as Army chief of staff and was succeeded by General Omar Bradley.

In 1983, President Ronald Reagan fired Environmental Protection Agency official Rita M. Lavelle after she refused a request from EPA administrator Anne M. Gorsuch that she resign.

In 1983, Elizabeth H. Dole was sworn in as the first female Secretary of Transportation by the first woman to sit on the U.S. Supreme Court, Justice Sandra Day O'Connor.

In 1986, Filipinos went to the polls in elections that would result in a disputed victory for incumbent President Ferdinand Marcos over challenger Corazon Aquino.

FBI's 'sting' leaves traders stunned

WASHINGTON — The FBI has another surprise for the Chicago commodities markets. When the agency pulled its undercover agents out of the markets last month and went public with a sting operation, at least two undercover agents stayed behind still posing as traders.

Jack Anderson

FBI sources tell us that the stragglers' sole purpose was to catch anyone who tried to thwart the investigation by shredding documents or otherwise destroying evidence. It will be a long time before commodities traders can look at each other without suspicion.

The Chicago Board of Trade and the Chicago Mercantile Exchange are together Chicago's single largest business. CBOT is the world's largest commodities market. It trades in 26 types of futures and futures options, including Treasury bonds and notes and agricultural commodities such as soybeans, oats, wheat and corn. The Merc is the world's second largest, trading in 30 futures including lumber, pork bellies, hogs, cattle, currencies and other financial products.

The FBI culminated a two-year investigation into fraudulent practices by serving subpoenas to some traders at their homes on Jan. 17. Adding insult — and an element of surprise — to injury, some of the traders opened their doors late that night to see a fellow "trader," really an FBI agent, with subpoena in hand.

So many subpoenas have been served — about 100 to date — that one Chicago bar concocted a new drink for its depressed customers — the "Subpoena Colada."

One of the agents delivering subpoenas had his own seat at CBOT and traded in soybean futures as part of the investigation code-named "Operation Sour Mash," for the whiskey made from corn.

Three others making the rounds with subpoenas had worked undercover at the Merc, trading in Treasury bond futures, currency futures and the Standard & Poors 500 stock index futures. The Merc sting was called "Operation Hedge Clipper," named after the practice of hedging trades against sudden price changes.

The wild pace of the two exchanges makes them ideal spots for fraudulent trading. The FBI planted agents inside to build its case because of loose record keeping and the raucous atmosphere in the markets. Both exchanges have "pits" where traders in a particular commodity shout out bids to buy and sell futures. They are trusted to note the time and price of the trade on small slips of paper. Millions of dollars in price changes can occur in a minute, leaving the honor system wide open for abuses.

A broker for a buyer and a broker for a seller could make a deal to report different sales prices to their respective customers and then split the difference between themselves.

Traders are allowed to make trades for themselves on the floor, but they aren't supposed to trade ahead of their customers to get a better price. Nor are they permitted to use inside information to make a trade for themselves. For example, a trader who knows a customer is about to place a large order which would drive up the price, is not allowed to buy for himself or herself just before the price goes up.

The cases against the traders will be prosecuted by Chicago's U.S. Attorney Anton Valukas. FBI sources tell us he will make heavy use of racketeering statutes. Related charges, such as income tax evasion and money laundering are also expected as a result of the sting. Now, with the agents who stayed behind to watch the mad scramble, "obstruction of justice" may be added to the list.

LITMUS TEST — A test of George Bush's economic recovery program will come in March when he issues a report on his trade policy. But the big trade showdown with Japan will come in August. That is when the Federal Reserve Board will try to take away the right of foreigners to act as primary dealers in U.S. government securities, unless the same right is granted to American dealers in foreign countries. The Japanese now have enough control over the American economy that they may try to call the shots on this important issue.

MINI-EDITORIAL — The unexpected death of a holy man in Tibet puts the Chinese in a bind. The Panchen Lama died last month of a heart attack. He was the second highest religious leader for Tibetan Buddhists. The Panchen Lama was a puppet of the Chinese government, but he commanded some respect among Tibetans whose real religious leader, the Dalai Lama, lives in exile in India. The Chinese used the Panchen Lama to try to placate Tibetans living under oppressive Chinese rule. Without him, China has no ally in Tibet. His death may force the Chinese to negotiate with the Dalai Lama who is the real key to peace in the region.

Nation won't have Dukakis to kick around

And while President George Bush begins his duties in Washington, where is Michael Dukakis? He's back home in Massachusetts proposing a $735 million tax hike to offset a deficit he claimed during the campaign did not exist.

Charley Reese

Dukakis made his first mistake as a presidential candidate when he said the issue was competence, not ideology. The more voters discovered about his record in Massachusetts, the more of them decided he was incompetent.

Of course, the only source of information for most voters about Dukakis' record was the Bush campaign. That's because the national pack of political reporters were never interested in Dukakis' record, even though he said that was the issue of the campaign. That's just as well. The Bush campaign was both more industrious and accurate than many members of the Washington press corps habitually are.

The Massachusetts press, even those newspapers that supported Dukakis' presidential campaign, were reporting the facts about his difficulties in the state. The big shot press corps just wasn't interested. They had already decided among themselves the campaign party line — no issues, a lot of negative campaigning — which they repeated endlessly.

There was, of course, at least one issue — competence, which Dukakis used his whole acceptance speech to put forward, but checking out his claims to perfection in state government was apparently of no interest to the pack journalists.

After all, if you define any discussion of a man's record as negative campaigning and any issue which bores you as a non-issue, then certainly, if you are an easily bored lazy reporter, you are going to define the Bush-Dukakis campaign as without issues and marred by negative campaigning.

I made bets that George Bush would win when he was 15 points behind in the polls. I wasn't even a George Bush fan and certainly not a political insider. But I was confident that Dukakis' popularity would decrease the more people were exposed to him. Dukakis did it himself by making appearances. He should have left for a round-the-world cruise immediately after his nomination.

At that point, the only thing people knew about Dukakis was that he wasn't Jesse Jackson. I would have voted for Dukakis in preference to Jackson, for while Dukakis is merely incompetent, Jackson is the least qualified man ever to run for the presidency.

At any rate, to paraphrase Richard Nixon, I doubt if any of us will have Dukakis to kick around any more. He seems headed for political oblivion. Even the Democrats in the Massachusetts legislature are fed up with him and probably won't pass his tax increases.

As suicidal as the national Democratic Party has become, I doubt if its members will resurrect the political corpse of Dukakis four years from now. Quite likely they will find a clone. They — the national Democratic powers that be — are very much like Dukakis. They know and they do not wish to hear anything from anybody. Their reaction to Republican victories is to blame the voters for being stupid. But they also like scapegoats, and Dukakis is a dandy.

At any rate, no matter how many problems George Bush has, you can — if you voted for him — always console yourself by remembering that he is, at the least, NOT Dukakis. I have long consoled myself, when irked by something President Reagan did or didn't do, that he was at least NOT Jimmy Carter or Walter Mondale.

In our system, we often vote against, and that's not to be sneezed at.

I'm sure a lot of Soviets would like an opportunity to vote against somebody in their country, but the communists are careful never to give them that choice.

Raise by any other name smells as sweet!

NEW YORK — When the question before the house is, Shall wages be raised? my vote is always aye. This is not just because my nature is generous and humane. Noble impulse in such cases is leavened by self-interest.

Russell Baker

Experience teaches that when wages are rising all around, my own are likely, ere long, to rise too, and whatever the season, I am always in need of a raise.

Yet large majorities of people who could do with a raise themselves usually register a sour nay when the next fellow presses for more pay.

This always happens when professional athletes try to better their money conditions, and it is happening now on the proposal to boost pay for members of Congress and hordes of other federal workers. Why?

Opposing these wage boosts makes no sense if you're a working stiff yourself, because one of the basic rules of economics is that a rising tide raises all the boats.

The multimillion-dollar quarterback is inevitably followed by the $500,000 offensive lineman, and the $2 million pitcher by the $400,000 utility infielder.

The law applies everywhere. The Washington Post had a story the other day noting how the federal pay raise will probably make business boom in Washington and for miles around.

The raise will go to vast thousands on the federal payroll; not just Congress. What's more, the capillary effect that makes congressional staff salaries creep upward to their bosses' level will extend the windfall to Uncle Tom Cobbleigh and all.

The result: A big percentage of the Washington, Maryland and Virginia population will soon have wads of fresh money to spend.

The real estate market down there is already one of the world's most expensive. The astounding cost of housing, in fact, is one of the justifications cited for raising congressional pay.

Can't send a poor country boy into that Arabian Nights property bazaar with just $90,000 and expect him to do right by the folks back in Threadbare County. You've first got to free his mind of worry about sheltering his loved ones.

Actually, this is one of the weaker arguments for the wage increase, because Washington, Virginia and Maryland real estate dealers are doubtless ready to raise prices the instant the new money starts flooding the marketplace.

Note how the wage increase ripples out from federal folks to raise boats all around: More money for real estate people means more pay for construction workers, means more sales for pickup-truck dealers, means more money for haberdashers, hairdressers, restaurants, wine shops, landscape nurseries.

The best argument against a raise might come from retired people on fixed incomes. Their boats could be swamped by the rising cost of everything unless they get their famous retired folks' lobby to put the muscle on Congress to do something generous for them. Which is very likely.

Radio talk show performers are having a picnic with the congressional wage proposal. The kind of people who telephone radio stations to air their opinion hate the pay raise for all the wrong reasons. (The one right reason being its inflationary effects.)

The objection most loudly voiced is that in Congress they're all bums and don't deserve the $90,000 they're getting now. Why do people call up radio stations and say things like this, then go to the polls on Election Day and vote to re-elect practically the entire Congress?

Obviously, down deep the callers either don't believe the all-bums rap, or don't care.

Then there is what might be called the Republic of Rome objection: In the days of the Roman Republic, and in similarly rare ages, patriots were content to serve government without pay because the honor of serving was recompense enough for people of noble character.

But of course, the highly admired capitalism of the sort now rampant in the Washington real estate market was not invented until long after the Roman Republic.

To paraphrase the old adage, lie down with real estate agents who drive Mercedes-Benzes and you get up with backbreaking mortgage payments.

Finally there is the sour envy that invariably taints the public's reaction when people in the upper brackets try to improve their lot.

When highly paid athletes strike for more, the public calls them selfish and sides with their exceedingly rich owners who, for the most part, see athletes as meaty tax depreciations.

Nothing is gained by being cheap with the federal payroll. Last time that happened, we lost the air traffic controllers, and there went the golden age of air travel.

Harvard names first woman to its board

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (NYT) — For the first time in its 353-year history, Harvard University has elected a woman to serve on its highest governing board, the Harvard Corp.

Hope

Judith Richards Hope, a lawyer in the District of Columbia, was named to the seven-member governing board at a private meeting on Sunday and will join the panel, officially the President and Fellows of Harvard College, on Tuesday.

Mrs. Hope, a partner at the Los Angeles-based firm of Paul, Hastings, Janofsky & Walker, is the only woman on the law firm's four-member executive committee and serves as liaison to the firm's East Coast offices. Her election to the Harvard Corp. follows a 10-month nationwide search.

"Certainly it is high time for us to have appointed a woman," said Henry Rosovsky, a Harvard economics professor and member of the Harvard Corp.

"We are all delighted that we have at long last a woman member. I think she is an outstanding lawyer and an outstanding person."

The Harvard Corp., the more powerful of the university's two governing boards, meets twice a month to decide matters of fiscal, educational and institutional policy.

The board decides how Harvard should invest its endowment and approves all faculty appointments.

According to the university, the board is the oldest corporation in North America. Members hold office for as long as they choose. The last appointment to the board was two and a half years ago.

A second governing board, the Board of Overseers, makes recommendations to the Harvard Corp. The 30 overseers are elected by ballot by university alumni.

Delta jet turns around

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — A Delta Air Lines jet with 32 passengers was forced to return to Shreveport Regional Airport for an emergency landing minutes after takeoff after the pilot shut down one engine because it was shooting sparks, Delta said.

Flight 592 — en route to Birmingham, Ala., and Atlanta, Ga. — landed safety Monday night with two of the three engines on the Boeing 727.

"Right after he took off, the pilot got an indication of a problem with one of the engines, so he shut it off and returned to the airport," said Jim Lundy, a Delta spokesman in Atlanta. "The pilot was out of the airport for just a few minutes."

Doug Free, superintendent for Delta in Shreveport, said passengers were transferred to a flight to Dallas, Texas, to make connecting flights to their destinations.

Homeless man winner

LAS VEGAS (AP) — A homeless man who won a $2.7 million jackpot says he plans to get an apartment but will continue to work at the recycling plant he has called home for years.

Don Sarbaugh said he also will continue his nightly habit of gambling at a casino, but has no other firm plans for his new found wealth.

"I'm no different today than I was a week ago," said the 54-year-old former vagrant. "I'm still a reclamation engineer."

Sarbaugh was given his first installment of $137,500 on Monday for hitting the jackpot on a Megabucks machine at the Palace Station casino. He will be paid in annual installments for 20 years.

Shy teen-ager suspected

ST. ALBANS, W.Va. (AP) — A shy 19-year-old who lived in a trailer with five other people is charged with killing two roommates and suspected in four other slayings in what police say could be West Virginia's biggest killing spree.

Mark Southern McCallister, whose trailer was found with dead or malnourished animals, has confessed to killing the two roommates but has not said why, according to authorities.

Investigators said they are looking for a motive and evidence to pin the four other deaths to McCallister. A grand jury began hearing evidence this week.

Bush has expectations

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush said he expects members of his administration to "bend over backwards" to avoid any appearance of ethical conflicts after several of his top appointees faced questions on that very issue.

Bush on Monday said that two of them, White House legal counsel C. Boyden Gray, who is also Bush's top ethics adviser, and Cabinet nominee Dr. Louis Sullivan, had gone beyond what was legally required by disentangling themselves from outside business arrangements.

And Bush said he had seen nothing so far beyond rumor and innuendo regarding a third, Defense Secretary-designate John Tower, whose confirmation is on hold while a Senate committee checks new allegations of drinking and womanizing by the former senator.

Bush launched his administration with a series of events in which he proclaimed his commitment to ethical government, but several of his nominees ran into questions on such issues almost immediately.

Survivors make demands

NEW YORK (AP) — A group of relatives of Pan Am Flight 103 victims has demanded the resignation of the head of the Federal Aviation Administration, saying he failed to maintain security on the doomed flight.

At an emotional news conference Monday, 30 people who lost loved ones on the downed jetliner accused the government and Pan Am of negligence before the Dec. 21 bombing. They demanded the broadest possible congressional investigation of the tragedy that killed 270 people.

"My husband was murdered on the flight," said a tearful Wendy Giebler, widow of William Giebler Jr. "He never would have got on that flight if we had been given the facts. And what we need to know is who is accountable."

The group chiefly demanded an accounting of why the government had not made public a terrorist threat that a U.S. flight from Frankfurt, West Germany, would be bombed in December. U.S. airlines and embassy personnel were warned.

Plane runs off runway

CHARLOTTE AMALIE, U.S. Virgin Islands (AP) — An American Airlines Airbus A-300 passenger jet ran off the runway Monday just before taking off from the U.S. Virgin Islands, an airport official said. No injuries were reported.

"The nose wheels ran off the runway ... while taxiing out," said Virgin Islands Port Authority spokeswoman Winnifred Neiblum.

It was not immediately known why the plane ran off the runway at St. Thomas' Cyril E. King Airport.

In a telephone interview from American Airlines's headquarters in Fort Worth, Texas, spokesman Dave Tracy said 167 passengers were aboard the plane, which was stopping at St. Croix before its final destination to New York's John F. Kennedy Airport.

Mrs. Dukakis in alcohol treatment

BOSTON (AP) — Exhaustion from the presidential campaign and post-election letdown led Kitty Dukakis to a drinking problem, Gov. Michael Dukakis said in announcing that his "courageous" wife has begun treatment for alcohol abuse.

Dukakis

At a news conference Monday, Dukakis said his wife, who conquered a 26-year addiction to diet pills, had entered a private alcohol treatment center in Newport, R.I.

He said his wife's underlying chemical dependency flared into bouts of excessive drinking after his loss to George Bush in the November presidential election.

"As she has now discovered, whether it comes in a bottle or is solid, if you are chemically dependent, you are chemically dependent," Dukakis said.

"It is a disease from which you never recover; you're always recovering."

The former Democratic candidate, who has often appeared subdued and distracted since the election, acknowledged that he has felt physically exhausted and "disappointed" by the defeat. He quickly added, "I'm not chemically dependent."

The 52-year-old Mrs. Dukakis stumped tirelessly for her husband and was called a key influence in his decision to seek the presidency. Since the election, Mrs. Dukakis has traveled widely, began a new career as an author and lecturer and welcomed the birth of her first grandchild.

But the 55-year-old governor said, "It was clear, within some weeks after the election, that something was happening. ...

"Unfortunately, a combination of physical exhaustion, the stress of the campaign effort and the post-election letdown all combined to create a situation in which, on a limited number of occasions while at home, she has used alcohol in excessive quatities," he said.

He said several episodes occurred when "it was obvious" that his wife drank too much. After counseling failed, Dukakis said, his wife and family in consultation with her doctor decided on residential treatment.

Dukakis, who does not smoke and rarely drinks even a glass of wine, said his wife entered Edgehill Newport on Sunday and will stay there about a month.

"She's not only a great wife and a great women, she's very courageous," Dukakis, asking the public to respect her privacy and support her recovery.

Experts praise quick decision to seek rehabilitative assistance

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Kitty Dukakis' recent heavy drinking after overcoming a long dependence on diet pills follows a sadly typical pattern of switching from one abused substance to another, doctors say.

"It is obviously the case, especially nowadays, that addiction or dependence on more than one substance is rather common," said Dr. Peter Nathan, director of the Rutgers Center of Alcohol Studies in Piscataway, N.J.

For reasons that are not well understood, people who have trouble with one mood-altering substance are especially susceptible to excessive use of others.

"Drug switching does occur, and the drug that's easiest to switch into is alcohol," said Dr. Roger Weiss of McLean Hospital in Belmont. "It's easy to get, cheap, legal and the most socially acceptable."

Experts said that most researchers now reject the once-popular idea that some people have addictive personalities. Instead, people with addiction problems typically have little in common other than their addictions.

Weiss said that people who abuse more than one drug may be "addicted to mood change, not just to a particular drug."

On Monday, Gov. Michael S. Dukakis said that his wife had been admitted to the alcohol treatment program in Newport, R.I.

Mrs. Dukakis was treated in 1982 for a 26-year reliance on amphetamines. However, the Democratic governor said his wife had never had a drinking problem until shortly after he lost the presidential election on Nov. 8.

"Unfortunately, a combination of physical exhaustion, the stress of the campaign effort and the post-election let-down all combined to create a situation in which, on a limited number of occasions while at home, she has used alcohol in excessive quantities," he said.

Several doctors praised Mrs. Dukakis for seeking help after such a relatively brief siege of alcohol problems.

"For a public figure, who knows any revelation about problems is going to be widely publicized, it takes great courage to seek treatment," said Dr. Domenic Ciraulo of New England Medical Center in Boston.

"This is a family that certainly knows about substance abuse," he said. "It's unusual to seek help so early, but it shows they know the signs of trouble so well."

Nathan said that if Mrs. Dukakis' drinking only began in November, there probably has not been time for her to become physically dependent on alcohol.

"If what the governor says is accurate, they have been quite courageous in deciding to do something about this early," Nathan said. "The odds are far better that they will be able to get it under control, and there won't be any permanent consequences."

The 28-day program begins with up to seven days of intensely supervised and often grueling detoxification at $353 per day, said Gaele Pesaturo, a spokeswoman for the 160-bed center.

The rest of the program is spent in one of the six 24-bed recovery units, at $271 per day, where there is group and peer counseling, recreation and spiritual advice, she said.

"It's a very intensive program. I think a person comes to Edgehill Newport and they have to do a lot of self-searching, a lot of acceptance," Ms. Pesaturo said. "A lot of education goes on here about the disease."

Mrs. Dukakis, who has struggled for years to quit cigarettes, has had a history of chemical dependency dating to her teen years.

In July 1987, as her husband's campaign for the presidency was taking shape, Mrs. Dukakis announced that five years earlier she had entered a Minnesota center, where she overcame her addiction to amphetamines she took to control her weight.

She won praise for her candor and became an active campaigner, often appearing for Dukakis and speaking openly about her own struggle with drugs.

Dukakis said he and his wife had agreed to delay her entry into the program until after the birth of their first grandchild. Last Wednesday, her son John's wife, Lisa, gave birth to Alexandra Jane Dukakis.

During the last three months, Mrs. Dukakis did not appear at her husband's side on several occasions when she might have been expected.

On Jan. 3, for example, when Dukakis made the surprise announcement that he would not seek a fourth term as governor, some observers remarked on the fact that Mrs. Dukakis was not present.

Dukakis said Monday his wife's condition had nothing to do with his surprise announcement not to seek re-election. The governor, who has left open the possibility that he would run for the White House again in 1992, was asked about the possible impact of Mrs. Dukakis' problem on another national campaign.

"At this time, I'm spending no time thinking about national office," he said.

Mardi Gras festivities now in full swing

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — French Quarter bars were standing-room-only early today as die-hard drinkers driven indoors by frigid weather got an early start on the nation's bawdiest and most raucous holiday, Mardi Gras.

Eleven parades were scheduled in the New Orleans area, and up to 1.8 million people were expected for the celebration of excess that ends Carnival's month of balls and two weeks of parades.

The festivities have been marred by the slaying of a tourist known as "Mr. Mardi Gras" to his friends.

Mardi Gras ends midnight, when Ash Wednesday ushers in six weeks of Lenten repentance to this predominantly Roman Catholic city.

"Last year we had about a million people on the streets during the day," said Ray Holman, chief of police field operations.

"I think that if the weather doesn't get totally unbearable we'll get at least that number again, maybe more."

He said crowds were bigger than usual despite wet, cold weather during the popular weekend Endymion and Bacchus parades. Bad weather, however, canceled Fat Tuesday parades in the little Acadian communities of Grand Marais and Loreauville.

The National Weather Service forecast a 50 percent chance of rain or drizzle, with highs in the upper 40s but winds near 15 mph making it feel as if it were near 30.

That kind of weather can be good for business, bartenders said.

"People want to come in out of the cold," said Bill Hadley, manager of Lulu White's Mahogany Hall bar.

But Ivan Cook of Phoenix said only a downpour could keep him under a roof on Mardi Gras.

"When you're out on the street you don't feel it," said Cook, who was among the thousands of tourists jamming the city.

Hotels decked in the carnival colors of purple, green and gold were packed to virtual capacity.

There were two parades Monday, and a Mississippi riverfront shopping development held its third annual "Lundi Gras" celebration with bands, fireworks, a riverboat parade and the ceremonial arrival by boat of a man dressed as Rex, King of Carnival.

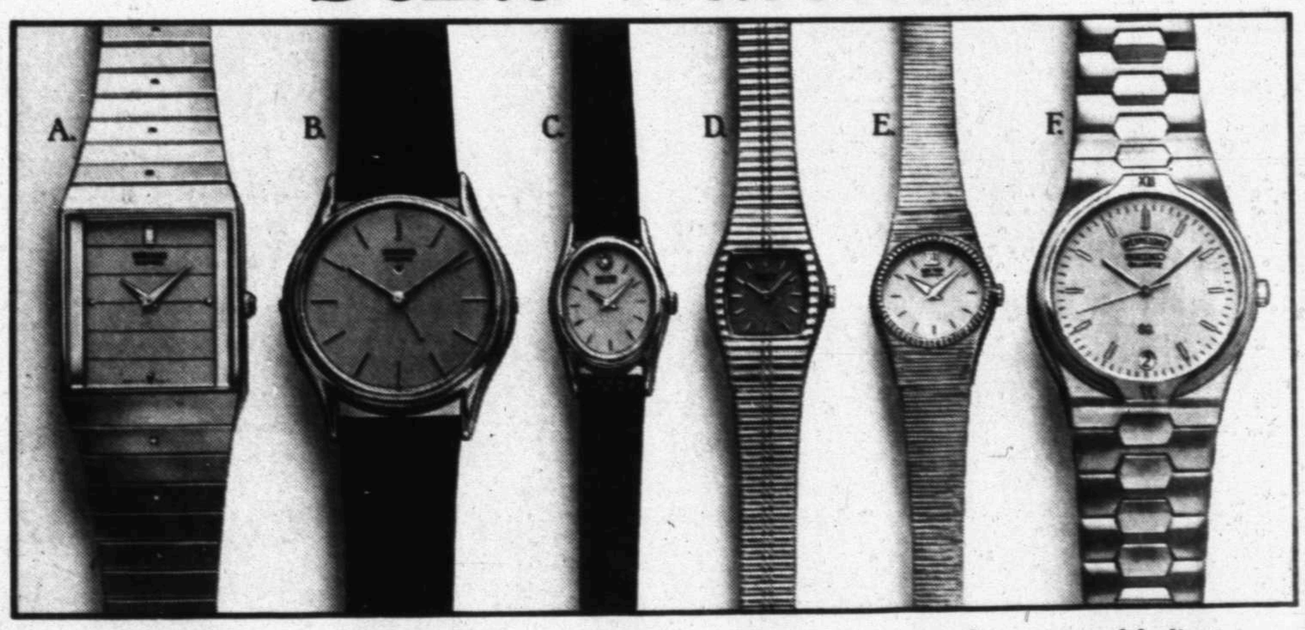

The identity of the real Rex — a different member of New Orleans society each year — is kept secret until the final hours before he rides in the biggest parade of the season and meets the mayor for a champagne toast before downtown crowds.

Second Marine convicted of negligence in lance corporal's death

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — A second Marine has been convicted of negligence in the death of a soldier who had been left behind in the Mojave Desert during a training exercise last summer.

Sgt. Thomas Turnell was found guilty Monday and demoted to lance corporal, the same punishment given last week to another sergeant in the death of Lance Cpl. Jason Rother.

Turnell was found innocent of two other counts — the more serious charge of failure to obey a lawful order and a lesser charge of unauthorized absence.

"I'm just glad it wasn't any harder on my family," Turnell said as he left court.

The military jury deliberated about two hours before returning the verdict.

Turnell was accused of failing to follow the policies of his unit by being absent without authorization for two days during Rother's disappearance. He also was accused of negligence for failing to account for the whereabouts and welfare of Rother, 19, of Minneapolis, who was a member of Turnell's squad.

Rother was left behind after being posted as a road guide for an exercise at Twentynine Palms, Calif., on Aug. 30. His remains were not found until December.

Turnell's superior, Sgt. Christopher Clyde, was found guilty of negligence last week for allowing Turnell special time off and for failing to account for his men.

In closing arguments, Capt. Robert Nunally, the prosecutor, told the jury that Turnell was only concerned with his two days' off, not the whereabouts of Rother.

"If he had cared, or asked one question, maybe we wouldn't be here today," Nunally said.

But Turnell's civilian attorney, Guy Garand, said the disappearance was not entirely the fault of his client.

"There are many people who are responsible for this incident."

Woman in cave alters sleeping, waking patterns

CARLSBAD, N.M. (AP) — Just like clockwork, an Italian woman living in isolation in a cave is altering her sleeping and waking patterns in the absence of timepieces of any kind, scientists say.

Stefania Follini has been sleeping about 10 hours and staying awake 20 hours, according to the Italian researchers supervising the isolation experiment.

Ms. Follini moved into her Plexiglas quarters in Lost Cave Jan. 13. Since then, her only contact with the outside world has been through a personal computer, on which she relays results of tests of concentration and brain-wave activity.

The Ancona, Italy, interior designer has been living without clocks or the sight of the sun. She can only guess at the passage of time.

Her sleeping and waking cycles will probably lengthen even more, said Maurizio Montalbini, the research team's leader.

Montalbini, who once spent seven months isolated in a cave, said Ms. Follini's ability to concentrate appears to have sharpened, rather than weakened, during her first three weeks of isolation.

The attention-span tests are part of a slew of experiments U.S. and Italian scientists are performing. Montalbini selected a cave site in the United States because he wanted to be close to researchers from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and universities.

One U.S. scientist working with the Italians, Dr. Jon DeFrance of the University of Texas Medical School in Houston, said the Follini study will help researchers design a study in which astronauts will go on a mock space voyage to Mars.

Valencias arrested on possession of heroin, cocaine

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A 55-year-old Midland woman already convicted of heroin possession, and long-suspected of trafficking in heroin and cocaine, was arrested again late Monday, police said today.

Emma Duran Valencia and her husband, Joe, 59, were arrested about 11:30 p.m. at their residence near the intersection of County Road 1150 and FM 307, four miles east of Cloverdale Road, police Cpl. Jim White said today.

Officers found 24 grams of heroin valued at $10,800 and 34 grams of cocaine valued at $4,080 inside the house, as well as 10 handguns and rifles, White said.

In one room, officers found a pile of new clothing valued at about $2,000. The clothes had store tags affixed to them, White said.

The Valencias are being held in the county jail and late today were expected to be charged with possession of a controlled substance with intent to distribute, the spokesman said.

The latest arrest came after officers from the Midland police narcotics and intelligence unit obtained a warrant to search the residence from Justice of the Peace Robert Pine, White said.

"We obtained information that they were dealing from that location," said Lt. Hank Norton of the Intelligence Division.

Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter said news of the arrest was "absolutely wonderful."

"It shows that the Valencia family have been doing heroin for a long time," Painter said. "Even the threat of pen (prison) time has failed to scare them into stopping."

Painter's officers were involved in an August 1987 investigation that resulted in the arrest of Ms. Valencia at the family-owned store, La Morenita, 609 N. Dallas St. She was tried and convicted of possession of 31 "papers" of heroin at the store, and sentenced by 238th District Judge Vann Culp to 10 years in state prison. The conviction is on appeal.

District Attorney Al Schorre said he will ask a district judge to deny bond to Ms. Valencia. The motion likely would not be granted in Joe Valencia's case, since he has no prior convictions, the prosecutor said.

If the motion is granted, it likely would send the case to trial within 60 days, he said.

"I'm very pleased the officers have taken such a persistent course against the drug dealers in Midland," Schorre said of the arrest.

Odessa attorney Tom Hirsch, who represented Ms. Valencia at her 1987 trial, could not be reached for comment.

A few weeks after the August 1987 arrest, the store was boarded and locked, as officers sought federal help to seize the business. The effort was successful, and just a week ago U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton ordered the La Morenita store forfeited to the government.

In his order, Bunton said "the property was used by the Valencias as a storage place and distribution location for heroin and cocaine."

Ms. Valencia was also arrested in September 1984 and charged with heroin possession. In December 1984, her son Oscar Valencia, who owned the La Morenita, was arrested and charged with heroin possession.

Painter said he "congratulated" the police department on the arrest, which was assisted by the Midland police Special Weapons and Tactics team and officers from the Midland County Sheriff's office.

"This time, with as many arrests as they have, and a conviction on appeal, they should be held without bond," Painter said. "That dope dealer does not belong on the streets of Midland, Texas."

Residence fire starts in dog house

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A fire that destroyed a Midland residence early today started in a dog house, investigators said.

No injuries were reported in the roaring fire at 3607 Humble Ave., which was first reported at 2:41 a.m. today and was answered by eight units. When firefighters arrived, the house, owned by Donnie Higginbotham, was "fully involved," Roberts said.

The dog also escaped the fire, he said.

"When we got there, the fire was coming through the roof, and had already traveled completely through the attic," the chief said. Firefighters were also hampered at the scene by hydrants frozen by the frigid weather.

The first two hydrants checked — and the two nearest to the burning home — were frozen solid in the 16 degree weather, Roberts said.

Local property values down by 2.6 percent

By JAMES CULLEN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Property values in Texas school districts fell by 1.74 percent in the past year, the State Property Tax Board reported Monday, while area school districts showed greater losses.

The preliminary report, which the state uses to figure state aid to school districts, showed taxable value in the state's 1,056 school districts was $657.1 billion on Jan. 1, 1989.

Taxable values in the Midland Independent School District totalled $3.893 billion, a 2.6 percent decrease from 1987, the tax board reported.

Ector County Independent School District values were down 6.36 percent, to $4.354 billion, but Greenwood Independent School District values were down 12.9 percent, to $171.2 million and Stanton Independent School District values were down 14.3 percent to $156.2 million.

This is the third straight year property taxes have declined statewide, said Ron Patterson, the tax board's executive director. Values declined in 558 school districts and increased in 498 districts, he said.

Patterson said the figures reflect a generally weak real estate market and a state economy that was just beginning a recovery. Residential property, vacant lots, minerals and utilities all declined from 1987, he said.

"In the real estate market, housing prices were down, it took longer to find buyers and there were many foreclosures. The lack of growth in real estate tended to discourage growth in utilities."

The 5 percent decline in mineral properties was mainly due to the decline in oil and gas reserves, he said.

Commercial real estate showed virtually no change in value, but commercial property rose by more than 3 percent and industrial property rose by almost 5 percent. That showed inventories and equipment were growing at the start of 1988, he said. The state comptroller also has noted unemployment was falling in Texas while personal income, retail sales, factory output and exports were rising, Patterson said.

One category with a big drop was multi-family residential property, which was worth 7 percent less than in 1987. Patterson blamed apartment overbuilding and loss of federal tax breaks for money-losing apartments.

Another study released Monday by the State Property Tax Board found the Midland County Appraisal District appraised typical property at 99 percent of its market value for 1988 rolls.

The study showed the typical single-family house in Midland County was appraised at 96 percent of its market value.

MMH seeks donors with type O blood

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

What could be construed as good news for Midland Memorial Hospital equates with a "dangerous" problem at the facility's blood bank.

"The hospital's full of patients. Everybody's using up the blood," said Valerie Sparks, a registered nurse at MMH's Permian Basin Blood Center.

Some major surgeries recently performed at the hospital have also contributed to the shortage, she added.

The blood bank is in need of O-negative and O-positive blood. The former is the universal blood type used in emergency situations when there is no time to type, Ms. Sparks said.

This morning, the blood bank had only six pints of O-negative blood in supply, Ms. Sparks said. Officials there want at least 30 pints of that type on hand at any time.

Whole blood is discarded after six weeks, the nurse explained.

Novel's namesake doesn't like miniseries' vulgarity

SOUTHLAKE (AP) — Members of the church that inspired writer Larry McMurtry to name his epic novel of the old West "Lonesome Dove" don't like some of the language and morals in the television miniseries, but members admit it will give the church some publicity.

McMurtry's novel, which is being shown as a miniseries this week on CBS-TV, tells of an epic cattle drive from South Texas to Montana by some former Texas Rangers and an assortment of characters.

McMurtry, a native Texan, says he got the idea for the title of his novel after watching the Lonesome Dove Baptist Church's van pull into a restaurant at Ponder in Denton County. He originally planned to use "The Streets of Laredo" as the title for the novel.

"My customers say they like the miniseries but they say it's pretty risque," said Bobby Beard, 58, owner of the Step-In convenience store, the only business in the area near the church in this Fort Worth suburb.

"I didn't care for all the sex," said Onalee Cate, 75, one of about 400 members of the Lonesome Dove Baptist Church. "There are vulgar parts but I though the action was real good."

"I liked it as a whole, especially the back-to-earth living. I'm old fashioned, you see," she added.

"Personally I can't be too proud of it," said Joseph "Bud" Tanner, 73, a descendant of the settlers who lived in what was known as the Dove community, founded by a group of Missouri farmers.

Neither Tanner nor the Rev. Keith Wells, pastor of the church, has read all of the book or seen the first installment of the miniseries, but they say they know from what they hear that they wouldn't like them, they told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

"There's some fairly lewd comments within the script," said Wells, who was conducting the Sunday evening service when the first episode was aired. "It's just Hollywood trying to put something out to sell."

"It doesn't reflect our feeling," Wells, 34, said. "This area had old-fashioned values It was known as a spiritual community and it was not known to have loose women."

"Don't paint us as prudish people," the minister said. "It's fiction, a romantic story of the old West and it doesn't necessarily have anything to do with this community."

Registration for spring semester at UTPB sets new record

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Spring semester enrollment at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin has "set a new record" with a total of 2,352 students registering.

Dr. Robert Rothstein, dean of admissions, who is also head of UTPB's Communications Department, said the 1989 spring semester enrollment is "the largest ever in the school's 15-year history."

The enrollment figure total, he said, represents an increase of 26.9 percent from the same period last year and a 10.1 percent rise above the fall 1988 enrollment, which was "the previous all-time high."

The largest areas of increase were among teachers returning to school. There also was an increase among those returning to school for business degrees, both undergraduate and masters.

There were "marked increases" in the areas of criminal justice, literature, history, the humanities, undergraduate psychology and the new master's degree in psychology.

Rothstein noted that nearly half of the students, 1,142, are in graduate programs, while 1,210 are enrolled as undergraduates.

Asked to what he attributed the increased enrollment, Rothstein said, "I think it's got a lot to do with the economy. People coming back to retool. It's all career enhancement, people trying to improve their job status.

"It's mostly that and it's a lot of teachers that are coming back to take career ladder courses, by which they stand to gain salary raises," he said. "There also are a lot of business people, BBAs, a lot of graduate students and, of course, we have that new masters in psychology."

"Just generally," the UTPB dean of admissions said, "It's people using the university. Historically, whenever there's a depression, this is what people do."

Rothstein attributes part of the reason for increased enrollment to the fact that specific groups, such as teachers, have been targeted and made aware of program availability.

"We've tried to go after some groups of people that we didn't go after before and encourage them to come to school," he said. "We've made it as easy as possible, especially for teachers."

"I've been saying for a long time that there were probably hundreds of teachers out there that needed the university but, for some reason or another, they didn't know we were here," he added.

It is for this reason, he said, UTPB set up career ladder courses. "In the past, what they had to do to get career ladder credit, they would have to travel to a seminar somewhere, like Abilene or Lubbock. Now, we're filling a need that they've had. Now they can stay right here, in their own community, and get career ladder credit without leaving town," stated Rothstein.

Rothstein observes that the UTPB career ladder course can't be used toward any degrees, "but they sure can use it to enhance their career ladder standing (which equates to more money)," he said.

Offering the career ladder program probably has gained UTPB "about 400 new teachers" as students, he added.

This includes teachers "new" to UTPB, who have been in the area awhile, and teachers new to the area.

The career ladder courses offer a lot of information that teachers can use, such as techniques in teaching subject matter, as well as in education ideas. "They seem to be getting a lot out of it," he says.

State Legislature adjourns without quorum for first time in 40 years

By JAMES CULLEN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Texas House and Senate leaders did their constitutional duty Monday but adjourned both bodies without a quorum for the first time in at least 40 years.

Some legislators, surprised that they were called into session, had to borrow coats and ties to comply with the dress code, but they greeted House Speaker Gib Lewis with applause when he entered the House Chamber at 2 p.m. and ordered the roll call.

With only 66 members present, 10 short of a quorum, Lewis adjourned the House until 10 a.m. today, but he added, "I do appreciate all you brave souls."

Rep. Henry Cuellar, D-Laredo, had to borrow a jacket from an aide to comply with the dress code, which was leniently enforced by the sergeant-at-arms. A sweater hid the fact that the sophomore legislator had no tie.

Cuellar said he was disappointed that the House lacked a quorum. "I had all my bills ready to go today," he deadpanned.

Rep. Gary Watkins, D-Odessa, made it back to Austin Sunday, only to see his Higher Education Committee meeting called off for lack of a quorum. Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, had an excused absence.

As the lawmakers trickled off the House floor, Lewis called them back to observe another hallowed tradition — recognizing a group in the gallery overlooking the chamber.

Lewis recognized the Panola College Pipers, an eight-member singing group from the junior college in Carthage that performed Monday morning in the House rotunda as part of Community College Month.

Lewis said he did not blame legislators who stayed home rather than trying the icy roads, but the Texas Constitution prohibits the Legislature from adjourning for more than three days during a session. "Regardless of whether we meet or not, someone had to slam the gavel," he said.

"To be here on a good day is a lot more important than to be here on a bad day," he said. "We'll pick up the pace. One day gone won't hurt us."

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby gaveled the Senate to order at 11 a.m. with a few senators who either had braved the roads or who had stayed in Austin over the weekend.

A researcher at the Legislative Reference Library said the last time the House was unable to muster a quorum was Jan. 31, 1949, but the Senate met that day. Researchers had not found a date when both houses failed to achieve a quorum.

Robberies information sought

Between 4 p.m. on January 28 and 8 a.m. on January 30, someone climbed over a seven-foot tall chain link and barbed wire fence on the south side of the business. A trailer parked next to the fence was used as a ladder, according to investigators.

The suspects tried to pry open the doors of several motor homes, then broke out the screens and doors of the vehicles. Cabinets inside were ripped apart and electronic equipment stolen. The value of the stolen property and damage was estimated to be $11,000.

Information that leads to the arrest and indictment of the person or person involved in the burglaries could be worth up to $1,000 cash this week only. Crime Stoppers pays cash rewards for information about other felony crimes.

Cash rewards are also offered for the recovery of stolen property worth over $1,000 and the seizure of narcotics valued at $1,000 or more.

In Odessa, Crime Stoppers can be reached at 333-TIPS, and in Midland at 694-TIPS. Callers can remain anonymous.

OPPORTUNITIES FOR VOLUNTEERS

Brighten your life and the lives of others as a community volunteer. The Volunteer Center has many opportunities to enable you to grow as you assist others. Here are just a few of the jobs currently open:

- Be a reassuring friend for latch key children. Volunteers are needed to answer phones at a local agency from 2:30-5:30 p.m. weekdays. Ideal for warm, caring volunteers who enjoy children.
- Help a local agency better serve its clients by spending a few hours a week answering the telephones. Orientation and training from the agency will be provided.
- Book yourself for a speaking engagement. Volunteers are needed to speak one time on topics that would be of interest to youth. Share your interests, hobbies, travels, knowledge, and life experiences.
- Enjoy meeting people, answering questions, being an Ambassador for Midland? Consider manning an information booth at the Midland International Airport. Both morning and afternoon hours are open, Monday through Friday.
- Do you have a creative talent and enjoy youth? Combine these interests and teach either drama or dance to young people. Hours are open 3-8 p.m. weekday or all day Saturday.

BLOOD

When supplies get low, blood banks often are forced to buy blood from "clearinghouses" located throughout Texas, explained Shirley Herget, supervisor of the blood bank at Odessa's Medical Center Hospital.

In Odessa, whole blood supplies dropped so drastically, the blood bank was forced to buy blood for $45-$55 a pint, Ms. Herget said.

Midland's blood bank is trying to avoid that situation, Ms. Sparks said.

"We like our citizens to have local blood," the Midland nurse said.

Midlanders may give blood until 7 p.m. tonight, from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. through Friday and from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday.

Midland's blood bank is located at Midland Memorial Hospital.

In Odessa, blood donors can give blood at Medical Center Hospital from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. through Friday and from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m. Saturday.

TAX

Multi-family residences were valued at 95 percent, while commercial real estate was valued at 94 percent, industrial real estate was valued at 100 percent, utilities were valued at 96 percent and minerals were valued at 107 percent.

The typical single-family house in Ector County was appraised at 103 percent of its market value. Multi-family residences were valued at 100 percent, while commercial real estate was valued at 87 percent, industrial real estate was valued at 100 percent, utilities were valued at 96 percent and minerals were valued at 114 percent.

WEST TEXAS IN BRIEF

Reception scheduled to open Eager's exhibit

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A wine and cheese reception from 7 to 9 p.m. today will open Janet Eager's realism exhibition of colored drawings in the Third Floor Art Gallery of The University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

Ms. Eager, a "transplanted suburbanite" living in Encinal, will present a unique show where colored pencils render subjects in a "new realm." She refers to herself as a "transplanted suburbanite" because most of her drawings reflect "the merging of my suburban experience with the realities of my rural life."

Ms. Eager's work deals with daily incongruities such as "horses parked as casually as pick-ups on the unpaved streets of Enicnal."

She has exhibited throughout Texas and has been published in three magazines, including Texas Monthly, and in two books, "The Art and Archeology of Pashash" and "Mirror of an Era." Among the 20 drawings included in the exhibition are "Nature Morte," "The Conversion of St. Paul's Horse," "Los Crazy Guys" and "Crossroads."

She graduated from the University of Texas at Austin with a Bachelor of Fine Arts degree in Art History and has worked as a reconstruction artist on an archeological site in Peru, served as Artist-in-Residence to the A&M Consolidated School District under the State's Commission for the Arts and Humanities and taught painting and life-drawing at Laredo Junior College.

The exhibition will be on display through Feb. 28.

Sponsored by the university's Student Programs, the reception is free and open to the public. For more information, call 1-367-2136.

Convenience store robbed

Police said today the early morning robbery of a local convenience store is not related to a string of holdups that have been committed since December.

According to police, a man walked into the Kent Kwik convenience store, 1709 S. Rankin Highway, and looked to be shopping. He then told the clerk "this is a robbery," and demanded the cash register be opened. The clerk complied, handing the robber two $10 bills, according to police.

The suspect then left the store. He was described as a black man wearing a cap, a maroon jacket and dark gray or black pants. He may have been armed with a knife, according to police.

Police spokesman Cpl. Jim White said the robbery appears to differ from a half-dozen other robberies committed in the city since mid-December.

Scout receives award

Hudson

Jason Don Hudson of Midland, son of Janie Jo Hudson, has received his Eagle Scout award.

Hudson is a member of Troop 232, sponsored by First Baptist Church. He has held many offices in that troop.

He attends Midland Freshman High School and is an active member of FFA.

FIRE

"Because of the weather, every reported structure fire we have, we have been sending a tanker, including this one," the chief said, noting that the house could not have been saved if the hydrants were not frozen.

Once firefighters determined there were no injuries and no one left inside the Higginbotham residence, they turned their attention to the vacant home next door, and used the tanker to prevent the fire from spreading, he said.

"They put up a water curtain, to cover the exposure to the west," Roberts said.

Fire Marshal Jerry Petree said the fire originated in a dog house which was under a porch. He said investigators had not determined what started the blaze.

"We will go out there to see if we can locate a heater or a light bulb in the dog house, or some other kind of light source," Petree said.

Cover Model Contest underway

By ELIZABETH EDWIN
Lifestyle Editor

The search is on. Seventeen magazine is once again looking for a cover model via their sixth annual Cover Model Contest. The winner of the contest will be feature on the magazine's October 1989 cover and receive a General Motors Pontiac sportscar.

"It's really a great contest for young girls and so many of them don't even know about it," said Jean Lawrence, coordinator of special events for Dillard's in Midland Park Mall.

The Model Contest is coordinated through more than 320 department store groups where entry applications are available. Dillard's stores in Midland and Odessa (in Permian Mall) are local headquarters for the contest.

Applications are available in the junior departments of both the Midland and Odessa Dillard's stores, along with all entry information, according to John Haupert, manager of Midland's Dillard's stores.

"There is no local pageant," Ms. Lawrence said. "The girls just need to pick up their applications and send them in."

Women between the ages of 13 and 21 are eligible to enter. Complete entry details may be obtained in Dillard's junior departments or in the February and March issues of Seventeen. Deadline for completed applications to all stores participating as local entry headquarters is March 18.

A group of semifinalists will be chosen from the total number of entries received by each store. The semifinalist's entry forms and photographs will be submitted to Seventeen for national judging.

Since the contest's inception, over 400,000 women have entered.

"Appearing on the cover of Seventeen is a dream of so many young women," said Midge Richardson, editor-in-chief of the magazine. "We think our Cover Model Contest can turn this dream into a reality for someone special. At the same time, it gives Seventeen's editors a chance to discover some fresh new faces. For those hoping to enter the world of modeling, the contest represents an exciting opportunity."

Eight national finalists will be selected by Seventeen's editors from all the entries submitted by headquarters stores. The finalists will be notified of their selection in May. In June, the eight national finalists will travel to New York City for an all-expense-paid trip that includes hair and make-up sessions with New York stylists. They also will pose for pictures taken by leading fashion photographers. All eight finalists will be featured in a special article in the October issue of Seventeen, along with the winner featured on the cover.

Rachel Dillman of Warrenton, Va., who won Seventeen's first Cover Model Contest in 1984, went on to sign a contract with Ford Models Inc., one the of the top modeling agencies in the United States and recognized internationally.

Three other finalists have also launched successful careers in New York. Last year's winner, Amy Elmore of Tallahassee, Fla., signed with Ford Models after being noticed in the magazines annual Fall Trends Fashion Show. Shannon Runner of Wichita, Kan., a 1988 finalist, currently models with Elite New Faces in New York City.

Others who are now celebrities that Seventeen takes pride in helping during the early years of their careers include Jennifer O'Neill, Cybill Shepherd, Brooke Shields, Shelley Hack, Phoebe Cates, Patti Hansen, Cheryl Tiegs and Whitney Houston, who all appeared on the magazine's cover and on its pages.

DEAR ABBY

Man doubts girlfriend is truthful

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I have something on my mind that bothers me a lot. I am a young man (under 20 years old) and I am about to ask my girlfriend to marry me. She is slightly younger than I am, and we've been going together for a little over a year. When we first started to date, I asked her some questions about her past, and for some reason, I just don't believe that she told me the truth. Am I wrong not to believe someone I love? (I really do love her.) I want to believe her, but every time I think about it, I find it very hard to believe.

What can — or should — I do? What if she was lying to me, and I find after we are married that she lied about something else? Please help me. I'm about to make a big move in my life, and I want to know if I should or not. I need to hear from you really soon. — DOUBTING HER

DEAR DOUBTING: Do not marry this girl until you both have had premarital counseling. Perhaps your questions were inappropriate, unfair, of no real consequence or were really none of your business. Maybe she lied to protect herself. And maybe she didn't lie. This will all come out in counseling, and I urge you to resolve this matter before you consider marriage.

DEAR ABBY: Now that the holidays are over, I want to tell you how much I appreciated your cookbooklet. It certainly came to my rescue when I was short of cash and needed to give two co-workers gifts for Christmas.

Well, to make a long story short, your cookbooklet came that very afternoon, so I made your delicious date cake for one, and a large kettle of Muriel Humphrey's Family Favorite Beef Soup for the other. Abby, they both said that mine was the best gift they ever received. My coworkers just raved about them. After all, who doesn't appreciate home-cooked foods, especially after working all day?

I've read your column every day since 1957 and want to thank you for all the words of wisdom, comfort and advice you have given not only to other readers, but to me as well. Keep up the good work, Abby! — JUSTINE E. GIROUX, COHOES, N.Y.

DEAR JUSTINE: Thank you for taking the time to write. Your letter made my day.

AT WIT'S END

Parents are in life-long occupation

By ERMA BOMBECK

Bombeck

The other night on "thirtysomething," a woman whose biological clock was set to go off at midnight was trying to line up a donor for her baby. You'll notice I didn't use the word "father." The guy she was considering was handsome, smart and had the interest span of a puppy. The idea of producing a child together was wisely aborted when he admitted he "liked his weekends."

I wanted to reach through the set and grab both of them by their throats and shout, "What do you think parenting is? A ride in a teacup at Disneyland? Do you think it's all rosy cheeks at bedtime and candy cane breath at Christmas?"

I'll tell you what parenting is in one word: longevity. That's right, the long haul. And here's the kicker: It's being there when your kids don't want you to be there. There is no other job in this world where there is more rejection, where you are dismissed with more regularity, and where the people you are sworn to serve tell you, "I don't need you. I don't even like you."

Day after day, it's "Get off my back." "Leave me alone," "You live your life. Let me live mine." And is it tempting!

I've known parents who have given up on their kids. There are a lot of reasons. Maybe the kids made a mistake. Maybe they didn't take their parents' advice. Maybe they said something that hurt, and weren't even sorry for it. Maybe they were just real subtle and said, "There isn't room on this planet for the both of us."

I've also known parents who hang in there. They drag their kids out of drug houses, take over on grandchildren while the parents get their act together, and bail their kids out of jail. They go to all their daughter's weddings, loan them car payments, and open their doors to them when they're out of money, out of a job or out of love. There is no age limit on parental responsibility or worry. I have a 77-year-old mother who still sees me off on a plane and says, "You be careful." (As if I'm going to cut myself opening the package of honey almonds.)

When you give birth to a child, the first thing you lose is your innocence — your belief that life will be the same as it was before the baby was born. The second thing you lose is a sense of self. You blend with the new life and after a while you don't know where one lets off and the other begins. You only know that parenting is harder to get out of than a book club.

You hear a lot of talk about the biological clock, that final moment when reproduction becomes iffy at best. Maybe some thought should be given to the biological calendar. You work a lot of weekends.

Lewellen Construction improves homes, offices

Now is the time to shape up for spring with a complete, professional home or office overhaul from Lewellen Construction Co. Let Lewellen Construction Co. be your one-stop improvement shop for seamless gutters, steel siding and trim, soffit and fascia, replacement windows and doors, patio covers and carports.

The current cold weather snap is one good reason to consider adding storm windows and doors to your home. Lewellen Construction Co. uses only the finest, most durable materials for window and door improvements. Custom-fitted storm windows are beautiful as well as durable. These doors and windows are a good investment, providing extra insulation from the elements as well as protection from dust. Call 686-8007 or 563-4520 for more details.

After 13 years in the home improvement business, owners Bill and Joan Lewellen have continued to seek ways to expand and improve their business.

The most recent, noticeable improvement is the Lewellen Construction Co. seamless gutter truck. "We have just purchased a seamless gutter machine, and we can fabricate our own gutters at the job site," said owner Bill Lewellen.

If you see a newly painted tan Lewellen Construction Co. truck about town, inside is the new machine, which constructs any length of gutter needed.

"We can run any length in one continuous piece," Bill explained. Choose from aluminum or vinyl clad steel seamless gutters. In stock colors include rafia beige, autumn brown, desert sand and white. Stock colors are priced at $3.00 per foot, with a $100 minimum purchase.

Joan and Bill are committed to using only the finest material and providing you with the best workmanship available. This dedication is apparent in comments from dozens of satisfied customers.

"I especially appreciate the workmen cleaning up so very well and their taking time to install new doorbells, mailbox and house numbers," said one after a soffit and fascia job. A carport customer commented, "I'm very pleased with my carport; it actually exceeded my expectations! I also want to express my appreciation of your workers. Both were very professional, conscientious and pleasant."

Following completion of a job, Lewellen Construction Co. has each homeowner fill out an evaluation form which is carefully monitored to ensure customer satisfaction.

As charter members of the Permian Basin chapter of the National Association of the Remodeling Industry, Lewellen Construction Co. is pledged to a code of ethics. Lewellen Construction Co. has met strict NARI membership requirements.

If you are ready to have siding and trim, storm windows and doors, replacement windows, or a patio cover or carport installed, call the professionals. Call Lewellen Construction Co. at 686-8007 or 563-4520 for more information or to have an estimate done. Call today.

La Margarita: Creative flowers, gifts

Do you know someone that's feeling blue? Wish there was something you could do? Do you need to say "I'm sorry," "I love you" or "Te quiero"?

Then have no fear, because that's why La Margarita Flower and Gift Shop is here!

Midland's newest downtown flower shop, "the shop with the Spanish flair," is located next to Casa Blanca Restaurant at 303 N. Terrell. You can depend on owner Grace Gonzales and her staff for creative specialty floral arrangements.

With Valentine's Day coming up soon, now is the time to plan for your sweetheart, and La Margarita has some great suggestions. Beautiful green plants, mixed bouquets, roses, silk arrangements, flower, fruit and candy baskets and balloon bouquets are excellent ways to say "I love you."

Men will especially like the uniqueness of a beer mug, boot mug or ice cream sundae glass filled with carnations.

Call early and place your order for the best selection.

Arrangements such as these reflect Grace's originality. "I enjoy creating individualized arrangements," she said.

"I really enjoy what I do here," Grace added. "I love to do detail work. I especially like creating projects which are slightly out of the ordinary."

Many of her arrangements are incorporated with pretty bird and animal decorations or terra cotta pottery--just part of the Spanish/Southwestern touch for which La Margarita is well known.

You'll also enjoy the unique flavor of the shop, with its own Spanish-style fountain and decorative wrought iron. Don't forget La Margarita for those once-in-a-lifetime occasions such as weddings and quinceaneras.

If you have a last-minute need, stop by the shop and choose from the many arrangements which are ready to go, including novelty items.

Free city-wide delivery is included with any order at La Margarita. Hours are Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Stop by 303 N. Terrell or call 685-1411 to place your order.

Grace Gonzales, owner of La Margarita Flower and Gift Shop, suggests that you place Valentine's Day orders now.

Houston running up big bill coping with weather

Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — Keeping Houston moving over ice-slick roads could cost hundreds of thousands of dollars, depending on the duration of subfreezing temperatures.

No exact estimates were available, but by Monday afternoon the city had spent more than $50,000 for sand and salt to throw on glazed streets and overpasses. That did not include labor and fuel costs.

City crews had spread about 1,200 tons of sand, costing $28,500, on surface streets while another 1,000 tons were being delivered to eight distribution points for use as needed.

The city also had ordered at least 32 tons of rock salt from a mine in Hockley for about $32 per ton, said Barto Canon, a Public Works Department spokesman.

State and county officials also are running up big emergency bills.

"I can't give any figure, but it's been enormous," said Smokey Jasper, general manager for Harris County Commissioner E. A. "Squatty" Lyons' Precinct 4. "We've been on a 24-hour shift since Friday night."

Jasper estimated the precinct, in the county's northeast part, has already spent an extra $50,000 to $60,000.

"We ran out of material and got some more in, $10,000 worth," he said. "We had an enormous amount. We keep it stocked, but two camps already ran out."

The Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation began sanding at 3 a.m. Saturday, but spokeswoman Janelle Gbur said, "We probably won't have time to determine the cost until Wednesday, and that depends on whether the roads are clear then."

City Hall literally shut down Monday afternoon as workers headed home by 3 p.m. Some state district courts also closed in the early afternoon.

Ice cream selling like hot cakes

Blue Bell officials say they sold 600,000 gallons of ice cream during the past weekend at grocery stores and convenience stores in the Dallas area. It was an all-time record for Blue Bell sales for this time of year, according to division manager Melvin Ziegenbein.

"We did more (sales) in those four days (of icy weather) than we normally do in a week," he said Monday. "Today our phone is ringing off the wall from people out of ice cream."

Supplies at Dallas area stores are dwindling and officials are not sure if they will be able to replace supplies because of the bad weather.

"It (ice cream sales) increased, but it was because business increased," said DeWayne Stewart, manager of a Kroger store in suburban Lewisville.

The branch manager of Blue Bell's distribution office in suburban Mesquite had a simple explanation for an illogical craving.

"People stock up on food and stay home and sit by the fire and eat ice cream," said Jerry Ferguson.

Dance team stranded by weather

"There's just no way out of here," said Louann McHalffey, team choreographer. "All the roads out of here are iced over or closed down."

The 25-member team and five adults traveled here by chartered bus Thursday to compete in the South Texas Drill Team Competition. When they arrived on the island Friday morning the weather was warm, and the girls were wearing shorts. By Friday afternoon the temperature was dropping rapidly and the wind was rising.

"The girls went to Mexico to go shopping," McHalffey said. "Everyone bought blankets."

To save money the group is sleeping eight people to a room. The hotel didn't provide cots, so some of the girls are sleeping on the floor, McHalffey said.

They bought food at a grocery store to keep in ice chests in their room. "But we can't heat anything up, so we eat everything cold," she said.

McHalffey said that relieving boredom is one of their biggest concerns. "We can hardly leave our room, the weather is so bad."

It may be Wednesday before the team can start for home.

Citrus growers face freezing nightmare

STATE

HARLINGEN (AP) — Citrus growers in the Lower Rio Grande Valley were hoping they wouldn't wake up today to relive the nightmare killing freeze of five years ago, after the National Weather Service forecast overnight lows in the mid-20s.

"If the weather forecast is correct, we're looking at a high probability of serious damage," Ray Prewett, executive director of Texas Citrus Mutual, a McAllen-based growers' organization, said Monday.

Fruit and trees would suffer if the temperature stayed below 28 degrees for more than four hours, he said.

Prewett said growers could withstand a loss of the fruit still on the trees, but the real danger comes from a prolonged hard freeze that injures or kills the trees themselves, putting future production in jeopardy. Citrus growers are still recovering from a devastating December 1983 freeze that killed thousands of trees, wiped out the next year's crop and drove many out of the business.

The industry was looking at this year for their re-emergence, particularly in the lucrative fresh-fruit market with the new Rio Red grapefruit variety reaching a respectable level of production.

This year's citrus crop has been estimated at about $75 million.

Fresh fruit is where the money is, Prewett said, and growers will lose if they have to rush to salvage their frozen oranges and grapefruit by converting them to juice.

An oversupply has depressed juice prices this year.

About 45 percent of the grapefruit remains on the trees in the Valley.

Most of the Valencia oranges also remain unpicked.

About 35,000 acres are planted in citrus in Hidalgo, Cameron and Willacy counties. Freezing weather over the weekend already may have damaged some of the fruit and new growth that normally begins on the trees this time of year, Prewett said.

Fruit and vegetable growers in the subtropical Valley made it through the weekend in relatively good shape, when temperatures did not drop far below the freezing level, said Bill Weeks, executive vice president of the Texas Citrus and Vegetable Association in Harlingen.

Heavy cloud cover kept heat from radiating rapidly back into the atmosphere, while steady drizzle helped insulate the crops with moisture and ice, Weeks said.

"If we get into the 20-23 range, we're going to see a whole different situation," Weeks said Monday. "We're going to see some fruit damage as far as the citrus is concerned and some vegetable damage."

A worst-case scenario could bring as much as $105 million in damage to Valley fruit and vegetable producers and packers, he said.

Twenty-five winter vegetables are in the Valley's fields, he said, including more than 20 ready for harvest. Those include various greens, carrots, cauliflower and beets.

"Consumers better hope that we don't get that bad weather," Weeks said, "because they could end up paying higher prices" because of reduced supplies in the market.

Recently planted spring melons probably will need to be replanted, Weeks said.

Temperatures in the mid-20s also were expected for tonight, and could drop further if the cloud cover broke, forecasters said.

Judge refuses to relinquish couple's parental rights

DALLAS (AP) — A judge has refused to terminate a Coppell couple's parental rights to a 2½-year-old retarded child they adopted and then returned to the adoption agency.

Family Court Judge Hal Gaither Monday agreed top accept the adoption agency's agreement to assume financial responsibility for the child.

The judge accepted a June 1988 agreement between Hope Cottage Inc., a Dallas adoption agency and Dan and Rhonda Stanton that the agency would pay for the child's medical expenses and all other expenses.

The agency also agreed to reimburse the couple if they were ordered by a court to provide child support payments.

"I hope people won't be too judgmental on you, I know I won't," the judge told the couple.

The couple returned the child to Hope Cottage last June because they said they could not bear the lifelong emotional strain of caring for the child they adopted in October 1986.

Agency officials said the child functions at the level of a 6-month-old because of what is believed to be a degenerative disorder.

"We're pleased at this point that Hope Cottage is going to continue to care for Stacey," Stanton said after the hearing. "There is no difference in the love we have for her now than one the day when we adopted her. That doesn't change.

"We cry every night. We miss Stacey," he added. "We'd like for the relinquishment (of parental rights) to go ahead so she would be able to be placed with a family permanently."

The agency is seeking adoptive parents for the child, according to Aileen Edgington, executive director of Hope Cottage.

Ms. Edgington said that during the seven years she has worked for the agency, it has not placed a child with such severe handicaps as Stacey's, "but that doesn't mean we're not going to try."

The judge also severed the visitation rights of the Stantons, who have not seen the child since they returned her to Hope Cottage. But he ordered Hope Cottage to keep them informed about the child's condition.

The ruling relieves the Stantons of financial responsibility for the child, but leaves in limbo a request by the couple that their parental rights be severed, according to lawyer J.S. Fichtner, who represented the couple.

Abilene teams hope to finish business in Midland

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Both of the District 4-5A basketball leaders hit Midland tonight from Abilene with thoughts of putting away some troublesome tasks.

The Abilene High boys, undefeated in league play at 8-0, can land a state playoff berth with a victory over Midland Lee in an 8 p.m. contest at Chaparral Center. The Abilene Cooper girls, already in the state playoffs with a 9-1 loop mark, can win the outright 4-5A championship with a win over 0-10 Midland High at the MHS gym.

Meanwhile, the Midland Lee girls hit the road for Abilene High in a game that will determine if the Lee girls will be automatically playoff bound or have to have a district playoff game for second place with Odessa Permian.

Also the Midland High boys will trek to Abilene Cooper in hopes of keeping its slim playoff hopes intact.

The Lee boys are out of the playoff race at 2-7, but the Rebels would like nothing better than to put an Eagle feather in their cap. The Eagles have had some close games, including two one-point victories against 2-7 Permian. Still, the Eagles haven't found the loss column and could insure themselves of a state playoff berth with a win tonight.

Second place San Angelo (6-2), who plays third place Odessa High (5-4) tonight at home, would also be in good shape for a playoff berth with a win, but the Bobcats won't be able to sew up that bid tonight.

The MHS boys need some help to get back into the playoff hunt. First, they must take care of 3-6 Cooper and hope that Odessa High can drop San Angelo. Then Midland High would play San Angelo Friday at Chaparral Center in a contest that could make or break the Bulldogs.

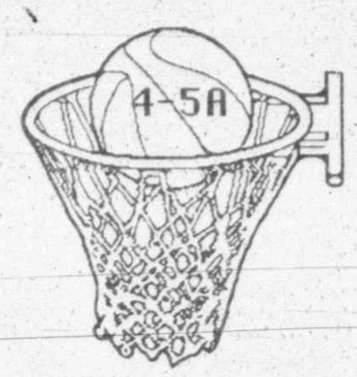

The Lee girls can mathematically tie the Cooper girls for first place if the Lady Cougars lose their last two outings, but Cooper has lost only one district game this year while Midland High, its opponent tonight, has not found the win column against any league team.

The Lee girls have more on their mind than what Cooper does, or doesn't do. Lee must beat Abilene High tonight to insure a playoff berth. Lee is 8-3 in the league race, falling to upstart San Angelo at home Tuesday.

Should Lee lose to AHS tonight, which is the last regular season game of the year for the Lady Rebels, Permian could gain a second place tie by beating Cooper at home Friday.

"We certainly didn't make things easy for us by losing to San Angelo," said Lee coach Shirley Stephenson. "Now we can't win it at home and have to do the job on the road. We'll just go out and see what happens."

Actually, Lee's girls got a break last Tuesday when Permian broke the two-way tie for third place Friday with a win over Abilene High.

Now Abilene High could be a little down from the loss to Permian, a game that closed out any chance of AHS getting into the playoffs. Had Abilene High won Friday, Lee's task tonight would have been much more difficult.

Time is running out for playoff hopefuls, making every trip down the court a crucial circumstance at this stage of the season. The Midland High boys, for instance, can't afford another district loss and expect to gain the playoffs. MHS does have San Angelo and Abilene High at home down the stretch.

Chaps earn win, but it isn't pretty

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

The Midland College Chaparrals came on strong in the final four minutes for a 99-88 win over New Mexico Military Institute Monday at the Chaparral Center. Think MC coach Reggie Franklin was happy?

"We loafed. We didn't play hard," Franklin fumed. "You would have thought that after the South Plains loss (last Thursday), we would have come out and been mad."

Does that sound like a happy man?

Franklin's ire was raised after the Chaps blew a 21-point lead in the second half. After Tim Owens' layup gave MC a 74-53 lead with 12:48 left, the visiting Broncos outscored the Chaps 28-5 in the next seven minutes.

NMMI's Sammy Fatoki scored 13 of his team-high 25 points during the Broncs' big run, despite averaging barely in double figures going into Monday's game.

"We made No. 11 (Fatoki) look like an All-American, and I've never even heard of the guy," Franklin fumed.

Fatoki's three-pointer with 5:38 left boosted the Broncos into a 79-all tie. Charles "Smokey" McCovery missed on MC's next possession, NMMI's Aaron Harris grabbed the rebound, and the Broncos subsequently took the lead on a follow shot by Mudi Abubakar with five minutes left.

MC'S DARRYL King hit a turnaround jumper to tie it up again, but NMMI point guard Keith Padilla made half a two-shot free throw opportunity to give the Broncos another lead.

McCovery and fellow guard Kethus Hanks then evenly split the scoring in a 12-0 Chap run that ended any realistic hopes for the visitors. The Broncs got back within seven points twice in the final minute, but couldn't get anything going.

Still, Franklin wasn't happy.

"It never should have been that close," he said. "We just didn't do some of the things that we worked on in practice."

Midland College (99): Charles McCovery 12-18 5-6 34; Kethus Hanks 6-12 6-6 19; Tim Owens 6-8 2-3 14; Fred Campbell 4-5 1-2 9; Darryl King 3-8 1-2 7; Randy Williams 2-5 1-2 5; Louis Clay 2-2 0-1 4; Troy Taylor 1-3 1-2 3; Kerwin Harris 1-3 1-2 3. Totals 37-62 18-26 99.

Halftime: MC 52, NMMI 36. Three-point goals: NMMI 4-16 (Padilla 2-6); MC 7-12 (McCovery 5-5). Total Fouls: NMMI 22, MC 21; Fouled Out: White, Williams. Technical Fouls: MC (delay of game); Rebounds: NMMI 30 (Harris 10); MC 33 (King, Owens 6); Assists: NMMI 8 (Padilla 7); MC 12 (McCovery, Hanks, King, Clay 2); Steals: NMMI 8 (Padilla, Tipton 3); MC 9 (McCovery 4).

NMMI coach Carlisle Dean said his team self-destructed after putting itself into position to win.

"We broke down toward the end," Dean said. "We worked a little harder to get the ball toward Fatoki in the second half, though."

After enjoying a slight edge in the first 10 minutes of the game, MC rode the outside shooting prowess of McCovery and Owens' hard work inside to lead by as many as 21 points late in the half.

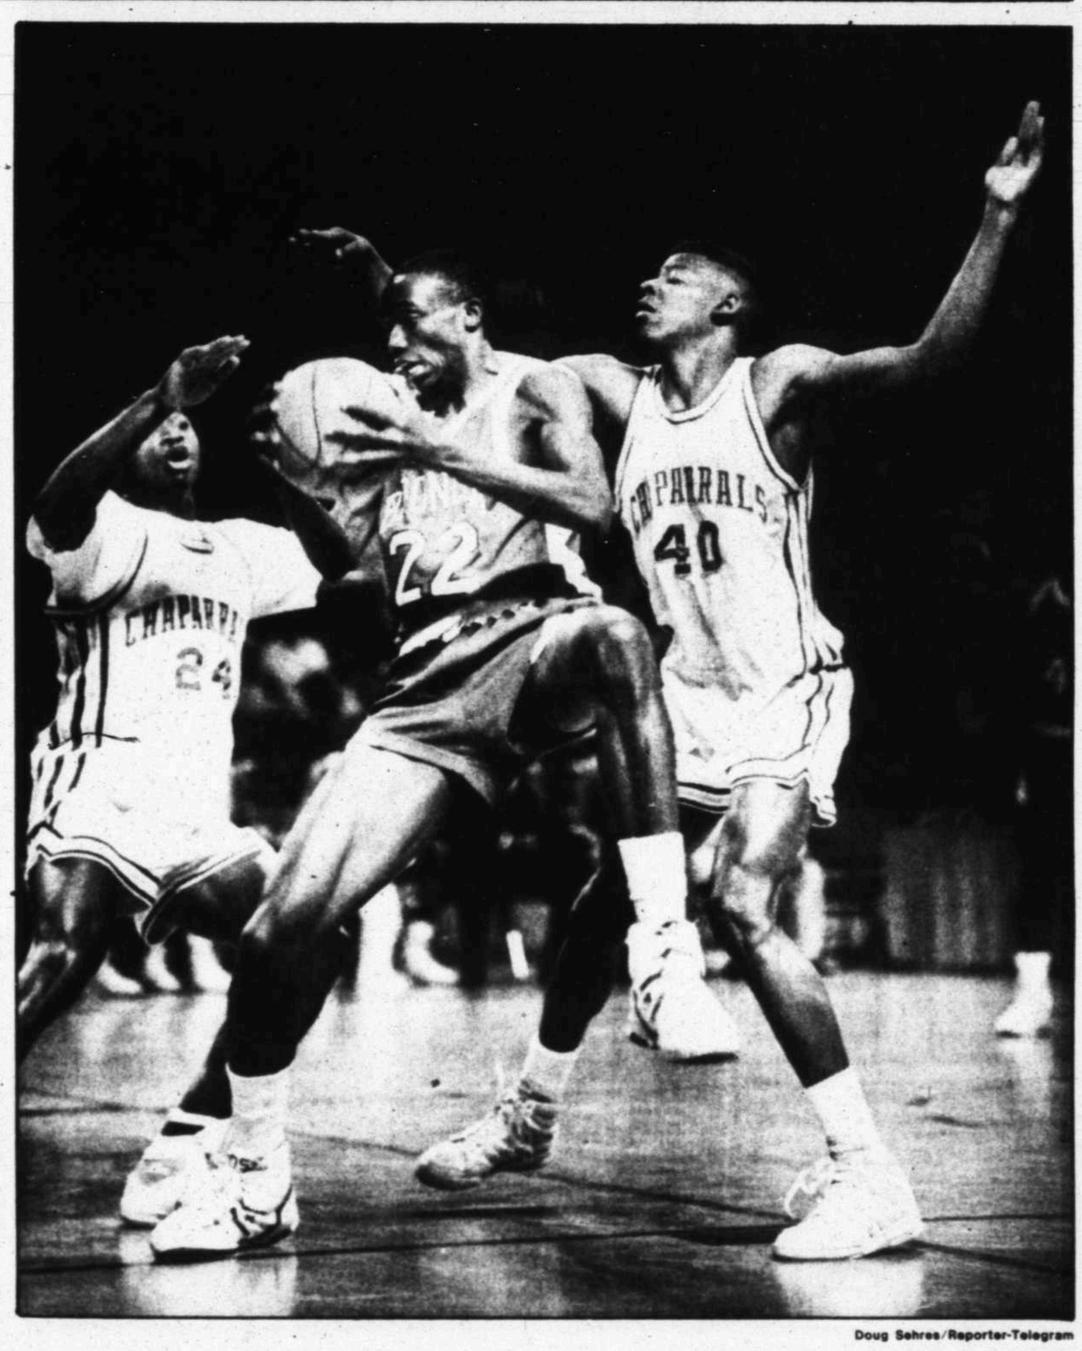

McCovery was seven-of-seven from the field in the first half en route to a game-high 34 points. The Chaps made almost 60 percent of their field goal tries on the game, while NMMI could manage only 42.5 percent from the floor.

Three-point shooting totals reflected the Chaps' offensive dominance for most of the game. MC made seven of 12 three-pointers, while NMMI could manage ony four-of-16 from three-point land.

Hanks added 19 points for the Chaps, while Owens had 14 points and tied King for the team rebounding lead with six each.

Lee White, NMMI's leading scorer on the year, scored 19 points Monday, but was only eight-of-23 from the field. Harris scored 17 for NMMI, while Abubakar added 11 and Padilla had 10.

Borg survives apparent try at suicide

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Retired Swedish tennis star Bjorn Borg was rushed to the hospital today after swallowing barbiturates in an apparent suicide attempt, Italian news agencies reported.

The 32-year-old Borg, who has been staying at the home of his Italian fiancee, rock singer Loredana Berte, was reported out of danger after having had his stomach pumped at the Milan Polyclinic.

He was released from the hospital after three hours and returned home with Berte.

"I'm fine, it's all over," Borg told reporters outside Berte's apartment.

"Go away all of you," snapped Berte.

"From initial police investigations, it appears to have been a suicide attempt," said the ANSA news agency.

However, a friend of Berte's, Mara Savastano, said the singer told her that Borg had suffered from food poisoning.

According to the agency, Berte telephoned for an ambulance at about 9 a.m. from her apartment in downtown Milan. She was later reported to have been at his bedside in the hospital.

The rock singer and the five-time Wimbledon singles champion had planned to marry in Milan on Feb. 26.

But Italian newspapers recently reported the date has been put off because Berte's divorce from an industrialist, Roberto Berger, has not yet come through.

Borg previously was married to Romanian-born tennis player Mariana Simonescu.

In January, an aide to Borg was quoted as saying the retired tennis star's planned marriage to Berte was stopped by the Roman Catholic Church.

Ingemar Alverdal told the Swedish news agency TT he did not know why the church intervened.

The news agency speculated that Borg's marriage to Simonescu might have been a reason because it had been a Greek Orthodox ceremony.

Borg retired from tournament play in 1983 at the age of 27. He now runs a fashion business and acts as a tourism ambassador for Sweden.

Lemieux, not Gretzky, star of NHL All-Stars

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — Look at Mario Lemieux — the long reach, the graceful stride, the sheer strength. Wow!

Then imagine seeing this heir apparent to Wayne Gretzky as the NHL's best player the way Pittsburgh teammate Rob Brown does. The view is even more amazing.

"Everyone should have the opportunity to be at ice level in the traffic out there and just see how he can play," Brown said. "That's what sets Mario and Wayne Gretzky apart (from other players). They both can see the game happen before it happens."

Now consider the unwelcome vantage point of defenseman Scott Stevens, whose Washington Capitals must play the Penguins and Lemieux seven times this NHL season.

"You know he's usually going to be the last man coming out of your zone, which you really have to watch," Stevens said. "They get a lot of offensive chances on turnovers at the blue line and they give it to Mario and away he goes.

"You think you know him, but he always does something different every time."

A LOT of people — teammates, opponents and fans — are eyeing the 6-foot-4 center. They probably will for a long time.

The "Lemieux Watch" is on as he chases Gretzky's records for goals and points in one season. If Gretzky, 28, is hockey's main focus in the '80s, the spotlight of the '90s figures to shine on Lemieux, 23.

"Everybody has their eras," Montreal defenseman Larry Robinson, a Wales Conference teammate of Lemieux, Brown and Stevens in tonight's NHL all-star game, said Monday. "Lemieux is certainly a terrific person to watch.

"Everybody has known Wayne for so long now so he's considered the old vet so you always look to someone new to follow and it happens that Mario is the one."

Last season, Lemieux broke Gretzky's eight-year hold on the NHL's most valuable player award and his seven-year grasp on the scoring title.

In last year's all-star game, he scored the winning goal in the Wales' 6-5 overtime victory over the Campbell Conference, which had Gretzky. Lemieux had three goals and three assists and was named most valuable player of an NHL all-star game for the second time in his career. He was the leading vote-getter in fan balloting for this year's all-star game.

In 51 games this season, he leads the league with 55 goals, 86 assists and 141 points. At that pace, he would have 84 goals and 132 assists and fall short of Gretzky's records of 92 goals and 163 assists. But he would break Gretzky's mark of 215 points by one.

"Teams are starting to play a little bit better defensively and it's going to be tough to get my points," Lemieux said.

"Maybe I have a chance to score 100 goals in a season. That would be the ultimate, but that's a lot of goals and you have to be consistent every game."

But Lemieux expects Gretzky, who was traded to Los Angeles last Aug. 9, to command the crowd's gaze tonight on his return to Edmonton ice.

Clipper streak falls to 19

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Will the Los Angeles Clippers — a franchise beset with injuries, weight problems and inexperience — win again this season?

Veteran guard Norm Nixon is sure they will, and rookie forward Charles Smith hopes they do before the All-Star break.

They didn't win Monday night, falling 129-111 to the Dallas Mavericks for their 19th straight loss. That tied the longest losing streak in franchise history, set during the 1981-82 season when the club was based in San Diego, and is just one off the NBA single-season record of 20 set by the Philadelphia 76ers in 1972-73.

"We aren't going to go through the end of the season without winning more games, just like nobody's going to go 82-0," Nixon said.

"We're definitely going to win some games."

NIXON WAS the catalyst for the Clippers in the second quarter, handing off six assists and scoring eight points in the last 6:40 to push Los Angeles to a 59-54 halftime lead.

But Mark Aguirre scored 16 of his 24 points in third quarter as the Mavericks outscored the Clippers 41-18 to take a 95-77 lead. Dallas made 14 of 18 shots, 77.8 percent, while the Clippers hit on 7 of 23, 30.4 percent.

"I don't know what happened. I'm just thinking about winning a game, period," said Smith, who led the Clippers with 23 points. "This is very, very difficult to deal with, to even understand. I think we need to win before the All-Star break. That would change our mood and attitude coming back."

They play face the Houston Rockets at home on Wednesday night and then play the Phoenix Suns on the road on Thursday night.

In the only other game, Tom Chambers scored 11 of his 24 points in the fourth period as the Phoenix Suns averted a second-half collapse and beat the Utah Jazz 104-87. Utah missed a chance to move into a first-place tie with Houston in the Midwest Division.

AP Laserphoto

Clipper coach Don Chaney ...suffering through No. 19

The Clippers' streak started Dec. 30 when they lost to the Los Angeles Lakers. Two games later rookie forward Danny Manning, the No. 1 draft pick, went down with a serious knee injury.

The Clippers provided the expansion Charlotte Hornets and Miami Heat with their first-ever NBA victories and the Heat snapped its season-opening 17-game losing streak here Dec. 14. Since losing to Miami, the Clippers are 3-21.

Joe Wolf, a second-year player and one of the team's six first-round draft picks in the last two seasons, said the losing streak is affecting the young team. But he added: "I've always been told through rough times to keep your head up. It's the character of this team that will come through. We've got a lot of young guys, but we've got a lot of spirit."

The Clippers continue to face distractions. Before the game, guard Quintin Dailey was suspended indefinitely for being overweight. Dailey is the team's leading scorer with a 17-point average. Just last week, reserve guard Grant Gondrezick checked himself into a drug rehabilitation center.

"Everybody has been mentally down," Nixon said. "He (Dailey) was still out there, but mentally he was not sharp. It's been the same with me. It's been a mental roller-coaster the whole season."

NBA Roundup

Suns 104, Jazz 87

Chambers scored 11 of his 24 points in the fourth period as the Suns averted a second-half collapse to post their 28th victory of the season, matching their total of last year.

Phoenix, 20-4 at home, led led 66-45 with 7:02 left in the third quarter before a 20-6 Utah burst trimmed it to 72-65. The Suns opened the fourth quarter with an 8-0 run, with Chambers hitting four free throws. Chambers added a three-point play, a layup and a jumper before Gilliam's stuff with 3:42 left made it 97-75.

Armon Gilliam had 22 points and 11 rebounds, Kevin Johnson 19 points and 12 assists and Mark West 12 rebounds for Phoenix. Karl Malone led the Jazz with 19 points.

Arizona new No. 1, but would just as soon decline

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — For the second straight year, Arizona has made it to the top of The Associated Press college basketball poll, as the No. 1 round-robin kept going.

It's an honor that Coach Lute Olson just as soon would have declined, at this point. Not that he's an ingrate, but Olson said his Wildcats, 17-2, have been there before, and that there are other teams that are better right now.

"I guess I would really just as soon have stayed about where we've been ... where you don't get all of the exposure that you would want without putting the additional pressure on, but maybe it'll be good to see how well our people handle the pressure of it anyway," Olson said Monday from Seattle.

A day earlier Arizona beat Washington, after defeating California, to vault from No. 4, as the previous top three, Oklahoma, Illinois and North Carolina, all tripped up at least once last week.

The Wildcats received 30 of 65 first-place votes from a nationwide panel of sportswriters and broadcasters and 1,226 points, 46 more than No. 2 Georgetown.

The Hoyas, 17-2, jumped from sixth, while Missouri, 20-3, climbed from fifth to third with 1,169 points, the Tigers' highest ranking this season. Georgetown, second in three earlier polls, had 17 first-place votes, Missouri 12, while Louisville, 16-3, moved from seventh to fourth and claimed three top votes and 1,090 points.

Louisville lost 81-78 to Florida St. Monday night.

Oklahoma, 18-3, fell to fifth, getting two first-place votes and 1,076 point. North Carolina, 18-4, received the remaining first-place vote and had 911 points, but dropped to sixth from third after losing to Clemson.

AP Top 20

Illinois, No. 2 last week, lost to Purdue and Iowa and dropped to 18-3 and seventh place with 832 points.

Iowa, 17-4, climbed to eighth from ninth with 747 points, seven more than Syracuse, 19-4, which jumped to No. 9 from 14th place last week by pounding Villanova and Pittsburgh.

Michigan, 17-4, rounded out the Top Ten with 726 points, switching places with Seton Hall, 19-3, which collected 658 points. Syracuse beat Seton Hall, 85-79, on Monday.

Arizona was the fourth team to claim the No. 1 ranking in as many weeks. Duke, which led in the preseason and for the first nine weeks, lost three in a row and was supplanted two weeks ago by Illinois. The Illini promptly lost to Minnesota and Oklahoma succeeded them last week — then lost Saturday at Oklahoma State. On Monday night, the Sooners crushed Iowa St. 126-97.

"In our situation people are aiming at us anyway without having the added incentive of being No. 1," Olson said.

He said last year he felt "that we really played better once we got there, but it was the first time ever, so I think it was a real shot in the arm for us," and the No. 1 ranking gave the program needed national exposure. "And I don't think that's the case now."

Wildcat starting forwards Sean Elliott and Anthony Cook are back from that team, which was No. 1 for six of seven weeks.

Olson said their experience might enable the Wildcats to handle being No. 1 better this time, and called the selection "a tribute to the play of Sean and Anthony that they could lose three of their starting companions from a year ago and still get back to that level."

"It's sweet," said Elliott, a senior All-American. "You figure it's due in large part because of the seniors. Now, someday we can sit back and say we were No. 1."

Of the quick exits from No. 1 by Illinois and Oklahoma, Elliott said, "It's not a jinx, it's parity. You can't say one team is really dominant. There are several No. 1 teams out there. We just happen to be it this week."

Olson said the Wildcats are not nearly as good offensively as last year, "but I do think we're a better defensive team."

Arizona plays at Oregon Thursday in a Pacific-10 game, then at Oklahoma on national television Sunday, which he said makes the task of being No. 1 "more than one week be a pretty difficult one."

La Cueva passes Hobbs in poll

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) — Albuquerque La Cueva can thank the Clovis Wildcats for the No. 1 ranking the Bears hold in this week's Associated Press Class AAAA Top 10 high school basketball poll.

The Wildcats knocked off the Hobbs Eagles 84-81 Saturday, making it possible for La Cueva, which was ranked second last week, to take the top spot from the Eagles.

Clovis probably would have been able to make a run at No. 1 on its own if the Wildcats had not suffered a 77-76 overtime loss to Roswell on Friday.

The Bears, who stopped District 3AAAA rivals Albuquerque Valley and Anthony Gadsden to improve their league mark to 6-0 and overall record to 15-1, received 10 of 14 first-place votes and 134 points Monday to reclaim the top ranking they held a month ago.

Hobbs, which had held the No. 1 rating for the past three weeks, edged Clovis for second place in the voting of AP member sports writers and sportscasters. The Eagles received one first-place vote and 115 points, while the Wildcats remained third with three first-place nods and 114 points.

Hobbs, which picked up a 116-90 victory over Alamogordo in its other outing last week to improve its season record to 15-4, and Clovis, 14-4 overall, are tied for first place in District 4AAAA with 3-1 marks.

The voters stayed with their picks of a week ago for the next three spots in the Top 10. Albuquerque Sandia was fourth again with 109 points.

MC cagers gain honors

From Staff Reports

Three Midland Christian School basketball players recently received honors from the Texas Association of Private Schools.

Six-foot center Elizabeth Coffman was named to the first All-State team, in addition to earning All-District 1 mention for the third straight year.

Kim Jackson was named second-team All-State and All-District for the second year, while Christy Boles was named All-District.

Coffman and Jackson will play in the TAPS All-Star game Feb. 25 in San Marcos, while Boles is an alternate selection.

Meanwhile, Midland Christian clinched a TAPS playoff berth with a 41-35 win over Amarillo Christian in girls basketball action in Amarillo Saturday.

The MCS girls, 15-6 overall and 5-2 in district play, will face an as yet undetermined opponent in a TAPS playoff game at 4 p.m. Friday in Dallas.

The Mustangs benefited from an Amarillo press that helped the hostesses commit 22 fouls and send MCS to the free throw line 28 times. The Mustangs made 19 free shots, to only three for Amarillo Christian.

Midland Christian (41): Elizabeth Coffman 2 3 7; Christy Boles 5 9 19; Diane Womack 4 2 10; Jeanette Morales 0 1 1; Jill Fuller 0 4 4; Paula Smith 0 0 0. Totals 11 19 41.

Florida State rocks No. 4 Louisville

Associated Press

Louisville got what it wanted, sort of. The fourth-ranked Cardinals also got what they deserved.

Pervis Ellison, the team's star center, returned to action after missing two games with a knee injury and played well. But the rest of the Cardinals hobbled, losing to No. 12 Florida State 81-78 Monday night.

"We got what we earned, and that's a loss," Louisville coach Denny Crum said. "Florida State played their hearts out for 40 minutes and we played hard for about 10. Our guys just didn't want it as bad as Florida State and that's shame."

Ellison, who did not start, led host Louisville with 19 points.

Florida State, 18-2, leads the Metro Conference at 6-1. Louisville is 16-4 and 5-1.

"We had our skeptics about our position in the Top Twenty, yet our youngsters never questioned it and knew they could play with anybody," Seminoles coach Pat Kennedy said.

George McCloud scored 20 points, including two foul shots with five seconds left that gave Florida State a three-point edge. Louisville's La-Bradford Smith then took the inbounds pass and drove the length of the court but missed an off-balance, 3-point try from the top of the key.

Tony Dawson led the Seminoles with 21 points and Irving Thomas had 18 points and 17 rebounds.

Ellison went directly to whirlpool treatment after the game without comment. Smith thought the 6-foot-9 senior did fine.

"I don't think he's 100 percent right now," Smith said, "but he played a good game. He was kind of worried coming off the injury. You can't blame him for that."

College Roundup

No. 5 Oklahoma 126, Iowa St. 97

Stacey King scored 33 points and Oklahoma broke away with 81 points in the second half, most ever in a Big Eight game. The Sooners, 19-3 and 6-1 in the conference, rebounded from a loss to Oklahoma State that knocked them out of No. 1.

Skeeter Henry scored 16 of his 18 points in the second half as Oklahoma pulled away from a 55-50 lead. The visiting Cyclones, who made 31 turnovers, are 11-8 and 2-5.

No. 9 Syracuse 85, No. 11 S. Hall 79

At the Meadowlands, Sherman Douglas scored 28 points and Stephen Thompson got 23 as Syracuse held off Seton Hall and reached the 20-victory mark for the seventh straight season.

The Orangemen, 20-4, won their sixth consecutive game overall and 17th straight against Seton Hall. Both teams are 6-4 in the Big East, three games behind Georgetown.

Syracuse led 65-49 with 13:41 remaining before Seton Hall rallied within 78-76 with 2:10 left. Thompson responded with two foul shots and a dunk to stop the Pirates, 19-4.

No. 16 Ohio State 70, Purdue 58

Ohio State, behind Jay Burson's 26 points, fought its way past visiting Purdue in the Big Ten.

A brawl broke out midway through the second half when Purdue's Kip Jones and Ohio State's Grady Mateen exchanged elbows and were ejected. The Buckeyes, leading by five points at that point, quickly increased the margin to 14.

Ohio State, 16-5, is in a four-way tie for second place in the conference at 5-3 behind Indiana. Purdue is 10-12 and 3-6.

No. 19 UNLV 77, Santa Barbara 61

David Butler scored 21 points and Greg Anthony added 19 as Nevada-Las Vegas ended its first two-game losing streak since 1984.

The Runnin' Rebels are 15-5 and 10-1 in the Big West. Santa Barbara fell to 15-4 and 6-4.

Virginia 78, No. 20 Georgia Tech 71

The Cavaliers, who earlier trounced highly ranked North Carolina and North Carolina State at home, is tied with those two teams for the league lead at 5-2. Virginia is 13-6 after its sixth straight victory.

Davis, Balboni beat owners at arbitration

NEW YORK (AP) — Houston's Glenn Davis and Seattle's Steve Balboni, a couple of long-ball-hitting first basemen, have outslugged their respective front offices and won their salary arbitration cases, with Davis becoming baseball's newest millionaire.

Davis, who batted .271 last season with 30 homers and 99 RBIs, was awarded $1.085 million for 1989 Monday instead of the $875,000 offered by the Astros. He made $340,000 last year.

Balboni, who batted .251 with 21 homers and 61 RBIs, made $350,000 in 1988 and will earn $800,000 this year instead of the $500,000 offered by the Mariners. Arbitrator Stephen Goldberg made both rulings, which left the players and owners tied at 2-2 in cases decided so far.

Three other players who had filed for arbitration settled with their clubs, leaving 34 cases still scheduled to be heard.

Kansas City Royals outfielder Danny Tartabull more than tripled his salary by negotiating a one-year contract for $1.035 million. He made $330,000 in 1988.

Tartabull, who batted .274 last season with 26 homers and 102 RBIs, can earn up to $175,000 in incentive bonuses. He would get $100,000 if he is named the American League's Most Valuable Player, $25,000 if he is elected to start in the All-Star Game, $15,000 if he is named an All-Star reserve, $25,000 if he wins a Silver Slugger and $25,000 if he wins a Gold Glove.

Outfielder Ivan Calderon agreed on a one-year contract with the Chicago White Sox for $320,000, a raise of $180,000. He can earn an additional $60,000 in performance bonuses.

Calderon, who will be 27 next month, batted .212 last season with 14 homers and 35 RBIs. He was on the disabled list from June 27-July 13 and again from July 27 to the end of the season and underwent shoulder surgery after the season.

The St. Louis Cardinals satisfied outfielder Milt Thompson with a one-year contract for $455,000, a raise of $215,000 over his 1988 salary with the Philadelphia Phillies. He can earn an additional $25,000 in performance bonuses.

Thompson batted .288 for Philadelphia with two homers and 33 RBIs. He was traded to St. Louis in December for catcher Steve Lake and outfielder Curt Ford.

Also, free agent first baseman Danny Heep agreed to a one-year contract with the Boston Red Sox for $285,000, with an additional $40,000 in incentives. Heep batted .242 for the world champion Los Angeles Dodgers last season with no homers and 11 RBIs in 149 at-bats. He made $300,000 last year and became a free agent when the Dodgers failed to offer the utilityman a contract for 1989.

No hearings are scheduled for today. Cincinnati Reds relief ace John Franco has a scheduled hearing on Wednesday in Chicago. Franco is seeking $1.3 million and Cincinnati is offering $950,000.

Franco was 6-6 in 1988 with a National League-leading 38 saves and a 1.57 ERA. He made $675,000 after losing an arbitration request of $925,000.

The two arbitration cases won by the owners involved Atlanta Braves outfielders Albert Hall and Dion James. Hall, who asked for $310,000, was awarded $250,000. James settled for $400,000 after asking $540,000.

Angelo State on top of LSC race

Associated Press

SAN ANGELO — Jeff Fudge scored 24 points to lead Angelo State to an 86-69 victory over Abilene Christian in Lone Star Conference college basketball.

Fudge scored 13 of his points in the game's final nine minutes Monday night as Angelo State charged out from a one-point lead, 54-53, with about 11 minutes to play. The victory keeps Angelo State on top of the conference with an 8-1 record. Angelo St. is 13-7 overall.

Emmitt Davis led Abilene Christian with 21 points as his team fell to 1-8 in the LSC and 4-17 overall.

Lamesa's Chris Mason added 14 for Angelo State, Bobby Darnell had 13 and Chuck Phelps 10. Darnell led all players with 11 rebounds.

Howard Payne 66, Tarleton St. 55

BROWNWOOD — Rusty Johnson scored 15 points and grabbed seven rebounds to lead Howard Payne to a 66-55 Texas Intercollegiate Athletic Association victory over Tarleton State.

With the win Monday night, Howard Payne improved to 7-18 overall and 2-3 in conference play.

Texas Basketball

Tarleton State fell to 14-8 and 4-1.

Howard Payne held Tarleton State to 39 percent shooting in the second half and with 17:30 left to play in the game, the Yellowjackets took a 36-34 lead and never looked back.

Tracy Guy led Tarleton State with 18 points.

W. Texas St. 64, Cameron 60

LAWTON, Okla. (AP) — Darnell Hardeman scored 18 points to lead West Texas State to a 64-60 Lone Star Conference victory over Cameron University.

West Texas State improved to 14-8 overall and 6-3 in the LSC, while Cameron dropped to 9-13 for the season and 3-6 in the conference after Monday night's loss.

Cameron led most of the first half, but West Texas State ran off a 10-2 streak early in the second half for a 42-30 lead.

Cameron's Carlos Mayes nailed a 3-pointer with 5:04 to play for a 54-53 lead.

But West Texas State answered with a Chuck Claggett 3-pointer, and then Rod Toliver scored a pair of baskets inside for a 58-55 lead with 2:04 to play, giving WTSU the lead for good.

Cameron was paced by Garry Johnson's 21 points.

SW Texas St. 73, Nicholls St. 72

SAN MARCOS — With 20 seconds left to play, Andre Hensley sank a 14-footer to push Southwest Texas State past Nicholls State 73-72.

Southwest Texas improved its record to 10-11 overall with the win, while Nicholls State fell to 8-11.

Stephen F. Austin 64, SE Louisiana 62

NACOGDOCHES — Scott Dimak hit a 3-point shot with 20 seconds left and scored a total of 17 points to lift Stephen F. Austin to a 64-62 win over Southeastern Louisiana.

With the non-conference win Monday night, the Lumberjacks improved to a 9-12 record for the season. The Lions fell to 2-17 overall.

The lead changed hands six times during the first half, and Southeastern Louisiana held a 29-25 lead at halftime.

The Lions had a 62-61 edge with :44 to play in the game, but Dimak's 3-pointer put the Lumberjacks on top for good.

Fed meets to head off inflation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interest rates, including mortgage rates, are headed higher as the Federal Reserve keeps trying to dampen inflationary pressure by slowing economic growth, many economists predict.

This effort will put the central bank on a collision course with the new administration and make it more difficult for President Bush to keep his campaign pledge to lower the budget deficit without resorting to new taxes, analysts say.

Fed policy-makers were gathering today for two days of closed-door meetings to set monetary growth targets for 1989. Their actions will not be revealed until Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan testifies to Congress on Feb. 21.

Private economists are widely predicting that the Fed will continue pushing interest rates higher because of fears that the economy is still growing too rapidly to keep inflation under control.

"There is no question that there will be a tightening. The question is how much," said Allen Sinai, chief economist of the Boston Co.

Some economists would not rule out a one-half percentage point increase in the Fed's discount rate, which now stands 6.5 percent, but other analysts argued that the Fed would probably avoid such a dramatic change in favor of more subtle behind-the-scenes tightening moves. The discount rate is the interest the Fed charges to make loans to commercial banks.

Since last March, the Fed has been draining bank reserves from the system, thus making money more scarce and the cost of money — interest rates — higher.

Analysts keep track of this process by watching the federal funds rate, the interest banks charge to make loans to each other. The federal funds rate now stands above 9 percent and analysts predict it is likely to rise by about one-quarter percentage more in the coming two months.

This will likely force banks to boost their prime lending rate, which now stands at 10.5 percent, already its highest level since mid-1985, economists say.

Economists also say that home loans, both adjustable and fixed-rate mortgages, are headed higher, with some predicting that fixed-rate mortgages will climb to around 11 percent. Currently, fixed-rate mortgages are averaging 10.6 percent, according to a nationwide survey by the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp., up from 9.9 percent a year ago.

Bush has pledged to reduce this year's expected $160 billion budget deficit by more than $60 billion in the fiscal year which begins next Oct. 1, but such a goal would be jeopardized by the Fed's inflation-fighting efforts.

Bush's budget, which he will unveil on Thursday, will use the same optimistic assessment of the economy employed by then-President Reagan in his final budget last month.

Fed credit-tightening already has pushed short-term interest rates a full 2 percentage points higher than the administration's estimate of 6.3 percent for 1989 and Fed officials are working to slow economic growth to between 2 percent and 2.5 percent, significantly below the 3.2 percent forecast by the administration.

Both of these discrepancies are significant because they spell lower

Slow price slide continues

From Staff and Wire Reports

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, the March contract for West Texas Intermediate was trading 11 cents lower at midmorning after settled down 15 cents at $17.38 a barrel Monday.

Among refined products traded on the exchange, the March contract for domestic heating oil rose 0.5 cent to 50.36 cents a gallon but other contract months fell.

Analysts said prices were little influenced by the cold weather, despite rumors of refinery slowdowns in southern Texas. They said the cold weather arrived late in the season, after most buyers had already purchased their winter stocks.

"They're looking for a new support level, probably heading down to $17," Fiedler said.

Prices also came under pressure from a report by the Middle East Economic Survey, a respected industry publication, that Iran had a large buildup of unsold inventory that it was looking to get rid of, said Nauman Barakat, vice president of energy investments at Prudential-Bache Securities Inc.

"My own opinion is that Iran won't dump it, but the question is, what will they do with it?" Barakat said.

Intervention depresses dollar trade

LONDON (AP) — The dollar was lower in early European trading today, pressured by Monday's central bank intervention and the absence of many traders celebrating holidays in Asia and West Germany, currency dealers said.

Gold prices rose.

They said that while the sales seem small, the appearance of the central banks confirmed their resolve to keep the dollar from climbing too high.

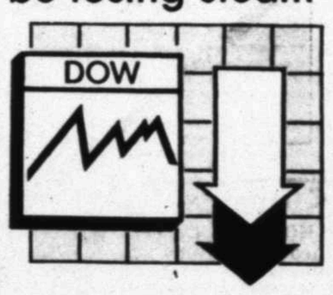

In Tokyo, the dollar fell 0.20 yen to a closing 129.50. Later, in London, it was quoted at 129.58 yen.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $391.75 a troy ounce, up from $388.95 bid late Monday. At midmorning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $391.45.

Rally may finally be losing steam

But activity remained lively in stocks of several companies involved in takeover news or rumors.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 5 to 4 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 636 up, 786 down and 517 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 150.98 million shares, down from 172.98 million in the previous session.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market lost $4.46 billion, or 0.15 percent, in value.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market slipped .35 to 406.00. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 324.48, down .40.

S&L PLAN

TAXPAYER COST

Budget Director Richard Darman said the bailout would cost taxpayers $28.1 billion between 1989 and 1994 of the rescue plan, and a total of $39.9 billion over 10 years. Over 30 years, the public would share 54 percent of the burden.

HIGHER INSURANCE PREMIUMS

The deposit premium paid by banks would rise from the current 83 cents per $1,000 of deposits to $1.20 in 1990 and $1.50 thereafter. The premiums would go into the bank insurance fund, and could be lowered as the fund is built up. The fee for S&Ls, now $2.08 per $1,000, would rise to $2.30 from 1991 until 1994, when it would decline to $1.80.

$50 BILLION BOND ISSUE

The government would issue $50 billion in 30-year bonds over three years to finance the cost of merging and closing about 350 failed institutions. This money would be in addition to $40 billion regulators pledged last year to sell or prop up 223 institutions.

Part of the interest on the bonds would be paid by increasing premiums paid by institutions for deposit insurance, with the rest coming from taxpayers. There would be no direct fee on depositors.

MERGED DEPOSIT INSURANCE AGENCIES

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., which insures deposits in the nation's 13,000 banks, would be merged with the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp., which guarantees accounts in 3,000 S&Ls.

The insurance funds for the two agencies would remain separate, although the new agency would carry the FDIC name and both banks and thrifts would post the FDIC sticker on their door.

The current three-member FDIC board would be expanded to five members, including the top S&L regulator, the chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

INSOLVENT THRIFTS

A newly created Resolution Trust Corporation would be established to resolve the affairs of insolvent thrifts within five years although, the FDIC, under contract, would take control of the failed S&Ls.

The new corporation would have an oversight board comprised of the secretary of the Treasury, the chairman of the Federal Reserve Board and the head of the General Accounting Office.

IMMEDIATE JOINT SUPERVISION OF THRIFTS

Pending the creation of the new regulatory structure by Congress, the FDIC would team with the FSLIC in an interim supervisory program with personnel from the Federal Reserve Board and Office of the Comptroller of the Currency.

FEDERAL HOME LOAN BANK BOARD

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board would be renamed the Federal Home Loan Bank System and its current three-member board would be replaced by a single chairman, subject to the oversight of the secretary of the Treasury in the same manner as the comptroller of the currency, who regulates national banks. Treasury Secretary Nicholas F. Brady said the current bank board chairman, M. Danny Wall, would get the job.

State, local leaders support Bush plan

Franklin

Pounds

Officials of Texas thrifts praised the swiftness with which President Bush attacked the savings and loan crisis, but other financial leaders bristled at the costs their institutions will bear under his plan.

"We like the fact that it's not hitting the consumer directly," Sam Hart, a spokesman for First Gibraltar Bank FSB, said of the plan Bush announced Monday, which hikes the premium banks and thrifts must pay for deposit insurance but does not charge a fee to depositors.

The increased cost of deposit insurance could have an impact in the form of lower interest rates paid on deposits and higher rates charged on loans or other services, say bankers like Midland's First City National President Bill Franklin.

However in the highly competitive financial services market, there is little room to pass those costs on, said David Jones, president of ClayDesta National Bank.

Any form of direct pass-through of costs would certainly "not be acceptable to depositors," added Matthew P. Murphy, chairman of NCNB Texas' Midland branch.

The banking community will support Bush's plan even though it will nearly double the deposit insurance premium, said Charles H. Pistor, chairman of NorthPark National Bank and immediate past president of the American Bankers Association.

Bush plan has fraud clause

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush's proposal for a $50 million program to combat fraud in the savings and loan industry would enable immediate deployment of extra investigators to probe 200 pending cases, the Justice Department says.

"If this were approved, these people could get right on the job" investigating some 200 cases of suspected savings-and-loan fraud, David Runkel, a spokesman for Attorney General Dick Thornburgh, said Monday.

"We need more people — there is no doubt about it," Runkel said after Bush announced that he will ask Congress to appropriate $50 million a year to set up a task force to investigate S&L fraud.

Bush proposed the "financial institutions special team" as part of his broader plan to raise deposit insurance premiums to help finance the $100 billion bailout of the troubled thrift industry.

The $50 million, which must be approved by Congress, would support deployment of "a couple of hundred additional FBI agents" and 80 to 85 more federal prosecutors assigned to S&L fraud, Runkel said.

Spindletop ownership challenged

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — U.S. Magistrate Earl Hines has impounded a document claimed as proof of ownership in the famed Spindletop oilfield and given the plaintiffs two weeks to supply any further evidence in their claim as multi-million-dollar heirs.

Cousins James Clark of Cincinnati and Dan Profitt of Elsmere, Ky., represent about 200 relatives claiming to be direct descendants to oilfield wildcatter James Meadors, who died in 1925 without a will.

Meadors' heirs contend that in 1911 Meadors was given one-eighth interest in the Spindletop oilfield as payment for work. Since the famous Lucas Gusher in 1901, oil companies have pumped billions of dollars worth of oil from the field.

Amoco Production Co., Mobil Oil Corp., Phillips Petroleum Co. and Texaco Oil Co. had requested last Thursday's hearing to ask Hines to dismiss the lawsuit because the plaintiffs failed to show a chain of title.

But plaintiffs presented the new document and claimed it is the missing link in the chain of title. They contend the document is a deed transferring land and mineral rights to a previous owner in a chain that eventually led to Meadors.

However, Cynthia Timms, an attorney representing three of the oil companies, told the Beaumont Enterprise that the document is a lease.

She said terms in the document requiring Lucas to pay $1,000 when the land in question is valued at $168,000 reflect a "typical oil and gas lease," and that it refers only to one of the four tracts of land in question.

No gas shortages says TRC

Hance

AUSTIN (SWN) — Railroad Commission Chairman Kent Hance and Commissioner John Sharp said today that natural gas requirements for essential human needs in Texas are being met and should continue to be met throughout the cold snap presently gripping the state.

Hance said, "Gas consumption has increased tremendously -- by as much as 400 to 600 percent for gas suppliers throughout the state of Texas – but the Railroad Commission is getting full cooperation from gas and electric utilities as well as suppliers and producers in addressing the problem."

Commissioner Sharp said, "The natural gas industry in the state of Texas is functioning superbly in meeting natural gas requirements. Our Voluntary Natural Gas Allocation Committee is anticipating no human needs curtailments of natural gas.

"Those who have said that the first cold weather would cause gas shortages are being proven wrong again," Sharp said.

Chairman Hance said there had been some curtailments, but they were electrical users who had other means of fuel to switch to, or were non-essential industrial users. Hance said one example of the bitterness of the cold snap is that last Wednesday, Lone Star Gas Co. of Dallas was supplying .4 billion cubic feet of gas to all users, but by Sunday their customers – excluding electric utilities – were consuming 2.4 billion cubic feet per day.

Hance pointed out that was a 600 percent increase, proving the severity of the cold weather that has generated record low temperatures throughout the state.

Commissioner Sharp said the industry's performance proves the reliability of natural gas as a fuel. "Today, in the most severe Texas weather and the harshest economic conditions for the gas industry, natural gas, just as in the winter of 1983, is proving itself a reliable fuel," he said.

Chairman Hance summed up the situation by saying, "We are proud that everyone in the oil and gas industry is pulling together to make sure that people realize that we can meet the needs with the gas capacity and deliverability that we presently have. It appears that we will be in good shape, but we will continue to monitor the situation on an hourly basis."

Black Chamber celebrates third anniversary

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

The Midland Black Chamber of Entrepreneurs has two reasons to celebrate February.

First, the group is celebrating its third anniversary this month. MBCE president Robbyne Fuller told members at Monday's meeting that, to commemorate the event, there will be an open house this Friday at the chamber's offices at 2707 N. Big Spring. The event will be from 5 to 8 p.m. and features a presentation by chamber members on "Dream Keeping."

The chamber will hold its regular banquet on March 4 at the Midland Hilton. Guest speaker will be Richard Knight, city manager of Dallas.

February is also National Black History Month, and to celebrate the month, the MBCE will have a special exhibit and films on black history. The chamber is also sponsoring two special events to mark the month.

On Feb. 24 at the chamber offices, Major Anthony Jerome Gipson of Dyess Air Force Base in Abilene will be a special guest, giving a presentation on "Dream Keeping: Striving To Be The Best." The gathering begins at 6:30 p.m. and Gipson will speak at 7 p.m.

The next day, the chamber will present Gloria Naylor, who will give a presentation on black female writers, focusing on the book "The Women of Brewster Place." The gathering begins at 9:30 a.m. and Naylor will give her presentation at 10 a.m. Those interested are asked to buy and read the book in advance and to call the chamber at 682-2864 for reservations.

In other business, Fuller told members that the board of directors had discussed ways to make memberships more attractive, and she outlined some proposed incentives.

Individual memberships are $25, and for that the chamber would like to offer a year's subscription to either "Essence" or "Black Enterprise" magazines, a 10 percent discount on tickets to MBCE functions, membership cards, a regular newsletter, and an MBCE sticker for their car. Fuller raised the possiblity of member businesses offering a 10 percent discount to members as well.

For business members, the membership has been reduced from $100 to $65; for that, they get the same benefits as the individual, with the addition of a discount on ads in MBCE programs and booths. New members would get a plaque for their business, a sticker and featured in the newsletter.

Guest speaker at Monday's meeting was Darlene Gifford, public relations representative with Southwestern Bell. She discussed a plan to be offered by Southwestern Bell called "Texas First."

She asked the chamber to either sponsor a resolution or send letters of support for the plan to the PUC, saying the plan would be implemented as soon as it was approved by the PUC.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Mexico 'just says no' to $3.5 billion loan

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A U.S. offer of a $3.5 billion emergency loan remains open, officials said, even though Mexico has decided not to borrow the money and is trying to renegotiate payments on its crippling foreign debt.

Treasury Secretary Pedro Aspe was beginning talks in Washington, armed with what aides described as a "menu of options" for repaying the $106 billion Mexico owes foreign creditors. Late Sunday, the Treasury Department issued a brief statement saying Mexico would not use the $3.5 billion short-term loan the U.S. offered in October.

American fleet to undergo youth movement

DALLAS (AP) — American Airlines' planned multibillion-dollar jetliner purchases will make its fleet much younger than the competition's, part of what some analysts called an innovative marketing strategy to sooth the flying public's safety concerns about old planes.

To revamp its fleet of older wide-body jets, American is expected to announce Tuesday orders of between 50 and 60 McDonnell Douglas Corp. MD-11 jets, which carry about 320 passengers, and up to 100 of the smaller MD-80s.

OIL AND GAS DIGEST

NYMEX to offer unleaded gasoline options

NEW YORK — The New York Mercantile Exchange says it will launch unleaded gasoline options on Monday, March 13.

"The launch date coincides with completion of our floor reconfiguration for options and the start of the 1989 driving season," said NYMEX president Rosemary T. McFadden.

Hanover Energy to acquire pipeline systems

The acquistion reflects Hanover's strategy to build a base of oil and gas reserves, gathering systems, natural gas pipelines and related oil and gas assets, according to Hanover.

Hanover says it intends to aggressively seek end-user markets for gas and is willing to construct pipeline to secure these markets.

Harken Energy raises stake in Crystal Oil

DALLAS — Harken Energy Corp. of Dallas has increased its ownership of common stock of Crystal Oil Co. of Shreveport, La. from 20.1 percent to 34.8 percent.

As part of the original agreement, Crystal Acquistion Co. is expected in the near future to purchase an additional 2,724,000 shares or 7.1 percent from Crystal. On completion of that purchase, subject to certain conditions, CAC, a Harken subsidiary, will own 10,415,122 shares of Crystal common, or 41.9 percent, for a total purchase price of approximately $17.5 million.

Conoco purchases Michigan properties

HOUSTON — Conoco has purchased from Total Petroleum Inc. all of Total's upstream oil and gas properties located in Michigan for approximately $22 million.

The properties include net reserves of approximately 3.2 million barrels of oil equivalent, interest in a gas processing plant and exploratory acreage.

SoCal Gas to drop Kern River opposition

HOUSTON (SWN) — Kern River Gas Transmission Co. has reached a settlement with Southern California Gas Co. which provides for SoCal Gas to drop its opposition to the Kern River project.

Under terms of the agreement filed with the California Public Utilities Commission on Friday the Kern River line will not only make direct deliveries to enhanced oil recovery customers but also will interconnect with SoCal Gas' facilities to move gas for other customers. Kern River agreed to offer SoCal Gas certain rights to contract for excess firm capacity on the new pipeline after operations commence.

"We view this agreement as a major milestone. It should accelerate final approval of the Kern River project," said R.C. Thomas, president of Tenneco's gas pipeline group. "The project has been pending before the FERC since May 31, 1985, and is near final approval. Approval of the project by the FERC this spring would allow Kern River to be transporting gas for customers no later than 1991."

The 837-mile, 36-inch-diameter pipeline which will transport gas from near Kemmerer, Wyo., to Kern County, Calif., is a joint venture of units of Tenneco Inc. and the Tulsa-based Williams Cos., Inc.,

Kern River has received signed agreements covering gas volumes of almost 400 million cubic feet per day out of an initial pipeline capacity of 700 million cubic feet. The line will be expandable to 1,100 million cubic feet.

Enterra Corp. acquires DOTCO

HOUSTON (SWN) — Enterra Corp. has signed a letter of intent to acquire substantially all the fishing tool assets of Donham, Inc., which is better known in the industry as DOTCO. The proposed transaction is subject to completion of definitive documentation and other conditions.

Enterra is engaged primarily in the business of renting specialized equipment for drilling and servicing onshore and offshore oil and gas wells, both within the United States and in foreign countries, and the manufacture, sale and rental of specialized equipment used in the pipeline construction industry.

Global Marine leaves bankruptcy with plan

By ANNE PEARSON
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — Global Marine Inc., a large Houston contract driller, has emerged from bankruptcy with a debt repayment plan that executives believe is flexible enough to keep the company afloat for several years, despite the industry's slump.

Global's plan to reorganize will reduce its senior debt from about $940 million to $395 million. It will give Global some breathing room during the first four years of the plan, Global attorney John G. Ryan said Friday, by allowing the company to defer debt payments if it does not generate enough cash to cover them.

"Given the market conditions we're encountering in the offshore drilling industry, it's going to continue to be very challenging," Global Chairman C. Russell Luigs said Friday. But the financial arrangements give us enough flexibility that we should be able to cope...for the next three to four years at least."

Global and many other contract drillers fell victims to collapsing oil prices that dried up new drilling. With debt of about $1.3 billion, Global filed for protection from creditors in January 1986 under Chapter 11 of the U.S. bankruptcy code.

The drilling business was hit especially hard because it is capital-intensive rather than labor-intensive, analysts say. Cutting staff -- which Global did - still doesn't reduce what these companies owe each month on multimillion-dollar drilling rigs.

While a majority of Global's creditors in each of three classes voted for the plan, only senior debtholders holding collateral on equipment will emerge with anything close to what they plowed into the company.

Bondholders and common shareholders probably will get less than 10 cents on the dollar, their lawyers say.

"If you assume most (common) shareholders bought stock before Global filed for Chapter 11, they probably bought at something like $10 to $20 a share," Dan Lewis, a Washington attorney who represents the equity holders' committee, said during a hearing late last year. Under the plan, he said, "they will get about 9 cents a share."

Junior debtholders also are getting stung badly, bondholders' attorney Roger Mead of New York said during the same hearing. They will receive an average of 2.8 cents on the dollar, he estimated.

"This is a lousy deal for them," Mead said, although he noted it is not much different than the kind of treatment junior debtholders have received recently in similar bankruptcy cases.

"If Global does not emerge a healthier company, Mead's clients and the common shareholders will be left with worthless paper in the form of new stock and warrants. There's tremendous uncertainty in the energy business right now, and it's very difficult to tell whether this company is going to do well in the future or not."

Luigs said Global "will still leak red ink this year but will show significant positive cash flow in 1989," and he believes his industry is on a slow road to recovery.

"I think that the outlook for the offshore drilling industry in general is for a moderate amount of improvement over at least a couple of years," Luigs said.

Valero directors approve leveraged ESOP plan

SAN ANTONIO (SWN) — The Board of Directors of Valero Energy Corp. has authorized the creation and funding of a leveraged employee stock ownership plan.

Subject to final lender approval, the ESOP will borrow $15 million under a 10-year loan which will be guaranteed by Valero. Loan proceeds will be used to fund purchases of approximately 1.4 million shares, or about five percent of the common shares outstanding.

Stock purchases may be made on the open market or from Valero from time to time at price levels the ESOP Trustee deems to be desirable. Portions of the stock may be purchased prior to funding of the loan.

Valero will make contributions to the ESOP sufficient to fund annual debt service on the ESOP loan and will fund such contributions through corresponding reductions in its contributions to an existing employee thrift plan. The loan to the ESOP is expected to be funded in late February or early March.

According to Bill Greehey, Valero's Chairman of the Board and Chief Executive Officer, "the company's operating performance and income has improved significantly during the past year. The ESOP will not dilute earnings per share but will permit employees to participate in the anticipated improvements in the company's performance and income."

Recycling drive raises $253,000 for battleship

GALVESTON (AP) — A nine-month aluminum can recycling drive over parts of the past two years raised $253,000 to aid in the restoration of the old Battleship Texas, campaign organizers said.

More than 2 million used aluminum cans were collected in the most recent four-month "Save Our Ship" effort that ended Feb. 1, George Cobb, president of Alcoa Recycling Co. said. A similar five-month drive was conducted in 1987.

The cash from the aluminum goes to the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, which operates the battleship at a berth near the San Jacinto Monument near Houston. It is expected to be returned to the berth next fall.

"Battleship Texas served with distinction in two world wars," Cobb said. "But after 40 years in her berth near Houston, she was in need of major structural repairs.

Hunter faces $100,000 fine

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — A Houston lawyer who is the son of a University of Texas regent faces a year in jail and a $100,000 fine following his indictment by a federal grand jury in the fatal shooting of one of the world's few remaining whooping cranes.

Mario Max Yzaguirre, 28, was indicted in Corpus Christi on a charge of violating the Endagered Species Act by a killing a crane in early January near Aransas National Wildlife Refuge north of Corpus Christi.

Texas Parks and Wildlife Department officials have said the department will also seek $11,000 restitution from Yzaguirre, a lawyer with the law firm of Vinson & Elkins.

Yzaguirre, who was indicted last Friday, is the son of Brownsville pharmacist Mario Yzaguirre, a member of the University of Texas board of regents and is a 1986 graduate of the UT School of Law.

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service officials have said the shooting appeared to be a mistake by the hunter.

Fund for victims dwindling

AUSTIN (AP) — The state fund to compensate crime victims is in danger of going broke because more convicted criminals chose prison rather than pay fines, a recent state auditor's report said.

The prisoners know they will only be behind bars for a short period of time because of court-ordered restrictions on prison population, the report said.

The situation results in more crowded prisons and a shortage of funds to compenstate crime victims, according to the report.

At the current rate, the report said, "the fund will be insolvent in late fiscal year 1991," which begins Sept. 30, 1990.

The crime victims' fund was established in 1979 to compensate people who suffer personal injury or the death of a family member because of violent crime.

The primary source of the fund is court costs assessed to people convicted of felonies and most misdemeanors. The current charges are $20 for a felony and $3 to $15 for misdemeanors.

Bridge construction OK'd

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The only Red River bridge into Texas for about 50 miles has been approved for addition to the Oklahoma Transportation Department's construction program.

The bridge, to be located about halfway between the Interstate 35 and U.S. 81 bridges, would be built south of Courtney in Love County. It would be a cooperative project with Texas, with each state picking up half the cost.

It was added to the construction program Monday by the Oklahoma Transportation Commission.

Texas will do the engineering and drawings for the new bridge, transportation officials said. Oklahoma's estimated share of the bridge will be $2.4 million, with an additional $900,000 needed to extend Oklahoma 89 south for 1.6 miles to the bridge

The project was approved Dec. 20 by Texas officials.

Fund raising problem for giant telescope

Smith

Astronomer Harlan Smith said the observatory's usually generous donors have complained that these days they are flooded with requests.

"They say over the last few years that they've had to pick up an enormous amount of social and education expenditures at the same time that the economy has been getting tighter," Smith said.

"But I am genuinely, deeply surprised that no one has appeared to help create one of the largest and most innovative scientific instruments of the decade for so little money."

Smith, a professor of astronomy at UT-Austin, said about $1.1 million remains to be raised. "We're not desperate, but we need it and we need it now."

The telescope, dubbed the Spectroscopic Survey Telescope, or SST, would be the largest of its kind in the world, with almost three times the light-gathering ability of McDonald's largest existing telescope, a 107-inch reflector.

Smith, 64, plans to retire in August after 25 years as director of the observatory on Mount Locke in the Davis Mountains of West Texas.

He said the observatory has banked $400,000 in donations toward its half of the $6 million project since fund-raising efforts began last May. It needs to raise another $1.1 million before UT regents will provide $1.5 million in matching funds.

The remainder of the $6 million is being raised by Pennsylvania State University, which is a partner in building the 320-inch telescope. But Smith said Penn State also is having trouble. He said it has only about $600,000 of its $3 million in the bank.

The new telescope would be less versatile than the classic 107-inch model that was built in the 1960s in cooperation with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. The SST was designed by Penn State astronomers to save money by dispensing with most of the high-cost features of a classical telescope.

Instead of one large main mirror, the SST would have 35 smaller, off-the-shelf mirrors working in conjunction to gather light and reflect it through fiberoptic cables to spectroscopes. Spectroscopes split light into its components, providing information on atomic and molecular composition and the chemical constituents of light from heavenly objects.

Health officials waiting to see if measles outbreak has been curbed

LUBBOCK (AP) — Health officials, who have waged an immunization war to curb a measles outbreak, say the next few days will show if the efforts have been effective.

Since the outbreak of red measles, or rubeola, began Jan. 31, 114 cases have been confirmed, including 96 at Texas Tech University, where the first cases were reported.

Only one new case has been confirmed since Friday in the Lubbock Independent School District, where a total of seven have been diagnosed.

Dr. E. Arnold Isaacson, regional director of the Texas Department of health, said other cases have been reported in Amarillo, Floydada, Hereford and Slaton.

More than 10,000 doses of measles vaccine have been sent from the state health department to the Lubbock area since the outbreak, said Isaacson.

"We've used most of it," he said. "We were supposed to get another 1,000 or so doses (Monday) but it couldn't get out of Austin because of the ice there."

Fighting inflation with interest rates no painless task

By MARILYN GEEWAX
Cox News Service

Inflation is a financial monster that gobbles up savings, scares companies into short-term profit-taking and shreds confidence in the economy.

The quickest way to tame the beast, according to Federal Reserve Board Chairman Alan Greenspan, is to force up interest rates.

But to many workers, especially on construction sites and assembly lines, and to potential home buyers, the cost of slaying the dragon may be too great.

That's because higher interest rates increase the borrowing costs for both consumers and businesses. That discourages shoppers from spending and companies from expanding, thereby reducing the demand for goods and workers. All of that translates into lower prices and wages — but also higher unemployment and bigger mortgage payments.

For the last 10 months, the Federal Reserve Board, the nation's central bank, has been trying to beat down inflation — now about 4.5 percent — by forcing up short-term interest rates. On Thursday, Greenspan told the House Ways and Means Committee that short-term rates are likely to rise this year unless government spending is cut sharply to reduce the demand for goods, thereby lowering inflation.

A report Friday that far more new jobs were created in January than anticipated and that the average hourly wage rose more than half a percent was read by some economists as meaning the Fed will be forced to tighten credit.

Economists outside the Fed, however, are divided on the value of such a fight against inflation, with opponents arguing the battle will be too bloody for too many individuals and businesses.

"Higher interest rates would mean the little guy couldn't buy a house anymore," said Michael Sumichrast, editor of a newsletter called Real Estate Perspectives and retired chief economist for the National Association of Home Builders.

"It would be a disaster for the entire economy.

"Inflation is not something I love — the lower it is, the better," he said. "But you have to look at the overall situation. We need growth and lower interest rates, not a recession."

Sumichrast's opinion is shared by President Bush, who recently told reporters he wouldn't "want to see us move so strongly against the fear of inflation that we impede growth. We have to keep expanding opportunities for the working men and women of this country."

In contrast, Greenspan believes price stability must be the nation's primary economic goal. In a recent speech in Atlanta, Greenspan said, "Inflationary pressures must be contained if we are to avoid the wrenching (price) volatility of the past."

But he did not say at what point the Fed would move to raise interest rates. The Fed can increase borrowing costs by reducing the supply of money available to banks.

Bush has the support of a small and unusual alliance of economists who happen to sit on opposite ends of the political spectrum. While mainstream economists believe inflation is getting too high, the minority, made up of liberal and conservative economists, believes interest rates should be held steady or dropped — even if that means accepting inflation of up to 5 percent a year.

The minority group says the Fed has become too concerned about price increases and too insensitive to the suffering that would result from fighting inflation by manipulating interest rates.

"Given the social costs of slowing the economy, I'd rather have 4.5 percent inflation," said University of Massachusetts labor economist Barry Bluestone. Higher interest rates "would mean all kinds of things could be devastated — the auto and housing industries especially."

Bluestone said higher interest rates probably would cause a recession that would boost unemployment, hurt farmers, depress wages, prevent many families from buying homes and reduce purchases of big-ticket items such as autos.

Those are the traditional concerns of liberals who note that while inflation hurts the banks that lend money and the rich people who save money, the process of fighting inflation with higher interest rates inflicts disproportionate suffering on borrowers, such as home buyers, and blue-collar workers, such as auto assembly line laborers.

But this time, the opponents of higher interest rates also include many conservative economists who note that the biggest borrower in the country is the deficit-riding federal government.

"The more you slow down the economy, the bigger the deficit would get," said Georgetown University professor Paul Craig Roberts, a "supply-sider" who served as assistant Treasury secretary in 1981-82. Conversely, lower interest rates would make the deficit less onerous by reducing the government's interest payments and would boost tax revenues by encouraging economic growth.

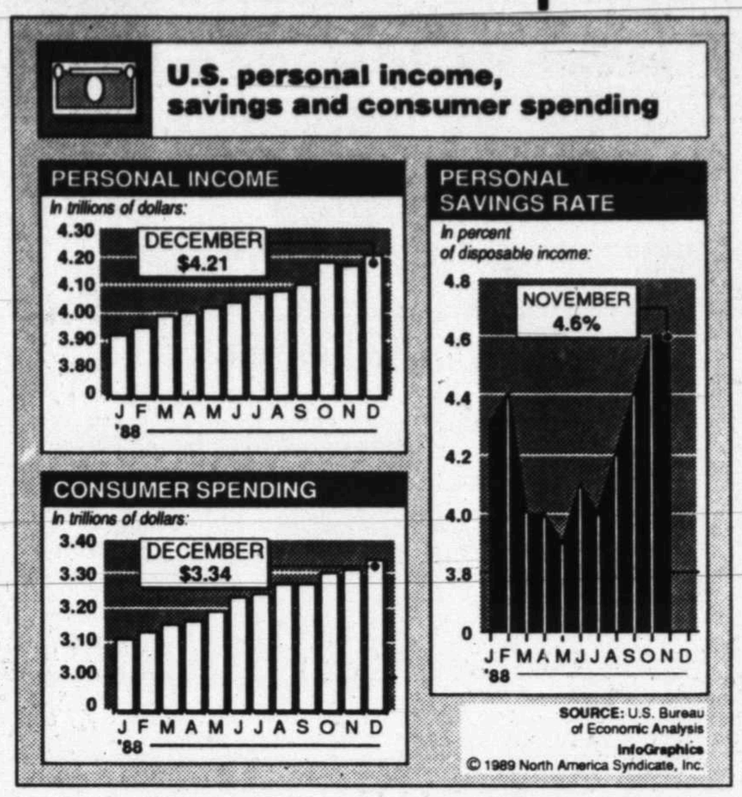

The U.S. government currently spends far more than it takes in each year through taxes. As a result, it must borrow about $140 billion a year — and pay interest on those loans.

If interest rates were to rise, the budget deficit would grow tremendously because of the higher cost of carrying debt. In addition, higher interest rates would slow the economy, which would mean fewer tax dollars could be collected from personal income and corporate taxes.

As the deficit expanded, demands might grow for tax increases to stop the red ink — and the thought of new taxes has some conservatives howling.

Roberts noted that Greenspan has allowed the central bank to boost short-term interest rates steadily for nearly a year.

"Greenspan's policy is very harmful because it creates a continuing deficit impasse that almost surely will lead to higher taxes," he said. "The Fed has made it 10 times harder to solve the deficit.

The upswing in personal income, consumer spending and personal savings could be curbed by higher interest rates.

LEADERS

"The best thing is that the president is moving quickly to do something about the thrift problems," Pistor said.

"I question the need to raise premiums as much as is being proposed in order to ensure the soundness of the FDIC fund," First City's Franklin said. "But if that's what it's going to take to get banks and thrifts under similar capital requirements and accounting rules, then it's probably the thing to do."

Bush's plan also calls for the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., which insures banks, to merge with the Federal Savings & Loan Insurance Corp, which insures thrifts, and to be overseen by a new five-member board. Bankers received assurances, however, that the two insurance funds would remain separate.

"I'm pleased his proposal does not include combining the two funds," said Darryl Pounds, former president of First City National Bank in Midland, now chairman of First City Bank Dallas.

That sentiment was echoed by Murphy of NCNB. "We have no problem with merging the two agencies, but the announced intent to maintain separate funds is crucial to the plan," he said.

"Focusing financial regulations makes sense, as does bringing both groups under a single regulatory umbrella," said David Jones. "But whether this is the right umbrella remains to be seen."

While "leveling the playing field," somewhat among financial institutions, the "fly in the oinment," according to Franklin, is that other deposit-gathering institutions with no insurance or reserve requirments, such as brokerages are not addressed by the Bush plan.

Those institutions with whom banks and thrifts must compete for funds "do not bear the increased cost of operation," resulting from high premium costs — which virtually double for banks over the next couple of years from the current 83 cents per $1,000 to $1.50 beginning in 1991 — Jones explained.

A separate three-member board chaired by the secretary of the Treasury would control the spending of new money raised to close or sell the 350 insolvent S&Ls remaining open. That action seemingly puts an end to the Southwest Plan, a Federal Home Loan Bank Board-administered program to shore up the troubled thrift industry.

At the FHLBB's Dallas office, focal point for administration of many of the Southwest Plan's consolidations, spokesman David Colgren said, "I really can't comment on the President's plan until we've had a chance to look at it."

"We were pleased to hear that he (Bush) made a concerted effort to study the problem, to come up with a proposal and announce it today," said Russ Cobler, a spokesman for San Antonio Savings Association, one of 350 troubled thrifts Bush's plan is designed to help.

But Tom S. King, executive vice president of the Texas Savings & Loan League, said Bush's plan does nothing to help the state's real estate problems.

"Nobody has written the story about the thousands of homeowners and borrowers that have mailed in the keys and made the institutions foreclose on them," King said. "There is fault around.

"The administration had to present some kind of plan so it could lick its lips and say, 'No new taxes.'"

"We are pleased that he, very strongly at the beginning and end of press conference, spoke of the full faith and credit of government behind thrifts," Cobler said.

"In all the time since creation of the deposit insurance, savers have not lost one dollar of insured deposits and I am determined that they never will," Bush said.

FRAUD

The extra people "would double in general terms the criminal division's field investment into this kind of activity," Runkel said.

After he took office last summer, Thornburgh sought a briefing on the savings and loan crisis and "as a result of that briefing obtained a specific assessment of need," Runkel said.

"This $50 million was a response to that request by the department to go after fraudulent activity," Runkel said.

Runkel estimated that about 200 cases of savings-and-loan fraud either are being investigated by the Justice Department or have been reported to federal authorities. These include cases "where we have some suspicion or we have reason to believe" that fraud occurred, he said.

FED

government revenues, higher interest payments to finance the $2.7 trillion national debt and a larger budget deficit.

"Everybody knows the administration's economic forecast can't work," said Michael Evans, head of a Washington forecasting firm. "Greenspan is running the economy and Bush isn't."

The administration has been trying to convince the Fed that its worries about inflation are overblown. Bush himself said last week that Greenspan was "more concerned about inflation than I am right now."

But the Fed will likely withstand the political pressure for a looser monetary policy, analysts said, especially in view of business statistics showing an economy with tight labor markets and industries operating at peak capacity.

Fed officials hope to slow the economy enough to ward off another inflationary spiral without dampening demand so much that it risks a recession.

Roger Brinner, senior economist at Data Resources Inc., said he believed the Fed would be able to achieve this "soft landing."

"I don't think there will be a recession through 1990 because the Fed acted early to fight inflation and continues to avoid any panic moves which would mean very large and sudden increases in interest rates," Brinner said.

Continental Airlines pays for place on board game

NEW YORK — The Reading Railroad paid nothing for its place in "Monopoly," but half a century later Continental Airlines paid $30,000 to appear in a new children's game.

"It's Only Money," the new board game scheduled for national release this year, boasts a board riddled with brand names, including those of two casinos — Harrah's in Atlantic City and the Riviera in Las Vegas — and three liquors: Courvoisier, cognac and Seagram's Crown Royal and 7 Crown whiskies.

Although neither the box, the board nor the instructions disclose it, each of the 25 companies whose products are listed paid $30,000 for its spot on the board.

"This project is based on the concept of retention marketing — getting your product into the customer's home in a fun way," said Eric S. Medney, the president of ESM Marketing Group Inc., the Long Island company that created the game. "You've got hard sell and soft sell. This is fun sell."

"It's Only Money" also includes a book of coupons from many of the sponsoring companies. As an added enticement, people who buy the game — which is structured like a trip through an American shopping mall — can enter a sweepstakes in which the grand prize is a $300,000 Florida condominium and a "shopping spree" where the winner must spend $100,000 in 24 hours.

Solidarity leader Lech Walesa takes his seat Monday in Warsaw as long-awaited "round-table" talks begin with authorities. The talks will concern the future of Solidarity and the course of political and economic reforms in Poland.

Walesa still skeptical of government talks

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Government and opposition leaders at historic talks on Poland's future are voicing optimism, but Solidarity leader Lech Walesa remained wary today and said some of his followers consider him naive.

"The road to the table was difficult. Many people think it doesn't make sense," Walesa told a legal rally of 500 workers.

"Many say bluntly: 'Lech, you believed in 1980. You were naive. And now you are still naive.' My answer is: 'I didn't believe in 1980 and I don't believe now,'" Walesa said of the 1980 agreement legalizing the independent trade union.

Solidarity spokesman Janusz Onyszkiewicz appeared more optimistic and told reporters today that the union now can work with the government.

"We assume that people who are responsible for implementation of martial law and all measures resulting from this martial law changed their minds and that this is a genuine change based on their assessment of reality," said Onyszkiewicz.

He was among several opposition delegates who sat down Monday with officials who interned them during the December 1981 crackdown that suppressed Solidarity. They debated conditions for the free trade union movement's reinstatement and possible opposition role in government.

It is the first time since the communists consolidated power with Soviet backing after World War II that a cross-section of the opposition has had formal talks with authorities over how to run Poland and salvage an economy in crisis.

Fifty-seven delegates representing the opposition, the Communist Party, the government and the Roman Catholic Church met for three hours Monday and agreed to divide into three working groups beginning Wednesday.

One group will discuss economic and social policy, one trade unions and the third political reforms, said a joint statement.

Opposition spokesmen say they expect the real work of the negotiations to take place in these groups — and to last about six weeks.

The chief official at the talks was Politburo member and Interior Minister Gen. Czeslaw Kiszczak, a key player in the 1981 crackdown. Walesa led a 25-member group representing Solidarity and other opposition groups.

Kiszczak said lifting the ban on Solidarity, which was outlawed in October 1982, is possible only if the talks produce broad agreement.

"If we work out at the round table and officially announce to society a confirmed consensus on the idea of non-confrontational elections as well as support for planned political and economic reforms, there will be an immediate possibility" to lift the ban, he said during Monday's opening session.

The authorities have indicated they are willing to allow the opposition seats in parliament as a minority party, but the opposition does not believe the communists intend to share power.

Walesa advocated quick legalization.

"We demand Solidarity. We have the right to it," he said in a blunt speech following Kiszczak's.

> "We demand Solidarity. We have the right to it."
> — Solidarity leader Lech Walesa

Authorities agreed in advance that the talks could result in reinstating Solidarity. In exchange, they seek an opposition endorsement of painful reforms that could increase prices and lead to layoffs if outmoded plants are closed.

"This table is surrounded by social hope, but also distrust," said Walesa. "There will be people who will not accept what we work out here. We must know this and accept this."

Walesa, quoted by the state PAP news agency, blamed the country's economic and political crisis on the lack of freedoms.

"We know the country is in ruins. But it has not been ruined by gnomes — but by a power structure that has deprived people of their rights and wasted the fruits of their labor," Walesa said.

"The time of social and political monopoly is ending. We need a restructuring that will turn the one-party state into a state of the nation and the society," he said.

The economic crisis has spawned 60 percent inflation and chronic consumer shortages. Poland is trying to cope with a $39 billion foreign debt, an obsolete industrial base and the exodus of talented young people to the West.

Government spokesman Jerzy Urban told a news conference after Monday's talks that authorities were satisfied with the start. The speeches "showed a rather convergent way of thinking about the future and about the changes necessary in Poland," he said.

Paraguayans seek more time before elections

WORLD

ASUNCION, Paraguay (AP) — Opposition politicians who have for years pushed for free and fair elections say coup leader Gen. Andres Rodriguez's setting of elections for May 1 will not give them time to organize campaigns.

Stroessner

Some say they believe Rodriguez set the early date precisely because the opposition cannot possibly be ready by then to mount a serious challenge to the long-entrenched ruling party.

Rodriguez, who ousted dictator Gen. Alfredo Stroessner in a bloody coup last week, dissolved parliament Monday and set the May 1 date for presidential and congressional elections.

At the first presidential news conference Paraguayans can remember, the 65-year-old Rodriguez denied rumors of his involvement with the drug trade, saying they "were spread by people trying to defame me."

He said Paraguay, reputedly a major transit point for cocaine, would crack down on narcotics trafficking and cooperate in international anti-drug campaigns, including those of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration.

Rodriguez also denied reports that as many as 300 people died the coup. He said the dead and wounded together did not exceed 50.

Upon taking power Friday, Rodriguez promptly promised democratic reforms. But the opposition expressed skepticism about his hasty calling of elections.

"I personally can't even be a candidate for anything because I'm not registered" to vote, said Domingo Laino, a former political exile and leader of what is thought to be Paraguay's biggest opposition group, the Authentic Radical Liberal Party. "Our people are not registered" either, he said.

Laino suggested the May 1 election date "could be interpreted as a trap" set by the ruling Colorado Party, which after 41 consecutive years in power is rich and well-organized.

Stroessner, now in exile in Brazil, ruled Paraguay for nearly 35 years after seizing power in a 1954 coup and was the Colorado Party's candidate every five years in elections widely believed to be fraudulent.

Rodriguez, who was Stroessner's second-in-command, was asked at the news conference whether he would be the next Colorado Party candidate.

"The Colorado Party, not I, selects the candidate," he said, though adding: "It is every Paraguayan's duty to serve his country. Being president is a great honor. If I am called to serve, I will."

In setting the election date, Rodriguez cited a constitutional clause stating that in the event of a president's resignation, incapacitating illness or death, the provisional president must call for elections within three months.

Carmen de Lara Castro, a noted human rights activist and member of Laino's party, said May 1 "may be what the constitution calls for, but it is really too fast and will only favor the government party because the other parties are not prepared."

The Colorado Party, with 1.4 million members, counts on an extensive political machine that extends to the smallest towns in the countryside.

Three of the four parties in the opposition umbrella group National Accord, including Laino's, were deemed illegal by Stroessner and therefore none of their members are included on voter registration lists.

Laino said the little time that remains before May 1 is hardly sufficient to campaign, let alone register voters.

Japanese stock scandal claims another politician

Tsukamoto

The so-called Recruit scandal has shaken public confidence in Japan's government. Three members of Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita's Cabinet have resigned because of links to the affair, as have more than a dozen other government officials, business leaders and media executives.

Saburo Tsukamoto, 61, chairman of the Democratic Socialist Party, stepped down today amid pressure from party members who want to distance the party from the scandal. He said he was not guilty of any wrongdoing and was quitting for the party' sake.

"If my resignation can bring gains for the party, I decided it is better for me to withdraw now," he told a news conference. "I would like to apologize to my colleagues and to the people for troubles caused by my involvement in the Recruit scandal."

"I believe my innocence was widely understood by my supporters, but I also could not overlook the fact that some of my colleagues are concerned about the next election," he said, referring to upcoming voting in July for half the seats in the House of Councillors, the upper house of parliament.

The Democratic Socialist Party, with 29 of 512 seats, is the third largest opposition bloc after the Japan Socialist Party and the Komeito, the Clean Government Party.

Since last summer, the Recruit scandal has become a subject of national debate as it highlighted the sometimes dubious connections between business and politics.

Tsukamoto bought 10,000 unlisted shares in Recruit-Cosmos Co., a real estate subsidiary of the information-based conglomerate Recruit Co., through his secretary, and earned about $77,000 by selling them immediately after the company went public in 1986.

Pressure had mounted on Tsukamoto to resign because he was the only one of four opposition politicians linked to the scandal who had not taken responsibility for their roles.

Israelis expect harsh criticism from U.S. over rights record

By JONATHAN BRODER
Hearst News Service

JERUSALEM — Senior Israeli officials say they are bracing themselves for the most severe U.S. criticism to date of Israeli human rights violations in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

The officials also expect a further erosion of support among the Bush administration, Congress and U.S. Jewry over Israel's attempts to put down the Palestinian uprising.

One official, asking not to be identified, said some of the $3 billion in U.S. military and economic assistance could be endangered following the State Department's annual human rights report, to be released this week.

Adding to the pressure are forthcoming trips to Washington by Foreign Minister Moshe Arens, due early next month, and by Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, who is expected to present a plan to revive Middle East peace talks when he visits in March or April.

Some of Shamir's aides believe he can buy time because of a reluctance on the part of the Bush administration to immediately take on a complex peace initiative that could end in failure.

Foreign Ministry officials, however, say Shamir's trip will be a "landmark" visit that will determine the direction of Israeli-U.S relations.

"If Shamir presents ideas that the Americans respect, then everything will be forgotten," said Foreign Ministry spokesman Alon Liel. "If he fails to satisfy them, then we could be facing serious problems in our relations."

Shamir has pledged to present Washington with an Israeli peace plan but he has refused to reveal any details. This week, however, Shamir delivered a defiant speech in Tel Aviv which he said was aimed at 'those who believe that ... we will obey American dictates, even if it means national suicide."

Shamir declared, "There will never be a Palestinian state. There is no power on earth that can force us to accept it. The government of Israel is not susceptible to pressure of any kind."

But Western diplomats say the complex relations between the U.S. and Israel are likely to change as the warming of relations between the U.S. and the Soviet Union erodes Israel's strategic importance.

"I don't think American policy is going to become anti-Israeli," said one Western European ambassador. "But it's just not going to be so pro-Israeli anymore."

A major rift developed in December when the United States began a dialogue with the Palestine Liberation Organization. The dialogue, Washington's first with the PLO in 14 years, has established a parallel track in U.S. Middle East diplomacy, alongside its longstanding relations with Israel.

While Israel has been unsuccessful in its attempts to convince Washington to halt the talks, the United States has tried to reassure Jerusalem that it has not abandoned Israel or sanctioned the creation of an independent Palestinian state.

At the same time, however, Washington continues to insist that Israel surrender occupied Arab territory in exchange for peace. Shamir's offer of autonomy to the Palestinians under terms of the 1978 Camp David now are considered obsolete by both Washington and the Arabs.

A sign of Israel's diminished influence in Washington was Jerusalem's recent failure to persuade the United States to coordinate their positions before opening any Middle East peace talks. Diplomatic sources said Deputy Foreign Minister Benyamin Netanyahu traveled to Washington last month to secure such an understanding, but U.S. National Security Adviser Brent Scowcroft had turned him down.

Another major worry here is the erosion of support among organized American Jewry. American Jews, unhappy with Israel's hardline stand on political and religious issues, have not challenged Washington's dialogue with the PLO. Officials here say this widening rift could harm Israel's battle to block planned U.S. arms sale to Arab countries.

"Israel used to be the center of faith and community among American Jews, but the policies of the government have shattered this," said Michael Price, a member of a high-level delegation from the American Jewish Committee now visiting Israel.

Israeli officials also note with dismay the growing political acumen and media savvy of Arab organizations in the United States. The office of the U.S. Special Trade Representative recently decided to accept a petition filed by the Arab Anti-Discrimination Committee (ADC) charging Israeli violations of labor rights against Palestinian workers from the occupied territories. Hearings could result in efforts to lift the preferential status Israel now has for receiving certain U.S. exports.

When the State Department releases its 1988 human rights report, it is expected to say that "widespread and consistent" violations of human rights take place in Israel.

The State Department report, based on official Israeli statistics and detailed field work by Israeli, Palestinian and international human rights organizations, says that between Jan. 1 and Dec. 31, 1988, Israel killed 366 Palestinians, wounded more than 20,000, arrested 12,000, at one point held 2,500 without charge, deported 36 for political reasons, demolished 135 homes and sealed another 40 homes as punishments, in violation of the Fourth Geneva Convention.

The report also will note other Israeli violations, including incidents of torture, denial of fair public trials, limiting of free speech and press, and denial of freedom of travel, human right activists say.

The 350th Parachute Regiment returns home to the Soviet Union Monday, as its tanks cross the Friendship Bridge that spans the Amu River, the border between Afghanistan and the U.S.S.R.

Official says up to 15,000 Soviets died in Afghanistan

MOSCOW (AP) — A Foreign Ministry official said today up to 15,000 Soviet troops were killed in Afghanistan, 2,000 more than the last reported figure and an indication of heavy losses the Kremlin incurred during waning days of its intervention.

"It doesn't mean that during the last months we had the bloodiest period of the war in Afghanistan," Yuri K. Alexeyev, head of the ministry's Middle East Department, insisted to reporters.

But he added: "We had shellings by the opposition of the cities ... and a lot of civilians died, and of course Soviet servicemen."

After they began their withdrawal last May 15, Soviet forces had to rely increasingly on Afghan government troops to protect them from guerrilla attacks. The pullout, brokered by the United Nations, is to be completed next Wednesday.

The last report on casualties was from Soviet Gen. Alexei D. Lizichev. He told a Moscow news conference May 25 that 13,310 Soviet troops had been killed, 35,478 wounded and 311 were missing. He said his figures applied from Dec. 27, 1979, when Soviet troops and tanks entered the Afghan war, until May 1, 1988.

Also at today's news conference, Igor A. Rogachev, a deputy Soviet foreign minister, reiterated that the pullout of Soviet troops from Afghanistan will be completed before next week's deadline.

"By Feb. 15, not a single Soviet soldier will remain in Afghanistan," he declared. Nor will Soviet warplanes fly to the country after that date, he said.

He added, however, that supply planes will continue crossing the border. The youth newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda reported that by Friday, 3,500 tons of flour were brought into the Afghan capital, Kabul, which is suffering food and fuel shortages because of a blockade by Moslem guerrillas. The paper said 3,475 tons of ammunition also were flown into one Afghan airport.

South Africa cracks down on extremists

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The government Monday cracked down for the first time on the country's most powerful white extremist group, banning the display of firearms at meetings of the Afrikaner Resistance Movement.

Law and Order Minister Adriaan Vlok imposed the ban on the neo-Nazi group under the same emergency regulations used to restrict many anti-apartheid movements.

Meetings of the resistance movement, known by its Afrikaans initials as the AWB, were "characterized by emotion-laden speeches ... in which remarks about the use of violence were uttered," Vlok said.

"Often, statements are made at such gatherings which disrupt the relationship between the different races and kindle a climate of animosity and polarization," he said.

The movement was founded in 1973 and does not disclose its membership, but regularly draws thousands of whites to its rallies. Many members wear swastika-like emblems on their khaki uniforms, and the group's leader, Eugene TerreBlanche, often ends fiery speeches with a Hitler-style salute.

At a leadership meeting Jan. 21 in Pretoria, where TerreBlanche loyalists repudiated a challenge to his leadership, the chief instructor of the the group's paramilitary unit was on guard outside the auditorium with an automatic rifle slung over his shoulder.

Vlok's statement said dissension within the movement "has increased the possibility of violence."

The minister also said the government was considering broader steps, including a ban on possession of weapons at all political and cultural gatherings.

WORLD IN BRIEF

A neighborhood samba group takes part in Rio de Janeiro's famous carnival parade early Monday. Eighteen top groups, some with more than 5,000 members, compete in the two-night parade, considered the highlight of Brazilian carnival.

Brazilians take up learning at two-night samba schools

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Carnival hit a heated high point in Brazil with a burst of bikinis and a mass samba-in-the-streets.

Millions of Brazilians shed their worries and much of their clothes to take part in the four-day dance of pre-Lenten debauchery that ends on Ash Wednesday. The climax was the so-called samba schools, a two-night exhibition that concluded Monday night.

The schools are actually neighborhood groups from the poor districts. The top groups have more than 5,000 members, most decked out in glittering rhinestone bikinis or luxurious costumes in a king-for-a-day fantasy.

The samba-school parade began Sunday night along the six-block-long grandstands known as the "Sambadrome" and built specially for the carnival event. The 18 top groups competed for a cash prize based on costumes, floats, rhythm, and the special samba written for each school's theme of the year.

Notorious American denied bond

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — American John Hull, a well-known supporter of Nicaraguan rebels, remained in custody for drug and weapons charges Monday after a court denied his request for release on bond.

Britain urged to alter Nazi laws

LONDON (AP) — Residents of Britain who are suspected of being Nazi war criminals could be tried quickly if the government enacted simple changes in the law, a parliamentary committee said Monday.

Nazi-hunters have accused Britain of delaying action on fugitive Nazis and their collaborators, including a Lithuanian-born man the Simon Wiesenthal Center of Los Angeles says was involved in killing thousands of Jews.

The War Crimes Group, with members from all parties, said British laws could be amended within six months to give courts jurisdiction over war crimes committed abroad by people who were not British citizens at the time.

Parliament has amended laws to allow prosecution of hijackers, terrorists and others who committed "sufficiently grave" crimes abroad and later obtained citizenship, the committee said.

its dialogue with the PLO, told Israel's armed forces radio that Palestinians who sought dialogue with Israel have been assassination targets.

"In the last month, five Palestinians have been killed by this terror," he said. "It seems to me that whoever wants to recognize facts should have no illusions about the organization we are speaking about."

Arens' comments came after Israel formally asked the United States to end its contacts with the Palestine Liberation Organization, claiming its leader, Yasser Arafat, violated promises to renounce terrorism.

U.S.-backed private high school reborn in Soweto

By ANDREW TORCHIA

SOWETO, South Africa (AP) — Hundreds of new pupils have entered the battered classrooms of Pace Community College, signaling the rebirth of a private high school that was once a showpiece of U.S. investment in black education.

When Pace opened in 1982, the $6-million, tan brick building gleamed like a well-endowed institution in a wealthy American suburb. Despite the grassy, 22-acre campus separating it from Soweto's dirt streets and shabby bungalows, the school now seems to belong to an inner-city slum.

Offering commercial studies as an alternative to Soweto's rundown state schools, Pace suffered during the 1984-87 period of nationwide black unrest and school boycotts against apartheid. Militants advocating "people's education" tagged Pace as elitist. Politics and violence distracted the students and few passed their exams. The school closed for several months.

Principals came and went, vandals invaded the building, U.S. companies that had built the school withdrew their support, the staff served without pay, and enrollment shrank.

As the new term began Jan. 25, the roof leaked and the telephone didn't work. Toilets and lockers were broken. Books, chairs and teachers were scarce.

Two derelict cars stood in the driveway. Weeds had grown waist-high in the tennis courts. A hand-written note taped on a classroom door recalled an extracurricular struggle: "Don't push us, turkeys, 'cause you'll never get away with it."

But Pace has human assets: Wilkinson Kambule, 68, the new principal, and Lekgau Mathabathe, 63, chairman of a new school board composed entirely of Soweto residents. Both were school principals in Soweto in 1976, and from their schools came leaders of student riots against Afrikaans-language instruction imposed by the white-minority government.

Both resigned to support the student protest, Kambule becoming a university mathematics teacher, Mathabathe joining a food-processing company.

Kambule retains a reputation as an inspirational teacher who gets results, and his arrival at Pace in mid-1988 was particularly welcomed by Sowetans.

"Parents have confidence. Children started coming back from private schools in Johannesburg," Kambule said in an interview. "I'm budgeting for the full number of 600 students and I've had to send hundreds away."

SPELLING BEE 1989

School spelling champions from Midland, Martin, Glasscock and Upton counties will compete for the top prize of an all-expenses-paid trip to the National Spelling Bee in Washington, D.C.

This daily column on words, their spellings, meanings and origins will be published through April 14. These words are typical of those used in bees but may not necessarily be used in competition.

snobbery — (noun) Someome committing the act of "snobbery" would be acting "snobbish" and looking down on those who they feel are not their social equals. While the word's origin is hazy, the root word "snob" was a derogatory British word for "shoemaker" or "cobbler." One source claims that in the 18th century, students at Cambridge University used the term "snob" to refer to townspeople, who were looked upon as lower class. Eventually in the middle of the 19th century the word "snob" took on its modern meaning.
