One way or another

When you're only 3 years old, you have to learn to be resourceful. Michiel Hall, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Hall, didn't let a tall fountain stop him as he climbed to the top to get a sip of water at Lancaster Park Friday.

Bigger numbers don't alarm economists

WASHINGTON (AP) — Inflation at the wholesale level surged to an annual rate of 13.3 percent in June as energy costs rose at their sharpest pace in more than a year, the government reported Friday.

Even with June's big jump, inflation for the first half of the year was running at a modest 2.5 percent, calculated annually, officials of the Labor Department said as they released the new report on the Producer Price Index for finished goods. That compares with a 7 percent gain for all of last year and 11.8 percent in 1980.

Economists cautioned that last month's increase — the biggest since March 1981 — wasn't a sign the economy was returning to the persistent double-digit inflation levels of past years. And the White House noted that the index rose only 3.5 percent from June 1981 to June 1982.

"We've always said it's best to look at these figures, rather than at month-to-month fluctuations," said deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes. But Speakes has found significance in the monthly figures, however, when they were different. On April 9, for example, when the report for March marked a decline in prices, he called it "further evidence we are bringing down the rate of inflation."

Jack Lavery, chief economist for the Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith brokerage, said, "I don't think today's statistics should raise legitimate consternation about any return to double-digit inflation (for the year)."

Oil museum director speaks on worth of area museums

This Sunday's "Speaking Out" columnist is Homer T. Fort, executive vice president and director of the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum. He discusses Midland's museums and why he believes visiting them is a worthwhile experience.

L. Decker Dawson is featured in Sunday's FOCUS. Dawson works with computers and the latest seismic technology and talks about the decreasing amount of work his company is experiencing in the Permian Basin and throughout the country.

"Speaking Out" can be found on the Viewpoint Page, opposite the Editorial Page, and FOCUS is a regular feature of the Energy-Business Section. Look for both in

The Midland Reporter-Telegram

Fort Dawson

"It's a short-lived phenomenon," he said. "The energy component has been quite volatile."

Added Thomas Thomson, chief economist at San Francisco's Crocker National Bank: "I don't think (the new report) should be viewed with too much alarm. We knew some of the declining numbers in the spring were not sustainable."

The June increase was "expected, explainable and doesn't say anything" about the overall trend of lower inflation rates, Thomson said.

Economists are predicting inflation at the wholesale level will run in the range of 5 percent to 6 percent for the whole year.

In its new report, the Labor Department said the Producer Price Index for finished goods rose a seasonally adjusted 1 percent in June.

The index was unchanged in May and gained a tiny 0.1 percent in April, after falling in the two previous months.

If prices rose for 12 straight months at June's rate, the yearly gain would amount to 13.3 percent after seasonal adjustment. The reported annual rate is based on a more precise calculation of monthly price changes than what is made public.

Energy prices jumped 4.1 percent in June, the sharpest rise since March 1981, the department said. They had fallen in each of the five previous months, tumbling overall at an annual rate of 27.5 percent.

June's boost was propelled by sharply higher gasoline and heating oil prices. Gasoline prices climbed 4.1 percent, heating oil costs were up 7 percent.

Shultz looks forward to 'opportunities'

WASHINGTON (AP) — George P. Shultz was sworn in Friday as secretary of state, impressed by the difficulty of the world problems he faces but "even more conscious of the opportunities...to do something wonderful."

Shultz, 61, who gave up the leadership of the worldwide Bechtel Group to join President Reagan's Cabinet, had won unanimous Senate confirmation less than 18 hours earlier to succeed Alexander M. Haig Jr. as the nation's chief diplomat.

"Welcome to the team," Reagan told him during a brief ceremony in the sweltering Rose Garden outside the White House. "From now on, I think I'll have a few things for you to do."

"America has always been blessed in times such as these with citizens of stature who come forward to make certain the job gets done and done right," Reagan said. "George Shultz follows in that tradition."

Shaping American foreign policy is the most awesome responsibility of the presidency, Reagan said. "I look forward to his counsel."

After the oath of office was administered by Attorney General William French Smith, Shultz kissed his wife as he embarked on his third Cabinet post. He had been secretary of labor and treasury secretary for Richard M. Nixon.

Then he promised his new boss he would "muster every ounce of energy and intelligence and dedication...and pour all of it into performance on this job."

Shultz stayed at the White House after the swearing-in to greet a number of old friends on hand for the ceremony and then to sit in on his first National Security Council meeting.

Although the council's proceedings are secret, it was understood that one issue discussed was whether to extend a long-term grain sales agreement with the Soviet Union.

The new secretary then took his family to the State Department for lunch. One official said privately that Shultz planned a series of meetings Friday and Saturday with key department officials to get to know them and to talk about problem areas in U.S. foreign policy.

As he prepared for his new position and the Senate confirmation hearings, Shultz told Reagan, he was "impressed with the importance and depth and difficulty of the problems that we face."

But also, Mr. President, as you so characteristically do, I think it essential that we take that coin that has 'Problems' as its label on one side and turn it over and see that on the other side is the word 'opportunity.'

"I certainly want to approach this task fully conscious and realistic about the problems, but even more conscious of the opportunities which, with creative and constructive effort, we may be able to do something wonderful with."

Reagan made light of the criticism he has received for picking a second Cabinet officer from the executive ranks of Bechtel, where Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger served as a vice president.

Shultz was nominated by Reagan after Haig resigned on June 25.

Iraq vows retaliation against Iranian shelling

By The Associated Press

Iraq claimed Friday that it shattered two more Iranian attempts to reach its port city of Basra in heavy fighting and warned of "firm and strong" retaliation for Iranian shelling of civilian targets.

Iran reported Iraq sent its warplanes deep inside Iran, bombing a Moslem prayer center and other non-military areas and killing at least 75 people.

In the Iranian capital of Tehran, crowds took to the streets to show support for Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's "Operation Ramadan" against Iraq. Khomeini called on the Arab world's Moslems to stage strikes and other protests to force their leaders to mobilize "military and economic weapons" to fight Israel and the United States.

Iranian forces attempted an advance on Iraqi positions east of Basra late Thursday night but were repulsed and 230 Iraqis were killed, Iraq's news agency reported. It said a later Iranian advance near the central sector of the front, east of the Iraqi village of el-Tib, also was thwarted and 39 Iraqis killed.

An Iranian war communique carried by the Islamic Republic News Agency said Iranian forces had "successfully smashed" Iraqi counteroffensives and claimed to have inflicted 600 casualties and destroyed many Soviet-supplied T-72 tanks.

"Our forces continue their operation this morning, inflicting a heavy defeat on the enemy and completely destroying 56 enemy tanks and armored personnel carriers," it said, adding at least 200 Iraqi soldiers were killed or wounded.

The conflicting claims could not be independently verified as both countries have barred foreign reporters from the battle zones.

Iraq's news agency said at least 73 people were killed and 200 wounded during the Iraqi air raids on Hamadan, which is about 180 miles southwest of Tehran, or about midway between the capital and the Iraqi border. A Moslem prayer center was among the targets bombed, Iran said. Two people died and about 30 were hurt in Islamabad, another west-central Iranian city, when Iraqi bombers demolished a school, Iran said.

An Iraqi communique said Iranian shelling on Khanaqin causing an unspecified number of civilian casualties. It warned Iran to stop the shelling, saying its reply will be "firm and strong."

Iran invaded Iraq late Tuesday with the apparent objective of taking Basra, a refinery and port city on the Shatt-al-Arab waterway near the Iranian border and about 300 miles south of Iraq's capital.

U.S. intelligence analysts speaking privately said the Iranians advanced about six miles into Iraq before they met heavy resistance and were forced to retreat about four miles.

U.S. officials said earlier that about 100,000 troops from each side were involved in the fighting. Iraq claims to have killed nearly 5,000 Iraqis in the four days of fighting, while Iran says it killed or wounded 800 Iraqis and captured 791 others.

At a State Department briefing in Washington, a senior U.S. official said the United States might hold joint military exercises with Persian Gulf nations that feel threatened by Khomeini's regime. But he added, "We are not looking at the use of U.S. troops at this time."

Khomeini's son Ahmed whipped up crowds in Tehran by reading a message from his father on "Jerusalem International Day," which Khomeini three years ago ordered observed on the last Friday of Ramadan, the Moslem holy month of sunrise-to-sunset fasting. Jerusalem is holy to Moslems as well as Christians and Jews and Khomeini has vowed to "liberate" it.

War's results worry official

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Iran-Iraq war poses "potential serious consequences" for the United States, particularly if a triumphant Iran attempts to dominate pro-Western states in the Persian Gulf region, a senior U.S. official said Friday.

The official held out the possibility that the United States might engage in joint military exercises with nations that feel threatened by Iran, but added that no such requests have been received.

The informant briefed reporters at the State Department amid intelligence reports that the Iraqi Army has pushed invading Iranian forces back after initial Iranian successes.

Although Iranian troops still hold positions inside Iraq, the Iraqis appear to be putting up a stronger fight than they have previously in the 22-month war, according to the reports.

U.S. analysts who insisted on anonymity said a major Iranian thrust from the north toward the important Iraqi port of Basra was possible within 48 hours.

Those analysts said a "significant" Iranian force has been spotted just inside Iranian territory in addition to the main force that invaded Iraq from the east — some 20,000 to 30,000 men, mostly infantry.

Iraq appears to have numerical superiority in tanks and planes but based on the Iraqi defeats earlier in the war, the analysts said they were uncertain whether those advantages could withstand a major Iranian drive.

The senior official, who asked not to be identified, said the primary American concern over the long haul is Iran's intentions toward the other, largely pro-Western states in the Gulf area: Saudi Arabia, Bahrain, Oman, United Arab Emirates, Kuwait and Qatar.

Among these states, all but Bahrain produce oil and all could be vulnerable to Iranian retaliation because of their financial support — estimated at $20 billion — for Iraq since the start of the war.

According to the official, the United States does not anticipate an outright invasion of these nations by Iran in support of its announced goal of exporting its revolution elsewhere in the area.

But, he said, there is "certainly a deep concern about the air- and sea-strike capability of Iran against the Gulf countries. There has to be concern about the political pressure that a militarily dominant Iran could exert on the area."

The official noted that there was an abortive, Iranian-backed coup attempt late last year in Bahrain led by Shiite Moslems loyal to Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

Rev. Moon sentenced to 18 months in jail, fined $25,000

NEW YORK (AP) — The Rev. Sun Myung Moon, spiritual leader of 3 million Unification Church members worldwide, was sentenced Friday to serve 18 months in prison and pay a $25,000 fine for tax evasion.

Moon's top financial aide, Takuru Kamiyama, 40, was sentenced to six months in prison and fined $5,000 by U.S. District Court Judge Gerard L.

Goettel. Lawyers said both convictions would be appealed.

"We have faith and we have trust that this will be reversed," said Mose Durst, president of the Unification Church of America. If Moon goes to jail, he said, all religious leaders will have reason to fear.

Moon, 62, sat impassively during Friday's proceedings, listening to the arguments through an interpreter. He made no comments, and did not react visibly when Goettel passed sentence.

Moon, who could have been sentenced to as much as 14 years, was convicted May 18 of conspiring to evade taxes from 1973 to 1975 on about $112,000 in interest earned on personal bank accounts; of failing to report $50,000 in shares he received in a profit-making venture and of filing false tax returns.

He claimed that the money in question was not his, and that he was acting as a custodian for church assets.

Moon's lawyer, Charles Stillman, asked that Moon not be sentenced to prison and complained of what he called a "public blood-lust" for the Korean evangelist. He saluted Moon as a man of "extraordinary sincerity," warmth, depth and humility.

Goettel said he had received thousands of letters on Moon's behalf from politicians, religious leaders and Moon's followers, though he said many were based on inaccurate information on the trial that had been distributed by the Unification Church.

He also noted that Moon was a first offender, and said he was a "good family man" and father of 13 children. The unpopularity of Moon's religious beliefs was irrelevant to the case, Goettel said.

But he also described Moon as "highly visible." Thus, he said, a prison sentence was necessary to deter others from evading taxes.

Minister heeded true calling; Became troubador

By SETH W. MOSKOWITZ

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — It's been a long and rocky road, as spiritual journeys so often are.

But it seems to be getting smoother all the time because four years ago Nicholas Edward Hodsdon finally heeded his true calling and became a wandering minstrel, or, as he dubs himself, "The Troubador."

In his scarlet doublet and brown velvet hose, his white lace ruff and long black surcoat, Hodsdon looks very much the well-dressed Elizabethan courtier.

He entertains and educates, throwing into his performances liberal doses of literature and history, as well as juicy tidbits about the goings-on in Queen Elizabeth's court. He gives his audiences love songs and court songs, ballads and bawdy refrains. He offers tunes on the tabor pipe, songs strummed on the harp-like psalter and lilting refrains from the 15 strings of his lute.

Hodsdon, 40, spends each summer on Roanoke Island at the Fort Raleigh National Historic Site, which was settled during the reign of Queen Elizabeth. There, Hodsdon dresses in an Elizabethan costume and plays his lute while interpreting Elizabethan culture for the public.

The rest of the year he lives in an apartment in Old Salem, Winston-Salem's national historic district, from which he takes his one-man Elizabethan cultural drama to public schools and street festivals, college campuses and public parks throughout the Southeast.

Some may think it odd that an ordained minister of the United Church of Christ should spend most of his time decked out in velvet, traveling about the Southeast singing secular songs more than 400 years old.

But Hodsdon is simply following his calling, he says. He received his calling early one morning in 1975 in a Benedictine monastery in Valerino, Calif., where he was leading a weeklong workshop on liturgical dance and scriptural song.

He had just finished writing a four-part arrangement for the Song of Solomon when he had what he describes as an ecstatic vision.

"Go sing to people," Hodsdon was told. He didn't heed God's message right away, though — not until he had paid a heavy price for not doing so, he says.

He returned to New York City, where he intended to resume the life he had been leading there for a dozen years, working numerous part-time jobs for various churches and community organizations. He did all that while working on his master's degree in divinity at the New York Theological Seminary and his master's degree in music at Teachers College of Columbia University.

No sooner did Hodsdon return to New York, though, than everything began to dry up. Conferences were canceled. Jobs fell by the wayside. Every time he turned around he found another obstacle.

So he moved to the small mountain town of Highlands in southwestern North Carolina, where he hoped to work with the Good House Community, an offbeat religious community that operated out of a restaurant. And he got a job as the pastor of the Southern Methodist Church in Hayesville, about 75 miles from Highlands.

But a week after he arrived, the Good House restaurant burned down and the community scattered. A month after that, his congregation in Hayesville decided that he was too progressive for them, so they replaced him.

"It was a great cosmic joke," Hodsdon says. "God opened the door and made it quite clear that I was supposed to come there and then, slam, there I was, abandoned on this rock in the highest town of the east — a town of 600 people, after living in New York City for 13 years — with nothing to do."

'Coupon king': Markets are huge casinos

By PENELOPE MCMILLAN
The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — For a few moments, Richard Hoskin settled his short round bulk onto a living room sofa, taking a break from his favorite hobby — paying 1950s prices as often as he can.

On the floor beside him was a paper bag of groceries acquired before 9 a.m., the first of at least three forays to various stores that day.

Hoskin, a 36-year-old remedial reading teacher and self-described "coupon king" had, with coupons, paid only $3.99 for three cans of cat food, two rolls of paper towels and six bottles of mouth wash, otherwise priced at $14.09.

Since it was trash day in his Pacific Palisades neighborhood, he had earlier made the rounds up and down his neighborhood streets, picking out the food sections of local papers left in piles at the curb.

As usual, the coupon and refund offers were intact, so he took them home and clipped out 300 offers.

Since he claims to save "over $3,000 a year" on food by using coupons and to average "$50 to $60 a month" by sending in refund offers, he explained, he hates to miss trash day.

"My wife and I were in Las Vegas. We came back early especially," said Hoskin, who has an air about him of a coiled spring about to jump.

"This was a fantastic week," he bubbled.

To him, supermarkets are "huge casinos" where anybody can "beat the system" once aware of the "house rules" of couponing.

This summer, Hoskin has been teaching a free three-hour course, "Tax-Free Income from Coupons," through the Santa Monica (Calif.) College Community Services Program.

"I want to get the word out," Hoskin said, leaning forward on the sofa and forgetting that he had meant to relax. "I see people out of work saying, 'my wife has to work, she makes very little income.' They wouldn't have problems any more if they did this...at least on their food bills."

Though he has been buying with coupons more than 20 years,

Hoskin believes that most people have misconceptions about them — that stores hate to get them, that clipping them takes too much time or that real savings are not possible.

"A lot of people are embarrassed to go into a store, afraid they're going to look at them funny," Hoskin said. But manufacturers who print coupons pay stores a handling fee of about 7 cents for every one redeemed, he pointed out, a fact confirmed by a spokesman for Hughes Markets.

Hoskin, in fact, first learned about coupons at age 12 when a local store paid him to go through the neighborhood trash and bring back discarded coupons.

As for time, Hoskin claims that it takes him only an hour and a half a week to keep his system organized. For him, that means looking for coupons in the food sections of local papers and clipping them.

He stores those he decides not to use immediately in cardboard boxes labeled by categories such as "coffee," "cereal," or "paper goods." The ones he will use right away are put into a hand-made "coupon organizer" to take to the store.

When he got to the subject of whether real savings are possible, Hoskin's eyes danced with excitement, confiding, "I hustle, I'm always moving, trying to beat the system. Now watch."

He took out one of the six bottles of mouthwash he had just bought. He had clipped 48 coupons for that brand, each offering either a free six-ounce size or 75 cents off a larger size. Then, he had acquired several "double coupons" which several supermarket chains offer in their food ads, to double the value of any manufacturer's coupon.

Since Hughes accepts "double coupons" from other stores, Hoskin had gone to its Pacific Palisades branch to avoid supermarket hopping. There, the mouthwash price was $1.71 on a 12-ounce size. Using the 75-cent part of the coupon with a "double coupon," he thus had $1.50 off the price and paid 21 cents plus tax.

"You have to pay the tax," he said ruefully.

Since Hoskin has found through experience that sizeable coupon offers tend to be offered for only short periods, he tries to "stock up for a year at a time. That's the catch," he added.

Soviet troops seem unable to move rebels

By RICHARD BILL

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — The biggest Soviet-led offensive of the 2½-year war against Moslem resistance fighters in Afghanistan appears to be far from its goal — taking control of the strategic Panjshir Valley.

The narrow, 100-mile-long valley, 70 miles north of Kabul, Afghanistan's capital, is the main guerrilla base in Afghanistan, headquarters for 4,000 Jamiat Islami fighters and a springboard for attacks on nearby Bagram Air Base, the largest Soviet installation in the country.

For the Soviets, possession of the rugged valley means control of northeastern Afghanistan. It also would deal a decisive blow to the guerrillas, who call themselves the "Mujahideen" — Islamic holy warriors.

The Panjshir Valley, which has emerged as a symbol of resistance in Afghanistan, also is the key staging point for guerrilla strikes on convoys and supply columns moving to Kabul from the river port of Termez, on the Soviet border.

BOTH SIDES have declared themselves victorious so far in the campaign that began May 15 with 12,000 Soviets and Afghan-government regulars moving in.

Kabul authorities claim to have established a local government with a district commissioner at its head and hundreds of militiamen in place to keep the peace.

The rebels counter that they have driven out the bulk of the force of Soviet and Afghan soldiers and say only a fraction remain — all at positions that are vulnerable to sniper fire and night-time commando raids.

"There is a wide gap in the two sides' versions," said a Western diplomatic source who has been following the fighting. "The truth probably is somewhere in between."

Most authoritative accounts say the battle has reached a stalemate of sorts and that 5,000 Soviet and Afghan soldiers are pinned down at four locations — Gulbahar at the valley's mouth, Rokha, Anawa and Khenj, about two-thirds of the way up the valley.

"In all this time they still haven't been able to take complete control of the valley," said the source, who refused to be identified by name or nationality. "It seems the guerrillas are content to keep the enemy tied up for as long as possible."

If true, the military offensive with 8,000 Soviet infantrymen and helicopter-borne troops and 4,000 Afghan government soldiers has been the costliest operation in terms of casualties since the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan Dec. 24, 1979.

Recent diplomatic reports from Afghanistan spoke of "truckloads of bodies" returning to Kabul from the Panjshir. The resistance fighters claim to have killed or wounded 3,000 of their enemy.

The anti-Marxist guerrillas are led by a 28-year-old field commander, Ahmad Shah Masud, who is said to have evacuated 90,000 Tadjik tribesmen before the attack to hold down losses.

HOWEVER, HE has acknowledged that his casualties have been high. But with reinforcements flocking in to defend the stronghold, Masud apparently feels confident enough now to allow small groups out for hit-and-run raids at nearby Salam Pass.

Delayed guerrilla intelligence reports from the area claim troops flown by helicopters from the Soviet Union were dropped in the northern reaches of the valley, but were beaten to the valley floor by resistance fighters who had survived five days of blanket bombing by hiding in caves.

"The obvious conclusion is that the Soviets do not have enough troops to control Afghanistan and certainly not enough men to launch an attack on the Panjshir," said another source, who asked not to be identified. "Why else would they have brought in reinforcements from over the border?"

The Soviet Union is estimated to have about 85,000 troops in Afghanistan.

DEATHS

Katherine 'Kate' Major

Services for Katherine "Kate" Major, 86, of 2803 Terrace, will be at 2 p.m. Sunday at the Clayton Kay Funeral Home in Itasca with the Rev. Billy Sewell officiating. Burial will follow at Itasca Cemetery. Local arrangements are under the direction of Newline W. Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Major died Friday morning in a Midland hospital.

She was born July 20, 1895, in Osceola, where she lived her early life. She married Rufus F. Major in 1917, in Osceola. They moved to Beaumont where they lived until moving to Itasca in 1938. He preceded her in death in 1965. She lived in Osceola until five months ago. She was a member of the First Baptist Church and the Itasca Eastern Star.

Survivors include a son, Jack Major of Midland; two daughters, Eleanor Cole of Lampasas and Wanda Johnson of Lafayette, La.; six grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren.

The family requests that memorials be directed to Midland Memorial Hospital.

Helen Ratcliff McKain

Helen Ratcliff McKain, 71, sister of J. Merwin Ratcliff of Midland, died Thursday in her home in Huntsville.

Services will be at 10 a.m. today in Huntsville. Burial will be in Houston.

Mrs. McKain was born in Jasper on Sept. 12, 1910. Other survivors include her husband and a niece.

Deer living in Florida's Everglades were given a reprieve Friday as U.S. District Judge Eugene P. Spellman granted a temporary injunction blocking a planned hunt designed to thin the ranks of deer in the swamp until 5 p.m. Saturday. The judge sent eight experts — four provided by each side in the dispute — into the swamp to look into the feasibility of moving the deer elsewhere.

Experts look into moving Florida deer

MIAMI (AP) — A federal judge who blocked the killing of thousands of starving deer sent a team of experts into the flooded Everglades on Friday to see if the deer can be moved to drier ground where food is more plentiful.

As hunters awaited a final decision on the plan to thin the herd by 2,200 weak and sickly deer, U.S. District Judge Eugene P. Spellman told the eight experts — veterinarians, zoologists, biologists and a botanist — to ride airboats into the wilderness.

The 51-year-old judge, responding to charges that he couldn't comprehend the severity of the deer's plight from his chambers, said he would view the animals from a Coast Guard helicopter Friday afternoon.

The judge told the eight experts — four provided by each side in the dispute — to report back to him Saturday morning. Spellman's temporary injunction blocking the hunt ends at 5 p.m. Saturday, and he said he would hold hearings throughout the day if necessary.

"Bring your lunch," he told attorneys. Seven hours before the three-day hunt was to begin at dawn Friday, Spellman ordered it halted.

State courts had refused to override game officials who had ordered the hunt to thin the herd, estimated at 5,500 deer. The deer are competing for food depleted by floods from heavy rains.

As Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission officers reluctantly sent dozens of hunters home early Friday, Spellman told the eight experts to investigate claims by a growing coalition of animal lovers that the deer can be relocated.

Game officers, noting that many hunters were returning to homes in other parts of the state, complained that even if Spellman upholds the hunt, the delay will make the hunt less effective.

"We cannot turn these hunts on and off like a water faucet," said Col. Robert Brantly, director of the Game and Fresh Water Commission. "It's going to be too late to do any good."

"We've been finding dead deer for two weeks, and we undoubtedly are going to find more dead deer," said Lt. Biff Lampton of the commission.

"Eight to 10" hunters were cited for illegal camps along the Everglades on Friday as more than 200 officers stood by to stop the hunt before it began, Lampton said.

After "gripping for a while," the 100 to 150 hunters who showed up Friday morning began driving away with their trailered airboats and swamp buggies, Lampton said.

Spellman was guarded by four deputy U.S. marshals, who explained that the security was normal for such an emotion-charged case. Spellman, who last month ordered the release of 1,800 Haitians detained by the federal government, also was guarded during a status conference Friday on the Haitians.

Spellman halted the hunt after attorneys for the animal groups argued that even though the deer are on state land (some of it leased to Miccosukee Indians), the mass kill is a national environmental policy matter.

"We fought a system we were told was unaccountable, and we made them answer to us," said Jack Kassewitz, head of the Miami-based National Wildlife Rescue Team. "Now we're going to see if we can save some of these deer."

Hung jury, plea bargain end trial

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

An eight-man, four-woman jury deciding the guilt-innocence of an 18-year-old man charged with raping a 14-year-old Greenwood girl in a pot-smoking orgy on a schoolday morning last March 1 got hung up on an 8-4 vote for acquittal before Presiding Judge Pat Baskin of the 142nd State District Court dismissed the jurors.

The jury deliberated about four hours before becoming "hopelessly deadlocked" Thursday night.

Though the case ended in a mistrial, the accused, Eric Portillo of Midland, has opted to plead guilty to rape-of-a-child, which now is the legal term for the old "statutory rape" offense whereby a minor child is the willing or unwilling victim of a sex act, according to defense attorney Edward T. Garza.

The plea-bargaining agreement reportedly entails a 10-year probation sentence coupled with a 30-day jail term and a $500 fine. Range of punishment for rape of a child is two years to 20 years in prison.

Portillo was indicted for raping two Greenwood students, then ages 13 and 14, last March 1 when the girls skipped school and were persuaded by another teenage girl to go to the apartment of a 30-year-old man for a "weed (marijuana)-and-drug party" where sex became the issue, said Garza.

Garza said that the two girls apparently "wanted" to have sexual intercourse with Portillo and a 15-year-old companion but that "consent is not the issue" in the case and affords no defense.

Though the defendant did not testify in the trial, his 15-year-old companion, a material witness in the case, was allowed to testify even though he had unwittingly violated a court rule by listening to the testimony of one of the raped girls.

"He was a real good witness," said Garza. "He set a different mood" than the aura of fright described by the teen-age victims.

Since he was a juvenile, the 15-year-old was not indicted, Garza said.

Prosecuting the case were Assistant District Attorneys David Joers and Marian Bentley.

Paralegic climbers make it to the top

GUADALUPE NATIONAL PARK.

Texas (AP) — Three paraplegic mountain climbers got out of their wheelchairs and crawled the final few hundred yards to the summit of Texas' tallest peak Friday and then celebrated with champagne, a park ranger said.

The three journeyed five days in torrid heat and over a rocky trail marked by treacherous ledges, thorny cactus and mesquite to reach the 8,751-foot high summit of Guadalupe Peak.

"They got there at 7:21 p.m. (MST) and whooped it up on the top. They are dousing themselves with champagne," said Park Superintendent Bill Dummire, who said the climbers will hold a news conference Saturday at 4 p.m. at the convention center in Carlsbad, N.M.

"They are looking at a great sunset from the summit," said Dummire.

He said the climbers radioed, "We are just glad to be here after five days on the mountain."

Dummire said Joe Moss, 32, Donnie Rogers, 26 and Dave Kiley, 29, would camp just beneath the summit Friday night and would make their descent by Army helicopter early Saturday morning.

The wheelchair-bound athletes — all members of POINT, Paraplegics On Independent Nature Trips — were less than a mile from the top when they set out Friday morning.

The group said earlier the climb to the top was to show what handicapped people can do unaided.

The expedition was to have been twice as big, but two dropped out during the ascent and a third at the last moment decided against the trip because of physical problems.

"Do it for the chairs!" was the message the disabled group at the base of the mountain sent to the remaining climbers.

All three remaining climbers suffered from sores and blisters on their hands and buttocks, from scooting over rocky ledges and dragging their wheelchairs behind them.

Kiley's injuries were so bad, the group said he did not decide until Friday morning that he would continue the climb, park rangers said.

Moss, who lost his legs in Vietnam, and Rogers, who was paralyzed in an accident, are both from Dallas. Kiley, also disabled in an accident, is from Los Angeles.

Dummire said park rangers had arranged for the climbers to make a safe descent from the peak aboard a helicopter from Ft. Bliss.

U.S. trying to persuade reluctant Syria to take Palestinians

By The Associated Press

America and Saudi Arabia are trying to persuade Syria to receive Palestinian guerrillas trapped in Israeli-encircled west Beirut until arrangements are made for their dispersal around the Arab world, Lebanon radio reported Friday.

Such a plan would represent a new approach to finding a home for the Palestinians.

The Syrians have refused to accept them — a major obstacle to evacuating the estimated 8,000 Palestinian Liberation Organization guerrillas bottled up in west Beirut by Israeli forces that invaded Lebanon on June 6 to crush the PLO.

United Nations and U.S. officials said Israel now is permitting some relief food shipments through its blockade of west Beirut.

A five-week effort by U.S. presidential envoy Philip C.

Habib to arrange a peaceful PLO pullout that would stop Israel's estimated 35,000 troops from storming west Beirut has bogged down over Syria's refusal to take the guerrillas.

The Reagan administration is urging reluctant Arab countries to find a permanent place for the guerrillas. "Now is the appropriate time for the Arab community to assist in the resolution of this particular issue," said Dean Fischer, the State Department spokesman in Washington.

The United States has agreed in principle to contribute some 1,800 Marines to an international force that would supervise a Palestinian pullout from Lebanon, and France has offered to send troops as a vanguard to the main force.

In the Netherlands, Premier Andries van Agt said he had received Cabinet approval to send a Dutch contingent to the force when the expected formal request is received. He said the soldiers would come either from units stationed in the Netherlands or from the 800-man Dutch contingent in the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon that is now in southern Lebanon.

Fischer said the Reagan administration told Congress that Israel — in its invasion of Lebanon — "may have" violated a standing agreement not to use U.S.-supplied weapons for offensive purposes. He said specifics of the report would remain secret because of the "delicate stage" of Lebanese negotiations.

Habib met Friday with Lebanon's Christian President Elias Sarkis and Moslem Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan at the shell-pocked presidential palace in Israeli-encircled suburban Baabda to continue the negotiations.

Israel radio reported that the cease-fire around Beirut was holding, except for occasional bursts of light-arms fire. But the military command in Tel Aviv reported that Israeli troops killed two Palestinian guerrillas in eastern Lebanon in sporadic fire fights during the night.

Senior Israeli officials said they believed Syria could still be persuaded to offer refuge to Palestinian guerrillas despite its official refusal.

Syrian Foreign Minister Abdul Halim Khaddam said again Friday that the Syrian refusal to accept the PLO was final. Damascus radio also quoted President Hafez Assad as saying he would not give sanctuary to the guerrillas.

"This may not be the last word from Syria," said a senior Israeli official who asked not to be identified. "From experience we know that you can never tell the Syrian position from the public statements."

Beirut radio stations said Syria was taking a hard line to wring a high political and financial price for an eventual agreement.

Turbulent flight results in 24 injured jet passengers

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Twenty-four people on a United Airlines DC-10 jet were injured Friday when the plane was severely jolted by turbulence 39,000 feet over Wyoming, authorities said. Nine of those hurt were treated at hospitals, and four were admitted.

Flight 95, carrying 162 passengers and 11 crew members, landed safely at San Francisco International Airport about 1 p.m. after a non-stop flight from Boston, said Joe Hopkins, corporate communications manager for United in Chicago.

He said the plane was being examined for damage.

Authorities at first said the incident occurred over Utah, but Federal Aviation Administration supervisor Everett Ward in Salt Lake City said the plane was over southern Wyoming at the time.

One of the injured passengers was Don DiMaggio, 65-year-old former outfielder for the Boston Red Sox and brother of baseball Hall of Famer Joe DiMaggio.

DiMaggio said the jolt tossed him out of his seat and smashed him against the ceiling of the plane, wrenching his neck. He was taken to Peninsula Hospital, treated and fitted with a neck brace. About an hour later, he was back in his restaurant on Fisherman's Wharf.

"There was no panic," DiMaggio said. "Those who were injured couldn't move around too much...one of the stewardesses asked for a doctor, and he came out and did a fabulous job."

Passenger Sean Downing, 10, said the plane "went up and down like it was on air bumps" and he said he was tossed so high that his head hit the ceiling.

"We all flew up in the air," said another passenger, Don Schmidt of Fairfield. "I was shifted to the right and came down on the arm rest next to me." He said a woman a seat on the aisle thrown onto the floor.

"The jet was flying at 39,000 feet, and there was a severe jolt, presumably caused by the turbulence," Hopkins said.

"The turbulent air lasted very briefly, and there was no great loss of altitude," Hopkins said.

The seat belt light was on at the time, he said.

Sunny skies expected entire weekend

A sunny weekend should be in store for residents of the Permian Basin who choose to remain in their habitat, if National Weather Service forecasters are correct.

Clear skies are expected through Sunday with the mercury expected to be in the mid-90s during afternoon hours. Southerly winds should be 10-15 mph.

The low tonight should be near 70. No precipitation is forecast, leaving the monthly total at 3.21 inches and the 1982 amount at 9.49 inches.

The high Friday of 96 was five degrees off the all-time record for the date set in 1960, while the low of 69 was nine degrees above the record 60 of 1968.

Chief upholds action of officer who killed teen

RICHMOND, Texas (AP) — A policeman who mistook engine backfires for gunshots and killed a 17-year-old motorist who had stolen $10 worth of gasoline "reacted like any other police officer would have reacted," the police chief said.

But Richard Esparza's sister says the officer who killed her brother with a 9mm, Israeli-made Uzi semi-automatic weapon used unnecessary force.

"No one was shooting at them. Their life wasn't in danger," she said of the officers. The youth's funeral was held Friday in Houston.

"If I thought someone was shooting at me, I'd shoot back," Police Chief Dalton Hargis said Thursday. Hargis said no administrative action would be taken against Sgt. Paul Gutheinz, 25, a policeman for two years.

Police said Esparza had left a service station without paying and was fleeing police in a 1971 pickup truck at speeds of 95 to 100 mph and running motorists off the highway Tuesday night.

Sheriff's Lt. R.L. "Tiny" Gaston said the teen-ager tried to run Gutheinz and Officer Frank Racz, 26, in another squad car off the highway during the chase in this rural town southwest of Houston.

Hargis said both officers thought they were being fired at.

"There was the pop and then the flash," Hargis said. After "two or three more reports with a flash Paul called on the radio that he was taking fire and Frank also thought he was being shot at."

Gutheinz "tried to disable the vehicle by trying to get down to the tires," the police chief said. "He put four rounds in the tailgate, one in the upper left rear part of the cab and possibly one in the left rear tire, because it was flat when I got there, and that one round that went through the glass and hit the dude behind the head."

The officer stopped shooting after Racz radioed him the sounds were coming from the truck engine.

"They were trying to disable that vehicle before he ran over and killed some man and his whole family that had not done anything except get up and eat breakfast," Gaston said. "They were doing exactly what they were paid for — to protect lives and property out there."

Esparza's sister, Shirley Zarate, said police had no justification for opening fire on the truck.

Hargis said Gutheinz used his personally-owned firearm because the city does not provide its policemen with guns, holsters or ammunition. Each officer must buy his firearms and bullets, he said.

An investigation of the shooting has been turned over to Fort Bend County Sheriff Ervin Hurta, who said the matter would be referred to a grand jury without charges.

In Houston, a spokesman for the FBI said it has received no complaint on the incident and is not investigating it.

Besides the driver, three other teen-agers were riding in the truck. After the driver was killed another passenger took over and guided the truck to a stop, officials said.

"The others had been begging the driver to stop but he never did," Gaston said.

This is an aerial view of the suburban Philadelphia home of Courtlandt S. Gross, former president and retired board chairman of Lockheed Corp. who, along with his wife of 43 years and their housekeeper, was found dead. Police are calling the incident a triple homicide.

Retired Lockheed Corp. chairman killed

VILLANOVA, Pa. (AP) — The retired board chairman of Lockheed Corp. was shot to death along with his wife and housekeeper by intruders who broke into their Main Line mansion, police said Friday.

The victims were identified as Courtlandt S. Gross, 77, his wife, Alexandra, 72, and their live-in housekeeper, Catherine Vander Veur, 69.

A roofing contractor who arrived at the four-acre estate Friday morning discovered one of the bodies, said Lt. John Sheehan, commanding officer of the Lower Merion Township detectives.

"He noticed that there was a body on the floor near the back door of the house," Sheehan said. When police arrived, they found three bodies, including one near the back door.

Salvatore Frustaci, deputy superintendent of the Lower Merion Township Police Department, said, "There was evidence of forced entry to the home. There's no question we are dealing with a triple homicide. As to motive, that's sketchy right now."

THE THREE "died as a result of gunshot wounds," Frustaci said, but he declined to say how many times they had been shot. Deputy Montgomery County Coroner Carl Hofheinz said the bodies were taken to Bryn Mawr Hospital for autopsies.

The Gross estate, valued at $500,000, is on Philadelphia's suburban Main Line, an area west of the city known for secluded mansions.

The two-story, French-style stucco home is located behind the home of Dr. Richard A. Davis, brother of first lady Nancy Reagan, according to Sonia Peltz, a neighbor. "That's what shook everybody up," Ms. Peltz said. "The road is under surveillance."

However, Mary Ann Gordon, a spokeswoman for the U.S. Secret Service in Washington, said the house is not under protection of her agency and would not be except during a visit by the president or his immediate family. A Lower Merion Township policeman, who refused to give his name, said he was unaware of any police surveillance in the area.

Another neighbor, who did not want to be identified, said she thought she heard a shot in the middle of the night, but paid no attention because people frequently hunt in the area. During an afternoon news conference, Frustaci refused to discuss whether the house, which is set back from the main road by a 430-foot driveway, had been ransacked.

EARLIER at the scene, he had said police were calling the incident a triple homicide "on the basis of intruders sometime overnight having gone over the house."

Gross and his wife of 43 years, Alexandra Van Rensselaer Wanamaker, moved to Philadelphia from the Los Angeles area after his retirement from Lockheed as board chairman in 1967. Mrs. Gross is a Philadelphia native and was divorced from Rodman Wanamaker II, grandson of the pioneer merchant John Wanamaker.

White's alleged attacker says 'no regrets'

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The man charged with slugging U.S. Supreme Court Justice Byron White was freed on $10,000 bail Friday, saying he had no regrets and hopes his trial will focus attention on "outrageous" court rulings on busing and pornography.

Newton C. Estes, a 57-year-old construction bidder, departed jail less than 24 hours after he punched White three times as the justice prepared to deliver a speech to the Utah Bar Association here.

"I've never felt so sure that I've done the right thing ever in my life, even if it costs me," Estes said after his release. He faces a possible three-year prison term and $5,000 fine. A preliminary hearing is scheduled July 21.

Estes, from nearby Kayville, walked out of the U.S. Magistrate's office with his wife, Sally, 52, after she posted the deed to the couple's home to cover the $10,000 bond.

White, 65, was struck twice in the back of the head and once on his left cheek, which was slightly bruised. Estes said he did not intend to harm the justice. He said his action was aimed at drawing attention to rulings on such issues as pornography, obscenity and busing.

"I think our future requires that the Supreme Court's outrageous decisions be reviewed by a jury," Estes said. "They will release me because they will determine that the Supreme Court went beyond" its authority.

Estes is a Memphis, Tenn., native who said he moved to Utah because his teen-age daughter was being bused to a predominantly black school.

Estes said that in 1972, acting as his own attorney, he asked the Supreme Court to hear a lawsuit against the Memphis Board of Education challenging the constitutionality of busing. The court refused to hear the case.

Official says proposed bill wouldn't have stopped attack

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bill that would increase protection for Supreme Court justices is before Congress, but it probably would not have served to deter the attack on Justice Byron White, a court official said Friday.

The measure, urged by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger on May 3, would permit armed Supreme Court police to guard justices on and off court property.

But the court official, who asked that his name be withheld, said the bill is intended to protect justices in the vicinity of the high court and against specific threats.

"We can't send someone along every time a justice travels," the official said. White was attacked Thursday as he was about to address the Utah Bar Association in Salt Lake City. His alleged assailant, Newton C. Estes, 57, of Kayville, Utah, struck White several times while the justice was seated at a speakers' dais.

Hotel security workers were present but there were no police, bodyguards or federal security officers on hand.

White, 65, was cut on the cheek before a half-dozen spectators dragged the attacker away.

The assault is the first in memory on a justice of the Supreme Court.

Burger's legislative proposal would allow the 80 members of the Supreme Court police force to carry guns and make arrests when they are protecting the justices, court employees and visiting dignitaries.

The bill would grant the court police power to make arrests on streets near the court building on Capitol Hill, an area where muggings and other street crimes are commonplace.

The court source said that although the bill is not intended to provide police protection whenever a justice travels outside Washington, an exception might be made if there was a specific threat against a justice.

Separate but nearly identical bills are awaiting action by the Senate and by the House Judiciary Committee.

Burger said the legislation is "long overdue" because of increased "terrorist activities, assassination attempts and street crime."

Bush to visit Texas

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President George Bush will visit Texas in two weeks to campaign for Republican George Strake in his battle against Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, it was announced Friday.

The vice president also will appear at fund raisers in Dallas and Victoria for two GOP challengers to incumbent Democratic congressmen, the vice president's press office announced.

Bush is scheduled in Dallas the morning of Saturday, July 31, for a fund-raiser for Lucy Patterson, who seeks the 24th District seat held by Martin

Frost of Dallas.

That afternoon, he will go to San Antonio on behalf of Strake.

After spending the night in San Antonio, Bush is to go to Victoria Sunday morning for a fund-raiser for Joe Wyatt, a former congressman who is attempting a comeback against Bill Patman of Ganado, who was elected in 1980.

Cops link up with robbers at unlikely place

YONKERS, N.Y. (AP) — Stunned golfers pointed their clubs and shouted "They went that-a-way" as a policeman on a commandeered golf cart tore across the links after two suspected robbers.

"It's the first time in my life I've ever commandeered a golf cart," Westchester County Police Sgt. Paul Grutzner said Friday. Police captured one man, but the second man escaped.

According to police, the chase began Thursday evening after two men tied up an attendant at the Saw Mill River Parkway Mobil gasoline station, stole $150 and fled by car in the direction of the Dunwoodie Golf Course.

County police officer Ronan O'Brien was patrolling in the area when he spotted the car and took off after it. By the time the robbers careened onto the golf course, six police cars were close behind. They raced over the fairways.

Police lost sight of the getaway car. Grutzner, who was following O'Brien, commandeered a golf cart to search the course. He came upon one golfer about to make a putt.

Grutzner said he asked the man, "Did you see the car?"

"No," the man replied and calmly made his putt. "Then the man turned around and said, 'Yes, he went that-a-way,'" said Grutzner. "There are priorities, I guess."

With other golfers shouting and gesturing with clubs, police finally found the getaway car abandoned at the bottom of an embankment near the fifth hole.

A Yonkers police officer, Stephen Mosteck, spotted one man in the woods near the course, gave chase on foot and ran into trouble.

"The officer got tangled in the underbrush. When he cleared himself, the defendant jumped him," said Grutzner.

The man tried to grab Mosteck's gun. The two men struggled violently, tumbling down a 12-foot embankment, Grutzner said.

"The defendant was very muscular. Luckily the cop was just a little stronger," Grutzner said. "As big as the bad guy is, the good guy happened to be a little stronger."

By the time reinforcements arrived, Mosteck had his man. Grutzner identified him as Carlos Hernandez, 26, of New York City. He was being held Friday in the Westchester County Jail in Valhalla on a charge of armed robbery.

"We received a couple of complaints about police cars running all over the course," said Grutzner. "The golfers became a little irate." No monetary figure was available for the damage.

Martin may bargain on weapons charge

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Dean Martin's lawyer indicated Friday he will try to plea bargain a misdemeanor charge against the entertainer for allegedly carrying a concealed weapon in his car.

"We will try to reach a disposition that is mutually agreeable to both parties," Alan Croll said outside court, after winning a postponement in Martin's arraignment until Aug. 5.

Martin was not present at the hearing before Municipal Judge Andrew J. Weisz. Croll said defendants are not required to appear for a misdemeanor arraignment.

Martin, 64, was arrested shortly before 11 p.m. on May 8 by California Highway Patrol officers who stopped him near a West Hollywood intersection.

Although Martin was initially stopped for investigation of drunken driving, Deputy District Attorney Philip Wynn said Friday there was "insufficient evidence" to file such charges.

Wynn said a .38-caliber revolver was found in Martin's car at the time of the arrest. Martin was booked at the West Hollywood sheriff's station and later released on his own recognizance.

Maximum penalty for conviction on the weapons charge is a $500 fine and six months in jail, Croll said.

The singer-actor starred in numerous movies in the 1950s and 1960s and later had his own television variety series. In recent years, his success has been in Las Vegas nightclubs, where the self-spoofing drinking jokes that are his trademark are a standard part of his routine.

Prince Charles rates favorite opera singers in interview

LONDON (AP) — "I would go anywhere to hear Luciano Pavarotti, and so would most other people," Prince Charles says of his favorite opera star.

In a long interview published Friday in The Standard, Charles also said he likes Placido Domingo "who, apart from being an extremely talented opera singer, is an incredibly nice person to meet and great fun."

"Everybody seems to know I'm a great fan of Kiri Te Kanawa," he added of the New Zealand soprano who sang at his wedding to Lady Diana Spencer in St. Paul's Cathedral last year.

Others highly rated include American soprano Grace Bumbry. "She has a great sense of humor, larger-than-life lady and has terrific presence on the stage."

The prince said he was turned on to opera and ballet early. "I had been backstage as a child with my grandmother on one marvelous occasion when the Bolshoi Ballet came to London when I was about 7. I have never forgotten the atmosphere and excitement."

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Mitch Miller says his musical skills bridge the gap between his "Sing Along with Mitch" television program and the symphony orchestra, but Skitch Henderson's do not.

Miller, 71, who will conduct an outdoor symphony concert in Pittsburgh this weekend, says Henderson should not have been invited to conduct a similar concert.

Henderson led the Pittsburgh Symphony three weeks ago to open the Symphony at the Point series at Point State Park.

Miller, who became a household word by telling viewers to follow the bouncing ball in the 1960s, said, "Skitch Henderson never smelled a symphony orchestra in his life."

"You can't compare him to me in the same breath. I've done every orchestra in the country except two," said Miller, who attended the Eastman School of Music and played oboe with the Rochester Philharmonic early in his career.

"Skitch Henderson can't go in there and conduct. Come on, that's a joke. Nobody takes him seriously. That's why he isn't working," Miller said in an interview published Friday in the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette.

"I'm appalled," Henderson said in a telephone interview Friday from Connecticut.

"I'm surprised he'd say anything like that," Henderson said. "I was classically schooled all my life. He must have been goaded to say those things or else had a few beers."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sherry Lansing, the former math teacher who became productions president at 20th Century-Fox Film Corp., has been given a new contract despite a $13.7 million quarterly loss recently reported by the company's film division.

Rumors had circulated that she would be leaving after the loss was reported on Tuesday. The division's loss contributed to a companywide deficit of $6.4 million in the quarter ended May 29.

Alan said Thursday Ms. Lansing's contract had been renewed for an indefinite period.

The company did not say which films had done poorly, but only "Porky's," in which Fox has a 25 percent interest, was a big winner in the spring.

After Ms. Lansing left her teaching job in Watts, she entered the film industry and became senior production executive on "China Syndrome" and "Kramer vs. Kramer" before being placed in charge of all the company's films in January 1980.

ROYAL OAK, Mich. (AP) — While an 11-year-old girl lay unconscious in a hospital, a man who heard of her plight clowned on a street corner for 72 hours straight and raised $2,730 to help defray her hospital costs.

Lenny Kitson, 39, who sometimes performs as Sad Zak the Clown, decided to help when he heard that Sharyn Lynn Reese was unconscious in Beaumont Hospital since being struck 10 days ago by a car. Kitson had never met the girl.

The Reese girl is an avid swimmer, catcher on her softball team and a straight-A student at Lincoln Elementary School.

Her father, Ken Reese, was laid off by General Motors Corp. more than a year ago.

Kitson, whose own daughter died a few years ago, said "the people have been just great. You would think that, with hard times and all, people wouldn't or couldn't care about somebody else's problems."

His fund-raising campaign ended Thursday and, after getting a few hours sleep, he said, "I'm no hero; anyone could do what I did."

Kitson telephoned the Reese family, asked if he could help and "the next thing we know, he's down there in his clown outfit," said Shirley Reese, the girl's mother. "He's a great human being that knows what it's like, I guess."

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Al Quintana tapped out a tinkly, rhythmic farewell to San Francisco's cable cars for the next two years, winning the annual bell ringer's contest and enduring a little sadness despite a $1,000 first prize.

"I'm going to miss them," Quintana said about the cable cars after being judged winner over six other grimaces in the 28th annual contest Thursday that drew a crowd of hundreds in Union Square.

Vietnamese keep on leaving home

HO CHI MINH CITY, Vietnam (AP) — Disaffected southern Vietnamese still express fervent hopes of leaving their country to begin a new life and the number of boat-people who have successfully fled Vietnam approaches the half-million mark.

Western and Asian newsmen invited to visit this city, formerly Saigon, encountered much lingering resentment and often bitterness among people who could not accept the overturned social order and economic hardships that followed the Communist victory in 1975.

One woman cried as she spoke of two of her children who drowned when their refugee boat sank in the Gulf of Thailand last December.

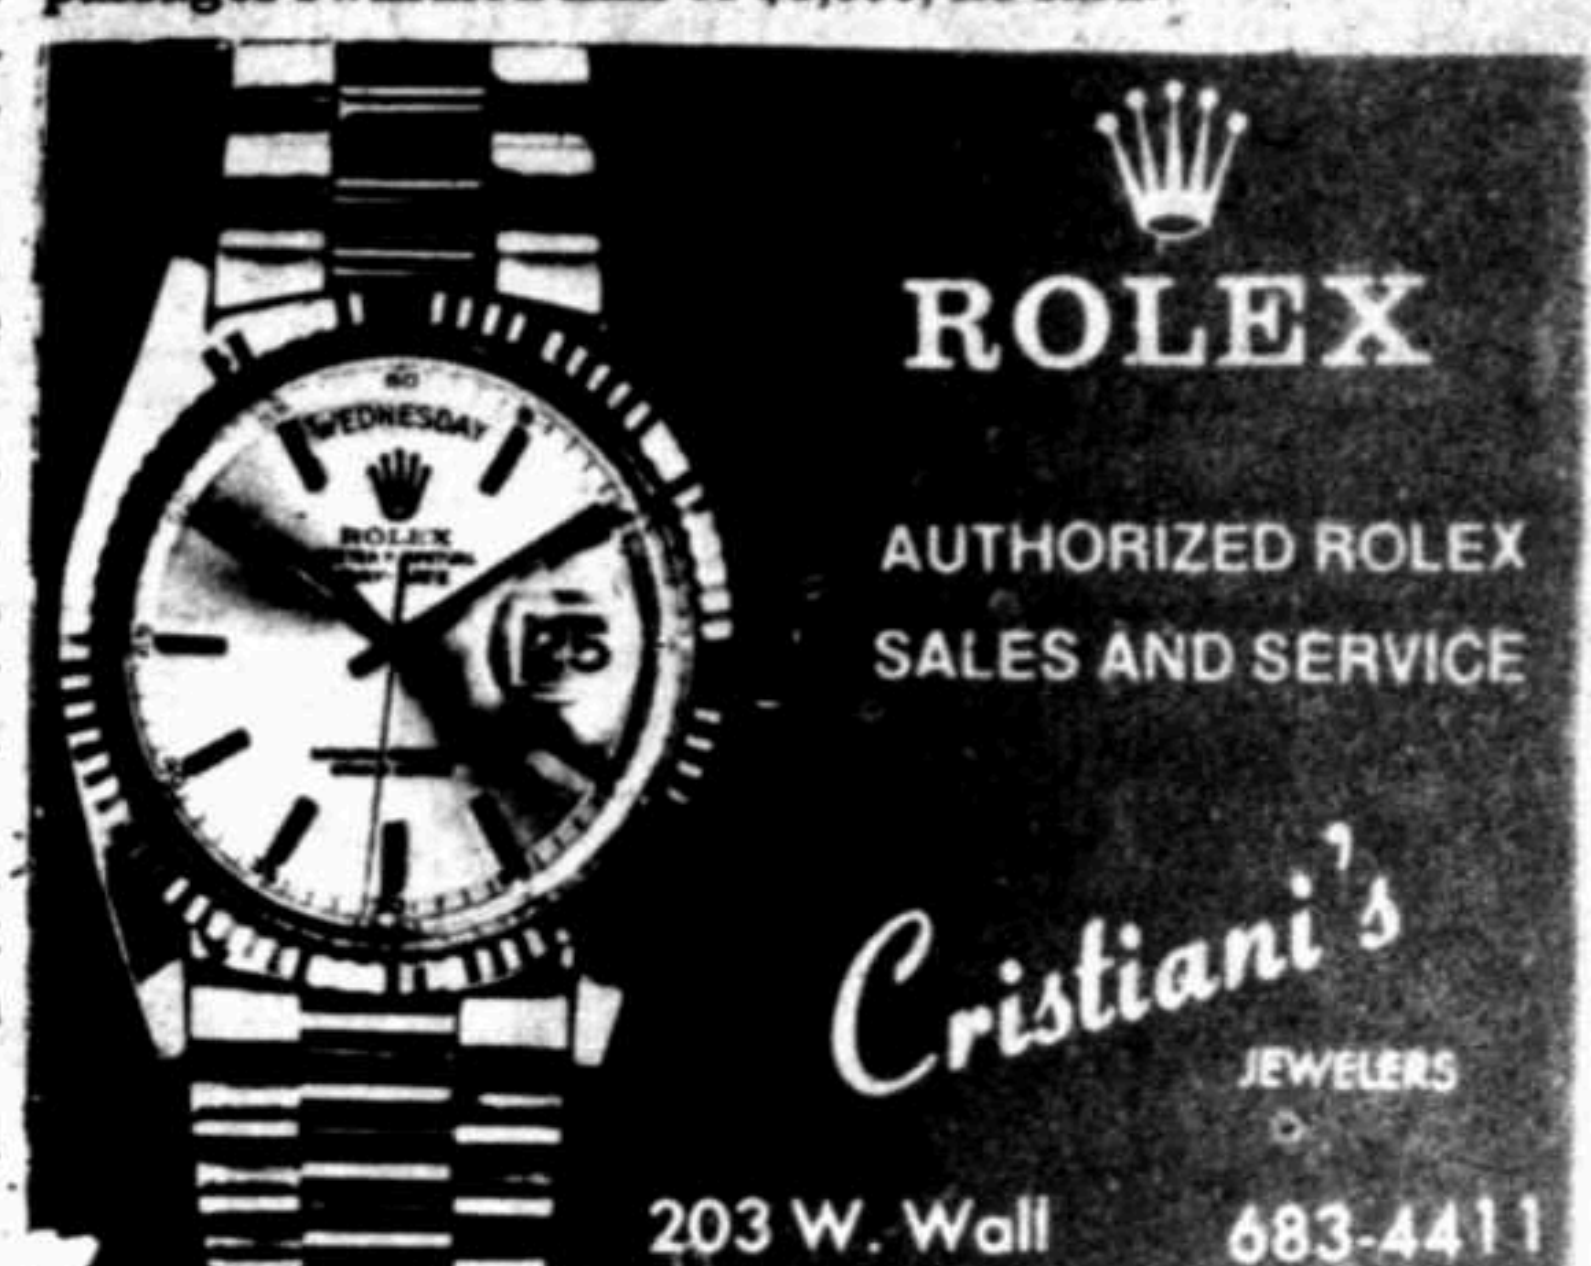

Her family became separated during their attempt to flee, and she remained behind with two children. Her four other children managed to make the boat, but only two survived when the vessel sank. The survivors, 16 and 13, arrived in Thailand and are now in a refugee camp.

The woman, 39, said her husband was an officer in South Vietnam's army and has been detained without explanation at a re-education camp in central Vietnam for the past seven years.

December's escape attempt was her fourth. She said she did not have enough money to try again.

Another Vietnamese said he had tried to flee seven times. In the latest attempt, Vietnam's navy halted his boat, with 110 people aboard, at the country's 200-mile nautical boundary after it was crippled during a storm and attacked by pirates.

He was detained six months by authorities, he said. In previous attempts, brokers who arranged the illegal passages swindled him of $5,000, he said.

Arkansas racing going to dogs

By HARRY KING

WEST MEMPHIS, Ark. (AP) — In the fertile farmland along the Mississippi River, where soybeans mean big bucks, Darby Henry is cultivating a cash crop with four legs.

He raises greyhounds on a 19-acre farm near Marion. Dogs from his kennel won 130 races during the recent meeting in St. Petersburg, Fla., and finished No. 2 on the money list with more than $100,000. His kennel brought in more than $100,000 last year at Southland Greyhound Park.

"If you run your business like you should, there's money in it," he said in an interview. "I've been successful. Of course, there's headaches in it just like anything else."

The business is a family tradition — his father was one of the first to race greyhounds almost 50 years ago in Pennsylvania.

"It was never legalized in those days," Henry said. "They'd run for two weeks and then they'd close you down. It was like a carnival."

His son, Tommy, trains the dogs that run at West

Memphis. An older son handles the kennel at Mobile, Ala.

There are about five dozen dogs in his Southland kennel and another four dozen on the farm.

Years in the business have made Henry, 54, philosophical about racing luck.

"They are not machines," he said. "You can't expect perfect performances every time. If a dog gets a hard knock, you just have to wait until next time."

Because of the wear and tear, dogs only race a couple of years.

"You breed speed to speed, you can't get away from that," he said. "Lots of times when you're buying, you can't get the perfect female. Then, you look to the stud. The characteristics of the mother will dominate."

A top-notch dog might be worth $250,000, he said, and command a stud fee of $1,000. An experienced Class C dog can bring $10,000 to $20,000, he said.

Most dogs race once a week and Henry says a good Class B dog will win about a half-dozen races at a meeting. At Southland, that means more than $5,000 in first-place checks alone. The cost, Henry said, is about $1.50 per dog per day.

"I get calls every week from people wanting to get into racing," he said.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Sunday, July 18, 1982
YOUR BIRTHDAY TO-DAY. U.S. Senator and former astronaut John Glenn (D-Ohio) shares this birthday with you, as do comedian Red Skelton and Atlanta Braves manager Joe Torres. In the months ahead, business opportunities will be more plentiful than at any time in the last ten years. Financial pressures lessen and a certain amount of travel is indicated. Those in aeronautics or other sciences find greater monetary rewards. Happy romance adds to your sense of well-being. Much as you enjoy staying at home, you now discover certain advantages to getting out more. An active social life puts you in touch with important new business contacts.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Show extra kindness to a loved one who is having a rough time. New contacts give you valuable insights. Allow plenty of time to get to and from appointments.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A highly profitable day lies ahead! Emphasize teamwork. Creative projects and business partnerships flourish. You will be "on-stage" at a professional or civic function.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): New contacts help you advance career or business. Behave in a manner that will make a good impression. Discuss your plans with mate. You can expect a gala evening.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A spiritual experience that you and mate share brings greater domestic harmony. Activities involving neighbors or relatives provide inexpensive fun.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You shine at social events. Be extra polite to an older person—he or she can affect your future happiness. A written communication gets garbled.

VIRGO (Aug. 22-Sept. 22): An old pal gives you new hope regarding a career or financial dilemma. Show your determination. Persevere! A phone call brings special cheer.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Cure "cabin fever" with a walk in the park or the country. Admit your faults and encourage a child to exchange confidences. An ideal day to begin fun family projects.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Take greater interest in teen-ager's activities. Someone may be leading him/her astray. Stubbornness will get you nowhere. Refrain from foisting your opinions on others.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Spend a quiet day with loved ones. Entertainment need not be expensive. Your attention will be focused on group activities and you will love every minute of them!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Do not show disappointment in a friend's actions. Your expectations were unrealistic. Gardening and swimming provide happy moments.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Make up your mind about a private matter involving your past. Severing a relationship with a negative-thinking person is the smartest move you could make.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You enjoy dining out but should resist the temptation to eat "seconds." Your generosity to an old friend will be richly rewarded.

Senators push restrictions through passage

WASHINGTON (AP) — Faced with opposition that threatened to force the Senate into an unscheduled weekend session, the Senate agreed 60-5 Friday to tighten restrictions on government-subsidized irrigation water for western farms.

Leaders of the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee amended a bill rewriting the 80-year-old water law to stop the stalling tactics of Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio.

Metzenbaum had threatened to offer as many as 80 amendments to the committee bill unless its provisions were tightened. With no way to stop him under the Senate rules, sponsors of the legislation forged the compromise in 2 1/2 hours of private meetings organized by Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn.

The compromise ended a bitter debate that has consumed the Senate for two days. The debate became so emotional Friday that Majority Whip Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, sharply accused Metzenbaum of breaching Senate ethics with obstructionist tactics.

In complimenting Metzenbaum for achieving the compromise, Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., noted, "I'm sure he didn't make himself the most popular man in the Senate by doing so."

The compromise limits the cut-rate water from federal irrigation projects to farms of 1,280 acres or less, 800 fewer acres than the committee had sought.

Farms below that size must repay their share of the cost of irrigation facilities, but with no charges to them for interest on the 40-year debt that finances the water projects.

The compromise also sets a higher interest rate for determining how much farms above 1,280 acres should pay for their water. The original bill would have assumed a 9.375 percent interest rate on construction loans. The compromise formula works out to 12 percent.

The government currently is paying around 14 percent on new long-term bonds, but many irrigation projects were built when interest rates were much lower.

With the compromise in place, the Senate quickly passed the overall bill 49-13, sending it to a conference committee to iron out differences between the Senate bill and a version already passed by the House.

Metzenbaum said the new provisions were still more liberal than he wanted. He originally supported a 900-acre limit and a 14 percent interest rate. But he said the negotiated settlement was a legitimate compromise.

To force the compromise, Metzenbaum had threatened earlier to offer "one amendment, two, five, 10...as many amendments as I see fit to do" to block passage.

With that threat, Stevens accused Metzenbaum of "a breach of ethics of the Senate...He has violated one of the basic rules of the Senate, and that is to be a gentleman."

"I don't yield to the senator from Alaska in conducting myself as a gentleman," Metzenbaum responded sharply. "I don't need the senator from Alaska to tell me how to conduct myself on the floor of the Senate."

The bill that prompted the deadlock affects federal irrigation projects in the 17 western states. The 47,000 farms dependent on those projects receive subsidized water.

Investigation into naval recruit's death ends with one charged

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A 15-month investigation into the death of a recruit on the USS Ranger ended Friday when a petty officer was sentenced to three months hard labor, the only one of 28 originally charged in the death to be convicted.

The Navy spent hundreds of thousands of dollars prosecuting the officers and enlisted men from the aircraft carrier which was off the Philippines on April 14, 1981, when 21-year-old Paul Terriere died in a correctional unit.

The other suspects were acquitted, granted immunity from prosecution or tried in less serious proceedings than a court-martial.

Petty Officer 2nd Class Darryl Summons, 23, of Fort Jackson, S.C., the last to be tried, was convicted Thursday of battery and maltreatment. He was found innocent of more serious charges of involuntary manslaughter and negligent homicide. The battery conviction was thrown out Friday.

Terriere of Algonac, Mich., had been an "awardee" in the Correctional Custody Unit of the Ranger, after taking an unauthorized leave of absence.

The custody unit was not a brig. It was supposed to be a kind of seagoing "halfway house" where sailors were sent for "retraining."

But the Terriere case exposed a contradiction between the day-to-day operation of the unit and the philosophy of its architects.

Cmdr. Mike Sherman of the North Island Naval Air Station, where the Ranger trials were held, said the unit was supposed to be like a football training camp.

"The problem was people that were placed in the position of implementing instructions relating to the program were not properly schooled in dealing with people who in military terms — not following orders, were aberrant in their behavior," said Sherman.

Thus, as the defense insisted in the Summons case, the petty officer had a duty to get Terriere requested medical attention, but Summons also felt he had to enforce discipline.

Reporter fined $100 a day for not revealing sources

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Richmond Times-Dispatch reporter Robin Traywick is being fined $100 a day by a Richmond Circuit Court judge because she refuses to disclose sources for articles about cocaine use.

In one of the articles, an unidentified man who said he was a cocaine dealer said he knew of judges, prosecutors and policemen who used cocaine. The dealer also mentioned an unidentified lawyer who used cocaine.

Judge James B. Wilkinson found her in contempt of court Thursday after she refused to answer questions before a grand jury.

She had been subpoenaed after the articles appeared June 27.

Wilkinson said he was not putting her in jail because she recently had undergone surgery, but hinted that if she refuses to answer the questions when the grand jury is called back into session July 28 she might go to jail.

"You have the keys to jail...any time you want to unlock the door" the fine will be lifted, Wilkinson said.

Managing Editor Marvin E. Garrette said, "We stand by her."

Loeffler approves tax break repeal

WASHINGTON — Congressman Tom Loeffler Friday applauded passage of a bill which repeals the congressional tax breaks passed last year.

The House of Representatives and the Senate agreed to the repealer Thursday as an amendment to a bill providing urgent supplemental appropriations for 1982, and the president will soon sign the legislation into law.

"It was imperative that this flagrantly unfair and abusive measure be purged from the tax code," Loeffler said. "Many of my colleagues and I have worked for the past seven months to achieve this goal."

Loeffler has consistently supported bills that would repeal the Congressional tax breaks and prevent their recurrence in the future, such as measures which will require a specific roll call vote on any measure which personally affects members financially, and prohibits a sitting Congress from ever voting itself a pay raise.

"My outrage over approval of the original measure is a well-known fact in the 21st Congressional District and among the leadership of the House," Loeffler said.

"Members of Congress must never give themselves any special consideration that is unavailable to other Americans," Loeffler said. "Frankly, this whole mess has been one of the most disgusting abdications of congressional responsibility in recent memory."

Clements puts local man on MSU regents board

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Gov. Bill Clements Friday announced the appointment of Jack L. Russell, Midland, to the board of regents of Midwestern State University for a six-year term ending Feb. 25, 1988.

Russell, 55, is president of Chaparral Royalty Co. He received his bachelor's degree from Midwestern and replaces W.M. Thacker Jr., Wichita Falls, whose term expired.

Also named to the board Friday were Edward W. Moran Jr., and Harold D. Rogers, both of Wichita Falls.

Justice says three teen-agers stabbed over 10 times each

WACO, Texas (AP) — Three teen-agers whose bodies were found bound and gagged at a lakeside park had been stabbed more than 10 times each, Justice of the Peace Joe Johnson said Friday.

Jill Montgomery and Raylene Rice, both 17-year-olds from Waxahachie, had suffered vaginal abrasions and bruises but tests to determine whether they had been raped were inconclusive, Johnson said.

Their bodies were nude when found Wednesday night. The clothed body of Kenneth Franks, 18, of Waco, was found 35 to 50 feet away.

All three victims were bound with strips of material torn from Miss Montgomery's terrycloth top, and Miss Rice's feet were bound with a bra, Johnson said.

Franks had been stabbed once in the neck and 19 times in the chest, he said. Miss Rice was stabbed 10 times in the chest and once in the neck, he said.

Miss Montgomery was stabbed or slashed once in the neck, 14 times in the chest and once on the hand, the peace justice said. She was the only one of the three with a hand wound, he said, adding that the wound indicated that she was trying to defend herself.

Johnson said autopsies indicated the three teen-agers had eaten within an hour of their deaths.

Officer Steve Beatty of the police's crime prevention unit said the department had received a number of tips concerning the case.

"There have been quite a few calls but nobody said this is the dude that did it," he said.

Police Sgt. Dennis Kidwell said one call was from a youth who said he saw Miss Rice's car in Koehne Park at 10:15 p.m. Tuesday night. The youth did not identify himself. Koehne Park is a mile across Lake Waco from where the bodies were found in Speegleville Park.

Franks' father, Richard Franks, said the girls picked his son up at 9 p.m. Tuesday and drove away in Miss Rice's car. Frank notified authorities after awaking at 4:30 a.m. Wednesday and realizing his son was not home. Miss Rice's car was found abandoned in Speegleville Park.

Franks and Miss Montgomery were both 11th graders at Waco High School and had met at the Methodist Home here. Home administrator Jack Daniels said most of the residents were children who had difficulty living with their families.

Miss Rice was a friend of Miss Montgomery's from Waxahachie and had not lived at the Methodist Home, Daniels said.

Franks was admitted to the home on Aug. 30, 1980, and released when he turned 18 on April 16. Miss Montgomery lived at the home for nearly a year before being released on July 10.

U.S. official says French have pact with Soviets

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. efforts to get European allies to limit credit to the Soviet Union were doomed by a secret agreement between the French and the Soviets, a high U.S. defense official says.

The Reagan administration was "stunned" when the French informed it of the existence of the secret protocol, the official told reporters recently on the condition that he not be identified.

"They told us of the protocol, but they refused to share its contents," the official said.

"The French pulled the rug out from under" U.S. efforts to persuade European allies to curb credit to the Soviet Union and force the Soviets to spend hard currency for necessities bought in the West, he said.

In Paris, a spokesman for the French Foreign Ministry said Friday that France has no such secret agreement with the Soviets.

"We categorically deny that a secret accord was signed with the U.S.S.R.," the spokesman said. "A financial protocol was signed with that country in 1980 and its details were communicated at the time to the OECD (the 24-nation Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development) and, as a consequence, to the United States."

The protocol apparently was completed during the administration of French President Giscard d'Estaing, the U.S. official said. D'Estaing was replaced by Francois Mitterrand in the French elections of May 1981.

It was unclear just when U.S. officials learned of the protocol, but it appeared it could have been early this year when Undersecretary of State James L. Buckley was in Europe on a mission to persuade Europeans to bear down on the Soviets.

Police recover $3.7 million in art

The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WESTBURY, N.Y. — As a police helicopter buzzed overhead, armed officers lurked in the background, and detectives posed as would-be art buyers, police arrested four men and recovered $3.7 million worth of artwork stolen two months ago.

The art, 23 pieces including a $400,000 Picasso and a Monet valued at almost $600,000, had been stolen April 13 from the nearby Sands Point home of James Howley and his wife, Manhattan clothes designer Tina Leser — the biggest theft of paintings ever reported on Long Island. The four men were held on charges of criminal possession of stolen property.

The frames were missing but the paintings themselves appeared undamaged. Detective Inspector John McGowan, in charge of special squads for the Nassau County police department, said.

The recovery of the art Thursday, according to McGowan and Detective Sergeant John Rinaldi, commander of the robbery squad, began with a call from a tipster last Tuesday. It moved from there to an acrimonious breakfast among would-be buyers and sellers at the Island Inn here and ended in a raid at Room 106 of Black's Raceway Motel several blocks away.

Held for court arraignment Friday morning on charges of criminal possession of stolen property and conspiracy to commit a crime were Lester Williams, 50, of Trenton, N.J.; Michael McLaughlin, 50, of Rockville Centre; Antonio Anfossi, 43, of Islip Terrace; and George Haag, 57, of Ridgewood, all in New York. Haag served time for the December 1974 robbery of a Garden City, N.Y., bank.

In the Sands Point break-in in three masked men, armed with a pistol and knife, entered the Howley mansion at mid-afternoon, tied up the maid and escaped with the art and some silverware.

This 1980 file photo shows an elderly Kickapoo Indian woman at a tiny village of wickiups perched on the banks of the Rio Grande, near Eagle Pass, Texas. Rep. Abraham Kazen, D-

Texas, has introduced a bill in Congress to give the aboriginal Traditional Kickapoos citizenship and a Texas reservation.

Kickapoos wait for U.S. justice

By MACK SISK

EAGLE PASS, Texas (AP) — A band of Indians whose ancestors once ruled 13 million acres near the Great Lakes are sweltering through another hot summer on the banks of the Rio Grande — waiting for the U.S. Senate to act on their request for a small plot of Texas land.

The Traditional Kickapoos claim the federal Bureau of Indian Affairs has treated them like renegades for the 150 years they have migrated through this Texas-Mexico border city, living in cardboard and cane wickiups, speaking the same Algonquin dialect and worshipping the same Indian God they have for centuries.

The House of Representatives has approved a bill by Rep. Abraham "Chick" Kazen, D-Texas, that would clarify the citizenship of about 700 impoverished Kickapoos who fled from reservations in Kansas and Oklahoma in the 1830s, alleging Christian missionaries interfered with their freedom of religion.

Since then, the aborigine tribe has migrated back and forth from Eagle Pass to a holy ground granted them early in this century by President Benito Juarez in Mexico. Eagle Pass is their home base for they travel throughout the United States as migrant farmworkers.

The Laredo congressman said the Traditional Kickapoos may be the most pure tribe of native Americans.

"It may be difficult to believe in our modern age of space travel and scientific marvels that such a situation exists, but it does," Kazen said.

Kazen's bill now goes to the Senate and tribal supporters have scheduled a meeting in San Antonio next week to plan strategy should Congress decide not to fund the proposed land purchase.

Kurt Blue Dog, an attorney for the Native American Rights Fund, headquartered in Boulder, Colo., said representatives of the Kickapoos from Eagle Pass and Oklahoma would attend the Monday meeting in San Antonio to discuss raising private funds should Congress decide against spending any money.

"I guess we're realistic enough to realize that (funding) portion of the bill is going to be real tough to get passed. What we're trying to do is do as much as we can on our own and possibly the government may augment it," the Sioux lawyer said.

"We're going to get some land. If not by federal funding, then we'll do it through contributions. There are still some people in the world with a good heart," said Nakai Breen, a Cherokee Indian reared since she was 12 among the Kickapoos.

Mrs. Breen and her husband, Bud, a western artist who has sold paintings to help the indigent Kickapoos, planned to meet with Blue Dog, the Oklahoma Kickapoo chairman, and the Rev. James McCloud of McAllen, a Presbyterian minister who has taken an interest in the plight of the tribe.

Wildlife officials worried about tests

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Morro Bay fishermen and wildlife officials are worried that plans to set off dozens of underwater explosives to study an earthquake fault could severely damage the area's rich fishing grounds.

The state Fish and Game Department, which oversees such projects, is reviewing conditions for the permit, said Joe Sheehan of the agency's Sacramento headquarters. The blasting is set for Sunday and Monday.

He said all required permits were issued previously by the Fish and Game Commission and "we don't look for it to be delayed."

The project is being conducted by researchers from the University of California-Santa Barbara and the U.S. Geological Survey, which is providing equipment and marine geologists from its center in Woods Hole, Mass. Those involved in the program were aboard the research ship Ellen B. Scripps and could not be reached earlier this week.

Bud Laurent, head of the Fish and Game Department's unit at Morro Bay, 175 miles northwest of Los Angeles, said the permit involves more than 100 charges, most of them the equivalent of 120 pounds of TNT. He said in a telephone interview the biggest concerns are for five 600-pound charges, each about the size of an oil drum, and two 1,200-pounders, similar in size to the World War II depth charges used to sink submarines.

"I am concerned," he said. "We don't know what the effects are going to be — that's the crux of it. It's my assumption there will not be wholesale losses of the fishery resource, but I haven't seen any data to indicate what effect this sort of activity would have."

He said the charges are to be exploded 300 feet down and should have little impact near the surface.

Details of the research remained unclear, although state officials said it involved a study of the Hosgri earthquake fault, which passes within three miles of the Diablo Canyon nuclear power plant. The fault, discovered after construction was begun, has sparked severe controversy over the plant's safety.

Faulty surveys lead to land disputes

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — In southern New Mexico, property owners in the small town of Cloudcroft are battling the federal government over national forest land where private citizens have inadvertently trespassed.

"It's not like getting along with an ordinary neighbor," says Dorsey Bonnell, a local leader of the fight and owner of 185 acres caught up in the dispute. Temporary boundary markers left by government surveyors started the argument.

"The government's a bad neighbor," charges Bonnell. "They just say, 'It's our way or none.' What can you do? You're just an individual."

But in northern Washington state, the federal government had to pay $480,000 after discovering that the national forest timber it sold to an adjacent landowner was actually on his land. The price for that mistake was nearly 20 times more than the government felt the timber was worth.

And officials say they're uncovering more and more instances of inaccurate private and public land survey work as they search out the real boundaries separating millions of acres of valuable federal and private lands.

They say long-standing land titles are being jeopardized and the government's losing vast sums in undeveloped resources because of uncertainty about the exact ownership of border plots.

"Those are not everyday horror stories, but they're not atypical either," says George Liddicoat, deputy director of the National Forest Service's lands division.

"We have 50,000 claims on the system...and we're accumulating them faster than we can resolve them," says Liddicoat, who headed up the service's survey program for a while. "The problem's mostly in the West, but it's pretty well scattered through the country."

Congress is now considering legislation to expedite the boundary survey program and let the Forest Service trade off or sell outright small parcels of federal land in dispute.

The problem in Cloudcroft, where only a handful of individuals and few acres of land are involved, meant "land titles were no longer considered clear, property transactions were halted, tax assessments were in disarray and property improvements were presumably lost," according to Sen. Harrison Schmitt, R-N.M.

The national forest system has 272,000 miles of boundary. Most of it was laid out decades ago by what are today considered crude surveying techniques with wide margins for error. In some cases the work was fraudulent, Liddicoat says, "done in the back of a bar or a wagon."

The accuracy of the boundaries, originally marked by blazes on trees and piles of stone or charcoal, was of little concern through the first half of the century because neither the publicly owned lands or the private plots abutting them were being developed. Many of those surveys were privately done.

After World War II, however, the value of those lands and their resources began soaring and the need for true boundary lines became apparent.

But the magnitude of the resurveying job and the high cost of modern technology that limits errors to less than six inches per mile have permitted only a few thousand miles of boundary line to be resurveyed each year.

Just 47,000 miles of work has been finished to date, and each additional mile surveyed, sometimes at a cost of $10,000 or more, turns up one or two new cases of encroachment, either by the government or a private landowner.

"In the absence of known federal land boundaries, there's bedlam," Schmitt says.

People on both sides agree that it's partly the government's fault for not making true boundary designations a high priority and partly the individuals' fault for not being certain about what they actually own.

New Jewish Agenda opposes Begin's policies

Hearst Feature Service

NEW YORK—If most Jewish groups in America support the Israeli war effort, then at least one exception stands out: the New Jewish Agenda.

"The war situation is going to continue," said NJA staff director Reena Bernard. "There are still going to be Palestinians and, until a political solution is arrived at through negotiation, there's never going to be peace." She stressed that negotiation, not war, is the only way to achieve peace.

Although the war in Lebanon is demanding a lot of its time, the NJA, through its local chapters and national task force, is also involved in other issues, including women's rights, racism, anti-semitism, gay and lesbian rights and nuclear disarmament.

The organization was formed in December 1980. Bob Trachtenberg, head of the New York chapter, explained. Today there are over 2,000 members in 22 chapters across the country, he said. "We're organizing young unaffiliated Jews. We are, in a sense, bringing bright, politically active, progressive Jews back into the Jewish community as a place to do political work. When people ask me what is the New Jewish Agenda and why it was formed, I use a catch-phrase that expresses it pretty well: To be a progressive voice within the Jewish community and a Jewish voice within the progressive community."

Bernard commented that "most Jewish organizations are supporting the policies of the Begin government, but I believe that there are a lot of people within those groups who are afraid to speak out and say that they are against those policies."

Trachtenberg continued, "Israeli society, in terms of being able to criticize its own government, is a lot more open and a lot more free-wheeling than the Jewish community here. There are a lot of people here who feel, who are we to tell Israel what to do, are we fighting the war, are we dying for Israel, are we doing anything for Israel other than sending them money? And that causes some people to say the only thing we can do is support whatever the government of Israel does. Well, that's a valid argument, but we feel that support of Israel means using one's best ideas to give to the security of Israel. It's our position that Begin's policies do not provide for the long term security of Israel."

"One of Begin's favorite tactics is to return from a trip to New York and say to the Israeli people, 'I have the entire American Jewish community behind me.' And that does make the people in Israel stop and think, maybe they should follow his policy," Trachtenberg said.

"We aim to show Begin that he does not have the American Jewish community behind him, that a sizable portion of the American Jewish community, which will defend to the death Israel's right to exist, does not equate that right to exist with Begin's specific policies."

When asked if the NJA is criticized by other Jewish groups, Bernard replied, "yes, but Jews have always been trying to solve the problems that face us as a people, always trying to find ways out of those huge problems. So because of that, Jews have always developed millions of different solutions."

Trachtenberg added, "I think dissent is healthy. I think it is the kind of thing that has kept the Jewish people vibrant through thousands of years. To limit people's opinions or ways of expression in any area, whether politics or religious observance or economic matters, can only impoverish a people."

Democrats, Republicans battle for votes through television ads

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrats and Republicans are battling with rival television ads for votes in this year's congressional elections, but the Democrats are trying to do it for free.

"Our problem as Democrats is that we don't have the money the Republicans have," Rep. Tony Coelho, D-Calif., said recently as Democrats unveiled their first campaign ad of the year.

It shows a Social Security card being snipped to pieces by scissors. An announcer suggests that Republicans are doing the clipping.

"Their advertising...is pure garbage," responded Bill Greener, a spokesman for the Republican National Committee. "Small children caught with their hands in the cookie jar could come up with more believable stories."

The Republicans have their own TV ad on the subject of Social Security. It shows an actor portraying an elderly postman delivering Social Security checks.

The GOP ad suggests the automatic 7.4 percent July cost-of-living increase contained in the checks is there because "President Reagan kept his promise."

Democrats call that misleading and inaccurate—and say TV stations should run the competing Democratic ad free of charge to set the record straight.

So far, they haven't had any takers.

"The president has repeatedly proposed delaying or diminishing Social Security benefits," said Coelho, chairman of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee.

Secrecy strict rule of Bohemians

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Deep in a redwood forest, far from the daily pressure of business and politics, some of the world's richest and most powerful men are gathering in a secret annual rite of summer.

Wearing hooded robes, they cluster around campfires in the cool, starry night, sharing jokes and silly amusements while a blazing icon symbolically burns away the world's troubles.

In the odd setting along the Russian River, known simply as the Bohemian Club's Encampment, West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt will spend a few days with George Shultz, confirmed by the Senate on Thursday as secretary of state, and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger.

The all-male frolic, which began Friday, takes place in a fiercely guarded 2,700-acre camp 75 miles north of San Francisco.

The Bohemian Club, which also has an elegant brick home in San Francisco, was founded in 1872 by newspapermen and artists. But their need for money after several years led them to admit the well-to-do, who have come to dominate the club.

Current members include President Reagan, former Presidents Gerald R. Ford and Richard Nixon, Vice President George Bush and Attorney General William French Smith. Reagan has no plans to attend this encampment.

As corporate presidents drink and play dominoes with Cabinet members at cabins in the woods, Shultz will host Schmidt for the weekend of July 23-25 — a vacation established long before Shultz was named to head the State Department.

The roughly 2,000 campers will be greeted at the gates by protesters upset by the Bohemian Grove's men-only policy, its secrecy and its power.

"These are the plutocrats. They are the ones who run our country," said Jay Newbern, a spokesman for the coalition of protesters from 57 peace, politics, environmental and feminist groups. "We don't object to their getting together. We object to their doing it in secret."

Herbert Hoover once called it "the greatest men's party on earth." The club's literature contends the 17-day summer camp at the Bohemian Grove is just for relaxation. Business talk is supposed to be forbidden, but it is expected that Schmidt, Shultz and Weinberger will discuss some important issues.

"They're not going to talk about what movies they've seen," said a State Department source who asked not be named.

Secrecy is a strict rule among the Bohemians. But a few have described the scene in their books or in interviews. And a Mother Jones magazine reporter infiltrated the camp in 1981.

Animal lovers mad at 'bunny burgers'

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Animal lovers are furious over what they say is the rabbit industry's plot to make "bunny burgers" as commonplace as Big Macs and finger-lickin' chicken.

"We want to stop it before it gets going," said George Cave, founder of an animal rights group.

But breeders say rabbits can be bred humanely and that animal rights groups are over-reacting.

"Right now, it's the best meat you can eat — but we have that crazy image to overcome," countered Ed Peifer, an official of a national rabbit breeders group.

"Kids say they're not going to eat the Easter Bunny or Peter Cottontail," concedes Peifer.

But widespread rabbit consumption in the United States is inevitable, he said, as the price of land and thus beef skyrocket out of the reach of consumers.

Nantucket serves up bits of history with hors d'oeuvres

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

NANTUCKET, Mass. (AP) — Down at the end of Nantucket town's cobblestoned Main Street stands the quaint and historic Pacific Club, the only place in my considerable experience as an insomniac where I have seen folks playing cards at 7 o'clock in the morning.

This observation, however, does not include the tourists aboard the posh powerboats tied up along Straight Wharf, who deal out the first hand as soon as the sun breaks through Nantucket's perennial fog, which can be as early as 5 a.m. or three days later.

What, you may ask, is the Pacific Club doing to justify itself on this charming little island 20 miles out in the Atlantic Ocean off Cape Cod?

Well it seems the club was founded quite some decades ago by captains of Nantucket whaling ships mostly worked in Pacific waters. Over the doorway are the facsimile nameboards of the Eleanor, the Dartmouth and the Beaver, three locally owned brigantines whose holds contributed the necessary oolong for the Boston Tea Party. The club now is frequented by some of the saltiest characters on view anywhere outside a label for canned clam chowder (New England style) or a box of oysterettes: bearded and grizzled retired sea captains, skippers of commercial fishing boats, a semiretired charter boat captain or two and perhaps a few out of work actors hired by the local Chamber of Commerce from central casting to add more local color to an island dune deep and drifting with nautical nostalgia.

STEP OFF A 30-foot sloop as we did, seeking surcease from the tumultuous seas and salt-spray soggy sandwiches at an island chowder house, and the placemats set before you help work up an appetite by recalling the grisly murders and mutiny aboard the Nantucket whaler, the Globe. It gave our wind-and-work-wearied crew, three days out with three days left to go before returning to permanent duty aboard our LSDs (large steel desks), a few ideas about abruptly altering the command structure. The plot, however, never quite hatched. Since only the captain (a complex blend of Bligh, Queeg and Ahab) knew how to read a map or a chart or whatever they call those mayonnaise stained rolls of tattered paper kept beneath the bunk mattress in the main and only cabin, we chose tyranny over certain immortality as an offshore navigation hazard marker.

Speaking of mutiny, local lore here also tells of the tart-tongued Nantucket whaling captain who staged a one-man mutiny at a church social on the island when one of the serving ladies brought his bowl of oyster stew.

"Tell the cook," he instructed the waitress, "to put a few more oysters in this bowl. The only ones I've seen so far are about a day's sail apart."

I wish I had worked up enough courage to use that line at an overpriced and grossly over-praised seafood place where the jumbo shrimp in the shrimp cocktail were about as frequent as scheduled El Al flights into Jeddah airport.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN'S mother, the placemat at another restaurant informed us, was born on Nantucket, and the island suffered severe shipping losses in the Revolutionary War. You get a lot of history with the hors d'oeuvres around here, even if the drinks are about as weak as that tea they served at the Boston Tea Party.

Speaking of which, all the invitees came dressed as Mohawk Indians, the password for guests at the Boston Tea Party was "ugh," followed by the countersign, "Me know you" — all of this a century and a half before Hollywood invented the white man who spoke with forked tongue.

"We were merry," recalled journeyman blacksmith Joshua Wyeth, one of the perpetrators who boarded the Beaver, "at the idea of making so large a cup of tea for the fishes."

Most seaside hotels and boarding houses have blue shutters, a color previously reserved for whaling captains and first mates.

Before they got into the much more lucrative business of gaffing tourists, the Nantucket Islanders practically invented whaling and the art of harpooning. The end result is pretty much the same, depending on whether you consider it more humane to see tourists or whales' blubber.

Herman Melville might have been writing about hotel and souvenir prices instead of a chapter in "Moby Dick," when he observed, "and thus have these naked Nantucketers, these sea-hermits, issuing from their antihill in the sea, overrun and conquered the watery world like so many Alexanders" — except that now the occasional case of nudity on the beach issues forth from the decks of the ferries arriving every couple of hours from Hyannis and Woods Hole.

BEATING TOWARD this virtually treeless island, our frail sloop was hurried along by the phenomenon of tide and current called the "Nantucket Sleigh Ride," the name given by whalers to the ride a long boat experiences when towed by a harpooned humpback.

No travel book that I have come across pins down the island and its peculiar land and seascapes as deftly as Melville harpooned their curious charms in another memorable passage in his writings:

"Take out your map and look at it. See what a real corner of the world it occupies; how it stands there away off shore, more lonely than the Eddystone Lighthouse. Look at it — a mere hillock, an elbow of sand; all beach without a background."

"There is more sand there than you would use in 20 years as a substitute for blotting paper. Some gamesome wights will tell you that they have to plant weeds there, they don't grow naturally; that they import Canadian thistle; that they have to send beyond the seas for a spile to stop a leak in an oil cask; that pieces of wood in Nantucket are carried about like bits of the true cross in Rome; that people there plant toadstools before their houses to get under the shade in summertime; that one blade of grass makes an oasis; three blades a day's walk in a prairie; that they wear quicksand shoes, something like Laplander snow-shoes; that they are so shut up, belted about, every way enclosed, surrounded and made an utter island of the ocean; that to their very chairs and tables small clams will sometimes be found adhering, as to the back of seatruffles. But these extravagances only show that Nantucket is no Illinois."

Unless they're handing you a bill for minor repairs to a marine engine, gamesome wights don't spin tall yarns like that on Nantucket anymore. Not even in the Pacific Club, Illinois, it's not.

Musician built own airplane to fly to rehearsals

By LES SEAGO

TULLAHOMA, Tenn. (AP) — Larry Hoepfinger makes the 85-mile trip from his Cookeville home to Nashville twice a week in about 30 minutes, but he doesn't worry about traffic tickets or state troopers.

Hoepfinger, 42, who doubles as a professor of music at Tennessee Tech and as the Nashville Symphony Orchestra's bass trombonist, makes the trip in his own airplane — one he built himself.

"If I had to drive it all the time, I wouldn't do it," the bearded Hoepfinger said at a recent gathering of home-built airplane enthusiasts in Tullahoma. "It was bad enough when the speed limit was 75, but when they dropped the speed limit to 55 it made the trip a whole lot longer."

Hoepfinger has been at Tennessee Tech for 16 years. A native of Nebraska, he began flying in 1968 and is now a commercial pilot and flight instructor.

He began commuting to his symphony rehearsals and performances shortly after earning his private pilot's license, flying in a Cessna Skyhawk. A few years later he purchased a Mooney, a more sophisticated airplane capable of about 180 mph.

THEN HE became involved in the Experimental Aircraft Association, an international organization made up of sport aviation enthusiasts who build their own airplanes or restore antique and classic planes.

In 1976, Hoepfinger decided to build a Vari-Eze, a fiberglass plane designed by Californian But Rutan. The futuristic-looking Vari-Eze's swept wings and propeller are in the rear and a small "canard" wing is mounted in the nose.

The pilot and passenger sit beneath a plastic bubble similar to those on jet fighter planes.

But what caught Hoepfinger's eye was the plane's speed and efficiency. The plane's designer was claiming speeds of almost 200 mph on less than five gallons of fuel an hour.

"I had no inclination to build an airplane," Hoepfinger said. "But then I read the articles about the plane...It just made a lot of sense."

THE MUSICIAN-PILOT took almost three years to complete his airplane project, although he stopped work on it for about 10 months. He flew it for the first time in the summer of 1979.

"We had carburetor and oil temperature problems at first, and it took a while to get that straightened out," he said.

He began using his Vari-Eze for his Nashville trip later that year after the Federal Aviation Administration granted the aircraft an experimental license.

He carries his trombone along with him in the back cockpit, lands at Nashville's Berry Field and completes his trip in an old car he leaves at the airport.

"Sometime I have to drive all the way, but not very often," he said. "It's a lot easier trip in the plane."

Hoepfinger's wife, who also plays in the Nashville symphony, doesn't make the trip with him.

"SHE'S IN Nashville a lot more than I am, so she doesn't need to commute as often as I do," he said. "But it wouldn't make any difference...She plays the harp and it won't fit in the plane."

Rev. Jarrell H. Sharp and Rev. Kenneth W. James

Sharp, James to serve as St' Luke's pastors

Bishop Louis W. Schewengerdt recently appointed the Rev. Jarrell H. Sharp and the Rev. Kenneth James to serve St. Luke's United Methodist Church this year as senior and associate pastors respectively.

The appointment was made at the annual Northwest Texas Conference, held in Amarillo in June. Sharp and his wife, Bertha, had served First UMC in Hereford last year, while James and his wife, Frances, came to Midland from the First UMC in Higgins.

Sharp, a graduate of Amarillo High School and McMurry College, received his master's of theology from Iliff School of Theology at Denver, Colo. He is currently working on his doctor of ministry in the field of gerontology at Saint Paul School of Theology at Kansas City, Mo.

Prior to his appointment at Hereford, he served as district superintendent of the Seymour District of the Northwest Texas Conference. Sharp is a member of the Council on Finance and Administration of the Northwest Texas Conference of the UMC and is a trustee for Southwestern University at Georgetown.

Sharp has served as pastor of Means Memorial UMC at Andrews, St. John's UMC at Stamford, Wesley UMC at Big Spring and at the First United Methodist churches at Knox City and Blackwell.

James graduated from high school at Wickes, Ark., and entered the United States Air force where he served for 20 years. He was stationed in Georgia, Scotland, El Paso, Virginia, Taiwan, Formosa and Abilene.

While a member of Elmwood West UMC at Abilene in 1970, James entered McMurry College to become a minister. Both he and his wife are McMurry graduates. They have served pastorates in Trent, Roby, Ropesville and Groom.

Sylvia Moss, 46, actress, mother, artist, poses with some of her photographic work. Through doors, windows and especially through the eyes of a camera, Ms. Moss says she has found something she has discredited since she was a teenager.

Camera turned artist on to religion

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

NEW YORK (AP) — Through passageways, she made her discovery. Through doors, windows and especially through the eye of a camera, she says she found something she long had discredited — the reality of God.

"God works in funny ways to get people to respond," says Sylvia Moss. "To get me he had to use some kind of creative device. His way of pulling me into the church was the camera."

Involved, too, were the frequent subjects of her pictures — those archways, portals and windows, and the question of what lay beyond them.

Ms. Moss, 46, actress, mother, artist, says that ever since her teens she had rejected religion.

But the camera "triggered my spiritual awareness," she said in an interview. "It's what turned me." Concentrating, silent, peering through a lens, she said, she came to see a new, mystical dimension.

"It drew me to the church," she said. "It was a very strong feeling that something was there, and it made me want to go more deeply into what I was feeling."

She did so about a year and a half ago, shortly after taking up photography. She's now an active Episcopalian, a lay reader at Manhattan's Calvary Episcopal Church, and credits the camera, the sights it evoked, as the catalyst that first got her there.

Distinctively, many of her pictures in the exhibit are of openings to somewhere else, of doorways, partly shuttered windows, a slit in an ancient castle wall, a bright break in dark tree tops overhead.

"They beckon me to come through," she said. "Some are closed, some partly open, and you wonder what's beyond. It pulls you to it, beyond self. Just as in life you're drawn beyond today and tomorrow."

She regards her pictures as a kind of "small ministry to get people to see, to spell out visually the creation, how man is intermingled with it and has a responsibility for it."

Dallas Catholic Church burglarized

DALLAS (AP) — Monsignor John Brady has turned the other cheek to sinners who come to his church, not to repent there but to burglarize.

St. Edward's Catholic Church has been burglarized at least three times in the last three years, and robbers have terrorized Brady and his secretary, Aida LaBelle.

The rectory has been ransacked and Brady, 86, and Mrs. LaBelle, 73, have both been assaulted there.

Despite the crimes, Brady said he will not retire.

"I like work. If you retire, you get old," he said in an Irish brogue. "Try me again in 20 years."

Pueblo 'sun dagger' to air on PBS

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Anna Sofaer didn't exactly stumble onto the Anasazi Indian sun calendar, the sophisticated, centuries-old marvel that is the subject of an hour-long documentary on public television. But luck is an important part of her story.

"I was stunned," she recalls of her discovery in the summer of 1977. "I remember the incredible feeling of seeing that dagger right smack in the center of the spiral carving."

"I said to the fellow who was with me, 'That is marking the highest point of the sun on the longest day of the year."

The blade of bright sunlight moved as Ms. Sofaer and her companion watched, "as if," remembers, "it were alive."

Had Ms. Sofaer, an artist and now filmmaker, arrived minutes later, she might have missed the significance of the event. For by then, the dagger would have advanced past the center of the carved spiral. But not necessarily, she says.

"I had had two courses in archaeoastronomy, mostly Mayan, so the consciousness was very much with me," she says. "What made it quite unique was that shadow and light would mark the height of the midday sun, rather than its rising and setting points."

"Had I been there 20 years ago," she says, "I wouldn't have had the faintest idea of what I had seen."

"The Sun Dagger," narrated by Robert Redford, will be the subject of an upcoming segment of "Odyssey," shown on Fridays at 9 p.m. on channel 13, the local PBS station. (Check your Television Viewguide for the date the "Sun Dagger" will be shown.) Central subject aside, it is a beautiful film shot in a singular setting —

New Mexico's Chaco Canyon, which was inhabited by the Anasazi a thousand years ago.

The Indians abandoned their Pueblo Bonito — beautiful village — three hundred years after it was settled, leaving behind exquisite ruins and the scientific wonder.

While exploring Fajada Butte, near the Anasazi settlement, Ms. Sofaer saw the shaft of sunlight pass through a narrow opening between three stone slabs to pierce the center of the spiral petroglyph, or rock carving. It was precisely noon.

She determined in later visits that the solar calendar not only marked the summer solstice, but the winter solstice, spring and fall equinoxes, and the 19-year cycle of the moon.

When Ms. Sofaer introduced her discovery to the scientific community, she was greeted with characteristic skepticism.

"The scholars in the field would say, 'We know of no other markings like this. If you could find another...'" she says. "For me, there was nothing astounding about the fact that there could be such a remarkable place on top of such a unique and sacred location. To me, it is not at all unusual that there would be only one."

She's changed her mind some since then—now she welcomes the scientific discussion—though her discovery still is the subject of conflicting opinion. There are those who believe the Anasazi, who could neither read nor write, incapable of the calculation required to create the sun calendar.

And there's the question of whether the slabs were moved into their present setting by the Indians, or fell into place from the rocks above. Ms. Sofaer believes they were moved there by the Anasazi.

But the physical aspect may not be the most significant, she says.

"I think the most important meaning is in what it shows about these people's integration of science and religion, and that also works together in a piece of art," she says.

Original concept of 'Dallas' not successful

By FRED ROTHENBERG

NEW YORK (AP) — Lee Rich had an idea for a series. It would be about a girl, with a smirched reputation, who came from the other side of the tracks. By good looks and good luck, she marries a wealthy playboy and becomes part of a powerful Texas family, only her background prevents her from being accepted.

The story line, with some changes, became a series in 1978, receiving negative reviews and limited interest from the public.

But Rich knew better. "I knew it would be a hit, but I didn't think it would be this big."

Rich, head of Lorimar Productions, is talking about CBS' "Dallas," the top-rated show the past two seasons and one of the biggest hits in television history.

The original concept was changed because it was too narrow. Rich didn't think the Pam Ewing character would work fighting the family all the time, "so we made it a total family drama and gave Pam (Victoria Principal) a totally different character."

Ironically, the first concept bears a resemblance to "Dynasty," the ABC prime-time soap opera. ("They stole that from us," says Rich.) "Dynasty," after two seasons, is gaining popularity, finishing 20th for the 1981-82 season.

Larry Hagman's reptilian J.R. character was also modified. "He was always the villain," says Rich. "The fight between Pam and J.R. was going to happen. But we just made him a bigger bad guy."

Rich has had his failures — NBC's "Flamingo Road" and ABC's "Midland Heights" are two recent examples. "But the only time I wasn't proud was when I did a show badly."

He says that happened with "Hunter," starring James Franciscus.

The 1977 show, about a foreign agent, was quickly canceled.

"For a series to work, you have to know what you're going to say in the 10th and 20th show. With 'Hunter,' I didn't know where it was going."

Rich seems to have his finger on the pulse of many viewers. His major successes range from the sweetness of "The Waltons" to the tango "Dallas" and its gentler Friday night companion, "Falcon Crest."

"I understand ratings," says Rich. "I try to discover trends, then try to convince the networks to do them. My programming is larger than life and it doesn't take itself too seriously."

Rich says he is equally proud of "Dallas" and "The Waltons."

"The Waltons" were right for the time," he says. "People were saying, 'That's my family, or I wished that was my family.'"

"Dallas" was a respite for the American public, a fantasyland," he says. "We fulfilled the dreams of many people."

"Dallas" is seen in 85 countries. But it's a bust in Japan, where the family feuding is not understood and is contrary to the nation's value system.

"I don't care how it does in Japan," says Rich. "I much rather have it do well in England, Germany and France."

Entering its fifth season, "Dallas" will branch into new plot areas, including the development in which the widowed Miss Ellie will be wooed by a flock of suitors.

"Dallas" will also venture into the movie theaters, with a feature-length film. Lorimar, which did the movies "Victory" and "S.O.B.," is no novice to theatrical films. But the question is: Will people pay for what they get for free on Friday nights?

Granny rocks on Thursdays as San Francisco disc jockey

By LARRY RYCKMAN

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Ruth Bennett spends her Thursday afternoons rocking. But the 77-year-old Mrs. Bennett isn't on the front porch knitting.

She's on the airwaves of San Francisco's top FM rock radio station.

Mrs. Bennett is a disc jockey at KMEL, where her son Alex works as a morning personality.

"At my age, this is incredible," she admits. "But it's kind of fun, and maybe I'll learn something from it. As long as I can enjoy it, I guess I'll do it."

Mrs. Bennett began her rock radio career last Mother's Day, after making a hit with station executives at a roast honoring her son, whose cranky, contentious demeanor is a trademark.

While others used notes as they poked fun at her son, Mrs. Bennett winged it, charming the crowd of 700 with her "refreshing sincerity," says KMEL's general manager, Rick Lee.

"I guess they decided I was a natural, so here I am," she giggles. "They said it was going to be fun—kind of a kick."

She says she's enjoying her new job, and sometimes even listens to rock music when she's not taping her hour-long show, which is broadcast on Sundays.

"It was not my kind of music," she says. "I've always been into Beethoven, Bach and ballet. But it's good. We have to accept it as the music of today—it belongs to the kids."

Irving novel in production

By The Associated Press

"The World According to Garp" attempts the near-impossible: to convert a wildly imaginative, highly popular novel into a film.

George Roy Hill has dared this high wire act before ("Slaughterhouse 5") and should be commended for bravery as well as skill. As millions of readers of the John Irving novel know, T.S. Garp is the out-of-wedlock son of a free-minded nurse.

His tortured route to manhood includes incredible hazards. Steve Tesich ("Breaking Away") has adapted the book with a careful eye for the insanities of modern living, and Hill's direction is superior, skewering the pomposities that can be found among the macho and the liberated. The basic problem with the film is suspending disbelief (would a couple really buy a house after an airplane crashed into it), and overcoming the suspicion that whatever bad can happen to Garp will happen. Robin Williams discards his Morkisms for a credible portrait of the fated hero, and the rest of the cast is remarkably good, especially Mary Beth Hurt as his wife, Glenn Close as his mother and John Lithgow as the transsexual former tight end of the Philadelphia Eagles.

Tanzanian gallery protects heritage

By MARTHA HONEY

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (AP) — Next door to an ice cream parlor on a dusty thoroughfare of this east African capital stands an art gallery whose aim is to preserve Tanzania's cultural heritage.

"Nyumba ya Sanaa" or "House of Art" is a cooperative run by young people putting into practice the philosophy of Tanzanian-style socialism. Today it is a million-dollar business.

Its moving spirit is Sister Jean Pruitt, 48, an energetic and creative American Maryknoll nun.

Originally from Los Angeles, Sister Jean first came to Tanzania in 1968. She now speaks fluent Swahili, shares a house with several Tanzanians from the art center, and considers Tanzania her permanent home.

Sister Jean, a social worker and nutritionist, had discovered through her work in child welfare clinics the tremendous problem of poverty among urban youths with limited education and employment possibilities.

An accomplished artist herself, she also was concerned with preserving and popularizing Tanzanian customs and folklore, which are being lost in the urban environment.

"I found the local art work was being made mainly by expatriates and sold as Tanzanian art," Sister Jean recalled. "Tourists and others could not find works by real Tanzanian craftspeople."

So in 1972, she and several Tanzanian youths pooled their meager resources and opened a small artists' collective run on a shoestring.

Nyumba ya Sanaa grew quickly. Today it employs 65 people, has an annual gross income of $2 million and has held exhibitions in a dozen countries, including the United States.

Nyumba ya Sanaa is now constructing—with Norwegian and Dutch aid—Tanzania's first modern art center which will house a gallery, workshops, gift shop, restaurant and facilities for poetry readings and other artistic performances.

The gallery currently produces a vast array of sophisticated arts and crafts, and is rapidly gaining an international reputation.

In their works, artists combine traditional Tanzanian art forms with contemporary styles and techniques.

For the first time, several Makonde artists, who traditionally carve three-dimensional ebony and ivory sculptures, have begun translating the figures into designs for batiks, fabrics, prints, paintings and calabash carvings.

Whenever possible, the artists and artisans use local materials. The jewelry, for example, incorporates meerschaum—a mineral found only in Tanzania and Turkey—as well as ivory, ebony, seeds, bones, amber and ostrich eggs.

Two years ago, the gallery began a hand-operated paper mill—believed to be the only one of its kind on the African continent. Tanzania has no paper plant, and with an acute foreign exchange shortage here, importing fine-grade paper has been virtually impossible.

All major decisions at the art center are made through general meetings and a workers' council.

"We've tried to open up the whole group to decision-making, especially regarding money," sister Jean explained.

"Wages and bonuses are based on the evaluation of a person's performance by the entire collective."

In the beginning the artists preferred to be paid in the customary way—by the piece. But now they all receive monthly salaries, medical benefits and yearly wage increases based on their productivity and skill.

Sister Jean asserted that this allowed them time to experiment and develop techniques.

This wren's home is made of an old western boot. The unusual house was made by a friend of Mrs. Jo Sketchley of Mansfield, Texas, and now hangs on Mrs. Sketchley's clothesline pole.

Man holding officers at bay kills Baltimore police dog

TOWSON, Md. (AP) — An honor guard presided and "Taps" was played for the burial of a police dog killed in the line of duty.

The Baltimore police department earlier this week paid final homage to Sultan, who was killed Monday by a shotgun blast when he charged into a row house where a man had held police at bay for 23 hours. Police also retired the German shepherd's badge, No. 622.

Layoffs fact of life, says consultant

By Laurie Itow
Hearst Feature Service

The clue could be as subtle as a company memo that by-passes your desk or as blatant as the layoff of a co-worker. In either case, it may be a sign that your job is in jeopardy.

Layoffs are a fact of life during these difficult economic times. You should be aware of signs that might indicate your job is in danger, and you should be prepared to react, says Michael Loscavio, vice president of Corporate Services Group, a management consulting firm in San Francisco.

One obvious indicator of pending layoffs is a company's dismal financial performance, Loscavio says. If revenues have dropped or expenses increased, there's a good chance that staff cuts will be made. You should also take notice of industry-wide problems that could help indicate the future direction of the firm.

Loscavio points out that other clues might become apparent to senior-level workers who have been targeted for layoff. Managers might find that they've been excluded from meetings or that they're being weaned away from the usual stream of company memos. He also notes that layoffs at large companies often occur in phases. If fellow employees begin to lose jobs, you might have to face the same prospect yourself.

Once the company has made the decision to lay off a worker, Loscavio believes there's little a worker can do to reverse the decision. Employees might save jobs, however, by coming up with a way to increase productivity or decrease expenses. If there's an open management, the employer might even solicit ideas on how to adjust to bad times.

"If you like the company you're working for, you might ask yourself: 'How can I help the company do better? What kinds of things can I do to make sure the jobs are still here,'" Loscavio says. "An employee group might get together and make recommendations, brainstorm and develop a cooperative relationship."

Loscavio doesn't give any weight to eating lunches at your desk or working late into the evening to impress the boss. That's more show than substance, and won't save your job. The key is being a consistently good worker who gets the job done, whether it takes you eight or 10 hours makes no difference, he says.

Loscavio notes that because economic conditions are so adverse, even top-notch employees aren't immune to unemployment. During good times, workers are let go because of poor performance. But during a recession, even the good workers go. Some companies may decide who goes first based on seniority and not job performance.

He adds, though, that you have a better chance of being kept on if you learn more than one job skill. If you can fill more than one position or can do parts of several jobs, that's a little job insurance. And if the company folds, you'll be a more attractive prospect when job-hunting because you can contribute more to a company.

Anti-abortion convention draws opponents

CHERRY HILL, N.J. (AP) — Abortion is "an inescapable national dilemma" and a problem that "must be confronted," President Reagan has told abortion foes meeting here.

Delegates say pending anti-abortion legislation gives them a chance to confront that dilemma.

"This is the first time in the history of our movement that we actually have legislation on the floor of Congress that actually has a chance of stopping a few abortions," said Dr. Jack Willke, president of the national Right to Life Committee, which opened its 10th annual convention this week for about 2,000 delegates nationwide.

Meanwhile, opponents of the group's efforts to halt abortions were hoping to attract 5,000 marchers for a demonstration today.

"It is appropriate that a national rally be held to represent the view of the majority of Americans that abortion must remain legal," said Jean Hunt, a coordinator of the national coalition of 130 groups.

In a filmed message, Reagan told the abortion foes, "Our concern is to make America healthy economically, morally, in every way."

According to a transcript provided by convention organizers, Reagan said, "As Congress approaches the three-quarters mark in its current session, you deserve much more than thanks or mere verbal support."

Two bills have been introduced that would nullify the 1973 U.S. Supreme Court decision legalizing abortion. Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., has sponsored a "Human Life Bill" that would extend full legal protection to unborn fetuses, while Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, seeks an amendment declaring that the right to abortion is not guaranteed by the Constitution, thus allowing states to restrict them.

Proposed decree ruffling ad feathers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department filed a proposed consent decree with a federal judge Friday that would prevent the broadcast industry from agreeing to limit the number of commercials aired by TV stations.

If approved, the proposed settlement could lead to more ads — and subsequent demands that the Federal Communications Commission step in.

Not only would the agreement prevent the industry's largest trade group from promulgating or enforcing guidelines governing the number and length of commercials aired by TV stations, it would lift constraints on the number of products that can be promoted within a single commercial.

THE PROPOSED DECREE is intended to settle a 1979 antitrust suit filed by the Justice Department against the advertising standards contained in the National Association of Broadcasters' Television Code of Good Practices.

While viewers may think there are already too many commercials on television, the Justice Department suit argues the association's code standards allow broadcasters to improperly control the amount of commercial time available to advertisers, thereby artificially driving up the cost of air time.

The code is voluntary and adherence to its provisions essentially entitles a broadcaster to nothing more than the right to display the national association's Seal of Good Practices. Nevertheless, it has been widely followed by the industry as well as by the three major commercial networks.

The proposed repeal of the code's advertising standards prompted predictions Friday that TV stations would begin airing more commercials, and suggestions the Federal Communications Commission should replace the code with mandatory regulations.

"It's a green light," said Samuel Simon of the National Citizens Committee for Broadcasting, a public interest group chaired by consumer advocate Ralph Nader. "It might begin slowly, but I'm sure the advertising community is going to use every trick in the book for their clients to get more air time. Logic would suggest it's time for the FCC to step in."

A TOP COMMISSION official made it clear, however, that the agency is not inclined to do that.

"We certainly don't contemplate adopting standards of our own unless there is some really solid evidence to show it's necessary," said Randy Nichols, top aide to FCC Chairman Mark S. Fowler. "Our studies have always shown, most recently in research on radio, that broadcasters air commercials at levels below what the code specifies. And we don't expect that to change."

The proposed consent decree was filed with U.S. District Judge Harold H. Greene, who struck down one of code's three major advertising guidelines last March. He had ordered a trial to test the legality of the other two.

The judge ordered federal prosecutors Friday to publish the settlement in the Federal Register and in newspapers in Washington, New York and Los Angeles. The public will have 60 days to file comments before he rules on the matter.

The standard Greene struck down last March, which would be incorporated as part of the proposed settlement submitted Friday, prohibited the promotion of two or more unrelated products in a single commercial of less than 60 seconds duration.

The second code standard attacked by the Justice Department restricts the amount of time per hour that can be devoted to commercials. For example, it specifies that no more than 9 1/4 minutes of commercials should air during each hour. The third standard covers the number of times that a program should be interrupted for commercials; for instance, only two times every 30 minutes during prime time.

In striking down the multi-product standard last March, Greene issued an exceptionally strong opinion that helped prompt settlement talks. He concluded the overall code's influence was "was so pervasive...that it stands between the nation's airwaves and even the most powerful business enterprise."

While hesitant to discuss the matter, broadcast association officials said privately they proposed the settlement in hopes of avoiding a ruling that could be used as evidence in private damage suits.

WHILE GIVING UP on time standards, the broadcasters' association would be allowed to maintain other portions of its code under the settlement, including, for example, a ban on advertising hard liquor.

Association General Manager John Summers said it was still unclear, however, whether the association would keep other parts of its code. He noted that the organization dismantled its code enforcement staff after Greene's March ruling.

Doctors successfully part deformed Siamese twins

CHICAGO (AP) — Doctors have separated severely deformed year-old Siamese twin boys whose parents once were accused of trying to starve them, hospital officials said Friday.

Scott and Jeff Mueller of Danville were in critical but stable condition following Thursday's operation at Children's Memorial Hospital, said spokeswoman Valerie Woods.

The boys were joined at the pelvis and shared a lower intestinal tract and bladder. They also had three legs between them — two that were distinct and a third which had been described by doctors as a fusion of what would have been another pair of legs.

Mr. Woods declined to provide details of the surgery, saying physicians and the parents, Dr. Robert Mueller and his wife, Pamela Schopp, a nurse, asked that no additional information be provided.

The charges against the parents were dropped last year. The couple could not be reached for comment Friday despite repeated calls to their home in Danville in central Illinois.

James Borbely, a Danville attorney representing the couple, also said he could not provide details about the operation.

"It's a difficult time for the family," he said. "We're doing all we can to respect their privacy."

He did say, however, the twins had been doing well recently. "They've gotten bigger and stronger and better," he said.

Vermilion County Circuit Judge John Meyer, who had been supervising the twins' care, said surgery had to be performed now to increase the chances of the twins' "long-term survival."

Meyer said doctors have given a good prognosis to Jeff but are "extremely guarded" about Scott, who has a heart condition.

Earlier this week, Meyer signed an order permitting the surgery. That order came a day after the parents filed a document in court saying the twins' "stamina and ability to undergo anesthesia is greatly improved" and many aspects of surgery that were impossible a year ago "are now feasible."

The document said Scott's heart problems are serious and posed a threat to his brother's health.

"For Jeff and Scott, if any degree of normal function is to be preserved, surgery, if it is to be done at all, should be done as soon as possible," it added.

Fred Underhill, a court-appointed attorney who represents Jeff, said by performing surgery, doctors believed they could increase Scott's chances of survival because they could operate on him later without endangering the other twin.

The twins' parents were charged with attempted murder when they were accused of denying food to the babies after their birth May 5, 1981.

Vermilion County State's Attorney Edward Litak filed the charges, but a judge ruled after several hearings that there was insufficient evidence to prosecute and dropped the charges.

The twins were released to the parents' custody last fall under the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services' supervision.

In May, Meyer granted the couple full legal custody of the twins and ordered the parents to have the babies examined for possible surgical separation.

Analyst predicts corporate moves

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Corporations relocating headquarters during the 1980s will favor midsize metropolitan areas such as Kansas City, Nashville, Tenn., Phoenix, Ariz., and Albuquerque, N.M., at the expense of large Sun Belt cities like Houston and Atlanta, L. Clinton Hoch, a location specialist for private industry said at a meeting of the Kansas City Area Economic Development Council.

"Our clients are paying more attention to cities like Kansas City and Little Rock for corporate facilities," says Hoch, executive vice president of the New Jersey-based Fantus Co. a consulting firm that has assisted thousands of American companies with relocations.

"Over the next decade we will see the movement of many corporations into the central time zone because that is the place where they can do business most effectively and at the least cost," Hoch says, citing advantages of lower communications costs and access to both coasts for more hours of each working day.

Hoch pinpoints four chronological "waves" of office relocations in the United States since 1900: to big cities (New York, Chicago, San Francisco), then to the suburbs, next to Sun Belt cities and, on the horizon, to smaller independent cities.

"The suburbs have lost their appeal in terms of costs, and the distant cities like Houston have become overheated," Hoch says. "They're reaping the negative dividends of overexpansion — high living costs, high housing costs, high everything."

National Archives' microfilm, tapes deteriorating rapidly

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Archives' holdings of magnetic tape and microfilm are growing so large, so quickly, that preserving these records has become a major concern, says Dr. Leslie Smith of the National Bureau of Standards.

Smith, a member of the American Chemical Society, is investigating the problem for the Archives. Part of the problem is that relatively little is known about the aging process of these materials. To avoid losing any valuable information, the tapes and films are recopied every few years.

But Smith says that in just two to three years the volume of the tapes and films will be so large that recopying at present intervals will be physically and financially impossible.

In a study to be completed in 1985, Smith hopes to find ways of monitoring tapes and films so that archivists can pick out those in the worst shape and take preventive measures before they are lost.

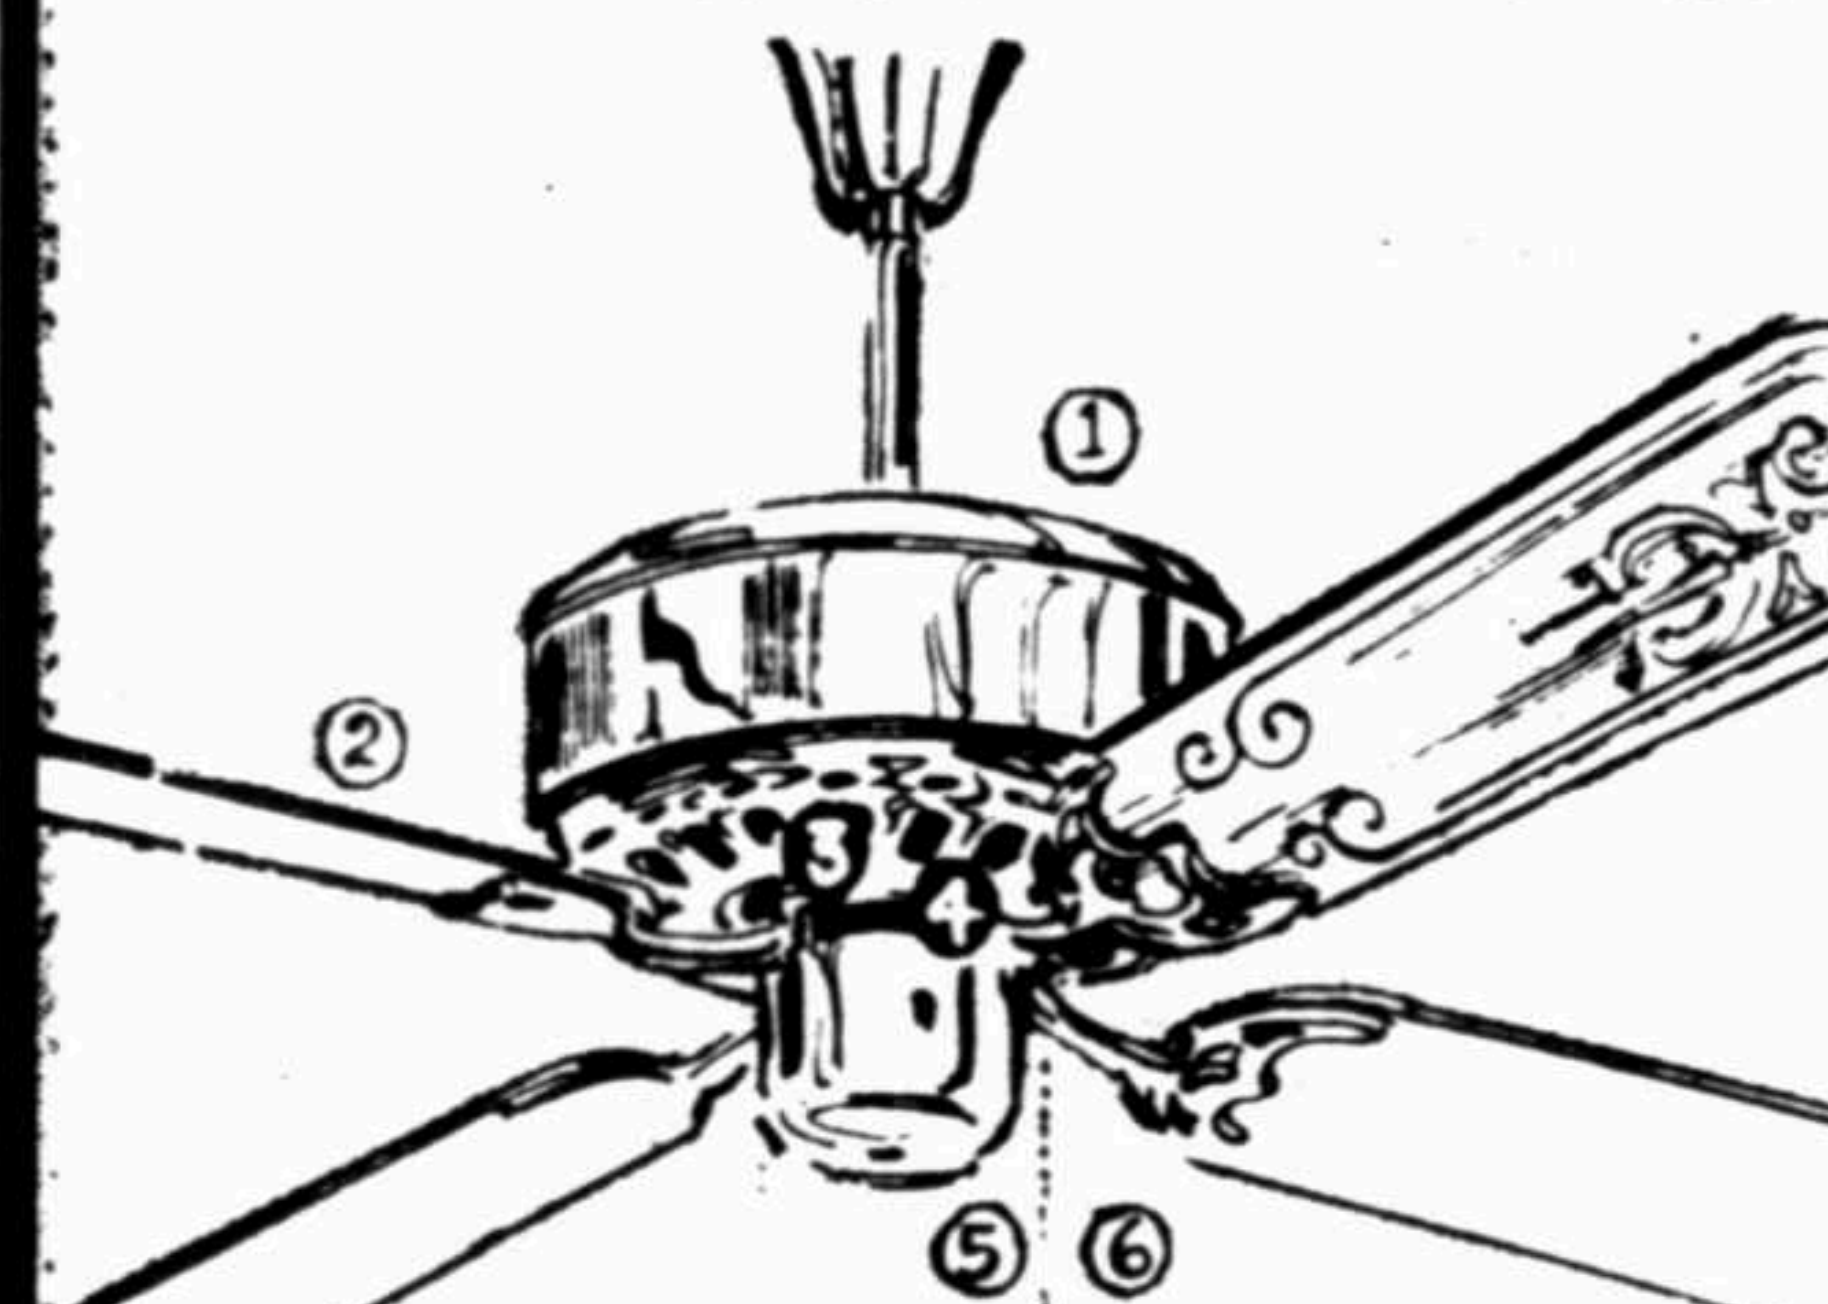

He also would like to be able to measure the useful lifetime of an item when it is first accessed, and determine its optimum storage conditions.

NFL rookies find fortunes in questionable status

By The Associated Press

When the midnight bell Thursday signalled the expiration of the National Football League's five-year collective bargaining agreement with the players, several rookies found themselves in questionable status.

Latest figures from the National Football League office, which are several days old, showed that 90 rookies and 71 veterans do not have contracts. Both figures were believed to have dropped.

THE NFL Management Council maintains that the teams still can sign rookies, provided those players accept contracts made before the July 15 expiration.

But the players union contends that rookies cannot sign contracts until a new labor agreement is reached. NFLPA chief Ed Garvey says agreements after July 15 would be "voided by the courts."

Veterans can sign a contract anytime for either 110 percent of their 1981 salary or by accepting a club's top offer made before July 15. Further negotiations between the players and teams, however, cannot continue until a new collective bargaining agreement is signed and ratified.

The St. Louis Cardinals have reached agreement with 90 out of 91 players on their roster with the signings of three draft picks Thursday. The lone holdout is free safety Ken Greene, a four-year veteran, who wants to be traded to a West Coast team.

"That's what I would want, but it's becoming more apparent that that's not what they're going to do," Greene said from his home in Vancouver, Wash.

CHICAGO'S TOP draft pick, Brigham Young quarterback Jim McMahon, signed about two hours before the expiration of the labor contract. Although the Bears were happy with the 11th-hour signature, McMahon was not overjoyed with the reported three-year contract.

"It's the only option I have," McMahon said Thursday. "If I'm to be in camp before July 24, I have to sign the contract tonight and I'm not happy with the terms."

The Bears haven't signed third-round draft choice Tim Wrightman, a tight end from UCLA, and veteran punt returner Dave Turner.

Other top draft selections — offensive guard Mike Munchak (Houston), defensive end Glen Collins (Cincinnati), running back Walter Abercrombie (Pittsburgh), running back Butch Woolfolk (New York Giants) and guard Roy Foster (Miami) signed contracts over the past few days to beat the deadline.

Collins, from Mississippi State, was the last of Cincinnati's 12 draft choices to sign. His attorney, Steve Arnold, said the midnight deadline hastened the agreement.

"Our decision did not relate at all to the deadline, but the deadline was a catalyst to reaching the agreement," Arnold said. "The deadline hastened the getting of a mutually beneficial agreement." Terms were not disclosed.

THE NEW Orleans Saints came to terms with their last three unsigned draft picks just before the midnight deadline. The three were second-round choice Brad Edelman, a center from Missouri; No. 3 pick John Krimm, a defensive back from Notre Dame; and Tulane running back Marvin Lewis, the Saints' seventh-round selection.

Stanford running back Derrin Nelson, the Minnesota Vikings' No. 1 pick, was unable to sign a contract before the deadline.

"We're at a standstill," Nelson said. "I'm not going to sign for what they're offering me." The only other unsigned rookie among the Vikings' 10 draft choices is Minnesota line-backer Jim Fahnhorst, a fourth-round pick.

The only other top draft choice who hasn't signed is Helmsman Trophy winner Marcus Allen, the Southern California running back who was selected by the Oakland Raiders.

The signing of Woolfolk leaves running back Rob Carpenter as the only player on the Giants' roster who has not reached an agreement.

The Philadelphia Eagles have signed everyone on their 124-player roster. "We're in great shape," said Jimmy Gallagher, a spokesman for the team.

AMONG THE free agents returning to their old teams were Chicago wide receiver Brian Baschnagel and cornerback Aaron Kyle, defensive lineman Barney Chavous and offensive linemen Paul Howard and Midland's Keith Bishop of the Denver Broncos.

Wide receiver Steve Watson signed a series of one-year agreements with Denver Friday. He was named the team's most valuable player by his teammates last season after leading the AFC in pass reception yardage with 1,244 yards on 60 catches.

Midland wrecks Mets

Mike Kelley ends homerless streak, but misses cycle

BY TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Midland's Cubs unloaded the big timber to bury the Jackson Mets, 15-6, before 1,555 brew-swilling fans and move within a game of first place in the Texas League West Division. While the Cubs were winning, first place San Antonio was bowing to Arkansas, 6-0.

But the night's big story was Mike Kelley, who hit his first home run of the season and decided he wasn't sure if he wanted to hit another one.

THE FORMER Mississippi State star who sat out the 1981 season in a dispute over his batting style when "They tried to make me something I'm not, a power hitter," carries a .330 plus average and just recently came off a 16-game hitting streak. But the tape pasted above the locker to the right of the name "Kelley" is a telltale, "Rodney No Respect." To the left of "Kelley" an arrow points "Joe Carter's locker is thataway."

But Friday, Mike got all the respect, attention and all the money while someone asked, "Who's Joe Carter?" "When did I think I had the homer? When I was rounding second I saw Murph (Manager Brian Murphy) already waving me in." Last time Kelley hit a homer was in his first year in pro ball at Geneva back in 1979. It had been so long that Kelley warned gravely the other night, "If I ever hit one in the 'home run for the money' contest, whoever wins better split it with me."

As it turned out, his homer came in the contest, but Mike had more money than he could handle in one hand.

Murphy advised, "You better look at those bills, I think I saw some love notes begin scribbled on them."

Kelley's "dinger" brought a $188 jackpot from the fans, which he split with pitcher Doug Welenc (pitchers draw names from a hat before the game to see what hitter they get), the most surprised guy in the house.

AS FOR his next homer, Kelley isn't so sure. "I was still tired from scoring from first on Joe Carter's triple in the third and I wasn't sure I'd make it. There's gotta be a better way to hit a home run."

Asked if he were disappointed, Mike looked blankly at the interrogator. "That last time up. You had a chance to hit for the cycle if you'd gotten a triple," he was informed. Mike still looked blank. He was thinking homer, not triple.

Despite the failure to do it all—single, double, triple and homer—it wasn't a bad night. Kelley was 4-for-5 and along with Carmelo Martinez and Carlos Lezcano, accounted for 11 of Midland's 15 hits off three Jackson pitchers.

JACKSON starter Ricky Myles never retired anyone as the Cubs sent 12 batters to the plate and scored seven runs in the first. A bunt single by Henry Cotto and walks to Kelley and Carter loaded the bases and then Martinez singled home two, Fritz Connally doubled in two more and the Cubs were off and running.

Midland iced it with a five-run, 11 batter fifth in which walks to Don Hyman and Cotto started things and doubles by Kelley and Martinez finished off Steve Ibarquien, the Mets second pitcher.

Meanwhile, Midland lefthander Mike King, 6-8, seemed on his way to a rocking chair victory. Through three innings he didn't allow a hit. Rick McMullen broke that spell with a single that didn't get out of the infield to open the fourth. In the fifth Mike lost his shutout after two walks and a two-run single by Rick McMullen and he was literally knocked out of the box in the seventh.

Even after an hour on ice, Mike still showed a nasty welt on his right thigh from Mike Anicich's whistler through the box that shortstop Bruce Chaney turned into an out. After that, a walk, double by David Duff and single by Billy Beane brought on Carlos Gil in relief. Earlier in the inning, Darryl Strawberry, the No. 1 pick in the major league draft three years ago, hit his 24th homer with McMullen, who had singled, on base.

BRUIN BREWIN'S—Chicago Cubs Minor League Farm Director Gordon Goldsberry and former Midland GM John Cox, now a trouble-shooter for Chicago, arrived just in time for Friday's game. With Dave Owen out with a hand injury after "not being hit by a pitch" Thursday, Chaney took over at short and came up with the best defensive play of the night, backhanding Ronn Reynolds grounder into the hole and throwing him out. John Violette, 1-1, will go for the Mets tonight while Welenc, 10-7, is scheduled to pitch for the Cubs. Midland GM Bill Schammel informs that Ernie Banks will be in Midland for a visit Aug. 18, Ernie's first trip here in about three years. Schammel notes that the Cubs have drawn "45,646 actual" and have 18 dates to top last year's 53,910. "We can do it with 450 a night and so far we haven't had a night that bad," says Bill.

Yankees call for Righetti

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Dave Righetti, the 1981 American League Rookie of the Year who was sent to the minors late last month, returns to the New York Yankees with the Sammy Ellis seal of approval.

Righetti was recalled by the Yankees late Thursday following his fourth start for the International League's Columbus Clippers. He pitched five innings of shutout ball against the Red Wings at Rochester, giving up just three hits and one walk. He struck out eight before being lifted for Gary Serun, who picked up the 5-2 victory in relief.

"I had a good slider," Righetti said after the game. "The nice thing was that I could take something off it and use one pitch for two."

Ellis, the Clippers' pitching coach who had been asked to work with Righetti, was pleased with the 23-year-old left-hander's progress.

"He has definitely made some strides," Ellis said. "He's back to pitching the way I remember, and that's a guy with a great fastball who can throw his slider over at will."

"He has an ability very few power pitchers have at his age," Ellis added. "He can throw his breaking ball over at any time in the count. Most power pitchers live and die with their gas."

Bobby Clampett is not only a five-stroke leader in the British Open after two rounds of play, but girl friend Ann Mebane helps to add to the "Troon Swoon." "It's the best of both worlds," according to Clampett, who is 11 under par after two rounds.

Bobby Clampett 'bubbling like crazy'

TROON, Scotland (AP) — Bobby Clampett, a calm exterior belying a bubbling excitement, composed a brilliant 6-under-par 66 Friday and took five-stroke command of the 111th British Open Golf Championship.

"Inside, I'm bubbling like crazy," the skinny, curly-haired 22-year-old said after he'd posted a 133 total — 11 strokes under par and only one off the record for the best two opening rounds ever shot in this ancient event, a record set 48 years ago by Henry Cotton.

While it may have missed the record, it was more than enough to have his nearest challengers shaking their heads in dismay.

"I like to look at the leader boards while I'm playing," said U.S. Open champion Tom Watson, who started the day's play only two strokes off the pace.

"I looked up and I'm five behind."

"I looked again and I'm six behind."

"I looked again and I'm seven behind."

"I looked again and I'm eight behind and I'm playing pretty well, and I'm wondering what do I have to do?"

And Watson, a three-time winner of this event chasing a young man who has yet to win his first title on the American PGA tour, quickly answered his own question:

"I just have to go out and play better than I did today and yesterday and try to catch this man."

And Bobby isn't even worried about it.

"I'm not really concerned with the lead. I'm concerned with scoring as low as I can," said Clampett, a frequent challenger but not yet a winner in the United States. "It will be a mental challenge from here on out."

"My goal is to shoot the best score I can this week. If somebody can beat that, fine. If not, I win."

"I want to win the golf tournament, of course, but I'm really trying to shoot the lowest score I can because I'm playing, perhaps, as well as I've ever played and I'd just like to see how low I can shoot."

And if he stays near his current pace, said longshot Nick Price of Zimbabwe, who surprised even himself with his No. 2 position at the halfway point, Clampett is the winner.

"If Clampett keeps on playing like this, nobody is going to catch him," said Price, a journeyman player of no particular distinction on the European tour. "I'm glad I'm not in the lead. I don't think I could handle it."

Price got to within four shots at one point, but missed the green and bogeyed the final hole for a second consecutive 69 that left him at 138.

Bernhard Langer of West Germany, last year's runner-up in this event, agreed.

"It's hard to believe Clampett is 11 under par," Langer said after he'd completed his trek over the 7,067 yards of mounds and humps, pot bunkers, knee-deep grass, gorse and heather that make up the Troon links.

"I think he might keep it up. He's been a very good player. I think he deserves to win one."

Langer, with a 139 total, was tied for third with Des Smyth of Ireland, who also had a second-round 69.

Sandy Lyle, a Scot, had a 66 that included a birdie-eagle-birdie burst and was tied with Watson at 140.

Ken Brown, Great Britain, and Peter Oosterhuis, an Englishman now living in the United States, followed at 141. Brown shot 71 and the 6-foot-5 Oosterhuis took advantage of the greatly improved weather conditions for a 67.

The temperatures were much milder, the winds off the Firth of Clyde much more gentle than the bitterly cold blasts that raked the international field of 150 in Thursday's opening round.

Watson praying for bad weather

TROON, Scotland (AP) — Tom Watson missed some putts Friday and said he needs bad weather to come from behind and win the British Open Golf Championship.

But he doesn't expect to get it.

"I think the next two days will be like today," Watson said after shooting one-under-par 71 in a moderate breeze over Troon's 7,067 yard, par 36-36 — 72 links. It left him seven strokes behind Bobby Clampett, the leader, after 36 holes.

Watson, a three-time winner of the title since 1975, said, "Anybody will need bad weather to try to catch him (Clampett)."

"He's playing well, and I don't think he is going to make many mistakes. If we have good weather it's going to be very difficult to beat him."

The head winds, which blew along the back nine Thursday, playing havoc with form, were much lighter for the second round. Watson played the last nine holes in one under par, but Clampett played them two under.

"I don't think I have ever come back from seven down after two rounds to win a tournament," Watson said. "But I have won from five down."

Watson began the round three under par and two behind Clampett. But he fell further and further behind as the day went on.

Watson said he played well, even though he failed the close the gap behind Clampett.

"I hit the ball closer to the hole than in the first round, but I didn't make the putts I made yesterday," he said.

Watson missed birdie putts of five and six feet on the eighth and ninth greens.

He had another chance for a birdie at the 12th, but his 25-foot putt missed by a few inches. He failed to can one from ten feet at the 18th, and it cost him a bogey.

But Watson rolled in a birdie putt from six feet at the fourth. And at the 15th he chipped with a sand wedge from 40 feet, and the ball dropped in for another birdie.

Watson said he was not surprised by Clampett's success to date.

"I know nothing about him as a competitor, because I have never played against him," he said.

"But he is very meticulous and a serious golfer. He finished second five times last year, and it's only a matter of time before he wins."

Haynie, who shared the first round lead at 68 with Kathy Hite and Chris Johnson, struggled for a 37-34. Donna Caponi moved into contention with a 69 in the second round and was three strokes behind Little at 140.

Johnson, Sandra Spuzich and Jan Stephenson were next at 141, followed by Hite and Bonnie Lauer at 142. Hite had trouble on the front nine for the second consecutive day, posting a 39

Little, who shot a 65 to set the course record at the Country Club of Indianapolis in the 1978 U.S. Women's Open, had a 137 for 36 holes after carding a pair of 33s in the second round with six birdies and 12 pars.

"This golf course has been very good to me," said Little, who trails only Haynie and JoAnne Carner on the tour's list of money winners for this year.

"It's a great challenge," said Little, 30, about the 6,101-yard course. "It's in beautiful shape and you've really got to hit the ball. You've got to keep it in play. There's no question, the greens are tough. You've got to hit it on the right side of the ball."

Little made a pair of six-footers for birdies on the front nine after starting the round with a birdie from five feet. Her longest birdie of the day came on the 384-yard, par-4 No. 14 when she hit a 5-wood to 30 feet of the cup and made her putt.

"My timing is still not 100 percent," the leader said. "I have a long way to go but when you have the putter going, you can get away with it."

but came back with a 1-under 35 on the back side to stay in the battle for the $30,000 winner's check.

COAL VALLEY, Ill. (AP) — Jeff Mitchell opened his round with an eagle and used it as a springboard to his best professional performance, a course record-tying 7-under-par 63 for the second-round lead Friday in the $200,000 Quad Cities Open golf tournament.

Still, his lead was only a single shot over six challengers, including veterans Miller Barber and Calvin Peete.

"I started very fast," Mitchell said. "The fact it's only the second eagle I've made all year was the highlight of my play.

"I didn't either. That's a big factor," posting his hole start, 132 total Country Club. His 63 tied record shared by eight golfers.

Johnstone sinks Braves

Nolan Ryan mows down 11 Pirates

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO — Jay Johnstone's two-out, 10th-inning single scored the winning run as the Chicago Cubs took a 4-3 victory over the Atlanta Braves Friday in a game that was delayed more than two hours by rain.

The game was delayed after Ryan Sandberg took two pitches from loser Gene Garber, 6-4, in the top of the 10th inning when a torrential rain fell over Wrigley Field.

Two hours and 19 minutes later, the game resumed and Sandberg lined a double to advance Junior Kennedy to third. Kennedy had singled before the delay.

Bill Buckner was then intentionally walked and Garber got the next two outs before Johnstone lined a 1-1 pitch over third baseman Jerry Royster's head into left field to knock in Buckner with the winning run.

Bill Campbell, 2-4, came on in the 10th and earned the victory.

The Cubs opened the scoring in the first on a sacrifice fly by Buckner and made it 2-0 in the third when Bump Willis led off with a triple and scored on a sacrifice fly by Ryan Sandberg.

The Braves got a run back in the fourth as Dale Murphy tripled and scored on a double by Bob Horner. The Cubs made it 3-1 in the fifth when Willis led off with a single, took second on a sacrifice bunt by Sandberg, went to third on a flyout and scored on a double by Leon Durham.

The Braves tied it with two runs in the sixth. One run came home on a double by Larry Whitson which chased Chicago starter Alan Ripley and brought on Mike Proly. Proly walked Bruce Benedict and Whitson scored when Willis misplayed Rafael Ramirez's grounder to second for an error.

single and came home on Ray Knight's groundout. In the seventh, Ryan walked, moved to second on Thon's sacrifice and scored on Scott's double.

Cardinals 6, Reds 4

ST. LOUIS — Pinch-hitter Dane Iorg's two-run single capped a four-run seventh inning and propelled the St. Louis Cardinals to 6-4 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

The Cardinals, snapping a three-game losing streak, sent nine players to the plate during their winning rally. Three Cardinals drew walks, with Mike Ramsey contributing a bunt for a pinch-single.

Ken Oberkfell and Ozzie Smith opened the rally by waiting out Cincinnati starter Bob Shirley for walks. Ramsey's bunt off Tom Hume, 2-5, loaded the bases.

Lonnie Smith was hit by a pitch to force in Oberkfell, and Ozzie Smith scored as Tommy Herr grounded out.

After Keith Hernandez drew an intentional walk and George Hendrick struck out, Iorg rapped his winning hit.

Run-scoring singles by Paul Householder and Dave Van Gorder had staked Cincinnati to a 3-2 lead in the fourth inning.

Cincinnati expanded its lead to 4-2 in the top of the seventh off winner Jeff Lahti, 1-0. Shirley got the run home with a suicide squeeze after Ron Oester singled and advanced on a balk and Van Gorder's grounder.

Expos 4, Padres 3

SAN DIEGO — Tim Wallach and Warren Cromartie hit run-scoring singles to break a sixth-inning tie and Steve Rogers earned his 11th victory as the Montreal Expos defeated the San Diego Padres 4-3.

Rogers, 11-4, allowed nine hits, struck out six and walked two in seven innings before Woodie Fryman came on to earn his sixth save.

San Diego starter Tim Lollar, 10-3, yielded 11 hits in six innings, five of them in the sixth when Montreal moved in front 4-2.

Al Oliver opened the Expos' sixth with a single and moved to second when San Diego second baseman Tim Flannery threw the ball into the dugout behind first. Wallach singled to score Oliver and advanced to second on the throw to the plate. Cromartie drove in what proved to be the winning run with a single to right.

Montreal took a 1-0 lead in the first on an RBI single by Mike Gates. The Padres moved in front 2-1 in the second when they reached Rogers for three hits, including RBI singles by Luis Salazar and Gene Richards.

Phillies 1, Giants 0

SAN FRANCISCO — Steve Carlton fired a four-hit shutout for his 12th victory of the year and Mike Schmidt scored Philadelphia's only run as the Phillies edged the San Francisco Giants 1-0.

Carlton struck out five and raised his record to 12-7 as he kept the Phillies in first place in the National League East.

The three-time Cy Young Award winner had some early control problems, walking three in the first four innings, but he never allowed a runner past second and retired the last 13 batters in a row to notch his fifth straight triumph.

Champ Kalule really is a challenger

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — The

last time Ayub Kalule fought in this country, he was a champion treated like a challenger to the popular Sugar Ray Leonard. Today, Kalule really is a challenger.

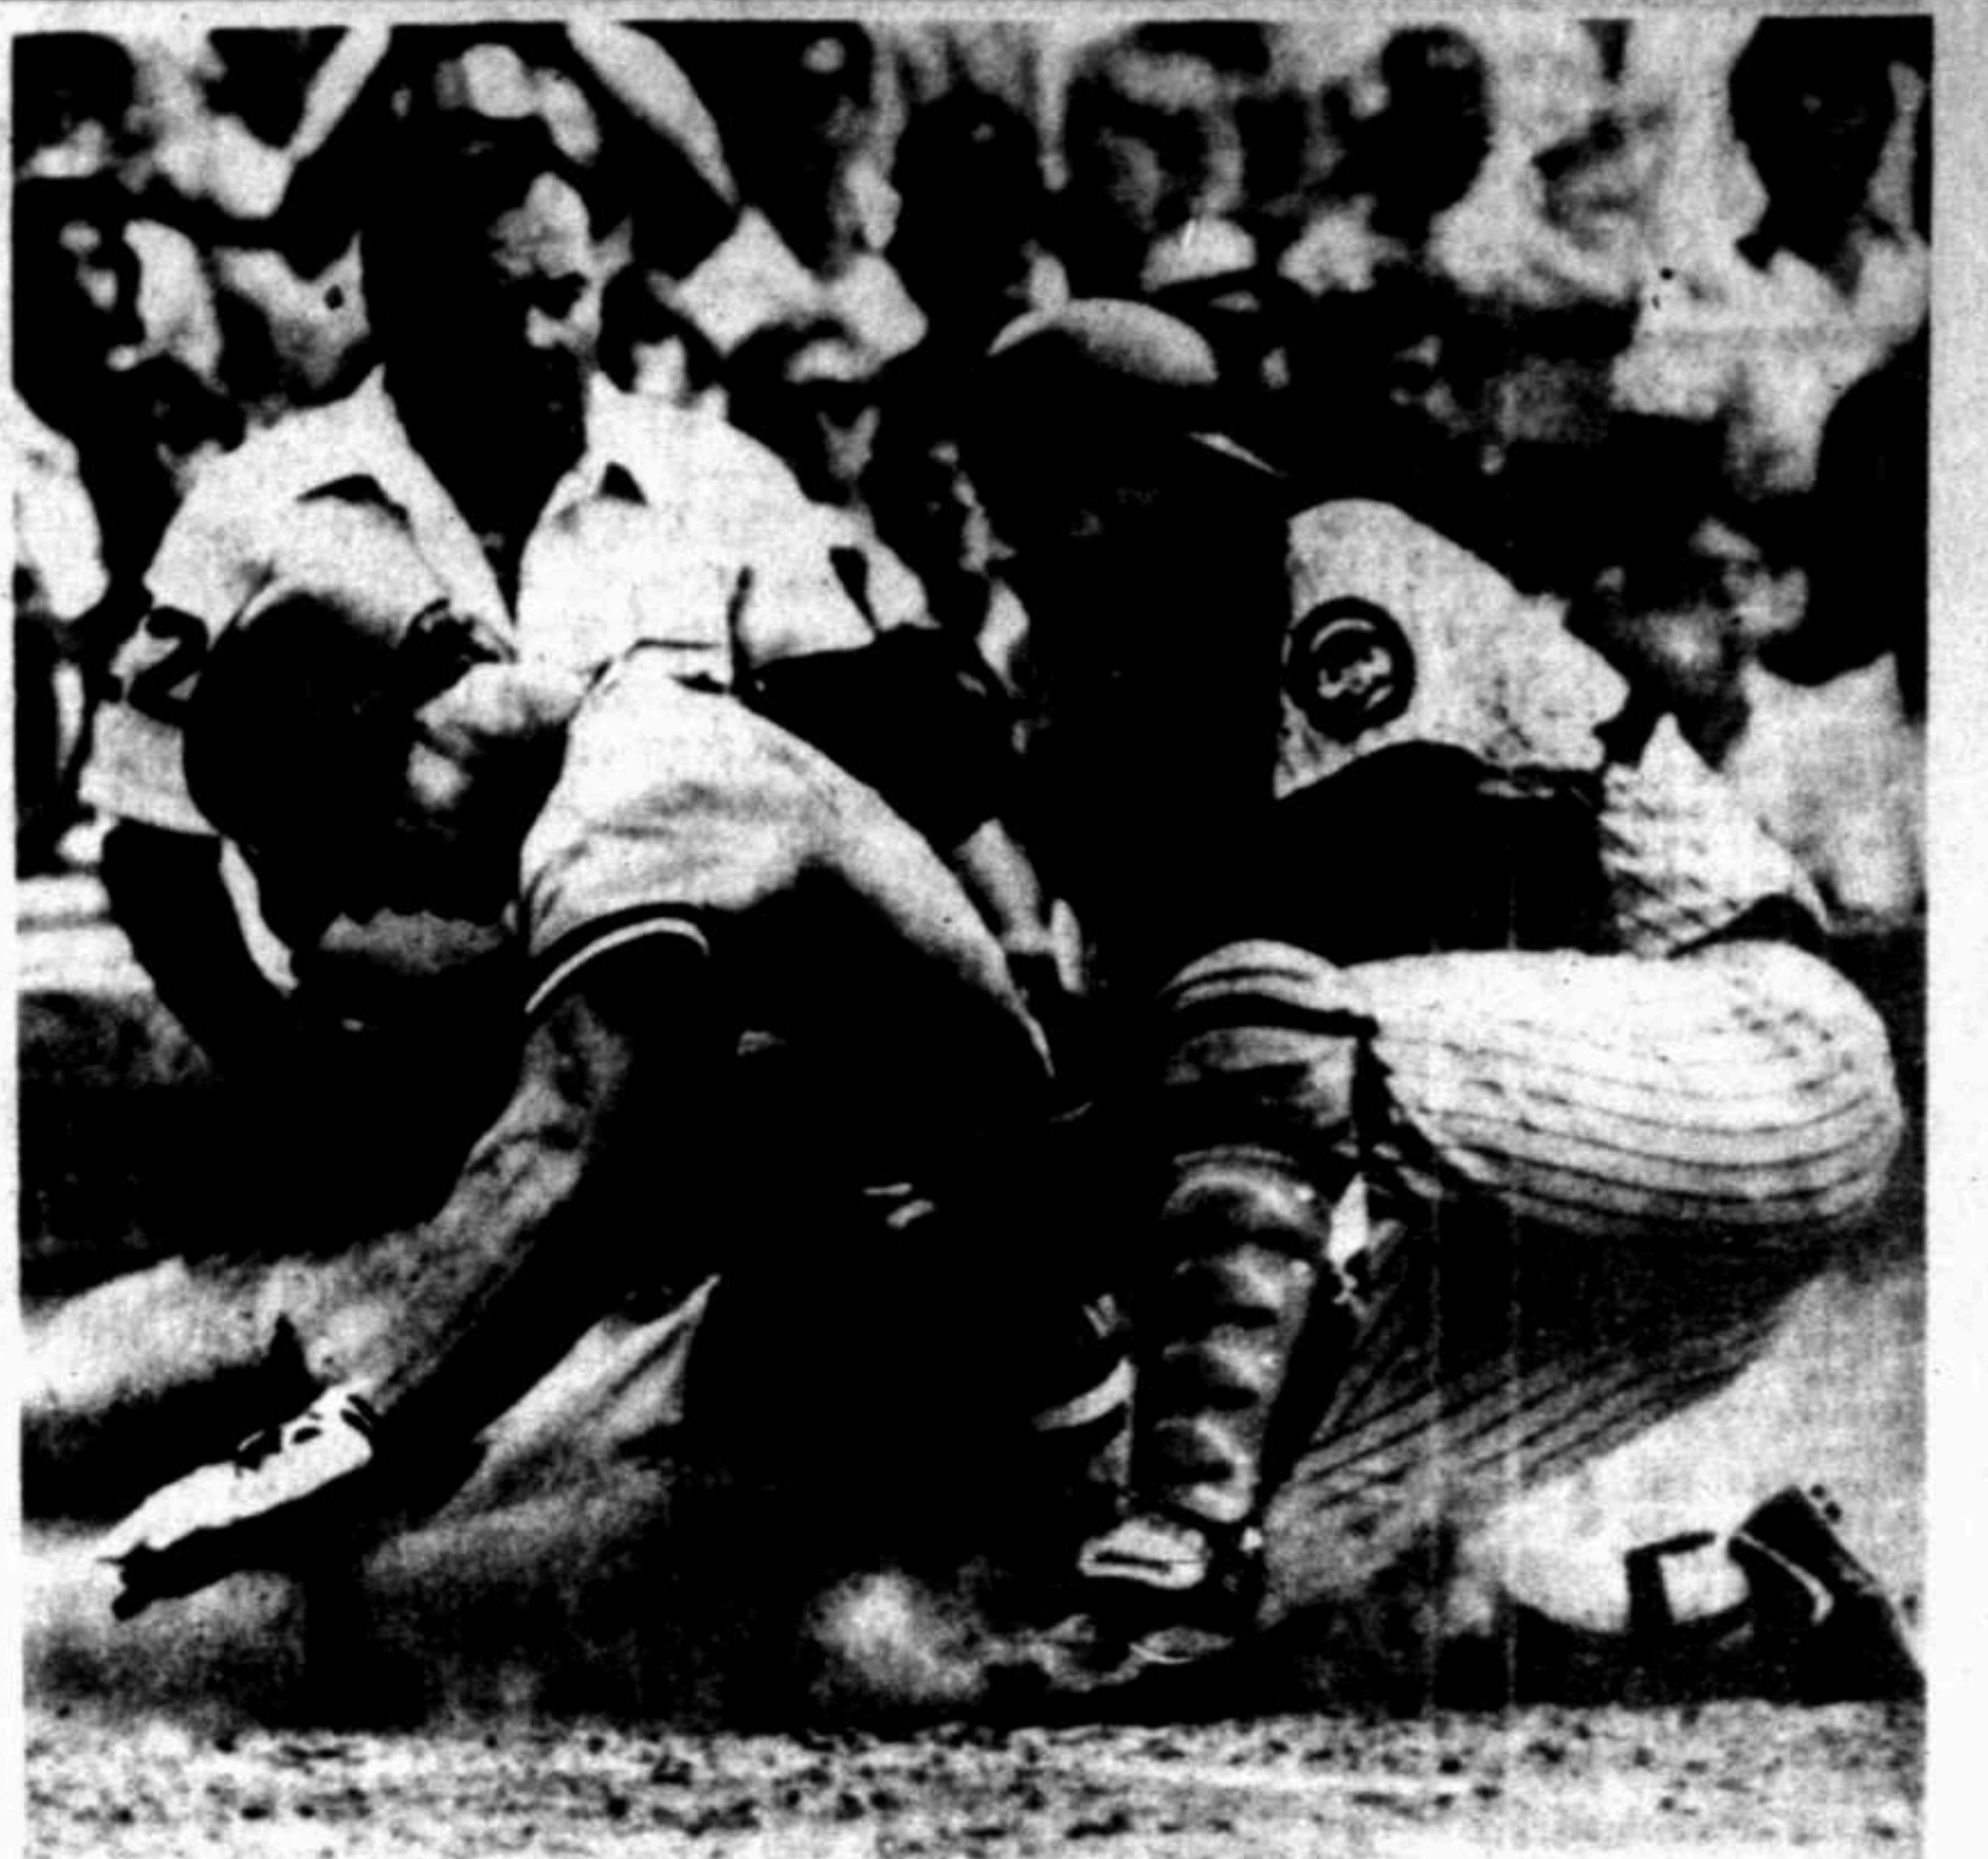

But the champion the 28-year-old Kalule will face is hardly an American boxing hero. In fact, a lot of Americans don't know Davey Moore, a 23-year-old New Yorker with just 10 pro fights, is a champion.

After all, Moore won the World Boxing Association junior middleweight title at Tokyo and made his first defense in Johannesburg, South Africa.

The fight at Bally's Park Place hotel-casino, which will be televised on ABC's Wide World of Sports that runs from 4 p.m.-5:30 p.m. CDT, will be a test of Moore's youth and power against Kalule's experience and left-handed style.

Kalule, a top amateur, suffered his only pro loss when he was knocked out in the ninth round by Leonard after giving Leonard a good fight June 25, 1981, in the Houston Astrodome. Leonard later gave up the title in favor of the undisputed welterweight championship.

Victorick to see milestone with cager taller than 6-3

HOUSTON (AP) — Donnie Victorick,

head basketball coach at tiny Snook, Texas — population 384 — has led the Bluejays to three consecutive state titles with a three-year record of 115-10, and another career milestone is within his reach this week.

He'll coach a basketball player taller than 6-3 for the first time.

Victorick will coach the South All-Stars against the North in a highlight of the 50th annual coaching school of the Texas High School Coaches Association, which begins Monday.

The All-Star basketball game will be played Thursday night in Hofheinz Pavilion on the University of Houston campus. The All-Star football game Friday night in the Astrodome will close out the annual school, which anticipates another attendance record.

Victorick, who has also led the Bluejays to three straight track crowns, is eager to meet his all-star players.

"It's going to be a thrill, we may even try a few alley-oops," Victorick said. "We practice the alley-oop just for fun at Snook but none of the kids have to worry about dunking it."

Victorick also plans a departure in the All-Star game from Snook's slow, patterned type offense that has made the Bluejays a basketball power for two decades.

"We're going to try to get out on the fast break some," Victorick said. "If it's there, we're going to take it. I'm looking forward to seeing what some of those 6-8 players can do."

Shallowater's Keith Kitchens will direct the North All-Star basketball team, continuing a family tradition. His father, Cubby Kitchens, played and coached in previous all-star games.

Jays' Jim Clancy blanks Texas Rangers

Angels produce another 10-run inning

By The Associated Press

Blue Jays 6, Rangers 0

TORONTO — Jim Clancy held Texas to one hit for eight innings and ended a personal four-game losing streak as the Toronto Blue Jays blanked the Texas Rangers 6-0 Friday night.

Toronto scored the only run Clancy needed in the first inning when Texas second baseman Mike Richardt booted a hard grounder by Lloyd Moseby, who then stole second and scored on Willie Upshaw's single off knuckleballer Charlie Hough, 7-8.

In winning for the first time since June 15, Clancy, 37, allowed a double to Lee Mazzilli with two out in the fourth inning and singles to Lamar Johnson and Buddy Bell in the ninth. Joey McLaughlin came on with the bases loaded and two out and Mickey Rivers grounded into a game-ending forceout. Clancy walked two and struck out eight.

Angels 15, Indians 0

Ken Forsch hurled a four-hitter for his third shutout of the season and Rod Carew, Fred Lynn and Bob Boone each drove in three runs as the California Angels rode a 10-run fifth inning — their second 10-run inning in four games — to a 15-0 rout of the Cleveland Indians.

The victory was the sixth in a row for the Angels, who began play two games ahead of Kansas City in the American League West.

Forsch, 37, who also was the beneficiary of the Angels' 10-run third inning against the New York Yankees last Saturday night, struck out four and walked two in recording his eighth complete game. He allowed an infield hit to Chris Bando in the second, a single to Toby Harrah in the fourth, a single to Rick Manning in the eighth and a double by Von Hayes in the ninth.

California grabbed a 3-0 lead in the first inning on Lynn's RBI single and a two-run single by Bobby Grich.

Red Sox 7, Royals 3

BOSTON — Jim Rice drove in three runs, two with a double in Boston's six-run second inning, and the Red Sox handed Kansas City its sixth consecutive loss by defeating the Royals 7-3.

The Red Sox nailed down their fifth victory in the last seven games with the big second inning when they shelled Kansas City starter Vida Blue, 6-7, in a barrage of five doubles, one short of the American League record.

Boston's Dennis Eckersley, 10-7, the loser in the All-Star Game Tuesday night, and reliever Bob Stanley combined on a six-hitter. Eckersley allowed five hits and three runs, one unearned, before giving way to Stanley at the start of the seventh. Stanley recorded his seventh save.

The Red Sox loaded the bases with two out in the first but Blue got out of the jam by striking out Dave Stapleton on three pitches. The veteran left-hander was not as fortunate in the second.

Glenn Hoffman led off by poking a double to right, Gary Allenson doubled to left-center, scoring Hoffman, and came around on Reid Nichols' double high off the left field wall.

Mariners 6, Orioles 0

BALTIMORE — Richie Zisk, Dave Henderson and Bruce Bochte

had three hits apiece and combined to drive in all Seattle's runs as the Mariners defeated the Baltimore Orioles 6-0 behind the two-hit pitching of Floyd Bannister.

The victory ended a four-game losing streak for the Mariners, who won for only the sixth time in 29 games at Memorial Stadium since they joined the American League in 1977.

Zisk hit his eighth homer in the second inning off Dennis Martinez, 9-7, and added RBI singles in each of the next two innings. Martinez suffered his second loss in a row at home, where he had a 14-game winning streak snapped July 1.

Henderson drove in a run in the second inning with his second single of the game and hit his 10th homer in the seventh off Ross Grimsley. Bochte had two singles, plus an RBI double in the third.

Yankees 6, A's 2

NEW YORK — Ken Griffey hit a tie-breaking two-run homer in the third inning after Roy Smalley tied the game with a solo shot as the New York Yankees defeated the Oakland A's 6-2 behind the seven-hit pitching of Roger Erickson and two relievers.

Erickson's third straight victory gave him a 3-4 record since the Yankees acquired him from Minnesota and made him 7-7 overall. He struck out six and walked one before giving way to Rudy May with two out in the eighth inning and a runner at first. Rich Gossage pitched a hitless ninth.

Tigers 6, Twins 3

MINNEAPOLIS — The Detroit Tigers used the six-hit pitching of Jack Morris and Dave Tobik and home runs by Lance Parrish, Tom Brookens and Lou Whitaker to defeat the Minnesota Twins 6-3 for their fourth consecutive triumph.

Morris, 11-9, settled down after a shaky first inning, while Minnesota rookie Frank Viola, 3-1, took his first major league loss.

The Twins took a 2-0 lead in the first inning. Ron Washington singled to start the inning and went to third on Tom Brunansky's ground-rule double. Kent Hrbek was walked intentionally to load the bases and Dave Engle doubled home two runs.

The Tigers came back with five runs in the second. Parrish led off with his 15th homer and two outs later, John Wockenfuss doubled and Brookens hit his sixth homer.

The Twins should have gotten out of the inning without further damage except for some bizarre plays. Alan Trammell struck out, but reached first on a wild pitch. Whitaker followed with a long drive to right which Brunansky kept from being a homer by knocking the ball back onto the playing field for a triple, scoring Trammell.

Brewers 5, White Sox 3

MILWAUKEE — Ted Simmons' bases-loaded double with one out in the eighth inning drove in the tying and lead runs as the Milwaukee Brewers defeated the Chicago White Sox 5-3 Friday night for their sixth successive victory.

Loser Jerry Kosman, 2-4, had scattered seven hits until Paul Molitor dribbled off the left field wall with one out in the eighth. Left fielder Steve Kemp appeared to misjudge the ball for an instant.

After a walk to Robin Yount, Cecil Cooper beat out a single off second baseman Tony Bernazard's glove behind the bag to load the bases. Simmons lined Kosman's next pitch just inside the line to the left field corner, scoring Molitor and Yount.

A.J. Foyt returns to Michigan 500

BROOKLYN, Mich. (AP) — It looked like fans had seen the last of A.J. Foyt Jr. in a race car when his Coyote demolished a steel guard rail a year ago in the Norton Michigan 500.

As medical officials at Michigan International Speedway gently carried the seriously injured Foyt toward a waiting ambulance, the crowd of about 70,000 sat in an eerie silence.

This week, Foyt is back for the second running of the race, and returning to the two-mile, high-banked oval doesn't seem to faze him.

"It doesn't bother me," Foyt said between practice sessions. "The only time I even thought about it (the accident) was the first time I went into the second turn."

"I thought, 'Boy, I hit that guardrail so hard, it isn't even there anymore.' Actually, though, it happened so fast and I hit the guardrail so hard, I don't even remember anything about it (the accident)."

Foyt suffered a concussion, a puncture wound in one leg, and nearly tore off his right arm as his orange No. 14 racer splintered and crushed nearly 200 feet of the three-strand guardrail that since has been replaced by a concrete wall.

Not only did it look like the almost legendary "Super Tex" was done with racing, it seemed he might be facing a battle for his life.

But the 47-year-old Foyt again proved the toughness that has carried him to an unprecedented four victories in the Indianapolis 500, as well as triumphs in the Daytona 500, the 24 Hours of LeMans and dozens of other races in just about every kind of race car.

He underwent a series of operations to repair his right arm, which he still can't straighten completely or bend all the way. Then he spent his time watching his race horses — his other passion.

Women's tournament scheduled July 24-25

The Schumann Coed Slow Pitch Softball Tournament will be held July 24-25 and will have a field of at least 12 teams. Entries will be limited to Midland teams.

Entry deadline is today with a $90 entry fee. Contact Bill Williams (682-1671) or Karen Offield (684-5874) 683-8395.

in life, recuperating, and planning his return to racing.

This year, he has run in two NASCAR Grand National stock car races this year, qualified on the front row for his record 25th Indy 500, finished second in a 150-mile Indy-car race at Milwaukee and is entered in Sunday's second renewal of the Michigan 500. He qualified with the eighth-fastest speed Thursday, 196.539 mph in his Cosworth-powered March 82C.

Foyt's accident prompted track owner and racing entrepreneur Roger Penske to tear down what was left of the old guardrail and replace it with the concrete wall.

"Concrete doesn't give when you hit it," Penske explained. "But it doesn't tear apart and come through the car like a guardrail can."

Foyt agreed that the change is good psychologically.

"You feel safer and run a little higher on the track," Foyt said. "And the (concrete) wall is higher, so you get less effect from the wind."

Foyt has admitted in the past that he scares himself a little every time he gets in a race car. He calls it "getting a thrill."

But the hardened veterans just figures that's part of the sport.

"I know I'm lucky to have my arm, but an accident like that isn't going to keep me out of racing," Foyt said. "I was pronounced dead after I crashed a stock car at Riverside (Calif.) in 1965."

"I broke my back and had my breastbone pulled apart in that one, and I was in intensive care for two weeks."

"But the worst accident I had had to be in 1966 in a champ (Indy) car race at Milwaukee. I was semiconscious and trapped in my burnin car after it hit the wall two or three times."

"My mind told me to hit the fire extinguisher button (on the car's dash), but all your body wants to do is get out of the flames. I suffered burns to 20 percent of my body. But I survived it. We all know those kinds of things happen in racing."

But Foyt isn't thinking about about crashes or injuries heading into the $500,000 race Sunday.

"It would be real nice to win here," said Foyt, who two weeks ago drove in his first Indy-car road race in more than a decade.

A.J. Foyt takes his Hot Wheel around the Michigan International Speedway Friday, but he will be over much faster wheels come Sunday when he returns to the site where he was injured.

Rosberg's record lap run lands in champagne

BRANDS HATCH, England (AP) — Finland's Keke Rosberg in a Williams smashed the lap record Friday to win provisional pole position for the British Grand Prix — and a traditional 100 bottles of champagne.

In the one-hour qualifying session, Rosberg out-powered the turbocharged Ferrari of France's Didier Pironi, the runaway winner of the last race in Holland.

Rosberg said he had a problem during the lap in which he was timed at 1 minute, 9.540 seconds, an average speed of 135.302 miles per hour and "should be able to improve quite a lot" in Saturday's final qualifying for the race Sunday.

Pironi was satisfied because his Ferrari had been off the pace in private testing here recently, and he also had to use a still-experimental Ferrari model on Friday.

Rebels capture Sophomore crown

Roper Energy Rebels defeated Trott & Company Athletics, 6-3, in the Sophomore A League city championship as Chris Kenney hit a game-winning three-run homer in the sixth inning to break up a 3-3 tie. George Matta was the winner while David Guzan was the loser.

Greg Hatcher, Rodney Johnson and Kenney all doubled for the winners.

Roper reached the finals with a 9-5 win over Rotary behind the pitching of Paul Colwell as Jason Logi and Curtis Tipton doubled for Roper. Matt Sears and Kirk Taylor hit doubles for Rotary and Chad Jordan a homer. Jay Roach suffered the defeat.

Trott beat Morocco, 8-6, to gain the other finals spot with Terry Baxter gaining the hill decision and Anthony Deante taking the loss. Baxter aided his own cause with a homer while Michael Gonzales and Anthony Deante homered for the losers.

The Western B League All-Stars defeated the Eastern B League Stars, 15-9, in the third game of a best-of-three playoff. Mike Brown pitched the win and Shawn Gray was the loser. Britt Haas hit two doubles for Western while Jeff Hughes tripled and Xavier Falcon homered for Eastern.

Trott and Western Rotary both advance to the district tournament beginning July 26 at Odessa. Four Odessa teams, two from Midland and one from Monahan will participate.

Delivers
the goods.

The 1982 Honda Civic 4-Door Wagon comes with front-wheel drive, because wagons are meant to be pulled.

It also comes with the highest gas mileage rating of any wagon sold in America.

And it's designed to help deliver the goods when it comes to engineering refinements and interior styling.

With a wide-opening liftgate and a generous flat, wide, carpeted load-space. A 5-speed transmission comes standard. So does rack and pinion steering, steel-belted radial tires, front door and rear window defrosters, tinted glass and reclining front bucket seats. Plus loads more.

Take delivery soon on a new Honda Civic Wagon.

Month

You can't afford NOT to buy any longer!

Total move in costs of $5250 is based on 5% down or $3800 plus $1450 limited closing costs based on 15 days prepaid interest. The first year's payment of $673.30 (principal and interest only) is based on a loan amount of $77,400. The first year's payment and buyer qualification will be calculated assuming a rate of 10 7/8% for 95% loan-to-value. Interest will be charged at a rate of 15 7/8% for the first 6 months of the loan. After the first 6 months interest will be charged at the most recent 6 months Treasury Bill plus 4.25%. Payments on these mortgages are graduated so as to increase the principal and interest payments 7.50% each year for the next 4 years. At the end of the first 5-year period, the graduation to payments will cease. A new payment schedule will be computed using a variable rate mortgage to amortize the remaining balance over the remaining 25 years of the mortgage term, upon the then current Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. The 7 1/2% maximum increase can be more if the original loan principal exceeds $250,000. At each 5-year anniversary date, the payment may be adjusted to allow the remaining payments to fully amortize the loan. Annual percentage rate approximately 6.575%.
