U.S., U.N. abandon Haiti

Haitians flee Capital ahead of military activity

■ President orders additional troops to secure U.S. Embassy.

Associated Press

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — The last U.S. troops taking part in an international mission to restore democracy to Haiti abandoned the country Saturday, along with U.N. personnel who monitored human rights abuses.

The evacuation took place as U.S. and Canadian warships moved toward Haiti to enforce U.N. sanctions that are to take effect at midnight Monday unless Haiti's military leaders cooperate with the plan.

With the situation deteriorating as the Oct. 30 date for the return of ousted President Jean-Bertrand Aristide approached, President Clinton ordered security beefed up at the U.S. Embassy in Haiti, sending in 30 additional Marines. The Marines, who arrived early Saturday, essentially triple the embassy's security complement.

The embassy warned the estimated 1,000 U.S. citizens in Haiti to "exercise extreme

Board member touts boot camp style discipline

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff writer

Midland students who bring guns to school may find themselves cleaning up roadsides if Midland school board trustee Gary Willis has his way.

He is recommending that the board consider starting up a boot camp program, similar to one being utilized for troublemakers in a Houston-area school district for students who are expelled on drugs, alcohol and weapons violations.

The Aldine Independent School District is operating a new program this school year called Project Recovery. The program operates through its Lane Center facilities using a structured, highly disciplined approach to building self-esteem in problem students.

The program has rules similar to boot camp-style discipline — ranging from common courtesy to community service.

One of the main goals of the program is for the instructors to treat the students with respect. In turn the students are expected to reciprocate.

The community services performed there include picking up trash along highway medians and at parks, repairing vandalism, working at a food bank, mowing yards and performing simple maintenance for the elderly and local churches.

Richard Ruhman, Aldine ISD's Project Recovery coordinator, said the program grew out of a commitment by administrators to work with problem students instead of "just putting them out in the street" or in an already established alternative education program that deals with students with less severe discipline problems.

When an Aldine ISD student is expelled, parents are given a brochure explaining the program and encouraged to enroll the student.

Foreign policy battles agenda on homefront

WASHINGTON (AP) — In an unguarded moment, President Clinton mused about the string of foreign-policy problems crushing against his agenda for health care reform and other domestic priorities.

"Starting with the Middle East peace signing, which was wonderful, there was just this avalanche of things that have happened," Clinton observed. "Some days I wake up and wonder, you know, who's on first?"

No wonder.

Instead of making daily speeches to sell his domestic agenda, Clinton is

Collector: Windmills could make comeback

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

MONAHANS — The old, lonesome windmill is a scenic, nostalgic and singing-in-the-wind sight in West Texas and much of America.

Windmills, which grew up with America's Western frontier and settlements, could be bound for another heyday, said B.W. "Lefty" Christopher, Monahans' premier windmill-man who views windmills as practical as sails on a schooner.

Across America, Christopher seeks out, hauls in, researches, builds and restores windmills — from the ubiquitous Aermotor, the ranchers' hard-working and reliable all-metal windmill, to the fancy cypress Eclipse windmill, which graced much of the Midwest.

The sails or blades on the old wooden wheels were held together by nails and often by rawhide.

The windmill is as much a part of the American West as is the cowboy and horse who teamed up to round up cattle, mend fences, doctor cattle and calves, and repair windmills.

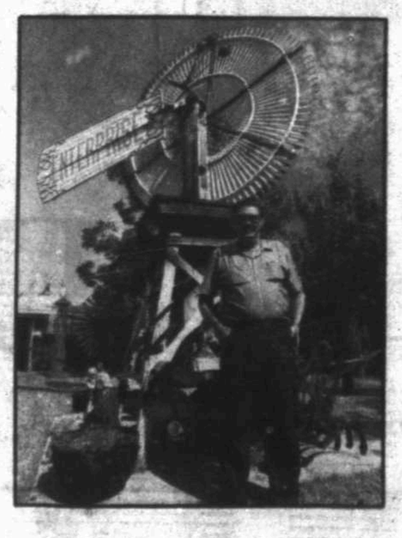

"This country here couldn't be settled without the windmill," said Christopher, a 59-year-old retired electrical engineer.

"That's the only way they could (pump) water" to watering troughs and tanks for livestock and horses and for the settlers' drinking, bathing and washing.

Flowing streams were and are rare in West Texas.

Back in the late 1800s when ranchers had their windmills shipped in or picked them up at the general store or lumber yards, there was no electric power and no

Example of system gone wrong tries to get right

By Dan Sewell
Associated Press Writer

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — For six months, 13-year-old Percy has been attending church, playing sports, studying and staying out of trouble.

"Just chillin'," as he put it.

Truly chilling is listening to this smiling, 5-foot-1 boy recount the life that earned him the nickname "Crime Boy."

He was the symbol of a troubled system, an amoral, pint-sized predator who prowled through crack-infested neighborhoods, stealing, vandalizing and robbing. He laughed at his victims, the police who caught him and the justice system.

"We'd just do it. There was nothing else to do. Everybody was doing it," he recalled. "Ain't nobody cared. You could kill somebody, or somebody could kill you. If you die, you die."

At age 8, Percy knocked off a convenience store.

It meant the first of many trips to juvenile detention, where he watched television, played cards and waited for release. Once he was out, "I would stay out of trouble for two or three days, maybe a week."

He didn't use cocaine himself, but bought some to trade for weapons. Obtaining a 9mm revolver "was easy, like going to the store."

At age 12, he had a rap sheet with 57 charges, including armed robbery. That's when he got his nickname.

In Florida, juvenile crime has emerged as the No. 1 focus of concern in the state with the nation's highest overall crime rate.

Gov. Lawton Chiles has announced juvenile crime will be included in a November special legislative session, and a series of hearings and seminars have been held on juvenile crime.

Meanwhile, Percy has quietly been the focus of an experimental effort that may once again make him an example — this time, of how a life can be turned around.

'He was a very cold child. We had to get to know each other. I told him we're not going to treat you like a criminal. There is good in you, and we're giving you an opportunity to use that good.'

—Dennis Grant
church elder

Dennis Grant, an elder at the Lauderdale Lakes Fellowship Center Church, saw television news reports of Percy's case. Grant and his pastor persuaded Judge Robert Collins to release Percy to his grandmother while the church promised to work with him. Collins said it was a risk, but worth trying.

Grant, 42, simply saw Percy as a product of his environment.

Percy doesn't know his father. His mother is in a Georgia prison for providing the gun that her boyfriend used to kill a deputy. He's got an uncle in prison. His grandmother did time on a bad-check charge.

They lived in a drug-ridden, impoverished neighborhood. Grant found Percy and his grandmother a new home, miles away, after persuading the landlord to lower the rent and the federal government to subsidize it.

Grant, who has two sons, took Percy home on weekends, to church on Sundays, and youth activities on Friday nights.

"He was a very cold child. We had to get to know each other," Grant said. "I told him we're not going to treat you like a criminal. There is good in you, and we're giving you an opportunity to use that good."

Percy interjected: "I'm going to tell you like it is. You got to show who the man is."

In other words, Grant is tough. His rewards are affection, allowances, outings. His punishments are stern rebukes and loss of privileges.

"People say this kid is streetwise. But you can reprogram their minds. A kid like that has never been hugged, never known this attention."

For Percy, avoiding crime for six months is a milestone.

Still, some say Percy is fooling naive do-gooders to avoid punishment for his crimes.

"I'm going to prove them all wrong," Percy replied.

Grant formed the Juvenile Restoration Council, expanding his concept to have other churches adopt a criminal child.

"The agencies and other organizations have been looking at a broad picture. ... But that has not been working. We're taking it child by child."

Serbs resume shelling of battered Sarajevo

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (NYT) — After a lull of several weeks, Serbian nationalist forces resumed their heavy artillery bombardment of Sarajevo on Saturday, setting off panic on the city's streets and raising fear that the siege could take a sharp turn for the worse just as winter approaches.

The Serbian forces on the slopes of mountains overlooking the Bosnian capital began their barrage before dawn, hitting the city center with at least 30 152-millimeter tank shells, the most destructive weapon in the their arsenal. Thousands of tank, artillery and mortar shells were fired next in a bombardment that continued until the late afternoon before relenting.

Doctors at the trauma clinic at Kosevo Hospital, the city's main medical center, said that four people who had been brought to the clinic had died of their wounds and that 30 others had been treated.

Such casualty counts in Sarajevo normally understate the toll by a wide margin, since many of those killed and wounded are taken to district morgues and clinics or remain undiscovered in the rubble of destroyed buildings.

The Serbian attack came a week after the Serbian nationalist leader, Radovan Karadzic, said his forces would make no new attacks on Sarajevo and other strongholds of the Muslim-led Bosnian government.

In an interview, Karadzic said that he considered the war between Bosnia's Serbs and Muslims to be over and that the Serbian nationalist leadership intended to concentrate on rebuilding Bosnia's shattered economy and fostering economic and other ties with Muslims.

In broadcasts from Pale, the mountain town near Sarajevo where the Serbian nationalists have established their headquarters, the Serbian leadership blamed the Bosnian forces for the renewed fighting around the capital, saying that Muslim-led units defending the city had opened fire first with mortar and other attacks on Serbian positions.

The Bosnian government disputed this, saying that the Serbian forces began the assault at 4 a.m. by rolling oil barrels filled with explosives down the slopes of Trebevic Mountain into the heavily populated Bistrik district.

The Serbian shelling followed the pattern established over the previous 18 months of the siege. Heavy guns within clear view of the city, often no farther than 1,000 yards from their targets, struck apartment blocks and other civilian buildings in an apparently random fashion and only rarely hit government or military centers.

In scenes reminiscent of the worst stages of the siege, in the spring and summer of 1992, the city's streets virtually emptied of people and those who ventured out could be seen running from doorway to doorway or sprinting head down across open spaces.

Inside the sprawling grounds of Kosevo Hospital, doctors and nurses moving between buildings crouched behind parked cars as shells whistled overhead and exploded.

Sobbing relatives of the dead and wounded milled about the hospital trauma center. One woman, Cima Zenic, with shrapnel cuts on her face from a shell that destroyed her home in the Bistrik district and killed her 22-year-old daughter-in-law, Suada, sat alone amid the mayhem, weeping.

"Shame on them for what they do to us poor people," the 56-year-old woman said. "We have no food, no water, no electricity, and now they kill us."

Like perhaps 80 percent of Sarajevo's 380,000 residents, Mrs. Zenic is a Muslim. But as she talked in the late afternoon twilight, she took comfort from the hope that the miseries of ethnic warfare would someday pass and give way to a new harmony between Serbs and Muslims.

Dozens sent to hospitals after London protest turns violent

LONDON (AP) — Street violence erupted Saturday in London as riot police battled to keep more than 15,000 anti-racism marchers away from an office of a racist political party that advocates expelling blacks and Asians.

Protesters throwing paving stones, bottles and bricks pulled from a cemetery wall injured 19 officers, one seriously, police said. Forty-one protesters were taken to local hospitals.

Dozens of marchers were seen spilling out of the two-hour melee, their faces bloodied by police batons and flying debris, and at least nine were taken to hospitals. Police reported 19 arrests.

Sporadic street scuffles continued in side streets as darkness fell.

The flashpoint came as police — some in full riot gear, others on horseback — blocked the Anti-Nazi League march from passing a British National Party office and bookshop in southeast London.

The BNP calls for an end of immigration and expelling all immigrants and Jews.

Commander Hugh Blenkin said police succeeded in keeping the crowd away from the bookshop despite "appalling attacks."

Police spokesmen estimated the crowd at 15,000 to 20,000.

Police with interlocking riot shields advanced on the marchers, but came under a barrage of bricks and paving stones. Mounted police drove a wedge in the march, clubbing protesters.

March organizers blamed the police for overreacting.

"I think the police have caused a riot," said Anti-Nazi League steward Balwindara Rana. "We wanted to have a peaceful demonstration. They were indiscriminately attacking people.

"Initially, very few people were throwing bricks, but once the horses charged that got other people throwing bricks as well," Rana said.

Pakistan sends heroin suspects to U.S. for trial

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — A Pakistani considered to be one of the world's biggest heroin dealers and four other men were extradited Saturday to the United States to face drug smuggling charges, government officials said.

The five who flew from Islamabad early Saturday were indicted last year in U.S. courts, said Nawaz Malik of the Pakistan Narcotics Control Board. They lost their final appeal against extradition last week in Pakistan's Supreme Court.

They were identified as Salim Malik, Shahid Hafis Khwaja, Khalid Hasan Khan, Taweez Gul Khan and Misal Khan.

Malik and his nephew, Khwaja, were indicted Oct. 28, 1992, in Philadelphia on charges of shipping 100 pounds of heroin to undercover FBI agents. They also were accused of conspiring to import 1,100 more pounds of heroin.

They were arrested in Karachi in January, according to the FBI.

The two are scheduled to appear tomorrow in federal court in Philadelphia, Assistant U.S. Attorney Robert A. Zauzmer said Saturday.

WEATHER WATCH

Today partly sunny, mid-80s

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for partly sunny skies with a high in the mid-80s and southwest to west winds at 10 to 20 mph, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tonight will be fair with a low in the upper 50s.

Monday is expected to be partly cloudy with a high in the lower 80s.

After an overnight low of 64, Saturday's high was 85 compared with the record high for that date of 92 set in 1964. The record low for today's date was 36 in 1976.

STATE

Scattered thunderstorm activity was reported in portions of Central and North Texas on Saturday night, setting the stage for more precipitation on Sunday.

Showers and thunderstorms developed in portions of Central and North Texas late Saturday. The Dallas-Fort Worth area was under a severe thunderstorm warning about 8 p.m.

The National Weather Service said conditions on Sunday should be mostly cloudy and cooler with a chance of showers and thunderstorms, with temperatures in the 60s and 70s and lows in the 40s.

Chances look good for showers in North Texas through Tuesday, the weather service said.

But skies are expected to be fair and sunny elsewhere in the state, with highs in the 70s and 80s and lows in the 50s.

NATION

Thunderstorms were scattered from the Plains to the East Coast on Saturday, and snow fell in parts of the Rockies.

During the day, showers and thunderstorms extended over the central Plains, eastern Oklahoma, the middle half of the Mississippi Valley, the Great Lakes, Ohio Valley, Tennessee Valley and the southern Atlantic Coast states.

The heaviest storms hit Kansas and Arkansas.

Wind gusted to 60 mph during morning thunderstorms at Haysville, Kan., and Belle Plaine, Kan., and wind damage was reported near Goddard, Kan., and Fayetteville, Ark., the National Weather Service said.

Hail 1½ inches in diameter fell at the Wichita, Kan., airport, and hail an inch in diameter fell on the city of Wichita and on Andover, Kan., and Alma, Ark.

Shoplifting arrest leads police to children in attic

ENGLEWOOD, N.J. (NYT) — The two children — a 15-year-old girl and her 11-year-old brother — were caught in a local supermarket last Friday night stuffing bagels, bologna, crackers and candy into book bags and taken, terrified, to the Police Department on shoplifting charges.

"They were frantic, not so much that they were caught shoplifting but that I was going to return them home," Detective Frank C. Jones recalled Saturday. "They were completely hysterical."

Under gentle questioning over the next hour or so, the two children told Jones a story of living for months in isolation with two other children — like them in foster care — in a cramped and often locked attic room with no furniture, no lights, no heat and little food. They pried open the bolt lock last Friday with a coat hanger and went out on their food foray because they were hungry, Jones said. At the time, the couple raising them had gone out for a seafood dinner at a fast-food restaurant in Paramus, the detective said.

"The girl told us more or less they had to go out and steal to get an adequate amount of food," he said.

After the questioning, Jones said he went to the two-story gray home on Howland Avenue and found a 16-year-old girl sleeping on a mattress on the floor in the pitch-black attic room and a 10-year-old boy in diapers asleep on the floor.

Several hours later, the couple, Anthony James, 36, and his wife, Shirley, 39, were arrested on charges of endangering the welfare of the four children. Subsequently they were released on $10,000 bail each after a hearing in State Superior Court. The four children have been placed in the care of New Jersey's Division of Youth and Family Services. They were examined at Englewood Hospital and not found to be suffering from any serious physical ailments, Jones said.

The other two children in the house, a foster daughter, 12, and the Jameses' son, 8, had their own bedrooms, the detective said.

The Englewood Police Department's Youth Bureau has been trying to trace the four children's lives as foster children and learn why the Jameses had them stay in the attic.

"They were imprisoned, more or less, in the attic," Jones said Saturday. They were allowed out for meals, which consisted of warm cereal in the morning, no lunch, and peanut butter sandwiches, with water, for dinner, he said. The youngsters told the detectives that they had to eat the food in the basement, not upstairs with the others. The two boys also said James hit them with belts and wires whenever they were caught taking food from the family refrigerator, the detective said.

Whenever the four had to go to the toilet, they had to knock on the locked door of the attic room to be released, the detective said. They were required to use the bathroom in the basement, not the one in the regular living quarters.

"They were more or less rationed out toilet tissue," the detective said.

For the most part, he said, the two boys were allowed out of the attic, aside from meals and toilet trips, only when the Jameses' 8-year-old son wanted to play with them outdoors.

PROGRAM: Willis touts 'boot camp' discipline

(From 1A)

Students who are encouraged to enter the voluntary program are those expelled for using or selling drugs, assaulting another student or teacher, or for being caught with a weapon on campus.

Through the program the students take regular classes while performing community service work. Depending upon his or her work, the student could be readmitted to his or her home school or stay in the program for a school year.

Currently 13 of 15 students expelled so far this year at Aldine ISD are enrolled in the program.

"We hope we can raise their self-esteem, broaden their vision of what they can do with their lives," Ruhman said. "Rather than waste their lives committing crimes or antisocial behavior, we want to open avenues for them."

"My heart hurts for the kids with no alternative. There are only 10 places at Culver at any given time . . . I would hope that through a program like this we can salvage these students for a responsible adult life," Willis said.

"While not yet common, the described boot camp-style alternative education setting has shown good results with turning around kids and heading them in the right direction toward successful learning," Willis said in a letter to other school board trustees.

'We hope we can raise their self-esteem, broaden their vision of what they can do with their lives. Rather than waste their lives committing crimes or antisocial behavior, we want to open avenues for them.'

—Richard Ruhman
Project Recovery coordinator

"I recommend that we, the MISD Board of Education, take the time this fall to give serious thought to modifying local policy to include such a boot camp-style discipline recovery program," he added.

The item will be on the agenda at the first November school board meeting, Willis said. He suggested that since the trustees have public hearings regarding the Midland secondary school drop-out rates, that they engage the public in dialogue concerning the suggested concept.

"A boot camp-style discipline program could play a part in district efforts to retain in school students most likely to drop out," Willis said. "Our greatest discipline problems often are caused by repeat offenders who show little or no respect for teachers, principals, peers or themselves."

"I applaud the adoption of the zero-tolerance policy regarding drugs, alcohol and weapons and the allocation of greater resources to district and campus safety and security," the trustee said. "Our approval of expulsions are up dramatically this academic year. A bittersweet result — bitter for the individual kids and sweet for the improved classroom learning environment," he wrote in his letter.

Willis also mentioned that students with behavior problems who cause repeated disruptions in class could also be candidates for the program.

"Let us at least debate the wisdom of replicating here this type of program which Aldine and other districts are successfully adding to their arsenal of drop-out and discipline-management policies," Willis asked the board in his letter.

Willis is asking the trustees to approve an item to ask the superintendent and school staff to prepare and recommend a policy, program and budget for an alternative education program characterized by the boot camp-style discipline.

The trustee said he has not done any research to find out the cost of such a program and that is one reason he would like the board to consider it and find out the costs for overall operations.

"I'm sure there is some sort of price tag . . . but the board of education is a team and . . . I am just proposing this to explore it as an option," Willis said.

He said this is not his idea, but other trustees have discussed the possibility before and he is presenting the idea for consideration.

HEYDAY: Windmills may make comeback, collector says submersible pumps to pull water from the aquifers.

"We didn't have springs or running water in this country," Christopher said.

Windmills were in their heyday on ranch pastures, on homesteads, and in town well into the 1900s. People used wind power to draw water and to grind corn and grain.

To this day, farmers and ranchers use windmills because wind in West Texas is more readily available than is wired-in electricity.

Depending on the design, the windmill will turn into the wind or turn downwind and start spinning when the winds reached 10 to 12 miles an hour, Christopher said.

The wheel's oblique blades, which are called slats, sails or vanes, may be long and narrow. Others are wide and flat. Some are curved. They may be three or 72 or more sails to a wheel, which may be four to 20 feet in diameter. Most are 10 feet in diameter.

The wheel, which disturbs the wind's flow, spins and turns the gearbox, which in turn moves other mechanisms for pumping or grinding.

"There's still a lot of windmills being used" and there may be more if the price of electric power gets higher, he said.

"It (electricity) is high, and it's getting higher," Christopher said. "I think people will go back to windmills."

Christopher's interest in windmills was piqued 20 years ago when he was looking for a wind-charger to power Christmas lights. He went to a swap-fest near Fort Worth to find one and instead ended up in Oklahoma City to pick up an old Enterprise brand windmill.

"It's my pride and joy," he said.

Since then, Christopher, his wife, Nancy, and their 29-year-old son, Roy, have been steeped in locating and restoring old windmills.

"We like old stuff," Christopher said. "We just like old history."

Christopher didn't estimate how many windmills or windmill parts he has on their home-place in town or on their three-acre outdoor windmill museum in Monahans.

Among his restored windmills are several Aermotors, formerly manufactured in Chicago and elsewhere and now in San Angelo, the Eclipse, the Wards Air, the Appleton, the Leader by Flint & Walling, the Dempster, the ranch-made Barron Blue Bonnet, the Fairbury, the Star Mill, the OK by Challenge, the Currie, the Eli, Imperial Mast, the Monitor, the Burdick, the Parish, Wonder and Perkins. Christopher called the latter fancy and the "rich man's mill."

Most of the old windmill-manufacturing companies are out of business.

Of the basic designs, Christopher figured the "down-wind machine is more efficient than an into-the-wind machine. I don't know the aerodynamics of it. That's just one man's opinion. I'm bold. Somebody might argue with me. That would be all right by me."

As the number of windmill collectors increase, the old mills are "getting harder and harder to find all the time," Christopher said.

He has been given windmills in exchange for just "tearing them down" and removing them as long as "you . . . don't let the parts fall into the well house." He picked up an old windmill in Canada last year for the price of just moving it to Texas.

He predicts that windmills likely will return to wide-spread use due to their practicality, efficiency, and low maintenance, which mainly is greasing and oiling the gearbox.

"The farmers and ranchers, I think, will go back to windmills," Christopher said.

Back in the old days, "They had people (cowboys) on horseback, and that's all they done — greased (and maintain) windmills."

They were called "windmillers" or windmill men.

"They are about all gone now," said Christopher, who is attracted to the lore and romance of the windmill.

"A windmill running at night is like rain on a tin roof," Christopher said. "There's something about them that's soothing."

AGENDA: Foreign trouble battles domestic policy

pinned down in crises meetings with foreign policy advisers.

What to do in Somalia after Americans are killed and demands mount for the withdrawal of troops?

What to do in Haiti when the justice minister is killed after Clinton warns against violence?

"You have to be able to string more than one bead at a time," White House chief of staff Mack McLarty said in an interview. "That's the nature of this job."

For Clinton, a president well versed in domestic issues but a novice at foreign affairs, there's no shortage of criticism about his handling of foreign policy, going all the way back to his unfulfilled threat to use military force in Bosnia.

"I think he has a strategy for dealing with his domestic presidency, but I don't see any foreign policy strategy," said Vanderbilt University political scientist Erwin Hargrove, a specialist on the presidency. "It seems like they've just ad hoc-ed their way into a bunch of situations."

But Clinton's concentration on foreign policy deflects his attention from domestic concerns, Hargrove said. "It's a time and energy problem You rob Peter to pay Paul."

Polls show Clinton's foreign policy approval falling sharply. It dropped from a 55 percent rating in September to 41 percent earlier this month in a Washington Post poll as the president's overall disapproval rating climbed 7 points, to 43 percent.

George Bush, the last occupant of the White House, was faulted for paying too much attention to foreign policy and ignoring problems at home. Clinton claimed a mandate to change direction.

Yet, the high expectations and heavy responsibilities imposed on a president by his global leadership role don't allow him to ignore troubles around the world.

"In a perfect world," McLarty said, "there's never a particularly good time for an international problem or crisis."

"It is difficult but essential to be able to handle a foreign policy agenda and a domestic agenda at the same time," McLarty said. "That doesn't mean every day will be divided precisely equal between the two. But it means that both have to be handled."

LEAVE: U.S. troops, U.N. personnel abandon Haiti

caution in your movements." Canada went a step further, recommending that its estimated 2,000 citizens in Haiti leave as soon as possible.

"The situation is volatile (with) the possibility of increased difficulty in the days to come," the Canadian Embassy said in a statement read Saturday on local radio stations. "The longer you stay, the more difficult it may be to leave through commercial means."

Canadian Prime Minister Kim Campbell on Saturday ordered two Canadian destroyers and a supply ship to international waters off Haiti to join U.S. warships in enforcing the U.N. sanctions.

Campbell said the move reflects Canada's "determination to see democratic government restored in Haiti."

Aristide, Haiti's first freely elected leader, was to return to power under a U.N. accord he signed in July with army commander Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras, one of the military leaders who drove him out in a September 1991 coup.

But the tension and bloodshed that have plagued Haiti for years accelerated as Aristide's return drew closer. The country's justice minister was assassinated in broad daylight on Thursday, days after a vehement mob turned back a U.S. warship carrying troops who were to assist the renewal of democracy.

Cedras says he will not step down unless the parliament enacts an amnesty that Aristide decreed for people who might be accused of political crimes that occurred since the coup.

But Parliament has not been able to get a quorum for weeks, in part because some members are afraid to attend and partly because anti-Aristide members have stayed away to block legislation needed for his return.

CNN reported that Cedras still said the U.N. peace accords were in effect. The 46 U.S. and seven Canadian soldiers who departed on Saturday were part of what was to have been a 1,600-man U.N.-led mission.

But many Haitians saw the foreign troops as the first wave of an invasion force. Carl Denis, spokesman for a group of far-right nationalists, threatened to use guerrilla warfare, including "voodoo powders," to resist foreigners if they invade.

Cost of Russian bread rises when officials slice subsidies

MOSCOW (NYT) — Many Russians still measure out their lives by the price of bread, a revered staple that traditionally has been subsidized at huge cost by the collectivist state.

On Friday, however, with scarcely a flourish, the government decided to end subsidies on bread, taking advantage of the state of emergency that President Boris N. Yeltsin declared after the disbanding of Parliament and a brief ensuing revolt. Moscow also tripled the price of a subway ride — to 30 rubles, still only 2.5 cents.

Bread has been so cheap that farmers often fed it to animals instead of grain. But successive Soviet governments feared to tinker too much with prices, paying up to 15 percent of the gross national product for farm subsidies. Most of that went to buy grain for bread, while also propping up famously inefficient collective farms. At the same time, the government had to import grain to satisfy an almost unlimited demand for bread, which cost almost nothing.

In conversations with Muscovites on Saturday, however, there was surprisingly little passion over the price increases.

"We're not surprised by anything anymore," said Tatyana S. Iltsova, a widow and working mother of three boys who was buying brown bread in central Moscow. "All we can do is adapt these days."

Like others interviewed, she said anyone with a regular job could bear the increase, which is expected to be at least double the old price of 136 rubles (11 cents) for an ordinary loaf of brown bread. "It's really only hard on the pensioners," Mrs. Iltsova said.

Such views, if generally held, will please economists in the government who have been fighting to eliminate the subsidy. Simultaneously with the end of subsidies, the government is compensating the poor for the price increases, which will ultimately be cheaper than subsidizing every loaf.

Since most prices were liberalized in January 1992, bread prices have risen considerably, at least in nominal terms. In September 1992, bread was between 13 and 25 rubles a kilo (2.2 pounds), depending on the variety; today it costs between 90 and 190, with the top price expected to reach 300 rubles by the end of the year.

In August the government began compensating people who receive the minimum pension — 14,620 rubles ($12.18) a month — and children under 16 and students under 18. Perhaps a third of the population is eligible for these subsidies.

The subsidy in September was 470 rubles; for the rest of the year, it will be 1,400 a month. The average monthly pension in Russia is about 24,000 rubles, and the average monthly wage about 60,000 ($50).

For now, said Anders Aslund, an economic adviser to the government, the compensation will cost more than the bread subsidy alone, which has been running 200 billion rubles ($166 million) a month, not including grain subsidies.

The end of the bread subsidy, Aslund said, is the most visible part of a fundamental economic change that includes a halt in state purchases of grain (at sometimes double the market price) and in centralized grain imports, and the cutting off of farm subsidies in general.

Aslund said the huge grain-purchasing agency, Roskhleboprodukt, which has gotten most of the low-interest farm credits, was being privatized.

The architect of Russia's economic reforms, Yegor T. Gaidar, the first deputy prime minister, promised the founding congress of a pro-Yeltsin electoral bloc on Saturday that sensible economic changes would result from victory.

Truck driver's son seeks big Quebec vote

QUEBEC (NYT) — Lucien Bouchard, a truck driver's son with a gift for oratory and the populist appeal of Ross Perot, is rattling federal politicians as he rolls up support in Quebec for a party aiming to prepare Canada for sovereignty for the province.

His Bloc Quebecois, competing in a federal election for the first time, gets the vote of Claude Labrie, 33, a shipyard worker and union delegate at the wind-swept MIL Davie yard at Levis-Lauzon, on the south bank of the St. Lawrence. MIL Davie, with its payroll of 3,500, is not only one of Quebec's biggest employers but also its last shipbuilder.

"Quebec must not lose a know-how so precious it has made MIL Davie a leader in the world," Bouchard told a cheering audience here the other day as he campaigned for the parliamentary elections on Oct. 25. "The federal government is responsible for the decline of the maritime industry in Quebec. It must now take the steps necessary to assure the survival of MIL Davie."

Labrie said later: "I liked what I heard. The Bloc has my vote."

Gemma Veilleux, 53, with her daughter Pier-Anne, 17, heard Bouchard address about 300 people in a hall in St.-Georges, about 70 miles south of Quebec City. The separatist leader exhorted the crowd to support the Bloc "so that for the first time there will be someone in Ottawa to defend the true interests of Quebec."

"Quebecers no longer accept that the federal government fails to treat Quebec equitably," he said. "Quebecers no longer accept the way they manage our money."

After another standing ovation, Mrs. Veilleux said: "Lucien Bouchard is very representative of the Quebec people. We see him as the son of Rene Levesque."

Royalists honor Antoinette on beheading anniversary

By Christopher Burns
Associated Press writer

PARIS - Under a cold gray sky, thousands of somber royalists and curious onlookers gathered Saturday to honor Marie Antoinette at the spot where she was guillotined 200 years ago.

About 3,000 people crowded Place de la Concorde to honor the dead queen. It was one of dozens of ceremonies in Paris and the provinces marking the Oct. 16, 1793, execution of Marie Antoinette, convicted by a revolutionary tribunal of treason, meddling in government and bankrupting the country.

Organizers blocked extreme rightist leader Jean-Marie Le Pen from entering the VIP section full of black-clad aristocrats, saying he was not invited. Royalists jeered "Jacobin!" — a revolutionary — as Le Pen walked away.

"I am here because I am a republican who doesn't associate himself with the Revolution's Reign of Terror," he said.

A recent poll indicates the French are split over whether the 37-year-old queen deserved to die. A play re-enacting her trial has drawn capacity audiences that most often vote for her exile instead of death.

Many French feel it was enough to execute Louis XVI, 37, a weak and indecisive king blamed for the French Revolution in 1789.

Several hundred people joined a procession Saturday morning tracing the route used to cart the queen to her beheading, from the Conciergerie, where she was imprisoned, to the square at the foot of the Champs-Elysees.

After a minute of silence to mark the moment of her execution, admirers in placed bouquets on a grass-covered strip surrounded by candles. Loudspeakers blared somber classical music.

"I'm very sad," said Philippe Terraudeau, 72, an architect and a royalist, his silver hair blowing in the chill wind. "I'm not proud to be French at this moment."

The crowd cried "Long live the king!" and "Long live the queen!" as activists in blue ascots and white arm bands decorated with fleurs-de-lys sold pins and royalist literature.

A placard among dozens of bouquets read: "Pardon Marie Antoinette!"

Among those attending Saturday were members of the clergy, Austrian Ambassador Ewa Nowotny, dukes and duchesses, and the Baroness de Rothschild. The French government ignored the event.

A British couple watched the ceremony with curiosity and amusement.

"They were strange times, and execution was sort of normal," said Jan Moss, a church administrator from London who stumbled on the ceremony.

"But we'd have done it more gracefully than that," said her husband Mike, a tourism executive. "From a British perspective it all seems very French."

While our view may have changed over the years, it hasn't effected our outlook.

On October 1, 1903 when Midland National Bank first received its charter, the Permian Basin looked very different. Open expanses of prairie and roaming cattle were the business of the day. The railroad was the communications artery. Midland National was preoccupied with droughts and floods.

Now 90 years later, the open expanse of prairie is dotted with pumping units, lease roads and roaming seismic trucks. Interstate 20, Midland International Airport, the railroad and fiber optics are the communications arteries.

But throughout the 90 years, one thing hasn't changed — the Midland National philosophy of doing business. Now we proudly return with the respected bankers, directors and state-of-the-art facilities and products that have served the Permian Basin consistently for generations.

N. Korea seeks U.S. talks, warns Japan

TOKYO (AP) — The dispute over North Korea's nuclear facilities cannot be resolved by the U.N. nuclear watchdog agency, the hard-line communist country said Saturday.

The Communist Party newspaper Rodong Sinmun said the International Atomic Energy Agency could not settle the dispute, and that it "can be solved only through DPRK (North Korea)-U.S.A. talks."

Claiming that the nuclear problem started "when the United States introduced nuclear weapons into South Korea," Rodong Sinmun declared, "No third party can take the place of the United States."

The statement came a day after the Clinton administration said it might recommend international sanctions against North Korea within several weeks if the North did not resume cooperation with international nuclear inspectors.

North Korea is suspected of developing nuclear weapons, but denies any such intention.

The Vienna-based IAEA has been trying to monitor the facilities, but North Korean officials have denied it access lately. The North has also refused to allow the IAEA to visit suspected waste dumps that could provide information about plutonium production.

State Department spokesman Mike McCurry said on Friday that the inspectors need to return soon to North Korea's nuclear facilities to install new rolls of film and take other steps to avoid information gaps.

North Korea claims the IAEA is biased, however, and wants to deal directly with the United States.

A dialogue between the United States and North Korea on nuclear issues began last March, but it has been suspended partly because of the North's non-cooperation with the IAEA.

Also Saturday, North Korea accused Japan of "crying for international sanctions" against North Korea because of the nuclear issue.

"If Japan and other hostile forces venture something like international sanctions, we will have no other alternative but to take an appropriate self-defensive measure as we have declared time and again," said a statement from North Korea's foreign ministry. It did not elaborate.

Japan, which bans the production and possession of nuclear weapons, has insisted that North Korea accept nuclear inspections. Prime Minister Morihiro Hosokawa of Japan has expressed concern over North Korean ballistic missiles capable of striking Japan with nuclear warheads.

Under a 1992 accord, the two Koreas agreed to a ban on nuclear weapons, but they have failed to work out inspection rules.

Latin leaders tie future with U.S. to NAFTA

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Latin American leaders ended a two-day summit on Saturday strongly supporting President Clinton's campaign to push the North American Free Trade Agreement through Congress.

The members of the Group of Rio also backed the international effort to restore democracy to Haiti and criticized the European Community for farm subsidies that they said hurt Latin American farmers.

The congressional vote on NAFTA, expected next month, will be seen "as an indication of the global future of U.S. policy toward Latin America and the Caribbean," said President Patricio Aylwin of Chile.

The agreement would gradually wipe out most trade barriers among the United States, Canada and Mexico. The United States is the only partner that still must ratify the accord.

Colombian President Cesar Gaviria said approval of NAFTA "is essential for the economic future of Latin America and the world. It would be the first step toward the creation of a large free trade zone throughout the Americas."

"It would be the backbone of relations between the United States and Latin America," he added.

In a letter to the summit on Friday, Clinton said, "I am committed to the concept of freer hemispheric trade as a long-term goal for this region. The passage of NAFTA will be the first step in achieving this goal throughout our hemisphere."

Aylwin was asked by his colleagues to answer Clinton's letter by reiterating their support for NAFTA.

Free trade was high on the agenda. In a 30-point statement, the leaders expressed "deep disappointment" over what they called protectionist trade policies by the world's large powers. They said these policies threaten final agreement for a new accord governing world trade.

Although the European Community was not mentioned by name, officials said the statement was a clear reference to the EC's reluctance to open its doors to farm products from outside the bloc.

Somali bands must disarm, envoy says

MOGADISHU, Somalia (NYT) — The United Nations' special envoy in Somalia said Saturday that he was determined to see the leaders of this country's armed factions surrender their heavy weapons, but that he was not convinced that Gen. Mohamed Farrah Aidid would agree to do so.

The demand has been a main point of friction in the dispute between the United Nations and Aidid, who has been blamed for attacks on U.N. peacekeepers.

But Adm. Jonathan Howe, the U.N. special envoy, made clear in an interview Saturday that he did not believe this demand should be set aside now that the two sides had reached an uneasy truce.

Howe said the cease-fire had given him new hope that Aidid would hand over his machine-gun-equipped vehicles, artillery pieces and other large weapons. He would not say what the United Nations might do if the Aidid did not comply, but he made plain that he still regarded the disarming of all factions as essential to the U.N. mission.

"I think we have to do disarmament, or else it will be very difficult for them to even take law and order into their own hands," Howe said. "Disarmament is the exit ticket to a successful effort."

The statements by Howe underscored the size of the task still facing the United States in if it is to achieve President Clinton's goal of leaving Somalia with the security necessary for a political settlement.

While rival Somali faction leaders have pledged their support for disarmament and surrendered many of their weapons, Aidid has been resistant. His arms stockpile is now the country's most formidable, and U.S. officials say he has been acquiring even more sophisticated arms from suppliers in the Sudan and Iran.

Without disarmament, Howe warned Saturday, any security force established by a Somali government could easily be outgunned by independent forces like Aidid's.

Chief Warrant Officer Michael Durant, wounded when the helicopter which he was piloting was shot down earlier this month in Somalia, arrives Saturday at Andrews Air Force Base, Md. Somali warlord Aidid held Durant captive for 11 days.

Army pilot, who was held hostage by Somali warlord, lands in U.S.

By Denise Cabrera
Associated Press writer

ANDREWS AIR FORCE BASE, Md. — Michael Durant, the Army helicopter pilot whose captivity in Somalia helped spark a cry for the United States to shift from fighting to talking, returned to a hero's welcome on U.S. soil Saturday night.

The 32-year-old Blackhawk pilot, who was accompanied by his wife on an eight-hour flight from Germany, was carried from a giant Air Force C-141 on a stretcher.

He was walked directly onto another plane waiting for the final leg of his homeward flight — a two-hour flight to Fort Campbell, Ky.

A delegation headed by Secretary of State Warren Christopher waited near the smaller plane — applauding — and walked en masse about 30 yards to meet Durant as he, his wife and the men bearing his stretcher moved across the same tarmac used by heads of state when they arrive for visits to the U.S. capital.

Among those present was Republican Sen. Bob Smith of New Hampshire, Durant's home state. Smith's wife gave a thumbs-up sign and hugged Durant's wife as the groups converged.

Durant was taken quickly aboard the waiting Air Force plane, which remained on the ground more than an hour before taking off at 8 p.m. EDT for Kentucky, where an even bigger welcome — this one from friends and family — awaited.

More than 1,000 people had gathered at the Kentucky landing site even before Durant's flight headed south from the Washington area.

At a ceremony reporters could glimpse through lighted windows, Durant was awarded a Purple Heart for his injuries by Gen. Gordon Sullivan, the Army chief of staff.

National Security Adviser Anthony Lake, who was among those who escorted Durant onto the C-9, reported to reporters: "He said he's proud to be an American. . . . He said he appreciates the president's call to him on Thursday."

Asked whether Durant seemed surprised at all the attention he was receiving, Lake said, "I think he seemed pleased."

Lake said he extended an invitation from President Clinton to visit the White House when Durant is feeling better. "He said he'd be glad to."

Durant, who was among 43 patients flown from Germany on a regular hospital evacuation flight, also was awarded the Armed Forces Expeditionary Medal by Sullivan. Only one of the other 42 patients who landed at Andrews with Durant had been in Somalia and it was not clear whether he was injured in the same operation that felled Durant.

Durant faces a long and painful convalescence from a broken back and complicated thigh fracture, but surgeons who examined him in Germany said he has a good chance of a complete recovery.

He was shot down Oct. 3 by fighters loyal to faction leader Mohamed Farrah Aidid in a battle that killed 18 other Americans.

A videotape of the bloodied and dazed Durant being interrogated by an off-screen questioner was shown repeatedly on U.S. television. It was one of the most shocking images from a military operation that Americans were increasingly coming to question.

Denny jury grapples with verdicts

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The jury in the Reginald Denny beating case revealed Saturday that it had reached verdicts on some counts but could not decide others, including some of the most serious charges against the two defendants.

Superior Court Judge John Ouderkirk said he would accept the verdicts the jury had reached on Monday morning. He dismissed the jurors for the day and said he would also ask them Monday whether further deliberations would be fruitful.

Prosecutors said they would ask that deliberations continue.

The jury reported that undecided charges against defendant Damian Williams included the attempted murder of Denny, assaulting motorist Alicia Maldonado with a deadly weapon, robbing motorist Takao Hirata, assaulting Jorge Gonzalez and assaulting Fidel Lopez.

In addition, jurors had yet to reach a verdict on a special allegation — use of a deadly weapon — in the alleged attack by Williams on Denny. Special allegation findings enhance penalties at sentencing.

Jurors also deadlocked on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon filed against defendant Henry Watson for an attack on truck driver Larry Tarvin.

Williams, 20, and Watson, 29, were charged with attempted murder and the other felonies in attacks on Denny and others that took place as rioting broke out on April 29, 1992.

Both were accused of taking part in the most notorious attack of the riot, the televised assault on truck driver Denny.

The riot began hours after four white policemen accused of the beating of black motorist Rodney King were acquitted of most charges in state court. Two officers, Stacey Koon and Laurence Powell, were subsequently convicted in federal court of violating King's civil rights and sentenced to 30 months in prison.

The jurors said they had reached verdicts on the following counts against Williams: aggravated mayhem in the Denny attack, robbery of Denny with great bodily harm, assault with a deadly weapon on Hirata, assault with a deadly weapon on firefighter Terrance Manning and assault with a deadly weapon on firefighter Fred Mathis.

The decided counts involving Watson were attempted murder of Denny, robbery of Denny with great bodily harm, assault with a deadly weapon on Maldonado, and robbery of Tarvin with great bodily injury, the jurors said.

Attorneys for both defendants said the announcements meant the defense had won because it appeared their clients would not be convicted of the most serious crimes, which carry potential life prison sentences.

"The main goal was to avoid conviction on any charge that could bring life in prison," said Edi Faal, who represents Williams.

Faal also said he believed any assault conviction against his client would not withstand appeal

Some worry about plan to cut welfare

By Jennifer Dixon
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Deeda Seed hears almost every day from Utah mothers who are angry and worried about President Clinton's promises to cut welfare benefits after two years.

Charletta Reed, Linda Haley and Dottie Stevens are riled up too.

Across the country, low-income women are on their guard as the president's welfare reform task force draws its blueprint for overhauling Aid to Families with Dependent Children.

The mothers see a task force of Washington bureaucrats, where the men outnumber the women and whites outnumber minorities, making decisions about the lives of millions of single mothers and their children.

"This is a direct hit on women, because we are so at risk for being poor. This is a program for women, and this direct hit is being orchestrated primarily by men," said Seed, who founded Justice, Economic Dignity and Independence for Women (JEDI) last November in Salt Lake City.

Seed wants to organize a grassroots campaign, but knows it won't be easy to get Washington's attention. "We don't have a lot of money — no high-paid media consultants, no high-paid pollsters."

While Seed and other welfare mothers want to work, they are skeptical that the economy or the federal government can support enough good jobs for women whose benefits run out after two years. Poor mothers shouldn't be forced to leave their children to flip burgers or mop floors, they maintain.

"I don't think Bill Clinton or none of the other rich people sitting up there in Washington should say anything about someone who is trying to scratch out a meager survival," said Reed, a founding member of Together Against Poverty, a group of former and current welfare recipients in New Jersey.

Stevens, who lives in Boston and collects emergency aid, sees the president's reforms as a "political game" that uses women on welfare as scapegoats for a climbing federal deficit and stagnant economy.

Haley, who is disabled and gets Supplemental Security Income, wishes the task force members could experience what she has endured: homelessness, standing in lines in soup kitchens and sleeping in shelters.

The Clinton administration argues that its reform plan will be both bold and fair.

The president also has promised to give welfare recipients the education and training they need to get a job, and to find them work in the community if there aren't enough jobs in the private sector.

Washington, United Nations react differently to Haiti, Somalia

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The Security Council's endorsement Saturday of a U.S.-led naval quarantine of Haiti shows the United States and United Nations in apparent accord, in contrast to their sharp disagreements over Somalia.

Privately, U.N. officials have expressed displeasure that the Clinton administration withdrew a troop carrier from Haitian waters last week after several hundred anti-democracy protesters refused to let it to dock.

But the strains over Haiti are nothing compared with the behind-the-scenes sparring between Clinton administration officials and Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali over the troubled Somalia operation.

Diplomats and U.N. officials say there have been a number of strong exchanges between Boutros-Ghali and American officials about the U.S. decision to limit its involvement in Somalia after the Oct. 3 battle in Mogadishu, which caused 18 American deaths.

The latest friction concerns Boutros-Ghali's intended trip to Somalia this month. U.S. officials are trying to persuade him to call off the visit, arguing that he is deeply resented by Somalis and that his presence could undermine the fragile reconciliation process Washington is now pursuing.

Boutros-Ghali is in Africa and still plans to visit Mogadishu, but the date has not been set. U.N. officials, speaking privately, say they resent what they see as U.S. efforts to push the U.N. around.

From the outset Boutros-Ghali has insisted that disarmament of Somalia's clans, included the forces of Mohamed Farrah Aidid, is vital for security and the success of humanitarian efforts.

The United States opposes that, although in recent months U.S. troops have been actively engaged in the hunt for Aidid, who is wanted by the United Nations for attacks on U.N. peacekeepers.

U.S. officials blame the United Nations, especially Boutros-Ghali, for shifting the original aid mission into one of disarmament and military pursuit.

U.N. observers point out that the United States vigorously supported every resolution about the need for disarmament.

Klan rally at Indiana Capitol turns violent

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Hundreds of Ku Klux Klan supporters and opponents clashed at a KKK rally on the steps of the Indiana Capitol on Saturday as scattered fights broke out and several people were hurt.

"We all should have just ignored this whole thing," said Adrian Garrett, a black Indianapolis resident who said he came to watch because of advance publicity.

Those injured included three newspaper photographers struck by members of the crowd. Two were treated and released from a local hospital and the condition of a third wasn't known immediately. Fire Department medics said seven people in all were treated.

The Klan and counterdemonstrators dueled with loudspeakers for about a half-hour, shouting back and forth before the white supremacists retreated into the Statehouse.

Forty white-robed Klansmen took part in the rally while several hundred supporters and opponents gathered around.

Police in riot gear kept opponents about 100 feet away, but fights broke out as Klan supporters, trying to leave after the rally, encountered some of those who had gathered to oppose the KKK.

Mayor Stephen Goldsmith accused hate groups from Detroit, New York and elsewhere of stirring up trouble.

Gunman writes essay on killing before murders

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Weeks before James Buquet went to a fitness club and shot four people and himself to death, he wrote about a fictional man who "didn't feel right at night unless he thought about killing."

The 19-year-old Buquet wrote the narrative for a creative writing class at Grossmont College.

In chilling detail, it describes the main character, Natas A. Bishop, as a man who believed he could give meaning to life by taking it away from others and himself.

"Natas had these thoughts a lot. They would come and go, along with his depressions," Buquet wrote. "God how many times had he thought about this? At night it was the last thought he had. The one that put him to sleep. In fact, he didn't feel right at night unless he thought about killing."

On Thursday, Buquet went to the Family Fitness Center in El Cajon with a 12-gauge shotgun and killed a man and three women.

The essay was obtained by The Daily Californian of El Cajon, and the newspaper gave a copy to The Associated Press on Saturday.

Buquet's parents, Janet and Bob, said Friday that their son had suffered from severe bouts of depression and had been a drug abuser. But they said they had no idea what drove him to kill.

"What snapped, I don't know. But something snapped, because that was not our Jimmy," his mother said. "He wasn't violent. He was just very quiet. He'd go inward. He'd do a lot of writing in his room. He'd retreat from us."

His writing was rife with similarities to the shootings.

In it, Bishop uses a 12-gauge shotgun to murder people in a fast-food restaurant. At least 10 people die as Bishop shoots into crowds.

Buquet describes how Bishop methodically prepares for the killings at his home "with the ice of a serial killer going in for the prey." But then Bishop is unsure where to find his victims.

"Natas was driving around not exactly sure where to go. A 7-11? a restaurant? An office building? Natas was thinking if he would kill as many people as he (could) get in a few minutes then ace himself, or if he would drag it out.

"You know, play with the cops' and victims' mind(s). You know kill like 30 of them one by one."

Bishop decides on the restaurant, and "slowly he walked the eternity to the door.

"A weight pressed against his soul. It was fear. That's what it was about, he knew. Fear. That is what this life was ruled by. That is what he had to fight. He had to face the beast and be a warrior. All his life he hated people for not fighting the beast. He would destroy his."

Corner The Market With Our New CD.

Now You Can Earn Market Returns With The NationsBank Stock Market CD.

You know that investing in the stock market for the long term is the smart thing to do. After all, the stock market has historically achieved superior returns. You'd like to take advantage of higher market returns, but you don't want to risk your principal.

The NationsBank Stock Market CD gives you a chance to realize market returns, without risking a penny of your principal. The CD's interest rate is tied to the Standard & Poor's 500 Composite Stock Price Index, while your principal is an FDIC-insured deposit with NationsBank.

Your Interest Rate Is Based On The S&P 500 Index.

The Stock Market CD offers you instant diversification because your interest rate is based on the S&P 500 Index, which represents 500 of the nation's leading companies. When you open your five-year CD, you'll have a beginning S&P 500 Index value. During the next 12 months, the Index's value at each month end is taken. The month-end values are then averaged for the year. You'll receive an interest payment each year the 12-month average is higher than your beginning Index value.

Your beginning Index value is reset each year. That means your annual interest rate reflects each year's market performance. So unlike stock investments, if the market declines one year, you'll have a new chance to earn a return in later years—without having to recoup a prior decline first.

There Is No Risk To Your Principal.

The Stock Market CD is similar to a traditional CD, offering you complete safety of principal. The CD is issued by NationsBank, one of the largest and most stable financial institutions in the nation. So you have the security of knowing that your principal will be returned to you in full at maturity.

You can invest in the Stock Market CD with a minimum deposit of $10,000, for a single term of five years. And like any other CD, your principal is insured by the FDIC. But unlike a typical fixed-rate CD, the Stock Market CD gives you the chance to earn a higher rate of return.

NationsBank Stock Market CD Example.*

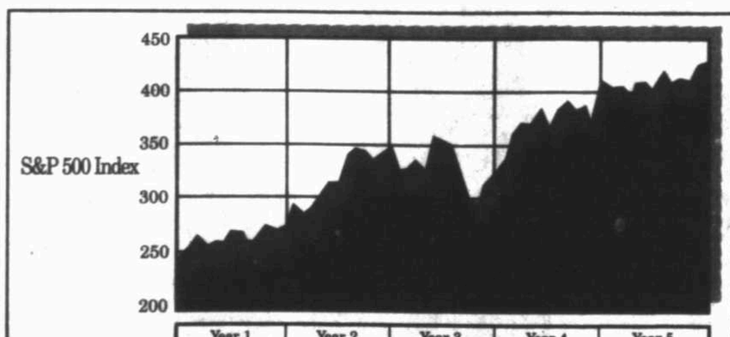

The chart below illustrates that even with a market decline in 1990, when no interest would have been paid, a $10,000 investment made at the beginning of the five-year period from 1988 through 1992 would have earned an annual percentage yield of 7.19%.

It's Easy To Corner The Market.

The Stock Market CD can play a dual role in your investment portfolio—giving you the safety of guaranteed principal and the generally higher overall return of the stock market.

And the Stock Market CD is an easy way to corner the market. You don't need to spend time researching a fund's performance or management. And even better, you pay no sales fees or commissions. You can just invest your money and enjoy the ride, confident that you'll have a safe landing.

We invite you to learn more about the Stock Market CD and the power it can add to your investment portfolio. Our newest CD is just one more way we can help make a difference in your future. So visit your nearby NationsBank or call us at 1-800-424-6290 and see how easy it can be to corner the market with our Stock Market CD.

Bush ends silence by attacking Clinton

WASHINGTON (NYT) — President Clinton's new policy in Somalia has fostered a cease-fire in Mogadishu, but it has ended the cease-fire in Washington between the Clinton and Bush administration foreign policy teams.

After months of keeping their voices muted, senior members of the Bush administration opened up last week with both barrels on President Clinton, essentially accusing him of messing up a Somalia operation that they handed off to him in sound condition, and of naively believing that a president could delegate foreign policy to subordinates while he focused on domestic affairs.

The Clinton team has responded with salvos of indignation, arguing that the Bush team left them with ticking time bombs labeled "Bosnia," "Haiti" and "Somalia," and was now pretending to have simple answers for complex problems that President George Bush could have addressed while in office but did not.

This foreign policy equivalent of a food-fight among pinstriped diplomats was kicked off last week with the low-key but unmistakable critique of the Clinton foreign policy by Bush, who had promised Clinton that he would not criticize him for one year.

(The former president may have been operating on the political calendar and assumed that the cease-fire year expired on Election Day in November, not Jan. 20th, Inauguration Day, in which case Bush was guilty only of pushing the schedule by a few weeks. Friends say Bush is still annoyed over the fact that Clinton repeatedly hit him over the head during the campaign for lacking a workable policy for Haiti. "He's been swallowing hard for several months now," said a Bush friend, "and I think he just decided enough is enough.")

Speaking to schoolchildren at the Castle Hills Elementary School in San Antonio Wednesday, Bush said, "If you're going to put somebody else's son or daughter into harm's way, into battle, you've got to know the answer to three questions."

He said U.S. leaders have to know what the mission is, "how are they going to do it" and "how they're going to get out of there."

Bush implied that he had the answers to all three questions when he dispatched U.S. troops to Somalia last December, saying:

In an interview Thursday on CNN, former Defense Secretary Dick Cheney, a likely Republican presidential candidate in 1996, hit on the same theme.

Perot vows to sway congressional races

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Ross Perot vowed Saturday to use his organization as a bloc to sway the outcome of next year's midterm congressional elections.

"We can be the swing vote in every congressional race in this country if we get our act together," said Perot. "Our strength is in our numbers."

During a rally, Perot continued his assault on a new trade agreement with Mexico and said he'll be a player in the looming debate over reforming the nation's health care system.

The key to winning those fights, Perot said, is the message sent during congressional elections.

"We've got to be ready to go head to head in 1994," Perot said. "You have the vote, you can determine this country's policies."

Perot spoke to about 1,100 people during a rally at Drake University designed to boost interest in his group, United We Stand America.

The major theme of Perot's talk was an attack on the North American Free Trade Agreement, a deal designed to reduce barriers to trade between the U.S., Canada and Mexico.

The anti-trade arguments came in a farm state where the pact is generally popular because of the potential for opening a big new market for commodities.

Perot concedes that some farm interests will benefit, but warned the nation's economy would be hammered as millions of manufacturing jobs are shipped to Mexico, where wages are far lower.

The deal is in deep trouble in Congress, where a vote is set next month.

"When you get down to the working people of this country, they've figured this thing out," said Perot. "Two-thirds of the American people don't believe it's a good thing for this country."

Because of that, Perot said, the pact faces defeat in the House of Representatives, largely because of pressure independent voters put on Congress during recess.

"You made the difference during this recess," Perot told supporters.

While Perot was trooping through the Midwest attacking the deal, President Clinton took to the airwaves in its defense, arguing the treaty would stimulate the economy.

"We'll be creating the biggest trading block in the world, right at our doorstep," Clinton said in his weekly radio address Saturday.

Perot and other critics argue that many companies will shift manufacturing to Mexico.

Star asks governor to spare 'Death Row Dog'

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — Growls of protest have been raised worldwide over the case of the "Death Row Dog," and now Brigitte Bardot has asked Gov. James Florio to intercede.

"It seems to me that the one condemned to death, after 2½ years of incarceration, is someone who has paid his debt to society," the French animal rights activist and former actress wrote.

The 59-year-old Bardot faxed the letter to the governor, Florio spokesman Dave Schratweiser said Saturday.

She asked that he release Taro, a 100-pound Akita accused of hurting a 10-year-old girl.

The brown-and-white dog has been held in the Bergen County Jail's K-9 unit since February 1991. The Japanese government has offered to take Taro, whose breed originated in that country, and a Kenyan businessman is reportedly mobilizing support in Africa to save the animal.

Taro's troubles began Christmas 1990, when Brie Halfond said her grandparents' dog attacked her during a holiday party. She was found with her lip torn and her face bleeding.

Bertha and Bernard Halfond, Taro's owners, have said the girl antagonized the dog and exaggerated the incident. But authorities found Taro to be vicious and ordered the dog destroyed. A municipal judge agreed, but Taro's owners appealed and, after they lost in Superior Court, filed a second appeal.

Legal and prison costs have exceeded $100,000 and the court has yet to set a date for a decision in the case.

Schratweiser said the governor has no plans to intervene before a ruling is issued.

Studies: Medical community should take closer look at women

By Elisabeth Rosenthal
N.Y. Times News Service

Medical care for most men is one-stop shopping: a trip to a general doctor for a physical examination that includes full preventive care. But that approach works poorly for a woman, new studies have shown, with tests like Pap smears often overlooked, particularly if the doctor is a man.

In practice, many women insure complete care by making the medical rounds: they visit a generalist, a gynecologist for Pap tests and maybe even a breast cancer specialist for breast examinations and mammograms. Now many public health experts are saying that there must be a better way.

"There is a growing and substantial body of evidence that for a long time women's health issues have not received enough attention," said Dr. Nicole Lurie, author of a recent study in The New England Journal of Medicine that highlighted some of the shortcomings in women's care.

"Previously we've talked about deficiencies on a national level — in terms of not enough research on women's health," Dr. Lurie said. "Now we are saying it's also a problem on a very basic clinical level — that patients are not getting what they need."

Although many men as well as women find themselves visiting more than one doctor as they age, women's care is fragmented from adolescence on.

While most medical experts agree that a woman's basic medical care could be consolidated under one doctor, they debate whether that doctor should be an internist, a family practitioner, a gynecologist or a doctor who specializes in the new field of women's health.

Also, given that two recent studies have found male doctors to be lax in performing Pap tests and ordering mammograms, some women's health advocates are wondering whether women should be advised to seek out doctors who are women.

"We favor provision of care by any type of primary care physician, but we feel that none of them right now are trained well in women's health," said Eileen McGrath, executive director of the American Medical Women's Association.

The association sponsored a conference Tuesday in Washington to discuss ways to improve women's health care, and has designed a course to teach practicing general doctors "what they didn't learn in medical school."

President Clinton's proposal to overhaul the nation's health-care system specifically guarantees coverage for Pap smears and mammograms, but on a slightly less frequent basis than the association and other women's health advocates would like to see.

As a result, the details of such screening are under review.

Dr. Vicki Hufnagle, an obstetrician-gynecologist at Thompson Memorial Hospital in Burbank, Calif., believes that women need doctors devoted to their care.

She recently opened a chain of women's health bookstores, called Her Body, and is organizing a women's hospital whose staff will include a urologist who focuses on treating women, a plastic surgeon who can remove defective breast implants and gynecologists who, where possible, will remove tumors without taking out the entire uterus or ovaries.

But she said that merely choosing a woman as a doctor might not guarantee good care. "All doctors are trained the same and learn the same myths about women's bodies, so you may feel more comfortable with a women, but you may not be better off," she said.

But Dr. Peter Franks, author of another recent study comparing the competence of male and female doctors in taking care of women, cautioned against jumping to the conclusion that the doctor's office was hazardous to women.

"It is politically correct to talk about how women don't get a fair shake from the health care system, and that's true to some extent, since most physicians are male," he said.

"But if you look at medical outcomes, women do much better than men. They live longer, they have lower rates of mortality from the same diseases, they use the health-care system more — and more effectively."

Military school struggles with courts, culture

N.Y. Times News Service

LEXINGTON, Va. — Half an hour before sunrise, hundreds of men in yellow sweatsuits stream out of the neo-Gothic barracks of Virginia Military Institute, saluting a statue of Stonewall Jackson as they race toward the foggy parade ground.

They are VMI's freshmen, known as "rats," who spend their 17-hour college days in workouts ("sweat parties"), marching stiffly ("straining") and answering trivial questions bellowed by upper-classmen who surround them ("flaming").

VMI is struggling to protect its traditions in the face of legal challenges and social changes. It is one of only two all-male military colleges in the nation — the other is the Citadel, in Charleston, S.C.

To satisfy a federal court order and still exclude women, VMI officials gambled last month on a proposal to finance a military cadre at a nearby women's college.

Civil rights groups said the idea should be rejected by courts as an unconstitutional, separate-but-equal solution.

But the 154-year-old college, which is run by the state and has 1,200 cadets, faces a hurdle that may be even more daunting: trying to recruit the "Beavis and Butt-Head" generation to a school that revels in military tradition.

This year's class of 351 freshmen was the smallest since 1976, and 12 percent dropped out in the first two months.

Mark Sandy, VMI's associate dean for enrollment management, acknowledged the school's shrinking market. "In the '60s, when a lot of kids came from farms and didn't have cable TV and all that, the difference between what they were used to and what they got at VMI wasn't that big a stretch," he said.

"Now, with MTV and Nintendo and all that, kids aren't used to getting up early, working all day and being deprived of things."

Greg Banford, 19, a second-year cadet from Chesapeake, Va., was among many who maintain that VMI would have no reason to exist if it had widespread appeal.

The most direct threat to the VMI that lingers in the memories of its 13,000 alumni would be the inclusion of women in the corps of cadets.

Cadets and alumni maintain that women would sap the physical and mental rigor of the "rat" line, which depends on male bonding for the training of citizen soldiers.

And officials at the college cite the cost of modifying its barracks, which have no locks on the cadets' doors and no doors on the toilets or showers.

Fake policeman pulls motorists over before authorities catch on HAUPPAUGE, N.Y. (AP) — He wore a uniform. He carried a radar gun. He drove a patrol car. He stopped traffic offenders.

There was just one little problem: Keith Ungerer is not, was not and probably never will be a police officer.

Ungerer, 21, turned himself in last week after conducting his own patrols in stolen police cars for two weeks, Suffolk County police said.

He told investigators he "just wanted to help out," said police spokesman Salvatore Yovino. "He's a cop buff."

Ungerer's interest in police work crossed the line when he obtained spare keys to several Suffolk County police cruisers, Yovino said.

Wearing an authentic looking uniform and toting a stolen radar gun, Ungerer began stopping traffic violators in the cruisers.

He got word police were looking for him and surrendered.

Ungerer was charged with two counts of grand larceny, criminal impersonation and unauthorized use of a motor vehicle.

Artist turns cattle herd into lumbering poetry in motion

PINEDALE, Wyo. (AP) — A herd of cattle will be poetry in motion.

Three artists are planning a moo-ving art exhibit that will involve painting a passage from a pioneer woman's journal on 70 lumbering cows.

"Most of the ranchers would like me to paint 'Eat Beef' on each one, but I don't have a grant for that," artist Pip Brant said.

Instead, the artists plan to use words from a journal kept by Phyllis Luman Metal, who grew up in the early 1900s on a ranch near Pinedale, 350 miles northwest of Cheyenne.

"Cows are great and so are women," artist Sue Thornton said. "Both of their lives are about self-sacrifice and about motherhood."

She said the inevitable scrambling of the words as the cattle mill about a field is part of the artwork.

"We may want to go double sides, two words per cow," she said. "To put it all together, you have to be savvy."

Program to foster harmony creates tension

By Timothy Egan
N.Y. Times News Service

SEATTLE– When the nation's largest ferry system started a costly training program to promote greater tolerance among employees, it was intended to be "shock therapy," as one official called it — a sort of cultural boot camp for the deckhands, seamen, captains and mates steeped in sailor traditions.

One by one they came off the boats and into the training room, all 1,500 employees of the Washington State Ferry System. They were told not to say "gals" or "ladies," instructed to call blacks "people of color," and to remember that some traditional maritime terms may be nautically correct on Puget Sound but are offensive to some people.

As intended, the seminars produced some obvious changes aboard the giant ferries. Gone are the ubiquitous girlie calendars from the walls of crew quarters. Female workers say they are less likely to hear sexual jokes from the men. Black workers say whites treat them with a degree of respect that had been missing, though it sometimes seems grudging.

Despite costly training, many workers complain that environment's polarized.

But despite the $1 million program, many ferry workers say they are more polarized than before the diversity training.

Their comments are similar to those heard in some other places where diversity training has moved out of management seminars and into the lower ranks of workers. Such critics say it is futile to try to change attitudes by forcing people to sit in all-day seminars or by giving them lists of forbidden words, as was done here.

"There's a huge backlash. Tons of anger," said Marcia Morse, one of the first women hired at the ferry system nearly 19 years ago and a proponent of diversity training.

Dozens of workers interviewed at the ferry system said they were afraid to talk to each other, and some supervisors said they hesitated to give orders.

While most of those interviewed approved of the goals of diversity training, they said the manner in which it is applied sometimes seems condescending.

"Let's face it — I'm a middle-aged guy and my mind is made up," said Dennis Traxler.

Report cites TB increase across U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — New cases of tuberculosis are increasing at an alarming rate, posing a special threat to the poor and people with the AIDS virus, congressional analysts report.

Several lawmakers said they would redouble efforts to pass legislation endorsed last month by the Senate Labor Committee that would boost federal spending on tuberculosis control to $302 million a year, about twice the present level.

"This is a chilling report; it is an indictment of our public health system." said Rep. Ed Towns, D-N.Y., chairman of the House Governmental Operations subcommittee on human resources.

"The (Office of Technology Assessment) study makes clear that the face of this disease is now black and brown," Towns said. "Seventy one percent of all new TB cases and 86 percent of all childhood cases occurred in racial and ethnic minorities."

Towns was joined at a news conference by Sens. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, and Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., who also called for more federal spending on TB control.

The congressional report said efforts to combat TB are complicated because of the emergence of strains resistant to anti-TB drugs.

The report said that between 1953, when a national reporting system for TB cases was put in place by the Public Health Service, and 1984, the number of active TB cases reported each year declined by 74 percent.

But it said the decline slowed in 1985 and then reversed.

The 26,673 new TB cases reported last year were a 20 percent increase over 1985, the report said. And it estimated 10 million to 15 million people are infected with the bacteria that causes TB, but are not sick.

Catholic bishop turns to MTV for ad campaign

By Kelly P. Kissel
Associated Press writer

SCRANTON, Pa. — What do Beavis and Butt-head have in common with a Roman Catholic bishop?

The crass cartoon duo and the spiritual leader are both reaching American youth via MTV.

"There are those that say we should not be associating with dogs," said Bishop James C. Timlin. "I keep saying . . . we're going to be out there preaching the message that we need to get out."

The Diocese of Scranton has set up its own Soul Shopping Network, buying time on cable TV music channels to air messages from priests who are fans of the original Madonna.

"The church realizes that the youth are its future. You have to get them where they are," said Maria Orzel, diocese communications director.

For $450, the diocese bought time for 50 spots — 25 on MTV and 25 on its sister station VH-1. They debuted on MTV during "The Grind," a teen dance show filmed at the beach.

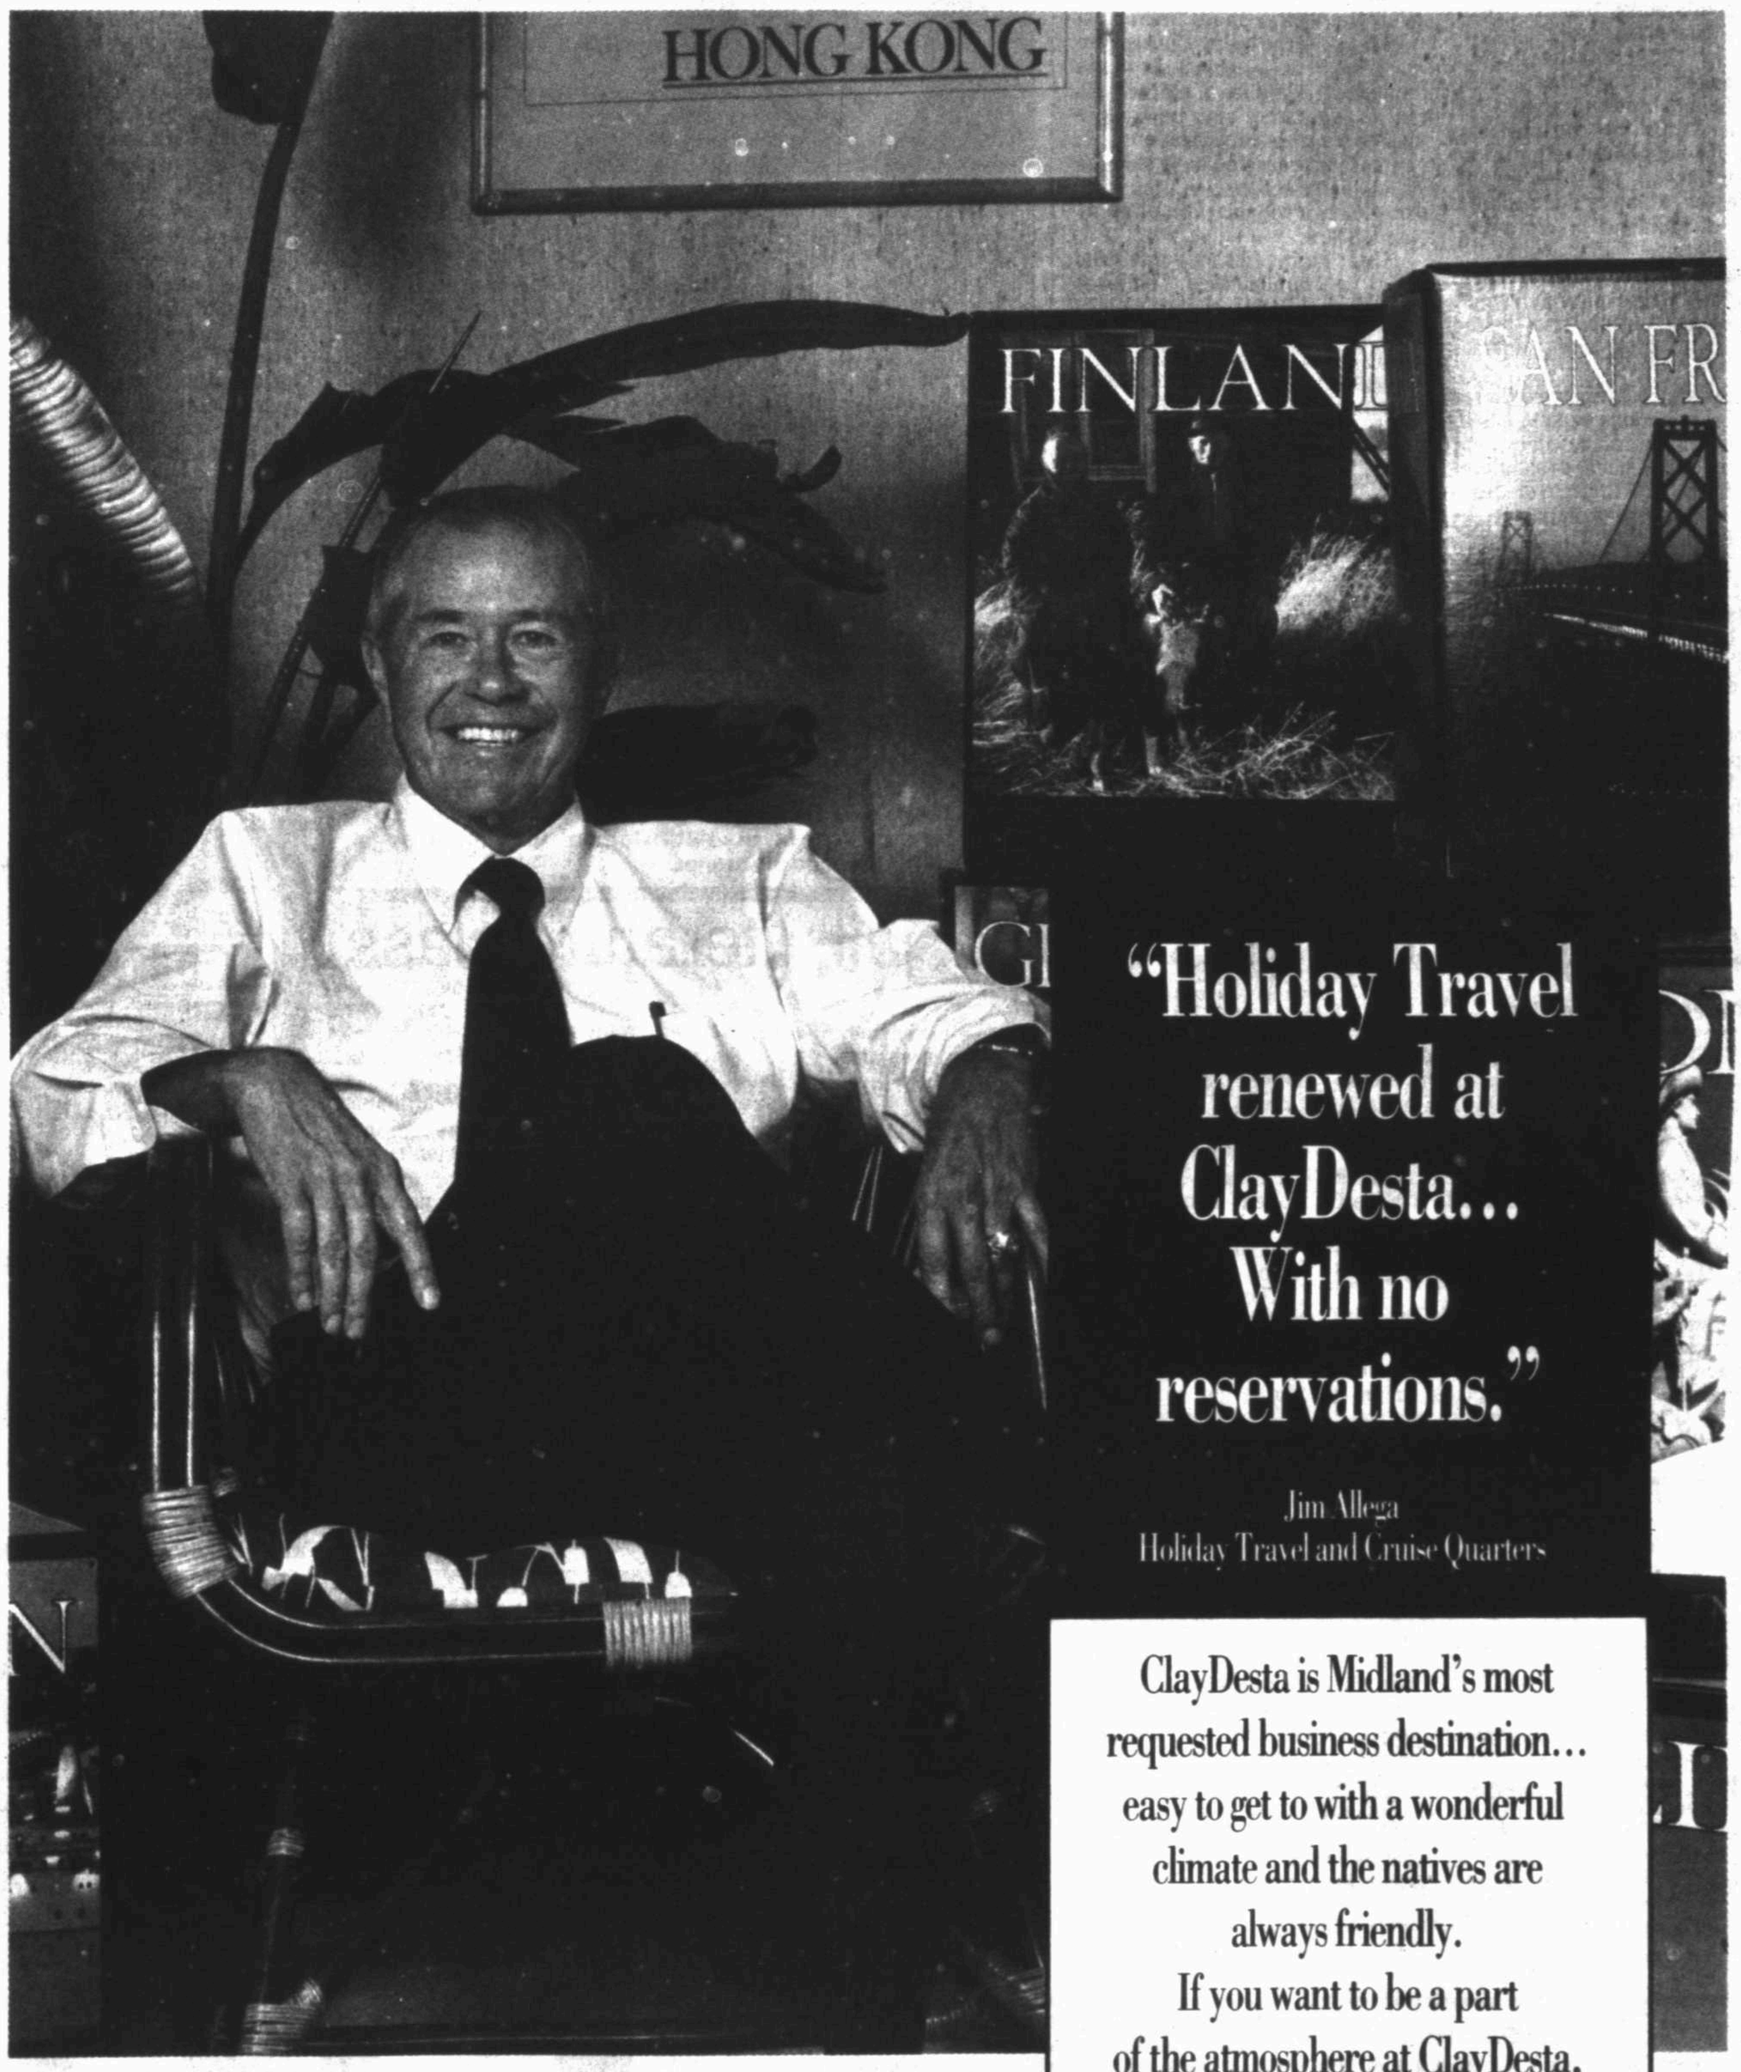

Five different 30-second commercials, which feature hip, roving hand-held camera shots, show priests talking about the lives they originally desired.

One wanted to become a businessman with a "big office, big desk, big money." Another planned to be a football coach. A third was a lawyer and federal magistrate before he got the call.

"I was happy as a lawyer. I'm truly contented as a priest. Where will you find your contentment?" the Rev. Joe Quinn asks in his ad.

The Rev. James Paisley, the businessman wannabe, dreamed up the ads, splattering paint on a cloth to make a showy backdrop and choosing priests to tell their stories.

Study attributes most work deaths to road accidents, murder

WASHINGTON (AP) — Women account for only 7 percent of on-the-job deaths, but 40 percent of these workplace fatalities are murders, according to the first comprehensive government accounting of how people die at work.

Only 15 percent of workplace deaths among men resulted from murder, according to the recently released Labor Department study. Officials suggested the difference was due to the large number of women exposed to crime by working late at night.

Highway vehicle accidents — including tractor-trailers, delivery vans and cars driven by salesmen — caused the most job-related fatalities, said the survey. They accounted for 18 percent — or 1,121 — of the 6,083 fatal job injuries in 1992.

But the study by the department's Bureau of Labor Statistics showed that homicides — including shootings and stabbings — were a close second with 17 percent of the total, or 1,004 deaths.

"Relative to common perceptions, sales work is dangerous," Labor Secretary Robert B. Reich explained at a news briefing. "There are a lot of all-night convenience stores that simply are the scenes of crimes."

Although men represent 55 percent of the workforce, they comprise 93 percent of all job-related deaths, the study found.

The disproportion of deaths among men and women workers resulted from the differences in the industries and occupations in which men and women are typically employed.

Another anomaly: the self-employed and those working in family businesses accounted for 20 percent of the workplace fatalities — double their share of the nation's workers.

Reich said the study represented the first national census of occupational deaths. It will be used in government efforts to improve the safety and health of American workers.

In light of the new data on motor vehicle deaths, Reich said he will reexamine a proposed rule requiring seat belts on the job that has been delayed for several years.

Transportation fatalities accounted for 40 percent of job-related deaths, the study found. In addition to highway accidents, this share included deaths from non-highway accidents such as farm and factory mishaps, 7 percent; aircraft, 6 percent; workers struck by vehicles, 6 percent, and 3 percent from other causes.

Assults and violent acts represented 20 percent of the deaths, including 3 percent from suicides in addition to the murders.

Mormon Church weighs challenges, scholar says

By Peg McEntee
Associated Press writer

SALT LAKE CITY — The Mormon Church faces the challenge of maintaining orthodoxy and accommodating differences among millions of members as it begins its 163rd semiannual General Conference, a historian says.

"Every Christian institution must negotiate that fine line between being absolutely clear about what it stands for and enclosing within its boundaries all who believe in Christ," says Jan Shipps, a professor of history and religious studies at Indiana University-Purdue University, Indianapolis.

Thousands recently gathered for a meeting where church leaders traditionally outline the boundaries that safeguard Mormon orthodoxy.

The two-day conference followed disciplinary actions against a half-dozen feminists and scholars, four of whom have been excommunicated from The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in the last five weeks.

At church-owned Brigham Young University, a feminist English professor and an anthropologist both are appealing the school's denial of tenure, claiming their dissident politics and writings, not academic failures, marked them for expulsion.

Supporters and those disciplined view the sanctions as a purge of church members who differ from leaders on doctrine, history and women's roles in the church. The Mormon Church is governed at all levels by an all-male priesthood.

Elder Dallin H. Oaks of the Council of the Twelve Apostles dismisses that argument. The council is second in authority only to the faith's governing first presidency.

Oaks, who declined to be interviewed by The Associated Press, told National Public Radio last week using the word "purge" to describe actions against six of the church's 8.5 million members "is an exaggerated and perhaps a self-serving characterization."

Church spokesmen have said the disciplinary actions were taken by local clergy without prompting by top leaders.

Historian D. Michael Quinn, who was excommunicated, believes church leaders did want to deliver a dramatic warning to Mormons everywhere but confined it to a "surgical strike" in Utah, where Mormonism is centered. All six of those disciplined live in the state.

"There were a number of people they could have gone after, but did not," Quinn said.

Historian Shipps, a Methodist who has studied Mormonism for 30 years, said the spate of sanctions may be perceived by church leaders as individual cases. But collectively, she said, "if the church is not sending a message, one is nevertheless being received."

Shipps said the current situation is grounded both in the nature of orthodoxy and the church's explosive growth since the end of World War II.

Like the Roman Catholic Church, the Mormon Church has a clear, hierarchical line.

Soldier bids farewell

Sgt. Terry Parks, of New York City, says goodbye to his ten-month-old daughter Terricka at Fort Devens in Ayer, Mass., Friday. Parks was shipping out to Somalia along with 15 others to join the rest of the 46th Combat Support Hospital, which left for Somalia in August.

Facing cruelty of nature, man amputates his own leg

By Ward Marchant
Associated Press writer

DENVER — Pinned under a boulder for three hours, his left leg broken, his right leg useless, William S. Jeracki knew he had two choices: amputate his leg with a fishing knife or die of exposure.

He cut.

"I'll never know if that was the best possible decision," Jeracki said Thursday, breaking his silence about the Oct. 5 ordeal. "I'll never know if someone would have come up that road. But I'm here. I'm alive. I feel lucky to be alive.

"Whatever is ahead of me is easy, actually it probably won't be easy, but I'm not going to fear it."

Using crutches, Jeracki walked unassisted into an interview auditorium at University Hospital, his left pant leg tied in a knot below his amputated knee. Jeracki, a 38-year-old anesthesiologist from Conifer, said he planned to go home "as soon as possible," and back to work by Christmas on an artificial leg.

And he insisted that he wasn't special.

"I wasn't a hero," Jeracki said. "All I wanted to do is stay alive."

Jeracki said he was returning from a fishing trip when the boulder he had used to support himself toppled onto his leg.

He said he thought about David Wyman, the 37-year-old bulldozer operator in Pennsylvania who cut off his leg with a pocket knife last summer to extricate himself from beneath a fallen oak tree. He also remembered reading an article about a hunter who was injured and, believing he would die, wrote letters to his family, "then died of exposure."

He waited three hours before deciding to amputate. When he finished, he crawled more than 100 yards to his truck and drove a half-mile to the town of Alice-St. Mary's.

"All that was going through my head was 'push, push, push, push,' " he said. "Getting out of there was what I was thinking about. Civilization wasn't that far away."

Jeracki was reluctant to discuss the specifics of the self surgery he performed using his medical training, a rope tourniquet and a knife he carried in his tackle box. He preferred to thank the town's residents and University Hospital medical personnel.

"The fact that I'm alive had less to do with what I did than what those people did," he said.

Jeracki said that in his short time in the hospital, he's met many "patients that are facing much more than me. I'm not that special."

Judge gives convicts choice: jail, literature class

N.Y. Times News Service

DARTMOUTH, Mass. — When Walter Grajales went to court after he was caught breaking into a car, the judge gave him an unusual choice: he could either go to jail or take a literature class.

Grajales, who had already spent two of his 19 years in prison, opted for the novels of Ernest Hemingway, John Steinbeck, Jack London and others in a class for convicts held on the Dartmouth, Mass., campus of the University of Massachusetts.

"I'd never read a book," Grajales said before a recent class on "Of Mice and Men." But he seemed at ease as he took his place at a long wooden table with other convicts, a judge, a probation officer and a professor to talk about the novel's themes of friendship, isolation and violence.

The alternative sentencing program is for people who have committed crimes ranging from burglary to assault, with repeat offenders eligible. To be accepted, convicts must be literate and able to convince a judge and probation officer that they want to turn their lives around.

The program puts the concept of the humanities to the test.

"I really believe that of all the tools that we have to humanize the world, literature remains the most powerful," said Prof. Robert P. Waxler, the chairman of the English Department, who teaches the course.

The discussions are not preachy. "Part of the value is that we're really not engaged in personal revelations around the table," Waxler said. "But at the same time, we're discussing the larger patterns of everybody's lives."

They spent a lot of the class on "Of Mice and Men" analyzing Lennie, the mentally retarded but physically imposing character who accidentally destroys what he loves.

There was a graduation ceremony this month at the New Bedford Courthouse for those in the class, who will remain free as long as they meet their probation officer every two weeks.

But it wasn't Grajales' last class. He just returned to high school after a two-year hiatus.

The course was born a few years ago on a tennis court when Waxler was playing singles with his friend, Judge Robert Kane of New Bedford District Court. With the help of a probation officer, Wayne R. St. Pierre, and a grant from the Shaw Foundation in Boston, they began giving the class as an alternative to prison.

Kane said that he had grown tired of seeing the same people coming before him. "I was probably expressing my frustration over the inability to intimately intervene in the lives of the people who are constantly in front of me," he said.

"There's a group who I think you can't work with, and I'm quite prepared to incarcerate them. But there's also a group who are experimenting with the criminal life style, and you can see flickers of change in them."

Firm installs restroom gargle dispensers

BALTIMORE (AP) — Garlic at lunch?

Then gargle.

That's what a mouthwash maker suggests for restaurant customers who don't want to smell like the halitosis-for-lunch bunch.

Warner-Lambert Inc. has installed gallon-sized dispensers of its Cool Mint Listerine in restrooms at six restaurants in Baltimore and Dallas to promote the concept of a post-lunch gargle.

The Morris Plains, N.J.-based manufacturer is hoping to spread the idea of swirling and spitting to keep afternoon bad breath at bay, dental hygiene at its peak, and Listerine use on the rise.

For one patron at Burke's Restaurant, a Baltimore eatery participating in the promotion, the idea was a bit much.

"It doesn't fit in with my way of finishing a nice lunch — to fill my mouth full of alcohol and flavoring," said Bill Earle of Oakton, Va. "I figure if you're trying to cover up what you're having for lunch, you may want to re-examine what you're having."

Albert Figinski said ending his meal of sour beef and potato pancakes by gargling didn't seem strange. "Not if you smoke a cigar in between them," he said, puffing a stogie.

Scientists report mysterious flashes of light above clouds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two scientists report sighting mysterious carrot-shaped flashes covering hundreds of cubic miles above thunderclouds.

Davis Sentman of the University of Alaska's Geophysical Institute in Fairbanks said he and a colleague, Eugene Wescott, captured video pictures of 19 unexplained flashes July 8 while flying in a NASA laboratory jet beside a line of thunderstorms 40,000 feet above Kansas, Iowa and Nebraska.

"This is phenomena in the upper atmosphere that we don't understand," Sentman said in a telephone interview. "There are more questions now than there were before."

He said the flashes appeared as bursts of glowing light that lasted just a fraction of a second. They seemed to be associated with thunderstorms that were in full fury nearby, sending more than 300 cloud-to-ground lightning strikes during their two-hour airplane flight.

He estimated that the lights were 50 to 60 miles in height and up to 30 miles wide.

Man dies after reading how-to book on suicide

By Chris Coursey
N.Y. Times News Service

SANTA ROSA, Calif. — Roy Medros had decided to die.

"It won't be too long, now," he said on the last Friday of August as he sat in the sunny kitchen of his mobile home.

Less than two weeks later, Medros was dead. The final coroner's report isn't in, but evidence suggests that he took a handful of pills, tossed back several drinks and laid down to sleep for the last time.

I only knew Medros because he agreed to help me with a story about why older people commit suicide.

He calmly and candidly told me why he joined the Hemlock Society and planned his own death. In conversations at his home and on the phone, he repeatedly told me his intentions.

Still, the news arrived like a kick in the stomach.

He was 61, a young man by most standards.

"It's not many years, but there's been a lot of miles," he said that day in his kitchen.

"I've been through a lot, and I've come back. But I ain't coming back from this."

Two strokes had ravaged his once-strong body. The first was in February 1991; it hit him as he rode a bus to Reno for a gambling trip. The second came in June of this year.

Life would never be the same.

He'd seen good times and bad, he'd loved and lost, he'd had joys and regrets. He'd owned and run five different restaurants, installed his own kitchen floor, remodeled his bathroom and nurtured plants in a greenhouse room on the side of his trailer.

And then, suddenly, he felt his life was over. He couldn't use his right arm and hand. He shuffled slowly around his home, watering the plants and wondering what to do with the other 23 hours in the day.

"I used to be able to do anything," he said. "Now I just can't do anything any more.

"Not everybody feels the same way. Some can be happy just to be able to make it out to get the paper in the morning. Me? I say, 'Whoopee shit.' I'm not satisfied with that."

He was terrified that he'd have another stroke, one that would leave him alive, but "a vegetable." He swore he'd find a way to kill himself before he ended up in that helpless condition.

Within his reach at the kitchen table was "Final Exit," the Hemlock Society's book that includes advice about how to plan and carry out your own death. He said the Society and the book had "helped a lot by showing me what not to do."

Just the knowledge that he could kill himself if the time came was comforting, he said. "You do get some relief from that."

Poor weather could increase pumpkin prices

By Debra Hale
Associated Press writer

Good grief, Charlie Brown! Everyone knows Linus' Great Pumpkin is only a mirage, but the experts say even the real things are in short supply this fall.

Bad weather — too much rain in some states, too little in others — could mean fewer jack-o'-lanterns and pumpkin pies this fall.

"Pumpkins have had a tough row to hoe this year," said Bill Whiteside, a University of Illinois extension educator based in DeKalb, Ill.

He estimated roughly half the crop might be lost this season in Illinois, one of the nation's top pumpkin producers and processors, and said the shortage extends to most other states too.

Charles E. Voigt, a vegetable specialist with the university's department of horticulture, expects the shortage to drive prices up as much as 50 percent. Normally, a pumpkin might cost 15 or so cents per pound.

"There'll be pumpkin panic," warned Wayne Goede, who devotes five of his 41 acres in South Barrington, Ill., to pumpkins.

Voigt said bad weather has left the pumpkins vulnerable to disease.

The shortage is "so widespread this year, I just don't know where people are going to bring them in from," he said. "Even if they look good today, in the next five weeks, a lot of fruit rot can set in."

Voigt said Washington is the only state he's heard of to report larger-than-normal pumpkin crops this season.

Goede said his normal yield is about 18 tons per acre. This season, it's five to eight tons.

"Where there should be 10 pumpkins, there's only four or five," he said.

In Hoopeston, Ill., Bill Nicholls, manager of the Stokely USA plant, a leading canner of pumpkins, said processing there was down about 25 percent because of the shortage.

As a result, he said, production probably will be completed by the end of October instead of the normal second week in November.

Insect Horror Film Festival features creepy munchies

AMES, Iowa (AP) — Pass the salt. And the rootworm beetle dip.

The Iowa State University Entomology Club concocted some unorthodox fare for its annual Insect Horror Film Festival. The dishes featured recipes with insects as main ingredients.

Fairgoers sampled banana worm bread or chocolate chirpie chip cookies. The worm bread was described as a traditional banana bread with dry-roasted army worms substituted for the nuts. Roasted crickets were added to the chirpie cookies instead of chocolate chips.

The Entomology Club saidbug blox — crickets or meal worms suspended in "colorful fingers of gelatin" — were the most popular item.

For the faint of stomach, there were other bug-related activities at the festival, which ran Oct. 6-9. The 1958 and 1986 movie versions of "The Fly" were shown. Before each film, visitors could stroke some creepy crawlies at the insect petting zoo, which boasted a giant water beetle.

Some animal researchers complain of terror

By Janet Wells
N.Y. Times News Service

BERKELEY, Calif. — Enclosed by bulletproof glass, Dr. Roy Henrickson sits tensely inside his University of California office, watching someone standing outside his windows. He knows that the thick panes should stop a slug of metal, but he says he wonders how quickly a brick or rock could come crashing his way.

The tall, imposing researcher is no less wary when he walks to his basement labs, the elevator remaining motionless until he clears the security block with a magnetic card. When he works at a field station up the hill, he has to remember to deactivate the motion sensors before entering.

At private companies researching high-energy physics or defense weapons, such security measures are common. But Henrickson is a university veterinarian, not a nuclear engineer — and as head of Berkeley's animal research program, he has been cast, along with thousands of researchers nationwide, in a war against animal rights advocates.

"The whole climate is one of living under harassment and apprehension," said Henrickson. "This is terrorism."

Now, in a signal of the increasing polarization over the animal research issue, universities and medical centers are dramatically tightening security to keep animal advocates at bay. Video cameras, surveillance teams and digital door codes are all part of the high-tech array, and jittery employees are trained to be on alert for suspicious packages.

"Universities and research institutions are into the multimillions of dollars in increasing security," said O.W. Sweat, director of security for the National Institutes for Health, the country's biggest provider of funds for biomedical research.

Between 1991 and 1992, the number of incidents attributed to animal rights advocates increased 61 percent, to a total of 569 criminal acts, protests and boycotts. The tally caused an estimated $9.6 million in property damage and lost research, according to the Lee Group, a Virginia-based organization that tracks the animal rights movement.

In California alone, an estimated $5.7 million in damages has occurred to animal research records, equipment and facilities since 1983, said officials of the California Biomedical Research Assn., which promotes the use of animals in research.

The animal rights movement began to gain momentum in the early 1970s, when advocates obtained grisly evidence of cruelty to laboratory animals and helped force major changes in state and federal legislation to ensure the humane treatment of animals used in research.

Professor: Widespread change prompts rumors

By Arlene Levinson
Associated Press writer

Heard any bad rumors lately? Did they get you so excited and scared you had to tell somebody, even if the story sounded a bit foolish, maybe illogical?

You're not alone.

Like flu season, there are times when anxiety is rampant and resistance to rumors is weak. Like now.

One fiction riling people lately and spread mainly by fax and computer bulletin boards is a fuzzy story about gangs driving around at night with their headlights off, and then killing motorists who blink their beams as kindly reminders.

It's nonsense.

"It's bogus," said New Jersey State Trooper Al Della Fave, who said the baseless story appeared on the computers of New Jersey Bell and the U.S. Postal Service.

"It's nothing but a big-time rumor running rampant through modern technology."

Who started the rumor may never be known, experts say. What matters, they say, is why.

According to Ralph Rosnow, a psychology professor at Temple University in Philadelphia, we use rumors to try to relieve our anxieties and share them with somebody.

"There's a lot of stuff bothering people right now. You have a lot of change right now. And change foments a lot of anxiety," Rosnow said.

"Gang" in this particular rumor is a code word for poor, young black men, said Gary Fine, a sociologist at the University of Georgia.

He considers the story a warning signal about American's fears of violence, gangs and strangers.

"We are becoming two separate societies," he said. "And that is a very frightening thing. Now that we don't have nuclear war to worry about, we have internal war to worry about, and internal violence."

This rumor has flown silently through computers and churned out of fax machines. Nothing much has happened, however, except for some frightened people making nervous phone calls to police, TV stations and newspapers.

The tale, pooh-poohed from one police precinct to the next, has popped up in Arizona, Oklahoma, Texas, Tennessee, Ohio, New Jersey and California.

Richard Hansen, president of Silicon Engineering Inc. in Scotts Valley, Calif., said the message traveled to his co-workers within minutes.

Some designers would like to trim models' price tags

By Kiley Armstrong
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Fashion designers, piqued by the $10,000 fee some supermodels command for slinking down a runway, are struggling to negotiate cost-cutting measures for their fall shows.

"The garment industry, the fashion industry, are hurting," said Fern Mallis, executive director of the Council of Fashion Designers of America. "The fashion industry drives New York's economy. When it's successful, everybody works: models, shippers, sales clerks."

The movement began during preparations for "Seventh on Sixth," a series of shows from Oct. 30 through Nov. 5 in Manhattan. Models often are booked a week or a couple of days before a show.

"We negotiated everything to get best prices: lighting, sound, tent design, seats, floor coverings," Mallis said. "The last line-item we're trying to reduce is model costs: Some get $10,000 to walk down a runway for 25 minutes."

Last month, Calvin Klein, Donna Karan, Nicole Miller and other designers began discussing the issue. Then representatives of 12 model agencies met with design house executives.

The matter is far from settled, and more get-togethers are planned, Mallis said.

One proposal, first reported in Women's Wear Daily, would cap modeling fees at $250 an hour. Models would be paid only for the hours they work, instead of getting an automatic day's pay.

Superstars' pay notwithstanding, the figure is "based on the day rate most of these girls get for working in the magazines. We're willing to pay for an hour what most models get for a day," Mallis said. "We know some people are aghast at that idea."

Model agencies — reportedly disgruntled — had no immediate comment. There's no hint how the big-name, big-bucks talent — Naomi Campbell, Linda Evangelista, Kate Moss, Christy Turlington — will react to the austerity program.

And if there's a boycott?

John Kruk of the Philadelphia Phillies celebrates with his teammates after scoring in Game One of the World Series with Toronto. The Blue Jays rallied to beat the Phillies 8-5 at Skydome Saturday night. Game Two is scheduled for today.

Blue Jays flex muscles, 8-5

By Ben Walker
AP Baseball Writer

TORONTO — If image is everything, picture this: A crisp, clean and efficient machine called the Toronto Blue Jays leaving the down-and-dirty Philadelphia Phillies in the dust.

The Blue Jays seemed to barely break a sweat, barely muss their hair. They just went about their business, beating up Philadelphia with a relentless batting order Saturday night for an 8-5 victory in Game 1 of the World Series.

While Lenny Dykstra, John Kruk and the Phillies were sliding home for their runs, the Blue Jays were scoring standing up. Devon White tied it at 4 with a solo homer in the fifth inning, John Olerud put them ahead with a solo homer in the sixth and Toronto put it away with three runs on a pair of no-doubt doubles in the seventh.

"We have a good offensive team," Toronto second baseman Roberto Alomar said. "We try to get the top men on base and let the bottom men in the order do their job. That's what we did tonight."

Three times the Blue Jays fell behind, three times they came back.

Lady Dawgs' victory puts Lee into playoffs

■ Midland High's victory over Abilene Cooper sends Midland Lee to state playoffs.

By Terry Williamson
Sports editor

When do cross town rivals have at least a shaky kinship?

Pittman

Well, it happened Saturday in the District 4-5A volleyball race when Midland High's 15-12, 12-15, 15-8 victory over Abilene Cooper in the MHS gym helped nail down a second consecutive state playoff berth for Midland Lee, who defeated winless Abilene High, 10-15, 15-7, 15-10.

Lee climbed to 8-2 in league play with only two games left on its schedule, meaning the Lady Rebels can finish no worse that 8-4. Since Cooper is now 5-5 with the loss, only two teams can tie or better the Lee record, insuring that Lee is playoff bound again.

Meanwhile, MHS dealt a damaging blow to the playoff hopes of the Lady Cougars and still making it possible for the Lady Bulldogs to gain a playoff berth down the final three-game stretch of district play.

Lee could return the favor to MHS next Tuesday by beating 5-4 Odessa Permian while MHS would need to defeat Odessa High to leave Cooper, MHS and Permian locked at 5-5 with two games to play.

"If we can win nothing more than the spolier's award, we'll be happy with that," said MHS coach Sonja Pittman. "We suffered a tough loss at Cooper in the first half and had another tough loss against Lee in the second half, so I don't think our team's district record reflects our standing overall. I was sure Lee would beat Abilene High.

"We have beaten Odessa High twice this year and it's really hard to beat a team three times, but it does give us a shot at making the playoffs."

One of the big cogs in the MHS win over Cooper was sophomore DeShawn Berry.

"DeShawn was the main reason we won," Pittman said. "We moved her up from the junior varsity and threw her into a starting role for the first time and she came through with a big game."

Berry took to the floor like an experienced player.

"I wasn't nervous. Coach Pittman and I talked about this before the game," Berry said.

MHS closed out Cooper five consecutive points off the serve of Michel Ann Thompson, but Berry had a key spike and a damaging dink during the run before Thompson closed out the win with a serving ace. It was lifting effort by Thompson, who had a bad serving effort in Game 2, which Cooper won 15-12.

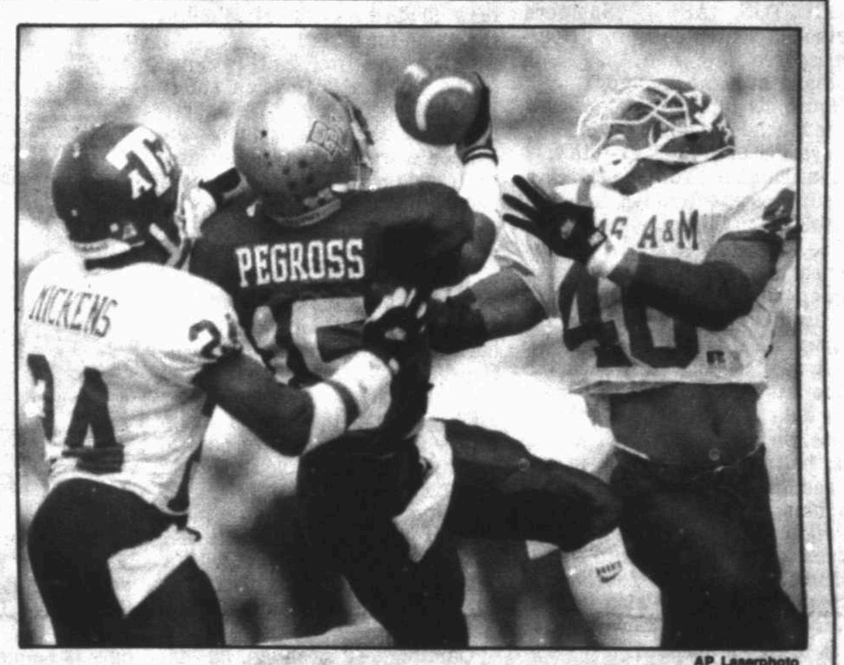

The Lady Bulldogs dug themselves a hole in each of the three sets of play, falling behind 6-2 in the first game before rallying for six consecutive points off the serve of Jamee Stennett.

In the second game, fell behind 8-4 and didn't recover with a bad serving effort from several players, but then came the deciding matchup as MHS fell behind 3-0 before rallying to a 7-3 lead on three service opportunities as Casi Madison and Jodi Strain led the way.

Leading 10-8 in the finale, Stephanie Pirkle had a lucky shot off the wrists fall safely on the Cooper side of the net.

In other 4-5A action Saturday, San Angelo remained in second place at 7-2 with a 15-6, 12-15, 15-10 win over Odessa High.

In junior varsity play, MHS is having a tough time gaining victory No. 20, losing for the second consecutive time in a 15-13, 5-15, 15-13 loss to Cooper. The MHS JV is now 19-4 on the season and 7-3 in loop play.

Ags wear out Bears

■ Texas A&M blows open halftime deadlock to win 18th straight league game.

By Denne H. Freeman

WACO — Corey Pullig threw two touchdown passes and Greg Hill scored twice Saturday as No. 13 Texas A&M won its 18th consecutive Southwest Conference game with a 34-17 victory over the Baylor Bears.

The Aggies advanced to 5-1 and 3-0 in SWC play while Baylor dropped to 4-3 and 2-2. Baylor hasn't beaten A&M since 1985.

Pullig threw touchdown passes of 9 yards to Hill and 4 yards to Cliff Groce in the punishing game played in 84-degree heat before 43,716 fans in Floyd Casey Stadium.

Hill scored on a 1-yard run after Pullig had set up the score with a 19-yard pass to tight end Greg Schorp.

Those were Hill's first touchdowns since he returned after a four-game suspension by the NCAA.

The 15-point favorite Aggies and the Bears were locked at 10-all at halftime.

A&M struck first on the short Pullig to Hill touchdown pass, but Baylor answered right back as J.J. Joe unlimbered his sore passing arm with a 38-yard touchdown strike to

Tech ends SWC slide

■ Robert Hall passes for 336 yards at the Red Raiders dominate Rice, 45-16.

By Mike Butts
Staff writer

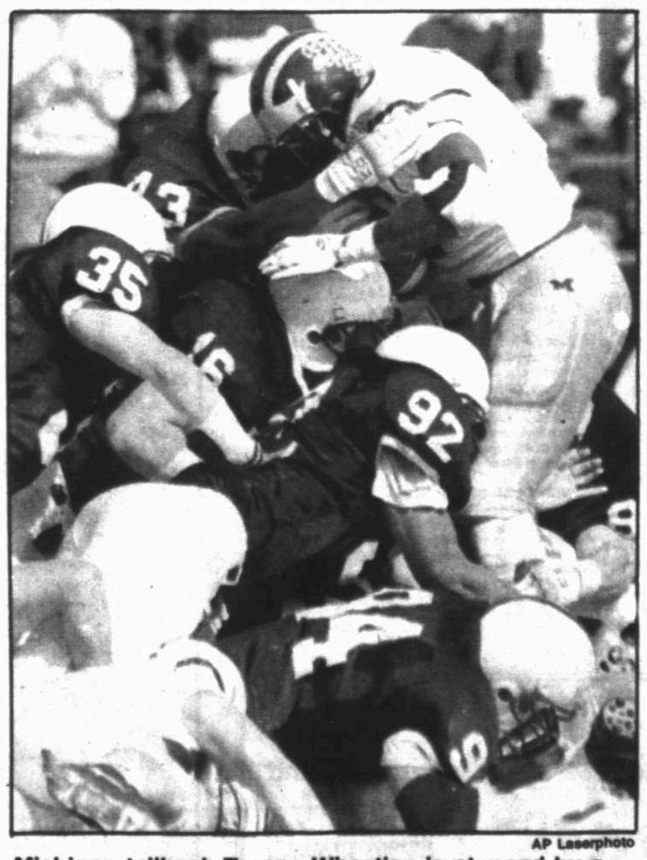

LUBBOCK — This time there would be no last-second touchdowns. No second-half comebacks. No victory-anihilating fumbles.

Just a much starved-for 45-16 Texas Tech win over the Rice Owls Saturday night before 27,812 homecoming fans at Jones Stadium.

"We're not monsters of the Midway but this is a good football team," said Tech coach Spike Dykes, whose team's five losses have all come against teams at one time ranked in the nation's Top 25. "We haven't stunk it up every Saturday. We've played some good teams."

After blowing three second-half and two fourth-quarter leads and losing to North Carolina State last week on the final play of the game, Tech's defense finally caught up enough with its offense to break a five-game losing streak.

Michigan stands up Penn State

■ Two fourth quarter goalline stands spurs Michigan to a Big Ten win over Penn State.

By Rick Warner

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. — Michigan, the Big Ten's longtime bully, withstood a challenge from the new kid on the block Saturday.

The 18th-ranked Wolverines used a great goal-line stand, a 48-yard punt return touchdown by Derrick Alexander and a 192-yard rushing performance by Tryone Wheatley to beat No. 7 Penn State 21-13 before a record crowd of 96,719 at Beaver Stadium.

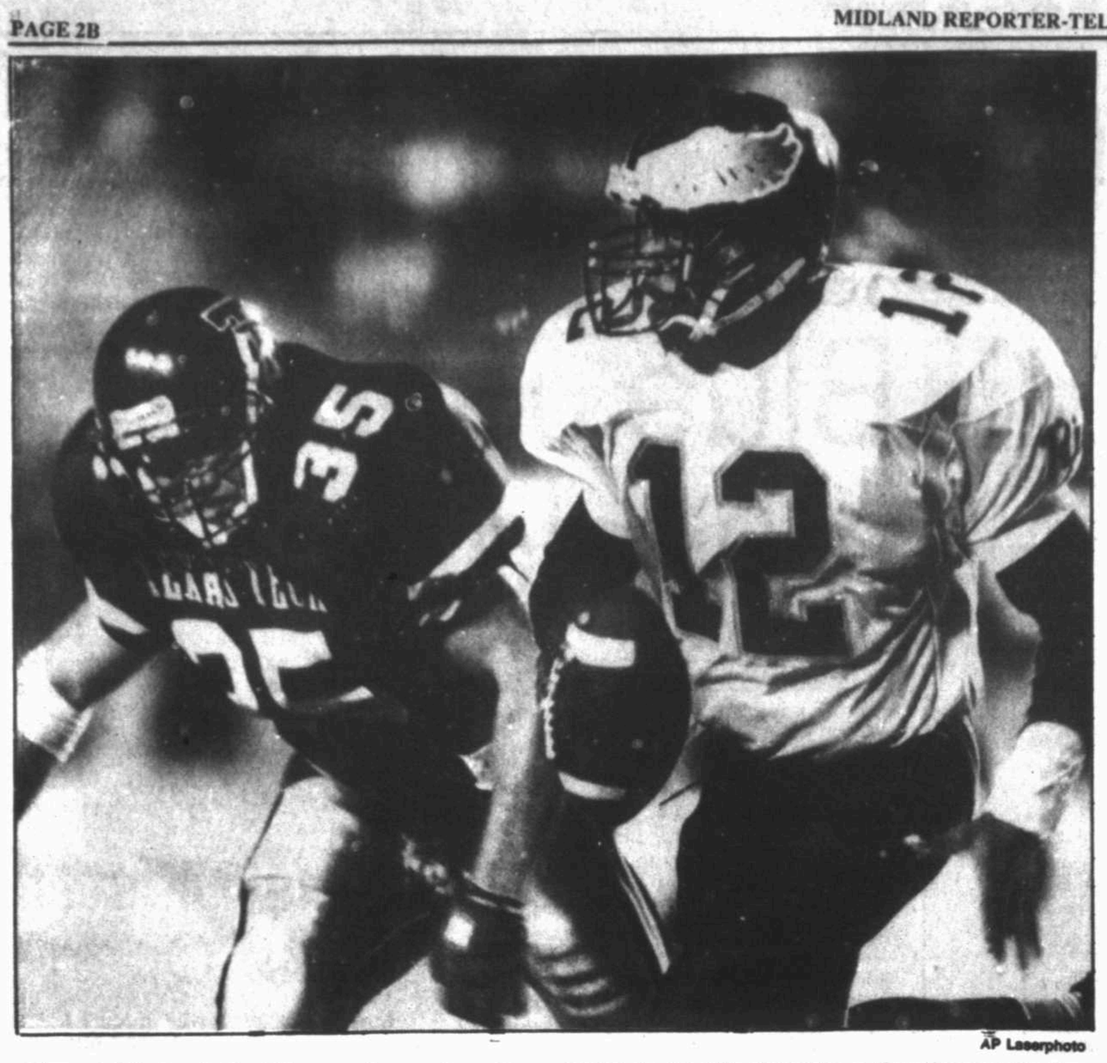

Michigan (4-2, 2-1 Big Ten) kept alive its bid for a sixth straight league title by handing new member Penn State (5-1, 2-1) its first loss of the season. It was the first meeting ever between the two traditional powers and the 1,000th game in Penn State history.

Penn State led 10-7 at halftime, but Michigan rallied to take a 14-10 lead on a diving, 16-yard touchdown catch by Mercury Hayes in the third quarter.

Michigan preserved the lead by stopping Penn State four straight times from the Wolverines 1, the final time on the opening play of the fourth quarter when Ki-Jana Carter was hit by Jarrett Irons and Shonte Peoples.

Penn State made it 14-13 on Craig Fayak's 25-yard field goal with 8:51 left in the game, but Michigan increased its lead to 21-

Rice quarterback Bert Emanuel runs from Texas Tech defender Zach Thomas during Saturday night's game with the Red Raiders. Tech went on to win 45-16 in a Southwest Conference game in Lubbock.

TECH: Hall goes wild

(From 1B)

"There's been a lot said about this team (the Red Raiders) the last couple of weeks and it's been tough for them to hang in there. This certainly doesn't take the hurt out of the losses but it's good to get a win." Dykes said.

The Raiders keep threadbare hopes for a bowl appearance alive with the win and go 1-2 in Southwest Conference play and 2-6 overall. Rice is now 1-2, 4-3.

Quarterback Robert Hall led Tech with 20 of 28 passing for 336 yards and three touchdown passes. He also broke three career school records: touchdown passes (41), touchdowns reponsible for (56) and passing yardage (6,924).

"We moped aroung about two days (but) picked it up about Wednedsday and got ready to play Rice," Hall said.

Rice came into the game averaging 37 points in their last three contests. And Tech had given up an average of over 39 in its fives losses. Something had to give and Tech's defense was the likely candidate. But the Raiders kept swift Rice quarterback Bert Emanuel enough in check with 56 yards rushing and 111 passing to hold Rice's scoring down.

"Bert certainly hurt us at times but I think we did a good job on him," Dykes said.

The Raiders were without SWC all-time leading receiver Lloyd Hill. But his absence didn't hold the offense back any. The Red Raiders' 543 yards of offesne is the most ever it has had against Rice. Flanker Derrel Mitchell had a Hill-like night in grabbing seven balls for 115 yards and a touchdown. Also catching TDs from Hall were Roger Corn and Jayson Lavender. Byron "Bam" Morris had two TDs running.

"I think our offense was dominating," said Dykes, whose team awarded him the game ball. "We spread it around. Everybody got their finger in the pie a little and that's good."

Down by 25 points in the third quarter, Rice made a drive that might have started a comeback but Josh Larocca, who had replaced Emanueal for a few plays, fumbled on the Tech one. Tech then drove the ball 99 yards to take a 42-10 lead with 3:38 left in the third.

Tech jumped out to 28-3 and 35-10 leads in the first half. The Red Raiders didn't seem to miss Hill as flanker Derrell Mitchell caught five passes for 94 yards in the first half. The senior from Miami separated himself by 15 yards from the Rice secondary on the game's second play from scrimmage for a 51-yard touchdown from Robert Hall.

After a 28-yard field goal by Johnny Bagwell cut Tech's lead to 7-3, the Red Raiders scored three unanswered touchdowns. Morris had a 38-yard scored with 2:31 left in the first to complete a 77-yard drive. He then took a pitch right to run in from the 10 52 seconds into the second quarter for a 21-3 Tech lead.

"This one feels great," Mitchell. "Everyone was hyped up for this one ... I felt like we would come away with a big win and we did."

Cougars, Mustangs fight to draw

HOUSTON (AP) — Southern Methodist scored early and Houston scored late and they both teams went home unhappy.

Houston's Jimmy Klingler threw three touchdown passes, including a 12-yarder to Keith Jack with 7:13 left in the game, rallying the Cougars from a 21-0 first half deficit to a 28-28 tie on Saturday.

The Cougars (1-4-1, 1-1-1 in SWC games) had a chance to win the game, but Trace Craft missed a 36-yard field goal try with 1:04 left to play. SMU is 1-3-2, 1-1-1.

"It wasn't a loss but it feels the same as a loss," Klingler said. "We didn't feel fortunate to tie because we didn't play well in the first half. We played well in the second half but it wasn't enough."

Subbing for the injured Ramon Flanigan, sophomore Mark Eldred led the Mustangs to a 21-7 halftime lead with touchdown passes of 69 yards to Brian Berry, 17 yards to Erwin Wilburn and 14 yards to Kevin Shepard.

"It's very disappointing," Eldred said. "You don't know how to look at it. It leaves you with an empty feeling. We just have to work a little harder."

Houston's defense stifled the SMU run-and-shoot offense in the second half and the Cougars fought back on Klingler's 16-yard touchdown pass to Jack in the third quarter and TiAndre Sanders' 10-yard run with 11:28 left in the game for a 21-21 tie.

"After the first half, we just came together," Houston safety Donald Douglas said. "We figured out what they were doing and calmed down and played defense.

"If we'd played four quarters of defense we would have come out on top."

The Mustangs struck back just as quickly. Facing third down and 9 from his own 13, Eldred completed a pass over the middle to Wilburn that went 85 yards to the Houston 2-yard line. Eldred scored two plays later.

Klingler had the answer again with a 12-yard touchdown pass to Jack that tied it for the final time with 7:13 to play.

On the tying touchdown play, Klingler fumbled, picked up the ball, rolled out and threw with a defender hanging on his back. The ball hit an SMU defender before Jack caught it.

"Our biggest problem on defense today was that we had absolutely no substitutions," Houston coach Kim Helton said. "We had some kids out there for the first time and it showed."

Eldred started his first half passing show with a perfectly timed pass to Berry, who got behind cornerback Delmonico Montgomery for a 69-yard touchdown catch, the longest of Berry's career.

Houston running back TiAndre Sanders (31) is stopped by SMU's Adam Voyles during Saturday's game. Sanders rushed for 88 yards in the 28-all tie.

Then, throwing on the run, Eldred hit Wilburn between two defenders at the goalline, giving SMU a 14-0 first quarter lead. In its first five games, SMU scored only 13 points in the first quarter.

The Ponies went ahead 21-0 with Eldred's 14-yarder to Shepard, who drifted into the flat as Eldred beat a blitz and delivered the pass. Shepard then outran safety Donald Douglas to the flag.

Klingler got Houston on the scoreboard before the half with a 9-yard touchdown pass to Daniel Adams, set up by a 77-yard pass to Ron Peters that gave the Cougars a first down at SMU's 18.

"The field position in the second half made us play conservative," SMU coach Tom Rossley said. "When you are ahead by 21, you're gong to be conservative.

"But we were ultra-conservative, and that might have got us into trouble."

AGGIES: Turnovers to A&M cost Baylor

From 1B

Ben Bronson, who beat cornerback Ray Mickens.

Baylor didn't throw a pass last week in a 31-12 win over Southern Methodist.

Joe ran 22 yards on the option to position Baylor for Jarvis Van Dyke's 23-yard field goal, but the Aggies Terry Venetoulias countered with a 26-yard field goal as the halftime clock expired.

A&M defensive lineman Sam Adams recovered John Henry's fumble early in the third period and the Aggies cashed the turnover into Hill's scoring run.

Henry later scored on a 1-yard run to pull Baylor within 20-17, but the Aggies put the game away in the fourth period on Pullig's second touchdown pass and a 9-yard touchdown run by freshman Leeland McElroy.

Joe hit 10 of 18 passes for 170 yards to become the all-time passing leader in Baylor history while Pullig had his most productive day as a collegian with 21 of 28 passes for 230 yards.

The Aggies are seeking to match the record of the 1985-1987 teams by winning three SWC titles in a row.

Knake throws over Green Wave in win

FORT WORTH (AP) — Texas Christian quarterback Max Knake threw a pair of first-quarter touchdowns and the Horned Frogs rode their defense to a sluggish 14-7 victory over Tulane Saturday.

The flashy TCU sophomore staked the Frogs to a quick 7-0 lead with a 9-yard shot to fullback John Oglesby and then came back with a 15-yard scoring toss to flanker Richard Woodley.

Seconds later, the Green Wave (2-5) stung the Frogs (2-5) with a 74-yard pass play that caught the Frog defense napping and ended the scoring on the hot, muggy afternoon.

TCU tailback Andre Davis rang up 160 yards on 27 carries as the Frogs broke a three-game losing streak and took a 4-1 lead in the on again-off again series with their Louisiana neighbor.

Quarterback Craig Randall flipped Tulane's TD pass just beyond the line of scrimmage to wide receiver Derrick Franklin, who shook off a defender and outran everyone to the end zone.

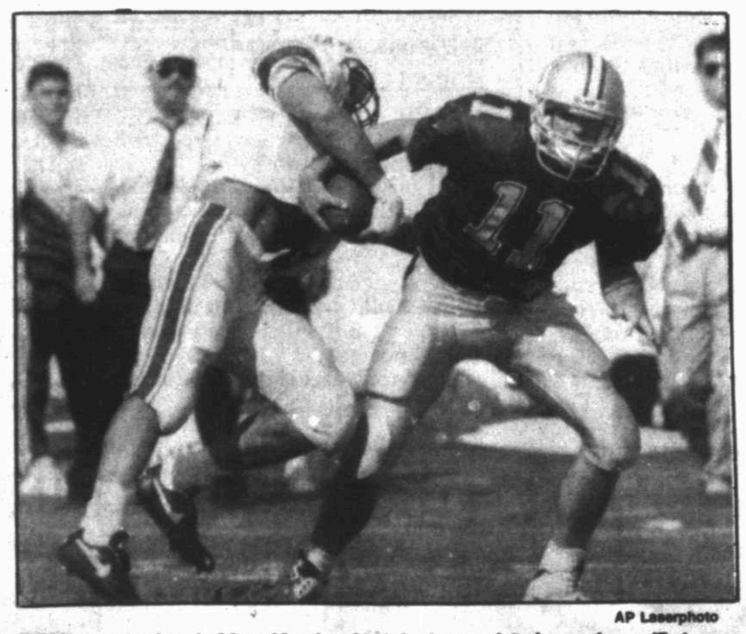

The Green Wave failed to capitalize on a series of TCU miscues as the Frog defense rose up time again to blunt a Tulane attack that netted only 49 yards rushing.

TCU defensive back Calvin Jones picked off a Randall pass late in the third period at the Frog 19 and the Green Wave never mounted another threat.

Knake took the Frogs 46 yards in eight plays for their first touchdown, the big gainer a 13-yard pass to Woodley, whose sixth reception moved him into the No. 4 slot among TCU's all-time receivers.

He caught six passes for 69 yards to hike his career total to 126 receptions.

Davis, a fleet TCU sophomore, ripped off a 28-yard gain in the pivotal scoring drive that covered 84 yards in nine plays. Knake, who was 17 of 29 for 155 yards, hit three passes to keep the drive alive.

TCU quarterback Max Knake (11) is brought down by a Tulane defender. Knake threw a pair of touchdowns to lead TCU to a 14-7 win.

Tulane safety Andre Goines picked up a TCU fumble at the Frog 29 in the third quarter but the Green Wave couldn't score. And Tulane's Bart Baldwin missed a 28-yard field goal attempt in the first half.

Stars stay unbeaten with win over Blues

DALLAS (AP) — Andy Moog notched his 18th career shutout as the Dallas Stars remained unbeaten at home, beating the St. Louis Blues 4-0 Saturday night.

Moog made 26 saves to boost Dallas' record to 2-0-2 at home before a sellout crowd of 16,914. Moog shut out St. Louis for the first time in his career before Dallas' second home sellout of the season.

Brent Gilchrist, Grant Ledyard and Russ Courtnall also had goals as Dallas handed St. Louis its first defeat of the season.

Dallas opened the first period with a rush, outshooting St. Louis 16-1 in the early going and 25-6 for the period.

The pressure paid off when Gilchrist knocked in a rebound 6:10 into the game to give the Stars a 1-0 lead. Otherwise, Blues goalie Curtis Joseph was brilliant in the opening period, making 24 saves.

Dallas survived a two-man disadvantage in the second period that included a five-minute major and game misconduct to defenseman Craig Ludwig for checking from behind.

The Stars used a four-on-three advantage to boost their lead to 2-0 on Ledyard's 20-foot slap shot with five seconds to play in the second period.

Dallas padded its lead to 3-0 when Jarkko Varvio, a rookie from Finland, took a centering pass and beat Joseph on the glove side 1:43 into the third period. Courtnall sealed the victory when he skated up the right side, drew Joseph out of position and tapped the puck into an open net.

The Blues were again without star right wing Brett Hull, who is out with an abdominal injury. Hull has played only one game this season.

Unseed upsets Muster at Israel Tennis Open

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Unseeded Stefano Pescosilido of Italy beat top-seeded Thomas Muster of Austria 7-6 (7-3), 1-6, 7-6 (7-4) and No. 2 Amos Mansdorf of Israel defeated Andrei Herkasov of Russia 6-3, 6-0 in Saturday's semifinals of the $200,000 Riklis Israel Open Tennis Championships.

The final, with $25,000 to the winner, is today.

Pescosilido, 22, had never reached a semifinal at this level before. His ranked 109th in the world, exactly 100 spots below Muster.

Pescosilido, who played Davis Cup for Italy, frustrated Muster's attempted passing shots by rushing to the net early. He appeared to tire in the second set, which was interrupted for 30 minutes by rain. But Pescosilido came storming back, winning in 2 hours, 45 minutes when Muster double-faulted match point in the tiebreaker.

Mansdorf, ranked 26th in the world, had few problems in a baseline match. Having been outplayed in the first set, the fifth-seeded and 38th-ranked Russian played out the second set.

Nemechek claims polefor today's Advance 300 race

MARTINSVILLE, Va. (AP) — Despite almost spinning out during his qualifying lap, Joe Nemechek won the pole Saturday for today's Advance Auto Parts 300 NASCAR Busch Grand National race.

Nemechek turned the .526-mile Martinsville Speedway at a speed of 91.364 mph in a Chevrolet to earn his third pole of the season. The defending Grand National champion has not won a race since August of 1992, a span of 32 events.

"It feels good to win the pole, but we need to win a race," he said. "The cool temperature made the track pretty slick, and the radial tires take five or six laps to warm up.

"I was slipping and sliding out there."

Nemechek nipped series rookie leader Hermie Sadler, who qualified second at 91.319 mph in a Chevrolet. Winston Cup regular Ernie Irvan, winner of the Goody's 500 at Martinsville several weeks ago, was third at 91.183, also in a Chevy.

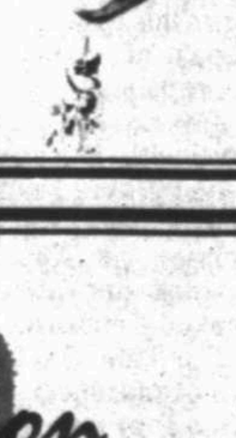

■ Advance 300

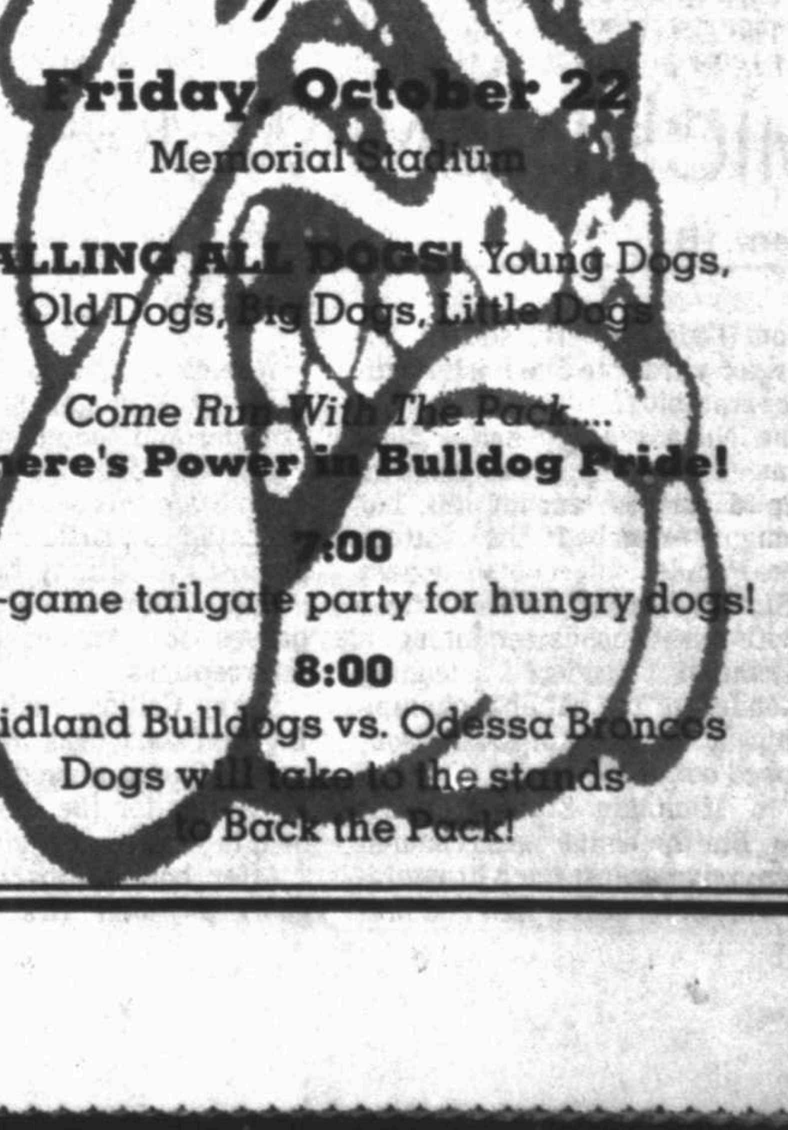

Chuck Bown was fourth in a Pontiac, with Johnny Rumley fifth in an Oldsmobile. Rounding out the top 10 in the 32-car field were Rodney Combs, David Green, Dennis Setzer, Robert Pressley and Tommy Houston.

Series point leader Steve Grissom, who leads Green by just 45 points with four races left, experienced problems in time trials and will start Sunday's race in 30th position.

"I don't like being back that far," Grissom said. "This track is notorious for a lot of beating and banging, and I don't need to get caught up in something. I'll have to be really careful."

Colorado sends No. 9 Sooners to first defeat

Associated Press

NORMAN, Okla. — Charles Johnson burned Oklahoma's secondary for two first-half touchdowns Saturday and No. 20 Colorado got a strong defensive effort to hand No. 9 Oklahoma its first loss, 27-10.

■ Top 25

The game may prove costly for both teams. Johnson broke the ring finger on his left hand early in the fourth quarter, and Oklahoma quarterback Cale Gundy was taken from the field on a stretcher a short time later after being knocked unconscious on a 28-yard scramble.

The Buffaloes (4-2, 2-0 Big Eight) are the first conference team to win three straight at Norman since Nebraska in 1932, '34 and '36.

Colorado came in with the league's lowest-rated defense, allowing 438 yards per game. But the Buffaloes frustrated Oklahoma (5-1, 1-1) much of the day, bottling up the Sooners' running game and sacking Gundy five times.

Lamont Warren showed why he is the league's leading rusher, carrying 34 times for 182 yards and helping the Buffaloes control the clock in the second half.

Johnson, the Big Eight's leading receiver, caught five passes for 136 yards. His first touchdown was a 64-yarder late in the first quarter that gave the Buffaloes a 13-0 lead. He caught Kordell Stewart's pass about 10 yards from the line of scrimmage on the right flat, cut inside two defenders who collided, then sprinted to the end zone.

He also caught a 34-yard scoring pass from tailback Lamont Warren midway through the second quarter to make the score 20-0. Warren slipped after rolling right with a pitchout, but got the pass away and Johnson wrestled it away from cornerback Darrius Johnson.

No. 1 Fla. St. 40, No. 15 Virginia 14

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Charlie Ward took apart another undefeated team, throwing three touchdown passes and running for another as top-ranked Florida State hammered No. 15 Virginia.

It was the sixth time this season that Florida State (7-0, 5-0 Atlantic Coast Conference) beat an unbeaten foe and the fourth time the Seminoles had little difficulty putting away a ranked team.

The Seminoles have outscored nationally ranked opponents 158-31.

Florida State ignored a slick field and drizzly weather conditions to roll up a 30-0 halftime cushion as Ward passed for 236 yards and a pair of touchdowns and scored another on a spectacular 18-yard run-and-leap into the end zone.

Virginia (5-1, 3-1) became the first team to score more than one touchdown against the Seminoles this season as Symmion Willis threw two TD passes in the third quarter.

Florida State pretty much took any mystery out of the contest with two touchdowns in the final 2:48 of the half. William Floyd scored on a 1-yard run to complete an 86-yard, nine-play drive and Ward climaxed a 66-yard drive two minutes later when he vaulted the final five yards into the end zone over a would-be tackler.

No. 2 Alabama 17, No. 10 Tenn. 17

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — Alabama didn't win for the first time in more than two years. But the Crimson Tide may have salvaged hopes of repeating as national champion.

Jay Barker scored on a 1-yard dive with 21 seconds left and receiver David Palmer, lining up at quarterback, ran in a 2-point conversion as No. 2 Alabama remained unbeaten by tying 10th-ranked Tennessee 17-17.

The Tide (5-0-1, 3-0-1 Southeastern Conference) was on the verge of its first loss since Sept. 14, 1991 — a streak of 28 straight victories — when it got the ball at its 18 with 1:44 remaining, trailing 17-9.

Barker, who was 22-of-40 for 312 yards, directed an 11-play, 83-yard drive that prevented Tennessee (5-1-1, 3-1-1) from beating Alabama for the first time since 1985.

Barker completed five straight passes for 65 yards before three incompletions left the Tide with fourth-and-10 at the Tennessee 18. Kevin Lee kept the drive alive when he grabbed a 17-yarder from Barker that put the ball inside the Tennessee 1.

On the next play, Barker dove over the top for Alabama's first touchdown, making it 17-15 with 21 seconds to go.

No.3 Notre Dame 45, BYU 20

PROVO, Utah — Notre Dame's Mike Miller caught two long touchdown passes and Marc Edwards added a pair of scoring runs as the Irish Express rolled over Brigham Young.

Miller finished with 117 yards on three catches, including TD receptions of 66 and 35 yards as Notre Dame (7-0) extended its unblemished season.

Edwards made his 37 yards rushing count, with two of his six carries going for touchdowns of 5 and 1 yards that helped hand the Cougars (4-2) their second straight loss.

Lee Becton had 122 yards on 18 carries to key an Irish rushing game that racked up 307 yards against BYU, ranked 100th in Division 1-A defending the run.

In winning their first appearance at BYU, the Irish matched their best road winning streak of 12 games, set in 1952-55. It also was the 13th straight victory overall for coach Lou Holtz.

If the Cougars hoped to avenge last year's 42-16 loss at South Bend in the series' inaugural game, they soon abandoned such notions. Instead, the contest quickly began to look like their worst-ever 68-14 loss last week at UCLA.

A huge Irish offensive line, averaging just under 290 pounds per man, blew gaping holes for the Notre Dame running backs. It took only two plays — Becton's 11-yard burst and Ray Zellars' 29-yard tackle-busting run — for the Irish to score their first touchdown, less than three minutes into the game.

Midway through the first period, Notre Dame added Kevin Pendergast's 44-yard field goal — the longest of his career. Notre Dame led 17-0 after Becton skirted the left end from 6 yards out with 2:43 left in the quarter.

BYU lost starting quarterback John Walsh to a knee injury a few seconds later. Backup Tom Young drove the Cougars to the Irish 31 yard line, but Joe Herrick's field goal attempt missed.

Three plays later, Notre Dame quarterback Kevin McDougal threw the longest touchdown pass of his career, hitting Mike Miller from the Irish 34 yard line.

No. 19 Auburn 38, No. 4 Florida 35

AUBURN, Ala. — Scott Etheridge kicked a 41-yard field goal with 1:21 left and Auburn's defense stopped Florida when it mattered most as the Tigers beat the previously unbeaten and fourth-ranked Gators.

First-year coach Terry Bowden got his biggest win yet at Auburn (7-0 overall, 5-0 Southeastern Conference), while Florida (5-1, 4-1) saw its national championship hopes damaged.

Auburn gave up 560 yards, 386 through the air. But the Tigers sacked Danny Wuerffel four times — all in the second half — and picked off two passes at crucial points.

With the Gators leading 10-0 and threatening to pull away in the first quarter, Calvin Jackson intercepted a pass and raced 96 yards for a touchdown.

In the fourth quarter, Auburn's Chris Shelling picked off a Wuerffel pass and went 65 yards to set up a 9-yard scoring run by Frank Sanders with 7:15 left to put Auburn ahead 35-27.

No.5 Ohio St. 28, No.25 Mich. St. 21

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Raymont Harris scored on a 7-yard run with 1:06 remaining as Ohio State overcame five turnovers to hold off Michigan State.

Michigan State's Bob Stoyanovich missed four field goals for the Spartans (3-2, 1-1 Big Ten), who moved into Ohio State territory on all 12 of their possessions.

Ohio State, 6-0 for the first time since 1979, shares the Big Ten lead with Wisconsin, each at 3-0.

The Buckeyes, two-touchdown favorites, built a 21-10 lead through three quarters on three touchdown catches by Joey Galloway, who had nine receptions for 186 yards.

He caught passes covering 22 and 14 yards from Bob Hoying and 64 yards from backup quarterback Bret Powers.

Meanwhile, Michigan State was moving the ball up and down the field but not scoring. The Spartans got inside the Ohio State 20 four times in the first half but only had seven points to show for their efforts.

But Stoyanovich, who followed a 47-yard field goal with misses from 33, 34 and 20 yards, kicked a 21-yarder on the first play of the fourth quarter.

No. 6 Nebraska 45, Kansas St. 28

LINCOLN, Neb. — On the 25th anniversary of Kansas State's upset of Nebraska at Lincoln, the Wildcats almost did it again on the record passing effort of Chad May.

May threw for 489 yards and two touchdowns but Nebraska's Calvin Jones ran for 138 yards and two touchdowns to help the Cornhuskers in a Big Eight matchup of unbeaten teams.

Quarterback Tommie Frazier also ran for 158 yards and one touchdown as Nebraska (6-0) improved to 2-0 in the Big Eight. Kansas State (5-1), which last beat Nebraska with a 12-0 upset in 1968, is 1-1 in the league.

May was 30-of-51 to set break the Big Eight record of 480 yards set by Mike Norseth of Kansas against Vanderbilt in 1985 and tied by Missouri's Jeff Handy against Oklahoma State last season. K-State's previous record was 439 by Lynn Dickey against Colorado in 1969.

May, who was intercepted once, hit Kevin Lockett on a 58-yard touchdown bomb with 7:44 to play to cut Nebraska's lead to 31-28. May earlier connected with Andre Coleman for a 31-yard gain to set up J.J. Smith's third touchdown of the game, a 1-yard run in the third period.

The Huskers then put insurance scores on the board with Corey Schlesinger's 13-yard run and Lawrence Phillips' 46-yard TD sprint in the final 5:25.

No. 22 UCLA 39, No. 12 Wash. 25

PASADENA, Calif. — Wayne Cook threw four touchdown passes to J.J. Stokes as UCLA rallied from a horrendous start and beat Washington in a Pac-10 game.

UCLA (4-2, 2-1) fell behind 15-0 early in the first quarter, but the Cook-to-Stokes combination brought the Bruins back. The two have teamed up for 11 scoring passes in the last three games.

UCLA finally got its offense going on the final play of the first quarter when Cook and Stokes teamed up for a 95-yard pass play — the longest offensive scrimmage play in school history.

Cook also threw an 18-yard scoring pass to Stokes late in the second quarter, a 22-yarder to the 6-foot-4½, 214-pound junior late in the third period, and a 6-yarder with 8:42 left in the game.

The third Cook-to-Stokes TD pass with 2:48 remaining in the third quarter capped a 98-yard, 11-play drive and put the Bruins on top 21-18. They led the rest of the way.

No. 14 N. Carolina 41, Georgia Tech 3

ATLANTA — Jason Stanicek threw two first-half touchdowns and ran for another score as North Carolina rolled to an Atlantic Coast Conference victory over Georgia Tech.

The Tar Heels (7-1, 4-1) turned a pair of first-quarter interceptions into touchdowns for a quick 14-0 lead. They were never in trouble against the Yellow Jackets (2-4, 1-4) in a game played in a misty rain.

AP Laserphoto

Oklahoma fullback Terry Collier (33) is sandwiched by Colorado linebacker Red Johnson (46) and Matt Russell (16) during their game Saturday at Norman, Okla. Colorado went on to upset the Sooners 27-10.

Tech moved 47 yards to North Carolina's 30 after taking the opening kickoff before Sean Boyd picked off a pass from Donnie Davis and returned it 22 yards to his own 44. Davis suffered a concussion tackling Boyd on the play, and sat out the rest of the game.

Stanicek then led Carolina on a 56-yard, eight-play drive capped by a 15-yard scoring pass to Leon Johnson on a screen play after 9:13. Corey Holliday had a 17-yard reception during the drive, giving the wide receiver a reception in 41 straight games, three shy of the NCAA record.

No. 16 Wisconsin 42, Purdue 28

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. — Darrell Bevell threw for 204 yards and four touchdowns in less than three quarters as Wisconsin defeated Purdue, opening the season with six victories for the first time since 1912.

Bevell was 15-of-20 before leaving the game with a spain in his right hip. His final pass was a 7-yard TD completion to Matt Nyquist, giving Wisconsin a 35-0 advantage with 10:53 left in the third quarter.

The victory assured the Badgers (6-0, 3-0 Big Ten) of their first winning season since the 1984 team finished 7-4-1, and kept them in a tie for the Big Ten lead. The Boilermakers (1-5, 0-3) didn't get across midfield until midway in the third quarter when Rick Trefzger, playing in place of Matt Pike, moved Purdue 80 yards in eight plays to score on an 11-yard pass to Jermaine Ross.

Trefzger, who got into game when Pike was injured scrambling for a 5-yard gain on Purdue's first possession of the second half, was 3-of-5 on the scoring drive. He later hit Kirk Olivadotti with a 43-yard scoring strike in the fourth quarter.

Washington State 34, No. 21 California 7

PULLMAN, Wash. — Backup quarterback Shawn Deeds, stepping in when Mike Pattinson was injured, threw for a touchdown and led Washington State to a Pacific-10 Conference upset of California.

Pattinson left the game with a broken collar bone midway through the first quarter after a hit by Golden Bears linebacker Jerrott Willard.

Deeds, a little-used redshirt sophomore, completed 13 of 25 for 227 yards and a touchdown. He threw one interception.

Coach Mike Price said Pattinson would be out for the rest of the season.

No. 23 Louisville 35, Southern Miss. 27

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Jeff Brohm threw three second-half TD passes lifting Louisville to a come-from-behind victory over Southern Mississippi.

The Cardinals (6-1), who trailed 24-9 at halftime, got the deciding score early in the fourth period when Anthony Shelman went over the top from a yard out for a 28-27 lead.

Southern Mississippi (1-5) had three costly second-half turnovers, with a fumble and an interception leading to 13 Louisville points.

No. 24 Syracuse 24, Pitt 21

PITTSBURGH — Marvin Graves threw two touchdowns passes to Marvin Harrison and Syracuse stopped Pitt on a potential game-winning fourth-down play with 2:24 remaining for an unexpectedly tight victory.

Pitt, a 22½-point underdog, went for the victory on fourth-and-2 at the Syracuse 3 after driving nearly the length of the field. But Curtis Martin, who ran for 206 yards and a touchdown, ran into his own blocker on a sweep and was stopped for a 1-yard gain.

Syracuse (4-1-1) then ran out the clock to beat Pitt (1-5) for the fourth straight season. The Orangemen are 8-1-1 against the Panthers since 1984.

Graves threw for 318 yards on just 12 completions — and average of 26.5 yards per reception — and hit Harrison on scoring pass plays of 64 and 37 yards as Syracuse narrowly avoided one of the biggest upsets in college football this season.

MICHIGAN: Wolverines stuff Lions

From 1B

13 on Todd Collins' second TD pass, a 5-yarder to Che Foster with 5:12 remaining.

The Nittany Lions had a final chance after gaining possession on their 36 with 52 seconds left, but Michigan clinched the victory when Peoples intercepted a pass by Kerry Collins at the Wolverines 26 with nine seconds remaining.

Michigan, considered a leading contender for the national championship at the start of the season, dropped out of the Top 10 after losing to Michigan State 17-7 last week. But the Wolverines rebounded strongly against the Nittany Lions, who were well rested and prepared after taking a week off following a 70-7 win over Maryland.

Wheatley, held to 33 yards last week by Michigan State, carried 32 times and became the first runner to gain over 100 yards against Penn State this season. It was the seventh-best rushing effort ever against the Nittany Lions.

Todd Collins completed 13 of 16 passes for 132 yards with no interceptions.

Kerry Collins, making his first Big Ten start, was 16-of-30 for 182 yards. Carter gained 127 yards on 18 carries for the Lions, but was held to 19 yards in the second half.

After both teams missed field goals on their first possession, Penn State took a 3-0 lead on Fayak's 40-yard field goal with 1:09 left in the first quarter.

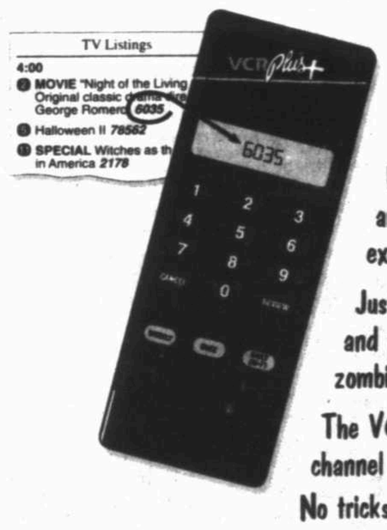

The Lions made it 10-0 in the second period on a 37-yard TD pass from Kerry Collins to Bobby Engram, who beat cornerback Alfie Burch and made a jumping catch in the left corner of the end zone. It was Engram's eighth TD reception of the season, one short of the school record set last year by O.J. McDuffie.

Michigan pulled to 10-7 with 5:14 left in the half on Alexander's long punt return. Alexander, who had two punt return touchdowns last season, cut left and went untouched for the first punt return TD against Penn State since Miami's Kevin Williams did it in 1991.

McNeese St. nips North Texas

Associated Press

LAKE CHARLES, La. — Jose Larios kicked the last of his career-best four field goals from 29 yards with one minute remaining Saturday night to earn McNeese State an 18-17 Southland Conference victory over North Texas.

Larios, a sophomore, also kicked field goals of 30, 37 and a career-best 47 yards as the Cowboys (4-2, 2-0) rallied from 12 points behind in the fourth quarter.

Larios' field goals of 47 and 29 yards, along with a 30-yard touchdown run by Chris Fontenette, rallied McNeese from a 17-6 deficit.

The winning field goal followed a North Texas punt that gave McNeese possession on its own 26. The Cowboys then drove 62 yards on nine plays to win.

North Texas seized a 7-0 lead on a 2-yard touchdown run by Terrance Brown. Then, after Larios closed it to 7-6 with his first two field goals, the Eagles expanded their lead to 17-6 in the third quarter on a 25-yard field goal by Richard DeFelice and on a 34-yard touchdown pass from Mitch Maher to Troy Redwine.

McMurry 22, Sul Ross State 16

ALPINE — Kirk Kennedy ran for two touchdowns in the second half, including a one-yard run at 0:21, giving McMurry a victory over Sul Ross State.

Kennedy completed a 40-yard pass to John Welch to set up the winning TD.

Sul Ross's Jim Russell intercepted Kennedy at the McMurry 5 and ran it in for an early lead, but Kennedy threw a 23-yard touchdown pass to Anthony Robinson later in the first quarter for a 7-7 tie.

Sul Ross then went up 16-7 at the half on Dennis Freels' 33-yard TD pass and Jimmy Calderon's 39-yard field goal. Kennedy pulled McMurry to within 16-14 on a 2-yard touchdown run with 3:58 left in the third quarter.

Stephen F. Austin 35, Nicholls State 21

NACOGDOCHES — Backup quarterback Mike Goddard threw for 280 yards and four touchdowns as Stephen F. Austin beat winless Nicholls State.

Goddard completed 20 of 31 passes and was intercepted once in place of injured James Ritchey.

Michael Pearce caught six passes for 126 yards and Mike Tidewell caught first-half touchdowns of 8 and 6 yards for the Lumberjacks (5-1, 2-0 Southland Conference).

SFA led 21-14 at the half, but scored two TD's in the first 6:25 of the third quarter to take a 35-14 lead.

The Colonels (0-6, 0-3) scored the final touchdown of the game on Derrick Maxwell's only carry, a 28-yard run in the third quarter.

Nicholls State struggled offensively, passing for only 15 yards. Corey Thomas completed 1 of 7 passes for minus-1 yard and an interception. Thomas led the team in rushing, picking up 107 yards on 18 attempts.

Leonard Harris led SFA on the ground, rushing 18 times for 95 of the Lumberjacks' 200 yards.

■ Texas Colleges

Northwestern Louisiana 34, Sam Houston State 27

HUNTSVILLE — Northwestern State rallied from a 20-7 deficit late in the first half, defeating Sam Houston State behind the passing of Brad Laird.

Northwestern State (3-3 overall, 2-1 in the Southland Conference) scored on Trea Ward's 22-yard field goal to pull to within 20-10, and James Brock took a pass from Laird 80 yards on the Demons' first play of the second half.

Sam Houston State fell to 2-4 and 0-2.

Laird completed 16 of 22 passes for 312 yards, althogh he was sacked three times for 25 yards in losses. Dwight Gross completed 16 of 31 for 278 yards and was sacked twice for 17 yards in losses. Gross also was intercepted three times.

Deron Reed gave the visitors a 24-20 lead with a 1-yard run in the final seconds of the third quarter.

Charles Harris scored his third touchdown of the day on a 14-yard run midway through the fourth quarter, lifting Sam Houston into a 27-24 lead.

Northwestern State got a safety on a fumbled punt attempt in the end zone to pull to within one point with 4:31 left in the game, and the Demons then moved 53 yards in seven plays after the free kick. Arthur Hunter got the final two yards and then ran in the two-point conversion for the final score.

Harris also scored on a 10-yard run and on a 71-yard screen pass from Gross, both in the first quarter, and Chris Batten had field goals of 24 and 26 yards in the first half for SHSU.

Alcorn St. 31, Prairie View 10

LORMAN, Miss. — Steve McNair threw for 306 yards and two touchdowns as Alcorn State beat winless Prairie View in Southwestern Athletic Conference action.

Alcorn (5-1, 4-0 SWAC) outgained Prairie View 512 yards to 247, and forced the Panthers to punt seven times. Prairie View (0-6, 0-4), which has lost 30 straight games, trailed 17-7 at halftime.

McNair hit Marcus Hinton with a 40-yard score in the second quarter and brother Tim McNair with a 38-yarder in the third period. Tito Davis scored on a 1-yard run to pad the lead in the final minutes of the third quarter.

Angelo State 45, Abilene Christian 20

SAN ANGELO — Peris'he Moore rushed for two touchdowns and 104 yards and Kevin Harrison added 123 more Saturday night as Angelo State ran over Abilene Christian 45-20.

Moore scored on runs of 19 and 8 yards for the Rams (6-1, 2-0 Lone Star Conference), who have won six straight.

Rex Lamberti tossed scores of 23 and 4 yards for the Wildcats, who fell to 5-2 and 2-1. He completed 16 of 31 passes for 180 yards, but was picked off three times.

Colorado College 37, Trinity 6

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. — Sophomore safety Chris Jones made three interceptions and returned one 93 yards for a touchdown, leading Colorado College over Trinity in NCAA Division III action.

The CC defense forced five turnovers in all from Trinity (2-4), including a 26-yard fumble return for a touchdown by senior defensive end Todd Mays. Sophomore cornerback Kevin Turra also had an interception for Colorado College (5-0).

Trinity's only TD came on a two-yard run by freshman quarterback Matt Rall late in the third quarter after senior Barry Bobbitt picked off a CC pass and returned it 23 yards to set up the scoring opportunity.

Junior quarterback Josh Vitt completed 11 of 17 passes for 141 yards and a pair of fourth-quarter touchdowns. Senior Nick Mystrom kicked three field goals of 49, 46 and 32 yards.

SE Oklahoma 44, West Texas A&M 14

DURANT, Okla. (AP) — Jakarta Washington rushed for 109 yards and four touchdowns as Southeastern Oklahoma rallied to defeat West Texas A&M.

West Texas (2-4) took a 14-0 lead in the first quarter, but Washington and Ernest Hunter each had touchdown runs for the Savages to tie the game by the end of the quarter.

Southeastern (3-3) then jumped all over the Buffalos in the second quarter. Washington scored from four and 39 yards out while Robert Vaughn added another 4-yard touchdown to establish a 34-14 Southeastern lead at the half.

The Savages (3-3) used big plays to highlight their defense with three interceptions, including two by John Japolson, and two fumble recoveries.

Texas A&M-Kingsville 38, Central Oklahoma 7

EDMOND, Okla. — Larry Young rushed for 115 yards and two touchdowns as Texas A&M-Kingsville defeated Central Oklahoma in the Lone Star Conference.

The Bronchos fell to 4-3, despite accumulating 200 passing yards and another 102 on the ground. Texas (2-5) wasn't far ahead in total yardage with 375.

Quarterback Terry Payne completed 17 of 30 pass attempts and threw for Central Oklahoma's only touchdown.

Eric Brinkley led the Bronchos with 15 tackles.

Tarleton State 44, Hardin-Simmons 37

STEPHENVILLE — Jason Poston took a desperation fourth-down pass from Kevin Vickers and turned it into a 39-yard touchdown with 45 seconds remaining, giving Tarleton State an upset over Hardin-Simmons.

HSU's Cowboys (5-1) were ranked first in NAIA Division II going into the game. Tarleton State's Texans improved to 3-4.

Hardin-Simmons drove to the Tarleton 27 in the final seconds, but on the final play a pass was caught but out of the end zone.

The lead changed hands eight times. Hardin-Simmons had gone ahead 37-36 with 3:20 left on Kevin Beam's 20-yard pass to Clint Stewart after an interception at the Tarleton 20.

Matt Carroll carried 22 times for 118 yards and three touchdowns for HSU, while Vickers ran 19 times for 101 yards.

Aztecs throw past Rams, 30-3

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Tim Gutierrez threw for 304 yards and three touchdowns, including a 59-yarder to Keith Williams on the game's second play, and San Diego State beat Colorado State 30-3 Saturday night.

Peter Holt kicked three field goals, and Marshall Faulk rushed 18 times for 89 yards and caught five passes for 48 yards for the Aztecs (5-2, 3-0 Western Athletic Conference). It was the fourth time this season that Faulk, the two-time national rushing leader, was held to less than 100 yards on the ground.

The Rams (2-5, 2-2) lost for the sixth straight time at San Diego Jack Murphy Stadium.

Gutierrez completed 21 of 31 passes, with one interception. It was his third 300-yard game in four starts since replacing the injured David Lowery.

The Aztecs took a 20-0 lead by scoring on four of their first five possessions. After Faulk gained 16 yards to the Aztecs 41 on the first play, Williams pulled in a pass from Gutierrez along the right sideline near the Rams 40, cut inside and raced into the end zone.

Holt kicked field goals of 34 and 33 yards, and Gutierrez threw a 14-yard pass to Curtis Shearer in the left corner of the end zone with 6:34 left before halftime.

Whytlaw nails diving record

Brian Whytlaw set a pool record Saturday in the City of Midland Aquatics Diving Invitational at the Mabee Memorial Swim Center.

Whytlaw set the 3-meter record in the 16-18 division with 352 points. Molly MacFarlane of Albuquerque, N.M., set two pool records in 1-meter and 3-meter diving as did Maverick divers Josh Stocker, 1-meter 14-15; and Larry Cox in the 1-meter 16-18 division. Five pool marks fell in all.

Other COM winners were Kyle Edens, 1-meter and 3-meter 9-under; Mary Dunn, 1-meter 10-11; Jeannie Burke, 1-meter and 3-meter 11-under; Cherie Cookson, 1-meter and 3-meter 12-13; Dani Morris, 1-meter and 3-meter 12-13; James Hahn, 1-meter 14-18; Valerie Biggs, 3-meter 16-18; Kristen Stoltz, 3-meter 10-11; Sarah Vaughan, 1-meter 16-18; and James Hahn, 3-meter 14-18.

Unbeaten Hood beats San Jacinto

In eighth grade play Saturday, unbeaten Odessa Hood defeated previously unbeaten San Jacinto by a 36-7 margin as Hood climbed to 6-0 and SJ fell to 5-1.

Alamo defeated Nimitz 34-6 Thursday. Tim Villegas scored three touchdowns, Craig Petteson added one touchdown and Justin Coleman added another touchdown for Alamo, now 4-2 on the year. Coleman added four extra points for Alamo.

In the eighth grade City Conference, San Jacinto defeated Goddard, 30-0, with TD runs by Michael Henley and Kevin Smith and two TD passes from Ray Milan to Jeremy Piette and Arthur Lane.

In seventh grade play, San Jacinto won three games with San Jacinto White beating Abell Blue 12-0 and SJ Green beating Abell White 22-6. SJ also ripped Goddard 52-0.

Alamo Maroon defeated Goddard 30-6. Maroon is now 4-0 on the year. Also, Alamo Gray defeated Goddard White 22-6. Gray improved its record to 3-1. In the another 7th grade game Alamo defeated Abell 8-0. Alamo improved to 1-1-1.

Maroon remains unbeaten with win

Lee Maroon defeated Odessa Ector 29-14 to remain unbeaten Saturday at Lee Freshman Field.

Maroon improves to 6-0-1. They will face Midland Purple next Thursday at 4:30 p.m.

Offensively, Brian Evans kicked a 23-yard field goal, Michael Hall scored two touchdowns. Rickey Green had two touchdowns and had a two-point conversion. John Sosa led all rushers with seven carries for 97 yards.

MCHS defeats Grandfalls, 42-36

Midland Christian used a 39-yard pass from Chad Bayley to Michael Nash on the final play of the game to pull out a 42-36 heart stopping win over Grandfalls-Royalty at Mustang Field Friday.

Midland Christian improves to 6-0 on the year while Grandfalls, which dropped from 11-man to six-man program prior to the start of the year, falls to 3-2-1.

"It was a good ball game for the fans but not for us," said coach James Blake.

For one of the few times this year, Midland Christian trailed after the first period 16-14 after Grandfalls running back Rigo Olivas scored on a 19-yard run and picked up a Mustang fumble and ran it back 26 yards for a score to give Grandfalls a 16-14 lead.

Grandfalls extended its lead to 20-14 with a 26-yard field goal by Jeremy Hernandez before Midland Christian scored 16 unanswered points, including a 66-yard pass from quarterback Neal Truex to Clay Gunter for a 36-20 halftime lead.

Trinity upsets Victory Christian

Phillip Parker scored with 1:50 left Friday to give Midland Trinity a 40-39 six-man football homecoming victory over Victory Christian of Carlsbad, N.M.

Victory Christian entered the game unbeaten at 5-0. Trinity climbs to 2-3 with the win. Trinity, which has been accepted into TAPPS for next season and will be in the same league as defending state champion Midland Christian, will travel to Grandfalls Friday to play a team that gave Midland Christian fits Friday.

Matt Dickman led Trinity with 209 yards rushing and two touchdowns. Parker also scored twice as did Paul Benson.

Greenwood wins first district game

GREENWOOD — The Greenwood Rangerettes posted their first district volleyball win in the history of the school Saturday with a 15-10, 14-16, 15-9 win over Colorado City.

Greenwood started volleyball play last season, finishing with an 0-6 mark, but now stand at 1-1 in district play after the victory and will travel to Crane for a 4 p.m. game Tuesday.

Greenwood, now 10-12 on the season, got good serves from Shannon Guillory, backcourt play from JoAnne Pallanez, net play from Trisha Ross, blocking from Rhonda Mebane, two kills at the net from Lisa Nichols and great setting by Tanya Clutter.

"As you can see it was a complete team effort," said Greenwood coach Patty Purser. "This is one we wanted to get behind us."

The Greenwood JV lost to C-City, 15-6, 15-10 while the Greenwood freshman also lost, 7-15, 15-13, 15-10.

Gant ready to spend time with family after racing

By Mike Harris
AP Motorsports Writer

Racing is a job that takes you away from home a lot.

You miss important family occasions and live out of a suitcase. Of course it has its rewards, too, but Harry Gant says it's time to spend more nights in his own bed.

■ More Sports/10B

The 53-year-old Gant announced last week that he will retire from Winston Cup racing following the 1994 season.

"You really, really miss things when you're racing," Gant explained. "I've had daughters get married, and they've got to set their marriage date to the day I can be off. Then you have birthdays. We celebrate birthdays on Monday and they're going to be on Sunday. You have birthdays a week early.

"My daughter's graduation, I was racing at Bristol, Tenn., in a Busch car. We were running for the points. I had to finish the race, run across the racetrack, fly back to Taylorsville (N.C.) — this was a long time ago — jump out, run to the house and put on a tux.

"I'm putting on a tie, and I'm still sweaty and dirty. I get to the school, jump out of the car, park in a no-parking zone and run to the top of the hill just as they're coming through with their caps and gowns. I don't want to do that again with my grandchildren. I'm going to miss (racing) some, but I'm looking forward to quitting, too."

As if Dale Earnhardt or Rusty Wallace need more motivation to go after the Winston Cup championship, Toshiba, a major electronics firm, has put up a $1 million prize if either of the title contenders should finish the season in an all-winning way.

The big bucks would go to a driver at the season-ending Hooters 500 at Atlanta Motor Speedway if he can win the pole, the race and the $1.5 million series title.

Earnhardt holds an 82-point lead over Wallace with three races remaining. Mark Martin and Dale Jarrett are still mathematically in the chase, but realistically, they have very little chance of challenging the top two.

Ernie Irvan, who became the permanent replacement for the late Davey Allison in the No. 28 Ford Thunderbird, has won two poles and two races since he took over the ride in September. But Allison, who died July 13 of injuries suffered the previous day in a helicopter crash, is hardly forgotten by the Robert Yates Racing team.

In fact, Larry McReynolds, the team's crew chief, says that not a day goes by when he doesn't think Allison.

"There's not a single day that goes by that I don't think about him in some capacity or another," McReynolds said. "It might be quick or it might be an hour. But we knew we had to march onward.

"As I've told so many people, you saw how Davey operated through so many situations — from his dad getting hurt, to his grandfather dying, to his brother dying. He just marched on and did his job. That's what we knew we had to do.

"It hurts so much sometimes knowing that Davey's not in the car," McReynolds added. "But, back in July, right after he died, if somebody asked, 'Where do you think you'll be by the time Charlotte rolls around (in October)?' we're far better than my expectations at the time.

"I'm not talking about performance-wise; I'm talking about mental attitude on my part and everybody's part. I think we all know what our sport requires of us. We had to wipe our tears fast and press on. But we still remember him, still miss him."

Pontiac, which really wasn't figured as part of the manufacters championship equation at the start of the season, is hanging tough and still has at least an outside shot at winning its first-ever NASCAR title.

The nine Pontiac victories this season — eight by Rusty Wallace and one by Kyle Petty — already have set a new standard for wins by the marque in the modern era (since 1972). The previous high was eight in 1988.

The nine wins are the most for Pontiac since it had 21 in 1962.

Showing how competitive the stock car series has been this season, with three races remaining, each of the manufacturers entered has won nine races.

Pontiac drivers have led a series-leading 3,048 of 8,538 possible laps.

San Antonio bids on prep tournament

AUSTIN (AP) — San Antonio officials are expected to make a bid to lure the University Interscholastic League state basketball tournament from Austin to the new Alamodome when the UIL Legislative Council meets beginning today, officials said.

The San Antonio Sports Foundation has announced plans to bid on the 1995 and 1996 events.

The tournament is booked into the Erwin Center in Austin through 1996.

The Erwin Center seats 16,231, while the Alamodome can accommodate as many as 32,500 for basketball.

"We offer 16,000 additional seats," George Block, a member of the San Antonio Sports Foundation's executive committee, told the Austin American-Statesman. "The boys tournament has outgrown the (Erwin Center). It's a victim of its own success. There are people who feel disenfranchised. They've given up on getting tickets."

Block estimated that the tournament could draw 25,000 for big games its first year and 32,000 the next, creating a high school tournament that is second only to Indiana's extravaganza.

"It's community vs. community, and San Antonio is very aggressive," said Bill Farney, assistant director and athletic director of the UIL. Farney said the UIL has "in no way indicated that we're going to work for this."

The San Antonio group currently is interested in bidding only for the boys tournament, but that may change.

"If they pitch the boys tournament, it would be ill-advised not to take the girls tournament as well," Farney said. "It wouldn't be the same thing if we had them in different places."

Both tournaments have been played in the Erwin Center since 1978 and have an even longer association with Austin. The first boys championship was held in the men's gymnasium at the University of Texas in 1921, and the girls tournament began at UT in 1951.

GENERAL CAMPAIGN LOANED EXECUTIVES

Class OF '93

Each year, a group of Midlanders leave their jobs and go back to school for three days to learn a new skill–how to be United Way Loaned Executives. Their companies have "loaned" these employees to United Way for the General Campaign. After the training, they spend hours every day presenting the United Way story to employee groups at companies throughout the city. On behalf of those people who will be helped, we thank these Loaned Executives and their employers. Through their hard work, these Loaned Executives are ensuring a brighter future for all Midlanders through the United Way agencies.

Council should vote for new air terminal

Midland City Council will make a decision soon on the recommendation of the Airport Advisory Board that the city construct a new $29 million terminal building at Midland International Airport. The recommendation, when balanced against the alternative of renovating the existing terminal building, calls for something akin to a "leap of faith" for the city's future.

The amount of money to be spent — and whether or not the money to be used is "tax money" is merely a matter of semantics — is large by any individual's reasoning regardless who's paying. But the question of a new airport terminal really boils down to a simple matter of competition — whether Midland International will serve the needs of the people of the Permian Basin or concede that position to another airport in this area, ostensibly Lubbock International Airport.

In that regard, the question is tied directly to what one envisions as Midland's future. Is Midland the "queen city of the Permian Basin" as it was known around 1900 or merely the county seat of Midland County with an airport that fills the needs of local residents, but doesn't strive to provide service for air travelers from throughout the region?

Anyone who has had occasion to talk to people at Midland International knows that the airport is and will remain if it so chooses a well-respected regional facility that monthly serves the needs of nearly 50,000 air passengers. Interestingly, Lubbock International Airport's enplanement figures through August of this year are only slightly higher.

While the question of safety at the existing airport terminal is not an overriding concern, airport officials do hope that construction of a new terminal will benefit safety.

In a tossup between a new terminal building or renovation, a new building makes tremendously more sense as the old building is 34 years old already and renovation could not alleviate all its problems.

Another matter raised by opponents of a new terminal building is whether the proposal for a new building is premature. That's possible, but when is the correct time? When Midland is "booming" again and the airport is so overcrowded that safety is a real worry or when air travelers from this region are traveling to Lubbock to get the flights they need?

Midland City Council has a responsibility to look out for the best interests of all the citizens of Midland and in that regard the council should vote for a new terminal building.

Chuckling Dems need to remember Brown inquiry

While some Democrats may be chuckling over Republican Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison's problems, they better beware the adage about the last laugh.

Serious charges have been levelled against Commerce Secretary Ron Brown. Brown has been accused of secretly meeting with a Vietnamese-American businessman, Nguyen Van Hao, and agreeing to take a $700,000 bribe to push for more open trade between Vietnam and the United States.

Brown's lawyer has admitted that Brown met with Hao, but denies that there was an agreement to accept any payment. A federal grand jury in Miami and the FBI are investigating.

If there is any truth to these accusations, Brown will become a major embarrassment to the Clinton administration. Given that the president seems to be gaining some momentum after his rocky start, that embarrassment could prove disastrous.

Brown knows whether he's in the clear, but he should be given the benefit of the doubt until he is given a fair trial in a court of law.

Resolution Trust situation could be precursor to health

We're from the government and we're here to help."

Sure. So the federally ordered audit of a failed San Diego savings and loan included:

Workers making $35 an hour to photocopy documents.

Two-hour lunch breaks.

Workers napping in mid-day, or playing poker (at one time between 50 and 150 of them were dealing cards).

Workers vandalizing restrooms.

One eight-hour shift that did absolutely nothing.

The horror story goes on and on, but we get the picture, and what a picture it is, one of corruption, mismanagement or nonmanagement, nepotism and cost rip-offs.

This particular case involved the Resolution Trust Corp., which hired Price Waterhouse to audit the San Diego S&L. Price Waterhouse, in turn, hired temporary employees, some of whom were relatives of the auditing firm's employees.

A later inquiry found that RTC's lax oversight cost the taxpayers $20 million in unnecessary costs. But it is only one of several problems investigators are finding with the RTC. . . .

And this is the government that wants to take over our health care? We'd like a second opinion.

President upsets California governor

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Gov. Pete Wilson and President Clinton are barely on speaking terms, but their fates are inextricably linked.

Based on his recent campaign-style visit to California, Clinton believes the state is crucial to re-election in 1996, and he's showing it through presidential pep talks and programs. The beleaguered Wilson has a stake in scapegoating Clinton for California's ills — although many are pre-existing conditions — if he is to remain in office and mount an expected White House bid in 1996. California's economy is catalytic enough to goose the national recovery, thereby aiding both men, or grind the U.S. economy to a standstill, which could cost both re-election.

Anderson

Wilson's critique of Clinton is withering. Clinton, the governor says, has the "reverse Midas touch." He believes Clinton's health, budget and immigration policies are punitive toward the nation's most populous state.

That both men have rather murky ideological moorings has done little to promote partnership. Like Clinton, Wilson is neither conservative nor liberal.

Clinton may be trying to seduce the state — where defense downsizing has jolted the economic Richter scales — but he's also clearly shunning its governor. During a town hall meeting here recently, Clinton fielded a question from a Pete Wilson in San Francisco, right after the host said something to the effect that this wasn't the same Gov. Wilson with whom he was "acquainted." Clinton protested, saying he talked to Wilson all the time.

"Really?" says the governor. "That was news to me." He'd been watching the TV town hall in his gubernatorial office. In the same office, in a recent interview with us, he spelled out the deterioration between himself and Clinton. When the president barnstorms through California he all but ignores Wilson.

The governor wrote Clinton a letter on Jan. 18. He virtually begged Clinton for relief for California on the issue of illegal immigration. "The nation's immigration and refugee policy is exclusively a federal responsibility," he wrote. "The states are without jurisdiction." But that "exclusive federal responsibility carries with it the financial obligation to pay for services for immigrants and refugees which the states are mandated by the federal government to provide," and for which federal reimbursement was promised. Without the "refund," the federal policy is killing California, the governor protested.

In that first letter, and several since, Wilson outlined the devastating impact of federal programs for both legal and illegal immigrants on California.

Washington requires California to provide health and education services to illegal immigrants and their children, setting up a "giant magnet of federal incentives" for illegal immigrants, Wilson wrote the president in an August missive.

Moreover, the federal government gives citizenship to children born to parents residing illegally in the state, Wilson noted, "rewarding illegal immigrants who successfully violate the law and manage to have a child born on the U.S. soil."

Wilson calculates that more than $1 billion is spent each year in California educating illegal immigrants; $800 million on emergency health care; and $500 million each year imprisoning illegal immigrants in California. Wilson charges that the federal government has stiffed the state by not reimbursing it for at least $1.4 billion of these costs, as promised. Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, Henry Cisneros, has even gone on record echoing some of the Governor's gripes.

Politics in Britain become 'Clintonized'

LONDON — With a thud heard across the Atlantic, the Labour Party fell from power a year before America's Democrats did, in 1979, after a British winter in which almost everybody, including garbage collectors, ambulance drivers and grave diggers, seemed to go on strike. That winter a student taking a philosophy exam supposedly misquoted Hobbes' description of life in the state of nature as "solitary, poor, nasty, British and short."

Will

British, brutish — the distinction did not then seem large.

Since then Labour has struggled to convince the country that its name does not mean what it plainly says and what history confirms, that the party was created for class-based politics. Britain was the first nation to develop an industrial working class and Britain's socialists have had a hard time facing the fact that their party's strength would shrink as that class did.

Labour no longer talks of nationalizing the economy's "commanding heights," and the party recently pruned the power of trade unions in party affairs. But still it seems to be a party of leftist puritanism — the fear that someone somewhere may be making money.

Proof of the durability of prejudices in politics is the fact that in the tenth decade of the twentieth century, a leader of one of the two major parties in a great nation says, opaquely and hence ominously, "We will only tax if it increases the opportunities for individuals or for the community." When used by the left, the word "community" usually is a synonym for the state. The same man, the shadow Chancellor of the Exchequer, plaintively protests that "Labour is not against wealth." Such reassurance makes people nervous about why such reassurance is still needed. The party talking this way has lost four consecutive elections, won just 34.4 percent of the popular vote in 1992 and has not won more than 40 percent since 1970.

But even British leftists have noticed that, as one of them says, "every contemporary democratic society is capitalist." Today, for the first time in two centuries, the left has nothing coherent, let alone militant, to say about the problem framed by the first great critic of the left, Edmund Burke — the problem of distinguishing between "what the state ought to take upon itself to direct by the public wisdom, and what it ought to leave, with as little interference as possible, to individual discretion."

Nowadays it is droll to associate disinterested wisdom with the state. Government has itself become the basis of a new class-based politics. The class of public employees and other persons (lawyers, lobbyists) parasitic off government's regulating and subsidizing activities seeks to expand the number of people dependent on the public sector.

In this city where Marx is buried, the Labour Party, once proudly socialist, has interred the idea that the state is a good owner. However, the central socialist goal survives. That goal is political control of economic life, for the purpose of empowering the government class to run a command society.

In Britain that idea is being Clintonized by today's surreptitious socialists, wrapped in a gauzy, unthreatening vocabulary about "investment" and "infrastructure" and "cooperation" and "partnership" between government and industry. Clintonism is a model for growing government and the public sector class. Clintonism is a new version of an old transaction: the individual purchases "security" and pays for it by accepting dependence on the state, and hence on the political class.

The centerpiece of Clintonism is a health-care reform plan that is, effectively, nationalization of one-seventh of the American economy — the trillion dollar health care sector. Irving Kristol, piercing the fog of the Clinton program ("ingenuity deliberately obscured by complexity") says "its formula for universal coverage has the effect of abolishing the private sector for medical insurance and medical treatment."

So from across the Atlantic, from a nation that never had a serious socialist party, comes what British socialists crave, a post-socialist strategy for expanding the state by stealth and indirection.

RUSSELL BAKER

Modern crusades flutter on media winds

It looks as if Columbus may survive after all. Last year his detractors seemed to have blackened his reputation so successfully that Columbus Day would ever after be celebrated only by moral vermin who revel in shame.

This year the day has come again, yet raises scarcely a peep of protest against honoring the Genoese navigator with parades and school holidays. Such is the swiftness with which our modern crusades end up moldering on the shelf.

Baker

In modern crusades, timing is everything. That's because a modern crusade's chance of success depends heavily on media attention. This doubtless explains why Columbus's detractors chose last year to have their go at him but let him off scot-free on Monday. Last year they were assured of maximum media.

Why? Last year was the 500th anniversary of his first Atlantic crossing. This year is the 501st. Nobody makes a fuss about 501st anniversaries, least of all the press. If, however, you want camera crews and reporters destroying your lawn, porch, roofing shingles, aluminum siding and parlor rug, simply let it be known that you have a 500th anniversary in progress.

Last year's attacks on Columbus were denunciations of a human product of 15th-century European culture, but they were more than attacks. They were also celebrations of the superiority of the present culture.

The modern custom is to stand in front of the full-length mirror patting yourself on the back and loudly congratulating yourself on how thoroughly your moral superiority exceeds that of the old-timers of long-dead generations.

Every time I hear some philosopher of the water cooler explain that Abraham Lincoln was "a racist," I am touched by the display of eagerness of modern Americans to boast that their own enlightenment puts to shame the great figures of the past.

What makes it comical is the assumption that the present is a pinnacle of some sort. Poor benighted Lincoln hadn't the good luck to be of the present age, so how could he avoid being "a racist," even though in some respects he was not half as unenlightened as a lot of the old-timers?

Look at Jefferson. A slaver. A sexist, to boot. How sweet it is to sit in judgment on him here at the end of the 20th century, how flattering to ourselves to find him hopelessly unqualified for public office in this day and age, how superior it makes one feel to know he simply just didn't measure up to . . . well, to our own splendid standards.

Perhaps humans have always had this ridiculous belief in the absolute excellence of the present, this conviction that the world into which they have had the marvelous good luck to be born is the best world that ever was, the best that ever will be.

Last year's assault on Columbus found him guilty of being a 15th-century European, hence odious and unworthy of the respect of 20th-century Americans who, given Columbus's opportunity, would have refused to sail the Atlantic lest they open some idyllic new land mass to the murderous rapacity of other 15th-century Europeans, not to mention 16th-, 17th-, 18th-, 19th-, and early-20th-century Europeans.

The judgment of the court, if I read it correctly, was that if Columbus had stayed on the other side, eventually the enlightened people who passed judgment on him would have come across late in the 20th century and done things right in the New World.

As a result, the Indians, who would not be called Indians, wouldn't have to go into the casino-gambling racket, slavery would not have existed, the spotted owl would not be endangered, and modern schoolchildren wouldn't be taught to admire morally inferior people like Lincoln and Jefferson.

How have we reached such heights of excellence in the present age, the climax of a century that a detached historian might reasonably consider an era of unprecedented human viciousness and butchery? I cannot say. Maybe we were elevated by our science, which gives us smart bombs and MIRV'ed warheads, or maybe by our medical-care system, which is the best in the world.

Russell Baker's column is distributed by New York Times News Service.

Air terminal makes bad first impression

Midland is blessed with a multitude of wonderful institutions, built and instigated by people who cared about the quality of life for the citizens of our community. We should be proud of the Casa de Amigos, Confederate Air Force Museum, Museum of the Southwest and Planetarium, Haley Library, Petroleum Museum, golf courses and retirement homes that are the envy of the nation. These institutions were created at no cost to the taxpayers. They were built by Midlanders with vision using hard work and sacrifices for the benefit of others. We have outstanding medical facilities, convention center, shopping without equal, and many hotels and motels. Our best asset, that is used the most but gives the impressions that Midland has failed to promote — Midland International Airport! The Front Door of the Permian Basin is atrocious, and this past week we had thousands of visitors from all over the nation and world.

Our Front Door is antiquated and plain "wore out." Let's express support for something positive — a badly needed new terminal. We made repairs in the past, which everyone can now see was a mistake. Come on Midland City Council, don't let the few perennial naysayers who didn't build a proud Midland, deny us this last opportunity to keep Midland the leader it has always been.

Bilingual education nurtures immigrants

I recall reading a letter addressed to the editor on Tuesday, Oct. 5, in which an opposing opinion was expressed to bilingual education and its cost. I've planned to respond earlier but I found myself extremely busy helping organize a statewide Bilingual Conference to be held in Midland on Oct. 27-30, 1993. Finally I'm able to take a few minutes to impart some historical facts on bilingual education.

Bilingual education in the United States reached its highest enrollment numbers prior to the Civil War! Most of the programs were on the eastern coast of our country! It is said that the concept of bilingual schooling came from Cincinnati in 1840 and was designed for German-speaking immigrants.

The death of bilingual education was a result of World War I hysteria. The majority of the elementary and secondary bilingual programs in this country involved the German language. Suddenly we were at war with Germany. This hysteria resulted in legal action that would forbid the use of any language other than English in schools.

The rebirth of bilingual education began in 1952 thanks to U.S. Commissioner of Education Earl J. McGrath. Dade County began their bilingual program in 1961. United Consolidated I.S.D. in Laredo began a program in 1964. Finally in 1968 President Lyndon B. Johnson signed the Bilingual Act introduced by Texas Senator Ralph Yarborough.

Bilingual education programs in the United States today represent almost every language of the world. The focal point of bilingual schooling is to teach English! While teaching English, educational concepts in the first language are introduced so that the students do not fall behind academically.

Our country has always welcomed new immigrants and provided a bridge by which to help them assimilate into our American culture. America has used the bridge of bilingual education to nurture new immigrants into productive American citizens. I am glad that ancestry of the individual who wrote the letter has had this great advantage provided by our government. We are now asking for the same privilege and right that other immigrants have already enjoyed!

Police Department appreciates citizens

On behalf of the Midland Police Department Community Relation and Crime Prevention Unit I would like to commend and thank the citizens of Midland who participated in the Midland Night Out on Oct. 5th.

I would like to also thank the various agencies that had booths set up at Midland Park Mall for our Kick Off Rally on Oct. 2nd.

To the Midland Park Mall staff of Patti Snodgrass, Sylvia Hernandez and Jeff Craig a special thanks for your hospitality and cooperation with the press conference and Kick Off Rally. The area media, the Midland Reporter-Telegram, KMID Channel 2, KWES Channel 9 and KOSA Channel 7 deserve a special thanks for providing such excellent coverage of all the Midland Night Out events that showcased Midland and its citizens in a very positive light.

It is the type of united front that sends a clear message "Crime and the criminals that commit them will not be tolerated in our city."

Through awareness and involvement, the key being involvement, Midland will always be the city to live in, work in and raise our families.

As a member of the finest police department in the state and one of the top police departments in the United States I am proud of the relationship we have with our citizens and the support shown to us in the past, present and we look forward to your continued support in the future.

After years of GOP, U.S. must pay piper

When a U.S. congressman resigns his position because he cannot stomach the hypocrisy among his co-workers, there is something wrong with the system.

On the one hand, members of Congress give lip service to reduced spending while at the same time they butter up their constituents with government money for local improvements. This is well known as "pork barrel" spending, at which our own Sen. Phil Gramm is a past master.

He has plenty of company. They holler for spending cuts while dishing out pork in their own bailiwicks.

Now, our president is attempting to lead the country back from bankruptcy and the cynics are howling. They enjoyed the easy-money years of GOP spend-and-borrow and now we must pay the piper with interest.

Instead of griping and nitpicking from the sidelines, the critics should adhere to Ross Perot's advice: Lead, follow or get out of the way.

BPW's seminar was a 'roaring success'

I want to thank everyone who helped make "Networking in the 90's," a seminar hosted by the Uptown Business and Professional Women's organization Oct. 2, such a roaring success! BPW is a non-profit organization and this is our major fund-raiser for the year. Funds are used for a variety of community projects; primarily giving scholarships to women so they may return to school. Our organization is dedicated to helping women become more successful and continue to grow professionally.

This was our most successful seminar. Because everything it takes to put on the seminar is donated and because we had the best turnout ever, we will be able to increase the number of scholarships given this year. Local merchants donated prizes and services; the communications community donated a fantastic amount of publicity; and of course, our members donated time, postage and whatever was needed to generate the huge success we enjoyed.

There are far too many benefactors to thank individually, however, we are particularly grateful to the Reporter-Telegram for the excellent coverage they gave us; to the various radio and TV stations who gave our event exposure and to Max Howard of KMND 1510 AM radio for a wonderfully enjoyable and informative interview. Also, to Fitzco Sound who, at the last minute, donated the use of a wonderful sound system.

SPEAKING OUT

Environment depends on public

By Brian Foley

Brian Foley, a resident of Midland since 1985, is owner and operator of Hercules Moving Co.

This is in reference to John Paul Pitts' article, "Hydrocarbons are not a planet-killer," which appeared in the Sunday, Oct. 3 Reporter-Telegram. Basically, the article was a collection of Bernold Hanson's environmental theories, devised to ease the fears of the environmentally conscious public.

I haven't read such drivel since Margaret Maxey came to town and compared Union Carbide's Bhopal accident to a typhoon. Both Hanson's and Maxey's logic (or lack thereof) is amazingly similar. They both attempt to legitimize man-made environmental disasters by comparing them to vaguely similar natural circumstances. Example: We don't need to be overly concerned with oil spills because there are naturally occurring oil seeps in Venezuela, Canada and the Santa Barbara Channel. Well, I've never been to any of those locations, but I'd be willing to bet that they aren't cluttered with mountains of dead oil-covered animals! Mother Nature does oil spills a little more gently than Exxon!

Hanson's main thrust seems to be that crude oil and CO^2 are naturally occurring, bio-degradable, beneficial substances, period. I don't know an environmentalist, or school child for that matter, who would dispute that fact. Problem is, that's not the point! The environmental dispute revolves around the rate and the manner in which these substances are being dumped into our eco-systems! H^2S gas is a perfectly natural substance. Maybe we should be breathing more of it, too!

Every example cited by Hanson was ridiculous. Hanson states, "Plant a billion trees today and eventually they will decay and return to the atmosphere as CO^2 — a greenhouse gas." Well, that's a perfect example of how man operates and that's why we're in trouble! Mother Nature doesn't handle trees that way! Hanson discusses the carbon cycle at length and states that it's as natural as "Old Faithful" at Yellowstone Park, and he's right! However, when Mother Nature "designed" the carbon cycle she didn't factor into the equation, a hundred million automobiles and thousands of power plants! Hanson even suggested that the excessive amounts of CO^2 in our atmosphere are responsible for the massive increases in crop yields this century! Who needs Aggies? We've got pollution!

Hanson completely ignores the fact that the amount of arable land and vegetation in general, are decreasing, while the levels of atmospheric CO^2 are increasing. After reading this article, a simpleton might wonder how trees got along before the industrial revolution!

Just to add some perspective to this letter, I would like to mention that whenever I travel to either coast or up north, I am an outspoken (even bigoted) advocate of the petroleum industry and also that a major portion of my household income is derived directly and indirectly from the oil patch. By the same token, I have to say that I was shocked to find out that such a distinguished and popular fellow earth-scientist was broadcasting such nonsense. It is also interesting to note that nearly everything stated by Hanson in the article, flies right in the face of all of the major corporate, environmental initiatives afoot today!

In conclusion, all I can hope and pray is that the thinking, voting public listens to people like Hanson and Al Gore, and all the people in between, and makes the right decisions for our grandchildren!

Show depicts gentle side of police officers

On a recent Tuesday I sat down in front of the television to watch "NYPD Blue," a new show by the creator of "Hillstreet Blues." "L.A. Law" and "Doogie Howser, M.D." Imagine my surprise when I found out KMID TV had chosen not to broadcast it.

At the time, I was not aware of the controversy surrounding the show. I called Dimension Cable and found out it was not their decision to air or not to air a particular show, but the local station itself. I then called Steve Dant, KMID manager. When Dant had not returned my call by 4:30 p.m., I called him back. I asked him why he chose not to air the aforementioned program. He explained that the language was vile, there were scenes showing partial nudity and there was violence. He told me he had viewed three episodes and made the decision not to air the show. It crossed my mind that if the show was so terrible, why did he have to watch three episodes before he made the decision.

We continued to visit, but he would not budge. I asked him why we could not view the show and, if it really was as terrible as he said it was, then we could choose not to watch it. He said he could make the decision not to air it and that is exactly what he did. Choice is one of the rights we as American citizens had always enjoyed. I don't care for someone else deciding what I can or cannot watch on television.

We went to Washington, D.C. and I had the opportunity to see "NYPD Blue." In the Capitol City viewers are allowed to make their own choice on what they choose to view. Having seen the show, I now understand why it was voted "one of the best new shows of the season." There were a few "off color" comments but in my opinion, nothing worse than is on TV now and that also goes for the so-called sex scenes and violence. If that was all Dant chose to see, he really missed the important things that make this show so appealing. So many people, as a result of the Rodney King incident so highly publicized in the news, have learned to fear and no longer trust or respect our law enforcement officers. "NYPD Blue" shows a caring, gentler side to policemen in relationships with each other and the general public. It is, in my opinion, a quality show depicting cops as public servants and human beings. Maybe KMID should take another look and try to see beyond the surface and see the depth of this fine show. It has heart and soul and some of the local citizens of this area just might like to choose for themselves whether they see it or not. I know I would.

Does KMID manager censor other shows?

What has happened to freedom of choice? KMID should not have the right to decide what we do or do not watch on TV, that is a decision we should make just like we do with Showtime or HBO.

These raise a question: Are we getting the real or Steve Dant's news? He should think about this. I have and I decided to change stations. I have watched KMID for a long time but not anymore.

Teen-ager opposes indecent TV shows

In response to the letter of Michael D. Jordan, Friday, Oct. 8, I am continually amazed by the number of television viewers in the Permian Basin who actually want to watch such television shows as "NYPD Blue." I am also amazed by the ease with which certain people feel they may toss around generalizations, such as "hypocrisy" to all of those who have some "standards of decency." I am amazed at how little people think.

Jordan should read his own letter again. He makes it very clear that he does not like being compelled to listen to and watch "the worst of commercial America's musical production for three to four hours per week." Yet, in the same letter, he wished to be able to watch "NYPD Blue," which he also admitted to having similar content to that program (specifically, MTV) which he is compelled to watch at the gym.

Jordan should think about what he has written. By the way, I am a teen-ager and I do not "watch sodomy and nymphomania on MTV in the back bedroom." I do not watch MTV at all.

Responsible adults stand up for children

This is in response to the letters you have received recently condemning KMID TV for not airing "NYPD Blue."

I would like to publicly thank KMID TV for exercising their First Amendment right in choosing to not air "NYPD Blue."

It is about time that responsible adults use their "freedom" to stand up for the children of our country and tell "Hollywood" enough is enough!

Manager displays courage, conviction

I am writing to say thank you to KMID General Manager Steve Dant for having the courage and conviction to take a stand for better television and his decision to refuse to air a new show entitled "NYPD Blue," produced by Steven Bochco. This show is the first "R" rated soft-porn television series slated for prime time and was scheduled to be aired at 9 p.m. on Tuesdays. I applaud Dant for being sensitive to the over 3,500 signatures on petitions he has received from people who are discouraged and upset with the direction television programming is heading and for his decision to not air the program.

Oilers' Moon eclipsed by Carlson

■ The Warren Moon-Drew Bledsoe matchup is preempted for Cody Carlson and Scott Secules.

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — The game sold out early. Fans were eager to see one of the best quarterbacks of the 1980s, Warren Moon, against one of the top prospects of the 1990s, Drew Bledsoe.

Instead, they'll get Cody Carlson vs. Scott Secules.

They'll see two teams, Houston and New England, with 1-4 records. And they'll watch the Patriots, who rarely have full houses at home, try to push a coach closer to unemployment for the second straight Sunday.

New England upset Phoenix and embattled coach Joe Bugel 23-21 last Sunday, but lost Bledsoe to a knee sprain for at least one game.

The next night, an ineffective Moon was replaced by Carlson in Buffalo's 35-7 rout of the Oilers that did little for coach Jack Pardee's job security. Pardee announced Wednesday that Carlson would start Sunday.

"We do need to break out of our cycle here," Pardee said. "There's not one person responsible for what's happened here."

Carlson, in his seventh season as Moon's backup, started the last six regular-season games and led the AFC in completion percentage. But he has started only 12 non-playoff games in seven seasons as Moon's backup.

He said being named the starter was "something that I halfway expected because we need to find something that will help us play a little better."

Houston offensive coordinator Kevin Gilbride called it "a very desperate move," and Moon, who has thrown for 11 interceptions and just five touchdowns, said his pride was wounded.

"As for what happens now," Moon said, "I'm going to do all I can to help this team."

Secules will be making his first start in six NFL seasons. He spent three of them as Dan Marino's backup in Miami and signed with the Patriots as a free agent.

New England coach Bill Parcells called his new quarterback "high-strung," and Secules agrees.

"I just have a lot of energy," he said. "That's one of the things I have to guard against and be relaxed."

He had taken only about a dozen snaps in practice this season before Bledsoe was hurt late in the first half. Secules did fine, completing 12 of 20 passes for 214 yards and the winning touchdown with 3:56 left.

Phoenix fell to 1-4. Bugel's job, already considered in jeopardy, became shakier. New England, 2-14 last season, was happy to move up to 1-4.

Houston is devastated about being 1-4 after starting this season with championship aspirations. Pardee downplayed talk about his job status and relationship with fiery defensive coordinator Buddy Ryan.

"Everybody likes to talk about it," he said. "There's really nothing to talk about. We get along fine. Everything's fine. We're just not playing very well."

Houston will face a rebuilding Patriots team coming off its best game of the season. The Patriots gained a season-high 432 yards and revived their running game behind Leonard Russell's 116 yards. The defense held Phoenix to 13 first downs and had two interceptions.

But Parcells knows the defense needs to be more alert to changing situations.

"We do a lot of stupid things," he said. "We're a reactionary team right now, rather than an anticipating type team."

Houston's defense has been a shocking disappointment. It was ranked third in the NFL last season. In its first year under Ryan, it is 18th.

"It's surprised the entire league," said Patriots defensive end Mike Pitts, who played four years for Philadelphia while Ryan was head coach. "I really don't think it's Buddy Ryan's situation down there that has put that team in turmoil."

■ Houston vs. New England, noon, KWES-TV (Channel 9).

This is the week the Oilers, more talented than the Patriots, have a good chance to get back on track.

It's also an opportunity for the Patriots, on a long-term reconstruction project, to get short-term satisfaction by beating a struggling team.

"There's a lot to do here, an awful lot to do," Parcells said. "We'll see whether we're going in the right direction or not."

The Oilers know they're headed the wrong way after losing their last three games. They hope Carlson can change that. The last time Houston beat New England, 31-6 in 1988, Carlson started for Moon, who had a fractured shoulder.

"You always look to your best player (Moon) when things aren't going right," receiver Haywood Jeffires said. "You hate to see that when it's your quarterback, but maybe it will be a spark that we need."

Cowboys, 49ers ready for rematch

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — Troy Aikman has today's showdown with the San Francisco 49ers in this perspective: "It's as important as an NFL game can get in October."

The Dallas Cowboys want to know how far they've progressed since a stumbling 0-2 start and they figure the 49ers will let them know in the Texas Stadium rematch of NFC title opponents. The Cowboys are six-point favorites.

The Super Bowl champion Cowboys and the 49ers, who lost 30-20 in the NFC championship game at Candlestick Park, have had their problems as they've each posted 3-2 ledgers.

The Cowboys have bounced back with Emmitt Smith to defeat Phoenix, Green Bay and Indianapolis after losses to Washington and Buffalo.

The 49ers have lost on the road at Cleveland and New Orleans.

At least both teams still have their starting quarterbacks. Aikman has assorted injuries but he's still in the lineup as is the 49ers Steve Young, who broke a thumb on his passing hand in the preseason.

"This is a pivotal game for us," Aikman said. "This is a special game. The last time we played them we were the underdogs trying to make a name. Now, the NFL looks at us differently. It's not a must-win game but it's big. It's not make or break but it will show us where we are."

Aikman was brilliant when the Cowboys defeated the 49ers in the NFC title game, hitting 24 of 34 passes for 322 yards and two touchdowns. He currently is the No. 1 rated quarterback in the NFL.

He has a 101.5 rating to go ahead of the New York Jets Boomer Esiason (99.4).

Aikman has completed 69.1 percent of his passes and is averaging a league-high 9.26 yards per attempt. His performance has overshadowed his hand, elbow, rib, and shoulder injuries.

"I guess I'm just getting old with all this ailments," Aikman said. "At least it's not getting in the way of my performance."

San Francisco coach George Seifert worked with Aikman in the Pro Bowl last year.

Cowboys QB keeps early success under his helmet

By Art Spander
N.Y. Times News Service

IRVING — Persuading Troy Aikman to grant an interview request is no big deal.

An interview in the locker room? No, says the Dallas Cowboys star quarterback, he'll show up at the press work room. And do he does, all blond hair and confidence, a plain, white T-shirt on his torso, hand-lettered with a small number, "8," and a huge sweatband with the Cowboys logo on each wrist.

There is no urgency about the man. After you've faced a defensive tackle, how intimidating can a journalist be? Not, Aikman points out, as intimidating as a 120 mph plus lap at Charlotte Motor Speedway during the Richard Petty Driving School. "I was too scared," he chuckles, "to even know what kind of car it was.".

We've know what kind of player Aikman was. And is, MVP of the last Super Bowl, the top-rated passer in the league this season. His focus is on being successful, not famous.

"I turned down a television show and a book. Nobody wants to hear or read good things. Just the dirt."

And nobody likes to hear athletes whine.

"I don't want the fans to get the wrong perception of me," said Aikman. "I'm not complaining because I'm recognized. If you can't go out as often, that's the price you play. I've been able to achieve many things professionally."

The achievement the last three weeks as the Cowboys rush to judgment against the 49ers on Sunday at Texas Stadium has been that of completing 77 percent of his passes. Or is that an achievement? "It was rather ridiculous," Aikman said with the distaste of a preacher talking about blasphemy.

"One of the local papers tried to draw parallels between Joe Montana's career and my career, People couldn't care less. They look at Joe, and Joe has won four Super Bowls. That's what fans know. They don't know 77 percent.

"Maybe the only reason I feel good about completing all those passes now is that my first year (1989) we were 1-15 and I was the worst-rated passer in the league."

Life's all about learning, not to mention having Emmitt Smith as running back and Michael Irvin at wide receiver.

Life's all about getting the issues clarified, whether it's a misconception over the gratuities or getting the new contract he wants the Cowboys to negotiate now.

"They're talking about negotiations in December," Aikman says. "My play may suffer. Jerry (owner Jerry Jones) says he wants to wait and see what the TV contract will be. My answer is the quarterback market has already been established."

The No.1 pick in the 1989 draft out of UCLA, Aikman, through his own potential and the wizardry of agent-attorney Leigh Steinberg, helped create that market. The Cowboys gave him $11 million for six years. Now Steve Young gets that for two years.

What Aikman gets in Dallas is more attention than he prefers but considerably less than John Elway gets in Denver, where the topic of what the Elway family gives to trick-or-treaters on Halloween night makes headlines.

"I've had a few things written about my personal life," said Aikman, "but not much. I went to a hockey game and a had beer, and a friend of mine bought. And someone wrote what a horrible tipper I was when I didn't even buy it. My problem's the opposite. I tip to a fault."

Aikman was born and lived in Southern California until he was 12, when his father, an oil worker, hauled the family to Henryetta, Okla. Troy started at the University of Oklahoma, after being told the Sooners would be switching from the wishbone offense to the pro-set.

"They didn't," said Aikman, "and here I am 6-4 and trying to run."

After a broken leg, he ran off to UCLA where he played his junior and senior years. Then came the Cowboys. "The game against the 49ers is huge for us. I imagine it's the same for them. Both teams have already lost two games this season. We want to get back to the Super Bowl. They do too. There are high expectations both places."

Aggies turn to air attack to beat Baylor

By Jimmy Burch
N.Y. Times News Service

WACO — Lance Teichelman, primary gap-filler on a Texas A&M defensive line considered the strength of the nation's 13th-ranked team, approached his offensive mates at halftime Saturday with a special request.

Aggies defenders, the nose guard noted, were wearing down in the heat against Baylor's tag-team tailbacks and 300-pound linemen. He offered a proposition.

"I told them, 'We're leaning on you. Y'all keep us in it and we'll finish them off,'" Teichelman said after the A&M offense scored on five of its last six possessions to salt away a 34-17 victory. "They carried the defense this game, without a doubt."

In doing so, A&M's oft-maligned attack cleared the way for the Aggies' probable return to a third consecutive Mobil Cotton Bowl. No one in the A&M locker room declared the SWC race over after the Aggies won their 18th consecutive SWC contest in front of 43,716 at Floyd Casey Stadium.

But Baylor coach Chuck Reedy acknowledged the obvious after A&M (5-1, 3-0) controlled the second half and opened a two-game lead on Baylor (4-3, 2-2), the league runner-up the past two seasons.

"I thought we had the best shot of anybody in the league to beat them," Reedy said.

Baylor failed, largely because the Bears could not stop quarterback Corey Pullig (21 of 28, 230 yards) or stop A&M's three-headed tailback tandem of Rodney Thomas, Greg Hill and Leeland McElroy (38 carries, 169 yards, two touchdowns). In 10 possessions, the Aggies punted just once, had no drive shorter than 14 yards (that one produced a field goal) and averaged 41 yards and 4.5 points per drive the last six times they touched the ball.

A&M's only non-scoring drive of the second half ended in Hill's lost fumble at the Baylor 19-yard line.

"I hope our kids finally get some credit for what we're doing. We're part of this thing, too," said A&M offensive coordinator Bob Toledo, who watched his troops roll for 405 yards and crank out more passing yards than rushing yards for the first time in Pullig's 11 games as a starter.

The Aggies needed that kind of production because Baylor roughed up an A&M team ranked fourth nationally in total defense. Bears quarterback J.J. Joe threw for 170 yards and a touchdown, Baylor rushers ground out 178 more, and the Bears averaged 5.6 yards per snap — even more than A&M (5.5).

But, after battling to a 10-10 tie at intermission, the Bears were stopped on downs twice and lost a fumble at their own 30-yard line in the second half. The fumble — which bounded away from John Henry (eight carries, 66 yards, one TD) and into the arms of A&M strong safety Michael Hendricks on the second play of the third quarter — set up A&M's tie-breaking touchdown.

A&M never trailed again. But a 20-17 lead appeared in jeopardy until Pullig eluded a pass rush, waved receiver Brian Mitchell downfield and lofted a 30-yard strike to move the ball to the Bears' 14-yard line. Five plays later, Pullig found fullback Cliff Groce alone in the back of the end zone for a 27-17 lead.

Baylor, Pullig said, never stopped crowding the line to stuff the Aggies' ground game. Pullig, in turn, never stopped finding his receivers on short and intermediate routes. He connected nine times with his wide receivers, although none covered more than 30 yards. Nine more passes went to running backs, including two touchdowns — a 4-yarder to Groce and a 9-yarder to Hill.

"I'm glad when people want me to prove them wrong," Pullig said of Baylor's defensive strategy. "That's something you've got to do when you get the chance."

A&M coach R.C. Slocum termed Saturday's effort Pullig's best as a starter. He praised the offensive line, which surrendered two sacks but regularly allowed Pullig four to five seconds to spot receivers. The Aggies, Slocum said, proved they could win with the pass.

"We'll never throw 50 and complete 40, but we made some good plays in the passing game. We took advantage and hit the short stuff," Slocum said. "We've got the plays. Now, we're starting to execute those plays."

Just in time for the SWC stretch run. Provided, of course, that the Aggies find someone to run with them in the next six weeks.

Loughran wins welterweight title

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Eamonn Loughran won the vacant WBO welterweight title Saturday night with a unanimous decision over Lorenzo Smith.

Loughran, from nearby Ballymena, was the more aggressive fighter throughout the 12 rounds. Smith, fighting on three days' notice, used his lanky frame to elude the Irishman while connecting with his long jab when his opponent moved close.

Loughran, the Commonwealth champion, began to find his mark in the fourth, landing a long right to the side of Smith's head. The 23-year-old Irishman turned up the pace in the fifth and appeared in control the rest of the bout.

Loughran caught Smith's temple with a left in the final round, and in the following skirmish reopened a cut on the side of the Chicago native's right eye.

Although Loughran was unable to finish off Smith before the final bell, the judges were decisive. John Rupert of the United States scored it 118-110, Tomas Vazquez of Puerto Rico 116-112 and Cormello Stucchi of the Dominican Republic had it 117-112.

Loughran improved his record to 22-1-1 with 14 knockouts. Smith fell to 23-2-1 with 11 KOs.

Smith, 26, was fighting as a last-minute substitute for Gert Bo Jacobsen, the Danish boxer who abandoned the title Tuesday after a prolonged bout with the flu.

Dehere emerges as Derby favorite

N.Y. Times News Service

ELMONT, N.Y. — On New York's most glamorous day of racing this season, three weeks before the Breeders' Cup series, the juvenile colt Dehere won the Champagne Stakes by four lengths Saturday at Belmont Park and established himself as the early but absolute favorite for next year's Kentucky Derby.

The 2-year-old prodigy, winning for the fifth time in six starts, outran Crary with a brilliant performance that blew the race wide open as he shot the mile in 1:35 4/5 and paid just $2.60 as the day's premier favorite at 1-5.

He also put an end to a record-breaking winning streak fashioned by Shug McGaughey, the trainer, who saddled four winners in four straight stakes races plus another in an allowance race earlier in the day. McGaughey won with Strolling Along, Heavenly Prize (beating the undefeated Strategic Maneuver), Dispute and Lure. But the streak — a one-day record in New York — ended when his juvenile colt Personal Escort ran fifth while Dehere was blitzing the field in the Champagne.

This was the second Super Saturday of Belmont's autumn and it was staged on a mild afternoon with more than 50 accomplished horses from four countries, just three weeks before the $10 million Breeders' Cup series at Santa Anita.

It opened with a bang when Lonesome Glory won the Steeplechase by more than eight lengths and became the first winner in the Cup series. But then came the "preview" races, and the remarkable run of success for McGaughey and the family of Ogden Phipps, one of the longtime pillars of New York racing.

They warmed up by winning the second race of the afternoon, a $28,00 allowance, with their 3-year-old filly Regal Solution, with M ke Smith riding.

Horse racers ready for today's Breeder's Cup

NEW YORK (AP) — Trainer Shug McGaughey's cup runneth over on Breeders' Cup Preview Day at Belmont Park on Saturday.

McGaughey trained the winner in five of the six stakes races on the program.

■ Breeder's Cup

His day was capped when longsot Miner's Mark held off Belmont Stakes winner Colonial Affair after a furious stretch duel for a half-length victory in the $850,000 Jockey Club Gold Cup.

"It will take me awhile for this to sink in," said McGaughey, who also won three stakes on Kentucky Derby Day at Churchill Downs.

McGaughey was denied Saturday only when Personal Escort finished fifth in the Champagne for 2-year-old colts, won by Dehere.

McGaughey's others winners were Heavenly Prize in the Frizette for 2-year-old fillies, Dispute in the Beldame for fillies and mares, Lure in the Kelso Handicap on the turf and Strolling Along in the Lawrence Realization, also on the turf.

For good measure, McGaughey also saddled a winner of a non-stakes race.

Miner's Mark, ridden by Chris McCarron, was second, never farther than a half-length behind pace-setting Diazo for the first mile of the 1¼-mile race.

In the stretch, Miner's Mark shot into the lead with about an eighth of a mile left and looked to be the winner. Colonial Affair then charged up on the inside and the duo fought head-to-head to the wire.

"Frankly, I didn't know who won," McGaughey said.

"I thought he had won it," McCarron said. "He runs with his head low and in tight photos it is an advantage to a horse."

Miner's Mark caried 121 pounds, was clocked in 2:02 3-5 and paid $18.80. Brunswick finished third and was followed by Devil His Due and Diazo.

Dehere, second by a half-length on a very sloppy track Sept. 18 at Belmont, ran away from five rivals in winning the one-mile Champagne on a fast track.

Taking the lead shortly after the turn for home, Dehere, ridden by McCarron, beat Crary by four lengths, wth Amathos another three-quarters of a length back. Dehere, $2.60, carried scale weight of 122 pounds home in 1:35 4-5 for his fifth win, fourth in a stakes, in six starts.

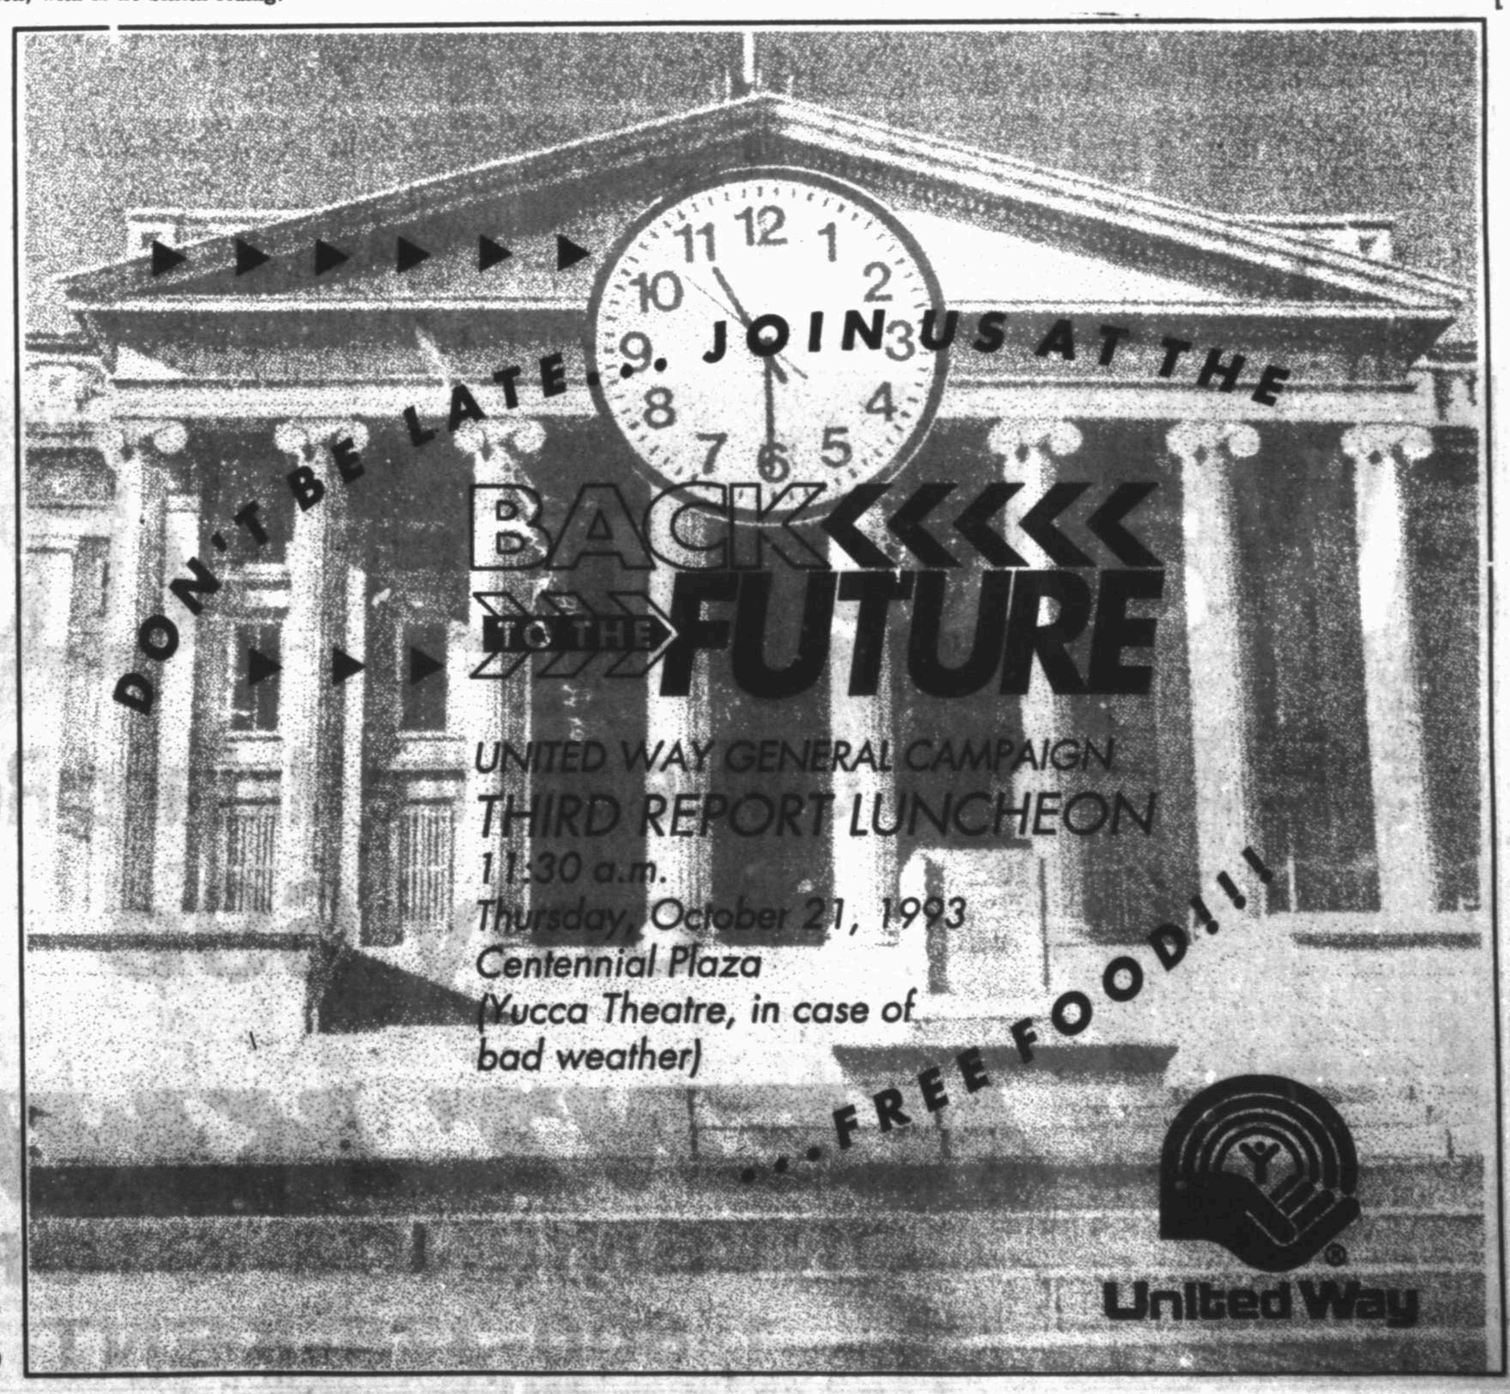

Perhaps a bigger surprise than Heavenly Prize's victory in the Frizette was Strategic Maneuver's poor perforamcne in her first loss in five races. She finished sixth.

Heavenly Prize, who preceded her Frizette start by winning a maiden race by nine lengths Sept. 15, took the lead at the top of the stretch and won by seven lengths over Facts of Love. Pace-setting Footing finished third.

Ridden by Mike Smith, Heavenly Prize paid $6.80 after completing the mile in a stakes-equaling 1:35 2-5 under scale weight of 119 pounds on a fast track.

The 3-year-old filly Dispute, ridden by Jerry Bailey, won her fourth stakes of the year with a big stretch run that carried her to a 1¾-length victory over Shared Interest in the 1⅛-mile Beldame. Vivano was third.

Dispute, $4.80, carried 119 pounds home in 1:47 1-5.

Blue Jays, Phillies know each other well

By Blaire Smith
N.Y. Times News Service

TORONTO — In some cases, familiarity may breed contempt. In the case of the first-ever World Series between the Philadelphia Phillies and the Toronto Blue Jays, all it will breed is comfort.

Comfort that both teams would enter Game 1 Saturday night with more than passable knowledge of each other. Comfort that aside from one notable late-season ringer added to the cast (Rickey Henderson), there should be few surprises.

■ Analysis

The reason is clear. Year after year, exhibition season after exhibition season, the Jays and the Phillies have resided in Dunedin and Clearwater, Fla., respectively, two communities buttressing each other west of Tampa. "And we play each other a lot," Duane Ward, the Toronto closer, said laughing. "Too many times."

Because their ball parks are 10 minutes away on the worst traffic day. Because Cito Gaston, the Jays' manager, and Jim Fregosi, the Phillies' manager, like their predecessors, have never hesitated about scheduling unofficial "B" games before heading North. "I bet we saw each other 12, 14 times, easy," said Ward.

Those sessions in February and March were for getting in shape, working on some things, stretching out arms and leg muscles and building endurance. Now, seven months later, they meet again. But this time there's more at stake than the annual spring rite to decide the Battle of Pinellas County.

Now they meet in the World Series, the Courtney Campbell Causeway Series, if you will, in honor of the over-water passage that links Tampa to the spring-training homes of the two teams.

And, said Ward: "I don't think there are going to be too many surprises. We watched their playoff series, and I'm sure they watched our series. And I know from spring that everyone of us has a lot of respect for their ball club."

And not only is there a noticeable lack of contempt, but there is also no animosity. These guys like one another. Close proximity, again, is a factor.

Roberto Alomar, the quiet, circumspect second baseman for the Blue Jays, and Lenny Dykstra, the life-on-the-edge center fielder for the Phillies, may not share a lot of interests.

"I went out with Darren Daulton, Pete Incaviglia, Dave Hollins, for lunch or a beer or something," Ward recalled. "There's a fraternity in baseball: once a ballplayer, always a ballplayer. And I think you're welcome in everybody's circle, whether it's on your team or somebody else's team. They're just fellow ballplayers."

"Wardo — my old buddy, Wardo," Daulton said, a reference to the Jays reliever prompting an instant smile of recognition. "He's a good dude, a good buddy. He drinks the same kind of beer I do."

The spring odyssey, of course, is about baseball, too. It is also about taking notes, filing things away. Things that, who knows, might come in handy one day.

Said Toronto reliever and ex-Phillie Danny Cox: "It's a long time since we've played them, but I can kind of fall back on watching them hit, pitching against them in the past. But, remember, you still have to go out there and do the things it takes to get them out."

Daulton agreed. "I think for the most part you're going on tendencies, again, and you are more familiar with them more so than another American League team you might not get to see," he said. "We were able to see them a lot, and have every year, because we're right next door to them. So it helps as far as tendencies. But still, that seems long ago."

It was not so long ago that impressions made in March wore off. Not off the Blue Jays, that's for sure. Not after the Phillies, in four "A" games last spring, won, 9-7, 10-1, 1-0, and 8-6.

The steady tattooing in the official Grapefruit League games stuck with Gaston, to be sure. "On the last day of spring training, I picked the Phillies, and everybody looked at me like I was crazy," the Jays manager said.

SERIES: Blue Jays take 1-0 lead

From 1B

Toronto, bidding to become the first World Series champion to repeat since the 1977-78 New York Yankees, will try to make it two in a row Sunday night when playoff MVP Dave Stewart pitches against left-handed Terry Mulholland. The Blue Jays were only 22-25 in regular-season games started by lefties.

"They're a very tough lineup to pitch to," Phillies manager Jim Fregosi said. 'They've got three switch-hitters. You've got to make good pitches to them and if you don't, you get hit."

On a night when both starters were shaky, the bullpens helped decide the game.

Al Leiter was the winner in relief of Juan Guzman with 2 2-3 scoreless innings. He made the big pitch, striking out Kruk with the bases loaded to end the sixth with the score 4-all. Kruk twirled his bat and tossed his helmet toward the dugout in disgust.

"It was a little nerve-wracking. It was tense," Leiter said. "There were a couple of times I was playing mind games, trying to pretend I was in Clearwater in a spring training game."

Duane Ward fanned Mariano Duncan with two on the finish the eighth, and struck out two while allowing an unearned run in the ninth for a save.

Curt Schilling, the NL's playoff MVP despite no wins, was the loser. He gave up seven runs, although three came on an RBI double by White and a two-run double by Alomar off David West.

West, a left-hander, was brought in to turn around the switch-hitting White and Alomar. It didn't work.

"A lot of people have mentioned that lefties are tough on us," White said. "I think it's because there are some tough lefties in our league, and there aren't that many left-handers in general.

"Rickey (Henderson) leading off, me batting second, Alomar and on down the line to Pat Borders batting ninth. All of us are pretty tough outs," White said. "It's more than the best lineup I've played on."

True to form, Dykstra, Kruk and the Phillies got dirty. Dykstra stole a base and Duncan slid home head-first to score on a wild pitch. Kruk had three hits, drove in two runs and scored twice.

But Olerud, who led the AL in batting and had three hits in the playoff opener, neatly lined a first-pitch shot into the right-field stands with one out in the sixth for a 5-4 lead. Schilling left after allowing two singles in the seventh, and White and Alomar followed with doubles into the left-field corner that allowed them to trot easily into second.

The Blue Jays won with apparent ease after the Phillies took it to them in spring training. Philadelphia was 4-0 against Toronto in exhibition games.

Both teams looked jumpy at the beginning.

Guzman walked Dykstra to start the game. Dykstra stole second and Kruk, after fouling off three two-strike pitches, lined an RBI single.

Manager Cito Gaston visited Guzman during the middle of another walk to the next batter. Darren Daulton followed with a single so sharp that the crowd of 52,011 at SkyDome actually went "oooohhh," with one run scoring as right fielder Joe Carter was fumbling the ball for an error.

Schilling, who also walked his first batter of the game, gave up two runs on four singles in the second inning. Paul Molitor drove in one run with an infield hit that Duncan could only knock down — platoon second baseman Mickey Morandini might have made the play — and another scored on a forceout by Tony Fernandez to tie it at 2.

Duncan, in the game for offense more than defense, singled to start the third and stole second. Kruk fouled off a 96 mph fastball on a full count before hitting another RBI single.

■ More Sports/11C

The Blue Jays made it 3-all in the third with help from the Phillies, and perhaps the fans. White sliced a drive to left-center that center fielder Dykstra and let fielder Milt Thompson both called for, but they didn't hear each other. They nearly collided and the ball glanced off Thompson's glove for a three-base error, and Carter then hit a sacrifice fly.

Philadelphia went ahead for the third time on a triple by Duncan and a wild pitch. Guzman set an AL record with 26 wild pitches during the season, many of them on his hard slider in the dirt, and tied a playoff mark with three wild pitches in Game 1.

White's solo home run in the fifth tied it at 4.

Alomar got cheers for a diving catch on Dykstra's looper in the fifth and for stopping an infield hit in the sixth that kept the bases loaded, bringing up Kruk for his key at-bat.

"Of the postseason and World Series, this was my best night," Alomar said.

Former 'husker, four others die in plane crash

STUART, Neb. (AP) — Former Nebraska tight end Jerry List and his wife, Susan, were among five people killed in a single-engine airplane crash near this northern Nebraska community.

List played in 1970-72 and was a member of two national championship teams, 1970-71. List had 61 career catches for 901 yards and five touchdowns. List and his wife were 43.

Also killed were George Medlock and Medlock's wife, Jacqueline, the Holt County Sheriff's office said. Medlock was the president of First National Bank of Valentine and List was vice president, NU officials said.

Garden was tribute to Texas

An aerial photograph taken in 1960 shows a group of trees planted in the shape of Texas. Midkiff Road, which runs south-north, is left to right under the depiction of the state.

■ Late Midlander Wiley W. Walls planted hundreds of Chinese elms in the shape of the Lone Star state.

Wiley W. Walls thought big — like the state of Texas — when he set out to plant in a dry, desolate piece of property he owned off Midkiff Road.

It was the mid-1940s and nature had long decided Midland was mesquite country.

But Walls, who had recently retired from running a laundry on Loraine Street, had plenty of time to rework his piece of the semi-dry plains.

Walls, transplanted to West Texas from Walla Walla, Wash., may have longed for the robust greenery of his former home in "the Evergreen State."

But Texas was home now.

"He was just a Texas nut," said Fred Prickett, a grandson of Walls.

That became evident in his garden. He planted hundreds of Chinese elms in the shape of Texas that covered about half of a five-acre plot.

An engineer relative advised Walls on how to draw the state.

"I helped him lay it out and plant the trees, too," said his grandson, who was a young teen at the time.

"I remember very, very fondly," Prickett said. "I was the only Texas-born grandson and (therefore) I had a little more statute than the other grandsons."

Walls' tribute to Texas also included raising the Texas flag daily. And near where Galveston would be, Walls dumped several bushels of shells from a visit to that city.

He later filled the outlined state with several varieties of trees.

Those familiar with the site identify several fruit trees including pear, plum, peach, apricot and jujube. Other trees include sugar maple, pecan, Arizona cypress, pine, mulberry, ash and according to one source, "the biggest silver maple in this part of the country."

"It was quite a site from the air back then," Prickett said.

And from the ground "it was really a haven for wildlife and kids, and he (Walls) really

Prados appreciate Y's after-school program

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the fourth in a series about individuals who have been assisted by United Way agencies.

By Lana Cunningham

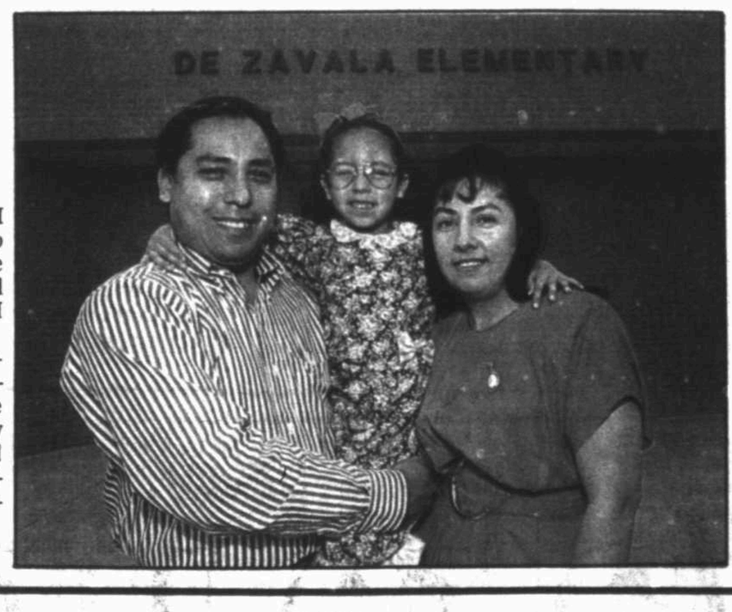

Roberto Prado used to give to United Way when he was an employee of Midland Indenpedent School District. His wife, Elena, used to give when she worked at a petroleum company.

They never dreamed they would one day be a recipient of United Way services. But the Prados, working out some financial difficulties, find themselves on the receiving end today.

"I never did think that one day I would need United Way," Mrs. Prado said. "I always thought other people would need it. I never thought it would some day come back to me, that I would need in the future."

The Prados were looking for after-school care for their daughter, Kimberly, who is in kindergarten at De Zavala Elementary School. They needed something they could afford and that Kimberly would enjoy. YMCA's Prime Time After-School program was the answer.

Please see YMCA/2C

Roberto and Elena Prado are thankful to the YMCA and the United Way of Midland that their daughter Kimberly has found an after-school program she enjoys.

GARY OTT

It's sad when childhood dreams are unfulfilled

When I picked up the telephone the other evening, the woman asked, "Are you the person who writes for the newspaper?"

I groaned, considered lying and then said, "Uh, well, uh, yeah, I suppose so."

"Good," she said. "You need to write about dreams."

I took a deep breath, stared out the window and said, "What dreams?"

"The kind we have as children but never fulfill as adults."

Ott

Not bad, I thought. So I asked her to continue.

"When I was a little girl," she said, "I always wanted to be in the movies. I would spend hours in the theater watching all the great actresses . . . Rita Hayworth, Joan Crawford, Betty Grable, Vivien Leigh." Then she hestitated and said, "You're probably too young to remember them."

I laughed and said I'd heard of them.

"Back then we didn't have television," she said, "so the movies were our only form of entertainment. And they were wonderful productions, not like the filth you see today. Everything was bigger than life, almost like a make-believe world. The men were handsome, the women were beautiful. And the clothes? Oh, you can't imagine."

I smiled to myself. "So, you dreamed of someday becoming one of those actresses?"

"Oh, my, yes," she said. "Of course, all little girls did. It was normal. Like I say, we didn't have TV back then. It was just the movies and our imaginations."

A person could do worse, I suggested.

She agreed and resumed her story. "I think I wanted to be in the movies more than the other girls. It was all I could think about. I would read every article I could find about them. I even kept scrapbooks. The movies became my whole life.

"I would memorize the lines and when I was all alone in my bedroom I would act out my favorite scenes. In my mind I would be Vivien Leigh and my co-star would be Clark Gable, just like in 'Gone With The Wind.'"

I laughed.

"I sound like a crazy old lady, don't I?" she said.

Not at all, I said.

"It's just that every once in awhile I start remembering my childhood and the memories return. In a way it makes me real sad. Those were such happy times for me. Yet, when I think back on them I feel kind of foolish, like I wasted all of those dreams on something that never had a chance of coming true."

Childhood dreams are normal, I said. It's always a little sad when we realize they won't come true.

There was a brief pause.

"Do you think children still have dreams like that?" she asked.

I told her she was asking the wrong person, seeing as how I didn't have any kids, but I sorta doubted Vivien Leigh and Clark Gable were popular subjects these days.

She laughed.

"In a way, I hope they do," she said, "but, at the same time, it might be better if their expectations are more realistic. That way, they won't end up like me . . . an old woman looking back on unfulfilled dreams."

I disagreed, and told her so. "You don't sound unhappy to me," I said.

She thought about it for a moment and concurred. "I guess not. But sometimes I get sad, especially when I look through one of my scrapbooks. That's what I was doing when I called you."

You still have your scrapbooks?

"A couple," she said. "I've started to throw them away many times, but there are too many memories in them. They contain a part of my childhood."

What's your name? I asked.

"It doesn't matter," she said. "Just consider me an old woman who still loves to dream."

YMCA: Couple hopes to be able to repay United Way

(From 1C)

Cost for the program is $25 a week. But after the Prados filled out some forms, they were told Kimberly could attend on a full scholarship. "Twenty-five dollars a week at this time is a lot of money," Prado said.

But more than the financial assistance, Kimberly has found a place she enjoys. The Prados said Kimberly did not enjoy the day-care center she attended last year after her pre-kindergarten class.

The YMCA Prime Time program is part of the on-site after-school programs that were started three years ago as a result of a Midland Introspective Child Care Task Force. A needs-assessment survey had indicated many children were going home to empty houses after school due to their parents working.

The after-school on-site programs were started in two elementary schools the first year, with YMCA and Camp Fire each taking a school. Today, the program is found in 13 elementary schools, including De Zavala.

When school ends, the YMCA staff take the children to the gymnasium for supervised activities until the parents pick them up. There they have plenty of room to run and unwind after a day in the classroom. But, the children also get help with their homework, and the YMCA has organized activities for each age group. They also are given a nutritional snack, such as fresh fruit. "They don't have to take the kids out of the school and bus them. It's so convenient," Mrs. Prado said.

As the Prados talked bout the program, they admitted they always get excited.

Kimberly doesn't adjust easily to new schools or new teachers, the couple said. They were surprised, then, when they picked her up and she told the YMCA teacher, "I'll see you tomorrow."

The Prados said that Kimberly enjoys the program so much she now wants to go to school on the weekends.

"They help develop skills in these kids — how to share and how to get along with other people," Prado said. "The whole concept the Y has put together brings a lot of good things to the family and to the community. We really need programs like the YMCA."

"The teachers are real, real nice," added Mrs. Prado. "They're updated on each individual child. When I go in, if they're playing a game, I have to wait until it's done."

These games, she explained, are learning exercises and involve matching numbers or letters on a card. "And when I'm late picking her up, they're always nice to me . . . just like we're neighbors."

The YMCA also takes the children swimming once a week. Kimberly had always been afraid of the water, but she came home that first day and said, "Mom, I went swimming today and I didn't even cry."

"I'm extremely happy and grateful to them (the YMCA staff). They've opened her mind and her ability. She can do things on her own. She had always said she was scared," Mrs. Prado said.

Money for the YMCA to set up the program came from local people, said Prado, who with his wife is now working in home health care.

"I'm a firm believer in the United Way," he said. "Anytime you give something for your local group, you never know when you might need them. The little we make we try to put into our town. By giving to United Way and by having input, we're helping families who are going through a financial hardship. I thank the United Way and all the staff of the YMCA for being there for me," he added.

When the Prados reach better financial ground and are re-evaluated by the YMCA for the scholarship program, Prado said, "I expect to begin paying. One day, when we get back on our feet, we'll be able to give back financially."

Again.

White supremacists march through Vidor

VIDOR (AP) — About 25 members of a white supremacist group marched through town Saturday in what they called a "celebration" of the town's failed efforts to integrate a public housing project.

Several hundred people gathered along the town's streets to watch the group march to City Hall. Some cheered and others heckled the marchers, but there were no reports of violence.

"It's been real quiet. We' haven't had any problems," said Richard Vasser, a Texas Department of Public Safety spokesman.

The afternoon march and rally, opposed by city officials, was sponsored by the Nationalist Movement, based in Learned, Miss.

Nationalist Movement leaders said they wanted to hold a victory parade in this East Texas town, whose last black residents moved away recently complaining of racial harassment.

Organization officials had estimated they would have anywhere from 50 to 5,000 participants. But the marchers were easily outnumbered by reporters and photographers.

The group walked through side streets and then along Main Street to City Hall where local officials had covered the building's letters with black plastic.

"I hope my coming here advances freedom, justice and equality in Texas, Vidor and this country, where there are favors for neither high nor low or rich or poor — just justice, majority rule, democracy," said Nationalist Movement leader Richard Barrett, who led the march.

About 300 people gathered along the streets to watch the march that began at 1 p.m. But about an hour later, the crowd dwindled to less than half its original size. The rally lasted about an hour and 15 minutes.

Six new members were sworn in during the rally, which seemed disorganized. One speaker assigned to deliver the pledge of allegiance did not know the words, and when Barrett called for the playing of the Star-Spangled Banner, a recording of the pledge of allegiance came on.

The events were held after Vidor city officials had sought to deny the parade permit.

A federal judge, however, ruled earlier in the week that the group had a First Amendment right to march in the town about 100 miles east of Houston. U.S. District Judge Richard Schell also found the ordinance that required a parade permit to be too broad and vague.

Four black families moved out of the Vidor public housing apartments this year because they said racial harassment was intolerable.

At least five Ku Klux Klan rallies have been held in recent years in Orange County, which includes Vidor, to protest U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice's order to integrate Vidor's housing project.

TREES: Pilots used garden as landmark encouraged kids to come," he said.

(From 1C)

Virginia Pickett, a neighbor of Walls in the late 1950s and early 1960s, recalled her son, Robert, helping Walls water the trees from a windmill water well.

"(Midlanders) thought it was great and the airline pilots used that as a landmark," she said.

Some old-timers said Walls offered to donate the property to the city, which declined because of a lack of manpower to upkeep it as a park.

'It's one of the few natural areas that we have now that perpetuates itself.'

— Midge Erskine

In the early 1960s, Walls, in his early 80s, built a house, among the trees, with stones from the old Midland County courthouse.

Today the house still stands, which Prickett, who resides in Bryan, leases out.

The "trees of Texas," as they are commonly referred, have either grown considerably or died. Aerial maps of the city — from the 1960s to the 1980s — show the tree patch become overgrown and the shape of the Lone Star state diminish.

"In order to see it today (from the air), you have to see it when the leaves are not on the trees," said Midge Erskine, who has a bird sanctuary nearby.

"It's a very interesting piece of property. There are some really unique growth there," she said. "It's one of the few natural areas that we have now that perpetuates itself."

The trees still garner attention, even by those not aware of Walls' creation. Some Midland youngsters call the area the "woods" or the "forest."

Walls, who died in 1966, probably would have been happy to know some of trees survive today.

"The day he died he was watering some verbena plants and my mother walked out and he was on the ground with the water hose still in his hands," Prickett said.

Members of Seguin gangs forge truce

AUSTIN (AP) — A truce among gang members in Seguin has lowered crime and waged a new understanding between once-violent youths and authorities, city officials say.

Frequent drive-by shootings and assaults in the city, about 50 miles south of Austin, have been replaced with activities such as a basketball game between police and gang members and workshops to curb gang violence.

"We never dreamed it would turn out this well," said Maribeth Powers, chief juvenile probation officer for Guadalupe County. "I didn't think the gangs would break up."

Seguin's three largest rival gangs agreed to an anti-violence pact April 16, shortly after one teen-ager was shot and killed in a gang dispute.

"Before we signed this peace treaty thing, we were constantly looking over our shoulders," one former gang leader, a senior in high school, told the Austin American-Statesmen.

"After we signed the treaty, we just got bored. There was nothing to do. We weren't fighting. We weren't throwing signs. We weren't saving our colors. We just broke it up."

Ms. Powers, who also is co-chairwoman of the Seguin Gang Task Force, said that while drive-by shootings and other crimes have decreased dramatically, there are new gangs popping up that need to be addressed.

"I would not want the public to think the problem is solved," Ms. Powers said. "We do have the emergence of other gangs."

The truce and ensuing attempts to stop gang warfare have led to several projects in the city of about 18,800 people.

The Hispanic Chamber of Commerce has donated $500 to the former gang members to paint a mural in the city, and some of the youths have already submitted sketches and ideas.

A new educational center for students, many of whom are in or have been in gangs, is set to open in the next few months.

The school district and City Council are working together to hire a youth activities director to help provide projects to keep area teens occupied.

Hector Berrera, the Seguin High School counselor who first brought rival gang members to the negotiating table, said the support of residents has been helpful.

"The agreement has been successful to the point where other communities are coming to us for answers," Berrera said. "Every community has all the resources to solve those problems."

Visions For Progress 1994

1993 will likely reflect both good and bad for the Permian Basin Petroleum Industry. The good news is that natural gas prices are respectable and the demand for gas is expected to be at the highest level since 1979. The bad news is that Texas oil production is at an alarming low and if the trend continues, 1993 will mark the lowest year for Texas oil production in 50 years.

There is a "Vision for Progress," however, in the Department of Energy's various initiatives to assist the domestic industry in its recovery efforts. We believe there are still many opportunities for industry expansion in 1994 and the PBPA looks forward to participating in all efforts which will revitalize the Permian Basin Petroleum Industry.

Please make early reservations so that we may better serve you.

River takes polluted journey to gulf

Associated Press

HOUSTON — The Rio Grande, stretching 1,885 miles and dividing two countries, has been a powerful magnet for human settlement for thousands of years.

But civilization has brought contamination, and the river has become so polluted along the border that Texas officials have warned against venturing into the water, the Houston Chronicle reported in a series of articles in today's editions.

The Rio Grande — which drains 355,500 square miles in Colorado, New Mexico, Texas and Mexico — is the second-longest river in North America, surpassed only by the Mississippi.

It begins in a rugged mountain valley more than two miles high in Colorado and heads south. It weaves its way through Colorado and New Mexico before reaching El Paso to begin its long run as the border between the United States and Mexico.

During its journey to the Gulf of Mexico, it often becomes a dumping site.

Along the river in New Mexico, northern Pueblo Indians are finding radioactive tailings left by the scientists who built the first atomic bomb at Los Alamos in the 1940s.

Along the river between Texas and Mexico, small farmers, big ranchers, people, rich and poor, who live near the water, worry that raw sewage, factory discharges and agricultural chemicals — mainly from the Mexican side — have turned the Rio Grande into a poisonous cesspool.

Texas water officials, in a November 1992 report on water quality, warned against swimming and other water sports because of high levels of human waste.

Rio Grande begins in a rugged mountain valley more than two miles high in Colorado and heads south. It weaves its way through Colorado and New Mexico before reaching El Paso to begin its long run as the border between the United States and Mexico. During its journey to the Gulf of Mexico, it often becomes a dumping site.

The river becomes an international border in El Paso at a point wedged between two brick factories and the smokestack of a copper smelting plant.

Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, which has tripled in size to 1.5 million people in 20 years because of the growth of U.S.-owned factories there, sprawls on the barren hills along the river.

After passing through the border towns, it surges into Amistad Reservoir near Del Rio heavy with sediment, riddled with industrial toxins and tinged with urban sewage.

But the river exits the lake as pure as any body of water in Texas, its contamination eaten away or settled to the depths of Amistad.

In the decades since the lake was created, it has served both as an important means of cleansing the river and as a playland shared by people on both sides of the border.

Below a dam at the eastern end of the reservoir, the river emerges between banks thick with grass and cattails.

Further down the river, at Laredo, the Rio Grande's hazy green waters churn and ripple beneath a trio of bridges. At the water's edge, a small city park attracts lunchtime visitors.

The same stretch of river is fouled by 25 million gallons of raw sewage that spews daily from dozens of locations on the Mexican side. The sewage makes the portion of the river below downtown Laredo the most polluted on the Rio Grande.

In Nuevo Laredo, Mexico, across from Laredo, Dahlia Pena Losa and her neighbors live on a quiet street in a clean, middle-class working neighborhood.

The neighborhood would be ideal for the residents if it weren't for the nearby trash-filled lagoon.

The lagoon, filled with abandoned furniture and rotting carcasses of domestic animals, spreads across 40 acres. It is fed by a large pipe that drains raw sewage and other wastewater from the area. The dark waters seep into the Rio Grande a block away.

"My youngest, because of this atmosphere, is always sniffling like he can't breathe," she says.

About 120 miles downriver, in Reynosa, just across the border from McAllen, sits a large group of grey sewage ponds.

River water fouled by sewage from Reynosa is the same water used by farmers for irrigation.

The Rio Grande, nearing journey's end, streams past Brownsville, then bends and winds until it arrives at an empty expanse of salty tidal flats.

The river born of a virgin snowpack, replenished by valley rains and other creeks and rivers, finally pours into the Gulf of Mexico.

Chairman predicts Tandy to triple in size by 1998

FORT WORTH (AP) — Tandy Corp.'s top executive has predicted that the consumer electronics retailer will triple in size to a $12 billion company over the next five years.

Tandy Chairman John Roach also projected that his company's share of the U.S. retail market for consumer electronics and personal computers will triple to 15 percent by 1998.

"It will take substantial investment to execute our strategy," Roach said at Tandy's annual shareholders meeting Friday. "But the reality is that if you put the building blocks together, it is something that is attainable."

Roach said he is counting on aggressive expansion of the company's emerging Computer City and Incredible Universe formats to drive much of the company's growth.

Additional revenues may also come from the company's flagship Radio Shack chain as it tries to reposition itself as a provider of consumer electronics services, such as brand-name product repair, he said.

Even so, Roach said fiscal third-quarter results, to be released this month, will be relatively flat compared with the same period a year ago.

Projections of long-term, fast-paced growth are relatively new for Tandy, which has recorded relatively flat financial results in recent years, said Lise Buyer, an analyst with T. Rowe Price in Baltimore.

Dehydration plant to turn produce into meals for poor

Associated Press

LUBBOCK — A new idea to feed the poor has sprouted in the fields of West Texas farmers.

On Friday, food experts from across the country joined hundreds of residents at the opening of what may be the world's first nonprofit dehydration plant. The facility is expected to produce 20 million meals a year for 3.5 cents a meal when it begins operating next fall.

Two years ago, leftover rations of dehydrated food from Kuwait were sent to the South Plains Food Bank.

The delivery of the food put into motion an idea that would grow to include efforts by the food bank and countless West Texans to help in the fight to feed America's poor.

Reports say West Texas farmers waste up to 60 million tons of food a year, with most of it rotting before it can be distributed by social service agencies.

Food bank director Carolyn Lanier envisioned the surplus vegetables being dried, packaged and distributed around the world.

"If we operate just one shift a day for eight hours," Ms. Lanier said, "every day we'll feed enough people to fill the (Texas) Rangers' stadium. And if the produce is out there the way they say it is, we can run three shifts a day."

Friday's opening included a taste test of the dehydrated fare.

Reviews were good.

"Was that dehydrated food?" asked Robert Johnson, 57. "It wasn't any different. It was seasoned real good, and I got full real quick."

The dehydration plant is expected to cost $6.7 million, and most of the money has been raised. Operating costs are estimated at $640,000 a year.

Innovative Foods Inc., of South San Francisco, a for-profit dehydrating company that produced 4 million pounds of green beans for the war in Kuwait, has provided free technical assistance.

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

College employees get 'grubby'

By H.A. Tuck

If you see a lot of rumpled, unkempt MC employees the next couple of weeks, it could be they have a license for that appearance. As one of the college's fund-raising efforts for the Midland United Way this fall, employees can purchase daily or weekly "Grubby Daze" permits.

Tuck

The cost is $2 a day or a bargain $14 for eight days from Oct. 18-21 and Oct. 25-28 (the college has a policy of casual dress on Fridays, so there's no charge for that day).

Another United Way effort is a Silent Auction on Wednesday, Oct. 27, from 9 a.m.-3 p.m. that included donated items from MC employees. Some, such as reserved parking spaces for a month, are of value only to those who work at MC.

Others are valuable to anyone; items such as a Warren Taylor watercolor; three Kids' College class enrollments; honorary coach for the MC-Cisco basketball game (doesn't have to be an adult), execution of a simple will by an attorney, business planning by a CPA, pottery, an airplane ride, labor for a car tune-up, Rob Hunt's piano playing for a two-hour function, even a gourmet meal provided by Charles and Peggy Simmons.

It should be a fun event, and a good fund-raiser for the United Way.

Tuesday's calendar has events both early and late. Starting at 7:30 a.m. is the monthly breakfast especially for minority-owned and small businesses. This takes place in the Roadrunner Room, Student Center. The cost is $5 per person, payable at the door.

The MC Board of Trustees conducts its monthly meeting at 4 p.m. Tuesday in the Board Room, located in the Administration Building.

One of the new sports making its way across the country is "disk golf", played using plastic disks which you can't call by their usual name since it's patented.

Players attempt to throw disks of various sizes, depending up distance and accuracy needed, ending each hole with their disk captured in a hanging target basket.

You are invited to watch a free demonstration of this new sport on Wednesday at noon at Beal Plaza, just south of the Student Center.

Conventional golf also is on the calendar, with the powerful Chaparral golf team playing Tuesday in the University of Texas at Austin invitational, a one-day, 18-hole event. Then the team treks to Bossier City, La., for the Bossier Parish Community College invitational on Thursday and Friday, with 18 holes scheduled each day.

You'll have a chance to watch the Chaps in action on Oct. 25-26, when the Midland College Invitational is played on the Ranchland Hills Country Club course. Teams will play 36 holes on the first day and 18 on the second. These events require a lot of stamina, since players are required to walk the course and carry their own clubs.

The Midland Arts Association's Fall Show ends Friday and it's a show you don't want to miss. It includes selected entries from both professionals and top amateurs from the area, who work in oils, watercolors, photography, ceramics, metal, and mixed media.

The show is being exhibited in McCormick Gallery, located in the Allison Fine Arts Building. Admission is free and the hours are: 1-5 p.m., 8 a.m.-10 p.m. Monday through Thursday, and 8 a.m.-5 p.m. Friday.

Featured in the gallery from Oct. 27-Nov. 21 will be "Art On Tour" from the Texas Fine Art Association.

We would ask all the campus visitors to observe the speed limits which are posted and in effect: 20 miles per hour on the circle and the north entrance-exit, and 10 miles per hour on the parking lots. This includes the parking lot adjacent to the dormitories and Chap Center. There have been some accidents and a number of near-misses. Speed bumps aren't desirable, but they may be installed if motorists don't slow down. Your cooperation is requested.

Think you have a good volleyball team? The first 12 coed teams to enter can play in the "All-Terrain Power Tournament" at MC Saturday, Oct. 23. These are for 4-on-4, six-member teams with at least one female on court at all times. Teams will play round robin matches on sand, hard, and grass courts from 9 a.m. until dark to determine a winner. Entry fee is $60. Call John Edgar, 685-4682, or Lisa Whiting, 520-0608, for details.

Whether you are 14 or 40, you still might be wondering what to do when you grow up. A good solution might to be take the AIMS evaluation. AIMS (Aptitude Inventory Measurement Service) is a Dallas-based firm which does great things in finding and measuring talents, interests, and aptitudes. The group will be in Midland Oct. 29-31, operating from the college's testing center. When this was written, AIMS still had some openings for its Oct. testing here, so call them at 214 234-8378 for details.

FILMS AND OTHER audio-visual materials available to public schools through Region 18 Education Service Center may be requested for preview by parents and other interested adults during a one-day review session set for October 28. The session is scheduled from 8 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. at the Center, which is located at 2811 LaForce Blvd., Midland International Airport.

Parents and other citizens interested in requesting preview of particular films from the collection maintained at the Service Center should notify the Center at least five days in advance so the staff will have time to check on the availability of the films and set up review rooms. In the event a film is not available on the date requested, the person making the request will be given a date on which it may be seen.

Persons wishing to request preview of the films may call Mrs. Pam Winn, Media Supervisor of the Education Service Center, at 563-2380. The name of the films desired and the approximate time the person will arrive at the Center should be given to Mrs. Winn.

Continuing Education department to offer 16 short courses

Staff report

The Midland College Department of Continuing Education will offer 15 short courses beginning the week of Oct. 25. Courses are as follows:

Shauna Lloyd will be teaching "Aerobics-Step Bench" on Mondays and Wednesdays from 6:30-7 p.m., Oct. 25 through Dec. 6. Step aerobics, which uses a 4x12 step bench, is a fun, safe and terrific conditioning workout designed to maintain and achieve your maximum personal fitness level. The workout is primarily high intensity, low impact with various step patterns for participants of all ages, skill and fitness level. Both men and women can be challenged simultaneously. Wear athletic shoes and comfortable clothing. Course fee is $16.

Cindy Wilson will be teaching "Christmas Candy Making & Gift Ideas" on Monday, Oct. 25, from 7-9 p.m. It is a demonstration course which teaches students to make tiger's butter, peanut clusters, peanut butter cups, coconut bars, coconut-almond bars and suckers. Students also will also learn about taking care of molds, melting the chocolate correctly, and coloring and flavoring the white chocolate. Recipes and samples will be provided during class. Course fee is $7.

"Hazardous Waste: Emergency Response to Hazardous Material Incident (EPA 165.15)" will be taught by Fred Holmes on Monday through Thursday, Oct. 25-29, from 8 a.m.-5 p.m. This course provides emergency response personnel with the information and skills needed to recognize, evaluate, and control an incident involving the release or potential release of hazardous materials. It is intended for members of hazardous materials response teams. The focus of the course is on recognizing and evaluating a hazardous material incident, organizing the response team, protecting response personnel, identifying and using response resources, implementing basic control measures, decision-making, and protecting the public. Firefighting techniques are not part of the course. Course fee is $595. For registration information on this course, call (915) 520-7535.

Alfred Johnson will be teaching "Quickbook" from 6:30-9:30 p.m., Monday through Thursday, Oct. 25-28. Students will learn to use this small business accounting package. Topics include: accounts receivable; accounts payable; and invoicing. They will also learn to pull almost any report they may need. The text will be the program manual. Class limited to 14 students. Course fee is $50.

"Quicken" will be taught by Alfred Johnson Monday through Thursday, Oct. 25-28, from 1-4 p.m. Students will learn to use this very popular home and small business computerized bookkeeping system. In this course the student will learn to track savings, checking, and money market accounts. From the instructor's tips participants will learn to track all of their financial activities, or just the important ones and then create and print any type of report they may need. The text used is the Quicken software manual. Class is limited to 14 students. Course fee is $50.

"Tummy Trimmers and Thigh Thinners" will also be taught by Shauna Lloyd on Mondays and Wednesdays from 7-7:30 p.m., Oct. 25 through Dec. 6. This class is designed to "beat the tummy bulge" and work off those "saddle bags" and flabby thighs. The exercise level varies throughout the workout ... some easy, some fairly challenging routines. Working at their own pace, students will achieve results as they strengthen, reduce, tone and flatten these problem areas. Students should wear tennis shoes and bring a towel. Course fee is $16.

Charlotte Cooke will be teaching "WordPerfect II" Monday through Thursday, Oct. 25-28, from 9 a.m.-noon. In this second course, students will make use of the advanced and automated capabilities of WordPerfect that make it a premier tool in office operations. Topics will include production techniques, such as mail merge, advanced printing, macros, envelopes and labels, and columns. The class is limited to 14 students. Course fee is $50.

Robert Hoover will be teaching "Guitar for Teens" on Tuesdays from 6:30-7:30 p.m., Oct. 26 through Nov. 30. This class is the same as Guitar for Adults, but geared to the younger generation. Students need to bring their guitars. Class limited to 8 students. Course fee is $25.

"Texas Real Estate Law" will be taught by Sandy Hicks on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 8:30 a.m.-5 p.m., Oct. 26 through Nov. 11. This is an in-depth study of law as it relates to the real estate profession. During this course, the student will become familiar with real estate transactions, real property rights, estates in land, foreclosures, recording procedures, various states related to possession, land tenant regulations, deeds, and more. Course fee is $145.

Judy Griffin will be teaching "Watercolors" on Tuesdays from 6:30-9 p.m., Oct. 26 through Nov. 16. Students will learn the techniques of transparent and opaque watercolor using a variety of subject matter. No drawing background is needed. Materials are explained and supplied for first class meeting. Material costs vary according to individual student selection. Class limited to 16 students. Course fee is $25.

"Stained Glass II" will be taught by Joyce Low on Thursdays from 7-9 p.m. starting Oct. 28 and ending Dec. 9. Based on the principles of Stained Glass I, students will work on more advanced projects and learn more advanced techniques. Class limited to 12 students. Course fee is $29.

"Real Estate: Texas Earnest Money Contracts" will be taught by Sandy Hicks from 9 a.m.-6 p.m. on Saturdays and Sundays, Oct. 30 through Nov. 14. This course will provide accurate and authoritative information in regard to the subject of earnest money contracts. Each paragraph of the earnest money contract is covered in a chapter. It is written to acquaint the student with each phrase of the contract in addition to "in-depth" analysis of pertinent topics. Course fee is $145.

For more information on these and other Continuing Education short courses, go by the Office of Continuing Education located in the Administration Building or call 685-4518.

"Texas National offers what our business needs: a long-term banking relationship."

Charles B. Read, President Read & Stevens, Inc. Roswell, NM

For the last 14 of his 43 years in the oil and gas business, Charles B. Read, President of Read & Stevens, Inc., has been one of New Mexico's Top 50 Producers of oil and gas. Needless to say, he appreciates the importance and value of long-term business relationships. That's just one of the reasons Charlie banks with Texas National Bank of Midland. It's no oilpatch secret that if you're tracking petroleum in the depths of the Permian Basin, you'll eventually pass through Midland. And when you do business in Midland, you should bank with Texas National. Come see us at Texas National Bank of Midland.

College to begin second session of Classics series

Staff report

Session II of Midland College's popular College Classics series begins Oct. 25 with nine courses. College Classics provides a number of classes especially designed to appeal to persons at least 50 years of age.

The classes meet in the afternoons for one or two hours for four weeks and there is no conflict between the meeting times and dates, so it is possible to enroll for all nine classes. A single enrollment fee of $25 allows registration in as many classes as desired.

"Since all our instructors are volunteers from the college or the community who wish to share their knowledge and expertise, we are able to keep the costs to an absolute minimum," said Donna Hewett, program coordinator.

There will be an additional three sessions of College Classics offered during the spring term, Ms. Hewett said.

Classes being offered in Session II, with instructors, meeting times and dates, are: Budget, Taxes and the Economy is taught by MC instructor Tom Vannaman on Thursdays from 1-2:30 p.m.; Crime Prevention, taught by Midland Police Officer Ron Sartor, is on Mondays from 4-5 p.m.; Current Economic Issues, taught by MC instructor Chloice Shofner, is on Tuesdays from 1-2:30 p.m.; Domestic Politics and the New Media is taught on Monday from 1-2 p.m. by Bill Modisett, editorial page editor of the Reporter-Telegram; Genealogy meets on Mondays from 2-3 p.m., taught by Midland genealogist Altha Odom; Opera is taught by Jane Ward, long-time vocalist and opera enthusiast, on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 2:30-4:30 p.m.; Piano meets on Mondays from 3-4, taught by Ona Burns, longtime professional piano teacher; The Honey Bee In Our Lives, meets from 3-5 p.m. on Wednesdays, taught by Midland beekeeper Gerald Mendenhall; and United States History Begins, taught by MC division chair Dr. Will Morris on Wednesdays from 1-3 p.m.

To register, contact the Continuing Education Office in the Administration Building or call 685-4518.

MC's aviation technician receives Inspection Authorization rating

Staff report

Dennis Givens, an instructor in Midland College's Aviation Maintenance Technology School, has received the Aviation Maintenance Technician Inspection Authorization (I.A.) rating. Less than five percent of all aviation technicians hold the Inspection Authorization rating.

Requirements include a minimum of three years experience as an Aviation Maintenance Technician, holding both Airframe and Powerplant (A&P) technician licenses concurrently, advanced knowledge of Federal Aviation Administration regulations, aircraft service bulletins, FAA Airworthiness Directives, aircraft service manuals, aircraft Type Certificate Data Sheets, Aircraft Specifications, and FAA Advisory Circulars.

Persons successfully completing the I.A. rating are authorized to approve aircraft for return to service after major aircraft repairs and major airframe or engine alterations. Additionally, "I.A.'s", as they are referred to in the aircraft industry, may supervise progressive aircraft inspections and may perform aircraft annual inspections.

Givens joined the Midland College Aviation Maintenance Technology program in 1991, prior to its opening in January, 1992. He received his Associate in Applied Science degree from South Plains College last summer. Before coming to Midland College, Givens had been an instructor for Rice Aviation in Lubbock.

Living large: A typical day with Riddick Bowe

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (AP) — His day had begun with a private jet flying him in from training at Lake Tahoe. Now, Riddick Bowe was watching the palm trees and urban sprawl of Southern California go by as he rode in a limousine down Hollywood Boulevard.

The holder of two-thirds of the heavyweight title searched the back of the limo for a bottle of orange juice to help his nagging cold as he embarked on a grueling day-long tour of Los Angeles recently to promote his Nov. 6 rematch with Evander Holyfield.

"If I wasn't champion, these people wouldn't be doing this for me," Bowe said of the perks that go with the title. "This only lasts for a certain amoount of time so you've got to take advantage of it."

Before the day was over, Bowe would give dozens of interviews, spar in sweltering heat before curious noontime office workers, and banter with Jay Leno on "The Tonight Show."

In marked contrast to some of his precedessors, he remained cheerful and polite through it all, trading quips with writers and fans.

"I'm capitalizing on a lot of mistakes that champions made before me," Bowe said. "I hear a lot of guys say if they were champion again they would do things differently and respect people more. I plan to do that while I'm still champion."

It's a lesson learned from none other than Mike Tyson, whom Bowe visited a few weeks earlier in prison.

"Tyson told me he got to the point he thought he was so important that if he was on a street corner and a rat came out of the sewer he would think that rat came out because of him and who he was," Bowe said. "I'll never get like that. I'll always just be Riddick Bowe."

Unlike baseball or football players, fighters take one thing for granted: They have to promote.

So there was Bowe, patiently doing interview after interview from a crowd of Los Angeles media surrounding him at the ABC Entertainment complex in Century City.

"It's just something that goes with the territory," Bowe said. "Not only with the press, but with the fans."

Bowe likes to be playful at times.

Asked what Holyfield should do in their upcoming fight that he didn't do while losing the title, Bowe grinned and said: "Raise his insurance."

Bowe's manager, Rock Newman, also got into the act when ESPN's "Up Close" guest host Jim Hill asked him about a possible fight next year with WBC heavyweight champion Lennox Lewis.

"Lennox Lewis is hiding somewhere under the queen's skirt," Newman deadpanned. "And we dare not look there."

The Caesars Palace jet ferrying Bowe and his small entourage was safely in the air heading out of Lake Tahoe, and Bowe's brother, Daryl, was feeling confident enough to loosen his death grip on the armrests of his seat.

Bowe looked over, amused at the sight of his older brother, who survived growing up in a Brooklyn, N.Y., crack house only to be terrified of the plane trip to Los Angeles.

"Daryl's never been in a private jet before," Bowe said, laughing. "In the ghetto we didn't even know there was such a thing as a private jet."

It was in the Brownsville section of Brooklyn where Newman found out what he needed to know about the future heavyweight champion, whose loss to Lennox Lewis in the finals of the 1988 Olympics scared off other potential managers.

"I walked up to where his house was and saw a line outside of it," Newman recalled. "I thought it was a soup kitchen. But when I got closer I saw guys with guns outside doors. It was a crack house."

At that moment, Newman said, Bowe came bouncing down the stairs with a big grin on his face.

"I knew if he survived those temptations and that scene he could do anything," he said. "I decided right then and there that we'd give it a shot."

If Bowe is anything, he is a hungry fighter. Literally.

The 6-foot-5 Bowe weighed 271 pounds when he began training in early September for his rematch against Holyfield and still carried quite a bit of it during his recent swing through Los Angeles.

"I don't know what it is about this place, whenever I'm in here I'm hungry," Bowe said after arriving at the Hollywood studio where he was to tape the "Up Close" program.

Bowe quickly solved his hunger pangs after learning there was a McDonald's next door. A few minutes later, the heavyweight champion was downing three Sausage McMuffins, despite a mild protest from his camp coordinator that the food would sit on his stomach when he had a sparring session only two hours away.

Later that afternoon, Bowe and his brother and camp coordinator ordered six pastrami sandwiches on white bread in the dressing room while waiting for his appearance on "The Tonight Show."

"He's just a growing kid," veteran trainer Eddie Futch said. "Everybody seems to be concerned with his weight, but it's no problem. He'll be 240 for the fight, but you've never seen such a big heavyweight who could move like he does."

Jay Leno's shiny black Viper sports car drew Bowe for a closer look in the parking lot outside the Burbank studios where he was to tape "The Tonight Show."

"It cost $200,000 and it's got no air conditioning or power steering," someone told Bowe.

In his dressing room a few minutes later, Bowe teased Leno about the car.

"You spent $200,000 for a car that doesn't even have air conditioning," Bowe said.

"No, it only cost me $50,000," Leno replied. "But I'll sell it to you for $100,000."

Leno, it seems, is a fan of Bowe's.

"I told you you were going to win the last time you were on here before the Holyfield fight," he told Bowe. "And you're going to win this time."

Everyone wants a shot at the heavyweight champion of the world.

Even Yousukezan Nishijima.

The Japanese 190-pounder — a curiosity in a country where heavyweights become Sumo wrestlers, not boxers — paced nervously in a room just off the plaza at the ABC Entertainment Complex.

Over in a corner, Bowe was changing shirts and getting his hands taped for a sparring session outdoors in the plaza before lunching office workers and a throng of Los Angeles media.

Bowe would spar two rounds apiece with three young fighters in 90-degree heat, knocking one down and toying with two others.

Nishijima, though outweighed by some 70 pounds, finally got his chance.

After a few pitty-pat punches, Nishijima threw a right hand and Bowe's knees buckled, as the champ pretended to wobble wildly before going down to the cheers of the crowd and ending the exhibition.

Later, Newman put on his most serious tone before a Japanese camera crew eager to hear about Nishijima's performance.

"I can tell he's a talented fighter," Newman said with a straight face. "He's got style, he's got power, he's got energy."

Archer holds two shot lead at seniors

■ Senior Gold Rush

RANCHO MURIETA, Calif. (AP) — Two-time champion George Archer had six birdies on the front nine en route to a 6-under-par 66 Saturday and a one-stroke lead through two rounds of the $600,000 Raley's Senior Gold Rush.

Archer, who began the day three shots behind first-round leader Chi Chi Rodriguez, was at 10-under 132 through 36 holes on the 6,685-yard north course at Rancho Murieta Country Club.

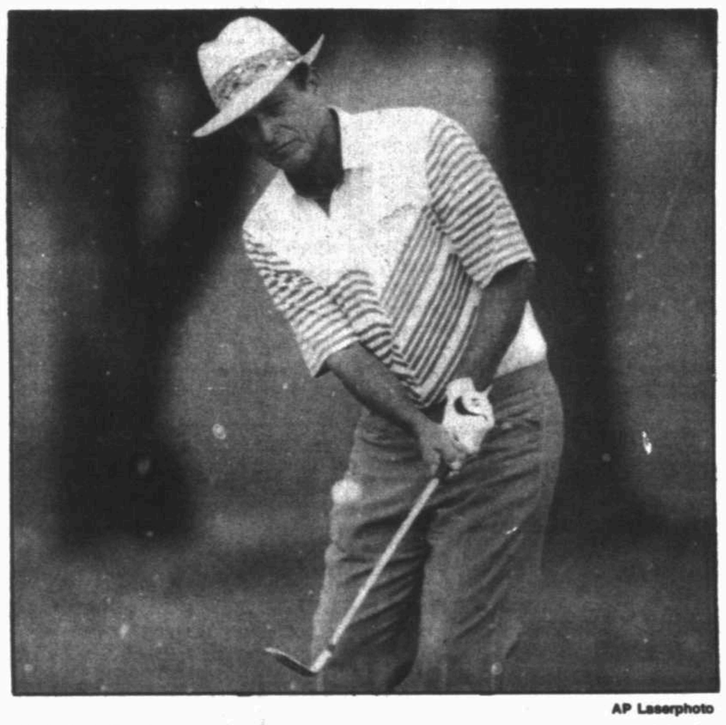

Two-time Gold Rush winner and defending champion Bob Charles followed his first-round 66 with a 69 to trail Archer by one stroke entering Sunday's final round.

Rodriguez's 71 left him two strokes behind Archer. Walter Morgan was at 137 after a 70, while Orville Moody, who won the inaugural Gold Rush in 1987, Gay Brewer and Tom Wargo were at 139, five shots behind Archer. Moody had a second-round 68, while Brewer and Wargo had 70s.

Tom Shaw had eight birdies without a bogey to record a 64 and break the course record by one stroke.

Charles, who began the day at 6-under, birdied No. 11 to move to 11-under for the tournament and take a one-stroke lead over Archer. Charles' lead grew to two strokes when Archer bogeyed 13.

However, a three-stroke swing on the par-3 16th gave the lead back to Archer, who began the day at 4-under. Archer made a 10-foot birdie putt birdie on the hole. Charles, playing two groups behind, hit his tee shot into the left sand trap. He then took two shots to get out of the bunker and two-putted for a double-bogey 5.

Yanks dominate Dunhill Cup semis

■ Dunhill Cup

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland (AP) — The United States cruised past host Scotland Saturday on victories by John Daly, Payne Stewart and Fred Couples and advanced to the semifinals of the $1.5 million Dunhill Cup with a 3-0 record.

In Sunday's semifinal, the Americans will meet Sweden, the only other unbeaten team, while England faces Ireland.

Watched by biggest galleries of the tournament, the Americans silenced the Scottish fans, who watched their players make blunder after blunder.

Daly, who bogeyed three of the first seven but parred each of the last nine, gained a 5-stroke victory over Sam Torrance. The Scot had a quadruple bogey 8 at the 12th after losing his first ball, hitting his second under a bush and three-putting.

Stewart shot a 2-over-par 74, but still beat Gordon Brand Jr. by six strokes. Couples had a 69 and beat Colin Montgomerie, who had a 73 after a triple bogey on the fourth.

Although Daly did not go ahead until Torrance's disaster at the 12th, Stewart and Couples both were six up at the turn.

The Americans were never under pressure on the back nine but were held up in a big way at the 11th.

In a rare move at St. Andrews, the home of golf, officials decided to reposition the flag at the 11th halfway through the day because of the windswept conditions at the back of the green.

Ireland's Ronan Rafferty complained the wind kept moving his ball when he was about to putt. Officials decided, once the first four matches had gone through, to move the flag closer to the front.

The holdup meant all six players in the United States-Scotland match caught up with each other and wound up shivering on the 11th tee, waiting for the players ahead of them to move to the 12th.

Daly, usually one of the fastest players around the course, was hanging around for a half hour.

"It was too damn long," he said. "It also was probably the coldest part of the course. At least I had a chance to talk to Payne and Freddie. I had a couple of cigarettes and we had a nice little chat."

With an 8-1 total from their three games, the Americans have the best record going into the semifinals.

"We're all strong players who like to hit the ball long and straight and, on a course like this, it gives us an advantage," Couples said. "John can hit the 18th green from the tee and reach the (316-yard) 12th with an iron and that's a huge advantage."

The Swedish team of Jesper Parnevik, Anders Forsbrand and Joakim Haeggman, edged Australia 2-1.

England gained the semifinal despite a 2-1 loss to South Africa.

The Irish romped to a 3-0 victory over Argentina, but had to wait until Zimbabwe's victory over Spain before they knew they were in the final.

Lehman shares Texas Open lead

■ Texas Open

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Tom Lehman muscled his way into a four-way tie for the third-round lead in the Texas Open on Saturday with a 6-under-par 30 on the back nine.

Lehman's late move — which included a near hole-in-one among birdies on three of the last four holes — produced a 65 and sent him into today's final round of the chase for a $180,000 first prize with a 199 total.

He was tied at that figure, 14 under par on the Oak Hills Country Club course, with Dan Forsman, Bob Lohr and Jay Haas.

Forsman and Lohr, who were among the four players tied for the 36-hole lead, retained their positions with 67s. Haas moved up with a 66.

"What is this?" Forsman asked. "Another four-man tie. Does this mean it's going to be a four-way playoff tomorrow?"

With 10 players within two shots of the lead and 14 within three, that possibility exists.

"It's going to be great for the spectators," Haas said.

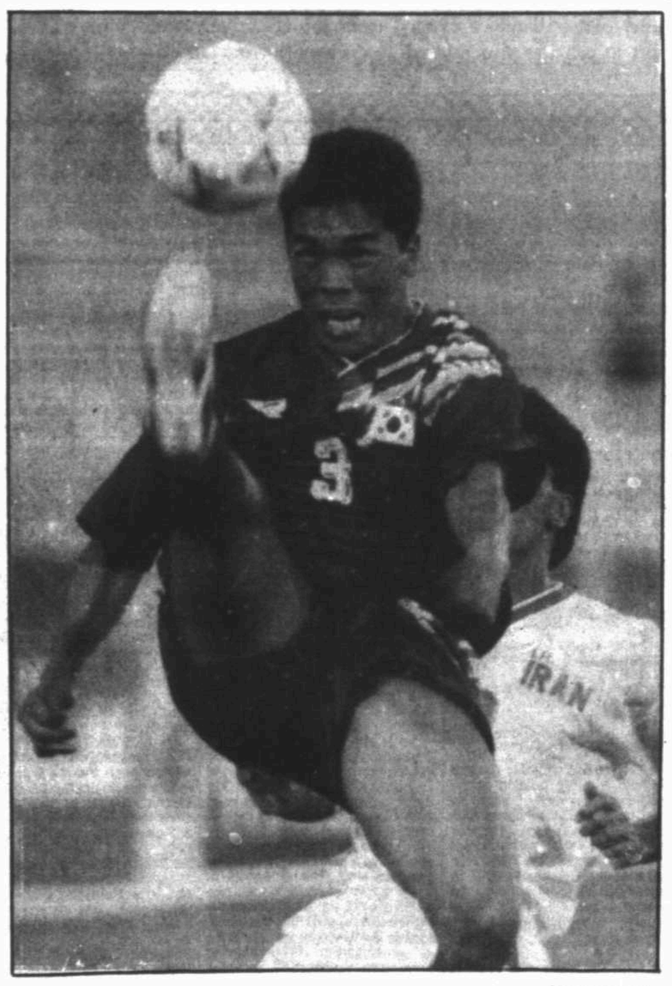

And, in a way, it makes it easier for the men in contention, he said.

"With that many players that close, you know you can't be cautious, try to sit on a lead," Haas said. "There is no strategy. You just go out and play the best you can. You play like it's the first round.

"Lehman showed us that somebody can play the back nine in 29 or 30 and come from well back. Somebody is going to have to go deep to win."

David Edwards, a winner at Hilton Head earlier this season, was alone at 200 after a bogey-free 66.

Tom Kite, who has yet to win in his native Texas, shot 65 and was at 201 along with Bob Estes, Marco Dawson, Mark Lye and Billy Andrade.

Super Sonics run past ailing Bulls, 112-101

Associated Press

■ NBA Exhibition

CINCINNATI — Shawn Kemp led an 18-8 game-opening run that put Seattle ahead to stay, and the SuperSonics once again dominated the depleted Chicago Bulls 112-101 in an exhibition game Saturday night at Riverfront Coliseum.

Seattle has won both of its preseason games against the defending three-time NBA champions, who are without the retired Michael Jordan and injured Scottie Pippen, Horace Grant and Bill Cartwright.

Just as they did in a 114-95 victory over the Bulls on Friday night, the SuperSonics got ahead early and steadily built the lead over the out-of-sync Bulls. Kemp scored 6 of his 8 first-half points in the opening run.

Chicago turned the ball over three times and missed its first two shots to help the Sonics jump ahead. Chicago got within 3 points midway through the second quarter, but never closer.

After leading 54-47 at the half, the Sonics blew the game open with a 17-4 run at the start of the third quarter.

Seattle led by as many as 25 points in the fourth quarter.

Paddio scored 18 points off the bench to lead seven SuperSonics in double figures. Steve Kerr led Chicago with 14, most of them in the fourth quarter.

Cavaliers 112, Celtics 109, OT

DAYTON, Ohio — Rookie Chris Mills scored 6 of his game-high 22 points in overtime to lead the Cleveland Cavaliers to a 112-109 exhibition victory over Boston at the Nutter Center.

John Battle hit a three-pointer for Cleveland (1-0) with 2.5 seconds remaining in regulation to tie the game at 100-100 and send it into overtime.

Cleveland took the lead for good when Mills, the 22nd pick out of Arizona, hit a jump shot with 4:45 to play in overtime.

It was the Cavs' first game under former Atlanta Hawks coach Mike Fratello, who spent the last three years as an NBA television analyst.

Boston (1-1) took a 91-79 lead with 4:35 to go in the fourth quarter. Cleveland followed with a 21-9 run capped by Battle's three-pointer.

Dino Radja led the Celtics with 14 points.

Pacers 93, Mavericks 85

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — Malik Sealy scored a game-high 17 points and Detlef Schrempf added 16 as Indiana beat Dallas in an NBA preseason game.

Sealy's hot hand helped create open shots for his teammates in Indiana's exhibition opener. Dale Davis contributed 13 points, while Sam Mitchell and Haywoode Workman each added 10 for the Pacers.

Dallas overcame a sluggish start with the help of Jim Jackson and Jamal Mashburn, the Mavericks' first-round draft picks in each of the last two years. Jackson contributed 15 points and Mashburn, a rookie, added 10.

The Mavericks fell to 0-2 in the preseason after an 81-74 loss to Atlanta on Friday.

Mashburn hit his first three shots of the second quarter, including a slashing move past Schrempf for a finger roll for 6 of his points.

Davis scored five of his points in the final 2:53 to help seal the win.

New York 106, Houston 88

NORTH CHARLESTON, S.C. — Patrick Ewing scored 15 points and grabbed 10 rebounds as New York opened their exhibition season with a victory over Houston at North Charleston Coliseum.

The Knicks led 26-13 after the first quarter and 51-34 at halftime.

Ewing, the high scorer for the Knicks, played 26 minutes. His opponent at center, Hakeem Olajuwon, scored 20 points in 25 minutes.

New York shot 51.3 percent from the field, while Houston hit 33.9 percent.

The Knicks defense shut out Houston's starting forward Robert Horry and held starter Kenny Smith to 1 point.

New York's Greg Anthony had 11 points, and Doc Rivers and Rolando Blackman added 10 each. Houston rookie Sam Cassell scored 19 points.

The Rockets, who lost to Orlando 95-87 Friday night, fell to 0-2 in the preseason.

Magic 108, Spurs 101

SAN ANTONIO — Shaquille O'Neal scored 25 points, helping Orlando past San Antonio in an NBA exhibition game that christened the Alamodome for basketball.

The Magic did not take their first lead in the second half until new Spurs acquisition Dennis Rodman fouled Greg Kite going for an offensive rebound. Kite hit both foul shots to put Orlando ahead 99-98 with 1:56 remaining.

Rodman, the NBA's leading rebounder the past two seasons with the Detroit Pistons, won the crowd over early with his diving and bumping style of play.

Orlando, 2-0 in the preseason under new head coach Brian Hill, fought back from a 16-point deficit early in the third quarter. Nick Anderson, who had 22 points, including three of five 3-pointers, ignited a 20-11 run that pulled the Magic to within 79-75.

San Antonio, led by Lloyd Daniels' game-high 29 points, lost its exhibition opener before a franchise record sellout crowd of 20,122 at the Alamodome. The Spurs had played their previous 20 professional seasons at the 16,057-seat HemisFair Arena.

Daniels hit 11 of 16 from the field, but center David Robinson made just 5 of 16 shots from the field, adding 9 of 10 from the line for 19 points.

The Spurs played the final 2:58 without Robinson, who fouled out when he drew a flagrant foul after being rejected by O'Neal underneath the basket. A scuffle ensued and Rodman restrained O'Neal, who missed both technical foul shots with 2:56 left in the game.

Eric 'Sleepy' Floyd, in his first action with the Spurs after being traded from Houston, made a three-point shot with 10.6 seconds left to bring San Antonio to within 103-101. But rookie Anfernee Hardaway added a pair of free throws with 7.2 seconds left to help nail down the victory.

BPW Builds WomanPower

Power is what BPW is all about - empowering every working woman, in every job, in every community, in every family. For all of us, the simple words "Building WomanPower" tell a story - our story. It's time to use our story of empower-ment to sell BPW. Because BPW builds WomanPower, woman power will build BPW!

To make BPW and WomanPower stronger than ever, we have adopted a three-year plan of "Building WomanPower: Politically, Professionally and Personally." This plan encompasses the three aspects of woman power and speaks to women's needs at every point in their lives and levels of their work.

As we enter Year Two of the plan-our 75th Anniver- sary Year - our programs and activities will concentrate on developing professional power. Year Two actions steps include:

Emphasis on skills-based training. From training seminars at our Annual Conference to ongoing implementation of local-based programs, we will make every effort to provide professional development opportunities for our members and working women in the community.

Focus on Foundation programs.

Our scholarship and other Foundation programs are among the many unique ways BPW helps working women make the most of their professional power. We will promote these programs and the countless ways the BPW Foundation makes a difference in the lives of women throughout the year.

Increase public visibility.

Along with legislative public relations, BPW will garner attention for our career enhancement activities and exceptional 75-year track record for providing women with the skills and resources they need to succeed in their careers.

Building WomanPower is the basis of everything BPW stands for. Remember as you Build WomanPower this year to share WomanPower as well. We've only really done our job effectively when others benefit from our efforts.

HOMES & CLASSIFIED

A PERFECT PLACE.

Text by Kes Gilhome

Flanked by mature trees and located in a quiet part of the Skyline Addition, this neat three bedroom family home exhibits many wonderful features that help to make family life a pleasure.

The large tiled kitchen is intelligently located between the formal dining room and the breakfast room, making it ideal for entertaining as well as informal dining.

It has all the modern appliances that one would expect from a house of this calibre and it has been designed so that cooking becomes as easy as possible. A great balance has been struck, mixing the natural light which floods in from the bay window at the rear of the house with artificial to emphasize the clean lines of the kitchen and informal dining room.

The large living room sets the tone for the rest of the home with its intelligent use of space, light and fittings.

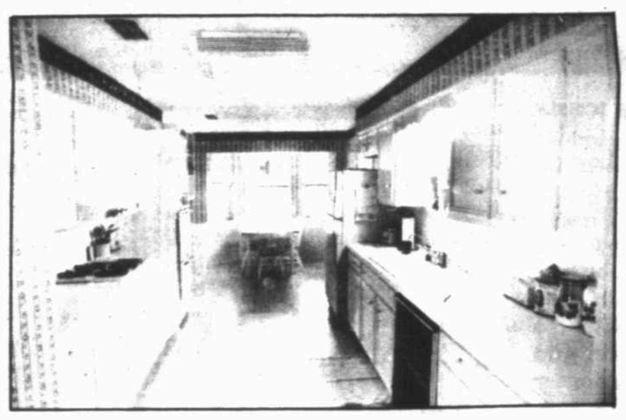

The themes set here are mirrored by features such as the paneling in the formal dining room, thé tray ceiling in the master bedroom and the overall style of all the wood in the house.

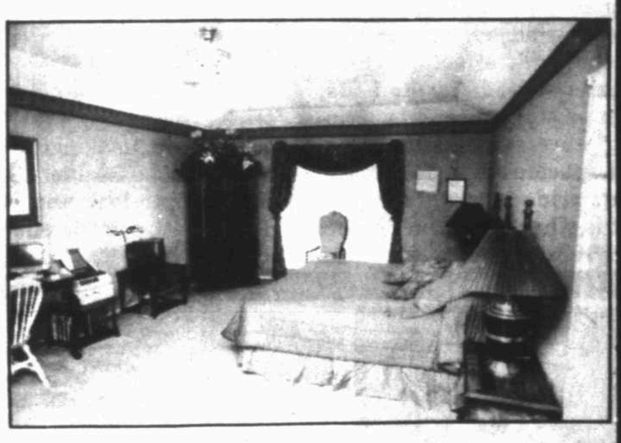

All of the three bedrooms have ample space for both living and storage, with large closets and plenty of practical amenities.

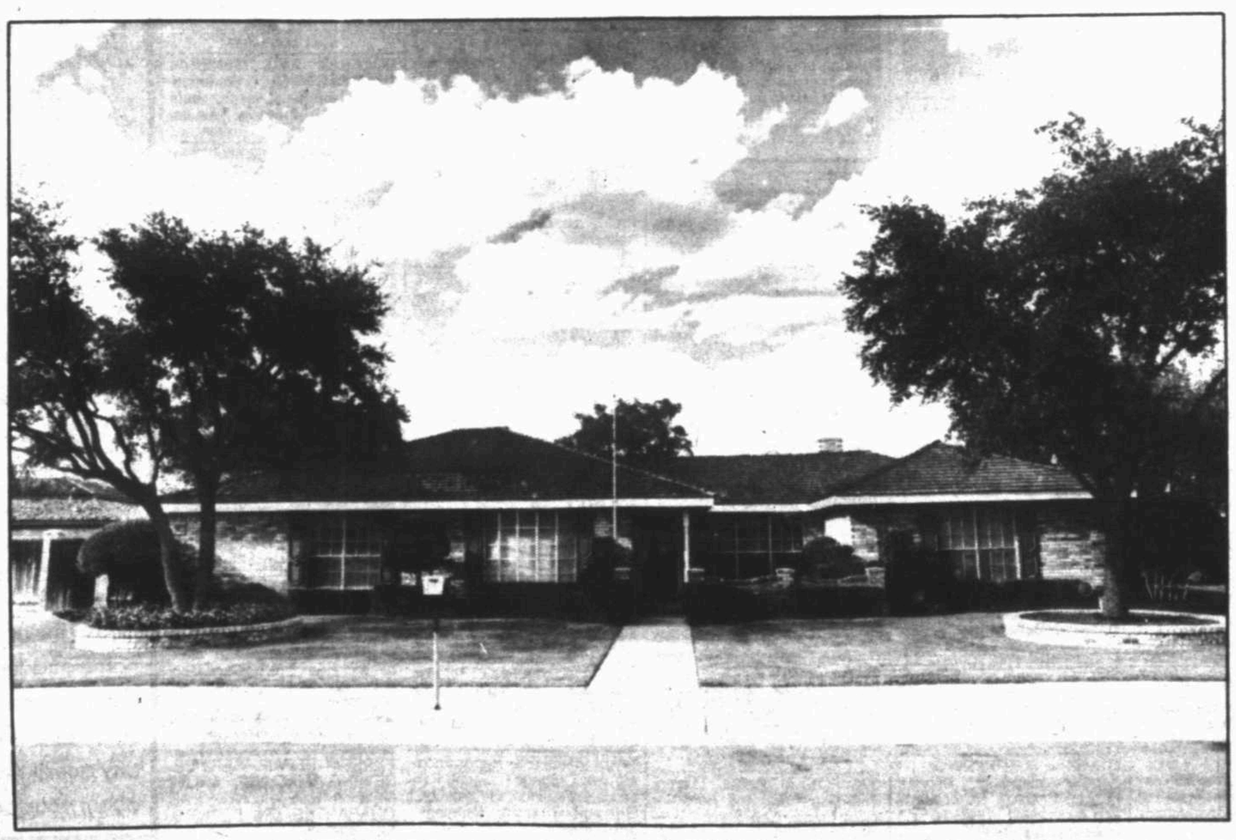

This house has many qualities that help with the practical side of life for example, both of the yards have convenient built-in sprinkler systems and the house has its own reverse osmosis water system plumbed in.

This is a great house, which is perfect for young and old because it is located in a quiet street, with two large yards. One of these yards is big enough to fit a swimming pool or to let the children have their own play area.

For more information about this great family home, or to arrange an appointment, contact Carol Henson of the Carriage Company Realtors. Her office is located at #36 Plaza Center, Midland and she can be telephoned at 684-5881.

Langston Realtors Talks About . . .

Are there "Tricks" to the "Treat" of selling your home?

Joanne Langston
Langston Realtors

We know you've been told innumerable times that there are no "tricks" to selling a home: every seller who competitively prices his property based on its condition, location and terms of sale should expect buyers to be beating a path to his door with offers and money in hand.

There's certainly relevance in that statement; however is you think you've followed those guidelines and your home is still not selling, perhaps we can suggest a few "tricks" for you to consider.

FIRST, have you realistically set a competitive price, based on a current appraisal or broker's market analysis? Or did you factor in your own "wanta's" and "needa's"" - that is "want to" net a certain figure, or maybe even what the property appraised for, but then added selling costs, commission, repair allowances and bargaining room into the asking price? Or did you choose a listing price because you "nneded" a specific amount to buy in Houston, to purchase a larger home here, or to pay off a particular debt? It is rare (impossible!!) to find a buyer who will pay above market value for a property just to satisfy the seller's wants or needs.

SECOND, are you showing the house to its best advantage, that is, uncluttered, squeaky clean, and obviously well maintained? Few buyers can see "spacious" when your rooms are cluttered with too much furniture, closets and cabinets are jammed, counter tops look like drug or grocery store display shelves, and the garage is stacked with items that should have gone to the dump years ago! No buyers can see "fresh light" in dirty baths, kitchens, floors, baseboards, walls or windows. Nor can buyers see "pride of maintenance" in grass-filled flower beds, worn or stained carpets, dripping faucets or flaking paint. And spaciousness, freshness, light, pride of maintenance - that is what sells! Don't expect a buyer to envision your home as it should or could be, also don't offer allowances for new paint and carpet because " the buyer will want to choose his own colors"; DO make your home as marketable as your finances and energies will allow.

THIRD, are you limiting exposure of your home to the market because of unrealistic showing or advertising restrictions? Are you saying "don't show weekends, after 5 or without 48 hours notice; don't put up a sign; don't put it in multiple because I don't want a lot of sightseers;?" Also are you limiting exposure due to the choice of your Realtor? That is, did you list with cousin or friend Bertha even though she is not very active in the market, will not allocate the funds necessary to effectively advertise the property, has little experience (thus prospective buyers) in your price range, or is associated with a lower profile office that offers her limited sales support, ie, has few comparable listings, restricts its promotional expenditures, has little access to incoming transferees, has a very small sales team. Your Realtor should be your most important ally, giving you specific, informed, and ongoing advice on pricing, marketing and negotiating and should be supported by an aggressive, high profile offer.

FOURTH, is your home in a price range, of such a unique style or in a location where a very limited number of properties are selling? Your Realtor's quick search of comparable and recent sales can tell you whether or not one of these factors will extend the marketing time past your expectations. Your Realtor can also tell you whether an adjustment in price or marketing strategies can bring a quicker sale. A mailing targeted to a specific group of prospects might be considered. Also, thing about why you bought the home then encourage your Realtor to utilize this information in marketing efforts.

Are there "tricks" to the "treat" of selling your home? We think not! Rather, a successful sale is based on realistic expectations, effective marketing, not just meeting but beating the competition, cooperation, motivation and the best possible choice of a Realtor. We would like to be that Realtor; please call if we can help.

Next week we'll offer some "tricks" to making your home look its best, making it a real "treat" for the Realtor to show, the buyer to look and you to get the best possible offer! See you then!

Distributorships Now Available

PART-TIME INCOME OPPORTUNITY

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has early morning routes which need to be filled with dependable individuals with reliable transportation. Often asked questions:

➥ Is it worthwhile for adults also?

YES! 95% of our Distributors ARE adults! Morning Routes are attractive for:
★ ADULTS who have fulltime jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job!
★ MOTHERS who can't justify a small job AND daycare, because as a Distributor, you don not need daycare!
★ COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
★ SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added retirement income, or just wa t to work with people, neighbors, and friends!

➥ How much money can I make as a Distributor?

Depending on the size of the route(s), from $350 to $800 monthly, in some cases...even more!

➥ OK...but how long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday-Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, depending on the size of the route(s). Also some time is needed each month to collect from subscribers. Many Distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in the subscribers' papers and having payments mailed to them. Some collecting in person will be necessary though, particularly on some routes more than others.

➥ When do the papers have to be delivered by?

Papers must be on the yards by 6 am Monday-Friday, and 7 am on weekend mornings.

➥ Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, most Distributors do take days off by finding a friend, family member, or another Distributor to substitute for them!

➥ What else?

An initial $100 refundable deposit is required.

OIL REPORT

SUNDAY, October 17, 1993 SERVING 54 COUNTIES IN WEST TEXAS AND NEW MEXICO

ENERGY BANKING

■ Who's lending what and how much? In November, the Oil Report will take an in depth look at energy banking in the Basin.

BRIEFING

Two good pumping names to know.

Prices slip

Oil prices got off to a strong start this past week, rising to $18.77 amid signs OPEC members were curbing output. Prices retreated to $18.50 a barrel, however, when the API reported an increase in U.S. crude stocks. The posted price stood at $17 a barrel late in the week.

Natural gas prices were slightly higher, rising to $2.20 late in the week.

Drilling activity

Drilling activity was mixed the week ended October 8, according to Baker Hughes Inc.

In the Permian Basin, the rig count rose seven to 129 during the week, well above the 99 seen a year ago.

Nationwide, the rig count remained unchanged at 856. A year ago the count was 787.

Among major producing states, Oklahoma showed the sharpest gain, four rigs, followed by Texas with three rigs.

Companies fined

AUSTIN — Three Midland oil and gas operators were among 12 companies assessed fines this week for pollution violations, the Texas Railroad Commission announced.

The three, which agreed to pay a penalty without admitting any violation of commission rules, were LNH Oil Co., ZZRon Inc. and BC Operating.

LNH was assessed a $1,500 penalty for oil and saltwater discharge on the Hardage & Wilson lease in Ward County. ZZRon was ordered to pay $2,500 for allowing small amounts of oil to accumulate in pits on the L.C. Denman lease in Howard County. BC Operating was penalized $2,000 for a saltwater spill on the Hamilton lease in Harris County.

So far this year, the commission has assessed a record $2.15 million in well plugging and pollution fines, compared with $1.18 million during the same period last year.

Enserch deal

McDermott Inc. of New Orleans has been awarded a $46-million contract with Enserch Exploration Partners Ltd. for work on an offshore oil and gas facility in the Gulf of Mexico.

The McDermott Marine Construction unit will install pipelines and fabricate and install the jacket and deck for a fixed platform.

McDermott expects to complete the project by early 1995.

CORROSION UPDATE

Corrosion advances made

■ Research continues in corrosion detection and prevention.

By Mella McEwen

Between 400 and 700 are expected to attend this week's South Central Region Conference of NACE International, National Association of Corrosion Engineers.

Rick Cadwell, a corrosion engineer with Exxon in Midland is heading up the conference for the Permian Basin section of NACE. He noted that those attending the conference will hear about a number of advancements in several different areas.

"One of the hottest arenas now, because of government regulations, is mechanical integrity or the inspection of plant and field facility equipment," he said.

"A number of companies are initiating inspection programs and are also improving their evaluation techniques for different kinds of flaws they may find. A lot of this also applies to vessels, piping and pipelines as well. Research in flaw assessment is ongoing."

He added that flaw assessment grew out of the refineries and within the last three years has become a hot topic in the production end of the industry.

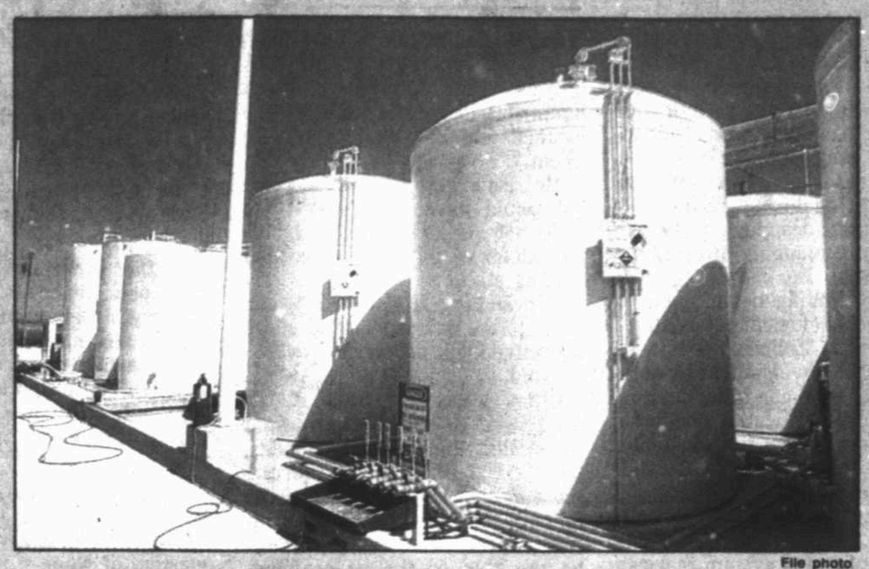

"Everyone's concentrating on vessels now, and I would expect piping to be the next thing everyone works on," he said.

He went on to add that efforts are underway to improve flaw assessing capabilities.

"There's software that is being manufactured by the industry that are in the data test phase now that will be helpful to the industry," he said.

Another area is coatings.

"everyone is doing testing on coatings. We have a lot better information on coatings than we did several years ago. There's always new coatings coming out and I believe there are greater appreciation now for the application of these coatings, not just how well they perform but also the labor that goes into putting them on the steel," said Cadwell.

Another issue facing corrosion engineers is the use of not only different metallurgies but non-metallics.

"Fiberglass is very popular in the oil patch right now," explained Cadwell. "We're finally starting to get some good experience with fiberglass, and people will be making presentations on fiberglass pipe."

Also, he added, there is major interest in the area of water quality, geared toward enhancing water and CO_2 floods.

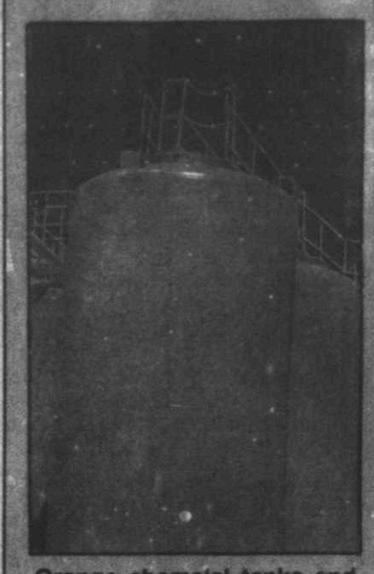

"If any water gets into the reservoir, there's more focus on the quality of that water going back into the reservoir and whether or not it's causing more problems than we realize," Cadwell said.

New developments and materials are ongoing, he said, with developments and improvements in both metallic and non-metallic materials and with new corrosion-resistant alloys. Improvements are being made in coatings and in chemicals as well.

In all of the different areas of the industry — production, transportation and refining, expenditures will vary.

"For example, in the oil field, we probably spend the majority of our money downhole, on workovers, cleanouts and chemical treatments. In a plant, you'll see higher costs on equipment inspections. In the production department, conversely, equipment

Midland will be host for the first time to a regional conference of the National Association of Corrosion Engineers, NACE.

NACE is an international organization comprised of approximately 17,000 members.

The Permian Basin chapter of NACE will host the South Central Region conference, attracting members from the region, which encompasses Louisiana west to New Mexico and north to Colorado.

Three national officers — the NACE president, secretary-treasurer and executive director — are expected to attend.

Alternative fuels touted

■ Texas alternative fuels industry is inevitable, says state senator

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil editor

Alternative fuels will play an increasingly important role in the future of Texas, says Texas Senator Teel Bivens.

Bivens

Speaking to the Natural Gas Society of the Permian Basin earlier this week, Bivens said Houston, San Antonio and El Paso were not in compliance with clean air standards of the Clean Air Bill and would have to seek remedy through alternative fuels.

He acknowledged, however, that El Paso was in a catch 21 position, because of air pollution from Juarez, Mexico, and may never be in compliance regardless of its efforts.

The Amarillo senator said that Houston had opted to fuel its transit busses on liquid natural gas (LNG), instead of compressed natural gas (CNG), because it was clean-burning and offered more range than CNG.

Bivens said there was little doubt that natural gas, in some form, would be the fuel of the future for Texas, because it was clean-burning and abundant, but noted that Texas and the rest of the nation was still struggling with the "chicken or the egg" syndrome.

"Nobody wants to invest in a fueling infrastructure until there are converted vehicles to fuel, and nobody wants to convert a vehicle until there is some place to fuel it," said Bivens.

He noted, however, that recently passed Bill 737, which created the Texas Alternative Fuels Council would help expedite alternative fuels. "We had the Texas Railroad Commission running off and promoting propane, the Land Office promoting compressed

FERC finals unbundling

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) says it has achieved its goal of a restructured natural gas pipeline industry providing unbundled services in time for the 1993-1994 winter heating season.

The Commission has approved and granted effective dates for all the major interstate pipelines that filed compliance filings under Order No. 636.

Chair Elizabeth A. Moler hailed the Commissioners and FERC staff for its achievement: "We now have a basic regulatory approach that will let the gas industry get on with the business of providing better service to more markets at lower costs. Gas will be in a much better position to compete for new markets as a fuel for vehicles and electric generation. To the extent of the gas industry succeeds in opening new markets, the whole country will gain. We will be relying more on a fuel that is clean, abundant and secure," she said.

Midland company tops list

Staff report

MIDLAND — Midland Resources, local oil and gas company, has topped a performance list of 47 oil companies in several categories, according to a research report recently published by Charles M. Strain, CFA, of Strain Consultants in Houston.

The Strain report assessed a break-up value for the Company at $9.2 million or $4.09 per common share. The report further projected 1993 net cash flow of 39 cents per share and 1993 net income of 45 cents per share.

Deas H. Warley, Chairman and CEO of Midland, commented, "We reviewed Mr. Strain's earnings and cash flow projections and are confident, barring any major drop in oil and gas prices, we will easily surpass his projections. Certainly, the recent well completion in Co-

Marginal wells need benefit of doubt

Texas Railroad Commissioner Mary Scott Nabers recently issued a press announcement boasting of the number of wells the TRC had plugged this year in the interest of the environment.

Pitts

Nabers called the plugging operation the biggest environmental cleanup in the state's history, boasting that the state the Texas Railroad Commission, which regulates oil and gas in the state, had plugged 1,404 wells in 1993. She seemed proud of the fact that it was a 693 percent increase in pluggings since the state's industry-funded program began in 1983, and that a total of $28,539,180 that been spent on plugging since 1983.

"Texans benefit not only environmentally but also economically, because the work is contracted out to private workers," said Nabers, who noted that other states are using the program as a model.

Let's hope not.

The question is: Should anyone in Texas, particularly a Texas Railroad Commissioner, be that proud of well plugging?

Groundwater is a valuable resource and should be protected from faulty wells, but oil and gas wells are also a valuable resource — a valuable geological asset. The permanent loss of a single oil or gas well, even a worn out one, should be more of an occasion for grieving than boasting.

Ground water should be protected, but before an oil or gas well is plugged it should be established "beyond a shadow of doubt" in a court of unbiased technology that the threat to ground water is very clear. A marginal or unproductive well should be given all benefit of doubt.

Neither the industry, Texas nor the nation gains when a well (even a dry well) is permanently P&A, because they provide geological access. These holes drilled a mile or more deep in the middle of oil country are not liabilities, but valuable assets — if not today, then tomorrow.

Today, looking back at the thirties, forties and fifties, we bemoan the billions of cubic feet of "useless and unwanted" natural gas that were flared or vented in the search for oil. Will the oil industry not look back someday and bemoan the thousands of oil and gas wells that were hastily plugged by our generation, because of real or imagined environmental threats.

Requiring the extraordinary efforts of men and machines and hundreds of thousands (even millions) of dollars, oil and gas bore holes are deep, expensive, geological "peek holes," that should be preserved for future studies, say geologists.

Again, when gas flares lit West Texas like thousands of Aggie bond fires, no one dreamed that giant pipelines would one day carry that troublesome gas to the north, west and east and that it would become a valuable fuel burned in homes and factories in California and the Midwest.

By the same token, geologists concede that there are new tools and science that have not been dreamed of yet that could be applied to old bore holes to extract new geological knowledge.

Please see PITTS/2E

PITTS: Save the wells

us in the future," says Gerry Calhoun, a Midland geologist.

While it's nice to have a tidy oilfield free of potential environmental liability, Calhoun says it doesn't take much vision to see that out there somewhere in the future, there will be a great demand for well bores in the middle of oil fields, for that matter, well bores in the middle of nowhere that can provide access to geological formations.

Then there is the matter of keeping wells open for commercial access. Who knows what tools and technology have not yet been invented that would allow us to extract more oil from marginal wells in the future.

Since most of the cost of a completed well involves drilling vertically to the target, the wells now being plugged may one day be utilized as vertical access holes to kick-off multiple horizontal laterals and radials drilling programs. Or multiple lateral injectors, or monitor wells.

The availability of that vertical access could mean the difference between commercial success and failure.

No one really knows all the money-saving techniques that will come in the future, but we do know that once a well is plugged, it is plugged.

Says John Swords, a Dallas partner in the firm of Coopers & Lybrand: "In the short run, American needs to keep marginal wells open, because they account for more than one million of the seven million barrels of crude oil produced in the U.S. each day. And, for the long term, they need to be kept open because they provide access to billions of barrels of oil located in reservoirs in the lower 48 states, which might be produced using secondary or tertiary methods."

And that is why it is doubtful there is any environmental threat presently posed by unplugged wells that is as great as the threat posed to the national security by the wholesale plugging of wells.

According to the Monthly Energy Review, in 1991, 67 percent of the national trade deficit was attributed to oil imports, most of which were from the treacherous Middle East.

A Department of Energy study says 460 billion barrels of oil have been discovered in the lower 48 states of the U.S., of which 137 billion have been produced and 21 billion can still be produced commercially.

But what about the other 302 billion barrels. According to DOE so many wells have now been plugged (over 150,000 since 1952) that only 146 billion barrels remains of that resource. And, says DOE, if current plugging rates continue, another 5.7 billion will be lost in the next two years.

But there appears to be no end in sight to the plugging orgy. The National Stripper Well Association reports that 52,000 wells have been plugged in the last three year and that the trend will continue.

Writing in the Petroleum Economist, Sword notes that immediate and meaningful tax incentives are needed to halt the killing of U.S. wells by cement injections. Such incentives, says Sword, would not only delay the decision to plug wells, but would also increase U.S. tax revenue.

He says that if wells only break even with incentives, the federal government still stands to collect roughtly $6 for every $20 barrel of oil extracted from federal leases, and also collect on the earnings of oil companies and oilfield service companies.

Sword is right. Every incentive possible needs to be squeezed from the federal government to keep wells from being plugged. In addition, millions of dollars should be spent on plugging research.

DOE reservoir research programs started during the Bush Administration, designed to prevent "premature plugging of marginal wells." But to my knowledge there is almost nothing being spent on finding technological alternatives to plugging. Millions need to be spent on the development of workable plugs than can allay environmental ground water concerns, yet are temporary, soft, drillable, and easy and inexpensive to install and remove.

The carnage of marginal wells will stop the day someone invents a viable plugging system that can be set and removed by a roustabout gang and does not require a Halliburton pump truck, expensive packers, and thousands of dollars.

The $28.5 million TRC spent on plugging wells over the past 10 years, perhaps the money would have been better spend developing a non-fatal plugging system.

Finally, every regulation that can be bent, or rewritten and every liability that can be removed to prevent the plugging of wells should get the full attention of state and federal government. If wells are fatally filled with cement, it's because that is what the regs require.

As for liability, Santa Rita No. 1, the most historical well in the Permian Basin was plugged several years ago, and will never produce another drop of oil, because Marathon was concerned about "liability."

What I am saying is that there is a lot more room for reason in this process.

And, there's some room for priority adjustment. Instead of focusing on the "housekeeping" in the oilpatch, perhaps it would be better to focus on the "salvation" of the oilpatch.

John Paul Pitts is business/oil editor of the Reporter-Telegram.

pano Field bolsters that confidence.

The new well will have a major impact on our Company. This one well should add 30 cents per share annually to our net earnings and we will still have three more workovers to complete in this fault block of the field."

Mr. Warley added, "In Mr. Strain's September 1993 Peer Group Analysis Report, we were compared to a group of 49 well known independent oil and gas companies with individual market capitalization ranging from under $2 million to over $3.8 billion. The total market capitalization for the group exceeds $14 billion. Within that group, Midland Resources ranks first in price to break-up value ratio, second in price to cash flow per share ratio, and first in PE ratio. Mr. Strain's report confirms that our stock sells at a significant discount to value and I believe this will be resolved as we gain recognition by the investment community."

natural gas and the governor with her own alternative fuel programs. The Alternative Fuels Council will tie all fuels to one council and help better promote them."

He also explained that the Council would have the authority to raise $50 million in revenue bonds to loan for vehicle conversions and fueling stations.

"These programs will be the catalyst to the development of an alternative fuels industry in Texas," he said.

Citing a recent article in the Wall Street Journal that criticized the stalled alternative fuels industry, and that called for government to choose a single fuel from among the alternative fuel options, Bivens said that should not be the role of the government. "That is a choice the market and the private sector should make."

Bivens said removal of language from alternative fuels legislation that mandated conversions for school busses was right in that it put the burden on the private sector and not the school districts. "The new language says that busses will have to convert only if it costs less."

Another program that is expected to speed up the alternative fuels industry in Texas is one that coordinates alternative fuels research among all the univerisities in Texas. "We had different schools doing research in the same areas. This puts everyone on the same track."

"It's not a question of whether or not Texas will have a viable alternative fuels industry, it's just a question of when," Bivens said.

inspection may be a major driver, but not near the cost of what we spend downhole."

And, like all other areas of the oil and gas industry, corrosion engineers are increasingly concerned with environmental protection.

"Where corrosion is concerned, I like to think of corrosion detection and prevention as being one of the foremost protectors of the environment. In a large number of the failures we see today, they're due to internal or external corrosion. As far as protecting the groundwater and preventing spills, corrosion prevention plays a major role both downhole and on the surface," Cadwell stated.

a corrosion engineer with Exxon in Midland, chairman of the conference, the conference is expected to attract between 400 and 700 people.

The conference will feature a wide-ranging selection of technical programs ranging from internal coatings, prediction and modeling of coatings, non-metallic materials and water quality to corrosion and corrosion control in pipelines, environmental regulations, corrosion control through chemical treatment, inspection quality control to corrosion in refineries, NDT methods, pipeline rehabilitation and cathodic protection of well casing to microbiological control of paraffin, metallurgical solutions and coatings and linings.

In addition, there will be an exhibit hall set up with 68 exhibitors on hand. All events, unless otherwise noted, will be held at the Midland Center.

SUNDAY:

■ The "West Texas Shoot Out" will be at Hogan Park from 10:45 a.m. to 5 p.m.

■ Registration: Registration will be from 2 to 6 p.m.

■ Reception: A Sunday welcoming reception will be from 6:30 to 10 p.m. at the Midland Hilton.

MONDAY:

■ Breakfasts: A Speakers breakfast will be held at the Midland Hilton from 7 to 8 a.m., and a guest and spouse continental breakfast will be held from 7:30 to 8:45 a.m.

■ Registration: Registration opens at 7:30 a.m. all three days.

■ Technical programs: Technical programs get underway at 8:45 a.m. in Rooms 2, 3 and 5 of the Midland Center, and last until 4 p.m. with breaks from noon to 1:30 p.m. for lunch.

■ Workshops: RMC/Membership/Career Development workshops held from 9 to 11:30 a.m.

Cellular phone technology lets oil wells keep in touch

By Chuck McCollough
Hearst News Service

SAN ANTONIO, Texas — Oil and gas wells call home each day to let headquarters know they are doing okay.

A radio antenna tower beeps a repairman at church to let him know its top aviation warning light is out and needs replacing immediately.

A tractor-trailer traveling cross country with a load of refrigerated produce phones the home office to say it has a coolant leak.

Machinery with cellular telephones?

It's not exactly the same as E.T. phoning home, but Remote Monitoring of America is helping isolated "mission critical operations" keep in touch with the boss.

And it's a two-way connection. The boss can call the wells or towers to get important data on their conditions.

San Antonio-based Remote Monitoring is establishing a niche in the fast-growing, machine-monitoring industry.

Like many innovations in the technology-communications age, the inspiration for it came from a chance meeting.

John T. Saunders, a San Antonio oil and gas operator, ran into a distance relative at a gathering. The relative, Dwight M. Munk, asked a question that changed their lives.

Munk, a space communications engineer who has worked at Hughes Aircraft Co. and the Lockheed Corp. "Skunk Works" that produced the Stealth Fighter, asked Saunders: "What kind of monitoring is used for oil and gas wells?"

Saunders said the petroleum industry relied primarily on sending a man with a clipboard and pickup truck to check gauges on wells in mesquite-and-javelina country.

Saunders and Munk decided there had to be a better way.

"In the summer of 1991 we began looking at the market. Remote monitoring has been tried in the past, but only large companies could afford it," said Saunders, company president and chief executive officer.

"We decided our product had to meet two criteria. It had to be inexpensive and totally portable," Saunders said.

Munk, vice president of technology, developed and built a prototype of Remote Monitoring's RemoteLINQ unit. The two men found a group of investors and in November last year launched the company.

The company's RemoteLINQ device also is marketed for tower light monitoring.

If aviation warning lights burn out on tall antennas, the owner or operator has 30 minutes in which to notify the Federal Aviation Administration or face fines starting at $8,000, Saunders said.

Remote Monitoring recently licensed four technologies developed for the Department of Energy by Martin Marietta Energy Systems Inc. The technologies will be used to expand the capabilities of Remote Monitoring's products.

One license is for a non-intrusive method for monitoring the condition of electric motors and the equipment that drives them.

Munk explained that the load of an electric motor changes constantly in response to the power it needs to perform different functions.

The motor's work load is reflected back to the motor which responds with more power.

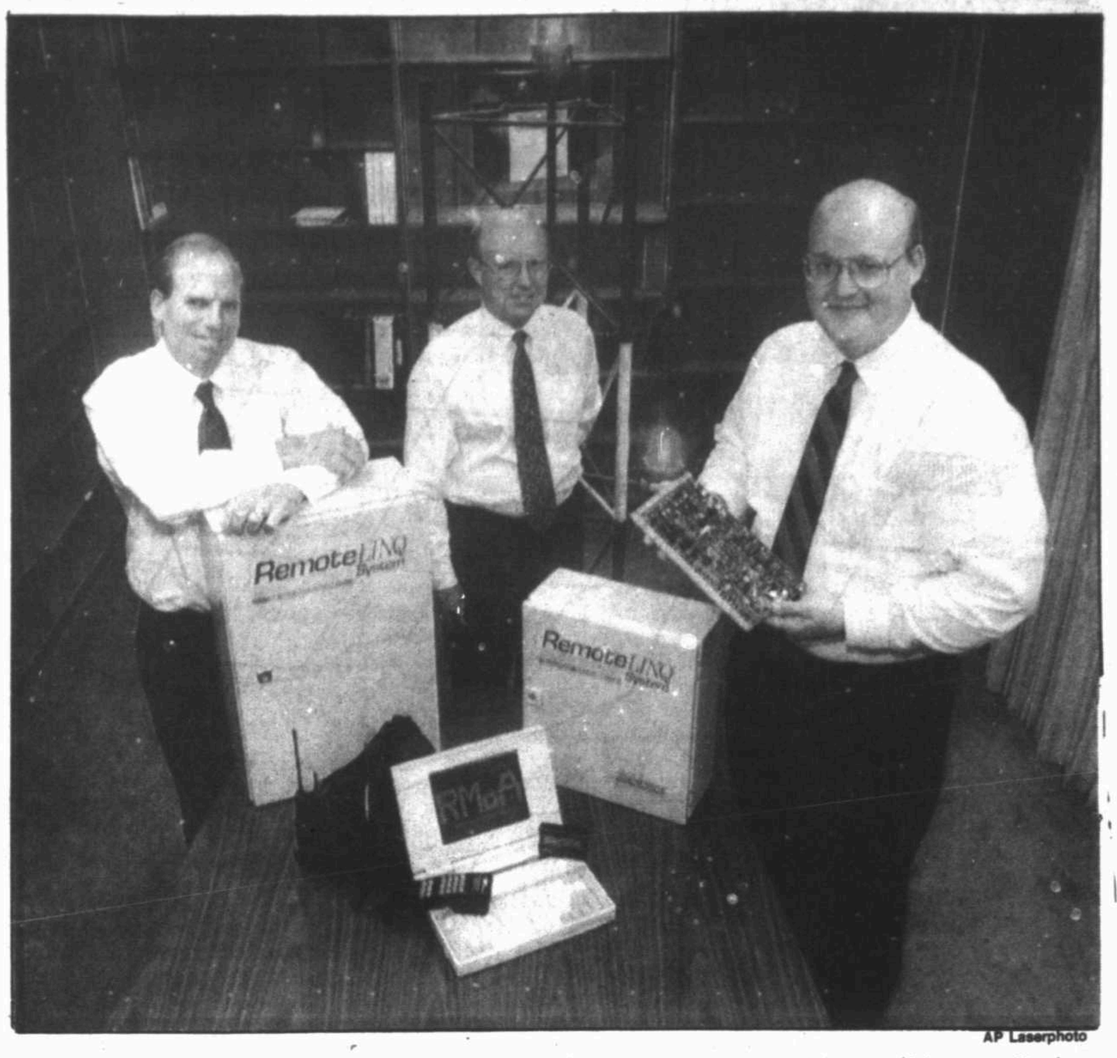

Munk said: "Our RemoteLINQ systems will now be able to not only monitor but also predict the need for predictive maintenance so that our customers can now predetermine pending failures on equipment such as oil wells, compressors and tower light monitors at remote, unattended locations,"

Saunders and Munk said they married several technologies that have become practical and affordable in recent years. "With our merger of recent and affordable technologies, remote monitoring becomes affordable to smaller companies," Munk said.

"We combine both analog and digital signal processing, powerful microprocessors, flexible and simple-to-use software and cellular phones," he said.

Remote locations use cellular phones with solar batteries to receive and transmit data. The device can operate for about 20 days without direct sunlight to recharge batteries.

Other applications for the new company's product include weather monitoring, flood gauging monitoring, environmental monitoring, storage tank level monitoring, tank truck level monitoring and underground storage tank contamination detection.

Enron profits off in quarter

HOUSTON (AP) — Enron Corp. said its third-quarter profit dropped by nearly half after a charge for a hike in the corporate federal income tax rate.

For the three months ended Sept. 30, Enron earned $20.9 million, or 7 cents per share, down from $40.9 million, or 15 cents per share, during the same period a year ago.

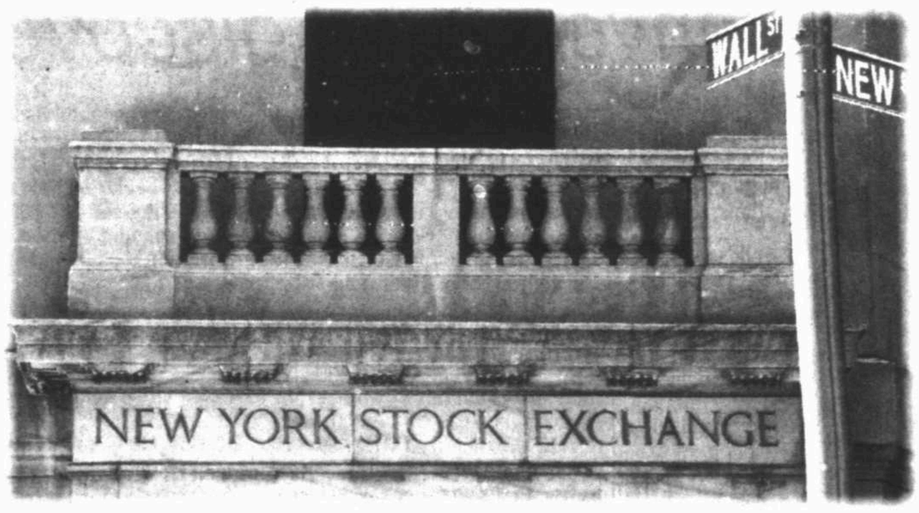

Operating revenue were $1.9 billion, up from $1.5 billion during the third quarter of 1992.

The Houston-based natural gas company said the earnings included a $54 million non-cash charge, or 23 cents per share, to adjust for a 1 percent increase in the corporate federal income tax rate.

The results also included an $11.5 million pre-tax gain from the sale of oil and gas properties and income of $3.7 million, or 2 cents per share, from discontinued operations.

"We are on track to meet our target of a 20 percent increase in earnings per share for 1993 exclusive of the tax adjustment," said Kenneth L. Lay, Enron's chairman and chief executive officer.

For the first three quarters of 1993, Enron had profits of $228.4 million, or 90 cents per share, on revenues of $5.6 billion. That compares with earnings of $207 million, or 88 cents per share, on revenues of $4.3 billion during the same period of 1992.

Corner The Market With Our New CD.

Now You Can Earn Market Returns With The NationsBank Stock Market CD.

You know that investing in the stock market for the long term is the smart thing to do. After all, the stock market has historically achieved superior returns. You'd like to take advantage of higher market returns, but you don't want to risk your principal.

The NationsBank Stock Market CD gives you a chance to realize market returns, without risking a penny of your principal. The CD's interest rate is tied to the Standard & Poor's 500 Composite Stock Price Index, while your principal is an FDIC-insured deposit with NationsBank.

Your Interest Rate Is Based On The S&P 500 Index.

The Stock Market CD offers you instant diversification because your interest rate is based on the S&P 500 Index, which represents 500 of the nation's leading companies. When you open your five-year CD, you'll have a beginning S&P 500 Index value. During the next 12 months, the Index's value at each month end is taken. The month-end values are then averaged for the year. You'll receive an interest payment each year the 12-month average is higher than your beginning Index value.

Your beginning Index value is reset each year. That means your annual interest rate reflects each year's market performance. So unlike stock investments, if the market declines one year, you'll have a new chance to earn a return in later years—without having to recoup a prior decline first.

There Is No Risk To Your Principal.

The Stock Market CD is similar to a traditional CD, offering you complete safety of principal. The CD is issued by NationsBank, one of the largest and most stable financial institutions in the nation. So you have the security of knowing that your principal will be returned to you in full at maturity.

You can invest in the Stock Market CD with a minimum deposit of $10,000, for a single term of five years. And like any other CD, your principal is insured by the FDIC. But unlike a typical fixed-rate CD, the Stock Market CD gives you the chance to earn a higher rate of return.

NationsBank Stock Market CD Example.*

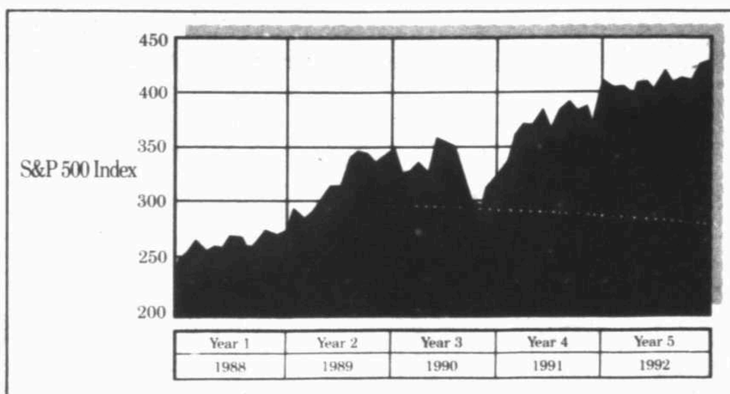

The chart below illustrates that even with a market decline in 1990, when no interest would have been paid, a $10,000 investment made at the beginning of the five-year period from 1988 through 1992 would have earned an annual percentage yield of 7.19%.

It's Easy To Corner The Market.

The Stock Market CD can play a dual role in your investment portfolio—giving you the safety of guaranteed principal and the generally higher overall return of the stock market.

And the Stock Market CD is an easy way to corner the market. You don't need to spend time researching a fund's performance or management. And even better, you pay no sales fees or commissions. You can just invest your money and enjoy the ride, confident that you'll have a safe landing.

We invite you to learn more about the Stock Market CD and the power it can add to your investment portfolio. Our newest CD is just one more way we can help make a difference in your future. So visit your nearby NationsBank or call us at 1-800-424-6290 and see how easy it can be to corner the market with our Stock Market CD.

*This chart describes actual S&P 500 Index performance for the period from 1988 to 1992 as it would have applied to the Stock Market CD if the CD had been offered during that period.
Rounding has occurred. The Annual Percentage Yield (APY) shown represents the APY that would have been earned on the Stock Market CD for that period. If you purchase a Stock Market CD, you will earn a variable rate of interest. Your interest rate and APY may change at the end of each 12-month period during the term of your CD, as set forth in the documents governing your Stock Market CD.

NationsBank®
The Power To Make A Difference.™

The "beginning value" of the S&P 500 Index is based on its valuation at the close of the last business day of the month in which the CD is opened, and is reset each year. The maximum deposit is $5,000,000. Standard FDIC coverage limitations apply. Past performance of the stock market or past changes in the S&P 500 do not guarantee future results. If the average of the month-end values for the S&P 500 Index is equal to or less than the beginning value for any 12-month period during the term of the Stock Market CD, no interest will be paid for that 12-month period. The Stock Market CD is not sponsored, endorsed, sold or promoted by Standard & Poor's and Standard & Poor's makes no representation regarding the advisability of investing in the Stock Market CD. The Stock Market CD offer may be withdrawn at any time without notice. Offer only available at participating banking centers. Early withdrawal is subject to a substantial penalty of principal and interest. The penalty will be forfeiture of all interest not yet paid plus a principal penalty equal to 25% and decreasing by 5% each subsequent year. It is very important that you make sure you will not need your principal prior to maturity before you invest in the Stock Market CD. Loans secured by the Stock Market CD may be available, subject to standard underwriting criteria.

Howard yields Canyon Reef discovery

Staff report

A Canyon Reef discovery has been recorded in Howard County, east of a prior Canyon Reef discovery in the Sewell 30 field, seven miles north of Knott.

COBRA OIL & GAS CORP. finaled the No. 1 Jones Unit "20" to flow 124 barrels of 42 gravity crude and 139 Mcfd on an 11/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 525 psi. The well flowed from open hole interval 8,909 to 8,941 ft., which had been acidized with 250 gallons of 15 percent NeFe acid.

Scheduled as a 9,500 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 8,941 ft. with 5-1/2 inch casing set at 8,909 ft.

On ground elevation of 2,779 ft., formation tops include the Base Clearfork at 6,514 ft., Upper Spraberry at 6,657, Lower Spraberry at 7,194, Dean at 7,995, Wolfcamp at 8,190, and Pennsylvanian Shale at 8,867 ft.

Location is 2,085 ft.f rom north and 93 ft. from west lines of Section 20, Block 33,T-3-S, T&P survey.

Cobra completed a Canyon Reef discovery in the Sewell 30 field in June of this year, testing the No. 1 Sewell "30" to flow 157 barrels of crude and 126 Mcfd from perforations 9,049 to 9,062 ft.

Devonian opened in Yoakum field

Devonian production has apparently been opened in the Kristen field of Yoakum County, 10 miles southwest of Plains.

HARVARD PETROLEUM CORP. tested the No. 1 McGinty to flow 205 barrels of 39.1 gravity crude on a 14/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 230 psi. The well flowed from perforations 11,914 to 11,924 ft., which had been acidized with 1,000 gallons 20 percent NeFe acid.

Permitted as a 12,100 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 11,924 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 11,914 ft.

Formation tops, on kelly bushing elevation of 3,766 ft., include the San Andres at 4,560 ft., Tubb at 7,240, Wolfcamp at 9,133, Pennsylvanian at 10,798, Mississippian at 11,160, and Devonian at 11,898 ft.

Location is 2,559 ft. from south and 743 ft. from west lines of Section 520, Block D, John H. Gibson survey, Abst. 650.

Pecos completion opens Montoya

MOBIL PRODUCING TX & NM INC. has opened Montoya FB2 pay in Pecos County with completion of a producer in the county.

The No. 3 H. Howard Hodge was recompleted for a calculated absolute open flow of 6.2 Mmcfd from perforations 11,214 to 11,414 ft., which had been acidized with 18,000 gallons of 20 percent NeFe acid.

Originally drilled to 11,930 ft., the well was plugged back to 11,505 ft.

Location is 2,318 ft. from north and 2,194 ft. from east lines of Section 8, Block C-3, PSL survey, Abst. 5065, three miles northwest of Coyanosa.

Production from the new pay will be commingled with production from existing perforations at 11,324 to 11,414 ft.

Production reopened in Runnels field

Oil production in the Ballinger West (Jennings) field of Runnels County has been reopened, one mile southwest of Hatchell.

PIONEER ENERGY CORP. completed the No. 1 Cederholm to pump 40 barrels of 41 gravity crude and 45 barrels of water from perforations 4,038 to 4,048 ft. The interval was acidized with 500 gallons of 10 percent acid and fractured with 5,880 gallons of gel and 3,000 lbs. 20/40 sand.

Drilled to 4,170 ft., where 4 1/2 inch casing was set, the well is plugged back to 4,090 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 1,723 ft., include the Serratt at 2,430 t., Serratt sandstone at 2,470, Palo Pinto at 3,426, Capps at 3,710, and Jennings Sandstone at 4,027 ft.

Location is 914 ft. from south and 1,400 ft. from west lines of John J. Eakin survey 527, Abst. 142.

Irion field gets third producer

LAVANCO has added a third producer to the Lavan (Wolfcamp) field of Irion County, extending the field north, six miles east-northeast of Barnhart.

On potential test, the No. 2 Noelke flowed 102 barrels of 47 gravity crude, 480 Mcfd and a trace of water on a 16/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 400 psi. The well flowed from perforations 6,486 to 6,656 ft., which had been acidized with 2,500 gallons of acid.

Drilled to 6,900 ft., the well was plugged back to 6,830 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 6,850 ft.

On ground elevation of 2,534 ft., formation tops include the San Angelo at 1,662 ft., Upper Spraberry at 4,690, Dean at 5,680 and Wolfcamp at 6,235 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from west and 1,881 ft. from south lines of Henry Campbell survey 12, Abst. 902.

Voskam adds sixth well to Gaines field

A sixth producer has been added to the Seminole Northeast (San Andres) field of Gaines County, eight miles north of Seminole.

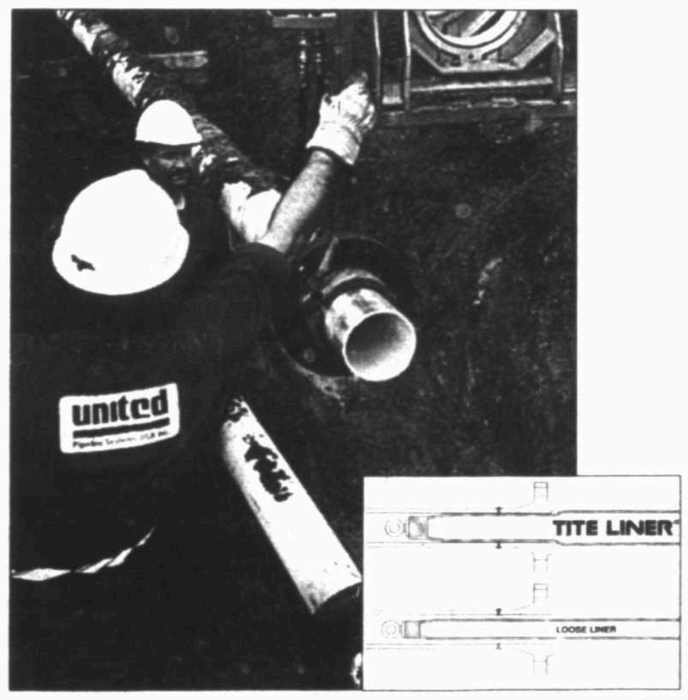

VOSKAMP EXPLORATION INC. tested the No. 2 Riggan "A" to flow 528 barrels of 32 gravity crude and 158 Mcfd on an 18/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 1575 psi. The well flowed from perforations 5,538 to 5,794 ft., which had been acidized with 2,250 gallons of 20 percent NeFe acid.

Total depth was 5,844 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, and the well was plugged back to 5,811 ft.

On kelly bushing of 3,450 ft., formation tops include the Rustler at 2,340 ft., Yates at 3,388, San Andres at 5,060 and San Andres Oil at 5,538 ft.

Surface location was 2,600 ft. from south and 750 ft. from east lines and bottom hole location is 504 ft. from south and 206 ft. from west lines of surface location, Section 268, Block G, WTRR survey.

PRIMARY RECOVERY
SECONDARY RECOVERY TERTIARY RECOVERY and now
PIPELINE RECOVERY
with the Tite Liner™ system.

Once you've gotten that valuable oil out of the ground, you want to keep it out of the ground.

Pipeline leakage costs money. The Tite Liner system stops those leaks, saves money, maximizes flow capacity and extends the life of your existing line.

Polyethylene (HDPE) pipe, larger than your existing pipe, is installed by radial compression. Savings of 50% of the replacement cost are possible, since no trenching is required. The liner pipe bridges pinhole leaks and isolates the corrosive flowstream from your steel pipe. Environmentally responsible monitoring devices along the line permit system inspection and possible leakage detection.

United Pipeline Systems, developer of HDPE radial compression, has installed the Tite Liner system in more than 3 million feet of pipeline.

Once the oil is in your pipeline, our system keeps it there! Ask for our detailed installation brochure.

Frontier sells units

Frontier Natural Gas Corp. of Oklahoma City, Okla., plans to sell 250,000 units for about $24 each in an initial public offering that will be underwritten by Paulson Investment Co. Inc.

The independent energy company that produces oil and gas in Oklahoma, Texas, Arkansas, Louisiana, Kansas and North Dakota reported net income of $195,000 for the six months ended June 30, compared to net income of $88,000 in the same period the year before.

Of the estimated $5.6 million the company expects to receive from the offering, the company plans to use $2.8 million to acquire natural gas producing properties and $2.8 million to increase working capital. The balance of the proceeds will be used for general corporate purposes, according to a filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Each units sold will consists of two 12 percent convertible preferred shares, one common share and one common stock purchase warrant. The company's preferred shares, common shares and warrants are expected to trade on NASDAQ.

"MEET OUR ELITE"

Fran Hawke, Associate Manager of Temporary Resources and Vickey Banks, Manager, congratulate Tami Law (center) on her "Elite" status.

Tami Law has qualified as a Temporary Resources "Elite Temp". She is a vivacious, versatile employee who earned her superior rating from a local physician for whom she works as a receptionist on an ongoing basis. Tami is currently on a long term assignment with an oil company.

When not at work, Tami enjoys painting, reading and playing tennis. Her favorite pastime is visiting with her great grandmother who is in a local retirement home.

Let the "POWER IN PERSONNEL" handle all of your employment needs. For a day, a week or a career.....Temporary Resources has the perfect employee for you.

Inter-American builds vapor recovery units

By Ellen Hopkins

INTER-AMERICAN OIL WORKS INC. of Odessa has started building vapor recovery units during the last six months, according to Johnny Kidd, president.

He said the units install in about an hour and hook to the casinghead. Kidd said although vapor recovery uniits — which reduce pressure in order to increase production — are not new when used for the entire fields, his are designed for use on from one to eight wells.

He added that independents are using these on a small scale for twoor three wells. They are skid mounted and easily portable, and run on a percentage timer.

CUMMINS SOUTHERN PLAINS INC. Odessa Branch Manager Gary Dunlap said the new engine line for '94 will be out soon.

The new M-11, a fully electronic engine, is built on the strength of the L-10 engine and will take its place. Dunlap said the M-11 is a slightly larger displacement engine than the L-10.

He said as always, dozens of engine sizes are available at Cummins Southern Plains, which is also a distributor for Onan generators.

E&E SERVICE & SUPPLY of Odessa is always offering new products to its customers which are basically oilwell service companies.

President Edwin Travis said he wants to give his customers more competitively priced replacement parts for name brand equipment. He offers these "investment casting parts" at a 40 percent savings.

Travis cited the example of a repair kit for the Trico rod elevator. The manufacturer's list price for the kit, which has enough parts for two complete replacements, lists for $237. Travis sells the same quality kit for about $143, or 40 percent less. He said it usually takes about a year for him to recover his investment in the casting costs, but it's worth it. He intends to spend about $50,000 in the next year on investment tooling.

DUPRE SUPPLY CO. has found it's worth it to go the extra mile for customers.

The company provides pipe, valves and fittings, and has furnished customers a a utility hookup trailer that goes with them to the wellsite.

Dupre's Odessa Store Manager Freddy Aguirre said the triler contains all the valves and fittings a customer may need on site, while keepign the supplies out of the wather. He said it's especially useful for wells that are so far out of town, customers don't find it convenient to travel the distance for an extra fitting.

He said business has steadily increased the last several months. The company has been busy supplying a CO_2 project north of Odessa and a four-battery tank hook up.

Along with supplying extra service to customers comes providing them with a new service that wasn't previously available.

PERMIAN BRINE SALES of Odessa has done just that. Permian Brine dissolves the salt out of salt layers in the earth, leaving caverns which have been used to store propane.

Company President Russ Hickerson has received Railroad Commission approval to dispose of non-hazardous solid waste, such as tank bottoms and drilling cuttings, in these caverns.

Hickerson said a 400,000 barrel cavern is located near Big Spring and a one million barrel cavern near Fort Stockton that he plans to use for this purpose.

MEETINGS

Logging group to discuss current trends

Permian Basin OIL REPORT Business Review

An Oil Report Special Feature

New variation on oil & gas property auction announced by PABCO Energy, Inc.

The climate for "doing business" in the industry today is probably better than it has been since 1984, the last high point of action.

Last year alone, it was estimated that $10 billion of oil and gas properties were available and $4.5 billion changed hands.

With this information in mind, Hal McClure, the president of Pabco Energy Inc. has been promoting what he calls "Trade Days".

These are marketplace situations, based on a forum concept, where deals can be transacted on a more personal and consistent basis.

It gives industry members, who wish to conduct business and get information, an opportunity to meet 'face to face' with minimal risks and obligations.

McClure believes that this addresses and provides an answer to an industry requirement..

The advantage to this plan of broad industry participation is that no one single organization realizes financial gain from promoting the Trade Days idea.

The intention is to organize the marketplace under the umbrella of a non-profit corporation whose members are the sponsoring companies that provide the leadership role.

The key to Trade Days is the regularly scheduled meetings provided for the purpose of conducting business.

McClure's predictions for the future of the Trade Days concept are that Trade Days will eventually become the place where energy companies meet to to exchange commodities and ideas as well as make deals.

Houston, Texas was targeted for the first Trade Day which was launched October 7th, for more information about future Trade Days call Pabco at (918) 584-3111.

It's a family affair when the Lees cook a Middle Eastern feast. Here, W.D. "Dub" Lee and his daughter Jessica gather the cored squash as Lucy Lee demonstrates the correct method to core the vegetable.

MIDDLE EAST FEAST

In making stuffed squash, a mont-ara is used to core of the vegetable.

A meat and rice mixture is rolled in a grape leaf to make Wa-rak Inab.

Stuffed squash is placed in a pot with lemons and stewed tomatoes, covered with water, and cooked.

Kasey Weaver stuffs a yellow squash with the meat and rice mixture during the cooking school.

Kerry Davis serves up another stuffed grape leaf as Lu Parker prepares to sample the finished product.

Although St. Nicholas Episcopal Church is a common place for friends to gather for food and fellowship, a recent Saturday evening offered a group of approximately 25 people, including several married couples, an additional experience. The group gathered in the church's Parish Hall for both food and fellowship, but in addition, they were there to learn how to prepare what they would eat — a Middle East feast.

The group's instructor was Lucy Lee, whose Lebanese heritage shows why she is an expert in Middle Eastern cuisine. Her father was from Ramallah, Palestine, and moved to the United States when he was 19 years old. Mrs. Lee's mother was born in America, but her grandparents moved to the States from Beirut, Lebanon.

"This is the kind of cooking I grew up on," Mrs. Lee said, adding that she grew up in an "old fashioned" way, too.

"I was 22 when I met my husband, and married him when I was 24. Before that, I wasn't allowed to go on a date by myself. I would put on lipstick and my father would make me wipe it off," Mrs. Lee said. "I stayed in the kitchen with the women while the men were in the living room for as long as I remember."

Due to a continuing interest by several of her friends, Mrs. Lee agreed to teach the cooking class, which was organized as an hands-on learning experience.

She began the class by having everyone wash their hands, don aprons and sit down for a brief overview of what they would be doing that evening.

"These recipes are three of the things I was raised on," Mrs. Lee said, explaining a little bit about each recipe they would be preparing: rolled grape leaves, or Wa-rak Inab; stuffed squash or Coosa Mih-Shee,

Olio performers take acts to China

By Marilyn McKnight Harrison

Twenty-four Midlanders departed last Sunday for a two-week trip to China as part of a cultural exchange between Midland and its Sister City of Dongying.

McKnight-Harrison

For their international presentation, the local performers prepared the best of the Midland Community Theatre's Summer Mummers Olio acts from the past 45 years. The company, which consists of three directors and 10 performers, is now entertaining its way across the Shandong Province of China. When not assisting with the production, the other 11 members of the delegation are taking advantage of an opportunity of a lifetime to visit the other side of the world.

As a grand send-off and to benefit the endeavor, a China "Super Olio" Gala was held last weekend at the Yucca Theatre. A large crowd filled the auditorium to see the "best of the best" of the Olio acts, which had been assembled into an outstanding show and one which transcends the language barrier.

Chinese decorations included hanging paper dragons and lanterns. Individual tables were decorated with Chinese hats holding the traditional mummers popcorn, along with miniature parasols, fortune cookies, chopsticks and folding fans.

Among those turning out for the fun evening were Lolly and Lester Van Pelt, Delores (Mrs. Jack) McCall, Janet and Corby Considine, Paula and Frank Cahoon with their son, Joseph, and Barry Beck, who was chairman of the trip's planning committee, and his wife, Mary.

THIS JUST IN via Spam-O-Gram: Gary Allen and his wife, Sylvia Gray, recently hosted the First Annual Invitational Spam-O-Rama in their home. Co-hostess was Kristilie Stevens-Reyna.

Culinary delights included Spam Pate, Spam Fondue, Spam-stuffed Jalapenos, Spamchiladas, Spam Casserole, Spam Chili, Spam Posole, Spamburgers, Spam Luau, Spam Kebabs and Spamwiches.

The serving table was decorated by candlelight and with Spam cans.

Entertainment for the evening included a Spam Limerick Contest, a Spam Carving Contest, a dramatic reading from Dr. Suess's book, "Green Eggs and Spam," and "The Spamettes" performing the classical song, "Fried Spam."

Honored guest Dr. Michael Brady of Miaim, Fla., served as judge for the food contest.

Kelly Taylor of Gainesville received the Grand Prize Award for her entry, Lone Star Pate. Other prize winners were Jimmy Whitehead for the ethnic dish award; Helen Whitehead, Miss Spam Contest; Shirley Ireland, best limerick, and John Buster, best Spam carving.

Additional out-of-town guests were Peggy and Melvin Dennis of White Deer, Texas.

Due to the overwhelming success of the event, plans are already under way for the Second Annual Invitational Spam-O-Rama.

NEIGHBORS SURROUNDING the Ida Jo Moore Park on North A Street, Nobles Avenue and Club Drive, met with their families at the park recently for their second annual gathering to get better acquainted and share concerns for the park. It was the first children's park built in Midland, circe 1958.

Approximately 45 people from A Street, Cuthbert, Ridgles, Nobles, Harvard and Club Drive attended. Both new and long-time residents of the neighborhood included Bruce Gilmour and his family, who recently moved back to Midland. Among other attendees were Barbara and Jim Leaton, Susan and Mike Riek, Debra and Fred Westmoreland, Eloise Elgin, George Parker, Barbara Woodruff, Larry Fitzsimmons and Mary Frances Beverley.

Organizers of the gathering were Treva Beckmann, Pat and Tom Rattan, Marilyn and Charles McGaff, Vaneta Boles and Julie Montgomery.

Mayor J.D. Faircloth, County Commissioner Guy McCrary and City Councilman L.D. "Buddy" Sipes Jr. spoke on current interests and concerns of Midland.

WORD HAS BEEN received here of the Midland men who pledged college fraternities at the close of fall rush.

They include:

Texas A&M University — Aggie Men's Club: Stephen Canon, son of Judy and Mike Canon; Phi Gamma Delta: Murray Van Eman, son of Jan and Charky Van Eman; Phi Kappa Alpha: Neil Geismar, son of Rita and Bob Geismar, and Sigma Phi Epsilon: Rob Foster, son of Linda and David Whitaker.

Texas Tech University — Kappa Alpha: Matthew Bell, son of Ellen and Larry Bell; Phi Kappa Psi: Mason Askins, son of Susan Askins; Pi Kappa Alpha: Tony Olivas, son of Gaylia and Manuel Olivas, and Brian Robey, son of Ann and Ken Robey; Pi Kappa Phi: Charles West, son of Marthyle and Charles West.

Also, Sigma Phi Epsilon: Nick Biggs, son of Randye and Gary Biggs; Blair Geismar, son of Rita and Bob Geismar; Kris Lundberg, son of Sandy Lundberg and Tom Lundberg; Alan Neighbors IV, son of Linda Neighbors; Brian Roberts, son of Mary and John Wilkenson; Rocky Van Husen, son of Laura and Bob Van Husen, and Cody Welch, son of Juanette and Bill Welch; Tau Kappa Epsilon: Chris Hale, son of Kathy and Burl Fuller, and Jason Lewis, son of Mary and Skipper Lewis.

Texas Christian University — Phi Gamma Delta: Herd Midkiff, son of Toni and Bob Midkiff, and Sigma Alpha Epsilon: Kirk French, son of Sandra and Arthur Dragisic.

LEE: Feast quiets learning cooks and green salad with wheat, or Tabuli.

(From 1F)

Then, the work, which looked and sounded a lot more like fun, began. Squash was passed out and the coring of the vegetables commenced. Each person used a tool called a mont-ara, which is a long, knife-like utensil used to remove the core from the squash to create a shell.

"Now, you take this little booger," Mrs. Lee said, holding up the mont-ara, "and cut the back off the squash. Cut just enough to get the core out. Measure on the outside of the squash for the depth, then scoop out the core. Poke all the around until it comes out. Try not to make a hole on the other end."

The core is discarded and the squash is washed.

Some "cooks" began measuring rice to mix in the meat while others chopped onions. Still others began washing out pots.

The sound of buzzing voices filled the room as members of the group talked about their days' events, their children and their gardens.

But with a bang on a pan, Mrs. Lee quickly gather their attention, "Arabic cooks, we have here fresh garlic and lamb bones that go in the bottoms of the pots before we cook. The garlic goes in both pots, and the lamb bones go in the bottom of the pot for the stuffed grape leaves."

Everyone surveyed what Mrs. Lee was showing them, then she announced, "You may now make noise."

SOON THE SQUASH was returned to the cooks along with washed grape leaves, both ready to be stuffed with the meat mixture they had created.

"To roll the grape leaves, take a leaf and turn it with the stem toward you and the veins up on the plate. Pinch the stem off and place a small roll of meat on the leaf. Roll it up like you would a cigar or cigarette. Tuck the ends in on both sides," Mrs. Lee said.

The group attentively watched as Mrs. Lee demonstrated. A participant soon announced, "Oh, I see. Just like you roll up the end of a burrito, only on both ends."

Mrs. Lee said the bigger the leaf is, the easier it is to roll.

The meat mixture was stuffed into the squash and all the grape leaves were rolled and ready.

A pot with garlic was carefully loaded with squash, stewed tomatoes and lemon, then covered with water. Plates were placed on top of the squash to keep it from rising, and the pot was placed on a medium-hot burner to cook.

Another pot with garlic and lamb bones was carefully stacked with rolled grape leaves arranged in neat rows, closely together, with the next row placed in the opposite direction. Water to cover and salt was added before placing small plates on top and placing the pot on a medium-hot burner. A little later, lemon was added.

While the pots of food were cooking, the cooks-in-training began preparing the Tabuli. Tomatoes and green onions were chopped, parsley and mint were run through the electric chopper, and the cracked wheat was squeezed to remove the water and added to the mixture. The dressing — made of salt, oil and lemon — was added and mixed in.

TO COMPLETE the meal, Mrs. Lee had ordered spinach squares and Syrian bread. The bread was similar in taste to a flour tortilla and resembled pita bread. She ordered it from Droubis — Middle Eastern Ingredients, 333 Hillcraft, Houston, Texas, 77081, (713) 988-5897.

"From there, you can order just about any Middle Eastern food you want," Mrs. Lee said.

For dessert, she ordered Baklawa from Deliciously Yours... Sweets of the Middle East, Shatila Food Products, 6505 W. Warren, Dearborn, Mich., 48126, (313) 934-1520 or fax (313) 934-3232.

When everything was ready, the blessing was sung and dinner was served.

Suddenly, the roar of conversation that had rumbled the Parish Hall for most of the evening was gone and silenced prevailed. Everyone was too busy eating to talk.

An occasional "This is great," or "Wow, this is a lot better than that commercial stuff!" could be heard. Then one participant announced, "You are a success, Madam Teacher."

Another kudo was heard, "This Tabuli is great. How ever you much you take, you're going to want more."

When the meal was completed, everyone pitched in to wash and put away the dishes as they talked about when they would gather again.

Tentative plans include a class on French cooking and one about Cajun cuisine.

The following are Mrs. Lee's recipes:

ROLLED GRAPE LEAVES OR WA-RAK INAB

1½ pounds chile grind ground round or shoulder (lean)
1 pound grape leaves, fresh or preserved*
Juice of 3 lemons
¼ cup water or 1 small can tomato sauce
¾ cup rice
1 onion, chopped
1 bell pepper
2 teaspoons salt
½ teaspoon pepper
3 or 4 pieces garlic
Small plates to use on top to keep the rolls from floating around
■ The original recipe calls for ½ teaspoon allspice, but Mrs. Lee does not use it.

* Preserved grape leaves are available in jars and can be found at gourmet counters in large grocery stores.

STUFFING: Mix uncooked rice with raw ground beef in large bowl. Add 1 teaspoon salt, pepper, and ¼ cup water or small can of tomato sauce. Add onion and bell pepper.

If preserved leaves are used, wash well. Fresh grape leaves should be soaked in boiling water to wilt or soften them. Place each leaf, greener side down, stem toward you. Place 1 heaping teaspoon of stuffing on it in a narrow roll. Roll as a package, tucking in the ends. Roll firmly, yet loosely enough to allow rice to swell as it cooks.

Before adding the rolled grape leaves to the pot, place the garlic pods in the bottom of the pot. There is no need to peel them.

Arrange leaf rolls in neat rows, close together. Place second row in opposite direction, and so on. Place an inverted dish on top to keep them in place. Pour enough water to which 1 teaspoon of salt has been added to reach the inverted dish. Cover and cooked over medium fore for 45 or 50 minutes. Add lemon juice and cook for 10 more minutes. Serve hot. Serves four.

STUFFED SQUASH OR COOSA MIH-SHEE

Zucchini or yellow squash can be used for this dish. They should be rather plump. Wash the squash, slice off the top and core, leaving a ¼-inch shell. Be careful not to break the shell.

STUFFING:
½ pound ground chile grind round or shoulder (lean)
1 medium can stewed tomatoes
1 onion, chopped
1 bell pepper, chopped
8 squash
½ cup rice
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon pepper
1 can tomato sauce
■ The original recipe calls for ¼ teaspoon allspice, but Mrs. Lee does not use it.

Mix uncooked rice with ground beef in bowl. Add salt, pepper, onion, bell pepper and tomato sauce to mixture. Stuff squash with this mixture but do not pack too tightly. Allow room for rice to swell in cooking. Arrange the squash in large pot. Add canned tomatoes. Place an inverted dish or two over the squash to allow them to remain down while cooking. Cover the squash with water and cook over medium fire for 45 to 50 minutes. Serve hot.

GREEN SALAD WITH WHEAT OR TABULI

1 cup cracked wheat
1 bunch green onions
6 tomatoes
Juice of 3 lemons
1 bunch finely cut parsley
Salt to taste
½ cup olive oil
1 bunch finely cut mint (or 2 tablespoons dried mint)

To chop parsley and mint, use an electric chopper.

Place cracked wheat in bowl, cover with warm water and allow to soak for 10 minutes.

All vegetables should be finely chopped. Drain cracked wheat and squeeze the water out. Add to the vegetables and pour dressing over all and mix well. Dressing is a mix of lemon juice, oil and salt.

Arrange on a bed of lettuce or serve as pita bread sandwiches.

Laura Larsen, left, and Julie Richey work at copying Claude Monet's 'The Garden at Giverny" in chocolate recently. The finished artwork will be shipped to New York, where it will be place atop a chocolate cake. The women's ArtCakes have featured copies of works of such artists as Matisse, Van Gogh and Magritte.

Great art is 'piece of cake'

By Susan Hightower

DALLAS (AP) — Layer by layer, two women slowly reproduce a Claude Monet painting of a sun-dappled garden flush with purple blooms. A dab, a swirl, another stroke of brown chocolate and "The Garden at Giverny" will be ready to eat.

Adding a whole new dimension to good taste, Laura Larsen and Julie Groschen Richey have made a business of turning fine art into gourmet cakes.

Over the past three years, the pair have created about 50 ArtCakes, pricey replicas of famous works in colorful chocolate-painted cake. Among them are "Sunflowers," "Irises" and "Starry Night" by Vincent van Gogh; works by Rene Magritte and Henri Matisse; and a wedding rendering of Gustave Klimt's, "The Kiss," spangled with edible 24-karat gold leaf.

"It was definitely a show-stopper at their reception," said Larsen.

LARSEN AND Richey met in college, where both studied art history and shared a circle of friends who occasionally entertained themselves with baking and icing cakes to resemble works of art. At the urging of another friend, the women began refining those early attempts in 1990, and ArtCakes was born.

The cakes, priced from about $100 to $500 and up, turn a profit for the pair. But they say the exacting labor is nourished by their love of art.

"That's the accessibility of ArtCakes," Richey said.

"This really expensive $85 million van Gogh painting that belongs to a Japanese corporation, no one will ever see. But because we so painstakingly reproduce the painting with all the right colors and all the right textures and everything, it's like a substitute for seeing the painting in person," she said. "It just gets people talking about art, thinking about art, appreciating it."

The women used to bake the cakes themselves, but now buy them from a bakery in Italian creme, lemon, white or chocolate with raspberry filling — whatever a client wants.

The "canvas" is then created by sheathing the cake in a thin casing of white chocolate.

One of them, generally working freehand, scratches a rough outline of the artwork to be copied onto the chocolate. Then the painting begins atop a white-tiled table under track lights in the dining room of Richey's home.

The women use a microwave to melt 1-inch disks of white chocolate, then mix the molten chocolate with either concentrated gel or powdered food coloring, using small plates as palettes and sometimes blending the paste with a dab of shortening.

THEY PAINT the dyed chocolate onto the cake with paintbrushes and rub it with their fingers to smear, smooth and blend.

On average, the process takes about five to 10 hours per cake. The gold leaf cake, however, required more than 20 hours. And since the work must be done at the last minute to keep the cakes fresh, Larsen and Richey worked through the night before the wedding.

The women don't consider themselves artists when they make ArtCakes, although they admit both have an ability to copy well. But they do say they treasure the insights gained from the work.

"We feel like after we've spent eight to 10 to 12 hours hovering over 'The Starry Night,' we know the painting so well," Richey said. "What was van Gogh thinking when he made this color, or what are these weird brush strokes there? Did he paint it all at once, did he do it over five days, did he come back to it a month later, was he going through angst ...?"

"Once you make an art cake, it's hard not to love the image, knowing it so well — knowing every petal of every sunflower, all the bristly parts and all the little dried leaf parts," Larsen said.

The women take special pride in making the cakes completely edible. A copy of Alberto Giacometti's "The Piazza" featured the artist's stylized, elongated human figures modeled from chocolate-coated raw spaghetti striding atop a chocolate cake. And to get the right bright lavender shade for another work, one cake's design included a topping of grape Kool-Aid.

ARTCAKE COMMISSIONS have included receptions and birthday parties for prominent art lovers, patrons and dealers in Dallas and elsewhere. "The Garden at Giverny," a 9x13-inch cake that cost $250, was shipped off for a soiree on Staten Island, N.Y., earlier this month.

"When people ask us who our clients are, we always say they're rich people who like art. At least, you have to be able to afford a $200 or $300 cake," Richey said. "We've done cakes for people that have that particular painting in their collection."

One recipient, Ted Robson, found his birthday surprise — a version of "The Scream" by Edvard Munch in white cake — only too fitting.

"It was an appropriate cake, because there's that bald person sitting on the bridge and just screaming," Robson said, still laughing a year later. "I do have a lack of hair on top and it was my 50th birthday."

Another Dallas resident, Nance Chapman, has served several of the cakes at her parties.

"I've never had anything that didn't look exactly like what I wanted," she said. "My feeling always was, 'I probably can't buy a Monet but here I can eat one.' I always thought it was quite fun."

Cake-making is just one part of Oggetti, the business the two women hope will become their full-time jobs. Richey is director of public relations at the Volunteer Center of Dallas County, while Larsen is assistant director of admissions at the University of Dallas — both women's alma mater — and has nearly completed an MBA.

WHEN WORKING on the other half of Oggetti, the women leave Richey's sweet-smelling kitchen for her dust-coated garage, where they use a power drill, belt sanders and a giant circular wet saw to cut marble tiles into chalky squares for mosaic tables and floors.

"We've had all kinds of adventures together, from learning about mortar and stone," Larsen said, "to learning about chocolate and sugar and food color."

Ladies association to meet

Midland Country Club Ladies Association will meet Friday at the club. Social time will be 11:30 a.m. with lunch to follow at noon.

Gwen M. Znerold, author, lecturer, teacher and tour escort, will present a program on "Accessoring with Antiques" and "Silver/American and English/Characteristics and Identification."

Ms. Znerold has given presentations on 50 different topics and in 20 different states. She conducts collectors' tours twice a year, with emphasis on antique-oriented shopping and education.

Reservations may be made by calling 682-4378; cancellations should be made by noon Thursday.

DEAR ABBY

No point in pitching marriage to woman playing the field

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I recently broke up with a young woman I truly loved. She told me she loved me, too, and we even spoke of marriage. (We are both over 21.) The reason for our breakup was that she wanted to continue going out with her "guy friends."

Van Buren

I told her I would like to meet these "guy friends" — and perhaps they could become "our" friends. One of these guys was her ex-boyfriend whom she very nearly married a couple of years ago. (She sidestepped my question.)

Was I wrong to break up with her over this? I am a very understanding person, but she made such an issue over insisting that she continue to see her "guy friends" while we were considering marriage, I had second thoughts about marrying her.

Was I too hasty in breaking up with her? — NAMELESS

DEAR NAMELESS: No. A woman who wants to continue to go out with "guy friends" (translation: "date") is clearly not ready for marriage.

I think you deserve a woman who will hold marriage as sacred as you do. If this young woman wants to maintain friendships with other men, that's fine — but her wanting to continue to DATE them should send you a clear signal that she is not ready to forsake all others.

DEAR ABBY: I thought you and your readers might enjoy a poem I wrote that illustrates the possible effects of too much plastic surgery. — P.I. MALTBIE, LONG BEACH, CALIF.

POOR BUTTERFLY

"Be a brand-new you," the ad said.
"Time to get your life in gear."
So I consulted the plastic surgeon:
A brand-new me was about to appear.
I've been tucked and sucked and sanded.
I've been lifted and shifted around.
When all this surgery's over,
Just my feet will touch the ground.
My money's all spent, the stitches have healed.
And now all the men say, "Zowie!"
Meanwhile, my plastic surgeon's moved
To a beachfront home on Maui.

DEAR ABBY: We should learn to speak up and make decisions instead of responding, "I don't care," which is what I did when I was a young and very shy little girl.

When I was 4 years old, my neighbor asked, "Do you want some candy?"

I replied, "I don't care."

She said, "Well, I don't care either" — and I didn't get any candy!

After that, I quit saying, "I don't care." Please pass this along to people who say "I don't care" when they mean "yes," but are too shy to say so. — SAN DIEGO READER

DEAR READER: I'm passing this along because I do care, and hope this will encourage people to quit saying, "I don't care."

DEAR ABBY: I have been married 5½ years to a man I love dearly, and I believe he loves me, but a problem has come up. A few weeks ago, he came home from work and said he was going to take a female co-worker who is single and his age to a basketball game. (We have season tickets.) He said, "This way you won't have to go since you are not as excited about sporting events as I am." I felt hurt, confused and angry, but I told him to go ahead and take her.

Now he tells me he would like to take her to another game! That just drove a stake through my heart! What should I do? He says he loves me, and he sees this as an innocent thing. He can't understand why he doesn't have the right to have female friends. — BROKENHEARTED WIFE

DEAR WIFE: You should have a long talk with your husband and tell him that you do not want him taking another woman to a sporting event or anywhere else. If he thinks "dating" another woman is innocent, he needs to join you in some sessions with a marriage counselor. If he refuses to go — go alone; otherwise, I see this as the beginning of the end of your marriage.

P.S. It might be a good idea to read up on the subject of basketball and learn to appreciate the game with your husband.

Consultants becoming a fixture

Weddings of well-to-do often organized by bridal consultants

By Melissa Fletcher Stoeltje
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — Isn't it nice to know that some things never change? Take marriage. Even today, all you need is a ring, a preacher and two little words.

And a woman who wants to know if anyone in your family is allergic to salmon.

She would be your wedding consultant, a breed of bridal professional who is fast becoming the matrimonial fixture of the '90s, especially among the well-to-do. Average Joes and Josephines may be downsizing their weddings in these recessionary times, but many upper-crusters are still getting hitched in royal style. And often they're hiring bridal consultants.

Consultants typically:

Help book the church and reception hall; order the wedding dress and schedule alterations; arrange wedding portraits; hone the guest list; select and mail invitations; choose and enlist the florist, the photographer and the musicians; select the menu and the wine; settle on the table decorations; order the cake; commission the matchbooks; disperse the wedding announcements; plan and execute pre-wedding parties; and set up lodging for out-of-town guests, among zillions of other details.

BUT WHO ARE these (predominantly female) wizards who, for a price, can get the groom to the church or temple on time, keep the band out of the shrimp dip and Aunt Alice away from the champagne fountain long enough to keep her from falling in?

They're self-professed organization freaks with nerves of steel — women who don't flip over dropped wedding cakes, lost rings, tardy priests, hung-over attendants or maids of honor strung out on Sudafed. They're combination gophers, go-betweens, bouncers, therapists, diplomats, mother confessors and battlefield generals who will place themselves — bodily, if necessary — between the fragile bride and her teeming hordes of admirers.

They're people like Janet Warren, one in a handful of Houston women unofficially recognized as the creme de la creme of bridal consultants. She sits inside Aztec Party Handlers and paints in terse terms what it takes to do the job.

"I can hang tough," she says. "I get very close to my girls, and I can be loving and considerate. But I'm no milquetoast. I don't take anything off people."

Got a hankering to chit-chat with the nervous bride before the ceremony begins? It's Warren's stony visage you'll see peering out of the dressing room, pouring lukewarm champagne all over your plans. Think it would be big fun to put live goldfish in the groom's gas tank? You'll have to get around Warren first.

UNLIKE THE rest of us, wedding consultants seem to have been born with the knowledge that you don't put initials on invitations, that rock ballads during the ceremony are gauche, that 39-year-old brides probably shouldn't wear baby's breath in their hair ... And while today's etiquette standards are admittedly more lax than in decades of yore, social pitfalls still lurk around every corner.

"There is a very delicate balance," says Warren, who has been consulting for 10 years and currently has eight weddings going. "There are some things I'll put my foot down about, like tails at a 1 p.m. wedding. But then you have those gray areas ... "

Those gray areas — reception line or no? foot the lodging bill for out-of-town guests or no? — are one reason that people hire consultants. (People with a fair amount of disposable income, that is: To hire a consultant, generally tack on 10 percent to 15 percent of the cost of whatever arrangements they handle to your already hefty wedding price tag.

This is according to the Association of Bridal Consultants.) But there are other reasons that clients depend on these fonts of nuptial knowledge. Consultants worth their salt have cultivated relationships with the best florists, photographers, cake makers and others within the "wedding team" and can often finagle preferential treatment, even discounts.

"Not only do we save clients time and stress, we know which hotel has the best food, which food holds the best," says Rita Holland, who handled the Houston wedding of Olympic gymnast Mary Lou Retton.

JUST AS VALUABLE are the psychic goods they offer — the sympathetic ear at 4 a.m. to the panicked mother-of-the-bride convinced the color of her shoes is wrong or the impartial sounding board when ex-spouses collide over costs.

But there's no more treacherous territory than the barb-fraught path between mother and daughter. Consultants walk a tightrope between pleasing Mama and pleasing the bride-to-be (who may argue it's Her Day so she should get Her Way).

"I'd say the biggest challenge in being a consultant is keeping Daddy at ease about the budget and keeping Mother and Daughter from killing each other," says Warren.

ANNIVERSARY

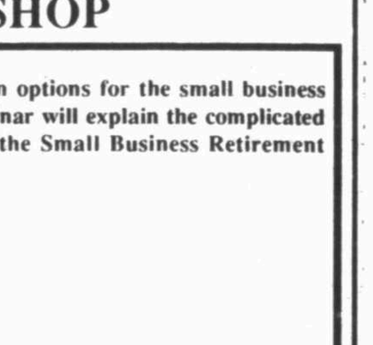

Jenkins celebrate 50th year together

Raymond and Ruth Jenkins of Midland celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary with a family dinner Oct. 2 at Green Tree Country Club. Hosts were their children and spouses.

Jenkins and the former Ruth Carra Nell Robinson were married Oct. 2, 1943, in Marfa. They have four children — Raymond (Scooter) Jenkins and Tom Jenkins of Midland, David Jenkins of Dallas and Helen Chambers of Tyler — as well as six grandchildren.

Jenkins served in the European Theater of Operations during World War II, participating in eight campaigns including the Normandy Invasion on Debarkation Day (D-Day) and campaigns in North Africa.

After the war, the couple lived in Austin before moving to Midland in 1947. They are owners of Jenkins Jewelry and Luggage and Gifts and are members of St. Luke's United Methodist Church.

Teens want to know where they stand

Associated Press

Disciplining a teen-ager can be tricky, stresses Ladies' Home Journal magazine. Dr. Kirsten Dahl, associate clinical professor at the Yale Child Study Center, offers the following advice:

■ Make rules and limits completely clear. "Despite their grousing, what teens most want to know is that their parents will hold firm to their values, rules and standards of behavior," explains Dahl.

■ Be willing to listen and negotiate. Explain the reasons for your rules, but let him express his feelings. Negotiate and compromise until you reach a decision you can all live with.

■ Keep in touch with other parents; you'll be better prepared to respond when your teen-ager laments that you're the only parent in the whole town that insists she be home by 11 p.m. on weekends. "Perhaps your rules are too rigid, and you need to discuss that," adds Dahl. On the other hand, you have a perfect right to say, "I know I'm the only parent, but I feel strongly that the others are wrong.

■ Make sure the punishment fits the crime. Be reasonable; sometimes it does take longer to get home from a basketball game. But if every Saturday night you get a phone call at five minutes to curfew, you need to find out what's going on. Consequences for missing curfew must be logical. Grounding or taking away the car keys for a week or two makes sense; six months doesn't.

Trees benefit Permian Basin

By Deborah A. Benge

Fall is absolutely the best time of the year to be planting trees. Air and soil temperatures are mild, soil moisture levels good, winds calm, sunlight less intense and all of these conditions mean better tree establishment. And the reasons for planting trees were never more plentiful.

Benge

For our city alone trees add color, flowers and beautiful shapes, forms and textures. They screen undesirable scenery, soften the harshness of masonry, concrete, asphalt, metal and glass (of which we've no shortages). Trees contribute to a sense of community pride and ownership.

Trees offer psychological benefits that can't be measured, but it's known that trees have a positive impact on our moods and emotions. Trees in our landscapes and surrounding areas create feelings of relaxation and well-being while providing a sense of privacy and security.

Now if that's not enough reason to run out and plant a tree, try this one: Trees and other plants make their own food by taking carbon dioxide from the air, water, sunlight and elements. In this process, called photosynthesis, they release oxygen as a by-product that we breathe.

Trees also help settle out, trap and hold particulate pollutants (dust, ash, pollen and smoke) that can irritate or damage human lungs. An acre of trees can produce enough oxygen for 18 people every day. An acre of trees can also absorb enough carbon dioxide over a year's time to equal the amount you produce when you drive your car 26,000 miles.

Carbon dioxide and other harmful gases are removed from the atmosphere by absorbing them through the pores in the leaf surface.

Energy savings can be realized by strategically planting shade trees on the south and west sides of buildings, helping with cooling costs in the summer and heating in the winter. A minimum of three well-placed deciduous (drop leaves in winter) trees around your home can reduce air conditioning costs by as much as 30 percent.

In cities, and Midland is no exception, trees can modify the local climate. They can help cool the "heat islands" that are created from city asphalt, concrete, brick and other heat-absorbing materials. Heat islands are from three to 10 degrees hotter than the surrounding countryside. Trees also lower the air temperatures, increase humidity, reduce glare and reduce wind speed.

For the economy, trees help attract businesses and tourists. People in shopping areas with trees tend to linger and shop longer. And apartments and offices with trees rent more quickly, have a higher occupancy rate and tenants tend to stay longer. Trees also reduce noise pollution, which are many times created from city sounds.

Well, I could go on but you get the idea. The reasons for planting trees are numerous and there is not better time to plant than this fall. To help you with all your tree planting projects, the Texas Agriculture Extension Service, Permian Basin Master Gardeners and KWES Channel 9 are hosting "Tree Talk in the Park" 2-6 p.m. Saturday at Noel Heritage Plaza in downtown Odessa, between 4th and 5th Streets, and Sam Houston and Lincoln Streets. Tree experts will give 15-minute talks and demonstrations on trees; 10 young trees will be given away each hour; tree tours will be provided; handouts will be available; and drawings will be included.

The talks will cover such subjects as "What's Bugging Your Trees?," "Planting and Establishing Trees," "Tree Trouble Shooting," "Matching Soils to Tree Species," "Fruit and Nut Trees for the Landscape," "Don't Top It," and "Borers, Aphids and Other Tree Pests."

Deborah Benge is the extension horticulture agent for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service in Midland and Ector counties.

AT WIT'S END

Best friendships last forever

By Erma Bombeck

I hadn't seen my best friend in five years.

What would she look like? She promised me she'd be fat and have enough wrinkles to plant sufficient wheat to feed the Soviet Union. If she lied to me, I'd never speak to her again.

Bombeck

That's the kind of friends we had been — for more than 40 years. We met in college and didn't share a single class. She was a music major and I was working on a degree in English. We had only one thing in common. Neither of us played bridge.

When I didn't make the cheerleading squad, she said, "You don't have to sweat to get noticed." When she complained of her Coke bottle glasses, I told her it raised her IQ 30 points.

We hated the same people at the same time, and justice was always on the side we were both on.

When she was pregnant with her 10-pound babies, I said, "But you're tall; you can carry the weight." When I was pregnant she said, "But your face is thin. You don't look pregnant in your face."

We fought gravity together, dyed our hair together and even bought fake fur coats at the same time. If we looked like two polar bears on a Klondike bar, we never mentioned it.

Throughout our lives, we could always depend on each other to be supportive and say the right thing. The only time she showed annoyance was when she baked bread for breakfast one morning and I accused her of turning into Martha Stewart. That was unkind.

When she got breast cancer, I wept. When I got breast cancer, she cried. Our letters and phone calls had gone beyond, "How are the kids?" and centered now on our biopsies and blood tests.

Before her plane touched down, I reflected on our lives. The physical and emotional scars covered both of our bodies. The stretch marks, the caesarean tracks, the loss of a child and death of parents, the moon face from prednisone, the water retention of kidney failure, the prostheses, the gray roots that grew at the rate of two inches a week. Was it possible we had weathered it all and remained intact?

YES!

"You haven't changed a bit," I shouted as we embraced. "My gosh, you are still the same," she said with relief.

She shoved a loaf of fresh-baked bread in my hands and I told her I'd have to spit on my eyeballs to stay awake, but I had tickets for us to the Bach festival.

Once more we proved what we all know — friendship is blind.

Evening tours planned at Fort Davis

Staff report

FORT DAVIS — Visitors and area residents will have the opportunity to participate in special moonlight tours of Fort Davis National Historic Site Oct. 30. "From Retreat to Tattoo" will provide a glimpse into what life might have been like at Fort Davis over 100 years ago.

The setting for this year's tours will be after the workday , "retreat," and just prior to the bugle call, "tattoo," which historically signaled the men to prepare for bed. Staff members and volunteers, dressed in period costumes and carrying lanterns, will escort visitors around the grounds and into restored and refurnished buildings where scenes representing life in 1889 will be presented.

The tours are free, but because each tour is limited to 22 participants, reservations are required. The tours will begin at 7 p.m. and will continue every 20 minutes. Each tour will be approximately one hour long. Participants will meet in the Fort parking lot where they will be met by a park ranger. After a brief introduction, they will be escorted across the bridge where the tours will begin. Those attending should dress comfortable and warmly. They also must be able to walk approximately ¼-a-mile around the Fort grounds. Baby strollers and wheel chairs cannot be permitted because of the unevenness of the gravel and dirt walkways.

Since day light savings time will still be in effect, the first two tours will be conducted in daylight. This will give those individuals who have trouble walking at night the opportunity to participate.

For more information or reservations, call Fort Davis NHS at (915) 426-3224 or write to the Superintendent, Fort Davis NHS, P.O. Box 1456, Fort Davis, Texas 79734.

INDIA EARTHQUAKE RELIEF FUND OF PERMIAN BASIN

An undertaking by the Indo-American Community of the Permian Basin in collaboration with "American Service to India" (ASTI).

On September 30, 1993, a devastating Earthquake measuring 6.4 on the Richter scale, struck a region about 250 miles from Bombay. It has left 30,000 people dead, 35 villages totally destroyed and 130,000 people homeless. Most of the survivors have lost everything.

The area urgently needs cash donations to provide for medicines and various articles to rebuild and rehabilitate the survivors.

The need to alleviate the human suffering caused by this devastation crosses the national boundaries.

PLEASE HELP WITH ALL YOUR GENEROSITY

Checks should be made payable to:

festival BALLOON

Balloons such as these will be anchored on the front lawn of the Petroleum Museum the last weekend in October during the Permian Basin Balloon Festival, sponsored by the Petroleum Museum.

Hot air to fill Permian Basin during Halloween weekend

Hot air balloons will fill the front yard of the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum & Library Hall of Fame with vivid colors on Halloween weekend during the Permian Basin Balloon Festival.

"I expect people will be surprised at how big the balloons are, and I think they will be surprised at how easily they float in gentle air," said C.H. "Charlie" Rentz, the event's balloonmeister.

"That's very important. In fact, we fly right after sunrise because we need the daylight, and that's the time of day that the air is the calmest. Occasionally, we get an evening flight.

"We like it when the winds are under 10 miles an hour, but we have to know how to handle the balloon and land it even when the breezes get faster than that. But, those high wind landings sometimes get bumpy."

Rentz, who is manager of public and government affairs for Texaco Inc's. Midcontinent Region, has been actively ballooning for 10 years and is Midland's only commercial balloon pilot.

"The first form of flight that any man ever took was in a hot air balloon," he said.

Two French papermakers, brothers Jacques Etienne and Joseph Montgolfier, built the first hot-air balloons. The first man to fly in a balloon was French scientist Jean Francois Pilatre de Rozier, who ascended on Oct. 15, 1783, in one of the Montgolfiers' creations. That same year on Dec. 1, French brothers Anne-Jean and Nicolas Louis Robert became the first men to fly in a hydrogen balloon.

"That's over 200 years ago, 100 years before the Wright brothers," Rentz said. "And it's different flight. It's a special feeling of floating in the air, and it's unlike any other flight that you've ever made. You've just got to experience it to know."

The balloon festival, a fund-raiser for the Petroleum Museum, will draw 20 balloonists, Rentz said.

"They will be coming from Austin, Lubbock, Carlsbad, El Paso, Hobbs and Hobbs Monument," Rentz said. "One pilot lives in Hobbs, but the balloon he is flying is coming out of Artesia, and two balloons from Midland."

Charlie Rentz participates in the annual balloon festival in Albuquerque. His balloon is second from the left. The annual event began 22 years ago with 17 balloons. Now hundreds of balloon enthusiasts make the Albuquerque event.

The two Midland pilots are Rentz and Donna Potter, a student of Rentz's, who has been a pilot for about a year.

The flights will launch from the front yard on Saturday and Sunday morning just after dawn, Rentz said.

"And that Saturday evening there will be a barbecue on the grounds. And we plan to have the balloons glow in the dark. The beautiful colors look good in the air, but they also look good when they are lighted by the fire from inside. It will almost be like colorful jack-o-lanterns."

He said "kids of all ages (can) wear their costumes and come trick or treat the pilots at the balloon baskets," Rentz

Thespian 'to be roasted'

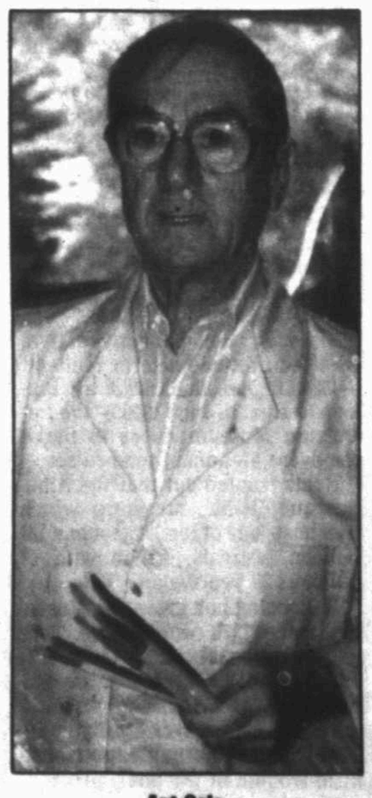

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff writer

World War II brought a young soldier named Arthur Weller Cole to the Army Air Force base at Terminal on Easter Sunday 1942. Now, more than 50 years later, Cole is being honored at the "Person of Vision" dinner and roast, sponsored by the Texas Society to Prevent Blindness, Thursday at the Midland Petroleum Club.

"I'm not sure just what that means — 'to be roasted,' " said Cole, who now lives in Santa Fe, N.M. He laughed, then added, "I understand it's a great honor. We'll see if I really agree with that when it's all over."

With Thursday's benefit dinner and roast, Cole steps into the company of previous "Person of Vision" honorees, including Lucius Bunton, "Doc" Dodson, Martin Allday, Clayton Williams Jr. and Ernest Angelo Jr.

How does this New Mexico resident qualify for this honor? The answer, which begins even before World War II brought this young soldier to Texas, lies in Cole's ability to motivate people, his talent for both theater directing and stage acting and his dedication to community theater.

West Texas was Cole's first stop after being drafted into the U.S. Air Force and serving his basic training at Camp Perry in Ohio. Prior to his draft notice, Cole had been working, since he was 19, for Rogers Production Company, directing community benefit shows throughout the country. In 1942, Cole was not through with show biz, in fact he had hardly begun.

"We sold millions of dollars of war bonds in Midland and Odessa," said Cole, referring to the war bond shows he produced between April of 1942 and May of 1945 when he was assigned to the 20th Air Force at Guam. "The shows were free to armed forces personnel, and the public could get in if they bought a war bond."

As the war drew to a close, Cole was like many others who were looking toward the future. World War II had turned most of their lives upside down.

"I don't think anybody had any trouble getting a job. The question was — 'What do you want to do, and where do you want to do it?' Prior to 1940, 1941 and 1942 when the draft came along, the history of America was — you grew up, went to college, came back to your hometown, probably, and you stayed there.

"You didn't know any other part of the country. You didn't know anyone else in other parts of the country. We had an insular sort of society."

World War II changed that, Cole said.

"Soldiers made all sorts of new and exciting discoveries of climate and locale, cultures. There was a kind of release about it, too. You didn't have to go back and go to work for your dad or father-in-law. There was a freedom — a new frontier sort of freedom.

"I fall in that category. I had gotten to know Midland, Texas, and it looked like the perfect place to carry out an experiment in community theater and get paid for it. In other words, do theater professionally.

"Only on rare occasions was theater done in '45 and '46. There just weren't many professional theater directors in the U.S. You could count them on one hand. In fact, a tool pusher could probably count them on one hand because a tool pusher is a guy who has usually lost a couple of fingers."

While still stationed at Guam, Cole wrote Midland arts patron Naomi Lancaster about the possibility of his finding employment here.

Midland had a history of local theater presentations which dated back to around 1930 and the Fine Arts Club. By the end of the 1930s, the name Midland Little Theatre had been changed to Civic Theatre. And, In 1942, the building of the City-County Auditorium, now the site of the current Midland County Public Library, provided a convenient facility for the Civic Theatre.

Cole's letter to Mrs. Lancaster included the idea of having "Midland Civic Theatre run like a small business." Her response was positive.

"I knew I wanted to settle down, and I knew I wanted to do theater, and I had a plan," Cole recalled. "I had an idea of how it could be done, and it worked."

Mrs. Lancaster arranged a meeting between the Coles and "10 to 12 couples" at her home on a Sunday afternoon in January of 1946.

"I presented my plan, and they bought it. I wanted them to guarantee $200 a month for three months because if it was going to work, it would work in three months, and if it didn't work, they didn't owe me anything beyond the $600, and I didn't own them anything.

"One man, a geologist, H.S. Forgerson, said, 'Hell, you can't live in Midland, Texas on $200 a month. We'll pay you $250 dollars.' And they did."

This handshake agreement led to the creation of Midland Community Theatre, housed at the City-County Auditorium.

Cole recalled that when he returned to Midland in 1946, "The sign at the edge of town still said 10,000, but it was believed to be about 12,000. It was a strange place to start a theater."

Yet, he was drawn here by "the people," and credits "the oil community" with supporting MCT "in the very beginning. They were all college graduates, many of them with doctorates, and they wanted a good theater."

Jan. 28, 1946, the day Cole returned to Midland, the City-County Auditorium burned during the opening night presentation of Midland Civic Theatre's production of "It Pays to Advertise." Thus, MCT's first productions were presented in the high school auditorium until the City-County Auditorium could be put back in working order.

In 1958, MCT moved into Theatre Centre on Indiana Avenue, which is now the location of Midland Christian Fellowship. The operation of that theater and the one to come were partially paid for by monies raised during the annual Summer Mummers, the brain child of Cole, Bill Pomeroy, Bill Pennebaker and Norris Creath, now a San Angelo resident.

"Right after we moved in on Indiana, I formed a past president committee," Cole said. "I knew that was not the theater that Midland ultimately ought to have. I asked them to put together a 20-year-plan covering what the theater ought to be, where it ought to be."

In December of 1976, ground breaking ceremonies were held for what was to be Theatre Midland. That same year, a front page story in the National Observer said, "Theater (in Texas) is flourishing...community theater has been sparked into life by the success of the Midland Community Theatre, the granddaddy of modern community theaters."

In the spring of 1978, Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave., became the new home for MCT.

"We put together the ideal theater — what we thought the proper theater for MCT ought to be," Cole said.

In 1980, Cole became director emeritus of MCT and moved to Colorado.

"The theater proved itself. I knew it would work, and we got it paid for and established a modest private endowment.

"What else was there for me? There were no more challenges. I finally had completed the job I had started out in 1946 to do. It took me a long time — 35 years — but we did it, and paid for it with not one bag of tax money. I decided to do something else with my life."

During his years as executive director of MCT, Cole received numerous honors, including:

—being elected to membership in the National Theatre Conference, 1950;

—president of the Southwest Theatre Conference, 1964-65;

—chairman of Theatre Panel for Gov. John Connally's Conference on the Arts in Texas, 1964;

—represented the United States at the Third World Festival of Amateur Theatre in Monaco, with production of Albee's "The American Dream," 1965;

—vice president of the National Theatre Conference, 1968;

—president of the American Community Theatre Festival, the forerunner of FACT, 1968-70;

—member of the American Educational Theatre Association's Structure Committee, 1968-71;

—organizer of the first National Community Theatre Festival, forerunner of FACT, 1969;

—elected to the Governing Council of the International Amateur Theatre Association, 1969-79;

—named a member of the College of Fellows of the American Theatre Association, 1971;

—first recipient of the American Community Theatre Association's David Bryant Award, 1973; —represented the United States at International Drama Festival, Dundalk, Ireland, with production of "Butterflies Are Free," named Best Director, 1974;

—member and chairman of the Theatre Advisory Panel to the Texas Commission for the Arts, 1975-1981;

—and president of the International Amateur Theatre Association, 1975-79.

Since retiring as MCT's executive director, Cole has been named a member of the College of Fellows of the Southwest Theatre Conference, 1985.

When he left Midland, Cole returned to an avocation he had left behind in the 1950s.

"I was a Sunday painter in '40s and early '50s till we moved into that building on Indiana, and I just didn't have any time to paint anymore. In a way I had always been painting because I had been designing all my own stage sets. That was sort of painting. But I had always wanted to paint full time."

Cole considers himself "a very lucky man" and describes himself as "a plateau person.

"I create the next plateau. When I look back over my life, that's exactly what I did. Finally when the present theater was all built, I couldn't see any more plateaus there, and I had achieved what I set out to do finally. I'm just a slow doer."

As for his life today, he said, "I love it. Every day is a new excitement."

Festival starts Oct. 29

Staff report

The Permian Basin Balloon Festival is scheduled from Oct. 29 to Oct. 31 at the Petroleum Museum.

It begins Oct. 29 with registration from 2 to 6 p.m. and a sponsor and pilot reception planned at the museum for 7 p.m. to 8 p.m.

Events begin before sunrise Oct. 30 and 31 with pilots' meetings before the sunrise launch.

The "glow" — when parked balloons are lighted by the fire from inside — is planned from 6:15 p.m. to 7:15 p.m. Oct. 30.

Barbecue, catered by the Odessa Chuck Wagon Gang, is planned for 5 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. Oct. 30.

Children are encouraged to "trick or treat" the pilots beginning at 6 p.m.

Cost of the barbecue is $8 for adults and $5 for children. Tickets may be purchased at the museum or at Kent Kwik. In addition, admission to the museum will be free from 4 to 6 p.m. Oct. 30.

The event closes with a 10:30 a.m. awards brunch Oct. 31 at the Plaza Club. For reservations call the museum.

Society to host 'Person of Vision'

The Texas Society to Prevent Blindness is hosting a "Person of Vision and Celebrity Roast" in honor of Arthur "Art" Weller Cole Thursday at the Petroleum Club, 501 W. Wall Ave.

The cocktail reception begins at 6:30 p.m. with the dinner and roast set for 7:30 p.m.

Roastmaster is Pat Baskin. Those expected to roast Cole include Bill Heck, Mary Lou Cassidy, Vernon Peppard and Jim Salners.

Sponsor tables range in price from $1,500 for a benefactor table of eight and $1,000 for a patron sponsor table of eight.

Individual tickets are $100 a person. Black tie is optional.

For more information or to make reservations call the Texas Society to Prevent Blindness, 683-0003.

AIR: Balloons to take flight in Permian Basin said.

Also planned is a contest called "The Hare and the Hounds," Rentz said.

"One balloon will take off first to be followed by the rest of the pack. The 'hare' balloon will fly a course, land the balloon, and lay out a big X on the ground to serve as a target. The 'hound' balloons in the pack try to maneuver to that X and drop a bean bag in the center of that X. The guy that comes the closest wins.

"Most often the breezes are from the Southwest, which means if I go down to the Petroleum Museum and launch the balloon there, I'll fly back over Midland, and frequently I'll end up landing somewhere around the north loop, Air Park or somewhere out in that direction," Rentz said.

Ballooning is a "reasonably expensive" hobby, Rentz said. "Balloons cost about like a car. The balloons I am flying right now cost about $20,000 new, but you can get good used balloons for $5,000. Special shaped balloons are in the $50,000 to $100,000 range. Golf clubs are a lot cheaper.

"You also have to have a trainer or pickup to haul it in and an inflator fan. I bought a used inflator fan for $100, and I was pricing one last weekend that cost $900."

Although the balloon festival isn't the first one held in Midland — MARC presented a hot air balloon festival in June 1990 — the Petroleum Museum hopes to make the event an annual fund-raiser.

Rentz pointed out that the Albuquerque, N.M., museum, which now hosts one of the largest annual balloon festivals, began with 17 balloons 22 years ago.

Ballooning has grown considerably since 1975 when there were only about 300 balloons in the world. Today, there are an estimated 4,500.

Ballooning is reasonably safe, said Rentz, who has experienced little trouble in the air.

"Nothing serious. I got my balloon on a tree one time, and tore it, but that's the worst thing that's happened to my flights."

The balloon festival in Albuquerque has experienced accidents, with fatalities in 1982, 1990 and 1993.

"At Albuquerque there were over 4,000 flights and one accident — one serious accident," said Rentz, who participated in the 1993 festival.

Rentz said the most recent fatality in Albuquerque involved, "two experienced balloonists. The guy who owned the balloon had flown in Albuquerque eight to 10 years. It's distressing to the rest of us in the ballooning community. In fact, we may never really know what happened.

"The fact that that accident gets a lot of notoriety doesn't negate the fact that there's a very good safety record for ballooning. For example, no one seemed to notice the automobile accident nearby in Albuquerque where three people were killed that same morning."

During a balloon festival, pilots are most attentive to those flying around them, Rentz said.

"You time your liftoffs carefully so that nobody is in your path. You ascend at controlled rates so that you don't run into the guy overhead. And we have rules that we have to comply with, too. For example, the balloon that is flying lower has the right of way. That makes sense because he probably can't see you because of his balloon over his head."

Although pilots have control over ascending and descending, they don't exercise the same control over where the wind takes them.

"I can't steer it," Rentz said. "We float in the direction that the wind is blowing."

HOROSCOPE

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 17, 1993

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Family members play an increasingly important role in both your business and domestic affairs. Strong-willed and adventuresome, you welcome new intellectual challenges. Give free rein to your creativity this December. Early in 1994, your business associates will eagerly follow your lead. Romance becomes a top priority in the spring. You will want to spend more time and money on your personal appearance.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: movie legends Rita Hayworth and Montgomery Clift, journalist Jimmy Breslin, actor George Wendt.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Family members may surprise you with a plan they developed behind the scenes. Be open to new ideas. You have special rapport with an older person today; use it to your advantage.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your words of encouragement receive an endearing response. A special outing or warm chat elevates your mood. You feel on top of the world! Something is functioning much better than you thought.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Starting early allows for delays. Make certain loved ones are on the same wavelength. Visiting friends satisfies your urge for more freedom. Make the time you spend with your children truly enjoyable.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Guarding against extravagance and energy-draining activities is a good safety measure. Spending an easy-going day allows you to save money and recharge your batteries.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Sharing a secret dream will help other people appreciate your spiritual side. A drive or visit is both fun and informative. Set a better example for your children by cutting expenses.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You are delightfully persuasive today. Say the word and people will rally to help you reach your goals. Good news travels fast, signaling that a wish is about to come true.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You see your priorities clearly now and can make great headway with a partnership or confidential matter. ESP is your guide to solving a mystery. Others view you in a new light.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your intuition works like radar with pinpoint accuracy today. You can visualize the changes you must make in order to achieve success. Let nothing stand in your way!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your intuition tells you who to approach or avoid today. If a heated issue must be settled now, find a private place to talk things over. Stand your ground but be objective.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Conflict may be unavoidable. Spend some time alone deciding on your next move. Attending a social function could lead to an important introduction.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A talk or sermon gives you real hope. Add to your storehouse of knowledge by doing some special research. A muddled message received early in the day will make sense by late evening.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Be careful not to hog the limelight. Otherwise, valuable allies could grow resentful. A secret agreement will prove advantageous in the near future.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are kind and sympathetic, but not overly emotional. Drawn to nature, these Libras are always willing to make sacrifices to help the environment. Sensitive to colors, they will prefer earth tones to brighter hues. Their strong desire to be a team player makes them popular with teachers and employers alike. They do not really care who gets the glory so long as a job is done right. Count on them to take their time about marrying. They want a full partner who shares their deepest beliefs.

Having a sound knowledge of the fundamentals of dummy play is only the first step to becoming a skilled declarer. Once you have mastered when to apply each technique, you have arrived. To understand what we mean, cover the East-West hands and decide how you would play three no trump after the lead of the queen of clubs.

Three no trump was not a difficult contract to reach. Both bids are textbook.

Your first problem comes at trick one. You know all about holdup plays. Should you allow the queen of clubs to hold the first trick, or should you win?

You have passed your first test if you realized clubs was not the only danger suit. You might not be able to stand a heart shift at trick two, so you should snatch the trick immediately.

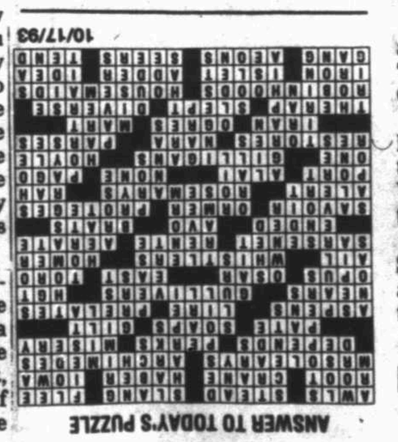

Next in your labors is which suit to tackle, spades or diamonds? And, if you selected diamonds, do you take the safety play of cashing the king and ace or do you finesse?

The trouble is you don't know how many tricks in diamonds you need until you know how many spade tricks you are destined to take. So move to the head of the class if, at trick two, you cashed the ace of spades (the queen could be singleton) and then finessed. If the spade finesse wins, you need only three diamond tricks, so it behooves you take the safety play.

Cash the king and ace of diamonds in that order and, if the queen doesn't drop, continue with a diamond toward the jack. You are home if the suit splits 3-3 or, if not, whenever West holds the queen. If you did all this, nine tricks and the respect of your peers will be your reward.

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

■ Quartet to perform

The Santa Fe Opera Quartet is to perform Friday at the Allison Fine Arts Center at Midland College.

The performance is sponsored by Midland Opera Theater and Nancy and Buddy Anguish. The concert will begin at 8 p.m.

Tickets are $5.

In addition, MOT is bringing the Minnesota Opera theater's production of "Don Giovanni" for a performance Nov. 16 at 8 p.m. at Midland High School Auditorium. Ticket price for this performance is $12.50 for adults and $10 for students and senior citizens. All seating is reserved.

Sponsors for the Nov. 16 opera include the Texas Commission for the Arts, Shell Oil Co. Foundation, Arts Assembly of Midland and the Permian Basin Area Foundation. For more information call 684-4101.

■ 'Hamlet' to open

ODESSA — "Hamlet" opens at 8 p.m. Thursday at the Globe Theatre, located on the Odessa College campus.

Playing Hamlet will be Midlander Scott Lunsford. The production is being directed by Shawn Watson, professor at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

The play runs Thursday through Saturday, Oct. 28-30 at 8 p.m. with a 2:30 p.m. matinee Oct. 24. For ticket information call 1-332-1856.

■ Exhibition planned

LUBBOCK — An exhibition featuring paintings and drawings by Midlander John DeFrance opens with a 7 to 9 p.m. reception Friday.

The one-man exhibition is in the Hall Gallery, Art Building, Texas Tech University. The exhibit will be on display through Oct. 29.

DeFrance is the son of Midlanders Patti and David DeFrance.

■ Fall concert planned

The Midland-Odessa Symphony Chorale performs its fall concert, "Viva la France!," at 8 p.m. Monday at First Presbyterian Church, 800 W. Texas Ave., and at 8 p.m. Thursday at Odessa's First Christian Church.

The concerts are sponsored in part by Flexbar Inc., Dr. and Mrs. William McGavran III and Mr. and Mrs. Don Williams.

The program will include works by Claude de Sermisy, Debussy, Ravel and Franck. Highlighting the evening's repertoire will be selections from the popular broadway musical "Les Miserables" and Maurice Durufle's "Requiem."

Lester Ackerman will be featured on the organ. Soloists will be Michael Jordan, Maria Kinkade, Lisa Graham, Karen Ellis, Kathleen Atteberry, Joe Duerkson, Stephen Alexander, Patti Loftis, Don McCartney, Stephen Porterfield and Jennifer Mangum. Narrator for "Les Miserables" will be Rogers Tilley.

For ticket information call the symphony office, 563-0921. Tickets will be available at the door.

■ Guitarist to perform

ODESSA — Blues guitarist Long John Hunter, who is featured in the current issue of Texas Monthly, will perform from 11:45 a.m. to 1:15 p.m. Wednesday at Odessa College Coffee Shop Concert.

The outdoor concert by Hunter and his band is free and open to the public. It will be in front of the OC Student Union Building and is the first in a series of concerts.

Hunter's musical career spans 40 years, much of that time outside the blues mainstream. Half of those years he plied his trade in clubs in El Paso and Juarez, Mexico. He has been based in Odessa for about eight years.

Recently, he toured the Netherlands and also performed at blues festivals in San Francisco and San Diego.

Those attending Wednesday's concert may bring a sack lunch.

■ Lee to present farce

Lee High School's Theatre Arts will present "Blithe Spirit," Noel Coward's improbable farce, Thursday and Oct. 23 at 8 p.m. at Lee High School Auditorium.

The plot centers on Charles Condomine's difficulties with his wives, one of whom is dead, and the zany medium Madame Arcati who manages to communicate with the "other world."

Tickets are $5.

EDUCATION IN BRIEF

■ Lecture scheduled

Art and literature created by Texas women who are Mexican-Americans is the topic of a lecture by poet/author/teacher Teresa Paloma Acosta Thursday at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave.

Ms. Acosta, who teaches at the University of Texas at Austin, will speak at 7 p.m. in the Thomas Gallery.

Her talk, "Imagining and Creating: Self-taught, Self-made Mexican-American Women Artists," presents her perspective on the production of art and literature by women of Mexican descent.

Admission to the talk is $3 for museum members and $5 for nonmembers. For more information call 683-2882 or 570-7770.

■ Exhibits open Nov. 5

The "Under Starry Skies" exhibitions, scheduled to open this month at the Museum of the Southwest and the Fredda Turner Durham Children's Museum, will open Nov. 5 due to delays in obtaining some components.

The exhibitions in the museum's south wing and in the Children's Museum focus on interpreting the Southwest through its landscape and inhabitants.

■ Musicians to perform

SAN ANGELO — Violinist Eugene Cherkasov and his wife, pianist Larissa Cherkasov, will perform today as part of the San Angelo Chamber Music Series.

The recital will be held at the San Angelo Museum of Fine Arts, 704 Burgess, and includes music by, among others, Mozart, Franck, Tchaikovsky and Rachmaninoff.

For more information call 1-658-4084.

■ Company plans play

ODESSA — The Kaleidoscope Company of the Permian Playhouse will be presenting "Cinderella, Cinderella" Saturday and Oct. 24, 30 and 31 at 2:30 p.m. at the theater, 310 W. 42nd.

"Cinderella, Cinderella" is an audience participation play and members of the audience will be asked to help dramatize the story.

Tickets are $4 each and for those with Kaleidoscope season memberships the price will be $3. All tickets are general admission. Doors open at 1:30 p.m. For more information call the Playhouse, 1-362-2329.

■ Society presents jazz

The West Texas Jazz Society is presenting "Jazz on a Sunday Afternoon" at 2:30 p.m. Oct. 24 at the Santa Fe Bar at the Midland Hilton.

The concert will feature the Societies Jazz Combo with special guest trombonist Charles Seiter.

Admission is free to WTJS members, high school stage band members, community college band members and Midland-Odessa Symphony Orchestra members. Admission for all others is $5.

For more information call 563-1701.

The concert is made possible in part through the help of KMND, KOCV, Mainstream Music, Dean Baker Piano Service, Lones Travel, the Reporter-Telegram and the Odessa American.

■ Reading scheduled

ODESSA — The Art Institute for the Permian Basin will host a poetry reading for students from Odessa and Permian high schools today at 2 and 4 p.m. respectively.

The poetry will be the work of 19th and 20th century African American poets and will be read by readers from Midland and Odessa. Those readers include James Fuller, Forest Allen and Al Hankins, all of Midland, and Jean Hamilton, Arlene Campbell, Estella Willard and Jonatha Cooper, all of Odessa.

The readings will include works by, among others, Langston Hughes, Laurence Dunbar, Countee Cullen, Alice Walker, Margaret Walker, Gwendolyn Brooks, Nikki Giovanni, Maya Angelou and Rita Dove, the new American poet laureate.

For more information call 550-3811 or 1-368-7222.

■ Midlander has role

SHAWNEE, Okla. — Midland resident Channon Powell will appear in Oklahoma Baptist University's production of George Shaw's "Pygmalion."

Ms. Powell, a freshman social work major, will play the role of embassy guest. She is the daughter of Midlanders Charles and Cheryl Powell.

The play is scheduled for Thursday through Saturday and Oct. 28-30 at 7:30 p.m. in Sarkeys theatre on the OBU campus. A special performance at 2:30 p.m. Oct. 24 will benefit the James Brown Scholarship Fund.

■ Choral opens season

The Midland High School Choral Department opens its 1993-94 season with "A Salute to Cinema" Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at Midland High School Auditorium.

In the salute, the MHS choirs wil perform Academy Award winning hits from the movies, including the theme from the James Bond movies.

General admission is $5 for adults and $2.50 for students.

Tickets are available in the choir room, at Pages and Prints, Plaza Shopping Center, Garfield Street at Wadley Avenue, or by calling 689-1129.

All those interested in performing in the alumni choir are asked to contact Kay Brahaney, 689-1129, or Becky Lindemood, 687-1144.

■ Club features artist

Gloria G. Rodriguez

Twenty years ago, Gloria G. Rodriguez was a first grade school teacher in San Antonio, Texas. She had a vision. She wanted to provide young Hispanics with an educational experience that was based not just on the classroom but on parental nurturing and involvement. This simple but untested concept was the cornerstone of Avance, the family support and education program that Rodriguez founded in 1973.

Today, Avance is an internationally acclaimed program that teaches and trains over 1,000 families annually on the importance of parenting skills and children learning at home. Because of its success, Avance has been featured in The New York Times, Business Week, Parade Magazine, ABC World News Tonight, and Good Morning America. Avance is recognized as a national model by the National Committee in the Prevention of Child Abuse and Neglect. As Dr. Rodriguez says, "Education must begin at home and as early as possible with parents as teachers." Avance was also included as one of the ten outstanding literacy programs in the nation in the book First Teachers, published by the Barbara Bush Foundation for Family Literacy. The vision of this one woman has truly proven to be a valuable lesson for all of us on the power of positive thinking and a great idea.

Rodriguez holds her doctorate in early childhood education from the University of Texas-Austin and lives in San Antonio with her husband and their three children.

Mujeres Hispano Americanas Lideres

Hace veinte años, la Dra. Gloria G. Rodriguez era maestra de primer grado en San Antonio. Texas. Era una maestra con una vision: darles a los jovenes Hispanos una experiencia educativa basada no solo en el aula, sino tambien en la participacion fecunda de sus padres. Este concepto sencillio y novedoso es la base de Avance, el programa pedagogico y de apoyo familiar fundado por la Dra. Rodriguez en 1973.

Hoy dia, Avance goza de prestigio internacional y entrena cada año a mas de 1,000 familias en las tecnicas educativas de los padres en el aprendizaje de los hijos en el hogar. Su eficacia ha sido ampliamente destacada y reportada en el New York Times, Business Week, Parade Magazine, "ABC World News Tonight" y "Good Morning, America." Esta reconocido como un modelo de importancia nacional por el Comite Nacional para la Prevencion del Maltrato y Abondono Infantiles. Como afirma la Dra. Rodriguez, "la educacion debe comenzar en el hogar lo antes posible con los padres como maestros." Avance tambien ha sido incluido como uno de los diez programas mas sobresalientes contra 'el analfabetismo en el volumen First Teachers, publicado por la Fundacion Barbara Bush para el Fomento de la Alfabetizacion Familiar. La vison de esta mujer singular nos ha dado a todos una valios leccion acerca del poder del pensamiento positivo.

Rodriguez ostenta el doctorado en educacion de la infancia de la Universidad de Texas en Austin, y vive en San Antonio con su esposo y sus tres hijos.

"Main Street" is giving Odessa's downtown a new look

By Jeffrey Mcdonald

The Odessa that greeted a young Salvador Guerrero in the late 1940's and early 1950's, was a small, but thriving metropolis, at the heart of which was a bustling downtown.

"I was still living in 'the miracle city of the Southwest,' as KRIG radio identified Odessa." Guerrero later recalled in his book, Memorias, A West Texas Life. "On Saturday evenings, Sabina and I would carry the baby downtown and do some window shopping. In 1947, five theaters were located in the five-block nucleus of downtown Odessa, and we would usually take in a movie before returning home across the railroad tracks."

It is this type of atmosphere that a dedicated group of volunteers and business leaders are working to bring back to downtown Odessa.

"Well, as most people know, downtown was the hub. I mean, it had the JC Penney, it had the Dunlaps, it had the Quicksilver, all these wonderful department stores downtown," said Kathy Hendrick, Executive Director of Main Street Odessa, the organization that is coordinating efforts to revitalize Odessa's downtown district. "The malls came into being, and Odessa started expanding eastward. Obviously, the migration went towards malls because it was indoors, it was cool, and you could shop year-round."

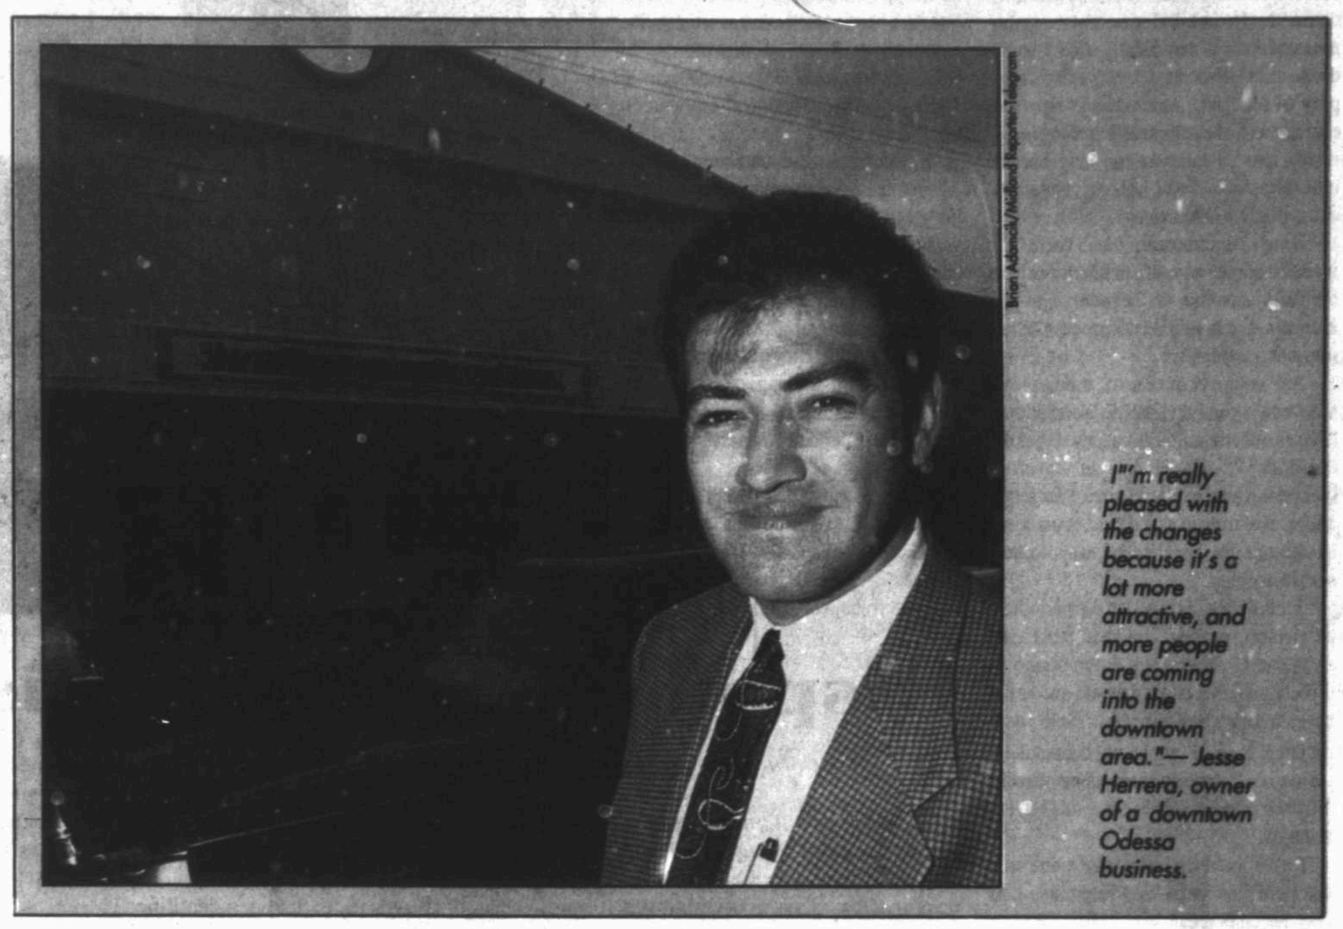

Well, that virtually left downtown vacant. You lost a lot of your downtown, and most people were now shopping at malls."

As the attention of businesses and customers were drawn more and more away from the downtown, the very infrastructure of that district began to deteriorate, as buildings stood vacant for years, or were occupied by more marginal businesses that could not afford proper upkeep.

"Well, as you know, most of these buildings were vacant. Dirt, broken glass, deteriorating buildings, roofs falling in," said Hendrick: "A lot of this happened, and there was probably a vacancy rate of about 50% when we started in 1991. As of today, about 85% is occupied. And even in the Nations Bank building, the Texas Commerce Bank building. In the past year-and-half, their occupancy rates have gone up about 25%. So they're about 93 and 97% full."

The economic value of a revitalized downtown to the community as a whole, is evident when Hendrick points out that, as buildings are improved, their value increases and generates new income for the city and the county. The improved infrastructure attracts new and

El "Main Street' le esta dando una nueva vista al centro de Odessa

Por Jeffrey McDonald

La Odessa que le dio la bienvenida al joven Salvador Guerrero en los últimos años de los cuarenta y en los principios de los cincuentas, fue una pequeña pero prospera metrópoli, en el corazón del agitado centro .

"Todavía vivía en la 'milagrosa ciudad del Sudoeste,' como la radio KRIG identificaba a Odessa." Guerrero mas adelante recordaría en su libro, Memorias, A West Texas Life. "Los Sábados por las tardes, Sabina y yo llevábamos a nuestro bebé al centro y hacíamos algunas compras. En 1947, cinco salas cinematográficas estaban localizadas en un núcleo de cinco cuadras en el centro de Odessa, y nosotros usualmente veíamos una película antes de regresar a casa al otro lado de los rieles del ferrocarril."

Era el tipo de atmósfera que un grupo dedicado de voluntarios y líderes de negocios trabajaban para atraer al centro de Odessa a su normalidad.

"Bueno como mucha gente sabia el centro de Odessa era realmente el centro. Y quiero decir, que tenia JC Penney, tenia a Dunlaps, también a Quicksilver, todos estas excelentes tiendas de departamento en el centro," dice Kathy Hendrick, Directora Ejecutiva de la Calle Main en Odessa, una organización que esta coordinando esfuerzos para revitalizar el centro distrital de Odessa. "Los Centros Comerciales vinieron a dar vida, y Odessa comenzó a extenderse hacia el Este. Obviamente, la migración de la gente se fue con los centros comerciales por la sencilla razón de que estos ofrecen su comercio bajo techo, con sistema de temperatura artificial y usted puede hacer sus compras todo el año en cualquier época."

Esto dejo virtualmente vacío al centro de la ciudad. Usted perdió mucho de su centro, y mucha de su gente la cual ahora hace sus compras en los centros comerciales."

Así como el cuidado de los negocios y de los clientes cada vez mas y mas fue alejándose del centro de la ciudad, la infraestructura de ese distrito comenzó a deteriorarse, así como los edificios que estuvieron vacíos por años por negocios marginales que no pudieron proporcionar mantenimiento.

Bueno como usted sabe, muchos de estos edificios estaban vacíos. Ventanales quebrados, sucios, edificios deteriorados, techos cayéndose," dice Hendrick. "Mucho de esto pasa, y tal vez había un vacío del 50% cuando comencé, en 1991. A como ahora el 85% esta ocupado. Hasta en el edificio del Banco Nations y en el del Texas Commerce, en el

Latino consensus presses for North American Development Bank

By Jonathan J. Higuera

The Latino Consensus on NAFTA, made up of major national Hispanic organizations and elected officials, is pressing President Clinton to back the North American Development Bank as a funding mechanism for the North American Free Trade Agreement and to address displaced worker retraining efforts in return for its support.

Earlier this month, Latino Consensus members held press conferences in nine Southwestern cities — San Antonio, Corpus Christi and McAllen in Texas; Sacramento, San Diego, Los Angeles and Santa Ana in California; and in Phoenix and Tucson, Ariz.

At the sessions, they proposed the bank as a way to fund border environmental cleanup efforts as well.

"We're going public to say that what the administration has put on the table is half a loaf and not good enough yet," Antonio González, a consensus coordinator who directs the Latin American Project for Southwest Voter Research Institute, told Hispanic Link. "If they continue to improve it and stay along the path, then a lot of people will be signing on. If they stop, so will others."

U.S. NAFTA negotiators were reportedly considering three mechanisms for funding border cleanup and infrastructure projects. Hispanic Link Weekly Report reported Aug. 16 that negotiators were favoring using the InterAmerican Development Bank, an alternative that drew harsh criticism from NAD Bank supporters.

González said the administration has signaled a willingness to review the funding mechanism. He also said that in addition to increasing funds for displaced worker retraining, the agreement should reform labor laws addressing displaced workers.

The consensus, nine-point plan can "bring a whole new coalition around an improved NAFTA package," he promised. That coalition would include Latinos, state and local governments, small business and key environmentalist groups, he said.

"Latinos are generally concerned about two things: What if I lose my job and who's going to clean up this mess on the border?" González stressed.

Latino Consensus members include the Mexican American Legal Defense and Educational Fund, the National Council of La Raza, the National Puerto Rican Coalition and the Southwest Voter Research Institute. Each member has agreed to back the nine-point plan put forth by the consensus but none is obligated to support the final NAFTA package. The consensus, congressional strategy has been to approach 53 House members whose districts are at least 20 percent Hispanic. By González's count, of the 28 congressional supporters of NAD Bank, 25 are leaning against NAFTA in its present form.

In addition to conducting press conferences, the group is approaching editorial boards and local governments.

At the Sept. 2 press conference at Los Angeles City Hall, Rep. Esteban Torres (D-Los Angeles) said he would support NAFTA only if NAD Bank and adequate worker retraining assistance is included. He has sponsored a bill to use NAD Bank as a way to fund clean-up and infrastructure projects.

Rep. Lucille Roybal-Allard (D-Los Angeles) said she wouldn't even consider the pact unless it contained those provisions. The three Cuban American members of Congress strongly oppose the pact. "Who are we kidding? Mexico is not a free country," said Lincoln Diaz-Balart (R-Miami Lakes). "It's just a rotating dictatorship where presidents take turns stealing elections every six years."

Joining him at a Sept. 8 capital press conference were Reps. Ileana Ros-Lehtinen (R-Miami) and Robert Menéndez (D-Jersey City, N.J.). Ros-Lehtinen described the accord as benefiting "only the Mexican government and not the American people."

This month and next, Hispanic Heritage Month events are attracting hundreds of Latino small business owners, organization activists and regional political leaders to Washington. Many of the visitors will be expressing their NAFTA and NAD Bank views to the White House and members of Congress. As it has with the rest of the Congress, the issue of NAFTA has split the Hispanic delegation.

Hispanic Consensus members hope first to rally more representatives to the cause of a NAD Bank. If those efforts are successful and heeded by the administration, it could provide President Clinton with some needed support for the embattled pact.

El consenso Latino apremia por un banco norteamericano para el desarrollo

Por Jonathan J. Higuera

El Consenso Latino sobre NAFTA, formado por organizaciones Hispanas nacionales importantes y funcionarios electos Hispanos, está apremiando al Presidente Clinton para que respalde al Banco Norteamericano para el Desarrollo (NADBank en inglés) como mecanismo de financiamiento para el Tratado Norte-Americano de Libre Comercio (NAFTA en inglés) y se enfoque sobre las gestiones de readiestramiento de los trabajadores desplazados a cambio de su apoyo.

A principios de este mes, los miembros del Consenso Latino efectuaron conferencias de prensa en nueve ciudades del Suroeste — San Antonio, Corpus Christi y McAllen, en Texas; Sacramento, San Diego, Los Angeles y Santa Ana, en California; y Phoenix y Tucson, en Arizona.

En dichas sesiones, ellos propusieron al NADBank como medio de financiar los esfuerzos para la limpieza ambiental de la frontera común.

"Estamos yendo al público para decir que lo que el gobierno ha puesto sobre la mesa es media hogaza de pan y todavía no es lo suficientemente bueno," dijo Antonio González, uno de los coordinadores del Consenso que dirige el Proyecto Latino-Americano en el Instituto de Investigación sobre los Electores del Suroeste, a Hispanic Link. "Si ellos continúan mejorándolo y permanecen en el camino, entonces muchas otras personas se adherirán. Si ellos se detienen, otros harán lo mismo."

Se informó que los negociadores estadounidenses de NAFTA estaban considerando tres mecanismos para financiar los proyectos de limpieza ambiental e infraestructural de la frontera. El Hispanic Link Weekly Report informó el 16 de Agosto que los negociadores favorecían el empleo del Banco Inter-Americano para el Desarrollo, una alternativa que provocó criticas ásperas de los partidarios del NADBank.

González dijo que el gobierno ha señalado su disposición de revisar el mecanismo de financiamiento. Agregó que, además de aumentar los fondos para el readiestramiento de los trabajadores desplazados, el acuerdo debería reformar las leyes laborales que se refieren a los trabajadores desplazados.

El plan de nueve puntos del Consenso puede "traer toda una nueva coalición alrededor de un conjunto de NAFTA mejorado," prometió él. Esa coalición abarcaría a los latinos, a los gobiernos estatales y locales, a los negocios pequeños y a los principales grupos ambientalistas, dijo él.

Negocio Hispano ...es buen negocio

Por Amarante Cordova

Para Abraham Torres el éxito se obtiene manteniendo una tradición de calidad y servicio en un negocio que a visto muchos cambios en las pasadas tres décadas.

"A causa de las copiadoras, la gente no demanda la calidad que esta estaba acostumbrada a demandar," dice Torres, dueño de la 'Associated Arts Printing Company of Midland. Antes cuando comencé este negocio, si usted era un impresor, usted estaba casi garantizado con muy buenas utilidades, todo el año. Ahora? No es tan extraordinario como antes."

Antes al contrario dice Torres la invasión de nuevas y sofisticadas máquinas copiadoras sobre su negocio, con un énfasis sobre la calidad del proceso de las imprentas actuales.

Así como el producto, todos están satisfechos con la calidad de la copiadora. "Así es que, tratamos de hacer trabajos de calidad. Hacemos la prensa compensatoria, explica Torres. "La gente ahora, si el trabajo sale de una copiadora, si esta torcida, si sale manchada, lo que sea, lo aceptan."

"En los años sesentas, en ese periódico de tiempo, cuando comencé tenia que estar bien. Tenia que estar bonito y profesional. No estoy diciendo que ya no hacen trabajos profesionales." Solo estoy diciendo que la gente no demanda la calidad de trabajo que antes demandaban. Nosotros tratamos de hacer calidad en los trabajos."

Torres también sabe que tiene que competir con otros, con imprentas mas grandes en el área.

"Claro que siempre hay competidores, y mas grandes imprentas. Y quiero decir con esto, que tienen mas grandes máquinas, equipo mas grande," dice Torres, quien recientemente cambio su negocio a la Avenida Big Spring, al norte del centro de Midland. "No estoy haciendo excusas, pero ellos pueden hacer un trabajo superior, por la razón que ellos poseen un equipo mas grande. Por eso tenemos que hacer que ellos hagan lo mejor en su habilidad."

Pero Torres a encontrado la manera de que un negocio pequeño compita con uno grande. Bueno nuestros gastos generales son menores. No quiero hacer una estafa. No queremos obtener los mas altos precios - aunque si quisiéramos! Pero la economía no lo permite," dice Torres. Nuestro aumento de precios es menor y nuestros gastos generales nos permiten ofrecer precios mas bajos."

Otra manera que Torres ahorra dinero a sus clientes es el uso de su equipo confiable, el cual el cree es mas económico que el de las copiadoras de Tecnología moderna.

"Por la razón que son mas costosas para operar. Yo les digo a mis clientes que si ellos lo hacen en copiadoras ellos pagaran muy caro," dice Torres. "Y quiero decir con esto que ellos quieren darte a creer que usted lo puede hacer por 3 centavos la copia.

Y realmente, no es cierto. Porque para cuando usted paga a la persona técnica y la compra del tono para colores, y los gastos de conservación - en cinco años esas copiadoras ya serán copiadoras antiguas." Ellos ya hacían prensas para imprimir en 1959 y hasta ahorita siguen operando. Así es que son mas eficiente a largo plazo."

Torres admite que el mantener la trayectoria de los gastos generales no fue una inquietud, hasta que hace cuatro años cuando puso su negocio.

Toda mi vida en el negocio de la imprenta, negocie con el proceso del trabajo, usted sabe, nunca atendiendo la parte de enfrente," recuerda Torres.

"Cuando trabaje para otros, mi tarea diaria era el fin del plazo. Como ellos obtenían el papel, o como ellos compraban el equipo, esa no era mi preocupación, mi preocupación era cumplir con el fin del plazo."

"Pero ahora que tengo mi propio negocio, ciento que, hay mas que hacer! Tengo que negociar con el gobierno. Tengo que enfrentar estos otros aspecto del negocio. Tengo que aprender como bajar los gastos, para así poderselos pasar a los clientes.

Y esto realmente a sido una experiencia para mi." A sido una experiencia de mucho valor.

Torres aconseja que los que tienen sus propios negocios que templen su entusiasmo con apreciaciones realistas del costo - en dinero y en tiempo - en la operación de su negocio.

"Si usted entra en el negocio pensando que hará millones de dólares, olvídelo.

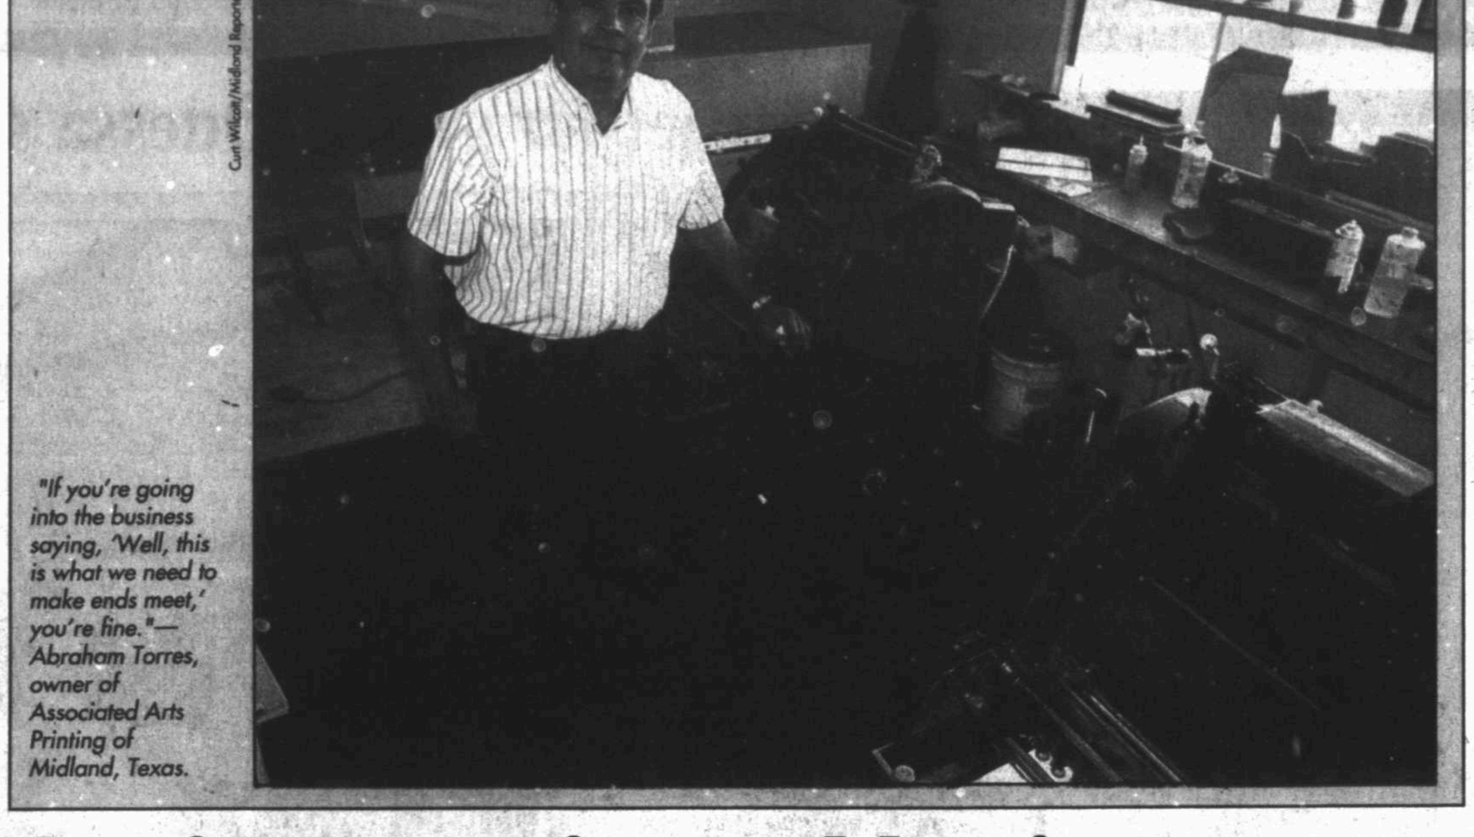

Si usted entra al mundo de los negocios diciendo. "Bueno, esto es lo que necesitamos hacer al fin del plazo, usted comenzara bien," dice Torres.

"Los bancos y las instituciones que prestan dinero están muy cerradas, para obtener el dinero que necesita para comenzar un negocio. Usted sabe, que la competencia esta muy tensa aquí."

Mucha gente solo opina negocio versus negocio, y piensan que la pueden hacer, usted sabe, es un riesgo. Un riesgo en todo, es un riesgo para mi!" Pero a sido un riesgo exitoso para Torres y parte de este riesgo que el recibe es una satisfacción por si trabajo. "Oh yo disfruto mucho pero mucho este trabajo, lo disfruto al 100% y si no lo disfrutara, no estuviera en esto," dice Torres.

"Si usted calcula cuanta horas trabajo durante la semana contra mi sueldo, por hora, es muy pequeña la cifra. Pero esto va junto con el negocio, con cualquier negocio, ya sea un servidor o cualquier otro. Usted también lo tiene que enfrentar, poniendo sesenta, setenta horas por semana. No importando trabajar 10 horas al día, o lo que usted tenga que trabajar los fines de semana para terminar el fin del plazo, usted de todas maneras tiene que hacerlo."

"Nosotros tratamos de hacer un trabajo de calidad. Con esto no quiero decir, que soy excelente o que soy el mejor. Pero después de 33 años, pienso que puedo hacer un trabajo de calidad.."

Curt Wilcott/Midland Reporter-Telegram

"If you're going into the business saying, 'Well, this is what we need to make ends meet,' you're fine."— Abraham Torres, owner of Associated Arts Printing of Midland, Texas.

Hispanic business . . . is good business

By Amarante Cordova

For Abraham Torres, success comes in maintaining a tradition of quality and service in a business that has seen many changes in the past three decades.

"Because of the copiers, people don't really demand the quality they used to demand," said Torres, owner of Associated Arts Printing Company of Midland. "Back when I started in this business, if you were a printer, you could almost guarantee yourself a good income, year-round. Now? It's not so great as it used to be."

Torres counters the encroachment of sophisticated new copying machines, upon his business, with an emphasis upon the quality possible from an actual printing process.

"As far as the product, everybody's getting satisfied with the copier quality. And so, we try to do quality work. We do the offset presses," explained Torres. "People now, if it comes out of the copier, if it's crooked, if it has spots, whatever, they'll accept it."

"Back in the sixties, in that period when I started, it had to be right. It had to be pretty, and it had to be professional. I'm not saying that they don't do professional work no more! I'm just saying people don't demand the quality work they used to demand. We try to do quality work."

Torres also finds that he must compete with other, much larger printing business in the area.

"Of course, there's always our competitors, bigger printers. I mean, they've got bigger machines, they've got the bigger equipment," said Torres, who recently moved his business to a new location on Big Spring Avenue, just north of downtown Midland. "And I'm not making excuses, but they can do superior work, because they own the big printing equipment. But we've got to make them perform to the best of their ability."

But Torres has found that there are ways that the smaller business can compete with the larger. "Well, our overhead. Our overhead is a lot less. We don't try to gouge. We don't try to get the top dollar - although we want to! But the economy wont permit it," said Torres. "Our markup is less, and our overhead allows us to bring our prices down."

Another way that Torres passes savings along to his customers is his use of reliable equipment, which he believes is more economical than the modern copying technology.

"Because they're very expensive to operate. I try to tell customers, 'If you do it in a copier, you'll pay dearly for it,'" said Torres. "I mean, they want to make you believe that you can do it for 3¢ a copy. And really, it's not. Because by the time you pay the repairman, and buy the toners, and the upkeep - in five years, that's become an old copier."

"They make printing presses back in 1959, and they're still operating right now. So they're more efficient in the long run."

Torres admits that keeping track of the business overhead was not a concern of his until he went into business for himself, four years ago.

"All my life, in the printing industry, I've always dealt with the back room, you know, not the front counter," recalled Torres. "When I worked for someone else, my daily duty was to meet a deadline. How they got the paper, or bought the equipment, was not my concern. My concern was to meet deadlines."

"But now that I've gone into business for myself, realize that, 'Hey! There's more to it up front!' I've got to deal with the government. I've got to deal with all these other aspects of the business. I've got to learn how to cut costs, so I can pass it on to the customer. And that's really been an experience for me."

But it has been a very valuable experience. And Torres advises potential entrepreneurs to temper their enthusiasm with a realistic assessment of the cost - in money and in time - of operating a successful business of their own.

"If you're going into business thinking you're going to make a million dollars, forget it. If you're going into the business saying, 'Well, this is what we need to make ends meet,' you're fine," said Torres. "The banks and institutions that loan money, right now, they're very tight, to get the money to start up a business. You know, the competition is real stiff right here."

"A lot of people, it's just a one-on-one deal, and they think they can make it, you know, take a gamble. It's a gamble for everything, it's still a gamble for me!"

But it has been a successful gamble for Torres, and part of the jackpot he receives is the satisfaction he has in his work.

"Oh, very, very much. I enjoy this work 100%, or I wouldn't be into it," said Torres. "If you figure out how many hours I put in during the week, versus the paycheck, by the hour, it's very little. But that goes with the business, with any business, whether it's me or anybody else. You might as well face it, that you're going to put in sixty, seventy hours a week. Whether it's a ten-hour day, or you have to come back on the weekend to meet that deadline, you're going to have to do it."

"We try to do quality work. I mean, I'm not saying we're the greatest, or the best. But after 33 years, I think we can manage to do quality work."

Monahans Band Boosters makes a commitment to young people

By Amarante Cordova

A commitment to young people, to providing them with a well-rounded education, has brought together a large and active group of volunteers in Monahans.

"Band boosters, in Monahans, is mainly just to support the activities of the kids," explained Richard Ratliff, President of the Monahans Band Boosters. "Several years ago, a lot of funding for band trips ceased to exist. A lot of school systems don't finance band outings, or out-of-state trips. So the band boosters raise money to support these trips."

"Sometimes it's out of state, sometimes it's in state. But it's usually to perform at some function. Like San Antonio and Fiesta Texas. The year before that, it was Six Flags. The year before that, they went to Saint Louis. So they travel, and they play in contests. And they do that with the funds that we raise."

Funds raised by band booster activities also go towards equipping the band, and bringing people to Monahans.

"We buy new things for the band. We bring in people to provide clinics, the instructors and things like that," said Ratliff, who has been active with the boosters for twelve years.

These funds are raised through the volunteer activities pursued by the boosters throughout the year. Activities that bring the community together while supporting music education.

"We handle all the concessions at all the home games. We have three concession stands, and that's our largest fundraiser," said Ratliff. "It's all volunteer. We don't have anybody working for us, other than just the volunteers who make the hot dogs, and work the concession stands."

"Then we do a pancake supper each year, early in January or February, where we serve around 2000 plates of pancakes to the local people. Then we have an ice cream supper later on in the year. Kind of rounds the year out. And there are other, smaller projects. We have something almost every quarter."

Ratliff is the father of three Monahans band members. His son, Ryan, is a percussionist. So is his younger daughter, Ashley. His older daughter, Courtney, plays the flute.

But he is quick to point out that one need not be a band parent in order to be a band booster.

"We have several people, quite a few people, who do not have kids in band, who are very active in band boosters," he said.

What they do share, however, is an interest in the young people. There are actually very few people in the community who do not know a member of the band.

"Oh, yes. There's seven-hundred-and-so kids in high school. We have about 630, or 640 kids in band, in Monahans, membership in band, in Monahans, begins in the sixth grade. "So you multiply that by their friends, and neighbors, and relatives. Most of the town has someone who plays in the band, or has a next-door neighbor in the band in Monahans."

Although Ratliff himself was not a member of a band while in school, he sees the value of a musical education for young people, particularly in a large, organized ensemble such as a marching band.

"Music teaches a lot of things. Band, first of all, teaches team spirit. Just like football, or basketball, or anything else," he explained. "Everybody has to work together, pull together. Every section has to practice. Has to come in early and stay late. It builds that team spirit, so that everybody knows that they have to pull together to go to 'state' (Texas band competition), and win 'state'."

"Playing a musical instrument stays with you all your life. I know people who've been out of band for twenty years. Yet they can still play the piano, or pick up their flute, or some musical instrument. It's a form of relaxation, and it will stay with kids all their life."

It is with this in mind that Ratliff and other volunteers contribute so generously of their time and their energy, just as band boosters do in communities throughout West Texas.

"Well, there's a lot of organizations that I'm a member of. But band boosters is the one I put my time in, because it does affect so many young people," said Ratliff. "Some of the young people, some of the kids in band, would never, ever get to go to Saint Louis, Missouri. Would never get to go to Six Flags. Would never get to go to Fiesta Texas in San Antonio — if it was not for band."

"So I think that we're giving kids, not only the experience of playing a musical instrument and marching, learning to be a team member. We're giving kids something that they would never have gotten otherwise. I think that's important, to broaden their horizons. To let them see what is going on in the world!"

For more information about the Monahans Band Boosters, and how you can become a part of their commitment to music education, you can contact Richard Ratliff at 943-6771.

Los 'Band Boosters' adquieren un compromiso con la juventud de Monahans

Por Amarante Cordova

Un compromiso para con los jovenes, para proveerlos con una muy buena y completa educación, a atraído a un grupo de voluntarios grande y activo en Monahans.

"Los 'Band Boosters' (La cuadrilla fomentadora), en Monahans, esta solamente para apoyar las actividades de los muchachos," explica Richard Ratliff, Presidente de 'Band Booster (cuadrilla fomentadora) de Monahans. Algunos años antes, muchos de los fondos para los viajes de la cuadrilla cesaron. Un perdido sistema de la escuela no financio los paseos de la cuadrilla, o viajes fuera del Estado. Es la razón por la cual la Cuadrilla Fomentadora (Band Boosters) recolecto dinero para apoyar estos paseos."

"Algunas veces es fuera del Estado, algunas veces es en el Estado. Pero usualmente es para representar alguna función. Como Fiesta Tejas en San Antonio. El año antes de esto, fue Six Flags. Un año antes de Six Flags, ellos fueron a San Luis. Así es que ellos viajan y compiten en concursos. Y ellos hacen todo esto con los fondos que nosotros recabamos."

Los fondos recabados de actividades hechas por la cuadrilla fomentadora también son destinados para equipar a la cuadrilla, y para atraer mas gente a Monahans.

"Compramos nuevas cosas para la cuadrilla. Invitamos a instructores para que vengan a impartir clínicas, y actividades como estas," dice Ratliff, quien a estado active con la cuadrilla fomentadora por doce años.

Estos fondos son recabados a través de actividades voluntarias perseguidas por la cuadrilla durante todo el año. Actividades que atraen a la comunidad unidad mientras que al mismo tiempo apoyan la educación musical.

"Nosotros manejamos todas las concesiones en todos las actividades que hacemos en casa. Tenemos tres puestos, y estos son nuestros mas grandes ingresos que recabamos," dice Ratliff. Todo es voluntario. No tenemos a nadie trabajando para nosotros, únicamente trabajan los voluntarios que hacen los hot dogs, y los que trabajan en los puestos consecionados."

"Luego hacemos una comida de Panqueque (Pancake), a principios del mes de Enero o en Febrero, en la cual servimos cerca de 2000 platos de panqueques para la gente local. Luego tenemos un aperitivo de helados mas tarde en el transcurso del año. Luego hay otros proyectos mas pequeños. Tenemos algo casi siempre cada cuarto (cada tres meses)."

Ratliff es papá de tres miembros de la cuadrilla de Monahans. Su hijo Ryan, toca los tambores. Lo hace también su hija Ashley. Su hija mayor, Courtney, toca la flauta.

Pero el señala rápidamente que uno no necesita ser el padre de uno de la cuadrilla para estar con los de la cuadrilla fomentadora.

"Tenemos a algunas personas, a bastantes personas, que no tienen a sus muchachos en la cuadrilla fomentadora, que son muy activos," el dice.

Que es lo que ellos comparten, sin embargo, es mi interés en la gente joven. En la actualidad hay muy pocas personas en la comunidad que no conozcan a un miembro de la cuadrilla.

"O, sí. Hay setecientos muchachos en la secundaria. Tenemos a 630, 0 640 muchachos en la cuadrilla, en Monahans," dice Ratliff, añadiendo que para ser miembro de la cuadrilla , en Monahans, comienza en el sexto grado. "Así que multiplique eso por el numero de amigos, vecinos, y familiares. La mayoría del pueblo tiene a alguien que toca en la cuadrilla, o tiene a un vecino en la cuadrilla de Monahans."

Sin embargo Ratliff no fue miembro de la cuadrilla mientras estuvo en la escuela el ve el valor de la educación musical para gente joven, particularmente en el ensamble de las grandes organizaciones tales como la cuadrilla que marchan tocando un instrumento.

"La música enseña muchas cosas. La cuadrilla, primero que nada enseña el espíritu de equipo, así como en el fútbol, o en el baloncesto, o en cualquier otra cosa," el explica. "Todos tienen que trabajar en conjunto, y hacer las cosas juntos. Cada sección tiene que practicar. Tiene que llegar temprano y quedarse hasta tarde. Construye este espíritu de equipo, así que absolutamente todos saben que tienen que hacer las cosas unidos para poder participar en el 'Estado', y ganar.

"Poder tocar un instrumento musical se queda toda la vida con uno. Conozco a personas que han estado afuera de una cuadrilla por 20 años. Ellos todavía pueden tocar el piano o tocar la flauta, o cualquier otro instrumento musical. Es una forma de relajamiento, y quedara con el muchacho toda su vida."

Es con esto en la mente que Ratliff y otros voluntarios contribuyen generosamente con su tiempo y su energía, como lo hace la cuadrilla fomentadora en las comunidades por todo el Oeste de Tejas.

"Bueno pertenezco a varias organizaciones. Pero en la cuadrilla fomentadora es en la que pongo mas tiempo, porque esto tiene un efecto positivo en nuestra juventud," dice Ratliff. "Algunos de nuestros jovenes de la cuadrilla, nunca hubieran podido asistir en San Luis, Mossouri,, Six Flags, no hubieran podido ir a Fiesta Tejas en San Antonio - si no hubiera sido por la cuadrilla fomentadora."

"Así es que pienso que le estamos ofreciendo a nuestros muchachos, no solamente experiencia de poder tocar un instrumento musical y desfilar, aprendiendo a ser miembro de un equipo. Le estamos ofreciendo a los muchachos algo que nunca tendrían de otra manera. Pienso que es importante, para que visualizen un amplio horizonte. Hacerlos ver que es lo que esta pasando en el mundo!"

Para mas información acerca de la Cuadrilla Fomentadora de Monahans, y como usted puede formar parte de su compromiso con la educación musical, usted puede comunicarse con Richard Ratliff al teléfono 943-6771.

Consenso

preocupados sobre dos cosas: ¿Qué tal si pierdo mi empleo? Y ¿quién va a limpiar esa vergüenza en la frontera?" enfatizó González.

Los miembros del Consenso Latino incluyen al Fondo Mexicano-Americano para la Defensa Legal y la Educación, al Consejo Nacional de La Raza, a la Coalición Puertorriqueña Nacional y al Instituto del Suroeste para la Investigación sobre los Electores. Cada uno de ellos ha acordado respaldar al plan de nueve puntos propuesto por el Consenso, pero ninguno está obligado a apoyar al acuerdo final de NAFTA.

La estrategia congresional del Consenso ha sido el acercarse a 53 miembros de la Cámara de Representantes cuyos distritos son Hispanos por lo menos en un 20%. Según la cuenta de González, de los 28 partidarios congresionales del NADBank, 25 están inclinándose contra NAFTA en su forma actual.

Además de efectuar conferencias de prensa, el grupo está acercándose a las juntas editoriales y a los gobiernos locales.

En la conferencia de prensa del 2 de Septiembre en el Ayuntamiento de Los Angeles, el representante Esteban Torres (demócrata por Los Angeles) dijo que él apoyaría a NAFTA sólo si se incluyeran el NADBank y la ayuda para el readiestramiento de los trabajadores. El ha auspiciado un proyecto de ley para usar al NADBank como medio de financiar la limpieza y los proyectos de infraestructura.

La representante Lucille Roybal-Allard (demócrata por Los Angeles) dijo que ni siquiera consideraría al tratado a menos que el mismo contuviera esas disposiciones.

Los tres miembros Cubano-Americanos del Congreso se oponen enérgicamente al pacto. "¿A quién estamos tratando de engañar? México no es un país libre," dijo Lincoln Diaz-Balart (republicano por Miami Lakes). "Es sólo una dictadura rotativa en que los presidentes se turnan para robarse las elecciones cada seis años."

Se le unieron en una conferencia de prensa el 8 de Septiembre en la capital los representantes Ileana Ros-Lehtinen (republicana por Miami) y Robert Menéndez (demócrata por Jersey City, N.J.) La representante Ros-Lehtinen describió al tratado como que beneficia "sólo al gobierno mexicano y no al pueblo estadounidense."

En este mes y el próximo, los acontecimientos del Mes de la Herencia Hispana están atrayendo a cientos de propietarios latinos de negocios pequeños, activistas de organizaciones y dirigentes

políticos regionales a Washington. Muchos de los visitantes darán sus puntos de vista sobre NAFTA y NADBank a la Casa Blanca y a los miembros del Congreso.

Como ha ocurrido con el resto del Congreso, el asunto de NAFTA ha dividido a la delegación Hispana.

Los miembros del Consenso Hispano esperan primero añadir más representantes a la causa del NADBank. Si esas gestiones tienen éxito y son encabezadas por el gobierno, esa circunstancia podría dar al Presidente Clinton algún apoyo necesario para el tratado bajo asedio.

Una Servidora del Concilio de la Ciudad de Monahans invita al público que atiendan una junta

Por Amarante Cordova

Ustedes están cordialmente invitados para que vengan y visiten a Raquel 'Rachel' Martínez, y a sus compañeros de trabajo, el segundo y cuarto Martes de cada mes, a las tres de la tarde, en el City Hall de Monahans.

Es cuando el Concilio de la Ciudad de Monahans realizan sus reuniones, las cuales están abiertas para el publico. De acuerdo con Martínez, asistiendo a estas reuniones es importante para todos los ciudadanos.

"Absolutamente! Usted sabe, lo que he visto que es un gran problema - y con esto no quiero decir que estoy degradando a alguien, a alguna cosa. Pero juzgando de la manera que soy, pienso que es bien importante que nosotros nos involucremos con nuestro gobierno," dice Martínez, quien en 1992, fue la primera mujer Hispana electa para el Concilio de la Ciudad de Monahans. "Por la razón que es lo que norma nuestras vidas. Como, nosotros que somos cinco, mas el mayor (Presidente Municipal). Hacemos todas las decisiones de la ciudad."

"Y por esto mismo creo que es importante que todos nos involucremos, y sepamos que es lo que esta sucediendo. Debemos participar. Estoy un poco decepcionada, porque actualmente, muy dificilmente tenemos asistencia en estas reuniones."

Una visitante regular tanto a la reunión del Concilio de la Ciudad como a la reunión del Ward County Commisioner Court (Corte de Comisionados del Condado Ward), Martínez demuestra su interés por su comunidad así es la razón por la cual se involucró en el proceso político.

He vivido en Monahans por 37 años, yo he observado que es una comunidad sensacional " dice Martínez, quien trabaja como administradora del Hospital Ward Memorial. "Y con esto quiero decir que amo a la gente, y que soy muy feliz en Monahans. Siento que necesito devolver eso, y hacer alguna cosa por mi comunidad. Y pienso que tal vez es esta la manera de hacerlo."

En la actualidad, su elección para la oficina fue mas fácil de lo que ella había anticipado. Siguiendo la trayectoria de los consejeros de la Ciudad Fred Hinojos y Henry Sanchez, ella anuncio su candidatura para el Primer Lugar en el Concilio de la Ciudad de Monahans, representando el lado Norte de la comunidad. Su oponente se retiro de la carrera, y Martínez sin oposición alguna. Por lo cual en 1992, ella vino a ser la primera Hispana como servidora en el concilio.

Martínez cree que una de sus mejores habilidades con la que ella contribuye en cada reunión del Concilio de la Ciudad, es su identificación con la gente de la comunidad, con las familias y los pequeños negocios, y como serán afectados por sus decisiones en el concilio.

"Quisiera hacer lo mejor para nuestra comunidad, por nuestros ciudadanos. Pensando que la mejor manera para hacer esto es poniéndome en la horma de sus zapatos, y ver de que manera los va a afectar," dice Martínez. "Al mismo tiempo, siento una tremenda responsabilidad, como la líder en la oficina, de tener la capacidad para manejar la ciudad de una manera que sea correcta."

"Pienso que hasta ahorita todo esta bien, esto es como un negocio.' Así es que sabemos en que área hay que recortar y en cuales hay que gastar algo. Pienso que es importante, poniéndome una servidora en la posición de la gente para así saber como sienten ellos, y como sentiría si yo fuera una empresario - como manejaría mi empresa.

Martínez señala rápidamente que su servicio es un proceso de aprendizaje. El cual es un proceso que ella a disfrutado.

"Lo amo! He sentido que apenas estoy en el jardín de niños! Es un aprender constante y constante. Y entre mas aprendo, mas me doy cuenta que poco se," dice Martínez. Por la razón que nuevas puertas se abren constantemente, con nuevas cosas para aprender. Y esto es formidable!"

"Amo a la gente. Encuentro a todos los demás (miembros del concilio de la ciudad) realmente interesados en ayudar a la comunidad, y es maravilloso observarlos. Y quiero decir con esto, que he aprendido de ellos, y que es maravilloso de verlos como realmente quieren a su comunidad, y como quieren servir a esta misma, desinteresadamente. Eso me gusta. He aprendido mucho de eso."

Es algo que Martínez cree que todos pueden aprender de esto beneficiándose. Es por lo cual que ella siempre señala la importancia que tiene el que la comunidad se involucre.

"Debemos saber que es lo que trabaja, saber las decisiones que se han tomado, por la sencilla razón que esto tiene un impacto tremendo en nuestras vidas," dice Martínez. "Siento que esto será mientras no nos interesemos, y no sepamos cuales son los problemas y mientras no sepamos no podremos hacer decisiones prudentes. Cuando recurrimos a las elecciones, realmente no sabemos que es lo que esta pasando, y por quien estamos votando realmente. Si no nos involucramos, y no sabemos que es lo que esta pasando, nosotros realmente no podremos hacer una decisión cuerda."

Por ahora, Martínez espera que todos los residentes de su comunidad hagan sus decisiones comenzando asistiendo a sus reuniones del Concilio de la Ciudad, y de la Corte de Comisionados del Condado. Será algo positivo para ellos, para sus familias, para sus negocios, y para su comunidad.

"Absolutamente! En lo personal animaré para que todos asistan. Como dije, creo que es maravilloso, y hay tanto que aprender!"

Monahans' City Councilwoman invites public to attend meeting

By Amarante Cordova

You are cordially invited to come and visit Raquel 'Rachel' Martinez, and her co-workers, the second and fourth Tuesday of each month, at three in the afternoon, in Monahans City Hall.

That is when the Monahans City Council holds it's regular meetings, which are free and open to the public. According to Martinez, attending these meetings is important for all citizens. "Absolutely! You know, what I find to be a real big problem - and I don't mean this to degrade anybody, or anything. But judging by the way I am, I think that it's very important that we get involved in our government," said Martinez, who in 1992, became the first Hispanic woman elected to the Monahans City Council. "Because that's what rules our lives. Like, we're up there, five of us, plus the mayor. We make decisions for the whole city."

"And I think that it's very important that we do get involved, and know what's going on. And we should participate. And I'm kind of disappointed, because actually, we hardly have any of the public come over and visit our meetings."

Joe D.Williams/Midland Reporter-Telegram

"I think that it's very important that we do get involved, and know what's going on. And we should participate".—Raquel 'Rachel' Martinez, Monahans City Councilwoman.

A regular visitor to meetings of both the Monahans City Council, and the Ward County Commissioners Court, Martinez credits her love for her community as the reason she became involved in the political process.

"Well, I have lived in Monahans for 37 years, said Martinez, who works as an administrator at Ward Memorial Hospital. "I mean, I just love the people, and I am very happy in Monahans. I feel like I wanted to return that, and do something for my community. And I thought this might be a way of doing it."

Actually, her election to office was easier than she had anticipated. Following the path of city councilmen Fred Hinojos and Henry Sanchez, she announced her candidacy for Place One on the Monahans City Council, representing the community's north side. Her opponent withdrew from the race, and Martinez found herself unopposed. In 1992, she became the first Hispanic woman to serve on the council.

Martinez believes one of the greatest skills she brings to each city council meeting, is her identification with the people of the community, the families and the small business, and how they might be affected by her decisions in the council. "I would like to be able to do the best for our community, for our citizens. And I think that the one thing that I usually do is put myself in their shoes, and see how it's going to affect them," said

Martinez. "And at the same time, I feel a tremendous responsibility, as a leader in office, to be able to run the city in a manner that would be right."

"I think I would say, 'OK, now this is like a business.' So I know we have to cut back in some areas, and we have to spend in some. So I think it's important, putting myself very much in the position of how the people would feel, and how - if I was a business person - how I would run my business."

But Martinez is quick to point out that her service is also a learning process. And that is a process that she has enjoyed.

"I love it! I find that I'm still in kindergarten! It's constantly, constantly learning. And the more I learn, the more I realize how little I know," said Martinez. "Because there's constantly new doors opening, with new things to learn. And this is terrific!"

"I love the people. I find that all the others (members of the city council) are really, really interested in helping the community, and it's wonderful to watch them. I mean, I learn from them, and it's wonderful to see that they really love the community, and they want to serve the community, and they're very unselfish. And I like it. I learn a lot from it."

It is something Martinez believes everyone could earn and benefit from. Which is why her conversation often returns to the topic of the importance of getting involved.

"We have to know what's working out there, what on our that as long as we don't get involved, and we don't know what the issues are, we can't make wise decisions. When we go to elections, we don't really know what's going on, and who we're voting for. If we don't get involved, and don't know what's going on, we really can't make wise decisions."

For now, Martinez hopes that all residents of her community will make the decision to begin attending meetings of their city council, and county commissioners court. It would be good for them, their family, their business, and their community.

"Absolutely! And I would encourage anybody to attend. Like I said, I think it's wonderful, and there's so much to learn!"

Minority volunteers are getting involved

By Jane E. Paredes

The United Way Drive is well underway with volunteers everywhere trying to raise the goal of $2,504,000.

Without the many special people involved in the United Way, many worthwhile organizations and services would not be available in times of need.

Traditionally, minorities are the ones to benefit from the many United Way organizations but lately, more and more minorities are getting involved with their communities and giving back.

Among these volunteers is Cecilia Lara, a graduate of Project Blueprint Class 11.

The United Way Project Blueprint recruited minorities to help solicit donations from minority owned businesses. With it being the first year for this type of drive, Cecilia feels it went pretty well.

Cecilia was one of the many volunteers who found the time and made an effort to contact businesses personally.

She has been a resident of Midland for over 40 years. Her husband, Merce Lara, passed away 2 1/2 years ago. She has 7 children and 15 grandchildren.

Cecilia is a retired teacher from Travis elementary having taught 2nd grade bilingual classes for 18 years. She very active with Our Lady of Guadalupe Church teaching children and adult classes.

Thanks to Cecilia Lara, Hispanics have a role model that keeps on giving of her time and experience.

The next report luncheons will be on October 21st. & 28th. at the Centtennial Plaza.

'Pan-Hispanicism' — A healthy trend among U.S. Hispanic groups

By Frank Gómez

Critics allege that our nation's diverse Hispanic groups "cannot get it together." This assumes, of course, that other groups do get it together and that we should model our behaviors on theirs. To expect Hispanic unity and full agreement on complex issues is unrealistic.

Nonetheless, several factors have converged in recent years which illustrate that Hispanics are indeed achieving a stronger sense of common purpose, a shared cultural.linguistic identity and increased cooperation in the pursuit of their objectives.

Spanish language television, jet-age transportation, great social mobility, intermarriage and sub-group diversity are among key forces at work that help to teach Hispanics about one another. This is healthy.

Television enables viewers in one area to appreciate the concerns, problems and successes of groups elsewhere with which they may not have been familiar. Excellent Spanish.language news broadcasts play a useful role — at least as far as knowledge is concerned.

Local, regional and national conferences are attended by persons of highly different backgrounds. Readily accessible air travel produces interaction, awareness and understanding.

Most importantly perhaps, many leaders have recognized that identifying by ethnic grouping and seeking to serve a single Hispanic sub-group are not only increasingly difficult but also unsound. Our communities are far too diverse, the problems they confront far too challenging. Effective advocacy means there must be room for all.

A growing spirit of inclusiveness is evident. This was the driving force behind the formation more than two years ago of the National Hispanic Leadership Agenda, a coalition of the major national Hispanic organizations as well as of several elected officials and private sector representatives.

Members recognize, as the adage goes, that "la unión hace la fuerza" or "in unity, strength." When more than two dozen organizations speak on an issue, they are heard.

In similar fashion, the Mexican American Women's National Association recently voted to change its name in recognition that its goal is to serve all Hispanic women, not just Mexican Americans.

The Midwest Northeast Voter Registration Education Project is another excellent example of unity in Hispanic diversity. Its mission is political empowerment through voter registration and participation — for all Hispanics. Consequently, its programs, staff and board of directors truly reflect the many Hispanic groups it serves.

The National Council of La Raza, which this year marks its silver anniversary, was born in the Mexican American Southwest. But today, it is broad and diverse in its composition and its programs. Rita Di Martino, a Puerto Rican from New York, is its past chair of the board of directors.

The League of United Latin American Citizens, another product of activism in the Southwest, is no longer regarded as solely a "Mexican American organization." It embraces all who share its goals and wish to work to advance them. Its name is inclusive. It has chapters in Puerto Rico, Florida, the Northeast and other regions where Mexican Americans are not the predominant group.

An organization where diversity is most clearly evident is the National Hispanic Corporate Council. Founded eight years ago, the NHCC now represents nearly 80 Fortune 500 companies active or interested in the Hispanic market. Its board of directors and membership include representatives of all major Hispanic subgroups in the country, as well as persons of Latin American origin.

What is emerging, therefore, is the gradual breaking down of barriers and increased tolerance for differences within the rapidly growing Hispanic American mosaic. This is not to say that Hispanics are becoming homogenized. No one should want or expect that to happen. Rather, members of each group, while retaining their own differences, are perceiving the value of similarities and common concerns.

As they prepare to become the nation's largest minority group after the turn of the century, Hispanic Americans are also aware of each other and better equipped to lead, better equipped to contribute to their country, their government and their communities!

El 'Pan-Hispanismo' — Una tendencia saludable entre los grupos Hispanos de los Estados Unidos

Por Frank Gómez

Los criticos alegan que los diversos grupos Hispanos de nuestra nación "no pueden juntarse." Esto asume, desde luego, que otros grupos se juntan y que nosotros deberiamos modelar nuestra conducta según la de ellos. El esperar la unidad y el acuerdo completo de los Hispanos sobre los asuntos complicados estea fuera de la realidad.

No obstante, varios factores han convergido en los años recientes, que ilustran el hecho de que los Hispanos están logrando en verdad un sentido más sólido de propósito común, una identidad idiomática compartida y una cooperación cadà vez mayor en la prosecución de sus objetivos.

La televisión en español, el transporte de la época del jet, la gran movilidad social, los matrimonios interracionales con mezcla y la diversidad de sub-grupos se hallan entre las fuerzas claves que trabajan y ayudan a enseñar a los Hispanos mutuamente. Esto es saludable.

La televisión permite a los televidentes de una zona apreciar los intereses, problemas y éxitos de los grupos de otras partes, con los cuales los primeros pueden no haber estado familiarizados. Las transmisiones de noticias excelentes en español desempeñan un papel útil — por lo menos en lo tocante al conocimiento.

A las conferencias locales, regionales y nacionales asisten personas de antecedentes completamente distintos. Los viajes por aire muy asequibles producen la inter-acción, la conciencia y la comprensión.

La Liga de Ciudadanos Latinoamericanos Unidos, otro producto del activismo en el suroeste, ya no se considera solamente como una "organización Mexicano-Americana." La misma abarca a todos los que compartan sus objetivos y desean trabajar para adelantarlos. Su nombre es inclusivo. Tiene ramas en Puerto Rico, la Florida, el Nordeste y otras regiones donde los Mexicano-Americanos no son el grupo predominante.

Una organización en la cual la diversidad se hace evidente con mayor claridad es el Consejo Hispano Corporativo Nacional (NHCC en inglés). Fundado hace ocho años, el NHCC representa ahora a cerca de 80 empresas comprendidas en la lista "Fortune 500" que están activas o interesadas en el mercado Hispano. Su junta de directores y sus miembros comprenden a representantes de todos los sub-grupos Hispanos principales del pais, asi como a personas de origen Latino-Americano.

Loqué está surgiendo, por lo tanto, es la ruptura gradual de las barreras y una tolerancia cada vez mayor por las diferencias dentro del mosaico Hispano-Americano que crece rápidamente. Esto no equivale a decir que los Hispanos estEan llegando a hallarse homogeneizados. Nadie deberia querer o esperar que eso ocurriera. Antes bien, los miembros de cada grupo, mientras que conservan sus propias diferencias, están percibiendo el valor de las semejanzas y de los intereses comunes.

A medida que se preparan para convertirse en el mayor grupo minoritario de la nación después de la vuelta del siglo, los Hispano-Americanos están igualmente al tanto unos de los otros y mejor equipados para dirigir, mejor equipados para aportar a su pais, a su gobierno y a sus comunidades.

growing businesses, which employ greater numbers of people. Additional income opportunities arise when a revitalized downtown district attracts more public and entertainment events, such as concerts and parades.

"We have helped promote events like Heritage Holidays, the Musical Menus In The Park," said Hendrick. "We had a street dance just a couple of weeks ago, that was extremely successful. Over 2,000 people coming down here, and making $15,000. You know? We were hoping to have 500 attend, and break even! You never know what to expect."

A street dance is just one of the many types of activities pursued by Main Street Odessa, which has taken a leadership role in breathing new life into downtown Odessa. A non-profit organization, it is one of many Main Street programs across the country, each of which is committed to restoring an important part of that community's personality, whether it's the 'courthouse square', or - in Odessa's case — a 'strip' of blocks along Grant Street, from 2nd to 8th Streets.

"Well, actually, we have four components, and it takes those four to make up a Main Street program. You can't have one without the other three," explained Hendrick. "But basically, it's promotion. To try to bring people into the downtown area, and have events to bring them down here. Then there is design. Generally, downtown has a 'look'. Odessa's happens to be a 1940's, 1950's 'Art Deco' look, and that's what our downtown is."

"We have economic restructuring, which basically is bringing in businesses, developing new businesses downtown. And working with the designers, getting the buildings back in shape, and restoring those buildings that have been sitting here so long. Finally, there's organization, which is basically our organization working with the 'downtowners', and planning and organizing this Main Street program."

Among the accomplishments to date? Numerous buildings have been refurbished, the sidewalks have been rebuilt and medians added to increase pedestrian traffic. Trees have been planted, and new park facilities have opened, such as Lincoln and Noel Parks. The Farmer's Market has now moved downtown, to the corner of 2nd and Grant Streets. And a variety of entertainment events are now taking place on an annual basis, to increase public traffic downtown.

New businesses are being encouraged to locate downtown through a variety of incentives, including low-interest loans, Community Block Development Grants, free architectural assistance, and joint advertising assistance for the businesses.

But according to Hendrick, the job is far from complete. Among other initiatives being pursued by Main Street Odessa, is a plan to restore and reopen one of the downtown theaters. There are also proposals to increase downtown's role in the arts and culture of the city.

"We've done the beautification. And as our mayor (Lorraine Perryman) says, 'beautification is economic development,'" said Hendrick, who added that these improvements are financed solely through hotel/motel taxes, and through contributions from corporations and foundations. "Nobody wants to move where it's ugly. And vise-versa, why beautify if there's nothing there?"

The benefits of the program and it's accomplishments have not been lost upon attorney Jesse Herrera, whose Herrera Law Firm opened in downtown Odessa in November of 1992.

According to Herrera, a downtown location is perfect for a business such as his.

"Well, I run a law firm, and being across the street from the courthouse gives you a great advantage," said Herrera, whose practice concentrates upon personal injury cases. "Anybody leaving the courthouse, needing an attorney, and seeing my law firm at close distance, makes it easier for us to pick up some business that way."

What began for Herrera as a single-room office, less than a year ago, has now grown to a larger suite of offices, and the growth is continuing. It also includes improvements to the building that Herrera occupies.

"I was lucky enough to find a building that was available," said Herrera, a graudate of New Mexico State University, in Las Cruces, and Texas Tech University, in Lubbock. "I found this one, and I changed the colors of the building, added some tint on the windows. It's going really well, it really is."

A native of Portales, New Mexico, Herrera's commitment to Odessa is a permanent one. It's a decision that is being greatly aided by the efforts of Main Street Odessa.

"Yes, I plan to stay here. I'm really pleased with the changes because it's a lot more attractive, and more people are coming into the downtown area," he said. "This is going to help my business, and every business in the downtown area!"

pasado año y medio el cupo se a incrcmentado un 25%. Así es que ahora tienen entre un 93% y un 97% ocupado."

El valor económico de la rehabilitación del centro de la ciudad a la comunidad en total, es evidente cuando Hendrick señala esto, así como los edificios se han revitalizado, su valor a incrementado y a generado nuevos ingresos para la ciudad y al condado. La infraestructura revitalizada atrae a negocios nuevos, y de crecimiento, los cuales emplean a una cantidad mas grande de gente. Oportunidades adicionales de ingresos aumentaran cuando se renueve al distrito del centro de la ciudad al mismo tiempo atraerá mas publico y eventos de entretenimiento tales como conciertos y desfiles.

"Nosotros hemos ayudado a promover eventos tales como 'Heritage Holidays', y el 'the Musical Menus In The Park,'" dice Hendrick. "Nosotros tuvimos un baile en las calles hace apenas un par de semanas, el cual fue un éxito rotundo. Mas de 2,000 gentes asistieron, y juntaron la cantidad de $15,000. Dólares. Usted sabe? Nosotros esperábamos una asistencia de 500 para salir a mano ! Usted nunca sabe lo que vaya a suceder."

Un baile en la calle es solo uno de los muchos tipos de actividades que es perseguido por la Main Street (Calle Principal) de Odessa, la cual a tomado el papel principal en el liderazgo de un ambiente en la nuevo vida que se le a dado al centro de la ciudad de Odessa. Una organización no comercial, es uno de muchos programas de la calle Main a través del país, el que cada cual esta comisionado para restaurar una importante parte de la personalidad de cada comunidad, ya sea la 'casa corte', o - en el caso de Odessa - la serie de calles a lo largo de la calle Grant, desde la 2da hasta la calle 8ava.

"Bueno, actualmente contamos con cuatro componentes, y toma estos cuatro para composición de los programas de la calle Main. Usted no puede hacer uno si no tiene los otros tres," explica Hendrick. Pero básicamente es promoción. Tratar de atraer gente al área del centro, y tener eventos para poder atraerlos. Luego esta el diseño. Generalmente, el centro tiene una apariencia. En Odessa su apariencia es de los años cuarentas y cincuentas con un estilo de 'Art Deco' (Arte Decorativo), y es esto lo que es nuestro centro."

Tenemos reestructuración económica, la cual básicamente atraerá negocios , nuevos negocios al centro de la ciudad. Y trabajando con los diseñadores, reincorporando los edificios, y restaurando esos que han estado aquí por mucho tiempo. Finalmente, esta la organización, la cual es básicamente nuestra organización que trabaja con las personas del centro, y la que planea y organiza los programas de la calle Main."

Junto con logros que se han obtenido hasta la fecha? Numerosos edificios se han restaurado, las aceras peatonales se han reconstruido y se han añadido para el incremento del trafico peatonal. Arboles se han plantado, y nuevos parques para recreación se han abierto, tales como el Lincoln y el Noel. El mercado de los agricultores se a trasladado al centro de la ciudad, a la esquina de las calles 2da y Grant.

Y una variedad de eventos de entretenimiento ahora mismo están tomando lugar anualmente, para incrementar el trafico del publico del centro de la ciudad.

A nuevos negocios se les estas se les esta animando para que se establezcan en el centro con una variedad de incentivos, incluyendo bajos intereses en los prestamos, concesiones para el desarrollo de las cuadras de la comunidad, asistencia arquitectónica gratuita, y asistencia en la publicidad colectiva para negocios.

Pero de acuerdo con Hendrick , falta mucho que hacer para el logro completo de todas estas metas. Junto con otras iniciativas perseguidas por la calles Main de Odessa, se esta planeando la restauración y la reapertura de uno de los teatros del centro. También hay propuestas para el incremento por parte de las secciones de artes y culturas de la ciudad.

"Hemos embellecido al centro de nuestra ciudad. Y como dice nuestra mayor (Lorraine Perryman), embellecimiento significa desarrollo económico," dice Hendrick, quien añade que estas mejoras son financiadas solo a través de los impuestos de hotel/ motel, y a través de contribuciones de corporaciones y fundaciones. "Nadie quiere cambiarse a donde este feo. Y viceversa, para que embellecer si nadie va a ir?"

Los beneficios del programa y sus logros no se han perdido después de que el licenciado Jesse Herrera abriera sus puertas como Herrera Law Firm en Noviembre de 1992.

De acuerdo con Herrera, su localización es perfecta para el negocio como el de el.

"Bueno, tengo una firma de abogado, y estando al otro lado de la calle de la casa corte le da a uno una cierta ventaja," dice Herrera, quien se especializa en casos de accidentes personales. "Cualquiera que salga de la casa corte necesita un abogado, y mas estando a la vista y al cruzar la calle, se nos hace mas fácil adquirir negocio de esa manera.

Herrera comenzó con una oficina sencilla el año pasado, ahora a crecido de tal manera que tiene oficinas mas grandes, y el crecimiento continua. También a incluido mejoras en el edificio que Herrera ocupa.

"Tuve suficiente suerte para encontrar un edificio que estuviera disponible," dice Herrera, graduado de la Universidad Estatal de Nuevo Mexico, en Las Cruces, y de la Universidad de Texas Tech, en Lubbock. "Encontré este edificio al cual le cambie los colores, le puse algo de polarizado en los ventanales, y su apariencia va quedando muy bien."

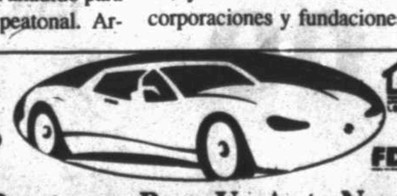

Nativo de Portales, Nuevo Mexico, Herrera dice que su cometido en Odessa es permanente. Es una decisión que a sido ayudada por los esfuerzos de las calle Main de Odessa.

"Así es, estoy planeando quedarme, Estoy muy satisfecho con los cambios que están por realizarse dentro del área del centro de la ciudad," el dice. "Esto ayudara a mi negocio, y a cada negocio en el área del centro de la ciudad de Odessa!"
