Cabin may be intact...

Shuttle fuselage examined

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Specialists examined at least five large chunks of shattered Challenger's fuselage today, and studied the possibility that a blowtorch of flame from a solid-fuel booster rocket triggered the explosion that destroyed the shuttle and its crew.

Officials of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration were surprised that so many large pieces survived Tuesday's fireball.

The size of the objects raised the possibility the pressurized module in which the seven astronauts rode might have survived the explosion and is intact at the bottom of the Atlantic.

Sonar detected a very large metal object on the ocean floor, 140 feet down, in the area where the fuselage parts were discovered, and divers were prepared to go down to look at it.

Aware of the possibility human remains might be found, NASA today issued this statement:

"No comment will be made by NASA officials today on anything concerning personal effects or human remains out of respect for the astronauts' families."

The families were attending a memorial service today in Houston.

Some observers suggested that the pressurized cabin might have burst during the explosion and that the remains of the astronauts would not be found.

A NASA videotape of the unloading of debris from search search showed the Challenger's nose and part of the cabin, parts of a cargo bay door, and sections of wing and tail. The largest piece of the latest find was about 20 by 8 feet.

Ironically, on the side of the cabin area was a yellow arrow, with the word "rescue" pointing to an unit that rescuers would open in case the shuttle ditched at sea and was intact. Inside the unit are switches that would permit a rescue team to shut down the ship's electronic systems and blow the top off the cabin.

A member of one of the investigation team panels who did not want to be identified said, "The investigation was significantly helped by the amount of spacecraft parts recovered. We had worried that we would not come up with as many pieces as we have, and we're anxious to learn what the big object is on the bottom."

The wreckage was spotted floating about 60 miles northeast of Cape Canaveral and it was hoisted aboard the Coast Guard cutter Dallas.

Doctors at Patrick Air Force Base, meanwhile, examined a fragment of bone and tissue that floated ashore 35 miles south of Cape Canaveral to determine if it belonged to one of the seven astronauts. It was attached to a blue sock, and police said it probably was a foot bone.

The focus of the disaster shifted today to the Johnson Space Center in Houston where President and Mrs. Reagan were to attend a memorial service for the astronauts.

The president planned to meet privately with their families, five of whom live in the Houston area.

Final bale count estimated at 46,000

All Scurry County gins have completed the annual cotton harvest and the final bale count reported this week totals 50,455.

Since an estimated 4,000 to 5,000 bales are likely from out-of-county producers, local ag officials noted Friday the initial projections for a 48,000 bale year here are likely too high.

Marvin Ensor, county extension agent, noted "we're probably looking at around 46,000 bales this year, which when you compare it to the last five years is above average."

He said the lowered number of acres harvested could be attributed to boll worm infestations which plagued select county areas during the summer.

Ensor added a comparison of 10 to 15 years worth of production would place a 46,000 bale total well below the average. A good year for Scurry County cotton has been estimated at 60,000 to 65,000 bales.

Ensor noted the yields of this year's crop varied greatly. He said he had heard of no yields exceeding the "bale and acre" criteria which would require 500 pounds of lint for every acre harvested.

He said the highest yield he knew of was up to 450 pounds per acre, but that this was in "very small acreage and spotted."

The last cotton processed in Scurry County apparently was ginned during the weekend. At the Inadale Co-Op near the Scurry-Nolan County border, a gin spokesman said the last cotton processed was finished by midnight Sunday.

All gin workers contacted by mid-week said they were now finishing up paperwork for the year.

Due to a wet fall, the 1985 cotton harvest did not begin in earnest until mid-November.

Last spring, some 59,000 acres were planted here in cotton. It is now estimated some 54,000 to 55,000 acres were harvested.

The Scurry County Cotton Producers Commodity Board will now assess an at the gin fee of ½ cent per pound on this produced cotton.

Proceeds from the assessment will be placed in an interest-bearing account for future use in cotton pest-control programs.

Larry Schwarz, president of the commodity board, said Thursday they have received December payments to date, an amount that generated in excess of $20,000.

The harvest last year — which marked the first time the assessment was levied — earned some $10,000 for this account. Only some 5,000 bales were counted in Scurry County last year — the

Museum recalls Big Top action

CIRCUS ATTRACTIONS — Feature attractions at the Scurry County Museum's Night at the Circus Saturday will include this trio. Visitors can also have their photo made with Wild Bill Hickok and the white buffalo replica. (SDN Staff Photo)

The Scurry County Museum on the campus of Western Texas College will be helping recapture the excitement of the Big Top Saturday as its Night at the Circus gets underway.

The program is for members of the Museum Association, and offers an opportunity for those wishing to become members to pay dues at the door and attend the evening's activities set to begin at 5 p.m.

Proceeds from Museum Association memberships go toward the operation of the museum.

Souvenirs of the evening will include photographs of visitors made by the white buffalo replica with Wild Bill Hickok look-a-like Buddy Burnett, museum volunteer worker.

Burnett's white hair and beard create the resemblance to the famous frontiersman. The souvenir picture idea developed since the museum's current exhibit of circus posters includes one advertising the real Wild Bill's Wild West show.

Clarence Dubose will be taking the photographs for a nominal charge.

The museum's circus events will begin at 5 p.m. with a sideshow attraction including games of chance, a fortune teller and music from the Senior Center's Kitchen Band in costume.

A calliope from McMurry College in Abilene will welcome visitors to the museum grounds.

At 6:30 p.m., the scene will shift to the WTC cafeteria where traditional circus fare will be served to include hot dogs, hamburgers, popcorn, cotton candy and lemonade.

At 7:30 p.m., the big show will begin with Mike Dennis serving as the ring master. Entertainment will include a magic act by Lonnie Chevrie Jr., a professional magician from Abilene.

Other acts — all comprised of local talent — will include Bond's Trained Dogs; Sylvia the Snake Charmer; Brenda the Belly Dancer, Kelly's Acrobats, a trick roper and several other specialty acts.

A family membership of $25 will admit the entire family and a single membership for $15 will admit one adult and a guest.

'Local' arrest unlikely

Investigators with the Scurry County Sheriff's office were still working Friday to locate Scurry County Jail escapee Domingo Zapata Martinez, 31.

However, Sheriff Keith Collier said he now holds little hope for a local capture.

Collier said Friday morning he believes Martinez is likely now out of the county.

Law enforcement officers tracked the fugitive for about five hours following his escape at 10 p.m. Wednesday. By 3 a.m. that morning, the trail ended among a collection of old vehicles on a lot at the intersection of 25th St. and Ave. E.

At that point, the trail of blood that officers had been tracking stopped.

Martinez was thought to have been bleeding from cuts he sustained when he broke through a window on the west end of the jail building.

Since Thursday morning, Collier reported that his office had received "very few" tips in the case.

Investigators followed up some leads during the day Thursday but none yielded significant infor-

Keeping tabs on our neighbors:

James Roberts, in the Andrews County News, believes in his hometown. He said someone had put a lot of thought into a list of nine easy ways to ruin any town. The author is unknown, but the subject is familiar to all of us.

1. Never attend any meetings. Just sit around and criticize the way "they" are doing things.

2. Vote against any kind of tax levy, whether the proposal is good or not. "They" just want your money.

3. Make fun of the fire and police departments. They are just out for the glory and pay.

5. Knock the city council. This is a must. Every one of the councilmen is just on the council to get a little kickback.

6. Stay out of church. You might go Easter and Christmas just to prove to yourself that the clergyman does not know what he's talking about and that everyone there is a hyprocrite.

7. Buy everything you can out of a discount catalog or out of town. These firms are the first to come through with donations and services to the community.

8. Spread any story or rumor that is defamatory or uncomplimentary about the town. Never say anything nice about anybody. All kids are delinquents and all businessmen are crooks.

9. Above all, always be cynical about anything that is supposed to be good for the community. Your motto should be, "If it's good, it can't happen here."

Premeditated murder...

Black sailor is found guilty

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — A black sailor who fatally stabbed a white officer while at sea has been convicted of premeditated murder, and a jury will now try to decide if he should be the first person executed by the Navy in 137 years.

A prosecutor said after Thursday's verdict that he would begin presenting evidence today to show there were aggravating circumstances in Petty Officer Mitchell T. Garraway Jr.'s attack on Lt. James K. Sterner.

The Navy must prove such circumstances existed before capital punishment could be imposed.

The eight-member military jury deliberated nearly four hours before finding Garraway guilty of plotting the attack on Sterner aboard the frigate USS Miller on June 16, 1985, while it was off the Bermuda coast.

Garraway, 21, of Suitland, Md., showed no reaction when the verdict was announced in the Newport Naval Base courtroom.

The Navy last carried out the death penalty in 1849, when two men were hanged for attacking an officer and throwing him overboard so they could join the California gold rush.

The officer survived, and the men were charged with mutiny and desertion with intent to kill, among other charges.

Navy courts-martial have sentenced others to die since that case, most recently in 1960, but those sentences were ultimately reduced, military authorities say.

The defense and prosecution have said the key motive was Garraway's belief that Sterner had unfairly blocked his promotion. The defense contended it stemmed from Garraway thinking Sterner was a racist, and his oversensitivity to real or perceived racial tension aboard ship.

Garraway had pleaded guilty to unpremeditated murder, which carries a maximum sentence of life imprisonment, but the Navy decided to try for a premeditated-murder conviction, punishable by either a life sentence or execution by a method chosen by Navy Secretary John Lehman.

Defense attorney Trevor L. Brooks said he would present up to 10 witnesses, including Garraway, to show that mitigating circumstances make the death penalty unwarranted.

Concord mourns Christa McAuliffe

FRAMINGHAM, Mass. (AP) — Hundreds watched, but no one spoke as seven black balloons floated into the cold, cloudless sky above the town where Christa McAuliffe grew up. Some wept. Some prayed.

They gathered Thursday on a frozen field at Framingham State College, where McAuliffe went to school, to honor the crew of the space shuttle Challenger and say goodbye to the teacher whose motto was "reach for the stars."

"These people were the new breed of American folk heroes," said Frank Newton, a student at Framingham State. "They all represented our hopes, but more so Christa, who for us symbolized the dream that someday we could all see and understand the special perspective of space."

Before the balloons were released, McAuliffe's parents joined 1,500 people at a memorial service for the spunky, homespun girl who overcame childhood illnesses to become the first private citizen selected to fly on the space shuttle.

In their first public appearance since witnessing the death of their daughter when the Challenger exploded Tuesday, Edward and Grace Corrigan sat in the front row of a hushed and crowded auditorium. Two of their children, Stephen and Betsy, who now live in California, also attended.

The parents fought back tears as they sang a hymn, "Let There Be Peace On Earth," and departed silently after the service at Framingham State, not far from their home.

Charles Sposato, a teacher at Framingham South High who was among 11,000 applicants to become the first teacher in space, told the gathering: "Christa McAuliffe is infinite because she is in our hearts."

"When we were trying out for the program, Christa said, 'What are we doing here?' and before I could answer she said, 'We're reaching for the stars.' Christa reached for the stars. ... Her wisdom said, "Reach for the stars and become a starholder...and know you too have become infinite," he said.

Films available for showings

In an continuing effort to make Scurry County a better, safer place to live, the Diamond M Museum has purchased five audio-visual films to be used by the Scurry County Crime Prevention Department.

These award-winning films were developed for the department in its fight against drug abuse. The programs may be obtained through the sheriff's office and are available for showing, free of charge, to schools, civic clubs, churches, and parent groups.

It will be easier to determine if a youngster has been smoking marijuana after viewing "Marijuana in the Classroom," which is a look at the marijuana problem among today's youth. The combination of drugs, alcohol, and driving kills more young people each year than any other cause. "Steering Straight" teaches young drivers the danger of driving under the influence.

"Drugs of Abuse" is an overview of America's drug problem, explaining the five classes of abused drugs, and the symptoms, and the paraphernalia associated with each.

David and Jill, 11-year-old children, take a magic journey with Princess Christine in "Marijuana the Inside Story" and learn the dangers of smoking marijuana.

Louis is a 19-year-old recovered drug addict. He tells his true story in "Tuned Out," and the message is that drug addiction is a painful illness that destroys life.

For additional information, or to schedule a free showing of any of these films, contact the Crime Prevention Office or Juvenile Probation Dept.

Dear Abby

Young Mother Wants an End To Production Line of Kids

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1986 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I'm 17 and have a 9-month-old daughter, and I'm pregnant again. But that's not my problem. I'm receiving state assistance and free medical coverage, but the state refuses to pay for getting my tubes tied, which is what I want.

They told me that when I reach the age of 21, they will, but not until. They say it's the law.

I don't want to risk having another baby. I can't take the pill for medical reasons, and the other methods are not 100 percent safe, plus they are a lot of bother. What should I do?

CONFUSED IN CONNECTICUT

DEAR CONFUSED: I am glad you wrote. Please contact your local family planning facility at once for instructions on the various methods of birth control. While some methods may seem like "a lot of bother," they would not be nearly as much bother as five children before your 21st birthday. A counselor at the clinic can also explain why a tubal ligation is not an appropriate method of birth control at age 17.

DEAR ABBY: I am 28 years old and have read your column for years, but this is my first letter to you. I am a bachelor (by choice) and was very much offended by comments made by your readers concerning bachelors.

I am the one who works late, or comes in early when something special needs to be done at the office. I usually work on holidays because I have no wife or children at home, so I allow my married co-workers to enjoy theirs. I also host showers, company parties, neighborhood gatherings, etc. because living alone makes it simpler to be a host. But I am still asked, "When are you going to settle down?" (I have.) "Why don't you get out and meet people?" (I do.) "Are you gay?" (I am not.) And if this isn't enough, I am viewed with suspicion if I'm too attentive to a married woman.

In spite of its drawbacks, I am single, and I like it. I don't appreciate being compared to a mule, or told that I remain single to avoid responsibility.

So, to you married men who fear bachelors: I am happy you have found someone to share your life with, but don't criticize bachelors. If your marriage turns sour, you will probably turn to a single friend for comfort. And as for that reader who called bachelors jackasses, you owe us an apology. Of course we'll never get one because jackasses (no matter how many legs) do not talk. They just make noise.

JOHN H., GARLAND, TEXAS

DEAR ABBY: Recently you had a letter from "Louisiana Libra," who didn't know what to say when she was asked, "How's your love life?" You suggested, "It's none of your business," which is true, but it's also rude.

In the early years of my marriage, I was frequently asked, "How come you don't have any children yet?" I replied, "I don't know."

Sometimes, they pursued it further with, "Whose fault is it, yours or your wife's?" I repeated my original answer, "I don't know."

To every question, I kept saying, "I don't know." They soon got tired of asking, and shut up.

I'm over 75 and still use that response to questions I don't want to answer, and it always works.

JUST H.R.

DEAR JUST: Good suggestion. Another response to a question one does not care to answer: "Why do you want to know?"

Dr. Gott

Peter Gott, M.D.

Regular exams are necessary

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Seventeen years ago I had cancer of the uterus that required 60 hours of radium treatment and a complete hysterectomy. I'm 71. Two years ago, the result of my latest pelvic exam was negative. I've never had any discharge or other problems. Do I need to have further pelvic exams?

DEAR READER — In my opinion, yes. You are indeed fortunate to have been able to overcome the disease you developed at 54. Nonetheless, you would be prudent to continue having regular gynecological evaluations to make sure that your cure is permanent.

DEAR DR. GOTT — In 1977, I had a cyst taken out of my left breast. Since then, I can express a foul-smelling discharge from the surgical scar. My doctor says this is normal. He cleans it out and it's OK for while, but then the boil comes back. He says I'll have to have my milk glands taken out before this will stop. What should I do?

DEAR READER — It sounds to me as though you have developed a chronic infection within the operative site. This could be due to foreign matter, like a stitch, that has persisted in the scar. The milk ducts also may be chronically inflamed. I think the best approach for you would be to seek a surgical opinion from another consultant. Although you may require another operation to clean out the infected area, this option seems preferable to putting up with a chronically draining breast wound.

DEAR DR. GOTT — One day I woke up with a pounding headache. My doctor treated me for congested sinus. Then I went to a chiropractor, who stretched my legs until they "cracked." Now I can't get out of bed in the morning without severe pain. My friends tell me it's my age (75). I never think of my age and was looking forward to being an active old lady. Could it be a pinched nerve?

DEAR READER — It certainly could. I can't, for the life of me, figure out why a chiropractor would attempt to treat your headache by stretching your legs. You don't define the location of your present pain, but I believe you would be best served by making an appointment with a reputable neurologist. If there is a pinched nerve, such a specialist will be able to diagnose the condition and suggest treatment.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I discovered a bump in one of my testicles. It does not hurt or interfere with ejaculations. I'm 25. What should I do about this?

DEAR READER — Get to a urologist. Although testicular lumps are usually benign and insignificant, malignant tumors can occur. You need to see a specialist who is trained to evaluate abnormalities of the male reproductive tract.

For Dr. Gott's complete discussion of problems and treatments of the prostate gland, write for your copy of Dr. Gott's new Health Report on THE PROSTATE GLAND. Send 75 cents plus a long self-addressed, stamped envelope in care of this newspaper to P.O. Box 2597, Cincinnati, OH 45201. Be sure to mention the title.

Governor protests federal tax cuts

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas has put a temporary hold on any new bonds for water and wastewater projects until officials see how federal tax reform errorts turn out.

Officials say they are afraid such bonds issued by state and local governments would be subject to federal taxation under legislation pending in Congress.

Gov. Mark White made an urgent appeal to congressional leaders Thursday to retain the tax-exempt status of bonds that affect many state and municipal projects.

The action came after the Texas Water Development Board temporarily suspended any further action on applications for financing of projectds until the outcome of the tax-reform legislation is determined.

The action suspended work on numerous projects that were included in the Texas Water Plan approved by voters last November.

"Today, we've seen the Texas Water Development Board temporarily suspend its program to loan political subdivisions money to finance water, sewer and flood conntrol projects," White said in a statement late Thursday.

"Uncertainty in the tax-exempt bond market could also jeopardize, financing options for housing, flood control, nonprofit hospital construction, and student loan programs in Texas," White said.

Earlier in the week, White wrote a letter to U.S. Senate Finance Committee Chairman Bob Packwood in opposition to tax-exempt bond restrictions contained in the proposed tax reform legislation.

"If this effort is successful, the costs of state and local government will rise, the costs to our citizens will increase, and the public will suffer," White told Packwood.

White said the legislation approved by the House "generally eliminates the current tax-exemption for bonds to finance air and water pollution control, sports and convention centers, nonairport parking facilities and other projects owned and opeated by local government or non-government-owned but clearly serving the public."

Women of the Vatican, mostly nuns, work chiefly as telephone operators and as cooks and housekeepers for the Pope and other prelates, says National Geographic.

Memorials may include names for solar systems

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ideas for memorials to the seven-member crew of the space shuttle Challenger are flooding Congress, ranging from posthumous presidential medals to naming the newly discovered moons and rings of the planet Uranus for dead American astronauts.

Other proposals focus on Christa McAuliffe, the Concord, N.H., schoolteacher who died Tuesday with six astronauts when Challenger exploded shortly after launch from Cape Canaveral, Fla. There are a number of proposals to honor her, including designating Jan. 28 as a permament and annual day of recognition of the contributions of America's teachers.

Club hears librarian

A special program for the Business and Professional Women's Club was hosted by Nellie Smith with Jimmy Cooper and Fay McCollum assisting. Smith carried a birthday theme in her decor and lit a candle in a special holder that she made.

Mrs. Mitchell, Scurry County librarian, presented the program on 'Women's fashions', published by Texas Tech graduates. She discussed the plans of collecting the books on the sesquicentennial celebration, which groups and individuals donate and place on a permanent shelf in the Scurry County Library. In closing, Mitchell briefly discussed the prices and reviews of recent publications.

The Business and Professional Women's Club plans to place books this year at the Scurry County Library.

Guest present for the meeting was Glenna Rogenstein, Maxie McGrew, Bertha Gilbert and Bessie Wilson.

On Jan. 28 the club met at Martha Ann Woman's Club for a dinner meeting with Ethel Mae Sturdivant as hostess. The decorations for the dinner included the Valentine theme. The centerpiece at the serving table was an arrangement of red and white flowers with plate favors as valentines with red candy. Mints were served in individual valentine holders.

Nellie Smith gave the club collect. Representatives of MAWC encouraged the group to attend all the spring activities at MAWC. A special emphasis was placed on attending the upcoming Valentine dinner. Tickets are now available.

In the business session of the meeting, vice president Ruby Butts presided over the meeting in the absence of president Lee Weaver. Plans are being made for a spring membership tea, reports Eula Williams. Francis Brown discussed the club's support of the foreign exchange student program. Jimmy Cooper discussed the proposed award for a sophmore student at Western Texas College.

New light control turns lights out

AUSTIN (AP) — Signs saying "last one out turn out the lights" may not be necessary in the future, according to Energy User News.

The publication reports development of a new ultrasonic personnel sensor for lighting control of areas up to 1,000 square feet that can save as much as 50 percent on lighting costs.

The unit turns lights on and off by filling the space with ultrasonic sound waves reflected off people within the area, and when no movement is detected the lighting can be shut off within one minute.

The sensor also has an adjustment for air turbulence that allows a user to adjust the sensitivity relative to the air motion from heating, air conditioning and ventilating units.

It can be used in hotels, motels, commercial buildings, warehouses, offices, conference rooms, bathrooms or any space where people frequently move in and out and forget to turn out the lights.

A ruff that got away

By James Jacoby

An early lesson is that trump support plus shortness in a side suit equals an attractive dummy for declarer. Today's deal provides an example of a responder's hand that is completely balanced at the same time providing a ruffing value. Unfortunately declarer failed to see this potential trick in partner's 4-3-3-3 shape.

Trading on the fact that neither North nor South ever bid no-trump, West led the ace of hearts and continued the suit. South ruffed the second heart, drew trumps and ducked a spade. When a third heart was played declarer ruffed and played ace and king of spades. When spades split badly, diamonds were still left, but that suit also failed to behave properly. It was bad luck that neither spades nor diamonds split 3-3, but there was a better play available.

At the third trick, without drawing trumps, declarer should play ace and king of spades and give up a spade. If the suit divides, fine. Then the fourth spade will be good. If the suit does not split, the jack of clubs is still there in dummy ready to do its work, ruffing the last spade.

This type of play is not readily apparent. Think of it this way. If you have a strong primary trump fit and a side suit with potential losers, give thought to keeping trumps in the dummy for possibly trumping losers in the side suit. It's certainly helpful in such a case if dummy's trump is not going to be overruffed. (Here the club jack was equal to the ace, king or queen.)

EASY BAKED FISH

¾ pound sole or flounder fillets
1-3rd cup mayonnaise
¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese
2 tablespoons fine dry bread crumbs

Choose a very shallow baking pan into which the fillets will fit in one layer, line the pan with foil. Arrange fillets in foillined pan. Spread each fillet with mayonnaise, then sprinkle with Parmesan and crumbs. Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven until lightly browned and fish flakes easily and looks opaque when tested with a fork — 25 minutes. Makes 2 large servings.

SHARON OLIVER'S SPINACH SALAD

½ teaspoon grated orange rind
¼ cup orange juice
½ cup vegetable oil
2 tablespoons sugar
3 tablespoons red wine vinegar
10 ounces fresh spinach, well-washed and torn into bite-size pieces
1 small cucumber pared and thinly sliced
6 medium scallions (3 ounces) thinly sliced
11-ounce can mandarin oranges, drained

In a salad bowl wisk together orange rind, orange juice, oil, sugar and vinegar until blended. Just before serving add spinach, cucumber, scallions and mandarin oranges, toss well with the dressing. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Professional nanny comes to Dallas

There are many indications of the growing need for nannies both nationally and in Texas. The need for well-trained in-home caregivers are extremely critical.

At the Nanny Training Institute in Dallas the groups are small and the atmosphere is low-pressure. Most of the women are placed in a work-study situation living in a home or commuting while they attend classes five hours a week. An accelerated course is also available for people who prefer to attend classes full-time.

In school, nannies learn about creative play activities, effective discipline, emergency procedures, child development, nutrition and communication skills. Much of the classwork focuses on real life situations and sharing alternatives to deal successfully with problems.

Madeline E. Ehlert, a representative of the Nanny Training Institute, will be in Lubbock on Feb. 5 for the purpose of recruiting people interested in becoming nannies.

Ehlert will be at the Casa Grande, 6624 Avenye H, Room 172 between 5 p.m. and 8 p.m. for any interested persons or more information.

BEEF BELONGS IN SPEICAL DIET

Many people whose doctor's prescribe a low-calorie, low-fat or low cholesterol diet think they have to give up eating beef. But that isn't the case.

Lean beef can fit into special diets. The only restrictions are that the meat should be a lean cut, the visible fat should be trimmed from around the edges, and it should be cooked by broiling or grilling rather than frying.

When it comes to calories, lean beef compares favorably to the broiled chicken that is often recommended on special diets. For example, a three ounce serving of lean roast beef contain 169 calories and a similar serving of top loin (strip) steak contains 195 calories.

By comparison, three ounces of baked chicken without skin, contains 174 calories and the same serving of fried chicken with the skin contains 209 calories.

Beef also contains less fat than most people assume. Three ounces of cooked lean beef contains about nine grams of fat, and less than half of that is saturated.

It's true that fat consumption has been increasing, but that has been caused primarily by an increase in the use of vegetable fats and oils. Vegetable fats and oils now account for 43 percent of the fat in the food supply. And food consumption surveys show that much of our excess fat intake is from hidden sources in convenience foods.

How about cholesterol? Even here, beef compares favorably to other meats. Three ounces of cooked lean beef contain 73 milligrams of cholesterol. The same amount of roast chicken contains 76 mg; pork, 77 mg; shrimp, 130 mg; cheddar cheese, 90 mg.

Don't forget that the body needs cholesterol daily and will manufacture the difference between the amount consumed and the amount it requires.

A standard three ounce serving of beef provides about eight percent of the cholesterol the body needs.

Whether you're on a special diet or not, you can enjoy lean beef and know that you're getting a protein-rich food that provides the essential vitamins and minerals for good nutrition.

Prints to make a splash this spring

By Florence De Santis

After years when they were almost completely absent from the fashion scene, prints are back, splashing bold patterns and bright colors over everything from casual sportswear to cocktail clothes for spring. Even swimsuits take to the new themes.

Florals still come up strong, relaunched by the Missoni's famous cabbage rose knits of a few seasons ago. They're popping up on dresses, pants and even casual clothes, such as as dolman tunic T-shirts at Westside Jim Heilman scatters cabbage roses over his wrap-skirt yellow sundress.

Two-piece dressing often calls for a knit top with full skirt. Irene Wallender makes the skirt of pink cabbage-rose print black cotton, then appliques a motif from the skirt on her black cotton knit T-top.

When floral prints aren't roses, they're in spaced modern-art or splashy tropical designs. Eklectic spaces deep purple and red sharply defined nosegays over a dolman, full-skirted yellow shirtdress with a crushed cummerbund midriff. Jennifer Carr covers a red and royal jumpsuit with a loose jacket massed in red and yellow tropical blooms — all in silk.

Some designers now simply outline the floral prints and don't fill them in solidly with color. It's a look influenced by Japanese art, and Morton Myles likes it in embossed cotton jacquard. The huge blossoms are traced in red and left white against a jade background, which is repeated in the fitted, ribbed midriff. At Gordon of Philadelphia the look is done in fuchsia and navy roses that are partly filled in on a white skirt in unpressed pleats, and repeated in larger size on the shoulder and opposite hem of a blouson dolman knit T-top.

Other prints, particularly on sportswear, highlight fruit this spring. Sometimes it's a single motif, such as big watermelon slices on a swimsuit. I.B. Diffusion centers a pineapple on a black-and-white striped cotton sweater. But Evelyn Pearson scatters a whole fruit bowl across her tank-top white playsuit. Gitano does a group of oversized shirts in colorful fruit print, to mix with pants in any of the colors. Lean jeans at Brooke Shields Jeanswear are covered with bananas and peaches and are worn with a banana yellow shirt.

Monsoon of London uses a black, brown and white Guatemalan Indian theme in a mix of diamond and zigzag shapes. Children's toys, including tops and teddy bears, are spaced over sportswear cottons. At Nik Nik, white swirls pattern a black sleeveless shirt over black pants in a white scribble print. Anne Pinkerton prints black letters on scribbles for an oversized shirt worn over a tied camp shirt and pants in herringbone pattern.

Stripes are still favored but are often combined with other themes. Dresses come in pastel wavy stripes or wallpaper striped floral. At Issey Miyake Plantation, a navy-and-white spaced floral print shirt teams with boldly striped wrapped pants, both in cotton. Often polka dots mix with stripes, or stripes are overlaid with dots. Squeeze-In puts stripes alongside panels of circles for its black-and-white slim jeans and cropped jacket.

Perhaps the newest look in print pants is denim printed in stars, florals or geometrics, according to the designer's whim.

Florida 1st graders fix happy ending

MELBOURNE, Fla. (AP) — Hope springs eternal, especially when you're in the first grade.

The first graders in Mary Kienzle's class at Our Lady of Lourdes School graphically proved this bit of folk wisdom when they were asked to explain what happened to the shuttle Challenger and its seven-member crew.

"My children can't write yet so I asked them to draw what they thought happened," Mrs. Kienzle said Thursday evening. "I was very impressed by how much they understood and by the way they held out hope for the astronauts."

The pictures were used on Thursday as part of a special, commemorative mass at the school.

"Father Anthony Palimese used the pictures in the homily to explain to the children what had happened," said Mrs. Kienzle. "He told the children about bravery and sacrifice."

And hope.

Father Palimese, who conducted the mass with a plastic model of the shuttle Challenger on the altar, was especially struck by a picture drawn by 6-year-old Erik Nero. The picture, done with colored crayons, shows three astronauts coming down in parachutes while debris falls around them.

"One piece of debris has USA written on it," Mrs. Kienzle noted. "I was really impressed by that. The children did the drawings in class and I can assure you that they had no help; I wanted to see what they understood about the fate of the shuttle and especially of the crew."

She said she thought the priest singled out Erik's picture because of the detail and the "deep meaning."

Other pictures, she said, showed rescue teams coming to the aid of the astronauts. One picture, by Sinead Cunningham, showed all seven astronauts in the water, intact, apparently waiting to be rescued.

Arab League falls short of set goals

TUNIS, Tunisia (AP) — A special meeting of the Arab League rejected Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy's demand for retaliatory economic action against the United States, and instead issued a condemnation of U.S. economic and military measures against Libya.

Only eight foreign ministers from the 21 Arab League members attended what was billed as a one-day foreign ministers' meeting.

They and lower-level delegations from other Arab countries showed little enthusiasm for anything stronger than the moral support they already have given Khadafy.

President Reagan ordered economic sanctions against Libya following the Dec. 27 attacks at the Rome and Vienna airports that left 20 people dead, including five Americans and four Palestinian terrorists. The Reagan administration has charged Libya finances and trains terrorists.

The United States also has accused Libya of harboring Abu Nidal, the renegade Palestinian whom the Reagan administration and Italy blames for engineering the airport attacks.

St John's Church has annual meet

The annual congregational meeting of St. John's Episcopal Church was held on Wednesday. Dr. Harold Miller presided as chairman pro tem. The annual parochial report was presented, showing eight additions to the membership rolls. A proposed budget for 1986 was approved, which included $9,000 for St. John's support and clergy to be shared with All Saints' Church of Colorado City and St. Stephen's Church of Sweetwater. Also included is $4,000 projected for planned improvements to the church building and grounds.

Five members were elected to the vestry, which later elected officers as follows: Harold Miller, M.D. was re-elected Bishop's Warden. Harry Mitchell was named Junior Warden. Mrs. Juanita Hart was elected to a second term as Clerk of the Vestry. Other member elected were Kris Riojas, R.N. and Tommy Fletcher. Elected by the congregation as Delegate to Convention was the Hon. Gene Dulaney, with Mrs. Deanne Miller as alternate.

In other business, Dr. Miller presented an update on the continuing efforts to secure a rector and the congregation adopted the following statement of purpose for 1986.

We shall draw together as a family, bound by the love of Christ and one another.

—to maintain the orderly worship of God in Anglican-Episcopal tradition.

—to nurture full ministry of the laity, both in the institutional life of the church and in the daily lives of each of the members.

—to share the experience of God's wider love and forgiveness with each other and the wider community.

—to anticipate ministry shared with resident ordained clergy.

Regular services offered by St. John's include an 11 a.m. Sunday Eucharist and a 7 p.m. Wednesday Vespers, followed by fellowship and a covered dish supper. Planned services for Lent include a special Ash Wednesday service, with imposition of ashes on Feb. 12. Good Friday services will be conducted at All Saints Church in Colorado City and the Great Vigil of Easter will be held here on Easter Eve at 7 p.m. Anyone interested in finding out more about the Episcopal Church or services offered can contact any of the members of the vestry.

Helicopter has been grounded

WASHINGTON (AP) — Officials say they do not know what caused the cracks in the main rotor blades of at least 13 of the Army attack helicopter AH-64 Apache, a discovery that has led the Army to ground its entire fleet of the craft.

In a brief prepared statement Thursday, the Pentagon said the Army issued the grounding order "as a precautionary measure."

The statement said that "There have been no accidents related to the main rotor blade."

But Howard DeMere, a spokesman for the Army Aviation Systems Command in St. Louis, Mo., confirmed that at least 13 of the advanced helicopter gunships had been found to have cracked blades.

The service has also decided to suspend the acceptance of any more Apaches from the manufacturer, the McDonnell Douglas Helicopter Co., pending the results of an investigation.

The Apache has been designed as the Army's most deadly, front-line aerial weapon for use in providing "close combat support" against enemy tanks.

All in weekend's work at U.S.-Canadian checkpoints

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — They slip across the world's largest undefended national border singly and in groups, cramped into car trunks and pickup truck toolboxes, with wads of drug money hidden under the dashboards.

In three days beginning Saturday, the Immigration and Naturalization Service caught four Chinese men and a Turk being smuggled into New York from Canada, and a suspected drug smuggler with $40,000 stashed in his car.

"This represents the kind of thing that's going on at the northern border in any time period you would want to choose," said Benedict J. Ferro, Buffalo district director for the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

About 35 million people last year legally crossed the 320 miles of border through 17 official ports of entry that Ferro covers with 350 full- and part-time employees, more than any other stretch of the Canadian border.

More than 30,000 people were detained or turned back last year in New York, 3 percent of the number stopped along the Mexican border, he said in a recent interview. No one knows how many may have made it across undetected.

"I'm not sure this represents an increase in smuggling, but it does indicate what is happening in this part of North America," he said. Vigilance has been increased in recent weeks for fear that terrorists might slip across New York's border with Canada, officials say.

With cheap air fares and an entrenched smuggling system in Toronto, "we are now experiencing attempted illegal entries from persons from every country of the world across the New York-Canadian border," Ferro said.

It's a border with some formidable physical obstacles: the Niagara and St. Lawrence rivers and rugged woods that would be even more forbidding with winter snow and cold. All along the border the U.S. Border Patrol — the uniformed arm of the immigration service — has electronic sensing devices, Ferro said.

"So most of these people attempt to make their entry through the busy ports of entry through the use of counterfeit documents or stolen or lost passports, or secreted in the trunk of a car or a flatbed truck."

Illegal aliens find it easier to enter the United States via Canada because of a firmly established smuggling organization in Toronto, only a two-hour drive from Buffalo, Ferro said.

Temporary superfund financing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration has reversed its position and now supports temporary financing for "Superfund," but a revival of the cash-starved toxic cleanup program still faces a big barrier.

The impediment is the tax-writing Senate Finance Committee, which for reasons larger than Superfund still opposes stopgap money for toxic removals while Congress struggles to produce a long-term renewal of the cleanup effort.

"I don't think the committee as a whole has changed its mind" about interim Superfund financing, committee spokesman Sam Richardson said Thursday after Lee Thomas, administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, announced the administration had changed its thinking.

Richardson said Superfund is part of a far larger legislative chess game involving income tax revision and the budget reconciliation bill for fiscal 1986, which began last Oct. 1.

Richardson said that before the finance panel goes to work on the problems that are grinding toxic cleanups to a halt, House and Senate fiscal leaders will have to reach agreement on how to proceed on the broader tax and budget questions.

In the meantime, Superfund is running short of money and needs cash by April 1 to avoid further shutdown of cleanups around the country and a possible layoff of 1,500 EPA workers next October, Thomas told the Senate Environment Committee.

Ignace Paderweski became Poland's first prime minister in 1922.

Dozens injured in Haiti

MIAMI (AP) — Joyous shouts turned to cries of anger and pain when a celebration of an unfounded report of the overthrow of the Haitian government turned into a riot after a car plowed into a crowd of 1,500 refugees, killing a woman and injuring two men.

In the ensuing melee, five people were bitten by police dogs, a police officer was wounded by his own gun during a scuffle, and another was hit on the head by a thrown object, said police Chief Clarence Dickson.

Police arrested four men believed to have been in the car, which tore into the crowd in reverse at high speed late Thursday, and were interrogating them today, said police spokesman Mike Stewart.

Ask The Preacher

...about "theistic evolution"

By Randall Gray

This is the idea that God used evolution to bring the world into existence. That God did create life and humanity, but that He did it through the use of evolution.

Well, there are a lot of arguments on both sides that would take a great deal of time and space to relate, so let me say this: Theistic evolutionists, although they claim to believe in God, always give me the impression that they think God somehow needed help in creating the world.

I don't think so.

The New Testament actually says that God spoke the world into existence. That means God said, "Let there be life," and there was!

Impossible? Of course it is! All miracles are! That's what makes them miraculous! And God's creative power is part of what makes Him God...

They won't celebrate, though...

Western rides Broncos, 78-66

Western Texas College's Westerners broke their home losing string here Thursday night but Coach Phil Spradling wasn't planning any celebrations.

"We're still making those little mental errors," he sighed. "I told the kids after the game that we weren't going to celebrate this win. We aren't celebrating anything until we get into the regional tournament," said Spradling, whose Westerners defeated New Mexico Military Institute 78-66.

"We've got seven more games and we want the fans to know we're going to try our best not to let them down."

The victory - Western's first at home in four outings now - puts the team at 5-4 in Western Junior College Atheltic Conference play. They hold a 14-8 season mark as they make plans to load the bus for trips to Howard College and Odessa College next week.

Thursday's game was highlighted by the Western's fast break and the inside play of NMMI's 6-6 sophomore Tyrone Howard. Howard, who was ineligible to play the first semester this season, came off the bench and crashed the middle for 36 points. Teammate Forrest Barnes scored 9 inside while Steve Conley added 4.

The Broncos' inside play kept the game as close as it was, and made more apparent some problems Coach Spradling was already concerned about.

"Their big men inside were unreal. They really moved well inside. I tell you, we need some more height inside. We don't have it, so we're having to use our guards. I've got to get our guards to understand that guards can rebound, too," he said.

Western got a number of points inside, too, but probably half of them were layups by the guards on the fast break. WTC's 6-9 sophomore Cliff Langford came up with 14 points but it was freshman guard Alvin Lee who led the way with 23.

Lee hit a number of outside shots, but the clincher came in the waning minutes of the game when he outraced the Bronco defense wide receiver-fashion to cradle in passes from Alvin Hicks and George Moore. Hicks bagged 18 points himself - his best scoring effort in several games.

Western also got 13 points from James Dawn.

WTC took the lead early on an outside jumper from Lee and never relinquished it. Langford added a bucket and Hicks and Moore popped a string of free throws as the hosts mounted an 11-4 advantage with 13:20 to play in the half.

The lead eventually reached 10 points, 23-13, when Langford put a rebound back up and in. NMMI fought back with its inside game, however, and trailed by only three at halftime, 39-36.

Six minutes into the second half, Western was up by 10 again, 50-40. The advantage fluctuated between 10 and six points most of the rest of the half.

New Mexico made a rally late in the game, when Howard and Barnes snared back-to-back buckets. The visitors eventually pulled within four points, 56-52. Western retaliated by outscoring the opponent 9-2 over the next four minutes to build its lead back up to 11. Hicks accounted for two buckets while Dawn got a three-point play and Lee scored on a quick breaker down the floor.

The result was a 65-54 advantage from which NMMI was unable to recover.

Western played the game without 6-5 sophomore Ed Teal, who suffered a minor eye injury Wednesday. Teal could be able to play in Monday's game with Howard College.

The contest will be a double header, tipping off with a women's game at 6. The men play at 8.

NMMI, 1-7 in the conference and 10-10 overall, will host South Plains on Monday.

Cavaliers shock Tar Heels, 86-73

by The Associated Press

"Lose one?" North Carolina Coach Dean Smith asked rhetorically, as though he expected to lose a few more.

And, maybe he did after seeing his team's 21-game winning streak snapped Thursday night at Virginia with an 86-73 loss, leaving No. 2 Memphis State as the only major unbeaten team in the country.

"I'm surprised we got this far without losing one, and I'm surprised at Memphis State going this far," the coach of the top-ranked Tar Heels said. "We had a chance to lose up at Maryland, against Duke and against Marquette. I thought Georgia Tech was a close game, and Notre Dame, too.

"They all seemed close. Maybe they will all be close from here on out."

The Cavaliers, 14-5 and 4-3 after the Atlantic Coast Conference victory, got 19 points from center Olden Polynice, built a lead of as many as 19 points late in the game and survived a late North Carolina rush. The Tar Heels fell to 5-1 in the conference.

Other Top Twenty results: No. 9 Michigan 82, Northwestern 45; No. 10 Nevada-Las Vegas 62, San Jose State 55; No. 13 Bradley 63, West Texas State 54; Iowa 79, No. 15 Indiana 69, and No. 16 Virginia Tech 71, No. 20 Richmond 67.

The Virginia victory broke a seven-game losing streak against North Carolina dating back to Ralph Sampson's junior season in 1982.

"It was a great team effort, and we're deliriously happy,"

Loboes visit coliseum to battle Snyder at 8

District 2-4A basketball action invades Scurry County Coliseum again tonight as Coach Larry Scott's Tigers entertain Monahans.

It will be the first home appearance in a week for the Tigers, who are 15-6 overall and 6-3 in district play.

Meanwhile, Coach Ken Housden's Lady Tigers will play in Monahans this evening. Both games start at 8 and as usual will be preceded by junior varsity contests at 6:30.

Tickets are $2 for adults and $1 for students.

Snyder's boys will be keeping a watchful eye towards Andrews tonight. On tap is the game between the eighth-ranked Mustangs and the fourth-ranked Lamesa Golden Tornadoes and Snyder's future for post season work could hinge on the outcome.

Lamesa is 9-0 and leading the district race while Andrews is 8-1. It would appear Snyder's best chance to make the playoffs is for Lamesa to defeat Andrews, thus giving the Mustangs two district losses. Snyder will host Andrews on Feb. 11, and could move back into a tie for second place with a victory.

But tonight, Snyder will have to concentrate on the task at hand - defeating Monahans. The Tigers ripped the Loboes 74-53 at Monahans earlier this year.

Monahans' boys are 2-7 in loop action and 12-12 for the season.

In other boy's games Friday, Fort Stockton (2-7, 9-16) is at Sweetwater (3-6, 3-6) and Pecos (5-4, 11-9) is at Lake View (1-8, 10-14).

Snyder's Lady Tigers are closing in on a 20-game win season. At 18-4 now, they'll go after No. 19 tonight. The girls are 7-4 in district play.

Monahans' Loboettes are 3-8 and 6-14. The Loboettes lost to Snyder earlier in the season by a 53-25 count.

In other girl's action tonight, Andrews (9-2, 17-4) plays at Lamesa (7-4, 12-12). Lake View (4-7, 11-14) is at Pecos (0-11, 4-17) and Fort Stockton (3-8, 11-14) is at Sweetwater (11-0, 25-1).

The Fort Stockton-Sweetwater matchups are double headers, featuring both boys and girls varsity teams at the same site.

The controversy continues...

Pat drug problem 'negligible'

FOXBORO, Mass.(AP) - It started with an "almost negligible" drug problem and a "bold and courageous effort" to keep that problem from recurring.

It exploded into a cross-country controversy involving a trade demand, an unfair labor practice complaint and criticism by an NFL official of the coach of the AFC champions.

The dust that has swirled around the issue of drug use by New England Patriots' players began to settle Thursday with a flurry of activity from Foxboro to Honolulu.

Patriots' psychiatrist Dr. Armand Nicholi, who runs the team's drug testing and counseling program, issued a detailed, two-page, single-spaced statement in which he said that, during the past year, tests showed five players had used marijuana - two of them on one occasion each - and two others had used marijuana and cocaine.

Tests show that none of those seven, the only players tested, has used drugs "for several weeks" and that some were "drug free for the entire season," Nicholi said.

"We have had no severe case of drug dependency and no one who required hospitalization," he added.

Compared with drug use in society at large in a similar age group, "the results of our testing indicate that our problem is, indeed, almost negligible," Nicholi said.

But serious problems surfaced soon after the Chicago Bears crushed the Patriots 46-10 last Sunday in the Super Bowl in New Orleans.

On Monday, the Patriots irritated the players' union by voting overwhelmingly to institute voluntary drug testing, the first pro team to do so. On Wednesday, the Boston Globe published the names of six players who, according to the newspaper, told Coach Raymond Berry they had used drugs.

On Thursday, National Football League communications director Joe Browne jumped into the fray when he criticized Berry for not notifying the league after learning that some players had used drugs following a 30-27 loss in Miami Dec. 16.

"We regret and are disappointed that we did not hear from Coach Berry," said Browne, who cited a league policy requiring such notification. "We're in the process of reviewing the entire matter. Nothing will be finalized until after the Pro Bowl," slated for Sunday at Honolulu.

The Patriots also were the target of an attack Thursday by the National Football League Players Association, which filed an unfair labor practices complaint with the National Labor Relations Board in New York. It was lodged against the Patriots and the NFL Management Council, the owners' bargaining arm.

The union contended that the voluntary testing program repudiates the drug-testing policy that is part of the players' collective bargaining agreement. It also said the Patriots bypassed the collective bargaining representative, the NFLPA, and dealt directly with their employees about conditions of their employment.

The Globe reported that Raymond Clayborn, Tony Collins, Irving Fryar, Roland James, Kenneth Sims and Stephen Starring had told Berry they had used drugs. Patriots' General Manager Patrick Sullivan said he would not deny the accuracy of that report.

New England player representative Brian Holloway, in Honolulu preparing to play in the Pro Bowl, said release of the names dooms the voluntary testing.

Clayborn, a cornerback who also will play in the game, has said he will demand to be traded.

"I can't believe (Sullivan) saying that I've got a drug problem when he and everyone else knows I don't," Clayborn said.

In other developments Thursday:

- Mark Murphy, the assistant to the NFLPA's executive director, said the union would be willing to negotiate a new drug policy.

- Pittsburgh Steelers' President Dan Rooney said the drug issue is too serious to be "a bargaining chip" and called for a ban on players who don't take voluntary drug tests.

- Denver Broncos' Coach Dan Reeves said his players have no serious drug problems and were allowed to skip post-season screening.

- In baseball, Baltimore Orioles General Manager Hank Peters announced the formation of the first voluntary drug testing program in that sport.

Area coaches believe 4-1A won't be zoned

Area coaches Duke Frisbie and Mitch Lee believe that the new District 4-1A for six-man football will not be zoned next season, therefore giving the district nine teams.

The district members have the choice of zoning or not.

"There are nine teams so that means everybody would play eight district games and two non-district games. I don't see why we'd zone it," said Frisbie, head coach at Borden County High School in Gail.

"I would imagine we'll stay with this," echoed Ira's Coach Lee.

Frisbie said the district would meet to discuss zoning and other issues "just as quick as all the members can get together."

District 4 will include Ira, Borden County and Hermleigh from the immediate area, as well as defending state champion Jayton, Blackwell, Grady, McCaulley, Highland and Trent.

Last year the area was zoned because there were 12 teams. Ira, Borden, Hermleigh, Highland, Grady and McCaulley made up the South Zone. Jayton was in the North Zone, along with Rule, Weinert, Rochester, Lueders-Avoca and Paint Creek.

Blackwell and Trent were in another district altogether.

There are some changes in the basketball districts for 1986-87 also.

Currently, Hermleigh and Ira compete in 12A with Loraine, Westbrook, Roscoe and Highland. The 1986-87 season will have Hermleigh and Ira along with Loraine and Westbrook only in 17A.

Roscoe and Highland will move to 22A and compete with Blackwell and Trent. Jayton will be in District 18 with Aspermont, McCaulley, Roby and Rotan.

Borden County, in 10A now, will be in 13A with Sands, Klondike, Grady and O'Donnell.

Largent makes most of ability

HONOLULU (AP) - Steve Largent seems an anomaly in a realm inhabited mostly by giants or men with fantastic speed.

But Largent, neither extremely big nor extremely fast, has been extremely successful in the National Football League.

"I've had to be an overachiever," said the Seattle Seahawks' wide receiver.

"Like it or not, the NFL's still awed by strength, size and speed. When you don't have those, you have to be an overachiever. Actually, I think it helped me. It made me work harder and do things better."

Largent, who'll be making his fifth Pro Bowl appearance Sunday as a member of the AFC All-Stars, has been "doing things better" in the NFL for the last decade.

The slight 5-foot-11, 184-pounder led the league in receiving yardage in 1985 with 1,287 yards on 79 catches, with six touchdowns.

He currently ranks fifth all-time in the NFL in both career receptions and yardage, with 624 catches for 10,059 yards.

And, as a tribute to his consistency and durability, he's only four receptions shy of the league's consecutive game receiving streak, 127 by Harold Carmichael.

Largent also became the first player in NFL history to log eight seasons of 50 receptions or more, and has equalled Lance Alworth's mark of seven 1,000-yard seasons.

Asked his secret for durability in a position that leaves a player especially vulnerable, Largent replied: "The more you play, the more experience you have, the less dangerous it is. You know where you're supposed to be and you know where the defenders are."

Virginia Coach Terry Holland said.

No. 9 Michigan 82, Northwestern 45

Roy Tarpley ignited a 16-3 first-half run with a pair of free throws. And Antoine Joubert had 13 of his 19 points in the second half as Michigan pulled away from Northwestern in a Big Ten Conference game.

Michigan is 18-2, 6-2 in the conference.

No. 10 UNLV 62, San Jose St. 55

Nevada-Las Vegas recovered from a 37-30 halftime deficit, scoring the first seven points of the second half, and taking the lead for good, 52-51, with 4:48 to play in beating San Jose State in the Pacific Coast Athletic Association.

Guard Freddie Banks scored 21 points to lead the Rebels, 9-0 in the PCAA and 20-2 overall. UNLV was ahead 56-51 with 2:43 left.

No. 13 Bradley 63, West Texas St. 54

Bradley got 22 points from Hersey Hawkins and 20 from Jim Les to improve its record to 21-1 and 8-0 in the Missouri Valley Conference. That represents Bradley's best start since the 1959-60 season.

Rockets edge Kings, 111-109

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) - Akeem Olajuwon blocked a shot that assured the Rockets their fifth consecutive NBA win, a 111-109 victory over Sacramento Thursday night.

The 7-foot Olajuwon collected his sixth block of the game with four seconds to go when he swatted the ball out of the hands of Kings center LaSalle Thompson, 18 feet out.

Lewis Lloyd led Houston with 26 points as the Rockets improved to 32-14. John Lucas accounted for 14 of Houston's 35 assists, some four shy of his season high of 18.

Mike Woodson topped the now 18-29 Kings with 26 points.

Duran entering ring again; shooting for another crown

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) - Three-time boxing champion Roberto Duran returns to the ring in his hometown tonight after 18 months of high living in retirement.

A victory against Manuel Esteban Zambrano of Colombia in the 10-round middleweight fight at the 16,000-seat New Panama Coliseum would give Duran a chance at an unprecedented fourth world title.

Also on the card is a World Boxing Association flyweight championship fight between Hilario Zapata of Panama, the champion, and Mexican challenger Javier Lucas.

Alberto Aleman Jr., chairman of the WBA championship committee, said earlier this month that, if Duran wins, promoter Bob Arum would give him the chance to fight the winner of a March 9 middleweight fight in Las Vegas between John Collins and Robbie Sims.

Duran's comeback has been getting extensive coverage in Panama City newspapers even though his opponent has an unimpresive record.

However, Zambrano says he sees the fight as the chance of a lifetime and predicts he will win.

Duran says he has been preparing carefully for the fight and says he plans to seek a fourth world title.

Although he says he is going back to the ring because he is bored, friends and relatives say he has frittered away a fortune, gambling at Panama City's casinos and buying fast cars and other luxuries, and has to fight to rebuild his finances.

Duran's personal wealth grew as he captured first the lightweight, then welterweight and junior middleweight championships. He retired after Thomas Hearns knocked him out in the second round of their championship fight June 15, 1984, at Las Vegas.

Duran's promoter, Luis Spada, has told reporters that Duran's finances "are not brilliant, but they are OK."

"Roberto is returning not so much for the money but for the glory of winning a fourth world title - something no one has done up to now," Spada said.

Name changed but weather the same for AT&T Pro-Am

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) - The golf tournament has a new name - the AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am - but the same old weather, Crosby weather.

"We had it all: wind, rain, cold," Peter Jacobsen said.

Those conditions, familiar for the Monterey Peninsula, were dubbed Crosby Weather during the 40-plus years that Bing Crosby's name was associated with this old event.

The change of the tournament title - Bing's widow, Kathryn, refused to have the Crosby name associated with a commercial sponsor - did nothing to temper the conditions that have become associated with this tournament.

If anything, it was a little worse than usual.

To start with, there was a one-hour delay because of flooded courses. Then there was the rest of it, particularly the wind.

"It was the worst wind conditions I've ever played in," Jacobsen said Thursday after battling the worst of it for a 3-under-par 69 that left him one shot back of Willie Wood and Kikuo Arai of Japan, who tied for the first-round lead with 68s.

Among the first players off the tee, both leaders played at Pebble Beach and, due to their relatively early starting times, avoided some of the worst of the weather.

Jacobsen played later in the day, and on the more exposed Cypress Point course where the winds were at their worst.

Jack Nicklaus, for example, was making a move at the leaders until he played the 16th and 17th at Cypress bogey-double bogey. He birdied the 18th for a 73.

Tom Watson was one shot off the lead when he went to the 17th tee. He made double bogey and finished with a 71.

BOXING

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) - The United States Boxing Association withdrew cruiserweight championship recognition from Stanley Ross, who tested positive for marijuana after winning the title from Boone Pultz on a split decision Dec. 7 in Washington, and returned the title to Pultz.

K. Hance calls 'nerd' comment poor taste

AUSTIN (AP) — Republican Kent Hance has joined Gov. Mark White in labeling as poor taste the crack Democratic gubernatorial hopeful A. Don Crowder's made when calling White a "nerd."

"I've never got in a name-calling contest with anyone," said Hance, who hopes to challenge White in the 1986 general election. "That's not real dignified."

White said Crowder's comment on Wednesday was particularly out of place when Texans were feeling the loss of the seven crew members from the space shuttle Challenger.

"On a day of national mourning for that individual to get involved in such a political statement was very unfortunate. And I think it's unfortunate he would not be more respectful of the mood of the people of this state and this nation on that day," White told his weekly news conference Thursday.

Crowder, 43, a former law partner of Attorney General Jim Mattox, on Wednesday criticized White's refusal to ease the no pass, no play student activities rule.

He brandished a copy of White's high school yearbook entry. He said an absence of extracurricular activities listed for White led him to believe that White "was one of the first nerds in Texas."

"I don't know what possessed him to think that," White replied Thursday, saying Crowder reached the conclusion "before he had any facts at hand."

White's father lost his job following an auto accident that occurred between the governor's sophomore and junior years of high school. White said he was forced to work two jobs that summer and to continue working in filling stations and mowing lawns until he finished school.

"That may account for the fact that I didn't have quite as illustrious (a record of) high school extracurricular activities as that gentleman (Crowder) did," White said.

However, White added, "I think maybe my experiences helped me more than his did."

White also rejected Crowder's suggestion that the governor's personal extracurricular record may account for harsh comments White has made about opponents of the no pass, no play rule and other school reforms he pushed through the Legislature in 1984.

The rule prohibits students from participating in extracurricular activites for six weeks if failing any course.

Most teachers appreciate the added emphasis on scholastic achievement the reforms have brought, White said, criticizing Crowder and Republican candidates who have called for a lesser penalty for failing students.

"It's very unfortunate we see other candidates for this office running around the state trying to, in a sense, sell the future of these young people for a handful of votes over an issue that's proven to be very productive of better educational quality," White said.

While Hance didn't approve of Crowder's name-calling, he did say he believes White's recent call for limited drug testing of public and private employees, including teachers, had cost White teacher votes.

"The governor mentioned the other day that teachers were behind him, and I think he's right. They've got blood in their eyes and if they ever catch him, he's in trouble," Hance said.

In other political developments:

— Hance paid the $3,000 filing fee to secure a spot on the GOP primary ballot, voicing hope there would be "real live debates" among the three major Republican candidates. "I think that would be real fun," Hance said.

— Ron Slover, 47, an Amarillo oil and gas broker and previous unsuccessful candidate for Congress as a Republican, filed notice with the State Democratic Party that he wants to be a Democratic candidate for governor. He called for repeal of the mandatory seat belt law and said he favors increasing the state highway speed limit to 65 mph.

— W.A. "Bill" MacNaughton, an Austin lawyer and businessman, filed as a Demcoratic candidate for the Texas Railroad Commission.

— Court of Criminal Appeals Judge Mike McCormick, who at age 35 in 1980 was the youngest judge ever elected to statewide office, announced he will seek a second term.

Baby doing well but costs a problem for family

HOUSTON (AP) — Despite Medicaid and an indigent health care program, the family of 3-week-old Oscar Drew Cantu has run into some snags in paying for a bone marrow transplant that may cost $100,000.

Since the baby's father, Oscar Cantu, is unemployed and has no insurance, the family qualifies to receive Medicaid benefits.

The federal program, however, only pays for 30 days of hospital care and the baby is expected to be in the hospital at least three months. The infant also spent 20 days in hospitals before being admitted to Texas Children's Hospital where the bone marrow transplant was performed Wednesday.

The Corpus Christi family also qualifies for indigent care from Nueces County because the Legislature has mandated that counties pay for indigent residents.

But the county has said it is not responsible to pay medical costs until the law goes into effect Sept. 1.

Nevertheless, the family is relieved the 15-minute transplant performed by Dr. William T. Shearer is over.

"Dr. Shearer did his job," Oscar Cantu said at a news conference Thursday. "Now it's just a matter of waiting. Little Oscar needs to do his part."

The baby, born Jan. 5, suffers from severe combined immune deficiency sydrome, a rare genetic disorder that prevents the body from fighting infections. An older brother of the child died of the disease, however, a sister, 14 months, is not affected by the syndrome.

The infant was listed in serious but stable condition in an isolation unit at the hospital Thursday afternoon.

Marrow from the baby's mother, Belinda Cantu, underwent tests before the transplant because the cells did not exactly match with the baby's, Shearer said. The tests include destroying incompatible cells, called lymphocytes, to prevent a rejection.

Lymphocytes from Mrs. Cantu were in the baby's body and thus created a problem, Shearer said. The cells usually die out at birth, he said.

Doctors feared the lymphocytes may become activated and cause a rejection. Instead of using powerful drugs, doctors decided to treat the baby with antibodies before the transplant.

"We'll be treating the baby for three days," Shearer said. "Our next hurdle is to go 7-10 days. So far, everything is going well."

Doctors will know in about three months whether the baby's body accepted the transplanted cells.

The child is the sixth child at Texas Children's to receive transplanted marrow from an unmatched donor. Two other children who underwent the procedure are stil alive.

The Cantu infant has the same disorder that kept David, the "Bubble Boy," confined to a sterile environment for 12 years. David died in February 1984, about four months after undergoing a bone marrow transplant.

FUGITIVE TRAIL ENDS — Local law enforcement officers returned Thursday to the lot at the intersection of 25th St. and Ave. E where the trail of escaped convict Domingo Zapata Martinez ended Wednesday night. Highway patrolman Larry Brown is shown following a blood trail presumably left by the escapee. Blood was also found inside the building at right but no trail was found leaving the lot. Fallen astronauts honored

HOUSTON (AP) — President Reagan today mourned the loss of "our seven star voyagers," bidding them farewell while promising America will forge ahead with an "effective, safe and efficient but bold and committed" space program.

In remarks prepared for a memorial service to the Challenger Seven, Reagan compared the five men and two women to the pioneers of the American West, "the sturdy souls who took their families and their belongings and set out into the frontier."

"Often they met with terrible hardship," Reagan said. "Along the Oregon Trail, you can still see the grave markers of those who fell on the way. But grief only steeled them to the journey ahead.

"Today the frontier is space and the boundaries of human knowledge," Reagan said. "Sometimes, when we reach for the stars, we fall short. But we must pick ourselves up again and press on despite the pain."

At a ceremony bringing together mourners from all over the nation to share their grief with the victims' families, Reagan said, "Our nation's loss is first a profound personal loss to the family, friends and loved ones of our shuttle astronauts. To those they have left behind — the mothers, the fathers, the husbands and wives, brothers and sisters and, yes, especially the children — all of America stands beside you in your time of sorrow."

"The dedicated men and women of NASA have lost seven members of their family," the president added. "Still, they, too, must forge ahead with a space program that is effective, safe and efficient but bold and committed.

"Man will continue his conquest of space, to reach out for new goals and ever-greater achievements. That is the way we shall commemorate our seven Challenger heroes."

The seven astronauts on Tuesday became the first Americans lost in space when their spacecraft exploded.

Calling the seven crew members by their first names, Reagan said: "Dick, Mike, Judy, El, Ron, Greg and Christa, your families and your country mourn your passing. We bid you goodbye, but we will never forget you.

"For those who knew you well and loved you, the pain will be deep and enduring. A nation, too, will long feel the loss of her seven sons and daughters, her seven good friends. We can find consolation only in faith, for we know in our hearts that you who flew so high and so proud now make your home beyond the stars, safe in God's promise of eternal life."

Reagan, accompanied by his wife, Nancy, arranged to meet privately beforehand with relatives of those killed in the fiery explosion of the space shuttle Challenger just after liftoff from Cape Canaveral, Fla. The shuttle carried schoolteacher Christa McAuliffe and six other crew members on the nation's 56th manned space flight.

In Concord, N.H., a written message from the president was to be read today to students attending a private memorial service at the high school where McAuliffe taught social studies.

"All of them were heroes," Reagan said Thursday night in a dinner speech to the Conservative Political Action Conference meeting in Washington.

"Each of us is in their debt."

"We are aware, too, of our own duty, to them and to their memory," the president said. "We must continue. Other brave Americans must go now where they so valiantly tried to lead, a fitting place, I have always thought, for Americans: the stars and beyond."

"In some closed societies," he said, "a tragedy of this sort would be permanently disheartening, a fatal setback to any such program — followed not by mourning and national recommitment but by attempts to evade responsibility. ... The tragedy of the shuttle seven will only serve to strengthen the resolve of America to pursue their dream of the stars and beyond."

Reagan, who was in Houston for less than two hours for the brief memorial service, was to be joined there by more than 50 members of Congress, including Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, the first American to orbit the Earth; Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah; and Rep. Bill Nelson, D-Fla., both of whom have flown on shuttle missions.

Two treated after mishap

Two persons were taken to Cogdell Memorial Hospital for treatment following a traffic mishap Thursday morning.

According to police reports, John Anthony Calloway and Belinda Calloway of 3301 Ave. M were taken to the local hospital by private vehicle after their 1981 Datsun collided with two parked cars in the 1100 Block of 13th St.

Also involved in the 9:17 a.m. mishap were a parked 1978 Ford owned by Ricardo Amador of 1900 Coleman Ave. and a 1972 Plymouth owned by Lupe Zamora of 1109 13th St.

Both Calloway's were treated and released at the hospital emergency room.

Missing rifle said located

Police reported as cleared Thursday a March, 1985 vehicle burglary. Officers noted the identification and arrest of a suspect in Aransas Pass.

According to their reports, a .22 cal. rifle reported stolen from a pickup owned by R.C. Lunsford of Snyder was recovered.

The suspect had been detained by authorities there on an unrelated charge.

Local charges against the suspect are now pending with the district attorney's office.

In other action Thursday, city officers jailed three suspects, two for public intoxication and one for misdemeanor assault.

Charges against the assault suspect were later dropped.

Grass fire noted

Snyder firemen extinguished a grass fire Thursday night.

The blaze 2 miles east of Snyder on U.S. Hwy. 180 was doused shortly after 9:20 p.m. mation.

Chief Deputy Andy Anderson reported Friday morning that the SO would seek three felony indictments against Martinez at the February meeting of the Scurry County Grand Jury Monday.

According to Anderson, the fugitive will be charged with felony escape, aggravated assault on a peace officer and armed robbery in connection with the jail break.

Martinez was being held in the local jail pending transfer to the Texas Department of Corrections following his conviction last week in 132nd District Court here for unauthorized use of a motor vehicle.

He had been given a 35-year prison sentence on that conviction.

Wednesday night, he produced a knife following a visit to the jail library and forced jailer Bill West to release him from the security portion of the combination jail-office building.

He then took a sheriff's office walkie-talkie and left the building — breaking through a window in the office area.

The assault charge will be made in connection with the threatening of West with the knife.

Anderson said the theft of the radio will be used for the robbery charge.

Wednesday's escape was the second for Martinez since 1976.

His prior record — which in part accounted for the recent 35-year prison term — included a local conviction for burglary of a habitation in 1976 and a second conviction for escape in 1977.

Martinez sucessfully broke out of the old Scurry County Jail on College Ave. in August of 1977 while awaiting an appeal hearing on the 1976 burglary conviction.

Martinez is described as 5 feet 4 inches tall and weighing 135 pounds.

No clothing description is available but he is injured and possibly bleeding.

Sheriff Collier has asked that anyone with information concerning his whereabouts call his office at 573-3551.

worst cotton year on record.

Schwarz said it will likely be mid-February before a final total is known for this cotton year.

A bale count of 46,000 would generate monies equaling approximatey $115,000.

Commodity board officials expressed hope last fall that some $100,000 would be raised this year from the cotton assessment.

Schwarz noted that to date only two refunds of the assessment had been asked.

The following is the bale count reported at each gin:

Dunn Gin	3,075
Farmers Co-Op	9,500
Fluvanna Gin	4,743
Hermleigh Gin	2,550
Ira Gin	5,178
Paymaster Gin	7,500

Haitian government topples, Duvalier flees, report says

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Soldiers were deployed in Haiti's capital city "every few blocks" today after the government of President-for-Life Jean-Claude Duvalier collapsed, according to the U.S. Embassy.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes, accompanying President Reagan aboard Air Force One to Houston, announced that Duvalier had fled the country. He said his information was based on a report from the U.S. Embassy in Haiti.

An embassy spokesman, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said he did not know whether stores had been closed, or whether a curfew had been called. He said there were fewer people in the streets and Port-au-Prince, the capital, seemed "relatively normal and quiet."

He said in an interview with AP Radio there were "soldiers posted every few blocks" in the capital.

Speakes said there were reports that a military-civilian government has taken control of the impoverished Caribbean island. No further details were available immediately.

The reports followed a 30-day nationwide state of siege declaration signed by Duvalier and read over national television and radio today at 7 a.m. The declaration came after the most sustained anti-government protest in Haiti since the Duvalier dynasty was established in 1957.

Jean-Claude, also known as "Baby Doc," assumed the presidency upon the death of his father, Francois "Papa Doc" Duvalier, in 1971.

Six people have been reported killed and at least 30 injured since anti-Duvalier demonstrations began Sunday in Cap Haitien, Haiti's second-largest city of 60,000 people on the north coast.

Maggie Steber, a freelance photographer in Cap Haitien, said the army called a curfew this morning and used clubs and tear gas to get people off the streets.

"I saw several incidents of the army hitting people with clubs to get them inside," she said in a telephone call to The Associated Press in New York.

Duvalier's communique also ordered three radio stations to go off the air including Radio Soleil, a Roman Catholic Church station that broadcasts in Creole and is one of the few stations that can be heard in most parts of the Maryland-sized nation.

It has been closed several times before for reporting on anti-government demonstrations. The two other stations closed were identified as Radio Lumiere, a Protestant-run station that has also reported on the demonstrations, and Radio Cacique, an independent station. ...

On Thursday, witnesses reported looting in four towns as anti-government unrest increased, and diplomatic sources said three people were trampled to death by a mob sacking a CARE food warehouse in Cap Haitien. On Monday, a tailor and two children died when security forces fired on demonstrators.

On Thursday, witnesses said demonstrators in Cap Haitien toppled a statue of "Papa Doc" as the crowd cheered. Witnesses also reported looting in the towns of Gonaives, Les Cayes and Jeremie, with mobs breaking into facilities stocked with food or medical supplies.

The deaths in Cap Haitien brought to at least 10 the number of deaths reported nationwide since sporadic disturbances began on Nov. 28, when security forces opened fire on demonstrators in Gonaives, killing three students.

A communique from Duvalier ordered Cap Haitien's airport closed Thursday until further notice, but gave no reason for the action.

On Tuesday, the State Department advised U.S. citizens in Haiti not to travel to Cap Haitien and urged checking with the embassy before journeying outside the capital.

Jeffrey Lite, a U.S. Information Service officer in Port-au-Prince, said he didn't know the exact number of Americans in Cap Haitien, but he said it was "only a handful," mostly tourists.

U.S. officials in Washington earlier likened the situation in Haiti to late 1970s in Nicaragua, when the authority of the Somoza government began to erode because of widespread discontent.

In Miami, 1,500 Haitians who thought Duvalier had been overthrown took to the streets Thursday to celebrate. The demonstration turned violent after a car drove into the crowd, and police reported a woman had been killed and a dozen people were injured.

Haiti, with an estimated 5.7 million inhabitants, is the poorest nation in the Western Hemisphere. About 77 percent of the population earns less than $150 per year.

Shuttle search report related

EDITOR'S NOTE — Ike Flores was one of eight reporters who spent 5½ hours aboard a Coast Guard ship in the section of the Atlantic Ocean where searchers are trying to recover fragments of the space shuttle Challenger that may shed light on why it exploded. Here is his report.

PORT CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Desperate searchers in Coast Guard cutters, Navy ships and helicopters are keeping up their hunt for any clue they can find to the puzzle of the space shuttle Challenger on a silent sea that became a grave for seven astronauts.

Although the teams have picked up thousands of pounds of debris, it's a tedious task searching the 8,000-square-mile section of the Atlantic.

The Massachusetts-size area is known as "the missile graveyard of the world" because it is littered with the remains of rockets launched from Cape Canaveral during the past 25 years. Those missiles on the ocean floor can confound the most sophisticated sonar devices.

Another problem is that Challenger, with five men and two women aboard — including schoolteacher Christa McAuliffe — was 8.9 miles high and 8 miles off the coast when it exploded Tuesday, and its nearly 2,000 mph speed scattered wreckage over a vast distance.

As of late Thursday, the largest piece recovered was 30 by 5 feet. One of the shuttle's control panels also was believed to have been found. But much of the wreakage has been tiny.

The searchers' difficulty was typified Thursday during a 5½-hour trip by Coast Guard utility boat No. 429. Eighty-five minutes out of port, the three-member crew aboard the 41-foot vessel carrying an eight-person press pool thought it had spotted floating debris from the shuttle.

But after crewmembers fished it out of the Atlantic 13 miles east of Port Canaveral, the 18-inch cylinder turned out to be a partially spent flare dropped by an Air Force plane the night before.

Another noteworthy event was when the NASA recovery ship Freedom Star passed by.

The vessel is one of three stationed at sea during a shuttle launch to spot and recover the reusable casings from the two rocket boosters.

Hays does well in competition

Snyder youth Shawn Hays and his horse, Skippa Bar Jack, placed well at the West Texas winter circuit Quarter Horse Show held in Sweetwater Jan. 25-26.

In the two days of shown Hays placed second and first in hunter under saddle; second and first in hunt seat equitation, second and first in western horsemanship, fourth and sixth in western riding, and first in western pleasure.
