Storms, Flash Floods Threaten Wide Area

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Thunderstorms roamed from the plains of eastern New Mexico deep into Central and South Texas today, triggering torrential rains in many areas and resulting in flash flood watches for a half-dozen cities.

Heavy thunderstorms pounded the San Angelo region at midday, and the National Weather Service issued a flash flood warning for the city. Local street flooding and stream overflow will follow the downpour, weathermen said.

Mathis Field at San Angelo received 1.61 inches of rain between 8 and 11 a.m. today.

A flash flood watch was issued for the San Antonio region late this morning, after heavy thunderstorms moved into the area. Some of the storms developing this afternoon possibly will become severe, the NWS warned.

At Amarillo, already soggy and battered from nearly a week of weather turbulence, a flash flood watch continues this afternoon and tonight. Showers and thunderstorms, some locally heavy, will cause flash flooding in the region.

Some severe thunderstorm activity also is possible at Midland, in the Permian Basin country. Heavy thunderstorms rumbled across the trans-Pecos region early today, triggering flash flood warnings in southeastern New Mexico.

Lubbock and the South Plains got rains of another half-inch to more than an inch Monday night and this morning, and farmers are waiting for the moisture to stop with the same anxiety they waited so long for it to start.

Many dryland farmers waited for a good rain to plant cotton but have been unable to get in the fields since almost daily showers began in late May, three area county agents said today.

Forecasts indicated a chance for a midweek breather from the precipitation. Today's prediction calls for a 50 percent chance of the showers to continue tonight, but there's no rain in the forecast for Wednesday.

The National Weather Service recorded .57 inch of rain at Lubbock International Airport in the 24 hours ending at 7 a.m. today. That brought the official total for June to 1.57 inches.

Lubbock fire stations reported up to .90 in the city.

Plains and Levelland had 1.50 and 1.27 inches in some of the heaviest area reports.

"These little old showers have really gone down good," Lubbock County Agent Ken Cook said. "We have kept all the moisture we have got.

"We need hot weather now to bring the cotton on. We still need to plant better than half of our dryland.

"We're pretty fortunate to be as far along as we are now," Cook said. "We'll do some replanting if it clears off."

Because of the South Plains growing season, June 10 is considered the latest feasible planting date for South Plains cotton. The limit can be stretched in the southern part of the region, however, county agents say.

In Lamesa, Dawson County Agent Joe Wise reported some hail damage to new cotton but said more damage has been done by heavy rains.

"We've had more damage from washing than we have from any other kind of weather," Wise said. "We have plenty of moisture now. We need to get back in and replant what was washed out.

"We have some pretty cotton over 25 percent of our cotton acreage and had about 50 percent planted before the rain started."

Wise said Dawson County farmers probably will plant up to June 15 or 20 if necessary.

Lynn County Assistant Agent Billy Whitaker in Tahoka said some dryland cotton still must be planted there also.

In-city rain reports in Lubbock ranged from .45 at 1100 6th St. to .80 at 2200 50th St., .89 at 4800 50th St. and .90 at 1700 Utica Ave.

Area reports included .69 at Abernathy, .23 at Brownfield, .42 at Crosbyton, .37 at Dimmitt, .86 at Friona, 1.04 at Snyder, .93 at Jayton, 1.10 at Silverton, .61 at Littlefield, .94 at Morton, .88 at Muleshoe and 1.40 at Tulia.

Elsewhere in Texas, Mineral Wells had 1.02 and Wichita Falls 1.85.

The forecast calls for a few heavy showers and some possibly severe thunderstorms today and tonight.

Temperatures were expected to be in the low 70s today, near 60 tonight and in the low 80s Wednesday.

Southeasterly winds of 10 to 15 miles an hour were predicted.

Most of Texas was cloudy to partly cloudy at dawn today with widespread rain.

Hall and Childress counties were placed under a flash flood watch after heavy rain fell there, and the eastern and central Panhandle continued under flash flood watches this morning.

Tax Cut Plan In Spotlight

By The Associated Press

Voters in eight states pick candidates today, but no office-seekers are involved in the contest of most interest — the vote by Californians that could drastically reduce their property taxes.

Several primary races involve public personalities — basketball star Bill Bradley's race for the U.S Senate in New Jersey and Wayne Hays' comeback attempt in Ohio are two. But nothing has captured national attention like California's Proposition 13, which both proponents and critics see as a revolution in the state's tax structure.

The proposition, brainchild of 75-year-old tax crusader Howard Jarvis, would put a ceiling on property taxes of 1 percent of assessed valuation and roll back assessments to 1975 levels.

With assessments in Southern California tripling and quadrupling in the past five years, the proposition is expected to pass easily. Opposition from Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. and other leaders only seems to have enhanced its anti-establishment appeal.

The Jarvis plan has played a role in the four-man Republican gubernatorial primary. Attorney General Evelle Younger and former Los Angeles Police Chief Ed Davis, the front-runners, both support it. Assemblyman Ken Maddy's fast-starting campaign leveled off after he came out in opposition and San Diego Mayor Pete Wilson, running last in most polls, is also against it.

Davis and Younger also have moved up in the polls in relation to Brown, who has only token opposition for the Democratic nomination, but has been campaigning regularly, both in his own behalf and against Proposition 13.

In New Jersey, Bradley's future in politics has been a subject of speculation since the mid-1960s, when the 6-foot-5 all-America basketball player from Princeton won a Rhodes Scholarship.

Bradley, now 34, postponed his political debut until he finished his professional basketball career, but he seems to have started well. Polls show him running far ahead of former state Treasurer Richard

WASHINGTON — The National Spelling Bee competition begins Wednesday, but today is a time for viewing some of the many sights Washington, D.C., has to offer.

The 106 spellers in Washington for the event, including Julianne Raines of Big Spring, The Avalanche-Journal's 1978 regional bee winner, will have the chance to see many notable points of interest.

This morning's events included a visit to the Lincoln Memorial, the Capitol, Embassy Row, Georgetown and a boat ride on the Potomac River.

This afternoon the group was to tour the Jefferson Memorial, the Air and Space Museum of the Smithsonian Institute and the Washington Institute and the Washington Monument.

Entrants came from as far away as Mexico City and Anchorage, Alaska, and ranged in age from 10 to 14 years old. Of the 106 contestants, 58 are girls and 48 are boys.

This is the 51st year for the National Spelling Bee, which was begun in 1925 by the Louisville Courier-Journal with nine contestants. Since that time, participation has gradually increased to this year's record number of 106.

Last year 94 spellers participated at the national level, and in 1976 there were 87 spellers.

The actual spelling bee competition will begin Wednesday at 8:30 a.m.

The spellers were given random numbers to determine their positions in the order of spelling. Pronouncer for the event will be Dr. Richard R. Baker, a professor of philosophy at the University of Dayton, in Dayton, Ohio.

This is the 18th year Dr. Baker has served as pronouncer.

Spelling competition will be conducted all day Wednesday and continue Thursday morning, until a National Spelling Bee champion is determined. The remainder of the week will be devoted to further sightseeing, including a VIP visit to the White House.

The National Spelling Bee Week will officially end on Saturday.

Supreme Court Weakens Cities' Legal Immunity

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, overturning a decision it reached 17 years ago, ruled today that persons may sue cities over alleged civil rights violations.

The justices, voting 7-2, said cities do not enjoy total immunity from federal laws passed to protect citizens' individual rights.

The ruling could have major ramifications for all cities and municipal officials.

The test case decided by the court came from New York City, where in 1971 welfare caseworker Jane Monell and a number of city school teachers were forced to take maternity leave in their seventh month of pregnancy. Their doctors had advised them that they could have worked another month without physical harm.

The women sued the city for back pay, but two lower federal courts dismissed the lawsuit on grounds the city was immune from such challenges.

In urging the high court to keep intact those rulings, city lawyer L. Kevin Sheridan told the justices last November that New York faced financial ruin if it were forced to reimburse all women placed on forced maternity leave before the city's policy was changed.

"This could open up litigation that would be ruinously expensive," Sheridan argued.

Today's decision, written by Justice William J. Brennan Jr., flatly rejected the city's arguments while turning its back on a 1961 Supreme Court ruling that cities are immune from such suits.

Congress intended in passing the Civil Rights Act of 1871 to include municipalities as potential lawsuit defendants, Brennan said.

"Local government bodies, therefore, can be sued directly .. . for monetary,

D-Day Anniversary Forgotten By Many

"The Longest Day" appeared to be "The Forgotten Day" in Lubbock.

It was on June 6, 1944, that massive Allied forces under Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower launched their long-awaited attack on the Normandy beaches of Nazi Germany's Festung Europa.

Glider pilots who were trained at the old South Plains Army Air Field, now the site of Lubbock International Airport, participated in the first stage of the attack by ferrying assault troops into Normandy.

The invasion first was announced to the nation shortly after midnight on the national radio networks, and many in Lubbock who heard the news phoned their sleepy friends and relatives to get up and tune in on the historic event. Many persons listened to the news, highlighted by on-the-scene broadcasts, until daybreak.

Thirty-four years later, few seem to remember.

There were no official ceremonies marking the anniversary here today and the date went largely unnoticed. Except perhaps by those who were there and by those who lost kin or friends.

Asked if there was to be any commemoration of the date, one veterans' group spokesman said, "D-Day? Oh, yeah, that's sometime later this month, isn't it?"

Carter Switches Stand On Water Projects

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, who last year infuriated Western governors by attempting to kill 30 federal water projects, today promised to back an unspecified number of new projects.

The new projects were part of the administration's announcement of a new federal water policy designed to give Western governors greater influence over dams and irrigation projects in their states.

Carter proposed that states pay from 5 percent to 20 percent of the cost of federal water projects. This would be the first time that the states would pick up a portion of the cost, now financed almost exclusively by federal taxpayers.

But the administration's proposal also would permit governors and legislatures to "vote with their dollars" for projects they favor, an idea the governors themselves have endorsed.

Carter also promised to propose to Congress starting construction or planning on an unspecified number of new projects.

"This is the first time the Executive Branch has proposed new water project starts since fiscal year 1975, four years ago," Carter said in a message to Congress announcing the new water policy.

The new policy is aimed in part at controlling some of the political damage that Carter caused himself in the water-short West last year through his effort to kill 30 politically popular water projects. The 30 projects became known as Carter's "hit list," and Congress forced him to restore most of them.

Carter's proposals for new water projects would have to be approved by Congress. Legislative approval also will be required for the plan to have states share the cost of water projects.

The president's broad new policy also:

—Put new emphasis on saving water where it is scarce. "Using water more efficiently is often cheaper and less damaging to the environment than developing additional supplies," the president said.

—Directed the government to draft new rules that would make it more difficult to justify new water projects through a number of changes, including more stringent analysis of the benefits claimed for them.

Carter also said that he would judge future projects by whether they have widely distributed benefits, stress water conservation, have no significant safety problems and have active public support.

—Directed the interior secretary to begin charging more, when possible under existing authority, for water which the government now sells at bargain rates to many irrigators and other users. In the Central Valley of California, the federal government sells irrigation water to farmers for as little as $3.50 per acre-foot, while the state sells water nearby for $22.

The cost-sharing proposal would require states to share costs of all new projects. It would give them the option of winning expedited consideration of projects which Congress has approved but not funded. There are more than 800 such projects now on the books, some of them approved as long as 30 years ago.

Under Carter's proposal, states would share 5 percent of the cost of water projects which generate no revenue. They would put up cash to pay 10 percent of the cost of such money-making projects as hydroelectric generators or irrigation projects.

Gleason Told To Lose Weight

CHICAGO (AP) — Doctors are telling Jackie Gleason: "And away it's got to go."

GLEASON

What's got to go? Forty of "The Great One's" 235 pounds and his four-pack-a-day smoking habit.

The doctors told a news conference at Michael Reese Hospital on Monday that their patient is in satisfactory condition following a six-hour coronary bypass operation Saturday and should be back to normal in two months. But they also added that the 62-year-old Gleason has to lose the extra weight and knock off the excess lighting up.

Gleason's personal physician, Dr. Edward Newman, and attending physicians at the hospital said Gleason probably would have had a heart attack because blocked blood vessels had retarded the flow of oxygen to his heart.

They said Gleason's arteries were 80 percent to 90 percent clogged.

Gleason, 62, was strong enough after the operation to write on an alphabet board, "I want out now."

Newman said that Gleason was taken off special support machinery Sunday and is "progressing nicely" in the intensive care unit at Michael Reese Hospital.

A hospital spokesman said the comedian will go to the cardiac surveillance center after leaving the intensive care unit, and later, will be placed in a normal hospital room.

Gleason is to return to his Florida home when he leaves the hospital, doctors said.

Complaining of chest pains, Gleason was admitted to the hospital more than a week ago. He checked out of the hospital, but returned about four hours later.

At the time, Gleason was in Chicago starring in the stage show "Sly Fox" at the Blackstone Theater. The show, which opened May 18 and was to have run until June 17, has been canceled.

Judy Carne Says Career Hurt

CINCINNATI (AP) — Actress Judy Carne, on trial here for allegedly possessing heroin and a forged prescription for the drug Quaalude, says the charges have hurt her career.

MISS CARNE

"Everything has been canceled," says Miss Carne, the 39-year-old former star of television's "Laugh-In." "Films, television, dinner theater, commercial spots."

Jury selection in Miss Carne's trial in Hamilton County Common Pleas Court was completed Monday. It was delayed for several hours when Miss Carne, who was arrested last November after a performance in a suburban theater, became ill and asked to see a physician.

Two Win Environmental Prize

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Norwegian explorer Thor Heyerdahl and an Egyption ecologist have received the third International Pahlavi Environmental prize, named after the Shah of Iran.

Heyerdahl and Mohamed El Kassas, a professor of plant ecology at Cairo University, were each awarded $25,000, donated by the government of Iran.

Heyerdahl, who made his name by crossing the Pacific Ocean in his primitive craft the Kon-Tiki, was praised for drawing public attention to the problem of marine pollution. Kassas was cited for his studies on ways to prevent the spread of deserts.

The prize was established by Shah Mohamed Reza Pahlavi and is awarded annually to individuals, institutions or associations for outstanding contributions in the field of the environment.

U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim made the presentations Monday.

Jimmy Durante Returns Home

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Entertainer Jimmy Durante has returned home after treatment in a Santa Monica hospital for an upper respiratory ailment.

The 85-year-old comedian, nicknamed "The Schnoz" for his prominent nose, was admitted to St. John's Hospital May 22 when it appeared a respiratory infection had "aggravated previous neurological complications," described as the after-effects of a mild stroke Durante suffered in 1972.

Durante, who lives in Beverly Hills with his wife, Marjorie, "is feeling OK and has gone home," hospital spokeswoman Peggy Frank Shaff said Monday.

Kentuckians Honor Nixon

HYDEN, Ky. (AP) — Richard Nixon is still so popular in this mountainous eastern Kentucky area that if he ran for president again, he'd carry Leslie County "in the morning," a local Democratic official says.

NIXON

And County Judge Executive C. Allen Muncy, a Republican like the former president, says he thinks 95 percent of the county's 13,600 residents support naming a recreation center in Nixon's honor.

Nixon has agreed to come to Hayden on July 2 for the dedication ceremonies. It will be one of his few public appearances since Nixon, besieged by Watergate-related charges, resigned the presidency in July 1974.

"Watergate never entered our minds," Muncy said. "We're honoring him for what he did, not what they accused him of."

Said Paul Hensley, former chairman of the county Democratic Party:

"Locally, in this county, more people would come to see President Nixon than would come to see (President) Carter if he came here tomorrow."

Solzhenitsyn To Give Address

SOLZHENITSYN

The identity of Harvard's commencement speaker traditionally is kept secret, but a Harvard official who asked not to be identified said, "It couldn't stay a secret because of security arrangements that had to be made."

He was exiled after making outspoken comments about the lack of personal freedom in the Soviet Union.

What's One More?

DODGEVILLE, Wis. (AP) — Having an extra mout to feed at the Zoellick home won't be much of a problem. The big question is whether the bathroom can take it.

The Lighter Side Of Today's News

"Things get a little crowded around here sometimes, especially because we just have the one bathroom," Helen Zoellick, 41, said Monday, a day after giving birth to her 18th child.

The baby is Beth Candace Zoellick, one of 13 daughters and one of three Zoellick children born at home. A fourth was born in a dentist's office.

Mrs. Zoellick's husband, Herman, 50, had wanted the latest addition to the family to be born in a hospital.

But the mother said, "I would have never made it to the hospital, it came too fast."

Refugee Girl Tells Class Of Feelings

QUINCY, Mass. (AP) — Kim Dzung Vo arrived in 1975, a 16-year-old refugee from fallen Vietnam, frightened of the past, uncertain of the future and unable to speak a word of English.

Monday night, as commencement speaker for her graduating class, she stood at the podium on the football field and told 434 classmates at Quincy High School how they "made me feel warm, happy and at home."

"I came to this country from Vietnam 2½ years ago without knowing an English word," said Kim, who was graduated on the high honor roll, a member of the National Honor Society.

"But today I am talking to you with the language that I have learned in two years at Quincy High School.

"My family came from a fearful situation. We feared bursting shells and a communist invasion.

"Once it was clear we would get to America, we worried that America would not accept us. We worried that we could not understand this new language, environment and culture.

"I personally worried about the rumors concerning Americans circulated throughout Vietnam. These American people were supposedly selfish, unfriendly and crude.

"Today, in Quincy, I go to sleep at night with no fear from bombs, no fear from communist invasion, no need to escape. Besides these blessings, my family has been accepted as permanent residents in America.

"My brothers and sisters attend public schools. Free educational opportunities help us to improve and to gain new knowledge, to continue to function in our new environment and to understand our new culture.

"The rumors have proved false. The people I have met in Quincy have been kind, friendly, caring and helpful.

"Teachers in Quincy at all levels and subjects are friendlier and more willing to help the yearning students than the instructors I had in Vietnam.

"Friendships also develop more quickly here, especially in my case over the last two years at school, at church and at my job. These new companions have made me feel warm, happy and at home."

Kim's father, Vo Viet Dzung, was a high customs official of 20 years standing in Saigon when the north overran the south at the conclusion of the Vietnam War.

The family was forced to leave everything, including a big house and car, when they fled Ho Chi Minh City, formerly Saigon, to come to America, sponsored by Bethany Congregational Church of Quincy.

Vo Viet Dzung, trained in law at the University of Saigon, has his own electrical repair business now.

Chinese Report Coal Goal Met

TOKYO (AP) — China's biggest coal mines, which were badly damaged by the Tangshan earthquake of 1976 that killed at least 500,000 people, exceeded its production target for May by 43,500 tons, the Chinese news agency Hsinhua reported.

Hsinhua did not give the total production for the mines at Kailuan, in northern China. But it said 23 new coal faces were opened in seven mines during May.

Fire Deaths Analyzed By Agency

WASHINGTON (AP) — Who dies in fires? The old, the young, and especially nonwhite males, according to a new study issued by the Commerce Department's National Fire Data Center.

The study, dated last September but made public Monday, compiled figures from a variety of sources and identified those most likely to perish.

Males in general account for 62 to 63 percent of the nation's fire deaths while taking up only 49 percent of the population, the study said. It noted that much of the disproportion was due to the exceptionally high death rate among nonwhite males.

Nonwhites in general account for 25 to 27 percent of the of those killed, twice their 12 percent share of the population.

And nonwhite males account for 15 to 16 percent of the country's annual fire deaths, nearly three times their 6 percent proportion in the general population, the study says.

Finally, the report said, the young (up to age 13) and the old (over 60) accounted for half of all fire deaths although they form only a third of the population.

The study was aimed at determining "the who" of fire deaths, said Mrs. Cheri Steffeck of the National Fire Prevention and Control Administration.

Now, she said, more work will be launched to determine "the why."

There are "some obvious reasons" why the elderly and young may perish in fires, she said, but the reasons for the disproportion among nonwhite males needs further study.

The study reports that estimates of annual fire deaths in the United States range from 6,000 to 12,000 and it concludes: "We believe the 7,000 to 9,000 range is most plausible, but further analysis is needed to be sure."

Legislators Told Migrant Workers Unprotected

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Federal wage and hour laws are not enforced for migrant workers, while the state's right-to-work law prevents workers from organizing for better pay, members of a House committee on migrant workers were told at a Lubbock public hearing Monday.

The study committee is attempting to identify the problems of migrant farm workers and recommend legislation to relieve those problems, committee chairman Rep. A.C. Garcia, D-Pharr, said.

Other committee members attending Monday's hearing were Reps. Forrest Green, D-Corsicana; Pete Laney, D-Hale Center; Elmer Martin, D-Colorado City; and Frank Madla, D-San Antonio.

Juan Chavez, Panhandle-Plains area organizer for the Texas Farm Workers Union, said in a written statement migrant workers have been given "every kind of social service, income-transfer, income-maintenance program imaginable, all part of an elaborate life-support system the government has conditioned the farm worker to depend on.

"Texas farm workers are tired of living on in-kind contributions — we want decent wages," he said.

Chavez said through an interpreter "all right-to-work laws do is give the right to exploit workers.

"Only with the removal of the right-to-work law will we be able to organize and ask for a fair wage," he said.

Chavez offered four recommendations to the committee. "Virtually every job-related affliction suffered by farm laborers can be addressed under terms of a union contract," he said, adding "we see no better alternative to achieving a decent standard of living for the American farm worker."

The recommendations are:

— Provisions for mandatory elections "to determine the will of an employer's workforce either for or against union representation."

— State law obligating an employer to negotiate with his workers.

— Lifting the ban on the union shop in Texas "to require that all employees who receive the benefits of collective bargaining be responsible for supporting the bargaining agency."

— A prohibition against employers "diluting union strength by 'stacking the deck' with anti-union workers."

Bidal Aguero, representing the Lubbock County Raza Unida Party, told the committee "the farm worker and his family have become slaves and second rate citizens in the United States and especially in Texas.

"The farm worker's right to organize has been denied them by establishment of the so-called right-to-work law. They have been excluded from the National Labor Relations Board," he said.

"The farm workers' right to a minimum wage set by law has been denied in that their wage is lower than that of other workers," Aguero said, adding no agency regulates working conditions of the farm workers.

"Farm workers in West Texas have had to resort to the courts by filing private suits" to uphold laws regulating housing, he said.

Farm workers are often denied health services "by local entities which refuse to grant aid to indigents who are not residents of that county," he said.

Aguero presented a list of seven recommendations including:

— Abolish the state right-to-work law and set up a state Labor Relations Board for farm workers.

— Raise the state minimum wage for farm workers to equal the federal minimum wage law.

— Establish an agency or commission "to regulate and patrol working conditions for farm workers" and enforce the minimum wage law.

— Establish an agency or commission "to monitor and regulate housing conditions and enforce existing laws."

— Investigate "denial of health services to migrant and seasonal farm workers" and ensure local governments "care for migrant and seasonal farm workers who might become in need of health services while working in the county."

— Permit migrant and seasonal farm workers to attend state universities without paying tuition.

Gilbert Herrera, head of the Brown Berets, told the committee "horses have better housing" than farm workers, and said often four or five families live in a single house.

Children of migrant workers are not educated, because they must go to work at such a young age, Herrera said.

However, Rep. Laney, who farms near Hale Center, said he "disagreed with nine-tenths of what you (Herrera) said. I think you're exaggerating," he said.

Then Herrera challenged Laney to "see for yourself" the living conditions of migrant workers.

The committee was criticized by those attending for failing to publicize the hearing properly and Herrera offered to "get the people there" if the committee would hold another hearing.

Rep. Garcia said a hearing will be held in Austin later this month and left open the possibility for another Lubbock hearing.

Of the 20 persons attending Monday's hearing, five testified.

McKinney Receives Gannett Fellowship

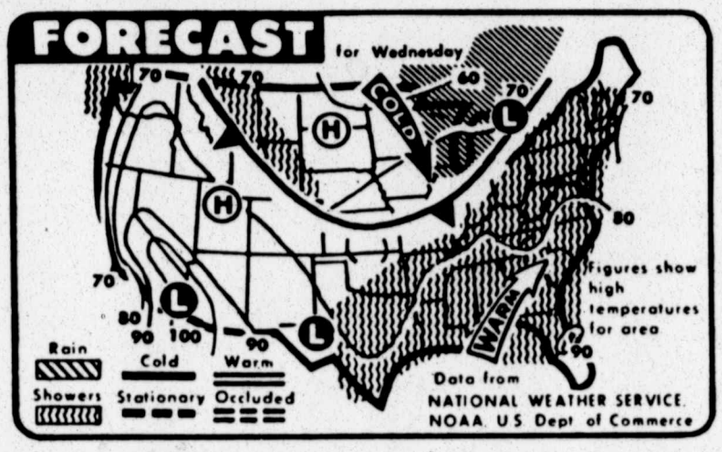

Richard W. McKinney, instructor in the department of mass communications at Texas Tech University, has received a Gannett teaching fellowship to attend a workshop at Indiana University on July 21-30.

The workshop is sponsored by the Association for Education in Journalism.

McKinney, in addition to duties as instructor, supervises the reporting laboratory for the Texas Tech student newspaper, "The University Daily."

He has been associated with radio stations in Brownwood and newspapers in Hurst, Grand Prairie and Commerce and with The Avalanche-Journal.

The Department of Interior is providing $5 million funding to convert more than 73 miles of abandoned railroad rights-of-way to bike trails in Arkansas, California, Missouri, New Jersey, New York, Ohio and Virginia.

Lubbock Police Win In Austin

Several Lubbock policemen won medals at the Second Annual Texas Police Olympics in Austin last week.

The three-day competition, consisting of 15 events, was scored in age categories and was open to all sworn peace officers in local, state, federal and military police positions in Texas.

Officer Kenneth Matney scored first-place wins in shotput and in discus. David Dudley won second-place awards in the same two events in a different age category. Cpl. Ronnie Sowell placed third, behind Dudley, in the shotput competition.

Capt. Frank Wiley won second place in the 4th-flight golf competition.

Officer Roy Green won a second-place award in the rifle competition in his class.

Other LPD entries included: Ralph Bowen, who placed 4th in shotput and 5th in discus; and Darrell Crump and Tom Robison, who finished 5th in racquetball doubles. Robison also placed 6th in the 50-meter freestyle swimming competition.

Officer Ernie Rendleman injured an elbow and was unable to place in the javelin competition.

Donnie Pitts, a Texas Tech University policeman, placed third in the rifle competition.

Since the mid-19th century, the total U.S. population has increased about nine times. However, the older population — those 65 or over — has increased 40 times, according to the American Council of Life Insurance.

Immigration Officers Cleared In Border-Crossing Death

By KEN HERMAN

HARLINGEN (AP) — The Immigration and Naturalization Service has cleared its officers of wrongdoing in the recent death of a Weslaco woman — but an attorney for the woman's family wants the courts to look into the matter.

INS officials started the investigation after the May 16 death of Maria Contreras, 36. The pregnant woman died of an apparent heart attack after she was stopped at the Progreso International Bridge.

"The investigation has revealed no impropriety or misconduct on the part of the officers," the report, issued here Monday by acting district director Perry Steele, said. "The investigation shows that the officers were acting in a normal and routine manner of investigation."

Steele's report states that the Contreras family was stopped for questioning when officers discovered an alien in their van. The alien and one family member were taken into the INS bridge office for questioning.

The family member and the alien "almost immediately admitted" the alien was carrying false identification, according to the report.

Mrs. Contreras entered the office and "became nervous and began to display phsycial distress with apparent nausea," the report states.

Steele said officers quickly called for an ambulance and Mrs. Contreras died in the ambulance a few blocks from an area hospital.

He said a justice of the peace indicated heart faulire was to be listed as the cause of death. No autposy was requested by civil authorities due to the absence of indication of foul play, according to the report.

However, Mrs. Contreras' family has said INS officers "intimidated" the woman.

Attorney Jim Harrington, representing the family, said monday he had prepared legal action on behalf of the survivors.

Harrington said a suit mailed to federal court in Brownsville seeks $1.8 million from the INS officer who questioned Mrs. Contreras.

The lawyer also said a tort claim was to be filed with INS Director Leonel Castillo. Harrington said Castillo will have six months to recommend whether the government should pay any part of the $1.8 million claim.

He added that if the family is not satisfied with the recommendation, the matter may be taken to court.

Mrs. Contreras was eights months pregnant at the time of her death. Family members have said she had a history of high blood pressure.

Boardings Records Set

Two airlines landing at Lubbock International Airport reported record boardings in May, according to statistics released Monday.

Passenger traffic throughout the Braniff International system increased 27.8 percent over the same period last year, a new high for any single month in the airline's 50-year history.

Dallas-based Southwest Airlines reported revenue passenge miles were up over 90 percent from the previous May, a new mark topping all previous Southwest boarding levels.

During May, Southwest flew 90.6 million revenue passenger miles as compared to their 1977 record of 47.7 million. Southwest carried 307,317 passengers during the month versus 175,000 during May, 1977, an increase of 76 percent.

Southwest planes have carried 1,347,529 passengers in 1978, compared to 1977 boarding totals of 761,499 for the first five months of the year.

Southwest treasurer Herman Farr also announced Monday the airplane will purchase an additional Advanced Boeing 737-200 twin-jet aircraft to be delivered in February 1980.

That plane will bring to 16 the number of Boeing 737-200 aircraft in the Southwest fleet. At present, Southwest has 12 Boeing 737 jets and will be adding three more later this year and in 1979.

Braniff officials attributed their increase in passenger boardings to a gain of 82.1 percent in international revenue passenger miles.

Domestic traffic increased 16.1 percent to 566,850,000, revenue passenger miles during May.

That increase brought Braniff's traffic growth rate to 18.8 percent for the first five months of 1978.

It is estimated that more than 200,000 bicyclists a year pedal along the 14-mile, scenic bike path from Washington, D.C., to Mount Vernon according to the Bicycle Manufacturers Association.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

All Wealth Is State's?

THE INSIDIOUS theory that all wealth belongs to the state has been embraced by Common Cause, the ersatz citizens lobby, in its call for closing what it sees as business tax loopholes.

Calling tax deductions "tax expenditures" because they eliminate federal revenues, the lobby group alleged that "these expenditures are expected to cost the government $136 billion in revenues in fiscal year 1979."

In plainer language, Common Cause is saying that all money belongs to the government and any income it lets the taxpayer keep is out of the goodness of its bureaucratic heart.

"OUR STUDY SHOWS that Congress and its tax committees have irresponsibly abdicated their duty to oversee tax expenditures (that is, tax breaks) and determine whether their continuation is justified," Common Cause President David Cohen said.

Strong language, indeed. We do not necessarily agree or disagree that the tax breaks to which Common Cause objects are justified. Probably many are, with others questionable and perhaps others unjustifiable.

We do disagree with any person or group, however, which advances the socialistic theory that any money the government lets a taxpayer keep is an "expenditure" by the government.

That puts us, as usual, on the opposite side of the fence from Sen. Edward (Ted) Kennedy, D-Mass., who rushed out to another of his incessant news conferences to embrace the Common Cause position.

"The last of the big-time spenders in Congress are the tax spenders," Kennedy said, referring to those who write tax laws and to the funds they let stay in private hands.

"THE SPECIAL interests know that if you want to slip a big spending program past Congress, an almost sure-fire way is to expand an existing tax expenditure (again, the substitute phrase for a tax deduction) or create a new one," Common Cause's Cohen said.

"Members of Congress act as though these expenditures of federal funds (sic) are free, when in fact they make a substantial contribution to inflation and to large federal budget deficits," he added.

The group's report recommended "coordination of tax breaks with direct government spending programs" and sunset provisions ensuring periodic review of tax breaks.

We'll go along with the review of tax breaks but we can't buy the idea that anything the taxpayer has left after paying his taxes is an "expenditure" of government funds.

ONE MAN'S OPINION

Kenneth May

The Right Laine

RIGHT UP TO his last day on the job, Tanner Laine was, by word and deed, an example to the rest of us in the news business.

"I've been here since 1952," Laine told his coworkers at his office retirement party Friday, "and I never walked out the front door that I hadn't done my best."

He paused to let the catch in his throat clear up before continuing: "And that's the way I'll be walking out of here today."

It'll take a little getting used to, this business of not having Laine around each day with a cheerful word and a bright quip.

It occurs to me that, while we sat at adjoining desks for a number of years, I don't believe a cross word ever passed between us.

Laine is not the kind of man to draw your ire.

WIDELY KNOWN for his Campfire Stories, his Faces of a Cowboy, his feature stories with a human, often humorous, twist, Tanner Laine is the kind of man about whom they'd say back in his hometown of Spur, "he'll do to ride the river with."

Typically, after being tricked away from the newsroom while his retirement party was being prepared Friday, Laine did a double-take when he returned to the applause of his A-J friends.

"Where were all you people," he quipped, "when we had some work to be done?"

A moment later, a newsroom telephone rang and someone told Laine that "Congressman George Mahon wants to talk with you."

"Ask him," Laine shot back, "if he has an appointment."

After receiving greetings from Mahon, Laine reminisced a bit.

"Never been fired but two times," he said. "Once in the morning and once in the afternoon."

LAINE LISTENED intently to a proclamation by Mayor Dirk West designating Friday as "Tanner Laine Day" in Lubbock.

The proclamation praised the longtime newsman as "a man of talent, wit, compassion and religious conviction" who has "contributed so much to his fellow man."

"You know," Laine responded, "I had that guy down all wrong!"

A-J artist Don Johnson presented Laine with a drawing recalling some of Laine's activities over the years.

It was he, for example, who always pretended to be "taking down names" for the boss of everybody in the coffee shop.

Laine often boomed out, too, that "everybody in the sound of my voice gets a raise." It was always good for a laugh.

FOR A NUMBER of years, Laine played Santa Claus at the office Christmas parties.

He'd dress up in a Santa suit and distribute presents from under the tree. One year, after former editor Chas. A. Guy had had minor surgery, Laine found a box with Guy's name on it.

"I'll open this one," he said. "As you know, Mr. Guy had surgery recently and they took out his heart, but I'm going to return it to him today."

He reached into the box and brought out a piece of flint.

But, while he was always good for such laughs, Laine was better as a newsman who took his job seriously.

The man who wears a "Try God" pin in his lapel was the A-J's only casualty when the plant was heavily damaged by the 1970 tornado. Laine suffered a broken leg when he stepped off a curb as he left the plant.

LAINE WAS TAKEN to a hospital and into the emergency room where, he recalled Friday, a doctor soon entered and found Laine crying.

"Why are you crying?," the doctor asked.

"Because," Laine replied, "I can't get in there and get the names of those victims and call 'em to my newspaper."

"Does it hurt?," the doctor persisted.

"No, the knee doesn't hurt," Laine said. "What hurts is not being able to do my job."

Now, having completed his job, Laine is going into retirement.

"What will he do with himself?," I asked his wife of 32 years.

"Well," she said, "as you know, Tanner is a pack rat—and he has promised me he'll go through 32 years of accumulated material!"

One thing I know. If Laine said he'll do it, he'll do it. And he'll give it his best.

He's that kind of man.

John D. Lofton:

'One Burger; Cut The Cancer'

WASHINGTON—Allan Grant, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, has accused Dr. Barry Commoner of taking a "cheap shot" at the beef industry in a "hamburger cancer scare news release designed to raise research money."

Appearing a couple of weeks ago in Las Vegas at a meeting of the American Society for Microbiology, Commoner reported on a study done at the Center for the Biology of Natural Systems at Washington University in St. Louis.

This study said that cooking meat on hot metal —a grill, a frying pan or an electric hamburger-maker—produces a substance that has been shown to be mutagenic and changes the structure of salmonella bacteria.

Commoner is quoted as saying that "hamburgers have a very important value, because they are a convenient and inexpensive way to add meat to the diet.

"Nevertheless, there is reason to believe that there may be some risk, of an as yet unknown magnitude, in eating products that contain the mutagens we have detected in beef extract and hamburgers cooked in certain ways."

THAT RISK "can be reduced to zero" by broiling meat or cooking it in a microwave oven, Commoner adds, however.

Well, I don't know if what Grant says about what Commoner has said is true. I am not a scientist. But I am a hamburger-eater, and I think the news media has done a grossly inadequate job covering this latest cancer flap.

Most of the press accounts of this story I've seen made no effort whatsoever to interview prominent cancer authorities about the Washington University study. So I made a stab at it.

In an interview, a not terribly concerned Lawrence Garfinkle, an assistant vice president in charge of epidemiology and statistics at the American Cancer Society, told me that there is "nothing new" about what Commoner says.

GARFINKLE, WHO has been with the Society for 31 years and who eats hamburgers, says that he will continue to eat burgers.

Garfinkle says that, in his opinion, Commoner's evidence is "not sufficient" to convince him that hamburgers cause cancer.

"Much more research, in fact years more," is needed to reach any such conclusion, he says. Any such conclusion now is "completely premature."

Pointing out that "many scientists are not ready to say that because something is mutagenic it is necessarily carcinogenic," Garfinkle says that if hamburgers did cause cancer, it is likely that the cancer rate would have been increasing instead of decreasing.

He says that instead, since 1935, the cancer rate among women has decreased and the same is true as regards men if lung cancer is not considered.

Specifically, the rate of stomach cancer has also declined among women and men.

Garfinkle says that, in his judgment, there is "no urgency" to the matter raised by Commoner. He adds that since the time the American Cancer Society was founded in 1913, he knows of no information it has which shows a correlation between hamburgers and cancer or any data which would validate the Commoner study.

Dennis Doris is another person who eats hamburgers and says he will also continue to do so because "every risk is relative."

A technical reports writer at the National Cancer Institute, Doris told me that Commoner is saying "nothing new" and he sees "no imminent health threat" from eating hamburgers.

Dr. John Weisburger, vice president for research at the Naylor Dana Institute for Disease Prevention at the American Health Foundation at Valhalla, N.Y., says:

"When the public is informed of newly found environmental cancer hazards, it is imperative that the information be supported by definitive documentation. Scare tactics are counterproductive..."

I'm not saying that Commoner is using scare tactics. But Weisburger's warning is a good thing to keep in mind as you follow the hamburger story.

Sylvia Porter:

If Facing Surgery, Get Another Opinion

YOU (OR A RELATIVE or friend) have been advised to have a gall bladder operation. Or perhaps a tonsillectomy, hysterectomy, hernia repair, some other type of elective surgery—meaning an operation of a non-emergency nature.

Should you have that operation—often at considerable cost and pain—not to mention the risk of even minor surgery?

Before you do, consider these startling findings:

- In one out of four cases in which subscribers to Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Greater New York were advised to undergo elective surgery and sought second opinions, the consultant recommended against having the operation.
- Of the obstetrical-gynecological cases (such as hysterectomies) studied, 28.6 percent of the recommendations of the first physicians were not confirmed.
- Of the orthopedic cases, the first physicians were opposed in 33.2 percent of the cases and of the ear, nose and throat cases, 26.6 percent.

THESE FINDINGS are not necessarily conclusive, D. Eugene Sibery, the plan executive vice president, himself concedes.

"We are continuing to follow these patients to see how many had operations anyway, how many deferred them for a year or two, and how many were successfully treated non-surgically," he says. "We also want to see what happens to similar people who did not request second opinions."

But the high proportion of disagreement does add some credibility to the growing concern that much surgery is unneeded.

An estimated 2.4 million unnecessary operations, causing nearly 12,000 deaths, are performed annually at a cost to the public of about $4 billion, a congressional committee charged several years ago.

"THERE IS MORE surgery in the U.S. today than there ought to be," Health, Education and Welfare Undersecretary Hale Champion testified this past winter. "There are many thousands more surgeons than we need," and "excess surgeons lead to excess surgery."

Studies in Kansas, Maine, Vermont and elsewhere seem to bear this out. In one Vermont community, for instance, there were twice as many appendectomies as in another nearby, apparently similar in every relevant respect.

Although challenged as wildly exaggerated, these statistics have led a growing number of Blue Cross, Blue Shield and other health insurance plans to offer to pay for second and even third opinions to confirm any recommendations for elective surgery.

Typical of how the programs work is the Greater New York plan, with 5.5 million subscribers.

Under this program, subscribers call a referral center and are given the names of three board-certified specialists in their area to choose from, specialists selected at random from 1,700 cooperating surgeons.

The Plan pays for all charges, and even for a third opinion, if the first two do not agree. But the subscriber is under no obligation to accept the opinion of the consultants and is covered by insurance even if the operation is against the advice of the consultants.

THE PROGRAM saves money. For each operation not performed on a subscriber, the Plan saves $1,500 in hospital fees alone, says Sibery, who estimates the Plan's total savings to be at least $700,000 in the two years it has been in effect—savings which, he adds, have cut down the size of the Plan's periodic rate increases.

Yet, relatively few of you take advantage of the free second opinions. Of the roughly 200,000 elective operations the Greater New York Plan pays for every year, only 1,000— 1/2 of 1 percent—are performed with a corroborating second opinion.

While the reason may be your faith in your own physicians, it's also likely that you are not aware of the "second opinion" option. Learn now if you are covered by this program so you can get another opinion when you are advised to undergo surgery.

In fact, even if you are not covered for it, get this opinion for your own safety and pocketbook protection.

James J. Kilpatrick:

Wallace Will Never 'Bow Out'

WASHINGTON—George Corley Wallace may have bowed out of the 1978 senatorial election in Alabama, but anyone who thinks Wallace has thereby bowed out of politics should be penalized 15 yards for naivete. The governor will stop politicking when the Tombigbee freezes over.

Nevertheless, the startling announcement from Montgomery last month provides an opportunity for a retrospective look at this consummate politician. Most political figures take politics seriously, but most of them have other interests also.

This has never been true of Wallace. He sleeps, eats and breathes politics. He sweats politics from every pore. Reporters who interview the governor return from the experience dazed and shaking.

WALLACE COMES at you like a fire hose, gushing torrents of facts, figures, reminiscences, anecdotes.

He has no interest in art, music, architecture, philosophy, drama or the dance. I once called him a cultural Moon Mullins and he liked it.

"More of them," he kidded me, "than there are of you."

Before he was crippled by an assassin's bullet in the campaign of 1972, Wallace was the closest thing to perpetual motion ever set loose on the campaign trail. He had been a bantamweight boxer in his youth, and those quick and nimble feet were always moving. His gestures were a boxer's gestures—the jab, the punch, the protective shoulder.

AFTER THE SHOOTING, all that changed. A couple of years ago, Joe Kraft and I were barnstorming around Illinois, and learned that Wallace was upstairs in a nearby hotel.

We went up to say hello, and the governor, fully dressed, was stretched out on the bed. The soles of his shoes were perfectly new. But if Wallace was paralyzed from the waist down, from the waist up he was still the old Wallace.

When the next edition of Bartlett's "Familiar Quotations" goes to press, perhaps the editors will give a little deserved space to the governor. Not for his defense of "segregation now, segregation tomorrow, segregation forever," but for the greatest slogan ever devised in the presidential arena: "Send 'em a message!"

THE SLOGAN was meaningless. It gave no hint of the message to be sent, nor of the "them" who were to receive it, but the slogan leaped over rational dissection. "Send 'em a message!" It was beautiful.

In his prime, Wallace ranked as one of the most effective speakers I have ever heard. He had the marvelous gift of cadence—Martin Luther King and Bobby Kennedy had it also—by which an orator establishes a rhythmic antiphony with his audience.

Wallace once apologized, teasingly, to an Eastern reporter for keeping him waiting. "I've been demagoguing over in Louisiana, and my plane was late." Much of his oratory was indeed demagoguery, but it was very high-class stuff.

HE SCORNED theoreticians, giving the word a cue-ball twist, and when he took off on moe-rons, such as the moe-rons of the Eastern press, he broke the word into two despicable pieces.

Then, if the occasion permitted, he would lick his cigar and spit in the wastebasket.

When it came to evading questions, Wallace was an absolute master. He could hookslide around the toughest interviewer. Once I was covering him in a Florida primary, and we wound up in Jacksonville. This was early in 1972.

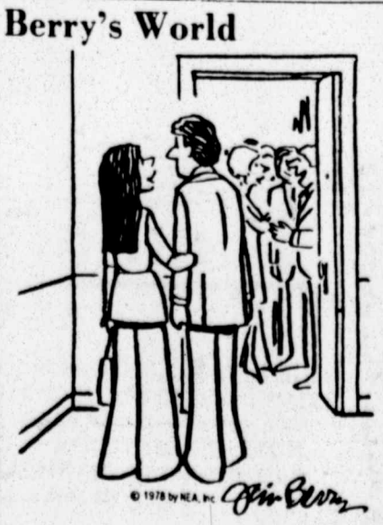

We went around to a TV studio where a panel of questioners awaited him. Toward the end of the half-hour program, one of them asked the governor a mean question about the Allende government in Chile.

WALLACE NEVER blinked. He turned the question into a general response having to do with foreign aid. The next voice was the moderator's, saying, sorry, governor, our time is up.

Cornelia walked outside the studio with me. These were happier times; the awfulness of May 15 was still two months away. She clutched my arm. "When that boy asked George about Chile," she said, "I lak to die-yied. I said, 'What does George know about the Allende government in Chile?' But you saw! You saw! He knew everything about Chile!"

Moments to remember. Wallace left a raft of them, and don't be misled: the old bantamweight boxer hasn't really hung up his gloves.

Blacks Reap Victories

ATLANTA (UPI) — Of the 757 black candidates that ran for public office across the South last year, 68 percent — mostly incumbents — were winners, according to the Voter Education Project.

VEP statistics released Saturday show that more than 74 percent of the victories for blacks came in city council elections, and that 16 were newly elected mayors of cities in Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina and Virginia. Atlanta Mayor Maynard Jackson was also re-elected during the year.

Ivan Malone Jones, director of the Atlanta based VEP, said, despite the victories "We still have not attained representation proportionate to the minority population in many communities throughout the South.

"Blacks comprise 20.4 percent of the South's population, but hold less than 3 percent of the total number of elective offices," she said.

J. Stanley Alexander, research director for VEP, said black victories at the polls were concentrated in the lower city council and county offices, where there were the most openings and the most candidates. He said, for instance, that only five blacks ran for congressional seats, all of them losing, and that only eight of 17 black candidates for state House seats were successful last year.

Alexander said a solid majority of the blacks running for mayor — 37 of 58 — were elected in various cities across the South, and that blacks won 380 of 551 city council and 19 of 30 county commission seats they sought. He said VEP figures indicated 62 of the 78 blacks who ran for school board seats were successful.

"Southern blacks are still continuing to seek and win representation at the local and state levels in spite of continuous resistances and barriers to meaningul political involvement," Mrs. Jones said.

Ex-Priest Works As Detective

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Although he runs a private detective agency, terms like "private eye" and "gumshoe" don't seem to fit Martin Bell, a former Episcopal priest who received his education at Harvard.

Bell left his appointment at St. John's Episcopal Church in late 1976 to begin the Wittlinger Agency, a private detective firm. But he makes it clear he has not left the ministry.

"There's a potential for setting people free, for bringing healing into a person's life," he says.

He recalled one child custody case where a divorced spouse had taken a child out of the country. The Wittlinger Agency, named after his friend and legal counsel, Timothy Wittlinger, located the child within 22 hours and had him home the next day.

Bell sees his investigative work as a different kind of service to people and also as a handy way to fullfill a childhood dream.

"As a child, I wanted to be in the FBI. All my aptitude tests said I should go there, that I should be an investigator. But my eyes said, 'No,'" he said.

Poor eyesight prevented Bell from joining the FBI, so he enrolled in divinity school at the University of Chicago.

But the call of investigation was too great and he left after a year to join Pinkerton's Inc., a private investigative and security agency where he specialied in finding missing persons.

Researchers Solve Astronaut Sickness

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — What do you say to an astronaut who gets sick to his stomach 24,000 miles above the Earth's surface? By then it could be too late to spell r-e-l-ie-f.

NASA researchers, in New Orleans recently for their annual brainpower meeting, think they may be able to solve the problem of "zero-gravity" sickness even though they really can't train astronauts for what their stomachs will encounter in space travel.

The newest training wrinkle is called autogenic feedback, in which an astronaut learns to control his heart beat, pulse rate, respiration rate and skin temperature. By learning to control these responses on Earth, NASA scientist Patricia Cowings feels astronauts will be able to transfer their responses to space travel and reduce the occurrence of zero-gravity sickness.

"If you can control it here, we feel you can control it in space," Miss Cowings said. "We'll only be sure when NASA lets us fly. We looked at a pattern of responses for a subject and taught him to produce his own baseline pattern.

"If we want him to increase the temperature of his hand, we tell them to produce the exercise for that. If a subject's hand and legs are highly dilated, then it's easier to learn cardiovascular control."

Astronauts presently cannot train under the same conditions they will experience in space. The longest period of weightlessness they can experience is less than a minute in a special airplane that flies high and breaks into a dive for the Earth.

But seconds are not weeks and months.

Miss Cowings trains subjects in a revolving chair, called the Corriolis accelerator, to simulate the effects of motion sickness. Subjects begin by twirling at a relatively slow six revolutions per minute, and then accelerate two rpms every five minutes. The chair also takes the subject's head through a series of rapid movements — four per second — to produce a similar effect.

During the test Miss Cowings gives feedback to her subjects by verbal and visual communication and monitors their bodily responses.

"We stop when the subject reaches 30 rpms and can sustain that for 65 minutes," Miss Cowings said. "We started with six subjects, and four totally suppressed their syptoms and rode at least to 65 minutes."

The suggestions seem to work, so much so that persons try to outdo each other and ride the chair longer.

"When you're dealing with humans," Miss Cowings said, "you're bound to have competition. I had one 18-year-old kid who was a 98-pound weakling, but he was a fantastic autonomic athlete. He hung around so much he changed his major to psychology.

"But this isn't something you can really compete at. Everyone's just different, just like everyone's thumbprints are different. We want to develop a good clinical method for controlling autonomic responses. This has more promises as a treatment (than any other treatment)."

Changes Seen In Credit Card Business

By JAMES A. WHITE

NEW YORK (UPI) — Master Charge and Citibank of New York are engaged in a family quarrel of billion-dollar proportions.

At issue initially was Master Charge's plan to introduce a new travelers check bearing its name in competition with those Citibank sells. But the fight has expanded to include a confrontation over the proposed purchase of the Carte Blanche credit card by Citicorp, Citibank's holding company.

Should anyone minimize the stakes in the battle, situated in U.S. Court for the Southern District of New York, the combatants say it is sure to change the travelers check and credit card services available to U.S. consumers.

Master Charge is the nation's biggest credit card system and Citibank the most important member in the network it helped create in 1966.

The peace in the immensely successful Master Charge family was broken in February when directors of the parent Interbank Card Association gave the go-ahead to start selling Master Charge Travelers Cheques sometime after mid-1979.

Interbank said any interested financial institution could sell the new checks but the program's backbone would come from the more than 9,000 banks and other institutions that now use Master Charge cards.

After start-up costs of $20 million, Interbank estimates the check program will show income of $50 million in its fourth year and capture almost 20 percent of the North American check market in its 10th year.

Such predictions hit much too close to home for Citibank which has been selling travelers checks for over 70 years.

Its First National City checks rank No. 2 in the U.S. market behind American Express Co., with more than $2 billion sold last year, and Citibank says its FNC business is worth more than $250 million.

Citibank tried to head off Interbank's final approval of the check program in February and then followed through in April with an anti-trust suit asserting Master Charge was attempting to become a "superbank".

The suit alleges the "enormous economic and market power" of Interbank could give it a monopoly in travelers checks, a business not proper for Master Charge in the first place, and seeks a permanent injunction.

Interbank, not surprisingly, denied the charges, saying Citibank's action was blocking competition and monopolistic in itself. But Interbank also took the offensive against Citibank.

If Citibank was going to cry foul at Master Charge Travelers Cheques, Interbank would complain about Citicorp's acquisition of Carte Blanche. Citicorp sold its interest in Carte Blanche, smallest of the three U.S. travel and entertainment cards, to Avco Corp. in 1968 as part of an agreement with the Justice Department.

But Citicorp now wants Carte Blanche back and the Justice Department says it has no objections. Interbank says the repurchase would reduce competition among credit cards and charges Citibank plans to use the credit card to further its grip on the travelers check business.

Citicorp doesn't deny big plans for Carte Blanche but says those plans will mean more competition among credit cards, not less.

A flurry of other charges have been exchanged and both sides say they are deadly serious about their positions. If one man is in the middle of the fray, he is David M. Phillips, Citibank senior vice president for credit cards.

Phillips also is a member of the Interbank governing board that came up with the travelers check plan. Interbank accuses Phillips of working within to sabotage the new checks; Phillips denies it.

Gold Mine Provided By Worms

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Besides hanging on the ends of fishhooks, lying under schoolboy microscopes and creating slimy messes on porches, worms are making some people rich.

Jimmy Carter's cousin, Hugh, a state senator from Georgia, grows them. So do 10,000 other people in the United States, including about 4,500 part-timers who set up wooden beds filled with organic fiber in their basements.

"It's not new, it's just that worm growers tended to keep a low profile," said Donald Lewis, national marketing director for Worm World of Denver.

"I've got two daughters who for years never would say what their father did for a living. Now I can't go to a cocktail party without being the center of conservation among doctors, lawyers and CPAs."

After squirming around for millions of years, the worm came into its own about 40 years ago when Californians began raising them.

Today, hundreds of millions of worms, balled up like batches of spaghetti, are being flown and hauled across the continent, with the demand for the high-protein little critters outstripping the supply.

It is big business, because organic farmers want them as well as fishermen. And the popular red worm, being 70 percent protein, is dehydrated or freeze dried and used as a protein additive for dog food and health food capsules.

Since worms can safely nibble their way through sewage sludge, cities are considering using them to turn the burdensome material into fertilizer that can be packaged for sale.

The fact of life in the worm business is that there just are not enough to go around.

So after starting out four years ago with 1,000 breeding worms — $25 worth — in the crawlspace under his house, Wayne Thomas of Bridgeville, Pa., quit growing and started a distributorship.

"My sales increased 1,500 percent in four years. I was selling so many, I couldn't raise enough," the 32-year-old Thomas said.

Now he buys worms from growers at $4.50 a thousand. A grower can keep as many as 10,000 worms in a two-foot-square plywood box.

"The market's wide open," Thomas said. "Why, last year they ran a contest for recipes using worms as additives. The lady who won used them like jimmies on a cake."

Part of that market stems from fishermen's craving for nightcrawler worms. Nobody's succeeded in raising nightcrawlers, so 30,000 Canadians earn their living picking the worms at night. Last year about 600 million were shipped to American fishermen.

In Canada, it is a serious business.

"I've seen some companies lease golf courses for as high as $15,000 for the season, which runs April to October," said Dave Brennan, [illegible] of Niagara Falls Wholesale Bait Co.

Davis' Depositions Slated This Week

FORT WORTH (UPI) — Attorneys for Priscilla Davis say this week they will take depositions from Thomas Cullen Davis for her suit against her millionaire husband.

The suits allege Davis murdered Mrs. Davis' 12-year-old daughter, Andrea Wilborn, and then wounded Mrs. Davis at the Fort Worth mansion he built for his wife on Aug. 2, 1976.

Mrs. Davis did not request a specific amount in the suits. But she is expected to amend them next month to ask that a court award her several million dollars.

Citizens Report Property Thefts

A wide assortment of goods again was stolen in Lubbock's most recently reported burglaries and thefts.

It was an $800 television set that proved too tempting to resist for whoever broke through a front door at 2223 5th St. Monday, Neil Hawley said.

According to M.T. Sinclair of 2024 35th St., someone broke into his pickup Saturday and made off with a box containing $400 worth of tools.

Fathy S. Messiha told police whoever pulled off a screen and broke a window at his 4411 15th St. home Monday got away with $60 cash after ransacking the house.

Milton Cook of 1509 E. Amherst Ave. reported the loss of a $400 diamond ring from his home recently. Reports indicated there was no sign of forced entry into the residence.

Lubbock County Sheriff's Department deputies today were seeking a 37-year-old man, following a 9-year-old girl's account of an attempted rape that allegedly occurred Friday afternoon.

The little girl said she and her sister had been picked up by a man about 3:30 p.m. Friday and told to get in his pickup truck.

According to reports, the little girl had performed some work for the man and had been promised $2 in payment.

On Friday, the girl said, the man had promised to pay her as soon as he picked up his paycheck.

The suspect reportedly drove east of the city, picked up his check and bought the child a soft drink and a package of potato chips. The girl told officers she paid for her sister's soft drink.

In the meantime, the child said, the suspect was consuming a six pack of beer and drove farther into the county before stopping.

The suspect reportedly pulled the child from the pickup truck by her legs and tossed her into the mud, before approaching her and lifting her clothing.

Moments later, reports indicate, the man attempted to have intercourse with the 9-year-old.

But the child said her sister picked up a rock and struck the suspect in the back of the head, who discontinued his assault.

Both children, who reportedly were crying, were ordered back into the vehicle and the trio drove away.

The children were dropped off at their home, the 9-year-old told deputies, and were cautioned against saying anything.

A "picture spread" lineup was held Monday, authorities said, and the youngster reportedly identified a suspect.

Meanwhile, a Lubbock woman said she had been "bar hopping" with a friend Friday, when she returned to a lounge near 30th Street and Avenue H to get her pickup truck.

The woman theorized that she must have "passed out," however, and said she did not wake up until sometime later.

Upon awakening, the woman said she found herself naked from the waist down and being struck by a 30-year-old man.

The woman said the man demanded that she submit to his sexual advances, but she said she refused.

At that point, the suspect reportedly jammed his thumb into her right eye and forced her to perform a sexual act.

He reportedly then ordered the woman into his vehicle, drove about a mile and told her to get out.

The victim said she used a phone nearby and got word to a friend.

Meanwhile, Delmar Keenum of the New Auction Center located four miles east of Lubbock on US 62/82, said someone used a truck or other vehicle Saturday to break into the business.

After ramming the building with the vehicle four or five times, Keenum said, someone apparently used a crow bar or other device on the building's locking device.

The intruders apparently used two trucks to haul away nearly $2,000 worth of furniture and a $150 adding machine.

A Tarrant County deputy said someone stole a gun, his holster, a CB radio, clothing and other items from his 1978 vehicle Sunday or Monday, while it was parked at a South Lubbock motel.

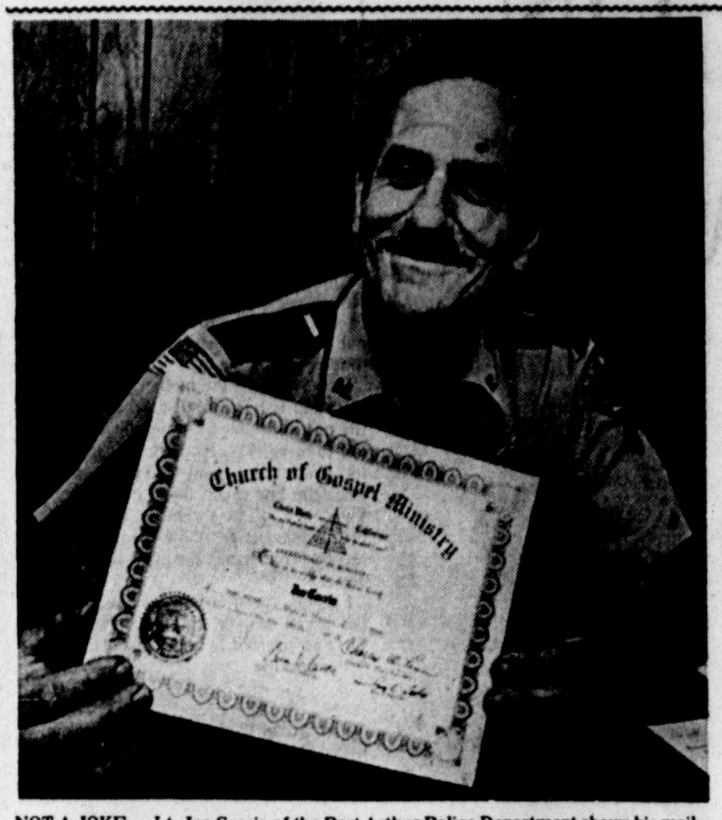

Ray Bench of Fort Worth estimated his loss at nearly $465.

Manager Melvin Simmons said someone broke into the Ryder Truck Rental and Leasing at 402 30th St. Monday.

Thieves reportedly made off with a pair of calculators, a television, a stereo and caused damage to a window and a floor safe. That damage, along with the stolen items, and additional damage to three vending machines, amounted to an estimated $1,745 loss, Simmons said.

Dr. Ray Santos of 4512 11th St. said someone broke into his residence Monday and took three rifles, a pistol and a watch, all valued at $500.

Eva Zimmerle of 1102-A 32nd St. said her mink coat, a television and an 8-track stereo were taken during a break-in Sunday or Monday. She estimated the loss at $950.

NOT A JOKE — Lt. Joe Cuccia of the Port Arthur Police Department shows his mail-order certificate proclaiming him an ordained gospel minister. As many as 80 percent of the police force have requested similar credentials, for various reasons, but Lt. Cuccia says it is no joke for him. (AP Laserphoto)

Port Arthur Police Getting Ordained

PORT ARTHUR (AP) — There are a lot of reasons why you might want to call a cop, but in this Southeast Texas city those reasons might include a desire to get married or have someone buried.

It all started a couple of weeks ago when police Lt. Joe Cuccia applied for and received minister's credentials by mail from the Church of Gospel Ministry in Chula Vista, Calif.

Now some 40 officers — about 60 percent of the force — are also ordained ministers within the church.

Chief Jimmy Newsom regards the whole thing as a joke. "They're still officers to me, and that's what I am going to call them."

The question of tax benefits and other perquisites of the cloth looms large, but Cuccia discounts the motive. "It's more of a joke than anything else, but it's had some benefits already," he said.

"Last Saturday night, two officers had a real problem with a drunk about 12 miles from town," Cuccia said. "The guy kicked out a windshield and the arresting officers were met by two more officers about halfway in. One of the second pair said he was a minister, and he didn't even want to hear the guy cuss. Well, the guy did a 180-degree turn and didn't give anybody any more trouble."

Cuccia obtained his first set of minister's credentials for free, then paid a $2 donation that netted a laminated license with a gold seal. He said he's going to send another $10 to get a large certificate, suitable for framing. Will the lieutenant lay out another $10 for an honorary doctor of divinity degree?

"Sure, I may as well," he said. "I'm gonna go all the way."

Within the church ministry, the licenses allow holders to "perform wedding ceremonies, funerals, baptisms, visit the sick and spiritually needy and so forth."

Church literature says donations are used to help orphans, and Sgt. John Cascio said that's why he became a mail-order minister.

"I was actually interested in making a contribution and I don't think this is a hoax," Cascio said. "I believe they do have a mission there beause they couldn't operate it legitimately otherwise. And I feel like this is one way I could help."

Break-Ins Head City's May Crime Report

By PAT CARLSON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Homicides and reported rapes were up in Lubbock during May, but residential and business break-ins continued to be the bane of most crime victims in the city.

Five persons lost their lives in criminal homicides during the month, compared with three in April. Police have cleared the eight killings.

Ten women told police they were raped last month, compared with four in April. Investigators said they cleared eight such incidents during May.

Fewer persons reportedly were robbed during the month; however, the total May take by bandits was substantially greater.

Police cleared half of the 16 cases they investigated last month, compared with 21 of 24 in April. A total of $27,658 in cash and goods was taken in heists last month — up considerably from April's $4,280.

There was a somewhat more encouraging decline in assaults, with police investigating 86 and clearing 63. During April, 95 of 121 such incidents were cleared.

Police investigated more and cleared fewer burglaries last month.

Only 39 of 289 break-ins were cleared during May. Police had a little better month in April when they cleared 54 of 224 such incidents.

Financial losses, according to victims, were less, however — only $156,397 in May, compared with April's $322,599.

The most popular type of break-in continued to be at residences during daytime hours when few occupants are at home.

Theft showed a trend in the opposite direction. The fewer reported incidents during May — 638 — resulted in lost goods totaling $187,317. The previous month's 687 such incidents carried with them $159,963 worth of grief for victims. Police cleared 147 and 153 cases, respectively, for the two months.

There were slightly more reportedly motor vehicle thefts in Lubbock during May. Eighteen of the 67 reports made to police were cleared last month, compared with 20 of 60 in April.

Financially, the overall crime picture was slightly better for victims and police alike last month.

In May, the total amount of goods reported stolen was $513,072, of which $156,795 was recovered. The previous month saw $602,592 taken by criminals and $130,740 recovered by police.

Other than vehicles, the most popular item for robbers, burglars and thieves was jewelry, followed closely by televisions, stereos and radios. Of $9,319 worth of firearms reportedly stolen during May, only $900 worth was recovered.

Lubbock's reported 248 cases of criminal mischief incurred $42,552 worth of damage to property during the month.

Judge Quashes Indictments

AMARILLO (AP) — Three criminal indictments against Potter County Sheriff T. L. Baker were thrown out by a state judge Monday, but a civil removal trial on the same allegations remained under appeal.

State District Judge H. Bryan Poff cited a 1969 Supreme Court decision in dismissing the indictments. He said the removal trial had already decided the allegations, finding in Baker's favor.

Jurors in the removal trial found 10-2 for Baker April 14, but District Attorney Tom Curtis said the decision will be taken to the Seventh Court Criminal Appeals in Amarillo. Curtis said he was appealing on several grounds, including his charge that one of the jurors was a resident of adjacent Randall County at the time of the trial.

Baker had been charged with theft and official misconduct, aggravated perjury, attempted official misconduct and attempted official oppression. The charges stemmed from the removal of a county-owned air compressor from the shop of a county commissioner in 1977.

Panel Proposes New Ordinance

Efforts to curb alleged incidents of discrimination in city night clubs received Human Relations Commission endorsement Monday night.

Commissioners voted to begin drafting a public accommodations ordinance to be presented to the City Council that would outline and prohibit disciminatory practices in places that cater to the general public.

Council members are expected to review complaints of the issue during their work session Thursday.

HRC director Luciano Perez told the commission that over the past 2 1/2 years he has received numerous complaints from Lubbockites and Reese AFB personnel, alleging some city night clubs have denied them admittance on the basis of unpublished dress codes or failure to carry a university identification card.

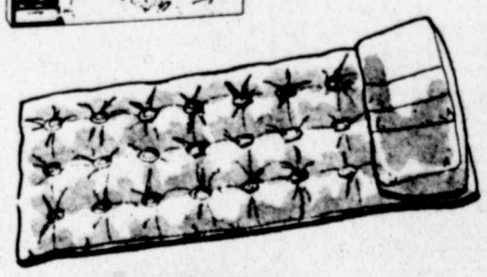

Seven of the commission's 12 members attended Thursday's session.

Opening lead: Nine of ♦.

Dear Charlie:

As you know, one of my favorite tournaments is the Philip Morris European Cup event held annually at Crans-sur-Sierre in Switzerland. I rather liked this hand I played there.

The four spade contract was reached at most tables. The bidding was straightforward. Once South showed game aspirations, North cannot be blamed for contracting for four spades. As you can see, however, the contract is by no means laydown.

The diamond nine was a popular lead. Most declarers won the queen with the ace, then led a spade to the king and finessed the jack. West won the queen, and the defenders took three tricks in the minor suits to defeat the contract one trick.

I played it simply. After winning the ace of diamonds I cashed the ace and king of spades, trying to drop the queen. When the good lady failed to appear, I went after the hearts. With the suit breaking 3-3, I was able to discard two clubs before West could ruff, so the contract came home.

On a different layout, the trump finesse might have been the winning play. However, I felt that the combination of dropping the doubleton queen of spades or finding the hearts 3-3 offered a better chance than banking everything on the trump finesse.

I'm not convinced my line was the best, but in the final analysis, I have one strong argument in my favor—I made four spades while those who took the trump finesse did not. "Nothing succeeds like success" is one of the world's oldest cliches.

As ever,

Omar

DEAR ABBY

Are your problems too heavy to handle alone? Let Abby help you. For a personal, unpublished reply, write: Abby: Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

(c) 1978 by Chicago Tribune — N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing in reference to the letter from the young girl who said that her foster father had been making advances toward her. You advised her to tell her foster mother at once!

Abby, I know you meant well, but I have learned after many years of experience as a child protection worker in a public welfare agency that telling the mother is useless.

In most cases, the mother would think the child is lying. And in other cases, if the girl is believed, the mother will refuse to bring charges against her husband for fear of the family's reputation and what the law might do to her husband. Then, too, if he's sent to prison, her breadwinner is gone! So she resolves all this by pronouncing the girl a liar and ingrate.

I would recommend that the girl tell her social worker or school counselor. They are trained to help the girl and her foster family.

N.Y. SOCIAL WORKER

Dear Social Worker: Whether she is believed or not, I still think it is imperative that the child tell her foster mother first. Then, if the situation doesn't improve, I always advise the child to seek help from a trusted teacher, adult relative, school counselor, clergyman or neighbor. Otherwise, when the father is confronted, the mother will know that the child has gone to "outsiders — instead of coming to her — which could create even more difficulties in the home.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: What is your opinion of a woman who would take a job as a "housekeeper" for a single man? Part of the deal is that the housekeeper has to LIVE on the place.

If a woman sells all her own household goods, and sells (or rents) her own house so she can move in with a man and keep house for him, how do you think that looks?

What does the community think of a woman who would hire herself out this way? And what do YOU think?

NO NAME, PLEASE

Dear No Name: Personally, I couldn't care less. But if I were to give it one moment's thought, I would assume that the housekeeper is KEEPING — not PLAYING — house. Now, what's YOUR problem, lady?

• • •

DEAR ABBY: Some new neighbors moved into our area, and we share a two-party line. Abby, this woman speaks as good English as I — I have heard her. But when she talks on the phone she always speaks a foreign language! I consider this an insult to me. What do you think of a neighbor like this?

INSULTED IN PENNA.

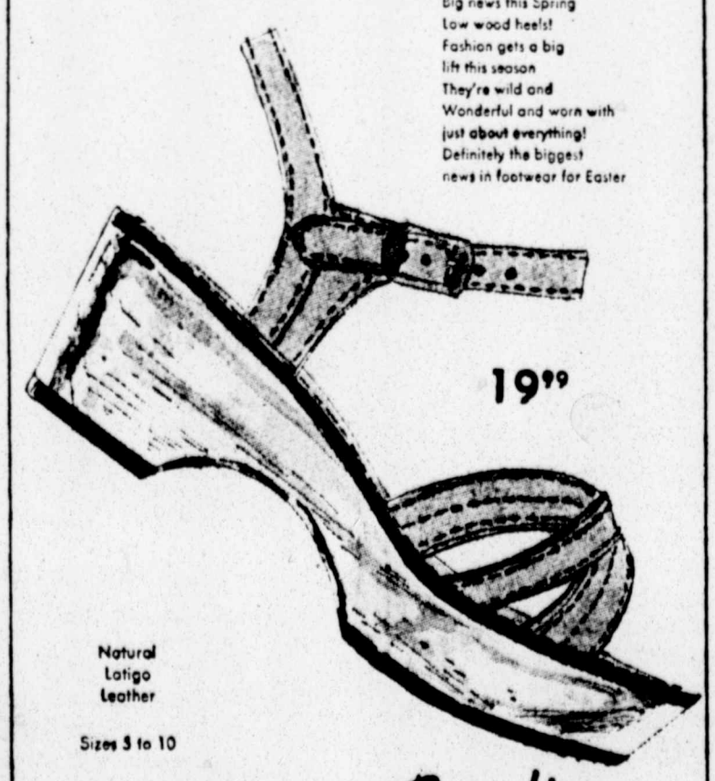

Dear Insulted: She's smart. She speaks a foreign language because she suspects that someone may be listening. And obviously she's right!

Hairdressers Trained In Counseling

By BOB RAST

EL CAJON, Calif. (AP) — Workshops are springing up nationwide to train bartenders and hairdressers as on-the-job counselors to steer troubled patrons away from depression and suicide toward professional help.

There was a time when bartender LeRoy Sundquist preferred not to lend an ear to his customers' woes. And cosmetologist Kathy Spiller used to come home each night with her head ringing with her customers' personal grief. Now they both are willing listeners.

It's partly because of a program that has trained about 115 Southern California hairdressers and about 20 bartenders in counseling skills enabling them to handle crisis situations.

The workshop was launched in 1976 with a $38,000 state department of health grant to Crisis House in the San Diego suburb of El Cajon. Participants are now applying their paraprofessional talents in beauty salons and bars throughout California.

"It's easier to just sort of pacify them (customers) by listening," said Sundquist, 25, of La Mesa and manager of a San Diego bar.

Many of the problems he hears involve domestic problems, says Sundquist, and most of those relate to money or fights with a spouse.

Andy Thompson, 33-year-old director of Crisis House's Community Training Program, said in a recent interview that bartenders and beauticians are trained not to give advice or engage in any form of moralizing or preaching.

Instead, they are taught to listen and, when appropriate, refer troubled patrons to community service agencies dealing with drug and alcohol abuse, mental health counseling, suicide intervention and family or divorce counseling.

Cosmetologist Spiller says that before she took the course, her customers "were fighting to solve their problems and I was fighting to solve mine — nothing was being accomplished."

Participants are trained to recognize various suicidal symptoms, including low self esteem, general depression and negative outlook.

"I had a couple of people who were really on the verge of suicide," the hairdresser said. "But they talked it through and decided there was a lot left to life."

Paraprofessional counseling training for bartenders and beauticians started in Wisconsin in 1974 as part of a program by the Mental Health Association of Racine.

"A tavern is a non-threatening setting for people who have problems," said Ruth Weyland, then director of the agency.

"Bartenders hear more problems than a minister does. It boils down to them doing what they've done for years — but being a little more aware."

NEW BREED — A new breed of tweed sweaters are expected to play a starring role in the fashion scene this fall. Green, rust and camel tones blend together in a plunge-collar treatment. Brown corduroy slacks complete the country look.

Furniture Reflects Women's Attitudes

By ELLIE GROSSMAN

NEW YORK (NEA) — Curved legs and straight legs, that's pretty much the difference between liberated and non-liberated women.

Not their own, of course. The legs they choose in coffee tables and chairs.

At least, that's one of the conclusions of M.H. (Margaret) Harmon, a psychologist from Jenkintown, Pa., who decided women who spend a lot of time at home should find out about themselves, from that home.

So she sent out a bunch of questionnaires to women in the Philadelphia area (because that's where she's from) and then she wrote "Psycho-Decorating," published by Wyden Books.

Based on the responses of 80 mostly married, middle-class, women who had decorated their own homes, the book deals largely with the "deferential" or traditional woman and the "achiever."

And that's where the legs come in, plieing or standing straight in the living room, for example.

"The curved line goes with the quality called deference," begins Mrs. Harmon, a shy brunette who smiles a lot. "That means being agreeable and fitting in with traditional things. A deferential woman is one who isn't harsh in her relationships."

Not that she's a patsy or a doormat or terribly unhappy being "supportive" to her husband, she adds. "She doesn't feel inferior, she's just trying to fit in."

So nine times out of 10, the deferential woman will choose curved lines over straight. "She likes French Provincial furniture," Mrs. Harmon says, "French toile patterns and oriental rugs which, of course, are traditional. Also, she likes many colors and patterns and that goes with a tolerance for different viewpoints." Unless those viewpoints concern women's lib, which she probably doesn't take kindly to, she concedes.

Her walls tend to be traditionally dark and her windows will have tie-back draperies (the curve, again), probably with a floral pattern in them. But they won't be velvet because Mrs. Harmon says, "she doesn't like unusual textures. She avoids velvets, shag rugs, glass and lacquered things."

Give her smooth wooden furniture, say, and she'll probably let you watch whatever you want on her TV which she tends to keep in the living room. "That's so she can pick up on what's going on in order to fit in with others."

Don't look for a television in the "achiever's" living room, though. A stereo, a radio, lots of books — "She has an open mind" — that's what you'll find there.

Plus more straight lines than curves. "The achiever likes straight lines in most of her furniture, which I think indicates rationality. Her mental atmosphere is lucid and objective, and she likes light walls which you often see in office buildings."

Smack in the middle of one she might stick a mural of Burt Reynolds, though, because something striking like that on a wall jibes with her ability to express strong views.

And she's going to have a coffee table you won't miss. Large and probably rectangular, possibly glass-topped, maybe marble or brass.

As for patterns, give her something bold like a stripe. And hammer wooden shutters around her windows, which may or may not have draperies tied back, but will have cornices or a valance "to show her high goals."

Unlike the deferential woman, the achiever doesn't care one way or the other about velvets, but don't bring up Oriental rugs or anything silky in her presence. She can't stand them.

As for live plants, both ladies have a crack at them because, Mrs. Harmon says, highly heterosexual women like plants. Lots of them. And you don't have to be achieving or deferential to like men.

Actually, though, Mrs. Harmon didn't say that at all, she says. A machine did. "I put all the questions in the computer which found the relationships between each question and each trait, and the computer said plants were related to sexual interest."

Well, before you start puzzling over the lady who moved in next door with 14 eucalyptus plants, a wing chair with two curved legs and two straight, and a huge rendering of "Little Women," Mrs. Harmon wants it understood that none of this information is especially scientific. You really have to know a person before you can let their home speak for them. She wrote the book only to give clues and to get women to think about how decorating reflects who they are. Or should, if they're "congruent."

"Someone who behaves as he actually is inside and doesn't put on a false impression is considered congruent," she says. "It's not considered psychologically desirable to be incongruent."

In other works, if your living room looks just like Mary Tyler Moore's, you should be just like Mary Tyler Moore.

Unless, of course, Mrs. Moore had a decorator do her house which might indicate, Mrs. Harmon says, some feelings of insecurity about revealing oneself to others.

Then again, maybe she just had a lot of money to play with, or couldn't take the time because she was too busy revealing herself in the newsroom.

WOMEN MANAGERS

GLASGOW, Scotland (WNS) -Elsie Carmichael, 28, is a Women's Lib sports fan who wants to clean up the game by getting the ladies into it as team managers. "The job is all about managing men, and nobody does that better than women," she said. "We have lady horse trainers and lady jockeys, and we have women umpiring cricket and tennis matches. Get wives onto the football fields, and we'll get more wives into the stands with their husbands. With their women at hand, these ruffian males will stop the fights and riots they now sponsor around here."

Writers Warn Novices Of Vanity Presses

By BETTY YARMON

NEW YORK (WNS) -So you want to write a book! Well, cautions two experts, stay away from the so-called "vanity presses" -those whose "invitation to authors of books" advertisements you hear with increasing persistence.

The experts, Judith Applebaum and Nancy Evans, are editors and writers with long experience, and they have written a book directed to the thousands of us who feel we have something worthwhile enough to say that it should be placed between covers: "How to Get Happily Published" (Harper & Row).

The authors point out that the ads of vanity presses offer a free manuscript evaluation and a free brochure about the publishing operation, but only when you have begun to correspond with them do they start mentioning any fees.

Be advised, say the authors, that a vanity press is likely to charge you several hundred dollars to handle publication processes that you can direct or execute yourself.

The booklets that the vanity presses send to those who respond to their ads generally fail to stress two crucial points:

1. The press has no stake in the success of your book, taking its money up front by getting you to pay all the costs of editing, typesetting, proof-reading, printing, overhead, etc. -along with a sum that understandably is pure profit to them. Then, if the edition actually earns anything, the press will take a cut of the revenues from sales, too, and even charge you for any copies you yourself buy over and above the allotment mentioned in your contract.

2. Distribution efforts by vanity presses can be worse than useless because vanity books bear a stigma. Most libraries bookstores, and book reviewers will not touch them. And while some titles do manage to rack up sales, it is virtually certain that most vanity press successes could have been easily matched by a writer on his or her own.

Testimonials from happy authors are a regular feature of vanity press catalogs, the authors continue, noting that of course they don't print any litanies of complaint.

The authors add that some variation on, "I never realized that binding all the copies in the first printing wasn't included in the deal" heads the general list of author complaints.

The bulk of the Applebaum-Evans book is given over to illuminating and useful details on how your book can come to be among the more than 40,000 that see the light of day each year in the United States.

Most of these books are put out by commercial publishers, who are ever on the look-out for new talent and hence comb such sources as newspapers and magazines to find them.

For every small publishing firm that dies, eight new ones are born - and in the market for the manuscripts that will appeal to some segment of the book-buying public.

The authors take you step-by-step: how to learn to write, what to write about, where to get an agent, where to submit your manuscript, how to submit your manuscript.

Then, once a manuscript has been sold, they guide you through the next series of steps: editing, copy editing, design, production, advertising, and the promotion that hopefully will single out your book from the thousands of other titles competing with it in the marketplace.

But the authors also make a pitch for self-publishing -Mark Twain, William Blake, and Tom Paine, they remind us, did it, so that's quite respectable -arguing that self-publishing gives the author a number of advantages: quality control, freedom of form, tangible sources of satisfaction, direct reader response, camaraderie and longevity.

No matter how you would like to proceed, though, "How to Get Happily Published" will interest you so long as the printed word does.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Grain and soybean prices closed higher on the Chicago Board of Trade today.

After mixed trading in the first couple of hours, prices moved steadily higher under buying pressure and encountered only slight resistance.

Most of the weekend news was considered bearish, with highly favorable planting weather over practically the entire Midwest farm belt.

Corn prices moved upward at midsession and on commission house buying and trading in other pits followed.

There was very little hedge pressure in the wake of the absence of country selling over the weekend as farmers spent time in the fields.

Weather Effects Cost Billions; Congress Sees Budget Woes

By EDMOND Le BRETON

WASHINGTON (AP) — It isn't only farmers that squint worriedly at the sky — Congress has been told weather could make a difference of several billion dollars in the federal budget.

According to estimates, bad weather somewhat surprisingly could reduce net government farm outlays, but the drop would be more than offset by unemployment and other costs, while indirect effects would be felt for years.

A task force of the House Budget Committee held hearings to determine if available weather information could be used to make budget estimates more accurate and if more funding for weather forecasting would pay off. The results were mixed.

The committee published the testimony, with amplifying and supporting material, Monday.

One of the more detailed analyses came from the Congressional Budget Office, which conducts research for the committees. It tried to follow through the economic effects of the crop-damaging 1974 weather and of the winter of 1976-77, when glacial temperatures and snow aggravated fuel shortages.

Without putting a precise price tag on all the effects, Raymond C. Sheppach, assistant director of the budget office, told the committee crop failures could reduce payments for farm price supports by $3.5 billion. But payments under farm disaster programs would partially offset the decline by rising $1.5 billion.

However, he said, the crop failures would push up prices and the resulting inflation and unemployment by the following year would increase government spending by about $6 billion. Of this, as much as $3.5 billion might be offset by increased tax collections, also brought about by inflation.

Sheppach said there is no way to tell how much the government's outlays in unemployment compensation were increased as a result of the 1976-77 winter crisis. Unemployment in the affected states increased in a few weeks from 240,000 to 1.2 million, but for most workers the jobless period was short.

George P. Cressman, director of the National Weather Service, said it has greatly increased the accuracy of its one to three day forecasts, but "we can't forecast even average conditions far enough in advance to aid this committee or anyone else in formulating the national budget. Neither can anybody else."

USSR Expels U.S. Officials

MOSCOW (AP) — Two guides on a U.S. government agriculture exhibit have been ordered expelled for "activity hostile to the Soviet Union," but one already has left.

The two are Anthony Maschocci of Boston and Walter Lupan of Washington, D. C. Lupan left several days ago after completing his scheduled six weeks with the exhibit in Kiev.

The Foreign Ministry summoned a U.S. Embassy officer Monday to protest "about the impermissable activities of these American citizens and demanded their pre-term departure from the Soviet Union," the official news agency Tass reported.

An embassy spokesman declined to comment.

Tass said Lupan and Maschocci were "especially ardent" in voicing "slander against the Soviet state and social system.

"They showed elementary incompetence in questions of agriculture but were busy very actively with anti-Soviet propaganda and agitation. They conducted themselves impolitely and sometimes even crudely with visitors and insulted their dignity."

The exhibit, titled "Agriculture U.S.A.," focuses on several generations of a farm family in Illinois, showing improvements in technology and lifestyle over the years.

MILITARY HONORS — Military pallbearers carry the casket draped in the American flag into the First United Methodist Church of Gadsden, Ala., today before funeral services for Sen. James B. Allen, D-Ala. (AP Laserphoto)

Mondale, Solons Pay Respects To Allen

GADSDEN, Ala. (AP) — Vice President Walter Mondale and a host of the late Sen. James B. Allen's colleagues gathered in this quiet corner of America today to pay final respects to the crafty parliamentarian who was known as the master of the filibuster.

The 65-year-old Democrat died last Thursday of a heart attack in Gulf Shores, Ala., and was eulogized today at the First United Methodist Church here in a service which was telecast statewide.

"Jim Allen was a big man physically, intellectually and spiritually," said former Sen. Sam Ervin of North Carolina.

"As a U.S. senator he was distinguished by industry, intellectual honesty and independence, by his knowledge of legislative procedures, his eloquence and repartee in debate, his courtly courtesy to colleagues, his steadfast loyalty to his convictions and his unbounded moral courage."

Sen. Harry F. Byrd Jr, I-Va., called Allen a public official who "carried out his lonely battles against great numbers and against great pressures." He praised Allen as a senator who was wary of the "awesome power" of the majority and said he was among the "sentinels of democracy, vigorous champions of those who may hold views contrary to the passing but powerful majorities of the day."

Byrd said Allen's "fairness and integrity became a legend in the Senate ... in his death the people of Alabama have lost an unselfish and dedicated champion; the Senate of the United States has lost a courageous, and perhaps irreplaceable, leader; and I have lost a dear friend."

Allen, a senator for 10 years, was a conservative whose knowledge of Senate rules was considered among the most comprehensive in the chamber.

He refused to dodge controversy when he felt the security of the United States was at stake.

On those grounds, he fought hard to defeat the two Panama Canal treaties approved by the Senate March 16 and April 18.

Allen's death means Alabama voters will elect two senators this year for the first time since 1907, when both Alabama senators — Edmund Pettus and John T. Morgan — died in office. Veteran Sen. John Sparkman, D-Ala., is retiring at the end of his term in January.

Gov. George C. Wallace must call a special election to choose a senator to serve out Allen's term, which runs through 1980.

In a report published Monday night, The Montgomery Advertiser quoted "well-informed sources in Washington" as saying Maryon Allen wants to succeed her husband in the Senate. The newspaper said Mrs. Allen "likely" will be a candidate in the special election.

There had been speculation earlier that Wallace would appoint Mrs. Allen to fill Allen's seat until a successor is elected. But newspaper report was the first hint that Mrs. Allen might be a candidate in the special election.

Montoya's Burial Rites Slated For Thursday

SANTA FE, N.M. (UPI) — Former Sen. Joseph M. Montoya, the son of a gold miner who grew up to become one of New Mexico's most powerful political figures, will be buried Thursday near where his public service career began four decades ago.

Montoya, a Democrat who gained national attention as a member of the Senate Watergate Committee, died Monday at the age of 62. He had been hospitalized at Georgetown University Hospital in Washington, D.C., since early May for treatment of gastro-intestinal bleeding. He suffered kidney failure last Saturday.

Montoya's body will be taken in a funeral procession Wednesday from Albuquerque to Santa Fe where the body will lie in state at the Capitol Wednesday. A funeral mass and burial will be held Thursday.

Born in the tiny community of Pena Blanca on Sept. 24, 1915, Montoya began his political career at the age of 21, winning a seat in the New Mexico House.

He went on to serve two terms in the House and three more in the New Mexico Senate. He served four terms as lieutenant governor before being elected to Congress in 1957. He captured his first Senate seat in 1964 and was re-elected in 1970.

An ardent opponent of the Nixon Administration, Montoya was a member of the Senate Watergate Committee which probed Nixon's activities and laid the groundwork for the former President's resignation in August 1974.

Former Sen. Sam Ervin of North Carolina, who served with Montoya on the committee, was among those who eulogized Montoya.

"He was a great senator of Mexican-American ancestry," said Ervin. "I was most intimately associated with him during the hearing on the Watergate affair. He displayed, in those hearings, a fine judicial temperment and a complete sense of fairness."

"Joseph Montoya was our friend and colleague ... a devoted servant of the people," said Senate Democratic Leader Robert Byrd.

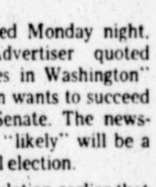

Republican Sen. Pete Domenici, who succeeded Montoya as the state's senior senator, praised Montoya for "a historic record of service" and his "strong sympathy for the underdog."

Montoya is survived by his wife Della, three children — Joseph Jr., Patrick and Linda — his brother, New Mexico Sen. Ted Montoya; and two sisters, Lorella Salazar and Virginia Chavez. All were at his bedside when Montoya died at 7 a.m. MDT Monday.

Fishing 'War' Begins With Little Activity

By JAMES PHILLIPS

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Canadian-American fishing war is erupting not with a bang, but a "pfffft."

As the dispute entered its second day today, neither government reported arresting any fishermen. No angry words have been exchanged. No meetings have been called to attempt to resolve the conflict.

Spokesmen for both nations said fishermen hoisted their nets and sailed for home hours before the Monday noon deadline, after which American and Canadian fishermen were forbidden under threat of arrest to fish within each other's 200-mile territorial limit.

In Boston today, Coast Guard Petty Officer David Harris said: "We have no special patrols out hunting down people. There have been no reported boardings or conflicts whatsoever."

Nor have any Canadians been found in the Great Lakes. "Even if we find them, we are not taking any action uness they do it consistently," Coast Guard spokesman Dave Laird said in Cleveland.

"We don't expect any trouble," said a U.S. Coast Guard spokesman in Seattle. "All the (Canadian) boats have cleared out."

Similar reports came from Canadian authorities.

The two-way fishing ban was felt immediately in the small community of Haines, Alaska, where 150 to 200 Canadian fishermen from across the border in the Yukon Territory and British Columbia were ejected from Haines' annual salmon derby.

"My God, they're our neighbors," said David Olerud, the derby chairman. "The damage created internationally probably wasn't as serious as the damage created locally."

The fishing war stems from each country's failure to take conservation measures requested by the other.

The United States had asked Canada to stop salmon fishing for two months on the Swiftsure Bank off British Columbia to protect stocks that spawn in U.S. waters.

Canada in turn asked the United States to reduce the American catch of cod, haddock, pollock and scallops on the Georges Bank off New England.

Neither side complied with the other's request, prompting Canada to close its waters to American commercial fishermen and the United States to close its waters in retaliation.

The U.S. ban applies to all Canadian fishing from Canadian-registered boats except for harvests of halibut, which resume off Alaska on June 19, and some highly migratory species such as bluefin tuna and albacore.

The ban also applies to sport fishing, except for Canadians fishing in U.S.-registered craft. For its part, Canada was allowing licensed U.S. sport fishermen to continue using Canadian waters for the time being.

U.S. penalties for Canadian violations of the ban ranged from warnings to criminal charges carrying a maximum sentence of one year in prison and a $100,000 fine. The maximum Canadian penalty for U.S. violators was impoundment of the vessel's catch and fines of $5,000 to $10,000, depending on the size of the catch.

State Department official John Rouse said neither side had moved to resolve the dispute and lift the bans.

Canada apparently stands to lose the most financially from the dispute. U.S. government statistics show that Canadian commercial fishermen harvested $59 million worth of fish in U.S. waters last year. The U.S. commercial catch in Canadian waters amounted to $7 million.

Bill Would Restrict Security Numbers

WASHINGTON (AP) — For millions of Americans, their Social Security numbers bind them to a diverse set of records ranging from tax rolls to bank accounts and drivers' licenses.

Government agencies use the nine-digit number for a host of non-tax purposes, despite some restrictions imposed by a federal privacy law in 1974 and the misgivings of civil libertarians.

Rep. Barry Goldwater Jr., R-Calif., who was a member of a federal commission that examined privacy issues last year, has introduced bills that would require congressional approval for any federal agency's use of the number and would bar its use in the private sector.

The Privacy Act of 1974 imposed a moratorium on new uses of Social Security numbers by federal, state or local government agencies, unless specifically authorized by law. It contained a broad "grandfather" clause that sanctioned any government use started before Jan. 1, 1975.

The Tax Reform Act of 1976 specifically gave state and local tax, motor vehicle and welfare agencies a green light to use the number.

Twenty-eight states, the District of Columbia and American Samoa now use it as their driver's license number or in their drivers' files.

Currently, the law says nothing about private firms or schools that ask people for the number when they open a charge account, take a test or even cash a check.

In those cases, the individual can always refuse to divulge it, even if it means arguing with a cashier.

But federal law requires an individual to disclose his Social Security number for payroll records, tax returns, bank accounts, bonds and securities, military records and to states that use it for driver's licenses or motor vehicle registrations. A government agency must say whether disclosure is mandatory and what it's being used for.

Virginia also uses the number to register voters, and West Virginia employs it on hunting and fishing licenses.

Ronald Plesser, who was general counsel to the Privacy Protection Study Commission last year, said the proliferating use of Social Security numbers is "a hot issue symbolically and politically." It epitomizes public fears about computer dossiers and the "dehumanizing" effect of being reduced to a number, he said.

But, Plesser added, "It's the symbol, but not the problem."

The real problem is protecting against unwarranted exchanges of information from files, he said.

Sophisticated computers now can pinpoint a person's file using only the consonants of his last name and date of birth "almost as efficiently" as with a Social Security number, Plesser said. Neither the FBI nor TRW, a major credit firm, relies on the Social Security number as its main index.

Proponents say the number is helpful in establishing accuracy in any file system.

The first three digits tell where the card was issued. The rest are a straight serial number. More than 254 million have been issued since 1936, and living card holders exceed 192 million.

San Antonio Man Killed In Georgia

COLUMBUS, Ga. (UPI) — A Texas man died Monday of injuries sustained in an one-vehicle crash Sunday.

Police said Barron Newborn, 41, of San Antonio, lost control of his truck and struck an embankment on U.S. 27 in Harris County.

A spokesman for the Columbus Medical Center, where Newborn was taken following the crash, said Newborn remained in critical condition most of the day and died late Monday.

NASA Tries To Save Skylab

WASHINGTON (AP) — Space agency scientists today took the first step to delay the Skylab space station from dropping out of orbit and possibly striking an inhabited area.

"Everything went well, and we're feeling pretty good about it right now," said Bill O'Donnell, a spokesman for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Earlier NASA sent radio signals to the giant station to turn on gyroscope heaters.

The space agency hopes that a series of maneuvers this week will add six to 12 months to Skylab's life, giving astronauts a chance next year to stop it from making an uncontrolled re-entry into the atmosphere.

If the 85-ton station, the world's largest manmade satellite, were left alone, NASA estimates it would fall out of orbit sometime between early 1979 and early 1980. Officials are concerned that the vehicle possibly could shower populated areas with chunks of metal and other debris.

If this week's maneuvers are successful, a team of space shuttle astronauts could reach Skylab late next year and attach a small rocket to the station.

The rocket could be used to boost Skylab into a higher orbit, where it would stay for hundreds of years, and perhaps be reinhabited. Or it could be used to guide the spacecraft to an atmospheric re-entry and breakup over a remote ocean area.

O'Donnell said radio signals sent today from the Johnson Space Center in Houston successfully activated the heaters for two gyroscopes. On Thursday, after they have warmed sufficiently, the gyros will be spun up so they can control the station's position in its 230-mile-high orbit.

On Friday, the station is to be maneuvered so its solar panels always face the sun, and on Saturday small steering rockets are to be ignited to shift Skylab into a position parallel to the earth, with its small end forward. This position will reduce the atmospheric drag tugging the craft toward the earth.

The cylinder-shaped Skylab, 118 feet long, presently is flying in a sort of standing up position relative to the earth.

The station was launched in 1973 and was home to three separate three-man astronaut teams for periods of 28, 59 and 84 days.

Hearing Loss Is Not A Sign Of Old Age

Chicago, Ill.—A free offer of special interest to those who hear but do not understand words has been announced by Beltone. A non-operating model of the smallest Beltone aid of its kind will be given absolutely free to anyone requesting it.

Send for this model, put it on and wear it in the privacy of your own home. While many people with a hearing loss will not receive any significant benefit from any hearing aid, this free model will show you how tiny hearing help can be. It is not a real hearing aid, and it's yours to keep, free. The actual aid weighs less than a third of an ounce, and it's all at ear level, in one unit.

These models are free, so we suggest you write for yours now. Again, we repeat, there is no cost, and certainly no obligation. Thousands have already been mailed, so write today to Dept. 2292, Beltone Electronics Corp., 4201 W. Victoria, Chicago, Illinois 60646. 6-6

TODAY'S STOCK PRICES

Mart Shows Big Gains, High Volume

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market rolled up another sharp gain today in what brokers described as a new stampede of buying by cash-rich investing institutions.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which had climbed more than 16 points on Monday to a nine-month high, picked up another 9.18 to 873.01 by noontime today.

Gainers outnumbered losers by more than a 4-1 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said the market's steep rise Monday had stirred up additional enthusiasm for stocks.

They noted that investing institutions seemed particularly eager to increase their stock holdings before they make their mid-year reports on their portfolios at the end of June.

By a number of measures, many institutions had large percentages of their assets out of the market when stock prices began soaring this spring. Catch-up buying by these institutions has been widely cited as a primary reason for the market's recent gains.

"Institutions are committing cash that had been on the sidelines, and they're putting in the glamor issues, the high-technology stocks, and the blue chips," said William LeFevre at Granger Co.

Among leading glamors, Burroughs rose 2 to 77¾; Philip Morris gained 2 to 71⅝; McDonald's was up 1⅛ at 58⅜, and International Business Machines added 1⅜ to 267¼.

The NYSE's composite index was up .55 at 56.52. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index rose .97 to 147.46.

Volume on the Big Board accelerated to 26.70 million shares over the first two hours, against 15.76 million Monday.

DR. LAMB

Tagamet Aids Ulcers

By LAWRENCE, E. LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I read in your column about Tagamet being available in the United States. My son is 24 years old and has had a duodenal ulcer for at least four years. I suppose because he is a worrier (inherited from me). He is an accountant and just finished getting his masters degree. Is his ulcer the same as a peptic ulcer?

I would appreciate it if you would send me some information about this new treatment.

DEAR READER — Tagamet, also known as cimetidine, is being used extensively in the treatment of peptic ulcer. By the way duodenal ulcers are one form of peptic ulcer. A peptic ulcer can occur in either the duodenum, which is the first part of the intestine just outside the stomach, or inside the stomach itself. Most ulcers even if they are called stomach ulcers, are really duodenal ulcers.

Tagamet has a different action from antacids. Basicaly it inhibits the stomach's ability to form excess amounts of acid rather than neutralizing the overproduction of acids. It was used extensively in England before it was approved in this country and received good reviews there.

I'm certain that you son's doctor knows all about it since Tagamet has been the subject of a heavy promotional campaign both in the lay and medical press. In fact I have seldom seen a medicine given so much promotion and publicity. Perhaps because of this it received unusually rapid approval from the Food and Drug Administration (FDA). Ordinarily the FDA is rather cautious about approving new medicines until they have been completely evaluated by scientists in the United States.

While it appears that the drug has a very good place in medicine and probably has few side effects, there have been a few warnings. One of these is a suggestion by a Baltimore physician that Tagamet might affect the bone marrow and its ability to produce blood cells. This was discounted by the pharmaceutical firm marketing Tagamet.

However, the doctor's suggestion as published in Lancet Medical Journal raises some questions about how thoroughly the adverse effects of Tagamet have been studied. An earlier question about Tagamet concerned its role in the cause of tumors in rats. However, this data was reviewed by the FDA before they approved the drug for public use. It has also been reported in Lancet that Tagamet was ineffective in stopping bleeding, a complication of peptic ulcers.

I am a bit concerned about the way many medicines produce by drug companies are studied before marketing. Often the scientists and laboratories involved are not totally without bias as often they are investigators one way or another for the drug company involved.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 1-5, Ulcers: Duodenal, Stomach, which will give you the basic information about ulcers. Others who are send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Tagamet or other medicines are not a substitute for proper living which is essential to the management of all peptic ulcer cases. That includes removal of stress and the eliminations of ulcerogenic habits such as the use of coffee, alcohol and smoking cigarettes.

Pot Users Get Dental Warning

CHICAGO (AP) — Marijuana and dental treatment don't mix, say two dental researchers who warn that marijuana users may suffer serious side-effects because of reactions to drugs used in dental treatment.

For that reason, they advise habitual marijuana smokers to abstain from use of the substance for a period before and after treatment.

The reseachers review marijuana in relation to stress in dental treatment in the June issue of the Journal of the American Dental Association. They are Drs. Leonard G. Horowitz of the Eastman Dental Center in Rochester, N.Y., and Robert R. Nersasian of Tufts University school of dental medicine in Boston.

They point out that about half of college-age Americans used marijuana in 1972, with 8 percent smoking it daily. And they say it is projected that 66 percent of young adults will use it by 1980.

For this reason, they advise dentists, more young dental patients will be seeking elective or emergency dental treatment while under the influence of marijuana.

Marijuana, they say, "is a potent, pharmacologically active agent that could affect and complicate a dental procedure" and it needs further study as it relates to dental treatment.

They say it interferes with normal cardiovascular mechanisms and those responses involving the involuntary nervous system.

Nutritionist Claims Americans Use Food As Status Symbol

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Americans treat food as status, language and refuge and such deeply ingrained symbolism frustrates all but a handful of dieters, according to researchers at the University of California at Berkeley.

"The way we relate to food is deeply rooted and very, very important," nutritionist Barbara Abrams said Sunday. "Food is associated with love for a lot of us. Some people don't know how to feel love from other people, so they eat all the time.

"And it's our self-expression. We rarely offer food to someone we don't like, but with someone we like we use food as a form of sharing," she told a San Francisco conference on nutrition and health.

"We also use food as a crutch. There are those who, when they're under stress, will eat everything in sight. We even use food as reward and punishment for children."

Such habits and perceptions are an integral part of each individual, she said, and must be dealt with if changes in diet are to succeed.

The conference was sponsored by the University of California-San Francisco and the National Institute for the Study of Human Knowledge.

Anthropologist Margaret MacKensie told the workshop that millions of Americans are obese, most want very much to shed pounds and many try one diet after another.

But she said only 2 percent of those who try to lose weight succeed for two years or more and "one of the neglected reasons why they are unable ... to lose this weight and keep it off is the meaning of food and of eating to them."

Dr. MacKensie said the repeated failures prove that "we really don't know what to do about it. We know that if you decrease what you eat and increase the energy you put out (in exercise) you will lose weight. ... But these people struggle to do it and they are unable to."

The result often is frustration and despair at being fat in a society that praises thin.

It also seems to increase the risk of heart disease, high blood pressure and other illnesses.

Dr. MacKensie said she suspects the extra weight may not be the chief cause of some of the health problems.

"What I'm wondering is, does the stress of being obese — the guilt and the anxiety — contribute to the hypertension."

Rutgers Given $1 Million Grant

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Newspaper publisher S.I. Newhouse has given a $1.5 million grant to help finance a new law center at Rutgers University.

Speaking Sunday at commencement ceremonies on the Newark campus of the state university, Rutgers President Edward J. Bloustein said the new center will honor Newhouse, publisher of Newark Star-Ledger, the Jersey Journal in Jersey City and 27 other newspapers in nine other states.

The center will be housed in a renovated 17-story building on the Newark campus and will be home of the state university's Newark School of Law, School of Criminal Justice and Institute of Continuing Legal Education.

Bloustein noted Newhouse graduated in 1916 from the New Jersey Law School which eventually became part of the Rutgers Law School.

The financing grant was made by the Samuel I. Newhouse Foundation.

"The gift is a generous and enlightened one," Bloustein said. "Creation of the S.I. Newhouse Law Center will recognize his life-long contributions to his alma mater, the City of Newark, the state of New Jersey and to higher education."

The Newhouse comunications group now includes newspapers from coast-to-coast and from New England to the deep south. It also includes the Conde Nast magazines — Vogue, Glamour, House and Garden, Mademoiselle and Brides — and radio and television stations.

$64 Million Allotted For College Grants

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government is awarding nearly $64 million in scholarship money that will help 255,000 undergraduates finance their college educations.

The money went to 50 states, the District of Columbia and U.S. territories, the U.S. Office of Education said Sunday. The states and territories will match the federal money for the State Student Incentive Grant program. The average scholarship will be for $500, while the maximum will be $1,500, the government said Sunday.

No Drop Seen In Jobless Rate

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — A jobless rate of 6.1 percent, such as occurred in May, generally suggests that we're a long way from full employment. But it may be the best rate that can be achieved for the time being.

The reason is inflation. With a rate of 7 percent for the entire year now a possibility, the Carter administration has little choice but to turn its attention toward the restraint of wages and prices.

In other words, it must cool things, and when an economy is cooled it hardly provides a warm environment for unemployed workers. In fact, it could mean that some who are now employed might lose their jobs.

What the economists now are saying is that we can't have our cake and eat it. That is, we can't hope to lower unemployment substantially while trying at the same time to reduce the rate of inflation.

There comes a point, they say, when efforts to employ more workers puts upward pressure on prices, the reason being that the workers newly hired may be of marginal ability and thus among the least efficient.

Analysis

The shock to the administration and others is that the point of interaction has come while the jobless rate is still so high. Some authorities had hoped to push unmployment under 5 percent.

But there is evidence now that a further decline in joblessness would automatically result in higher prices, an eventuality no politician can ignore. Higher prices affect everyone; unemployment doesn't.

For the time being, therefore, it seems likely that "full employment" isn't the 4 percent we had envisoned, but about 50 percent higher than that. Is something wrong wrong with the measuring stick?

The suggestion is strong, and some economists swear that a 6 percent jobless rate today is equal to a 4 percent rate 10 years ago. Today's jobless rate is exaggerated, they say.

While explanations differ somewhat, the most common assertion is that the work force, now at 100 million for the first time, has become swollen with people who are other than primary breadwinners.

Women are the most numerous addition to the work force, and some of them are not wholly dependent upon the income received. Some might even seek employment for reasons such as personal fulfillment.

While there is nothing to be criticized in such behavior, say those who study the statistics, the effect is to so enlarge the work force that the increase in jobs isn't sufficient to lower the jobless rate.

At the same time, they explain, there has been a growth in unemployment benefits, making it easier for an individual to bide his or her time while waiting for precisely the position desired.

Theoretically, therefore, we may be closer to "full employment" than is realized. Employers might now be accepting the least efficient workers, adding to their production costs and therefore to prices.

Nobody can say this with certainty, however, and many critics totally disagree.

And nobody who views the figures for teen-age or minority unemployment can accept the argument without a troubled conscience.

The moon is between its new phase and first quarter. 3

The morning star is Mercury.

The evening stars are Venus, Mars, Jupiter and Saturn.

American patriot Nathan Hale was born June 6, 1755.

On this day in history:

In 1933, a motion picture drive-in theater opened in Camden, N.J., the first of its kind.

In 1944, hundreds of thousands of Allied troops started crossing the English Channel in the "D-Day" invasion of Nazi-occupied Europe. The greatest invasion in history was supported by thousands of planes and ships.

In 1972, a coal mine explosion in Rhodesia trapped 464 miners underground and more than 425 of them died.

In 1974, newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst was indicted for armed robbery in the April 15 robbery of a San Francisco bank.

A thought for the day:

Just before he was hanged by the British as a Revolutionary War spy, patriot Nathan Hale said, "I only regret that I have but one life to lose for my country."

U.S. Balks On African Aid

PARIS (AP) — The United States and four European allies have agreed on joint military and economic action to help keep Zaire President Mobutu Sese Seko in power, but the United States balked at planning to assist other African governments.

A senior American official, who declined to be identified, said after the 13 hours of talks ended early today that the United States would not back a broader, Africa-wide peace force unless it was manned and run by the Organization of African Unity.

"I think we can only conceive of this thing in terms of specific situations," he said. "The mood of the United States as a whole is one of hesitation about involvement abroad, certainly any military involvement. Congressional tendencies are essential in any enterprise of this kind."

A communique issued after the talks said the United States, France, Britain, Belgium and West Germany discussed action "taken or considered" for Zaire's security, and aid "necessary for its recovery and economic and social progress."

It also said the allies "brought up the problems of aid that could be provided to African countries desiring to preserve, collectively or individually, their integrity and their development."

No details were given. But apparently the military aid will take the form of African troops from former French territories and transport and logistic support for them from the United States and France.

France wanted a Western-backed pan-African peace force and economic aid to bolster pro-Western African governments threatened by rebels with Soviet and Cuban support. But U.S. and European diplomats said the American delegation wanted the talks limited to the immediate problem of Zaire, and that Belgium and Britain sided with the Americans.

France called the conference after troops of the French Foreign Legion last month drove exiled anti-Mobutu rebels from Kolwezi, a center for copper and cobalt mining in Zaire's Shaba Province. Belgian and French experts run the mines, and their governments are trying to arrange protection for them so that they will get the mines back into full production.

The U.S. Air Force is now flying 1,500 Moroccan troops to Zaire to replace the French troops, and will return the legionnaires to their base on Corsica. In addition, the U.S. transport planes were scheduled to fly about 300 Senegalese and Gabonese soldiers to join the Moroccans today. Those troops are to be joined later by troops from Togo, the Central African Empire and possibly the Ivory Coast.

Uganda Radio said President Idi Amin welcomed the idea of African troops, and quoted him as saying while "imperialist forces" were interested only "in murdering Africans on sight," the African soldiers would think "very hard before killing their own brothers."

However, the Tanzanian government newspaper Daily News charged that the discussions in Paris were part of a "Western conspiracy to create banana republics" in Africa. It said the five allies were "trying to find out how NATO can massively intervene to stem the tide of revolutionary changes in Africa."

Belgian Foreign Minister Henri Simonet said in Brussels that African governments were not unanimous in their view toward a pan-African force, but most of the former French territories with moderate governments "view the principle of such a force favorably."

Simonet said he originally was in favor of a peace force set up by the OAU, but he said since it was clear there is no majority within that organization on the principle of such a force, "We must work with what we have."

France has some 14,000 other troops in Africa propping up governments in Chad, Djibouti, Mauritania and other former French colonies. That is equal to more than a third of the 38,000 Cuban troops the U.S. government estimates are in Africa. As the allies met Monday, the French Communist Party led a march by 5,000 demonstrators in Paris to protest French military involvement in Africa.

In Lusaka, Zambia, Rhodesian guerrilla leader Joshua Nkomo acknowledged publicly for the first time that Cubans are training his 6,000-man army. Nkomo said in an interview with the Times of Zambia he will use the Cubans and the arms supplied by the Soviet Union to "scare away" the West from Rhodesia.

In Brussels, a spokesman for the anti-Mobutu rebels said the Moroccans were being flown to Shaba to support "the almost non-existent Mobutu troops." He disputed the Zaire government's claim that its army recaptured Mutshatsha, 80 miles west of Kolwezi, on Saturday. The spokesman claimed the rebels annihilated the government troops and the battle lasted only a few minutes.

The rebels are Lunda tribesmen from Shaba who fled to Angola after the defeat of the late Moise Tshombe.

RAINY DAY ON CAMPUS — The sign says "Keep Right" but "Keep Dry" might have been more appropriate for the first day of summer classes at Texas Tech. The traffic controller had to break out her raincoat, as did many students, for the beginning of the new term. Lubbock has been battered by turbulent weather since last Wednesday. (Staff Photo)

Permanent Barricades At City Park Avoided

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The Citizens Traffic Commission voted today not to install permanent barricades at Tech Terrace Park and to monitor the situation instead.

The conditions at the park are "wonderful" now, Public Information Director Vaughn Hendrie told the board. He attributed the situation to Texas Tech University's break and a new city ordinance banning alcoholic beverages in city parks.

Hendrie said permanent barriers would cost the city $1,468 in addition to any necessary signs in the area.

When Tech students return to classes in the fall, the board suggested assigning additional police officers to the park to monitor the area for potential trouble.

Parking around city high schools again was a topic for discussion at the board meeting when residents of the Monterey High School area appeared to request no parking signs.

Mrs. O.P. Harlan Jr. of 3301 44th St. and Mr. and Mrs. George A. Fields of 3214 45th St. requested no parking signs on Hartford between 44th and 45th Streets.

Mrs. Harlan said the students parking near her house created a traffic hazard and a litter problem, in addition to disturbing the peace.

However, the board took no action on the request, but agreed to study the situation.

Members also took no action on suggested guidelines for parking near city schools.

The guidelines, suggested by the Traffic Engineering Department, would allow parking on only one side of a 30-foot street within 600 feet of school property.

Parking would be limited to two hours between 600 feet and 1,200 feet from the school from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. on school days.

If implemented, the guidelines would have no effect on existing signs.

The board turned down Bill Maddox's request for a stop sign at 58th Street and Avenue W on the recommendation of the Traffic Engineering Department, but okayed a yield sign on 81st Street at Avenue V.

Board members turned down a request by a Chamber of Commerce subcommittee that the fence on the concrete median on 4th Street between University and Boston Avenues be removed.

The consensus was the fence had served its purpose of preventing pedestrians from crossing 4th Street except at intersections during football games and had prevented head-on collisions.

However, the board recommended investigation of an agreement with the state highway department to maintain the fence or budget more money for its upkeep.

New Hours Set For City Office

If you're looking for work with the city, you may have more time to look.

Beginning next week the city personnel office will be open an hour and a half longer, from 8 a.m. to 6:30 p.m., instead of the usual 8 to 5 schedule.

For those with work already, it's hoped the new hours will give them a chance to come by the personnel office after their own workday.

The extended hours will be implemented on a trial basis, however.

Persons going to the office at Room 211 in the City Hall should use the door at 10th Street and Avenue J after 5 p.m.

The new schedule will be evaluated in six weeks.

High Court Decision Damaging To Cities

declaratory, or injunctive relief where, as here, the action is alleged to be unconstitutional implements or executes a policy statement," Brennan wrote.

Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justice William J. Rehnquist dissented.

In unanimous decisions in other cases today, the Supreme Court:

— Ruled that states are entitled to set their own eligibility standards for emergency welfare aid under a federally subsidized program. The court overturned a decision of the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals that struck down an Illinois welfare funding plan.

— Ruled that the federal government acted within its legal authority last year when it ordered a seven-month suspension of proposed rates for transporting oil through the Alaska pipeline.

The court's opinion today in the civil rights case said in essence that a city may be brought into court by a person if an official policy — or even a "custom" that has taken on the effect of an official policy — allegedly violates the individual's civil rights.

It also said that a city official who allegedly violates someone's civil rights may be sued if that official was adhering to official city policy.

However, if the official had acted outside of official policy, the city could not be held responsible. In that instance, however, the official could be sued under the federal civil rights law.

The decision wiped out a 1961 ruling entitled Monroe vs. Pape in which cities were extended virtually total immunity from such lawsuits.

In subsequent decisions, immunity from civil rights suits were extended to counties and other political subdivisions of a state. While today's ruling explicitly does not deal with county immunity, past decisions providing it presumably could be viewed as suspect.

The decision presumably will carry little effect for state governments because numerous past court decisions have held that states, under the Constitution's 11th Amendment, are immune from various lawsuits brought by individuals.

Joining with Brennan's opinion were Justices Potter Stewart, Byron R. White, Thurgood Marshall, Lewis F. Powell Jr. and John Paul Stevens.

In a dissenting opinion for himself and the chief justice, Rehnquist said the court should not have abandoned a "long and consistent line of precedents."

"The decision in Monroe vs. Pape was the fountainhead of the torrent of civil rights litigation of the last 17 years," he said. "None of the members of this court can foresee the practical consequences of today's removal of that protection."

Idalou Students To Attend SPS Workshop

IDALOU (Special) — Alan Emery and Brad DeBusk, Idalou High School Future Farmers of America (FFA), will attend Southwestern Public Service Co.'s 16th annual Farm Electrification Workshop in Amarillo.

More than 100 FFA members and leaders will attend the workshop June 12-14 at the Episcopal Conference Center.

FFA members from Texas and New Mexico will compete for five trips to the National FFA Convention at Kansas City, Mo.

Thirteen hours of instruction are offered in each of three subjects, farm motors, farm wiring and electric controls. Two students from the wiring and motor courses and one from the controls course will receive trips to Kansas City for their accomplishment.

Each student who finishes the course he is enrolled in will be awarded a certificate. Alternates are selected in each course in the event the winner is unable to attend the convention.

Heading the staff of instructors at the workshop are Ken Pollard of Texas A &M's agricultural engineering department, electric controls; Bobby Browning of Texline and Don Ham of Dalhart, farm wiring; Frank Kennedy of Vega and Jay Eudy of Turkey, farm motors.

California Vote Holds Spotlight

Leone, his closest rival for the Democratic Senate nomination.

The winner of that primary will probably face Sen. Clifford Case, the 74-year-old liberal Republican incumbent. Polls show Case leading Jeffrey Bell, his young conservative challenger.

In Ohio, attention centers on Hays, the former congressional power forced to resign after putting mistress Elizabeth Ray on his payroll. The 67-year-old Hays is one of six Democratic candidates for a seat in the Ohio House from his east-central Ohio district.

Ohio Gov. James Rhodes is being challenged in the Republican primary by state House Minority Leader William Kurfess.

Here's a rundown on the other races:

MISSISSIPPI: Gov. Cliff Finch is the acknowledged leader in the wide-open Democratic Senate primary occasioned by the retirement of veteran James Eastland. But Finch is not expected to get enough votes to avoid a June 27 runoff and former Gov. William Waller, former Lt. Gov. Charles Sullivan and lawyer Maurice Dantin are all in the running.

MONTANA: Thirty-six-year-old Rep. Max Baucus, one of the state's most popular politicians, is the favorite to win the Democratic nomination for the Senate over Sen. Paul Hatfield. Hatfield was appointed in January to fill the seat left vacant by the death of Lee Metcalf and has neither the recognition nor the organization to compete successfully with Baucus.

Larry Williams, a 35-year-old investment banker, is the front-runner in the GOP Senate primary. Tippi Huntley, widow of newscaster Chet Huntley, is one of six candidates in the Republican primary for Baucus' old House seat.

IOWA: The principle statewide race is the Republican Senate primary between former Lt. Gov. Roger Jepsen and state Commerce Commission Chairman Maurice Van Nostrand. Jepsen is a conservative, Van Nostrand a moderate, and the winner will face Democratic Sen. Dick Clark. Both Clark and Republican Gov. Robert Ray have only token primary opposition.

NEW MEXICO: The Democratic primary features a gubernatorial contest between former Gov. Bruce King and Lt. Gov. Robert Ferguson. Jose Skeen and state Rep. Bob Grant face each other in the Republican primary. Democratic Gov. Jerry Apodaca cannot succeed himself.

SOUTH DAKOTA: Lt. Gov. Harvey Wollman and Attorney General William Janklow are expected to win the Democratic and Republican nominations for governor. Wollman will become governor in July, when Gov. Richard Kneip resigns to become ambassador to Singapore.

Economist Reports Taxpayers 'Fed Up'

CHICAGO (AP) — Americans are signaling they are fed up with the federal government's failure to tackle inflation, says former presidential adviser Alan Greenspan.

"Something very extradordinary is happening. ... It's called the tax revolt," Greenspan, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers during the Ford administration, said Monday.

Greenspan cited the proposed rollback of the capital gains tax pending before the U.S. House Ways and Means Committee and California's proposed constitutional limit on property taxes on today's ballot as proof the public wants to curb inflation.

"The American people are suddenly discovering that something is very wrong; that government is getting out of hand," Greenspan told a business seminar.

He said economists never would have predicted the Steiger Amendment now before the House that would reduce the capital gains tax to the level of 10 years ago.

Nor, he said, would experts have predicted the overwhelming public support for Proposition 13 — the California initiative to place a ceiling on property taxes and require a two-thirds majority vote of the Legislature to raise taxes.

Politicians from many corners are supporting those bills, and they are "the litmus paper of the constituents back home," Greenspan said.

He said inflation, the root of public outcry on taxes, also is forcing the business community to abandon long-term investments for short-term capital expenditures.

Greenspan said the "very rational" reluctance by business to risk long-term expenditures could undercut future investments seriously.

He warned that unless inflation subsides, it will result in "major financial strain" and result either in government controls or infusions of money into the economy.

EPA Fears Price Hike

WASHINGTON (AP) — As the Energy Department prepares to end ceilings on the retail price of gasoline, the Environmental Protection Agency says it is worried the move might increase the cost of unleaded gas and prompt motorists to use the dirtier leaded fuel.

Energy Department spokesman Jim Bishop said Monday night the deregulation proposal is expected to be sent to Congress shortly — "as soon as the regulations are prepared" — but no date has been set.

Under law, both the Senate and House must block the move within 15 working days or it automatically goes into effect.

The ceilings, a vestige of the 1973 Arab oil embargo, have been felt unnecessary by the Energy Department, especially with gasoline now abundant. The department says it does not anticipate an immediate across-the-board price increase because most current prices already are well below the cutoff point.

But the EPA and a Ralph Nader consumer group, the Center for Auto Safety, believe deregulation could make more difficult their efforts to convince motorists to use unleaded gasoline.

Most late-model autos require unleaded fuel, but motorists have been known to illegally alter the car's exhaust-control system, widen the top of the fuel intake pipe or make other changes so that leaded gasoline can be used.

Critics of the deregulation plan say the cost of unleaded gasoline might go up because it is close to the ceiling price right now, while leaded gas would remain the same, causing the gap between the two to widen.

The gasoline price regulations are based on the retail prices as of May 15, 1973.

Ben Jackson, an assistant EPA administraor of enforcement, and Clarence Ditlow, of the Nader group, said if the gap increases it might lead to further illegal fuel switching.

Terrorists Shoot Prison Guard

ROME (AP) — An ambush team shot and killed a prison guard in the northeastern city of Udine today. In Rome, authorities charged three more persons with the terrorist kidnapping and slaying of former Premier Aldo Moro.

Two anonymous phone calls to news media claimed responsibility for the killing of Sgt. Antonio Santoro, 52, chief of Udine's prison guards, for two different groups — one of them the Red Brigades, the gang that assassinated Moro last month.

Police said two men and a woman approached Santoro as he left home for the prison, shot him at close range and escaped in two waiting cars.

The ambush was carried out in a similar fashion as a series of attacks in recent weeks claimed by the Red Brigades and other extremist groups.

Named in new arrest warrants were Prospero Gallinari and Corrado Alunni, both at-large and sought for some time in the Moro case, and a woman, Fiora Pirri Ardizzone.

Six other persons — five of them already in jail — were formally charged Monday.

The arrest warrants charge that the nine, together with others not yet identified, both planned and carried out the kidnapping of Moro, who was seized on a Rome street March 16, and planned and carried out the killing of his five bodyguards in the ambush. Moro's bullet-riddled body was found May 9, stuffed in small car parked in downtown Rome.

They also were accused of illegal possession of "war materiel," including machine guns and large-caliber pistols, and the carrying of these in public places.

Other allegations include five counts of larceny, involving stolen cars used in the kidnapping, and receiving stolen goods. The latter charge referred to a stolen electric typewriter on which Red Brigade communiques had been typed.

They also were accused of complicity in the kidnapping of Genoa shipowner Piero Costa because, under the charges, they helped plan the kidnapping in order to receive part of the ransom paid.

Gallinari and Alunni were among nine persons — at-large — charged with the Moro nine days after the ambush.

Those charged Monday were Enrico Triaca, Teodoro Spadaccini, Giovanni Lugnini, Antonio Marini and Gabriella Mariani, all in maximum security jails to guard against attempts to free them, and fugitive Mario Moretti.

Triaca, Spadaccini, Lugnini, Marini and Miss Mariani were arrested three weeks ago in a raid on Triaca's print shop in northwest Rome. Investigators said they believed the Red Brigades' communiques while they were holding Moro were printed in the shop.

What they investigators learned in questioning the five was not revealed.

Eduardo di Giovanni, an attorney for Lugnini, said the charges were "ridiculous."

The investigators also disclosed that they deciphered a coded Red Brigades message found after Moro's body was found. Police sources said the message was intended to give information to members of the gang at large or in jail.

MONSIGNOR KEARNEY

Parishioners Opposed To Transfer

By DAN GEORGE

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The proposed transfer of a Roman Catholic priest from his traditionalist Kansas City parish has erupted into a tug-of-war between the bishop and parishioners.

"This is the Alamo. This is Custer's Last Stand," George Cirotto said Monday. "This is the final bastion as far as Kansas City is concerned."

Bishop John Sullivan announced last week that Monsignor Vincent Kearney, pastor of Christ the King parish for 21 years, would be among 22 priests reassigned within the Kansas City-St. Joseph Diocese.

Sullivan, who was named bishop last August, said at a news conference that he wanted to share Kearney with the rest of the diocese. But Cirotto said parish members believe the move is aimed at changing Christ the King's conservative style.

"We don't have banners, we don't slap backs or shake hands in the Kiss of Peace," said Cirotto. "That's for outside the church. The church is for praying."

Parishioners have staged a parade and protest outside the diocese chancery and thousands have signed a letter urging Sullivan to reconsider the transfer.

They sent a copy of their letter to Archbishop Jean Jadot, the pope's apostolic delegate in Washington, and Kearney said they might write to Pope Paul and Cardinal John Wright in Rome.

"Some people may think they're being spoiled brats," Kearney said. "But in truth, they're fighting for their faith."

Christ the King lists some 1,300 families as members, but Kearney said an estimated 5,000 to 6,000 people, many from other parishes, attend 11 masses at the south side church every weekend.

The 60-year-old monsignor said the church is popular because it is virtually the only traditionalist parish left in the Kansas City area.

Kearney said he spent 2½ hours warning the bishop that any transfer would be a mistake and only create more division in a diocese already wracked by conflict between liberals and conservatives.

"I told him I thought it was an injustice to make me move at this stage of my life. The church was $500,000 in debt when I came, and now there is $700,000 on deposit in the chancery," he said.

"But the first thing is the good of these people. I said I thought this style of religion should not be taken away from them."

Sullivan was in Texas and unavailable for comment.

Presidential Aides Ask For Tax Cut Reduction

By R. GREGORY NOKES

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's advisers want another $4.5 billion lopped off the administration's tax cut plan as the price Americans must pay for further trimming of the planned budget deficit.

Administration sources, who asked not to be identified, said the advisers want the proposed 1979 tax cut held to about $15 billion, down from a compromise $19.4 billion. Carter originally wanted a nearly $24 billion reduction.

The sources said some of Carter's advisers want to cut an additional $3 billion to $5 billion from the 1979 deficit to demonstrate the administration's commitment to curbing inflation. The deficit now is projected at between $54 billion and $55 billion.

The action is in response to widespread criticism from Congress and elsewhere that huge federal budget deficits are a major cause of the nation's inflation, which has been worsening in recent months.

A cut in the deficit of $3 billion to $5 billion is considered important for psychological reasons because it would reduce the 1979 deficit below that of 1978, which is now projected at $53 billion.

With the economy in its fourth year of recovery after the 1974 recession, economists term as worrisome a deficit larger in 1979 than in 1978.

"They want it to be smaller. I wouldn't be surprised if the administration did not oppose another reduction in the tax cut to get it there," said one administration source, who did not want to be identified.

Chairman G. William Miller of the Federal Reserve Board has repeatedly urged the administration to reduce the 1979 deficit to below $50 billion. He has said the administration needs to reduce the deficit to help control inflation.

Miller also said last week that even though the administration has trimmed the proposed tax cut once, from $25 billion to $19.4 billion, any tax cut at all may be inappropriate in the current situation.

Price statistics last week showed inflation has been running at above 10 percent in the past few months. Economists both in and out of government are beginning to worry that a new recession may be inevitable as early as next year if inflation isn't brought under better control.

The administration source, who predicted Carter may agree to yet a smaller tax reduction, said that may be the only way to reduce the deficit because it will be difficult to reduce actual spending for the 1979 fiscal year, which begins on Oct. 1.

Rather than formally announcing another reduction in the proposed cut, this source predicted that the administration may quietly tell Congress that it would agree to the new cut and let Congress do the actual cutting.

It is unclear how Congress would react to that approach, but it is evident there is general sympathy on Capitol Hill for holding down the deficit and reducing tax cuts.

But the source said Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal and James T. McIntyre, director of the Office of Management and Budget, are looking for ways to reduce 1979 spending without additional trimming of the tax cut.

Children's Television Monitor Group Raps Violence, Commercials

By JOAN HANAUER

NEW YORK (UPI) — When the younger set of this television generation isn't being frightened by close encounters with everything from alligators to vats of boiling oil, they are threatened with cavities and other sugar-coated woes.

A report prepared for Action for Children's Television, called ACT for short, warns that 20 percent of weekend drama and 32 percent of afterschool programs could be classified as "saturated" with violence.

The report was conducted by Dr. F. Earle Barcus of Boston University's School of Public Communications. Titled "Commercial Children's Television on Weekends and Weekday Afternoons, it analyzes weekend children's programming and advertising last October on the three Boston network affiliate and two independent stations, and 3-6 p.m., programming and advertising on 10 independent stations throughout the country.

Violence was not the target of this report, however. Instead it took aim at commercials.

The National Association of Broadcasters Code sets up standards of 9½ minutes of nonbroadcast material (which mostly means commercials) per hour of children's programming on weekends, and 12 minutes per hour on weekdays.

The ACT report found that on the 61 hours of children's television it monitored, these limits on the amount of permissible nonprogram material were exceeded in about half of the one-hour segments involved.

It will come as a surprise to no one who has followed ACT's interest in promoting a ban on advertising aimed at children that the study has been submitted to the FCC.

The report states "toys, cereals and candies accounted for nearly 90 percent of the weekend advertising" and 68 percent of the weekday commercials. The report continues by noting that of all the foods advertised to children, "two-thirds were for highly sugared products." Sugared cereals led the list, followed by candy.

Mothers, guess what? There were no ads at all for fruits or vegetables and only 4 percent of the food commercials touted bread, meat, juice or milk products.

Now the man who will advertise broccoli to the children of America with the same enticing salesmanship that currently is used for cereals, which have names like Count Chocula, will be performing a real service to everyone in this country except its dentists.

Braves Due To Bypass MSU Star Gibson

NEW YORK (AP) — "Why play ball? It is truly the best of all possible worlds."

So says a promotional pamphlet distributed by major league baseball, which is fighting a constant battle against football and basketball for America's blue chip athletes.

Many of these scholastic sportsmen were to be selected today in the annual summer free agent baseball draft. And if they're talented enough, some other sport will also court them, driving up their financial value.

One such player is Kirk Gibson of Michigan State, who has scouts from two sports drooling for his services. A record-setting flanker at MSU, Gibson has avoided serious injury in three varsity seasons and has caught a school record 17 touchdown passes.

At 6-foot-2, 220 pounds with blazing 4.3 speed for the 40-yard dash, Gibson is the fastest man on the football team. He's also the fastest player and hardest hitter on the baseball team, a squad he joined as a junior this past season.

"If I had to compare him with anybody, he's like Mickey Mantle," said Paul Snyder, the Atlanta Braves' minor league administrator. "You don't see that combination of speed and power very often."

The Braves, who had the leadoff pick in today's draft, would love to see Gibson hitting 500-foot home runs and beating out choppers to second base for them, but were expected to pass on this top prospect.

"One of our scouts talked to him and he said he liked baseball, but he loves football, and that's the difference," said Snyder.

Bob Fontaine, once San Diego's scouting chief and now the team's general manager, knows about drafting all-around athletes. He made Dave Winfield the Padres' first selection in June five years ago. Winfield, from the University of Minnesota, was drafted by pro football, basketball and baseball, but he preferred the national pasttime.

"The thing that baseball always has to sell is that athletes normally sustain careers longer in baseball than in some of the other sports," Fontaine said. "Baseball requires skills that must be perfected over time. But once the athlete attains that skill, he keeps it longer.

"Baseball has a different kind of contact than football. Injuries are not generally as serious. We have a lot of fine players well beyond 35 and I don't think you'll see that as readily in the other sports."

But, Fontaine pointed out, "it's awful hard to talk a fellow into going to the minors."

The colleges don't serve as proving grounds for the major leagues, as they do in basketball and football. Because the Padres were inexperienced, Winfield went directly to the major leagues and has stayed there. But he is the rare exception and not the rule."

"I definitely want to play my senior year in football for Michigan State," said Gibson, who played in 48 games, slugging 16 homers, driving in 52 runs and batting .390. He also swiped 21 bases in 22 attempts.

"If I get drafted, I will consider that opportunity when the time comes," he said. "There's no way I'm gonna spend four or five years in the minors."

The scouts and coaches who watched the center fielder run and hit with power don't think his offensive game would require much work, although they say his defense needs some refinement.

"Gibson stands out. The rest are a box entry," said Snyder, who was expected to pick either Bob Horner, a slugging infielder at Arizona State; Hubie Brooks, a hard-hitting shortstop at Arizona State or Rod Boxberger, a right-handed pitcher from Southern California.

"I feel he's probably the best physical prospect I've ever seen," said Frank Pellerin, longtime assistant baseball coach at Michigan State. "He's a bigger version of (Michigan State alum) Steve Garvey. He can run as fast as anybody we've ever had. He hits ground balls to second base and beats them out.

"And he hits balls out of sight. He hit several balls over 500 feet this season. He has as much or more power than (Ohio State alum) Frank Howard.

"Howard didn't hit the ball as hard as Kirk does. When Kirk hits a baseball, it takes off like a golf ball."

Auburn Cage Coach Dies In Fire

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — Paul Lambert, Auburn University's new head basketball coach, died in a fire early today that destroyed a section of the Airport Holiday Inn, fire officials said.

Fire Chief George Lamb said Lambert, 43, was found on the floor of his room face down.

"It looked like he had attempted to find his way out, apparently groping his way through heavy smoke," Lamb said.

Lambert, former basketball coach at Southern Illinois, was named Auburn coach in April. His wife and two daughters were to have moved to Auburn from Carbondale, Ill., this week.

He was in Columbus for a two-day clinic for all city high school and junior high coaches. Accompanying him from Auburn were assistant coaches Herbert Greene and Herman Williams.

Authorities said several guests and motel personnel were treated for minor burns and smoke inhalation.

Cause of the blaze was not immediately disclosed by fire officials, who said the fire apparently started two or three rooms from where Lambert was staying.

Soviet 'Queen' Eyes Coaching

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

Perhaps she lacks the pixie qualities that made Olga Korbut and Nadia Comaneci the darlings of the gymnastics world, but Ludmila Tourischeva isn't jealous. "I have the medals," she says with a touch of pride.

Indeed, she does. In 13 years of competition, Miss Tourischeva accumulated upwards of 130 medals, and about half of them are gold, certifying her as one of the best practitioners of her very difficult art. If Olga and Nadia were the princesses of Olympic gymnasts, then Ludmila was the queen.

LUDMILA TOURISCHEVA
. . .Russian Gymnastic Queen

She owns nine Olympic medals, four of them gold. There will, however, be no more metal for the graceful Soviet star.

"Everything in the world has a beginning and an end," she says. For Ludmila, the end was in the 1976 Games at Montreal, her final competition. "It is important to stop at the right time."

So now, Miss Tourischeva's Olympic involvement will be in coaching the Soviet national team which is preparing for the 1980 Games at Moscow. And, she promises, it will be a very good squad. That, of course, is no surprise. The Russians have won the women's gymnastics team gold in every Olympics since 1952.

"It is traditional with us," says Ludmila. "Any new generation tries to achieve more than its predecessors to maintain the reputation. All of the girls on the national team are really talented and they have the qualities to grow as good as Olga or I was."

In fact, the Soviet gymnasts she works with are so good, they have kept Miss Tourischeva on the sidelines, even during workouts.

"I rarely work with them," she says. "They don't need me to. They are smart enough to understand my instructions without demonstrations."

But an athlete can not turn off the competitive juices overnight. And, although she stays off the mats and uneven parallel bars where she made her name, Ludmila does exercise everyday. Like so many Americans, she is into running. And she must run fast because her jogging partner is her husband of seven months, Soviet Olympic sprinter Valeri Borzov.

Borzov is the only European ever to win the 100 and 200-meter sprints in the same Olympics and he is looking forward to the 1980 Games at Moscow. So is Ludmila, who remembers the tension of competing, especially at the Games.

"Just making the team is a great honor," she says. "Winning a medal — even one — is very difficult. I remember every competition. Every one of them was difficult. You are not nervous, but there is a certain anxiety that you feel."

As the gymnast waits to start her performance, her brain is racing.

"You are always thinking ahead, worried about the basic elements of the program you must execute. And once you start, you are always checking yourself that everything is being done in the proper sequence. Your mind is operating a millisecond ahead of your body."

Miss Tourischeva is in this country to promote the sale of Olympic stamps commemorating each of the sports on the agenda of the XXII Olympiad at Moscow, July 19-Aug. 3, 1980.

The stamp program to defray costs continues a tradition started at the first modern Olympiad in 1896 at Athens.

The 1980 Games will be Ludmila's fourth Olympiad and she believes it will be one of the most memorable in history.

"Many persons in the Soviet Union hoped the 1976 Games would be held in our country," she says. "We were upset when the Games were awarded to Montreal. Now, all of us are anxious to host the 1980 Games."

She believes that the Moscow Games will not encounter the financial difficulties that have plagued recent Olympics.

"We will be better organized. In Montreal, the village and the main Olympic stadium were constructed just for the Games. I remember marching in the opening ceremonies and seeing the cranes still standing outside the stadium, finishing the construction. That will not happen in Moscow. Our facilities are already in place."

Scotland Sends Ace Johnston Back Home

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Scotland's soccer team has saved itself from possible disqualification from the World Cup by sending home Willie Johnston, the star who took forbidden pep pills.

"I don't think we could take any action against Scotland now, since the Scottish football association itself has punished the player," said Helmut Kaeser, secretary general of the International Soccer Federation (FIFA).

"It was an exemplary decision by Scotland, and the most logical that we could have hoped for."

Johnston was ordered home Monday and told he would never be allowed to play for Scotland again. He admitted taking two pills before his team lost to Peru 3-1 in Group 4 of the tournament at Cordoba last Saturday.

Doctors had reported traces of fencafamina, a forbidden drug, in a urine sample taken from Johnston after the match. The World Cup organizing committee had the power to disqualify Scotland. But the Scots jumped in quickly, conducted their own investigation and dismissed Johnston.

Kaeser said that if Scotland had defeated Peru, and the doping offense had been proven, Peru would have been awarded the game.

"Scotland has taken the right measures against a player who could have done much harm to his team," Kaeser said.

The doping scandal occurred after each of the 16 teams had completed one game. Already two Hungarian players had been ordered off the field at the end of a savage match against Argentina.

Miller Chuckles Over 'Get Tough' Line

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

Baseball's fragile labor peace shuddered ever so slightly last week when George Steinbrenner, owner of the New York Yankees, rattled a few sabers at the Major League Players Association and its executive director, Marvin Miller.

Analysis

Speaking at a convention of Associated Press sports editors in Dallas, Steinbrenner recalled the negotiations with the players two years ago. "We were like David without a sling shot," he said. "Marvin Miller took, took, took. I have a lot of respect for Miller. He is a brilliant man. But next year we will meet him head on. He will find himself in the toughest negotiations he's ever seen. This time he'll know he's been in a ball game."

Miller chuckled over Steinbrenner's tough line, suggesting as William Shakespeare's Macbeth once did of another matter, that it was sound and fury, signifying nothing.

"I thought he made three points, or tried to," said Miller. "And I think he was wrong on all three. He called me brilliant. I think that's wrong. He said the negotiations were one-sided. I think anybody who analyzes the agreement would find him in error there, too. Our bargaining was in good faith and there was give and take in the settlement which was in the best interests of all parties."

And what was Steinbrenner's third mistake?

"I've been in industrial relations for 35 years," Miller noted. "In basic steel, there were negotiations in 1952, 1955, 1959, when we had a 116-day work stoppage, and 1965. Now, that was tough."

There was some interest in why Steinbrenner would assume a hard management line on talks that still are in the far-off future. The current contract does not expire until December 1979.

"He's done this before," said Miller. "I think he's misguided on a couple of scores. I think some owners who talk this way are unable to take a realistic look at where they are. They are locked into terrible predictions of doom, made when the last contract was signed, which just have not come true."

Miller likes to cite the very same facts that baseball trumpets so proudly — attendance records, lucrative radio-television income, competitive balance. The position, of course, is mutual. Commissioner Bowie Kuhn's office has just published an informative pamphlet designed to lure multisport athletes to baseball. Included is a comprehensive section on the financial benefits of playing the game, including a healthy pension program. Those are benefits won at the bargaining table.

"They don't seem to understand," Miller continued. "The game is as prosperous today as it ever has been. Total salaries represent 26 per cent of baseball's revenues. That's one of the smallest percentages of any industry in our country and, in fact, it is a smaller percentage than it was 50 years ago."

Apparently, the arrow that sticks deepest in management's craw from the last settlement is the free agent escape hatch. Those seven-figure contracts sting but don't forget, Miller hasn't negotiated any of them. The owners have. And Steinbrenner has been one of the most active in that area.

"Throughout our talks they presented a number of problems that free agency would create," recalled Miller. "They said hundreds of players would be floating around. I said that was bunk. They said players would all go to the glamour cities. I said that was also bunk. They said competitive balance would be affected. And I said that was bunk, too."

Miller turned out to be right on all three counts, and, in fact, on a fourth as well.

"They also said it would cost them more money and I said, 'Yes, it will,'" he recalled. "I never tried to kid anybody. If you go from a straight monopoly to a more free market, there obviously will be a significant rise in salary levels. But you must remember this. Employers don't pay uneconomic salaries."

Miller termed Steinbrenner's remarks destructive but not discouraging.

The ball is back in your court, George.

Seaver Wins Again; Reds Nudge Cards

By The Associated Press

Tom's terrific again.

"I think he's the old Seaver — with improvement," says Cincinnati pitching coach Larry Sheppard of Tom Seaver. "He's been coming on in the last five or six ballgames. He's just been fantastic."

The return to form of the Cincinnati ace has been marked by a five-game winning streak, including Monday night's six-hit, 2-1 beauty over the St. Louis Cardinals.

That improved Seaver's record to 6-4 after a horrendous start that took him until May 6 to gain his first victory.

"My timing was not very good," noted Seaver, ever the perfectionist. "Up until the last two innings, I was struggling."

But still, he found some of the old magic in his performance.

"When I had to make good pitches, I made good pitches," he said. "I was very strong in the last two innings. When you get close in a one-run game, that's when you get up."

The classy right-hander finished in style, striking out five of the last six batters.

"After the first six innings," said Cardinal Manager Ken Boyer, "Seaver was just saying, 'If you can hit my fastball, hit it!'"

While Seaver continued to win, the Los Angeles Dodgers were going in an entirely different direction. The defending National League champions lost their fifth straight game, a 9-8 decision to the New York Mets.

The defeat was especially galling for the Dodgers, since they had the Mets by 8-2 at one time. The loss kept them 5½ games behind front-running San Francisco in the NL West.

"We're not down too much," said third baseman Ron Cey. "The important thing is to get this thing turned around and start winning. We are in a three-team race now and have to be concerned about both San Francisco and Cincinnati. The way things happened tonight is typical of the way things have been happening all year."

The Giants held onto first place by a half-game over the Reds after a 4-3 loss to the Philadelphia Phillies. In other National League games, the Chicago Cubs nipped the Houston Astros 2-1; the Atlanta Braves stopped the Pittsburgh Pirates 8-4 and the Montreal Expos beat the San Diego Padres 4-3.

Seaver's victory was achieved with the help of Dan Driessen's RBI single in the eighth inning off Cardinal right-hander Bob Forsch. The Cardinals' run against Seaver was unearned.

During his current string of triumphs, the veteran hurler has permitted only five earned runs in 40 2-3 innings. Monday night, Seaver fanned eight and walked three.

Mets 9, Dodgers 8

Bill Russell's wild throw on Doug Flynn's grounder with two outs in the ninth inning enabled Tim Foli to score the winning run as New York beat Los Angeles.

The Mets scored three times in the ninth off the third Dodger pitcher, loser Terry Forster. Willie Montanez doubled with one out and John Stearns walked with two outs. Both scored when Foli smashed a double down the left-field line and Foli came around when Russell threw the ball away.

Phillies 4, Giants 3

Rookie Jim Morrison hit a two-run homer in the eighth inning and Bob Boone followed with a pinch-hit shot to rout Vida Blue and give Philadelphia its victory over San Francisco.

Blue had pitched a two-hitter until the eighth and led 2-1 in the nationally televised game before the Phillies scored three runs with no out and assumed a 4-2 lead en route to their fourth straight triumph.

Cubs 2, Astros 1

Ivan DeJesus' bases-loaded single in the ninth inning scored Steve Ontiveros from third base as Chicago beat Houston.

DeJesus' hit came off reliever Joe Sambito after home plate umpire Dutch Rennert had ejected starter Mark Lemongello from the game for arguing a fourth ball call.

Braves 8, Pirates 4

Rookie catcher Dale Murphy broke a tie in the ninth with a grand slam home run to boost Atlanta over Pittsburgh. Murphy's drive into the left field seats, his third homer this season, came with none out off reliever Kent Tekulve.

Atlanta had loaded the bases on a leadoff single by Bob Beall, a ground-rule double by Jeff Burroughs that bounced over the center field wall and an intentional walk to Gary Matthews.

Expos 4, Padres 3

Andre Dawson hit a two-run homer in the second inning and later scored the go-ahead run in the seventh to pace Montreal over San Diego. Winner Rudy May scattered nine hits before needing last-inning relief help from Mike Garman.

With the score tied at 2-2, Dawson was hit by an Eric Rasmussen pitch leading off the seventh. He then stole second and scored two outs later when Dave Cash singled. The Expos then scored the eventual winning run on Ellis Valentine's RBI double in the eighth.

Waits Loses Another Six-Hitter

By The Associated Press

The pitching fraternity is supposed to be a close-knit group, with even opposing hurlers feeling sympathy for counterparts who are performing well but have little to show for it.

But don't tell that to Steve Stone of the Chicago White Sox.

"I don't have a drop of sympathy," said Stone after he outdueled Rick Waits of Cleveland in Chicago's 2-0 victory over the Indians Monday night. Waits has lost his last four starts although he has hurled six-hitters in three of them, including Monday's loss to Stone, who surrendered just three singles.

"I've lost my share of well-pitched games, too, so I can't feel for what happened to him."

Chicago Manager Bob Lemon, a former star pitcher with the Cleveland Indians, was a bit kinder to Waits.

"They both had command of their stuff, they're good breaking ball pitchers and they showed it tonight."

Stone, 6-3, struck out six and walked six and never allowed an Indian runner past second base as the White Sox won for the eighth time in the last nine games.

"I had pretty good stuff after the early innings," said Stone. "I struggled for awhile but suddenly it was there."

Waits was annoyed at giving up Bill Nahorodny's two-run double in the fourth inning.

"When I have stuff like that, I should throw a shutout," he noted. "The ball Nahorodny hit may have been a little up but it looked like he golfed it and it seemed to have overspin. Those are a little discouraging, but I'll just keep pitching and hope things turn around."

In other American League action, Oakland outlasted Boston 9-7, Seattle beat New York 7-3 and Baltimore took California 6-2 in 10 innings.

A's 9, Red Sox 7

Oakland built an 8-1 lead, then withstood Boston's furious rally behind homers by Jim Rice, Carlton Fisk and Butch Hobson before 36,463 fans on half-price night.

Wayne Gross contributed a double and two singles to a 13-hit attack for the A's while Rice, who had hit a homer in the last seven games, slammed his 19th, tops in the majors.

"It was great to see 36,000 people out here," said Gross. "Maybe they're starting to get interested in us. I know a lot of them were here because of the Red Sox but there's a lot of people who moved here from back east and you can't take away their roots."

Mariners 7, Yankees 3

Seattle broke a seven-game winless skein and handed the Yankees their sixth loss in seven games. Ruppert Jones and Juan Bernhardt had three hits apiece and Lee Stanton homered for Seattle, while New York's Paul Blair and Thurman Munson slammed home runs.

Orioles 6, Angels 2

Eddie Murray's tie-breaking homer in the 10th inning started a four-run uprising by the Orioles. A two-out error in the ninth inning by Billy Smith allowed California to tie the game.

Baltimore's Jim Palmer had his consecutive scoreless inning streak stopped at 30 when California scored in the third.

Texas Sport Notes

Hogs-'Horns

DALLAS (AP) — The Oct. 21 Arkansas-Texas football game will be televised once again, a spokesman for ABC television said Monday.

Donn Berrnstein, ABC's coordinator of college football, said that the 1978 contest between the Razaorbacks and Longhorns would be televised, but that no decision had been reached as to whether it would be shown nationally or regionally.

"Arkansas is the hottest team in the country for TV purposes," Berrnstein said during the American Football Coaches Association golf tournament. He cited Arkansas' Orange Bowl upset of Oklahoma, its returning nucleus and the charisma of coach Lou Holtz as reasons for the Hogs' TV pulling power.

The Razorbacks are scheduled to play Texas at Austin. Kickoff is set for 2 p.m.

Lemongello

CHICAGO (AP) — Mark Lemongello was furious and at first insisted "I'd better not say anything or I might never play baseball again."

The 22-year-old Houston right-hander had been ejected from the game Monday by umpire Dutch Rennert for questioning a fourth-ball call to Gene Clines which loaded the bases in the ninth inning.

After Rennert gave Lemongello the thumb, Joe Sambito came in from the bullpen and yielded a run-scoring single to Ivan DeJesus which gave the Chicago Cubs a 2-1 victory over the Astros.

"He said he had warned me previously but he never said anything to me," fumed Lemongello. "All I did was take three steps off the mound and he threw me out. All I was going to do was ask him where the pitch was.

"I ask one question in a crucial situation and he throws me out of the game," said Lemongello. "I've never been kicked out of a game before. I know they're going to miss a call now and then but are they that great that you can't even question them?"

Rennert, very calmly, explained, "The minute he charged off the mound was when he got ejected. It's automatic. It's in the rules. He had asked me about pitches earlier and I had signaled to him where they were. All pitchers do that.

"But when he shot off the mound, that was it," said Rennert. "he didn't have to say anything and if he had, I couldn't hear him over the roar of the crowd. But you can pretty well figure out what he was saying even if you have to be a lip-reader."

Houston Manager Bill Virdon also was calm and said, "I think he (Rennert) missed the pitch. But the rules say you can't argue over a ball or strike call whether you are the pitcher, the batter or the manager.

"I think Mark might have been asking him where the pitch was but the way he went about it was wrong," added Virdon. "It was a good game and it will bring the people back, I guess."

The Astros scored a run in the third on a double by Art Howe and a single by Terry Puhl and the Cubs tied it in the fifth when Manny Trillo singled for the first hit off Lemongello, went to second on a sacrifice and socred on Dave Rader's single.

Steve Ontiveros opened the Cub ninth with a single and took second on a sacrifice. Joe Wallis was given an intentional walk before Clines ran the count to 3-2 and took a walk on the questionable fourth ball to set the stage for DeJesus' winning blow.

It was a bit of deja vu for DeJesus, who also came up in the seventh inning with the bases loaded and one out only to hit into a double play.

"Everytime you come up it's a new time at bat," said DeJesus. "You can't worry about what you did before."

The victory was the fouth straight for the first-place Cubs, who now have won 12 of their last 15 games and nine in a row at home. They close their Houston series today when they send Dave Roberts, 2-0, against Joaquin Andujar, 3-2.

Texas League

By The Associated Press

A wild throw with the bases loaded by Jackson first baseman Keno Perry ended a 13-inning Texas League marathon at Midland Monday night as the Cubs dropped the Mets 4-3.

In the only other league contest, San Antonio knocked off Shreveport 6-2.

El Paso was rained out against Tulsa, and Arkansas-Amarillo suffered the same fate.

Perry threw wildly on a ground ball by Mike Gatlin to give Larry Groover his second win against no losses. Dan Smith was the loser and dropped to 0-2.

Steve Macko and Eric Grandy each chipped in three hits for the Cubs.

Micky Hatcher's three hits, including a first-inning double, paced San Antonio's winning attack. Ted Power struck out eight and limited Shreveport to six hits, but needed some ninth-inning help from Mike Williams. Power upped his season record to 3-2 while loser Rafael Vasquez fell to 7-3.

Lacrosse

DALLAS (AP) — Texas could become the next notch in the nation's Lacrosse Belt if some enthusiastic players, many of them transplanted easterners, have their way.

But tonight the national champions from John Hopkins University will take on the best of region in a test of just how far the Southwest has come.

The Johns Hopkins stickmen take on a Southwest Lacrosse Association all-star team in Ownby Stadium.

The all-star squad's first practice was two days ago.

"We've got a chance for sure. We've got some good players out here," said Russ Bolling of the Dallas club team.

The former Army player added, "Certainly we're the decided underdog."

Organizers of the event don't expect a crowd of Super Bowl size.

"If we get 2,000, we're all right. We'll make all expenses and give the American Heart Associaton a nice check," said Don Newbury, a former Penn State lacrosse player.

Newbury, 59, has spent his spare time for the past six years promoting the sport here.

"I'm the oldest goalie in the world, I guess. They're talking about having a public burning of my wooden stick."

He talks about crowd size at a league game as being 45 players and 30,000 no-shows.

Members of the southwest league are strictly amateurs. Many play only when their jobs and professional schedules permit.

They foot their own bills for equipment and travel expenses.

"This is the oldest North American competitive sport," Newbury explained. Indians played it, and French Jesuits named it.

The modern sport looks something like hockey on a soccer field, using a ball that is slightly smaller than a tennis ball. Each player on the ten-man team can handle the ball only in the webbing at the end of his lacrosse stick.

"It's a rough sport," Newbury said.

"I don't know what our percentage of injuries are, but they're the usual. Lacrosse players in general don't seem to mind the licks."

Lacrosse enthusiasts are most often found on the East Coast. Popularity has grown in the Midwest.

"All those little schools in Ohio are really playing good ball," Newbury said. "Then there's a void all the way out to Arizona.

"That's our aim is to make it grow and close this gap in the middle of the country."

Bolling will hold the association's first lacrosse clinic this summer in Dallas, hoping to interest high school and community college students.

Few of the league's players are native Texans. "I'd say about 80 percent of the teams are transients from the East," Newbury said.

"Texas A&M has very few transients. It's almost 80 per cent Texas people. Texas (the university) has a lot of purebreds too."

Other college teams in the 13-team association are from Texas Tech, Baylor, Houston, Louisiana State, Tulane and Southern Methodist. Club teams are entered from Dallas, Houston, Austin, San Antonio and New Orleans.

Kegler Meet Set

The fourth annual Senior Invitational Bowling Tournament will be held Saturday and Sunday at Imperial Lanes.

The meet, which has an entry fee of $4.50 per event, is limited to those city keglers 55 years of age and older.

The final deadline for entering is Sunday at 4 p.m. The meet is sanctioned by both ABC and WIBC. For futher information, contact Hugo Hildebrand at 744-5682.

LILLISTON ROLLING CULTIVATOR
- cultivates at speeds up to 10 mph — pre-emerge to tool bar height.
- mulches tough crusts and aerates the soil — also helps to retain moisture.
- incorporates pre-emerge or post-emerge chemicals — well into the soil.
- builds beds, bars off, lays by — won't harm tender crop root systems.

Panel Seeks Change In Court Posts

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Judicial Planning Committee has voted unanimously to recommend to the 1979 Legislature that the chief justice of the Texas Supreme Court make appointments of administrative judges in the state's nine judicial districts.

Such appointments are now made by the governor. And according to Presiding Judge Clarence Guittard of the Dallas Court of Civil Appeals, who chaired a committee task force on ways to streamline judicial administration, the "current governor... is not receptive to this proposal."

"Maybe the next governor will be," Guittard told a meeting of the Judicial Planning Committee. Gov. Dolph Briscoe leaves office in January.

In presenting the task force report, Guittard said allowing the chief justice of the Supreme Court, now Joe Greenhill, to appoint administrative judges "would enchance the administrative structure of the Texas court system."

Greenhill is not necessarily lobbying for such authority, but voted for the recommendation.

Other recommendations for the Legislature, as presented by Guittard and his task force, and adopted by the committee, are:

- The state's nine administrative judges need to form their own council to better handle the court caseload;
- The Supreme Court needs to have the power to develop rules for court administration; and
- More statewide uniformity is needed in preparing court budgets for submission to the legislature. The committee agreed such budget preparation at the local, appellate and state levels should be coordinated by the Office of Court Administration.

Guittard said it was generally agreed that the nine judicial districts do not need any boundary re-alignments.
