Midlanders to pay higher insurance rates

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Despite industry requests for more, the State Board of Insurance today approved a $69 million, 8.6-percent, property insurance increase, with Midland-area homeowners paying 11.2 percent greater premiums.

Statewide premiums for renters' insurance would drop 10.8 percent, and Midland-area premiums would decline 19.8 percent. The new rates will affect all policies written after March 1, 1987.

The board also approved an industry-sponsored plan that would increase the cost of policies with a $250 deductible and reduce premiums for policies where the deductible equals 1-percent of the insured value. Rick Gentry, spokesman for an industry advisory group to the board, said the industry will not reap a benefit from that change.

"The cost of that ($250 deductible) has not been adjusted in about 10 years," Gentry said. "It was too cheap."

In Midland, policies for a $60,000 brick veneer home with the 1-percent ($600) deductible, would increase from $444 to $481. The same policy with the $250 deductible would increase from $493 to $558. Homeowners who wish to switch from the $250 deductible to the 1-percent policy would see a 2.4 percent savings in their premiums.

Premiums for a $100,000 brick veneer home would increase from $670 to $725 for the 1-percent ($1,000) deductible, from $744 to $906 for the $250 deductible and drop 2.6 percent for those who switch to the 1-percent deductible.

Individual insurance companies may deviate from the set rates by plus or minus 25 percent, with the board's approval.

The board imposed the larger increases in West Texas because of greater weather-related losses there than in other areas of the state. The largest 1985 weather-related loss in Texas came when the May tornado in Lubbock caused at least $57.3 million in wind and hail damage.

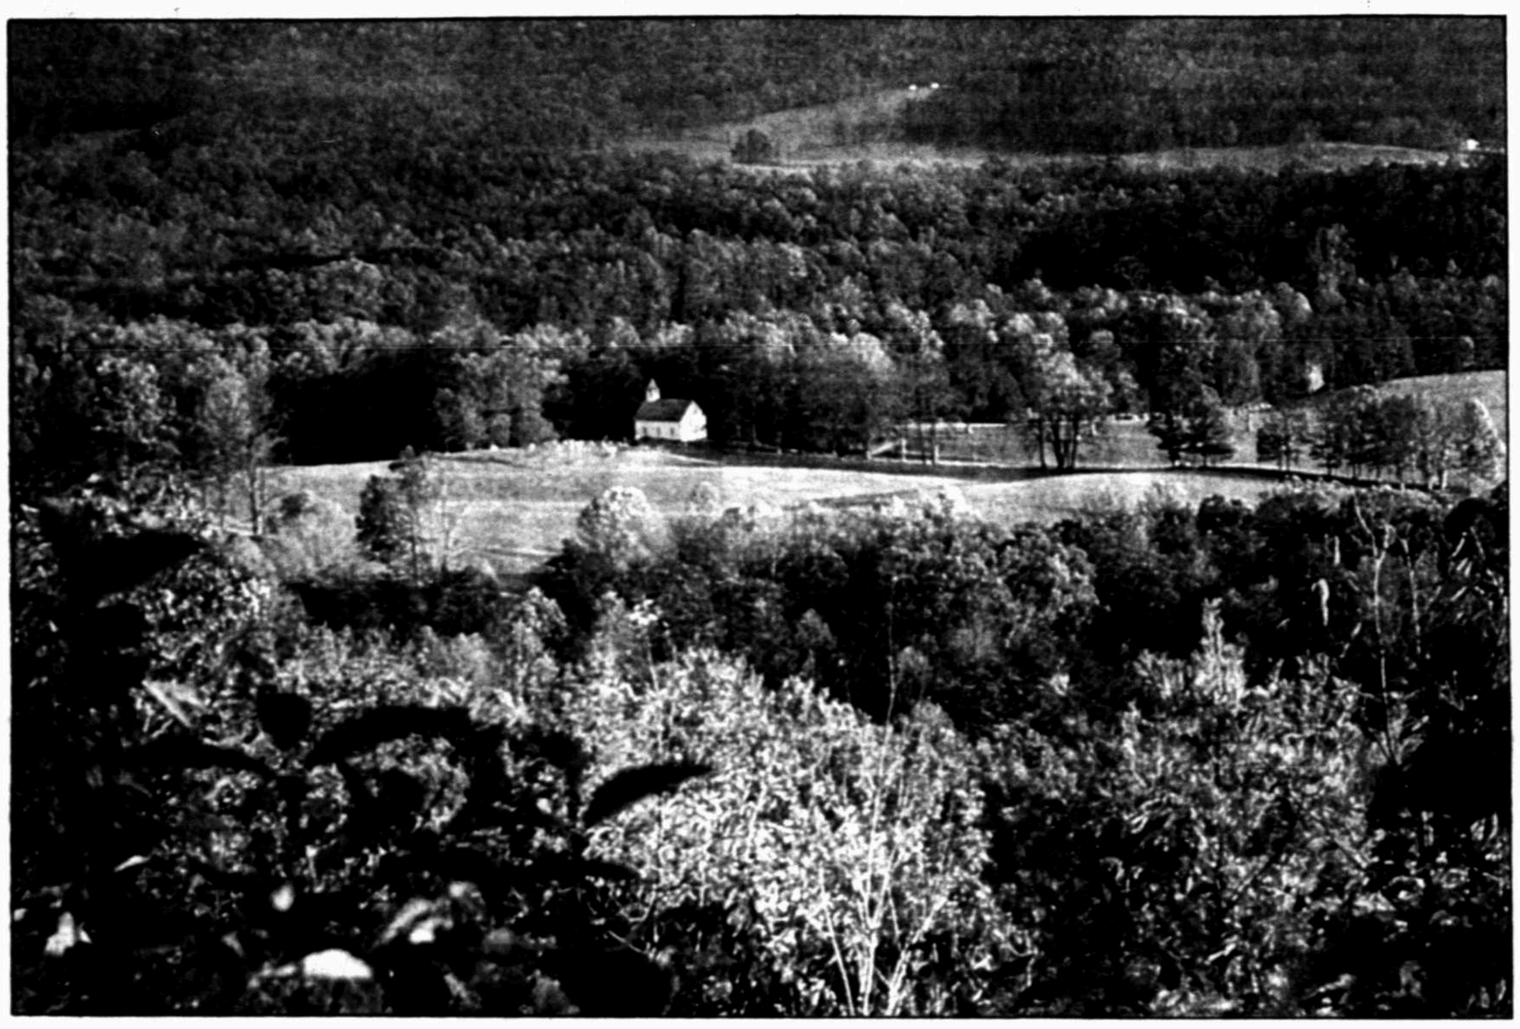

The insurance industry had requested a 16.9-percent statewide increase during July hearings on property insurance, including a 22.5 percent hike in the Midland area. The state board agreed with its staff proposal Tuesday when it ordered the 8.6-percent increase.

The main difference between the staff and industry proposals came over a 5-percent target for profit that the industry requested. As it has in recent years, the board rejected that request.

"We have a long-standing, philosophical and economic difference with the state board concerning the 5-percent profit and contingency factor," Gentry said. "That is a target, it's not a guarantee."

Gentry could not say how the smaller increase would affect the approximately 930 firms selling property insurance in Texas. "Obviously we wanted what we wanted."

Other portions of the board's order Tuesday would increase farm and ranch owners' property insurance 11.8 percent, 12.9 percent in the Midland area. Extra fire insurance for farms would drop 11.3 percent all across the state and extended coverage would increase slightly more than 5 percent.

Eagle holders agree to cash settlement

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A compromise cash settlement has been reached in the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.'s suit against Eagle Properties over the 24-story First National Bank Building and other FNB property.

The suit was filed in February 1984 — four months after the First National Bank of Midland (FNB-Midland) failed on Oct. 14, 1983. On that day, a Friday, the FDIC took over bank, Texas's largest independent bank which at its peak in the early 1980s had assets of about $1.5-billion and 1,200 employees. The bank was founded in 1890.

FNB had sold the building and other property to the seven Eagle Properties partners for $75-million in late December 1982 in a sale-lease-back transaction to reflect earnings for the ailing energy bank. The bank had suffered losses due to soured energy loans, dropping oil prices and diminishing deposits.

"It's just a cash settlement — cash payment by the defendants (Eagle Properties) to the FDIC," said FDIC lawyer John Gilliam of Dallas. The two-week trial was tried before U.S. District Court Judge Lucius D. Bunton from Feb. 26 through March 7, 1985. In his Sept. 25, 1985, initial judgment and in his corrected judgment seven months later, Bunton had ruled in favor of the FDIC in ordering the Eagle partners to pay FDIC $25-million. The judge ruled that the Eagle partners "were not fraudulently induced into this transaction." Eagle partners claimed that they were defrauded into buying the property.

Harvard's oil import study favors $10-a-barrel tariff

BOSTON (AP) — U.S. oil imports average 5 million barrels a day, the highest level since 1981, according to a Harvard University study released Monday that called for a $10-a-barrel tariff to reverse the trend.

The rising dependence on imported fuel poses a renewed threat to the country's energy and national security, asserted the study, by Harry G. Broadman and William W. Hogan, of Harvard's Energy and Environmental Policy Center.

"Rather than advocating protectionism for the U.S. oil industry, what we are calling for is protection for the consumers against future oil shocks," a university statement quoted the Harvard scholars as saying.

The price paid for foreign petroleum products does not accurately reflect the cost of dependence on insecure supplies, they wrote. "Our proposed (tariff) fee should be thought of as an insurance policy against the risks of future disruptions from the Middle East."

Lower consumer prices have triggered an increase in consumption and decrease in domestic consumption, the study said. A large, fixed fee on imports, matched by price rises posted by domestic producers, would reverse the trends in consumption and domestic production, it argued.

Family 'baffled' about disappearance

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

The parents of a 24-year-old Midland woman missing for more than a week Monday made an urgent appeal to the public for information about the case as police continue their investigation.

Al Willis, 41, and his wife Juanita, 47, said they have no idea what happened to their daughter, June Gilkerson, nor do they know why.

"No, nothing really at all," Willis, stepfather of the woman, said at Midland police headquarters. "We've talked to some of her friends in North Carolina, and no one has talked to her. None of her friends here have talked to her."

This morning, Midland police, aided by a helicopter from the Midland County Sheriff's office, organized a search for the woman in the northwest part of the city, near North Holiday Hill Road. Police would say little about the reason for the search, only that "some information indicated there might be something there."

Ms. Gilkerson's mother said she last talked to her daughter two days before she disappeared, and she said there was nothing unusual about the conversation.

The woman's parents, from Winston-Salem, N.C., have been in Midland for a week awaiting word of their daughter.

She was reported missing 9:10 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 8, by her husband, Ronald. Gilkerson told police his wife left their residence at 9 a.m. Saturday, and said she was going to the Midland Restitution Center, 2305 S. Belmont, where she was a part-time volunteer. She never arrived, employees there told police.

Her car, a 1986 Honda Civic, was found at the Best Western motel on Interstate 20. Her purse, car keys and a pair of sneakers were found in the car. Motel employees said the car had been there since 10:30 a.m. Saturday.

Police have said they suspect foul play in the disappearance.

The family of the woman is offering a $5,000 reward for information leading to her return.

Willis said June's husband, a geologist, is "very distraught, just like the rest of us," about the disappearance, but more than anything is baffled.

Police went to Michigan to follow up the only solid lead in the case. There, a 20-year-old probationer was administered a polygraph. Police said he may have talked to the woman the morning of her disappearance, but he passed the polygraph, which was admfnistered several times.

Despite that, Det. Capt. Billy Ray said police are still checking the man's alibi because of "certain discrepancies," and Ray said the man is expected to return to Midland today for more questioning.

Ray said he does not think the woman planned her own disappearance.

Eight firemen injured in bombing of Paris foreign ministry building

PARIS (AP) — An explosion during a basement fire injured eight firefighters today in a Foreign Ministry building in central Paris, the fire brigade reported.

The brigade said the explosion occurred after firefighters entered the building to battle a fire. They said the explosion may have been caused by bottled gas.

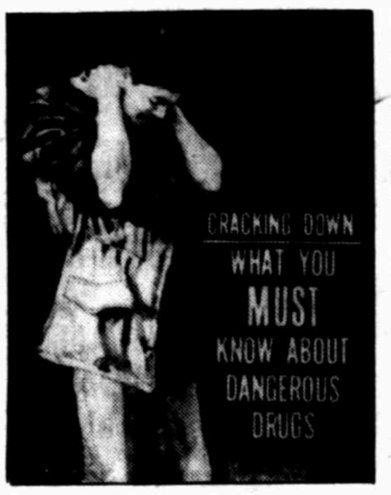

There was no immediate indication that the 3:45 p.m. (9:45 a.m. EST) explosion was other than accidental.

First reports from the fire brigade said many people were injured in the explosion and fire. But the brigade reported later that only the eight firefighters were hurt.

The Foreign Ministry switchboard confirmed there had been an explosion in a building near the main ministry offices, and that some of the ministry staff were evacuated.

The switchboard operator, who did not give her name, said she could not put any calls through to ministry information employees.

'Addictive personality' difficult to define

Seventh in a series

By JOHN A. BARBOUR
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Out of the clouds of crack smoke, through the marijuana haze, in the jitters of the speed user, behind the languid gaze of the heroin addict, there are haunting and persistent questions.

How can some individuals walk away from the habitual use of a drug? Why can some not?

Why do some people never have the urge even to try a drug?

Why do some feel compelled to at least experiment?

Why do some march on, expanding their use and knowledge of drugs? Why do some not?

Why do some people try drugs experimentally and then turn away from them forever? What makes them different?

In short, what is the addictive personality? It is a term used over and over, and never satisfactorily defined. But who is this personality? What are the chinks in his personal armor. No one knows for certain. There are only shadowy hints.

Some experts say it is possible to identify people, perhaps as early as the second grade, who have such emotional dysfunctions that they can be labeled at risk.

There probably are some obvious correlations in the socio-economic scale. One can spot those who have been hurt, abused, perhaps sexually. There are some who have a life-reality that they just can't stomach, some who give up on coping.

They may be people locked in a no-win life in a ghetto, or they may be the offspring of alcoholics or drug users, or they may be suffering in what they consider intolerable middle class family situations, or they may be adults locked in professional or marital or financial stress.

Then again they may not be.

No stereotype helps. Are drug kids dumb?

Dr. George Beschner of the National Institute on Drug Abuse has spent a lifetime talking to drug addicts young and old. He says, "Most of them are bright, could do well in school. Some were leaders and some were followers."

He thinks that in spite of the limitations of various studies, much has been learned of the causes and factors that predict teen-age drug use. In the book "Teen Drug Use," he says:

"It has been learned that no single factor explains adolescent drug use.... For this reason, people who really want to understand the problem must resist the tendency to look for THE cause, or THE underlying problem, or THE solution. The tendency for people to look for simple answers is understandable....

"In the real world, the challenge is not so simple. To understand adolescent drug abuse, one must understand adolescence as a time of experimentation and defiance. One also must understand the powerful influence of peer pressure during these formative years and the damaging effects of living in a family in which children are either improperly supervised, rejected, or abused. Many parents are poor role models who themselves use alcohol and/or drugs excessively."

It is also true that the earlier youngsters begin drug use, the more damaging it is for them. They spend more time in a kind of non-reality when they should be learning to cope with the real world.

Shultz reiterates stand against terrorism

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz says there is wide agreement within the Reagan administration on diplomatic overtures toward Iran but insisted the United States must reassert its stand of being "unequivocally against" terrorism.

His remarks came as:

— Former presidents Jimmy Carter and Gerald Ford said the aides to President Reagan responsible for the secret arms shipment deserve "some condemnation" for what the two men said amounts to paying ransom for American hostages held by pro-Iranian forces in Lebanon.

— A published poll said that most Americans did not believe Reagan's explanation last week of recent U.S. arms shipments to Iran and contacts with Tehran regarding American hostages in Lebanon.

Shultz, speaking to reporters after a speech Monday night at the University of Chicago, said the United States must work tirelessly for the return of six Americans missing in Lebanon, but the doctrine of not trading with terrorists should be reaffirmed.

"It's a mistake for governments to get in the business of trading something of genuine importance for hostages," Shultz said. "Why? Not because you don't want to get the hostages back. Not really because you care that much about a little do-re-me. But because if you do that, all you do is encouraging the taking of more hostages. You put more Americans at risk.

"So that's the theory. I think it's a perfectly good theory, and it's a good practice. And we intend to stick to it."

Shultz had his most extensive discussion with reporters to date of the once-secret White House operation in which weapons were provided to the Iranians.

Apparently referring to his own partial exclusion from the operation, which was carried out largely by the White House's National Security Council, Shultz said a secret operation prevents taking advantage of "checks and balances" and "expertise" within the U.S. government.

He defended the administration's stated goal of the arms shipments: establishing contacts with more moderate Iranian politicians.

"I think there is wide agreement that it's important for us, to the extent we can, to probe, to find out if there is an opportunity for a somewhat different approach by Iran to its neighborhood, to its people and to the West," he said.

At the White House, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said neither former president had been briefed about the Iranian operation.

Speakes reitereated that the White House will make information about U.S.-Iran contacts "available in detail to the Congress, in formal briefings and in testimony this week. We're not holding anything back."

He said he believes, but is not sure, that the information will include details on the weapons provided to Iran and the timing of the deliveries.

The NSC in June 1985 circulated a top-secret paper recommending that the United States cultivate closer ties with Iran by easing the arms embargo, according to unnamed sources cited in today's editions of The Washington Post. The document was based in part on a CIA analysis saying the Iranian government could be on the verge of collapse, the Post reported.

When the paper reached Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger, he wrote on it: "This is absurd," the newspaper said.

On Sunday, Shultz said he would oppose sending more arms to Iran but that he spoke for himself and not for the Reagan administration.

Earlier Monday, President Reagan said he had "absolutely no plans" to send more arms to Iran, although his spokesman said the president's authorization for the weapons shipments technically remains in effect.

Reagan also said he would not be firing Shultz or any other top foreign policy advisers as a result of public controversy over the covert operation.

Carter, Ford call dealings 'mistake'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former presidents Jimmy Carter and Gerald Ford said today that aides to President Reagan deserve "some condemnation" for secret dealings with Iran that, they said, amounted to paying ransom for Americans held hostage in Lebanon.

"The fact is that every terrorist in the world who reads a newspaper or listens to the radio knows that they've taken American hostages; we've paid them to get the hostages back. So this is a very serious mistake in how to handle a kidnapping or a hostage-taking," said Carter, whose presidency ended when American hostages were released from Iran in 1981 after 444 days of captivity.

Ford said that, while he endorsed efforts to resume relations with Iran, he "vigorously opposed" any arms sale because it undercuts U.S. attempts to aid moderate Arab nations and because it harms "our efforts to work with our friends in Europe on the problems of terrorism."

Carter and Ford were interviewed in a joint appearance from Atlanta on the NBC-TV "Today" show.

Reagan said last week he authorized his subordinates to open a channel with "moderate" elements in Iran and permitted a token shipment of "defensive weapons."

U.S. arms shipments to Iran have been banned by presidential order following a declaration that Iran was a sponsor of terrorism.

"Who initiated this (dealing with Iran), who carried it out, I think, deserves some condemnation by certain people in the Congress, by people on the outside because it hasn't been, in my opinion, run as well as it ought to have been," Ford said.

MISSING

"From the very first, I didn't think it was a voluntary thing — I didn't think it was something June would do."

Ms. Gilkerson, who has a degree in criminal justice, was volunteering at the Restitution Center, but her mother said she was about to be put on the payroll.

"She was very excited about being able to use her degree," Ms. Willis said. "She seemed to really enjoy what she was doing."

"We'd really appreciate anybody who has anything to say or who saw anything to call Crime Stoppers or the police department," Willis said. "We're just hoping someone might have seen something that will fit the pieces of the puzzle together."

"Whatever the puzzle is," Ms. Willis said.

Midland police have only two other unsolved missing person cases on the books, each involving young women, but like the Gilkerson case, each has confounded investigators who have been unable to solve them.

Christie Booth was 19 years old when she disappeared from the now defunct Dimensions nightspot on Airpark Road on Feb. 2, 1980. Det. Sgt. Ronnie Wilson said the woman was last seen about 11 p.m. by friends.

"No one saw her leave her table or leave the club," Wilson said. "She also left her purse and shoes, even though it was cold and icy that night.

Wilson said her car was found two days later, miles away, parked on the shoulder of the Rankin Highway. He said no evidence was found in the car.

Wilson, who was assigned the Booth case in 1984, said the last lead in the case was about six months ago, when he received a report of a found body. It was not Ms. Booth.

"We check on all incoming information like that; these cases are handled just like homicide cases, and are never closed," he said. "When you get one like this one that has been open this long, you have to suspect foul play."

Wilson said despite some similarities, there is no apparent connection between the Gilkerson and Booth disappearances. Det. Sgt. Ernie Wakefield agrees.

Wakefield he said he knows a lot about the 1985 disappearance of Carolee Andress, but not enough to close the case.

Ms. Andress, a Hawaiian, was working as a clerk at the 7-Eleven convenience store, 4401 W. Illinois Ave., when she disappeared Feb. 23, 1985.

Wakefield said the woman apparently left the store with a friend sometime after 2 a.m.

"The first call we received was a robbery in progress, because there was no clerk in the store and people were just going in there and taking things," Wakefield said. "Her smock was lying on the floor behind the cash register.

"We found a name and phone number in the smock, and called it. The man we called said he had been at the store earlier and had seen a white Ford pickup truck. He had the license number, and we put out a bulletin. A state trooper spotted the truck with that license number at 3:49 a.m. that morning

"Inside was a white male and a Hawaiian female, but she gave him (the trooper) a different last name."

Wakefield said the trooper later positively identified the woman in the truck as Ms. Andress.

"That was the last contact anyone has had with her; the man admitted going to the store, but claims he brought her back to Midland."

Wakefield said police are suspicious of the man's story, but that is as far as they can go.

DRUGS

When a youngster's bad habits come out of the shadows, either because parents recognize it, or because it surfaces in a declining school record, or the teen-ager just gets into trouble, all experts advise the parents to cope with their own fear and worry. They need to form a calm and deliberate plan, and to talk with their child when the child is not under the influence of whatever he or she has been using.

Marijuana abuse is not easily recognized by busy parents. The child may become aloof, may spend an inordinate amount of time away from home, may have a new circle of friends. At any rate, most of the telltale signs can be overlooked.

At the other end of the spectrum, crack or even cocaine can be seen by wide variations in mood, from euphoria to depression. The spectrum from high to low is what most drugs, but with cocaine there are physical signs from a persistent runny nose to anxiety and jitters.

When parents do decide that something has to be done, and they are certain of their facts, they should seek outside help. They should also try to enlist the cooperation of the user. Without it, the problems are almost insurmountable.

The study calculated that a tariff between $10 and $11 a barrel would bring imports down to a level that prevents over-reliance on imports while encouraging domestic production.

The Reagan administration has opposed tariffs as being inconsistent with its free market policies.

EAGLE

IN BUYING THE building, the Eagle partners had assigned $25-million in notes to FNB-Midland and raised the additional $50-million from two unfunded letters of credit of $25-million each from InterFirst Bank in Dallas and Texas Commerce Bank in Houston. FDIC acquired the $25-million in notes upon the closing of FNB in October 1983. In January 1984, FDIC formally demanded payment of interest on the notes, the Eagle partners refused, FDIC accelerated the notes, and in February 1984, FDIC filed its $25-million federal lawsuit against Eagle.

RepublicBank bought the $50-million in notes from Texas Commerce Bank and InterFirst Bank and thus became the first lien holder on the FNB building and other FNB property.

Eagle had appealed Bunton's judgment to the U.S. Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals.

But now, the compromise settlement releases both parties from the judgment.

"That's the end of the case," said Gilliam.

The amount of the settlement has not been disclosed.

"I'm not at liberty to disclose it (the settlement) now," said Eagle attorney Seagal V. Wheatley of San Antonio said. "It's a compromise figure on both sides."

Eagle still owns the building, but FDIC has released its claim as the second lien holder on the building. RepublicBank First National Midland, a tenant in the building, holds the first lien. RepublicBank, which assumed the FNB deposit liabilities and paid FDIC a $51.1-million premium, became first lien holder on the building after it had purchased the $50-million in notes from Texas Commerce Bank and InterFirst Bank.

THE SEVEN EAGLE partners executed $25-million in notes to FNB. General partners Thomas C. "Tom" Brown and M.W. "Buddy" Branum each executed $6.25-million in notes, and limited partners J.L. Davis, Charles Perry, Gene Sledge, Clint Hunt and Carl F. Lawrence each executed a $2.5-million note. The partners were all "friends" of the bank and were successful in the petroleum and business circles.

The $75-million purchase price, which Eagle partners later claimed was inflated, included the 24-story FNB Building, the FNB 10-story parking garage, drive-in banking facilities and acreages on which the buildings and structures stand.

FNB in December 1982 had assessed the fair-market value of the FNB property at $75-million. But in June 1983, the seven partners "discovered" that the value of the FNB property was not more than $49-million.

The FNB Building was constructed as an eight-story edifice in 1939, and was enlarged and remodeled in the 1950s. An additional 16 stories were added to the building in the late 1970s.

Mock liftoff of shuttle scrubbed

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A practice countdown with five astronauts aboard space shuttle Atlantis ended today 31 seconds short of a simulated engine ignition after problems developed with computer software.

Despite the problems, said NASA spokesman Jim Ball, "it is considered to be a successful test." Most of the problems stemmed from parts of the software written especially for the test that wouldn't have been used in a real launch, he said.

The exercise, which including five astronauts who flew the last successful shuttle mission, was to have ended with a mock engine ignition, followed by an engine failure and shutdown to give the crew and launch teams experience handling an emergency.

But the computer software problem caused a 29-minute hold at the nine-minute mark. Engineers did not completely understand the problem and were concerned it might cause additional troubles in the final 31 seconds when the computer controls the countdown. So they stopped the test there.

A few other minor technical problems cropped up during the exercise, some of which could have led to countdown holds in an actual launch situation. But all except for the software problem, were overlooked because it was a practice exercise, Ball said.

The test was aimed at maintaining launch team sharpness in the long flightless period since the Challenger explosion.

The astronauts settled into the shuttle's cabin on launch pad 39B for the final two hours of a countdown rehearsal that began Monday night.

The crew members are commander Robert Gibson, pilot Charles Bolden and mission specialists George Nelson, Steven Hawley and Franklin Chang-Diaz.

They manned the shuttle Columbia on a flight that ended just 10 days before Challenger was launched on its tragic mission Jan. 28. The spacecraft exploded 73 seconds after liftoff and all seven crew members died.

Two non-astronaut members of Columbia's crew, Rep. Bill Nelson, D-Fla., and RCA engineer Robert Cenker, were not participating in today's test.

On Thursday, another team of seven rookie astronauts will be on board Atlantis to participate in an emergency crew escape exercise.

The drills conclude seven weeks of launch pad tests for Atlantis, which will be transported back to a hangar on Saturday.

They mark the last chance that astronauts and launch teams will have to sharpen their skills with a shuttle on the pad until Discovery is rolled out of storage to be readied for the next shuttle liftoff, now set for Feb. 18, 1988.

The shuttle fleet, with three vehicles remaining, has been grounded since the Challenger accident. A faulty joint between segments of a solid fuel booster rocket that caused the accident is being redesigned.

Today's countdown, which began at 7:40 p.m. Monday, involved teams at the launch control center here and at mission control center in Houston.

"People are starting to put things behind them," said NASA test director Frank Merlino.

WORLD

PARIS (AP) — Police today said they suspected two women, believed to be left-wing terrorists, shot and killed the president of the state-run Renault automobile company as he returned home from the company's headquarters in suburban Boulogne-Billancourt.

After interrogating witnesses all night at the scene of the Monday shooting on Boulevard Edgar Quinet near the Montparnasse railway station, police said they suspected Georges Besse was shot by one woman, who was protected by another.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility for the killing, which occurred about 8 p.m. just one door down from Besse's home in Paris' 14th district.

But a police spokesman said "it is undoubtedly Direct Action," the extreme left French terrorist organization, who carried out the attack.

Police said they were looking for two women described as between 25 and 30 years old, who spoke French without an accent. Earlier reports had quoted witnesses as saying they believed Besses' assailants were a man and a woman.

Besse, 58, president of Renault since January 1985, was hit several times in the head and chest shortly after being dropped off by his chauffeur. Police said three 9 mm cartridge casings were found at the scene.

Direct Action has carried out dozens of attacks in France in recent years, including the January 1985 assassination of Gen. Rene Audran, responsible for French arms sales.

Premier Jacques Chirac, who went to the scene immediately, said he was "horrified by the bestial murder."

"This event confirms once again that all of our strength must unite against terrorism, without fault and without compromise," Mitterrand said in a statement issued from Ouagadougou, Burkina Faso.

France has experienced an upsurge in terrorism in the past two years. In September, 11 people were killed and about 150 wounded in five bombings in Paris that were claimed by terrorist groups with links to the Middle East.

Earlier statements from people who said they witnessed Besse's murder had differed. Some said they saw a man and two women approach Besse and shoot him, while others said the shots were fired from a moving car containing a man and a woman. Others spoke of a motorcycle being used.

Direct Action, known to have links to the West German terrorist group Red Army Faction, claimed responsibility for 11 attacks earlier this year in Paris.

It claimed it carried out a July 21 car bombing outside the Paris headquarters of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development on July 21, and a July 6 bombing of police offices in central Paris that killed one policeman and injured 18 people.

Hasenfus' attorney says he won't appeal sentence

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The defense attorney for Eugene Hasenfus says he will not appeal the American mercenary's 30-year prison sentence for aiding anti-Sandinista rebels because "I have no case to appeal."

"His sentence was a planned thing," attorney Enrique Sotelo Borgen added when asked Monday about if he planned to take Hasenfus' case back to court. "I think there's no other way out."

Hasenfus, 45, of Marinette, Wis., was convicted Saturday of terrorism and violating the maintenance of Nicaragua's order and public security and sentenced to the maximum prison term.

The verdict and sentence were decided by a People's Tribunal, a special three-member court that tries individuals accused of anti-revolutionary activities.

Sotelo Borgen had sought permission Monday to visit Hasenfus but by the end of the business day had received no response from tribunal officials. He said any appeal, which would be heard by a second People's Tribunal, must be made this week.

Hasenfus was captured by Sandinista troops on Oct. 6, the day after his C-123 cargo plane filled with arms and supplies for the Contras was shot down over southern Nicaragua. Three other crew members, including two Americans, died in the crash.

The defense lawyer had sought to have the government's case thrown out on grounds that the People's Tribunal had no jurisdiction over foreigners accused of crimes in Nicaragua.

Kim Il Sung greets Mongolian premier

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — President Kim Il Sung of North Korea, who had been reported slain or ousted in a coup, made an appearance today in Pyongyang, greeting the Mongolian premier and receiving the cheers of thousands lining a motorcade route.

The 74-year-old Kim, shown in North Korean television footage broadcast in Japan and China, smiled and embraced Zhambyn Batmunkh in an airport welcoming that included a review of honor guards and greetings from dancing children.

Kim looked a little unsteady as he walked with Batmunkh to review the honor guard, but he seemed fit. The (North) Korean Central News Agency released a photograph of Kim and Batmunkh shaking hands.

An Asian diplomat in the North Korean capital, contacted by telephone from Peking, told The Associated Press that he had seen Kim at the airport and "he is in absolutely good health."

"Everything is all right in this country, the situation is absolutely normal...," the diplomat said, speaking on condition of anonymity. "There seems to be nothing correct about these reports (of an assassination or power seizure)..."

On Sunday, the defense minister in Seoul said broadcasts from North Korean loudspeakers along the demilitarized zone said Kim, who has led his Communist nation of 19 million since its creation in 1948, had been shot to death.

South Korean Defense Minister Lee Ki-Baek told the National Assembly in Seoul on Monday that "judging from all such circumstances, it is believed that Kim has died or a serious internal power struggle is going on there."

A South Korean opposition legislator, Kim Bong-ho, said Lee's report was based on "dubious intelligence reports" and "not only caused unrest among the people, but also hurt the government's credibility at home and abroad." He said the Cabinet should resign.

Lee said he would act "more discreetly and wisely" in the future, but that he thought it was important to make the report because it had a bearing on national security.

Palestinian says Syrian Embassy supplied explosives

BERLIN (AP) — A Palestinian accused in a West Berlin bombing said he obtained the explosives from the Syrian Embassy in East Berlin, according to his pretrial testimony presented in court today.

Ahmed Nawaf Hasi, in the statement to police, said he was given the explosives by a man identified by another defendant as a Syrian intelligence officer.

The statement was read into the court record by presiding Judge Hans-Joachim Heinze on the second day of the trial in West Berlin.

Hasi, 35, and co-defendant Farouk Salameh, 39, are charged with attempted murder and arms violations in the March 29 bombing of West Berlin's German-Arab Friendship Association. Nine people were injured in the blast.

Hasi said in his statement he was told to use the cover name "Fahdi" when picking up the explosives in East Berlin.

"At the Syrian Embassy I introduced myself as Fahdi and was brought to Abu Ahmed," the statement said.

Salameh, in a separate statement, identified Ahmed as a Syrian intelligence officer who also was known as Haitam Saed.

Salameh said he was introduced to Saed last January in Damascus, the Syrian capital, by Nezar Hindawi, the 32-year-old Jordanian convicted in London last month in the attempted bombing of an Israeli airliner in April at Heathrow airport. Hindawi and Hasi are brothers.

West Berlin justice officials say that statements read into the record have the same weight as testimony given in court.

Under questioning by judges today, Hasi and Salameh declined to elaborate on their pretrial statements.

"I signed many documents, it did not matter to me, I just wanted to get it over with," Hasi said in reference to police questioning.

Allegations of Syrian involvement in the attempted bombing at London's Heathrow Airport caused Britain to break diplomatic relations with the government of President Hafez Assad.

West Germany says the West Berlin trial will determine whether it should replace its departing ambassador to Syria. The current ambassador is scheduled to return home by Jan. 1.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Waite, three ex-hostages pledge humanitarian effort

LONDON (AP) — Anglican envoy Terry Waite and three American ex-hostages pledged themselves to a humanitarian effort to free other foreign captives from Lebanon, but said news of secret U.S. arms supplies to Iran made their task more difficult.

They met Monday, talking in private, praising and embracing each other in public, debriefing themselves about the long months they were held by Islamic Jihad guerrillas and how they had been released.

It was the first time the three they had all met together with Waite, who claimed a role in freeing all three Americans over the last 14 months.

The Americans are to fly back to their homes today, while Waite will be contemplating another trip to the Middle East, as he put it, "as soon as I feel there's a break in the sky."

Mud removed from Rhine

BASEL, Switzerland (AP) — Clean-up crews today began removing contaminated mud from the Rhine river bottom near the site of a disastrous toxic spill from a Swiss chemical plant.

Specially trained divers using a vacuum hose expect to complete the operation near the plant in four or five days, said Guido Bagutti, a spokesman for the Sandoz company, which owns the plant.

Swiss environmental officials say more than 660 pounds of dangerous residue, mostly insecticides, remained on the river floor, about 1 percent of the total spill. They say it may take the river may up to 10 years to fully recover from the disaster.

No arrests in leftist's killing

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Investigators today reported "significant leads" in the slaying of leftist leader Rolando Olalia, but said no arrests had been made despite press reports of apprehensions.

Newspapers published police sketches of two suspects in the killing of Olalia, but their identities were not known. A sketch of a third suspect was made public Monday.

Deputy Justice Minister Silvestre Bello denied newspaper and radio reports that a suspect had been taken into custody.

Bello, reading to reporters from a prepared statement, said four witnesses had seen men resembling those in police sketches attacking a man early Thursday along the road where the bodies of the 52-year-old Olalia and his driver, Leonor Alayaya, were found hours later.

"The man kneeling down might have been Olalia's driver and the persons ganging up (on him) might have just dumped Olalia's body," Bello said.

The sketches published today in newspapers showed men in their mid- or late 30s with short hair and broad facial features. A police composite of a third man, published Monday, showed a man in his 30s with a long, narrow face.

"We have significant leads but other than those already released, they are confidential," Bello said.

Shultz: Talks with Soviets on weapons to be 'tough, drawn-out'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz says negotiating nuclear weapons reductions with the Soviets will be "tough and probably drawn-out" because Moscow wants to hold off agreements until all issues are settled.

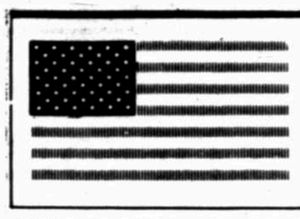

But Shultz said Monday night the U.S. anti-missile program and a buildup of U.S. nuclear and conventional forces would force Soviet military planners to consider reducing their nuclear arsenals.

While Shultz was counseling patience in a speech at the University of Chicago, a U.S. official in Washington disclosed that senior American and Soviet negotiators had tentatively agreed to meet early next month in Geneva.

This means the two sides will not put their talks on reducing nuclear weapons and on the controversial U.S. "Star Wars" missile defense program on hold until mid-January.

The United States and Soviet Union are known to be in virtual agreement on dismantling their medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe, but the Soviets want that to be part of a broader agreement that also limits the U.S. anti-missile program to laboratory research.

Shultz, describing the Soviet position in his Chicago speech, said:

NATION

"Make no mistake about it. Tough, and probably drawn-out negotiations will still be required if we are to nail down any formal agreement on offensive force reductions. For example, the Soviets are now linking agreement on anything with agreement on everything."

The Reagan administration has rejected any such deal. Shultz said the Soviets wanted to restrict U.S. research on anti-missile defense "in a way that would cripple the American SDI (Strategic Defense Initiative) program. This we cannot accept."

His description of the Soviet stance suggested Moscow had hardened its position on missile reductions even though Reagan and Gorbachev "set a new arms control agenda" in Reykjavik.

The Soviets in the past had tried to restrain the U.S. anti-missile program. But Shultz suggested Moscow was linking all arms control issues that are under negotiation to their stance on Star Wars.

The last round of negotiations in Geneva ended last week without agreement. But the Soviets proposed the three principal negotiators for both sides meet Dec. 2-5 in the Swiss city.

The U.S. official, who demanded anonymity, said this represents a "de facto" extension of the formal negotiations. "It's kind of perplexing because basically they gave us stonewalling through the last round," the official said.

Chief U.S. negotiator Max M. Kampelman and his two principal deputies, Ron Lehman and Maynard Glitman, will hold the Dec. 2-5 session with a Soviet delegation headed by Viktor P. Karpov, the chief Soviet negotiator.

The two sides also are weighing a meeting of weapons specialists in early January, prior to the opening of the next round of formal negotiations in mid-month, the official said.

AT&T proposes $1.2 billion rate reduction on long-distance calls

WASHINGTON (AP) — Residential customers will save an average 6.2 percent on their monthly American Telephone & Telegraph Co. long-distance bills under a $1.2 billion rate reduction AT&T wants to impose starting Jan. 1.

For the average home phone caller, who spends about $9 monthly on long-distance, the rate reduction will amount to about 50 cents a month.

The reductions described in AT&T's rate filing focus on daytime calls and favor those who make shorter calls by placing the deepest cuts on the charge for the first minute of the call.

The proposal must be approved by the Federal Communications Commission.

AT&T delivered its 11,000-page proposal for the rate cut in 16 boxes, contained in two grocery carts, at closing time Monday.

From details made public earlier in the day, MCI Communications Corp. was able to say only that it "would remain competitive." US Sprint Communications Co. said, "We intend to remain the price leader in the telecommunications industry."

Two groups supported by corporations, foundations and individual consumer donations, the U.S. Public Interest Research Group and the Consumer Federation of America, questioned the rate structure, saying it would give the lion's share of benefits to those who make short calls during the business day — primarily businesses.

Business bills will drop an average of 4.9 percent, which combined with the 6.2 percent cut for home phones would average 8.1 percent for all AT&T customers. But the deepest cuts will come during the 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. calling period, when rates will fall 11.6 percent.

AT&T spokesman Herb Linnen did not dispute that businesses will see significant savings "to the extent that business customers make a lot of calls in the daytime."

However he added, "I don't think it's fair to say it favors them."

He said 27 percent of the income AT&T gets from residential customers comes from daytime calling while 86 percent of the business revenues come from daytime calling.

The documentation presented to the FCC provides justification for the distribution of rate reductions, including a comprehensive projection of AT&T's earnings and cost pictures for 1987, he said.

Linnen said giving greater reductions on first-minute rates recognizes improvements in technology that have cut the time spent connecting, or setting up, a call. All of the set-up time, including recovery of unbillable no-answer and busy-signal calls, is charged to the first minute.

Tuxedoed man delivers bomb in flowers, injures two women

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A man in a white tuxedo and derby wearing a phony beard and moustache delivered flowers containing a bomb that injured two women in an office, but a suburban couple refused a similar delivery, police said.

The man "acted like he was a florist" and paid $20 for the $5 fare to the couple's El Cerrito home, said cab driver Peter Chandler. Before attempting to deliver the flowers, he asked Chandler to take a picture of him.

Chandler said he took two pictures and returned the camera to the man.

The couple were the parents of one woman injured Monday afternoon in the General Services Administration office, and the man was a friend of their daughter and her estranged husband, according to a published report.

Police said they had a suspect, but he had not been charged and they did not disclose his possible relationship to the bombing victims or the couple.

The bomb-laden bouquet of dried flowers was brought to the downtown GSA office by a man wearing a white tuxedo jacket, a white derby, eyeliner, and a beard and moustache that appeared fake, witnesses told police.

The same man apparently tried about two hours later to deliver flowers to a couple in El Cerrito, 20 miles northeast of San Francisco. The couple refused delivery, and the man left in a cab, said El Cerrito Patrolman Marty Knight.

Ken King, a San Francisco police inspector, said investigators believed the suspect was carrying a second bomb in the flowers for the El Cerrito couple.

The couple were the parents of one of the injured women, The Tribune of Oakland reported today. The couple, who weren't identified, said the suspect showed up at their house dressed entirely in white with a delivery of flowers.

"He just brought up the package and he didn't face me," the woman's father told the newspaper. "He wanted to set it down and I said, 'Take it away.'" He said he and his wife had heard news reports about the explosion and knew it took place on the floor where their daughter worked.

They told The Tribune the suspect was a man who had become friends with their daughter's husband 12 years ago, and had lived in their daughter's San Francisco home and worked as a handyman. The daughter and her husband are now estranged, the couple said.

The FBI and federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms were investigating the matter, said ATF agent William McNulty, adding he was unaware of anyone claiming responsibility for the explosion.

Authorities were investigating whether a personal grudge was involved in the mid-afternoon bombing at the GSA office, on the 33rd floor of the 38-story Tishman Building, King said.

"Apparently the bomb was directed at an individual. It was sent by someone to a specific individual," said Sgt. Manuel Barretta, a police spokesman.

The two injured women were in fair condition at San Francisco General Hospital. One suffered second-degree burns to the face and chest, and the other had first-degree burns to the face and hands as well as cuts from broken glass.

Hospital spokeswoman Ruth Rankin said the hospital was not releasing their names, at the request of police. Their ages were given as 42 and 41.

Storybook disaster

Switzerland is the last place one would suspect of unleashing ecological catastrophe on Europe. It is a country of tidy chalets, majestic mountains and crystal-clear Alpine air. The Swiss themselves project the image of solid, responsible citizens.

Yet, the storybook image faded — especially in the eyes of Switzerland's neighbors — due to an industrial accident Nov. 1st in the Swiss town of Basel.

The water that firefighters poured on a fire at the Sandoz company washed about 40 tons of agricultural chemicals, mercury and other compounds directly into the Rhine River. The warehouse had no sprinklers, no heat sensors or drainage channels to keep the contaminated water out of the river.

Millions of fish died, wildlife suffered and the Rhine was ruined temporarily as a source of drinking water. Experts say it will take two years before the river, the busiest in Europe, is back to normal.

The Netherlands, France, Luxembourg and West Germany, downstream from the chemical spill, were justifiably upset with Swiss authorities, who didn't inform them promptly. It was an unconscionable lapse, because the other countries needed the earliest possible warning to close off the Rhine's tributaries and water supplies before the deadly stream of toxins reached them.

It is all the more puzzling because of Basel's interest in promoting good transnational relations with other countries along the upper Rhine. Recently, the city set up a local government and industry association to improve international cooperation. The organization was able to work out transborder bus passes, but apparently failed in a moment of environmental crisis. Swiss authorities must not only mend fences with other Rhine countries, they must find a way to make sure it never happens again.

The Swiss accident is the latest in a string of global ecological disasters, stretching from the lethal chemical release in Bhopal, India, to the Chernobyl nuclear reactor accident in the Soviet Union.

But this one makes us realize that we can't afford to be complacent about environmental safeguards in our own country. If it can happen in pristine Switzerland, it can happen anywhere.

Now, the Europeans cynically call Basel "Chernobale" (the French word for Basel) and "Bhopal on the Rhine." If there is a lesson in this for Americans, it is that industrial safety cannot be taken for granted. We must be vigilant lest we wind up with a "Basel on the Ohio."

From bad to worse

Imagine President Reagan saying: I felt a profound obligation to the hostages. For this reason, I reluctantly released to Iran militarily insignificant amounts of defensive arms, though this cut across both my pledge not to negotiate with terrorists and the American interest in containing Iranian fundamentalism. Something did come out of it — the release of three hostages, Iranian cooperation in a few other hostage affairs. Crazily enough, something more may yet come out of it. That is why, despit the embarrassment, I am trying o keep open a line to Tehran.

Had Reagan said something along these lines on Thursday night, he might have preserved a measure of credibility concerning this bizarre affair and also a measure of understanding. For few Americans are not susceptible to an appeal in the name of the safety of their fellow citizens. It would not have been the worst thing he could do.

What the president did, however, came close to being the worst thing he could do. He presented an incomplete and implausible version of events in which he conceded not the slightest inconsistency, misjudgment or lapse of execution and left far more questions hanging than he put to rest.

He came forward not as a resolute president with an honorable purpose, prepared to take his knocks, but as a whistling-in-the-dark chief executive who set himself and the country up for manipulation and humiliation, and who still cannot see where he went wrong.

The president should have been alert to opportunities for conciliation with Iran, but he should also have recognized the roughness of the political terrain and not put a vision of a diplomatic breakthrough over his responsibility to keep the confidence of Arab moderates and European allies.

He should not have left the painful impression of conducting a policy out of the hearing even of his own questioning lieutenants. He should not have accepted the mind-boggling suggestion, which, it seems, did not come from the Iranians, that there was a requirement to establish his good faith — by sending arms.

For it is the arms transfers, even if they were only in the limited amounts so far acknowledged, that are the most unconscionable feature of this affair.

Perhaps some unforeseen benefit will come along and transform it. Until that happens, it stands as a monument — and not the first — to the perils of closet policy-making.

Reagan let a good human instinct be clouded by bad political judgment. The result so far has been a multi-dimensional policy disaster that is made worse by his obstinate refusal to grant that he goofed.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, Nov. 18, the 322nd day of 1986. There are 43 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Nov. 18, 1883, the United States and Canada adopted a system of standard time zones to eliminate a plethora of local time zones across the continent.

On this date:

In 1820, U.S. Navy Capt. Nathaniel B. Palmer discovered the frozen continent of Antarctica.

In 1865, author Samuel L. Clemens — using the pen name Mark Twain — published his story, "The Celebrated Jumping Frog of Calaveras County" in the New York Saturday Press.

In 1886, Chester A. Arthur, 21st president of the United States, died at the age of 56.

In 1903, the United States and Panama signed a treaty granting the United States rights to build the Panama Canal.

In 1936, Germany and Italy recognized the Spanish government of Francisco Franco.

In 1949, Jackie Robinson of the Brooklyn Dodgers was named the National League's most valuable player.

In 1966, U.S. Roman Catholic bishops did away with the rule against eating meat on Fridays.

In 1969, financier-diplomat Joseph P. Kennedy died at the age of 81.

In 1978, California Rep. Leo Ryan and four other people were killed in an ambush in Guyana by members of the Peoples Temple.

Ten years ago: Spain's parliament approved a bill to establish a democracy after 37 years of dictatorship.

Five years ago: President Reagan proposed in a speech on arms control that the United States scrap plans to deploy new medium-range missiles in Europe in return for the dismantling of comparable Soviet forces. The Soviets were quick to ridicule the offer as propaganda.

One year ago: Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev arrived in Geneva for the superpower summit with President Reagan.

Wild horses corraled by lawmakers

WASHINGTON — Wild horses can't make Congress trim the budget when powerful constituent pressure is exerted in an election year. As a result, the lawmakers, bowing to Western cattle interests, have ordered the Bureau of Land Management to round up more than twice as many wild horses and burros out West this year than the agency had intended to.

Jack Anderson

Since 1971, when the bureau began removing "excess" wild horses and burros from government rangeland to make room for cattle, more than $74 million has been spent on the yearly roundups. Healthy animals are made available to the public through an "Adopt-a-Horse" program; those classified as old, sick or lame are put to death by injection or a bullet in the head.

All told, some 91,000 horses and burros have been removed from federal rangelands, on which millions of cattle graze under a fee arrangement. Facing budgetary constraints, the BLM proposed rounding up only 4,500 animals in this fiscal year, but Senate-House conferees set the number at 9,500. The bureau's budget request for $15 million was upped to $17.7 million.

The American Horse Protection Association charges that the entire operation is unnecessary because there is no "excess" of wild horses. It lays responsibility for the roundups on cattlemen who don't want the wild animals competing for forage on the grasslands they rent from the government.

"How can the cattle ranchers dare say that there are too many horses, when there are only 50,000 horses vs. 4.5 million cattle?" asks Joan Bleu, an association official.

She also protested the killing of unhealthy horses. "The horses look great until they are put in the holding facility," she charged. "Then the BLM says they're starving. The problem really results from their six to eight months in captivity."

Critics of the operation also complain that the grazing fee for cattle — $1.35 a head per month — is a bargain at the taxpayers' expense. They claim the government could take in roughly four times as much in fees if it charged the cattlemen a market-rate fee.

The wild horse protectors also suspect that the bureaucrats in Washington are sorely lacking in expertise — and they could have a point. When our reporter Courtney Brinkerhoff asked the Bureau of Land Management for the rationale behind the roundup, a spokesman explained it this way:

"The BLM is removing excess wild horses and burros from public rangelands in order to protect the lands and resources, and the animals themselves. If we did not remove them, they would begin to starve to death and eat each other."

As one expert in equine dietary habits told us, "Horses are not cannibals." He said that to his knowledge there has never been an instance of horses eating each other. Their digestive systems couldn't handle meat no matter how desperate they might become, he said.

MEMORABLE MEMENTOS: When Lt. Gen. Emmet H. Walker retired recently as head of the National Guard, his friends, admirers and subordinates gave him a farewell party at a hotel near the Pentagon. They also gave him more than the usual gold watch.

There were clocks and hunting accessories, a set of Japanese Samurai-style swords (valued at $50), a ceramic falcon, hunting jackets and a number of guns. Oklahoma officials presented the general with an authentic Indian headdress and he was made an honorary Indian chief. The commander of the Army National Guard gave Walker a $350 statue of a Mississippi rifleman.

Several portraits were among the gifts. One was a photograph of Walker and his wife, another was a painting of Walker alone and a third was a watercolor sketch of his quarters at Fort McNair in Washington, D.C.

About 750 people attended Walker's $35-a-plate farewell banquet. There is no indication that any laws or regulations were violated by the outpouring of gifts, but guard officials returned $750 in cash donations from members to avoid the appearance of impropriety.

Walker was also honored at a banquet of the Adjutants General Association in New York. There he was given a shotgun by the group and a pistol from the state of Kentucky. Walker said he'll probably display his souvenirs at his home in suburban Jackson, Miss.

EVANS & NOVAK

Health care report presents policy problem

WASHINGTON — Schizophrenia in the lame-duck Reagan administration will mount when it surfaces a pro-big government health care report on the heels of its anti-big government task force report on the family.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

The impending Health and Human Services Department proposal for a new catastrophic illness program warms the heart of Capitol Hill's pioneer for extended government health care, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, and predictably will generate outrage from the Right. The family report evokes right-wing cheers but Democratic reaction is typified by Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan calling it "less a policy paper than a tantrum."

The White House responds that neither paper yet represents administration poljcy. But such neutrality derives from homogenization of the Reagan Revolution climaxing in the themeless — and failed — mid-term campaign.

Even-handed reaction at the White House to the two papers confirms that the men at the president's side do not consider the conservative movement an indispensible constituency. Whether Ronald Reagan himself does may be determined in the next few weeks.

The task force report on the family, headed by Under Secretary of Education Gary Bauer, provides solace for social conservatives who have been fed thin gruel by the administration. They consider the indictment of "anti-family agenda" big government activism of the '60s and '70s as pure Reaganism.

Yet, the HHS plan for catastrophic health care under Medicare can be described as nothing but big government. Administration embrace of such a plan would be a kiss from the president breathing new life into the Ted Kennedy's health insurance sleeping beauty.

The contrast reflects a gap between the Education and HHS Departments so wide that they seem to come from different administrations. Policies of Secretary William Bennett, a neo-conservative ex-Democrat at Education, and Secretary Otis Bowen, a traditional Republican and two-term governor of Indiana, at HHS have clashed backstage over the last year.

Bennett has courted the New Right, in contrast to Thomas Burke, Bowen's chief of staff and the guiding force behind the catastrophic insurance plan. He has publicly referred to his Reaganite critics from the Heritage Foundation as the "uninformed people on the ultra-right wing."

This gap is bridged by the president's men with a neutrality that certainly does not favor the Reaganite Right. Social conservatives were full of wonder that the Bauer task force report last week was released with its rhetoric intact, but they would have winced had they been present at its first consideration in the White House. So numerous were criticisms that it would be a miracle if the indictment of big government survives.

If senior officials do not perceive how much the Bauer report means to the social Right, they expect what one Reagan aide calls "a firestorm" from conservatives when Bowen's health recommendations are made public. Why, then, should anything so provocative to Reagan's core constituency be made public?

The White House answer that the Bowen report is no different from the originial "Treasury I" tax reform proposal misses a critical point. Tax reform was an agreed administration goal; catastrophic health care is not. The missed distinction reveals lack of interest at the White House in preserving the Reagan constituency.

Absence of social issues from the 1986 campaign is less a matter of fading public interest than failure by the defeated Republican senators to campaign on big government vs family values. Nor were these questions engaged by the campaigning president.

But Ronald Reagan understands social conservatism far better than his current lieutenants. If he approves a diluted task force report attacking big government and accepts the health plan that expands that same government, he knowingly will have applied the coup de grace to his own revolution.

Media to blame for high cost of campaigns

If we are going to discuss the problem of the high cost of political campaigns, then let's discuss the cause, not the effect. The cause is people — too many of them, to be exact — and the cost of communicating with them.

Charley Reese

The basic task of any candidate for any office in any place is to communicate to the people who can vote for him. It costs money to communicate.

Suppose you want to run for Congress and there are 400,000 people in your district. Buy one 22-cent postage stamp for each of them and you've spent $88,000. And you still haven't bought the paper and the envelopes.

But direct mail is — next to an in-the-flesh sales call — the most expensive form of communicating you can do. Since people in most places no longer attend political rallies (there are usually more candidates and candidates' relatives than voters), candidates are forced to resort to paid advertising in the media.

For those of you who have not bought advertising time or space recently, advertising space in newspapers and advertising time on radio and television is darned expensive. Hence, while one side of a newspaper building — the news department — bemoans the high cost of campaigning, the other side of the building — advertising — rejoices in the big revenue gains.

To use the phrase made famous by Lester Thurow, the economist, any solution to the high cost of political campaigns will be a zero-sum game. Any gain in lowering the cost will result in a loss of revenue, mostly to the media. Pardon my cynicism but that may be why most editorial guns are aimed at campaign fund-raising rather than at campaign expenditures and why the preferred solution is always dipping into the public treasury to fund the campaigns. Better that taxpayers suffer the loss of their bucks than the media suffer the loss of their revenue — at least from the media's point of view.

Even as I write this heresy, I am clothed and fed and am sending a son to college from the benefits of advertising revenues. I'm not knocking the venerable institution of paid advertising. I'm just confronting a truth.

Because of our population increase and the nearly universal franchise, candidates have no choice but to resort to paid advertising to communicate with voters. Paid space and time in mass media are the basic cause of high campaign costs. It therefore seems to me there are only two solutions: Either reduce the number of people the candidate must communicate with by reducing the franchise or reduce the expense of communicating with them.

Transferring the cost to the taxpayers is an evasion, not a solution. I for one object to the idea of being compelled to fund campaigns for candidates I oppose just as I already object to being compelled to fund grants for organizations that I oppose. The whole business is like requiring the condemned to pay for the electric chair.

If freedom is to have any meaning at all, one ought to be free from having to fund political ideas that are obnoxious to you. If it's unfair to tax a Baptist to pay for an Episcopal clergyman, then it is certainly unfair to tax a conservative to pay for a liberal or vice versa. There should be a wall of separation between the U.S. Treasury and politics.

But if we erect that wall, then we are still stuck with the problem of super-expensive campaigns. I have suggested before that candidates be barred from spending money on paid advertising. Almost nobody liked that idea, especially those with whom the money is spent. It's been my experience that in America no idea almost nobody likes ever gets anywhere so I'm dropping it.

As a fallback position, we should consider limiting the time period in which money could be spent on paid political advertising to six weeks. Since there are finite limits of time and space, that in itself would reduce expenditures and might possibly focus people's attention on politics.

At the least, those of us in the media could take a pledge to quit sermonizing about a problem our own industry causes. If we can't be helpful, let's at least not be hypocritical.

NATION IN BRIEF

Ex-Mobile Oil head lost bid on his libel lawsuit ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Mobil Oil Corp. President William P. Tavoulareas lost a bid to have newly appointed judges to the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals join in ruling on his libel lawsuit against The Washington Post.

Tavoulareas' lawyers asked the court last month to have the new judges join in the court's decision because of "the substantial changes in the composition of the court."

Four judges joined the court since the libel case was argued Oct. 3, 1985.

In a one-page order, dated last Wednesday, the court said Tavoulareas' suggestion for further rehearing was circulated to 10 active members and majority did not support the request.

Tavoulareas sued the Post over a 1979 story that said he "set up his son" as a partner in a London shipping management firm that, through an intermediary, operated some of Mobil's ships.

Falklands issue discussed

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan said following meetings with the leaders of Great Britain and Argentina that he hoped the two nations would find a peaceful means of ending their dispute over the Falkland Islands

Reagan met for an hour Monday with Argentine President Raul Alfonsin, whose country had announced it would formally end hostilities with Britain if Britain drops a 150-mile "protection zone" around the islands, where the two nations fought a 74-day war in 1982.

The two leaders began their discussions with the Falklands issue, and "the president listened with interest to the proposal Argentina made to Great Britain this morning and reiterated his hopes for a peaceful, negotiated solution to this issue," presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said.

Reagan had held talks Saturday with British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.

Marine base security up

WASHINGTON (AP) — Security has tightened and inventory checks are more frequent in efforts to prevent equipment thefts at a Marine Corps base where $1 million in stolen goods were sold to surplus dealers, the base commander said.

An undercover sting operation begun five years ago by the FBI and the Naval Investigative Service resulted in 134 convictions of Marines and surplus store owners.

Maj. Gen. Robert E. Haebel, commander of Camp Pendleton, Calif., told the Senate Armed Service Committee's inventory task force Monday that he had ordered more frequent accounting checks of the base's equipment inventory and tighter storage-area security.

Jerry H. Alexander Sr., a former San Diego surplus store dealer, testified that he regularly bought field jackets, sleeping bags, cots, knives, padlocks and other items taken from the base by Marines.

Inside tips netting man huge stock market profits to generate probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — Huge stock market profits rolled up by Ivan Boesky through inside tips are likely to generate enough political pressure for congressional investigations, industry experts say.

The inquiry could expand into a look at new freewheeling financial techniques, such as the use of junk bonds, to capitalize on the merger mania that swept Wall Street in the early 1980s and now simmers at a reduced level.

Boesky, Wall Street's master arbitrageur who parlayed advance knowledge of mergers into a fortune, could be a witness as congressional committees early next year open hearings into the growing scandal.

Just how far any resulting legislation gets could depend on what else surfaces as the Securities and Exchange Commission pushes forward with an investigation into Wall Street tipsters and their networks.

Boesky agreed Friday to pay a $100 million penalty for illegal stock trading based on tips from Dennis B. Levine, a former officer at Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc.

Legislation proposed last year by Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., the incoming chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, could get a new airing when the panel takes up insider trading. The measure would bar speculators who buy up sizeable blocs of shares in a company that is a takeover candidate from voting to approve a takeover.

Only those who held stock 30 to 60 days before the takeover bid would be allowed to vote on whether to accept it under the plan.

In the House, both the Banking and Energy and Commerce committees were reported to be considering hearings into the subject.

"The jurisdictional question is kind of up in the air," said Julius Genachowski, an aide to Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y. "Chuck wants to hold Banking Committee hearings and other people he has talked to on the committee want to hold hearings."

Ted Bundy gets indefinite stay of execution

LAKE CITY, Fla. (AP) — Suspected serial killer Theodore Bundy came within seven hours of execution today for the brutal murder of a 12-year-old girl, and some residents of her hometown were angry at the indefinite stay.

The 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Atlanta issued the stay at 12:40 a.m., ruling there wasn't time before Bundy's scheduled 7 a.m. electrocution to fully review his latest appeal. A state and a federal judge and the state Supreme Court all had refused Monday to block the execution.

Bundy, 39, showed little reaction to the stay, said Vernon Bradford, spokesman for the Florida Department of Corrections at Florida State Prison near Starke. "He didn't have much to say," Bradford said.

The decision brought mixed reaction in this northern Florida city where Kimberly Diane Leach was abducted Feb. 9, 1978. Her body was found about two months later in an abandoned pig sty near the Suwannee River.

"They should fry him," said hotel clerk Bert Myres, 19, a lifelong resident. "There are going to be a lot of angry people."

"People here will be outraged again," said Robert Kent, 43.

But Robert Session, 28, a service station attendant on work-release from the nearby Baker Correctional Institute, said Bundy deserved the stay.

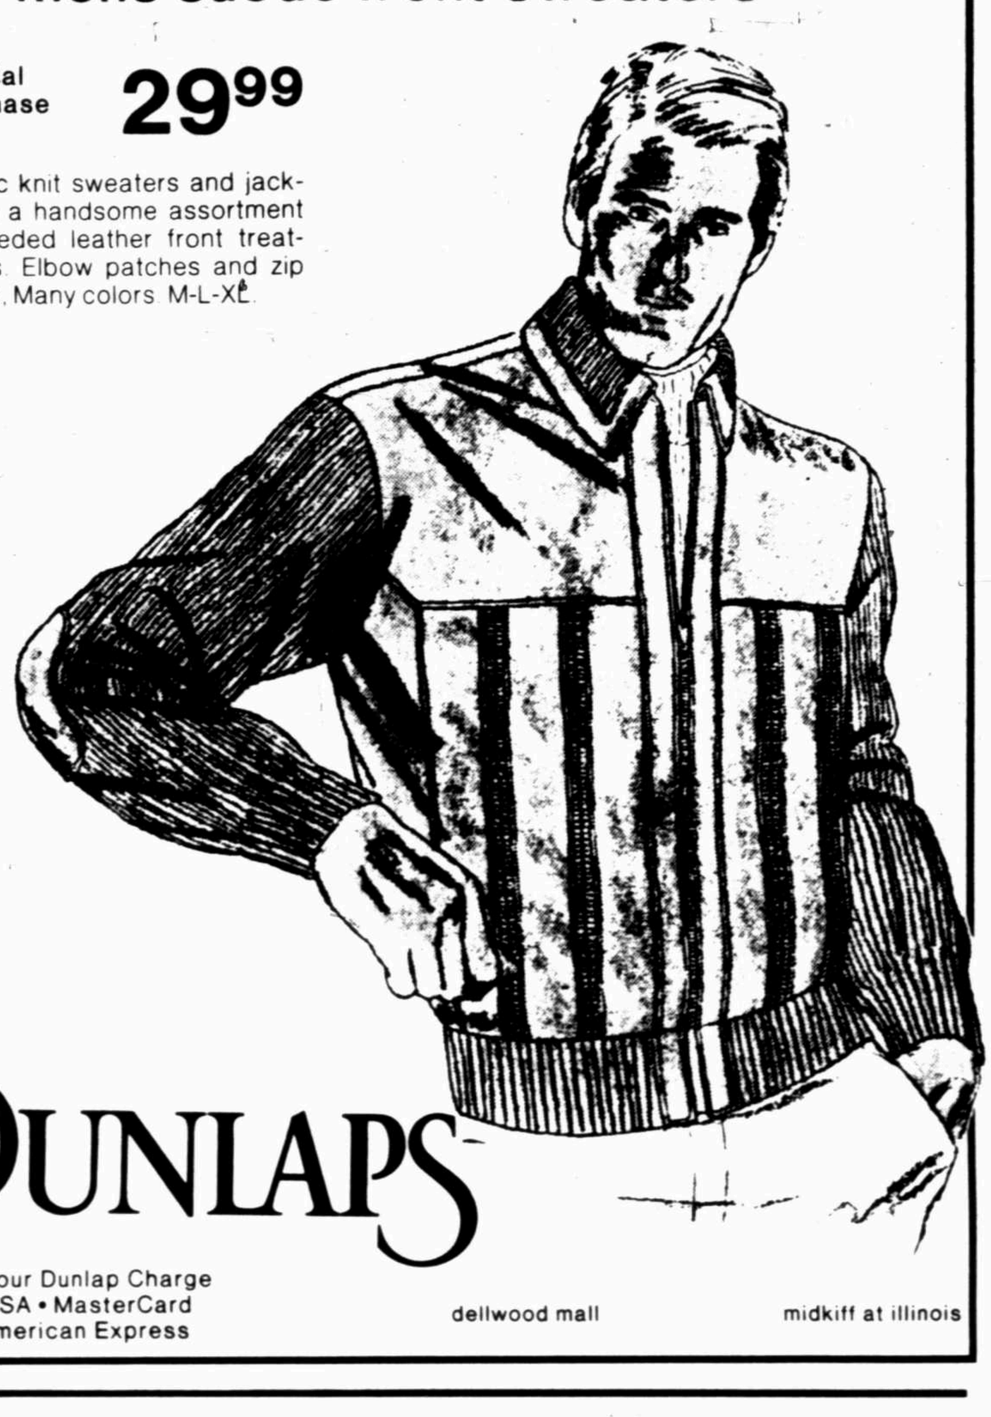

The courts "ain't deep down in the case yet," Session said. "I don't think it's fair that they rush to execute the man."

Bundy's appeal was based on grounds the former law student was mentally incompetent to stand trial and act as his own attorney in the 1980 proceeding that led to his conviction in Kimberly's abduction, rape and slaying.

In West Texas, a chance of thunderstorms tonight far west. A chance of thunderstorms areawide on Wednesday. Lower 80s Big Bend valleys. Lows tonight near 40 Panhandle to lower 50s far West and Concho Valley. Middle 50s Big Bend valleys. Highs Wednesday lower 80s.

In South Texas, cloudy along the coast and northwest tonight and partly cloudy elsewhere. A slight chance of showers north central tonight. Lows in the 50s north to near 70 far south. Cloudy north and partly cloudy south Wednesday. Widely scattered showers.

Warm, windy day expected

From Staff and Wire Reports

Forecasters at the National Weather Service are predicting warm windy weather for Wednesday with 20 percent chance of thunderstorms. The NWS, located at Midland Regional Airport, is calling for a high in the lower 70s and southerly winds at 15-25 mph and gusting.

Tonight, under mostly cloudy skies, the low should be near 50. Winds will be out of the north at 10-15 mph.

Monday's high of 79 was only five degrees below the record high set for that date in 1981. Today's low was 36 degrees above the record low of 19 set for this date in 1980.

STATE

A cool front stretched from Southern Arkansas, through the low center into the Texas South Plains near Lubbock but temperatures remained mild.

Early Tuesday, readings dropped about 10 degrees behind the front, but across the Panhandle and along the Red River Valley readings were in the 40s.

Temperatures were in the 50s and 60s over most of the state, while the coastal plains and lower valley had temperatures in the 70s.

Winds were southerly with speeds generally in the 5 to 15 mile an hour range.

At 4 a.m. Tuesday, the cool spot was Amarillo with 42, while Beaumont and Brownsville both had 73.

In the forecast, there's a chance of thunderstorms in southeast North Texas Wednesday, but in the rest of the area weather should be mild. Lows tonight should be near 40 and in the mid 50s. Highs Wednesday should be in the 60s.

South Texas lows should be in the 50s in the north and near 70 in the far south with a slight chance of showers north central tonight. Widely scattered showers were expected central and east Wednesday. Highs should be in the 70s north and in the mid 80s south.

NATION

A snow-laden storm headed east from the Plains today and another storm in the Pacific was aimed at the Northwest.

The storm centered over the Dakotas also pushed snow across southern Minnesota, northern Iowa and southern Wisconsin. It had dumped 5 inches of snow on Bismarck, N.D., by early today, 3 inches on Waterloo, Iowa, and 2 inches on Sioux Falls, S.D.

The storm prompted travelers' advisories for northwest Illinois, northern Indiana and northwest Michigan.

Midland County Sheriff deputies Earl Stroup and Ken Colston, above, handcuff two men that were arrested Monday near the intersection of Midkiff Road and Travis Avenue. They, along with another man, all from Lubbock, were charged with possession of cocaine. K-9 officer Robby Mobley of the Midland Police Department, and "Bo," assist in the narcotics raid.

MISD drug policy results in first disciplinary actions

By JULIE HILLRICHS

Six Midland High School students are serving two-week suspensions from extracurricular activities after officials said they were caught possessing alcohol — a violation of the district's substance abuse policy.

MHS Principal Jimmie R. Kelly said the students — all participants in extracurricular activities — were suspended after an investigation revealed they had been drinking alcohol during a weekend party.

Kelly said the students were members of various school activities, but declined to say which ones.

He said the suspensions are "the first test of the policy" approved by Midland Independent School District trustees earlier this fall.

"I think youngsters understand it's important to stay within the guidelines of this policy," said Kelly.

He said he did not anticipate any legal ramifications as a result of the suspensions.

The policy — designed specifically for student athletes and others in extracurricular activities — invokes penalties ranging from three-hour work details for possession of tobacco products on the first offense to various suspensions for possession or use of drugs and alcohol.

The rule covers offenses that occur during school-related as well as nonschool-related activities, and accrues from the beginning of the student's participation in junior and senior high school activities.

Students caught under the influence or possession of drugs or alcohol are suspended from extracurricular activities for two weeks on the first offense.

A second violation results in the student losing extracurricular privileges for the remainder of the school year.

If, after the second violation, the student and family successfully complete a six-week chemical dependency program, the student may be reinstated in school activities.

Students caught using or possessing tobacco products will be required to serve a three-hour work detail on the first offense.

A second violation results in the student being suspended from activities for five days.

On the third offense, a student is suspended from activities for the remainder of the school year.

Kelly said students — punished under the recent round of suspensions — may appeal their case before the school board either in open or closed session.

He refused to say whether additional suspensions would be handed down as an "investigation continues."

Three Lubbock men jailed on drug charges

By PATRICK CRIMMINS

Three Lubbock men are in Midland County Jail on cocaine possession charges following their arrest early Monday by Midland County Sheriff's investigators.

Two other men are awaiting charges of possession of a controlled substance following another raid Monday by sheriff's investigators.

Investigator Sue Rudie said Winston Caraway, 23, Robert Johnson, 22, and Fred Thomas, 23, were arrested about 10 a.m. Monday at a hotel near the intersection of Wall Street and Midkiff Drive. All were charged with possession of a controlled substance, and are being held in lieu of $50,000 bond each. Bond was set by Judge Robert Pine.

Ms. Rudie said about six officers were involved in the raid. She said a gram and a half of cocaine, a vehicle belonging to one of the men, and property authorities believed was burglarized, were confiscated from the men. She said the arrest was made following a one-week investigation.

Jury convicts former bank officer of bank fraud, embezzlement

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Olen Mack Brock became the second ex-officer of the First National Bank of Midland to be convicted of federal bank fraud since September and the sixth Midland-Odessa ex-banker to be convicted of embezzlement and misapplication of funds since 1985.

A Midland federal jury on Monday convicted the 49-year-old Brock of three of the seven counts in the indictment. He plans to appeal the case.

Brock, who could be sentenced up to 15 years in prison, is to be sentenced at noon on Dec. 9 by U.S. District Court Judge Lucius D. Bunton.

"This will definitely be appealed," Brock's attorney, A.L. "Dusty" Rhodes of Abilene said outside the courtroom. "I think justice will ultimately come out of this deal."

Brock, who now lives in Ruidoso, N.M., declined to comment. He was a vice president and loan officer of the 93-year-old bank, which failed on Oct. 14, 1983.

In accepting the jury's verdicts, Bunton thanked the 12 jurors for their service. They had deliberated about eight hours Friday night and Monday before reaching a decision. The trial lasted a week.

"These cases are not easy to decide," Bunton told the jurors and commented on their "thoroughness" in examining evidence and exhibits in the case. "I thank you for rendering your duty to the country and to the judicial system."

THE PROSECUTION presented 26 witnesses, including two rebuttal witnesses, and the defense put six witnesses, including Brock, on the stand.

The case's chief prosecutor, Assistant U.S. Attorney James K. "Jim" Blankinship, said that the Brock case "is by far the most complicated case that we've tried."

The case was investigated by the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Christian support for Israel grows with creation of area AIPAC caucus

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

Christian support for Israel has grown greater in West Texas with the recent creation of the American Israel Public Affairs Committee (AIPAC) caucus in San Angelo. The group's formation was aided in part by the Midland-Odessa AIPAC caucus which was formed about two years ago.

San Angelo's caucus was formed after the city and a Baptist church sponsored a concert and festival night two years ago which "honored and blessed Israel," Kay McDonald, a spokesman for the group, said this morning.

"We had made contact with the Israeli Consulate in Houston and he came up as did some Israeli folk dancers. It was being held to promote a tour group we had going to Israel.

"The event came to the attention of some pro-Israel folks (and members of the AIPAC lobby in Washington D.C.). We had our first meeting in September. The head of the Midland caucus helped us get started," Ms. McDonald said.

She said San Angelo has a very small Jewish population, but a few Jewish people have attended meetings of the 30-member caucus, which is primarily made up of Christians.

"AIPAC asks us to maintain contact with the Representatives and Senators that represent our district in Washington D.C. We let them know there is a group of Christians interested in the stability of Israel," Ms. McDonald said.

Judge offers woman second chance to serve probation

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

U.S. District Court Judge Lucius D. Bunton offered a former Midland woman a second chance to serve probation successfully after she had violated conditions of her probation.

But the judge assured the woman, 40-year-old Oases Jones Williams of Irving, that he would promptly send her to prison were she to violate probation again.

More than 2½ years ago, Bunton sentenced the woman to a five-year probated sentence after she had pleaded guilty of cheating the Social Security Administration out of $5,200 to provide medical care for her teen-age daughter.

"What do you think I ought to do, Ms. Williams?" the judge asked the woman prior to his pronouncing sentence.

"I don't know that I deserve another chance," she said, "but I'd like another chance."

The woman had failed to report to her probation officer, did not give notice of her moving to the Dallas area, and stopped making restitution payments last May. The judge had ordered her to pay the Social Security Administration $5,230.97 in restitution, but her last payment was in May. Her payments had been reduced to $50 from $127 a month, and her outstanding payments total $4,591.82.

"We're interested in what happens to people," the judge said in admonishing her for not reporting to her probation officer in Midland. "We're interested in seeing that money is repaid. We didn't know if you were dead (or) started another life..."

In reminding her that her first chance at probation "has not worked out too well," the judge suggested that she would be best served by living under supervision for six months in a halfway house in the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

"If you leave there, you're gone (to prison)," Bunton said. "We'll have to catch you again."

The judge ordered her to the halfway house for six months as part of her continued probation.

"This is it," Bunton said. "Understand I'm not going to give you anymore chances."

The woman, who makes $6.30 an hour as a cashier in an Albertson's grocery store in Dallas, would maintain her day-time job while spending nights in the halfway house for six months.

"You still owe some money to Social Security," the judge said, "and you are going to pay that."

In March 1984 when Bunton first placed her on probation, Ms. Williams admitted that she "made a mistake" by making false statements in order to receive funds for the medical care of her daughter, who was fitted with a pacemaker for her ailing heart.

Conductor hopes concert makes new friends for symphony

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Staff Writer

"If I had my way, I would put up a sign outside of every concert hall in America which would read: 'No one, absolutely no one, allowed in without imagination,'" says Murry Sidlin, guest conductor for Thursday's Chevron U.S.A.-sponsored concert at Chaparral Center.

The concert, which is being performed in six cities this fall, features the Midland-Odessa Symphony playing Aaron Copland's music.

James Westwater's photography will be shown on three wide screens during two of the selections, thus Copland's "Appalachian Spring" is called "Appalachian Suite" and his "Billy the Kid" is called "Western Suite." The symphony will also perform "Outdoor Overture" and "Lincoln Portrait," which includes narration. Slides from the Midland-Odessa area will be shown in an additional excerpt from "Western Suite."

"Hopefully, we're making new friends for the symphony orchestra, new friends for the great Americana of Aaron Copland and broadening the base of interest in the symphony orchestra at the same time," says Sidlin, who conducts the symphonies of Long Beach, Calif., and New Haven, Conn.

"I would like the audience to come back on their own to view the concert hall as non-threatening and for each member of the audience to believe in his or her perceptions. People should really believe in their own perceptions, their own feelings — that is the only criteria necessary to enter the concert hall and form an association with the sounds coming off the stage."

Sidlin, seen as a rising conductor who has special talent in resurrecting symphonies in trouble, refers to himself as "an orchestra builder." To "bolster" symphonies requires, Sidlin says, "First starting with the quality of the orchestra and then getting the community excited about symphonic music — what it means, how it works and what it represents and in what way the symphony orchestra serves the entire community.

Parents uneasy talking about the birds and the bees

There was an article in the Dallas Morning News Sunday that had the following headline: "When parents tell kids about sex, being frank is best."

Tell the truth, now, don't you always read stories with headlines like that? Of course you do. We all do. Sex sells.

The story was fairly predictable. Like the headline suggests, it told parents to be honest with their kids when talking about you-know-what. It also quoted several experts.

Here's an example of some of the advice offered.

Elena Love, associate executive director of Planned Parenthood of Greater Dallas said, "Parents are funny. They can get passionate about drinking and driving, but when it comes to sex, they only give medical information. They should talk about the gutsy stuff, about feelings."

Like most people who grew up in the late '50s and early '60s, I learned sex the old-fashioned way — from listening to older, more worldly, friends and by looking at pictures of women's undergarments in the Sears and Roebuck catalog.

My parents were good, conscientious people but for whatever reason they shied away from the subject of sex. It wasn't exactly off-limits, but the topic rarely came up when we all gathered at the dinner table.

I should add, however, that my parents did produce four offspring so they obviously knew a little something about the subject. They just kept that knowledge to themselves.

In fact, there were only two times that I can remember the subject being broached — once initiated by me and the other time by my dad.

The first one was an innocent enough occurrence. I was 6 or 7 years old at the time and earlier that day I had happened across a word that I was not familiar with. It was written on the bathroom wall at school. Good taste won't allow me to print the word here, but it did, as I was to find out later, have something to do with sex.

That night I asked my mother what it meant.

Her face turned a frightening shade of white as her bottom lip fell somewhere around her knees. She quickly regained her composure and announced in a hushed tone, "That's a naughty word that nice little boys like you shouldn't use."

Her answer did not satisfy my curiosity, of course, but even as a 6-year-old I knew that was all the explanation I was going to get. I allowed the subject to die.

The second time the topic came up was two or three years later. My dad was driving me to Little League practice and I could tell something was on his mind. He wasn't his normal self. Instead of rambling on about my inability to hit a curve ball, he was very quiet, as though he was in deep thought about a serious matter.

Finally, he glanced at me and asked, "Gary, do you have any questions about life you'd like to discuss?"

His remark caught me off-guard since at that precise moment I was trying to visualize myself hitting a curve ball.

"What do you mean?" I'm reasonably certain that was not the answer he wanted to hear.

"You know," he pressed on as beads of sweat formed on his forehead. "Questions about girls and boys and love and where babies come from. That sort of thing."

"Oh, you mean the facts of life," I said, triumphantly. "I know all about that stuff."

"You do?"

"Sure. My friend Butch explained it to me a long time ago."

"Well, do you want ask me anything about it?"

"Nah," I replied. "I've got it all under control. He explained it real good."

"Great, great" he said, visibly relieved. "Now about the curve ball. You're swinging way too early. You've got to wait on the pitch..."

I just love father-son discussions.

SIDLIN

"We're at a very interesting crucial stage of the development of the American symphony orchestra because orchestras throughout the country are faltering or liquidating or striking or being locked out, and although many orchestras are thriving, there are signs of internal deterioration which I think are very serious. One of the ways in which disasters and collapse can be avoided is for the orchestra to be made relevant to the entire community and not merely a small segment of specified music lovers."

With that statement, Sidlin arrives at the reason for his involvement with the Chevron project.

"What our project does is introduce the music of Aaron Copland through the photographic choreography of Jim Westwater to audiences who are not necessarily the normal concert hall audiences."

Tickets, priced at $5 for adults and $2.50 for students and senior citizens, may be purchased at Texas Commerce Bank in Midland and Odessa and at the door. There is no charge for those under 12 when accompanied by an adult. Concert time is 8 p.m.

When Sidlin first met Westwater 10 years ago, his attitude about what Westwater wanted to do was vastly different than it is now.

"I was opposed to any process or procedure that would deter people from serious listening," Sidlin says.

"But, that was because I misunderstood what he was doing. Once I had a taste of his innovation and uniqueness, I became his biggest fan. We have done our photographic choreography-orchestral collaboration in a dozen cities or so in the years prior to our association with Chevron."

He finds the combination of the two quite valuable.

"I feel that because of the beauty of the synthesis of photography and music that he has created, the music plays an extraordinarily important role and is not merely a vehicle for the slides to do their dance," Sidlin says.

"What has emerged is a new art form which inspires less-experienced audiences to enjoy for nearly two hours the music of Aaron Copland, which is not a task that many would willingly undertake were it not for the photographic choreography."

For Sidlin, symphony orchestras have a three-part mission.

"First of all, we are foremost an artistic institution — our purpose is to play the world's great music with wonderful soloists, diverse programming in an artistic and expressive and exciting way in the major concert hall.

"Secondly, we are an institution of enlightenment, or if you prefer, an educational institution, but education should not be a term limited to grade school children. We open up the mysteries of great music via young people's concerts, pre-concert lectures, special forums and seminars, and we do this with the intention of breaking down all barriers between stage and audience and inviting children and adults into the world of music and its meaning.

"Thirdly, we are an institution of social service," he says. "A symphony orchestra in America in these, the last 14 years of the 20th century, cannot isolate itself within the community and simply demand support.

"We must use music as therapy (to inspire and reassure) by performing in hospitals, for the elderly, for those in correctional institutions, for those who are emotionally distressed, and thereby bring the purity of the meaning of music to the hearts and souls of those special audiences."

Another purpose occurs to him as he is talking. Symphony orchestras are also, on occasion, entertainment institutions which perform pops concerts, outdoor concerts and lighter musical fair, he says.

Sidlin believes it is crucial to the composer's art that audience members, whether they are first-time or seasoned concert-goers, trust their own judgment when listening to a musical presentation.

"People come into the concert hall and sit collectively with 2,000 to 3,000 friends, neighbors, colleagues, witnessing the same event, hearing the same sounds and no one perceives similarly, no one has the same reverie, no one draws upon exactly the same emotional context as a result of these sounds, because we are all different and our experiences are different and that uniqueness, that individuality, that special feeling or internal perception, is what the composer depends upon so that art remains interpretive.

"And if audiences would just trust themselves, that no matter what they heard, what they feel is valid, then I think we will have made a few converts. Audiences are brighter than they believe they are."

BROCK

"This was very complicated," Blankinship said. "I believe Ed (FBI Special Agent Ed Stroz) did a very good job in getting it (evidence) presented for the jury."

Blankinship said the federal investigation into Brock began in 1983 before the bank failed and was the result of an internal investigation by the bank. "And to the bank's credit, the bank reported it (suspected bank fraud) to the authorities."

"These jurors don't like people lining their pockets," Blankinship said.

Brock was charged with fraud in 1981 and 1982, when he was a $60,000-a-year vice president.

Blankinship noted that the five-year statute of limitations on the Brock fraud case had almost expired before he was indicted this year.

"You're not going to discover fraud until it's been hidden for awhile," he said.

The four-man, eight-woman jury in the Brock trial gave the case "a lot of thought — a lot of deliberation. We're well satisfied," Blankinship said. The average deliberation time in recent bank-fraud cases has been about 3½ hours. The Brock jury deliberated about eight hours.

Blankinship said the FBI's investigations in bank fraud in the Permian Basin "is continuing."

"THERE ARE GOOD bankers," the prosecutor said. "They do a good job. They don't line their pockets. The ones that do will have their day in court."

The jury convicted Brock of fraudulent participation in a loan and embezzlement by benefiting from loans he had made to some bank customer-borrowers. Brock had set up a business partnership with Sam Walker Orr, a bank customer who had borrowed $87,000 through the Bost Land Corp. Brock also was accused of taking $12,500 cash from the proceeds of an FNB loan and receiving promissory notes of $12,500 and $58,000 executed by Orr.

The jury also convicted Brock of fraudulently participating in a $5.6-million FNB loan which Midland oil-and-gas businessman J.L. Davis had made to raise funds to buy the stock of a Pecos bank. Brock was to become president of that bank.

Each of the three counts carries a five-year maximum sentence.

The jury found Brock "not guilty" on four other counts: two felony counts of making false entries in bank records and two misdemeanor counts of accepting $55,400 in gratuities from J.L. Davis in helping procure the $5.6-million loan. The defense contended that Davis paid Brock the $55,400 in 1982 for his work in locating a bank for Davis to purchase and for evaluating the Pecos bank. Brock had resigned from the Midland bank in late 1981 to work for Davis in lining up the Pecos bank, resigned that $60,000-a-year job and was rehired by FNB.

Since April 1985, six ex-bankers, including three former bank presidents, have been convicted of bank fraud by federal juries in Midland. They are:

— Eddie Thomas, 43, former president of the failed MetroBank of Midland, is serving a 20-year prison term for embezzlement and was ordered to pay $550,000 in restitution.

— Roger Harris Clark, 43, an engineer who was a director of Permian Bank & Trust of Odessa, was sentenced to 10 years in prison and was ordered to pay $378,317 in restitution.

— Max Malone, 53, former president of Permian Bank & Trust of Odessa, was sentenced to 24 years in prison and was ordered to pay $317,410 in restitution.

— Bill Tapp, 42, former president of Bank of the West in Odessa, was sentenced to 20 years in prison and was ordered to pay $500,000 in restitution.

— William Hoyle McCright, 61, former executive vice president and director of the First National Bank of Midland, was sentenced to 12 years in prison. He was convicted in September in Bunton's court.

Of the ex-bankers, only Thomas did not appeal his case to the federal appellate court in New Orleans.

CAUCUS

"We support foreign aid to Israel ...it is economically expedient for America. It is cheaper for America to give aid to Israel than to maintain a (large) military over there. And part of the money we give Israel ultimately comes back into our economy," Ms. McDonald said.

The Midland-Odessa AIPAC caucus was formed after being approached by regional AIPAC officials in Austin "to see if we in West Texas could help Israel," said Midlander Stan Saikin, co-chairman of the Midland-Odessa caucus.

"Nationwide there are probably 50,000 members; there is a caucus in probably every major city in the nation. We (Midland-Odessa) were the first small city-area to have a caucus," Saikin said.

"The main thing we do here in Midland-Odessa as well as on a nationwide basis, is provide up-to-date information and analysis of issues affecting Israel and the Middle East, and educate the American public on being a pro-Israel community," Saikin added.

The Midland-Odessa caucus has about 35 Jewish and 15 Christian members and meets about five or six times a year.

While AIPAC caucuses are concerned with maintaining good communication with Washington D.C., Saikin said they don't cross the boundary and attempt to influence policy.

Ms. McDonald said during her travels to Israel, she saw first-hand what she calls the "vulnerability of Israel."

"There are maybe 4.5 million Jewish people in Israel. They are surrounded by over 300 million Arabs. Israel is only 15 miles wide. Survival is a daily struggle to the people in Israel."

Ms. McDonald said she didn't know if she had an adequate background to make a statement on the possiblity of Israel transferring weapons to the terrorist nation of Iran.

"I trust our government sources in the U.S. and Israel. They have more information than the American public and press does. I feel they are operating in the best interests of the peace-keeping process.

"The Israelis are not going to do anything to escalate the military situation in the U.S. or Israel. They're not going to do anything that will weaken their chances of survival," Ms. McDonald said.

She said there are different reasons members join the AIPAC caucus, but one primary reason is the renewal of a religious commitment to Israel.

Ms. McDonald, who's been to Israel twice, said she felt historically, a majority of Christians have not had good feelings toward Israel.

"After 1947 (when Israel was declared a nation), Christians had to begin evaluating the Old Testament record...particularly in the 9th, 10th and 11th chapters of Romans where Paul is dealing with the Jewish people," Ms. McDonald said.

"And what's more — they're our best friends in the Middle East."

DEATHS

Velma Schubert

Velma Ruth Schubert, 78, of Midland died Sunday at a local hospital.

Services were to be at 1:30 p.m. today at the Ellis Chapel with the Rev. Jerry Berry of Kelview Heights Baptist Church officiating. Interment was to follow at Sunset Memorial Gardens in Odessa under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Schubert was born Oct. 26, 1908 in Brady, where she was reared. She met and married Edwin O. Schubert in Longworth April 4, 1926. They lived in Iraan for many years until moving to Odessa in 1966. In 1967 they moved to Midland. She was preceded in death by her husband in 1984.

She was a member of Kelview Heights Baptist Church.

Survivors include two sons, Bill Schubert of Midland and Gene Schubert of El Paso; one brother, J.T. Baker of Nobles, Okla.; six grandchildren; and five great-grandchildren.

Mrs. L.V. Pankey

Mrs. L.V. Pankey, 92, of Midland died Sunday at a Midland nursing home.

Services were to be today at 11 a.m. at the Ellis Chapel with the Rev. Lowell Cessna officiating. Burial was to follow at Fairview Cemetery under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Pankey was born March 13, 1894 in Blounts Town, Fla. She moved to Midland from Abilene in 1973.

She was a member of the Pentecostal church.

Survivors include two daughters, Margarett Ridley of Midland and Melba Willey of Goldthwaite; two grandchildren; and two great-grandchildren.

MISD to be dismissed Tuesday for holiday

From Staff Reports

Thanksgiving holidays for students and employees of the Midland Independent School District are scheduled Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, November 26, 27, and 28.

Classes will be dismissed at regular times Tuesday, November 25 and will resume at regular times Monday, December 1.

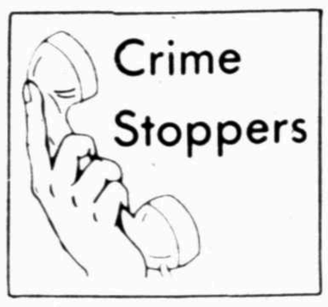

Crime Stoppers seeks burglary information

Crime Stoppers is asking the public's help this week to solve a burglary on Midland's west side.

On Nov. 4, about noon, Steven Laird returned to his home at 4613 Kiowa. He entered through the front door, and was surprised by a black male, 6 feet 1 or 2 inches tall, who threw him up against a wall. The suspect yelled at an unseen partner, then ran out the back door.

The burglars took electronic and video equipment, and jewelry, valued at more than $6,000. Some of the brand names stolen were RCA, Cannon, Sony, Genesis, and Dennon. Investigators said a bedroom window on the south side of the house was broken to gain entry.

The suspect is a black male in his early 20s, with a short afro haircut. He was wearing a light blue windbreaker and blue jeans.

A $1,000 reward is being offered, this week only, for information that leads to the arrest and indictment of those responsible for the burglary. Crime Stoppers in Midland can be reached at 694-TIPS, in Odessa at 333-TIPS. Callers do not have to reveal their identity.

Decision delayed on request to cut oil, gas production

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Railroad Commission Monday delayed for one month a decision on two Dallas oilmen's request to cut state oil and gas production by 10 percent.

Although all three commissioners said they had read most of the transcript of last Wednesday's hearing on the proposal, they unanimously agreed with Commissioner Mack Wallace to spend some more time studying it. They will issue a decision at their monthly oil and gas hearing Dec. 15

"Let's wait 30 days rather than act on it within so short a time," Wallace said. "It's a serious problem we're confronted with."

Dallas oilmen William Burrow and H.S. Bennett asked the commission to impose the cut, using its authority to prevent wasting state resources. Their plan, if adopted, would levy a 10-percent production curb on all oil and gas wells except stripper wells and those using special recovery techniques.

Bennett and Burrow said the cut would help bolster world oil prices, which have fallen by more than half since the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries flooded the market with low-priced crude last winter. Representatives of major oil companies disagreed with that assessment, saying other states and countries would simply fill the void and Texas would lose valuable tax revenue from the decline in production.

Odessa, Ector officials to decide on fire district

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A joint meeting of the Odessa City Council and Ector County Commissioners Court members continued late this morning in an effort to determine the future course of fire protection and emergency medical services for county residents outside the city limits.

A group of county residents have submitted a petition to Ector commissioners asking that an election be called to vote on establishment of a fire district, with taxing authority, to provide fire and emergency services to county residents.

The action was prompted by suggestions Commissioners Court members may terminate an existing contract for such services with the city because of increasing costs.

In the current fiscal year, the contract calls for the county to pay the city $525,000 for fire and emergency medical services.

According to city administration estimates, actual cost of providing these services to county residents costs about $1.5 million annually.

Commissioners tentatively have set Jan. 17 as the date for a fire district election but have yet to establish district boundaries.

The joint meeting today was an effort on the part of commissioners to determine the city's position on continued provision of fire and emergency medical services and what such services might cost the county in the future.

Under the contract, the Odessa Fire Department provides first response to the entire area within the bounds of Loop 338 as well as the city's industrial district and the Ponderosa Estates area. Beyond Loop 338 and south of Interstate 20, county volunteer fire departments provide first response and call on city firefighters as the need arises.

County Judge Jan Fisher has indicated she favors continuation of the contractual arrangement between the county and city depending on the cost to county taxpayers.

Creation of a fire district would mean a tax of as much a three cents per $100 of valuation could be levied.

Amber Hanson, an enterprising, 1st year 4-H member negotiates her loan with Wayne Merritt, United Bank President, as Shane Lowry, Midland County Agriculture Agent, looks on.

This annual 4-H project encourages their youth to learn an additional responsibility by allowing them to negotiate loan money with area lending institutions to turn a short term profit by applying the working capital to the purchase, raising, care and feeding of the animal(s) resulting in the stock sold in a closed Midland County Stock Sale Show January 16th-19th, 1987.

The payback is as with any short term loan and allows the youth the self fulfillment to work for his own additional profit which could apply to the next year's purchase.

Calves, lambs, swine and rabbits are the most popular stock with the calves, lambs and swine creating the best profitability buys.

Local businessmen are actively encouraged to purchase these 4-H animals as an investment in these young people's futures.

DRUG

In the other case, Investigator Fred Stubbs said a search warrant was executed about 9 p.m. at a residence on Princeton. Stubbs said a man who was renting the house and another man, both suspected of possessing methamphetamine, were arrested. Stubbs said about five grams of the substance was confiscated.

In still another case, four men were charged with delivery of cocaine and one man was also charged with attempted deadly assault on a peace officer after their arrest Friday night by undercover narcotics officers of the Midland Police Department.

The men were arrested about 8:30 p.m. Friday after they sold an amount of cocaine to an undercover officer, police said. According to reports, one vehicle tried to run down an officer, a chase followed, and shots were exchanged. The men were arrested on the south service road of Interstate 20 near the Garden City Highway.

Jose Santiago, 24, of Waco, is being held in lieu of $500,000 bond on a charge of delivery of cocaine. Arturo Martinez, 31, of Arlington, and Timothy Michael Walker, 25, of Midland, are being held on the same charge. Bond for each is set at $100,000.

Thomas Martinez, 29, of Hewitt, was charged with delivery of cocaine and attempted deadly assault on a peace officer. He is being held in lieu of bonds totaling $125,000.

In other reports, police are investigating the theft of a derrick sculpture valued at $3,500. According to reports, the seven-foot high copper and brass sculpture was stolen sometime Nov. 15 or Nov. 16.

Police are also investigating the theft of a stereo valued at $450. According to reports, the AM-FM cassette was stolen from a vehicle parked at Neatherlin Mazda, 2600 W. Wall St. The item was stolen between Nov. 15 and Nov. 17, reports said.

A radar detector valued at $275 was reported stolen from a business in the 3300 block of W. Illinois Avenue, police said. Reports said the the burglary occurred at Brown Oil Tool, apparently sometime Monday.

At that time, her attorney, David Lashford of Midland, said that he did "not sanction or condone people who take advantage of the system." Lashford said that Ms. Williams had found some "avenue of relief" to pay her daughter's medical bills.

Bunton told the woman in court in 1984 that "no doubt" the Social Security Administration money was to benefit her daughter. However, when she made false statements about her earnings in order to continue receiving benefits on behalf of her daughter, "You knew this was cheating, and this was lying," the judge said.

"I recognize that money went for your child," Bunton said. "I don't know why the Lord put this on you, but He did."

FASHION

Fashion gone to dogs in magazine spoof

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Fashion has gone to the dogs, literally and brilliantly, in a clever takeoff of Vogue magazine called Dogue.

In it, a Scottish terrier wears a Karl Dogerfeld braid-trimmed jacket for Kennel, with oodles of chains; an Yves Saint Bernard cape is modeled by a King Charles spaniel; there's a linen coat by Canine Klein. The jeans jacket — no surprise — is by Ruff Lauren.

In Dogue, dogs wear mud packs, furs, workout gear, Ruffion nail polish and Puppium perfume. Like models in Vogue, they have makeovers, try new recipes and relish advice.

There are fashion tips — "Dogue's Last Woof on Fashion in This Issue" — and a guide to creature comforts: "Today's upscale pup wants more than a folded blanket. You want ... deserve ... the best mattress that money can buy."

The ads put on the dog, by Canique (Clinique), Kennel (Chanel) and L'Air du Chien with both packaging of the product and of the ad amusingly similar to the original product.

The photographs by Fido Scavullo, Grrichard Avedon and Running Penn are funny variations of their human counterparts. In the Hounmutt Newton photo a retriever is biting the jeweled wrist of a woman; the Debruff Turberville is an eerily empty room with a spaniel in a pink robe on a chair covered with a throw.

IT IS clear the author of the book knows and loves dogs and clothes. Ilene Hochberg was an assistant buyer for full-figure clothes and then fashion coordinator for a large New York department store. On trips to Europe to scout the new season, Hochberg also bought fashions for her two dogs (now she has six).

"In Europe people have a greater respect for animals, and in France and Germany I could buy special things for my dogs," she says. When she walked her dog on the street with unusual leashes, collars and sweaters, people would stop and ask her about them. "There was nothing comparable in the stores here."

Five years ago, prompted by her husband, Hochberg chucked the people fashion business for the dog fashion business. They figured that with her fashion background, particularly her familiarity with the fabric market and patterns and products, "there was a whole market that wasn't being addressed," recalls Hochberg.

The hardest part was working out the specs, researching sizes. "Pattern makers I spoke to were not experienced in making dogs' clothing," she says. Her best help came from people who had worked on infant clothing. "They were willing to work on small-scale things," says Hochberg. It helped, too, if they were not afraid of dogs.

Hochberg did some market research to find what types of items people were looking for. "I wanted my clothes to be different than clothes available on the market, and similar in fashion and styling to what was popular for people." The formula worked. The first dog sweater was a variation of Ralph Lauren's most popular sweater at the time, with a sampler on the front. She called it her "Ruff Lauren" sweater.

SHE CALLED her business Dogwear because when she called fabric companies looking for materials, they would ask her if she needed fabrics for childrenswear, womenswear, menswear. She answered "dogwear."

To promote Dogwear, Hochberg created a knockoff of Women's Wear Daily called Dog Wear Daily. There wasn't a bark from WWD, and some of her friends called to ask how she got her dog's picture on the cover of the paper.

The newspaper, DWD, had a coupon on the back. Hochberg got lots of responses. Everyone liked the clothing shown and loved the newspaper. "I figured that maybe I was in the wrong facet of the business." That's when she started to play with the idea of Dogue. "It worked so well with the name Vogue, it was the perfect point of departure."

Obviously Hochberg knows Vogue well. She remembers that when she got home from camp at age 12, the first thing she wanted to see was Vogue. Even before that she was interested in clothes, always giving out advice to friends. Hochberg's grandmother was a fine dressmaker who made couture-quality dresses for her Barbie doll.

Hochberg got her first dog at age 8. She called it Brownie although it wasn't brown "but it looked like a brownie with nuts in it." Her current six dogs appear as models in Dogue. Her dogs are used to being fitting models and posing for publicity. "They are real hams," she says.

She hired fashion photographer Peter Serra, who did the cover shot and the black-and-white sweater layout. Those were tests shots for Serra, who admitted to Hochberg he didn't like dogs and wanted to turn the job down. "I'm uncomfortable; the dogs are unpredictable." After that he did only the product shots, like the plate and place mats, "Pawcelain Pour Vous, Phydeau."

THAT'S WHEN she enlisted Hank Londoner, a fashion photographer she had worked with earlier, who, she remembered, owned dogs. "I remember the warmth he had for his animals," says Hochberg. "He was a natural choice."

Models weren't a problem. She needed more variety other than her six. She worked with Bashkim Dibra, a dog trainer who has worked with White House dogs and trained Hochberg's pets for housebreaking and basic commands. He recently opened an animal talent agency, training house pets to behave well in front of the camera and in stressful situations.

There was only one prima donna in the pack. The rest sat calmly enjoying one another's company. Hochberg's own dog Bubbles was the model for the mud pack picture. "She's a good girl and will let me do anything. She knows I won't do her any harm." The mud pack was Borghese's finest, the kind Hochberg wears herself. "Probably because she has seen me in a mud pack, she didn't mind for herself," says Hochberg.

Hochberg was worried about putting her Cavalier King Charles into skiwear and mirrored goggles. "I thought she would be uncomfortable." She dressed the dog early to get it acclimated to the cumbersome garb. "The dog just loved the attention, walking around preening, and after the shot ran away to hide so we wouldn't take the clothes off her."

And for all her friends who told Hochberg she was barking up the wrong tree by doing a book on dogs when all the world loves cats, she has in mind to do a parody on cats.

Harpers Catzaar? Catmoiselle?

It is hard to top Dogue.

AT WIT'S END

Confession good

By ERMA BOMBECK

When parents reach a certain age (with me, it was somewhere between elastic waistbands and 100 percent bran), your children feel obliged to share with you all the things they got by with that you didn't catch.

Some of these experiences are rich in drama. One son confided to me that he was once threatened with a parent conference for "belching the 'Ave Maria' during Mass." I never found out about it because he told the principal he was thinking of become a priest and it would look bad on his record. Another one admitted to backing my car out of the driveway when he was 10. For years, I had hostile feelings toward our dog, Kate, because I was told she broke my favorite lamp. In a rare confession, the kids admitted they locked the sitter outside in the snow, had a shoe fight and demolished it.

They don't set you down one night and parade their sins before you for several hours. That's not the way it works. They wait until you're in a really good mood and are laughing and your arms are around them and out of the blue they will say, "Remember the time you sent me to that camp where we had to sleep with mice and the mattresses smelled icky and I called home and said I was stung by a bee and felt like I was having an allergic reaction and you drove 70 miles to come and get me and take me home? Well, I wasn't stung by a bee. I was just bored."

I don't know how I'm supposed to react to this. It must be the way men feel when they are tricked into marriage and there is no baby on the way and never was. They said confession was good for the soul. They didn't say whose.

I guess parents ask for it. They set themselves up as all-seeing, all-knowing, all-omnipotent super human beings who have eyes in the back of their heads and bionic ears.

I have since discovered that all those years they told us they were doing "nothing," they were doing "something."

The other day as one of them confessed to stuffing all his papers down the sewer one week so he wouldn't be late for a game, I said, "Remember the time when you were 7 and I told you if you didn't shape up I was going to mail you to a post office box in Laredo, Texas? I did that just to scare you. And the time I sent you to your room when I accused you of putting a hole in the living room sofa cushion? You didn't do that. My needlepoint scissors did."

"Why are you telling us that now?" they asked.

I told them, "Confession is good for the soul."

DEAR ABBY

Daughter living with lover also living with guilt

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am a 20-year-old, third-year college student with a big problem. Four months ago I moved in with my boyfriend, and since that time my family has thrown more guilt my way than a person can deal with in a lifetime. My mom says I will roast in hell and she will never accept my boyfriend as a son-in-law. (We plan to marry next year.) The last time my mom called, she begged me to move out, saying my sinful action is killing my grandparents — that my grandfather has removed all my pictures from their house and refuses to speak my name. My mom says my grandparents cry all the time and may never let me in their house again. Also, their 50th wedding anniversary party has been called off because I chose to live with my boyfriend.

Don't you think I am old enough to make my own decisions for my life, or should I allow my family to "blackmail" me into a decision made by them? I want to do the right thing. — LOST IN PORTLAND

DEAR LOST: You are indeed old enough to make your own decisions, but unless you can live with those decisions, you will reap more grief than joy. It's to your credit that you care enough about your family's feelings to have written to me, and even though you'd be submitting to emotional blackmail to move out, I think for now you'd be happier moving than staying.

DEAR ABBY: Re the poem in your column that went:

"Married in white, you've chosen right,
"Married in blue, you will always be true,
"Married in green, ashamed to be seen,
"Married in red, you'll wish you were dead" etc.

I have a better ending:

"Married in pink, your marriage will stink."

I was. And mine did. — ANNABELLE IN SPARKS, NEV.

DEAR ABBY: This is a plea for help from all the hooked cigarette smokers — myself included. I started smoking at 17 to lose a few pounds. I'm 39 now. Twenty-two years ago, there were no health warnings, so I didn't know how addicting nicotine could be. Quitting is not just a matter of will power. If it were that easy, very few people would be smoking. This year, so far, I have tried a video stop-smoking program, hypnosis and the Shick Center — all to no avail.

It appears to be the "in" thing today to pick on smokers. Doesn't anyone realize that a little pity would go a lot further? We aren't criminals; we're victims. Most of us are considerate and try not to offend nonsmokers.

We smokers get unsolicited advice from strangers — even children. One child said to me, "Why do you smoke so much? Don't you know you're killing yourself?"

Would you instruct your child to approach an obese person and say, "Why do you eat so much? Don't you know you're killing yourself?"

Please don't get me wrong. I'm not trying to justify smoking. I'm just asking for help and understanding, not abuse and humiliation. The worst day of my life was when I lit my first cigarette. You may use my name. — MARCIA EDGERLY, SIMI VALLEY, CALIF.

DEAR MARCIA: As for "picking on smokers," I have led the way, but I'm not short on compassion or understanding. Watch this space tomorrow for my Annual Great American Smokeout Day column. And don't buy any more cigarettes between now and then.

Poll indicates Texans voted against White

STATE

HOUSTON (AP) — When Mark White was elected governor in 1982, about 39 percent of Texas voters said they had voted against Republican Bill Clements. Two weeks ago, voters said they were against White when casting their ballots to elect Clements, a recent poll says.

Another factor in White's defeat was the demise of the straight-ticket voter, according to a poll released Monday by Houston-based Tarrance, Hill, Newport and Ryan.

In a state that is traditionally Democrat, only 29 percent of the 600 Texas voters surveyed said they voted straight ticket. That was down from 47 percent two years ago.

"It was shocking to see how many conservative Democrats went for Bill Clements,' said Lance Tarrance, president of the polling firm. According to the poll, 45 percent of the voters who label themselves conservative Democrats voted for Clements, and 41 percent of them said they specifically were voting against White.

The poll, which has an error factor of plus or minus 4.1 percent, indicated voters believed White was wrong on the issues and lacked leadership.

"It's quite a comment when the incumbent lacks leadership in the electorate," Tarrance said.

The statewide survey of 600 voters shows negative voting accounted for 36 percent of Clements' support in the election two weeks ago.

"This is very, very high for Americans to say they are against somebody," David B. Hill, vice president of political affairs for the firm, said.

Hill said that in a typical election, about 15 percent of the voters would cite they voted for a candidate because they were against the opponent.

"Both candidates seem to excite substantial amounts of animosity," Hill noted.

"We've never seen a campaign where both candidates were so negative," Tarrance added.

The firm, which does polling and consulting for Republicans around the country, was not involved with either candidate in the November election in Texas. The firm has conducted similar post-election polls the past 10 years.

The poll, broken down by candidates, showed Texans by a 3-1 margin believed Clements could do a better job of keeping taxes down and have better communications with officials in Washington and by a 2-1 margin be a more effective leader than White.

Laws prevent wife from filing charges

VERNON (AP) — A woman who said her husband forced her to have sex with another man cannot file charges against him because of a Texas law that prohibits a husband being charged in the sexual assault of his wife, authorities said.

Foard County District Attorney Gene Heatly said statements from the woman and the man with whom she was forced to have sex indicated that she did not protest during the act. Because of that and another Texas law, Heatly said, charges can be brought against neither the man who was initially arrested nor the woman's husband.

"I would have rather filed charges on the husband and lost in court than not to have done anything," said Foard County Sheriff Loy Hopkins.

The incident allegedly occurred March 3 in Crowell, a town of about 1,500 residents 30 miles southwest of here.

Hopkins said he arrested the husband four days later, and bail was set at $100,000. But he said that by law he couldn't hold the man without filing charges.

The Vernon Daily Record said the wife, whose name was withheld as are other victims of alleged sexual assault, said she reported the incident because her husband threatened to do the same thing again. She has since divorced him, the newspaper said.

"When you read the statutes, it does sound like a spouse has been exempted from sexual assault," said Reed Lockhoof, assistant Texas attorney general. "The wording of the statute appears to create a legal obstacle to prosecution."

Hopkins said statements given after the alleged rape indicated the husband wanted the other man to make his wife work as a prostitute.

Gramm to propose immigration law amendment

WASHINGTON (AP) — By the time the new law banning employers from hiring illegal aliens goes into effect in May, Sen. Phil Gramm wants a provision to prevent businesses from being punished unfairly.

Gramm, R-Texas, said Monday he would introduce an amendment to the immigration law calling for creation of tamperproof Social Security cards and a telephone system to verify their validity.

He said the system would serve as insurance for employers who face criminal and civil penalties for hiring illegal aliens when the revamped immigration law goes into effect on May 1.

"As of now we really have no effective means to try to help employers who are trying to comply with the law and not hire illegal aliens," Gramm said in a news conference.

"We have no effective measure to enable people to identify themselves. And I am deeply concerned that unless something is done quickly, that...we're going to have a lot of employers who are going to be in violation of the law," Gramm said.

Gramm's Immigration Fairness In Reform Amendment Number One calls for four specific provisions aimed at making the law more practical, he said.

The first would establish a telephone system an employer could use to verify the legal status of any worker he was considering hiring, "just as the authenticity of a credit card can be verified at a retail store," Gramm said.

Secondly, Gramm's proposal would require the Social Security Administration to create a new tamperproof card within a year in an effort to elimiate counterfeit cards and give the new card reliability.

"The amendment requires that this card be made available at cost to any person who either applies for a new card" or has an old one, Gramm said. "According to the Social Security Administration, this card cannot be counterfeited."

He displayed a sample card printed on blue paper similar to that used to make currency, but with raised lettering. The cost of making such a card is $12, but could drop to as little as $1 if it became widely used, Gramm said.

The amendment would also require by law that all applicants for cards provide evidence of citizenship and identity, now only an agency regulation, Gramm said.

Senate counsel defends Iran arms shipment

HOUSTON (AP) — President Reagan had the authority to send arms to Iran says a Senate subcommittee on security and terrorism official who also defended the president's actions.

"It is the president, not Congress that directs foreign policy and he should be allowed to do so," Joel Lisker, the chief counsel for the Senate subcommitte on security and terrorism, told about 150 people attending a Monday conference called Terrorism and Corporate America.

In a televised address last week, Reagan told the nation he had ordered the transfer of small amounts of weapons to Iran as part of an 18-month secret diplomatic effort to reopen ties to the Islamic nation and to bring about the release of Americans held hostage by Iranian admirers in Lebanon.

Lisker said the president has said no ransom was paid and no concessions were made.

"It may be that the facts will prove otherwise," he said. "But until then, we should give the president the benefit of the doubt."

Lisker said recent events involving U.S. arms shipments to the Middle East country helped shift the focus and criticism from Iran to the president and his administration.

"Iran's objective has more than been achieved," he said.

Terrorism, Lisker believes, "will be with us through the millennium."

Curbing terrorism involves convincing those countries that sponsor terrorists that such acts "in the long run won't work and will cost them their power," he said.

Parker W. Borg, the State Department's principal deputy of the Ambassador-at-Large for Counter Terrorism, said when dealing with terrorism, "governments are not as consistent as they might be."

"It is not the first time a government appears to have done something contrary to its policy," Borg told conference participants in discussing the arms shipments to Iran.

Each government tends to look at its problems "exclusively as it affects its citizens," Borg said.

Increased cooperation between countries is needed to help stop terrorism, a worldwide problem, he said.

"Terrorism is a long-term problem," he added. "To be successful in it, we have to develop policies that are more consistent.

Inmate stabbed after reading another's paper

ROSHARON (AP) — A Texas Department of Corrections inmate who read a fellow inmate's newspaper was stabbed four times in the chest and lower back, a prison spokesman said.

Jeffrey Scott Quintana, 25, was taken to a nearby hospital before being transferred to the prison hospital in Galveston, spokesman David Nunnelee said Monday. He is listed in serious condition, Nunnelee said.

Quintana, serving a six-year sentence for a Tarrant County conviction of delivery of marijuana, kidnapping and attempted sexual assault, was reading a newspaper in the day room at the Darrington Unit about 5:30 p.m. Sunday when another inmate grabbed the paper, hit him in the face and walked out of the room. The inmate who owned the paper returned five minutes later armed with a four-inch paring knife, Nunnelee said.

A hearing in the stabbing was scheduled for a 37-year-old inmate serving a life sentence for voluntary manslaughter out of Denton County, Nunnelee said.

There have been 88 stabbings within the Texas prison system, the nation's second largest, so far this year and two violence-related deaths, Nunnelee said.

Bill Dillon points out ways to save on homeowner's insurance

Texas law allows for five percent premium discount

Bill Dillon said that the Texas Legislature, on October 1, 1982, put into law a bill sponsored by Midland's own Tom Craddick that would reduce your house insurance by five percent if certain security standards are met.

There are six requirements that the homeowner must meet in order to qualify for the five percent premium discount. Your insurance agent or the Midland Police Department Crime Prevention Units, headed by Sergeant Camarillo can give you a brochure outlining the six requirements.

The requirements cover deadbolt locks, double doors, dutch doors, garage doors, sliding glass doors and windows. There are no special devices such as alarms or detectors required for the discount. When you feel that you qualify, you may request a Homeowner's Security Credit inspection by contacting your police department. An inspector will visit your home and file a written report with the Texas State Board of Insurance which will issue a Premium Reduction Certificate if your property qualifies. The certificate is valid for three years and can be renewed for an additional three years at the policyholder's request. Your home will be much more secure against burglars which is the point of the program.

Bill Dillon said to go by his office at 1202 Andrews Highway and pick up a Texas Home Security brochure. While you are there, Bill can show you the advantages of insuring your home with State Farm Fire and Casualty Company, the number one homeowner insurance company in the United States.

For unusual gifts and tasty goodies, it's Country Charm

Denise Carter invites you to enjoy a homemade cookie and fresh coffee, while you browse at Country Charm, 4313-B Illinois. Now's the time to order cakes, cookies and candy for the holidays.

Holidays are times for good old fashioned baking and unusual little gifts. That means it's time for Country Charm, located at 4313-B Illinois.

If you're looking for a special gift, you are sure to find it among the many antiques and hand-made items at this store. While you're browsing through the wood items, fabric crafts and antique glassware, owner Alicia King invites you to enjoy a fresh baked cookie and hot coffee, compliments of the store.

You'll discover cute little scarecrows which will hang or sit, original photo album covers with lace, beautiful porcelain dolls, hanging quilt racks, scented hot pot holders, Americana figures, afghans and quilts for the babies, Texas golf towels, ceramic and wooden ducks and geese. Have you ever seen a plunger with a goose's head on the handle?

Wooden accessories that look like store fronts, books and other items are displayed near the Big Mouths. These big-mouthed little creatures, will hold tooth picks, pens, pencils and other small items. What a great office gift!

Especially endearing are the Hydra-Stone animals. The eyes of these characters - poodles, pigs, basset hounds and more - seem almost real.

Country Charm even has some wooden serving trays, exquisitely decorated with pictures of cows, ducks and sheep.

Hand-blown glassware from Pennsylvania is one more of the items displayed among the array of antiques, including a secretary, wardrobe, gate leg table, Bentwood rocker and benches.

Country Charm will make your Christmas decorating easy with all sorts of decorations, including wreaths. Some of the wreaths are even edible, being made from colorfully wrapped candies.

While you're browsing, you'll certainly be tempted by the aroma of fresh cakes and candy. Alicia keeps a selection of her delicious candy, whether it be fudge, peanut brittle, marshmallow fudge or another old-fashioned favorite, in a glass case. You'll want to take some home with you. You'll also want to order cakes and candy for your holiday gatherings. Divinity, fudge (old fashioned, marshmallow, white and peanut butter) or peanut brittle may be your favorite. There are also some special Christmas cookies, which are sort of like fruit cake. They'll all make your mouth water, and Alicia won't tell if you claim to have baked them yourself.

Whether you want a cake, cookies or candy, it is time to order it.

Country Charm also makes cute suckers, which are terrific for school parties. Because each sucker requires individual attention, it is especially important to order early.

For those who want to make their own holiday treats, but aren't quite sure of themselves in the kitchen, ask about a candy-making class. Alicia says if there is enough interest, she'll offer one in November.

Candy making supplies- including Nestle's chocolate, dry macaroon coconut, caramels, food color, sucker molds and sticks, molds for mints and more - are always in stock.

Another very special thing that Alicia makes is Cookie Bouquets. They're cute and tasty. It's a perfect way to cheer someone up during this hectic holiday season. Country Charm will deliver the bouquets in baskets. Balloons can even be attached. If you prefer, a dozen "long stemmed" cookies can be delivered in a box.

Drop by Country Charm and enjoy a home made cookie and hot coffee while you browse. The store is open Tuesday through Friday, 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. and Saturday 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Manpower shares Christmas with Big Brothers and Big Sisters

Manpower is proud to announce their first annual Christmas drive for Big Brothers and Big Sisters. It is Manpower's wish that they can make it the best Christmas ever for these children.

During the holiday season, Manpower will be sponsoring several events which they hope will draw in donations of clothes, toys and food. They are also asking area businesses to contribute new toys for credit toward free temporary help.

Linda Macias, executive director for Big Brothers/Big Sisters, says that statistics show that needed attention given by a big brother or sister helps the child to improve in the classroom and prevents juvenile delinquency. All of the little brothers and sisters who are matched with volunteers and those waiting to be matched are growing up with single parents. Linda and Big Brothers-/Big Sisters are counting on Manpower to sponsor five of these families. The ages of the children range from three months to 15 years, and the group includes both girls and boys. If you are able to contribute please call their office at 683-4624. They will be glad to pick up your donation. Your help will be greatly appreciated.

Vicki Hicks, manager of Manpower Temporary Services in Midland, says that despite the floundering economy, the people in Midland have shown great strength and spirit. The Manpower staff knows that they have to be there through thick and through thin, helping clients solve their staffing problems in a flexible and economic way.

Manpower is constantly working on new ways to upgrade the quality of service. Through careful screening of applicants and thorough testing Manpower can totally guarantee their service. But, that's not all. Manpower is leading the way in office automation training and testing.

Manpower also offers an industrial division to help with all of your labor needs.

Other divisions include: technical, for all of your professional needs; and marketing. Whether demonstrating your product, handing out samples or assuming the role of your favorite mascot, each assignment receives the same professional attention.

So for all of your temporary help needs, call Manpower - the world's largest temporary help service and experience the quality you deserve from a temporary service.

Pam Taylor (left to right), Fran Sturgis, Terri Cardona and Linda Macias of Big Brothers/Big Sisters gladly accept a box of toys from Vicki Hicks, Carole Paul and Staci Turner of Manpower. Manpower is sponsoring several events this year to draw in donations of clothes, toys and food for children in the Big Brothers-/Big Sisters program.

Midland Small Engine offers parts, equipment, quality service

Midland's already had its first freezing weather, and you may be getting ready to put the lawn equipment away for winter. Wait, before you put that mower to bed for the cold months consider having it tuned up and winterized at Midland Small Engine Service, which offers repair for air-cooled engines.

If your mower has gotten a little sluggish or just plain cranky, you can expect it to be even worse next spring. Get it taken care of now, you won't have to wait in line next spring while the grass is growing, growing, growing.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernie Klatt opened Midland Small Engine Service 30 years ago, so they are well prepared to offer expert service on most major brands of lawn equipment engines, as well as air cooled engines utilized in industrial, institutional and oil field work and construction (on cement mixers, welders, etc.). Of course, they can handle lawn tractors, too. They can also offer services such as reel sharpening for mowers and magneto repair for the oil field.

They offer the fastest service possible to all their customers and understand the special needs of those who use their equipment for business. Of course, everyone can count on faster service during the slower winter months.

Because this store is a distributor for several lines air cooled engines and parts, you can depend on them to have an extensive selection of parts in stock. Wheels, engines, belts and other lawn mower parts, including some do-it-yourself kits are just part of what they have. This helps you avoid long waits when service is needed.

Whether you have your mower tuned up this year or not, Mr. Klatt offers a word of wisdom - don't leave the gas in your mower over the winter months. Doing this may gum up the carburetor when you start it next spring.

He also offers this tip - for fast service, have your model number handy. Getting the right part the first time helps.

Perhaps your mower is past the point where it's cost efficient to repair it. You'll be glad to know that Midland Small Engine offers Snapper, Toro and Sensation mowers; Power Trim edgers; Tru-Cut reels; and Gilson, Snapper, and Toro riding lawn mowers. Even Grasshopper riding mowers are available for those with professional-size work loads. The Klatts have chosen some of the best to assure their customers years of good service.

Midland Small Engine Service keeps a nice stock of quality yard care accessories which make good Christmas gifts. Hand lopping shears, hedge shears and pruning shears come in handy this time of year. Gasoline storage cans, grass shears, hoes, shovels, rakes and other hand tools from this store will be appreciated by those who know quality equipment when they see it.

Speaking of quality, the McCullough line trimmers and Little Wonder electric hedge trimmers, offered at Midland Small Engine Service, are some of the best available anywhere. While many hedge trimmers are best tossed in the trash with the first sign of trouble, the Little Wonder is repairable and promises years of usefulness. For the line trimmers, this store keeps a good stock of line, so you'll never be caught short on those little trimming jobs.

Brenda, James and Teresa (left to right) at Midland Small Engine Service, 106 Carlton, are ready to assist you with your small engine needs. They also have some Christmas gift ideas.

Midland Small Engine Service, located at 106 Carlton just behind Blue Star Inn, is open Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. If you have a question about their services or parts selection, just call 684-5553. Brenda, James and Teresa are on the front counter and always ready to help.

All Seasons Chimney Service: Every fireplace needs a chimney cap

Once again it's that time of year for cleaning those fireplaces and preparing them for winter, but chimney care should not stop with just a cleaning, a chimney cap should be seriously considered.

"We are amazed at the number of damaged fireplaces we find, due to an un-capped chimney. The most common damage we find is where the brick is cracked and the mortar is falling out," said the owner of All Seasons.

The West Texas weather with its rain and heat takes its toll on chimney structures. Rain causes the most destruction to a chimney. "Seldom have we seen an un-capped chimney more than five years old that hasn't suffered some sort of water damage," the expert said.

An open chimney allows rain on the smoke shelf, and when mixed with creosote from burned wood creates a highly corrosive acid. That mixture then seeps down and attacks the mortar joints in the back wall of the fireplace. The mortar becomes weak and the bricks on the firewall become loose or cracked.

Additional damage occurs when rain soaks into the mortar joints in the flue and freezes. The freezing causes the mortar bands to expand, weakening the entire fireplace structure.

Metal flues and dampers will be permanently damaged in five to 10 years if left exposed. "You probably won't see the oxidation (rust), until it's too late, and dampers are costly to replace,"said the expert.

Another reason for installing a cap is to control sparks. Many homes in Midland have wood shingles, which make them very vulnerable to roof fires. This is especially dangerous on windy days. Installing a cap will control those sparks.

All Seasons Chimney Service has several types of caps to choose from. Their 'flue caps' offer complete protection to the internal parts of the fireplace.

Their 'custom caps' (see photo), cover the entire chimney top, protecting both the mortar top and inside, while providing an attractive piece of fireplace hardware.

All caps are made of a strong galvanized metal and painted to provide extra protection and an attractive appearance. Free estimates on caps are available at the homeowner's convenience.

Remember, a chimney which has not been cleaned for several years is a candidate for a chimney fire.

Fireplaces should be cleaned on the average of every two to three cords of wood burned. Some chimneys build up creosote at a faster rate than others, depending on the wood burned and draft capabilities. Creosote accumulation is the major concern for having your chimney cleaned. Creosote comes from the unburned gases in wood smoke, which is highly combustible and can turn your fireplace into a blazing inferno.

All Season Chimney Service uses a specially designed vacuum system to control any dust or soot brought down by sweeping the chimney. Extra care is taken in keeping your home free of any dust or chimney soot.

These experts also offer gas starter replacement, flue extensions and minor fireplace repair.

For professional service in Midland, Odessa, Stanton and Greenwood, call All Seasons Chimney Service at 697-7585.

Office hours are 8:00 a.m. to 9:00 p.m., Monday through Saturday.

All Seasons Chimney Service installs custom caps, measured and designed to fit each individual fireplace. The owner of All Seasons Chimney Service is shown installing a custom cap after a chimney cleaning. For appointments or free estimates, call 697-7585 between 8 a.m. and 9 p.m.

It may have been boring, but it was long

WASHINGTON (AP) — Maybe it was just as well that most of the nation was probably asleep by the time the Washington Redskins finished beating the San Francisco 49ers 14-6.

This game wasn't made for prime time.

It was the longest game in Monday night history — 3 hours and 53 minutes, finally ending at 11:57 CST — and contained numerous other dubious milestones, so much so that the scoring was almost incidental.

For the record, George Rogers ran one yard for one Washington touchdown in the first quarter and Jay Schroeder passed 27 yards to Gary Clark for the other on the Redskins' first possession of the second half as Washington got back into a first-place tie in the NFC East with the New York Giants, each at 9-2.

San Francisco, which dropped to 6-4-1 and lost a chance to move into the NFC West lead, got its points on 34- and 38-yard field goals by Ray Wersching.

In between was futility. "Somehow, some way, we have a way of winning," was the way Washington Coach Joe Gibbs summed it up.

San Francisco's Joe Montana, who last week made a dazzling comeback from back surgery, completed 33 of 60 passes for 441 yards, team records in both attempts and yardage.

But he was intercepted three times; overthrew a wide-open Jerry Rice in the end zone; had another sure TD pass dropped by Joe Cribbs, and had the dubious distinction of becoming the first quarterback ever to throw for more than 400 yards without his team scoring a touchdown. Five times the 49ers were inside the Redskins 20 but all they came out with were the two field goals.

"I didn't feel rusty, but I got tired at the end," Montana said.

"We just seemed a bit out of synch," said tight end Dwight Clark, Montana's his favorite target until Rice came along.

The 49ers, who outgained the Redskins 501-266, were penalized 15 times for 118 yards, a team record, and continually had drives stalled by yellow flags. Rice, for example, caught 12 passes for 204 yards, but lost 67 more yards in receptions by penalty, including one that nullified a 19-yard gain to the Washington four.

"It's awfully tough to keep walking back to the huddle and having big gains erased," Rice said.

Coach Bill Walsh added that "some of those calls were mind-boggling; a couple were very questionable."

But the 49ers also had trouble containing the Washington pass rush.

While the Redskins sacked Montana only three times, five of the penalties were holding calls on offensive linemen and Montana was constantly hurried, particularly by Dexter Manley, who had said of Montana before the game: "I'll ring his clock."

The 49ers quarterback was running away from Manley when he overthrew Rice from 15 yards away in the third quarter and again on an interception by Calvin Daniels that killed a fourth-quarter drive at the Washington 15..

"Our opponent was better tonight," said Walsh, whose team would have leapfrogged over the 7-4 Los Angeles Rams with a win "They were just a step better on most of the plays."

But Washington's offensive numbers were minimal. Rogers carried 24 times for 104 yards, his fifth 100-yard game this year, and Schroeder was 17 of 40 for 170 yards, making it an even 100 passes thrown in the game.

And even some of the Redskins conceded the fates just seemed to be on their side.

"It was our night," said safety Curtis Jordan, who conceded he made the wrong read on the pass that Cribbs dropped on the Washington 10 with no Redskin within 15 yards.

AP's top powers given title path

Associated Press

Thanks in large part to Minnesota, top-ranked Miami and No. 2 Penn State are within one game of a matchup for the championship of college football.

The 21st such meeting since The Associated Press began the football poll in 1936 came into sharper focus last Saturday when Minnesota, a four-time loser this season, shocked second-ranked and previously unbeaten Michigan 20-17.

That cleared the way for third-ranked Penn State, 10-0 after a 24-19 defeat of Notre Dame, to slip into second place behind Miami. The Hurricanes, also 10-0, retained the top spot for the eighth consecutive week after dispatching Tulsa 23-10.

Michigan, meanwhile, plunged to sixth and out of the national championship race.

If Miami and Penn State can each win one more game — Penn State plays Pittsburgh on Saturday, Miami opposes East Carolina on Thanksgiving night — the national championship game would be played in the Fiesta Bowl on the night of Jan. 2.

MIAMI ATTRACTED 56 first-place votes and was second on the other four to easily outdistance Penn State in this week's rankings. The Hurricanes earned 1,196 out of a possible 1,200 points to 1,119 for Penn State, which got three first-place nods.

Oklahoma, a 28-0 winner over Colorado, moved up one spot to third with 1,083 points while Arizona State, which got the other first-place vote, claimed fourth with 1,025 points. ASU, the only other major undefeated team, improved to 9-0-1 by routing Wichita State 52-6.

Nebraska, which plays Oklahoma on Saturday for the Big Eight championship and an Orange Bowl berth, climbed into fifth after crushing Kansas 70-0. The Cornhuskers moved up one spot after collecting 964 points.

Michigan was next with 856 points, followed by Ohio State, which opposes the Wolverines on Saturday in a game that will decide Arizona State's opponent in the Rose Bowl. Ohio State, which has won nine in a row after losing its first two games, beat Wisconsin 30-17.

Auburn, last week's No. 8 team, lost to Georgia 20-16 and fell to 15th place. That paved the way for LSU to jump from 12th to eighth. The Tigers collected 730 points after trouncing Mississippi State 47-0.

Alabama, 11th last week, rejoined the Top Ten in the ninth position after beating Temple 24-14. The Top Ten was rounded out by Southern California, which beat California 28-3.

The Second Ten includes Arkansas, Washington, Texas A&M, Arizona, Auburn, Stanford, Baylor, UCLA, Clemson and Georgia.

Last week, it was Alabama, LSU, Southern Cal, Arizona, Clemson, Stanford, Arkansas, Baylor, UCLA and Mississippi.

Washington dropped from No. 10 last week after a 17-17 tie with UCLA, and Texas A&M plunged from No. 7 after a 14-10 loss to Arkansas.

Mississippi, which made the Top Twenty last week for the first time in 10 years, promptly dropped out by losing to Tennessee 22-10. The Rebels were replaced by Georgia, which appeared in the rankings four times earlier in the season.

Hoopsters hit courts in openers

From Staff Reports

The 1986-87 high school basketball season opens today with three of the four local teams opening at home.

The Midland High Bulldogs, who missed the state playoffs by one game last winter, are hoping to find the mixture to turn that around this season and will host the Class 4A Brownfield Cubs at 8 p.m. in Chaparral Center. A junior varsity contest will precede the action at 6:15 p.m.

The Midland High and Midland Lee girls, both in the playoffs last year, also open at home tonight. The MHS girls will host Class 4A Lamesa at 7:30 p.m. in the MHS gym with the junior varsities playing prior to that contest.

Lee's girls will host the Stanton Buffaloes at 8 p.m. in the Lee gym with sophomores and junior varsity teams meeting prior to that contest.

The Lee boys, another playoff team last year, open the season on the road tonight when they travel to Lubbock Coronado for an 8 p.m. outing. Sophomore and JV games are also scheduled in Lubbock.

All local teams will be involved in non-conference action until late December. This is the time to work out any kinks. And there are usually plenty of those at this stage of the season.

Hillin ninth in racing points

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Dale Earnhardt finished the 29-race NASCAR circuit with the highest Winston Cup point total since 1978 to win his second national title while Midland's Bobby Hillin Jr. finished ninth overall after posting his first career NASCAR victory this year.

Earnhardt had clinched the title before Sunday's Western 500 at Riverside International Raceway, but second place was up for grabs between Darrell Waltrip and Tim Richmond.

Although Richmond won Sunday's race, Waltrip finished fourth — high enough to hang onto second place in the year-long points race.

Bill Elliott finished fourth in the final standings with 3,844 points, followed by Ricky Rudd with 3,823; Rusty Wallace with 3,762; Bobby Allison with 3,698; Geoff Bodine with 3,678; Hillin with 3,546; and Kyle Petty with 3,537.

Earnhardt finished the year with 4,468 points to win the national title by 288 points over Waltrip, who had 4,180. Richmond was next with 4,174.

Sunday's victory was Richmond's seventh of the season, more than any other driver this year.

Earnhardt's title-winning margin was the fourth-highest since NASCAR adopted the current points system in 1975. Richard Petty's 722-point spread over second-place Dave Marcis in 1975 is the largest lead held by a Winston Cup championship driver.

Earnhardt has won $1,168,100 this season, but post-season point fund awards of over $2 million are yet to be included. They will be released next week.

Elliott is second with $887,730 and Waltrip is third with $844,345. Both of them will go over the $1 million mark with the post-season awards.

Richmond is fourth in Winston Cup money-winnings with $772,720, followed by Bodine with $697,145; Rudd with $561,025; Harry Gant with $539,450; Terry Labonte with $487,690; Neil Bonnett with $452,120; and Allison with $439,100.

It's party time for 19-9 college gunners

LOS ANGELES (AP) — UCLA's Reggie Miller breaks into a sly smile when he's asked about the NCAA's decision to implement a three-point field goal this season.

It is a look usually associated with a burglar with big plans for a big score.

And it is being worn by jump shooters all across the country now that shots made from beyond a line 19 feet, 9 inches from the basket, are worth three points in college basketball rather than two.

"At first I was surprised, but when I found out the line was only 19-9, I almost threw a party for my family," Miller said at a recent Pacific-10 Conference basketball media day. "It was definitely party time at the Miller house. You know, streamers, balloons, chips-and-dip, the whole works.

"I said, 'Thank you.' You're not going to give a gift like that back."

INDIANA'S STEVE Alford is also eager to get his shots in from beyond the three-point line.

"I shoot the majority of my shots outside that line, coming off screens," Alford said. "I haven't had to change anything. It just seems now that my jump shots are worth three points instead of two. To a shooter, you've got to love that."

Miller and Alford are two of the nation's best perimeter shooters, each having led their team in scoring while shooting mostly from the outside. Miller averaged 25.9 points per game for the Bruins last year while Alford averaged 22.5 for the Hoosiers.

How good is Miller from long range?

UCLA Coach Walt Hazzard tells a story of a shooting drill at a recent Bruins practice during which Miller made 19 straight from beyond the three-point line.

"And only one hit the rim," the coach declared.

Marc Dellins, UCLA's sports information director, went through the shooting charts from 27 of the Bruins' 29 games last year (two weren't available) and he estimates Miller made 80 shots from beyond the three-point line.

Miller, whose shooting range appears to be limited only by the dimensions of a basketball court, said he expected the three-point line to be farther from the basket.

"I figured it would be 21, 22 feet. At 19-9, that's almost an underhand shot," he said.

Alford agrees, saying, "Generally speaking, I think it's too close, but I would rather have it there than where it was four years ago simply because I don't have to change anything."

Four years ago, the Big Ten Conference experimented with a three-point line that was measured at more than 21 feet from the basket, but it dropped the idea after one season. A Big Ten representative said, however, that the line this year is not much different than the 1983 placement, it is just measured from a different point.

Even if the three-point line was placed farther out, it wouldn't bother Miller.

"I'll shoot from 30 feet but I usually don't want to try from outside that," he said.

Cracked Hazzard: "Thirty feet! That's obscene! I can't see the basket from 30 feet."

Although he jokes about his player's long-range shot selection, Hazzard has put no limits on Miller's shooting range.

"He's had a lot of faith in me during my career," Miller said. "He's given me the green light. If you shoot 55-60 percent from 22 feet, what can you say. That's a good percentage for centers."

Like Alford, Miller expects to find himself stationed beyond the three-point line more often than not.

"On offense, I'm going to set up outside the three-point line so that should help us inside," Miller said. "And if somebody gets hot inside and they start to sag and the ball comes back out to me, it's money."

ARIZONA COACH Lute Olson figures it will take players a while to adjust to playing with the three-point rule.

"I think it's a player's and fan's delight, but a coach's nightmare," he said. "I've got guys on my team who think they can shoot them and I think they shouldn't be. It will create bad shot selection until the players get used to it."

"I'm not going to worry about it," Miller said. "If I start thinking about the three-point line when I shoot, that's a check against me. In my mind, I'm just going to concentrate on my rhythm."

Placing the three-point line farther from the basket would further limit the number of players able to make the shot.

"We should get the college line out to where it takes a good shooter to hit it," Olson said. "I like it, but it's too close."

Indiana Coach Bobby Knight disagrees with the three-point basket even though he'll happily let Alford exploit the rule.

"A tough shot is taking the ball to the basket against the center and getting it in the basket. I'd rather see three points for something like that," Knight said. "I didn't make the rule. All the guys who have to play against Alford made the rule."

"Some individuals, some coaches don't enjoy the rule simply because this rule favors teams that have shooters at the present date, and they haven't been able to recruit shooters," Alford said. "So it has its pros and cons, but from a shooter's perspective, I love the rule."

NCAA grants SMU postponement

DALLAS (AP) — In accordance with a request by Southern Methodist officials, an NCAA committee agreed to postpone action on SMU's appeal of last year's restrictions on its football scholarships until current charges of continuing violations are investigated.

SMU issued a statement saying Athletic Director Bob Hitch and faculty representative Lonnie Kliever requested the postponement before the NCAA Committee on Infractions Monday in Kansas City, Mo. The committee voted unanimously to postpone the appeal.

SMU SAID Monday Kliever asked the panel to "postpone action on the appeal until the current charges of continuing violations of NCAA regulations in the SMU football program are fully investigated and finally resolved...."

Kliever said the appeal still deserves consideration on its own merits.

Related Story on Page 2C

"However, in the present climate of serious allegations and doubts about the integrity of the SMU football program, the institution would be further embarrassed to pursue the appeal at this time," Kliever told the NCAA panel.

Last week, former SMU linebacker David Stanley said in a television interview that he got $25,000 to play for the Mustangs when he joined in 1983 and continued to get payments of $750 a month even after the school was placed on probation last year.

Hitch and other athletic officials have denied the allegations, but SMU President L. Donald Shields has said he will call a special board of governors meeting to discuss a plan of action.

If Stanley's claims prove true, SMU could lose its football program for two years under the NCAA's so-called "death penalty" adopted last year.

LAST YEAR'S sanctions against SMU were levied because of cash payments to players by boosters and other NCAA violations. The school was banned from offering any scholarships during the first year of a three-year period and limited to only 15 out of an allowable 30 scholarships the second year.

On Sept. 1, SMU submitted an appeal to the NCAA committee for limited relief from the scholarship restrictions for the 1987-88 academic year.

"At that time, we believed that the institution's appeal was based on good faith and sound reason," Kliever said of that appeal today.

In Kansas City, Hitch confirmed he met with NCAA officials but would not comment on the meeting.

Stupidity blamed for mess at Southern Methodist

By STEVE JACOBSON

Sports Analysis

Official representatives of Southern Methodist University went helmet-in-hand before the NCAA to keep their institution of learning from being embarrassed. They thought that it might be embarrassing to be appealing the current penalty while the hammer was about to fall on a new penalty.

They did not make it clear who it was that would be embarrassing SMU.

The NCAA Committee on Infractions agreed to postpone the school's appeal of the 1985 probation until the current mess is resolved. SMU currently is being charged with having cash payments being made to football players while the school was on probation. The payments were allegedly made by booster-club members.

IT WAS the fourth time in the past 11 years that the school has been sanctioned. According to the NCAA, SMU was involved in violations 11 of the past 14 years. Apparently there is no shame.

The penalty hanging over SMU now is known as the death penalty. Any school found guilty of additional major violations while it was on probation could have its football program closed down for two years. In Texas that would be an institutional death penalty.

At the very least, the football coach, the athletic director and the university president should resign. What goes on at the Mustang Club is not a violation of law but it is a violation of ethics, decency and common sense. If those people knew what was going on with the Mustang Club, then they should be dismissed for complicity. If they didn't know, they should be dismissed for stupidity. They're the ones embarrassing the university.

In 1984, SMU was serving probation for football recruiting violations, one of eight schools on probation at the time. SMU athletic director Bob Hitch argued: "Of the things we were accused of and which were proven, none pertains to dollars or things of value like cars or that kind of money."

At that time, a leading recruit, Keith Stanberry — then playing at Oklahoma — said that he might have chosen SMU if an alumnus hadn't offered him cash and a car to sign with the school. He said that Oklahoma and Texas didn't offer anything excessive, only SMU, and he "didn't want to be put in that position."

The violations cited by the NCAA included one of "a representative of university athletic interests" offering $5,000 in cash and a rent-free apartment. "There is money through the whole thing, through almost 40 violations," an NCAA official said.

At that time L. Donald Shields, SMU president since 1981, could argue that the violations were carried on out of university precincts. This time charges are that the violation bears the fingerprints of official office.

David Stanley, a former SMU linebacker, claims that he and his mother were paid $52,000 by university officials, much of it after the school was placed on probation. He said that he was paid $25,000 to sign with SMU in 1983 and that he was paid $400 a month and his mother $350 a month after he agreed to play.

In a 45-minute television interview in Dallas, Stanley presented envelopes with the school insignia and initials of Henry Lee Parker, assistant athletic director. Stanley said that those envelopes had contained money from the university. That happened within the staff. That's serious.

The envelopes were the smoking gun. Shields said that the credibility of the young man is suspect.

Albert Reese, a senior end on this team, was suspended by the school after a published report said that he had not paid rent for an apartment where he has lived since May. Former employees of Dallas developer George W. Owen said that Owen directed them to provide the apartment to Reese and to Stanley.

These things don't go on unknown for long at any school in any program. People don't give $25,000 out of their pockets to boost the football team and stay anonymous. They want to be part of the program and want credit for it. They want to tell people they went places where others could not go — like the dressing room or on the sidelines. They want to tell the cocktail party that the coach is planning some tricky stuff for next week. They don't give $25,000 without a pat on the back.

The last time around, SMU football boosters were thick on the sidelines, patting fannies for good catches and good tackles. It was messy. Hitch, the athletic director, did take some action the last time. He barred nine of those sideliners from ever being involved in recruiting.

A GOOD program needs enthusiastic alumni and seeks their help. It needs somebody to tell a recruit interested in geology in addition to football — or maybe more than football — that the school has a good geology department. So a school like SMU finds an oil millionaire alumnus to speak to the lad. Alumni associations do that for nonathletes at college nights all the time. A program that's down and seeking to return to the 1950s glory of Doak Walker and Kyle Rote needs that help even more.

But it has to make sure that those wealthy helpers don't go too far. University presidents have to make sure coaches and the athletic directors comply with basic NCAA rules.

The university president can't have hands-on control over every department every day, but he can have a mechanism of control in place. Shields could have demanded that the coach tell his assistants how things had to be run. In this case, however, the search committee found Bobby Collins at Southern Mississippi. Shortly after Collins arrived at SMU, Southern Mississippi was placed on probation.

New Year's bowls hurting

Fiesta time comes on January 2

Associated Press

Three of college football's traditional New Year's Day bowls — the Orange, Sugar and Cotton — are being forced to scrap for the best leftovers because of the Fiesta Bowl's agreement to pair No. 1 Miami and No. 2 Penn State on Jan. 2.

The Fiesta Bowl, which switched its date from Jan. 1 for television and doubled its payoff to $2.4 million for each team, will get the matchup of the only two major undefeated teams — if the Nittany Lions beat Pitt on Saturday and Miami beats East Carolina on Thanksgiving night.

NBC, which televises the Fiesta, Orange and Rose bowls, approved the date switch with the Fiesta so the game could be moved to prime time.

Bruce Skinner, executive director of the Fiesta Bowl, said of the Miami-Penn State matchup: "We're hoping it will happen. Official bids cannot be extended until bid day on Saturday. The deal cannot be made until Nov. 22. But we're hopeful it will come off. If it does happen, we'll be 'College Football Town USA.'

"It makes a lot of sense to move the game, for the networks, the institutions and for us," Skinner added. "We want to showcase No. 1 against No. 2. With six games already on TV on New Year's Day (the Fiesta originally was scheduled for Jan. 1 and the Citrus moved to that date this season), it makes a lot of sense to move it.

"Unless there's a national championship game involved, there would be no reason to move it. This is a special case. It's for the best of college football."

THE ORANGE Bowl could still get its local team, Miami, if Penn State loses to Pitt and Nebraska beats Oklahoma on Saturday. Miami does not want another meeting with the No. 3 Sooners, who the Hurricanes beat soundly earlier in the season.

The Gator and Citrus bowls also bid for the Miami-Penn State game, but they couldn't work a similar backup deal with the Orange Bowl, according to Miami Athletic Director Sam Jankovich.

At Orlando, Fla., Chuck Rohe, the Citrus Bowl's executive director, claimed the Orange Bowl "orchestrated" Miami's decision to play in the Fiesta in order to keep the national championship out of its backyard.

The Rose Bowl, locked in to a Big Ten-Pacific-10 matchup, had its hopes for a meaningful game thwarted last week when then-second-ranked Michigan was upset by Minnesota. Arizona State already has clinched one Rose Bowl spot and will play the winner of Saturday's Michigan-Ohio State game.

The Orange Bowl, while still hoping for a Miami-Nebraska pairing, lined up the Southwest Conference runnerup, provided it is Texas A&M or Arkansas, to meet the Oklahoma-Nebraska winner.

The Aggies and Razorbacks, along with Baylor and Texas, still have a chance at the SWC crown, with the champion becoming the host team for the Cotton Bowl. The Michigan-Ohio State loser will become the first Big Ten team to appear in the Cotton Bowl.

The Citrus Bowl will match Auburn against Southern California, while the Gator Bowl will pair Clemson and Stanford.

The Sugar Bowl host will be the Southeastern Conference champion, either Louisiana State or Alabama, with the visitor's berth reserved for the Oklahoma-Nebraska loser. LSU or Alabama will play Washington in the Sun Bowl.

Georgia and Boston College will play in the new Hall of Fame Bowl at Tampa, Fla., and Florida State will accept a berth in the All-American Bowl against Indiana.

OTHER LIKELY bowl pairings include North Carolina State against Virginia Tech in the Peach, the Western Athletic Conference champion (Air Force, Brigham Young and San Diego State are still alive) against Iowa in the Holiday, and UCLA against Air Force or BYU in the Freedom.

The California Bowl, which matches the champions of the Pacific Coast Athletic Association and Mid-American Conference, is set with San Jose State against Miami of Ohio.

If Baylor doesn't win the SWC title, the Bears would go to the Bluebonnet Bowl. Arizona is headed for the Aloha Bowl.

The winner of Saturday's Kentucky-Tennessee game is touted as a likely participant in the Liberty Bowl, probably against Minnesota.

And Texas Tech is likely for the Independence Bowl, which also would like the Mississippi-Mississippi State winner.

Olajuwon gets 8-year extension

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Rockets have signed Akeem Olajuwon, one-half of the Twin Towers, to a contract extension that will keep Olajuwon in a Rockets uniform until 1998.

Now owner Charlie Thomas can start preparing to sign 7-4, Ralph Sampson, whose $1.1 million per year contract ends this season.

Olajuwon, in the third year of a six-year contract that pays him a reported $882,000 per year, received an 8-year extension Monday from Thomas.

"When you have a player with his talents, you want him to be around a long time," Thomas said. "There's no place but Houston where Akeem would rather be and this contract extension solidifies this as his home."

Olajuwon said he went to Thomas in the off season to negotiate a contract.

"I'm very happy with Houston and the Rockets are a team of the future," Olajuwon said.

Olajuwon is off to his best start as a pro.

He leads the NBA in rebounding with a 14.9 average, ranks fifth in NBA scoring with a 26.4 average, second in steals with a 3.14 average and second in blocked shots with a 3.86 per game average.

"Charlie Thomas knew what he wanted and Akeem knew what he wanted," said Olajuwon's agent, Lee Fentress. "They both executed their game plans perfectly."

Landry gives Pelluer game ball for survival

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Cowboys Coach Tom Landry said he gave quarterback Steve Pelluer the game ball for "surviving" and scoring the game-winner after being sacked 12 times by the San Diego Chargers.

Although Pelluer earned a place in Cowboy and league history for suffering a record number of sacks, the Cowboys scored two fourth-quarter touchdowns Sunday that erased an 11-point deficit in a heart-stopping 24-21 win.

"This is the most I've ever been hit, including college ball," Pelluer said.

He was treated in the locker room for a hip injury in the fourth quarter, but he didn't miss a play.

"We were calling plays just to get the ball off," Pelluer said. "I wasn't playing that well, but I knew if we got the opportunity to get back in the game I had to be in the right frame of mind."

The win gave Dallas a 7-4 record and kept the Cowboys in the National Football League playoff chase. A loss would have dropped Dallas three games behind the Eastern Division-leading New York Giants.

"We were born again today," Landry said after the game. "We were almost dead."

"The confidence of your team make a great difference," Landry said. "Our team would have been really down had we lost that game, not that we couldn't have recovered from it."

After Pelluer scored what proved to the game-winner on a 2-yard run, giving the Cowboys a three-point lead with 1:37 remaining, Dallas held San Diego on four downs. The Cowboys got the ball back deep in San Diego territory with 58 seconds left.

On Dallas' first play, Pelluer dropped to one knee, which carved only five seconds off the clock. The Chargers then used their first time out.

On second down, Landry called for a pitchout to running back Tony Dorsett, who fumbled at the Charger 10.

San Diego recovered the fumble with 42 seconds left. That gave Chargers' quarterback Dan Fouts one more chance to do what he does best: move the ball quickly through the air.

Fouts moved the Chargers to the Dallas 37, and the Cowboys had to watch as Rolf Benirschke just missed sending the game into overtime with a 55-yard field goal.

Bernischke then tried his 55-yarder, two yards longer than his career best. The kick was long enough but sailed just wide to the left, missing by not more than a couple of feet.

Longhorns still have Cotton Bowl hopes

AUSTIN (AP) — Baylor, then possibly the Cotton Bowl, is all coach Fred Akers and the Texas Longhorns are thinking about, Akers says.

Texas is only 5-4, but victories over Baylor and Texas A&M and an Arkansas loss to Southern Methodist would put Texas in the Cotton Bowl as the Southwest Conference representative.

The Longhorns play Baylor, 6-3, on Saturday at Waco, where they have won only once since 1972, and A&M here on Thanksgiving night.

"To say it is a very tough stretch is putting it mildly," Akers told a news conference Monday.

Asked if Texas had only one bowl possibility, the Cotton Bowl at Dallas, Akers said, "That's all we're thinking."

"Right now, since we have a chance, all we're thinking about is that chance, and that means Baylor, so we really are not thinking about anything other than playing our best ball game against Baylor," Akers said.

"We're interested in one (bowl). We're interested in the one in Dallas. That's all I'm interested in," he said.

Asked if Arkansas' 14-10 upset of A&M on Saturday had given Texas new incentive, Akers said, "I would think that it does, not just us, but Baylor. ... We know that the door is open and that is encouraging for us."

Magic still alive in Brownwood

BROWNWOOD (AP) — Randy Allen calls them motivational devices.

Others refer to them as magic tricks.

Regardless of the terminology, Allen, in his first year as head coach at Brownwood High School, relied upon an occasional sleight of hand to ease some of the pressure of replacing the legendary Gordon Wood — the all-time winningest football coach on any level.

It helped lead the Lions to their best district showing since 1981.

The first time Allen addressed his new players, he performed his now-famous paper-tearing trick, in which he apparently shreds a piece of paper, then restores it to one piece.

At Brownwood's first pep rally this season, Allen demonstrated the art of sticking a needle through a balloon without it popping.

"I saw Lou Holtz do some paper-tear tricks on the Johnny Carson show several years ago," Allen said, "and I told myself that I wanted to learn how to do that before I got my first head coaching job."

Brownwood finished 9-1 overall and 6-0 in the District 4-4A South Zone before losing 35-21 last weekend to North Zone runnerup Fort Worth Brewer.

"It's been a real fun year because I think the expectations were not as high for this football team as they have been in the past," he said.

Wood, who retired at the end of last season with a career record of 405-8-12, said of Allen, "He's a good magician and a singer, and the kids just relate to him extremely well."

ALLEN, A former all-state defensive back at Abilene Cooper who later played at SMU, was an assistant under former Coach Merrill Green at Bryan for eight years. In 1981, he was named head coach at Class 3A Ballinger, which had not had a winning record since 1976 and had not been to the playoffs in more than a decade.

After winning just two games his first year, Allen led Ballinger to four consecutive district titles and at least to the second round of the playoffs.

At the end of last season, Allen was considered one of the top vacancies to fill the head coaching vacancy at Abilene Cooper. But Allen, who along with quarterback Jack Mildren led Cooper to the state finals in 1967, withdrew his name from consideration and was soon hired to replace Wood at Brownwood.

Allen's hiring was greeted by mixed emotions. School administrators selected Allen, despite Wood's outspoken desire to hire one of his assistants.

"I made no bones about it," Wood said. "We had a great bunch of assistants and nearly every administrator has come up through ranks. They had been there 10 or 15 years and would have done a great job. There were so many that were of equal ability it would have been hard to hire one of them, but I don't think they were given consideration.

"But Randy's done a remarkable job. We don't have an abundance of material. They just play their hearts out for him. I don't think anybody could have done a better job."

Brownwood defeated Abilene Cooper 26-6 in its season opener and homecoming game.

"Our players couldn't have given me a better present," Allen said. "It was just like a great weight was off our shoulders after that game."

Allen's second-best present this season was the Lions' 14-0 victory over Cleburne, the eventual district champion.

"That will always make this team special," Allen said. "Our kids hadn't beaten Cleburne since they won the state championshipin 1981."

Allen's magic appears to be rubbing off on his players. The Lions came from behind to win three times this season. They won two one-point games, and defeated Cleburne by four points when they recovered a Cleburne fumble at the Brownwood 12 with less than a minute to play.

"This year's just been made more enjoyable because when you do win a big game you're not supposed to, it makes it more fun," Allen said.

It also was fun for Wood. He still went to all the games, although he said he learned to stay away from school during practice hours.

"I've found I can't do them any good, and I could possibly do some harm, so I just don't go around," Wood said.

Instead, Wood opts for coffee with friends each morning at a Brownwood drug store.

"Friday nights are the only bad times. I miss the game and everything that goes with it," he said.

"But these players, I really enjoy watching. No matter how you cut it, they're my players as much as anybody else's."

Vol QB starts jail term

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Former Tennessee quarterback Tony Robinson stepped from an attorney's Mercedes and into the Knox County Penal Farm Monday to begin a 90-day sentence for delivering cocaine to an undercover officer.

Robinson and former Volunteer fullback Kenneth "B.B." Cooper, who received a 150-day sentence for the same offense, reported to the minimum security facility two minutes before noon carrying suitcases and a football.

Robinson, a star quarterback for Tennessee whose promising pro career was clouded by a 1985 knee injury, refused to answer reporters' questions.

JEANE DIXON'S your horoscope

© 1986 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

By Jeane Dixon
Wednesday, November 19, 1986

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Your past experiences help you make the right career decisions now. Success beckons. You may feel that you are being short-changed in a relationship. Perhaps this is because you have not been honest about your own feelings. Open up! Make a money decision dispassionately and watch your savings grow. Your words are compelling when it comes to love and marriage.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Hall of Fame catcher Roy Campanella, India's Indira Gandhi, NBC football announcer Ahmed Rashad, newscaster Garrick Utley, actor Clifton Webb, actress Glynnis O'Connor, President James Garfield, fashion designer Calvin Klein, the Angels' veteran catcher Bob Boone, actor Dan Haggerty, Dick Cavett, actress Jodie Foster, bandleader Tommy Dorsey, foreign policy expert Jeane Kirkpatrick, millionaire Ted Turner.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Disappointment over a financial deal is possible. Unexpected domestic developments could mean you cancel some plans. Your social life is exhilarating.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Negotiations behind closed doors are likely to be more successful than those conducted in public. Make certain there are no security leaks. An exciting development leads to happy romance.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You move closer to fulfilling a long-cherished ambition. Unexpected rewards come your way. If you socialize, do it to further your goals. A dynamic newcomer could change your whole life.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Watch a tendency to overdo things. Make moderation your watchword. Spontaneous replies will impress an influential person more than well-rehearsed answers.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Be careful what you say. Keep your ears to the ground for confidential tips. Timing is the key to your success in business or finance.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Today's events will help you, but you are not out of the woods yet. A third party works on your behalf. A change of lifestyle proves pleasing.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Good luck helps you land a new contract or meet someone important. Make the most of this golden opportunity!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Use any extra cash to expand a business or help your career. Meeting with a community leader works wonders. Loved one may be testing your loyalty.

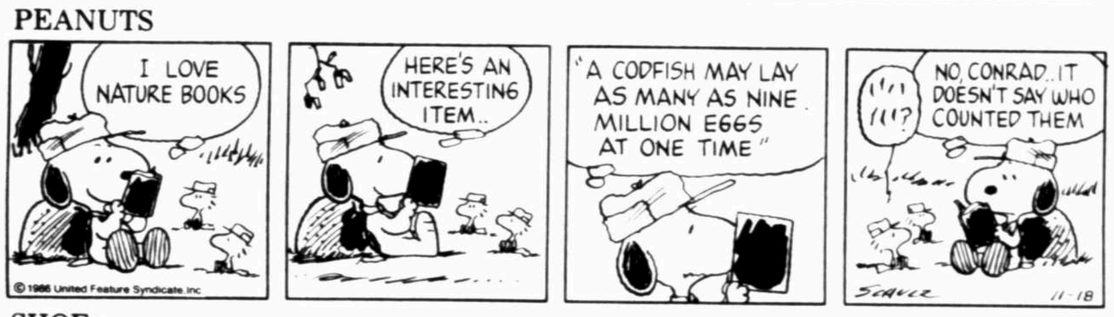

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Some news you receive today will help your career or finances. People at a distance figure more prominently than ever.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A delightful visitor brings thoughts of romance. Putting your head together with someone else's will improve your chances for financial success.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You start the day with more vigor than you showed yesterday. An influential person is impressed by your zeal and increased productivity. Postpone making any commitments about travel until later.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Early hours are the best time for handling financial matters. Applications for loans are successful. Romance requires tact.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 ◇	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♠

Distributional hands usually play better in a suit than in no trump. That is often true even if you don't have a combined holding of eight cards in your suit.

The first three bids in the auction were routine. When it came to his rebid, North wisely decided his three aces might serve better in a suit contract than no trump, so he made the waiting bid of three spades despite the fact he had only a doubleton honor. South's raise to game ended the auction.

West led the king of clubs and South was happy with his contract. While three no trump would depend almost solely on a successful spade finesse, four spades could make even if declarer lost two trump tricks as long as the king of diamonds was with East. And if West held the king, there were still some chances for the contract.

Declarer won the opening lead in dummy and led the jack of trumps in the hope that East would cover had he held the queen. But when East played low, declarer grabbed the king and cashed the ace in an effort to drop the lady. When that did not succeed, declarer abandoned trumps and went after his second suit.

A diamond to the ace and a diamond back fetched the king from East. East could have given his partner a ruff, but that and the trump queen would have been the last tricks for his side. He found the better defense of a club, forcing declarer to ruff. Another trump lead by declarer would have been fatal—West would have won and forced declarer's last trump. But declarer could afford to lose two more tricks, so he stayed away from trumps and simply led winning diamonds.

West could ruff whenever he pleased and score his high trump, but that would be all. Declarer had maintained trump control and his contract was secure.

Billy Joel donates song's royalties to youth suicide prevention panel

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — Singer Billy Joel has given royalties from his single "You're Only Human" to the National Committee on Youth Suicide Prevention.

"Having come very close to the edge myself at that age, I understand the turmoil experienced in youth," he said Monday.

Joel's spokeswoman, Patricia Maher, refused to disclose the amount of the check Joel gave committee chairman Alfred DelBello representing royalties from the record and an additional contribution from CBS Inc. "I don't think the amount is important," she said.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — John Forsythe, Linda Evans and Joan Collins have signed new one-year contracts to return to ABC's "Dynasty" next season.

The signings were Monday at a news conference at which ABC said "Dynasty" was starting a new storyline emphasizing strong relationships between Blake, Alexis and Krystle.

"Dynasty," which once rivaled CBS' "Dallas" for first place in the ratings, fell to 29th in the most recent survey by the A.C. Nielsen Co.

"If we all knew what makes for a successful show, we'd all be No. 1," Ms. Collins said.

Forsythe said, "Television is not an easy game. Our scripts have been very, very good, but obviously they could be better. The important thing is that everyone is trying hard. We all recognize it's not an easy business."

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country music star Chet Atkins says he can no longer tolerate cigarette smoke now that he's kicked the habit.

"It ruins the equipment and everything else, including your cardiovascular system," said Atkins, 62, who smoked cigarettes for 20 years before quitting.

Atkins is honorary chairman of the 1986 Great American Smokeout on Thursday, when smokers are asked to quit for a day.

He recommends smokers chew on a "pacifier," such as an empty pipe or cigarette holder, to wean themselves. "Anything you can puff on will help you quit. Everybody should try using some kind of replacement," Atkins said.

"Literature is not a horse race," Doctorow said during his brief acceptance speech Monday. "At the same time, when I'm offered an award or a prize, I tend to accept it."

"You're an apprentice, no matter how old you are, as a writer," said Lopez. "What holds us together is the way we cherish this language."

Doctorow was honored for "World's Fair," his recreation of a child's life during the Depression. Lopez won for "Arctic Dreams," an account of his travels in the Arctic Circle.

REGENSBURG, West Germany (AP) — Prince Johannes von Thurn und Taxis and his wife, Princess Gloria, are setting up a modern art center in their medieval castle.

Ted Victoria, a New York artist, and Brazilian painter Ivald Granato will be the first to show their works at Sankt Emmeran palace beginning Friday, a spokesman for the royal couple, who declined to be identified, said Monday.

The idea came from Princess Gloria, 26, who has three children with the 60-year-old prince and has amused Germans with her punk hairstyles, casual humor and appearances at celebrity bashes. "The exhibition is a test that could contribute to the development of our plan to promote modern art," she recently told reporters.

The prince has massive land holdings in Germany, Brazil and Canada and has business interests in breweries, glass and metal manufacturers and banking.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Gary Hart says he's joining a Denver-based law firm in January.

The Colorado Democrat said in a statement Monday that he will join the firm of Davis, Graham & Stubbs when he moves to Denver after retiring from the Senate. The firm has offices in Washington, Salt Lake City and Denver.

Hart, who ran for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1984, decided a year ago to retire from the Senate and prepare for the 1988 campaign.

NEW YORK (AP) — A gentleman farmer has sold more than $21 million worth of artworks by the masters, including rare sketches by Leonardo da Vinci, that had graced the walls of his Kentucky home.

"I have bare walls now. Do you know where I can get some nice wallpaper?" a jubilant John Ryan Gaines joked after the auction Monday night.

Adrian Ward Jackson, a London dealer, purchased the sheet of da Vinci sketches, circa 1500, for $3.63 million. It features a child with a lamb, the head of an old man, studies of machinery and several lines of explanatory text.

"Child With Lamb" was understood to be only one of two da Vinci drawings still in private hands, according to John L. Marion, chairman and president of Sotheby's in North America, the auctioneer.

Its presale estimate was not published.

The second-highest lot, Pablo Picasso's "Tete d'Homme a la Pipe," sold for $1.65 million to an anonymous telephone bidder, said Matthew Weigman, a Sotheby's spokesman.

Edgar Degas' "Le Pas Battu," a pastel depicting a ballerina, went for $1.1 million to an international dealer, said Weigman.

Four works by Rembrandt and three by Vincent van Gogh also were on the block.

"View of Houtewaal" was sold for $957,000, a record for a Rembrandt drawing, to Ian Woodner, an American private collector. Its pre-sale estimate was $500,000 to $600,000.

Gold tumbles

LONDON (AP) — Gold prices took another slide in early European trading today, shedding around $3 an ounce after an $18 tumble the previous day. The dollar rose against most major currencies.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $387.40 a troy ounce, compared with late Monday's $391.25, but edged up in later trading. At midmorning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $388.

In Zurich, the bid price was $388.40, compared with $390.50 late Monday.

European prices hovered around the $388 level reached in New York late Monday, but some London dealers predicted further falls.

The dollar in Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, rose against the Japanese yen for the second straight day, closing at 162.65 yen, up 0.15 yen from Monday's close of 162.50. Later, in London, the dollar was quoted at 163.02 yen.

Other dollar rates at midmorning, compared with late Monday:

—1.6815 Swiss francs, up from 1.6750

—6.6165 French francs, up from 6.5955

—2.2835 Dutch guilders, up from 2.2765

—1,400.00 Italian lire, up from 1,396.12

—1.3836 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3853.

In London, the dollar rose against the British pound, which was quoted at $1.4207, cheaper than $1.4270 late Monday.

Silver was quoted in London today at a bid price of $5.52 a troy ounce, down from late Monday's $5.61.

Scandal chills market

NEW YORK (NYT) — The shock of the widening insider trading scandal created a somber mood on Wall Street on Monday, with stocks involved in takeover situations being sold wildly while the bulk of the market moved lower in a more gentle fashion.

Stock prices, which were down sharply in the first 30 minutes of trading on Monday, had recovered by noon before weakening again in the afternoon. The Dow Jones industrial average ended down 13.07 points, to 1,860.52.

Area gets small business center

LUBBOCK, Texas (UPI) — A Small Business Development Center for 95 counties in West Texas will assist in the start-up and growth of small business, a group of community and education leaders announced.

West Texas becomes the last region of Texas to have an SBDC, Lubbock SBA office manager Walter Fronstin said at a news conference Monday.

"This will cover the entire West texas area — Midland-Odessa, Abilene, Amarillo and Lubbock — and serve 1.8 million people," Fronstin said. "The purpose is to bring practical training, counseling, education and special programs to those in small businesses."

The SBDC represents a total investment of $377,294 for the first year of operation, Fronstin said, with the federal grant to be $177,891. The money will primarily be used to pay salaries of the staff in subcenters in Lubbock, Midland-Odessa, Abilene and Amarillo, he said.

"This represents a venture between government, academia and the private sector to get the economy back up in this area," he said.

Texas Tech University will develop the administrative, operational and budgetary procedures to initiate and sustain the service delivery network of education, private and public resources throughout the 95-county area. Other universities within the region committed to the program are West Texas State University in Canyon, the University of Texas-Permian Basin in Odessa and Abilene Christian University. Other junior and senior colleges have been invited to participate, said Carl H. Stem, dean of the Texas Tech College of Business Administration.

"Small business is most important for creating new jobs," said Lubbock Mayor B.C. "Peck" McMinn. "The survival rate is very low and we need to help them stay in business as well as help new ones. This is the best hedge that the city has against violent economic swings. It will not only help Lubbock, but the Permian Basin and Abilene as well."

Fronstin pointed out that nearly 50 percent of all small businesses fail within the first five years and 90 to 93 percent eventually fail because of lack of management expertise.

"Through the SBDC, we can give them planning, financial analysis, advertising and marketing strategies and help in accounting and billing," Fronstin said.

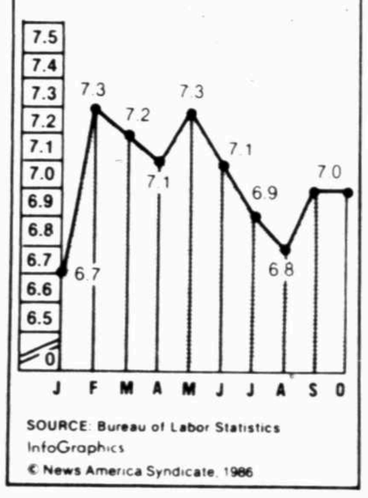

The SBDC also is affiliated with the Texas A&M University business technology development program to provide further assistance, he said.

The SBDC program is only six years old, but Fronstin said that it is one of the SBA's most successful. A recent study by the University of Georgia showed that SBDC clients perform much better than the general business population, with sales levels 25 percent higher and profits 83 percent greater.

The Lubbock SBDC office, to be located in the Board of City Development building, should be in operation before Dec. 1, with other subcenters to be open before the end of the year, Fronstin said.

Sears executive plans to reinvigorate sales

New York Times News Service

CHICAGO — Michael Bozic, the recently named chairman and chief executive of the huge Sears Merchandise Group, on Monday outlined his plans to reinvigorate the company's sluggish retailing operations.

He said he would concentrate on sharpening the presentation and product mix in Sears's stores and on doing a better job persuading the consumer that Sears is a low-cost place to shop.

Bozic, who assumes his new position on Jan. 1, said he was tired of hearing how discount competitors like Crazy Eddie or Highland often undersell Sears.

"Many times we get a bad rap in terms of this pricing situation," the soft-spoken but determined 45-year-old said in an interview at Sears Tower. "I think our pricing is competitive, and if it weren't, we wouldn't have the phenomenal market share we have."

Nevertheless, Bozic said he would push Sears marketing people to work harder to overcome the perception that Sears is more expensive than the competition. The Pittsburgh native, who had been president and chief operating officer of Sears Canada, said another of his main goals was to find creative ways to reduce expenses in the giant Merchandise Group, which had revenues of $26.5 billion last year.

"Almost any entity that's been around a long time is going to be a higher-cost provider than the relative newcomer," he said. "There is some truth that we're higher cost than we'd like to be," he added, noting that Edward A. Brennan had accelerated cost-cutting efforts since becoming Sears's chairman last January.

Walter F. Loeb, an analyst with Morgan Stanley, said Bozic might bring to the retailing group some of the ideas that were his trademark in Canada: more brand names, a greater emphasis on soft goods and more of a department-store look.

Bank of America expects weaker U.S. economy

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The U.S. economy is expected to weaken substantially during the next two quarters, the Bank of America predicted Monday.

The anticipated decline is attributed to congressional attempts to reduce the budget deficit as required by Gramm-Rudman legislation to approximately $154 billion.

A tighter fiscal policy is expected to slow the economy significantly next year, reducing the growth of inflation-adjusted gross national product to 2.2 percent for all of 1987. The gain was calculated at 2.5 percent for 1986.

The bank said short-term interest rates are expected to decline early next year as the result of a lowering of the discount rate by the Federal Reserve Board.

During the first quarter of 1987, GNP is expected to grow at only 1.6 percent rate, compared with a growth of 3.8 percent in the first quarter of this year.

Consumer interest rates for 30-year home loans were forecast at about 9.8 percent at the end of 1986, dropping to 9.7 percent in January.

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — The Eastman Kodak Co., moving to safeguard its basic photographic business, agreed Monday to acquire Fox Photo Inc. for about $95.5 million.

Fox Photo, based in San Antonio, is the single largest consumer of Kodak color photographic paper, according to industry analysts. Fox operates 20 wholesale photo labs and 240 mini-labs, many of which offer one-hour photofinishing service, in 23 states.

"Fox is an extremely important customer for Kodak, and given the fact that it was for sale, Kodak had to acquire it or face losing part its market share," said Eugene G. Glaser, an analyst with Dean Witter Reynolds Inc.

Tipperary extends offers

From Staff Reports

In a continuing restructuring move, Tipperary Corp. announced today that it will extend three exchange offers

Tipperary says it will extend until 5:00 p.m., New York City time, on Nov. 24, 1986 its three contemporaneous Exchange Offers to the holders of its 12 percent Senior Subordinated Convertible Notes due September 15, 1995, Non-Interest Bearing Senior Subordinateed Delayed Convertible Notes due June 15, 1990 and 11-1/2 percent Subordinated Debentures due September 15, 1995.

Tipperary says successful consummation of the Exchange Offers is contingent on successful completion of all elements of the company's plan of financial restructuring as previously announced.

The company fuurther stated that it is continuing negotiations with its bank aimed at finalization of the terms of a restructured loan agreement as previously agreed in principle by the company and the bank. The bank has indicated that, upon successful restucturing of the loan agreement and satisfaction of the conditions precedent thereto, which include all of the elements of the plan of financial restucturing, it would grant a waiver necessary for successful consummation of the Exchange Offers.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Boesky case will cut into rumor-based trading

NEW YORK (AP) — The Ivan Boesky insider trading case will cut into stock trading based on takeover rumors but is unlikely to dampen takeover activity in general, according to merger specialists.

Some Wall Streeters said takeover speculation, which had been snowballing before Boesky's case was disclosed Friday, immediately dropped off along with overall trading volume as investors returned to the market Monday.

Boesky, the most famous and successful of Wall Street's professional takeover speculators, agreed to pay a record $100 million penalty to settle government charges that he engaged in illegal insider trading.

First Interstate Bancorp. won't withdraw bid

LOS ANGELES (AP) — First Interstate Bancorp, the nation's ninth-largest bank holding concern, has refused to withdraw its $3.39 billion unsolicited proposal to merge with giant BankAmerica Corp.

First Interstate on Monday stopped short of launching a hostile tender offer, but it said it will take "every prudent measure to bring about such a merger."

Gillete asks court to block Revlon takeover bid

BOSTON (AP) — Gillette Co. has asked a federal court to block Revlon Group Inc.'s $4 billion bid to acquire the company while Gillette considers the proposal.

On Monday, Gillette said it asked the U.S. District Court here to enjoin Revlon, its chairman Ronald O. Perelman, and affiliated companies — which already own 13.9 percent of Gillette's outstanding shares — from buying additional Gillette shares.

People Express completes exchange offer

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — People Express Inc. says it has completed an exchange offer with debtholders to reduce its interest payments, a major condition of its $115 million acquisition by Texas Air Corp.

The company said Monday holders of 88.3 percent of the debt securities of its principal subsidiary, People Express Airlines, had agreed to swap the debt for securities with lower interest rates.

Texas Air had required approval of the exchange by at least 85 percent of the debtholders before it would provide $15 million in loans to keep People Express operating.

Union Carbide files countersuit in Bhopal case

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Union Carbide Corp. has filed a countersuit against the Indian government, blaming it in part for the 1984 Bhopal gas disaster that killed more than 2,000 people and injured 200,000.

A district court in Bhopal Monday temporarily restrained the company from selling any of its assets or paying dividends to its shareholders.

The Indian government has sued Union Carbide in connection with the Dec. 3, 1984, gas leak at the Bhopal pesticide plant of a Union Carbide subsidiary, the worst industrial accident in history.

Industrial operating rate falls to 79 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. industrial operating rate fell to just 79 percent of capacity last month, the lowest level since 1983, in reflection of the weakness in American manufacturing, according to the Federal Reserve Board.

The operating rate at the nation's factories, mines and utilities was down 0.2 percentage point from where it had stood for the last three months, the Fed reported Monday.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Union Texas find flows 2,650 barrels oil

HOUSTON (SWN) — Union Texas Petroleum announced an oil discovery in the Badin area of Southeast Pakistan. Union Texas is operator of a group which includes Occidental Petroleum Corp. and Oil and Gas Development Corp., a Pakistani government-owned company.

Located approximately 100 miles southeast of Karachi, the Liari No. 1 well was tested at a rate of 2,650 barrels of oil daily on a 32/64-inch choke with 620 pounds-per-square-inch flowing tubing pressure from a zone in the lower Goru formation bbetween 6,730 feet and 6,750 feet.

The new find brings the Union Texas group's total discoveries in the Badin concession to 16 fields since 1981.

Dallas-based Maynard reports quarterly loss

DALLAS (SWN) — Maynard Oil Co. reported a third quarter loss of $824,017, or $.13 per share, on revenues of $2,417,515, compared with 1985 third quarter earnings of $116,056, or $.02 per share, on revenues of $6,927,013.

For nine months ended September 30, the company lost $2,252,194, or $.37 per share, on revenues of $10,608,876, compared with a loss of $473,767, or $.07 per share, on revenues totaling $21,695,006 during the same period in 1985.

WesternGulf to develop Mobil leases in Kansas

HOUSTON (SWN) — WesternGulf Exploration Co., Inc., of Houston announced it has reached agreement with the Denver-affiliate of Mobil Oil Corp. to explore and develop deeper formations under approximately 100,000 acres under lease to Mobil in southwestern Kansas. WersternGulf believes that the pre-Permian formations underlying the Kansas side of the Hugoton Gas Field offer significant exploration opportunities in Grant, Haskell, Finney, and Kearny counties.

WesternGulf spudded the first well of its multi-well drilling program on Oct. 18. The WesternGulf Exploration Co., Inc. No. 1 V.B. Tate was drilled to a total depth of 5,400 ft. and is currently being completed for production testing.

Samson reports quarterly financial results

TULSA (SWN) — Samson Energy Co. Limited Partnership announced financial results for the quarter ended September 30. The partnership also announced its fourth quarter cash distribution to be made on December 31. The distribution of $.40 per unit will be payable to unitholders of record on November 28. With this distribution, total 1986 cash distributions will equal $4,288,426, or $2.10 per unit for a unitholder who held the unit for the entire year.

With regard to financial results, revenues for the third quarter 1986 were $1,850,000. During the same period in 1985, this figure totaled $4,039,000.

Tesoro announces net loss during fiscal year

SAN ANTONIO (SWN) — Tesoro Petroleum Corp. announced an unaudited net loss of $124.8 million for the fiscal year ended September 30, or $9.76 per primary and fully diluted share, on total gross income of $1.5 billion.

Included in this loss were write-downs totaling $195.7 million pre-tax ($130.3 million after-tax) for explorationn and production activities, residual fuel oil receivables from Trinidad, and the book carrying value of oil field services equipment. These write-downs resulted from significant declines in the value of crude oil, natural gas and petroleum products and from the continuing depressed levels of drilling activity in the United States.

MCO Resources post loss in third quarter

HOUSTON (SWN) — MCO Resources, Inc., announced third quarter results of operations. The compaany reported a net loss of $1.0 million or $.05 per common share on gross revenues of $7.8 million for the three months ended September 30. This compares to a net loss of $440,000 or $.03 per common share on gross revenues of $112.3 million in the comparable period of 1985.

American Cometra gets properties

American Cometra, Inc., Ft. Worth, announced the acquisition of certain oil and gas properties previously held by Dorchester Master Limited Partnership of Houston.

In a transaction valued at $11 million, Cometra added significant reserves in over 100 wells to interest already owned in the Conger field of Sterling County, Texas. The purchase also included 4,000 proved undeveloped acres.

Court rules Transco did not violate federal antitrust laws

RICHMOND, Va. (UPI) — A federal appeals court Monday ruled that Transco Energy Co. did not violate federal antitrust laws when it refused to pipe natural gas through its pipeline for a competitor, Consul Ltd.

The 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals also turned aside arguments that Transco violated federal regulations against monopoly by precluding Consul from arranging certain gas purchases in two Mississippi fields.

A lower court jury had awarded Consul $462,600 on Aug. 26, 1985 as a result of numerous claims against Transco. That award was reversed.

The panel also upheld the lower court in finding that Consul failed to prove the Mississippi fields, Greens Creek and Holiday Creek, provided a relevant market under the federal law.

"The penultimate question, towards which this preliminary inquiry into market definition is directed, is whether the defendant has market power; the ability to raise prices above levels that would exist in a perfectly competitive market," the court said.

Transco, based in Houston, operates a transcontinental natural gas pipeline that extends from Texas to New York, transporting the fuel through the pipeline for a fee. It also engages in brokering natural gas, as does Consul, a North Carolina consulting firm.

The dispute between the two companies began in the 1970s, during a shortage of natural gas.

At the time, the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission required that whenever natural gas from a particular field was sold in interstate commerce, that gas was dedicated to interstate sale and subject to interstate price controls.

Natural gas that moved within the state was not regulated, and sold for a higher price than interstate gas.

To alleviate the problem, the commission adopted certain exceptions to interstate price regulations, including a rule that producers could contract for the interstate sale of gas for 60 days without price regulation and without prior FERC approval.

Also, producers could arrange two-year interstate sales without price regulation, although prior commission approval was required for these sales.

In 1977, Transco attempted to broker gas from the Greens Creek field. Transco then applied for an exception to the interstate price regulations for a two-year limited certificate, but was turned down.

Consul subsequently sought to broker the Greens Creek gas to its clients in the southeastern portion of the United States. But the company, in addition to seeking a two-year certificate, also suggested the field's owners make a series of 60-day sales, transmitting the gas through Transco's pipeline in May 1978.

Transco retaliated by cutting off the gas flowing through its pipeline, but restored it three days later after negotiations with Consul.

Consul alleged it lost sales during that period as well as on four additional sales contracts to Commonwealth Natural Gas in Virginia as the Mississippi producers broke their contract and negotiated a long-term contract with Transco.

During that same period, Congress began deregulation of natural gas prices, eliminating the disparity between interstate and intrastate gas prices.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

A 12 percent $10,000 CD should earn $1,200 interest

By BILL DOYLE

Q. Why don't banks pay the full interest rate they advertise on certificates of deposit? If a bank offers 12 percent on my CD, why does it pay only about 10 percent? I have asked this of "personal bankers" at my bank and they say I am getting 12 percent. I don't believe them.

The interest from my $10,000 CD, which supposedly pays 12 percent, is transferred automatically to my money market deposit account every month. Enclosed is a copy of my latest "advice of interest credit" statement, listing $101.92 interest. Isn't that closer to 10 percent than 12 percent?

Doyle

A. No. Even though the bankers you spoke to should have provided a more detailed explanation, they told you the truth. You almost certainly are getting 12 percent interest on that CD.

Your arithmatic seems to have gone awry. If you're getting $101.92 interest every month, that totals $1,223.04 per year and works out to 12.2304 percent interest on your $10,000 CD.

More likely, you are not getting $101.92 each and every month. Instead, that interest credit probably varies a bit from month to month — depending on the number of days in the month or other factors the bank uses to calculate interest.

There's an easy way to determine if you are getting all the interest to which you are entitled. Add up the numbers on 12 consecutive monthly advice of interest credit statements. For a 12 percent $10,000 CD, the resulting figure should be exactly $1,200.

If it's less, then you should have some more words with your bankers.

Q. Until a few years ago, federal law required that the interest rates on certificates of deposit issued during the ensuing week be published every Tuesday.

Who was responsible for rescinding that requirement? What can be done to rectify that unjust change, which has caused hardship to citizens who depend on high CD interest?

A. Here's a short answer to your first question. DIDC did it.

DIDC is the acronym for Depository Institutions Deregulation Committee, which was created by Congress in the Depository Institutions Deregulation Act of 1980.

DIDC's members were the heads of federal regulatory agencies overseeing banks and savings and loan associations. DIDC's job was to phase out regulation of interest rates on CDs and all other deposits at banks and S&Ls. That chore was completed April 1, 1986.

You're harking back to the 182-day "money market certificates," on which the maximum interest rate was determined by the discount rate on 26-week U.S. Treasury bills auctioned off every Monday, and to other CDs due in no more than 30 months, on which the maximum interest rates were tied to U.S. Treasury securities of comparable maturities.

Those tie-in interest rate regulations were abolished Oct. 1, 1983. Since then, banks and S&Ls have been free to offer any interest rates they please on CDs. For a while after that date, interest rates rose and new CDs paid higher rates.

More recently, interest rates in the marketplace have come down and new CDs now are paying much less. That does hurt folks who depend on high-rate CDs.

But you can blame DIDC for that. The low interest rates now prevailing are a function of the marketplace. The federal legislation mentioned above deregulated the banking industry. It's more than unlikely that CD rates will ever again be set by federal regulation.

Q. We are told there is a weekly publication listing banks and savings and loan associations around the country currently paying the highest interest rates on certificates of deposit. Do you have any information about such a publication?

A. You must be thinking about a newsletter called "100 Highest Yields," P.O. Box 088888, North Palm Beach, Fla., 33408. Published weekly, it provides information on federally insured banks and S&Ls with the highest rates on money market deposit accounts and CDs with various maturities.

Carpet costs $71 a square yard

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — More than $71 per square yard for some carpet remnants may sound steep. Especially for remnants from a 48-year-old rug.

But that was the average price paid Saturday when the state Capitol Gift Shop sold 27-by-27-inch squares of illustrated wool pile that had been on the floors of the Oregon House and Senate.

"A lot of these people are native Oregonians and feel these pieces are part of them," said Julie Klein, director of the gift shop.

The rug, which was removed earlier this year and replaced by a carpet made of wool and nylon, depicted Oregon's leading industries of 48 years ago, when the original was installed: Forestry, agriculture and fishing.

Train travelers try to decide whodunit

KARLYN BAKER
Los Angeles Times-

LAT Photo

Inspector Janet Adorn, actress Susie Barner, questions passengers on the American Zephyr, a mystery-theater train operating between Washington and New York, where it is up to the passengers to find out whodunit.

WASHINGTON — It is 7:30 a.m., my elegant, privately chartered railroad car has just left Union Station in Washington, and I am one up on Agatha Christie's Miss Marple: I know someone will be killed before the train reaches New York.

Over croissant and orange juice, I discreetly scan the other passengers, trying to spot a crime in progress or, at the very least, settle upon a likely suspect.

Is it the bearded guy in the straw hat and dark glasses? The blond woman in Bermuda shorts reading a dog-eared copy of "To Kill a Mockingbird"? Surely that's a clue of sorts. The kid with the camera looks too young to be a news photographer. Is it the woman in red who is groping through her purse? Did she just slip something into her companion's Bloody Mary? And why is that couple in the corner looking at me so suspiciously?

Welcome to Murder on the American Zephyr — the mystery-theater train excursion where it is up to the passengers to find out whodunit.

Since July, American Zephyr Inc. has been operating "Murder Mystery" day trips between Washington and New York. Zephyr passengers board a luxuriously refurbished, art deco style tavern-lounge-observation car — with etched glass, polished wood, rose and gray carpeting and an open bar.

A cast of actors shares the approximately 3½-hour train ride north, and real passengers get to play Sherlock Holmes. The murder is committed on the way up and solved on the way back, with passengers let loose in the Big Apple in between for a long day on their own.

And as this recent traveler discovered, getting there is very much a part of the fun.

"THEY'RE ALL fans of murder mysteries," said John Hickman, American Zephyr's vice president, describing the 40 passengers who have embarked on this Saturday outing, which is seemingly one of the few of its kind in the country. "They're looking for the fun of the train ride itself, 10 hours in New York and the murder theater."

The Alexandria, Va.-based firm opened its rail car charter business more than two years ago, capitalizing on renewed interest in luxury-train travel and the return of Europe's famed Orient Express rail service.

American Zephyr contracts with Amtrak to haul its cars and draws most of its customers from private corporations, who lease the cars for parties or employee group travel.

The murder mystery trip is only one of the charter excursions offered by the company, but it is among the most popular. The public's fascination with amateur sleuthing has been apparent for several years. It has led to television revivals of Perry Mason, put Angela Lansbury's "Murder, She Wrote" in TV's top five shows and sparked brisk sales of mystery games, including those that show you how to host a crime-solving party in your own home.

A trip to New York and back aboard the Zephyr costs $189, up from the $150 that was being charged over the summer. In comparison, Amtrak charges $60, $80 or $104 round trip for basic coach service, depending on time of travel and type of train, plus an additional $37.50 each way for first-class service, including a meal, in the club car.

The Eastern Airlines shuttle costs $100 to $150 round trip, depending on day of departure.

But Hickman scoffs at such price comparisons, noting that Zephyr passengers are paying for the trip, the special ambiance and the three-hour theater event. He says the firm has raised the price of the mystery trip because it will be using a different murder script with an expanded cast of actors, all members of a local troupe known as the Mystery Menu.

...American Zephyr Inc. has been operating "Murder Mystery" day trips between Washington and New York. Zephyr passengers board a luxuriously refurbished, art deco style tavern-lounge-observation car — with etched glass, polished wood, rose and gray carpeting and an open bar. A cast of actors shares the approximately 3½-hour train ride north, and real passengers get to play Sherlock Holmes. The murder is committed on the way up and solved on the way back...

"WE DO THE deaths a little more violently," he says. "I mean, poison is so common."

About an hour out of Washington, after picking up passengers in New Carrollton, Md., and Baltimore, the mistress of ceremonies for the day sets the scene.

We are on a train from Paris to Berlin. The trip, she assures us, will be "uneventful," but just in case, we're given pencil and paper to write down what we see.

And what we see right off is Mimi, the saucy-looking Berlin nightclub owner, who stands and goes on about her fabulous show. In due course, we hear from Fred and Vinnie and Linda and Hugo, among others.

It wouldn't be fair to tell you what happens, but I can say that passengers must cope with stolen paintings, secret codes, gambling, a newspaper article, a hidden briefcase, the French language, a surly inspector, clues, phony clues, a gun chase through the train and a crook on the lam. And, oh yes, two murders.

My fellow passengers get into the spirit of things right away. Perfect strangers make perfect fools of themselves, aggressively pouncing on suspected clues, sharing information they have gathered from the actors, and comparing notes and theories. They are clearly having a good time.

When travelers are asked by a man in a trench coat to hide a briefcase, they do such a good job that the mystery play is brought temporarily to a halt. The grim, gray-suited inspector, played by local actress Susie Barnes, appeals for some respect and a little order — but doesn't get it.

Levity is definitely acceptable, even required.

"DO YOU know the gentleman who gave you the briefcase?" the inspector asks one woman passenger.

"No, but she'd like to," another passenger pipes up helpfully.

Passengers who miss an obvious clue are shown no mercy. I am in the group labeled "Dummies, Dummies, Dummies" by a rude Nero Wolfe type.

And as we pull into Pennsylvania Station in mid-morning, still searching for a solution to the crimes, it is comforting to know that at least one passenger will be staying on the case.

"I'll check Bloomingdale's," she promises.

For the next 10 hours, passengers and cast go their separate ways. They visit friends, scatter about the city for lunch, shop, take in a show or museum exhibit and wine and dine themselves that evening before reboarding at 9:15 p.m.

The regular passengers have not, truth be told, spent a great deal of time going over the murder clues. All will be revealed, of course, but not, as it turns out, by any of us.

The few who did attempt a serious discussion of the crimes encountered some problems, especially at restaurants. Even supposedly mind-your-own-business New Yorkers were a bit unnerved when strangers at the next table began discussing "the man with the gun."

BACK ON the train, passengers tired from the long day quickly find new energy. There are murders to be solved. The travelers regroup to go over the clues again and soon are writing down who they think did it and why. At 10:20 p.m., a rather peeved-looking mistress of ceremonies calls us to attention.

"Ladies and gentlemen," says Barbara Fox, the real-life writer, director and producer for the Mystery Menu players, "you have accused the bartender, the train conductor and each other. Some of you have actually accused me!"

It remains the inspector's task, as always, to sum up, and one by one she reveals the "true" identities and secret connections of most of our prime suspects. The real killer is unmasked as the train pulls into Philadelphia.

"Some of you got some of the solution, but none of you got all of it," says Ms. Fox, grinning.

Personally, I thought the final solution was a bit of a reach, but then I was in the "Dummy" group.

Afterward, as cast members and passengers mingled for the Zephyr's version of a backstage party, Ms. Fox and some of the other actors described the special difficulties of performing a murder mystery and staging it on a train.

"We rehearse extensively and make up a history for each character so they can answer questions," said Ms. Fox.

Since passengers sit in two different sections, separated by the bar and bathroom facilities, the cast must move back and forth, performing the basic story line twice.

And because Ms. Fox was worried about trying to carry a body on a moving train, the actual murder is committed offstage. Passengers hear it and are told about it, but they don't really see it.

The MYSTERY Menu players have appeared at the Coolfont health resort in West Virginia and other gatherings, and when the cast performs on solid ground, Ms. Fox assures me, there is a body.

Martha Manning, who played Mimi the nightclub owner, said it's tough "trying to stay in character for such a long time — but it's a fun exercise." She and fellow cast members still get questions they didn't anticipate, and they have to ad lib a lot, which causes special problems.

"It's dangerous," said attorney Ron Scheraga, alias Fred Blake, the gambler. "You wouldn't believe how (passengers) hear something, think it's a clue and just take off with it. We have to be careful."

The Zephyr pulled into Washington about 1 a.m. and this reporter was admonished not to give away too much of the murder plot or reveal the identity of the killer. I guess I have to keep my word.

But for those of you out there who like to sneak a peek at the last page of those Ellery Queen mysteries, I can tell you this: The butler didn't do it.

Washington teacher establishes shrine to spuds

EDITOR'S NOTE: Consider the potato. In America, what would a hamburger be without french fries, a steak without a baked potato, a breakfast without hash browns? For that matter, what would the farmers in Idaho and Maine and Long Island do for a living? With that in mind, a schoolteacher in Washington has established something of a shrine to the spud.

Director of "The Potato Museum," Tom Hughes, displays some potato kitchen equipment at his unique establishment in Washington D.C. The museum, located in his home, has 2,000 items.

WASHINGTON — The Smithsonian Institution preserves more than 100 million items in its vast collection, from dinosaur bones to Dolley Madison's slippers, but not a single potato.

However, that glaring omission is taken care of a dozen blocks away. Just visit the home of Tom and Meredith Hughes, a young couple with a towheaded 3-year-old named Gulliver. The little card on the front door of their brownstone announces that this is "The Potato Museum."

Inside, from living room to dining room to kitchen, the ubiquitous tuber is king.

There are thousands of museums throughout America, most of them in small towns, that honor some interest or enthusiasm, some kind of nostalgia. But the potato?

HERE IN THE Hughes household is the original Mr. Potato Head, the first toy, they say, advertised on television; a clock that runs on electrical power generated by two potatoes; a couple of potato sack sports jackets; all kinds of potato-picking gear; a patented device for printing Idaho on potatoes; pottery from Peru designed after potatoes, including one that whistles through a little ceramic bird when you blow on it, items dating from 1,000 years before Christ.

Hughes, a lean, pleasant Welsh-Irish American, says the potato came from the Incas of ancient Peru and was carried to the rest of the civilized world by the Spanish conquistadors.

In the same high valleys where the coca leaf grows, the potato also grew, probably a refugee from the jungle below. The potato offered nutrition, the coca leaf a numbness from the pain of daily living in the rugged mountain valleys of Peru.

"As a matter of fact, cocaine plays a part in the planting ritual for potatoes to this day," Hughes says. Coca leaves are placed in the ground with the seed potatoes and they are sprinkled with corn beer.

Hughes, who got a fellowship to go to Peru last May to study the potato's origins firsthand, got interested in the subject while he was teaching at an international school in Brussels. He saw so many museums devoted to the artifacts of war, and nothing to the origins of food, that he decided then and there to champion the potato, Solanum tuberosa.

WHY NOT brussel sprouts? "Potatoes are a lot more valuable," said Hughes, who does not hail from Idaho, Maine, or Long Island, but from Philadelphia.

Potatoes come in three colors, red, white and blue.

Hughes is discouraged that "more artists don't use potatoes in their still lifes. They don't understand that they can be quite colorful."

Van Gogh, he says, did some still-life paintings of the potato and his famous "The Potato Eaters" was his favorite.

The Hughes family hosts friends in a Potato Eaters Night once a week. Everyone must bring a potato dish, everything from appetizers to dessert. Tom has no favorite recipe. He likes them all.

He teaches ancient history, mathematics and English to fifth graders at The Potomac School, which makes it difficult to keep the museum open. Visitors must call to make an appointment.

On this particular day, Hughes is showing the museum to two young students, Vince Brotsky of Washington and Mark Saroyan of Berkeley, Calif. Saroyan is a cousin of the late writer, but never met his famous kin. Hughes questions him closely on Armenian recipes that use potatoes he says the Armenian word for potato means literally ground apple. He promises to keep an eye open for anything new about the potato.

HUGHES REMINDS you that Marilyn Monroe dipped potato chips in champagne in the movie "The Seven Year Itch."

Incan soldiers carried freeze-dried potatoes (it gets cold in those mountains) as a lightweight foodstuff that could be boiled or added to stews.

There are anthologies of poems about potatoes. Cole Porter wrote, "You say potatoes and I say potahtoes..." Eddie Cantor sang, "Potatoes are cheaper... now's the time to fall in love."

A Colorado grower wrote a 120-page epic in rhyme to the potato and its origins.

The Norwegians, like others, used the potato to make whiskey. But they believed that it was not ready for drinking until it had made a round trip by ship to Australia. The labels state when the whiskey embarked on its voyage, the name of the ship, and the date it returned to Norway.

The chef at Antoine's in New Orleans cooks up little baskets of woven potato peels in which to serve his famous potato souffles. Hughes has one in the museum, of course, one of 2,000 items and 400 exhibits which his wife says "blights" one or another of their rooms.

In spite of that, she shares his enthusiasm for the tuber, edits the newsletter, Peelings, which goes out to members in 35 states and several foreign countries.

Among the exhibits are color pictures using an autochrome process, which relied on dyed potato crystals. The autochrome process, which predated color film by about 30 years, was used by the National Geographic for 10 years.

DESPITE HIS study of the 10,000 varieties of potatoes, Hughes feels, "The potato is taken too much for granted. It really is misunderstood and mistreated."

Most restaurants do not prepare it correctly, he says, and most of the fresh potatoes on the market are being replaced by processed tubers.

"I've been thinking and studying this subject for 11 years and there's so much more to learn," he says. "That's what's exciting. It's not finite."

He dreams of seeing the potatoes grown in monasteries by Tibetan monks, or potatoes grown from true seed and not seed potatoes in China, and tracing how Captain Cook brought the potatoes to the Maoris.

STATE IN BRIEF

Commission named to study fraternal organizations at UT

AUSTIN (AP) — A 23-member commission, including students, faculty, staff and alumni, has been appointed to conduct a comprehensive study of fraternal organizations at the University of Texas at Austin.

The commission was announced Monday by UT-Austin President William Cunningham, who selected the members.

"While it is clear that many fraternal organizations have had a positive impact on the university community, it is also evident that the role, nature and activities of these student groups suggest periodic review and discussion," Cunningham said.

A Travis County grand jury is reviewing the case of a UT fraternity pledge who died of an alcohol overdose after a fraternity-related activity.

Cunningham said the commission will specifically review hazing and alcohol abuse.

The commission will review Greek letter organizations, as well as campus groups such as the Orange Jackets, Silver Spurs, Spooks, Tejas Club and Texas Cowboys.

Track reopens after derailment

DEL RIO (AP) — Railway workers have reopened a stretch of track where 17 cars of a train transporting new automobiles derailed when the train's brakes apparently malfunctioned.

The derailment site, about seven miles west of Del Rio, was cleared Monday. The first train passed by the derailment site shortly before 1 p.m., said Southern Pacific Transportation Co. spokesman Jim Johnson.

Johnson said the train's air brakes apparently locked, causing the cars to derail shortly before noon Sunday.

The 89-car eastbound train was en route to the Dallas-Fort Worth area with a shipment of 132 new automobiles from Los Angeles, he said.

None of the five-member crew was injured in the derailment and none of the cars overturned, Johnson said. He said no trains had to be detoured because traffic is light on Sundays.

Insurance board postpones hearing

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox has asked the State Board of Insurance to postpone its workers' compensation rate hearing set for today.

Mattox said Monday there has been insufficient time to review recommendations submitted Friday by the state board's staff.

The insurance industry has asked for a $680 million increase.

"This matter is too important to be heard without a full and adequate opportunity on all sides for preparation and presentation of evidence," Mattox said Monday.

He said the motion to postpone is backed by the Texas Association of Compensation Consumers, a group that includes the Texas Association of Business.

The National Council on Compensation Insurance has requested a 31.3 percent rate hike that would add $680 million to workers' compensation premiums in Texas.

Richards: Cash notes rate high

AUSTIN (AP) — State Treasurer Ann Richards said Monday, on the eve of the first-ever sale of $600 million in cash management notes, that New York bond rating services have given the issue their highest rating.

"These ratings mean cash in our pockets," Ms. Richards said in a statement.

She said Moody Investors Service Inc. and Standard & Poor's Corp. have given the notes their highest ratings.

The $600 million in notes, which were authorized by the Legislature, will allow the state treasury to meet temporary cash flow problems in December and January without borrowing from other state funds.

The notes must be paid back by Aug. 31, 1987.

Woman on probation in drug case

HOUSTON (AP) — A Los Angeles woman was sentenced to five years probation and fined $15,000 after she pleaded guilty to drug conspiracy for her part in a major cocaine smuggling ring.

Bettye Harlig was sentenced Monday by U.S. District Judge James DeAnda. Ms. Harlig earlier admitted she financed the purchase of a $100,000 airplane for cocaine smugglers.

The woman was among 15 people charged in the smuggling of more than $100 million in Colombian cocaine into Brownsville via Mexico, said Assistant U.S. Attorney Ken Magidson.

The ring used the airplane at a specially-built air strip near Tanuin, Mexico, before bringing the drugs into Texas, Magidson said.
