Saddam OKs U.N. flights

Iraq refuses to guarantee planes' safety

■ Just minutes before Bush's deadline, Baghdad agrees to allow weapons inspection flights.

Associated Press

Iraq approved U.N. weapons inspection flights late Friday, minutes before a deadline set by President Bush and backed by U.S. military might. But Baghdad refused to guarantee the flights' safety, and the United Nations said Iraq will get another chance to make that promise.

Six hours of frantic diplomacy began just after 11 a.m. CST, when Bush ordered Saddam Hussein to let the U.N. inspectors enter Iraq on their own planes by 3 p.m. CST. He did not specifically threaten another bombing raid, but said Iraqis knew "what they must do."

Just before the deadline, Iraq gave its approval. But it failed to guarantee the flights' safety, and said that the flights could only be made Friday through Monday.

The U.S. military appeared poised to launch another air assault on Iraq with aircraft based in Saudi Arabia and aboard the aircraft carrier USS Kitty Hawk in the Persian Gulf. But a few hours after the deadline passed, a U.N. statement offering Iraq another chance seemed to delay the action.

Friday evening a senior Pentagon official, speaking on condition he not be identified, said, "We're still right on the edge" of renewing air strikes against Iraq.

The official also disclosed that Iraq had fired anti-aircraft artillery at U.S. air patrols in the "no-fly zones" in northern and southern Iraq on Friday, but that none hit their targets. He said this was considered a further provocation.

Baghdad's refusal to let a team of chemical warfare inspectors into Iraq on U.N. planes was one of the issues that provoked Wednesday's bombing raid.

Defendant receives life sentence

■ In cabbie's murder, Midlander escapes death penalty because of his age, lack of criminal background.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

An 18-year-old Midland man was sentenced to life in prison Friday for the July 6 murder/robbery of a taxi driver.

Terrence Renard Lee escaped the death penalty after jurors deliberated his fate for about four hours in Judge John Hyde's 238th District Court.

Lee was convicted Wednesday of the capital murder of 20-year-old Alejandro Rodriguez, who was shot twice in the head after being robbed of about $80.

During the trial, the eight-woman, four-man jury listened to a taped confession Lee made to police about a month after the crime. No defense evidence was presented and the jury found Lee guilty in about 15 minutes.

A conviction of capital murder in Texas requires either the death penalty or life imprisonment. And anyone given a life sentence for capital murder must serve at least 35 years before being eligible for parole.

To determine the punishment, jurors are asked if the evidence shows that the defendant will probably commit criminal acts of violence that constitute a continuing threat to society.

Ex-inmate claims she was abused

■ Lawsuit alleges former county prisoner's constitutional rights were violated by four former deputies who imposed their sexual desires on her.

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

A 35-year-old female Texas penitentiary prisoner and a former Midland County Jail inmate identified only as Jane Doe in court documents, is seeking damages in federal court for suffering caused by three Midland County deputy sheriffs allegedly imposing sexual desires on her in jail in July 1992.

A lawsuit, filed this week in federal court in Pecos by G. David Smith of Dallas, claims the woman's constitutional rights were violated when the deputies — Lyndon Yarbrough, 48, Lynn Pittman, 36, and Eddie Mancha, 24, who have since been fired or resigned from the Midland County Sheriff's Department — sexually abused the woman.

Defendants in the lawsuit are Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter and Midland County government.

PRESIDENTIAL PASSAGE

Bush's triumph is found abroad

EDITOR'S NOTE: With the inauguration approaching on Wednesday, "Presidential Passage" takes a look at George Bush's legacy and Bill Clinton's promise.

By Robert Burns
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — George Bush never was the environmental president or the education president he aspired to be. His legacy resides in fields afar — nuclear missile fields disarmed, foreign battlefields conquered.

Bush

He was the internationalist president, a globe-trotting diplomat, a builder of foreign alliances, a leader historians say will be best remembered for overseeing the end of the nuclear arms race and rallying the world against Saddam Hussein.

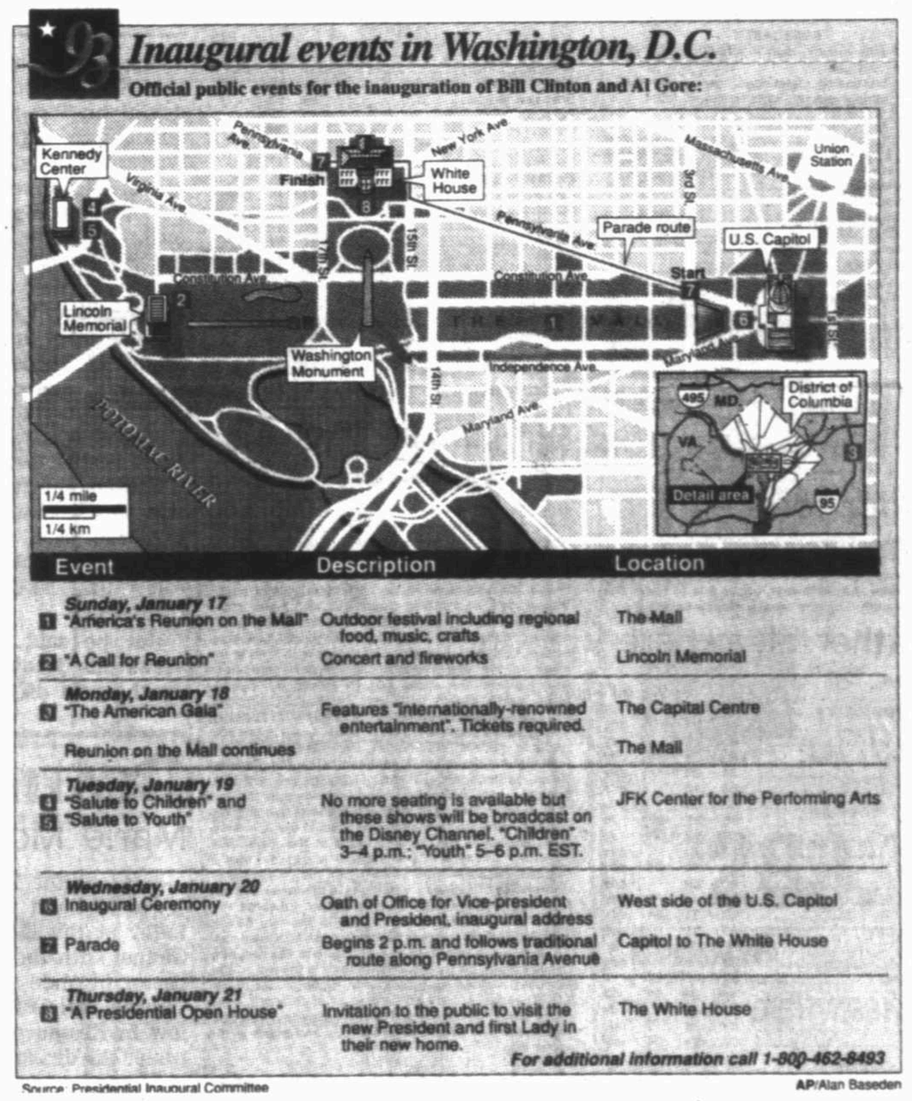

History also will record that Bush's successes on the world stage didn't rescue him from a cruel fate at home; he squandered the Republicans' 12-year grip on the White House less than two years after his popularity ratings hit record highs.

The afterglow of Bush's most dramatic foreign policy triumph — the allied victory over Iraq in February 1991 — had hardly begun to dim when his biggest domestic liability — the economy — began squeezing the life out of his presidency.

Erwin C. Hargrove, a political science professor at Vanderbilt University, said he believes Bush was doomed to be a one-term president. His downfall, Hargrove said, was embracing the Reagan supply-side economic approach as vice president after having labeled it "voodoo" during the 1980 primaries.

"It was sealed at that point," Hargrove said. "He was a prisoner

With Clinton's presidency, U.S. heads in new direction

By Mike Feinsilber
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Every so often, the country turns to a new face, and a new idea about what the government is and what it should do. America goes off in that new direction Wednesday.

Clinton

Willingly, eagerly, but anxiously too.

Bill Clinton promises to be one of those pacesetting presidents. He believes in government passionately. He promises to "work my heart out" to make it work for people. But he cannot spend the country out of its troubles like Franklin D. Roosevelt. He will not call government the enemy, like Ronald Reagan did.

Clinton advocates a partnership. He says those who get from the government must give something back to society.

He tried calling his idea the "New Covenant," but gave up that label in a hurry — too preachy, too suggestive of sacrifice,

Shared heritage cements TV duo's relation with Clintons

By Nita Lelyveld

WASHINGTON — Harry Thomason likes to brag that the Arkansas town he comes from — Hampton — makes Bill Clinton's home town of Hope look like "a major metropolis."

His wife, Linda Bloodworth-Thomason, who grew up over the border in Poplar Bluff, Mo., says her own experience was shaped by tales of her outspoken Arkansas grandfather, who was shot to death by the Ku Klux Klan before she was born.

The immensely successful television duo say it's this shared Ozark heritage that cemented their decade-long friendship with Bill and Hillary Clinton.

NATION

Rain moved across California on Friday, raising the threat of more flooding, and rivers rose out of their banks in parts of the South. Snow fell in the Northeast.

The latest in a series of drenching storms brought downpours to already saturated Southern California. "The flood potential for Southern California the next two days is the highest it has been in years," the National Weather Service said.

Lake Cachuma, Santa Barbara County's largest reservoir, was expected have water flowing over its spillways for the first time in 10 years. The last time the lake was full was in 1983; at the peak of the state's drought, in February 1991, it was down to 15 percent of capacity.

The rain came from a huge band of subtropical moisture that extended to Hawaii, the weather service said.

A flood watch was in effect through Saturday for much of Southern California, the National Weather Service said.

In the storm's path to the east, a flood warning was posted along the Gila River in Arizona, from Coolidge Dam to Painted Rock Dam.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Stabbing

Staff report

ODESSA — Witnesses chased a 14-year-old stabbing suspect to an Odessa fire station, and identified him to arresting officers Thursday night.

Police officers initially responded to a reported stab victim at Video One, 3944 E. 42nd St. The victim, 17-year-old Benny Frank Henderson Jr., had received multiple knife wounds to the chest and abdomen. He was transported to Medical Center Hospital.

Witnesses said the assault occurred in front of the southeast entrance of Permian Mall, 4101 E. 42nd St.

About 10 p.m., patrol officers were dispatched to the Odessa Fire Department located at Brentwood and North Grandview in reference to a disturbance.

Once officers arrived they learned that witnesses had chased the suspect to the fire station. Witnesses identified the suspect and he was taken to Ector County Youth Center.

The juvenile is being detained and charged with aggravated assault, a third-degree felony.

Drug seizure

YOAKUM COUNTY — Law officials on Thursday confiscated a quantity of marijuana and 16 jars of psilocybin mushrooms, a hallucinogenic drug, valued at $2,000.

Michael E. Delossantos, 32, and Christy Pitzer, 23, both of Denver City, were arrested in connection with the search and were transported to the Yoakum County Sheriff's Office.

An investigator from the Permian Basin Drug Task Force, the Yoakum County Sheriff's Office and the Denver City Police Department, executed a search warrant three miles east of Denver City, off of County Road P-10 in Yoakum County.

The search was made about 9:30 p.m. Thursday.

The Permian Basin Drug Task Force Canine Unit assisted in the search.

Drug charge

Two Midlanders were arrested and charged with possession of heroin following a Crimestoppers tip Thursday.

Law officials obtained a search warrant for 509 Ruby Drive and searched the residence at 11:15 p.m. Thursday night. While officers attempted to get in the front door, Ida Rodriquez flushed heroin down the commode, according to police reports.

Her husband, Andres Rodriquez, 33, was arrested and charged with possession of heroin after officers dug up a sewer line to confiscate the heroin.

Justice of the Peace Robert Pine set bond at $10,000 for Rodriquez, who had not posted bond at press time. Bond information for Mrs. Rodriquez was not available from Midland County jail officials.

IRAQ: Saddam OKs inspection flights

(From 1A)

Tim Trevan, spokesman for the U.N. Special Commission, said Friday night, "We have made it clear all along ... that it is up to Iraq to guarantee the safety and security of our personnel."

"The question we have to ask ourselves here ... is are we prepared to send 50 to 60 people up in an aircraft with this total denial of responsibility."

Since Iraqi invaders were driven out of Kuwait in 1991 and the Gulf War ended, the commission has been in charge of monitoring and destroying Iraq's weapons of mass destruction.

Trevan indicated the commission was less interested in punishing Iraq than getting its work done. "We want to get in and do our job," he told a news conference.

But he said "the commission views this (Iraq's reply) as refusal on the part of Iraq."

Trevan said that on Friday night the commission would again ask Saddam Hussein's government to clear flights into Iraq. He said the commission hoped this time to receive guarantees of safety.

No deadline was set, but Trevan said he hoped to have guarantees in time to have a flight in the air by Sunday morning.

In Baghdad, an Information Ministry spokesman announced about a half-hour before expiration of Bush's deadline that a letter had been sent to the Special Commission, saying U.N. flights would be let in.

An official spokesman in Baghdad read the letter aloud to reporters: "Iraq affirms that it is not responsible for the safety of the planes inside Iraqi airspace in case a mistake or misunderstanding occurs, God forbid."

Any U.N. flights presumably would have to enter Iraq over zones that Iraq is prohibited from patrolling. Its radar controls were destroyed in Wednesday's raid.

The initial U.S. response to Iraq's statement was mixed. Washington consulted with U.N. inspectors and its coalition partners, France and Britain.

"They know what they must do," Bush said in his warning. "This is not just the United States. This is the United Nations. It's a strong coalition whose determination has not diminished in any single way."

The United States and its allies bombed the air defense network in southern Iraq on Wednesday following threatening deployments of anti-aircraft weapons in a "no-fly zone" in southern Iraq, repeated border incursions into Kuwait, and continued Iraqi defiance of U.N. resolutions.

Baghdad began to ease off on its latest showdown with the West on Thursday, when it promised to would stop forays into Kuwait to retrieve weapons abandoned when Iraqi troops retreated.

But Iraq has held fast to its refusal to move anti-aircraft missiles from zones the allies set up to shield dissident Kurds and Shiite Muslims from Iraqi air attacks.

Iraq claimed an anti-aircraft missile battery near the southern port of Basra forced an "enemy" plane to flee Friday.

The Pentagon denied a similar report Thursday about planes being forced to turn around in northern Iraq. The allegations may have been intended to buttress the morale of Iraqis who may fear a repeat of the Gulf War.

Threatened Iraqi retaliation had not materialized as night spread over the Persian Gulf, but Kuwait's small army, steamrollered in August 1990, remained on alert.

The first contingent of 1,000 troops from Fort Hood, Texas, arrived at Kuwait's airport. About 300 special force members were already in Kuwait assisting the Kuwaiti military.

JURY: Midland defendant escapes death penalty

(From 1A)

In Lee's trial, 10 of the 12 jurors answered the question "no" which resulted, as required by law, in the judge assessing a life sentence.

In a case where jurors unanimously find the defendant a threat to society, jurors are then asked if evidence shows mitigating circumstances why a death sentence should be reduced to life in prison. If all the jurors find no such circumstances exist, then the death penalty is imposed. If 10 or more jurors determine that a defendant should get life, then a life sentence is handed down.

In capital murder cases that end in a hung jury, where a decision can't be made, then the defendant automatically gets a life sentence.

District Attorney Al Schorre said he thought jurors opted for the life sentence because of Lee's age and that he didn't have a criminal background.

Jurors heard several witnesses testify on behalf of Lee's character to help secure the life sentence.

Brad Fisher, a psychologist from North Carolina, testified Friday that Lee "is a person you would not expect to be violent in the future" based on his past history of behavior.

Fisher said he could not pinpoint what prompted Lee to murder the driver but speculated that a lack of structure and discipline in the home, school problems, being dependent on others, and alcohol and marijuana use were contributing factors.

Schorre hit upon the that point during closing arguments.

"I tell you what worries me the most ... They can't give you an explanation of why he did it. Whatever problems there are they are ticking inside him today ... He's a walking time bomb," Schorre said.

According to Lee's confession, Lee and another man, 20-year-old James F. Greene called the taxi with the intent of robbery. After taking the money from the driver, Lee shot the driver after being urged on by Greene.

Greene is expected to be tried for capital murder within the next few months.

Family members of the victim declined to comment on the Lee verdict pending the outcome of the Greene trial, according to officials with the District Attorney's Office.

Symbolic march to commemorate MLK day

Staff report

The annual "Celebration of Martin Luther King Jr." march is scheduled for 2:30 p.m. Sunday.

Baker

Members of the community who wish to join in the symbolic march are requested to assemble at 2 p.m. at Martin Luther King Jr. Park, located west of the Northeast YMCA.

The march will end at Mount Calvary Missionary Baptist Church, 303 E. Shandon. The theme for this year's march is "Developing New Perspectives: The King Legacy and Human Services."

Participants are invited to bring church or personal banners.

Following the march at 3 p.m., Luther Baker, Ph.D. candidate and director of the community resources program at the Texas Department of Human Services in Austin, will speak at the church.

Baker will talk about "Rites of Passage: A Design to develop African-American Youth."

"One way the black community of Texas can help solve the long list of social and economic ills facing our community is through a partnership between social service agencies and the black business leadership of this state," Baker said.

"It's no secret that Texas faces a long list of social problems which have reached the crisis stage."

Baker said the state has the dubious distinction of being among the nation's leaders in high school dropouts, teen-age pregnancy, the percentage of children living in poverty, and the number of people receiving food stamps.

"Clearly, government programs alone will not solve these problems," he said. "In fact, a tight state budget may result in a reduction in some social service programs. It's vital that government bodies work more closely with community-based organizations."

For the past two years, the DHS Community Resources Program has worked with groups in San Antonio, Austin, Fort Worth and El Paso on mentoring programs for young black males, housing for the homeless and mobile health clinics.

"We know the success of innovative programs like these must include the vigorous cooperation of the black business community," Baker said.

Rehearsal for Sunday's program is 7 p.m. tonight at Mount Calvary Missionary Baptist Church.

DOE: Lawsuit names Painter, county

(From 1A)

Midland County Attorney Mark H. Dettman declined to comment on the case.

"I don't know who Jane Doe is," Dettman said on Friday.

Painter also declined comment.

Smith, who formerly practiced law in Odessa, said in the lawsuit that for the "safety and privacy concern" of his client, he is requesting the woman be identified only as Jane Doe.

The complaint alleges that over a period of weeks in July 1992, one deputy made "sexually suggestive comments" to Jane Doe, masturbated in front of her and rubbed her breasts; another deputy used "subtle threats and coercion" after inserting his organ through the inmate's feeding-access door, and "caused her to masturbate him"; and yet another deputy took the woman from her cell to the jail sergeant's office and imposed "his sexual desires" on the woman in exchange for telephone privileges.

The complaint says the alleged sexual abuses were in areas not monitored by closed-circuit television monitors and that the deputies "used their positions of authority to coerce" Jane Doe into engaging in sexual activities.

The petition says that after Jane Doe complained to a jail supervisor about the alleged abuses, she took a polygraph examination and passed it.

Smith claims that Jane Doe's constitutional rights were violated as a result of:

- A Midland County Jail "policy" that allowed male deputy jailers to be alone with women inmates.
- Lack of supervision of deputy jailers in order to avoid sexual abuses.
- A jail not equipped with "adequate security cameras, view access and other monitoring" devices.
- Inadequate training to prevent the deputy jailers from consorting with inmates.
- The sheriff's and the county's alleged failure to "adequately screen" deputy jailers who have "propensities" to sexually consort with inmates.

In alleging negligence, the complaint says that the county "failed to use monitoring and surveillance equipment to prevent the sexual assaults," failed to require at least two deputies to gain access to women's cells to prevent "one-on-one contact between opposite-sex guards and inmates," and failed to utilize training manuals and other aids to train deputy jailers in "proper procedures and decorum."

While Smith is seeking unspecified monetary damages for his client, he is claiming that she suffered "pain and humiliation" and "emotional and mental anguish and trauma" as a result of the alleged abuses. Further, Smith claims that the "psychological and psychiatric help" which Jane Doe needs is not "available in prison" — in the Institutional Division of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice.

Late last year, in a "notice-of-claim" letter to Midland County Judge Charles W. "Bro" Seltzer, Smith had sought $1.5 million in compensatory and punitive damages for his client.

Back then, Dettman declared that Midland County was "not going to send him (Smith) $1.5 million" and said he was "not aware of any wrongdoing by the sheriff or of any real potential liability against either the sheriff or the county."

Further, Dettman said Smith formally should disclose the name of his client.

Between Smith's sending the letter and filing the lawsuit, the sheriff said Smith "wants a bunch of money. Actually, it's not a 'letter of demand.' It's a threat that 'if you don't pay me, I'm going to file suit.'"

Painter, who said at the time that he had reviewed the case and the allegations, said that neither he nor the Midland County Sheriff's Department has "done anything wrong."

Hutchison says she would work on deficit

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff writer

Kay Bailey Hutchison, the third senatorial candidate in two days to stump for local votes, said Friday that she will concentrate on cutting the federal deficit and reforming Congress if elected in the special election in May.

Hutchison

Mrs. Hutchison, a Republican and Texas' current State Treasurer, touted significant budget cuts she said she has made in the state budget and said she would try to make similar cuts on the national level.

"My budget was reduced 10 percent in the state treasury. I took it and made it lean and efficient," she said. She said she has asked for another 5 percent cut for each of the next two years.

If elected, Mrs. Hutchison would have to leave her post as state treasurer.

"I had no intention," she said. "But I didn't choose the time that Sen. (Lloyd) Bentsen would choose to leave after so many years. I have been more productive than any treasurer in history. My goal is to get the federal government off the back of the people of our state."

She believes her strong conservative values will attract statewide voter appeal.

"I didn't want to announce at first ... but after numerous calls and support," she said. "The people said, 'We want a conservative woman running in Congress.'"

'My budget was reduced 10 percent in the state treasury. I took it and made it lean and efficient.'

— Kay Bailey Hutchison

Mrs. Hutchison pledged she would serve only two terms in the senate after announcing her support of term limitations.

"I think it's important to stay in touch with the people of Texas and not become a Washingtonian," she said. "My special interest group will only be the taxpayers of Texas."

On Thursday, U.S. Rep. Jack Fields — a Republican who is also seeking Bentsen's former senate seat — also vowed to serve only two terms.

"I pledged that much earlier than he did," Mrs. Hutchison said.

Mrs. Hutchison today will conclude a four-day 21-city swing throughout Texas announcing her candidacy.

CLINTON: President-elect is cut from a new mold

(From 1A)

though in the economics that confront Clinton and the country, sacrifice on a biblical scale may yet be what he'll ask for.

If so, the irony is clear: Bill Clinton was a candidate who offered everything except pain. Giving back to government was a quiet undertone, while he shouted his promises.

Promises of health care for all, college for all and a chance to pay it off in public service; job training for those whose skills don't match the times; a tax cut for the middle class; a youth service corps; work for those on welfare; a partnership between government and business — and all this while cutting the deficit in half and the size of government by 3 percent a year.

He promised so much that his first order of business must be to discover his priorities.

He bills himself a "New Democrat." He is an activist but a centrist. In Arkansas, he was attacked from the left as well as the right.

This town, full of old Democrats eager to welcome any Democrat, celebrates the new era without knowing what it brings.

The nation, tired of the stalemate of divided government, will take a chance on one-party government.

The people have chosen a president not cut from the old mold, a Democrat for whom the old battles belong to history. He was in diapers when Harry Truman won in 1948 and was still too young to drive when John F. Kennedy claimed the torch for a new generation of Americans.

Clinton's is the new generation — one that was more likely to smoke marijuana in the living room than cornsilk behind the barn. Its war was not World War II, an epic struggle of a united people, but Vietnam, a war of defeat and division.

He marched against that war, truly a generational marker.

There are others. He dances to Fleetwood Mac, and knows the lyrics of Elvis, not Sinatra. He has had, he admits, marital difficulties, a thoroughly modern confession.

Presidents used to be coy, and pretended to let the office seek them. Clinton is so much the political animal that, except for two years teaching law, he has had no work outside of politics. Since her infancy, just about the only home his 12-year-old daughter has known is the governor's mansion in Arkansas.

Clinton comes straight out of real life-as-it-is-lived. "I still believe in a place called Hope," he said in his acceptance speech, but one could look at his disorderly family life and call it Hopeless, Ark. His salesman-father died in an automobile accident before he was born. He was raised by grandparents while his mother went off to a seek an education so she could earn an income.

No other president ever had cause to testify in court against his alcoholic stepfather at his mother's divorce proceedings.

In his habit of reaching out to touch people, he calls to mind Lyndon Johnson, another poor boy with ambition and an eagerness to please.

But Johnson lacked Clinton's brainy charm, and the more apt comparison may turn out to be with the patrician Franklin D. Roosevelt, who also had to banish fear and, in a spellbinding 100 days, began to make government the engine of recovery.

One big difference though: for Roosevelt, government deficits were a positive good, a pump primer; for Clinton the deficit is a dream buster, political handcuffs that threaten to stymie him.

Clinton brings to office two assets most presidents didn't have — a widely admired vice president who seems truly to have become a confidant, and a wife, Hillary, who now that the election's is behind them, is unabashedly first among advisers.

Luck has been another Clinton ally. He was lucky that strong potential rivals for the Democratic nomination chose to sit out 1992, sure that Bush was indomitable.

Third in the summer polls — with barely 25 percent — Clinton was lucky that the other agent of change, Ross Perot, bowed out during the Democratic convention, giving Clinton a swift lift.

He was lucky to get the Vietnam draft issue behind him early, so that, when Bush brought it up, it seemed shopworn. He was lucky that the public treated Gennifer Flowers' peddled confessions with indifference.

The rigidly exclusionary atmosphere of the Republican convention helped, more Clinton luck. So did Bush's aimless, tone-deaf campaign. And finally the economic recovery that Bush insisted was right around the corner waited until after November to make the turn.

But Clinton made his own luck, too, sticking with his message, refusing to panic in the face of "bimbo eruptions" and cross-examination about the draft, making a second-place finish in New Hampshire 11 long months ago seem like a victory.

He gives every evidence of always having intended to be president. In 1956, when he was 10, he sat — "literally transfixed," he recalled later — watching the Republican and Democratic conventions on television. The fever was confirmed when, during a Boy's Nation visit to Washington, he shook John F. Kennedy's hand in the Rose Garden.

"He never said anything, but you could see it in his eyes," his mother would recall.

He is a policy wonk — the political equivalent to those in his generation who went into a garage and came out with a computer that wowed everyone, even the Japanese.

Arkansas, a poor state, was Bill Clinton's garage. He came out with old ideas made new, selling a poorly educated state on the idea that its future lay in its schools.

For overreaching, he got ejected from the governor's office after one term, ignobly becoming America's youngest ex-governor. From that experience, he learned limits and won four more tern the Comeback Kid's firs comeback.

In Arkansas he developed the idea that a country unable to educate its young has no future.

In the presidential campaign, it boiled down to "We don't have a single person to waste" — the suggestion that the individual has a responsibility to become all he is capable of. Bill Clinton took that idea to heart. It made him president.

BUSH: Economy led to Republican defeat

(From 1A)

of the myths of voodoo economics."

In his 1992 campaign, Bush often boasted of big domestic achievements, including passage of the Clear Air Act, a child care bill and landmark civil rights legislation that barred job discrimination against Americans with disabilities.

But even Bush seems to acknowledge that when historians assess the 41st presidency they will write mainly about what he did abroad, not at home. But even the judgments on his foreign policy record are not uniformly admiring.

"I think this will be remembered as a minor presidency, not a disastrous one, but not an important one," said Alan Brinkley, a Columbia University historian.

Charles O. Jones, a presidential scholar at the University of Wisconsin, said it's no mystery why Bush spent so much of his time on international affairs.

"That's what he liked to do, and he was good at it in a special way that went to his strength: his international Rolodex," Jones said. "The guy really knows lots of people — not just knows them but knows them well enough to really communicate with them. There's a difference."

That global network of friends and allies was built during a career of government service that began with two terms as a congressman from Texas and then stints as ambassador to the United Nations, head of the U.S. liaison office in China and director of the CIA before serving as vice president from 1981 to 1989.

Those contacts made the difference when Iraq invaded Kuwait and claimed the oil-rich Persian Gulf sheikdom for its own in August 1990. Bush took the lead in organizing an unprecedented United Nations coalition of dozens of countries, including several Arab states, to expel Iraq's occupying army.

"That will be looked back on as a case of the revival of the United Nations," Jones said. "When people have more time to reflect on it, it will be viewed as a kind of indicator of what is possible in the post-Cold War world."

The Bush White House coined the phrase "new world order" to describe a hopeful aftermath of the U.S.-Soviet ideological competition that had polarized the world for 40 years. And in his final weeks as president he made two historic moves that he believed would help nurture a new, more peaceful order.

In December, Bush sent U.S. troops into Somalia on Operation Restore Hope to pacify warring clans and protect overland shipments of food to starving Somalis. And on Jan. 2 in Moscow he and Russian President Boris Yeltsin signed the START II treaty, the broadest nuclear arms reduction pact in history.

In separate steps taken on Sept. 27, 1991, and Jan. 28, 1992, Bush announced disarmament initiatives that together were the most far-reaching of the nuclear age. He ordered all ground-based U.S. nuclear weapons removed from Europe, and all tactical nuclear arms removed from U.S. Navy surface ships and attack submarines; canceled development of a new single-warhead Midgetman missile; and took U.S. nuclear bombers off hair-trigger alert for the first time.

His moves led to an outline agreement in June 1992 on new cuts in strategic nuclear weapons; this evolved into the START II treaty, which, if implemented, will eliminate the most threatening nuclear missiles.

For Bush, these were perhaps his most satisfying accomplishments.

"Above all," Bush said in a Dec. 15 speech recounting his foreign policy efforts, "we've sought to erase nuclear nightmares from the sleep of future generations."

As Bush's presidency wound down, he delivered valedictory addresses that focused on foreign affairs.

"This was the area where he made the greatest mark of his presidency," his spokesman, Marlin Fitzwater said. He said the message of those speeches — that the United States must demonstrate world leadership, sometimes by force — drew on "the most important achievements" of the Bush administration.

As memorable as the allied victory over Iraq may be, some historians believe the episode eventually undercut Bush's political viability in two ways.

First, it focused attention by Congress and Bush's Democratic challengers on the Bush administration's role in courting Saddam Hussein — even in the days just before Iraq invaded Kuwait — with agricultural credits and technology sales while suppressing or overlooking evidence of Iraq's nuclear ambitions. Democratic challenger Bill Clinton hammered Bush on this during the campaign.

Second, the decisiveness of the Persian Gulf victory contrasted with the appearance of ineptitude, even confusion, by the Bush administration on the American economy, which was sagging even as Bush contended it was recovering.

"The irony of the success that Bush presented in the Persian Gulf" was that his subsequent inaction on the economy made him look feeble by comparison, said Mark A. Peterson, an associate professor of government at Harvard University. "He seemed to be exhibiting weakness after demonstrating strength."

It was the economy, Peterson and others believe, that doomed the Bush presidency.

"The main thing that defeated him was the fact that the economy didn't come back fast enough. If it had done so he probably would have been re-elected," said Nelson Poslby, a presidential scholar at the University of California at Berkeley.

Jones, the University of Wisconsin professor, said historians weighing Bush's record will take into account that he came into office in January 1989 facing the biggest opposition majority in Congress of any president in history.

"Bush will never be judged a great president, but there will be a sympathetic interpretation," Jones said. "They will take into account how difficult it would be to be a great president without ... advantages such as support on Capital Hill."

TV: Clintons' Hollywood friends chair inaugural committee

(From 1A)

Arkansans have to stick together, says Bloodworth-Thomason.

"We are all people from a poor rural state who are trying to do something at a national level," she said. "If you're from Arkansas, you do have to get up a little earlier and go to bed a little later and try to be a little smarter than everyone else."

The Thomasons — responsible for the hit TV shows "Designing Women," "Evening Shade," and "Hearts Afire" — have been highly visible since Clinton began running for president last year. Too much so, they say.

"We feel we've been overpublicized and overcredited in the campaign," said Bloodworth-Thomason, who's worried about more publicity during Clinton's inaugural festivities.

"We're going only to the Arkansas ball and we're wearing masks," she said.

Bloodworth-Thomason made "The Man From Hope," the 14-minute touchy-feely video of Clinton's life that some credit with turning the tide of the campaign.

She also sent her shows' hairdresser and wardrobe consultant to help Hillary Rodham Clinton in Little Rock — a move which some say completely transformed Mrs. Clinton's image.

But she says she was just being a friend and has never once sat down and talked appearance with Hillary Clinton.

"This is a woman with 400 projects. I've got three TV shows," she said. "We've got other things to think about."

"I think I'm like Hillary in that I'm much more interested in where women are going than what they'll have on when they get there," she added.

The Clintons chose their Hollywood-based friends to serve as co-executive chairs of the Presidential Inaugural Committee. They've invited them to stay at the White House during their first week in residence.

But Bloodworth-Thomason bristles at the suggestion that the friendship she and her husband share with the Clintons is going to give the Hollywood world entree to the White House.

"First of all, we don't know many heads of studios and we don't know a lot of people in Hollywood. Most of our family and many of our friends are in Arkansas and Missouri. We basically work 16 hours a day, seven days a week," she said. "We are not lobbyists for the Hollywood community and we wouldn't be remotely interested in doing that."

Thomason was a high school football coach at the time. Clinton was a student, waiting to head to Oxford University on a Rhodes scholarship.

Thomason said it would have been hard to predict his future, but it was clear Clinton was presidential material. The two kept in touch over the years, and became really close after their marriages.

Bloodworth-Thomason remembers the first time she met the Clintons, when they invited her and Thomason to the Arkansas Governor's Mansion for breakfast. Mrs. Clinton answered the door herself, wearing jeans, a sweater with a teddy bear on it and a big smile on her face. Chelsea Clinton was holding her hand.

"We just had a great time that morning in the kitchen," Bloodworth-Thomason said. "Within five minutes, I was sitting on the counter, dangling my legs and telling stories."

Thomason had always wanted to be a football coach, and high-school coaching was his first career. Burt Reynolds plays a high school coach in the show "Evening Shade."

Bloodworth-Thomason had expected to follow in the footsteps of her father and grandfather as a lawyer.

The characters in the pair's first big hit, "Designing Women," are female versions of the hard-drinking lawyers who sat around in her family's living room in Poplar Bluff, Mo., when she was growing up.

She came to California on a whim after she graduated from college in Missouri, and she planned at the time to enter law school soon. But she never did. First she was a schoolteacher in Watts. Then she met actress Mary Kay Place and they began writing scripts together.

They started writing for "M*A*S*H." in 1974, and got an Emmy nomination for their first episode. Bloodworth-Thomason's career was launched.

Thomason got tired of coaching after six years, and decided to be a filmmaker. He made it to Hollywood eventually on borrowed money, and just barely survived in the beginning.

"Looking back on it now, I was terribly naive and I had no chance of ever succeeding but somehow — and this turned out to be a struggle too — I did," he says.

At Mozark Productions (for Missouri and Arkansas) Bloodworth-Thomason is the creator, writer and producer. Thomason directs.

He is 52, she is 45, and their years together have been an incredible success story. They are millionaires many times over. But they still feel their emotional center is down South.

"I hate when people put the word Hollywood in front of our names," said Bloodworth-Thomason. "We just happen to work there."

Thomason says he and his wife are very proud of the Clintons and proud to be a part of the inauguration.

"We believe in them. We believe no one will try harder than they will," he said.

But they're also looking forward to getting back to their own lives.

"We just want to quietly disappear," said Bloodworth-Thomason.

Attorney general unveils criminal justice reform package

HOUSTON (AP) — Attorney General Dan Morales on Friday unveiled a six-point legislative package which he said would make punishment for criminals tougher and quicker, beef up state efforts to fight drug money laundering and enhance victims' rights.

Morales, at a Houston news conference, said the recent settlement of the Ruiz lawsuit, ending federal court supervision of the state's prison system, would allow the Legislature to move ahead with his criminal justice reform package.

"What this aims to do is simply get our state statutes in conformity with the new flexibility that we now have under the settlement agreement," he said. "Now that our prisons are finally free from control of federal courts, I think we can really begin to close the revolving door to Texas prisons."

Specifically, he wants to cut the time it takes to put convicted killers to death, saying 10 years and longer is too long. He would limit the number of appeals and slap a time limit for appeals.

"I don't believe a convicted murder can file appeal after appeal after appeal with no limit," he said. "The way our current structure and system operates, essentially, there is no limit with regard to the number of appeals and time defense lawyers can stretch out and delay the ultimate execution."

His package also would set up a new Victim Trust Fund so income made by inmates while serving time would go to victims.

"I'm confident (this) will make life worse for professional criminals and better for everyone else," Morales said. "In Texas, punishment is not swift enough, not certain enough, and often not severe enough. Sentences bear little resemblance to time served.

Leander woman claims $7 million Lotto jackpot

AUSTIN (AP) — Sue Turkington of Leander didn't have to travel far to collect her $7 million Lotto Texas jackpot Friday.

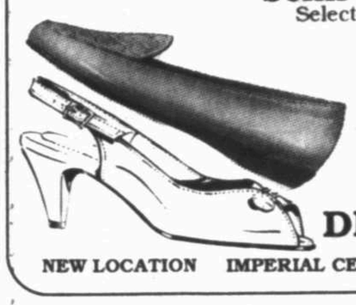

Ms. Turkington, 32, quit her manufacturing job and cruised down the highway about 25 miles to Austin to collect her first installment of a $7,200,855 jackpot she won after picking the six winning numbers from Wednesday's drawing.

"I am going to buy some land, get a house, take a couple trips and buy me a new Lexus," Ms. Turkington said. "I want to start breeding dogs. I have always wanted to do that."

Ms. Turkington received her first installment of $259,837 dollars from Texas Comptroller John Sharp and will receive $259,200 every Jan. 15 for the next 19 years.

Laura Minter, a school cleaning lady and mother of three from Athens, earlier said she had the winning ticket. But Sharp says the woman was wrong.

The Circle K in Leander will collect $72,000 for selling Ms. Turkington the winning ticket.

Lubbock officials seek tax hike for economic development

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Mayor David Langston made a ninth-inning pitch Friday for a sales-tax hike that may help lure a military finance center and 4,000 jobs to Lubbock.

"The ballgame is over" if voters reject the ½-cent sales tax hike Saturday, Langston said. "If it doesn't pass ... we're out of it. There's no way for us to finance our package."

Backers want the city to join 75 others in the state that levy up to a ½-cent in additional sales tax for local economic development.

Voters in Jacksonville, Texas City, Red Oak, McKinney, Sugar Land and a handful of other cities will also consider such a tax.

"It is an extra tool in the tool chest for economic development purposes," said Cathy Bonner, director of the Texas Department of Commerce.

"It's getting very, very competitive to attract new industry," Baylor economist Ray Perryman said. "Sometimes it comes down to being able to provide a bigger sewer line, a bigger water line, a piece of infrastructure that will meet the needs of a specific industry."

Lubbock voters last year defeated a tax for economic development. But the community has a goal in sight this time — becoming one of the two to four places in the country to be home of the Defense Department's accounting centers.

It is the only Texas city on the list of 20 nationwide that is being considered. It has offered a $67 million incentive package topped by a 850,000-square-foot office complex that would include a health clinic, fitness center and child care areas.

Private groups sweetened the pot with offers of special university programs, utilities packages and up to $3 million in job training funds from the Texas Department of Commerce.

The South Plains Area Residents Taxpayers Action Network opposed the generic economic development tax last year but endorsed Saturday's measure after Langston promised to lead a rollback petition drive if the Pentagon snubs the city.

"His promise is politically and morally binding," said Mikel Ward, chairwoman of the group, known as SPARTAN. "I've told him I'll have his clipboard ready."

By Tuesday, 7,644 early ballots had been cast, a city record.

A heavy turnout "will send a message to Washington that Lubbock and the entire West Texas region is unified," Langston said.

Lubbock would become one of the largest Texas cities with such a tax. But the state law allowing the additional tax was aimed at boosting the competitiveness of smaller communities that are seeking new business.

Jacksonville would reap an estimated $500,000 per year from the added ½-cent tax, which would then be managed by an appointed council. The East Texas town is surrounded by others that have an economic development tax.

"We're stressing the fact that the towns around us that we really compete with for bringing industries have this advantage," said Harold Tilley, economic development director at the local chamber of commerce. "They can offer the incentives we don't have the ability to."

Ranger, a town of 2,200 80 miles west of Fort Worth, passed a ½-cent tax last May and received its first revenue, about $2,000, last month. City Secretary Barbara Wheat said the additional funds should prevent Ranger from being left out of competitions for business or, as happened last year, new Texas prisons.

"We had no money to offer anything like some of the towns that got the prisons," Ms. Wheat said. "We thought we sure could use it for something."

Once again, an event featuring pairs makes history.

■ Dallas' Dave Wannstedt and San Francisco's Mike Shanahan could step into vacant head coaching jobs, but first they have a more important matter at hand.

By Dave Goldberg
AP Football Writer

SAN FRANCISCO — This is what coaching winners will get you:

If the Dallas Cowboys lose to the San Francisco 49ers Sunday, defensive coordinator Dave Wannstedt is likely to begin preparing for the head coaching job with the New York Giants.

Wannstedt

If the 49ers lose, their offensive coordinator, Mike Shanahan, likely will move back to Denver to coach the Broncos.

"I'm concentrating on this week's game," Wanndstedt said although spending an hour talking to a group of New York reporters.

"I'm concentrating on this week's game," Shanahan echoed.

Shanahan coached the NFL's No. 1 offense this season and Wannstedt coached the NFL's No. 1 defense, making this what's being called a "classic matchup."

It's more likely to be a gooey matchup.

Turf Talk: Dallas unconcerned

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — The Dallas Cowboys arrived late at the site of Sunday's National Conference Championship game because of rain and fog, but coach Jimmy Johnson said the team wasn't worried about game day weather.

"We might have to make some adjustments, but we've been watering down our fields and handling a wet football and we've handled it well," Johnson said.

The Cowboys are 4-point underdogs to the San Francisco 49ers for the game in soggy Candlestick Park, and Sunday's forecast called for a 90 percent chance of rain.

"The last time I played in the mud was for the Henryetta, Okla., Hens, and I don't remember how that one came out," said Cowboys quarterback Troy Aikman.

"I'm sure Sunday's game will be played in conditions unlike what we have experienced."

The Cowboys were expected to visit Candlestick Park briefly on Saturday. The field was being covered to keep Friday's rains from soaking new sod, installed this week by

Revisiting 'The Catch'

EDITOR'S NOTE — AP Sports Writer Denne H. Freeman was standing on the Dallas sidelines in Candlestick Park 11 years ago when Dwight Clark made "The Catch."

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

SAN FRANCISCO — The ball cleared the fingertips of Ed "Not Tall Enough" Jones by an inch and appeared to be on its way out of the end zone.

Then out of nowhere came the hands of Dwight Clark to grab the ball, much to the amazement of cornerback Everson Walls, who thought the pass was headed for the cheap seats.

Thus was born "The Catch," the most famous touchdown pass in NFL playoffs. Joe Montana to Dwight Clark. San Francisco 28-27.

My perspective from the sidelines was equal to the Cowboys team — stunned amazement. How did Montana get the ball away and how did Clark get enough spring in his tired legs ?

My memory of this moment also was how cool coach Tom Landry took the dagger in his back. He reminded his disbelieving team that there was time enough to rally.

And the Cowboys almost did. Almost forgotten is Danny White's pass to Drew Pearson who was on his way to a touchdown until he was tackled by his shirttail by Eric Wright, who had been beaten badly on the play.

Working for field goal position after that, White fumbled and the game was over.

The final gun triggered a maelstrom. Some 49ers fans charged onto the field tearing up chunks of turf and throwing the kitty litter which had been used to try to dry the field.

One member of the Cowboys official entourage, secretary Deana Patterson, was hit in the mouth with the stuff and still says, "I can tell you what kitty litter tastes like."

One intoxicated gentlemen ripped off my press pass, which had been tied to a belt loop, and staggered away.

A few fans, despite desperate attempts by an undermanned security crew, jostled several Cowboys players and one fan was decked onto the kitty litter.

The Cowboys fled for their dressing room and two people tried to urinate on them as they passed under a portal to safety.

MHS girls explode in 4th quarter

By Bill Price
Staff writer

Ignoring the fact that the Midland High girls were undefeated in the District 4-5A basketball race, Odessa High tried to prove that the Lady Bulldog machine was actually more Edsel than Cadillac Friday night at the MHS gymnasium.

And for three quarters, the Lady Bronchos put up sufficient fight to uncover an uncharacteristic knock in the MHS engine. But the Lady Bulldogs got an octane boost from junior Julie Chancellor in the final period as MHS scored 31 points in the quarter for a 57-42 victory.

The win earned MHS a perfect 6-0 mark in the first half of the 4-5A schedule, and made the Lady Bulldogs 19-5 overall. OHS fell to 2-4 and 16-8.

The Lady Bronchos tenaciously hung with MHS for the first three periods, which at times looked more like trench warfare than basketball. After trailing 20-17 at halftime, OHS finally took its first lead of the game at the 2:16 mark in the third, and led by as many as five points before the fourth quarter started with the score 29-26, Lady Broncs.

MHS center Lisa Koss brought that deficit to one point with a period-opening basket, then in a 19-second span, Chancellor sparked the Lady Bulldogs with a three-pointer and a

Lee beats Permian, moves to 5-0

By Terry Williamson

Midland Lee's life as King of the District 4-5A Basketball Hill is in the glow of a 5-0 league start, but staying on top isn't always easy.

Lee downed Odessa Permian by an 83-72, closer-than-it-looks margin at Chaparral Center Friday night to stay unbeaten in 4-5A play and increase its district lead to 1½ games over idle Abilene Cooper.

In what looked like a runaway train start, the Rebels held a 20-point, 49-29, lead with only one minute left in the first half against the team that has handed Lee one of its three losses in a 22-3 season. It looked like revenge was going to be easy.

However, Permian caught fire in the second half to narrow the margin to two points on three different occasions in the fourth period, the last coming with 6:20 left in the game on a basket by senior Reuben Loud. Lee looked ready to fold.

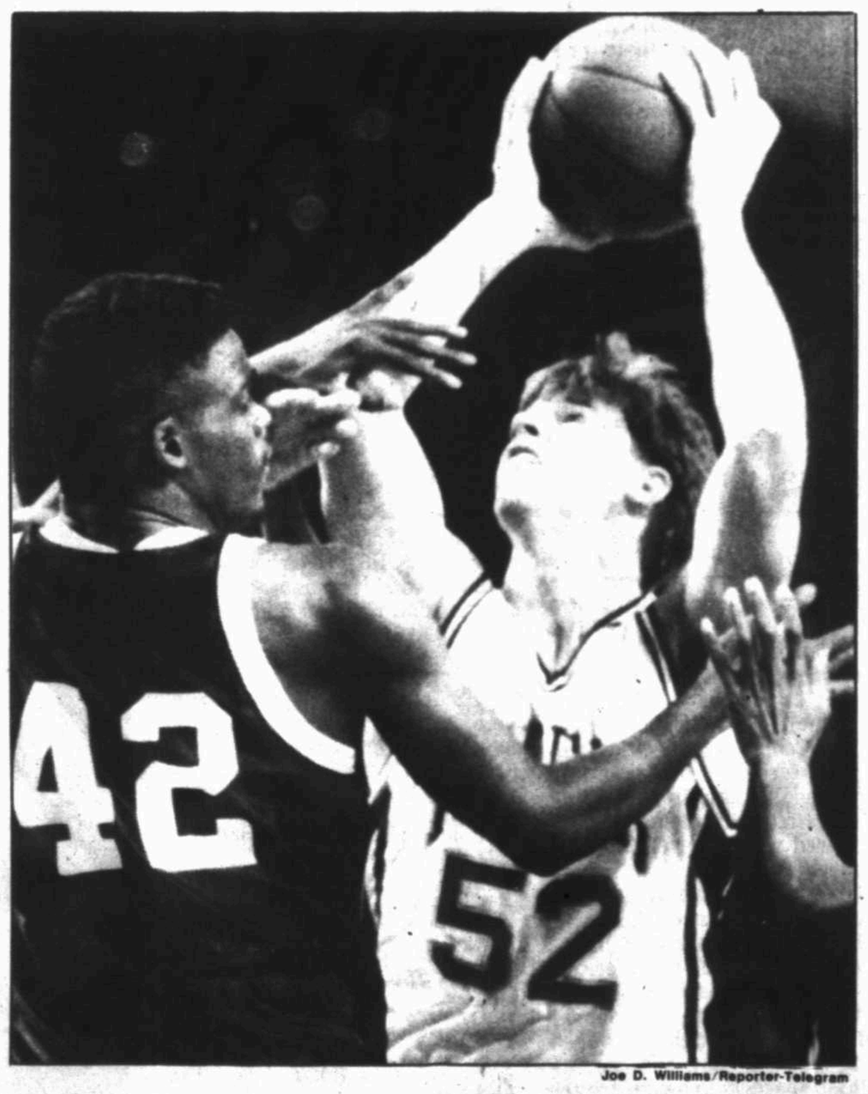

That was until Corodon Watson hit a three-pointer and followed that with a drive down the lane. David Wilson then hit another three-pointer and Lee was up by 10 again, 73-63, quicker than you can say unbeaten and revenge in the same sentence.

"I hit the three and that seemed to hype up the whole team again," said Watson, the junior who was playing with a bad tooth.

Lee coach Jon House said, "We just couldn't score there for a while. It seemed like we were stuck on 61 for an eternity. But our kids didn't panic and I'm glad to get this win. Permian has a good team with good athletes. They were running 14 against our eight guys and we may have gotten a little tired. It wasn't pretty, but it was a win."

Wilson led the Lee scoring attack with a game-high 26 points. Martin Lattibeau-

MHS: Chancellor sparks Lady Bulldog comeback

(From 1B)

15-foot jumper from the right side of the basket, giving MHS the lead for good at 33-32 with 6:25 left in the game.

After Koss hit a free throw, Chancellor stole the ball near half-court from OHS' Lori Valles and drove for another easy basket. Then senior point guard Charlotte Scharbauer hit a three-pointer and the MHS motor was purring like a kitten at 90 mph.

"We weren't playing well and I knew that somebody needed to step up. Something just clicked and we started playing the way we're capable of playing," said Chancellor, who scored 11 of her 15 points in the final quarter.

"I think Julie just said to herself 'we're not going to get beat,' and it ignited the other girls," said MHS head coach Jim Raughton.

Did it ever. MHS' press forced 11 of the Lady Bronchos' 20 turnovers in the last period, as Koss scored nine points in the quarter, with 12 of her 14 points coming in the second-half.

Sophomore Amy Alcala, the team's leading scorer with a 17.3-point average, again led the team with 18 points, including three easy layups off the press in the fourth.

"Amy, Julie and Lisa really came in and turned it on. Charlotte hit a big three-pointer and Jackie Perez (MHS' fifth starter who led the team in rebounds with six) did a great job defensively," Raughton said. "It was just a big momentum swing and Harry (OHS head coach Harry Masch) couldn't get it stopped."

"Chancellor got off a couple of good shots and and one thing led to another. Front ends of one-and-ones killed us (OHS was 16-of-33 from the free-throw line) and that amounts to a turnover when they get the rebound. But our girls gave a great effort," Masch said.

Sophomore post Donelle Jones led the Lady Bronchos with 14 points, while Amy Trent scored 12.

In junior varsity play, OHS took a 35-27 decision. Casi Madison led MHS with six points.

Both teams are back in action Tuesday, when the Lady Bulldogs visit San Angelo and OHS hosts Abilene High.

The time is now for AFC's Miami, Buffalo

After loss in Buffalo several years ago, Dolphins will host Bills this time

Associated Press

MIAMI — Here and now. If not, maybe never.

The Buffalo Bills and Miami Dolphins, teams on entirely different courses throughout most of their existences, meet Sunday in the AFC championship game. Both feel a sense of immediacy, as if a slight opening leading to another dimension — a Super dimension — has appeared. Seize it!

"For me, it's 'Let's get it done now,' " Dolphins receiver Mark Clayton said. The 10-year veteran played in the Super Bowl in his second season and in the AFC title game the next year.

Since then, all but one season ended before New Year's, and Miami hasn't gotten as close to the big game as it is this year.

"I would have been willing to bet there was no way for 7-8 years there'd be a hiatus from the championship game for us," Clayton said. "As I look up and down the room and the roster, there are not too many guys who've played in a championship game."

There are five — Clayton and fellow receiver Mark Duper, quarterback Dan Marino, punter Reggie Roby and offensive lineman Jeff Dallenbach.

"Two years ago, we could have been up there because we could have beaten the Bills," Clayton said.

But the Dolphins lost 44-34 in a second-round playoff game in the snow at Buffalo. Now, they have the Bills at Joe Robbie Stadium.

"The guys, especially the younger ones, know it's an opportunity," Clayton said. "This is what you play and work hard for all year. The goal you make for yourself is to get this chance."

Perhaps nobody feels the need to get to the Super Bowl and prove something more than the quarterbacks, Marino and Jim Kelly. Marino lost in his only Super Bowl appearance against San Francisco in the 1985 game. Kelly, who has recovered from a knee injury and will start for the first time since the season finale, was the losing quarterback in the last two NFL title games.

"Back then," Marino said of his other Super Bowl, "I think I took it for granted. We were a young team and I figured we'd be doing it again.

"All of a sudden, I look back and see how you have to take the opportunity when it is there. You never know when it will happen again."

Marino, the most durable quarterback in the league, is 31. This year, he was subjected to more physical abuse than ever — a career-high 28 sacks.

"I feel healthy," he said. "I might play into the 21st century."

Kelly, like Marino a member of the Class of '83 when six quarterbacks were selected in the first round of the draft, has one ugly piece of history staring him in the face. While QBs Fran Tarkenton and John Elway have lost three Super Bowls, neither did it in consecutive seasons. In fact, only one team has made three straight trips to the Super Bowl. Miami, which did it after the 1971, '72 and '73 seasons, won two championships.

"If you're a player 25 or 26, you can say, 'Maybe I'll have another chance again,' " Kelly said. "But I'll be 33 next month. Your chances certainly dwindle when you get up in age."

Your chances also dwindle when you lose your No. 1 quarterback at the end of the season and have to go the wild-card route. In addition, you have to stage a record comeback from a 32-point deficit in the first playoff game.

Perhaps all of these challenges are exactly what the Bills have needed.

"I can't believe I've been here four years and I might be in three Super Bowls," receiver Don Beebe said. "That's incredible because some guys play forever and don't even get to the game."

Miami's great this time of year

MIAMI (AP) — The Buffalo Bills and Miami Dolphins will play for the AFC championship Sunday under mostly sunny skies with 70-degree temperature and a tropical breeze, forecasters said.

"It should be ideal football weather," Bob Ebaugh of the National Weather Service said Friday.

The afternoon will be partly cloudy to mostly sunny, with the temperature in the mid 70s. A 15 mph wind is not expected to affect the passing game but may cool the crowd, Ebaugh said.

A squall front will pass through the area Saturday but should be gone by game time Sunday. A repeat of last Sunday's downpour during the Dolphins playoff game against the San Diego Chargers is unlikely, he said.

... but Candlestick's another story

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys and San Francisco 49ers likely will have to contend with rain and a slippery Candlestick Park turf on Sunday when they play for the NFC championship.

"Rain is likely Sunday, possibly heavy at times," said Duane Dykema of the National Weather Service. "It looks like more of what we've had all week."

He said forecasts put the likelihood of rain Sunday at 90 percent.

Dykema said subtropical moisture feeding into the state and upper level disturbances have combined to produce the rain.

MIAMI (AP) — Matchups for Sunday's AFC championship game between the Buffalo Bills and Miami Dolphins:

MIAMI OFFENSE vs. BUFFALO DEFENSE

The Dolphins went into an offensive funk for the last six weeks of the season. But they broke out of it in style in a 31-0 rout of San Diego last week.

Dan Marino (13) has been sacked 28 times, a career high, and the Bills came hard in Pittsburgh with seven sacks in a 24-3 victory last Saturday. The work of the line, especially tackle Richmond Webb (78) against DE Bruce Smith (78) and center Jeff Uhlenake (63) against nose tackle Jeff Wright (91), could determine the outcome.

Given time, Marino often will look over the middle for tight end Keith Jackson (88). The September signing of Jackson as a free agent gave Miami an added dimension — a strong pass-catcher over the middle to complement wide receivers Mark Clayton (83) and Mark Duper (85) and running backs Bobby Humphrey (44), who led the team with 54 catches, and Tony Paige (49). Jackson caught two TD passes against the Chargers, but he will be covered by All-Pro safety Henry Jones (20), who shut him down in their last meeting.

Warren Moon tore apart the Bills' alignment of six defensive backs in the first postseason game. Marino could do the same, although Clayton and Duper have slipped somewhat. Look for Nate Odomes (37) to handle Clayton man-for-man in a pivotal matchup.

Mark Higgs, Miami's top rusher with 915 yards, is out with a knee injury. That leaves Humphrey to handle much of the load. The Bills led the AFC in rushing defense with strong performances from Wright, DE Phil Hansen (90) and superb linebackers Cornelius Bennett (97) and Darryl Talley (56).

If Miami is to control the ball, look for it to be with flare and screen passes to the backs and quick throws to Jackson.

INTANGIBLES

Shula desperately wants another championship before Marino gets too old to lead him there. Miami wants to stop Buffalo from going to three straight Super Bowls, something only the Dolphins have done.

CATCH: Schramm says Dallas never recovered

(From 1B)

It was a wild scene, certainly a distant kin to a soccer riot.

Without identification to the locker room, a friendly face was needed. Joe Bailey, then the vice president of the team, gave me admission to a dressing room that closely resembled a funeral parlor.

Surprisingly, after a few minutes, the players wanted to talk about the meteorite that just fallen on them. They couldn't accept what happened. They were defeated by a Montana who had thrown three interceptions earlier in the game.

"I thought the ball was going to be way out of the end zone," Walls said recently. "I couldn't believe it when he went up and caught it. I've seen the film a number of times. The more I see it the more I believe it was meant to be."

"If only I had jumped just a second later I would have batted it down," said the 6-9 Too Tall Jones. "I probably could have hit it if I didn't jump."

"I thought I was gone for a touchdown then I get tackled by my shirt," Pearson said. "What would have happened if I had it tucked it tighter?"

"We could have kicked a field goal if I hadn't fumbled the ball," said White.

Woulda and coulda. That was all the Cowboys had left.

The Drive

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — "The Catch" was part of a 13-play, 89-yard drive that took four minutes, three seconds.

Here is the sequence of plays leading to Dwight Clark's memorable end zone catch that gave the San Francisco 49ers a 28-27 win over the Dallas Cowboys in the 1981 NFC championship game.

The 49ers were trailing 27-21 when they got the ball at their own 11-yard line with 4:54 left.

First and 10 from the 11: Joe Montana passes to Lenvil Elliott incomplete.

Second and 10 from the 11: Elliott runs up the middle for 6 yards.

Third and four from the 17: Montana completes sideline pass to Solomon for 6 yards.

First and 10 from the 23: Elliott gains 11 on a sweep around right end.

First and 10 from the 34: Elliott gains 7 on a sweep around left end.

Second and three from the 41: Montana passes to Elliott incomplete.

Third and three from the 41: Elliott runs up the middle for 4 but play is negated by Dallas offsides penalty.

First and 10 from the 46: Montana completes 5-yard pass to Earl Cooper. The two-minute warning is given.

Second and five from the Dallas 49: Freddie Solomon gains 14 on a reverse.

First and 10 from the 35: Montana completes a 10-yard pass to Clark.

First and 10 from the 25: Montana completes a 12-yard pass to Solomon. San Francisco calls timeout with 1:15 left.

First and 10 from the 13: Montana overthrows Solomon in the end zone.

Second and 10 from the 13: Elliott gains 7 on a sweep around left end.

Third and three from the 6: Montana rolls to his right, and under pressure, throws into the end zone for Clark, who makes a leaping grab.

Ray Wersching kicked the extra point from Montana's hold.

San Francisco 28, Dallas 27.

Landry mumbled some coach-speak about turnovers and big plays.

Equipment manager Buck Buchanan is the only person still with the team who was in attendance.

"It was a miserable, miserable day," he said. "We thought we had 'em stopped. To this day everybody believes Montana was throwing the ball away and it just fell down out of the sky into Clark's hands.

"It still makes your heart sink. My heart will sink again when we walk out on that field Sunday. Coach Landry? He took that defeat harder than any loss I ever saw him suffer. He took it hard. Real hard. "

Club President Tex Schramm, who built the Cowboys into the team that went to five Super Bowls, said the loss virtually marked the end of Dallas as a championship team.

"I agree with the critics that it kicked off the 49ers' era in the NFL and marked the decline of the Cowboys. We were a quarterback-oriented team and this game seemed to do something to Danny White that he never recovered from," Schramm said.

"We never recovered from what happened to us that day."

On the way out of the stadium parking lot, fans beat on the side of the bus.

It's a drumbeat the Cowboys who were there will never forget.

Twitty holds 2-shot lead

Associated Press

HONOLULU, Hawaii — Howard Twitty, continuing his attack on the par-5's, stayed two shots ahead of the field Friday in the second round of the Hawaiian Open.

"On this course, the par-5's are a big key," the 44-year-old veteran said after a 4-under-par 68 in brisk trade winds. "You look back in this tournament, and I think you'll find anyone who has played well has played well on the par-5's.

"You can play the par-4's and 3's here a long time without making a birdie. You just have to play the 5's very well."

Using domination of the long holes as his game plan, Twitty reached the halfway point of the tournament at 131, 13 under par for two trips over the Waialae Country Club course.

More than half that total came on the par-5's.

SOD: Cowboys reach '93 goal of NFC title game

George Toma's crew.

"The resodding is complete and the game will be played under the best possible conditions," said Reggie Roberts of the NFL office.

Johnson, Aikman, running back Emmitt Smith and linebacker Ken Norton appeared at a press conference before going back to their hotel for a team meeting. The Cowboys got into town about 45 minutes late.

Johnson was pressed about the Cowboys' playoff experience, which is only three games under his regime.

"There has been a lot of talk about playoff experience, but we've had a lot of big games and I feel we did well," Johnson said. "This is just another big game."

Norton said the defense feels it has something to prove.

"We had the top-ranked defense and didn't get anyone on the Pro Bowl," Norton said. "I don't think we resented it as much as we were insulted."

Smith said he wasn't going to make any special adjustment to run in the mud.

"I'm just going to run like I have for the last 17 weeks," he said.

Most other players also said they weren't worried about field conditions.

"Gale Sayers scored six touchdowns one time on a muddy field," cornerback Issiac Holt said. "You think Emmitt Smith can't do that?"

Added defensive tackle Tony Casillas, "It's stupid to think we go around worrying about the condition of a field. Our challenge is the 49ers, not Mother Nature. My challenge is playing against a 300-pound man on the offensive line."

COACHES: Wannstedt a career assistant

(From 1B)

groundskeeper extraordinaire, spent the break re-sodding Candlestick Park with Bermuda grass, it's still likely to be mushy Sunday, thwarting some of the best-laid plans Shanahan and Wannstedt can devise.

Still, both insist they won't do much differently than they did all season.

"You have to see what happens during the game," Shanahan said. "If it gets bad, at some point you may have to modify your game plan, but it depends on what the conditions do to you."

Both Shanahan and Wannstedt also have to be thinking ahead.

Both are 40, but their careers have been quite different.

Shanahan already has had one stint as a head coach — with the Los Angeles Raiders in 1988 and for the first four games of 1989. His record was 8-12 when he was dismissed by Al Davis, in part because he insisted on changing the old Raiders system.

He's also had two stints as the offensive coordinator of the Broncos, and was John Elway's favorite tutor. But he was dismissed by ex-coach Dan Reeves, in part because of his closeness to Elway.

This year, he took over the San Francisco job when Mike Holmgren became head coach of the Green Bay Packers, spent 12 to 14 hours a day for four months studying the Bill Walsh system, and adjusted his style to the system rather than vice versa.

He's benefitted at least in part from the MVP year enjoyed by Steve Young and by Young's similarity to Elway. With Philadelphia's Randall Cunningham, they are the most mobile quarterbacks in football.

Wannstedt, by contrast, has spent his career as a loyal assistant to Jimmy Johnson at Oklahoma State, Miami and now with the Cowboys.

Without any star until the trade that brought Charles Haley from the 49ers, Wannstedt managed to make more of the sum of average parts — not one Dallas defensive player made the Pro Bowl. Without any qualms, he started two rookies on defense, left cornerback Kevin Smith and middle linebacker Robert Jones.

His first shot at a head coaching job came last year when he was interviewed by Pittsburgh after owner Dan Rooney had all but guaranteed the job to Bill Cowher. But it helped this year. Rooney gave Wannstedt an enthuiastic recommendation to Giants' owner Wellington Mara.

So though Denver and Chicago also are interested, the Giants apparently have first crack at him and are ready to take it.

With one negative.

The winner Sunday — Shanahan or Wannstedt — will go to the Super Bowl.

The loser would normally go with the rest of the coaching job to Hawaii to coach the NFC team in the Pro Bowl. The chances are, he'll head instead for a colder climate.

Coaching great Hank Iba dead

Associated Press

Hank Iba

STILLWATER, Okla. — Hank Iba began playing basketball on dirt courts in rural Missouri, wearing uniforms sewn by his mother. He became one of the great coaches in history, a man whose influence is still felt amid the glitz of today's multi-million dollar game.

Iba died of heart failure early Friday. He was 88. He had been hospitalized since Wednesday.

"Of all the shadows that cast over the game of basketball, his was the biggest," Indiana coach Bob Knight said in a statement.

Knight was one of the many coaches Iba influenced with his preachings of sound defense and a patient, ball-control offense. Iba won 767 games in 41 years, second most in history, and led Oklahoma State — then called Oklahoma A&M — to national championships in 1945 and '46.

Iba coached the U.S. Olympic team three times. His teams won gold medals in 1964 and '68, then lost to the Soviet Union in 1972 in one of the most controversial games ever.

It was ironic that Iba, one of the game's great winners, came to be so closely tied to a loss. The United States appeared to have won the game in regulation. But the clock was reset twice, giving the Soviets three chances to score the game-winning basket.

"We won the game, no question about it," Iba said in an interview with The Associated Press in February 1990. "That thing was over."

The loss was so bitter, no members of the U.S. team accepted their silver medals.

Knight was especially close to Iba. In 1984, when he coached the Olympic team, Knight asked Iba to serve as a special assistant coach and speak to the team each day at practice. After winning the gold medal, the players honored Iba by carrying him on their shoulders around the court.

"There weren't many of us who knew what was going on that didn't have tears in our eyes," said Bill Wall, former executive director of USA Basketball, the sport's national governing body. "Maybe some of those kids didn't know who he was, but each of them had just spent a month with him."

The coaching ranks are filled with Iba disciples, including current Oklahoma State coach Eddie Sutton.

"He began his career with coaches like Phog Allen and Adolph Rupp and finished with Dean Smith and Bobby Knight and all the people recognized what he had given to the game," Sutton said. "They all admired the class that he brought to the game."

Iba was born Aug. 6, 1904, in Easton, Mo. He began his coaching career in 1927 at Classen High School in Oklahoma City. After two seasons there, he went to Maryville Teachers College in Missouri.

He spent four seasons at Maryville and one year at the University of Colorado before taking over at Oklahoma A&M, where he coached 36 years and won 655 games.

"When you compare him to a modern coach today who finds talent that already exists; the difference is Mr. Iba was a true coach, a teacher, a mentor, who taught the fundamentals of the game," said Bob Kurland, who helped lead Oklahoma A&M to its consecutive NCAA titles.

"Mr. Iba was not a great recruiter," Kurland said. "He felt he was a teacher. If people wanted to play the game of basketball, they would come to him. And they did."

Those sentiments were shared by Jack Hartman, who played for Iba and went on to win 436 games at Kansas State.

"I realize it takes talent to coach skilled kids," he said. "But Mr. Iba could take a lot of Oklahoma country boys and take them as far as they could possibly go, and make them compete with the very best."

Iba did it through hard work. If he didn't like what he saw during an afternoon practice session, he was likely to bring his players back that night to work more.

"I remember three practices on Christmas Day," Hartman said.

Hank Iba's son, Moe, coaches at Texas Christian, and his nephew, Gene, coached at Baylor until last season.

Lemieux speaks publicly about illness

By Filip Bondy
N.Y. Times News Service

PITTSBURGH — The notion really took hold of him Monday during his 20-minute drive home to suburban Sewickley, Pa.

Mario Lemieux, the quiet giant of ice hockey, had just listened to the diagnosis from Dr. Steven Jones at Allegheny General Hospital. Lemieux could not be certain he was bigger, or stronger, than Hodgkin's disease.

"I could hardly drive because of the tears," Lemieux said Friday, speaking publicly for the first time about his illness and plans for treatment. "The first day was a tough day for myself and the team. It's scary every time you hear 'cancer.' "

The Penguins' 27-year-old center was more upbeat by Friday, after consulting all week with family and friends, and one friend of a friend who has survived the disease. That is Lemieux's way.

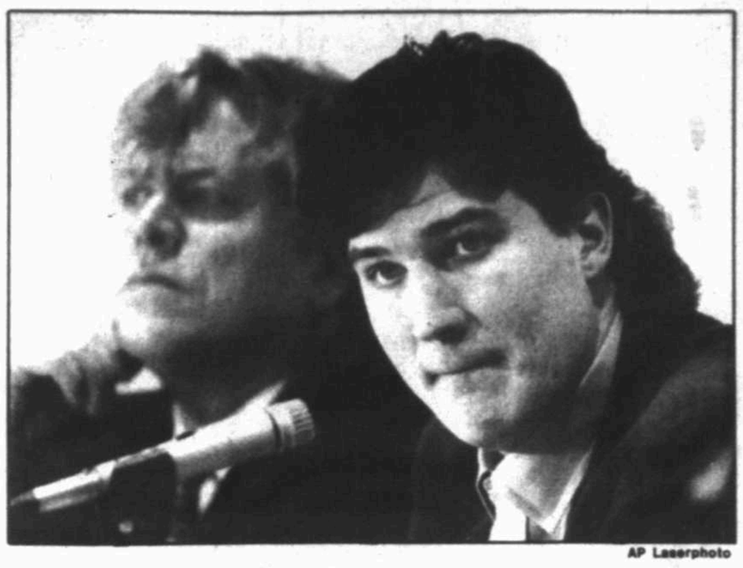

His small circle of associates had to repeat to him what doctors had tried to convey: When Hodgkin's disease is detected in its earliest stage, as it was in his case, patients have a 90 to 95 percent chance of being cured.

Lemieux spoke at the news conference about the odds being in his favor. He has been through a lot already: a severely sprained knee in 1987; a bad back and an infection from surgery to the back in 1990, and a broken hand last spring from a slash delivered by Adam Graves of the Rangers.

"I had a chance with the back infection to change my perspective," Lemieux said. "This reinforces it. The most important thing is your health. Everything else is secondary."

Lemieux said his wedding plans with Nathalie Asselin of Montreal, who is expecting their child in April, are still on for June. The hockey season can wait, however long it takes.

"The time frame is not important to any of us here," Lemieux said. "I'll be back when I'm 100 percent cured. In six weeks, eight weeks, next year. That's not important.

AP Laserphoto

Hockey great Mario Lemieux, right, and Pittsburgh Penguin owner Howard Baldwin, listen to doctors during a Friday press conference.

"I'm a positive person, and that's not going to change. Sometimes in life, you have to go through tough periods. I haven't been that fortunate. But you climb the mountain. We know this disease is curable."

There have already been unforeseen developments and a delay. Lemieux has a lower-respiratory infection, unrelated to Hodgkin's disease. He was thought to have been possibly exposed to chicken pox from a teammate, goaltender Tom Barrasso. But Barrasso was misdiagnosed and doesn't have chicken pox.

Doctors had to postpone the scheduled start of radiation treatment for about two weeks, while Lemieux receives antibiotics. If all goes well, his return date to the Penguins is now projected for six to eight weeks from now.

Lemieux mapped out, painfully, how he first discovered a small lump in his neck more than a year ago, then monitored the growth of the swollen lymph node until he sought professional advice two weeks ago. A battery of scans and blood work indicate that Lemieux caught the cancer of the immune system in time, before it spread outside the lymph node.

The lump, about 1 centimeter by 2 centimeters, was excised last week and proved to be cancerous. When he was told, a dozen thoughts went through his mind. Lemieux lost two uncles to cancer, and said he remembered how, about 15 years ago, a cousin died of Hodgkin's disease.

The sister-in-law of his agent, Tom Reich, had died of cancer. Lemieux has been honorary chairman of the Pittsburgh Cancer Institute for the last five years, and had seen too many people suffer in his visits to the hospital.

"I'm not the type who enjoys doing it," Lemieux said, of his admittedly infrequent visits. "You have to toughen yourself to visit a patient. Now, a couple years later, I'm faced with the same thing. I think back on it."

Penguin officials, players and coaches remained in a sympathetic limbo. Scotty Bowman, looking for a spark from his team, held an optional practice Friday and talked about finding a new offensive leader to replace a center who has scored 39 goals in 40 games. Lemieux leads the league by a large margin in scoring with 104 points.

The Penguins lost Thursday night in Boston, 7-0, a telling result that Lemieux might have predicted from his one visit to the Penguins' clubhouse on Wednesday.

"I walked in the room and everybody was silent," Lemieux said. "That's not our team. Kevin Stevens talks all the time and Ulfy Samuelsson yaps."

Lemieux does not yap. He is not a typical patient, as Dr. Theodore Crandall, the staff oncologist at Allegheny General and in charge of the case, is learning. He is less likely to ask doctors about his condition than he is to seek advice from his father, Jean-Guy, or brother, Alain, who are both in Pittsburgh with him.

"He has not shared a lot of reaction in regard to the diagnosis," Crandall said. "He's a very private man. He has other people. And he can get by with a lot of inner strength."

Still, Crandall said Lemieux might do well, psychologically, to open up a little to physicians, and to patients who have suffered the disease.

"This is not about hockey," said Howard Baldwin, the Penguins' president and owner. "This is about a precious human being who is going to recover."

Buddy a Pat?

BOSTON (AP) — Former Philadelphia Eagles coach Buddy Ryan interviewed for the head coaching vacancy with the struggling New England Patriots on Friday, ESPN reported.

ESPN said Friday evening that Ryan had interviewed for the job, but gave few other details.

Patriots officials did not immediately return telephone calls. Ryan's home telephone number in Kentucky is unlisted.

"BE WARNED:
It's not for the prudish or faint-hearted. A sizzler."

Blackman returns to Reunion; Mavs lose 14th straight

Orlando Magic wins first game ever at Boston Garden behind Scott Skiles, Shaquille O'Neal

DALLAS — Rolando Blackman scored 18 points in his first Reunion Arena appearance against his former team Friday night, leading the New York Knicks to a 107-93 victory over Dallas, the Mavericks' 14th consecutive defeat.

John Starks also had 18 points for the Knicks, who dropped six of their previous 10 games to see their Atlantic Division lead trimmed to 1½ games.

Blackman, the Mavericks' leading career scorer after 11 years in Dallas, was traded to New York last June 24 for a first-round pick in the 1995 draft.

The physical game included a total of 67 fouls, and the teams combined for 101 free throws.

Derek Harper led Dallas, now 2-29 overall, with 28 points in front a crowd of 14,445, the Mavericks' largest of the season.

Dallas' losing streak is one short of the club record set in the 1980-81 season, the Mavericks' first in the NBA.

Magic 113, Celtics 94

BOSTON — Scott Skiles had 23 points and 15 assists as the Orlando Magic won their first game ever at Boston Garden and snapped the Celtics' seven-game winning streak.

Shaquille O'Neal added 22 points and 12 rebounds, and Anthony Bowie scored 23 points for Orlando, which lost five of its previous six games but led by at least eight points the entire second half.

The Celtics were led by Robert Parish with 19 points and Reggie Lewis and Kevin McHale with 15 each.

■ NBA Roundup

Orlando trailed just once, 10-8, and led 51-37 before settling for a 51-41 halftime lead. With the score 62-54, Skiles' short jumper with 7:10 left in the third quarter gave the Magic a double-digit lead they never lost.

Timberwolves 99, Nuggets 89

MINNEAPOLIS — Chuck Person snapped out of a 12-game slump with 19 points as the Minnesota Timberwolves snapped a five-game losing streak with a victory over Denver, the Nuggets' 12th consecutive road loss.

Doug West and Micheal Williams added 17 points each for Minnesota, which won for the first time in two tries since interim coach Sidney Lowe replaced Jimmy Rodgers, who was fired on Sunday. The Timberwolves lost 17 of their previous 19 games, beating Dallas, the NBA's worst team, twice in that span.

Chris Jackson scored 20 points for Denver, which fell to 1-17 on the road. The Nuggets shot 39.7 percent; the same percentage San Antonio shot in Lowe's debut.

Cavaliers 132, Pacers 120

INDIANAPOLIS — Craig Ehlo scored 16 of his 22 points in the third quarter, rallying Cleveland from a 17-point deficit, as the Cavaliers beat the Indiana Pacers.

The win maintained the Cavs' mastery over the Pacers, giving them their seventh victory in as many meetings over the past two seasons. Cleveland swept all five games last year. The Cavs snapped a two-game losing streak.

Brad Daugherty led Cleveland with 25 points, including 18 in the first half, and 10 rebounds. Larry Nance added 24 points, while Mark Price had 23. John Battle scored 17 off the bench.

Bulls 122, Warriors 101

CHICAGO — Michael Jordan scored six of his 26 points during a 12-2 spurt at the start of the fourth quarter that lifted the Chicago Bulls to a rout of the Golden State Warriors.

The Bulls, who led by 25 points in the third period, only took a 91-81 advantage into the fourth quarter before Jordan keyed the run that gave them a 103-83 lead.

From that point, the Bulls had the game under control, as the Warriors, who rallied twice from big deficits, couldn't muster another spurt.

Scottie Pippen, who scored 19 points, gave Chicago its largest lead, 82-57, with 7:53 left in the third quarter.

But the Warriors fought back behind Chris Mullin, who had 12 of his 21 points in the period. They closed to 88-79 with 1:05 left in the quarter.

Nets 110, 76ers 105, OT

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Kenny Anderson and Drazen Petrovic keyed a late rally in regulation, then led a 10-2 start in overtime that carried the New Jersey Nets over the Philadelphia 76ers.

Anderson, who finished with 21 points, and Petrovic, who scored 19, each had three baskets in the final 2:22 of regulation and then combined for six points as the Nets started the overtime with the 10-2 spurt. The victory was New Jersey's fourth straight at home.

The loss was the second in six games for the Sixers, who were led by Hersey Hawkins with 35 points.

Petrovic scored the first basket in overtime after taking a pass from Anderson. Then Sam Bowie scored after a steal and ally-oop pass from Petrovic, and Anderson hit a jumper for a 103-97 lead.

Suns 107, Heat 99

PHOENIX — Charles Barkley reached the 15,000-point plateau with 31 points Friday night as the Phoenix Suns opened a 20-point lead in the first quarter and hung on for a 107-99 victory over Miami.

Dan Majerle scored 19 points and Richard Dumas 18 for the Suns, who pushed their NBA-best record to 25-6.

SuperSonics 123, Clippers 104

SEATTLE — The Seattle SuperSonics, with Ricky Pierce's 20 points leading a well-balanced attack Friday night, beat the Los Angeles Clippers for the 18th consecutive time at home, 123-104.

The Sonics broke open a close game with a 20-4 run in the third quarter and improved their home record this season to 17-1, best in the NBA. They're 14-0 at the Seattle Coliseum and they have the league's second-best record at 24-9.

Lakers 99, Trail Blazers 96

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Elden Campbell scored all six of his points in the first three minutes of the final quarter as the Los Angeles Lakers outscored the Portland Trail Blazers 10-0.

The victory was the third for the Lakers in as many meetings with the Trail Blazers this season. It also ran the Lakers' record against the two NBA finalists from last year, Portland and the Chicago Bulls, to 5-0.

Holyfield decides it's time to un-retire

Associated Press

MOBILE, Ala. — Rap star Hammer said Friday he's going to help former heavyweight champion Evander Holyfield regain the crown that he lost to Riddick Bowe last year.

"We're bringing him back," said Hammer, who has founded a sports management agency. "He's too legit to quit."

It marks the third time Holyfield has changed his mind about his boxing future since losing a unanimous decision to Bowe in a stirring 12-round fight on Nov. 13.

Holyfield said immediately after the fight he was retiring, then said he might return for a rematch if guaranteed $15 million, then said last month that he was definitely retiring because "if I came back, I wouldn't be doing it for myself."

"I really felt at that time that I didn't want to come back," Holyfield said Friday. "Now that I'm well-rested and I've seen tapes of the fight, realized that I made some mistakes, I know I can come back and possibly beat Bowe."

Bowe, in the meantime, has given up one-third of the heavyweight crown, forfeiting his World Boxing Council belt to Lennox Lewis.

"We want what's best for him," Hammer said of Holyfield. "What's best for him is to regain the heavyweight crown."

Holyfield, 30, said he intends to resume training next month. His first priority is a rematch with Bowe, but he would not rule out a fight against Lewis.

Clinton has ties, scrapes with big denominations

By George W. Cornell
Associated Press Writer

President-elect Clinton has both ties and rifts with the leadership of the country's two biggest religious bodies, Roman Catholicism, and his own denomination, the Southern Baptist Convention.

But its premier preacher, Billy Graham, will be at Clinton's side for his inauguration.

This spicy religious amalgam is part of the sometimes unusual ingredients that can mark the president's "bully pulpit," and that also can blur denominational images.

Although Clinton is an actively participating Southern Baptist, his dedication praised by his pastors, he's also the first graduate of a Roman Catholic university, Georgetown, to win the presidency.

There were some indications of prickly relationships with officialdom both of Catholicism and his own denomination, though Clinton has close friends in both.

Both Southern Baptist and Catholic leaders have assailed abortion and homosexual rights, which he supports. Adding to the mix, Southern Baptists officials now are pressing him to cut off diplomatic relations with the Vatican.

It's fuzzy, diffuse territory.

The Rev. Ed Young of Houston, president of Southern Baptists, said their attitudes toward Clinton would fluctuate — supporting him "in every way possible," but "as Baptist people we would disagree on many moral issues."

Ironically, retiring President Bush, an Episcopalian who sometimes differed with his denomination's leadership, got on smoothly with present Southern Baptist stances against abortion and for school vouchers and prayers.

Clinton differs on those issues. Both he and former President Carter, also a Southern Baptist, have indicated alliance with Southern Baptist moderates, ousted from denominational offices by the present regime.

Graham, who has shunned denominational politics that put biblical fundamentalists in control of that 15.5 million-member body, has been close to a long line of U.S. presidents, and is a personal friend of Clinton's.

Saying he was "both honored and humbled" to be asked to lead both the invocation and benediction at Clinton's inauguration, Graham said in a statement:

"I intend to do all in my power to help Mr. Clinton once he is president. He and his wife, Hillary, will make a unique team to help lead America and the Western world at this period in history."

Graham has participated in inaugurations on six other occasions in the past four decades, involving both Democratic and Republican presidents.

His friendship with Clinton goes back about 12 years, including "in depth" religious talks. Last year in Little Rock, he and Clinton spent two hours visiting with Clinton's former pastor who was dying of cancer.

Clinton will be the fourth Baptist to occupy the White House, following Warren Harding, Harry Truman and Carter.

Clinton "is a disciple of Jesus Christ and sees the political profession as a way to fulfill his strong calling from God to help people," says the Rev. Wayne Ward, a Louisville, Ky., seminary professor and longtime associate of Clinton's and his former pastor.

Change and Stability, Balance and Rebalance

It isn't easy to live in a rapidly changing society and still feel stable. Our Unitarian Universalist churches know that. So we offer Sunday services and weekly programs that focus on resolving today's conflicts with today's resources. We appreciate tradition. But we live in the present.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

SATURDAY, JANUARY 16, 1993

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Financial considerations will affect your romantic decisions. Be wary of anyone who promises you the moon. In June, you will be on the brink of a business expansion. A raise or promotion should follow by midsummer. Travel or improved relations with an in-law will make early fall an especially happy time. Include as many family members as possible when entertaining. Preventive health measures pay off handsomely next December when colds abound.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: pitcher Dizzy Dean, actress Debbie Allen, auto racer A.J. Foyt, singer Eartha Kitt.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The weekend may get off to a bumpy start if certain plans are changed. Be flexible and follow your hunches. Although romance may elude you at times, friendship will not.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Early morning trends are encouraging for travel or welcoming a visitor. Financial concerns that develop later on may cast a pall over certain plans. Investigate other options.

GEMTNI (May 21-June 20): A wonderful day for companionship and love. Your energy level will rise as the hours roll on. Enjoy life to the fullest! Good news arrives via a letter or phone call.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A surprising agreement may be reached behind closed doors today. The wonderful vibes between you and someone special are worth celebrating over. Love clicks like clockwork.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Close relationships require both restraint and increased communication. Attending a social get-together tonight makes you feel better about things. Loved ones reveal exactly what they are thinking.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Festivities and romance combine to get your motor running again. Do more socializing. Tonight may not be the right time to reveal a secret.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Someone may try to deceive you now. Stick to your traditional values and you will not be steered wrong. Your intuitive reactions are unerring. Shoot down pie-in-the-sky proposals.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Making an appearance at a big event will pay special dividends. Financial affairs are not as stable as you would like. Tonight could be electrifying where romance is concerned. Go slow.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your dreams could come true today. A special person or event makes it happen. You are good at managing money and can safely act on your hunches. Take the lead in romance.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Give some thought to how you are being treated. If you do not feel that you are getting a fair shake, speak up. A dressed-up you attracts new romantic attentions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Fighting fire with fire could leave a relationship in ashes today. Although your financial judgment is excellent, you need to polish your skills as a negotiator.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Heed your instincts. The decisions you make of your own volition will turn out fine. Avoid protracted negotiations and tense domestic situations. Do not let your social life become a three-ring circus.

Wonder, Parks participate in Arizona's MLK celebration

PHOENIX — Arizona celebrated its new Martin Luther King Jr. holiday on Friday, and Stevie Wonder and civil rights pioneer Rosa Parks were on hand to help out.

Wonder

Wonder and other celebrities boycotted the state for several years for previously rejecting a day commemorating the slain civil rights leader, whose birthay was Jan. 15. The federal holiday is observed Monday.

Arizona voters approved a state holiday in November and thousands turned out Friday for a breakfast highlighted by a performance by Wonder.

Ms. Parks, 79, helped spark the civil rights movement when she refused to move to the back of a segregated bus.

Last week, New Hampshire became the last state to honor King with an executive order changing the name of Civil Rights Day to Martin Luther King Civil Rights Day. A bill to permanently change the name is pending before the legislature.

NEW HAVEN, Conn. Woody Allen and his ex-lover Mia Farrow met for nearly two hours with an expert on sexual abuse.

Thursday's meeting with Dr. John Levanthal, director of the sexual-abuse clinic at Yale-New Haven Hospital, followed allegations by Farrow that the filmmaker sexually molested their adopted daughter, 7-year-old Dylan.

"We're doing our best to try and resolve things. That is all I can say," Allen said after the meeting.

Farrow refused comment.

The couple are battling for custody of Dylan, Satchel, 5, and 14-year-old Moses.

On Tuesday, during a hearing on Allen's visitation rights, Farrow raised new allegations of child abuse, claiming Allen had sex with Farrow's college-age adopted daughter, Soon-Yi Previn, in front of Dylan and Satchel.

Allen said Farrow was making up the allegations.

RENO, Nev. — James and Jennifer Stolpa are still hospitalized recovering from frostbite after being stranded in a snowstorm for eight days.

Their 5-month-old son, Clayton, who also survived the storm, is staying with them but is not receiving treatment.

Stopla, 21, and Mrs. Stolpa, 20, were in satisfactory condition Thursday.

The family has received more than 1,000 cards and letters from well-wishers, including actor Burt Reynolds. Boxer George Foreman visited the hospital last weekend.

Kevin Mulligan, Stolpa's stepfather, said the couple have their ups and downs.

"They'll receive a package that will make them feel real good. But then they'll wonder what the future will hold," he said.

The couple's truck became stranded in a snow drift on Dec. 29 while driving from Castro Valley, Calif., to a funeral in Pocatello, Idaho.

On Jan. 6, Stolpa trudged nearly 60 miles for help while Mrs. Stolpa and the baby huddled beneath a ledge.

PARIS — Rudolf Nureyev learned he had the AIDS virus in 1984 but was terrified that public knowledge of his condition would ruin his career, his doctor says in an interview recounting the dancer's long battle with AIDS.

The interview, published Friday by the newspaper Le Figaro, marked the first official confirmation by Dr. Michel Canesi that Nureyev's death Jan. 6 resulted from AIDS.

"If I now make this clarification, it's because this is not a disease to be ashamed of," Canesi told Le Figaro. "Rudolf lived 13 or 14 years with the virus thanks to his strength and combativeness. People must know that. He was too famous to hide the truth."

Canesi, a 40-year-old dermatologist who had treated Nureyev since 1983, made the official announcement of the ballet dancer's death last week at the age of 54.

Canesi told Le Figaro that Nureyev was terrified of the possibility that his condition would become public.

"He knew that certain countries, notably the United States, barred entry to people who were seropositive," he said.

"He softened as his condition worsened," Canesi said. "With his wool cap on his head, he reminded me of Petrouchka, a disjointed clown, broken and unhappy."

Canesi recalled Nureyev's appearance at the Paris Ballet on Oct. 8, gaunt and weak, when he received a tumultuous ovation after the premiere of his choreography of "La Bayedere."

"His final challenge was to show the world, on that evening, that despite this illness, one can still create, and be happy."

BREMEN, Ind. — Former U.S. Health and Human Services Secretary and Indiana Gov. Otis R. Bowen plans to remarry next month.

Carol Mikesell, 50, a bank employee, said Friday that she and Bowen, 74, are getting married, but she would not disclose the wedding date.

Bowen was governor from 1973 to 1980 before being named to President Reagan's cabinet.

Museum displays new fragments of scrolls

JERUSALEM (AP) — A new fragment of the Dead Sea scrolls has been put on display after researchers deciphered an unexpected mention of an Israelite king, officials said Tuesday.

Few historic figures are named at all in the ancient documents found in the Qumran caves by the Dead Sea in 1947, said Magen Broshi, curator of the Israel Museum.

But a Jewish king from the 2nd century B.C. known as King Jonathan, or Alexander Janneus in Latin, is mentioned three times in a scroll that contains a prayer for his well-being, Broshi said.

He noted the find could challenge the beliefs of historians who say that kings of the Hasmonean dynasty, such as Jonathan, persecuted the Essenes.

"This could start some controversy in the world of scholarship since this isn't something we exactly expected to find in Qumran," Broshi said.

The Essenes, a cult with an austere lifestyle founded in 2nd century B.C., lived in Qumran and are believed to have composed the Dead Sea scrolls, which contain mostly prayers and biblical portions.

Broshi said the prayer to King Jonathan was deciphered by Ada Yardeni, an Israeli expert in ancient script writing, and that her findings were published last spring in Tarbiz, a Hebrew magazine on Judaica.

The scroll was put on display at the Israel Museum in Jerusalem on Jan. 7.

Also found on the same parchment is a rare Hebrew version of what scholars believed was a lost apocryphal psalm, Broshi said. He quoted it as saying, "the eyes of the lord have mercy on the good ones."

About 150 psalms are included in the Bible. The apocryphal psalms, which date to the time of Christ, are those that were never included in the holy book.

The World in brief

■ 125 countries sign weapons treaty

PARIS — A historic disarmament ceremony ended Friday with the last of 125 countries signing a treaty banning chemical weapons. But the absence of most Arab states and North Korea left big holes in the pact.

The Convention on the Prohibition of Chemical Arms commits the United States and Russia to destroying their chemical arsenals and will prevent most of the world from acquiring them.

America and Russia were among the first to sign. But the world's only other declared chemical weapons power, Iraq, stayed away from the ceremonies.

About 20 nations in all are thought to have chemical weapons.

■ Somalia operation to cost $560 million

WASHINGTON — President Bush informed Congress Friday that the United States humanitarian mission in Somalia will cost $560 million in the first three months alone.

That sum covers the cost of 28,600 troops in Somalia for 90 days. As of Tuesday, the buildup of U.S. forces in the African country had reached 23,900.

The president told Congress the money will come from current appropriations to the Department of Defense and do not cover any costs associated with providing support to other nations taking part in the operation.

■ Police arrest Mafia kingpin, top fugitive

ROME — The Italian mafia's "capo dei capi," who ruthlessly directed the mob's criminal empire during 23 years in hiding, was taken meekly into custody Friday after police blocked his car on a Palermo thoroughfare.

The arrest of Salvatore Riina, Italy's No. 1 fugitive, was the government's biggest coup in years in its checkered war against the mob. The country braced for a counterattack by Cosa Nostra.

Riina is accused of orchestrating the mob's drug trafficking and extortion operations and ordering more than 50 murders, including last year's bombings of the top Mafia investigators, Giovanni Falcone and Paolo Borsellino.

Several Mafia defectors have said the stocky 62-year-old Riina — also nicknamed "u curto," Sicilian for "the short one" — is the head of the Corleone crime family, considered Sicily's most powerful Mafia clan.

■ Russia begins privatizing businesses

MOSCOW — About 500 government enterprises will be privatized next month, but Deputy Prime Minister Vladimir Shumeiko admitted Friday that privatization in Russia is going slowly.

Its success is considered crucial to the reform policies and popularity of President Boris Yeltsin.

Russians are having trouble grasping the concept of privatization, Shumeiko told a news conference.

"For the people in the street it is a hard deal because they cannot get accustomed to it quickly enough," said Shumeiko, a reformer who joined the Cabinet under ousted acting Prime Minister Yegor Gaidar.

The Russian government began distributing vouchers worth 10,000 rubles ($22.62 at the current exchange rate) to every citizen last October. Russians will be able to use them to buy shares in companies being privatized.

Russian economic officials and Western advisers announced Thursday that 14 regions will begin widescale privatization of medium and large businesses next month.

Somali warlords agree to stop fighting

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — Scattered small arms fire crackled in Mogadishu Friday night after leaders of 14 Somali factions agreed to stop fighting and turn over heavy weapons to the U.S.-led multinational force.

It was not clear how quickly the warlords could advise their forces of the agreement, reached during talks in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, since Somali telecommunications have been knocked out by civil war and looting. U.S. military officials said they had not yet been advised about the agreement.

Meanwhile, the International Committee of the Red Cross announced at its headquarters in Geneva that it was temporarily shutting down operations in Somalia because of the slaying of one of its staff members. Kurt Lustenburger, 32, a Red Cross administrator from Lucerne, was killed Thursday in Bardera.

Clan violence continued Friday in Mogadishu, where members of one clan captured a rival clan member, tied his hands behind his back and shot him in the head. A Somali crowd kept journalists from approaching the site and refused to identify the two clans.

A Red Cross spokesman, Tony Burgener, said Friday in Geneva that its staff members in Somalia had been told to remain inside their stations over the weekend while the agency tried to decide whether it could continue relief efforts under current security conditions.

He said the three Red Cross staffers who witnessed Lustenburger's slaying were being evacuated to Nairobi, Kenya, and would have to be replaced if operations reopened in Bardera.

A Red Cross spokeswoman in Nairobi, Catherine Cazeaux, said Lustenburger was shot when three bandits entered his quarters and demanded money. Before he could comply, she said, the bandits shot him in the forehead in front of the three other aid workers.

United Nations spokesman Farouk Mawlawi in Mogadishu said the death resulted from an accidental shooting during a wage dispute. He said a Somali drew a gun, fired at the floor and the bullet bounced up and hit the aid official. Marine spokesmen in Mogadishu gave a similar account.

Fifteen local and foreign staffers of the Red Cross were killed in Somalia last year, Red Cross officials said.

A gunman killed an Irish relief worker in the southern port of Kismayu on Jan. 2. An American civilian working for the Army and one U.S. Marine have been killed since U.S. forces arrived Dec. 9.

Marine Col. Michael W. Hagee told reporters Somalia was still a dangerous place but that the international force had come a long way in restoring order.

Earthquake shakes rural Japan; 193 hurt

TOKYO (AP) — The strongest earthquake to hit Japan in a decade shook sparsely populated northern regions of this island nation Friday, injuring at least 193 people, tearing up roads and toppling power lines.

At least nine small fires broke out and seven buildings were badly damaged on the mountainous island of Hokkaido, police said. There also were reports of a landslide and damage to three bridges and seven sections of road.

Police said there were no reports of deaths from the quake, which the Central Meteorogical Agency measured 7.5 on the Richter scale.

No damage or injuries were reported at a low-level radioactive waste storage center in Rokkasho near Aomori, 340 miles north of Tokyo, police said.

Television news showed sections of torn-up roads, damaged buildings, fallen telephone poles, and shattered store windows throughout Hokkaido. Some temporary power failures and train delays were also reported.

The quake struck at 8:06 p.m. and was centered about 75 miles below sea level about 12½ miles off the coast from the port of Kushiro, on Hokkaido.

Kushiro has a population of 17,000, and is on the Pacific coast about 530 miles northeast of Tokyo.

"It was the strongest earthquake I've ever felt," an unidentified man in his 70s said in a televised interview from Kushiro. "I could hardly walk. It must have lasted a whole minute."

The National Police said most of the injured were on Hokkaido. They were hurt, some seriously, mostly by falling walls, roof tiles, signboards, furniture and broken glass.

Transport officials said most trains in Hokkaido and several prefectures in the northern part of the main island of Honshu were stopped to check for damage. Almost all resumed normal operation within two hours after the quake, they said.

The Japan Broadcasting System NHK showed footage of its bureau in Kushiro with television sets, book shelves and other furniture scattered on the floor.

Footage from other towns in northern Japan showed piles of signboards, broken glass, roof tiles and other fallen debris. They also showed supermarkets and stores with goods scattered in the aisles.

Friday's quake measured six on a Japanese scale for quakes.

The last six on the Japanese scale hit Hokkaido on March 21, 1983, injuring 136 people. A major quake killed 140,000 people in and around Tokyo in 1923. The nation's last major quake in 1948, killed 3,895 people and injured 16,375 in and around Fukui in northern Japan.

White House releases Bush's taped diary of Iran-Contra

WASHINGTON (AP) — George Bush expressed misgivings about trading arms for hostages in 1986 Iran-Contra diary excerpts released by the White House on Friday but mused that "enough good things" might result to offset his concerns.

The diaries also show that Bush was immediately worried that his future bid for the White House might be "damaged" by the Iran-Contra scandal. But he called initial reports of his involvement "crazy information."

Bush has said that it "never became clear to me" that there was an arms-for-hostages swap until he was given a briefing in December 1986, nearly a month after news reports alleged such transactions took place.

Excerpts from his taped diary show he spoke liberally about the arms-for-hostages portion of the scandal beginning in November 1986.

"But though I don't like the concept of arms-for-hostages, there is enough removal on this and enough good things, such as the release of the hostages, and contact with moderates, will in the long run in my view offset this," Bush dictated in a Nov. 10, 1986 entry.

It was not clear whether Bush was speaking from his own knowledge of the workings of the Reagan administration, or reacting to widespread news reports.

On Nov. 5, 1986, Bush dictated: "On the news at this time is the question of the hostages. I'm one of the few people that know fully the details, and there is a lot of flack and misinformation out there. It is not a subject we can talk about."

Bush also described in the diaries the mood of key Reagan administration officials as the affair unfolded, and noted at one point that Secretary of George Shultz "worries about a Watergate syndrome."

The White House, meanwhile, disclosed Friday that it had found Bush's diaries in a safe last fall, more than a month before Election Day, but waited until Dec. 11 to disclose their existence to Iran-Contra investigators who had been seeking them since 1987.

Bush's lawyer, former Attorney General Griffin Bell, wrote in a 14-page report this month that the decision to delay disclosure of their existence was made "unilaterally" by White House Counsel C. Boyden Gray. But Bell insisted it was "unlikely that anyone had a motive to cover (them) up."

Iran-Contra prosecutor Lawrence Walsh, who recently refocused his probe on Bush, has said that it was improper for Bush to take five years to disclose the existence of the diaries. His office called Friday's release of the excerpts "selective."

The Bush diaries, which were started the day after the Iran-Contra affair was first exposed Nov. 3, 1986, reveal a vice president concerned about the growing scandal's impact on his presidential aspirations.

"Everyone says that the vice president has no power, and yet I am the one damaged," Bush said in an entry for Jan. 1, 1987.

"This is the beginning of what I hope will be an accurate diary ... on observations about my run for the presidency in 1988," Bush explained at the start.

During a five-hour videotaped deposition on Jan. 11, 1988, Bush told Iran-Contra investigators he recalled "I felt like I had been hit in the gut" when he found out money from arms sales to Iran were being diverted to the Contras in Nicaragua.

Bush was otherwise vague during that deposition, also released Friday, about events at the White House surrounding the Iran arms sales.

The Iran-Contra prosecutor's office first asked for White House diaries and other documents on Feb. 27, 1987.

10-year-old captive: 'I cried a lot'

CENTRAL ISLIP, N.Y. (AP) — A 10-year-old girl held captive 16 days said she screamed in terror when a family friend forced her into a subterranean room and locked her in a tiny sleeping box with red-stained bedding, police said Friday.

During her captivity, "I cried a lot," the girl told a law enforcement source, who spoke to The Associated Press on the condition of anonymity.

The source talked to Katie on Friday and described her as "a very happy, perky little girl. It's amazing she came through it like this."

In a public briefing, police said Katie didn't have the run of the 6-by-7-foot room John Esposito constructed beneath his Long Island home, but was confined to a compartment, 7 feet long, 2 feet wide and 3 feet high, that was bolted to the ceiling.

A police videotape showed the damp, narrow box and illustrated how Esposito had skillfully concealed the entrance to the underground room.

Katie "told us she was screaming when she was thrust into this," said Detective Lt. Dominick Varrone, who had directed the search for the girl after she was reported missing by Esposito.

Varrone said Esposito periodically escorted Katie into the outer room to use a camp toilet. He added: "Every so often she could not hold herself, and relieved herself under the television" in the compartment.

The compartment had bedding with "red stains ... that didn't belong to her, but alarmed her greatly," he said.

Varrone told reporters only that Katie "was thrust in this room when there was some non-compliance" to "physical advances" by Esposito. He characterized Katie as a "tenacious, feisty individual who screamed and resisted and ... ended up in the room."

The box to which Katie was confined had a television and remote control, Varrone said, allowing her to follow news reports of her disappearance. She was fed once a day, and often was chained.

Esposito was being held in lieu of $500,000 bail at the Suffolk County jail, locked 23 hours a day in a cell much larger than the space where Katie was imprisoned.

Illinois-slaying task force arrests one

PALATINE, Ill. (AP) — The task force investigating the slayings of seven people at a fast-food restaurant arrested one man Friday but wouldn't say if he was connected to the massacre.

Rashaad S. Brooks was being held on warrants for a suburban robbery Dec. 29 and failure to appear on a charge of aggravated assault, investigators said.

"It is certainly obvious that Mr. Brooks was arrested based on information received by police and information received by the task force," said Andy Knott, a spokesman for the Cook County state's attorney's office.

The brief news conference followed a news report that three men had been brought in for questioning in the slayings and a fourth was being sought.

Knott and Palatine Deputy Police Chief Walt Gasior wouldn't comment about the report.

"I'm not foolish enough to try to deny that this task force is questioning persons," Knott said. "They have been questioning persons since early this week."

Friday evening, three men who identified themselves as acquaintances of Brooks said they were the ones questioned by police and then released. In interviews at one of the men's apartments, they denied having anything to do with the restaurant slayings and said neither did Brooks.

Steven Brown said when police began questioning them "they told us somebody said they heard us talking about the murder." Brown said he told police, "I cry when people die on the soap operas."

"I'm scared. They have turned our lives upside down," Brown said.

The slayings were discovered early Saturday in a cooler at a Brown's Chicken and Pasta restaurant. The couple that owned the restaurant and five employees, including two high school students, had been shot. One woman's throat had been slashed.

Award-winning lyricist Sammy Cahn dies at 79

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sammy Cahn, the prolific lyricist who won Oscars for the songs "Call Me Irresponsible," "Three Coins in the Fountain," "High Hopes" and "All the Way," died Friday. He was 79.

Cahn, who lived in Beverly Hills, died of congestive heart failure at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center, hospital spokesman Ron Wise said. Cahn had been hospitalized since Dec. 30.

Cahn collaborated with Saul Chaplin, Jimmy Van Heusen and Jule Styne on hundreds of popular songs.

Frank Sinatra immortalized many Cahn tunes, including "Love and Marriage," now heard on television's "Married ... With Children." The song was awarded a special Emmy from a musical version of Thornton Wilder's "Our Town."

Sinatra also sang Cahn's "Come Fly With Me," "My Kind of Town," "Tender Trap," "Three Coins in the Fountain," "High Hopes," "Time After Time" and "Saturday Night is the Loneliest Night of the Week."

Cahn sang his own songs, too. In a 1963 interview with The Associated Press, Cahn considered himself the most expensive singer in the world. "I sing a song once and if you like what you hear, you owe me $12,500," he said.

In 1974, he took the stage in the Broadway show "Words and Music," a reminiscence of his musical career. He played on the London stage in a show of the same name in 1987, but illness forced him to cut short its run.

Cahn's first international hit came by accident. He heard a black duo singing the Yiddish song "Bie Mir Bist Du Schon." He translated the song — it means "To Me You Are Beautiful" — reworked the tune, and gave it to bandleader Tommy Dorsey. Dorsey said no, but a few weeks later The Andrew Sisters spotted the song at Cahn's house and made it a 1937 smash.

Among his best-known works were "Rhythm is Our Business," "Let it Snow, Let it Snow, Let it Snow," "I'll Walk Alone," "Love and Marriage," "Second Time Around," "Pocketful of Miracles," "My Kind of Town" and "All That Love Went to Waste."

As a film composer, his credits numbered "Anchors Aweigh," "April in Paris," "Meet Me in Las Vegas," "The Tender Trap," "It Happened in Brooklyn," "Romance on the High Seas," "Peter Pan," "Pal Joey," "High Time," "How the West Was Won," "Robin and the Seven Hoods," "A Touch of Class," "Paper Tiger," "The Duchess and the Dirtwater Fox" and "Thoroughly Modern Millie."

"His list of hits speaks for itself," Kelly said.

Composer Burt Bacharach said: "He was always interested in what he was doing, and stayed alive to write and perform. He never really retired, and I loved that about him, too."

On Broadway, Cahn worked on "High Button Shoes," "Two's Company," "Skyscraper," "Walking Happy," "Words and Music" and "Falling in Love Again."

The songwriter was born Samuel Cohen in New York City. An early student of the violin, Cahn started playing in a local orchestra at weddings, bar mitzvahs and other parties.

He continued playing the violin at burlesque houses and wrote his first lyrics at age 16. Before coming to Hollywood, he scored short films.

He was a president of the National Academy of Popular Music and was a member of the board of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers.

He won Academy Awards in 1954 for "Three Coins in the Fountain" from the film of the same name, in 1957 for "All the Way" from the film "The Joker is Wild", in 1959 for "High Hopes" from "A Hole in the Head" and in 1963 for "Call Me Irresponsible" from "Papa's Delicate Condition."

"Call Me Irrespsonsible" also won an Emmy award.

He was nominated for Oscars 30 times.

In the 1992 book "Going Strong," on what keeps accomplished older people going, Cahn said: "My ambition is to make 87, because I want to see the year 2000 and how the world will celebrate."

Cahn is survived by his wife Tita, son Stephen, and daughter Laurie. Funeral services will be private, and a memorial service will be announced at a later date.

Colombian crew dodges lava looking for bodies

PASTO, Colombia (AP) — Hikers and scientists staggered down a rumbling volcano Friday following a terrifying flash eruption that killed at least nine people, including volcano experts poking around the crater.

Officials confirmed seven injured in Thursday's eruption of 14,030-foot Galeras volcano, about 375 miles south of Bogota and 13 miles from the city of Pasto. The eruption sent super-hot volcanic debris 1½ miles into the air.

There were conflicting reports that up to eight people were missing. Police told the radio network Caracol that more than 70 people may have been on the volcano when it erupted.

Ash and rocks continued to spew from the crater Friday as rescuers wearing masks against poisonous gases and debris found the bodies of two Colombians and a portion of another, unidentified body, the radio chain Caracol said.

The search was suspended at midday Friday as the snow-capped volcano began shaking again amid freezing temperatures, high winds and thick clouds.

Six others were confirmed dead on Thursday, including three who had yelled for help from inside the crater. Those victims included Geoff Brown of Open University of Britain, who was attending an international conference in Pasto on volcanos, and Gorbin Garlov, a Russian geologist, and Nestor Garcia, a Colombian geologist. Three other bodies, of Colombians, were recovered.

Three of the injured were Americans — conference organizer Stanley Williams, an associate profesor of geology at Arizona State University; Mike Conway of Florida International University; and Andreus Matthews, whose affiliation or hometown was not known.

Williams was in stable condition in a Pasto hospital for head injuries and broken ankles, said Ed Stump, head of ASU's geology department, in Tempe, Ariz.

"He is waiting evacuation ... probably back to the States," Stump said. "The information is that Stan's injury is the worst of the Americans."

The other injured were Martin Oliver of Canada, an Ecuadoran and two Colombians, one of whom lost a hand that was crushed by a rock, the Pasto hospital said.

Just as some of the scientists were approaching the rim, the volcano erupted with a deafening roar and a huge column of ash and steam at 1:43 p.m. Thursday, the radio networks RCN and Caracol said.

"There was no way to escape the rocks falling," said Andrew McFarlane of Florida International University, who escaped without injury from within 40 yards of the rim.

"We just ran. I guess we were lucky," McFarlane told Caracol radio. "Some of those with us didn't make it out of the crater."

About two hours after the eruption a local radio reporter crept to the rim of the crater and peered in. He said he could hear people screaming for help — apparently Brown, Garlov and Garcia.

Attempts to reach them were unsuccessful. A few hours later a television crew captured the image of three unmoving bodies along a narrow ledge deep in the crater.

By Friday morning the ledge was gone and so were the bodies, presumably consumed by the volcano.

About 100 volcanologists and other scientists from 15 countries were attending the scientific conference, part of a U.N.-supported effort to study about a dozen volcanos around the world.

Galeras was the only South American volcano included in the study. When inviting scientists to the conference, organizers noted Galeras was "ideal" because of "the continuing eruption threat and the very real disaster risk."

A copy of the invitation was telefaxed to The Associated Press in New York by Steven Brantley of the U.S. Geological Survey in Vancouver, Wash.

Stump said volcano researchers need to study volcanos close up despite the dangers. "But often there are warning signs, and apparently this eruption was without warning," he said.

Three USGS geologists had planned to attend the meeting, but were denied permission by the State Department because of concern about political violence.

Brantley said the USGS had been working with Colombian scientists to upgrade monitoring instruments at Galeras.
