Tragedy eases with time

Midland's 'Baby Jessica' leads active 6-year-old life

AP Laserphoto

Jessica McClure, shown in this recent portrait, remembers little of the accident and dramatic rescue that captured the world's eye five years ago.

■ Family tries to live normally, quietly.

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff writer

Playing quietly and alone in the front yard, Jessica McClure bears little resemblance to the 18-month-old toddler pulled from a well five years ago.

"I have my dolls in my room, but me and my friends usually play outdoors," she says, seemingly at random. "It's more fun that way."

Then she grabs her pet poodle, sets him down again and dashes around the house with the tiny dog giving chase.

"Baby Jessica" is now a 6-year-old first-grader.

Five years ago, on Oct. 14, 1987, Jessica dangled her feet over the edge of an eight-inch wide, uncapped water well. When she tried to stand, she slipped and plunged 22-feet below ground — into the darkness in the back yard of her aunt's rented southwest Midland home.

For the next 58 hours, she remained twisted in the damp well while rescuers worked to free her from what could have been a premature grave.

"It was heartbreaking," said Maxine Sprague, a neighbor who called down to Jessica before help arrived. "She had played in our front yard a lot with the other kids — they were all toddlers."

Those manning the tiny well opening reported Jessica alternately sang "Jesus Loves Me" and "Winnie the Pooh" songs, while calling for her mother and crying. Rescuers called below to try to comfort her.

Her father, Chip McClure, now 23, arrived as rescuers were deciding what action to take.

"I thought they were all crazy. I looked at that hole and thought it was impossible, that she was somewhere else. I thought everyone had lost their minds," he said. "I didn't believe them until I listened through the microphone and heard her talking and crying. I didn't know what to do."

Her mother, Cissy Porter, also 23, simply prayed.

"Over and over I just kept saying, 'Please, Lord, let everything be all right,' " she said.

Today, her memories of those three days are blurred.

■ Photos; Midlanders remember trauma/6,7A

"I just remember the rumbling of the machine — the rat-hole rig. It was constant. You could hear it all the time," she said. "Other than that, I don't remember much. It was like I was in another world. It was a nightmare."

But Jessica — perhaps because of her age at the time of the incident — appears emotionally unscathed from those harrowing hours alone in the well.

Outwardly, a fading forehead scar, caused by rubbing her head against the well's rocky wall, and the amputation of the little toe on her right foot will always remind her of those three days.

Jessica, five years later, remembers only what she has been told about the accident.

"'I know I was stuck in a well and they got me out. I know people want to talk about it a lot. They were scared for me," she said.

While watching a rerun of the made-for-TV movie about the ordeal, Jessica asked her mother if the little girl in the well would be saved.

"She says, 'Momma, are they gonna get that little girl out?' And I say, 'That little girl is you, and they got you out,' " Mrs. Porter says.

Maxine Sprague was watching television in her living room when she heard the screams of Cissy McClure next door.

" 'Oh my God, Jessica fell in the well', she yelled. I ran out and went over to the well and heard, 'Mommy, Mommy' from deep inside," Mrs. Sprague said. "I kept talking to her until someone came. I remember she just kept asking for her mother."

That was Wednesday morning, Mrs. Sprague says she didn't sleep again until the following Monday, when the last of the heavy equipment was finally taken away.

"Our back yard had turned into a junkyard. They had to tear down our fence to bring in all the rescue equipment, and there were ladders — I've never seen so many ladders," she said. "Our yard looked like an oil field with all the ladders. They looked like derricks, of course."

Sgt. Andy Glasscock, who monitored the eight-inch wide well opening throughout the 58-hour rescue attempt, remembers joking about the ladders.

"The funniest part was watching all the fancy news reporters. They kept bringing in higher and higher ladders so they could see. We joked a lot about them falling over," he said.

RRC race turns to foreclosures issue

■ Guerrero claims Williamson keeps mum about his banking law experience.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Lena Guerrero says Barry Williamson, her Republican opponent in the Railroad Commission race, touts his gas and oil law experience, but neglects to mention his background in banking law.

That's understandable, the Democrat says, since as a banking lawyer a decade ago he had a key role in the foreclosures of many homes for a Midland bank.

As a member of Turpin, Smith, Dyer and Saxe in Midland, Williamson worked as a bank trustee in foreclosing at least 66 properties from January to November 1983, The Dallas Morning News reported in its Saturday editions.

Included in those foreclosures were the properties of 21 people unable to make mortgage payments, according to court records obtained by the newspaper.

The newspaper said the Guerrero campaign called its attention to the foreclosure practice.

The Morning News quoted Williamson as saying he had no regrets in being assigned to work those cases.

"It's business. I did a good job and I represented my clients and I was professional," he said.

At the time, Williamson's client was First National Bank of Midland, which, like many banks in the early 1980s, was experiencing difficulties.

Court records show that the bank would name Williamson as its trustee for loans, and he would foreclose and place the property for sale on the courthouse steps. In almost all the instances, the bank re-purchased the property through the courthouse auction.

Although Williamson acknowledged that some families might have been evicted in the process, most of the properties were unoccupied or had renters, he said.

School officials weigh pros, cons of 'controlled choice'

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

"Balancing equity with excellence" is the challenge facing Midland Independent School District, according to school board trustee Gary Willis.

On Oct. 3, the board-appointed Cluster Advisory Committee presented a plan on controlled choice. The plan, according to some members of the committee, could strike that precarious balance.

After a series of meetings and research, the committee developed the plan, which would allow students to remain in the same school for fourth, fifth and sixth grade, instead of being bused to different schools during those years.

"The plan is an attempt by a group of citizens to improve our system," said MISD Superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr. "It would allow students to stay in one school for three years and offer parents some choice, though it would be controlled."

Committee members supporting the plan said it could enhance education — by adding six enrichment programs — while eliminating some complaints concerning busing. Others on the committee said it isn't worth the legal risks.

A better option to reduce long bus rides and waiting time (before school starts after being dropped off by buses) would be to rearrange the cluster system, according to advisory committee member Alma Marshall.

Speaking for some minority members on the committee — who have sought advice from legal counsel — Ms. Marshall said "moving a few schools from one cluster to another appears to present no problem."

Ms. Marshall said an "inherent danger" in the controlled choice plan is that it would house kindergarten through sixth-grade pupils in each school, rather than the current system, which has K-3 in neighborhood schools and busing from grades 4-6.

"There was a feeling that the establishment of all grade levels at each school would result in the total collapse of any integration, given the pronouncements

Candidates hold mock debates to practice for real thing tonight

By Karen Ball
Associated Press writer

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Bill Clinton and President Bush put in final practice rounds Saturday for their leadoff debate — a high-stakes show in which Clinton will try to dispel any voter doubts and Bush will try to persuade Americans they'd like his second term better than his first.

Ross Perot, joining them on stage tonight at 6 p.m. CDT in St. Louis, will be the uncertain factor for both.

"It's not relevant to me," Clinton said of the possible impact of Perot's attendance. "I'm going to get in there and try to talk to the American people and try to make this election about them. It's their lives that are at stake."

Clinton took part in a morning run to raise money for a 17-month-old leukemia victim, then headed into a daylong session of mock debates and other preparations with his top aides.

Bush skipped his normal weekend routine of going to Camp David, staying at the White House instead to study briefing books and hold a mock debate with his stand-ins — budget director Richard Darman as Clinton and former chief of staff John Sununu as Perot.

"He has an agenda for change and that's what he's going to lay out tomorrow night and all the nights before the election," spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said.

"We're still behind," said Defense Secretary Dick Cheney, visiting his home state of Wyoming on Saturday. "I think an awful lot is riding on the outcome of those debates."

Neither Bush nor Perot seemed to have been helped in the polls by last week's efforts — Perot's prime-time ads and Bush's attempt to make a campaign issue of Clinton's college anti-war activities and vacation trip to Moscow.

Newsweek magazine reported Saturday that its weekly survey, taken Thursday and Friday, found Clinton leading with 44 percent to 35 percent for Bush and 12 percent for Perot. That was virtually unchanged from the previous week's 44-36-14.

And 63 percent of the respondents agreed with a survey statement that Bush's remarks on Clinton's activities two decades ago amounted to "an unfair criticism." Clinton, asked Saturday about Bush's assertion that he wasn't questioning the Democrat's patriotism, said, "That's exactly what he was doing."

With the debut debate looming, both the Bush and Clinton camps tried to lower expectations for tonight, saying the candidates should be judged on all the debates — a series of three confrontations over nine days.

Still, the Clinton camp and other Democratic strategists said the Arkansas governor — who has been holding steady leads over Bush in the polls for weeks — has a big opportunity with the first debate to solidify his support and put any lingering doubts to rest.

And Republican operatives said today is Bush's big chance to shake up the race, cast more doubt on Clinton and convince Americans the Republicans have workable ideas for reviving the economy.

There's a theory among Democrats that Clinton's situation is somewhat like Ronald Reagan's in 1980.

"Reagan had to prove he wasn't going to start a nuclear war, that he didn't have blood dripping from his teeth," said Democratic strategist Mike McCurry.

"Clinton has to stand up there and look honest and credible and make people feel comfortable with the notion of him as president," McCurry said.

As in 1980, polls indicate many voters want a change but need assurances about the new man.

Twelve years ago, "we spent all fall trying to show that Reagan was a kook and dangerous and risky," said David Doak, a Democratic media specialist who worked on President Carter's re-election campaign.

"All Reagan had to do was not fall on his face," Doak said. Similarly, "Clinton can put the election on ice ... if he reassures voters."

"People just want one more test drive," added Clinton strategist Paul Begala. "They've decided on the model; they just want to kick the tires and make sure it runs all right."

Republican operative Ed Rogers, who works with the Bush-Quayle camp, said that for the president, tonight is about reassurance, too.

"Bush has got to remind people why they have admired him in the past — he's likable, knowledgeable, sincere, he has a good command of the facts and a good grasp on what's wrong with the country and where to take it," Rogers said.

U.S. faces dilemma on Bosnia policy

By Eric Schmitt
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Pentagon and State Department officials are exploring the idea of sending arms to the outgunned Muslims in Bosnia, but such intervention is opposed by senior officials and complicated by the administration's hesitation to make a major reversal in policy so close to the presidential elections.

The administration is caught between Washington's reluctance to involve American military forces in the Balkan conflict and its goal of ending what President Bush recently called "a flagrant disregard for human life" in the Bosnian fighting.

Because of fears that such intervention would exacerbate the fighting, Acting Secretary of State Lawrence S. Eagleburger and Gen. Colin L. Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, oppose supplying arms to the Bosnians.

Administration officials who favor sending weapons to Bosnians say that any decision about changing course on Balkan policy has been delayed until after the presidential election. And any such effort would require Washington to persuade the United Nations to lift its arms embargo on the area.

The administration's policy dilemma comes at a time when American intelligence officials say that a Security Council decision Friday to ban combat flights over Bosnia would make only a marginal difference in reducing civilian casualties.

The Central Intelligence Agency and the Defense Intelligence Agency have concluded that tanks, artillery and other weapons the Serbs control on the ground are more than sufficient to prevent any change in the balance of power, administration officials said.

"Even if there's a no-fly zone, it won't make a substantial change in the battlefield balance," said one administration official. "It's largely a political signal that the international community has put the Serbs on notice."

Proponents of the U.N. resolution approved Friday say that the flight ban is essential in ensuring the safe delivery of relief aid as well as a first step toward ending hostilities. The ban does not include any enforcement action, although the United States says it will introduce a new resolution to that effect if it detects violations.

Just a day after the U.N. resolution banning military flights over the area was approved, there were reports of violations. But Serbian forces denied the charges, and the U.S. European Command said Saturday it had no information to confirm reports of Serbian air attacks.

The Serbian forces in Bosnia have about 24 Orao and Galeb combat planes that had reportedly been flying as many as 30 missions a day, dropping cluster bombs and other munitions, according to Administration officials.

"These aircraft are so inefficient that most anything they could do from the air, the Serbs could do with artillery and tanks on the ground," said an administration official.

Based in Serbian-controlled Banja Luka, Serbian commanders have used the combat aircraft for three main purposes, administration officials said.

Police arrest wealthy 'deadbeat dad' in Utah

■ Man donates $500,00 to GOP, owes $100,000 in child support.

Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — A "deadbeat dad" who donated $500,000 at a Republican Party fund-raiser when he owed his ex-wife $100,000 in child support was arrested Saturday.

Authorities had stepped up the search for Michael Kojima, 50, of Los Angeles, after spotting him in news photos from the April 28 dinner, sitting at President Bush's table.

Kojima was taken into custody at Salt Lake International Airport as he was about to board an flight to Denver to meet his wife for a vacation. He was held pending an extradition hearing Tuesday.

He apparently had been in the area for several weeks, staying with friends or in motels, authorities said.

"We managed to track him, but he was always a hop and a skip ahead of us," said Sandi Gibbons, spokeswoman for the Los Angeles District Attorney's office.

Kojima was charged May 18 in Los Angeles with failing to provide, a misdemeanor that carries a possible maximum sentence of one year in jail.

But prosecutors didn't know where to find Kojima, a self-described international business consultant who had moved and married several times, Gibbons said.

Authorities got a tip he was to fly to Denver for a vacation in the Rocky Mountains, and the Salt Lake police arrested him before he boarded the flight, Gibbons said.

Kojima owed $100,000 in child support to a former wife, Chang Cha Kojima, a beautician from whom he was divorced in 1984, Gibbons said. He was required to pay $350 a month for each of his two daughters, now 12 and 13.

The Republican Party placed his two contribution checks — $400,000 to the fund-raising event and another $100,000 to the party — in escrow following a report by The Associated Press that Kojima owed hundreds of thousands of dollars and had left a trail of lawsuits filed by creditors.

Another ex-wife, Soon Kojima, claims Kojima also owes her $15,000 in back child support and a $100,000 court judgment resulting from a business venture the two entered.

Departments feud over Iraqi bank fraud

By Elaine Sciolino
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — A fractious and public dispute between two usually secretive agencies worsened Saturday as CIA and Justice Department officials accused each other of concealing information about a multibillion dollar bank fraud involving Iraq.

The unusual finger-pointing over the case came in the wake of a disclosure on Friday that CIA officials had told Congress that CIA officials, at the urging of the Justice Department, had deliberately withheld information about the bank fraud.

The Bush administration's handling of the case has been widely criticized by a handful of congressional Democrats who have charged that the administration is attempting to hide its misguided policy toward Iraq.

CIA officials said Saturday that when they realized that erroneous information had been given to federal prosecutors about the agency's knowledge of the case, they sent the Justice Department a proposed statement in September revealing the extent of the CIA's knowledge on the issue. The Justice Department, the CIA officials said, then declined to release the statement.

A Justice Department spokesman, Paul McNulty, acknowledged that the CIA had proposed issuing such a statement. But Justice officials opposed releasing it because they felt it was inadequate, factually incorrect and failed to portray correctly the Justice Department's view of the case, McNulty said.

The dispute could not come at a worse time for President Bush, who was engaged Saturday in a mock debate at the White House in preparation for his first encounter with Gov. Bill Clinton on Sunday night.

The dispute is certain to encourage critics of the administration in the belief that officials deliberately hid information about the case as part of a government-wide cover-up.

The CIA, the Justice Department and the Bush administration have all denied wrongdoing in the case.

The Justice Department announced Saturday that Attorney General William P. Barr had asked the FBI to begin an internal review of how its prosecutors and CIA officials handled classified information about the scandal, which involved loans approved for Iraq by the Atlanta branch of the Banca Nazionale del Lavoro, an Italian bank.

In a sharply worded statement Saturday, the CIA denied that its officials told the Senate Committee last week that it deliberately withheld information from federal prosecutors in Atlanta at the urging of Justice. It also denied that there was any attempt to mislead prosecutors and blamed the media for misrepresenting the CIA position.

But Elizabeth Rindskopf, the CIA's chief lawyer, said in an inteview last week that Laurence Urgenson, the head of the Justice Department's fraud section, "strongly advised" her office not to correct the faulty letter.

And Urgenson, also in an interview, denied that he had intimidated the CIA but admitted that he advised a CIA lawyer that if he changed the letter "he would naturally be expected to explain the changes."

The White House was said to be staying out of the issue, maintaining that there was no disagreement between the two agencies and therefore no reason for it to intervene.

But the feud adds weight to charges by congressional Democrats that the Bush administration, for foreign policy reasons, deliberately concealed information about the case.

Seizing on the issue Saturday, Sen. Albert Gore Jr., the Democratic vice presidential nominee, issued a statement suggesting that the administration's conciliatory policy toward Iraq was not only flawed, but criminal as well.

"It is not just failed policy or bad judgment in question," he said in a statement. "It is a seemingly blatant disregard for the law by those responsible for enforcing it."

At issue is who is to blame for providing incomplete, and therefore misleading, information to federal prosecutors and a federal judge in Atlanta who were investigating possible wrongdoing by the bank in approving fraudulent loans for Iraq.

CIA lawyers told Congress last week that at the urging of the Justice Department they deliberately withheld information about the fraud. Justice Department officials, meanwhile, said that the CIA gave them classified documents relevant to the case in a haphazard manner, suggesting that the agency had not been completely forthcoming.

Part of the dispute between the two agencies centers on a Sept. 17 letter of questions and answers to the federal prosecutors in Atlanta that stated the CIA had unclassified information about the bank fraud scheme.

But the letter failed to mention that the CIA had also received several classified reports indicating that officals at the bank's Rome headquarters were aware of the scheme.

The Justice Department publicly released the letter the following day and it was then entered in the court record.

Both the CIA and the Justice Department knew that the statement in the letter was incorrect, but because the same erroneous statement had been made in a classified version on Sept. 4, they decided not to change it.

They also concluded that the omission about classified material was irrelevant because they were ready to send classified reports to U.S. District Court Judge Marvin H. Shoob.

What was curious about the deliberate omission, however, is that the existence of classified materials was publicly known.

Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, D-Texas, had summarized some of them in a speech from the House floor only a few days earlier.

SCHOOL: Officials study 'controlled choice'

made at the various community meetings," Ms. Marshall said.

She noted that changing the cluster system was initiated by the majority community and that complaints about busing have largely been raised by the persons in north and west Midland.

"You are not hearing minorities raising these complaints," Ms. Marshall said. "We have had to adjust all of our lives. It seems to be a major cultural difference that the majority community makes stability a priority while the minority community sees equity as a priority."

Ricky Pena, another advisory committee member and member of the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, said the plan could work if — once implemented — there were ways "to make certain things are abided on."

"I think the plan has merit," Pena said. "The concept is really good. Some minority members had concerns that the plan could be manipulated to someone else's benefit."

Isabel Jimenez, committee member and member of the Midland Chapter of LULAC (League of United Latin American Citizens), said that minorities have been concerned about hearing people at previous MISD community meetings calling for an end to busing all together.

"I have some concerns about the controlled choice concept," she said. "When Judge Pat Baskin spoke to our committee at one session, he said one of the things that made the current cluster system easier to accept was that everyone was being bused. Not any one person was getting a better deal.

"With controlled choice, some children will be able to stay in their neighborhood school — not everybody will. Then some people will get upset and will want go back to neighborhood schools. It could open the door to litigation. . . . I have a fear that we could go back to neighborhood schools. People may say they want enrichment when they are really saying: 'I don't want to have my child bused.' "

Trustee Willis said, "I understand the fear of returning to the days of neighborhood schools. People here remember them, and they were a travesty of justice. Some of the schools had poor equipment and textbooks, and the best teachers were recruited to other schools. What we want is for every school in the city to be a quality school."

Willis said controlled choice has the potential "to do a better job educating with the enrichment aspect. It would address excellence. The fact that the ethnicity would be balanced at grade level every year (from fourth to sixth grade) would address the equity."

Baressi and Willis noted that the current cluster system has resulted in some schools being out of balance according to the district's ethnic balance of 60 percent Anglo and 40 percent minority.

"Our current system gets out of balance over time as people make decisions where to live," Willis said. "We have to use neighborhood boundaries to maintain demographic balance. . . . I can't help but think that balancing the system every year (with controlled choice) as opposed to the school board changing neighborhood boundary lines, would improve balance on the equity side."

Baressi said the incoming fourth-grade class every year would have to be balanced ethnically. "They would have to balance to their class average. As demographics change, the system would automatically adjust."

The superintendent said the Burnet, Fannin and South cluster has a higher percentage of minorities attending than "plus or minus five percent" of the district's ethnic enrollment percentages.

"Some schools also have a disproportionate number of Anglos, too," he said.

Willis said the current cluster system of integration "is designed to ensure equity for all students by all students going to the schools together," he said. "If the choice system would do a better job of preserving equity and adding enhancement, it should not be rejected out of hand because of fear."

Willis said that if operated properly, the choice system would have only one in six children attending their neighborhood school at each grade level.

He noted that school board trustees have made no decisions concerning the proposal that would divide Midland schools into six groups and offer six enrichment programs in each group.

"I think controlled choice definitely has its merits," Pena said. "Whether it would work or not, well, the issue comes down to trust. But there will be some risk in anything we do when we try to implement change. No one wants something the community will be split on. We want equity for everybody."

Advisory committee member Doris Zepeda said she is in favor of the concept. "I feel like it would work. It needs to be run properly, however, so no one will take advantage of the system and all would be treated equally."

Baressi said the board will air the videotape of the Oct. 3 advisory committee report on controlled choice following the dinner break at Tuesday's board meeting.

Trustees will decide on Tuesday whether or not the concept has enough merit to add to the agenda of seven upcoming community meetings — one planned for each Midland district.

Baressi said the meetings are intended to discuss the realignment of the cluster system, junior high school boundaries and Greathouse Elementary School boundaries.

RRC: Guerrero says Williamson keeps mum on 66 foreclosures

(From 1A)

"These were big homes that were being built by builders. Many of these houses were vacant, many of these houses were being moved in and many of these had rental agreements," he said.

Although the bank was foreclosing on loans, he said it had a good track record of trying to work with customers to avoid evictions.

He also said that although the 66 foreclosure cases were a part of his banking litigation experience, his practice included "a lot of work for the bank, a lot of work in energy, a lot of work in litigation and a lot of corporate (work for) private companies."

On campaign literature and letters, Williamson lists his work for the Midland law firm, from 1982 to 1985, solely as oil and gas law.

When he announced his candidacy for the seat on the Railroad Commission, which regulates the state's oil, gas and trucking industries, he did mention in his speech that his work included banking law.

Williamson said he has never hesitated to mention that his legal experience includes banking law.

Williamson has been blistering Ms. Guerrero for misrepresenting her academic record on biographies and campaign literature, in which she falsely claimed to have graduated from the University of Texas.

The Morning News quoted Chuck McDonald, a spokesman for Ms. Guerrero, as saying Williamson has "always represented himself as an oil man first and before that as an oil and gas attorney."

"And I never saw anywhere in his press statements, his announcements, or his campaign literature any mention of his foreclosure practice," McDonald added.

McDonald said he believes that Williamson's banking work is important when contrasted to work he did at the U.S. Interior Department's Mineral Management Service division. Williamson served from April 1989 to June 1991 as director of the division, which collects billions of dollars annually in royalties from oil and gas produced on public lands.

A congressional study, performed during part of Williamson's tenure, criticized the division for failing to aggressively pursue penalties, underpayments and timely collection of royalties.

Williamson has challenged that report, saying much of it was a political maneuver by U.S. Rep. George Miller, D-Calif., chairman of the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs, who opposes offshore drilling.

"Barry Williamson didn't vigorously pursue big oil when they owed fines, royalties and taxes," McDonald said. "He was more than willing to give them all the breaks they needed."

In Boston, Italian-Americans feel heat of anti-Columbus sentiment

By Fox Butterfield
N.Y. Times News Service

BOSTON — Buddy Marino Cuozzo is the grand marshal of the Columbus Day parade Monday in East Boston, a working-class, predominantly Italian-American section, and he is bitter.

"We're Italian-Americans, and they've taken all our heroes away from us," Cuozzo said, sitting in his office in a battered old row house. First, he said, Frank Sinatra was vilified by the press; then Geraldine A. Ferraro was defeated after a spate of rumors that her husband was linked to the Mafia.

"Columbus is the last hero we have," Cuozzo said, clutching an unlighted cigar. "He discovered America. Why don't they leave the guy alone?"

Cuozzo is angry because on the eve of what is expected to be the largest parade in the history of East Boston, to celebrate the 500th anniversary of Columbus' arrival in the New World, a group of protesters, including some American Indians, have petitioned the mayor's office for the right to join the parade.

A flier put out by the group, Cuozzo said, shows a picture of Columbus beside an Indian with the caption "Which one is the savage?"

The debate over how to treat Columbus has been raging all across America in this year of his quincentenary jubilee. But it is particularly sharp in Boston, where ethnic passions are always near the surface and where the large university population often gives politics a liberal cast.

Moreover, Columbus Day has been long treated as a more serious holiday here than elsewhere in the country. It has been an official holiday in Boston since 1892, and a state holiday since 1910. Ten percent of Boston's 574,283 residents are of Italian descent, according to the 1990 census.

The state government, expecting a battle over Columbus Day this year, established an official commission to conduct what it hopes will be non-partisan events, including a dinner for 15 of Massachusetts' Nobel Laureates under the theme of celebrating "discovery" in all its forms.

But the traditional Columbus Day festivities, like the East Boston parade, will go on, and so some groups, dissenting from the view of Columbus as a hero, have organized alternatives.

The Children's Museum in Boston, a determinedly multicultural institution, has sponsored an exhibit called "Columbus: Through Native Eyes," which suggests that the European discovery of America caused the death of 30 million Indians.

"Native people are tired of the story that Columbus was a great navigator who discovered the New World," said Linda Coombs, a member of the Wampanoag nation from Gay Head on Martha's Vineyard, who directs the museum's Native American program.

"We didn't want Columbus Day this year to be the same old story, that native Americans didn't matter because they were savages and not Christians.

"What Columbus did was worse than the Holocaust," Ms. Coombs said.

Clinton plans to make public details of his medical history

N.Y. Times News Service

Gov. Bill Clinton, responding to questions from news organizations, said Saturday that he would soon make public more detailed information about his medical history, but a top aide said the candidate would continue to deny reporters access to his doctors.

"I believe the American people must be assured that candidates for the presidency are physically sound," Clinton said, in a statement by his campaign staff in Kansas City, Mo., where he was preparing Saturday for the first presidential debate. "Several months ago, I released statements from my doctors confirming that I am in excellent health, but as Election Day draws near, I believe it necessary to provide more details."

Dee Dee Myers, Clinton's traveling press secretary, said the campaign would make public within a matter of days a series of broad and fairly detailed statements on various facets of Clinton's medical history, in response to a list of written questions submitted by The Washington Post.

But Ms. Myers made it clear that Clinton did not intend to go further in disclosure than that. She said he would not allow reporters to interview his physicians.

"It is a privacy issue," she said in an interview. "The governor believes the voters have a right to know if the candidates are in good health, but he feels this is sufficient."

Clinton, responding to an article in The New York Times on Saturday, spoke to reporters outside the hotel in Kansas City, Mo., where he was preparing for tonight's debate in a suburb of St. Louis. He said his staff had not responded to repeated requests from The New York Times requesting interviews with his doctors and with him because of "a glitch on our part."

"Our press office did not tell The Times that we were in the process of working up answers to questions," Clinton said.

Last June, the Clinton campaign issued brief letters from three doctors attesting to Clinton's good health, but the letters left questions unanswered.

Jessica, above as she appeared before the 58-hour ordeal five years ago this week. At right, Cissy waits during the early hours of the incident, without know the drama that lay ahead.

Neighbors and other Midlanders flocked to the house on Tanner Drive and watched hopefully for some sign of success.

JESSICA: Family works to maintain normalcy, privacy for growing girl

(From 1A)

But the accident itself is discussed only if Jessica brings it up, Mrs. Porter said. And there are no clippings, photographs or reminders visible in the Porters' rural Midland home. The 20,000 letters received from around the world are packed away in boxes.

The dramatic story — fueled by the image of a toddler crying for her mother and singing from a dark, musty hole — captivated television viewers across the world.

"The world needed an outlet. At the time the whole world was in such a turmoil, with trouble in the Persian Gulf, the stock market crash and everything else," Sgt. Andy Glasscock said. "And a little girl, of all things, people really cared."

As a result of the intense media coverage, Mrs. Porter is wary of divulging information about her daughter.

On Friday, three reporters from the nationally syndicated television show "Inside Edition" spent the entire day staking out the Porter home, periodically knocking on the door with their cameras running.

" 'Mrs. McClure! Mrs. McClure!' they yelled at the door," Mrs. Porter said. "I'm afraid of them. Now they'll talk to our neighbors and twist everything around. But I'm sure they would do the same if we talked to them.

"I want us to live normal lives, and I don't want anything to happen to her," she said. "I want her to grow up like a regular little girl."

So far, Jessica is partial to Walt Disney movies and Barbie dolls and seems to be doing just that.

"She played T-ball, she's involved in gymnastics and swimming, you name it," Mrs. Porter said. "She's very active, to say the least."

And although her parents filed for divorce in March of 1990, both say Jessica spends ample time with her father.

Mrs. Porter, who married oil-rig worker Tim Porter two years ago, remembers it was her ex-husband who helped her through the tragedy.

"Chip was there for me more than anyone at the time," she said.

"And people think otherwise, but we're not at each other's throats. I like Chip, and we're nice to each other. I like his wife too," she said.

McClure remarried last year.

Mrs. Porter admits that reverberations from the accident may haunt the family for many years.

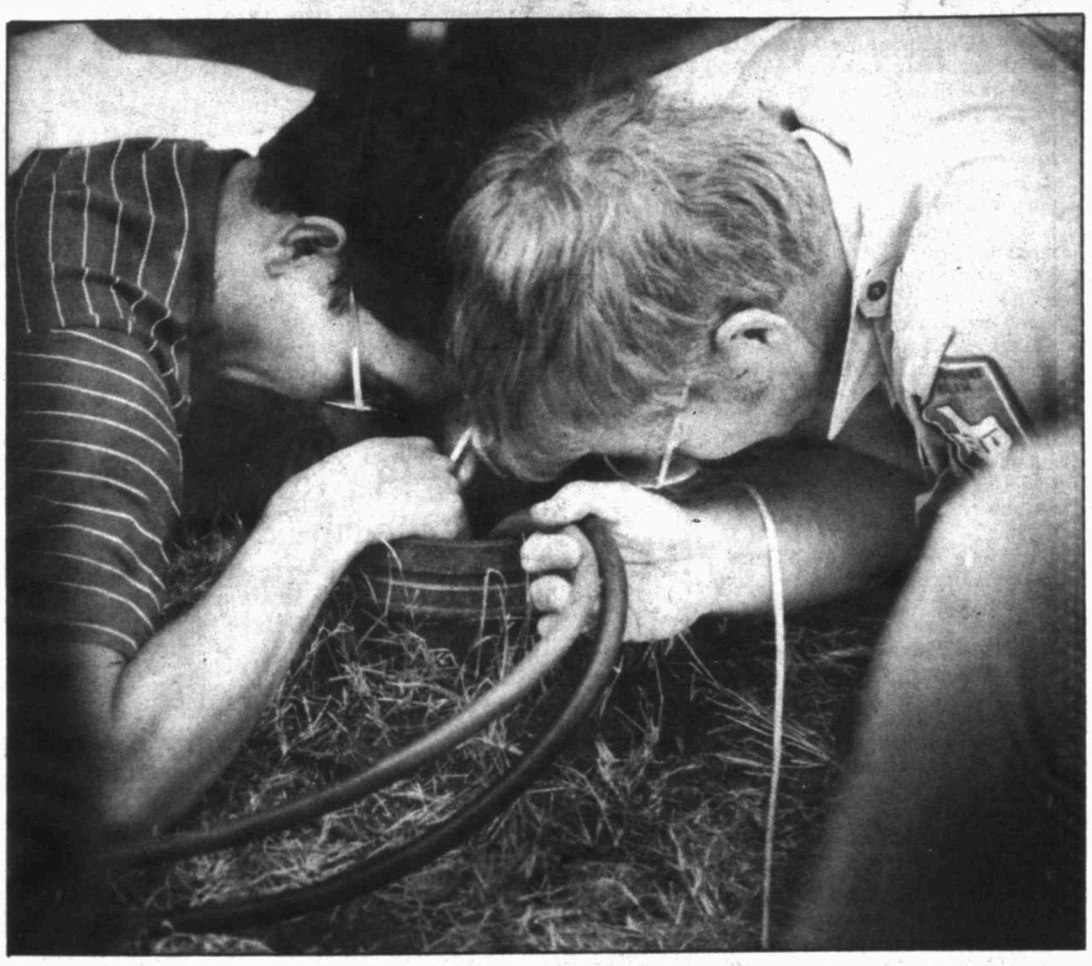

Court records show the McClures spent at least $80,000 of the money sent directly to them. Much of that money was used to start a tractor service company, which failed, the records show.

Jessica will inherit a trust fund approaching $1 million from donations throughout the world on March 26, 2011, — her 25th birthday. The trust, which is monitored by a local bank, can be used before then only for medical and school expenses.

"I'm hoping she'll be able to handle it at that age. She'll probably have a family of her own by then. I'm not worried though, she'll be two years older than I am now," Mrs. Porter said.

For now, Mrs. Porter is glad the attention surrounding the family has subsided.

"There were so many rumors, I hope they've been put to rest," she said. "I care for Jessica. I love her very much, and I don't want her to ever be hurt again."

Midland police and paramedics worked to maintain air flow to the toddler trapped in the tiny well.

RESCUE: Sense of pride, joy lingers

(From 1A)

Mrs. Sprague and her husband, Ray, shared their home with the media for the three days.

"We had the house full of reporters and TV people," she said. "People were running in and out to use the phone — they argued over the phone.

"I just let them have the house. They slept on the floor, they slept in chairs, they used the bathrooms, and we kept the coffee coming," she said. "But everyone was very nice."

Meanwhile, volunteers, determined to play a part in the rescue that instantly grabbed the world's attention, converged on 3309 Tanner Drive.

On the second day, two Hispanic men walked into the southwest Midland backyard following a 320-mile drive from San Antonio. They came in a motor home and, without hesitation, offered to help save the little girl.

"They, maybe more than anyone, symbolize what went on for those three days. Those two Mexican men were two of the hardest working men I ever saw," said Midland Fire Department Chief James Roberts. "Originally we were going to use firemen and policemen to tunnel through, but those guys weren't used to that sort of work."

During the next three days, the sentiment of the two men from San Antonio reverberated numerous times in the hearts of countless other volunteers.

"We would have never gotten her out of there if it weren't for those people," Roberts said. "They came from all walks of life — from laborers to Midland leaders. You really can't conceive how people will help."

Their task was to free Jessica from 22-feet underground, wedged awkwardly in a dark shaft.

The top four to five feet were cased with pipe, the rest was rockwall.

Eventually, workers decided to dig a 30-inch hole, five feet away from the well and 29 feet down.

"People with experience digging tunnels came from everywhere. One guy who came to help saw we had dug our tunnel only five feet away, said he didn't have enough room for his equipment and left," Roberts said.

"We were ad-libbing," Glasscock said. "No one had done that sort of thing before. Toward the end we had people stepping off airplanes and handing us drill bits."

Roberts believes the plight of the toddler and subsequent reports of her singing Winnie-the-Pooh songs helped add to the drama — creating a "natural" media event.

"The whole thing was set off when Cissy said she could hear her singing songs. That tugged at the hearts of people everywhere," he said.

Glasscock understood that feeling.

"Once you heard her voice, you just couldn't leave until the job was done. It was a real helpless feeling," he said. "You realized that there was a little girl who needed help and was depending on us.

"The volunteers were great. It was the true spirit of West Texas."

Roberts, however, doubted whether the volunteer effort would be repeated in a similar crisis today because "I'm not sure that people haven't changed."

"But people really cared then," Roberts said. "If we asked for a certain tool you had better get out of the way — there would be a stampede. We didn't know who they were, who owned what. . . . We didn't take names."

Cpl. Jim White, public information officer for the Police Department, had been working at the position for four months. He was in charge of continuously updating the media on the progress of the rescue effort.

"They were understanding. They had been up for a long time as well, and they were willing to take whatever we gave them," he said.

But a question from a New Mexico television reporter, following a 4:30 a.m. Friday morning update, sticks in his mind.

The workers had just drilled the hole underneath where she was trapped.

"I was giving the update, and he interrupted. He asked 'How do you know they didn't drill right through Jessica?' I said, 'That's the stupidest damn question I've ever heard,' " he said. "I was drained and pretty stressed out by then and . . . without anything to come in here and think we're a bunch of hayseeds really bothered me."

The reporter left without another word.

But the volunteers remained, most of them sticking it out until paramedic Steve Forbes finally brought Jessica to the surface Friday evening.

"I was happy, I was elated — naturally. I don't think my feelings were any different than anyone else's," he said.

Forbes, a nine-year fire department veteran, said the rescue couldn't have been delayed much longer.

"We were getting close to the critical point . . . for her dehydration and such," he said. "There were some times we didn't think we would reach her soon enough.

"After the first time we got to her but couldn't bring her up, I thought we might not be able to do it — especially after seeing what the diggers had to get through," he said. "It was an incredible relief."

"Once you heard her voice, you just couldn't leave until the job was done. It was a real helpless feeling. You realized that there was a little girl who needed help and was depending on us. The volunteers were great. It was the true spirit of West Texas.'

— Sgt. Andy Glasscock

And despite the lack of sleep, Glasscock said the rescuers never lost sight of their goal.

"I stayed there three days. We were tired, but we were on an adrenaline high as well," Glasscock said. "At the end, it was like we had been purged — it was a total collapse."

Glasscock then went home, only to field more questions from international reporters calling him at home.

Roberts thought the coverage was overplayed.

"We were simply doing our jobs, things we do everyday, only we don't get that kind of attention every day," he said.

Glasscock agreed.

"Basically it was a bunch of good old boys getting together with a job to do — we did it and now there is a little girl alive because of it," he said. "It was a definite high."

But the euphoria was diminished less than six months later when two groups of rescuers — one consisting of public employees, the other of volunteers — haggled over contract rights for the made-for-television movie.

Five years later, no one wanted to talk on the record about the dispute, preferring to put the episode to rest.

And while Midlanders celebrated for days and honored the volunteers with a parade shortly after the rescue, the fifth anniversary likely will pass with no fanfare.

Last month, Mayor J.D. Faircloth dropped the Community Spirit Award started by his predecessor in honor of the rescue.

Former mayor Carroll Thomas, who started the award in 1989 to recognize "the unity of a community" said the decision was ultimately in the hands of the City Council.

"If they want to cancel it, that's their prerogative," Thomas said. "But in the past I think it's been good for the town. I think it put Midland in a good light."

Faircloth said the decision was a matter of privacy for the family and said he believed Midland had benefitted at their expense.

"I didn't want to commercialize that family and their situation," he said. "I didn't think it was quite right to bring Jessica out every year and remind her that she fell in a well. It was best to dissolve it."

Thomas said he believed the recipients had separated the award from Jessica.

"It wasn't the Jessica McClure award. It was a community spirit award," he said.

"Am I disappointed? That's like asking someone if their baby is cute."

Midlanders recall city's unity

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff writer

The plight of Jessica McClure likely will never stray far from the hearts and minds of Midland residents, regardless of whether they were directly involved in the rescue effort.

The story, voted Texas' top news story of the 1980s, brought international attention to Midland — a city outsiders had largely associated with oil before October 1987.

Five years later, Midland residents recalled many different aspects of the "Baby Jessica" story, with "community unity" emerging as the predominant theme.

"I thought the town really rallied behind one of their children. It wasn't simply the volunteers, but also the people who volunteered to volunteer. So many were turned away because there was no room in that yard," said 46-year-old Leslie Burnett.

One man, who said he brought sandwiches to the volunteers, described the volunteer spirit as "selfless."

"It was the least I could do. I had no skills with digging or any of that. I bought some burgers at McDonalds, dropped them off and went back home," Matty Sosa said. "I wanted people to know that we were in it together — whether you were black, white, brown, yellow or red. It was a time of togetherness and prayer."

Others still marvel at the media attention the rescue received.

"I'll never forget how fast they all got here. By early the second day, there were giant satellites trucked in from California," said Benny Sosa, 32.

"People from London and Denmark, I think it was, were asking me about Midland. 'Did the spirit of the community surprise me?' and questions like that," said Roger Braun, 34. "Heck, I was just a guy trying to get a look at what was happening. I told them I wasn't a good person to ask, but they didn't care. Everyone wanted the story."

Jon Dawson, who recently moved from Maine, simply told friends there that he was moving to the town with "baby Jessica and the well."

"Of course they still didn't know exactly where I was going. But at least they could associate it with something," he said. "Personally, I still associate Midland with that TV movie."

Midland Fire Department Chief James Roberts delayed his Hawaiian vacation several days when Jessica fell in the well. He remembers being introduced to a jet full of applauding passengers after finally catching his flight.

"It was the most embarrassing thing. I don't like that sort of attention," he said. "It got to the point where I stopped telling people we met on the vacation where I was from.

"But I guess the best part was coming home for the ticker-tape parade. That was something else. The hometown celebration of Midlanders cheering other Midlanders was better than anything else that happened," he said.

Susan Jones, 42, also fondly recalls the parade.

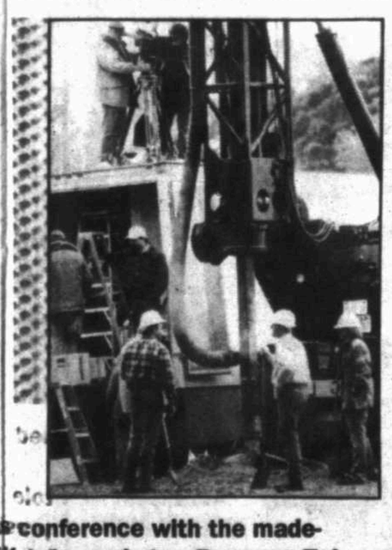

"That whole celebration was so much fun. You just couldn't help but be so proud of our little town," she said. "And Oprah . . . when she did the show, that was exciting too. But I didn't go."

The McClures held press conferences at the hospital, right, as the world watched for news of Jessica's recovery. Civic organizations and school groups poured out their feelings around the city and across the nation in the weeks and months following the rescue.

UT-OU revelry causes one death, 91 arrests

DALLAS (AP) — One man was killed and another critically wounded in gunfire that broke out among Texas-Oklahoma revelers in separate incidents in downtown Dallas on the eve of the teams' annual football game on the state fairgrounds, police say.

Arrests were about 50 percent higher than during last year's revelers, authorities added.

Each year, Oklahoma and Texas football fans gather Friday night on Commerce Street as part of a pre-game pep rally. Dallas Ofc. Sandra Ortega DeKing said there were 91 arrests by 1:45 a.m. Saturday stemming from the revelry, compared to 68 last year.

About 11:15 p.m. Friday, multiple shots rang out in Dealey Plaza after a car twice bumped the back of a pickup heading east on Commerce, witnesses told police.

According to the police report, two men were in the car and four men were in the pickup. After the bumps, the pickup driver got out to talk with the car's driver, the pickup's other three occupants told police.

There were heated words, and the lone passenger in the car pulled out a gun and began firing, police were told. Tom Justin Crump, 19, of Carrollton fell out of the pickup bed onto the pavement, shot in the chest, witnesses said.

Police arrived almost immediately and began cardiopulmonary resuscitation. The victim died later at Parkland Memorial Hospital, homicide detectives said.

Grand jury convicts three in tax scam

GALVESTON,Texas (AP) — A federal grand jury has convicted three people of participating in an electronic tax return filing scheme that fraudulently claimed more than $1.7 million in refunds.

Accountants John Berry, 40, and Ceola Haynes, 39, former owners of the now-defunct Tax Sense income tax service in Houston, each were convicted on one count of conspiracy to defraud the federal government and 35 counts of filing false tax returns.

Francis Nwanze, 33, a former security guard, was found guilty on one count of conspiracy to defraud the government and five counts of aiding and abetting others in filing false returns.

They face up to 10 years in prison and $250,000 fines on the conspiracy charges and up to five years in prison and $250,000 fines on each of the other counts.

The three were convicted Friday. Fifteen others yet to stand trial are accused of helping to file 750 fraudulent 1990 tax returns. Prosecutors say they claimed more than $1.7 million based on tax credits and other tax law provisions.

By filing the majority of the forms electronically, they were able to get quick refunds. Federal investigators said the scheme lasted from January to October 1991.

The group was indicted by a Houston federal grand jury early this year after Internal Revenue Service investigators detected a pattern of suspicious electronic returns filed through Tax Sense.

All the forms were from self-employed people running money-losing businesses that bought a lot of diesel fuel, which allowed them to claim tax credits.

Prosecutors charged that Berry and Haynes filed false returns using the names and Social Security numbers of Houston-area college students, public housing residents and other low-income people.

Nwanze and others recruited the people whose names were used, often getting personal information and signatures by telling them that they were entitled to aid under special government programs, said U.S. Department of Justice attorney Floyd Miller.

He added that each of the refunds were about $3,000, the maximum for an electronically filed claim.

An attorney for Berry and Haynes maintained the two were simply arranging for people to file their tax returns and were not aware of information on the documents.

Nwanze's attorney argued that there was no evidence Nwanze worked for Tax Sense.

Fischer wins, commands 7-3 lead

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Bobby Fischer defeated Boris Spassky on Saturday to take a commanding 7-3 lead in their $5 million chess rematch.

The game, the 17th in the match, had been postponed twice from Thursday after doctors who examined Spassky found him suffering from exhaustion.

Spassky, looking relaxed at the start of Saturday's contest, chose the Sicilian Defense, which he has used in two previous games. Fischer, playing white, varied from the earlier games by playing the closed system with his second move, Nc3.

The game's delay was the second in the match because of Spassky's health. He received a postponement of game 10 on Sept. 17 after complaining of kidney problems.

A kidney ailment forced Spassky, 55, to drop out of the last French championship.

The players' positions Saturday appeared roughly equal after a dozen moves, although some experts said it appeared Spassky had a slight edge with more room to maneuver.

But he appeared to go astray in the middle game, allowing Fischer's rook and bishop to become more active than his own rook and knight.

Spassky had to relinquish a pawn on move 35 and allow Fischer a passed d-pawn. Yugoslav grandmaster Svetozar Gligoric said he thought Fischer had "great winning chances" at that point.

Although Spassky found a way to avoid the mate, it was at the cost of a hopeless ending and he resigned rather than play it out.

Spassky launched a new salvo in the so-called battle of the visors, a curious sidelight to the match, by showing up Saturday with a black eyeshade.

Fischer had taken to wearing a black visor earlier in the match, and Spassky wore a white one when he beat Fischer in the 12th game. He had not worn one since.

In the current rematch, the first player to win 10 games claims the $3.35 million top prize, and the loser gets the remainder. Draws do not count, and there are no adjournments.

Fischer, 49, won the world championship 20 years ago by beating Spassky, a Russian who is now a French citizen.

The International Chess Federation stripped the American of the title in 1975 because he refused to defend it. The rematch is not sanctioned by the federation.

Wall hides slums, poverty from pope

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — When Pope John Paul II says Mass on Sunday before tens of thousands of Dominicans at the new multimillion-dollar Columbus Lighthouse, a concrete-and-stone wall will block nearby slums from his view.

The people living in unpainted concrete shanties behind the barrier — most of them descendants of Africans brought in chains to the New World — said Saturday that they have little to celebrate on the 500th anniversary of Christopher Columbus' first landing.

Many slum dwellers said the barrier — which they have dubbed the "Wall of Shame" — represents President Joaquin Balaguer's efforts to hide his nation's problems, including chronic high unemployment, during the pope's visit.

"It's a real insult to our barrio, to every one of us. We're like little pigs. They don't want anyone to see us," Leonides Rivas, 41, told visitors in her two-room house, where seven people live. "For us, this is not much of a celebration."

Up the bumpy dirt roadway that runs along the wall, there was more anger.

"The barrio hates this, but what can we do?" asked Ruth Elinor Sanchez de Modesto, 30. She spoke on the porch of her mother's home as she spooned scrambled eggs into the mouth of her 8-month-old boy, Hector Arnold.

"The whole world calls this a 'Wall of Shame,'" she said.

Less than 20 feet away, a soldier with a red armband saying "Quincentennial" stood guard on the top of the wall separating the people from the controversial monument to Columbus.

In this slum, nearly half of the people are without work, neighbors say. The government's national unemployment figure is 28 percent.

Balaguer has reduced inflation from 100 percent in 1990 to 5 percent this year under a International Monetary Fund austerity plan, but all of the more than 15 people interviewed complained that salaries have not matched price increases.

Search parties find parts of El Al engine

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — Officials lowered the death toll in the El Al plane crash to 80 from 120 on Saturday after others thought to have been killed called a missing-persons hot line, officials said.

Search parties recovered sections of the jet engine believed to have triggered the crash last Sunday, the Transport Ministry said. An engine caught fire minutes after takeoff, and the Boeing 747-200 cargo plane smashed into a 10-story apartment building.

Authorities intially believed that 250 people were killed. But they lowered the number to 120 on Friday and issued a list in hopes of reaching anyone who was incorrectly listed.

Rescuers have recovered the remains of 51 bodies from the rubble of the apartment complex, which was torn in two by the crash. But many more are believed to have perished without a trace in the inferno.

A memorial procession to the crash site will be held Sunday, followed by a service in town.

Pieces of the cowling — an engine's metal covering — and exhaust conduit of engine No. 3 were found in the Naarder Woods, about nine miles east of the crash site.

The woods are uninhabited and border the lake where the other starboard engine was retrieved largely intact earlier this week, according to the spokesman for the Transport Ministry, Hans Scholten.

The find is significant because fire in that engine probably set the disaster in motion, he said.

There is some speculation that an explosion in engine No. 3 may have shot fragments into the other starboard engine, causing it to malfunction and break off. Authorities believe both engines sheared off, but have not been able to find the inboard engine's turbines.

Scholten also said the Dutch Air Force reported "some considerable bird migration" up to an altitude of 6,000 feet at the time of the crash.

Heavy fighting, air attacks in North Bosnia kill 19

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Serb rebel aircraft reportedly bombed two northern Bosnian cities Saturday, killing 19 and wounding 34, in defiance of a U.N. ban on military flights over the former Yugoslav republic. Rebel leaders denied the report.

A U.N. peacekeeper from the Ukraine was killed and three other Ukrainians were wounded, one seriously, when their armored car struck a mine west of Sarajevo, U.N. spokesman Mik Magnusson said.

The incident brought the casualty toll among the 15,582-member U.N. force in former Yugoslavia to 17 dead and 243 wounded since March.

Heavy fighting was reported throughout Sarajevo and surrounding areas and in Bosnia's northern Sava River border region with Croatia, where heavily armed Serbs were attacking the few remaining areas controlled by the teetering Muslim-led government.

Bosnian and Croatian radio, quoting correspondents and defense officials, said Serb combat planes fired rockets and dropped bombs on the northern Bosnian cities of Gradacac and Brcko.

At least 19 people were killed and 34 wounded in Serbian air attacks on Gradacac.

Other civilians were hit in Serbian air strikes in Croatian-populated villages in northern Bosnia near the town of Brcko, said the reports on Sarajevo and Zabgreb radio. They said Bosnian forces had shot down one Serbian MiG fighter.

A Western reporter in Brcko said he had heard aircraft operating in the area, and a second Western reporter said he had seen aircraft flying over the Serbian-held town of Banja Luka, the site of a major Yugoslav army airfield controlled by Bosnian Serbs.

"Destruction is great, and more casualties are feared," Croatian radio said of the attacks on Gradacac.

Sarajevo television said the aircraft dropped cluster and incendiary bombs as well as tear gas. Bosnian radio reported military overflights at Maglaj, also in the north.

On Friday, the U.N. Security Council voted to ban military flights over Bosnia-Herzegovina, a move directed at the Serb rebels, who have about 40 warplanes. Bosnia's Muslims and Croats, loose allies in the fight against the Serbs, have no combat aircraft.

Radovan Karadzic, leader of the Bosnian Serbs, was quoted as denying rebel warplanes were aloft after the U.N. resolution.

"The U.N. resolution banning military flights is unnecessary because the Serbs have stopped all of them anyway," he told the Belgrade-based Tanjug news agency from Geneva.

Bosnian army Gen. Mustafa Hajrulahovic told The Associated Press in Sarajevo that reports he received confirmed the bombings. "How can they say we are making it up when anybody can see that our cities are destroyed?" he said.

U.N. spokeswoman Shannon Boyd in Zagreb, Croatia, said she could not confirm the report of violations of the so-called "no-fly zone."

Croatian radio claimed Bosnian Croats shot down a MiG-29, an advanced Soviet fighter jet, near Gradacac on Saturday.

The rebels are not known to have MiG-29s, meaning such planes likely would have to come from the Serb-dominated Yugoslav air force. There was no independent confirmation of that report.

More than 14,000 people have been killed in Bosnia since minority Serbs rebelled after the republic's Muslims and Croats voted on Feb. 29 to secede from what is left of Yugoslavia.

Fighting was intense in the capital on Saturday. The suburb of Stup was the scene of a major battle between government forces and the Serb rebels ringing the city. U.N. peacekeepers said fighting also was heavy along approaches to the airport.

The city's old town was hit by heavy artillery shells. Bosnian radio reported that Abdullah Celebic, Sarajevo's chief imam, or religious leader, was killed by a shell near the neighborhood.

Magnusson said the Ukrainian peacekeepers were driving through Stup en route to the airport and were trying to avoid a roadblock when they hit one or possibly two mines.

Well-armed Serb rebels control 70 percent of Bosnia and have been trying to take the capital during the 7-month-old civil war. The fighting has left the city without water and power and facing serious food shortages.

U.S. and other Western relief flights resumed a week ago after a near month-long suspension that followed the shooting down of an Italian relief plane Sept. 3.

Germany joined the airlift Saturday by sending a military Transall C-160 cargo jet equipped with a missile system that automatically fires a decoy if a missile is detected.

Britain also sent its first relief flight since the airlift resumed, and its Hercules transport completed the run between Zagreb and Sarajevo without incident. British officials plan two flights a day.

Since Thursday, U.N. troops have been escorting utility crews trying to restore water and electricity to Sarajevo.

Magnusson, the U.N. spokesman, said an electricity repair mission to the district of Buca Potok succeeded Friday, but another mission to replace water filters northeast of the city was abandoned after the local Serb commander threatened to fire on the workers.

In Moscow, Russian Prime Minister Andrei Kozyrev said the United Nations may ease trade sanctions on Serbia and Montenegro to help former Yugoslavia get through the winter. He spoke after a meeting with U.N. special envoy Cyrus Vance and European Community peace envoy Lord David Owen.

IRA says it will continue to bomb Britain

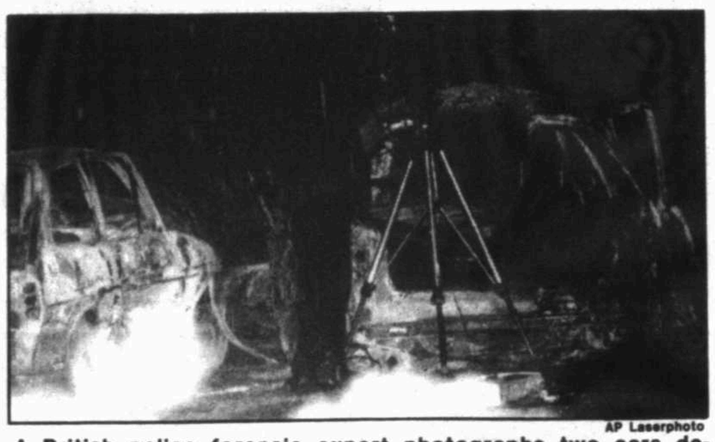

LONDON (AP) — A bomb exploded near a high-security police station Saturday morning, and the outlawed Irish Republican Army told authorities to expect more.

The bombing, the seventh in the city in four days, blew apart a telephone booth outside Paddington Green police station, where terrorist suspects are questioned.

A 23-year-old man was treated for minor head injuries at St. Mary's Hospital. "He was blown off his feet by the force of the blast. He hit his head as he went down," hospital spokesman Mike Blakemore said.

The man, whose name was not released, was the seventh person hurt since the wave of bombings began Wednesday.

Meanwhile in Belfast, police said two IRA gunmen killed an off-duty officer in a crowded downtown bar Saturday. Jim Douglas, 50, of the Royal Ulster Constabulary, was the 67th person and the second police officer to die in sectarian violence in Northern Ireland this year.

A British police forensic expert photographs two cars destroyed in a car bomb blast in the garage at the London Arnos Park underground station Friday.

The attacks in Britain and elsewhere are intended to pressure the government to relinquish control of Northern Ireland, and the IRA said more bombings were to come.

"The IRA remains capable and resolute in its determination to visit the consequences of the British occupation of (Northern) Ireland right back on Britain's own doorstep," the IRA said in a statement it issued to claim responsibility.

Commander George Churchill-Coleman, chief of Scotland Yard's Anti-Terrorist Squad, said the IRA was fighting a losing battle.

"The IRA have continued their war of attrition against Londoners this week but have failed to disrupt the way of life, despite some minor inconvenience," he said.

After the blast, the area around the nearby Edgware Road subway station, the police station and a hotel was cordoned off while police investigated. Subway and road traffic were slowed, but property damage was slight.

This week's blasts have caused minor harm, but in April, London experienced its worst IRA bombing in recent years when an explosion in the financial district killed three, injured 91 and damaged surrounding office blocks.

On Friday night, two small bombs went off in north London — one in the parking lot of a veteran's club and the other in the parking lot of the Arnos Grove subway station.

Protests kill one, injure 47

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli forces and Palestinians clashed throughout the occupied lands Saturday, leaving at least one Arab dead and 47 wounded.

An Israeli border policeman was also injured.

In the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, Palestinians demonstrated in solidarity with 3,000 Arab prisoners who are on their 14th day of a hunger strike to demand better conditions.

It was the second day of widespread clashes this week and was reminiscent of the early days of the Arab uprising, which began in December 1987. Israeli leaders have accused Palestinian underground leaders of using the prison hunger strike to revive the waning revolt against Israeli rule.

In Arab east Jerusalem, police used tear gas to disperse an illegal march by Palestinian women after a paramilitary border policeman shot an Arab man when he tried to take the officer's weapon, police said. The shooting sparked rioting and stone throwing, police spokesman Shmuel Ben-Ruby said. Four protesters were detained.

The army said its troops fatally shot a Palestinian and wounded two others during a raid on the West Bank village of Beita, 25 miles north of Jerusalem. The three were shot after they stoned the patrol and refused orders to halt, the army said.

The dead man was identified as Amar Ahmad Abdallah Hamayel, 23.

Hamayel's death brought to 961 the number of Palestinians killed by Israeli troops or civilians during the revolt. More than 650 Palestinians have been killed by fellow Arabs, most on suspicion of collaborating with Israel, and 101 Israelis have died in the violence.

In the occupied Gaza Strip, the army said its troops broke up a number of demonstrations attended by hundreds of Palestinians. It said protesters hurled cement blocks and iron bars at troops and that 40 Arabs, including a 13-year-old boy, were wounded by army gunfire.

An Israeli border policeman was seriously injured when his patrol was pelted with stones in the Gaza Strip, the army said.

Also Saturday, troops dispersed marchers in solidarity with the striking prisoners in the town of Jenin, wounding four people, Arab reports and the army said.

European trade compromises challenged, U.S. talks on hold

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — France stepped up its opposition Saturday to European Community compromises designed to end a longstanding impasse in negotiations to liberalize world trade.

"The gap is too great" between the EC and the United States, French Foreign Minister Roland Dumas said one day before EC and U.S. officials were to open high-level trade talks.

His statement echoed Friday's warning by Premier Pierre Beregovoy, who said he "would firmly oppose ... the conclusion of accords contrary to the interests of our agricultural sector."

The EC and the United States are at odds over agricultural subsidies. Washington insists that Europe make bigger cuts than it has agreed to implement.

Pressured by its farmers, the government in Paris maintained a hard line despite signs earlier in the week that a compromise with the United States was at hand.

The subsidy issue has blocked the conclusion of broader world trade talks that began six years ago, involving more than 100 countries, that were due to end in December 1990.

Held within the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, the talks dragged as the EC argued with key trade partners, notably the United States, over proposed European farm subsidy cuts.

Iraq releases American worker seized in Kuwait

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iraq on Saturday freed an American bomb disposal expert whose seizure by security police just inside Kuwait had raised tensions ahead of the U.S. presidential election.

U.N. officials in Baghdad and Kuwait said Chad Hall was turned over in the Iraqi capital to the chief liaison officer of the U.N. Iraq-Kuwait Observer Mission, Col. Oleg Ovetchkin, at 3:20 p.m.

"He's in good health," Abdul-Latif Khabbaj, a spokesman for the U.N. in Kuwait, told The Associated Press.

The 50-year-old American was to be flown Sunday to the U.N. observers' headquarters in the Kuwaiti port of Umm Qasr for a medical examination, Kabbaj said.

He would then be flown to the Kuwaiti capital and turned over to U.S. Ambassador Edward Gnehm, Jr., the spokesman said.

Hall's 51-year-old brother, Gerald, who works for Bechtel Co. in Kuwait, called the announcement of his release "the best news I've heard all day."

"I've been concerned and worried about him, but with him in U.N. hands I know that he is going to be home," Gerald Hall said. "The main thing is that we got him out of there and they are not going to make any big deal out of it."

Hall's wife, two sons and other family live in Texas.

Hall's seizure on Thursday, coupled with Baghdad's unsuccessful attempts to delay U.N. weapons inspections until after the American presidential election on Nov. 3, had raised tension between Washington and Baghdad.

There had been speculation that President Saddam Hussein would choose the culminating days of the campaign to provoke Republican President Bush, who trails Democrat Bill Clinton in the polls.

But the Information Ministry in Baghdad announced Hall's release earlier in the day. The two-paragraph announcement was carefully worded to avoid an apology, while indirectly admitting that Hall's arrest was a mistake.

"Iraqi authorities had investigated the issue of Mr. Hall's arrest throughout the last 24 hours and concluded that certain confusion had led to his arrest by an Iraqi officer," said the statement, distributed in English to reporters in Baghdad.

Hall, a retired U.S. Army major, was taken at gunpoint by Iraqi security police after an argument over whether he and two Pakistani workers were working in Kuwait or Iraq.

The territory, part of a demilitarized zone, had belonged to Iraq until May, when a U.N. commission redefined the border following the Gulf War. Baghdad has refused to recognize the new boundary.

Hall was working in Kuwait for Environmental Health Research and Testing of Lexington, Ky., which is helping to clear hundreds of thousands of tons of munitions left over from the Gulf War.

The company's manager in Kuwait, Richard C. Posey, said Hall was about a mile south of the Iraq-Kuwait border when he was taken in full view of the U.N. observers who patrol the demilitarized zone.

The observers are banned under the terms of their deployment from acting as policemen, and they did not intervene.

Hall's associates in Kuwait, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the Iraqis put a gun to his head, ordered him into his car, then forced him to drive away with them.

The United States demanded his release Friday.

In the past, Baghdad has not always been aware of arrests by its forces along the disputed border. The area is not marked and has been the site of previous seizures of Westerners by the Iraqis and clashes as recent as this week between Kuwaiti and Iraqi police.

Americans seized in the area just after the Gulf War cease-fire in February 1991 were imprisoned anywhere from a few days to a month.

Hall's seizure further strained relations between Baghdad and Washington and came as the United Nations was considering an Iraqi request to put off weapons inspections scheduled for next week.

Texas sinks Sooners again

■ Gardere leads Longhorns to fourth-straight win over Oklahoma.

Associated Press

DALLAS — The Peter Gardere hex over Oklahoma held for a fourth straight year.

Gardere threw two touchdown passes Saturday and became the first quarterback in the 87-year history of the Texas-Oklahoma series to win four games, directing the Longhorns to a 34-24 victory over the No. 16 Sooners.

Gardere surpassed Bobby Layne's series record of 240 yards passing as the Longhorns of the Southwest Conference increased their record to 3-2. Oklahoma of the Big Eight Conference dropped to 3-2.

"It was just a great feeling to go 4-0 against Oklahoma," Gardere said. "I heard our fans yelling 'Four More Years' as I left the field and I heard the Oklahoma fans yelling 'Graduate, graduate.' I had to crack a smile at that."

The game marked the coaching debut of Texas' John Mackovic in the series while Oklahoma's Gary Gibbs dropped to 0-4.

"The emotion, action and enthusiasm in this game is unsurpassed," Mackovic said. "A coach shouldn't ever have to come into this game the first time without having been in it as a player or an assistant coach. I'm very proud of the way we played."

Gibbs was treated rudely by a few Oklahoma fans after the game. They poured soft drinks, ice and beer on him as he entered the tunnel to leave the field.

"The people who sit in the end zone and yell at me and throw beer on me I have no respect for those idiots," Gibbs said. "The people who hired me know the circumstances. ... We're not going to duplicate the heydays of the 1980s. We've got 71 or 72 players. ... It might go down to 60 after today."

On the game, Gibbs said, "Gardere and his offense

Clemens trade?

ARLINGTON — The Boston Red Sox, who finished last for the first time since 1932, are exploring the market to find out what Roger Clemens' value would be in a trade.

It appeared too early to tell if Boston would seriously consider a deal involving the three-time Cy Young Award winner. Rather, the Red Sox have realized they have to rebuild and are exploring all possibilities, sources said.

The Dallas Morning News reported Saturday that the Texas Rangers had talked to Boston about a trade involving Clemens and American League home run champion Juan Gonzalez.

Rangers managing general partner George W. Bush confirmed to the paper that the Rangers have contacted Boston about Clemens, but Bush did not say who would be traded away.

The Red Sox denied any deal was being discussed.

"It's a lot of baloney," spokesman Dick Bresciani said. "It's ridiculous. Roger Clemens isn't involved in any trade talks."

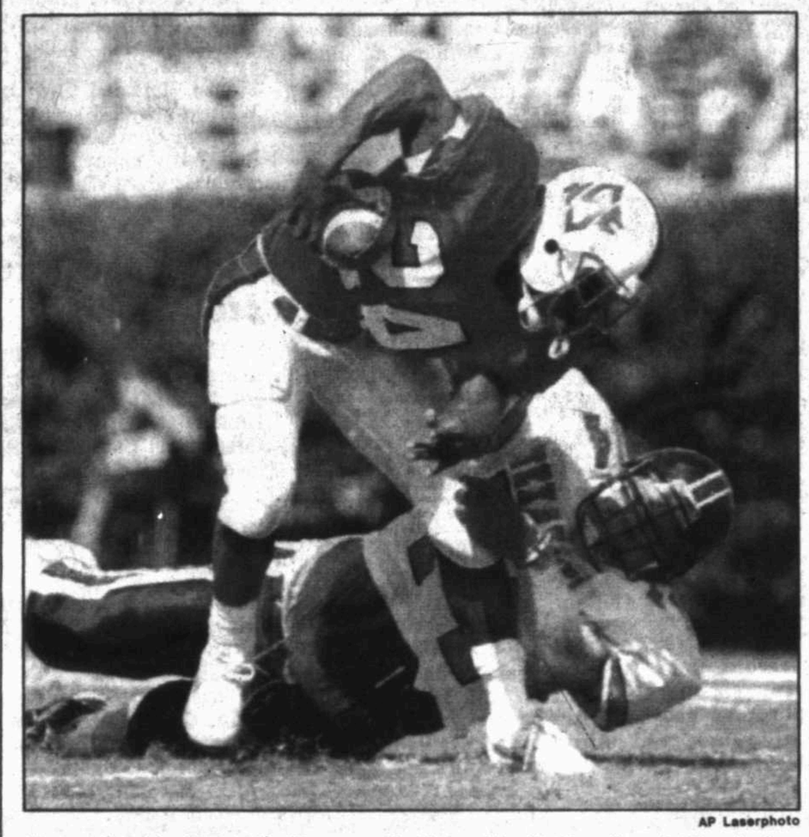

Clemens, 30, was 18-11 this season with a 2.41 ERA, becoming the first player to league the AL in ERA for three straight seasons since Lefty Grove. Clemens completed the first season of a four-year contract worth $21.5 million.

The Rangers, who obtained Jose Canseco from the Oakland Atletics on Aug. 31 for Ruben Sierra, Bobby Witt and Jeff Russell, are looking to add pitching.

Texas Tech's Steve Hoffman pulls down North Carolina tailback Anthony Barbour, but the Wolfpack triumphs 48-13 on Saturday over the Red Raiders.

Wolfpack pounds Texas Tech, 48-13

Associated Press

RALEIGH, N.C. — That upbeat feeling North Carolina State coach Dick Sheridan had been looking for all week finally emerged Saturday.

Geoff Bender threw two scoring passes in his first start of the season and Anthony Barbour gained a career-high 189 yards as No. 25 North Carolina State downed Texas Tech 48-13.

The season-high 544 yards of offense by the Wolfpack came a week after a last-second loss to No. 17 Georgia Tech.

"Earlier this week we weren't that emotional, but we were making no mental mistakes in practice," Bender said.

"Before the game, coach Sheridan told us to remember the feeling we had after the Georgia Tech game and try not to have that feeling after this game," said Barbour, who led the Wolfpack's 360-yard ground attack.

Bender, who started in place of injured Terry Jordan, threw touchdown passes of 19 and 10 yards before he was knocked from the game in the third quarter on a sideline hit. The sophomore completed 13 of 22 passes for 169 yards.

The Wolfpack (5-2) led 24-13 at halftime, but Bender fumbled the snap from center with 10:43 left in the third quarter and Texas Tech (2-4) recovered at the N.C. State 34. After a

OAKLAND, Calif. — A different field gave the AL playoffs a different feel on Saturday — a sloppy one.

Balls bounced all over the Coliseum and the bullpens took turns blowing it. There were errors everywhere: in the field, on the bases and by the coaches.

Somehow, Toronto hung on. In a game both teams seemed afraid to win, the Blue Jays beat the Oakland Athletics 7-5 before for a 2-1 edge in the series.

The whole thing took 3 hours, 40 minutes, making it the longest AL playoff game ever. And, there was a good reason — a beautiful day in the park turned into one, big mess as each club spent the afternoon kicking it, missing it and chasing it.

Braves take Game 4

Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — John Smoltz had a bad back, but there was nothing wrong with his right arm, his bat or his legs. Once again, nothing's going right for the Pittsburgh Pirates in the National League playoffs.

NLCS

Smoltz, pitching with an aching back, became the first NL pitcher to win his first four playoffs starts, and his bat played almost as big a role Saturday night in the Braves' 6-4 victory over Pittsburgh in Game 4 of the National League playoffs.

Still no offense from Barry Bonds, and, this time, no defense either for the Pirates. Their defense let them down at just the wrong time, so the Atlanta Braves are one victory away from being right back in the World Series.

The Braves can wrap up the series in Pittsburgh — for the second year in a row — on Sunday as Steve Avery, 3-0 in playoff starts against the Pirates, goes against Bob Walk.

"I like our chances — and I like my chances of not pitching again, not with Steve Avery and Tom Glavine ready," Smoltz said. "I like where we're at."

Yeah, one game from the World Series.

Only two teams — San Francisco in 1989 and Cincinnati in 1990 — have taken 3-1 leads since the NL playoffs went to a best-of-7 format in 1985, and both won their series. The Giants ousted the Chicago Cubs in five games and the Reds beat Pittsburgh in six. Only two AL teams, Kansas City in 1985 and Boston in 1986, have rallied from 3-1 down.

"I don't know what the statistics are, but this was a big win for us and huge loss for them," Smoltz said.

The Pirates beat themselves in this one. They had their ace, Doug Drabek, on the mound and led 3-2 after Orlando Merced's run-scoring double in the third. At least they led until the NL's best defense let them down at the turning point of their biggest game of the season.

Maybe the only thing better for Midland Lee's volleyball team than hosting league doormat San Angelo Saturday was that Odessa Permian had to play Abilene High.

Entering the day's play Lee, Midland High and Permian were all tied for third place and the final District 4-5A playoff spot. While Lee handily defeated San Angelo 15-1, 15-5, Permian fell to AHS 15-9, 15-6 and Midland High was idle.

That turn of events put the Lady Rebels in sole possession of third place with a 4-4 league mark (17-7 overall), ½-game ahead of MHS. AHS remained unbeaten in district at 8-0 while Abilene Cooper's 15-4, 15-5 win over Odessa High kept it in second place at 6-2.

"Wouldn't that be wonderful after the way we've had to struggle," Lee coach Anita Corder said before she knew the outcome of the AHS-Permian game. "I don't think the kids realized what a win could do for us today."

What it did, aside from breaking the standings log jam, was add to the building confidence the young Rebels are experiencing.

With only three seniors on the roster, Corder recently called up sophomore Emily Hayes. The left-handed Hayes responded by serving seven aces, five of Simple words offered by simple men, trying to cope with the loss of what they proclaim to be one of the most influential experiences of their lives.

As the 1972 Midland Lee football team gathers for its 20-year reunion this weekend in Midland, the team members are also swapping their favorite anecdotes about John O'Hara, the defensive and offensive line coach for that Lee team. O'Hara went on to a distinguished career in the college ranks, acting as an assistant at Baylor before becoming the head coach at Southwest Texas State.

with 64 seconds left Saturday to preserve No. 2 Miami's 17-14 victory over No. 7 Penn State.

The Hurricanes (5-0) extended the nation's longest winning streak to 23 and beat a Top 10 opponent for the second straight week. Along with last week's 19-16 victory over Florida State, the victory over Penn State (5-1) could boost Miami back to the No. 1 spot it held earlier this season.

Miami, helped by a rejuvenated running game, was leading 10-7 when Krein picked off a pass by John Sacca and returned it all the way with 14 seconds remaining in the third period. Sacca, who was pressured by Jessie Armstead, threw the ball right to Krein, who had a clear path to the end zone before a record crowd of 96,704 at Beaver Stadium.

said. "Normally, a club like Oakland doesn't make those errors, but some days are like that."

After two tight, textbook games indoors at the SkyDome that included only one error, the bright sun and green grass in California seemed like too much of a change of scenery for the teams.

A crowd of 46,911 was not a sellout, maybe because it was too nice a day. The fans in attendance saw the A's commit three errors and throw three wild pitches.

"I haven't seen a game like this since I've been here," Oakland reliever Kelly Downs said after giving up two unearned runs.

Toronto was charged with only one error, although more were possible.

"Sometimes, you make mistakes and get away with them," Oakland's Mark McGwire said. "Today, we didn't."

McGwire was involved in two key plays that could have turned the game in Oakland's favor. Instead, they went Toronto's way.

In the fourth inning, third base coach Rene Lachemann made an ill-advised move to have McGwire tag up at third base with the score 2-all. McGwire was thrown out easily, although he made it interesting by barreling into catcher Pat Borders.

"I just listened to him and he said to get going, so I left," McGwire said. "There was nothing left for me to do but to crash into him because I was a dead duck."

In the seventh, McGwire dived for Manuel Lee's two-out grounder down the first-base line. The ball skipped past McGwire's gold glove for a two-run triple that put Toronto ahead 5-2.

"I look at what you put into into the game," Oakland manager Tony La Russa said. "I didn't feel that any of our guys didn't put their best into it."

Roberto Alomar and Candy Maldonado hit early home runs that put Toronto ahead and pinned the loss on Ron Darling. Juan Guzman wound up with the win and Tom Henke gained his second save of the series.

The Blue Jays broke Oakland's six-game playoff winning streak at the Coliseum. Now, Toronto will try to take a bigger edge Sunday when Game 1 loser Jack Morris faces Bob Welch.

"Today was a real sloppy day for us, for whatever reason," Darling said.

Maldonado's solo homer in the fifth gave Toronto a 3-2 lead.

After Lee made it 5-2, his error helped Oakland score twice in the seventh.

In the eighth, both teams got a run. Second baseman Lance Blankenship's second error in two innings since entering the game enabled Toronto to make it 6-4.

"I was a little apprehensive approaching the ball," Blankenship said. "I haven't done that all year. I just booted the ball. That's just the way it goes, that's just the game."

Oakland's run in the eighth came on Ruben Sierra's single off a struggling Henke.

Joe Carter singled off Dennis Eckersley in the ninth, setting up an RBI single by Dave Winfield that Eckersley could not field cleanly.

Both teams made things happen on the bases. Although it worked out for Toronto, it didn't turn out so well for Oakland.

Winfield opened the Toronto second by reaching on a hard grounder that took a bad hop, a play scored an error on third baseman Carney Lansford. John Olerud followed with a grounder to McGwire, who tagged the bag and made a good throw to second.

gle — he went 4 for 5 — and Jeff Blauser singled him to second. Earlier, Blauser's throwing error had scored the tying run in the second after Atlanta had opened a 2-0 lead against Drabek in the top of the inning.

Drabek, pitching on three days' rest for the first time since Sept. 17, 1989, struck out Terry Pendleton, but David Justice lined an RBI single to right that made it 3-3.

Drabek had pitched into at least the seventh in all 14 of his starts at home this season, but he was visibly tiring after throwing 82 pitches and manager Jim Leyland lifted him for left-hander Randy Tomlin. Braves manager Bobby Cox countered by pinch-hitting Brian Hunter for Sid Bream.

With Blauser on third and Justice on first, Hunter grounded directly to King, who didn't hesitate to throw home. But the throw was well in front of the plate and by the time catcher Mike LaValliere could turn around and swipe at the runner, Blauser stepped over him to score the go-ahead run.

Pittsburgh's spotty relief pitching was its biggest problem down the stretch, and this game was no exception.

The Braves, who remained supremely confident of taking the series even after rookie knuckleballer Tim Wakefield beat them 3-2 Friday, knew they had the Pirates in trouble now that they were into the bullpen. Even Smoltz knew it.

Smoltz, a .160 hitter during the season, had singled in the Braves' first run, and he singled again with two outs and none on in the sixth. With Tomlin paying little attention to him, Smoltz stole second.

"That created a big inning for us," Smoltz said. "I've let those opportunities go before and cost myself some games. That was a huge inning and created two more runs."

Given this unexpected gift, the Braves capitalized as Smoltz came home on Nixon's single, his record-tying fifth straight hit over two games. Danny Cox replaced Tomlin and gave up Blauser's second straight hit, a run-scoring single that pushed it to 6-3.

"Hey, I told him to leave the base stealing to me," said Nixon, who was only 2 for 27 against Drabek before getting three straight hits off him. "My job is to get on and create opportunities for us. I've done that pretty well against Pittsburgh."

That run proved important when Alex Cole walked and scored on Andy Van Slyke's RBI double in the seventh, the Pirates' only hit after the third inning. That chased Smoltz, who threw 118 pitches over 6 1-3 innings.

Flanker sets school record, learns of stepbrother's shooting death

Associated Press

OXFORD, Ohio — Terrance McMillan set a school record, then discovered the heart-wrenching news that his stepbrother had been shot to death.

McMillan, a redshirt freshman flanker for Central Michigan, caught a school-record 12 passes for 116 yards in the Chippewas' 16-13 loss to Miami of Ohio. His touchdown catch with 3:01 left to play nearly won the game.

Afterwards, McMillan learned his stepbrother, Brian Mannie, 24, had been shot to death early Saturday in Saginaw, Mich. No one was in custody late Saturday, police said.

"This game didn't mean a thing," said Chippewas coach Herb Deromedi, who kept McMillan off-limits to the press after the game.

"It's just too bad we didn't win the game for him," said quarterback Joe Youngblood, who threw a 9-yard TD pass to McMillan. "He just broke a record and then he's told this. It's terrible."

Razorbacks stun No. 4 Tennessee, 25-24

Largest regular-season crowd in NCAA history sees Michigan beat Spartans

Associated Press

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — Todd Wright kicked a 41-yard field goal with two seconds left Saturday to give Arkansas the biggest upset of the season, a 25-24 win over previously unbeaten No. 4 Tennessee.

Wright's kick and Orlando Watters' 71-yard punt return rallied Arkansas from an eight-point deficit with less than three minutes to play.

The Razorbacks (2-4 overall, 2-2 in the Southeastern Conference) trailed 24-16 when they forced the Volunteers (5-1, 3-1) to punt. Watters returned the kick 71 yards for a TD with 2:28 remaining, but Arkansas quarterback Barry Lunney Jr. was sacked on a 2-point conversion attempt and the Vols held a 24-22 lead.

Lunney, a true freshman making his first start, calmly drove the Razorbacks to the Volunteer 24 and Wright, after waiting through three timeouts, nailed the winning kick.

The key play in the final drive came on third-and-16 from the Razorback 42. Lunney fired a high pass over the middle and Tracy Caldwell made a brilliant leaping catch for the first down at the Vol 36.

No. 1 Washington 35, No. 24 California 16

SEATTLE — Sophomore Napoleon Kaufman ran for 208 yards and two touchdowns in his first career start as the top-ranked Huskies overcame a sluggish first half to beat Cal.

It was Washington's 19th consecutive victory over three seasons and its 12th win in a row against the Golden Bears.

Washington (5-0, 3-0 in the Pacific-10 Conference) ruined the return to Husky Stadium of its former offensive coordinator, Keith Gilbertson, now head coach for Cal (3-2, 1-1).

With Washington's top two tailbacks — Jay Barry and Beno Bryant — ailing, Kaufman made the first start of his career and was the outstanding player on the field. He scored on a 36-yard run in the first quarter and a 14-yard run in the third quarter.

No. 3 Michigan 35, Michigan St. 10

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Tyrone Wheatley ran for 172 yards and two touchdowns to lift Michigan over Michigan State in front of the largest regular season crowd in NCAA history.

The game drew 106,788 fans at Michigan Stadium, 533 more than saw Ohio State play Michigan at Ann Arbor in 1979.

Wheatley scored on runs of 10 and 23 yards, helping overcome a subpar performance by Elvis Grbac, who completed only 11 of 19 passes for 111 yards with two interceptions. It was Grbac's second start after returning from an ankle injury that kept him out two games.

No 6 Alabama 37, Tulane 0

NEW ORLEANS — Derrick Lassic ran for 188 yards and a touchdown and Michael Procter kicked three field goals to keep Alabama undefeated.

Alabama did not reach the end zone against a tough Tulane defense until late in the third quarter when Lassic, who had 20 carries on the night, charged in from the 5-yard line.

Alabama scored three touchdowns in the fourth quarter on runs by Kevin Lee, Sherman Williams and Chris Anderson.

The victory left Alabama 6-0, while Tulane fell to 3-2.

Alabama led only 6-0 at the half — and almost trailed. A 21-yard rushing touchdown by Tulane's Andy Abramowicz as time ran out was ruled no good because Abramowicz's knee hit the turf behind the line of scrimmage.

No. 8 Florida St. 36, North Carolina 13

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Tailback Sean Jackson scored one touchdown and his 46-yard option pass set up another, leading Florida State over North Carolina.

Corey Sawyer, who leads the ACC in interceptions and punt returns, added a 74-yard touchdown on a punt return for the Seminoles (5-1 overall, 5-0 ACC).

The win stopped a three-year string that saw Florida State lose its only games of the season in succession. The Seminoles were beaten 19-16 by No. 2 Miami last week.

Florida State managed despite a subpar performance from Charlie Ward, the ACC's total offense leader, and placekicker Dan Mowrey.

Ward was benched much of the second period after hitting just two of his first eight passes and throwing the first of two interceptions in the game. He has been intercepted 13 times this season.

No. 25 Clemson 29, No. 10 Virginia 28

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. — Nelson Welch's 32-yard field goal with 55 seconds left capped Clemson's comeback from a 28-point deficit.

Welch's kick enabled the Tigers (3-2 overall, 1-2 Atlantic Coast Conference) to avoid their first-ever 0-3 start in the league. Clemson, winner of an unprecedented 13 ACC titles, defeated Virginia for the 30th time in 32 games.

Virginia (5-1, 4-1) lost for the first time in its last 11 regular-season games.

The Cavaliers built a 28-0 lead on four first-half touchdown passes by Bobby Goodman. But Virginia couldn't contain Clemson's running game in the second half, when the Tigers got 288 of their 402 yards on the ground.

A 27-yard touchdown run by Rudy Harris with 5:31 left made it 28-26. Clemson was called for illegal procedure on the conversion run attempt, putting the ball back on the 8. Howard Hall was pulled down at the 4 by Chris Slade.

It was the first meeting ever between the Bulldogs and Southern, an NCAA Division I-AA national champion four times in the last seven years.

The Eagles stunned the crowd of 85,434 by taking a 7-0 lead less than three minutes into the game.

No. 13 Notre Dame 52, Pitt 21

PITTSBURGH — Rick Mirer broke Joe Theismann's school record for career touchdown passes and Jerome Bettis rushed for three touchdowns to lead Notre Dame past struggling Pittsburgh.

The Fighting Irish (4-1-1), who turned the football over five times in a 33-16 loss to Stanford one week ago, had no turnovers and little trouble moving the ball against Pitt (2-4). Notre Dame rolled up 517 yards of total offense.

Mirer passed for two touchdowns, giving him 33 for his career and breaking Theismann's record of 31. He was on target most of the night, completing 9 of 16 passes for 182 yards. Reserve receiver Derrick Mayes caught two touchdowns. Bettis and fellow running backs Lee Becton and Reggie Brooks gained big chunks of yardage virtually every time they touched the ball. Bettis carried 13 times for 94 yards, and notched Notre Dame's first score with an 8-yard TD run off left tackle.

LINCOLN, Neb. — Mike Grant passed for two touchdowns and ran for another before halftime to lead Nebraska over outmanned Oklahoma State in the Big Eight Conference opener for both teams.

Nebraska coach Tom Osborne remained unbeaten in 20 games against Oklahoma State (2-3, 0-1).

The Cornhuskers were in control from the kickoff, driving 81 yards into a wind gusting to 30 mph with Grant tossing a 5-yard pass to tight end William Washington to cap the opening possession.

HURRICANES: Interception return puts end to Penn State's chances

(From 1B)

It was the first interception thrown by a Penn State quarterback in 147 throws this season, including 99 by Sacca.

Penn State cut it to 17-14 on a 14-yard TD pass from Sacca to O.J. McDuffie with 6:17 left in the game and then got the ball back after stopping Miami with the aid of a poor call that negated a Hurricanes' first down.

But the Lions were forced to punt, and didn't get the ball back again until 1:38 was left. White stopped Penn State's last drive by picking off Sacca's pass from his own end zone, and Miami ran out the clock.

Miami, which had been averaging only 82 rushing yards per game, gained 138 on the ground against Penn State's tough defense. Donnell Bennett carried 15 times for a career-best 79 yards and one touchdown, and Larry Jones gained 69 yards on 17 carries.

The effective ground game made up for a poor performance by Miami quarterback Gino Torretta, who completed only 11 of 31 passes for 80 yards.

Sacca, whose brother Tony quarterbacked Penn State in last year's 26-20 loss to Miami, was 17 of 31 for 170 yards with two interceptions.

The loss snapped Penn State's 11-game winning streak and also ended a 14-game winning streak at home.

Penn State had a chance to score on its first possession, but Craig Fayak's 48-yard field goal attempt was blocked by Dexter Seigler.

Miami then marched 51 yards in nine plays and scored on Bennett's 10-yard run. Bennett rushed for 43 yards on seven carries during the drive — three yards more than he had ever gained in an entire game.

Cobb's 210 yards lead Rice, 28-13

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Rice's passing game was grounded Saturday, but it didn't matter.

Trevor Cobb carried 33 times for 210 yards and two touchdowns and quarterback Bert Emanuel ran for two more scores, leading the Owls to a 28-13 Southwest Conference victory over Southern Methodist Saturday.

"It opened up from the beginning and it set the tempo for the rest of the game," Cobb said. "Our plan was to mix it up. It just so happened we were executing so well with our running game that that's what we went with."

The Owls attacked SMU's depleted defense, weakened by the loss of six players who were suspended for reselling textbooks purchased with scholarship money. Four offensive players, including leading rusher Kevin Shepard, also sat out the game on suspensions.

Jeff Sowells had two interceptions and Deric Rutherford had a fumble recovery and two sacks to lead the Rice defenders.

"We came out pretty intense," Rutherford said. "We didn't expect them to run as much as they did but we were prepared for everything. The key coming in was to get turnovers."

Rice stopped SMU drives at its 5, 11 and 12 yard lines.

"We had the ball inside the 15 three times and came away with no points," SMU coach Tom Rossley said. "We were either a few inches short or fumbled the ball away."

Rice (2-3) evened its SWC record at 1-1 by beating SMU for the fourth straight year. The Mustangs dropped to 3-3 and 1-2.

SMU quarterback Dan Freiburger had a career day, completing 36 of 55 pawsses for 393 yards and two touchdowns, but turnovers negated his effort.

"We moved the ball all day, we just killed ourselves with a couple of turnovers inside the 10," Freiburger said. "We were inside the 20 three times and didn't score."

Emanuel couldn't ignite Rice's passing game, but the Owls didn't need it. Cobb had his sixth 200-yard performance and Emanuel had more than 100 yards for the second straight week.

TEXAS: Gardere good on 18 of 32

played a very fine game. The way he played today didn't surprise us."

Gardere said it was "ridiculous" the way some Oklahoma fans treated Gibbs.

"You can't treat somebody like that just because you go 0-4 against a single team," he said.

Gardere hit 18 of 32 passes for 274 yards and Phil Brown scored on touchdown runs of 13 and 3 yards.

Gardere threw two touchdown passes in the first half as the 11-point underdog Longhorns built a 17-10 lead before another sellout crowd of 75,587 in the Cotton Bowl.

"We did a good job of protecting Peter and I thought we put a good rush on Gundy," Mackovic said. "Gundy deserves a lot of credit. He and Corey Warren are tremendous players. I thought Peter was very poised."

The Sooners and Longhorns exchanged quick-strike touchdowns in the first period with Oklahoma going 80 yards and Texas retaliating with a 91-yard drive.

Cale Gundy hit passes of 37 and 21 yards before he found freshman P.J. Mills with a payoff touchdown strike from nine yards out on Oklahoma's first possession.

Gardere threw a 34-yard pass to Darrick Duke before he found Justin McLemore with a 25-yard touchdown pass.

"Oklahoma was offsides on the play and kind of relaxed and Justin got wide open," Gardere said.

Texas' Scott Szeredy hit a 25-yard field goal at the start of the second period but it was countered by Scott Blanton's career long 51-yarder which rode an 18 mph wind.

Gardere took advantage of a roughing the punter penalty against Tink Collings and a personal foul penalty to take Texas to a go-ahead touchdown just before halftime.

On second-and-20 from the Oklahoma 31, Gardere scrambled and found Jason Burleson wide open just before crossing the line of scrimmage. Burleson made a diving, fingertip catch for the touchdown.

"I was just inches away from being over the line of scrimmage," Gardere said. "I got the ball away and Jason made a tremendous catch. It was a big, big play."

Texas put the game away with 17 points in the second half as Gardere switched gears and went to his running game. Brown's 13-yard run was the first time Texas had scored on the ground against Oklahoma since 1983.

After Szeredy kicked his second field goal set up by passes of 31 and 20 yards by Gardere, the Longhorns took advantage of a fumbled punt by OU's Dewell Brewer, to score again.

Gardere threw an 18-yard pass to Brown to position the 'Horns for Brown's second touchdown run with 14:27 left in the game.

Gundy found his touch again late in the fourth period with a 17-yard touchdown pass to Warren, who had a school record 187 yards receiving on nine catches.

Sub quarterback Steve Collins also had a 25-yard scoring pass to Earnest Williams for Oklahoma late in the game.

first down, the Red Raiders opted to throw on fourth and three from the 10, but the pass was broken up in the end zone.

"They must of felt pretty good about making it and if they didn't they had us pinned down there pretty deep," Sheridan said. "I certainly would never second-guess another coach's call. They were moving the football and they felt they had a pretty good play for the situation."

N.C. State then drove 90 yards in 10 plays to go up 31-13. Barbour gained 36 yards on the march, which was aided by two personal fouls against Texas Tech.

Bender capped the Wolfpack's longest drive of the season with a 10-yard scoring pass to Ray Griffis on third down with 4:53 left in the period.

"After that (the fourth down play) we sort of went downhill," said Texas Tech coach Spike Dykes.

Texas Tech fumbled the ensuing kickoff and Drea Major recovered at the Red Raiders 31. Bender was knocked from the game on the next pass incompletion with a left shoulder injury. Then Jordan, who wasn't supposed to play because of a sprained left foot, entered the game.

After four runs by Barbour netted 16 yards, Jordan's first completion was a 15-yard scoring pass to Aubrey Shaw. Shaw also scored on a 3-yard run.

Jordan had completed 41 of his last 49 passes entering the game.

Barbour, who carried a career-high 25 times, capped the scoring with a 68-yard run with 10:53 left. The senior, who had the fourth 100-yard game of his career, broke his previous rushing high of 171 set against Maryland last season.

"We had been running the same play all game and it was working," Barbour said of his long scoring run. "I had been one man from breaking it. I got lucky and stepped through there and I was in the secondary."

N.C. State is 24-0-1 under Sheridan in games in which it rushes for 200 yards.

"They picked our defense apart and they made a lot of plays offensively," said Dykes. "It was just an old country tail-kicking."

Bears stop Horned Frogs, 41-20

Associated Press

FORT WORTH — Defensive back Keith Caldwell picked up a fumble and returned it 86 yards for a touchdown, sparking Baylor to a 41-20 victory over Texas Christian University Saturday night.

Caldwell's big play came with 1:10 left in the third quarter the Frogs threatening to erase a 20-17 deficit with a first-and-goal at the Baylor 9-yard line.

The Bears evened their record at 3-3, including 2-1 in the Southwest Conference. TCU fell to 1-3-1 and 0-2.

Fullback Robert Strait added a 6-yard TD run early in the fourth quarter to put the game out of reach, 34-17.

Baylor quarterback J.J. Joe completed 16 of 25 passes for three touchdowns, but threw three interceptions to keep the Frogs in the game until late in the third quarter.

The Horned Frogs turned three interceptions into 17 points to take a 17-13 halftime lead.

Rico Wesley intercepted a Joe pass at the 26 and returned it to the TCU 46. A personal foul added another 15 yards and the Frogs took over at the Baylor 39.

Four plays later, quarterback Leon Clay scored on a 21-yard keeper to make it 7-7.

Joe led the Bears on a 68-yard, nine-play drive, which culminated with a 23-yard scoring pass to Melvin Bonner. The snap was high and the Bears missed the extra point to leave the game 13-7.

REUNION: '72 Rebels posted 8-2 mark

(From 1B)

In his most recent job, as an assistant at Iowa, he was with his coworkers on a staff retreat when he died of a heart attack. O'Hara was 48.

For former Rebels like Ben Carmona, who now lives in Humble, there was a time of grieving — "I sat there in my lounger and cried when I heard," he said — but this weekend was a time to revel in what O'Hara left with his former legions.

"He was probably one of the most positive influences on my life as far as athletics are concerned. He was a very encouraging person, a strong Christian man and I remember him very clearly as being one of the big influences on my life," sat Pat Lyons, Lee's quarterback in 1972 who went on to play college football at Louisiana State.

Such are the sentiments of 35 some-odd men fast approaching the age of 40. They decided to donate a plaque, emblazoned with the aforementioned words, to their former high school. Lee officials graciously accepted it at halftime of Friday night's Odessa High-Lee game, and it will hang by the front door of the Lee football fieldhouse for all to see.

"When we first began talking about having a team reunion, the '72 team is still real close. We started calling people to see if they could come back to Midland. One of the first things they all said was 'did you hear about Coach O'Hara.' We all decided it would be very fitting to try to honor his memory," said Rusty Shaw, a slot back for the '72 Rebels who now lives in Houston.

"As a back I wasn't directly coached by him, but he was always real supportive and interested in the kids who went through the system."

The 1972 Rebels posted an 8-2 record, losing to Abilene Cooper 7-3 and eventual state champion Odessa Permian 14-13 when a two-point Lee conversion was called back on a disputed offsides penalty. In a time when only the district champion went to the playoffs, the Rebels sat at home after 10 games.

The memories are still vivid.

"I think one of the problems with the Cooper game that year was losing the sophomore on the practice field. He got struck by lightning. Mario Morales. It just shook everybody up.

"We ran a trap play to my side, a tackle trap. We ran it one time and got 35 yards but we never ran it again. Everybody was kind of out of it that whole week after that happened," said Bruce Peeler, who went on to play under O'Hara in college at Baylor.

Peeler and his teammates still bristle over the loss to Permian — "We had more on the All-District team than Permian and they won state," Peeler said — but talk at the reunion still circled back to O'Hara.

"Everybody wanted to do something. We needed to do something. I think that's why we have as good attendance here as we did, it was the respect that everybody had for O'Hara," Peeler said. "I worked under a lot of coaches in high school and college both, and I never worked under one that was anything like him.

"He didn't change when he went into the college ranks. He was still the most respected guy on the staff as far I was concerned. It was quite a loss."

Gary Baggs, one of 16 members of that Lee team that went on to play college football, said his high school career was lengthened by O'Hara.

"I Missed my junior year because of a knee injury, and I would not have played my senior year were it not for him. I mean, you've got 30-something guys here pitching in to get him a plaque, still thinking about him 20 years later," said Baggs, a defensive tackle.

"Coach O'Hara was one of those people that was low key but he would keep you focused on your goal. And I know that when every one of us heard he had died, we cried. To a lot of us he was a father figure. He has a focus on life that was beyond just playing football games," said Andy Taylor, the anchor of the '72 offensive line at center.

It's statements like that that seem to restore some of the glitter high school football has lost over the years. Because when a man like O'Hara has that kind of effect on the players he coaches, he must have done something right.

Three fourth-quarter TDs by Rams sink UTEP, 42-24

Associated Press

FORT COLLINS, Colo. — Anthoney Hill threw four touchdown passes, including three to record-setting receiver Greg Primus, and Colorado State scored on four straight second-half possessions to defeat Texas-El Paso 42-24 on Saturday.

The Rams took control with three TDs in the final period, thanks to tailback Leonice Brown, who had runs of 24, 19, 29 and 60 yards in the quarter en route to 178 yards and his third 100-yard rushing performance in a row.

Colorado State, winning at home for the first time since Sept. 28, 1991, to snap a four-game losing streak at Hughes Stadium, went to 2-4 overall and 1-2 in the Western Athletic Conference with 547 yards of offense.

NW Louisiana 37, North Texas 34

DENTON — Jeff Powell's 36-yard field goal with nine seconds remaining lifted Northwestern State over North Texas.

The kick capped the Demons' 17-point fourth quarter in which they overcame a 24-20 deficit. Quarterback Brad Brown ran for touchdowns of 2 and 18 yards in the period.

SW Texas St. 17, SF Austin 14

SAN MARCOS — Linebacker John Douglass forced a fumble late in the fourth quarter, helping Southwest Texas salvage a victory over Stephen F. Austin.

The Lumberjacks took over at their own 41 with 2:58 remaining and drove to the Southwest Texas 40. But Douglass stripped the ball from Bobcats' quarterback Mike Goddard on a first down play to snuff out the threat.

Abilene Christian 35 Cent. Oklahoma 31

EDMOND, Okla. — Lance Landry completed 16 of 34 passes for 253 yards and two touchdowns as Abilene Christian defeated Central Oklahoma 35-31 in Lone Star Conference play.

Central Oklahoma (4-2, 0-2) was hampered by eight turnovers, including five interceptions thrown by Mark Reiland.

Texas Colleges

Hardin Simmons 48, McMurry 16

ABILENE — Matt Carroll rushed for 154 yards and three touchdowns and Hardin-Simmons returned a blocked punt for a touchdown as the Cowboys routed crosstown rival McMurry.

Carroll's three touchdowns all came in the first quarter on runs of 8, 6 and 1 yard to give the Cowboys (4-1, 1-1 in the Texas Intercollegiate Athletic Association) a commanding 21-0 lead.

W. Texas St. 21, Prairie View 15

CANYON — Duane Joubert returned a kickoff 94 yards for a touchdown and West Texas State hung on to beat Prairie View in a battle of winless teams.

Codie Scott threw a 13-yard touchdown pass to Jeff Bridges and Jeff Myers added a 12-yard run as West Texas State (1-4) built a 21-7 halftime lead.

Sam Houston 19, Nicholls St. 19

THIBODAUX, La. — Charles Oliver's 5-yard touchdown run tied the score with 4:26 remaining, but Sam Houston State had to settle for a standoff when Nicholls State's Michael Morris blocked the Bearkats' conversion attempt.

The outcome left Sam Houston at 3-1-1 overall and 0-0 1 in the Southland Conference, Nicholls State at 0-5 and 0-4.

Howard Payne 53, Sul Ross State 35

ALPINE — Scott Lichner ran for two touchdowns and threw two touchdowns, leading Howard Payne past Sul Ross State.

Lichner's TD runs were from three yards out and his touchdown passes covered 58 and 11 yards.

Howard Payne, which led 31-21 at halftime, improved to 5-2 overall and 2-0 in the Texas Intercollegiate Athletic Association. Sul Ross State fell to 1-4 and 0-2.

Austin Col. 30, Colorado Col. 9

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. — Barrett Jenkins caught three touchdown passes as Austin College beat Colorado College.

The win gave Austin a 5-1 record, while Colorado College fell to 2-2 on the year.

Eastern N.M. 26, Angelo St. 25

SAN ANGELO — Gerald Dockery returned a punt 62 yards for a score with 2:45 remaining, lifting Eastern New Mexico past Angelo State for the Greyhounds third straight one-point victory over the Rams.

Angelo State (2-3 overall and 0-1 in the Lone Star Conference) had rallied from a 19-14 third-quarter deficit to take a 25-19 lead.

Dockery took the punt from Jason Tebeaux at the ENMU 38, slipped, regained his footing and sprinted down the sideline for the winning score. It was the first punt returned for a touchdown against the Rams since 1982.

Angel Ronquillo, whose extra point provided the margin of victory, also kicked four field goals for the Greyhounds (3-2, 2-0), including a 46-yarder that gave ENMU a 19-14 lead.

Eagles try to avoid letdown after 'Super Monday' win

By Dave Goldberg
AP Football Writer

Two years ago, Buddy Ryan's Philadelphia Eagles ended the New York Giants 10-game winning streak, then went up to Buffalo a week later, trailed 24-0 by the end of the first quarter and went on to lose 30-24.

Will that happen again in Kansas City this week following the Eagles' 31-7 win over Dallas on Philadelphia's "Super Monday?" A letdown following a big win over a division archrival?

NFL Today

Not if Rich Kotite can help it. Compared to Ryan's cocky bunch, which tended to celebrate for a week after a big victory, Kotite presides over a more mature group that at 4-0 is one of two unbeaten teams left.

Kotite's method? Giving his team a rest in a short week.

"We've got to get ourselves back physically," he says. "We really played a very physical game. Yeh, it's a short week, we're playing there, but I suspect we'll be ready."

This game is the rarest of meetings — the Eagles and Chiefs have played each other only once in their history, fewer than any other teams.

That was in 1972 at Arrowhead Stadium when Pete Liske threw three touchdown passes to Harold Jackson to lead Philadelphia to a 21-20 win over a team that featured Len Dawson, Otis Taylor, Willie Lanier and the late Buck Buchanan.

Seattle at Dallas

You don't want to be the Seahawks coming in to Texas Stadium after the thrashing the Cowboys took in Philadelphia Monday night — a young and cocky team getting its comeuppance from an older and more confident one.

"It was a disappointing loss," coach Jimmy Johnson said of the debacle in Philadelphia. "But it's just the fourth game of the season. We want to make sure this game doesn't linger on and become a negative factor. We have to get back on track."

Seattle's track is the losing one — they were on the wrong end of San Diego's first win last week and neither Kelly Stouffer nor Dan McGwire is the next coming of ... Dave Krieg?

Atlanta at Miami

Like the Eagles, the Dolphins need to avoid a letdown after their 37-10 romp in Buffalo. The difference is they're home — several hundred fans, in fact, greeted the team at the airport on their return.

"This pushes us to another level where Buffalo is," Louis Oliver, who led the way with three interceptions, said of that win.

Indeed, things keep breaking right for the Dolphins.

They probably catch the Falcons without Deion Sanders, off doing his baseball routine unless he gets a last-minute reprieve to charter a plane for Pittsburgh Sunday night. That means Atlanta is vulnerable where the Dolphins do business — in the secondary.

Another sidelight is the return of the other cornerback, Tim McKyer. McKyer has plenty of talent but has been dealt by Don Shula (and George Seifert before him) for shooting off his mouth at inopportune times.

This is the second game as a Dolphin for Keith Jackson, who caught four passes for 64 yards and a touchdown in his first action in 10 months. He may not do as much this week — players who are inactive for a long time start well, then feel the bumps and bruises.

Buffalo at Los Angeles Raiders

The Bills were brought back to reality last week when the Dolphins crushed them. The Raiders, meanwhile, won for the first time in nine games.

But Buffalo remains confident if not cocky.

"The term wake-up call does not apply," safety Mark Kelso says. "We know we always have to play hard."

The last two meetings of these two have been memorable — the 51-3 thrashing the Bills administered in the AFC title game two years ago and Buffalo's 30-27 overtime win last season after the Raiders blew a two-touchdown fourth-quarter lead. That was the start of an eight-game losing streak the Raiders broke last week in their 13-10 win over the Giants.

Houston at Cincinnati

What's interesting in this one other than the fact that the Oilers can start putting some space between themselves and the Bengals? It's the first of a trying stretch for the Oilers — six of eight games on the road (just like the Astros except there's no Republican convention involved.)

Plus Webster Slaughter, free agent II behind Keith Jackson, who will make his debut for the Oilers, adding some more shoot to the run-and-shoot. If the Jackson precedent holds, he'll have a good day.

An interesting matchup — the Oilers' offense against Ron Lynn's blitzes that helped the Bengals win two games before their personnel deficiencies on defense started showing. Maybe the layoff after the 42-7 thrashing by Minnesota helped.

Pittsburgh at Cleveland

Are the Steelers are legitimate threat to the Oilers or was their 3-0 start a product of Bill Cowher's enthusiasm that will wear off? This week may tell, against a team that's won nine of the last 10 home games.

One building block could be back for Pittsburgh — Eric Green, the tight end, who has been out the last three games with a shoulder injury. Mike Tomczak is back at quarterback for Cleveland, having used the off-week to learn more of Bill Belichick's system.

LA Rams at New Orleans

The Rams have been a surprise this year, winning two in their trot through the AFC East then scaring the 49ers last week. Of course, they normally scare the 49ers, and sometimes even beat them, particularly at Candlestick.

The Saints are no surprise.

Ask anyone to predict the score of a New Orleans game and they'll answer "15-13, 10-7, 16-10, 13-7, something like that." That's exactly what the scores have been in four of the five games New Orleans has played, the 13-7 coming last week in a win over Detroit.

Games like that are what Rams coach Chuck Knox likes. In fact, call Jim Mora of the Saints the Chuck Knox of this coaching generation — usually in the playoffs, rarely beyond the first round.

San Francisco at New England

Well, the Patriots finally scored — three touchdowns in the second half in the 30-21 loss to the Jets last week after just two touchdowns in their first three games. But the chaos continues — even PR man Pat Hanlon quit this week.

The Niners?

They have one weak link — the secondary, against which Jim Everett was 20 of 24 last week. One safety, Dana Hall, is a rookie converted from cornerback; the other, David Whitmore, is a Plan B guy who might be a linebacker or special teams player but doesn't cover anyone very well.

■ More Sports/10B

Phoenix at New York Giants

Jeff Hostetler replaces Phil Simms again because Simms' elbow is sore from a blow he took against the Raiders last week. Hostetler's a Card-killler (besides the Redskins, who isn't?) getting his first two wins against them — one in relief three years ago, then again as a starter.

The Cards have never won in Giants Stadium as the Phoenix Cardinals. In fact, they haven't won there since 1983 and have lost seven straight overall to the Giants.

New York Jets at Indianapolis

What a difference Jeff George makes.

Or maybe it was just Tampa Bay becoming Tampa Bay again. Whatever, the Colts now have one more win than all of last season following the 24-13 victory on George's return last week.

The Jets got their first win, although it's a question whether beating New England should count.

Energy measure a positive step

The energy bill approved by the U.S. Senate Thursday and sent to President Bush, who is expected to sign it, is a step in the right direction toward revitalizing the domestic oil industry.

Anyone even remotely familiar with the industry's trials and tribulations in the past dozen years knows that times have rarely been worse in the oil patch. And oilmen haven't seen a lot recently to merit their enthusiasm.

This time, however, Midland-area oilmen say the bill will help the industry in that it provides relief from the Alternative Minimum Tax which, as a part of a tax reform package during the Reagan Administration in the 1980's, created a disincentive to domestic drilling. With the domestic oil industry currently at a low ebb, the relief from the Alternative Minimum Tax potentially will help producers attract capital. What is needed now, those associated with the industry say, is improvement in the economy generally so that more money will be available for drilling.

One individual likened the energy measure approved by the Senate to a completely bad situation being improved by half. Now, instead of the oil industry being under the gun of an all-negative energy policy, the situation is only half bad. Another characterization might be having both your legs tied to a heavy, metal weight. The bill approved by the Senate released one of the oil industry's legs.

That isn't likely to result in an increase in domestic drilling overnight. Hopefully, as some spokesmen have indicated, it will make it easier for oil producers to obtain drilling capital, and in that regard the measure is seen in a positive light.

Not everything about the bill will be favorable, of course. For example, tax credits for tight sand drilling, referred to as Section 29, which have accounted for a large amount of the drilling during the past few months, were not renewed.

There were, however, other favorable points in the legislation including the fact that the bill supports increased natural gas use. That potentially could help spur more development of the Texas gas industry.

The bill isn't exactly the answer to an oilman's dreams. But it provides relief from an onerous tax and in that regard it is a step in the right direction.

Bush gets good news; Clinton gets in trouble

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor in Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

NORTH SALEM, N.Y. — There was good news for President Bush during the past month. There was also disclosure last Monday of a potential political bombshell for Gov. Bill Clinton that could cost him victory in the presidential election Nov. 3.

Hearst

Let me tell you first about the encouraging information concerning the economy. Despite the sad fact that hundreds of thousands of people lost their jobs in the recession, economic columnist Robert J. Samuelson wrote in the Washington Post that the economy "is not quite as crippled as it's described." He reported housing starts are running about 1.2 million units annually, up so far this year 200,000 over 1991.

According to Economic Analysis Associates, mortgage rate payments as a percentage of income are lower than at any time since the 1970s. Many consumers and corporate businesses are repaying loans and refinancing mortgages at lower rates.

Neither the president nor Clinton is making large-scale deficit reduction a major campaign issue. They both feel investing in national and state highway improvement and other projects that will create jobs to generate economic growth is more important now than a drop in the deficit.

Some weeks ago, Bush said Americans are better off than they were eight years ago, "and if you elect me president, you will be better off four years from now than you are today." The media cynics ridiculed this rainbow on the horizon. In the Sept. 21 issue of Newsweek magazine, Washington writer Rich Thomas pointed out that personal disposable income in the United States has, according to the latest available government figures, actually increased by 2.1 percent. "In other words," Thomas added, "the majority of the middle and upper class American families could — or should — still answer the key presidential question in Bush's favor: yes, in many ways, we actually are a little better off now than we were four years ago."

Michael Kinsley, senior editor of the usually liberal New Republic magazine, raised the questions: "Which one of the candidates (if elected) might rise above politics to reach statesmanship. To put it crudely," Kinsley added, "which one might break his promises and betray the voters for their own good? A strong case can be made: That man is George Bush."

Following is the report to me from Joe Kingsbury-Smith, our Washington-based national editor, on the sensational allegation concerning Bill Clinton's visit to Moscow in late 1969 and early 1970 at the height of the Vietnam war in which he succeeded in evading participation.

The Washington Times, which is noted for its journalistic scoops, said last Monday, Oct. 5, that it had sought to question Clinton about his visit to Moscow during the height of the Vietnam war. The Democratic presidential candidate, according to the newspaper, refused to be interviewed about his Moscow trip and declined to answer written questions submitted to Clinton campaign officials by the Times. However, Clinton's campaign spokeswoman, Dee Dee Myers, did answer some questions on behalf of the governor. She said the governor did not recall with whom he had met during "five or six days" in Moscow. Myers said Clinton, an antiwar activist and draft evader at the time, was "a tourist." She added that he did not have "any meetings or political contacts."

The most serious report in the Washington Times was that news organizations were probing repeated but unsubstantiated rumors that Clinton, anguishing over the possibility of being drafted into the Vietnam War, sought to renounce his U.S. citizenship. Clinton flatly denied he ever sought to renounce his U.S. citizenship anywhere at anytime.

Meantime, the FBI investigated reports that Clinton's passport files had been tampered with. On Friday the bureau announced it had found "no evidence that tampering has occurred" and said it planned "no further investigation."

White House official ousts VA chief

WASHINGTON — Big, burly Edward Derwinski with his signature crew cut is not ideally suited for slipping into buildings incognito.

But as secretary of veterans' affairs, he successfully launched dozens of what he dubbed "surprise raids." He would appear at VA hospitals under an assumed identity feigning sickness in order to size up the quality of unrehearsed, routine caregiving.

Anderson

One Saturday afternoon, for example, he walked into a VA hospital emergency room and complained of chest pains. To his horror, Derwinski was kept waiting an hour before being offered medical care — a potentially lethal lapse of time in actual cardiac cases. Derwinski delivered a dressing down to the hospital's administration the following Monday.

When he wasn't snooping, Derwinski was squeezing three consecutive billion-dollar increases for the VA budget by appealing directly to the president. He delivered for vets. But he became persona non grata the day he proposed opening up underutilized veteran hospitals to poor non-vets, prompting the Veterans of Foreign War to withhold a coveted endorsement of President Bush last month.

Seeking to recapture a core Republican constituency, the White House sacked Derwinski days later in what many regard as transparent pandering to one of the most spoiled special interests in Washington. Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., for example, scorns the VFW and others as "professional fund-raising veterans" whose "demands are insatiable — they're never satisfied."

Derwinski's political point of no return was proposing a pilot program in August 1991 aimed at rationalizing, and ultimately preserving, the separateness of the VA health-care system. Two under-utilized VA hospitals in Alabama and Virginia would have been slated to treat non-veterans in communities of rural poor.

Veterans still would have enjoyed priority treatment, and the cost of treating non-vets would have been footed by the Department of Health and Human Services, not the VA. However, veterans' groups viewed this as a slippery slope, the undercutting of the sanctity of the VA health-care system. Although the Senate voted down the pilot program, the vilification of the former VA chief didn't relent until his removal from the cabinet last month.

The White House didn't so much toss Derwinski overboard as they offered him up as trade bait, according to the Bush-Quayle campaign and VA officials. Derwinski's exit is expected to enhance chances of a VFW endorsement of the Republican ticket.

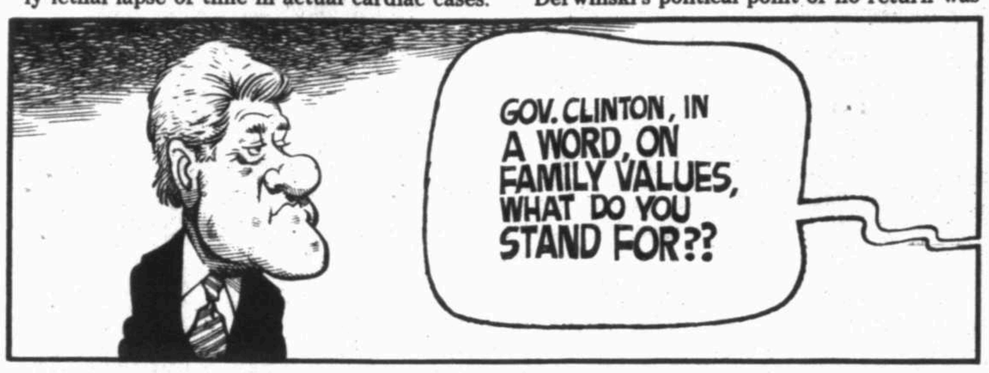

Bush/Quayle campaign manager Fred Malek was the designated hatchet man, but the decision was reportedly made by James Baker. According to VA sources, when Malek asked Derwinski last month to leave the VA to join the campaign to work with ethnic groups, Derwinski asked if the decision was being made to improve the political situation with veterans. Malek said yes.

The Derwinski debacle has left Bush/Quayle officials chagrined at how the commander-in-chief/World War II hero, who is running against an alleged Vietnam draft-dodger, could not earn the VFW's endorsement.

Larry Rivers, executive director of the VFW's Washington office, calls the rural health-care initiative the "straw that broke the camel's back," and says that as long as Derwinski was in office there was no chance of an endorsement of Bush.

Without the snooping cabinet secretary, the 172 VA hospitals can lower their vigilance and remove the "WANTED" posters bearing Derwinski's picture. There will be no more "surprise raids" from the big man.

GEORGE WILL

Freer trade means faster change

WASHINGTON — The fact that the North American Free Trade Agreement has caused Bill Clinton anxiety indicates why he causes anxiety: Some of his better instincts seem to flicker like candles in the wind when they conflict with the strong, steady appetites of some of his constituencies. Still, his endorsement of NAFTA — grudging and guarded though it was, and not for the right reasons — is a mildly encouraging portent of the probable Clinton presidency.

Will

It is said that NAFTA will, if ratified, create the world's largest common market, encompassing 365 million consumers, 20 million more than the European Community. But it will not really be like the common market that now extends from Maine to California. NAFTA is not nearly as good as it's cracked up to be by its supporters because it is not what it is said to be.

It is not really a free trade agreement. In fact, a 2,000-page free trade agreement is a contradiction in terms. Twenty paragraphs would suffice to establish really free trade, which does not require armies of bureaucrats to enforce the hairsplittings of legions of lawyers.

NAFTA reduces many trade barriers, but, in effect, moves others outward, to serve as ramparts around Mexico, Canada and the United States. Consider, for example, the "rules of origin" regulating domestic content requirements of goods defined as "North American." The rules include this triple niggle regarding textiles: North American yarn must be used in fabrics made in North America for clothes cut in North America.

NAFTA creates a regional bloc to rival, and impede, the exporting Pacific Rim nations. Many of the 2,000 pages, properly deciphered, record U.S., Canadian and Mexican jockeying to protect particular industries and interests. However, NAFTA is progress. Today Mexican tariffs are, on average, two and a half times higher than U.S. tariffs. The export market is the largest source of new U.S. jobs. (Clinton's support for NAFTA may have less to do with a philosophy of freedom than with a political calculation: Michigan, Ohio and Illinois are among the 10 states selling most to Mexico.) NAFTA will quickly mean cheaper and more plentiful fruits and vegetables, products currently subject to tariffs protecting U.S. farmers.

NAFTA will, after a 15-year phase-in, further link the commercial lives of three nations that already have huge trade flows with each other. Critics of NAFTA cite the disparities of development between the United States and Mexico, with its population of 85 million (four times that of Canada). They fear the flow southward of low-skill jobs.

Freer trade means faster change, and Clinton has spent his adult life courting groups, especially labor groups, that want activist government to preserve the status quo. A President Clinton and a Democratic Congress could have a grand time using NAFTA as an excuse for spending and regulating (called "transition strategies") to help those hurt by freer trade, and those who think they are entitled to compensation for any inconvenience of change.

But if Clinton gets to the White House he should hew to the most sensible sentiment he uttered on the way there: "Protectionism is just a fancy word for giving up."

RUSSELL BAKER

Down with sacrifice, observer says

I have reconsidered my position on sacrifice. Last week I was all for it. My policy was: plenty of sacrifice for all hands. That was what the nation needed, I thought. How wrong I was.

Baker

My new policy is toleration. Let those who want to sacrifice go to it. Let's be tolerant. Let's not deny the indiyidual right to sacrifice. Just leave me out of it, please, and you, too, if you like.

My original passion for sacrifice was the result of thinking in slogans instead of in dollars and cents. One of the catchier slogans now in circulation is: "What this country needs is a good bout of sacrifice."

Doesn't that sound wonderful? Heroic? Romantic? Kennedyesque? ("Ask not what your country ...") Patriotic? Makes you want to take to your rocking chair, wrap up in your shawl and tell the young 'uns how it was in World War II, having your gasoline ration held to three gallons a week. Or was it a month? Old heroes forget.

Ross Perot's first campaign exploited this patriotic yen for pain. Its economic program called for wringing money out of one and all, including the struggling classes. Whether Perot remains devoted to Draconian economics in Campaign II is still unclear, but his big show in Dallas the other day didn't dispel my suspicion that he is still foursquare for heroism.

Perot was a big reason for my change of policy. The poet Virgil said, "Beware the Greeks bearing gifts," which has no bearing here except to introduce my Uncle Charlie, who said, "Beware the millionaire calling for sacrifice."

Uncle Charlie flourished back in the Depression before the billionaire was invented, but his wisdom remains just as applicable to Ross Perot as it once was to Rockefellers.

Uncle Charlie was no cynical left-winger either. He was a Republican free enterpriser who detested Franklin Roosevelt and admired the natural rapacity that enables a luckily endowed few to corner the bulk of life's money. He had none of their talent, alas. He was a philosopher. The philosophical mind enabled him to enjoy life without bitterness despite a decade of Depression unemployment, which he survived by hunkering down like the rest of us with the only family member who had a job.

He earned his keep by preaching the good old Republican wisdom to a foolishly New Deal household. He believed that fools brought misfortune on themselves and so deserved it. Anyone heeding a millionaire's call for sacrifice was such a high-test fool that he deserved to have his wallet rifled by the ruthless.

In addition to the wisdom of Uncle Charlie, a couple of economists lent academic authority to support my policy reversal. They assured me that a policy of sacrifice during hard times is bad economic policy since it will probably deepen a recession by further reducing consumption.

Not only that, it may also be a cunning device for redistributing the wealth from the pinched classes to the bloated. I suspected these economists of harboring Keynesian economic views loathsome to Republican true believers. They may even be outright Democrats, but the heart of their message — beware the rich preaching sacrifice — was too close to Uncle Charlie's sound Republican wisdom to be ignored.

Moreover I needed some scholarly justification for abandoning a policy as noble as sacrifice, and having some economists with me was comforting.

Whenever you're opposing something that sounds morally unassailable, arm yourself with a respectable academic argument to lean on. As triumphant Republican conservatives have repeatedly illustrated these past 12 years, an arsenal of academic mumbo-jumbo equips you to dismiss any inconvenient moralizers as intellectually shallow sentimentalists, if not downright boobs.

Everything I hear from the recession front suggests there is already a great deal of sacrifice going on: bankrupts being taken in by relatives, grown children coming back to live with parents, sometimes bringing families with them. In short, the ghost of Uncle Charlie is abroad.

Families, friends and lovers are already doing the sacrificing, as is proper. The sensible thing is for government to encourage them, not scourge them with a Federal Sacrifice Act. Politicians preaching sacrifice right now are just grandstanding, as I was. It's generosity we need, not posturing.

SPEAKING OUT

Columbus upsets 'modern' thinkers

This is a short and true story about an Italian boy who made good, and how it has come to upset some 20th century thinkers.

Cristobal Colon came into this world about halfway through the 15th century, in the Italian seaport of Genoa.

His father was a weaver and trader, and a dedicated bourgeoisie. He wanted his sons to have a better life, and encouraged little Christobal to work and learn.

Genoa at that time was a booming city, its economy based on shipping and international trade — probably similar to Hong Kong since 1950.

Colon Sr. had lofty ambitions for this male child. He was deliberately groomed to be an international trade expert.

Cristobal had what we would call a "grade school education." He learned numbers and writing and a little Latin. He was a good student, and retained the learning habit to the end of his life.

The Mediterranean coast of Europe seethed with uncertainty — political rivalries, national enmities, and religious discord. It also offered opportunity. Europe wanted the spices and silks of Asia, and Genoa was an important link to the lands of the East.

Cristobal began going to sea. He learned the trading business, and the skills he learned as a trader — common sense, nerve, ability to communicate, a liking for change and the perpetual search for new opportunities, a rare combination of imaginative power and the ability to be realistic — ultimately led to his success.

He appeared in Portugal in 1476. His debut was not auspicious; he swam ashore from a sunken ship off Lisbon.

Colon did two things in Portugal: he married, and he diversified. It could be said he was a one-man conglomerate. His occupations (corporate divisions, we would say today): sailor, ship commander, navigator, cartographer, book publisher, writer, book-peddler, factor and agent.

Author of this article, Robert Nash, came to Midland in 1986. He is employed as a stockbroker.

He married above his level, into a socially and politically prominent Portugese family. How? He met the lady in church, which was the only place the different social layers of that highly structured world could mingle.

On one of several trips to the west coast of Africa, he came upon what has been known as "the northeast trade winds."

The exile from Genoa lost his wife. A devout man, he somehow became convinced that 1) the world was round instead of flat; 2) he could reach India by sailing west; 3) he had been called by God to "discover Asia."

Portugal at that time was the master of the seas. The Italian exile made an ambitious proposal to the king: Back me financially, and I will find you riches beyond your wildest dream (we could add "promoter" to his list of occupations).

Portugal said no. The trader from Genoa went to Spain and had better luck. Colon and Queen Isabella were on the same wave length.

Colon believed in five things:

1. God.
2. The Roman Catholic Church.
3. Queen Isabella.
4. Himself, and his mission.
5. Double-entry bookkeeping.

Queen Isabella financed him, and he discovered America 500 years ago Monday.

Being a trader, Colon cut himself a nice deal with the Spanish monarchy.

He was to receive what we would call today a 10 percent "overriding royalty" in whatever he found. Also, in a step which tells us a lot about the world of 1492, Queen Isabella agreed that Colon would be called: "The Hereditary Admiral of the Ocean Sea and Viceroy and Governor of what he discovered, and he and his descendants would be addressed as 'Sir.' "

You know the rest of the story. Cristobal Colon, whom we know as Christopher Columbus, got here. Among his other talents, somewhere in the stack of things this superb human being could do, he was as fine an ocean navigator as the world has seen.

Today we have niggling idealogues whose purpose seems to be the weighing of Columbus on their own set of 20th century morality scales, and cut him down. Ours is a world uncomfortable with achievers, a world fixated on two words: "equal" and "average."

They want every last person on the planet to be "equal" (read: "average") and if not, they intend to cry and decry the situation until somebody (usually the government) does something they will approve. The specious complaint, in their hands, has become the art of the 20th century.

Here we have an Italian trader who simply did the work he thought he was called to do. And did it better than anyone else, thereby changing the world.

He was as smart as an Everett DeGolyer, as brave as an Audie Murphy, as tough as Sam Houston, as resourceful as George Washington, as devout as a monk, and as determined as Dad Joiner. Some equal!

Here's to the trader-sailor, the exile from Genoa who, against all odds, found the new world. God rest you well, Admiral of the Ocean Sea Christopher Columbus — Sir!

Life Chain didn't get accurate coverage

When I woke up this morning (Oct. 5) and read I was one of 50 people who participated in the Life Chain Sunday afternoon Oct. 4. Actually, I was nowhere near the location of the "several" people your photographer shot. I was over a mile away and from where I stood, people were lined up on both sides of Midkiff street for as far as I could see in both directions. It may have surprised you to know 1,500 to 2,000 people in Midland felt strongly enough about babies being killed to give up their leisure time on a Sunday afternoon and stand in the hot sun for one hour. I hope every last one of them called you to let you know they were there.

Now if 2,000 people in Midland had been standing and making any kind of statement for anything else and I mean anything other than the fact that ABORTION KILLS CHILDREN, it would have been headline news. Oh well, everyone driving down Midkiff Sunday afternoon now knows for a certainty how unreliable your paper is in reporting anything newsworthy that doesn't line up with your liberal viewpoints.

Your disregard of so many may have helped wake up thousands of other people who think the same way and didn't know there is a way (Life Chain) to express their loving concern for unborn children.

Man thinks Waggoner should stick to news

Darren Waggoner's article on the "Pro Life Chain" in the Reporter-Telegram Oct. 5 edition was a pitiful excuse at attempted news reporting! His obvious error was a severe understatement of the number of people who participated in the event. Even more concerning than his inability to count was his allowance of a lengthy rebuttal quotation in the article by Pro Life's most sinister adversary.

Report the news, Waggoner, not your own social positions.

Life Chain Sunday didn't get fair press

On Sunday, Oct. 4, a quiet, peaceful, Christian-oriented demonstration against abortion took place in Midland and 700 other cities across the country. Unfortunately, the Reporter-Telegram reporter assigned to this story failed to present the facts accurately.

There were not 50 people in the "Life Chain," but more like 2,050! If this reporter had tried to be as fair to the Pro-life supporters as he was to present the Planned Parenthood (there's an oxymoron) stance, I could then say he did his job, however, he failed to present the facts accurately.

In closing let me say "It's a child, not a choice."

Pro-lifer requests objective reporting

Regarding your article on Oct. 5 concerning the Life Chain Rally, your reporter, Darren Waggoner reported that 50 people were present. According to Life Chain organizers (per your correction Oct. 6) between 1,500 and 1,800 people participated. Can he not count or should we count him as a pro-choice member of the press who cannot print facts for fear of toppling their claim that most Americans favor abortion?

And why is it that every time a pro-life organization holds an event, we must have a response from Jane Hellinghausen of Planned Parenthood? All we need are the facts of events as they occur. We can form our own opinions without Jane telling us the pro-life stance is "unrealistic." The fact is abortion kills real children. Those who participated Sunday were only exercising their constitutional right to peacefully speak out for those children.

Ms. Hellinghausen also asks us to consider the "babies who are forgotten — the unfed babies, the abuse victims." Let us do just that: Over the past 20 years, has the legalization of abortion served to reduce the instance of child abuse in our society? Rather, the condoning of abortion has further convinced our nation that human life is of no real value. It is no wonder that instances of child abuse and neglect can be found in our society now more than ever before. How then has abortion been a solution to this horror of child abuse?

We, as advocates of life, are not asking that Waggoner present the readers of the Reporter-Telegram with only the opinions of those who hold our beliefs. We are asking that next time an event such as the Life Chain takes place, it would be reported objectively and accurately so that Midlanders may form their own opinions of it, and let Ms. Hellinghausen express her opinion where we are confined to expressing ours — the opinion page.

Woman disagrees with slogans of 'Life Chain'

In response to the recent onslaught of anti-abortion propaganda, I feel obliged to write this letter. Sunday, Oct. 4, while driving down Andrews Highway, I stopped at the intersection of Andrews and Midkiff and there encountered a large group of these "pro-life" characters holding up signs bearing an array of ridiculous slogans. I won't even name them all, but one caught my eye as it has also been featured on a batch of slickly-produced and severely misleading television commercials lately. I am referring to the slogan and ad saying "Life — What a Beautiful Choice."

What a crock! Yes, life is a beautiful choice for those lovely blue-eyed, blond-haired children in uniforms streaming from the doors of an expensive-looking private school or the ones frolicking in the park wearing little designer clothes.

But do all unwanted pregnancies end as picture-perfect as this? I think not! These ads totally neglect to show the flip side of an unplanned pregnancy.

How beautiful is the child born into poverty, not knowing where his or her next meal is coming from? How beautiful are the "crack" babies so small they can fit in the palm of a hand and suffering from drug withdrawals, costing taxpayers millions of dollars to feed, clothe and educate? Or the ones born with Fetal Alcohol Syndrome? And just what is so beautiful about the unwanted child that is abused or starved or murdered by a parent that an abortion was not available for? What about the mentally or physically disabled children that are released for adoption, only to spend their young lives being shuffled from foster home to foster home? Yes! Quite beautiful! The 13-year-old rape or incest victim? Of course, force her to bear this child conceived out of violence. It will be beautiful!

These "pro-lifers" need to remove their rose-colored glasses and look at the real world, which while beautiful in many ways can also be cruel, brutal, and quite ugly.

I am not pro-abortion. Education is the only way to completely phase out the need for abortion. But until we can accept sex education in the public schools, keep abortion safe, keep it legal, and keep life "beautiful."

Midlander hopes for big turnout on Election Day

I am hopeful that the Nov. 3 elections will elicit a huge turnout in Midland County. I think it is incumbent upon each of us as citizens and taxpayers to accept the responsibility bestowed upon us by our constitution.

Along with the record of candidates for other offices, please take the time to examine those of Mrs. Carol Baker, one of the candidates for county treasurer. I think you will find Mrs. Baker to be a very experienced, competent individual. She has been a loyal public servant for 15 years and is totally dedicated to her job.

Let's all work to keep Carol Baker in office. But remember, your vote must be cast before it can be counted.

After all, political difference is good for democracy. It is political indifference that is harmful.

Man tires of Clinton's whole picture answers

It is normal in a presidential campaign to hear a lot of rhetoric from both sides. I found it interesting over the campaign and especially last week, that the Clinton/Gore ticket and staff aren't rhetorical, but repetitive no matter what the question is. It's kind of like answering "I'm not sure" to everything. I'll give some questions then the answers.

To Clinton there were questions on the draft, free trade and new spending and how he was going to guarantee spending cuts to offset them.

To Gore, questions on his ecological extremes and offshore drilling remarks.

To Steponopholus, questions on the debates.

To Altman, questions on why Wall Street has a dim view of the Clinton plan.

To Caudhill, questions about just what are the exact tax rates Clinton proposes on the rich and middle class.

To Stanton, precise questions about how Clinton is going to pay for the health care system.

To Rep. Pat Shroeder, questions on the draft question. Questions to black congressmen on the ticket's lack of attention to the black community. Also there have been questions on abortion, gay rights, education, the military, family values, etcetera.

Now I'll give the answers or should I say the ANSWER. "Well, yes; well maybe; well no, but why don't we talk about jobs, infrastructure, change, investment in America (more government spending folks!), health care, economy, ineffectiveness of George Bush. One answer for all questions.

What we have here is a big beautiful montage of a portrait of how to cure all of America's problems, but when ever a question is asked about one specific part of the portrait, you are then diverted back to the whole picture. No variance of answers. If there are no inconsistencies, there can be no foul ups, no exposure before November.

This is the same 'something for everyone' programs that the Democratic Party is known for. They're just smarter this year (dare I say slick).

Wake Up! An old country saying that's also popular in Arkansas where I grew up says you can't make a silk purse out of sow's ear, but in fact this year I think the Democrats have. The one problem is that when you open it, all you have inside is "PORK!"

One anti-Bush letter was blatantly wrong

There have been quite a number of anti-Bush letters in the Reporter-Telegram lately. The one by Wayne Harris on Oct. 2 is so blatantly wrong on so many points that I feel I must comment.

On health care, he complains that Bush wouldn't control the high costs involved. Much of the high cost is due to our ridiculous tort system and a bunch of greedy lawyers that have encouraged frivolous lawsuits. This results in high malpractice insurance rates for doctors and unnecessary tests for patients. Health care is not a right and government involvement won't improve the situation.

Harris apparently doesn't know what the tax on capital gains is. It is a tax that hurts everyone. You don't have to be rich, you only have to make money on the sale of your house to participate. This tax should be tied to the inflation rate.

Harris cites a 72-year-old man who couldn't remember when Republicans had helped the lower economic class. This is clearly a case of old age affecting the man's memory.

Bush is against government giveaways because we simply can't afford it anymore. The taxpayers have been drained to the point that they must say no. I have no problem with helping people in trouble. I have a big problem with people who treat government handouts as a way of life.

Bush wants to let parents be able to choose the schools their children attend. What's wrong with that? Is anyone happy with our public schools? Perhaps more competition with private schools will improve public school. Bush supports tax breaks for parents who wish to do this.

George Bush made one big mistake. What was it? He allowed Congress to raise taxes. That's right, the biggest mistake of George Bush's career was to let the Democrats have their way. Bill Clinton will allow Congress to do what they want, and electing him is the biggest mistake we can make.

They key issue in this election is character. George Bush has character, Bill Clinton is a character. As for Perot, if you really believe that he cares about what you think, I have some land you might be interested in. . .

Students should use their own cats for 'intubation'

Intubation, is this a new world for cruelty to animals? We have heard this word a lot lately. Intubation involves the insertion of a tube into the trachea for a variety of reasons. Intubation of cats for their benefit would have the cat on its stomach. However, for practice suppose the trainee puts the cat on its back causing a very unnatural position for the animal. Now we have been told the recent practice session which used local animal control animals did not hurt the animals, however, they were destroyed before anyone except those involved in the practice session saw them.

I ask readers to please call our council people and let them know there are alternative procedures to use and that we do not need to use our homeless animals for anymore research. Our shelter should be a safe haven for our animals not a stopover for whatever.

If this procedure "intubation" is so necessary and does not harm the animal I would like to suggest that students use their own cats to practice on and then, as we are told, because they are not harmed, that after the cats have helped mankind so much that the student then takes his or her cat home and gives it a big plate of delicious food and thanks the cat for helping him. Why not your own cat? You say its worthwhile and necessary — all animals feel whether they have a home or not!

Mayor tells why Vogler was 'rotated off' board

In response to several letters concerning our airport board appointments, I would like to present a few facts.

1. In 1986, in order to encourage more "new blood" and allow more citizens to get involved, the city council unanimously passed a resolution imposing term limitation on all of the city's boards and commissions. The resolution limited the length of service to two consecutive full terms, but allowed individuals to be eligible for reappointment after one year.

Although subsequent councils have granted limited exceptions, particularly with respect to Ed Vogler who served four consecutive terms, the resolution actually does not provide for any exceptions. I am pleased the current council unanimously felt compelled to abide by the resolution. I believe the council would have been deservedly criticized if Vogler had been reappointed to a fifth consecutive term, particularly when so many equally concerned citizens want to serve on the airport board.

2. Vogler and Mrs. Pat Schneider did not request to be reappointed to the airport board.

3. By a unanimous vote of the council, Vogler, Mrs. Schneider and 12 other valuable, experienced and qualified citizens were "rotated-off" various boards and commissions in compliance with the Term Limitation Resolution. After the vote, I "officially" notified each member in writing that they had not been reappointed in accordance with the Resolution.

4. Regarding the so-called VIP parking at the airport, past airport boards have reviewed the policy with no comment or recommendations. After the four new board members are sworn-in, the council will again ask the new airport board to review the entire airport parking situation. For the past nine months, actual "VIP" parking has averaged not $10,000 per month, but less than $2,000 per month. It appears that substantially all was for official business.

5. For over three years, Ed Vogler and I have had a good working relationship. Although we have not always agreed on every issue, I value Ed's input and opinion.

People that know Ed Vogler will certainly agree that he will continue to express his opinion on a multitude of issues whether he is on the airport board or not.

Cook's lead dwindles in Las Vegas

Associated Press

PGA

LAS VEGAS — Only a late-round rally kept John Cook from being overwhelmed by what he called "a stampede" Saturday during the fourth round of the Las Vegas Invitational.

Cook, who watched in dismay while his once-commanding five-shot lead dwindled and finally disappeared, regained his composure and his lead with birdies on three of the last four holes at the new TPC at Summerlin.

That was the positive side of his performance, a round of 2-under 70 that left him with a three-shot lead entering Sunday's final round of the five-day tournament.

The negative side, Cook said, was that "I let a lot of people back into the golf tournament.

"Anybody within five shots has a chance."

Keith Clearwater, one of those so positioned, agreed.

"We're very fortunate John just had a good, solid round. If he shoots five under par today, he's won the golf tournament," Clearwater said.

As it is, at least eight players have a chance the final 18 holes in the chase for the $234,000 first prize.

Cook, winner of two titles and very much in contention for the money-winning title this year, holds the lead with a 72-hole total of 266, 22 under.

John Adams is next at 269 after a solid 68.

Robert Gamez, a native of Las Vegas, on-rushing Nolan Henke and Clearwater are next at 270, four behind.

Gamez bounced back from an early double bogey with birdies on five of his last six holes for a 68. Clearwater had the same total despite some putting problems.

And Henke, 11 shots back after three rounds of the 90-hole event, moved up with a 63.

"I didn't even think about catching those guys. I didn't think there was a chance," Henke said. "I just came out here to have some fun. But now, I guess tomorrow I'll have to try to play a little golf, too."

Davis Love III, Paul Azinger, Bob Estes and Peter Persons were within sight of the leader at 271.

Love played the par-5 holes 5-under par in a round of 64. Azinger and Estes each shot 68 and Persons had a 70.

Cook, a runner-up in both the British Open and the PGA earlier this season, said he had a lapse during some extremely slow play over the front side.

"I couldn't get anything going. It was hit and wait," he said. "I felt trapped. I knew I was about to be run over, but I couldn't do anything about it."

Report on UNLV reveals new allegations

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — A UNLV report on ex-Rebels Coach Jerry Tarkanian reveals new allegations of NCAA violations, including an auto dealership that gave players free use of cars for years, a newspaper said.

The report on Tarkanian's resignation was obtained by the Los Angeles Times. It was conducted by university attorneys at the behest of a Nevada legislative commission investigating Tarkanian's resignation.

Tarkanian, now coach of the NBA's San Antonio Spurs, announced his resignation from UNLV after the 1991-92 season.

However, he later attempted to withdraw his resignation, charging that school officials, including president Robert Maxson, conspired to damage the basketball program. Maxson has denied the charge.

Questioned about the UNLV report last week, Tarkanian called it, "their typical lies." He said his attorneys would respond through the legislative commission's public hearings.

The report, scheduled to be released publicly next week, outlines several previously unknown charges, the Times said. They include alleged attempts by Tarkanian and supporters to discredit people considered disloyal to the coach.

At one point, boosters hired a private investigator to examine the personal life of a university employee who gave information to the NCAA's pending case against UNLV, the report said.

The report also quotes an unidentified employee of an unidentified Las Vegas car dealership who told UNLV officials in 1991 that the dealership had been allowing UNLV players to use its cars "for years."

The report said players were able to do that by continuously changing temporary license tags.

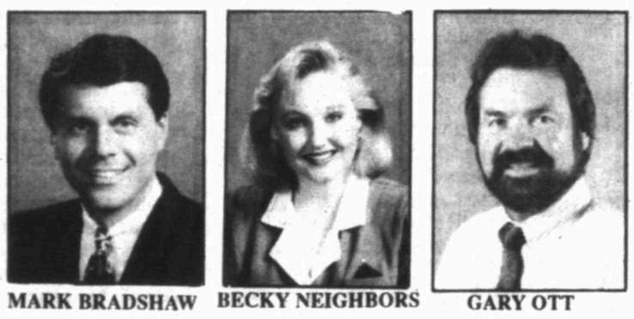

The report also said Tarkanian requested that Dennis Finfrock, then UNLV's interim athletic director, do the paperwork necessary for a part-time assistant coach to receive supplemental pay from UNLV's alumni organization during the 1990-91 season.

Finfrock denied the request because the salary supplement would violate NCAA rules unless actual work was done, the report said.

How to Use the Scorecard

Before the debate, fill in your top concerns and the candidates' names. Your concerns may be on issues as broad as education or health care policy. Or you may be more concerned about the candidates' individual characteristics, such as leadership qualities or experience.

During the broadcast, listen for the candidates' statements on those issues. Some prefer to listen to the entire debate prior to scoring; others score as they listen. There is space in each box for notes and a score.

Be alert for vagueness and generalities. The language candidates use can be so skillfully crafted that truth is distorted. They might evade issues and avoid answering questions, offering only platitudes. They might propose benefits of programs, but never get specific about possible problems or costs. They might make unrealistic promises that no one elected official could fulfill. Or, candidates might pass the blame, criticizing an opponent for things over which the opponent has no control.

Score each candidate on the issues. Using a scale of 0 to 10, rate each candidate on how your concerns are met. The higher the number, the more effectively you think the candidate addresses the problem.

Add up the scores. If your concerns are not mentioned during the debate, you need more information. Follow media coverage and get campaign materials. Watch all the debates. Adjust scores as the campaign progresses. On Election Day, use your scorecard to help pick your candidate.

Casa de Amigos opens doors for diabetic

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the third in a series of articles on local citizens who have been impacted by the United Way of Midland. This year's campaign, now under way, is attempting to raise $2,755,000 for 17 agencies.

By Lana Cunningham

Darcy Georges owes her life to Casa de Amigos — and to a lot of people who dared to care.

She and her husband and two children moved to Midland several months ago for her husband to take a job as a surveyor. He has just finished law school, had taken the bar exam and was waiting to see if he had passed. In the meantime, he needed a job to support the family and to begin paying back those school loans.

Supporting the family while he was going to law school in Austin is what Darcy had been doing. And even then, the symptoms of her illness were evident. But in Austin, as in Midland, there was no money for a doctor.

"I was pale and passed out all the time. All I wanted to do was lay on the couch and watch soap operas and eat."

Some members at Westside Church of Christ picked up Darcy one day and took her to Primary Medical Clinic. It was there she met Dr. James Bacon.

"He said he wanted me to come back next week, and I told him I couldn't. Then he said he would write a prescription for me, and I told him it wouldn't do any good. I couldn't get it filled," she recalled.

"Then he wrote down, 'Casa de Amigos,' and said he would treat me there."

She expected a dark, dirty clinic. Instead, she found a bright, light-filled, clean, spacious building at 1101 E. Garden Lane filled with friendly people. And she found the help she needed for her diabetes.

When she visited Primary Medical Clinic, her blood sugar level was about 400, she said, "almost stroke level." Before Dr. Bacon could see her at the next health clinic at Casa on a Tuesday evening, Darcy was told she needed to have her blood tested eight times to check her sugar level. The blood test involved pricking a finger and taking a small sample of her blood — a procedure that takes a few seconds.

But for Darcy, this procedure was horrifying. And that is when she began to experience Casa's warm caring attitude.

Darcy arrived early on a Monday morning with her husband for the first blood test. As Xochitl Meraz, health services coordinator, began to prepare to take the blood she noticed Darcy's fear.

"I burst into tears," Darcy recalled. "She stopped and didn't pursue poking my finger until she calmed me down and explained how it would work. We spent about 35 minutes for something that should only take 1-2 minutes."

Today, she can test her own blood sugar at home.

Ms. Meraz talked to Darcy about her diabetes, and said an educational class on the illness was being held at Casa later that morning. Darcy returned "because she (Ms. Meraz) made me feel so comfortable. The film was in Spanish, but they would stop it every few minutes to translate it for me. At the end of the class, they gave me a packet of information on diabetes to start reading. I realized that this wasn't going to be as bad as I thought it was."

No one had ever taken an interest in Darcy's health before. She once had a free test done in Austin and it showed an unusually high blood sugar level. "But no one offered me any assistance. They just told me to go to a doctor and I couldn't afford one." So she went home and forgot about that test result.

Neither Casa de Amigos nor Dr. Bacon would let her forget. "This is the first time anyone's ever cared whether I lived or died."

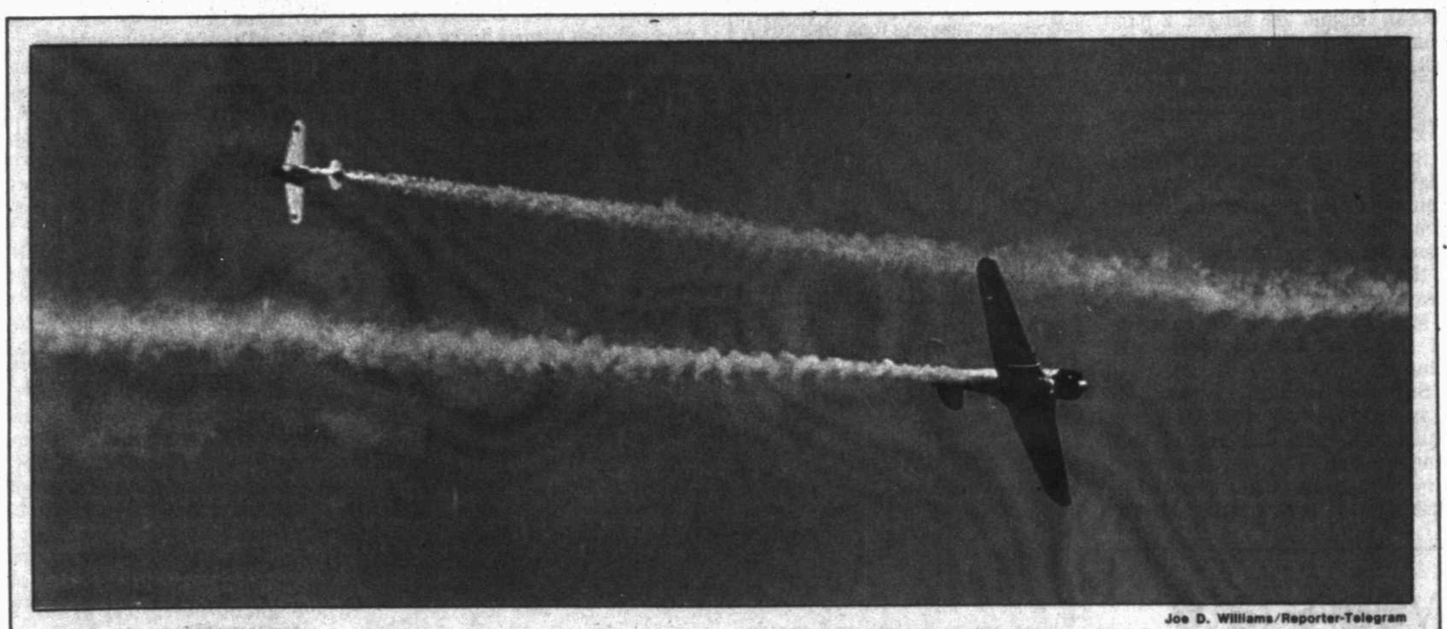

Today, her blue eyes sparkle and she laughs a lot. With a change in diet and her blood sugar level dropping closer to normal, she finally had energy during the summer to enjoy doing things with her son and daughter, like riding bicycles and going swim-

AirSho'92 brings back memories

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

The Confederate Air Force's reenactment of World War II air battles evoked vivid memories of those who were there and excited the imagination of those who have heard or read about the war.

Midland's Bob Gaston, who was a morale-boosting musician aboard the aircraft carrier USS Wasp in the Pacific near the end of the war, recalled Japanese kamikaze pilots flying their airplanes on suicide missions into the carrier.

"Every time those kamikazes would come down on the Wasp," Gaston said amid the roar of CAF warbirds in simulated dogfights, strafing and bombing runs on Saturday, "I'd grab that French horn, run up on that flight deck and start playing 'Nearer My God To Thee.'"

The original Wasp was torpedoed and sunk by the Japanese in 1942, and its successor was heavily damaged by Nippon aircraft later in the war.

The CAF's two-day AirSho'92 concludes today at Midland International Airport. Gates to the CAF headquarters open at 7:30 a.m., and 2½ hours of CAF and modern military air-power demonstrations begin at noon.

J. Neal Miller Jr., who at age 19 in 1945 was piloting the war's heaviest bomber, the B-29 Superfortress, flew 35 high-altitude combat missions to Japan.

"Fortunately, the bombing was fairly accurate (with the Norden bombsight)," said Miller, a CAF pilot-colonel who lives in Austin. "We really didn't need fighter escort" at high altitude — 30,000 to 33,000 feet, which was beyond the range of Japanese fighters.

In the air war over Europe and in the Pacific, "There always was respect between airmen," Miller said.

CAF pilot Roger Hoestenbach of Houston and World War II P-51 pilot Bill Stepp of Odessa cited the respect aviators, albeit enemies, held for one another then.

Teachers' group gives literacy for Christmas

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff writer

Henry A. Bamman, professor emeritus of education at California State University, once said, "The way of life of any nation is influenced by the percentage of its people who can read."

As a group, few people are more interested in reading skills than teachers. So, it's not surprising that Midland's Zeta Xi chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma, the worldwide honorary teachers' sorority, is promoting a project new to this area — "A Storybook Christmas."

"We're trying to provide every first grader in Midland with a new book at Christmastime," said Tressa Armstead, Zeta Xi president.

"And we're talking about reaching the children early enough so that they get excited about books. If they get excited about books when they are little, that just grows and grows and grows, and we have literate adults."

To accomplish its goal, the local Delta Kappa Gammas have mailed letters seeking funds to many Midland businesses, organizations, churches and individuals.

Participants may buy their own books to donate or send money with which society members will purchase the books.

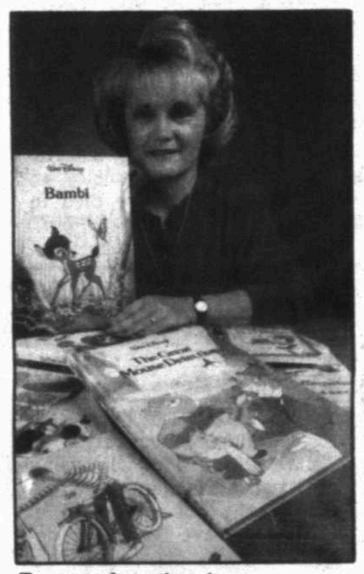

Mrs. Armstead said the members hope to distribute the books to first graders at the Christmas parties held in the schools Dec. 18.

"We're looking at around 2,000 first graders," in public and private schools, she said.

Lists of appropriate first-grade reading are available at Waldenbooks, B Dalton Booksellers, Hastings and Pages and Prints, Mrs. Armstead said.

Book collection stations will be located at those bookstores plus K mart, Wal-Mart, Toys 'R' Us, Village Walgreens and Albertsons.

As well as distributing the books to first graders, the Zeta Xi Chapter will provide speakers for organizations interested in the project, which is co-sponsored by the Reporter-Telegram.

Tressa Armstead

Each book will have 'A Storybook Christmas,' book-plate and have a space for the child to write his or her name, Mrs. Armstead said.

Attention will be spent on matching sets of books for classes so that students will receive books of similar quality, Mrs. Armstead said.

The project idea comes from Waco, where a community-wide "A Storybook Christmas" effort, was organized in 1991 by Larry Browning, associate professor at Baylor University's school of education and sponsored by the Waco Tribune-Herald.

The focus in Waco was to give at least one new children's book to 10,000 needy youngsters last December.

The local chapter chose first graders because "they are new readers," Mrs. Armstead said. "Hopefully, we will be able to add 5-year-olds to the group in the future."

Mrs. Armstead learned about the concept during the Delta Kappa Gamma state convention in June when Ann Roznovsky, mar-

Ruthless health nuts ruin fun, make life incredibly dull

News Flash: New data shows that certain oils found in margarine, vegetable shortening and a host of products ranging from doughnuts and pies to cookies and crackers can cause heart disease.

OK, that does it. I've had it. No more.

You've taken everything that was ever any fun at all and turned it into a life-threatening experience. It's not fair. First, you said give up the cigarettes. Fine, I replied. I'm down to two or three a day. Booze? Gave it up completely. Red meat? Cut my consumption in half. Greasy fried food? An occasional cheeseburger with fries and that's it. Bacon and eggs? Only on the rarest of occasions. Fatty pork? Surely, you jest. Real butter? Nope, I'll have margarine instead.

What can I say? I did my best.

Now this.

Can't you health nuts get your act together? A day doesn't pass that I'm not forced to terminate another longtime love affair. Anything that ever had real meaning in my life has been ruthlessly snatched from my clutches.

Life has become incredibly dull and it is all your fault.

I hope you can sleep at night.

Making matters worse, you so-called experts are now flipflopping on what is healthy and what isn't. You can't even decide amongst yourselves. One group says, "Get away from coconut oil and use one made from soybeans."

The other faction says, "Oh, no, don't do that. You might have a heart attack and die."

I hate you people. Go badger someone else for a change and leave me alone.

I'm tired of eating your boring salads and baked fish. That stuff is for sissies. It's an insult to my manhood.

I want some real food. Give me a plate of barbeque ribs, the kind that are so fat and juicy that when I bite into one of 'em the grease just flows down my arms. While you're at it, throw a big blob of potato salad on the side. And garlic bread, give me lot's of that. But be sure there's plenty of butter — real butter — on each slice, so much, in fact, that the toast becomes soft and mushy when I put it in my mouth.

And when I'm finished, I'll lean back in the chair, rub my belly, belch a time or two and then order up a huge slab of apple pie, topped with real ice cream and chocolate syrup.

So take that, you wimpy health experts. I'm through with all your goody-goody advice about what I should eat and what I shouldn't.

Enough is enough.

You've taken a good thing and run it in the ground. Give me credit for having some basic intelligence. Of course, I shouldn't sit down in front of a giant bowl of lard and eat the whole thing, but, hey, slapping some butter on my bread isn't going to kill me, either.

The key here is common sense. Or, maybe a better word would be "moderation."

Something terrible has happened to this country. We have become a society of fanatics. No longer do we consider the middle-of-the-road approach to life valid. The "all-or-nothing" mentality has prevailed. You can see the signs everywhere . . . and now they are making their way into our kitchens. The nuts have determined that you are either in favor of good health or you're not.

There is no in-between in their eyes.

These people must be stopped. If not, they will continue to inch their way into our personal lives, dictating what is acceptable behavior and what is not. Where will it all end?

Today it is margarine.

Tomorrow? Heaven only knows.

Don't be lulled to sleep, this is serious business. Your future is at stake.

So grab a big fat juicy rib and think about it. And while you are at it, pass the potato salad over here and put a little more butter on my toast.

Thank you very much.

Gary Ott is managing editor of the Reporter Telegram.

CASA: Woman finds help at Casa

ming. Last May, she could barely drag herself off the couch.

"My daughter now tells me to sit down and rest. What a different lifestyle we have because I have the energy to participate with my family," she said.

"I'm sure if I hadn't come to Casa, I would have died. My whole body was out of control. Dr. Bacon put his loving fear into me. He said if I didn't do what he told me, he would send me to another clinic."

The health clinic at Casa de Amigos is designed for the working poor, according to Ms. Meraz. These are people who work, but the employer doesn't provide any health insurance, and they don't qualify for Medicaid or Medicare. People must contact Ms. Meraz for an appointment, then she will fill out the paperwork and set up a visit for the patient at one of the Tuesday night clinics. The charge for the clinic is $5. If the patient's illness appears to be an emergency, she can refer that person to an emergency room.

The clinic would not be possible if not for the medical professionals and physicians who donate their time, she said.

Providing a doctor isn't the sole purpose of Casa's health clinic. Ms. Meraz said she wants people to take part in the activities and the educational classes and to spend time with the nutritionist. Casa also provides free screenings for diabetes, podiatry problems, glaucoma and cataracts. "Darcy is a success because she took charge of her disease," she added.

But it's Casa de Amigos that opened Darcy's eyes to a new world, she said. "Anybody can come here and feel comfortable. No one's made to feel bad because they can't afford a doctor. They made me feel just as good as if I had walked in with $1 million to donate. I can't imagine now sitting at home and letting my body deteriorate."

She looks forward to the diabetic screenings. "The clinic is filled with other patients and they ask me about my blood sugar, about my diet, about my children and how they are doing. It's like a close-knit family."

Darcy admitted that when her family first moved to Midland, their intention was to be here a few months and move on. But not now. "We're not ever leaving Midland," she said. "The people here are so friendly."

"My plan is that as long as they (Casa de Amigos) let me, I still want to come here. I want to volunteer here and help put people at ease just the way they did me. Casa de Amigos means House of Friends. And that's just what it is — a House of Friends.

Information and appointments for Casa's health clinic and classes are available at 682-9701.

Second report luncheon to be held this Thursday

Staff report

With more gunfire and surprise appearances, the United Way of Midland will conduct its second report luncheon at 11:30 a.m. Thursday at Centennial Plaza, adjacent to Midland Center.

The meal is being catered by Sam's Barbeque and is free. Entertainment will be provided by Patricia Johnson and Ricky Pertole. The public is invited.

A special highlight will be the announcement of how much money has been raised by the seniors in special fundraising events at the Southeast Senior Center. Those events included a covered dish supper and a fashion show.

"Marshal" Jess Parrish is serving as the 1992-93 campaign chairman. Theme for the campaign is "How the West is Won . . . the United Way." The goal is $2,755,000 which will go to 17 member agencies. Giving the campaign a boost is the $100,000 challenge matching grant. Every new dollar given to United Way or increase over last year's contribution will be matched.

The amount raised to date is $1,033,144, or 37.5 percent, of the goal. And for the first time, Midland Independent School District is challenging Ector County Independent School District to see which one can raise the most money in their respective United Way.

For additional information on the report luncheon or the campaign, call United way at 682-4358.

Centennial Plaza to host celebration

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

A giant cake, the release of thousands of balloons, singing and speeches will highlight a Columbus Day celebration scheduled for Monday evening at Centennial Plaza.

The two-hour gathering, that begins at 5 p.m., commemorates the America's Quincentennial and the 100th year of the Pledge of Allegiance, according to Elvia Hernandez, president of the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, one of the sponsors.

The celebration will be "very patriotic. It's going to be very nice," Ms. Hernandez said.

"We want everyone to come and wear the red, white and blue," she said.

Celebrating America's 500th birthday includes a giant cake that will be adorned with sparklers.

"They're making a cake that's eight feet by 12 feet. We're saying it's the biggest cake in West Texas," Ms. Hernandez.

"It's a spice cake because that's one of the reasons Columbus set out on his voyage," she added.

And what's a party without balloons? About 3,000 lighter-than-air balloons will fill the sky as part of the celebration.

Things will get started with a proclamation by Mayor J.D. Faircloth and a presentation of colors by the Midland Police Department Honor Guard.

Brief speeches will be given about the history of the Columbus voyage and on the history of various ethnic groups in America.

In the event of inclement weather, the celebration will be held inside the Midland Center.

Guerrero: Energy bill is 12 years late

N.Y. Times News Service

FORT WORTH — Texas Railroad Commissioner candidate Lena Guerrero on Saturday criticized a sweeping new federal energy bill as "too little, too late" to save Texas jobs, despite offering future benefits for the state's oil and gas industries.

Guerrero, in an interview after a brief speech at a Hispanic Columbus Day event at the Fort Worth Zoo, also accused her Republican opponent Barry Williamson of lacking compassion for common people because he evicted families from homes while an attorney for a Midland bank.

Guerrero said the new energy bill — the first major overhaul of U.S. energy policy since the late 1970s — will greatly benefit Texas as the nation's top natural gas producer.

But Guerrero complained that the measure comes after 12 years without a federal energy policy and losing 400,000 energy jobs — more than half of them in Texas.

"George Bush, who started in the oil business, decides to get behind an energy bill when he's behind in the polls," Guerrero said.

Nevertheless, the bill is a step in the right direction, she said, particularly in encouraging more use of natural gas, wind and solar power. The U.S. must balance many energy sources and "stop pitting one against another," she said. The three-member Railroad Commission regulates the state's oil, gas and trucking industries.

In a blow to major oil companies, the energy bill did not authorize exploring the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge, an issue Guerreo said sharply separates her from her opponent.

Guerrero has watched her once-sizeable lead over Williamson slip to a dead heat in the latest polls after admitting she lied about graduating from the University of Texas at Austin.

He is now a member of Troop 72 in Roswell. He is a member of the order of the arrow and has earned 27 merit badges.

Geoff has attended Boy Scout Junior Leader Training and served in various leadership positions in his troops, including Senior Patrol Leader, Patrol Leader, Quartermaster, Den Chief, and Chaplin's Aid, and served on staff at Cub Scout Day Camp. For his service project required for Eagle rank, Geoff assisted the U.S. Bureau of Land Management in planning, organizing and completing a salt cedar clearing along the Rio Bonito Riparian project area near Fort Stanton, N.M. With the assistance of 15 other scouts and adults, 2-3 acres were completely cleared of salt cedar and 60 cottonwood and willow saplings were planted to stabilize eroding stream banks.

Three Midland College students got a big boost this fall when they were selected to receive books scholarships from Texas National Bank. Brian McCrory, Litifha Ford Lott, and Elvia Saenz are business majors who are attending Midland College on Abell-Hanger Foundation Scholarships, which pay tuition. Books have gotten to be major expenses, so the scholarships are most helpful.

The students received checks to assist their purchase of books from Wayne Merritt, president of Texas National Bank, last month.

During the past week, delegations from Poland and China have visited the campus. All the visitors were impressed with the lovely landscaping. Poland has nothing to compare with community colleges, so the entire concept is quite new to them. The Chinese, from Midland's sister city of Dongying, now have heard a great deal about Midland College from previous visitors from Dongying and Midlanders visiting that city. This time they were able to see the new Midland College South Campus and the functions of the college's Business and Economic Development Center.

Eileen Piwetz, Ph.D., was the primary on-campus host for the Polish visitors while Stan Jacobs, Ph.D., was host for the Chinese. Stan was in one of the official groups from Midland to visit Dongying in 1991.

Classes on MC's new South Campus to begin Oct. 19

Staff report

First classes at Midland College's new South Campus, located at 201 W. Florida, are set to begin on Monday, Oct. 19. Initial class offerings will be in GED preparation and English-As-A-Second-Language.

"These are the first classes, but will be joined in the near future by many others," said David E. Daniel, college president. "With much of the remodeling still under way in the south building of the South Campus, we are limited at this time as to the number of classes which we can offer and the times when they may be offered."

The GED (General Educational Development) Preparation is designed to assist adults studying to take the GED exams. Successful completion of these exams earns a GED certificate, which is the equivalent of a high school diploma.

GED preparation is usually taught on a one-to-one basis after initial pre-testing to determine the individual's skill level.

ESL classes are provided for groups with teachers advancing students through several stages of ESL classes as knowledge increases.

"Based upon the community's responses to initial inquiries, the GED and ESL courses were most requested by those living in proximity to the South Campus," said Cindy Turland, Adult Basic Education Director.

At the South Campus, ESL classes will be taught on Monday and Wednesday from 6:30-9 p.m. GED Preparation is available from 6:30-9 p.m. on Tuesday and Thursday.

GED and ESL classes are under way at the MC Adult Learning center and at Casa de Amigos.

For more information on the GED or ESL classes call 685-4566.

(From 1C)

"They had that mutual respect back then," Hoestenbach said. "Even when an American fighter pilot went down, they (Germany's Luftwaffe pilots) had a military funeral for him.

"The Germans admired the American fighter pilots. They put them away in style, and the Americans did the same thing for the Germans. The pilots respected each other. They were professional warriors — not politicians."

In the Pacific and in Japan, however, "the Japanese were given to executing American fliers when they could capture them," Miller said. "It was not the airmen. Basically, it was the Japanese soldiers. They had very little regard for human life. The Germans were different. The Germans captured American fliers" and placed them in prisoners-of-war camps.

The CAF AirSho'92 "brings back a lot of memories," Miller said. "And the camaraderie (within the 9,000-member CAF) is above reproach. It is just fun," and ensuring the preservation of the rare, old warplanes is rewarding.

This year, Miller, now 66, flew the B-29 for the first time since the Korean War in 1951. CAF B-29 pilot Tom Cloyd of El Paso flew with him.

"It was fantastic," he said. "You never get it (flying) out of your blood. Strangely enough, you never forget" how to fly.

Don Barnes, at 28, flies the U.S. Air Force KC-10 jet tanker, an aerial refueler.

On Friday night at Bates Field near Odessa, he flew with Paul Tanner and Sam Holloman in vintage "trail-draggers" — the Piper Cub and the Cessna 140. On Saturday, he watched the CAF pilots fly propeller-driven World War II figliters, such as the Wildcat, the P-38 Lightning, the P-51 Mustang and the Corsair, and bombers, including the B-17 Flying Fortress, the B-29, the B-25 Mitchell, and the Avenger torpedo bomber.

"Our planes are so sophisticated now that all we do is push buttons and listen to horns and bells and whistles," said Barnes, who is stationed at Barksdale Air Force Base near Shreveport, La.

But in going up in those "light" airplanes, the Piper Cub and the Cessna 140, "It took me about halfway through the (first) flight to figure out how to fly again" with the control stick and rudder pedals.

And those "guys in the Confederate Air Force fly by the seat of their pants," Barnes said. "It's definitely a different ball game." Jet pilots in computerized aircraft take a lot of heat from the old guys for being button pushers, but that's what we do — push buttons and monitor the autopilot, he said.

In catapulting the United States into World War II at Pearl Harbor in 1941, the Japanese attacking aircraft "aroused a 'sleeping giant'," Barnes said. And America plunged into the war in the Pacific and into the war that already was raging in Europe.

"They (the Japanese) had better planes" at the war's outset. "Germany had much more sophisticated tanks and planes than we," Barnes said. "Once we were aroused, our industrial machine kicked in, and we just out-produced them. We won the war here in the factories. Out on the battlefield, there was a lot of bravery and valor ...

Of the impact of the CAF's airpower demonstration, Barnes said, "You've got to remember your history, or you are doomed to repeat it."

Board member to speak on Texas prison system

Staff report

Mamie Moore Proctor, a member of the Texas Board of Criminal Justice from Houston, will be the featured speaker at Wednesday's meeting of the Midland County Republican Women.

Proctor

The meeting is set for 11:30 a.m. Wednesday at the Midland Hilton Ballroom.

The subject of her speech will be "The Texas Prison System," and it will include her views on the function of the criminal justice board, the cost of building and maintaining prison units in the state as well as other aspects of operating the Texas Correctional System.

Ms. Proctor, a Houston attorney who has been active in the Republican Party for many years, is a former member of the Governor's Comprehensive Review of the Criminal Justice Corrections System and the Governor's Task Force on Equal Opportunity for Women and Minorities.

Ms. Proctor was a delegate to this year's State Republican Convention and was an alternate to the national convention in Houston.

Those interested in attending Wednesday's meeting should make reservations by calling 689-0923.

WEST TEXAS IN BRIEF

■ Police search for 2 men who escaped from jail

Staff report

RANKIN — Law enforcement officials on Saturday were hunting for two men considered dangerous who escaped from the Upton County jail early that morning, sheriff's officials said.

Solomon Nunez Tavarez, 29, charged with two counts of aggravated sexual assault, and Javier Francisco Valles, 22, charged with revocation of probation for unauthorized use of a motor vehicle, made their getaway about 4 a.m. by way of a fire escape, officials said.

Tavarez is described as a Hispanic male, 5 feet 5 inches, 175 pounds with black hair and brown eyes. He sports a tattoo of a Virgin Mary on his back.

Valles, a Hispanic male, is 5 foot 10 inches tall, 120 pounds with black hair and brown eyes.

■ Flammable liquid spills out on Interstate 20

About 2,000 gallons of flammable liquid spilled on Interstate 20 near State Highway 1788 Saturday morning causing traffic to be rerouted while crews worked on the clean-up throughout the day, according to the Department of Public Safety.

Crews used vacuum trucks to clean up the spill — a mixture of naptha and alcohol — under supervision of the Texas Water Commission.

The accident occurred about 4:26 a.m. at Petrolite Corp. when a sump pump on a 10,000 gallon tank malfunctioned causing a overflow.

A dike around the tank was not plugged causing the liquid to spread onto a roadway and culvert. The north service road of Interstate 20 was closed for several hours as a result.

■ Odessa woman dies after being struck by van

ODESSA — A 21-year-old Odessa woman died Saturday after being struck by a van the night before at 42nd Street while looking after a cat she had hit moments earlier, according to the Department of Public Safety.

Christina Wooten was struck about 9:50 p.m. by a 1988 Chevrolet van near Cypress Road, officials said.

Ms. Wooten was driving east and hit a cat. While checking on the animal, a van, driven eastbound by Jonna Golden, attempted to evade a collision and accidently hit Ms. Wooten, officials said.

Ms. Wooten was pronounced dead at 6:05 a.m. at Odessa Medical Center Hospital. An autopsy has been ordered.

Writing the book on luxurious living

Welcome to a home that is dynamic, dramatic and versatile in design. Double leaded glass doors open to an expansive, luxurious two-story foyer. To the left lie formal living and dining areas -- to the right a soaring staircase.

The living area is bright and sunny. Two stories high, it is dominated by a large window. Just beyond it lies a formal dining area defined by elaborate archways. Foyer and formal area walls are painted in muted forest green to create a rich, soothing ambiance.

The dining area is papered in an exquisite Oriental-inspired motif -- at once cheerful, sophisticated and alluring.

Straight back find a total family living center. It includes a gourmet's delight of a kitchen, a bayed breakfast nook that is always replete with light and a cozy family room complete with fireplace. The kitchen is equipped with a double oven, center island with Jenn-Air grill, built-in microwave and more.

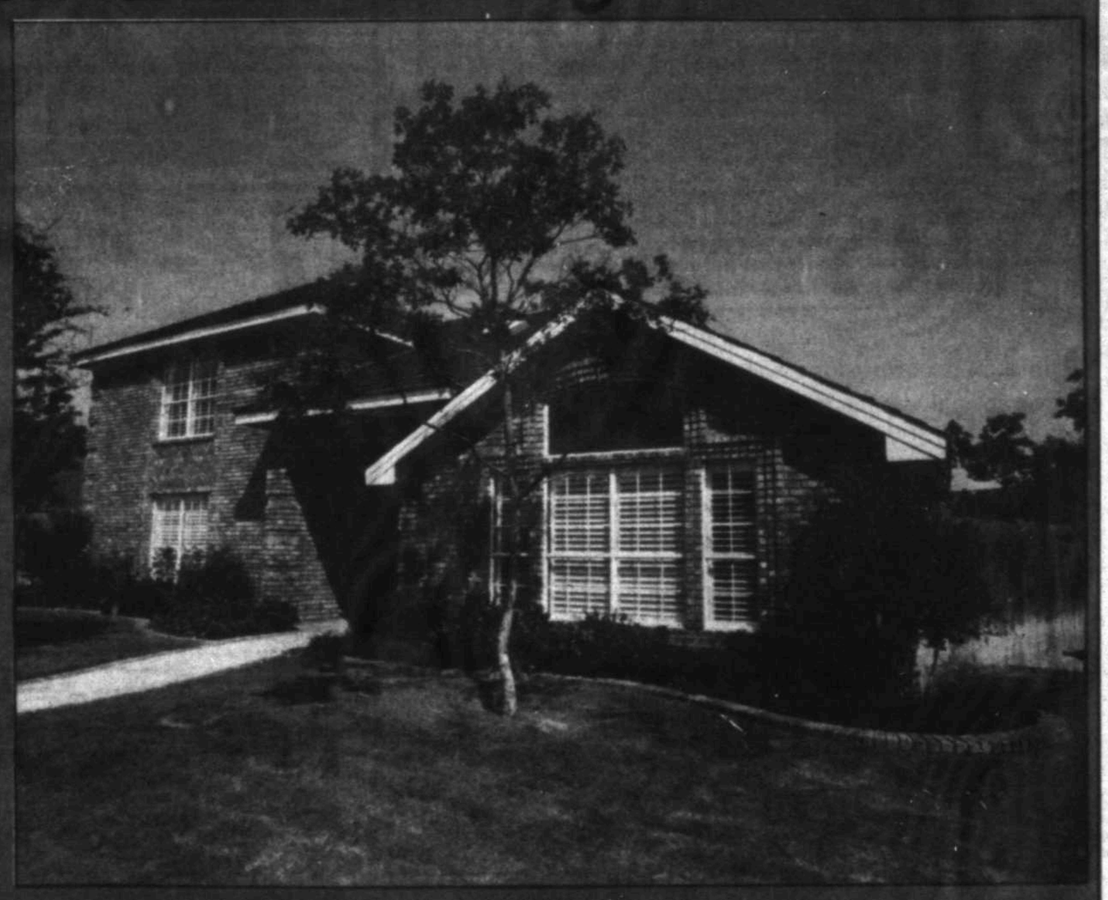

A left turn from the family room leads to an alluring master suite. The bedroom is huge and inviting. The master bath includes every luxury... such as a large whirlpool tub underneath a secluded bay window. Also included are double vanities, a sitting/dressing area and his-and-her walk-in closets with tons of built-ins.

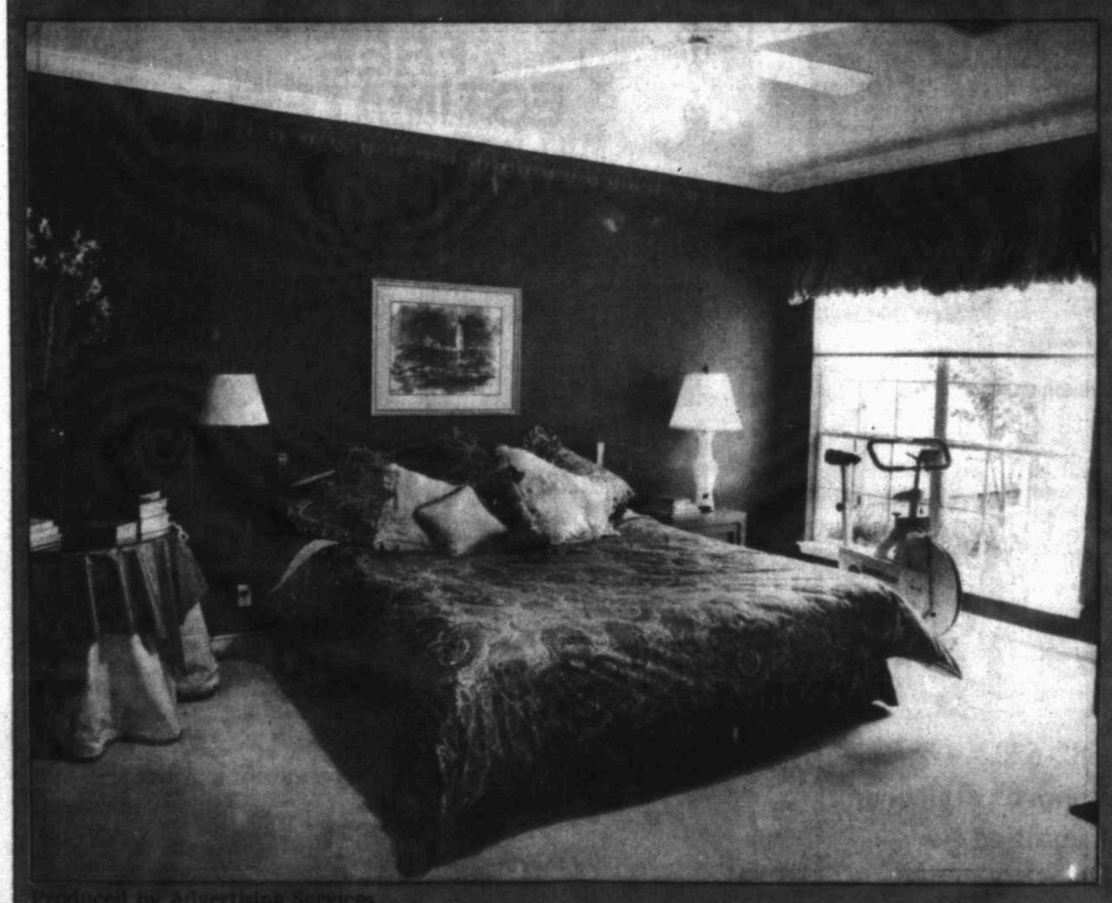

A large laundry room is situated between master suite and family living area.

Immediately to the left of the front entry is a delightful, sequestered guest room with its own full bath.

Upstairs, find a large game room. Now being used as a home office, it could easily serve as a third living area, or be converted to a fifth bedroom. The game area, which is open to the foyer below, is flanked by two bedrooms and a full bath.

Other amenities include lots of attic storage, three-car garage, fluted wood fireplace mantel and double-glazed windows. Also security system, complete sprinkler system, textured ceilings, 6-foot cedar privacy fence. The home is being offered by RE/MAX of Midland for $192,500.

Decorate your home for a successful sale

Norma Pine

When preparing to sell your home, following a few decorating tips may very well serve to provide a timely and profitable sale, says Norma Pine, broker with Chaparral Realtors.

"You may have a home that is in excellent structural condition, is in a good neighborhood and is listed at a reasonable price. However, if the interior is unattractive or out of date, those good points will be clouded and that home is going to be more difficult to sell," she explains.

Many homes may be made more attractive to buyers with just a few simple changes, but the results are well worth the small extra effort, Pine adds.

Chaparral Realtors is a member of RELO/ The International Relocation Network, headquartered in Chicago. The RELO network is the oldest broker-owned and directed referral service representing independent real estate companies. It has 3,000 offices in the U.S. and overseas and more than 50,000 sales agents who serve 14,000 communities.

RELO members reported more than $70 billion in total residential sales for 1991, which places the RELO network among the elite leaders in total dollar sales volume, in comparison with the major national real estate franchises. This also makes RELO the largest network of independent real estate brokers in the country with world-wide marketing capabilities.

Oftentimes in home decorating, the old adage, "less is more" holds true, particularly when highlighting specific architectural features such as a fireplace, a winding staircase or a large bay window. "In these cases no decorating is likely to be the best decorating, because the features should be allowed to stand out in their own right. Attractive lighting or a simple window treatment may be all that is needed," Pine suggests.

Oftentimes in home decorating, the old adage, "less is more" holds true...

The right lighting can make a world of difference in a room and is one of the easiest improvements to make. For example, lots of light not only makes a room more inviting, it also gives the impression that the room has more space, Pine says. She recommends using halogen bulbs, which don't give off the yellow cast of most regular lightbulbs, and increasing the wattage for more light.

"Make sure to illuminate hallways, stairways, work areas and focal points well, and avoid heavy draperies or window treatments that block much of the natural light," Pine advises.

When positioning furniture, make sure the room is not cramped. Place large pieces of furniture on the perimeter to make the room more spacious and facilitate the traffic flow, Pine suggests.

She also points to a continuous color scheme on the home's first floor as an important decorating guideline. This does not mean the walls and carpeting should all be one color, Pine explains; colors should, however, complement each other and maintain an attractive flow from room to room. Light-colored neutrals are a good choice, she adds, because they are the least dated and they appeal to the most buyers.

Other tips Pine offers include repainting walls, freshening cabinets and woodwork with a medium-colored stain or a new coat of paint, removing carpeting in older homes to reveal hardwood floors and perking up rooms with wallpaper borders.

BUYING A HOME?

With so many homebuyers becoming aware of their need for and right to have someone to represent their best interests when buying a home, many sellers' agents are deciding to "try their hand at" Buyer Representation.

Before selecting an agent to represent your interests when purchasing a home, ask them about their:

1. Area of specialization
2. Educational background in Buyer Representation.
3. Experience in representing the Buyers' best interests in a purchase transaction.
4. Professional designations.
5. Ongoing educational programs.

After you have interviewed the rest, then call me, and expect the best.

Oil Show

The 1992 Permian Basin Oil Show opens its doors Oct. 21. The Show is the nation's largest exhibition dedicated to the inland petroleum industry and should attract international visitors. Officials expect a record number of exhibitors thanks to expansion at the Ector County Coliseum complex. The Show will kick off Oct. 20 with the traditional Oil Show Parade, and memories of past parades can be seen inside today's edition.

The financial picture for the U.S. petroleum industry continues to deteriorate in the second quarter of 1992, says the U.S. Energy Information Administration as net income for 119 oil companies, including 19 major oil and gas producers declined 2 percent in the second quarter of the year. Net income was down 35 percent for the first half of the year.

Rigs steady

The sun set on about the same number of drilling rigs in both the Permian Basin and the U.S., according to Baker Hughes Inc.

Baker Hughes reported that, for the week ended October 2, both the Basin and U.S. rig counts held steady.

In the Permian Basin, the count slipped two to 104.

Nationally, the rig count rose one to 756.

Imports

U.S. petroleum imports in August were 8.06 million barrels per day, accounting for 47.8 percent of total U.S. delivery. Imports for the same month in 1991 were 50.5 percent. Of this amount, Persian Gulf petroleum accounted for 22.6 percent of total imports, about the same as last year. The average price for OPEC crude for the month was $18.45, while the average acquisition cost to the refiner was $20.02.

Oil briefing

Veteran energy security analyst Marks Hinton will be in Midland to offer a briefing on the State of the Oil Industry prior to the opening on the Oil Show.

Sponsored by The Principal/ Eppler, Guerin & Turner, Hinton has almost 30 years experience as a security analyst, and has spent of that time analyzing exploration and production stocks.

The meeting will be held at the Petroleum Club, Tuesday at 7 p.m., reservations are requested and may be made by calling 683-5208.

Plant gives both fuel, edible oils

By Sally Lehrman
Hearst News Service

SAN FRANCISCO – Industrialists may soon be tilling oil instead of drilling for it thanks to accelerating work on a wonder plant imported from Canada.

Rapeseed currently is grown in Montana, Oregon, Idaho and other Northwestern states for its marine and lubrication oils and edible canola oil.

But with changes as little as a single gene, researchers have transformed the cousin to mustard and broccoli into a factory for everything from plastic to diesel fuel.

"I really look at these as designer oils," said Chris Somerville, a professor at the Department of Energy Plant Research Laboratory at Michigan State University. "That's the beauty of rapeseed – it's easy to manipulate."

Somerville – "Mr. Oil" to his colleagues – can name 200 specific modifications to oil crops, many of them rapeseed, that could substitute for petroleum products.

Researchers in his lab recently announced they had grown plastic in a genetically engineered relative of rapeseed. By adding a gene from a bacterium to the plant, they induced it to produce little granules of plastic throughout its tissue.

The plant grew only an inch and a half because of the changes, but Yves Poirier of the lab predicted that a little genetic tinkering would solve that problem. By adding signals that would control plastic production, he expects to get a tall plant with seeds packed with plastic.

Once harvested, the plastic could be melted down and molded into packing boxes, telephones, even plastic capsules that would slowly release drugs under the skin. About a dozen rapeseed plants would make enough for a plastic plate, Poirier estimates.

"There's a focus on modifying plants to produce new compounds," Poirier says. "If it works, it gives farmers a new cash crop. Right now, there's overproduction of all the same crops."

Poirier says rapeseed may be an ideal plant to grow plastic – or diesel fuel or nylon. The potential market size is fantastic. By the end of the century, the U.S. automobile industry alone is expected to use 1 million tons of high-grade engineering plastics from an oil already made by the plant.

Dick Auld, at the University of Idaho, is breeding a rapeseed that could substitute for diesel fuel – it would pollute less and cost about $1.31 a gallon. And an Italian company is working on rapeseed-grown nylon for biodegradable milk cartons.

Most so-called biodegradable plastics actually break down to bits of plastic that last hundreds, sometimes thousands, of years. But rapeseed plastics disintegrate after bacteria and fungi consume them.

Calgene Inc. in Davis, Calif., recently announced that it was growing rapeseed in outdoor test plots for oils used in soaps, detergents, shampoos and cosmetics. DNA Plant Technology Corp., with labs in Oakland, Calif., is concentrating on edible oils for snack, dairy and bakery uses – although it's not overlooking industrial uses.

Using oils such as rapeseed, sunflower or soybean, farmers might eventually grow the ingredients for paints and coatings, lubricating oils, greases, motor oil, printer's ink and ladies' stockings.

U.S. farmers grew about 200,000 acres of rapeseed in 1992, but agricultural experts predict an explosion in acreage of up to 5 million acres by 1995.

Record Oil Show planned

■ Directors expect a record turnout for the Permian Basin Oil Show.

In just 10 days, the gates will swing open on the largest ever edition of the Permian Basin Oil Show.

"This is the largest Oil Show we've ever had since it started in 1940," said Jay Alvey, executive director of the Oil Show since 1960. "We're very excited about it."

The 1992 edition of the Oil Show will open Oct. 21 and feature 751 companies exhibiting a variety of wares in 1,110 exhibit spaces throughout the grounds of the Ector County Coliseum. The 1,110 exhibit spaces are divided into 859 inside and 250 outside spaces.

The Oil Show actually kicks off the 20th with a parade beginning at 5:30 p.m., proceeding from Odessa College north to the Coliseum.

The show is sold out, and Alvey said there are some companies on stand-by for inside spaces.

Alvey and Robert Beggs, a Midlander serving as president of this year's show, credit the recent renovations at the Coliseum complex with adding 210 more exhibit spaces for the show.

In addition to remodeling of the Coliseum itself, four new and larger exhibit buildings have been built and, as Beggs put it, "every foot of space not covered by a new building has been paved to provide the Oil Show with additional outside exhibit space and additional parking."

Exhibitors will come to Odessa from throughout the United States, according to Alvey.

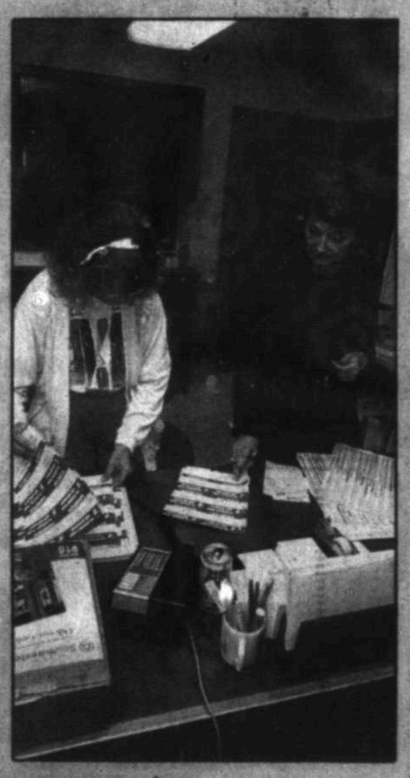

In addition, visitors from throughout the world are expected to attend the Oil Show.

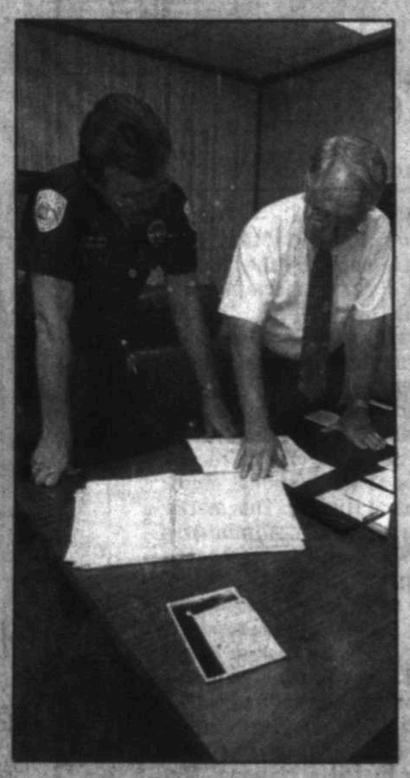

"I just talked with a gentleman from Algeria," Alvey said, adding he also expects to play host to a group

JOHN PAUL PITTS

Beating the oil odds is a mind game

Pitts

In 1986, the year the oil prices crashed, John Masters of Canadian Hunter Exploration Co., offered a paper which has since been reprinted in other publications and circulated around the industry.

The paper, entitled "Winning," offers some unique insights into what it takes to pull an oil company through tough times. For that matter, what it takes to make it in the oil business. Looking back on the industry, Masters notes that times have been better and they have been harder. He offers advice and insight that is still good today. Here, then, is some of the distilled wisdom of a veteran explorationist:

On opportunity — "Crisis is opportunity," notes the geologist, who tells how his company found one of its largest fields when land prices were low and 100,000-acre farm-outs were readily available. "I hate competition. I love it when everyone else is hunkered down . . ."

"Most companies won't move unless everyone else is moving. Taxes have to be right, incentives have to be right, royalties reduced, gas markets in place, oil prices up. By the time all that is ready, you get run over by the stampede . . ."

"I don't go to the petroleum club anymore, because all I hear there is overfed big shots complaining about all the things someone else should do to make their business profitable . . ."

"You don't find reserves when it's convenient, you find them when you can. One of the factors is competition. When the economics are favorable, the big guys roll you over. If you are a small guy, right now (during downturn) may be the best time to explore . . ."

On winning — "You win by being in early. And you miss if you're only good. You have to be first class. Excellent. It's as simple as that, and as difficult . . ."

"Winning is simple, but not easy . . . To win you have to have money — simple. And, you have to be a smart oil finder — not so simple . . ."

"A lot of oilmen can only do arithmetic on a deal. They think a 50 percent deal is twice as good as a 25 percent deal. But 50 percent of nothing is zero. You have to pick winners . . ."

Picking winners, he says, is a function of having small, highly competent, winning staffs, dedicated to excellence. "Any athlete will tell you that winning is, finally, a mental attitude. It is a dedication to excellence; and a grim, steely determination. It's not easy, but kind of simple."

I have never met Mr. Masters. But I do know something of his background. I know his company has found tons of oil, and found most of it when times were not so good.

His lecture made sense when he spoke to a convention of Petroleum Landmen at Vancouver, B.C., on Sept. 11, 1986, and they still make sense. Not only for the oil business, but for any business.

So much of the human condition — and business condition — has to do with attitude and perception. If things are perceived as generally bad, unlikely to get better, and basically hopeless, that attitude will be reflected directly on the MEXICO CITY – Last fall, Houston distributor Stephen Bratten decided he wanted to expand his business into Latin America.

His company, Automotive & Petroleum Inc., sells underground storage tanks, pumps and other gas station equipment and builds gas stations. Annual revenues run about $4 million, and it employs about 25 people.

Bratten moved fast. By February, he had created a subsidiary for Mexico, API International, and had his first meeting with officials of Mexico's oil monopoly, Petroleos Mexicanos. By May, API International's name appeared on a Pemex list of approved vendors for gas stations at a trade show in Puerto Vallarta, one of only two non-Mexican names on the list.

"Three variables made it work for us," Bratten said.

–First, the distributor represented a network of prominent U.S. manufacturers, such as O/C Tanks, a division of Owens-Corning; Centron for underground pipe; EBW for tank hardware and electronics; and Fort Worth-based Besteel for canopies and modular buildings.

–Second, he brought in a Mexican business partner with good connections to Pemex.

–Third, API found sources of financing for its customers.

Even so, venturing into Mexico has been costly and time-consuming, Bratten said. "Companies are on the wrong track if they think they can go down to Mexico and walk in and announce they are ready for business. You have to gain the confidence of people there."

Bratten's first introduction was to Harden Wiedemann, chief executive officer of Bristol Overseas Management, a Dallas company that specializes in international marketing and finance. He put Wiedemann, who had been executive director of the Texas Economic Development Commission, on retainer to research the Latin American markets.

Wiedemann introduced him to Felipe Mondragon, a Mexican national and former head of the Texas State Office in Mexico City, where he helped Texas businesses identify opportunities in Mexico. Mondragon introduced Bratten to officials at Pemex. Both Wiedemann and Mondragon have taken ownership interests in API International.

"Felipe Mondragon was the biggest asset in setting it up. We could not have done it without him," Bratten said.

API International also brought the right kind of product at the right time. At Bratten's first meeting, he learned that Pemex was just putting together a new franchise plan, which would provide incentives for franchise owners around the country to upgrade their stations. He was able to discuss with Pemex engineers the specifications they were considering.

To make a business deal work in Mexico, "U.S. companies have to do their homework and look at the long-term effects of what Mexico is trying to accomplish" to determine what the country needs, Mondragon said. "Quietly creative new deals are being explored."

Mexico has 3,100-3,200 gas stations in operation. A Pemex subsidiary owns 96 stations, and the rest are in the hands of private franchisees. Pemex's plan calls for construction of 280 privately owned stations per year, totaling about 2,240 over the next eight years.

API never has received a formal contract from Pemex, however.

In May, a leaking Pemex gasoline pipeline caused a series of accidental explosions in Guadalajara, killing at least 200 people. In the fallout from Guadalajara, many Pemex staffers working on the gas station plan were replaced. Pemex, preoccupied with a companywide restructuring, has not yet issued the final version of the plan that spells out the requirements and deadlines for owners.

Even so, a number of gas station owners along the border already have gone ahead to request engineering blueprints based on the requirements they anticipate, Bratten said.

API now is building a distribution network in Mexico, he said. The company is setting up relations with several Mexican corporations, either owners of multiple gas stations or commercial construction and engineering companies, and is training their people in installation and service.

API plans to construct the first few stations as demonstrations, he said. After that, it will act as a source of supply, consulting, design and training, he said.

firm's bottomline.

On the other hand, if an oil company views crisis as opportunity, as Masters mentions, that too will be reflected in the performance and bottomline of a company.

Exxon (then Humble) tripled its reserves during the great depression. During this downturn Parker & Parsley has gone from a small Midland oil company to one of the largest and most successful independent oil companies in the nation.

One of the lingering mysteries today is why it is, that with such an abundance of opportunity and favorable pricing in the domestic oil industry there is so little action.

A local oilman commented recently: "I look around and see two types of oil companies today. Those companies that are doing something are making money. Those that are not doing anything are not making money."

Finally, consider this quote from Masters' paper: "Talk to an oil man and he sees nothing for the future. There is no market, no possible expansion of the market, no chance for improvement, no visible ray of light." That was a quote he took from the Sept. 14, 1914 issue of California Oil World.

Environmental award given to Texaco

Staff report

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Texaco Exploration & Production Inc. (TEPI) was honored by the National Oceanic & Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) with a prestigious Award for Excellence in coastal, marine and estuarine management.

The award was presented to William F. Wallace, Vice President of TEPI's Eastern Region, in recent ceremonies at the National Museum of Natural History. This marks NOAA's first annual "Administrator's Awards for Coastal Leadership."

Texaco was recognized by NOAA for "Corporate leadership" in routing an oil pipeline away from the Flower Garden Banks, a pair of environmentally sensitive reefs in the Gulf of Mexico. The Flower Garden Banks were recently designated a National Marine Sanctuary by NOAA.

"We are pleased that Texaco, NOAA and the Minerals Management Service (MMS) worked together to further protect these sensitive reefs," said Wallace in accepting the award from John Knauss, Administrator of NOAA and an Undersecretary of Commerce.

"Although the pipeline's original route met all existing safety and environmental regulations, Texaco responded to our concerns," said Knauss. "The new route ensures the long-term protection of the Flower Garden Banks Sanctuary while providingneeded domestic energy produciton."

TEPI agreed to rout an eight-inch oil pipeline from its TICK platform, located 130 miles south of Lake Charles, La., so that it woudl pass to the eat of the East Flower Garden Banks. The original proposed route would have placed the pipeline between the West and East Flower Garden Banks.

The TICK platform produces approximately 8,000 barrels of oil per day and when peak production is reached next year, 10,000 barrels are expected to flow daily.

from Russia, among other countries.

Beggs attributed the Oil Show's international attraction to the fact that it is the nation's largest exhibition devoted solely to the inland petroleum industry.

In addition to a renovated Coliseum complex, visitors this year will also notice a shorter Oil Show, which will be open only three days instead of the traditional four. In keeping with recent tradition, however, the first two days of the Oil Show will be open only to industry personnel and the media. No children will be allowed on the grounds during the first two days.

Alvey said eliminating a day was done in response to a survey made of exhibitors after the 1990 Oil Show, with a majority of exhibitors favoring a shorter show.

"I think they'll like it because, by closing on Friday, many exhibitors have two days to get back to their home offices," he explained.

And he doesn't think the public will be short-changed by only getting to attend on Friday. "With four days, we weren't open in the morning, we didn't actually open until after 1 p.m. So this won't take away that many hours from the public. By being open all day Friday, opening the gates at 10 a.m. and closing at 5 p.m., there'll just be a four-hour difference."

While exhibitors would like to keep the show closed to the public, Oil Show directors refuse to do that, one reason being the show's non-profit charter requires it be open to the public.

And, as Beggs noted, "Providing educational opportunities to the general public is another responsibility of our Oil Show and we are more than happy to fulfill this obligation."

Opening ceremonies are scheduled for 9:30 a.m. Oct. 12 at the main gate. The honoree this year is R.E. "Ray" Galvin, president of Chevron U.S.A. Production Co. and a vice president of Chevron Corp.

Despite all the changes in this year's Oil Show, one tradition remains: There is no admission charge for the show.

Partnership to build platforms

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A partnership to build and install offshore oil platforms for the flourishing international market could bring at least 200 jobs to the New Orleans area, say the companies involved.

Avondale Industries Inc. of New Orleans and Dickson GMP International Inc. of Belle Chasse announced their plans Wednesday.

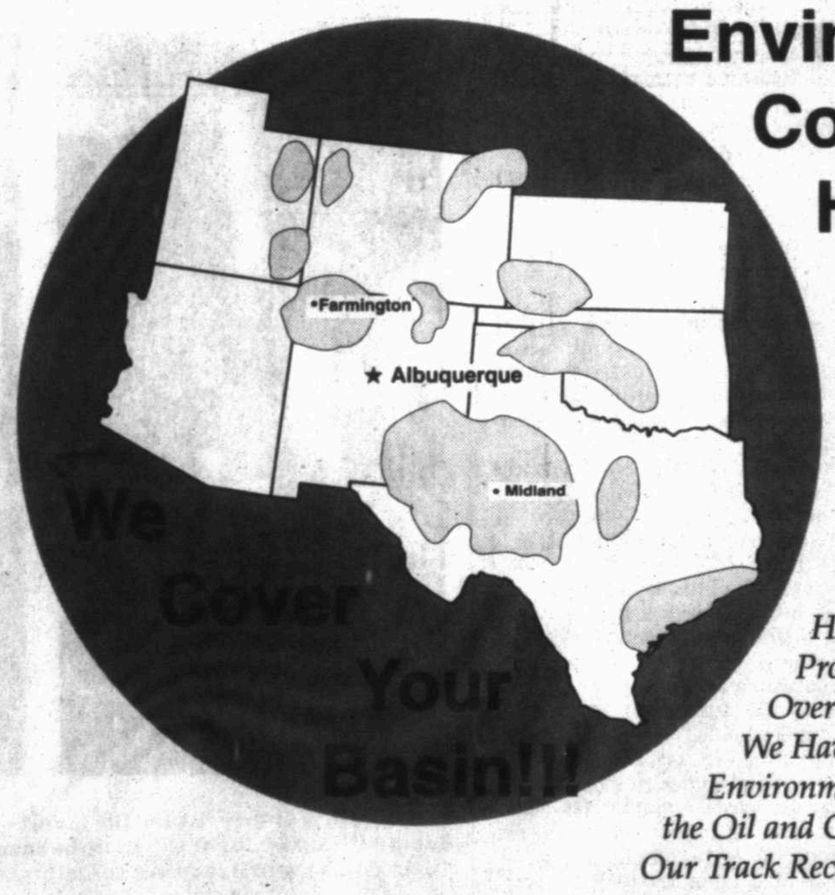

Details are not settled, but building sites probably would include Avondale's 6,500-employee main yard on the Mississippi River and Dickson GMP's 300-employee yard on the Intracoastal Waterway. in Belle Chasse.

Dickson GMP is one of 12 affiliated companies owned by several New Orleans residents. Known as Dickson Welding Inc. until December 1990, it also has offices in Metairie and Houston.

Avondale has been on the sidelines of offshore construction since 1988, when it sold its platform-building yard on Bayou Black near Morgan City to McDermott International Inc.

So the announcement is important for the offshore construction business, said Susanne Pagano of Offshore Data Services Inc. in Houston.

Exxon pullout upends Los Angeles-area dealers

N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Last January, after scraping his bank account and mortgaging his house to raise the money, William S. Hilo paid $320,000 for an Exxon service station franchise at Topanga Canyon and Roscoe boulevards in the Los Angeles area of Canoga Park.

But the new business was barely up and running when Exxon Corp. announced in May that it was pulling out of Southern California by Nov. 30. Hilo's customers started going elsewhere.

Today, Hilo, a former accountant, said that he is delinquent on his home mortgage and losing $4,000 a month. Exxon has left him two choices for getting out of his troubles, Hilo said, and he cannot afford either.

Exxon offered to sell the facilities for $1.2 million, according to a company memo dated June 11, but Hilo declined the offer after paying $3,000 for a private appraisal that said the station was worth no more than $300,000.

Exxon also offered Hilo $40,000 to walk away from the business, but that would leave him with a $310,000 loss.

"I would like to stay in business so I could go on with my life," Hilo said. "(But) I'll probably be out of business looking for a job."

Exxon's exit from Southern California, where it held only about 3.3 percent of the gasoline market, has about 100 retailers choosing between closure and buying stations under terms they say are lopsided in the oil company's favor.

Dealers claim that Exxon is offering small severance packages, has priced the facilities so high that they are unaffordable and misled them about plans to leave the region.

They also maintain that the major oil companies have been carving the nation into regional markets, which will reduce competition and bring higher consumer prices.

Exxon officials refused to comment on the dealers' claims. The company issued a press release defending its dealings with the service-station operators.

"The purchase offer made to our dealers is our standard offer, and has been accepted by banks and financial institutions across the nation," it said.

More than 50 dealers are suing Exxon in Federal District Court, seeking an injunction blocking the oil company's withdrawal from Southern California. San Francisco attorney Joseph M. Alioto filed the lawsuit in Los Angeles on July 24 and also listed Chevron Corp., which agreed to by 23 of the Exxon stations, as a co-defendant.

The company has filed its response to the lawsuit but asked that those documents remain sealed until a federal court hearing that is scheduled for next month.

Mobil Oil Corp. said last week it will purchase 16 stations, but the company is not named in the suit.

When he bought the franchise, Hilo said, an Exxon representative told him the company planned to remain in the market.

With news of the pullout, the station's gasoline sales fell from between 110,000 gallons and 120,000 gallons a month to between 50,000 gallons and 60,000 gallons a month. His auto-repair business also declined, he said.

Kathy Simpson, an Exxon dealer for 26 years, said her business plunged 40 percent after Exxon's announcement and subsequent decision to quit accepting the company's credit card on Sept. 1.

"If I pump 50,000 gallons this month it will be a miracle," she said.

Simpson expects her suburban Warner Ranch station will be closed.

Parker trims parts

TULSA — Parker Drilling Co. has announced it decision to dispose of parts inventories and rig components. Consequently, the company will record a $19 million provision in the fourth quarter of fiscal 1992, to reduce the carrying value of these assets to estimated cash proceeds of $2.5 million.

"In the past 60 days an internal task force has been evaluating company assets and operations with a view toward streamlining and consolidating resources," explained Robert L. Parker, Jr., president and chief executive officer. "This action is a result of the assessment by the task force that these parts and rig components would probably never be used again," he said.

As a result of the action, Parker Drilling will decrease its fleet by 16 rigs, 14 domestic and two international. The Tulsa-based drilling contractor will now operate a fleet of 102 land rigs, 57 domestic and 45 international. The domestic fleet includes five rigs in Alaska and one in Hawaii. According to figures from the International Association of Drilling Contractors, Parker will still be ranked as one of the world's largest drilling contractors.

"The cash from disposal of these assets will be available to reinvest in future drilling operations," said Parker. He explained that the action will also allow for reduction in future operating costs.

"The most important thing is that we still have 57 domestic rigs - 51 in the lower 48 states - and all are well positioned geographically for a resurgence in U.S. natural gas exploration," Parker stated.

Founded in 1934, Parker has operated in 45 countries and specializes in deep gas and remote locate drilling.

Pogo well is strong producer

Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — A wildcat well in the Gulf of Thailand partly owned by Houston-based Pogo Producing Co. showed strong promise in its first test, according to a company announcement.

The Tantawan No. 1 exploratory well tested at a flow rate of 2,212 barrels of oil and 4.11 million cubic feet of natural gas per day on a 40/64-inch choke, Pogo officials said Tuesday.

Pogo is a one-third owner in the well. The other primary partners in the joint venture are Rutherford-Moran Oil Corp. and Maersk Olie OG Gas As. Each holds an approximately one-third interest in the 2.6-million-acre venture.

"It's just the first test," noted Paul Van Wagenen, Pogo's chief executive officer. "There will be more tests."

The announcement of the test came after the close of the New York Stock Exchange, where Pogo stock was the fourth-best gainer.

The sharp jump mystified company officials.

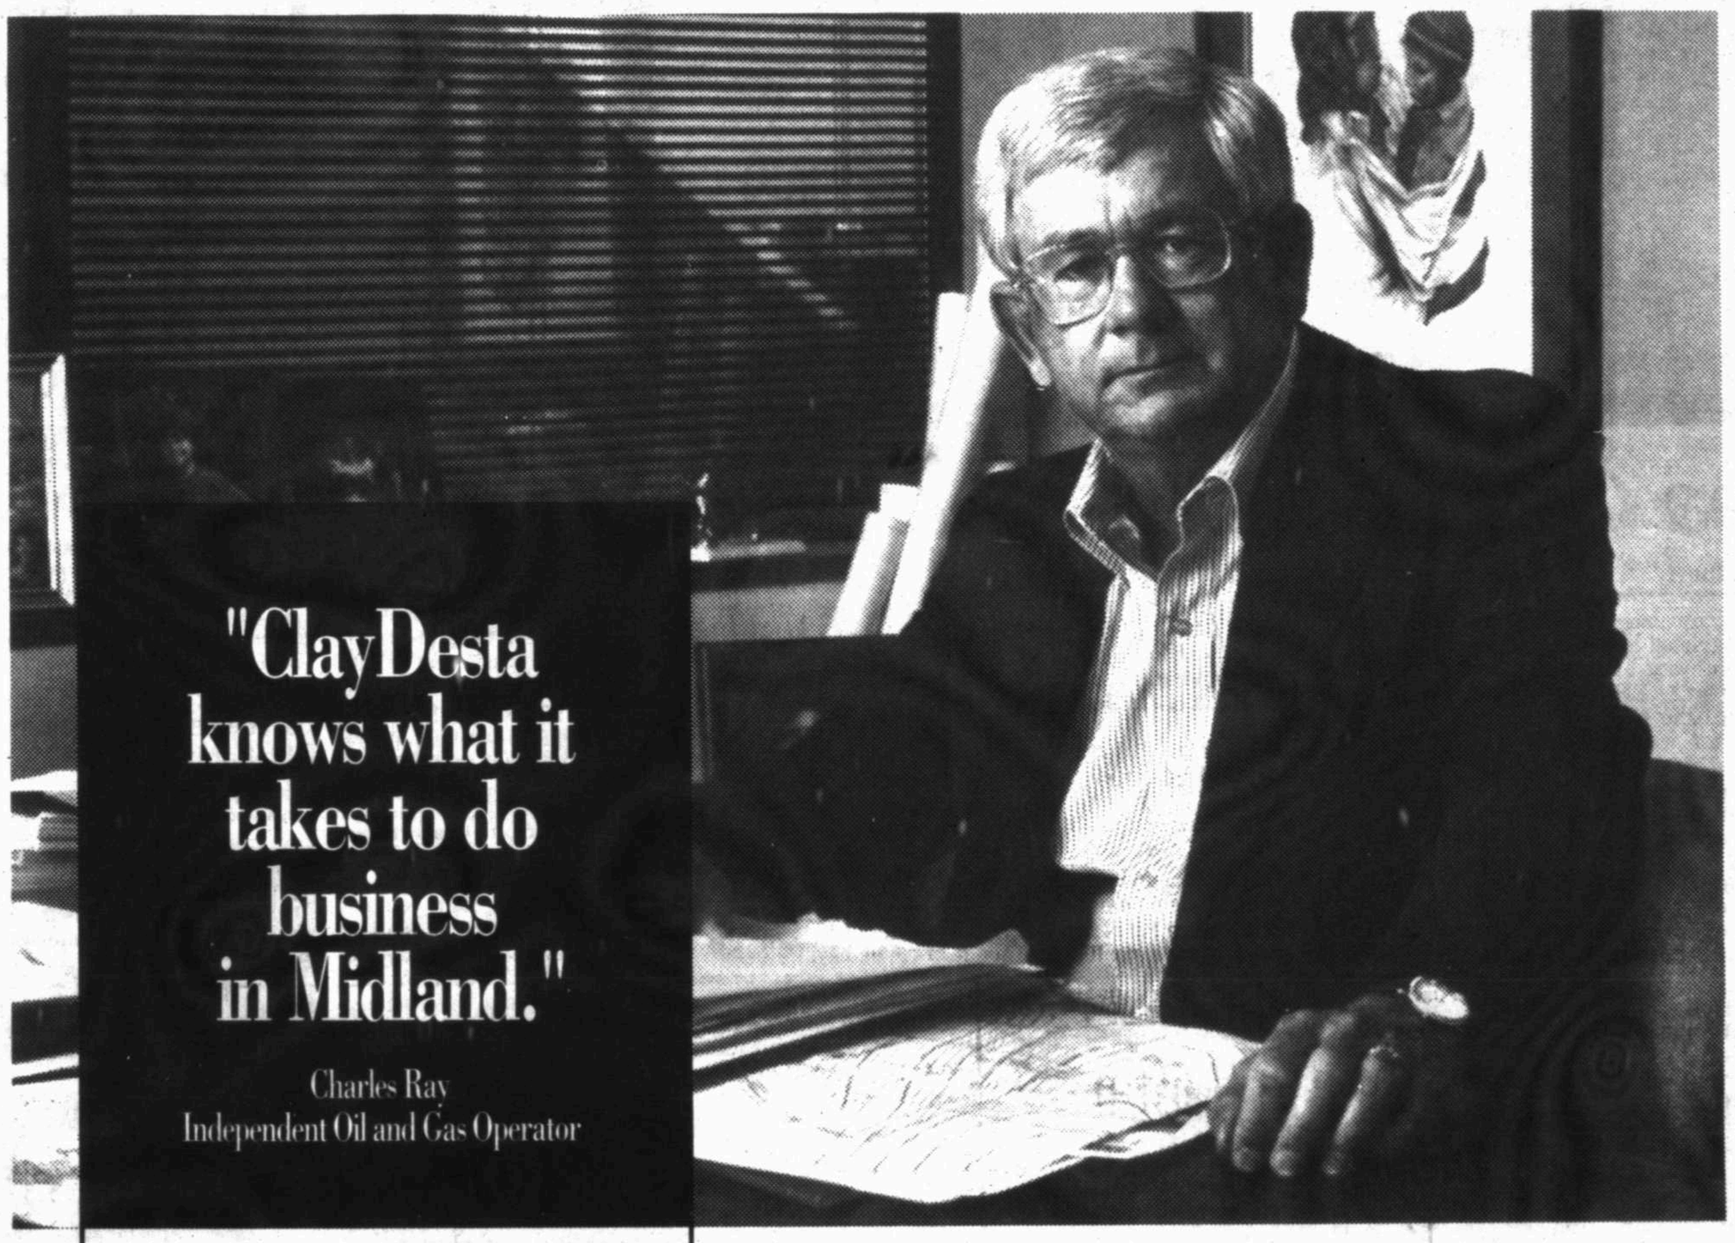

"Maybe people just caught on this is a good company," Van Wagenen said.

Pogo was carved out of Pennzoil Co. in 1977 to look for natural gas in the Gulf of Mexico.

Meanwhile, Houston's Howell Corp. and Nuevo Energy Co. announced that their Paramount Sigler 25-11 well, the sixth well in the North Frisco City Field in Monroe County, Ala., came in at a rate of 3,007 barrels of oil and 3.3 million cubic feet of natural gas on a four-hour test.

Three other sites have also been identified by company officials for future drilling.

Albania hopes to attract oil industry

HOUSTON — Albania is inviting the international oil industry to participate in the exploration and development of its onshore basins.

Details of the first licensing round will be displayed by Albpetrol, Albania's national petroleum company, at the SEG convention in New Orleans October 25-29, 1992, followed by seminars in Houston and London. The total area available for licensing consists of 4400 sq. km. and is divided into 21 blocks. The closing date for the submission of bids is June 30, 1993. Blocks will be awarded September 30, 1993.

Exploration in Albania's offshore acreage commenced in 1991. Blocks have been licensed to five international firms — Chevron, Occidental, Hamilton, AGIP, and Deminex-OMV.

Albania has developed and produced oil and gas onshore for the last 50 years. The decision to initiate onshore licensing reflects the commitment of the country's new democratic government to follow a free-market economy and to cooperate with the international oil industry in further development of Albania's petroleum resources.

The traditional route down Grant St.

OIL SHOW PARADE

Oil Show parades have been a part of the Oil Show tradition since the first show in 1940.

The traditional march down Grant Street may have switched routes, but it has changed little in character over the years. There has always been the pretty girls, the dignitaries, the odd vehicles, bands, novelty attractions, celebrities, and oilfield equipment.

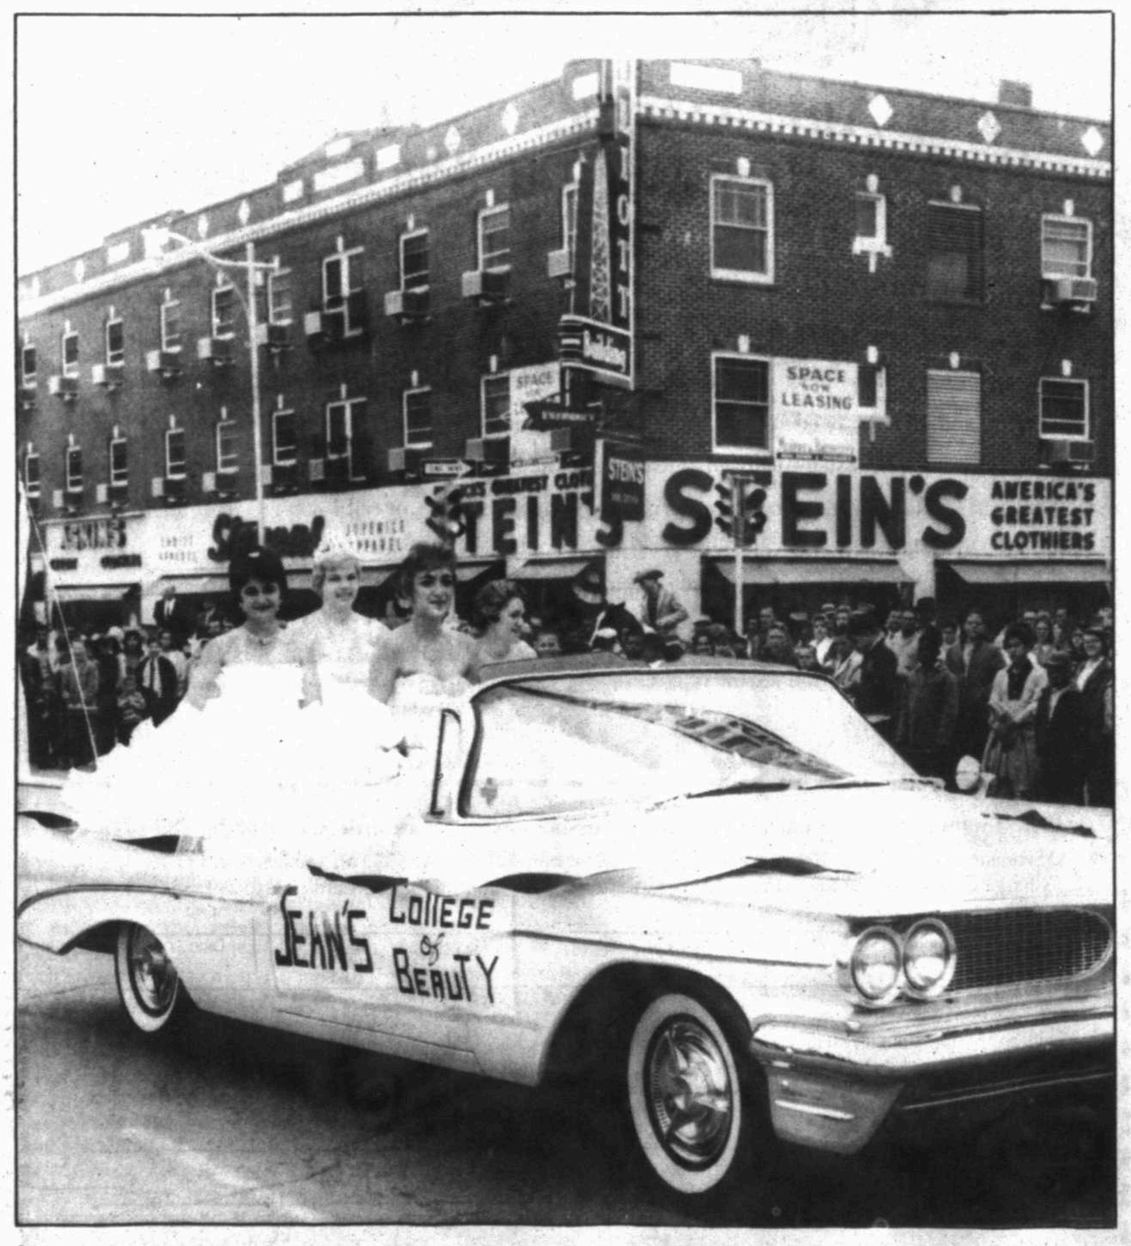

In the early days, it was the only chance many in the Permian Basin had to see movie stars, and oilpatch familes would travel for miles to Odessa to see the likes of Arthur Blake, who portrayed Dagwood in the movies.

It was a time when Grant St. was the undisputed trading mecca for all of West Texas, and thriving, busy stores lined each side of the street, as shoppers from Kermit, Crane, McCamey and Andrews milled along the sidewalks, buying clothes, eyeglasses and other merchandise.

We stack the deck in your favor.

By developing and patenting our Continuous Mix Gel (CMG) System, Smith Energy Services created the industry standard for liquid fracturing gel systems.

This saves you time and money by improving well performance and delivering high quality gel "on-the-fly" with no wasted materrials or disposal problems.

And there is no tank-to-tank viscosity or pH variance as with batch-mixed gels.

We have a full range of products including refined guar, HPG and CMHPG which have been formulated to yield maximum hydration in a minimum amount of time, even at lower temperatures.

The dynamics of our system allow tapered gel loadings with flexible viscosity at the highest rate in the industry. And with the in-line viscometer and mass flowmeter for exact measurements, it is the best monitored and most easily controlled fracturing gel system.

So when you want uniform, high quality gel mixed "on-the'fly," without paying for unused materials, try our CMG System. It's all part of our commitment to excellence.

And you'll have the ace in the hole.

Cross Timbers thrives despite oil slump

N.Y. Times News Service

FORT WORTH, Texas — In the spring of 1986, oil prices made a precipitous crash below $10 a barrel. Thousands of oil industry workers lost their jobs.

Gallows humor permeated the industry. If you asked, "Who's got the biggest oil and gas exploration department in Texas?" the answer was "Burger King."

Amid all this misery — on April Fool's Day 1986, no less — Jon Brumley, Bob Simpson and Steve Palko did the unthinkable.

They started an oil company.

They began with nine employees occupying one-third of a floor of the W.T. Waggoner Building in downtown Fort Worth. Today, their Cross Timbers oil operations take up seven floors and employ 160 people.

The company had virtually no assets when it was launched. Today, Cross Timbers is solidly profitable and has a market value that analysts put at between $250 million and $300 million.

Its operations consist of Cross Timbers Oil Company L.P., a privately held limited partnership, and Cross Timbers Royalty Trust, a separate entity with its units publicly traded on the New York Stock Exchange (a unit is an ownership interest similar to a share of stock). The limited partnership and the royalty trust together have approximately 52.5 million barrels of proven oil and gas reserves.

Arthur Smith, chairman of John S. Herold Inc., a Greenwich, Conn.-based oil and gas research firm, is familiar with Cross Timbers' record of growth.

"I'd say it's been one of the more impressive performances in the industry, to have quietly built a company of that magnitude," he said.

Cross Timbers hasn't drilled any headline-making gushers. It scarcely ever drills high-risk "wildcat" wells in attempts to discover new fields. If you're looking for hell-for-leather, go-for-broke wildcatters, don't bother to knock on Cross Timbers door.

The company has prospered by acquiring existing oil and gas wells with long-life reserves in established fields. It then drills additional, low-risk development wells to boost the fields' reserves and ensure a continued stream of future production.

Cross Timbers has focused its operations in areas such as the San Juan Basin of northwest New Mexico and the Permian Basin of West Texas — places long familiar to oil industry veterans Brumley, age 53; Simpson, 44; and Palko, 42.

Cross Timbers' business strategy and geographic preferences in many ways mirror that of Southland Royalty Co. of Fort Worth, a successful independent oil producer that was acquired by Burlington Northern Inc. for more than $700 million in late 1985 after Burlington launched a hostile takeover bid.

It's no surprise that Cross Timbers bears a strong resemblance to Southland. Brumley, Simpson and Palko were all high-ranking executives with Southland. Brumley, perhaps best-known to the general public as a former chairman of the State Board of Education, was CEO of Southland.

In addition, seven of the 11 vice presidents of Cross Timbers are former employees of Southland.

After Burlington Northern took control of Southland, the trio of Brumley, Simpson and Palko decided it would be fun to form their own little oil company.

"We never thought we'd be this big," Brumley said. "I don't think we ... even dreamed of it."

The trio's solid track record at Southland helped pave the way for Cross Timbers' rapid growth.

With considerable help from the Goldman Sachs & Co. investment banking firm in New York, Cross Timbers has raised $160 million from investors in six limited partnerships that are part of Cross Timbers Oil Company L.P.

Brumley estimates that roughly half the money put into the partnerships has come from former investors in Southland.

Louis Baldwin, senior vice president and chief financial officer for Cross Timbers, says Cross Timbers Oil Company L.P. is "solidly profitable," with an operating income of approximately $40 million annually and a net income of about $10 million.

In 1991, the company formed the royalty trust, an entity that provides substantial tax advantages to investors while also giving them a steady stream of income from oil and gas production. Investors in the trust receive regular monthly payments called "distributions." The money comes from the trust's oil and gas production revenues, which total about $8 million annually.

A trust unit, which sold for $10 in a public offering earlier this year, recently has traded as high as $15 per unit.

Higher natural gas prices have boosted the value of the units, Brumley said. In addition, investors have been lured by the units' attractive yield, which has been in the range of 8 to 10 percent annually. That rate of return looks increasingly enticing with yields having declined drastically for other investments such as bank certificates of deposit, Brumley said.

The royalty trust, with 6 million units outstanding and no debt, has a market value of $87 million.

Based on the market value of the royalty trust and analysts' estimates of the value of the petroleum reserves of Cross Timbers Oil Company L.P., the total Cross Timbers operation has a market value in the range of $250 million to $300 million.

Smith, the John S. Herold firm's chairman, and Chuck Strain, a Houston energy analyst, both value the oil and gas reserves of Cross Timbers Oil Company L.P. at roughly $6 to $8 a barrel. If one takes the lower figure of $6, the reserves are valued at about $252 million.

Exxon's exit from L.A. causes dealers trouble

N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Kathy Simpson called her suburban Warner Ranch Exxon service station a family affair, where her two daughters and son worked with other employees as part of an extended family.

"They're like my kids," said Simpson, who has worked for Exxon for 26 years, the last 19 of them at Warner Ranch.

With Exxon Corp. pulling out of Southern California, Simpson is not sure what will happen to her business at Canoga Avenue and Oxnard Street in the Los Angeles area of Woodland Hills.

These days she's apprehensive about her financial future and angry with Exxon over how the company has handled its departure. She said that Exxon's exit scuttled a potential sale of the franchise and put her retirement in jeopardy.

"They have absolutely destroyed my life," Simpson said recently after posting signs announcing shorter business hours.

Exxon declined to comment. The Irving, Texas-based company said it would stand by its previous statement that the dealers are being treated fairly.

Dealers had heard rumors about Exxon leaving the market for several months, and the company finally held a meeting in early May to discuss the situation.

Simpson recalls being agitated. "I said, 'I want some answers. You're taking my future and my retirement and throwing it in the toilet,' " she remembered saying.

The Exxon representatives said that they did not know of any plans to leave the market but that there were no guarantees. About two weeks later the company announced that it was leaving by Nov. 30.

For Simpson, the timing could not have been worse. It came eight days before the close of escrow on the sale of her franchise.

She had found a buyer willing to pay $400,000 for the business. Simpson planned to use the profits to buy a station in Tempe, Ariz., where she plans to retire.

But with Exxon getting out of the market, the deal collapsed.

Exxon has offered her a severance package totaling about $70,000, not nearly enough to buy the facilities, she said.

Federal law requires that Simpson be given the opportunity to purchase the facilities, but she says Exxon's nearly $2 million price tag makes that an unrealistic option.

The difference in what Exxon is offering dealers like Simpson and what the station operators could sell the franchises for is due to the nature of the service station business.

In some cases, the oil company holds a master lease on the property and sells a franchise to an operator who leases the facility for a period of usually three years. Other times, the oil company owns the land and uses its own personnel to run the station or leases it to an individual. In some cases, a dealer will own the land, buildings and equipment and enter into a supply agreement with an oil company.

Some oil companies have expressed interest in Exxon's stations.

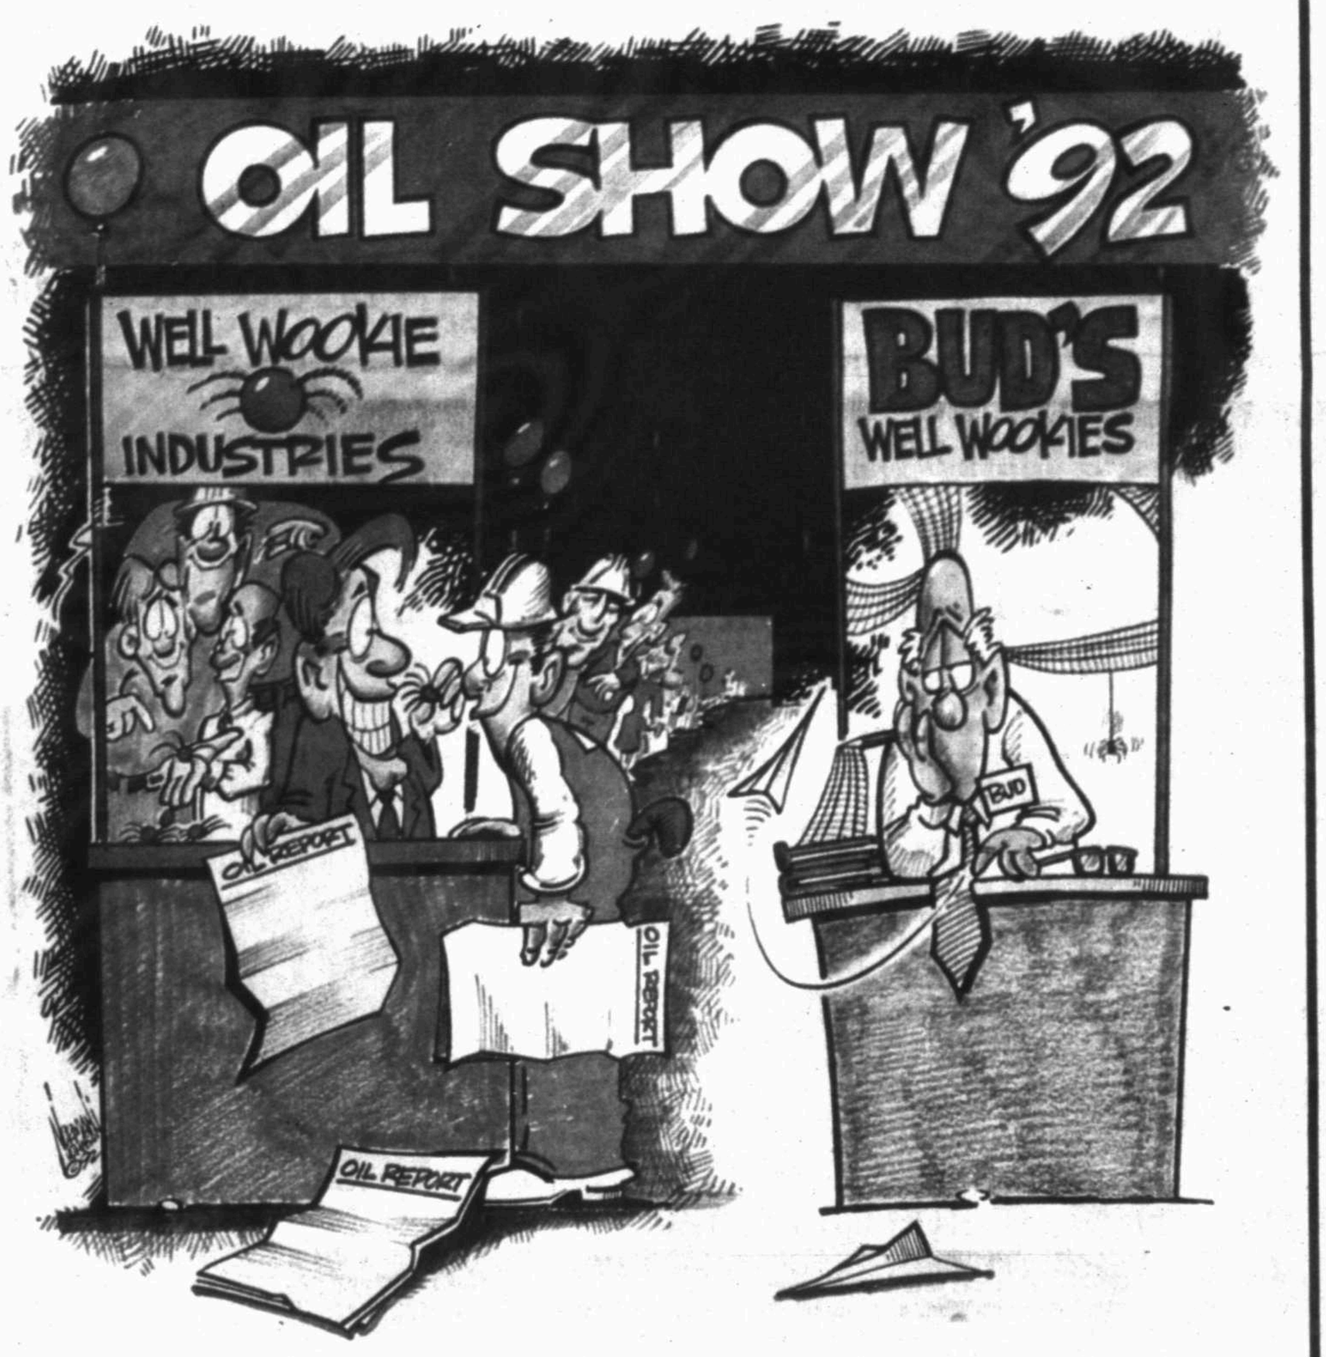

Fairfax, Va.-based Mobil Oil Corp., which is buying 16 Exxon stations, looked at Simpson's business last week. San Francisco-based Chevron Corp. is buying 23 Exxon stations, but Simpson's won't be one of them. There is a Chevron station across the street.

If Mobil or another company buys the station from Exxon, Simpson's franchise will transfer over and eventually she could sell it.

Meanwhile, she is watching a business she spent years building wither away.

And if no one takes it over?

"I'm out in the street. They'll board this place up for a couple of years, and it will create an eyesore," she said.

MEETINGS

SPE study group to host microbe specialist

Brown

Fred G. Brown of National Parakleen Co. will be the guest speark at Wednesday's meeting of the Reservoir Study Group of the Society of Petroleum Engineers. The luncheon will be at the American Legion Hall beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Brown will present a paper he co-authored with L.P. Streeb of Coastal Oil & Gas Corp. entitled "MEOR: Altamont/Bluebell Field Project." The paper presents a field application of microbial treating in the Altamont/Bluebell field in Utah. The project demonstrates the use of microorganisms to treat high wax content crude oil to improve field operations, reduce chemical use, conserve lease fuel, increase production and enhance oil recovery.

Brown holds a bachelor's degree in petroleum engineering from the University of Texas at Austin. He was worked in the oil and gas industry 25 years as a petroleum engineer, including eight years with a major oil company and 17 years as an independent oil and gas operator and consultant. He began working with microbes and their application to the oil and gas industry in 1986.

WTGS schedules special evening meeting

The West Texas Geological Society will hold an evening meeting Thursday at the Plaza Club, beginning with cocktails at 6:30 p.m. and dinner at 7:30 p.m.

Guest speaker will be Dick Brooks, who will offer a journey to some unique West Texas ecosystems. His presentation will include photographs of several natural habitats for vegetation and wildlife in the form of small lakes and ponds of water, trees and plants not indigenous to our area such as the Bald Cypress, Elderberry and Osage Orange.

Brooks is a graduate of the University of Texas at Austin and holds a master's degree from Southwest Texas State University. He taught 29 years at Odessa High School, including courses on ecology, geology, astronomy and physical science.

While teaching geology, he taught a unit of study on the water cycle that included surface and underground water. This led to a study of the Monahans Draw that has continued for 15 years.

Cost is $12.50 per person and reservations should be made by 5 p.m. Tuesday by calling 683-1573.

Environmental topic for natural gas group

Harry A. Spannaus, executive vice president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association, will be the guest speaker at Tuesday's luncheon meeting of the Natural Gas Society of the Permian Basin. The meeting will be at the Midland Country Club beginning at 11:45 a.m.

Spannaus will speak on "The Path to Environmental Extremism."

He is a retired U.S. Air Force Colonel who served in the military for 26 years. He was named executive vice president of the PBPA in 1985. He holds a bachelor's degree in political science and a master's degree in military science from the Air Force Air University.

Reservations can be made by calling 683-5561.

Logging group to discuss North Dakota project

The Permian Basin Well Logging Society will meet Thursday at 11:30 a.m. at the Petroleum Club.

The guest speaker will be Grant Heavysege of Exxon, who will speak on "Applications of Capillary Pressure Data to Saturation Determination at Big Stick Madison Unit, Billings County, North Dakota."

His topic will cover the integration of special core analysis data directed towards fluid saturations with more standard log-derived approaches in the understanding of a complex carbonate reservoir.

Cost is $10 for members, $12 for non-members and reservations can be made by calling 688-2099.

PBGS to hear presentation on Soviet conditions

The Permian Basin Geophysical Society will meet Wednesday at the Midland Center beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Reservations should be made by noon Monday by calling 682-7356.

Kazakhastan sued over contract

DENVER (AP) — United World Trade Inc., a Denver-based oil trading firm, has filed a $26 million lawsuit against the Republic of Kazakhstan, claiming officials there reneged on a long-term contract to supply crude oil.

United World executive vice president Douglas Adams said the Kazakhstan government has refused to honor its oil sales contract, costing the company $2.6 million.

Adams said the company doesn't expect to recover its money, but wants to send a signal to the former Soviet republic and to other businesses seeking to strike ventures in former Soviet republics.

"We want to say 'Genghis Khan is dead. You can't expect to run a country like this," Adams said. "There are certain ways you do business in the world."

United World claimed to provide 60 percent of Kazakhstan's income from oil sales, an amount equivalent to about $45 million.

The Denver firm purchased crude from the state-owned Oil Production Association conglomerate and resold it to refiners in Europe.

United World first signed a contract with the conglomerate, called Mangyshlakneft, in December 1991 and shipped about 200,000 metric tons through the first quarter of this year.

But when it sent a tanker to pick up a shipment in April, it learned a new general director at Mangyshlakneft apparently had nixed the agreement and stopped shipments.

"Typical of many former Soviet republics, this broken contract is a direct result of 'The Big Boss Syndrome,' where all agreements are subject to reinterpretation whenever a new official comes into power," Adams said.

Attorney Karen Ostrander-Krug, of the Denver law firm of Welborn Dufford Brown & Tooley, said Kazakhstan had not replied to the suit, which was filed in U.S. District Court in Denver

Phillips' North Sea tank threatened

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (AP) — Phillips Petroleum Co. accused the Norwegian Petroleum Directorate on Thursday of trying to speed up changes by threatening to close Phillips' oil and gas processing tank in the North Sea.

Phillips said the NPD may order the company's Ekofisk tank closed in three years because of safety reasons, such as aging technical equipment and inadequate maintenance.

"Safety has been and continues to be our number one priority, and we're convinced the Ekofisk Complex is operated in the safest manner possible," said John Whitmire, senior vice president for exploration and production.

He said Phillips believes the NPD wants to speed up changes in the processing and transportation system — changes he said Phillips is considering.

Spokesman George Minter said Phillips has not released the nature of those changes.

Whitmire said the NPD has given Phillips three weeks to respond. Minter said Phillips is talking with its nine partners in the co-venture and NPD to try to reach a settlement.

The tank was installed in 1973 about 200 miles southwest of Stavanger, Norway. It is part of a 10-platform complex that ships as much as 600,000 barrels of oil per day and more than 2 billion cubic feet of natural gas a day to England and Germany.

Another safety concern cited by the NPD is the weakening of the sea bed beneath Ekofisk, Phillips said.

The company said it found in the early 1980s that the sea bed had subsided because of crude oil and natural gas production.

Six of the platforms were raised about 20 feet in 1987. Phillips built a concrete protective barrier around the tank in 1989 to protect workers and equipment from weather.

"We feel the construction of the tank barrier will provide a sufficient margin of safety to protect our people and our equipment," Whitmire said. He said other changes were being evaluated.

Amoco to explore Poland

HOUSTON (AP) — Amoco Production Co. on Friday announced it had signed an oil and gas exploration agreement with Poland, the first such deal between a Western company and the Eastern European nation.

Houston-based Amoco will spend at least $20 million to acquire new seismic data and drill two onshore wildcat wells in each of two acreage blocks.

Although the deal was signed Friday in Warsaw, company spokeswoman Annie Smith said Amoco won't begin drilling until Poland adopts a pending petroleum tax law that addresses activities by Western companies there.

Block A, primarily a natural gas project, contains nearly 1.7 million acres 75 miles southwest of Warsaw.

Block B, located 43 miles southeast of Lublin on the Polish-Ukrainian border, contains 979,000 acres. It primarily is an oil prospect.

Once a tax law is adopted, Amoco has three years to explore, with an option for three more.

"If exploration efforts are successful, the total future investment for a major development project could be potentially much greater than the $20 million we are currently planning to spend," said David F. Work, Amoco Production group vice president for worldwide exploration.

Cigna, USF&G merge gas firms

HOUSTON (AP) — Cigna Corp. and USF&G will combine their natural gas operations under the terms of a merger agreement disclosed Friday.

The Houston Chronicle reported in Saturday editions that USF&G has merged its wholly owned Park Avenue of Oklahoma City into PetroCorp.

PetroCorp is a 6-year-old oil and gas exploration and production partnership.

Cigna previously had owned 84 percent of the partnership, with the balance owned by company management, employees and an affiliate of the New York investment firm Oppenheimer & Co.

Now, Cigna will control 45 percent, USF&G will control 45 percent, with the minority partners' position, dropping to 10 percent.

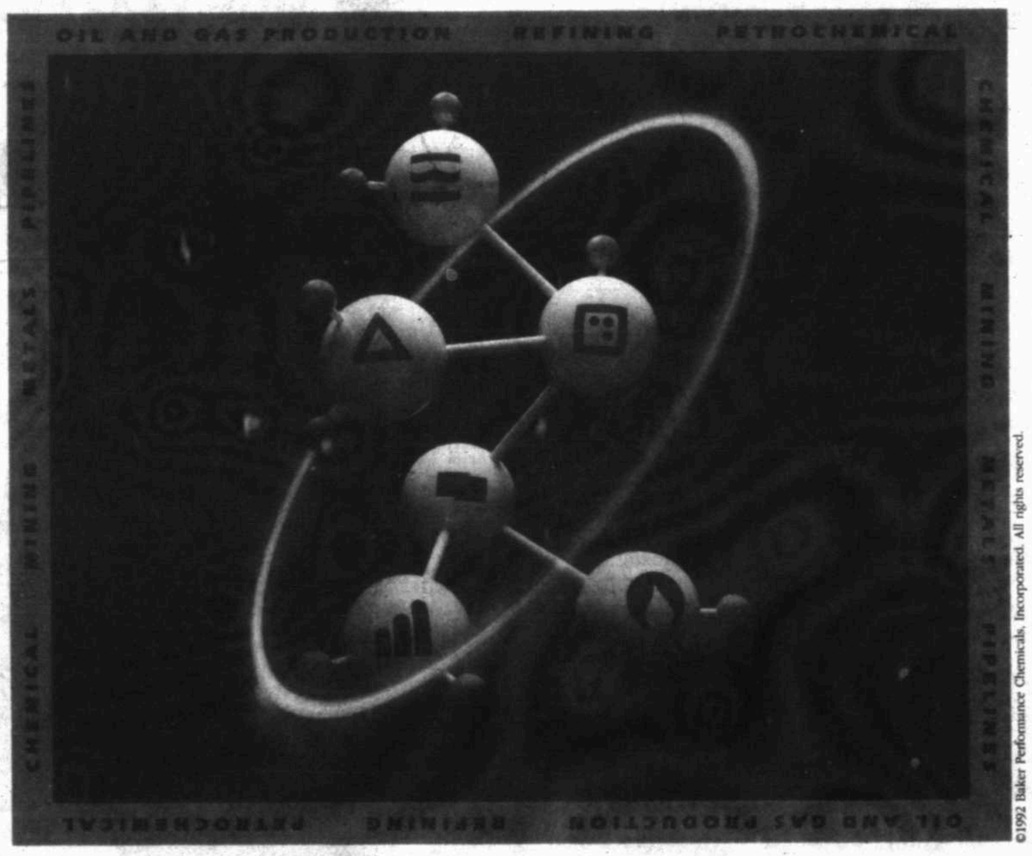

Houston-based PetroCorp has been transformed into a privately held corporation.

PetroCorp's reserves include 93 billion cubic feet of natural gas and 6 million barrels of oil, company officials said. Production totals about 2,000 barrels of oil and 30 million cubic feet of natural gas per day.

EXPECTATIONS 1993

1992 reflects 30 years of PBPA service to the Permian Basin Petroleum industry. In the past three decades we have enjoyed numerous achievements, met difficult challenges successfully but sadly, lost some battles in the Association's plight to enhance the domestic petroleum industry and to defend our members from the unjust legislation which has dismantled the industry.

Many of the problems of the past remain the challenges of today. Perhaps the most demanding challenge is the increased concern for a balance between energy production, and the protection and preservation of the environment. There are many opportunities for industry expansion in 1993 and we look forward for industry revitalization and for a return to enhanced times. Please make early reservations so that we may better serve you.

Self Exam...

By Elizabeth Edwin
Lifestyle editor

The best defenses a woman has against breast cancer are monthly self-examinations, yearly examinations by her doctor and mammograms starting at age 40.

While women at higher risk are more likely to do self-examinations, all women should take this responsibility for their health. For that reason, October has been designated Breast Cancer Awareness Month in hopes of educating women about the disease.

Breast self-examination (BSE) should be done once a month at approximately the same time each month. The best time to examine your breasts, according to Sharron Havens, registered nurse in charge of special projects/oncology nurse at Allison Cancer Center (ACC), and the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists (ACOG), is a few days after the last day of the menstrual period when your breasts are not tender or swollen. For postmenopausal women, a particular day — such as the first of each month — should be established for BSE to create a routine.

A general description of a BSE follows:

The first step to BSE is knowing the normal shape and feel of the breast.

Since the most successful treatment for breast cancer may be given when lumps are found in the earliest stage, it is crucial to know the normal breast and check each month for lumps and other changes.

■ Before a mirror, look for anything unusual. Look for discharge from the nipple, puckering, dimpling, or scaling of the skin. While clasping hands behind the head and pressing forward — feeling the chest muscles tighten — look for any change in shape or contour. Repeat the procedures by placing hands on the hips and bowing slightly forward pulling elbows and shoulders slightly forward.

■ In the shower, raise one arm and use soapy fingers of opposite hand to examine entire breast area with circular motion feeling for any lumps or thickenings. Repeat on opposite breast.

■ Don't neglect the underarm area. This is breast tissue too, where many of the lymph nodes are located. With one arm resting on a firm surface, use a circular motion to examine the underarm area. Repeat on opposit breast.

Please see BSE/2F

Be Aware of Changes

A morning ritual for most women is to look in the mirror, evaluate the image, then prepare to improve it with make-up, hair gels and sprays, clothing and accessories. Once the process is completed, generally there is one more peek in the looking glass in hopes the image has improved.

But what should be a monthly ritual for all women that is much more important and takes less time, yet is exercised less often is the monthly breast self-examination (BSE).

BSE is a method for women to check their own breasts for changes in appearance or feel that might be signs or symptoms of breast cancer.

While many women find the self-examination embarrassing or consider it too much trouble, others say they are afraid of what they might find. These women choose not to examine themselves, trusting that breast cancer won't happen to them or that their doctor will find any problems that exist. However, self-examination can lead to an earlier detection and therefore a better chance of survival.

"I hear from women, 'I don't want to do it because I might find something.' But if you don't find it when it is as small as possible, then it is only going to get worse," said Sharron Havens, a registered nurse who is special projects/oncology nurse for the Allison Cancer Center and a survivor of breast cancer herself. "It depends on the type of cancer it is as to how fast it grows. In younger women, it tends to grow faster, it tends to be more aggressive."

Because breast cancer is the number two cancer killer of American women — second only to lung cancer in recent years — October has been designated as Breast Cancer Awareness Month in hopes of making women more aware of their bodies and the advantages of early detection of breast cancer.

According to the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists (ACOG), five years ago, a woman's chances of developing breast cancer were 1 in 11. Today, they are 1 in 9, an alarming trend to many women.

It is estimated by the ACOG that 180,000 American women will develop cancer of the breast this year. In 1990 (the last year for which figures are available), there were 48 newly diagnosed cases of breast cancer at the Allison Cancer Center/Memorial Hospital & Medical Center Cancer Registry. However, this number represents only the incidence of breast cancer for that one year, which is only a small part of the overall picture of known breast cancer in the Center's Cancer Registry data for 1990. By an American Cancer Society formula based on cases diagnosed in Midland for the past 30 years and the population of Midland, the projection is that the total number of women with breast cancer during 1990 was approximately 480. The last number is referred to as the prevalence of breast cancer for the Center's Registry.

While the number is shocking, the good news is that despite the increasing rates, the death rate from breast cancer has been fairly stable for the past 50 years. The major reasons for this stabilization has been the increased emphasis on early detection and improved treatment. With early detection and prompt treatment, the chances for complete recovery are good.

Therefore it is important for women to arm themselves with the facts about breast cancer and to follow screening recommendations for early detection of the disease.

In addition to self-examination, women should visit their doctors annually for an examination and women who are 40 years of age and older should have mammograms.

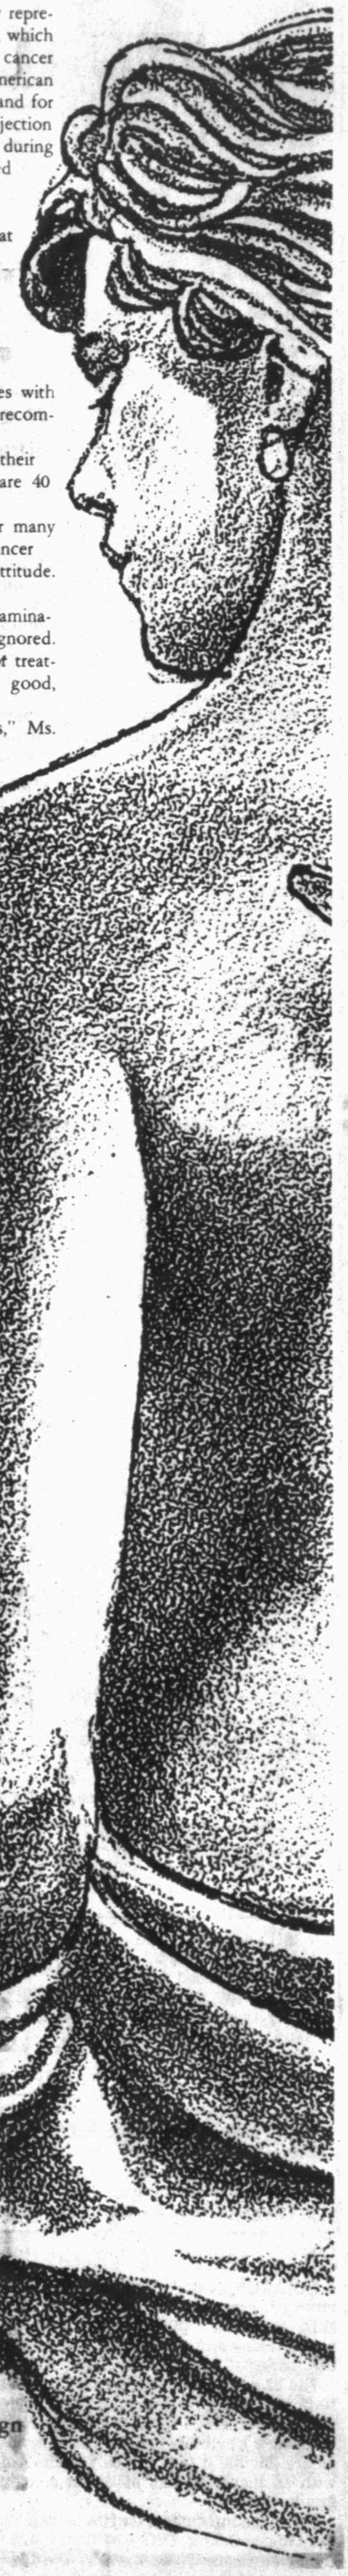

Understanding breast cancer is the key to survival for many women. One reason for the mortality rate of breast cancer patients is due to what some call a head-in-the-sand attitude. Many women fear the loss of a breast, so they avoid self-examinations and mammographies until a lump can no longer be ignored.

However, if cancer is found early, there are choices for treatment, and with prompt care, the outlook is generally good, according to the National Cancer Institute (NCI).

"Women must be aware of the signs and symptoms," Ms. Havens said.

An NCI brochure lists the following breast cancer warning signs:

Please see AWARE/2F

The Great Fear

One of the greatest fears many women have is discovering a lump or abnormality in one of their breasts. However, what many women fail to realize is that early diagnosis of breast cancer increases the chances of successful treatment.

If detected early enough, 90 percent of women are successfully treated, according to the National Cancer Institute (NCI). In many cases, the cancer is detected before it has spread; therefore if surgical treatment is needed, it may be less extensive, often saving the breast.

The most effective way of finding a breast abnormality is a mammogram. A mammogram is a special X-ray picture of the breast used to detect the possible presence of breast cancer in its earliest stages, usually before a lump can be felt or before there are any other symptoms of breast cancer.

According to the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists (ACOG), scientists estimate that deaths from breast cancer would decrease by at least 30 percent if all women would get mammograms as recommended. At this time, it is estimated that only 40 percent of American women follow the guidelines established by the NCI, the ACOG and 11 other medical organizations.

Sharron Havens, a registered nurse in charge of special projects/oncology nurse at Allison Cancer Center, said that according to the guidelines, women should have a base line mammogram at age 35. Women ages 40-49 should have a mammogram every one to two years and women age 50 and over should make a mammogram a part of their yearly physical check up. The base line mammography is beneficial for physicians to refer to for later comparison.

Guidelines endorsed by the NCI, the American Cancer Society, American Medical Association and several other medical and specialty organizations also call for a breast exam by a doctor once a year and women performing regular monthly self-examinations.

The procedure itself is quick, taking usually less than 30 minutes.

To have a mammogram, patients are asked to remove their clothing from the waist up. They are positioned in front of the X-ray machine and two smooth plates are positioned around one breast, flattening it so the greatest amount of tissue can be examined. The procedure usually consists of two views of each breast.

The pressure of the plates does cause discomfort for some women, but the procedure does not take long and the pressure is released.

"The flatter they can get the breast, the better they can see," Ms. Haven said.

High quality mammographic screening is sufficiently sensitive to pick up greater than 90 percent of carcinomas — cancer that begins in the lining or covering tissues of an organ — while they are still in the "minimal" stages, according to clinical studies. These studies also have revealed that a "minimal carcinoma" discovered by any method or combination of methods results in a 5 year survival rate of 93 percent.

When selecting a mammogram clinic, Ms. Havens recommends checking about the following:

■ Look for equipment that is dedicated to mammographies.

■ Be sure the staff is trained in giving mammograms.

■ Check to see the clinic is certified by the American College of Radiation which offers a peer review of staff qualifications, equipment, quality control, image quality, breast dose and quality assurance — a certification which must be renewed every three years.

Doctors often will recommend clinics for mammographies, or will arrange one for you.

The procedure usually ranges from $50 to $100 in cost, according to the NCI. At the Allison Breast Cancer Screening Service, the cost is $50. Some insurance companies will cover or partially cover the cost of screening mammograms, so patients should check with their insurance carriers about their policies.

Even with the positive statistics associated with mammograms and early diagnosis, many women chose not to have them done, saying they don't want to risk the radiation. However, the NCI and ACS report that the risk is minimal. Improvements in mammogram technique over the past 20 years has reduced the amount of radiation needed to an extremely low level. Evidence also suggests that radiation exposure after age 35 has far less potential for harm than in younger age groups.

"There is less radiation from a mammogram than there is with a chest X-ray," Ms. Havens said.

In addition, the ACS states that any risk must be weighed against the potential benefits of an early diagnosis of the disease and successful treatment.

Woman's Club hosts stylish fund-raiser

By Marilyn McKnight Harrison

As its first fund-raiser of the 1992-93 season, the Midland Woman's Club held a fashion show and luncheon at the Hogan Park clubhouse recently.

McKnight-Harrison

Entitled the "Seven Faces of Eve," the show by Julian Gold focused on accessorizing and assembling separates. Two models, one attired in a basic black dress and the other in black pants and top, showed the many styles that can be achieved with different jackets and accessories.

Vicki DeShaw, manager of Julian Gold, told the audience how to update their current wardrobe with accessories. She stressed that by adding a jacket, scarf or even a purse, a whole new look can be created.

Forming a backdrop for the show were three white columns, with side panels containing colorful accessories.

A lovely luncheon beforehand featured chicken breasts in wine sauce over spinach noodles as the piece de resistance and a choice of either lemon icebox pie or cheesecake with apricot sauce for dessert.

The tables were decorated in a fall motif with cornucopia, overflowing with fruits, leaves and gourds. Pumpkins and scarecrows also were used to decorate.

Among those seen at the event were Elinore (Mrs. C. Louis) Chase, Rosalind (Mrs. J. Evetts) Haley, Angie (Mrs. Carroll) Grafa, Dell (Mrs. George) Shettle, Maneeta Heckathorne, and Fran (Mrs. Gene) Schutte with her sister, former Midlander Nita Holman Waters of Hull.

Madge (Mrs. Porter) Wallis is ways and means chairman for the club, and Dorothy Perkins is this year's president.

WORD HAS BEEN received here of fall fraternity pledges from Midland.

Among them are:

Texas Christian University — Phi Delta Theta: Gavin Hudgeons, son of Penny and Jerry Hudgeons, and Chip Wagner, son of Lissa and Cyril Wagner Jr.; Phi Gamma Delta: John Waller, son of Barbara and Tom Waller.

Texas Tech University — Kappa Sigma; Doug Rogers, son of Peggy Rogers and Red Rogers; Sigma Phi Epsilon: Thad Reese, son of Genny and Bill Bynum; Charlie Thomas, son of Chris and Charles Thomas, and David Worley, son of Jeanne and Bill Worley.

University of Texas-Austin — Phi Gamma Delta: Trevor Durham, son of Rhonda and Lynn Durham Jr.

University of Tulsa — Sigma Chi — Mac Nichols, son of Judy and Jack Nichols.

In addition, former Midlander Matt Freeman, son of Dave Freeman of Lubbock, has pledged Phi Gamma Delta at Texas Tech.

CONGRATULATIONS TO Frank Petty, who was named an honorary lifetime member of Ham Hocks at the annual meeting of the Midland Community Theatre's support group.

Now retired from Unocal, Frank has been active with the theatre for approximately 30 years.

Frank's volunteerism began at the theatre's old location on Indiana Avenue, where he worked stage crew and set construction. He continued with construction when the new Theatre Midland was built on Wadley Avenue. He remains active by working with Summer Mummers and the MCT bar crew.

Frank was named Ham Hock of the Year in 1970.

THE MIDLAND COUNTY Republican Women held their "Pink Elephant Ball" recently at Midland Country Club. The event is held only during Presidential election years to raise proceeds for Republican candidates.

The dance, which featured the music of the Park Avenue Band, was followed by a buffet breakfast.

The focal point in the club foyer was a 12-foot pink elephant, fashioned by Kris James, made from pink balloons, with fresh pink and silver floral arrangements on either side.

The table centerpieces in the ballroom consisted of white ceramic elephants placed on silver mylar, which was sprinkled with pink stars. The elephants held tall black pillar candles and silver, pink and black balloons with ribbons. The bandstand was flanked by tall mirrored elephants.

Chairman of the ball was LaVerne Foster, assisted by Midland County Republican Women president Sharon Spear-Smith.

AWARE: Early detection can save a life

(From 1F)

■ A lump or thickening in the breast or under the arm.

■ A change in the size or shape of the breast.

■ Discharge from the nipple.

■ A change in the color or feel of the skin of the breast or areola, such as dimpling, puckering or scaliness.

The brochure emphasizes that pain is not an early warning sign of cancer, but with any change in the breast a woman should contact her doctor.

Women also should be aware that finding a lump or change in the breast does not automatically mean she has breast cancer. Four out of five breast lumps are not cancerous, according to NCI.

Some lumps are fluid-filled cyst that often can be drained by fine needle aspiration. A lump also can be a benign tumor and often can be surgically removed with no further problems. Some lumps may require no treatment, but the doctor may want to check the woman regularly.

If a biopsy of a lump shows it is cancer, the sooner treatment can begin, the better the success rate will be.

For those women who do get breast cancer, there are numerous support groups available through ACS. Reach To Recovery is a one to one visitation program specifically for women with breast cancer. All volunteers in the program are women who have had breast cancer and are able to help the newly diagnosed patient in their physical, emotional and cosmetic needs related to her disease and treatment.

"We aren't there to answer medical questions. We are there to be someone who understands a least in part what she is going through. They know you've been where they are and they can tell you everything," Ms. Havens said. "You learn a lot from talking with others."

THE ACS ALSO sponsors an ongoing Breast Cancer Support Program for breast cancer patients and their families. It provides an opportunity to share common experiences, problems and solutions.

For information on either program, call 685-1562.

Because women tend to "hide their heads in the sand" about the disease or believe that it won't happen to them, Ms. Havens emphasizes that it can happen to anyone. Most people think of breast cancer afflicting older women or women with a family history of the disease. And while both age and family history do increase a woman's risk, it is certainly not limited to these groups, she said.

"In my talks about cancer, I don't focus too much on risk factors except for family members with the disease because many (breast cancer patients) don't have any of the risk factors," Ms. Havens said.

"When I got it, I didn't fit into any of the risk categories. ... We really want women to know that anyone can get breast cancer.

"The most frequent (risk) is family history, especially if it occurs before menopause. These women's daughters are at a higher risk.

While post-menopausal women's daughters have a higher than average risk, their risk is less than premenopausal women," Ms. Havens said.

Personal history also increases a woman's risk. Having cancer in one breast means the risk of getting cancer in the other breast is about four to five times higher than the average. According to the National Cancer Institute, about 15 percent of women treated for cancer in one breast are likely to get cancer in the other breast later on.

WHILE A woman's risk of breast cancer increases with age, Ms. Havens warned that younger women need be aware too. "Breast cancer patients are becoming younger and younger," she said. In fact, Ms. Havens said she knows of two 29-year-old women in Midland who have breast cancer. "That's why it is so important for every woman to do self-examination."

In addition to family/personal history and advancing age, other known risks include early onset of menstruation, late menopause, having the first child after age 30 and never having children.

Although breast cancer is considered a woman's disease, it is possible for men to get it as well. It is estimated that it will affect about 900 men each year, according to NCI.

According to a release by the ACOG, "Despite headlines that might lead us to believe that oral contraceptives and estrogen replacement therapy are identified causes of breast cancer, most studies do not find any relationship between these medications and the disease. In addition, reports linking high levels of dietary fat and alcohol consumption with increased risk of breast cancer are conflicting and do not provide any evidence of true risk."

Other misconceptions include that a blow to the breast can cause cancer or that breast-feeding increases the odds of getting breast cancer, but there is no evidence or research to support either of these ideas.

However, even knowing what the risk factors are is no help in determining who is more at risk of having breast cancer. According to an ACS study, only one quarter of all breast cancer cases can be linked to any known specific causes, leaving three-quarters of the cases at large. Therefore, this study emphasized that all women should consider themselves at risk and take an active role in detection the disease.

At this time, scientists do not know exactly what causes breast cancer, nor do they have a simple test to determine who will and will not develop the disease. The only precautions women have at this time are BSEs, regular examinations by their doctor and mammograms after age 40.

General information about cancer is widely available. The National Cancer Institute-supported Cancer Information Service can be contacted at 1-800-4-CANCER to answer questions from cancer patients and their families. Information specialists also provide information and booklets on all aspects of cancer, and know about cancer-related services in local areas.

The National Cancer Institute has several booklets for cancer patients, their families and friends. They are available by calling 1-800-4-CANCER or writing to Office of Cancer Communications, National Cancer Institute, Building 31, Room 10A24, Bethesda, MD 20892.

Information about cancer also is available from the local American Cancer Society Office, 2304 W. Wadley, Midland, Texas 79705, 683-6374; the Allison Cancer Center, 2205 W. Tennessee, Midland, Texas 79701, 685-0625 or 1-800-491-0625.

Single, free copies of "Detecting and Treating Breast Problems" (AP026) are available by sending a stamped, self-addressed, business-size envelope along with the name of the booklet to The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, Resouce Center, 409 12th Street, S.W., Washington, D.C. 20024.

CANCER: Mammograms provide early diagnosis

(From 1F)

The Allison Cancer Center and the American Cancer Society offer brochures and information about mammograms and breast cancer. For more information, contact the Allison Cancer Center, 2205 W. Tennessee, Midland, Texas 79701, 685-0625 or 1-800-491-0625; or the American Cancer Society (locally), 2304 W. Wadley, Midland, Texas 79705, 683-6374.

Single, free copies of "Mammography" (AP076) are available from the ACOG by sending a stamped, self-addressed, business-size envelope along with the name of the booklet to The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, Resource Center, 409 12th Street, SW, Washington, D.C. 20024.

BSE: Learning the procedure

(From 1F)

■ Lying flat, place a pillow under one shoulder and the same arm behind the head. This flattens the breast, making it easier to check. With the free hand, examine entire area with circular motion. Repeat on opposite breast.

For more information about breast cancer and more detailed information about BSE, the ACC, the ACOG, the American Cancer Society and the National Cancer Institute all offer brochures. Most doctors will show patients the correct procedure as well.

Study looks to breast cancer prevention

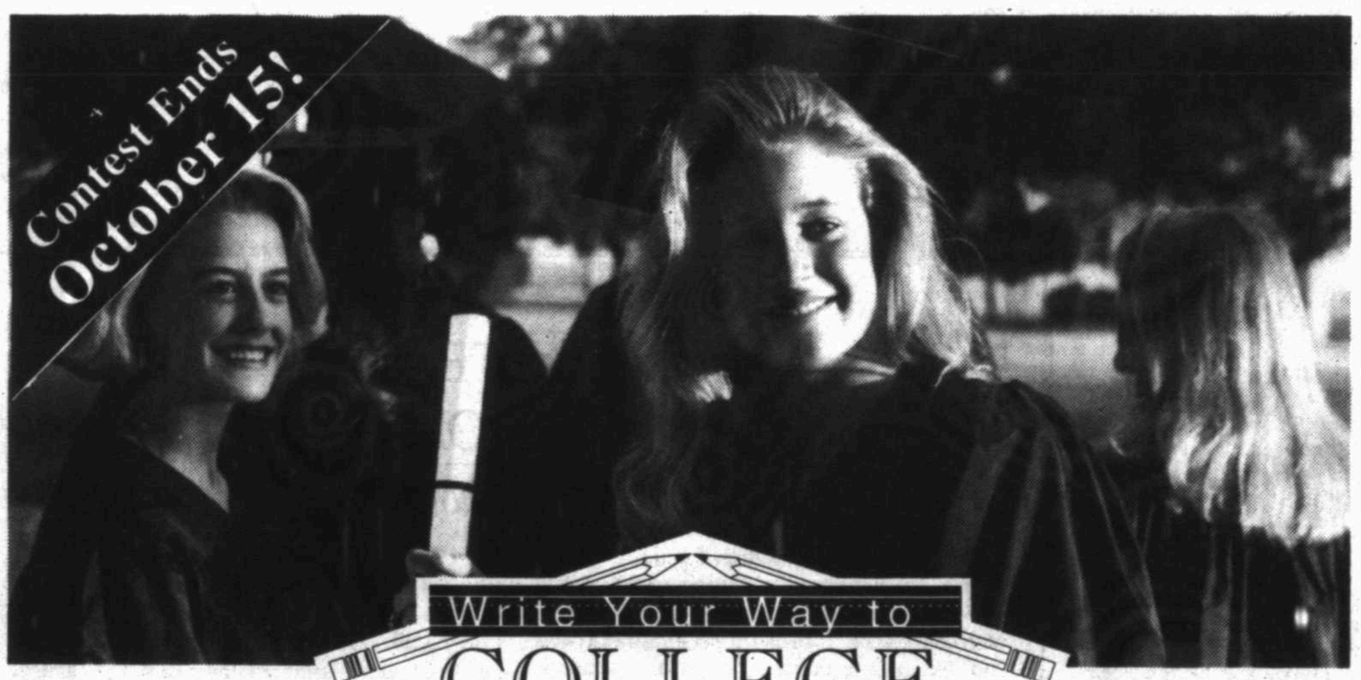

HOUSTON — More than 100 women have signed up to take part in an innovative breast cancer prevention study at The University of Texas M.D. Anderson Cancer Center. Forty of those women already have begun taking either the drug tamoxifen or a placebo. Dr. Victor Vogel is the principal investigator of the study.

The Breast Cancer Prevention Trial was announced last spring by the National Cancer Institute and 270 participating centers across the country. M.D. Anderson researchers hope to enroll 300 women over the next two years. Eligibility is determined by a written risk assessment. Women are eligible if they are 60 years or older, or if they are age 35 to 59 with an increased risk of breast cancer, the major risk factor being family history.

For more information, write to The University of Texas M.D. Anderson Cancer Center, Office of Public Affairs, 1515 Holcombe Boulevard, Houston, Texas 77030.

AT WIT'S END

Stupidity has its own reward

By Erma Bombeck

In our family we have a Mentally Incompetent Award that is passed around like a trophy. It's a mythical Oscar or Emmy that we earn by doing something so incredibly stupid that the only thing more stupid is to tell someone about it.

Bombeck

It's just dumb stuff. My husband got the MI award for driving 50 miles with his emergency brake on. One of my sons got it when he splashed salsa in his eye, and when he went to the restroom to wash his eye out, his contact lens washed down the drain.

I don't know why we feel the need to confess. Is it cleansing? Get real! I think we're just looking for someone to say, "You're not so dumb. Wait till you hear this!"

The dubious award is a revolving one, and I have had possession probably longer than anyone in the family. For example: A fan asked me for an autograph, and the only thing I had to write on was the parking ticket for my car at the airport garage. That was dumb.

I tried to defrost hamburger a few years ago by using a method a friend told me about. She said, "Just put the hamburger in your dishwasher and push 'dry.'" I pushed "fill."

One year my daughter took the award away from me when she was taking pictures of the pope's visit and thought she was pushing the button to open the lens cap. She was pushing the button that opened the back of the camera. The one that ruins film.

I quickly regained it when I cut in front of a police cruiser to make a U-turn to get a parking spot on the opposite side of the street.

For some reason my mother had the award last, and I called her the other day to say, "I have once again claimed the Mentally Incompetent Award."

"What did you do?" she asked.

"How long have we lived in this house?"

"Fifteen years," she said.

"Has it or has it not always had a lawn chair just outside the kitchen door? (She grunted yes.) This morning I jammed my toe into it and broke it."

Mother didn't say anything at first, but then she said: "The award stays here. You know how I hate to iron? Well, the other day I had the board up and I got that big tablecloth out of the dryer where I store it and I started to iron it. The wrinkles weren't going out. I looked down, and in the spray can was oven cleaner."

We all do stupid things. Some of us are just award winners.

Alcohol affects people differently

NEW YORK (AP) — It takes less alcohol to intoxicate a woman than a man of the same body weight, according to medical researchers. This is because women's bodies contain proportionately less water than men's, so the alcohol is less diluted as it passes through a woman's system.

Self-sabotage destroys marriage opportunities

Associated Press

Single women today fall into two categories — the admirable unmarried and the new breed old maid.

The new old maid, according to an article by Kay Williams Graves in a recent issue of Cosmopolitan, doesn't get married because she sabotages herself in one of several ways.

■ The faultfinder — a world class complainer. "A woman becomes an old-maid type by getting into the habit of looking for the negative," said Penelope Russianoff, a New York City psychologist and author of "Why Do I Think I Am Nothing Without A Man?"

"She walks around with a flaw-detecting kit and finds plenty to complain about. And naturally, when she becomes an expert at the negative, it spills over into her relationships with men."

By setting hard-to-meet criteria, she is able to justify her pickiness and will reject men for almost any reason.

■ The Me, Myself and I Kind. "Such a woman," New York City psychotherapist Linda Barbanel said, "uses other people for her own self-aggrandizement. But the me-me-me syndrome is a turnoff to you-you-you. Nobody likes to be used."

■ The modern-day martyr — she sacrifices her own fulfillment for the sake of others, gauging her own worth by how much she is needed.

"These are women who are desperately seeking to fill themselves up," said Melvyn Kinder, a Los Angeles psychiatrist and author of "Women Men Love, Women Men Leave." "Unfortunately, they end up as doormats because they don't know how to give to themselves."

The new old maid, no matter the type, lives with a constant fear.

"Whether it's a fear of rejection or of being swallowed up and losing her identity, or a fear of commitment or criticism or sex, she is crippled by it," Barbanel said. "Fear causes her to recoil and protect what she has rather than take risks and connect with others."

To stop being an old maid and become instead an unmarried woman following her own agenda takes courage, soul-searching, a lifestyle change, even giving up a job or a certain circle of friends if necessary. You must work toward bettering your self-esteem.

"Once you're in the position of enjoying yourself, enjoying life, you will become a magnet to men," Russianoff said.

A total attitude overhaul, however, is not an easy endeavor. Some women find the inner strength to examine their flaws and correct them. Others seek the help of a trained professional, either individually or through a support group.

"When you are interacting with the group," Georgetown University psychiatrist Brian Doyle said, "you can try out your new behavior on them before you venture out with it."

The experts advise women to visualize what they want their lives to be like, get rid of the clutter — the meaningless tasks and activities that fill your life but not your soul — and shed unhealthy friendships while forming new relationships. Included in your new friends will be new men friends.

"Learning to like men has to come before learning to love them," said psychologist Kinder, and Russianoff added, "Say to yourself, 'I'm going to see what I can enjoy with this man,' then give the relationship time to grow. You don't have to reject every man immediately. You can learn to like him as a person, not a potential husband."

Psychiatrist Doyle said "the ability to love, and love unselfishly, is probably one of the most important concepts that fuels the chemistry between people — especially between men and women."

Trust is key to marriage after an affair

By Terry Lee Goodrich
N.Y. Times News Service

Some call it the impossible dream: Putting a marriage together again after an affair.

Nevertheless, it's a goal many people try to achieve, say therapists who will speak Thursday through Oct. 18 at the 50th Anniversary Conference of the American Association for Marriage and Family Therapy, convening in Miami Beach.

Affairs abound: Twenty-six percent of wives and 44 percent of husbands will have at least one affair sometime in their lives, according to one study done by therapists at Catholic University in Washington, D.C.

"From the work I do, I get the impression this is rampant," said Leo Fay, marriage and family therapist and a conference speaker.

Fay and his partner, Judith Gilbert-Kautto, are co-directors of The Marital Project at the Center for Family Learning in Rye Brook, N.Y. In their presentation, they list steps aimed at repairing the loss of trust that follows an affair.

The steps are based on the affair no longer being a secret and on the husband's and wife's desire to stay together.

"In most of the cases, but by no means all, the affair is ended," Fay said. "If not, that's the first piece of work to be done. The person having the affair has to end it, and the other person has to be clear in developing a bottom line as far as what they will and won't put up with."

The issues to deal with in recuperating are simple but tough.

The couple must examine the emotional climate of the marriage before the affair began — a sort of preventive medicine against future affairs.

"I know of a husband who began having an affair with a work colleague after his wife, who was a teacher, would routinely spend three late afternoons a week at her mother's," Fay said.

"She'd pick up the kids, have dinner at her mother's and spend the evening there until about 9 p.m. — not so much that she wanted to, but her mother insisted," he said. "The husband felt very resentful."

The wife was puzzled over his resentment, since the man worked until 9 p.m. anyway.

Justified or not, "an incredible amount of emotional distance was happening," Fay said. "That's not an excuse for an affair, but that's the process that was going on."

The betrayed spouse must identify what he or she needs from the husband or wife before they can begin to trust again.

For some, it may be truthful answers to the questions of who the spouse had the affair with, and where and when it happened.

The details may hurt, but "once they start to talk about the affair to the spouse, loyalty can shift to the spouse and not the other person," said another conference speaker, Shirley Glass, a Baltimore marital therapist and researcher. "Otherwise they're protecting the person they had the affair with and making it more likely to happen again."

It also may be that betrayed spouses may, for a time, keep the other spouse on the proverbial "tight leash."

"It might be that the spouse who had the affair may need to tell the other where they're going, when they're going to be home and other things like that until trust begins to build again," Fay said.

Many times, the affair is not the only issue of distrust. There may be distrust on the part of the person who had the affair, and that needs to be addressed too.

For example, "in the case of the teacher, she talks about her trust being shaken by her husband's affair. But he doesn't trust her, either — not about an affair, but to not be constantly critical," Fay said.

"He feels that nothing he's done has ever been good enough for her, so he doesn't trust her to not beat him over the head with all the things he's done wrong."

One of the more vital steps a couple can take to prevent future affairs and repair the marriage is to build their closeness and deal with marital problems within the marriage, rather than going elsewhere for help, Glass said.

"A lot of affairs begin with emotional intimacy and understanding," Glass said. "One of the first zones people cross that creates vulnerability for an affair is they start talking to someone of the opposite sex about problems in their marriage.

"They're probably talking more to the friend about the marriage than they are to their spouse."

There can even be an "emotional affair" — an affair that involves no sex.

"As the relationship becomes more guarded and secret, a spouse can feel just as betrayed (as if there were a sexual affair)," Glass said.

Working through the steps to rebuild the marriage will be long and difficult, but some couples are able to use the aftermath of an affair as an opportunity to examine and reconstruct the marriage so it is stronger than before.

"Nobody welcomes this kind of pain, but it can be used," Glass said.

Flea collar caused eye worry, study says

Associated Press

NEW YORK — A woman who sought emergency care for a shrunken pupil in one eye blamed it on a glancing blow to the head, but the real reason was probably a flea collar, doctors say.

The 36-year-old interior decorator had been struck by a hammer that fell about a foot from the top of a ladder.

The next morning, she noticed that her left pupil was tiny while the other one appeared normal.

A doctor found the left pupil only slightly smaller than the other, and by 20 minutes later it was the same size as the other. In response to questions, the woman said that sometime before she noticed the shrunken pupil she had changed her dog's flea collar, and soon after had put a contact lens in her left eye. She did not wear a contact lens in her other eye.

The flea collar contained a dusting of a substance that can make the pupil shrink, so contamination from the collar is the logical explanation for the woman's episode, doctors from Brockton Hospital in Brockton, Mass., wrote in the September issue of the Annals of Emergency Medicine.

Credit cards are thieves' target

By Leonard Sibane
N.Y. Times News Service

Howard Greene, a New York executive, had reason to be livid earlier this year. One of his credit cards had been rejected by a store clerk. The next day, his wife, who had another credit card, received a letter from the issuer asking her to confirm that she had changed her address.

Both the Greenes were victims of fraud. After many weeks of frustration, Greene, who always pays his bills on time, discovered that the account on the first credit card was delinquent because a thief had persuaded the issuer to provide an additional card and to send all bills to another address. A similar operation was under way with his wife's account, but it was unsuccessful because the issuer took the time and trouble to confirm the request before mailing a new card.

"This was a bizarre coincidence, but it is apparently very easy for some thief to use my credit card," Greene said. "The overall feeling was one of extreme vulnerability."

Greene is one of many Americans who are victims of a type of credit card scam known as account-takeover fraud. Indeed, an increasing number of consumers are either denied credit or asked to pay for unauthorized charges because someone else has obtained enough personal information about them to get a credit card in their names. By the time the victims are aware that a fraudulent card exists, many charges may have been made and the thief is no longer at the address used to deceive the lender. In practice, however, most banks do not hold consumers responsible for fraudulent charges.

Vicky Cohen of Freehold, N.J., was told one day by her letter carrier that her local post office had received a form stating that she was going on vacation and requesting that mail be temporarily forwarded to a Manhattan address.

"They got my home address and put in a change of address to get my mail in order to get my credit card," she said. "I was lucky I was home when the mailman came."

There are no hard statistics on the total amount of account-takeover fraud because it is not reported as a separate category of credit card fraud the way many other kinds are. But there were more than 500,000 cases of overall bankcard fraud last year, resulting in losses of more than $500 million, the American Bankers Association reports. And experts in this field say that account-takeover fraud is spreading rapidly because credit card criminals are becoming better organized and efforts to combat the use of lost or stolen cards are increasingly successful.

"It's been going on for at least 10 years and it's rising," said H. Spencer Nilson, publisher of the Nilson Report, a credit card industry newsletter in Los Angeles. "When this happens to any individual, it's a headache getting anyone to believe your story."

Bankers and other credit card specialists concerned about the spread of account-takeover fraud have recently been stepping up their efforts to attack it. At a meeting this summer of the International Association of Credit Card Investigators, one panel discussed the ways that accounts are taken over and steps that institutions can take to avoid it.

"Thieves get information that theoretically only the true card holder should know," said James T. Huskey, president of the group. "And a lot of the new addresses they provide are mail drops."

Philip Verdi, an executive vice president of Mastercard, added: "This is a two-man war game. We do something, the thieves catch up with us; we do something else, they catch up with us again."

Where do thieves obtain the personal data necessary to get a credit card that has been assigned to another person? Sometimes they get it from copies of sales contracts or resumes that fall into their hands. Sometimes they get it by illegally tapping into a credit bureau's files or requesting information from a bureau on false pretenses. And sometimes they get it from one of the ubiquitous preapproved credit applications that millions of households receive regularly.

"You should tear up these credit applications, not just toss them away," said Ann Windham Wallace, director of the federal Office of Consumer Affairs.

There is another thing you can do to help prevent account-takeover fraud: know the approximate time of the month your statement is due and notify the issuer if it does not arrive.

'Earth Kind' methods friendly to environment

By Deborah A. Benge

Benge

No stranger to our Permian Basin soils are nematodes, one of the most common, destructive and difficult pests to control in home gardens and flower beds. Many gardeners have encountered this pest, but few have conquered them.

This unseen enemy, the nematode, is a microscopic round-worm that lives in that lives in the soil and feeds on the roots of developing plants. Conservative estimates show that the root knot nematode is the single most damaging pest to gardeners and that it can be found in at least 50 percent of all home gardens.

Plants infested with root knot nematodes are usually stunted, yellow in color and often die prematurely: When removing unproductive plants, examine roots for the presence of "knots" or galls. Okra, tomato, bean, cucumber, marigold and mulberry are good indicator plants to check. Dig roots rather than pulling and wash roots to get a good look.

Don't confuse the nitrogen-fixing nodules on legumes, like beans and peas, for the galls of root knot nematodes. Beneficial nodules on legumes are attached to the side of the root, whereas nematodes galls are formed in the root.

Traditionally, nematode control has been limited to caustic soil fumigants, and these may be necessary in severe infestations. The Texas Agricultural Extension Service is emphasizing "Earth-Kind" procedures, those that are environmentally responsible. The Earth-Kind nematode control approach encompasses four major steps: (1) planting "Elbon" cereal ryegrass in the fall as trap crop; (2) planting resistant varieties; (3) using crop rotation; and (4) using soil solarization during hot summer months.

Confirmed by thorough testing, planting Elbon cereal ryegrass as a trap crop is the best non-chemical means of controlling root knot nematodes. In addition to that, it beautifies during winter when green is scarce, protects topsoil from erosion by wind or water, and it adds valuable organic matter to the soil. This type of "green manure" crop decomposes in the soil to:

- Make sandy soils hold much needed water and nutrients;
- Make tight soils friable and easier to work and improve drainage; and
- Add organic matter to our organic matter-poor soils for better plant performance.

This additional organic matter also helps by increasing the populations and activities of nematode-trapping fungi, predacious nematodes (yes, there are beneficial nematodes as well as harmful) and encouraging the internal parasites of nematodes.

Roots of Elbon cereal ryegrass serve as a trap for nematodes. Once nematodes enter the cereal ryegrass roots, they cannot escape and are doomed. When the rye decomposes, it releases organic acids which further reduces the alkalinity of certain garden soils.

You can begin planting Elbon cereal rye now and continue until early November. Plant by sowing one to one and a half pounds of seed per 100 square feed of garden area. Rake seed in lightly and keep soil moist until they are established. Once the rye is established, be sure to water regularly and fertilize on a monthly basis. Dried blood is a rapidly available organic source of fertilizer. Shred rye before it forms a seed head with a string trimmer or lawn mower and till into the soil one month before planting so it will have plenty of time to decompose.

This is absolutely one of the best things you can do to help reduce root knot nematodes and add organic matter to your soil. So do it this fall the Earth Kind way by planting Elbon cereal ryegrass.

DEAR ABBY

Couple's money squabbles no credit to either

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Last year, my boyfriend (I'll call him Danny) came down with hepatitis, so I took some time off work to take care of him.

Van Buren

After he recovered, he dumped me. Because we had been intimate, and I knew that he had quite a few relationships with various females, I went to a doctor for prevention vaccinations. It cost me $1,100, so I asked Danny to help me with the bill. He refused, saying it was my responsibility.

I am a real estate agent and business has been very slow lately. Meanwhile, Danny has a job with a six-figure income.

I owed the hospital a balance of $350, so I put it on Danny's credit card. (He'd given me the number of his card a long time ago when he asked me to do shopping for him.)

Was it wrong of me to have used his credit card to pay off the balance of my hospital bill? Now Danny is bad-mouthing me to his family and friends. Abby, this is a man who brags about his integrity and honor. What is your opinion? — WRONGED IN ORANGE COUNTY

DEAR WRONGED: Even though I think Danny should have helped you with the hospital bill, you had no right to use his credit card without his permission.

Danny's "honor and integrity" are nothing to brag about. Be grateful that he dumped you. You are better off without him.

DEAR ABBY: I enjoyed your column on words. I, too, have noticed how frequently the word "up" is used. Enclosed is an item from the Reader's Digest. I regret that it is not dated, but I have had it for at least 25 years. — GEORGE HOMMES, ORLAND PARK, ILL.

DEAR GEORGE: Although I'm already up to my ears in "ups," I welcome your contribution.

WHAT'S UP

"We've got a two-letter word we use constantly that may have more meanings than any other. The word is UP.

"It is easy to understand UP, meaning toward the sky or toward the top of a list. But when we waken, why do we wake UP? At a meeting, why does a topic come UP? And why are participants said to speak UP? Why are officers UP for election? And why is it UP to the secretary to write UP a report?

"The little word is really not needed, but we use it anyway. We brighten UP a room, light UP a cigar, polish UP the silver, lock UP the house and fix UP the old car.

"At other times, it has special meanings. People stir UP trouble, line UP for tickets, work UP an appetite, think UP excuses and get tied UP in traffic.

"To be dressed is one thing, but to be dressed UP is special. It may be confusing, but a drain must be opened UP because it is stopped UP.

"We open UP a store in the morning, and close it UP in the evening. We seem to be all mixed UP about UP.

"In order to be UP on the proper use of UP, look UP the word in the dictionary. In one desk-sized dictionary, UP takes UP half a page; and the listed definitions add UP to about 40.

"If you are UP to it, you might try building UP a list of the many ways in which UP is used. It may take UP a lot of your time, but if you don't give UP, you may wind UP with a thousand." — FRANK S. ENDICOTT

Recreational vehicles drive along the Alaska Highway at Kluane Lake in Canada's Yukon Territory. The highway with its spectacular scenery was the original road from nowhere to nowhere, slicing through wilderness to traerse the Canadian Rockies into Alaska. Canada and the United States celebrate the road's 50th anniversary this year.

Alaska Highway celebrated

Northern 'road to nowhere' opened 50 years ago this month

By Ian Mader

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — It was the original road from nowhere to nowhere — slicing through the wilderness, traversing the Rockies, spanning more than 100 rivers, winding and twisting and unpaved.

But the Alaska Highway was one thing more: It was an engineering miracle.

"It wasn't quite the Panama Canal," recalls Walter Mason, 77, who commanded one of the platoons of engineers who built the road in 1942. "They moved a lot of dirt for that. But it was the time we had to do it in."

"The Japanese were crawling all over the Pacific. Originally the road was to take years. Then they decided to do it in one."

In fact, it took eight months and 12 days.

The first route through Canada to Alaska was completed on Oct. 25, 1942. Fifty years later, the road once known as the Alcan Highway has changed the face of Alaska.

It has been an artery for trucks serving the oil-rich North Slope; it has been the major overland route for people moving to Alaska; it has carried hordes of recreational vehicles to America's "Last Frontier"; it has brought modern benefits and modern ills to Native peoples along its route.

"Many times things start with a simple idea and the idea kind of mushrooms. People never thought the highway would serve the purpose it does now," said Lufti Raad, professor of engineering at the University of Alaska Fairbanks.

A HALF-CENTURY ago, the reasons for an overland route to the huge, sparsely populated territory was twofold. The Soviet Union, an ally, needed delivery of military hardware. And America's northwest flank needed protection.

The Canadian government resisted a highway and the influx of Americans needed to build it, but relented after the Japanese bombed Pearl Harbor.

The highway was built by seven engineer regiments of the U.S. Army — three of them all-black with white officers. They felled trees, put down gravel and built pontoon bridges at a breakneck pace.

The Army made an effort to keep the black regiments away from populated areas in Canada and Alaska and minimize publicity about them. Only recently did a Veterans of Foreign Wars post in Anchorage honor seven black veterans for their roles in the construction of the highway.

"Hell, we stayed out in the damn woods, freezing our ... you know" said one, Richard E. Trent. He winked slightly. "It leaves you in awe to think why it took so long for us to get our recognition."

Today's two-lane Alaska Highway spans 1,422 miles from Dawson Creek, British Columbia to Delta Junction, Alaska. More than 90 percent is paved, and no more than 60 miles pass without a gas station.

THE ALASKA Legislature allocated $1 million in 1991 to get the American portion in tiptop shape for the anniversary. Freezing and thawing buckle the asphalt each year. In some areas, the asphalt collapses.

"Every summer there's areas that tend to give up, you know, and it sags," said Wayne Eagle, Tok area maintenance manager

Nantucket has long history

Associated Press

NANTUCKET, Mass. — This island in the Atlantic, called by the Indians "Far-away Land," became part of the Plymouth Colony in 1621.

It was first settled in 1659 by Thomas Macy and a group of Quakers and was part of New York province until being transferred to Massachusetts in 1692.

From about 1690 to 1840, Nantucket was a bustling whaling port. The island has many cobblestone streets and quaint old buildings. These include the Jethro Coffin house (1686), the old mill (1746), the Friends Meeting House (1838) and several historic lighthouses.

A popular resort, Nantucket's attractions include a Whaling Museum, built in 1847 as a sperm-candle factory.

Disorder linked to lack of sunlight

NEW YORK (AP) — One in 11 residents of Fairbanks, Alaska, suffers from a recurring form of depression that appears in fall or winter, a study estimates.

More than one in four may have at least mild symptoms of the condition, called seasonal affective disorder, researchers said.

The disorder is marked by such symptoms as excessive sleep, irritabilty, weight gain and craving for carbohydrates. It is estimated to affect about 6 percent of the adult population of the United States.

The condition is blamed on the reduced availabilty of sunlight. Previous studies had also shown greater prevalence of the disorder in northern regions, where seasonal shifts in availability of sunlight are more pronounced than they are closer to the equator.

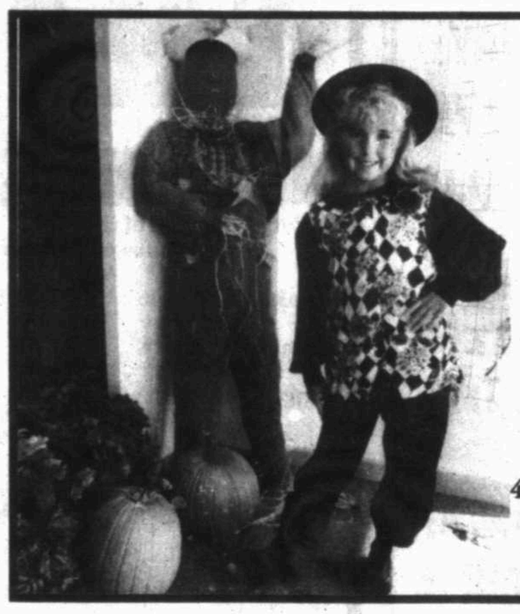

At Fairbanks, daylight at the winter solstice lasts about three hours and 42 minutes, but at summer solstice it lasts 21 hours and 49 minutes, said the report from the University of Alaska in Anchorage.

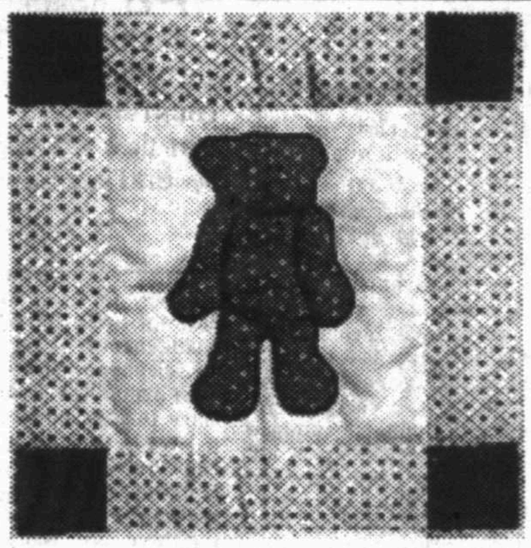

The study, published in the September issue of the American Journal of Psychiatry, involved interviews with a random sample of 283 Fairbanks residents who had lived in Alaska for at least three years.

Nine percent of participants met criteria for seasonal affective disorder.

Members of the U.S. Army's 97th engineering regiment, a black regiment with white officers, work on the Alaska Highway in 1942 near Midway Lake, Alaska. The road, considered an engineering miracle winding and twisting across the Rockies and Northwest wilderness, celebrates its 50th anniversary this year.

HIGHWAY: Construction completed in months for the state. "But the Alaska Highway is probably in better shape that its ever been."

(From 7F)

Between 40,000 and 50,000 vehicles enter Alaska over the road each year, about 10 percent commercial. The 1968 oil strike in Prudhoe Bay boosted commercial traffic; it peaked in 1975 during the building of the trans-Alaska pipeline.

The state Division of Tourism said travel into Alaska via the highway is up 30 percent this year because of the anniversary.

And sometimes it is hard to believe this road was not built for tourists, offering vistas of snow-frosted mountains rising behind stretches of ochre tundra, and close encounters with moose, bear, Dall sheep and occasional herds of caribou and bison.

The tourists have created livelihoods for auto mechanics, motel owners and Native crafts people, and have given life to countless communities and truck stops along the road in Canada and Alaska.

TOK, A COMMUNITY at the intersection of the Glenn and Alaska highways near the Alaska-Canada border, has grown from a road camp established in 1942 to a town of nearly 1,000 inhabitants, specializing in motels.

Still, Yvonne Kisoun of the Yukon Indian Council said Native Canadians agreed to participate in the anniversary only if it was officially called a "commemoration" rather than a "celebration."

"Because of the things the highway brought" — disease, alcohol, a cash economy and other things that permanently changed the Natives' nomadic lifestyle — "we felt we couldn't celebrate it," said Kisoun.

BUT WALTER Mason intends to celebrate this road he helped build when he was a man of 27. "The road's a part of me and I'm a part of it," he said.

This summer, Mason returnedo Alaska from his Virginia home to make a home video among the slim, spiky black spruce that skirt much of the highway.

Mason, whose son Charles is a well-known Alaskan photographer, will drive over the modernized highway and the pristine wilderness and remember the patriotic effort of the 97th Engineer Regiment 50 years ago.

"Remembering all the sweat we put in ... I've had a number of experiences, but none more profound than that," he said.

Hotel bills can be surprising

By Jennifer Merin

NEW YORK (AP) — The room rate is $125 per night and you've been at the hotel for three nights. Your bill should be $375 plus tax and maybe another $10 for a few local phone calls and one short, late-night call home.

But when you check out, the phone bill is $32. And there's a $15 charge for snacks from the mini-bar when all you did was feast with your eyes.

The hotel cashier explains:

Local calls made from your room cost $1 each, including toll-free 800 numbers. There is a 30 percent surcharge on long distance calls, or a $1 charge if you call collect. The mini-bar automatically charges items to your bill when they are removed from their slots. It has no way of acknowledging that you put them back. A can of Coke from the mini-bar costs $2.50, a vodka miniature is $7.

After a bellman is dispatched to check the mini-bar stock, the charges are removed from your bill. But you're stuck for the phone. You made the calls, and claiming ignorance of inflated fees is no excuse for not paying for them.

Conveniences you take for granted at home can be real budget busters on the road. When traveling abroad, for example, excessive telephone fees are difficult to avoid. From Mexico City to Monte Carlo, hotels charge $5 to $10 just to connect a guest to a long distance operator. If you must call home but can't get to local telephone company offices, pay the connection fee but reverse the charges. That should save you about 25 percent on the call.

Phone charges for business travel, no matter where, are probably included in allowable expenses, but many companies won't cover the mini-bar. It may be best to stay away from the fridge and use the pay phones in the lobby.

If you must phone from your room, ask when you check in what calls cost. It's easy to overlook those rate placards on desk tops or night tables or price lists pressed into hotel information notebooks and tucked in a drawer.

If phone surcharges are excessive, consider another hotel. Rates and policies vary. For example, Hotel Nikko at Beverly Hills is one of the few business hotels that has no telephone surcharge. Essex House Hotel Nikko New York, owned by the same company, charges 90 cents per call whether it's a local or 800 number, paid collect or by credit card or as a service charge on direct dial long distance calls.

Brian Honan, marketing director at the Essex House, says phone surcharges defray the hotel's cost of providing the service.

"At home, you pay base rates for utilities," he says. "Consider this the same. We pay for phone lines into the hotel, for equipment and maintenance — and commissions to telephone service wholesalers who handle our system — and we have to pass along the charges.

'At home, you pay base rates for utilities. Consider this the same. We pay for phone lines into the hotel, for equipment and maintenance — and commissions to telephone service wholesalers who handle our system — and we have to pass along the charges.'

— Brian Honan
marketing director, Essex House

When the little refrigerators first appeared, labor intensive servicing and large inventory costs had to be defrayed. Now, computers automatically add charges to guest bills as items are removed. They even keep track of what sells best and what needs to be restocked. The system practically runs itself, and charging $8 for pretzels that cost $1.25 at the corner store seems excessive.

If you know you can't resist temptation, refuse to take the mini-bar key from the check-in clerk. Stock up at the convenience store, instead.

Free call speeds money transfers

Associated Press

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. (AP) — Wiring money cross-country began in the 1850s, when America had more than 50 telegraph companies.

Today people can still send cash quickly for long-distance emergencies such as car breakdowns and stolen wallets.

But computer technology has replaced the telegraph in handling the 14 million or so cash transactions annually.

One money transfer service, American Express MoneyGram, is the first to offer its customers a free three-minute call anywhere in the U.S. and Canada.

The free call can be made up to seven days after the funds have been transferred.

Pickwick Players:

Rehearsing for Brian Kral's "Troubled Waters" are, from left in above photo, Kyle Scribner, Amy Mills, Kendra Alvey and Justin Merritt, and from left in left photo, Merritt, Ms. Alvey and Scribner. The Pickwick Players are to present this play 1:30 p.m. Saturday at Theatre Midland and during the week for eighth-graders in the Midland Independent School District.

Drought had weakened the deer. Many of them were destined to die.

This question is among those posed in Brian Kral's play, "Troubled Waters," being presented by the Pickwick Players, Midland Community Theatre's youth performing troupe.

Kral's character, Michael, a park ranger, presents the audience with one solution: "Two years of drought had dried out the Everglades, this was followed by a flood. The deer were underweight and slowly starving to death. It was suggested that the stronger deer would have a better chance to survive if the weaker ones were thinned out ... a mercy kill."

The play deals with the issue of whether man should intercede in a natural disaster or let nature run its course.

"One of the most interesting things about the play is it doesn't present a solution, it presents several sides to the issue," said Rene Brister Chambers, MCT's educational theater director and director for this production.

"We hope the production will make people consider the consequences of modern society on wildlife."

She said "Troubled Waters" is a different experience for the teen-age performing troupe.

"Most of the plays that the Pickwicks do are based on fairy tales or famous children's books. They're intended for a younger audience, and they're usually stylized acting.

"This play, because it's contemporary and realistic, is a different style of acting, and it's a play that speaks to issues they're concerned with and their peers are concerned with."

The play is aimed at older elementary, junior high and high school students, Ms. Chambers said. It will be presented to eighth-graders in the Midland Independent School District this week.

Cast members include Amy Mills, Kyle Scribner, Kendra Alvey, Justin Merritt and Charlotte Martin. Stage manager is Russell Parker.

"Kyle Scribner is JD, the young man, who feels caught between the views of his older brother, Michael (Merritt), who is assisting with the mercy kill and his sister, Sandra (Miss Alvey), who is a part of the protest against the hunt," Ms. Chambers said.

"JD's best friend, Bet (Miss Mills), passes on no opinion of the situation, but she gives JD insights into Native American beliefs about the land and animal rights.

"In her conversation with JD, Bet says, 'I can tell you what the Indians did. They lived with the deer and respected them. Indians weren't afraid to kill a deer, but the important part was that they put that deer to good use. Every bit of meat or patch of fur had some purpose to those people.'"

Ms. Chambers feels that teen-aggers, like the Pickwick Players, will be intrigued by "Troubled Waters."

"This is a play for teen-agers and not for children, not to say that the play is inappropriate for children, although I do think smaller children will find it a little wordy," Ms. Chambers said.

"In my dealings with Pickwicks, one of the things that they are most concerned with is conservation, and I think that's true of their friends. That's why I think the play will interest them."

"Troubled Waters" is to be staged in Davis Theatre I, at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave., at 1:30 p.m. Saturday.

Tickets for children under 12 are $4. One adult is admitted free with each child. For reservations call 682-4111.

Tesla

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff writer

Tesla drummer Troy Lucketta is tired after being on the road for almost a year.

"It's kind of exhausting," he said. "It can get a bit rough at times — different cities and the hours you keep — two hours a night five nights a week with all that traveling, it has a tendency to wear you down.

"It'd be real easy for me to (complain) about it. There are sacrifices. I have a family and some of us are married. It's not what it's cracked up to be. Maybe it used to be sex, drugs and rock 'n' roll, but it's a lot tamer today."

Luccketta isn't really complaining. He's just explaining the down-side of being a member of a band that has had three consecutive platinum albums ("Five Man Acoustical Jam," "The Great Radio Controversy" and "Mechanical Resonance") and is known to tour hard and long with each album.

But he'd rather talk about the positive side of his job.

"It's a great job, an opportunity to travel, to see the world and to touch a lot of people's hearts."

Lucketta, who is "grateful" to be "out here on the road," realizes he doesn't have much to complain about when he thinks about natural disasters occurring in this country as well as the economic plight in which many people find themselves.

"When I think I have a problem, I can open my eyes and look around and see how really good I've got it.

"We're so fortunate to be traveling and doing what we love to do and having a successful tour. It's nice to be able to give something back. We do some charity things — softball games, backstage passes, supply food banks."

Ector County Coliseum is to be one of Tesla's stops before the heavy metal group heads home. Today's concert, which features Firehouse as the opening act, starts at 7:30 p.m.

Since its beginnings in Sacramento, Calif., Tesla has enjoyed a steady rise in popularity and its members have remained constant the past eight years: guitarists Frank Hannon and Tommy Skeoch, vocalist Jeff Keith, Brian Wheat on bass, and drummer Luccketta.

Life for Luccketta is "pretty complete. I'm just extremely happy and grateful today. I genuinely love all these guys very much, and I'm really grateful to have them in my life today. We have worked through a lot of stuff over the years, and the change today is amazing to see."

Luccketta said his love for music dates back to childhood, and like the rest of the band, said he was not drawn to rock music because of the desire to become a rock star.

"(Music is) such a great form of communication for one. Music breaks all barriers. For somebody like myself looking back to my younger years, it was the one thing that got inside of me that brought out emotions and feelings."

He said the reason he was drawn to a career in rock music was "just for the love of music.

"And today it really hasn't changed that much. It was not that I got in this business to be a rock star. Whether you are a drummer or guitar player or a singer, it's a form of expressing yourself. That's what it's always been for me, and I try to make that work for myself today."

Although Luccketta's instrument of choice is drums, he started on the guitar, and he plays piano.

"What little writing I do today, I do on the guitar or piano," Luccketta said.

All members of Tesla write music. And all five members were active participants in the group's current album, "Psychotic Supper."

"I feel great about the new record," Luccketta said. "It's the first record that we've done that we all came collectively together on. No compromises. It's a record that we are all very proud of.

"We care so much about the future of Tesla as a band, we don't think about ourselves. It's like a marriage, we fight and argue, but our relationship carried through on this album, and it comes through in the music."

The title of this album, as was true of two previous albums, bears a connection to the band's namesake, inventor Nikola Tesla.

Tesla, who died in 1943, was an electrical engineer who invented, among other things, the alternating-current induction motor.

Part of the inspiration for the album's title "Psychotic Supper" came from the inventor's germ phobia. Tesla would ritually clean each dish, glass and piece of silverware with 18 napkins — he liked his numbers divisible by three — before eating, according to a spokesman for Geffen Records, Tesla's label.

HOROSCOPE

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 11, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Good will and positive influences prevail. Complete your holiday gift-buying before Dec. 1. New financial rewards come your way for past work. Be sure to keep expenses under control early in 1993. An urge to splurge could deplete your savings. You will take several steps up the career ladder as spring approaches. Someone with a lot of charisma will seek your company next June. Take things nice and slow in romance.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: singer Daryl Hall, author Elmore Leonard, actors Roy Scheider and Ron Leibman.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Once you reach an understanding about a family budget, insist that everyone play by the rules. Good luck accompanies those who travel to a foreign land.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Negative feelings can keep you from reaching a coveted goal. Say "goodbye" to vague doubts. Words a parent spoke long ago prove comforting. Flex your muscles on center court or in the gym.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Taking a short trip today will give you the intellectual stimulation you need. Some unexpected news enlivens your evening. A confidential chat could lead to new business or a thrilling romance.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Contact with friends is very helpful today. The afternoon favors renewing your ties with close relatives. A promotional idea merits further attention.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You may have to give in to a family authority figure in order to restore domestic peace. Later on you will know that you made the right decision. Put romance on the back burner.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Do not bite off more than you can chew just to impress someone. Handling certain practical matters lovingly will bring you and a special person closer. Take care of home repairs.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Develop those skills that will make you feel more confident both in public and within the family circle. A journey you begin today will prove lucky. A cash reward could be involved!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Go out of your way to please others and you will be the one reaping the real rewards. A romantic trip will be everything you hoped. Outdoor activities lift your spirits sky-high.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Accept the fact that your loved ones have rights, too. Do not be selfish about weekend recreational plans. A gesture of financial generosity will be long-remembered.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your good sense keeps you on the right path to personal success and eventual happiness. Do not be swayed by what your parents think. Keep your thoughts and actions very positive.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You can have your say next week, but for the good of all, let someone else present their viewpoint now. A romantic relationship is slowly deepening.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): There is strength in numbers right now. Quit trying to go it alone. A walk in the park or countryside invigorates you. Keep hidden romantic desires to yourself for a while longer.

Opening lead: Ace of ♠

Vicky Sawyer (17), of Occoquan, Va., and Chris Austin (14), of Riverdale, Ga., won the Junior Pairs at the recent Summer North American Bridge Championships in Toronto. This is one of the new events that the American Contract Bridge League has created to reawaken an interest in bridge among young players.

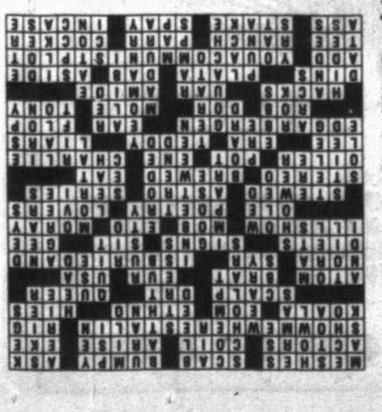

With all the brashness of youth, Austin and Sawyer, North and South respectively, blasted into six diamonds. South's jump to three diamonds cannot be faulted, but North's Blackwood leap to four no trump was certainly looking at life through rose-colored spectacles, since the pair could well be off two quick spade tricks.

Six diamonds had no play until West elected to lead the ace of spades. That, and a most fortunate lie of the cards, was all Sawyer needed to bring home her optimistic contract.

West shifted to a heart at trick two. Declarer shot up with dummy's ace, drew two rounds of trumps and then cashed the king of spades. Declarer still needed to find two parking spots for losing hearts, so her next move was to take the club finesse despite the singleton in her hand.

When that worked, declarer could almost claim. The ace of spades lead made it a moral certainty that East held the queen, so declarer cashed the ace of clubs for a heart discard and then led the jack of spades from the table. When East did not cover, declarer discarded a heart and all was well!

Dutch musuem discovers early Disney movies

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — The Dutch Film Museum has unearthed what it believes are the only surviving copies of six early Walt Disney films, silents made between 1923 and 1927, spokesman Rene Wolf said recently.

The films, each lasting five to 10 minutes, are among 15 short Disney films discovered recently in the museum's Amsterdam archives where they apparently lay unnoticed for decades, Wolf said.

"As far as we've been able to ascertain no one, not even the Disney archives in Los Angeles, has these six titles," he added.

Wolf said Disney worked personally on the films as part of an "Alice in Cartoonland" intended as sequels to his earlier "Alice in Wonderland."

The 35mm black-and-white films are captioned in Dutch, Wolf said.

They are an early example of combined live action and animation, featuring a young actress playing Alice superimposed on a cartoon background.

Disney later rejected this approach in favor of fully animated films.

Hispanics in the Oil Patch

By Jeffrey McDonald

The role of the Hispanic in the oil industry has traditionally been a small one, especially as one moves upward, through the 'white collar' levels of management and executive positions. But that is beginning to change, and as the Permian Basin prepares for the semi-annual Permian Basin Oil Show, NuevaVista took a tour of the 'oil patch', meeting Hispanics who work in this all-important industry.

When one thinks of the oil business, they probably picture someone like Albert Ureta of Odessa. Ureta, a driller with Hondo Drilling Company of Midland, is the man in charge when it's time to begin drilling a well, or as he says, 'make some hole'.

"Mainly, you have to make sure that everything's running alright, keep it turning to the right, make some hole," said Ureta, a 10-year veteran of the oilfield. "Keep it clean, you know, the rig. Make sure nobody has any accidents. Supervise everybody, and just run the rig."

It's the kind of activity we all see on the evening news whenever there is a story about the oil industry. But long before Ureta and his crew can begin drilling, a great deal of work has already taken place, and this is where Minnie Sustaita, a joint interest engineer with the western district office of ARCO Oil and Gas Company, based in Midland, comes in.

"We look after joint-operated properties," explained Sustaita, who has also worked in reservoir engineering and gas marketing. "Any proposals that come in from other operators, such as Conoco, or Exxon, or Mobile, have to come in through us, to evaluate, to approve or disapprove."

"We have meetings with our co-owners, mainly looking after our joint-operated properties in both the financial aspect and the engineering aspect."

But the business of oil and gas production is done in many stages, and once a well has passed the approval stage, and then the drilling stage, it enters the well service stage. This is where Jose 'Joe' Molina, co-owner of Great Basin Well Service Company of Odessa, steps in.

"We're the guys that these companies call out to service their wells," said Molina, who, with his brother John, oversees seven active 'pulling units' and 34 employees. "Anytime they have to do something to the well that requires pulling the 'down-hole' equipment out of the hole, they would require our services."

"Our primary area is probably within a 75-mile radius of Odessa. We cover most of Ector County. We do go some into Andrews, Pecos, Midland, Glasscock and Upton Counties."

Three different vocations within a single industry. And each has it's own unique challenges, and it's own rewards.

For Ureta, the challenge is a well-run operation, that stresses safety. "It's just getting out there every day and not getting hurt, you know. That's your biggest thing right there. As long as everything works out real smooth, you don't get hurt."

For Sustaita, the challenge lies in bringing people together. "It's probably getting the networking going, getting to know all the different key contacts in all the different companies that I deal with. A lot of communications is required, so that's something that I'm continuously having to work on. As an engineer, that's not something that's emphasized very much during your schoolin "

For Molina, the challenge lies not only in doing his business, but in owning and operating that business. "The greatest challenge? Right now, it's probably staying afloat, you know, due to the rates."

"But there's so many of us out there, the competition is so fierce that, consequently, our rates suffer because of it."

And the rewards? "I guess the major satisfaction stems from the fact that you start out something with absolutely, almost nothing," said Molina, whose company is now in it's 11th year. "And then you build it up to what you have today. That's probably the greatest satisfaction."

For Sustaita, the challenge of dealing with people has been it's own reward. "It's just being able to expand my horizons in that area of dealing with people, other than just numbers all the time, and just getting to know a lot of good people. A lot of teamwork is involved."

Ureta finds his reward in people that he already knows very well. "Being able to buy my little girl what she wants with the money I make out there. That and my wife. I try to support her. She's going to school. As long as I get her through school, get my little girl grown-up, that's not too bad then."

But those interviewed agreed completely on at least one point, the value of education in today's world, whether or not you work in the oil industry.

"Just take it [an oilfield job] as a part-time job, and go to school," advised Ureta. "Try to get an education where you can be something other than an oilfield worker, which isn't too bad, but you need something steady."

"Environmental and safety is the thing right now," said Molina. "If someone was coming up, out of school, and wanted to get a degree, that's where I would push them. I'd push them into an environmental or safety degree, some type of safety engineer, environmental engineer."

"Very, very critical, yes," said Sustaita, an honors graduate of Odessa's Ector High School, and Texas Tech University in Lubbock. "Right now, I'm the chairperson for the Texas Alliance of Minorities in Engineering. There are 27 chapters, and I head the one here in Midland. And that's one of the things that I emphasize to the students."

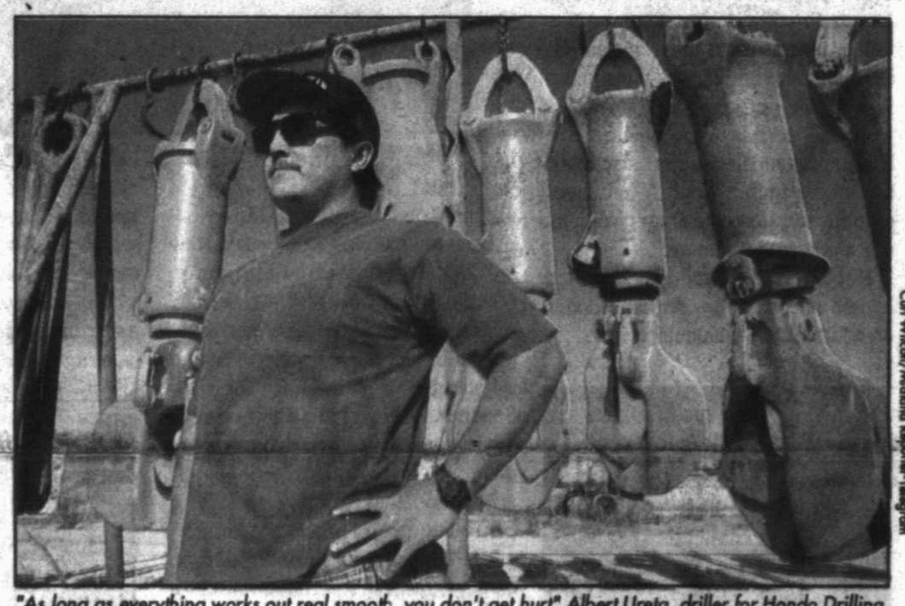

But it was something that I was kind of prepared for, because I felt like, all my life, it was a matter of perseverance, stick-it-out, because a lot of my friends didn't do what I did. And, through TAME, that's one of the things I'm trying to provide, not just from myself, but others, include other people to join in with me and be role models for some of these Hispanics - and, really, minorities in general - that need new role models."

Hispanos En La Industria Del Aceite

Por Jeffrey Amarante Cordova

El papel de el Hispano en la industria del aceite tradicionalmente ha sido muy pequeño, especialmente como uno se mueve hacia arriba, entro los niveles del 'cuello blanco' de posiciones de administración y ejecutivos. Pero esto ha empezado ha cambiar, y como el Permian Basin se prepara para el semi-anual Permian Basin Oil Show, Nueva Vista tomo un recorrido de el 'pedazo de aceite', conociendo Hispanos quienes trabajan en toda esta importante industria.

Cuando uno piensa de el negocio del aceite, ellos probablemente se imaginan a alguien como Albert Ureta de Odessa. Ureta, un perforador con Hondo Drilling Company de Midland, es el hombre al encargado cuando es tiempo de empezar ha perforar un pozo, o como el dice, 'haciendo un hoyo.'

"Mayormente tienes que asegurarte de que todo este corriendo perfectamente, cuidando que voltee a la derecha, hacer el hoyo," dice Ureta, un veterano de diez años del campo aceitero. "Cuídalo limpio, tu sabes, la maquinaria. Esta seguro de que nadie tenga algún accidente. Supervisa a todos, y nada mas corre la maquinaria."

Es esta la clase de actividad que todos miramos en las noticias de la tarde cuando es una historia sobre la industria del aceite. Pero mucho antes que Ureta y su grupo puedan empezar ha perforar, una gran cantidad de trabajo ya ha tomado lugar, y en esto es donde Minnie Sustaita, un ingeniero unido con interés con la oficina del distrito occidental con ARCO Oil and Gas Company estacionada en Midland, viene aquí.

"Nosotros cuidamos de propiedades operadas únicamente," explica Sustaita, quien también ha trabajado en dirección de depósitos de reserva y de la compra-venta del gas. "Cualquier proposición que llega de los otros operadores, tales como Conoco, o Exxon, o Mobil, tienen que pasar por nosotros, para evaluarlos, para aprobar o desaprobar."

"Tenemos juntas con nuestros socios, mayormente cuidando de nuestras propiedades asociadas en los dos aspectos financiales y en el aspecto de ingeniería."

Pero el negocio de producció de aceite y gas es hecho en muchas etapa: y una vez que una noria ha pasado la etapa de aprobación, y luego la etapa de perforación, entra entonces la etapa del servicio de la noria. En esto es donde José 'Joe' Molina, socio de la compañía Great Basin Well Service Company de Odessa, entra ahí.

"Nosotros somos los muchachos que estas compañías hablan para servir sus norias," dice Molina, quien, con su hermano John, sobremira siete activas 'unidades estirones' y 34 empleados. "Cualquier hora que tienen algo que hacerle a la noria qué se requiere extraer el equipo de hoyo, ellos requieren nuestros servicios."

"Nuestra área primordial es probablemente en radio de 75 millas de Odessa. Cubrimos la mayoría del Condado de Ector. Hacemos algo y vamos a los condados de Andrews, Peco: Midland, Glasscock y Upton."

Tres diferentes vocaciones en una sola industria. Y cada una tiene sus propios y únicos desafíos, y sus propias recompensas.

Para Ureta, el desafió es una operación muy bien hecha, que refleja seguridad. "Es nada mas yendo allá cada día y no resultar lastimado, tu sabes. Esa es tu mayor preocupación ahí. Siempre y cuando todo trabaje bien, tu no te lastimas."

Para Sustaita, el desafió cae en atraer unidad a las personas. "El probablemente teniendo a toda la propaganda en pie, haciendo que se conozcan todos los diferentes importantes contactos en todos las diferentes compañías que yo trato.

Muchísima comunicación es requerida, y eso es algo del cual estoy teniendo constantemente que hacerlo para trabajar. Como un ingeniero, esto no es algo que se acentúa mucho durante tus años de escuela."

Para Molina, el desafio cae no solamente en trabajar en su negocios, pero en mantener y operar ese negocio. "El mas grande desafio? Ahorita mismo, es probablemente mantenerse a flote, tu sabes, debido a los precios."

"Pero hay tantisimos de nosotros alla, la competicion es tan feroz que, consecuentemente, nuestros precios sufren a razon de esto."

Y las recompensas? Yo creo que la mayor satisfacción resalta del hecho de que tu empezaste algo con absolutamente, casi nada," dice Molina, cuya compania es ahora en su 11vo. año." Y entonces tu construyes lo que tienes hoy. Esto es probablemente la mas grande satisfaccion."

Para Sustaita, el desafio de tratar con personas ha sido su propia recompensa. "Ha sido nada mas de extender mi horizonte en esta area de tratar con personas, otro de nada mas tratar con numeros todo el tiempo, y empezando ha conocer muchisima gente.

Mucho compañerismo esta envuelto."

Ureta encuentra su recompensa en personas que ya conce muy bien. "Siendo posible de comprarle a mi pequeña niña lo que quiera con el dinero que gano ahi. Eso y mi esposa. Trato de apoyorla. Ella esta yendo a la escuela. Mientras que ayude a mi esposa a terminar su colegio, y ayudar a mi pequeña niña a crecer, esto no esta muy mal entonces."

Pero estos entrevistados estan de acuerdo completamente por lo menos en un punto, el valor de la educacion en el mundo de hoy, trabajes o no en la industria del aceite.

"Nada mas tomalo (un trabajo en el campo del aceite) como un trabajo de medio tiempo, y ve a la escuela," advierte Ureta. "Trata de tomar una education donde tu puedas ser alguien mas que solamente un trabajador de los campos de aceite, lo cual no esta muy mal, pero tu necesitas algo seguro."

Ambiente y seguridad es la gran cosa ahorita mismo," dice Molina. "Si alguien viniera, recien salido de la escuela, y quisiera tener una certificacion, entonces yo los empujaria a llegar. Yo los empujaria a una certificacion de ambiente o en seguridad.

"Muy, muy critico, si," dice Sustaita, un graduado con honores de la Ector High

Negocio Hispano... es Buen Negocio

Por Amarante Cordova

Al principio, la idea de comprar y siendo dueño de una casa, al cual muchos todavía le llaman el 'Sueño Americano' es nada mas eso – un sueño. Agente de Bienes y Raíces Rogelio "Roger" Robles ha encontrado que haciendo el sueño una realidad puede tomar un arduo trabajo, largas horas, y una variedad de habilidades.

"Bienes y Raíces es un negocio muy agradable si quieres trabajar con gente. Es un negocio orientado a personas. Y te debe gustar vender, por supuesto," dice Robles un agente de Midland quien se especializa en propiedades residenciales de HUD y VA. "Tu sabes, no es un trabajo de ocho a cinco. Necesitas estar dispuesto ha trabajar hasta después de las cinco, en Sábado, en Domingos, en fines de semana."

En algunos alcanza el punto donde ellos no necesitan hacer esto. Pero no lo he hecho y no lo voy hacer. Yo la paso bien trabajando los fines de semana, y trabajando hasta después de las cinco y días de fiesta. Porque siento que ese es el tiempo que mas personas, quienes tienen trabajo de ocho a cinco, tienen el tiempo para poder buscar por casas."

Clientes perspectivos seguido buscan mas que por un simple hogar, como quiera, Robles cree que un buen agente de bienes y raíces también vende la vecindad y la comunidad.

"Definitivamente, si. Una persona usualmente te dice que es lo que el anda buscando. Algunas familias están buscando colonias que tengan otros niños, porque ellos quieren que sus niño tengan compañeros para jugar. A alguna personas les gusta la vecindad porque ellos quieren que sus hijos atiendan una cierta escuela o una cierta high school. Y entonces algunos se quieren cambiar de ahí, tal vez a una área diferente."

Robles ha encontrado que un buen agente necesita algo de habilidades en contabilidad y calculacion.

"Si, si. Porque en ser parejo hacia el comprador, el siempre quiere saber, 'Como que tanto va ha ser mi pago en la hipoteca?'" dice Robles. "Y se lleva algo de matemáticas. No tanto como en otras profesiones, pero necesitas ser capaz de indicar un plan de pagos, y el valor completo, costos de compra, costos de pagos adelantados, y así la persona sabe cuanto dinero va ha necesitar para cerrar el trato."

Todo es parte de una variedad de habilidades, y un íntimo conocimiento de la comunidad que uno no adquiere de la noche a la mañana. Para Robles, las habilidades y el conocimiento viene de 28 años en Midland, primero como administrador del antiguo Centro de Jovenes, Guadalupe, y luego como un agente para la compañía de aseguranzas New York Life.

Dos años pasados, Robles dejo New York Life para trabajar tiempo completo como un agente de bienes y raíces, una vocaqión que el persiguió en medio tiempo en los 1960's como un vendedor para el realtor Ciro Sanchez. Robles cree que uno no tiene que ser un joven para entrar en el campo de bienes raíces.

"No, no tienes que. Esta abierto para cualquiera. Tu sabes, hay mucha gente que empieza medio-tiempo como yo lo hice. Y porque como es un negocio a comisión, tu eres pagado por tus ventas, las ventas que tu haces. Una persona debe, si es posible, y si ellos te dejan, empezar con medio-tiempo y mirar si esto es para ti.

Y tu puedes trabajar en esto hasta que ya no tengas que hacerlo parcialmente, entonces será una ocupación de tiempo completo.

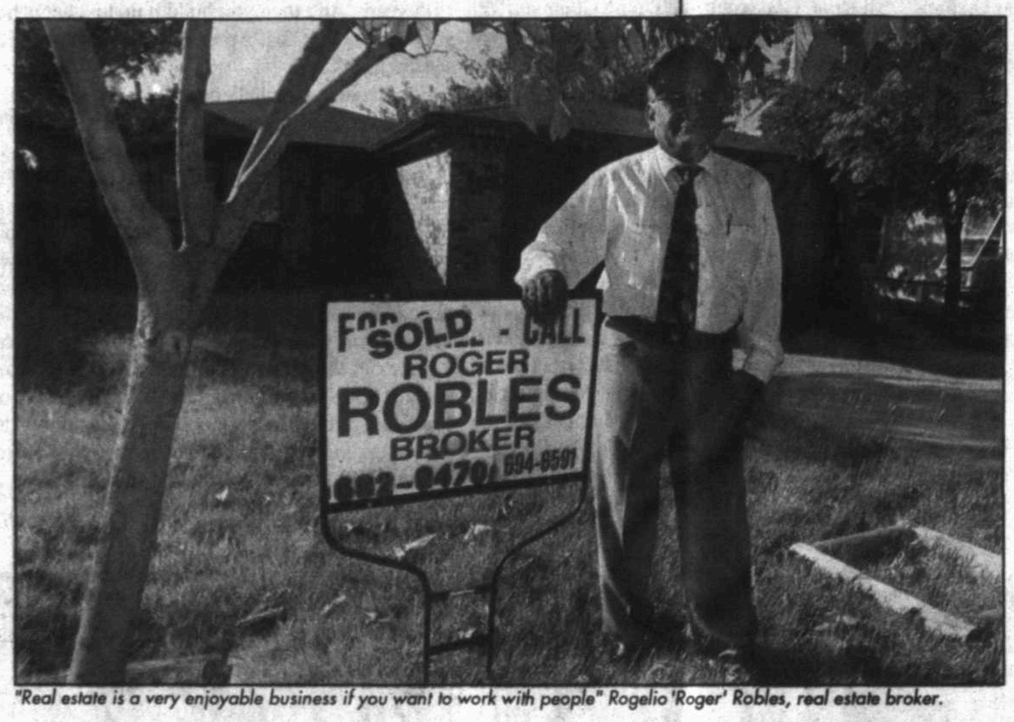

"Si tu quieres hacer un buen vivir, tienes que dedicar el tiempo necesario, para hacer el tiempo necesario para hacer una venta."

Robles ha encontrado que una venta dichosa no solamente trae su parte de satisfacción personal, es tambien un buen negocio.

"La satisfaccion que tengo cuando una familia nueva se hace propietario de un hogar," explica el. Tengo muchas personas que son muy apreciativas de mi ayuda porque los lleve al primer paso inicial, y hasta el final. Quiero estar seguro que ellos estan confortables donde estan."

"La mayor satisfaccion que tengo es tomando referencias. Las mismas personas que les vendi me mandaran otras," agrega Robles. "Tengo personas que dicen, 'Alguien me dijo que viniera ha mirarlo a usted. Usted los ayudó y estan contentos con sus servicios.' Yo no puedo preguntar por mas satisfaccion que esta!"

"Real estate is a very enjoyable business if you want to work with people" Rogelio 'Roger' Robles, real estate broker.

Hispanic Business... is good business

By Amarante Cordova

In the beginning, the idea of buying and owning a home, which many still call the 'American Dream', is just that - a dream. Real estate broker Rogelio 'Roger' Robles has found that making the dream a reality may take hard work, long hours, and a variety of skills.

"Real estate is a very enjoyable business if you want to work with people. It's a people-oriented business. And you must like sales, of course," said Robles, a Midland broker who specializes in HUD and VA residential properties. "You know, it's not an eight-to-five job. You need to be willing to work after five, on Saturdays, on Sundays."

"And some reach the stage where they don't need to do that. But I haven't, and I won't. I enjoy working on weekends, and working after five, and on holidays. Because I feel that's the time most people, who have jobs from eight-to-five, have the time that they can allocate for looking at homes."

Prospective clients often look at more than just the home itself, however, and Robles believes a good real estate agent also sells the neighborhood and the community.

"Definitely, yes. A person usually tells you what he's looking for. Some families are looking for neighborhoods that have other children, because they want their children to have playmates. Some people like a neighborhood because they want their children to attend a certain school or a certain high school. And then some just want to move out, maybe to a different area."

Robles has also found that a good agent needs some accounting and calculating skills.

"Yes, yes. Because in fairness to the buyer, he always wants to know, 'what's my mortgage payment going to be like?'" said Robles. "And it does take some math. Not as much as in other professions, but you need to be able to figure out payment schedules, and the full rate, closing costs, prepayment costs, so that the person knows how much money he's going to be needing for closing."

It is all part of a variety of skills, and an intimate knowledge of the community that one does not acquire overnight. For Robles, the skills and the knowledge came after 28 years in Midland, first as an administrator at the old Guadalupe Youth Center, and then as an agent for New York Life Insurance Company.

Two years ago, Robles left New York Life to work full-time as a real estate broker, a vocation he had first pursued part-time in the 1960's as a salesman for Midland realtor Ciro Sanchez. Robles believes that one does not have to be a youngster to enter the real estate field.

"No, you don't. It's open to everybody. You know, there's a lot of people who start part-time, like I did. And because it's a commission business, you are rewarded for your sales, the sales that you make. So a person should, if at all possible, and if they let you, start part-time, and see if that's for you. And you can work on this so that you wont have to work part-time anymore, it will be a full-time occupation.

"If you want to make a good living, you have to dedicate the time necessary to do the work necessary to make the sale."

Robles has found that a successful sale not only brings its share of personal satisfaction, it's also good business.

"The satisfaction that I get when the new family becomes a homeowner," he explained. "I have a lot of people that are very appreciative of my help because I take them from the initial step, all the way through. And I offer them my services even after the sale. I want to be sure that they are comfortable where they are at."

The greatest satisfaction that I have is getting referrals. The same people that I sell will send others to me," Robles added. "I get people who say, 'Somebody told me to see you. You helped them and they are happy with your services.' I couldn't ask for more satisfaction than that!"

Meanwhile, representatives at the tax appraisal office offer the following tips to all taxpayers:

Know your rights:

—You have the right to equal and uniform tax appraisals. Your property value should be the same as similar properties.

—You have the right to have your property taxed on its market value or its agricultural value if it qualifies for agricultural appraisal.

—You have the right to receive all tax exemptions or other tax relief.

—You have the right to notices on changes in your property value or in your exemptions. Taxing units must tell the public of proposed tax rate increases and give taxpayers time to comment on them.

Understand your remedies:

—If you believe your property value is too high, or if you were denied an exemption or agricultural exemption, you can protest to the appraisal review board. If you don't agree with the review board, you can take your case to court.

—You can speak at public hearings when your elected officials are deciding how to spend your taxes and setting the tax rate.

—You and your fellow taxpayers may limit major tax increases by petitioning for an election to roll back or limit the tax rate.

Fulfill your responsibilities:

—You must apply for exemptions, agricultural appraisal and other forms of tax relief before the deadlines.

—You must see that your property is listed correctly on the tax records with your correct name and addresses.

—You must pay your taxes on time.

The Rise of Hispanic Politics:

Part IV, Campaign Substitutes

By Jose de la Isla

The "Brown Mafia," a special task force concerned with the Hispanic vote, promoted the idea that President Nixon had done more for Hispanics than had any previous administration. It did so at a time when the Great Society programs begun under the Lyndon Johnson administration were starting to show positive results.

Beginning in early 1972, Brown Mafia members met on Monday afternoons to strategize. They directed government grants and contracts to the "right" people. Part of the White House's "Responsiveness Program," the Brown Mafia was responsible for $61 million going to "qualified" Hispanic businesspeople and contractors.

Henry Ramirez, chairman of the Cabinet Committee on Opportunity for Spanish Speaking People, assured that highly visible awards were made. Ramirez was credited with "spinning off" federal monies through "Project Alfa," which yielded $47 million to first-time Hispanic grantees. In fiscal year 1972, Small Business Administration loans to Hispanics increased from 2,570 to 3, 158, $57 million to $74 million, as part of Project Alfa. The SBA also awarded 248 contracts worth $18 million to Hispanic firms. The re-election campaign could rightly claim Nixon had made greater efforts to help Hispanics than any previous president.

On Mexican Independence Day, 1971, Vice President Spiro Agnew made an honorific speech before the Mexican ambassador. Henry Ramirez, U.S. Treasurer Romana Banuelos, Phillip Sanchez and Raymond Telles of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission were among the highly visible Hispanic appointees present.

This sudden Hispanic conspicuousness in Nixon's administration raised questions. "I', convinced, " said Vicente Ximenez, a Johnson appointee, that the new Hispanic focus "has something to do with trying to reach out and make up for what hasn't been done for three years.

Alex Armendariz, a Brown Mafia member, that the campaign appeal to the Hispanic middle class through Banuelos. She had the best name recognition of the Nixon appointees, representing businesspeople who had made it through hard work and perseverance. Armendariz believed the middle class could be influenced if the campaign carefully used her, Henry Ramirez and Phillip Sanchez, director of the government's Office of Economic Opportunity, as campaign surrogates.

The controversy that preceded Banuelos' confirmation the year before, concerning the hiring of undocumented workers by her Southern California food company, was not quickly forgotten. "This is not entirely bad," Armendariz reasoned. "They spell her name right and Mexican-American men are probably not too pleased by attacks on a woman of their background."

By March 1972, the White House and the Committee for the Re-Election of the President scheduled 18 appearances for Banuelos. She told a gathering of 400 dignitaries in San Antonio, "Discrimination is still a painful fact for Mexican Americans... We need action and I think the action has begun." Outside the banquet hall, 200 people protested what they characterized as the administration's bias against the United Farm Workers union.

Banuelos' business (she was no longer an officer in the company) was struck over wages and working conditions by about 200 employees and members of Teamsters Local 630. Then, the plant refused to allow immigration agents to search for undocumented workers, drawing more adverse attention.

In Houston, Banuelos spoke to 500 people at a banquet organized by the local chapter of the Hispanic Committee for the Re-Election of the President. Outside the hotel, a "poor people's dinner" was held. Some protesters carried signs reading "$50 is a month's rent." A sign across the street read, "Banuelos, Go Back To Your Taco Factory."

"The main objection we have to these people paying $50 a plate for Nixon (is) because he has made a few token appointments," said Political Association of Spanish Speaking Organizations spokesman Ben T. Reyes. He proposed the money go to the barrios, "where it is needed by people suffering from Nixon's poor economics."

If we can go back and compare President Nixon's appointments of Spanish-speaking people to those of previous administrations, they don't even compare," said Banuelos. She was right.

White House aide William Marumoto, Carlos Villarreal of the Transportation Department, and Edward Hidalgo of the U.S. Information Agency each praised the president at the festivities. Marumoto set the tone, saying that "Democrats have been so confident of the Mexican-American vote that they haven't campaigned, but just set up barbecues and beer parties."

As election day neared, Sanchez, Villarreal and Banuelos swept through cities with large Mexican-American populations. They flew to a Denver rally sponsored by the Hispanic CRP. Speaking in Spanish to 200 attendees. Banuelos powerfully asserted that President Nixon had appointed 53 Hispanics to policy-making positions even though Hispanics had traditionally voted-Democratic. Hispanics needed to reciprocate, she exhorted.

Sanchez was equally candid: "We have to be judged in terms of bringing in more (Latinos), and if we don't, the president will kick us out."

Recalling that Democratic vice presidential candidate Sargent Shriver had once been director of the Office of Economic Opportunity, Hidalgo, chairman of the Hispanic CRP, said, "I'd thank Mr. Shriver to tell us what he did for Spanish-speaking Americans in his four years."

Nixon won re-election on Nov. 7, 1972. Thirty-one percent of Hispanic voters cast their ballots for him. If the Brown Mafia's purpose was to obtain a third of the Hispanic vote, the strategy was very close to its goal.

After the re-election, a chain of events led to the departure of numerous high-level Mexican-American appointees. Among them: Phillip Sanchez and Henry Ramirez. Banuelos stated personal reasons for her resignation 15 months after the president's re-election.

The departures came as the U.S. Senate Watergate Committee disclosed to a shocked nation that the Nixon White House had engaged in illegal and questionable campaign activities. The committee included the Brown Mafia in its investigation. Then, on Aug. 9, 1974, President Richard Nixon resigned and Vice President Gerald Ford assumed office. During his first month, the new president made his bid to attract Hispanics to his side.

El Ascenso de la Política Hispana:

IV Los Substitutos de la Campaña

Por José de la Isla

La "Mafia Morena," una fuerza especial de trabajo interesada por el voto hispano, fomentaba la idea de que el Presidente Nixon había hecho mas por los hispanos que cualquier otro gobierno anterior. Lo hizo en una época en que los programas de la Gran Sociedad comenzados bajo el gobierno de Lyndon Johnson estaban empezando a mostrar resultados positivos.

Comenzando a principios de 1972, los miembros de la Mafia Morena se reunían los lunes en la tarde para planear su estrategia. Ellos canalizaban las subvenciones y los contratos del gobierno hacia las personas "correctas." Como parte del "Programa de Responsabilidad" de la Casa Blanca, la Mafia Morena tenia la responsabilidad de que $61 millones fueran encaminados hacia comerciantes y contratistas hispanos "calificados."

Henry Ramirez, presidente del Comité Ministerial sobre Oportunidades para las Personas de Habla Hispana, se aseguro de que se hicieran subvenciones visibles. A Ramirez se le acredito el "desviar" fondos federales mediante el "Proyecto Alfa," que otorgo $47 millones a beneficiarios hispanos de primera vez. En el año fiscal de 1972, los prestamos de la Administración de Pequeños Negocios a los hispanos aumentaron de 2,570 a 3,158, de $57 millones a $74 millones, como parte del Proyecto Alfa. La Administración de Pequeños Negocios otorgo igualmente 248 contratos por valor de $18 millones a firmas hispanas. La campaña para la reelección pudo alegar correctamente que Nixon había hecho mayores gestiones para ayudar a los hispanos que cualquier presidente anterior.

El Día de la Independencia de México en 1971, el Vice-Presidente Spiro Agnew pronuncio un discurso honorífico ante el embajador de México. Henry Ramirez, la Tesorera de los Estados Unidos Romana Bañuelos, Phillip Sanchez y Raymond Talles, de la Comisión para la Igualdad de Oportunidades de Empleo, estaban entre los designados hispanos altamente visibles presentes.

Esta súbita evidencia hispana en el gobierno de Nixon planteo preguntas. "Estoy convencido," dijo Vicente Ximenez, uno de los designados por Johnson, que el nuevo enfoque hispano "tiene algo que ver contratar de comunicarse y compensar por lo que no se ha hecho en tres años."

Alex Armendáriz, miembro de la Mafia Morena, recomendo que la campaña apelara a la clase media hispana a través de la Tesorera Bañuelos. Ella tenia el nombre mas conocido entre los designados por Nixon, y representaba a las personas de negocios que habían triunfado mediante el trabajo enérgico y la perseverancia. Armendáriz pensaba que la clase media podía ser influenciada si la campaña usaba cuidadosamente de ella, de Henry Ramirez y de Phillip Sanchez, director de la Oficina de Oportunidad Económica gubernamental, como substitutos para la campaña.

La controversia que precedió a la confirmación de Romana Bañuelos el año anterior, respecto a la contratación de trabajadores indocumentados por parte de su empresa de alimentos del sur de California, no fue olvidada con rapidez. "Esto no es completamente malo," razono Armendáriz. "Ellos deletrean su nombre correctamente y hombres mexicano-americanos no están probablemente demasiado complacidos por los ataques contra una mujer de los mismos antecedentes que ellos."

Hacia Marzo de 1972, la Casa Blanca y el Comité para la Reelección del Presidente programaron 18 comparecencias para Romana Bañuelos. Ella dijo ante una reunión de 400 dignatarios en San Antonio: "La discriminación es todavía un hecho doloroso para los mexicano-americanos... Necesitamos acción y creo que esta ha comenzado." Fuera del salón banquete, 200 personas protestaron de lo que ellos caracterizaron como el prejuicio del gobierno contra el sindicato de los Trabajadores Agrícolas Unidos.

El negocio de la Tesorera Bañuelos (del cual ella no era ya funcionaria) fue afectado por una huelga tocante a los jornales y las condiciones de trabajo por 200 empleados y miembros del Local 630 de los Teamsters. Después, el jefe de la planta se negó a permitir que los agentes de inmigración buscaran a trabajador es indocumentados, atrayendo una atención mas adversa aun.

En Houston, ella hablo a 500 personas en un banquete organizado por el capitulo local del Comité Hispano para la reelección del Presidente. Fuera del hotel se celebro una "cena para gente pobre." Algunos manifestantes llevaban letreros que decían: "$50 son el alquiler de un mes." Y un letrero del otro lado de la calle decía: "Bañuelos, Regresa A Tu Fabrica de Tacos."

"La objeción principal que tememos de que esta gente pague $50 por un plato para Nixon (es) que el ha hecho unos cuantos nombramientos simbólicos," dijo el portavoz de la Asociación Política de Organizaciones Hispanas, Ben T. Reyes. El propuso que el dinero se destinara a los barrios, "donde lo necesita la gente que sufre de los cursos de acción económicos defectuosos de Nixon,"

Si podemos retroceder y comparar los nombramientos de personas de habla hispana efectuados por el Presidente Nixon con los de los gobiernos anteriores, ni siquiera se comparan," dijo la Tesorera Bañuelos. Ella tenia razón.

El ayudante de la Casa Blanca William Marumoto, Carlos Villarreal del Departamento de Transporte y Edward Hidalgo de la Agencia de Información de los Estados Unidos, elogiaron todos al Presidente en las festividades. Marumoto fijo el tono, diciendo que "los demócratas han confiado tanto en el voto mexicano-americano que ni siquiera han hecho campaña, sino solo han organizado "barbacoas' y fiestas con cerveza."

A medida que se acercaba el día de las elecciones, Sanchez, Villarreal y la Tesorera Bañuelos barrieron a través de las ciudades que tenían grandes concentraciones de mexicano-americanos. Ellos volaron a una asamblea de Denver auspiciada por el Comité Hispano para la reelección del Presidente. Al hablar en español a 200 asistentes, ella afirmo poderosamente que el Presidente Nixon había nombrado a 53 hispanos en plazas donde se sentaban cursos de acción, aun cuando los hispanos habían votado tradicionalmente por los demócratas. Ella exhorto a que los hispano reciprocaran.

Sanchez fue igualmente franco, al decir: "Tenemos que ser juzgados en términos de traer a mas latinos, y si no lo hacemos, el presidente nos echara fuera a puntapiés."

Recordando que el candidato vicepesidencial demócrata Sargent Shriver había sido una vez director de la Oficina para las Oportunidades Económicas. Hidalgo, que era presidente del Comité Hispano para la reelección del Presidente, dijo: "Le daría las gracias as Sr. Shriver si nos dijera que hizo el por los estadounidenses de habla hispana en sus cuatro años."

Nixon gano la reelección el 7 de Noviembre de 1972. El treinta y uno por ciento de los electores hispanos voto por el. Si el propósito de la Mafia Morena era el de obtener un tercio del voto hispano, la estrategia se acerco mucho a su objetivo.

Después de la reelección, una cadena de acontecimientos llevo a la salida de numerosos mexicano-americanos designados. Ente ellos: Phillip Sanchez y Henry Ramirez. La Tesorera Bañuelos alego razones personales para su renuncia 15 meses después de la reelección del Presidente.

Las salidas se produjeron medida que el Comité sobre Watergate del Senado estadounidense revelo a una nación estremecida que la Casa Blanca de Nixon se había dedicado a actividades de campaña ilegales y cuestionables. El comité incluyo a la Mafia Morena en su investigación.

Después, el 9 de Agosto de 1974, el Presidente Richard Nixon renunció y el Vice-President Gerald Ford asumió el cargo. Durante su primer mes en este, el nuevo Presidente hizo su llamado atraer a los hispanos a su lado.

A Taste Of West Texas

Cactus Pancho's

Uno de los miembros mas nuevos de la comunidad de restaurantes de Odessa esta localizado un poco afuera del camino. Pero los que buscan un lugar diferente, mas privado que los que están llenos de gentío por las calles ocho y norte Grant, les recomendamos visitar un nuevo ambiente como Cactus Pancho's Cocina y Cantina, en el 1301 S. Grant St.

Cuando alguien llega por primera vez al restaurán, la pintura brillante y el exterior del techo de metal le viene a uno el recuerdo del viejo oeste que nunca ha podido apartarse completamente de este sector de Texas. Esa impresión esta reflejada con el interior. Sus pisos de madera, el mecanismo ranchero y cacharros que adornan las paredes y techos de madera, los retratos, blanco y negro, de unos caracteres de historia, malos y famosos que pusieron el "salvaje" en el oeste salvaje.

La lista contiene una completa selección de comida que uno espera encontrar en un restaurante Mexicano, (tacos, enchiladas, gorditas, fajitas, burritos, etc...), también se encuentran mariscos, hamburguesas y, por su puesto, el chicken fried steak que es típico de todos los establecimientos en Texas. También se sirve cerveza en vaso o en botella.

Precios de los plattillos comienzan de $3.95 a $6.95, y son especialmente buenas cuando uno ve el tamaño del plato que se le sirve.

Bordering On Perfection

Tex-Mex

La salsa que acompaña las tostadas es una combinación de especias y vegetales bien molidas que esta un poco mas picoso que los que se encuentran en otros restaurantes locales, fue mucho a nuestra satisfacción.

La estrella del platillo de combinación que ordenamos, fue el chile relleno de queso, hecho en un modo tradicionalmente como en casa, algo que casi no se aya en restaurantes. El sabor del chile colorado, que acompaña la enchilada de queso, esta a nuestro gusto, Comida buena, precios buenos, y buen servicio se combina para que su visita a Cactus Pancho's sea placentera. Pero esté seguro de saludarlea y sonreírle al pistolero de un ojo que lo recibe en la puerta. Él puede estar sonriendo tras la mascara pero es mejor jugarlo sano!

One of the newer members of the Odessa restaurant community may lie just a little off the beaten path. But those looking for a change from the crowded eateries of 8th Street and north Grant are urged to try Cactus Pancho's Cocina and Cantina, at 1301 South Grant Street.

When first approaching the restaurant, one is struck by the brightly-painted, metal-roofed exterior, reminiscent perhaps of the old west that never quite departed from this part of Texas. That impression is reinforced by the interior, with its hardwood floors, the ranching gear and pottery that adorn the walls and ceiling timbers, and the black-and-white prints of some of history's characters, both famous and notorious, who put the 'wild' in the wild west.

The menu features a complete selection of the items one would expect from a Mexican restaurant (tacos, enchiladas, gorditas, fajitas, burritos, etc.), along with some seafood, burgers and, of course, the chicken fried steak standard to all Texas establishments. Draft and bottle beer is served.

Prices for the entrees ranged from $3.95 to $6.25, especially good when one sees the size of the plate set before them.

The salsa that accompanies the tortilla chips is a combination of spices and finely-chopped vegetables that comes across a little hotter than one usually finds in local restaurants, much to our satisfaction.

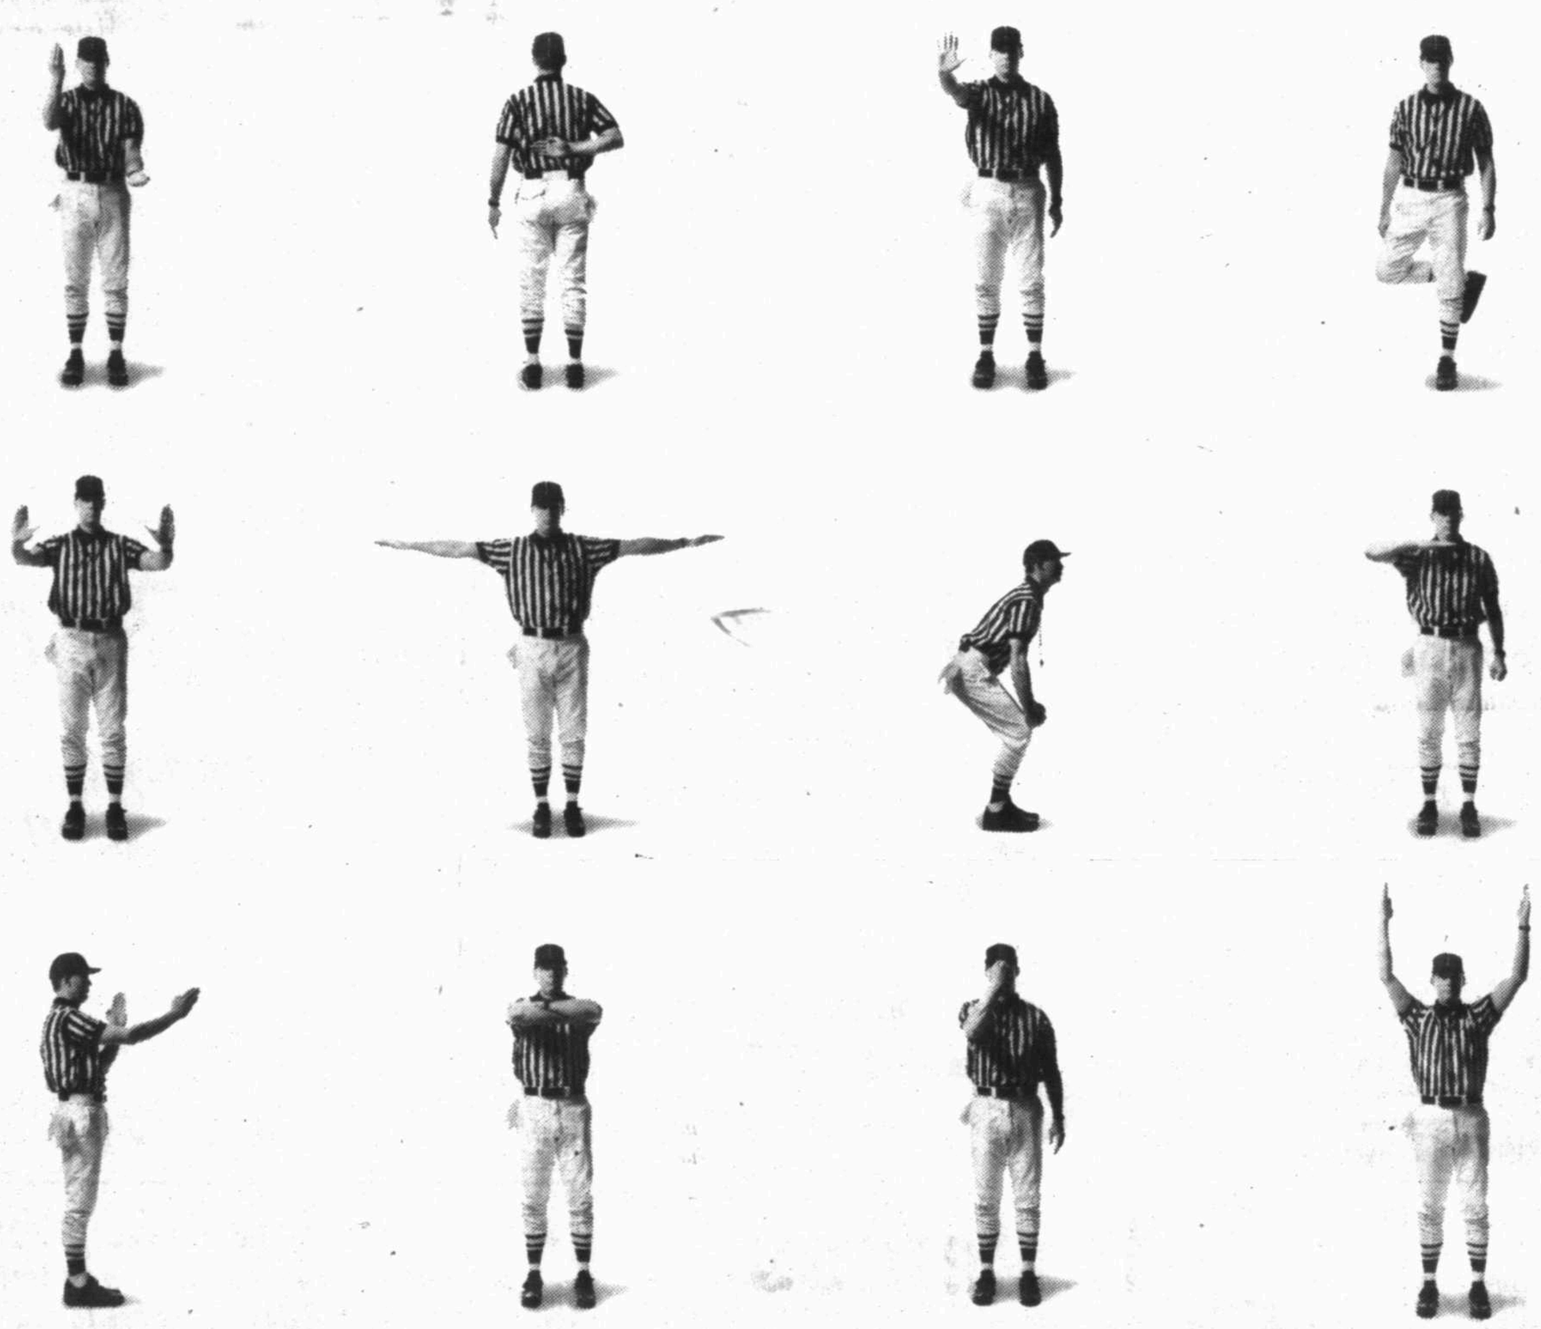

The star of the combination plate we ordered was the cheese-chile relleno, prepared in the traditional, home-style manner that one doesn't always find in restaurants. The taste of red chile, accompanying the cheese enchilada, was also welcome.

Good food, good prices, and good service combine to make your visit to Cactus Pancho's a pleasant one. But be sure to tip your hat and smile to the one-eyed pistolero who greets you at the door. He may be smiling under that mask of his, but it's best to play it safe!

Persistencia...Inducio El Primer Policía Hispano de Odessa

Por Amarante Cordova

Hasta cierto punto, Odessa vino ha conocer dos Pete Cordovas.

Había un Pete joven, criado en el Sur de Odessa, yendo a la escuela en Ector y Odessa High Schools.

Luego había un Oficial Pete Cordova, regresando a las mismas calles como el primer oficial de policía Hispano de Odessa.

Fue un desarrollo que algunos no hubieran esperado de un joven.

"Número uno, mi familia nunca pensó que yo me iba ha hacer un oficial de policía, de todas las cosas," recuerda Cordova. "Mis amigos menos lo pensaron! Y tenia muchas cosas yendo en contra mía."

Estas cosas incluyendo una menos que unánime aceptación de un oficial Hispano.

"Uno de los desafíos que tuve, siendo la primera persona en uniforme, fue de la gente, la gente Hispana, la comunidad donde crecí," dice Cordova quien ingreso el Departamento de Policía de Odessa en 1962.

"Segundo, por los oficiales policíacos que ya estaban ahí en ese tiempo. Todo el tiempo mirandome inferior y mirando haber que iba ha hacer, o, si hacia algo mal, ellos me iban ha criticar."

"Y así fue, desde el primer día, venciendo objetivos y me hice muy bueno para esto."

Cordova atribuye su perseverancia, y su éxito a una variedad de razones.

"He sido, primero que todo, motivado por competición toda mi vida, aun en este negocio. Competición me ha motivado y me ha desafiado," dice Cordova, quien empezó su carrera como vigilante de policía antes de cambiarse ha la división de motociclistas.

"Yo seria el de Indias, y sobrevivir, y aprender. Luego podría enseñar a otros hispanos, y negros ha mejorase ellos mismos en la comunidad, y abrir puertas de las cuales yo no supe nada."

"Nunca nadie me dijo que hacer, siempre lo descubri yo solo, como quiera si lo hice bien, mal, o mediocre. Y obviamente, siempre me decían prontamente si hacia algo mal o mediocre. Así esta es una de las cosas, de las que abrieron muchas puertas para otras personas detrás de mi. Y esto, en si, fue satisfacción personal, porque no fue monetaria. Todavía no pagan nada en verdad!"

Una oportunidad encontrada con un Teniente policíaco de Midland (mientras Cordova, se recuperaba de un accidente motociclista, estaba trabajando como despachador), se conectaba con una creciente reputación en investigaciones de narcóticos, llevo a Cordova a su cambio a el Departamento de Policía en Midland en 1968, donde el sirvió como detective, y en la división de narcóticos.

"Una de las razones de que me vine de Odessa a Midland fue que, en ese particular día y tiempo, la Midland PD empezó un programa donde un oficial policíaco podía ir al colegio, y todavía trabajar y hacer su vivir. Y esto en si, en mi opinión, era una buena oportunidad."

En efecto, educación fue uno de los requisitos para una persona joven considerando una carrera en la compulsión de la ley, de acuerdo a Cordova.

"Bueno, primero que nada, ellos necesitan aprender que es todo sobre la vida familiar, viene de sus familias. Segundo, educación. Sin educación, no puedes llegar a ningún lado. Tu podías entonces, y no puedes ahora, y se esta poniendo peor. Educación y sentido común, tu sabes. Esto es básicamente lo que necesitas."

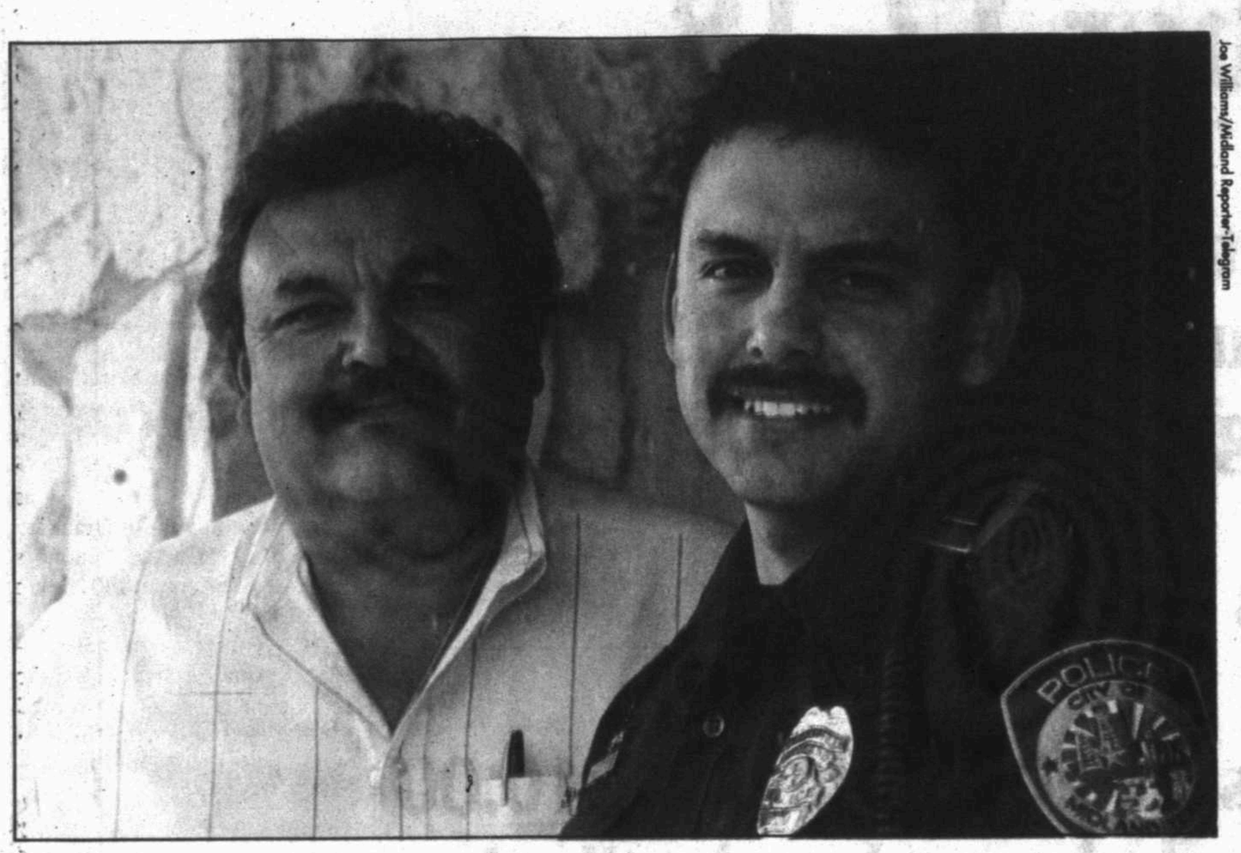

Tal vez estas lecciones son la razón de que, mientras Cordova se ha retirado y ahora trabaja como un Gerente de carros usados para Jack Sherman Chevrolet en Midland, todavía hay un oficial Pete Cordova en ronda.

"Si, Pete Junior es un oficial policiaco para Midland PD," dice Cordova, "El llego a serlo, cuando acabo la high school, yendo a Midland College y tomando su certificado en asociatura por medio del departamento de policia."

En efecto, a la vuelta del tiempo, el padre pueda seguir al hijo.

"Nunca es muy tarde," admite Cordova. "Nunca termine mi education del colegio. Algun dia lo hare. Solamente tengo 52 años!"

"Number one, my family never thought that I would become a police officer, of all things," recalls Pete Cordova, Sr. (l) with son, Pete Cordova Jr., Midland Police officer

Perserverance...Led to Odessa's First Hispanic Police Officer

By Amarante Cordova

In a way, Odessa came to know two Pete Cordovas. There was young Pete, raised in south Odessa, going to school at Ector and Odessa High Schools. Then there was Officer Pete Cordova, returning to those same streets as Odessa's first Hispanic police officer.

It was a development that many would not have expected from the youngster."Number one, my family never thought that I would become a police officer, of all things," recalled Cordova. "My friends sure didn't! So I had several things going against me."

Those things included a less-than-unanimous acceptance of a Hispanic officer.

"One of the challenges I had, being the first Hispanic person in uniform, was by the people, the Hispanic people, the community where I grew up," said Cordova, who joined the Odessa Police Department in 1962. "Secondly, by the police officers that were there at the time. They were always looking down on me to see what I was going to do, or, if I did something wrong, they were going to criticize."

"And it was, from day one, overcoming objectives.And I became pretty good at it."

Cordova attributed his perseverance, and his success to a variety of reasons.

"I've been, first of all, motivated by competition all my life, even in this business. Competition has motivated me and challenged me," said Cordova, who began his career as a patrolman before moving into the motorcycle division. "I would be the guinea pig,and survive, and learn. Then I could teach other Hispanics, and blacks to better themselves in the community, and to open doors of which I knew nothing of."

"Nobody ever told me what to do, I found out by myself, whether I did right, wrong, or indifferent. And obviously, I was told quickly if I did wrong or indifferent. So that's one of the things, that it opened a lot of doors for a lot of other people behind me. And that, in itself, was personal satisfaction, because it wasn't monetary."

A chance encounter with a Midland police lieutenant (while Cordova, recuperating from a motorcycle accident, was working as a dispatcher), coupled with a growing reputation in narcotics investigations, led to Cordova's transfer to the Midland Police Department in 1968, where he served as a detective, and in the narcotics division.

"One of the reasons that I came from Odessa to Midland was that, at that particular day and time, the Midland PD had started a program where a police officer could go to college, and still work and make a living. So that in itself, in my opinion, was a good opportunity."

In fact, education was one of the foremost requirements for a young person considering a career in law enforcement, according to Cordova.

"Well, first of all, they need to learn what family life is all about, from their families. Secondly, education. Without an education, you can not get anywhere. You couldn't then, and you can't now, and it's getting worse. Education and common sense, you know. That's basically what you need."

Perhaps these lessons are the reason that, while Cordova has retired and now works as Used Car Manager at Jack Sherman Chevrolet in Midland, there is still an Officer Pete Cordova on patrol.

"Yes, Pete Junior is a police officer for the Midland PD," said Cordova. "He ended up, when he finished high school, going to Midland College and getting an associate degree through the police department."

In fact, this time around, father may follow the son.

"It's never too late," admitted Cordova. "I never did finish my college education. Someday I will. I'm only 52 years old!

Pero habia algo a lo que estaba un poco preparada, porque me siento como que, toda mi vida, fue de una manera de perseverancia, y seguir adelante, porque muchos de mis amigos no hicieron lo que yo hice. Y, por medio de TAME, esta es una de las cosas que estoy tratando de proveer, no solamente para mi persona, pero para otros, incluyendo otras personas de unirse a mi y ser los modelos perfectos para algunos de estos Hispanos—y, en realidad, minorias en general—que necesitan nuevos modelos."
