Reagan among Collins rally's attractions

DALLAS (AP) — Dancing girls, patriotic singers, country and western musicians and a fiery Baptist preacher were to divert and enlighten the crowd at the Republican Party rally during President Reagan's visit to Texas today.

Reagan was dropping by U.S. Rep. Jim Collins' Wildbriar Farm to lend a hand in Collins' uphill race against incumbent Democrat U.S. Sen. Lloyd M. Bentsen.

Reagan was scheduled to be at the farm one hour and 15 minutes. He was to attend a private fund raiser for 30 minutes and then talk to a crowd of Republican campaign volunteers for 30 minutes. The remaining 15 minutes was unaccounted for.

Collins is "10 to 12 percentage points" behind Bentsen, according to Collins aide Dee Travis, a state senator from Garland.

Travis said the presidential visit could be a "turning point" in the campaign, although Bentsen workers disagreed.

With three weeks to go in the race, "It's a little late for ... a turning point," said Bentsen spokesman Jack DeVore.

Texas Gov. Bill Clements — a Republican running for re-election against Texas Attorney General Mark White — was to meet Reagan at the airport today. But Clements could not attend the gathering. He returned to Austin to prepare for his televised debate against White tonight.

Both the reception and the rally were invitation-only affairs.

The reception was for "everybody who's given the maximum and who can be there," Travis said Sunday. The maximum legal contribution is $1,000 per person. Travis said he expected 50 couples at the closed party.

He said the meeting would not necessarily mean a chance to shake hands with the president; there would be no receiving line.

"Everything they (the White House staff) do is pretty well packaged," he said. "They do the same thing everywhere they go. The Secret Service is comfortable with the routine.

"What it is, is an opportunity to be in a very close, intimate reception and hear remarks especially for them (the guests)," said Travis.

Those who were invited to attend also received tickets to an Oct. 21 Collins fundraiser featuring Treasury Secretary Donald Regan, Travis said.

After the reception, Reagan was to speak at a rally to which all statewide Republican candidates were invited. The rally was to begin shortly after noon, hours before Reagan was to arrive in town.

A singing group from the Park Cities Baptist Church was to sing patriotic songs, a country and western band from Waxahachie was to perform before the national anthem and pledge of allegiance.

W.A. Criswell, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Dallas, was to deliver the invocation after which the Apache Belles, a pep squad and drill team from Tyler Junior College, were to perform. Then the president would speak, Travis said.

Communications to Polish city cut

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — All telephone and telex communications were out today with the Baltic port city of Gdansk, birthplace of the newly-outlawed Solidarity union, and with the western Polish city of Szczecin, operators for the state telephone network said.

They said they had been ordered not to accept calls to those areas, but could not say whether the circuits had been deliberately cut or whether the outages were due to a technical problems.

Poland's Communist government has traditionally cut off communications after trouble erupts in a particular city, but it was not immediately possible to determine whether there were any disturbances at Gdansk or Szczecin.

The government cut all communications lines linking Poland to the outside world when martial law was imposed last Dec. 13. Direct telephone connections were restored only last May.

Attempts by The Associated Press and other news agency to contact Gdansk in the wake of last Friday's parliamentary vote banning of the independent Solidarity union revealed the communications break.

The outages were disclosed as Solidarity fugitives called for a nationwide strike next month, saying it will determine the union's strategy as an outlawed organization under Poland's tight new martial-law controls.

The influential Roman Catholic Church on Sunday condemned the Communist government's ban against the independent labor federation and other unions as four Solidarity leaders in hiding urged a four-hour general strike for Nov. 10.

"At every enterprise, and at every department a clandestine committee preparing the protest of November 10 should be organized," they said in a statement circulated outside churches. "The course of the protest will decide the further strategy of the unions."

Archbishop Jozef Glemp, Poland's spiritual leader, deplored "the trampling of man" in a sharply worded Sunday sermon in a monastery outside Warsaw. Pope John Paul II in Rome accused the Polish Parliament of violating "the fundamental rights of man and society."

Catholics make up more than 90 percent of Poland's estimated 36 million population, giving the church a powerful political role.

Parliament obediently followed the government's recommendations Friday, passing a law that dissolved all labor unions and imposed severe restrictions on the registration of new ones. The law effectively outlawed Solidarity, the Communist bloc's only independent labor union formed during August 1980.

President Reagan protested the action by announcing new sanctions against Poland, including loss of its trade status with the United States as a most-favored nation.

The government suspended Solidarity and detained hundreds of unionists under the Dec. 13 military crackdown that followed 16 months of labor unrest. Many have been freed but more than 600 are still held. Martial-law chief Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski has promised additional releases.

The underground Solidarity statement released Sunday, borrowing an old slogan from interned Solidarity leader Lech Walesa, declared: "Solidarity exists and will exist, no matter if someone likes it or not."

It called for the strike on the second anniversary of Solidarity's registration by a Warsaw court.

"We appeal to all working people, no matter to which unions they belong for a massive nationwide protest against lawlessness and poverty," the statement said.

Dated Oct. 9, it was signed by leaders of the underground National Coordination Commission that has run Solidarity since April: Bogdan Lis of Gdansk, Zbigniew Bujak of Warsaw and Wladyslaw Hardek of Krakow. Piotr Bednorz signed in place of Wladyslaw Frasyniuk, who was captured last Tuesday.

They also urged "a common boycott of new trade unions," a call echoed in a letter from nine Solidarity leaders held at Warsaw's Bialoleka prison.

The letter smuggled from prison said joining the new unions would be an "ignoble act of collaboration." Among the signatures was that of Andrzej Gwiazda, the former No. 2 leader in Solidarity.

High-flying flags

Marchers, each carrying an American flag, stand in ranks on the grounds of the U.S. Capitol as they prepare for Sunday's "Aloha, We Love America" parade. The march, sponsored by an American Buddhist lay organization, included 10,000 marchers who walked down Constitution Avenue from the Capitol to the Washington Monument.

Colombian gunman frees little girl, surrenders

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A Colombian gunman who held an Amtrak sleeping car for three days handed a 3½-year-old girl out a window today, then threw down a machine gun and surrendered, leaving behind the bodies of his sister and her infant son.

The woman had been dead since Friday and the baby probably died early today, police said. An FBI agent convinced the gunman to give up the little girl at about 1 a.m., and a man the gunman had described as his godfather spoke to the hostage-taker hours later through a bullhorn and talked him into giving up, officials said.

Police were trying to determine what sparked the siege.

For days, the wiry gunman had crouched naked or nearly naked in the car while he alternately negotiated with police, shouted in Spanish or fired shots. But early today he washed, dressed in new blue jeans and a maroon satin shirt, threw the .45-caliber fully automatic machine gun out the car's window and walked out the back door.

He was led in handcuffs, his head bowed, to a waiting police car at about 5:45 a.m.

The gunman had identified himself as Mario Rodriguez, but police today identified the 29-year-old man as Evangelista Navas Villabona of Bucaramanga, Colombia.

He was charged with two counts of first degree murder and one count of kidnapping the girl. He was taken to Central Prison to await arraignment rather than being held at the police station because police said they had received telephone threats against him.

Officers wearing surgical masks examined the car and the decomposing bodies. Authorities did not say how the woman or the 9-month-old baby had died.

The standoff began Friday morning when shots rang out in the compartment of the Amtrak Silver Star en route from Miami to New York. Authorities evacuated passengers from the train as it entered the Raleigh station and isolated the car containing the gunman and two surrounding cars.

About 50 police officers, including sharpshooters, had sealed off the area around the car.

The woman was identified as Isabel Ramirez, the gunman's sister, and the dead infant as her son, John, police said.

The man the gunman called his godfather was located in New York by the FBI and was flown to Raleigh early today.

Police Chief Fred Heineman said the gunman wanted to surrender earlier, but was afraid of police.

"He had great anxiety as to who we were. Mr. Rodriguez apparently had bad experiences in other countries with police and he was worried we might harm him," Heineman said.

The gunman earlier had said a man's body also was in the compartment, but none was found.

Throughout the ordeal, Rodriguez had made no demands and few requests.

Gramm predicts recession referendum

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

In light of a fast-approaching election date and news of the record 10.1 percent unemployment rate, Congressman Phil Gramm this morning boiled down the situation to one of the voters showing if they think the recession has been caused by President Reagan's programs or if they believe he is trying to put the country on the right economic track.

Gramm, a Democrat who represents the 6th District and the College Station area, reached national prominence when his Gramm-Latta budget bill was adopted by Congress in 1981 and signed into law by the president. He also is better known as one of the Boll Weevils, which is a group of conservative congressmen that has sided with the Republican president on his economic issues.

Quipping that he would like to redraw his district to include Midland and Odessa ("there's no reason the district has to be contiguous"), Gramm updated area oil and business men on the economic recovery program during a breakfast in The Midland Hilton.

"We were at the end of a 15-year spending spree and the bill collector was standing at the door," Gramm said of the situation when Reagan took the reins. "We had neglected the economic infrastructure," said the former Texas A&M economics professor.

GRAMM'S BUDGET that took effect in October 1981 was designed with budget and tax-cutting measures. However, he noted that "government doesn't use language the way we use it."

When government says it cut spending programs, Gramm said it means the amounts of increases were reduced. "They speak in terms relative to what we would have done. We did not cut taxes in the sense you would use the word. We'll collect more taxes this year than in 1981, but we cut the rate of growth in taxes."

When the Gramm-Latta budget was written in May 1981, the congressman said numerous economic firms believed the country would soon begin a "slow, plodding recovery."

But in June that year, "the economy fell into a deep recession. The deficit shot through the ceiling," he related to the group. When economic figures came out in September, they reflected that government expenditures had skyrocketed and revenues hadn't.

"A 1 percentage point rise in unemployment sends the deficit up by $28 billion. It means $21 billion in lost revenues and $7 billion in unemployment payments."

ALTHOUGH CONGRESS had made the efforts to get back to a balanced budget by cutting the rate of growth and reducing taxes, Gramm said the country was faced with record deficits because of the unexpected recession. Reagan at this point suggested a mid-course correction by cutting $12 billion more in spending programs and adding $4 billion in new revenues. "But Con-

MISD has long had asbestos controls

By VINCE GIORGI
Staff Writer

While tests commissioned by a Dallas newspaper indicate the presence of potentially hazardous asbestos levels in Dallas schools, Midland school officials discovered and began battling the asbestos problem as early as 1979.

Garland Chapman, Midland Independent School District (MISD) assistant superintendent, said school buildings were tested in 1979, when 11 of the 30 structures were found to have potentially hazardous levels of "friable," or easily crumbled, asbestos in ceiling materials.

Samples from Midland buildings contained asbestos levels ranging from 5 to 30 percent, potentially dangerous amounts according to U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) standards.

The EPA estimates that 14,000 school buildings may harbor dangerous levels of asbestos and has set a May 27, 1983, deadline for asbestos inspections in all public buildings.

Chapman said MISD established a program to monitor and seal or replace deteriorating ceilings long before the EPA mandated asbestos inspections and repairs for public buildings in June of this year.

Meanwhile, Dallas School Supt. Linus Wright says he is "embarrassed" by a newspaper's report that, despite staff assurances, Dallas public school classrooms are filled with dangerously high levels of asbestos.

Independent laboratory tests commissioned by the Dallas Times Herald found potentially hazardous asbestos in 29 of 30 samples taken from 10 Dallas

The National Weather Service forecasts showers for Gulf of Mexico coastal areas, eastern New Mexico, northwestern Wisconsin and most of Minnesota.

Autumn finally arrives in Midland

With the National Weather Service forecast calling for cloudy skies and crisp temperatures, Midlanders may finally be able to confidently state that fall has fell...er...fallen? Let's just say autumn has arrived, shall we?

Tonight should be cloudy and cool with a low in the mid-40s and a 30 percent chance of rain and thunderstorms. Winds should be northeasterly tonight and Tuesday at 5 to 10 mph. Tuesday's should be partly cloudy with the high only reaching the low-60s.

Sunday's high, an autumnal 65, was chilly compared with the record 94 set in 1965. The overnight low of 51 compares with a record low of 44 set in 1977.

No precipitation in the last 24 hours leaves monthly and yearly rainfall totals at .80 and 12.42 inches. Sunset tonight is at 7:22 p.m.; sunrise tommorrow is at 7:50.

Peace groups take aim at candidates

WASHINGTON (AP) — The voters may be more jittery over jobs than the bomb, but peace groups are adding to the troubles of some congressmen already embroiled in a tough fight over economic issues in the Nov. 2 elections.

Moving with some reluctance into the rough-and-tumble of the campaign, traditionally non-political peace organizations are making themselves heard in House races from Oregon to Pennsylvania.

Coordinating the effort is PeacePac, a Washington-based political action committee formed this year as an offshoot of the 20-year-old Council for a Liveable World.

The council has given more than $2.5 million to Senate candidates since its formation in 1962. PeacePac hopes to raise $200,000 for 1982 House races in a year when nuclear freeze proposals will be on the ballots in eight states.

"Part of our strategy is preparation for 1984," says Catherine McGraw, political director of PeacePac and assistant legislative director of the council.

"BY THEN, we will have improved our fund-raising effort and have better coordination between local and national groups."

For this year, PeacePac took aim at what it called a "Doomsday Dozen" of incumbents, all but two of them Republicans, who it said "have consistently promoted America's participation in the nuclear arms race."

PeacePac also pumped money into the campaigns of 13 congressmen, all but two of them Democratic, who it said have supported a freeze on nuclear arms and "demonstrated leadership on issues of international peace."

Strategists in both parties say several of the races are close, but probably more because of economic issues than the nuclear freeze controversy.

"There are some places where that (nuclear freeze) will be an issue, but by and large we are going into a pocketbook election and that's how people are going to vote," says Evan Zeppos, communications director for the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee.

Gregory Walden, campaign manager for Rep. Denny Smith, R-Ore., whose opponent, Ruth McFarland, is a supporter of the nuclear freeze, says, "It does play a role with certain people, but economic issues play a major role with the majority. That's what people want to hear about."

ON THE other hand, Doug Bosco, a pro-freeze state legislator who is challenging Rep. Don Clausen, R-Calif., says, "The nuclear freeze is the most important defined issue in our race." Bosco adds, however, that "the economy and more general economic issues are playing a big part."

John Seager, media director for former Rep. Peter Kostmayer, D-Pa., who is attempting to regain a seat he lost two years ago, says the freeze is an issue but "the economy sets the stage for this race as for many others."

Timothy Gay, press secretary for Kostmayer's opponent, Republican Rep. James Coyne, who helped defeat a nuclear freeze resolution in the House by switching his vote, says, "There is only one real issue in this campaign and that is jobs."

Among the closest races, according to peace movement spokesmen, the Chamber of Commerce of the United States and campaign officials of both parties, are:

—Clausen and Bosco. In Sonoma County, which makes up much of the district, 22 percent of the voters signed petitions to put the freeze issue on the California ballot. Unemployment in the county is 11 percent.

—Coyne and Kostmayer. Gay says Coyne, who won the seat by less than one percentage point in 1980, has a six-point lead in his latest campaign poll. Both the National Republican Congressional Committee and the Chamber, which is backing Coyne, rate this as a close race.

—SMITH AND McFarland. The challenger, a state senator, co-sponsored a nuclear freeze measure in the Oregon legislature and has strong union backing, but Walden says telephone polls show incumbent Smith maintaining a comfortable lead.

—Rep. Robert Michel, R-Ill., and Doug Stephens. Spokesmen for the Republican campaign committee say they expect Michel, the House GOP leader who is opposed by PeacePac, to survive a close election. The Chamber says redistricting and unemployment have helped Stephens, a workers' compensation lawyer.

— Rep. Bob Edgar, D-Pa., and Steve Joachim. Edgar, one of the incumbents supported by PeacePac, is struggling in a district with a 5-2 Republican registration edge after redistricting. Joachim is a former New York Jet and star Temple University quarterback.

Although peace groups have endorsed candidates in some of these races, Ms. McGraw says, "The route a lot of them are taking is to publicize the views of incumbents and stimulate voter registration."

"A lot of the groups feel they can't endorse anybody," she said in an interview.

Good ol' boy worked at not making million dollars

McKINNEY, Texas (AP) — Battered, splintered and peeling, the old mule barn looks nothing like what it once was — a special clothing store that provided a kind of moral fabric for this North Texas town.

But McKinney is no longer a farming hamlet, sport shirts cost more than $1, and soon the clothing store that Jimmy Foster ran for 50 years will be bulldozed for a parking lot.

Foster, a paunchy 70-year-old who loves to talk "bidness," chuckles that some people call the changes "progress."

"It's all right now. They can do what they want. The store's had its day. It's over as far as that part goes," Foster said.

"It was a good era, real fine, especially for a poor boy. There's chances for poor boys today, but not in retailing."

He was a contemporary of clothiers like J.C. Penney and J.M. Haggar. While they grew, Jimmy Foster stayed small — the only way he thought he could keep prices low for struggling cotton farmers.

"I passed up all sorts of opportunities. I guess you could say I've gone to lots of trouble not to make a million dollars."

In the depths of the Depression, Foster borrowed $125 on a life insurance policy and paid $25 for the store on the outskirts of town.

He took his honest face and smooth tongue to St. Louis, Dallas and other cities and soon had put together a stock of Levi and Tuf-Nut overalls, boots, work clothes and haberdashery bought entirely on credit.

"I really was just operating on a shoestring," Foster said.

Foster successfully broke all the rules of retailing. He kept prices low, shunned expansion, liberally extended credit, shared profits with sales clerks, rarely collected old accounts, and gave away clothes "if some ol' boy was having a bad time of it."

He had chances to open stores in Richardson and Grand Prairie, once small towns that are now part of the wealthy Dallas-Fort Worth "Metroplex." And he could have moved from the old mule barn sitting on black gumbo dirt.

"I had people telling me I ought to move and get good fixtures and a nice big store. But I tried to keep my overhead real low so I'd have prices that would help my customers."

"You know, being a wealthy man — oh no. I don't want to be a millionaire," he said. "I don't enjoy money, I enjoy people. My customers were all my friends."

After two heart attacks, a stroke and cataract surgery, Foster closed his store Sept. 30. The next day McKinney Mayor Richard Coughlin presented him with a gold padlock as part of a town-wide celebration, Jimmy Foster Appreciation Day.

Coughlin said Foster's store will be bulldozed by the city within 60 days and paved over for parking for "12 to 16 cars." The store is located within a government zone established when the city and county erected new facilities three blocks away.

McKinney, about 35 miles north of Dallas, has been caught up in the boom-time expansion of Dallas. In 1970, Collin County had 45,000 residents. In 1980, the population ballooned to 145,000, and grows each day.

More people, the mayor said, more government, more parking.

"It's in such a dilapidated state that it wouldn't last very long anyway," Coughlin said of the store. "It's not very significant historically from a building standpoint. And it doesn't lend itself to historical renovation."

"The end of the agriculture era really came several years ago" in McKinney, Coughlin said. "Certainly Jimmy is the end of one facet of it."

Since padlocking his store for the last time, Foster has been doing crossword puzzles, answering calls from customers asking where to buy clothes, and letting a few friends buy the remaining stock of shirts, hats and pants stacked in his den.

"After I leave the store," Foster said, "I don't care to see it anymore. I already miss it. I always will."

Midland Memorial Hospital inaugurates remodeled cafeteria

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

There's a new look at Midland Memorial Hospital.

Grand opening was held today for the "new" hospital cafeteria, which has not been remodeled since 1974, said A.C. Buchanan, MMH vice president of operations.

Employees and visitors were able to enjoy their meals in the newly-decorated cafeteria after enduring about seven months of remodeling.

"Anybody who has had to suffer through the remodeling would appreciate the new appearance," Buchanan said. "It is a great improvement over what we had before."

The beige/brown carpet with navy blue overtone arrived Saturday and was installed the same day, Buchanan said.

"The new white-Formica tables with oak legs were here three weeks ago, but we were waiting on the carpet," he said.

Buchanan said it was decided to remodel the original 80-seat cafeteria in February. The room now seats 110 people.

"The furniture and carpet lasted nine years," he said. "And it really wasn't presentable, but because of shipping problems we couldn't finish it until this weekend."

The blue and brown decor will be complemented with a piped-in music system which should be installed in two weeks, Buchanan said.

The cafeteria includes a full cafeteria menu with three entree items, a made-to-order sandwich bar and salad bar.

"We are now carving meat on the (cafeteria) line and are improving the quality of food service," Buchanan noted.

He said the cafeteria opens for breakfast from 7 to 8:30 a.m. for employees and visitors with a coffee break from 10 to 10:45 a.m.

Lunch is from 11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. for employees only and from 12:30 to 1:30 p.m. for visitors. There is another coffee break from 3 to 3:45 p.m. for everyone.

Dinner hours are from 5 to 6:30 p.m. for both employees and visitors.

Gramm feels ballots will be recession referendum

gress was not ready for that," Gramm said.

The new budget for Fiscal Year 1983 drawn up last spring shows $270 billion in spending reductions over three years, he noted.

"The economy is recovering," Gramm contended. "It's a slow, painful recovery. We'll have a slow recovery for the remainder of this year. The next two years look pretty good as the economy gains momentum. By 1984, we'll be looking pretty good."

To illustrate his belief, Gramm said the inflation rate had fallen over the last 18 months from 18 percent to almost 6 percent. And the interest rates are down to 13 percent from a high of about 20 percent.

The news of a 10.1 percent unemployment rate in September wasn't too surprising to Gramm, who said two post-war recessions showed that unemployment peaked after the economy began an upturn. He later noted that the number of people working has remained about the same throughout the recession — that more people have entered the work force and the lack of expanding companies has kept them unemployed.

HOWEVER, HE VIEWS the 1982 mid-term elections as a deciding factor in the continuing recovery. "Is Reagan the fellow caught with the bills and trying to catch up, or is his program really working? I hope the people will come to the conclusion we're trying to do the right thing. Had we continued on the spending spree, we would have had the recession anyway."

If conservative Republicans lose seats in the House and Senate, it could spell an end to the president's economic recovery program, according to Gramm, whose win in the Democratic primary sent his Republican challenger home. With the exception of conservatives in the south and southwest states, Democrats elsewhere are liberals, he said.

"Our governing coalition in the House is very thin. There are about 160 Republicans in the House and only about 15 conservative Democrats." This group accomplished its goals the last 18 months because of a grass-roots lobbying effort. "There's a saying that if you're going to catch hell no matter what you do, go ahead and do what's right."

He pointed out that if the Republicans lose more than 20 House seats in this election, "it will have a catastrophic effect on us."

A proponent of the Balanced Budget Amendment, his own outspoken efforts in siding with President Reagan and pushing through spending reduction legislation has brought threats from the House Democratic leadership to remove Gramm from the powerful Budget Committee.

"WHEN YOU DECIDE you're going to go to Washington and do things, you're going to make enemies," said Gramm. If he is removed from that and other committees, he would view it as an effort to keep him from representing the people in his 6th District.

He acknowledged the House leadership has the votes to throw him off the committees, but Gramm tossed aside the idea to "cuddle up to them. I haven't tried throwing my arm around them."

If he is taken off those committees, Gramm said he sees two options: finish his term and go back to A&M or switch to the Republican Party. Toward the end of his talk, one man in the audience interjected, "Don't go back to A&M," and another suggested, "Take the second option."

Questioned about when Congress will tackle the problem of a dwindling Social Security fund, Gramm replied that Congress won't begin work on it until the next session.

"Congress will duck Social Security as long as it can. It won't do anything until it comes out in the media that Aunt Sarah won't get her Social Security check next month.

"Congress will have to do something, and none of it will be popular," Gramm said, suggesting that the system needs to be restructured and the people encouraged to work at least a year longer.

"It's an explosive political issue; 26 million people are dependent upon those payments," he said, adding that he hears about it every week.

"I TALK TO MY momma every Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock. If there's been anything in the news that week about Social Security, she says 'I want you and President Reagan to leave my Social Security alone.'"

On other issues, Gramm said he supports the concept of a Flat Tax Rate, but so many special interests want amendments tacked on that Congress would wind up with the same taxing system as it now has. He predicted deregulation of natural gas would be left alone until the next session that starts in January.

Looking at the failing economy in Mexico, Gramm said the U.S. holds a big stake in that country. As the economy falls, more illegal aliens will be coming to the U.S. for work.

The Valley in South Texas already reports a 20 percent unemployment rate, he said, and that alone has boosted the state's unemployment rate.

Odessa robberies investigated

ODESSA — Police here are investigating three weekend robberies, including one where a resident lost $100 to a man who broke into the victim's house and started beating him while he was asleep.

Jewel Dean Howard, no age available, of 1328 Boatwright, told officers he was asleep about 11:25 p.m. Saturday when a "squatty" black or Mexican male entered the house through a bathroom window and started beating him and demanding money.

Howard said he gave the man $100 from his wallet and the man fled. Howard suffered facial injuries and was hospitalized in satisfactory condition.

A clerk at the Colonial Food Store, 4100 E. 52nd St., told police a man walked into the store about 8:15 a.m. Sunday and tried to pay for a package of cigarettes with a $100 bill. When the clerk said he couldn't cash that large a bill, the man pulled a knife from his belt, pointed to the safe and ordered the clerk to open it.

The clerk opened one compartment of the safe and handed the man a bag containing an undisclosed amount of money. When the clerk told the man he couldn't open the second compartment, the man cut him three times on the arms and fled on foot.

The suspect was described as white, about 5 feet, 8 inches tall, having a large build and wearing blue jeans and tennis shoes.

The third weekend holdup occurred at the Beer Loft, a drive-in package liquor store at 111 W. Murphy. A clerk told officers two men walked in about 9:40 p.m. Sunday, pulled a .38-caliber revolver and demanded money from the cash register. The clerk complied and one of the men fired a shot in the air as they left.

The clerk was able to give only a partial description of one of the men, both of whom were Mexican. He was in his late teens, about 5 feet, 8 inches tall, weighing 150 pounds and having sandy red hair.

Odessa jail escapee back in custody

ODESSA — One of two men who escaped from the Odessa city jail last month is back in custody.

Vernon Eugene Rushing, 19, of Odessa, walked into the police station and surrendered about 11:45 p.m. Saturday. Rushing, who was being held on $1,000 bond for burglary of a coin-operated machine, escaped the night of Sept. 22 after he and 20-year-old James Weldon Redic of Odessa broke through a heavy metal screen on a light fixture in their cell and crawled along the top of the cell to a skylight.

Redic remains at large, according to police, who said escape charges would be formally lodged against Rushing today.

EPA officials said many major school districts in Texas have taken steps to seal asbestos ceilings in public schools.

Federal officials told the newspaper that school districts like Houston, Austin and Fort Worth found the fireproofing material in classrooms and auditoriums, and have taken steps to prevent children from inhaling microscopic cancer-causing fibers.

Chapman said MISD school buildings are continually inspected for signs of decaying ceiling material which may release potentially hazardous fibers. He said faulty ceilings are either replaced, covered with a false ceiling or "encapsulated" with a sealant spray. He said eight classrooms and the Lee freshmen gymnasium recently received new ceilings.

"The (EPA) rule is very mild compared with what we've done here, so we certainly feel we are in compliance with it," Chapman said. "We've initiated a maintenance program that corrects this problem."

Wright said he would do "whatever we need to do" to correct the problem in the Dallas school system.

"It is embarrassing when you have people who examined it and certified to me three different times that we don't have any," Wright said. "They told me the other day that they sent samples off themselves and they came back clear."

The newspaper's findings were published Sunday in a copyright story.

Federal officials have been warning school districts since 1979 that any friable asbestos construction material with more than 1 percent asbestos is potentially hazardous.

The concentrations found in Dallas classrooms ranged from 2 percent to 30 percent.

EPA officials say asbestos is only dangerous if fibers are freed from the original material and are inhaled.

The newspaper's study found some ceiling tiles that had students' initials carved in them, and some with pencil holes poked through them.

Shooting victim in serious condition

A man shot several times outside an eastside bar Friday morning has been taken off the critical list and is now in serious condition at Midland Memorial Hospital.

Louis Cruz Arrequin, 43, of 1004 S. Dakota, was shot in the back, abdomen and chest with a small caliber handgun during an apparent argument with two men outside the Dog House Lounge, 307 S. Mineola, early Friday morning. Police today reported no new developments in the case.

An Odessa woman injured when the car in which she was a passenger hit a utility pole after she leaned across the seat to kiss the driver remains in critical condition at Odessa's Medical Center Hospital. Daphne Carrasco, 20, suffered undiclosed injuires in the wreck, which occurred in the 1800 block of East 8th Street early Friday morning.

NOW to be force for change, says president-elect Goldsmith

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The new leader of the National Organization for Women has high hopes for the next few years: attacking sex discrimination in corporate America and building a political machine to rival those of the New Right.

Judy Goldsmith, who will take over as NOW's president on Dec. 1, promises that NOW will be a strong force for change, not a moderate voice of accommodation.

"We have really never thought of ourselves as moderate, but as energetic, as positive and as unyielding on our principles," she said at a news conference after her election Sunday.

The 43-year-old former college teacher won the top spot at NOW's annual convention over well-known activist Sonia Johnson, fellow NOW vice president Jane Wells-Schooley and two other contenders. Her victory promises a continuation of the policies of current NOW president Eleanor Smeal, who had endorsed Ms. Goldsmith's bid.

Currently NOW's executive vice president, Ms. Goldsmith will begin her three-year term as president at a time when the women's movement is charting its course away from the defeat of the Equal Rights Amendment. That crushing loss had its benefits, Ms. Goldsmith said, because it armed feminists with experience, organization and outrage.

One target of that outrage will be various corporations.

"We are not anti-business," Ms. Goldsmith said Sunday. The NOW position "is anti-those corporate interests that specifically and systematically employ women and discriminate against them."

The Manitowoc, Wis., native listed the insurance industry, the retail trade and textile manufacturing as "institutions that have oppressed women."

The NOW convention voted late Sunday to back Ms. Goldsmith's initiative and "mount a major campaign to outlaw all sex discrimination in insurance." This will focus on the contention that the industry overcharges women for insurance and underpays its female employees.

Another NOW target will be Ronald Reagan and his allies, she said.

"We will proceed with work on defeating the right wing that is opposed to all our issues and with freeing this country from the Reagan administration," Ms. Goldsmith said in her acceptance speech.

Of particular interest in the 1984 elections will be Republican Sen. Jesse Helms of North Carolina.

"Helms has been the point man for the right wing on a number of different issues," she said. "We see him as a clear and present danger."

NOW is building a campaign war chest for next month's elections that officials said is now at $2 million, making the group one of the larger political action committees.

But by 1984, Ms. Goldsmith said NOW's PAC should be one of the biggest in the country, rivaling the National Conservative PAC and Helm's National Congressional Club, which have each raised more than $7 million for this year's elections.

The weekend battle for the NOW presidency was a tough five-way race, with the winner defeating Ms. Johnson by a 1,137-705 edge in the final round of the complicated, preferential balloting. Ms.Wells-Schooley from Allentown, Pa., was the third-ranking candidate. Anne Lang of Pittsburgh and Mary McQuay of Stillwater, Okla., trailed.

But there was evidence that unity would be the keynote with the votes all counted. Ms. Johnson appeared on the convention floor late Sunday to pledge her support.

"When you need me, I'll be there," said the activist who now lives in suburban Virginia outside Washington, D.C.

Ms. Johnson first appeared on the national scene in a well-publicized confrontation with the Mormon Church over the ERA, which the church opposes. She was eventually thrown out of the church for her views.

Before adjourning late Sunday, the NOW convention passed five resolutions and referred 25 others to the NOW board.

In addition to the insurance campaign, the convention voted for action on lesbian rights and reproductive rights issues but refused to adopt hardline resolutions on those questions. It rejected calls for introduction of a constitutional amendment on reproductive rights and refused to instruct the NOW political arm to require candidates to support lesbian rights as a condition of NOW support.

Long, arduous path to victory

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Judy Goldsmith says she had to be pushed into taking her first leadership role in the women's movement, but no one is pushing the energetic administrator these days.

The longtime feminist and former college teacher has been elected as the president-to-be of the National Organization for Women, and thus becomes one of the key decision-makers in the women's movement.

It was a long and arduous path from Manitowoc, Wis., to victory in a sometimes bitter campaign battle with ex-Mormon feminist Sonia Johnson.

Judy Goldsmith

Friends and co-workers say Ms. Goldsmith, 43, made it to the top job with a warm personality, a tactful understanding of others, and dedication to the cause.

Even so, the successful course has had its personal costs: Ms. Goldsmith is separated from her husband and is unable to find time to escape the pressure of her work, friends say. And as head of the nation's foremost voice on women's rights, her most difficult challenges may lie ahead.

Ms. Goldsmith traces her feminist involvement to a lot of reading in the 1960s. She pointed to an article, "Why Men Don't Like Women," by Jules Feiffer in a 1966 issue of Look magazine.

"I felt a lot of vague dissatisfactions" about the treatment of women, she said in an interview. "But the Feiffer article just crystalized all of this for me."

After graduating from the University of Wisconsin and then receiving her masters degree in English from the State University of New York at Buffalo, she taught in New York for several years and then moved back to Manitowoc and joined the women's movement.

"I was getting increasingly agitated about what was happening to women," she said. "When I heard a NOW chapter was forming, I was really ripe to do something, to take some action. I couldn't stand it any more."

"I started at the chapter level and resisted taking the leadership of the chapter because I thought I was not adequately qualified," she said in an interview Sunday. "We do tend to push people into postions of leadership — usually gently, but push.

"And the same thing happened at the state level" when she became the Wisconsin state NOW coordinator.

Then in 1977, her activism moved to the national scene when she was elected to NOW's governing board. In 1978, she was appointed to the open position of executive vice president of NOW and was elected to a full term in 1979.

Ms. Goldsmith quickly became NOW President Eleanor Smeal's No. 1 adviser and played a key role in the fight for the Equal Rights Amendment.

But she believes her approach to the presidency is more likely than Ms. Smeal's to spread the organization's power among others.

"Ellie is such an absolutely dynamic central focus," Ms. Goldsmith said. "My leadership style is more one of involving various people at visible levels."

It is Ms. Goldsmith's skills with people that have been crucial to her success. One co-worker called her "absolutely the best people person around." And old friends from Manitowoc and Two Rivers, Wis., said that some have misinterpreted her tact as weakness.

Former hospital employee dismissed as Tylenol killer

CHICAGO (AP) — Investigators are dismissing as a murder suspect a man who allegedly tried to extort $8,000 from a hospital with threats to "put cyanide in every bottle of Extra-Strength Tylenol to see what it will do."

Officials charged that Jerome Howard, 20, of Chicago, left a letter with the receptionist's desk at Gottlieb Memorial Hospital claiming responsibility for seven Chicago-area Tylenol poisonings and threatening more unless he received the money.

Howard, a former hospital employee, was arrested Saturday night. His bond was set at $100,000 at a hearing Sunday before U.S. Magistrate Olga Jurco, who ordered Howard held at the Metropolitan Correctional Center until a hearing Friday.

If convicted on the federal charge, Howard could be sentenced up to 20 years in prison and fined up to $10,000.

Howard had been one of several leads that Illinois Attorney General Tyrone Fahner said were "still being actively worked," but was quickly dismissed as a suspect in the seven deaths between Sept. 29 and Oct. 1, officials said.

"There is no credible evidence to indicate directly or indirectly" that Howard played any role in the fatal poisonings, Fahner and Edward Hegarty, special agent in charge of the FBI's Chicago office, said in a joint statement.

The extortion letter, left at the reception desk Wednesday, was suspect because of the little money demanded and because it did not clearly specify when the ransom payment was to be made, Fahner said.

"Me and my gang put cyanide in every bottle of Extra-Strength Tylenol to see what it will do...Like seven deaths isn't funny, but eight more will be," said the letter, made part of the record at the hearing Sunday.

"This is the kind of thing that wears us down investigatively," Fahner said of the arrest. "We didn't know until late whether this would be the big one, but we had to run it down in any case."

Fahner heads the task force of more than 100 workers from federal, state and local agencies investigating the cyanide deaths. He declined to say Sunday if investigators had any new leads.

Calls to the task force's special telephone line have died down to a trickle, Fahner said. "It appears everyone who has something to say to us has already said it."

Chicago police said Sunday most of the calls on a telephone "hot line" were from self-proclaimed psychics. "Not much worthwhile is coming in," said Sgt. Michael Invergo.

Invergo also said a detective turned up nothing new after traveling to Sheridan, Wyo., where authorities had reopened an investigation of the cyanide-related death in July of a 19-year-old man.

The Wyoming death was one of three poisonings with some connection to Tylenol that authorities determined last week had no bearing on the Chicago deaths.

The other two incidents were in Philadelphia and Oroville, Calif. In Philadelphia, police said the cyanide death of a graduate student in April appeared to have been suicide. In Oroville, police say the non-fatal strychnine poisoning of a local resident was the work of a "copy-cat" who heard of the Chicago-area poisonings.

Johnson & Johnson, parent company of the makers of Tylenol, has urged retailers nationwide to pull capsules of the pain reliever from their shelves.

A losing battle

In grocery stores and barber shops all over Midland you can hear any number of Midlanders complaining their paychecks just don't go as far as they used to. They're exactly right, according to the Tax Foundation, Inc.

A recent study by that prestigious group indicates the typical American family is substantially worse off economically today than it was 10 years ago and at the heart of the problem are two old familiars: inflation and taxation.

In the past decade, the nation's median family income increased from $11,152 in 1972 to $23,895 this year. At the same time, direct federal taxation increased from $1,450 to $4,103. In other words, while the average American's income has more than doubled in the past decade, his federal taxes have nearly tripled.

What's more, says the Tax Foundation, the purchasing power of the dollars left after Americans pay their taxes has been sharply reduced by inflation. The foundation cites as statistics the fact that in 1972 dollars, the average American family had $9,702 of disposable income 10 years ago. Today that figure — again, in 1972 dollars — is $8,543.

The tax load increase during the past 10 years has been primarily attributable to Social Security tax increases and so-called "bracket creep." But while social spending increased dramatically between 1960 and 1981 — rising from $30 billion a year to more than $500 billion — poverty in the United States has not been diminished. In fact, the most recent census indicates the number of officially designated poor people in United States society actually has increased instead of diminished.

The claim that higher taxation reduces poverty in our society just doesn't hold water. While the average American's taxes have increased and his buying power has declined, a host of social programs have failed to alter the plight of the impoverished.

What has happened because of the course of government the last few years is that social spending has undermined the federal budget. Washington has attempted to make up the difference — the deficit — by printing more morey — worthless money.

That has virtually destroyed the nation's economy. The result has been declining real incomes and rising number of the officially designated poor.

President Ronald Reagan has put the nation on a realistic economic course. In view of the Tax Foundations most recent study, we think this course came not a moment too soon.

Scanlan a good choice

The selection of John D. Scanlan to be the next United States Ambassador to Poland looks like an excellent choice.

Every time a president looks around for an envoy to send to an especially sensitive post, he must first decide whether to settle for a career diplomat or a political appointee.

A political appointee like the late John Hay Whitney, who was sent to the Court of St. James's by President Eisenhower, was an admirable ambassador. He could speak the language of the high and the mighty of the top echelons of British politics as well as that of the man on the street. Of the same stripe is the American Ambassador to Japan, Mike Mansfield, who has become immensely popular with the Japanese people. The times and conditions proved correct for both.

By the same token, there are times and conditions that appear to call for a career diplomat, one who has studied a country and has had long experience with the intricacies of effective diplomacy. Poland is in the throes of a continuing and complicated struggle between a communist government and the labor union Solidarity. Unusual skills are necessary for any ambassador there, especially one from a United States that is openly sympathetic to the rebellious Polish citizens.

More secure packaging

The cyanide deaths of seven users of Extra-Strength Tylenol in the Chicago area have forced the over-the-counter drug industry into a much needed re-evaluation of its production, packaging and distribution procedures.

As law enforcement agencies continue their massive investigation into the planting of cyanide-laced capsules in drug stores, a special task force representing the federal Food and Drug Administration and the Proprietary Association is meeting on ways to secure packaging of non-prescription medicines.

The industry's commendable response to the Tylenol sabotage contrasts with the recent hasty action of the Cook County Board. It passed an ordinance requiring all over-the-counter medicines, remedies or vitamins sold in Cook County, including Chicago, to carry some sort of seal, in addition to a lid or cap, within 90 days.

Chicago politicians are urging state legislatures and Congress to follow their lead. But spokesmen for the Proprietary Association, which represents 85 manufacturers of non-prescription drugs, say such a requirement could not be implemented so soon without a total and prohibitively expensive recall of products.

In the sensationalism surrounding the Tylenol tragedies, one shouldn't ignore a very good point raised by the drug industry. It may be entirely feasible to make packages that will be harder to tamper with, but it is not possible to make or legislate a tamper-proof package.

What happened in Chicago to apparently a few bottles of a popular pain-killing remedy could happen to almost any sort of packaged product sold in any retail outlet. If the criminal or deranged mind is that driven, sealed containers offer little protection.

The Tylenol tragedy has prompted the most massive drug recall of a product in the history of the industry, effectively ruining a highly successful product from a respected company, Johnson & Johnson.

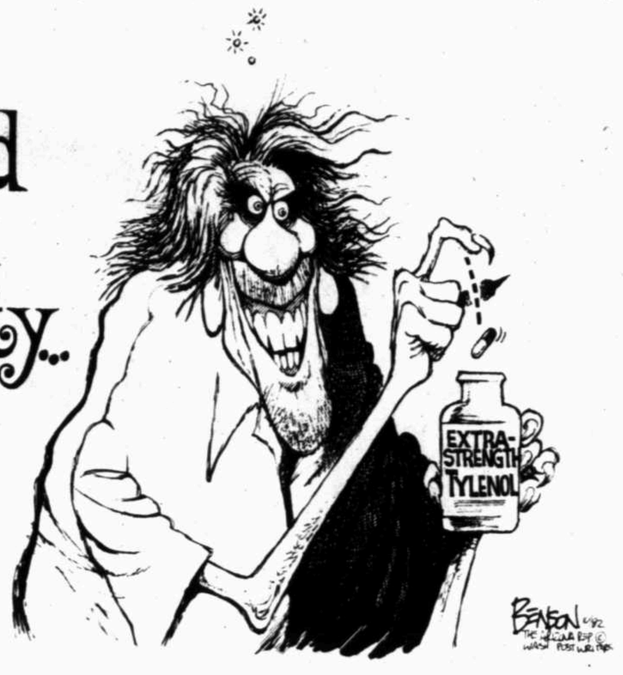

The drug firm is trying to weather the storm in an appropriate manner. It has stopped shipments of the capsules from its McNeil Consumer Products Co. subsidiary, and is reportedly studying new ways to produce Tylenol's primary ingredient, acetaminophen, for the lucrative $1.2 billion analgesic market.

Options include making just tablets, one-piece capsules or individually wrapped capsules, foil seals or "blister-pack" foil packages. Those are also the prospects for future products from the over-the-counter drug industry in general — along with wrapping product boxes in cellophane, sealing them with glue or capping bottles with paper or plastic.

Such precautions can only increase the price — an expense most consumers, we imagine, are willing to bear in exchange for greater peace of mind. Before local officials and legislators add to the cost by copying Cook County's panic, the drug industry should be given the opportunity first to improve its products.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Lebanon crisis may affect U.S. elections

WASHINGTON — The Lebanese crisis has had political repercussions not only in Israel but in the United States as well. Both pro-Israeli and pro-Arab factions will be watching the November elections closely for signs of any change in the voters' attitudes.

Jack Anderson

Pro-Israel sentiment has dominated Congress in the past. But now there are genuine policy differences between U.S. and Israeli leaders. There are also signs that the public's support of Israel is eroding as a result of the recent events in Lebanon.

Two close congressional races — one in California, the other in Illinois — have become battlegrounds for pro-Israeli and pro-Arab interest groups. Contributions from political action committees have been based heavily on the candidates' real or perceived views toward Israel. As a result, the PAC donations themselves have become a campaign issue.

In the Illinois district that Abe Lincoln once represented, Rep. Paul Findley, the senior Republican on the House Middle East Subcommittee, faces Democrat Dick Durbin. The challenger describes Findley as "Yassir Arafat's best friend in Congress," citing as evidence the congressman's meetings with the Palestine Liberation Organization leader and other PLO representatives.

Findley, in turn, is trying to make an issue out of Durbin's financial support from pro-Israel groups outside the district, like the San Francisco-based Americans for Good Government. "Durbin gets 80 percent of his money from outside the district," a Findley aide said, "from people who are upset with the congressman's approach to the Middle East."

Findley gets 30 percent of his money from outsiders.

"Findley is trying to highlight the fact that many of my supporters are Jewish," Durbin told my associate Ron McRae, "while he solicits money from Arab-Americans, oil companies, pro-PLO sympathizers and other enemies of Israel."

Durbin vowed not to use the personal-smear tactics of Findley's 1980 opponent, who ran ads calling the congressman a "practicing anti-Semite." Yet his fundraising efforts echo the theme that Findley is anti-Israel. For example, he hired Jimmy Klaber, a former B'nai B'rith official who was publicly chastised by the Anti-Defamation League for calling Findley an anti-Semite. Klaber has raised more than $40,000 for Durbin.

Durbin claims that Findley spends 90 percent of his time advocating the PLO cause in Congress, a charge Findley dismisses as "absurd."

In California, incumbent Rep. Tom Lantos, a liberal Democrat and also a member of the Middle East subcommittee, faces a comeback challenge from conservative Republican Bill Royer, whom he unseated in 1980.

Lantos is a strong supporter of Israel; Royer says he, too, is "80 percent with Israel." But Lantos suggests that his opponent's campaign slogan — "Bill Royer. He's one of us" — could be interpreted as anti-Semitic. (Lantos is a Hungarian-born Jew.)

Here again, PACs concerned with the candidates' views on the Middle East have made substantial campaign donations.

EPA FUROR: When an Environmental Protection Agency official recommended substantial weakening of agency regulations covering environmental impact statements, he stirred up a hornet's nest of complaints from regional EPA officials.

Charles Maneri, a senior staff adviser, told the Council on Environmental Quality that current regulations don't take into account the economic impact of construction delays caused by the necessity of filing impact statements. He also suggested amending the rule requiring that federal agencies "affirmatively solicit" public comment.

"The public may comment if it so desires," he told the council, but there is no need for agencies to "stir up dissension or opposition to a project."

In one internal memo, a regional official wrote that the law is working just fine as is, and said it was "particularly disturbing that these (Maneri's) comments were made without soliciting the views of the 10 EPA regional offices who are directly responsible for carrying out EPA's review functions."

Another regional official wrote that Maneri's "categorical assertions ... are presented without any substantiation whatsoever ... are contrary to case law, are factually incorrect in some points and would not be borne out by a review of the record."

WATCH ON WASTE: The Overseas Private Investment Corp., a federal agency that insures U.S. businessmen against the risks of foreign ventures, hired a special consultant in 1979 to plan a "performance management system." The idea was to set up a means of judging OPIC employees' performance. The consultant was to be paid $400 a day, with a maximum of $40,000, and the job was to be finished in a few months. But the contract was extended three times and lasted two years. The consultant wound up being paid $74,000.

INSIDE REPORT:

Richards' meeting with Reagan didn't help

WASHINGTON — Ignoring top White House aides, Republican National Committee Chairman Richard Richards made a fatal mistake in thinking that his face-to-face Oct. 1 meeting with Ronald Reagan would persuade the president to keep him on as the party's leader through the 1984 elections.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Richards had been told by White House chief of staff James Baker, counselor Edwin Meese and deputy staff chief Michael Deaver that his stormy two-year tenure would end after the Nov. 2 election. Fighting back, Richards made generous disbursements — entirely legal — of national committee campaign funds in an effort to influence friendly state chairmen. Acting entirely on his own, he sent $50,000 to the Nebraska party of Gov. Charles Thone, who is in no danger for re-election.

The effort to build a pro-Richards phalanx failed to budge Reagan. When the president then offered to make Richards under secretary of interior, he said no thanks. Three days later he announced his "resignation," compounding evidence of disarray within Republican ranks one month before the election. Reagan wanted the "resignation" made public before Nov. 2, but Richards' timing stunned the White House.

CAREY-KOCH DEAL

Gov. Hugh Carey's last-minute decision to endorse Mayor Ed Koch as Democratic nominee for governor of New York was part of a deal that would have delivered a handsome package to Carey when he leaves the governor's office: chairmanship of a prestigious state commission with access to a state-owned airplane.

Carey had pledged neutrality in the primary campaign that Koch at one point seemed certain to win — but that Lt. Gov. Mario Cuomo actually did win. His late decision to get off the fence and endorse old friend Koch over his lieutenant governor (whom he has treated like a poor relation in Albany) infuriated Cuomo's forces.

But its effect on the primary election was probably a boomerang, helping not Koch but Cuomo. In return for Carey's endorsement, Koch promised to re-establish the old panel on the future of government in New York state, now defunct. Among the perquisites: travel around the state in a taxpayer-financed, state-owned aircraft.

BACKLASH WAITING

Hopes by California Republican operatives to retain the governorship after eight years in Democratic hands rest on a factor that has not shown up in public opinion surveys: racial prejudice.

No poll shows any evidence of opposition to the Democratic candidate, Mayor Tom Bradley of Los Angeles, because he is black. All surveys continue to show him leading his Republican opponent, state Attorney General George Deukmejian, by a comfortable margin. Nevertheless, Republicans believe rank-and-file Democratic opposition to Bradley because of race does not show up in the polls because voters will not tell interviewers the truth.

Deukmejian, a moderate conservative, has not faintly touched the race issue in his campaign. Rather, his contest with Bradley, a moderate liberal, is the dullest race for governor of California in memory, while Republicans quietly wait for the white backlash.

HARD-TO-GET LAXALT

Sen. Paul Laxalt, President Reagan's closest friend in the Senate, is playing hard-to-get as Reagan's first choice for Republican National Committee chairman in the crucial presidential campaign years of 1983 and 1984. Laxalt doesn't want the job.

A procedural bar to Laxalt is not counted as serious within the White House. The 1976 Republican National Convention adopted a new rule requiring the national chairman to be a "full-time" officer, automatically ruling out members of Congress. It went into the by-laws when party regulars complained that Sen. Bob Dole and other members of Congress were only part-timers during their tenures as national chairmen.

After Laxalt, Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis is high on Reagan's list, but he has no interest in the post. Administration insiders say Reagan may cast his eye inside his own White House for a dark horse: Richard Williamson, a key aide to chief of staff James Baker, who would be acceptable to party conservatives.

THE BURT COUNTERATTACK

Secretary of State George Shultz and national security adviser William P. Clark have thrown their full weight against conservative senators trying to block the nomination of Richard Burt, the former New York Times national security reporter, as assistant secretary of state for European affairs.

Shultz broke away from his United Nations schedule on Oct. 1 to appeal by telephone to Sen. Orrin Hatch; Clark called Sen. John Tower to ask for his help in winning the support of Sens. Gordon Humphrey and Steve Symms. Ironically, while conservatives were trying to defeat Burt's nomination, liberal Democrats led by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy were publicly supporting him.

The ostensible issue is a 1979 story by Burt in The New York Times that the conservatives say revealed highly-classified information, hurting the U.S. The real reason is deeper: Critics charge that Burt is not fully behind Reagan's arms control policies. With both Clark and Shultz now taking the offensive for Burt, the charge that he has subverted Reagan's policies will not stand up. The outlook is that he will win confirmation during the rump session of Congress in early December.

CHARLEY REESE

Why should Americans pay the bills?

The Overseas Private Insurance Corp., a federal agency, happily announced the other day that $15 million was being invested in Thailand.

Charley Reese

Why in the heck are $15 million American dollars being invested in Thailand when 10 million Americans are out of work?

OPIC is one of those corporate welfare agencies which insures American corporations' foreign investments against confiscation or nationalization. It ought to be abolished.

In the last 20 years, billions of American dollars and millions of American jobs have been moved out of this country into foreign countries by American corporations with the co-operation and encouragement of the federal government.

America isn't being de-industrialized by some mystical force; it is being deliberately de-industrialized by a corporate elite who choose to take advantage of cheap foreign labor and favorable tax laws.

They are the same people who maintain a huge lobby in favor of so-called free trade so they can import their own foreign-manufactured products back into American. Part of their propaganda is the alleged big need for American exports; what they don't tell you is what a tiny fraction of American business is engaged in exports or needs to export. The big market is still the United States.

If enough Americans don't wake up in time, we're going to be facing a disaster. We need a nationalist program and nationalist congressmen to enact it before the corporate vampires bleed America to death.

A good start would be local content legislation, a law requiring that any manufactured product sold in the United States must contain at least 90 percent American-manufactured components. And not just for automobiles. If Sony wants to sell television sets to Americans, let them build a plant here. I don't care if the profits go back to Tokyo as long as the plant, the jobs, and machines are on American soil.

A second step would be to discourage overseas investment by American-owned multinational corporations. We should abolish OPIC for starters. Then prohibit the import of any manufactured product made by an American subsidiary or a foreign corporation in which Americans own a major interest.

In other words, if Chrysler wants to build a plant in Japan to sell cars to the Japanese, fine; but we must halt this practice of multinational corporations moving plants to foreign countries and then sending the products back to the United States.

We should end the practice of the government guaranteeing American bank loans to foreign countries. It is stupid for American banks to be lending billions of dollars to foreign countries when the Ohio Valley is dying for lack of capital to invest in new machines for its industries.

For that matter, it is stupid to be providing billions of tax dollars in foreign aid and to fund the United Nations when America's elderly and its children are being told the nation can no longer afford to help them.

We have been sold a bill of goods by internationalists who don't give a rat's toenail for this country or the people in it. It's time for Americans to start caring about Americans and to tell those who don't to go to blazes.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, Oct. 11, the 284th day of 1982. There are 81 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Oct. 11, 1779, Polish nobleman Casimir Pulaski was killed while fighting for American independence at the battle of Savannah in Georgia.

On this date:

—In 1811, the first steam ferry was put into operation between New York City and Hoboken, N.J.

—In 1932, the Democratic National Committee sponsored a television program from New York — the first political telecast in the United States.

—In 1967, Bolivian officials said the body of slain Cuban guerrilla leader Che Guevara had been buried in a secret grave.

Ten years ago: The United States placed restrictions on its pilots carrying out attacks in the Hanoi area after three foreign missions in North Vietnam were damaged.

Five years ago: Israel's Cabinet approves agreement by Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan and U.S. President Jimmy Carter on procedures for new Middle East peace conference.

One year ago: Former presidents Carter and Gerald Ford, en route home from the funeral of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, said the United States eventually must negotiate with the Palestine Liberation Organization.

National Newspaper Week October 10th- 16th

The Midland Reporter-Telegram

Home Delivery, For your Convenience

Many people needed to get it done

The Circulation Deparment of The Reporter-Telegram is responsible for distribution–the final step in the daily process of producing the newspaper.

While Midland's unprecedented growth in recent years has posed problems not unlike those faced by many businesses which service the public, reorganization, new equipment and staff enlargement have been undertaken to help resolve those problems.

That growth has raised daily circulation to nearly 27,000 copies while the Sunday edition has passed 31,000. Timely edition has that many newspaper each day is a monumental task that requires a dedicated staff.

The combined Circulation-Mailroom Department now employs more personnel than any other single department at the newspaper. Mailroom personnel, comprising more than 30 people, are responsible for inserting the majority of pre-printed materials into the paper. These are then bundled and distributed to district managers who, in turn, deliver the bundles to carrier's homes.

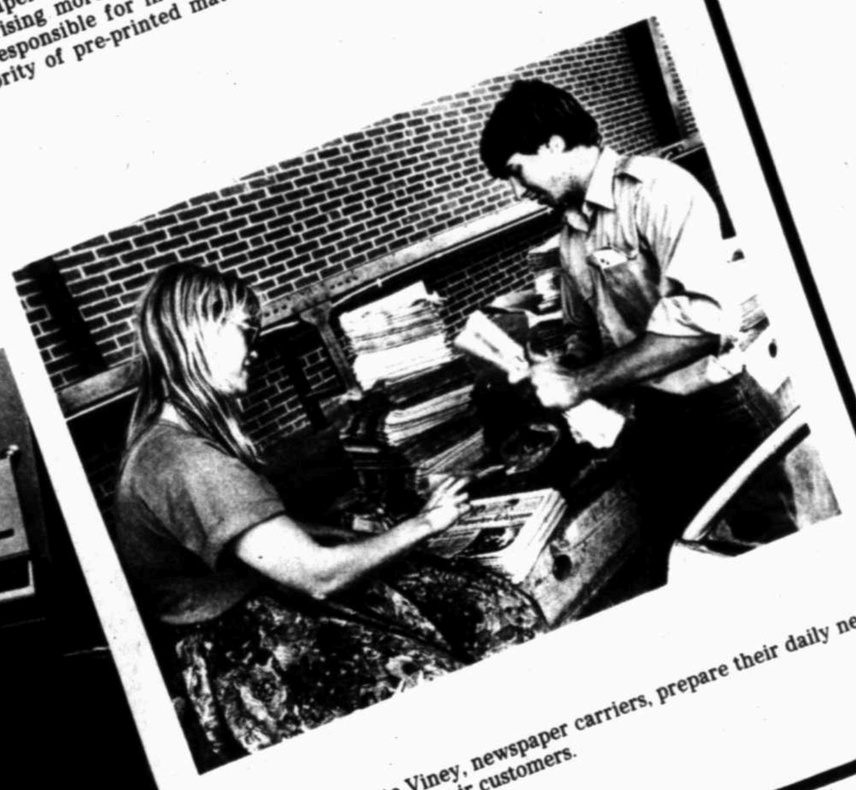

District mangers also work with individual carriers in improving service on their routes, handling collection problems and soliciting new subscribers.

Nine employees are needed in the Circulation offices where they are responsible for maintaining and updating customer and carrier records, carrier and customer billing, complaints, mail subscriptions and promotional activities.

A total of 97 percent of The Reporter-Telegram's circulation is in the city and adjacent area.

The Circulation staff totals 67 full time and part-time employees while approximately 100 carriers and dealers distribute the final product.

They all have one common goal: to improve and maintain good delivery service to our growing family of readers.

Scott and Brigitte Viney, newspaper carriers, prepare their daily newspapers for delivery to their customers.

Twila Dension operates newly-acquired computer system for billing of our subscribers.

...And at The Reporter-Telegram that means people working in a dozen different departments with one common goal: To produce and deliver to you the best daily newspaper possible.

To help us do a better job we're taking a close look at ourselves, how we do things and how we could do them better. We're examining all the possiblities and looking at all the angles that could result in a better Midland Reporter-Telegram for you.

And our people are deeply involved in helping us make those changes. This week we'll be letting you know who some of them are and the role they play in producing your daily paper.

While a newspaper's task is to keep citizens informed on what's happening throughout the world, and The Reporter-Telegram utilizes five national news services to do that, we believe you also want thorough, timely, comprehensive local coverage...news and features about people, places and events here at home.

To obtain and produce that news we have enlarged our staff to its present size... 32 editors, reporters and photographers. We're proud of them because we know "It's PEOPLE that make newspapers go!"

Two Pampa nursing home residents die in fire

PAMPA, Texas (AP) — Two elderly people died and eight were injured in a fire that sent smoke billowing through one wing of a 150-room nursing home.

About 150 residents were evacuated during the blaze, which caused extensive heat and fire damage to one wing and heavy smoke damage throughout the Pampa Nursing Center, officials said.

Investigators planned to comb the building today searching for clues to the cause of the fire Sunday evening.

"The fire was confined to one (patient's) room, and then it traveled out into the hall to a bathroom and into an adjoining room," said fire Capt. Don Hendricks.

He credited doors and automatic sprinklers with helping to keep the blaze from spreading to the other wing of the one-story, U-shaped building.

The fire began about 6:15 p.m. in the brick-veneer structure and was out about 1½ hours later, fire officials said.

Killed were John M. Bentley, 75, and Bertha McQuary, 81. Authorities said they suffered cardiac arrest at a local hospital after being overcome by smoke.

Eva Richardson, 75, and Ed English, 85, were in stable condition in the intensive care unit of Coronado Community Hospital, according to hospital spokesman Walter Johnson.

Hospitalized in stable condition were Donna Blackwell, 21, an employee; Lessie McNeal, 79; James Thurman, no age given; Mattie Attherton, 75; and Annie Teal, 80.

Another employee, Anita Casaus, 29, was treated for smoke inhalation and later released from the hospital, he said.

"The majority of the cases were respiratory therapy treated from smoke inhalation," Johnson said. "None were suffering from burns that we could tell."

Two firemen were treated by ambulance crews during the five-alarm blaze for smoke inhalation, but did not require hospitalization, he said.

The nursing center patients who were evacuated were taken to the Coronado Nursing Home, across the street.

DEATHS

S.W. McClure

Services for S.W. "Mac" McClure, 69, 4318 Monty Drive, will be at 3 p.m. Tuesday at the Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home chapel with the Rev. James Holman, minister of St. Paul United Methodist Church, officiating, assisted by the Rev. Walter Driver, a retired minister from Big Spring.

He died today in a Midland hospital.

McClure was born August 17, 1913, in Mineral Wells. He grew up in Fort Worth. During his teens, he began his career as a draftsman with the Pure Oil Company which later became Union Oil Co. of California. He was transferred to Roswell, N.M., in 1960 and once again to Midland in 1962. He worked for Union Oil Co., of California for 42 years, retiring Aug. 31, 1978. After retirement he operated and owned his own independent drafting service, Mac's Drafting Service.

He was member of the St. Paul Methodist Church of Midland, past master of Hemphill Heights Masonic Lodge of Fort Worth and member of Moslah Shrine of Fort Worth, Knights Templer and Royal Arch Mason.

Survivors include his wife, Wanda C. McClure of Midland; two daughters, Mrs. Dwain (Beth) Walker of Mechanicsberg, Pa., and Mrs. John (Sylvia) Turner of Lafayette, La.; two brothers, Thomas A. McClure of Houston and Curtis A. McClure of Fort Worth; two sisters, Pearl Teague and Mattie Lennox, both of Fort Worth; eight grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Edna Jennings

Survivors include his wife; a daughter, Glenda Joyce Walker of Odessa; a son, Auther Eugene Myers of Rankin; a brother, Noah Lewis Myers of Richmond, Calif.; and five grandchildren.

Church members injured in Sunday explosion

BOERNE, Texas (AP) — Authorities were trying to determine today why a space heater inside a wood-frame church released gas that later ignited, critically injuring two children and an adult in a church school class.

The explosion at Jesus' Name Holiness Tabernacle Church also sent four other people to three area hospitals with serious injuries. Another person was also injured but did not seek hospitalization, authorities said.

"I was outside the church when I heard the explosion," said the Rev. Virgil Timmons, pastor. "I saw the little boys running out of the room at the same time I saw the flames come out and suddenly disappear. It was what they call a flash fire."

Timmons said that he ran in the room after the explosion to try to turn the gas valve to the heater off, but it broke off and he ran outside and turned the whole gas system off.

Waylon Christian, 12, and his 14-year-old sister, Terri, both of San Antonio, remained in critical condition at Brooke Army Medical Burn Center at Fort Sam Houston in San Antonio, said Army Capt. Alana Cline.

The pair and three other children received second- and third-degree burns over 70 to 80 percent of their bodies, authorities said. Two adults suffered apparent heart attacks in the explosion.

James P. Allen, 3, and his 10-year-old sister, Kassandry, both of San Antonio; and Michelle Cravey, 10, and Reba Fox, 49, both of Boerne, were in fair condition at Medical Center Hospital in San Antonio.

Keep energy costs low by conserving

By IRENE GARDNER KEENEY
Hearst Feature Service

With a record cold winter being predicted by almost every forecaster, more than a few Americans are planning ahead to wrestle with what will become a major problem a few months from now: High energy bills.

Some homeowners and apartment-dwellers are pinning their hopes on different forms of fuel, hoping to avoid price rises in natural gas or fuel oil. But others are following advice long advanced: Conservation still is the cheapest, cleanest and most efficient way to hold down energy bills.

Contrary to what you may have heard or thought, energy conservation doesn't mean doing without or going cold — it means becoming energy-efficient. Here are some tips to help you become more energy efficient:

FURNACE

Focus on your furnace if you want to save energy; your central heating system is the largest consumer of energy in your house, and the No. 1. contributor to high home energy costs.

Although your furnace "worked fine all last winter," cycling on and off automatically, this is neither proof that you were getting the most heat for your money nor a guarantee that the furnace will run efficiently or reliably this winter. Furnaces, like automobiles, need regular tuneups to keep them in proper working order.

IN MUCH THE same way that an auto mechanic will test a car's engine, a heating technician can run a series of combustion checks on your furnace or burner to determine its efficiency level and identify ways for it to generate more heat for fewer dollars. This should be done at least once a year, preferably before the heating system gets into full swing. Anything less will result in wasted fuel, higher heating costs and the risk of an expensive (and chilly) furnace breakdown.

Many oil burners, particlarly those in older homes, can either be replaced with newer, more energy-efficient models or rebuilt (retrofitted) to upgrade their efficency. You can increase the seasonal efficiency of an oil-fired system by up to 15 percent just by installing a new high-speed flame retention head burner. This high-efficency device is available from most heating service contractors.

Some heating systems are simply too large for the homes they service. Many were installed in older homes that were designed and built when fuel was plentiful and cheap. Size affects performance in two ways: Through the frequency and duration of the on-off cycle, and through the amount of cold outside air that is drawn into the furnace to replace the air used in combustion.

Your heating system also may be oversized if you've recently added insulation or other weatherizing materials to our home. If so, and if your furnace or burner is still too new to warrant complete replacement, it can be "derated" by reducing the size of the fuel input nozzle in the case of an oil-fired furnace and by closing off some of the gas jets in a gas-fired system.

Both techniques, which should be undertaken only by a trained heating technician, produce a more balanced air-fuel ratio and optimize the system's firing rate by matching it to the heat load. These steps have been proven to increase furnace-burner eficiency by up to 7 percent.

WHEN IT COMES to heating, how warm do you need to be this winter? Most experts agree that people tend to overheat their homes. A thermostat setting of 65 degrees F. will provide you with sufficient heat for normal daytime activity and comfort, although families with infants and elderly persons may find they require a little more heat. Because less heat is required when you're sleeping, a nighttime setting of 58 degrees to 60 degrees F. is adequate.

Don't believe the old wives' (or old husbands') tale that claims you will use more fuel re-heating your home during the day after turning your thermostat down overnight. Studies have proven that a setback of as little as 3 degrees F. can save you as much as 10 percent on your heating bill; a 5 degrees to 8 degrees F. setback can reduce your fuel consumption by 15 to 20 percent.

Like many people, you might find that a nighttime thermostat setting of 55 degrees F. will allow for more comfortable sleeping. In any case, you should realize that chills are caused primarily by drafts from air leaks around windows and doors or from open fireplace dampers.

If your home has zone heating, set the thermostats for the activity peculiar to that area: Higher temperatures in bathrooms, dens and living rooms; lower temperatures in the kitchen, bedrooms and laundry areas.

OUTSIDE INSURANCE

Many homeowners and landlords are pumping much-needed insulaton into their buildings. By now, most of us know that's a good step toward making your house energy-efficient. But if you caulk up the cracks around your house that allow cold air to creep in, and add weatherstripping to your windows and doors, you'll save even more.

LIGHTING

You can save energy and money by the way you use lighting. One of the best ways to do this is to use what is called "task-oriented" lighting, a concept that business and industry have found to be worthwhile and involving nothing more than a little planning. By providing concentrated lighting around desks, work benches, kitchen work areas and tables, it allows you to reduce the lighting levels in other areas of a room.

THINK OF IT this way: If you are going to sit down to read a book, it makes more sense to have a 60-watt lamp beside you than a 100-watt bulb in an overhead ceiling fixture dispersing light throughout the room.

Apart from replacing burnt-out bulbs, maintenance isn't something you ordinarily consider in lighting, but it can make a difference. Light bulbs, reflectors, shields, lampshades and lamp chimneys should be kept clean at all times. The dust and dirt that settle on them absorb light and decreases their efficiency.

Another way to save lighting energy is to be selective in the size and type of lightbulb you purchase. Lightbulbs are measured in lumens (a measure of their light output) and watts (a measure of the rate at which they consume electricity.)

Information on bulb life-expectancy is usually included on the packaging, usually 750 to 1,000 hours. Low-wattage, krypton gas-filled bulbs are available in large electric supply stores. These bulbs, which come in 55-, 92- and 138-watt sizes, have lower wattage than standard bulbs that produce the same amount of light, but they use less energy to do the same amount of work.

Men resentful over social changes

By CECELIA GOODNOW
Hearst Feature Service

SEATTLE — It's rare these days to find a young, college-educated American man who would publicly disavow equal rights for women. But beneath men's glib assertions of feminism lies a web of confusion, resentment and self-doubt, says social historian Donald H. Bell.

"All men feel resentful about these changes," said Bell, 39, a Harvard history professor who explores his own ambivalent feelings about modern manhood in his book, "Being a Man: The Paradox of Masculinity."

Bell believes that the women's movement has, on the whole, been beneficial to men and women alike, but agrees with feminist Betty Friedan that it is time to move from recriminations to cooperation.

"I don't think it's that productive anymore to say men are pigs and they're oppressing everyone," Bell said. "We're all in this together."

Bell's intensely personal book grew out of a double whammy in his own life: divorce and unemployment. His first marriage was considered a model of equality, and Bell and his wife appeared on television as an example of a modern, liberated couple. Yet at the time of the show, the Bells were barely speaking to each other in private life. The marriage fell apart soon afterward.

The problem was that his wife, identified by the pseudonym Rachel, was struggling to pattern her life on the ideals of the women's movement, while Bell — outwardly supportive of feminism — inwardly rebelled at the day-to-day changes his marriage had undergone.

"I blamed feminism and the women's movement as the reasons my marriage broke up," he said. "They weren't. We were out of phase with each other."

Still reeling from his divorce, Bell became a victim of the academic cutbacks of the '70s. Affirmative action quotas contributed to the loss of his job — sending him into a deeper emotional tailspin, he said.

"I supported affirmative action; I still do. Yet, I felt devastated," he said. "I felt like I had two fundamental foundations about being a man cut out from me. It was a real crisis."

As a form of personal therapy, Bell began to question other men about their own attitudes toward the changing role of men. He interviewed more than 100 men — mostly white, middle-class professionals — to see if they were experiencing the same ambivalence about societal changes. They were, and the book is filled with their anonymous accounts.

"I realize that there are contradictions in my beliefs and attitudes," a lawyer in his 20s admitted to Bell. "I don't mind being equal with women at work, but I still believe in a fairly traditional division of labor at home. In a way, the women's movement has even increased my expectations for women. I want them to make dinner, clean up, and be successful professionally."

Bell has found a firmer, more equal basis for marriage with his current wife, Sara, a psychiatric social worker. "In my first marriage, I argued about a lot of extraneous stuff," Bell said. "In this marriage, when we argue, we talk about the issues and get it out."

Bell also wants to strengthen his relationship with other men. He believes that most men yearn for the kind of chums they had as boys, but have trouble talking about anything more personal than politics, sports and business.

Bell believes that if men learn to see beyond their sense of alienation, they will recognize that their losses are offset by new opportunities.

Astronomers club to meet Thursday

Dr. Harlan J. Smith, professor and director of McDonald Observatory, will be guest speaker when the West Texas Astronomers club meets on Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the Marian Blakemore Planetarium.

Dr. Smith recieved his Bachelor's degree, his Master's degree and his Ph.D degree from Harvard University. He taught at Yale from 1953 — 1963, becoming an Associate Professor in 1960.

He served as chairman of the Department of Astronomy at The University of Texas at Austin from 1963 — 1978. He also became the Director of McDonald Observatory in 1963, and continues as director today.

The topic Dr. Smith will discuss at the Thursday meeting will be "The New Texas Telescope," which, when completed, will be the world's largest telescope. The telescope will have a mirror that is 300 inches in diameter, but will be only about four inches thick. Even though the mirror will be thin, it will still weigh more than 20,000 pounds.

This large mirror will give the new Texas Telescope the ability to gather more light, and in turn make available more knowledge about the universe around us than is now possible.

All interested persons are invited to attend the meeting.

DEAR ABBY

Are women 'asking for it'?

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: The letter signed "Grandma," suggesting that women who are raped "asked for it" by wearing provocative clothing, prompts this letter. Your answer (rape is a crime of violence, designed to humiliate and dominate) was right on, but you must admit that women (and some men, too!) do dress provocatively in an effort to entice certain relationships — but only on their own terms, with the consenting partner of their choice.

If a merchant were to display goods attractively, hoping to entice interest in his merchandise, no one would say "he asked for it" if a burglar broke in and seized the goods without complying with the contractual terms of sale. — DOUGLAS D. IN SHERMAN OAKS, CALIF.

DEAR DOUGLAS: How does one define "provocative"? It could mean something different to each man. There are "leg" men, "breast" men, "fanny" men, and men who are turned on by a pouty mouth, blond hair, or you name it.

Perhaps we should emulate Iran's Ayatollah Khomeini, and insist that our women be covered from head to toe in black wool, with only holes for the eyes. Then they would be rape-proof — unless, of course one runs into an "eye" man.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing this for those who think it is immoral to destroy an imperfect fetus. I have a 30-year-old mentally retarded son whose life has been nothing but grief for him and us. I could handle the problem when he was a child, although I cried with him every time he was rejected by his peers and adults.

Out of a family of seven children, only one brother acknowledges his existence. The others ignore him, forgetting birthdays and Christmas. My son has no friends, and spends so much time alone that when he does see another human being, besides the small circle he lives in, he chatters constantly and drives everyone away.

He knows that he is "different," and he is very unhappy. He once saved up a lot of vitamins (he knew they were called "pills") until he thought he had enough to commit suicide.

I can't let him go out alone, as he is tormented or taken advantage of sexually. Do all these do-gooders understand all the problems that go along with retardation? Would they take someone like my son and care for him FOREVER?

The small number of people who would deserve sainthood. Most who open their mouths would disappear if they were called upon to help. I know, as I have asked for help, and have been turned down with some fine-sounding excuses.

Every time I read letters from all these busybodies who would tell someone else what decisions he or she should make, I wish I could send them my son for a month. Let them live with the problems that never end, the grief I feel, have always felt, and will until the day I die. Just setting these thoughts down on paper starts the tears to flowing.

There is no place in society for these mentally handicapped people. They need their own community where they could be with their own kind and not feel different. They could be sterilized so they could love and marry. They have feelings, too! They aren't capable of raising children, but I'm sure a howl would be raised if they were rendered incapable of becoming parents.

When you live with these problems 24 hours a day, you think of mercy killing and suicide, but that takes more courage than I have.

This problem ruined my marriage. I also know other marriages that have collapsed under the burden. It has made family and friends disappear.

I could write a book on the subject. Any small pleasures you may find in a child like this are washed away by bigger problems later on.

These facts need to be put before people so they can see the situation from another point of view. — LOS ANGELES MOTHER

YMCA to offer color course

"Color Magic" will be offered at the Central YMCA, 800 N. Big Spring, beginning Tuesday. Using the four season concept of color analysis, the student will learn to know and understand coloring, choice of makeup, hair shade, eye color and wardrobe. Packet of fabric swatches in the individual's colors will be included in the course fee.

The course will meet for two hours, 7:30 p.m. — 9:30 p.m., for three consecutive Tuesdays. Instructor will be color consultant Marie Woolley. Class size will be limited, pre-registration is necessary.

For more information call the Central YMCA, 682-2551.

Chimney stacks, swimming pools and charred rubble is all that remains of homes valued at $1 million in the Crest De Ville section of Orange, Calif., where fire swept through the area Saturday. Three persons can be seen roaming in the rubble.

Firefighters try to contain wind-fed brush fires in southern California

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Firefighters struggled today to complete the containment of two giant wind-fed brush fires that have ravaged thousands of acres in tinder-dry southern Californa, burning 85 homes and injuring 147 people.

Authorities were looking for arsonists believed to have set five of the 10 fires that blackened 74,800 acres in five counties over the weekend and caused an estimated $36 million in damages.

The worst two fires, in Malibu and in Orange County, were fanned by Santa Ana "devil" winds — dry seasonal gusts blowing off the deserts toward the Pacific Ocean.

No one was killed by the fires and most of the injuries were minor, with victims suffering smoke inhalation or irritated eyes.

But winds gusting up to 60 mph killed 14-year-old Ellen Wright of Baldwin Park, knocking a tree onto her tent Saturday as she slept in Holcomb Canyon, about 35 miles northeast of Los Angeles, sheriff's Deputy Dave Tellez said.

Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. declared a state of emergency in Los Angeles, Ventura and Orange counties, allowing state officials to seek federal aid for uninsured homeowners, who would be eligible for low-interest loans or grants up to $5,000.

The largest fire, charring 54,000 acres and causing $20 million damage in Dayton Canyon, 35 miles northwest of Los Angeles, was 80 percent contained with full containment predicted by tonight. The Orange County fire was reported 90 percent contained and 60 percent controlled early today with full containment and control expected later today. Fires are contained when encircled by fire lines and controlled when firefighters can direct their progress.

In Dayton Canyon, 24 houses and 41 mobile homes burned, along with the wilderness location where the "M-A-S-H" television series has been filmed, said Los Angeles County fire spokesmen.

Initially firefighters had estimated 122 homes burned in the two biggest fires, but that was revised downward today.

Barbara Copeland surveyed the charred and twisted wreckage of her mobile home there Sunday.

"The refrigerator melted. You can't tell we ever had a TV set or a washer or a dryer. They just melted," she said.

One firefighter suffered second-degree burns and several were treated for broken bones at Kaiser Canyon Medical Center in Anaheim.

"The sparks were so thick it was like driving into a blizzard with your headlights on high," said Tony McEwan, 38, whose Latigo Canyon home was threatened by the Dayton Canyon blaze.

Witnesses said a car was seen driving into the area just before the arson-caused blaze erupted. County fire Battalion Chief Donald Grant said investigators had narrowed their search to "two prime vehicle types."

"It was definitely an arson fire. We found multiple points of origin and an ignition device," Grant said, declining to elaborate.

A fire in Riverside County also was deliberately set, firefighters said. Los Angeles County Fire Chief Clyde Bragdon also blamed arsonists for three fires that broke out Saturday morning on the inland side of the Santa Monica Mountains, including Dayton Canyon.

Another deliberately set fire burned 3,000 acres Friday in Simi Valley, 10 miles north of Dayton Canyon, before firefighters gained control.

The Orange County blaze charred 16,800 acres and destroyed or damaged 20 homes each valued at up to $500,000 in Crest de Ville, Villa Park and Orange Acres, neighborhoods close to its origin in Gypsum Canyon, 35 miles southeast of Los Angeles. Total damage there was estimated at $16 million.

Most residents who lost homes apparently sought shelter with friends or relatives. Red Cross spokesman Ralph Wright reported few victims stayed at the agency's emergency shelters.

State police to begin derailed train clean-up

LIVINGSTON, La. (AP) — State police who blew up six damaged rail cars to burn toxic vinyl chloride waited for its fumes to dissipate today before starting the last phase of cleaning up a train that derailed almost two weeks ago.

About 2,700 people were evacuated after 43 cars of the 101-car Illinois Central-Gulf train jumped the tracks in this rural area before dawn Sept. 28 and have not been allowed back to their homes.

On Sunday, Lt. Billy Poe, head of the state police Hazardous Materials Section, used plastic explosives to blast six badly damaged tank cars in a spectacular controlled burn of the poisonous chemical.

As planned, the inflammable liquid drained into containment dams and ditches dug around the cars and caught fire when it touched railroad flares set in the ditches, state police spokesman Lt. Ronnie Jones said.

"We're all breathing a collective sigh of relief," Jones said from the derailment command post.

"We're hoping that we got them all (the damaged cars). It appears that we did." Trooper Mike Edmondson said.

"Once the vinyl chloride fires have gone out we can begin to make decisions about when people can return to their homes — something we haven't been able to do in 13 days," Jones said.

Firefighters contained the blaze with a curtain of water.

A state Department of Natural Resources monitoring team said the cloud of smoke was dissipating quickly and posed no danger, Jones said, and the fire was expected to keep burning for a short while.

Jones said the experts would determine today whether all the tankers ignited. If so, final cleanup of the site could begin.

Meanwhile, a federal official warned of an increased risk of lead poisoning for children and pregnant women in the area.

One tank car loaded with tetraethyl lead exploded and burned after the derailment. State health department tests showed higher than normal lead levels in the environment and officials warned residents not to eat vegetables from their gardens after they go home.

Dr. Philip Landrigan, director of field studies for the National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health, was quoted Sunday as saying lead from an anti-knock gasoline additive could threaten some residents.

Landrigan said public health teams should go door to door and check on children and pregnant women. He said children would be particularly vulnerable to any lead contamination because "they don't just breathe, they play in the dirt. If a child got into some contaminated soil, he could get poisoned rather quickly."

State Health Officer Sarah Braud challenged the statement, saying, "He's calling that without having any knowledge of what the levels were, what the sampling had showed."

However, Ms. Braud said there might be some danger if people were allowed back before contaminated soil around the site had been replaced.

House: Pollution laws not enforced

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is lax in enforcing laws against hazardous wastes, polluted drinking water, and dangerous chemicals, a new House committee study says.

The report is the latest in a series of accusations that the administration is giving tacit approval to polluters by failing to back up laws and regulations.

"This administration is short-changing the American people by failing to enforce agressively those laws which were specifically put in place to protect their interests," said Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of the House Commerce Committee, which released the report Sunday.

"The administration must recognize that the New Federalism is not an excuse for undermining the basic foundation of our nation's environmental laws," Dingell said.

The report's conclusions were attacked by EPA officials.

Sub trials complete

GROTON, Conn. (AP) — Sea trials for the newest fast-attack submarine, the City of Corpus Christi, have been completed and the vessel will be delivered to the Navy before the end of the year, according to officials at the submarine's builder, Electric Boat.

No specific date for the 688-class submarine's delivery was given by L. Emmett Holt III, public affairs spokesman for the shipyard.

The submarine was the focus of considerable controversy when it was launched in April 1981 because the Navy had named it "Corpus Christi" in honor of the port city in Texas.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Tuesday, October 12, 1982

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Celebrities sharing this birthday with you include: beautiful, tall Susan Anton, golf's Sally Little, comedian-activist Dick Gregory, comedienne Joan Rivers and Hall of Famer Joe Cronin. Also born today: brilliant operatic star Luciano Pavarotti. Changes in the economy have a direct effect on your job security. A raise or promotion could be just around the corner. Now is the time to open a business or form a partnership. You open new lines of communication within the family circle. Be careful not to become snowed under with too many outside activities. Mate, offspring deserve the lion's share of your attention on weekends.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Do not overdramatize a situation or you could lose the support you need. Creditors are eager to help if you make reasonable proposals.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A job opportunity opens up a whole new world to you. You are able to put your money where your mouth is. Assess cash reserves before committing yourself to a business relationship.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A good day for signing papers and negotiating labor contracts. You gain power by letting others make all the moves now. Your neigbors want to be friends. Accept an invitation.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Put aside petty quarrels and get on with the really important things in your life. Although you receive an offer of help, it has too many strings attached.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You could be offered a leadership position. Let mate know what is happening. Tend to outstanding obligations so that you will be able to move quickly if you get the right offer.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Mate gives in to a whim. Do not betray his/her faith in you. Creative, artistic talents catch the eye of someone with wealth and power. Great prosperity is possible.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Rely on your own efforts today and avoid becoming involved in speculative ventures. Someone who is well-intentioned may not keep his or her promises.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): New self-improvement projects are favored today. Your intuition is right on target. Trust it in both business and romance! Travel is best postponed. Take inventory of your assets.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Pay closer attention to what is happening abroad. Others will see you in a new light. Put your creative and artistic talents on display. Comparison shop when purchasing large household items.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A small windfall delights you. Bank the money instead of spending it. Do not allow pressure from an older relative to cloud your thinking. Find a relaxing pastime this evening.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A fine day for making small but important changes. Be practical. Make better use of your knack for turning something old into something new.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Postpone putting your plans into operation until more information is available. Someone may be trying to deceive you. Safeguard your resources and contacts.

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K7 ♡Q6432 ◇AQJ ♣983
You are the dealer. What action do you take?
A.—While your hand counts to 13 points, we are not sure that it is worth an opening bid. The trouble is that most of your points are in your short suits, where they are not pulling their full weight. Suppose that you open one heart and partner responds two clubs—your options are all unpleasant. This hand is going nowhere unless partner can open. Pass.

Q.2—North-South vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J65 ♡KJ1092 ◇75 ♣J94
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South
1 NT 2 ♠ ?
What action do you take?
A.—It is true that your side certainly holds the balance of power, but what can you do? Any contract above two hearts could be hazardous unless partner has a good fit. And to double purely on point count risks presenting the opponents with a game they could not make otherwise—these days opponents have learned not to overcall on a broken long suit and little else. Pass. Partner still has a chance to contest the auction.

Q.3—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KQJ9853 ♡6 ◇5 ♣J1093
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♡ Pass 1 NT ?
What action do you take?
A.—Some sort of preemptive bid is in order—it's just a question of whether you should bid three spades or four. We think that three spades is sufficient. You can't be sure that the opponents have a game, particularly since partner might have quite a good hand with hearts.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQ107 ♡AKJ984 ◇KQJ
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
2 ♡ Pass 2 ♠ Pass
What do you bid now?
A.—Getting to slam is without question—it is simply a matter of whether you have a grand slam. You must prepare for a cue-bidding sequence to find out whether partner has the ace of diamonds rather than club values. The first stage is to set the trump suit. Raise to three spades.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A982 ♡K765 ♣J10752
North East South West
1 ◇ 1 ♠ Pass 2 ♠
Dble Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—Don't convert the double to penalties by passing—you can't even be completely sure of defeating the contract. Partner has made a pretty strong bid, and you surely have game in one of the unbid suits, possibly even slam! The way to tell your partner how much your hand has improved is to start off with a cue-bid of three spades.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠1065 ♡A1098 ◇J7 ♣AQ105
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ◇ Pass 1 ♡ Pass
3 NT Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—Partner's hand should be worth about 21 points, and your 11 put you on the borderline of a slam. The fact that you have two aces and a wealth of intermediates makes your hand considerably better than an 11-pointer made up of queens and jacks. Raise to four no trump. If partner has plus values, such as a five-card suit, he should feel free to contract for slam.

NEIL SOLOMON, M.D.

Birth control pills may cause changes in mood, depression

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am 18 years old and have been on the pill since I started college a few months ago. I don't know if it's the pill or the college that has me down, but since I started taking it, I just don't feel like myself. Could it be the pill that is making me feel this way, or is college just too much for me? —Carol, Springfield, Ill.

Dear Carol: The use of oral contraceptives has been associated with changes in mood and depression, but it obviously is not possible for me to know if this is happening to you. A variety of studies have shown that anywhere from 16 percent to 56 percent of women may be affected in this fashion by oral contraceptives.

Dr. Gail B. Slap, of the Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania, has reported that some depressed women who are on oral contraceptives improve after taking vitamin B6 supplements. Why not discuss with your gynecologist how you feel? He or she may be able to alter the dosage in some fashion so that your symptoms will be relieved. If this doesn't work, vitamin supplementation may be advisable, but not on a do-it-yourself basis.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My doctor has been trying to get me to stop smoking for the past 10 years. Now he's treating me for an ulcer and he says I better stop smoking if I want it to heal. I know all about the risks of lung cancer and heart disease from smoking, but I'm willing to take my chances. My father lived until he was 90 and he smoked two packs a day. But I do want the ulcer to heal and what I'd like to know is whether there would be a better chance of this happening if I gave up cigarettes? — John, Buffalo, N.Y.

Dear John: Your doctor is giving it to you straight. Smoking can interfere with the treatment for ulcers.

In one study that has come to my attention, patients with duodenal ulcers were separated into two groups, each of which was treated with a different drug combination. After six weeks, 85 percent of the non-smoking patients had healed ulcers compared with 44 percent of the patients who smoked. If you are concerned about the ulcer as your letter suggests, get rid of the cigarettes.

I found, in the majority of my ulcer patients, the symptoms decreased after my one-day, stop-smoking treatment.

For W.C., Chicago: Yes, I was the first to use the anti-smoking injections in the United States. I no longer advocate the use of shots in the ears and nose. Over the past year, I have been injecting my new improved solution into the arm. This is more effective and less painful. The one-day treatment coupled with behavioral modification and my special nicotine cleansing diet has been successful in the majority of my patients. The program is limited to my offices in Baltimore and New York.

For Jeffrey, Bangor, Maine: The relationship between obesity and high blood pressure is the same in children as in adults. Although taller children generally have higher blood pressures, there is a positive relationship between obestity and high blood pressure at any height. Most children I sucessfully treat for obestity also have a return to normal blood pressure.

Fed focuses on interest rates

NEW YORK (AP) — Credit analysts say attention has suddenly shifted away from short-term movements of the money supply in gauging the future of interest rates.

Instead, interest rates themselves now are the focus of the Fed and the markets, analysts say, and the central bank appeared to signal its intention to get interest rates down by lowering a key lending rate itself late Friday as other rates also tumbled.

After reporting that the nation's basic money supply fell $2.7 billion in late September, the Fed cut its rate on loans to financial institutions — the discount rate — to 9.5 percent from 10 percent, effective Tuesday. It will be the rate's lowest level since Nov. 3, 1978.

"The cut in the discount rate is obviously timed to let the markets know the Fed has a strong commitment to a lower interest-rate structure," said William V. Sullivan Jr., senior vice president of the Bank of New York.

Analysts said the Fed would temporarily refrain from its usual practice of tightening credit availability further just because the money supply grows faster than it would like. That tells Wall Street that a sharp increase in the money supply does not necessarily mean higher interest rates are coming, they said.

Enterprise zones established

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Connecticut has become the first state to establish enterprise zones aimed at luring businesses into depressed urban areas, naming six cities to take part in a locally funded program.

A similar program as been proposed on the federal level.

"The creation of these six zones will help us to focus our development incentives on the creation of jobs and the revitalization of housing and hard-core areas," Gov. William O'Neill said Friday at a news conference. He said $1 million in state funds was immediately available for the program.

Fourteen cities applied to take part in the program. Accepted were Bridgeport, Hartford, New Britain, New Haven, New London and Norwalk. Only designated areas of each city are eligible for the aid.

A business locating in an enterprise zone will receive property tax abatements, grants to create jobs and train workers, and interest rate reductions so long as 30 percent of its workforce is composed needy residents.

The program was approved by the Connecticut Legislature in 1981.

Banks, S&Ls should decide

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal regulators should let banks and savings and loans decide the minimum amount of money they want depositors to place in the new savings account legislated by Congress, one regulator has proposed.

Richard Pratt, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, said Friday that the minimum deposit size should be "left to the discretion of each depository institution."

In a letter to Treasury Secretary Donald Regan, Pratt said the account could lose "substantial attractiveness and marketability" if a minimum deposit were set by regulators.

Newly passed banking legislation directs federal regulators, sitting as the Depository Institutions Deregulation Committee, to create an account that is "directly equivalent to and competitive with money market mutual funds."

The account will be free of an interest rate ceiling.

No minimum balance is set in the legislation but congressmen suggested it be no more than $5,000.

Unemployment is different

NEW YORK (AP) — While the 10.1 percent national unemployment rate in September is accepted officially as the highest since 1940, those who deal with the statistics caution against making comparisons with the Great Depression of the 1930s.

To begin with, there were no official jobless data during the 1930s. They were reconstructed during 1946 and 1947 from various sources by a Bureau of Labor Statistics worker, Stanley Lebergott, now a professor at Wesleyan University in Middletown, Conn.

The 1930s and the 1980s are "different worlds," the professor said Friday. While he read "with grief" of the September unemployment rate, he expressed the opinion that being out of work today is "not as bad as then."

To be without a job in the 1930s was very different, he said, because of the absence of unemployment insurance and Social Security, and because almost all of the jobless were heads of households.

"The bulk of the unemployed were in acute financial need," said Lebergott,"Unemployment meant something different — in significant ways."

Unemployment insurance today may permit an idle worker to wait for a job of his or her choosing. In the 1930s, he said, "you took the first job you could get."

The composition of the workforce has also changed significantly in recent years. The two-income family has become common, and women have become prominent in the work force.

Natural gas supply adequate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supplies of natural gas will be adequate this winter, even if the weather is colder than normal, the government predicts.

The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission reported Friday that the country's largest pipeline companies will have 10 percent more gas available this winter than last.

Gas is in such abundant supply, the commission said, that some pipeline companies will not take all the supplies they had originally contracted for and other companies are searching for customers off their normal distribution systems.

The commission's projections were based on reports filed by 24 pipeline companies which transport 94 percent of the nation's interstate gas supplies.

Foreign steel subsidies found

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Department of Commerce has announced mixed preliminary results of investigations of charges that carbon steel imports from four countries are being subsidized.

Imports of large-diameter welded carbon steel pipe and tube from France and West Germany were found to be unsubsidized, the Commerce Department said Friday. The final determinations of these investigations are due by December.

Imports of small-diameter carbon steel and tubing from Brazil were found to be receiving government subsidies estimated at 12.95 percent of their invoiced value while imports of small-diameter steel pipe and tube from South Korea were found to be receiving government subsidies estimated at 3.23 percent.

Subsidies on imports of hot-rolled carbon steel plate and sheet from South Korea were estimated at 1.99 percent and those on Korean galvanized carbon steel sheet were estimated to range from O.57 percent to 1.99 percent.

When the findings are published in the Federal Register during the week of October 10, U.S. importers of these products will be required to post a cash deposit or bond equal to the estimated subsidy to ensure payment of countervailing duties when final determinations are made.

Continental reports traffic up

LOS ANGELES (SWN) — Continental Airlines and Texas International Airlines reports a 1.2 percent increase in traffic in September versus a year ago and said combined traffic was up 16 percent through the first nine months, compared to the first three quarters of 1981.

The airline said revenue passenger miles (one fare-paying passenger flown one mile) increased to 822 million in September from 812 million in September 1981, while available seat miles increased 9.8 percent to 1.641 billion from 1.495 billion. For the first nine months, avail-able seat miles increased 13.8 percent to 14.4 billion.

Smith infringes Hughes patents

HOUSTON (SWN) — Hughes Tool Company announced that the United States District Court issued an order in Hughes Tool's patent infringement suit against Smith International Inc. Wednesday, ruling that Smith has infringed Hughes Tool's patents on the journal bearing bit. The United States Court of Appeals had earlier held that the Hughes Tool patents were valid. The District Court stated that during the course of the trial Smith had conceded liability on the question of infringement and had agreed that a determination of the amount of damages could be deferred to an accounting proceeding. The District Court found it appropriate to proceed to a determination of the extent of Smith's infringement before entering judgment regarding an injunction.

Money targets being revised or neglected

By DONALD C. BAUDER
Copley News Service

Remember the Federal Reserve's sacred monetary targets — those solemn pledges that M1 and M2 would not grow more than a certain prudent percent each year? The targets are undergoing a "de facto" upward revision, or benign neglect, says Maury Harris, economist for Wall Street's Paine Webber Mitchell Hutchins.

It's a result of heavy political, institutional and media pressure. And the capital market's expectation of looser money — and acquiescence — is what's pushing interest rates down, propelling bonds and stocks.

In late 1979, the Fed said it would henceforth adopt a monetarist approach by attempting to control the growth of the money supply, rather than manipulating interest rates. Since then, interest rates have been exceedingly volatile — and now pressure is building for the Fed to dump the monetarist experiment, or at least loosen up its targets.

Because the economy is so weak and manufacturing capacity is so low, the Fed doesn't fear a reigniting of inflation, said Harris in an interview. "I think they'll become more flexible monetarists," he said.

Not that the Fed is rigid now. It had earlier pledged that M1 (cash plus checking accounts) would rise at only 2.5 to 5.5 percent annual rates of growth. M2 (M1 plus savings deposits and individuals' money market funds) would rise only by 6 to 9 percent. But both M1 and M2 are well above those targets.

And with unemployment surging, the banks in trouble and the election looming, nobody seems to care. In fact, prestigious business publications are calling for easier money: "The Fed ought to move toward easing monetary policy somewhat more than it has so far," said Business Week Magazine in an Oct. 11 editorial — although the publication warned against any monetization of the huge looming deficits.

Congressmen, smelling votes, are sticking their noses into the question. Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., has a bill directing the Fed to target the real (inflation-adjusted) rate of interest. Reps. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., and Trent Lott, R-Miss., have an alternative bill that would "end the monetarist experiment that began in October of 1979" and set up a target predicated on stable prices and lower interest rates.

The Wall Street Journal editorialized Oct. 1 that the Kemp-Lott proposal "is sensible and moderate."

Added the Journal, "The principal effect of this bill would be to create a legal mandate for what Mr. Volcker (Fed Chairman Paul Volcker), in his private retreats, is doing already." This is similar to Harris' "de facto" argument: The targets are really academic now anyway.

Economists of all persuasions are pleading for looseness. Albert M. Wojnilower of First Boston argues that in this era of financial deregulation, interest rates must rise to "murderous" levels to achieve significant disinflation. That's what has happened since the Fed tightened beginning in late 1980 — and now it's time 'dto loosen before there is an "economic calamity," he says. "The Fed has little choice but to pursue a relatively expansive monetary policy," says Sam I. Nakagama of Wall Street's Kidder, Peabody.

Irwin L. Kellner of New York's Manufacturers Hanover Trust says, "Inflation may not have been wiped out, but with some 30 percent of our industrial capacity lying idle, nearly 11 million people out of work and commodities prices well below their recent peaks, inflation does not seem likely to revive quickly if the monetary authorities were to be a little more generous in providing money to the system."

Otto Eckstein of Massachusetts' Data Resources says that monetary policy is "too tough," the monetary targets are "too low," and consequently, "the risk of no recovery is too acute." Eckstein, however, would not abandon monetarism and return to the manipulation of interest rates.

That's similar to the view of A. James Meigs, monetarist economist of Los Angeles' First Interstate Bank, who was instrumental in the Fed's move to monetary targets three years ago.

"There is no alternative to maintaining monetary targets. The Fed can't manage interest rates — we've found that out (in the wildfire inflationary years preceding 1979). The market is so sensitive today that when the Fed speeds up money growth, interest rates go up," he said in an interview. (In the last few days, however, the market has responded positively to easier money.)

Even Meigs conceded, however, that the earlier targets were probably too severe. But now that money has been relatively easy for a couple of months, "I would say that we would have to be very careful about changing these targets now," he said.

It would be a pity if this debate put the spotlight completely on the Fed, for the big problem lies with Congress: The monstrous, irresponsible deficits are the root cause of the problem, as Volcker frequently points out.

With deficits as high as they have been running over the last decade — and with these deficits escalating frighteningly — even Kemp and Lott know there is no way in the world we can have low interest rates and stable prices at the same time.

Until Congress gets its House (and Senate) in order, we will either have high interest rates and stable prices, or low interest rates and wildfire inflation. As long as federal borrowing is 60 percent or more of the capital pool, the Fed can either inflate — or tighten money and plunge the nation into a recession.

It has no other options over the long pull.

Flow of merchandise across border comes to halt

EL PASO (AP) — Goods ranging from machinery to clothing are piling up in El Paso warehouses because of Mexico's economic crisis, which has brought the flow of merchandise across the border to a halt.

"We're sitting on a powder keg," said Pete Araujo of ABACO Customhouse Brokers which deals in such diverse items as stereos and automobiles. "I'm sure every broker in town has some sort of receivables we're going to have trouble collecting. They just can't raise the dollars."

The brokers handle imports and exports for commerical and industrial customers who find it easier to pay a brokerage fee than do the complex paperwork and warehousing themselves.

Since the Aug. 5 devaluation of the battered peso, the Mexican government has issued a variety of regulations aimed at keeping American dollars in the country. Mexico needs the currency to pay interest on its $80 billion foreign debt — the largest among developing countries.

But the freeze on dollars has disrupted business along the border and has left Mexican merchants searching for a way to pay their bills in the United States.

"I can't accept Mexican currency," said Rudy Miles Jr.. head of an El Paso brokerage firm. "Before, if I had a shipment coming in for a Mexican buyer, I used to give them credit. Now, I say bring me cash or a check in dollars."

After the Mexican government allowed the peso to float on international money markets, the currency plummeted from about 49 to the dollar to as low as 150 to the dollar along the border. Last month the government set an artificial rate of 70 to the dollar for most exchanges.

The problem is that the newly nationalized banks won't distribute dollars to the businessmen at that rate or any other rate.

Meanwhile, the exchange rate for the peso continues to fluctuate north of the border. El Paso banks have been exchanging pesos at an average of 90 to the dollar.

"The Mexicans either can't get the dollars to pay their storage over here and get their goods released or they don't have enough pesos to make up the difference in exchange," Araujo said.

Most of the waiting goods were ordered before the devaluation with the stipulation that the buyers would pay within 30 to 60 days. But those deadlines are rapidly approaching and many buyers are having the warehouses return the goods because they don't have the dollars to pay for them.

"A lot of merchandise in El Paso already has been returned because they (the buyers) were afraid they couldn't get the dollars to pay for them," said Joe Quezada, manager of Martin Brokerage. "The suppliers are glad to take their merchandise back rather than taking a chance on not getting paid."

Marie Tarvin-Garland, owner of Sun City Warehouses Inc., said the backup at her warehouse won't last much longer. She said businesses that placed orders before the devaluation have claimed them and "they've stopped ordering."

The distribution division of her business has been hurt the worst. Usually, businesses can consolidate loads of goods and cut shipping costs, with the warehouse distributing goods on arrival.

"Now, rather than consolidate their loads, they're having to buy and ship immediately, which has really cut down on distribution," said Wayne Porter, Ms. Tarvin-Garland's warehouse manager. "We usually average about 65 to 70 trailers a month. Now, it's dropped to about five a week."

For other brokers, the problem is how long to hold goods when the buyers cannot pay.

"We'll probably hold onto it for four to six weeks and then we'll tell them (the suppliers) if they don't want it back, I'll have to auction it off or sell it," Miles said. "It's not the fault of the Mexican businessmen that they can't pay, but we have no choice."

Araujo said the dilemma could strain relations between the brokers and the border businessmen, who have been operating on a handshake for years.

"One guy owes us $12,000 and he can't get dollars right now," he said. "So we're left with what to do — release it to him as a friend or hold on to it until he gets the dollars. It's hard to tell the guy that he can't take his machinery out of here without those extra pesos."

All of the brokers say a solution must come soon from the Mexican government.

"Every time there's been a devaluation before, everything came to a complete halt for six to eight weeks and then it would get back to normal," Miles said. "When there's no exchange rate, things can't get back to normal."

Quezada, who said his business has dropped as much as 60 percent, is hoping the new Mexican policies will change when Miguel de la Madrid Hurtado takes over as president Dec. 1.

"In the meantime, there's no cash flow," he said. "It's scary, to say the least."

Labor, liberals want Reagan to cure sick economy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Vice President Walter Mondale and AFL-CIO chief Lane Kirkland are demanding that the Reagan administration find a way to cure the nation's economic woes without high unemployment.

But White House Chief of Staff James A. Baker III says the administration has no plans to alter its policies, which emphasize cuts in the federal budget and in individual and business tax rates to get the economy going again.

"The unemployment situation is tragic and the president deplores the fact that so many people are out of work," Baker said Sunday on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley."

However, Baker maintained that "the 90 percent (of the American people) that are working are considerably better off than they were two years ago. They've got more purchasing power..." because of reduced inflation and the tax cuts.

Kirkland, decrying double-digit unemployment that left some 11.3 million people jobless in September, said time has run out on President Reagan's pursuit of supply-side economics.

"This administration has tested and tried and had its way in trying out two erratic cultist theories," the AFL-CIO president said on the CBS program "Face the Nation."

"Never before in history have two crack-brain theories like supply-side economics and cultist monetarism had a more extensive trial and been proved so wrong to the great harm of so many people so quickly," he said.

Mondale, who was also interviewed on the ABC broadcast, said Reagan was misleading the public with rhetoric with his assertions that the president inherited an unemployment rate that had already reached 7.4 percent when he succeeded President Jimmy Carter.

"What I think is troubling Americans is that we have politicians dealing with the politics of the problem, not the problem," said Mondale, considered a candidate for the Democratic party nomination for president in 1984.

"The present course is not working.... I think in all respects, he's (Reagan) wrong. But what really counts is that we get on and do something now to help these people that are suffering so dreadfully right now."

Mondale accused Reagan of "blaming others, trying to find a political position that solves his political problem. I think what Americans want now is a lot less blaming and a little action now to put people back to work."

Baker disagreed with assertions that the double-digit unemployment rate in September, the last such figures to be reported before the fall congressional elections, will erode Republican party chances at the polls.

"I do not think that the 10.1 percent unemployment figure will be a dramatic event so far as the election is concerned," he said. "I don't think it will be a watershed event."

Market rally is not unique

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market's rally of the past two months has been widely heralded as something unique.

Before mid-August, the idea of a 100 million-share day on the New York Stock Exchange was no more than a gleam in a stockbroker's eye. Now, it is almost commonplace.

The journey of the Dow Jones industrial average from a 25-month low of 777 to a 15-month peak in the high 900s was accomplished with lightning speed.

But if the rally indeed marked the start of a new bull market for stocks, points out Anthony W. Tabell, an analyst at the firm of Delafield, Harvey, Tabell in Princeton, N.J., it has many past precedents.

In a study of eight bull markets since World War II, Tabell reported, "One of the almost universal characteristics that we can attach to bull markets is the presence of a lengthy and extensive take-off rally."

By Tabell's reckoning, the percentage gains in those "take-off" periods ranged from 16.8 percent to 60 percent, and their duration from 14 weeks to 83 weeks.

In late 1974, for example, the Dow Jones industrial average got as low as 577. Less than three months later, it had reached 750. Volume records were broken then, too, although it took only 30 million shares changing hands in a day to do it.

As it turned out, that rally presaged the end of the 1973-75 recession, which at the time was labeled the worst of the post-war period.

The current recession, some 15 months old, has brought interest rates and unemployment totals that far surpassed the worst of '73-'75. On Friday the Labor Department put the jobless rate at 10.1 percent, its highest level in more than 40 years.

Provided that past patterns hold, however, the recent rally in the markets suggests that a recovery may be approaching.

As many economists point out, there is very little evidence in government measures of economic activity just now to support that view. But if the market's message is taken on faith, it hints at some striking possibilities about what the recovery might be like.

For one thing, it holds out the promise that housing — almost given up for dead by many observers — could surprise many of the experts by fulfilling its usual role of leading the economy out of recession. A tabulation by Standard & Poor's Corp. of the best performing stock groups in the July-September quarter includes both homebuilding stocks, up 30.1 percent, and savings and loans, up 47.2 percent.

Dollar slides in early trading

LONDON (AP) — The dollar slid in early European trading today amid predictions of a continued decline in U.S. interest rates. Gold moved higher in light trading.

Dealers speculated the dollar's drop was an aftershock from Friday's announcement that joblessness in the United States had topped 10 percent. The figure was seen as foreshadowing a loosening of credit by the U.S. Federal Reserve Board. Lower interest rates would make the dollar less attractive to investors.

At mid-morning Monday, the dollar was trading in Europe at:

— 2.4997 West German marks, down from 2.5070 late Friday

— 2.1318 Swiss francs, down from 2.1525

— 7.0713 French francs, down from 7.1025

— 2.7255 Dutch guilders, down from 2.74275

— 1,422 Italian lire, down from 1,427.75

— 1.22815 Canadian dollars, down from 1.23025

In London, the British pound rose to $1.7204, compared with $1.71125 late Friday.

Tokyo markets were closed for a holiday. But in London, the dollar was quoted at 263.78 Japanese yen, down from Friday's late rate in Tokyo of 269.10.

London's five bullion dealers fixed an indicative price of $432.75 a Troy ounce, compared with $432.50 late Friday.

In Zurich, the precious metal was quoted at $434.25 an ounce, compared with $429.75.

Earlier in Hong Kong, gold rose $4.39 to close at $433.42.

Carter says he's still 'haunted' by aborted hostage rescue mission

NEW YORK (AP) — Former President Jimmy Carter is still "haunted" by the aborted Iranian hostage rescue mission, an attempt he tried to avoid by listening to plans that ranged from "delivering the Shah for trial to dropping an atomic bomb on Tehran."

And comments made by former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger while 52 Americans were held in Iran for 444 days angered Carter, the former president reveals in his memoirs, "Keeping Faith."

In an excerpt from the book appearing in the current issue of Time magazine, Carter relates his feelings about the rescue bid which ended with the deaths of eight Americans in an Iranian desert.

"I am still haunted by the memories of that day — our high hopes for success, the incredible mishaps, the bravery of our rescue team, the embarrassment of failure, and, above all, the tragic deaths in the lonely desert," Carter writes.

He also tells the "cloak-and-dagger story" of American agents who were slipped into Iran and found refuge in the Canadian embassy.

King Olav V

NORSE, Texas (AP) — Norway's King Olav V visited this small town to lay a wreath at the grave of the father of Norwegian migration to the United States, and gave a local pastor a preview of heaven.

About 1,500 farmers flocked to this town — population 110 — for Sunday's ceremonies at Our Savior's Lutheran Church marking the 200th anniversary of the birth of Cleng Peerson, who fled religious persecution in his homeland.

The 79-year-old king proclaimed during a short service at the church, "Here Cleng Peerson found his grave, found his last resting place. He is no longer a rolling stone."

From the pulpit, the Rev. John A. Homerstad said, "I never dreamed that I would be called to preach to a king until I got to heaven ... I've come to the conclusion that this spot in Norse is about as close to heaven as I'm going to get while I'm walking on Earth."

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — When TV Guide magazine asked some top television journalists what they'd like to report on Jan. 1, 2000, many hoped to announce world peace and cures for cancer.

But John Chancellor of NBC Nightly News said he'd like to lead off his first newscast of the 21st century with this whimsical announcement:

"The Food and Drug Administration today gave its approval to the drug NO-FIB, as many members of Congress introduced legislation to ban the controversial drug.

"A single dose of NO-FIB creates a prominent metabolic change that results in the nose turning red when an untruth is uttered."

Marlene Sanders of CBS News wanted to make this pronouncement, according to TV Guide's Oct. 16 issue: "The president of the United States has recommended the abolition of all rules and laws governing affirmative action, saying they were now obsolete. 'Sexual discrimination, overt and subtle, is now a thing of the past,' she asserted."

The hopes of NBC news reporter Chris Wallace focused on diseases and diet:

"Scientists at Harvard University have found a cure for the common cold. This medical breakthrough came 16 years after the discovery of a cure for cancer and nine years after the last serious childhood disease was eradicated.

"The scientists who discovered the cold cure were the same ones who found, two years ago, that milkshakes and steaks smothered in onions are good for you."

Cynthia Lang

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Cynthia Lang, who settled a 'palimony" lawsuit earlier this year with rock star Alice Cooper, has married a lawyer from the firm that represented her.

The 30-year-old actress-model married Mark Kaplan, 35, in a private ceremony at a home in Calabasas on Oct. 3, Marvin Mitchelson, whose firm represented her, said Sunday.

Mitchelson said he represented Miss Lang but she met Kaplan in his office.

"I attended the wedding and was kind of like the best man," said Mitchelson, who also represented Michelle Triola Marvin in her landmark "palimony" suit against actor Lee Marvin.

He said he filed Miss Lang's suit "even before the Marvin case," calling it "the first palimony case." It was settled out of court for an undisclosed sum, he said.

HOUSTON (AP) — Indian President Zail Singh will probably be released within a week from the Houston hospital where he is recuperating from triple coronary bypass surgery, his doctor says.

Dr. Virendra Mathur, Singh's attending cardiologist, said in a hospital statement Sunday that the Indian president is recovering satisfactorily and is able to walk about his private hospital suite at the Texas Heart Institute.

The statement also said Singh is beginning to enjoy regular meals at the institute, part of St. Luke's Episcopal Hospital.

Singh, 66, was admitted to the hospital Oct. 1 for heart tests. Noted surgeon Denton Cooley supervised his care, hospital spokeswoman Cindy Katz said.

Singh was elected and installed as India's president in July after serving as minister of home affairs in Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's Cabinet.

Sam Robards

NEW YORK (AP) — Sam Robards, son of actors Jason Robards and Lauren Bacall and now an actor in his own right, says his parents' divorce devastated him.

The younger Robards, 20, said in an interview in the Oct. 18 issue of People magazine that when his parents broke up in 1979, "I blubbered, 'But why... why can't you just get back together and live in the same house? I mean, it's so easy.' "

His father moved to Los Angeles and Robards stayed with his mother in New York, but the young actor, who appears in Paul Mazursky's new movie "Tempest," said he still feels his father's influence when he's acting.

"I've often found myself doing a scene and then realizing, 'Gee, I'm playing my father playing this scene,'" Robards said.

Illustrator's 'combined talents' on display at Theatre Midland

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

It was her senior year of college and as an illustration major, she had to take photography. She had been sewing for some time by then and decided to combine the two talents for her semester project.

Although her teacher hated the piece, she entered it in a national contest. The contest is one which is held annually in New York City by the Society of Illustrators.

And Mejo Okon of Indianapolis, Ind., was on her way.

"I entered the contest and was accepted in their book which is published annually," Miss Okon said in a recent interview held in conjunction with her art showing at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

Miss Okon's "soft photography" will be on display through Oct. 16. Her show may be viewed from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday as well as during Midland Community Theatre play productions. This weekend both theaters will be active, with "Deathtrap" opening in Theatre I and "Tintypes" closing in Theatre II.

"After my work was accepted into the Society of Illustrators' 18th annual book, unknown to me they (SOI) had entered it in another competition and it was accepted for publication in the book 'Two Hundred Years of American Illustration.'"

From 1971 to 1972, Miss Okon was an illustration major at Syracuse University. She received her bachelor of fine arts degree in visual communications from John Herron School of Art, Indiana University-Purdue University at Indianapolis, Ind., in 1975.

Miss Okon describes her work as "soft photography." Of the process she said, "The basic image for a soft photograph comes from a photo. The photo shapes are simplified, then fabric is used to form the new image. The end result is an attractive wall hanging that's similiar to tapestry but has dimension. The hanging can be of people, scenes or even a progression of events."

Miss Okon's professional background is in advertising. She worked as an art director for seven years at some of the top agencies in Indiana, including Caldwell Van Riper, Carlson & Company and Ruben, Montgomery & Associates. The work she does she hopes will receive attention in the world of advertising.

"I started my own business (The Okon Studio) a year ago which freed me to spend more time doing this. And I am introducing these into the commercial advertising market."

She refers to herself as "an illustrator, who works in fabric."

To further these goals, Miss Mejo entered a talent search being conducted by New Artists Presentations. Her work was accepted.

"They were looking specifically for unknown talent to introduce to the New York market," Miss Mejo said.

"It is being held in Madison Square Garden from Oct. 8-12. There will be a total of 175 different artists from across the country in the show. I'm taking one piece as representative of my work and everything else will be shown by 4-by-5 color transparencies. The originals are hanging at Theatre Midland."

"The spinoffs (from this show) can be anything from gallery exhibitions in New York to commissioned work and possibly finding a representative, a person who takes your material and represents you to advertising agencies and possible buyers throughout the country."

Fiber Guild, MC set felting workshop

The Midland Fiber Guild and Midland College are co-sponsoring a two day felting workshop Oct. 23-24 with Marleah Drexler MacDougal at the Allison Fine Arts Building at MC. The workshop will be held in the Weaving Room.

Ms. MacDougal is a fiber artist in Houston, where she is represented at the Archway Gallery. She received a bachelor of science in textiles from Cornell University in New York, and a master of science in textiles from California State University.

She has exhibited and received awards for her fiber works and has given workshops at the Textile Department at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C. Ms. MacDougal was in Midland last year for a workshop on wool dying.

This year's workshop will introduce students to traditional and contemporary felting and the formation of three-dimensional objects. The workshop will cost $30 and is open to both beginning and advanced students. For more information call Julie Rogers at 683-8814.

Country Music Association to give awards

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The progressive group Alabama could break Barbara Mandrell's two-year hold on the Country Music Association's prestigious entertainer of the year award tonight, country music watchers say.

Alabama, a four-piece band, already has won a similar award this year from the Academy of Country Music in Los Angeles. The group was given a strong chance to win the CMA's top accolade tonight when the Nashville-based association announces its annual award winners on CBS television, to be broadcast starting at 9:30 p.m. EDT.

The ceremonies will be held at the Grand Ole Opry House with Miss Mandrell and Mac Davis as co-hosts.

The versatile Miss Mandrell was chosen entertainer of the year in 1980 and 1981, becoming the first two-time winner. Besides Alabama, this year's finalists are veteran singer Willie Nelson, the Oak Ridge Boys and newcomer Ricky Skaggs.

Alabama, of Fort Payne, Ala., also is a finalist for album of the year for "Mountain Music," single of the year for "Love in the First Degree," vocal group of the year and instrumental group of the year.

Like Alabama, Nelson is a finalist in five categories — entertainer of the year, single of the year for "Always on My Mind," the album of the year by the same name, male vocalist of the year and vocal duo of the year with Waylon Jennings.

The 16th annual awards show also will be broadcast on more than 100 radio stations across the country.

Finalists in each of the categories were:

Entertainer of the year: Alabama, Miss Mandrell, Nelson, the Oak Ridge Boys, Skaggs.

Single of the year: "Always on My Mind," Nelson; "Crying My Heart Out Over You," Skaggs; "I'm Gonna Hire a Wino to Decorate Our Home," David Frizzell; "It Turns Me Inside Out," Lee Greenwood, and "Love in the First Degree," Alabama.

Album of the year: "Always on My Mind," Nelson; "Big City," Merle Haggard; "Bobbie Sue," the Oak Ridge Boys; "Mountain Music," Alabama; "Still the Same Ole Me," George Jones.

Song of the year (songwriter's award): "Always on My Mind," Johnny Christopher, Wayne Thompson and Mark James; "Elvira," Dallas Frazier; "I'm Gonna Hire a Wino to Decorate Our Home," Dewayne Blackwell; "It Turns Me Inside Out," Jan Crutchfield; "You're the Reason God Made Oklahoma," Larry Collins and Sandy Pinkard.

Female vocalist of the year: Rosanne Cash, Janie Fricke, Emmylou Harris; Miss Mandrell, Juice Newton.

Ignored Levi claims attention with LaJet win

ABILENE (AP) — Four players achieved a goal, three others all but wrapped up seasonal honors and winner Wayne Levi made a big move toward resolving a little problem — lack of recognition.

"No," Levi responded to a question, "I don't think I have gotten the credit I deserve.

"Sometimes it bothers me, sometimes it doesn't.

"I play the orange ball. I was the first man to win a tournament playing the orange ball. And somebody else does the commercials. In the papers, before a tournament, when they list the prominent players, I'm never mentioned.

"It's not a big deal. I'm not gonna make waves. Credit comes if you win more tournaments."

And Levi, quietly and without fanfare rapidly establishing himself as one of golf's finest young players, won his second tournament of the season Sunday with a never-headed, six-shot victory in the LaJet Classic.

"I told myself, 'Wayne, just go out there and win this thing'," he said after his 4-under-par final round had produced a 271 total, 17 shots under par on the 7,077-yard Fairway Oaks Golf and Racquet Club course.

And he did just that. He started in front, stayed in front, finished in front. No one ever got closer than four shots.

The victory, the fifth of his six-year career, was his second of the season and boosted his earnings for the year to $268,631 and a place among the game's top 10.

Smaller checks, however, probably were more important to rookie Thomas Gray, South African Bobby Cole, Gary Koch and Australian veteran Bruce Devlin. Their high finishes assured them of places among the top 125 money-winners this season, the criterion for a place on next year's all-exempt tour.

Gray came on with a 67, finished off with an 18th-hole birdie, that put him second alone at 277. The check of $37,800 more than doubled his previous career earnings.

Cole and Johnny Miller tied for third at 278. Miller moved up with a closing 67 and Cole shot 71. They were followed by Koch at 71-279 and Devlin 71-280.

The men leading the major seasonal races — Tom Watson, Craig Stadler and Tom Kite — virtually clinched Player of the Year, leading money-winner and the Vardon Trophy, respectively, despite some lack-lustre performances.

Watson required 14 strokes to play his last two holes, completing a 76 and a 295. But he receives bonus points for winning the U.S. and British opens, and has an unbeatable lead in the standings that determine the PGA Player of the Year.

Stadler, the Masters champion, shot a 77-288, and won only $2,642. But it boosted his season's earnings to a leading $446,462. That puts him $59,553 ahead of second-place Ray Floyd, who withdrew after two rounds and said he does not plan to play either of the two remaining tournaments.

Kite had a closing 77 and a 293 total, boosting his Vardon Trophy stroke average from 70.08 to 70.21. But he still leads. Watson, his closest challeger, suffered even more, going from 70.34 to 70.52.

Wayne Levi...displays championship boot.

Cooper's two-run single foils Angels in decider

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The Gashouse Gang. The Amazing Mets. And now, add to the list the Comeback Kids from Milwaukee.

The Brewers culminated the greatest comeback in championship series history Sunday by rallying to edge the California Angels 4-3 to win the American League pennant. Cecil Cooper, a .313 hitter during the regular season but previously 2-for-19 in the five-game showdown, lined an opposite-field single with the bases loaded in the seventh inning to knock in the tying and winning runs, bringing the Brewers back from the edge of playoff extinction and into their first World Series.

The Brewers travel to St. Louis to open the Series against the Cardinals on Tuesday night.

"I could have been the goat of the series," Cooper said. "I made a bonehead play (in the field). I'm just thankful I had a chance to redeem myself."

COOPER'S personal redemption came after Charlie Moore reached first when his soft popup fell out of reach of a diving Bobby Grich behind the mound with one out in the seventh. Jim Gantner singled and Robin Yount walked on a 3-2 pitch from loser Luis Sanchez with two out.

Cooper then singled to score the runners.

"It was a fastball up in the strike zone," Cooper said. "The entire time I was at bat I kept thinking to go to left field. When I hit it, I thought the ball might hang for a minute. I was running to first base and kept pointing for it to get down. It did."

The Brewers, who moved here from Seattle as a bankrupt, year-old expansion team in 1970, also got some superb relief from Bob McClure and Peter Ladd. Ladd, who has replaced injured Rollie Fingers as the Brewers' bullpen stopper, preserved the victory by retiring all three batters he faced in the ninth.

"Rollie could have pitched to two or three batters, but Peter Ladd has been doing such a great job that I could save Rollie for a couple of days," said Brewer Manager Harvey Kuenn.

"This is the greatest thrill of my life," he said. "The guys couldn't have played any better. They came back all year and they did it again today."

BUT NOT before the Angels grabbed a 3-1 lead, with runs in the first and third on ALCS Most Valuable Player Fred Lynn's RBI singles and one in the fourth, greatly aided by Cooper's miscue.

Doug DeCinces led off the fourth with a double and Grich bunted toward first baseman Cooper. He picked up the ball and tagged Grich with his glove while he held the ball in his other hand.

First base umpire Al Clark called Grich out, but was overruled by plate umpire Don Denkinger. Cooper was charged with the Brewers' fourth error of the game.

DeCinces took third on the play and scored on Bob Boone's squeeze-bunt single.

"That play on Grich was a bonehead play," Cooper said. "I simply, I guess, panicked and proved we're all human beings and make mistakes. Unfortunately, I made it with everybody watching."

Winning One for the Gipper

When that "Win One for the Gipper" banner went on the Oklahoma side of the field before the game, one began to get the feeling that Texas had more Sooner than it was ready to handle. This sign actually implored, "Win for Gaylord", maybe that'll shut him up.

At any rate the editorial in the Oklahoma City paper, suggesting it was time for Coach Barry Switzer to depart after two losses, had stirred up a hornet's nest in the state. It could have splintered rival factions even more. Instead, it amalgamated support behind Barry and the Sooners, who felt the heat of the criticism..."Kelly Phelps is no quarterback; the offensive line can't get the job done..."

OKLAHOMA was a raging storm of controversy looking for a place to happen, and unfortunately for the Longhorns, the place turned out to be the Cotton Bowl.

The Sooners loved every minute of it. Whenever the Big Red got something going, the players on the field, from the huddle, circled their arms, signaling the fans in the stands to keep up the noise whenever it began to abate.

Who would have believed that Texas would complete 18 passes or throw 34 and come away a 28-22 loser? And who would have believed that anybody could roll up 384 rushing against the Longhorns? Or that most of it would come by running a fullback up the middle?

The Sooners threw only two passes, both complete, one to Texas and one to Oklahoma.

STEVE WILLIAMS, 280-pounds of that maligned offensive line, said Texas' defense just wasn't as mean or tough as it had been a year ago. One reason was evident on the sidelines where Kenneth Sims, the No. 1 NFL draft pick and the guy who could have made the difference, was pacing impatiently while watching a quarter of his earnings as a pro athlete go up in the NFLPA strike.

After Marcus Dupree erupted on that long TD run, Sims was seen stomping off toward the end zone, the one where the dressing rooms are located. One half expected him to show up later in uniform. Texas could have used him.

It was an exhilirating victory. Coming up the ramp after the game, Sooners were chiding, "Change that Orange and White for Red and White...Hey, Orange Bowl, here we come." If you win, revel in it. OU hasn't had many opportunities to Brag for the Year lately, and who can blame them for jumping on the opportunity.

THERE'S NO discounting the psychological edge the controversy gave Oklahoma and it's not something that developed over a couple of losses.

In the summer of 1981, a reporter snooping over state records discovered that contributions had been made to the OU athletic department, a substantial amount from Texans.

It made front page and a reader, noting Midland names, not connected with OU, forwarded it to the R-T sports department.

The investigative reporter, on the verge of Soonergate, the best-selling novel, movie and tv rights that accompany such things, saw his dreams go up in smoke when the OU athletic department said, "Yes, it's all true. We even list the names of the contributors in our football program during the season."

What interested us, however, was that some of the people supporting the Sooners actually owed their allegiance to Texas colleges. When contacted, one readily admitted, "Sure, we give to Oklahoma, and they have people who contribute to our program. There's plenty to go around and it's good for business."

SO, COACH Barry Switzer is safe from the "New Jersey Alumni", as Rockne, when he needed a win, used to refer to the subversive group that was out to get his job. He just better not lose to Kansas.

Strike Update...

Day: 21
Games called off: 42
Games Cancelled: 14

PROGRESS OF THE NEGOTIATIONS: Jack Donlan, executive director of the NFL Management Council, and NFLPA union chief Ed Garvey met Sunday and agreed to seek a mediator who would be acceptable to both sides and try to resume formal bargaining as soon as possible. The two sides had agreed to consult Kay McMurray, head of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, about finding a mediator. Both sides stressed, however, that McMurray would not mediate himself. The owners are not scheduled to meet until Oct.19.

CHANCES FOR SETTLEMENT: The owners were considering inviting players to return to camp then calling off the season if not enough show up, according to management sources. The season already has been shortened by at least one week. One of the three weekends lost to the strike will not be made up. NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle has said that many owners believe a season of less than 13 games would be impractical.

DIFFERENCES: The Management Council has stuck to the position that no further talks would be held until the union dropped its demand for a minimum wage scale.

McGee delivers kayo blows in 6-2 Cardinal win

ATLANTA (AP) — It's a season Willie McGee will never forget — one that started in the minor leagues and ends in the World Series.

McGee, a rookie center fielder, made the major offensive contribution Sunday night, belting a two-run triple and a solo home run as the St. Louis Cardinals nailed down their 13th National League pennant with a 6-2 victory that completed a three-game sweep of the Atlanta Braves in the NL Championship Series.

"I thought I would be in Triple-A, and I was there a few weeks when, boom, I got a call," McGee said. "It blew my mind, and now I wind up in the World Series to top it off."

MCGEE'S triple came during a four-run outburst in the second inning that gave Joaquin Andujar and reliever Bruce Sutter all they needed to send the Redbirds into the World Series opener at home on Tuesday night against American League champion Milwaukee.

It was a pleasing comeback for McGee, who had fanned three times against veteran knuckleballer Phil Niekro in the Cards' 4-3 victory in St. Louis Saturday night.

"Ozzie Smith told me to keep my head up and in the game today I'd probably come up with a chance to win the game," McGee said.

"I'm still in a learning process. The pressure is tremendous with the stands packed and so many people watching on TV, but I don't worry about it. I'm young and I'm going to make mistakes. I just feel tremendous being here. I'm just thankful I got an opportunity to play."

ANDUJAR, who remained in the game after taking a liner off his left shin in the second inning, allowed the two runs and six Atlanta hits before leaving with two down in the seventh. Sutter, who had 36 regular-season saves, then retired the last seven Braves in order.

Catcher Darrell Porter, who hit only .231 in the regular season, captured the Most Valuable Player award in the series after getting two singles and three doubles in nine trips and also drawing five walks.

"It's one of the greatest things that ever happened to me," said Porter. "But I've seen so many other guys out there who could have won it, like McGee and the entire pitching staff.

"We experienced what it was like being in the race last year," said Porter of the team that had the second-best record during last season's strike-interrupted season. "We didn't handle it very well then. But it helped us this year and we played well down the stretch. There was not one moment when we didn't feel we'd win."

Lee Boosters meet at 8 p.m., Tuesday

The Midland Lee Booster Club has announced a change for its Tuesday meeting at the Lee High Youth Center. Instead of the usual 7:30 p.m. get together, boosters will meet at 8 p.m.

The reason for the change is a PTA Open House scheduled for 7-8 p.m. All boosters are encouraged to attend the open house before coming to the booster club meeting.

Mustangs eke out second three-point SWC victory

By Associated Press

Sixth-ranked Southern Methodist, which has managed only three point victories over both Texas Christian and Baylor, puts its undefeated record on the line in the Southwest Conference spotlight game of the week Saturday in Texas Stadium against the Houston Cougars.

Houston came-from-behind to nip Texas A&M 24-20 Saturday after SMU had to rally for a 22-19 victory over the Baylor Bears.

In SMU's other league game, the Mustangs barely survived TCU 16-13.

The SWC is 14-10 against outside competition.

Here's a look at the SWC game-by-game:

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Darrell Waltrip charged to an easy victory in the Miller High Life 300 late model sportsman auto race at Charlotte Motor Speedway. Sam Ard finished second and Bobby Allison third.

Porter disagrees with MVP choice

ATLANTA (AP) — Darrell Porter, who managed to hit only .231 during the regular season, went on a tear in the National League playoffs and won the Most Valuable Player award for the championship series.

But the bespectacled St. Louis catcher said his choice would have been rookie Willie McGee and the entire Cardinals pitching staff.

"It's (the award) really great, really wonderful," said Porter softly as teammates squirted champagne at each other in a relatively mild celebration in the packed clubhouse. "I think a lot of guys did a wonderful job. Willie McGee was fabulous but it was a total team effort."

McGee supplied the knockout punch Sunday night to send the Cardinals into their first World Series since 1968. He keyed a four-run second inning off Braves' starter Rick Camp with a two-run triple, then added a solo homer in the ninth as Joaquin Andujar and Bruce Sutter combined on a six-hitter.

Porter, however, led both teams in hitting with a .556 average on five hits in nine at bats, including three doubles, and drew five walks.

"I quit thinking about my bad year about two months ago," said Porter, "and I began to relax more in September. I just said to myself go up there and get a good pitch. If you notice when I am hitting well, I'll also get a lot of walks and that's what happened in the playoffs."

McGee, who started the season in the minor leagues, was called up to the Cardinals in the spring after expecting to play the entire season on the farm. "Playing in the World Series just tops it off," he said. "It's still a learning process and the pressure is tremendous. I feel tremendous just being here and I'm thankful I got the opportunity to play."

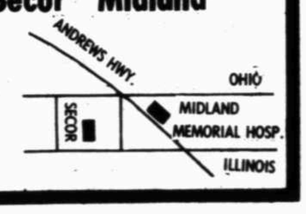

For ace reliever Bruce Sutter, who mowed down all seven Braves he faced in the clincher after picking up a victory in the Cards' 4-3 victory Saturday night, it also was a new feeling.

"This is just a new experience for me," said the bearded right-hander after hugging Andujar in the dressing room. "In the past my big games have been All-Star games.

"After spending most of my time in the cellar, I great feeling of elation tonight is," said Sutter, who pitched most of his career with the lowly Chicago Cubs.

"He showed a lot of courage," said St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog. "He pitched in pain after he got hit but did his usual credible job."

Bolivia inaugurates new president

The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

LA PAZ, Bolivia — Bolivia launched a new effort at democratic government Sunday as veteran populist leader Hernan Siles Zuazo was inaugurated president, marking the beginning of the first popularly elected government here in 18 years.

In a three-hour ceremony at the National Congress Sunday afternoon, Siles accepted the presidency he had almost won in a 1980 election and vowed to build a "broad-based and fertile" democracy that would end the cycle of coups that have repeatedly prevented democratic government in this poor, land-locked Andean nation.

The presidents of Peru, Ecuador and Columbia and a host of foreign delegations attended the inauguration, which made Bolivia the third South American country to return to democratic government in the last three years after a period of military domination in the 1970s.

In his inauguration speech, Siles declared that "we have much to detain us in the analysis of past pains and guilt. What is important is that we defeated the dictatorship."

He added, "We are extending the frontiers of democracy toward the south in an uncontainable advance."

THE NEW PRESIDENT was greeted with cheers in the cramped, marble Congress chambers and in the plaza outside, where many supporters waited through a rainstorm holding banners or wrapped in traditional rainbow-striped alpaca ponchos.

As the country approached democracy, tens of thousands of students, miners and party militants spent the past week happily parading through the mountain-encircled capital and unfurling flags and banners from its small cluster of skyscrapers.

This widespread political euphoria has been matched, however, by a series of crises awaiting the new government. Siles and his coalition of mostly moderate reformist leadership stands to inherit a national government bankrupted by mismanagement and corruption since the military coup that prevented Siles from taking office after winning a plurality in the 1980 election. The country is now beset by creditors and narcotics traffickers.

The depth of the country's crisis made Siles reluctant to accept the military's hasty three-week transition to civilian government, launched after a series of strikes paralyzed the country in mid-September. Bolivia's democratic leadership, raggedly resurfacing after two years of military rule, has had little time to prepare for government, and Siles' alliance remains deeply divided.

Even as Siles took office Sunday, 10 days after the Congress elected in 1980 was called into session, the new democracy was being viewed with some skepticism by the country's military and the foreign bankers and governments whose support is critical to Bolivia's economic survival.

AFTER DECADES of coups and failed elections, many here appear unwilling to bet on the success of Bolivia's latest democratic revival.

"Siles faces an undamaged military establishment, an undamaged paramilitary establishment, an undamaged narcotics network, and hungry and angry peasants who aren't necessarily averse to the military," said one pessimistic diplomat here. "If he lasts, it will be a minor miracle."

Most diplomats and politicians here agree that the minor miracle has to occur if Bolivia's 5.5 million people are to avoid political and economic chaos. Dependent on mining and agriculture and marked by a disenfranchised majority of rural peasants and native Indians with the lowest levels of income and literacy in South America, Bolivia was chosen by guerrilla leader Ernesto "Che" Guervara 15 years ago as the most likely place for a Cuban-style revolution.

Since then, the country has grown poorer and weaker as military coups have repeatedly prevented the return of reformist leaders who governed democratically for 12 years after a 1952 uprising. The latest military government was forced from power only after unprecedented corruption and involvement in a booming traffic of cocaine to the United States left it internationally isolated and bankrupt.

SILES IS NOT unfamiliar with these imposing challenges. A leader of the populist movement against the military 30 years ago and president between 1956 and 1960, the 69-year-old leader will take office again only after winning pluralities in the elections of 1978, 1979 and 1980 only to see the results annulled by fraud, political infighting and military intervention.

"For many political analysts," Siles said Sunday, "it could look like suicide to accept a government in the political condition in which we receive it and with the most grave economic breakdown of the country. I am aware of the size of the effort that will be needed and the danger of failure."

Despite his alliance with Communists and other leftists, Siles and his closest associates have emphasized that the new government plans no radical social or economic restructuring. Siles joined with leftist elements to solidify his ties with Bolivia's powerful and radical labor movement, but these sectors have dropped major political demands in favor of "deepening democracy," a Communist spokesman said.

The current economic and financial crisis has largely narrowed the new government's options, political leaders said this week.

"We are not going to have any nationalization, because you don't socialize losses," said Mario Velarde, the general secretary of Siles' party, the Nationalist Revolutionary Movement of the Left.

THE MILITARY government is leaving Siles with an effectively bankrupt treasury, about $40 million in overdue payments on a foreign debt of $3.8 billion, and an inflation rate that reached 126 percent in the first eight months of this year.

To prevent a payments default and a complete economic collapse, Siles will have little choice but to negotiate with the International Monetary Fund and international banks for rescheduling of debts and new emergency loans, his supporters say.

To win the bankers' support, incoming government leaders expect they may have to take such unpopular measures as reducing heavy subsidies of wheat and fuel and reorganizing the exchange market, now completely dependent on foreign currency supplied by the illegal narcotics trade.

In addition to this immediate crisis, Bolivia's new rulers will have to try to undo a staggering system of government-backed smuggling and corruption in the illegal cocaine trade estimated at $1.5 billion, which is believed to provide half of the illegal U.S. supply. Now Bolivia's biggest business, the cocaine traffic is backed by a powerful network of paramilitary forces and some military officers, and its leaders have clearly warned the government in recent days not to interfere.

THIS RECENT RECORD, which reduced international aid to a trickle during military rule, has led political leaders to talk of a "moralizing project" for the new government that they say could be their most important task in rebuilding the country.

It is the political solvency of the new government that has most worried its potential allies in Latin America and the Reagan administration, which is expected to renew part of the more than $100 million in aid frozen after the 1980 military coup.

Though Siles was backed by a large majority of the newly reconstituted congress, his unwieldy three-party government coalition holds only a minority in the congress.

Moreover, Siles' own coalition, including the Bolivian Communist Party, ranges in ideology from the far left to social democratic moderate and has been badly split by infighting during the past two years.

Israeli cabinet outlines six-point withdrawal plan

The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

JERUSALEM — The Israeli Cabinet Sunday outlined a six-point plan for the withdrawal of foreign forces from Lebanon, including its own, and officially insisted that Palestine Liberation Organization units leave first.

The position announced by the Cabinet, which met for four hours under Prime Minister Menachem Begin, ended several days of confusion on whether Israel would demand an initial PLO withdrawal. Twice last week senior Israeli officials gave differeing views.

Sunday's formal statement that a PLO withdrawal must precede a Syrian-Israeli pullout will make American mediation efforts more difficult.

Israeli officials have insisted that the Syrians can control the PLO units and force their withdrawal. But the Syrians have said that the PLO is an independent organization and that the mediators will have to deal directly with the Palestinians.

Israeli forces have been in Lebanon since the June 6 invasion and forced the evacuation of the PLO leadership and guerrillas from Beirut in August. But thousands of PLO guerrillas remain behind Syrian lines in Lebanon's Bekaa Valley and around the northern Lebanese city of Tripoli. The Syrians have had a large army in Lebanon since the 1975-76 civil war.

IN OTHER POINTS, the Cabinet statement said the Israeli government wanted Syrian and Israeli forces to leave simultaneously, that security arrangements must be made to keep Lebanon from becoming a base for military action against Israel again and that Syria and the PLO must return Israeli prisoners and the bodies of Isreli dead before a withdrawal can begin.

The statement said that Israel would continue to seek a peace treaty with the Lebanese government, but Cabinet spokesman Dan Meridor said a treaty was not a requirement for withdrawal.

Defense Minister Ariel Sharon repeated his accusation that the United States has prevented the signing of the peace treaty by interrupting direct negotiations between the Israeli and Lebanese governments, according to several sources.

Sharon said that the Begin government should settle for nothing less than a peace treaty, declaring "this is not a present that we are receiving from someone — it is a security need for both countries," the sources said.

While accusing the United States of interfering with Israel's efforts to win a peace treaty, Sharon did not specifically criticize the mediation efforts of U.S. special envoy Philip C. Habib who, with his deputy, Morris Draper, has conducted negotiations among Syria, Lebanon and Israel on a withdrawal.

SHARON'S VIEW WAS reportedly contested by Minister of Communications Mordechai Zipori and deputy Prime Minister David Levy, who stressed Israel's need to coordinate its efforts with the United States.

Levy says that he, too, thinks Israel should seek a full peace treaty with Lebanon, but he questioned whether one could be negotiated immediately.

Israel Radio reported that several Cabinet members noted that Lebanese Premier Shafik Wazzan, reappointed under Lebanon's new president, Amin Gemayel, has publicly announced his opposition to a peace treaty. Gemayel himself has said this is not the time to discuss a treaty.

—Israel continues to strive for a treaty of peace with Lebanon.

—The government of Israel proposes to open negotiations immediately for the evacuation of all foreign forces from all of Lebanese territory.

—The first to leave Lebanon will be the terrorists (PLO) who, even after the evacuation of their organizations and headquarters from Beirut, are still concentrated in the Bekaa (eastern Lebanon) and in the northern part of the country.

—The Syrian army and the I.D.F. (Israeli Defense Force) will leave Lebanon simultaneously.

—ALL ISRAELI PRISONERS, the missing, and the bodies of the fallen will be handed over to the I.D.F. before the evacuation.

—Prior to the evacuation, security arrangements will be established that will guarantee that Lebanon will not again revert to becoming a base and launching ground for aggressive acts of hostile forces against Israel.

Later Sunday, Israel Radio reported the Jerusalem and Beirut governments have held direct talks on forming a security zone in southern Lebanon.

Quoting government sources, the state-run radio said officials discussed establishment of a 25-mile-deep area that would be policed by the Lebanese army. The Lebanese army would ensure heavy weapons are not deployed near the border with Israel, the report said, adding that a special Cabinet meeting Wednesday will discuss proposals for a joint Lebanese-Israeli military commission to "oversee" security of the area.

Sweden's navy admits foriegn sub may have escaped from Hors Bay

BERGA NAVAL BASE, Sweden (AP) — After hunting more than a week and dumping scores of depth charges into frigid Hors Bay, Sweden's navy admits a suspected Soviet-bloc submarine may have escaped, possibly the first day it was spotted.

"There has been a submarine in Hors Bay," Swedish naval Supreme Cmdr. Lennart Ljung said in a statement Sunday. "It could still be there but the likelihood is gradually decreasing."

Despite his admission, the military intensified a frustrating search for the submerged intruder. It sent two reconnaissance planes to sweep the area for the first time since the sub's periscope was spotted Oct. 1, apparently monitoring maneuvers near the secret Musko Naval Base.

Ljung conceded the alien sub may have escaped the same day it was discovered, or between Oct. 5-7. The navy said earlier the vessel tried but failed to break out of the bay through anti-submarine steel nets blocking the entrance. It is still not known how the sub entered the bay.

"As far as we know the submarine is likely still there," Navy spokesman Capt. Sven Carlsson told reporters Sunday. But he admitted that "the last firm indication was Friday."

Moslems, Christians exchange gunfire near Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Gunfights erupted between Moslems and Christians in a mountain village east of Beirut, and rightist Christian militiamen helped Lebanese troops seize leftists in the capital's western Moslem sector.

In Jerusalem, Prime Minister Menachem Begin's Cabinet outlined its proposal for withdrawal of Israeli, Syrian and Palestinian forces from Lebanon. Israel's Defense Minister Ariel Sharon denounced the United States, accusing the Reagan administration of blocking an Israeli-Lebanese peace treaty.

Israel said one of its soldiers was wounded in the cross-fire Sunday between Christian militiamen and Lebanese Druze Moslem leftists in the mountain town of Aley, 10 miles east of the Lebanese capital. There were no accounts of casualties among the combatants.

It was not known what triggered Sunday's gunbattles at Aley, which local officials called the worst outbreak of Christian-Moslem fighting since Israel's June 6 invasion of Lebanon to rout Palestinian guerrillas.

Tensions have been rising near the resort town for the past week with Christians and their traditional Druze enemies engaging in sporadic skirmishes.

MAURICE KHAWWAM, military prosecutor of Aley, said at least 20 fighters from both sides have been kidnapped at roadblocks.

In the capital, a coalition of rightist militias called the Lebanese Forces, Sunday joined Christian-led Lebanese government troops in rounding up leftists in Moslem west Beirut, police sources said.

The sources, who asked not to be identified for security reasons, said the Lebanese Forces' intelligence agency was working closely with the "Deuxieme Bureau," or Second Office, the government intelligence branch.

They said the rightist organization was supplying the Lebanese army with the names of leftist Moslem militiamen and Palestinian guerrillas in the capital's western sector.

In addition, the sources said, the militiamen have been aiding the army in its search for hidden weapons and ammunition left behind by the estimated 8,000 Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas who evacuated west Beirut following Israel's siege this summer.

WESTERN MILITARY sources said more than 1,000 tons of ammunition have been collected by the army since it moved into west Beirut last month and more than 1,000 people arrested.

Mufti Hassan Khaled, religious leader of Lebanon's Sunni Moslems, recently gave Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan a list of 150 people he claimed were kidnapped by Christian militiamen.

It is not known if the Lebanese Forces are linked to the Christian militiamen accused of massacring more than 600 Palestinian men, women and children in the Sabra and Chatilla refugee camps Sept. 18-19 following the PLO evacuation.

The Lebanese government said it was postponing its planned demilitarization of Christian east Beirut until the army completes its sweep through the Moslem west.

Varuna doesn't seem to like violins

MADRAS, India (AP) — Standing on the parched floor of a reservoir, a noted classical violinist played a musical appeal to Varuna, the Hindu rain god. But his plea brought no relief for this drought-plagued city where residents must line up to fill pots from tank trucks and dwindling water wells.

Desperate officials of Metrowater, Madras' water supply and sewage agency, arranged the Sunday recital by Kunnakudi Vaidyanathan in hopes he could repeat the performance of another maestro 150 years earlier.

Scholar finally deciphers old Egyptian manuscript

NEW YORK (AP) — An ancient Egyptian manuscript, apparently written by a scribe whose poor translation of another language confused scientists for centuries, has been deciphered by a Yeshiva University linguist, the New York Times reported.

Dr. Richard C. Steiner said the manuscript, believed to have been written 2,000 years ago, included parts of Jewish psalms addressed to Egyptian gods, the Times reported in its Monday editions.

The discovery could be one the earliest examples of one religion borrowing the rituals of another and evidence that Jewish psalms were used outside of Jerusalem.

Steiner told the Times the manuscript may also help scientists understand an early Hebrew-influenced Semitic language called Aramaic.

Apparently, the person who wrote the manuscript sometime in the second century B.C. attempted to translate Aramaic words into demotic, a form of Egyptian language, Steiner said. However, it appears the writer was not well versed in Aramaic, mispelling words and leaving errors in punctuation, which confused Aramaic scholars for centuries.

The discovery will be reported by Steiner and Dr. Charles F. Nims, a professor emeritus at the University of Chicago's Oriental Institute, in an upcoming issue of the Journal of the American Oriental Society, according to the Times.

The first year's payment and buyer qualification will be calculated equivalent to a rate of 9¹⁄₂% for 95% loan to value. Interest will be charged at a rate of 14¹⁄₂% for the first 6 months of the loan. After the first 6 months interest will be charged at the most recent 6months Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. Payments on these mortgages are graduated so as to increase the principal and interest payments 7.50% each year for the next 4 years. At the end of the first 5 year period, the graduation in payments will cease. A new payment schedule will be computed using a variable rate mortgage to amortize the remaining balance over the remaining 25 years of the mortgage based upon the then current Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. The 7¹⁄₂% maximum increase can be more if the original loan principle exceeds 125%. At each 5 year anniversary date, the payment may be adjusted to allow the remaining payments to fully amortize the loan. ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE APPROXIMATELY 16¹⁄₂%
