POLICE OFFICER KILLS MAN

MAINLY ABOUT PEOPLE

By H. N. F.

H. N. F. attended the annual convention at Electra of the Northwest Texas Press Association. He met many people, including his brother editors of the Fourth Estate. It was a pleasure to meet the vast majority. Their view points indicated that they were neither standing still or "looking backward." There is prosperity in Northwest Texas; there is prosperity in the Panhandle; there is prosperity in the plains country. All the editors said so. The representative of the Record News did not find a pessimist in the ranks. "Governor" Johnson predicts the largest cotton crop, according to the acreage, for years in his section. There are no pink boll worms or boll weevils there. Merchants are very hopeful of an excellent fall and winter business and grain growers are more than hopeful, Hall county gathered a very large crop of corn this year. W. L. Garner declared that the country within a radius of twenty-five miles of Chillicothe was as prosperous as any place in America and he saw nothing to growl about. Buford O. Brown and the Rouse Brothers of Vernon are not scattering seeds of pessimism. All agreed that crop prospects and business conditions look good to them. Ralph Shuffler of Olney and O. C. Harrison of Seymour sounded the glad tidings of the upward trend of that condition of business which leads to prosperity in their respective sections. H. F. Martin is a salesman as well as a practical printer. He sells linotype machines and he has found trade prospects in Louisiana and Texas brighter than they have been at any time since the spring of the year 1920.

President F. M. Bralley of the College of Industrial Arts at Denton wired the association that all the people of Denton and the greatest state school for girls in America would extend their hospitality to the State Press Association in June, 1922, and for the people of his city and its noble institutions, he extended a most pressing invitation for all the newspaper folk of Northwest Texas, the Panhandle and the plains to attend. A roar of applause greeted the reading of the message and the toastmaster after he made known its contents. There are hundreds of representative women in this territory who were educated at the College of Industrial Arts; they send their daughters to the College of Industrial Arts to be educated and they know that the college is one of the greatest of assets that the people of Texas possess and support by their taxes.

Former Lieutenant-Governor W. A. Johnson of Memphis, editor of the Herald, has views of his own relative to the penitentiary system. It must be admitted that some of them are unfit to print. No, "unfit" is not the word, unsafe would be a better. This veteran lawmaker and politician says a Houston ring has controlled the penitentiary system, for selfish purposes and to line the pockets of its pets for half a century. There has been no change for the better and no improvements shown under the present regime. "Governor" Johnson has a plan. He would junk the penitentiary plants; he would sell the prison farms and "they all" are located in South Texas and he would dismiss the entire prison management down to the guards. He would have the state create a huge plant for the manufacture of cement for road building purposes. He says there are cement deposits everywhere in Texas and that the labor of many of the convicts could be profitably employed in the manufacture of cement to be used in the construction by convict labor of public roads everywhere throughout Texas. Moreover, he says there is necessity for a state owned plant for the reason that the making of cement has been monopolized and the people are compelled to pay almost extortionate prices for the cement that is used for road building construction everywhere in the southwest. If there is going to be a penitentiary, Johnson would locate it in Northwest or West Texas, where the altitude is high, where malaria is unknown and where tuberculosis does not claim its victims by the hundreds every year. This pioneer of Panhandle journalism waxes warm and grows vehement when he starts or is started on the subject of the prison system and the alleged inefficiency and 'extravagant expenditure' of the people's money. There is only one way to bring about reforms according to Johnson. It is the smash or destroy the vise-like grip that a South Texas combination of politicians hold upon the prison system and those who direct it. If there are three candidates for governor, Johnson says the combination splits into three factions or groups and each faction supports its own candidate for the office. After the name of the winner has been made known the three factions come together and organize for purposes which are neither philanthropic, or purely altruistic. W. A. Johnson, former senator and former lieutenant-governor, should pen his memories as well as his reminiscences of the lights and the shades as well as the transactions that were indulged in behind the scenes at the state capital during his twelve years as a public servant. If he would place it in the

LEGISLATURE WILL ADJOURN DURING WEEK

With Educational Free Conference Committee Reaching Agreement, Session to End.

Aim of Legislators Is to "Get Through and Go Home;" No Bills Pending.

By Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Texas, Aug. 21.—With the educational free conference committee reaching an agreement yesterday, it is the concensus of opinion among the legislators now that the second called session will adjourn sine die before the end of the week. The free conference report is apparently satisfactory to the members of both the house and senate.

The one aim of the legislators, individually and collectively, is to "get through and go home." On the first day of the second session this feeling was apparent and it has increased daily.

Chairman Satterwhite of the house appropriations committee and Senator Dudley of the senate committee expressed opinions that the conference report would meet little if any opposition in either branch of the legislature.

"I think the report we have prepared for them will be satisfactory to the Peoples' club as well as to the opponents of the salary cut," Chairman Satterwhite said. He pointed out that the reduction of all salaries of all state educational institutions of twenty percent of the excess of $2,000 was even more than the Peoples' club had asked for. Of the conference report of the first called session, rejection of which necessitated this session, the Peoples' club asked for a twenty percent reduction of the excess above $2,250.

Although Governor Neff submitted the senatorial redistricting bill to this session there has been no such bill introduced in either branch.

If there is anything that will cause the adjournment to be delayed it is in the opinion of the legislators, this measure. Various members have said that the senators will not pass a measure which will require them to run for their offices again until 1924. Governor Neff objected to the senate amendment to the bill of the first session which deferred effectiveness until April 1, 1924. The next regular session of the legislature meets in January, 1923. Governor Neff has said that the state should be redistricted into senatorial districts now and not delayed. The representative redistricting bill was introduced in the house last week and efforts made at once to expedite its passage.

There are no bills pending affecting the appropriations of the thirty-seventh legislature despite the fact that the governor opened the way in his message for legislation reducing any appropriation for any purpose made by the present body of law makers. Close questioning has revealed no intentions among the legislators to introduce any such measures.

In fact, the one and only goal of the entire body is to dispose of the appropriation bill for the state educational institutions and the redistricting bills and then "go home." A month of legislative activity during the summer is obviously enough for the most enthusiastic law maker.

JAP MINISTER FOR PARLEY OF PEACE

By Associated Press.

TOKIO, Aug. 21.—Foreign Minister Uchida is quoted in an interview distributed to the press today by Kokusai agency as declaring that the after-the-war complications of international relations renders it highly advisable and justifiable that in the hope of establishing lasting peace in the world an international convention should be called for discussion of Pacific and Far Eastern questions in connection with the limitation of armaments proposed by the United States government.

MRS. OBENCHAIN TO PLEAD NOT GUILTY

A new photograph of Mrs. Madalynne Obenchain.

By Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Aug. 21.—Arthur C. Burch and Mrs. Madalynne Obenchain, indicted for the alleged murder of J. Belton Kennedy, will be called to plead to the indictment tomorrow before Judge Sidney N. Reeve in the Los Angeles county superior court. It will be their second appearance there, they having been granted a week's delay when arraigned last Monday.

Possibility of a further delay was indicated today by persons connected with the case. After the arraignment last week the defendants obtained Paul W. Schenck of Los Angeles as their principal counsel. Mr. Schenck until late today had not conferred with Burch or Mrs. Obenchain. It was said he might request another adjournment to give him time to familiarize himself with the case.

The defense counsel also is considering the matter of asking for a dismissal of the indictment, Richard Kittelle, partner of Schenck, said. He declared the defense is able to present a complete alibi for Burch and there is no evidence upon which Mrs. Obenchain can be held for murder.

SOLONS HOPE FOR RESPITE WEDNESDAY

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—Republican leaders of the senate and house still were hopeful tonight of recessing Wednesday, despite the mass of important legislation awaiting consideration.

Threats from some quarters to throw the entire program out of gear unless the conference report on the anti-beer bill was adopted caused much discussion during the day, although leaders predicted that any attempt to hold up the majority plan for a thirty-day respite from a long summer grind would not prevail.

Representative Mondell of Wyoming, republican leader, outlined today the house program for the three days remaining before the contemplated holiday briefly, it provides:

Vote on the administration's railroad funding bill tomorrow or Tuesday; adoption of conference reports on the anti-beer bill and on the Capper-Tincher bill, regulating future trading in grain; action on the shipping board appropriation with its $200,000 amendment for expenses of the disarmament conference; extension of the dye embargo and emergency tariff; imposition of taxes on war supplies sold to France and re-imported; and agricultural relief legislation.

Considering that 400 of the 535 house members voted last night on the tax bill, Mr. Mondell declared there would be no difficulty in keeping a quorum during the next few days.

DAIL EIREANN IN SESSION

By Associated Press.

DUBLIN, Aug. 21.—Nearly all the members of the Dail Eireann cabinet were in session today for the purpose of making final arrangements for tomorrow's secret session of the parliament.

Harry J. Boland, representative of Eamonn DeValera in the United States, was one of the callers on Mr. DeValera at mansion house this afternoon.

Ireland has passed through a week of decided contrasts in feeling of the peace question and still is uncertain as to where the peace discussions are leading. This period, which has witnessed the historic initial opening meetings of the Dail Eireann, has supplied alternately expressions of optimism and intervals of something closely akin to hopelessness. But on the eve of another week the situation in the peace negotiations remains on the surface apparently about just where it was.

Mr. DeValera has announced that the terms offered by the British government are unsatisfactory and Premier Lloyd George has declared that the British government can go no further to meet the demands of the republicans.

LONDONDERRY COUNCIL WILL NOT SEPARATE

By Associated Press.

BELFAST, Aug. 21.—"We refuse to consent to separation from the rest of Ireland and pledge ourselves to oppose it steadfastly and to make the fullest use of our right to nullify it," concludes a resolution which will be proposed by the Londonderry city council next Thursday. It is said the resolution is certain of passage.

MINGO MINERS FAIL TO MAKE DEMONSTRATION

Men Concentrate in Camp But Threatened March on Military Area Fails to Materialize.

By Associated Press.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Aug. 21.—Men from the cabin creek and paint creek coal fields who gathered at Marmet near here yesterday with the intention of marching to Mingo county as a demonstration against martial law in force there, were still in camp tonight, according to Sheriff Walker of Kanawaha county. He said that about 300 men had arrived at the camp today bringing the total to approximately 900, most of whom are armed.

The plans of the miners who were scheduled to start for Mingo this morning could not be learned definitely although the sheriff said there was considerable talk among them of starting before daylight tomorrow. He added that there appeared to be no recognized leader among them.

Sheriff Don Chaif of Logan county, through whose territory, the eighty-mile march to Mingo lies, said tonight that "no armed mob" will cross the Logan county line. He added that he was prepared to meet any emergency.

Sheriff Walker said he had no reason yet to interfere.

DRY FORCES WILL FIGHT FOR BILL

ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE PLANS CONCERTED ATTACK ON BEER MEASURE

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—Dry forces will carry to a finish their fight against inclusion of the Stanley amendment in the anti-beer bill before congress, it was announced today by Wayne B. Wheeler, counsel for the anti-saloon league. The amendment which restates and interprets constitutional bars against searches and seizures, Mr. Wheeler said, would "make the prohibition officers fight against liquor transportation a losing one and a handicap in the search for illicit stills too manifest to require a demonstration."

TARIFF BILL TO COME UP AGAIN BEFORE CONGRESS

Questions of whether taxes or tariff shall have preference was expected to be decided by the committee early this week. Passage of the tax bill by house yesterday will place it in the hands of the senate committee after the usual routine, late tomorrow or Tuesday, but according to the program announced by Chairman Penrose it will be pigeonholed until late in the week at least.

CO-INCIDENT WITH NOTE ON PANAMA-COSTA RICA NOTE U. S. SENDS MARINES TO CANAL ZONE

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—The United States has informed the government of Panama that as friendly mediator between Panama and Costa Rica in their boundary dispute, it does not "feel compelled to suggest" that Costa Rica delay longer in taking jurisdiction over territory now held by Panama, and which was adjudged to belong to Costa Rica by the terms of the White award.

The position of this government was stated in a note transmitted by Secretary Hughes to the government of Panama on August 18, and made public today by the state department.

Costa Rica has advised the United States, the note said, of its determination to assume immediate jurisdiction over the disputed territory.

Order Marines Out.

Almost simultaneously with publication of the note, it became known that a force of marines had embarked at Philadelphia for the canal zone. Officials here whose positions made them cognizant of the movement refused to divulge its purpose or to comment except for the statement that it was ordered at the solicitation of the state department.

The marines, drawn from the Guantico Virginia base comprised the third battalion of the fifth regiment and were commanded by Major Thomas S. Clark. Moving by train Saturday night, they embarked at Philadelphia today, according to marine headquarters on the battleship Pennsylvania, which was to convey them to the canal. The Pennsylvania has been under orders for a fortnight to proceed to the Pacific coast.

Unofficially it was said in naval circles that no plans had been made loooking for the employment of American forces in the disputed territory.

Marines Dispatched.

By Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 21.—A force of 400 marines embarked from here today on the U. S. S. Pennsylvania for duty in Panama.

The decision to augment American forces already in the canal zone was reached so suddenly that officers at the navy yard here were not ordered to prepare supplies for marines until yesterday, when rush orders were received by telephone from the navy department at Washington.

The Pennsylvania was used for transportation of the force in order to expedite its arrival in Central America. That vessel was enroute from New York to Pacific waters and was ordered by wireless yesterday to proceed to Philadelphia and receive the contingent. It is expected that she will sail shortly after midnight tonight.

Every effort was made to keep the destination of the forces a secret and navy yard officials declared not even officers commanding knew the exact duty they were to perform upon their arrival in the canal zone.

W. W. WEBB SHOT TO DEATH AFTER QUARREL OVER CAT

Wounded in five places by buck shot fired from a double barrelled shot gun, W. W. Webb, about 40 years of age, married and the father of several children, staggered into his home at Fourth and Lake streets Sunday afternoon at about 1 o'clock and fell to the floor where he died a few minutes later. C. M. Waggoner, 55 years of age and a member of the city police force, surrendered to Sheriff Fred Smith a few minutes later.

Three charges were fired at the deceased, the last taking effect, according to the assertions of policemen and county officers who investigated the case.

According to attorneys for Waggoner and of officers who investigated the case, the shooting occurred after Waggoner had placed Webb under arrest for an alleged charge of firing a gun within the corporate limits of the city. Waggoner refused to discuss the shooting with any one, except on the advice of his attorneys.

Bond Fixed by Agreement.

Immediately after surrendering to officers Waggoner was taken in charge by District Attorney Bert Wilson, who after investigation set his bond at $10,000 after agreement with his attorney, E. H. Gipson.

The bond was immediately furnished by F. G. and Ed Waggoner.

According to the assertions of officers, who investigated the case, the deceased and H. T. Scott, better known as "Scotty," were attempting to shoot a cat, which they declared had been eating some of Webb's chickens, when the shots were fired for which Policeman Waggoner attempted to arrest Webb.

They asserted that several shots had been fired before the policeman's approach from his home, which is just across the street from the Webb home.

Policeman Warns Wife.

Policeman Waggoner declares that shots have been fired in his neighborhood on numerous occasions and that he felt it his duty to stop it. He is also quoted to declare that Sunday August 13, after several shots had been fired by a son of Mr. Webb he went to the home and finding the father absent, asked that Mrs. Webb have the boy refrain from discharging firearms in that neighborhood. Last week, officers say Waggoner was approached by Webb who told him "not to ever again go to his wife about any of the misconduct about the place." Also Waggoner is quoted to declare that at this time the deceased told him that if he did bother his wife again, "he would build a smoke under him."

Version of Killing.

On hearing the shots on Sunday afternoon he took the shot gun with him and approached the house. He declares that he did not see Scotty, who is supposed to have at that time been stooped over attempting to locate the cat under the barn.

At this point Policeman Waggoner declares that Scotty ran and handed a revolver to Webb who advanced to meet him and who, taking the pistol, turned toward him as if to fire. Then Waggoner declares that he threw up his gun and fired and that at the same time or possibly a little sooner Webb fired. In this connection Scotty declares that he did not hand the gun to Webb and that he (Scotty) had the gun in his hand during the fatal shooting.

Attorneys for Policeman Waggoner say that Policeman Waggoner declares he was excited and fired the first shot high, possibly discharging both barrels. Then he is quoted to declare that he stepped behind a gate, reloaded and fired what is believed to have been the fatal shot.

Say Scotty Got Pistol

Shortly after the shooting, according to officers, Scotty ran about two blocks from the scene and left a pistol with a neighbor. The pistol which was later found by officers, had five cartridges in the chambers, one of which was discharged. Five discharged cartridges were found on the ground near the barn, where Scotty and Webb were firing at the cat, according to officers.

Both the deceased and Officer Waggoner are well known locally. Webb has been operating a vegetable wagon for some time and declared by officers to be a man of good reputation and character. Waggoner had lived here for several years and had been a member of the city police force for more than a year. He also was declared to be a man of good reputation and character and an officer who tried to do his duty honestly.

The body of the deceased was removed to the Merkle-Lunn Undertaking parlors where it is being held pending the arrival of out of town relatives before arrangements for the funeral service are to be completed. The deceased was a member of the Odd Fellows lodge.

BOY DROWNS TRYING TO SAVE FATHER

Four Members of Boating Party Lose Lives When Canoe Sinks in Lake Near Shreveport.

By Associated Press.

SHREVEPORT, La., Aug. 21.—Rushing to the aid of his father, M. G. McGee, and Miss Mabel McAlpin, whom the elder McGee was trying to save from drowning, Willard McGee his son, age 18, was drowned when Miss McAlpin, stenographer for the Texas Company of this city, lost her head, threw her arms around his neck and dragged them both to death in Curtis Lake a pleasure resort 12 miles south of Shreveport, early Sunday morning.

Mark Briedy, traveling salesman for J. Grossman and Sons, of New Orleans, in whose honor a moonlight picnic to the lake was given drowned when the boat the elder McGee, Misses McAlpin and Nellie Self and W. R. Rollins, occupied turned over. Rollins and Miss Self went down with the skiff but came up still holding on and paddled the overturned craft to shore.

Briedy and Rollins, in street clothes were rowing on the lake when M. G. McGee and Misses Self and McAplin, who were swimming, climbed in. McGee dived several times from the boat, other members of the party said, sipping considerable water each time. Briedey, more or less of a fun maker, yelled they were sinking but no one paid any attention until the boat capsized. McGee started to shore with Miss McAlpin but called for help before they had gone far. His son, Willard McGee, went to them. Miss McAlpin had kept her head until the transfer was being made when she threw her arms around the boy's neck and both went down. Briedey could not swim and sank like a stone.

The bodies were not recovered until after rescue parties had dived and dragged the lake for ten hours. The bodies of Miss McAlpin and young McGee were found with her arms around his neck.

FLOOD WATERS IN ARIZONA CAPITOL

By Associated Press.

PHOENIX, Ariz., Aug. 21.—As a result of downpours last night and today another flood greater than that of last Friday swept down Cave creek through the Arizona canal and into the city of Phoenix, threatening extensive property damage and possible loss of life. At 10:05 o'clock tonight the waters entered the state capitol.

Twenty minutes later the basement of the building was full and the water had entered the first floor. A wall of water eight feet high and several miles wide, according to reports, washed out a section of the grand canal, one of the largest in the district after sweeping across the country between it and the Arizona canal. The flood waters extended from Phoenix to Glendale, a distance of nine miles, irrigation officials said.

WIDOW SOBS IMPROPRIETY CONFESSION

Twenty-one-year Old Wife of Section Hand Tells Prosecutors She "Loved Her Husband."

Assert Defendant in Murder Case Admits Killing Wife and Poisoned Other Victim.

By Associated Press.

WACO, Texas, Aug. 21.—Confessing that he gave his wife, Mrs. W. T. Aven, powders to kill her, and that he made Keyes drunk and got him in a place where he thought he would be killed, W. T. Aven made a statement before Sheriff Bob Buchanan, County Attorney Frank B. Tiery and other officers of the county attorney's and sheriff's departments today.

Admitting that Aven had told her he poisoned his wife, and that he made statements which led her to believe he also killed Keyes, Mrs. Dessie Keyes, wife of the dead man, also made a confession to the officers. She denies having had anything to do with the death of Mrs. Aven or Keyes, but admits intimate relations with Aven during the past year.

Arsenic was found when an examination of the vital organs of Mrs. Aven's body was made yesterday by Dr. W. T. Gooch of Baylor University. The body had been exhumed Friday, and tests for poison were begun by Dr. Gooch at once.

Aven, in making his confession, declared he had for years had trouble with his wife, and that she often accused him of unfaithfulness. "She tormented me until I did not care what I did to her," was his statement. A sister of Mrs. Aven, he said, also tried to bring about trouble between them.

"I loved my children and could not get my own consent to leave her on account of them," he declared.

On July 4, he, his wife and his wife's mother came to Waco from their home at Elm Mott, he explained in telling of Mrs. Aven's death. Here he bought five hamburgers, giving one each to his wife and mother-in-law, and taking one himself.

"When we started home my wife began to get sick," he said.

"What did you put in the hamburger to make her sick?" was the question shot at him.

"Nothing" he declared defiantly.

Continuing with his story, he declared he went to see Mrs. Keyes as soon as they got to Elm Mott. Returning home, he prepared a dose of salts for his wife at her request, when she seemed to be getting worse.

"I put a teaspoonful of white powder in the salts. I had bought the powder a month previous at Hillsboro, telling the man from whom I bought it that I wanted something to kill some rats and animals about the place." Here he halted, saying nothing, but apparently going over the experience in his mind.

"Why did you put powder in the salts?" was the next question.

Hesitating for a moment he said quietly:

"I gave it to her to kill her."

"I have always been afraid of Aven, and once before my husband's death, and after my aunt was gone, he told me there was only one more person standing between us. I would have told all this sooner, but I was afraid of what he would do to me. I never want to see him again."

Here she interrupted her interviewer to inquire of her mother. Her father, who was sitting gravely by her side, informed her of her mother's illness.

Checks Sob.

Once more she checked back a sob. "Some of the statements in my confession are wrong," she resumed after a moment's pause, "and I wish they would correct it. The main thing was that I said I loved Uncle Truman. I don't."

"Dessie has done a great wrong, but she is not guilty of murder," said L. T. Trammell, her grayhaired father, a sixty-nine year-old McKinney farmer, as he sat with her in her cell.

Although it may cost him his farm which it took a lifetime of saving to buy, Mrs. Keyes' father will stand by his daughter through the coming ordeal. He spent the night in the cell.

"I only want the truth of the whole matter to come out. It is the first trouble of the kind that has ever come to me, and I will do the best I can to go through with it," he said, speaking very quietly.

"I am sure my reputation in every place I have lived will bear investigation, and all who know me know that it is the truth of the matter I want to find. Dessie was led into the whole thing by Aven, who took advantage of her when she promised to pay him when he helped Keyes out of trouble in Oklahoma. After that she was so under his influence that she was afraid to talk."

DEATHLESS LIFE IS NOT DESIRABLE

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE, Aug. 15.—"Life without death is not impossible."

This is the opinion of Sir Arthur Keith, F. R. S., the famous biologist and anthronopologist, on a subject which has engaged the deep interest of mankind throughout the ages.

Sir Arthur Keith, who attended the meeting of the British Medical Association at Newcastle, discussed with an International News Service correspondent the remarkable experiment made by Dr. Alexis Carrel, the famous French-American scientist, with a fragment of a chicken's heart. This fragment, kept in a special culture at the Rockefeller Institute since January 17, 1912, has never ceased to grow normally or to give signs of immortality.

While Sir Arthur Keith draws the conclusion that immortality is not impossible, he addas anotner, equally dramatic: "Life without death is not desirable.'

Sir Arthur, discussion Dr. Carrel's experiment, said:

"Eternal life is not impossible; nothing is impossible.

"Dr. Carrel, who is French by birth, went to the United States as a young man. There is no pretence or humbug about his work and it is to be taken seriously.

"Proving Eternal Life."

"He has taken a little patch of the young beating heart of a chick in the egg, and he has by special culture kept it supplied with jelly, and has kept it alive for nine years. This is a new fact, but it is not to be taken as proving that eternal life would be possible for great collections of cells such as go to make up a human being.

"We hope some day to know what life is, but at present we are so entirely ignorant of the mechanism of the machinery of life that we cannot say. If you take a motor-bicycle you understand its capacity because you understand its machinery.

"But would eternal life be desirable? I think I can show you that it would not.

"The desire for the extension of the span of human life is a form of madness, and if people would only think of the conditions of life they would never entertain the idea. Old age is not a disease, but part of the essential machinery of nature for running human life.

"Look on nature as the business manager of human life. What nature requires is to keep life going. Nature aims at the species; not at the individual. Nature has built our bodies in such a way that we should have short lives. The whole system is built up on a period of short existences.

"Up Against Nature"

"In trying to extend the span of life you are right up against nature's basic law. Her whole idea is to use young and vigorous lives and kill off the old.

"Civilization has tended to extend the span of human life. Animals like the gorilla and anthropoid apes that are nearest to man are old at forty. The aborigines of Australia and Patagonia were old men and women at sixty. Human life is longer now, and in saying that I am not speaking of the average person, but of the men and women also who overcome all the accidents which include the diseases of life and who reach old age.

"Past experiences point to the fact that life might be extended by at least another decade. But is it desirable?

"What we want now is young, healthy people. What we need is to extend the period of their vigorous life. This necessity is now being generally recognized, and it is the rational view.

"I will give you two similes which I think will appeal to the general public.

"Regard life as a restaurant and nature as the manager. People rush in at midday to lunch. It is crowded; there are no seats. Why? Because some people who have finished their dinner are lounging about and occupying the seats.

"Must Limit Them"

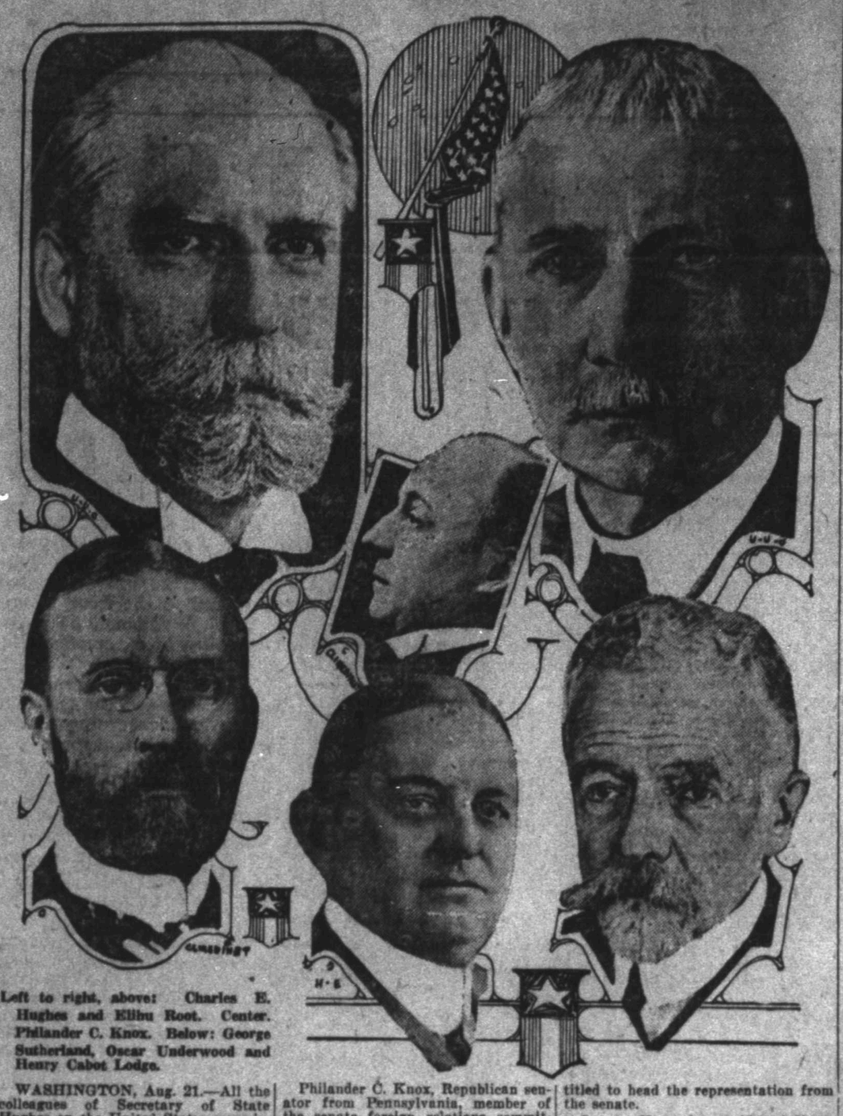

"The manager says: 'I must make regulations. I must limit them to half an hour to make room for the others.' Nature in the same way has put a limit to the life of man.

"Another simile: You know the principle of the continuous performance at the cinema. You pay your money and see the show round. You are then supposed to come out, but some will stay.

"The second time you see the show you will be bored; the third time you will go mad, and the fourth time you may commit suicide.

"Human life is something like that. People crave for human immortality. They have never thought what it means."

SENATORS AND EX-SENATORS HUGHES' AIDS AT DISARMAMENT CONFERENCE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—All the colleagues of Secretary of State Hughes on the United States commission that will be chosen to participate in the Washington international conference on reduction of armament will have seen service in the U. S. senate, according to well authenticated reports. Secretary Hughes will head the delegation. For the other members of the commission the president is said to be considering the following:

Elihu Root, former senator from New York and former secretary of state.

Henry Cabot Lodge, present senator from Massachusetts, and chairman of the foreign relations committee of the upper house.

Philander C. Knox, Republican senator from Pennsylvania, member of the senate foreign relations committee, and former secretary of state.

Oscar Underwood of Alabama, Democratic senator and friend of President Harding.

George W. Sutherland, former Republican United States senator from Utah and international lawyer.

Ex-Senator Root is generally regarded as the dean of American statesmen. Those who have discussed the matter with President Harding say that Mr. Root certainly can have a place on the commission if he wants it.

Senator Lodge, by virtue of his position as chairman of the foreign relations committee, is obviously entitled to head the representation from the senate.

Senator Knox the president believes is eminently qualified for membership on the commission, not because he is a senator, but because of his familiarity with diplomacy and international relations.

Senator Underwood is being considered as a representative of the minority political party. The president is known to admire Underwood and to have great confidence in his ability.

Former Senator Sutherland is regarded by the president as eminently qualified for the delegation. He was at one time seriously considered for secretary of state.

NEWSPAPERS GIVE SPACE TO IRELAND

By Associated Press.

LONDON, Aug. 21.—London newspapers in summing up the Irish situation, this morning devoted themselves to peace or war editorials. The Daily Express used Lincoln's phrase, "we will not break up the union and you shall not" as representing the position of the British government.

"If the negotiations break down", declared the London Times, the only practical alternatives are that we either impose upon Ireland what we think is a just settlement or let southern Ireland go her way as an independent republic.

The first would be a convenience to us, but would be two years of agony to Ireland; the second would be treason—folly to England—and it is absolutely unthinkable as long as this nation remains a nation at all.

"It is either negotiation for a settlement by consent on the present basis or it is war. Heaven forbid that we should rattle the sabre, but heaven forbid too, that we should ask consent to throw the crown and sceptre into the dust."

"A miracle of wisdom," said the Observer, "is needed to save the situation. To attempt to reach a settlement br pouring in troops and tanks would be crude, blind and fatal. It would fail for the reason, that the Irish extremists live on excitement on battle. We should keep a firm grip on a few essential strategic points along the coast and the river Shannon and then withdraw the rolling stock of the railways. Ulster would know how to hold its own frontier."

WOMAN'S PLACE NOT AT ARMS PARLEY, TWO MEMBERS OF FAIR SEX DECLARE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—Should President Harding name a woman as one of the memoers of the American delegation to the disarmament conference which opens here November 11?

Yes, says the National League of Women Voters.

No, emphatically declare Representative Alice Robertson of Oklahoma, the only woman in congress, and Miss Florence King, president of the National Woman's Association of Commerce.

"I don't know of a woman in the United States possessed of the qualifications to sit on that commission," said Miss Robertson in an interview.

"She would have to have experience in diplomacy and diplomatic affairs.

"She would have to be familiar with foreign languages and conditions.

"She would have to have social standing.

"She should not be a climber socially.

"She would have to be prepared to listen much and talk little.

"I do not know of a woman who fills that bill, do you?"

"As I see the coming conference," said Miss King, "the results of it will be founded upon a cold business proposition. True the mothers of the world have the most at stake. They provide the 'cannon fodder' for all wars. They are a unit, I believe, for disarmament. Their position is known but I have seen no reason for the appointment by President Harding of a w man. It would be the height of folly to appoint a woman just because she is a woman.

"There is not a nation in the world that takes issue with the woman's sentimental reasons for stopping war. Then what new thought could she bring to the conference?"

FABLE OF ASOP ASLOP.

POPLAR BLUFFS, Mo., Aug. —Asop Aslop was on trial for alleged theft of hogs. The jury had sweltered throughout the day as testimony was presented. One member was so drowsy when the talesman retired to deliberate that he fell asleep. The eleven other jurors decided the fate of Aslop.

"John," said the foreman of the jury, awakening the slumbering talesman, "we have decided to hang Aslop. What do you think about it?"

"Suits me," drawled John, yawning, "but let the execution be delayed until Aslop finishes his crop."

Asop was acquitted.

STRIKE THREE!

—The ball teams are still pulling that Joe Miller joke. A lively game was on here between the "Blues" and "Reds." Members of both teams were black.

"What's the score?" queried a passerby.

"Twenty-three to nothing," replied one of the negroes, "in favor of the other side."

"Getting beat badly, aren't you?" asked the passerby.

FORMER MINT HEAD DENIES DIVORCE HINT

Raymond T. Baker and Mrs. Baker, who was Mrs. Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt.

NEW YORK, Aug. 17.—Considerable comment has been circulating in society of this city and in the Berkshires of late because Raymond T. Baker, former director of the mint, has not been at the Lenox, Mass., summer home of Mrs. Baker since August, 1920. Mrs. Baker was Mrs. Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, widow of the Lusitania victim.

At Lenox, where Baker, ex-Nevada miner and ex-prison warden, is held by some to be a "raw-boned westerner" it has been freely remarked that he has shown no inclination this season to visit his wife, but has preferred to remain in California.

At Piedmont, Calif., he said recently that there is no estrangement and that he is in constant and happy communication with Mrs. Baker.

Mrs. Baker was interviewed at her home, the magnificent estate at Lenox, on the subject of reports that she and her husband have differed. She declined to affirm or deny these rumors.

The last time her husband was at the Homewood estate was the occasion of the christening of Gloria Baker, who was born in San Francisco on August 7, 1920.

Mrs. Baker has done more entertaining this season than anybody else at Lenox. Her recent fancy dress ball was the most brilliant function held in the Berkshires in years.

She has just returned to Lenox from Newport, where she and her sons, Alfred G. and George W. Vanderbilt, were the guests of Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, mother-in-law of Mrs. Baker.

Mrs. Baker was Miss Margaret Emerson, daughter of Capt. Isaac E. Emerson, Baltimore financier. Her first husband was Smith Hollins McKim, whom she divorced.

Tim S. Thompson and H. D. Hemphill, of Graham, spent the week-end in this city.

WANT INAUGURATION ADVANCED TO JAN.

By Associated Press.

CINCINNATI, O., Aug. 15.—Advance of the presidential inauguration from March 4 to the third Monday in January is recommended by a special committee of the American Bar association, which will report to its convention opening here August 30.

The committee also advises that the congress elected in November met on the second Monday of the following January.

The ground for the proposed change is that too much time elapses between election and inauguration and convening of congress.

The report calls attention to a bill of Senator Ashurst providing for similar alterations.

UNIVERSITY TO HONOR EDUCATORS

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Aug. 15.—Syracuse University soon will adopt a unique idea in memorializing the names of those educators and scholars who have been made the institution renowned. All class trees will be christened with the name of a benefactor. The first tree to be so christened is a maple and will be known as "Chancellor Day." A resolution to adopt the idea soon will be offered the campus improvement committee and the board of directors.

BOSTON NOW SELLS "STRETCHED" ICE CREAM

BOSTON, Aug. 17.—"Stretched" ice cream is the latest.

It is being sold in Greater Boston by many ice cream manufacturers, according to Eugene C. Hultman, chairman of the state commission on Necessaries of Life. In other words, "frozen air" is being sold to Bostonians in place of ice cream. This "stretched' ice cream is made possible by a new whipping process. By means of this process nineteen gallons of "ice cream" are obtained from ten gallons of cream preparations. Formerly only fourteen to fifteen gallons of "ice cream" were secured from ten gallons. Because of this new whipping process the ten gallons are "stretched" to nineteen, and the dealer is able to get much more money for the finished product. This means that the public pays the extra amount.

FROZEN DAINTIES.

Fruit Salad Sundaes—For four portions, boil together for fifteen minutes two cups of water, three-quarters of a cup of sugar, half a cup of chopped seeded raisins and the grated yellow rind of half a lemon. Pour on the beaten yolks of two eggs and cook over hot water until well thickened. Remove from the fire, cool and add one diced banana, two tablespoons of diced canned pineapple, two peaches, put in bits and half a cup of chopped nut meats. Pour over the cream that has been placed in sherbet glasses and top with mounds of sweetened whipped cream.

Turkish Sherbet — Fill sherbet glasses three-quarters full of orange ice that has been frozen firm, then fill up the glasses with chilled ginger ale and top with a spoonful of marshmallow whip mixed with chopped candied orange peel.

BREADS.

Cinnamon Rolls—After you mix up bread sponge and it is ready to put in pans, take out one large loaf of dough, roll out thin, grease with butter (warmed), then sprinkle heavily with cinnamon and sugar.

Put in strips and roll, then let them rise until light. Bake in moderate even forty minutes.

Whole Wheat Bread—One cake yeast, three cups lukewarm water, three tablespoons brown sugar, three tablespoons melted shortening, seven and one-half cups whole wheat flour, one and one-half teaspoons salt.

Dissolve yeast and sugar in the lukewarm water. Add shortening, then flour gradually and the salt. Knead thoroughly and place in a well greased bowl, cover, and set in a warm place to rise about two hours. When doubled in bulk, turn out on kneading board and mold into loaves. Place in well greased pans, cover and set to rise again for about one hour.

Peanut Bread—Two cups bread sponge before you stiffen bread, one cup sugar, one egg, two tablespoons melted shortening, one teaspoon salt, two teaspoons baking powder, one cup raisins, one cup French peanuts (unroasted). Put in whole.

Stil all together as given here. Add whole wheat flour (or graham) to make just a little stiffer than cake. Don't set it away to raise as bread, but bake at once in not too hot an oven. Bake about forty-five minutes.

Very nice for lunch basket and very nourishing.

URGES USE OF ROUGE TO FIGHT OFF HOMLINESS

It doesn't require much of a strain on the memory to recall the days when the woman who applied rouge to her cheeks was looked upon as one to be shunned. Even the use of much expensive perfume was supposed to indicate an excess of worldliness. And to apply a red tint to the lips definitely branded a woman as a lost soul.

This attitude, of course, was due to our deepseated Puritanism. The typical Puritan hated beauty in any form. He was opposed to pleasure. Hence the Puritan feeling toward trying to improve the complexion was that it was an attempt to change something from what the Almighty had ordained it to be, and was, therefore, wicked.

Today the shift of belief regarding these matters not only in the East, but throughout the entire country, is so marked that it is well-nigh startling. Countless women of the highest moral code proceed on the assumption that if a man may improve his face by shaving off whiskers, they may enhance theirs by adding artificial color. They agree that natural bloom on the cheek is, indeed, to be desired, but in the absence of it, that artificial beauty is preferable to being aggressively homely.

NEW FALL SUITS DEMAND SMARTEST OF CHAPEAUX, BLOUSES AND FURS

When autumn days approach and one begins to wear suits again there are three things one must have to be well dressed—a smart blouse, hat and fur neckpiece. Here are two hats which the fall season has introduced. Both are of felt in pearl gray tones. The one at the right is enhanced by a brim faced with ribbon to usual angle trim the one at the left. The present vogue for net blouses is bringing forth many pretty styles, one of which is pictured in the center. It is a short-sleeved model with a round collar and hand-embroidered dots and pleating for trimming.

These net blouses are having quite a vogue now because they make cool, comfortable guimpes for the universally worn jumper frocks. They also make pretty accompaniments for the suit and although they look like vestees when the coat is worn they are whole blouses and the coat may be removed with due propriety and comfort. Short sleeves, round collars and fastening in the back are features of almost all of these new blouses although some few fasten in the front and have long sleeves. They may be had at prices ranging from two dollars for a plain net blouse to twelve or fifteen for one trimmed with handmade lace and embroidery.

After the blouse and hat the fur choker or stole comes next in importance. Squirrel, marten, krimmer, ermine, sable, broadtail and fox are the most popular skins for scarfs. The short-haired furs lead, but fox and wolf animal scarfs are popular with the younger girls.

The four-skin fur at the right is marten and would set off any suit or cloth frock to advantage. Two ermine skins makes the little choker at the left. This is not quite as practical as the darker fur, but it is equally as pretty.

ASK ME

Trixie—And her tricks. I'm not supposed to talk about myself. But I'll answer your other questions. Gloria Swanson, Wanda Hawley, Bebe Daniels and Lila Lee can be reached at the Lasky studios. Gloria doesn't tell her age, Wanda is 26 years old and Bebe and Lila are both 20 years old.

Ann—John Barrymore will soon be seen in "The Lotus Eater." In his support is Colleen Moore. This picture was directed by Marshall Neilan. Constance Binney's latest picture is "Such a Little Queen." Vincent Coleman plays the leading male role.

Tom—Alice Joyce was the former wife of Tom Moore. Both are married again. Alice is Mrs. James Regan and Tom married Renee Adoree, his leading lady in "Made in Heaven." Tom was born in County Meath, Ireland.

Foxy—Thomas Meighan was Norma Talmadge's leading man in "The Probation Wife." Lon Chaney's full name is Lon Frank Chaney. He will soon be seen in "Ace of Hearts," a story by Gouverneur Morris. He also has a prominent part in Marshall Neilan's "Bits of Life." Oh, yes, everything you say is true. Wallace Reid, Gloria Swanson and Elliott Dexter are to start work on "The Rainbow's End." This picture ought to be worth while seeing.

Dreamer—No, "Auction of Souls" was the only picture Aurora Mardiganian ever made. I really can't say, but it was made to give the American people an idea of the torture the poor Armenians went through. Yes, that was Anna Q. Nilsson in the role of the school teacher. It is said that Aurora was the only girl out of a million people who escaped. Her experiences have also been put in book form. It is entitled "Ravished Armenia."

Chicky—The latest bathing beauty to have forsaken comedies is Harriet Hammond. She has an important role in "Bits of Life," Marshall Neilan's latest production.

Milady—At last it is rumored that William S. Hart and Jane Novak are to be married in October. It is interesting to know that Charles Ray was never on Broadway. Not that it was his fault. He packed up several times for the trip but something always intervened. Poor Charlie! Some time he'll get there.

Coo-coo—May Allison hails from the south. So does Hope Hamton. Niles Welch is at present working with Elaine Hammerstein in "The Way of a Maid." This picture threatens to be the last appearance of the young man on the screen for some time to come as he is to play the leading role in "The Hot Heads." This play is to open on Broadway early in the new season.

Lysbeth—Anita Stewart's latest picture is "Her Mad Bargain." In private life she is Mrs. Rudolph Cameron. Richard Barthelmess is 26 years old and can be reached at Harrison, N. Y. Milton Sills plays opposite Gloria Swanson in her first starring vehicle, "The Great Moment."

GOOD PIES.

Pineapple Pie—Mix one-quarter cup flour and three-quarters cup sugar. Ad done cup grated pineapple and the juice. Cook until mixture is smooth and thick. Then remove from fire and add one well-beaten egg. Cook between crusts.

Squash Pie—Mix one cup strained squash pulp, one cup sugar, a pinch of cinnamon or nutmeg, one-half teaspoon salt, three beaten eggs, one cup of thick cream and flavoring to taste. Bake in a pie plate lined with paste. Serve hot or warm.

A WIFE IN THE MAKING

BY PHYLLIS PHILLIPS

CHERRY IS UNFORGIVING

"My dear, dear little girl, if you and Ned are going to make the fatal mistake of mutually sticking out for 'rights,' there isn't a bit of use my trying to help you, nor anyone else either. If you truly love each other you will not be able to let some petty idea on each side, such as being right in the matter, outweigh everything else, including your future happiness. Cherry, if you love Ned, as I feel sure that you do, nothing else will matter. Nothing, nothing can possibly matter, but this one, big fact. More especially in the fact of this intrigue going on should you think carefully before allowing such a thing as false pride to wreck your life dear" said Miss Laura as she looked tenderly into her visitor's eyes.

"I know you're right about things, Miss Laura," wailed Cherry, "but, I'm all at sea about things now This note has changed my opinion of Ned and the whole situation. It looks to me as though he has been confiding in Arline, discussing me, and our misunderstandings with her. Shameful thought! And feeling this, how can I possibly allow myself to go on caring, let alone fighting for his love, and my rights as his wife? Surely pride has to figure in the situation somewhat? Ned himself would feel the same way if he had found some other man's letter in my pocket. I know he would, for I saw just how unreasonable he was about Arthur even though he had been guilty of many things himself. Besides, Arline must have had some sort of encouragement from Ned to write such a letter. You know that Miss Laura. No nice girl would dream of writing in this way unless—unless she knew her man and her ground pretty well. That's what hurt most. Oh, do you think that my Neddy has grown tired of me and is trying to get rid of me? It seems so awful, so almost impossible. When I remember our love, Honeymoon Hill, his promises, I do," and here Cherry relapsed into tears again.

"Now, Cherry, this will never do. Keep the sparkle in your pretty eyes whatever happens. You will find that glances from clean, loving eyes will help most any heart tragedy to go the way you want, my dear. Let's put some nice cold water on them right away before they are damaged any more. What you want to do now is to keep cheerful and happy until Ned comes back. Look your prettiest when he arrives, and be so loving and glad to see him that he will wonder how he possibly managed to stand the two weeks without his little wife. Take my advice, dear" urged Miss Laura.

"I suppose that he would die of anger if he knew that I had found his letter. But I'm going to keep it until things are straightened out. And if they never are, why I can at least show him a very good reason for our separating," announced Cherry firmly as she dipped her face into the cold water her friend had brought her in a basin.

"There, that's heaps better. Let's you and I sit and talk about other things for the rest of the time," suggested Miss Laura as she set a large platter of home-made chocolate cake down before her guest and followed it with a pitcher of lemonade. "Come on, Cherry, here's your favorite cake. Smile a little bit for me, dear." And Cherry did so.

FASHIONABLE FOLLIES

I chose that title because it sounds catchy and with no wish to be irreverent to her Caesarship, Madam Grundy. According to Webster, a "foible" is "a moral weakness." With a frank diagnosis, who of us is immune? As well be out of the world as out of fashion. Freakishness is the surest ticket to ostracism. Science we study styles. Q. E. D.! (Those triumphant letters are the erudite way of saying "I told you so!").

Fashion is a kaleidoscope, continually presenting new patterns. There may be but twenty pieces of glass inside the works, but a turn of it, and they always fall differently—same old details, different combinations.

The innovation now being innovated is the bell-silhouette. We practical, athletic western-hemispherians are not taking to it as kindly as was expected. In our party dress of organdy or tulle, we are content to look as behooped and fluffy below the equator as the ladies whom Griffiths showed us in "The Birth of a Nation," but for daily food we still cling to the slim, agile figure which, in all its snaky litheness, has been sometimes popular. Not succeeding uproariously in making us swallow the voluminous skirt, they are telling us palliatively that the classic line is always good and will never be passe.

Still, there is no doubt of it, skirts are growing longer and fuller. Those of us who cannot afford to throw away our few skirts and forthwith buy new ones, may take consolation in the thought that these may be adapted by many devices, e. g. panels. One of the most popular trimmings is a blending shade of the same goods as the dress. Panels of a near-shade to harmonize with the skirt to be widened may be inserted anywhere; front panels, back panels, side panels or nor'easters, sou-westers—anything goes. And keeps on going, too, with no notion of stopping at the hem of the garment but only when they get good and ready.

Which reminds us that the southern boundry of the dress is still to be a mystery. Scalloped and bell-shaped and in flounces or tiers, we have the petal effect. The front panel may be longer than the skirt elsewhere or the back panel resemble a train. The skirt may be slit up the sides and display ankles generously, or it may be gathered at any point and show its giddy-colored facing as its circular folds sway with the walk.

As to materials, the faithful blue serge is strengthening and bids fair to be appropriate everywhere; street, house, parties, morning dress, afternoon dress, evening dress, everything but the night-dress. It may even become "the rage." Imagine our staid old friend in that role! It will be combined in all sorts of undreamed of affiliations; and as for service—well, everybody knows it is the last word. Crepe de chine will continue a favorite and cashmere will prove a close rival.

Soft materials will predominate, for which pudgy women should thank their lucky stars, since these drape prettily and give the look of grace which stiff stuffs deny.

And O Friend Stubby, rejoice! You are no longer condemned to spend a pre-function hour matching the hooks and eyes on the back of us. It's up to us now to slink in the best we can. Garments, from the bungalow apron to the banquet gown, are slip-over, with nary a button except for ornament.

Speaking of ornament, we are becoming indulgent. Fringe, long and sneaking, flowers of ribbon and chiffon, glimmering novelties which resemble the decorations on a wedding cake, beads, spangles, and even fruits—so scarce this year in our jars—are resplendent on our apparel; currants, cherries and great clusters of grapes. Wont we look peachy?

Black is still popular, but we are abandoning its post-bellum denseness and are livening it with warm orange and flaming reds. One wonders why these colors have not already burned themselves out after blazing through this unparalled hot summer.

As to sleeve, it would seem that we must be either total abstainers or completely soused. Sleeves are as nil as befits Homer's "white armed Juno," or they will dip into the soup. Standing with arms akimbo, the cuff of some burlesque sisters will drop below the skirt hem. These leviathan sleeves are evolved from the Japanese—in spite of our Yap relations. They appear to come along sanely and in good order as far as the elbow when they radiate off into bell-shape ranging in circumference at the cuff anywhere from a small yard to three. If you have a trick up your sleeve these days, you might as well make it a big trick.

Children's Fetes for Vacation

Midsummer brings with it the distressing question of devising new entertainment for children who, with vacation time hanging heavy on their hands, become fretful and prone to mischief.

One way of keeping the little ones occupied these vacation afternoons is suggested by a children's fete, which takes from several days to several weeks' preparation, thereby holding the attention of the children, as well as forming amusement for their parents. Characters, costumed accordingly, are taken from history and are impersonated by children. The festival may be combined with a program given by adults.

This fete brings to mind the activities of the children of "yesterday" as noted in this picture of Nell Roy Buck and Charles Eaton who play the parts of "Mimsy and Gogo" in George Fitzmaurice's Paramount production of "Peter Ibbetson" in which Elsie Ferguson and Wallace Reid are co-starred. Here they are seen in one of the olden pastimes of children, a game that tended to make them more courteous and developed a quality of consideration both for their playmates and for their parents.

With the Women of Today

Mrs. Porter.

Our many prosperous business men who started with two cents invested in newspapers or a dollar saved in the bank and climbed to fame and fortune are not the only ones who have amassed wealth from almost nothing. There are plenty of women in the business world now who have done likewise. One of these is Mrs. Porter of Seattle, Wash., who started with ninety cents and now has a business which has reached the half million dollar mark.

It is an interesting bit of industrial history, and especially so because a woman made it. It was in the fall of 1906 that Mrs. Porter took her first batch of salad dressing, intended for sale, off her kitchen stove and received from her neighborhood groceryman the small sum of ninety cents. This was the sum received for six ordinary sized bottles, which represented the entire output of Mrs. Porter's kitchen for one day.

Like many other women Mrs. Porter had a recipe from which she made an exceptionally fine food product and like most women who are good cooks she was a bit afraid of the business world and merely took the praise of her friends as flattery, never expecting that she might capitalize her cooking talent. When she finally gathered enough courage to start she little thought that she was beginning a real factory. At the end of a year three groceries were taking her goods. At the end of two years a hundred stores were her patrons, and by the end of the fourth year almost every store in Seattle carried Mrs. Porter's products. During this time her quarters had gown from her kitchen to two extra rooms and then a real factory unit had to be built to accommodate the business.

Today she is not only housed in a modern, scientific factory with all the newest appliances and equipment, but she has added other food products to her output. Nothing has been overlooked that could with propriety be incorporated into a special food products factory, and yet the touch and flavor of home preparation remains her principal business asset.

Patience and hard work and a determination to make good are Mrs. Porter's three essential ingredients in her favorite recipe for success, which she calls her by-product. Luck or chance has no place in her recipe.

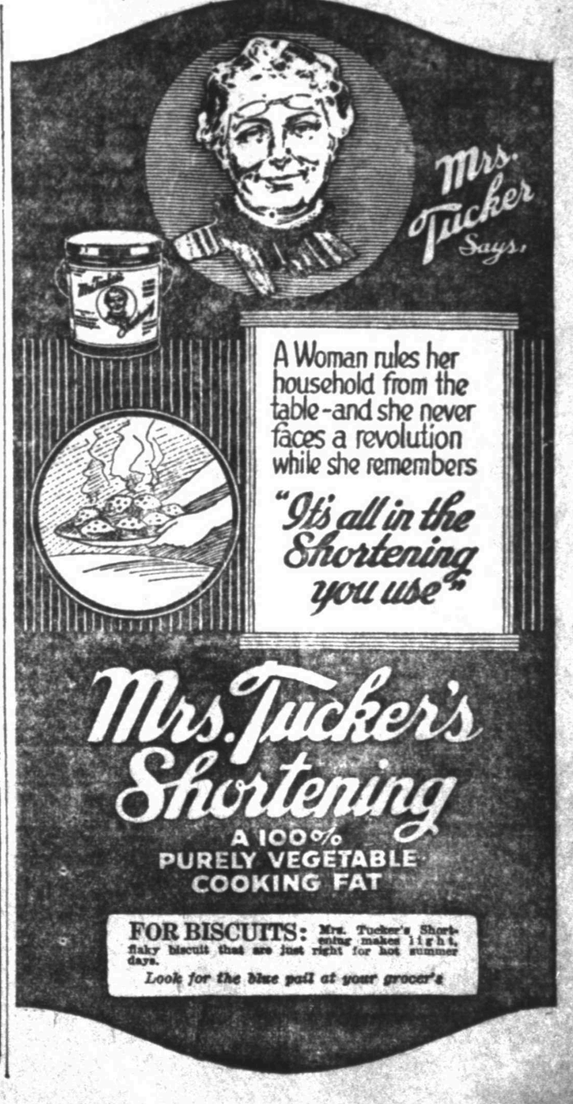

ODD BITS ABOUT WOMEN

The recent 1,000-mile Nevada desert automobile race was managed by a woman, Mrs. Carmen Jewett Wilkie of Reno. Mrs. Wilkie is secretary of the Nevada Highway Association.

In Missouri are more than 8,000 women who own and operate farms.

One out of every twenty-five farms in the United States is operated by a woman.

ROCKEFELLER KEROSENE LIGHTS WAY FOR CHILDREN OF CONFUCIUS

Henry H. Klein of New York, when his recent book estimated the fortunes of John D. Rockefeller, members of his family and the funds established by him at two billion four hundred million dollars has given further figures of the Rockefeller holdings to the New York Times, tending to show that the estate of the elder Rockefeller is steadily decreasing as the result of distribution of his wealth among other members of his family.

This distribution of the Rockefeller estate has proceeded to such an extent that Mr. Klein said to the Times, he believed from study of the Rockefeller wealth that when Mr. Rockefeller dies his estate will not exceed $500,000,000.

Mr. Klein's statement was in reply to a letter written by John D. Rockefeller Jr., in which he said his father's estate had never reached $1,000,000,000, and has been materially reduced by the large gifts from principal which he has made during recent years.

"Nowhere was it written or said that Mr. Rockefeller's estate reached a billion dollars or any other sum," said Mr. Klein. "The statement made in the newspapers in reviewing my book was that I estimated the Rockefeller fortune at $2,400,000,000. This, the newspapers explained and my book states, includes the holdings of John D. Sr., John D. Jr., his sisters, and the Foundations. Mr. Rockefeller did not contradict this estimate.

"There is no doubt that the estate of Br. Rockefeller Sr. will be less than a billion dollars, because most of his wealth has passed from his hands, according to reports. A 1921 stock list of the Standard Oil company of New Jersey, the leading Standard Oil company, shows that John D. Sr., holds only 1,000 shares of preferred stock (par value $100,000) and no common stock, while John D. Jr., holds 452,080 shares of common and 38,970 preferred, valued together at about $70,000,000. In 1919, John D. Sr., held 140,130 shares and John D. Jr., 63,020 shares. Alta Rockefeller Prentice, sister of John D. Rockefeller Jr., holds 80,000 shares common and 6,120 preferred; Mrs. Edith R. McCormick, another sister, holds 33,280 common and 45,000 preferred; the Rockefeller Foundation has 196,000 shares common and 55,000 preferred; and the Laura Spelman Rockefeller Memorial Fund 40,000 common and 19,000 preferred. Mrs. Elisa S. Prentiss of Cleveland is holder of record of 135,440 shares of common.

"The same situation with regard to the shrinkage of John D. Rockefeller's holdings is true with regard to the Standard Oil Company of Indiana. Robert W. Gumbel, secretary of John D. Jr., holds 65,000 shares; Harry P. Fish, secretary of John D. Sr., 6,500 shares; Andrew H. Bates, another Rockefeller 'dummy,' 6,500 shares; Rockefeller Foundation, 29,718; General Education Board, 4,425; William Rockefeller, 2,000, and the Equitable Trust Co., controlled by Mr. Rockefeller, 24,000.

"Mr. Gumbel is 'dummy' for the Rockefellers, in other corporations. He holds 11,700 shares Consolidated Gas, per value, $1,170,000 and 45,486 shares Consolidated Coal Co., par value $4,548,500; besides other securities. Harry P. Fish holds 9,200 Consolidated Gas, 43,092 Consolidated Coal and other securities. Betram Cutler, another Rockefeller 'dummy,' holds 10,300 shares Consolidated Gas and 43,721 Consolidated Coal, besides other securities. Bates holds similar securities.

"The money given to colleges and for other philanthropic and educational purposes is money that should have come to you and me through our government as the result of taxation," said Mr. Klein, adding that the money so set aside is tax exempt.

Much of the Rockefeller wealth is in tax exempt securities, Mr. Klein said, Mr. Rockefeller having bought, according to current report $100,000,000 of Liberty bonds, mostly of the first issue, and holding New York City unregistered bonds to an amount which Mr. Klein believes is $50,000,000.

John D. Rockefeller is a very old man. He is one of the most remarkable men the world of commerce and finance has ever known. He built up the gigantic organization known as the Standard Oil Company. As a matter of course, he had associates who were supermen in their respective fields of constructive endeavor. There are thousands of wage earners on the payroll of the Standard Oil and subsidiary corporations. There are hundreds of the highest salaried men in the world employed by the parent corporation and its offspring.

John D. Rockefeller Jr., is on his way to Japan and China. China is a rich trading field for the Standard for it was the agents of the Standard that introduced the kerosene oil lamp to the children of Confucius. Before its coming rush lights and tapers and crude tallow dips were the illuminating agencies employed to light the Mongol on his way.

There are geologists who say that there are vast deposits of oil in China. Some day this wealth will be developed and some day there will be vast refineries and pipelines and storage houses in the Flowery Kingdom.

In the world wide battle for control of the petroleum industry, if the race is to be to the strongest and the shrewdest and the cunning are ever the strong and the shrewd, to be brutally frank about it, the Record News is for "American First." If it is to be a race between the American Standard, the Dutch Shells and John Bull, "here's to the American combination." And this isn't a defense of monopoly, fortunes which are staggering or combinations amazing in their millions and their power.

LUCIAN PARRISH'S INDICTMENT OF REPUBLICAN CONGRESS

Seldom, if ever, have the big interests had such a hold on the government in Washington as it has at this time. This fact is not only evident to the Democrats but to some of the Republicans as well. Representative Frear, a Republican from Wisconsin, has made the charge direct in connection with the dye schedule, and has fearlessly charged that the Chemical Foundation has attempted to influence three members of President Harding's cabinet, and in the Evening Star of Monday, August 8, 1921, he is quoted as saying:

"No invisible government has shown more brazen effrontery than this dye monopoly. We may well be concerned over the power of these dye interests that reach three cabinet officers in their efforts to perpetuate their present exclusive powers in this county."

In the same paper, Representative Keller, a Republican from Minnesota, makes the direct charge that the influence of Wall street is in the saddle in Washington. For the benefit of the country at large I quote the article in full just as it appeared:

Charges Wall Street Controls Government—Representative Keller Attacks Administration and Ways and Means Committee.

Charging that the machinery of government has been commandeered by a little clique, ignorant of the A B C's of economics, whose blind obedience to Wall Street is responsible for the stupid, selfish, short-sighted policy that is retarding our prosperity and creating profound distrust and discontent among the people, Representative Keller, of Minnesota, independent Republican, delivered an attack upon the administration generally and on the House Ways and Means Committee particularly for its handling of tax and tariff problems in a statement issued last night.

Declaring that most members of the house want to carry out the people's wishes with regard to taxation and other economic questions, Mr. Keller says a "little dominant minority has tied down the safety valve of free discussion until an explosion impends which will scatter the Republican party from Maine to California."

"The president has assumed more power than any of his predecessors," Mr. Keller continues, "and tells congress what bills to pass and what not to pass. Bills concocted at secret conferences are introduced without being referred to responsible committees."

If the charges made by these distinguished Republicans are true, if, as Representative Frear says, the invisible government is showing such brazen effrontery, then the big powers will have their way in the writing of the revenue laws, and if they do, it does not take a prophet to foretell the result. The plain American who needs our help most will not have a chance in the hands of the Republicans, who have an overwhelming majority.

The harmful effect of unjust tax burdens is seen in many different ways. It kills the initiative of our people, discourages investments, retards the sale of lands, and makes it more difficult for our people to get homes and causes the withdrawal of capital from business by driving it into so-called frozen assets, such as tax-exempt securities. Already men of large means are investing their money in such securities. In the past few years we have seen the personal wealth of the country so rapidly segregated into tax-free securities that whereas the taxable income of the individual taxpayers in 1916 was $992,972,985, in 1917 it was reduced to $731,372,053 and in 1918 it was further reduced to $392,248,329, and it is now estimated that at least $15,000,000,000 of tax-exempt securities are now outstanding, and it would seem from this that we should give careful study to the question of restricting the further issuance by the government of tax-exempt securities.

In conclusion, let me say that the American people want a reduction in taxes and not a shifting of its burdens, and they will take no deception. Results and not promises is what they demand. They will accept no subterfuge.—Congressional Record.

Congressman Parrish is a Democrat. He is the representative of the people of this district. It is the mission of the Record News to place before its readers the news of the day, the views of the servants of the people, an impartial review of the men and the measures uppermost in order that all the people may understand.

There has been a Republican congress, Republican in both houses since 1918. There has been a Republican administration in power since March 4, 1921.

Have the pledges been redeemed?

Have the platform promises been fulfilled?

Have the people been given relief?

Last November the American people voted for a change. They voted to retire the Democratic party from power. They voted because they were being pinched financially. They voted because promised that the tax load would be made lighter.

Administrations, like individuals, are judged largely by the records they make. There is a Republican administration in power and the people are looking to that administration to establish a record that will be a redemption of pledges and fulfillment of promises. If not, there will be another change, politically speaking in the congressional elections the country over next year.

SCHOOL OF PUBLIC HEALTH.

Plans for the organization of a School of Public Health in Harvard University, with the aid of an initial gift of $1,785,000 by the Rockefeller Foundation, were announced today by the University and the officers of the Foundation.

An excellent general course for the training of public health officers, as well as special courses in preventive medicine, in tropical medicine and industrial hygiene, have already been developed at Harvard. The work has been hampered, however, by lack of adequate funds, and by uneven growth.

The new school will provide opportunities for research, will unify existing courses, and will offer new or extended teaching facilities in public health administration, vital statistics, immunology, bacteriology, medical zoology, physiological hygiene, and communicable diseases.

For the housing of the school, the University hopes to secure an existing building of very suitable character immediately adjacent to the Medical School. Funds for the purchase and equipment of the building will be drawn from the gift of the Rockefeller Foundation.

The cost of maintenance and development of the school will be met from endowment funds in part set aside by the University and in part contributed by the Foundation. The Foundation's immediate appropriations to the project will aggregate $1,780,000. The arrangement also provides for further gifts, if the growth of the school seems to demand it, to any amount which not exceed $500,000.

Though the School of Public Health at Harvard will have its headquarters in a well-equipped building of its own and have its own separate faculty and administration, it will be developed in close relations with other divisions of the University, especially the Medical School.

The administration buildings of the two schools will, it is hoped, stand side by side on the same grounds; certain heads of departments will be members of both faculties; and a number of laboratories and lecture rooms will be used in common.

The school will be able to co-operate with a large number of laboratories, hospitals and public health agencies in Boston and thus afford its students unusual opportunities for first-hand investigation and practical field experience.

In addition, the school, through co-operative relations with a number of manufacturing and commercial corporations, will be able to offer the students practical experience in industrial hygiene.

Rippling Rhymes

SCOLDED

I'm tired of being scolded by highly moral folk, whose thin lips ne'er unfolded to laugh at any joke. So earnestly crusading to have all evils banned, for years they've been parading across the weary land; so stern is their demeanor they leave me stricken dumb, as they denounce the wiener, and curse the stick of gum. Their banners freely holding, they push themselves along, and scolding, always scolding, they bore the human throng. If they would spring some laughter, hand out a timely jest, they'd see me follow after with far more pep and zest; but they all balk at humor as up the heights they climb; they think a joke's a bloomer, and happiness a crime. Crusades might be swarming and not stir up my bile, if they would try reforming with something like a smile; but they are always bitter while handing out their jolts; they never chirp or twitter or kick around like colts. They never try to josh us or jolly us along, but, grim, severe and cautious, they tell us where we're wrong. They never try to fold us to bosoms warm and true, but stand around and scold us, and swipe our home made brew. They never try to lead us, with love light in their lamps, but bludgeon us and bleed us and call us sinful scamps. Oh, I might well be molded to suit the moral law, but that I have been scolded until my nerves are raw.

There might be one straight, but I doubt it.
I won't bother even to go to the polls;
But they oughter do something about it."

"I see by the papers," said Millionaire Bly,
"They'll choose a new administration.
But what can we do when the voting's done by

"I taught school among my own people in the Tennessee mountains for several years after I graduated from college," a southern lecturer says.

"Funny things happened. Hearing a boy say 'I ain't gwine thar', I said to him: "That's no way to talk. Listen: 'I am not going there; we are no going there; they are not going there.' Do you get the idea?"

"Well, you see," said the first beggar woman, stroking her new coat complacently, "I didn't tell her I was begging for myself. I pretended I was begging for the heathen."

written word as he tells it, Brann's Iconoclast would be tame literature if placed along side of the wrathful and lurid brain and tongue creations of the founder of the Hall County Herald.

W. L. Garner of the Chillicothe News, is a unique individual with a unique history. He is on the sunny side of forty, he is a product of Lamar County and when nineteen he invaded the old Indian Territory with a sack of type and an old hand press. Legal printing was a rich prize in those days. Judge James Alexander at one time of the Court of Criminal Appeals of Oklahoma and now an oil millionaire and lawyer, and Garner were partners in a newspaper enterprise. Garner became the political king of Choctaw county and after statehood came, he was one of the lieutenants of the Hon. Charles N. Haskell. Success followed him. He cleaned up twenty thousand dollars publishing a weekly newspaper. Then he invaded politics, was elected first to the lower house and then to the upper house of the Oklahoma legislature. It is not of record that he ever served in the third house. For a youngster, he made political history and when Lee Cruse became governor, Garner was a thorn in his political side. In political circles of Oklahoma he was known as Choctaw Garner, an individual who hoed his own row or as they say in Arkansas, "Totes his own Skillet." Politics wrecked Choctaw. He retired from the game dead broke and with a weak lung, to cheer him on his way. He deserted Oklahoma and tarried a while at Carlsbad. Then he invaded Fisher county, found a country newspaper for sale, gave a banker his note for the purchase price and then touched the banker for fifty dollars cash to buy rollers and other supplies. There were three newspapers in Fisher county when Choctaw lit there. He owned them all in three years and then consolidated the three. It is said to be a matter of history that the late H. B. Terrell decided that he needed the Fisher County newspaper to complete his chain of weekly publications. He paid Choctaw forty-five hundred dollars in cash for a nine hundred dollar plant and the Choctaw was on his feet again. He tarried a while at Abilene, prospected the state over and finally purchased the Chillicothe News where he is making money and says that he has found "God's country at last." Choctaw has a wife and two interesting boys. Mrs. Garner is a writer and practical business woman; the oldest son is going through the college of journalism attached to the University of Oklahoma while Carl, the younger, who is the baby member of the Northwest Texas Press Association, is an experienced linotype operator and is good for eight galleys a day. Some companionable chap is Choctaw Garner and some interesting family is the Choctaw Garner partner and boys. All four are baseball fans, all four love athletic sports and all four say there is "no place like home"—speaking of course of Chillicothe.

MURDER GANG BLAMED FOR MANY DEATHS

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—Murder victims of the "good killers" gang of New York hired assassins may total more than one hundred, it was estimated today by detectives investigating the conspiracy.

Six alleged members of the gang are held in the tombs here today, in connection with the murder of Carmelo Caizzo, near Asbury Park, N. J. They are Bartolo Fontano, the informer; Vito Bonventre, Francesco Puma, Mariano Galante, Guiseppe Lombardi and Bartolomeo Di Gregio. The only charge against the last named is unlawful possession of a revolver.

Bloody trails of the "good killers" were being followed today to Pittsburgh, Chicago, Buffalo, Detroit and to several cities in New Jersey.

Most of the gang's murders are believed to have occurred in New York, Detroit and Chicago. The conspirators have been linked up with seventeen New York killings. Seventy Italian murders remain unexplained in Detroit and more than twenty in Chicago. Most of these may be traced to the "killers."

The "good killers" was an organization of professional murderers, police say, which acted under instructions sent by the head of the secret society in Sicily. Its object was removal of persons who had caused enmity among its members.

FREDERICK VILLIERS.

Frederick Villers, the famous British war correspondent and artist, was honored with a civil list pension of 100 pounds during the last financial year, according to a dispatch from London. He is in his seventieth year. He began his career as war correspondent in Serbia in 1876 and since then he has described and pictured battles all over the globe.

FREDERIC VILLIERS

Mr. Villers is credited with being the first to use the cinematograph on the field of battle and the first to ride on the march of an army. His experience keenly sharpened his foresight. In a lecture in Montreal in 1910 he said:

"Aviation will play a great part in the war of the future and the country that has developed aviation the highest will be the strongest one. It would be a splendid thing for Canada to lead the way and be ready for the coming war. 'The coming war'. With whom? It is difficult to say with whom first, but with Germany sooner or later."

AN APPEAL

Editor Record News:

To Whom It May Concern:

This is to certify that I know a gentleman in our city who is in a bad condition and who has been for seven months trying to get him a position as he is not able to do heavy work on account of his condition. He has no visible means of support and is trying to make it through the best he can. Anyone feeling an interest in him and his soul's welfare can call at the Record News for his name. He says that Wichita Falls has some of the best people in the world and it will always have a warm spot in his heart. I know there are people here in Wichita Falls that always lend a helping hand. I never thought, when I came to Wichita Falls that I would meet with as generous hearted people as there are in Wichita Falls. If there is any one who needs a man to look after their automobiles and their home and keep them in good condition I will live on the premises as I have no one but myself. I am an ex-locomotive engineer but am not able to do heavy lifting or heavy work for some time to come. I have laid off since January 8, but I hope some day that the fortune will look brighter than the past, but at present the conditions of the country is in very bad shape as far as work is concerned. I would like to hear from anyone in regard to a position.

SPUDS GET 50-50 SPLIT IN TWIN BILL, WINNING FIRST 5-4 AND LOSING SECOND TO BUFFS 0-2

By C. F. CARTER

"Half a loaf is better
Than no bread at all;
When you win one in the summer
You can't lose it in the fall;
Oh, even-Steven's fair enough,
In fact, it's rather nifty,
To spend a pleasant afternoon
And come out fifty-fifty."
—By Optimistic Oscar

We told Oscar his first two lines—were a little short, but he replied that the other lines were a little too long—which only added to the emphasis of his fifty-fifty argument; so we surrendered, and decided to agree with him that the Battling and Banged-Up Spudders performed bravely and well yesterday when they divided a twin bill with the Buffs, winning the first 5 to 4, and losing the second tussle 0 to 2.

Abe Bowman had rather a busy Sabbath as a participant in both contests. Abe relieved Dorough in the eighth inning of the curtain-raiser, when the Rabbit began to weaken slightly, and he succeeded Rube Marshall in the fifth canto of the second battle—and in each instance Big Abe held the Buffs scoreless for the balance of his working period.

Rube Marshall hurled a good brand of ball in the second game, but he served just one shoot that spilled the gravy. He laid one in the groove in the second inning of the final struggle, with Charlie Miller on first base, and two men out—and Mister Bottomley busted 'at ol' apple clear out of the park via the right field fence route. Those two runs were quite sufficient to win, as Eddie Donalds, the ancient and venerable and respected Eddie, was traveling like the Shasta Limited; and the Spudders couldn't do a thing worth mentioning to Edward's offerings.

Hit the Ball Hard

That first game was either a pitcher's battle or a batting contest—take your pick. Each club massaged the pill for nine safeties, but the Spudders succeeded in squeezing out one more tally than the Buffs. Dorough went big in the early innings, but weakened badly in the fifth, walked two men and wielded three hits. George Whiteman as usual did the dirty work with the willow and drove in three runs in that frame with a two-bagger.

Skipper George also was responsible for the Buffs' fourth run in the seventh, when he singled to left, scoring Bailey, who had earlier singled to right and stolen second.

The Spudders had their big frame when the game opened. McElwee led off with a single to center, and went to third a minute later when Griffith threw the ball into center field. Tanner hit to third who fumbled, McElwee scoring. Buddy was nipped off first by Pitcher Pierotti. Tex McDonald singled to right, and strolled home when Danny Clark belted a lusty triple against the left center field fence. Bischoff fouled out to Griffith, but Cecil Griggs brought Danny home with a hit through the box. With Caddy Works up, Griggs was thrown out at second attempting to steal.

Another Spudder tally was registered in the third, when Tex McDonald slapped 'er over the right field fence for the circuit. It was a mighty wallop, and later proved extremely useful.

The fifth run for our gang came in the sixth frame, when Danny Clark slammed out his second three-bagger, and scored on Bischoff's sacrifice fly to center.

Hard Game to Lose

The second game was a tough one to lose, and the two clubs might have battled into darkness had Mister Bottomley not been so unkind as to uncork that circuit wallop in the second. The Spuds had chances to score in the fifth and seventh frames (the second game was seven innings by agreement) but the old punch was missing.

In the fifth Griggs walked and went to second while Blades was throwing out Works. Kitchens fouled out to third, and Ramsey, batting for Marshall, struck out after fouling half a dozen.

In the ninth Bischoff led off with a single to left. Griggs fanned. Works hit to Blades who fumbled, Caddy being safe at first and Bischoff going to second. Kitchens, however, flied to Johnny Baggan in deep left, and Abe Bowman popped to Eddie Donalds.

As we believe we have remarked before on various occasions, today is another day. Today is OUR day all day!

STAMFORD TEAM DISBANDS AFTER GOOD SEASON

STAMFORD, Texas, Aug. 21.—The Stamford Independent baseball team which has played more games, and won more than ay other independent team in the west, and perhaps of the state, practically disbanded this afternoon, after playing with Haskell. The team has been financially supported by the citizens and today the guarantors were released from further obligations. The team will remain intact until the first of September, playing the rest of the scheduled games on its own book.

About half of the members of the team are local men, while the others come from different sections. Roy Morton, who has been the captain, and playing manager of the team will remain here for some time, and the local fans will likely arrange for his return next season, as well as all of the other players that the can secure.

"DEVIL DOGS" AND EXPORTERS STAGE BATTLE

TENNIS MARVEL SNAPPED IN ACTION AND AT REST SINCE ARRIVAL IN U. S

Mlle. Lenglen in two characteristic poses.

These pictures of Suzanne Lenglen, French marvel of the courts, were taken since her arrival in New York a few days ago. One shows her very much in action on the courts at Forest Hills, L. I., in a practice set. The other, taken after she had played a while, shows her powdering her nose. Mlle. Lenglen is very much a woman, despite her remarkable ability as a tennis player.

MARKET FAILS TO KEEP PACE IN HIGH TREND

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—Financial markets this week failed to keep pace with the brighter business outlook reported by competent observers in various sections of the country. Stocks of the better class were barely steady, while many of the speculative groups displayed greater weakness.

Public interest again was almost wholly lacking and no support from that quarter is looked for until congress makes known its attitude regarding the funding of railroad obligations and the proposed tax revision program assumes concrete form.

There was a fair demand for bonds and several new capitalist issues were readily absorbed. In the main, however, the investment inqurry was limited to rails and some of the better known foreign flotations. Liberty issues reflected further liquidation.

Conditions in the basic industries again were exemplified by the further wage cut of the United States steel corporation, independent manufacturers increased their output on lower price schedules but the average of production was estimated at below 25 per cent.

In the many lines contributory of steel and iron, notably equipments, production continued at low ebb. Motor oil, rubber, tobacco, sugar and paper shares were among the many low records of the week. Heaviness of mail order issues testified to the light purchasing power among the farming element.

Large sums of money came into the local market from the interior but the best open rate for call loans was five half per cent. Time loans extending beyond sixty days were mainly restricted to commercial projects on prime collaterals.

Uncertainty continued to mark the course of foreign exchange. Local rates were governed almost entirely by London, conflicting reports arose regarding the retention of the bank rate. Unsettlement of Dutch and Scandinavian exchanges was popularly ascribed to heavy selling at those centers of German marks.

He fought the Germans, and he faced
Fierce Moros, with the bolo—
But he was walloped off the map
When he tried water polo!

If you hear two men addressed as "Judge" the haughtier looking of the two is usually the one who got his title at the race track.

The old pictures of Satan are wrong. Umpires, referees and dog-show judges do not wear hoofs or horns.

"HOW'S THE CATS COMING OUT" WAS CRY OF FANS

"How's Fort Worth coming out?"

You couldn't hear anything elese in our fair city last evening, after the Spudders had split their doubleheader with Houston. Fort Worth at the last report was leading Galveston 4-2—and then someone had butted in on one of the private wires downtown and slipped over the information that Galveston had won the game, 5 to 2. Apparently that couldn't be so—and about 'steen hundred Wichita Falls fans fretted and fumed in doubt and uncertainty.

The A. P. wires were clogged with American and National league box scores, and nary a word was coming in regarding that Cats-Crab tussle. If Fort Worth won, the Panthers would be crawling up half a game on the Spuds—and that was a tiny item of general interest to a large majority of Wichita Falls citizens.

The Texas league has not in years known keener interest in a pennant race than is being shown at the present time in the three-cornored battle among the Cats, Spudders and Marines. Dallas has been losing ground steadily, and unless Ham Patterson's club takes a brace in short order, the Marines can kiss their chance goodbye. But the Spudders and Panthers are running neck and neck. Fort Worth back in good shape again, and the Spudders, their outfield shot to ribbons by injuries to Beecher and Miller, fighting desperately for every game.

And then the A. P. wires became unclogged, and a certain story appeared stating that "loose playing behind Slim McGrew cost Galveston the third game of the series with Fort Worth," etc. etc.

Boys, she's a battle—and she's just started!

WILD CATTLE ROAM HILLS OF OZETTE INDIAN RESERVE

To hunt down a herd of wild cattle seen on the Ozette Indian reservation in the Olympic peninsula, an expedition headed by C. J. Albrecht, taxidermist of the Washington state museum, is soon to leave for the mountain wilds.

The herd are the descendents of a tame herd abandoned by a settler twenty years ago and are said to be more dangerous than bear, cougar or wildcat. The Ozette Indians report many long-haired, wild-eyed cattle living in the foothills and venturing down the river courses in midsummer. In these grazing lands the cattle can never be exterminated, as the country is too rough for the average hunter and can be entered only on horseback. It is fifty miles from a white settlement and in winter is snowbound.

The natives declare that on sight of human beings the bulls become enraged, often treeing hunters and trappers. When questioned as to why they did not shoot the cows or calves for meat the Indians replied that it was tough and tasted like cedar oil.

HOT DRY WEATHER DAMAGING CROPS

Special to The Record News.

STAMFORD, Texas, Aug. 21.—Dry hot weather continues in this section and the deterioration in cotton is becoming more perceptible. Feed ripened in time to escape, still it is going to be shorter than was at first predicted.

It isn't exactly correct to say that players "fear" Babe Ruth. There's nothing to fear, when you compare Ruth to Cobb or Sisler. Those birds are likely to knock your arm or leg off, but Ruth either fans out or hits them over the fence, and, in either case, nobody can be injured.

Many college stars want tennis rated as a major sport. You'd think it was a major sport, all right, if you ever played a few sets on a hard court, and under a blazing summer sun.

CLEVELAND AND YANKS IN HOT RACE

NEW YORK, Aug. 21—The Cleveland worlds champions and their New York Yankee rivals are stumbling along in their efforts to outdistance each other in the American league pennant race, while Pittsburgh now has little to fear from the New York Giants in the National chase.

In the American league, New York is outbatting Cleveland at present, but there is little to choose between the pitching strength of the two teams Washington is tightening its grip on third place. Boston continued its good play of the previous two weeks and climbed to fifth place, close behind St. Louis.

The Pittsburgh Nationals have a firm grasp on the pennant. If the Pirates win 20 of their remaining 39 games, New York could go into first place only by winning 26 out of 36.

With the Giants faltering, Boston sees hope of capturing second place. The Braves moundsmen are no performing in the manner that carried the team along in mid-July, but the team batting partly is offsetting this weakness. Brooklyn braced when St. Louis threatened its fourth place position. Cincinnati is doing the best of the second division teams.

FIRES CAUSE SOME DAMAGE

Two fires occurred Sunday afternoon, one destroying a garage belonging to F. F. McKinsey, at 610 Van Buren street, for about $750 damage, at 3 o'clock, and the other at a servant's house in the rear of Herbert Gray's residence, at 1906 Elizabeth street, about 5 o'clock, causing about $50 damage to the interior of the small house.

Small boys seeking the garage as a place to steal a whiff of the forbidden weed are thought to have caused the garage fire, while the servant's house is said to have been started by an electric iron.

The garage, which was damaged about $750, had no insurance on it. It was discovered, however, in time recover an automobile without damage.

The fire department, in both cases, responded quickly and had little trouble in putting quick end to the flames. Good work was done, especially at the garage fire by preventing the flames, which had gained good headway from spreading to the house which was close by. Some damage by water was caused to the McKinney home, it is reported.

CHAMBER ASKS LOW RATES ON TEXAS GRAINS

Special to the Record News.

DALLAS, Aug. 21.—The Texas Chamber of Commerce has forwarded to the Interstate Commerce commission at Washington a brief consisting of 43 pages in a case recently filed by the corporation commission of Oklahoma in an effort to secure a reduction in rates on grain and grain products from Oklahoma to Texas. The brief is filed by the Texas Chamber of Commerce for Interventors, including the Texas Grain Dealers association and other interested organizations.

In the complaint filed by the corporation commission of Oklahoma, February 2, 1921, they alleged that carload rates on grain and grain products, hay, straw, and articles taking same rates or rates basing thereon, from Oklahoma to all points in Texas, were unjust, unreasonable, unduly prejudicial, and preferential in favor of producing areas in Texas, Arkansas, New Mexico, and Louisiana. The case was set down for hearing in Oklahoma City, March 16, before an Interstate Commerce commission examiner. The Texas Chamber of Commerce and other interested organizations appeared at the hearing and filed interventions in opposition to the petition of the corporation commission of Oklahoma.

During the hearing of the case considerable evidence was introduced by Texas carriers in an effort to show that the rates between Texas points on the commodities involved were too low; and, that if as alleged there is any discrimination against traffic from Oklahoma to Texas, it was because of the fact that rates between Texas points were too low, and that the remedy would be an increase in the rates between Texas points.

The brief, which the Texas Chamber of Commerce is today filing with the Interstate Commerce commission, is largely devoted to this feature of the case. It is claimed by the Texas Chamber of Commerce that rates between Texas points are already as high as the traffic will bear and on the same general level as interstate rates on grain and grain products throughout the Southwestern states.

ATTEMPTS MATING OF LAST TWO OF WHISTLING SWANS

DENVER, Aug. 21.—What are believed to be the only two North American whistling swans in existence are today cavorting about a small pond in Denver City park.

The birds are valued at $2,500 each. The male bird is owned by H. O. Jackson, of this city, while the mate is the property of Judge R. M. Barnes of Laton, Ill.

The pair will be used for breeding purposes, in an effort to prevent the extermination of this rare specimen of the web-footed bird.

Bird 75 Years Old.

The male bird is seventy-five years old and his mate but fifteen. They have black bills and a touch of orange under their eyes; otherwise the pair is pure white.

"Seventy-five years is far from being an advanced age for a swan," Jackson declared. "They live ordinarily to the age of one hundred and fifty years.

"So far as I know these are the only two whistling swans in existence, the last of their line. That's why I am eager that they mate and raise their young. If they do not it means the extermination of this graceful type of swan.

Mate Is Found.

"I have owned the male bird for some time. I searched the country before I found a mate. I am convinced that they are the only two whistling swans now alive. Judge Barnes, of Lafen, Ill., sent the female bird to me, and for a time I kept the pair on my private lake. But this lake proved too small for breeding purposes, and it is crowded, also, with swans of other species. So I turned the pair over to the keeping of City park officials until the young can be raised.

A peculiarity of this type of swan is the whistling call they use. They do their whistling mostly at mating time."

Secret Report Reveals How Reds Plan to Disrupt Orient By Schools of Propaganda

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—How Soviet Russia planned to conquer Turkestan and use it "as a bridge to India," and the progress they are making in the Near East, Persia and India itself is disclosed in reports reaching here of the work of Commissar Eliawa, of the Department of Eastern Propaganda in Moscow and head of the Turko-Commission to Asia Minor. Eliawa was also sent to Angora with presents from Moscow to the Turkish Communists.

Hatred of Great Britain characterizes the whole report of the Commissar. The British soldiers in Baku are spoken of as "impudent mercenaries," and predictions are made that the Bolshevists "will dispose, not of hundreds of thousands, but of millions of their Asiatic fellow-combatants.'

"John Bull knows this and already shows his teeth, powerless in the sight of the bridle we shall throw over him in India," the report declares.

"Create Political Difficulties"

"Naturally neither Moscow nor we of the Turko-Commission labored under the illusion that the Mahometans of Turkestan were prepared to adopt Socialism," the report continues. "We believed and knew, however, that these same Mahmometans, if even only an outward adoption of Bolshevism could be achieved, would play the part of a bridge over which the Soviet government could reach the neighboring eastern countries, and that it would thus be possible to create political difficulties for the Entente, and especially for England.

"Our network of agitation gradually spread, and today its branches stretch to Afghanistan and from there to northern India."

The first "fortress of Mahometan Absolutism" claimed by the Soviet missionaries was Khiva. The Khan of Khiva fled and a local communist regime was established which concluded a treaty with the Russian commissars.

"Attention was then directed toward Afghanistan. All the Ameer's attempts to combat the movement failed and the renewal of friendly relations with the English on the basis of a united front against Bolshevism only served to alienate the sympathies of his entourage at Court. This delighted the agitators, who in the autumn were able to report the erection of a Bolshevist radio station at Kabul.

"In Samarkand," the report continues, "we have the best school for the training of propagandists and of members of the organizations." In nine months this school turned out 3,500 trained instructors, including 950 Hindus, 400 Tajiks, 750 Turkomans and Kara Kirghises, 1,300 Sarts and Afghans, 270 Bokharans and Khivans and 250 Mongols, Tibestans Kurads and so forth. Chief attention was paid to the representatives of the Indian races and only fully converted Socialists were sent to India.

The propaganda school is not confined to Turkestan, but has branches throughout Southern Asia, as far as China. The most valuable classes are those recently established in Benares and Delhi, which are working splendidly under the eyes of the English, the report states. Founded in July of last year, the organization within three months contained 91,000 active members paying subscriptions, 120,000 pounds sterling had been collected, and the regular monthly subscriptions amounted to 15,000 pounds.

Eliawa stated that propaganda work in the Caucasus was impeded by incessant revolts and because the Cossacks and peasants of the Northern Caucasus, under the influence of the "Whites and Social Traitors," resisted all Soviet reforms. The Red army therefore decided to cut the Gordian knot by concentrating on Azerbaijan. The Turko-Tartar population was quickly expelled by Turkish agents and Russian instructors, who compliment themselves upon having chosen the right moment to assault the prestige of the Entente among the inhabitants. The Bolshevist landing at Ensell, the subsequent advance into at Derbentiand Petrovsk are quoted at Derbentiand Petrovsk are cuoted as victories which led up to the formation of a Soviet in Baku and a Red base in the Caucasus.

KING ALEXANDER REPORTED BETTER

MONARCH OF JUGO-SLAVIA RECOVERING FROM ATTACK OF APPENDICITIS.

PARIS, Aug. 21.—The condition of King Alexander of Jugo-Slavia, who, it was announced yesterday, was holding his own, and to be considered out of immediate danger from his recent attack of appendicitis, is now on the upward trend, according to the official bulletin on his illness issued today. The syndicalist newspaper, the People, reiterates today its assertion that Alexander is in good health, but is refusing to return to Serbia and to ascend the throne.

"Alexander's hesitancy to accept the crown has now grown into a decision to refuse the throne," the newspaper says. "Two loving hearts in a cottage are preferable to a throne and subjects in our days," it adds.

Special message of July 28, said the bethrothal to Prince Regent Alexander to princess Sophie of Vendome, daughter of Prince Emmanual, Duke of Vendome and Alenion, has been announced in Belgrade despatches.

BREAKS GIVE SUCCESS IN DIVERS WAYS

What is luck?

To open the way to an answer one must eliminate the element of foresight and shrewdness and all orderly and calculated forms of specific effort directed successfully toward a given proposition.

Luck is hard to define. Seldom do two persons have the same idea about it. It may be stated popularly as the unlooked-for obtaining of a valuable but not specified something as a result of a combination of circumstances which shaped themselves, unaided by the beneficiary, with a nicety as to time and place.

These combinations may be formed in some instances within a few minutes, but they obviously are dependent on other preceding circumstances, and these on others, and so on.

In the nursery jingle the rider was lost because his horse was lost, and both fell victims of the initial loss of a nail from the horse's shoe. From the start there was a series of incidents leading progressivgly up to the final result.

With good luck it is likely to be the same. In the first incident, which follows, one may reasonably figure that the circumstances which finally shaped themselves into luck began with the decision of the mother to permit her little daughter to drive out in a pony cart unattended, and the fact that the youth who had been in swimming happened to get into his clothes and walk down a particular street at a particular hour and minute.

Lucky in Missing a Boat.

A distinguished senior officer of the United States navy was asked about luck. He omitted mention of several evidences of it that had been part of his professional life, and jumped back to his boyhood.

He had lived in a western city, and his big ambition was to go to Annapolis. One summer afternoon he went down to a boathouse on the river for a swim. He doesn't remember why now, but he took the briefest kind of a swim—just a dive and a sprint out to a stake and back. Then he jumped into his clothes and started for home. Turning a corner he saw a pony running his way, reins dragging and a frightened little girl in the wabbling cart. He jumped and caught the pony, calmed him, and drove the little girl home. She was the daughter of the representative from the district.

There was a vacancy at the naval academy at that time and the youth was rewarded by an appointment. In a more or less lucky life, that to him was the most important stroke.

"Among tens of thousands I bought Liberty bonds 'till it hurt'," said a Staten Islander. "My count-up showed that I had $1,250 worth. Not long ago I heard that a certain piece of property was to be put on the market. In a most unexpected way I learned that same day that a development movement was heading toward the property. If I hadn't missed a boat and hadn't stood in a certain place in the ferry house while waiting for the next boat, I wouldn't have met a man I had not seen before in a year. He have me the tip quite incidentally in a chat about a little country place up-state. With my bonds as collateral, I got a 60-day option on the local plot in question. Before the end of thirty days I had completed negotiations for a sale to the developers which netted me $4,500."

A Lucky Marriage.

"It may sound fishy," said a young officer of the naval reserve, who served in the war, "but my luck came through recognizing the fact that among the gobs there were men who amounted to a lot. One of these fellows who served under me slipped me his card on the day he retired from the service, and suggested that when we were both back in civil life we might get together some time and talk things over. I accepted his invitation. He put me up at his club in New York and boosted me into the job I now hold by telling my employer I was efficient, without frills, and the kind of man who would make good at anything. He laid it on pretty thick, and it went."

A Brooklyn man who in ten years has established a prosperous business was asked what luck had done for him.

"Only this," he replied, "I married a girl who said there was but one way for a young married couple to get ahead in the world, and that was to live economically and be prepared to take advantage of an opportunity when it presented itself. The wife became the banker. An opportunity came along, and she had the capital. It was small, but enough to start with. Working together for ten years has made this," and he waved a hand toward the well filled shelves.

"Luck?" repeated a Bronx man. "Mine came through being a fisherman and going up the sound with a bunch of fellows on week-ends. On one trip a young man fell overboard. He couldn't swim, I fished him out. He's my brother-in-law now."

He Got "Auntie."

"Being nice to the ladies," said a former member of the A. E. F., "brought me luck. I went to Plattsburg and drilled myself into a second lieutenancy. While going through my paces, I met a girl who had come over from an Adirondack camp to see what sort of a job Uncle Sam was doing. She was chaperoned by a young, good-looking aunt. I was nice to auntie, got an invitation to visit the camp, and was coming along fine, when my crowd was shot over to France. I was away a year and didn't get so much as a postcard from the girl. When I returned I found she had been married for six months."

"Where was the luck in that?"

"Why, I married auntie."

Among the regular traders at the real estate auction rooms is a man who in ten years has bought and sold properties aggregating in value one million dollars. He got his start in this way; He had been a peddler, and by a chance transaction made $100 over and above his average fluctuating revenue. His first thought was to enlarge his stock and continue peddling. Walking down Third avenue he saw a sign which said: "Why not buy real estate?" On the next block he saw another sign on the window of a vacant store, in which the rental figure stood out in bold red type "$1000."

"Triangle Luck."

These two things—hunches they may be called—decided the matter for the broker. He rented the place, subleased it before the end of the month for $125, followed up by renting another vacant store and subleasing, until he had made $1,000 above expenses.

With that $1,000 he made a payment on a contract for a piece of property. To take title required $10,000. He had about a week in which to get busy. He worked night and day, but a buyer was not to be found. On the morning the lawyers telephoned to him that they were ready he went around to take a last look at the property, which he felt certain he was to lose. Just as he was turning away, downhearted, a man came up to him, asked about the property, said he could use it, got his price, and the deal was closed within an hour. It required quick work, but it went through. There was $5,000 profit in this.

"I call that triangle luck," said the broker; "the signs formed two sides of it, and the buyer the other."

Obituary

ROBERT M'INTYRE.

Robert McIntyre, for many years a resident of Wichita Falls, died Saturday at 11:30 p. m. at his home at 1401 Giddings street. The funeral will be held Monday morning at 9 o'clock at the Sacred Heart church with burial at the Carnolic cemetery, conducted by Father Boniface of the Catholic church.

Rosemont, the beautiful burial park, has been used by many as their family burial grounds. The grounds are free from rock and water. Lots sold on terms.—Adv.

Some sounds are what you might call synchronous; the crashing of the home run nbeans the clicking of the turnstiles.

LESSEN TAX BURDENS OF U. S. PEOPLE

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—The tax revision bill of 1921, estimated to cut $818,000,000 from the nation's tax burden by 1923, was passed late today by the house, 274 to 125, on an almost straight party vote.

Three democrats supported the measure and nine republicans voted against it. Compared with this number of republicans were fifty who voted for a democratic motion to recommit the bill for elimination of the provision repealing the income surtax rates about 32 per cent. This motion was lost 169 to 230, with one democrat, Campbell of Pennsylvania, voting against it.

The bill will be sent Monday to the senate where it will be taken up after the end of the recess on September 21. As finally passed by the house with nearly 100 committee amendments the bill was estimated to produce the total of $3,347,000,000 revenue this fiscal year, or $221,000,000 less than the estimate under the existing law.

As repeal of the excess profits tax and higher income surtaxes rate would not become effective until next January 1, the full force of the measure will not be reflected in government receipts until the calendar year 1923, but republican leaders say that through repeal of the transportation and other taxes, reduction in the tax bill in the next calendar year will be approximately $512,000,000. The democrats who voted for the bill were Campbell, Pennsylvania, and Dupre and Lazare, both of Louisiana.

The principal changes in present tax levies made by the tax bill as passed by the house today include:

Repeal of the excess profits tax.

Increase of the corporation income tax from 10 to 12 1-2 per cent effective next January 1.

Repeal of the income surtax rates from 32 per cent to 65 per cent inclusive.

Increased exemptions to heads of families effective of last January 1, to $2,500 for incomes not in excess of $5,000 and additional exemption for dependents to $400 from $200.

Repeal of the tax on life, fire and marine insurance policies and imposition of the corporation tax of 12½ per cent on all such insurance companies except fraternal, effective next January 1.

Repeal of the taxes on fountain drinks, ice cream, and other beverages and the substitution of manufacturers' tax as follows:

Four cents a gallon on cereal beverages, five cents a pound on carbonic acid gas; two cents a gallon on fruit juices of soft drinks, three cents a gallon still drinks exclusive of mineral and table water and ten cents a gallon on fountain syrup. These charges would go into force on enactment of the law.

Repeal of the stamp taxes on perfumery, cosmetics, toilet preparations and proprietary medicines on enactment of the bill.

Repeal of the ten per cent tax on football, baseball and basket ball equipment, skates, toboggans, snow shoes and skiis and reduction on the ten per cent to five on tennis, golf and polo equipment, games and the like whole to come into force on enactment of the bill.

Exemption from the income tax of the first $500 of income from investments in building and loan associations effective at passage of the law.

A reduction from five to three per cent on the levy on candy; and from ten to five per cent in the levies on fur articles and art and art works and repeal of the tax on electric fans. These too, would be effective when the bill became a law.

A reduction from 10 to 3 per sent on all yacht with light motors; other craft less than 32 feet in length or of less than five tons carrying capacity exempted from this tax. This provision also would be effective upon enactment of the bill.

Exemption from the income tax of of all allowances from the federal government for the service of the beneficiary of another in the military or naval forces of the United States, effective immediately if the bill becomes a law. Repeal of all the so-called luxury taxes now collected by retailers and the substitution of a manufacturers' tax of five per cent on the following articles, when sold by the manufacturers at the sums given:

Carpets and rugs $3.60 a square yard; trunks $30 each, valises, traveling bags, suitcases and hat boxes $15 each; purses, pocketbooks, shopping and hand bags $5 each; portable lighting fixtures $10 each; umbrellas and parasols $2.50 each; fans $1 each and house or smoking coats or jackets and bath or lounging robes $3 each. The changes are effective with the signing of the bill.

T. R.'S DAUGHTER WILL BE HOSTESS TO MANY DISARMAMENT DELEGATES

A new photo of Mrs. Nicholas Longworth.

Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, who formerly was Alice Roosevelt, daughter of the late Col. Theodore Roosevelt, inherits her father's wide interest in national and international affairs. She frequents the galleries of the house of representatives and the senate more than any other woman, with the exception perhaps of Congresswoman Robertson of Oklahoma. Her home is a center where officials and foreign diplomats gather in Washington, and during the disarmament conference she will be hostess to many delegates.

LEGION WILL SAVE IDEALS, BISHOP SAYS

Bishop William T. Manning.

SAN DIEGO, Calif., Aug. 17.—"The American Legion constitutes our greatest assurance of the future of American and preservation of our national ideals," declared Bishop William T. Manning of the New York diocese of the Episcopal church and rector of Trinity parish in an interview here.

"This great body of young men know what it is to give oneself to service for his country. They know how to value ideals and a righteous cause and suffer for them. As a body, the American Legion stands for the great essentials of sound, verile Americanism and the principles on which this country was founded. Avowedly, they stand for God, home and country."

The bishop spoke with pride of the service of the Legion Memorial day in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, of other services and his contact with the ex-soldiers as post chaplain of his old Three Hundred and Second engineers with whom he served at Camp Upton.

Both national and international significance of Christianity was discussed earnestly by Bishop Manning, when asked about religions in general.

"Since the war, the world, as a whole, sees more clearly than ever before that the hope of mankind for future lies in the Christian religion," he said.

"In our own land, thoughtful men everywhere realize that the hope of our nation and the solutions of our problems must come through following the teachings of Jesus Christ."

As a world-wide influence, Bishop Manning retains much faith in the eventual assembly of a world conference looking to Christian unity, an undertaking launched in 1910 by the bishop himself, as rector of Trinity, by presentation of a resolution unanimously adopted at the Cincinnati convention. By 1914 plans for the world conference were nearly perfected and the movement spread across Europe as far as Russia. Manning was about to sail for Europe to further the work when the World War broke out and disrupted all for the time.

"We are continuing the effort and hope for realization," said the bishop. "Some indication of success was had in a preliminary conference of more than sixty churches at Geneva last summer. We believe it will be possible to call the world conference in the next few years."

The Christian world conference was likened somewhat to the disarmament conference called by President Harding. It would be impossible to hold such a conference on Christian unity with any definite program outlined or definite objects set, said the bishop, but a conference open for advancement of plans by all for consideration would offer no objections to any.

COTTON HAS DECLINE OF 17 POINTS

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 21.—The net results of the week's trading in the cotton market were declines of 9 to 17 points in the contract department, October closing at 12.65, and declines of 13 points on middling spots, which closed at 12 cents. The high prices of the week were made on the opening session while the low price came at the middle of the week. At the highest the more active months in the contract market were two to three points under the close of the preceding week; at the lowest they were 49 to 53 points under. October traded as high at 12.71 and as low as 12.22. The market moved over a range of 47 to 51 points.

The outstanding features of the week were concerned mainly with the growing crop. It was claimed that deterioration was general and severe in nearly all sections of the belt and particularly in Texas where the drouth continued. At the end of the week crop observers were sending in messages from Texas placing the percentage of condition at only fifty of normal, in many cases, and as low at 47 and 48 in a few cases. These figures compared with 62 as the condition of the Texas crop in the government returns to July 25.

Severe deterioration was reported in the eastern section of the belt where in some localities too much rain was complained of. Weevil damage was reported over wide areas and even in Texas, in spite of the drouthy conditions there.

Declines of the week appeared to be due, in considerable measure to hedge selling and at times offerings from spot houses were heavy enough to be the most prominent factor in the trading. The official weekly crop reports were much better than expected and caused a temporary set back. Private reports, however, always were sufficiently bad to be of constant support and to prevent any very wide declines. At the end of the week trading influences about balanced. There were reports of an easier spot basis in the southwest, but against this were massager from Fall River to the effect that large printers had cleaned that market up of offerings of print cloths. The August condition estimates are expected which will be looked upon as important. Interest in the pending report is heightened by the increasing tendency in some quarters to contend that deterioration over the belt has been great enough to bring about chances of a record low condition percentage for August 25. The existing record is 55.7 and was made in 1918.

STARS SHINE AT ALL TIMES

The curious thing about the star was that once you found it, looked right at it, and kept your attention fixed upon it you could see it clearly. If you had the right kind of eyes. Lots of people couldn't see it at all, some because they did not have the right kind of eyes, but mostly because they were blinded by the garish light of an extraordinarily bright and sunny morning. The sky was a bottomless sea of azure; the clouds that swept across, melting into shifting whisps and flecks or vanishing altogether as the sunshine at them up, shone like new snow. The fluttering flags on tall poles distracted your gaze. But if you did get into a shadowed place or down in the depths of the canyons between the towering buildings, carefully worked out the exact location and fixed your gaze there, you saw the star, glittering like a diamond in the blue.

Then it came to you afresh that after all the stars are there all the time, passing stately across the sky, sending out their steady stream of light, as much and as truly in the glare of the brightest day as against the velvet blackness of the darkest night. It is not their fault if you do not see them. It is the fault of our eyes, filled with the blaze of things, or of the earth born clouds that shut us in. Also, we do not trouble in the daytime to look at, or for, the stars. Only those who look, out of the depth of canyons or at the bottom of narrow vistas, see the stars in the daytime.

In the daytime we are all-powerful. In the awe and loneliness of night we pray, each after his own fashion:

Now I lay me down to sleep;
I pray the Lord my soul to keep.

As if to say: "While I am awake and on the job I can take care of myself. While the sun is shining never mind the stars." The prayers of most of us come out of our fears.

Suddenly comes a day when we discover that whether we look for it or not, the star is overhead and shining regardless of our seeing. And we realize then that if our eyes are open and intent we can see it and steer by it—unless we suffer the garishness of the day to blind us to its glittering presence.

PEST KILLING WOULD SAVE MUCH WHEAT

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—If all the wheat now destroyed annually by pests could be saved and made into flour it would add approximately 29,463,700 barrels to the yearly output of the nation. Statistical "sharpe" of the department of agriculture make this assertion and they have delved deep into the "dope" in arriving at this conclusion. They point out that the annual production of wheat in this country for the four-year period 1916-1919, inclusive, was 783,849,500 bushels. The annual loss from wheat disease during this period was 147,318,500 bushels.

While it is not possible entirely to eliminate wheat diseases it is possible to reduce the toll much below what it has been in recent years, the experts say.

STAMFORD CUTS EMPLOYES' PAY

Special to the Record News.

STAMFORD, Texas, Aug. 21.—The city council of Stamford last night applied the pruning knife to practically all of its employes by making a 10 per cent reduction in salaries and wages. A few escaped, but the reduction was made, it was stated by the mayor, in the interest of strict economy, also because of the downward tendency of salaries and wages, as well as the gradually lowering of living expenses.

HINDU CASTE RAISES NONE FOR SERVICES

To an outsider who has lived many years among the people of India, but still can claim no intimate knowledge of their intricate philosophies and general mental attitude toward life, the one dominant institution which appears to be the bulwark of their existence against change is caste. Caste, now complicated by minute subdivisions, has lost the old simplicity of the original four, says the Christian Science Monitor.

How it originated no one can tell, but as the Sanskrit equivalent "varna" means "color" it probably first differentiated the Aryan conquerors of India from the Dravidian peoples whom they conquered. Then it was extended so as to stratify Hindu society into separate social planes maintained by most stringest rules so as to perpetuate the old exclusiveness of tribal customs. No expenditure, however great, no service to the state, no reversal of caste during actual military employment (when it frequently happens that the lower caste soldier may be promoted over the heads of those of higher caste, will carry further than the limits of actual service. Nor can any low caste man ever hope to improve his social position by loyal and faithful service to his master or his country.

The following tale may serve to illustrate this point. Colonel H. was serving in Western India when the war broke out in 1914. He was almost at once appointed to the staff of the army for Mesopotamia and accompanied General Townsend through all the vicissitudes of that arduous campaign as far ac Ctesiphon. He was wounded in the battle fought on that historic field and was sent back to the base at Amara, whence he finally emerged from Mesopotamia and returned to India.

The Story of Jumbo.

When he was in India previous to the war he had engaged the services of a low caste sais, or groom, to look after a favorite English horse which he took to Mesopotamia with him. This sais, whom we will call Jumbo, belonged to a village not far from Poona, but though he was of it, he never was in it. He was a man of the jungles, an intelligent and observant human being. His devotion to his charge was such that he absolutely declined to part when orders came from Mesopotamia.

So he went through the campaign. The devotion of an Indian servant, Hindu or Mohammedan, to his duties is so old a story that it may almost be taken for granted. When Jumbo's master was deported wounded from Ctesiphon he found himself in charge of all that master's kit and set himself to work to safeguard it by every means in his power. It speaks volumes for his efficiency that in the terrible days that ensued at Kut during the defense the horse was kept alive until the final surrender took place. Then there was a general smashup of all his master's effects, leaving little or nothing as a souvenir to the Turk.

From that time Jumbo disappeared, and it was three years afterward that Colonel H., having by that time been promoted to a responsible position on the army staff in Northern India, received a request from Jumbo, back again in Bombay, to be allowed to make his salaams and account for his stewardship. He came, and the tale he told was as interesting and pathetic as any that have been told of that memorable march from Kut to Asia Minor. He was roped in with the mob of British officers and men and native soldiers and treated precisely as they were treated. We know the sequel of that march. Hardly 25 per cent of the British soldiers survived.

Returned to Former State.

The end came when the Turk had worn out his own footwear and took what was left of the British soldiers' boots. Again Jumbo does not blame the Turks. Indeed, he thinks that they acted for the best. He himself, with the rations of a Turk, and feet hardened from infancy, arrived sound enough in Asia Minor to be put to a great variety. It is extraordinary how much of it he saw and can describe with accuracy. There seems to be hardly a town of any importance in Asia Minor of which he did not see something, and he made no complaint of his treatment by the Turks from first to last. At length the war came to an end and Jumbo found himself at Haifa, where he was fitted out with new clothes, awaiting deportation to Alexandria.

Arrived in Bombay he was arraigned before a sahib, who sat at a table with bags of rupees in front of him. Having accounted for his presence, Jumbo was given 200 rupees to take him home and solace for the loss of his service as sais. So he went to his own village. And do you suppose that his village received him? Not a bit of it. Jumbo is just where he was at the start, though with at least one good friend in the distance who will see to it that he never is in want.

ASK MONEY TO ASSIST IN CHARITY

A pathetic case of a poor family, consisting of a widow and two dependent children, a girl and a boy, whose sole means of support is a team of horses and a wagon, by which the small boy picks up a bare living by odd hauling jobs, confronted with the falling due of a mortgage on the team and wagon of $125 and no money to cancel the debt, has been investigated by the Epworth League of this city, and the league is calling upon the people of the city for contributions to help this needy family.

There is no doubt but that the family is hard working and worthy of help, their sad plight caused by the death of the father and provider some time ago without leaving any insurance and with the mortgage hanging of their means of livelihood, according to J. W. Thorne of 1312 Eighteenth street, member of the league who has been selected to take charge of raising the relief fund.

Those wishing to help out this cause can reach Mr. Thorne at telephone 2780, or at his home. He will be glad to answer any questions regarding the family, he says.

PHONES ARE DISCARDED IN RATE FIGHT

BLOOMFIELD, Neb., Aug. 21.—If you lived in a very modern, bustling, little community of 1,400; if your commerce with the outside world depended to a large extent on your arteries of communication with it, not the least of which was the telephone; if your physicians had a practice extending over a radius of twenty or thirty miles and your housewives had for many years depended upon the telephone for ordering the meat and the bread, calling a meeting of the ladies' aid or promoting the social life, wouldn't you wonder with some apprehension and consternation just how you and your neighbors could manage without the telephone?

Bloomfield did, too.

And then it promptly and cheerfully set about getting along as it had done some forty years ago.

Bloomfield is in Knox county, Neb. The thing of which Bloomfield citizens are more proud than all else is their "community spirit," their faith and trust in each other and their ability to pull together. It is this community spirit, they believe, that will bring them ultimate success in their "strike" against a public service corporation which, they say, failed to "serve."

Tried to Increase Rates.

This corporation last year built in Bloomfield a new telephone building at a cost of $35,000, installed the "metallic system" with three miles of underground cable and otherwise treated its subscribers in a metropolitan manner, it says. It then requested permission of the state railway commission to increase the rates. This was granted April 1, 1921.

But, say the subscribers, the company overlooked a bet—it forgot its pledge of a year before to the townfolks that it would not do that very thing for a long time to come." It forgot the subscribers' long-nursed grudge against service that was "worse than no service at all." Four months ago Bloomfield refused to pay the increased rates and today they declare they will get along without phones "forever, before we will pay one penny over the old charge."

How do they do it?" The answer is "community spirit." Everybody helps.

There are the housewives. Johnny and Mary run mother's errands where the telephone was formerly employed. Even "friend husband" is drafted into shopping service. There is humor at every turn in this readjustment.

"Telephone's ringing," remarks Mrs. F. A. Salmon to her husband as a sort of code signal that she wants a pound of sugar from the store. Husbands, laden like Santa Clauses, may be seen on any street in Bloomfield at eventide.

Say Business Is Better.

Merchants declare the housewives' purchases have increased.

"Business is better than ever," declared B. Y. High, grocer and clothing merchant. "They are forced to come to the store now, see other things they want and buy more than if they had ordered by 'phone."

The long distance telephone is missed most, according to the business men. This service was continued after the "strike" until the exchange was closed by order of the commission, but is again in use since the reopening of the exchange a few weeks ago.

Merchants were accustomed to call Omaha and Sioux City firms on the rush orders, but now use the telegraph "with great satisfaction," they say, as do the grain elevators, which receive market reports by wire four times a day.

The three Bloomfield physicians, who might be expected to suffer greatest inconvenience through lack of telephone service, are sticking gamely by the "strikers."

Doctors Miss Service Little.

"There is little difference," Dr. S. B .Kalar said. "We had little service before. We do not have it now.

"At one time my telephone was out of order for thirty-six hours. I asked in vain that it be fixed. My office was next door to the exchange and the operator would pound on the wall whenever I had a call, which was on an average of every fifteen minutes. I finally gave her a bell to ring out the windows. I then had to run down my stairs and up the stairs of the telephone building.

"It was quicker for me to go to the drug store in an emergency than to phone it. People, now that they have to come on after the doctor, are not calling one in trivial matters and the great majority of the farmers have cars."

The social life of Bloomfield is uninterrupted. Societies and clubs continue to meet, parties and dances are held and the village swains go courtin' as always. It is said that a single invitation was issued for one event, a small boy passing from home to home and requesting each "invitee" to read its message. For the most part, the "grape vine" route is the most popular means of communication. When Mrs. Jones entertains at cards, she tells Mrs. Smith about it. Mrs. Smith in turn relays the news to Mrs. Brown and thus the message reaches all the guests.

Farmers Hurt the Worst.

Possibly the general news of the day is not so widely disseminated through the countryside as when rural party lines were in operation. The Bloomfield exchange has twenty-six rural lines, with a possible average of twenty patrons on each of the party lines. There are seven hundred or more patrons of the Bloomfield exchange, nearly all of whom are said to have "struck." There were six subscribers in the town and nearly thirty rural subscribers that did not protest the increased rates. Since the reopening of the exchange, the patrons who did not "strike" have all been reconnected.

Bloomfield admits that the telephone is a convenience, a convenient luxury, but not a necessity. Many citizens declare that they are doing what they formerly thought impossible in reverting to the social intercourse of pioneer days. Some day they do not believe they will ever again have actual need for a telephone. Others admit they miss the telephones and want them back.

POPPIES THAT GROW IN FLANDERS FIELD DECLARED HARMLESS

The importation of the Flanders poppy for use on the graves of soldier dead has evoked considerable protest in several quarters, based on the belief that the poppy is by nature a weed and is likely to run wild, with resulting damage to crops. The American Legion Weekly asked Secretary of Agriculture Henry C. Wallace if this charge was founded on fact, and is pleased to present the secretary's answer to the question:

"Replying to your request for information as to whether the Flanders poppy, which is being considerably planted in this country, is likely to become a harmful weed, as has been feared by some, the specialists of the bureau of plant industry, who have given considerable attention to this matter, advises me as follows:

"The European poppy occurs some what abundantly as a weed in the grain fields of England, France and Belgium. It has been grown in gardens throughout the United States since a very early day in the settlement of the country, having been one of the commonest garden flowers on the agricultural frontier as it moved steadily westward during the period of colonization and settlement. While under some conditions in Europe it has proved to be a moderately troublesome weed in grain fields, it has not shown any indications of becoming troublesome in older settled portions of the United States.

"Of course, if it should be widely and indiscriminately sown as a road side plant, or in fields devoted to small grain production without systematic rotations, including tilled cleaning crops, it might develop some troublesome features. This is probably most likely to occur on the Pacific slope, where, in some districts, cereals are grown year after year without the intervention of any tilled crop through which the land can ben cleared of seeds of annual weeds.

"Briefly summarized, it is the view of the specialists of the department that in ordinary garden culture, such as the poppy has had in this country for approximately three hundred years there is little danger of its becoming a troublesome weed. On the other hand, should it be indiscriminately scattered along roadsides, fence rows, and in grain fields there is a possibility that it might become locally troublesome in some sections."

HE'S MEAN, YOU'LL AGREE, AS MAN CAN WELL BE

POPLAR BLUFF, Mo., Aug. 21. Somebody else has found the meanest man in the world. W. R. Brooks, agent of the Missouri Pacific railroad at Neelyville, who formerly was opposed to capital punishment, has changed his mind.

This new meanest man in the world cut the screen out of the station window while Brooks was asleep and crept silently away with the station agent's trousers. The outlaw, of course, was welcome to the watch and the small change contained in the pockets thereof.
