22 MILLION BOTTLES USED

—THE— WOMAN'S DAY By Allene Sumner

In the more or less good old days when our papers and magazines flourished with advice to wives on how to hold their husbands, no little hurrahs were given to the subject of wives who got in ruts and weren't ready to play and prance and frolic and dance whenever their lords and masters snapped their fingers.

Columns of good white space were devoted to the sins of the wife who got so wedded to her house and children that she forgot her husband was "only a little boy, too, who should be amused and entertained." This deplorable wife at whom the reformers grieved was the same one who didn't greet her husband at his evening homecoming with a smile, his slippers by the fire, his favorite dish of liver and onions on the table—in short, with an aura of domestic perfection for the hard-working male.

JUST TOO BAD I'm not really as sarcastic as I sound. Perhaps many wives really needed the message. Perhaps husbands worked harder outside the home in those days, and perhaps wives worked less inside, though I doubt it. There always have been shirking wives as well as shirking husbands. Besides, the entire trend of public opinion in the years when women were given so much advice was to the effect that it was woman's job to smooth the path of man and if her own got accidentally smoothed in the process, well and good; if not, that was only her lot as a woman.

STILL PERSISTS This idea has not utterly perished in what we like to call "this modern day." There is still a latent belief in most men "that women should be ready at a second's notice to leave the serene routine of their lives and make their plans coincide with any unexpected ones of the male."

I witnessed a family rumple in our neighborhood last winter, all because a certain charming wife murmured a little when lordly husband came home one night with tickets to Lake Placid on a train leaving the next morning. The firm was sending him—hurry-up business call: he'd have to work like a fiend for the first few days, day and night, but they'd tried to make it right by giving him a ticket for his wife, too, and telling him to stay over for the week-end and a few following days.

Dear, dear, not TOMORROW! squealed the wife. "Why, I haven't a thing to wear for winter sports and what'll we do with the children?"

And lordly husband who had come home all aglow to make his magnanimous gesture was so peeved he straightway went to the phone and invited his kid sister to go with him.

SHE'D HAVE GONE Now I am very sure if he had waited till his charming wife got her breath; if he had realized what an EVENT something like this upsetting one's home routine is to a woman; if he had been willing to help her scurry around and phone the aunts and cousins and sisters getting together clothes and a haven for the children, writing a note to the milkman and paper boy and all the rest, she would have gone off with him smilingly and happily. But he couldn't be bothered with the details of how it was to be done. He merely wanted her enthusiastic gratitude and be let alone while she wrestled the problem of management.

Canyon Normal Is To Ask $1,250,000

Three New Buildings And Addition To Power Plant To Be Asked During Next Biennium From State

CANYON, May 21.—$1,250,000 is the amount which has been approved by the Board of Regents for the State Teachers college budget for the next biennium, according to the statement of President J. A. Hill, who recently returned from a meeting of the Board.

This amount includes a Science and Arts building, $225,000; Museum building $300,000; an addition to the power plant to house the manual training department, $30,000; and a home demonstration building, $10,000.

The recent rapid growth of the college has shown conclusively that the Education building under construction at this time will not relieve the crowded conditions for even a single year, and the demands of the territory which this college serves are increasing constantly.

The records of the registrar's office show that 1541 students have been enrolled during the long session of the college, which opened in September and which will close June 2.

North Carolina Being Organized In Smith Behalf

Congressional Districts Have Own Groups To Push Candidacy Of Governor, Probers Told.

RALEIGH, N. C., May 21.—North Carolina has been organized by congressional districts on behalf of the candidacy of Governor Alfred E. Smith of New York for the democratic presidential nomination, the senate campaign funds committee was informed today by John B. Dawson of Winston.

Denying information given the committee that he was the manager for Smith in the state, Dawson said there was no directing head of the Smith organization.

"It is a large volunteer army," he said. "There is a group supporting Smith. There is a group supporting Judge Hull (Representative Cordell Hull of Tennessee) and there are some supporting Senator Reed and also some supporting Senator George."

Dawson said the real contest was between the Smith and anti-Smith groups.

"Has any large sum of money been sent into the state?" asked Senator Bratton, democrat, New Mexico.

"I doubt that there has been $5,000 sent into the state," Dawson replied.

"I doubt that there is any state in the Union where so little aid and comfort has been received from the outside."

Sharp Reaction In Stock Prices Due To Selling

Shortening Of Trading Period On Wall Street Gives Resultant Decrease In Volume of Sales.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK, May 21. (AP).—Higher money rates inspired sufficient selling in today's stock market to bring about a sharp reaction in prices. The selling movement, which reached its greatest intensity in the last few minutes of trading, followed by an early period of irregularity in which speculators for the advance endeavored to maintain bullish enthusiasm by bidding up the oil and copper shares, which had not participated extensively in the recent "bull" movement.

Shortening of the trading session from five to four hours was accompanied by a commensurate decrease in the volume of trading. The day's sales totaled 2,782,100 shares as contrasted with between 3,784,700 and 4,887,400 shares in the full session last week. The ticker kept abreast of the market during the greater part of the session, but the last-minute flurry of selling delayed the printing of the final quotation until 20 minutes after the market had closed.

There was little in the day's business news to influence the price movement, although the early strength of the oil and copper shares, a dozen of which moved into new high ground, was said to be based on reports of trade improvement. Dupont failed to make any response to the declaration of an extra dividend of $3, closing 3 points lower at 392.

Howl Goes Up From Fans On Ruling Of Umpire That Breaks Up Contest In Eleventh Inning of Close Game

Hubbers Rally Twice And Knot The Score But Are Unable To Combat Aces And Umps' Ruling.

The howl of the fans came loud and strong yesterday afternoon out at the old Merrill lot as the eleven-inning battle of hectic baseball between the Abilene Aces, league leaders, and the Lubbock Hubbers, runners-up, resulted in a hot wrangle among umpires, players, and fans. After the smoke cleared away the Aces were presented with the ball name on a silver platter by J. H. Tongate, West Texas league arbitrator, who was working behind the plate. The score of the game was 9 to 7.

The play that caused so much confusion and interruption came up in the last stand of the game with two out and Homer Burch on second base. Don Anderson, left gardener for the homebats, cracked out a smashing raffle to right centerfield. Sullivan, centerfielder for Les Tullos' outfit, made a most colorful sprint for the ball, which appeared to have been caught on a pickup. He fell and came up with the ball in his gloved hand but, seemingly, gave the play away when he made a try for Anderson on second base. Burch having scored on the drive, Tongate stated that "it looked like he (Sullivan) caught the ball on a fly," but that he didn't know. He further stated that Weatherby, base ump, failed to see the catch.

Fans Bloodthirsty
"We want those Aces again," was the war cry of the heated fans as they departed from the park.

Throughout the game, from the first to the last frame, the 500 fans that attended the contest were held spell bound with the sensational fielding of members of both teams. Sullivan, aside from making a most miraculous play in the last act of the game, raced from one corner of the lot to the other grabbing hard chances. Ray (Robbie) Robinson, centerfielder of the Hubbers ball hawks, gave the home folks a thrill in the second session when he leaped against the centerfield wall to pull down Hillin's long drive, that was labeled for a double in any man's league, climaxing the grand grab when he heaved the agile to May to double Betts at second base.

Abilene took the lead in the fourth inning when May kicked Guerra's easy grounder. Betts doubled to centerfield scoring Guerra, and when Sam Sealing relayed Robinson's throw, he threw wild to Storti, allowing Betts to score. Again in the sixth, Guerra rapped out a single, which was followed with Betts' second two-base clout of the day, scoring Guerra.

Local Swatters Glow
In the seventh the swatmen of the Hubbers ranks burst forth in glowing colors and put over a big hitting bee. Storti singled, Sealing drawing a free ticket, followed by Robinson's triple to deep center, which scored both Storti and Sealing. Jackson, Ace right hander for the Aces, was relieved by Roberts at this interval and Betts, the first man to face Roberts, cracked out a single to score Robinson, for tying run.

Hill Lets Up
Red Hill, Hubbers' moundman for the setting, seemingly let up after the scoring rally of the homebats and the Tullos' lads got to him for three runs in the eighth as Betts, drawing a free ticket, followed by Robinson's triple to deep center, which scored both Storti and Sealing. Jackson, Ace right hander for the Aces, was relieved by Roberts at this interval and Betts, the first man to face Roberts, cracked out a single to score Robinson, for tying run.

Hubber's Start Again
Four runs behind, the Hubbers started again. Storti singled, Sealing walked, Betts was hit by pitcher, and Barney (Red) May, fairly inflexible for the home boys, got hold of one of his favorite raps that ascended the left field wall, to again tie up the contest.

The Aces put over the winning runs in the eleventh hour when Sullivan drew a walk and was put down the way with Brinker's sacrifice. Orr snapped out a two-base blow to score Sullivan. Kallina added.

Juvenile Lawlessness Is Believed Halted
The campaign recently waged by members of the police and sheriff's departments, aided by the county judge, against petty theft and juvenile lawlessness in the city has borne fruit. County Judge Charles Nordyke said yesterday.

No new complaints were filed yesterday and no report of lawbreaking by the juvenile element was made from either Police Chief John Desmond or Sheriff H. L. Johnston.

His Nose Knew
MANILA, T. H. Twenty-one members of the crew of the tanker "Chucky," which exploded off the Japanese coast recently, owe their lives to Ming, a Chow dog. Taking to lifeboats after the explosion the crew was at a loss as to location Ming, however, smelling a Japanese junk boat, drew attention to that vessel and the crew was picked up after following Ming's nose.

Notes on the Game

The fans howled yesterday—but they had it coming.

The last play of the eleven clash was a bear of a play—but only Sullivan, himself, can tell the world whether or not Don Anderson's drive was fielded clean. Anyway the dash made for the drive was great, and further more Sullivan's catch was very deceiving and executed smoothly.

The Hubber keynote combination, May and Sealing, certainly were in the roughs as their fielding. Barney chalked up three marks in the error column and Sealing counted two. But they both squared it off with the bugs when they cracked out base blows from the offerings of Roberts.

Robbie Robinson won the affection of the home town fans in every act of the game yesterday. He made a most wonderful grab of Hillin's drive to the centerfield wall in the second, and was placed beside the plate on two occasions in pinches—and delivered! Both of Robbie's drives in the pinch were for three bases, and had these not been such a mixup on the corner's line in the tenth session when Robbie cracked out his second three base clout he could have made it easily to the pan and won the game.

Bennie Brownlow, even though weak from several weeks of illness due to pneumonia, was wrapped up in his overcoat and directing the Hubbers through the way of the game from the bench. Ben may be yet weak but he nevertheless put up a strong contention for the home club in the heated session at the conclusion of the game.

Sullivan, the centerfielder with the good old Irish name with the circuit leaders, is much of a ball hawk. He covers plenty of territory in the orchard and grabs every thing that looks like it comes in his direction.

Ed Kallina, the big first sacker with the Aces, and the officials of the local association are particularly anxious that the women take advantage of the designated days for the women baseball fans.

Today is ladies' day at the Merrill Park, and the officials of the local association are particularly anxious that the women take advantage of the designated days for the women baseball fans.

Again today—Hubbers versus Aces—four bells.

vanced Orr to third on his high fly to centerfield, and scoring a moment later on Guerra's single.

Today the last stand of the three game series will be played at four o'clock.

Lefty Maxwell, southpaw twirler for Bennie Brownlow's entry, will hit up against the loop pacers, while Tullos is likely to toss Hillin against the Hubbers.

Marty Griffin Allows Just Five Blows But They Are Clustered In Two Frames By Dallas Team.

(By Associated Press)

DALLAS, May 21.—Although held to five hits by Marty Griffin, the Steers bunched them all in two innings Monday to take the final of the three-game series, 2 to 0. Dallas didn't get a hit until the seventh, when Miller doubled with one out and romped home when Tate pinched a single through third.

The Cats had men in scoring positions several times, but Blankenship always managed to pull out. Manager Ellison gave his lineup a stir, benching Loris Baker, sending Happ Morse to short and going to second himself.

M'Larnin Unable To Reach Nimble Champion In Bout

Mandell Wins In Unexpected And Decisive Fashion, Having Irishman Groggy At End Of Fifteenth.

(By Associated Press)

Associated Press Sports Editor
POLO GROUNDS, NEW YORK, May 21.—Seeking the end of the light-heavyweight rainbow, fighting Jimmy McLarnin chased a fleeting dark-haired shadow in vain to-night and Sammy Mandell is still 135-pound champion of the world.

In 15 slashing, blistering rounds Mandell, a jabbing, elusive jumping jack, repulsed the challenger of the young Irishman in decisive fashion with one of the greatest exhibitions of boxing skill the light-weight class has seen since Benny Leonard was in his prime.

Victory Is Startling.
Mandell's victory over the California challenger was as startling as it was convincing. Off to a burlesque start, the champion had McLarnin dizzy and bewildered with a fast, furious and varied attack. From start to finish, Sammy piled up a margin on points that never was threatened in spite of McLarnin's most courageous rallies.

McLarnin found out to his annoyance and sorrow that a chin that can't be reached can't be cracked. Not once during the entire 15 rounds was Jimmy able to reach Sammy's jaw with any of the two-fisted dynamite that had carried the young Irishman to the top of the challenging heap in the light-weight brigade. Seidman, for that matter, was McLarnin ever able to penetrate Mandell's jumping jack defense or pin the champion to one spot long enough to swing a few solid punches.

The decision of the two judges and Referee Lou Magnolia in the champion's favor was unanimous.

On the Associated Press score sheet, Mandell was credited with the decision margin of nine rounds, with three awarded to McLarnin and three others scored as even.

GALVESTON, May 21.—(AP)—Problems confronting the grain trade in Texas were taken up when the thirty first annual session of the Texas Grain Dealers' association opened in Galveston Monday. Dealers said that there was every prospect for a busy season in the southwest as soon as harvesting was under way and recent moisture has been especially beneficial to the Panhandle.

Forfeit Ruling Against Coleman Is Now Explained

Hamlin Gives Game Played Against Midland And President Clears Up The Muddle.

(Special To The Avalanche)
COLEMAN, May 21.—Each team in the West Texas League was warned and commanded to cut the roster to the original requirement of the by-laws which allow 14 players of which 9 must be rookies and 5 of which may be class A men, following President J. McAllister Stevenson's ruling forfeiting the first game of the Coleman-Ablene series to the Aces on protest of Les Tullio, manager. Coleman originally won the game in ten innings 1-0.

Representatives of the Coleman Bobcats had announced before the game that 6 class A men were playing, but at that time no protest was filed and the club played under the assumption that a decision on a proposed increase of the class man rule was still pending. Midland, San Angelo and Coleman voted to increase the class man limit to 7 while Hamlin, Lubbock and Abilene voted against the increase. However, following Abilene's negative vote a request to hold their vote was telephoned to the league president.

Tullio Made Threat
If the original ruling was not enforced, Tullio threatened to bring 14 class men into his club and pay no attention to the laws, but Stevenson ruled that each club must adhere to the rules as now in force until such time as a revision may be made in a league meeting. Tullio originally protested both games, but accepted the compromise when offered by Bob Coleman, manager of the Bobcats. Jack Holloway was immediately released from the Coleman club to comply with the laws of the league. While in session here, Stevenson ruled that Hamlin's protest should be allowed against Midland which team had more than the limit of class men and the game although won originally by Hamlin was placed on record as won by forfeit, 9-0 in Hamlin's favor.

GUILTY CONSCIENCE MAKES HIM PAY

SLATON, May 21.—Al Slaton, one man has found sufficiently good environment in Slaton to cause him to reform, and he has eased his conscience by atoning for a wrong done in earlier life. An item clipped from the Scurry County Times, published at Snyder, says Fred T. Wilhelm, grocer there, received the following letter sent from Slaton:

"One time I sold you two pounds of butter. You made a mistake and paid me for three pounds. I kept it. I was silly enough to think I had profited, but now I want God in my life and He won't accept me until I pay you for this, so I am gladly sending it. Then I know God will receive me into his glory. Forgive me."

Fourteen Rounds Of Boxing Slated At Armory Friday

Main Go Features Hutcherson Of Lubbock And Kid Moco Of Waco; Hayhurst And Hardy To Meet.

Fourteen smashing and ripping rounds of boxing have been billed by the National Guard company of the 131st field artillery for Friday evening. The bouts will be held at the Armory. Some of the best boxing talent of Texas Technological college has been secured.

The main bout of the program is a six round fete between Claude Hutcherson of Lubbock, senior at Texas Tech, who has been consistently winning fights over West Texas and the South Plains, and Kid Moco, Waco's flashy pugilist, Hutcherson weighs 140 and Moco 141.

Possibly the local fight bugs will take more interest in the preliminary bout of four rounds between Jack Hardy, fleet, Malador athlete, and Marlin (Shorty) Hayhurst, another fleet Bullyfighter. Both Hardy and Hayhurst are in the 140 pound class and are the midgelets of Texas Technological College athletic teams. The two diminutive battlers are taking the fight seriously and are hammering away every day getting into prime condition for the go.

Another very interesting bout has been arranged between Alma Pace, basketball and track letterman of Texas Tech and Hoyt Watson, another Tech student. This fight will be of four rounds.

Harry Meyers, member of the National Association of Boxing Officials, will referee the bouts it was announced by Captain Rhodes Ingerton last evening.

300 From Outside City Here Monday For Rail Hearing

Santa Fe And Denver Engage In Another Grapple For Railroad Right In South Plains Area.

view and Abernathy through the city hall where the hearing was held yesterday morning and the district court room where it was held yesterday afternoon. An additional crowd is expected for the hearing today which will convene again at 9 o'clock. The hearing is likely to continue throughout today and tomorrow, indications were late yesterday afternoon.

Testimony entered by H. C. Pipkin, attorney for the Santa Fe, throughout the day tended to show that there was enough territory and potential agricultural resources to warrant two lines while the Denver's cross examination attempted to prove that their new line with the present rail connections of the Santa Fe would practically serve the needs of the section.

Intervention Plea Declined
With the presentation of the Santa Fe's plea for the road and the Denver's protest, a petition for leave to intervene was filed by Lockhart, Garrard and Brown, of Lubbock in behalf of citizens of Abernathy and Cotton. Center to have the route of the line changed to go from Abernathy to Parmerton by way of Cotton Center and Olton. Examiner Davis refused the petition, stating that only testimony for or against the extension of the proposed line would be accepted and that no new location could be presented in the hearing.

Testimony entered throughout the day by the witnesses used by the Santa Fe went to show that the territory included in the proposed line needed rail transportation and that its agricultural tonnage warranted the establishment while the Fort Worth and Denver counsel tended to show that practically all of the territory was already served by rail connections or would be with the completion of the new Fort Worth and Denver line to Dimmitt from Plainview.

Enough For All
There is enough of country and business for both roads, Judge L. Gough, of Hereford, president of the Texas Wheat Growers association who was placed on the stand in the afternoon said. "If there isn't enough business here, then why are they trying to come in here?"

At this point, the audience gave applause, to which Examiner Davis objected severely.

The section is potentially as great a wheat belt as any in the portion of the state, Judge Gough said, "and I believe that the territory served will be as great a development with a railroad as was Hale and Floyd counties." Judge Gough stated that he had lived in that portion of the Panhandle since 1881.

Such was also the testimony of the other witnesses of the day. Fred Schreier, of Olton, who has lived there for the past 22 years, pictured an expanse of unlimited possibilities in agriculture.

Tells of Fertilization
Fifteen to 20 bushels, on a ten-year average, and 42 bushels of wheat as a maximum; 20 different kinds of grasses; alfalfa, wheat, kafir, maize, sweet potatoes, watermelons and from one-third to one-half bushel of cotton per acre were included in Mr. Schreier's statements of what could be grown there.

In his exhibit, Mr. Schreier stated that there was a total of 633,600 acres in the territory to be served, 563,400 or 89 per cent of them being the suitable 151,840 acres being under cultivation at the present time. Seven hundred farms will be served in and around Olton alone. The territory to be served was placed as 18 miles wide and 66 miles long. Livestock in this section includes, Mr. Schreier said, 2,000 horses, 3,400 mules, 11,000 cattle, 2,000 beef cattle, 4,000 dairy cattle, 5,500 hogs, 5,000 sheep, and uncountable amounts of poultry. Forty thousand pounds of wool, 420,000 dozens of eggs, 600,000 pounds of poultry and 1,200,000 pounds of cream were given as the yield of the section. This offers basis for additional tonnage, Mr. Schreier said.

Is Productive Region
The territory can produce as much as can be produced in any section in the Panhandle, Oren Burton, who has spent the past twenty years in the Big Square community in Southwest Castro county, said as he was questioned regarding the agricultural possibilities.

John E. Hill, vice-president and general manager of the Panhandle Lumber company, appeared on the stand at a witness for the Santa Fe, presenting his views on the possibilities of the section and telling of the development of sections in the past into which rail lines were built.

G. E. Bohner, for 18 years a resident of Olton, was another witness for the line during the afternoon. J. W. Stewart, locating and construction engineer of the Santa Fe, attempted to show in his testimony why the line was needed along the proposed route and the reasons justifying its establishment. Maps of the proposed line were introduced as Exhibit One in the hearing.

To Cost Over $2,000,000
The extension will cost approximately $2,000,000 per mile, totalling more than $2,000,000 for the 66 miles, Mr. Stewart said.

Reasons given for the establishment of the line were that it would split up the territory now served by the Texaco-Lubbock cut-off and the new Denver line to Dimmitt; that it shortens through mileage in the territory, and that it would serve territory between 53 and 90 miles from the line.

The new line would draw traffic for about eight miles toward the new Denver line and for about ten miles toward the Texaco-Lubbock cut-off, Stewart said.

The question of the difficulties in crossing Running Water draw, about 1 1/2 miles northwest of Plainview and extending northwesterly for about 25 miles, by trucks seemed to be an important question in the examinations of both the Santa Fe and the Denver attorneys. Several of the witnesses said that scarcely any trucking would be made across the draw to the new Denver line and that most of it would be made to the south.

Death Stalks

Ambulances hurried through the streets all night recalling to the elders the terrible cholera year of 1892.

Fight Proves Futile
Firemen, police and troops fought to overcome the terror. Many of them were overcome by it, but they persisted in their efforts, pumping water and ammonia on the gas cloud, guiding hysterical women to points of safety, and warning others away from the stricken district. When adequate gas masks had been brought from Belton by airplane, the firemen got close enough to the tank which was disgorging the deadly fumes and dislodge its contents so that it could be emptied into an adjoining canal.

The exact cause of the tragedy had not been established. Experts think, however, that unduly warm atmosphere was responsible, since phosgene vaporizes at relatively low temperature. They pointed out that the lid had been forced off the tank and that a section of corrugated iron roofing had been torn off the structure in which the gas was stored.

In an exchange of shots, the negro was wounded. His wounds were treated and he was turned over to officers who started back to Center with him. When they reached Center they were met by the mob.

Whether any official action would be taken against any members of the mob was not known. Center officers said they could take no action as no complaints had been filed with them.

provisions. The proposal of the senate to cut the corporation levy from 13 1/2 to 12 1/2 per cent accounts for $82,000,000 of the $205,000,000 reduction. The provision approved by both the senate and house for an increase in the exemption allowed corporations from $2,000 to $3,000 involves a loss in revenue of $12,000,000.

The other main provision of the reduction program is the repeal of the automobile tax, involving $66,000,000 in revenue.

No attempt was made during the closing hours of the eleven hour session today to have another vote on the amendment of Senator Norris, Republican, of Nebraska, opening all income tax returns to public inspection. This was approved 77 to 19 by the senate on Friday and is one of the provisions which goes to conference with the house. The house made no provision for change in the present law allowing only the joint congressional committee on taxation to inspect tax returns.

The night crew, known to have numbered considerably more than 100 miners, was working some 4,000 feet further back from the point where the bodies were found today, according to the miners who escaped.

Late today state troopers and national guardsmen from Waynesburg, forced the crowd on the surface to retreat a half mile from the shaft, and at the same time all rescue men were ordered from the mine by rescue leaders. Earlier the United States bureau of mines announced a fire had been discovered in an shaft between the rescue squads and the entombed men. Later it was said the flames had been extinguished with chemicals.

Injunction Against Highways Dissolved

BROWNSVILLE, Texas, May 21 (AP)—A temporary injunction preventing the building of any highways in the Brownsville commission's precinct was dissolved here Monday when Judge A. M. Kent instructed the jury to return such a verdict. The case had been on trial in district court since May 14.

PORT WORTH, May 21 (AP)—The cattle trade here today was uneven, sales being made on a steady to 25c lower basis. Slaughter steers sold from $9.50 to $9.75, cows $8.50 to $8.75, bulls $7.50 to $7.65 and calves $10.00 to $11.00. Choice yearlings sold as high as $12.50.

The hog market was a quiet affair, the bulk of the receipt selling from $9.25 to $9.40, 10 to 15 cents lower.

The sheep trade was steady, fat lambs and yearlings selling for $12.50 and fat wethers from $8.25 to $8.50.

express their sentiments on Smith if Governor Moody con."

Moody Gains Edge
Governor Moody and the Smith faction apparently gained advantage in the disposition of measures in the disputed county delegation cases heard Monday afternoon. The committee voted to enroll a Moody harmony delegation from Wichita county, led by Charles I. Francis, president of the Texas un-instructed movement, as against another delegation, which failed to take the pledge.

A long hot afternoon was consumed by the committee's hearing which preceded the temporary organization. Petty local bickerings, rivalries usually dividing into Smith and anti-Smith sides, and involving the pledge, were paraded before the committee for four hours. The Brazos county case was held over until the Tuesday morning meeting of the committee.

The question of upholding the pledge came squarely before the convention for the first time in the contest from Palo Pinto.

P. C. Sanders, representing the delegation elected by the bolters from the county convention, who insisted on the pledge, charged that the ultra-drys were seeking to bend the party to their own personal scruples.

The committee voted 20 to 5 to seat the pledged delegation. The unseated delegation was regarded as a Love delegation. Palo Pinto county has four votes in the convention.

Asks Fund Prob
C. C. Renfro, secretary of the Texas un-instructed delegation club, sent a telegram to Senator A. W. Barkley of the United States senate campaign fund committee asking investigation of alleged financial cooperation of Love and the Ku Klux Klan in fighting Al Smith. In a statement made when the telegram was written, Renfro declared the club was not organized to aid the candidacy "of any man," but by a group of young men who hoped to aid in selection of a "representative democratic delegation to the Houston convention, which would not be under the influence and control of Tom Love and the Ku Klux Klan as the 1924 delegation to New York was."

Renfro referred to reports that Dr. Hiram Evans, imperial wizard, and Shelby Cox, Texas grand dragon of the Klan, have declared the organization will conduct a "finest fight" against nomination of Smith.

A session of the Texas Women's Democratic association adopted a resolution favoring Jesse Jones of Houston, for president, but defeated an attempt to demand instruction against Governor Smith. Mrs. Jessie Daniel Ames of Georgetown, declared the Smith resolution would be against Governor Dan Moody's campaign for no instructions as to specific candidates.

hop from Uvalde to Sanderson. Eighty percent of the highways to be traversed are paved.

Chamber of Commerce Helps
An itinerary for the trip has been arranged by Mr. Brown, who is business manager of the band. Towns in which the band stops and plays have agreed to furnish meals and beds for the boys. The local Chamber of Commerce has appropriated $1,000 for oil and gas and a drive is now being made for funds to overhaul the bus motor.

The first stop will be made from Lubbock to Fort Worth where the band plays at the West Texas Chamber of Commerce meeting, going from there to Waco and Belton playing at Baylor University and in the Belton natatorium.

To See Bull Fight
The trail then leads to Austin, San Antonio, Del Rio, through the Davis Mountains to El Paso, and over to Juarez where the group is to play at a bull fight or at the horse races. The boys will play in Las Cruces, New Mexico, at Globe, Arizona, Williams, Flagstaff, Prescott and other places in Arizona.

They will be on the program in Prescott July 2 when the National Indian Fiesta is conducted, going from there to the Grand Canyon.

The trip then leads through Gallup to Cubero, N. M., where the group will play for Indians on the reservation. Two Boy Scouts from Albuquerque will meet the band at Cubero and accompany them through Albuquerque, Santa Fe and on to Las Vegas, guiding them to many of the points of interest in that section. The group is to play at the famous Art Festival in Las Vegas on July 10.

Many courtesies have been proposed for the band and which the group will not be able to accept. Mr. Crowley said, as the time is limited Twenty-one band members are in the 1928 graduating class at the high school and are returning to Lubbock in July in order that they may work the remainder of the summer.

Senate Defeats "Rider" Put Forth

WASHINGTON, May 21 (AP)—A proposal to allow exporters of agricultural products to import free of tariff duty certain products necessary to farmers, put forward as a "rider" to the tax reduction bill to Senator Blaine, republican, Wisconsin, was defeated today by the senate, 52 to 11.

When A Girl Loves

THIS HAS HAPPENED

NATHANIEL DANN, struggling artist, is engaged to VIRGINIA BREWSTER, whose father is a prominent Wall Street financier. After losing his fortune in speculation, BREWSTER dies suddenly of heart failure and leaves his daughter penniless.

NIEL, VIRGINIA to marry him at once, but an old family friend, FREDERICK DEAN, and his daughter CLARISSA persuade her to make her temporary home with them. This decision angers NIEL, for he suspects DEAN's motives and does not like CLARISSA.

Returning to his studio he finds his model, CHIRI, waiting with hot coffee for him. He knows that CHIRI is jealous of VIRGINIA and, fearing that she will become a nuisance, he repulses her and she leaves in a temper.

Meanwhile, VIRGINIA is puzzled and unhappy by the insinuations of CLARISSA to the effect that now she will have to marry for money and a veiled warning against trespassing where her fiancé, RUSSELL, WAINGOULD, is concerned. She is also worried by the attentions of MR. DEAN, and resolves to tell NIEL her fears. She phones his studio in the evening and is surprised to hear the voice of CHIRI over the wire.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

VIRGINIA recognized that slow drawing "hello," instantly. It was the same voice that had answered her early that morning when she had called Nathaniel and been told that she had the wrong number.

What could it mean? Surely it was not possible that she would get the same wrong number a second time. Virginia was stunned into silence, then her faith in Nathaniel resumed itself, and she felt herself pricking with shame at the thought that had flashed through her mind.

"Oh, I'm sorry," she said politely. "I'm afraid I have the wrong number."

She started to replace the instrument on the stand when the other voice stopped her. "Are you Miss Brewster?" It asked.

Virginia's hand paused in mid-air. She was, for an instant, unable to move. Again doubt of Nathaniel was filling her mind with torturous conjectures. Then she lifted the instrument and brought herself to say with a brave measure of calm. "Yes, I'm Miss Brewster, may I speak to Mr. Dann?"

"Niel is out," the other voice returned brightly. "This is Chiri Mond. I recognized your voice, Miss Brewster. Shall I ask Niel to call you when he comes in?"

"No, thank you, Miss Mond. I'm going out immediately. Just tell Nathaniel I called, will you?"

When the connection was broken, Chiri congratulated herself upon her luck. She had found Nathaniel at work a few minutes before, as he had told Virginia he meant to be, and as Harkness was not using her that afternoon Nathaniel had asked her to pose for half an hour or so. He wanted to finish up the illustrations in which he was using her torso beginning work upon the murals.

He had discovered himself to be short of colors and had gone out to get them only about a minute ahead of Virginia's call.

"Fat chance I'll tell him she called," Chiri gloated while she waited for Nathaniel's return. "And if she recognized my voice she'll have something to think about."

Virginia did indeed have something to think about. She understood that Chiri might be in the studio at this hour as a model but why had she been there so early that morning? And why had she pretended, when she answered the telephone at that time, that it was not Niel's number? Niel had answered a moment later, then he must have known what Chiri had done.

Virginia's cheeks blazed with outraged pride. Could Niel deceive her for a girl like Chiri Mond? And now—at this time when her head was already bowed with grief for her father! It was too cruel—too cruel to believe of Niel.

"There must be some explanation," Virginia protested against her fear that the only true explanation was one that would break her heart. "Niel couldn't do that," she cried over and over to herself.

She was sorry after a while that she had told Chiri she was going out. It had been a gesture of pride to say that. And to pay for making it she must forego asking Niel to spend the evening with her. The lingering bit of doubt that she could not remove from her mind made it impossible for her to telephone again and let Chiri know that she had been piqued if nothing more. The girl was sharp enough to see that. Virginia murmured.

Perhaps Niel would call her. Virginia found some comfort in the thought but it left her as the day wore on and she did not hear from him.

Niel, working away at high speed, forgot the hours, until the arrival of dusk compelled him to lay aside his brushes. Then his thoughts turned to Virginia. He would have liked to go to her but he knew that he never could bring himself to be a familiar of the Dean household. No, he would wait for her to call him; he believed it was understood that she would arrange their next meeting.

Virginia did not call him. Just before dinner Clarissa had come to her room to tell her they would have company—Russell and a woman Virginia did not know.

"Sorry dear, if it appears inconvenient, but you see Mrs. Farley comes in rather often. I'd chide her out tonight only it's just as well that you should meet her now a later. She's a widow Dad got chummy with while I was abroad. I rather hate her, myself."

"Sorry dear, if it appears inconvenient, but you see Mrs. Farley comes in rather often. I'd chide her out tonight only it's just as well that you should meet her now a later. She's a widow Dad got chummy with while I was abroad. I rather hate her, myself."

"You'll be down, won't you?" Clarissa was saying, and Virginia thought she detected a note of anxiousness in her friend's voice.

"Yes," she nodded. "That's fine. Clarissa declared earnestly. 'Wear something attractive.'"

She did not stay to answer any questions as to why she wanted Virginia to "wear something attractive" for Mrs. Farley, and Virginia set the remark down as having no particular meaning.

But the question was brought to her mind again when she met Mrs. Farley in the drawing room. She was there when Virginia came down, looking very lovely despite no attempt to do so. Her thin black dress enhanced the rose-tinted whiteness of her skin and brought out the undertone of gold in her hair.

Virginia was aware that Mrs. Farley was taking her measure, weighing her appearance, even as the latter made some sympathetic remark about her loss. Why should any woman be particularly interested in her appearance, Virginia wondered?

Besides she was a trifle disturbed. Mrs. Farley's manner appeared friendly, but Virginia was not obtuse, and she sensed a hidden animosity behind the soft hand pet and low-pitched words.

Clarissa was watching with poorly concealed interest the effect Virginia's beauty was having upon the older woman. She seemed satisfied with what she saw. At any rate her lips curved slowly in a smile of triumph.

And when Mr. Dean came forward and placed an arm in fatherly attitude across her shoulders Virginia was certain she detected disapproval in the slight lift of Mrs. Farley's eyebrows.

At the table there was a moment that threatened to become uncomfortable before Mrs. Farley turned it off with a hollow little laugh.

She had gone to a place beside Dean, with the manner of one accustomed to sitting there, and stood waiting for her chair to be pulled back for her.

Clarissa floated up and said easily. "Oh, my dear, would you mind sitting over there beside Russell? You know so much psychology. He's dying to discuss the Oedipus Complex with you."

Russell was heard faintly to gasp and mutter something dark and dismal. Frederick Dean started slightly and Virginia stared at Clarissa in amazement, but sensing that she was asking Mrs. Farley to take another place so that she, Virginia, could have the place of honor.

Slight as the incident was it seemed to hold them all in a spell of awkwardness for no one could mistake the flash of real anger that glared in Mrs. Farley's countenance.

Clarissa waited, with an insolent air of satisfaction, against which Mrs. Farley was helpless. Virginia was just going to say she'd like to sit by Russell herself when Mrs. Farley broke the tension with a laugh and moved away from the place that she knew Clarissa meant for Virginia.

Clarissa motioned Virginia to it. The dinner was a failure so far as the conversation was concerned. There was talk, of course, but it was not spontaneous, not friendly. Only Clarissa appeared to be pleased, except when Russell looked at Virginia too long and too admiringly.

Afterward no one objected when Virginia said good night and left them to a game of bridge. Russell would have done so but he caught a glance from Clarissa that silenced him.

"Beautiful isn't she?" Clarissa murmured, addressing Mrs. Farley. "For her type," she replied. "Pity it's so common."

"It's about as common as hen's teeth," Russell remarked, inelegantly.

"Oh, well," Clarissa said, backing water now, of course gray eyes and brown hair aren't rare, Russell.

"Maybe not," Russell admitted, "but there's something to Miss Brewster besides hair and eyes; she's got it."

It was now Mrs. Farley's turn to smile at Clarissa's expense. She knew that Dean's daughter wanted to worry her about Virginia Brewster, and in doing so Clarissa had caused the weapon she used—the girl's beauty—to be pointed directly at herself.

Clarissa threw down the cards. "I can't stand this stupid game any longer," she cried petulantly. "Let's do something."

"How about a club?" Russell contributed.

"I hear the Chess Secret Service has some devilish dancers," Mrs. Farley remarked disinterestedly.

Clarissa glanced at her keenly. "I know what you're after," she thought. "You want us to get out and leave you alone with Dad."

"Care to go out, old boy?" she asked her father.

"I think not. I'm sure you three will have more sport without me."

Mrs. Farley looked at him hard. "I'm not up to a club tonight," she said firmly. "I'll stay for parchesi."

Russell groaned. "Come on, Claret," he called Clarissa that at times—"these people are dangerous."

Clarissa saw that her father was annoyed. She pushed back her chair and got up. "I hope you won't lose your heads at parchesi," she said with a taunting smile.

THE REAL DIFFERENCE.

While the odds seem to favor Governor Moody and the group of Democrats of Texas headed by him as delegates to Beaumont are being counted and classified, the Constitutional Democrats under the leadership of Tom Love and others express confidence that they will have a majority and will be able to control the state convention. Unofficial reports from the recent county conventions seemed to indicate that the "harmony" leadership of Mr. Moody, Lynch Davidson and others of the Democrats of Texas group would have a safe majority, but unofficial returns are notoriously untrustworthy and there is a real doubt of the ability of the Moody faction to steam roller the protesting ultra-dry known as Constitutionalists. The admitted minority of ardent Smith supporters, headed by Senator Joseph Weldon Bailey and actively encouraged by former Postmaster General Burleson, do not expect to be able to exert much influence in the convention, although it may develop that this small group will actually hold the balance of power. Meanwhile, it is interesting and possibly profitable to consider the question that has arisen during recent weeks as to the fundamental difference between the Constitutional Democrats and the Democrats of Texas. Both are thoroughly dry, according to their official pronouncements, and both are opposed to the Al Smith candidacy. "On the surface their difference was over the issue of bolting the ticket and subscribing to the pledge," writes C. D. Waide, Austin political correspondent, but this is not the real difference. Both finally reached agreement as to the party pledge, "Under the surface there was a lot bigger difference," writes Mr. Waide, who continues:

"Tom Love, V. A. Collins, Frank Davis, Marshall Hicks and Cone Johnson, some of the ring leaders of the Constitutional Democrats, are all men who have been working with the klan in former years, although Collins probably is the only ex-member of the five. They were the same ones who, with the aid of the klan, dominated the convention at Waco four years ago.

"Dan Moody, Lynch Davidson, T. W. Davidson, General M. M. Crane, Steve Pinkney, Charley Francis, Connie Renfro and all the other organizers of the Democrats of Texas have been outstanding anti-klanmen. There, in a nutshell, is the difference."

Although the influence of klan sentiment has been clearly seen in all the activity of the Constitutional Democrats, this has come to our attention. Except in Dallas, Tarrant and Harris counties, the klan as an active organization has lost its power in Texas, but in these counties and in many others there are former klanmen who retain all their hostility toward the political leaders who were instrumental in defeating the klan's ambitious political program that was launched in 1922 and continued through the elections of 1924. It is inconceivable that Lynch Davidson or Dan Moody should become political associates of Tom Love or Marshall Hicks. And it is inconceivable that the two factions of Democrats headed by these leaders should meet in a harmonious state convention if the votes are evenly divided between them. The only way to have harmony under such conditions is to place convention control in the hands of one of the factions. The anti-klan faction, remembering the ruthless steam-rollering that was engineered by the klanmen at Waco four years ago, can be depended upon to do the right thing if the pre-convention forecasts of Moody control prove reliable.

AN ALL-PERVADING PRESENCE.

Indications are numerous — and frequently are pointed out by the discerning—that the American people are on eve of a Creative Age in the fine arts. Analogy drawn from history would promise as much:

Other nations, having emerged from a pioneer stage of development, yet retaining something of their pristine vigor, and having accumulated wealth and with it a certain leisure, have turned from military, political and commercial conquests to those of intellect and heart. Scipio, Sulla, the Gracchi and Cæsar give place to Horace, Virgil, Ovid, and Seneca.

If history shall repeat itself, America presently will be producing its national epic, its distinctive music and drama, its characteristic schools of painting. Whether this is a prospect to be welcomed or feared, depends on the viewpoint. Beauty, in what ever form expressed, is ennobling; the nation that it may enervating and even immoral is wholly false, and yet persists among peoples schooled in Puritan traditions.

Addressing the American Federation of Arts, the other day, President Coolidge stressed the moral value of the esthetic revival. He appealed for greater efforts to infuse art into the people's daily life. By this process, the president asserted, the nation's ethical standards may be elevated:

"Through our contact with the beautiful we see more of the truth and are brought closer to the Infinite."

That is ancient doctrine, but too easily overlooked in a busy age or one which is devoted to materialistic pursuits. Surely the time has come when America may give more thought to these things; thus people may cultivate a taste for the arts without compromising the austere piety which is their principal spiritual inheritance. Moreover, in so doing they even may come to know God better—if not the God of their fathers, as they have conceived Him, then the God who gave them the Grand Canyon, Niagara Falls, the vast sweep of the plains, the infinite variety of a beautiful land.

By whatever name called, the creative forces back of this universe ever are striving after beauty. Nature, abhors ugliness; if she sometimes brings forth the repellent or grotesque, that is the result of accident. At once she sets about remedying the error, and in the end the unsightly is obscured or altogether disappears.

Beauty is a harmonizing influence; as the poets have taught, it is akin to Goodness and Truth. Earnestly seeking the one, a man cannot miss the others very far. The impulse to create beautiful things is somewhere in the make-up of every human being. Whether one attempts to tend a garden, build a house, write a poem or paint a picture, this attribute is likely to seek—though falteringly—an outlet.

The faculty is, in its essence, spiritual; it is aspiration toward harmony with the infinite. To attain that were to know perfect Beauty, which is vouchsafed only the prophet, the sage, the poet. Yet the quality is universal as God Himself. William Ellery Channing wrote:

"Beauty is an all-pervading presence. . . . The universe is its temple. . . . All infinite joy is lost to the world by the want of culture of this spiritual endowment. . . . How much of this mysterious charm is found in the elegant arts! . . . The greatest truths are wronged if not linked with beauty."

No less than the individual devotee, the nation which cultivates the beautiful is becoming godlike. Surely there is waiting for the America that aspires to excel in the arts a glorious destiny, and another sort of wealth—treasure laid up in heaven.

PEDESTRIAN'S RISK.

Ever since the automobile traffic became a matter to worry about certain citizens have loudly proclaimed that pedestrians seeking to cross the street at intersections and remaining on the crosswalk space, possess the right of way. Most of us were willing, without argument, to accept this opinion academically. When it came to the practical operation of crossing the street, however, it became apparent that if the pedestrian had a right of way it could hardly be exercised except as a prelude to a hospital sojourn. Now comes the Wisconsin supreme court with a decision which puts the act of crossing the street in the same class with crossing a railroad track. "Stop, look and listen" is the injunction for the hardy pedestrian who essays to cross the street, just as it is for those who desire to cross a railroad right of way. A few quaint, old-fashioned men and women who still proceed around town under their own power may feel that an ancient right has been taken away from them. Others, realizing that this right, if it ever existed, has been, as a matter of practice, denied to them for a long time, will feel grateful that the court has established a rule that does away with any theorizing about crossing rights. Stop, look, listen and then jump, seems to be the slogan for the pedestrian. It does not require a very lively imagination to conceive of a campaign before long for grade-separation at street-crossings so as to give the pedestrian at least a sporting chance.

OUT OUR WAY—

SO THINK WE

We think that the bill passed for a federal building for Lubbock, that there is very little standing in the way now of some definite steps being taken to get the building under way.

We think the next big thing after getting the federal building started in Lubbock is to begin a movement for the building of a municipal auditorium.

We think a mighty good sign of the city's growth is the fact that a new building is being built on the old ones. Let's brighten up since the rain.

We think that people could conserve a great deal of parking space if they would park their cars in a uniform manner and not leave just about half enough space between the cars to park. Several hundred more cars can be parked in Lubbock if they are properly parked.

We think that a man's credit is not always measured by his wealth. It is by the way he meets his obligations that makes it easy.

OPINIONS

RAGER TO GET HOME

The nominating part of the Republican national convention won't last over night, in the opinion of Representative Edith Rogers of Massachusetts, who predicts Hoover's nomination on the first ballot. Not having a prophet's license, we do not undertake to say as to that. But we do venture the prediction that the convention won't last over Sunday. Democratic candidates often run into weeks. But the Republicans are more domestic in their habits. They want to get home Sunday in order, we suppose, to go to church.—Kansas City Star.

WOMEN DIPLOMATS

It is not surprising that Lady Astor, arising in her place in the British House of Commons, should ask why no women were honored by the Government with diplomatic assignments. England is considerably behind other European countries in this matter, and probably will continue to be for some time. Bulgaria, France and Russia have been placing women in the diplomatic field, and there are rumors are rumors that something of the sort is contemplated in Germany. In these United States there have recently been several appointments of women to positions of considerable importance in the diplomatic and consular service. Out of the Pan American Conference of a few weeks ago came the appointment of a woman to service on its commission for framing an international code of women's rights in all the republics on this continent. Two other women, also, represent our Government abroad, one as a consul in Argentina and the other as consular agent at Shanghai.—Philadelphia Record.

PRIMARY DEFECTS

The primary system has a way of illuminating its own defects. A classic example of its absurdities comes from Florida, where the Smith manager announced that there has been taken to put only those friends of the New York chief executive on the delegate slate whose names begin with the first few letters in the alphabet. The selection of delegates in Florida is largely a matter of chance, the Florida

IT IS REPORTED

It is reported that there are several hundred people here yesterday to attend the meeting of the I. C. C. on the road proposed from Dallas to Lubbock. It seems to be that people who have lived off the money to do so must ask permission of a small group of people to put the proposition through.

It is reported that the senior class of the high school and of the Tech college are both working hard on the last grand triumph of the school life, and will soon come to that very much desired time when they will receive from the proper authority the sheepskin certificate showing that they have completed their courses, and have attained that heights to which they have been climbing these many years.

It is reported that the price of grain has advanced to double the price since the war. Well dear the war anyway.

It is reported there is much boasting about a hole in one. It may be alright in golf, but blamed if we enjoy it in our sex.

It is reported that the best way to find out whether delegates to political conventions are unscrupulous is to wait till they undertake to make their speeches.

YOUR HEALTH

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the last of a series of six articles on healthful swimming conditions.

BY DR. MORRIS FISHER, Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine.

The knowledge established relative to the sanitation of swimming pools is being applied more recently to the sanitation of bathing beaches.

It is usually taken for granted that the bathing beach on the shore of a lake, river or ocean does not have the possibilities of transmitting infection because of the enormous dilution of the water. There is, however, the danger of infectious diseases from pollution of the water by sewage and the danger of irritation from various chemical substances in the water.

Washington Experience

Major Willis P. Baker of the medical corps of the United States army investigated some years ago the water in a bathing beach near Washington, D. C. It was found necessary to control the bacteria in this water by chlorination. In order to chlorinate the water satisfactorily the chlorobenzene was developed with an engine in the bow of the boat to force water through the chlorinating device. The water diluted with chlorine

She Knew Dorothy. From Answers, London.

The Visitor—What an innocent looking face your little girl has! Her Mother—I hadn't noticed it. Dorothy, what have you been doing?

Well—Well the auto show was lovely, but it does put ideas in one's head, doesn't it?

Hubby—Indeed it does. What do you say if we go over and buy Junior that kiddie car we promised him?—Life.

He had run out of gas on the outskirts of a New Hampshire town, saw a young boy coming along the road carrying a big tin can.

"Well, I hope it ain't" returned the boy, with some heat. "It would taste terrible on ma's pancakes." Exchange.

Host (at dinner): "You know it is said that the mustard people make their money not by what is eaten, but by what is left on the sides of the plates."

Fair Guest: "Yes, but what all puzzles me is how they collect it."

SEES DANGER AHEAD

Not many years ago few towns and cities in the Southwest had natural gas, and distribution far from the sources of supply was very limited. Today the opposite is true, and there has been a virtual stampede to place franchises in all of the larger places.

Industrial franchises are being sought now in order to make possible another big gas line from the Pampa field to the larger cities east and north of here. Topeka granted such a franchise recently, and Amarillo has several propositions for its consideration.

Such extensive piping is detrimental to this section in a negative way, in that the fuel is being carried to the industries instead of being kept here for home industries. From this standpoint, encouragement of additional lines seems hardly advisable. Our gas stores, however, extensive, have very definite limits and each new line means quicker exhaustion of one of our greatest assets.

We have not been jealous of our gas piping away for domestic use, but we have been severely criticized. We have taken the long view, however, and answering a great need. For never in the history of the natural gas industry have so many cities and towns clamored for the benefits of the service. Distance from the supply has been cut down by pipelines costing millions of dollars. Other cities are beginning to dream of obtaining gas.

Recent figures show how South Texas, for instance, has lately shown the outstanding development in use of gas. In less than four years the formerly unserved Oilcoast has stepped from the zero point in gas consumption to the present use of 250,000,000 cubic feet daily, and distribution has entailed investments of $50,000,000.

When our gas stores were first outlined, engineers said it would require 100 years to exhaust them. But these gas men did not foresee the tremendous tapping system which would be developed. With some expert please revise the figures—Pampa Times.

The same conditions seem to govern communities as govern the minds of a great many people. There are many people, and we are inclined to believe that they are, who in the majority of cases, when times are easy, and money is coming in freely that they go on a spending spree and all they make goes through their hands like a much sand. They do not seem to realize that somewhere down the line there will be times when this money will be needed, and their supply of money will be limited, and might finally stop entirely. The same condition seems to prevail in the matter of gas in the Panhandle, and while there has been no indication before that this gas supply might become exhausted, it stands to reason that it will, even with the ordinary demands on the field, and with the wholesale piping of the gas out in every direction, and tying on of industrial plants it will be a heavy drain, and the News is correct in its contention that there is danger of exhausting the supply long before their own have estimated it have figured, and then too it is taking from the people of that section the advantages they have sought to develop.

WHY CHILD KILLING IS SAFE

WHY CHILD-KILLING IS SAFE

The action of a Brooklyn jury yesterday in defiantly ignoring the law and the evidence to acquit a motorist who killed an 8-year-old child by running him down at a speed of 50 miles an hour explains, in part, why murders and speed-maniacs consider child-killing in the streets perfectly safe. The evidence was conclusive. The witness giving the evidence were of the highest order of intelligence and character. The law is plain. And 12 men, who may or may not have children of their own, but who had taken an oath to decide according to the law and the evidence, promptly turned the speed-fiend free to menace the lives of the people.

Judge Taylor's denunciation of the verdict and of the jury that rendered it, while strong was none too strong in view of the provocation. If we have reached the point where juries consider child-slaughter something of no consequence—provided it is not their mangled children that are brought to them dead—then no child is safe in the streets of this city. Such intolerable verdicts, against the law and the evidence, give little encouragement to the police to enforce the law through arrests. Human life seems at times to be even cheaper in New York than in the Paris of pre-revolutionary days when the nobles rode down the people in the streets with impunity.—New York Evening World.

Fred Story of the Children's Index does not agree with E. A. Chalk of the Paducah Post that the old Cottle county court house is "a disgrace." The old building was classed as a good one when erected, and it has served its day in a manner very satisfactory, says Mr. Story.

Speaking of a projected municipal farm, J. Allen Wyckoff of the Clayton News suggests that the promoters might make a fortune extracting muck from the rats. Years ago, he says, muck was a common perfume.

With The Reduction In Air Mail Postage

At present the air mail, carried over this country's contract routes totals 5,700 pounds a day. From now on the quantity should increase rapidly because the postage has been reduced from 10 to 5 cents a half-ounce.

Several lines, which have been operating at a loss from the beginning, have persevered in the expectation that Congress, not only would lower the rate and thus induce the public to patronize the air mail better, but also would authorize long-term contracts for carrying such matter.

It is encouraging that the Postmaster General hereafter may issue certificates to enterprises which have operated satisfactorily under the Air Mail Act (1925) for two years or more. This will authorize the holder to carry mail over the route specified for a period not exceeding ten years from the date of the original contract. The compensation under such certificates will be revised periodically, but the rate never will be higher than that originally fixed.

Twenty-two air mail routes, aggregating 11,055 miles are operating now. Five others, under contract and scheduled to begin flying soon, will add 1,400 miles. The Post Office Department has requested but for two additional lines, totaling 1,300 miles, which probably will be opened this year.

The airway system should be augmented by a southern transcontinental route between Jacksonville and San Diego, via San Antonio. The approved airway connecting St. Louis and Omaha—to be lighted throughout—will cross the Chicago-Dallas-San Antonio line at Kansas City. It should be extended southward to Winnipeg, via St. Paul, Minneapolis and Fargo (North Dakota).

This year doubtings will bring a greater air mail service between the United States and foreign lands. Two such routes now connect American cities with communities beyond the borders. The older—under the direction of Edward Hubbard—carries mail daily between Seattle and Victoria (British Columbia), 73 miles one way. The second, established in 1927—is operated by Pan American Airways across the Straits of Florida, separating Key West and Havana. That 106-mile course is covered in 70 minutes, and service has been regular and without incident since it was inaugurated.

Every sizable community in Texas, and San Antonio particularly, should be interested in developing airways from this country to Latin America. The Post Office Department is authorized to contract with private enterprises to carry air mail at liberal rates.

Many lands to the southward will cooperate with the United States in providing aerial routes.

A Dominican enterprise, until lately operating between Santiago de Cuba and San Juan (Puerto Rico), with base at Santa Domingo, has extended its air transport to St. Kitts, beyond the Virgin Islands. Americans have joined Dominicans in the development, which is expected to attract thousands of tourists to the West Indies.—San Antonio Express.

THE RIVER OF LIFE

The more we live, more brief appear.

Our life's succeeding stages: A day to childhood seems a year. And years like passing stages.

The gladdest current of our youth, Ere passion yet disorders, Sleaks lingering like a fever smooth Along its grassy borders.

But as the careworn cheek grows wan, And sorrow's shafts fly thicker, Ye stars that measure life to man, And those of youth, a swirling length Proportioned to their sweetness.

And life itself in rapid, Why, as we near the Falls of Death?

Feel we it slide more rapid? It may be strange, yet who would change? Thus, as we course to slown, speeding, When one by one our friends are gone, And left our bosoms bleeding?

Heaven gives our years of fading strength, Illuminating fleetingness; And those of youth, a swirling length Proportioned to their sweetness.

DAILY MARKETS

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, May 21 (AP).—The cotton market was feverish today and after early firmness, which carried the July position up 28 points to 21.44, prices reacted. July eased off to 20.76 and closed at 20.82, the general market closing steady, with net losses of 4 to 10 points.

Early weather news indicating general showers over the cotton belt on Saturday and Sunday, and a firmer tone to the Liverpool cables than anticipated, caused a steady opening with prices 7 to 10 points higher. This was followed by further gains on moderate buying by local operators and ware houses, and at the extreme advance the market was 19 to 28 points above the finals of Saturday, May selling at 21.30 and October at 21.18. At this level the market hesitated.

When detailed weather reports, showing even more rain than had been reported on the map, were published with little response, traders concluded the market had become overbought and consequently technically weak. Late in the day selling became heavier with evidence of active liquidation by tired longs and by New Orleans. Wall Street houses also took the selling side after the 2 o'clock close in the stock market and under this pressure the market declined 20 to 30 points, May selling at 21 cents and October at 20.80.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON
NEW ORLEANS, May 21 (AP).—Cotton reacted to liquidation by satisfied longs and trade selling today, wiping out an early gain of 25 points and continuing on the downward movement during the closing hour until a loss of 41 points or over $2 a bale from the day's highs had been recorded.

October, the most active position, reached 20.75, a gain of 25 points over Saturday's close, in the early trading but in the afternoon eased to 20.34, down 41 points and closed at 20.92 at a net loss for the day of 8 points. The general market closed steady at net losses of 6 to 8 points.

The market experienced an early bulge on reports of trade calling. Reports of generally heavy rains over the belt also aided the movement, July touching 20.90; October 20.75 and December 20.63, a gain of 22 to 25 points from the previous close. The market gained strength on the appearance of cables 1 to 4 points better than due.

CHICAGO GRAIN
CHICAGO, May 21 (AP).—With advices current that domestic winter wheat prospects showed improvement, and with export business again slack, wheat values today had a general downward slant.

Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled, 5-8c to 1-4c net lower, with corn 1-3c to 1-4c off, oats varying from 3-8c down to 1-2c up. Corn declined toward the last, and provisions unchanged to a setback of 5c.

largely as a result of the fact that the corn visible supply decrease, 2,996,000 bushels, was less than had been looked for by many traders. Oats were unsettled, with May summer whereas Sept. was easier. Provisions reflected a lowering of hog values.

COTTONSEED OIL

NEW YORK, May 21 (AP).—The cottonseed oil market was extremely dull and featureless today, closing easy at declines of 5 to 8 points. Prime crude normal; prime summer yellow spot 10.60; May closed 10.30; July 10.48; Sept. 10.79; Oct. 10.38; Dec. 10.72.
