Cheering a killing

OAKLAND, Calif. — Dione Wells, already battered and bloody, was fleeing for her life from a knife-wielding woman when she ran into a group of teen-agers hanging out on a street corner. What happened next surprised even veteran police officers. "She was knocked to the ground . . . several people in the crowd stomped and kicked (her) on the ground, one person hit her with a bottle, they all were yelling," said Detective Sgt. John McKenna, who is investigating the case. "They were all yelling . . . 'Kill her! Kill her! kill her!' " Wells was stabbed to death as she lay where she had fallen.

LOS ANGELES — A judge dealt a legal blow to the Erik and Lyle Menendez defense Wednesday, barring extensive testimony on the family's troubled history because he said the murder trial "is not a child custody case."

500th day of siege

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Wednesday was just another day for Amira Knezevic. She climbed 480 stairs, walked to the river to get water for her garden, picked some tomatoes, yanked a few weeds, carried seven gallons of water up 15 flights of stairs, and stoked her wood stove a second time. It wasn't even noon yet. She barely had time to notice it was the 500th day of siege in Sarajevo./2A

No jeans, Hightower

FORT WORTH — You seldom see former state Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower dressed more formally than in faded bluejeans and his big white cowboy hat. Which is why you didn't see Jim Hightower in the Reflections restaurant at The Worthington hotel Tuesday night. Hightower, in town from Austin, was working in his room at The Worthington on Tuesday until 8:30 p.m. "I decided to go down and get myself a salad," he said. When he tried to walk into Reflections, he was stopped at the door: No jeans allowed.

Judge frees teen of ties

Ruling denies contact by biological parents

■ Court sides with nurture over nature; girl switched at birth may remain with man she considers her father.

Associated Press

SARASOTA, Fla. — Kimberly Mays got her wish. The 14-year-old who was switched at birth in a hospital never has to see her biological parents again, a judge ruled Wednesday, siding with nurture over nature.

Though he sidestepped the girl's request for a "divorce" from her birth parents, Circuit Judge Stephen Dakan affirmed Robert Mays, the man who raised her since birth, as her legal father.

The judge said it would be harmful to Kimberly if she were forced to visit birth parents Ernest and Regina Twigg. "The Twiggs have no legal interest in, or right to, Kimberly Mays," Dakan ruled.

The decision, eight days after a weeklong civil trial in which Kimberly sought to sever all ties to the Twiggs, left the teen-ager "yip-

Public concerns and suggestions were discussed at a town hall meeting Wednesday conducted by the Select Committee of the January Grand Jury Report.

About 60 residents attended the meeting at City Hall, during which members of the committee presented an overview of what has been done so far as a result of the report.

"The report was disturbing, but it confirmed what a lot of us already knew," said District Judge John Hyde. "We would all like to live in a community that is crime- and drug-free, but that's not the way it is."

Flames blaze up to the sky from the wooden Kapell bridge in Lucerne, Switzerland, on Wednesday.

Firemen check debris in the gutted bridge.

Fire destroys Lucerne's ancient wooden bridge

LUCERNE, Switzerland (AP) — A charred hole appeared Wednesday in the middle of the postcard-perfect view of medieval Lucerne after fire destroyed the covered wooden bridge that was the city's cherished symbol.

"It is absolutely terrible," said Lanie Carter, 54, of La Jolla, Calif., one of thousands of people who crowded the banks of the Reuss River to look at the charred Kapellbruecke (Chapel Bridge).

About 150 firefighters had tried to douse the flames, but most of the tile-roofed span — said to be the oldest covered bridge in Europe — burned up.

"It almost breaks your heart," said Lucerne Buildings Director Werner Schnieper as he watched the blaze from the shore.

The bridge, built in 1333, has been featured on many postcards and was one of the most frequently visited and photographed tourist sites in Switzerland.

No one was reported injured in the fire, which started on a boat moored underneath, officials said.

The 68-year-old millionaire who was kidnapped and held captive in a dark pit for 12 days emerged in public Wednesday, recounting his ordeal to a packed news conference televised live on national TV.

Gray stubble still covered his face. His tan suit hung loosely on a lanky, emaciated frame. But he was a welcome sight to family members and detectives who greeted him with hugs and applause.

Africanized bees' arrival brings quarantine, sets county abuzz

By Darren J. Waggoner

The Africanized honeybees that arrived in Midland County this week were trapped in a box on Highway 158 after state officials set a chemical lure.

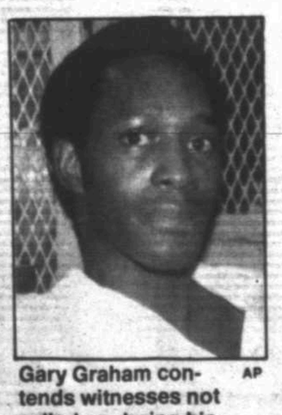

The discovery of the "killer" bees — the sometimes aggressive hybrid cousin of the mild-mannered European honeybee — comes three years after the first colony crossed the border from Mexico.

Swarms also were found this week near Garden City in Glasscock County and in Jeff Davis and Culberson counties.

All four counties have been added to a quarantine restricting the movement of commercial bee operations, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture-Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service.

Negotiators finally reach settlement on status of Sarajevo

GENEVA, Switzerland (NYT) — The three parties negotiating an end to the Bosnian war formally approved a plan Wednesday under which the Bosnian capital, Sarajevo, would be demilitarized and administered by the United Nations for two years.

The plan, which was developed by international mediators, would go into effect only as part of an overall peace agreement. But the agreement reached Wednesday removed an important stumbling block in the latest round of peace talks here among Bosnian Muslims, Serbs and Croats.

"It means that the issue of Sarajevo, for the purposes of reaching an overall peace settlement, has been settled," a U.N. spokesman, John Mills, said Wednesday night. "The issue of Sarajevo per se remains, but there will be a two-year period in which time can do its healing work."

Provisional agreement on an interim solution for Sarajevo was reached on Monday, but two extra days were needed to work out the details, including how long the U.N. administration would last. The plan does not anticipate what would happen if no permanent solution were found within two years.

Mills said an interim arrangement was proposed because, while the Serbs had wanted to divide the city, the Muslims had insisted that it remain united under their control. He said it was still unclear how many U.N. peacekeepers would be needed to demilitarize and protect the city, although between 3,000 and 9,000 soldiers and policemen have been mentioned.

The Sarajevo accord forms part of a crucial constitutional agreement reached by the parties last month under which a future Union of Bosnia-Herzegovina will be partitioned into three autonomous ethnic republics, with a weak central government handling only foreign policy and trade.

But the sides are still far from agreement on the borders of the three republics.

Part of Wednesday's talks focused on the continuing fighting between Muslims and Croats in central Bosnia, particularly around Mostar. Muslims are also refusing to cede territory in eastern Bosnia that is now held by Serbs.

Hoping to break the deadlock on these points, the mediators announced that Presidents Slobodan Milosevic of Serbia, Franjo Tudjman of Croatia and Momir Bulatovic of Montenegro would join the negotiations in Geneva on Thursday. Mills said the three men had "played a significant role in laying the groundwork for the current peace effort."

One senior Western diplomat said that, with the United States threatening air strikes against Serbian positions, Milosevic had strong reasons to favor an early peace accord. "Milosevic wants the sanctions lifted," he said, "and air strikes would delay an agreement and stretch out the sanctions."

The dispute over the maps, however, touches on the delicate issue of how much land will change hands as a result of military conquest, an issue further complicated by the fact that in many areas people from two, and at times three, ethnic groups lived together before the war.

Wednesday's agreement covers the 10 municipalities that were part of the greater Sarajevo area except for Pale.

We're in a rut: sun, upper 90s

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies with a high in the upper 90s and southeast winds at 10-20 mph. Tonight should be fair with a high near 70, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Friday should be sunny with a high in the upper 90s.

After an overnight low of 70, Wednesday's high reached 96, compared to the record high for that date of 102 set in 1987. The record low was 60 set in 1950.

STATE

Some parts of Southeast and North Texas received relief Wednesday from the state's heat wave as scattered showers and thunderstorms developed.

But forecasters posted another advisory for triple-digit temperatures later in the week as a high-pressure air mass kept its hold on the state.

Lower 100s were not uncommon around the state Wednesday, with upper 80s along the coast and 90s in other locations. It was 100 degrees at Alice and Childress, with 101 at Dallas Love Field, which had a heat-humidity index of 104.

Lufkin and Greenville both had heat indices of 107, the National Weather Service said.

NATION

Strong to severe thunderstorms rolled across parts of the northern Plains and the upper Mississippi Valley on Wednesday, causing flooding in already saturated parts of Iowa.

The storms developed in moist and very unstable air along a pair of frontal boundaries draped across the central part of the nation, the National Weather Service said.

One frontal boundary curved from the upper Mississippi Valley across the central Plains into the central Rockies, and the second stretched from the middle Mississippi Valley through the Ohio Valley to the middle Atlantic Coast.

Northeastern Iowa was especially hard hit, with an inch and more across that area and across sections of southeastern Minnesota that drain into Iowa's Cedar and Upper Iowa rivers.

The fifth flood of the year shut off transportation in and out of Chelsea, Iowa, a Tama County town of 376 people, and the Red Cross opened a shelter for people who fled their homes.

"They're used to some flooding, but it is so much deeper this time. Everything is so saturated. There's no place for the water to go," said Tama County emergency management director Pat Paustian. "The town is basically shut down."

Three inches of rain was reported at Victor, Iowa, with up to 5 inches at Spencer, S.D., the weather service said.

ABUZZ: Killer bees make way into county is nothing out of the ordinary other than the fact that we want to move the bees out of the county," said Paul Jackson, chief of the Texas Apiary Inspection Service, a unit of the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station of Texas A&M University.

Africanized honeybees look just like regular domestic honeybees but are more defensive in protecting their hives. The differences between the two bees are microscopic, he said.

Jackson urges people who spot hives on their property to call a beekeeper or an exterminator.

"If a swarm is left unchecked — and they're Africanized — a small swarm will soon have nests going all over the place," he said. "A person mowing the yard who comes across them could be in big trouble."

Africanized honeybees generally nest at levels at 3 feet or lower to the ground. They often are found near house trailers.

Beekeepers claim the term "killer" is a misnomer.

"Twenty percent are aggressive. Although just because a swarm doesn't get after you doesn't mean they aren't Africanized," Jackson said. "A swarm may be passive one month and aggressive the next.

"It's a common error in judgment that people believe these bees won't bother you if you don't bother them," he said.

On July 15, an 82-year-old Brownsville man was the first person in the United States to be killed by so-called killer bees since their migration to this country three years ago.

Two weeks later, an 87-year-old Brownsville man was hospitalized after he was stung more than 300 times by bees that swarmed him while he was watering a banana tree.

Brownsville police have cautioned residents to be on the lookout for bee swarms.

New Mexico officials are expecting the bees to show up later this week, now that rain has brought flowers to the southern desert, said Mike English, director of the extension service at New Mexico State University.

The group has been moving northwest at 200 to 250 miles a year after arriving in the Rio Grande Valley.

Earlier this month, a second group of Africanized honeybees was found in southern Arizona after entering the country from western Mexico.

In 1985, an isolated colony of the hybrid was discovered in California and subsequently destroyed.

Africanized honeybees developed in the Americas in Brazil in the late 1950s when a researcher imported some aggressive African honeybees. Some of the bee colonies, which produce large amounts of honey, escaped and queens mated with drones in the area. The result was the hybrid referred to as Africanized honeybees or South American "killer bees."

Thirty Texas counties have been added to the quarantine list since last year. The quarantine allows beekeepers to move bee hives within, but not out of, the zone in an effort to prevent assisting the spread.

But bee swarms don't necessarily pay attention to man-made boundaries, Jackson said.

AIRS: Concerns, suggestions are discussed

(From 1A)

Hyde said the drug problem in Midland was epidemic and that the problem was not going to be solved at the state level.

"In the past, we could send these people to prison for the amount of time they needed to stay," he said. "But, with the state facing financial problems, no new prisons can be built. And what we have is overcrowded. The focus has to be in the counties and communities. We at the local level have to come up with innovative ideas for improving our youth and protecting them from drugs and alcohol."

Midland City Council member Claudia Egan said a lot of Midland residents have chosen not to believe the report.

"This report has produced a lot of naysayers," she said. "But, Midland has a drug problem. We are a hub for drug traffic from Mexico. We have to become a squeaky wheel and deal with this problem. Law enforcement can't do it all by themselves. We have to merge as a community and put a dent in the problem."

Kit Tomlinson and Christine Lewellen, both Midland High School students and members of the Wake Up Teen Task Force, also were present at the meeting.

"I don't use drugs and I don't drink and it makes me sick to see people that are ruining their lives with this stuff," Tomlinson said. "The community has its head in the sand, not wanting to believe that their kids are doing this stuff. Well, they are. I see it every day. And, nothing happens to them."

Miss Lewellen said she once had a drug problem and spent 13 months in treatment.

"I was a user and there was no need for it," she said. "I had parents who loved me and friends like Kit who were trying to talk me out of it. You can talk until you are blue in the face to kids about not doing drugs, but there is nothing as powerful as peer pressure."

During the question-and-answer session, Kyle Peters asked if parents accomapanied their juvenile children in court and if parents were encouraged by the court to attend drug and alcohol awareness workshops.

"The problem with the law is that a judge only has authority over the person in his court, which is the juvenile," Hyde said. "The parents are not defendants and you only have limited control over them. You can't really make them appear in court with their child."

City attorney Keith Stretcher said courts encourage parents to attend a drug and alcohol awareness program with their children.

"If you are asking if they are made aware of it, yes, they are," he said. "And, the judge really encourages the program for both the defendant and their parent."

Charla DesJardins, who identified herself as the parent of a problem teen-ager, said she believed that the school district should put more effort into getting the parents involved as soon as a child missed school or was called in for a drug or alcohol offense.

"My child constantly missed school and I got a (computerized message) that called me at home to tell me he had missed," she said. "Now, how many times did I get the message and how many times did my son pick it up? We finally set up a system to where the school would only accept absenses from me when I told them my Social Security number. My suggestion is a person, one-on-one, contacting the parent and letting them know what the problem is. We need to find out what our kids are doing."

Midland Independent School District board trustee Jackie Hamilton agreed with Mrs. DesJardins, but said it was difficult sometimes to get parent involvement.

"Too many of these parents cover up for their kids," she said. "They just don't want to admit it. They'll sit right in the school office and deny anything is going on."

Jack Mogal drew on the plight of Jessica McClure five years ago in discussing the problems of today's youth.

"Five years ago, there was a little girl in a well and we responded," he said. "Today, there are hundreds of kids in the well. Where is our concern for them? We aren't going to be able to do anything as long as we remain apathetic."

ping and yelping" for joy, one of her laywers said.

"Kimberly finally feels she's got her life back," said attorney Arthur Ginsburg, who phoned the girl as she vacationed at an undisclosed spot. "She said she wanted to kiss the judge."

George Russ, another of Kimberly's attorneys, said, "It was a pure situation of psychology vs. biology and the court made it clear where it comes down."

The Twiggs sought visitation rights at the trial, and they had promised to appeal any decision that went against them, to the U.S. Supreme Court if necessary.

Their attorney, John Blakely, said the Twiggs were disappointed but not surprised by the ruling. "It means at least another year of legal maneuvering," Blakely said.

"The bottom line is the judge did not find the Twiggs unfit parents — and biological parents are entitled to have contact with their own cled ninth-grader so adamantly against her blood relatives were Mrs. Twigg's unproven suspicions — repeated on television tabloid and talk shows — that Mays was somehow involved in the hospital baby switch and was an abusive father.

The judge noted how Mrs. Twigg repeated those accusations in letters to the editor of Kimberly's hometown newspaper — and even signed other people's names to them.

"It would be difficult to conclude that this conduct showed substantial concern for the welfare of Kimberly," the judge said, adding that the Twiggs' position is "that their interests, whatever they might be, are paramount."

The judge also said that conduct created a "chasm" between Kimberly and the Twiggs and a 1989 visitation agreement between the two families is now meaningless.

Kimberly appeared happy in videos of her visits with the Twiggs and their seven other children in 1990, but Mays cut the visits off after five sessions, saying they were disrupting Kimberly's attitude and schoolwork.

The Twiggs retaliated by seeking custody — an effort that failed last year when a judge refused to take Kimberly away from Mays.

Mays' first wife died of cancer in 1981.

SCORES: Texas seniors get higher marks better than in 1992. They scored 472 out of 800 points on the mathematics section, six points higher than last year.

(From 1A)

The results were contained in a report released Thursday by the College Board, a nonprofit, New York-based association that creates and administers the tests.

Texas students fell below the national averages on the test and, with Maryland students, ranked 10th from the bottom in the nation on combined verbal and math scores.

The national average for the test was 424 on the verbal section and 478 on the math section. Those results were one point and two points higher, respectively, than last year's.

College Board officials stressed that ranking states based on their average scores does not accurately reflect the aptitude of students or quality of teachers.

Donald H. Stewart, president of the College Board, said the percentage of high school seniors taking the test varies greatly from state to state and accounts in large part for the differences in average scores.

In some states only a small percentage of students take the test. Often, they are the state's better students who seek to enter the most selective colleges, which usually demand that incoming students take the SAT, Stewart said.

For example, 45 percent of graduating high school seniors took the test this year in Texas, while only 5 percent took the SAT in Iowa, which led the nation on the test scores. The percentage taking the test ranged from 4 percent in Mississippi and Utah to 78 percent in New Hampshire.

More than 1 million high school seniors take the SAT each year — 43 percent of the projected high school graduates in the Class of '93.

Nationally, female students scored one point better than last year on each portion of the test. Male students scored the same as last year on the verbal section and three points better on the math portion.

Scores for the ethnic groups identified by the test went up by one to five points from the 1992 scores.

White students averaged 444 on the verbal part of the test this year, while black students averaged 353. Mexican Americans scored 374 on average. On the math part, whites averaged 494 and blacks, 388. Mexican Americans scored an average of 428.

KEY: Rescued millionaire recounts ordeal man, they reveal him," Police Commissioner Raymond Kelly said during his introduction of Weinstein.

(From 1A)

Weinstein's ordeal revealed him as a man of true grit.

The native New Yorker who made his fortune manufacturing tuxedos was abducted at knifepoint in the parking lot of his favorite diner on the morning of Aug. 4.

When he overheard his captor's plans to demand a multimillion dollar ransom, "I told them they had the wrong guy," he said.

"I added up my checking account and thought I was going to be a little short," he said jokingly.

Blinded by goggles, he was spirited to a secluded ravine off a Manhattan highway and dropped into an abandoned, 8-foot-deep utility shaft. His abductors shackled him, them covered the top of the hole with a metal plate.

From the start, the former Marine and avid tennis player "knew the key was my mind and not my body."

As hours, then days passed, he drew on his World War II combat experience, when he spent long stretches of time in pitch-black foxholes.

He rationed the bananas, plums and water his captors dropped down through a small shaft, eating as little as possible to avoid filling the hole with excrement. He calculated the passage of time by listening to the highway traffic patterns.

He also started "the greatest autobiography never written," he said.

"I would start each session with 'This is the verbal autobiography of Harvey Weinstein: Age 6,' and it was astounding the memories that would come back."

But after about a week, despair — and thoughts of death — began to set in.

At one low point, he said, he began "yelling at Janet Reno to get more people on this case."

"I was not very kind, because I felt she was not giving enough support."

But above ground, the search was frantic.

A small army of police detectives and FBI agents worked around the clock, monitoring phone negotiations between members of Weinstein's family and the kidnappers, who demanded $3 million.

Finally on Monday morning, Weinstein's son delivered the cash. The man who collected it, Fermin Rodriguez, was trailed and arrested by plainclothes detectives, authorities said. In all, three people have been arrested and charged with first-degree kidnapping.

Rodriguez, an employee at Weinstein's tuxedo factory, helped lead detectives to his boss' prison.

By then, Weinstein said, he was in "the deepest depths of despair."

Suddenly, he heard the calls of detectives. He returned the calls, and soon was bathed in daylight as the steel plate was removed.

At the news conference, Weinstein re-created the moment of freedom, reaching out to the clutch the hand of the man who pulled him to safety, Detective William Mondore.

GRAHAM: Needle was 'too close'

(From 1A)

Bobby Lambert, who was robbed and shot in a Houston grocery parking lot.

On Friday, Graham won a stay of execution from the 3rd Court of Appeals.

On Monday, however, Texas Attorney General Dan Morales appealed that ruling to the Court of Criminal Appeals, which granted Graham another stay of execution.

"I was very concerned about the aggressiveness of Morales to try to lift the stay," Graham said. "I was hoping he would allow the evidence to be heard and the (parole board) hearing to go forward."

Graham was moved late Monday afternoon the 15 miles from the Ellis Unit, which houses death row, to the Walls Unit prison in downtown Huntsville, where executions take place. Once there, he was placed in a small holding cell a few feet away from the execution gurney.

It was the third time Graham had made the trip to the death chamber.

"You knew what to expect, but not knowing what to expect with the decision and not knowing when the decision would take place was very nerve wracking," Graham said.

Graham contends witnesses not called on during his trial will testify that he was elsewhere at the time of the shooting, and that he didn't match the gunman's description.

Prosecutors say the alibi witnesses are not credible. Morales said there is no new evidence that would warrant a hearing for Graham before the State Board of Pardons and Paroles.

Graham, who was 17 at the time of the slaying, pleaded guilty to 10 similar robberies where a victim was approached in a supermarket parking lot. In two, the victims were shot. In a third, a woman was raped.

Court moves to free Demjanjuk; extremists threaten murder

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israelis who believe John Demjanjuk put Jews to death at Nazi camps were given one last, remote chance Wednesday to get him tried again for crimes against humanity.

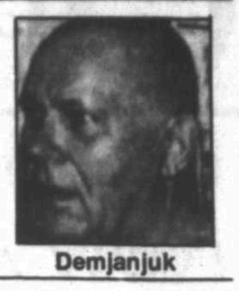

Jewish extremists threatened to take the law into their own hands and kill the retired Ohio autoworker if Israel sets him free.

Israel's Supreme Court moved in that direction Wednesday when three of its judges decided not to order a new trial. But Chief Justice Meir Shamgar delayed Demjanjuk's deportation for a third time until Friday to give Holocaust survivors and other petitioners a last chance to plead for a new trial before the full, five-member court.

The full court ruled July 29 that prosecutors did not prove Demjanjuk was the brutal Treblinka death camp guard "Ivan the Terrible" and overturned his 1988 death sentence.

But the justices, reluctant to drag out the legal proceedings further, advised against retrying him on evidence suggesting he was a Nazi death camp guard at another camp. That ruling enraged many Israelis who say Israel should spare no effort to try him for crimes against humanity.

Kach, an ultra-rightist group, announced outside courtroom that if Demjanjuk is freed, 'We will find a way to kill him.' Kach has record of vigilantism.

Demjanjuk

Demjanjuk has claimed throughout that he was a victim of mistaken identity. He says he was captured by the Germans as a Soviet soldier in 1942 and spent most of World War II in Nazi prisons.

Baruch Marzel of the ultra-rightist Kach movement announced outside the courtroom that if Demjanjuk is freed, "we will find a way to kill him." Kach is a small group, but has a record of vigilante violence, mainly against Palestinians.

Holocaust survivor Yisrael Yehezkeli ripped his shirt in a sign of mourning and screamed: "I have little time left to live and swore to myself I wouldn't let these murderers go ... How can they let him go free?"

Israeli prison authorities said they were preparing tight security for Demjanjuk's possible transfer from Ayalon Prison to Ben Gurion International Airport, a trip of about three miles.

Prison Services spokesman Dubi Ben-Ami said Israel's responsibility ends the minute Demjanjuk steps on a plane. Defense attorney Yoram Sheftel said he was worried about flight security.

Jerusalem police spokesman Shmuel Ben-Ruby said he didn't know whether Demjanjuk's family would be given police protection. The family brought along four burly bodyguards on this trip.

If deported, the Ukrainian-born Demjanjuk would likely fly to the United States, said Rep. James Traficant, D-Ohio, who is acting as spokesman for the family. Traficant said U.S. Embassy officials in Tel Aviv promised to issue the stateless Demjanjuk a special entry permit to the United States.

Egyptian minister's target of fatal bomb

CAIRO (NYT) - A bomb that government officials said had been planted by Islamic militants exploded near Cairo's busiest square Wednesday, apparently in an attempt to assassinate Egypt's new interior minister as his motorcade drove past.

The explosion was one of the boldest and best planned in the continuing war between the militants and the government. Four people were killed and at least 15 wounded, the government said.

The interior minister, Hassan al-Alfi, who has vowed an all-out attack on the militants, was among the wounded. The bomb was apparently detonated by a remote device as his motorcade neared the ministry.

To dispel any rumors that he had been killed, Alfi appeared on television Wednesday night from a hospital, his ear and arm bandaged, to denounce terrorists.

A former police general, Alfi was named to the Cabinet in April to crack down on militants whose campaign against President Hosni Mubarak has plunged Egypt into a whirl of violence. His effort has led to a string of executions over the past six weeks that his opponents have vowed to avenge.

The attack Wednesday, 500 yards from Al Tahrir square and a block from the ministry, was the most serious against the government since March, when a similar assassination attempt wounded the information minister, Mohammed Safwat el-Sherif.

Alfi and Sherif are among the closest aides to Mubarak, who was in Libya Wednesday for talks with Col. Moammar Gadhafy.

One of the dead Wednesday was a bodyguard of the minister, but Egyptian television and radio accounts said most victims were students from nearby schools and passers-by. The tree-shaded street where the bomb exploded is the site of the American University in Cairo.

No group took responsibility for the bombing, which destroyed four cars and damaged several buildings, but senior government officials said Islamic militants were the only suspects.

There were conflicting reports on whether a gunfight also ensued. Some witnesses reported that armed men fired at the motorcade immediately after the explosion, but the government said that the only weapon used in the attack was the bomb and that shots were fired by armed guards after the explosion.

Wary neighbors can catch vandals

The vandals are back. And this time they're unleashing their mindless destruction on the brick-encased mailboxes that have become fashionable in recent years. Some wield baseball bats, which they swing from their vehicles as they drive past homes that have metal mailboxes, or topple the brick structures with their cars or pickups.

It's said that some of the destruction is called "mailbox polo." Well, Midland has long been known as a community that enjoys the equestrian sport of polo, but residents aren't enjoying this latest foolish version of it in the least. Polo bespeaks a civilized society; smashing brick mailboxes asserts there are still some among us who are far from civilized.

Midland resident Madge Robinson, who lost her mailbox to vandals, aptly summarized the destruction when she noted, "It's just plain foolishness. Children at play. These kids need to find a better outlet to channel their energies."

She's absolutely correct. And while some Midlanders may excuse the vandalism as mere childishness, it could be useful to punish any of the vandals — when caught — by making them rebuild the mailbox structures. After all, the destruction of personal property in this manner indicates the lack of a full appreciation of what it takes to maintain property. Giving the vandals a full course in rebuilding the mailboxes might help them to appreciate property.

More than likely the vandals do not think they will be caught and that their outburst of violence against civilization will go unpunished. A few years back the "in" thing for young people to do was to rip the hood ornaments off of Mercedes-Benz automobiles. It's simply mindless destruction that lashes out at society and what is meaningful to the people in that society.

Police acknowledge there's little they can do to stop the destruction unless residents get descriptions of vehicles, make reports on the crimes and take other steps to help them catch the culprits. But Midlanders can keep a wary eye out for the vandals and help the police in that way.

That's another aspect of civilized society that works to the benefit of all: Looking out for the property and interests of others. The next time the "mailbox polo" culprits are brandishing their bats, they won't know who's watching — but, hopefully, somebody will be.

Americans may wonder where Bosnia is leading

Americans should be wondering: What is the Bosnian policy being crafted in their name?

For the third time, the United States is talking tough. Indeed, it is talking tougher than ever before — more so than candidate Clinton did when he urged air strikes to relieve Sarajevo last year or than Secretary of State Warren Christopher did . . . when he halfheartedly tried to interest Europeans in lifting the misguided U.N. arms embargo against Bosnia's beleaguered Muslims.

On both past occasions, the United States backed off in the face of European resistance. . . . As a result, a third American bid for using force acquires extraordinary importance . . . as a test of U.S. credibility. . . .

At NATO headquarters in Brussels, Washington has taken the lead. It has overcome the extreme reluctance of European allies, concerned for the safety of their 9,000 troops in Bosnia, and secured agreement to use air strikes if necessary to lift the Bosnian Serb siege of Sarajevo and facilitate delivery of U.N. aid. . . .

But the president still has an obligation to explain how great a U.S. investment his new policy entails. Does he envisage limited bombing, or a mighty blow against Bosnian Serb command and control, supplies and communications? Who will protect peacekeepers from likely Serb assaults? If bombing only intensifies the war, will the president send in the Marines? And if Washington leads a bombing campaign, does it inherit the job of making peace in Bosnia?

TEA's student performance report produces questions

The news that hundreds of Texas schools are performing so poorly they could be closed by the Texas education commissioner was bad enough. Worse yet was the way the state agency chose to "report" it. . . .

TEA spokeswoman Della May Moore said agency officials wanted to make sure the lists were correct and give superintendents time to appeal rankings, because it appeared some schools may have been listed incorrectly. Moore said State Board of Education rules on accreditation affords districts this measure of confidentiality pending appeal.

Although concern for accuracy is not unappreciated, it seems that the delay was, at least partly, motivated by politics. The additional time allowed the agency to put a spin on the fact that 94 percent of Texas schools are considered performing up to capacity, rather than focus on the 6 percent that are in trouble.

GEORGE WILL

New America springs across border

ON INTERSTATE 5, NORTH OF SAN DIEGO — If you blink you may miss them. Don't blink. They are signs of the time.

Will

They are large yellow signs of the sort that use black silhouettes — of falling rocks, leaping deer, playing children — to warn motorists. But the silhouettes on these signs are of a running family — a father, mother and small daughter. They represent illegal immigrants who risk, and sometimes lose, their lives, sprinting through the stream of speeding vehicles to evade a government checkpoint.

Here, where the surf rumbles a few hundred yards from the traffic's roar, two of the nation's political preoccupations fuse: immigration and the North American Free Trade Agreement.

From the moment in the 18th century when national consciousness began emerging on the thinly settled eastern fringe of this continent, the animating question of American politics has been: What kind of people do we want to be? We now face, with immigration and NAFTA, choices that will shape who we are.

In Sacramento and Washington, legislative hoppers are piled high with proposals, from national identity cards and increased border patrols to diminished entitlements for immigrants, to slow the flow of foreigners. But all such proposals pale in significance when compared with NAFTA.

What impels immigrants to risk everything crossing the freeway — or the ocean it borders? The hope of betterment — in a word, jobs. Most immigrants would prefer to pursue a productive future at home. NAFTA will help potential immigrants to prosper at home — if NAFTA can be rescued from current irrationalities of American politics.

Pat Buchanan Republicans, a small but gingery group, oppose both immigration and NAFTA, an incoherence matched within the Democratic Party. Many Democrats are queasy about acknowledging the principal incentive for immigrants — the availability of entry-level jobs in America — because many black leaders blame the disorderly lives of the inner city underclass on the supposed unavailability of such jobs. Furthermore, freer trade means, as freedom generally does, an uncertain future, and so is threatening to the timid, including some Democratic constituencies, such as organized labor.

If this moment for liberalized trade through NAFTA is missed, there will be a spate of surrenders by the government — in the name of "compassion" — to timid interests demanding protection. And if immigration law is changed in a manner that codifies fear and hostility, America's identity will be altered.

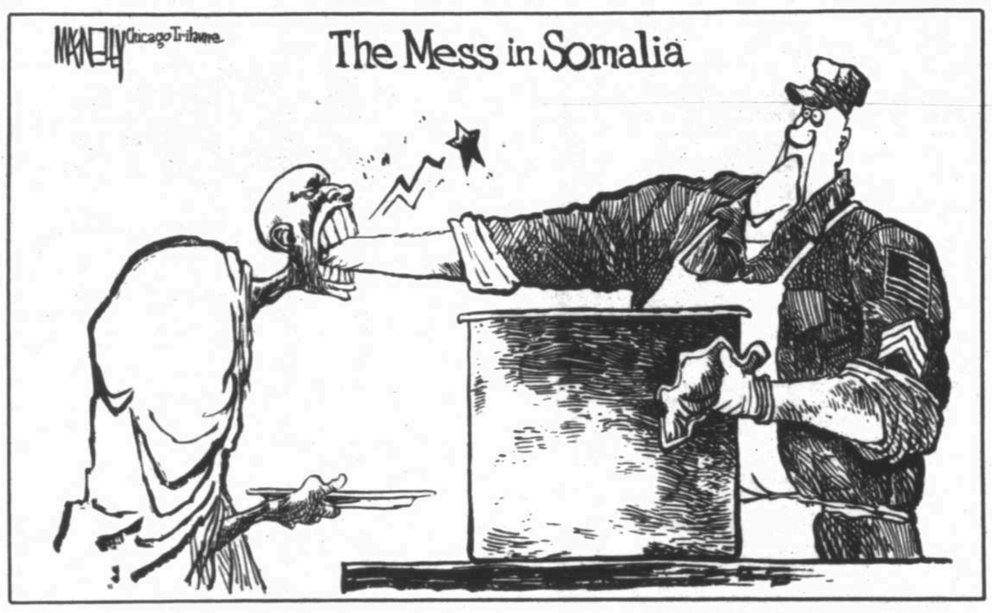

Candidate Clinton said, protection is just a fancy word for giving up. Giving up, that is, the nation's characteristic stance of confidence about competition and a fast unfolding future.

What was once called "the Protestant ethic" — faith manifested in social advancement through individual striving — is coming in quantity from Catholic countries to the south.

Richard Rodriguez, an American writer of Mexican parentage, says that Tijuana, comparable in size to its neighbor, San Diego, is, in a sense, more American than San Diego. He means that Tijuana is rawer, less middle-aged, more as America used to be in its youthful boisterousness.

In the flood tide of 19th century American confidence, Walt Whitman proclaimed that America was more than a nation, it was a world. The justifiable concern about today's immigration is that America may be becoming less than a nation, a community lacking a clear cultural definition, a mere geographic expression.

CHARLEY REESE

Gun controllers target our free society

Here is a test to determine one's level of stupidity.

True or false? A career criminal will decide to become a law-abiding citizen because Congress passes the Brady Bill, which will require a waiting period for the purchase of a handgun.

Reese

True or false? A psychotic person will decide to become sane because he figures if he goes to the store to buy a handgun, a background check will reveal that he is part of the Early Release Program for Multiple Axe Murders.

True or false? A government that cannot effectively enforce laws against narcotics, illegal immigration, and various and assorted other crimes will effectively enforce one more gun control law added to the more than 20,000 already on the books.

True or false? Career criminals always purchase their firearms from legitimate dealers, pay for them with Visa or MasterCard, and put their right names on the federal registration forms.

True or false? Human beings do not cause crimes; inanimate objects made of metal cause crime.

True or false? Human beings do not build houses or office buildings. Hammers, saws, drills, and measuring tools build them.

If you answered true to any of the above you are stupid enough to be an American politician.

Actually, I jest. President Clinton and the assorted members of Congress clamoring to pass a new crime bill are not stupid.

The knowledge that criminals do not buy their weapons from legitimate dealers — the only weapons purchases that will be covered by the Brady bill — is not a National Rifle Association argument. It is information contained in a U.S. Department of Justice study based on extensive interviews with hundreds of incarcerated criminals.

Clinton and the Brady Bill bunch know this. They know that short of setting up a totalitarian police state, there is no way to control criminal access to firearms. They know also that 75 percent of the American people already live in states or cities that already require waiting periods, many much longer than the five days proposed in the Brady Bill. They know that objective studies by legitimate scholars have shown not once but over and over that there is no correlation between gun control laws and crime rate.

So, any intelligent American, seeing people he knows are smart propose something stupid —propose something they themselves know will not do what they are claiming it will do — must logically infer that these smart people have some hidden reason for doing what they are doing.

There's one inviolable rule of human conduct: nobody does anything without a reason. A human being, even a psychotic, is incapable of acting without a reason or purpose.

In the case of Sarah Brady, whose husband is the namesake of the waiting period bill, and who heads an anti-gun outfit, her real motives are quite clear. She has said explicitly that the long-range goal is to deprive private American citizens of all firearms.

As strange as it sounds to urban ears, especially those attached to people with sheep-like dispositions, history shows that governments that seek to disarm their citizens intend afterwards to harm their citizens.

Fidel Castro's and Pol Pot's first speeches were gun control speeches. A man who runs an organization called Jews Against Gun Control has published a book proving the 1968 Gun Control Act is almost verbatim a copy of a Nazi gun control act. A poll conducted by the National Association of Chiefs of Police of command rank officers found 73 percent believe waiting periods are useless and 86.8 percent believe private citizens should be trained in armed self-defense.

Beware of smart people who do stupid things.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Like freshman, Congress begs, promises

The last time we checked in with my friend Rigsby, the productive Republican, who is also a white heterosexual male who smokes, he was feeling pretty bad about himself.

Grizzard

"I'm exactly what's wrong with this country," he said. "All you got to do is read the editorial pages and listen to liberals to realize that. Only a mother could love a productive Republican who is also a white heterosexual male who smokes."

But there is good news. After Congress finally passed President Clinton's budget plan, Rigsby is feeling a lot better about himself.

"For 12 years during the Reagan and Bush eras, all I did was go to work, make my company successful, and blatantly accept the profits that came in. I even bought municipal bonds that paid me tax-free interest."

I'm not certain I would have admitted that, but Rigsby obviously is a new man.

"But under the new budget and tax plan," Rigsby went on, "I'll finally be doing my fair share from now on. Do you realize that last year I didn't even send a million dollars to Washington?"

"Rigsby," I said, "there are just some things you shouldn't say in public."

"I don't care," he said. "I only sent eight hundred thousand and change. That would barely pay for federal funding of Lawrence Welk's boyhood home. I'm not certain how I've been able to look at myself in the mirror."

"But you do feel better?"

"You wouldn't believe how much guilt I've been able to shed," he answered. "And I'll tell you something else," he went on. "I'm not nearly as cynical as I once was about Congress. I know that the more we've sent them in the past, the more they've spent, but I really believe they're not going to do it this time.

"Scalawags like me have been saying, sending more money to Congress is like pouring gasoline on a fire. But this time, I am certain they are going to spend the money wisely and use it to reduce the federal deficit.

"There won't be any more waste. There won't be any more pork. There won't be any more costly entitlements. I know in my heart that Bill Clinton and Congress wouldn't lie to me and the American people."

It did my own heart good to see this change in Rigsby. If all those dastardly sorts in his category, the privileged class who weren't doing their fair share and got filthy rich during the Reagan and Bush years while others suffered horribly, would adopt his attitude we might see this country get going again.

And I was especially glad to see his change in attitude about the individuals who will be managing the massive increase in tax revenue.

I admit I've had my own reservations about them. It's like sending a kid off to college. He calls you three weeks later and says he's broke and needs more money.

"OK, son," you say to him, "I'll send you some more money, but you need to learn the value of it and how not to waste it."

So two months later he calls and he's broke again and needs even more money this time. But he's changed.

"Just send me this money, Dad," he says, "and I promise I won't squander it all away this time."

"You really promise?"

"I REALLY promise."

That's sort of where we are with Congress. They promised us over and over no more spending sprees and they've broken that promise over and over.

"But," like Rigsby says, "they REALLY promised this time, and that's good enough for me."

"To be perfectly honest," Rigsby also said, "I think Congress deserves to give itself a pay raise for finding a way to get deadbeats like me to pay my fair share."

I mentioned earlier Rigsby smokes. Now, I'm beginning to wonder what.

Ruler: Sudan doesn't support terror

KHARTOUM, Sudan (AP) — Sudan's military ruler dismissed accusations by Washington that his country supports international terrorism and said it only advocates Islam.

By adding Sudan to its list of countries supporting terrorism, Washington on Wednesday severed Sudan from its assistance programs, with the exception of humanitarian aid.

But Lt. Gen. Omar Hassan el-Bashir, Sudan's leader, indicated he would reject even the $50 million in humanitarian aid Washington is sending this year.

"Talking about the continuing humanitarian assistance means talking about an American intelligence presence in Sudan," el-Bashir told reporters Wednesday, adding that "would make our country a theater for spies and agents."

His statement was a retort to the U.S. State Department's contention that Sudan is a haven for terrorists.

The Clinton administration's decision was based on "its deep-rooted animosity against Islam" and was "politically biased and lacking in evidence and logic," el-Bashir said.

His comments were read on national radio.

Washington's action coincided with reports of evidence linking Sudanese diplomats in the United States with the terrorist plot to bomb targets in New York City. But the allegations were not taken into account in Washington's decision to brand Sudan a terrorist-sponsoring nation, State Department spokesman Mike McCurry said in Washington.

Egypt and the United States claim that Sudan, with Iran's backing, is training terrorists bent on spreading Islamic rule into moderate Arab states.

Gutbi Mehdi, a Foreign Ministry spokesman, said the American notification of its decision presented no evidence and named no specific acts.

Germany may allow historic terrorist huddle

BERLIN (NYT) — Seeking to avoid a threatened new wave of leftist terrorism, German officials may allow jailed terrorists to meet together for the first time in the hope that they will urge their comrades outside to refrain from further violence.

The issue is being hotly debated by politicians and prosecutors. Some are strongly opposed to giving the convicted terrorists any concessions, but others say the idea is worth pursuing because it could save lives.

After a bungled police ambush in the eastern town of Bad Kleinen two months ago, in which a captured Red Army Faction member was killed apparently in cold blood by a police officer, the far-left group issued a statement warning that it would soon begin a new terror campaign. Many law enforcement officials took the warning seriously.

The Red Army Faction has shown itself able to kill prominent Germans with impunity, though it has not done so since claiming its last victim in 1991.

Against this background, some officials have welcomed the request by prisoners belonging to the Red Army Faction. Press reports say the prisoners want to be brought together for about two weeks. They say they want to hold discussions that could lead them to issue a statement calling for an end to the group's attacks.

Eighteen members of the Red Army Faction are being held in eight German prisons. Most are serving long terms after having been convicted of murder or other serious crimes.

Clinton's U.S. troops under foreign command idea draws fire

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of Congress told the White House Wednesday to slow down on a plan to permit U.S. combat troops to serve under foreign commanders in U.N. peacekeeping operations.

One senator, Republican Malcolm Wallop of Wyoming, denounced the plan as a "nutty idea" and said, "I can't imagine the Congress going along with it."

Others, including a Democratic member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said President Clinton should consult with Congress before trying to move ahead.

The administration began the day by suggesting an executive order was ready for the president's signature, then quickly backed off.

At midday, State Department spokesman Mike McCurry said, "There are substantial questions that remain to be addressed."

McCurry noted that U.S. troops serve under foreign command "in several places around the world already."

However, those forces are not combat troops. For example, logistical forces in Somalia are under U.N. command, but 1,300 combat troops in the African nation remain under U.S. control.

A New York Times report said Clinton was expected to sign the executive order in September.

Not since World War II have U.S. combat troops served under foreign command. Even during the Korean War, which was technically a U.N. operation, all U.S. forces were under American command.

"The United Nations is a bloated bureaucracy...It does not stand for the same values and principles that the United States stands for."

— Sen. Robert Dole, minority leader

The same was true in the most recent multinational ground operation, the Persian Gulf War.

One stumbling block Clinton would encounter on Capitol Hill was hostility toward the U.N.

■ More national news/5B

In a speech to the National Governors' Association on Tuesday, Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas said "the United Nations is a bloated bureaucracy." He added that the international organization "does not stand for the same values and principles the United States stands for."

Members of Congress were quick to complain of a lack of consultation.

"A number of questions will be raised, hearings will be demanded," said Sen. Richard Lugar of Indiana, a senior Republican on the Foreign Relations Committee.

"I don't know what the president has in mind," said Democratic Sen. James Exon of Nebraska, a senior member of the Armed Services Committee. He said he would urge Clinton to consult with Congress before signing the order.

The question of possible international command over U.S. combat forces is particularly relevant at a time when the administration is pressing for NATO air strikes in Bosnia to enforce U.N. resolutions calling for an end to the siege of Sarajevo.

In addition, the administration has said the United States would contribute troops to a U.N. peacekeeping force sent to Bosnia if the parties agreed to stop fighting.

The State Department official who spoke privately said the proposed presidential directive has the support of the Pentagon, the State Department and the National Security Council as well as U.N. Ambassador Madeleine Albright.

LOSE WEIGHT OR STOP SMOKING FREE

American Health Technology has established a community health care grant to pay professional therapists to help people Lose Weight or Stop Smoking.

The therapist's $60 fee for each person attending is paid by the grant. To help pay for other costs that make this clinic possible, we ask that each person who attending pay a registration fee of $5.

There are no treatment costs for complete "Group Therapy". There are no strings attached.

Funds from the grant are to be used in many communities throughout America. There is sufficient money available in the grant to help several thousands of people in your community, including you!

We are sponsoring a clinic funded by the grant at the location, date and time published below. Please attend if you want to Stop Smoking or Lose Excess Body Fat.

- If you are an overweight WOMAN you can reduce ONE to THREE dress sizes in 30 days.
- If you are an overweight MAN you can reduce ONE to THREE inches from your waist in about four weeks.
- If you smoke or chew tobacco you can quit permanently with no weight gain or uncomfortable withdrawal symptoms.
- If you smoke and also are overweight you can eliminate both disorders at the same time.
- Attend this clinic and benefit from the latest therapy techniques including CLINICAL HYPNOSIS.
- During the first half of the session we will explain the latest techniques we use to help you. We will answer any questions and discuss your concerns. We then take a 30 minute break so you can decide if you are ready to Stop Smoking, Lose Weight, or both! If you are not, simply leave. There is no obligation to stay. If you stay, you will complete your final hour of therapy after the break.
- After therapy most people feel like a "new person". You can be free of your desire to smoke and also be extremely motivated to eat the proper amount of healthy foods and to exercise.
- You will also be relieved of stress and tension. The entire process is a wonderful relaxing experience that is good for you.
- You only need to attend this one session for desirable results. Daily use of our "optional" hypnotherapy audio cassette tape makes this possible. Our clinical tape for your disorder hypnotizes you safely and gently in just minutes. It will modify your behavior to easily obtain your goal. The tape will be on sale during the break for $15. Cash or check will be accepted.
- Your therapist will be Mel Gilley, Ph.D. Dr. Gilley is nationally recognized for his extraordinarily high client success rate. He has practiced privately for eleven years.
- Hundreds of seats will be available for "group" hypnotherapy. Plenty of free parking. FIRST COME, FIRST SEATED! For best seats arrive early. Tear this out and show it to your friends and coworkers. ALL ARE WELCOME!

Judge expects trial to end today

■ Paramedic, nurse testify in child-murder case that 14-month-old child was "basically dead" when they examined her.

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff writer

A paramedic and emergency room nurse testified Wednesday, during the murder trial of John Odren Gillum, that 14-month-old Holly Bigler was "lifeless" and "basically dead" when they examined her and all efforts to revive her were futile.

They testified that the girl was pronounced death within an hour of arriving at the hospital.

Gillum was indicted on charges of murder in connection with the Feb. 26, 1990, death of the 14-month-old child. The indictment alleges Gillum beat and kicked the girl in the head causing her death. He has pleaded not guilty to the charge.

The trial is expected to conclude today with the jury to begin deliberation sometime after lunch, said 238th District Court Judge John Hyde.

The defendant was baby-sitting the child for his then-fiancee when the child died.

Midland Fire Department paramedic Dean Stalder testified that he was dispatched to Gillum's home at 9:13 p.m. that day and arrived on the scene at 9:16 p.m.

He said the baby was on the floor in the front room lying on her stomach with her face turned to the right in a pool of vomit. He said it was evident the child was unconscious and her mouth was still full of vomit.

Stalder said he and another paramedic had to suction the vomit out of the child's mouth to try and establish an airway to help the child breathe. From his observation, the paramedic said he estimated Holly had been lying there for 10-15 minutes because she had dried vomit in her hair and on her scalp and much of the moistness

Sexual assault

A Midland County grand jury returned two indictments Wednesday for sexual assault and injury to a child, according to District Attorney Al Schorre. Johnny Gordon, 33, was charged in connection with a sexual assault that occurred at Terrace West Nursing Center on July 20, he said. Gordon was arrested by police at the nursing center where he was an employee. The victim is a 64-year-old female resident of the home. His bond was set at $50,000, Schorre said. Also indicted was Thomas James Frederick, 34, for his alleged involvement in the beating of a 2-year-old girl, Schorre said. He was arrested June 23 and released on $7,500 bond, he said.

Peaceful protest

The Most Rev. Michael D. Pfeifer, Catholic bishop of the Diocese of San Angelo, is to lead an ecumenical prayer service and peaceful protest at the Planned Parenthood clinic on Saturday, Aug. 28. The purpose of the gathering — set to begin at 9:30 a.m. at the clinic, 307 E. Texas Ave. — is to protest the presence of an abortion clinic in the Permian Basin. In addition to Pfeifer, representatives of other area churches and groups are to speak at the hour-long service. Pfeifer, whose diocese includes Midland and Odessa, said he was "deeply saddened" to find out an abortion clinic opened in Midland. All persons who support the pro-life cause are invited to participate.

Rick Hamby's day in court comes Friday when Midland Community Theatre presents a reader's production of his comedy, "Gargoyles and Scarecrow Sins," at 8 p.m. at Theatre Midland. The playwright, who is the district attorney for Howard County, is the winner of MCT's annual McLaren Comedy Playwriting Competition. The reader's production will again be presented on the Mabee Theatre stage at 8 p.m. Saturday.

Writer studies people as pastime, necessity

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff writer

Rick Hamby, who calls writing a hard way to make a living, can think of no way he would rather be thought of than as a writer.

"I 've got two novels with an agent right now, and the fact that I haven't realized a nickel out of them will humble you pretty quick to reality," the Big Spring resident said. "But I can't think of any sort of title that would please me more than one day to be referred to as a writer by someone other than my mother."

Hamby is not unemployed. He is in his fifth term as Howard County's district attorney.

"It's the purest way to practice law because you're always right," Hamby said of his position. "You always represent the good guy — the victim or the State of Texas. When you are in private practice, you've got a 50-50 chance of representing the wrong party."

Writing is Hamby's avocation and it has earned him first prize in Midland Community Theatre's 1993 Mike McLaren Comedy Play Writing Competition.

A reader's production of the prize-winning play, "Gargoyles and Scarecrow Sins," will be presented in Theatre Midland's Mabee Theatre II at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday. For ticket information call Theatre Midland's box office, 682-4111.

His comedy centers around the events following the death of the town's local prostitute and is set inside the funeral home.

"No one knew it, but she was a member of a local sorority," Hamby said. "She never attended any of the meetings, but her dues were paid in full.

Child's behavior develops at early age, expert says

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

The family, as a social unit, is faced with more struggles then in times past, and family problems may be reflected in their children's antisocial behavior, according to Mary Piggott.

Ms. Piggott, a doctoral candidate at the University of Oregon in Eugene, discussed family intervention strategies at a workshop on behavior disorders at Midland Center Wednesday night.

"With single parents or both parents working there is less time than ever before to focus on the home or relationships," Ms. Piggott said. She spoke at the workshop sponsored by Project PACT (Parents, Adolescents & Children Together) of Permian Basin Community Centers for MHMR (Mental Health and Mental Retardation).

Piggott

The free workshop was attended by parents, professionals and counselors.

Ms. Piggott presented research from the Oregon Social Learning Center in Eugene.

She said researchers worked with children in first through fifth grades. "We found, through tracking, that intervention with children with antisocial conduct is most successful in the first grade."

Ms. Piggott said antisocial behavior development was described in a model of a "vile weed." Leaves on the new weed started with some disruptive behaviors and progressed to academic failure, drug and alcohol abuse, delinquency, and chaotic employment.

"If you get the weed (and the child) when it is little and the roots are less strong, you have the best chance of changing the behavior," she said.

Research indicates, according to Ms. Piggott, that children rejected by their peers because of their behavior, will soon band with other children who are also rejected by classmates.

"The rejected children will get together and feed on each other and sup-

Odessa College plans to provide television internship with area broadcasting station

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

ODESSA — Next fall, Odessa College students may be able to earn credit while helping to operate the area's public broadcasting station, KOCV-TV, which has maintained operations since 1986.

Plans to offer a television internship next year will be part of a merger of the college's mass communications department with the television station and national public radio KOCV-FM, John McCarroll, general manager of the stations and mass communications chairman, announced Wednesday.

"We are excited because we think the time is right to make some changes," McCarroll said.

Students already receive some hands-on training with lab classes, and part-time and volunteer work with the radio station. And that will also expand to internships.

The internships "will give (students) a realistic professional picture when they leave our arms and go out to the real world," said Tracy Taylor, newly appointed station manager for KOCV-FM.

Possible duties may involve producing, marketing, announcing and promoting. The program must first be approved by the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board.

The internship program may include work with local television stations, with students

Letters to be remembered after calls are forgotten

Sentimental me.

I remember when the telephone out in rural America was more of a novelty than a necessity. It created community interest, amusement, gossip and party lines. It was a particularly handy tool if someone in the family, most notably a child, fell ill, and the doctor needed to be called. And the doctor, black bag in hand, would show up as soon as he, or she, made the rounds or sooner if need be.

Todd

At one time, doctors made house calls on a routine basis. Necessity, not appointment, was the order. And even today, so I've heard, there are doctors who occasionally make house calls right here in the city. Those tales do the heart good.

And wouldn't it bode well today if physicians weren't so steeped in appointments and demands that they could serve the community folk house by house?

But, I suppose making such rounds today is no longer practical, just as it is no longer practical for most boots to be handmade. There are too few bootmakers and too many feet to be fitted.

And it's no longer practical for newspaper or magazine text to be handset. And it may be as unlikely to win the state lottery as it would be to find a newspaper printed from "hot type" — type set by the old Linotype, that miracle of machinery. Like the old steam locomotive, you could tell the old Linotype was steaming along by the clanging noise of its intricacy and the smell of molten lead ready to be cast into type to take on sense, sentences and the printer's ink.

I remember the old wooden wall telephone with its hand-held receiver and a crank to alert the operator that you were ready to place a call. You'd tell her the number, and she'd ring the other end of the telephone line.

Back in those days, I don't recall people, at least the family, using the telephone a whole lot or for an extended time. If you were on a party line, the neighbors might be listening in, so you were inclined to be discreet when talking over the telephone. You certainly didn't tell all you knew or didn't know. Besides, there might be somebody down the line who really needed — or just wanted — to use the telephone.

I remember when my grandparents on mother's side of the family got their first telephone, which they got mostly to call kinfolk. And it was rarely used at that. The neighbors would come over, use the telephone, and find out how much the charges were.

BABY: Murder trial continues

was gone from the vomit.

He said a heart monitor was attached to the child, but there was no heartbeat. Stalder said that while treating the child, Gillum told him she had a concussion, so he checked the child's head and found a "pretty bad bump . . . the size of a baseball."

The paramedic described the knot as feeling like a "hard sponge." He said the bump could be pressed in, which indicated it was severe and "not the type of accident where you fall on the floor."

Stalder said the baby was at the hospital by 9:30 p.m.

Susan Vest, a registered nurse who was on duty in the Emergency Department, testified the child had no pulse and was not breathing when she was brought in. She said the child exhibited signs of severe brain damage or brain death.

Ms. Vest said that as she checked to make sure the paramedics had inserted the tubes properly in the child's throat, she felt the back of the child's head and noticed it was "mushy."

She said this indicated a severe blow or injury to the head.

Former Midland police officer Charles Hall testified that when he interviewed Gillum at the hospital, the defendant told him Holly fell about 7 p.m., but did not exhibit any symptoms until he was getting the child ready for bed.

During Tuesday's testimony, a number of physicians said the blows Holly suffered would have had immediate symptoms.

Midland police Detective B.G. Johnson said he was called in to investigate the death around 10:45 p.m. that night. He said he spoke with Gillum and was told the child was coming from the kitchen to the living room when she tripped on a step and fell backward.

Johnson said upon inspecting the house he did not find a step.

He said he told Gillum he didn't think he was telling the truth and asked him to come by the police station the next day "to get his story straight."

As he was about to leave around 2 a.m. Feb. 27, 1990, he said Gillum told him "he might as well tell me the truth then as tomorrow."

Johnson testified Gillum then admitted he was lying on the couch when the baby became cranky and he pushed the baby off the couch and she hit her head on the coffee table as she fell.

Gillum was not arrested during any of the questioning at the hospital or at his home. Johnson said he received permission at the hospital from Gillum to search the house.

Another topic that dominated the day's testimony concerned some of the items found during that search — the contents of several trashcans within the home Gillum and Pam Bigler, the child's mother, shared from Dec. 24, 1989, until the time of Holly's death.

The focus of the waste was a number of dirty diapers and tissues that Ms. Bigler testified were not there when she left for work. The diapers were "heavily" soiled and the tissues were covered in a "pinkish" substance.

Midland police officer Karen Hare testified to taking the diapers and tissues into evidence and sending them off for analysis. She said she did not know the results of the tests.

The vomit in the girl's mouth when the paramedics found her was also a shade of pink, Stalder said.

Ms. Bigler said when she left for work that day, just before 5 p.m., the baby had not been vomiting or experiencing diarrhea.

She also recalled what happened during the day Holly died and began to sob as she told the jury that the last time she saw her baby was as she was leaving for work and Holly was waving good-bye from the doorway.

Ms. Bigler said once she was at work she called home twice and both times Gillum gave no indication that anything was wrong at home.

She said she received a call at work around 9:30 p.m. when her mother called to tell her Holly had been in an accident and was being taken to the hospital. Her father picked her up at the store and took her to the hospital.

Ms. Bigler testified that once she reached the hospital, Gillum told her Holly had tripped on some carpet and hit her head. She added that he didn't seem concerned about the condition of the baby.

During cross examination by the defense attorney, the baby's mother told the jury that she had never seen Gillum abuse Holly.

She said that several weeks before the baby's death, several accidents had occurred while Holly was in Gillum's care, but she didn't suspect anything until after the death. One of those accidents, in which both of Holly's eyes were blackened, allegedly occurred when she was running and fell in the driveway, Ms. Bigler said.

Several witnesses, including a co-worker of Gillum's, his ex-wife and Ms. Bigler's parents all testified that when they saw or talked to Gillum throughout the day of Feb. 26, 1990, they noticed nothing out of the ordinary with him or the child.

Bill Bigler, Holly's grandfather, said Gillum called his wife around 9:15 p.m. notifying them that paramedics were at the house treating Holly and were getting ready to take her to the hospital.

At the hospital Gillum told Bigler that Holly had tripped in the house and looked OK at the time, but later became dizzy and swallowed her tongue, Bigler testified.

Both Bigler and his wife testified they had never seen Gillum abuse the child in any way.

Gillum's ex-wife told the court that she and Gillum had one son, whom he often visited and got along well with.

The jury was dismissed about 3:45 p.m. Wednesday and ordered to return at 10 a.m. today to continue hearing testimony.

WIN: Lawyer likes to be called writer

(From 1B)

"One of the benefits of being a Daughter of Diana is that three of your sisters have to sit up with your body one night."

The three sisters of Diana, who sit with the deceased, discover all four of them went to the same high school.

"They have varying personalities. One is a religious fanatic, another is anything but, and the third is a cross between the other two."

Also in attendance is the beautician who does the deceased's hair.

"Outside the funeral home is a rally that one of the ladies has created as a crusade to keep the dead whore from being buried in consecrated ground next to loved ones," he said. "She wants her to be treated as toxic waste."

Hamby said the play deals with "Hypocrisy, betrayal, treachery and friendship. Basically, it deals with love and how you find love sometimes in the most unexpected places. And places that you might expect to find love, sometimes have a counterfeit love. The net result is this dead prostitute has touched everyone's life in this play in a positive way."

He is pleased to have his work presented by MCT.

The purpose of comedy is twofold, said the playwright.

"I think people who come will find it amusing. I think it's also the duty of comedy to not just amuse, (but) to educate a little, too. I hope there's a good moral to pull out of this.

"(Thomas) Jefferson said, 'When you can't educate them, amuse.' I think you've got to do both."

"Gargoyles and Scarecrow Sins" marks the third play Hamby has had produced.

"They were all comedies or meant to be," Hamby said. "I don't know whether everyone would agree with that in the final analysis, but they were meant to be comedies."

He has been writing since his college days at Texas Tech University, where he earned a double major in history and English.

"One realizes that there's very little you can do with a degree in history except teach," Hamby said. "Having no athletic skill and not the patience of a teacher, I went onto law school."

He returned to Big Spring after graduating from Saint Mary's Law School in San Antonio.

"I couldn't make a living in private practice in San Antonio as a young law-school graduate," Hamby said. "My brother, Lanny, had been a lawyer for many years and had a growing concern. He invited me to come back. I would have been a fool to turn him down. Besides, you can't get West Texas out of your soul anyway."

A couple of years after Hamby returned to Big Spring, the district attorney became a district judge. At that time, Hamby decided "criminal law might be something that appealed" to him. He has been district attorney ever since.

Hamby said when his fifth term is complete, "I'll have 20 years in. I believe this is going to be my last term.

Although he isn't certain of what he will do when his term is up, he is sure of what he won't do.

"I'll never give up writing."

Hamby writes in long hand and then puts "it on a computer. I cannot write originally at a keyboard. I use a yellow legal pad, and that's the only way I can do it."

He always carries a little book with him and has filled up more than one through the years.

"Characters are in abundance in West Texas," said Hamby, who tries to write everyday. "I hear something that strikes me as amusing or ironic. I try to jot it down for reference later. I used things in this play that I probably wrote in a book 15 years ago.

He finds his time filled between work, writing and family. He and his wife of 25 years, Debbie, are the parents of a daughter, Jessica, and two sons, Rickey White Hamby Jr. and Christopher Wren.

Hamby traces his love of writing back to his mother.

"Mother always encouraged me to read," Hamby said. "That's where a love to write has to find root."

He has no other hobbies.

"If you're serious about your writing — and I have become serious about it over the past four or five years — you don't have time for anything else in the context that most people view a hobby.

"I study people. That's an enjoyable pastime, but a necessity. And, I try to be less of a talker and more of an observer, and for a lawyer that's hard sometimes."

TODD: Telephone just isn't sentimental

(From 1B)

They'd pay up or somehow return the favor.

My grandparents had an old radio, a crystal set, and then a vacuum-tube radio long before they ever got a telephone. The grandparents lived out in a farming community called Pacio in Delta County.

Today, the telephone has become a demand instrument. It's a convenience, like it has always been. It's too much of a convenience. People often call — telephone — whereas years ago they'd write a letter and post it. In a day or two or in a week, the message would get to where it was going, it would be read, and it would stay intact for as long as the reader wanted the message around.

There's something almost sacred, at least lasting, about the written word — a heartfelt letter or note. The writer has time to reflect and to think and re-think and to pen exactly what he or she means to say.

Likewise, the reader takes times to ponder the message and to consider the heart that penned those words.

No doubt, the old telephone is a time-saver or, more appropriately, a shortcut in shoring up business dealings, placing orders, talking with friends and relatives. Friends and lovers, yearning to instantly express their sentiments to their dear ones, pick up the telephone and either yak or go into sweet discourses about how much one means to the other. They may speak poetically and never write a line or verse.

Should we not be grateful that the likes of Emily Dickinson, Elizabeth Barrett Browning, Walt Whitman, and Edgar Allan Poe had not the telephone to while away their time and poetic words of love, truth, and deep reflection? Today, their sentiments are with us in the written word.

The telephone is not, I think, a radio or a music box when somebody or a machine puts you on hold and turns on music not of your choice. Why not quiet time instead of music or a sales pitch if you are going to be put on hold? Better yet, call back.

Or much better, write and be read.

Send a sentimental message to be remembered longer after the call would be forgotten and long after the paper has become brittle.

The message and sentiment are still there.

CHILD: Expert speaks about behavior

(From 1B)

port each other's antisocial behavior," she said.

Parenting and family management strategies have been developed to help change problem-behavior in children.

"Discipline and monitoring — or knowing where your children are and what they are doing — are the two most critical variables in determining the path the child will go down in terms of developing behavior," Ms. Piggott said.

She said important social skills developed at home include listening, sharing, cooperation and compliance.

"A toddler naturally uses unpleasant behavior to get what he or she wants. It's a form of coercion. Later the toddler must learn compliance," she said, noting that diagnosticians can identify with 90 percent accuracy children who will develop antisocial behavior as early as the first grade.

"By third grade children who will have problems with the juvenile justice system can be identified with 97 percent accuracy."

The solution, she said, is to identify problems and then train and educate parents to change antisocial conduct with a step-by-step approach.

"Parents must monitor their children, discipline, provide positive reinforcement and know how to solve problems to be successful," she said.

"It only takes two or three instances to set up a pattern. The less positive social skills a child has, the more he or she gets rejection from peers," Ms. Piggott said. " . . . By third grade this can be pretty grim and the child may need a long-term system to solve the problem."

Project PACT's next workshop, offered free of charge and open to the public, is set for 6-9 p.m. tonight at the American Red Cross building in Odessa, 120 E. Second St.

Dr. Jerome Schulma of Chicago, a retired child and adolescent psychiatrist, will lead a workshop on childhood depression.

On Tuesday, 6-9 p.m. at Midland Center, Lina Monroy, area project developer for Partnership Assisted Texans with Handicaps, will lead a workshop on advocacy for special needs children.

She will lead the same workshop 6-9 p.m. Aug. 26 at the American Red Cross building in Odessa.

GOP pushes George W. Bush for governor

FORT WORTH (AP) — Republican state senators are backing an effort to persuade George W. Bush to run against Democratic Gov. Ann Richards next year, an Austin political consultant said.

At least 10 of the state's 13 GOP senators have signed an endorsement letter being circulated to the delegation, consultant Karl Rove was quoted as saying in Wednesday's Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

"(The letter) says 'George. We want you to run,'" Rove said. "I think there is a unanimity among these senators that Richards can be beaten and that George is the guy to do it."

Bush could not be reached for comment Wednesday, but he said earlier this month that he had been meeting with party leaders and would announce by Labor Day whether or not he would enter the 1994 race.

State Sens. David Sibley, R-Waco, and Florence Shapiro, R-Plano, were among those leading the endorsement effort, Rove said.

Rove said the letter is not intended as a commentary on other possible GOP candidates, although it could affect their decision.

But several other possible Republican gubernatorial candidates — including Dallas attorney Tom Luce and Houston party activist Rob Mosbacher Jr. — have said recently that their decisions will not hinge on Bush.

"His decision is not going to be based on anything except what is best for him," said Mosbacher spokesman Mark Sanders. "I wouldn't read a whole lot into (the letter.)"

Luce and Mosbacher have said they also intend to make a decision about running by Labor Day. Other possible GOP candidates are Dallas oilman T. Boone Pickens and state Rep. Tom Craddick of Midland.

Bush, the eldest son of former President George Bush, declined to run for governor in the past, saying his duties as managing general partner of the Texas Rangers baseball club kept him busy enough.

Convicted child killer hopes for forgiveness

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Convicted child-killer Raul Meza says God has forgiven him for the 1982 rape-slaying of an 8-year-old girl and that he hopes the public will one day do the same.

"My God forgives me . . . and I have found contentment," Meza said in a television interview outside the rural Uvalde County home where he is living with relatives.

Meza spoke with the Spanish-language network Univision, which aired segments of the interview Monday. It was the first interview Meza has granted since being released from prison June 21. Meza planned to hold a news conference in Austin on Thursday.

"I know that a lot of people will never forgive what I did, but I accept that," Meza was quoted as saying in Wednesday's San Antonio Express-News. "I'm not the same person that I was three years ago.

"I plan on staying here (in Uvalde County) a while, and, in time, the people will see that's the truth — that I'm not the same person."

Uvalde County is the sixth place Meza has been since his release. Angry protesters forced him to move from each of the other Texas communities where he had gone.

Melinda Hoyle Bozarth, director of the state parole agency's community services section, gave details in an affidavit Tuesday of plots and threats against Meza that led to the moves. Ms. Bozarth said the threats included one at a detention center where fellow offenders planned to murder Meza.

The sworn statement was in response to a lawsuit Meza filed in Travis County last month claiming he was the victim of illegal detention.

For several weeks, Meza lived in hotel rooms as parole officials tried to hide his whereabouts until living arrangements could be secured, the statement said.

Meza, speaking Spanish and English in the television interview, said he broke his silence so the Hispanic community would know more about him.

Meza said it was painful for him to recall killing Kendra Page of Austin.

"It hurts to think of what I did to her family — of what I did to her — not giving her a chance to live," Meza said.

Meza said he was under the influence of drugs at the time and didn't know why he committed the crime.

H & R BLOCK OFFERS INCOME TAX COURSE IN MIDLAND

Thousands of people learn how to prepare income tax returns from H&R Block and then earn money as income tax preparers. H&R Block, the world's largest income tax preparation service, offers its Income Tax Course starting Sept. 13. Morning or evening classes are available.

Experienced instructors teach tax law, theory, and application. Classroom discussion and practice problems provide students with a thorough understanding of each tax topic included in the course. Students learn how to handle increasingly complex income tax situations as the course progresses.

Ideal for people who want to increase their tax knowledge, the course teaches students how to save money on their taxes and also prepares them for a rewarding career.

The affordable fee includes textbooks and supplies. Graduates receive Certificates of Achievement and continuing education units (CEUs). Qualified graduates of the course may be offered job interviews with H&R Block but are under no obligation to accept employment.

Those interested in more information about the H&R Block Income Tax Course may contact the H&R Block office at 1101 N. Midkiff or call 697-8087 or 580-3750.

Man sent to death row as teen fears he'll die next week

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Death row inmate Ruben Cantu said Wednesday he's worried he will be executed next week for a 1984 murder in San Antonio he insists he did not commit.

Cantu, 26, was 18 and the youngest prisoner on the Texas death row when he went to prison in 1985.

A Bexar County jury decided he should die for fatally shooting Pedro Gomez, 35, during a robbery that netted Cantu about $600 and a watch. His execution is scheduled for before dawn Tuesday.

"I understand it's a real serious date," Cantu said. "We've filed a clemency petition with the Board of Pardons and Paroles. I've already been through the Supreme Court.

"I'm not guilty of this crime. If they review the trial transcripts, they'll see contradictory testimony."

Asked who did the killing, he replied: "I don't know."

Gomez was shot nine times with a .22-caliber rifle as he and another man, Juan Moreno, were staying at a nearly finished but empty new house in Cantu's San Antonio neighborhood. The two men were guarding the place after a water heater had been stolen a few weeks earlier.

Moreno also was shot nine times but survived and identified Cantu and another teenager, David Garza, as the intruders. Garza, who was 15 at the time, was certified to stand trial as an adult and was sentenced to 20 years in prison.

Prosecutors said evidence showed Cantu was the triggerman and Garza was not armed.

"I was in Waco. I had been gone all week. When I came back, I found out about all this," Cantu said. He said people who could verify his whereabouts could not testify at his trial because they had their own "legal problems."

"They didn't even go to the trial," he said. "I guess they were looking out for themselves."

Cantu blamed his conviction on a shooting four months after the Gomez slaying when he exchanged gunfire with an off-duty San Antonio police officer at a bar. The officer, who was wounded, survived but Cantu was indicted for the Gomez killing a few days later.

"I never denied shooting the officer, but it was self-defense," Cantu said. "My case is black and white. It has nothing to do with the capital murder that happened in 1984."

Cantu said he was offered a life sentence but rejected the plea bargain.

"I'm not going to take time because I'm not guilty," he said. "It would be for something I didn't do. I couldn't see myself taking a life sentence for something I didn't do."

He also said while his claims of innocence are similar to those of highly publicized death row inmate Gary Graham, he didn't believe the Graham case would affect him.

"I'm still worried," Cantu said. "It (the Graham case) probably ain't going to stop executions."

Amnesty International, the activist group which opposes the death penalty in all cases, has called for clemency for Cantu, citing his age at the time of the slaying. They also contend he had a troubled family background and is borderline mentally retarded.

Cantu on Wednesday denied he was abused as a child and said he was not mentally retarded.

Drive-by shootings kill 11, wound 140

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Hundreds of gang-related drive-by shootings have ravaged the city in the first half of this year, leaving 11 people dead and about 140 wounded, police say.

From January through July, there have been 742 drive-by shootings, or an average of three a day, said police Capt. Gilbert Sandoval, commander of the violent crimes task force.

"It's almost exclusively gang-related," Sandoval was quoted as saying in Wednesday's San Antonio Express-News.

The violent crimes task force was created in June to combat the rising tide of violence, particularly involving gangs.

Sandoval said gangs commit the drive-by shootings for several reasons.

"Sometimes it's over girl trouble, sometimes a turf war and sometimes it's just an initiation rite," he said.

In its first two months of operation, the task force has seized 118 weapons.

Folks chat with spirits during angel conference

By Deborah Baker
Associated Press writer

ANGEL FIRE, N.M. — A woman stood transfixed, her eyes closed, her hands grasping the leaves of a tree. Getting nourishment from Mother Nature, she said later.

A man lay on the grass. Talking with elves, he explained.

A group of people pointed at the sky, oohing and aahing; in the high, wispy clouds they saw the outline of an angel.

The Angels and Nature Spirits Conference was off to a celestial start.

More than 50 people from as far away as Canada gathered at this aptly named resort village in the northern New Mexico mountains this week to explore angelic realms.

Not the harps-and-halos angels of a child's prayer book, necessarily, but rather what one speaker described as "an intelligent energy field without form."

In addition to speakers, panel discussions and barbecues, the agenda for the $1,200, week-long conference included meditation, music, and "an evening of fun and games with the local nature spirits and fairy folks."

A roundtable discussion that opened the conference featured a poll of participants on such items as the gender of their guardian angels.

Later, conference-goers waved scented toothpicks under their noses in an exercise led by aromatherapists, who assured them the fragrant oils were "liquid telephone lines into other dimensions."

"I just knew I had to be here," said Rebecca Proud of Laguna Beach, Calif., the woman who clutched the tree during a mid-morning break.

Proud said she heard about the conference just as she was facing a difficult career decision, and thought it might provide some direction.

"I've been a dental hygienist 25 years and I'm miserable in it. It's not who I am," she said.

Proud said she's always had a strong sense of angelic guidance in her life.

Radical sheik: Just deport me to Muslim Afghanistan

NEW YORK (NYT) — Sheik Omar Abdel-Rahman, the imprisoned Islamic cleric whose followers include suspects in two New York bombing conspiracies, might abandon his fight against deportation if the United States allows him to leave for Afghanistan, his lawyer said Wednesday.

The lawyer, Barbara Nelson, said she was awaiting a response from the office of U.S. Attorney Mary Jo White before appealing a deportation order to the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

"There are two real reasons," she said. "If he got sent to Egypt his life would be in danger. If we file a motion of appeal to the 2nd Circuit, he will be detained for several more months. In Afghanistan, at least he'd be free."

Abdel-Rahman, who is being held at the Otisville federal prison northwest of New York City, suffered a setback in his quest for political asylum when U.S. District Court Judge Charles L. Brieant on Monday upheld the government's decision to remove the cleric because he is a "danger to the security of the United States." The judge gave Abdel-Rahman's lawyers 10 days to appeal.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 19, 1993

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Avoid getting involved in fanciful schemes and your savings should grow. Progress will come by leaps and bounds once you get better organized. Research could hand you a real financial coup in November. Work done behind the scenes wins you a promotion or bonus. The year 1994 could feature a move to another city or state. Romance will proceed nicely as the new year gets under way. Take adult offspring into your confidence.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: President Bill Clinton, "second lady" Tipper Gore, actor John Stamos, Sen. David Durenberger.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Tackle a serious family problem without further delay. You have postponed taking action for too long. Get extra schooling if it will aid your career or boost your confidence.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Let go of the past and focus on the future. Big gains are possible if you make the right moves now. A romantic adventure leaves you exhilarated. Applaud a teen-ager's independence.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Accept the fact that children may have different ambitions from their parents. It still may not be the right time to make that daring financial bid. To save money, perform more services for yourself.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You could receive a pleasant surprise while lunching with someone special. Love can be found in unexpected places. Good writing skills could lead to a second career.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Take care of business left over from the last few days. Keep a busy schedule. Not everything will go your way. Return to your exercise regimen or try a new sport.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 23): Teamwork is essential to get a faltering program back on track. Take steps to ensure that you will have positive people around you when the chips are down. Determination makes you a winner.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Concentrate on the most important projects first. Rely on a trusted associate to handle routine details. Everyone profits when you focus on creative ventures and fresh ideas.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A partnership begins to bring the personal satisfaction and financial security you have sought. Your sensitivity to others' needs makes you very persuasive.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): There is no profit in crying over spilt milk. Settle on a solution to a problem and take whatever action is necessary. Staying financially solvent is the key to lasting domestic harmony.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Make the most of a challenge. A job opportunity comes to someone searching for a second chance. Large corporations may hold more appeal than family businesses.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): If you never make a mistake, you probably are not trying enough new things. Accept the fact that risk-taking involves an occasional failure.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Find a way to improve communication between you and your associates, but avoid making impulsive promises. You need more variety in your life.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are sociable, outgoing and full of plans. They hate to be sick and will do whatever is necessary to stay healthy. Count on these Leos to be strongly attracted by luxury. Women born on this date have little trouble finding mates; their grace and poise arouse widespread admiration. Male Leos may be perceived as Casanovas. Although somewhat fickle, they will go out of their way to please the current object of their affections. Generous to family and friends, these Leos will still manage to save an impressive amount of money.

Opening lead: King of ♡

Think twice before adopting a line of play. There may be a better one waiting in the wings, eager to be discovered.

North-South, despite only 26 high-card points in the combined holding, bid well to a fair slam. After South's high reverse of three clubs, North set spades as the trump suit. There followed a series of cue-bids, and when South could move over four spades, North's king of clubs was the final inducement to push on.

Declarer ruffed the second heart and could count only 11 tricks—five trumps, four clubs and two diamonds. South opted to try to ruff a diamond in dummy for the 12th.

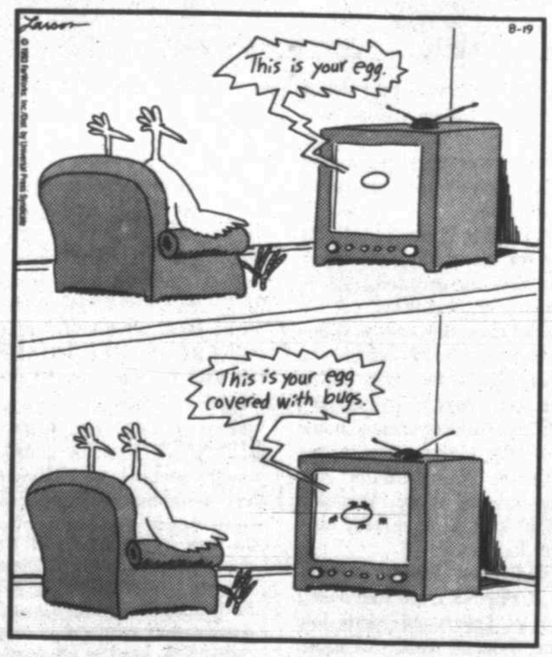

After drawing two rounds of trumps and cashing the ace-king of diamonds, declarer played off four clubs. The intention was to discard the table's diamonds on winning clubs and that would have worked had the defender with four clubs also held three trumps. Unfortunately, that was not the case. West ruffed the fourth club and declarer was forced to concede down one.

Once the defenders had led a second heart, forcing declarer to ruff, the contract could have been made via a dummy reversal. When both defenders follow to two rounds of trumps, declarer uses the ace and king of diamonds as entries to ruff dummy's two remaining hearts. Now South can get back to the board with the king of clubs to draw the outstanding trump with the jack, discarding a diamond from hand. Three more club tricks bring declarer's total to 12—three trump tricks, three heart ruffs, two diamonds and four clubs.

Brando sues, says $1 million check from producer bounced

LOS ANGELES — Marlon Brando is suing a film company and producer, saying their $1 million check bounced.

The lawsuit contends producer Edward Kastner gave the check, drawn on the account of Cinema International Corp., to a Brando representative June 24 after the actor agreed to appear in a movie called "Treasure Island, The Musical."

"Kastner promised to pay (Brando) the $1 million to induce (him) to agree to appear in the film, so that Kastner could use (Brando's) name to attract additional financing to produce the film," the lawsuit said.

The Superior Court lawsuit seeks the $1 million plus interest. It alleges breach of an oral agreement, negligent misrepresentation and fraud.

Brando's attorney, Edward Medvene, wouldn't comment Wednesday. There was no listing for Kastner; messages left at Cinema International were not returned.

RICHMOND, Va. — Actor James Earl Jones began filming "The Vernon Johns Story" here this week.

Jones

The made-for-television movie, whose executive producer is former basketball great Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, is based on the life of one of the unsung heroes of the Civil Rights movement, the Virginia Film Office said.

Jones is portraying the Rev. Vernon Johns, who preceded the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. as pastor of Dexter Avenue Baptist Church in Montgomery, Ala.

BALTIMORE — Rodney King has joined the NAACP and will "work in Los Angeles in the 'hood with us," says the group's executive director.

The Rev. Benjamin F. Chavis Jr. told a group of ministers here Tuesday that King is a "worldwide symbol of why we need to march."

He said he met King at a dinner in New York on Saturday and asked him to join the nation's oldest civil rights group.

Chavis, who was harshly criticized on Baltimore talk radio for having praised King, defended him as a "spokesperson for racial harmony" and said he was impressed by King's "absence of bitterness."

He added that King was "one of the main ones calling for calm in L.A." when riots broke out in 1992 after four white police officers were acquitted on most state assault charges stemming from the videotaped beating of the black motorist. Two officers were convicted this year on federal civil rights charges.

SANTA CLARITA, Calif. — White House press secretary Dee Dee Myers had some advice for her sister, who's moving to Washington to take a Clinton administration job.

"It's an unforgiving town," she told Betsy Myers as they sat in the yard of their parents' home Monday in the Valencia area 35 miles north of Los Angeles.

"There's no margin for error, there's no tolerance for trying to do things differently, trying to make changes."

Her 32-year-old sister has been appointed to head the Office of Women's Business Ownership under the Small Business Administration.

"It's not like Los Angeles," the 31-year-old White House spokeswoman said. "They don't have as much of a sense of humor there."

PALMA DE MALLORCA, Spain — Former President Bush had a private audience with King Juan Carlos on Wednesday. He called the Spanish monarch "a friend of the United States."

Bush made his comments to reporters before joining Juan Carlos at the Marivent Palace, the royal family's summer residence in the Balearic Islands.

Bush and his wife, Barbara, have been cruising the Mediterranean on a friend's yacht since last week. The former president plans to travel Friday to Sweden and Monday to Switzerland.

LOS ANGELES — Actor-singer Mac Davis will replace Keith Carradine in the title role of the stage show "The Will Rogers Follies."

Davis takes over Aug. 24 at the Pantages Theatre in Hollywood.

Carradine, the show's original Broadway star, hasn't performed since July 29, when he developed a bad case of the flu that aggravated an existing back injury. Understudy Dan Sharkey has been performing in his absence.

• • •

LOS ANGELES — Actor Carl Weathers is joining the cast of "In the Heat of the Night" in a supporting role, saying he's glad he's not the star of his own series anymore.

Weathers starred for two seasons in the syndicated series "Street Justice."

"Working 14 and 15 hours a day and being in every scene put tremendous pressure on me. Now I don't have that responsibility. I don't have to be the person carrying the show," Weathers said in a recent interview.

FBI, DEA merger plan ignites debate

WASHINGTON (NYT) — In a move that has touched off a ferocious debate within the government, the Clinton administration is moving to consolidate the fight against drugs by merging the Drug Enforcement Administration into the Federal Bureau of Investigation, officials said Wednesday.

The proposal has agency officials preparing to wage war to preserve or enhance their status, and scurrying to find allies in Congress, where significant opposition has already surfaced.

Sen. Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del., who heads the Judiciary Committee, said Wednesday that he was cool to the idea.

The idea of ending the divisions and turf battles that have resulted from having two separate major agencies battle the drug trade has been debated for years among government officials. But now, senior members of the Clinton administration, including Attorney General Janet Reno and Vice President Al Gore, have decided to press ahead with the merger, officials said.

A related idea, merging the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms into the FBI along with the DEA, is not likely to be adopted, senior administration officials said.

One reason that the firearms bureau may be escaping death by merger, officials said, is that it is currently under the umbrella of the Treasury Department and Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen strenuously fought the proposal.

The DEA, on the other hand, is already within the Justice Department as is the FBI. A merger of those two agencies would be neither a loss nor a gain for the Cabinet officer involved, Ms. Reno.

L.A. riot's 'trucker beating' trial to begin

LOS ANGELES (NYT) — The trial of two black men accused of beating white trucker Reginald Denny begins with opening statements today as skeptical, skittish residents of this city worry that the outcome will deepen troubling racial tensions.

A racially mixed jury will try to decide whether Damian Williams, 20, and Henry Watson, 28, are guilty of attacking Denny and seven other people during last year's riots in Los Angeles. The defendants face 12 felony counts, including attempted murder, and could be sentenced to life in prison if convicted.

But the case of Rodney King is still on the minds of many Angelenos. In interviews over a recent, smog-veiled weekend, dozens of black residents said they hoped that the judicial system treats Williams and Watson with the same respect it gave the white police officers who beat King in 1991.

Otherwise, they fear, some people may take the law into their own hands.

Despite the intense emotions surrounding it, the case seems simple.

Shell OK

LOS ANGELES — Los Angeles Raiders coach Art Shell was released from Cedars-Sinai Medical Center early today — less than 48 hours after being admitted for tests and treatment for a form of diabetes.

"I discharged him a few minutes ago," Dr. Stephen Corday, internist for the Raiders, said at 10:40 a.m. (PDT). "He's back to full strength and energy. He will be at practice tomorrow morning and on the airplane tomorrow afternoon."

The Raiders were scheduled to leave their training camp in Oxnard for good today and fly to Indianapolis on Thursday for Friday night's exhibition game against the Colts.

The team will spend its final two weeks of preparation for the regular season at its practice facility in nearby El Segundo.

Corday said Shell was going to go home and rest today before resuming his normal football life today.

ESPN, Time agree

NEW YORK — Capital Cities-ABC Inc. and the Hearst Corp., co-owners of ESPN, announced Wednesday they have reached agreement with Time Warner Cable to carry ESPN2 on its systems.

Time Warner is the second largest multiple system operator, or MSO, in the country, and that agreement now assures ESPN2 of appearing on stations controlled by 16 of the largest 18 MSO's in the country.

Yet to be signed is the nation's largest MSO, TCI of Denver.

Capital Cities-ABC owns 80 percent of ESPN, Hearst 20 percent.

ESPN2, aimed at capturing a younger audience, is set to begin operation on Oct. 1.

Dokes wrecks

LAUDERDALE LAKES, Fla. — A car driven by former heavyweight boxing champion Michael Dokes allegedly ran down a newspaper vendor Wednesday, and Dokes will likely face drunk driving charges, police said.

The pedestrian, Richard Truitt, was hospitalized in fair condition, said Broward Sheriff's Office spokesman Jim Leljedal.

Dokes, 35, stayed at the accident scene and agreed to give blood. He was not immediately charged while the investigation continues, the spokesman said.

"It is very likely that he will face charges in the future, and it would likely they would include driving under the influence," Leljedal said.

Pavlik dangerous, but Texas wins

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Roger Pavlik pitched like a yo-yo Wednesday, dangling baserunners in front of New York batters before yanking the game back in control.

He spent seven innings pitching on the edge, allowing at least one runner in every frame. But Texas got four double plays in the first five innings and escaped with a 4-2 victory.

"I was actually trying to find a spot to get him out of there," Texas manager Kevin Kennedy said.

Dion James singled with one out in the first before Don Mattingly hit into a double play. New York loaded the bases in the second before Pavlik struck out Mike Gallego and got Pat Kelly on a groundout.

With the bases loaded in the third, Bernie Williams grounded into a double play. New York got its first two runners on in the fourth and fifth, but Kelly and Paul O'Neill hit into double plays.

Kennedy and pitching coach Claude Osteen kept telling Pavlik to bear down before he got into trouble.

"Claude kept telling me, 'Just act like they're a couple of runners on every time you're out there,'" Pavlik said.

Pavlik (7-6) scattered nine hits in seven innings in winning for the second time in seven starts. He struck out three and walked five.

"I guess I was just kind of sporadic," he said.

Even with the four double plays, the Yankees left 10 men on base as they lost their second straight following a six-game winning streak.

"This team has been spoiled,' loser Jim Abbott said. "We've been getting the key hit when we needed it. Today, it just didn't come."

Dean Palmer homered for just the second time since the All-Star break and drove in three runs for the Rangers. Texas, which began the day 4½ games behind Chicago in the AL West, went ahead in the second when Ivan Rodriguez singled and Palmer crushed a hanging curveball for his 23rd home run, a 410-foot drive to left. Palmer, who had been in a 3-for-34 slump, had his first three-hit game since July 22.

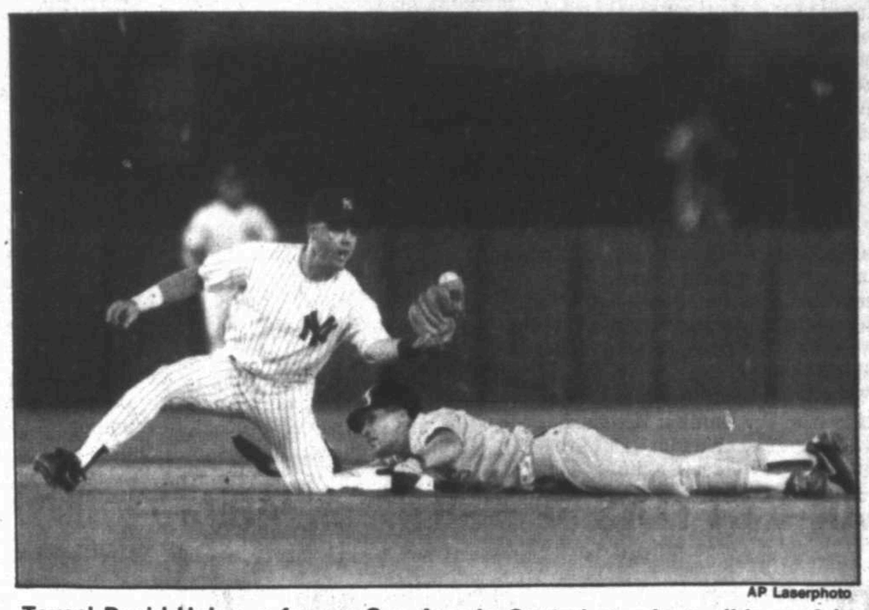

"I've put a lot of pressure on myself the second half of the season," Palmer said. "I just went out today and tried to be as relaxed as I can."

New York, one game behind Toronto in the AL East after Tuesday night's doubleheader split against the Rangers, got a run in the third when James singled and scored on Tartabull's double. Texas made it 4-1 in the fourth on consecutive doubles by Rafael Palmeiro and Juan Gonzalez, and Palmer's RBI single.

"With the team in the race, you want to start producing to help the team out," Palmer said.

Mattingly hit his 15th home run — his third in four games — in the seventh. The Yankees threatened in the eighth when Craig Lefferts walked Mike Stanley and Gallego singled, but Cris Carpenter came in and struck out pinch-hitter Matt Nokes, an unusual switch that

1993 DALLAS COWBOYS TRAINING CAMP

Emmitt speaks

■ Emmitt Smith is serious when he says he wants more money to sign a contract with Dallas.

By Mike Fisher
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

AUSTIN — Instead of a football, Emmitt Smith has only time on his hands.

Time to think about a Dallas Cowboys organization he increasingly views as unfeeling and uncommitted. Time to convince himself his desire to be the National Football League's highest-paid non-quarterback is justified. Time to ponder a future he considers uncertain.

"I'm wondering if I can continue to respect the Dallas Cowboys' management in the manner I always have, or if I am losing confidence and trust in management," Smith said yesterday. "Do the Cowboys really want me to perform at the top level? Or a mediocre level? Or do they want a top-level performance at mediocre-level salary? That's what I'm asking myself right now."

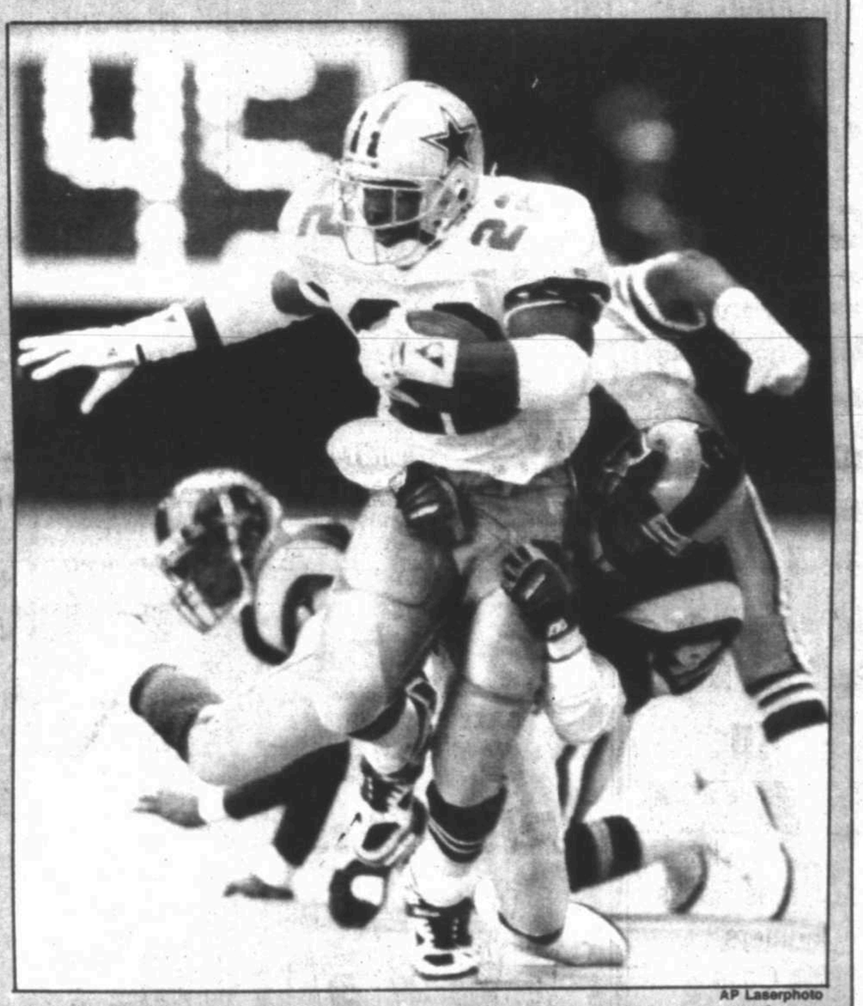

Smith, a focal point of the defending-champion Cowboys' training camp despite his summerlong absence because of a contract dispute, shares answers to some of the other questions being asked about him and by him:

QUESTION: Are you prepared to sit out the entire season?

ANSWER: "I am prepared for the absolute worst-case scenario. I prepare myself for that, while I hope for the best. I don't want to see it, but heck, it may happen. (Team owner) Jerry Jones is the one saying I won't be in uniform. Knowing Jerry Jones, maybe that's true."

Your only public statements concerning your salary desires came months ago, when you said you wanted "Reggie White money," meaning $4 million a year. Has anything happened to change that

NCAA hits Auburn with probation

By Jessica Saunders
Associated Press Writer

AUBURN, Ala. — Auburn's football program, which Pat Dye built into a national powerhouse in the 1980s, was hit with two years probation Wednesday for Dye-era sins exposed by Eric Ramsey.

Auburn, one of the NCAA's most heavily penalized schools, was also handed a one-year television blackout and voluntarily agreed to reduce its football scholarships over a three-year period.

But the school, whose basketball program is currently on probation, escaped the NCAA's "death penalty."

"If this program is to survive, there can be no more days like this one, intentional or unintentional," said Auburn president William Muse.

The university accepted NCAA sanctions stemming from secret tape recordings made by Ramsey. The former Tiger defensive back sought and got money from coaches and boosters — and taped some of the transactions — when playing for Dye in 1987-90.

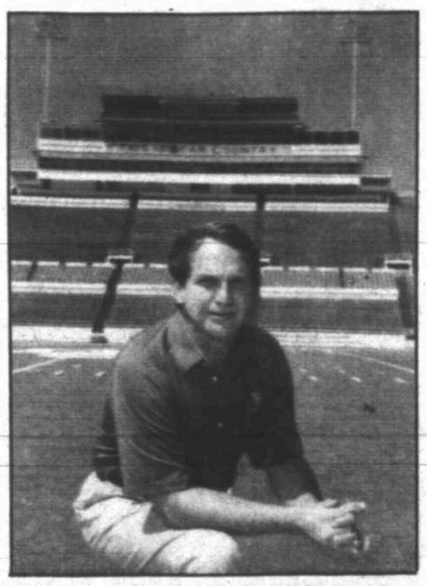

With the probation, Auburn will not be eligible to play in postseason bowls or win the Southeastern Conference championship this season and next. SEC officials estimated that Auburn could lose between $2 million and $3 million in conference money because of the sanctions.

NCAA infractions committee chairman David Swank said the "death penalty" did not apply in Auburn's case because the football wrongdoing occurred before the basketball program was placed on probation.

If Muse had not taken corrective steps, Swank said, the penalties on the football program would have been

Bears take page from Crimson Tide

Baylor first-year coach Chuck Reedy, shown here at Floyd Casey Stadium, has spent the summer studying Alabama coach Gene Stallings' techniques and philosophies in hopes of improving on the record the Bears posted during Grant Teaff's final season.

■ First-year Baylor coach Chuck Reedy studied Alabama's strategies in an attempt to fill Grant Teaff's shoes.

By Chip Brown
Associated Press Writer

WACO — For first-year Baylor coach Chuck Reedy, the season started this summer with the Alabama Crimson Tide.

Make no mistake, the Bears were not meeting the national champions on the field. Reedy traveled to Tuscaloosa to pick Alabama coach Gene Stallings' brain.

■ SWC Football Preview

"The things coach Stallings said were great," said Reedy, a former Clemson assistant under Danny Ford when the Tigers won the national title in 1981. "Coach Stallings reaffirmed all the things we are working on, such as being tough mentally and physically."

The trip to Alabama, where Reedy also talked with Auburn coach Pat Dye, is but one of the many tasks Reedy has undertaken to ensure a smooth transition from the Grant Teaff era.

With Reedy as his offensive coordinator, Teaff led the Bears to a 7-5 record in his 21st and final season last year, including a 20-15 victory over Arizona in the John Hancock Bowl.

Reedy said he wants the Bears to do as well, if not better, this year.

"I think we can have a winning season and return to a bowl game," Reedy said. "Texas A&M has to be considered the favorite this year, but we want to be in the hunt for the conference title every year."

Reedy said he will likely throw away his headset and turn over play calling to offensive coordinator and former Arkansas coach Jack Crowe. Pete Fredenburg will coach the defense.

Reedy, like Dallas Cowboys coach Jimmy Johnson, wants to concentrate on motivating players and developing what he calls "championship attitudes."

"It has to be an attitude of mental and physical toughness that you live 365 days a year. It's not something you all of a sudden have," Reedy said.

"We are going to work so hard and invest so much sweat, blood, time and energy until winning is just so important. Once you get it, it kind of perpetuates itself. It's not a coincidence that the same teams win all the time."

Teaff built a tradition of developing successful pro players, including standout linebacker Mike Singletary, who retired from the Chicago Bears last season.

Reedy said he wants to build on that tradition, although this year's defense could definitely use Singletary.

Only three starters return — none of them linebackers — to a squad that must find a way to slow down aerial launching pad Fresno State and Colorado in the season's first two games.

"I think it's awfully tough early," Reedy said.

"Fresno State, which is probably the best offensive team in the country, has led the nation in scoring the last two years. That is a tremendous challenge for us because we are young in the secondary," Reedy said.

"Then we go to Colorado and they have 10 starters back on offense. That is real scary. We are going to be tested early."

Reedy looks to a loaded offense to help his defenders by keeping possession of the ball.

M-Angels rip El Paso

Staff report

EL PASO — Leadoff batter Ty Boykin and No. 2 hitter Orlando Palmeiro set the table and the Midland Angels responded with a 13-4 victory over the El Paso Diablos Wednesday night.

The victory broke a four-game losing streak for the Angels, who remain two games in front of third place Wichita in the battle for the Texas League West's second playoff spot. Wichita broke a two-game losing streak with a win over San Antonio.

By the fifth inning, Boykin and Palmeiro had each been to the plate four times, getting six hits and a walk between them and they had scored seven times and Palmeiro, who extended his hitting streak to 11 games, also had an RBI.

It got so bad that El Paso ended up using designated pitchers Al Lewis, a third baseman, and Steve Gill, a right fielder, on the mound.

Ironically, Lewis and Gill were the best El Paso pitchers, giving up only a run and three hits in four innings of work. Lewis gave up a two-run homer to Mark Sweeney in the fifth, the first batter he faced. Sweeney has also hit safely in 11 consecutive games.

Chris Pritchett had four RBIs, his first four RBI night of the season. Mark Ratekin (2-0) hurled a complete game victory, giving up the four runs, nine hits and only one walk. He struckout eight.

Lendl outlasts Renzenbrink in Volvo

Associated Press

■ Tennis Roundup

NEW HAVEN, Conn. — Ivan Lendl outlasted the rain and Joern Renzenbrink on Wednesday in the Volvo International tennis tournament, winning an opening-round match for only the third time in his last eight tournaments.

Lendl, the second seed, started slowly following a 1-hour, 15-minute rain delay, followed by a 25-minute delay five games into the first set, but gradually got his return game going and beat the German 6-7 (7-2), 6-3, 6-2.

Defending tournament champion Stefan Edberg never got his game going Wednesday night, however, losing to hard-serving Daniel Vacek 6-3, 6-4. Edberg, upset in a night match in the tournament two years ago by Richard Krajicek, said the stadium court was too dark.

"If you can't see the ball, you have no chance," Edberg said. "I never really found any timing out there. I had a few chances to break, but I never made him play the ball."

"I had a little bit of trouble with his serve because the court is extremely quick," said Lendl, who added that he'd never seen Renzenbrink before. Lendl had 17 unforced errors in the first set alone.

Neither player faced a break point in the first set, but Renzenbrink ran off five straights points in the tiebreaker, the last on a double fault by Lendl.

Renzenbrink had a chance to take command with two break points in the first game of the second set, but an ace and two straight points by Lendl ended that threat, and Renzenbrink didn't get another break chance.

"I thought I was getting worse, but I think maybe the problem was he was getting better," Renzenbrink said.

Lendl started to paint the lines — the same shots he'd been missing early on — and Renzenbrink soon found himself out of the picture.

Losing early has grown "tiresome," Lendl said, but was not something he thought about entering the match. He said he's been focusing on footwork, which always gives him trouble when the tour switches from grass to hardcourt.

The 11th-ranked Lendl was the highest ranked player Renzenbrink had ever faced, and it was only the second time he had played on a stadium court.

Vacek, 22, who has a 10-16 match record this year and is ranked No. 105, said the victory over Edberg was easily the biggest of his career.

Vacek, who also complained about the lighting, beat Edberg at his serve-and-volley game, outserving him and outpointing him at the net 41-32. He handcuffed Edberg by serving right at him.

U.S. Hardcourt Championships

INDIANAPOLIS — Top-seeded Pete Sampras began his bid for a third consecutive U.S. Hardcourts title by defeating qualifier Todd Nelson 6-3, 6-4 Wednesday.

Sampras, the world's top-ranked player who already has won Wimbledon and four other tournaments while compiling a 59-11 match record this year, had 10 aces in improving to 19-2 in this event.

Sampras's biggest problem was landing his first serve safely. He managed 52 percent, winning 27 of 33 first serves and had six double faults. He won only 14 of his 30 second serves.

Earlier, a timely change in rackets paid off for Jimmy Arias with a second-round victory over 13th-seeded Brad Gilbert.

Arias, who is pondering retirement, rallied for a 2-6, 6-4, 6-4 victory on the stadium court at the Indianapolis Tennis Center.

Arias, playing in his first tour event since April, was down 4-1 in the second set.

"I changed rackets to a little tighter racket and I was able to return his serve a little bit," said Arias, who hadn't played Gilbert since 1989 and had lost in their four previous matches. "For the first set and a half, I don't think I put a return of serve in the court."

"He was talking, fooling around and so he was playing loose and all of a sudden he relaxed a little bit, started playing a little bit better," Gilbert said. "At 4-3 when I had a break point, he hit a backhand passing shot. ... Good approach, fron the dead corner, after all of that, it lifted his game. My game kind of went down after that.

"Then I got a little tired in the third set, just didn't capitalize."

Eighth-seeded Wayne Ferreira and No. 11 Richey Reneberg easily moved into the third round. Ferreira needed only 43 minutes to defeat qualifier Cristiano Caratti 6-0, 6-1, losing only six points on his serve. Reneberg took 65 minutes to eliminate Derrick Rostagno 6-1, 6-4.

"Derrick usually gives me a lot of trouble," said Reneberg, who lost four of their previous six matches. "He just didn't play well today. The first set he made a lot of errors. ... He never quite got his game going."

Reneberg, who plays Peru's Jamie Yzaga next, capitalized on 33 unforced errors. Sticking mainly to the baseline, he won six of the nine points when he came to the net.

Canadian Open

TORONTO — After a five-minute rubdown to soothe an injured right shoulder, defending champion Arantxa Sanchez Vicario of Spain beat Laura Golarsa of Italy 7-5, 6-2 on Wednesday to reach the third round of the Canadian Open women's tennis tournament.

Sanchez Vicario said her problems began early in the match before a trainer was called to treat what she said was a stretched muscle, an injury that all but eliminated her service game.

Her Italian opponent broke serve three times in the first set and once in the second. Fortunately for Sanchez Vicario, she returned the favor, breaking Golarsa four times in the first and three in the second.

"Most of the time it was bothering me when I had to serve and make overheads," she said, adding that the therapy session under a cloudless sky helped ease the pain and stiffness going into the second set.

The injury was evident at the end of the match when she surprised with an underhand serve to win match point.

"That was the only way to put the ball into the court."

In the other featured afternoon match, Argentina's Gabriela Sabatini made her first tournament appearance a winning one with a 7-6 (7-4), 6-2 decision over American Lisa Raymond.

Sabatini, a crowd favorite, was pleased with the outcome.

"I took some risks and concentrated on each point," she said.

In a disappointing match for the Canadian fans, Helen Kelesi was beaten 6-2, 6-3 by 11th-seeded Amanda Coetzer of South Africa.

"I couldn't get myself going," said Kelesi, the last Canadian in the draw. "I couldn't get myself out of this pit I was in. I was nervous, tight."

Top-seeded Steffi Graf and American Mary Joe Fernandez were victorious. Graf, the world's top-ranked player, moved into the quarterfinals with a 6-1, 6-2 dismantling of Japan's Naoko Sawamatsu and the fourth-seeded Fernandez downed Croatia's Iva Majoli 6-3, 6-4.

American Tracy Austin was also a loser Wednesday.

NCAA: Dye era persists

(From 1C)

Dye, forced to resign following the 1992 season, remains a special assistant to Muse. He did not join the president at a news conference on the NCAA probation, but issued a statement saying he may have made "management mistakes and mistakes of judgment, but I did not willfully or intentionally violate any rules."

The NCAA found Auburn committed six major violations. Three involved giving cash payments to Ramsey, including bonuses for game performances. A fourth cited Dye's program for a lack of proper institutional control.

The other two — both new to the case and provided to the NCAA by Auburn itself — cited the school for allowing athletes to play without meeting all eligibility requirements and exceeding the number of permissible grants-in-aid during 1988-89 and 1990-91. Muse said only one or two players actually competed while not fully eligible.

New coach Terry Bowden, whose team opens the season against Mississippi Sept. 2 in a nationally televised game on ESPN, refused to comment on the past, saying, "Our eyes are on the future."

Under the NCAA sanctions, Auburn can decide if it wants to begin the one-year TV blackout now or delay it until the 1994 season. Muse said a decision would be made soon.

The NCAA report gave no names, but it paralleled the allegations made by Ramsey. His attorney, Donald Watkins, said the NCAA showed that Ramsey was credible and he now would pursue television and literary rights for the Ramsey story.

He said Ramsey, now living near Washington, D.C., would have no immediate comment on the probation.

Ramsey, who finished his coursework away from Auburn and was graduated last year, first told of taped evidence of cheating in a story in The Montgomery Advertiser in September 1991. Later, he played some of the tapes for The Birmingham News, and he and Watkins subsequently testified before a congressional committee.

As the case snowballed, Dye's program began to erode. After winning or sharing SEC crowns in 1983, 1987, 1988 and 1989, the Ramsey case seemed to dominate Auburn talk. The team won only seven of the 19 games it played after Ramsey first talked of a pay-for-play scandal.

Bonds breaks slump, beats Bucs

Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — Barry Bonds broke out of his October-like slump in Pittsburgh with a 4-for-5 night and two homers — his first in his old park in a visiting uniform — to power San Francisco to a 9-6 victory over the Pirates on Wednesday.

The Pirates probably knew that Bonds' 0-for-12 streak in Pittsburgh and his .138 average against them was too good to last.

The two-time National League MVP doubled off Zane Smith to key a three-run first, then singled in the third before following Robby Thompson's 11th homer of the season with his 37th on Mark Petkovsek's next pitch in the fifth. He added a two-run drive off Jeff Ballard in the ninth for his fifth two-homer game of the season.

■ NL Roundup

Bonds has figured in back-to-back homers three times in his last three games, as he and Matt Williams twice connected on consecutive drives Sunday in Chicago. Bonds' 38 homers easily surpass his previous career-high of 34 last season, when he failed again to produce in the postseason during the Pirates' third straight playoff defeat.

Cubs 2, Expos 0

CHICAGO — Greg Hibbard allowed four hits over 8⅓ innings and Sammy Sosa hit his 29th homer, leading Chicago to a victory over Montreal.

Hibbard (10-9), who walked one and struck out three, allowed a one-out single to Randy Ready in the ninth inning and was replaced by Randy Myers, who walked Marquis Grissom and Larry Walker.

After Jose Bautista relieved, he struck out Moises Alou and got Frank Bolick to fly out for his first major league save and the first by a Cubs reliever other than Myers this season.

Sosa homered in the fourth inning off loser Ken Hill (7-4). The Cubs scored another run in the fifth when Dwight Smith walked, went to second on an infield out and scored on Derrick May's two-out single.

Mets 12, Reds 2

CINCINNATI — Frank Tanana beat Cincinnati for the third time this season by pitching eight strong innings and tripling with the bases loaded, leading New York to a victory.

Tanana's stand-up triple, the first of his career, highlighted a five-run sixth that sent the Reds to their eighth loss in nine games. The Mets also got homers from Jeromy Burnitz and Todd Hundley.

The Reds tried just about everything against Tanana (6-12) — Chris Sabo wore a lucky jingle bell on his left shoe and Kevin Mitchell switched to a 40-ounce bat. All they managed were five hits off the 40-year-old left-hander, who struck out two and didn't give up a walk while throwing 112 pitches.

Astros 2, Marlins 1

HOUSTON — Chris James' pinch-hit single in the eighth inning drove in Luis Gonzalez with the winning run as Houston defeated Florida.

The victory is Houston's fifth in its last seven games.

With the score tied 1-1, Ken Caminiti led off the eighth with a double, and moved to third on a single by Gonzalez. Caminiti was thrown out at the plate by first baseman Orestes Destrade. Gonzalez, who had gone to second on the play, moved to third on Chris Donnels' groundout and scored when James lined his single to left.

Greg Swindell (9-9) snapped a six-game losing streak at the Astrodome to record the victory. He went eight innings, allowing one run on six hits. He struck out seven, to equal his season high, and walked none.

Todd Jones pitched the ninth for his first career save.

Cardinals 4, Padres 0

ST. LOUIS — Donovan Osborne allowed two hits over seven innings and Greg Jefferies had three hits and drove in a run as St. Louis beat San Diego.

Osborne (10-6) struck out five and walked one as he won for the first time in a month. He had been 0-3 over his last five starts, last winning on July 19.

Osborne left for a pinch hitter in the seventh. Rob Murphy pitched the last two innings, allowing two hits, to gain his first save.

Braves 5, Dodgers 4

ATLANTA — Ron Gant's sacrifice fly in the 12th inning drove in the winning run as Atlanta took advantage of two Los Angeles errors for a victory to extend its winning streak to nine games.

The Braves remained 6½ games behind the NL West-leading San Francisco Giants, who defeated Pittsburgh 9-6.

Gant's liner to center field off Roger McDowell (4-2) scored Mark Lemke, who had opened the inning by reaching on shortstop Jose Offerman's throwing error, his 28th of the season.

Phillies 7, Rockies 6

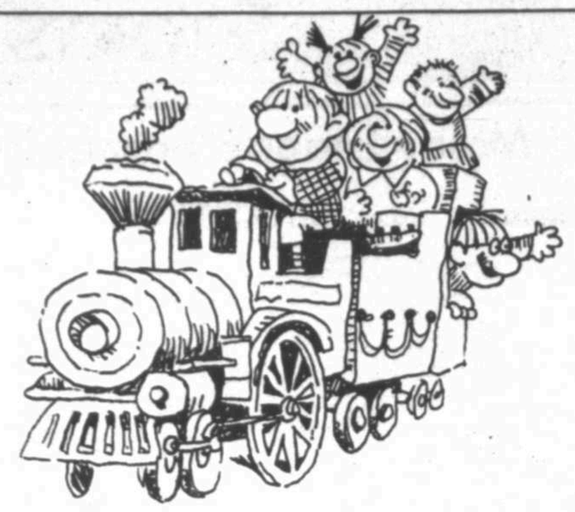

DENVER — John Kruk hit two solo homers and Kevin Stocker drove in three runs as Philadelphia beat Colorado.

The NL East-leading Phillies are 7-1 against the Rockies and are unbeaten in five games at Mile High Stadium.

Bobby Thigpen (2-0), who relieved starter Tommy Greene in the sixth, was the winner, allowing one hit over two innings. Mitch Williams pitched the ninth for his 34th save.

Bruce Ruffin (4-5), who came on in the seventh, allowed four hits and two runs in 1⅓ innings and took the loss.

The Rockies took a 6-5 lead in the fifth on an RBI-double by Chris Jones, who was thrown out trying to stretch it to a triple, and an RBI-groundout by Charlie Hayes following a triple by Dante Bichette.

AL: Darwin five outs short of no-hitter brought in a right-handed pitcher to face a left-handed batter.

"Lefferts has been giving up a lot of home runs (15)," Kennedy said.

Red Sox 5, White Sox 0

BOSTON — Danny Darwin came within five outs of pitching the first no-hitter at Fenway Park in 28 years, allowing only one hit as Boston defeated Chicago.

Dan Pasqua hit a triple off the center-field fence, just inches over the glove of 5-foot-10 Billy Hatcher, to break up the no-hit bid with one out in the eighth inning. Pasqua was batting only .182 before his hit.

Before that, the only baserunners off Darwin had been Tim Raines, who led off the fourth with a walk on a 3-2 count, and Joey Cora, who walked on a 3-2 pitch with one out in the seventh. Raines was erased on a double play and Cora was stranded.

There has not been a no-hitter at Fenway, nor an official no-hitter by a Red Sox pitcher, since Dave Morehead kept the Cleveland Indians hitless on Sept. 16, 1965. Matt Young held the Indians hitless on April 12, 1992, but lost the game 2-1 and did not get credit for a no-hitter.

Athletics 2, Brewers 1

OAKLAND — Scott Brosius hit a two-run homer and Ron Darling allowed four hits in seven innings as Oakland defeated Milwaukee.

The victory was Oakland's third straight and sent the Brewers to their third straight loss.

Brosius' homer in the second inning off starter Angel Miranda (2-3) drove in Troy Neel, who walked with one out. It was his third homer of the season and put the A's ahead 2-0.

Darling (5-6) struck out seven and walked three to earn his first win in three starts. He hadn't won since July 30 when the A's beat Texas 4-1. Dennis Eckersley pitched the ninth for his 28th save.

Orioles 8, Mariners 1

SEATTLE — Harold Reynolds hit a three-run homer and Jamie Moyer scattered eight hits as Baltimore defeated Seattle to end an eight-game losing streak.

The fourth-place Orioles, who started the day 6½ games behind Toronto in the AL East, ended their longest losing skid since 1988, when they opened the season with 21 straight defeats. Baltimore completed its 10-game road trip at 2-8.

Before their winless skid, the Orioles had won eight in a row.

Moyer (8-6) got his first victory in five starts and second complete game of the season by walking one and striking out eight. He was 0-2 with two no-decisions since defeating Minnesota on July 24.

Blue Jays 7, Indians 6

CLEVELAND — Paul Molitor singled home John Olerud with two outs in the 11th inning and Toronto beat Cleveland Indians for their fifth straight win.

The Blue Jays, who trailed 6-2 after four innings, moved 20 games over .500 for the first time this year and increased their lead over New York in the AL East to two full games.

Olerud hit a two-out single off Derek Lilliquist (2-2) and moved to second on a wild pitch. Molitor grounded a single through the middle, scoring Olerud easily.

Olerud went 3-for-5, increasing his average to .389.

Royals 5, Twins 2

MINNEAPOLIS — Kevin Appier held Minnesota hitless until the sixth inning and pitched Kansas City past the Twins for their third straight victory.

The Royals moved within 2½ games of AL West-leading Chicago, which lost 5-0 to Boston.

Appier (14-6) pitched eight innings and gave up five hits. He struck out and walked three in winning his third straight game, and ninth in his last 11 decisions. Jeff Montgomery worked the ninth for his 38th save.

thinking?

"When I told you that, in a way I was shooting for the stars. I'm not looking to be the highest-paid player in the NFL. But the highest-paid running back? Yes. The highest-paid non-quarterback? Yes.

"What has happened since (making the $4 million statement) is the Thurman Thomas deal with Buffalo. That legitimizes the idea that a great player can get great money, even if he's not a quarterback."

Thomas got $13.5 million over four years from the Bills. Would a similar contract persuade you to sign?

"When I saw that, it blew my mind. When I got to thinking about it, what impressed me is that it was nice of the Buffalo Bills' organization to take care of their running back, even though his contract wasn't even up. Here I am, a running back whose contract is up, and I have to go through this. I don't know what the Thurman thing says about him or me as running backs. But I know it says a lot for Buffalo as an organization in Thurman's eyes. And in my eyes.

"Then the Bills signed (defensive end) Bruce Smith to a similar deal, and his contract wasn't up, either. The Bills seem to understand that to win a Super Bowl, those players need to be in camp from Day One. They aren't asking that team to be at a top level after one quick day of practice before the season opener."

QUESTION: Do you think that is Jones' plan? To sign you on the eve of the Sept.6 season opener in Washington?

ANSWER: "I believe Jerry has a timetable. I saw what happened with Michael (Irvin, who signed four days before the 1992 opener), and I have a feeling they're wanting to make me wait a little longer than that.

Q: Have you considered getting even more personally involved? Talking to Jones yourself, for instance?

A: "I don't know that anything like that would do me any good. I don't believe Mr. Jones would ever want to talk to me directly while I was not under contract. He's talked to me over the years when I was at the Valley Ranch facility. I don't know if anything else would be appropriate. As a matter of fact, I haven't even talked to (agent) Richard Howell in three or four days. But if Jerry ever did call, I guess I'd pick up the phone."

Q: Despite your fondness for the Metroplex, you've spent most of this summer in your native Pensacola. Why?

A: "There are two main reasons. One, I wanted to spend some of this time with my family and with Emmitt, Inc., my business.

"But the big reason is I didn't want to wake up every morning and open my newspapers and read about the Dallas Cowboys, what's up in training camp, what's up with Emmitt Smith every day. To write about it every day, I mean, don't writers have anything better to do?

"With me being down here, it doesn't wear on my mind. Here, I don't get that much Cowboys news unless it's a major story: the (proposed) trade for Cleveland Gary, the team's preseason games, Clayton Holmes getting hurt. This way, football is packed into the back of my mind. But believe me, training for football is right up front."

Q: You mean you really are doing more than just golfing to stay in shape?

A: "I'm running in the heat of the day. I'm doing some of the same stuff we did in minicamps in Dallas. I'm doing hill work, road work, sprint work. I'm swimming, weight-lifting. The works. I'm in shape."

Q: What is your take on the public perception of the negotiations?

A: "I want to say this to the Dallas-Fort Worth people: I greatly appreciate the things they are doing and saying in support of me."

Q: Coach Jimmy Johnson is trying to put a positive spin on all this. But clearly, he's concerned about you being here. What would you say to him?

A: "Do me a favor. Tell Jimmy not to pull out his hair just yet."

Prices fall

NEW YORK — Traders surprised by a slight reduction in gasoline inventories last week sold futures contracts Wednesday, depressing the price of the fuel.

September delivery of unleaded gasoline fell 1.68 cents per gallon on the New York Mercantile Exchange to settle at 54.10 cents. The price drop accelerated when it triggered automatic sell orders.

Early Tuesday evening the American Petroleum Institute reported a 1.2 million reduction in U.S. gasoline inventories last week. The lower inventory was within expectations, but analysts said many in the market were hoping for news that would raise prices further. Unleaded gasoline had risen nearly 4 cents a gallon in the past two weeks.

Crude and heating oil followed gasoline lower.

West Texas intermediate for delivery in September settled at $17.66 per barrel, down 26 cents.

Local crude purchasers lowered their posted price 25 cents to $16 a barrel.

Dollar firms

NEW YORK — The dollar finished higher against the yen Wednesday, ending a six-day slide, but fell against most other currencies as investors bet German and British interest rates wouldn't drop.

The British pound rose against the dollar after new figures showed British retail sales volume down 0.2 percent in July from June.

In New York, the dollar fetched 101.60 yen, an increase of .45 yen from Tuesday.

In New York, the pound was trading at $1.5170, more expensive than $1.4875 a day earlier.

Stocks surge

NEW YORK — The stock market rocketed to new highs again Wednesday in brisk trading that boosted the Dow Jones industrial average to a close above 3,600 for the first time.

Buying of recently depressed drug and consumer product stocks bolstered by bullish sentiment abroad sustained the record-setting momentum.

The Dow industrial average notched a milestone in closing above 3,600. It rose 17.88 past its day-old record to reach 3,604.86.

Even more impressive was the performance of broader market indicators. The New York Stock Exchange composite index shattered a record that stood for more than five months in finishing at 252.87, up 1.60. The record of 251.36 was set on March 10.

Gaining issues outnumbered losers by a wide margin on the Big Board with about 1,266 stocks rising in price, 766 falling and 594 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board swelled to 309.19 million shares from 261.27 million in the previous session.

Several other market indicators posted records or near records.

Kodak to slash 10,000 jobs by '95

■ Leading maker of photography products to freeze research costs, take other austerity steps to save $2.8 billion.

Associated Press

BUFFALO, N.Y. — Eastman Kodak Co. plans to cut 10,000 jobs by 1995, freeze research costs and take other austerity steps to help save $2.8 billion.

The leading maker of photography products became the latest big U.S. industrial enterprise to slash staff and spending in order to improve profitability in a slow economy.

But analysts who follow the company said the job cuts, which were announced Wednesday and amount to about 9 percent of Kodak's global work force, must go deeper and happen faster.

The reductions were announced by outgoing Kodak chairman Kay Whitmore, fired earlier this month by board members dissatisfied with his efforts to reduce costs.

The plan outlined Wednesday was the same one that resulted in Whitmore's ouster, said R. Jackson Blackstock, a securities analyst with First Boston Corp.

Kodak, which plans to replace Whitmore with an executive from outside the company, probably will hire someone who will make more drastic cuts, Blackstock said.

"The board felt his plan was insufficient, so by inference you can figure the cost-cutting is going to be deeper," Blackstock said.

Whitmore, 61, is staying on until his replacement is chosen. He has been Kodak's chief executive since June 1990.

Company spokesman Ron Roberts said Kodak's board had approved Whitmore's cost-cutting plan but that whoever replaces Whitmore might make changes.

"There's every intention to go forward with these things," Roberts said. "Whether the new guy will come in and make changes, additions, subtractions to the plan, I don't know."

Whitmore said the job cuts would be in addition to 2,000 jobs eliminated early this year, mostly in Rochester, where Kodak is headquartered.

"Kodak is not a company in crisis," Whitmore said in a letter to shareholders. "At its core, Kodak remains a very strong company and intends to become stronger."

The job cuts will be spread throughout the company, which employs about 115,000 people worldwide. Company spokesman Paul Allen said the reductions would come through layoffs, attrition and possibly the sale of subsidiaries.

Whitmore's plan also would reduce capital spending, freeze research and development and administrative expenses and possibly result in the sale of some assets.

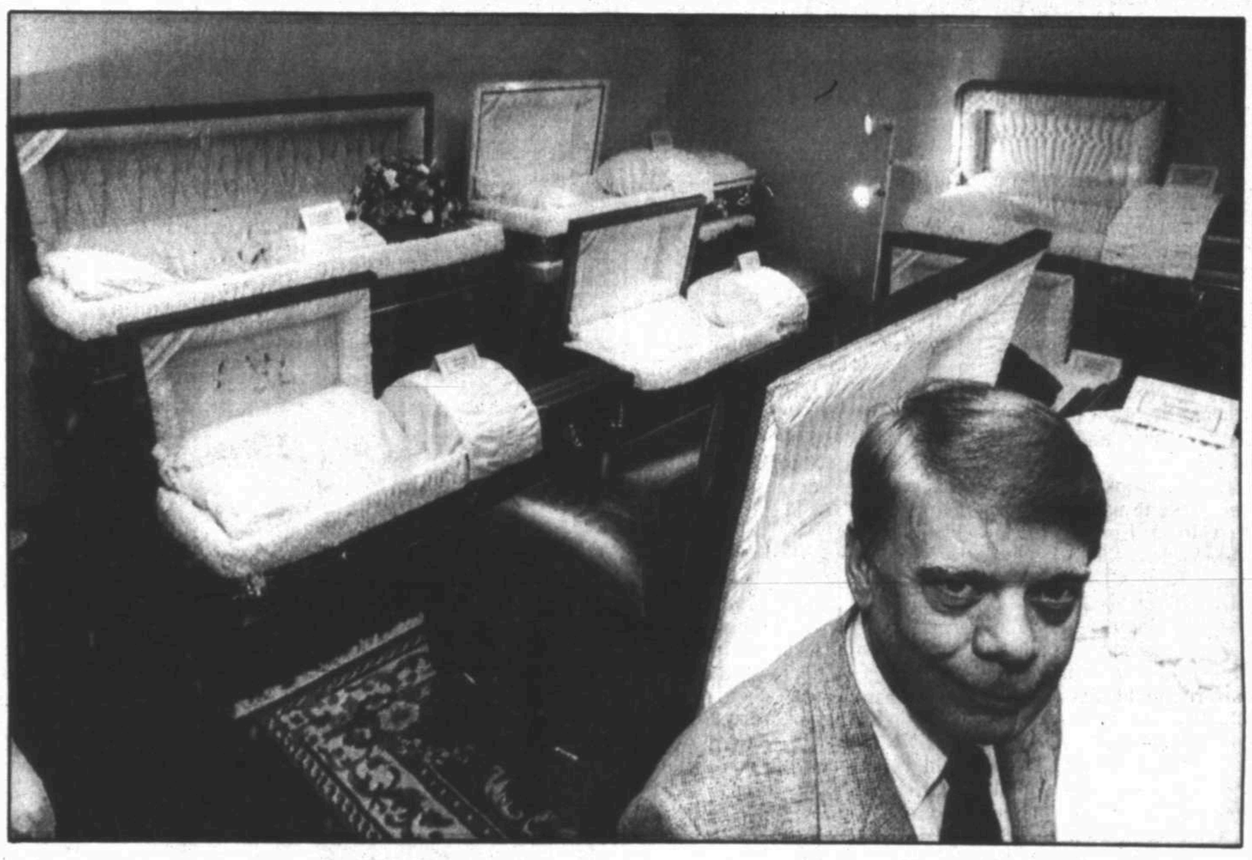

The plan would save $700 million in 1993, $1 billion in 1994 and $1.1 billion in 1995, Whitmore said.

The Kodak cutbacks reflect a broader trend among large American companies ranging from General Motors Corp. to Procter & Gamble Co., which are cutting their work forces to save money. Part of the reason is the anemic economy, which has restrained the ability of many corporations to raise prices.

Though Kodak has remained profitable, its profits and sales haven't grown. In the first half of this year, excluding accounting changes, Kodak earned $520 million on $7.81 billion in sales vs. earnings of $658 million on the same level of sales in the first half of 1992.

Kodak stock closed Wednesday at $60.50 on the New York Stock Exchange, up 25 cents. Analysts said they were recommending Kodak stock to investors because the company was taking the right steps to improve profits.

"Kodak is not a basket case," Blackstock said. "It's not a company on the precipice of the waterfalls. They are still the dominant player in photography."

Russell D. Moore, chief executive officer of Casket Gallery International, poses Tuesday with some of his products in Mesquite.

RIP: Mesquite store offers cut-rate coffins

MESQUITE — Bargain hunters can rest in peace.

In an age when discount stores abound for clothes, stereos, and furniture, true discount shoppers now have another outlet for their passion — Casket Gallery International.

Store owners tout the company as the Wal-Mart of coffin sellers in a sea of Neiman Marcuses. A new strip-center store in Mesquite offers caskets at cut-rate cost.

Those shopping for the afterlife can find coffins for $750 to $2,495 at Casket Gallery, compared with $1,095 to $10,525 at a leading Dallas funeral home.

"For the American people, the funeral industry is the one place that they've been ripped off more than any other industry," said Russell Moore, the company's chief executive officer.

The Mesquite store is the first of 14 that the company expects to open around the country. Moore, 52, says the store can offer lower prices because it has less overhead than funeral homes and because it buys in quantity.

Executives of the Little Rock, Ark., company are striving to claim their niche in this specialized market. The company is seeking up to $300,000 in monthly sales, Moore said.

To reach that goal, company officials have paid careful attention to every detail of the store — down to the music-free "briefing room."

"We've employed psychologists and psychiatrists in order to put the whole process together," Moore said.

Even the store's bathroom fits into the marketing scheme. A wreath of plastic green leaves circles the toilet paper, and a wood stand supports two stacks of baby-blue brochures: "What is a Casket Gallery?" and "Questions about Caskets."

Area funeral home directors say they welcome the competition from Casket Gallery. However, they admit their prices probably will remain higher because of increased overhead.

But Virgil Parkhill, funeral director at Restland Funeral Home, says places like Restland offer all funeral services, including flower and coffin.

Township asks courts to keep GM plant open

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — The local government which is home to General Motors Corp.'s sprawling Willow Run assembly plant asked the state Supreme Court on Wednesday to keep the plant open.

Ypsilanti Township, joined by Washtenaw County and the state itself, filed an appeal with the high court in an attempt to overturn a ruling by the state Court of Appeals that GM is free to permanently close the plant and transfer work to a plant in Arlington, Texas.

In two filings, they urged the court to maintain a lower court order against the shutdown until the issue is resolved, and then to overturn the appeals court ruling allowing the closure.

Under the appeals court ruling, GM can close the plant next Tuesday.

"This is a case about human beings and their fortunes — 4,500 of them at the Willow Run plant and thousands more in the affected communities," the three governments said in their appeal.

Willow Run, which once had 4,500 workers, now has about 2,500, however. Most have transferred to Arlington or other GM plants or taken early retirement.

Judge lifts gag order on airline lawsuit jury

GALVESTON (AP) — U.S. District Judge Sam Kent has lifted a gag order that prohibited jurors from talking with reporters and others for 45 days after the $3 billion predatory pricing case against American Airlines.

Kent said the order would be lifted effective at noon Wednesday.

"The order was utterly well-intentioned, and, frankly, I didn't even consider the First Amendment implications of it," Kent said after a hearing Tuesday.

"That may sound irresponsible, but I perceived my duties as being to my jurors and my parties and my lawyers first and to the public second. Maybe that's not the way to approach it."

After 20 days of testimony, jurors on Aug. 10 found that American Airlines did not restructure prices last year — a move that slashed fares 40 percent

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Stock split will not dilute investor's holding

By Bill Doyle

Q: I have been told that stock splits dilute my holdings. As a small-time investor, I have accumulated a $175,000 stock portfolio during the last nine years. I did it by buying stocks in companies with dividend reinvestment plans. I participate in those plans and send in optional cash payments of $100 or $200 per month.

Doyle

When my stocks split, I feel it helped me build what I have today. Have I been kidding myself?

A: Sort of. But that doesn't mean you should change your method of investing. My advice is to "stay the course" — keep doing what you have been doing.

Dividend reinvestment plans, which have been discussed often in this space, are a great method for building wealth. That way, your dividends automatically purchase more full and factional shares. Your holding in each company compounds.

Optional cash payments accelerate the buildup and increase the number of shares you own.

A stock split does dilute each share. But it does not dilute your total holding.

Keep in mind that a share of stock represents a piece of ownership in a corporation. Because most companies have millions of shares "outstanding" — owned by investors — one share represents only a minute fraction of 1 percent of corporate ownership.

When a stock is split, the number of shares outstanding increases, and each split share represents a smaller piece of ownership. However, because each stockholder then owns a larger number of shares, his or her ownership in the company remains unchanged.

At the time of a split, the stock's per-share price is automatically adjusted downward to reflect the smaller percentage of corporate ownership of each split share.

If you own 100 shares of stock trading at $40 immediately before a two-for-one split, you will own 200 shares trading at $20 right after the split -- unless buying demand or selling pressure in the marketplace causes the price to change.

However, stocks often do rise in market value after a split — or in anticipation of a split — basically because lower-price stocks are more popular with investors.

Q: A company in which I own 250 shares of stock has announced a two-for-one stock split. That will make me the owner of 500 shares. The stock pays $2 annual dividends — 50 cents "quarterly." Will my next dividend check be for $250?

A: Count that as unlikely. If it happens, it will involve a 100 percent dividend increase. And dividend boosts of that magnitude seldom happen.

A stock split does not automatically increase the dividend payout. If the dividend payout on that stock remains unchanged, the next dividend would be 25 cents per share. And your next check would read $125 — a dividend of 25 cents on each of your 500 shares — equal to the 50 cents per share you have been receiving on your 250 pre-split shares.

Companies often — not always — raise the dividends on split stock. For example, if your next quarterly dividend is 30 cents per share, that will be the equivalent of 60 cents on the pre-split shares — a 20 percent dividend increase.

Q: It is obvious to me that a stock split without an increase in the dividend payout is worthless. Right?

A: You are correct, as far as investors who seek income are concerned.

However, many people who buy stocks are not looking for dividends. They seek out stocks that are expected to rise in price. And stock splits often bring on that happy result.

Major companies form coalition, announce turn to recycled paper

By John Holusha
N.Y. Times News Service

By decade's end, Prudential insurance policies, Johnson & Johnson Band-Aid boxes and Time Warner's billion copies of magazines a year may all be made of recycled paper, under a project announced Wednesday by these and other companies working with the Environmental Defense Fund.

The project, which will start with feasibility studies, is aimed at reducing the burden on landfills and pumping up the anemic market for recycled paper by creating demand for billions of dollars worth of secondhand pulp.

The undertaking resembles an effort that the Environmental Defense Fund and McDonald's Corp. announced in August 1990 to look into packaging disposal in the fast-food business. That led McDonald's to replace its plastic foam hamburger boxes with a less bulky paper wrapper.

McDonald's has also joined the new alliance. The other members are Nationsbank Corp., the country's fifth-largest banking company, and Duke University.

Traditionally, environmental groups have relied on lawsuits and influence with regulatory agencies to further their goals. But John Ruston, a solid-waste expert at the Environmental Defense Fund, a leading non-profit group in the field, said the coalition was formed as a signal to paper companies that if they make environmentally friendly paper, the buyers will come. Customers like Prudential, which spends $300 million a year on paper, are hard to ignore.

"The paper industry is the most capital-intensive one in the United States," he said. "They are not going to invest in new technology without the assurance of demand."

Currently, of the 22 million tons of printing and writing paper produced in the nation each year, only about 6 percent comes from paper that has been recycled from trash.

The alliance is forming as the Clinton administration is preparing an executive order that is expected to direct federal agencies to buy paper with increasing levels of recycled material. The federal government buys 300,000 tons of paper a year.

The Clinton order, expected after Labor Day, also may include incentives against buying paper bleached with chlorine and chlorine compounds. Environmental groups have been increasingly critical of the use of chlorine in bleaching wood pulp because of the toxic emissions from the process.

Although the EDF Fund did not address the chlorine issue Wednesday, it did say that its effort would include looking at the way paper is made. The group said it was focusing on paper because paper products make up one-third of all municipal trash.

Ruston said the companies in the group were selected for their size and diversity.

"You have financial services with Prudential and Nationsbank, packagers with Johnson & Johnson and McDonald's, and a full-service publisher with Time, including book publishing," he said. "The real value of the task force is that we are working with actual users of these products. You find what works in a business setting."

Ruston said the companies, which his group first approached last summer, were the only ones sought out. None declined to participate, he said, "but the courtship for some was longer than others."

No newspaper publishers are part of the new alliance, presumably because newspaper companies are already active users of recycled paper.

The New York Times Co., for example, uses 12 percent recycled newsprint in The Times and the 31 regional newspapers owned by the company. The company's magazine group, which includes Family Circle and Child magazines, currently uses no recycled paper. But a spokesman for The Times Co. said recycled paper is being tested and will be used if it is found to be of acceptable quality and readily available.

The drawbacks to using recycled paper are usually appearance and strength. Recycled paper is often not as bright as virgin paper, because not all the ink is removed in reprocessing, and it is sometimes weaker, causing rolls of paper to break in printing presses.

Given that, the involvement of Time Warner is noteworthy, since its Time Inc. subsidiary requires high-quality paper stock, coated with clay, to produce magazines. Technology is gradually overcoming the problems associated with secondhand paper.

Laura Ashley sticks close to its past

By Karin Davies

LONDON (AP) — Walking into a Laura Ashley shop is like opening a treasure trove of dress-up clothes. Straw hats blossom with bows, and dresses sprinkled with flowers evoke thoughts of a country idyll.

The English country apparel and home furnishings company is celebrating its 40th anniversary by returning to its romantic roots.

In the late 1980s, Laura Ashley Holdings PLC was fleetingly distracted by a seductive shrug of well-padded power shoulders. Forsaking the Victorian fashion sense of its namesake and its loyal customers, the firm tried to take its garments from the garden into the boardroom.

It didn't work.

After three years of losses, Laura Ashley finally posted a profit of 667,000 pounds ($1 million) for the year which ended Jan. 29 by reviving much-loved looks and restructuring its production and retailing systems.

"Laura Ashley is not power dressing," said Jim Maxmin, the company's new American chief executive. "It was a style clearly not for the '80s."

FASHION HAS turned Laura Ashley's way for the 1990s.

The anti-fashion trend launched by Seattle grunge rockers has brought back the floral frock — although its favored pairing is with clunky black boots, rather than pretty slippers preferred by Laura Ashley.

The Laura Ashley button-through frocks of the 1970s have been updated — they are less structured and are made with cotton-viscose blends rather than pure cotton which makes them drape softly.

"They're not the same shape, and they're not even the same florals but they say the same thing — they say I feel good, I feel pretty, and I am in a romantic mood today," said Stephen Grant, global collection development director.

The firm's design sense faltered after Laura Ashley died in 1985 in a fall at her daughter's home, said The Daily Telegraph's fashion editor, Kathryn Samuel.

"Bernard Ashley and their son Nick, who became design director, didn't have the same touch as she did. Nick nudged the firm in the direction of ... the gabardine double-breasted jacket — and it didn't do very well."

Grant said when he was hired nearly two years ago he knew he had to be faithful to the late Mrs. Ashley's ideas to succeed.

He said he pored over her correspondence, "trying to get a handle on what criteria she used," and makes regular trips to the Welsh valleys to soak up the scenery that inspired Mrs. Ashley.

WHILE CREATING new designs, Mrs. Ashley used an eclectic mixture of sources, from patchwork quilts to the end papers of old books. She stored them away and from time to time returned to them, working old ideas into new prints and styles.

Designers still return to her hoard. "Mood boards" featuring swatches fabric, a clump of yarn, a corner of wallpaper are propped up on desks at the firm's headquarters, a light and airy convérted bus garage in the fashionable London neighborhood of Chelsea.

In 40 years the firm has gone from kitchen table to international retailer of English country-style women's and children's clothing and home furnishings. Laura Ashley has 550 shops with dark-green fronts and blackberry sprig motif worldwide, 186 of them in the United States.

Laura Ashley, like Ralph Lauren, will dress both you and your home.

There are adorable sailor-suit and flowered rompers for babies (with matching dresses for mother), pretty pinafores for little girls, flouncy frocks for a school ball, and practical linens for a graduate's first job.

After a wedding wrapped in Laura Ashley lacy whites, a new bride can decorate her home with wallpaper featuring pastoral scenes, chintz curtains and inviting armchairs. Light fixtures, vases and even writing paper are made to match.

"I like the leggings best of all but sometimes my friends and I go into Laura Ashley just to smell the perfume," said Carmen Mohammed, an art student at Oxford University.

"We are truly a lifestyle brand," Grant said. "Laura Ashley appeals to 10 percent of people worldwide. It's not limited to a particular product or a particular age group. It's limited to a way of looking at life."

BERNARD AND Laura Ashley began their business in 1953 by printing sprigged flowers on linen tea towels and perky head scarves in the kitchen of their London apartment. They had no experience and little money but lots of enthusiasm and a talent for design.

In 1961, the family moved to the green and rolling hills of Wales, where Mrs. Ashley had spent part of her childhood in the care of a grandmother with Victorian values.

Mrs. Ashley's creativity flourished, inspired by nature and the local myths and legends.

Her modest but elegant garments reflected "that she felt uncomfortable as a woman of 39, 40 wearing a mini skirt as we do now. You've had a few children and you want to cover up," said her daughter Jane, who was born the same year as the company.

The first Laura Ashley shop opened in London in 1968, offering an alternative to the brave new world of the mini skirt. Women queued for hours to buy fresh cotton dresses, in a rainbow of natural colors, flowers, bright geometrics, even mythical Welsh lions.

One of the challenges facing Laura Ashley today is updating a traditional look.

It is accomplished, for example, by brightening the color palate used for home designs and adding bolder, more masculine designs to the more typical florals, Grant said.

Despite Mrs. Ashley's death and her husband's retirement this spring, Laura Ashley tries to maintain a sense that it is a family business.

BUSINESS SUITS are seldom seen at company headquarters. A canteen serves subsidized, wholesome food. In Wales, factories close at midday so workers can spend time with families.

Maxmin has tried to make his employees aware of all aspects of the firm. Everyone, right up to the board level, must spend at least six days a year serving customers. A chalk board at the headquarters entrance lists the value of Laura Ashley stock.

Perhaps as a hedge against straying again, Laura Ashley even stated its mission in an annual report: "to establish an enduring relationship with those who share a love of the special lifestyle that is Laura Ashley."

The design sense and philosophy of the late Laura Ashley, shown here, continues to guide the company she founded, which is celebrating its 40th anniversary.

This year's white shirt: Bigger is better

By Francine Parnes
Associated Press

The white cotton shirt of the moment is not your basic oxford cloth button-down. Rather, soft, cascading ruffles, knotted waists and bell sleeves are some of the novel twists on the current shirt tale.

Even the classic white men's dress shirt is being revitalized by designers in the United States and abroad. Oversized and undone are the operative words. Dress-length shirttails are meant to flow, bearing an uncanny resemblance to nightshirts. French cuffs, unbuttoned, fall over the knuckles. If they're perilously close to swimming in your soup, you've got the look.

"The white shirt is bigger and longer than it's ever been — some even go down as far as the calf," says Wilmer Weiss, senior vice president for fashion at I. Magnin in San Francisco.

"The whole idea is to wear it on the outside of your trousers or leggings, not tucked in," he says. "The sleeves are 1 or 2 inches longer than usual and should hang out below the jacket."

At Chanel, the white shirt, paired with a boucle suit, is nearly knee-length with extra-long French cuffs and chain cufflinks.

"It's a very fresh way to update a Chanel look," says Anne Fahey, public relations manager for Chanel in New York. "The important part is they're long, usually under a little Spencer jacket or classic short sweater set. It's the contrast of long and short that makes it new."

What's so appealing about a shirt that defies customary proportions?

"There's an oversized quality that makes you look smaller," Weiss says. "It emphasizes the present vision of women that's somewhat waif-like, tender and vulnerable. The hair is softer, the makeup is more natural, and it all reminds you of a child putting on her parent's clothes."

It's kicky, too.

Anytime you wear a shirttail loose under a vest, "you're looking very comfortable and sporty at the same time," says Cassie Hughes, public relations manager for Esprit in San Francisco. "There's nothing like pulling out a white shirt on a hot summer afternoon to make you feel refreshed."

If man-tailored leaves you gender-bent, there are white shirts with a softer touch. Designers including Oscar de la Renta, Bill Blass and Regina Porter are courting romance with flowing Victorian poet's blouses.

"You can update whatever you have simply by adding a new poet's blouse with a soft ruffle," says Porter, who includes white shirts in all of her collections. "The key words are soft and feminine, more than they've been in many years."

Weiss calls these romantic styles "Lord Byron all over again. The white blouse or shirt is at its peak because it personifies the dandy, Edwardian quality that's running through fashion this year. It's certainly a natural with the new longer frock coats."

If you're ready to catch the trend, you'll encounter snappy-looking white shirts in a variety of prices.

Black is back in fashion

By Carrie Donovan
N.Y. Times News Service

Black is always a big color for fall but this year it's going to be really big. Whatever the style — stark and simple, froufrou Edwardian, sharp executive, siren — it's in black fabric. Price is not a factor. It can be cheap chic or madly exorbitant. Just look at any store. Bloomingdale's, for instance, has floor upon floor and rack upon rack of delectable new fall clothes. Practically all of them are black.

Actually, this deluge of black fashion is good news. Who hasn't, when garbed in black, been asked, "Have you lost weight?" And black is not only deceptively thinning, it also implies sophistication. One feels more worldly when sheathed in a black something. And there is the convenience. Anyone dressing in all black can do it in no time flat. Black accessories even look better finishing off an all-black outfit.

Even men have discovered the beauty of black. As one natty dresser, turned out in a black shirt and black linen suit, said the other day, "Well, it's what you put on when you get up an hour late."

Women of all seasons are beaten by weather

By Erma Bombeck

The year of weird weather has left a lot of confused mothers in its wake. They are different and they don't know why. It's a little-known fact that weather extremes can turn Donna Reed into Joan Crawford.

Bombeck

Most women don't realize that the temperature can temporarily affect their entire personalities, and there is nothing they can do about it. They become mothers for all seasons.

The Monsoon Mother drags around with the look of a woman whose home pregnancy test just turned the wrong color. She spends most of her time at the kitchen window searching the sky as if she expects the appearances of Peter Pan and Tinker Bell. She's a normally compassionate mom, but when hit with a week of rain, she'll dress her children in full rain gear, put a kite in their hands, shove them out the door into a day that looks like night and say, "You won't melt."

Summer From Hell Mother is cranky because all the fans are in the attic and need rewiring, the small plastic swimming pool has a hole in it, and the kids have just turned on the oven to bake cookies. She plans a dental appointment just to get out of the house and into air conditioning.

The School Closing Mother is hard to figure. That is because she is ambivalent about the school's regard for her child's safety when the wind chill factor is 40 below zero. So she bundles them up, tells them to make a snowman, points them outside and says, "A little fresh air is good for you." She will later testify that she did not know the front door locked automatically.

The Tornado Alert Mom discovers skills she didn't know she had. She has the strength to move the dining room table away from the window and the intelligence to get her children under it. Her manner takes on the qualities of a Maine drill sergeant as she yells, "Toto and Dorothy got sucked up because they didn't listen. Now move!"

Flu Season Mother is a beaten woman. She is exhausted from running trays and washing sheets. Her battle cry is, "If we can jump to the ceiling from the bed, Harold, we must be feeling better."

These are all basically wonderful women who care about their children, but when they get a bad run of weather, they cannot believe that nature, another mother, would turn on them.

DEAR ABBY

Child's eating habits gnaw at grampa

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dear Abby is on a two-week vacation. Following is a selection of some of her favorite past letters from 1977.

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My young grandson has a very peculiar way of eating — he will eat only one thing at a time. For example: If there are meat, potatoes, carrots and peas on his plate, he will finish eating all the meat before he even touches his carrots. Then, once he starts eating his carrots, he will taste nothing else until he's finished them. He positively refuses to mix his food. Now isn't that ridiculous?

Van Buren

When I try to tell him to eat a bit of one thing and then another, he says he doesn't want to. He refuses even to try.

I don't know whether this comes under the heading of etiquette, idiosyncrasies, health or habits, but it just looks peculiar to me, Abby.

Please classify this quirk and set me straight. — GRAMPS

DEAR GRAMPS: I would classify this as nitpicking. Children come in for enough criticism during their childhood without having something as inconsequential as this being called to their attention. Skip it. What's the difference? Be glad he's healthy and can eat everything.

DEAR ABBY: Eddie (not his real name) and I have been going steady for four years. I'm 25 and Eddie's 26. We definitely plan on getting married, but here's the problem. Eddie says we can't get married until he pays his parents back for putting him through college. Otherwise, he'd be getting married on his parents' money.

Abby, his parents are very well off, and I'm sure they don't expect to be paid back.

The way Eddie has it figured, it will take him at least five years to pay off his parents. He says in the meantime we should just go steady.

I suggested we get engaged, but Eddie doesn't believe in long engagements. What do you make of this? — EDDIE'S GIRL

DEAR GIRL: I think Eddie should be commended for wanting to repay his parents, but it seems to me he's giving you a five-year stall. Stalls are for horses and other four-legged animals. I'd say "Nay."

DEAR ABBY: I am involved with an older married man, and to tell you the truth, I feel a little guilty about it.

He keeps telling me I shouldn't feel guilty because a married man who is satisfied at home would never even look at another woman. The way he puts it, "If a man is well fed at home, he will not go to a restaurant."

Is that true? — GOT THE GUILTS

DEAR GOT: No. Regardless of how well fed some men are, six hours later, they're hungry again!

CONFIDENTIAL TO D.W.R.: The only sure way I know of to double your money is to fold it over once and put it back in your pocket.

For everything you need to know about wedding planning, order "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Next year's sneaker will be tough, big-laced

Associated Press

A sneaker designer compares today's shoes to cars of the 1950s — the classic Pegasus running shoe is like the Ford Mustang, the Air Deschutz sandal is a dune buggy, the Air Mowabb an off-road 4-by-4 and the Air Jordan, the Eldorado or Roadmaster of our time.

Like new car models, Phil Patton wrote in an article in the current issue of Esquire, each year's new model sneaker is top secret.

Nike designer Tinker Hatfield, a former pole vaulter and architect, did offer a sneak preview of the 1994 Air Jordan — a decade after the first Jordan was introduced on Sept. 15, 1984. An unprecedented 2 million pairs were sold. It was the first shoe whose color and shape aimed to express a style of play, and its successors would echo the evolution of Michael Jordan's image.

Now each November, Jordan strolls into Nike's headquarters in Beaverton, Ore., past the new buildings named after jocks — the Bo Jackson Sports and Fitness Center, the Joe Paterno Child Development Center, to the Michael Jordan Building to talk to Hatfield about next year's shoe.

The new shoe for 1994 is a back-to-basics, tough, big-laced model, in white or olive green.

"No bells or whistles, no garbage — it's distilled design," Hatfield said. "We've grown up a bit. It's more responsible and sophisticated. What you've learned leads you back to something, the way, as you get older you get more interested in old cars."

The new model has no straps, but a new self-cinching lace system. The base wraps up and arches like a foot. Hatfield wants to figure out how to absorb impact organically, with the shape of the sole, instead of mechanically, with the air bag.

The sole is molded like a petroglyph with international symbols and words — Japanese, Chinese, German, Italian, Russian, Swahili — making it a global game.

Ribs like those on truck tires lend a no-nonsense, almost military air and a wraparound retro toe evokes an old Converse All Star or Ked.
