16 amendments on Nov. 2 ballot

Early voting period to begin Wednesday

Voters can go to the polls as early as Wednesday to cast ballots for or against 16 proposed amendments to the Texas Constitution.

Early voting takes place in the county clerk's office of the courthouse from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays. The early voting period ends at 5 p.m. on Friday, Oct. 29.

Any registered voter may cast a ballot in person during the early period. Those who wish to vote by mail must have a specific reason, such as a disability. The final day to receive an application for a mail ballot is Oct. 26.

The most widely discussed proposed amendment is possibly Proposition 4, which would prohibit a personal income tax without voter approval. Further, if voters were to approve a personal income tax, the amendment requires that the revenue be dedicated to education and limiting the rate of local school taxes.

Also widely discussed is Proposition 12, which would authorize a judge to deny bail to a person on probation who is accused of certain violent or sexual offenses.

Proposition 14 would authorize $1 billion in bonds to acquire, construct or equip new corrections facilities, youth corrections facilities, and mental health and mental retardation institutions.

Proposition 5 would authorize the Legislature to set qualifications for sheriffs, such as minimum age and education requirements and no history of felony convictions.

Two other propositions are seen

Former Dallas Cowboys stars will highlight chamber event

An evening with the Dallas Cowboys will headline the chamber's annual Pasture Party, planned from 6 to 10 p.m. Friday at Jack Greene's place southeast of Snyder.

Featured guests will be former Dallas Cowboy stars Bob Lilly and Randy White.

The Cowboy exes will sign promotional pictures that will be given away, while supplies last, and free buggy rides with the ex-'Pokes standouts will also be available.

The Pasture Party includes a steak dinner with a potato and dessert. Dinner music will be provided by Darrell Doty.

A silent auction will include footballs, jerseys and pictures autographed by Lilly and White.

Pam Browning, in charge of the event this year, said ticket sales are slow right now, but she anticipates more poeple buying tickets this week.

Last year, tickets for the Pasture Party were $50, and the year before that they were $100. Browning said the $25 price of this year's ticket will enable more people to go to the party.

"I'd like to see a lot of people out there so we can make (White and Lilly) feel welcome in Scurry County. We want them to be glad they came," Browning said.

Pasture Party tickets are available $25 from the chamber, McDonald's, Tan n Tone or any chamber board member.

Yeltsin extends emergency rule

MOSCOW (AP) — President Boris Yeltsin on Saturday extended the state of emergency in the capital another week, and Moscow's new military commandant warned that any weekend demonstrations would be "decisively stopped."

In his most far-reaching act since crushing hard-line opponents six days ago, Yeltsin also ordered all local councils dissolved. The councils are analogous to city councils and there are thousands of them throughout Russia.

Many of the councils have resisted Yeltsin's economic and political reforms. Resistance to reforms by the national parliament was one of the main issues leading to Monday's bloody showdown.

After crushing his hard-line opponents with tanks and troops Monday, Yeltsin imposed emergency rule on Moscow, dismissed disloyal officials and administrators and banned fascist and Communist parties and their newspapers.

Soldiers and police arrested 3,803 people overnight for curfew violations, the commandant's office said Saturday.

Yeltsin also signaled plans to move quickly on economic reforms that had been stalled for nearly two years by the former Communists who dominated the Russian parliament.

Yeltsin on Sept. 21 dissolved the parliament and set elections to a new body for Dec. 12, leading to a nearly two-week standoff in which lawmakers barricaded themselves inside the parliament building. That crisis ended Monday when loyalist troops besieged the parliament and arrested its defenders in fighting that left at least 187 dead and 437 wounded.

Police Lt. Gen. Alexander Kulikov, whom Yeltsin appointed commandant of the capital, said Friday he would crush any attempts to organize pickets or rallies this weekend.

"I warn that any actions that destabilize the situation in Moscow will be decisively stopped with the use of all available means and forces, and the organizers will be detained in accordance with the law," he said.

The state of emergency that Yeltsin imposed Oct. 3 had been scheduled to expire Sunday. But the president issued a decree extending it until Oct. 18 to keep the city calm.

Following Yeltsin's action, the commandant said the overnight curfew would now start at midnight, instead of 11 p.m., continuing until 5 a.m., said his spokeswoman, Galina Odinokova.

'Lifestyle' event to be fast-paced

Just as the lives of many area residents, 90's Lifestyle will be fast-paced. This Homemakers School sponsored for the second time by the Snyder Daily News will be lively and entertaining, maybe even a little hectic at times, according to Lucinda Kahny. The festivities will get underway at Worsham Auditorium at 7 p.m. Tuesday.

Using appliances from Roe's Furniture and Appliance, she will prepare a dozen dishes on stage from start to finish. Volunteers from the Honey-Do's Extension Club will be assisting with preparations during the day and working on the stage during the evening.

Each person attending will receive a gift bag with the 90's Lifestyle cookbook, coupons, recipes and more.

Emcee Wayne Burney will be responsible for drawing the winners of more than 60 prizes. Items include door prizes donated by the sponsoring merchants, a cookbook from Hershey, and 20 grocery bags.

Doors open at 6:30 p.m. Tickets are $2 each and are available at the Snyder Daily News or at the door.

TDCJ Day, appointment before BCD

Scurry's Board of County Development will elect a second representative to the overall economic development group and discuss Texas Department of Criminal Justice Appreciation Day during a meeting scheduled for noon Monday at Jaramillo's Restaurant.

BCD members will nominate and elect a second representative to the Unified Economic Development Committee.

BCD board chairman Max von Roeder is already a representative to the committee, due to his position as chairman.

The committee is comprised of two members from DCOS, two from BCD, the chamber president, county judge and mayor.

The group's function is to pursue economic development, and an upcoming task for the committee is to hire an economic development expert.

Members of BCD eligible to be on the committee are Mark McCormick, Jack Smartt, Pete Hester and Tim Riggan.

Board members will also discuss an upcoming Texas Department of Criminal Justice Appreciation Day.

The event is scheduled for Nov. 13 and will be held at Scurry County Coliseum.

Local prison employees will be invited, as well as state prison board members.

The SDN Column — By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "It's popular to live in an all-electric home, where everything is charged."

Some of the most entertaining reading can be found in those little classified ads found near the back of most newspapers. Somebody has collected some of the better ones.

In the DeKalb Daily Chronicle appeared an item that proves there is still truth in advertising: Day nursery with expert supervision for ages six weeks to five years. By hour or day. Unreasonable rates for unreasonable children.

And those small ads can draw a crowd: Rummage Sale — The Ladies Auxiliary having shut off clothes, now invite your inspection.

Some ads tell it like it is. In the Duluth News-Tribune a woman placed this terse item: As far as my husband not being responsible for my bills, he never was. I have always paid the bills.

This appeared in the Abilene-Reporter News: $10 reward for southside apartment, large enough to keep young wife from going home to mother, small enough to keep mother from coming here.

There was a waiting list after this for sale ad appeared in the Sarasota, Fla. Journal. For sale — Two bedroom home. Blonds and drapes go with the price.

Yes, there is life after... Wanted: Widow desires girl to share home or gentleman.

The Decatur Review was chosen for this ad: Wanted — used secretary in good condition.

The Montreal Star published this gem: Apartment wanted immediately by man expecting first baby.

An enterprising feature writer would have followed up on this one: Lost Saturday night between 320 and 545 NW 29th St., blue Japanese silk pajama bottoms.

And for the family scrapbook: For sale — Like new, 16 gauge shotgun for sale cheap. Also wedding dress with veil.

Sometimes you have to be creative: Found — Parakeet. I won a cat. Hurry!

In the Galena Park Channel Press appeared the following desperate message: Emma, please come home. All forgiven. My upper plate is still in your purse.

Families worry again about fighting overseas

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Jennie McKinney's husband was badly injured and burned last weekend during fighting in Somalia. As she headed to a military hospital to be by his side Friday, Mrs. McKinney worried other military families could share her grief.

Chief Warrant Officer Robert F. McKinney Jr., 32, was in serious but stable condition at Fort Sam Houston in San Antonio after being burned over 50 percent of his body and suffering a broken arm and leg.

"What am I going to do? We've been married 81/2 years and he's always been in dangerous situations like this throughout our marriage," Mrs. McKinney said as she sat nervously in a terminal of San Diego's Lindbergh Field airport.

She was waiting with her two children and sister-in-law for a flight to Texas. Although she questioned the Somalia mission, she said she was glad President Clinton was sending more troops to the East African nation.

"I support his decision because I certainly don't want any more people injured like my husband was," said Mrs. McKinney, 29.

Mrs. McKinney gave her 6-year-old daughter, Stephannie, a comforting smile as the little girl described how she told her first-grade class that her father was hurt in Somalia.

"I told them that I heard that one person got killed and my dad got a broken arm and leg and stuff and burned," said Stephannie. "I said, 'I'm going to Texas.'"

She showed her classmates a picture she drew of her father covered in bandages.

Her brother, 2-year-old Sean, was not aware of what was happening. He fussed as his mother visibly tried to hold back her emotions.

"He's very lucky to be alive," Mrs. McKinney said. "I really feel for the families that lost their husbands."

Her husband, a Camp Pendleton-based Marine, was injured in a fierce gun battle in Somalia on Sunday. The Humvee he was riding in rolled over a mine, blowing him out of the vehicle. He was pinned under the vehicle's engine block and power train.

"The engine block pinned him to the ground, and the hot oil dripped to the back of his neck, under his arms, hands, on his chest and shoulders and all the way down his legs," Mrs. McKinney said.

The driver was killed, and two other men who had been in the vehicle dragged McKinney to a helicopter under Somali fire, relatives said.

The 15-year Marine Corps veteran was evacuated from Somalia to Germany and later transferred to San Antonio.

Mrs. McKinney said she would like to have the United States' role in Somalia clearly spelled out.

"I feel President Clinton needs to define our relationship to the United Nations and our role in Somalia," she said. "It reminds me of what happened to us in Lebanon, where we entered as a peacekeeping mission and it turned into something different."

Now that her husband is back in the United States, Mrs. McKinney said she will concentrate on getting her husband well enough so that he can return to their Rancho Penasquitos area home.

"He's going to have to have surgery and skin grafts. It's probably going to take a long time," she said. "I'm glad he's in the states."

Meanwhile, about 1,870 Marines from Camp Pendleton and approximately 2,000 Navy sailors based in San Diego were steaming toward Somalia Friday on the USS New Orleans, the USS Denver, the USS Comstock and the USS Cayuga.

On Thursday, Clinton ordered them to Somalia to boost U.S. forces there.

Capt. Brian Boyce's family was home in Colorado as his ship, the USS New Orleans, headed for Africa.

"My wife, Pamela, I'm sure she's fine. She's been through this before," Boyce said in a satellite telephone interview from the ship.

He described morale on board as high, although some of the men, as expected, were a bit nervous after hearing that 15 U.S. servicemen were killed and 77 were wounded in the battle Sunday.

"We know it's an ugly situation, but we're trained to go in and deal with that," said Boyce, 48, a 27-year veteran of the Navy. "It [illegible] because that's what we expect. We don't get sent where things are in good shape."

Experimental drug FIAU linked to ex-resident's death

A new drug, FIAU, being tested until recently at the National Institute of Health in Washington, D.C., has claimed the lives of several people, including a former resident of Snyder.

Carlton Lee Jr., 35, who died on July 30, had been participating in the clinical trial in the hopes of finding a cure for hepatitis B, a potentially deadly illness he had contracted while serving with the Peace Corps in West Africa.

Hepatitis B can lead to cirrhosis of the liver, liver cancer and death.

Ironically, the experimental drug did clear Lee's body of the hepatitis virus. However, it also destroyed vital organs such as his liver and pancreas in the process.

FIAU's once promising future turned into a medical nightmare when patients began dying last summer. Others needed emergency liver transplants.

According to media reports, doctors monitoring patients had incorrectly attributed symptoms to other non-threatening causes — not FIAU.

Both NIH and the Food and Drug Administration are reviewing the case. ABC's Prime Time Live is also preparing a report on FIAU.

Patients' early symptoms included nausea, weight loss and a painful tingling in the feet. Some patients later also developed lactic acidosis, a potentially fatal buildup of waste materials in the cells.

Lee had experienced a few symptoms during a shorter clinical trial for FIAU in 1992, but they disappeared after he stopped taking the drug. He experienced much more painful side effects during the second trial.

On July 28, Lee had been referred to the University of Pittsburgh for a liver transplant, but he died two days later.

Years earlier, he had also taken part in a trial of the drug interferon.

FIAU, or fialuridine, was created in the 1970s at the institution now known as the Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York.

Bristol Myers (now Bristol-Myers-Squibbs) paid for the right to conduct animal studies of FIAC, a drug that turns into FIAU in the body. It dropped the license in 1988.

Oclassen Pharmaceuticals then picked up the drug. The company, based in San Rafael, Calif., is best known for medical skin creams. They eventually decided to test FIAU against serious viral infections.

FIAU's structure is chemically similar to one of the major components of DNA.

Researchers had tested FIAU on AIDS patients at first. Though it was not effective, media reports said the company later decided to try in on patients with chronic hepatitis.

While in West Africa, Lee served as a forestry manager in Sierra Leone. He moved to Washington D.C. in 1979, a member of the staff of newly elected U.S. Rep. Charles Stenholm. Within four years, Lee became the congressional liason for the National Commission on AIDS.

Lee was credited for being "the driving force" behind the nation's first federal AIDS initiative in 1987.

Lee was the son of Carlton Sr. and Joy Lee, who still live in Snyder. He graduated from Snyder High School and Western Texas College.

He was an alumni of Scurry County 4-H programs as well. He also worked at Cogdell Memorial Hospital while in high school. Known as a "champion of human rights," Lee was also known for writing letters to the editor.

Court kills lawsuit by inmate who says he sold marijuana

WASHINGTON (AP) — A divided federal appeals court killed a lawsuit Friday by an inmate who said prison officials disciplined him during the 1988 presidential campaign to squelch allegations he sold marijuana to Dan Quayle.

By a 2-1 vote, the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals here said Brett Kimberlin's claims that his rights were violated are based on insufficient evidence to warrant a trial against former Bureau of Prisons' director J. Michael Quinlan and former Justice Department spokesman Loye Miller.

"Kimberlin relies only on inference and weak circumstantial evidence," said Judge Karen LeCraft Henderson in an opinion concurred in by Judge Stephen Williams. Both were appointed to their posts by former President Reagan.

In a sharply worded dissent, Judge Harry Edwards said the ruling is "unfathomable in this country under our constitutional system."

"I simply cannot imagine that the judiciary of the United States will shut the doors of the courthouse and refuse to allow Kimberlin's suit to proceed for the specious reason that his complaint is based on circumstantial evidence," [illegible] tee of former President Carter.

A month ago, Justice Department inspector general Richard Hankinson concluded that officials unfairly disciplined Kimberlin. Hankinson said there was no "conspiracy to silence" the inmate when Quayle was running for vice president on the Republican ticket with George Bush.

Quinlan canceled a Nov. 4, 1988, prison news conference at which Kimberlin planned to make public his allegations about Quayle. Quinlan also ordered Kimberlin placed in a special detention cell that night at the Federal Correctional Institution in El Reno, Okla.

In 1853, Cincinnati, Ohio, became the first U.S. city to pay its firefighters a regular salary.

Cogdell CEO honored for work in healthcare

Tim Lancaster, Cogdell Memorial Hospital CEO, was recently recognized for significant contributions toward the achievement of goals of the American College of Healthcare Executives, West Texas Region.

The award presentation was made at the annual Texas Hospital Association meeting in Dallas by Mike Waters, West Texas area regent and CEO at Hendrick Medical Center in Abilene.

Only four of these awards are presented annually in the state.

The American College of Healthcare Executives is a professional organization committed to bringing excellence to healthcare management. The college has become the premier professional society for healthcare executives, with a continually growing membership base of more than 22,000 individuals.

The West Texas Region of the American College of Healthcare Executives covers an area from Wichita Falls, the Texas Panhandle and El Paso to Abilene.

The college focuses on credentialing, education, research, public policy, executive professional assessment, publication and career services. Executives are helped to realize their full potential by bridging the gap between education and operations with state-of-the-art techniques and approaches.

Report chronicles final days, deaths of members of cult

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nine Branch Davidians, including the legal wives of cult leader David Koresh and a key lieutenant, were buried alive when the bunker in which they had sought refuge collapsed, according to a government report released Friday.

Twenty-three-year-old Rachel Koresh and Judy Schneider, 41, suffocated when the bunker's walls crashed onto them in the final, fiery confrontation with FBI agents that ended the 51-day siege, the report said.

Among the most chilling revelations of Justice Department documents issued Friday were the reports that cult members killed a number of the children in the final hours April 19.

A detailed chronology of the standoff at the compound outside Waco, Texas, includes autopsy findings on the bodies of the 50 adults and 25 children pulled from the charred ruins of the Davidians' compound.

The findings show:

—An infant of undetermined gender found in the bunker was killed with a gunshot wound to the head.

—A 2- to 3-year-old boy, whose body also was in the bunker, died from a stab wound to the chest.

—Another unidentified child, a 5- or 6-year-old girl, died of a bullet fired into her chest.

Eighteen of the cult members, including Koresh and lieutenant Steve Schneider, died of gunshot wounds. Koresh's body was found in the communication room, with a gunshot wound to the head. Schneider, found near Koresh, died of a gunshot wound to the mouth. Two women were shot in the back.

The majority of the cultists' — 42 — died of either smoke and carbon monoxide inhalation or burns, according to the report prepared by Richard Scruggs, an assistant to Attorney General Janet Reno.

Pennsylvania attorney Edward Dennis Jr., a former top Justice Department official commissioned to examine the FBI's conduct at Waco, squarely laid blame for the deaths on Koresh.

Dennis ruled out the possibility that the fire was triggered by the FBI hostage rescue team members when they punched holes into the compound's thin walls to inject tear gas in a last-ditch bid to flush the cult members out.

"David Koresh held the fate of his followers in his hands," Dennis said at a Justice Department news conference. "In the end, being unsuccessful in maneuvering law enforcement to bring about the prophetic martyrdom he sought, in a last and fatal act of manipulation, he choreographed his own death and the deaths of most of his followers.

"This was the final act of a man who held himself out to be God."

The chronology prepared by Reno's aide, Scruggs, also offers some of the first exhaustive details of Koresh's verbal and written communications with the federal agents, including some handwritten notes signed "Yahweh Koresh." Yahweh is the Hebrew name for God.

"Who will atone for your rejecting of my spirit?" Koresh wrote. "I am your God and you will bow under my feet."

"I am your life and your death. I am the spirit of the prophets and the author of their testimonies. Look and see, you fools."

The most telling details of life inside the embattled compound — coming from listening devices that detected the Davidians' conversations — were pulled from the Scruggs report in recent days after legal concerns were raised.

Justice officials, who suggested the transcripts would offer further proof that the cultists were dangerous, held out the hope that the information would become public during the trial next year of 11 surviving cult members.

The FBI negotiators held some 215 hours of discussions with Koresh, Schneider and 52 other cult members during the siege. The bulk of the talks were with Schneider, who logged 459 conversations lasting 96 hours. Koresh engaged in some 60 hours of discussion with the negotiators during 117 conversations.

The Scruggs report shows Koresh alternated between threats, lengthy discussions of theology and periods when he wanted more information about what was happening.

Congress approved a bill in 1800 which established the Library of Congress in Washington. It apropriated $5,000 "for the purchase of such books as may be necessary."

The first American newspaper printed on a regular basis, the Boston News Letter, was first published in 1704.

Members of gang face rape charges

CONROE (AP) — Seven alleged members of a Conroe street gang have been charged with raping two girls in what one official says was a gang-initiation rite.

Three of the seven accused of raping the girls, ages 12 and 13, are high school students.

Justice of the Peace Edie Connelly said she thought the rapes were part of an initiation into the gang.

Jose Guadalupe Vasquez, 20; Luis Enrique Flores, 17; Francisco Felipe Guillen, 17; Simeon Morales Guerrero, 20; and David Ayala Araiza, 18, were charged with aggravated sexual assault.

They were being held at Montgomery County Jail Friday night.

Waco standoff prompts FBI to begin reforms

WASHINGTON (AP) — As a result of the Branch Davidians' deadly 51-day standoff with federal authorities, administration officials are making changes to keep future conflicts from ending like that one.

Even though the FBI was exonerated in an independent investigation, Justice Department officials said Friday the episode underlines the need for changes in the way law enforcement handles major hostage crises.

Among other changes, officials [illegible] charge when such events occur because it is best equipped to deal with them.

As many as 85 cult members died in an inferno April 19, when the FBI sought to end the siege by pumping tear gas into the Davidians' compound outside Waco, Texas. The independent investigation found that the cult members set the blaze.

Other major findings of the review:

—The FBI never fired a shot at the cult members, even when fired upon.

Of the 25 children whose re[illegible] died by gunfire, others suffered fatal blows to the head and one 3-year-old boy was stabbed to death. Of the 50 adults whose remains have been found, 13 died by gunfire, including cult leader David Koresh and top aide Steve Schneider.

—Although officials considered the possibility of fire at the compound, firefighting equipment was kept away because the cult members' weaponry made it dangerous for firefighters.

In a separate report proposing changes as a result of the Waco de[illegible] Philip Heymann recommended expanding the FBI's authority in future major hostage events.

The FBI assumed responsibility for the siege March 1, the day after a botched raid by the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms left four ATF agents and six cult members dead.

Heymann suggested that other federal law enforcement agencies hand over tactical control to the FBI when major hostage events occur, contending that it is "uniquely situated" to take charge.

"The only highly trained, superbly conditioned and world[illegible] United States ... for domestic events is the hostage rescue team of the FBI at Quantico," in Virginia, Heymann said at a Justice Department news conference where the Waco reports were released.

In addition, he said, the FBI has the negotiators and behavioral science experts necessary to complement the tactical forces.

Assistant Treasury Secretary Ronald Noble, whose responsibilities include oversight of ATF, said he supports the idea of greater FBI control.

"I support the deputy attorney general's recommendation that we designate one entity to develop expertise and lead all special law enforcement operations," Noble said at the news conference.

But, he added: "The lead entity should be structured and staffed in a manner that will promote its use by all federal law enforcement agencies rather than cause turf battles over jurisdiction."

The FBI also needs greater awareness of "non-mainstream" religious and political beliefs, Heymann said, responding to the criticisms of some of the nine outside academic experts who compiled a separate report on the agency's conduct.

Federal agents largely viewed Koresh as a criminal who used religion as a cloak.

Ector County faces bond issue

ODESSA (AP) — Crowded classrooms and girls' athletics would benefit from a $24.9 million bond issue pitched to voters Saturday.

Residents of Ector County Independent School District rejected a similar $22 million proposal in February 1992.

"The economy was very bad in '92," Superintendent Gene Buinger said. "The possibility of Dynagen (rubber plant) closing was hanging over the community. There were individuals who believed that if that happened we wouldn't even need the schools we've got now."

But school officials profess more optimism — and more need — this time around. And they say the measure would not increase taxes, because its payments would begin when payments end for a 1976 bond issue.

Proposition 1 calls for $19.9 million to renovate six junior high schools and both high schools, all of which are over capacity by at least 200 students. Almost half the money would finance two "workplace centers" for classes such as aircraft maintenance and health sciences.

If Proposition 1 doesn't pass, officials say they will be forced to consider multi-track education to alleviate the overcrowding. That system would split junior high and senior high students into four groups that alternate vacation time.

Proposition 2 calls for $4.9 million to build five new gyms, two locker rooms and a weight room.

Your Birthday

Sunday, Oct. 10, 1993

This might be a very interesting year for you where your earnings are concerned. If you handle yourself properly, there are indications you could make more money than you ever have previously.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You're entering a cycle where your hopes and expectations could become realities. Do not leave everything up to Lady Luck, however. There's a key role she expects you to play. Libra, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You have a dependable friend who will help you further your interests today. His/her support will be behind the scenes, but will become more visible if needed.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Today your mental processes are like a sponge and you're able to absorb knowledge through personal experiences. What you learn first hand you'll use to your advantage at a later date.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Fitting yourself into something good others have going for them is your best asset today. Happily your presence and input will be as welcomed as rain in a dry spell.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your skills as a negotiator have improved over the past month. This should become evident today when you hammer out an agreement with another.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Persons you've recently helped are eager to pay you back in some manner at this time. They want to do more for you than you did for them.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Something both pleasant and a bit extraordinary might develop for you today through two of your social contacts. It could have far reaching effects.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) The life span of a rewarding endeavor can be extended at this time if you work out a way to do so. It will take a little imagination and cooperation from persons with whom you're involved.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) If you have an important matter to discuss with another, this evening in a social setting is the best time and way to do so. Lead up to your subject gradually.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Something beneficial that could enhance your material security or add to your holdings might develop for you today. It may come as a surprise.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Some good news you've been expecting but as yet hasn't arrived could break through for you today. Chances are it will occur after lunch time.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Instead of trying to make things happen your way today, let events take their natural courses. You could come out better in situations you didn't design or control.

Your Birthday

Monday, Oct. 11, 1993

Some adjustments might be required in the year ahead to facilitate the achievement of your goals. Don't be afraid to make chances if they improve the quality of your targets.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If situations get testy today, you're the person who can be relied upon in the crunch. However, not even you may be able to get things totally back on track. Major changes are ahead for Libra in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1.25 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163 Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Be realistic in analyzing critical data today. Don't let your logic be overruled by wishful thinking. See things for what they actually are.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) There's a possibility you might operate at extremes today where your resources are concerned. In one instance you may be prudent and cautious, while in another you could be wild and extravagant.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Once you've achieved your objectives today, be sure to consolidate them. Don't let success slip through your fingers because of a weak grip.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Today's experiences might be a trifle unusual. You could be disappointed in an area where your expectations are high, yet you may derive advantages from a seemingly lost cause.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Two friends of yours might get together for something special today and not include you in the event. Don't let your anger or jealousy cause you to react in an unattractive manner.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Self-sufficiency is essential today. Relying upon persons you know from past experience make promises they fail to deliver is an error in judgment.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Be considerate of persons with whom you're involved today if you're the one who is calling the shots. Don't ask things of them you wouldn't do yourself or suddenly withdraw your support.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Innately you're a bit of a risk taker and this inclination frequently works for your benefit. Today, however, you might really throw caution to the winds and do something rather foolish.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Success could be denied you today if your's and your mate's objectives are not in harmony. If you don't pull together you may pull yourselves apart.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Maintain a positive outlook today, even if that which you initially attempt isn't pulled off successfully. Early mistakes can be rectified.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Be extremely prudent in the management of your resources at this time and try not to take gambles where investments are concerned. Your judgment in this area might be faulty.

Capital murder charges filed

WACO (AP) — A Waco man accused of delivering a deadly punch to the stomach of his 11/2-year-old stepdaughter has been charged with capital murder under a new state law.

Eric Lee Hernandez, 19, is among the first in the state to be charged under the law that went into effect Sept. 1. The provision makes it a capital offense to kill a child under the age of 6.

Hernandez was being held Friday night in the McLennan County Jail on $500,000 bond.

Hernandez is accused of delivering the blow that resulted in the death of his stepdaughter, Teresa Cantu Guardiola, said Waco police Sgt. Malissa Sims.

Teresa was pronounced dead Sept. 6 at a neighbor's home by McLennan County Justice of the Peace Cullen Harris.

Financial Focus

Any employee who plans to take a lump-sum distribution from an employer-sponsored retirement plan may be in for a costly surprise unless he or she knows about the 20 Percent Withholding Rule, which became effective Jan. 1, 1993. The law states that if you take possession of a lump-sum distribution from your employer's retirement plan:

(1)your employer is required to withhold 20 percent of the distribution for taxes;

(2)any amount not rolled into an IRA or another qualified retirement plan within 60 days is taxed as ordinary income; and

(3)if you are under age 59 1/2, an additional 10 percent penalty applies to any portion of the distribution not rolled over. (One exception: If you are between 55 and 59 1/2, and no longer employed, the 10 percent penalty will not apply to the qualified plan distribution.)

Following are three examples of the effects of the 20 Percent Withholding Rule:

EXAMPLE #1, No Rollover: Jane Doe age 45, decides to change jobs after 10 years with her employer. She has accumulated $50,000 in her employer's qualified retirement plan. Jane decides to take her $50,000 in a lump-sum distribution to help launch a new career. Because she does not roll the distribution into an IRA or other qualified retirement plan, her employer will withhold 20 percent, or $10,000, immediately, and she must pay income taxes on the entire amount.

Assuming a 28-percent income tax bracket, Jane will owe the Internal Revenue Service an additional 8 percent, or $4,000, in taxes, for a total of $14,000. Because she is not yet 55, the total distribution is subject to an additional 10 percent penalty, or $5,000 for early withdrawal. After taxes and penalties, Jane has only $31,000 left from her original $50,000 nest egg. What is left also has lost its tax-sheltered status, so any future earnings are subject to income tax.

EXAMPLE #2, Rollover: What happens if Jane takes possession of her $50,000 retirement fund in a lump-sum distribution and rolls it over into an IRA? Because she took possession of the funds, her employer must withhold 20 percent, or $10,000. Jane now has only $40,000 to roll over into her IRA. Since $10,000 was not rolled over, Jane also owes a 10 percent early withdrawal penalty and income taxes on the $10,000 withheld. The only way for Jane to avoid this tax and penalty is to come up with $10,000 from another source to make a total rollover of $50,000. She can recoup the $10,000 her employer withheld only when she files her tax return for that year.

EXAMPLE #3, Direct Rollover: Jane decides that rather than taking possession of the funds, she will instruct her employer to make a direct rollover to her IRA. Jane's employer makes the $50,000 check payable to "XYZ Trustee for the IRA of Jane Doe." The funds go from the former employer directly into the IRA - Jane never takes possession of the funds. There is no 20 percent withholding or penalties, and the entire $50,000 continues to grow tax-sheltered.

These examples illustrate the importance of understanding your retirement withdrawal options under the new 20 Percent Withholding Rule. Consult a professional before you withdraw any retirement funds. A little caution may save you thousands of dollars in taxes and penalties.

For San Diego family, Clinton's policy on Somalia, hits very close to home

SAN DIEGO (AP) — For Jennie McKinney, the Clinton administration's policy on Somalia has become a personal issue. Her husband was badly injured and burned last weekend during fighting in the East African nation.

As she headed to a Texas military hospital to be by his side Friday, Mrs. McKinney worried other military families could share her grief.

"What am I going to do? We've been married 81/2 years and he's always been in dangerous situations like this throughout our marriage," Mrs. McKinney said as she sat nervously in a terminal of San Diego's Lindbergh Field airport.

Chief Warrant Officer Robert F. McKinney Jr., 32, was in serious but stable condition Friday at Fort Sam Houston in San Antonio after being burned over 50 percent of his body and suffering a broken arm and leg.

Mrs. McKinney waited with her two children and sister-in-law for a flight to Texas. Although she questioned the Somalia mission, she said she was glad President Clinton was sending in more troops.

"I support his decision because I certainly don't want any more people injured like my husband was," said Mrs. McKinney, 29.

Mrs. McKinney gave her 6-year-old daughter, Stephannie, a comforting smile as the little girl described how she told her first-grade class that her father was hurt in Somalia.

"I told them that I heard that one person got killed and my dad got a broken arm and leg and stuff and burned," said Stephannie. "I said, 'I'm going to Texas.'"

She showed her classmates a picture she drew of her father covered in bandages.

Her brother, 2-year-old Sean, was not aware of what was happening. He fussed as his mother visibly tried to hold back her emotions.

"He's very lucky to be alive," Mrs. McKinney said. "I really feel for the families that lost their husbands."

Her husband, a Camp Pendleton-based Marine, was injured in a fierce gun battle in Somalia on Sunday. The Humvee he was riding in rolled over a mine, blowing him out of the vehicle. He was pinned under the vehicle's engine block and power train.

"The engine block pinned him to the ground, and the hot oil dripped to the back of his neck, under his arms, hands, on his chest and shoulders and all the way down his legs," Mrs. McKinney said.

The driver was killed, and two other men who had been in the vehicle dragged McKinney to a helicopter under Somali fire, relatives said. The 15-year Marine Corps veteran was evacuated from Somalia to Germany and later transferred to San Antonio.

Mrs. McKinney said she would like to have the United States' role in Somalia clearly spelled out.

"I feel President Clinton needs to define our relationship to the United Nations, and our role in Somalia," she said. "It reminds me of what happened to us in Lebanon, where we entered as a peacekeeping mission and it turned into something different."

Now that her husband is back in the United States, Mrs. McKinney said she will concentrate on getting [illegible] that he can return to their San Diego home.

Galveston judge said suspended

GALVESTON (AP) — Galveston County court-at-law Judge John Thoma has been suspended by the Texas Supreme Court until it's determined whether he extorted money from a defendant.

The judge's suspension will be in effect "until his problems are resolved," said Robert Flowers, executive director of the Commission on Judicial Conduct, which oversees Texas judges.

The panel had filed a motion with the Texas Supreme Court on Sept. 17 calling for Thoma's suspension without pay until the commission rules on accusations that he conspired to extort money from a defendant.

Thoma's suspension Thursday is effective immediately, according to the decision signed by Chief Justice Tom Phillips and the other eight justices.

While going along with the suspension, the court chose not to interrupt Thoma's $91,000 annual salary.

"It's sort of like a draw," said Thoma on Friday. "They suspended with pay, which to my knowledge is the first time in the state of Texas. So, obviously someone's on our side."

Extradition runs into opposition

PARIS (AP) — A government representative argued Friday against extraditing a Texan woman charged with murder, saying U.S. officials failed to provide enough assurances she wouldn't face execution.

Joy Davis Aylor, 44, fled to France after she was charged with capital murder for hiring a hit man to kill her then-husband's girlfriend in 1983. She was also charged with the attempted murder-for-hire of her ex-husband.

Arrested on the French Riviera in March 1991 after a traffic accident, she has fought U.S. efforts to bring her back to Dallas for trial.

In January this year, the late Premier Pierre Beregovoy signed an extradition order after U.S. officials said she would not be executed. France outlawed the death penalty in 1981.

The case was appealed to the Council of State, the highest judicial body that considers extraditions and other cases. U.S. assurances were strengthened by the Dallas prosecutor's office, which promised on May 12 "not to ask for the death penalty" against Ms. Aylor.

According to Texan law, a judge cannot sentence someone to death unless the prosecution demands it.

But Christian Vigouroux, a government commissioner, argued on Friday that the extradition decree must "be annulled for lack of sufficient assurances." He contended that Dallas prosecutors could not guarantee actions by their successors.

Hornets sting 'Dogs in District 6 opener

IRA — The Highland Hornets scored 50 points in the second half of Friday's District 6 six-man opener against Ira on their way to a 62-28 victory.

The difference, according to IHS coach Darren Janssen, was the conditioning of Bulldog starters Coy Henderson and Travis Collom, both returning after injury layoffs.

"They both had an outstanding game," said Janssen. "They just weren't ready to go out and play a full four quarters after being off like that.

"They worked their tails off, they just gave out. Travis stuffed everything at the line of scrimmage in the first half," Janssen continued. "They only had 60 yards of offense in the first half, but the short halftime was not enough time for him to recover.

"They were able to drive the ball on us in the second half, an that was the difference."

The Bulldogs held a 14-12 halftime advantage on a 3-yard Scott Strong-to-Henderson pass and a 5-yard TD run by Tom Sanchez.

Henderson added a 75-yard kickoff return for a score in the third period, and Sanchez dove in from four yards out for the fnal Ira tally in the fourth.

Highland's 382-yard offensive surge was led by Toby Harbuck, who scored four times, including a 33-yard run from scrimmage, a 60-yard kickoff return, an 18-yard scramble and a 5-yard run.

Ira slips to 0-6 on the season an 0-1 in district with Friday's loss.

Highland, the surprising leader in District 6, is 5-1 overall and 1-0 in league play.

"Highland has a good team," Janssen said. "They're better than a lot of people give them credit for. I think they have a good shot at the district title."

Ira will host Borden County Friday, while Highland entertains Trent.

Borden County hands Cardinals 38-22 defeat

HERMLEIGH — The Borden County Coyotes opened defense of the 1992 District 6 six-man football championship Friday with a 38-22 loop win over Hermleigh.

The Cardinals carried an 8-6 advantage after one period, before Borden County erupted for 20 second-quarter points and a 26-14 halftime margin.

Friday's win lifts the Coyotes, preseason playoff picks in District 6, to 2-4 on the campaign. Hermleigh slips to 1-5 under first-year head coach David Rogers.

Borden County will take on another Scurry County team next week. Ira, a 62-28 loser to Highland Friday, will host the Coyotes in Week 2.

Hermleigh will visit preseason loop favorite Loraine, a 77-45 winner over Trent Friday, in its next outing.

District 2-4A opener...

Tigers blank Levelland, 14-0

By PHIL RIDDLE
SDN Sports Editor

LEVELLAND — Split end Larry Thompson caught two touchdown passes within a one-minute span in the fourth quarter Friday to lead Snyder to a 14-0 District 2-4A football win over Levelland.

Thompson, who caught five passes for 82 yards on the night, took the first pass 35 yards to break a 0-0 deadlock with 10:37 left in the game.

Just 58 seconds later the senior standout outleaped two Levelland defenders in the end zone for a 24-yard score.

"We were trying to get a first down on that first touchdown play," said Snyder head coach David Baugh, "and Larry made a good move on the sideline and that guy missed him and he was gone.

"The second catch, he just went up and got. They switched their defense after I called the play, and I didn't think it would work, but Larry just went up and took it away from them."

The two defenses stole the show for the majority of the game.

Snyder's D forced the Lobos into a passing scheme early in the game.

"We took them out of their two-back offense early," said SHS defensive coordinator Jack Dorsett. "They haven't had any success with their one back offense all year, but they couldn't run the ball.

"We had one play the whole second half. That's what we stuck with. We played the same defense the whole second half. We didn't do anything different."

Dorsett felt like the Tigers dominated the line of scrimmage.

"They couldn't handle (noseguard) Chris Mills, they couldn't handle (DT) Oliver (Vasquez) and they couldn't handle (DT) Emiliano (Chaidez). Everybody contributed."

"We took their running game away from them," Dorsett reiterated.

"It was a big game. We played good assignment football."

The Tigers held Levelland to just 139 yards, and just 51 rushing yards.

Quarterback Justin Thoms of LHS was able to complete just seven of 21 tosses for 88 yards and two interceptions, one each by David Krenek and Matt Cave.

Snyder's offense, held in check until the last period, gained 221 yards, 130 from the arm of quarterback Cave, who completed 10 of 18 passes for two TDs and no interceptions.

"A rollin' ball of butcher knives," Baugh laughed, then added, "I was pleased with the kids. They prepared well for the game."

The turning point in the game was a short fourth-quarter kick by Levelland punter Justin Alexander, which gave the Tigers the ball at the Lobos' 39-yard line.

Cave threw a pair of incompletions, sandwiched around a 4-yard run, setting up a fourth and six situation.

Looking for the first down, Cave hit Thompson about five yards past the line of scrimmage.

Thompson shook off one tackle, faked another, and raced down the left sideline for the game's first score.

On their next possession, Lobo quarterback Thoms fumbled while being sacked and Snyder DE Jeff Armstrong fell on the ball.

John Clinkinbeard tried an inside trap and was dumped for a 3-yard loss, before Cave went to Thompson in the end zone.

"They've got a good defense," coaches Baugh and Dorsett said of Levelland, almost in unison. "They were up there on us all night and made us work for every yard we got."

Snyder's rushing game was led by Chris Mitchell, who gained 59 yards on 20 carries, but losing a pair of fumbles.

Levelland's leading rusher was tailback Kip Humphreys, who carried the ball eight times for just 29 yards.

Speedy split end Peter Puente caught five passes from Thoms for 78 yards, over half of the Lobos' total yardage.

The win lifts Snyder's record to 4-2 on the season, 1-0 within the loop. Levelland falls to 1-5 and 0-1.

In other 2-4A games Friday, Plainview continued its dominance of area squads with a 49-21 win over Frenship, and Estacado blistered Lamesa, 48-0.

Snyder will travel to Lubbock to face the Estacado Matadors Saturday, Oct. 16.

Oilers set for rematch with Buffalo

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oilers' beleaguered run-and-shoot offense is getting better but quarterback Warren Moon is losing patience.

"I'm going to have to turn it up a notch just to get back to the level where I normally am," Moon said. "I've got to get us out of this slump. I've got to feel comfortable in the pocket and be relaxed."

Moon has slumped since the season started and the Oilers have slumped with him to a 1-3 record going into Monday night's game against the Buffalo Bills in Rich Stadium.

His quarterback rating has dropped to 61.8, 24th in the NFL and he leads the AFC with eight interceptions and he's thrown only four touchdown passes.

He expects to lead the rebound for himself and the team.

"This is a chance for us to make our mark," Moon said. "There's a lot working against us. We're playing a good team in a tough stadium, and who knows what the elements are going to be?"

The Oilers have been able to score points on the Bills. They were leading 35-3 in their first round playoff game Jan. 3 before the Bills rallied for a 41-38 overtime victory that continues to haunt the Oilers.

"There are certain teams you match up well with," Moon said. "It's a challenge to play against the Bills. We know that we have to score points to win."

The memory of their last visit to Buffalo won't be on Moon's mind.

"I can't get caught up in all of that," Moon said. "I've got so many things to occupy my mind I have to stay focused on those things and not about some game in the past."

Running back Lorenzo White is rounding back into playing shape after being slowed by a contract holdout.

Colts not sure which QB will start

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — It makes no difference to Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson who the Indianapolis Colts start at quarterback on Sunday.

Jeff George, who lost the starting job during his 36-day preseason boycott of the team, was expected to make his first start of the season in the Hoosier Dome. However, a hand injury sustained while he was performing mop-up duty in the final minutes of last week's loss at Denver made him questionable for Sunday and Jack Trudeau's return to the back-up role has apparently been put off.

"Jeff's a very, very talented individual and can make a lot of plays," Johnson said. "I've also been very impressed with the way Trudeau has played. It really won't affect our defense, as far as how we prepare."

Both teams are 2-2, but could be headed in opposite directions. The Cowboys have won two straight since two-time NFL rushing champion Emmitt Smith ended his holdout on Sept. 16.

"I don't think he's as sharp as what he would have been had he been in training camp," Johnson said of Smith, who has gained 116 yards on 21 carries this year. "I think it will be a few weeks before he really gets as sharp as we'd want him to be."

Indianapolis, which surrendered four touchdowns and 228 yards on four consecutive possessions to start last Sunday's 35-13 loss in Denver, has more than Smith to worry about.

Troy Aikman leads the Cowboys into their first trip to Indianapolis since the Colts arrived in 1984 with the NFC's highest quarterback rating at 98.9 and is second in the NFL in passing with 1,162 yards.

The defending Super Bowl champions have the league's second most productive offense, averaging 385.8 yards. Only the New York Jets at 412.8 have a higher average.

"We feel that we have all the pieces back in place. Now it's a matter of going out and executing," said Aikman. "We feel like we're playing well. ... We've expanded the offense a little bit each year and it's given us some more opportunities to make some plays. I feel comfortable with the way that I've played up to this point."

WTC golf team set for Odessa tourney

Golfers from Western Texas College will make their second start of the fall season Monday when they compete in the Odessa College Invitational Golf Tournament at Mission Dorado Golf Club in Odessa.

The 54-hole event starts with 36 holes Monday and winds up with an 18-hole round Tuesday.

The Westerners' first outing was about a month ago in the High Country Shootout in Ruidoso, N.M.

WTC's Green team, led by freshman Monnie Soto and sophomore Chris Rogers, each with a 54-hole 226, came in eighth with a 914, 57 shots off the first-place pace set by Midland College.

The Blue team from Western Texas wound up 10th in Ruidoso after shooting a 926. Top producers for the Blue squad were freshman Ronnie Lopez, who fired a 226, and freshman Wade Hartman, who carded a three-round 234.

The Westerners will also compete in the University of Texas Tournament Oct. 17-19 in Weatherford; the Midland College Invitational Tournament at Green Tree Country Club in Midland Oct. 24-26; and the New Mexico Junior College Invitational at Hobbs Country Club Nov. 7-9.

ChiSox clobber Toronto, 6-1

TORONTO (AP) — Pat Hentgen sat in front of his locker, looking very much like a jilted lover.

It was his fastball that done him wrong. Instead of allowing Hentgen to star in his first postseason game, it led him to ruin in just 64 pitches as the Chicago White Sox defeated the Toronto Blue Jays 6-1 Friday night in Game 3 of the AL playoffs.

The Chicago batters knew the fastball was coming, he said, and punished him for six runs on nine singles in three innings. They realized he was not paying much attention to his breaking pitches.

Never again, Hentgen vowed, would he become so infatuated with his fast ball.

"I fall in love with that pitch," he said, "and it hurts me all the time."

Chicago, which had scored seven runs in six previous playoff games, broke the game open with five runs after two were out in the third. Seven consecutive hitters reached base.

"We were successful off Hentgen because we made him get the ball down by staying off his high cheese," said Lance Johnson, who had a pair of hits and two RBIs.

Wilson Alvarez pitched a seven-hitter as the White Sox cut Toronto's lead in the series to 2-1. Chicago is trying to become the first team to win the AL playoffs after losing the first two games at home.

The White Sox got all the breaks they lacked in those home defeats — check-swings turning into doubles, loopers falling between fielders — as they continued their superb road play. Chicago won 27 of its last 35 road games during the regular season.

"It was just a matter of time before we put everything together. Tonight we had one of those innings," Ozzie Guillen said. "If we'd had one in Chicago, it would be a different story right now."

The big Chicago inning began rather innocently, with Ron Karkovice striking out and Guillen grounding out. But then Raines singled — the first of his four straight hits — and Cora singled to put runners on first and third.

Frank Thomas hit a smash that handcuffed third baseman Ed Sprague. It was ruled a hit and an RBI for Thomas. Robin Ventura walked to load the bases and Ellis Burks singled for two runs. After Bo Jackson walked to reload the bases, Johnson blooped a single into left field for another two runs.

"They got one big inning and it cost us the ballgame, but I'm not going to fret on it," Sprague said.

Chicago added a run in the fourth on singles by Guillen and Raines that knocked out Hentgen, a sacrifice by Cora and a sacrifice fly by Ventura.

Raines became the first White Sox player with four hits in a postseason game since the 1906 World Series.

The Blue Jays got their run in the bottom of the third. Rickey Henderson doubled to left with two outs, breaking a personal 0-for-10 start to the playoffs, and stole third before Devon White singled him home.

Ten of the 11 Toronto runs in the series have come with two outs.

Alvarez, who had finished the regular season with seven straight wins, settled down after a shaky start to pitch the complete game. Alvarez got Tony Fernandez to hit into an inning-ending double play in the second and worked out of a bases-loaded jam in the fourth by striking out Fernandez and getting Ed Sprague on a fly to center.

Hentgen, Toronto's top winner during the regular season with 19 victories, struggled again at home. Including Friday night's playoff game, he is 7-7 with a 5.35 ERA at the SkyDome this year and 12-3 with a 2.91 ERA on the road.

Chicago sends rookie Jason Bere (12-5) against Todd Stottlemyre (11-12) in Game 4 tonight.

NLCS to resume in Atlanta

ATLANTA (AP) — Tom Glavine is the best pitcher in baseball — except in the playoffs. Terry Mulholland may be the best pitcher in baseball who hasn't pitched much in three weeks — that because of a hip injury.

Today, they will be the opposing pitchers as the NL playoffs shift to Atlanta for Game 3 between the Braves and Philadelphia Phillies.

Glavine, who has won 20 or more games in each of the last three years, has been less than spectacular when the playoffs roll around. In four outings he has posted a 6.33 ERA and 0-4 record.

And Glavine hasn't exactly awed the Phillies, who have scored 15 earned runs off him in 16 1-3 innings.

The left-hander says there's not just pressure for him to win in the playoffs — the onus is on the whole team because the Braves have failed to win the World Series the last two years.

"We've heard the stuff all year long about us being the Buffalo Bills or Denver Broncos of baseball," Glavine said. "We know ... we need to win a world championship."

The Phillies are pinning their hopes today on Mulholland, who had a 12-9 record this year but was limited to just five innings of work in the last three weeks.

Mulholland, who will be making his first postseason appearance, split two starts against Atlanta this season, being roughed up for nine runs and 14 hits in nine innings. He's 5-6 lifetime against the Braves.

"I'm not insecure or worried about how I'll do," he said.

Mulholland will have his work cut out, expecially against the middle of the lineup.

The middle of the lineup — Ron Gant, Fred McGriff, David Justice and Terry Pendleton — was 3-for-18 with one RBI in Game 1. a 4-3, 10-inning loss. In Game 2, they were 8-for-18 with eight RBIs. That made it easy for Greg Maddux, who held the Phillies to two runs and five hits over seven innings.

The key to the offense was McGriff. Before he arrived, the Braves averaged only 3.99 runs per game. Afterward, they averaged 5.76.

Gant finished with 36 homers and 117 RBIs. McGriff had 19 homers and 55 RBIs in 68 games with Atlanta. Justice had 40 homers and 120 RBIs and Pendleton, who had only six homers and 38 RBIs at the time of the deal, finished with 17 and 84.

While the Braves took Friday off and relaxed, some playing golf, the Phillies worked out at Fulton County Stadium.

Phillies manager Jim Fregosi said there was a reason his team needed the workout.

"We haven't played on grass since our last trip into New York," he said. "It's been like three or four weeks. And I also wanted our infielders to take ground balls."

NBA probe finds Jordan not guilty

NEW YORK (AP) — The NBA's investigation into Michael Jordan's gambling activities has been completed, and commissioner David Stern said Friday there was "absolutely no evidence Jordan violated league rules."

Stern previously said there was "absolutely no connection" between the investigation, conducted by former federal judge Frederick Lacey, and Jordan's sudden retirement from the Chicago Bulls on Wednesday.

"The Lacey investigation is officially closed," Stern said in a statement released by NBA spokesman Jan Hubbard. "Michael and I have agreed to meet to discuss Michael's off-court activity and that meeting will still be held sometime in the future."

Jordan and Stern had decided earlier that a meeting would be appropriate and decided to keep that date despite the star's retirement. The commissioner attended Jordan's farewell press conference a day after Jordan informed Stern that he was leaving the NBA.

Lacey was hired by the commissioner in June to look into Jordan's off-court activities after the release of a book by San Diego businessman Richard Esquinas, who claimed Jordan lost $1.25 million to him in golf bets and that they had negotiated a $300,000 settlement.

The league also investigated Jordan in 1992 after a bail bondsman was found shot to death with checks from Jordan totaling more than $200,000.

WTC boosters schedule meeting

Western Texas College athletic boosters will meet Monday for a noon Dutch-treat lunch at Golden Corral.

Anyone interested in sports at WTC is invited to attend.

Hunter education course slated

Increased demand has prompted Gene and Nancy Bowlin to schedule a second fall course in hunter education for Oct. 16, from 8 a.m to 5 p.m., and Oct. 17, from 1 to 5 p.m.

"According to the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department's mandatory requirements, every Texas hunter born on or after Sept. 2, 1971, must successfully complete a hunter education training course," said Gene Bowlin. "However, any individual may take the course on a voluntary basis and is encouraged to attend regardless of requirements."

The course is open to adults and youngsters and will include instructions in firearms and archery handling and safety, outdoor responsibility and ethics, laws and regulations, conservation, hunting traditions, wildlife identification, field care of game, wilderness first aid, and survival.

Students 12 years and older successfully completing the course will be issued a certificate from the TPWD. Those under 12 will get a certificate of attendance, but must take the course again for proper certification.

Cost of the course is $5, which covers the cost of materials and certificates.

Class size is again limited and those who pre-register will be given preference over walk-ins. For more information, contact Gene or Nancy Bowlin at 573-2323.

N.Y., Redskins meet in key NFL Eastern Division battle

by The Associated Press

In this bye-bye season in the NFL, pro football fans will be scrambling at times to find a truly meaningful game. This is one of those weeks.

In the best that can be offered — one of only two intradivisional games on tap as a half-dozen teams take one of their two weeks off — the New York Giants will visit the Washington Redskins on Sunday.

Because this is just the fifth game for both, even this matchup of fierce NFC East rivals would ordinarily be considered too early to be crucial. But it is to the Redskins, who with a loss will be in deep trouble in the division.

"We need a win, somehow, some way," quarterback Mark Rypien said. "This is just one we have to have."

The Redskins are 1-3 and tied for last in the division after losses to NFC East mates Phoenix and Philadelphia. At 1-4, Washington would have virtually no chance to win the division, while its playoff hopes would continue to dwindle.

Rypien practiced this week for the first time since tearing ligaments in his right knee Sept. 12 against Phoenix. The Redskins need him desperately.

The offense has yet to score in the first quarter of a game, and penalties cost Washington dearly in its 17-10 loss to the Miami Dolphins on Monday.

"I think we have to win a football game," coach Richie Petitbon said. "The sooner, the better. That's the idea right now."

Elsewhere Sunday, it will be Chicago at Philadelphia, Cincinnati at Kansas City, Dallas at Indianapolis, Miami at Cleveland, Tampa Bay at Minnesota, San Diego at Pittsburgh, New England at Phoenix, the New York Jets at the Los Angeles Raiders and Denver at Green Bay.

Houston visits Buffalo Monday night.

Atlanta, the Los Angeles Rams, New Orleans, San Francisco, Detroit and Seattle have byes.

The Giants (3-1) are playing their first game in the division. A victory coupled with a loss by Philadelphia would move New York into a first-place tie with the Eagles.

New York must overcome the absence of running back Rodney Hampton, who underwent arthroscopic knee surgery this week and will miss the game. Hampton is second in the league in rushing behind Detroit's Barry Sanders.

With Hampton missing, the burden of sparking the Giants' ground-oriented attack lies with quarterback Phil Simms.

A member of the "Four Horsemen" of Notre Dame, Elmer Layden, was the first NFL commissioner.

Mavs begin camp without No. 1 pick

WACO (AP) — The Mavericks have once again started training camp without their top draft pick.

Negotiations between the Mavericks and Jamal Mashburn, the No. 4 overall pick in the June draft, were continuing Friday as the Mavericks began preseason training on the Baylor University campus.

Talks with Mashburn, the 6-8, 240-pound forward from Kentucky, have been slow while No. 1 pick Chris Webber and No. 3 Anfernee "Penny" Hardaway have negotiated their salaries. Mashburn reportedly had been reluctant to sign a deal too early out of fear Webber and Hardaway later would set a higher salary curve.

Hardaway signed the second-richest contract in pro team sports Thursday night that reportedly pays $45.175 million over 13 years. The deal also establishes a pro-rated $20 million line of credit.

"We've been negotiating with Mashburn and his agent and we'll have to see what the Hardaway contract means to those negotiations," said Mavericks' personnel director Rick Sund.

But the Mavericks have been left waiting at the altar before. The Mavericks also had the fourth pick last year and drafted Ohio State's Jim Jackson. Jackson held out for 54 games before agreeing to a six-year, $21 million deal, the biggest in team history and the largest ever for an NBA rookie guard.

SINGLE LID CROSSOVERS SIZE GUIDE

EASY LOAD' R®
Our all-steel Easy Load'r® crossover provides 100% access and visibility with a full-length, single lid. The lid operates smoothly on dual gas spring assists. Push button releases are located at each end of the box and the lid locks from the driver's side. The lid has full perimeter weather stripping and lid bolsters provide added strength. Small parts tray and powder paint finish are standard.
•Fits Ford, Chevrolet, Dodge, GMC and all wide bed trucks, 1967 to current.
•Fits Chevrolet S-10, Ford Ranger, GMC, S-15, Dodge D 50 and Dakota, Toyota, Nissan, Mazda, and all compact trucks long and short wheelbase except Volkswagen. Also fits Ford and Dodge Stepsides.
•Fits Dodge Dakota long and short wheelbase, Jeep Comanche and Townside, all Isuzu and Chevy Luv long wheelbase.

INNERSIDES SIZE GUIDE

Lower profile innersides offer single-lid accessibility and are ideal companions for crossover boxes for a complete wraparound storage system. Innersides are capable of carrying long, larger items, but also handily organize smaller things with a full-length compartment and lift-out tray. The lid is moisture and dirt resistant, and is secured with a push button lock. Mounting kit is included.
•Fits all standard, compact and mid-size, long and short wheelbase pickups.

Dr. Gott By Peter Gott, M.D.

What causes digestive problems?

DEAR DR. GOTT: My husband gets a metallic, sour taste in his mouth following meals. This is followed by bloating, nausea and gas. He's been tested for an ulcer and was told he only had irritations. A specialist recommended different medicines and couldn't really find the problem either. What are we dealing with? We can't afford to continue going to doctors who don't give a proper diagnosis.

DEAR READER: I can't determine from your brief summary the cause of your husband's problem, although I suspect that he has a digestive abnormality that might result from gastritis (stomach irritation) or hiatal hernia with reflux (backwash of stomach acid).

He should be examined by a gastroenterologist, who may choose to perform gastroduodenoscopy, a test during which the specialist examines the upper stomach and upper intestine with a flexible, lighted tube. In some instances, this test is superior to standard intestinal X-rays because the doctor can actually view the tissues to identify inflammation.

Ask his doctor to refer your husband to the appropriate specialist.

To give you more information, I am sending you free copies of my Health Reports "Peptic Ulcers" and "Hiatal Hernia." Other readers who would like copies should send $1.25 for each report plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2433, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to mention the title(s).

DEAR DR. GOTT: My husband had a tumor of the right lung that is presently in remission. The doctor thinks he developed a peripheral neuropathy that he attempted to treat with plasmapheresis and prednisone without marked improvement. He's been totally crippled for a year, and all his doctors tell us nothing can be done. Do you agree?

DEAR READER: Unfortunately, some lung tumors cause malfunction of certain nerves (neuropathy) that may be due to substances secreted by the malignancy, even if it is in remission. These substances can be filtered from the blood (plasmapheresis) or neutralized by cortisone drugs, such as prednisone.

Evidently, in your husband's case, these methods failed. Therefore, I'm afraid that there is no specific remedy for his nerve disorder.

Nonetheless, he might be able to maintain a degree of independence by special exercises and physical therapy. For example, with training, he may be able to transfer himself from bed-to-chair or bed-to-commode. This would make life much easier for him and his care givers. Ask his doctor if such a program is appropriate.

Vascular disease in the legs is a common consequence of arteriosclerosis, the age-related accumulation of plaque (cholesterol, calcium and cellular debris) in the walls of arteries. As plaque deposits enlarge over time, they cause progressive narrowing of the arterial interior, much as rust builds up on the inside of old pipes. Once the diameter of the arteries diminishes, muscles may be deprived of oxygen.

During exercise, muscles demand much more oxygen than they do at rest. Consequently, one of the first signs of arterial occlusive disease is claudication: painful cramps, usually in the calves, that appear during walking and disappear during rest (when the oxygen demand of the muscles is reduced). The history of claudication is so characteristic of advancing arteriosclerosis that physicians often quantitate its severity using terms such as "three-block claudication," meaning that the patient can walk only three blocks without experiencing cramps.

Intermittent claudication usually progresses slowly. Three-block claudication may not become two-block claudication for several years. Certain factors cause more rapid progression. For instance, in one group of patients, 45 percent of cigarette smokers developed tissue loss within seven years after onset of symptoms, compared with only 4 percent of patients who quit smoking.

The reason for this is that nicotine constricts the arteries, further aggravating the vascular disease. Similarly, diabetics have four times the amputation rate of non-diabetics because once extensive occlusion appears (which is often a complication of diabetes), gangrene of the foot usually follows.

Also, the prognosis is least favorable for patients who experience pain at rest. Such cramps indicate that the leg muscles are oxygen-deficient even when the patients do not exercise. In these cases, the degree of arterial blockage is pronounced and skin ulcerations are common; amputation is required in up to 20 percent of individuals with this advanced disorder.

As might be expected, arterial disease doesn't just affect the legs. In one study, from the Cleveland Clinic, more than 90 percent of patients with severe claudication also had significant narrowing of their coronary arteries. Such patients are at high risk of heart attacks.

Claudication typically affects the calves, thighs and buttocks. It may be associated with impotence, muscle fatigue and tightness. The condition can be differentiated from other causes of lower-extremity pain by the patient's history (of when it occurs and how it is relieved), the physical examination (weak or absent pulses in the legs) and the Doppler ultrasound test (which gives a picture of the occluded artery and the areas of major blockage). Sometimes, doctors resort to arteriograms (special X-ray studies) to diagnose vascular disease.

Treatment is non-surgical and surgical.

In the first category, smoking is immediately forbidden. Patients are encouraged to walk at least 20 minutes a day, stopping temporarily as pain dictates, and increasing the exercise time to an hour. This activity stimulates paths of alternative blood flow, which provide circulation around the obstructed artery. Exercise therapy is useful in all cases of claudication; it is especially beneficial in "walk-through claudication," a phenomenon marked by diminishing cramps as the patient continues to exercise. Stout patients should lose weight.

Drug therapy includes aspirin (to prevent the extension of arterial plaque) and pentoxifylline (a prescription medicine that may improve circulation and lessen symptoms).

Surgical therapy is confined to angioplasty (cracking of the arterial occlusion with a balloon device) and by-pass operations, during which the occluded artery is bridged using a synthetic blood vessel. Regrettably, surgery is followed by re-blockage in about 30 percent of cases. Amputation is reserved for patients with untreatable, inoperable damage to tissues, for whom there are no other options.

In short, the cheapest, safest and most effective therapy for claudication is to exercise and modify all the possible risk factors.

'War' widows young bride

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Starla Nicholson's wedding dress was barely packed away before she had to decide what to wear to her husband's funeral.

U.S. Army Spec. Edward J. Nicholson, 21, who was stationed at Fort Campbell, died this week of injuries suffered in a shark attack off the coast of the Somalia.

He is to be buried Saturday afternoon in the National Cemetery in suburban Madison. He died exactly two months after being married.

"I'm having my bad times and good times, but I'm trying to get through it," his 23-year-old widow said in an interview at her parents' Nashville home.

She said she harbors no bitter feelings about American involvement in Somalia.

"I just hope that they bring everybody home before somebody else has to go through what I've been through," she said.

The two met in February. He was visiting Nashville from Fort Campbell, and she and her sister were visiting friends at the same motel where he was staying.

The two soon began dating and were married Aug. 6.

"He loved working on helicopters and b[illegible] in the military," Mrs. Nicholson said.

"He really didn't want to go (to Somalia). He went over there to do his duty and to come back home. He knew that when he enlisted in the Army, he might have to do something like that."

Nicholson, of Houston joined the Army two years ago.

Last weekend, he apparently was with a group of soldiers filling sandbags when they decided to take a swim in the Indian Ocean, the Army has said.

Nicholson was taken to a medical center in Mogadishu, then airlifted to a hospital in Germany. He later was transferred to Walter Reed Hospital in Virginia.

FOOD LOVERS DIET

To introduce a new approach to dieting, free samples were given to 50 people. With The Omicron Diet, one man lost 14 pounds in 5 days and one woman lost 18 pounds in 10 days. The average weight loss was over a pound a day for women and over 2 pounds a day for men. The Omicron Diet is a revolutionary new concept for unbelievably fast weight loss developed and clinically proven by National Dietary Research of Washington, D.C. This significant breakthrough in metabolic weight control was made possible by the utilization of biological information over-looked by other diet programs. With a formulation of natural enzymes along with real food, you shed unwanted pounds extremely rapidly and safely. Now available:

School official orders class strip-searched

BROOKSHIRE (AP) — An entire Royal High School Spanish class was strip-searched, apparently on order from a school administrator, following a student's complaint that some of her money was missing.

"It was horrible," said one of the girls subjected to the strip search. "It was very embarrassing — and nobody even took her money."

Officials of the Royal Independent School District in Brookshire, about 15 miles southwest of Houston, confirmed that students in a first-year Spanish class had undergone a strip search Thursday.

The search failed to turn up the $41 reported missing, but it did lead to complaints by several parents and an investigation by Principal Jimmy Davis. Superintendent James Kemp would not comment on the investigation.

Students, teachers and others familiar with the incident varied somewhat on the details, but most who spoke to The Houston Chronicle agreed on these facts:

On Thursday, after her Spanish class, a student complained that money was missing from her purse.

Top-level administrators were in a meeting, so the matter was referred to an assistant principal. Students who had been in the class were instructed over the school's intercom to report to the library. There, they reportedly were told that their parents had been contacted and had consented to having them searched.

Female students were escorted to the nurse's office. One by one, according to the accounts, they were ordered to strip to their undergarments, raise their bras and lower their panties for a visual inspection by the nurse.

The male students went to the office of the assistant principal, who allegedly ordered the search and had to strip down to their underwear.

About 20 students, ranging from freshmen to seniors, were believed to have been searched.

Some parents said later that no one had contacted them before the searches took place. Others said they consented only to having their children searched, without being told that plans called for having them disrobe in front of school personnel.

District policies on strip searches were unclear Friday.

Weapons inspector gets list of Iraq's suppliers

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iraq turned over a long-sought list of foreign weapons suppliers Friday, but continued to balk at allowing long-term monitoring of its weapons plants.

Both are among conditions set by the U.N. Security Council for lifting its oil embargo and other trade bans imposed after Iraq invaded Kuwait in 1990.

Three of the council's five permanent members, the United States, Britain and France, have been reluctant to ease the criteria, though Iraq argues the longterm monitoring infringes on its sovereignty.

Iraq gave the lists to chief U.N. weapons inspector Rolf Ekeus, who arrived in Bahrain Friday after completing eight days of talks with Iraqi leaders in Baghdad.

The United Nations has sought the lists of mainly U.S. and European suppliers for more than two years.

Addressing reporters here, Ekeus said there also was "considerable progress" on Iraqi compliance with other long-standing demands contained in Gulf War cease-fire resolutions.

He said Iraq continued to refuse to cooperate on a long-term monitoring plan intended to guarantee Iraq does not try to revive its nuclear, chemical and biological weapons as well as long-range missiles prohibited after the Gulf War.

Iraq has agreed to allow installation and activation of U.N. surveillance cameras at two missile test sites.

Baghdad continues to object to provisions that would give U.N. inspectors free rein to move about the country as well as fly over and photograph its facilities on a surprise basis.

Ekeus is expected to brief the Security Council early next week. He said Iraqi Deputy Premier Tariq Aziz, with whom he held talks in Baghdad, would also travel to New York.

Ekeus has said the oil embargo could be lifted in six months.

Jane Goodall creates young naturalists

HAMDEN, Conn. (AP) — Jane Goodall spent half her life learning about chimpanzees in the remote jungles of Tanzania.

After nearly 30 years, it dawned on her: it would be "selfish and heartless" to continue research in her "own little world" while animals and nature are in danger all over the globe.

So the renowned researcher, credited with the first recorded observance of chimpanzees eating meat and using and making tools, left the jungles to jet her message around the world and recruit a legion of young naturalists.

"Roots creep quietly under the ground and make a firm foundation. Shoots seem small and frail, but to reach the light they can move rocks and break open brick walls," Goodall said.

"Hundreds of thousands of shoots around the world can change the world."

The idea is the basis for her new club, Roots and Shoots, which recruits young people to help save chimps and the rest of nature.

The organization has taken hold in about 18 countries, including the United States, where Goodall said more than 20 clubs have been started.

At least 40 teens from fledgling U.S. chapters were to gather today at the Albert Schweitzer Institute at Quinnipiac College in Hamden for the first U.S. Roots and Shoots summit, a weekend of meetings and field trips.

Actor Ted Danson under fire for roast of Whoopi Goldberg

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Ted Danson showed up in minstrel blackface and peppered his jokes with racial epithets at the Friars Club roast of his lover, comedian Whoopi Goldberg.

The former "Cheers" star offended Mayor David Dinkins, talk show host Montel Williams and others who said his performance was over the line, even for a function where the highest compliment is a crude, brutal insult.

Danson, appearing in a top hat and blackface with big white painted lips, used the word "nigger" more than a dozen times as he joked about his and Goldberg's sex life and other topics.

With Dinkins about to arrive, Danson said, "I was told, 'The mayor's coming, so be careful, don't do any political jokes, just do nigger jokes.'"

Dinkins, New York's first black mayor, was introduced by Danson when he entered the room. Dinkins offered a few political jokes, read a city proclamation to Goldberg — a New York native — and left.

Dinkins later told the Daily News he "was embarrassed for Whoopi and the audience and felt a tremendous sense of relief when it was over."

Williams walked off the dais seven minutes into Danson's monologue and left with his visibly upset wife.

"When Ted made the jokes about the racially mixed kids, and everyone knows my wife is white and just gave birth to our child, I could see my wife start to cry," Williams told the News. "If that's what Whoopi and Ted find funny in their bedroom, it's not funny to the outside world."

Williams said he planned to send roses and a note of apology to all the black women sitting on the dais with him for what he said was like "a meeting of the Klan."

The women included Anita Baker, Shari Belafonte, Natalie Cole, Jasmine Guy and Vanessa Williams.

Goldberg sat on the dais and occasionally grinned during Danson's performance in her honor.

She began her rebuttal by saying, "Nigger, nigger, nigger, whitey, whitey, whitey. It takes a whole lot of (courage) to come out in blackface ... I don't care if you don't like it. I do."

Black model Beverly Johnson also defended Danson's performance.

"If you can't see the humor at a place where there's supposed to be over-the-line jokes, then there's something really wrong," she told the News.

"I was in stitches," she added.

Lou Vera Small

1902-1993

PORTALES, N.M. — Services will be held at 10:30 a.m. Monday in the Third and Kilgore Church of Christ for Vera Small, 91, of Portales who died Friday in the Clovis Plains Regional Medical Center. Burial will follow in the Portales Cemetery. Dan Rouse will officiate.

She was the mother of the late Nathan Small and the mother-in-law of Duffy Small of Snyder.

Mrs. Small, born in 1902, worked several years in the Portales public school system and was a memer of the Portales Senior Citizens and the Third and Kilgore Church of Christ.

She was also preceded in death by three other sons, her husband, Ben E. Small, two brothers and three grandchildren.

Other survivors include four daughters and three sons-in-law, Jennie Vee and Jess Brown of Lubbock, Virginia Small Minier of Amarillo, Bennie Lou and Clarence Reid of Las Cruces, N.M., and Frances and Bill Taylor of Colorado Springs, Colo.; one sister, Emma Daughtry of Corcorn, Calif.; 25 grandchildren; and 20 great-grandchildren.

Two more bodies are recovered

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — The United Nations said Saturday it had recovered the bodies of two more American soldiers killed in a 15-hour gun battle with Somali militiamen on Oct 5., raising the death toll to 17.

Maj. David Stockwell, the U.N. military spokesman, said in a telephone interview from Mogadishu that the bodies were recovered Friday and would be sent to Dover Air Force Base in Delaware for identification.

Another two bodies were recovered earlier, leaving one American soldier unaccounted for from the battle.

More than 80 U.N. peacekeepers were wounded, most of them Americans. A U.S. pilot was captured. The Red Cross said more than 700 Somalis were wounded, a third of them women and children. Aidid's forces said 315 Somalis were killed.

Stockwell said one or two mortar shells landed Friday night near the airport, which is controlled by U.N. forces.

Following the explosions, U.S. helicopters swarmed over the city looking for the militiamen, who fired on them with small arms, Stockwell said. He said none of the aircraft was hit.

Other explosions heard during the night came from an AC-130 gunship using a a former arms depot for target practice in northern Mogadishu.

Militiamen loyal to Mohamed Farrah Aidid have bogged down U.N. peacekeepers in Mogadishu. The United Nations accuses Aidid of masterminding the attacks on its peacekeepers and has issued a warrant for his arrest.

Thirty-three Americans and 90 peacekeepers from other nations have been killed since the Somalia operation began in December.

President Clinton is sending 5,300 additional combat troops to Mogadishu to bolster the 4,700 already there, but promises to withdraw them all by March 31.

Police work theft cases

Snyder police investigated a couple of theft cases, closed an assault case and made one arrest during the past 24-hour period, which ended early Saturday.

Police have identified a 22-year-old man as a suspect in an assault which took place about 8 p.m. Thursday. Police had been called to the disturbance in 3100 block of Avenue L. A 29-year-old man was taken to the emergency room where he was treated for lacerations to his face, shoulder and hand before being released.

Police closed the case early Saturday morning but made no arrest. They have forwarded the case to the district attorney's office for consideration.

At 9:37 a.m. Friday, a woman notified police that someone had taken food stamps from her vehicle. A report for Class B theft was filed.

Another woman contacted police at 8:21 p.m. to report the theft of her daughter's bicycle from the 3100 block of 39th Street. A report for Class B theft was submitted.

Police worked a traffic accident at 3:37 p.m. Friday in the 800 block of 13th Street. Involved were a parked 1977 Chevrolet owned by Daniel Wayne Beck of 207 Hickory and a 1985 Chevrolet station wagon driven by Susan Lee Hembree of 3307 Ave. A.

At 4:02 a.m. Saturday, police arrested a 21-year-old man in the 4400 block of Avenue U for public intoxication.

Ag department changes requirements

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Clinton Administration gave a reprieve to the food industry Friday, announcing that only ground or chopped meat will have to carry safe-handling labels starting next Friday.

The industry was given an additional six months — until April 15 — to put safe-handling labels on packages of all other uncooked meat and poultry products.

The department said, however, that safe-handling information, such as brochures, would have to be available wherever such products are sold, starting next Friday.

That was the original deadline the department set in August for all uncooked meat products — including beef, lamb, pork and poultry — to carry labels aimed at protecting shoppers and restaurant customers from food poisoning.

The department is also launching an information campaign, including radio announcements, to promote safe handling.

One announcement highlights statements from the parents of Riley Detwiler of Bellingham, Wash., who died in January at age 17 months from an outbreak of food poisoning caused by contaminated hamburgers.

"The important factor is to get the information out to the public, which is what the rule does," said Steve Kinsella, spokesman for Agriculture Secretary Mike Espy.

The changes in the final version of the rule reflect industry complaints that two months was too little time for all meat and poultry products — about 15 billion retail packages sold each year — to carry labels. About half those packages contain ground or chopped products, according to one industry estimate.

Ground or chopped products pose an especially high risk because the surface bacteria are mingled inside the product, allowing the bacteria to multiply and avoid the high surface cooking temperatures that could kill them.

A trade group for wholesale grocers and food service distributors filed a lawsuit, still pending, to block implementation of the rules. The American Meat Institute, the leading trade group for meat packers and processors, threatened a lawsuit unless the timetable was changed.

Members of Congress, including Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark., a leading poultry state and home of President Clinton, also urged Espy to phase in the label.

The labeling requirement was among several actions Espy took in response to recent outbreaks of food poisoning. The largest occurred in mid-January in Washington state just as he took office.

The Detwiler child and two other children died and 500 people became ill after illnesses that were linked to E. coli O157:H7 bacteria. The outbreak was traced to hamburgers served by the Jack in the Box chain.

The labels were also part of the settlement of a lawsuit by Jeremy Rifkin's Beyond Beef Campaign, which demanded changes in the meat and poultry products.

On Friday, Rifkin accused the department of caving in to industry pressure and said he would return to court. "That's not our agreement," he said, adding that the labels are too weakly worded.

The labels tell shoppers and restaurant workers to keep raw meat refrigerated or frozen; thaw it in a refrigerator or microwave; keep it separate from other foods and to wash hands and utensils after coming into contact with the raw product; cook the food thoroughly; and refrigerate leftovers immediately.

The final rules changed the wording and symbols used in the label. The label no longer says the food was inspected "for your safety" but that it was prepared "from inspected and passed meat and/or poultry."

The washing instructions replace a picture of a bar of sudsy soap with an image of a pair of hands under a faucet. An industry group complained people might be confused and try to wash the food with soap.

MTV will review 'Beavis' cartoon

MORAINE, Ohio (AP) — MTV said it will take another look at its show "Beavis and Butt-head" after a woman whose 5-year-old son set a fatal house fire blamed the cartoon for promoting burning as fun.

Austin Messner, whose 2-year-old sister died in the fire, watched an episode in which the cartoon characters said fire is fun, said Moraine Fire Chief Harold Sigler.

"According to the mother, right after that she caught him playing with matches," Sigler said.

Austin; his mother, Darcy Burk; and her boyfriend, Steve Sears, escaped. His 2-year-old sister, Jessica Matthews, died in the fire Wednesday.

"Beavis and Butt-head" features two animated teen-agers who comment on rock videos and spend time burning and destroying things.

Estranged wife of car dealer in jail

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Ronnie Lamarque is one of those car dealership guys who stars in his own commercials, his dark hair combed straight back and his heavy dem-and-doze accent the butt of affectionate jokes.

In a suit and tie, he tells television viewers his rags-to-riches story, how he grew up in a rough, working-class neighborhood in New Orleans and knew he wanted to sell cars from the time he worked his first lot as a teen-ager.

His spots always include the line, "I graduated from da school uh hard knocks — summa cum laude."

People here love to talk about Lamarque and sometimes mimic the accent Brooklyn and New Orleans have in common. They also marvel at his golden touch. He's a self-made millionaire with three Ford dealerships, co-owner of champion race horse Risen Star and an investor in two glitzy casinos to open soon.

Now, it's the seamier side of his life making front page news and setting talk radio tongues wagging.

Lamarque, who buoyantly sang an ode to his horse on network television when Risen Star won the 1988 Belmont Stakes, was in seclusion Friday with his teen-age daughter. He was stunned, a spokesman said, by allegations that his estranged wife, Carmella, planned to have him killed for $20,000.

Jefferson Parish Sheriff Harry Lee said an informant, approached about the killing, contacted a deputy and cooperated in an investigation that included wiretaps and videotapes.

Lamarque, 47, was informed a week before the arrest and quietly cooperated.

"He's been in the presence of his wife on several social engagements, knowing what her motives were. It's been very trying for him," said Mark Bonner, a family friend. "He hasn't gotten much sleep in the last 48 hours."

Mrs. Lamarque's cousin, Joseph Grego, was arrested when money changed hands Wednesday night. Mrs. Lamarque, 56, was lured to the sheriff's office on the ruse that her husband's abandoned and bloody car had been found, Lee said.

Both were booked for investigation of conspiracy to commit murder. Bond for each was set at $2.5 million. They remained in jail and were not commenting on the case.

"The Lamarques have been having some domestic problems for the past few months," Lee said. "There's a lot of hurt involved and there may be some other motive. I won't speculate."

The couple separated in April.

Others did speculate, telling The Times-Picayune, where news of the plot covered almost half the front page on Friday, that another woman was involved.

Mrs. Lamarque had been scheduled to appear at a hearing Oct. 15 on a charge of simple battery, filed by Lamarque's frequent companion, a woman who said Mrs. Lamarque slapped her and broke her nose at a restaurant where she and Lamarque were dining.

Opposes U.S. ban on visiting Cuba

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Alice Walker thinks Americans should be able to learn for themselves the truth about Cuba, despite a U.S. ban on visiting the communist nation.

The famed writer lent her support Friday to a group of people, including her daughter who plan to visit Cuba in defiance of the ban, lifted in the last 30 years only during the Carter administration.

Scurry County Folks

By Shirley A. Gorman

In the 66 years that L.E. "Doc" Griffin has lived and worked in Snyder, he has left his mark on the community in more than one way. The octogenarian was 14 when he moved to Snyder in 1927, riding in the rumble seat of his parents' car along with his favorite pet cat.

Doc's physician father, I.A. [illegible] family because he had been invited to open a medical practice here.

Doc was born in Salado on June 13, 1913, and named Leighton after Sir Leighton of England. The nickname "Little Doc" came years later. It was shortened to "Doc" after his father died.

Until ill health forced him to slow down, Doc had spent much of his life doing volunteer work for numerous organizations and community projects.

Most recently, he has been named the honorary chairman of Scurry County United Way, which kicked off its 1993 campaign last week.

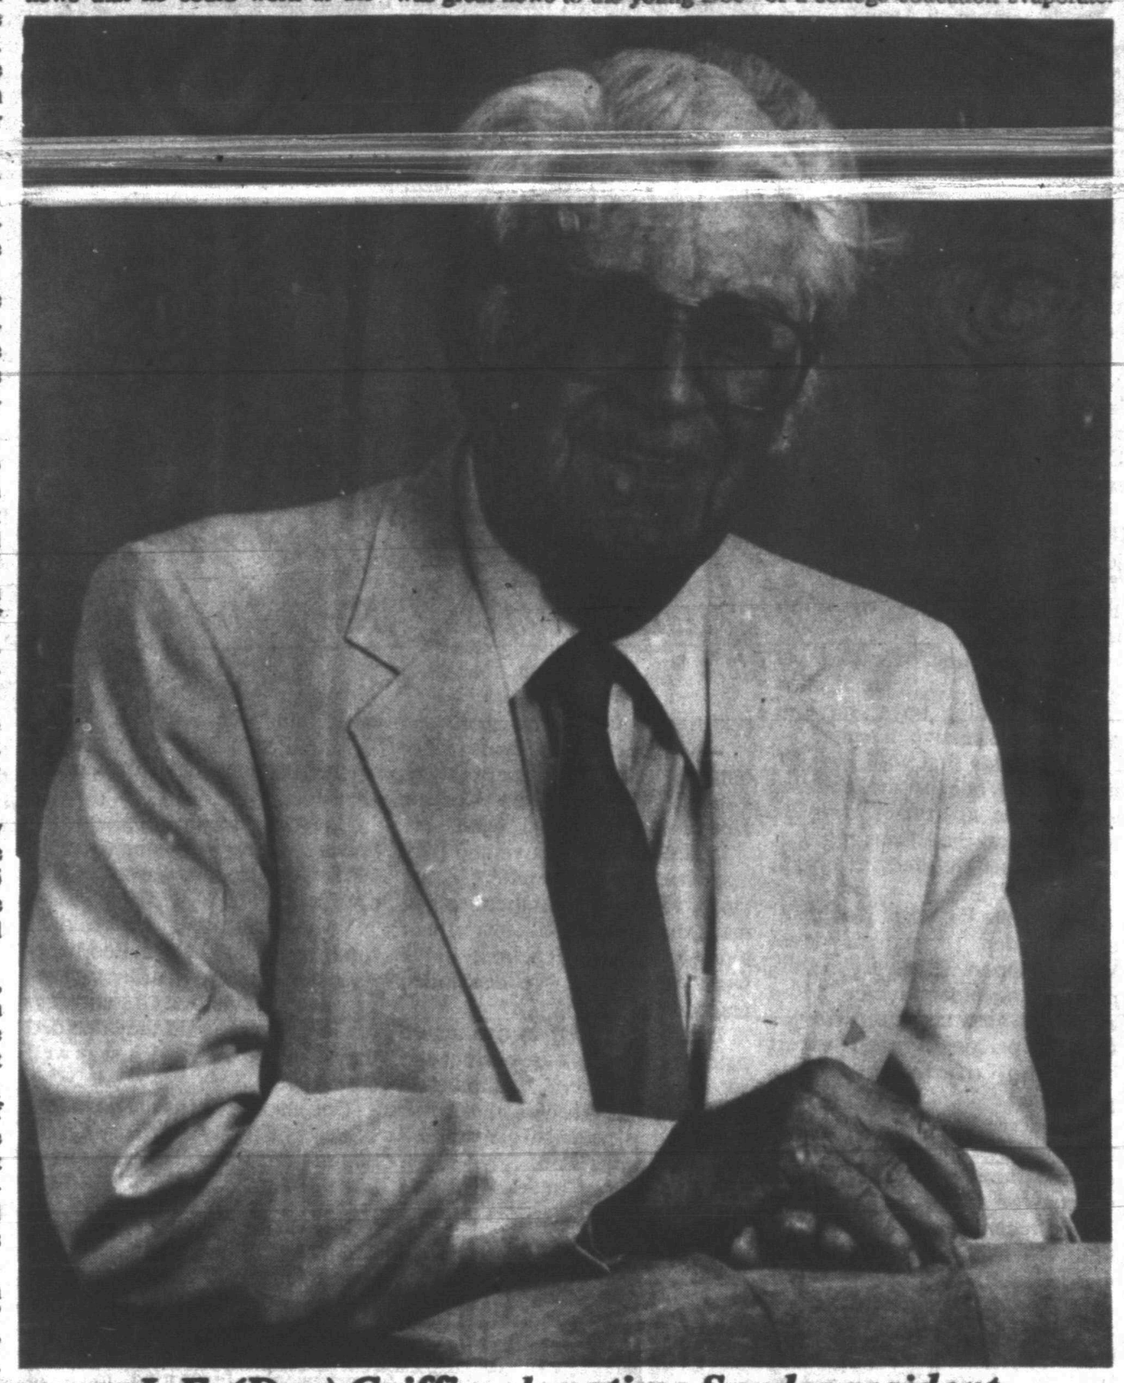
Doc has held numerous offices and positions on local and district boards and has accumulated many awards.

He spent 25 years in the grocery business. He also served as the city's tax assessor/collector for 25 years, and another two years as the city's Environmental Control Officer.

Doc has retired at least twice, only to resume working when, in his words, he had looked at the "idiot box" long enough. About two weeks is his limit.

He has always been one of Snyder's most active citizens. He is certainly one of the best thought of, and with good reason. It's almost impossible to find any local project or organization that he has not had something to do with.

One of Doc's earliest jobs in Snyder was that of a "sodi skeet" at Stinson Drug Store. He recently recounted how he had been working in a cotton field when his father brought him the welcome news that he could work at the drug store if he wanted the job. It was great news to the young Doc who had recently seen his dream of a college education evaporate.



L.E. (Doc) Griffin...longtime Snyder resident

After graduating from Snyder High School in 1931, Doc attended the University of Texas for one year. Further college was impossible because he lost all of the money he had saved when the First State Bank closed.

"Borrowed money" kept Doc in school that first year. But he [illegible] returned to Snyder where the only job he could find was "pulling cotton for a Mr. Anderson."

Not liking that very much, he was more than willing to seek another line of work. Enter Lee Stinson, with a job opportunity tailor-made for a young man seeking to better himself, and get in out of the hot West Texas sun.

Doc recounted the story of how he heard the news.

"One afternoon, 100 degrees, not much shade, I saw my dad's car coming over the hill. I thought something bad had happened. To my surprise he wanted to know if I wanted to 'skeet sodi' in Stinson Drug. It was like handing me a million dollars. Working inside and all the Coke I could drink and getting paid for it," Doc explained.

Some time later, Doc's spur-of-the moment ingenuity earned him an unexpected job offer from the manager of Piggly Wiggly, the forerunner of Lawrence IGA. He had been waiting in the store for a buddy to go to lunch with him when a man came in with a bucket of fresh eggs to sell.

Since everyone else was busy, Doc said he counted the man's eggs and gave him a signed ticket. Highly impressed, the manager offered him a job "on the spot," and Doc accepted. By age 25, he was named manager. Later, he and C.V. Morris bought the store.

During World War II, Morris was called back into the service, but Doc stayed in Snyder. One of Piggly Wiggly's features then were some 350 meat lockers which people who killed their own meat could rent.

After 15 years, he sold his interest in Piggly Wiggly.

Doc said he once told a grocery sacker that if he worked hard he could advance to checker, manager and finally part owner. "He didn't believe me," he laughed.

Doc's next venture was another grocery store — D&R Grocery — which he and and the late Rex [illegible] they opened Everybody's Grocery on Avenue S. Doc later sold his interest to Miller and then, in 1960, Miller moved Everybody's to its current location on College Avenue and 35th Street.

The grocery business was a natural for Doc, who was first introduced to entrepreneurship by a grandmother who taught him early on that the way to make a profit was to "buy candy eggs for one penny and then sell them for two cents."

Always wanting to become a merchant, Doc had learned his grandmother's lesson well. Since his boyhood home was located on the crossroads, Doc said, he enjoyed "a good egg-selling business."

After selling his grocery interests, it did not take Doc long to find another profession. On Christmas Eve, 1954, a city job became available. Doc applied right after the new year, but was told at first that "no job was available."

A few days later, Doc was offered a job. The city manager called him into a room with 12 apple boxes full of records which had to be sorted. In 25 years from 1955 to 1980, Doc completed 11 of the boxes while also fulfilling the duties of the city's tax assessor/collector. He retired from the job just as the city, county and college were forming the appraisal district.

A grandson later finished the 12th box, transferring the information to a computer, Doc said.

Doc's retirement lasted about two weeks. Bored with television, he was only too eager to go back to work as the city's Environmental Control Officer. He wanted to start the same afternoon the job was offered to him, but the city manager told him he could wait until the next day.

Doc's qualifications, as told to the city manager, were, "I know every house in town and how to get along with people."

For the next two years, he made 1,000 street signs which were later installed by city work crews. In addition, he also oversaw the CETA boys and other city projects.

Doc attempted another short-lived retirement as soon as this job was completed. When Golden Terrace Village was built in the 1980s, Doc applied for the job of manager.

In the beginning, he worked out of an office in the Senior Center building, signing up senior citizens as prospective tenants.

Doc and his first wife, Wanda, moved into one of the units as soon as the apartment complex opened. They had been together 54 years when she died on May 26, 1990.

During the six years Doc managed Golden Terrace, he developed a rapport with everyone, especially the older women living alone who grew accustomed to his friendly personality and expert handling of maintenance problems.

Doc served as manager of the apartments until 1991 when he married the former Sue Dickey and moved from the complex.

Doc recently joked, "I left 40 little old ladies for one when I married Sue."

Doc's rich legacy of community service dates back to his boyhood. He joined the Boy Scouts in 1927, right after he moved to Snyder.

That first-year tenderfoot went on to achieve many things in scouting.

Decades later, in 1971, Doc became a Scout leader when his son, Gene, was old enough to join. Doc handled volunteer scout work just like he does everything else, going all out and then some to get the job done.

Besides local scouting positions, Doc also worked at the district level.

As a district commissioner, he worked with local packs and troops and was very involved with the annual rally. Doc often accompanied Boy Scouts on trips. He also helped renovate the Boy Scout huts in Snyder, including the one located across from Humble Smith.

He was also a Cubmaster, a member of the Pack Committee and served as district chairman. He was also a member of the district Sustaining Membership Committee which is primarily responsible for finances.

Doc also served as the district health and safety chairman.

"It was like handing me a million dollars. Working inside and all the Coke I could drink and getting paid for it."

When Doc joined the Boy Scouts as a volunteer he said he worked with the late Thelma Deere, another noted volunteer.

"I respected the boys and they respected me," he said. "To get closer to them I told them to call me 'Doc.' I felt I could teach them more that way. Thelma and I worked together. We demanded respect and we got it."

Doc has more than two dozen patches earned as a Boy Scout and scouting volunteer, including a Wood Badge. To earn that some 15 years ago, he had to go camping about 10 miles from Snyder. He was with a group of 30 others and said he had "to be talked into it."

They had set their tents up on one side of the river and while they were away from their campsite a storm came through the area and tore up Doc's tent, leaving the others unscathed.

In 1984, Doc received the Silver Beaver award, the highest award an adult volunteer can attain. It was presented by the Lone Buffalo District, which serves both Snyder and Colorado City, in recognition of Doc's volunteer service with all youth, not just within scouting.

Doc has also been a longtime United Way volunteer, beginning in 1957. He and his bucket, dubbed the "blood bucket," made many rounds in Snyder, collecting donations which were later disbursed to various organizations in Snyder.

Doc helped in all phases of the annual project, from executive positions to door-to-door collecting. When soliciting funds, Doc carried his bucket and used the same standard pitch, "Give me some money or give me some blood."

He often served as United Way chairman as well as chairman of the Public Employees Division, according to longtime United Way volunteer Wilma Dillard, who joined the organization about the same time Doc did.

Wilma said the PED always reached its goal when Doc was the chairman.

He received a special plaque for serving as the PED chairman in 1978-1979. He also served as vice president of UW.

Wilma said that professional fund-raisers had been called in around 20 years ago in order to reorganize and revitalize United Way, but local people said they decided they could do the work just as well themselves.

Doc also served as the president of Scurry County Advisory Council for United Blood Services from 1981-1983.

He was also a charter member of Snyder Neighbors Sharing. Organized in 1987, this annual event renovates homes of disabled and low-income residents.

Doc's committment to volunteerism also extended to local civic clubs like the Lions and Kiwanis Clubs where he has held various positions, including the presidency. He and Sue are currently members of the Golden K Kiwanis Club.

Last year Doc served as president of AARP and he has also been chairman of Snyder's Drug and Alcohol Services.

A member of the First Baptist Church for 63 years, Doc has served as deacon and usher, Sunday School teacher and training director; but he said he had never sung in the choir until he and Sue married. He later joined her choir at Colonial Hill Baptist Church. Until recently he and his wife sang in several choirs together.

Though both longtime Snyder residents, the Griffins had not met until they were playing pool at the Senior Citizens Center. Sue describes her husband as "the best thing in the world" and as someone "who does not know the meaning of the word no. He has always helped anyone, anytime, anywhere with a grin."

Doc's never-meet-a-stranger approach to life was a little hard for her to get used to at first. He always makes a bee line for newcomers, especially at the Senior Center. He said one of the joys of his life has been to talk to people and find out about them. That's what he said his dad taught him, "To learn as much about people as you can."

Doc, always a great storyteller, likes to entertain Sue with tales of what the Boy Scouts did and where. Whenever they drive to Lubbock he will point out the sites. She knows them all by heart now.

Family has always been important to Doc. His maternal grandfather and his brother immigrated to the U.S. from Holland before Doc was born. They married two sisters of Scottish-English descent. Their home near Nolanville still exists. The Griffins visited it last year.

Doc's sense of humor may have been inherited from his grandmother, who was fond of shocking people by saying, "I am part Scotch-Irish and Airedale." He said she always waited a moment until what she had said "sunk in" and then enjoyed the person's startled reaction.

Doc lost his only brother and sibling to the great flu epidemic of 1917. His brother was three at the time.

Doc's said his best friend, a Dr. John Hamlin, became "like a brother to me."

While growing up, Doc attended first grade in the old Saledo College which had partially burned, leaving the west half available for elementary classroom space.

He played football at Killeen through his freshman year, before moving to Snyder. After settling in, Doc said he decided, "These West Texas boys were so big that I played in the band for the rest of high school."

After school, Doc often worked for Maple Funeral Home. "A call came in that a man was found dead at Fullerville (north of town). Since there was not much left of the man but skin and bones, I thought the judge might let me boil him in a wash pot and articulate him with silver wire so I would have a skeleton to take with me to the University of Texas that fall. The judge said 'no way,' that somebody might claim him," Doc said.

Doc married the former Wanda Shepherd in 1939. They had a twin boy and girl in 1941. They were married 54 years before she died.

Doc's son is also deceased.

A daughter, Judy McGee, lives in Snyder and has a son who lives in Fort Worth. In all, Doc has two grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Bridge is great for all ages

It is said that a mathematician is over the hill at 20. A chess player reaches his peak around 30. But in bridge, senior citizens win world and national titles. Waldemar von Zedtwitz won the World Mixed Teams Championship at the age of 74. And Oswald Jacoby won the Reisinger when 81 years old. Experience counts for a lot in bridge.

Carlos Cabanne, who is 76, has represented Argentina on numerous occasions. He played today's deal during this year's South American Championships, where Argentina lost to Brazil in the final.

West led the heart king, making it obvious that he was void in clubs. Resisting the temptation to win with dummy's ace and discard a club, Cabanne ruffed in hand. He drew trumps in four rounds, discarding two clubs from the dummy. Then he played off three rounds of spades.

Here West won the last with the queen and had only hearts left. He led the queen, but Cabanne didn't win with dummy's ace or ruff in hand. Instead, he played low from the dummy and discarded a club from hand.

Now West had to lead away from his heart jack into dummy's A-10. Cabanne, therefore, could discard his last two club losers and make his contract.

Suppose East has queen doubleton of spades. On the third round of spades to dummy's jack, West is in a dilemma. If he keeps a winning spade, he can be endplayed as in the actual deal. If he retains the spade two to avoid the endplay, declarer cashes the heart ace and has 11 tricks: six diamonds, one heart and four spades.

In double-ring, church ceremony...

Justiss, Johnson say vows

SWEETWATER — Kimberly DeAnn Justiss of Roby became the wife of Lecile Lyn Johnson of Hermleigh on Aug. 14. at 7 p.m. in Sweetwater's Trinity Baptist Church. Darrell Hart, minister of Roby Church of Christ, officiated the double-ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Bryan and Rhonda Justiss of Roby and the groom is the son of Charley Johnson of Hermleigh and Terry Butler of Everett, Wash.

Pews in the center aisle were decorated with black and white tulle bows, accented with a pink rose. Family pews were indicated by hurricane globes with white candles and tulle bows. As guests entered the auditorium, they viewed arrangements of Kimberly Queen ferns, adorned with white satin bows, on the back pews.

The altar was decorated with lighted trees, candelabra fans, spirals and candle clusters. Greenery and white tulle were intertwined through the brass stands.

Becky and Barri Pace of Carlsbad and Rochelle Belew of Sweetwater were musicians. Selections performed were "He Wants To Get Married," "There is Love" and "I Cross My Heart."

The bride, escorted by her father, wore a white satin and organza formal gown. Her sweetheart neckline was enhanced by a fitted, elongated bodice with a point at the center front. Scheffli lace appliques accented the front and back of the satin bodice.

The bodice attached large full sleeves covered with ruffles which tapered into straight sleeves. Sequins and pearls accented the wrists. The gown featured a floor-length skirt and chapel train, covered wtih sheer organza tiered ruffles.

Details included lace appliques with beaded fringe across the back which made a heart-shaped design. The scheffli lace was lightly interspersed with pearls and sequins. Her lace veil was attached to a headpiece of beaded pearls.

The bride carried a bouquet of cascading pink roses, stargazer lilies, white roses, carnations, baby's breath and sweetheart ivy.

Gayla Wells of Springfield, Mo., was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Tammy Kiser of Sylvester; Laticia Wootan of Neodesha, Kan.; Kathi Mize of Canyon; Jeanette Ellis of Des Moines, Iowa; and Karie Martin of Roby.

Attendants wore tea-length dresses with a black satin, fitted bodices and full skirts of tulle. They carried bouquets of pink and white roses and black, white and pink carnations. In the center was a votive candle cup with a pink burning candle.

Junior bridesmaids were Ashley Douglass of Sylvester, cousin of the bride, and Amanda Johnson of Roby, sister of the groom. They carried bouquets of black and white carnations, pink and white roses, and black baby's breath.

Best man was Brandon Justiss of Roby, brother of the bride. Groomsmen were Joe Don Helm. Casey Johnson, brother of the groom, Billy Williams and Joe Rivas, all of Roby, and Eric Thompand Kristen Martin of Roby. They wore black and white taffeta dresses with a white underskirt that had sheer white ruffles in back. Completing their attire were white hats with sheer black bows. They carried black baskets with tulle and pink rose petals.

Ring bearer was Zachary Casas of Lake Jackson, cousin of the bride. Bible bearer was Benjamin Casas, also of Lake Jackson. They wore black tuxedos with tails, white vests and black bow ties.

Candlelighters were Brent and Curt Douglass of Sylvester, cousins of the bride. They were dressed like the ring bearer.

Groomsmen served as ushers. Wendy Thompson and Carrie Seymour of Lubbock, cousins of the groom, registered guests.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at Mulberry Manor. The bride's table centered the atrium which was decorated with pink tulle and candelabras. The table, covered with white satin and a black overlay, held the bride's cake. It was topped with a bride and groom figurine, used by the bride's parents 24 years ago. Trimmed in greenery, pink roses, black carnations and baby's breath, the cake's top layer rested on columns surrounded by a fountain. Three satellite cakes surrounded the fountain and were connected by the flowers.

The groom's table, covered with a white and black satin cloth, featured a double heart-shaped, red velvet cake with chocolate cream cheese frosting. A quote from the bride's and groom's invitations was inscribed on the cake. Also served were assorted nuts, mints, fruits and cheeses.

A beverage table held pictures of the bride and groom at the age of two, along with their engagement picture. This table also held punch, coffee, tea, water and sodas.

Denise Thompson, Lori Matthews, Audra Lewis and Carrie Seymour served at the bride's and groom's tables. Ashley Douglass and Amanda Johnson served drinks.

A bridal tea was held on July 5 in the home of Mrs. Jerry Hoodenpyle of Roby.

On Aug. 13, a bridesmaids luncheon was held at Hickory Street Cafe in Abilene, hosted by the bride's mother. Also, a lingerie shower was held in Roby by Kathi Mize and Tammy Kiser.

The evening before the ceremony, a rehearsal dinner was held at the Sweetwater Country Club, hosted by the groom's parents. Charley and Leesa Johnson.

Following a honeymoon to San Antonio, the couple are at home in Roby.

The bride is a graduate of Roby High School and is attending Western Texas College. The groom is a graduate of Roby High School and is employed by Reef Chemical in Snyder.

Dear Abby

by Abigail Van Buren

© 1993 Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I called our post office to find out how we might have to write the abbreviated date for the year 2000. We thought that 6/24/00 might be right, but that does not tell the exact year.

Would you and your staff tell us what would be right when the next seven years have elapsed? Thanks.

MRS. O. DODD,
RAYMOND, WASH.

DEAR MRS. DODD: My staff checked at the library, where various style manuals and language usage guides were consulted. But none made any mention of what to do with abbreviations for the year 2000. The librarian then called both the Keith Clark Corp. and Success Business Industries (both major manufacturers of calendars) and asked them what they are planning to do.

According to their "best educated guesses," they would abbreviate Sept. 1, 2000, as 9/1/00 — but then admitted that they had not really thought about this yet, either!

When someone comes up with a definitive answer, it will be about time!

DEAR ABBY: I've read many letters from your readers who claim that grandparents are closer to the children of their daughters than they are to the children of their sons.

My husband's mother lives 120 miles from us and she sees our children approximately once a month. She lives in the same city as her daughter (my husband's sister) and she sees her daughter's children daily.

The problem is that when we go to visit her, her daughter's children are also there. I feel that it is important for our children to have some special time with their grandmother alone — just as her other grandchildren have on a daily basis. It makes me feel that our children aren't as important to her as her other grandchildren are.

Am I being overly sensitive, or should I address this issue with her? Even our children have asked if they could spend some time at Grandma's without their cousins.

FRUSTRATED IN GEORGIA

DEAR FRUSTRATED: You are not being overly sensitive. Your children deserve some special time with their grandmother without their cousins present. Ask your husband to talk to his mother about how your children — and you — feel about them seeing Grandma alone.

DEAR ABBY: For years you have printed letters from women who are having affairs with married men.

I think it's now time to hear from the wife. I have written a poem from her point of view. I hope you think it's worth the space in your column.

WORTHETTA HUNTER,
EDINBURG, PA.

DEAR WORTHETTA: It is, indeed. Thanks for sending it.

THE OTHER WOMAN

I'm the other woman in your man's life,
You are his girlfriend and I am his wife.
He takes you to bed in the dark of the night,
He walks me to church in the bright morning light.

He takes you to motels,
He makes me a home.
You show him your children,
I give him his own.

He'll call you his baby, sweetheart and dame.
He took me for life and he gave me his name.
You go to strange places and he'll hold your hand.
Mine will be wearing a gold wedding band.

He'll take me to parties or a family affair.
You can bet your sweet life that you'll never be there!
Here's some advice that I think you should heed,
He'll never be there in your hour of need.

So get yourself a man of your own,
Or someday, Girl, you'll be all alone.
For when it comes to a choice for life,
It won't be his girlfriend —
He'll choose me — his wife!

DEAR ABBY: Please help me. I have been going with a married man for more than 15 years. Now I have met another man who I cannot seem to get out of my system. He is a few years younger than I, but he is a gentleman in all respects and we get along fine.

The man with whom I have had this long relationship is a little older than I am and now has left his wife and wants us to live together. I can't seem to make up my mind. And I don't want to hurt either one.

The first man has been so good to me and helped me in many a dilemma. Please rush your answer. I am now on vacation and trying to figure out the answer.

LOST SOUL IN DES MOINES

DEAR LOST SOUL: I cannot make that decision for you, but since you are uncertain, it's possible that neither is the right man for you. I strongly recommend that you wait until you are absolutely certain that you want to spend the rest of your life with one of them — or perhaps another man.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I don't understand why there is so much rudeness in our society today. People are always asking me if my eyes are fake or if I wear colored contacts or is that my natural color.

I refrain from asking them if they wear a padded bra or is that lush head of hair a toupee, etc. I try to be subtle in my response, but I'm exasperated with their nosiness. What do I do about educating these dense people?

OLE BLUE EYES

DEAR OLE BLUE EYES: Since people are always asking you if your eyes are "fake" or is that your natural color, why retaliate with a put-down? Say, "Thanks for the compliment — my eyes are naturally this color."

DEAR ABBY: A group of women enjoy going out for dinner occasionally, and we always divide the bill evenly among us.

There are two women who always have a cocktail (or two), and I feel that they should pay for their own drinks.

We are all seniors living on fixed incomes. I haven't mentioned this to them as yet. Should I?

Please, no name or town.

A SENIOR

DEAR SENIOR: Yes, by all means, mention this to them; you need not feel embarrassed.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: The week before last Father's Day, you suggested that the best Father's Day gift would be a letter to your father telling him how much he has meant to you, and how much you love him.

Well, I took your advice and wrote such a letter to my father. We had been pretty close over the years, but I could never find the right words to express my feelings before.

Last week, my father passed away suddenly of a massive heart attack. He was only 61. When I was going through his files, I found my letter in his "Important Info" file.

So, this is a "thank you" for some of the best advice I've ever had. Usually we intend to do something, but never get around to doing it — then it's too late. I'm glad I wasn't too late.

LAURA HAASE,
EL DORADO HILLS, CALIF.

Richard III was crowned King of England in 1483. A brother of Edward IV, Richard was accused of involvement in the deaths of his two nephews in order to gain the throne. His reputation has not been enhanced by theatrical portrayals of the king. The death of Richard, the last Yorkist king, at Bosworth Field in 1485, ended the Wars of the Roses.

Resigned housing chief still receives paycheck

HOUSTON (AP) — Housing Secretary Henry Cisneros demanded his resignation, but the man who supervised an all-white housing complex in Vidor still is working for the agency in another capacity.

Cisneros traveled to Texas nearly a month ago and seized control of the Orange County Housing Authority after it failed to integrate blacks into the Vidor complex.

Among his demands was the resignation of Richard A. Stanfield, executive director of the Orange County Housing Authority.

On Monday, Stanfield submitted that resignation. But on Thursday, Stanfield was still employed as that agency's new director of maintenance.

"It's an agreement that my board worked out," said Stanfield, answering from his office. Stanfield would not say if his job was a newly created position or if he was filling a vacancy.

Mike Siegel, a HUD spokesman, said Thursday the agency had no immediate comment on the situation.

But the deal didn't sit well with Tom Uhlig, an attorney with East Texas Legal Services in Beaumont, who has represented the four black families who tried to live in Vidor's public housing this year.

Editorial Roundup

Houston Post on S&L industry mismanagement:

"We're from the government and we're here to help."

Sure. So the federally ordered audit of a failed San Diego savings and loan included:

Workers making $35 an hour to photocopy documents.

Two-hour lunch breaks.

Workers napping in mid-day, or playing poker (at one time between 50 and 150 of them were dealing cards).

Workers vandalizing restrooms.

One eight-hour shift that did absolutely nothing.

The horror story goes on and on, but we get the picture, and what a picture it is, one of corruption, mismanagement or non-management, nepotism and cost rip-offs.

This particular case involved [illegible], which hired Price Waterhouse to audit the San Diege S&L. Price Waterhouse, in turn, hired temporary employees, some of whom were relatives of the auditing firm's employees.

A later inquiry found that RTC's lax oversight cost the taxpayers $20 million in unnecessary costs. But it is only one of several problems investigators are finding with the RTC. ...

And this is the government that wants to take over our health care? We'd like a second opinion.

San Antonio Express-News on health care:

Ordinary Americans who see health-care reform as a possibility this time should remember: It isn't over until the influential Washington lobbyists have their say.

"They" are well-financed, more focused and closer to Capitol Hill, literally and figuratively, than the folks back home, particularly the underclass and the unaffiliated. ...

Ordinary citizens can't match such largess. But they can vote, and 1994 is an election year. To Congress' credit, there is bipartisan agreement that soaring costs, fraud, abuse and greed in health care necessitate reform. ...

The inducement for ordinary people to urge reform is they will pay anyway — either directly to finance fair universal health care or indirectly to finance lobbying for regurgitated inequities.

...Don't let insiders dismantle the best chance for reform in decades.

Valley Star on government and auto industry:

President Clinton wants to use taxpayers' money to forge a "clean car" conglomerate with the Big Three U.S. automakers to produce an 80-mpg car. ...

The funds would begin at $1 billion, combining private contributions and taxpayers' money, but taxpayers could get a multi-billion-dollar bill in the long run.

The White House called this Clintonmobile "a technological challenge comparable to or greater than that involved in the Apollo project." That's the old "if we can land a man on the moon, we can (name your favorite project here)" bromide. But the Apollo moon shots occurred during the Cold War's space race with the Soviet Union. Like the Manhattan Project of World War II, it was a matter of national security. After the Apollo program ended, NASA drifted into wasting billions of taxpayers' dollars on the problem-plagued Space Shuttle program, the nearsighted Hubble Space Telescope, and the continually redesigned space station. ...

Lubbock, Texas, early afternoon, the near future:

"Yes mam. I understand this may seem ridiculous to you, but maybe you don't realize the seriousness of the situation. What has happened here is a national disgrace and we've got to put a stop to it. You'll have to have your purse searched just like everyone else."

Zip.

"Okay. compact, comb, brush, makeup, chewing gum, pen, paper, bills, keys, cologne, hairpins. Looks okay to me. Wait a minute...What's this? I think we've got something. There's a package here. Up against the wall, lady. Don't move! Joe, Joe, bring the dog over here!"

"But that's my lunch."

"Sure it is. Sure it is."

Crumple, crumple.

"What's this?"

"[illegible]"

"Uh huh. Wouldn't be spiked with anything would it? Alcoholic beverages are illegal here."

"No, no. It's just orange juice."

Okay. How about drugs? Any drugs? No? Cigarettes? It's illegal to smoke in here, you know."

"No. I don't smoke."

"Good. That's good. Potato chips. Okay. Candy bar. Okay. And what's this? Ah hah! Cuff her, Joe!"

"But...but, that's a burrito. It's just a burrito!"

"I know a tortilla when I see one, lady. You gonna' tell me this is not a tortilla?"

"No. Yes. I mean, it's a burrito. It's my lunch!"

"It's a tortilla, lady, anyway you look at it. You can roll it up, fold it, quarter it, whatever. It's still a tortilla."

"It's a burrito. It's to eat. That's all. I swear."

"Come on, lady. I wasn't born yesterday. You think I don't know what's going on? I let you in and you're going to rake the beans off this baby and toss the sucker right down on somebody's head. And ABC will film the whole thing."

"No, no. It's just my lunch. I swear. Please!"

Well, we'll have to let the dog sniff it, just to be sure. University policy you understand. Here Boy. Here, smell this."

Gulp.

"My burrito! My burrito! Your dog ate my burrito!"

"Bad dog. Bad dog. I'm very sorry, mam. I guess it was a burrito. But we can't take chances. We have a tradition to uphold. You understand Uh...you can go in now. Enjoy the football game."

"My burrito!"

"Move on ahead, mam. People are waiting. Please, move quickly."

"Okay, buddy, you're next. What's in the sack?"

"Just an apple."

"Uh huh. Sure. And just what were you planning to do with this apple, buddy?"

Country Life

By Deanie Francis Mills

It there's one thing that's tough for a battle-scarred old control freak like me to learn, it's how and when to let go. After 40, especially, such life-lessons come hard, because we are so used to doing things in a certain way. Even if that way is self-destructive, we often keep doing it because we tend to embrace the familiar. But, as Gail Sheehy says in one of my favorite books, her landmark study, "Passages," we don't stop growing just because we hit 21. If we want to be healthy and successful in life, we keep growing all the way to the end ... and every time we grow into a new phase, or passage, of our lives, we're going to have to leave that old one behind.

They say it tends to happen about every seven years. I hope that's true, because I'd like to think I can coast for the next six years before I have to hit another passage quite this rough. Both personally and professionally, it's been a little like climbing Mount Everest without a guide.

Control freaks are not born; they are made, usually in a home in which their formative years were spent surrounded by emotional turmoil. If they were firstborn, or were in a position where a parent tended to depend upon them in a partnership role, then any situation which descends upon them like a typhoon, allowing them no opportunity to see to it that the hatches are all properly battened down, leaves them pale and sweaty.

Control freaks don't much like to fly, or ride the fast rides at the fair. Unless, of course, they can pilot the plane themselves, or see to it that the rides are thoroughly inspected before getting on.

The first five years are great. You can control everything your child does and with whom he does it. After that, it gets iffy — after all, the public school system takes over for eight hours a day, and you just have to TRUST that they're doing as good a job as you would. But elementary school can be handled pretty well by the classic control freak. You can research and request a certain teacher, keep an eye on which friends flow in and out of the house, oversee homework and coach, say, Little League.

And then.

Comes along those nasty teen years. All of a sudden, your child is whisked away into a strange and complicated world that changes them right before your eyes. They don't appreciate your telling them what to do, or when, or how.

Frankly, they don't much need you anymore.

Oh sure, they need you — to be a sounding board for their frustrations and a chauffeur for their various activities and a cheerleader for their enterprises. And, okay, even they'll admit that they need a little discipline now and then. (Maybe a secret good-night kiss, if nobody's around.)

But that's it. Your position in their lives has been displaced by favorite teachers, coaches, and of course, the ever-powerful peer group.

It's time to let go.

I knew I'd have to let go eventually, but I thought there'd be this, you know, CEREMONY. Like, a high school graduation or a wedding or a move into a freshman dorm.

I've been learning that if you truly want your child to grow up healthy and successful in life, you've got to let him do it in his own way and time. As soon as he starts to seriously strain at the reins, it's time to give him his head. (Within reason, of course. You don't want him bolting into a wall or anything.) In fact, if you stubbornly persist in running his life, you will be creating an emotional cripple (a co-dependent, if you will), who will never truly grow up.

For a third of my life, I've invested heavily in this motherhood thing. Read all the right books and watched all the right talk shows and done all the right things to give my kids a safe, happy childhood — which includes choosing the right guy to father them in the first place. And I must admit that even this young — 16 and 13 — they appreciate it and already speak nostalgically about it.

But for the past year or so, our house has become a battleground. It's been tough to learn that the best way to win the war is to retreat.

The quiet and calm have been amazing, and yes — even liberating. That's a pretty big burden to haul around all those years, after all. It's a relief to start setting it down.

And concentrate on my work, where — aha! — the same potholed road has left me jarred. The last proposal I sent my agent was 45 pages long, (all of it in present tense: She does this and he sees that), and it came back redlined like a junior high book report.

Oh, I could wrestle back control if I wanted to. After all, she works for me and not the other way around. But if I truly want to move on to this next passage, I've got to be willing to let other skilled professionals take over the wheel and read the map once in a while. Otherwise, I might not ever get to my ultimate destination.

And that's what it's all about, really. We have to admit to ourselves that our way may not always be the best way. We have to be willing to share responsibility now and then. Have to, in fact, realize that everything in life is not necessarily OUR responsibility after all, that we can sometimes trust others to partner it, whether it be a teenager who has to decide whether or not to drag-race down College Avenue (and learn the lesson if he makes the wrong choice), or a business associate who may have a better idea.

Only then can we control freaks ever feel truly free. Shoot, we might even take a ride on the Tilt-a-Whirl, you never know.

Letters to the Editor

Thanks

Dear Editor:

This is a letter commending some of the business people in Snyder.

I would like to thank the managers of Don's Value King and Everybody's Thriftway for donating fruit to our Central Elementary students as part of a nutrition awareness lecture on Oct. 5 and 11.

Hearing about good nutrition is one thing, seeing it and tasting it is another. Thank you for your support of our school system.

Tax fund

Dear Editor:

Recently, we read in the paper that the City of Snyder had donated to the BCD, the DCOS or the chamber, or someone who is just hunting ways to spend the taxpayers' money, $60,000 from the hotel/motel tax. And in just a few days, we read that the City of Snyder was going to go up on the water, sewer service and the trash collection fees.

Now, if the city had all that money that it just couldn't find anything to spend that money on, why not reduce these things, rather than increase them?

It appears to me that the city is "bitin' the hands that are feedin' them." They want more businesses to go in, and more people to move here, but if they take a good look at the taxes and the rate we have to pay for utilities and services, I can see why they would be hesitant to settle here. I couldn't, in all good conscience, urge anyone to move here. I wonder if they ever wonder why there are so many vacant buildings and houses.

Sincerely,
Gelene Blagg
Snyder, TX.

Tigers Lair

Dear Editor:

Budgeting and money problems had nothing to do with the 1993 Tiger's Lair being a "joke." But having a teacher who evidently had his mind on things other than teaching journalism did.

The SHS journalism teacher this year is Diane Arnold. She is not new to the job. She taught at SHS the '83-84 school year and again beginning in 1985. She resigned in April of '89 because she was due to give birth to twins in May.

When she took the job again this year, she was to begin work on Aug. 11, like all the other teachers. In June she was approached by Larry Scott, principal, and asked if she would consider finishing the 1993 yearbook, if necessary. Tom Nickell, last year's journalism teacher, had already moved to Utah.

In July, it became clear that the book wasn't going to be completed by the one student left to do it all. Though Mrs. Arnold had no connection to the high school for the previous four years, she consented to finish it so the students would have a book. She began working on it July 13 and finished on July 23. A representative from Taylor Publishing Co. (the print shop) helped her on two of those days.

The yearbook was supposed to be 208 pages. When Mrs. Arnold went to the high school to "finish" it, she found that only 42 pages had been completed and sent to the plant. She had to cut 80 pages because there were no stories, captions or pictures.

As far as the class sections were concerned, many of those photos were nowhere to be found. The sophomore and freshman sections had not even been started. She searched through boxes and found some of the pictures that were missing.

She also attempted to call many kids on the phone asking them if they had a picture that could be used. (Many could not be reached due to wrong phone numbers on file.) She included every picture she could find.

All of this should have been completed before Mr. Nickell left town. This was his responsibility and he should have seen to it that his students got the job done.

If this were my yearbook, I'm sure I would feel cheated and disappointed, also. Your yearbook should be something you can be proud of and enjoy looking at years down the road. I feel sorry for the students who were expecting something great and ended up with a "junior high annual in a Velveeta box."

I'm sure SHS students can count on this year being different. Mrs. Arnold is not only professional and disciplined, but she enjoys her work and her students. She gives the best and expects her students to do the same.

She has 16 years experience in journalism — six as a student, five working on a nationally published newspaper and five years teaching. She gives her students a knowledge of what journalism is really all about.

I think they are lucky and their parents should feel confident that their kids have a dedicated teacher who knows her job and does it well. I'm certain that the '93-94 Tiger's Tales and Tiger's Lair will be a welcome change.

NAFTA

Dear Editor,

I read the letter from Ms. Rebecca Boyd in the Oct. 4 issue of the Snyder Daily News criticizing my earlier letter on the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) with great interest.

In her letter, Ms. Boyd listed several criticism that have been made against NAFTA. I have researched these and other criticisms and found that they are either incorrect or misleading.

In order...that citizens of the 17th District of Texas can form their opinion based on the facts, I am responding to each criticism.

Criticism: The fast track procedure expired on June 1, 1993, and a extension was slipped into the budget reconciliation bill.

Fact: False. After an extensive public debate, Congress passed legislation on May 23, 1991, providing Fast Track procedures for any North American Free Trade Agreement signed by the President before May 31, 1993. President Bush signed NAFTA on Dec. 17, 1992; consequently, Fast Track procedures were available for NAFTA and no additional legislation was necessary.

Ms. Boyd may be referring to separate legislation earlier this year providing Fast Track authority for GATT negotiations.

Criticism: U.S. tariffs will be eliminated quicker than Mexican tariffs and the U.S. market will be open earlier than the Mexican market.

Fact: The reason that U.S. tariffs reach zero earlier is because they are so much lower already, without NAFTA. We currently have an unfair trading relationship with Mexico. While NAFTA does not level the playing field as quickly as I would like, defeating NAFTA will ensure that it will remain unbalanced.

The United States has a relatively open market, with tariffs averaging 4 percent. Mexico has a relatively closed market, with tariffs averaging 10 percent. If we defeat NAFTA, this will continue.

Criticism: NAFTA will open U.S. roads to Mexican drivers who do not meet U.S. safety standards.

Fact: False. Mexican trucks and drivers are subject to all U.S. safety standards from the moment they enter the United States. Nothing in NAFTA exempts Mexican or Canadian vehicles or drivers from U.S. standards.

Criticism: Pesticides that are illegal in the U.S. will be allowed on fruits and vegetables imported from Mexico. Meat will not have to meet the same USDA standards.

Fact: False. Carol Browner, administrator of the EPA, responds that NAFTA would not change current law, which prohibits fruits and vegetables that have pesticide residue or otherwise do not meet U.S. standards from entering the country. Similarly, imported meat would be subject to U.S standards and inspections.

health and safety standards...as long as it shows a scientific basis for those standards and treats domestic products the same way as imports.

Criticism: When trade talks began, no one in the Commerce Department's Mexico Office spoke Spanish and 95 percent of the Mexican documents were never translated.

Fact: False. According to the U.S. Trade representative, virtually every member of the commerce office had some knowledge of Spanish and several members were fluent. All necessary documents were translated. The person who originally made this charge was not a negotiator and later admitted that the paper that included these charges was "replete with factual and legal errors."

Criticism: The U.S. would lose $200 million from eliminating tariffs on Mexican imports.

Fact: Although the Congressional Budget Office found that NAFTA would reduce revenues to the Treasury from tariffs (which are in effect a tax on American consumers) by $200 million a year, the same study found that NAFTA would increase the U.S. Gross Domestic Product by as much as $15 billion a year.

Criticism: U.S. taxpayers will be liable for a portion of the costs of environmental cleanup along the Rio Grande.

Fact: These problems will continue to exist whether or not NAFTA is enacted; in fact, virtually all of the leading environmental groups believe NAFTA will improve environmental conditions along the border.

It will benefit Americans living in border communities affected by pollution. And, it will create more jobs in the U.S. because American companies lead the world in environmental technology. The cost for cleanup will be small and will be paid by spending cuts in other programs. Not by increased taxes or deficit spending.

I reiterate that I will not support NAFTA if the questions raised are not answered to my satisfaction. Obviously, I have not seen any factual evidence to convince me that NAFTA is harmful to America.

Defeating NAFTA will not create jobs, control immigration or clean the environment. Only if we face our economic challenges head on through steps such as enacting NAFTA will America have a growing, productive economy.

Sincerely yours,
Charles W. Stenholm

Child Welfare

Dear Editor:

In reference to a recent letter to the editor from Mr. Randy Davis, I wish to offer some information to the public concerning the Scurry County Child Welfare Board, its responsibilities and activities.

In 1992, eight new board members were appointed to the Child Welfare Board by the commissioners' court. With only one holdover board member and eight rookies, it was imperative that we engage in a crash course as to what our responsibilities were and to make solid plans for the future in view of the declining economy.

Shortly after beginning work, we informed the court of the need to screen persons who requested medical help for their children, and we put controls on allowances paid to children who were in conservatorship of the county. Both actions ultimately resulted in reduced budget requirements.

Next, in an effort to better serve all needy children of Scurry County, the board moved and reorganized the Child Welfare clothing room. It is now well-stocked with [illegible] and other supplies. Those needing this assistance may call the Children's Protective Service Office at 573-1161.

Mr. Davis stated "that last month, $3,000 in Scurry County Child Welfare Board budget money was returned unused to the general fund." I believe Mr. Davis was referring to the budget for 1994 which is $3,400 less than the budget for 1993.

Looking at recent years, we find that in 1991, the actual tax dollars spent for child welfare by the county were $23,813, some $5,363 over the $18,450 budget. In 1992, $18,106 of an $18,450 budget was used, leaving $344 unexpensed. As of Aug. 31, the board has expensed $8,904 (51%) of the $17,400 budget for 1993.

The county budget primarily funds medical care for needy children of the county who have no other means to secure proper care, and clothing allowances for children in conservatorship of the county. Other children are also helped with clothing and other necessities on an as-needed basis. In 1994, $12,000 of the $14,000 budget is for medical and child care expenses.

In the past, many things were funded by the county that were not included in the Child Welfare budget. In an effort to help meet some of these unbudgeted expenses, the board embarked upon its own fund raising campaign.

In June 1992, the board initiated a plan that would allow jurors the option of donating their jury fees to the Scurry County Child Welfare Board. Upon approval by the commissioners' court and Judge Gene Dulaney, the board set the project in motion and collected its first fees in August 1992. At the end of one year the board has collected $2,604 in jury fees.

In August 1992, the board secured donations for six new car seats for the CPS Department; in November and December, a large quantity of new merchandise and $400 was received to help provide Christmas for our foster children; mailers sent out in bank statements in November brought in funds from as far away as Maryland, and one financial institution continues to support the board monthly.

Because of the generosity of individuals, businesses, schools, churches and organizations, the Child Welfare Board has taken in $6,920 since June 1992. Expenditures total $5,247 and include such things as rent and set-up of clothing and supply room, board supplies, car seats, fair booth expenses including information and merchandise giveaways, balance of Christmas gifts for foster children above that donated by the community, special clothing needs of children in the community who are not in conservatorship of the county, Child Abuse Awareness Month materials and advertising and special needs of foster children such as football uniforms, cleats, band instruments and church camp fees.

Other expenditures include cost of birth certificates, Spanish courses for two CPS workers, notary public fees, gifts from the PAL program, and our share of the expense of an area Christmas party for foster children held in Sweetwater. Last, but not least, a large amount of school supplies was purchased and given to all Scurry County elementary schools in August. These supplies will be distributed throughout the year by school principals on an "as need" basis.

As far as county funds being used for "the prevention of child abuse" as stated by Mr. Davis, no funds were budgeted for 1993 for this purpose. Since "prevention" can only be accomplished through proper education and desire of adults not to abuse children, the Child Welfare Board works diligently to educate the public concerning child abuse during Child Abuse Awareness Month. All expenses associated with this program are paid for with board funds.

The board feels it has come a long way in its effort to help the underpriviledged children of Scurry County, but our success has been made possible only by the generosity of a community who chose to give in order to "help children who cannot help themselves," WE THANK YOU.

Sincerely,
Nelda Huddleston, Treasurer
Child Welfare Board

Chater trades university presidency for SS top spot

WASHINGTON (AP) — Shirley Sears Chater, a Texas university president, was sworn in Friday as Social Security's 12th commissioner.

She takes over the government's largest domestic program after a yearlong vacancy at the top of the Social Security Administration.

Chater, who comes to Social Security from Texas Woman's University in Denton, was confirmed by the Senate late Thursday.

Chater, 61, promised at her confirmation hearing that she would work to restore the public's waning confidence in Social Security.

"The commissioner of Social Security must be an active, ardent and forceful voice in educating the American public as to the value of Social Security protection to individuals and families, now and in the future," she said.

Chater has also vowed to be an advocate for the elderly and disabled.

Lawmakers, especially Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., have criticized the Clinton administration for not moving more quickly to fill the commissioner's seat.

Snyder FFA'ers successfully compete in fair stock show

Snyder FFA members participated in the Permian Basin Fair in Odessa recently with success.

Marcus Belew, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Belew of Fluvanna, exhibited the heavy weight finewool lamb, 4th place finewool lamb and the reserve champion finewool lamb.

The lamb show started with southdown breed, finewool, crossbred and medium wool lambs. Belew also did "an outstanding job of showing two young blackface lambs in the medium wool show," according to Bob Hand, a vocational agriculture instructor at the high school.

The exhibitors showed their lambs to Rex Stultz of Paint Rock who served as judge, and points earned from placings were counted toward year-end final standings with the Texas Club Lamb Association.

Exhibiting a breeding heifer was Jeremy House, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry House of Snyder. Jeremy exhibited the heifer he will be taking to the Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo in the spring. House exhibited his registered Maine-Anjou heifer to first place in her class, and champion Maine-Anjou heifer.

When all breed champions were gathered House led Miss Smith Bilt to the reserve grand champion honors overall.

Golden K sets annual turkey meal

The Golden K Kiwanis Club will host a turkey dinner in the Senior Center on Oct. 17. The public is invited. Tickets may be purchased in advance from club members or at the door.

Proceeds will go for club projects, many of which benefit the center. Membership in the Golden K is open to men and women 60 years of age and older and prospective new members are invited to attend the club's noon luncheon meeting in the center any Tuesday.

42 will be the feature of Game Day Monday in the Senior Center. Play will begin at 9:30 a.m.

Representatives from the Social Security Administration will be in the center Tuesday. Their hours will be from 10 a.m. to noon and from 1 p.m. to 2 p.m.

Barbara Tune will present a musical program in the center's dining room at 11:40 a.m. Wednesday. The Kitchen Band will go to Snyder Oaks Care Center for a program at 10 a.m. Wednesday.

Old favorite songs will be sung in the "olio" starting at 11:15 a.m. Thursday. A new group, the Senior Strings, will give their first performance at 11 a.m. Friday. The Sunshine Choir will meet for rehearsal at 10 a.m. Friday.

The Center's Pool Association will meet at 10 a.m. Wednesday to elect officers for the coming year. A double-elimination 8 ball tournament is being planned in November.

Senior citizens are handling reservations for the Ritz Community Theatre production of Barefoot in the Park, and reservations may be made by calling the center at 573-4035 between 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Performances are at 8 p.m. on Oct. 11, 14 and 18 and at 2:30 p.m. on Oct. 10 and 17.

A dinner theatre is planned at 7 p.m. on Oct. 16 but tickets for that evening must be paid for and picked up by Oct. 14, at the chamber of commerce office.

Local hospital adds speech-language pathologist

LORETTA LEE

Loretta Lee, M.S., CCC-SLP, is now offering speech-language pathlogy services at Cogdell Memorial Hospital, according to Tim Lancaster, hospital CE

Mrs. Lee holds a Master of Science degree in speech-language pathology, a certificate of clinical competence, and a Texas license in speech-language pathology.

Mrs. Lee, whose office is in Room 178 in the CMH Speciality Clinic area, currently has office hours on Monday, Wednesday and Friday mornings; but is available for consultations or referrals at any time.

She also works through the CMH Home Health Agency to provide speech therapy in private homes. She is a Medicare approved therapist, and her services are covered by most private insurers.

Prior to coming to Snyder, Mrs. Lee maintained a private practice in Midland for 15 years, serving communicatively impaired persons of all ages. She is experienced in the treatment of all types of communication disorders, such as language delay, articulation disorders, stuttering, voice disorders, aphasia (language loss after a stroke), and dysphagia (slurred speech due to a neurological impairment).

While in Midland, Mrs. Lee provided services for MHMR and Texas Rehabilitation Commission, as well as contracting with several nursing homes and home health agencies to provide speech therapy. She also provided vision, hearing, and speech screenings to day care facilities and pre-schools.

Mrs. Lee earned a BS in speech and hearing therapy from Abilene Christian University, and an MS in speech pathology at the University of Oklahoma Health Science Center, Oklahoma City.

Professional associations include the American Speech-Language Association, Texas Speech-Language-Hearing Association, West Texas Speech and Hearing Association, South Plains Speech-Language-Hearing Association.

She is a past-president of the West Texas speech and Hearing Association, served for three years as professional coordinator of the Stroke Club of Midland (American Heart Association), and for [illegible] two years as the only non-physician professional at the Specialty Clinic of Permian General Hospital in Andrews. She is listed in Who's Who of Health Professional.

Almost a Snyder native, Mrs. Lee moved here with her parents, Lester and Geneva Bryce, when she was two years old. Her parents still reside here, and her father is [illegible] graduated from Snyder High School in 1968.

She and her husband, Lanny, Snyder chief of police, have two children. LaTrisha, 14, is a freshman at SHS, and Lyndell, 10, is in the fifth grade at Northeast Elementary.
