U.S. backs off revolt

White House refuses to aid Iraqi rebels

■ Decision draws increasing criticism, but analysts conclude that a victory by either group would lead to an unstable government in Baghdad.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration refused on Friday to intervene to help Iraqi rebels fighting Saddam Hussein, even to the extent of trying to limit civilian bloodshed.

The U.S. decision to stand by is drawing increasing criticism, but administration officials said intervening could have the unwanted effect of leading to a protracted American occupation.

The United States has little to gain by aiding either Kurdish rebels in the north or pro-Iran Shi'ite rebels in the South, despite President Bush's call for Iraqis to overthrow Saddam, said officials who spoke on the condition of anonymity.

U.S. analysts have concluded that a victory by either group would lead to an unstable, divided government in Baghdad and make it more likely substantial numbers of American troops would have to stay for a prolonged period, the officials said.

White House spokesman Roman Popadiuk said Bush regrets the suffering from Saddam's violent efforts to put down the insurrections. However, he said, "the issue of internal unrest in Iraq is an issue that has to be settled between the government and the people of Iraq."

"We are operating in Iraq on the basis of the U.N. mandate," Popadiuk said. "Once that mandate is totally fulfilled, U.S. troops will be coming out. We have no plans for keeping our troops in Iraq or in the gulf region one day longer than necessary."

The White House said Friday night that national security adviser Brent Scowcroft had made an unannounced trip to the Middle East this week, but it de-

Atwater dies at 40

WASHINGTON — Lee Atwater, the fervent political strategist whose take-no-prisoners tactics helped propel George Bush to the presidency, died at age 40 on Friday of complications from a brain tumor. Bush, who had promoted Atwater to the chairmanship of the Republican Party in the wake of that 1988 landslide, said he was heartsick at the death of the young GOP leader. "Lee was a very close friend to my sons and daughter as well as to Barbara and me. He suffered a lot," Bush said. Atwater, who leaves a wife and three young daughters, died shortly after dawn at George Washington University Hospital. He was sticken just over a year ago, at the height of a meteoric career he began as a summer intern for conservative Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C. Ron Brown, the current Democratic chairman, said the flag at Democratic headquarters was lowered to half-staff.

General apologizes

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia — Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf said Friday that contrary to his comments in a TV interview, he agreed "100 percent" with President Bush's decision to halt the Gulf War. The four-star commander apologized for his "poor choice of words" in questioning the president's judgment about calling a cease-fire. Bush told reporters there was "no need for any apology" as he left the White House for the weekend. "He's got my full support," Bush said before boarding a helicopter for Camp David, Md.

JERUSALEM — Black-robed Arab priests and a scattering of Christian pilgrims carried wooden crosses Friday along the path Jesus Christ followed to his death, and they prayed at the church where he was cruxified. In the Philippines, a dozen people — including two men serving life sentences for murder — were nailed to crosses as thousands of tourists and religious devotees watched. Pope John Paul II, hoisting a 5-foot wooden cross, led a torchlight procession through the Roman Colosseum at the Vatican on Friday night in a re-enactment of Jesus' walk to his crucifixion.

Index surge may indicate recession's end in sight

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government said Friday that its chief economic forecasting gauge reversed course in February and surged upward by 1.1 percent, the biggest gain in nearly three years.

Private economists called the rise in the Commerce Department's Index of Leading Economic Indicators the clearest signal yet that better days are ahead for the U.S. economy, although there was disagreement about just how soon the recession will be over.

Some analysts said they believed the downturn is already over. They noted a second government report Friday showing that sales of new homes jumped 16.2 percent in February, the biggest advance in nearly five years.

An upturn in housing normally leads the economy out of a recession and many analysts said this recovery will be no different.

Mercury levels in Pecos River bear watching

By Joan Goessl
Associated Press writer

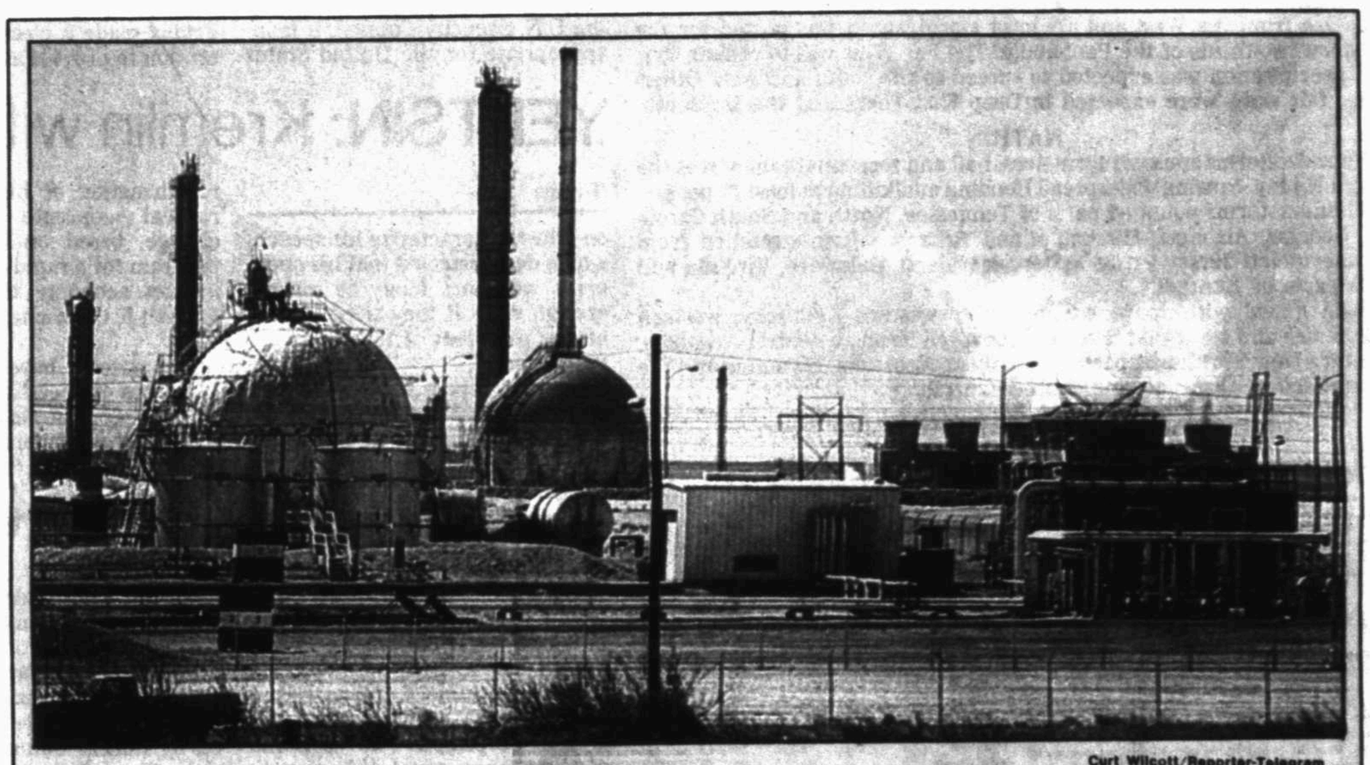

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — Anglers can continue fishing and swimmers can keep taking dips. Boaters shouldn't be deterred from paddling around, nor should campers worry about pitching their tents.

But a word of warning: Exercise caution when it comes to eating the fish.

High levels of mercury found in fish in the Santa Rosa Reservoir along the Pecos River have prompted the state Environment Department to issue guidelines to help people decide which fish to eat and which to toss back.

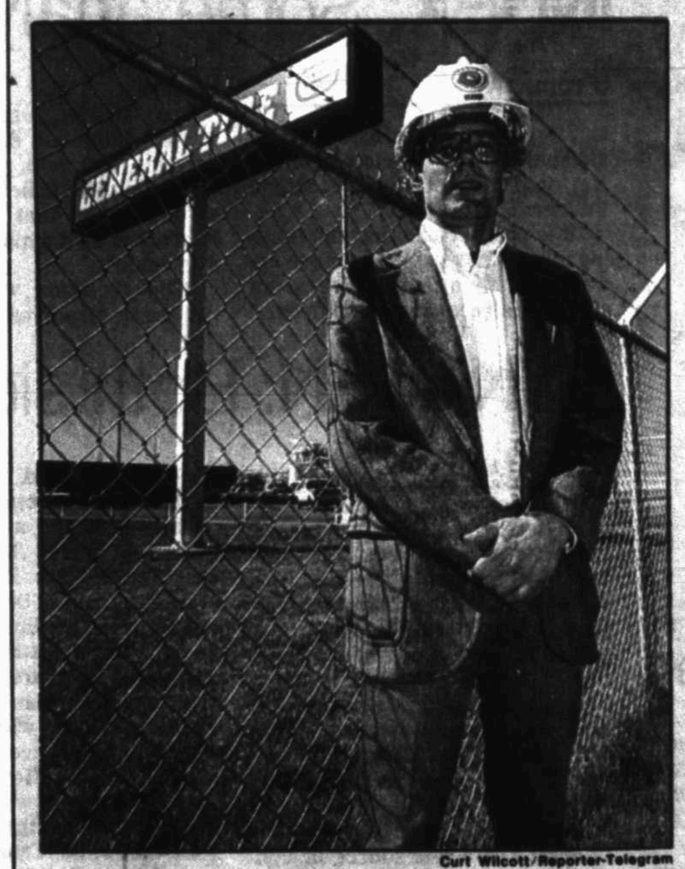

And scientists are concerned that mercury discovered in fish at Santa Rosa could contaminate the Pecos as far south

ODESSA — The Dynagen petrochemical company and the Texas Attorney General's Environmental Protection Division seem optimistic of a settlement before the May 29 trial over Dynagen's alleged violations of the Texas Clean Air Act.

Even so, David Preister, assistant attorney general in the Environmental Protection Division, on Friday continued to prepare his case against Dynagen in a four-hour tour of the Odessa-based plant.

Tim Gorman, Dynagen's plant manager, played host.

Preister, who said Gorman is "a very good plant manager," said he honestly believes that Gorman "fully intends to bring Dynagen into compliance with the environmental laws."

"But," Preister said, "I also recognize that there are some very major and expensive (multi-million dollar) decisions that have to be made. And those decisions are made above him. They are made somewhere in Akron, Ohio."

Dynagen is a subsidiary of General Tire & Rubber Company, which is headquartered in Akron.

"Gorman needs the commitment from the top-executive office in Akron, Ohio, to get the funding to bring the plant into compliance," Preister said.

And Preister said he has no idea "how much money Dynagen saved by not being in compliance all these years."

Law would prohibit phone solicitation by computer

By Judi Hunt
Hearst News Service

SEATTLE — A doctor in Chicago got a message on his pager. He returned the call only to discover he had reached a computer that was selling diet pills. Thinking he'd gotten a wrong number, the physician hung up and called again. Later he learned that the two calls had cost him $6 — the number had a 976 prefix.

That won't happen again if U.S. Rep. Jolene Unsoeld, D-Wash., has her way. She has introduced legislation in Congress that would prohibit commercial telephone solicitation by computer.

Unsoeld calls it the "people-should-talk-to-people bill," and says that phone lines belong to human beings, not computers.

"A lot of people are bothered by phone solicitors of any kind," the Olympia, Wash., Democrat said. "But while this bill does not protect us from all of these solicitors, it

Yeltsin assails authorities for seeking 'stagnation'

MOSCOW (NYT) — Flush with the victory of his followers against the Kremlin's strong show of force a day ago, Boris N. Yeltsin assailed the central authorities Friday for seeking to restore the "period of stagnation" that preceded perestroika.

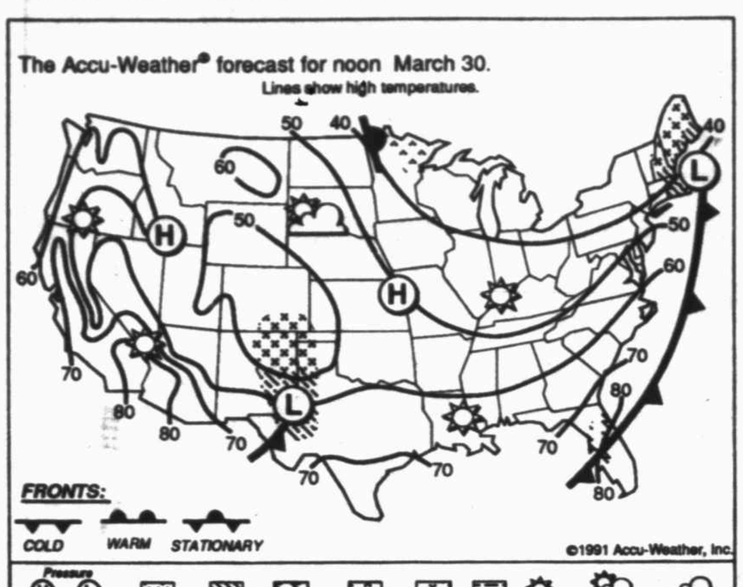

Yeltsin, president of the Russian republic, issued the attack in a 90-minute report to a special session of the republic's Parliament. The meeting resumed Friday after the Kremlin withdrew the cordon of military vehicles and troops that was placed around the city center on Thursday in an attempt to block a demonstration by Yeltsin followers who took to the streets anyway, rallying peacefully in a crowd of more than 100,000.

After that setback in the streets for President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, Yeltsin's chief target, the contest Friday featured intensive parliamentary scuffles between Yeltsin's "Democratic Russia" bloc and its Communist-led opposition.

The voting seesawed between the two sides, with both scoring some tactical victories. Yeltsin's most significant triumph came in a vote

Sunday is expected to be mostly cloudy, with a high in the low 60s.

Friday's high was 66, compared to the date's record of 95 set in 1963. Friday's low was 33. The record low for today's date is 17 degrees, set in 1987.

STATE

Skies over Texas cleared Friday as high pressure built into the area from the Central Plains. However, northerly winds at 10 to 15 miles an hour continued to spread cool air, keeping temperatures from rising too quickly.

Most readings were in the 50s and 60s, with afternoon extremes ranging from 52 degrees at Dalhart to 84 in Brownsville and McAllen.

Clouds lingered over the Panhandle and South Plains and high clouds covered South Texas. But blue sky appeared over most of the rest of the state.

Forecasters expected temperatures to remain on the chilly side Friday night under mostly fair skies. However, cloudiness was expected to increase from the West and a winter storm watch was posted for the western two-thirds of the Panhandle. The Far West was to remain dry, but precipitation was expected to spread to the south and east. Otherwise, fair skies were expected in Deep East Texas and the far south.

NATION

Thunderstorms spun off tornadoes, hail and torrential rain across the South Friday, causing widespread flooding and killing at least 14 people.

Thunderstorms pounded parts of Tennessee, North and South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi and Arkansas. Rain stretched from southern New Jersey across eastern Maryland, Delaware, Virginia and into parts of Kentucky.

Rain mixed with snow extended over western Kentucky, western Tennessee and southeast Missouri. Snow fell in north-central Arkansas, western New York state, parts of Michigan, Nebraska, Wyoming and the mountains of Colorado and southeast Utah.

MERCURY: Guidelines issued

(From 1A)

as Red Bluff Reservoir, which straddles the New Mexico-Texas state line.

Jim Piatt, chief of the Environment Department's Surface Water Quality Bureau in Santa Fe, says every reservoir along the main stream is potentially at risk.

Although the department has not officially issued guidelines for eating fish from reservoirs downstream from the Santa Rosa Reservoir, Piatt says he believes prudence is a wise move, especially given the unknown mercury levels in the other reservoirs.

Water from the Santa Rosa is routinely transferred to other reservoirs downstream for irrigation, opening the door for what he calls the real possibility of additional contamination in the Fort Sumner, Brantley and Red Bluff reservoirs.

For that reason, Piatt has recommended that the same consumption guidelines issued for Santa Rosa Reservoir be used in deciding whether to eat fish from the other reservoirs downstream.

"Mercury is not an element that we tend to play games with," Piatt says. "This is a nasty one."

Mercury, which builds up in living tissue, becomes concentrated over time. Ingesting too much of the heavy metal can cause kidney disease and damage to the eyes, respiratory tract or brain. Symptoms include shakiness, tunnel vision and loss of coordination.

The Environment Department advises people to steer clear of eating walleye or bass from the Santa Rosa Reservoir that are 17 inches or longer, catfish 23 inches or longer and carp 24 inches or longer. Pregnant women are discouraged from eating any fish from the reservoir.

"I strongly recommend that people follow those guidelines for all the reservoirs," Piatt says. "We simply don't know what's out there."

The source of the mercury has not been determined, but some scientists figure it's a naturally occurring phenomenon.

Bob Jenks, assistant chief of the Habitat, Environment and Lands Division at the state Department of Game and Fish, says he believes the mercury is tied to the region's geology.

Local/Area Reports

Fire continues

Staff Report

ODESSA — A fire that began Thursday morning at the city landfill continued to burn Friday night, Odessa Fire Department officials said.

The blaze, fanned by winds that gusted up to 47 mph Friday morning, probably began Thursday around 10:20 a.m. when someone dumped smoldering debris into the landfill, officials said.

The fire has not spread beyond the landfill, which is located about a mile north of Kermit Highway on FM 1936, officials said.

Crews from four fire trucks continued to fight the blaze Friday night. Fire department dispatchers said they did not know how long firefighters expected the fire to burn.

Man pleads guilty

A man indicted in connection with an ongoing LSD investigation in Midland County pleaded guilty this week to using a telephone to facilitate the distribution of a controlled substance.

Kirk Thomas Morrow, 19, entered the plea Thursday before U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton III, Assistant U.S. Attorney Tom Beery said.

Morrow, who is being held in the Midland County jail on an unrelated burglary charge, faces up to four years in prison and up to a $250,000 fine on the LSD conviction.

Morrow used a telephone to make air-travel arrangements for a man who attempted to smuggle LSD into Midland from Albuquerque, N.M., Beery said.

The man, 21-year-old Kyle Lee Harris, was sentenced earlier this month to five years in federal prison on LSD distribution charges. He was arrested Sept. 22, 1990, at Midland International Airport. Beery said Morrow, who was at the airport to meet Harris, was detained but not immediately arrested.

Federal and local authorities have been cooperating in an investigation into LSD usage in Midland County since last fall.

Car strikes boy

A 7-year-old boy was injured Friday when a car struck his bicycle as the boy was riding it in the 3300 block of Tanner Drive shortly before 6 p.m., police reports show.

The boy, Micah Grimes of Midland, was being held overnight for observation at Midland Memorial Hospital.

Additional details of the accident were not available from police at press time.

Armed robbery

Two women were injured Friday in an armed robbery in which they were apparently struck with tire irons, police and hospital officials said.

The robbery occurred at about 8:10 p.m. when two men entered the Phillips 66 gas station and convenience store at 3006 Garden City Highway, an officer at the scene said.

The men, each armed with a tire iron, struck two clerks working in the store before fleeing on foot with an undetermined amount of money from the cash register, reports indicated.

One of the clerks, 33-year-old Reba Chambliss of Midland, was being held overnight for observation at Midland Memorial Hospital, a hospital official said.

Information on the second victim, identified by police only as a 27-year-old woman, was not immediately available. A hospital official said the woman was being treated in the emergency room late Friday night.

Police were searching for two males, both in their 20s, in connection with the robbery. Witnesses said the first man was about 6 feet tall with a slender build, wearing black pants and a white shirt. The second man was described as slender, about 5 feet 7 inches tall, and wearing black pants and a striped shirt.

REJECTS: White House refuses to intervene

(From 1A)

clined to say where he went or what he did.

The U.S. decision merely to watch the carnage from the sidelines is being attacked by human-rights organizations.

Andrew Whitley, of Middle East Watch, said: "As the occupation of Iraq was an action authorized by the U.N. Security Council, it is inappropriate for the United States to stand back on a temporary cease-fire line and to allow abuses on a widespread scale to take place a short distance away from them without intervening."

Whitley said the United States should do more to provide humanitarian aid to civilians and to protect them from abuse, both in Iraq and in Kuwait.

However, the administration on Friday made it clear it had no intention to provide assistance to rebels fighting Saddam, despite a direct appeal for help from the Kurdistan Front.

In a request for U.S. help, two Kurdish leaders told Bush in a statement:

"You personally called upon the Iraqi people to rise up against Saddam Hussein's brutal dictatorship. They have now risen and are confronting the might of Saddam's tyranny."

The two leaders, Jalal Talabani and Masoud Barzani, asked the United States to intervene to prevent Saddam from using "heavy weapons of mass destruction against civilians," including fixed-wing aircraft.

Popadiuk, while saying he was not familiar with details of the Kurdish request, declared that the administration would not come to the aid of rebels because that would go beyond what the United Nations resolutions authorize.

YELTSIN: Kremlin withdraws military vehicles, troops on how to characterize his speech, which demonstrated that his opponents were not likely to muster enough votes if they tried to oust him as president of the republic's Parliament.

(From 1A)

Yeltsin's report was a sustained attack on the Communists and the central government and a broad reaffirmation of his program of radical economic and political change, based on the "500-day" program for a rapid transition to a market economy that President Mikhail S. Gorbachev rejected last fall.

The speech, however, gave no timetable or specific plan for putting the programs in effect, underscoring the fundamental fact of the political contest in Moscow — that Yeltsin has considerable popularity but not the levers to achieve his will, while Gorbachev holds huge formal powers but lacks the mandate to wield them.

Yeltsin did not directly reiterate his call last month for Gorbachev's resignation, but the demand was implicit in his insistence that the existing central government had demonstrated itself incapable of any significant reform.

"The objective results of the past six years demonstrate that what we have been witnessing is not perestroika, but rather the last phase of the period of stagnation," he declared, using the phrase associated with the 18-year rule of Leonid I. Brezhnev.

SOLICIT: Some irate customers aren't waiting

would ensure that when we are bothered, we're bothered by a real person, not a machine."

Some consumers are so ticked off that they aren't waiting for laws to be passed. Two thousand of them have spent $15 each to subscribe to Private Citizen Inc., a for-profit consumer organization that works for consumer privacy against telemarketing companies.

Consumers fill out a form authorizing the organization to act as their agent. Private Citizen, headed by Robert Bulmash, in Naperville, Ill., a Chicago suburb, compiles a directory of the people it represents and sends it to more than 750 telemarketing companies. The telemarketers are told that the consumers don't want to be solicited by telephone, either by a human or by a computer.

"If they ignore us and call our clients anyway, we then charge them for the use of our clients' personal time and property – their telephone," said Bulmash.

Subscribers have collected money as a result of those billings, although some have had to go to court to get even minuscule amounts while others have settled out of court, he said.

INDEX: Some analysts believe downturn is over in the past two months," said David Seiders, chief economist of the National Association of Home Builders.

(From 1A)

"It is pretty clear that the housing market has started to move upward and that should give us an end to the recession by midyear," he said.

Lynn Reaser, senior economist at First Interstate Bancorp of Los Angeles, was even more optimistic, saying she believed there was a good chance that February will be marked as the month the recession ended.

"This recession was caused by two major negatives, a tight monetary policy by the Federal Reserve and the Persian Gulf War which caused consumer confidence to plummet," she said. "Those two negatives have now been lifted and we are seeing the signs of a turnaround."

But Richard Rahn, chief economist of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, said he believed the current recession might well last into the fall. He noted that the leading index often turns up well ahead of an end to the recession. It had started to rise a full nine months before the end of 1981-82.

"Although some parts of the economy, such as housing, are bouncing back, the overall economy continues to decline," he said.

DYNAGEN: Both sides optimistic of a settlement

(From 1A)

Dynagen, which went into operation here in the 1950s, produces a synthetic styrene-butadiene rubber (SBR) for use in the manufacturing of tires and industrial and household rubber products.

General Tire, the world's No. 4 tire maker, is owned by a West German company, Continental A.G., which purchased the American company in 1987 for $628 million. General Tire was founded in 1915.

The Odessa Dynagen plant is General Tire's sole source of synthetic rubber, which it furnishes to other tire makers. Dynagen, built on a 300-acre tract just south of Odessa off Grandview Avenue, employees 230 workers.

Since 1982, the Dynagen plant has been strafed with 167 complaints of foul odors emanating mainly from the plant's solar ponds for the evaporation of waste-water, dryer-oven stacks, and from the afterburner stacks of the solid-waste incinerator, which was shut down in 1989.

The lawsuit against Dynagen was filed in late 1989 in an effort "to protect the public's right to clean air" and to assert "the public's right to protection" under the Texas Clear Air Act," Preister said.

"All Texans are entitled to clean air regardless of where they live."

On Friday, Preister, armed with a video camera, another assistant Attorney General, Burgess Jackson, and Texas Air Control Board investigator Dr. Neil Carman and Alice Cone toured the Dynagen plant. Gorman accompanied them.

While Dynagen awaits its May 29 trial in Judge Tryon Lewis's 161st Texas State District Court here, Gorman said that Dynagen is "aggressively working toward the reaching of a settlement rather than going to court."

However, Gorman said, "There are no guarantees when you are in negotiations. We are going to put forth our best efforts to try to reach settlement without having to go to the courthouse."

All the while, Dynagen's attorney, James E. "Jim" Smith of Houston's Baker & Botts law firm, has been "courteous" to Preister. But Preister said that he has not received anything concrete in regard to the settlement.

Gorman noted that Dynagen has "spent several millions of dollars in new equipment" toward cleaning up the plant's environment, reducing air pollution and complying with the Texas Clean Air Act.

That money, he said, "has been directed specifically toward environmental activities as opposed to traditional capital plans that are more production-manufacturing oriented."

Dynagen commissioned engineering studies for the installation of a waste-water treatment plant to replace the solar ponds, which get laden with sludge. The company put in dryer stacks and made modifications to other equipment.

"We do want to be a good corporate citizen," Gorman said of Dynagen. "I'm trying to manage this plant in an environmentally sound manner. I have personally," he said, "and I believe my management team has cooperated in every investigation" by the Texas Air Control Board. "I don't think we've ever been accused of not cooperating with them."

Gorman acknowledged that there is "a lot of things that have to be done" in cleaning up the plant's operations to comply with new legislation keyed to a clean environment.

Dynagen and "a lot of other chemical-manufacturing industries are to be faced with managing their business in different ways in light of the new (environmental) legislation," he said.

Carman, who has been investigating Dynagen since 1981, said the "plant has stunk since 1980," the year in which he joined the Texas Air Control Board. "It's not as bad as it used to be. It has improved."

Even so, Carman said, the Dynagen plant is having "to play catch-up for the last 35 years of operating the plant in which they probably did not install a lot of air-pollution controls and abatement equipment until just the last few years. And that's generally true of a lot of the rubber plants in Texas."

Carman said that Dynagen's old solid-waste incineration, installed in 1973 and shut down in 1989, was a "first-generation" unit. And to modify it today for burning waste would be like "retrofitting a Model T to run in the Indianapolis 500."

All told, Dynagen has been cited with 428 violations of the Texas Clean Air Act and rules and regulation of the Texas Air Control Board. Additionally, 167 foul-air complaints against Dynagen have been filed by the residents in the neighborhood and by children and teachers in a nearby school.

Through an injunction and in the scheduled May 29 lawsuit, the state of Texas is seeking for Dynagen to cease emitting nuisance-level odors and offensive air contaminants, Carman said. Those odors and pollutants emanate from the evaporation solar ponds, rubber dryers, and various sources in the outdoor process area.

Midlander pleads guilty to concealing evidence

By David Morris
Staff Writer

A Midland man pleaded guilty Friday in federal court to concealing evidence from authorities in connection with a shooting last fall, the U.S. Attorney's Office reported.

Lonnie Joe Foster, 49, entered the plea before U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton.

Foster admitted that he did not immediately correct claims by his wife, Lois Marie Foster, 39, that she wielded the gun in a Sept. 5, 1990, shooting at the U.S. Post Office at 10000 Sloan Field.

Foster himself was the triggerman in the incident, Assistant U.S. Attorney Tom Beery said.

The attack left two people, John Ray McGraw, 43, and Glenda Sue Willman, 18, with minor injuries from flying glass and bullet fragments.

In return for Foster's guilty plea to a charge of "misprision," Beery said, prosecutors agreed to drop more-serious charges of conspiracy, assault with a deadly weapon, and use of a firearm during a violent crime.

Misprision is defined as the concealment of a felony from prosecuting authorities.

Beery said Mrs. Foster, who pleaded guilty to misprision charges earlier this week, attempted to cover up for her husband because he is ill with diabetes and a heart condition and she didn't want him to go to prison.

Both Fosters face up to three years in prison.

Beery suggested that the Fosters attacked McGraw because he was pursuing a romantic relationship and living with Ms. Willman, who is Mrs. Foster's daughter.

McGraw and Ms. Willman were sitting in the cab of a mail truck at the air terminal post office around 11 p.m. on a Wednesday night when the Fosters drove up looking for McGraw, investigators said.

Beery said the group argued before Lonnie Foster took a .22-caliber revolver out of his vehicle and fired it at the mail truck.

McGraw, a contract driver for the post office, and Ms. Willman suffered lacerations from flying glass and bullet fragments. They were treated and released at Midland Memorial Hospital.

The Fosters turned themselves over to authorities about an hour after the shooting occurred, investigators said. Mrs. Foster told a sheriff's department dispatcher when she called to report the incident that she had done the shooting, Beery said.

Lonnie Foster's sentencing is set for May 9. His wife is scheduled to be sentenced April 25.

Schwarzkopf apologizes to Bush

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf said Friday that contrary to his comments in a TV interview, he agreed "100 percent" with President Bush's decision to halt the Gulf War.

The four-star commander apologized for his "poor choice of words" in questioning the president's judgment about calling a cease-fire.

Bush told reporters there was "no need for any apology" as he left the White House for the weekend. "He's got my full support," Bush said before boarding a helicopter for Camp David, Md.

Schwarzkopf told David Frost in a television interview broadcast Wednesday night that history would second-guess Bush's decision to call a cease-fire Feb. 27. He said the truce, which took effect the next day, had opened an escape route for retreating Iraqi forces.

"Why did we stop when we did when we had them completely routed," he said in the interview. "Frankly, my recommendation had been continue the march" to "reap great destruction" on Iraq's army, he told Frost. But he added that Bush's decision to end the war was "very humane" and "courageous."

Schwarzkopf also blamed media "mudslingers" for trying to create a controversy. A popular figure whose national standing soared with the success of Operation Desert Storm, he moved quickly to make amends and heal any political wounds.

The commander of allied forces in the gulf has been reported in line for a fifth star or the job of Army chief of staff. He has also been mentioned as a potential political candidate.

Schwarzkopf told reporters in a brief meeting arranged by his public affairs officers that, "I agreed 100 percent with the decision. I thought it was a correct decision then and I think it's correct decision now."

He said the president telephoned him Thursday when he found out that "I felt very bad about it. As far as he was concerned, he knew exactly how the decisions were made. He had great confidence in me and he knew that I in no way intended to cast any dishonor or to even criticize him in any way and that made me feel great."

He said he apologized to Bush. "I said, 'I am extremely sorry for the poor choice of words on my part that in any way would result in dishonor cast upon you.' "

"He's my commander-in-chief and he said, 'I'm telling you, just forget it. It's not important.' Since he's my boss and he told me to forget it, I'm going to forget it."

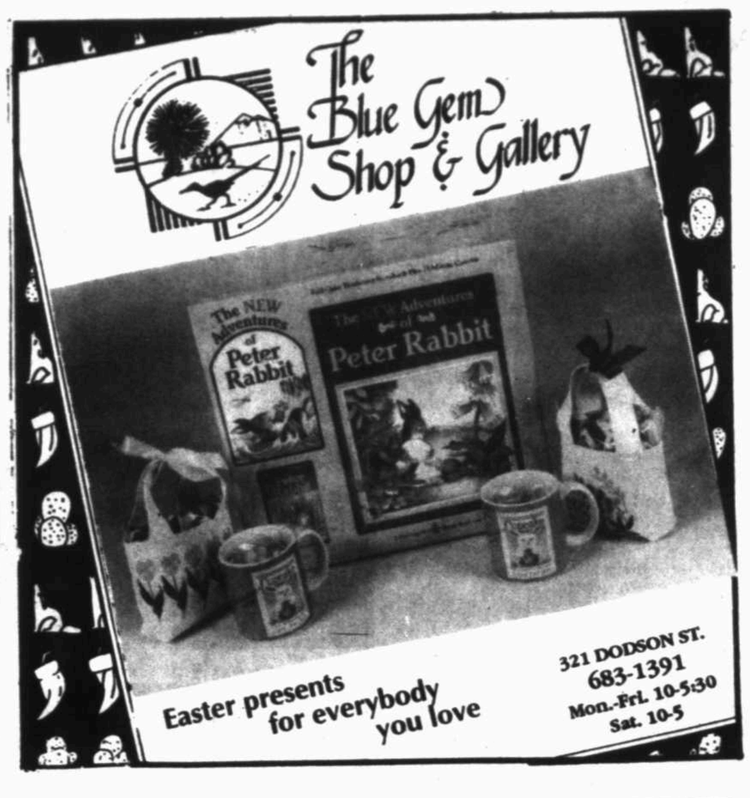

On Thursday, Bush and Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney disputed Schwarzkopf and said all had been in total agreement. "I have such high regard for Gen. Schwarzkopf that I'll let him explain what he said," Bush said.

On Friday, Schwarzkopf did just that, saying:

"If I could do the whole thing all over again, I know I would change the word 'recommend' to say 'we initially planned.' Because that's what it was. We initially planned to do one thing."

But at the time he and Gen. Colin Powell, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, were discussing the strategy, he said, they both agreed they had accomplished the military objectives.

Abortion law appeal slated

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Anti-abortion forces on Friday praised a judge's decision upholding Michigan's law restricting minors' access to abortion. Pro-choice groups called the ruling cowardly and promised an immediate appeal.

Judge Philip Schaefer said his refusal to block the law was consistent with previous state court decisions against abortion rights.

"Michigan has a long tradition of opposition to abortion, of intensely defending state statutes in light of federal interpretations, and of hallowing the relationship between parents and children," he said.

"While recent trends in California and Florida may demonstrate that states are willing to expand rights beyond the federal constitution through interpretations of state constitutions, it is equally clear that opponents of legislation of this type have an uphill battle (in Michigan) no matter how interesting or how challenging their claims may be," he wrote.

The decision coincidentally came on Good Friday, which every year provides a backdrop for anti-abortion protests such as a "stations of the cross" demonstration in Brookline, Mass. About 100 protesters included one who carried a large cross to three clinics.

In Fargo, N.D., more than two dozen anti-abortion protesters were jailed on trespassing charges after a three-hour sit-in at the state's only abortion clinic.

Jet crashes in Key West

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP) — A Navy training jet practicing maneuvers crashed Friday after brushing wings with another jet over the Key West Naval Air Station, the Navy said. The pilot was killed.

The single-seat F-5E fighter jet was returning from routine training maneuvers Friday afternoon when it brushed against an F-A18 Hornet and crashed on the naval station runway, said base spokeswoman Ensign Robin Perkins.

The pilot was identified as Lt. Terrence E. Mulkeen, 32, of Pittsburgh.

Eight drown in accident

SEARCY, Ark. (AP) — A four-wheel-drive vehicle packed with young people turned over in a rain-swollen ditch, killing the adult driver and seven passengers ranging in age from 11 to 15 years, authorities said.

Two teen-agers and a 6-year-old boy survived Thursday night's accident by crawling through a window, a relative said.

"It's a sad situation, all those kids involved," Coroner Mike Hancock said Friday. "If anything would make you want to cry, this would."

Observances mark Good Friday around the world

AP Laserphoto

Fernando Macapagal grimaces as a centurion-clad resident drives nails through his palms in a modern day crucifixion of Jesus Christ on Good Friday. Several other devotees from other places were nailed to the cross which now becomes a tourist attraction.

JERUSALEM (AP) — Black-robed Arab priests and a scattering of Christian pilgrims carried wooden crosses Friday along the path Jesus Christ followed to his death, and they prayed at the church where he was cruxified.

In the Philippines, a dozen people — including two men serving life sentences for murder — were nailed to crosses as thousands of tourists and religious devotees watched. Hundreds of others beat their backs bloody with bamboo whips.

Pope John Paul II, hoisting a 5-foot wooden cross, led a torchlight procession through the Roman Colosseum at the Vatican on Friday night in a re-enactment of Jesus' walk to his crucifixion.

In Germany, hundreds of activists marked Good Friday by marching for peace and disarmament.

The traditional Good Friday observances in the winding streets of Jerusalem's Old City drew the poorest attendance in years. Western pilgrims stayed away because of Middle East tensions and Arab Christians from the occupied territories were barred from attending by army roadblocks and curfews.

Hundreds of paramilitary border policemen flanked the Via Dolorosa, or Way of Sorrow, as small groups of Christians moved with their crosses. Security was stepped up sharply following a series of fatal stabbing attacks by Arabs against Jews.

Most of the pilgrims paused to pray and sing at the 14 stations marking Christ's route to Cavalry, ending at the Church of the Holy Sepulcher built on the spot where Christians believe he was crucified.

John Moore, a visiting businessman from Glen Burnie, Md., joined 15 black-robed Arab priests on the route. "The connection to the ancient is so strong here. You feel you have to whisper because it is such a holy place," Moore said.

About 40 American, Canadian and Colombian soldiers attached to the multinational peacekeeping force in the Egyptian Sinai also walked the route, as did a dozen Filipino nurses who work at Jerusalem's Hadassah-Ein Karem Hospital.

One of the nurses, who gave her name only as Laarni, said that attending Good Friday and Easter Sunday services in the Holy Land "brings home the real meaning" of Christianity.

Security measures Friday also were intended to prevent any violence on Saturday, when Palestinians in the occupied territories have called a strike to commemorate "Land Day." The day marks the anniversary of 1976 riots in the Galilee in which six Arabs were killed protesting Israeli expropriation of Arab land.

The 1.7 million Palestinians in the West Bank and Gaza Strip were banned Friday from entering Israel, at least until Sunday. The army also imposed a curfew on all of the Gaza Strip and on several major towns in the West Bank, confining people to their homes.

Good Friday this year coincides with the start of the Jewish celebration of Passover and the second Friday of the Muslim holy month of Ramadan.

Nevertheless, Israel's Tourism Ministry estimated just 35,000 foreign visitors arrived in the Jewish state this month, down sharply from 148,000 last year.

Good Friday commemorations in the Philippines, by contrast, attracted thousands of pilgrims and tourists.

About 20,000 people watched six devotees nailed to crosses in groups of three in a rice field in Cutud, 30 miles north of Manila. Among them was a 24-year-old fish vendor who wept and stared at the heavens as he was "crucified."

"This is my first time to be crucified," said Chito Sanggalang. "I'm doing it because of my mother, who got sick and got well. I will continue this if God permits me to live on. I will go for another 25 years."

WORLD IN BRIEF

Jury convicts 4 nurses aides

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Four nurses aides were convicted Friday and sentenced to terms ranging from 15 years to life in the deaths of at least 20 elderly patients killed by drug overdoses or by forcing water into their lungs.

The four, dubbed "The Angels of Death" in Austria's newspapers, initially admitted to being involved in the deaths of 42 old and chronically ailing patients at Vienna's Lainz Hospital between 1983 and 1989. They later retracted most of their confessions.

A three-judge panel sentenced Waltraud Wagner, 32, and Irene Leidolf, 29, to life in prison for murder. Stefanija Mayer, 51, received a 20-year term on attempted murder and manslaughter charges. Maria Gruber, 29, drew 15 years for attempted murder.

Lawyers for Wagner and Leidolf said they would appeal. Counsel for Mayer and Gruber reserved the right to appeal.

Wagner, who appeared in a daze through most of the four-week trial, slumped over as sentence was pronounced. She was given first aid. The jury of six women and two men found her guilty of 15 murders, 17 attempted murders, and two cases of aggravated assault.

Mayer collapsed after her conviction for seven attempted murders and one case of manslaughter. She was taken from the courtroom on a stretcher.

Leidolf was convicted of five murders and two attempted murders, and Gruber of two attempted murders.

Firemen kill hot spots

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet firefighters returned to the blackened U.S. Embassy on Friday to douse hot spots that reignited a day after a blaze severely damaged the building and disrupted sensitive communications.

The new flames were quickly extinguished, said spokesman James Bullock, and embassy section chiefs were allowed into the building to retrieve essential papers and assess the damage.

No one was seriously injured in the original fire on Thursday, but many of the 200 employees had harrowing escapes.

About 18 staffers raced from offices high in the 10-story building down the central stairway as it rapidly filled with smoke, said one employee who spoke on condition he not be identified.

When they opened a door on the ground floor, they found themselves staring at a wall of flames, he said. Veering to the right, they were trapped in a courtyard between the fire and the 20-foot embassy wall.

"We literally built a ladder out of nothing," the staffer said. They piled boxes and junk to climb, and they helped each other over the wall.

Attackers kill 3 people

CRAIGAVON, Northern Ireland (AP) — Two masked attackers opened fire on a van selling candy in a predominantly Catholic neighborhood, killing a man and two teen-age girls, police said Friday.

The British news agency Press Association said a caller claiming to be from a paramilitary group named Protestant Action Force had telephoned their offices and claimed responsibility. The news agency said the name is an alias for the outlawed Ulster Volunteer Force, a group that supports continued British control of Northern Ireland.

The caller said the Thursday shooting was in retaliation for an Irish Republican Army wounding on March 21 of Margaret Cooke, a policeman's widow, Press Association said. The caller also claimed two of the targets in the latest attack were linked to the Irish Republican cause.

Police on Friday identified the victims as Eileen Mary Duffy, 19, who worked in the candy van; her friend, Katrina Rennie, 16; and Brian Frizell, a 29-year-old plumber. All three were from Craigavon.

The Anglican Church of Ireland primate, Robin Eames, condemned the slayings, saying Protestants utterly reject the violence.

"I am simply trying to cry out from the midst of the Protestant community and say that if this was done in our name, we utterly reject it and we say to our Roman Catholic neighbors it is not done by our mandate," Eames said on BBC radio.

Cowboy draft

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Cowboys owner Jerry Jones says he plans to lobby the National Football League commissioner concerning a team plan that requires pre-draft contracts from all three of its first-round choices.

"The objective would be to get them signed at the time and to eliminate the holdout posture, or the potential for a training camp holdout," Jones said Thursday.

"That certainly would be good for both the club and the athlete."

Some worry that NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue could block the pre-draft contract plan, which is drawing opposition around the league.

The plan by Jones and coach Jimmy Johnson to get contracts before their choices are officially made in the April 21-22 draft would ensure that all could participate in minicamps and training camp.

Jones said the Cowboys might negotiate with as many as 10 to 15 players on draft day to fill the three draft slots for 11th, 12th and 14th overall, Jones said.

"We have to get these guys signed and in training camp this time," Johnson told the Dallas Times Herald. "You can lose a rookie for a whole year if you don't get him signed."

Has Duke improved enough?

■ Even though 1991's version of Duke is better than the Blue Devils that were hammered by UNLV a year ago, it may not be enough to overcome the Runnin' Rebs.

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Pity Mike Krzyzewski's problem.

His Duke team could be 30 points better than last year and still not be improved enough to beat UNLV.

Consider it this way: 30 points is more than a third better. That's a third better than not just any team, but last year's national runnerup. And that's a third better against not just any team, but the top-ranked and undefeated defending national champion, the same team that beat Duke last season in the most lopsided championship game ever.

The numbers, in other words, are all on the side of Las Vegas in the second game of Saturday's semifinal doubleheader.

Poor Coach K? Not to hear him tell it.

"I believe we're better than last year," Krzyzewski said Friday. "I hope we're closer than 30 points. We even improved this week. I like this team a lot. We'll fight hard and play together."

Krzyzewski is not only upbeat but correct in saying this 30-7 Duke team is better than the 29-9 team which lost 103-73 last April in Denver.

However, the Runnin' Rebels (34-0), who are on a 45-game winning streak, have done some improving themselves along the way to their shot at college basketball immortality.

The last team to win consecutive titles was UCLA in 1973 and the last team to go undefeated was Indiana in 1976.

UNLV's numbers might boggle NASA, not to mention the NCAA:

— The Runnin' Rebels have led by at least 15 points in every game this season.

— They have trailed at halftime only once and they started that second half against Arkansas with a devastating run, one of the 54 they have this season of 9-0 or better.

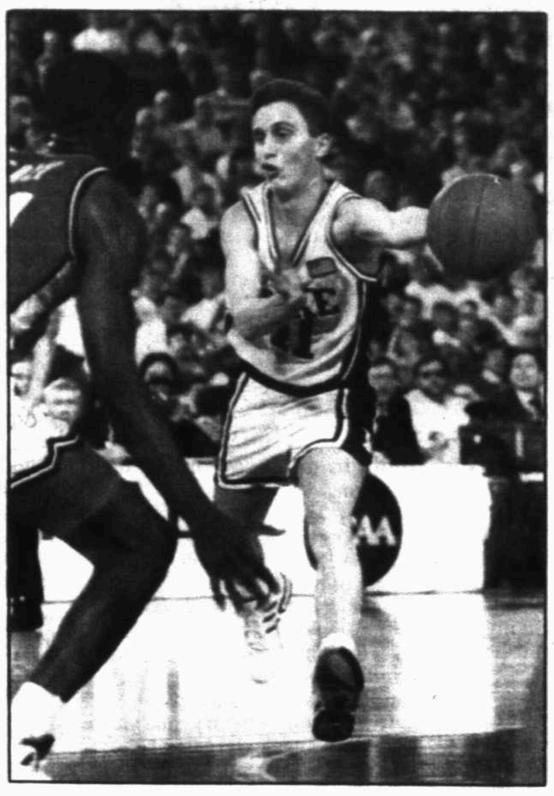

— Their average victory margin was 27.6, 2.7 shy of UCLA's record in 1972-73.

— They have trailed by 10 points once this season (16-6 to Fresno State in the Big West championship game) and that lasted for 10 seconds.

— They have trailed in the second half this season for a total of 1 minute, 21 seconds.

"As a coach it's nice to have 15-, 20-point leads in the Duke's Bobby Hurley and the rest of the Blue Devils hope to make up for last year's championship final.

■ North Carolina coach Dean Smith is a mentor of Kansas coach Roy Williams, but the players might have something to do with the outcome of the game.

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Contrary to popular belief, Dean Smith vs. Roy Williams won't be the only important matchup in Saturday's North Carolina-Kansas game in the Final Four.

While most of the pregame publicity has focused on the coaching confrontation between Smith and his former assistant, both sides agree that player performance will play a bigger role in the outcome than sideline strategy.

"Coaches play a big part in preparation, but then it's up to the players," Kansas center Mark Randall said Friday.

"They're both great coaches, but they can't come on the court and play," North Carolina's Rick Fox said.

Williams, who was an assistant under Smith for 10 years before going to Kansas in 1988, admits that he is "awed" by his mentor. But Williams claims he won't be intimidated when he coaches against Smith for the first time.

"Dean Smith is the person I respect more than anybody in college basketball," he said. "But the second person I respect is Bobby Knight. And I would bet that if you ask him right now if he thought that took anything away from our game preparation, he would say no."

Kansas upset Knight's Indiana team 83-65 in the Southeast Regional and went on to reach the Final Four for the third time in six seasons. North Carolina, the East Regional champ, is making its first Final Four appearance since winning the national championship in 1982.

The teams share more than just a coaching connection. Their styles are a mirror image, featuring unselfish passing, pressure defense and frequent substitutions. The similarities extend all the way to the hand

Rebels hope to keep grip on 4-5A lead

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

With Midland High's 8-5 baseball victory over Abilene Cooper Thursday, Midland Lee is left little choice but to beat Abilene High at 2 p.m. today on Johnson Field if the Rebels hope to maintain their District 4-5A lead.

MHS closed the first half of the district schedule with a 5-1 mark, its only loss coming at the hands of Lee. The Rebels are 4-0, but may feel the hot breath of the Bulldogs on their heels.

And that's where AHS comes into play. The Eagles are winless in 4-5A at 0-4, and are 7-8 overall. However, to here it from senior Rebel first baseman Brad Sanders, Lee will not take AHS lightly.

"We're not worried about the playoffs yet. We'll play them one game at a time, but we are going to go all they way," Sanders replied when asked about the possibility of finishing undefeated in 4-5A.

AHS will throw senior lefthander John Moreno, whose 3-1 record is dimmed somewhat by the fact he has been injured.

In a game against MHS March 16, Moreno was warming up for relief duty when a wind screen at Angels Stadium blew down and bruised his throwing shoulder. He has not thrown in a game since, and is listed as 80 to 90 percent for the Lee game.

Moreno will be facing a Rebel squad with a .400 team batting average in 4-5A games. Of the Rebs with more than 10 district at-bats, sophomore Julian Urquidez is atop the Lee list of averages by hitting at a .636 clip. He is followed by shortstop Shane Greeley (.571), whose five doubles and six RBI lead the team.

Allen Chase, Sean Salois and Sanders are also hitting .400 or better for the Rebels.

Urquidez should also get the start on the hill for Lee. The young righter owns a 3-1 overall record, and is 1-0 in district with a 5.00 ERA. In his one win however, a complete game against Odessa Permian, he recorded 16 strikeouts for an average of more than two K's an inning.

The Eagle batting order can not boast of anyone batting over .400 in 10 or more at-bats, but left fielder Mosi Brooks is 4-for-9 in 4-5A play for a .444 average. First baseman Robbie Duran comes next at .385 (5-for-13).

4-5A golf race heats up

■ Midland Lee and San Angelo are tied for first place while Midland High moves into third after two rounds of the district tour.

By Terry Williamson

The great wind demons died at Green Tree Country Club Friday while the District 4-5A golf scores started tumbling like the walls of Jericho.

And the district standings also went under the knife of renovation as Midland Lee and San Angelo moved into a first place tie after two loop rounds, both owning identical 632 team scores.

Midland High moved into third place with a 637, a meager five strokes off the leading pace while Abilene Cooper, who was the first round leader after a windy debut last week in Abilene, fell all the way to fourth place with a 638, but the Cougars are still in the championship hunt.

Thursday winds whipped through Midland with gusts up to 62 m.p.h., but Friday was a mere kitten's whisper as every team posted lower

Jones denies Tech selection made

Associated Press

LUBBOCK — Texas Tech Athletic Director T. Jones said Friday he has not determined who the school's head basketball coach will be and refuted a published report that Rob Evans, a former Tech assistant coach, will be given the job.

Evans

"No decision has been made whatsoever," Jones said. "We are still interviewing candidates for the job. We are progressing on schedule in the selection process."

On Friday, the Houston Chronicle, quoting an unidentified source, reported that Jones would name Evans as coach of the Red Raiders as early as Monday.

"It's completely untrue," Jones said.

The Chronicle reported that Evans, who spent this season as an assistant to Eddie Sutton at Oklahoma State, will name current Tech assistant James

Pete Incaviglia strolls from the batting cage.

Rangers waive bye-bye to Inky

Associated Press

Outfielder Pete Incaviglia was placed on waivers Friday by the Texas Rangers, who said they wanted to rid the team of the slugging outfielder because he was unhappy with his role.

Texas manager Bobby Valentine said at Port Charlotte, Fla., that he made the decision after Incaviglia complained Sunday about having to bat seventh in the lineup.

"He showed me how unhappy and unproductive he can be," Valentine said. "He threw a complete tantrum. At that time, I said, 'Pete's not going to be on this team.'"

The Rangers placed Incaviglia on unconditional release waivers, a move that could allow them to sign free-agent Brian Downing while staying within the team's self-imposed salary cap of approximately $20 million.

Celtics clinch Atlantic

Associated Press

NBA

BOSTON — The Boston Celtics clinched the Atlantic Division title Friday night as Robert Parish hit a 10-footer at the buzzer to give them a 110-108 victory over the Cleveland Cavaliers.

Darnell Valentine tied the game 108-108 when he converted one of two free throws with 5.5 seconds left. After a Boston timeout, Larry Bird inbounded the ball from midcourt to Brian Shaw.

Shaw got the ball to Parish near the foul line. Guarded closely by John Williams, who got a piece of the ball, Parish rushed his shot from the lane. The ball dropped through as the buzzer sounded.

The Celtics improved their record to 51-20 with 11 games left. Second-place Philadelphia is 39-32.

Bulls 112, Bullets 94

LANDOVER, Md. — Horace Grant and Scottie Pippen scored 22 points each, and the Chicago Bulls overpowered Washington 112-94 Friday night for their 12th victory in 14 games.

The Bulls won for only the fourth time in 17 trips to the Capital Centre in Michael Jordan's seven-year career. The Capital Centre is the only arena in the league in which Jordan, who finished with 20 points, has not scored 36 or more points.

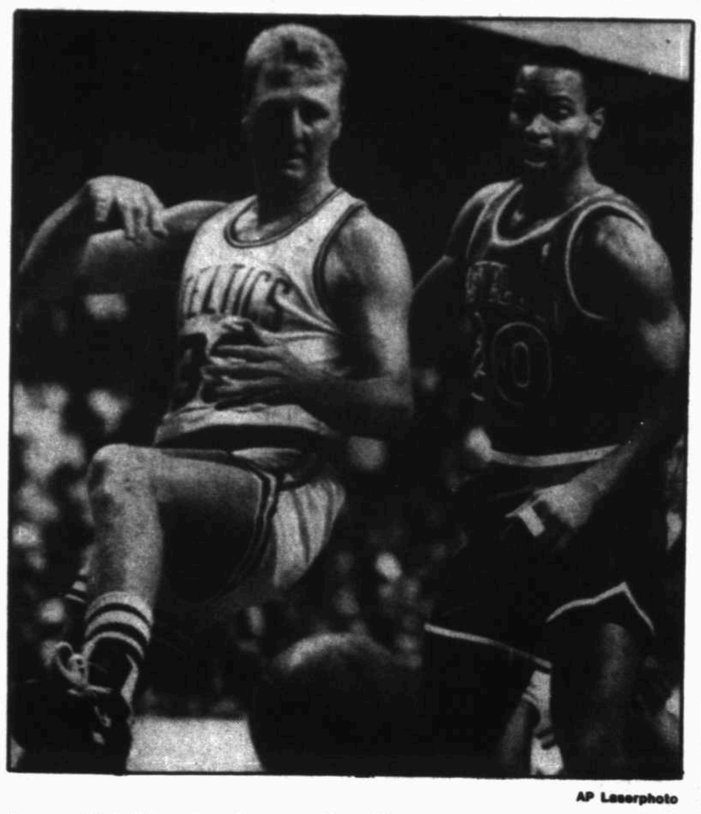

Washington was led for the third consecutive game by John Williams, who scored a game-high 27. Ledell Eackles had 21 for Washington, which saw its three-game homecourt winning streak broken.

Jordan didn't take his first shot of the game until more than seven minutes elapsed. A 3-pointer was his only basket of the first quarter, giving Chicago a 20-7 lead.

Pistons 111, Warriors 105

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Mark Aguirre, making only his ninth start of the season, scored 29 points and Joe Dumars scored 11 of his 21 in the fourth quarter as the Detroit Pistons held off the Golden State Warriors 111-105 Friday night.

Tim Hardaway led the Warriors with 25 points and 15 assists, while Chris Mullin scored 21 points. Hardaway had 10 points and Mullin 11 in the fourth quarter when Golden State outscored the Pistons 30-24, but the Warriors, playing their fourth game in five nights on the road, couldn't finish the comeback.

76ers 124, Hornets 107

PHILADELPHIA — Hersey Hawkins scored 37 points and Charles Barkley added 26 as the Philadelphia 76ers defeated the Charlotte Hornets 124-107 Friday night and clinched a playoff berth in the Eastern Conference.

Hawkins made 13 of 16 shots and made all nine of his free throws. Barkley, who returned from a one-game suspension for spitting on an 8-year-old fan Tuesday, was 11-for-13 from the floor and grabbed 13 rebounds.

Clippers 105, Mavericks 96

LOS ANGELES — Charles Smith scored 13 of his 22 points in less than five minutes of the fourth quarter as the Los Angeles Clippers beat the Dallas Mavericks and completed their first five-game winning streak since the first five games of the 1985-86 season.

Reserve Tom Garrick added a season-high 19 for the Clippers, who won for the eighth time in 11 games and the ninth time this month to tie a club record set in January of last season.

Rolando Blackman scored 24 points and Herb Williams added 20 for the Mavericks, who have dropped three in a row and 15 of their last 20.

Nuggets 140, Kings 122

DENVER — Michael Adams hit six of his first seven 3-pointers and finished with 37 points as the Denver Nuggets snapped a seven-game losing streak and handed Sacramento its 31st consecutive road loss.

The 18-point victory margin was the Nuggets' largest of the season. They beat the Kings 128-112 on Dec. 26.

Denver hit nine of 16 shots from 3-point range, including 6-for-10 by Adams. Orlando Woolridge scored 24 points and Reggie Williams 17 for the Nuggets.

Sacramento, which defeated Utah 116-98 at home on Thursday night, shot 55.6 from the field, but took 18 fewer shots than Denver.

SuperSonics 117 Timberwolves 107

SEATTLE — Seattle had trouble with the second-year Minnesota Timberwolves again before Eddie Johnson and Ricky Pierce scored 24 points each.

The Sonics, beaten in two of three previous games against the Timberwolves this season, beat them despite Tony Campbell's 30 points.

The Sonics led 66-49 at halftime and scored the first basket of the second half for a 19-point lead, their biggest of the game.

But it got tough after that. Minnesota kept the pressure on the Sonics and got to within three points twice early in the fourth quarter, the last time at 89-86 with 11:05 remainining.

INKY: No interest in trade for Incaviglia

(From 1B)

"I'm just shocked that they didn't trade me," Incaviglia said. "They just let me go."

The New York Yankees have the first shot at claiming Incaviglia for a $1 waiver fee. If Incaviglia is not claimed by Wednesday, he would become a free agent and Texas would have to give him 45 days termination pay: $414,148. He was scheduled to make $1,675,000 this season.

The Rangers said the decision had nothing to do with money, but with Incaviglia's performance. Despite having hit at least 20 home runs in each of five major league seasons, Incaviglia has had trouble hitting inside fastballs and has struck out 788 times.

Incaviglia's agent, Tony Attanasio, said he believed the move was purely financial, and said he would consult the Major League Baseball Players Association about the possibility of filing a grievance.

"The club's position is that it is a baseball decision," Attanasio said. "My opinion is that it's not true, that it's an economic decision. He drives in 344 runs in five years and they say he can't play on our team but for the fact that he's making too much money. That's what I think precipitated the move by the club."

Valentine said the Rangers attempted to trade Incaviglia, but found no takers.

"I wish we got something for Pete," Valentine said. "And we tried, repeatedly, day in and day out for the last four months, talking with twenty-five other teams. (We tried) to get anything, not to get, you know Bobby Bonilla, in return, but to get anything. How about a left-handed reliever who could pitch at Triple A? How about a catcher who can catch at Double A? No one was willing to make a trade."

Valentine said he thought the Rangers would be a better club without Incaviglia.

"I'm totally confident we will score more runs with this lineup than we did last year," he said. "Maybe over time, this will make sense. We're doing what is best for the team because that is what I get paid to do."

Incaviglia wanted to bat higher in the batting order and was looking forward to 1991 as an opportunity to prove his worth on the free-agent market.

"I think my teammates are going to be very upset," Incaviglia said. "I think this will take them by surprise. I may not have the respect of Bobby Valentine or my coaching staff, but I have the respect of my teammates.

"That's all I ever wanted to do, is have the respect of my teammates and the respect from the fans. I think I had that. And in my heart I know that if I had that, I had everything."

Incaviglia batted .233 with 24 home runs and 85 RBIs in 1990, but struck out 146 times. In five years with the Rangers, his average was .248. He led the American League with 185 strikeouts in 1986 and tied for the league lead with 153 in 1988.

Incaviglia was hitting .231 in spring training this year with one home run and one RBI in 14 games.

"I hate to see him go," Rafael Palmeiro said.

"Anytime something like this happens, it shows how fragile these situations are," Nolan Ryan said. "It can happen to anybody at anytime."

Incaviglia had just bought a house near Arlington Stadium, and said this week that he hoped to play his entire career with the Rangers.

"I'm surprised by all this, but I shouldn't be," Incaviglia said. "I know how (Valentine) works. When you go out and do your job, but you're not one of his real close players, then you're not going to be around."

Pirates refuse to up ante for Bonilla

Associated Press

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — The Pittsburgh Pirates won't increase their $16 million contract offer that Bobby Bonilla rejected earlier this week and now will consider trading the three-time All-Star, team president Carl Barger said Friday.

"We've told him we've gone as far as we can go," Barger said.

Bonilla turned down the team's $4-million-a-year offer on Tuesday and made a counterproposal of $20 million over five years — a deal nearly identical to Darryl Strawberry's $20.25 million contract with the Los Angeles Dodgers.

The Pirates' offer also would have allowed Bonilla to test the free agent market after the 1992 season, with Pittsburgh retaining the right to match any offer. But Major League Players Association counsel Gene Orza said such contracts are not allowed under the game's labor agreement with its players.

Dennis Gilbert, Bonilla's agent, has contended the offer isn't comparable to the huge deals recently signed by Roger Clemens ($21.5 million for four years), Jose Canseco ($23.5 million for five years) and Strawberry. Gilbert says the Pirates aren't really serious about signing Bonilla.

"We believe what was offered with all its variations was an eminently fair and competitive offer," Barger said. "I respect their right to disagree ... but we now have to look at the other two alternatives: keeping him on the ballclub this year or trading him.'

Gilbert, said he was disappointed "because Bobby wanted to stay with the Pirates," but he wasn't surprised.

"We've grown to expect the unexpected from the Pirates," Gilbert said from his Beverly Hills, Calif., office.

scores than in the district opening round last week in Abilene.

And Lee was the most impressive with a team score 307, some 18 strokes better than in Abilene. In fact, all five members of the Lee golf team came in with scores under 80.

"This is my sixth year as golf coach at Lee, and this is the first time I've ever had all five golfers come in at under 80," said Lee coach Ronnie Stephens. "Things can change quickly in this game, so you can't rest too much. It looks like this thing is going down to the final hole on the final day."

The teams move to Mission Country Club in Odessa Friday and then end in San Angelo the following week. The top two teams and top two individuals earn Region I berths in Lubbock.

Midland High coach John Ford still thinks his Bulldogs are in the running for one of those region berths.

"We're still close, just five out," Ford said. "If you can stay that close, you have a chance."

While the team race was experiencing an overhaul, the individual medalist race all but belongs to San Angelo senior Cory Adams, who recorded his second consecutive two-under par 71. His two-round total of 142 is nine strokes in front of Cooper's Chad Wellhausen and Abilene High's Dan Wilson. He came into the day leading the field by six strokes.

"I made six birdies, but I three-putted five times," Adams said. "I hope this lead holds, but I really haven't been playing well up until these two tournaments. I changed putters and everything started to click for me.

"I had two eagles in Abilene and had a chance at two here, but three-putted twice for birdies."

Wellhausen, a sophomore, said, "Adams is going to be tough to catch after today."

Besides Adams, only Abilene High's Dan Wilson and Chris Ballard, a surprise player on AHS' No. 2 team, broke par with 72s. Midland High's Greg Garner had an even par 73.

"It's nice to see Garner turn in a score like that," Ford said. "This is the first round he's had this year under 80. We needed it."

Boyd Deramus posted a round of 75 to lead the Lee charge into first place and moved him into fifth place in the medalist race. Mitch Spence (76) and David Sotelo (77) stand at 157 while both Mark Negri and Ryan Thompson had 79s. It was a consistent team effort.

MHS' Randy Scharfenberg came in at 78 to stand at 157. Both local teams had some good efforts on the No. 2 squads. MHS got a 77 from Greg Sigler and a 78 from Todd Polson while Lee got a fine round of 75 from Brian Cooper and a 79 from Danny Grainger.

"I would much rather play in weather like this than what we've had the past couple of weeks," Adams said.

And evidently, so would the rest of the 4-5A field.

Dickey as his top aide.

"I can't tell you how disappointed I am to hear of such a story," Jones said. "It just disrupts so much about what is going on. I ran into some of our athletes today who asked me about the story and I told them not to believe a word of it."

Evans, who recruited many of Texas Tech's top basketball players during his 15 years as an assistant, is scheduled to return from the NCAA Final Four at Indianapolis this weekend. He and Dickey are considered the top candidates for the job.

The head job at Tech came open after Gerald Myers agreed to step down March 13 after 20½ years and four consecutive losing seasons.

Myers could elect to remain at the school in an unspecified administrative position for the remainder of his contract, which pays $80,000 a year for four more years. But he has said he would like to stay in coaching.

Jones is known to have interviewed five possible successors to Myers, the Chronicle reported.

Evans, 44, recruited many of the New Mexico high school players who contributed to Tech's basketball success, including Bubba Jennings of Clovis and Kent Williams, Phil and Vince Taylor and Tony Benford, all from Hobbs.

He also recruited Will Flemons of Paducah, Texas, who missed much of the 1991 season with a fractured foot after leading the Southwest Conference in rebounding in 1990.

A draftee of the Houston Colt .45s (now Astros) out of high school in Hobbs, Evans started on two NCAA basketball tournament teams at New Mexico State, then coached by Lou Henson. He was an assistant to Henson for four years before joining Myers' staff in 1975.

Dickey, 37, was an assistant for eight years on Sutton's staff at Arkansas before replacing Evans on Myers' Tech staff last year.

Stanford looks to repeat

Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — The women take their final step toward Sunday's NCAA championship game when Connecticut faces Virginia and Tennessee takes on defending champion Stanford on Saturday.

"It's been a great week, but now it's time for what we came for," Stanford coach Tara VanDerveer said Friday.

Connecticut (29-4) is the tournament dark-horse, although the Huskies have won three straight Big East titles. The Huskies feature Kerry Bascom, a three-time Big East Player of the Year, and a group of overachievers fill out the roster.

Coach Geno Auriemma told his team in the preseason that its goal was to win the regular season, the Big East Conference tournament and to get to the Final Four.

Women's Final Four

"He really knows what we can do and he gets the best out of each of us," Meghan Pattyson said.

Against Virginia (30-2), Auriemma said his team will have to be able to control the perimeter.

"We have to establish early that we can get the shots when we need them," Auriemma said. "If we can do that early, we'll be OK."

Being the new team at the party could take a toll in jitters when the game starts, Auriemma said, but if his team can hit from the outside, they'll be OK.

"We'll probably shoot about 40 threes and if we make half of them, we'll be OK," Auriemma said.

Virginia coach Debbie Ryan said her team is used to playing Cinderellas. Ryan said her team beat three in a row — Stephen F. Austin, Oklahoma and Lamar — to get to the Final Four.

"The key factors are tempo and reading the defense, taking what it gives us and not being afraid to attack," Ryan said.

Stanford would like to become the first repeat women's champion since Southern Cal in 1983 and 1984.

"We enjoyed it a lot," VanDerveer said. "We liked all the things that went with it. We would like a second time around."

O'Neal AP Player of Year

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Shaquille O'Neal picked up another trophy Friday, but not the one he wants before picking up millions in the pros.

The best player in college, according to a nationwide vote of sports writers and broadcasters, wants to stay put for a while.

"I still have some flaws in my game. I'm not ready for the NBA," said O'Neal, the 7-foot-1, 290-pound sophomore who led the nation in rebounding this season for LSU.

For starters, he said, he needs to develop a hook shot and an outside jumper.

"I'm not leaving. I'm returning," he said. "That's my intention. I've been poor 19 years of my life. I think I can hold out two more years. So far, I've had a high school championship, an Olympic Festival championship ... why not an NCAA championship?"

The Adolph Rupp Trophy as The Associated Press player of the year was presented to O'Neal in conjunction with the NCAA Final Four at the Hoosier Dome. LSU lost to Connecticut in the first round of the tourney two weeks ago.

"I don't feel embarrassed, but kind of wrong. We should have been here," said O'Neal, who missed two games late in the season with a hairline fracture in his leg. "Everybody would like to win the national championship, so I feel kind of down."

O'Neal is only the fourth sophomore to win the Rupp Trophy, named for the late University of Kentucky coach. The others were Bill Walton of UCLA in 1972, DePaul's Mark Aguirre in 1980 and Virginia's Ralph Sampson in 1981. UCLA's Lew Alcindor, now Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, also was player of the year in 1967 as a sophomore before the Rupp Trophy was instituted.

Ayers takes coaching honors

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Randy Ayers doesn't want to be known as black coach or a young coach — just a winning coach.

"I don't put a lot of significance on me being black," the Ohio State coach said Friday after being named The Associated Press' coach of the year. "I hope people will judge me as being a good coach."

Ayers guided the Buckeyes to a 27-4 mark and the co-championship of the Big Ten in his second season as coach. Ohio State was beaten by St. John's in the Midwest regional semifinals.

He received 191 of 582 votes in a nationwide poll of sports writers and broadcasters conducted before the NCAA tournament. Kentucky's Rick Pitino was second with 94 votes, followed by Utah's Rick Majerus with 89½ and Nebraska's Danny Nee with 65.

Ayers, an assistant with the Buckeyes for six years before being elevated to the top position, is 44-17 in two seasons.

"After the first year people started judging me as a coach, not whether I was young or whether I was black," said Ayers, 34, the second black selected coach of the year, after Temple's John Chaney in 1988. "And I hope people will continue to do that for all coaches."

Ayers said having "a very unselfish group of players this year who were willing to sacrifice their individual statistics" was a key to the successful year.

Azinger leads TPC

Associated Press

PONTE VEDRA, Fla. — Paul Azinger made up four strokes on par over the last four holes Friday in the Players Championship.

It only seemed like more.

"It was playing so hard, every shot you picked up was like picking up two," Azinger said after taking a one-stroke lead at the halfway point of the windblown Players Championship.

"The hardest I've ever seen it blow here," Azinger said.

The winds were clocked at 40-45 mph when Azinger put his birdie-birdie-birdie-birdie finish on a round of 68 at the TPC at Sawgrass.

His face wore a puzzled expression as he attempted, then abandoned, an explanation of how it happened.

"I don't want to say it was a fluke, but it happened when I wasn't playing my best," he said.

"The wind was almost at hurricane force and I was missing fairways left and right. There was no pattern to what I was doing.

"The putter didn't feel real good and my driver was all over the place."

So he birdied the last four holes he played and completed two trips over the home course for the PGA Tour at 135, 9 under par.

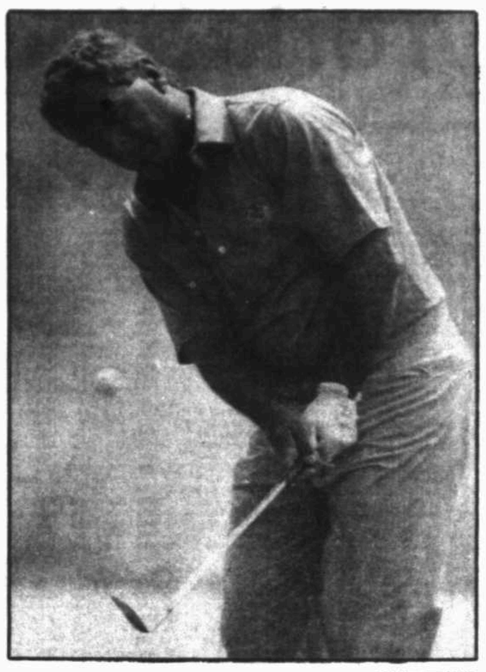

"I was just scratching and clawing for all I was worth," said Azinger, a winner earlier this year and the victim of a highly publicized disqualification at Doral.

Fuzzy Zoeller, a former U.S. Open and Masters champion, and Australian Steve Elkington shared second at 136.

Elkington shot 70 in conditions he described as "almost nightmarish. "It was dangerous out there, disasters everywhere."

Zoeller, who now plays a restricted schedule to favor his chronic back pain, had a 68 in the gale-force conditions.

"I really don't mind the wind," Zoeller said.

AP Laserphoto

Fuzzy Zoeller chips onto the third green in the TPC at Sawgrass.

"It's kind of a guessing game. And it's fun for the spectators. They get to see a lot of interesting shots."

Those watching Canadian Richard Zokol got to see a lot of shots, all right, but many of them were more of Elkington's "nightmare" variety than Zoeller's "interesting."

After playing the front side in 40, he made 8's on two of the next four holes and struggled in with an 85.

He was not alone in his problems, however. Bob Tway, who held the first-round lead with a 65, went 12 strokes higher to a 77. Mike Smith went up 13 strokes to an 80, and Bob Gilder shot 83.

Ian Baker-Finch, another Australian, was fourth alone at 138 after a 69. Curtis Strange, with a 68, led a large group at 139.

Dickinson leads 'Horns to record

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Longhorns, bolstered by an American record 200-yard medley relay victory and Jason Rhodes' surprising 3-meter diving conquest, kept on course Friday night for a fourth consecutive NCAA swimming and diving championship.

The Longhorns compiled 342 points after two nights of competition to 290 for Stanford, 221 for Southern California and 220 for Florida.

Texas, with Doug Dickinson anchoring in 19.22 seconds, smashed Princeton's 1990 American and NCAA record of 1:27.31 in the 200-yard medley relay with a 1:26.34 clocking. Stanford was second in 1:26.54, Florida third in 1:27.01, and UCLA fourth in 1:27.27, all under the previous record.

Dickinson is a former member of the City of Midland Swim Team.

Shaun Jordan's 20.90 breaststroke helped Texas gain the edge on the third leg and gave him his third gold medal of the 68th NCAA meet. He also had a bronze.

Texas also earned 40 points in the 800-yard freestyle relay, the final event of the evening, with an effort of 6:24.18 to 6:26.01 for silver medalist Stanford.

Rhodes gave Texas 20 points with a victory in the 3-meter springboard diving. He compiled 620.35 points to 600 for Dean Panaro of Miami and 581.35 for bronze medalist David Pichler of Ohio State.

Prelims and finals will be held Saturday in the 1650 freestyle, 100 freestyle, 200 backstroke, 200 butterfly, 200 breaststroke, platform diving, and 400 freestyle relay.

Olympian David Wharton of Southern California successfully defended his title in the 400-yard individual medley in a clocking of 3:43.28.

Aggies shut out Raiders, TCU downs Rice 9-8

Associated Press

LUBBOCK — Junior right-hander Ronnie Allen tossed a two-hitter Friday as Texas A&M blanked Texas Tech 4-0 in a Southwest Conference game.

Allen struck out 10 Red Raider batters as he improved to 6-1 for the year. Tech starter Kevin Kirk took the loss, falling to 3-3.

SWC Baseball

The only hits Allen gave up were to Tech left fielder Joe Mendazona, who hit two singles.

Texas Christian 9, Rice 8

FORT WORTH — Rice shortstop Joe Racina overthrew first baseman Jim Miller, allowing two Texas Christian runners to score for a TCU victory.

The Horned Frogs rallied for four runs in the 9th inning, winning their first SWC game of the season. TCU is now 21-13 overall.

Houston 4, Arkansas 3

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. — Jason Hart made a leaping catch of an Allen Williams line drive with the tying run on second to preserve a the win for Houston Arkansas.

Texas-Baylor suspended

WACO — The Baylor-Texas game played in Waco was suspended after the 14th inning with the scored tied 2-2, because of darkness.

Baylor's Ferrell Field does not have lights.

The two schools will resume play today at noon.

(From 1B)

signals used by the coaches and players.

"Everything we do we basically got from North Carolina," Kansas forward Alonzo Jamison said. "We play the same offense and the same defense. I think it will come down to who executes the best."

Since Smith and Williams know each other so well, neither team is expecting any last-minute changes in strategy.

"We're not going to change anything and North Carolina isn't going to change anything," said Randall, the Jayhawks' second-leading scorer and rebounder. "We've been successful up to now with what we do, and we're going to stick with it."

Despite similar styles, North Carolina and Kansas are not clones. The Tar Heels (29-5) are bigger, have a deeper bench and are better free throw shooters. The Jayhawks (26-7) are quicker, make even better backdoor cuts and have a player (senior forward Mike Maddox) with Final Four experience.

Guard Terry Brown is Kansas' top scorer with a 16.4 average, followed by Randall at 14.8, guard Adonis Jordan at 12.4 and Jamison at 10.7.

"You've got to know where Brown is all the time," Smith said. "And Jamison is vastly underrated. He's very quick defensively and he can guard a lot of players. Randall is one of the finest big men in the country because he can play outside as well as inside."

Like Kansas, North Carolina has four players scoring in double figures. Fox leads the way with a 17-point average while guard Hubert Davis, nephew of former Carolina star Walter Davis, is next at 13 per game. Forward George Lynch and center Pete Chilcutt each average just over 12 points.

"We've had great chemistry this year," said Fox, one of three senior starters for the Tar Heels. "At the beginning of the season, coach Smith was criticized for using so many players. But it's paid off because we all play together as one."

Getting back to the national semifinals after an eight-year absence has been a personal triumph for Smith, who was getting tired of the constant questions about his Final Four drought, the longest of his career.

REMATCH: Shark's towel stays dry

(From 1B)

last two minutes," Jerry Tarkanian said. "I haven't had to bite on my towel as much, and that's because this is a special team. We haven't had a bad game, maybe a couple of bad halves. Heck, we've had only one or two bad practices all season."

Tarkanian doesn't believe that was the real Duke which his team handled with ease 12 months ago.

"Duke's a great basketball team and I thought that last year," he said. "That team beat Arkansas quite handily and people forget about that. They look at the 30-point victory and say Duke was outclassed, but that's not true at all. If we played them 24 hours later, it would have been competitive."

How about 52 weeks later?

"Losing by 30 points is only an edge if you think of it that way," Duke center Christian Laettner said. "If the players on this team look back at last year's game and get mad and get upset that we got killed by 30 points and use it as a motivation, then it might be an advantage. It could be an advantage for them to say we killed them by 30 last time. There really are no advantages off the court."

UNLV's biggest on-court advantage is the matchup problems it presents for Duke.

All-American forwards Larry Johnson and Stacey Augmon are both quick, physical players who can play inside and out. Center George Ackles has added a short jumper to his strong inside play, and guards Greg Anthony and Anderson Hunt, the 3-point specialist, force the action with defensive pressure.

"We've seen a lot of double-teaming on Larry all season," Tarkanian said of Johnson, who leads the Rebels at 23 points per game. "We don't have a real weakness and that makes it hard to throw a gimmick defense at us, and none has worked against us to this point."

Krzyzewski isn't known for any gimmick defense, just solid man-to-man. And he knows what problems his Blue Devils face.

"We have to stress transition defense and defensive rebounding," he said. "If they do get on some sort of run, we should be able to execute in the halfcourt offense and stop them from going crazy for a few minutes."

Duke's Bobby Hurley saw the guard play up close last year as a freshman, and stomach problems during the game only made things worse as he finished with two points, three assists and the bulk of Duke's 23 turnovers.

"From a physical standpoint, I think I feel 100 percent better than I did last year. I'm not going to allow that to happen again," Hurley said. "I think I have a better grasp of how to handle the team and I've played against good teams who have put fullcourt pressure against us."

MAR 30 91

HOOPLA Mania is beginning! You can experience America's hottest sporting event that has been enjoyed by hoopsters from all walks of life. It's 3-on-3 street basketball, and it's all for fun. Anyone can play -- from Weeboks to Orthopedic Reeboks--all you need are four players aged 13 to 100. Come to ClayDesta's Asphalt Jungle on April 6 and smell the roses when the leather meets the road.

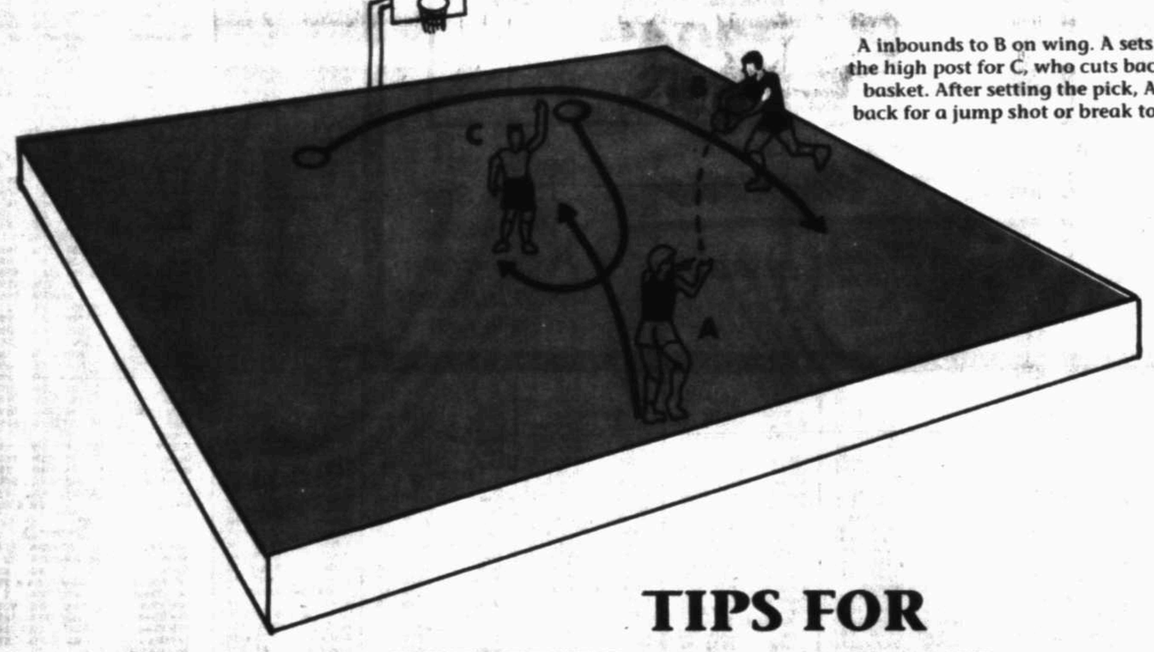

A inbounds the ball to C and follows the pass to the wing. A can cut toward the basket around C or get the ball back and let C post-up, creating a two-man game.

A inbounds to C at the high post. B sets pick for A, either freeing A for a layup or leaving B open at the high post, or C can fake pass and drive the baseline.

A inbounds to B on wing. A sets a pick at the high post for C, who cuts back toward basket. After setting the pick, A can step back for a jump shot or break toward the basket.

RULES

Players must be at least 13 years of age.
Games played to 16 points.
Baskets are worth one point unless outside two-point line.
Players call their own fouls;
Three players and one substitute per team.
Teams placed in divisions according to age, height and experience.
Double elimination -- everyone is guaranteed two games.

TIPS FOR PLAYERS

Try to keep a defender on their best shooter at all times. Don't let him get any wide-open shots.

Substitute freely. Not only does it give players a chance to rest, but it keeps the fourth player happy.

Play real simple--no fancy stuff.

Make sure you drink plenty of fluids before playing. You don't want to get dehydrated.

Most important of all: keep your temper. Sometimes it gets a little rough out there, so play fair and keep your tempers under control.

Drug gangs endanger generation of city's young

Associated Press

MEDELLIN, Colombia (AP) — Assassins strolled into a classroom and killed two teen-agers with submachine guns. At about the same time, other gunmen mowed people down at a nearby soccer field, killing nine.

Such massacres no longer shock this once-peaceful Andean city of 2 million, which gave its name to a notorious cocaine cartel and became a symbol of violence.

Police say at least 85 people, most in their teens or early 20s, have been killed in massacres so far this year. More than 1,200 killings have been reported, one of the highest per capita rates in the world.

Members of the clergy and other residents fear the Medellin cartel, with its billions in profit from selling cocaine to the United States and Europe, is corrupting an entire generation of youth.

The government appears either unable or unwilling to stop it.

Tens of thousands of Medellin's children and young adults are unemployed school dropouts who hang out on the city's violent streets.

"Around here, there is no law," said the mother of a young man killed on the soccer field. "I'll just mourn my boy's death and move on."

She said the "violence has gotten so far out of hand" it was impossible to know who killed Ronald, her 22-year-old son.

Ronald's older brother, dampeyed and bitter, insisted policemen were responsible.

Even police admit off-duty officers have murdered teen-age boys.

It is a war, some residents of Medellin say, that began when drug baron Pablo Escobar ordered his young killers to shoot policemen. Ten percent of Medellin's policemen, or about 300, were murdered by the cartel's gunmen in the first half of 1990.

Policemen, right-wing death squads, street gangs, urban guerrillas and assassins paid by the traffickers are blamed for killings in Medellin.

A car bomb that exploded outside the bull ring in February killed 24 people, including nine policemen, and wounded about 170. Authorities believe it was cartel vengeance for the the killing by police of two gang leaders.

There are more theories about the bloodshed than arrests.

Monsignor Javier Tobon, a Roman Catholic priest who counsels teen-agers in one of the most violent slums of northern Medellin, described the violence as "the product of narco-trafficking."

He said the cocaine trade "started corrupting our people," undermining moral values, and "the ambition for money is what is killing the young people here."

Young people often are blamed for the bloodshed, but they also are its most frequent victims.

"These are the children who grew up during the city's cocaine years, when an already violent Medellin suddenly became intolerable," a businessman said, on condition of anonymity.

Many youths have grown to disdain authority and idolize people like Escobar the drug lord, who gave the city soccer fields, street lamps and even cinderblock houses in the slums.

"I think Pablo Escobar should be president of Colombia," said Fabio, who is 16 and a former gang leader.

Drug traffickers employ teenage killers, known as sicarios, to plant bombs and dispose of their opponents.

The youngsters, well paid and trained, have committed most of the hundreds of murders and bombings ordered by the cartel since August 1989, when the government began a war on drug gangs.

Many of the young men were left unemployed when the cartel declared a truce in July 1990.

The sicarios have the best guns, drive fancy cars and have created, in the words of Mayor Omar Florez, "a culture of death."

Tobon said: "They declare their devotion to the Virgin Mary despite their willingness to kill."

Serving the drug bosses became an honor, a way out of poverty and hopelessness for thousands of Medellin's youngsters, but most of Medellin's children are not sicarios.

Maria Emma Mejia, presidential envoy to Medellin, says the government is trying to help the hundreds of thousands of "regular kids" endangered by street violence.

It is a difficult challenge. Half the teen-agers in Medellin do not attend high school and the dropout rate in some neighborhoods is 85 percent, according to the city government. Most of the teenagers are unemployed.

The city outlined a two-year, $87 million program to improve Medellin's social services, with costs to be shared by the regional and national governments, but budget cutbacks have put it on hold.

Fabio, his twin brother Fabian and Edison, a friend, are in a makeshift work and recreation program started by Elkin Ramirez, a resident of their slum.

All three boys admit to having belonged to gangs engaged in robbery and other violence.

"Most of the kids here have killed people," Ramirez confided.

When asked who was responsible for recent murders in the slum, the boys answered: "The law."

'These are the children who grew up during the city's cocaine years, when an already violent Medellin suddenly became intolerable.'

Cover was false, but diamonds were real

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — They say you can't tell a book by its cover.

Here's proof:

Kansas City librarian David Conway last week was sorting through thousands of books donated to the library when he came upon one that didn't feel quite right. It wasn't.

Conway opened the cover and was stunned by the glitter of diamonds.

"It made noise when I picked it up and it was light," Conway said. "I opened it and all these rings were inside. I said, 'These can't be real!'"

But they were. It was the book that was false — a box given the look of a book cover in the hope of fooling thieves.

Conway turned the rings over to library marketing director Mary Ann Van Vooren. She returned them to the executor of an estate she wouldn't identify.

"I'm not a jeweler, but they were awfully nice," she said. "Two were at least a carat. They were bigger than anything I have."

With Open Arms

"Hello, my child. I see you each day as you walk past my house. At times, your pace slows, as if you might decide to stop and come in.

I hope that one day soon you will decide to visit me. My house is a quiet and peaceful haven. It is warm and inviting here. Stained glass windows are lit with the sun by day and by lamplight at night.

Many of my children visit my house each Sabbath. The singing of hymns, messages of inspiration and guidance, and prayers of praise and thanksgiving fill the air with hope and joy. I shall be waiting and watching for you, my child."

Accept our Father's invitation this week. God's doors, and His arms, are always open wide with love for us, His children.

"Come to Me, all who are weary and heavy-laden, and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28

Church dedication fulfils dream

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff Writer

When Trinity Presbyterian Church dedicates its new sanctuary April 7, longtime members will see the completion of a 25-year dream.

"It gives us the facilities to do a better job of ministry to our growing congregation," said the Rev. A.J. Moreau, the church pastor. "This is the fulfillment of a dream that some of our people have had for 25 years."

Formed in the early 1970s from St. Andrews Presbyterian Church and Westminister Presbyterian Church, Trinity Presbyterian Church established its building committee nine years ago.

The completion of the project — which includes, among other additions, new stained glass windows, pipe organ. pews and choir robes — represents hours of hard work throughout the committee's existence.

"The original plans had to be drawn up, revised, re-revised, the congregation had to approve plans and raise money, contractors had to be hired, the congregation went through a change of pastors," said Glenda Massey, moderator of the board of deacons. "Because of the oil crunch many key members moved away, many new members joined."

Building committee members include chairman John Ochsner, Cal Calusen, Nance Creager, Don Graham, Marj Schaafsma and Victor Brown. The project, which cost close to $2 million, includes new sanctuary, new pipe organ and new office facilities. General contractor was Peters & Fields, Odessa.

"It's tough being on something like a building committee so long," said Ms. Schaafsma, a six-year committee member. "Everybody is still good friends, and I think that's wonderful."

"One building committee member, Don Graham, has spent nearly everyday since the February 1990 ground-breaking, overseeing the project, making sure mistakes are corrected, forgotten jobs are done, doing jobs himself, taking pictures, negotiating and consulting with contractors," Ms. Massey said.

Graham said of the project: "It has taken a long time, but with the help of many volunteers and other helpers, we finally see the end, and we're proud of what we got."

Moreau will deliver the dedication service message assisted by the church's past pastors, the Rev. Jerry Tompkins, the Rev. Bill Hedrick, the Rev. Dan Goodwin, the Rev. Dick Braun, the Rev. Jerry Kelly, interim executive director of the Samaritan Counseling Center, and the Rev. Charles Hollinsgworth, General Presbyter of Tres Rios Presbytery.

In addition to the dedication ceremony, which is followed by a reception, the weekend's events include a barbecue, golf tournament and reminiscing activities April 6. The Rev. Flynn Long, former pastor and moderator of the Synod of the Sun, will play his bagpipes during the Saturday evening barbecue. For more information call the church office, 682-2514.

Council lags behind in understanding

HEPPENHEIM, Germany (AP) — The International Council of Christians and Jews says the World Council of Churches is lagging behind in its understanding of the ties between Christianity and the Jewish people.

A statement adopted by at an ICCJ executive committee meeting said the recent assembly of the World Council in Australia refused to deal with the "resurgent evil of anti-Semitism" and "betrayed indifference to the well-being of Israel," although rightly showing concern for Palestinians.

While many member churches of the World Council as well as the Roman Catholic Church have made "considerable progress toward a new relationship to the Jewish people," the World Council "lags far behind these new developments," the statement said.

More than 300 Protestant and Eastern Orthodox denominations totaling more 400 million members belong to the World Council of Churches.

Morales seeks extention of school-finance plan deadline

AUSTIN (NYT) — Texas Attorney General Dan Morales on Friday asked a state district court to give the Legislature until June 1 to come up with a school finance plan, while attorneys for poor schools asked the court to shut off all money to public schools after April 1.

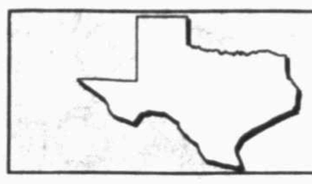

Parties in the Edgewood vs. Kirby lawsuit filed the motions in anticipation of a hearing Monday before State District Judge Scott McCown. Last September the judge ordered the Legislature to produce a new school finance plan, which the Legislature has failed to do.

The Supreme Court upheld McCown's and another district judge's rulings that funding disparities between the state's rich and poor districts are unconstitutional. The high court gave the Legislature until Monday to fix the problem.

The attorney general said he will file a similar motion at the Texas Supreme Court on Monday.

Morales argued that legislators have come very close to approving a school finance plan that will pass constitutional muster and that they need only until the end of their regular session, May 27, to agree on a solution.

"It simply makes no sense, in my judgment or the judgment of the state, to punish the school children of our state for what really is, at this point, an administrative and a temporary difficulty," Morales said.

The State

"I think that the court understands fully that a solution really is at hand and understands fully that no useful purpose would be served by creating the perception of crisis ... by allowing for a cutoff of state funds," Morales said.

But Al Kauffman, an attorney representing poor schools, asked the court to modify the April 1 injunction by cutting off all funds — not just state money but local taxes as well. Rich schools could survive a cut in state aid, while poor schools could not, Kauffman wrote in his motion.

"Merely cutting off state funds would cause more harm to poor districts than to rich districts (and is) clearly contrary to the holdings of the District Court and the Supreme Court," Kauffman wrote.

Meanwhile, Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock said he will ask the Senate on Tuesday to OK a House-approved school finance plan, which he calculates would cost nearly twice as much as the $1.2 billion Senate-House compromise overwhelmingly rejected by the House earlier this week.

Bullock is believed to be using the threat to pressure the House into approving the compromise measure, which it rejected Wednesday.

The House education bill would pool wealth within counties while allowing school districts to raise additional money to supplement their own programs. In a few instances — including the wealthy Glen Rose district in Somervell County — several counties would be combined to spread the wealth.

House members believed they were passing a $1.2 billion bill, but Bullock claims drafting errors on an amendment added by Rep. Kent Grusendorf, R-Arlington, increased the cost of the bill to $2.2 billion.

Grusendorf questioned Bullock's estimate and said the lieutenant governor is "playing some games. To me, that's silly to try that."

Bullock said he wants to bring the House plan up for another vote on Tuesday.

Reserve unit begins return to Bay City

FORT POLK, La. (AP) — Almost half the members of a Texas-based Army Reserve Unit were returning Friday to the group's home station, the military said.

The 327th Chemical Company, based in Bay City, Texas, was honored in a brief ceremony after 49 soldiers completed demobilization procedures at the Louisiana Army post before boarding a bus for Texas, military officials said.

"You are going home ... with the satisfaction that when America needed you, you answered your nation's call, and with the knowledge that you played an important role in our victory in the Persian Gulf War," said Brig. Gen. Michael Davison, assistant division commander for Fort Polk's 5th Infantry Division.

About 70 soldiers in the unit have remained in the Middle East since October, the Army said.

The chemical decontamination unit, during Operation Desert Storm, was assigned to the 24th Infantry Division (Mech.)

"Fortunately, the unit did not have to perform its primary mission of chemical decontamination support; however, the unit was ready on the battlefield if needed," said Davison.

Grand jury subpoenas more Berlanga records

AUSTIN (AP) — A House photographer Friday was ordered to submit photographs to a grand jury investigating alleged illegal ties between lawmakers and lobbyists.

In another development, the Travis County District Attorney's office has subpoenaed all of state Rep. Hugo Berlanga's bank records from American National Bank since 1987.

But the Corpus Christi bank has filed a motion to kill the subpoena, claiming it would be too expensive to produce what it said would be thousands of documents, including cancelled checks, deposit slips and loan records.

The bank has also stated that prosecutors should get those records from Berlanga, D-Corpus Christi.

Berlanga, one of the most influential members of the House, was jailed March 19 for about six hours after he refused to turn over business records to the grand jury.

He later surrendered records to prosecutors after losing an appeal before the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals.

The grand jury is investigating Berlanga's link to the San Antonio law firm of Heard, Goggan, Blair and Williams.

In the past eight years, Heard, Goggan has used a state law to corner the market in collecting delinquent taxes for governmental units. Numerous bills filed in the Legislature that would have hurt Heard, Goggan's business have been killed in House committee.

The grand jury indicted House Speaker Gib Lewis on misdemeanor ethics charges in December for allegedly receiving a gift in the form of a tax payment from the law firm. Lewis, D-Fort Worth, has denied any wrongdoing.

On Friday, House photographer Betty Reichman of Austin was subpoenaed to testify and bring negatives, contact sheets "or other photographic image" taken during the 1989 legislative session.

Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle refused to say what the pictures were of, or what he was looking for.

The House employs several photographers, who take pictures of lawmakers during House sessions, at committee meetings, and other functions.

On Friday, the grand jury also heard testimony from Steve Blair, an Austin attorney with Heard, Goggan, and Greg Dewinne of San Antonio, an accountant for the law firm.

Earle said the grand jury may meet every day starting Tuesday leading up until its term expires Friday.

Attorney asks to expand mental-retardation suit

DALLAS (AP) — An attorney representing mentally retarded residents says court-ordered relief involving Texas' state schools is not sufficient.

David Ferleger of Philadelphia, who represents patients receiving state care, also says he plans to ask a federal judge to order more than $230 million worth of reforms.

Meanwhile, a Texas Department of Mental Health-Mental Retardation official said Friday that procedures were in place at two state schools to prevent sexual activity that was alleged in an inspectors' report.

Ferleger said he will ask U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders of Dallas to expand a 17-year-old class-action suit to include residents of all 13 state schools.

The court will also be asked to place monitors in each of the schools.

"My goal is to show the judge that the relief already granted is not enough," said Ferleger late Thursday. "We need new orders that focus on the individual person."

If granted, that order would mean nearly a quarter of a billion dollars would have to be spent to make all 7,100 mentally retarded residents under the care of TDMHMR a part of the lawsuit, say officials.

'My goal is to show the judge that the relief already granted is not enough.'

David Ferleger, attorney

"I don't have the feeling that the state school is doing what's right for the client, it's doing what it can to get out of the lawsuit," said Ferleger.

Only about 2,000 state school residents are currently plaintiffs in the suit against the institutions. Ferleger will present his reforms at a May 28 hearing on the case.

The attorney also released sexual abuse findings reported by federal Medicaid inspectors at the Fort Worth State School and Abilene State School.

Sexual activity among retarded residents was not properly monitored or investigated at both facilities, inspectors found.

In Abilene, the findings disclosed, a patient known for sexually abusing other patients was involved in three sexual incidents during a three-month period.

"There are systems in place for monitoring and investigating those activities, I think," said Rick Campbell, TDMHMR associate deputy commissioner, who was at the Fort Worth school Friday. "They were even in place at the time of the health department's surveys.

"Part of the problem is in defining what needs to be reported and what should not. Officials of MHMR are in the process of making those determinations," he told The Associated Press.

The AP had called both the Fort Worth and Abilene schools for comment, and was referred to Campbell for reaction.

In 1974, the lawsuit was filed on behalf of mentally retarded residents in some of the 13 state schools.

In a similar case filed on behalf of the state's mentally ill residents, a court-ordered report filed Thursday showed none of the state's eight psychiatric hospitals has made all reforms necessary to meet a June court deadline.

The report in that 17-year-old lawsuit was filed by the court-appointed monitor in the case, David Pharis of Austin, in Dallas federal court. According to visits by Pharis-led survey teams, only 16 percent of 301 patients reviewed received adequate care.

The mentally ill case and the mental retardation lawsuit were both filed in 1974 against MHMR and both are before Sanders.

Two plead guilty in strangulation

CLARKSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Two men pleaded guilty to killing a 14-year-old girl whose body, weighted with cinder blocks, was found in a pond.

Chris Dale Kenemore, 18, and Michael Eugene Jaynes, 21, pleaded guilty to murder in a plea bargain Thursday. Each was sentenced to 99 years in prison, authorities said.

The victim was Angela Faye Smith. All were from Detroit, Texas.

Red River County prosecutor Clayton Hall said the men waived their rights to a jury trial. They had been charged with capital murder.

A 16-year-old boy also accused in the killing faces a court hearing Monday, officials said.

Miss Smith's body was found March 10, with blocks attached to her head and feet.

Her parents at first believed she had run away from home Feb. 23. Law officers believe the girl was strangled the same day she disappeared.

Rhythm, blues legend 'Frogman' receives unusual gift from a fan

GRETNA, La. (AP) — Louisiana rhythm and blues legend Clarence "Frogman" Henry received an unusual gift from a fan — free back surgery.

During Mardi Gras, Henry's ruptured disc worsened to the point that he had to sing and play the piano from a wheelchair.

Neurosurgeon Frank Culicchia volunteered to help when he learned the Frogman had no health insurance.

"He told me his pay would be to see me back singing and playing piano," Henry said after Tuesday's surgery at Meadowcrest Hospital in suburban New Orleans.

Henry claims to be 54, but his physician suspects he's older. The performer, known for his gap-toothed grin, has produced five albums and 36 singles since entering show business at age 6.

The doctor is prescribing physical therapy, and Henry hopes to be well enough to perform at next month's New Orleans Jazz and Heritage Festival.

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Country music stars Garth Brooks, Vince Gill, Joe Diffe and Restless Heart are coming home to Oklahoma to help the state's farmers.

The musicians have agreed to perform at a May 26 benefit organized by the state's Rural Crisis Task Force. The group was formed in 1989 after a study of suicide among Oklahoma farmers.

"The percentage of suicides by farmers was approximately 5 percent greater than the average for the state of Oklahoma," said task force chairman Charles Anderson.

The money will pay for a telephone hot line for legal assistance and for temporary hospitalization insurance, he said.

Brooks, Gill and Diffe are Oklahoma natives. Three members of Restless Heart have Oklahoma ties as well.

MALIBU, Calif. (AP) — It's going to be tougher for homeowners to move in next to Johnny Carson, Sylvester Stallone and Cher now that Malibu has finally become a city, opponents of growth say.

This star-studded enclave along the Pacific coast became Los Angeles County's 87th city on Thursday, ending its long struggle to break free of county control.

Malibu's 20,000 residents overwhelmingly approved an incorporation measure last June. The county Board of Supervisors was dead set against it, however, and relented only last month.

The supervisors had wanted to build a new sewer system in Malibu to avoid mudslides in the hilly canyons. Many residents opposed the plan, saying it would lead to unrestricted growth.

"Everyone's extremely happy," said Mayor Walt Keller, who vowed to maintain the status quo in a city that's become a symbol of sun, sand and wealth.

In a ceremony Thursday, Keller slammed state and county officials for looking at Malibu and seeing "a land ripe for freeways, marinas, power plants and hotels."

"The residents of Malibu had a different vision," he said. In the background, red, white and blue banners said "Free at Last."

SILVER SPRING, Md. (AP) — The children's songs of Barry Polisar review the sometimes bumpy terrain of childhood — underwear, nose-picking and sadistic big brothers.

His irreverent and satiric material has had mixed results: Polisar's been censored in some Maryland schools but invited to perform on the White House lawn.

Polisar, who was banned from Anne Arundel County schools last fall, will sing at the annual White House Easter egg hunt Monday.

"Isn't it amazing what a difference six months makes?" Polisar said this week from his Silver Spring home in suburban Washington, D.C.

Rock star Eric Clapton and Italian actress Lori Del Santo, the parents of four-year-old Conor Clapton, leave St. Mary's Church in Ripley, Surrey, in southern England, Thursday, after attending their son's funeral. Conor was killed after falling out of a window in a New York apartment building.

Father brings daughter home from the Philippines

By Rich Mendelson

NEW YORK (AP) — I left New York at noon on Monday, alone. I returned from the Philippines 77½ dizzying hours later — with my new 10-month-old daughter.

In the interim, I traveled 20,000 miles. I slept a total of 13 hours. I changed diapers in the cramped bathroom of a 747. I got stuck in rainy-season traffic in Manila. I spent five hours in Japan, never leaving the airport.

Someday, when Samantha has grown up, I will tell her that I went to the ends of the earth for her, and back. It was not the same as childbirth, but it was an ordeal in its own right.

WHEN MY WIFE, Donna, and I decided to adopt a second child two years ago, we assumed the process would be the same as it was for our son Alexander. We would fill out the paperwork, and someone would escort the baby to New York.

But the rules had changed. Our adoption agency, Wide Horizons for Children in Waltham, Mass., said the government in the Philippines wanted parents to pick up their children. They spoke of the enriching experience of seeing your child's homeland and meeting the caretakers in the orphanage.

The experience seemed more life-threatening than enriching with each report of political unrest and resentment toward American bases in the Philippines.

We had turned to foreign adoption because we couldn't afford an estimated $15,000 to $20,000 for a domestic adoption. Wide Horizons charged according to a family's ability to pay.

We applied for a second child, a girl, in September 1988. After 20 months of fingerprinting, background checks, immigration forms, passports and other documents, we got a picture of our daughter-to-be.

She had been born Dec. 13, 1989. Her mother was not married and could not afford a child.

At first, my wife planned to go with her mother. But the trip would have exhausted them, leaving me to care for our son and new daughter. It was decided that I would go, pick up our baby girl, rest for a night and then return.

The worst-case scenario? Thirty hours with a crying baby, compounded by jet lag.

OUR ADOPTION agency provided 20 pages on Filipino culture and instructions about what traveling parents could expect, down to the specific detail on where to meet a pre-arranged escort at the Manila airport.

We packed clothes for me and the baby, diapers, bottles and three bags of clothing and over-the-counter medical supplies for orphanages in Manila.

The flight was uneventful — but nearly sleepless. After two planes, four movies, seven meals and 36 hours, I arrived in Manila, having slept three hours. Anxiety kept my eyes from closing; I checked my papers and instructions countless times, and chatted with fellow passengers.

I arrived after midnight. Three times, I heard the name "Rich Mendelson" on the airport public address system; each time, the heavy accent of the announcer prevented me from hearing where I was to meet my party.

Finally, I connected with Ron Fullerton. He and his wife, Lita, operate Chosen Children, a private adoption agency, and they were to be my guides through the 30 hours I spent in the Philippines.

Ron is a native of Maine; his wife was born in the Philippines. The next morning (despite my fatigue, I was wide awake after four hours of sleep), I saw their orphanage, which cares for disabled babies under age 3.

The Fullertons raise money to care for the children and provide operations for those that can be helped surgically. Although parents are sought, Lita Fullerton said there were at least five children with severe birth defects — such as cerebral palsy and blindness — who would be hers for life.

This was just the first of three orphanages I would visit that day. Next was St. Rita's, where my son had spent the first 17 months of his life. A bulletin board there is adorned with pictures we had sent of Alex.

Then — through chaotic traffic that put New York's to shame, made worse by rainy-season floods — we took the hour-long trip across the city to the International Alliance for Children, to get my new daughter.

I met the orphanage director and Violy, the woman who took care of my daughter for nine months. Then we walked down a long foyer to a back bedroom, the day nursery. Violy held up a brown-haired baby in a tattered T-shirt and diaper, her feet crusted with sores caused by scabies.

"Here's Daddy," Violy said.

Numbed by fatigue, I picked Samantha up and raised her above my head, inadvertently frightening her. I quickly brought her down and hugged her, and for the first time my daughter smiled at me.

For a half-hour, I took pictures of the nursery, other children and Samantha. The orphanage's director gave me instructions on her diet, medical condition and sleeping habits.

Rich Mendelson holds his adopted daughter, Samantha, 13 months, as he poses with his family at their Rockland County, N.Y. home. At left is wife Donna and at right is son Alex, 4, also adopted. Mendelson journeyed to the Philippines to bring Samantha home.

Violy, a thin woman of about 30 with short, black hair, said little. But when it came time for us to leave, she broke into sobs.

My voice cracking, I promised to write and send pictures. And we left.

WE SLEPT FOR six hours. Ron Fullerton dropped me at the airport at 5 a.m, and the job of juggling baby, luggage and documents began.

The plane was half-full, so we stretched out across three seats. Samantha slept for most of the four-hour flight to Tokyo.

We had a five-hour layover there. We walked around Narita Airport twice, changed three diapers, drank a bottle of soy milk and had a 90-minute crying fit. We were an unusual sight — a 6-foot, 210-pound Caucasian tending to a 15-pound Filipino baby — and four people took our picture.

I arranged to have a bulkhead seat with a bassinet on the flight to New York. Samantha had been so good on the first plane, I was certain the next flight would be easy.

Samantha had other ideas. Maybe she was used to me and ready to exert her influence, maybe her body clock was still on Manila time, maybe it was the confusion of the last 24 hours or maybe she was sick and tired of soy milk.

She cried for the first four hours of the flight.

She hated her bassinet and would not rest in my arms. Other passengers tried to amuse her with funny faces, peek-a-boo and cooing sounds. I walked her up the aisle, trying to rock her to sleep and give my neighbors a break.

After four hours, she slept. I didn't. When she awoke five hours later, she was hungry, and not in the mood for soy milk.

I shared some of my chicken dinner, giving her pieces of the roll dipped in gravy and some mashed vegetables and small pieces of chicken. She was happy for most of the rest of the flight.

About an hour before getting into New York, it became clear she had to be changed. I decided to take her to the lavatory, rather than offend my fellow passengers. It was also a good time to give her a final cleaning and dress her in a new pink outfit to meet Mommy.

I wedged myself into the tiny bathroom with the changing bag, diaper, powder, wipes — and, oh yes, Samantha.

The roar of jet engines, magnified by the lavatory's acoustics, must have been a frightening orchestration to the little person watching Papa fumble around while trying to hold baby on a blanket draped over the toilet seat.

After what seemed like hours, we emerged. My fellow passengers certainly wondered how I had made out; I smiled like it was a piece of cake.

Arrival at Kennedy airport was not the end of our odyssey. First, we had to deal with a Disney World-like line at immigration; once we reached the front, we were directed to another room, where we were delayed by a confrontation between authorities and a Nigerian woman who claimed to be from New York.

"You're not from New York. You don't speak like you're from New York. Where are you from?" the officer asked the woman.

I was holding an antsy baby who was beginning to wonder when this series of buses, planes and lines would end. "I hope that problem with that lady in there is not holding up my paperwork," I shouted.

An officer said he'd check. One minute later, he returned our passports and said Samantha would get her green card in a few weeks.

MOMMY, NANA and brother Alex were waiting in the airport lobby.

Donna — surprised by how well we both had weathered the trip — reached for Samantha, and was rewarded with a smile.

Alex, age 4, approached to kiss his baby sister; we reminded him that she's delicate. Ever since, he's told all who would listen that she's "deck-o-lit."

He believes babies come from the airport. After all, that's where he came from, and that's where his baby sister came from.

Chinese peasants continue to cast away female babies

N.Y. Times News Service

CHANGSHA, China — The babies in the stuffy, toasty-warm rooms of the orphanage, where hundreds of abandoned infants are brought each year, say something about Chinese social values: most are girls, the rest are handicapped.

For years, the communist government has tried to stamp out a feudalistic attitude toward sex roles that has persisted for centuries among China's peasants.

Even today, many parents want baby boys and not baby girls, and nowhere is this bias more vivid than in the rows of healthy but forsaken baby girls at the No.1 Community Welfare Center here, most of whom have been found on someone's doorstep or in the street.

Many of the girls will not stay long, for childless Chinese couples, and now foreign couples, will scoop them up. But the babies who are perceived as marred in some way — a cleft lip, a missing limb, a blind eye, or a mental handicap — will remain.

In China, girls are also often viewed as handicapped, especially in the countryside, where manual labor is a major factor in becoming rich. Moreover, the government's one-child policy, in effect for more than a decade, sometimes aggravates the problem, as couples who prefer a boy decide to abandon a newborn girl so they can try again, for a son.

"Many families still have a feudalistic attitude of favoring men," said Li Dingkun, deputy director of the Hunan Province Civil Affairs Department.

"We must change the old ways of thinking. We must get rid of this custom of the woman's being married off to the man and becoming part of his household. If two people get married, it shouldn't matter which side of the family they go off to live with."

The number of orphans in China is still small compared with its population; China has only 140,000 orphans nationwide, the Ministry of Civilian Affairs says.

Here in Hunan Province, for example, officials say there are only 10,000 orphans, compared with a population of 61 million.

They add that in recent years, however, the proportion of baby girls given up for adoption — most come from rural areas — has been increasing each year.

The number of couples seeking to adopt the girls has also risen.

"The number of couples who want kids exceeds the number of kids we have to give," said Su Kejun, director of the Civil Affairs Bureau in Changsha, the capital of Hunan Province.

Since 1988, when the government loosened restrictions on foreigners' adopting Chinese babies, a number of infants, including 35 from the No.1 Welfare Center here last year, found homes abroad in places like Canada, the United States, and France. The majority of babies still go to childless Chinese couples, but now the No.1 Welfare Center has 30 applications from foreign couples willing to pay $4,000 to $5,000 to adopt a Chinese baby.

"It doesn't matter whether they are Chinese parents or foreign parents, we look upon them as parents," said Tany Yupin, president of the center. "It is best for these children to grow up inside a home, but of course, this place is the next best thing and we try to make it a home for them."

Foreigners are always given healthy babies without disabilities, but the center scrutinizes applications carefully and the process can take six months or more, including a trip to China.

Unlike South Korea, which in the past has placed many babies for adoption in the West but is now growing more sensitive to the practice, China does not seem embarrassed that babies are being adopted by foreign families.

It may also help that money from foreign couples helps run the orphanages and care for babies that cannot be placed.

Many of the babies and children who end up at centers like the No.1 Welfare Center are born outside China's elaborate family planning monitoring network, which tracks couples and their child-bearing history.

Currently, the center, a large compound that is also a home for the elderly, has about 100 orphans, some like Liang Xiao, a shy 12-year-old country girl whose parents died last year. She attends school but lives at the center and plays with the other orphans and handicapped children.

In other cases, parents have been jailed or the children themselves have lost their way. One young lost girl, about 4 or 5, is staying at the center until officials can locate her parents.

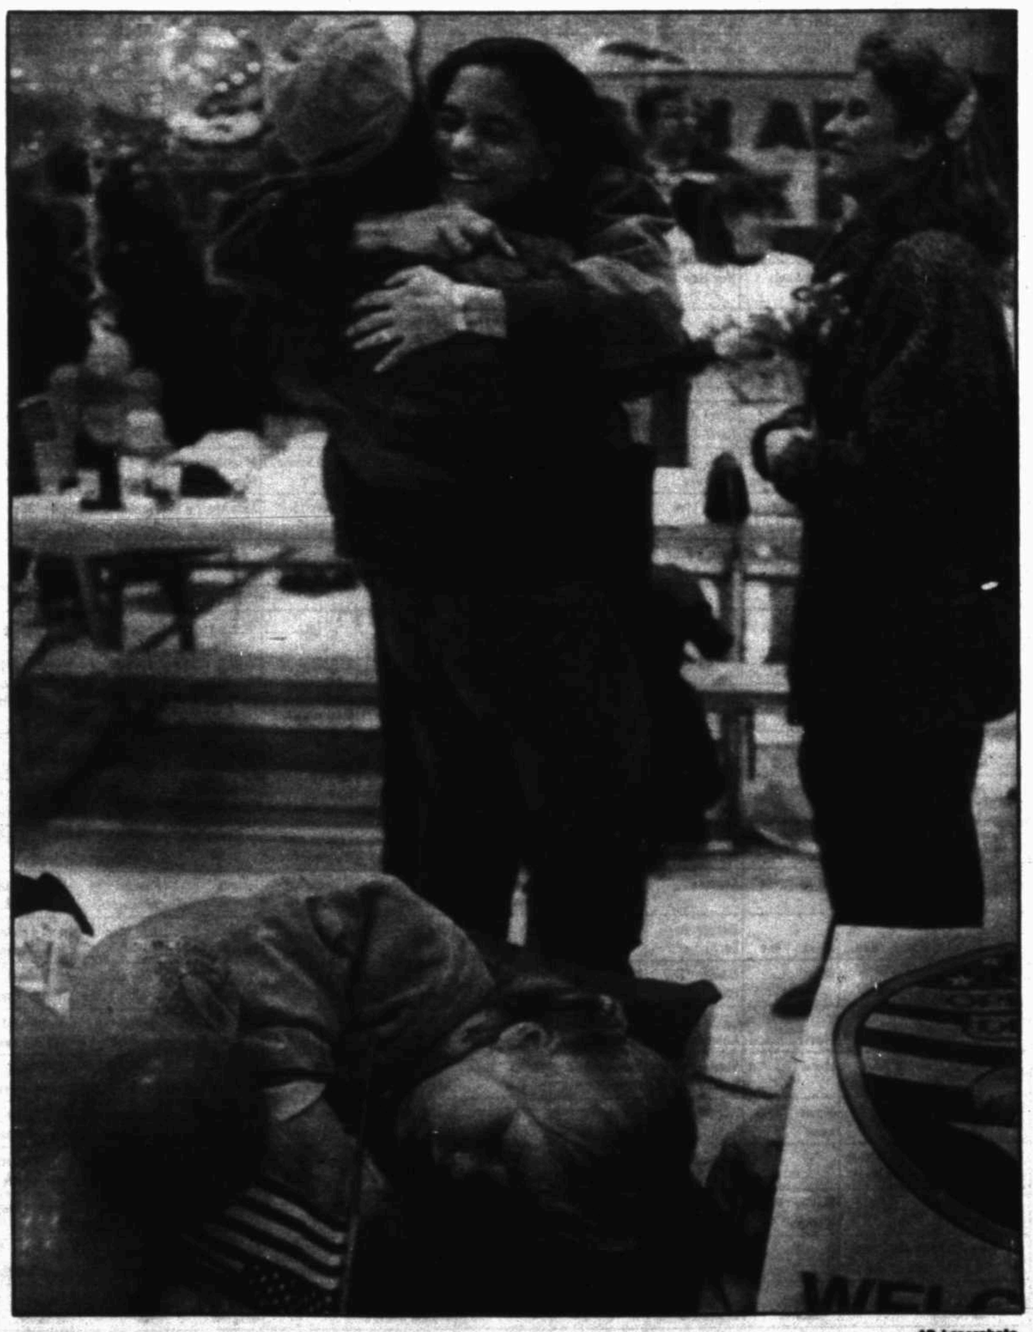

Attitudes toward girls and disabled children are changing, at least in the cities, where the pressures of farming do not bear so heavily on a couple. But as attitudes evolve, there are sometimes disputes that create family feuds.

Wang Yanghui, a young Changsha woman, gave birth to a boy who developed an inflammation of the brain.

Her husband wanted to abandon the boy, who doctors said would grow up paralyzed and retarded. Last year, he prepared a small bundle of clothes, dressed up the baby, and planned to leave him on the doorstep of an orphanage.

But it rained that night and his mother, Xu Xiuying, said it would be unlucky to leave the baby out in the rain. So they kept the baby.

"The husband wanted to throw the baby away, but his wife disagreed," said Ms. Xu, the 49-year-old grandmother of the baby. "I couldn't bear to abandon the baby. If I live, the baby should live, too."

Fourteen die as twisters, thunderstorms hit the South

Associated Press

'I was in my bathroom — which is now gone — and my husband was making the bed — which is now in the street.'

— Susan Lohmueller, County, Ga., resident

Violent thunderstorms surged across the South on Friday with wind topping 70 mph, enough rain to wash out a bridge and deadly tornadoes that shredded mobile homes. At least 14 people died.

"I was in my bathroom — which is now gone — and my husband was making the bed — which is now in the street," said Cobb County, Ga., resident Susan Lohmueller. "It just got real dark, real cloudy and we thought we heard it hailing. I took the kids and ran to the basement. We literally slid down the basement steps."

From late Thursday and into Friday, storms stretched from eastern Texas across Louisiana, Arkansas, Mississippi, Alabama and Georgia. Rain streamed northeastward up the East Coast.

Three deaths were blamed on high wind in Alabama. In Arkansas, seven children and a driver died when a vehicle skidded off a dirt road made slippery by heavy rain. In Mississippi, one person was killed on a highway in blinding rain and two crewmen died when a tugboat capsized in high wind.

West of Atlanta in Georgia's Cobb and Douglas counties, one twister touched down Friday morning near Austell, hitting a residential area, and the other hit near downtown Douglasville. At least 15 people were injured, two critically.

"The noise was terrifying. I took the covers and I wrapped up in the covers and laid on the floor and prayed," said Ethyl Catchings, who was home alone in her Cobb County home when the storm sent a tree into her dining room.

Douglasville Police Lt. Bill Ferguson said roofs were blown off almost all buildings downtown, several of which caught fire. Some office buildings were destroyed.

Georgia Power spokesman Barry Inman said about 23,000 people statewide were without power from the storms, 13,000 of those in the metro Atlanta area, including Cobb and Douglas counties. Cobb Hospital reported it was operating on emergency generators.

Thunderstorms packing wind up to 74 mph made two passes over central and northern Alabama before dawn, killing three people, injuring at least 20 and leaving a trail of wreckage.

At Munford, Ala., 10 miles east of Talladega, three members of one family were killed when the wind tore up mobile homes. Deputy Coroner Clarence Haynes said the storm picked up the family's mobile home behind the Munford Fire Department, tore it apart and dumped one victim's body one-quarter mile away.

Alabama Power Co. reported 40,000 to 50,000 customers without electricity because of trees and power lines knocked down, and a company spokesman said it was impossible to say when most of the service would be restored.

In Mississippi, two tug boat crewmen disappeared Friday in the Biloxi Ship Channel when their small vessel capsized while moving a ship to safe harbor during turbulent weather, authorities said. Diving teams found the bodies Friday afternoon.

Coast Guard Petty Officer Bill Turner said witnesses reported the 36-foot tug was following the larger ship in "a 4- to 5-foot chop and winds gusting better than 50 miles per hour. The tug began to take water over the bow and onto the side and this resulted in the vessel capsizing."

Elsewhere in Mississippi, two people were tossed around and injured when they drove across a highway bridge as it was buckling and giving way early Friday, said Claiborne County Sheriff Frank Davis. They made it across and tried to warn another motorist; he was unable to stop before his pickup went off the end and into a swollen creek below but was able to escape.

In rural north-central Arkansas, a four-wheel-drive vehicle crowded with teen-agers on a fun ride after a family cookout slid off a curve late Thursday on a rain-slickened dirt road and overturned in six feet of water in a ditch.

Eight of the 11 people on board — the driver, 33, and seven children ranging in age from 11 to 15 — were killed. Rain had fallen off and on all day and the area was under a flood watch.
