From Egypt...

Soviet Officials Expelled

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — President Anwar Sadat has ordered more than 1,500 Soviet officials and advisers out of Egypt, claiming Moscow incited the recent Moslem-Christian strife in Cairo.

It is the most serious rift in Soviet-Egyptian relations since Sadat expelled 17,000 Soviet military advisers from Egypt in 1972.

The Cabinet on Tuesday gave Soviet Ambassador Vladimir Polyakov and six members of his staff 48 hours to leave the country. It also ordered a Hungarian diplomat expelled on grounds that he, too, was "involved" in the conflict between Moslem fundamentalists and the Coptic Christian minority.

The Cabinet also terminated the contracts of an estimated 1,500 Soviet technical advisers, expelled two Soviet journalists, including the Cairo correspondent of Tass, the Soviet news agency, and closed the Soviet military liaison bureau in Cairo and its Egyptian counterpart in Moscow.

Reliable sources said most of the Soviet advisers were working at an aluminum plant, a steel mill, a shipyard, on land reclamation projects and at the Aswan Dam. They were given a week to leave the country.

"We have no comment," said a Soviet Embassy employee, reached by telephone. But Tass, in a dispatch from Moscow, said the Egyptian charges of a Soviet conspiracy were "blatant lies."

A Cabinet statement accused the Soviets of "recruiting agents in Egypt...exploiting religious strife, and influencing the spread and escalation of the sectarian conflict" in which at least 70 people have died this year.

The statement said Polyakov was summoned to the Foreign Ministry, informed of the expulsion orders and told the "suspicious activities of the Soviet diplomats was tantamount to intervention in Egypt's internal affairs."

More than 1,500 religious leaders, politicians, lawyers and journalists have been arrested in the past two weeks in a crackdown on Sadat's opponents as a result of the Christian-Moslem fighting. The president said in a speech Monday that 12 of those arrested were "Soviet-inspired."

"The Soviets discovered that none of the political parties, the socialists or the leftists, were strong enough (to overthrow the government) and that the Moslem fundamentalists were the strongest element," Sadat said.

"So they figured that if they could get them and the government into a confrontation, through religious strife, the scene would be free for them to take over."

The expulsion of the Soviet ambassador and six members of his staff reduced the embassy to the same size — 10 diplomats — as Egypt's embassy in Moscow. Egypt's ambassador to the Soviet Union, Samih Anwar, was appointed in late 1978 but has never gone to Moscow.

It was the fourth reduction of the Kremlin's diplomatic representation in Egypt in five years. But it stopped short of a total break in relations.

Haig, Gromyko Meeting Likely To Be 'Chilly'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Next week's meeting between Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko is shaping up as one of the chilliest superpower encounters since the bleakest days of the Cold War.

There was never much expectation that the meeting would go smoothly but two developments, both in the first half of August, ensured that the session would take place against a background of mutual hostility almost without parallel.

The first development was the American decision to go ahead with production of neutron weapons. The Soviets, in one of their sharpest attacks on the Reagan administration, said the action was "designed to bring the world closer to nuclear catastrophe."

A few days later, the Reagan administration received information which officials said indicated that Laos, Cambodia and Afghanistan — all closely allied with the Soviets — have been using chemical poisons against armed resistence movements.

U.S. officials said that conclusion, described as "100 percent foolproof," went a long way toward explaining the gruesome deaths of perhaps thousands of people in recent years, particularly in the two Indochina countries.

The administration long has suspected Soviet-supplied chemical poisons, sprayed from aircraft, were being used in the three countries. Now it claims to have incontrovertible evidence, based on tests carried out in Minnesota on plant samples from Cambodia.

A decision was made to go public with the information. The administration could have delegated a spokesman to release it, but Haig felt a high-level disclosure was necessary. He decided to do the job himself. sAnd as his forum, he chose West Berlin, long a symbol of East-West conflict and a hotbed of opposition to the administration's neutron weapon decision.

In his speech last Sunday, Haig outlined the administration's findings but did not directly accuse the Soviets. Nonetheless, U.S. scientists briefing reporters at the State Department on Monday left the clear impression that Moscow was responsible.

U.S. officials say there is not much the United States can do about the alleged Soviet activity, even though use of chemical poisons is barred under international agreement. The officials acknowledge that enforcement provisions are weak.

The administration is sharing its information with other nations that have signed the agreement. The most the United States can do, one official said, is lodge a complaint with the U.N. Security Council.

It will be at the U.N. General Assembly next week that Haig will have the first of two meetings with Gromyko. September meetings between the American and Soviet foreign secretaries have been held in that forum for years.

Winners Each Miss Four

Last week's SDN Football Contest must have been a little bit easier to pick, because we had an eight-way tie for first place.

The winners, with four misses each, were: Clovia Pavlik, Box 486; Erwin Pavlik, Box 486 (they didn't miss the same ones); Teresa M. Hall, 210 34th; Susie Lee, 3604 Kerrville; Joy Barnes, 2213 43rd; Paul Tate, 3602 Ave. U; Allan Wright, 2313 41st; and J.L. King, 404 28th. They will share equally the first and second prize money of $17.50.

Pick up an entry blank at one of the sponsoring merchants and try your luck at picking the winner this week.

Water Treatment Expansion Is Due

The Texas Health Department wants Snyder to increase the capacity of its water treatment facilities and it wants the Colorado Municipal Water District to move the Snyder intake at Lake J. B. Thomas.

In a letter to city and water district officials signed by Ruben A. Alvarado, chief of surveillance and technical assistance of the division of water hygiene, it was pointed out the during some peak demand periods in summer months, Snyder's water treatment facilities are called upon to exceed recommended capacity.

City manager John Gayle said the city had been aware of this for some time and had been keeping records on peaking periods as it considered plans for improvements to the system. Some discussion of possible projects to expand the facilities already has occurred, and work in that direction likely will be speeded up now that the state has made its recommendation, Gayle said.

The state report indicated that Snyder's intake at Lake Thomas, which provides most of the water supply here, should be moved to a deeper area of the lake.

City officials said they had talked with Colorado River Municipal Water district officials about this recommendation, but the CRMWD office in Big spring had not received its letter from the health department.

Gayle said the state's recommendation may result in shifting of some priorities among city improvement projects. The addition to the water treatment plant likely would cost well in excess of half a million doliars, it was noted. This project has been regarded mostly as a long-range goal, but city growth and increased demands for water probably will push it to the front.

Stamps Used As Passports

EL PASO, Texas (AP) -- Federal officials have selected El Paso as the site to test a new way of admitting Mexicans into the United States for brief visits.

Officials say the new plan involves issuing stamps for Mexican passports.

Wednesday update

Shuttle Test Delayed

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A test of the space shuttle's new water-spraying system aimed at softening dangerous shock waves during liftoff was delayed several hours today so technicians could finish purging fumes from the orbiter's external fuel tank.

The Columbia's new plumbing system is mounted on the launch platform and is designed to shoot 100,000 gallons of water per minute directly beneath the nozzle of each rocket booster.

The test — a critical step toward the scheduled second mission Oct.9 — was to have begun at noon but was put off until 3 p.m.

The 154-foot external fuel tank was test-loaded with fuel Tuesday and then emptied, but the purging of residue and vapors had not been completed by 6 a.m. Workers returned to the pad at 9 a.m., three hours behind schedule.

Hurricane Harvey Weakens

MIAMI (AP) — Hurricane Harvey's winds were down to 105 mph today, and forecasters said it would weaken further as it heads toward the colder Atlantic waters east of the resort island of Bermuda.

Harvey — the strongest storm at the halfway point of the 1981 Atlantic hurricane season — had 130 mph winds Tuesday, but lost strength throughout the night.

National Hurricane Center forecasters still called the storm "a dangerous hurricane," but said the system was moving over the open ocean and posed no threat to land.

Dedication Furor Arises

HOUSTON (AP) — The new Stratford High School yearbook is dedicated to Jesus Christ, and the 92-word inscription prompted a flurry of protests Tuesday from students, parents and a Jewish organization.

Even Dale Stafford, principal of this Spring Branch District school, said he was "shocked and upset" to read the opening dedication in the 272-page yearbook, the Memosyne.

"It's really a good book, except for the dedication," he said.

The inscription begins, "To Jesus Christ who calls all Spartans (the school's mascot)" to take a closer look at their lives.

New Props Considered

WASHINGTON (AP) — Instead of using fire-spouting jet engines, the next generation of airlines may be hauled through the skies by propellers.

The prospect of passengers weaned on jets stepping back a generation into propeller planes is being considered seriously by aircraft designers and airlines, engineers said Tuesday.

William E. Arndt of the Lockheed-Georgia Co., said the new prop planes would be very different from those of the past, faster and much more pleasant to fly in.

"Propellers appear about ready to make a big comeback," he told a Lockheed Corp., technical symposium. "The new planes would have cruise speeds and comfort equal to present jets and a big advantage in fuel efficiency."

Returns To WWII Front

RINGINGEN, West Germany (AP) — Part of the first American division to capture a major German city in World War II is back for the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's annual fall war games. This time it's under the command of a German general.

Lt. Gen. Meinhard Glanz was a private in Hitler's army in 1944 when the 1st Infantry Division captured Aachen, near the Belgian border.

The SDN Column

Back in our younger days, we worked a short time for a publisher who always reminded new employes, "I do all of the drinking for the company, and anyone who tries to help out will no longer have a job."

It was accepted with a laugh, but with the clear understanding that all employees were expected to refrain from partaking of demon rum, or at least make certain that the boss didn't find out.

We were reminded of this the other day when we read that the University of Texas at Austin had settled a case with an employee who had been fired after the employee was convicted on drug charges.

The president of the university fired the employee because the university regents had adopted a rule automatically firing any employee convicted on drug charges. The settlement was logical because a federal court already had held that a similar rule which applied to students was unconstitutional.

The employee involved in the dispute was convicted of possession of LSD.

It would have been interesting to see how the drinking publisher would have reacted to this.

Also, back in our younger days while sojourning in a coastal city at Uncle Sam's convenience, we asked an old salt why a ship is always referred to as "she" or "her."

This, of course, was before ERA surfaced, and there was a prompt answer.

"Well, it costs a lot to keep her in paint and powder, and she'll drift off if you don't keep her tied down. She makes her best showing in a high wind, and it takes a man to handle her."

Ask Us

Q.—If the board of trustees at Western Texas College feel it is necessary to provide a house for the WTC president, why don't they have the residential construction class build one on the campus instead of buying a house in town?

A.—This was one of the possible courses that was considered, but the residential construction department of the college has enough student housing projects to keep it busy for at least a year, maybe more. Also, suitable building sites on the campus are expected to be used for student housing.

Entertainment, Visiting...

County Prepares For Annual Fair, Reunion

Scurry County is planning an old-fashioned "gathering" for Sept. 24-25-26.

These are the dates for the annual Scurry County Fair and Reunion, with activities planned to interest old-timers, newcomers, youngsters and "in-betweeners."

Headquarters for the reunion events, which will emphasize "just plain good visiting times," will be Room A of the Scurry County Coliseum.

The third Scurry County Reunion will begin Thursday evening, Sept. 24, at 6 p. m., with the Snyder Newcomers Club hosting the evening's event.

Nelda Gilbreth, president of the club, is urging all persons who have recently made Snyder their home to come out and get acquainted with each other and with some of "the natives."

"If you have lived in Snyder five years or more, please consider yourself old-timer enough to come out and welcome new faces," sponsors of the event said.

There is entertainment in store on the coliseum stage Thursday night also. Hatley Lewis and his Western In-Betweens will play from 7 p. m. to 8 p. m. In Room A, the "Stars of Tomorrow" will perform immediately preceding and following the western band, at approximtely 6:30 p. m. and 8:30 p. m. "Stars of Tomorrow" are young students of the West Texas Theatric Arts Centre.

On Friday evening, Sept. 25, beginning at 6 p. m., the Snyder Jaycee-ettes are inviting their members and families to come by for refreshments and visitation before going to the Snyder-Sweetwater football game in Tiger Stadium.

On Saturday, Sept. 26, everyone is invited to take a stroll "down memory lane" with Historic Scurry County, Inc., and the Scurry County Historical Commission. Registration and coffee time will begin at 10 a. m.

To set a festive mood, Mildred Lewis and Virginia Whitson will lead the group in music, songs and audience participation.

Franklin Pruitt, master of ceremonies, will award door prizes and give special recognition to the oldest person in attendance, the youngest person registered, and the person, or persons, who travelled the farthest to attend the event.

Heritage tours will begin at 2 p. m. Those desiring to take the tour will assemble in Room A of the coliseum for a brief outline and schedule of the tours. Then they will board vans at the side of the coliseum.

Included in the tour will be visits to the Diamond M Museum, the First Presbyterian Church, the Scurry County Museum, Prairie Dog Town, Engine No. 5, a drive by the old county jail and the medallion homes on 32nd St. Climaxing the tour will be a refreshment stop at the yard of the B. J. Bartels home at 2306 32nd St.

The tour is free, but you must pick up your complimentary ticket ahead of time. Space is limited on the vans to 63 persons, Mrs. Jess Everett, chairman of the commission, said. Persons may go in individual cars, but the planning committee needs to know how many persons to expect. Tickets are available at Margaret's and at the Snyder Book Store, both on the Snyder square.

"Don't forget to return to the coliseum for the finale of the reunion and fair—the sampler by the Fort Griffin Fandangle from Albany," said Mrs. Everett.

SNYDER TEMPERATURES: High Tuesday, 88 degrees; low, 57 degrees; reading at 7 a. m. today, 59 degrees; precipitation, none; total precipitation for 1981 to date, 15.57.

WEST TEXAS: Partly cloudy through Thursday with scattered afternoon and nighttime thunderstorms. Cooler. Highs 60s north to near 90 Big Bend. Lows 50s except near 60 Big Bend.

About Next Month's Flight. . .

Shuttle Astronauts Are Confident

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The next two space shuttle astronauts say they are confident of a successful flight next month despite a mysterious shock wave problem that slightly damaged the shuttle on its first orbital voyage last April.

"We are totally confident that we've got a vehicle that's ready to go," said Joe Engle, commander of the second flight of the spaceship Columbia.

He and fellow astronaut Dick Truly are scheduled to blast off from Cape Canaveral, Fla., Oct. 9 at 7:30 a.m. EDT for a five-day mission, the first ever in a used spacecraft.

The Columbia, which takes off like a rocket but lands like an airplane, spent three days in orbit last spring on its maiden flight.

It was considered a successful voyage, but several months afterward, engineers found that a shock wave lasting one tenth of a second had caused some structural damage.

It bent four struts supporting two forward fuel tanks and moved wing surfaces that supposedly were locked in place. Scientists called it an "overpressure" problem and said it was caused by air that expanded when the ship's two solid rocket boosters ignited.

"We probably do not fully understand the overpressure problem," said Engle. "It doesn't lend itself to a very clean analytical solution."

He said engineers had devised two systems to reduce the shock waves on the second launch — one using water to absorb the vibrations and the other using steel plates. "Either system would work," Engle said.

One of the primary missions of the second shuttle voyage is to test a $100 million mechanical arm, a gift from Canada, where it was designed and built.

"We want to understand the dynamics of the arm in zero gravity," said Truly. The 50-foot-long arm, which weighs 950 pounds, is so delicate it cannot support its own weight in earth gravity.

In later flights the arm will be used to deploy and retrieve satellites. It has a short, open-ended tube in place of a "hand" that grabs objects by grasping a stem. It can only grab objects that have been fitted with one of the special stems.

Scientist also have a package of radar and camera equipment they hope will allow them to analyze lightning storms, air pollution, ocean currents and mineral deposits on earth.

In one experiment, Engle and Truly will cultivate sunflower plants to try to find the ideal soil moisture for plant growth in the weightlessness of space.

"Dick is going to do the weeding and hoeing, and I'm going to water," Engle said. "We both like to eat sunflower seeds."

Of the some 350 shark species, roughly a third are egg layers. The rest give birth to live pups, usually in groups of 6 to 12. But some species may bear as many as 40 live shark.

EDITOR'S NOTE—The following is Part 2 of a two-part article.

We are not doing nothing about rising hospital costs.

In Mendocino County, California, local schoolteachers are rewarded for staying out of the hospital. If a beneficiary under the city's health plan claims less than $500 in a year, the unspent balance is added to his retirement fund.

While the costs of other health care plans have increased 25 percent, the costs for this one have not increased at all for three years!

For 20 years I have watched Servicemaster's increasing involvement in hospital cleaning and, more recently, materials management.

Most impressive has been this contribution to the AHA's cost containment efforts.

I know of one hospital which has delegated materials management to these specialists--a 450-bed hospital and medical center--which has saved $189,000 in purchases, $18,000 in labor, $192,000 in reduced inventory and has generated $196,000 additional revenue by updating pricing. That is a total of more than half a million dollars which the patients of that hospital will not have to pay.

A favorite golfing companion, Ken Wessner of Servicemaster, keeps me updated on what you are doing.

In 270 of your hospitals this past year, professional management of operations and maintenance has accomplished an energy saving of 18 per cent. (That's 5.7 million dollars worth.)

Said another way, the energy thus saved would have been enough to run 31 100-bed hospitals for a full year.

I've always thought one good example is worth a thousand admonitions.

Each year for five during National Hospital Week I have publicly applauded the AHA and the V.E. and the facilities which have demonstrated cost containment.

I am proud to salute their administrators.

They deserve to be proud, too.

And could be, would be, if the eyes of the news were less myopic.

Our countrymen, sick and well, must be helped to see them as they really are.

Conscientious stewards of mankind's noblest cause.

Doing their thing despite all the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune.

Better than their counterparts anywhere else in the world.

Demonstration Slated Sunday

The Scurry County Fair Association and the Scurry County 4-H Club wish to announce a demonstration which will be held on Sunday at 3 p.m. in the ag barn adjacent to the coliseum. The meeting will be held to demonstrate the different events in the upcoming Scurry County Fair Youth Horse show, explain the rules and give tips on competing.

Kent Mills, 4-H club adult leader, will discuss the events while the members of the 4-H Horse club will demonstrate. The demonstration is being held primarily to help those youths who have not competed in horse shows before. However, the meeting is open to anyone interested in attending. Anyone wishing further information should contact Mills at 573-2073.

Oliver Cromwell took the title Lord Protector of England in 1653. As the army's commander, he forcibly ended the "Rump Parliament" and nominated another which turned dictatorial powers over to him. Cromwell put down rebellion, passed anti-Catholic laws and fought a successful war with Spain before he died in 1658.

Jaycees Make Donation

Snyder Jaycees continue to serve the citizens of the area by presenting a check recently in the amount of $500 to Joy Loyd, spokesperson for Camp Road Runner.

Camp Road Runner is located on Lake Brownwood and serves as a retreat during the summer for mentally handicapped individuals from Snyder and the surrounding area. The proceeds from the Jaycee donation will help Scurry County residents with expenses and tuition in order to attend the camp.

The benefit softball tournament was held at Winston Park by the Jaycees in order to raise the funds, quoted Robert Pinkston, chairman of the project. Several businesses also were instrumental in the success of the project, indicated Pinkston. They were First Federal Savings and Loan, First National Bank, West Texas State Bank, Snyder National Bank, Snyder Savings and Loan, Burgess-McWilliams Pharmacy, Key Brothers Honda and Implement, Musslewhite Trucking, Lota Burger, Systems by Ponder, Tri-State Construction, Thornhill's Hair Designs, Snyder Insurance Agency, and Snyder Travelodge Motel.

Pinkston also indicated that residents and merchants of Snyder were very supportive and played a key role in making the tournament a successful fund raising project. "People helping people is why Snyder is such a great place to live," he quoted. Pinkston is a vice-president of the Texas Jaycees as well as an active Snyder Jaycee.

Mr. and Mrs. H. B. (Mary) Lewis of Levelland spent Saturday night, August 28, with his sister, Mrs. Clara Hoskins, enroute from Lake Whitney where they visited Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Drennan.

Mrs. Clinton, (Billy) Lewis of Kermit was in Snyder doing consultant work for Snyder Nursing Care Center and attended the funeral service of Mrs. Clara Neblett.

Mrs. Raymond Lloyd visited Miss Ora Gray of Snyder on Monday, September 7. She was joined there by nieces and nephews of Miss Gray from New Mexico. They were Mrs. Bill Conners of Santa Fe, "Tooky" Gray of Albuquerque and Mr. and Mrs. Luke Taylor of Maljamar.

Mrs. Eltine Davis of Midland and David and Jon Patrick of Snyder spent Saturday night, September 5 and the following Sunday with their maternal grandmother, Mrs. Raymond Lloyd.

Mr. O. W. Richburg had surgery in an Abilene hospital recently and hopes to return home this week. He is in satisfactory condition.

A revival at the Central Baptist Church will begin October 5 and continue through October 11. Reverend Monroe Teeters of Coahoma will preach and Jim Patrick of Snyder will lead the singing.

Giles' Lasagne With Mushrooms

By Cecily Brownstone
AP Food Editor

Tony Giles is a businessman — a tall bachelor who lives in a big-city apartment with the typical tiny kitchen. But he never lets a little matter like that keep him from inventing and preparing a dish that serves eight people.

Recently a friend of his asked him to "fix a dish" and bring it to a potluck supper she was giving. She warned him that her guests would include a number of vegetarians. Giles invented a Mushroom Lasagne and, judging from reports, it was a success. After testing his recipe in our own kitchen, we can understand why.

TONY GILES' MUSHROOM LASAGNE

4 tablespoons vegetable oil

1 pound fresh mushrooms, sliced (about 5½ cups)

1 cup chopped (medium-fine) onion

1 cup chopped (medium-fine) green pepper

2 large garlic cloves, minced or crushed

Two 6-ounce cans tomato paste

1½ cups water

1¼ teaspoons salt

1¼ teaspoons dried, crushed oregano

1 pound fresh spinach (cooked, well-drained and coarsely chopped)

One 16-ounce package lasagne noodles

¼ pound (1 generous cup) shredded sharp cheddar cheese

8 ounces mozzarella cheese, cut into 24 slices

3 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese

In a large skillet heat the oil; add the mushrooms, onion, green pepper and garlic; cook rapidly, stirring often, until wilted — 5 minutes. Add tomato paste, water, salt and oregano. Bring to a boil; simmer, covered, for 15 minutes.

Cook lasagne according to package directions; drain.

Spread a thin film of the sauce in the bottom of a 3-quart oblong baking dish (13½ by 8¾ by 1¾ inches). Cover with 1-3rd of the lasagne noodles, overlapping if necessary. Add 1-3rd of the remaining sauce, then 1-3rd of the cheddar cheese, 8 slices of the mozzarella and 1 tablespoon of the Parmesan. Repeat layering two more times. Cover with foil. Bake in a pre-heated 375-degree oven until hot — about 20 minutes. Uncover and bake until cheese is completely melted, about 5 minutes. If you like, you can use extra sauteed mushrooms as a garnish.

Makes 8 servings.

Reducing Perspriation

SADDLE BROOK, N.J. (AP) — Dermatologist Dr. Fred Haberman offers these tips to reduce perspiration:

— Wear clothing of natural fibers such as cotton and linen.

— Use antiperspirants with aluminum compounds.

— Use antiperspirants frequently in hot weather.

Odor often accompanies perspiration and can be controlled to some extent by the use of aluminum compounds that inhibit bacterial growth. Antiperspirant sprays generally contain these compounds.

In today's hand Fred Karpin shows where "more pressing business" makes it imperative that the drawing of trumps be deferred.

South is in a fine four-spade contract. He has to lose two clubs and a spade and expects to have little trouble making his contract.

West opens the queen of clubs and East signals come-on with the nine. Then West shifts to the three of hearts.

If South doesn't bother to think he will win that heart and lead a spade. West will take his ace and lead the deuce of clubs to his partner's ace or king. Then East will lead a heart. West will ruff for the fourth defensive trick.

If South stops to think he will find a chance to foil West's plan. He wins the heart in dummy and leads the king of diamonds. Then he discards his last club. West will have to win. He will lead a club and South will ruff. Then South can go after spades and make his contract.

This play only succeeded because West held both the spade and diamond aces. One chance in four, but that is a lot better than no chance at all.

Note that if West had opened his singleton heart, South would have had no way to make his contracts.

Garden Club Hears Ine Boyd

The first meeting of the season of the Snyder Garden Club was held at the home of Mrs. Gene Best on September 10, honoring Miss Myrtle Harrell, Miss Faye Harrell, Mrs. Edith McKanna, Mrs. R. J. Randels, Mrs. Frank Miller, and Mrs. J. T. Hughes.

Mrs. Ine Boyd of San Angelo, an authoritative speaker, gave a program on Japanese flower arranging. A lovely tribute was given in honor of Mrs. Edith McKanna, who has also studied in Japan and has contributed to State and National garden clubs and Western Texas College.

Nineteen members, six associate members and four guests attended the meeting.

Plans were made for the Fall Convention to be held at Western Texas College. Dr. Don Newbury, president of the college, will give the welcoming address.

SPEAKER AND HONORED MEMBER—Mrs. Francis E. Boyd, left, flower show judge and member and past president of Senisa Garden Club in San Angelo, was guest speaker at the Snyder Garden Club recently. Mrs. Boyd has lived in Japan and studied Japanese flower arranging at Iichio School in Tokyo. Pictured with her is Mrs. Edith McKanna, member of the local club and the National Garden Club who received special tribute at the meeting. Mrs. McKanna has also studied flower arranging in Japan and holds her emeritus from Saga School and instructor from Mishu and Saga schools. (SDN Staff Photo)

As Food Source...

Plants Are Studied

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — With the world bound for a food shortage, researchers here are working with largely forgotten arid-lands crops they say could prove vital in a war against hunger.

Richard S. Felger, head of the Arizona-Sonora Desert Museum research department and a University of Arizona Arid Lands Department researcher, is one of those working to preserve agricultural knowledge gathered over the centuries by Southwestern Indians.

The world's food resources today are dangerously limited, Felger says. Humanity survives on a few dozen crops, and just seven stand between the majority of the world and starvation: wheat, rice, corn, barley, soybeans, common beans and potatoes. Most of these have temperate or tropical ancestors and require large amounts of water.

By contrast, Sonoran peoples used more than 450 water-conserving desert plants for food, 40 to 50 of them extensively.

Felger says these plants can be domesticated fairly rapidly and can grow in places not now used for agriculture — areas with salty soils, abandoned desert farmland, even the sea.

"Since approximately one-third of the land surface of the world is arid or semi-arid, it behooves us to look for crops specifically adapted to dry lands," Felger said recently. "Our basic premise is the development of agricultural crops and practices to fit the environment rather than modifying the environment to fit the crop.

Of all the desert plants Felger has investigated, he says mesquite appears to be the most promising.

To the layman, the gnarled mesquite tree growing near washes and on desert hillsides hardly looks like something to nibble on. It doesn't even provide good shade. To ranchers who pull it down to improve their grasslands, it's little more than a weed.

But Felger predicts flatly: "Mesquite will become a major world crop."

Mesquite is a legume, a member of the same family that includes many of the world's most important food plants: alfalfa, beans, peanuts, peas and soybeans.

Legumes were vital to Southwestern Indians. Trees such as paloverde and ironwood played large roles in their lives, but mesquite was the single most important resource. It figured in everyday life from the cradle to the grave, providing food, fuel, shelter, weapons, tools, fiber and medicine.

Felger has conducted countless interviews with Indians in the southwestern United States and northern Mexico, he said, and the elders of these tribes still know a lot about mesquite and other desert foods.

Brad Robertson Is Semifinalist

Brad D. Robertson, Snyder High School senior, has been named a semifinalist in National Merit Scholarship competition.

He is one of more than a million students enrolled in 18,000 high schools nation-wide who entered the 1982 Merit Program by taking the test.

A total of 15,000 seminfinalists will now compete for some 5,000 Merit Scholarships to be offered in 1982.

As a seminfinalist, Robertson is one of the top half of one percent of the state's high school seniors.

In addition to being honored publicly, the seminfinalists are identified to colleges and universities in an effort to increase the opportunities of these exceptional students.

To be considered for Merit Scholarships, the semifinalists named today must qualify as finalists by meeting additional requirements. The finalist standards include being fully endorsed and recommended for scholarships by their principals, submitting records that demonstrate high academic standing, substantiating high qualifying test scores with equivalent scores on another examination, and supplying a self-description of their activities and extracurricular accomplishments.

Robertson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Robertson.

He is president of the student body at Snyder High School, is a drum major for the SHS band, a member of the National Honor Society and a member of the varsity basketball team. He has ranked first scholastically in his class for the past three years.

ColemanYoung Gets Easy Win

DETROIT (AP) — Mayor Coleman Young breezed to an overwhelming victory in a nonpartisan primary, and says he will take his general election opponent seriously, even though the runner-up got just 9 percent of the vote.

Young, the first black mayor in the nation's sixth-largest city, had 111,800 votes, or 71 percent of the votes tabulated from Tuesday's primary, according to Detroit Elections Commission figures.

The 63-year-old mayor's nearest opponent was Perry Koslowski, 31, a city accountant, with 14,782 votes. Patrick O'Hara, 38, another accountant, finished third with 14,335. None of the eight other mayoral candidates received more than 4 percent of the tally.

Koslowski is president of a union representing 330 city accountants and analysts. He has been critical of Young's handling of the city's budget.

"I believe I can be a lightning rod for the community, letting them know what Coleman Young is doing wrong," he said. "Many people, white and black, are fed up with the kind of services they're getting for their tax dollars."

"I will take any opponent seriously," Young said following his victory.

Two Injured In Traffic Mishap

Two persons were hospitalized Tuesday afternoon for injuries suffered in a car-pickup collision at 24th and College Ave. at 2:45 p.m. Involved in the wreck was a 1965 Chevrolet pickup driven by Andrew Edward Deen and a 1968 Pontiac driven by Gordon Garcia Gonzales.

The Deen pickup was propelled into a building from the force of the collision, police reports indicate, causing an unknown amount of damage. Andrew and June Deen were taken to Cogdell Memorial Hospital by Scurry County EMS where Mrs. Deen was treated for a broken kneecap and Mr. Deen was treated for broken ribs.

Both vehicles involved sustained moderate damage.

In other activity Tuesday, Pearline Selmon at the Food Basket at 13th and College Ave. reported someone drove off without paying for $10.02 worth of gas.

A minor accident occurred at 2900 Ave. M at 8 a.m. Involved was a 1976 Plymouth driven by Cherie Lou Curfman and a 1979 Chevrolet driven by Faye Clay Davis.

Mary Martinez reported the theft of a remote control device for a Curtis Mathes television set from 903 30th. The item was discovered missing Saturday but was reported Tuesday. Value was set at $70.

Another minor accident occurred at 27th and Ave. U at 12:44 p.m. Involved was a 1972 Oldsmobile driven by Miguel Castaneda and a 1974 Plymouth driven by Rebecca Inez Franks.

A pedigreed bulldog valued at $500 was reported stolen or lost by Ronnie Hines, 1801 Scott St. Reports indicate the dog was behind a large fence and disappeared between 6 and 11 p.m. Monday.

A burglary of a residence was reported to police Tuesday afternoon at 3102 Crockett. Missing was a mirror, two stoneware soup mugs, a pair of pants and a wicker basket. Total value was set at $85.

Four wheelcovers were discovered missing from a convertible at Guy Allen's Used Cars. Value was set at $50.

A minor accident occurred at 7:04 p.m. at 40th and Ave. V. Involved was a 1974 Mercury driven by Victoria Ann Barlow and a 1977 Chevrolet driven by Mavis Morine Browning.

One man arrested at Wild Country for public intoxication following a disturbance was taken from the police department by Scurry County EMS to Cogdell Hospital for treatment of a cut finger late Tuesday. After treatment, he was released into custody of the police department.

Exercise and nervous stress

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I was reading your column about depression. I have also read that a number of people suffering from depression have found relief through jogging. Apparently the increased blood flow causes some chemical changes in the brain. I have also read that vitamin therapy has relieved some cases of depression. Would either of these help me with my up and down swings?

DEAR READER — Remember that our moods, including our feelings of being high or low, are very subjective events and difficult to measure. Nevertheless, there are some reports that people who have depressions do better with regular exercise programs, including jogging.

You are not right, though, about it being related to increased blood flow to the brain. The blood flow to the brain is fairly constant and is not affected by exercise.

It is possible that exercise depletes certain chemicals that accumulate in the brain and affect our mood. A likely one is the depletion of adrenaline stores that are in the brain and heart and are metabolized during exercise. That is part of the reason exercise may stimulate you after you have been sitting still or inactive all day. Exercise helps to remove the effects of nervous stress.

Everyone has some mood swings as explained in The Health Letter number 10-10, Depression: The Ups and Downs of Life, which I am sending you.

Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

When these mood swings are extreme, or if the down side is extreme, it is important to have professional help. On the down side the person's life may even be in danger. It is not a situation that should be handled by a "good friend" no matter how anxious the friend may be to help. It takes more, and help is available.

For the less serious up and down swings, I think an exercise program is a good idea. A good walk twice a day helps and is relaxing. If you like sports such as tennis that can be a help because sports also lead to involvement with others and that is a big plus in helping you stay on the up side of life.

Vitamins have been used in some psychiatric illnesses as experimental work, but for yourself you should stick to a good balanced diet of all four food groups with their natural vitamins.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a male, 65 years old, 6 feet tall and weigh 180 pounds. I am in pretty good health. In the last two months it seems like I can hear my heart beating in my right ear. I take two aspirin and it stops for a while, then it starts up again. What do you think causes this? What should I do?

DEAR READER — It is probably not a serious problem. Many people can hear their heartbeat when lying on their side. You might see your doctor, though, to be sure there is not some reason why your heart is beating more forcefully and increasing its sounds.

There are a few conditions that can cause this. Most of those, however, would not disappear from taking two aspirin. Sometimes a person is just more aware of his heartbeat and if he is distracted or thinking of something else, he won't notice it.

Heart murmurs sometimes cause this and you can hear pulsations sometimes if you have a fatty-cholesterol plaque in the carotid arteries in your neck. See your doctor.

Your Birthday

September 17, 1981

You should be extremely fortunate in finding new ways to further your financial lot in life in the year following your birthday. However, you'll have to be patient and give time for each to develop.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If [illegible]nt to 10 before losing your temper over someone's thoughtless remarks. If you sound off it could make the other guy look right. Romance, travel, luck, resources, possible pitfalls and career for the coming months are all discussed in your Astro-Graph which begins with your birthday. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your curiosity is intense today. You could be tempted to stick your nose into places where it doesn't belong. Watch out: It could be punched.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Disregard the opinions of others. If you try to explain your viewpoints in rebuttal your intense nature could be misinterpreted as argumentative.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Friction with coworkers can be avoided today if you don't take their moodiness too seriously. Use your talent for laughing things off.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Don't misinterpret a friend's independent behavior as disloyalty. He or she should be allowed the same freedom of expression you deem necessary for yourself.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If you react in kind to the crankiness of another member of your household, you'll only be setting off fireworks. Stay cool and let the sparks die down.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Coworkers might do some aggravating things today, but it won't be worth getting into a confrontation over them. Deal with the situations calmly.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) The possibility of yielding to your more extravagant tendencies is great today. If you can't afford to splurge, leave the credit cards at home.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Watch whose toes you step on today. You'll have little patience for those who fail to do things exactly the way you wish them done.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Unless you find a release for your nervousness today, you could become so frustrated you'll pick a quarrel over just about anything. Try to stay [illegible].

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Before committing yourself to a group activity today, assess the cost both in time and money. The event might not warrant the outlay.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Although there is nothing wrong with having strong ambitions, the way you attempt to realize them today may be. Guard against a domineering tendency.

Trial Was To Begin Today

TEXARKANA, Texas (AP) — The federal bribery, extortion and conspiracy trial of Titus County Commissioner Alvin Parish was to begin today, the first of five trials of northeast Texas officials accused of operating kickback schemes with road building contractors.

Parish is accused of three counts of extortion, 11 counts of mail fraud, and one count of conspiracy. His trial was to be followed by the trials of Bowie County Commissioner J.C. Arnold, and former County Commissioners Bernard Brown of Bowie and Carthel "Shorty" Reese of Titus.

Six other commissioners and salesmen have pleaded guilty in similar charges resulting from a continuing federal investigation that may yield more indictments. Officials in Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas already have been charged.

Jury selection was completed Tuesday in Marshall for the trial of a fifth official, Cass County Commissioner Talmadge Harold Jordan. His trial, like those of the other four men, is to be presided over by U.S. District Judge William Steger.

Prosecutors say the alleged kickback schemes operated between 1977 and 1981 and generally worked in two ways. The road equipment vendor might offer to give the official a 10 percent kickback off the top of the purchase price, or the vendor and official might "split a ticket" — share payment for a piece of equipment that was never delivered to the county.

Charges Stun Chief Of Company

DALLAS (AP) — Capital murder charges against two of three Dallas men accused of robbing and killing a Florida father who reportedly hired them to abduct his children have "shocked" their boss, who says the men were highly recommended by Magnum Security, their previous employer.

The men — Drew Foster Wood, 20, and Thomas Scott Daley, 20 — have been indicted for capital murder and jailed on $100,000 bond each in Cooke County. Their roommate, Duane Stephen Williams, a 21-year-old Dallas bartender, is also charged with capital murder and is being held on $100,000 bond.

They are accused of killing and robbing 45-year-old Alexander Hamilton Stevens Bugg Jr. of Jacksonville Beach, Fla., and seriously wounding Thomas Pat Green, 36, also of Jacksonville Beach, at a roadside park near Gainesville shortly after midnight Saturday.

Police said the park was where the three men were to hand over Bugg's children, ages 6, 11 and 13, and he was to pay them $2,000.

Investigators say Bugg had borrowed $5,000 from his mother and hired the men to snatch the children from his estranged wife, Patricia A. Bugg of Quinlan, about 45 miles east of Dallas. The children did not want to return to Florida, police said.

Wood and Daley both worked for a Dallas security company, All Star Security, that police in Quinlan say Bugg hired to find his wife and children. Then, authorities say, Wood and Daley got involved "on a personal level" in the alleged child-snatching scheme.

"No one was more shocked than us," said Robert Merino, owner of All Star Security.

Merino said both men started work in January and had received excellent recommendations from Magnum Security, where they had worked before.

The Dallas Times Herald reported that the trio shared an apartment decorated with the trappings of patriotism and war.

The apartment contained guns, ammunition boxes, hunting bows and knives, books about survival training, histories of wars, and booklets on how to make explosives and kill people, according to the newspaper.

In Daley's bedroom was a bulletin board that featured pictures of Ronald and Nancy Reagan, bumper stickers that read "I'm Proud To Be An American" and "God Bless America!," and a cartoon that stated: "Mercenary: Killing Is My Business... And Business Is Good."

In his bathroom were recent copies of "Soldier of Fortune" magazine and several spent rifle cartridges, the newspaper said.

Wood's bedroom had a huge American flag on the wall. Two hunting rifles, a target pistol, hunting knife and 100 rounds of ammunition were also in the room.

Williams had a pair of black combat boots and a small target pistol in his room.

Sunday, Cooke County authorities searched the apartment and found $3,820 in a hollowed out book, the newspaper said. In a large trash bin in Denton County, officers recovered wallets and other items taken from Green and Bugg. Guns buried in three different locations were turned up in a creek bed north of Frisco.

Hearns And Leonard To Fight It Out Tonight

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) - One sports a boyish, toothpaste-ad smile and is nicknamed "Sugar." The other appears broodingly sinister with his piercing stare and is known as "Hit Man."

When Sugar Ray Leonard and Thomas Hearns enter the outdoor ring at Caesars Palace around 7:30 p.m. PDT tonight, the awe of the fight will be greatly enhanced by their contrasts - some real, some illusionary.

It's World Boxing Council champion Leonard's flashy speed against the explosive power of Hearns, the World Boxing Association 147-pound king. In what has become the richest fight in boxing history, it's Leonard, one of the wealthiest and most recognized figures in sport, versus a man hungry for recognition.

As fight time neared, however, each fighter seemed determined to dispel parts of their myths.

Leonard, winner of 30 of his 31 pro bouts with 21 knockouts, claimed he was every bit as hungry as Hearns, saying, "I love the profession and I love to win. I haven't lost my concentration since I lost that first bout with (Roberto) Duran."

Hearns, unbeaten in 32 fights with 30 knockouts, stressed that people would discover he can box as well as hit with power, and he also seemed bent on changing his image as the villain.

Microphone in hand, he turned crowd-pleasing showman during his workouts, and he paid special attention to the kids who attended his training sessions.

"I've always taken time with kids," he said. "I want to put something back into the country."

Hearns, a 22-year-old from Detroit, would appear to have some distinct physical advantages over Leonard, 25, from Palmer Park, Md. The 6-foot-1 Hearns is three inches taller, and has a four-inch reach advantage.

"I am confident," said Hearns. "This is the big chance for me to make my mark in the world.

"I know he's a good fighter, but I know my capabilities. I'll start out boxing him, looking for some way to put him out. When I find it, I will put him out, whether it's the first round, the third or the 15th."

Leonard said, "I'll beat Thomas Hearns. I've had this vision of the fight where he gets frustrated because he can't hit me and he starts coming in and I knock him out."

"What I have to do," said Leonard, who also holds the World Boxing Association junior middleweight title, "is dictate the pace of the fight and dominate every round."

'Good Morning' Unpleasant For Lions' Gordon Wood

BROWNWOOD, Texas (AP) - Brownwood high school football coach Gordon Wood says he was "entrapped" and "set up" on a network television show that an ABC executive calls a crude ambush attempt.

Wood, coach since 1960 of Brownwood's powerhouse teams, appeared Tuesday on ABC's "Good Morning America" to discuss violence in schoolboy sports with host David Hartman and guests Russ Francis, a former pro football player, and Arthur Miller, a Harvard Law School professor.

But ABC also brought on a 16-year-year former Garland high school player, Jim Wallgren, who is paralyzed from the chest down, and surprised Wood further by airing a 30-second film clip of a coach slapping and ridiculing his players.

Hartman introduced the clip by saying it was taken from a 1974 ABC show that had filmed Wood. After the clip was aired, Hartman asked Wood:

"How do you justify such behavior?"

"That wasn't me," Wood said.

It wasn't.

"I couldn't understand what he (Hartman) meant," Wood told the Abilene Reporter-News. "They never did a TV show on our team."

Wood said he felt he had been set up and he didn't like it.

"While I was sitting in the airport in New York, five people walked up to me, told me they had seen the show, and told me they thought I should sue," he said. "I don't feel I will sue because I don't believe in that stuff. But I will tell you one thing, it made me stop and think.

"Does anyone deserve to be entrapped and set-up on national TV? ... I don't think that's right. It still bothers me," he told the newspaper.

Wood said Hartman, who apologized on the air, was "a nice fellow" and continued apologizing after the show. But, he added, he was still angry because "had I been that coach, I would have had no opportunity to face what I was up against before it happened. That's frightening."

After the incident, network officials at first said Wood had taken part in the 1974 show but a misidentified clip had been given to Hartman, who did not view it before the live broadcast. Later, however, officials acknowledged Wood had never been filmed.

"This show was a violation of our network's policy not to set people up," said George Merlis, executive producer of Good Morning America. "It was a crude attempt to ambush the gentleman, and he wasn't even the one in question. I feel very bad about it and I'm sorry to the coach and I'm sorry for the people of Brownwood," he told the newspaper.

"I'm more sorry for the damage it's done to the credibility of Good Morning America. It was an inexcusable lapse and the people responsible will be taken care of," he said.

Wood said he had been asked by a coach in Pennsylvania to represent the national High School Football Coaches Association on the show. The association had been contacted by the network to find someone who could balance the presentation on violence in schoolboy sports, officials said.

Monday Night Bomb For Landry's Cowboys

DALLAS (AP) - Tom Landry dreads Monday nights like he does third-and-25 calls from his own 10-yard line.

The Dallas Cowboys have never done particularly well in the ABC-TV Monday night National Football League extravaganzas and they are always playing in them, a tribute to their popularity and overall success.

The Cowboys take their mediocre 8-9 Monday night record to New England next week.

In October, they host Los Angeles on Sunday night.

In November, they entertain the Buffalo Bills in one of the affairs.

The Cowboys have lost three out of their last four Monday night outings.

Dallas beat Washington and was slaughtered by Los Angeles last year in Monday night contests.

"I just don't know why some teams play better on Monday night because if I did I'd change it," said Landry. "We always seem to play good teams on Monday night. The caliber of competition is pretty good.

"When you have to travel that far (Foxboro, Mass.), it bothers you. It will be a tough trip. And it also bothers you for the next game."

Landry noted the winless Patriots should be sky high for the unbeaten Cowboys.

"This is a must win for New England because they are in a critical position in their division," he said. "I would expect they will be ripping and snorting."

Landry said the Cowboys weren't particularly concerned about fan behavior, which has reached some rowdy extremes on Monday nights in the past.

"We're not really worried about the fans," he said. "I don't imagine they will be any louder than the Washington fans when the Redskins are ahead."

Dallas is 3-0 against the Patriots and is 25-9 against American Conference teams.

The Cowboys' winning percentage of .735 ranks third in the NFL in interconference play behind Miami's 29-5 and Oakand's 28-7-1

Houston Stumbles To Cincy Again

HOUSTON (AP) - Cincinnati's Charlie Leibrandt almost didn't get a chance Tuesday night to show the Houston Astros what he had learned in the minor leagues.

But Leibrandt escaped a shaky first inning and showed the Astros much more than they wanted to see en route to a five-hit, 4-0 victory to complete an important, two-game sweep of the Astros.

Leibrandt, 1-0, spent the past three months in the Reds' minor league system developing a changeup pitch he used effectively against the Astros.

Leibrandt yielded a double to Tony Scott and walked two batters in the first inning but a double play ball and Art Howe's swing at a bad pitch ended the Astros' only threat of the game.

While Leibrandt kept the Astros guessing, left-fielder George Foster drove in two runs on a pair of singles and sounded the warning that the Reds are on the move.

"This team has always been better with its back against the wall," Foster said. "They (Astros) know now that we're the type of team that will not roll over and die until it's all over."

Foster provided the Reds with a 1-0 lead in the first inning off Houston's Nolan Ryan, 8-5. With two out, Dave Concepcion singled and went to second on Phil Garner's throwing error, took third on a passed ball and scored on Foster's single to right field.

Rangers Rap Oakland A's

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) - Bump Wills and Al Oliver each had four hits with Oliver driving in four runs and Mickey Rivers three as the Texas Rangers erupted for a 12-2 rout of the Oakland A's Tuesday night.

Texas starter Charlie Hough, 1-1, allowed five hits, walked five and struck out seven in eight innings.

The Rangers battered four Oakland pitchers for 18 hits, equaling their best-hit production of the season.

Dave McKay drove in both Oakland runs, the first with a single in the seventh and the other with a homer in the ninth.

Texas opened the scoring in the third when Wills and Mark Wagner, making his first start for Texas since June 6, singled and Rivers was hit by a pitch from Oakland starter Brian Kingman, 3-6, to load the bases. Oliver singled to score Wills and Wagner and Buddy Bell drove in Rivers with a sacrifice fly.

'Fan' Suing Celtics Pair

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - A San Antonio Spurs fan contends he was the victim of an unprovoked attack by two Boston Celtics, but the players' attorney says the two were merely defending themselves against a "mob" that cursed and spat on them outside HemisFair Arena.

Johnny Merla, a member of the Baseline Bums fan club, is seeking $1.3 million in damages after Celtic forward Larry Bird and former center-coach Dave Cowens allegedly spat on him. Merla also contends that Bird knocked him to the ground with a duffle bag after a National Basketball Association game last year.

Merla contends the two Celtics instigated the fray when a group of ardent Spurs fans, in a taunting gesture, put their hands to their throats and shouted "choke, choke, choke" after the Spurs defeated the Celtics 119-111 on Jan. 5, 1980.

However, defense attorney Robert Summers said Tuesday he would call witnesses, including San Antonio police officers, to show that Merla approached Bird after the game as the team boarded a bus, "called him an S.O.B. and spit in his face." The lawyer described the group of Spurs fans taunting the Celtics as "a mob."

"As a natural reaction, he hit Mr. Merla with a small bag. He (Merla) started faking an injury and he's been faking one up until this day," Summers told the jury of eight men and four women selected to hear the civil suit.

Testimony resumes today in Judge Richard Woods' 37th State District Court.

★ Tigers Lash Loboettes; Lead Race Crown ★

By BILL McCLELLAN

Snyder's Tigers flirted with disaster for a time here last night, but a one-two punch from Shana Koonsman and Becky Harrell combined to put the Monahans Loboettes down and out as SHS came away with an important kayo in its bid to repeat as the District 2-AAAA volleyball champion.

The win leaves Snyder as the only undefeated team in the first round of district play with a 4-0 record.

The 15-13 and 15-10 victory was by no means an individual effort, but the two - Koonsman serving and Harrell on offense - provided the catalyst which ignited a struggling Tiger team when it needed it the most.

Momentum swung Monahans' direction early as the Loboettes ran off seven straight points for a 5-11 advantage. The difference in the contest to that point appeared to be mental mistakes by the defending champions, who had several net fouls and were indecisive on their returns.

Sabrina Robinson notched Snyder's sixth point to break the Tiger dry spell, and though the hosts lost the serve again, they gained it back on a block quickly. Robinson served Snyder to 8-11 before Monahans regained the ball and made it an 8-13 game.

The Tigers finally gained the serve again when Harrell blocked a spike that careened off of a Monahans' player and looped out of bounds. That was the point at which Snyder came alive.

With Koonsman serving and Snyder playing good all-around defense, Harrell began working the front line with a mixture of power and finesse. A soft shot over Monahans' front line produced Snyder's ninth point and a spike to far corner made it 10-13.

The Loboettes called time out to regroup, but it failed to cool off the Tigers. Snyder quickly gained point number 11, and Harrell's perfect slap to an open spot made it 12-13. The Tigers gained point 13 when a Monahans player touched the net; 14 on a misplayed ball; and 15 when Koonsman aced the serve.

"Becky Harrell had an outstanding ballgame with several kills in the first game that put us back in it," said Coach Joyce Elrod, who celebrated Snyder's 16th straight district win with the victory. "Shana put their offense off balance with her serves, and that's exactly what we needed to do."

Harrell had taken over the middle hitting position for an injured Kathy Northcott, who was moved to an outside spot. Northcott, suffering from an injured Achilles tendon, was hobbling severly, but did well.

"I knew Kathy was not going to be able to play like she usually does, but I wanted to leave her in their for moral support," said the coach of the three-year starter. "Just knowing where to be on a certain play is worth a lot in this game, and I didn't want to risk losing that by taking her out."

The second game was also close, but it was already clear which of the teams held up under pressure best. Monahans went up 0-2, but it kept the lead only briefly as a series of serves finally brought the momentum back to Snyder. The hosts built leads of 6-2 and 9-5 before the Loboettes rallied to make it 9-7.

Though Monahans eventually closed the lead to 12-10, it was all Snyder after from then on. Harrell hit a spike that made it 13-10, and Koonsman later came on to serve the winning points, 15-10.

Serving for points were Koonsman with 16, Robinson with 5, Harrell and Northcott with 3 each, Toni Elrod with 2 and Sherri Rich with 1.

Snyder stuck to its plan of keeping the visitors off balance, and it worked.

"We forced them to go to soft hits," said Elrod. "We had the better passes, but we were still able to get good offensive plays even when our passes weren't that good," added the coach, who was understandably relieved after the game. "It (the win) wasn't easy. We had to play our best. It was a very physical match and a tough mental match. I know I was just drained after the match."

Next up for the Tigers is another district match, to be played Thursday in Andrews. Game time is 7:30 p.m.

Snyder junior varsity football team returns from a week's rest to host Andrews here Thursday at 7 p.m.

Tickets for the game, to be held at Travis Field, are $1 for adults and 50 cents for students.

Snyder ninth grade teams also play Thursday. The frosh take on Andrews in Andrews, beginning at 5:30 p.m.

Snyder eighth grade does not play this week.

Cougars Lead SWC Golfers

WEST COLUMBIA, Texas (AP) - The Univeristy of Houston Cougars won their eighth Southwest Conference Fall Golf Tournament title Tuesday, edging the second-place University of Texas Longhorns by three shots.

It was the eighth fall title captured by the Cougars since 1972.

Houston used a six-man total 445, 13 over par, to break first-place tie with Texas Christian University. The Horned Frogs had matched the Cougars' 223 total in Monday's alternate shot format.

JV Falls, Frosh Win Tuesday

Snyder underclassmen split in volleyball action last evening as the junior varsity fell to Monahans and the freshmen defeated Seminole.

"We played well, but just weren't able to overcome them," said Coach Joyce Elrod of her JV team's 7-15, 15-10 and 11-15 loss to the Loboettes.

Serving for points were Lisa Loyola with 11, Susan Brim with 7, Tracy Fortune and Mona Green with 5 each, Wendy Hodge with 4 and Cari Walker with 2.

The junior varsity plays at Andrews, 6:30 p.m. Thursday.

Meanwhile, Coach Patty Grimmett's freshmen went three games to edge Seminole, 6-15, 15-2 and 15-10.

"The girls played well," she said. "They came from behind and won the last two games. We didn't let up."

Connye Davis served for 14 points while Audra Blackard had 9, Susan Tully 5, Shana Hart and Gina Vaughn 3 each and Sabrina Sullivan 1. Linda Martinez also played. Other team members are Becky Gray, Shrunda Richardson, Roselia Aguirre and Jackie Parham.

The frosh will play at Andrews, Thursday at 5 p.m.

Andrews Leads Loop Grid Stats

District 2-AAAA members completed the pre-conference season with an 11-7 record for two weeks, with Andrews, Sweetwater, Fort Stockton and Monahans the only teams surviving without a loss.

San Angelo Lake View, Pecos and Odessa Ector are both 1-1, while Snyder and Lamesa continue their search for a victory this weekend.

Going into the 2-AAAA battles, Andrews leads the loop offensively while Monahans and Lake View hold defensive honors.

Keyed by all-loop quarterback Keith Brooks, Andrews has emassed 73 points and an average of 432.5 yards in two games. Lake View leads the conference in offense allowed with an average of only 85 yards, while Monahans' six points allowed is the least given up by a 2-4A team.

Friday, the teams take their shots at each other as Snyder travels to Andrews, Lake View goes to Fort Stockton, Monahans entertains Lamesa and Ector welcomes Pecos. Sweetwater has an open date.

Brooks' 348 yards, a 174 game average, leads the conference in individual rushing totals. He is also the leading scorer in the district, with 44 points.

Aging Prematurly...

Texas Youth Has Progeria

HALLSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Mickey Hayes can readily identify with Fransie Gerringer, the South African youth who recently made headlines because of a rare disease which ages him prematurely.

Nine-year-old Mickey has the same disease — progeria.

Mickey's mother, Cindy Edwards, read about Fransie's desire to travel to the United States so he could see his favorite Disneyland character, Pinocchio. She now hopes the two boys, and their families, can get together when the Gerringers go to California. A fund has been started at a nearby Longview bank to send Mickey to Disneyland.

Mickey was only eight weeks old when his parents, knowing something was wrong, took him to Texas Children's Hospital in Houston. An unusual hardening of the stomach had local doctors baffled.

But it was more than four years and many doctors later before Mickey's disease was correctly diagnosed by a doctor at Children's Medical Center in Dallas. The physician recalled a photograph in a medical digest of a little boy whose appearance was remarkably similar to that of Mickey.

By this time, Mickey's little arms and legs had hardened; his hair began falling out; his skin began to wrinkle and he seemed to rapidly bypass his childhood — all symptoms of the extremely rare progeria.

Mrs. Edwards said she knew of no other living progeria victims until the Gerringer case was publicized.

"I couldn't believe it," she said recently. "To know that someone else is going through what we are going through. It's hard when doctors can't tell you what disease your child has and then when they can, what causes it and how it can be treated."

The mother is quick to point out that she and her husband do not harbor any ill feelings toward the many doctors who examined their son and failed to make a diagnosis.

And they take it in stride when physicians wander by their table when dining out to ask about their child and the disease with which they are unfamiliar.

Presently, Mickey is 36 inches tall and weighs 28 pounds. Doctors estimate his body age is equivalent to that of a man 65 or 70. But childish mischief and innocence is still there.

"He's very intelligent," she said, a smile crossing her face as she lauds her son's accomplishments. He attends regular school.

"Maybe it would be better if he were mentally retarded. Then he would not be aware he was different and wouldn't be hurt so by the way people stare and comment about him. All the kids are growing up and leaving him behind.

Mrs. Edwards and Mickey's natural father divorced several years ago but Mickey has a rewarding and stable relationship with both his father and his step-father, Michael Edwards.

The boy is also spoiled by everyone, she admits. Anything Mickey wants, Mickey gets.

Asked if spoiling the child because of his disease did more harm than good, the mother is quick to support the family's action.

"I can't deprive him of something. He may not be here next year to get it. It's like living life in a hurry," she said. "I'm used to looking around each corner for death. And no, Mickey doesn't use our attention to his advantage."

Although his life expectancy is about 14 years, Mrs. Edwards said Mickey is determined to grow up and be a truck driver.

"He is not going to worry about his size. He says my husband's and my boss (both work for a trucking company) will make a truck just his size."

Mrs. Edwards applauded Hallsville's Little League summer baseball program for making Mickey feel a part of it.

"He can't play, you know, because of his little legs," she said quietly. "But they let him help."

In order to add a bit of normalcy to her child's life, Mrs. Edwards said she has given in to a few requests, such as a go-cart, that otherwise she would oppose.

"I know the least fall could injure Mickey's head," she said. "It scares me to death because if he does get injured, it would probably kill him."

However, taking neighborhood friends along for a ride provides Mickey pleasure that she and her husband just can't deny him, she said.

Visits to the doctor are every six months with Mickey given close examinations and no medication. He occasionally suffers from stiff and inflamed joints and is sometimes short of breath.

"He is so aware of his illness and the potential there for strokes or heart attacks," explained his mother. "He'll come in and tell me he is short of breath (something his physician has asked him to do) and say, 'Oh, Mamma! I hope it's not a heart attack!' I know one of these days Mickey will have loss of hearing and possibly cataracts," she said. "He's already developing problems with his teeth. I just wish people would realize he can see them stare and hear them comment.

"I just tell him God has made him special and he replies, 'I don't want to be special any more.'"

Through the ordeal, Mrs. Edwards says Mickey has been a fountain of strength for her and for her husband. He never complains, she says, and tries his hardest to be an ordinary little boy.

But, she added, her eyes brimming with tears, in his prayers each night, he asks God to make him taller.

Two Companies Finalize Deal

NEW YORK (AP) — The Dr Pepper soft drink company has agreed to acquire the business and most of the assets of Canada Dry, a subsidiary of Norton Simon Inc., the two companies have announced.

A brief statement on the sale was issued Tuesday by Norton Simon following approval of its board of directors. No indication of the exact nature of the transaction nor of its estimated value was released by the New York-based conglomerate.

The transaction would solidify Dr Pepper's position as the third-largest soft-drink company in the world, analysts said. The company recently moved into that position, ahead of Seven-Up Co., and behind Coca-Cola and Pepsico Inc., the maker of Pepsi-Cola.

George Thompson, an analyst at E.F. Hutton, said money will be required for Dr Pepper to reverse the profit slippage of Canada Dry, but will help in the long run in its battle with Seven-Up, Coca-Cola and Pepsico.

"Without knowing the price, I can only say that it looks good from a managerial standpoint," said Thompson. "(The transaction) should offer some opportunities to integrate bottling operations that will improve efficiency," he added.

By acquiring Canada Dry, a leading seller of ginger ale, sparkling water and tonic, Dr Pepper can expand its flavor line, Thompson said.

Analysts estimate that Canada Dry shipped about 150 million cases of beverages last year, while Dallas-based Dr Pepper shipped between 350 million and 400 million.

The announcement of the transaction came 15 months after Dr Pepper was outbid for Crush International, a Canadian orange soda producer, by Procter & Gamble Co. of Cincinnati.

Clinic Tests Treatment For Puzzling Illness

READING, Mass. (AP) — An estimated 5½ million women in the United States suffer from premenstrual syndrome, a hormonal imbalance that causes migraines, tension and depression, along with tremendous mood swings that can lead to violence.

British authorities consider PMS so debilitating that lawyers have successfully used it as a mitigating circumstance in defending women accused of crimes.

In Britain, PMS sufferers have been treated for more than a decade with progesterone, a hormone that occurs naturally in the female body, but the U.S. Food and Drug Administration has not approved its general use here. Indeed, the PMS condition itself has received little attention from U.S. physicians.

"American doctors have been telling women for years there was nothing wrong, to pull themselves together," said Dr. Ronald Norris, director of the Prementrual Syndrome Program in this suburb north of Boston. "Finally they are beginning to realize there may be a physical problem here."

One hundred women from around the country are now enrolled in the Massachusetts program, a clinic created specifically to deal with PMS. The clinic has FDA authorization to test progesterone on PMS sufferers for two years, Norris said.

Clinic officials gave the example of one patient, a New England actress. Using case files, but not disclosing her name or hometown, they described her as 36 and beautiful, devoted to her husband and two children and blessed with an active stage career.

But each month that career had to be put aside for several days just before her menstrual period. She would suffer raging headaches, irritability and depression. She could not perform on those days, and her husband warned she would drive him out of the house if she didn't get help.

Norris said women who come to the clinic are given physical examinations and are asked to keep diaries and menstrual logs. After a two-month evaluation, the clinic decides whether progesterone suppositories can help the woman.

"We tend to evaluate people in groups, because they find it hugely reassuring to run into another woman with the same problem," Norris said. "The women from North Carolina and Colorado acted like long-lost friends. 'Finally someone else knows what I am talking about,' they kept saying."

Women with PMS have too little progesterone. For as yet unexplained reasons, the deficiency usually prevents them from using birth-control pills, gives them a lower tolerance for alcohol, creates cravings for food and thus prompts weight swings of 28 pounds and more.

Women with PMS also have an increased sex drive during the premenstrual period, researchers say, but some men are so frustrated with their mood swings that they want no part of lovemaking.

The progesterone the clinic uses is derived from sweet potatoes. The derivative has the same molecular structure as the natural hormone, Norris said.

An estimated 20,000 British women with PMS have taken progesterone with no side effects, according to Dr. Katharina Dalton of London, who has done much of the groundbreaking research on PMS. She estimated that PMS troubles 10 percent of all American women between puberty and menopause.

Mrs. Dalton, who used the hormone herself for 18 years and has treated thousands of women at her London clinic, explained that progesterone produces no side effects because much greater amounts are normally present in the female body — a pregnant woman, for example, produces 30 times more progesterone than is given in the treatment, she said.

"It infuriates me that this substance that is so commonly available in England and other countries cannot yet be used here by women who need it," she said during a recent visit to Norris' clinic.

While agreeing that many male doctors have minimized menstrual problems in the past, Mrs. Dalton noted that some of the major objections to her work on PMS have come from feminists and other female physicians.

"Some feminists feel I am giving an argument for why men should be hired instead of women" because the syndrome incapacitates certain women, she said.

She said PMS has been accepted as a mitigating factor in the courtroom defenses of several girls and women in Britain, a teen-ager accused of harassing the police with telephone calls, a ballet student arrested for arson, a woman charged with attacking a barmaid and a menopausal housewife accused of being drunk and disorderly.

But she also said that defense seemed to be creating a new problem — a "growing number of women (accused of crimes) trying to jump on the bandwagon and hopefully claim to have premenstrual syndrome."

Funeral Services HeldForDrummer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Funeral services were scheduled here today for Joseph "Little Joe" Lambert, 39, the drummer of Freddy Fender's Bayou Country Band.

Lambert and driver Joseph "Sonny" Parker, 43, of Pearl River, were killed Monday when the band's customized bus swerved across a median and crashed head-on with a tractor trailer.

Parker was to be buried Thursday in Hickory, La., following funeral services in New Orleans.

Fender, the Country Music Association's 1975 Performer of the Year, and other members of the troupe were not aboard at the time of the crash.

They had been dropped off earlier at their St. Tammany Parish homes and the bus reportedly was taking Lambert to his home in eastern New Orleans when the accident happened.

Two men in the truck were hospitalized, but Ronald Zereal of Corpus Christi, Texas, the band's concessions manager, escaped serious injury.

Truck driver George Malerich, 49, of Hammond, Ind., and his stepson, Randy Mann, 28, were in stable condition Tuesday at New Orleans' Methodist Hospital.

Malerich was discharged from the intensive care unit, however, after being treated for chest and spinal injuries, a hospital spokesman said.

The band's keyboard player, James R. "Skip" Easterling of Slidell, said Zereal told him that a faulty steering mechanism might have caused the accident.

"Ronnie told me Sonny hollered out he couldn't control the steering," Easterling said Tuesday. "He was turning the wheel in all different directions, spinning it. Sonny was just too good a driver to lose control."

He said Parker was hired as driver three months ago and had 23 years' experience driving tractor-trailers.

Easterling said the band has since cancelled out the three-week tour of Missouri, California, and Canada that was to have begun next weekend.

He said the accident happened as the group was returning from a Sunday night show in Ohio.

Rep. Richard White. . .

'Boll Weevil' Says He Will Not Change Parties

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Richard White, one of Texas' eight "boll weevils," says liberal Democrats may chase some conservative Democrats into the Republican Party if they persist in trying to force their views on everybody.

"I'm not planning to change parties. I have no thought whatsoever of doing so. But there may be some not so steadfast as I when others start tinkering with their representation," White said Tuesday, on the eve of a caucus by House Democrats today.

The caucus was scheduled last month by House Speaker Tip O'Neill in response to demands from some Democratic loyalists that punishment be considered against conservative Democrats — particularly Rep. Phil Gramm, D-Texas, who played active roles in President Reagan's economic legislative program.

White and others who supported Reagan on the budget or tax bill said Democrats should take no action at all and simply let members represent their districts as they see fit.

"There's a diversity of thinking in this nation, and if the Democratic Party wants to be a viable, majority party, it's going to have to represent these points of view," White said.

But some Democrats in the North and East feel the viewpoint of their districts is the "mainstream" view that all congressmen must assume, the El Paso lawmaker said.

"I feel like I represent my district. People have told me so, and I'll continue to represent my district. If others in the party say I'm not allowed to represent that view, they're saying we can't make room for your view in the Democratic Party. I don't think the rest of the country is going to buy that."

In the past several years, there has been a shifting of party alignment in the nation, but as long as people feel the Democratic Party can represent their viewpoints, they will remain in it, White said.

"But if they feel their members are being punished, ignored or repressed because of their viewpoint, I think the result is going to be very bad for the Democratic Party."

Majority Leader Jim Wright of Texas said Tuesday there was little chance the caucus would strip Gramm, a former Texas A&M economics professor, of his seat on the Budget Committee because of his authorship of Reagan's budget bill.

Ira Says Enrollment Has Increased

The Ira School Board announced an enrollment increase over last year of about 30 students Monday night during a meeting in the superintendent's office.

The board also approved several requests for transfer into the school district from several students. Lee Wilson Reynolds was authorized to audit records from the previous school session and supplemental textbooks for basal reading were approved.

Various other items were discussed during the meeting including property insurance, tax values and the 81-82 budget.

OBITUARIES

Geo. F. Evans

George Franklin Evans Jr., 65, Rt. 3, Snyder, died at 1 p. m. Tuesday in Cogdell Memorial Hospital.

A native of Snyder, he was a farmer.

Funeral service was set for 3 p. m. today in the Bell-Seale Funeral Home Chapel, with the Rev. David Haladay, pastor of Green Hill Baptist Church, officiating. Burial was to be in the Snyder Cemetery, under direction of Bell-Seale Funeral Home.

He is survived by a sister, Mrs. Earl Davis of Snyder; a brother, Elmer Evans of Snyder, and a number of nieces and nephews.

Clayton Infant

Graveside rites have been set for 2 p. m. Thursday in the Snyder Cemetery for Melodie Clayton, 22 months old, who died at 10:30 a. m. Tuesday in an Austin hospital.

She was born in Snyder on Oct. 26, 1979.

The Rev. Larry McAden, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, will officiate at the funeral service, with Bell-Seale Funeral Home in charge of burial.

Surviving are the father, Tommy Clayton of Snyder; the mother, Teresa Clayton of Austin; the maternal grandmother, Mrs. Edna Clayton of Snyder, and the maternal grandmother, Mrs. Edna Gillham of Snyder.

Letter Writing Campaign Still Is In Progress

The Larry Hagman Quit-Smoking Letter Writing contest, sponsored by the American Cancer Society, is still in progress. The contest will close September 27.

Letters submitted should be 100 words or less and should tell ways to give up smoking.

Orginality, practicality, and clarity will be the criteria used to judge all the entries.

National winners will receive a three-day, all-expenses paid trip for two to Hollywood, Calif., to have dinner with Hagman, who is famous for his portrayal of J. R. Ewing on "Dallas."

Local entries should be sent to Doris Byars, Cancer Society Publicity Chairman, Box 1, Star Route, Ira, Tex., 79527.

Vigorous Debates Begin....

New Ideas Emerge On Managing Public Land

EDITOR'S NOTE — Uncle Sam holds title to nearly onethird of the land in the UNITED States. How best to manage this public domain? A new administration has its own ideas — ideas that are vigorously debated. A cutting edge of the dispute is the Bridger-Teton National Forest, possibly as rich in oil and gas as in scenic beauty. This is the first of two articles on the public lands.

By TERRY RYAN
Associated Press Writer

JACKSON, Wyo. (AP) — The public lands begin about a mile outside Jackson. To the north, the highway edges the National Elk Refuge into Grand Teton National Park toward Yellowstone. To the east, south and west are the 5,313 square miles of the Bridger-Teton National Forest.

Four million people a year visit Jackson and the valley to the north, Jackson Hole. The national parks, Yellowstone and Grand Teton, are the major attraction, but an increasing number of visitors are spending time in Bridger-Teton.

Bridger-Teton is the largest national forest outside of Alaska. It is home several months each year to parts of the largest elk herd in North America. It has 2,000 miles of hiking trails, 1,500 lakes, 40 campgrounds, three ski areas and nearly 1,500 square miles of designated wilderness.

It also has oil and gas. As of this summer, more than 1,600 oil and gas leases in force covered 2.2 million acres of the forest's 3.4 million acres. With the exception of wilderness and proposed wilderness areas, the Bridger-Teton is essentially under lease for oil and gas development.

The fault lines of the Overthrust Belt, right now the hottest oil-exploration area in the 48 contiguous states, run through Bridger-Teton to within a few miles of Jackson. The boom of seismic-survey explosions on Forest Service land southeast of Jackson could be heard last summer in the town square. Last summer, too, 49 tires were slashed on seismicsurvey trucks parked in Jackson and plugs were loosened on the oil drains of nine of the trucks.

At issue in Bridger-Teton are questions central to the increasingly rancorous debate over the uses to which the nation's 737 million acres of public lands are to be put. It is a struggle that pits the users of the resources — the energy companies, mining interests and timber cutters, principally — against an institutionalized environmental movement that lays claim to widespread public support.

They have found a friend in the Reagan administration, and a champion in Interior Secretary James Watt, the point man and chief flak-taker in an attempt to redirect lands policies of two decades.

Watt's arguments, and those of his constituency, are couched in terms of private enterprise, economic security and defense. "In the '70s," he says, "we had the luxury of being a nation that was living off debt to be an environment. It would have been much easier to be secretary of the Interior in the '60s than in the '80s."

Stewart Udall was secretary of Interior from 1961 to 1969 in the administrations of presidents John F. Kennedy and Lyndon Johnson. "He has a different definition of the public interest," Udall says of Watt. "I don't know any secretary in this century who has been 'anti-development, but there was always this feeling of management of resources with a responsibility to future generations."

He adds: "You're running a bank at the Interior Department. The bank is not money.

"It is something more important — the resources of the United States."

Udall was appointed by Kennedy. Together they presided over the beginning of the third great wave of the American conservation movement as public lands historians call it.

Since 1964, for example, 80 million acres — 56 million of them in Alaska — have been designated wilderness, where oil leases are feasible but drilling or development has been in effect ruled out.

A welter of new laws produced a mass of new rules and regulations, many of which Watt and the resources industry find onerous and which Watt wants to change. Watt proposed major changes for the management of national parks and says he wanted to open them to more people by reducing restrictions on motorized rafts and other vehicles.

His major goal remains to increase mineral exploration and development on the public lands — "to lease every parcel of land that should be leased in the public interest."

Watt's speedup of leasing of offshore federal lands for oil and gas development landed him in court in California and even some industry officials have complained that it is too much, too fast. He will have to go to Congress for other things he says he wants, including an extension — "20 or 25 years, something like that" — of the Dec. 31, 1983 deadline for mineral leasing on federal wilderness lands.

Congress decided during the past 20 years to protect wilderness, free-flowing rivers, archaeological sites, endangered species and wild horses, all of which affected land management. Protection of the environment became a requirement in all federal decision making, and clean air and clean water acts were passed.

The National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 requires the federal government to analyze the impact on the human environment of all significant federal actions. When a rancher who grazes cattle on Bridger-Teton wants to move a drift fence, someone in the forest supervisor's office in Jackson has to make a decision about impact.

The same rules apply to drilling an exploratory oil well or developing an oilfield. The first full-scale environmental impact statement ever for an exploratory well on federal lands is being prepared on a request to drill in the high country south of Jackson.

After 20 months and $650,000, the government released a draft in August. It recommended the applications to drill be approved. The crucial point was a finding that the government cannot deny the right to drill to the holder of a lease unless there was such a stipulation in the original lease, a major victory for oil companies.

One of the applications was for a drill site in a proposed wilderness area. The Forest Service in the past placed such areas essentially off limits.

"The old days are gone when a ranger or forest supervisor could make a decision unilaterally based on his knowledge of his activities in the forest," said Reid Jackson, a supervisor at Bridger-Teton.

"You can go to any one of the ranger districts on the south end of the forest and drive almost any road on any weekend and just about every flat space is occupied by a recreational vehicle," he says.

Budget cuts forced Jackson to reduce his seasonal ranger force this summer. And there's no money for needed work on the water-supply system in some of the campgrounds.

But there have been no cutbacks in the minerals section.

"I don't feel any pressure from our outfit to do things against our better judgment," says Jackson. "At the same time, the message is loud and clear that they do not want us to throw roadblocks. They want us to be accommodating and work with the energy companies."

The producing section of the Overthrust Belt slices out of Utah into southwestern Wyoming. Faults run north through Bridger-Teton to within a few miles of Jackson, then cut into Idaho and north into Montana. It is a new oil province, unexplored territory.

Thousands of square miles of it is on public land, much of it wild, remote and in some cases stunningly beautiful.

For several months each year, Phil Hocker looks out the windows of the studio atop the garage of his home in Jackson and can see the elk herd that winters in Jackson Hole. He is an architect and a national director of the Sierra Club. The energy companies have gotten most of the lands they want, says Hocker, and it is time to say no more.

"Mineral values have been given very strong weight in the decision making," says Hocker. "There are places where the surface values are simply irreplaceable. To sacrifice those for what is at most a transient energy supply, is foolishness for long-term national planning."

Less than a mile from Hocker's home, Cache Creek spills out of a narrow valley into Jackson Hole. It begins in the mountains southeast of Jackson near the Forest Service's proposed Gros Ventre wilderness, 292,000 acres of snow-streaked peaks and mountain meadows.

Nearly the entire area is under lease to oil companies.

Hocker argues that oil in the Gros Ventre — if it is there at all — would power the United States for only a few days.

"We have to look for rational ways to change to other fuels and power," Hocker says, adding that conservation could provide an alternative to drilling. "My hope is that people will pay enough attention to realize what the tradeoffs are that are at stake here."

Writer Likes Housework

MIDDLETOWN, Conn. (AP) — Like Spenser, the character in his detective novels, Robert B. Parker is something of a contradiction in terms.

He's had a string of successful books and become a highly respected suspense writer despite not publishing his first book until he was 41. He relinquished a tenured post at Northeastern University to become a full-time author and househusband, a role he is neither challenged by nor embarrassed about.

"I have to make beds and get the wash in before I write. But I like it that way," said the heavyset man, who also resembles Spencer by deriving pleasure from cooking.

"I am not a very university type," said Parker, who left the advertising world to teach at the Boston school.

"When I was in business, everyone said, 'You oughta teach.' Then when I got in the academic world, everyone said, 'You oughta be in business.'"

And he makes no pretense about where his art fits into his life.

"I'm a father and a husband before a writer," he said during an interview at the recent Wesleyan Writers Conference here. "I would happily compromise my art before my family."

Parker hasn't had to do either. Since he introduced Spenser — a macho detective from Boston who manages to be scrupulous and sensitive in a two-fisted world — in 1971 with "The Godwulf Manuscript," he has been successful. He has now published eight novels about his detective — whose first name is never mentioned — and "there are two more down the road."

The novels lean heavily on dialogue and action. Spenser gets his point across through persuasion or punches.

Parker freely acknowledges his debt to such classic American writers of detective novels as Philip Marlowe and Dashiell Hammett.

The Lynnfield, Mass., author has been averaging two novels a year and is in the midst of promoting "A Savage Place," the latest in the line.

"A certain amount of celebrity is fun," Parker said as many of the 50 people who listened to his lecture crowded around to get him to autograph his new book. "But I also have been at autograph-signing places where no one came."

There are non-Spenserian successes, too. "Wilderness" is being turned into a movie. He is also working on a longer, traditional novel, "Love and Glory."

First Wife Says She Was Treated Badly

NEW YORK (AP) — Cynthia Lennon Twist, the first wife of John Lennon, says her treatment by the ex-Beatle and his second wife, Yoko Ono, was "unjust."

"I'm a fatalist," she says in the current issue of People magazine, insisting she has no regrets about her eight years with Lennon, who was slain outside his New York apartment last Dec. 8.

Mrs. Twist, now separated from her third husband, engineer-draftsman John Twist, said she packed her things and left the singer after she returned from a trip to Greece and found Miss Ono and Lennon having breakfast together, with Lennon in his dressing gown.

Dear Abby

Neighbors' Garden Produces Small Yield, Big Problem

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Recently our 12-year-old son was grounded by his father for calling the police to report that our neighbors had marijuana growing in their garden.

I feel that this punishment was unjust since marijuana is illegal, and our son was only doing what he was instructed to do by the local police in lectures at his school.

These neighbors are not into drugs. They are good friends and don't even smoke the stuff, but they were given the plants and were growing them just for the fun and novelty of it. Since the police confiscated only two dying plants, no charges were filed against our neighbors. They admitted it was a silly but dangerous thing to do.

Regardless of the neighbors' intentions, I feel that our son's motives and his willingness to do what he thought was right were commendable, and he should not have been grounded. What do you say?

CONCERNED MOM

DEAR MOM: Knowing that these neighbors were "good friends" of yours, I'm wondering why your son didn't discuss his "marijuana find" with his parents before calling the police to report these friendly neighbors. Sorry, Mom, I can't agree that your son's motives were altogether commendable.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: You won't believe this, but I've been married only three months and I'm already halfway to the divorce court!

I married the sweetest, best-natured man in town. Everyone envied me because he was such a swell catch. He's 40 and I'm 34. Before we were married we lived together for two years and got along like a pair of lovebirds, but as soon as we made it legal, our relationship started to go downhill.

Now he finds fault with everything I do. He used to be a wonderful lover. Now he's snoring by the time I get into bed. He used to be tidy and neat. Now he's a slob.

I was the one who was pushing for marriage, so now he blames me for ruining a beautiful relationship. Abby, we're not the only couple this has happened to. What is there about marriage that destroys romance?

SORRY IN SACRAMENTO

DEAR SORRY: Marriage is a legal commitment that makes some people feel trapped and uncomfortable — especially those who have enjoyed all the benefits of marriage without any of the responsibilities. It doesn't destroy all romances. Some it enhances.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the mother who didn't want her daughter-in-law in the family portrait prompts this letter. (The portrait, she said, should be only of Mother, Father and their children, excluding the spouses of their married children.)

Well, I don't blame her. Statistics show that one out of every three marriages today ends up in the divorce court. And if you live in California, it's one out of every two!

So who needs a family portrait with ex-daughters (or sons)-in-law?

BLOOD IS THICKER

DEAR BLOOD: Once married, the spouse becomes a part of family history, so regardless of how long the marriage lasts, that part of history can't be denied by simply omitting the spouse from the portrait.

• • •

Problems? You'll feel better if you get them off your chest. Write to Abby: 12060 Hawthorne Blvd., Suite 5000, Hawthorne, Calif. 90250. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Ready To Run For Senate

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (AP) — Prescott Bush Jr., the vice president's brother, is ready to run for the U.S. Senate in a campaign against fellow Republican and incumbent Sen. Lowell P. Weicker Jr.

Bush said Saturday night that he has made up his mind to challenge Weicker, who is expected to seek a second full term in 1982.

His father, Prescott Bush Sr., represented Connecticut in the Senate.

Vice President George Bush said he plans to take no position in the expected intra-party battle.

"I don't know what he'll finally do, but this does give me an opportunity to say that I never intervene in primaries and President Reagan does not intervene in primaries," the vice president said.

Fran Lebowitz Says It's Not Easy To Be Funny

NEW YORK (AP) — Fran Lebowitz would like to add 40 years to her age.

Explains humor writer Lebowitz:

"I've got the perfect personality to be an old lady. I hate exercise. Nobody expects an old lady to jog.

"People get up and give an old lady their seat on the subway. I gave my seat to one once. I stepped on her foot. She hollered at me. I can't be mean at 30, but at 70 I could be mean and get away with it.

"Of course, 9 months would be a good age also. But 70 is better because then you're able to read. Either age, nobody expects you to work."

Miss Lebowitz has to work. She writes — short, acerbic pieces that comment stingingly on the current condition and often find it wanting.

Miss Lebowitz — not "Ms." because, as she says, "would you call a woman doctor 'Diz'?" — used to write her sketches for magazines but gave it up because "I couldn't take that monthly deadline pressure."

Now her work is collected in books. Her first, "Metropolitan Life," was a best seller. Her new collection, three years in the making but "don't forget it took me a whole year just to make it to my desk," is "Social Studies."

"Metropolitan Life," she says, brought in enough money to give her writing time uncluttered with the jobs she had depended on to support her before.

"I never had a real job," the casually clad writer recalls. "They were teenage jobs, even though I was 26 when I did some of them. I was a Wall Street runner once. Only I didn't run when I delivered messages. Usually I walked, very slowly. Sometimes I ambled.

"I sold belts on the street. I was really good at that. It's something I can fall back on. I can talk anyone into buying a belt.

"I drove a cab for a few months. The trouble with that is you don't meet people, you drive people. Then I drove a limousine. But the cops kept stopping me because they thought I stole the car. The only skills I have are driving and writing. So when I gave up driving for rent, food, telephone and cigarettes, that left writing."

Writing her kind of humor does not come easy to the New York-based woman.

"I'd rather read than write. I'd rather anything than write," says Miss Lebowitz. "Once there was a fire in my apartment. It made me happy. I lost all my possessions, but it was worth it. I didn't have to write — for a while."

A humorist's lot is not a happy one, she says. "It's very hard to do. It's so much harder to make people laugh than it is to make them cry. It's especially hard to get people to laugh who are not used to reading."

She says she got into humor after "a few embarrassing, adolescent forays into the sensitive kind of writing. I write like I talk, but there's a difference. Talking is easy and pleasurable, writing is hard and not pleasurable."

Self-educated — "college is an expensive place to read" — she says writing comes hard to her because "I have no idea how I do it. Every time I start to write something I read all of my previous stuff and I marvel that the same person who wrote that stuff is working on this stuff."

Miss Lebowitz currently is working on a "tentatively funny" novel.

"It's really tough," she says, "because I don't know how to write a novel. But I work at it because the only time I feel the Moral Police are not going to arrest me is when I'm writing. Which means that most of the time I worry that 'They' are going to get me.

"It's funny, for a person who detested schools I chose a career that is essentially a life of homework. I wish I was an heiress."

Won't Deny Problems Still Exist

BALTIMORE (AP) — Former Maryland Rep. Robert Bauman says if he tries to regain his seat in 1982, he will not claim to be rid of his homosexual tendencies or cured of his alcoholism.

"Anybody who knows anything about either knows it wouldn't be true," Bauman said in an interview with The Baltimore Sun.

A nationally prominent conservative standard-bearer, Bauman was defeated by Democrat Royden Dyson for the 1st District seat last year after being charged with solicitation of prostitution. The incident allegedly involved a 16-year-old boy.

The charge against the Republican was later dismissed as part of a court deal in which Bauman promised to undergo treatment for alcoholism.

Bauman also disclosed that he and his wife, Carol, have begun a trial separation after 21 years of marriage.

"Maybe we'll get back together," he said. "I hope so. It's the single most painful thing that has happened."

Bauman indicated he is now ready to ask the voters of his district to accept his homosexual tendenices as a continuing condition, and not as one that will impair his performance, the story said.

Socialist Mayor Still An Outsider After 6 Months

BURLINGTON, Vt. (AP) — Mayor Bernard Sanders left City Hall a few days ago and found a ticket on the windshield of his battered, rust-flecked Dasher.

His offense? Parking in the mayor's parking spot.

Six months after the avowed socialist scored a surprise victory to become mayor of Vermont's largest city, he's discovering that having an office inside City Hall doesn't make him an insider.

"I'm not in the clique," says the 39-year-old Sanders, who forged a coalition of students, union activists, neighborhood organizers, college professors and low-income people to win election as an independent by 10 votes.

"Not exactly a landslide," he concedes, running his hands through his tousled, graying hair. "But we hit a nerve. We sent a message to the people who run this city."

The election of a man who had denounced the capitalist ethic and called for the rise of the working class set some Burlington merchants quaking. One waggish state lawmaker had "People's Republic of Burlington" T-shirts printed up and gave them to the local legislative delegation.

And the national publicity that came with toppling the five-term Democratic incumbent led Sanders to dub himself sardonically "the freak mayor."

"I was treated as a novelty," says the Brooklyn, N.Y. native, who has been active in Vermont leftist politics for a decade and mounted four losing campaigns for statewide office before winning the head job in this city of 40,000. "There are people who will see this administration that way, no matter what we accomplish."

Sanders can point to some successes during his short tenure, but also to some painful batterings at the hands of the conservative coalition that has retained control of the board of aldermen.

"Oh, he rubs me the wrong way sometimes. He just really does," says William Blanchard, president of the board.

"My ideas are radical," Sanders admits. "But I know I can't be on a soapbox all the time. I have to work with all kinds of people, or I'll be totally isolated."

Being mayor is the first steady job in years for Sanders, who eked out a living as a filmmaker and writer after coming to Vermont. For a time, he lived in a converted sugarhouse with no plumbing or electricity.

"It's so strange, just having money, things like that," he says. "For years I could never afford the rent, and now I'm looking over these budgets of thousands of dollars."

What kind of a job is he doing?

"That depends who you ask," he says. "If you're a senior citizen and just got back from a free concert, you might think things aren't too bad. If you're a bank president, you might think this is the worst thing to hit the city."

Herluf Olsen is president of the Medical Center Hospital. Sanders has opposed a hospital expansion program, and Olsen does seem to think he is the worst thing to hit Burlington: "When I heard on my car radio that he'd been elected, I almost drove off the road."

Sanders won a big battle within weeks of his election when he persuaded voters to adopt a tax increase they had spurned only two months before, averting layoffs of police and firefighters and deep cuts into city services.

But voters buried a housing reform initiative Sanders had backed, after landlords threatened huge rent increases if it passed.

In another major defeat, aldermen rejected all of Sanders' appointees for top City Hall jobs without even a hearing on their qualifications. The jobs are still held by people left over from the last administration.

Alderman Joyce Desautels said the current city workers "are good people, loyal people, and they've served this city well. There's no reason to replace them. I hope the one who's replaced is Mr. Sanders."

Sanders called the board's action an "insult" and took it to court, but a judge refused to hear the case. The mayor said he may appeal to the state Supreme Court.

There have been occasional blunders, too. Sanders winces when he mentions his nominee for a minor city post, a city constable who had been a familiar figure in Burlington for years — and who had been dead about a month. "It was silly, just dumb," he says.

But Sanders believes he had strength through his ties with community groups, people he contends were ignored by the previous administration.

Members of an advisory task force include a police detective, an active feminist and a youth counselor. They meet regularly with Sanders, discussing everything from politics in El Salvador to whether the bushes should be trimmed at a local ball field.

"Some of these people had never set foot in City Hall," Sanders says. "Bringing them in has been the greatest accomplishment. They can come to me. A year ago, the door to this office was locked."

With a year and a half remaining in his term, Sanders says he's not sure if he will run again. He is divorced and shares custody of an 11-year-old son, Levi.

EMT Course Scheduled

An Emergency Medical Technician course has been slated to begin Oct. 12 at the National Guard Armory where the class will meet twice a week from 6-10 p.m.

The certification program course is being offered through Texas State Technical Institute and will be taught by Jerry Huffman, fireman-paramedic in Sweetwater, and by Joy Barnett, Scurry County EMS operator.

The EMT course will include 140 classroom hours plus a certain number of hours spent in hospital emergency rooms and observing surgery.

Anyone wishing more information about the program may call Scurry County EMS on the non-emergency line: 573-0841.

Lucky Cat Going Home After Texas Sojourn

LOCKHART, Texas (AP) — Lucky, the traveling cat, was en route back to England today after a six-months adventure in Texas.

According to Gary Fingleman, owner of Gary's Auction House in the Central Texas city, Lucky apparently wandered into a 40-by-10-by-8-foot shipping container that was being loaded in Heysham, England, with antiques for Fingleman's firm.

When Fingleman opened the crate about eight weeks later he heard a faint, plaintive "meow," and the emaciated black and white cat stumbled out.

"She was just about gone," Fingleman told the Austin American-Statesman.

He and his employees began feeding the cat baby food and teaspoons of water. Soon she was recovering, nosing around his office and enjoying Texas hospitality. He became so fond of her that he bought a special carrier to take her with him on trips to his other office in Houston.

When Fingleman made another trip to Heysham in August he mentioned to the warehouse man about the "bonus" cat in the last shipment. By chance, the warehouseman knew that Linda and Peter Sinclair of Heysham had been missing a cat. He gave Fingleman's telephone number to the Sinclairs.

Mrs. Sinclair called Fingleman and plans were made for Lucky's return. British Caledonian Airways offered to furnish air transporation.

"We were so grateful to him for taking care of Lucky," Linda said. "And next February, when we're on holiday, my husband and I are coming to Texas ourselves to thank him in person. We're already saving the money."

France and Austria signed the Treaty of Pressburg in 1805 to restore peace between the two countries after Napoleon's Victory at Austerlitz. But Austria did not remain subdued and Napoleon had to leave a campaign in Russia to quell the country again in 1808.
