JFK Team Is Alarmed

By LEWIS GULLICK
WASHINGTON (AP)—U.S. foreign policy makers from President Kennedy down were more deeply concerned Saturday about the steadily explosive Berlin crisis than any other cold war problem that has been faced by the new administration.

fight over Berlin could quickly become a big one. Germany as in the center of modern Europe, as focal for a brush-fire war, and areas on both sides have quick access to atomic weapons.

Andrew T. Hatcher, assistant White House press secretary, reported that Taylor definitely was under consideration, apparently as military adviser.

By JACK BELL
HONOLULU (AP)—Governors converged in this Pacific-scrubbed island Saturday to discuss school financing, mental health and a new anti-Communist program.

McNichols said in an interview he has President Kennedy's backing for a move aimed at countering Communist propaganda efforts fanned out from Fidel Castro's Cuba.

By CLAUDE E. ERBSEN
KEY WEST, Fla. (AP)—A committee of 10 prisoners from the anti-Castro invasion of Cuba arrived Saturday from Havana.

State Department press officer Joseph W. Reap said there is no government barrier to admission of the prisoners to the United States.

Body Dragged From Mine

PETROS, Tenn. (AP)—Rescue workers late Saturday dragged the body of Charlie Kennedy, 28, from a collapsed mine shaft where he and two other men were trapped Friday afternoon.

The other two men, presented dead, were still pinned behind the massive heap of debris and rock.

Reap added, however, that he did not know where the prisoners were headed and he knew no contact made by them with U. S. officials.

Gagarin Looking To Havana Trip

HAVANA (AP)—Soviet space man Yuri Gagarin believes he will come to Havana about July 24, the Moscow correspondent of the Cuban newspaper Revolution said Saturday.

Castro Friday turned down the committee's offer of 50 tractors, mostly small farm machines, and said he stood by his original demand of 300 bulldozers.

Miss Cramer, a waitress, was walking home from work when the two detectives heard screams and checking found the woman lying on the sidewalk with the suspect running from the scene.

Blight Hits Area Cotton

A disease currently affecting a few cotton fields has been identified as Ascochyta blight, commonly called "wet weather blight," County Agent Billy Roach reported Saturday.

Roach said that if area farmers could wait until the dew has dried before plowing, that will reduce the spreading of the disease.

Ascochyta blight's characteristics include a large purple spot on the leaf, with a white spot in the middle of the purple area.

Roach said that if area farmers could wait until the dew has dried before plowing, that will reduce the spreading of the disease.

Cool temperatures and wet, cloudy weather are ideal for the spread of the disease and early morning dew also help the disease spread, Roach said.

Kennedy Initiates Steps To Invoke Taft-Hartley Action

By NORMAN WALKER
WASHINGTON (AP)—President Kennedy initiated steps Saturday toward invoking the Taft-Hartley law to halt the crippling maritime strike. A decision is expected Monday.

Kennedy assigned Secretary of Labor Arthur J. Goldberg to survey strike effects over the weekend to determine whether the nation's health is in peril.

The secretary said the administration would have no hesitancy in invoking the Taft-Hartley law now.

Against this background, there was a report of a telephone conversation by a relative of one of the prisoners in Miami with another relative in Cuba, in which Castro was quoted as having said Friday night "the greatest desire of our government is to bring the negotiations to a fruitful conclusion."

Drive Is Launched To Build 'Brain Factory' In Dallas

By IRWIN FRANK

DALLAS (AP)—Lloyd V. Berkner has $20 million and five years to get his brain factory operating.

Hard-headed businessmen and industrialists in this region believe the growth of the Southwest depends upon its success.

Berkner is president and driving force behind the Graduate Research Center of the Southwest.

Its function is to "attract and retain capable scientists and technologists in the Southwest," Berkner says.

Faced with competing in the space age industrial race without these scientists, southwestern businessmen fear they are destined to fail.

They want the research scientists who helped create the electronic industries spreading over the east and west coasts.

They want a research center equal to Brookhaven National Laboratory in New York, and they want it started with men as capable as those found in Boston-San Francisco and Los Angeles.

To get the job done they've got the man they need in Berkner.

Berkner, a member of the board of directors of the Texas electronic giant, Texas Instruments, was picked for the job by the firm's board chairman, Erik Jonsson.

A tall, gray-haired, 56-year-old distinguished looking man, Berkner is rated as the intellectual father of the international geophysical year. He has worked with the Defense Department in areas ranging from NATO to former President Eisenhower's science advisory committee. He now works with the Kennedy administration on matters concerning national defense. He is married and the father of two children.

Red Gains In Oil Flow Fantastic

By MAX B. SKELTON

HOUSTON (AP)—Crude oil production gains made by Russia and communist bloc nations in five years are fantastic.

Russia and her satellites since 1956 have boosted output over 89 per cent. The United States and other free world nations have increased production less than 25 per cent.

Recent estimates of Russian production indicate a sharp point. Russia is challenging or has replaced Venezuela as the world's second leading oil producing nation.

Russia and her satellites now account for 15 per cent of world daily output compared to 10 per cent at the time of the 1956 Suez crisis.

In world production, the United States has lost ground both to Russia and to other free world producing areas.

In 1956 the United States accounted for over 40 per cent of world daily output and over 45 per cent of free world production. Last March she contributed only 33 per cent of world production and 39 per cent of free world output.

Records of the Oil and Gas Journal indicate world production increased from 17,067,000 barrels a day in October, 1956, just before the Suez Canal closed to 22,491,000 a day last March.

The gain amounted to 5,424,000 barrels a day. The Russian bloc contributed nearly one-third of the gain.

Over 81 per cent of total world output in March came from the Russian bloc and seven free world areas—the United States, Venezuela, North Africa, Kuwait, Iran, Saudi Arabia, and Iraq.

Communist area production jumped from 1,850,000 barrels a day to 3,501,000. This 89 per cent boost was exceeded only by North Africa which recorded a gain of 92 per cent by boosting output from 41,000 barrels a day to 450,000. The African boom still is on.

Fine Is Paid In Argument

BAYTOWN, Tex. (AP)—"It was worth it to get it settled."

This was the comment of Mrs. Dorothy Horton, 32, after she pleaded guilty and paid a $5 fine for slapping another mother in a dispute over a church-sponsored kid baseball game.

The other mother was Mrs. Mary Courtney, 35. Each had a son on opposite teams. The tussle stemmed from a claim that one team was using the ineligible player.

"I took a baseball glove and worked her over all right," Mrs. Horton said.

The kid league is sponsored by the Mount Park Baptist Church. Mrs. Horton's husband, D. D. Horton, is a part-time preacher and a school trustee.

west, however, is his work with Associated Universities, the Ivy League combine responsible for Brookhaven. He headed that organization from 1950 until he came here last year.

Berkner was chosen for his scientific and organizational accomplishments and because he talks in terms businessmen understand. He is not pained because results of basic research are used by industries to make a profit.

His office is a small room on the second floor of the administration building at Southern Methodist University.

A year from now his office will be in one of the buildings on 2,000 to 4,000 acres of former farmland somewhere close to Dallas. Berkner accepted the job of giving the Southwest a "great research center because of the challenge the task offers."

"I wouldn't have come here if I thought we couldn't get the money and support needed for this project," Berkner says.

He and the businessmen paying for the center, agree certain facts make the center a necessity.

The facts as presented by Berkner:

Fact 1. "The six states of the Southwest—Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana, New Mexico, Arkansas and Arizona—produced 387 persons with doctor degrees in science and engineering in a year in which the north graduated 4,053 and the northeast 3,289."

Fact 2. "The rate of achievement of learning at the doctoral level in the Southwest is far below the national average and almost negligible when compared to the 10 leading states."

Fact 3. "Only those regions will be economically healthy that have the intellectual power to exploit the new science and the consequent industry. Most certainly those regions that fall intellectually will fail economically and become chronically poor."

These are the facts which led businessmen to invest $20 million for the first five years for a research center dedicated to education. These are the facts that have led them to work toward another $40 million for the center after the five-year period ends.

"Laboratories," says Berkner, "are the seeds from which new technological industry will grow."

Department store owners, oil and gas operators, real estate developers all feel the Southwest must have the seeds or remain what it has been called—an intellectually backward region.

Berkner's immediate aim is "to increase the number of doctoral degrees from southwestern colleges and universities from the present total of a little more than 400 a year to about 2,000 a year by 1975."

Colleges in Tempe, Ariz., Lubbock or Fort Worth, Tex., Stillwater, Okla., and Baton Rouge, La., cannot do the job alone.

"Graduate education is inconceivable without extensive opportunity for research," Berkner points out. And, he adds, modern research facilities are beyond the reach of these and other schools in this region.

To fill this void the research center was conceived.

The center will give college professors facilities to continue their research. It will give scientists working for local industries a place to conduct research they could not otherwise undertake. It will draw industry to the area which need research facilities to exist.

"The presence of these men, the work of these scientists will attract other scientists to this area," Berkner says. "Naturally, new industry springs up in the geographic regions where men of the most suitable intellectual backgrounds are available."

Berkner's plan calls for dozens of professors from leading colleges and universities of the Southwest to continue their research at the center.

Stock Market Is Sluggish, But Big Decline Stemmed

NEW YORK (AP)—Depending upon what average you use, the stock market either rose or fell slightly last week. The best that can be said for last week's market is that it stemmed the previous week's sharp decline.

Volume dipped to 16,976,560 shares from 16,320,338 the week before. For the second week running, it was the lightest volume since the week ended last Nov. 26 when turnover was 12,709,923 shares.

The Dow Jones industrial average advanced 3.16 to 882.66—a trifling gain compared with its fall of 15.40 in the previous week. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks declined 80 to 244.40.

The AP average seemed to be a fairer interpretation this week of the over-all market trend inasmuch as, of 1,433 issues traded, 782 declined and only 494 advanced.

The low volume and the inconclusive market action seemed to indicate that the investor wanted more tangible evidence of an advance before laying his money on the line.

The main question was, will there be a summer rally?

"Probably," said the statistical record.

"Show me," said the investor. In the prior week the market had taken its worst weekly loss in 15 months and there were plenty of bruised optimists in Wall Street. Last week, prices broke very sharply on Monday but, before the session ended, support was reached at around 675 in the Dow Jones industrial average and recovery was starting.

The comeback continued Tuesday with the result that Monday's losses in the AP average were completely erased.

Trading continued to fall off in every subsequent session.

The economic recovery was moving along quite nicely, according to important indicators. It was a continued paradox, however, that price cuts were being made by manufacturers on a widening range of products.

These apparent contradictions in the economy confused investors. The tense international situation caused further uncertainty.

The midsummer-like lull that settled over the bond markets last week failed to stem the five-week retreat of prices.

A handful of U.S. government issues fell to 1961 lows. Many others were reported that level—some as far as three points below three-year highs established in mid-May.

The Associated Press average of 60 corporates showed all components lower except industrials. That section was artificially inflated by a five-point rise of one convertible included in the average.

Heavy new financing expected next month by the U.S. Treasury and various private corporations was responsible for the continued pressure on prices, analysts said.

Corporate volume on the New York Stock Exchange dipped to $25,158,200 par value, the lowest nonholiday week of the year, compared with $26,500,000 last week.

Off a full point among governments were the 3 1/2s of 1965 at 89.20-32 bid, a 1961 low. The 3 1/2s of 1960 fell 28-32 at 92.20-32 and the 3s of 1965 dropped 20-32 to 84.24-32, also the 1961 low.

New Pipeline Project Is Reported

NEW YORK (AP)—A group of major oil companies was reported Saturday to be planning construction of a pipeline to carry oil products from the Gulf of Mexico to the Middle Atlantic Coast.

Purpose of the line, trade sources said, was to avoid transportation delays that might be caused by future maritime strikes.

The venture, expected to be called Suwannee Pipeline Co., reportedly would cost a minimum of $50 million. It would be operated by Sinclair Oil Co.

A Sinclair spokesman would neither deny nor confirm published reports. Other sources, however, said the proposal was in the negotiating stage.

It would link refineries in Houston, Beaumont and Port Arthur, Tex., with points as far north as Baltimore, Washington, and Norfolk, Va.

Participating companies were said to be Sinclair, the Gulf Oil Corp., Texaco Inc., the American Oil Co., the Pure Oil Co., Phillips Petroleum Co., Cities Service Co. and Continental Oil Co.

Wendell Ramsey, a pipeline specialist with Gulf, was reported to be in line for presidency of Suwannee.

The line would connect Evangeline Pipeline System with the Southeastern Pipeline. This would give a through route to Georgia and Tennessee. The network then would be extended to market areas along the East Coast.

Evangeline already operates between Port Arthur, Tex., and Baton Rouge, La. Southeastern runs from Port St. Joe, Fla., northward to Tennessee.

Negro Is Principal Of All-White School

READSBORO, Vt. (AP)—A Negro school teacher whose father is a White House doorman has been named principal of the all-white Readsboro Central grammar school, the first of his race to hold such a post in Vermont.

The appointee, named Friday, is Preston Bruce Jr., 23, who has been teaching in the sixth and seventh grades of Central school. Bruce's father, Preston Bruce, was a doorman for Eisenhower and now is doorman for President John F. Kennedy.

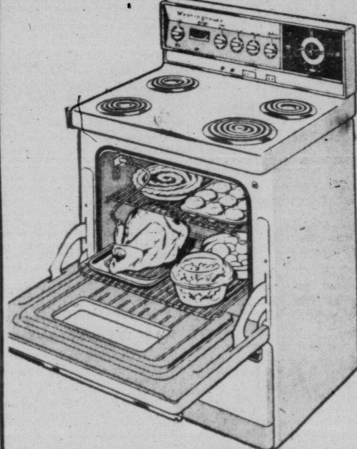

HOMEWARD BOUND AFTER SPY CHARGE—Miroslav Nacvalac, accused by the United States of being Communist Czechoslovakia's top spy in this country, poses with his wife, Hana, and their two sons, Miroslav, 8, and Ivan, 10, at New York's Idlewild airport before leaving for Paris and Prague. Nacvalac, a member of the Czech United Nations mission, protested that the United States branded him as a spy and forced him to leave because he would not betray his country. (AP Wirephoto)

Miss Rudder, Mr. Browning Are Married Friday Evening In Double Ring Ceremony

Miss Eureda Charlene Rudder of Girard and Donald Earl Browning of Fluvanna were married Friday evening, June 16, at 8 o'clock in the Girard Church of Christ.

Roger Turner, pastor of the Church of Christ of Sundown, performed the double ring ceremony before a large arrangement of white gladioli and stock flanked by candles empaneled in greenery and connected with white ribbon. White bows decorated the pews and the bridal aisle cloth was white.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Loyd Rudder of Girard. The groom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Earl Browning of Fluvanna.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a princess style white satin floor-length gown, fashioned with white organza overskirt attached with satin roses. The bodice was designed with a scalloped neckline. The long sleeves complimented with tiny buttons came to points over the hands. She carried a white Bible covered with lace and topped with a white orchid.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Mack Lauderdale of Lubbock. She wore a dark blue princess style polish cotton dress complimented with white accessories, and she carried a white bouquet of flowers.

Bridesmaids were Miss Jackie Choate of Abilene, Mrs. Don Johnson of Alpine and Mrs. Jerry Dodson of Abilene. They wore light blue princess style dresses with white accessories and carried bouquets of white flowers.

Candlelighters were Mrs. Gary Dyer and Miss Charlene Scott of Girard. They wore blue princess style dresses accented by white flowers and accessories.

Flower girl was Miss Jan Lana of Jacton. She was attired in a dark blue dress complimented with white accessories and carried a basket of white daisies.

Larry Taylor of Girard was ring bearer.

Morris Browning of Fluvanna, brother of the groom, was best man. Groomsman were Keith McCormick of Lamesa, M. B. Boykin of Abilene, and Lynn Tankersley of Snyder. Ushers were Garth Gregory of Girard and Kenneth Clark of Girard.

Music was provided by an octet with Sue Taylor of Snyder as soloist. The group sang the processional and recessional, "Because" and "Whither Thou Goest." The soloist sang "I Pledge My Love."

The reception following the ceremony was in the Girard Home Economics building. The bride's table was laid with a white crocheted cloth over blue and centered with a large white heart surrounded by blue flowers and candles. The three-tiered wedding cake was touched in blue and the punch was blue.

Mrs. Delinee Browning presided at the reception table. Mrs. Betty Rucker and Mrs. George Taylor presided at the register.

For a three-day wedding trip to Carlsbad and Ruidoso, N.M., the bride wore a white and lavender plaid dress fashioned with a pleated skirt and a large stand-up collar. She wore white accessories.

The couple will live in Tahoka. The bride is a graduate of Girard High School and Draughon's Business College in Lubbock. She served as secretary for Sun Oil Co. in Abilene for two and one-half years.

Kennedy's Personalities Reanalyzed

THE KENNEDY CIRCLE, Edited by Lester Tanzer.

Nineteen personalities in the White House and the Kennedy cabinet are presented in this collection of journalists' reports on the men around the President.

The more important members of the cabinet are allotted a chapter each, and the others are grouped in two and three. Dean Rusk, Secretary of State, Abraham Ribicoff, Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, and Attorney General Robert Kennedy get the lion's share of attention.

These essays go deeper than straight biographical sketches. They discuss each man's relationship with Kennedy, probe into the man's personality and attempt to show how he fits into his assignment.

There are 14 contributors, each a front rank reporter for newspapers, magazines or networks.

David Brinkley's introduction serves to sum up the Kennedy men's characteristics, and he finds they are not New Dealers and not reformers, but pragmatists—men who believe "the best idea is the one that works fastest with the least fuss, while irritating the fewest people."

Most of them are comparatively young, highly intelligent, and endowed with a drive for accomplishment. Through these chapters shines a reflected light on the personality of Kennedy himself.

An avid reader of the newspapers would have encountered most of the material in this book; there are no bombshells. But it is thorough, and of the several new books on this theme, this one makes deeper appraisals than the others.

The Only Merit Is Offbeat

BREAKDOWN. By John Brathy. World Publishing.

The author of this novel is a painter. He has done the black and white illustrations for this work in a blocky style, and his writing is rather blocky too.

His story is about a painter named Brady. This Brady is a successful artist, a comfortable husband and father. The trouble is that he has an itch—things like that happen to people in their middle years—and in a slightly unguarded moment he slips into a silly relationship with a frustrated, mentally unbalanced virgin who teaches in an art school.

It seems Brady was prepared for this first step to perdition by a feeling of inadequacy, brought on by such bumbling incidents as trouble with a motor scooter. He becomes a mixed up, middle aged kid.

Because he is trapped in the notion that his wife never would forgive his excursion into adultery, he breaks off his former pattern of life, sinking deeper and deeper. After a session in an asylum he makes a partial restitution of his life, only to be conveniently dispatched by an accident.

The book is a strange dish of chat about the oddballs of the London art world. Or perhaps in the story of Brady's disintegration, which is not too convincing.

But the style—except in the last few chapters, where it improves—is a quaint mixture of stilted Edwardian prose and a series of corny conversations with the reader. It is chaotic, discursive and puzzling. If you find merit in this book, it must be that it has an offbeat appeal.

Gwendolyn Davis Becomes Bride Of William Green In Wellington Rites

The First Baptist Church of Wellington was the setting on June 3, at 5:30 p. m. when Gwendolyn Gladell Davis became the bride of William E. Green. The couple both make their home in Snyder.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Davis of Wellington, and Mr. H. M. Green of Stephenville.

Brother Howard Jones of Amarillo performed the double ring rites before four standing candelabras and baskets of white gladioli and stock banded by palm leaves.

Mrs. Thurman Estes presented the musical program and Mrs. Glenn Hickey was soloist.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown fashioned with short sleeves, square scalloped neckline, and bodice of lace with pearls and iridescent sequins. Bands of lace adorned the front and back and silk organza roses graced the waist in the back. The skirt of silk organza flowed into a chapel train.

Her elbow-length veil fell from a tiara of pearls and iridescent sequins. She carried eight white gardenias surrounded by frenched carnations.

Mrs. John Boyer of Houston was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Alma Ruth Love of Terrell, and Jean Woolbright of Amarillo. LaWanda Wheeler, Amarillo, and niece of the bride was flower girl.

The attendants were dressed in powder blue polished cotton street-length dresses, fashioned with rounded necklines and short sleeves. They wore white gloves and shoes. Their headresses were of white colonial bouquets of frenched carnations.

Odis Claxton of Lubbock was best man. Ushers were Mike Wheeler, Amarillo, Dan Prewitt, Snyder, Gary Zook, Olney and Kenneth Worsham of Carlsbad, N. M.

The parents of the bride and the bride's attendants received guests at the reception held in the church parlor.

The bride's table was laid with a crocheted cloth over blue. A three-tiered cake, and blue and white flowers, flanked either side of the bride's bouquet used as a centerpiece.

For her wedding trip the bride chose an orchid and white cotton knit three-piece suit with white accessories and white gardenia corsage. On returning from Russia, Goss, Cloudford and Carlsbad, N. M. the couple will be at home at 1916 Coleman Street. Both are teachers in the Snyder School system.

Out-of-town guests were from Amarillo, Houston, Carlsbad, N. M., Lubbock, Olney and Terrell.

Mrs. Green is a graduate of Wellington High School and West Texas State College. Mr. Green attended Shamrock High School and McMurray College. He also served three years in the Air Force.

Pointers For Camera Bugs

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

TIME AND TIMING are vital elements which camera fans can use to better advantage to make better pictures.

Why do so many of us rush into and through our picture-taking sessions when patience and more thoughtful shooting would produce more meaningful pictorial memories?

The thought crossed my mind as I studied a photograph made by a Pakistani photographer. The little story that accompanied the photo told how he waited for almost a year to take that picture. It was made when the sun was at its highest elevation, producing the most favorable lighting angle for the particular effect he visualized: two natives enjoying their morning coffee before a backlit grill design which cast a perfect shadow design on the ground.

It was indeed a contrast to many of my own experiences and to what I've seen other photographers go through at family gatherings, outings, picnic, at sessions when children were playing or when trying to make portrait studies. When the camera is in our hands to record the occasion, we feel impelled to press the button even though we may not be satisfied with what we see in front of our lens.

The best strategy, therefore, is to work with time as your ally. Take a few token pictures at the start, but far fewer than would have been taken normally. People relax after a few clicks have been heard. Let them... but keep the camera visible and handy and every once in a while use it to view the scene without necessarily shooting anything.

Such behavior becomes accepted after a while... and ignored. But it gives you the opportunity to select the significant moments when they finally reveal themselves. And if you do get pictures, they'll usually be worth the waiting.

WHAT'S NEW ABOUT A CAR WITH ELEVATED SEAT

American-Inspired Progress Is Moving Slowly In Ecuador

By W. D. BEDELL
Assistant Executive Editor
The Houston Post

TUMBACO, Pichincha Province, Ecuador, (AP)—Segundo Manuel Cardenas is 14. He is a slender boy of much Indian and a little Spanish blood. He is very courteous and talks in the musical Spanish of Ecuador.

Segundo lives in the warm and eye-pleasing Valle de Tumbaco, about an hour's drive over steep mountain roads east of Quito.

Tumbaco is only 8,000 feet high, and in the valley grow lemons, oranges, grapefruit, guavas and chirimoyas. The valley also grows corn and wheat and alfalfa. The corn is now in the milk stage and is called choclo. In another month or two it will be dry and be called maiz.

It takes longer to grow corn in Ecuador than in Texas, because, despite the warmth and the sunshine, the day at the equator is only 12 hours long, whether it be December or June. Corn takes longer hours of sunlight than that.

Segundo Cardenas is a member of Los Chagres de Tumbaco. This is a club of the Cuatro F's, the Four F's of Ecuador: The F's stand for Faith, Fecundity, fertility, Fortitude, strength, and Felicidad, happiness.

Segundo is apparently a happy boy. He carries himself with a quiet pride. The Indians and mestizos around him in the village of Tumbaco seem to be happy. They smile readily and are most hospitable. But when they go by foot or by rickshaw to the hills, they get on a mantle of coldness. There are few rocks and no high hills in the Valle de Tumbaco. It is fine, volcanic dust, and the people of the town and the valley live with dirt 12 months a year. The village of Tumbaco puts on a brave air. It has a plaza with a fountain which spurts a thin stream. There are flowers in the plaza, but there are also weeds and thick dirt.

Most of the houses and shops around the plaza are dun or white-washed adobe, but some are painted the sky blue or lemon yellow of Latin America.

Despite the brave air, most of the houses in the Tumbaco Valley are hovels. The valley people sit on the floor in the dirt. There are corn shucks and fish all around.

This is not true of one house in Tumbaco. The girls' demonstration club has remodeled a room in one of the houses. This room has a board floor. It has curtains at the windows and pictures on the walls. But, most significantly, it has beds, real beds with springs and mattresses. The springs and mattresses must be very old because the beds sag in the middle. The cornermen must be very old and probably donated, because they are faded.

But these are beds. The Indian Latin America sleeps on a bed, with only a mat under him and a blanket over him. The next step is to a bunk of corn shucks or hard boards. The "European" Ecuadorian sleeps on a bed. It is a tremendous leap to go from a mat in the dirt to a bed in a room with curtains in one step.

The girls are also learning to sew. They have two old North American sewing machines to practice on. They learn amid a great deal of talk and laughing. Some of the girls are truly beautiful. At 14 their skins have the bloom of an Indian peach; their hair is alive and shining black.

If they go the Indian way, they will be ugly at 35. Their hair will be stringy, their skin dead, their feet broken from hauling loads of maize or babies over endless miles. If they go the European way, at least some of them will still be beautiful at 35, possibly more beautiful than they are at 14.

The girls are raising chickens too, genuine New Hampshire Reds from North America. They don't eat the eggs. Eggs are cared, dear. They sell them. An egg brings sure, a day's pay in rural Ecuador.

Segundo Cardenas also hopes to have eggs to sell soon.

He has about 50 New Hampshire Red pullets. The pullets are in an adobe shack built into a low side hill overlooking the valley. Segundo has a bun on one side of the chicken house. He sleeps there every night to keep his rodents, the thieves, from stealing his chickens.

The chicken house is an evil-smelling place, but it looks out across pleasant fields of wheat and alfalfa, and orchards of guava and chirimoya trees.

Segundo's neighbor, Folia Ana Silva, who is 35 and has gone the Indian way, says Segundo's pullets have a beautiful view. She speaks truly.

Segundo also has a Corriedale ewe named Pancha. She has been bred to a fine ram and he hopes to start a herd of pure bred sheep.

Segundo is one of about 30 boys in the Tumbaco Valley who are learning modern farm and ranch methods in the 4-F.

The 4-F and the girls' demonstration clubs are now completely in Ecuadorian hands. The Ministry of Fomento (development) supervises them without financial help from the North Americans.

But the North Americans start all the work and continue to advise the Ecuadorians.

The progress the Tumbaco Valley men is making is the result of one of many projects initiated by United States agencies in Ecuador and all over Latin America.

The U. S. Operating Mission, which is known in the United States as the International Cooperation Administration or Point Four, is at present spending about $2 million a year in Ecuador alone. This money is being used for training and improvements in four main fields: agriculture, industry, education and public health. The money is matched by the Ecuadorans. North Americans and Ecuadorans work side by side in the programs.

Ecuadorians are being taught to drive farm tractors. They are being taught to be labor leaders, to develop sound unions.

There is an industry development center to sponsor new industries in Ecuador. This goes slowly, for the republic is still 95 per cent agricultural.

Teachers are being trained and schools are being built. Schools are going up now in Guayaquil, Manabí, Loja and Cuenca. The Ecuadorans go 50-50 with the North Americans in paying for the buildings.

Drinking water is at present the chief public health project. This is immensely important in Ecuador and almost every Latin American country. Almost all of Latin American's water is contaminated from centuries of filth. Except in a few places, such as Buenos Aires and Panama City, one dare not drink water from taps, lest he catch dysentery or something worse. But the Latin continue to drink from contaminated streams, lakes and irrigation ditches.

USIA is installing or teaching Ecuadorians to install safe water systems as fast as time and the money available will allow.

This USOM money has to be spread pretty thin. And the progress being made in a continent which resists change is slow, slow.

The Ecuadorians working in Ecuador are anonymous people. They do not talk for publication, and they get little glory from their work. Some are frustrated almost to the point of madness from the seeming futility of digging away at the whole range of the Andes as if with a teaspoon. Some get a quiet satisfaction out of the smallest achievement.

This is not all that North America is doing in Ecuador and the rest of Latin America.

Since 1942, the Export-Import Bank has loaned $40 million to Ecuador for highways, power development, water supply and other projects. Most of these loans have been made since 1950. Ecuador is making payments on the loans.

The Development Loan Fund has loaned $10 million for highway work. Highways in Ecuador are obstructions to dirt roads, rough and twisting. The engineering is primitive. Thousands of miles of roads are still needed.

Public Law 480—the surplus commodities program—has permitted the selling on advantageous terms of more than $13 million in products Ecuador needs—such as cotton, tobacco and edible oils.

Much work is also being done by private religious and philanthropic organizations.

This is what the United States is doing in Ecuador. It has similar projects all over Latin America.

Some resent it. Some are thankful for it. There is no doubt that there is much waste, much useless motion, much graft. Graft is everywhere in Ecuador and its sister nations. It is so widespread that governments wink at it.

Whether Segundo Manuel Cardenas resents the help he has received, or whether he is thankful, or whether he is completely unaware of it, he is already a better boy and he will some day be a better farmer than today's Tumbaco Valley men.

'Impact' Starts Abilene Argument

By JOEL KIRKPATRICK

ABIENE, Tex. (AP)—Say the word "Impact" in this West Texas college, cattle and commercial center, and you've started an argument.

Ever since a move to incorporate a 47-acre area north of this city began early in 1960, wet and dry factions have been choosing up sides and throwing hard words. And they threw hard words all the way to the Texas Supreme Court.

On June 14, the Supreme Court ruled that Taylor County Judge Reed Ingalsbe must recognize an incorporation election held at Impact by canvassing the votes cast in the election.

Judge Ingalsbe first authorized a Feb. 15, 1960, incorporation election at Impact, then after returning to Abilene from a trip to find the town in turmoil, revoked his order calling the election.

He said he had heard rumors that once the town was incorporated, a local option election would be held in the town.

The election was held at Impact anyway, and citizens of the area voted 27-0 to become a town. Judge Ingalsbe refused to recognize the election by refusing to count the votes.

Public relations man Dallas G. Perkins, who is a major landowner at Impact, sought a mandamus in district court to force Ingalsbe to recognize the election and declare the town incorporated.

Dist. Judge J. R. Black dismissed the case. Perkins appealed to the 11th Court of Civil Appeals at Eastland.

Ingalsbe was upheld. The case went then to the Supreme Court.

Abilene city commissioners, motivated by a desire to prevent the city from being "impacted" by any beginning ring of small and non-taxpaying "bedroom municipalities," hired a private law firm to represent Judge Ingalsbe. But in addition to being spurred by a desire to prevent "growth of imbedded municipalities" such as plague Dallas, San Antonio and Houston, commissioners were urged to hire the private law firm by persistent rumors that Impact would "go wet" if incorporated.

Judge Ingalsbe reflected this attitude this week when he said, "I have contended from the beginning that there was no good faith intention to incorporate a city (at Impact), but that instead the sponsors of the town intended a device to bring legal liquor into Taylor County."

Since the Supreme Court's ruling on the Impact case, both sides have kept a tight rein on public comment. Perkins and Impact developer, Perkins and his lawyer, Dan T. Sorrells, would not say whether they plan to call a local option election.

Their next step, he said, is to get an election going to pick town officials.

Judge Ingalsbe says he'll willingly call such an election, but not until after the Supreme Court actually orders the district judge to tell him to count the votes.

Tom Epley, lawyer for Abilene and Judge Ingalsbe, said he plans to ask the court to set aside the ruling on the Impact case, but the case adding that should a rehearing be denied, he will probably take over legal action.

He said, however, that Abilene city commissioners have not asked him, to date, to do anything further in the case.

Meanwhile, the owner of a string of liquor stores based in Fort Worth, G. R. Jery, has filed a notice he intends to sell liquor in Taylor County, when—and if he can legally do so.

Taylor County voted dry in 1902, and has been dry since. Court records reflect that it has been persistently dampened by the efforts of bootleggers, however.

The Supreme Court, which heard arguments March 8 surrounding the controversial birth of the new town, returned a majority opinion which said in effect that once the incorporation election had been lawfully called, the county judge had no power to call it.

The dissenting opinion was written by Justice Clyde Smith.

Developers at Impact have never made public comment about whether or not a local option election will be called, but both sides have made references to rumors at hearings before appeals courts.

In arguments before the appeals court, Perkins' lawyer said that the question of whether or not the town planned to vote wet was not at issue since only the incorporation election was before the court.

He added that a local option election would be a separate legal proceeding.

In argument before the State Supreme Court, Ingalsbe's attorney, Epley, referred to Impact as "six-pack."

June 16, Judge Ingalsbe forced himself from any new legal action involving the controversial town. "I've done all I can do," he said.

Specifically, Judge Ingalsbe said that a "quo warranto" proceeding, which may be contemplated as the next step by the Impact forces, is "outside my duties as county judge."

A quo warranto proceeding, in this case, would attack the validity of the incorporation grounds that it denies the citizens of a larger area of which Impact is a part their right to vote.

Legally, a state's attorney is required to sue in any quo warranto proceeding. This week, no state's attorney in Taylor County seemed enthusiastic about joining the anti-Impact forces.

Impact attorney Sorrells said to prevent the town from being "impacted" would welcome a quo warranto proceeding, saying he thought that was the way the city should have opposed him in the first place.

Home Owners Can Thwart Trees Suicide Inclined

Freedom has its own full share of malcontents—those woody pets with suicidal tendencies. And they may take some slouching on your part to keep these trees from inflicting themselves.

There frequently are tell-tale signs that indicate this self-destructing trait, but it sometimes takes the professional to root out the evils of this underground movement.

Trees with a suicidal bent are those with grinding roots. Left alone, they have been known to strangle themselves to death. More often there is only partial strangulation. The home owner himself sometimes can handle the commonest root grinding—namely, the surface variety. This means severing the offending root at the point of origin, then painting the wound to prevent infection.

The home ground detective can seek these clues—weak top growth, poor bark development, or the appearance of underdeveloped or gnarled trunk base.

Types of strangulation are soon spotted, but the kind beneath the ground usually requires vigorous use of the professional. Free man, one good clue for the amateur: When a tree trunk grows into the ground like telegraph pole, with no flaring out just above the ground line, it may have grinding roots.

During the growing season, the tree doctor will look for deficient development of trunk and branches, excessive leaf scorch, withering and other signs of moisture deficiency commonly blamed on drought.
