52 Americans freed

■ Iraq refuses to allow three males in the group of U.S. Embassy dependents from Kuwait to cross the border into Turkey, while national security adviser Brent Scowcroft says Saddam Hussein is seeking a way out of the "box" he has built himself.

By George Gedda

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fifty-two of 55 dependents of U.S. Embassy personnel from Kuwait crossed from Iraq into Turkey late Sunday, but three young men were detained by Iraqi border authorities, the State Department said.

A spokeswoman for the Kuwait task force at State Department headquarters said, "The convoy of Kuwait embassy dependents crossed the border from Iraq into Turkey about 2 a.m. Iraqi time (5 p.m. CDT.). Fifty-two of the group of 55 who earlier had permission to cross were allowed to leave.

"Three young men in the group, male dependents of Kuwait embassy diplomats, were not allowed by Iraqi officials to transit the border and are in the company of an American Embassy Baghdad escort officer.

"The 52 were met by a party from the American Embassy in Ankara. They will rest tonight in Turkey and plans are being made for their en route journey home."

The spokeswoman, who declined to allow her name to be used, said she had no information on the ages of the three males held back, nor on what would happen to them. State

U.S. forces shifting to offensive

By Stewart Powell
Reporter-Telegram Washington Bureau

RIYAHD, Saudi Arabia — The panic-driven U.S. reinforcement of Saudi Arabia is becoming a durable military operation soon capable of all-out warfare against Iraq, according to U.S. military officers.

The transition from reinforcement to offensive capability advanced Sunday with the arrival of large numbers of troops from the 101st Airborne Division bristling with antitank weapons and the 24th Mechanized Infantry Division armed with dozens of tanks.

Despite reports from the field that U.S. forces still lack sufficient ground-based anti-aircraft systems, heavy armor and artillery, American commanders here said the new troop arrivals will buttress U.S. ability to conduct highly mobile, give-and-take desert warfare.

The officials said U.S. plans call for devastating attacks across Iraq in the event of any conflict — a strategy that in effect would write off Americans held hostage in Kuwait or Iraq.

Commanders here, both in the field and at headquarters, insist their mission remains defensive. In-

Public water plan hearing set for Tuesday

■ West Texans can air their views on the Texas Water Development Board's draft report on the state's water needs and how to deal with them for the next 50 years.

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Water-conscious West Texans may express their views on Texas' water plans and problems in a public hearing in Midland Tuesday.

The focus will be on the Texas Water Development Board's (TWDB) draft report on a long-range water plan that includes phased-in "conservation initiatives" to reduce water usages even while water demands increase in a state that is bent on economic growth.

Dr. Tommy Knowles, TWDB director of planning, will moderate the hearing at 3 p.m. and again at 7 p.m. Tuesday in the Region XVIII Education Service Center, 2811 La Force Blvd.

"We hope there's a nice mixture of compliments and complaints," said Donna Darling, TWDB public information officer in Austin. "That's why we're coming there."

The TWDB report projects an annual statewide water demand of 7 trillion gallons by 2040 to meet the state's population demands. Texas' population is projected to grow from 16 million in 1985 to 35 million in 50 years.

While recommending "phased-in conservation initiatives" that can reduce water usage by as much as 1 trillion gallons annually by 2040, the TWDB is proposing new water supplies. Those would include 13 new surface water reservoirs, four salinity-control projects, modification of existing reservoirs, and 29 major water-conveyance systems.

TWDB also is recommending "more intensive reuse of water."

"A significant feature of the 1990 draft Water Plan Update is an emphasis on the maintenance of adequate in-stream flows to support Texas' abundant and varied fish and wildlife population, and to supply the freshwater needs of bays and estuaries along the Texas coast," according to a report by Ms. Darling.

The draft plan projects an investment need of more than $37 billion by the state's utilities for water and wastewater facilities and an additional $1.9 billion for flood-protection needs.

Policies proposed by the TWDB include:

- Efficiency and management of available water resources.
- Protection of water supplies for future generations.
- Continuing investment in water resources, as federal funding decreases.
- Educating Texans on water resources.

In its study, TWDB has divided the state into eight geographical regions, including the High Plains and Trans-Pecos Region, which includes Midland and Odessa among the region's 56 counties. The region takes in the Canadian River Basin and portions of Red, Brazos, Colorado and Rio Grande River Basins.

The region's population today is estimated at 1.16 million, including more than 112,000 people in the Midland area and 129,000 in the Odessa area.

3-year-olds eligible for special MISD class

■ At first, teachers will visit these children of migrant workers in their homes for one hour of instruction per week; parents will play a large part in the children's schooling.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

It's the first day of school and Midland's first-ever class of 3-year-old children of migrant parents.

Although 3 seems like a tender age to start school, Marsha Samponaro of Midland Independent School District, said, "Research has proven that getting children started in school at an earlier age prevents problems later on."

Although about 25 pupils have been identified as eligible for the migrant program, they won't actually attend class until October. According to Ms. Samponaro, MISD coordinator of kindergarten and federal programs, pupils will initially receive instruction from teachers visiting their homes.

Cecilia Reyes, teacher of the migrant program, said, "A teacher will visit the child once a week for an hour. The parents will be included in the visit."

Ms. Samponaro said parents are included in the instruction so they can "reinforce the learning and become the child's primary teacher." She stressed that the program was new to Midland schools and that October was tentatively targeted as the month that the children would actually attend school. "This is a pilot program," she said. "It has been very successful in the Ector County schools."

Children of migrant workers aren't the only tiny tots attending school today. Economically disadvantaged youngsters who will be four by Sept. 1 begin attending pre-kindergarten classes at Bunche and West Early Childhood Centers. Several special education classes for pupils three to six years old are also in session at West.

Pam Pace, pre-kindergarten teacher at West, said children who qualify for free or reduced price meals will qualify for the School starts

School is in session today and that means that children will be out on the streets in full force, according to Cpl. Jim White of the Midland Police Department.

"People should leave earlier than usual to give themselves more time to get to work. They may need to slow down in some areas," White said. "Children will be out on foot and on bicycles."

White noted that drivers should also be reminded that children will be headed home from school during the late afternoon hours. "And, of course," White said, "the school zone speeds will be heavily enforced by police officers."

'Awful' pop

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Linda Ronstadt blames arena concerts and radio programmers for the "awful" state of pop music.

"What really ruined pop music is the architecture that it's presented in," Ms. Ronstadt told The Pittsburgh Press in Sunday's editions. "Any place that's bigger than 11,000 is just not a suitable environment for music."

Describing the sound in such places as "swimmy and boomy," she said, "I hate playing in them, and I will never be in an audience at one of them."

High expected in upper 90s

Staff Report

Today's forecast is sunny and hot with a high in the upper 90s and south winds 5-15 mph, according to the National Weather Service (NWS) in Midland.

Tonight's forecast is for clear skies with a low predicted in the upper 60s.

Tuesday is predicted to be sunny and hot with a high in the upper 90s.

The high Sunday was 97, compared to the record high for Aug. 26 of 103, set in 1964, the NWS said. Sunday's low was 65. The record low for today's date is 27, set in 1961.

STATE

Sunny skies and southerly winds made for another hot day Sunday in South Texas. Southerly surface winds kept relative humidities high, while high pressure aloft depressed cloud formation.

Afternoon temperatures were in the 90s and 100s, with Corpus Christi at 101. Heat indexes were well above 100 in many parts of the south.

Clear to partly cloudy skies are expected to continue through Monday.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

FORCES: Mission still defined as 'defensive' creasingly, however, the officers are raising the likelihood that the mission could quickly turn offensive once adequate numbers of U.S. forces arrive. Some 60,000 are now reported deployed after a three-week U.S. buildup.

"Our mission is defensive right now and that's the only mission I have," said Marine Lt. Gen. Walter E. Boomer, commander of 45,000 Marines assigned to the Persian Gulf region. But, he added that "if the president decides on something different, I'm sure whenever that is, we'll be able to accomplish it."

If conflict erupts, ground forces here would be backed by long-range attack missiles on American warships as well as bombs and missiles fired from warplanes based here in Saudi Arabia, Turkey, the Indian Ocean island of Diego Garcia and aboard two aircraft carriers at sea.

Forty-four radar-evading Stealth 117A attack planes now are in the region. More than 30,000 Marines aboard 22 amphibious assault ships are arriving within three weeks.

The U.S. buildup has no end in sight, with Pentagon officials now envisioning 150,000 troops by the end of October — and possibly 250,000 by year's end. Supply specialists have been ordered to begin bringing in winter gear for U.S. forces who will see desert temperatures exceeding 115 degrees plunge to near freezing by November.

Said Boomer: "I've already ordered field jackets for the winter."

The force buildup and preparations for an indefinite stay are designed to counter the strength of the 1-million-member Iraqi armed forces, said Air Force Lt. Gen. Charles A. Horner, the deputy commander here.

U.S. officials, however, are encountering some resistance from Saudi officials, senior U.S. military commanders concede. But they say they hope they can overcome Saudi concerns within days.

Saudi officials are balking at live-fire combat exercises by American forces using tanks, artillery and anti-tank weapons. Saudi officials fear the rounds could damage buried oil and gas pipelines, jeopardize civilians and possibly even provoke Iraq.

U.S. officials say they need the exercises with real ammunition in order to set ranges on guns and missiles. Such ranges are hard to set in areas that are often flat sheets of sand, they say.

"I'm not interested in doing things that would provoke anybody," Horner said.

Sgt. John Hilton, of Augusta, Ga., holds his M-16 rifle and waves an American flag on the tarmac at Dhahran Airport in Saudi Arabia Sunday. Hilton, from the 24th Mechanized Infantry Division, arrived here Sunday from Fort Stewart, Ga., as part of Operation Desert Shield.

But he added that the military has "certain requirements to do certain types of live fire and we're working that so that it's done in the proper place and the proper time."

Boomer said Marines normally move out from staging areas quickly after arrival so they can "have a massive fire-support exercise."

He expressed optimism that the differences can be worked out. "We'll get there," Boomer said in an interview. "They know what we want to do. They understand the military necessity of doing those kinds of things."

The closely-held U.S. blueprint for defending Saudi Arabia that U.S. Defense Secretary Dick Cheney unveiled for Saudi King Fahd in early August gradually is unfolding here on the ground.

American units are stationed well south of the Saudi-Kuwaiti border. Saudi forces and the forces of other Arab allies are deployed to the north as a "screening" force to detect any Iraqi attack.

The Saudis are reluctant to hold large-scale multinational exercises, and U.S. field commanders fear that this reluctance may slow the rehearsal of communications and cooperation required between Arab forces and American forces in the event of conflict with Iraq.

The U.S. strategy also calls for allied forces to yield large amounts of flat desert along the border to draw in Iraqi attackers to make their columns more vulnerable to superior airpower. The American approach stirred concern in Saudi government circles, but Saudi military defense specialists appear to be satisfied with the plan.

GULF: Group 'very happy' to be in Turkey

(From 1A)

Department officials previously have described all 55 of the dependents as "women and children."

An administration official with President Bush in Kennebunkport, Maine, said later that all three of those kept from crossing the border were over 18 years of age. The official, who declined to be identified by name, said there was no indication that the three were harmed, but that they were sent back to Baghdad with the escort officer.

The announcement from the State Department came a few hours after an ABC News report that a bus carrying the Americans had been turned back at the border, leaving U.S. officials waiting in Turkey uncertain for a time as to what was happening.

In a telephone interview with AP Broadcast from Diyarbakir, Turkey, David Kostelancik, vice consul of the U.S. Embassy in Ankara, Turkey, said the 52 dependents "were received by the American consul from Adana, Mr. Harry Cole, and at a later time transportation was arranged for them from the border to Diyarbakir."

"They were all very, very tired but they were all very enthusiastic, very happy to be in Turkey," said Kostelancik. "They will be transported sometime today (Monday) to the Interlik air base near Adana, where they will remain and they will probably leave sometime tomorrow (Tuesday) for the United States." The crossing occurred, as previously planned, at Habur.

Meanwhile, national security adviser Brent Scowcroft said Sunday that Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, faced with increasing global opposition to his conquest of Kuwait, is now intent on seeking a way out of the "box" he is in.

Scowcroft and a variety of other experts interviewed Sunday all indicated there was room for hope that the 24-day-old Persian Gulf crisis could be resolved short of military conflict.

"I can see a peaceful way out of it," Scowcroft said on ABC-TV's "This Week With David Brinkley" program. "Saddam Hussein must now see he's facing overwhelming world opinion."

"He is casting about for a way out of the box in which he finds himself," Scowcroft said.

The pressure on Saddam appeared to increase dramatically Saturday when the U.N. Security Council gave the United States and other nations the right to use military power in enforcing the economic embargo against Iraq.

Scowcroft said Saddam has shown himself in the past to be a realist, citing his willingness two weeks ago to bow to Iran's terms for a settlement of their eight-year war. Among other concessions, Saddam agreed to recognize the prewar boundary of the two countries.

Meanwhile, State Department press officer Anita Stockman said Sunday the U.S. Embassy in Iraqi-occupied Kuwait has been informed that two additional Americans have been taken into custody by Iraqi troops.

She said the information was relayed to the embassy by telephone. Although officials had no way of confirming the information, she said embassy personnel had reason to believe it was accurate. She had no additional details about those arrested.

Assistant Secretary of State for Near East and South Asian Affairs John Kelly said little had changed at the U.S. Embassy in Kuwait City, which, along with a number of other Western diplomatic missions, was being surrounded by Iraqi troops.

Appearing on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press" program, Kelly said the embassy is hampered in its efforts to help the estimated 2,500 Americans whom Iraq is refusing permission to leave the country. He said less than 10 have been picked up by Iraqi troops. Another 50 are in Iraqi troop custody in Baghdad, he said.

Iraq cut off electricity at the U.S. Embassy in Kuwait on Saturday and the power remained off Sunday. The embassy was using a power generator.

Iraqi troops were preventing anyone from entering or leaving the embassy but Kelly said the reduced staff there probably had a couple of weeks worth of supplies remaining.

At the Pentagon, the Army on Sunday ordered 50 more Army reserve and National Guard units in 25 states to report for active duty by Aug. 31. The Defense Department also said elements of the Army's 13th Support Command at Fort Hood, Texas, had begun to deploy to the Middle East.

The impetus for a diplomatic solution appeared to increase when Iraqi Ambassador Mohamed al-Mashat said his government would welcome a mediation effort by U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar.

Perez de Cuellar said Saturday he was seeking an urgent meeting this week with Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz in either New York or Geneva. After his television appearance, Scowcroft said the administration "would have no problem" with a mediation by Perez de Cuellar.

He added that highest U.S. priority was inducing Iraq to withdraw from Kuwait. After that, he said, "We're prepared to talk about anything."

Scowcroft was interviewed in Kennebunkport, Maine, where he was staying with the vacationing President Bush. The president, who played golf and tennis and received a briefing from Scowcroft, continued to refuse to answer reporters' questions about the gulf situation.

Bush was to return to Washington on Tuesday to brief congressional leaders on the gulf crisis.

Bodies of 2 kidnapped girls found over the weekend

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The bodies of two girls who were the subjects of massive searches after they were kidnapped in separate incidents were found over the weekend, police said Sunday.

"We feel they were both killed shortly after they were abducted," said Lt. Albert Ortiz, head of the San Antonio Police Department homicide division. The deaths were not believed to be related.

A passerby discovered the decomposed body of 11-year-old Heidi Seeman along a desolate road Saturday near Wimberley in Hays County, Ortiz said.

Heidi disappeared Aug. 4 as she was walking along a road near her San Antonio home. Thousands of people helped search for the girl. Reward money in the case had grown to at least $50,000.

Erica Botello, 7, who had been missing since Thursday, was found dead Sunday in a drainage ditch several blocks from her apartment. Her hands had been tied and she was partially clothed, Ortiz said Sunday night.

One of the searchers combing the area near her apartment found the body, stuffed more than 100 feet into a drainage ditch, officials said.

The cause of death had not been determined in either case. Police were awaiting medical examiner's reports.

Rodrick Springs, 17, was arrested Friday in connection with Erica's disappearance. The charge against him was upgraded to capital murder Sunday after the girl's body was found by a member of the search team looking for her, Ortiz said.

A 31-year-old man also believed to be involved was to be charged Sunday night, police said.

No arrests had been made in the Heidi case, but FBI special agent Claude Martin said, "We have a lot of leads. They're still being uncovered at this moment."

Iraqis tighten siege of embassies in Kuwait

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Iraqi authorities reportedly entered the Chinese embassy in Kuwait and tightened their grip on other foreign embassies there Sunday by shutting off their water supply, Bush administration officials said.

The U.S. embassy, which now houses about 10 diplomats, has been virtually cut off from the 2,500 people who make up the U.S. community and surrounded by Iraqi forces, the State Department said.

Ambassador W. Nathaniel Howell and his staff of mostly consular officers have stored adequate food and water, including that which fills several jugs and the compound's swimming pool.

While their electricity has been cut, a couple of telephone lines work from time to time.

Most of the U.S. officials, including the deputy chief of mission and a communications officer, are women.

U.S. officials said most foreign embassies — more than 20 others have disobeyed Iraqi orders to shut down in Kuwait City — are in worse shape than the U.S. mission.

"Several other embassies are worried about food spoilage, inadequate water and in some cases the medical condition of people inside the embassies, especially those who need prescriptions filled," a State Department official said.

The official said the State Department had received a number of vague reports that a few foreign embassies had been entered by Iraqi forces during the day for brief periods of time.

He said the most firm report was of an invasion, but not occupation, of the Chinese embassy.

"My impression is what may have happened is that Iraqi soldiers knocked on the doors of the embassies to inspect the premises and perhaps shut off the water," he said.

There was no immediate official response from Beijing.

The Washington Post reported Sunday that the embassy of the Philippines had been overtaken by thousands of its nationals seeking safety and shelter from Iraqi authorities.

WATER: Education part of plan

(From 1A)

By 2040, the region's population is projected between 1.7 million and 1.9 million, according to the TWDB. Midland's population is projected between 139,000 and 157,000, and Odessa's population by 2040 is estimated between 173,000 and 201,000.

Within the region, current water usage is estimated at 1.5 trillion gallons per year, with almost 89 percent used for irrigation.

Approximately 26.4 billion gallons annually are used in the Midland-Odessa area.

Between now and 2040, according to TWDB, "Groundwater levels are expected to continue to decline and, even with conservation, water needs for irrigation could exceed supplies in localized areas."

Water problems in the region include high concentrations of total dissolved solids in Lake Meredith and the Colorado River and concentrations of fluorides and nitrates in the groundwater. In many areas, those concentrations exceed state and federal standards for public consumption.

About $1.5 billion will be needed for wastewater infrastructure in the region over the 50-year period, according to TWDB.

"With the recent completion of the O.H. Ivie Reservoir and necessary transmission facilities and in conjunction with an effective water-conservation program, the cities of Midland and Odessa should have ample water supplies to meet their needs through the year 2040," according to the TWDB.

The TWDB includes a Midlander, Wesley Pittman, an independent oil-and-gas producer, who is board vice chairman.

Other gubernatorial appointees on the board are Walter Cardwell, chairman, an attorney from Austin; Charles Jenness, Houston; Thomas Dunning and William Madden, both of Dallas; and Noe Fernandez of McAllen.

Houston Army hospital unit called to active duty

Associated Press

A 1,000-bed Army Reserve hospital unit in Houston has been activated to join U.S. troops deployed to the Persian Gulf, an Army spokesman said Sunday.

Maj. Jon Fory said the call-up of doctors, nurses and staff in the 4005th Hospital unit was announced Saturday, along with activation orders for the 136th Mobile Aerial Port Squadron in Louisiana.

Fory said the hospital unit is part of the 807th Medical Brigade based in Seagoville. He said the call-up involves about 300 troops.

"It's an augmentation unit. It's not a hospital unto itself," Fory said. "It's the staffing that would support a hospital."

Phone calls to the brigade commander Saturday by The Associated Press were not answered.

The hospital unit was one on a list released Friday by Rep. Greg Laughlin, D-West Columbia. Laughlin said eight naval reserve units had been targeted for possible activation.

The Pentagon declined to confirm the contents of the list, which included another Houston-based medical unit, two Austin-based hospital units, one medical unit from Dallas, one medical unit from San Antonio, a security unit from Corpus Christi and a sealift unit from Orange.

"Those units are being considered for activation," Fory said. "Some of those units, or probably all of them by now, have been alerted. But the only ones that have actually been activated are the 4005th hospital and the transport units in Louisiana."

Authorities earlier announced the entire 3rd Armored Cavalry at Fort Bliss, with nearly 4,500 soldiers, 1,700 vehicles and 75 aircraft, will be dispatched to the Middle East. Elements of the 2nd Armored Division and the 1st Cavalry at Fort Hood also are slated to join Operation Desert Shield in Saudi Arabia.

Neither Bush nor Saddam winning image war

By Alexander G. Higgins

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush and Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein are both learning that cultivating the right image through television can be a tricky business.

Saddam's lesson came in his failed attempt to ease international fears about the safety of Western hostages in Iraq and Kuwait. Instead, he provoked outrage by releasing a videotape that showed him patting the heads of cringing British boys.

The relentlessly vacationing Bush set out to show that the Persian Gulf crisis wasn't holding him hostage in the White House. But he has faced criticism that his golf-playing and motorboating in Kennebunkport, Maine, were inappropriate when U.S. soldiers were preparing for war along the Kuwaiti-Saudi border.

"Saddam Hussein must have figured that these tapes would play wonderfully all over the world," said Philip Robbins, chairman of the journalism department at George Washington University.

"The reaction ... is almost completely contrary to that," Robbins said. If it was meant to change world opinion, "I think it's failed miserably."

"It's pretty clear that this was total theatrics that they had put together to win the sympathy of some people somewhere," said Rodger Streitmatter, an American University specialist in presidential public relations.

"But," he added, "it certainly is not going to convince very many Americans that this is a humanitarian undertaking."

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater also denounced Saddam's venture into video.

"The Iraqi film of Saddam Hussein posing with British hostages shows the cynical and inhumane view that he holds for human life," Fitzwater said. "To hold men, women and children up for viewing as targets for destruction is sick beyond expression.

"It only serves to confirm and justify the world condemnation of Iraq's aggressive ambitions."

Bush's problems stem from his determination to avoid appearing to be a hostage in the White House of the Middle East situation. President Jimmy Carter was accused that after the Iranian siege of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran in 1979 and the taking of American hostages.

Bush proceeded with vacation plans even as he ordered the deployment of U.S. forces to the gulf region and continued frequent telephone contact with other world leaders.

"Reasonably thinking people would realize that this man continues to be in touch with what's going on in the world and with communication the way it is today could react to anything that happened," said Streitmatter.

"But ... we tend to remember more what we see than what we hear, and what we see is him playing golf," he said. "Here we have these images of these troops preparing to go off to (potential) combat and leaving their families behind, juxtaposed against these images of our president playing golf."

MONDAY, AUGUST 27, 1990

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: There is new emphasis on writing, study and travel. Do not let your powerful ambition impede progress at work this fall. Your greatest gains will come from cooperative ventures! A romantic alliance will lead you in fascinating new directions. Your personal finances may get a boost from your marriage in early 1991. Do not devote so much time to business next spring that your family life suffers.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: President Lyndon Baines Johnson, actress Barbara Bach, comedian Martha Raye, Peace Prize winner Mother Teresa.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Tend to neglected tasks early. You could be your own worst enemy. Stop judging yourself so harshly! Shopping bargains abound. Examine sales merchandise carefully if returns are not allowed.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Seize a golden opportunity to expand your business operation. VIPs are eager to provide financial backing. When signing binding agreements, make certain your interests are protected.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Long-overdue news gives you cause to rejoice. Show your gratitude to someone who has done you favors in the past. Travel puts you in touch with valuable new contacts.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Updating your work methods will bring career gains. Consult experts or enroll in special classes. Jot down ideas that could prove lucrative in the not-too-distant future. Become more physically active.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The main focus is on financial matters; revise your budget. An older person shares his experience with you. Be appreciative. Postpone unnecessary travel. Give a child more of your time.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You deserve the best! Let go of negative feelings. You find bargains in the most unexpected places. A telephone call sends your spirits soaring. Romance looks rewarding.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Peer pressure could make you feel stressed out. Think about the future, not the past. Some outdoor fun proves invigorating. Invite a friend to go along. Share secrets with loved ones.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Improving distribution methods will bring speedy financial progress. A fax machine will minimize business trips. Help youngsters develop their potential. Get family's support on important decisions.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Reach out to those who have helped you in the past. Refuse to take "no" for an answer. A new approach will add spice to your social life. Romance gets a welcome assist.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Set aside funds for investment purposes. Investigate stock market tips. Someone finally asks for your advice. A blueprint for success is close at hand. Love conquers all this week.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Put your expertise to work for the good of others. A letter or telephone call could change your life. Tender words take on greater significance. Romance is more rewarding than in the past.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Pay more attention to your appearance and others will take notice. Create something wonderful to reward or honor that special person in your life. Be careful not to take anyone for granted.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AKQ103 ♡8764 ◇9 ♣KQ10
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♣	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—Partner almost surely has a six-card suit on this auction, so it won't take much to make slam. Advise partner of your interest by jumping to four clubs.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AKQJ964 ♡8 ◇A1032 ♣A
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♡	Pass	1 NT	?

What action do you take?
A.—Double! We have known everyone to pass in these auctions, and the result in one no trump doubled (or perhaps even redoubled) will be pleasant. The alternative is a cue-bid of two hearts.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AKQJ964 ♡8 ◇A1032 ♣A
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♡	Pass	1 NT	Dbl
Pass	2 ♠	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—At first it might seem that the natural bid to make would be four spades. However, you have only nine tricks in hand, and we could make a convincing case that partner might have good enough hearts to stop the opponents from running five tricks, yet have no other trick for you. So we have a sneaky admiration for anyone who bids three no trump.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KQJ92 ♡AK ◇A93 ♣A62
The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
1 ♡	Dbl	4 ♡	Pass
Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—For our tastes, there are too many losers and our suit isn't long enough to venture four spades. We would settle for the certain plus score by doubling four hearts.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠Q6 ♡KQ95 ◇AJ102 ♣J83
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♠	2 ♣

What action do you take?
A.—Had East not entered the auction, you would have been forced to bid. Any bid by you now would show some additional feature of your hand. Since you have a dead minimum opening bid and no particular fit for partner's suit, pass.

Q.6—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQ5 ♡A7 ◇AQ8763 ♣Q2
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	2 ♡*	3 ♠	4 ♡

What action do you take?
A.—You have a very good hand, but no clear-cut course. Your side could be cold for a grand slam, or a small slam might be too high. Partner's three clubs created a game force, so a pass by you now would be forcing. That's our choice, leaving the decision to partner.

Anthem center of controversy at concert

HOLMDEL, N.J. (AP) — Pop singer-songwriter Sinead O'Connor has sung her last note at the Garden State Arts Center.

Ms. O'Connor, known for the hit single "Nothing Compares 2 U" and her extremely short haircut, threatened Friday to walk out on a 9,000-member audience if the American national anthem was played at her concert. Ms. O'Connor is Irish.

Backstage staff relented out of fear that a last-minute cancellation would cause a commotion, said Dennis Ingoglia, a spokesman for the New Jersey Highway Authority, which operates the center. She gave no reason for the request, Ingoglia said in Saturday's editions of The Star-Ledger of Newark.

But George Zilocchi, the authority's acting executive director, gave his reasons for banning Ms. O'Connor from appearing at the concert hall.

"No performer who does not agree to have the national anthem played will be allowed to perform," Zilocchi said.

Efforts to reach Ms. O'Connor's spokeswoman, Elaine Schock of Pelham, N.Y., were not immediately successful Sunday.

AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) — Former Olympic women's marathon champion Joan Benoit Samuelson is supporting a campaign aimed at keeping guns locked away from kids.

"Having young children around the house, I see them getting into everything," said Samuelson. "It drives it home that guns need to be stored properly and beyond the reach of kids."

A proposed referendum would ask whether adults should be held responsible if children under 16 gain unsupervised access to firearms. Such a law would require that guns be stored in locked boxes or protected by trigger locks. Maximum penalties would be $1,000 in fines and a year in jail.

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra players tuned, then laid down their instruments before a note had been played. Stage lights blinked off during a performance of Shakespeare. Unemployed ballet dancers lighted candles in a vigil.

All around the Berkshire hills, at precisely 8:30 p.m. Saturday night, about 30 groups taking part in the traditional summer festival stopped dead for three minutes to protest reduced government funding and censorship of the arts, said "arts blackout" organizer Frank Bessel.

"The primary consideration is to recognize culture as a priority, even as an election issue. More and more people are not getting (a moral education) or they're getting it from television sitcoms," said Bessel.

Military personnel need our support

It has been several years since U.S. servicemen were engaged in a conflict, but in hopes of keeping morale up for troops now stationed in Saudi Arabia and the Persian Gulf, military recruiters and local officials for the American Red Cross are giving Midlanders tips about contacting the military personnel.

That's a wise step that hopefully will prevent a recurrence of the tragic division that ripped the nation during the Vietnam War years.

Many of the rules are the same that applied in past wars with the exception that in the current crisis the Pentagon is attempting to maintain a degree of secrecy about the troops stationed in the Mideast. Since there is little to indicate how long U.S. troops will be stationed there, no central clearing house has been established where those stateside can go seeking information about the servicemen.

During a meeting late last week, recruiters and Red Cross personnel told those in attendance that they can write to soldiers and sailors, but that letters cannot be over 12 ounces in weight or contain anything that must go through Customs.

If troops are still in Saudi Arabia at Christmas, recruiters said, the 12-ounce restriction on mailings should be lifted so that "care packages" can be mailed.

Those mailing letters also need to remember that they are sending mail to a foreign land involved in a wartime situation. Different customs and laws apply. For example, parents and friends of servicemen are cautioned against sending military personnel either books or magazines, particularly if the articles contain pornographic material. Photographs of wives or girlfriends in swimsuits are considered pornographic in Arab nations and should not be mailed. Mailed items also should not include pork since Saudi Arabia is an Arab country and pork is forbidden.

Midlanders who need information concerning servicemen from this area believed to be in the Middle East should contact the local military recruiters or the Midland office of the American Red Cross. The Red Cross has lists of military personnel in the Mideast and should be contacted in any circumstances involving a family emergency.

Two area women, Jackie Cobb of Midland and Mary Myrick of Stanton, currently are working to establish a support group for relatives of servicemen from this region who are serving in the Middle East. Persons interested in such an organization may contact Ms. Cobb by telephoning 682-8509 or Ms. Myrick at 458-3431.

While Americans are hoping that the crisis is not drawn out, the greatest and most important job facing those of us here at home is to give support to the servicemen and women in the Middle East. Write letters even if you don't know anyone in particular serving there, support those in uniform, support the nation's military actions, support the difficult decisions by President George Bush and show your patriotism here at home.

Remember, the young men and women in uniform stationed in the Mideast need your support and your concern.

Graduate center already at work

You are to be commended for your reporting of the plans and goals of the Objectives 2000 Committee. This work is an important part of the community's need to prepare for changing economic and social conditions in the years ahead.

The committee's conclusion in the first installment (Aug. 12) that a "unique, world-class (educational) institute will serve to maintain Midland's headquarters status" is right on the mark, but I was a little surprised by the stated objective to "assess the viability of an advanced level private institution..." Midland already has such an institution!

The Permian Basin Graduate Center, an independent, nonprofit corporation, has been providing professional, technical education in Midland for over 20 years. More than 30,000 students have passed through our doors! We regularly bring in world-renowned experts to teach advanced courses in petroleum geology, geophysics, and reservoir engineering.

Last year more than 1,300 students attended some 125 classes at the Graduate Center. We hosted an important symposium on computer use in the oil industry that attracted registrants from as far away as Houston, Denver, and even Tennessee. We published a symposium book, sponsored a series of small business seminars in cooperation with the Midland Chamber of Commerce, and presented tax institutes which helped accounting professionals meet certification requirements.

We offer courses that are at the forefront of energy technology. These often provide the first — and in many cases, only — opportunity for Permian Basin residents to attend state-of-the-art technical classes. We recently offered some of the first courses available anywhere in seismic sequence stratigraphy and horizontal drilling technology.

We recognize that educational opportunities are important factors in attracting new industries and families to an area. A strong educational system, with offerings in both the public and private sectors, is vital to the continuing development and diversification of our local economy. Midland's efforts toward growth and diversification can only succeed if we maintain a wide spectrum of educational services. The Permian Basin Graduate Center provides a unique and important aspect of those services.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, Aug. 27, the 239th day of 1990. There are 126 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Aug. 27, 1883, the island volcano Krakatoa blew up. Tidal waves resulting from the cataclysmic explosions in Indonesia's Sunda Strait claimed some 36,000 lives in Java and Sumatra.

On this date:

In 1859, Colonel Edwin L. Drake drilled the first successful oil well in the United States near Titusville, Penn.

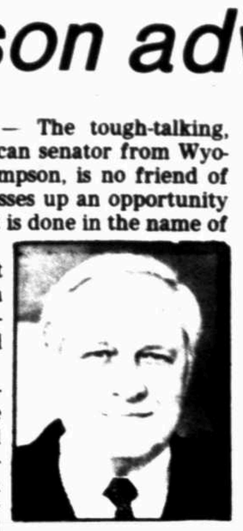
Simpson advises Saddam on media

WASHINGTON — The tough-talking, lanky Republican senator from Wyoming, Alan Simpson, is no friend of the press. He rarely passes up an opportunity to complain about what is done in the name of the First Amendment.



Anderson

The senator didn't change his tune even when granted an audience in Iraq last April with Saddam Hussein.

When it was Simpson's turn to talk, did he ask Saddam why he had threatened to annihilate half of Israel with chemical weapons or why he had murdered hundreds of his own Kurdish citizens? No. Simpson suggested that Saddam merely had a media problem.

"I believe that your problems lie with the Western media and not with the U.S. government," Simpson confided to Saddam, according to a transcript we have obtained of their meeting in Iraq on April 12 as part of a senate delegation led by Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kansas.

"As long as you are isolated from the media, the press — and it is a haughty and pampered press — they all consider themselves political geniuses. That is, the journalists do. They are very cynical."

Excuse us if we venture some cynicism about Simpson's line of reasoning. He is an old hand at blaming the press for others' ills. Simpson complained loudly in 1983 when the press criticized then-Interior Secretary James Watt for putting his foot in his mouth. Watt, in defending the make up of a commission on coal leasing said, "I have a black, a woman, two Jews and a cripple. And we have talent." According to Simpson, Watt was misunderstood too.

At the height of the Iran-Contra scandal, Simpson bellyached again about the press for not being gentle enough with President Reagan. Simpson said the press did a "sadistic little disservice" by pestering Reagan with questions during photo opportunities and other public appearances.

"You know very well that you're not asking him things so you can get answers," Simpson said. "You're asking him things because you know he's off balance and you'd like to stick it in his gazoo."

Defending fellow Republicans is one thing, but defending Saddam Hussein against the press is an all-time low for the senator. He suggested Saddam was misunderstood. "What I advise is that you invite them (the Western press) to come here and see for themselves."

If the senator was really saying that the press, early on, recognized Saddam as a loose cannon while the White House slept, then we will plead guilty.

Simpson challenges the transcript because Saddam's staff taped the meeting. Without challenging the verbatim quotes from the transcript, a spokesman for Simpson said the subtleties of what the senator was trying to say are missing. Simpson claims he was trying to get more access to Iraq for the Western press. Other U.S. officials who were at the meeting vouched for the accuracy of the transcript.

The meeting turned from the ridiculous to the bizarre when Saddam picked up on Simpson's cue and gave a speech about freedom of the press. He said he had read a story in an Iraqi newspaper about a grievance some Iraqi citizen had with the government. Saddam said the story wasn't true. "I was tempted to call the editor-in-chief of the newspaper that published this complaint and tell him that they are supposed to investigate the validity of the complaint before publishing it. But I did not call him — because if I had, he would have thought that I was interfering with the freedom of the press, while claiming to promote such freedom."

It warms the cockles of our hearts to see two poor guys who are so misunderstood by the media find soul mates in each other.

CHARLEY REESE

We're hearing lies about the Middle East

George Bush's wild adventure in the Middle East makes it appropriate for us to think about the basis of American foreign policy.

Obviously, foreign policy should be designed to pursue American interests, but the rub comes in defining what those interests are. The present foreign policy establishment, which includes both Republicans and Democrats and both so-called conservatives and liberals, defines American interests — though not publicly — as identical to the financial interests of global corporations.

Reese

We can prove that by pointing out instances where they lie when they claim American interests are something else.

For example, they sometimes claim we are against one nation invading another. That's the current excuse in the Persian Gulf, and it was also trotted out to justify support for the Sudanese dictator some years ago and for the bizarre policy of supporting the Khymer Rouge as the legitimate government of Cambodia, which we did for awhile.

We supported, however, the Morrocan invasion of the Western Sahara. We did not get too excited by the Israeli invasion of Lebanon, India's invasion of Goa, China's of Tibet, India and Vietnam, etc., not to mention our own invasions of Cambodia, Panama, Grenada, Lebanon, etc. Needless to say, we did not spring to Iran's defense when Iraq invaded Iran.

Therefore our policy cannot in fact be based on an idealistic opposition to one nation invading another.

Well, oil. That's the basis for our foreign policy. Another excuse for the current fiasco is that Saddam Hussein threatens the world's oil supply — and as Bush got carried away with his rhetoric — freedom and the American way of life.

That's a most perculiar claim. One, just prior to the Iraqi move against Kuwait, we were buying 7.3 percent of our imported oil from Iraq and only 1.4 percent from Kuwait. Furthermore, we had since 1983 provided Saddam Hussein with $5 billion in food subsidies, $2.5 billion in loan guarantees just since 1988, and $141 million in direct export subsidies.

Two, contrary to popular propaganda, the world's oil supply is not that heavily dependent on Persian Gulf oil. Remember, before Bush's adventure began, world oil prices were depressed — despite OPEC's best efforts — because there is more oil available than there are customers.

In fact, the oil problem today and the oil problem since 1945 has been — for producers — too much oil, not a shortage. In 1987, for example, total oil production was 40.7 million barrels a day and OPEC produced only 18.1 million barrels per day of that amount. OPEC, however, includes many more countries than Iraq, Kuwait and Saudi Arabia.

In fact, just five Western countries — Canada, Norway, Great Britain, the Soviet Union, and the United States — together pump more oil per day than all of the OPEC nations, Arab and non-Arab, combined.

The American people are being lied to about this Middle East business. I don't know what the motive is or what secret objectives the Bush administration is pursuing, but Iraq is no threat to the world's oil supply.

And, as we've already seen, there is no rational reason to suppose our foreign policy is based on the sanctity of borders.

The internationalists in the West have always hated nationalists, no matter what nationality they are. If Saddam Hussein is overthrown, he won't be the first nationalist to be overthrown by Western internationalists. The Iranian leader, Mossadegh, was overthrown in 1953 in a coup engineered by the U.S. and Great Britain. His sin? He thought Iranian oil ought to belong to the Iranian people rather than to the Anglo-American corsortium.

The pattern of the campaign to engineer Mossadegh's fall is remarkably similar to what you are seeing now being directed at Hussein.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Middle East excursions currently a bargain

Still got some vacation time left before summer's end and you want to go somewhere exotic and exciting?

Well, why not try the Middle East?

You don't want to risk going to San Francisco. When is the next Big One going to hit?

Grizzard

You don't want to go to New York since they outlawed your AK-47. Plus, there's the alligators in the sewers.

I know you're saying, "But isn't there a war or something going on in the Middle East?"

It's not really a war. Nobody's actually shooting at anybody yet.

Iraqi president and minister of tourism, Saddam Hussein, (pronounced "who sane") was just kidding when he made that remark about plucking out our eyes.

Insiders say President Hussein is a real jokester who is always talking about plucking out an eye or two. It's his way of saying, "Come to Iraq, mon."

In fact, the best bargains for today's travelers are in Iraq. Oil revenues are down and for a limited time, there are huge discounts being offered at Iraqi hotels.

At the Hotel Eye Plucker, American tourists may want to choose The Great Satan Plan, which includes lodging, three meals, and a chance to go on Iraqi television and chant anti-Arab slogans such as, "You pluck out our eyes and we'll gouge out your gallbladders," for only $37.50 per day.

There are also some super bargain prices on airline tickets to the Middle East now, as long as you book them with Air Terror, the preferred airline of thrill seekers from all over the world.

If Iraq isn't your cup of sand, there's Saudi Arabia, where Americans are always welcome, especially right now and especially if the Americans might be carrying a large rifle or driving a tank.

You think Daytona has a neat beach? The whole country of Saudi Arabia is a beach.

If you don't happen to have a tank, then you can still take a bus into the interior of Saudi Arabia and maybe catch one of those wondrous desert sandstorms.

The kids will enjoy the optical distortions if you are lucky and the temperature goes over 120 degrees.

But a tip for the happy traveler:

Take a few items like sunscreen and six gallons of water per day per family member.

If a war does break out while you're in Saudi Arabia, hide behind a big oil tank. Nobody's going to bomb that.

Or try visiting one of the sultanates in the region. One travel bureau has a slogan, "Oman! What a country!"

Or how about Turkey? Most Turkish prisons offer excellent bed and breakfast deals. You get your own queen-size slab, and gruel is served from 5 until 7 a.m.

All over the Persian Gulf area you are likely to run into interesting and intriguing native customs, like witnessing the beheading of a murderer or seeing a convicted thief get his hand chopped off.

"Wow!" the kids will say. "You never see any good stuff like this in Judge Wapner's court."

There's also Iran. See Ayatollah World where actresses and actors re-create the taking of the American hostages in twice-daily performances and ride the famous Waterslide of Death.

The only place I wouldn't try is Kuwait. It's just not what it used to be after the looting.

So, go for it. Break a leg! Or, as they say in Iraq, "Pluck an eye!"

Governor sees no harm in prayers at graduation

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — To Gov. Norm Bangerter, an impending legal battle over the saying of prayers at public school graduations is a local issue that scarcely affects predominantly Mormon Utah's image in the global marketplace.

Nor does he see the bitterly divisive issue tainting Salt Lake City's bid to be host of the 1998 Winter Olympics.

"I doubt anyone who's going to come to the Olympics worries whether there's prayer in graduation at high school. I doubt that it's going to cross many people's minds," Bangerter said in an interview.

But Michele Parish-Pixler, state director of the American Civil Liberties Union, is among many non-Mormons who believe the governor's attitude helps perpetuate the outsider's image of Utah as a narrow-minded theocracy.

"We spend all this money to promote tourism, then we do this stuff," she said.

Perhaps not since non-Mormon efforts to permit hard liquor to be served by the drink failed in 1968 has an issue so sharply divided Utah residents along religious lines. The battle was joined July 30 when the ACLU filed suit in federal court seeking to ban prayer from public school graduations.

Bangerter, a Mormon and a Republican, said he may ask the state Legislature for a special appropriation to help the two school districts named in the suit defend themselves in court.

"I felt local districts were being somewhat intimidated by the threat of a lawsuit in doing what they desired to do," he said.

The U.S. Supreme Court banned organized, school-sponsored prayer sessions for students in 1962. Bangerter believes a legal gray area remains for opening and closing prayers at events such as commencement.

Seventy percent of Utah's 1.7 million residents are members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and most of the graduation prayers are delivered by Mormons.

Many defend the practice, saying critics are taking potshots at a faith defenders say is virtually synonymous with a healthy and industrious lifestyle.

Others decry the church's influence on daily life in Utah, saying Mormons have no conception of the ostracism felt by everyone else.

"It's not just prayers at high school graduation," Parish-Pixler said. "The governor brings this down to kids sitting through a 30-second prayer once in 12 years. The people who go to school here deal with it at every activity.

"This is a state that's reluctant to give up its church-state status. That does not play well with people on the outside. They come, stay a couple of years, and leave.

"They say, 'My kids were so unhappy we had to leave.' Every time Utah loses somebody that way, the message goes out to corporate America that this is a hardship post."

In California, the state Supreme Court has been asked to review contrary rulings on whether the practice violates the First Amendment, Parish-Pixler said.

State Sen. Frances Farley, a non-Mormon Democrat who moved to Utah two decades ago, is saddened by the dispute.

During a recent bipartisan Senate caucus in which the subject was discussed, she said Utah "should grow up." And in what she now considers an intemperate remark, she added, "To be crass, it's not good for business."

"What I said on the floor of the Senate was more or less a plea of understanding for people who move to Utah, and love it, and make it their home, but are not accustomed to the pervasiveness of what seems like the dominant religion," she said.

The Mormon Church has remained silent on the lawsuit.

Owl plan to cut timber job losses

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Timber industry job losses will be far less than originally thought under a plan to protect the spotted owl on Forest Service land in the Pacific Northwest, Interior Secretary Manuel Lujan said Sunday.

Lujan and Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter are facing a Saturday deadline to report to President Bush with a plan to protect the owl, as required under the federal Endangered Species Act.

"Environmentalists are not going to like it, but you have to have balance," Lujan told reporters. "You can't throw 21,000 people out of work and not give it consideration ... I fully expect one side or the other to sue me over the plan."

A recommendation by Forest Service biologist Jack Ward Thomas would ban logging on 3 million acres of Northwest forests currently open to timber harvests.

The government has estimated the move would reduce federal harvests in the region by nearly 50 percent at a cost of more than 20,000 jobs by the end of the decade.

Lujan, while declining to say how the plan might be altered in terms of acreage, said job losses probably would be scaled down.

Lujan conceded the spotted owl needs plenty of old-growth forest to survive, but questioned whether it needs as much as environmentalists think.

"I found an owl last week in Oregon and it wasn't in old-growth timber," he said. "So it showed me that the owls can live outside of old-growth areas."

Lujan was taken by Bureau of Land Management officials on a tour last week of a forest 10 miles northeast of Eugene, Ore., where he got a clear look at a male spotted owl.

Later, at a Republican fund-raiser here, Lujan renewed his criticism of the Endangered Species Act, saying it has become a tool for environmentalists to block economic development and multiple use of public lands.

TV station goes off air for search

CHICAGO (AP) — A television station went off the air Saturday night when police evacuated studios to conduct their third search of the day for a possible pizza restaurant robber.

After 25 minutes of dead air, Chicago station WLS-TV resumed broadcasting at a jury-rigged studio in the Sears Tower. It issued a special newscast to let viewers know what had happened.

The station then went off the air again 15 minutes later as police using scent dogs searched the 13-story studio building.

A man thought to be armed with a pistol was seen entering the building Saturday morning not long after a nearby pizza restaurant was robbed, police said.

Two daytime searches failed to locate the man, but repeated sightings by station employees prompted the studio evacuation and third search at about 8:30 p.m., Lt. Frank Kehoe said.

"There's no guarantee that this is the guy involved in the robbery," Kehoe added.

WLS general manager Joe Ahearn later said he would not allow employees to return until police were sure it was safe.

The station came back on the air at about 1:40 a.m. Sunday reporting in a 10-minute news update that the search failed to find the man. After the update, the station went off the air again.

Train-car wreck kills 4 children

DELANO, Calif. (AP) — Four brothers ranging in age from 1 to 7 were killed Saturday when a freight train going nearly 70 mph smashed into their stalled car as their frantic mother tried to flag the engineer and stop the locomotive.

The mother, Leoninia Lendes, 32, of Delano "got out of the way right at the last moment," said police Sgt. Don Callahan.

Trapped inside the wreckage were her children, aged 1, 4, 6 and 7.

The engineer told police he saw a woman waving and began to brake one block before impact. The Southern Pacific train, traveling nearly 70 mph and pulling about 100 cars had no chance to stop in time, Callahan said.

The train carried the auto wreckage for eight blocks before stopping. The railroad crossing arm had dropped behind the 1990 Nissan Sentra, trapping it on the tracks.

"We don't know why her car stalled. She could possibly have panicked," Callahan said, adding that the children's mother was treated for emotional distress, he said.

Delano, is a small farming community about 30 miles north of Bakersfield. Trains travel through the center of town about once an hour, Callahan said.

WORLD

East Germany's end creates mixed feelings

LEIPZIG, East Germany (AP) — East Germany is about to disappear, to be swallowed up by its rich western neighbor, and the universal enthusiasm of a few months ago has waned.

Polls say the vast majority of East Germans favor unification, which is barely a month away. But appearances don't always reinforce that conclusion.

The "We are one people" banners that hung from trees, factories and homes during the prounity frenzy of early 1990 are gone.

There are no cheering crowds and no convoys of motorists blasting their horns in anticipation of full unification on Oct. 3.

Reality has set in, especially since the economic merger officially began in July. The issue foremost in the minds of East Germans is how to tackle the huge challenges facing them as their crumbling economy is absorbed by West Germany.

Some show a decided lack of eagerness for unity, especially in Leipzig, birthplace of the uprising that ended 40 years of Stalinist rule less than a year ago.

"Maybe the GDR (East Germany) could have survived as a newly democratized country," said Maria Chudoba, who tends bar at the Cappuccino cafe in Leipzig. "But now it's too late to turn back."

Heinz Weisse, 74, and his 70-year-old wife, Gertrud, loading bales of hay onto a cart outside Weimar, said they wouldn't have minded seeing East Germany continue as a democracy.

"We're happy about unity, but it was not a necessary development," said Weisse, a retired hairdresser. "There's a good side and bad side to everything."

He said he and his wife had a relatively good life even under communism and, as pensioners, had been allowed to travel outside the country.

Most East Germans seem to see unification as their only salvation, but have come to realize it will not be an overnight cure for such problems as the high unemployment brought on by the July 1 economic union.

169 feared dead in Yugoslavian coal mine blast

DOBRNJA, Yugoslavia (AP) — An explosion of methane gas or coal dust on Sunday trapped 169 coal miners underground, and an official said there was little chance any survived.

Only one man, who was working near the surface, was pulled alive from the Dobrnja-Jug pit of the Kreka mine, said Vidan Krsnanovic, technical director of the rescue operation 90 miles west of Belgrade.

If the trapped miners died, it would be the worst mining disaster in Yugoslav history.

"The rescue work is proceeding very slowly," Krsnanovic told reporters. "Corridors in the mine have caved in, there are high concentrations of toxic gases and it is very hot inside."

He said about 90 rescuers, breathing equipment strapped to their backs, were searching for survivors. But he said it was virtually impossible any of the trapped miners survived.

"There is no need to talk about such a possibility," he said.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Keenan had no choice

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Freed Irish hostage Brian Keenan didn't want to be released unless fellow prisoner John McCarthy was also set free by their Lebanese captors, one of Keenan's doctors said Sunday.

"He said 'no,' he would not go without John McCarthy," Dr. Sean Blake said a day after Keenan arrived in Dublin. "But in the end, he had no option. They just told him, 'we want you out.' "

Blake is one of the doctors tending Keenan at Mater hospital in Dublin, where he was taken for a checkup after his flight home from Syria aboard a government jet. Keenan was freed Friday and turned over to Irish officials in Syria a day later.

Keenan, a 39-year-old Belfast teacher, spent his first full day back in Ireland making phone calls from the hospital to the families of McCarthy and other hostages he left behind in Lebanon.

KGB protects perestroika

MOSCOW (AP) — A top KGB official Sunday disclosed the espionage arrests of some high-ranking Soviet officials in recent years and paid grudging tribute to the CIA as a crafty and determined adversary.

In the interview in the Communist Party newspaper Pravda, the KGB official, Victor F. Grushko, also said the duty of the once-feared secret police is to protect perestroika, Mikhail S. Gorbachev's policy of political and economic reform.

Interviews with top KGB officials were once extremely rare, but they have been appearing in print and even on television recently as part of a campaign to revamp the spy agency's image.

French fires under control

TOULON, France (AP) — Firefighters and soldiers worked Sunday to extinguish fires that raged for five days near the Mediterranean cities of Toulon and Nice. One firefighter has died and one was seriously hurt battling the blazes.

The fire near Toulon in the southern Var region, which started Tuesday, was fanned by strong mistral winds.

Old-Time Clip Joint

The Barber Shop is more than just a place to get your hair cut, face shaved, moustache trimmed, shoes shined and fingernails manicured.

It's down-home, smack dab in downtown Midland.

It's a cheerful, comfortable place — sort of like the old country store where serious things, if discussed at all, aren't taken all that seriously, at least not for long.

This isn't Geneva, the United Nations, or the old First National Bank Board Room.

The emcee for the barber shop lot is Johnny Ornelas, a talker given to entertaining chatter. He's the "Latin Lover Kid," or so he says. He's a humorist on stage for 15-minute clips. He sold barber's supplies out of San Angelo until Warren Cate, the reticent sort who runs the shop, hired him.

Billy Joe Alexander is a compulsive book reader who doesn't say much. He shines shoes, sweeps up the barbers' cuttings, minds his own business, and reads, reads, reads. He is fond of Westerns.

Otherwise, there's no tomfoolery about Alexander. He was a prize-fighter in the Navy, touted Ornelas. Alexander, who rarely pays attention to the barber, reads on until another shine customer climbs aboard his stand.

HAIR: Shop offers feel of another time

(From 1B)

Michelle Moore, the manicurist, gets to hold hands with the customers. It's more like holding the fingers down while she grooms the gents' nails.

Raymond Terry, who has been around "longer than Adam and Eve," said Ornelas, is a clever, gentle guy, decently wry. He's grandfatherly. Terry has been barbering in Midland since high-priced haircuts were a dollar — back in the 1940s.

This old-fashioned shop with the red-and-white barber's pole is the Tower Barber Shop. It's next door to The Spot, the old-fashioned cafe where the waitresses call the customers "sweetheart," "darling" and "honey" to their everyday delight. It's across the street from the ghost of The First National Bank — Midland's Titanic of 1983.

There's always something going on except, unlike the old days, on Saturdays; there are no Saturday haircuts here. The shop, like downtown, is closed then.

"Mondays and Friday are pretty good," said Ornelas. "The rest of the days, we sit around and look at each other. We discuss the fundamentals of football and baseball and how we are going to make money."

They tell a few jokes and hash politics.

Ornelas recalled the boom days, which fell apart back in the 1980s, when oil and money gushed, and money bought most everything but certainty.

One day back then, this rich guy parked his Rolls-Royce sedan between the bank and the Barber Shop and sauntered into the shop.

The town was bustling then, and oilmen and bankers were counting on $100-a-barrel oil.

The barber told this rich dude that he's going to get high-dollar parking tickets — about 30 bucks' worth. The fellow wasn't fazed.

"That's all right,'" Ornelas recalled the high-dollar guy saying. "'I pay for convenience.'"

The Barber Shop's old unwritten rule is not to talk about religion and politics.

"But everybody wants to know what's going on, who's going to win," said Warren Cate, the chief barber.

"They ask me: 'Johnny, is it going to rain?'" said Ornelas. "I say, 'Yeah, sooner or later.'"

Aside from the weather, politics, sports and news (or gossip) of the day, they occasionally reflect on the years before the 1983 fall of the bank — The First National — and cite the town's characters, including the revered old rancher, Frank Cowden.

"He was a fine old man," says Terry. The old-time rancher, the barber surmised, lived in a million-dollar house but spent a misery $98 on a lawn mower at the old Gibson's Discount Center and mowed the yard himself.

"That was a real down-to-earth old man," said Terry.

"He was a character," reflected Gene Carnes high on the shoeshine stand.

Back at the row of barber chairs, Ornelas was talking about his days in New Orleans, where he played Dixieland jazz, picked up his "Latin Lover Kid" nickname, and got to savor some of his favorite foods — shrimp, oysters, jambalaya and crawfish.

"I started to eat one of them buggers," Terry quipped, "and he backed out on me."

Ornelas and a regular customer, Midland minister Fred Lybrand, got into a little word game.

The barber mentioned how the Barber Shop is "like a family — friendly" and all that.

That might be so, suggested the minister, but don't forget what seems to come with modern family life: feuding and fighting.

"And tell them how to straighten their lives out," Lybrand suggests.

The dialogue goes on.

"Johnny," Lybrand bantered, "you start telling lies on me, and I'm going to start telling the truth on you."

The minister, whose humor sometimes stimulates and startles some members of his congregation, preaches to a congregation that's "sort half Baptist and half Presbyterian."

"I'm in one of the businesses," figured the 31-year-old preacher, "where growing old is something to look forward to" as long as you don't fall from the pulpit.

Lybrand, from Alabama, set aside his rural idiom in speech class. He taught speech at the University of Alabama and studied law. And that subject got him onto lawyers: "For every person you help, there's always one that tends to get hurt."

The minister, who seems comfortable in the shop, could relate to the barbers. His grandfather was one.

"He quit when the '60s hit," Lybrand said. "He couldn't stand cutting long hair on men; he just couldn't do that."

Among the shop's customers is 35-year-old Jesus Rodriquez who, on his last visit to the shop, brought his two sons.

"I heard a lot about it," he said of the shop. "They open up pretty early in the morning and cut hair the old-fashioned way."

Danny Joe Howard drops by the shop for haircuts because, he said, the barbers "are my buddies."

"It's the friendliest barber shop in town," Howard said. "They are times when you need to wear your hip boots, because it gets pretty deep."

Sherri Cummings brings her sons, Brian, 11, and Steven, 9, to the shop. Raymond Terry is their family barber. Terry has been cutting her husband Mike's hair since he was toddler some 40 years ago.

"Where Raymond is, is where we go," Mrs. Cummings said. "They all do a good job here. Everybody looks pretty handsome when they leave."

New pageant chief has different style

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The quiet manner of the man picked to head the Miss Texas Scholarship pageant is in sharp contrast to the flamboyant style of predecessor B. Don Magness, who resigned last week under fire.

Barry Hall does not wear flashy clothes or pinky rings. And he says he never will be photographed for Life magazine lounging in a jade green jacuzzi filled with mountains of Mr. Bubble and smoking a fat cigar, as Magness was.

"B. Don can get away with that, but I couldn't," Hall said with a laugh. "He's a showman who trusts everyone, but that is just not my style."

Hall, the former pageant president, was picked last week to replace Magness as chief executive officer of the Miss Texas Scholarship Pageant.

Magness stepped down from the top pageant post under growing scrutiny. A Life magazine article started a media blitz when it depicted him as a "lewd and crude" good ol' boy who asked some contestants to model swimsuits unchaperoned at his home and called other contestants "sluts."

It also triggered other reports suggesting that Magness attempted to influence some local pageants.

Magness stepped down at a pageant board meeting last week, saying he believed that the firestorm surrounding him would hurt Miss Texas Suzanne Lawrence's chances Sept. 8 at the Miss America Pageant in Atlantic City, N.J.

"He has been a good leader of the pageant and we accepted his decision with regret," Hall told the Fort Worth Star Telegram.

He said he and Magness are close friends with very different personal styles.

Those differences will be reflected in how Hall runs the pageant.

"I've always said B. Don and I worked well in the pageant together for 29 years because he's the more outgoing fellow who enjoys being out front while I enjoy staying back in the office taking care of business," Hall said.

Magness said Friday he was happy with Hall's selection.

"For over 20 years, Barry has been my best friend," Magness said. "I couldn't feel better about turning this pageant over to him."

New pageant president Bob Horan also said Hall was a good choice.

'Peggy Sue' returns to judge Buddy Holly lookalike contest

SLATON, Texas (AP) — The Peggy Sue that singer Buddy Holly made famous in his 1958 hit of the same name returned to West Texas this weekend to judge a Buddy Holly lookalike contest.

But Peggy Sue Rackham of Sacramento, Calif., couldn't make up her mind. So she chose co-winners, Sherrell Wilson and Richard Edwards, both of Slaton, about 15 miles southeast Ms. Rackham's hometown of Lubbock.

The return to Texas brought back memories of Holly & the Crickets, she said.

She recalled the night in Sacramento when she attended a rock 'n' roll concert to hear the upstart band.

Although the Lubbock quartet led by a charming 21-year-old lead singer and guitarist was beginning to awaken the national audience to a new sound, they were no strangers to Ms. Rackham.

She and the band's drummer, Jerry Allison, would soon marry. But that particular night the band had a surprise for her — a song called "Peggy Sue."

"It was real exciting for me," Ms. Rackham said after judging Saturday's Buddy lookalike contest during Slaton's annual August Festival.

"His (Allison's) mom called my mom. Jerry asked my mom if I could come to that performance," she recounted.

The song initially was titled "Cindy Lou," when Holly and the Crickets walked into Norman Petty's studio at Clovis, N.M., in 1957 for a recording session. Cindy Lou was Buddy's niece, Ms. Rackham said.

During the arduous recording session, however, the name soon changed to Peggy Sue.

Ms. Rackham and Allison were married in July 1958. A few weeks later, Holly wedded Maria Elena of New York.

Holly and the Crickets performed on the Ed Sullivan Show and Dick Clark's American Bandstand. Ms. Rackham said she fondly recalls Times Square and the band's live rock 'n' roll performances that duplicated their recorded sound. It differed from today's world of rock 'n' roll with its hyperbole and showcase productions, she said.

"We weren't that sophisticated yet. They just walked on stage and played. And the girls screamed ..."

Holly was killed when a light-chartered airplane he traveled in with The Big Bopper, J.P. Richardson, and Ritchie Valens crashed near Mason City, Iowa, on Feb. 3, 1959.

What Cityline provides

With Cityline, the Midland Reporter-Telegram's free telephone-based news, information and entertainment service, callers have access to dozens of categories of prerecorded data — everything from horoscopes and soap opera updates to local news and sports headlines and stock quotes — 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

Once on line with the free system at 560-2400, touch-tone telephone callers will be presented step-by-step menus of informational choices. On-line assistance is available by pressing 6955.

Other four-digit codes access other specific categories. For example, in order to find out who's had the biggest impact on the world this week, call 560-2400. After Cityline's welcoming message, enter 6725 to hear about the person of the week.

How Cityline works

After touch-tone telephone callers have dialed 560-2400, selected an information category and pressed the corresponding four-digit code — or made menu selections — the telephone keypad takes on a new function once "inside" the data category:

- To jump forward in a category, press J (the 5 key).
- To repeat the category press R (the 7 key).
- To go to a new category choice press G (the 4 key).
- To back up to the previous information item, press B (the 2 key).

Staff Report

A Midland man involved in a motorcycle accident was in satisfactory condition Sunday night. Stacy Stibling, 23, was admitted to the hospital late Friday night following an 11:40 p.m. accident with a 1980 Oldsmobile. The driver of the car was Jerry Smith of Andrews. He was not injured.

Stibling was driving a 1988 Harley Davidson westbound on State Highway 191. Smith, who was southbound on State Highway 158, stopped at the intersection of SH 191 and SH 158 and failed to yield, according to Department of Public Safety reports.

The motorcycle struck the left front quarter of the car. Stibling was wearing a safety helmet. He suffered several broken bones, according to hospital reports.

Chemical explosion, fire investigated in Corsicana

CORSICANA, Texas (AP) — Noxious fumes from a chemical warehouse fire hampered the fire investigation Sunday, the Navarro County fire marshal said.

The fumes forced the evacuation of 12 city blocks Saturday night and sent 13 people to the hospital for eye and breathing problems, said fire marshal James Palos. None were hospitalized, he said.

"The smoke cloud you could see all over Corsicana and Navarro County," Palos said.

Less than 100 people were evacuated from the downtown commercial area, he said, and were permitted to return to the area by 2 a.m.

Palos said the blaze began about 8 p.m. at the Chem Lab chemical company in a large warehouse containing chlorine and other pool supplies. The cause of the fire is under investigation, he said.

A haze resulting from the combination of chlorine and water hung over the fire scene Sunday, making it difficult for investigators to probe the charred remains, Palos said. "It's real irritating," he said, adding the investigation would swing into full force Monday.

The warehouse's steel beams were buckled by the intense heat generated from an explosion that ripped through the 20,000-square-foot building, Palos said.

Palos said about 25 firefighters from Corsicana and neighboring towns had the fire under control by 10 p.m.

Workers used bulldozers to prevent water contaminated by the chlorine from running into a nearby creek, Palos said.

Investigators from the Environmental Protection Agency conducted tests to determine whether the fire had caused any environmental damage, Palos said. Those results were not available Sunday.

Project expected to expand knowledge of Rio Grande Rift

DALLAS (AP) — A 9-year-old international research effort is expected to deepen understanding of the Rio Grande Rift, a cleft in the earth's crust created by the gradual splitting of two continents that began some 30 million years ago.

The rift led to the formation of the Franklin Mountains, which flank El Paso to the north, and the Carlsbad Caverns, 170 miles farther north in New Mexico. It also set the course of the Rio Grande River.

The rift continues to shift geological formations in an area from north of Denver to an uncertain point at least 60 miles south of Chihuahua City, Mexico. At its narrowest, around Albuquerque, N.M., the rift is about 30 miles wide; it is widest near El Paso, where it measures about 100 miles across.

Scientists from Texas and around the world are trying to learn more about what to expect from the rift by studying the Kenya Rift, a fissure of about the same size that resulted in volcanos, lakes and valleys.

The head of the University of Texas at El Paso's geological sciences department, Randy Keller, wrote the proposal for the 9-year-old Kenya Rift International Seismic Project. Work on the research effort is scheduled to be completed next year.

The cost of the project will be around $2 million, half of which was provided by the National Science Foundation and the other half by the European Economic Community and the foundation's West German equivalent.

Scientists from Kenya, the United States, France, West Germany, Ireland, Italy, Denmark and Great Britain have participated.

Leonard Johnson, program director for the National Science Foundation's continental dynamics program, says the study's results may help explain the occurrence of earthquakes in the center of continents.

"That might help us predict, or at least show where they might be," Johnson told The Dallas Morning News. "That might save a lot of lives and property."

The results also might indicate areas where mineral deposits can be found.

"It's a rather unique experiment because it's one of the very few spots in the world where a continent is rifting apart that is easily accessible," Johnson said.

"In some ways it's pure research," Keller said of the study.

"We know it (the Rio Grande Rift) is still active because we have earthquakes and we have had volcanoes erupt in the last 1,000 years," Keller said.

Williams troubles sealed in secrecy

HOUSTON (AP) — Republican gubernatorial nominee Clayton Williams has kept many of his business practices and legal troubles secret by reaching out-of-court settlements, bullying opponents and ordering records sealed, according to a published report.

The Houston Chronicle reported Sunday that Williams, a West Texas multimillionaire entrepreneur, has abused lax state court rules to seal business moves and lawsuit manipulations.

The massive amount of litigation involving Williams and his companies has become a central focus of an advertising campaign by his Democratic opponent Ann Richards. Television commercials for her campaign depict Williams as a shady businessman and attacks several of his business practices, including his refusal to make public his income tax returns and the use of junk bonds in the buyout of one of his companies.

Williams was on vacation and not interviewed for the article.

His press secretary, Gordon Hensley, told The Associated Press the practice of sealing legal settlements is routine for businessmen.

"Court records of business suits are sealed so that greedy trial lawyers — who incidentally are among Richards' largest campaign contributors — don't file lawsuits at a later date, attempting to use old allegations to essentially extort a similar settlement payment at a later date," Hensley said Sunday.

But Tom Smith, director of Public Citizen, a public interest watchdog group, said voters should be concerned about the practice.

"It should cause Texans a great deal of concern that Williams has an established pattern of sealing court files every time he has an opportunity just to prevent people from taking a look at the inner-workings of his business," Smith said.

The Chronicle reported that a three-month examination of Williams' legal maneuvers revealed virtually every one of the lawsuits filed against him or his companies, ranging from small injury claims to multimillion-dollar allegations of fraud and price-fixing, were settled out of court and the settlement kept secret at Williams' insistence.

Smith said new court rules that take effect Sept. 1 will make it more difficult to seal records and files in state court. Created by the state Supreme Court earlier this year, the new rules will allow consumer groups and media expanded rights to contest the sealing of files.

But in the past, if both sides in a lawsuit wanted a file sealed, it nearly always was permitted.

ClayDesta Communications, a telecommunications firm which made its chairman Williams a household name through his cowboy-clad commercials, was challenged by a federal lawsuit three years ago.

Edward J. Moriarity, ClayDesta's former director of operations and engineering, filed the lawsuit claiming the company was formed on the basis of an idea stolen from him. Moriarity said he drew up a business plan in 1984 using new digital microwave technology and later agreed to a partnership with Williams that would pay Moriarity 30 percent of the stock in the new company.

But Moriarity said he was fired two years ago without compensation. He asked a federal judge to award him $7 million in the firm.

Williams denied the allegations and referred to Moriarity and his former employee's attorney as "slickers and crooks." Then he settled out of court last year and had the records sealed, the newspaper reported.

Williams also faced numerous lawsuits involving Clajon Gas, which operated a gas pipeline primarily in Southeast Texas. Several suits alleged Williams and Clajon Gas ran roughshod over landowners' rights during a competitive rush to secure new natural gas supplies in the early 1980s.

Under Texas law, when any pipeline company fails to come to terms with a landowner for a pipeline easement, the company has the power to condemn the property through eminent domain — powers usually reserved for government bodies.

Between 1980 and 1986, Clajon filed scores of condemnation lawsuits against landowners, the Chronicle reported. Williams has sold Clajon but several pending lawsuits still could affect his financial future because he indemnified the new owner against losses from existing contracts.

Red Tide warning stops shellfishing

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Health officials have closed two Texas Coast bays to shellfishing because of an outbreak of micro-organisms called "red tide" in the Rockport area.

The micro-organisms, which four years ago killed millions of fish, prompted the precautionary closure of Copano Bay and parts of Aransas Bay.

The red tide outbreak was identified Thursday afternoon by state health department officials.

Officials said the red tide usually occurs in the warmer months between April and November.

Soviet economy is hustler's heaven

By R.H. Growald
Copley News Service

MOSCOW — President Mikhail Gorbachev has proclaimed freedom of travel for Soviet citizens. Just let them try it.

Gorbachev's perestroika economic reforms aim at ending a Russian's 10-year wait for a new car. Now he can get one, on the black market, for 20 years' salary.

Life in today's Soviet Union is not a worker's paradise. It may be a hustler's heaven.

A failure to deliver consumer goods is the prime reason Gorbachev, a public relations darling in the West, is at home something of an Edsel, a failing savings and loan institution, a Pat Sajak show.

"Gorbachev saves himself by a balancing act," says Voldemars Hermanis, a Latvian newspaper editor. "To the left he has (Russian Republic President Boris) Yeltsin, the radical hero of shoppers.

"To the right he has the hardline conservative communist leadership he has stripped of access to real power. Gorbachev is the man in the middle, a rusting hope perhaps.

"But who's an alternative to Gorby?" Hermanis says.

Life in Gorbachev's middle road has potholes. Like foreign travel.

In any Soviet city there is a line of men and women as constant as the statue of Lenin on the downtown square. The line, seven days a week, winds out of the Aeroflot Soviet Airline office, down the block and around the corner.

IT IS THE second step in a years-long effort by most would-be Soviet citizens wanting to exercise their new right to travel abroad.

Under Gorbachev's predecessor Leonid Brezhnev, about 15,000 Soviets traveled to the West every year. Mostly on government or Communist Party business. Now the figure has multiplied.

But here is the route to a ticket:

A Soviet must ask his government for an exit visa. Clearance can take years.

Next, join the Aeroflot ticket office line. To reach the head of the line, produce your visa and pay an average ticket price of 1,200 rubles — about five months' salary. It may take three or four hours. Then wait a year or two for the ticket to come.

Shortcut: Buy a black-market Aeroflot ticket. The going price in Moscow these days is about 9,000 rubles. That is three years' salary.

Travel money? The Kremlin allows a Soviet citizen to leave the country with a few rubles. Problem: Soviet rubles are worthless outside the country.

Solutions: Be invited to America or Canada or Western Europe by some relative or friend who will pay living expenses. Or, go to the hustlers.

The ladies and gentlemen of the Soviet black market will sell you hard Western currency that you smuggle through Soviet airport customs. No Soviet bank is allowed to sell Soviet citizens dollars, D-marks or other Western currency.

THE DEMAND for dollars has created a trade in Soviet military gear.

Soviet soldiers, airmen and sailors swap their belt buckles, watches, caps, hats, insignia and even full uniforms for cash. A black marketeer will offer a Western tourist a Red army watch for $25. Belt buckles are two for $5. A Red army officers' candidate school badge is $2.

The hustlers sell these goods out of the back of their cars. Or they will meet a tourist in the shadows of buildings off Red Square for delivery later.

But much hustling is no more secret than the maneuverings of used car dealers in the United States. Every Soviet city has an unofficial used car lot.

In Riga, Latvia, two Poles somehow have moved two ancient Volga cars next to an outdoor market where farmers were selling privately grown peaches, strawberries and cabbage. It is debatable whether they drove the cars.

The Volgas were rusty, ruptured, scratchy. They resembled hulks in a U.S. junkyard. Price? The Poles — Poles are the great private marketeers of Eastern Europe — were asking 14,000 rubles.

THEY HAD a crowd of tire-kickers and engine examiners.

"Junk," Boris Viktorov says.

"It's Gorby economics. Two years ago one could buy on the black market a 2-year-old Lada for 15,000 rubles."

A Lada is a Soviet-built, Italian Fiat- designed mini-car.

"Last year it cost 25,000 rubles. Now it's 35,000 to 50,000 rubles," Viktorov says.

Viktorov, 21, is a yuppie of today's Gorbachev economy.

Grandfather was a Red army colonel. Father is a navy officer. Viktorov quit school at 12.

He points a Marlboro cigarette — a black market luxury at 10 rubles a pack — at the Intourist Hotel at the foot of Gorki Street, near Red Square. "That was my university.

"At 12 I'd started buying dollars and (West German) D-marks from Western tourists. I prospered. My schoolmates at 12 now are finishing their university and going into jobs paying maybe as much as 180 rubles a month. They ride buses and the Metro (subway).

"Me? I've got this," he says.

He sits in his brown, 2-year-old Lada. "Look at this." He fingers a 3-by-5 inch photo of a lithe blonde, framed on the dashboard.

"My No. 1 girlfriend. She's a model. My other girlfriend's a brunette. Cozy. Marry one? Why? I just got a divorce," Viktorov says.

HIS GIRLFRIENDS and other Soviet women are offered made-in-U.S.S.R. clothes in their department stores.

"Awful," says Olga Yetzvina, a geography teacher. "The clothes are poorly designed. They might have been the height of fashion in Paris, in 1922.

"Like other women, I save for black-market clothes. Dresses bought from tourists. From Italy and France. A Soviet dress costs 5 rubles. But one from Paris may cost 150 rubles. Viva la difference," she says.

Raisa Gorbachev does not accompany husband Mikhail on Western trips in Soviet ready-to-wear. It is one reason she is a target for Soviet humor.

A bigger seller on Arbat Street, which is to Moscow what Rodeo Drive is to Beverly Hills, are matryoshka dolls, the wooden dolls that fit into one another.

The traditional matryoshka is a set of dolls painted in Russian peasant's costume. The best seller on Arbat Street has the outside doll painted as Gorbachev. Inside that is a Leonid Brezhnev doll, then Nikita Khrushchev, Josef Stalin and Soviet founder V.I. Lenin.

And there's a Raisa variation. That set has only two dolls. Outside is Gorbachev. Inside is the Raisa doll. She is wearing a crown.

The Gorbachevs do not smoke. Unlike Eastern and Western Europeans, the Gorbachevs follow the American anti-smoking trend. No smoking on Aeroflot planes. No smoking in shops and offices. No-smoking signs dot Red Square.

It's easy now for Soviets to be non-smokers. There's a cigarette shortage. Lines as long as those outside Aeroflot offices form instantly when, rarely, a Tabak kiosk has cigarettes for sale.

Red army soldiers don't bother with the cigarette lines. They have cigarette rations. They have other matters to worry about.

Discipline is more than saluting Comrade Captain. Red army sergeants are allowed to punch, strap and kick recruits. Few soldiers enlist. Most are draftees.

GIVEN THE rise of nationalism throughout the Soviet Union, the Kremlin does not post a draftee to his home republic or region. A soldier usually is stationed at least a thousand miles from home. That way he might not sympathize with street demonstrators.

One recent demonstration in Red Square demanded better treatment for soldiers. One Afghanistan war veteran took off his shirt and showed scars on his back.

"Not from the Afghans," he said. "My sergeants did this to me in boot camp."

The freer speech Gorbachev is encouraging has brought griping out of the Soviet closet. It is part of Gorbachev's campaign to enliven the nation, to increase productivity, to substitute at least temporarily for material gains as he tries to pull the nation's economy out of the Third World.

It is hard to change the habits of 70 years of communism.

One day, in a building off Red Square, a Soviet-made air conditioner was thumping away steadily against the capital's summer Mississippi Deltalike heat and humidity.

An hour later a workman came. He moved the Soviet machine. He replaced it with a Sanyo air conditioner.

Why the change?

"I suppose the Soviet air conditioner worked well. But we Russians always believe a foreign product works better," the building manager said. "It's a tradition."

Another tradition Gorbachev is trying to banish is the sort of salesmanship that would give ulcers to Western businessmen.

A foreigner telephoned America from Moscow.

Soviet phone clerk: "That will be $29.11."

The foreigner hands her $30.

No change is forthcoming.

"Oh, the 89 cents?" says the Soviet clerk. "We round it off."

DEAR ABBY

Inferiority is reason his ladies are tramps

EDITOR'S NOTE: Abby is on a two-week vacation. Following is a selection of some of her favorite past letters.
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: A woman wrote to you a few years back asking why a married man would pick up some tramp and treat her like a lady, then turn around and treat his wife (who was really a lady) like a tramp. Please try to locate it because your answer was one of the best things I've ever read, and I desperately need it now. — SAME BOAT IN ALLENTOWN

Van Buren

DEAR SAME: A sharp-eyed secretary with a mind like a steel trap found it, and here it is:

DEAR ABBY: Why will a married man pick up some tramp and treat her like a lady, then turn around and treat his wife (who is a lady) like a tramp? — MINNIE

DEAR MINNIE: A man picks up a tramp because he wants a female companion who is no better than he is. In her company he doesn't feel inferior. He rewards her by treating her like a lady.

He treats his wife (who is a lady) like a tramp because he feels that by degrading her he will bring her down to his level. This makes him feel guilty, so to get even with his wife for making him feel guilty, he keeps right on punishing her.

DEAR ABBY: My husband owns his own business and travels over a large territory, which means he must be away from home over the weekend quite often. He keeps asking me to meet him out of town for the weekend, as he gets lonesome for me.

Abby, we have three children, 8, 11 and 13, and although I can always get someone to take care of the children, I have mixed emotions about running off and leaving them just to keep my husband company. What would you do? — TRAVELER'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: I would join my husband as often as common sense and practicality allowed. I would rather have someone taking care of my CHILDREN than my HUSBAND.

DEAR ABBY: How would you define old age? — GETTING THERE

DEAR GETTING: To recycle an old cliche, old age, like beauty, lies in the mind of the beholder.

But I would say that you've reached it when:

You need your glasses to find your glasses.

You walk into another room and wonder what you went there for.

You pass up a romantic encounter because you're worried about your heart.

Don't put off writing thank-you notes, letters of sympathy, etc., because you don't know what to say. Get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. Trauma normal for child's first school day

Associated Press

NEW YORK — If your kid puts up a fuss on his first day of nursery school, be happy.

"During a child's first separation, if the child doesn't go through a little trauma, it indicates there is a lack of emotional bonding with the family, and a greater problem exists," says Dr. Laurene Smith.

But also be advised that how the parent reacts, so may the child react.

"If the parent displays anxiety about the separation," she says, "the child will display anxiety as well. Being positive, communicative and, above all, enthusiastic about your child's first venture from home will go far in helping him suffer as little trauma as possible."

Smith, vice president of Educational Research and Development at Kinder-Care Learning Centers, Inc., a nationwide child-care company, offers these tips to ease a child's anxiety:

■ Don't try to slip away. Children are smarter than we give them credit for, and trying to sneak out will only heighten their fear of abandonment.

■ Prepare your child beforehand. Read him paperbacks such as "Will I Have a Friend?" by Miriam Cohen (MacMillan, 1967) or "What Mary Jo Shared" by Janice M. Udry (Scholastic, 1966) which explore the fun of social activities. Tell him what to expect. Discuss the daily routine and reinforce the fact that she will be experiencing familiar situations, such as regular lunch and nap times. Children, like adults, feel more comfortable when they know what's ahead.

■ It is OK to leave something personal with the child, such as a scarf or a change purse. This helps the child feel more secure because instinctively she knows you will return for it — and her.

Dr. Patricia Wheeler, a clinical psychologist and family therapist, says children display their anxiety in different ways. "Some children wail, some scream, some cry, and some cling to the parent or caregiver," she says. "Others internalize their fears of abandonment and silently pout or withdraw.

"Each child's reaction is individual, the same way the length of each child's separation anxiety is individual. One child may cry every day for the first 10 minutes of separation, while another may only cry the first two or three times."

Zendejas cut

IRVING (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys cut six players Sunday, including veteran kicker Luis Zendejas and running back Junior Tautalatasi.

Zendejas' departure leaves rookie free agent Ken Willis of Kentucky as the Cowboys' starting kicker.

The Cowboys also waived Plan B signees Terrence Cooks, a veteran linebacker, and defensive end Walter Johnson. Rookie guard Tom Huebner of Pittsburgh and rookie linebacker Dave Harper from Humboldt State also were released.

Also Sunday, the team placed tight end Steve Johnson, running back Keith Jones and safety Scott Ankrom on injured reserve.

Duerson gone too

LAKE FOREST, Ill. (AP) — The Chicago Bears Sunday cut four-time Pro Bowl safety Dave Duerson, along with 13 other players.

The Bears, who have a surplus of defensive backs, had demoted Duerson to second string during the preseason. There had been rumors the eight-year veteran would be traded.

The cuts included three veterans, two draft choices and nine free agents, bringing the Bears' roster to 58 players.

Burns steamed despite Vike win

■ While Minnesota's coach is unhappy with a 22-21 win, the Houston Oilers say they are on the right track.

Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — In the regular season, winning is all that matters. But considering that it's the preseason, Jerry Burns' comments seemed like the ultimate criticism.

"I say the best thing that happened today is that we won the game," the Minnesota coach said Sunday after his Minnesota Vikings rallied for a 22-21 victory over the Houston Oilers on Jim Gallery's 24-yard field goal with 1 second left.

"We're happy with the win," Burns said, "but I don't think you can fool yourself into thinking that we played well."

The Oilers, meanwhile, feel pretty good about themselves despite an 0-3 preseason start. Their starters and top reserves built a 21-12 lead against their Minnesota counterparts.

"Being 0-3 in the preseason is nothing. When we play Atlanta (in the season opener), we're 0-0," Oilers cornerback Chris Dishman said. "We're just starting to tee it up. You can see that good things are going to happen to the Oilers."

Added first-year coach Jack Pardee: "The whole hasn't been there yet, but I can see where the parts will be. I think we'll be a good team."

Gallery, who beat out Jim Breech to gain the kicking job in Cincinnati last year only to be cut a month into the season after a 2-for-6 start, is doing most of Minnesota's kicking because of Rich Karlis' holdout.

He made a 49-yard first-quarter field goal, but his 24-yard miss with 5:14 to play and the Vikings trailing 21-12 seemingly ruined any chance of a Minnesota comeback.

But the Vikings (2-1) rallied behind a strong defense and the quarterbacking of third-stringer Sean Salisbury.

"It felt great to have another chance," Gallery said. "That's what a kicker hopes for."

Most disturbing for Burns was the generally poor quarterbacking of Rich Gannon, making his first career start, and Wade Wilson.

"As it is right now, Wade is No. 1, Gannon No. 2," Burns said. "But I'm not happy with the way we're playing, some of the decisions we're making, some of the balls we're throwing."

The Vikings' comeback began with 4:09 left, when Pat Eilers intercepted Don McPherson's pass and Salisbury capped a 36-yard drive with a 14-yard touchdown pass to Cedric Smith that made it 21-19 with 2:31 to go.

Win feels good to Cowboys

Associated Press

IRVING — Jimmy Johnson is trying to downplay the exhibition season but admitted it feels good to finally win one again.

Not since last Nov. 5 had the Cowboys earned an NFL victory, a 13-3 triumph over Washington, the lone bright light in a 1-15 rookie season for coach Johnson.

On Saturday night, the Cowboys dominated the Pittsburgh Steelers 20-9, allowing them just six first downs and getting touchdown passes from Troy Aikman and Steve Walsh.

It was just a preseason game. But for downtrodden Dallas it felt wonderful.

"We said we're going to downplay winning games in the preseason but I was getting a little nervous after the first two losses," Johnson said. "It was great for the guys. It was good to get a win."

Johnson loves hardnosed football and he said the Cowboys, 1-2, displayed some against Pittsburgh, 1-2.

New era hits at U.S. Open

■ Odessa's Sandy Collins works her way into the main draw with a qualifying round win Sunday.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — The U.S. Open tennis championships, besieged by New Age players wielding power rackets and power games, begins Monday without two crowd favorites — Jimmy Connors and Chris Evert — for the first time in two decades.

Connors, a five-time champion yielding reluctantly to age and injury, officially withdrew Sunday because of a strained left calf suffered Saturday in a match against Ivan Lendl. Connors, a week shy of his 38th birthday, hadn't missed a U.S. Open since 1970.

Evert, winner of six U.S. Opens, made an emotional departure from regular singles competition here last year.

Also, Odessa's Sandy Collins advanced in the qualifying round Sunday with a 6-7 (7-5), 6-3, 6-4 win over Australia's Kristin Godridge to qualify for the main draw, which begins today.

If the Open will miss Connors' and Evert's fierce competitiveness and unique styles, it will not lack for drama, as top seeds Stefan Edberg and Steffi Graf try to hold off scrambles for their No. 1 rankings.

"I don't have any fear of it this year," said Edberg, a semifinalist in 1986 and 1987 but only a fourth-rounder the past two years. "It's full of terrible circumstances like bad weather, noisy fans, the planes, traffic. There is a lot to be frustrated about, and generally that makes it an open Open. You have to be strong to win it."

Edberg figures if he can't win it, the title might go to defending champion Becker, three-time winner Ivan Lendl or two-time semifinalist Andre Agassi.

Agassi, runner-up at the French Open, skipped Wimbledon to devote himself to practice and iron-pumping exercises for an assault on the U.S. Open, the tournament he considers the most important in the world.

Agassi, 20, is one of the New Agers building his game on power. But unless he fulfills his promise soon, he may be passed by the game's hardest young server, Goran Ivanisevic.

ANAHEIM, Calif. — If not for an ugly first half, the inaugural Pigskin Classic might have been just that — a classic.

Mike Pritchard helped give No. 5 Colorado a two-touchdown lead with runs of 78 and 55 yards, but Andy Kelly's sensational passing brought No. 8 Tennessee back for a 31-31 tie Sunday.

"No one felt we were out of it," Kelly said. "We take pride in sticking to our game plan and not quitting. We have a lot of mature guys on our team. This is going to give us confidence.

"We were in a few games like this last year and were able to come back and win. We're an experienced team."

The season-opening game between two teams who finished 11-1 last season was a standoff of contrasting styles.

Pritchard, a converted wide receiver who led the team with 12 catches last year, gained 217 yards on 20 carries.

The Buffaloes needed the big plays, because they had five of the game's eight turnovers and Tennessee had a hot quarterback in Kelly, who passed for 368 yards, including 262 in the second half. Colorado had only 13 turnovers in the 1989 regular season, when it went 11-0 before losing to Notre Dame in the Orange Bowl.

Pritchard, who fumbled on Colorado's first play, scored on his 78-yard run with 7:11 left, giving the Buffaloes a 31-17 lead. Quarterback Darian Hagan, in trouble inside, lateralled to Pritchard, by himself on the right sideline.

Then Kelly led the Tennessee rally, passing 14 yards to Carl Pickens to make it 31-24 with 4:09 left in the game. The Vols then held Colorado and regained possession on their 26 for the tying drive.

The passing of Kelly, who finished 33-for-55 — both school records — got Tennessee down to the 4, and Chuck Webb scored on a draw play with 2:25 left.

Cincinnati victory earns season split with Bucs

Associated Press

Eric Davis and Joe Oliver hit two-run doubles and Rick Mahler won his second straight start since moving into the rotation, giving the Cincinnati Reds a 6-2 victory over Pittsburgh Pirates on Sunday.

Mariano Duncan added a solo homer as the Reds won their third straight since losing the opener of the four-game series. The two National League division leaders split their season series 6-6.

Davis, who doubled twice, accounted for nine of the Reds' 16 runs in the final three games of the series, going 8-for-12 with five runs and four RBIs. He wasn't a factor as the Pirates swept a four-game series in Cincinnati last weekend, going 2-for-12 with two RBIs.

Mahler (6-5), who was 5-9 lifetime against Pittsburgh, allowed six hits in two runs in 6 2-3 innings. Rob Dibble, who won Friday's game, pitched 2 1-3 innings for his ninth save, striking out four.

Cincinnati, which has won five of its last six, took a 2-0 lead in the first on Davis' double off rookie Randy Tomlin (1-2), who failed to pitch into a least the seventh inning for the first time in five major-league starts. The Reds are 31-11 when they score in the first inning.

Astros 4, Cardinals 2

Danny Darwin won his ninth consecutive decision and Bill Doran scored the go-ahead run on a double steal as the Houston Astros beat the St. Louis Cardinals.

Darwin (10-1) has not lost since June 2 at San Francisco. He gave up eight hits, struck out six and walked three in his third complete game of the season.

The nine consecutive victories is the longest winning streak in the National League this season, topping the eight by Dwight Gooden of the New York Mets. The most consecutive victories in the majors this year was 10 by Oakland's Bob Welch and Boston's Mike Boddicker.

Expos 4, Padres 2

Larry Walker hit a three-run homer in the eighth inning as the Montreal Expos rallied to beat the San Diego Padres.

Junior Noboa and Tim Raines opened the eighth with consecutive singles for Montreal, which was held to five hits over the first seven innings by Bruce Hurst (8-9).

Braves 4, Cubs 3

Greg Olson doubled home the winning run in the ninth inning and John Smoltz pitched a six-hitter as the Atlanta Braves beat Chicago and sent the Cubs to their fourth loss in five game.

With Atlanta trailing 3-2, Ron Gant hit a leadoff home run off Bill Long. Gant's 24th home run of the season.

Pinch-hitter Francisco Cabrera singled with one out off Mitch Williams (1-7). Olson blooped a double to right with two outs to score the winning run.

Dodgers 2, Mets 1

Mike Hartley stopped the Mets as a starter for the second time in two weeks, and Jose Gonzalez stole home as the Los Angeles Dodgers beat New York.

Hartley (5-1) allowed three hits in six-plus innings, struck out five and walked two. Hartley, a reliever making just his third start this season, beat the Mets 2-1 on Aug. 14 in the second game of a doubleheader. He has won five consecutive decisions since losing to San Diego on June 15.

Phillies 5, Giants 1

Von Hayes and John Kruk hit home runs and rookie Jason Grimsley won his first game of the season as the Philadelphia Phillies beat the San Francisco Giants.

Hayes put Philadelphia ahead in the third inning when he hit a three-run homer off John Burkett deep into the right-field bleachers.

Kruk made it 5-0 in the sixth with a two-run homer off Francisco Oliveras.

Boston increases lead; Grahe gets first win in bigs

Associated Press

The Boston Red Sox pitched their third straight shutout for the first time in 28 years and increased their largest lead of the season in the American League East to four games Sunday, beating Toronto 1-0 on a combined two-hitter by Greg Harris and Jeff Gray.

The second-place Blue Jays won the opener of the four-game series, but Dana Kiecker and Jeff Gray blanked them Friday and Roger Clemens pitched a five-hitter Saturday for Boston's first 1-0 road victory since 1984. The three straight shutouts were the first for the Red Sox since August 1962, when Bill Monboquette, Gene Conley and Ike Delock did it.

Toronto went hitless in its last 26 at-bats with runners in scoring position. The teams do not play again until the final week of the season, a three-game set at Fenway Park.

Jody Reed's two-out single in the eighth inning off Todd Stottlemyre drove in Tom Brunansky with the only run. Brunansky drew a leadoff walk, advanced to second on a wild pitch with one out and scored just ahead of left field Glenallen Hill's throw.

Harris (11-5) gave up two hits in 7 2-3 innings. He struck out a season-high eight, walked one and retired 15 consecutive batters in the middle innings.

Angels 4, White Sox 1

Lance Parrish broke a seventh-inning tie with his 20th home run of the season and Joe Grahe got his first major-league victory as the California Angels beat the Chicago White Sox.

Grahe, who spent the first half of the Texas League season in Midland, made his big league record 1-1 with the win.

Parrish sent Greg Hibbard's first pitch of the seventh into the upper deck in left field. Dante Bichette hit a two-run homer, his 14th, in the ninth against Donn Pall.

California split the four-game series and dropped the White Sox 5½ games behind Oakland in the American League West.

Grahe gave up one run and six hits in seven innings. He struck out two and walked two.

Rangers 1, Twins 0

Bobby Witt won his 10th consecutive decision with a four-hitter and Pete Incaviglia hit a sacrifice fly in the ninth inning, leading the Texas Rangers over the Minnesota Twins.

Witt (13-8) struck out six and wallked three in his fourth shutout of the season. His winning streak is tied for the longest in the majors this season with Bob Welch and Mike Boddicker.

Royals 8, Mariners 2

Bo Jackson returned from the disabled list with a 450-foot home run on his first pitch, and later doubled and singled as the Kansas City Royals stopped the Seattle Mariners.

Jackson hit his 20th home run of the season in the second inning, giving him four home runs in four consecutive at-bats. He hit three straight homers at Yankee Stadium on July 17, but hurt his shoulder later in the game and was put on the disabled list the next day.

Tigers 7, Athletics 3

Tony Phillips and Lou Whitaker each hit two-run homers as the Detroit Tigers ended Bob Welch's five-game winning streak and beat the Oakland Athletics.

Welch (21-5), the top winner in the majors, gave up six runs on seven hits in 4 2-3 innings. He lost for the first time since July 28.

Indians 8, Orioles 3

Brook Jacoby's two-run single capped a four-run fifth inning and the Cleveland Indians feasted on Baltimore pitching for a second straight day, trouncing the Orioles.

Cleveland had 12 hits, giving them 30 hits and 19 runs in two days against Baltimore.

Yankees 4, Brewers 3

Steve Sax, batting ninth because of a season-long slump, singled home the winning run with two outs in the 11th inning and the New York Yankees beat the Milwaukee Brewers.

Sax, a .300 hitter in the past, was recently dropped to last in the lineup.

Angels 5-hit Diablos in 2-1 win

Staff Report

EL PASO — Newly acquired Daryl Sconiers provided a two-run homer in the top of the third inning, and three Midland pitchers combined to limit the Diablos to five hits in the Angels' 2-1 Texas League victory here Sunday night.

Sconiers, a former Texas League batting champion for El Paso, chased Tim Salmon across the plate with his home run that gave Midland a 2-0 lead.

Randy Bockus gave up just four hits and one unearned run in five innings of work that upped his record to 2-0 as an Angel. Only Jesus Alfaro's sacrifice fly in the bottom of the fourth dented the scoreboard for El Paso, a team that dropped to 34-24 in second-half play.

Mark Zappelli picked up his sixth save with two innings of hitless relief.

Midland collected eight hits in the game, but Monson allowed just two through three innings of work.

The Angels upped their second-half record to 27-36 with the win.

Sconiers, who also doubled, had three hits to pace the Angel offense.

Midland catcher Doug Davis hit a triple but was left stranded.

TAIWAN: Americans commit five errors

From 1C

swinging at some bad pitches and that's not us. We didn't teach them that way. He had us doing it."

The championship was held on a Sunday for the first time in the tournament's 44-year history after two quarterfinal games were postponed two days by rain.

Taiwan reached the title game by defeating Ramstein AFB, West Germany, 14-0 and Trail, British Columbia, 20-1.

Last season, the Taiwan team was beaten by a group of 12-year-olds from Trumbull, Conn., in one of the biggest upsets of 1989. Until last year, Taiwanese teams had won three World Series titles in a row and 13 of the previous 22.

Liu Chien-Wen doubled in the first inning off Bobby Shannon and scored the only run Taiwan would need two pitches later when Sun singled to right. Taiwan added four runs each in the fourth and fifth innings.

"The other team, they were bland in using a power pitcher. I knew he wouldn't last more than three innings," said Taiwan coach Tzyy-Tsann Wang, whose own starter was the tournament's biggest player at 5-foot9½ and 144 pounds.

"The first time up, they were too anxious. They were swinging for the fences," Wang said.

Three errors by Shippensburg led to three runs in the fifth and Chen Chien-Wei added a home run. In all, the Americans made five errors leading to four unearned runs.

COLLEGE: Majors settles for tie

From 1C

Coach Johnny Majors elected to go for the tying extra point by Greg Burke rather than a two-point conversion, and the decision seemed to be a correct one as the Volunteers again held Colorado and got possession on their 23.

"We thought about it the whole game, we talked about it the whole game," Majors said about kicking the PAT. "I felt we'd get the ball back. And we did. I know darn well we didn't deserve to lose.

"It might be different in a championship game, but a tie is a lot better than a loss."

A 13-yard run by Webb on a draw play and a penalty got the ball to the Colorado 41, but the game ended as Webb ran another 25 yards before being run out of bounds on the 16 as time expired.

The Volunteers used their last timeout with 39 seconds left, so they wanted Webb to get a first down, and then Kelly would throw an incompletion to stop the clock.

"I was trying to score or get out of bounds," Webb said. "I didn't see the clock. I got the first down and went out of bounds. We just needed one more play, a field goal. Time just ran out."

Webb, who had seven 100-yard games as a freshman, gained 131 yards on 27 carries.

The Buffaloes became tired and couldn't keep up the pressure, Coach Bill McCartney said.

"It looked like we had a victory a couple of times, but we couldn't keep them from answering a two-touchdown advantage. We started slow and had some adversity early, but for a good part of the game I thought we were in control."

Pritchard scored his 55-yarder for a 17-10 lead 4:11 into the third quarter. He went up the middle on a trap play and outran cornerback Floyd Miley to the corner of the end zone.

Dave McCloughan, a cornerback who also had an interception, scored on a 55-yard punt return for a 24-10 margin with 9:34 left, running up the sideline and eluding punter Joey Chapman near the end zone.

The Volunteers needed only 41 seconds to pull to 24-17, as Kelly completed four of six passes, including a 24-yarder to Alvin Harper for the touchdown with 8:53 left.

Tennessee got the ball right back when Dwayne Davis fumbled the kickoff at the Buffaloes' 19.

But Kelly's twice-tipped pass was picked off in the end zone by Tim James. James also intercepted Kelly in the end zone when the Volunteers were threatening in the final seconds of the first half.

POKES: Dallas defense shines

From 1C

"We're starting to show some of the physical play we (the coaches) like," he said. "I think our team is in excellent physical condition.

"I asked our players what was the difference in this training camp and others past. Most of the new players on our team from other camps said this was one of the most physical camps they had seen. That's what we want it to be, very physical."

Temperatures on the field were well over 100 degrees at kickoff but the Cowboys, who have been working out in the oven-like heat, handled it better than the Steelers.

Pittsburgh coach Chuck Noll admitted that the heat hit his defense in the second half.

"We started slowing down a little bit and we got a little tired," Noll said. "The Cowboys outhustled us. That's not very good."

Aikman and Walsh threw touchdown passes for Dallas but the Cowboys' running game was still stuck in neutral, gaining only 94 yards. Aikman was the leading rusher with 29 yards, 22 of them coming on one play.

"We still have to improve on the running game," Johnson said. "We haven't been spending a lot of time on our opponents in blocking schemes. It was the first time we saw a 3-4 defense.

"Running is not our strong suit but I think we will improve. We haven't been spending a lot of time working against an opponent's defense. When the regular season starts, I think you will see our running game pick up as we prepare longer for an opponent."

The Cowboys would be helped if they could sign first-round draft pick Emmitt Smith of Florida. His agent, Richard Howell, made an offer to Dallas over the weekend but the Cowboys turned it down.

The offer from the Cowboys could go up next week.

OILERS: Run-and-shoot revs

From 1C

again. Minnesota took over at its own 44 with 1:51 left. Salisbury went 3 of 4 for 21 yards and Smith had a 14-yard run to position Gallery for his winner.

Gannon, starting because Burns said a month ago that he wanted Gannon and Wilson to get one home preseason start each, had been a third-stringer during his first three NFL seasons.

He looked brilliant while directing a 62-yard drive that put Minnesota up 7-0, going 3 of 3 for 47 yards including a 12-yard scoring pass to Anthony Carter.

After Audray McMillian intercepted Warren Moon, Gallery's 49-yarder made it 10-0. On the next play from scrummage, Moon was sacked in the end zone by Chris Doleman for a safety.

But Gannon misfired on his last seven passes and finished with only 5 completions in 13 attempts. He was intercepted by Dishman, who would have scored had he not fumbled on the 2 while prematurely celebrating an anticipated touchdown.

"It came to me at the spur of the moment," Dishman said. "I did a selfish thing to my teammates. It won't happen again."

Wilson did little better than Gannon — 7 of 19 for 93 yards — and was booed frequently by the Metrodome crowd.

"I don't plan on running for governor this week," he said.

Poor quarterbacking hasn't been a problem the last few seasons for Houston, thanks to Moon. Even he had struggled this preseason, though, since the Oilers installed the run-and-shoot offense.

Mickelson wins Amateur

DENVER (AP) — Long-hitting left-hander Phil Mickelson added the U.S. Amateur title to his two NCAA championships, beating Manny Zerman 5 and 4 Sunday in a grueling 36-hole final.

Mickelson, 20, of Arizona State, was five under par through the 32 holes played on Sunday. He birdied five of his last 12 holes to hold off Zerman, 20, of the University of Arizona.

Mickelson, 3-up after the morning 18, immediately dropped the first two holes of the afternoon. The players alternated winning the next four holes, but Zerman was unable to pull even.

The front nine featured some brilliant play. Mickelson, in danger of having the match fall to even after hitting over the third green, holed out a 50-yard pitch shot for birdie.

Zerman nearly aced the 168-yard sixth hole, his shot finishing six inches from the cup.

After hitting a difficult pitch shot to within inches to save par at No. 7, Zerman chipped in from 55 feet at the par-3 eighth. But Mickelson promptly sank a 25-foot putt to halve the hole.

Mickelson went 2-up with a routine par at No. 10 while Zerman drove into the rough and was short of the green with his second shot and bogeyed.

He went to 3-up on the next hole with a birdie. He was just left of the par-5 hole in two, pitched to 10 feet and made the putt. Zerman couldn't make an eight-footer to tie.

Jose-Maria Olazabal soaks up the glory after winning the World Series of Golf tournament in record-setting fashion.

Olazabal coasts to victory

Associated Press

World Series

AKRON, Ohio — It was no contest; a rout all the way.

The last lingering doubt that Jose-Maria Olazabal would win the World Series of Golf was dispelled when he started with consecutive birdies in Sunday's final round.

"I was 12 ahead with 16 holes to go. I never had that kind of a lead before. I didn't know what to do," the 24-year-old Spaniard said.

He handled it very nicely, going on to the largest victory margin in 15 years on the American pro tour, a 12-shot triumph.

"Go on home. Get the hell out of here," a laughing Lanny Wadkins said after congratulating Olazabal on his first American victory.

After going 12 in front on the second hole, Olazabal turned the last round into a victory lap over the Firestone Country Club that he dominated as no one ever had, as few would have thought possible.

"I never thought I'd see 18-under at Firestone," said Wadkins, who held the previous record at 13-under. "I didn't think I'd live to see 13-under broken, let alone finish second to it."

For the other 46 men in the international field of winners only, it was an exercise in frustration, with more than a trace of humiliation thrown in.

Olazabal led all the way and set a flock of course and tournament records. But that doesn't begin to describe his domination.

"The most amazing thing is that there were only three guys within 18 strokes," Wadkins said.

Olazabal, now unquestioned as the outstanding young player in the world, won with rounds of 61, 67, 67 and 67 on a 7,149 yard, par-70 course with the reputation and respect of the touring pros as one of the most difficult they encounter all season.

Olazabal, playing Firestone for the first time, simply took it apart. He opened the tournament with a birdie-eagle-birdie-birdie burst in the first round, and had a legitimate shot at breaking 60.

He set course and tournament records for 18 holes (61), 36 holes (128), 54 holes (195) and 72 holes (262). His 36, 54 and 72-hole scores also were the best on the PGA Tour this year.

While Olazabal was smiling and waving to the galleries that gave him standing ovations on every back-nine green, Firestone was exerting its more customary pressure on the rest of the field.

Wadkins, Hale Irwin and Donnie Hammond were the only others under par for the tournament. Wadkins, with a 66, took second at 274.

U.S. Open champ Hale Irwin shot a 74 and was third at 277. Hammond was 71-279.

No one else was within 18 strokes of the runaway winner. Some examples: Greg Norman was 19 behind at 281, Tom Kite 20 back 282 and PGA title-holder Wayne Grady was 29 behind at 291.

And then there was John Huston, a winner in Florida earlier this year. He finished 45 strokes behind the winner.

Olazabal, now in his fifth season as a touring pro, has played most of his golf on the European tour. He has eight European victories, including an English event and the Irish Open earlier this season. He also won a Japanese tournament last year.

"The best players not only play all over the world, but the best of the best win all over the world," he said.

Persons wins by two strokes

Associated Press

Chattanooga

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. — Peter Persons, in his first full year on the PGA Tour, scored his first victory, taking the $600,000 Chattanooga Classic Sunday by two strokes over Richard Zokol with a record-breaking score.

Persons, a three-time All-American at the University of Georgia, fired a closing 3-under-par 67 for a 72-hole total of 20-under 260.

He had previous rounds of 64-64-65 en route to breaking the tournament record of 261 by Brad Faxon in 1986.

Kenny Knox and Fred Funk tied for third at 264. David Peoples, Ray Pearce and Harry Taylor were next at 266 at the 6,641-yard Valleybrook Golf and Country Club.

Dave Rummells tied Knox's one-day course record with a 9-under 61, but never got among the leaders, finishing at 269.

Persons repulsed challenges from Zokol, who began the day three shots off the lead, and Funk, who was five shots back.

Zokol crept within two strokes with a birdie at the second hole, but gave that stroke back with a bogey at three.

Persons carded the first of his five birdies at No. 4, stretching his lead to four shots. Zokol moved within three shots again with a birdie at No. 5, but Persons again answered the challenge with a birdie at No. 6.

Funk ran off four consecutive birdies beginning at No. 7 and moved with three strokes of the lead with a birdie at the 10th.

But Zokol lost his shot at the title when he bogeyed the 15th and fell four strokes back.

After a birdie at No. 12, Persons matched par until the 17th, where he tapped in from one inch to match Zokol's birdie and wrap up the championship.

Archer's 2-under yields victory in Northwest

Associated Press

Seniors

KENMORE, Wash. — George Archer took the lead on the eighth hole of Sunday's final round and went on to beat Bruce Crampton by two strokes in the Northwest Classic seniors golf tournament.

Archer, a Senior PGA Tour rookie since turning 50 last October, shot a 2-under-par 70 on Sunday, winning his fourth tournament with a 205 score, 11 under for 54 holes on the Inglewood Country Club course.

His $52,500 winner's check increased his earnings for the year to $511,138, third on the money list.

Crampton, who started the day six strokes off the pace, fired a 67 to finish at 207. Don Bies, who led Archer by a shot going into the final round, struggled in with a 74 and was at 208.

Defending champion Al Geiberger and Don January tied at 209. Geiberger finished with a 69, the 60-year-old January with a 70. Chi Chi Rodriguez closed with a 72 for 210.

George Lanning, after a 69, and Tommy Aaron, a 70, were tied at 211. At 212 was Lee Trevino, the Senior Tour leader in earnings and scoring average, who fired Sunday's best round, a 66, that began with an eagle and finished with another eagle.

Archer, who finished his second round Saturday with an eagle, carded another Sunday on the 454-yard par-5 second hole, sinking a 12-foot putt.

That moved him into a share of the lead with Bies, who had birdied the first hole. Archer led for the first time after sinking a 10-foot birdie putt on the fourth hole. Archer bogeyed the sixth, missing a three-footer, and seventh, where his approach sailed over the green.

"Those were pivotal holes for both Don and me," Archer said of the eighth and ninth. Archer birdied the 3-par eighth from 30 feet while Bies had a bogey after driving into a bunker.

Bies pulled his drive just inches out of bounds on the ninth and double bogeyed, losing the lead for good.

"I hooked my drive, too, and was just a couple of inches in bounds," Archer said. "It was almost a coin flip. We both could have been OB."

Archer chipped onto the fairway and, despite making bogey, added to his advantage over Bies.

Archer birdied the 10th with a 20-foot putt and the 11th with a curling eight-footer. He caught a bunker and bogeyed 12, and was over the 16th green and bogeyed again. He blasted out of a trap to four feet and birdied the 18th.

Crampton, who won the inaugural Northwest Classic in 1986 and repeated in 1988, had only one bogey in his round. He birdied the second hole, blasting out of a bunker to five feet, and the 3-par eighth, hitting a 2-iron tee shot to eight feet.

A 30-foot chip shot gave Crampton a birdie on 10, and a curling 15-footer gave him another on 11, dropping him to eight under and three strokes behind Archer.

Crampton pulled to within two shots of Archer with a birdie on 15, where he sank a 25-foot putt from the back fringe.

Daniel takes another title

Associated Press

LPGA

BROOKLYN PARK, Minn. — Beth Daniel shot 4-under-par 68 Sunday to win the Northgate LPGA Classic by six strokes, the third victory in the last four tournaments for the LPGA's leading money winner this season.

Daniel, who shot 66 and 69 in earlier rounds, finished at 13-under 203 for 54 holes over the 6,149-yard Edinburgh USA course and won $56,250.

Penny Hammel, who shot 69 Sunday, and Chris Johnson, with a 68, tied for second at 209. Caroline Keggi, Barb Bunkowsky of Canada and Cindy Rarick were at 211.

The victory was the fifth this year and 23rd of Daniel's career. She has won nine tournaments and $824,282 since ending a four-year victory drought about 13 months ago. She has 20 top-10 finishes in her last 25 starts, and in her previous three won the Youngstown and Mazda events and finished second in the Big Apple Classic last week.

Daniel has won $613,782 in 19 starts this season, three fewer than Betsy King needed to reach $600,000 last year on the way to setting a season earnings record of $654,132.

Daniel has won the last three LPGA touranments played in Minnesota. She won the 1979 Patty Berg Classic at St. Paul for her first pro victory, and repeated as Berg champion in 1980, the last year the tournament was held.

The Charleston, S.C., native started Sunday two shots ahead of Rarick, who bogeyed holes 14 and 15 to finish at 74 for the day.

Daniel, playing bogey-free golf, made three of her four birdie putts on the back nine to pull away from the field. She made a 30-foot putt on No. 11, tapped in from inches away on 15 and made a 12-footer on 16.

Hammel, the only other golfer besides Daniel to shoot under par each day, bogeyed three of her first four holes Sunday. She birdied Nos. 5, 6, 11, 12, 15, 16 and 17 before closing with a bogey.

OC's 6-10 sophomore settles on Auburn

ODESSA (AP) — Rodney Dent, considered among the top sophomore big centers in the country, will attend Auburn after the 1990-91 season, his junior college coach said.

Odessa Junior College coach Dennis Helms said the 6-10 Dent decided to announce his choice early to relieve pressure on his play and studies, just as Nevada-Las Vegas star Larry Johnson did two years ago.

He averaged 14 points and nine rebounds in leading the Wranglers to a 32-7 mark last year.

"He just wanted to get it out of the way so he can concentrate on school and on this season," Helms said of Dent's decision Sunday night.

"Rodney isn't quite as good as Larry, but he's pretty good," Helms said. "And he's going to continue to get better."

Dent said he chose Auburn because of its proximity to his hometown of Edison, Ga., and because the program is on the rise.

The oral commitment is non-binding.

Stocks rebound

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices staged a sharply rally near the close Friday in what analysts described as a technical rebound from the market's free-fall slide of the past several weeks.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which had plunged 173.02 points over the three previous sessions, climbed 49.50 to 2,532.92.

The average finished the week with a net loss of 111.88 points, for its biggest weekly decline since it fell 118.67 points Jan. 22-26.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 3 to 2 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 956 up, 649 down and 410 unchanged.

Dollar rises

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar repeated what is becoming a usual Friday performance — rising ahead of an uncertain weekend in the tense Persian Gulf.

Gold prices advanced after drifting lower overseas. On New York's Commodity Exchange, gold settled at $415 a troy ounce, up $3 an ounce from Thursday.

In Tokyo, the dollar fell to a closing 145.70 Japanese yen from 145.88 at Thursday's close. In London, the British pound fetched $1.9445, cheaper than $1.9515 late Thursday.

Dollar rates in New York: 1.5605 German marks; 1.2720 Swiss francs; 5.2380 French francs; 1,159.50 Italian lire, and 1.1353 Canadian dollars.

Gold fell in London to a late bid price of $411.75 a troy ounce, from $412.75 bid late Thursday. Silver prices were mixed. On New York's Comex silver bullion for current delivery settled at $5.187 a troy ounce.

Keating lawsuit

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge Thursday upheld the government takeover of Lincoln Savings and Loan Association, saying the operation of the thrift by Charles H. Keating Jr. and his associates "amounted to looting."

Keating

U.S. District Court Judge Stanley Sporkin, dismissing Keating's suit to recover the collapsed Irvine, Calif., said it was "abundantly clear" that Keating and other officials of Lincoln's holding company, American Continental Corp. of Phoenix, "abused their positions."

Analysts say oil prices help producers

■ The public may be angry at gasoline retailers for raising fuel prices, but oil producers are the ones benefit from soaring prices, analysts say.

N.Y. Times News Service

But the biggest beneficiaries of the Middle East crisis are clearly the oil producers, who are seeing their profits skyrocket almost overnight, analysts and oil industry veterans say.

If oil prices continue to spiral, "it will do marvelous things for the bottom line," said Abilene producer John Chalmers, 70, who has 53 years of oil patch experience and owns 100 producing wells.

Analysts say that, while gasoline retailers have borne the brunt of public wrath as a result of spiraling pump prices, the No. 1 gainers from the Middle East crisis have been the producers.

Gasoline retailers, though raising pump prices 15 to 20 cents a gallon in many instances, have had to pay much higher wholesale prices for the fuel.

Refiners, while sharply boosting wholesale prices for gasoline, are now having to pay nearly twice as much for the crude oil that will be converted into future supplies of motor fuel.

An oil producer who was being paid $15 a barrel by a refiner for West Texas Intermediate crude only two months ago is now getting $29.50, the highest price in six years.

That's an enormous increase of $14.50 a barrel. But it isn't costing that producer any more to pump $29.50 crude than it cost him to pump the cheap $15 oil.

That extra $14.50 "goes straight to the bottom line, because it doesn't cost us any more to produce it," concedes William Smith, chairman and chief executive officer of Wolverine Exploration Co. of Fort Worth.

Therefore, for oil producers, "the run-up in prices will be primarily profit," said Randy Robason, a certified public accountant who heads the the Fort Worth office of the Arthur Andersen & Co. accounting firm.

For Texland Petroleum of Fort Worth, which produces 6,000 barrels of crude a day, the huge jump in prices "looks awfully good" and should allow the company to make "substantially" larger profits if prices remain at higher levels, said company president R.J. "Bob" Schumacher.

If oil prices remain high "that certainly is going to lead to vastly greatly profits for producers,," said John Moroney, a Texas A&M University economics professsor.

The clear-cut loser, Fiedler said, is the consumer, who must immediately cope with higher gasoline prices and could face higher utility bills down the road.

The producers include small mom-and-pop outfits that might own only a few wells; sizeable independent companies such as Union Pacific Resources Co. of Fort Worth and Oryx Energy Co. of Dallas; giant oil corporations such as Exxon and Texaco; and government-owned operations in oil-rich countries such as Saudi Arabia or Iran.

Military makes big purchase of Texas beef

By Joel Williams

MERCEDES, Texas (AP) — A Lower Rio Grande Valley meat company made a quick $500,000 sale to the Defense Department for an emergency food shipment to U.S. troops in the Middle East.

H&H Foods of Mercedes sold 320,000 pounds of frozen ground beef patties and shipped them out the same day on eight 18-wheel truck trailers, said company vice president Jaime Hinojosa.

"They cleaned us out," he said.

It was an indication of the potential for some companies to get new business as a result of the U.S. troop deployment that followed Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

The meat, shipped Aug. 14, was needed to feed the tens of thousands of U.S. troops in the Middle East, Hinojosa said.

When Defense officials called back asking for shipment just hours after seeking the bid, Hinojosa said his crew had to scramble and work overtime to get it loaded and on the road by that night.

The company had to ship it that day because it had to be in Norfolk, Va., by Aug. 16, he said.

"The government came out and needed a million and a half to two million pounds of ground beef," Hinojosa said. "We supplied some of it."

The company has sold meat to the Defense and Agriculture departments for 15 years, he said.

Another Texas company, San Antonio-based Artesia Waters Inc., started sending its bottled water to soldiers in the Middle East after the company president learned they were drinking French water.

An Artesia spokeswoman said it was selling the water at cost.

In Corpus Christi, the Defense Department has asked the South Texas Lighthouse for the Blind to provide a sample shipment of votive candles.

"They are to go to the Persian Gulf area," said Barbara Russell, executive director of the Lighthouse.

Frantic trading

Traders buy and sell crude futures on the floor of the New York Mercantile Exchange last week, when prices climbed to a five-year high, then fell Friday amid profit-taking. The incrase was fueled by the tension in the Middle East.

Universal suing faulty rides' designer

■ Universal is suing the designer of its Jaws and Earthquake rides at its new Florida park, contending the designer used poor workmanship and design.

Associated Press

ORLANDO, Fla. — Universal Studios Florida contends two rides — Jaws and Earthquake — haven't worked properly since the park opened in June and it's suing the company that designed them.

Universal alleges that Ride & Show Engineering Inc. of San Dimas, Calif., used poor workmanship and design on the highly touted attractions. Both have worked only sporadically since the park opened June 7.

Their fitful operation and problems with a third ride, Kongfrontation, have forced the movie-theme park to offer a free admission ticket for each one sold. Ride & Show did not work on the King Kong ride, which has computer glitches.

Joseph B. McHugh, vice president of marketing and administration at Ride & Show Engineering, said his company will fight the lawsuit.

"We strongly disagree with Universal's claims," McHugh said Tuesday. "Except for the expense of litigation, we welcome the chance to vindicate our company."

He said the company was considering a counterclaim against the theme park.

Ride & Show handled the design and manufacture of Jaws, including the design of its seven computer-operated sharks. It also was responsible for key elements of Earthquake, including the main subway train that gets trapped in a modernized version of the 1906 San Francisco earthquake.

Universal spokesman Doug Binder would not comment on the lawsuit filed in Tuesday in Orange County Circuit Court in Orlando.

He said Jaws, Earthquake and Kongfrontation are currently in technical rehearsal, meaning that they are sometimes in operation and open to visitors.

Signs at Universal's entrance tell visitors the three rides may be closed down at certain times. For their inconvenience, visitors can take advantage of the two-for-one ticket policy that has been in effect since June 8.

Pause'

If you're thinking about buying a new system, it really pays to do a little planning about how you're going to want your computer set up. If you've already got a system up and running, it may be worth your while to think about how it was set up in the first place.

The details about what exactly goes into each system can vary widely depending on a particular user's needs. What I want to discuss here is HOW the set up is done, and by whom. I strongly recommend the "do-it-yourself" method.

When you receive a new computer system, a certain amount of preparation should have been done by the people you bought the system from. If your system has a hard disk (and you shouldn't buy a computer without one these days), your computer will normally arrive with that disk ready to hold data. This means it has been partitioned and formatted. Frequently, the operating system (DOS) has been installed on the drive.

This is a nice service, because it enables you to immediately begin using the drive to install and run other programs, create data files, etc. And there's nothing tricky about it — it's a pretty straight-forward mechanical process. Let someone else do it.

However, there are some things you should be aware of, and a few things you should insist upon. First, make sure you receive ALL the original disks and manuals that came with the operating system or any other programs that have been loaded on the drive for you. You can't run your computer without DOS, and you've paid for it — either as a separate charge or included with the cost of the system. You should get everything that came in the original package.

Some stores apparently don't give out the disks because they think you'll just get in trouble with them. So they leave out a diagnostics disk that you may need to isolate a malfunction!

Without the original disks and manuals, you're not getting a complete package. If something happens to the files on the hard disk, you won't be able to reload them without the floppies. Without the manuals, you won't have access to some technical information you may need when you add a new printer or a mouse, etc., to your system.

Most of our manuals also include "warranty" cards that you should send in. These enable you to receive information about updates to the programs and, as a registered user, you can call a help line to get questions answered and problems worked out. Without registering, you're not an "official" user, and you can't register without the manuals (sometimes, you need the floppies for this, too — you may need a serial number that is only printed on the label of the original master disk).

Alas, I've seen many a case where computers have been delivered without floppies or manuals to accompany the programs on the hard disk. Don't allow your computer store to get away with this.

I think it's far better to get all the software in its original package and then put it on the hard disk yourself. Even DOS. That way you can control the details of the set-up that are important to you, and you won't be at the mercy of some technician who set things up for you without knowing a thing about how you want to use your computer. By doing it yourself, you can decide which subdirectories to load programs into and you can fine-tune any configuration files that may be necessary.

Another trap that's easy to fall into is to let a friend of a friend set up your system for you.

Don't get me wrong. I'm a firm believer in people helping people and sharing our little tips and tricks with each other. But all the good-intentions of some self-made "expert" can end up doing more harm than good if you're not careful. Just because someone has set up his own system, doesn't mean he knows the best way to set up yours!

I don't know how many systems I've had to "undo" because Bootlegger Bob loaded a hard disk to the hilt with conflicting programs and improper configuration files. And he left all this junk without leaving any documentation or floppies. Thanks, but no thanks.

If someone really loads you up with a bunch of "freebies," chances are that a lot of those programs are illegal copies (which is why a friend of mine refers to her "bootlegger" — I love it). Like it or not, if you haven't paid for a copy of a commercial program, you're breaking the law and so is the person who gave it to you. They're really not doing you any favors. I've seen people waste more time and effort (and time is money) wrestling with programs for which they don't have any documentation. Something doesn't work quite right, but without knowing what this guy was thinkning about when

USAir begins firing 1,500 employees

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP) — USAir will begin firing nearly 1,500 of its probationary employees across the country effective immediately, airline President Seth E. Schofield said last week.

The cost-cutting move cancels a planned expansion and growth program because of a weakening economy and a lull in the airline business, said USAir spokeswoman Susan Young.

She said that could mean employees ranging from airport maintenance workers to secretaries hired for a planned growth who were on the usual six-month probationary period.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Bond's interest cuts reflective of market

By Bill Doyle

Q. I have owned Series H, U.S. Savings Bonds, since 1970 and Series HH bonds since 1980. I acquired both the Hs and the HHs in exchange for E and EE bonds I bought during my working years. My reason for doing so was that Hs and HHs pay interest twice a year, whereas interest builds up on Es and EEs and is not collected unless those bonds are redeemed.

In retirement, this arrangement had been working out exceptionally well. I certainly have enjoyed the steady flow of interest checks — until this year. My most recent interest checks have been lower than my previous checks. Why?

Doyle

A. Because both your H and HH bonds have entered "extended maturity periods" in which the annual interest rate was reduced to 6 percent. That appended to all Hs and HHs entering extended maturities on and after Nov. 1, 1986.

Previously, Hs and HHs paid either 7.5 or 8.5 percent annually, depending on when each bond was issued. And rates could not be cut until each bond entered an extended maturity period. Your particular bonds were paying 8.5 percent.

The mailbag shows that rate cut comes as a great shock to many H and HH owners. However, it reflects interest rate conditions in the marketplace and is in line with the guaranteed 6 percent rate on EE bonds issued on and after Nov. 1, 1986, and the guaranteed 6 percent on Es and EEs entering extended maturities since that date.

Both your Hs and HHs had original 10-year maturities. Your Hs, issued in 1970, entered their second and final 10-year extended maturity this year. Your HHs, issued in 1980, entered their first and only 10-year extended maturity this year.

The Treasury Department has announced there will be no more extensions for either Hs or HHs. Hs reach final maturity and stop paying interest 30 years after their issue dates; HHs after 20 years.

Q. What government form must be used to change the name of a co-owner of E or EE bonds, without cashing the bonds? I don't have to cash them, do I?

A. You needn't redeem the bonds to make the change. Redeeming them would be a mistake, because you would then have to pay federal income tax on the accrued E or EE bond interest.

Assuming both co-owners are alive, use Form PD 1938, which you should be able to obtain from your local bank. If you draw a blank there, contact the Federal Reserve Bank or branch serving your area.

That might be a sticky situation, because the person whose name is to be removed as co-owner must sign Form PD 1938.

If one co-owner is dead, the surviving co-owner uses Form PD 4000. If both co-owners are gone, the estate representative uses Form PD 1455.

Q. When redeeming E and EE bonds, does all the interest accumulated on those bonds have to be reported on my income tax return, no matter how many years I have had those bonds?

A. Of course. All interest received from U.S. Savings Bonds is subject to federal income tax — but not to state and local income tax. You collect accrued interest when you redeem E and EE bonds. You are required to report all that interest on your federal income tax return. "Forget" and you are certain to hear from the Internal Revenue Service.

You can postpone that tax by exchanging Es and EEs with redemption values — purchase price plus accrued interest — of $500 or more for HH bonds. By doing that, you put off the tax bite on the E and EE bond interest until you redeem the HHs received in the exchange. Meanwhile, you collect 6 percent annual and taxable interest from the HHs.

PAUSE: Freebie programs could be illegally copied

he loaded it onto your disk, or without amanual to refer to, you're lost. You're far better off to simply come up with the dough to get a legitimate copy in the first place, study the installation instructions in the manual, and load it yourself.

Now, all this will require some effort on your part. You may need to pick up a book or two, attend a class, or — gasp! — read the manuals that came with your system. Get familiar with your own computer and the software you want to use. It will take some time. Can't afford the time? Believe me, take the time now or you will waste it later, spinning your wheels trying to get things to work the way they should.

BENEFIT: Price hike profits for producers

(From 5C)

After having gone through the oil bust of the 1980s, producers are reluctant to hear the news media suddenly mentioning the "W" word — "windfall," as in windfall profits.

But for oil producers, "I would say it's a windfall," said William Veno, an oil analyst for Data Resources Inc. in Lexington, Mass.

Producers, on the other hand, argue that the jump in oil prices may be short-lived; that they have suffered from depressed prices for four years; and that they need the added revenue to pay off debt, do long-postponed maintenance work on wells and to provide money for new drilling projects.

"You're not talking about any get-rich quick kind of thing," said Chalmers, who said he has seen his company dwindle from 60 to 10 employees.

Jon Brumley, a partner in Cross Timbers Oil Co. of Fort Worth, says he thinks prices will fall, perhaps stabilizing in a range of $18 to $23 a barrel.

And memories of 1986, when oil prices crashed from $30 to $10 a barrel, are still fresh on producers' minds.

"If it goes below $15 a barrel, you better have a rich uncle somewhere," Chalmers said.

Anheuser-Busch to build brewery at Sea Worlds

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Visitors will soon be able to tour a new Anheuser-Busch brewery and quaff a cool one after watching Shamu the killer whale and other marine mammals perform at Sea World of Florida.

"This will, in effect, be a demonstration brewery," said Joseph Noelker, associate general counsel for the St. Louis-based brewing company. "Park visitors will be able to see the beer being made and actually taste it."

Anheuser-Busch Cos. Inc., which bought six theme parks last December, said it also plans a brewery at Sea World in San Diego. But the suds will not flow at the two other marine attractions — in San Antonio and Aurora, Ohio.

Anheuser-Busch was informed earlier this year that it could not sell its own brands at the Orlando park because state law generally prohibits makers of alcoholic beverages from distributing or selling their products at retail outlets.

But the company can sell or give away its beer brands at Busch Gardens in Tampa because Florida law says it's OK for breweries to distribute their products at the manufacturing site.

PERSIAN GULF CRISIS

Thousands trapped in hellish refugee camp

By GEOFF DAVIDIAN
Hearst News Service

AQABA, Jordan — They sleep in the desert with a suitcase for a pillow, if they were lucky enough to bring any belongings with them.

In the camp on the outskirts of this Red Sea port town, the temperatures top 100 degrees, and a hot wind continuously blows the sand.

What water they have been given is hot enough to make tea, and the smell of urine and feces is inescapable.

This is the hell that holds tens of thousands of Egyptian and Sudanese refugees who have left their homes and jobs in Kuwait.

Since Iraq invaded Kuwait Aug. 2, more than 200,000 refugees have fled into Jordan, overwhelming the country. There is not enough food, water or shelter for them here, and there are not enough boats or airplanes to carry them home.

So what is otherwise a desolate and uninhabitable desert has been turned into a depressing and inhospitable refugee camp.

From miles away, one can see the buses and cars by the hundreds, off the side of the highway, and thousands of white-robed refugees milling around.

AP Laserphoto

At mealtime, government workers hand out bread, perhaps a boiled egg and a wedge of foil-wrapped cheese. Nearby, Jordanian entrepreneurs sell juice and potato chips.

The doors of the cars are open, while women and children sleep on the scorching seats and men listen to the news or music on the radio.

Using the cars for sheds, groups of Egyptians, on their haunches, drink tea and discuss the situation while their passports are being checked, and rechecked, then checked again.

"The real problem is the toilet," the 32-year-old Egyptian engineer said as he made his way through the hundreds of cars that jammed the desert where Jordanians tried to organize the refugees to process them.

"People have to go in the open, right in front of other people," he said.

A huge air and sea lift is under way in Jordan as Arab countries try to deal with the human problems created by the Iraqi invasion.

Egyptian civil and military air craft have been flying refugees from the airport here to Cairo around the clock. Elsewhere, as many as six ferry boats have been operating between Aqaba and the Egyptian Red Sea port of Nuweiba, in the Sinai Desert.

Still, the number of refugees here grows. Especially after Jordan announced Friday that it was reopening the border with Iraq, which had been closed Wednesday to reduce the strain on services available to those trying to reach Aqaba, and Egypt.

At the port here, cars are lined up four deep and about a half-mile long, waiting for space on a ferry, while at the airport more than 3,500 refugees are being airlifted to Cairo each day. To those who make it out, it is a joyous moment after a treacherous trip.

But to those who wait, life is on hold.

At a camp near the Red Sea, Sudanese by the thousands have been waiting, some for weeks, for their government to send a ship.

Palestinians suffering from invasion of Kuwait

NUSSEIRAT CAMP, Occupied Gaza Strip (AP) — Abu Raed Kharwan, who built a career as an accountant in Kuwait, now finds himself back in the squalid Palestinian refugee camp where he was born 39 years ago.

"I used to send money home," Kharwan said as he sat on his father's porch, wearing a white cotton gown that is the typical garb in the Persian Gulf region. "Now I am a burden."

Kharwan and his family are among thousands of Palestinians in the Israeli-occupied territories who face economic hardship as a result of Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

In addition to providing Palestinians with jobs, Kuwait's contributions helped Palestinian hospitals and funded refugee aid programs.

Ironically, most Palestinians in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip support Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, whom they see as an increasingly powerful leader capable of restoring Arab pride and supporting their cause for independence.

"We Palestinians are not with Saddam against Kuwait," he said. "We are with Saddam against the United States."

Kharwan, who was on vacation in the Gaza Strip when Kuwait was invaded, does not know when, if ever, he will be able to return to his job. He also worries he may never see the $70,000 in savings and pension accumulated in 14 years of work in the Persian Gulf.

The Israeli government estimates that more than 30,000 Palestinians from the occupied territories were employed in Kuwait at the time of Iraq's invasion.

The takeover abruptly cut off the $140 million a year that had flowed to the territories from the Palestinian workers and Kuwaiti government aid programs, Israeli officials said.

Palestinian economists say workers in other Persian Gulf countries — whose jobs could be threatened if the turmoil spreads — contribute an additional $160 million to the territories.
