COURT DISMISSES OLD M'BEE INDICTMENTS

FRANCE ASKS GERMANY BE FOUND GUILTY

By United Press

LONDON, Mar. 14.— France, supported by Belgium, demanded tonight that the league council find Germany guilty of aggression if she does not withdraw her forces from the Rhineland and punish her by economic and financial penalties.

They asked the full aid of Britain and Italy, signers of the Locarno treaty.

The council, hoping to avert the perils which action against Germany would entail, then invited Germany to come to London and state her case before the tribunal of the 50-odd nations in the league.

Joseph Avenol, secretary-general of the league, sent the following invitation to Berlin:

"The council of the league of nations invited Germany as a contracting party to the treaty of Locarno, to take part in the examination by the council of the question of communications to the French and Belgium governments.

"The council will meet at St. James Palace on Monday, March 16 at 3:30 p. m."

The invitation was regarded as an important conciliatory move, but there was grave doubt if Germany would accept it. After the council meeting a secret session was held at which France, Roumania and Turkey attached an unwritten reservation to the invitation which would make it difficult for Hitler to accept. Foreign Minister Pierre Flandin of France, Nicholas Titulescu of Roumania and the minister of Turkey insisted that if Hitler accepted the invitation Germany must assume the obligations of league membership if she is to sit at the council table.

Capt. Anthony Eden of Great Britain, chief sponsor of the invitation sat silent while the ministers of France, Roumania and Turkey sought to place restrictions on the invitation. Finally the short, formal note was drafted and nobody challenged the reservations of the three powers.

Another possible bar to Germany's acceptance was the fact that the invitation was not, as at first proposed, based on Article 17 of the league covenant which provides for participation in the league's deliberations of any party to the dispute.

Man Whose Skeleton Hung From Tree

H. L. McBee, for whose death, Raymond and Della Henry with Lynn and Jack Smith are charged with murder. McBee is shown above with a son who then was four and one-half years old and is now 10. Two youths were startled in December, 1934, when they discovered the skeleton of McBee hanging from a tree near Rising Star while hunting rabbits. McBee was 42 at the time of his death, which the state contends was May 1, 1933.

Construction of Trench Silos in County Advoated by Extension Dairy Expert

Construction of trench silos in Eastland County as a means for conservation of feed and improvement of stock was advocated by E. R. Eudaly, extension service specialist, of College Station, at a Chamber of Commerce meeting Friday night at Eastland and at a dairyman-stockman assembly in the courthouse Saturday morning.

With other agricultural experts of the district and county, Eudaly addressed 40 at the commerce meeting at the Connellee hotel and a similar number at the courthouse.

By experimentation, said Eudaly, 4,000 trench silos in Texas have proven their worth as a cheaper method to preserve feed.

Preservation of feed in silos retains water, essential to cattle and other stock, in the feed, the dairy specialist declared.

Eudaly contrasted the trench silo method with placing of feed in stacks where it is open to the weather with resulting depredation by the weather.

He termed trench silos "canned pasturage." Years of storage of feed in that manner is immaterial, Eudaly stated, saying that feed

Wife, Husband in McBee Death Case

Della and Raymond Henry, charged by indictment with the death of H. L. McBee, her former husband, at Rising Star May 1, 1933. Mrs. Henry is the former wife of the man for whose death she faces trial with three others in the 88th district court Monday, March 30.

PERSONNEL OF VENIRES DRAWN SHOWN

Cases Set For Trial In 88th District Court For Monday, Mar. 30.

Original indictments charging Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Henry with murder in the death of H. L. McBee at Rising Star, May 1, 1933, were dismissed in 91st district court upon motion of Criminal District Attorney Grady Owen Friday.

The indictments, returned Feb. 1, 1935, alleged death by "hanging" and a "sharp instrument." Indictments returned March 3 alleged death by an ice pick.

Indictments against Jack and Lynn Smith allege death of McBee by an ice pick and aiding Raymond Henry.

Bonds of $10,000 for Henry and $3,000 each for other defendants were set Friday by Eighty-eighth District Court Judge B. W. Patterson in whose court the cases are set for March 30. None had made bond Saturday.

Four special venires of 100 names each have been drawn for the H. L. McBee "hanging skeleton" slaying cases which have been set for trial March 30 in the 88th district court.

Defendants in the cases are Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Henry and

Art Classes to Be Added to Adult School Program

An art class will be added to the various subjects now being taught in Ranger adult school, Mrs. Helen Colman, a new teacher transferred from the Temple adult school, is making plans to start the class the week following the cooking school, Monday, March 23.

Mrs. Colman is a student of John Tarleton College and Greeley (Colorado) Teachers College, and a student of the Parisian artist, Miss Sally Kyle, and Mrs. Harvey Watkins of Temple. An easy technique of handling oil paints that anyone can follow will be taught.

Everyone is eligible to join this class with the exception of those enrolled in school or under the age of 16.

For the convenience of many housewives, the class will be held in the afternoons from 1:30 to 4:30. Announcement will be made at a later date where the class will be held.

Eastland Man Recovers $370 By Honesty Act

Ed F. Willman, Eastland postal clerk, is convinced that there are honest people.

Enroute to the Eastland National bank to make a deposit Friday afternoon he dropped $370 in checks and money in front of the J. C. Penney store.

Mrs. Ed Hayslip, passing by the store several minutes later, saw the roll of bills and checks which were bound by a rubber band and gave them to Police Chief W. J. Peters, asking that he find the owner.

The chief didn't experience difficulty in finding the loser, noticing that many checks were made out to Frank A. Jones, Eastland postmaster, and later saw Willman retracing his steps "as white as a sheet."

HEARST SAYS PRESS RIGHT IS THREATENED

By United Press

WASHINGTON, March 14.—A deputy United States marshal patrolled the capital tonight hunting senate lobby committee members who were ordered by the District of Columbia court to answer an injunction suit by William Randolph Hearst.

The lobby committee members and the federal communications commission were named by the publisher in a petition for an injunction which charged conspiracy to violate the freedom of the press in connection with the lobby inquiry.

The Hearst plea charged that his constitutional rights were violated by the committee efforts to obtain telegrams sent by Hearst and his associates. The court order called on committeemen to answer Hearst's complaint within 20 days.

County Awaiting Towns' Decision On Relief Set-Up

Commissioners' court Saturday awaited decisions of the Ranger ad Eastland city commissions, two of three groups with whom it contemplates employment of three case workers to supervise distribution of commodities and ascertain applicants' eligibility, on agreement to pay a portion of the expense in the plan. Cisco already has agreed.

The move is being taken by the commissioners' court since notice has been given of the expiration of Texas relief commission funds in the near future.

County Judge Clyde L. Garrett explained the county will pay one-half and Ranger, Cisco and Eastland the remainder.

Selection of case workers, subject to approval of the T. R. C., would be made by each town.

Surplus commmodities are available from the expiring T. R. C. Allotment of clothes manufactured in Works Progress Administration sewing rooms also has been advanced as a function of the workers.

The commissioners in session Saturday stated persons eligible to receive the commodities would not necessarily have to be former relief clients.

BORAH SAYS STANDARD OIL IS IN POLITICS

By United Press

WASHINGTON, Mar. 14.—Senator William E. Borah accused the Standard Oil Company tonight of "attempting to dominate political interests" and pledged to "drive it out of republican politics."

In a statement, Borah, liberal candidate for the republican nomination, said he had been informed of tactics of the company in Oklahoma and suggested the question be referred to a senate campaign investigating committee.

Borah's statement, an indirect assault upon Gov. Alf Landon of Kansas, because of the latter's background in the oil industry, coincided with reports a quiet but powerful presidential boom is being started on behalf of Gen. L. J. Dickinson of Iowa. It was understood that former President Herbert Hoover was supporting the Dickinson candidacy.

Allen D. Dabney of Eastland, special prosecutor in the case, has been notified of the setting.

Members of 4-H Clubs of County To Attend Show

One hundred and forty 4-H club boys and girls, portion of the membership of 13 organizations in Eastland county, will leave Monday for Fort Worth, where they will be guests of the Southwestern Exposition and Fat Stock Show officials.

The Eastland county group will be among 8,000 of the state who are expected for the special day.

Colony members, to travel in a school bus, will total over 60, about 25 from New Hope and the remainder of the group from other organizations.

Schedule calls for departure at 9 a. m., inspection of a packing plant, participation in parade at the arena and round-up of the day's activities after visits to exhibits at 5:30.

County Agent Elmo V. Cook, Assistant Agent Hugh F. Barnhardt and Home Demonstration Agent Miss Ruth Ramey also will attend.

Gloria Vanderbilt Case In High Court

By United Press

WASHINGTON, March 14.—Mrs. Gertrude Vanderbilt Whitney, seeking to retain custody of little Gloria Vanderbilt, filed charges in supreme court today by "evidence of immorality" against the child's mother, Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt.

Mrs. Whitney filed her case in response to Mrs. Vanderbilt's plea the high tribunal overrule a New York state court, which refused the mother custody of the child.

Madrid Peaceful After Fresh Riots

By United Press

MADRID, March 14.—Madrid was peaceful tonight after three hours of rioting when armed Communists and Socialist incendiarists threatened to raze the heart of the capital.

Guards were instructed to scatter all groups forming to resume the violent outbreaks that resulted in one death and the burning of two churches, a convent and a newspaper.

Bond is Posted in Hidalgo County's Voting "Scandal"

By United Press

EDINBURGH.—Further reverberations from the famous "absentee voting scandal" of the Hidalgo county 1934 primary elections were heard this week as the sheriff's department announced posting of bond of $2,500 by O. V. Bridges, former chief deputy county clerk, on a charge of "procuring an illegal vote to be cast."

Bridges was running for the office of county judge in the 1934 primary when it was ascertained that changes appeared to have been made in certain absentee ballots. Testimony obtained during courts of inquiry on the matter indicated falsification of absentee ballots and other irregularities.

The true bill against Bridges is the only one announced to date, although it was learned that nine similar indictments have also been returned by the January term grand jury in Judge Bryce Ferguson's 92nd Criminal District court. Of the latter, four charge unnamed defendants with "procuring an illegal vote to be cast" and five charge unnamed defendants with "giving false certificates."

Ed T. Cox Sides With Charley Prestige In Location of Old Historic Landmark

Location of the Schmick schoolhouse as advanced by Charles M. Prestidge of Gorman Rt. 3 in a recent letter to this paper is agreed on by Ed T. Cox of Eastland, who writes:

"In an article published in your paper some time ago, I stated that Schmick school house, the place where the first district court in Eastland county was held, was located between Mansker's Lake and the Leon River. In a subsequent issue Charley Prestige challenged this statement of mine and stated that the schoolhouse mentioned, and the only schoolhouse ever known as Schmick's schoolhouse, was east of the lake and south of Jim Hart's residence.

"I had been led to believe that the location was where I stated, but when I read Mr. Prestige's letter I was convinced that I was wrong and took the opportunity to consult others who were residents of the county at that time and acquainted with the facts and find them unanimous in their statements that it stood where Mr. Prestige said that it did.

"It seems that after this build-

McCraw Predicts Stricter Oil Laws

By United Press

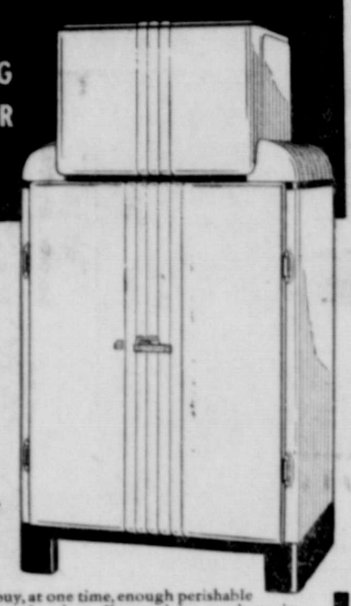

AUSTIN, March 14.—Stricter enforcement of laws governing fugitive oil was predicted today by Attorney General William McCraw as the result of an Austin court of appeals ruling in the suit for injunction by C. C. Morgan, captor of oil on Rabbit Creek in Gregg county.

McCraw said about 250,000 barrels of fugitive East Texas oil was now tied up in litigation. The opinion adopted by the appeals court Wednesday upset a district court ruling that Morgan was entitled to tenders on 14,580 barrels of oil.

Sport Glances. . . . . .By Grayson

WITH James J Braddock as champion, the white hope movement may be a bit premature, but it's progressing nicely just the same

When young Hank Bath stubbed his toe a couple of times, Jack Kearns decided to fight Joe Louis, the Black Menace, with a Black Menace of his own. Kearns' Black Menace is one Lorenzo Pack, who, like Louis, registers from Detroit. He can fight a bit.

But if Louis beats Braddock, as almost everybody suspects he will, it will be a white hope who will get the more important money. And so the search goes on.

Phil Brubaker, a boy who studied to be a minister at little College of the Pacific, is by far the best of the newer crop of heavyweights. He starched Fred Lenhart in four punches and dropped King Levinsky in winning a decision. He boxes like blazes and can punch.

* * *

CLARENCE RED BURMAN of Baltimore is slowly adopting the Jack Dempsey style. He has come along well in 50 fights in three years.

Joe Lipps of Tyty, Ga., has made several nice starts in Madison Square Garden.

Billy Treest of Chicago appears formidable.

Max Marek, the former Notre Dame student who took a decision from Louis as an amateur, is plugging along.

Lew Tendler, who fought it out with Benny Leonard, nominates Al Ettore, a chunky Philadelphian who twice beat Leroy Hughes, a tough Negro, in Philadelphia and repelled Eddie Mader in the Garden.

Bob Towe of Washington somewhat resembles Gene Tunney

Boo Boo Hoff of Philadelphia has Jack Hiller, a lanky plasterer who scored a knockout in Dempsey's first New York tournament after being on the deck.

Charley Cook, who guided Floyd Johnson, has Stanley Hasrato, a 20-year-old Yonkers high school athlete who is full of fight.

* * *

Steve Dudas, a New Jersey lad who gave up a college football career to fight, is a swinging, plunging heavyweight. Dudas is game and strong and has been winning regularly.

Eddie Anderson of Flint stopped his opponent in Dempsey's initial New York tournament.

There'll be more as the months roll on, for there's a real pot of gold waiting for a large white fellow who can keep his pins and punch a bit.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SERVICE

"Substance" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist on Sunday, March 15.

The Golden Text is: "Honour the Lord with thy substance, and with the firstfruits of all time increase" (Proverbs 3:9).

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "Thy throne is established of old: thou art from everlastng" (Psalms 93:2).

The Lesson-Sermon includes also the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Substance is that which is eternal and incapable of discord and decay. Truth, Life, and Love are substance, as the Scriptures use this word in Hebrews: 'The substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen'" (page 469).

S. R. Wood is Maytag distributor for this county.

T. S. "Tip" Ross To Be Candidate For Representative

T. S. "Tip" Ross of Gorman has authorized this paper to announce his candidacy for the position of flotorial representative of the 107th district, subject to the action of the democratic primary of July 25.

The candidate has been a resident of Gorman for 18 years, having moved to Gorman from Comanche county, where he was born.

From 1910 through 1915 he served as representative from Comanche county, running the last two times without opposition. While in the legislature he was the auther of many constructive measures which are still on the statute books of the state.

In announcing his candidacy Ross stated that he would make an active campaign and would endeavor to see every voter in the district before the July primary. He will have an official statement to make through the columns of this paper at a later date.

Shakespeare Hasn't Enough Humor For Roumanian Peasants

By United Press

TEMESVAR, Roumania, March 14.—William Shakespeare had better keep away from this section unless he puts more laughs in his plays.

A peasant audience interrupted a performance of King Lear "because there was nothing to laugh at." The stage manager, having a brilliant idea, sent a jester before the curtain to appear as Shakespeare and explain the play.

"You are a crook to write words which do not give good laughs for our good money," the peasants shouted at him. He left the stage hurriedly.

Allred Believes In New Parole Boards

By United Press

AUSTIN, March 14.—Success of the voluntary parole board system was seen today by Governor Allred in an address to their conference.

"The eyes of the nation are upon this experiment. Many have said it is bound to failure because we have no paid officers. In my judgment that is its chief asset," the governor said.

Detroit taxicab drivers, victimized in a series of holdups, must have found it harrowing to watch such crude technique.

Co-Eds Dispute on Records on History

Safety Comes First in the Ford V·8

A SAFE CAR helps make a safe driver.

There is no compromise with safety in the Ford V-8 for 1936.

Ford safety begins with the desire to make a safe car, regardless of cost. It is carried through every detail of design and construction.

Ford safety, therefore, is not merely the safety of dependable brakes. It goes farther than that and includes a genuine welded steel body structure and Safety Glass throughout at no extra cost. An additional point is that its steadiness and instant response help you to avoid trouble.

Every driver is a better driver in the Ford because of its ease of handling and the alert, capable performance of the V-8 engine.

The 1936 Ford brings you safety, beauty, comfort and roominess as outstanding as its V-8 performance. Many modern features put it in a class by itself in value and satisfaction.

$510 AND UP F. O. B. Detroit. Fifteen body types. Standard accessory group, including bumpers and spare tire, extra. Convenient, economical terms. You can now buy any new Ford V-8 car for the usual low down-payment and $25 a month. Ask the nearest Ford dealer for complete details of the new UCC ½% per month Finance Plans.

Every Woman
SHOULD KNOW THE FACTS ABOUT THIS
Air-Conditioned Refrigerator

WISE WOMEN everywhere are fast learning about the new air-conditioned refrigerator . . . just like the one on display at the Cooking School. This refrigerator is so new, so different, it will change all your ideas of food refrigeration . . . no need to cover dishes, for there is no mingling of food odors, no drying out. Foods stay fresh and natural-tasting.

How does it work? Very simple . . . no moving parts or mechanism . . . the patent air-conditioned chamber sets up a natural flow of air around every shelf and in the food compartment.

This amazing feature not only absorbs and washes away food odors, but keeps the air constantly cold, healthful, humidified.

What kind of refrigerant? Uses ICE . . . but in an entirely different way. Through a remarkable new feature, you always have constant cold temperature in the food compartment, whether the ice chamber is full or nearly empty. You need re-ice but once every 4 to 7 days.

One Woman Said:
"It is the only refrigerator that I know of that will keep your foods fresh and your fruit and vegetables crisp without drying them out." See your ice man as soon as possible.

Ways Pensioners Can Prove Ages Are Listed Here

AUSTIN—Facing old-age assistance applicants will be the difficulty of proving their ages, Orville Carpenter, executive director of the old age assistance commission, said today when asked what he thought the most difficult problem old people making application. Application forms will be distributed to cities and towns over the state and will be available to those who want them Feb. 14, when the law goes into effect. As required by the new law, certain facts must be established by the applicant. The law grants assistance to the needy who are 65 years of age or more, and each applicant must definitely and conclusively prove his or her age.

"There are many ways by which a person can establish his age," Director Carpenter stated. "The commission will consider any evidence that proves or helps to establish definitely the age of the applicant. However, it will be necessary in each case for the applicant to establish to the satisfaction of the commission, by whatever means he can, that he is 65 years of age."

A number of kinds of evidence to be used in proving age are the following:

1. Birth certificates.
2. Marriage certificates giving the ages of both parties.
3. Birth certificates of children giving age of parents.
4. Ages of sons and daughters when these are sufficiently advanced.
5. Naturalization papers giving age at time of applying for same.
6. Passports. Service books of immigrants.
7. County records. Baptismal certificates.
8. Insurance papers.
9. Employment records.
10. School records.
11. Records of trade unions, fraternal societies, or other organizations.
12. Federal or state records in the case of those who have been in civil or military service.
13. D. A. R., U. D. S., Daughters of Texas Revolution, etc.
14. Hospital records, or those of physicians.
15. Vaccination certificates.
16. Poll tax receipts that show the actual age of voter and not mere fact that he has passed a certain age.
17. Local census records which may give birth date and place. National census records, department of census, Washington, D. C.
18. Old licenses of various kinds (such as hunting, fishing, and liquor licenses) sometimes carrying age.
19. Tombstone records when stones have been erected in anticipation of death.
20. Entries in a family Bible or other genealogical records or memoranda of families of applicants.
21. Bills of sale as a slave in the case of aged negroes.
22. Such other evidence as the old age assistance commission may approve.

Superfex Farm Refrigeration Is Held to $10 a Year

New 1936 models of Superfex, the oil-burning refrigerator, brings rural homes dependable refrigeration at a maximum cost of $10 per year, Floyd Killingsworth, manager of the Killingsworth, Cox & Co., announced today.

The new models, manufactured by the Perfection Stove Company, are designed for rural communities not served by electricity, Killingsworth pointed out. They are, he said, without doubt the most beautiful mechanical refrigerators of any make placed on the market as well as the most efficient and economical.

"Superfex brings new beauty to your home—rhythm of graceful form and soft color designed to harmonize with good taste in any kitchen," he said.

"One great point in Superfex superiority is the simple and accessible oil burner set. Because they operate only about two hours daily, they discharge no heat in the kitchen during the 22 hours they are not operating. Their ultra modern features include handy racks on the door, trip-latch that opens the door when it is pressed lightly, an abundance of ice cubes and year-round uninterrupted service.

"We want the public to see these and many other Superfex advantages and have placed a coupon in our advertisement on page eight of this paper, which if you will fill out and mail to us will bring a Superfex dealer to demonstrate the refrigerator in your home."

Mid-Week Dinner To Be Served On Sunday at Saving

J. H. Nottingham, proprietor of the Gholson Coffee Shop, has announced that he will have his regular mid-week luncheons served on Sunday at one-third less than the regular price for the meal.

The same meal, the same service and attention to the wants of the customers will be offered on the Sunday special as is regularly given, Nottingham said in announcing the special offer.

Tabasco—What Is Is and How it Was Originated

In 1852 a man by the name of Gleason (who had been with General Scott during the capture of Mexico City in 1847 and who had remained in Mexico after the close of the Mexican war with the United States) came to New Orleans, and while there gave to Mr. E. McIlhenny the seeds of some peppers, which he said had an especially fine flavor, and grew in the State of Tabasco, Mexico. These pepper seeds were planted by Mr. McIlhenny at the family plantation, Avery Island, near New Iberia, and the quality of the peppers was so good that he continued to grow them year by year in the kitchen garden for table use, as both he and his father-in-law, Judge Avery, were fond of highly seasoned food.

During the war between the North and South, and after the occupation of Louisiana by the federal troops, the Avery and McIlhenny families were banished from their home state and sent by General Banks to Austin, Texas, but returned to their plantation home at Avery Island at the close of the war. Like all Southerners these two families were financially ruined by the war, and being without funds with which to buy the things that help to make food tasty, Mr. McIlhenny began experimenting with making condiments from the herbs and peppers found growing about the old home. Among other plants that had survived the lack of cultivation during his absence were some pepper bushes like those that grew from the seed Gleason had given him. With the pulp of these peppers as a base, he made a hot aromatic sauce for table use, and give some of it to his friends, who liked it so much that Mr. McIlhenny continued making it. Among those who tried the sauce and liked it was General Hazzard, who was federal administrator for Southern Louisiana. General Hazzard induced Mr. McIlhenny to make a sufficient amount of the sauce, so he could take some north on his next trip. This was done, and General Hazzard gave some of the sauce to his brother, E. C. Hazzard, who was head of the largest wholesale grocery house in New York. Mr. E. C. Hazzard was so impressed with the value of the sauce as a food seasoner, that he got in touch with McIlhenny and induced him to pack the sauce for market and give his firm the agency for its distribution in the United States. Mr. McIlhenny consented to do this, and in 1868 Tabasco sauce put up in New Iberia, La., was offered the public.

Since that time, Tabasco, through its high value as a piquant seasoning has become world wide in its distribution.

In 1872, an agency was established in London for marketing Tabasco in Europe, and this sauce on each bottle of which the words, Tabasco, New Iberia, La., are printed, can now be found in every civilized country in the world. An instance showing the wide distribution of Tabasco is given in Lord Kitchmer's report to the British government after his conquest of Kartoum. This report states Tabasco was found further in the desert than any other civilized food product.

Tabasco is a pure pepper sauce made without cooking, but by fermentation in oaken casks, and it requires the heat of two summers to properly ferment it, and give it its mellow delightful flavor. Tabasco is especially valuable for seasoning eggs. As the English say, "It makes a good egg better and a bad egg good."

Tabasco has the greatest value when used in the kitchen. A few drops in your gravies gives the meat an exceptionally fine flavor. It also adds a wonderful flavor to mashed potatoes or when used in connection with butter on baked potatoes. When cooking eggs in any form Tabasco should always be used in order to bring out the highest flavor of the egg. A little Tabasco in soups when cooking adds greatly to their palatableness. On the table a few drops in your breakfast eggs and milk changes the flavor to such an extent that the food is much more palatable.

This sauce has the widest distribution of any food product in the world.

"Grecian women counted their ages from the day of their marriage." Or approximately about the time American women stop counting them.

Miss Jessie Hogue, who is conducting Ranger Times Free Cooking School, said Saturday: "Now is the time to have your mattresses remade and renovated." You know there has been so much flu the past winter it will certainly be real economy and might save a doctor bill by having Mr. Herwick call and take the old mattress to a real cleaning."

"For Better Meals

Cook WITH GAS"

"The tastiness, nourishing qualities and healthfulness of foods depends to a large extent upon the cooking method used. That is why the selection of cooking equipment is so important to the housewife.

"I prefer to cook with GAS for the following reasons: First, because it is faster and prevents delays that might result in cooking failures. Second, because it is more flexible and gives one a wide range of temperatures for accuracy in cooking. Last, but not least, because it is cheaper. The saving in fuel costs enables one to prepare better foods and more of it. All of this results in tastier meals and a happier, more contented family."

Rain Forecasts In New England Are Cause For Alarm

By United Press

—BOSTON, March 14.—Forecasts of rain carried a threat tonight of still worse floods in northeastern states and parts of Canada.

The death toll already was approaching 60 and 10,000 have been driven from homes. Property damage runs into the millions.

New England rivers receded slightly this morning. Floods were also abating in the Hudson valley in New York.

The forecast of rain caused apprehension. Officials considered appealing for army bombing planes to break ice jams which backed up the flood waters in New England. It was estimated 75,000 New Englanders were left jobless by inundation of mills.

Better Treatment For Ex-Convicts Is Urged By Expert

AUSTIN, March 14.—Sensible treatment of ex-convicts was urged tonight by Frank Loveland, classification expert now working in the Texas prison system, and Reed Cozart, U. S. jrozation officer at San Antonio.

Loveland recommended this state to be among the first to study penal classification and segregation. The records, he said, will be helpful to parole and pardon officials.

Trench Silos—

stored for 11 years has been known to be in perfect condition.

Preservation of feed in silos increases production of cattle, Eudaly stated. The speaker declared that water is all important and is disregarded as an essential for cattle.

Heretofore unannounced findings, a result of his experimentation, showed that yellow milo heads can be kept in silos to good advantage. He stated two tons placed in a trench silo last fall and opened two weeks ago revealed the feed in perfect condition.

Peanuts, too, can be kept in trench silos, the speaker explained. He added that it would be necessary to pour a mixture of syrup and water over the nuts.

Eudaly advised dairymen and stockmen to give cattle cool water in summer and warm water in winter. Unless cattle drink sufficient water, the production, as well as with hens, will be off, he said. Building of a shade over the troughs in summer and warming of water in winter were recommended.

His valuation of trench silos was expressed in the advise to "bury everything."

Miss Maurine Hearn, District 7 Home Demonstration Agent, of College Station intimated that an assistant to County Home Demonstration Agent Miss Ruth Ramey will be employed following completion of arrangements with commissioner's course and the extension service.

Miss Ramey recommended immediate formation of plans for the county fair. Other speakers at the commerce meet included County Agent Elmo V. Cook. Assistant Agent Hugh F. Barnhardt and District Agent C. E. Bowles, also of College Station.

Hamilton McRae presided at the Commerce meeting.

There are no trench silos in Eastland County, the county agent's office reported.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

TOBY RYAN, 19, works behind the jewelry counter of a large Manhattan department store. On her way to work during the crowded morning rush hour Toby collides with a good-looking young man. She murmurs apologies and hurries on.

Later that morning she poses for some photographs to be used in a store advertisement and MARTY BRATT, the photographer, tells her she has a "camera face." He selected her instead of MAURINE HALL to pose for the pictures and Maurine is jealous.

Toby leaves the store at 5:30 and meets BILL BRANDT. Bill works in an advertising agency. They go to dinner.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER IV

IT was just an ordinary February day like a dozen others. Toby didn't see anything unusual about it as she hurried to the subway station. There was time enough this morning, but hurrying had become a habit. Besides, the air was cold and damp and it was slushy underfoot. Toby was glad to reach the store.

She had a customer almost as soon as the doors were opened. From then on, the morning routine was just as it had been the day before. Toby lunched in the employes' cafeteria and wondered why it was that the pea soup tasted exactly like the bean soup the day before and the cream of vegetable soup the day before that. The prune pudding was good, though. She had an extra cup of coffee and talked for five minutes with a girl who had been transferred, two weeks before, from the jewelry department to the fourth floor misses' wear.

Promptly at 1:15 Toby was back at her counter. So far, nothing had happened to set that February day apart from any other.

Gladys Sorensen ate lunch at the sandwich shop around the corner and came back to report that it was growing colder outside. "Wouldn't surprise me," she said, "if it's snowing by 5 o'clock."

Toby said, "Ugh! I hope not," and wished that she owned a pair of galoshes.

Gladys, who had a fondness for discussions of the weather, went on. "Last year, just about this time, we had that terrible snow storm. It lasted for three days. Don't you remember—?"

Glady's reminiscences were cut short by the approach of a customer, and Toby moved away. Business, oddly enough, was not so brisk during the early afternoon as it had been through the morning.

• • •

IT was while Toby was showing the new white and jade compacts to a woman wearing a leopard coat that she noticed the young man. Involuntarily Toby's eyes raised. Then she lowered them quickly. It was the same young man—no doubt about it. The one she had bumped into on her way to work the day before. He was standing less than a dozen feet away.

Toby said, without looking up, "It's really the nicest compact we have. The medallion is real jade—"

The woman in the leopard coat interrupted. "Yes, it's very attractive. You said the price is $4.98, didn't you?"

"That's right. Four ninety eight."

"I'll take it," the woman announced. She opened her handbag, drawing out a coin purse. Abruptly she stopped. "Oh," she exclaimed, "I'd forgotten. I meant to cash a check this morning." She stared at Toby, went on hurriedly

The glittering handful was worth more than $250.

"I haven't the money to pay for the compact. Could you have it wrapped and hold it for me? I'll be back within an hour or so."

"Why, certainly," Toby agreed. "I'll have it ready for you. I'm Miss Ryan. If you don't see me, just ask one of the other girls—"

The woman smiled. "Thank you," she said. "I'll remember." As she moved away she repeated, "I'll be back within an hour."

"Miss Ryan?"

She hadn't expected to hear her name, and looked up, startled. The young man—yes, it was the same one, all right; the brown eyes, the gray hat, the tweed topcoat all checked—stood directly before her. he asked.

"You are Miss Ryan, aren't you?"

"Why—why, yes."

He smiled, looking very well pleased with himself. "That's what I thought you said," he told her. "I heard you talking to that woman"—nodding in the direction in which the woman in the leopard coat had gone. "You know, you rushed away in such a hurry yesterday—"

Toby met his eyes. She looked as though she were about to rush away a second time, but instead she said, "You'll have to go. I can't stand here talking. We're not allowed—"

"But just a minute — please—" the young man began.

"I'm sorry," Toby said firmly "it's against the store rules."

"What is?"

"Talking."

His face showed amazement. "You mean you can't talk—not ever, not to anyone?"

• • •

IT did sound ridiculous and Toby couldn't help smiling. She said, a little more kindly, "Only to customers."

"Oh—then that's all right. I'm a customer."

"Are you?" she asked. "What is it you want?"

The brown eyes twinkled. "That's a large order," the young man said, "but I'll begin. First of all, your full name, address, telephone number—"

Toby backed away. "Excuse me," she said coolly, "I thought you were a customer."

"But I am! I mean I want to be. I want—" The young man looked about him. His eyes lighted on a tray of rhinestone clips. "Those," he finished triumphantly. "I want those."

"You mean those clips?"

He nodded. "Clips," he said. "Is that what they are? Yes, I want them."

"All of them?"

"Yes."

"But—there are 20 of them."

"They're for sale, aren't they?"

"Yes."

"Then I want them."

Toby hesitated only an instant. Above the tray was a sign reading, "Genuine hand-set rhinestone clips, $2.98." Her pencil on her sales book, Toby said in her most business-like tone, "Will it be a cash or charge purchase?"

"Charge," the young man told her. "The name is Jamieson—Timothy Jamieson."

She wrote it down. "Twenty rhinestone clips at $2.98 each," she said. "That's—let's see—$59.60."

Tim Jamieson nodded. "Will you—er—have them sent?" The address he gave was one which even Toby knew was fashionable.

She nodded. "The package will be delivered in the morning, Mr. Jamieson. Thank you very much. And I hope you like your clips."

"But, see here—"

"Was there anything else you wanted?"

"Yes," he said, "there's something I want very much. I want you to have dinner with me tonight. I'll be waiting for you—any time you say. Or, if you'd rather, I'll pick you up somewhere—"

Toby smiled, but shook her head. "I'm sorry," she said. "I can't."

"Oh, but you'll change your mind! A girl like you couldn't be so hard-hearted. Now, listen, when the store closes I'll be waiting for you."

Toby didn't bother to object to that. A customer had paused at the other end of the counter and she hurried toward her. When she looked back a little later the young man was gone.

• • •

TOBY thought of the $59.60 in her sales book. It certainly wasn't every day that you made sales like that in the costume jewelry. Maybe she'd get a bonus this week. If she did, she could buy the shoes she needed and galoshes.

He really was a nice-looking young man. There was something about him that was rather—rather exciting. Oh, well, she'd never see him again. That was the end of that.

But the day that had begun in such an ordinary fashion had more in store for Toby Ryan — much more.

The oddest thing about it was that it all happened so naturally. It was a few minutes past 3 when Miss Burrows, the jewelry buyer, approached Toby. "The artists have finished with those watches we sent up to have sketched for the Saturday advertisement," she said. "Will you go up and bring them down? Ask for Mr. Keller. He'll get them for you."

Toby said, "Yes, Miss Burrows."

She knew exactly what to do; she had gone on such errands before. Toby stepped into the elevator and said, "Ninth floor." She liked going to the advertising office. It was so different from the rows and rows of counters on the first floor.

She entered the big room, hesitated, and then went up to the nearest desk. "Is Mr. Keller here?" Toby asked.

The door of a private office opened just then and a man stepped out. It was Mr. Keller, the art director, and Toby recognized him.

She hurried forward. "Miss Burrows sent me for the watches that were sketched," she said.

"Oh, yes." The art director crossed to a desk, picked up four tiny watches attached to bracelets. Three of them were yellow gold discs. The fourth was the handsome "debutante special," white gold with tiny diamonds glistening on either side of the oblong face. "Here they are," he said, and put them in Toby's hand.

She looked down at the watches. The glistening handful she knew was worth something like $250.

Priceless Mirror on Way West

Loaded on an underslung flat car as hundreds watched, the huge crate containing astronomy's $6,000,000 telescope mirror is shown here, as its guardians prepared to leave Corning, N. Y., for the trip to California. The 200-inch mirror will be taken to the California Institute of Technology at Pasadena, where it will be ground to perfection, an operation requiring three to four years. Then it will be placed in the world's largest telescope in Mount Palomar observatory.

H. H. Vaughn Puts In Complete Line Alemite Greases

H. H. Vaughn has just completed installation of a complete Alemite system at his filling station at the corner of Pine and Austin streets, and now offers the most complete service that can be obtained for cars.

The equipment includes a full line of air and grease guns, with a separate gun for every kind of greasing job. He also handles all kinds of shock absorber fluid and fluid for knee-action wheels, and is prepared to thoroughly service any kind of car with the proper grease or oils, as his stock is most complete.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank our friends and neighbors for their acts of kindness and sympathy extended during the recent bereavement, the loss of our father, S. W. Pruett. Also thanks are expressed for the lovely floral offering.—E. Pruett and Other Children.

Weather Seer Sees Four Cold Years

By United Press

CANTON, Mass.— H. Helm Clayton squinted at the sun the other day and hazarded a guess:

That the region east of the Mississippi, if not all the region east of the Rockies, will be colder from 1936 to 1940.

That the driest years in the East are to be expected between 1944 and 1949.

Clayton, known widely as a long-range weather forecaster, bases his predictions on sunspot cycles and data accumulated by weather bureaus in the last 150 years.

LEGIONNAIRES AND THE STORY OF THEIR WORLD WAR SERVICE

OTIS R. BRADY

Editor's Note: This is the seventh of a series of war biographies being written by B. H. Peacock, commander of the American Legion Post of Ranger, covering the experiences of members of the local post. The biography of another veteran will appear in next Sunday's issue.

* * *

Should there have been provision for the casting of a medal or the rendering of a citation for the most cheerful soldier who, together with many other disabled buddies throughout the land who are still fighting the battles of the Great War, surely that medal or that citation would go to our beloved friend and buddy, Otis Rollo Brady of Caddo road, Ranger, Texas. Never a visit to his bedside but that a smile, a cheery word or an optimistic note is forthcoming from this veteran of the Vosges, St. Mihiel, the Argonne, and Verdun. In peace, just as in war, he still fights, with the determination and enthusiasm of youth itself, the seemingly, never-ending battle. Day in and day out, week in and week out, month in and month out, he continues the fight, lying patiently but hopefully, looking forward with a hope of getting well from a deep seated affliction of rheumatism and arthritis, which developed, according to the doctors, after his body had become weakened from long hard marches under heavy pack and in the muck and mire of the trenches in France. He has been bed-fast since Aug. 2, 1933, but it is the frank opinion of the writer that the undefeatable courage and optimistic attitude of this soldier will be the determining factor that will again see him on his feet and mingling once more with his great host of friends.

This photograph was made of Private Brady while at Camp Doniphan, Oklahoma, in 1917, prior to going overseas. At that time, he was a picture of health, weighing 165 pounds.

Otis R. Brady was born on Sept. 6, 1890, in the city of Livingston, Ill., where, as he smilingly remarked, "they catch the mail on the hook." The teachings of a wonderful mother, and of a splendid father—a brick mason and plasterer by trade—left its indelible stamp upon the youth. But it was when only 11 years of age, the day following the murder of President McKinley on Sept. 6, 1901, that a certain experience of young Brady's left with him a conviction that no doubt shaped his future. His teacher, a Mrs. Dement, whom he loved and appreciated, made such a wonderfully patriotic address eulogizing the martyred president and his great American qualities of loyalty and citizenship as opposed to radicalism and alienism, that these principles of freedom and justice became a part and parcel of this young man.

After finishing school, Brady went first to Pontiac, Ill., where he worked in a shoe factory, and later became an apprentice in his uncle's barber shop. He further pursued his adopted vocation of barbering in the cities of Indpendence, Kansas City, and Oak Grove, Mo.

But came the declaration of war against Germany in April, 1917. Scarcely had Uncle Sam begun to take inventory, or about six weeks after the declaration of war, when Brady, together with a number of his boyhood friends, enlisted on May 25, 1917, in Battery C, 129th Field Artillery, Missouri National Guard. The battery had just returned from the border, so it was only the natural thing that Brady and his friends should enter the service with those whom they knew in civilian life.

Battery C was federalized on Aug. 5, 1917, and shortly thereafter they departed for Camp Doniphan, near Fort Sill, Okla. From Oct. 26 to following May 10, 1918, army life at Camp Doniphan was very pleasant and uneventful, stated Brady. "I will always remember, however," he said in reminiscing, "those terrible dirt and sand storms. One day Kansas was blown in review, and a return engagement from Texas the next."

Soon, however, the outfit entrained for Camp Mills, and after a few days embarked about May 20, on an old English boat, the Saxonia for an unknown destination. Seventeen days on the water and one U-boat scare when about 100 miles out from Tilbury Docks, London, England. "The destroyer escore," said Brady, "had just contacted the convoy, when one of the boats, with the aid of an observation balloon, sighted the German submarine. The signal was for all of the ships to angle to the left. The destroyer then gave chase to the submarine, at the same time laying down a smoke screen for convoy protection. It dropped a number of depth bombs, and the rumor was spread to the effect that the U-boat had been sunk."

From all accounts, the meals, commonly known among the doughboys as "chow," was not so inviting during the trip across. Such delicacies as stewed jackrabbit and other English dishes, according to Brady, were not so "hot." So naturally, these American doughboys were glad to land and stretch a bit in the great city of London. Thence entraining for Westminster, and after two or three days to Southampton, and immediately thereafter embarking on the steamship Viper, landing at La Harve in France on June 8, 1918.

History was shortly to unfold itself to Battery "C" and Private Brady. Marching first to an English rest camp; thence to the French village of Andard where the outfit first received its famous "French Seventy-Fives," together with some horses. "We were the first American troops in this section of France," said Brady, "the boys were given a royal welcome, and everything was thrown wide open for the American Soldat." Shortly thereafter, on June 6, the battery marched to Brain, later to a chateau near Traleze; and thence to Guer, and Saulzures. A three days rest, and then again a march into German territory, known as the historical Alsace Loraine country. Many further weary hours of marching brought Private Brady and his battery across the Vosges mountains. It was on the night of Aug. 29 that the battery had taken up its position in the mountains in order to go into action. "It was a very hard night," said Brady. "The Germans were shelling our positions incessantly, but we returned the compliment in a barrage of gas shells which we sent over into their lines. And it was necessary that all of our movements should be done under cover of darkness. No lights could be used. That night we returned to our old position, and I will always remember it as the darkest on record, with a constant downpour of rain. As we wound around those strange mountain roads, we did not know at what minute we would veer too far to the right or left and be dashed to the bottom of a precipice. And believe me, that was an experience that tried the mettle in all of our boys."

But Battery C was soon to pass on from its scene of operations in the Vosges Mountains, marching thence past its rear eschelon at Kruth, on to Vagney, Remirement, and from there the outfit actually got a ride and entrained for Bayou, arriving at about 2:30 a. m. in a downpour of rain. Unloading, the boys began another hike. In the grey dawn, they could see the reserve trenches of the French along the road to their left and to their right. Upon the approach of daylight, the battery took shelter in a small ravine, putting the guns and caissons under shelter, preparing to rest for the day. About noon, however, a large German plane running the gauntlet of the Allied anti-aircraft guns headed directly toward the spot where Private Brady and several of his buddies were, and was met by a French scouting plane. "A battle ensued," said Brady, as his countenance seemed to brighten at the keen recollection of the incident. "The French pilot, in a Spad machine, looped the loop several times and his plane becoming disabled fell, nose down, about 300 meters away; the German, being disabled, landed about three kilometers distant and was captured. It seemed that about a thousand doughboys came out from nowhere and swarmed around the German plane. The French plane had become badly wrecked, the pilot being killed."

"The French pilot," related Brady, "was eating his noon day meal in his bunk not far from where Battery C was located, when the German appeared, and without even putting on his shirt and some of his other wearing apparel which he had just removed for convenience, he jumped into his plane and engaged in the mortal combat."

But the outfit was to move again, and again it was the tramp, tramp, tramp of marching feet that bespoke of more strain and hardships for Brady and his buddies. They passed through Coyvilliers, where they were billeted in barns; later through Nancy, where they were bivouaced in the woods nearby; thence through torrents of rain and mud shoe deep along a high ridge road. Here the outfit witnessed one of the greatest artillery duels the world had ever known; to their right and front the horizon was lighted up as though it were an electrical display. It was the great St. Mihiel drive. But in a few days it was again the march for Battery "C." The hike of September 15 proved to be the longest and hardest of all that Brady's outfit had thus far experienced. The horses were dying from exhaustion and exposure, feed was scarce and the roads were heavy. Carcasses of dead horses lined the roadside, and the men, carrying heavy packs, were footsore and weary. But further hikes brought them to Gery, and finally to their position on Hill 290 in the Argonne. "It was here," said Brady, "that our outfit experienced its first German barrage on the morning of September 25th, and it was here that Battery "C" was selected to accompany the infantry in their advance."

The battle of the Argonne was on, and here the much heralded "Hindenburg Line" of the Imperial German army met its Waterloo.

"At 1 A. M. of the 26th," said Brady, "the Allies began the great drive. In the far distance the horizon had the appearance of a severe electrical storm. Our guns were in action everywhere. The land was rolling in our sector, and it seemed as though the very hills opened up and commenced to belch fire. Hell had certainly broken loose and the greatest offensive the world had ever heard of was in progress."

But for Battery "C" it was next Boureuilles, then Cheppy, then Charpentry. After having taken cover in some old abandoned German trenches in an old orchard near the latter village, the battery immediately went into action.

"Here Private Selmo Fulton, a doughboy only 17 and the youngest in the battery, did himself and his outfit proud," recounted Brady. "For after seeing his gun crew and comrades all either killed or wounded, and himself knocked down by the concussion of a shell, Private Fulton began to load and fire the piece single handed, and continued until a new gun crew was formed to man the gun. He was later decorated," said Brady, "and believe me, I was just as proud of that boy as if it had been myself."

Another instance that Mr. Brady will long remember occurred on that same night when the outfit was being heavily shelled with high explosive and mustard gas projectiles. Private Brady on this occasion was operating the field telephone. Harold Welsh, a buddy, and one of a gun crew, came up and said, "You bald headed ——, come here and let me show you something." He thereupon took Brady to where a German 77 dud (unspent shell) had fallen to within twelve inches of a trench where were located about nine men. Said Welch, "With God on one side and the U. S. on the other, how can we lose?"

From the position of the battery near Ft. Rozellier in the Woevre sector of the world's famous Verdun front, Private Brady was transferred to forward observation duty as communications man and expert telephone operator. "Our observation post was located in full view of the enemy on the side of a mountain, but well camouflaged" commented Brady. "We worked two hours on and eight off. We used what was known as the scissorscope in observation, relaying the information regularly back to the artillery. On one occasion, we made an observation and reading on a large German gun about 15 kilos (12 miles) away, just as the gun belched forth its fire."

It was on or about October 3, as Mr. Brady recalls it, when his battery was relieved in the Argonne, that he was poisoned either from gas or food, and was sick for about thirty days. Due no doubt to the hardships of the campaign, and his corresponding decrease in bodily resistance, he lost in weight during that time from 160 to 125 pounds, and according to his own and the opinion of the doctors, his present physical condition is traceable to having been developed out of those days in France.

But came the armistice that ended the greatest of all wars. "At 11 A. M. on the morning of Nov. 11, 1918," said Mr. Brady, "the cessation of firing after all of the noise of the war was the stillest "still" of my entire career. It appeared to me a veritable deathly silence."

"And as for cooties," he further smilingly remarked, "they did not bother me after the Armistice because then I actually changed clothes occasionally."

Embarking at Brest, France on Easter Sunday in April, 1919—11 days on the water—good ship—good "eats." Battery C and its veterans landed in New York; back to Camp Mills for several days; a well-earned leave to take in the sights of New York; thence to Camp Funston and a discharge for Brady and his outfit on May 6, 1919. Nearly two years of soldiering for his country, and again with a spent and weakened body back to loved ones.

The wild stories of the fabulous wealth and the liquid gold of the Ranger oil fields lured Otis further west. He reached Ranger August 6, 1919, and went to work as a barber at the present Woolworth location where hung the slogan, "Where the Live Ones Long to Linger."

Later Mr. Brady was connected with the Southland Barber Shop, and still later as manager of the Texas Barber Shop on Austin street.

But the ravages of the Great War and those long hard marches in the muck and mire of France began to take its toll. On August 2, 1933, this veteran of the Vosges, of St. Mihiel, of the Argonne, and of Verdun, was ordered to bed by his physicians where he has remained to the present. His courage and determination to walk again among his friends and buddies has carried him to Hot Springs, Ark., to Dr. Locke at Williamsburg, Ont., Canada; to Mineral Wells and Marlin, Texas, and other places in seeking to regain that most precious of all jewels—his health.

Prior to his confinement, Mr. Brady was very active in the worthwhile things of his community. And it goes without saying that he was a part and parcel of the organization which now honors and respects him. Partially through his untiring efforts, money was raised to finace the remodelling of the present Ranger Legion home. He was also later honored by being appointed as secretary of the Texas State Elks who fights, in pease as in war, with of the First Methodist church of Ranger. Mr. Brady's family consists of his mother, Mrs. Carrie E. Brady, and one sister, Mrs. J. D. McLister. At this writing he has gone to the city of Marlin, Texas, from where he hopes (and his legion of friends trust) he may shortly return much improved and on the road to complete recovery.

Concluding, and expressing the sentiment of his host of friends and buddies, the toast might well be expressed, "To a real soldier—who fights, i peace as in war, with his face to the front, with a smile, and cheery word; full of ambition and hope—may health and happiness be his."

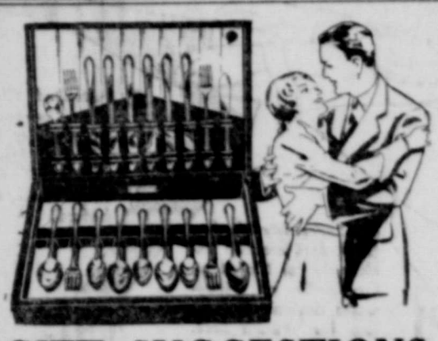

Representative Sol Bloom says Paul Revere's ride was never taken, which helps to clear up a long-standing doubt that the British ever came across.

Survey Will Cover Fifteen Counties

By United Press

LUBBOCK.—More than 13,500 square miles of territory in 15 South Plains counties will be covered in an archaeological survey to be made by NYA students of Texas Technological College, according to plans of Dr. W. C. Holden, instructor in anthropology and history.

Four persons from each county will make a surface survey of the area. The work will include artifact cataloguing, house-to-house canvassing to discover possible articles of value found by residents and card-indexing of items found by ordinary methods of research. The project has already been approved by NYA headquarters at Austin.

Will Shakespeare Wrote "The Dream" On Rush Assignment

"A Midsummer Night's Dream," coming to the Arcadia Theatre, Wednesday, March 18, for two showings, was written by Will Shakespeare on rush assignment. He dashed it off in six days as a compliment to a wealthy patron who was to be married amid "pomp and revelry."

"The Dream" was first mentioned by Frances Meres "Palladis Tamia," published in 1598, in a list of twelve of the bard's plays. It was first published in 1600 by Thomas Fisher, a young stationer in Fleet Street, London. Later, another and faulty copy was "pirated" by one James Roberts and it was this version which appeared in the famed folio of 1623.

Max Reinhardt was born in Raden, Austria, Sept. 8, 1873. Educated at Untergymnasium he began his dramatic studies under Emil Burde at 17. At 20 he entered the company at the Stadt Theatre, Salzburg, and won immediate acclaim for his portrayals of old men and his character acting. Otto Brahm, head of the Deutches theatre, signed him for that National theatre. Reinhardt was successful from the first, playing Baumert in Hauptman's "The Weavers," Akim in Tolstoy's "Power of Darkness," and Engstrand in Ibsen's 'Ghosts." He came to do a production of "The Dream" for the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce at the Hollywood Bowl. He remained to become, in less than a year, the dominant personality of the film world.

When Mendelssohn wrote the overture to "A Midsummer Night's Dream" at the age of 17, he must have had a premonition that the musical material in the overture would some day be expanded to fit into the music of the entire play.

Fiction Writing and Writers of The South to Be Lecture Topic Of Caroline Miller

So many fantastic things have been said and written about the South in books, songs and stories, that Caroline Miller comes to Ranger for a personal appearance on Tuesday afternoon, March 31, at the Recreation building, has chosen for her lecture subject, "Fiction Writing and Writers of the South."

Few have heard Southern talks about the South and we venture to say Mrs. Miller's lecture on the South will be a welcome note to those who are interested in what goes below the Mason-Dixon line. She is a born and bred Southern, epitomizes the spirit of the South, lives it, breathes it. For the first time to our knowledge a Southern writer of distinction has decided to talk about negroes of the South —from the Southern point of view.

This outstanding lecture is recommended to all thinking men and women, one of the most vital and interesting available.

The English department headed by Mrs. Hal Hunter of Ranger Junior College presents Caroline Miller, and even now much enthusiasm is being created particularly among club women not only in Ranger, but in nearby towns.

Special Announcement

All members of all the choirs of the different churches of the city, and all others who will help us with the music during the community revival are urged to meet at 2:30 p. m. today at the Recreation building. The purpose of this meeting is to get acquainted and get organized for the meeting. Our revival starts on Sunday night March 22. Mr. Walton is general chairman of the department of music for the meeting. He will be present and he is anxious for all others to be present.

This call is made by the Pastor's Alliance of the city.

High School and Jr. College Notes

By Mavis Murray

High School Seniors Present Program

The Senior class presented a concert by the Cisco Lobo Band, under the direction of R. L. Maddox in the assembly hall Thursday morning at 11 o'clock. The band concert lasted for one hour and a tap dancing number and two xylophone selections were included as special features. The small charge for admission is to be used to defray the expenses of the high school annual.

High School Band

The Ranger High School Band gave two concerts Tuesday, March 10, for the Trades Day. The band paraded Main street at noon and gave a short concert at 4:00 p. m. for the drawing. J. F. Whitefield, the director, is reported to be ill at his home and we hope for him a quick recovery.

Debate

The R. J. C. and high school students met in the auditorium at 2:30 p. m. Thursdy to listen to the debate between the team from SMU and the one from Baylor. SMU took the affirmative side and Baylor took the negative. Both debate teams offered splendid facts and arguments for their side of the question. The debate question was, "Resolved That the Federal Government Should Control the Production of Cotton."

All college and high school classes were dismissed Friday at noon because of the teachers' meeting being held in Abilene.

Just a Bit Personal

Mrs. J. S. McDowell and daughter, Cecelia, spent Saturday in Fort Worth. Friday afternoon Miss McDowell, eccentric tap dancer, was presented at the Crazy Hotel, Mineral Wells, during the broadcast hour, sponsored by Crazy Water Crystals, which features Jack Amlong and his orchestra. The dancer is a pupil of Ruth Hagman.

Mrs. S. J. Clark of Olden was in Ranger yesterday and called by the Times to remind us that quite a large delegation of women were planning on attending the cooking school.

Now the soil contains some 14 inches of moisture, the mosts in years, but evidently this is not enough.

Ranger's Greatest Cooking School is Planned

To Conduct Times Free Cooking School

Miss Jessie Hogue, noted "Happy Kitchen Chautauqua" lecturer and food expert who will be in charge at the Times Cooking School which opens Tuesday afternoon promptly at 2:00 p. m. Everyone is invited.

COOKING SCHOOL HEAD GIVES POINTERS ON PREPARED VEGETABLES

"I have often been asked, 'Why do some perfectly intelligent, modern-minded women still hesitate to give their families ready prepared vegetables?' " said Miss Jessie Hogue, director of the Times Cooking School, which opens on Tuesday afternoon.

The answer is: "They did, yet perhaps they don't." But for years their hesitation was quite noticeable. They served prepared breads and rolls as a matter of course. They bought ready prepared soups pickles, jellies, and jams, even cakes and pies and cookies. Yet they spent hours in their kitchens scraping, peeling and washing vegetables!

If you are one of the few women left who do this, let me whisper in your ear: The reason you do it is because you do not yet know enough about canned foods to put your complete trust in their wholesomeness.

Here and now, then, I am going to tell you a few pertinent facts about canned vegetables—the inside story, as it were.

The modern canned vegetable supplies all the nutritive value, all the minerals—calcium, iron, phosphorus—and the highly prized vitamins that you get when you buy the raw vegetable in the market and cook it yourself in your own kitchen. Practically all good grades of vegetables are now canned right where they grow, so that none of the nutritive value is lost during shipment to the cannery. Within a very few hours after the vegetable is picked, every bit of its priceless food value is sealed safely into the can.

All vegetables packed by the canners are expressly grown for the purpose—grown from selected seed it may surprise you to know.

Many farm vegetables are not satisfactory for canning.

Let me settle another point, too. It is perfectly safe to keep food in an opened can, provided you put it in a refrigerator and give it the same care you would any cooked food. There is absolutely nothing about the can that is harmful to health.

Letting the can stand open to aerate the vegetables, or rinsing them in cold water before cooking, takes just as much from their flavor and food value. If you do either of these things now I urge you to stop.

It is perfectly safe to store unopened canned foods on your pantry shelves for any length of time provided you keep them in a moderate temperature, away from steam-pipes and radiators.

The next time you serve canned peas heat them quickly in their own juice until it is practically cooked away. This same method makes an amazing improvement in the flavor of all canned vegetables.

If you use vegetables cold—say for salad—chill them well before serving.

Save every precious drop of juice. It makes wonderful sauces and soups and is particularly rich in nutritive value—one of the bargains you dream about.

MISS HOGUE IS PLEASED WITH COMPLETE PLAN

School To Start on Tuesday, March 17, and Continue Thru Friday, March 20

Miss Jessie Hogue, who will conduct the Ranger Times free cooking school at the Recreation building from Tuesday, March 17 through Friday, March 20, expressed delight Friday afternoon in a long distance telephone conversation at the plans that been made for the school.

Miss Hogue stated that from advance word she had received on the work that had been done to make the school a success there was every reason to believe that it would be the best cooking school in Texas this year.

All those who are to have displays at the cooking schoo lare urged to come to the new Recreation Building early Monday morning so that arrangements can be made and spaces allotted to each one.

This is very important as this will be one of the best schools ever conducted in West Texas and it is very necessary that all displays be arranged not later than Monday afternoon.

More merchants are cooperating this year in making the school a success, and with the additional seating space that is available through the use of the Recreation building, it is evident that more women will attend than ever before. Heretofore one of the problems has been in finding enough room for all who attend.

Seats have been hauled to the building to supplement those already installed, and the balcony affords additional seating space, where everyone can hear well.

Miss Hogue has a wide reputation as one of the best cooking authorities in the country and her reputation should draw additional hundreds of women this year.

Merchants who are cooperating in making the school a success, and who cordially invite every woman to attend as many sessions as possible, are:

Houston Will Have A Wood Pulp Plant

By United Press

HOUSTON.—Work will start within the next several weeks on a $4,000,000 wood pulp and paper plant on the Houston ship channel, according to W. A. Vinson, attorney for the Champion Paper & Fibre company of North Carolina.

Vinson said all legal preliminaries have been completed and that the company has taken possession of a 161-acre tract of land on which the plant will be constructed. A permit for the company to do business in Texas already has been obtained in Austin.

The new plant will manufacture pulp from East Texas pine and other wood. The wood will be shipped to plants in Ohio and North Carolina for use in manufacture of paper. Capacity of the plant was estimated at 160 tons of pulp every 24 hours. Approximately 400 persons will be employed permanently, Vinson said.

Grange Day Named At The Centennial

By United Press

DALLAS.—W. A. Webb, general manager of the Texas Centennial Exposition, announced today that July 30 had been set aside as Grange Day at the $25,000,000 world's fair opening June 6.

Louis J. Taber of Columbus, Ohio, master of the National Grange, will be the chief speaker. Taber was invited by the Texas State Grange, by Jack Shelton, president of the Jersey Cattle club, vice director of the extension work at Texas A. & M. college, and by P. G. Haynes, Austin, director of vocational agriculture.

The Texas State Grange will hold a rally at the world's fair here on July 29, 30 and 31.

The 125-piece band of the Future Farmers of Texas will be here on Grange Day, and play for the farmers expected to gather from many states to hear Taber.

Selling Centennial Is Meeting Success

By United Press

DALLAS.—Thousands of requests for information and literature of the State of Texas and its state-wide Centennial year celebration have been pouring into the state department of information here, following the opening of the national Centennial advertising campaign.

Requests for information began flooding the office following publication of the first of a series of Cenntennial advertisements in issues of well known magazines. Advertisements will be placed in magazines all over the country that have a nation-wide circulation.

Prepared literature is being mailed persons who asked information about the Centennial celebratoins or the state on coupons included on the advertisements.

Officials of the department pointed out that the present campaign is the most elaborate effort ever made by a state to "sell itself to the nation."

Briton Lists Sermons Heard 37 Years Ago

LONDON — William Williams, of Llanrwst, claims to be the world's champion "sermon taster."

He has heard more than 3,000 in the past 37 years. That means he has had approximately 12,000,000 words of good advice, counsel and assurance served up to him.

Williams has kept a faithful record of the sermons. He has a list of preachers' names, dates and texts. Of the sermons he has heard, 846 were from texts in the Old Testament and 2,282 from the New Testament. The most popular choice by preachers who preached from the Old Testament was the Book of Psalms, from which 227 texts were taken. Isaiah comes next with 124, and Genesis third with 65.

Preachers from the New Testament mainly favored St. John's Gospel, from which 269 texts were taken. St. Matthew comes second with 343, and St. Paul's Epistle to the Hebrews third with 166. Only one preacher preached from Obadiah, and only one from John's Second Epistle.

Ants Cause Hole In City Street

By United Press

HOUSTON.—One city resident complained three times within two years about a hole in the street in front of her home. Each time Public Works Director John Nagle had the hole filled with gravel.

The woman recently renewed the complaint, but this time she explained that an army of ants lived in the hole and moved the gravel with apparent ease.

Nagle ordered a mixture of gravel and insecticide to solve the problem.

CHINESE LAUNDRIES ON WANE

By United Press

MONTREAL—Chinese laundrymen are being forced out of business. Competition from modern mechanical laundries have reduced the price of "wash" so greatly that many of them are no longer able to make even a bare living and are abandoning their little laundries.

uge Murals for Centennial will be Among Decorations

DALLAS.—Visitors to the Tex- Centennial central exposition in las next summer will see some the largest mural decorations r painted in the United States. Eugene Savage, New York art- has been commissioned to exte the murals, which will decote the $1,000,000 Hall of State ding. The paintings will cover 00 square feet of wall space, the two largest will measure x 80 feet each.

The murals will depict the hisy of Texas from the coming of first white man to the present, wing development of the re- n under the six flags of Spain, nce, Mexico, the Republic of as, the United States and the nfederacy.

Bronze statues of six outstanding heroes of colonial days and the Texas Republic also will be cast for use in the Hall of State building. The statues, each of which will stand eight feet tall, will be made by Pompeo Coppini, sculptor who divides his time between New York and San Antonio.

The six heroes chosen as most worthy of honor positions at the Centennial are Stephen F. Austin, "Father of Texas"; Sam Houston, served as governor of Tennessee and United States Senator from that state, then came to Texas to direct the revolutionary armies and stayed to be president of the Republic, governor of the state of Texas, and United States senator from his adopted home; William M. Travis, commander of the troops who lost their lives defending the Alamo; Mirabeau Lamar, a president of the republic; and Generals Thomas J. Rusk and James W. Fannin.

Mr. and Mrs. Morris Frazar and Mrs. A. F. Disharoon and son, Jerry Benton, were Ranger shoppers Wednesday.

A. F. Disharoon, Robert Hinkson and Morris Frazar were Fort Worth visitors Saturday.

Relatives and friends were grieved to hear of the death of W. M. Caraway of Gordon, Sunday. Services were conducted from the First Methodist Church of Gordon Monday afternoon at 3:30, with Rev. W. H. Rucker of Strawn conducting the services.

Mrs. J. W. Ottinger of Mingus was a Strawn visitor last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Fuller and family and Miss Lillian Brown were Fort Worth visitors Sunday.

The English III class of Strawn High School presented a 30-minute Centennial program over Station KTAT in Fort Worth at 4 p. m., March 7. C. W. West, superintendent of Strawn schools, and Mr. Lewis, the high school principal, arranged and conducted the program. With Wilton Rucker as master of ceremonies, the English class gave songs and poems especially selected for the Centennial celebration. The high school string band provided the musical background with a variety of songs. Two girls' quartets and one group of boys composed of members of the class rendered Texas songs, accompanied by Miss Mildred Hitson at the piano. Jimmy Carlyle, Frank Felps and George Kenny read poems. Tommy Ellis and Burton Cole vocalized with the band on a group of numbers and Miss Flossie Mahan sang "Roll Along, Prairie Moon." Several Strawn visitors were in the studio at the time of the broadcast. Students who made the trip and performed on the program were Allen Disharoon Jr., Watson Frazar, Jimmy Carlyle, J. D. Roberson, Tommy Ellis, Burton Cole, Jack Mitchell, Robert Hinkson, George Kenny, Frank Felps, Mildred Hitson, Jean Hanyan, Flossie Mahan, Dorothy Brothers, Mary Ruth Johnson, Dovie Gailey and Bernice Bingham. The program was one of a series to be presented by Strawn High School over different radio stations.

Next Sunday is our singing afternoon. We invite everyone to come help us out, and have a real good singing.

The A B C of Crochet

Crochet is an art centuries old. Yet today it is one of the few creative arts which no machine can accurately reproduce. It affords you countless chances for individuality, for smartness, and for economy. Any reader wishing complete copies of these 12 articles can get them by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to this newspaper, or to its Crochet Bureau, 522 Fifth Avenue, N. Y. Specify "The A B C of Crochet."

1—Chain Stitch

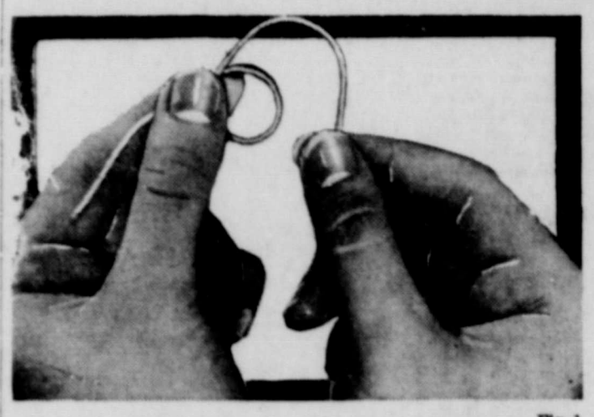

Fig. 1

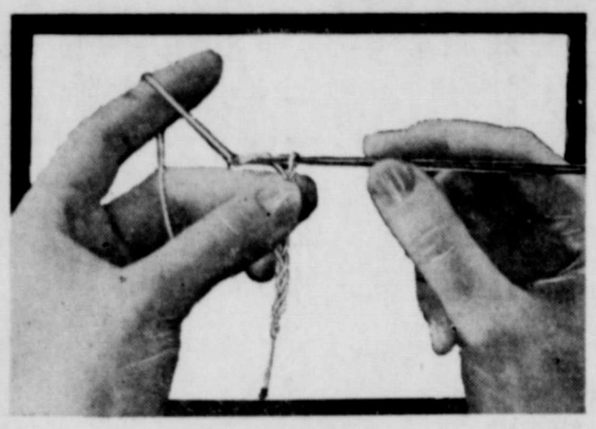

Fig. 4

FOR practice, use a coarse steel crochet hook, and a soft crochet cotton. Guard against having your stitches too tight while learning.

Fig 1 shows the thread ready for the first stitch. Hold end of thread in left hand and main length of thread in right hand. Turn thread around and over in front, forming a loop as illustrated.

Insert crochet hook through the loop, catch the main length of thread on hook, and draw thread through loop, as shown in Fig. 2. Then pull on the short end to tighten the loop on hook and pull on the main length to regulate size of loop.

With first loop on hook, transfer main length of thread from right to left hand, then from the palm of the left hand, pass main length of thread around the little finger, pass it over in front of the ring and middle fingers, then pass it back of the forefinger, holding the loop on hook between the thumb and middle finger, as shown in Fig. 3. With the thread in position and the loop on hook, pass the hook under the thread extending from the loop to the forefinger, catch the thread (this is known as "thread over"); and draw it through the loop on the hook, thus completing one chain stitch.

Repeat this chain stitch until you can make these without difficulty, and your stitches are as in Fig. 4. When you have learned to make the chain stitch with ease, all other stitches will be easy. All crochet work is started with a foundation chain of chain stitches.

Abbreviations are used in all crochet directions. You should learn them. They are: Chain, ch; single crochet, s c; slip stitch, sl st; double crochet, d c; half double crochet, half d c; treble tr; double treble, d tr; triple treble, tr tr; block, bl; space, sp; skip, sk; picot, p; stitch, st; popcorn stitch, pc st; round, rnd; inclusive, incl.

Preservatives Are Found In Meats

AUSTIN. — During the past month the Food and Drug Inspectors of the State Department of Health have collected a total of 133 samples of ground meat, and of this number 48 were found to contain illegal preservative. So far, twenty-three convictions have been secured—the fine and court cost averaged about $40.00 per case. Other cases are yet to be filed.

The most common illegal preservative in sulphite of soda. This acts as a deodorant; preservative, and color resorative. Meat treated with this sulphite may look invitingly fresh even though stale, and its effect as a deodorant is such that it masks the smell of decomposition.

The Bureau of Foods and Drugs has a field force of eight men whose entire time is spent in the inspection of food and drug establishments in order that articles not fit for human consumption are withdrawn from the channels of trade, and that products are properly labeled; also, that merchandise and places of business are kept clean and sanitary.

Spinach Festival Planned In Texas

By United Press

CRYSTAL CITY, Texas.—One of the world's most unusual harvest celebrations — the Spinach Festival held annually in the Winter Garden business center and shipping point—will be presented this year on March 17, 18 and 19 as a Centennial year event.

The famous character, Popeye, world's greatest popularizer of spinach, has been proclaimed "mayor" of Crystal City for the period of celebration. Segar, his creator, drew a Popeye cartoon especially for the spinach event.

The Winter Garden is one of the richest agricultural districts in the world, being famous for its winter vegetables. One farm alone in Zavala county produces more spinach each year than is grown in any other one state in the Union.

Dalhart Refuses To Let Club Have Historic Bell

By United Press

DALHART, Tex.—A flat NO, was Dalhart's answer to the Clarendon Beaux Arts club which wants the historic old bell that hangs silent in the belfry of the First M. E. Church in North Dalhart.

The old bell recalls the days when Dalhart was only a sprawling mile of shacks, shanties and sod—when no man lived to a ripe old age because his gun play got rotten before his age could ripen.

The old bell is steeped in Dalhart's history and tradition. The two men most responsible for bringing it here are Dave Robison and George E. Walker, both of Dalhart. Robison was the first mayor of Dalhart. At the same election Walker was named one of the councilmen.

Robison was senior engineer and Walker second on the Rock Island construction from Libera, Kansas, west to Santa Rosa, N. M. in 1900-01. Dalhart was founded June 19, 1901, when the Rock Island crossed the Fort Worth and Denver. Robison was retired several years ago. Walker is still in service.

Walker relates the story of the bell: "In the late 1800's a northern colonizer brought northern settlers into what is now Clarendon. While this project was under way the colonizer went to the exposition at Philadelphia. There, this old bell, then fresh from its makers in Baltimore, had won a prize. The colonizer tried without success to buy it for the membership of the First M. E. Church in Clarendon.

"Later the owner donated the bell to the church on condition it pay the freight from Philadelphia. Dodge City was then the end of the railroad. From there the bell moved by bull team and ox cart to Old Tascosa, Adobe Walls and finally to Clarendon.

"By 1902 southerners had established an M. E. Church, South at Clarendon. Members of the old First Methodist Church offered to sell the building en toto for the indebtedness against it—$28. Robison and myself heard of the offer and with a few others sent men to get the church and its equipment.

"The church was razed and loaded in box cars. The organ was rounded up out in the country. Then Clarendon citizens realized the glory of the old bell and went down to take it off the train. But behind six-guns the Dalhart crew kept the bell aboard.

"The bell for years rang for all church services. In clear weather its silvered tones could be heard for more than 20 miles."

There is now a general movement underway to honor the old bell and its two courageous guardians with some sort of Centennial observance. If agreeable with the church members, the bell may be taken down and re-established in an elaborate setting on the court house lawn—there to continue its vigil throughout the years.

Food Is Invoiced On the Normandie

PARIS—The appetites of trans-Atlantic passengers are revealed in figures published by the French Line in regard to the consumption on the Normandie.

The world's largest passenger liner made 18 crossings in 1935 and carried 17,883 passengers, 9,547 westbound and 8,336 eastbound.

During the 18 trips the passengers and crew consumed 42,930 chickens, 4,971 ducks, 1,645 turkeys and 9,162 pigeons. The toll of grapefruit was 42,496, while 289,560 oranges were consumed. The meat bill added up to 421,687 pounds. There were 120,685 pounds of fish, 484,764 pounds of potatoes, 186,750 pounds of flour, 61,466 pounds of butter and 664,900 eggs eaten.

These pounds and pounds of food were washed down with 127,025 bottles of table wine, 155,000 liters of beer, 37,678 bottles of mineral water, 13,557 bottles of de luxe wines, 10,939 bottles of champagne and 7,897 bottles of liquers.

Meanwhile passengers and crew were smoking 2,952,000 cigarettes, 15,193 cigars and 26,900 packages of tobacco. And as they smoked they used 1,814 sets of playing cards.

For the first five months service the cost of operating the Normandie was $2,045,000, but a profit of $1,030,000 was shown.

Alterations in the Normandie include overhauling to reduce vibration. Changes have been made in the tourist quarters. Cabins were improved and a new smoking room was added. When the necessary changes have been made, the liner will undergo severe tests so that it will be fit to compete with the new Cunarder, the Queen Mary, which will start on her maiden voyage May 27.

Italy to Train Screen Players

ROME.—Students are being selected for the Royal Academy for Dramatic Art, sponsored by the ministries of Press and Propaganda and Public Education to develop a young school of stage and screen actors.

The new academy replaces by royal decree the Royal Recitation School as the "Eleonora Duse School."

In addition to the new academy touring stock companies will be financed by the government to give actors experience and keep unemployment in theatrical ranks to a minimum.

New Cinema City Started

The academy and stock companies also will be utilized to develop motion picture stars whose services in large numbers will be required when the new cinema city, said to be the largest in Europe, is completed here next year.

Maestro Silvio D'Amico has been appointed director of the academy. He has selected a staff of instructors and coaches from among the best Italian artists. Special professors will also give their services for short terms.

Subjects to be offered include recitation, dancing, gymnastics, history of the theatre, fencing, transformation exercises, film direction, photography, scenario writing, styles and history of fashions. Other subjects are to be added.

Little Theatre Included

A little theater is to be opened in connection with the academy. Periodic public performances will be offered, in which instructors will play the leading parts, with students cast in secondary roles. Students will advance to important parts as their courses and performances warrant. Certificates of graduation which permit students to enroll in the traveling stock companies or engage in motion picture work will be granted.

A few specially selected graduates will be awarded traveling scholarships, especially those engaged in motion picture work. Likewise leading directors, writers and photographers of the screen will be invited to Rome to lecture and demonstrate their art.

CLEARFIELD, Iowa.—Citizens of Clearfield are governed by a mayor who is not only a non-resident but lives in an adjoining county.

When F. J. Anderson was elected mayor, he was a resident of Clearfield and Taylor county. Later he moved to a farm eight miles away—located in Ringgold county. Now he commutes daily to work for a local business concern and performs his duties as mayor.

Dixie Answers A Call To Marriage

By United Press

TURLOCK, Calif. — Samuel Frank, now known as "Turlock's Postal Don Juan," who sent a letter to Gov. James V. Allred of Texas, saying he wanted a Southern wife, now has no doubts that this is leap year.

Frank received 81 replies to his request.

Mississippi belles contributed 28; Texas, 22; Missouri, 2; and Kansas, 1.

Californians, who could not qualify as "Dixie belles," were numerous. There were eight from Turlock alone.

The Southern girls, however, showed one marked quality of chivalry over their California rivals.

None of the California aspirants did.

Frank says his list includes women physicians, stenographers, school teachers, attorneys and widows.

He insists he was sincere in his original request and is now trying to sort out of the 81 replies the particular one to which he will say "yes."

If the Happy Warrior does stage a walkathon at the Philadelphia conclave, it might be called the Brown Derby.

CLEAN CLOTHES
WILL HELP YOU ENJOY IT!

Miss Jessie Hogue, who is to conduct The Times Cooking School, says that soiled and spotted clothes won't help you forget winter, won't help you enjoy spring. And after long winter months of wear your clothes can't help but be soiled and spotted. Go through your clothes closet today and send all things that need cleaning to your cleaner. They will be returned looking clean and fresh. The cleaners of Ranger help keep the men and women of the city looking spic and span, said Miss Hogue.

Strange Light on Mars May Be A Signal To Earth

By United Press

NICE, France.—The belief that Mars lately has been trying to signal the earth is expressed by Prof. Robert Damion, local astronomer.

Damion bases his assertion on phenomena observed by him in the lower Alps mountains, where he has a private observatory. He relates:

"This winter during several nights which were pitch dark for the absence of the moon and stars I noticed a certain portion of the sky in the vicinity of Mars suddenly lit up by a strange light of a deep bluish tint. That light while it lasted, some 40 seconds each time, was so strong that one could easily read a newspaper by it.

"Similar phenomena have occurred before in France, and been remarked upon by my fellow astronomers. The last time was some eight years ago in the vicinity of Lyon.

"I am convinced that Mars is trying to signal our planet by some means unknown to us. If they really are signals, we should be quite unable to answer them, not having yet been able to design searchlights powerful enough to throw a beam even a quarter of the way to our nearest planet neighbor.

"However," continued the scientist, "the day will come when the problem of interplanetary communication will be solved. Many years ago a wealthy Frenchwoman, considered eccentric at the time, gave our Academy of Sciences $6,700 for prize money to be given the first person who succeeds in establishing contact with our sky neighbors. The Academy still has the money for whoever may win it, and uses the interest to encourage research work on the problem.

THIS CURIOUS WORLD By William Ferguson

BARREL cactus is a native of the dry areas of southwestern United States, and, because it cannot depend upon rainfall for a regular supply of moisture, it has learned to store up its own reserve supply. Desert animals and birds, as well as humans, often quench their thirst by tapping these natural water barrels.

NO INSECT CAN FACE P.D. AND LIVE!

1,000,000 PAMPERED FLIES die every year to prove it!

Two cans of insecticide bearing the same label often vary in strength—one may kill while the other only dopes. But not so with Sinclair P. D. This insecticide is subjected to the only test which proves absolutely that every drop has power to kill flies, mosquitoes, moths, bedbugs, cockroaches, ants and fleas. Every batch of P. D. that leaves the factory has killed 1,000 flies under conditions more severe than those in your own home. Only flies 5 days old are used in these tests because flies at this age have more resistance than any other household insect. P. D. is stainless, harmless to humans or animals and sweet with the clean odor of cedar. Ask for Sinclair P. D.

College Gives Hints On Getting Work

By United Press

STATE COLLEGE, Pa.—Pennsylvania State College is offering a new angle on "how to get a job" to senior engineers who face the almost universal problem when they leave school in the spring.

Faculty members in industrial engineering teach the technique of interviewing to engineers.

Gleaming shoes, knife-edge creased trousers and clean fingernails are not the only requirements of a successful interview, they point out. Mental alertness and how the prospective employe will fit into the organization are important.

The applicent who has a lot of new ideas and "wants to reorganize the whole business" is soon told the "job is filled," while the applicant who shows little or no interest in the position he is after is classed as unprogressive.

Interviewers, the seniors learned, are interested in evidence that the applicant realizes that hard work will be required to get ahead and that a college diploma is only one milestone along the road to business and industrial success.

Ninth Annual Texas Relays Are Planned

Texas Merchants See 1936 Trade As Topping 1929

CHICAGO.—Retail business in Texas, showing its greatest volume in 1935 since before the depression, is due this year to attain heights of "recovery" that will place 1935 beyond even the climactic boom year of 1929, a consensus of the Lone Star State's leading merchants indicates.

Averaging of scattered replies to a questionnaire sent by the Merchandise Mart here, nation's largest wholesale center under one roof, to 230 Texas retail store executives, reveals that the state's retail trade in 1935 was reported as 8.66 per cent ahead of 1934, and only 7.68 per cent behind 1929 business. The questionnaires were sent to leading Texas stores as part of a national campaign being conducted by the Merchandise Mart in an effort to stimulate retail activities generally.

Estimates as to expectations for 1936 ranged from an 8 per cent decline up to 40 per cent increases, the average being a predicted net gain of 9.63 per cent. This, combined with the figures showing 1935 only 7.68 per cent behind 1929, means that, barring unexpected crop failures, 1936 will see Texas retail business going stronger even than in the last pre-depression year! Widely divergent local crop conditions and other local factors aparently accounted for the big range in estimates reported for 1936.

Singularly, the fact that this is a "presidential year," traditional business bugaboo, was completely ignored by the merchants in their comments on probabilities of 1936 retail trade trends. This is interpreted by T. J. Reed, general manager of the Merchandise Mart, as evidence that the age-old forces of supply and demand are again dominant, with demand due to be unusually heavy because of the depreciation which has taken place during the depression years of minimum purchasing, particularly of household goods and furnishings.

The contention of many merchants and economists that long-deferred replacement of "things for the home," is providing one of the country's strongest vehicles for buying its way back to financial normalcy is substantiated by analysis of the sales gains as broken down into subdivisions of the larger stores, Reed pointed out. Generally speaking, those departments dealing with the more basic elements of home furnishing—that is, furniture, floor coverings, and curtains and draperies—showed by far the most striking and consistent gains.

This is strictly in line with the findngs of the Mart in a survey of the 600 manufacturers exhibiting in the building and serving the entire country, that "fixing up the house" had been Mr. and Mrs. America's first thought during 1935, with spending money becoming more plentiful. Although sales gains were general in virtually all lines in the national picture, home furnishings showed more extensive increases than any other type of merchandise.

Improved crop conditions for the state as a whole, the natural corrollary, increased farm income, government and state spending for forest and highway improvements, raising of more varied crops, and the coming Texas Centennial Exposition beginning in Dallas in June are some of the more frequently cited reasons for Texas trade gains in '35 and expected greater gains in the current year.

A Seymour merchant estimates the state's farm income in 1935 roughly at 120 per cent ahead of 1934, and points out that with cattle higher and feed plentiful farmers will not have to incur debts for feed "which was burdensome in 1933 and 1934."

Several large store owners commented on the fact the depression has taught consumers many lessons about judging and evaluating merchandise carefully, among them that of doing more trading in their home centers and using newspaper advertising as their guide.

A Seguin, Texas, retailer "notes a demand for nationally known lines such as we have never experienced before," interpreting it as evidence that people are learning to get the most for what money they have to spend by buying goods

PANORAMIC VIEW OF THE WORLD'S GREATEST MOTION PICTURE

The Arcadia Thearte again booked two of the years greatest pictures in one week, with several other very good pictures also on the schedule.

The old "come up and see me sometime" girl returns to Ranger in a new and somewhat different role, "Klondike Annie" begins on San Francisco's famed barbary coast in its lustiest days, and winds up in Alaska during the Gold Rush. Miss West entertains 'em in 'Frisco and in the Yukon with equal ease. In 'Frisco she is held virtually a captive by a jealous lover, and, when she seeks to escape, he tries to stop her by force. In the struggle he is killed. Mae flees to a steamer awaiting her in the harbor. The vessel is commanded by Victor McLaglen. He sets out under full steam for Alaska, stopping at one port to pick up passengers.

Among them is a girl missionary, bound for Nome. She and Miss West become firm friends and Mae is deeply grieved when she dies at sea. Just at this time federal officers board the ship and Mae has to don the missionary garments of the dead girl, and when the boat docks she has to carry on the pose.

How she does it, and what it ultimately brings, are told excittingly and amusingly in the climactic episodes of the film, which shows on Sunday and Monday at the Arcadia Theatre.

The second picture on this week's schedule, "A Midsummer Night's Dream" is without a doubt one of the greatest films produced since the beginning of motion picture, it takes a story three centuries old set to music written over a century ago and blends them together with all the skill and equipment of the industry today and has turned out a magnificent picture, that through all the ages will stand out as one of the greatest achievements of all times.

This great play was written by William Shakespeare, but was classed as his greatest comedy, so that takes care of the seriousness that fill most minds when the name of Shakespeare is mentioned. Names of the cast as, Joe Brown, James Sagney, Hugh Herbert and Frank McHugh prove there must be some really good comedy in it.

All critics have simply raved about every scene of "A Midsummer Night's Dream," and the three romances are unforgetable, plus the lines that only Shakespeare could write.

This picture is to be shown one day in Ranger, Wednesday March 18, and there will be two performances daily, at 2 and 8:00.
