Warplanes swoop into Iraq

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. warplanes swooped into southern Iraq Thursday to enforce a coalition ban on all flights by Iraqi aircraft.

Saddam Hussein's government denounced the no-flight zone and threatened retaliation "in due time." But the Pentagon said no Iraqi planes had challenged the prohibition of flights below the 32nd parallel.

Pentagon spokesman Bob Hall, speaking at a news conference almost two hours after the 9:15 a.m. CDT ban went into effect, said: "As of this moment, or as of about five minutes ago, there had been no activity to prevent the monitoring regime that we've undertaken."

He said F-18s based on the aircraft carrier Independence and F-15 fighters were patrolling the skies of southern Iraq, and that the military was adding to its AWAC and RC-135 reconnaissance plane force in the Persian Gulf theater. British and French planes are moving into the region to participate, Hall said.

WASHINGTON — Amid angry local criticism of the federal relief effort in south Florida, President Bush said on Thursday that he would send troops to help feed residents and rebuild the area after a hurricane that he said might be the worst natural disaster in the nation's history.

Pentagon officials said that 2,000 to 5,000 troops were being flown from Fort Bragg in Fayetteville, N.C., along with portable kitchens, medical supplies, helicopters and bulldozers. A professional disaster-relief specialist characterized the move as welcome, though modest and tardy.

"The damage has created tragedy for millions of Floridians," Bush said, just before boarding Air Force One after a campaign swing through St. Louis, Cincinnati and Findlay, Ohio. "The damage is far more widespread than even we had feared."

Paramount issue in Dade County is homelessness

MIAMI — It is a figure that staggers the imagination: at least one of every 10 of the two million residents of Miami and its southern suburbs was left without a home by Hurricane Andrew.

Poll: Most favor school distribution of condoms

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most Americans favor distribution of condoms in public schools, according to a Gallup poll released Thursday.

Some 68 percent of the adults responding to the poll would approve of condom distribution in their local public schools. While 43 percent said condoms should be given to all students who want them, 25 percent said the schools should require parents' consent.

Twenty-five percent objected to schools issuing the contraceptive device at all, and 7 percent had no opinion.

"I think the public is both idealistic and practical," said Lowell C. Rose, executive director of the professional education fraternity Phi Delta Kappa, which commissioned the study. "It's easy to be idealistic but

Education district sets its tax rate, paves way for ISDs

Area schools to lose $5 million in aid

By Myra Lee Salcedo and John Powers

AUSTIN — Area school districts will lose more than $5 million in state aid from what was appropriated for the 1991-'92 school year, with $2.2 million of that shortfall affecting the Midland Independent School District, according to the Texas Education Agency.

The shortages for the fiscal year that ends Monday include: Midland, $2,229,144; Greenwood, $115,146; and Ector County, $3,082,805.

For the 1991-'92 fiscal year, Midland school board trustees had expected a $1 million shortfall. "The final notification the state gave us indicated the proration was $2.2 million," said Don Furgeson, MISD business manager.

"We've been told we can almost double that amount for this year," said MISD

The local County Education District set its tax rate Thursday night paving the way for Midland, Greenwood and Andrews Independent School Districts to set their rates.

The three members of the Andrews-Midland CED Board voted unanimously to increase the rate from 77.50 to 90.73 cents per $100 valuation.

The 90.73-cent tax is the estimated amount needed to generate the $51 million — if 97 percent of taxes are collected — required by the state. The rate also allows for homestead exemptions.

"State law requires us to set the tax rate in order to generate a specific amount of money. Basically, the board has no choice," said Joseph Baressi Jr., superintendent of Midland Independent School District.

Ron Stegall, chief appraiser of the Midland Central Appraisal District, said the tax rate was set based on $6.9 billion of taxable property in Andrews and Midland counties.

The conference's theme is "A New Texas and a New America." The event, which begins today, also will feature a trade show sponsored by the Midland Black Chamber of Entrepreneurs. Anyone interested in attending the conference should contact Beatrice Hurd at 682-2103 or Virginia Davis at 684-4014.

Dems tour Texas

AUSTIN — Bill Clinton set out Thursday on a bus tour through Texas, hoping to shore up support in traditionally Democratic region of President Bush's adopted home state. Clinton picked up an endorsement in Austin from the Combined Law Enforcement Associations of Texas before speaking to an outdoor rally of about 7,000 people on the University of Texas campus. Clinton-Gore supporters waived Texas flags and withstood sweltering heat as they waited for the bus caravan./1B

Margaret on Harry

WASHINGTON — Margaret Truman Daniel gave 'em hell Thursday. She said the 33rd president, her father, had been hijacked by the 41st, George Bush, and the rest of the Republican Party. Harry S. Truman would have been "flabbergasted to learn that he has become a model for President Bush's campaign for re-election," Mrs. Daniel wrote in an op-ed page article in The Washington Post. She noted the frequent favorable references to her dyed-in-the-wool Democratic father at last week's GOP Convention. Bush, in his speech, recalled Truman's come-from-behind 1948 campaign — and misquoted her father, she said. She concluded by paraphrasing what Sen. Lloyd Bentsen said to his vice presidential opponent, Dan Quayle, in 1988, when Quayle compared himself to John F. Kennedy. Said Mrs. Daniel: "I would say to George Bush, 'You are no Harry Truman.' U.S. to begin food flights to Somalia

MOMBASA, Kenya (AP) — After two weeks of preparation and negotiation, the United States is ready to begin emergency food flights today to Somalia, where chaos and danger reign in a land ravaged by drought and civil war.

Marine Brig. Gen. Frank Libutti, in charge of the U.S. military operation, said Thursday that the first of six C-130 Hercules transport planes would take off before dawn for Belet Huen, 670 miles northeast of this Kenyan port.

Since Libutti's team began flying a week ago, its eight C-130s and four C-141 Starlifters have delivered about 925 tons of food to Somali refugees and drought-stricken Kenyans in northern Kenya.

But the focus of the aid operation ordered by President Bush is the delivery of food to Somalia, where 1.5 million people out of a population of 6.5 million are said to be in immediate danger of starvation.

The direct flights were delayed by negotiations to arrange security both for the American military personnel and for the food itself. Widespread combat between competing clan warlords has left Somalia in anarchy, and roving bandits have stolen humanitarian aid sent into the country.

"Our mission, simply stated, is to deliver food to the needy," Libutti said. "I'm absolutely confident we've done our homework. My decision is we're going to go. We can take food to Somalia and feel good about it."

The food being flown in by U.S. planes is to be distributed by the International Red Cross. One of its demands, sticking large Red Cross decals on the U.S. aircraft, was satisfied Thursday.

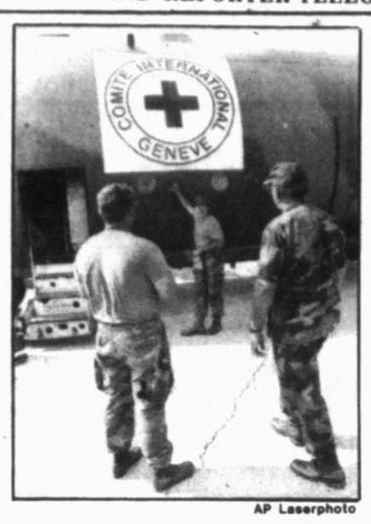

Both Libutti and Andrew Natsios, Bush's special coordinator for the Somalia effort, called the Swiss-based organization the "real heroes" of Somalian relief.

"They specialize in conflict situations," Natsios said. "There is no conflict situation in the world more chaotic and more dangerous than Somalia."

The aid plan for Somalia, which forms the Horn of Africa, is designed to increase pressure on the warlords to stop fighting, Natsios said. For now, most of the emergency food will go to the country's two southern zones, where the warlords are least in control, Natsios said.

"We will tell the clan leaders that their people will get more if they stop fighting," he said.

At the same time, the U.S. Agency for International Development, the Red Cross and other groups will "create incentives for everybody to stop fighting" by helping rehabilitate the two relatively settled northern zones, he said.

Government announces police reforms

PRETORIA, South Africa (NYT) — The South African government announced sweeping reforms of its discredited police force Thursday, including the forced retirement of one third of the whites-only top command, clearing the way for promotion of the country's first black generals.

Other measures announced here by Hernus Kriel, minister of law and order, include creation of a permanent board of inquiry headed by a judge to investigate charges of police misconduct.

Kriel said the shakeup was intended to restore public confidence in a force that has been accused of everything from wholesale incompetence to the routine practice of torture and murder.

The African National Congress charged Thursday night that the announcement amounted to "a face-lift, not a substantial change," but other critics of the police said that the apparent purge of top officers represented the first credible effort to prepare the police force for work under majority rule.

The announcement was clearly timed to help create a climate for restarting negotiations on a new, non-racial political order.

Key Japanese politician resigns as scandal rocks government

TOKYO (AP) — After months of speculation that Japan's governing party would be rocked again by scandal, its kingmaker announced Thursday he is resigning his party posts because he took a dubious donation of millions of dollars.

Opposition leaders said the decision by Shin Kanemaru was a serious blow to the Liberal Democratic Party, which has governed Japan for nearly four decades despite several bribery and influence-peddling scandals.

Makoto Tanabe, head of the Socialists, and other opposition leaders called for Parliament to meet early to discuss Kanemaru's resignation.

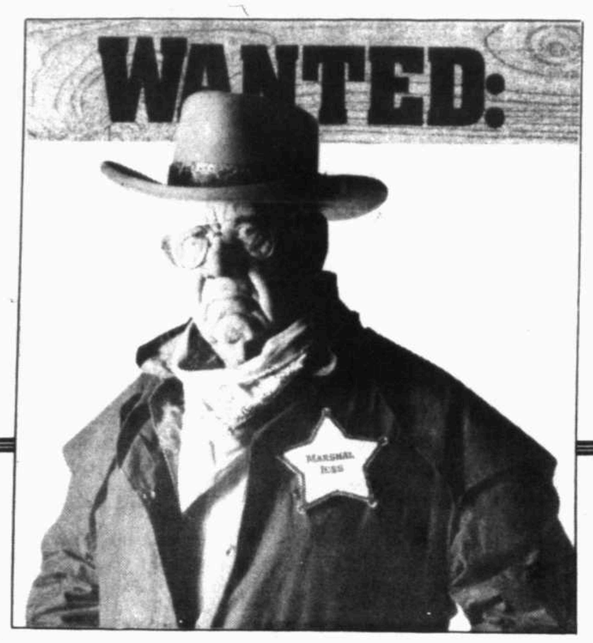

Kanemaru's political clout was so strong that his support was needed by other politicians to become prime minister.

But some analysts believe the resignation by Kanemaru, often described as Japan's most powerful politician, will mean a stronger political power base for Miyazawa, who leads a rival faction within the ruling party.

The announcement Kanemaru was resigning as vice president of the party and the party's largest faction came after months of rumors that the nation's most powerful politicians would be linked to Tokyo Sagawa Kyubin, a mob-tainted trucking company that purportedly distributed millions of dollars to buy influence.

Prosecutors have been investigating the allegations, but no charges of bribery or of violating complex political funding laws have been filed against any leading politicians.

Kanemaru, 77, acknowledged accepting $4 million from Hiroyasu Watanabe, then president of the company, as a donation for members of his faction in 1990.

In the working-class suburb of Princeton south of Miami, for instance, more than 40 members of the Soto family have been crowded into the four-bedroom home of the family patriarch, Jose Soto, since Monday. Over the years, nine of Soto's children, their spouses and 23 of his grandchildren have built or bought homes within blocks of his house, all of which are now destroyed.

"We're all of us looking for places to live, but we just don't know where to go for help," Nelly Soto said on Thursday afternoon as she hauled ice from her car into her father's house, which was left without electricity or potable water. "Of course, we would like to rent a house or an apartment somewhere, but how do you do that at a time like this?"

In the long run, the destruction Hurricane Andrew inflicted on Dade County, which includes about 30 municipalities, is expected to lead to a construction and employment boom. Kate Hale, the director of emergency services for the county, estimated Wednesday that at least 63,000 single-family homes and apartment buildings have been destroyed.

But for the moment, thousands of families of every economic class and ethnic background share the Sotos' concern and confusion. If nothing else, the storm was indiscriminate in its wrath, displacing a few millionaire owners of mansions in the Cocoplum section of Coral Gables as well as many migrant farm workers living in trailer parks in Homestead and Florida City.

Insurance claims adjusters have descended on Dade County, trying to find homeowners who need cash for emergency supplies and new housing. But the dire conditions here are making it hard for adjusters and customers to find each other, and the checks that are being written are hard to cash because so few banks have reopened.

Carlos Vargas, a Homestead resident who works for the state welfare agency and whose own trailer was destroyed by the hurricane, said he has seen newly homeless people wandering the streets in a daze, with nowhere to go and no idea of where to seek help.

Those without friends or relatives to turn to, he said, "are either moving into abandoned buildings or taking shelter in construction sites where you see them between the exposed beams."

Ann Jones, a 43-year-old customer relations officer at a travel company that sells real estate time shares, was forced out of the three-bedroom house she owns when the storm leveled everything except the kitchen. She and her two children are now staying with friends.

"I'm a working single parent who lives from paycheck to paycheck, and I paid the mortgage just before the storm hit," she said. "When I get back to work, I'll get a paycheck, but I don't have the money in the bank right now to pay first, last and security" for temporary rental quarters, as most landlords here require.

Ms. Jones said she had been left homeless by a hurricane once before. While living in her native Mississippi in 1969, she lost her house to Hurricane Camille but was helped by a government relief effort that she recalls as swifter than the current one.

"After Camille, they sent people out door to door right away to see what you needed, and within three months, I was in a brand new house built after the hurricane," she said. "But this time, there are no numbers to call for help on housing, and when you call the other emergency numbers, you can never get through to anybody. What is frustrating is that all this is so unorganized."

In fact, Ms. Jones said, when she finally got through to the authorities this week, "they said that unless you have a real emergency, don't bother us."

She is willing to concede that her situation might not qualify as a real emergency by current standards, "since I have a place to stay for two weeks," but she wonders what will happen to the legions of homeless in the weeks to come.

"Where are they going to put us all?" she said. "There are so many of us, and they don't have any housing."

In recent times, southern Florida has been a buyer's or renter's market. As a result of overbuilding in the 1980s and the recession of the 1990s, it has been possible to rent a perfectly livable one-bedroom apartment for as little as $250 a month or to buy a four-bedroom house for under $100,000.

But real estate analysts here are already predicting that prices will rise sharply, to the disadvantage of those who used up their savings to become homeowners and may find themselves unable to re-enter the market.

One such person is Tressey Walker. With the help of her mother and sister, "I paid cash money for that house, and now all that money has gone down the drain," Ms. Walker, a 21-year-old school crossing guard, said of the ruined $80,000, four-bedroom house in the southern suburb of Perrine that she shared with her three children.

On the rental side, even those able to meet the various requirements of landlords are running into trouble. They are quickly discovering that demand for housing of every type has taken a sharp leap upward precisely as the supply has dropped even more abruptly.

"I went over to the apartment complex where my sister lives because she said they had some vacant apartments there," Mae Johnson, a 40-year-old mother of two teen-agers, said as she waited in a food distribution line at a shopping center in Cutler Ridge this morning. "There are empty apartments, but the manager told me that the people already living there whose own apartments are messed up get first choice."

Enormous as the number of homeless is already, government officials say they expect it to grow. Thousands of people in Dade County are still living in what can only be described as the rubble of their homes, hoping to fend off looters who want the few possessions remaining. But those homeowners will be forced to abandon their dwellings when the next strong rainstorm occurs.

As has been the case with distribution of food and water, private enterprise has rushed to fill the wide gaps in official efforts to deal with the sudden housing crisis.

Today to bring sun, low 90s

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for mostly sunny skies with a high in the low 90s and south winds at 5-15 mph. Tonight should be clear with a low in the lower 60s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Saturday should be sunny with a high in the low to mid-90s.

After an overnight low of 60, Thursday's high reached 79, compared to the record high for that date of 100 set in 1985. The record low was 60 set in 1970.

STATE

An upper-level disturbance triggered showers and thunderstorms in the western and southern portions of South Texas late Thursday afternoon, but most of the state was generally rain-free.

A few light showers were reported in the mountains of far West Texas and also in extreme southeastern portions of North Texas.

Rain was reported north of San Antonio to Garner State Park and west to near Eagle Pass. Elsewhere in South Texas, skies were mostly cloudy to cloudy in the relatively cool air mass behind a front that was located near Corpus Christi and offshore in the gulf.

The National Weather Service said drier weather and higher temperatures can be expected as high pressure builds into the state through Saturday. The passage of the cool front brought lower temperatures, although sunny to mostly sunny skies were prevalent Thursday over West Texas. Mid-afternoon temperatures were mostly in the 70s and 80s.

NATION

The tropical depression that was Hurricane Andrew caused wet, windy weather and spawned a few tornadoes as it moved northeast Thursday.

Tornadoes touched down southwest of Valdosta, Ga., and near Montgomery, Ala. Baseball-size hail fell near Wapakeneto, Ohio.

Thunderstorm winds caused damage in parts of Alabama. Much of the state got heavy rain and there was some flooding.

Flood warnings were posted for the lower Pearl River at Bogalusa. The river was expected to reach flood stage today and crest more than 7½ above flood stage Sunday.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

CRISIS: Bush sends federal troops into Florida

(From 1A)

Thursday night's action was arranged within a matter of hours, after orders from the White House on Thursday afternoon, and Bush abruptly canceled a weekend trip to his home in Kennebunkport, Maine, and a campaign swing through the West next week so that he could "monitor relief efforts."

The announcement came after local officials and disaster relief experts said that federal efforts had been inadequate and often confused, and that four days after Hurricane Andrew struck south Florida, uncounted thousands of residents still lacked food, water and shelter.

As the magnitude of the disaster sank in and the frustration level rose, Bush conferred with aides between campaign stops in the Midwest.

Florida, the nation's fourth most populous state, is considered crucial to Bush's re-election effort, and he had cut off a campaign swing in Connecticut on Monday to survey the immediate aftermath of the storm and announce several relief initiatives.

But the Bush administration had confined its relief effort to the scale appropriate for past disasters and had refrained from taking extraordinary measures.

Military officials were still arguing up to the moment Bush issued his mobilization order that any military effort would require several days to organize. They also said the Pentagon was hampered by complex legal restrictions from launching major operations within the country. Indeed, on Monday, federal officials denied a request from Florida's governor, Lawton Chiles, to supply an Army engineering battalion.

In a briefing on Thursday night, Pentagon officials said the soldiers would be on the ground in south Florida by morning, and would be equipped with 20 mobile kitchens capable of feeding 6,000 people three meals a day.

The kitchens will be flown to the air base at Homestead, Fla., which was virtually demolished when the hurricane struck south Florida early Monday with winds that reached 150 miles an hour.

Medical, engineering, aviation and service support troops are scheduled to arrive today to help with sanitation and to distribute supplies and provide electrical generators. Troops from an infantry and mechanized battalion are being sent for security.

Since Monday, south Dade County has resembled a war zone. Shattered buildings are everywhere, dazed people wander aimlessly in the streets, a black market in scarce food and water has sprung up, and heavily armed National Guard troops limit access to the storm-damaged zones at checkpoints.

Bush said he was mobilizing the military at the request of Chiles, who had earlier said food distribution had become hopelessly tangled in bureaucracy and general confusion.

It was still unclear on Thursday night whether the troops would tackle the big jobs of reconstructing roads and homes or rebuilding electric power grids. But it was certain that no federal effort, however huge, could restore south Florida in a matter of days.

Emergency deliveries of food and water are still tangled in distibution problems, officials said earlier on Thursday.

"We've got 120,000 C-ration meals that are here somewhere, but we don't know where the hell they are," Chiles said. "Right now, a truckload of food gets there, 200 people show up, 50 people get food and 150 people are angry. We've got to find a way to solve that."

At the same time, officials at the Army Corps of Engineers acknowledged that they were sitting on 2,000 rolls of plastic sheeting that could be used as emergency roofing, even though an estimated 250,000 people in Florida are now homeless. The reason: the Army is in the process of hiring private companies to install the sheeting, a job that may not actually get under way for several days.

Defense Department officials acknowledged that they have military units that can do the job, but said they are normally required by law to avoid competing with private business whenever possible.

CONDOMS: Public favors distribution, poll finds you have to deal with the problems of the day.

"One of the problems of the day in schools has to do with sexual practices and the sexually transmitted diseases," said Rose. "AIDS is an alarming problem as far as parents are concerned. So on the practical level, parents say 'yes,' condoms should be distributed."

For the 24th year, Gallup polled the public for the Bloomington, Ind.-based group to determine attitudes toward the public schools. Pollsters interviewed 1,306 adults between April and May. The margin of error is about 3 percent.

Generally, the survey showed the public willing to consider changes to improve public schools and recognition that adequate funding was necessary.

Rose said, "The thing that really strikes me . . . is that the American public is reasonably well-informed . . . and reasonably intelligent in its approach towards the schools."

Education Secretary Lamar Alexander said that, in indicating Americans want changes in public schools, the poll basically supports President Bush's agenda to improve early childhood education and to allow school buildings to be used around the clock and on weekends.

Alexander did not comment on the issue of condoms. The Bush administration is against distribution of condoms in schools.

About 40 schools, mainly in large urban areas, have condoms available to students visiting clinics that are either linked with the school or are located in the schools, the Center for Population Options said.

The Gallup poll said men are slightly less likely than women to approve of providing condoms without parental consent to all students who want them. Thirty-nine percent of the men would approve, compared with 45 percent of women.

Rose said this is the first year for a question on condom distribution. He had expected the results to be "exactly split" and added, "I have no doubt that if you had asked the question 10 years ago, 25 would have been in favor and the rest opposed."

TAX: County Education District paves way for ISDs

rate of about 85 cents, it is questionable whether or not rollback elections can be held for the CEDs.

In typical circumstances, a rollback election can be held if the tax rate is 8 percent above the effective tax rate calculation.

In 1992-'93, Andrews ISD will collect $20.5 million in taxes for the CED and will get $10 million back after collections have been distributed. Midland will generate $27.7 million and receive $38 million after taxes are distributed. Greenwood ISD will generate $1.5 million and receive back slightly more than $2 million.

Because Andrews loses about 50 percent of its contribution to the CED, the district has had to raise its local rates, according to Andrews ISD Superintendent Ervin Huddleston.

Before development of CEDs, Andrews property owners paid 68 cents per $100 valuation. Their taxes will almost double if a (CED and local district) combined tax of $1.23 is approved, Huddleston said.

"We are looking at raising taxes, cutting programs, and giving our teachers only a 1.8 percent raise. But we understand how the Texas economy — and school districts — are struggling, and this is the best the legislature could come up with."

The CEDs were formed to equalize school funding among the state's 1,058 school districts.

CED taxes are collected in addition to local school district taxes. Although the method of school funding was found unconstitutional by the Texas Supreme Court, the court authorized collecting the taxes for the upcoming year while legislators come up with another plan to fund public education.

The CED board approved the 1991-'93 proposed budget of $50.5 million. The board is expected to spend $5,000 on central distribution fees, $5,000 and $15,000 on legal fees and liability insurance.

Three citizens attended the meeting.

The next CED meeting has been set for 7 p.m. Nov. 19.

AID: Area districts to lose more than $5 million

(From 1A)

Superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr. "So, while our budget is increasing about $8 million (over last year), almost $4 million of that is what we expect the proration to be next year."

"We estimate we will actually be short about $3.8 million in funds from the state in the next fiscal year," Ferguson said.

MISD has approved its budget and is expected to adopt its tax rate Sept. 8.

Quentin Burnett, superintendent of Greenwood ISD, said the district expects to lose about $202,000 in state appropriations for the 1992-'93 school year.

The shortfall has already been figured into GISD's projected $6.9 million budget for 1992-'93.

"The shortfall may go even higher than that," Burnett said, noting that he hoped the approximate $115,000 shortfall wasn't firm. "We have been told that the state won't know the final figure until March.

No matter what the final shortfall is, Burnett said the fact that it increases every year, and will nearly double last year, "is just more evidence that the state will not — and refuses to — fully fund or even adequately fund public education. They continue to pass tax increases to local people, abdicating their responsibility.

The superintendent said state legislators "can sanctimoniously say: 'We have no tax increases at the state level.' Yet they force local school districts and CEDs to raise their taxes (to cover decreasing state funding)."

Burnett also questioned the state frowning on public school districts maintaining "too much front balance" in accounts.

"But when we don't know what the proration will be, the only solvency you have is the money in the bank," he said.

GISD will hold a public hearing on its budget at 7:30 p.m. Monday and is expected to adopt its budget at that time. The district will have a hearing and set its tax rate Thursday.

Bill Goodman, business manager for Ector County ISD, said the district wasn't surprised by the $3 million shortfall from state appropriations. "We have already amended our 1992-'93 budget to reflect (an expected) $5.1 million shortfall. "Of course, no one can really tell what the final figure will be," he said.

Districts throughout the state will receive a total of $306 million less than was projected by the state Legislature when it wrote a budget in 1991.

State education officials blamed the shortfall on bigger local property tax increases than expected, which drove up the amount of state aid received, as well as higher than expected increases in student enrollment and attendance figures.

An even bigger shortfall of $540 million is expected for the 1992-'93 school year.

The state appropriates school spending on a two-year basis, based on anticipated state revenues, local school tax rates, enrollment and daily attendance. Districts receive additional money for every penny of local taxes they levy.

In 1991, the Legislature estimated districts would raise taxes 5 percent, which was the statewide average for recent years. But districts raised taxes by an average of about 18 percent. Also, about 25,000 more students than expected enrolled in schools.

The 1991-'92 shortfall is $75 million more than TEA officials estimated it would be earlier this spring.

Some school districts around the state already had taken an expected shortfall into account when budgeting and spending. Others will have to dip into surpluses to pay bills or borrow money from banks to tide them over.

Gov. Ann Richards has said lawmakers will try to develop a new school finance formula to eliminate shortfalls in the next legislative session in January.

Richards is expected to call a special session after the November elections to try once again to write a constitutional school finance equalization plan as ordered by the state Supreme Court.

ENFORCE: Allies patrol skies

(From 1A)

Wednesday, saying one purpose was to prevent any attacks on coalition surveillance planes monitoring Iraqi military activities in the marshlands of southern Iraq. Bush accused Saddam of attacking the Shiite people of southern Iraq, a violation of U.N. Resolution 688 that requires Iraq to cease all suppression of its citizens.

Shiite Muslims, who make up 55 percent of Iraq's population, were crushed when they rose up against Saddam following the Gulf War defeat, but have kept up guerrilla operations based in the vast marshes of the south. The Iraqi military has recently stepped up its attacks on the region.

More than 20 American aircraft based on the Independence patrolled southern Iraq, some flying escorts for British Tornadoes helping monitor the special zone.

Pilots returning from the flights said none fired any of their air-to-ground missiles and they were not locked onto by Iraqi radar, although they flew over roads, rivers, airports and known surface-to-air missile sites.

Pentagon sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said they fully expect Saddam's forces to test U.S. and allied resolve with possible "cat and mouse" ploys, perhaps by flying aircraft just over or quite near the border of the no-fly zone.

But Hall said that so far the Iraqis were avoiding confrontation. He said that Iraq had moved all its fixed-wing aircraft and most or all of its helicopters above the 32nd parallel.

He said that of 40 flights on Thursday — the ban went into effect near dusk in Iraq — all were above the line, and that only two of 95 flights on Wednesday, both by helicopters, crossed the line.

"I don't think anybody expects anything to happen" immediately, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Thursday. "The evidence at this point is Saddam is not looking for a confrontation. It appears that he's keeping his aircraft above the 32nd parallel."

In Baghdad, the government denounced the ban as "aggressive, illegal and unjust" and said Saddam might order action against allied aircraft.

FAD: Shirts become games' hottest-selling item scarfing up T-shirts like those worn at the Olympic medal ceremonies by household names (in Vilnius, anyway) Rimas Kurtinaitis and Valdemaras Khomicus. One-third of the $30 shirt cost goes to the Lithuanian Olympic Committee; the band got nothing more than a good time.

"A small-time little thing, a small gesture from the heart, has become a fad," said Grateful Dead spokesman Dennis McNally.

While America's Dream Team was busy obscuring its warm-up logo with American flags, the Lithuanians proudly accepted their bronze medals in multicolored outfits more suited to Jerry (Garcia) than Larry (Bird).

"All those American millionaires covering up their logos, and then these guys . . . We felt great," McNally said. "Obviously, it was a gas."

Journalists in Barcelona paid $50 to get extras, while Lithuanian team members received offers of up to $150 for the green shirts off their backs.

A flood of callers to the NBA's Golden State Warriors in Oakland, Calif., where Lithuanian star Sarunas Marciulionis plays, knocked out the switchboard last week.

The demand coupled with Lithuania's need for funding for its post-Soviet Olympic program prompted the sale. The shirts are sold via the band's fax and toll-free phone numbers and by Ticketmaster.

McNally said the band's merchandising arm has received 20,000 orders since the shirts went on sale last week. Ticketmaster reported more than 5,000 orders in 48 hours.

McNally said the band — led by Jerry Garcia and legendary for the loyalty of its "Deadhead" fans — is not making any money from sales of the shirts, which were created by Phoenix entrepreneur Mike Fitzgerald and Not Fade Away Tie-Dye Co. based in Poughkeepsie, N.Y. They get a portion of the profits.

What attracted the Dead to a tiny Baltic republic with a teamful of players they've never met? Marciulionis was introduced to the band at a Detroit concert; none of the other players would know Bob Weir (guitarist-vocalist) from Bob Hope.

"The Grateful Dead are about celebration and freedom," McNally said. "It was utterly appropriate — this small country, emerging from the shadows after 54 years. What could be better than connecting with us?"

It's just another bit of good news for the Lithuanian hoopsters, who returned to the Games as an independent country after the break-up of the Soviet Union.

They won a medal by defeating the Soviet remnants, the Unified Team, in one of the Games' most emotional moments. Each team had four members from the Soviets' 1988 gold medal team — a group that favored hammers and sickles over slam-dunking skeletons.

"There's just something very loose and fun-loving with the Lithuanian basketball team," McNally said. "There's an affinity there."

Readers interested in buying the T-shirts can call the Grateful Dead merchandising line at 1-800-225-3323 or fax orders to 415-898-9695.

Peace talks continue as three more die

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — The bitter fighting in Sarajevo quieted Thursday for the first time since the weekend, but mortar rounds blasted a bread line and a cafe, killing three people and wounding 29.

As hospital workers collected the casualties, diplomats in London again cajoled and threatened the factions in Bosnia's ethnic fighting in an attempt to bring peace to the former Yugoslav republic.

But previous conferences have failed to stop the conflict, and Western leaders continued to oppose military intervention to force a settlement for fear of becoming entangled in a protracted guerrilla war in the rugged Balkans.

The two mortar attacks jolted a generally peaceful day in the Bosnian capital, which had been suffering since the weekend under a relentless artillery duel between Serbs in the surrounding hills and troops loyal to the Muslim-dominated government.

The republic's Health Ministry, reporting on casualties before the mortar attacks, said 31 people died and 189 were wounded across Bosnia in the previous 24 hours. In Sarajevo alone, 12 people died and 80 were wounded, it said. At least 8,000 people have been killed in nearly six months of fighting.

The first barrage of mortar shells hit in the morning, exploding near a line of people waiting for bread at the central bakery in the western section of Sarajevo near the Marshal Tito army barracks.

Women ran screaming with children in their arms. Old men and women tripped over one another, and blood splattered over the bread being distributed. Three people died and 20 were wounded.

A similar attack on a bread line in downtown Sarajevo on May 27 killed 20 people and prompted Muslim negotiators to walk out of peace talks.

That attack turned many governments against the Serbs, who were presumed to have fired the rounds. A U.N. trade embargo was imposed on Yugoslavia to pressure Serbia to stop helping Serb militants opposing the secession voted for by Bosnia's majority Muslims and Croats.

A Sarajevo Hospital doctor checks on Adnan Memic, 10, who was seriously injured while waiting in a breadline when a mortar exploded near him Thursday in Sarajevo.

A few hours after the bread line was hit on Thursday, 20 people were wounded when mortar shells wrecked the Pierrot cafe on a quiet side street in a hillside alley above the old city. The area had been considered relatively safe because its narrow passageways generally are difficult targets for snipers.

At the London peace conference, the United Nations announced plans to increase the size of its peacekeeping force in Bosnia from the current 1,600 soldiers. But the troops still would be used only to guard aid convoys.

Radovan Karadzic, the leader of Serbs in Bosnia, said Thursday that his forces were prepared to give up a fifth of the territory they hold in Bosnia — 70 percent of the former republic. That was likely to be unacceptable to Bosnia's Muslim leaders, who oppose the partition of the state.

Karadzic also announced that Serbs would close all their widely criticized prison camps in Bosnia and put their heavy weapons around big cities under U.N. control. But he agreed to U.N. supervision of heavy weapons in July and again on Aug. 18 without any noticeable decrease in the fighting.

U.S. carrier puts 20 aircraft over Iraq on patrol

ABOARD THE USS INDEPENDENCE IN THE PERSIAN GULF (AP) — More than 20 U.S. Navy planes flew off Thursday on the first patrol to enforce an edict banning Saddam Hussein's air force from rebellious southern Iraq.

The pilots returned safely and reported they had seen no Iraqi planes in the "no-fly zone" declared Wednesday by the United States, Britain and France. The pilots said they had fired no missiles and had not been locked onto by Iraqi radar.

"I saw a lot of brown dirt, a lot of blowing sand," said Lt. Jeff Roacha, 29, of San Jose, Calif., whose mission was to escort two British Tornado reconnaissance planes.

"It was a quieter than we thought it would be. ... If they were there, they were not trying to shoot us," said Cmdr. Tim Heely, 39, of Belleville Ill., an FA-18 fighter pilot. "There was no indication of anything down below."

Navy officers declined to discuss details of their missions.

President Bush on Wednesday gave Iraq 24 hours notice to keep its warplanes and helicopter gunships north of the 32nd parallel and stop attacking Shiite rebels in the vast marshes of southern Iraq. The ultimatum took effect at 10:15 a.m. EDT, around dusk in Iraq.

Pentagon officials said any Iraqi planes caught in the air would be shot down without warning. U.S. Air Force planes flew out of Saudi Arabia.

"There were U.S. airplanes all over the country — up, down, as far as the eye could see," said Lt. Randy Marr, 31, of Syracuse, N.Y.

Most of the Navy men on the first patrol had been over Iraq before — during the Gulf War, which ended in February 1991 with the ouster of Iraqi troops from Kuwait. They were still nervous, worrying about Saddam's reaction.

World in brief

Collor's impeachment appears inevitable

BRASILIA, Brazil — Support for President Fernando Collor de Mello continued to dwindle Thursday as two key supporters said his impeachment on corruption charges appeared inevitable.

"We're losing control of the game," Jorge Bornhausen, Collor's political coordinator, was quoted as saying Thursday in various newspapers.

Economy Minister Marcilio Marques Moreira, in a meeting with reporters, spoke of the president's "legacy" and Brazil's future after Collor's impeachment or resignation.

"Our institutions and the economy both are mature enough to administrate a crisis like this one," he said.

Many politicians who until recently defended Collor have deserted him.

Four traditionally pro-government parties said they would not back Collor in the impeachment fight.

Former British circus tiger kills child in park

BANGALORE, India — A tiger lunged at a jeep carrying tourists to a national park in southern India, killing a 4-year-old girl, the state government said Thursday.

An investigation was under way to determine why visitors were allowed into Banerghata National Park during the tigers' feeding time, said the state minister of forests, Eti Shambunath.

During feeding, meat chunks are dropped from jeeps into the park, 12 miles south of Bangalore, for the eight tigers, four panthers and hyaenas.

Shambunath said the girl, Miriam Afroze, was sitting on her grandfather's lap in the jeep when the attack occured on Sunday. The grandfather apparently lifted the child outside the window to have a better view of the animals..

The tiger lunged at the child and dragged her into the brush, where he began to eat her, Shambunath said.

Foreign ministers sign agreement to cease-fire

MOSCOW — Armenia and Azerbaijan said they were ready to call a cease-fire in their bloody dispute over Nagorno-Karabakh, but heavy fighting continued in the embattled enclave Thursday, Russian media reported.

In a memorandum signed at a meeting in Alma-Ata, Kazakhstan, foreign ministers Tofik Gasymov of Azerbaijan and Raffi Hovannisian of Armenia said their countries would cease hostilities Sept. 1, the Interfax news agency reported.

The talks, arranged by Kazakhstan President Nursultan Nazarbayev, were the latest effort to end more than four years of fighting over Nagorno-Karabakh, a mainly Christian Armenian region located within Muslim Azerbaijan. More than 2,000 people have been killed in the conflict, the bloodiest ethnic dispute in the former Soviet Union.

"It is impossible to find who is right and who is wrong in the conflict, Nazarbayev was quoted by the ITAR-Tass news agency as saying. "It is more important to outline real ways to stop it."

The agency said the two foreign ministers signed the agreement after Nazarbayev spoke by phone with Azerbaijani President Abulfaz Elcibey and Armenian President Levon Ter-Petrosian.

■ Jury indicts congressman on multiple charges

BOSTON — Rep. Nicholas Mavroules, D-Mass., was indicted Thursday by a federal grand jury on multiple charges, some of which may date as far back as 20 years, one of the congressman's aides said.

The indictments involve racketeering, bribery and tax evasion charges, according to published reports.

They were issued late Thursday but were sealed and won't be made public until today, said Mavroules spokesman Michael Greenstein.

Greenstein said Mavroules plans to surrender today to federal authorities. Another of the congressman's aides, Ellen Marlette, said he would plead innocent.

Neither Mavroules' lawyer nor federal officials would disclose the nature of the charges. But The Boston Globe and The Boston Herald reported Thursday that federal prosecutors were planning to seek racketeering, bribery and tax evasion indictments.

■ Judge sentences former police chief to 10 years

DETROIT — Former Police Chief William Hart was sentenced Thursday to a maximum 10 years in federal prison for embezzling $2.6 million from a police fund and for income tax evasion.

"You took from the people of Detroit, many of whom are poor and badly in need of resources themselves," U.S. District Judge Paul Gadola told Hart. He called the 40-year police veteran's crimes "heinous, outrageous and monstrous."

Hart, 68, was convicted in May of two counts of embezzlement and two counts of tax evasion. Prosecutors said he stole $2.6 million from a fund created to pay for drug buys and undercover operations.

Gadola sentenced Hart to 10 years — the maximum allowed — on each of the two embezzlement charges and three years on each of the tax charges. He said the sentences would be served concurrently.

■ Group claims GM full-size trucks have tank defect

WASHINGTON — More than 2 million General Motors pickup trucks are vulnerable to fires or explosions because their fuel tanks are mounted outside the frame rails, a consumer group alleged Thursday in urging a recall.

The Washington-based Center for Auto Safety asked the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration to investigate the alleged defect in 1973 through 1987 model Chevy and GMC full-size trucks with "side-saddle" tanks. Newer models have a single tank within the trucks' frame rails.

"Every owner of a GM full-size pickup rides at the risk of going up in flames if their vehicle is struck from the side," said Clarence Ditlow, director of the consumer group. He estimated 2 million to 4 million trucks are involved.

"There's nothing between the fuel tank and any vehicle that strikes it except a thin piece of sheet metal," he said. "They'll split open like melons in a crash."

Tim Hurd, a NHTSA spokesman, said the agency has 120 days to consider the petition.

"Historically, we haven't seen anything there to suggest a defect investigation (recall) would be warranted, but we're going to do a more comprehensive analysis," said Bill Boehly, NHTSA's associate administrator for enforcement.

In a statement dated Aug. 19, General Motors Corp. said the pickups meet federal standards, "including the specific requirement applicable to fuel system integrity."

AP poll: Democrats retain strong advantage

■ Americans are more likely to prefer the Democratic stand on economy and education.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Despite the prime-time pitch Republicans made at their convention, Americans remain more likely to prefer Democrats when it comes to the economy, education and their own futures, according to an Associated Press poll released Thursday.

As the 1992 presidential campaign intensifies, Democrats retain a strong advantage on issues that cut close to home. The Democrats' edge is particularly clear among women, a voting bloc Democrat Bill Clinton is making new efforts to tap.

The AP poll, conducted Aug. 21-25 after the close of last week's Republican National Convention, showed a narrowing gap between Democrats and the GOP since an AP poll after the Democratic convention in July.

Overall, 31 percent of the respondents to the latest poll said they would be better off in the future if Democrats won the White House this fall, compared to 21 percent who said they'd do better with Republicans. That was down from a 39-12 percent Democratic lead in July.

Still, the new survey showed Democrats ahead 13 to 19 points ahead when people were asked which party would better handle the economy and improve schools, and which was closer to them on most of the issues that mattered to them.

Underscoring the challenge to both parties, a large percentage of adults continued to say it wouldn't make much difference to their futures which party wins in November — 38 percent in August, down from 44 percent in July.

The GOP kept its traditional lock on the international front by a 48-29 percent margin in the new AP survey of 1,007 adults. In fact, a quarter of Democrats surveyed conceded the Republicans could handle foreign policy better than their own party.

Historically, voters tended to trust Republicans more than Democrats on economic matters. But that trend has been reversed in this campaign, apparently due to the recession and President Bush's response to it.

Forty-five percent of those questioned said Democrats would do a better job of handling the economy compared to 30 percent who chose the Republicans. Among women, the Democratic preference was even stronger — 48 percent to 25 percent.

The breakdown for women was similarly lopsided on other questions.

Asked which party would do a better job improving the nation's schools, 47 percent of women said Democrats and 23 percent said Republicans, compared to 46-27 percent overall.

On the question of which party "is closest to you on most of the issues that matter to you," 49 percent of women chose the Democrats compared to 29 percent for the GOP. Overall, the Democratic advantage was 46-33 percent.

Neil Newhouse, a Republican polling analyst, said the new AP poll underscores that "we have a ways to go in terms of party perception." But he said the statistics are less foreboding for the GOP than they might seem.

"Considering the state of the economy, being in a recession for two years now, to some extent it's encouraging that the numbers aren't worse. Neither party is close to 50 percent," Newhouse said.

Nearly a quarter of the women in the AP survey preferred the Democrats across the board on education, economics, foreign policy and issues that matter to them.

Earlier this week, Clinton announced a committee of prominent women to lead a Democratic outreach effort to female voters. His strategists believe he can attract votes from women put off by Bush's opposition to abortion, by his handling of the economy and by GOP attacks on Hillary Clinton during the convention.

Police jail anti-abortion leaders for violating court order

HOUSTON (AP) — The founder and another leader of the anti-abortion group Operation Rescue were jailed Thursday for violating a court order not to get too close to abortion clinics during the Republican National Convention.

State District Judge Eileen O'Neill found group founder Randall Terry and the Rev. Joe Slovenec in contempt of an Aug. 6 temporary restraining order barring protests within 100 feet of any Houston abortion clinic or within 25 feet of any person entering or leaving the clinics.

Terry maintains the order violates his First Amendment rights to free speech. "This is not China. This is America and this is deplorable," he said.

Terry and Slovenec surrendered to the Harris County Sheriff's Department early Thursday.

Slovenec testified at a hearing Wednesday before O'Neill that he knew he was within the restricted area Aug. 19. Terry said as much Thursday, saying, "We are going to jail this morning because we preached, prayed and made a plea to the president inside this 100-foot zone."

Neal Mann, attorney for Planned Parenthood Inc., said the anti-abortion protesters were just seeking a national audience.

Terry, of Harpersville, N.Y., and Slovenec, of Cleveland, Ohio, join five others in jail. Among them is the Rev. Pat Mahoney, national spokesman for Washington-based Operation Rescue. All five also have been fined $500 for violating the order.

Planned Parenthood sought the restraining order before the GOP convention when leaders of the anti-abortion groups said they would block clinics. The order expires Sept. 3.

The five can be released if they swear in court that they won't violate the order again. If not, each is to spend up to six months in jail.

Attorney Jay Sekulow said he plans to appeal the jailing of Terry and Slovenec.

Another anti-abortion protester, the Rev. Norman Weslin, leader of the Lambs of Christ, also was arrested after demonstrating outside a west Houston abortion clinic during the convention on Aug. 17.

Louisianians shed tears for losses; express relief that it wasn't worse

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — As Louisianians made their way back to hurricane-razed coastal neighborhoods Thursday, officials expressed relief that destruction wasn't worse and appealed for medical help at still-crowded shelters.

"We've been spared a major, major disaster," Gov. Edwin Edwards said during a helicopter tour.

Storm Andrew, still drenching Dixie as it weakened to a tropical depression, was blamed for one final affront: an offshore natural gas rig apparently damaged by the hurricane collapsed and caught fire at the wellhead. No pollution was reported, the Coast Guard said.

Officials throughout southern Louisiana began compiling damage estimates, but said no numbers would be available at least until Friday. Still, estimates likely will be measured in millions of dollars, rather than the billions of more densely populated Florida.

"All my things! All my things, my furniture," Linda Henson wept in Bayou Vista, west of Morgan City.

Under cloudless skies and steamy heat, a steady stream of cars, slowed by sightseers, returned to the coastal towns where Andrew's eye and 160-mph wind gusts came ashore Wednesday.

The cleanup began with chain saws and portable generators ringing out. A tow truck righted a toppled trailer and National Guard troops with Humvees and M-16 rifles took up posts. Store owners put up plastic sheets over shattered windows and swept up broken glass with shovels.

Everyone, it seemed, waited for insurance adjusters.

Communications were difficult. Local radio stations were out, and newspapers in Franklin and Morgan City haven't been able to publish since Monday.

'A lot of people lost material things, but it didn't take their inner strength. We'll bounce back.'

—John Jackson
Salvation Army volunteer

Knee-deep water receded quickly, leaving only scattered pools lying about. Stores and restaurants tried to open; however, most still lacked electricity. A few resourceful Cajuns cooked on barbecue grills and portable gas stoves and sipped instant coffee. The Salvation Army had 26 canteen trucks out delivering food and water.

"If we can keep their stomachs full, they'll be a little more contented," said Al Ritson, a Salvation Army official in Morgan City.

The hurricane, which ravaged subdivisions south of Miami on Monday, then raked the Louisiana coast 48 hours later, has already been labeled the costliest natural disaster in U.S. history. In addition to preliminary estimates of up to $20 billion in Florida damage alone, Andrew killed a total of 20 people in the two states and the Bahamas.

Its remnants crossed Mississippi on Thursday with winds of about 35 mph. Jackson recorded 4 inches of rain, the National Weather Service said, and about 29,000 Mississippi homes and businesses lost power. In Livingston, Ala., near the Mississippi line, Mayor Tom Tartt said wind damaged the roofs of several buildings.

The storm was on a track to cross Alabama and move into Georgia by Friday, forecasters said.

In Louisiana's inland parishes, where an estimated 10,000 people fled to 43 Red Cross shelters as Andrew approached, officials issued a plea for more workers to relieve 500 to 600 volunteers.

"We need medical personnel," said Alexandria, La., Mayor Ned Randolph. "Some of these people in the shelters need some medical care."

Power companies reported that 381,000 Louisiana homes and businesses had lost electricity, but that service had been restored to 214,000 of them by Thursday. In Morgan City, the mayor said residents should plan for two weeks without power.

"This is by far the worst hurricane I've been involved in," said Mayor Cedric LaFleur, who has held public office since 1968. "Almost every business place or home here has some damage — some major and some just damage to things like fences, carports and awnings."

Convoys of repair crews from power companies across the South were arriving to help, spokesmen at utilities said.

NOTICE OF COMPARABLE TAX RATES AND REVENUES

The legislature has enacted a statute on school funding to comply with a court manadate enforcing the state constitution. Under prior statutes (SB 1) the tax rate for last year provides $4,934 per student in state and local revenues. Under this statute (SB351) that same rate now provides $5,215 per student in state and local revenues.

State law only requires a minimum tax rate of $.0973 for country education districts. State law does not require a school district to adopt additional taxes. Neither does state law require a school district to adopt a tax rate that maximizes the receipt of state funds.

The board of trustees of the Greenwood Independent School District School District hereby gives notice that it is considering the adoption of a tax rate of 1.071 that will provide $5,263.21 per student in state and local revenues.

Andrew cuts costly path of destruction

The destructive force of the hurricane called Andrew was mind-boggling: $15 to $20 billion in damage in Florida's Dade County alone, not to mention the additional destruction in Louisiana and Mississippi.

In fact, long before the storm veered inland, just missing New Orleans, it was already being labeled the costliest natural disaster in U.S. history. And that assessment considers only property costs. The actual "cost" of a hurricane — like that from a tornado, earthquake or other natural disaster — is much greater when the measure of human suffering and death is added to the total. Such was the case with Andrew.

By Thursday morning, the number of deaths attributed to the hurricane and tornadoes it spawned had reached 20 and workers in Florida, Louisiana and Mississippi were still digging through rubble looking for more dead or injured people. But Andrew didn't stop with that bloody swath. In Florida, it left homeless at least 250,000 people, with the number still uncalculated in Louisiana and Mississippi.

The number of homes destroyed ran into the thousands and as many as 600,000 other homes were without electricity.

President Bush moved quickly to make help available to those in the affected areas. He freed up $77 million for emergency relief in Louisiana with an additional $10 million for the cleanup. Florida is to get $50 million, plus $10 million to hire temporary help to rebuild. That degree of assistance will help those whose homes and businesses were destroyed by the hurricane.

Yes, the homes, businesses, and shattered lives can be put back together. But the wrath of nature cannot be assuaged for those whose loved ones died in the storm.

The mystery of why a storm strikes one location wreaking death and destruction while failing to touch another nearby will always confound mankind.

French novelist Jacques Anatole Francois Thibault, better known to readers by the pen name Anatole France, once addressed that topic. He wrote, "Nature has no principles. She furnishes us with no reason to believe that human life is to be respected. Nature, in her indifference, makes no distinction between good and evil."

In the wake of Andrew, we are left to ponder that mystery again.

Free-trade pact gives U.S. way to gain more, lose less

Free trade is like a free lunch. There is no such thing. But there is such a thing as freer trade in a bigger market. That is what has been accomplished by negotiators from the United States, Canada and Mexico, who have labored for 14 months . . . to give birth to the North America Free Trade Agreement.

Although the United States stands to gain more and lose less than either Canada or Mexico, NAFTA faces a rougher passage in Congress than in Canada or Mexico.

It is estimated that the United States will gain two jobs for every one job that is lost by low technology industries moving south in search of lower labor costs and cheaper raw materials. The comparatively minor restructuring that will be required to take advantage of this vast market does not warrant the objections of organized labor, protectionist congressmen and environmental extremists.

President Bush is often criticized for lacking vision. He cannot be faulted on these grounds when it comes to sustaining America's position as the world's major trading nation. To his great credit, he has responded to the challenge posed by the European Community, which will have abolished all trade barriers between member nations by the end of this year.

America is now part of an even greater effort, the creation of a tariff-free market incorporating all the nations of the Western Hemisphere.

Saddam puts U.S. in awkward position in this election year

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's seesawing over inspection of possible weapons sites is growing quite tedious.

It is a game of brinksmanship that is untoward in this election year, as it puts the United States in a very awkward position.

If the United States moves against Iraq, President Bush will be blamed for practicing politics.

If, on the other hand, the United States does not deal forcefully with the dictator, it will be seen as being weak.

That may make Saddam feel empowered that he can put the U.S. in such a position, but it is a very dangerous game.

Already, there have been published reports that the administration planned to "provoke a confrontation" to help President Bush politically — which the president denied.

The U.S. clearly has the might to punish Iraq; whether it chooses to do so should be only in line with the U.N. cease-fire agreement and in collaboration with the U.N.

Bush needs help to win war on drugs

Anderson

In the victorious battle against Saddam Hussein, Bush wisely allowed a single battlefield commander, Gen. Norman Schwarzkopf, call most of the shots. Though the president does have a drug czar, no single person or agency coordinates the battle against drug dealers and drug use — despite the fact that Bush has hailed drugs as a threat to national security.

We've seen the latest example of this mess in a confidential General Accounting Office report that lists every government computer system that tracks anti-drug efforts. The report details a whopping 102 computer programs being used or developed by 33 different government agencies for the war against drugs.

"The agencies reported that these 102 systems are designed to support various counter-drug activities, such as case management and intelligence analysis, and to retrieve, store and manipulate different types of data," the GAO report states.

Ironically, reform efforts are severely hampered by secrecy that pits one government agency against another. The confidential GAO report, obtained by our associate Dale Van Atta, considered three National Security Agency computer systems to be too sensitive and highly classified to describe.

Moreover, it noted that the Central Intelligence Agency, which has beefed up its anti-drug effort, refused to provide any information on its drug-related computer systems. The Drug Enforcement Administration and other sources say it's just as difficult for other government agencies to get the CIA to share its anti-drug information with them so they can work together in the drug war.

Based on the information it did have access to, GAO leveled a major indictment: Too many computer systems overlap and waste precious anti-drug resources. Some computer systems can't even "talk" to each other and share information.

And some of the computer programs are terribly flawed. For instance, design deficiencies in one of the U.S. Custom Service's system for detecting and tracking drug smugglers has caused the system to associate flight plans with the wrong aircraft and to share the wrong information with other law enforcement authorities, according to a related GAO report.

Even when the computer systems do talk to each other, there is a tendency to share inaccurate or unreliable information.

In other words, Agency A shares an intelligence message with Agency B without verifying that the information is correct or qualifying the reliability of it. Agency B reformats the message and sends it out to others without indicating the origin of the information. The reformatted message may be circulated back to Agency A, whose personnel will now act on the information because they mistakenly believe that Agency B has confirmed the information.

Finally, the government lacks serious computer security controls as the anti-drug information is shared. Criminals might gain access to the information — which puts at risk not only the entire anti-drug effort but the lives of drug enforcement agents and their informants.

If the Bush administration is serious about the war on drugs, it has to convince agencies of the U.S. government that they are fighting on the same side of the battle.

CHARLEY REESE

National conventions are disconnected

One word describes the Democrat and Republican national conventions — disconnected.

Both conventions were so surrealist, so disconnected from the reality of American life, that the Comedy Channel convention coverage seemed normal. After all, what were 15,000 journalists doing at non-news events — two pre-planned, pre-programmed charades designed for television in which every event and every word spoken was pre-planned, pre-written, pre-edited and predictable? The anchors, commentators, and Rolodex experts were all reduced to banal chitchat — pretty expensive chitchat.

Reese

As an aside, the spectacle of a horde of journalists on expense accounts staring at a Disney-like animation show reminds one that perhaps the nation's news executives have a lot in common with General Motors executives.

Now I know what it was like to wake up and brush your teeth in Hiroshima in the summer of 1945. I know what it was like to be playing bridge on the Titanic, to be sleeping off a hang-over at Pearl Harbor in 1941. To hear the political rhetoric, one would think America was in great shape — some minor problems with recalcitrant Democrats or some minor problems resulting from uncaring Republicans, but nothing really to worry about.

One of two things is occurring and neither is reassuring. Either the major candidates are unaware of the economic peril this nation is facing or they are deliberately misleading the American people until one of them is elected.

I despise the greedy Wall Street types who amassed so many millions engineering job-destroying mergers and equations. At the same time, however, I recognize that these parasites are smart when it comes to finances and money. I'm beginning to think the explanation for the orgy of greed in the late 1980s was that these rats knew the nation's economic ship was going to founder and decided to grab some provisions for their personal lifeboats while there was still time.

The present situation — an accumulated $4 trillion debt, an annual interest cost of 200 or so billion dollars, an annual deficit pushing $400 billion, a continuing loss of jobs, and not a hint of any political courage or economic understanding in either party — portends a dark future. We are on the eve of what Arnold Toynbee called "a time of troubles."

But just as the politicians are avoiding the problem, so also are they avoiding the solution, part of which is a government that works. Neither the legislative nor the executive branches of the federal government work. They are inefficient on a mind-boggling scale and seem to lack the will to correct even the most obvious defects.

It's hard for me to believe that we as a nation have somehow become genetically incompetent to govern ourselves. After all, the same people who do not seem able to make government work, nevertheless show a great deal of ability in improving their own personal financial status.

The American people have been sold down the river. They have become largely a property-less proletariat, dependent on paychecks for survival, but paid in a currency others are free to inflate. That means the wage-earner can work to the point of exhaustion and never get ahead. The average American has been rendered economically impotent. He has no control over the businesses he works for and he has no control over the value of the money in which he is paid for his labor.

Thus the average American today is worse off really than a slave. At least, in the slave's case, the owner had a selfish interest in keeping the slave healthy enough to work.

Today, however, the wage-earner is as expendable to the capitalist as any other piece of equipment.

Charley Reese's column is distributed by King Features Syndicate.

WILLIAM MURCHISON

Many wonder who to trust for president

Even before George Bush and Dan Quayle rousingly accepted their renominations, the Republican ticket was rising in public favor. By the weekend, polls were starting to depict the race as essentially even. This seems about right. The Democratic millennium may have to be postponed at least until November.

Murchison

The ups and down of presidential politics are responsible in large part, but there may be another factor: In this value-oriented campaign, Bush-Quayle values may well look and sound better than the Clinton-Gore variety.

What? The "extremist" values of the Houston convention? Those kooky, hard-right, fear-riddled, hate-filled positions for which the Republican party has been excoriated by its self-appointed consciences in the media?

Exactly those values and positions: freedom, faith, family. It's interesting that just as soon as George Bush stopped acting and talking like the George Bush of the past 18 months — wobbly, indecisive, nail-biting — and began talking more like Ronald Reagan, behold, he gained ground.

Not exactly like Ronald Reagan, of course; no one talks like that but Reagan — the common-sense, common-touch blend of optimism fortified by conviction. But family, faith and freedom — these are powerful shibboleths. They were Reagan's. Bush now is reappropriating them. Had he never put them away, acting on God knows what forlorn instinct, he could not possibly have got in the pickle he has been in for so many months now.

"Who do you trust?" asks Bush. Put aside the lousy grammar. The question itself is astute.

"Trust me" is hardly an onward-to-sunlit-uplands appeal. Bush is saying merely, I'm a better custodian of your values than is my opponent.

Is he? It depends of course on what we value. Those who value primarily the recovery of a lost job may prefer Clinton, the candidate of kick-the-bums-out. With those whose minds are fixed on things larger and more enduring, like freedom of opportunity, Bush comes out ahead. Of the two big-party presidential candidates, Bush is the one more deeply committed to the free market as against the government initiative. I didn't say his track record on the free market was up to Reagan's standards or Clinton's down to Michael Dukakis'. I simply say Bush's is better.

Clinton, who claims to want the budget balanced, would establish a national system of government-paid health care. He would penalize success by confiscating its rewards. We would have again, as we haven't for 12 years, a government saying to the job-creating class — entrepreneurs — stop earning all that money!

On family values — a topic freely derided by Democratic commentators — Republicans easily have the upper hand, provided they use it. The Houston convention showed them ready to do so.

The Hillary issue is silly if one imagines our main mission in 1992 is to save the country from this one hard-as-nails feminist. How do those of us who don't know her know how "hard" Hillary is? She might be at least as nice as Bella Abzug. The point is, hard-as-nails feminism is widely — much more widely than the media would let on — perceived as a cause of family disarray and tension between the sexes. The Bush administration is saying, subtly, let's not yet turn over material power to these people: a point with which many concur.

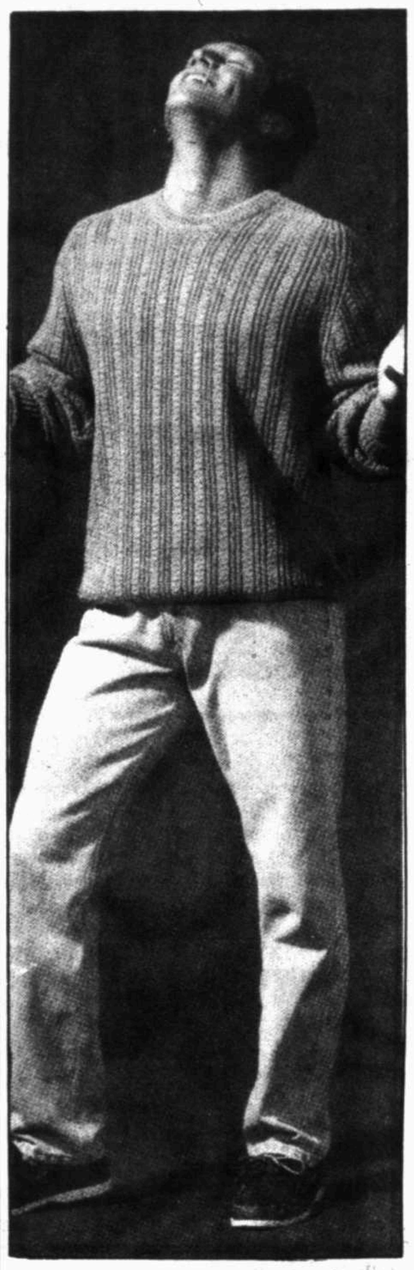

Democrats claim to be the party of the people. Today this claim is only slightly easier to substantiate than in the days of George McGovern (whom the young Bill Clinton worked furiously to elect president). We're an almost impossibly diverse society, but we do have some common interests, as well as some common dislikes. Among the latter is Congress, controlled and manipulated as it is by Bill Clinton's own party.

Yes, Clinton, claims to lead a "new" party. The old — that is, the pre-New York convention — Democratic party was controlled by big-spending, big-regulating interest groups. We're now to "trust" Bill Clinton's word that that party is dead and buried? Yes, we're supposed to: which helps explain those polls we've been looking at since Houston.

Farmers work for private company, consider themselves slaves

By Alan Cooperman
Associated Press Writer

BALOKHONIKA, Russia — A year ago, the Lenin Collective Farm was on the brink of bankruptcy. It faced huge debts, had no rubles to pay its workers and lost money on every gallon of milk it sold.

Today, the 9,100-acre farm belongs to a private Russian company based in Moscow, 250 miles to the east. It is debt-free, has a fleet of new tractors and is raising the pay of its employees.

Why, then, do workers mope around the dusty barns?

"We belong to a baron in Moscow. We consider ourselves slaves," said Mikhail Filchagin, a 20-year-old tractor driver who leaned against a barn wall, a greasy wrench dangling in his hand.

His "baron" is not an aristocrat, but an entrepreneur — Alexei Filonov, a physicist turned computer dealer whose company, Noos Ltd., bought the Lenin Collective Farm from its 432 workers last fall.

Regional officials say it is the first Russian collective sold to a private company. The sale made use of loopholes in laws that still do not allow private ownership of land.

Land reform has barely begun in most of Russia. Fewer than 5 percent of its 24,000 state-owned and collective farms have been reorganized in the past year, according to Alexei Ulukayev, economics adviser to President Boris Yeltsin.

As of March, only 370 collectives had dissolved themselves and shared out their land, Ulukayev said.

Some farmers are eager for the return of capitalism after 70 years of communist central planning. But many, like Filchagin, fear unemployment, are angered by growing inequality and resent private owners.

Reformers say Russia must convert the huge, inefficient collectives into private farms if it is to have any hope of feeding its people. But the experience of the Lenin Collective Farm indicates the process will be slow and painful, with large financial, legal and psychological obstacles.

Stalin used terror and famine to force peasants onto collective farms in 1929-1936, at the cost of an estimated 11 million lives. Now, the grandchildren of many of those peasants no longer want to run family farms.

"Your own land? No, not for me," said Anatoly Shmonin, 32, who has been plowing and sowing the red clay soil of the Lenin Collective for 15 years.

He said some of the soil is poor, the cost of equipment and fertilizer is soaring and there is more security in working for the farm's new owner than in striking out on his own.

According to official statistics, the number of private farms in Russia is growing rapidly. There were 71,000 in March and new ones are added at the rate of 8,000 to 10,000 per month.

Most, however, are little more than home vegetable gardens whose owners register as private farmers and sell their produce in free markets.

Last year, private farms produced only 1 percent of Russia's food. In 1992, the figure is expected to be 3 percent to 4 percent, Ulukayev said.

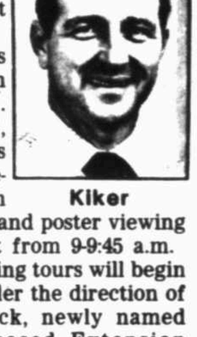

Collectives remain the backbone of Russian agriculture, even though they are grossly inefficient.

After buying the Lenin Collective, Noos Ltd. brought four experts from the Poltava Agricultural Institute in Ukraine to streamline the operation.

Annual A&M event begins on Sept. 3

The Texas A&M University Research and Extension Center's annual Sheep and Goat Field Day has been set for Sept. 3. This year's event is being dedicated to George Ahlschwede who recently retired after 18 years as the Center's Extension Sheep and Goat Specialist.

Kiker

The Center is located on North U.S. Highway 87, about six miles from San Angelo. Registration and an exhibit and poster viewing period will last from 9-9:45 a.m.

Outside walking tours will begin at 9:45 a.m. under the direction of Frank Craddock, newly named San Angelo-based Extension (TAEX) Sheep and Goat Specialist. Some of the programs presented will be "Managing Sheep to Reduce Damage from Spear Grass," "Prevention of Soremouth and Other Diseases" and "Ratites (Ostriches and Emus)."

The session will begin with a special recognition of Ahlschwede by Carl Menzies, the Center's Director of Research. Ahlschwede retired March 31 after 27 years of extension work in Texas and with the Kansas Cooperative Extension Service. A strong leader in state and national sheep and goat circles, Ahlschwede was instrumental in starting the sale of performance-tested rams following the annual Sonora Ram Performance Test. The test and sale features rams from some of the top Rambouillet flocks in the world. It is touted as the single most significant factor in the improvement of sheep across West Texas.

Speakers include Darrell Ueckert, Billy Warrick, Andres de la Concha, Charles "Butch" Taylor and Jake Landers.

Earnest C. Kiker is Midland County Extension Agent for Agriculture.

Texas company ranks in top 50 for meat, poultry

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Texas-based Pilgrim's Pride Corp. has placed among the nation's top 50 meat and poultry companies, according to an industry magazine report.

Pilgrim's Pride, based in Pittsburg, Texas, with plants in Texas and Arkansas, ranks 17th in the nation in the July issue of Meat & Poultry magazine.

The rankings are based on sales for 1991 fiscal year. Pilgrim's Pride logged $787 million in sales.

ConAgra Inc. of Omaha, Neb., kept a firm grip on the No. 1 spot with $12.5 billion in sales from 75 plants operating under 37 subsidiaries.

Three Arkansas-based companies, including fourth-ranked Tyson Foods Inc. of Springdale, were among the top 50 in the report.

Hudson Foods Inc. of Rogers, Ark., was 18th, while Simmons Industries Inc. was 43th.

Tyson had $3.9 billion in sales for the fiscal year ended Sept. 29, the magazine said. That compares with sales of $3.8 billion for the previous 12-month period.

Tyson, the nation's largest poultry producer, employs 45,000 people in 52 plants around the country. It is Arkansas' largest employer with 22,428 people working in 21 poultry, meat and other food plants.

Hudson Foods had sales of $765 million during the fiscal year ended Sept. 28, up from $667 million the previous year.

Leadership Texas official recruits in Midland

Organization aims to deliver network to female leaders

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff writer

An official from Leadership Texas — a group of women working together to build contacts throughout the state — stopped in Midland Thursday to recruit new members.

"We take women who are already in leadership positions and help give them networks to become better leaders," said Candace O'Keefe, executive director of Leadership Texas.

"Our organization is designed to enhance women's leadership skills in both the public and private sector. We go through a yearlong series of seminars around the state learning about people," she said.

The organization is focusing on West Texas, Ms. O'Keefe said.

"We know there are a lot of powerful female Texas leaders, and we know many of these women live in West Texas," she said.

But since the program's inception in 1983, only six of the 790 graduates hail from Midland.

Ann Bradford, a Department of Human Services employee in Midland, graduated from the program in 1991.

'It's a good ol' boy network only it's girls. If you can't do it yourself, you can find someone who can.'

— Ann Bradford

"It was one of the most rewarding types of experiences ever," she said. "With the number of women in leadership roles attending these seminars, it really gives us the opportunity to be with another 99 women who can relate to the issues."

Ms. Bradford said she has used her "networks" often and cited one example when a Leadership Texas graduate who works for an airline helped her find free airline tickets for an ill child and his family.

"It's a good ol' boy network only it's girls," she said. "If you can't do it yourself, you can find someone who can."

The program, established by a group of women in Austin, is strictly non-partisan.

"Every year we learn about something new. In 1993, we will discuss quality of life issues — the environment, education and so on," Ms. O'Keefe said.

Next year seminars will be held in Houston, El Paso, Fort Worth, East Texas and Austin.

Applicants, only about half of whom are accepted each year — must pay a $3,000 tuition plus traveling costs.

Women wishing to apply may write: Leadership Texas, 3500 Jefferson, Suite #210, Austin, 78731-6200. The deadline is Oct. 1.

Keep Midland Beautiful wins $10,000 matching grant for more trees

■ Trees to be planted along roadway to CAF complex at Midland International Airport.

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

Keep Midland Beautiful (KMB) has won a $10,000 matching grant from the Small Business Administration to plant trees along the new roadway to the Confederate Air Force (CAF) complex at Midland International Airport, Sharla Hotchkiss, KMB executive director, said on Thursday.

"I think we ought to improve the environment at every opportunity," said Ed Vogler, a KMB director and Midland's "Johnny Appleseed."

The airport tree-planting project is more of Vogler's efforts toward the "greening" of Midland through planting more decorative, hardy and drought-resistant trees.

The planting of trees, such as live oak, cedar elm, Chinese pistache, desert willow, and Afghan pine, and the installation of irrigation lines to the trees will be monitored by the Texas Forest Service, Ms. Hotchkiss said.

"The Texas Forest Service will administer the grant and make sure we do it (the tree planting) right," Ms. Hotchkiss said. "That way you know you are doing it right, and those trees will live."

Once they are well established, the trees will be easy to maintain and won't need a lot of water, she said.

Ms. Hotchkiss noted that the tree planting is a "continuation of Ed Vogler's efforts to beautify our airport as an extension of Midland. We are lucky to have someone of Ed's vision on the airport board."

Planting trees is a long-term project for Ed, Ms. Hotchkiss said. "He is a visionary. Most people want something done today, but Ed has the patience and foresight to plan for the future."

Bob Rice, executive director of the CAF and the American Airpower Heritage Group, including the Flying Museum, said news of the matching grant to dress up the CAF entrance was "terrific."

"We are very pleased," Rice said. "We look forward to working with Mr. Vogler and Sharla in the placing of those trees. With that kind support, we can't go wrong."

'If you see a project that needs to be done and can be done, you just bite the bullet and get in there and do it instead of sitting back and waiting for somebody else to it.'

— Ed Vogler

Vogler said that it gives him "great satisfaction to conceive and develop the idea to bring people together to accomplish landscaping at the airport."

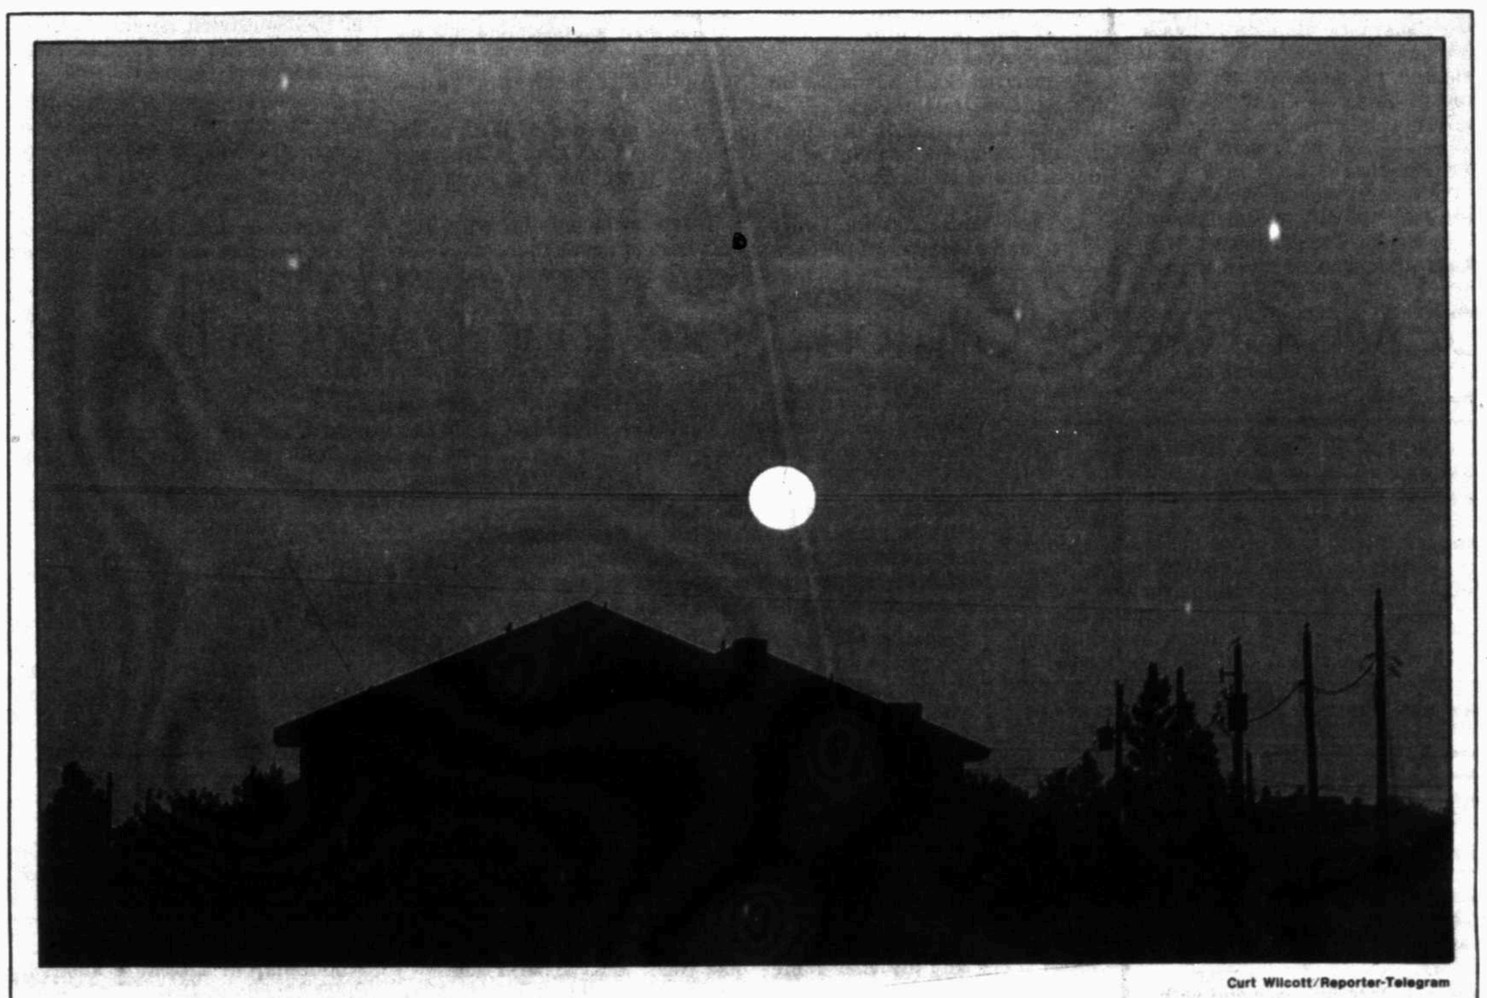

"If you see a project that needs to be done and can be done, you just bite the bullet and get in there and do it," Vogler said, "instead of sitting back and waiting for somebody else to it."

In promoting tree planting, Vogler has told adults and children alike that "people should be more like trees, because a tree gives more than it takes" by supplying the world with beauty, oxygen, and, at last, lumber for building homes and furniture.

"That is his philosophy," Ms. Hotchkiss said, "and I think that is Ed's life. Ed has given more than he has taken."

Vogler, a consulting geologist and civic leader who has lived in Midland since 1949, said that the greening of Midland through tree planting enhances the beauty of the West Texas plains country and makes Midland more attractive to visitors, travelers, leaders of potential businesses and industries that might settle in the Midland area, and hometowners.

"The projects that we (KMB) do affect every person in the community," Ms. Hotchkiss said, "whether it is picking up trash, or planting trees or working on waste-reduction and recycling and presenting educational programs in the school system."

Clinton-Gore ticket takes to roads of Texas

AUSTIN (AP) — Bill Clinton set out Thursday on a bus tour through Texas, hoping to shore up support in traditionally Democratic regions of President Bush's adopted home state.

Clinton picked up an endorsement in Austin from the Combined Law Enforcement Associations of Texas before speaking to an outdoor rally of about 7,000 people on the University of Texas campus.

Clinton-Gore supporters waived Texas flags and withstood sweltering heat as they waited for the bus caravan, which left San Antonio Thursday morning and stopped to greet crowds along Interstate 35 in New Braunfels and San Marcos.

Former first lady Lady Bird Johnson appeared with Clinton and running mate Al Gore in Austin, where they commemorated what would have been Lyndon B. Johnson's 84th birthday.

When he arrived in Texas' capital city, Clinton didn't waste any time before attacking Bush and his approach to the economy, environment and health care. He said even congressional Republicans haven't been supportive of Bush's budget proposals.

Clinton pledged to make America competitive in growing global economy.

"The people here at this great university know that we are living in a smaller and smaller world," Clinton said.

And he stressed his usual campaign themes of reducing health care costs and offering college financing to people who could pay back the government loans with community service.

Clinton received perhaps his most enthusiastic applause in response to his pro-choice stance on abortion.

"Yes, we do believe you can be pro-family and pro-choice," Clinton said.

Gore tried to appeal to Austin's environmental interests. Voters recently approved an ordinance that would strictly limit development upstream from the famous Barton Springs natural pool.

"I'm here at the home of Barton Springs to tell you that that self- proclaimed environmental president just plain has it wrong," Gore said. "This country can create millions of new jobs by leading the environmental revolution, not dragging our feet and bringing up the rear."

Earlier, Clinton told the law enforcement union he is not a newcomer to crime problems and reminded the CLEAT officials he once was attorney general in Arkansas.

"Unlike the present administration, I want to see the money go back to grass roots efforts to fight crime and punish criminals," he said, adding that he supports the so-called Brady bill that would require background checks for felonies before gun sales.

Clinton and Gore began the bus tour earlier in San Antonio, where a mariachi band, Mexican folk dancers and about 3,000 people greeted the Democratic candidates along the San Antonio River Walk.

Former San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros led the crowd in cheers for Clinton and Gore as they, Gov. Ann Richards, U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen and other key Democrats arrived on a river barge.

"Never ever have I seen the level of enthusiasm that we have seen today in Texas for Bill

Junior enrolls in university program

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

Before she could speak in sentences, Celeste Hoggan could read words spelled out in magnetic letters, said her mother, Barbara Hoggan.

"By the time she was three, she could read at least first-grade books," Mrs. Hoggan said.

At 4, Celeste went to a school for gifted children.

So she would get a quality education, Celeste attended first grade at a school her mother and other parents of gifted children formed. The concerned parents hired a teacher and rented a room at the YMCA in El Paso.

At 15, Celeste is off to college.

Celeste attributes her rapid learning to her educational environment and her mother.

"Anyone at all can go as far as I have," Celeste said.

"She's (her mother) pretty much has given me this opportunity," she said.

This fall, Celeste — who recently completed her sophomore year at Midland High School — will be enrolled in classes at the University of North Texas in Denton.

Celeste is one of about 200 students statewide, and one of two from Midland, entering the scholarship program offered by the Texas Academy of Mathematics and Sciences (TAMS).

The program allows students to complete their first two years of college and receive a high school diploma.

"I'm looking forward to the experience and having kids all around me with similar goals and potential," Celeste said.

But, Celeste admits, she was a little apprehensive about attending the program a few months ago.

"I wasn't real sure about it at first . . . missing out on the last two years of high school and missing out on your family and friends. A lot of kids aren't willing to let that go (but) it's going to be fun," she said.

"I think I made a good choice deciding to go," Celeste said.

The TAMS program is aimed at two fields of study, physics and engineering, in which Celeste will be enrolled, and biomedical study.

"I'm happy for her. I think she'll really enjoy it," her mother said.

Although Celeste will be moving away from home and into a dormitory, she won't be that far from her family. Celeste's father, Kerrie Hoggan, has accepted a job in Dallas — about 20 minutes away from Denton.

"This essentially is a coincidence. We can't believe it," Mrs. Hoggan said.

"I can see her as often as I want," she said.

After completing the program, Celeste said she will continue her education.

"I'm sort of planning on majoring in chemical engineering," said Celeste, adding that those plans are not final.

And perhaps she'll attend Brigham Young University in Salt Lake City, Utah, she said.

"I've got two years to decide," Celeste said.

Authorities find body; mystery envelops town

BY Chip Brown
Associated Press writer

EARTH, Texas — Residents in this tiny West Texas town had more questions than answers Thursday after authorities confirmed finding the body of a 5-year-old girl missing since May.

Shawnlee Perry's body was discovered in a remote pasture just west of this agriculture community, nearly four months after the blonde-haired, blue-eyed girl walked out of her house to play with friends.

The town of 1,500, which poured over its dusty, country roads looking for Shawnlee hours after she was reported missing May 7, wanted reassurance Thursday.

But there was none.

Police acknowledged few leads, and an autopsy revealed little.

"This is a heinous crime, and I think this guy needs to be brought to justice," said Curtis Coffman, police chief in Earth. "It may not be tomorrow, this month, or this year, but with a crime like this there is no time table."

"An examination confirmed that the body is of Shawnlee Perry, but we are still doing some studies to confirm the cause of death," forensic pathologist Dr. Jody Nielsen said after examining the child's body in Lubbock Thursday. "Her body was so decomposed there is no way of telling if foul play was involved.

"The circumstances of her being found in an abandoned field is the most suspicious thing we have right now."

Dr. Nielsen said it could be a week or longer before a cause of death is known.

Shawnlee's mother, Becky, was consoled by friends and family at her home.

Mrs. Perry's sister, Paulette Garner, said the family was in shock.

"We are all devastated," Mrs.

DEATHS

James Emerson

Services for James "Carl" Emerson, 53, are set for 1 p.m. today at Bellview Baptist Church with the Rev. G.A. Magee officiating. Burial will follow in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Emerson died Wednesday at a local hospital.

He was born March 25, 1939, in Sunray, where he grew up. He graduated from Eunice High School in Eunice, N.M., in 1958 and attended West Texas State University.

He married Genell Helms on Dec. 16, 1961, in Hobbs. The couple moved to Midland from Hobbs in 1975, when he was transferred by Imco Services. He was employed by M-I Drilling Fluids at the time of his death.

He was a member of the First United Methodist Church of Sunray, the Society of Petroleum Engineers, American Petroleum Institute, Ranchland Hills Country Club and the Petroleum Club.

Survivors include his wife; one son, Warren Emerson of Haskell; two daughters, Rhonda Stephenson and Pam Sherman, both of Midland; his mother, Mildred Poston of Eunice; one sister, Billie Fay Schumacher of Sunray; five grandchildren and many nieces and nephews.

Pallbearers will be Bob Williamson, John W. Mulloy, Ted Triplett, Jerry Bryan, Chuck Kleinert, W.B. "Dub" Johnston, Jimmie Hughes and Hudson Routh. Honorary pallbearers are Jerry Dunnam, Bill Hunt, Charles Robinson, George Huff and Wayne Lindsay.

Memorials should be directed to the Allison Cancer Center or the Bellview Baptist Church Building Fund.

LUBBOCK — Services for Earnest Salman Ameen, 85, father of a Midland woman, are set for 2 p.m. Saturday at St. John's United Methodist Church with the Rev. Ted Dotts, chaplain, officiating. Burial will follow in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Resthaven Funeral Home.

Ameen died Wednesday at a Lubbock hospital following a lengthy illness.

He was born April 12, 1907, in Schwefeit, Lebanon.

He was an Army Air Corps veteran of World War II, serving with the 335th Bombardiers Squadron and received the Croix de Guerre (War Cross) from French President Charles De Gaulle. He wrote a column describing his war experiences for the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal from 1942-'45.

He married Soad Hassanille on Feb. 26, 1945, in Lubbock.

He was a salesman in the clothing business and a member of St. John's United Methodist Church. He was a 32nd degree Mason of the Yellow House Masonic Lodge No. 841, and a member of the Scottish Rite Temple and the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Survivors include his wife; two daughters, Cynthia Grubb of Midland and Linda Rice of Lubbock; two sons, Larry Ameen of Dallas and Rusty Ameen of Phoenix, Ariz.; one sister, Mabel Phillips of Sarasota, Fla.; two brothers, Dr. Ray Ameen and Camel Ameen, both of Houston; and six granchildren.

Pallbearers will be members of his Masonic lodge. Honorary pallbearers are Charles Bell, Chakeeb Dakour, Charles Cabnool and Granvil McElroy.

Memorials should be directed to the American Cancer Society.

Jesus Lara

PECOS — Rosary for Jesus "Chuy" Lara, 48, brother of a Midland man, will be recited at 7 p.m. today in Pecos Funeral Home Chapel. Mass will be celebrated at 1 p.m. Saturday at Santa Rosa Catholic Church with the Rev. Miguel Marin officiating. Burial will follow in Evergreen Cemetery under the direction of Pecos Funeral Home.

Lara died Wednesday at his Pecos home.

He was a mechanic and a Catholic.

He was preceded in death by his father, Ladislao Lara in 1984 and by one sister, Socorro Ronquillo, in 1988.

Survivors include his wife, Juanita Lara of Pecos; four sons, Jesus Lara Jr., of Phoenix, Ariz., and Harvey Lara, Jeray Lara and Michael Lara, all of Pecos; three brothers, Secundio Lara of Midland, Vicente Lara of Chandler, Ariz., and Lupe Lara, Bakersfield, Calif.; four sisters, Rita Mata and Rosa Hinojos, both of Odessa, and Ricarda Neily and Teresa Valverde, both of Bakersfield, Calif.; and his mother, Maria Lara of Bakersfield, Calif.

May Chappel

Services for former Midlander May B. Chappel are set for 10 a.m. Saturday in the Grace Chapel of First United Methodist Church with the Rev. J.B. Stewart officiating. Burial will follow in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Chappell died Tuesday in Dallas.

She was born in Clarksdale, Miss., and attended Hollins College in Roanoke, Va., before graduating from the University of Texas at Austin.

She was a former travel agent and was a member of the Museum of the Southwest, Junior League of Midland and the First Methodist Church of Midland.

Survivors include one daughter, Lacy Durham of Mississippi; one sister, Mrs. Shedric Hill Roberson of Mississippi; and two grandchildren.

Memorials should be directed to the Museum of the Southwest or a favorite charity.

GOP blasts lawsuits; Perry draws criticism

AUSTIN (AP) — Joining a GOP accusation that Bill Clinton favors trial lawyers, Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry said Wednesday that the lawsuit problem is growing and "every Jose in town wants to come along and sue you for something."

Perry later said he didn't mean to offend Hispanics and apologized.

"To anyone that is offended, I certainly apologize," he said. "But that ain't the issue that we're talking about."

State Sen. Eddie Lucio, D-Brownsville, defended Perry, although the lawmaker said he and the Republican commissioner differ on presidential choices.

"I've known Rick since 1986. I just know Rick too well to believe he would try to be rude to the Hispanic community or belittle the Hispanic community," Lucio said.

"I'm for Clinton. I'm also a tort reformer. There is lawsuit abuse in the Rio Grande Valley that we need to look at," Lucio said.

A lawyer for the Mexican American Legal Defense and Educational Fund and a Texas civil rights advocate both criticized Perry.

"I don't think there's any way you can take those statements except as intending to be insulting to a specific group of people. He certainly isn't talking about Dallas or West Texas," said Judith Sanders-Castro of MALDEF.

"This is a classic case in my view of why you have to have lawsuits. You can't depend on people like Rick Perry to protect minorities. The only way you get these folks to comply with the equal rights protection of the constitution is to sue them. He may not like that," said Jim Harrington of the Texas Civil Rights Project.

Perry's comments came at a news conference where the Republican campaign arm, Victory '92, accused Democratic presidential candidate Clinton of being "in the back pocket" of plaintiffs' lawyers and contributing to a lawsuit boom.

Perry said lawsuits and malpractice insurance costs had driven doctors out of small towns and were closing rural hospitals.

"There are people being denied health care in ... rural Texas because of the frivolous lawsuits of those ambulance-chasing lawyers out there," Perry said.

But he said everyone is in jeopardy.

"Whether you're a father wanting to coach a Little League baseball team or do whatever, you are exposed in the litigious society that we live in today," Perry said, adding:

"I mean, it is silly. Every time you turn around somebody is slapping a lawsuit on you. And I can speak from experience ... Let me tell you, I've got to have a legal-sized notepad single-spaced now to list all the lawsuits. Every Jose in town wants to come along and sue you for something.

"And that is what we're addressing today — just the overwhelming ease with which lawsuits are filed. You drive along that road in the (Rio Grande) Valley from Harlingen to Brownsville and it seems — I'm sure I'm exaggerating just a tad — but that every other billboard says, 'Hurt in an accident? Call me.'"

Asked about his comments, Perry told reporters that he didn't mean it as an insult. "If anyone took that as a racial slam, then they certainly were misreading it," he said.

He said subsequent criticism of him was an effort to draw attention from the argument that too many frivolous lawsuits are hurting the state.

"It's strictly a smokescreen they're throwing up ... to divert people's attention from the issue at hand, tort reform in the state of Texas and this nation," Perry said.

Responding, Ms. Sanders-Castro said, "Somehow or other, the trial lawyers and the Mexican-Americans in the state of Texas are responsible for the economy, which is causing hospitals to close and businesses to leave. That's a big stretch."

The Victory '92 group said it would be running newspaper ads urging votes for President Bush and criticizing Clinton for being too cozy with trial lawyers. The ads are to appear in Texas cities Clinton visits on his two-day bus tour.

"We have a legal crisis in this country," said Rob Mosbacher, chairman of Victory '92.

DEMOCRATS: Clinton, Gore tour Texas in buses

(From 1B)

Clinton and Al Gore," Richards said later. "They say, 'Can we carry Texas?' And I say, 'You bet your life we can carry Texas.'"

Clinton told his San Antonio supporters he does not intend to abandon the defense industry, saying he favors investing money from defense cuts into job training for the future.

Clinton also said he favored production of the V-22 Osprey, manufactured in Arlington.

Former congresswoman Barbara Jordan, a keynote speaker at the Democratic convention, also joined the Clintons and Gores in Austin. Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro, Clinton's Texas campaign chairman, and San Antonio actor Tommy Lee Jones also were part of the entourage.

After Austin, the bus caravan headed north to Waco, then was to visit cities in East Texas on Friday. Campaign officials said the trip was aimed at regions of the state the Democrats see as critical to challenging Bush in Texas.

Cisneros said the trip was intended to force Bush to defend his political base. Cisneros said he expects Clinton to visit other parts of South Texas this fall to secure support among Hispanic voters.

On the way to Waco the bus caravan made stops to greet supporters in Georgetown and Salado.

Clinton and Gore arrived two hours late in Waco, where about 7,000 supporters cheered them on next to a lighted suspension bridge over the Brazos River. Clinton reminded the crowd that he is a Southern Baptist.

"Bush says that he's from Texas. ... I do not have a hotel room in Houston," Clinton said. "But my daddy was born here and I've got kinfolks here and I'm a whole lot more like you than he is."

EARTH: Finding leaves tiny town with questions

(From 1B)

Garner said. "We didn't want this to be the answer. The fact that she was so close makes it that much harder."

Mrs. Perry had bought Shawnlee school supplies in hopes she would be found and able to enroll in kindergarten this week, Mrs. Garner said.

"Becky never gave up hope that Shawnlee would be found," Mrs. Garner said.

Residents expressed sympathy but acknowledged they won't rest easy until Shawnlee's death is solved.

"Things like this just don't happen in Earth, Texas," said city secretary Noel Pittman, who has lived in Earth since 1966. "There's a lot of shock and disbelief going through everyone's minds."

Over at Springlake-Earth school, teachers and students struggled with the news.

"It makes you kind of scared to go outside," said 9-year-old Kevin Rodriguez, a fourth-grader. "I'm sure not going to stop and talk to any strangers."

Debbie Haberer, a first-grade teacher, said her 6-year-old students were "concerned and scared."

"We will probably talk about this the rest of the year. First graders don't forget something like this," Mrs. Haberer said.

Like the children she teaches, Mrs. Haberer said she had a lot of her own questions.

"I want to know who did this," she said. "You hope it was someone passing through, but you wonder if it's someone living in the community.

"I think a lot of people felt she might turn up far away, like California. We all felt like we made such a thorough search. We knocked on every door, searched every dumpster."

Shawnlee's decomposed body was found shortly before 6 p.m. Wednesday in a pasture about 5 miles outside of Earth, said Lamb County Sheriff's Deputy Tracy Bridges. A man mowing grass in the area reported finding the body amidst weeds and brush 4- to 5-feet tall, Bridges said.

The FBI, Texas Rangers and the Department of Public Safety had been investigating Shawnlee's disappearance as an abduction, but clues and tips were scarce.

Vehicles collide west of Midland

Staff report

Two people were in good condition Thursday after a two-vehicle accident Thursday morning west of Midland.

According to a Texas Department of Public Safety report, John Bourke, 24, of Midland was driving a 1975 Dodge four-door east on the north service road of Highway 80, about one mile west of Midland. A 1988 Dodge pickup, driven by Laura Cunningham, 45, of Stanton, exited off of the highway to head west. The pickup failed to yield the right of way and struck the other vehicle in the left side.

According to the report, Ms. Cunningham allegedly passed out before the accident because of a hypoglycemic attack.

Both were in good condition at Midland Memorial Hospital.

Blood drives begin Saturday

Staff report

Two blood drives to benefit the Permian Basin Regional Blood Center and the West Texas people it serves will held Saturday, according to Renee Henderson, PBRBC donor-resource specialist.

The Pilot Club of Midland will sponsor a blood drive from noon to 5 p.m. in the blood center at 200 Airport Plaza at Midland Regional Airport.

Then, from 7 to 9 p.m., a blood drive will be held in the KOCV-TV studio on the Odessa College campus during the television station's pledge campaign to support the Public Broadcasting Service.

Energy Department wants 4,250 drums for WIPP tests

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Scientific uncertainty over the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant gives the U.S. Energy Department the right to haul more than the recommended amount of radioactive material to WIPP for testing, a department official says.

Assistant Energy Secretary Leo Duffy said Wednesday the Energy Department wants the right to haul at least 4,250 drums of radioactive material to the repository for testing, despite a recommendation that 2,400 drums are enough.

House-Senate conferees have been debating a bill that would allow the department to test 0.5 of a percent to 1 percent of the nuclear waste repository's total capacity. The 2,400 drums recommended by Sandia National Laboratories represent 0.28 percent.

Sandia, the Energy Department's scientific adviser on the project, recommended in June that the department cut the number of tests it plans at WIPP. The lab also urged that only 2,400 drums of waste be brought in for the tests, which are supposed to determine if the site is acceptable as a permanent repository for defense-generated transuranic waste. The site is located 2,150 feet underground in salt caverns 26 miles southeast of Carlsbad.

The June 22 study recommends the number of bin tests be slashed from 138 to between 25 and 50. That translates to 150 to 300 drums of waste. And Sandia urged that the number of alcove tests, involving about 1,050 drums, be cut from five tests to just one or two.

Rep. Bill Richardson, D-N.M., said Wednesday through a spokesman that the Sandia study "proves my point that you don't need to conduct as many tests as DOE says."

Chevron USA Inc. announces closure of controversial terminal

AUSTIN (AP) — An oil company has announced it will close its fuel terminal in a neighborhood where residents have complained of health ailments.

Chevron USA Inc. said it will stop operations, possibly by the end of the year, in exchange for being dropped from a county investigation of possible civil and criminal pollution violations.

Kirk Watson, chairman of the Texas Air Control Board, on Thursday praised Chevron's decision. "Although it may not be the ultimate solution, it does achieve the goal of distancing the neighborhood homes from the tank facility."

Six oil companies operate fuel terminals at the so-called tank farm, which is located on a 52-acre site. The terminals provide about 80 percent of Austin's gasoline.

Chevron's announcement came one day before a deadline set by Travis County Attorney Ken Oden for all six oil companies to agree to cease operations or relocate in exchange for an end to his pollution inquiry.

"We hope this is the beginning of the end," said Ron Davis, chairman of the East Austin Strategy Team, a coalition of groups fighting the tank farm operators. "We hope a domino effect takes place and that all the companies will close."

Oden said several of the other oil companies appeared close to following Chevron's lead.

The oil companies maintain there is no evidence linking their facilities to residents' health problems. Chevron said it made the decision to close "based on business considerations and to give the neighbors more peace of mind."

Judge moves capital murder trial of paroled killer McDuff to Houston

WACO (AP) — The capital murder trial of paroled killer Kenneth Allen McDuff was moved to Houston Thursday on a change of venue because of the difficulty expected in seating an impartial jury in McLennan County.

District Court Judge George Allen agreed to move the trial because of extensive pre-trial coverage of the case. Houston was chosen because "the same conditions here in McLennan County would exist in adjoining counties."

Judge Bob Burdette, who presides over the 184th State District Court in Houston, will hear McDuff's trial. Attorneys for both sides said they do not expect the case to be heard until early next year.

McDuff, 46, is charged with capital murder in the deaths of Waco convenience store clerk Melissa Ann Northrup and prostitute Valencia Kay Joshua.

McDuff sat silently wearing a blue suit and tie throughout the two-hour pre-trial hearing. He seemed most attentive while his attorneys played a videotape of his May 6 arraignment in Waco on federal charges.

"I know the type of people who live here," said McLennan County District Attorney John Segrest. "It's likely we could find 12 jurors and two alternates in this city.

Segrest joked that the only difference with the case being tried in Houston was that "we just simply live out of a hotel room."

Attorneys for both sides said Houston was a logical choice because of a large number of potential jurors. Segrest said Dallas was "probably not an option," alluding to McDuff's past history in the area.

Walter Reaves, one of McDuff's two court-appointed attorneys, said the nature and extent of pre-trial publicity made it impossible to find a fair and impartial jury.

"I can't imagine twelve people who haven't heard about this case. If there was ever a case that called for a change it is this one," Reaves said.

Reaves and Dwight Goains presented more than 80 pieces of evidence they felt showed the extensive role the media has played in the case.

"The damaging part has been the consistency and persistence of the fact he has a prior conviction for capital murder," Reaves said.

Segrest said he agreed the publicity has been extensive, "however it has not been biased."

Allen also ruled on 10 pre-trial motions, including allowing McDuff's attorneys to view crime scenes and permitting the defense to use its own forensic expert.

The judge also said the state must give McDuff's attorneys a list of potential witnesses and give them notice of certain evidence to be used during different phases of the trial.

The one-time death row inmate has twice been paroled since being convicted in the 1966 slaying of a Tarrant County teen-ager. His death sentence was commuted to a life term in 1972 when the U.S. Supreme Court ruled the death penalty unconstitutional.

The attention McDuff has received would make it difficult to select an impartial jury in McLennan County, lawyers said.

Officials say the larger pool of potential jurors in Houston makes it more likely to find jurors unfamiliar with the case.

State in brief

■ Police arrest man who swam to barge

SAN ANTONIO — A man was arrested Thursday for jumping in the San Antonio River and swimming to a barge carrying Democratic presidential nominee Bill Clinton.

Rodolfo Macias, 38, of San Antonio, was carrying a letter for the Arkansas governor. An aide took the letter from Macias about 9:20 a.m., but it was not known what the contents were or whether Clinton actually received the letter.

A city ordinance forbids people from diving into or swimming in the San Antonio River. Macias appeared before a city magistrate, who accepted his guilty plea and sentenced him to time served. Macias was then released.

Clinton was in San Antonio for a speech during a campaign bus tour around Texas.

■ Parents turn over custody of son to relatives

FORT WORTH — A couple convicted of starving their 13-year-old son to death have agreed to give temporary custody of their other son to relatives in Idaho.

Jay and Linda Hill signed court documents Wednesday accepting the Department of Human Services' recommendation to place Douglas, 12, with James and Yvonne Langford.

The Langfords are Douglas' paternal aunt and uncle. None of the other parties who had expressed interest in obtaining custody formally objected.

"It's just about done," attorney Ernie Bates said after the Hills signed the court papers. Bates represented Jay Hill's parents, Barbara and Leon Hill.

District Judge Scott Moore must sign the papers before the order becomes legal. The Hills have not relinquished their parental rights to Douglas.

On Aug. 13, the Hills were sentenced to 99 years in prison for chaining and starving their oldest son.

Stephen Hill died 13 days after paramedics found him in the family's trailer home, emaciated and in cardiac arrest.

■ Fast-food manager wins lottery prize

LAREDO — A 23-year-old fast-food restaurant manager from Sherman became the state's newest millionaire in the Texas Lottery's 11th grand prize drawing on Thursday.

Bruce A. Wolfe, who said he didn't need any lucky charms because just being at the drawing was lucky enough, threw his cowboy hat in the air and jumped in the air as he opened up the safe containing his million dollar prize.

"I feel good," said Wolfe, who pumped his fist in the air as the crowd at the Laredo Civic Center chanted, "one million dollars."

Runners-up in the drawing were: Mary Escobedo, 47, of Austin, who won $50,000; Manuel Rodriguez, 50, of El Paso, winning $25,000; Marie Lavoie, 48, of Sachse City, who won $15,000; Ray Boeker Sr., 61, of Houston, who won $15,000; Evelyn Anderson, 60, of Davilla, who won $10,000; and Melissa Peveto, 23, of Orange, who won $10,000.

Task force considers health system overhaul

AUSTIN (AP) — A task force Thursday began consideration of major initiatives to expand health care coverage in Texas including establishment of a government-run insurance plan.

Steps toward replacing private insurance with government-administered health coverage received vigorous debate during the Texas Health Policy Task Force meeting.

The 29-member panel is expected to submit its recommendations to Gov. Ann Richards and the Legislature in November.

Richards has said she wants health care reform to be one of the major topics tackled by lawmakers during the regular legislative session that starts in January. She said she wants to expand coverage to children and pregnant women.

In its preliminary report, the task force has called for a statewide health system for children and pregnant women through a central fund that would be financed with federal health funds, and other resources.

Those resources could be in the form of a payroll tax on employers, task force members said.

A 1 percent payroll tax would raise $1.2 billion annually and draw another $2.1 billion in Medicaid funds, task force members said.

Task force member Joe Phillips of McAllen, who runs a chain of convenience stores, said he could pay payroll taxes of 3 percent and still break even under the proposed system because of reduced insurance costs.

State Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, said such a system would save children's health care costs by encouraging early, less expensive treatment.

The task force is concluding its recommendations after numerous public hearings held statewide.

Between 3 million and 4 million Texans are uninsured, which includes 1 million children. More and more of the uninsured are coming from single- and two-parent families who are living above the poverty level and are also working, the task force report said.

According to the task force's study, one in four pregnant women have no form of health insurance, and every dollar spent on prenatal care saves approximately $3 in newborn intensive care costs.

Richards spokeswoman Margaret Justus said the governor has not seen the proposal, but added, "She called this task force to come up with some bold initiatives to solve this problem of Texans who don't have access to health care."

Officials accuse nurse of violating Texas laws

AUSTIN (AP) — State nursing officials say the former head nurse of a Hondo nursing home where 12 disabled children died under questionable circumstances violated Texas law on five occasions.

The complaint by the Texas Board of Nurse Examiners against Ethlene "Nell" Dees was made public Wednesday.

Ms. Dees, 41, faces disciplinary action, including possible loss of her nursing license, according to records obtained by the Austin American-Statesman.

Ms. Dees did not return a telephone call from The Associated Press.

She was director of nurses at the Heritage Manor Care Center of Hondo until Dec. 6, 1991.

The nursing home in Hondo, 40 miles west of San Antonio, nearly lost its Medicaid funding this year after state health inspectors uncovered questionable circumstances in the deaths of seven children. Later, the Texas attorney general's office discovered five other children also died.

Investigators said they found a pattern of death in the Hondo facility: A physically disabled child would develop severe respiratory problems and the nursing staff couldn't, or wouldn't, perform lifesaving measures. This was revealed in documents obtained earlier this year by the Austin newspaper.

Ms. Dees violated the law by failing to initiate cardiopulmonary resuscitation on an 8-year-old boy found without a pulse in a wheelchair on April 6, 1991, the board charged. The boy, Juan Zuniga III, died from respiratory failure, other documents show.

The nurse also violated state law by failing to contact a physician in a timely manner when an 8-month-old boy went into respiratory distress, the board charged.

Ms. Dees failed to tell the doctor the baby suffered respiratory arrest and was receiving CPR, the board charged. When Dees called for an ambulance, she failed to report it as an emergency, the board charged.

Other documents show the ambulance didn't arrive for 25 minutes for the baby, George Washington Edmond III. Ms. Dees told her staff that Edmond had a "do not resuscitate" order, documents show, but he was a ward of the state, and the Texas Department of Human Services had never requested such an order.

The nursing board charged that Ms. Dees violated state law by failing to tell the staff that a physician had ordered a 3-month-old infant be transferred to the hospital if he responded to CPR. The boy, Noe Delgado, died in his room after Ms. Dees told workers to stop CPR even though he had responded, documents show.

Ms. Dees now works as director of nurses at Alta Vista Nursing Center in San Antonio, according to the staff there.

Kathleen Lamm, supervising investigator at the nursing board, said she could not say whether Ms. Dees remains under investigation for the other deaths in Hondo.

Ms. Dees will have an opportunity to respond to the charges before the nursing board decides whether to discipline her, Ms. Lamm said.

Loan corporation sends notices

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Guaranteed Student Loan Corp. has mailed the first wage withholding notices to Texans who defaulted on federally guaranteed student loans.

Recipients of the notices have 30 days to make repayment arrangements or file an appeal before their employers are told to withhold up to 10 percent of their net pay.

Borrowers who make voluntary repayment won't be subjected to wage withholding, officials said.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Long-overdue recognition comes your way. The events of December bring out your leadership qualities at a time when higher-ups are looking for people to promote. A romantic attraction could take you by surprise early in 1993. Look before you leap into an all-consuming relationship. New financial gains are likely next spring. Expand your network of business contacts in May. Service-oriented projects will bring the greatest rewards after June 1.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actors Ben Gazzara and David Soul, baseball's Ron Guidry, figure skater Scott Hamilton.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Trying to analyze everything takes the spontaneity out of life; go with the flow for a change. A romantic encounter proves delightful. Visualizing your dreams helps bring them to pass.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Make only those commitments you intend to keep. Say "good-bye" to someone who tries to restrict you. It is possible to be honest with those you truly care about without hurting their feelings.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Look for inexpensive ways to add comfort and pizzazz to your home. Grab a paint brush or a hammer and nails. Dare to do something really different to spark up your social life.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You can teach an old dog new tricks if you are patient. Introduce new ideas slowly. An indirect approach works best in both business and romance. Avoid issuing ultimatums.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Acts of kindness and compassion will be repaid tenfold. No one can take advantage of your good nature without your cooperation. Speak up if someone trespasses on your privacy.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Talking out of turn could land you in hot water. A change of office routine brings a huge sigh of relief. Partner is supportive of your efforts to turn your life around.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Stubborn resistance to change is a mistake. Discuss new ideas with a close friend and then go ahead with them. Even if a relationship is rocky, keep your chin up.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Being hypersensitive to criticism gives other people too much power over you; become less reactive. A new admirer boosts your spirits. Put your money to work by spending wisely.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your charm will work wonders on difficult people; they will never know what hit them! Be willing to treat younger people as equals. Teamwork leads to spectacular gains on the work front.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Make the first move in a romantic relationship. A lighthearted approach will produce the best results when dealing with someone who can be stubborn. Keep your word.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A close relationship could occupy your thoughts today. Shared adventures bring you and loved one closer together. Be willing to start from the ground up in business.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Stay in the good graces of your parents; you may need their help in the near future. Act with confidence in career situations. The sky is the limit where salary is concerned!

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	6 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Two of ♠

How do you play the club combination in the North-South hands? That question is unanswerable unless you know how many tricks you need from the suit and whether the game is rubber bridge or duplicate.

You reach six no trump in quick time. North adds 17 points to your announced 16 and knows the combined holding is sufficient for a small slam, but lacking a few points for a grand, and makes the value bid without further ado.

Suppose you are playing rubber bridge, or in a major knockout team competition. You have eight tricks in the other three suits and need only four from clubs to land your slam. There isn't a problem if the clubs are no worse than 4-1. And you can protect against any 5-0 break.

Win the opening spade lead in dummy, come to hand with a heart and lead a low club. If West shows out, insert the jack and you will later be able to finesse against East's nine to net four tricks. If West produces the queen, four tricks are there for the taking in top cards. If West follows low, play the ten, and your only problem occurs if East shows out. In that case return to hand with a heart and lead another club toward the jack, and four tricks in the suit are again assured.

Does that mean that you should play the hand the same way at duplicate? Since you can safely assume that most pairs will be in the slam, you can't ignore the possibility of an overtrick should East have the queen. Since that's far more likely than the possibility of West holding all five clubs—the only distribution that threatens the contract—at a pair competition you should take the club finesse.

Bruce Willis hits stage to raise funds for victims of hurricane PITTSBURGH — Bruce Willis took a break from filming his next movie and hit the stage with his harmonica to raise money for victims of Hurricane Andrew.

Willis

The actor and his band, the Termites, played Wednesday night at a riverfront complex along the Allegheny River. In sunglasses and a khaki suit, Willis crooned "Who Do You Love?" and other rhythm and blues tunes.

No admission fee was charged, but the American Red Cross collected donations. The agency hadn't tallied the money by Thursday, when a second show was planned.

Willis released an album in 1987. He is in Pittsburgh for the filming of "Three Rivers," in which he plays a riverfront police officer tracking a serial killer.

PHILADELPHIA — NBC reporter Andrea Mitchell said she probably wouldn't have appeared on the "Tonight" show last week had she known she was a replacement for fellow reporter Arthur Kent.

Kent was suspended by NBC on Aug. 12 for refusing an assignment and Mitchell said she learned just an hour before taping Aug. 21 that he had been fired.

"I didn't want it to appear I was in any way taking sides by appearing on the show," she said in an interview published Thursday by The Philadelphia Inquirer. "I can't take sides. I don't know the issues. I never met Arthur Kent."

Mitchell said she was called the day before the show as a last-minute guest.

"They told me a guest had canceled and asked if I could fill in," she said. "I assumed it was an actress or comedian. I had no idea it was Arthur."

Kent, who was based in Rome, was fired amid a long-running contract dispute. Mitchell is based in Washington.

LOS ANGELES — Writer William Peter Blatty contributed $3,000 to the funeral expenses of a high school football player who died of heatstroke after a practice in 102-degree heat.

"His 15-year-old son plays football, so he really feels for the parents," said Blatty's assistant, Patti Ullman.

Sergio Echevarria, 17, collapsed Aug. 18 and died after practice at San Fernando High School. He was buried Wednesday in Michoacan, Mexico.

The money from "The Exorcist" author was added to $485 raised by the school football team and school officials. "They just gave whatever they had — quarters in some cases," football coach Tom Hernandez said.

Blatty lives in suburban Hidden Hills about 20 miles from San Fernando.

CHARLESTON, W.Va. — Conchata Ferrell, who played a pushy entertainment lawyer on "LA Law," said she was fired in an effort to save the show.

"I've just about worked through being bumped from the show. It hit me pretty hard," Ferrell said in an interview published Thursday in The Charleston Gazette.

Ferrell, who portrayed Susan Bloom, was let go in June after one season. Several other stars also left. The NBC show's ratings have dropped steadily.

"They perceive the show as being in trouble," she said. "They saw last year as being a very dark year and I came to symbolize last year. I think I got caught in the political backlash."

She said she worried about her future on the show after Diana Muldaur, who played attorney Rosalind Shays, was written out of the show. Her character fell down an elevator shaft.

"I watched that elevator shaft all year. It finally got me," Ferrell said.

Ferrell, a Charleston native, received an Emmy nomination for her work on the show. The awards will be announced Sunday.

Richard Moe, a Civil War scholar and Washington lawyer who was chief of staff to Vice President Walter F. Mondale, has been elected as the seventh president of the National Trust for Historic Preservation. The organization is devoted to preserving buildings and sites considered important to America's past.

Moe was selected from among 700 candidates by the trust's board, headed by Robert M. Bass, Texas businessman and philanthropist. He said in a statement that Moe's accomplishments "from the grass roots to the White House" qualified him to be a leader in the preservation field.

Moe, 55, a grandson of Norwegian immigrants, began his public-service career in Minnesota, where he was a volunteer in Hubert H. Humphrey's Senate campaign in 1960 and eventually became the chairman of the state's Democratic Party.

He moved to Washington to join Mondale's staff in 1972 and became the chief of staff in 1977, serving also as a member of President Jimmy Carter's senior staff.

Moe said Wednesday in a telephone interview that his interest in American history began when, as a boy, he listened at a church meeting to the reminiscences of a Civil War survivor.

Designer creates collection for local store

Creations feature designs that are 'artistry in fabric'

By Elizabeth Edwin
Lifestyle editor

Designer Koos van den Akker was scheduled to be at Robbie Casey's in Midland Thursday and today showing his fall and winter collection, but business forced him to return to New York ahead of schedule. However, he left behind the collection and his assistant, Peter Dewilde, along with a special collection designed especially for Robbie Casey.

The collection designed for Robbie Casey's is black and white, "with just a touch of color," Dewilde said. "It is designed in silk tweeds instead of wool tweeds to go more with the climate here."

In this collection, Dewilde said the narrow silhouette is very important, but often has a full jacket for balance.

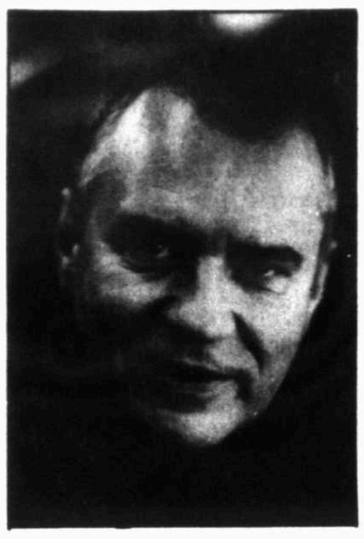

"I'm very excited," Robbie Casey said of having a collection for the store. "He has such a beautiful style, such beautiful clothes."

Known as Koos, he is billed as a true couturier, a ready-to-wear designer of international fame and an artist whose distinctive touch is evident in furs, sweaters, shawls and lingerie.

And artistry is what many of his designs are. He enjoys using fabrics daringly, even so far as to create his own fabric patterns by combining other fabrics together.

"His clothes have a lot to do with graphics. He has a signature trim in his graphics," Dewilde said. "It is so interesting to see him work. He doesn't sit down and draw something, then give it to someone else to make. He creates each piece himself. He doesn't know what it is going to look like at the end of the day; he doesn't know until he is finished with it."

Each jacket he creates is a one-of-a-kind, so, "When you walk down the street, you say something with a Koos," according to Dewilde.

Koss van den Akker

THE KOOS collection is known for its separates which are great for traveling. Each piece can be mixed and matched with others to create different looks. "His pieces can work with different accessories to go from day to evening as well," Dewilde said. "Those who are Koos clientele will also notice that certain fabrics repeat in the collection each year to help them add to their wardrobe and keep their collection up-to-date.

"The essence of his collection is versatility," Dewilde said.

"Fabric is my inspiration," Koos was quoted as saying. "The most important thing is how it looks and feels. For the wearer, of course, it is a kind of personal expression. And for my women, there just has to be a touch of fun involved. Otherwise, what's the point."

The importance of fabric in is creations is evident. Not only are the individual fabrics important, but an interest in texture is created in the way he combines the fabrics. For some of the skirts in the collection, Koos has created his own plaid pattern by sewing together various fabrics that make it appear as if they are one piece, yet with an extra dimension of texture. He even uses prints on suede to create a new and different look. The focus of the fabrics for collections in the south is on lighter weight fabrics.

"He loves to mix the casual and the sophisticated look," Dewilde said, mixing such things as wool jersey with lace and brocade.

KOOS ALSO enjoys redesigning outdated fur styles to a '90s look. Many of the fur pieces shown at Robbie Casey's combined fur with materials such as wool jersey, brocade and velvet to create capes, coats and jackets.

"He loves to pick up fabric. He goes to antique stores, just anywhere, he's always looking for fabric. He might see a beautiful scarf and cut it up and use it," Dewilde said.

Like every designer, Dewilde believes Koos likes to express his feelings through his designs. "Now, with the economy, everything is so basic. He likes to rebel against that a little. He wants you to know you don't have to wear a uniform. He comes up with some very special pieces for each personality," Dewilde said. "You can have your basic jeans and a top, but then put a Koos jacket over it, and you have a personality."

As for skirt lengths, Dewilde said it is not an issue in the Koos collection. "Women are going to wear what length they prefer. We have long, straight skirts, we have short full skirts. The skirt should be in proportion with the jacket and right for the woman who wears it," he said.

"People dress very differently in the South," Dewilde said. "I believe the time spent in San Antonio (where there also is a Robbie Casey's location) and here will influence Koos' fall collection next year. People here like color, and not the typical fall colors we are accustomed to.

"I think his palette will be brighter for next year," he said.

KOOS IS originally from Holland. He moved to New York City in September 1968 and opened his first store in New York City on Columbus Avenue in the fall of 1970. Two years later, he moved the store to West 72nd Street and three years later to 795 Madison Ave. After 15 years on the Avenue, Koos moved the store around the corner to 34 East 67th Street, where he now occupies a complete downstairs floor of a townhouse.

"He loves to travel, but he always likes to come home to New York. He loves the city. There are so many beautiful people there and so much energy," Dewilde said.

In the over 20 years Koos has been in the United States, his loyal followers run the gamut from Brooke Hayward Duchin, Barbara Walters and Jane Pauley to Diahann Carroll, Erica Jong, Glenn Close, Marilyn Horne, Magic Johnson and Bill Cosby, who wears Koos' sweaters on his television series.

The Koos collection will be informally modeled at Robbie Casey's, 4410 N. Midkiff, 10 a.m.-5:30 p.m. today, and Dewilde will be on hand to answer questions.

And while Koos himself will not be on hand, Bill Cunningham of the New York Times offered this insight to Koos: "The beauty of embellishment, the eloquence of texture, the generosity of color, the dynamic mix of fabrics, the divine oddity of the coat as a painter's canvas. It would be easy to pass Koos off a feisty maverick, but he is much more. He is a genuine poet of cloth."

Macy's loses its fur salon

N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — A sign of the decline in the popularity of furs: Macy's Herald Square store has stopped carrying furs and has converted its fur salon, a prime space on its third floor, into a boutique called Designer Separates. Don't expect to find famous designer labels there. The shop features the season's hot fashion items pulled together in one place to make it easy for the customer in search of the new.

"It's a collection of items from different designers," said Bruce Binder, the store's fashion director, "little people who do separates rather than collections. The kind of designers who usually sell in specialty stores rather than department stores. We never knew where to put their things before. Now we have a showplace for them."

And what are the hot items in Macy's opinion? Animal prints, knitwear, leather, vests, long skirts, shirts and western wear.

Some of the items combine more than one trend. There are Adrienne Landau's leopard-patterned fake fur vests ($150); shirts by Nick and Nora, in both leopard prints and cowboy prints ($180); hand-knitted sweaters by Roberta Freymann that picture a cowboy on a bucking bronco or two leopards wrapped around the body ($250 to $350); Begedor Italia's fringed black leather jeans ($595), and Vakko's black leather vest with animal-spotted collar ($700).

Macy's seems to be on the right wavelength, to judge by what is selling at its competitors. Both Bloomingdale's and Saks Fifth Avenue report with glee that women are shopping again. The stores are not questioning whether the cool weather in the Northeast is responsible or whether women are just getting hungry for something new. While sales figures are not complete, the stores are content to see clothing moving off the racks.

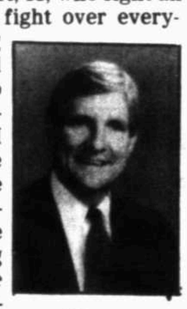

At Bloomingdale's, the main categories selling are animal patterns, leather, men's wear-inspired looks, vests and the colors red and gray (the store's current fashion promotion is "Gray Expectations").

FAMILY MATTERS

Siblings' fighting ruins vacation

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: We have a boy, 12, and a girl, 11, who fight all the time. They fight over everything. Nothing seems to small or too big to have an argument over. I swear I have spent my entire summer refereeing. If one says something is one way, the other immediately insists that it's another, and neither one will ever give up. Once they start fighting, nothing can get either to stop or even agree that the other has a point. I did put a stop to their hitting, but I can't seem to put a stop to their fighting.

May

When we went on vacation, my husband got involved and he was as bad as the kids. He is at work most of the time, and with their schedules and his schedule, they just don't see that much of each other. When they kept fighting on vacation, he started getting on me about how bad "MY" kids were, and so we fought and they fought. It was just a great vacation!

Even though I was mad at him for almost a week after we got back, his comments did make me see just how much the kids did fight all the time. I know that they are good kids. They both make very good grades and have plenty of friends, and each has several outside activities. I try to encourage each of them to develop his and her own interests. I think that they have done that. I just can't understand why they fight all the time.

I just don't know what to do about them. I never fought like they do with my sister, and my husband and I rarely have a cross word. I really can't remember a fight between the two of us until our infamous "vacation from hell." What can I do to get them to stop fighting? I know that they really do love each other, but the fighting is getting to be too much. FRUSTRATED

DEAR FRUSTRATED: I'll share some ideas about family fighting that you may find useful, but remember, family conflict is not necessarily bad. It can be made a useful growing experience. Rivalries between siblings are generally inevitable and, I believe, natural. With your children so close in age, you can expect to have conflicts. One of our jobs as parents is to teach our children how to "fight" in a way that they learn to respect and tolerate differences.

Drs. Jeffery and Carol Rubin offer several suggestions for breaking the non-productive "stuck" fighting cycle. These sound like common sense ideas but, as they point out, "When was the last time you saw someone use common sense in the middle of a fight?"

■ Understand the enormous importance of saving face. Teach your children to give the other a graceful way out of his or her position.

■ Look for ways to change a position without losing face. Try moving the fight to another room or another physical place.

■ Try going first. Show your children how either might make the first move to resolution by "getting something by giving something."

■ Show that you can be trusted. Rather than each acting in the worst possible manner, encourage your children to take a risk and show the other that he or she can be trusted to respond reasonably.

■ Take the historic view. As you have noted, the children to love each other, so in a "non-combative" time point out the dynamics of the fights and how new methods might help. Family meetings provide an excellent forum for this discussion.

Let me also mention several suggestions the Drs. Rubin offer toward helping negotiate the resolution to a family fight. They suggest that you help your children do the following:

■ Increase the number of options. Help them see other options that might work.

■ Expand the pie. Make it possible for both to get what they want if reasonable and possible — sometimes it's not.

■ Exchange favors. I do something for you and you do something for me. This is an important technique for getting along in the world.

■ Logroll. Learn to yield sometimes, and later on with another issue you will support me (not as immediate as "exchange favors").

■ Cut costs. When neither can get exactly what he or she wants, try to get a little for both.

■ Trade this time for the next. An old childhood concept — taking turns based on the event.

■ I cut, you choose. Let one generate alternatives and the other choose among the alternatives.

Try some of their ideas with your children and see how they work for you. Have a family meeting and discuss these ideas before implementing them. I have found that most children are cooperative if they have a sense of what you are trying to accomplish. Good luck!

DEAR ABBY

Couple afraid to find out that dad is deadbeat

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dear Abby is on a two-week vacation. Following is a selection of some of her favorite past letters from 1972 and '73.

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: This is my problem, and you are my last resort: Five months ago, my father-in-law borrowed a large amount of money (for us, anyway) because he said he wanted to get a divorce. At the time we didn't know that he was planning a big wedding and a two-week honeymoon in Mexico.

Van Buren

The unwritten agreement was that he would pay us back in 60 days. Well, it is now five months later, and we have not seen one dime of our money.

My husband has been out of work and our baby has been sick off and on for the last couple of months, and we sure could use our money.

If my father-in-law didn't have the money, I could understand, but he seems to have money for furniture and household improvements. Any suggestions? — HOPEFUL

DEAR HOPEFUL: It's those "unwritten agreements" that are hard to enforce. Talk to a lawyer. You may have given your father-in-law a much more generous wedding gift than you intended to.

DEAR ABBY: Larry and I are in our 20s and have been married for two years. We have been a happy couple up to this point, except for one thing.

Last summer Larry started to bet on the horses, and ever since then he has been betting them regularly. He goes to school during the daytime, but he works a 4 p.m. to midnight shift. Right now he is off work with a broken leg (skiing), but he goes to bingo every chance he gets.

The way Larry gambles we can't save anything. I work and do my part, but I can't carry the whole load.

If it weren't for my husband's gambling, he would be a perfect husband. He doesn't drink or smoke, and he is very respectable. He says he loves me and I come first, but I am beginning to wonder.

Have you any suggestions? — FIRST (AFTER GAMBLING)

DEAR FIRST: My guess is that Larry is a compulsive gambler, and unless he is willing to help himself, no one can help him. I can put him in touch with Gamblers Anonymous if he can't find it listed in his telephone directory. I would wish you the best of luck — but luck has nothing to do with it.

DEAR ABBY: What makes a woman cheat on her husband? He's a hard worker, gives her all he can and has never mistreated her in any way. They have gone through a lot of rough times together and have six beautiful children, from 10 years old down to 2.

The woman is myself, Abby. I am not in love with my husband, but I can't tell him that or it would kill him.

I have met another man who means everything to me. It's not just sex. We enjoy being together, talking on the phone, and lots of little things.

He is leaving the state soon and has asked me to go with him. I told him I would go. I love my children, Abby, but there is no way I can take them with me.

What can my husband do to me if I leave him with six children? Don't tell me to see a head shrinker. I am not crazy; I just don't want to pass up the only chance I've ever had for real happiness. Help me. — SAD BUT HAPPY

DEAR SAD: You need much more help than I can give you in a letter. Discuss this with someone whose opinions you respect (a clergyperson perhaps). Just talking things out will enable you to see them more clearly. Without knowing him, I would say that a man who would ask a mother to leave six small children is no bargain.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are second-time-arounders. I have never seen such stability and tranquility in a marriage.

There is only one problem: I am bored stiff! When we dated, he took me out to dinner and to movies, and we had a great time, but now all he thinks of is work.

I carry his dinner to his office so he can work straight through. He eats in five minutes, thanks me, and goes back to work. When he comes home it's bedtime, and he is too tired for anything but sleep.

He works all weekend. We never go out for dinner or to a movie anymore. He says it's too expensive, which is ridiculous because we can certainly afford it.

His health is fine. (He had the company doctor examine him; that way he didn't have to pay the bill.)

I am young and pretty and full of life, but I am lonely. He says if I want to see a movie I should go without him, but it's no fun going alone.

I can just see myself 10 years from now getting a divorce. Can you help me? — FRUSTRATED

DEAR FRUSTRATED: Fill in that communication gap with some straight talk. He's using his "work" as an excuse to isolate himself. Insist on counseling. And if he ducks that, you go alone. Your frustration could lead to something worse than boredom.

DEAR ABBY: A neighbor of mine loves to sew, and she has made some lovely things. She made a beautiful dress and bonnet for my daughter's fourth birthday, so I took the child to a photography studio and had a picture taken of her in that outfit. Then I bought a frame for it and presented it to my neighbor to show my appreciation.

She seemed pleased and placed the picture on her piano. A few months later, I noticed that she had placed a picture of her dog in that frame, and my daughter's picture was nowhere to be seen. I finally told her that as long as she wasn't displaying my daughter's picture, I'd like to have it back. She said, "Certainly." Then she got my daughter's picture out of a drawer and handed it to me.

I said, "How about the frame?" She replied, "Oh, you can buy another one for 75 cents."

Abby, I was so hurt. That frame cost me $1.50. I didn't want to start an argument with her, so I just kept my mouth shut.

What would you have done? — HURT

DEAR HURT: I'd have kept my mouth shut.

Treat yourself to a collection of Abby's most memorable — and frequently requested — poems, essays and Dear Abby letters. Some are sad, others are funny, but all are worth keeping. To order Abby's new booklet, "Keepers," send a long (business-size) self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby's "Keepers," P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Officers are making waves while catching speeders

By Terry Lee Goodrich
N.Y. Times News Service

The occasion was a genteel wedding reception, and the small talk among the guests — several of them residents of homes on Eagle Mountain Lake in North Texas — had turned to those tiresome Jet Skis.

Not only had the small watercraft been zooming dangerously and annoyingly close to docks, boats and swimmers as their drivers showed off. No, things had reached a new low, and one woman couldn't wait to tell wedding guest Red Barton, who happens to be police chief of the enforcement division of Tarrant County Water Control and Improvement District No. 1, including Eagle Mountain Lake.

One of the youthful drivers had been spotted wearing a "gun," the woman informed Barton, her tone loaded with righteous indignation.

"Er-er-hum," said Barton, clearing his throat. "Ma'am, that one works for me."

Let him explain.

Riding the waves these days is Jackie Pritchard, 39, a lake patrol officer who does much of his work from a Tandem Sport — a tiny motor-driven watercraft much like a Jet Ski, except its design allows its operator to sit rather than stand.

It's all part of a six-month experiment being conducted since April by the water district with the help of Kawasaki of Fort Worth, which is lending the vehicle to the district.

ELSEWHERE, COWTOWN Yamaha has lent a WaveRunner, a similar self-propelled marine vehicle, to Arlington officers to patrol Lake Arlington the past two years, and D&S Kawasaki/Honda of Arlington will soon lend a Tandem Sport to officers who patrol Joe Pool Lake.

Pritchard, who never rode a Tandem Sport until his job called for him to learn how, is a former private investigator who is sold on the new method he and reserve officers are using to catch waterborne wrongdoers.

"People on Jet Skis think we're just another one of them," said an enthusiastic Pritchard. "We're able to sneak up on a lot of people."

The vehicles — which travel up to 35 mph and are designed so the driver can sit, stand or kneel "on" them rather than "in" them — also can go into "much smaller, tighter, shallower areas than a boat can," said Randy Mansell, vice president of D&S.

That's a plus both for making rescues and for zooming up on folks whose watery antics go beyond what the law allows for Jet Skis and other personal watercraft, said Wayne Owen, management services manager of Tarrant County Water Control and Improvement District No. 1.

"Last year, we had a guy and girl doing handstands on them, and they were around a bunch of boats," Pritchard said. "They're made to go fast, act crazy and they can cut on a dime ... but they're made to do that in uncrowded conditions."

THERE ARE lesser but oft-committed no-nos by operators of these marine vehicles: riding without a life jacket; pulling a skier or inner tube without benefit of a rearview mirror or passenger to serve as spotter; and riding in the dark.

In fact, Barton and Pritchard figure probably at least half of all water offenses are committed by operators of self-propelled marine vehicles — many of them youthful.

But when younger offenders spot the "Police" decal on the Tandem Sport, they're apt to take it better than when officers approach in a patrol boat.

Granted, the method isn't perfect. For one thing, it's inconvenient to write a ticket from a Tandem Sport or WaveRunner. For another, the vessels are capable of towing only small boats.

And even Pritchard — a muscular individual who works out regularly — finds patrolling on the Tandem Sport very tiring for much more than four hours.

But he's beaten one of the potential problems — a water-soaked police radio. "I'm thinking of getting a patent for my invention," he joked, pointing to a plastic bag that encased his radio.

LAKE RESIDENTS are giving thumbs-up to the new approach to apprehending the Evel Knievels of the water, Owen said.

"And the officers enjoy it," he said. "It's a lot cooler than the patrol boat — and I mean 'cool' in both senses of the word."

RETIREES EXPLORE SECOND CAREER THROUGH H&R BLOCK INCOME TAX COURSE

Thousands of retirees take the first step toward a second career by enrolling in the H&R Block Income Tax Course. H&R Block, the world's largest income tax preparation firm, offers its Income Tax Course starting on Sept. 14th. Morning, and evening, classes are available.

The course provides excellent training for people who want to continue working after they retire or who are retired and want to go back to work. An experienced Block instructor guides students through various aspects of income tax preparation. Classwork includes discussion, practice problems, and hands-on preparation of individual income tax returns.

Graduates of the course profit from a practical skill they can put to immediate use at convenient locations. They work the hours and days that best fit their schedules.

The affordable fee includes textbooks and supplies. Graduates receive Certificates of Achievement and continuing education units (CEU's). Qualified graduates of the course may be offered job interviews with H&R Block but are under not obligation to accept employment. Those interested in more information about the H&R Block Income Tax Course may contact the H&R Block office at 1101 N. Midkiff or call 697-8087 or 580-3750.

PRIME TIME

Still partying after all these years

By Andrew H. Malcolm
N.Y. Times News Service

SCARSDALE, N.Y. — Larry Rosner's big white mustache quivered because the ice had cost more than the soft drinks on this morning. But his outrage was interrupted by a friend using that understanding language that guys reserve for teammates.

"Hey, Rosner! If you don't bowl soon, we'll have to call this game for darkness."

Ah, the lasting friendships, enfolding camaraderie and human warmth of the Old Guard, one of Westchester County's least known and seemingly most useless organizations.

"We have no objective," said John Sinkinson, "but to enjoy ourselves and each other." People enjoying each other legally without profit? In 1992? Near New York?

According to J. Norton Dunn, recording secretary, the Old Guard has 217 members. "That may have changed," Mr. Dunn notes. "I haven't checked today's obituaries."

You see, one membership requirement — in fact, the membership requirement — is that you be a retired male. No one in the Old Guard can be concerned about working.

To enforce this code, Old Guard members vote on all applicants. Has anyone ever been rejected? "Uh," said Dunn, "No."

THE OLD Guard's average age is 78, as of Monday night anyway. Fifteen members are over 90, including the oldest at 97, John Chatfield, whose hearing comes and goes with his bridge hands.

"Our wives think we're deaf," said Dunn.

"What did you say?" said Harry Mills, the club comedian, who doesn't look a day over 84. Harry nearly died recently; lawn-bowling teammates suggest death might improve his scoring. Anyway, Harry's doctor put him on a blood thinner that cannot be mixed with alcohol. So Harry is looking for a new doctor.

"Harry's funny for a former banker," said Dunn, who's only 70. "You know, for guys so close to death, we're pretty lively. We have prostate problems around here like toothaches."

The Old Guard was founded on a Tuesday in 1954. So the group has met every single Tuesday since. This week's session is No. 2,019.

There's a business meeting at 10, deli sandwiches and a speaker at noon and bridge all afternoon. "Duplicate bridge players are rowdy," Rosner says. "Rubber bridge players are so quiet, they don't permit breathing."

BUT THE Old Guard doesn't just play bridge to stay out of wives' way. On Mondays, they golf. On Wednesdays and Thursdays they play tennis. Fridays are for lawn bowling (indoors come winter). The third Thursday wives join for bridge. The fourth Thursday involves field trips to Atlantic City, the race track, that sort of thing.

"We let the girls come for the ride," explained Sinkinson. "I can say that because I'm a widower." Actually, at 82 Sinkinson has a young girlfriend; she's only 71 and playing hard-to-get now.

"She's a real looker," confides Sinkinson. "I have a helluva time getting her into the movies on a senior-citizen discount."

Next month comes the Old Guard's two-week Mediterranean cruise. They're raising $15,000 for the YMCA in White Plains. Glee Club rehearsals resume soon at Bob Mills' house with performances at nursing homes for the genuinely old.

THE TELEPHONE Committee is a phone-chain to spread word of members' illnesses or deaths. The Commemoration Committee sends flowers for wedding anniversaries (half-century minimum). The Visiting Committee visits sick members. And the Friends Committee offers members' widows emotional support, transportation, party invitations, even handy hands for household repairs.

"The Old Guard is 200 friends for life," said Frank Veber, a retired photographer who's largely housebound now with his dying wife. "These guys shop for me. I get cards and calls. Occasionally, I get out for lawn bowling."

"Hey, guys," Joe Marino announces: "Frankie's here. Beautiful day isn't it, Frankie? Come help us. We're getting shellacked." Marino heads the Lawn-Bowling Committee. "At our age," he says, "I've gotta arrange a lot of alternate players."

LAWN BOWLING is not a pastime to Old Guard players, who carry pocket tape measures for scoring disputes. "Nice throw!" Bob Whitaker compliments an opponent before dropping a ball by the man's foot. Gene Beekley doesn't talk during competition; he's 93.

Gene Kalnin knocks Mills's ball out of play. "Oh, Gene," says Mills, "did you get that urgent call from home?"

One time, 90-year-old Alex Thomson was having an awful bowling day without his bifocals. Mills saw Elizabeth Thomson arrive with the forgotten glasses. He kindly accepted them and passed them onto his opponent — after the game.

There is, of course, no gambling on these games because gambling is illegal. So is poker, which not one Old Guard member has ever played while reportedly grocery-shopping on a Friday afternoon around 2.

And the wives have forbidden cookies during bowling breaks. "Cholesterol," explains Dunn.

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — Dutch Van Tassel knows why people gawk when he hops off his motorcycle and unstraps his helmet.

"It's envy, that's what it is. They're just jealous," the 84-year-old biker says. "Not everyone can ride a motorcycle. Almost nobody does it this long and stays alive."

Van Tassel figures he's logged about half a million miles since 1920, when he first revved up a Flyifg Merkel, a machine that was "as simple as could be and still run."

Along the way, he's chalked up a few bruises and a golden belt buckle inscribed "Oldest Rider" presented by a national bikers' club last summer. "The next oldest rider was 10 years younger than me," he recalls.

Van Tassel says the oldest rider in the world is a 95-year-old Englishman. He hopes to reach that plateau by holding to simple rules. "You've got to be quick on your thoughts and not take any chances. And some people just aren't cut out for it. Your body has to get used to this kind of exercise."

Nerve damage in his wrist and three recent operations — including open heart surgery — have weakened the retired mechanic's body a bit. But his freewheeling spirit is intact. He still hops on his Honda almost every day, and planned a summer ride to Canada with his two sons.

"It's the freedom of the thing for me," he says. "You can get the same thing in a car, but there's something different with motorcycles. There's nobody bothering you."

His garage is full of mechanical keepsakes: a vintage Harley-Davidson, a dozen other old motorcycles and scores of engines his sons have restored. Helmets, some of them rag-thin and dating back half a century, line one shelf.

But it's not finish lines that remain in the fore of Tassel's mind. It's camping along roadsides and the thousands of miles he logged on cross-country trips with his wife, Kay. Or it's the journey to Mexico City at 68 and to Florida seven years later.

Although Van Tassel still gets a bike up to 125 mph on open roads, he has always shunned a daredevil image. "You reach a certain speed, you go on by and it doesn't seem any different," he says. "But I've always kept out of trouble. You have to if you want to stay alive on one of these things."

IT'S YOUR LIFE

Inadequate housing problem for many

By Steve Edwards

QUESTION: How bad is the housing problem for the elderly?

Edwards

ANSWER: While the overall rate of inadequate housing conditions is low, serious problems exist among particular segments of the elderly population. For example, 4 percent of elderly white owner households live in moderately to severely inadequate housing, in contrast to 23 percent of elderly black and 13 percent of hispanic owner households. Similarly, 6 percent of elderly white renter households live in moderately to severely inadequate housing, compared to 21 percent of elderly black and 16 percent of hispanic renter households. Dramatic differences also exist among different income groups. Of elderly households with incomes between $10,000 and $15,000, 4.4 percent live in moderately to severely inadequate housing compared to 8.7 percent of those with incomes between $5,000 and $10,000 and 17 percent of those with incomes below $5,000.

Of equal importance to the condition of housing is the availability of features that support the ability of older people to carry out tasks and activities. Most housing occupied by the elderly was built for active persons who function independently. Such homes often have stairs, high thresholds between rooms, inadequate lighting and bathing facilities that are difficult for older people to use easily and safely.

Only about 6.6 percent of homes occupied by elderly-headed households with health or mobility problems have basic features such as grab bars and handrails. Almost 50 percent of severely frail elderly living alone reside in housing with no special supportive features. An estimated 20 percent of homes involving the elderly are in need of modification or repair.

QUESTION: You hear the term, "home modification," often associated with the elderly. Is it a big issue?

ANSWER: Yes! Home modification and repair has become a national issue because it's a way of helping the elderly to remain independent and in their own homes. When older people become frail, the home environment needs to be more supportive to compensate for their limitations or disabilities. A significant number of the elderly however, live in housing that has in fact deteriorated, lacks supportive features or presents barriers to mobility. These types of problems make it difficult to safely carry out activities such as cooking meals, bathing, climbing stairs, reading or doing housework.

Also, because the elderly tend to live in older homes, their houses are often difficult to maintain. Nationally, about 6.3 percent of elderly households experience problems such as leaking roofs, inadequate wiring and poorly functioning plumbing. Many elderly households often have inefficient heating and cooling systems and insufficient insulation.

Angels remain in chase

Midland 1½ games out of first after extra-inning win Thursday

By Bill Price
Staff writer

However tenuously, the Midland Angels are staying in the Texas League West race right down to the wire.

The Angels opened their final series of the regular season with a 4-3, 11-inning win over the Wichita Wranglers Thursday night at Angels Stadium. While the third-place Angels claimed their win, second-place San Antonio and front-running El Paso split a doubleheader in El Paso, putting Midland 1½ games out of first place with four dates left on its schedule.

On Thursday, the Angels won with one out in the top of the 11th on Jeff Kipila's bases-loaded single that glanced off the glove of outstretched shortstop Ray Holbert, scoring Rod Correia and breaking a 3-3 score that had stood since the top of the eighth inning.

Marcus Lawton and Correia had the only multi-hit outings for Midland (each went 2-for-5), while Wichita's Paul Gonzalez (2-for-4) and Darius Gash (2-for-5) matched them on the other side of the box score.

Angels reliever Todd James (2-2) threw the 11th inning for the win while Howard Hilton (0-1) took the loss in his ⅓-inning by giving up two hits, two walks and being called for a balk.

The Angels jumped out to an early 2-0 lead after Garret Anderson's groundout to second scored Mark Wasinger in the second inning and Terry Taylor tripled home J.R. Phillips in the third.

Despite battling control problems, Midland starting pitcher Erik Bennett held the Wranglers scoreless for 4⅔ innings and struck out seven. But after issuing his fourth walk of the game to Holbert in the fifth, Angel manager Don Long elected to pull him in favor of Don Vidmar.

Vidmar got out of the fifth when Holbert was thrown out trying to steal second base by catcher Rey Palacios, but gave up single runs in the sixth and seventh to allow Wichita to tie the game at 2-2.

In the bottom of the seventh, the Angels broke the tie when Taylor grounded to second with the bases full, sending Anderson across the plate. But the Wranglers answered in the eighth.

Vidmar gave up three straight hits with one out and was replaced by Steve Peck, who struck out Steve Bethea but uncorked a wild pitch with Dwayne Hosey at bat, letting Mat Witkowski score from third and tie the game again, 3-3.

The Angels had runners in scoring position in the

'Dogs meet Steers

By Bill Price
Staff writer

Midland High will get its first taste of inter-squad competition today, as the Bulldogs travel to Big Spring for a football scrimmage against the Class 4A Steers.

Times are set for 6 p.m. (sophomores and junior varsity), and 7 p.m. (varsity) at the Big Spring practice field next to the high school.

While the exhibition will be MHS' first scrimmage of the season, Midland Lee will have its second scrimmage versus El Paso Jefferson Saturday at 11 a.m. in Van Horn. The Rebels did not conduct spring training, giving them two weeks of preseason drills and two scrimmages this fall.

First-year MHS head coach Ronnie Reeger, however, was able to unveil his new scheme in last May's spring game. Now he wants to see the progress his Bulldogs have made in absorbing his Wing-T offense and 4-3 defense, and thinks the Steers will provide an accurate gauge of where MHS stands.

"They're better than your average 4A team — it will be a good test for us," Reeger said. "We're just going to run some base-type things and see how the kids run the plays. There will be very little 'game plan' to it."

The scrimmage format will consist of 20 plays for each first string offense against the other team's first defense, then plays of 15-15 and 15-15 with a mixture of first-, second- and third-team players. The two teams then will play one quarter under controlled game conditions, with no rushing on punts or field goals.

"There are certain plays we want to run and certain formations we want to run. On defense, we want to see the kids adjust to different formations and motion," Reeger said.

"Their players are very aggressive, so we'll see if our kids can learn from that."

Today's scrimmage will be MHS' only competition against another team before its season opener Sept. 4 against El Paso Irvin at Memorial Stadium. So Reeger and his staff will get to see if the Bull-

MCS to defend title

■ New head coach James Blake feels his team's potential is good enough to carry them to another year of success.

By Bill Price
Staff writer

So what if the Midland Christian School Mustangs play six-man football. It doesn't even matter that they are members in a private school league. The Mustangs are Defending State Champions.

And new head football coach James Blake, who also happens to be the school's new principal, is counting on MCS' tradition to overcome the loss of nine seniors on the Mustangs' road to repeat as six-man champs of the Texas Association of Private and Parochial Schools.

"The advantage of winning state last year is that it has to pour over to this year. We are the defending state champions and we will remain that way until somebody convinces us we're not," said Blake, who came to Midland from Sands.

"We have lost nine players from last year. I know they were talented because they did win state, and they were big. We're not as big as last year's team, but we do have quickness.

"We do have some good potential and how we react to that potential will reflect the kind of season we will have," he said.

Potential? Yes, but the Mustangs have proven talent, also. Kyle Jackson (linebacker-fullback) and Andy Awtry (quarterback-safety) are returning All-State players and will play both ways, as will returning starting noseguard Gary Welsh, who will play center on offense.

Blake, a subscriber to the "defense wins championships" philosophy, may have his aces in the hole with Jackson, Welsh and Awtry providing defensive experience.

But the coach also plans on installing an entire new offensive scheme, one that promises to make the greatest use of the wide-open six-man game.

Officials expect large galleries at PB Open

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant sports editor

ODESSA — Bob Dickson won't go so far as to predict the turnout the Ben Hogan Tour enjoyed in Tulsa, Okla., last weekend will be repeated in Odessa this weekend. But he will predict with confidence that the crowds that come to see the professional golfers at this weekend's first-ever Permian Basin Open will be substantial.

BEN HOGAN PERMIAN BASIN OPEN

Play in the 54-hole tournament begins at 8 a.m. today at The Club at Mission Dorado.

"I won't say we'll have 7,000 like we did at Tulsa last Saturday, or 8,000 like we had Sunday. But I think we can reach 5,000," said Dickson, tournament director for the Ben Hogan Tour.

The Club at Mission Dorado features a lengthy 7,135-yard, links-style layout, but could seem even longer if certain conditions prevail.

"If we can get a little of that West Texas wind going," Dickson said, "we could be in for a really good test."

Dickson added that all pre-tournament comments have been favorable.

"We've had really good reception from the the members, the volunteer committee and the players," Dickson said. "The players have also been very complimentary of the course."

If the Hogan Tour for some reason does experience a dip in expected attendance, it may be due in part to the Midland Angels, who are are in town through Monday for their final homestand of the season. Midland, two games out with five games remaining in the Texas League West, is involved in a heated battle for the second half championship. The club has also planned a promotional event for each of the final five nights.

Dickson said tour officials would decide soon after the conclusion of the PB Open if there are plans to return for a 1993 event. The event in '93 would be referred to as the Nike Permian Basin Open after the athletic wear company announced Wednesday they would head a multi-year corporate sponsorship for

Lubbock horse fastest in Futurity qualifier

Associated Press

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M. — Perfect Victory, a 2-year-old filly going faster with each outing, was the fastest qualifier on Thursday for the $2 million All American Futurity at Ruidoso Downs.

Perfect Victim, owned by Joe Kirk Fulton of Lubbock, Texas, won her 440-yard trial race by 1½ lengths in 21.17 seconds, the fastest time ever at the New Mexico track by a 2-year-old.

The 10 fastest horses from six trials Thursday advance to the All American Futurity on Labor Day, with the winner collecting $1 million.

The 10th spot in the field will be decided by a draw on Friday involving the filly Heart Trick and the colt Racin Deal. Both were clocked in 21.65 seconds.

Perfect Victory has won three of six races this year, and has been untouchable in recent weeks. She had the fastest time (21.30) in the first set of trials last week and lowered it in the time trials Thursday.

Fulton, a long-time quarter horse owner, put a second horse into the finals when his filly Luxurious Dreams posted the seventh-fastest time of 21.55.

First Down And Ten, a colt owned by Homer Garza of Mesquite, N.M., had the second-fastest qualifying time, 21.36 seconds.

First Down And Ten is one of three horses trained by five-time All American winner Jack Brooks to make it into this year's field. Brooks also will saddle Disco Del Rey, a filly, and Dash Thru Traffic, a colt.

The rest of the qualifiers include Royal Down Dash, Texas Heartbeat, Yawls Rabbit and First Rich Chick.

Mr Eye Opener, who had been among the favorites to reach the finals, went to his knees coming out of the gate in his trial and, although he recovered to finish third, failed to qualify.

"He went so low, I could have grabbed a handful of dirt," jockey Jacky Martin said. "If it had been any other horse, I would have gotten off, because I thought he was going to go head over heels."

AUSTIN (AP) — Shea Morenz, a sixth-round draft pick of the Toronto Blue Jays, is officially a college student and a freshman quarterback for the Texas Longhorns.

The two-sport star attended classes yesterday, stripping the Blue Jays of his rights.

"I knew the decision to play professional baseball would be a lifelong decision, while going to college would be only for four or five years," Morenz said.

"It was kind of scary trying to decide to go play baseball and never play college football, or to go to college and lead a normal life. It was kind of a scary decision, wondering if I was doing the right thing," he said.

Morenz, who declined to say how much money he turned down from the Blue Jays, participated in all of the Longhorns' preseason practices.

MHS: 'Dogs in 'good health'

(From 1C)

dogs' off-season program was beneficial in MHS' drive to turn around last year's 0-9 season.

"We've put on some weight, though some players have lost some in two-a-days. It looks like we're a little bit bigger, on the roster anyway. We've grown a little bit," Reeger said.

Another influencing factor in the 'Dogs' improvement over last season is good health, something that was all too lacking last fall, when the offensive line was decimated in the preseason and early games.

"So far, we haven't been hit by anything major," Reeger said, knocking on wood.

Beck, Couples in battle

Associated Press

AKRON, Ohio — A little extra effort by Chip Beck paid off in a 65 that gave him a two-stroke lead over Fred Couples after Thursday's storm-interrupted first round of the World Series of Golf.

"I wanted to be prepared," Beck said after his 5-under-par effort over the Firestone Country Club course.

"I wanted to learn the course and the greens. I'm glad I spent the two extra days here," said Beck, author of a 59 last year and a winner in New Orleans earlier this season.

The extra practice afforded by a Sunday arrival at this tournament resulted in a bogey-free scramble that was built around his short game.

One Hall of Famer bests another in Texas loss

Associated Press

AL Roundup

ARLINGTON — George Brett had three singles and drove in two runs as the Kansas City Royals rolled to a 7-2 victory over Nolan Ryan and the Texas Rangers on Thursday night.

Brett has 1,509 RBIs and is tied with Mickey Mantle for 33rd on the all-time list. He now has 2,965 hits and passed Sam Crawford for 19th place on the all-time list.

Ryan (5-8) lost his fifth-consecutive decision, allowing seven runs on seven hits in 4 2-3 innings. He walked three and struck out five. It tied the most runs he has given up in a Texas uniform.

Hipolito Pichardo (8-5) allowed a sixth-inning homer to Kevin Reimer and a run-producing single by Ivan Rodriguez in the seventh. Pichardo gave up two runs and five hits in seven innings.

Kansas City got to Ryan early then chased him with a four-run fifth, highlighted by Keith Miller's two-run double and an RBI single by Brett.

Miller, who reached first when he was hit by a pitch, scored all the way from first on Brett's hit-and-run single to center to give Kansas City a 1-0 lead in the first inning.

Yankees 5, Twins 0

MINNEAPOLIS — Melido Perez pitched a six-hitter for his first shutout of the season as the New York Yankees beat the Minnesota Twins for their fourth straight victory.

Perez (11-13) walked one and fanned nine, moving ahead of Roger Clemens for the AL lead with 174 strikeouts. It was Perez's ninth complete game of the season, but only his second complete-game victory. The Yankees have backed the right-hander with only 12 runs in his seven complete-game losses.

Randy Velarde and Bernie Williams each drove in two runs. Velarde delivered a two-out, two-run single in the first inning and Williams drove a one-out double into the left-field corner for two runs in the fourth.

Blue Jays 5, Brewers 4

TORONTO — Dave Winfield's three-run homer snapped a sixth-inning tie as the Toronto Blue Jays beat Milwaukee, sending the Brewers to their fifth straight loss.

The victory gave Toronto a 2½-game lead over idle Baltimore in the AL East. The third-place Brewers fell 5½ games out.

Mariners 6, Indians 2

SEATTLE — Edgar Martinez extended his hitting streak to 13 games and drove in the go-ahead run as the Seattle Mariners beat the Cleveland Indians.

Martinez, the top hitter in the American League, went 1 for 5 and is hitting .342. He hit his major-league leading 41st double in the sixth inning to snap a 1-1 tie.

NL Roundup

HOUSTON — Brian Williams gave up one run in eight innings as the Houston Astros beat the St. Louis Cardinals 5-1.

Williams (6-4) won his third game in four decisions. He gave up five hits before Joe Boever finished.

Donovan Osborne (9-7) struck out the first five batters to start the game and retired the first nine in order before Craig Biggio doubled leading off the fourth inning and scored on Ken Caminiti's double. The Astros got another run in the inning on Eric Anthony's RBI grounder.

ANGELS: Attendance record set

ninth and 10th innings, but were thwarted by Wichita releiver Dean Wilkins each time. Wilkins finally tired after 3⅓ innings, and Hilton started the 11th for the Wranglers.

ANGELS NOTES — The all-time Angels Stadium attendance record for a single season was broken Thursday when 2,712 went through the turnstiles, give the Angels a season total of 182,642. The previous record of 180,616 was set in 1991 ... The Angels' front office had hoped to reach a season attendance total of 200,000 with the final homestand, but must now average more than 4,300 a game over the last four games to reach that goal ... The team is offering a chance for some fan to win $200,000 in the season finale Monday, whether the 200,000 attendance total is reached or not. Each fan through the gates Monday will receive a number, and if an Angel hits a grand slam in the same inning that fan's number is announced, the prize will be awarded.

MCS-Chapel rivalry intensifies

Gunter

Adams

MCS: Abilene in for opener

(From 1C)

"Last year they ran primarily from a certain type of spread. This year we will run a multiple set with the I-formation, the T-formation and three different spreads," Blake said.

"On defense we're trying to do the same thing. We will run what they call a 2-3, as well as a 3-1 and a 4-2. We are trying to put things in that'll maybe be fun to watch and that the kids will enjoy."

At fullback on offense, Jackson, a junior, could be the key to the Mustangs' offense. Blake said the 6-2, 181-pound Jackson has "good power" to offset MCS' quickness at tailback.

The tailback position will be manned by either Wes Adams (a 130-pound junior) or Clay Gunter (junior, 140). Blake said both balance their lack of size with speed.

"It's not a bad situation with an All-State quarterback and an All-State fullback," he said.

With Awtry, Welsh and Jody Duncan as the team's only seniors, a relatively large junior

When the Texas Association of Private and Parochial Schools realigned this past off-season, Midland Christian School faced the possibility of having two fierce rivals in the same district.

The original list of teams in District 1 was composed of Midland Christian, Midland Trinity, El Paso Jesus Chapel, El Paso Agape, El Paso Northeast Christian Academy and Amarillo Alamo Catholic.

And though Trinity decided not to field a team in 1992 (it would have been Trinity's first season in TAPPS six-man), MCS still has an old rival in the new district.

You see, the Mustangs have played El Paso Jesus Chapel in the state championship game two years running, with MCS taking last year's title by a 44-36 score.

"I definitely think we have a possibility of repeating. We still have got pretty good experience (despite the loss of nine seniors from a year ago). We've just got to go through Chapel," said Andy Awtry, the Mustangs' returning All-State quarterback.

The only thing is, when the Mustangs and Chargers face off Oct. 24 in El Paso, it won't be for all the TAPPS marbles — just the district title, in all likelihood.

And that could add fuel to an increasingly intense rivalry.

"We really don't care all that much for them, and I'm sure they don't just love us," Awtry said.

"But that makes it fun. It's going to make the district race tougher. It will mean something this year to win district."

With District 1 now reduced to four teams (Amarillo also dropped out), MCS and Jesus Chapel appear to be the front runners.

And the Mustangs will have plenty of time to prepare for their league opener Oct. 9 at Northeast Christian.

To season a team laden with juniors, first-year coach James Blake has filled his non-district schedule with some staunch opposition.

"We play some UIL schools that are petty tough. We play Christoval (Oct. 2) and they're one of the top teams in the state each season. Ira (Sept. 11) is picked to win its district and Three Way (Sept. 25) is a great team in the Lubbock area," Blake said.

Still, it could be difficult for the Mustangs and their fans to keep from looking to that date against Jesus Chapel. Because the winner of that game could go on to another state championship.

Sanders makes up his mind, will stay a Brave

Associated Press

ATLANTA — Deion Sanders decided on Thursday to remain with the Atlanta Braves through the end of the baseball season. The Pro Bowl cornerback will miss the Atlanta Falcons' first six games and as many as eight if the Braves make the playoffs and World Series.

"It turned out OK for us," Braves general manager John Schuerholz said after meeting with Sanders' agent, Eugene Parker, before Atlanta's game Thursday night against Montreal.

"We didn't get a long-term deal, but he's going to be with us for the rest of the year.

"He'll be eligible for all postseason games if we are fortunate to get into the playoffs and the World Series.

"In essence, he remains a full-time baseball player for the remainder of the season," Schuerholz said.

"I'll say this, based on the representation made today, I feel more certain about his long-term interest in baseball now than two weeks ago or a month ago," he said.

Taylor Smith, president of the Falcons, said, "I don't know where else we could have gone. Apparently it just wasn't satisfactory to them. We gave it our best effort but it just wasn't going to fly."

Sanders' $600,000 contract with the Braves ran through July 31, when he was to report to the Falcons. It was extended when Sanders, an outfielder, decided to remain with baseball. Schuerholz said the extension would continue on a prorated basis, adding he would continue to talk to Sanders about a long-term deal. It had been reported Sanders was getting $6,000 a game.

Parker left after the meeting and was unavailable for comment. Sanders, involved the baseball game, wasn't immediaterly available.

Earlier Thursday, the Falcons had expressed little hope of having Sanders on the field when the team opens the regular season on Sept. 6.

"The probability of him being here in the next few days is not high," Jim Hay, the Falcons chief financial officer, said after negotiating with Parker for the second day in a row.

The Falcons had offered Sanders a $1 million bonus — in addition to his $750,000 salary for the 1992 season — to forgo baseball and report to the football team at the start of training camp last month.

Parker had been trying to work out a deal that would have had Sanders play both sports at the same time — appearing with the Falcons on Sundays and with the Braves the rest of the week.

They wanted a deal that would have allowed Sanders to go back to baseball full-time if the Braves made the playoffs and World Series. Atlanta had a 3½-game lead over Cincinnati in the NL West after Wednesday's action. The Falcons have two games and an off day on the schedule during the period of the baseball postseason.

Sanders is hitting .300 with the Braves with eight home runs and 26 RBIs. He also had 21 stolen bases and a major league-leading 13 triples.

HOGAN: Winner takes $30,000

for the tour, effective with the beginning of the 1993 season.

One group worth watching on the first day of this year's tournament, though, tees off on the No. 10 tee at 8:45 a.m. Hogan Tour money leader John Flannery, a native of La Quinta, Calif., who's earned over $132,000 in 1993, will be teamed with Dallasite Russell Beiersdorf, an SMU graduate and winner of last year's Boise Open, and Mike Donald, of Hollyowood, Fla., runner-up to Hale Irwin in the 1990 U.S. Open.

Local golf fans can see the threesome of Scotty Neimann, Midland Country Club assistant professional; Davis Pritchett, assistant pro at Ranchland Hills Country Club, and Kyle Howard, golf coach at Odessa College tee off at 9:21 a.m.

MCC assistant pro Terry Lester tees off at 9:30 a.m., and Green Tree Country Club's Randy Kahn also begins at 9:30 a.m.

Bruce Vaughan, winner of the ProGolf Tour's West Texas Open in 1988, begins play at 8:54 a.m.

Brian Henninger, the only other Hogan golfer aside from Flannery to have earned in excess of $100,000 this year, will not play in the Odessa tournament.

The Permian Basin Open has a purse of $150,000 with the winner getting $30,000. Proceeds will provide funding for a pediatric intensive care unit at Odessa's Medical Center Hospital.

PRO-AM: Four teams finish at 51

the real business of trying to win some money while seeking a place in the world of golf.

But Thursday was for fun as the pros teamed with the Permian Basin amateurs. And pro Greg Bruckner got to play with the best foursome as he teamed with Kirk Edwards, Randall Hempling, Sue Hempling and Orville Prather of Odessa to win the Pro-Am with a sizzling 22-under par 50.

Eric Hoos' team of Rick Bell, Press Gill, Mike Jacobs and Ray Hall also posted a scorching 50, but lost the title on a card playoff.

Depending on who you talked to, the Bruckner team victory came from a variety of reasons.

"We had a really nice pro, who is a nice golfer," said Randall Hempling. "He shot a 69 and had a nice birdie on No. 2 that really helped us."

Prather said, "We just putted well."

But team leader Kirk Edwards had the two best reasons.

"For one thing we had the only lady player in the tournament with Sue Hempling and she was hitting from the red tees. That helped a lot," Edwards said before adding, "but the really great thing is that we played in the afternoon and didn't have to play in the rain that some of the morning teams had to face."

Four teams finished at 51 and two more teams stood at 52.

The team of Jerry Brooks, Bob Ayers, Tookie Berry and Rich Earls, who won the Green Tree portion of the Pro-Am Wednesday while playing with pro Doug Smith, could manage only a 53 over the Mission layout Thursday while playing with pro Ted Tryba. Each day was a separate tournament with the teams playing with different pros.

The Hogan hopefuls look ready to play as 13 pros toured Mission at three-under par or better.

Taylor Smith and John Flannery led the way with six-under par 66. Flannery just happens to be the tour's leading money winner this year with $132,652. Smith ranks No. 22 on the money list with $39,716. Ted Tryba is No. 4 on the money list with $90,068 in earnings.

David Jackson, who ranks No. 5 with $86,553 disqualified his own score of 69 Thursday because he said a penalty stroke was not included on his scorecard.

Rick Dalpos, Stephen Ames, Paul Goydos and Frank Conner all had 67. Those kind of scores should make the next three days interesting to say the least. It looks like the winner will have to burn up the Mission course to win the $30,000 top prize.

America West

PHOENIX — A federal bankruptcy judge gave tentative approval to a package of loans for America West Airlines, but withheld a final ruling for two weeks.

America West, which has been trying to reorganize in bankruptcy court since June 1991, has attracted another $10 million loan from Ansett Worldwide Aviation Services to increase the value of the package to $53 million, Michael Conway, president of America West, said during Wednesday's hearing.

Australia-based Ansett leases 11 planes to America West and owns 17 percent of its stock, a spokesman for the Phoenix-based carrier said.

The company is seeking U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Robert Mooreman's approval to take on up to $60 million in added debt.

He scheduled the Sept. 9 hearing after lawyers for several aircraft providers and other parties in the bankruptcy case said they had received details of the package only days earlier and needed more time to study it.

Besides the $53 million in loans, the package includes $7 million in ticket prepurchases and airport rent deferrals. The loans include $35 million from GPA Leasing, an Irish aircraft leasing company, $1 million from the state and $7 million from various Phoenix businesses, including $250,000 each from the Phoenix Suns and Phoenix Cardinals sports franchises.

Under bankruptcy laws, the lenders would be first in line to collect on their loans if America West stops flying.

Dollar gains

NEW YORK — The dollar ended slightly higher against the German mark and most other currencies Thursday after government reports provided mixed news on the economy's health. Gold prices rose.

In New York, the mark closed at 1.4085, up from 1.4065 Wednesday.

In New York, the British pound closed at $1.9800, down from $1.9860 on Wednesday.

Economy stumbles in 2nd quarter

Unemployment claims decline, increase in corporate profits offer hope

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The economy stumbled in the April-June quarter as consumers showed reluctance to open their wallets, the government said Thursday. But a record drop in applications for unemployment insurance in mid-August and an increase in corporate profits offered glimmers of hope for improved growth later this year.

The nation's gross domestic product, the broadest measure of economic health, inched up at a 1.4 percent annual pace, unchanged from an advance estimate released last month, the Commerce Department said.

That was less than half the 2.9 percent rate of the first quarter. Most of the deterioration came because consumer spending decreased 0.2 percent in the second quarter after surging 5.1 percent during the first three months of the year.

Meanwhile, the Labor Department said first-time claims for unemployment benefits plunged to 382,000 during the week ended Aug. 15, down from 474,000 a week earlier. It was the largest decrease on record since the department began tracking claims in 1967 and the first time claims had fallen below 400,000 in 22 months.

Economists were encouraged and said, if sustained, the drop could give consumers the buying power and confidence needed to fuel more robust economic growth. But they cautioned against reading too much into the big decline, noting that the previous week's number was inflated by a temporary shutdown of General Motors Corp. factories.

"At the moment, I'm admiring the drop but I'm not reaching any strong conclusions about it. We have to wait for more evidence," said economist Robert G. Dederick of Northern Trust Co. in Chicago.

On another bright note, the Commerce Department said profits of American corporations rose 2.1 percent to an annual rate of $234.6 billion in the second quarter, the highest level ever. The rise was built on a 10.8 percent increase in the first quarter, the best in four years.

Higher profits eventually should give businesses the wherewithal to hire more workers and increase purchases of productivity-improving capital equipment. But so far increases have been generated chiefly by cost-cutting rather than strong sales, analysts said.

"The reason profits are doing so well is because employment is being held down," said economist Laurence H. Meyer, a St. Louis forecaster. "The question is, 'Can you continue to earn profits if that doesn't generate increases in employment?' The answer is 'no.'"

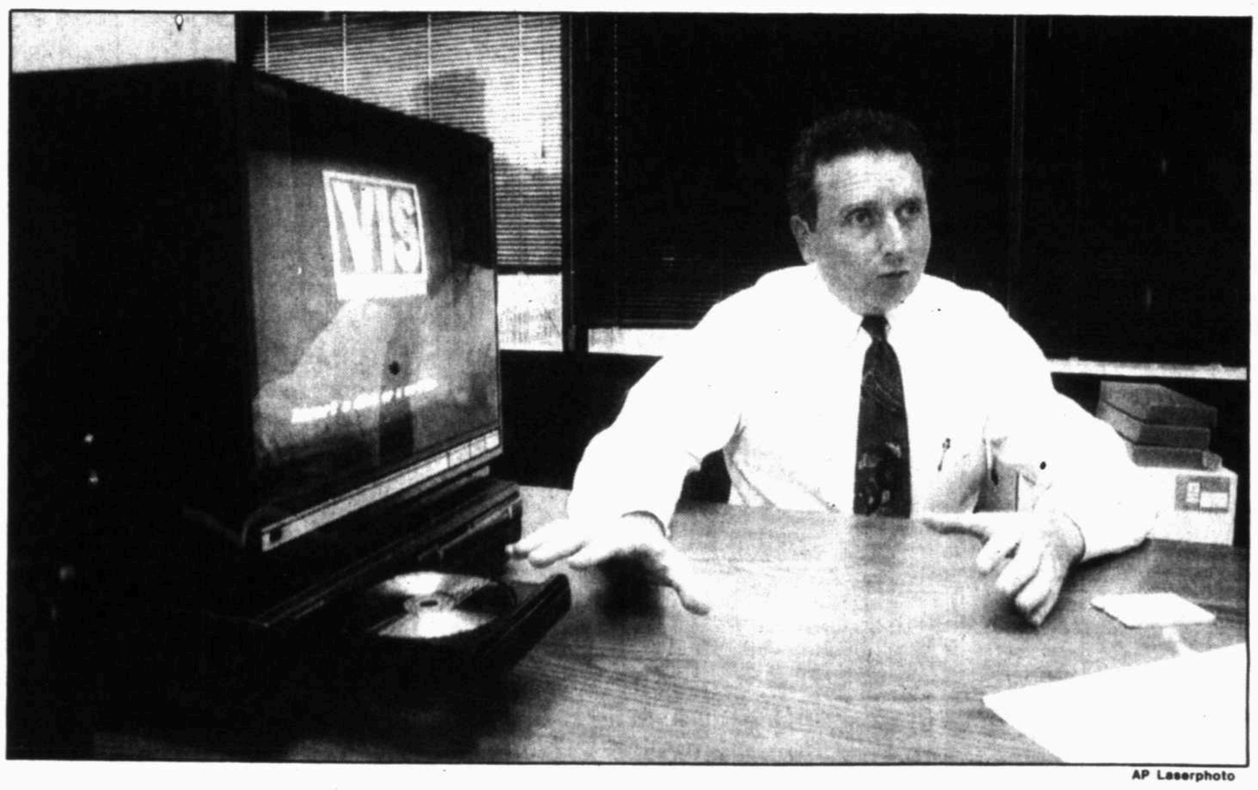

Although second-quarter GDP growth was unchanged from last month's estimate, its composition took a worrisome turn, economists said. More of the growth than first thought came from an accumulation of inventories, and the nation's trade performance proved to be a bigger negative than initially believed.

The larger inventory buildup could reduce the need for production in the third quarter, detracting from growth. And now Hurricane Andrew looks as if it will depress the July-September figures as well.

Many analysts are looking for third quarter results similar to the second quarter and do not foresee a pickup until late in the year, too late to benefit President Bush's re-election effort.

The nation's unemployment rate, at 7.7 percent in July, just off its eight-year peak of 7.8 percent, probably won't improve more than slightly, they said.

"Later in the year, growth could pick up and be sustained into 1993," said economist Bruce Steinberg of Merrill Lynch.

Howard Elias, a Tandy Corp. vice president, explains how the VIS works Wednesday in Fort Worth. The company hopes the new product will fill a gap between video games and personal computers.

Tandy creates hybrid computer device

By Evan Ramstad
Associated Press writer

FORT WORTH — Tandy Corp. unveiled a device Thursday that isn't quite a computer but plays games, reads books and does other things most families want from one.

Using interactive, multimedia software contained on a compact discs, the company hopes its "video information system," or VIS, will fill a gap between video games and personal computers.

About 50 software companies have reshaped PC programs to work on the $700 device, key to bringing it to market, company officials said.

"Customers don't buy boxes. They buy what the boxes do for them," said Howard Elias, a Tandy vice president in charge of the product's development.

The device, which resembles a CD player, is attached to a normal TV and its sound can be incorporated into the home stereo.

It is the latest innovation using digital technology that is revolutionizing consumer electronics. For instance, several companies, including Tandy, are making pocket-sized information devices that use electronic pens, CD-ROM storage and other advances in digital and microprocessors.

Tandy has put seven years of consumer research into VIS. Microsoft Corp., which designed the VIS operating system, and several software publishers in 1989 joined Tandy on the secret "Project Gryphon" that produced the platform.

"So many people have been trying to find a way to get computers in the home without really finding out what consumers want from a computer at home," Elias said.

He said the research found some people desire the games, information and learning tools of a PC but not the power to write their own programs.

The research also showed consumers wanted a simple machine. The only buttons on the face of the VIS turn it on and open and close the CD tray. A remote control similar to those for video games drives the programs and it hooks into a TV with standard connections.

Tandy plans to manufacture the device and sell it through its Radio Shack stores.

"What this system offers is higher utility than you have in the video realm today yet it's much simpler than the task that confronts you if you want to buy a computer, a monitor, a keyboard and a mouse," Bruce Huber, Zenith's vice president of marketing, said in Glenview, Ill.

BankAmerica might become force in Texas

By Charlotte-Anne Lucas
Hearst News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — If BankAmerica closes a reported deal to buy First Gibraltar Bank of Texas, the San Francisco-based bank would become the fourth-largest bank in Texas, with some 265 branches across the Lone Star State.

BofA's BankAmerica Texas system currently has $4.8 billion in assets and 131 branches from Houston to San Antonio and Dallas.

Adding Dallas-based First Gibraltar would tack on another 134 branches and $9.6 billion in assets, bringing BofA's total Texas assets to $14.4 billion. In that case, Nations Bank, Banc One and Texas Commerce Bank would be the only larger lenders in Texas.

First Gibraltar also would add about $9 billion to BankAmerica Texas' $4.1 billion in deposits.

Although officials at BofA and First Gibraltar will not comment, the Dallas Morning News reported this week that BofA had tentatively agreed to buy First Gibraltar, Texas' largest savings and loan.

In interviews this year, BofA chief Richard M. Rosenberg has called growth in Texas "critically important" for the San Francisco-based bank.

Air Canada vies for Continental

HOUSTON (AP) — Air Canada and Air Partners, L.P., became the third suitor to join the bidding for financially strapped Continental Airlines Thursday.

Canada's largest carrier and two Fort Worth, Texas investors who comprise Air Partners are offering $400 million, topping previous bids from MaxAir and Houston Air.

"The transaction is intended to position the new, recapitalized Continental as a healthy participant as the airline industry returns to profitability," Air Canada said in a news release.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Purchase timing irrelevant in mutual funds

By Bill Doyle

Q: I am soon to begin monthly investing in a half-dozen or so mutual funds. Ignoring price fluctuations, is there a best time to invest, such as the beginning, middle or end of the month?

Does timing of the purchases make any difference whether it is a stock or a bond fund?

Doyle

A: The time of the month doesn't matter, because there is no way of predicting when you will get the best prices. Price fluctuations can take place any time. You would be wise to ignore day-to-day price changes and put your steady investment plan into operation.

Shares of stock mutual funds, which hold common stocks as investment, usually make larger price moves than mutual funds holding bonds. That stands to reason. Stock prices generally are more volatile than bond prices. In the long run, however, the day of the month on which you make your purchases shouldn't influence your investment judgment in either stock or bond funds.

Q: Is it better to buy mutual fund shares before or after a dividend is paid?

A: After, in most cases.

When you make your purchase before a dividend is paid, you buy a tax liability. That's because, unless you have a tax-deferred account, you have to pay income tax on the dividend. This applies even if you reinvest the dividend to buy additional shares.

The exception is when your shares are in an individual retirement account or other tax-deferred arrangement. With such an account, you're not hit with tax at the time of the dividend. Instead, the tax bite is put off until you make withdrawals from the account by redeeming fund shares.

Q: Does high demand for a particular mutual fund increase the cost of that fund's shares?

A: For most securities, heavy buying demand sends the share price up and heavy selling pressure forces the price down. Not so for mutual funds.

Virtually all mutual funds continually issue and sell new shares. When you buy shares of a mutual fund, you pay asset value per share — plus a commission if there is such a "load" charge. Load funds have commissions; no-load funds do not.

All mutual funds redeem shares for investors who want out. When you redeem fund shares, you receive asset value per share — minus a redemption fee or contingent deferred sales charge if there is such a levy. Many funds do not have such charges.

Asset value per share is calculated at least once a day by adding up the market values of all the securities and other assets the fund holds; subtracting the fund's liabilities and dividing by the number of shares outstanding — owned by investors.

Buying demand and selling pressure can and do send the market prices of securities a fund holds up and down, thereby changing the fund's share price. But that's an indirect result. Heavy buying demand for a particular fund's shares won't increase that fund's asset value per share if the market values of fund's investment holdings don't increase.

Q: I have $109,000 in IRA certificates of deposit coming due next week. Because of the low interest on new CDs, I checked with a brokerage firm for suggestions. They gave me literature on a group of mutual funds and recommended I put 10 percent in each of an equity growth fund and an investment-grade intermediate bond fund, as well as 40 percent each in a U.S. government securities fund and a utility equity fund.

I can't afford to take a big risk. Can you put my mind at ease by giving your opinion of the brokerage's recommendation?

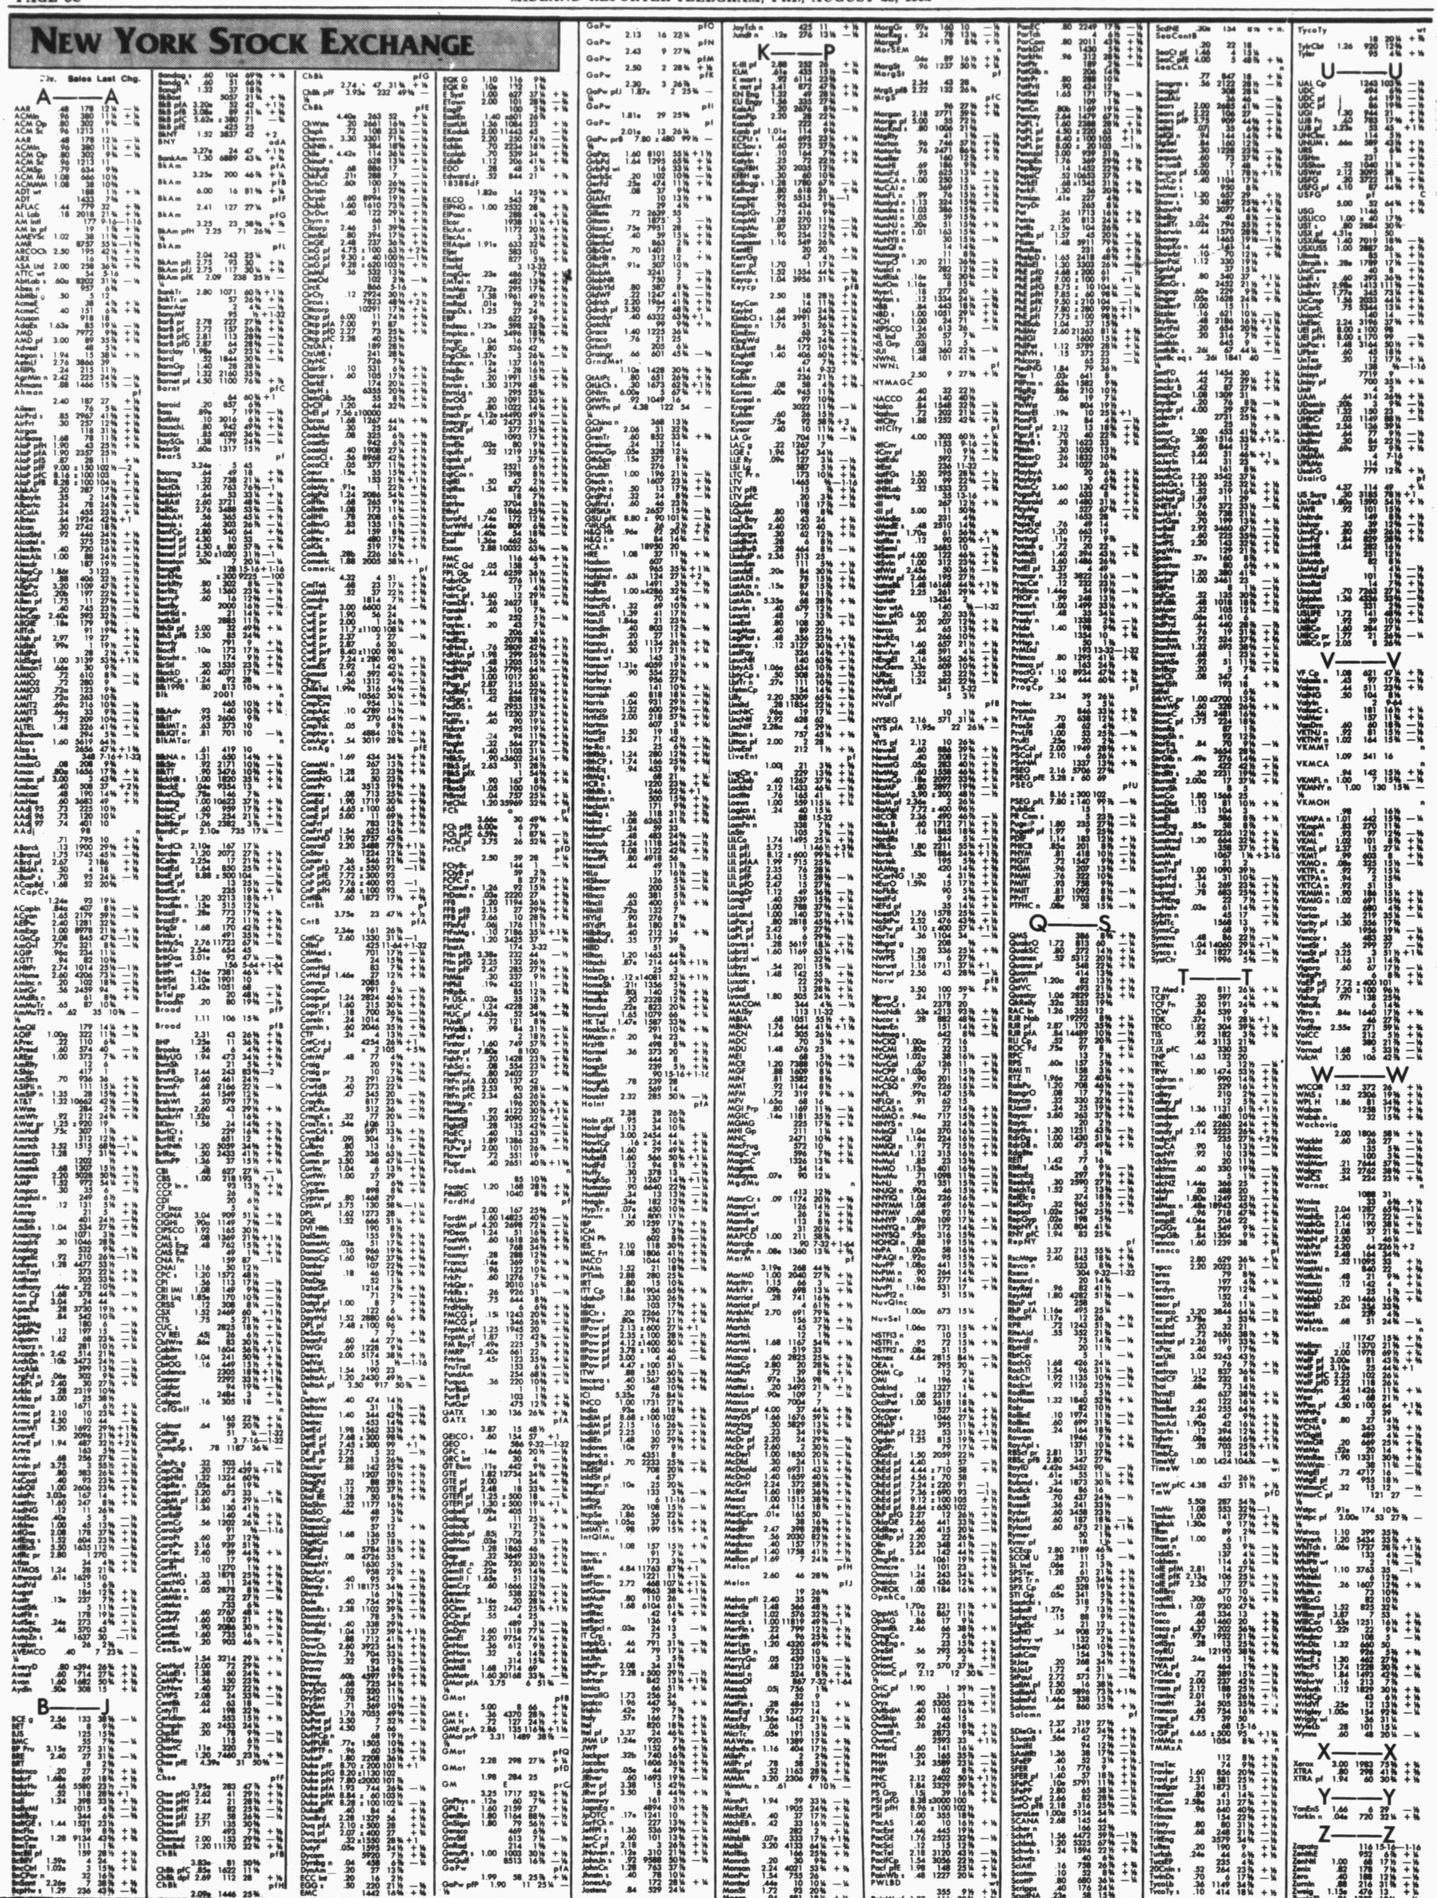

A: Although not free from risk, it's a relatively conservative recommendation and is likely to provide more income than you can get from CDs these days.

Football returns to Baltimore

NFL

BALTIMORE — Bobby Hebert threw New Orleans' first touchdown pass of the preseason and set up another score as the Saints beat the Miami Dolphins 17-3 Thursday night in the first pro football game in Baltimore since 1983.

Hebert played the first half, completing 10 of 14 passes for 100 yards to help New Orleans take a 14-3 lead. Entering the game, Saints quarterbacks had thrown 97 passes without a touchdown.

New Orleans, rebounding from last week's 33-3 loss to Houston, closed the preseason 3-1. The Dolphins, who had been averaging 25 points per game, finished 3-2.

The game was played before a sellout crowd of 60,021 at Memorial Stadium, which last played host to a pro football game when the Baltimore Colts beat the Houston Oilers on Dec. 18, 1983. Baltimore is one of five cities vying for one of two new NFL franchises, possibly as soon as the 1994 season.

The Saints opened the game with a 13-play, 77-yard drive that ended with Hebert's 22-yard pass to a wide-open Patrick Newman in the end zone. Craig "Ironhead" Heyward kept the drive alive with a 3-yard run on fourth-and-1 from the Miami 37.

Jets 22, Eagles 13

PHILADELPHIA — Ken O'Brien staked his claim to the quarterback job with two touchdown passes as the New York Jets ended a perfect preseason with a 22-13 victory over the Philadelphia Eagles on Thursday night.

Chris Burkett caught one of O'Brien's TD passes and blocked a punt for a safety as the Jets closed at 5-0 with their second exhibition victory over Philadelphia (2-3). The Jets' only other unbeaten preseason was in 1966, when they were 4-0.

Late in the first half, Roger Ruzek's first of two 24-yard field goals gave Philadelphia a 10-3 lead. Then O'Brien, the Jets' regular quarterback for most of the last seven seasons, entered the game.

Cowboys looking ahead to Washington

IRVING — The Chicago Bears will be in trouble Friday night if they run any plays closely resembling those out of the Washington Redskins playbook.

The Dallas Cowboys spent most of the week practicing against the Washington offense in preparation for the Sept. 7 regular season opener with the defending world champions.

The Bears will be in Texas Stadium at 7 p.m. Friday hoping to end the exhibition season with a victory. Chicago is 0-3, including a 28-17 loss to Pittsburgh on Sunday night.

Dallas is 2-2 after a 17-3 victory over Denver last Saturday night which coach Jimmy Johnson said was a "dress rehearsal" for the opener against the 'Skins. Johnson plans to play his starters sparingly against Chicago.

"The majority of our work in practice will be to look at some schemes the Redskins might use, offensively, defensively, and on special teams," Johnson said.

Dallas will be without defensive tackle Russell Maryland for the game. Maryland dislocated a toe against the Broncos.

One of the key parts of the game for the Cowboys is placekicking. Johnson is trying to decide between Brad Daluiso and Lin Elliott as the replacement for Ken Willis, a Plan B defector to the Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

"We'll look at them against Chicago and then make a decision," Johnson said. "I don't know anything will be finalized until we get into the 47-man cut."

Daluiso, who has had three kicks blocked and missed an extra point, has been impressive with his kickoffs into the end zone.

Elliott, a rookie from Texas Tech, hit one of two field goal attempts against Denver.

The Cowboys are coming off an impressive pass-rush performance against Denver, recording nine sacks, including eight against rookie quarterback Tommy Maddox.

"It's the best we've done this summer with our pass rush," Johnson said.

The Cowboys will need a good pass rush to contain Jim Harbaugh who completed 12 of 13 passes for 143 yards and one touchdown against the Steelers.

But new addition, Charles Haley, isn't expected to play Friday. Haley, who was acquired from the San Francisco 49ers Wednesday in exchange for future draft picks, is scheduled to take a physical Friday.

The Cowboys and Bears are 3-3 in the preseason. They last met in an exhibition game in 1988 with Dallas winning 17-9 at Texas Stadium.

Dallas defeated Chicago 17-13 in a wildcard playoff game last December in Soldier Field.

MUSTANGS: Quickness a strength

(From 5C)

class (eight) will have to carry a large part of MCS' load this season.

Joining Jackson, Adams and Gunter as 11th-graders are Lathan Houghton (end), Neil Truex (back), Coby Welsh (center and end), Lane Hill (center and end) and Glen Bishop (back).

Sophomores Allan Awtry, Chuck Rundus and Andy Mott could also contribute, with freshmen Kris Green (185), Jerrad Foster, Josh Brannon, Josh Garrett (160) and Geoff Sigler providing depth.

"We have a new coach and a new system. It's a mental thing, and it may take a few games to get all that under our shoulder pads," Blake said as the Mustangs prepare for their Sept. 4 opener at home versus Abilene Christian.

"Our strengths are that we do have some quickness and we have some quality ball players. Lack of depth could be a weakness," Blake said.

"People may write us off as not being legitimate (for a repeat state championship), but we're going to play some players who don't like to finish in second place."

KENT OIL, INC.
KENT KWIK CONVENIENCE STORES

WHY KENT OIL COMPANY?

Kent Oil (operating Kent Kwik convenience stores) is a West Texas-based company, thirty five years old and still growing. We offer many benefits to our employees. These benefits include:

- Company-assisted medical, dental and life insurance
- Paid vacations
- Sick pay program
- Tuition reimbursement program
- Special incentive programs for all employees
- Profit-sharing and retirement plan
- Intensive new hire training
- Structured continual management training
- Flexible scheduling
- Full and part time hours available
- Work close to home
- Affiliation with Odessa 66 credit union

We attempt whenever possible to promote from within. All of our current store managers, middle and upper management started with the company at the entry level. It is possible to move up quickly based on your experience and level of education.

Working in a convenience store is both exciting and challenging. You have to be outgoing and enjoy serving the public, while at the same time be a self-starter, as you receive very little on the job supervision.

If you are considering a career in the retail industry, give Kent Oil your consideration. Please apply (and be ready for interview) at the Kent Oil office Monday-Friday 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. 3314 N. Loop 250 in Midland.
