In Memory

TODAY the nation reverently bows its head in memory of its soldiers who gave their lives on Flanders Field that the nation may continue and freedom prevail. It is indeed fitting that this occasion should be commemorated and that each citizen should pause and pay tribute to the gallant boys who passed through the hardships of a foreign war.

America was founded on the principles of freedom and has established a government of the people for the people; a nation where every one has the opportunities to prosper, and create their own destiny.

America has passed through the fires of reconstruction and today the sun shines brighter. The Stars and Stripes continue to wave and will wave throughout eternity, guaranteeing the liberties as promulgated by the constitution provided by our wise forefathers.

Let all reverently bow their heads and give thanks to the Creator for the liberties they are enjoying under the greatest government of the world today.

May peace prevail throughout the coming years, and never again may the sons of America be called upon to bear arms on a foreign soil.

Suspend Codes As NRA Held Illegal

Richberg Issues Statement After Conference With President Roosevelt; Codes of Agreement Are Not Affected

WASHINGTON, May 27.—The NRA, its vast code structure tumbled by a sweeping Supreme Court decision of unconstitutionality, Monday night suspended "all methods of compulsory enforcement."

Acting a few hours after the high court held unanimously that the President had been given too much "unfettered" authority in proclaiming codes, and that code provisions went too far in regulations affecting intra-state commerce, the Administration took two preliminary steps.

Donald Richberg, NRA administrator, after a conference with President Roosevelt, issued a plea that employers continue to operate under their codes until some new structure could be reared.

In the same statement Richberg added:

"This decision of the court makes codes of fair competition unenforceable as a matter of law; and in deference to that ruling all methods of compulsory enforcement of the codes will be immediately suspended."

"This will not affect the enforcement of any structural obligations which may have arisen by agreement of the parties requiring no sanction of a federal authority."

Capital Confused

Wide confusion and bewilderment followed the court's decision, delivered in the tense atmosphere of a crowded court room by Chief Justice Hughes.

Sweepingly, he ruled that in the A. L. Schechter Poultry Company case, upon which the decision was based, that Congress had no authority to go into a community and tell a poultry man whose activities did not directly affect interstate commerce what wages he should pay his help and how long they should work.

The President hastily summoned his chief legal aides and sought without immediate success a means of creating a new NRA on the debris of the old.

New Dealers generally pondered apprehensively the possible effect of the decision on other Administration measures—the codes of AAA, federal control of the liquor industry and the Wagner Labor Disputes Bill, designed to supplement the famous section 7-A.

Labor Disappointed

Labor was bitterly disappointed. William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, hastened to Washington, promising a statement Tuesday morning. Francis J. Gorman, vice president of the United Textile Workers, warned that immediate strikes would greet departures by manufacturers from the textile code's wage and hour provisions—the first of the Blue Eagle agreements established.

Reading slowly and with emphasis, Justice Hughes marked out the two main counts against the NRA. At one point he said:

"Extraordinary conditions may call for extraordinary remedies, but the argument stops short of attempting to defend action outside of constitutional authority. "Extraordinary conditions do not create constitutional power."

Spreading out from Hughes' words were a swift rush of developments, statements of opinion and of ideas as to what should be done to handle the situation.

The House ways and means committee, in charge of the now-doomed Administration plans for extending NRA for two years in much its old form, met almost immediately but adjourned with nothing accomplished. Its chairman, Doughton of North Carolina, asserted: "It will require careful study."

Realize Difficulty

Chairman Harrison of the Senate finance committee emerged from a study of the opinion with an optimistic expression that something might be salvaged. Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the Democratic leader, contended "it will not be extremely difficult to create more definite standard." The Senate has already approved a nine-month extension, with NRA limited to interstate commerce.

LOANS REACH HIGH MARK

Range Livestock of County Receive Benefits

An analysis of the Drouth Feed Loans made in Roosevelt county under the act of Congress approved June 19, 1934, has reached a large sum, closing with June 15, this year. The loan office opened here July 1, 1934.

Total number of farm cattle listed on the records of Preach White, local manager, amounted to 4,828; range cattle touched the high mark in the loan office with 14,345. Sheep, although small compared to cattle, reached 18 for farm and 11,994 for range. Hogs numbered 1,696, farm horses and mules 2,068; saddle and pack horses 224, and poultry 40,507.

This covered 4,036 acres. Amount of cash advanced for this purpose was $4,036.00.

ROB ELIDA MAN MONDAY NIGHT

E. J. Herbert, Elida, reports the loss of household necessities which, according to Mr. Herbert, were taken from his home early this week. No clues have been advanced so far.

Mr. Herbert was not at home on the night the robbery is said to have been made. He was away working for his brother, O. C. Herbert. John Meiner, who Mr. Herbert had asked to care for his stock during his absence, made the discovery Tuesday morning and reported the robbery to the deputy sheriff at Elida.

Among the articles taken were a new Airline radio, suit case, hat, table cloth, bedspread, meat, overalls, work shirt, shortening, and other articles.

Local officers with Elida officers are making an extensive investigation.

NEW TEST IN COUNTY WILL BE EQUIPPED WITH ROTARY

Expect To Spud In Wildcat Well Next Week

CONTRACT IS LET

Rotary Is Becoming More Popular In New Fields

K. M. Hancock, local oil man, announced Tuesday that an oil test 12 miles northeast of Portales in Roosevelt county will be spudded in within the next few days. A 98-foot steel derrick has been erected. Complete rotary equipment has been moved in, and drilling operations will be started as soon as rigging up is completed, Hancock said.

This well, the latest of a string of oil tests in this region, is located six miles east and six miles south of Cloris on the northwest quarter of the northwest quarter of section 21, township 1 north, range 37 east, near the old Fairfield school house. It will be drilled by Hancock and his associates.

Oklahoma Driller

The drilling contract has been let to S. Snelling, Oklahoma operator, and provides for a 4500-foot test. Hancock also holds an option to go as much deeper as he feels is justified. The acreage was blocked by R. B. Goforth and Tol Cawway of Lubbock and has been taken over largely by Hancock and his associates.

The well will be drilled with rotary tools all the way, Hancock said, explaining that this method of drilling wildcats is becoming more and more popular. In this manner drilling will be speeded up considerably. Hancock, who has lived in Cloris two years, has drilled several wildcat wells.

Dr. W. M. Gershbacher, who has been head of the science and mathematics department at Eastern New Mexico Junior College, left yesterday for Illinois, where he will be employed in the science department at the teachers college at McComb for the summer. He will teach in the teachers college at Charleston, Ill., next year.

Harold Baker is spending the week at Crossroads with his aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Heblson.

Challenge Students To Press Pioneer Spirit

Meade Delivers Address to First Graduating Class of Eastern New Mexico Junior College; Exercises Held on Campus

Challenging the graduates to go forward with the pioneer spirit with which their parents conquered the buffalo country, to conquer the economic, scientific and social frontiers, which present themselves today, John Fremont Meade, president-elect of Amarillo Junior College, made the commencement address at Eastern New Mexico Junior College Wednesday morning, when the first commencement exercises of the school were held on the campus.

Meade stressed three frontiers which are open to the graduate of today—science, social reform and economic reform. In science he stressed the great things which are to be done in transportation, electricity and medicine.

"We know how to mass well, but how to distribute well is the problem," stated Meade in discussing need for economic reform. Other economic reforms suggested were banking reforms, and tax reforms. He said the present tax system was made when our nation was an agricultural country with most of the wealth in the land; now much of the wealth is in intangible things and the land is carrying too great a load of the tax.

Social reforms mentioned were old age pensions, unemployment pensions, crime and educational reforms. The speaker said he was not willing to condemn our educational system since he felt that education had been responsible for the balance which has kept the country in a state of equilibrium during the past few years of trying times.

Using the trained mind for tools instead of the gun and axe, he charged the graduates to go forward.

List Rooms For College Students

People who wish to rent rooms to college students for the summer session are asked to call at the College and fill out blanks so that their rooms may be inspected and approved before summer school opens, according to William O'Donnell, director of personnel at the College.

Rooms must be inspected by the college authorities before they can be put on the approved list.

Elect Pannell To Post of Principal

H. C. Pannell, of Logan, was elected high school principal for the coming year at a meeting of the Portales Board of Education last week. He has been superintendent at Logan for the past five years, having taught one year at Logan and one year at San Jon previous to that.

He did his college work at the University of Colorado, taking his master's degree in education.

Mr. and Mrs. Pannell will move here the middle of July. They have rented the J. H. Lee house.

HOLD MEET TONIGHT TO FORM PLANS

City League To Meet In Court House For Discussion

A meeting will be held tonight in the court house for the furthering of plans for the city softball league. All captains of the various teams are requested to be present. The business of this meeting will deal primarily with the drawing of teams and making up the schedule, according to Homer Barnett. Many other matters will be discussed.

In discussing the business of the meeting with Mr. Barnett, he said, "the meeting tonight will be the deciding factor of how many teams will be entered, and we especially want to emphasize the importance of each captain of the various teams to be present. We also ask that every team that desires to enter the league have a representative at the meeting tonight. There are no restrictions as to number of teams," Mr. Barnett concluded.

Some difficulty has been experienced with the lighting of the new field, in that the league has not been able to secure bulbs for the occasion. Globes were ordered at the same time the reflectors were ordered, but the company from which they were ordered did not have that particular bulb in stock. The order was sent on to an eastern city. The bulbs are expected any day.

The league hopes to play their first game Monday evening. They have reserved the city park for use in these games.

Miss Winnie Pool of Canyon accompanied her sister, Mrs. Floyd D. Golden, home for a visit Friday.

Graduates Plant Evergreen Tuesday

On Tuesday morning members of the graduating class of the College planted an evergreen tree as their contribution to the campus. Leon Schumper, president of the class, presented the tree to the school. Miss Betty Vandebout, vice-president of the freshmen class, accepted the responsibility of caring for the tree. Donald MacKay, president of the College, accepted the gift in behalf of the school.

Members of the glee clubs opened the ceremony by singing the Spring Song. Harry Taylor closed the program with Trees.

ward with a determination to conquer the new frontier opening up before them.

The speaker was introduced by Donald MacKay, president of the institution, who described him as representing the same type of institution as our Junior College with same ideals to be fulfilled.

Floyd D. Golden, dean of the school, in introduced the honor graduates. Miss Kathryn Mundell was valedictorian, and Norma Wildman, salutatorian. Graduates who were elected the Silver Key, the college scholarship society, were Kathryn Mundell, J. M. Metcalf, Eunice Drinkard, Pauline Stewart and Mrs. Maynard.

Diplomas were presented by A. D. Ribble, president of the board of regents, who expressed the appreciation of the members of the faculty and students and the cooperation of the community in making the first year of Eastern New Mexico Junior College a success.

Seventy-three students received their associate of arts degrees.

WILL PORTALES BECOME A GREAT CITY?

No section of the state is richer in natural resources than Roosevelt county, and especially the Portales Valley.

With a full development of these resources it is possible for Portales to become a city of from 10,000 to 25,000 people.

As a school town Portales is rapidly leading the eastern side of the state, providing educational advantages from the grades to two years college course.

As an agricultural center, the Portales Valley is far ahead of any section of the state, and this can be increased by proper methods of farming and marketing.

Supplementing this by the dry farming and dairying, Portales and Roosevelt can become the homes of prosperous farmers, with well-built, modern farm homes, with practically all the conveniences of the city.

There are many other natural resources that have not been scratched as yet, and it only remains for a full development to double the farm population of the county.

With this increase of rural population, the city population will double and treble.

In future weeks the News expects to go into more detail on these resources.

STOCK PROSPECTS BRIGHTER

Sunday the editor drove out to his ranch at Claudell and found range conditions much improved by the recent rains.

Pastures were green and grass was making a good growth. In fact, the pastures looked better than they have during the past three years.

Farmers along the road were rushing their planting, and indications are for good crops this fall.

During the past three years stockmen and farmers have suffered heavy losses from the drought, and it was very encouraging to see them bucking the game, and going ahead with their work.

The county has suffered heavily from soil erosion, and many fields are damaged to such an extent that it will take several years for them to get back to their original productivity.

The farmers and stockmen of Roosevelt county are of a sturdy breed, and even though they suffer reverses at the hand of nature they go ahead with the hopes of regaining lost ground.

It is upon the shoulders of these sturdy men that the future of the nation depends.

Says The Amarillo News:

"Sure, give the country back to the Indians! Bring back the buffaloes. Just abandon Amarillo, and Pampa, and Dalhart, and Tucumcari, and all the other fine cities that have sprung sturdily from the soil of the Panhandle. Leave business houses and snug residences just as they are. In time they will crumble, and there will be no man-made blots on the face of this beautiful and uninhabited plain. Confess, Panhandle citizens, that you are whipped, that the pioneer spirit that imbued you to leave the 'eastern seaboard' is dead, and that there was no basis for the prosperity you enjoyed until the temporary dust catastrophe arrived.

"We don't want to go back to east and south Texas, Professor Pitkin. We like it here. We haven't starved yet. The Panhandle is capable of making comfortable livings for many thousands more farmers than it now contains. This soil erosion will be cleared up. We may have to learn more about how to farm the wide acres out here, but we'd rather do that than leave the wide acres to the wild things. Somebody's going to have to bring some soldiers in here and move us if you want to carry out your pretty plan. And then, it might be somewhat hard on the soldiers.

"We are tempted to advise you, professor, to adopt the same course you are recommending for the Panhandle."

"Go to grass!"

ANENT

Spud Greaves of the Portales News is attracting a good deal of attention by his proposition for a government tree belt in Black Water Draw, between his town and Clovis. The colossal wind-break would be about forty miles long and as much as five miles wide, and would certainly be a government project worth while.

While in the sand country, this draw has an underlying sheet of water, only a few feet down. Once the roots of the trees reached this strata, they would thrive for all time to come, and constitute both a vast wind-break and a recreation ground for all of the plains and sand country.

Normally forest plantings in the steppes is a waste of time, money and energy, because the nature of the subsoil is such that irrigation must be perpetual. There is no such handicap in the Black Water Draw. Irrigation could be cheaply provided until such time as the roots reached the natural moisture. After that the trees would take care of themselves.

All of New Mexico should be interested in this timber proposition. Certainly it would be a most sensible place for the location of CCC activities for the next two years.—Will Robson in Side Lights on the News.

MORE HOME ACCOMMODATIONS

Within the next few months Portales will be faced with a greater house shortage.

Many are considering Portales for a location, but cannot find suitable accommodations. Now is the time to build apartments and houses to rent.

This shortage will turn away many desirable citizens, who will locate in neighboring towns, even though they have to drive to Portales for school accommodations.

This should not be the case.

Portales should be able to take care of all who wish to come here, and under the Federal Housing setup, this is now possible.

Now that some easterners are advocating the turning back of the great western empire to the Indians, we cannot help but smile.

Back in 1908 the writer landed in Elida and was to be shown the country by a "locator."

When the time arrived to start out in a buckboard, a full grown dust storm was in progress and the trip had to be delayed two days.

We were told that on the Sunday before starting that the dust storm was so bad that sand had to be shoveled out of the vault of the Elida bank with scoop shovels—at least we saw sand piled a foot deep on the sidewalk of a local real estate office.

We located.

Dust storms continue to prevail, to such an extent that "nesters" were lost between their dug-outs and cow lot and had to stay out all night before finding their way back to the fare of jack rabbit soup and pinto beans.

Did they leave?

Not on your life.

The Santa Fe railway sent in their farming experts to tell us how to farm and hold the soil, among these experts was H. C. McCowen, better known now as "Old Moneyless." Most of these experts have later acknowledged that they were all wet as to their farming methods, and it was up to the "nesters" to solve their own salvation.

They soon found that farming the Missouri and Arkansas method would aid the winds in sweeping away the soil, and devised means of their own.

As a result there are many successful farmers in Roosevelt county, who would be hard to move back to the Atlantic states.

As years rolled by, County Agents became familiar with farming methods of the west and have been able to give farmers valuable and scientific help.

The writer has seen farms blown away to hard surface, then listed deep after a rain, and along comes a wind from the other direction and fills the furrows with soil.

It is better not to depend upon the wind to renew the soil, and to farm in a way that will hold the land.

But the New Mexico farm is home to thousands of hardy pioneers and they would not leave without a protest.

It is easy to measure the relative imbecility of a cause. Just criticize it and see how mad its advocates get.—Buffalo Evening News.

WHY FURTHER EXEMPTIONS?

The proposed exemption of $2,500 will add to the financial difficulties of the state and its subdivisions in the opinion of the Taxpayers Association of New Mexico. It will mean a loss in revenue of $800,000 in addition to what is now lost by reason of existing exemptions.

How is this loss in revenue to be made up? By increased sales taxes? By increased income taxes? By taxes on intangible property? By increased taxes on business property? By reducing expenditures for schools and institutions, and for health and welfare work?

Who will be benefited by such exemptions if the proposal is ratified? Will it be the business man or corporation to whom we look for increased payrolls? Will it be the owner of business property? Will it be the owner of homes, farms, and ranches assessed in excess of $2,500? Will it be those who do not own any property at all? Will even those who own property, which may be exempt, benefit by it if they have to pay indirect taxes of the forms enumerated above, or if they will thereby be deprived of educational and other privileges now made possible for themselves and their families.—Tax Payers Association.

PAY TAXES NOW

The taxpayer who has been unable to make his tax payments promptly now has the opportunity to pay taxes for back years without interest or penalties. To avoid such interest and penalties, it is necessary:

1. To pay 1934 taxes before June 15, 1935, and

2. To pay 1933 and prior years' taxes before December 1, 1935.

It is suggested by the Taxpayers Association of New Mexico that each taxpayer owing taxes for 1934 and prior years talk this matter over with the county treasurer and make up a plan of monthly payments which will meet the above requirements. The first important step is to pay the 1934 taxes before June 15 next. Prior year's taxes may then be paid in installments during the period July 1 to December 1—five months, without interest or penalties.

There is a large amount of uncollected taxes in New Mexico. On December 31, 1934, according to a report of the State Tax Commission, the taxes uncollected for the years 1925 to 1933 inclusive amounted to the substantial total of $7,832,139.73. The collection of a considerable part of this amount will put New Mexico and its various subdivisions in a comfortable financial situation. It will make possible the payment of salaries and wages promptly. It will permit the payment of bills incurred for material and supplies. It will put all units of government on a cash basis throughout the year. It will help end the depression in New Mexico.—Tax Payers Association.

SMALL TOWN NOT DULL

A complaint against small towns and villages that there are often few opportunities for clean, wholesome, enjoyable entertainment has been challenged by a group of young people in Marawa, Wis. This group, representing three local churches—one Lutheran, one Catholic and one Methodist—has begun a series of play evenings, to which all young people of the village and the entire surrounding community are invited.

The events are to be held every Monday night for two months. Each affair is independent of the others, with a new committee planning for every party. At the first party nearly 150 young people took part.

The events are held in a clubhouse where facilities for bowling, billiards, dart ball and other games are available. Card games and dancing are also indulged in. A feature of the first party was the first public presentation of a home manufactured moving picture.—Milwaukee Journal.

THE CARNIVAL

The carnival is out. It took the sheriff, the city attorney, the city council, and the district attorney to turn the trick. Our hat is off to all of them. Our satisfaction and pleasure comes from recording their good deed.

Sheriff White's ultimatum that he would put the whole gambling layout in jail was the last straw. And we are glad we didn't have a thing to do with it.

One of these days it may penetrate the innermost recesses of the local mayor's mind (and the mayor's mind in the bat belly of P. D.—Q. paulus) that public sentiment in this town cannot be continuously and permanently treated with impunity. Our satisfaction and pleasure would be complete should it be given us in future issues to record "getting right" by the few who heretofore have threatened the community with legalized gambling under the plea that the city needed the money—the specious old worn-out and discredited hog-and-hominy that two wrongs make a right. Congratulations, Messrs. White and Gallegos. Our hat is off to you.—Tucumcari American.

STATE PROJECTS

Santa Fe, May 24, 1935.
J. G. Greaves, Editor,
Portales Valley News,
Portales, N. M.

Dear Sir:

It has developed that many people and agencies over the state are laboring under the impression that they have filed applications for Public Works Administration funds, while in reality they have only furnished a list of needed projects for the State Inventory.

All those wishing to submit applications to the Public Works Administration for these projects should apply for instructions for doing so, contained in Circular No. 2. At the present time applications are to be made in accordance with instructions furnished under the original program, with the understanding that such applications will be amended to meet the new conditions when they are known.

New applications and inquiries in connection therewith should be addressed to George M. Neel, Acting State Director, Public Works Administration, Santa Fe, New Mexico. It is the wish of the Administration that applications be filed at the earliest possible date.

Very sincerely yours,
GEO. M. NEEL,
Acting State Director, P.W.A.

MAKE EFFORT TO COLLECT BACK TAXES

June 15 Ends Fiscal Year; $7,832,139 In Arrears

With the end of this fiscal year rapidly approaching, an exerted effort is being made to collect taxes through the local tax collector's office. The last date to pay taxes without penalty is June 15.

Interest and penalties will be added on all delinquent taxes according to years delinquent. For instance, all 1934 taxes carry a 4% interest; 1933, 16%; 1932, 28%, and 1931 delinquent taxes will be subjected to 50%.

Homer Barnett, tax collector and treasurer of Roosevelt county, issues a statement urging all delinquent taxpayers to take advantage of the moratorium, stating that a big saving can be made at this time. However, according to Mr. Barnett, if 1934 taxes are paid by June 15, this year, the balance, 1931, 1932 and 1933 taxes can be paid in installments, without interest, providing all have been paid by December 1, this year.

Mr. Barnett had the following to say regarding the matter:

"The taxpayer who has been unable to make his tax payments promptly now has the opportunity to pay taxes for back years without interest or penalty. To avoid such interest and penalties it is necessary to pay 1934 taxes before June 15, 1935, and to pay 1933 and prior years' taxes before December 1, 1935."

According to a report made by the State Tax Commission there is a large amount of uncollected taxes in New Mexico. On December 31, 1934, the taxes uncollected for the years 1925 to 1933 inclusive, amounted to the substantial sum of $7,832,139.73. Collection of a considerable part of this amount will put New Mexico and its various subdivisions in a comfortable financial situation.

LITTLE END OF THE GUN

Epic and Interesting Study of the Irascibility of the Man Who Gazed Down the Barrel; the Man Who Relinquishes Prior Rights to a Sanctuary at the Demands of "Bad Men"

By J. DUDE DRATCHE
Illustration by Ray Jolly

America, of all other countries and principalities has experienced a crime wave during the last two decades that would set London, England rocking with uneasiness. Among these culprits have been the world's worst enemies . . . boot legging, kidnapping, embezzlements, rum-running, murdering, and last, but not least, bank robbers.

According to the best information, crime has been greatly alleviated during the present administration, due largely to Uncle Sam's men who have taken a more active part in the crime situation. However, in many cases the solving, arresting and conviction of many of the country's bad men have been in the county court house of their respective places.

Each criminal, along with their henchmen, have covered the front pages of our metropolitan newspapers with pictures and news stories galore. Each one has received his sentence, minor or major, and many have long since served their sentences and are now at large . . . possibly different men, or maybe worse.

Yet, many of America's bad men, commonly known as "public enemy No. 1," have paid with their lives at the hands of officers, in the electric chair, and other methods of capital punishment.

There are other men who have not gotten their part of the publicity, not the men who held the gun, not the bad men, but the men who looked down the gun . . . honest, upright citizens who merely got mention of the incidents when they were commanded to "hand over the cash" or whatever the case and demand might have been.

These men have received little or no commendation for their act . . . whatever it might have been. Little is known of a man who, at one time, employed in a bank in Missouri had occasion, not by choice, to look down the gun barrel on two different occasions. That man is right here in our midst. Listen to his story:

In the spring of 1914, I lived in a small town in the state of Missouri. I was employed by a small bank and as this was just a village compared to Missouri's cities, we had small quarters. The town was indeed quiet, and especially so at night.

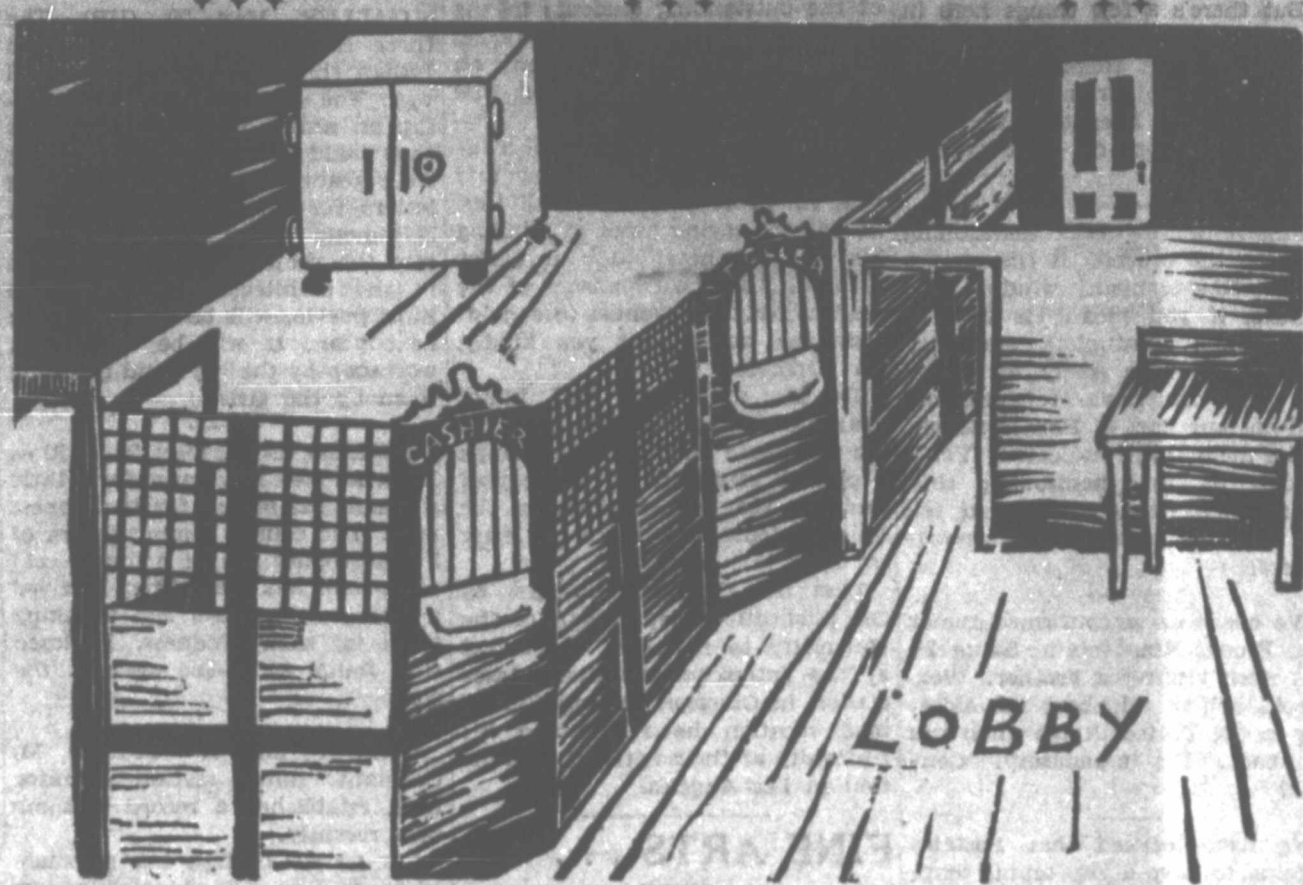

One night, shortly after midnight, I was awakened by the telephone. Somewhat excited over the alarm, I hurried over to where the telephone hung on the wall. When I gave the usual "hello," a voice on the other end said, "They're robbing the bank." It took me several seconds to regain my equilibrium, and being half asleep, I hardly realized just what the other party had said . . . or maybe I was too dazed by what he said to furnish a retort. Finally, I asked, "What?" The sharp reply came back. This time with more emphasis than before, if not a bit cutting: "They're robbing the bank!"

As the man spoke this time I recognized the voice as being that of my brother who lived only a few blocks away. He told me to stay inside; that the bandits had the house surrounded. Simultaneously I heard a terrific explosion . . . one that almost jarred my house. By this time I was well awake and alert to the situation.

I rushed to the front door. A train on a siding near there three blocks away cast a light directly across my front yard, thus making it impossible for me to leave by the front way, even if I had desired. I raced to the back door and peeked through to the orchard, in full bloom, and which would afford a perfect blind for my exit, I thought. Then I noticed a light, which appeared to be a lantern being carried by someone, coming up through the orchard. I held my breath, and being a bit irascible at this moment, I feared something was going to happen. In a split second I heard the report of a gun, then another and another, but the light came on my way. I waited, half scared; the light came closer and closer; and finally a man stepped onto the porch.

I recognized the man as being the night watchman of the village. He came into the house, as well come guest, and gave me a complete report of the situation. During this time we heard four more reports from the explosives, making six altogether. In a few minutes all was quite tranquil.

We waited for a while, and deciding that the robbers had vanished, went to the parked train which was still standing on the track and told the flagman of the robbery. It had occurred to us that the bandits might board this train. A complete search was made but no one other than the passengers could be located. Farther down the line, a railroad detective stopped the train and made another search. This also proved futile.

Shortly after the noise ceased at the bank that night it began raining. The downfall was heavy for a short while and before long the sky was clear.

We waited until almost day-break and started for the bank. Shortly after we arrived and were viewing the situation, half the town's population was on the scene. A check-up revealed that the robbers had erected a temporary fortification near the entrance of the bank, and judging from the empty cartridges behind this improvised trench of railroad ties, the "thicker man" had been placed here. It was probably he who did the shooting at the night watchman.

The bank was in a mess; bits of the completely demolished safe were scattered here and there; the office had been turned inside out.

Not far away was the county seat, and summoning the sheriff, who made an investigation of the situation, we spent the day getting the bank back in shape. Of course we did no business that day, other than answer a thousand and one queries.

Next morning a rural mail carrier making his route came upon fresh tracks in the mud which, he thought, had been made either during or shortly after the rain. He telephoned to town and reported his find. The sheriff's force went to the scene and tracked the men, but finally lost the trail. They came back to town and called Springfield for bloodhounds. The hounds arrived and picked up the trail, which ran off through a field.

Trailing the men for about four miles, they came upon them in a hollow, surrounded by heavy timber. A tree which had fallen across a gulch formed a cache and a hide-out. The robbers had erected a rock fortification, which, along with the tree, made an excellent hide-out.

Upon approaching the scene, the posse opened fire on the men, who immediately hoisted a flag.

A search of the surroundings revealed the money hidden here and there. The men were brought into town and placed in jail. They gave their names, which would indicate an Irish colony, as O'Brien, Carigan and Kelly.

The prosecuting attorney erred in making his complaint against the men, and their sentences were fixed at 10 years each in the state penitentiary at Jefferson City.

All the money, with the exception of a few bills mutilated by the heavy discharge of Nitro, was recovered.

Again, in 1931, while standing in the bank lobby talking to an insurance man, a man entered the bank and walked near us. I asked him what he wanted and without any hesitation he pulled a gun from under his coat and rammed it in my stomach. He didn't have to tell me it was a holdup.

At that moment another bandit entered the bank flashing a gun. He backed the insurance man into the directors' room, along with myself. The second bandit ordered the insurance man to lie on the floor, while the first bandit directed me to the vault, which was behind the cage. I glanced at the front of the building and saw another man holding a gun pointed at me. Just then another customer entered the bank and the bandit at the directors' room and placed him alongside the insurance man. He went back to the front and left bandit No. 2 as guard.

While I was getting the money from the vault, as I had been commanded, another man entered. He, too, was placed on the floor in the directors' room. Handing the money to the robber who still held the gun in my face, he walked over to the cashier's window and took what money was in the cash drawer. Then he came back to me and ordered me into the directors' room. I stood back to the wall and the three robbers left orders for us to "stay put" until they got clear of the bank.

Closing the door, the men left through the front door, jumped into a car parked near the curb, where a man sat at the wheel. The car sped away.

Following announcement of the robbery, a tourist camp operator made a statement which aided the officers in a check-up of the car and later resulted in the arrest of all four men. He came to the sheriff's office and stated that the men, as described to him, fit the description of four men who spent the night at the tourist camp. They had left a call for an early hour, and, fearing the men had intended to leave without paying their lodging bill, he had taken the number of their car. However, when they robbed the bank the car bore a Kansas license. The tourist camp operator gave them a Missouri license tag number.

Following up the tip, the sheriff called Jefferson City and learned that the license number had been issued to Brookfield, Mo. Another call to Brookfield revealed the owner of the car. The sheriff, along with a member of the bank, who went along to identify the suspect, went to Brookfield and made the arrest.

Although all four were not arrested at that time, within 30 days after the robbery all had been apprehended.

This ended episode No. 2. A little more than a year after this brazen holdup, we were robbed again at the same location.

It was summer in Missouri and few people were on the streets at this time of day, early morning. The town was rather quiet and no one was in the bank but myself and a girl who was the helper.

Having contracted a case of "summer fever," I desired to get out and promenade under the sun's rays. This I did, and had just returned to the bank when two men stepped into the bank, masked, each drawing guns and demanding the cash on hand.

Bank robbers, as I have learned from experience, are not too easy to please; in fact, they're repulsive to me. One of the robbers came behind the cage, while the other stayed in the lobby to take care of anyone who might enter during the course of the robbery. No one came in, however.

Pushing me under the counter at the point of a gun, the bandit went to the safe and, taking the girl along, commanded her to "dish out the cash." This she did without hesitation. Asking about gold and bonds, I informed him that there was not any in the bank, and at the same time half raised on my elbows. He didn't want to see what I was going to do, but came over to where I lay prone under the counter, poked the gun in my face and demanded "gold and bonds."

The gun was close enough to my face that I could smell the powder-burnt barrel. Bullets in the cylinders looked like croquet balls to me. I still maintained, however, that the bank had no gold or bonds.

Backed up available cash, the bandit directed me to their parked car, and told me to hang on the running board, adding, "now, don't try to jump off or we'll drill you." They were going too fast for me to jump off, so I found little difficulty in gratifying his demand.

A few blocks away, at the edge of town the car came to a stop. The "man behind the gun" yelled "jump off." I did.

The car sped away, and although a pursuit car gave a merry chase the bandits were not apprehended. Making a complete circle of the town, the bandit car headed north through rough country, the pursuit car not more than 15 minutes behind. Reports along the country roads kept the officers on their trail. About 15 miles northeast of the city officers discovered the bandit car, which had been driven over a bar pit into dense underbrush. The car was empty.

A search of the surroundings lasted all that day, but the culprits were never found.

They were never captured. The man of whom we have been writing is R. O. Senn, bookkeeper at The News.

TAXES HIKE BY THIRTY STATES IN U. S.

Taxpayers Will Pay $125,000,000 New Taxes Next Year

ADOPT SALE TAX Per Capita In N. Y. Reaches $3.92; So. Dakota's Highest

By FRED MYERS
United Press Staff Correspondent
CHICAGO, May 29 (UP).—Taxpayers of 30 states in which legislatures have met and adjourned since January 1 will pay approximately $125,000,000 in new taxes next year for one of the biggest treasure hunts in American peace-time history.

Before the remaining 14 bodies of law-makers met in session department die—probably about November 1—the sum of new state levies easily will pass $200,000,000.

New taxes imposed in the last four months average slightly more than $1.50 per capita annually in the 30 states whose legislatures have adjourned. The bill for each actual taxpayer will be considerably higher.

Figures gathered by 44 state capital bureaus of the United Press reveal that only West Virginia, of all the 44 states in which legislatures met this year, will pay less taxes next year than in the fiscal season just past. Repeal of the state's gross income tax and amendments to other revenue laws will save West Virginia about $1,000,000 a year.

New Yorkers will be called on to rustle the largest sum of new taxes next year—$51,150,000. That's $3.92 per capita.

South Dakota's 705,000 residents were hardest hit by their money seeking legislators. An increase of approximately $3,000,000 a year in the state tax bill will cost each person in the state about $8.50.

Legislators generally tried to divide equitably between those of high and low incomes the burden of new taxes. Retail sales taxes were enacted or increased in 10 states, but law-makers of nine states shifted some of the load to the larger income brackets through amendment of income tax laws.

States adopting a sales tax, bringing the number of commonwealths imposing that form of levy to 29,

Increased Interest Shown By Many In Federal Housing Modernization

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Farmers in all parts of the United States are showing increased interest in the modernization credit plan of the Federal Housing Administration, according to reports from field representatives in the rural areas.

Both interior and exterior repairs to homes lead the work now being done, according to the reports. Although barns, poultry houses, granaries, machine sheds and other buildings involved in efficient production are not being neglected.

In New York state, a home bureau better housing week will be inaugurated starting June 5, in conjunction with National Better Housing Day. Part of this celebration will be a rural program to be presented before more than 1,000 home bureau units. A booklet on better rural homes will be a feature, according to the combined plans of the Home Bureaus, Home Economics, the Extension Service and the Home Demonstration Agents who are cooperating.

An Illinois town of 300 population reports that 19 of the 20 modernization loans made were to farmers.

A contractor in a rural Virginia community says that his firm is doing more reconditioning business than for some time and in one town two new houses are under construction, constituting the first building that has taken place there for more than two years.

The Home Demonstration Advisory Council also is conducting a county-wide campaign for improved kitchens, water systems and sanitary facilities.

Modernization credit funds in Illinois are being put to a different purpose. Barns, chicken houses, granaries, machine sheds and wells are under construction there, with general repairs, painting and roofing of house and barns now in progress.

The farm representative in southwestern Oklahoma has reported several new homes under construction and many more being remodeled and repaired.

Four hundred and seventy-six farm homes were contacted in Tulare county, the third largest rural community in the state of California. A large percentage of the owners desired improvements and 95 of them stated that they wished to effect them through the aid of modernization credit.

Painting of buildings, inside or out, were noted by 87 farmers, while 61 desired to install additional concrete irrigation pipe. Fifty-two desired to construct poultry houses and 51 announced their intention of making repairs on out-buildings.

Other desired improvements in this section included additions to houses, new barns or pump houses, domestic water systems, dairy refrigeration and new foundations.

Poultry farmers in New York state were reported taking advantage of the modernization credit plan of the Federal Housing Administration more than any other type of farmer.

state business. In other congressional quarters, reaction ranged from amazement at the sweeping nature of the decision to give at its purport and results, the latter especially among the western independents who have repeatedly accused NRA of oppressing small business.

"The constitution has been saved," said Borah (R., Idaho), one of these.

"Thank God for the Supreme Court," said Senator King (D., Utah), and several others echoed these exact words.

Typical of another point of view was Senator White (R., Me.) words. He expressed a belief business would improve with the elimination of some governmental restrictions.

Minor Disagreements While the opinion of the court was unanimous, Associate Justices Stone and Cardozo joined in a concurring opinion taking exception to minor points in the argument of their seven associates.

They also took occasion to interpret the ruling as meaning that: "If a trade or an industry is so predominantly local as to be exempt from regulation by the Congress in respect of matters such as these, there can be no 'code' for it at all."

The opinion of the seven, prepared and delivered by Chief Justice Hughes, was emphatic in its assertions the law delegated congressional powers to the President without sufficient restrictions and limitations to bring the action inside the scope of the constitution.

He prefaced his statement of conclusions with a resume of the case, concerning the A. L. A. Schechter Poultry Co. of Brooklyn. It was then he asserted that "extraordinary conditions," do not justify "action which lies outside the sphere of constitutional authority."

To the argument of supporters of the law that the national crisis justified an intensive cooperative effort, he replied more than a voluntary effort was involved, that, in fact, the statute involved "the coercive exercise of the law making power."

He referred to the court's recent decision in the "hot oil" case, holding a section of the recovery act invalid because of a too broad grant of authority, and said the present case should be decided after determining whether proper limitations and safeguards had been imposed.

After reading Mr. Greave's article concerning his trip to Florida and other southern points we have come to the conclusion that we can't compete with him. Maybe he saw all these beautiful places after all. If he didn't his imagination is perfect. We've decided there's nothing we can do about it at any rate.

But there's a few things here in Portales that we can tell the world about. Some of them worth mentioning, while others are merely incidents in our lives that we don't care to mention, or don't deserve commendation.

Among those worth mentioning (pardon the conceit) is the picture in the Gas Company window. The picture, if you please, is that of the Dionne quintuplets, and they are placed there solely to advertise the company's refrigeration, and not any part of Horace Echols, as he might have indicated. You'll pardon us for mentioning this, Horace, but every one should tell the truth occasionally, even newspapers.

We heard an unconfirmed rumor that Brooks King was in Santa Fe this week visiting a brother. Well, Brooks, tell us all about the oldest city in the United States when you get back. It's mandatory. Consent?

We have learned that Portales is going to have a city tennis tournament this year. Plans have been worked out and about all that is lacking now is entrants. That will be discussed later. But we're wagering it'll be a success.

Portales needs some local interest in sports. With the coming of the softball season, the illuminated field (if, and when the bulbs get here), people are not going to stay home these warm summer evenings, but are going to attend the games. Likewise, the tennis tournament. It will add recreation among tennis enthusiasts and pleasure seekers. A trophy will be given to winners in both women's and men's contests.

Market supplies of beef are above normal and there are nearly normal numbers of cattle and calves on farms, according to G. B. Thorn, in charge of the division of livestock and feed grains of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

In spite of the most drastic reduction in cattle number on record, brought about by the drought of 1934, numbers of cattle and calves on farms are still about four million more than in 1928 and only about half a million under the average for the previous 10 years.

Cattle and calves on farms January 1, 1935, totaled 60,667,000 compared with the 10-year average of 61,257,000. On January 1, 1928, there were 56,701,000 head compared with the high point on January 1, 1934, when supplied totaled 66,290,000 head, and when the supply of breeding stock was the largest on record. During the six years from January 1, 1928, to January 1, 1934, the cattle population of the United States increased about 17 per cent. The reduction in numbers in 1934 amounted to about 11 per cent.

Storage holdings of beef in public warehouses and packing plants of 72 million pounds on May 1 of this year were 67 per cent greater than a year ago and 54 per cent greater than the five-year average for May 1. These storage holdings of beef are exclusive of the supplies conserved in the drought program and held in storage by the federal surplus relief corporation for distribution through relief channels.

Gordon Greaves Graduates From N. M. University

Gordon Greaves, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Greaves, will receive his bachelor of arts degree from the University of New Mexico June 10, with a major in business administration.

Last week he published the last issue of The Lobo, University newspaper, of which he is editor. The Lobo is a seven column, six to eight page publication. In writing of the outstanding students in the senior class, Mary Frances Mackel makes the following comment on Greaves' work as editor of The Lobo:

"To Gordon Greaves, who religiously brings us news, good and bad, via Lobo. Along with all this, he has the saving grace of minding his own business, and an editor who still has the friendship of the student body is a wonder to behold! May the world treat you kindly, Mr. Greaves."

In his sophomore and junior years he was president of his class. He was house manager of the Kappa Alpha fraternity in his junior year and this year was president of the organization. He received his letter in track this year.

Last fall Greaves was sent by the publications department of the University to represent the school at the Intercollegiate Press Association in Chicago. During Christmas vacation he represented his fraternity at their national convention in Los Angeles.

The piece de resistance of the banquet was dainty omelets and radishes.

SHEEP SANITARY BOARD OF
NEW MEXICO
Albuquerque, New Mexico

April 1st, 1935.

Dear Sir:
The State Legislature in this year's session passed a law to the effect that all sheep marks and brands must be re-recorded.

This new law states in part:
"Every sheep owner, owning or having sheep in the State of New Mexico shall record in the office of the Secretary of the Board the mark and brand which he may use in marking his sheep, and the said Secretary shall enter and record said mark and brand in a book kept by him for that purpose. That the Secretary shall refuse to record in the name of any person, firm or corporation, any mark or brand which may have been previously recorded in the name of any other person, firm or corporation."

The record book of the Sheep
Sanitary Board has not been revised since 1923. During this time many sheep owners have gone out of business and quite a few are deceased, consequently, there are a number of duplications and obsolete brands and marks on the record book. We are always short of estimate for the sheep and it is necessary to have a re-recording of marks to clear the record books.

The Sheep Sanitary Board at its meeting March 27, 1935, adopted the following resolution:

"RECORD all marks and brands must be re-recorded."

It is not the intention of the Sheep Sanitary Board to deprive you of your car mark and brand, therefore, we are sending you this notice for the purpose of ascertaining if you want your mark and brand re-recorded.

If you are still in the sheep business, please notify this office within
(90) ninety days allowed by law, so that your mark and brand can be re-recorded or cancelled according to your wishes. Failing to notify this office within the given time your brand and car mark will be cancelled and may be used by another.

Yours truly,
SHEEP SANITARY BOARD OF NEW MEXICO.

By Tom Snell, Secretary.
May 23-June 13.

JUST A TRUNKFUL!

THREE smiling young stowaways demonstrate the ample space available for luggage, golf clubs or trophies of a shopping expedition, found in the trunk compartment of the new Ford V-8 Touring Sedan, two of the new de luxe types recently announced by the Ford Motor Company. The trunk compartment—with 13 cubic feet of space—is an inherent part of the design of the Tudor and Fordor Touring Sedan body types. All the space is used for luggage, the spare tire being carried conventionally at the rear, while an inner compartment under the floor provides space for tools. The trunk compartments may be locked with the same key that fits the tire lock. The new touring sedans were designed to provide ample luggage carrying facilities for families doing extensive traveling who wish to utilize the car interior for passengers. They have proved that far to be among the most popular Ford body types.

Travelogue

By J. G. Greaves

(This is the second of a series of articles written by J. G. Greaves, giving brief sketches of his trip through the Southern states to as far east as Florida, returning through Tennessee, Arkansas, Oklahoma, the Texas Panhandle, thence to Portales. Another article will appear in next week's issue of the News.)

On Monday, April 12, we left Gainesville, Florida, accompanied by Mrs. L. B. Pearce, for a tour of tropical Florida.

Arriving at Ocala at noon, had the pleasure of attending the Rotary luncheon at the Marion Hotel. From here we visited Silver Springs on the Ocala river, where glass bottomed boats were used to see the wonderful submarine gardens and great fish display in their native haunts.

Silver Springs were as clear as crystal and it was an easy matter to see the fish and growths 100 feet deep. At one point the fish were fed bread, and came to the surface by the thousands, eating out of the hand. At another point, at the bottom of the springs was a huge Dinosaur, measuring many feet in length. This prehistoric monster was petrified, and has attracted considerable interest from the Smithsonian Institute and other scientists.

The greater part of the evening was spent at Silver Springs, and from there the trip carried us to Lakeland, where the night was spent at the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Boswell, friends of Mrs. Pearce.

Mr. and Mrs. Boswell were ideal hosts and made this stay very pleasant. It was at this home that Mrs. Greaves pulled her first orange off of a tree.

Lakeland is a beautiful city, containing a number of lakes in the city limits. Around one of these large lakes was built the civic center. Games of every variety were provided for the amusement of tourists.

Leaving Lakeland, we drove through Bartow, the old home of Mrs. Pearce.

Driving through the great orange groves of Polk county, several snap shots were taken under the orange trees. Arrived at Lake Wales at noon, where again we attended the Rotary luncheon.

Lake Wales is in the heart of the orange groves of Florida. This is the ridge section of Florida, and near the highest point in Florida, known as Iron Mountain, where the famous Singing Tower, or Bock Tower, is located. This mountain park is a beautiful sight, a bird sanctuary, and contained many tropical flowers and plants. On a lake in this park was to be seen a flamingo, which was imported from Australia. Surrounding this park are the magnificent homes of wealthy people.

Also surrounding this park are orange groves comprising 4,000 acres or more. We became lost in this great grove, and as the driveways were better paved than the highway, had difficulty in finding our way out, and at every turn were met with signs reading "Private, No Public Driveway."

We took advantage of being lost and continued to turn on private driveways until we had seen the entire grove, consisting of trees in bloom, in green and ripe fruit. We made our escape without being thrown in jail.

From Lake Wales we proceeded to Tampa, where again we missed the highway and made a trip through the Cuban section, devoted to cigar factories.

Near Tampa we bought a field crate of oranges and grapefruit. Crossing the Gandy bridge at

FARMING IN ALASKA IS DOUBTFUL TRIAL

Is Farming Paradise; Crops Will Grow to Enormous Size

SMALL AVERAGE

Mosquitoes Appear in June; Gnats and Flies Also Menace

By JAMES A. SULLIVAN
United Press Staff Correspondent

SAN FRANCISCO, May 29 (UP).—Old settlers scratch bearded chins meditatively and say only "maybe" when asked whether 200 midwestern families can succeed in wrestling a living from the soil in the Matanuska Valley in Alaska.

Many have tried and failed. Others like Al Walters made a go of it. Walters averaged about $2,000 a year profit from a small farm before he reiterated and went "outside"—the Alaskan term for the United States.

Those who failed as farmers in the valley were mainly soundboughts tired of mining, land speculators, and settlers who spent the best months of the year—from May to September—at work on the roads, in the mines, or in the fish canneries.

During the four-month period the Matanuska is a farming paradise in which some crops grow to enormous sizes, others not at all. Three cabbages cover a yardstick. One potato will make a meal for an average-sized family. Strawberries as large as plums are produced. Corn won't grow at all and tomatoes must be raised under glass.

The strawberry plants on the Pelton and Lawrence farm were already three inches high when the colonists arrived to begin clearing their homesteads. Onions and lettuce "sets" were poking their shoots above the surface of the rich black soil, a sandy loam which agriculturists prize highly.

It was mid-day and the Matanuska was doffing its winter browns and white for deep greens. Ice was breaking on the scores of small lakes which dot the floor of the area.

J. J. Tully, grizzled pioneer who carries his personal belongings in packboard as he trudges over Matanuska's dirt roads, said insect pests would be one of the things the colonists would find hardest to overcome.

"In May and June we have large mosquitoes, but they don't bite much," he said. "Then come the small mosquitoes with a bite like a dentist's drill. After them come the gnats and white flies, and they sting as sharply as a frostbitten nose."

M. D. Snodgrass, who has been farming in the valley for 20 years, believed that the colonists' main chance of success lay in dairying.

field is one of the loveliest in the Museum. Besides the paintings, the Museum has statues, and other rare antiques.

One room is the original ballroom of one of the palaces of Louis XIV.

Another room is a ball-room from the palace of Marie Antoinette.

The floors of some of the galleries are made of wood called lignumvitae (long life). This is the hardest wood known. It has no grain and cannot be split. It sinks in water. It is from a tree that grows in Africa. The floors are wonderfully laid in mosaic designs of this wood.

There are marble doorways from palaces in Italy. The carving and inlay work was all done by hand and is more than 200 years old.

The statues in the gardens are all brought from Italy, and the gardens are so lovely with beautiful things and landscaped with Florida natural plants in their flowering beauty, that the place is a joy forever. In the pool in the center of the garden are black swans, and the hedges are all of purple bougainvillea in full bloom.

One of the galleries has a throne of the famous De Medici family. This throne is hand-carved, and is made of sandal wood and outlined in pure gold.

One of the loveliest of the statues was one of a young child fishing for crabs. It is of white marble, and the folds of the sweater and the knitted cap of the child and the net bag which he holds in one hand are all so wonderfully carved that one can also feel the texture of material.

Our valley is looking beautiful once more. Some of the old residents say we have the best season we have had for five or six years.

The community was saddened by the death of Mrs. W. O. Upton. Mrs. Upton suffered from a broken blood vessel in her head. She seemed to be improving and her family had hopes of her living for several months, but she suddenly grew worse and died on Saturday morning. Mr. and Mrs. Upton were two of the early settlers in this valley, having settled here shortly after they were married in 1906. They have reared a family of seven children.

Recent Rains Help Farms and Ranges

Just one more rain and New Mexico farmers will raise good feed crops; two more timely rains and the state should have one of the best row crops in its history, says O. R. Quisenberry of the New Mexico State College.

Recent general rains over a large part of the state have materially improved the grass situation and insured a crop over most of the dry land section. They have added materially to the stored water supply, increased spring flow and generally improved the farming and range outlook over the entire state.

Farmers are planting their crops just as quickly as they can get into the field. Seasonal conditions should provide a means for farmers not only to grow enough feed to carry their livestock over another year, but to plant crops, the stubble of which may be left on the land and insure against dust storms such as have occurred during the past season. The best crops for this purpose are no doubt sorghum and sudan grass over a large part of the plains area, and millet in the higher elevations. Where terraces have been built, strips of alfalfa, broom grass, or other perennial crops may be planted with success above the terrace and the intervening strips used for the usual crop production. This would protect the terraces in case of heavy rains and also prevent much erosion on the land itself.

Seed stocks for most of the principal field crops in New Mexico have been located by dealers, government agencies and others. The Rehabilitation Corporation has now in storage for its clients large stocks of high germinating seed of the best varieties, which are available through all of the county relief administrations to farmers who are being rehabilitated, as well as others in the community. It was not possible to stock up with certified seed in a large number of counties, but the best seeds are available.

Move To Hold City Tennis Tournament

Plans Under Way For All-City Tourney; Contest Open To Any Resident of City, As Well as College Students, Faculty

With the approach of summer a popular demand has been emphasized for a city tennis tournament. The News, along with other members of the city, has undertaken to sponsor this move, and tentative plans, although not yet completed, are taking form and will be announced in a future issue of this paper.

However, rules governing the tournament have been mapped out. It has been decided that there will be both men's and women's singles and doubles. The fee for entering singles will be 50 cents. For the doubles the fee will be 75 cents, or 50 cents each.

Registrations will be made with Jimmy Drake of The News, Tuesday of next week has been set as the last day of entry. Immediately following closing of entries a drawing will be held and players given their brackets. It is expected from numerous enthusiasts over the city that more than 40 players in each group will enter.

Arrangements have been made to use the high school tennis court for the tournament. J. P. Steiner has already consented to hold the court open for the event. Although it is not yet known just when the preliminaries will be played, it is hoped that actual playing will start the latter part of next week. Referees have not yet been appointed. A trophy will be given the winner in both men's and women's contests. Balls will be furnished for the quarter-finals, semi-finals and finals.

Those wishing to enter the contest are asked to make entry with Jimmy Drake at the News office as soon as possible.

Every effort is being made to make this an annual affair, and with the cooperation of business men as well as contestants and enthusiasts we feel sure that this can be accomplished.

The contest is open to all residents of the city.

Move To Have Golf Course Here

May Hold Tournament Later In Season; Much Interest Shown

A move is under way to have a golf tournament here some time this summer. Plans have not been announced.

According to enthusiasts, an interest is being shown in the movement, but as yet nothing has been mapped out for certain. It is hoped, according to those in charge, that the old golf course here will be re-worked, resurfaced of greens and clearing of fairways, which will necessitate several days work. Others have expressed a desire to have a course at Roosevelt park.

There are a number of golf enthusiasts in the city, and a tournament would help to create interest.

Further announcements will be published at a later date.

"Don't Quote Me"

By United Press

WASHINGTON, May 29 (UP).—Breaking a precedent that goes far back into its history, the U. S. secret service has started to hold press conferences.

There have been two, so far, and they have been good, considering. After all, you can't break a 109-year-old tradition and expect to be better perfect. The secret service is still a little awkward about meeting the press—like a novice with a new bag of golf clubs.

Both the secret service press conferences have been held to announce capture of notorious counterfeiters. Counterfeiters are the principal concern of the service outside of guarding the President.

The conferences have been in keeping with the cautious traditions of the service. On the first occasion Assistant Chief Joseph E. Murphy had brought in a large stack of counterfeit bills which he passed around to the reporters to show the kind of bogus money the service was up against.

After the conference was over, the counterfeiters were collected carefully and Murphy counted 'em to see that none of the reporters were walking off with a souvenir.

At the latest conference Murphy was even more cautious. He brought in only half a dozen counterfeiters and wouldn't let more than one out of his hands at a time.

He explained that these counterfeiters were especially deceiving that it took the best of the experts to detect them.

Of course there hasn't been any mention of the circumstances, but the fact that the department of justice has been getting an unusual number of headlines for its gangster hunting activity is thought to have at least something to do with the abandonment by the secret service of its long-time policy of secrecy.

The secret service isn't the only law enforcement agency of the government to be spurred to greater attention to the headlines, presumably as a result of the justice activities.

All of the treasury's criminal units, Internal Revenue Agents, Coast Guard, Narcotic Agents, etc., have united in much publicized unified drives against crime in recent months.

The war between the moonshiners and the revenuers in the Kentucky mountains goes on and on.

It carried over through the years of prohibition and now with liquor legal again the fight is more bitter than ever.

Scientific criminological technique usually isn't very helpful to the revenuers, but in the latest raid at Dawson Springs, Ky., modern methods and old fashioned frontier sense combined effectively.

W. R. Sayles, assistant deputy internal revenue commissioner, reported the incident.

Revenue agents had spotted a still up in the hills near Dawson Springs. A raid was organized secretly and with utmost caution but when the trap was sprung a lean moonshiner lookout gave the warning and the moonshiners managed to get away.

By the time the agents got to the still, a 150-gallon outfit still bubbling merrily, not a soul was in sight.

The agents thought they had been fooled again. Then they noticed a hitching post to which a mule evidently had been tied. On the ground was a quantity of gray hair, shed by the mule as he stood waiting to haul the moonshine down the rugged trail.

Agents collected all the hair they could find and set out to scour the hills for a mangy, gray-haired animal with a good many bare patches on his lean flanks.

A couple of days later they found such an animal in the barn-yard of a tip-of-the-farmer.

The agents seized the mule, clipped a sample of hair from his side and sent it with that found at the still to the crime laboratory.

Loans on '34 Cotton Extended 6 Months

The Commodity Credit Corporation has advised the AAA that the maturity date of cotton producers' loans on the 1934 crop, commonly referred to as 12 cent cotton loans, has been extended from July 31, 1935 to February 1, 1936. Direct loans by the Commodity Credit Corporation upon eligible cotton under the 12 cent loan plan will be available to producers until July 31, 1935.

Extension of the maturity date of these loans means that producers who have obtained 12 cent cotton loans may make payment, obtain the release of their pledged cotton warehouse receipts, and secure the advantage of any market rises between now and February 1, 1936. It means also that no cotton pledged as security for 12 cent loans will be taken over or sold by the Commodity Credit Corporation prior to Feb. 1, 1936, except as provided under the terms of the loan agreement. One of these provisions is that middling 1/8-inch spot cotton must reach 13 cents a pound on the New Orleans market before it can be liquidated by the Commodity Credit Corporation prior to the extended maturity date of the loans.

With the present higher basis for spot cotton, on many grades of cotton producers in many sections have an equity over and above the loan value, plus interest and carrying charges. This extension of the maturity date will allow producers to avail themselves of the opportunity of repaying their loan and taking advantage of any equities which they may have in the pledged cotton.

Banks and other lending agencies will be permitted to carry the notes made subsequent to June 30, 1935, by executing and furnishing to each loan agency of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation holding such notes for the bank or lending agency a supplemental contract to purchase.

Under this supplemental contract to purchase, the Corporation will purchase the notes subsequent to June 30, 1935, upon request of the bank or lending agency, paying therefor the face amount of the contract plus the prevailing rate of interest in accordance with the present contract to purchase from the date of the note to June 30, 1935 and interest at the rate of 1 1/2 per cent from June 30, 1935, to the date of purchase.

Rudolph Baker is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Josh Harrigan in Amarillo and Skellytown, Texas. He expects to be gone two weeks.

of the Louisville, Ky., police department.

Experts there analyzed the samples, reported they came from the same animal and telegraphed their findings to Dawson Springs.

With that evidence the farmer was arrested on charges of operating the still and another score was chalked up for the union of science and a crime fighter's ingenuity.

Bankhead Certificates To Be Ready Early

In order to assure a supply of Bankhead Cotton Act tax-exemption certificates for producers who may wish to purchase them early in the 1935-36 ginning season, the AAA has announced the formation of a special pool of unsold equities now existing in the 1934-35 tax-exemption certificate pool. It is optional with producers whether their share of the pooled certificates be placed in the special pool. Producers who did not participate in the 1934-35 pool but are holding tax-exemption certificates issued for use last year may also place these certificates in the special pool.

This special pool, which will operate for a limited time, will have tax-exemption certificates available for sale as early as ginning begins in the more advanced cotton growing areas. Surplus certificates will be sold by the pool at a price somewhat below the ginning tax fixed by the Bankhead Act.

The surplus cotton tax-exemption certificate pool of 1934-35 was formed to facilitate the transfer of cotton tax-exemption certificates under the Bankhead Act. Producers surrendered to the pool surplus certificates representing a total of approximately 580,000 pounds, or the equivalent of 1,210,000 bales.

Unsold certificates totaling 180,000 pounds, the equivalent of 376,000 bales, remain to be returned on a pro-rata basis to producers who surrendered certificates for sale through the pool. These surplus certificates, when not turned into the special pool, will be issued to producers as 1935-36 tax-exemption certificates and will be in addition to their regular allotment of such certificates under the 1935 program.

The special pool will operate for a limited time only. At the expiration of the special pool the proceeds, less operating expenses, will be divided pro rata among the participants and any unsold certificates will be returned on a pro rata basis.

Plans Outlined To Fight Wind Erosion

Farmers, FERA workers and Extension workers met in Santa Fe, Monday, April 22, to outline plans for the wind erosion campaign to be carried on in Eastern New Mexico.

The county FERA is furnishing one gallon of gasoline, and one-sixteenth gallon of oil for each acre to be plowed, as well as sharpening lister points for farmers engaging in this program. Where tractors are not available teams will be permitted to do the work in designated counties. Farmers are expected to furnish the equipment and labor.

Blowing in this area has reached the stage where individual farmers cannot control it and community action is necessary. Soil from some farms has covered the highways and is beginning to scour neighboring farms developing serious blow. This makes it impossible for the individual farmer to handle the problem alone. Traffic has been blocked on some county and state highways. In certain counties grass land has been covered with soil to such an extent that the grass will grow very slowly unless some contour listing is done to allow the water to penetrate these soils. Provision is made for strip listing some soil lands.

Listing will be done on contour to conserve as much of the moisture that falls as possible and increase the vegetative growth. Plant cover will be sought on lands at the earliest possible date to prevent a similar condition arising.

A similar wind erosion program is in operation in Colorado, Oklahoma and Texas.

Wayah Bald, 5,400 feet high in the Nantahala national forest near Franklin, N. C., is said to be the only high mountain in the southern Appalachians with a motor road to its peak.
