McVeigh defense

DENVER — An FBI whistleblower testified Tuesday that the agency lab that analyzed Timothy McVeigh's shirts and pants after the Oklahoma City bombing was contaminated with explosives residue. Under cross-examination, FBI scientist Frederic Whitehurst admitted, "I have no knowledge of any actual contamination of any evidence in this case." However, he was not involved in analyzing that evidence.

Kennedys' record

BOSTON — Ordinarily, Rep. Joseph P. Kennedy would be a sure bet for governor in a state where his family has gone 18-for-18 in general elections over the last 50 years. But now the political future of the Massachusetts Democrat is in doubt because of another family streak: its record with women.

Merger talks

NEW YORK — Thirteen years after the breakup of Ma Bell, AT&T Corp. and a company formed by two of its Baby Bell offspring are talking about reuniting in a record $50 billion-plus merger, a source said Tuesday. A combination of AT&T and SBC Communications Corp. would be the largest merger ever and would radically reshape the telecommunications landscape.

Supreme Court ruling: Sex-harassment lawsuit against Clinton can proceed while he is in office

WASHINGTON (AP) — Paula Jones can pursue her sex-harassment lawsuit against President Clinton while he is in office, the Supreme Court ruled Tuesday. Though a major setback for the president, the decision left room for a lower court judge to delay an embarrassing trial.

The Constitution does not shield a sitting president from having to face lawsuits over acts unrelated to his official duties, the unanimous ruling said.

"Like every other citizen ... (Jones) has a right to an orderly disposition of her claims," Justice John Paul Stevens wrote for the court.

However, Stevens also spoke of "the high respect that is owed to the office of the chief executive," and he concluded: "A stay of either the trial or ... (pretrial fact-finding) might be justified by considerations that do not require the recognition of any constitutional immunity."

Jones' lawyers exulted over the ruling, and a friend of Jones said the former Arkansas state employee "just screamed and yelled and cried" with delight. The lawyers said an apology and admission from Clinton might still head off a trial.

The president's private lawyer, Robert S. Bennett, said in a prepared statement, "We are confident that the case ultimately will be resolved in the president's favor."

Bennett later told CNN, "I'm not worried at all. I think when all is said and done the embarrassment will be on the side of Paula Jones."

The case returns to U.S. District Judge Susan Webber Wright, who took a law school class from Clinton when he taught at the University of Arkansas law school.

The judge wasted little time after the Supreme Court's ruling, saying she expected

Paula Jones says President Clinton summoned her to a Little Rock hotel room in 1991, exposed himself to her and asked her to perform a sex act. He was governor of Arkansas at the time and she was a state worker. She sued in 1994 and is seeking $700,000 in damages. Clinton denies her claims.

Texas twisters kill at least 30

JARRELL — At least 30 people were killed Tuesday when a tornado ripped through this Central Texas town and flattened a small subdivision.

Authorities ~~said between 50 and 70~~ homes in the Double Creeks Estate subdivision were leveled in the twister, one of several to hit four Central Texas counties about 4 p.m.

Williamson County sheriff's deputy Ed Richards said 30 people were confirmed dead at a temporary morgue set up at the Jarrell Volunteer Fire Department. He said rescue workers would search for survivors throughout the night.

"It's very possible we have people trapped out there," he said. "I don't know what we may still find. ... It looks like a war zone. This is a devastating scene."

In the subdivision, bits of clothing hung from barbed-wire fences and a tractor-trailer lay on its back in the middle of a field near scores of dead cattle. Everywhere, mud-covered people wandered around crying and consoling each other.

Hearses trickled into the area where rescue workers had already started pulling bodies out by Tuesday evening.

Richards said there was nothing left of the homes.

"You know how people tell you to find an inside wall? Well there's nothing left of these homes," Richards said.

Jarrell, a town of roughly 1,000 people, was largely destroyed by a tornado only eight years ago, on May 17, 1989. One person was killed and 28 were injured in that storm, which severely damaged or destroyed 35 homes and 12 mobile homes.

"I thought the one in 1989 was awful, but this is worse," said Janine Brock, a lifelong resident of Jarrell. "It's going to be awful. They're going to have to bury so many people."

The violent storms killed at least two others elsewhere in the region Tuesday.

In Austin, city spokesman Carlos Cordova said two homes were destroyed by a tornado around Lake Travis, killing one person. A woman drowned in Shoal Creek, Cordova said.

The violent storms began in Bell and McLennan counties, about 60 miles north of Jarrell, about 3:45 p.m. and moved into Williamson County just north of Austin.

"It was unbelievable," said Thomas Soliz, a Williamson County resident. "It was pretty frightening ... You just look up and there it is."

Also in Williamson County, violent storms hit an Albertson's grocery store in Cedar Park, blowing off part of the roof and causing the building to collapse. At least eight people were hurt and one was missing in the rubble, county spokesman John Sneed said.

"The funnel was poking out of the sky and then the dirt on the ground started to spin and then the top and the bottom joined and you could see the tornado just start moving through town," said Mike Richardson, who

Parental notification bill dies as House seeks to revive 52 others

AUSTIN (AP) — A bill requiring parents to be notified before their minor daughters had abortions died in the House Tuesday along with a briefly resurrected effort to ban same-sex marriages.

Both were buried the day after dozens of other bills were killed by a lawmaker angry over efforts to derail the parental notification bill.

In a day filled with parliamentary maneuvering, Texas' only openly gay state lawmaker, Rep. Glen Maxey, drew a standing ovation from his colleagues after encouraging them to vote for the anti-gay-marriage amendment offered by conservative Rep. Warren Chisum, R-Pampa.

Maxey, D-Austin, said a blanket "yes" would make the vote meaningless.

"We know what this amendment is about," he said. "I'm asking all my colleagues in this House to vote 'yes' on this amendment and deny Mr. Chisum the political record that he wants."

The amendment, which would have prevented Texas law

Council votes to maintain code to limit merchandise outside place of business

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Midland City Council members will not tolerate undue clutter around area store fronts, although some area business managers have suggested a change.

■ Other City Council action/1B

After a few fines, which have been assessed in recent weeks, some business managers have approached the city and requested that a committee of business managers review the code.

In Tuesday morning's meeting, council members rejected the idea, maintaining that the city code is designed to limit the amount of unsightly merchandise left outside of a place of business.

Although some other cities allow this practice, council members said they believe area retailers should keep store fronts attractive, just as home owners are required to keep front yards orderly.

"I'm comfortable with our ordinance the way it is," said David Wayland, building official for the city.

According to city code restrictions, no merchandise may be left outside, with the exceptions of firewood, pumpkins and Christmas

Protesters vow to defy Kabila, plan Kinshasa demonstration

Associated Press

KINSHASA, Congo — Opposition activists vowed Tuesday to defy President Laurent Kabila and hold a protest march in the capital, setting the stage for confrontations with the former rebel chief's government.

Organizers of Wednesday's planned march say Kabila and his ruling alliance are no better than the nearly 32-year dictatorship they deposed.

"They claim to be liberators, but it is as if they have taken us from one prison cell to another prison cell," said Raymond Kahungu Mbemba, a leader of the youth movement of the opposition Union for Democracy and Social Progress. "We cannot accept that."

Kabila's Alliance of Democratic Forces for the Liberation of Congo announced a ban on public meetings and protests Monday and warned that violators would be considered "enemies of the liberation of the Congolese people and be punished to the fullest extent of the law."

The ban was the latest restrictive policy imposed by Kabila since his fighters seized Kinshasa 10 days ago, ending Mobutu Sese Seko's dictatorship.

Kabila banned political parties outright in some parts of Congo during his seven-month sweep across the country, which culminated in his declaring himself president May 17. And because most opposition groups are based in Kinshasa, the restrictions effectively bar political parties from organizing or meeting anywhere in the country.

Still, South Africa's President Nelson Mandela, who unsuccessfully tried to arrange a peace settlement between Kabila and Mobutu, said the new government's policies were understandable.

"I think that dealing with a country which has been under dictatorship for more than three decades, it is quite reasonable for him to ensure that law and order is stabilized before he can say 'I want all political parties to function,'" Mandela said Tuesday in Cape Town.

Two visiting U.S. congressmen, Donald Payne and Tom Campbell, agreed.

"It is not inappropriate in a tense time for a government to insist on a period of calm," said Campbell, a Republican from California.

"For 32 years you had a person who reigned and robbed and stole," said Payne, a Democrat from New Jersey. "In one month, people are expecting miracles. I don't think it's unreasonable for the government to say at the present time we should have a suspension temporarily on demonstrations."

The ban on political activity does not specify punishment, but Interior Minister Mwenze Kongolo said anyone arrested for marching Wednesday would probably be taken to a military camp "where we can detain them for awhile and then let them go."

"We need to show the people that are marching that we are serious in what we're saying and what we're doing. That's very important in establishing order," Kongolo said. "... We're just trying to avoid some kind of chaos."

Most of the protesters support Etienne Tshisekedi, a longtime Kinshasa opposition leader whom Kabila passed over in forming his new government. Tshisekedi had demanded to be prime minister, saying his years of standing up to Mobutu had earned him the powerful post.

Kongolo said Tshisekedi's intransigence cost him a role in the new government, but said he was encouraging Kabila to meet with Tshisekedi to appease his followers.

He also said Kabila's leadership remained committed to holding democratic elections but needed to first ensure stability and find time to plan properly.

Afghans fight back against Talibans

MAZAR-E-SHARIF, Afghanistan (AP) — Bearded Taliban fighters trying to disarm residents of this newly captured city were greeted with gunfire Tuesday. Fighting soon spread throughout the city, one of the last places to fall under the Taliban's harsh brand of Islamic law.

By dusk, Mazar-e-Sharif was a battle zone. Rockets slammed into downtown buildings and people scrambled for cover from richocheting small arms fire. Tanks and huge trucks with rocket launchers rumbled toward hotspots.

The fighting raged for three hours, and when the shooting became sporadic a rigidly enforced curfew made it impossible to know how many people were injured or killed.

It was not clear who was fighting whom, or whether the uneasy alliance had collapsed between the Taliban and its Uzbek allies who helped it seize the northern provinces over the weekend.

The fighting began in Saeedabad, a poor, dusty neighborhood on the northern outskirts of the city that until the weekend was controlled by Hezb-e-Wahadat, a small Shiite Muslim group that was a key partner in an anti-Taliban alliance.

Taliban fighters patrolled the neighborhood in pickup trucks trying to get people to disarm. Residents opened fire on them, killing three Taliban warriors.

Some residents blamed Uzbeks who opposed an alliance with the Taliban, but residents of the neighborhood also may have been involved. Many residents who supported the alliance held onto the guns of Shiite fighters who fled Saturday with alliance leader and northern warlord Rashid Dostum.

After its weekend takeover, the Taliban instructed men on Monday to grow beards and told women not to attend school, work or leave their homes unless accompanied by a man.

Enforcing its ban on movies, music and other entertainment, Taliban soldiers ripped apart video and audio cassettes on Tuesday, stringing the tapes on the steel gates of a television station.

"These are vicious people," said Zabiullah, a resident who like many Afghans uses only one name. "They come into our homes. They take everything, even children's toys."

A photography shop opened for business Tuesday, but owner Mohammed Hakim worried that the Taliban, which has banned photography, would raid his store. If they do, Hakim said, "I guess I will just have to choose another job for myself."

Girls schools were closed. A few women came out onto the street, all wearing the burqa, a garment that covers them head to toe.

Several military aircraft landed at the airport, bringing more Taliban soldiers into the city.

The Taliban also encountered resistance Tuesday in the city from fighters loyal to Malik Pahlawan, the Uzbek general who led last week's revolt that overthrew Dostum and paved the way for the Taliban takeover of the north.

The Taliban and Pahlawan's gunners skirmished Monday outside of town. It was not clear whether the fighting Tuesday evening involved those fighters as well.

The Taliban also claimed Tuesday to have captured Takhar province, the former stronghold of the ousted Afghan president, Burhanuddin Rabbani.

"All the people of Takhar revolted against Rabbani and welcomed the Taliban," Taliban spokesman Wakila Akhmad Wutukal said in Kabul, the capital.

Foreign aid agencies, which have radio contact with the area, could not confirm that the Taliban was in total control of the country.

The Taliban said in a statement that it should be recognized as the legitimate government now that it controls nearly all of Afghanistan. It appealed to foreign governments to reopen their embassies in Kabul.

Yeltsin promises to detarget missles as goodwill gesture

PARIS (AP) — In a goodwill gesture to former Cold War foes, President Boris Yeltsin promised Tuesday that Moscow will no longer aim missiles at NATO allies. Western leaders called it a surprise, but "a welcome one."

Typically playful and unpredictable, Yeltsin reveled in his role at center stage as he joined 16 NATO leaders, including President Clinton, to sign a historic accord between Moscow and the military alliance formed 48 years ago to curb Soviet ambitions.

Setting aside deep reservations about NATO expansion toward his borders, Yeltsin said the agreement "will protect Europe and the world from a new confrontation."

"This is ... a victory for reason," he said. "No doubt this is peace in Europe — peace after the Cold War."

The Russia-NATO agreement, which gives Moscow a voice but not a veto in NATO affairs, is designed to ease Moscow's anger over plans to incorporate former Soviet allies into the military alliance.

In an unscripted second visit to the Elysee Palace lectern, Yeltsin jolted the sedate signing ceremony by declaring: "After having signed the documents I am going to make the following decision. All nuclear warheads aimed at NATO countries will be taken off combat duty today."

Despite constant talks with Russian diplomats, U.S. officials were blindsided. The announcement hit like a bombshell when the translator for Clinton and his delegation quoted Yeltsin as saying weapons aimed at NATO countries "are going to have their warheads removed."

Popping out of their seats, U.S. officials scurried out of the room and quickly determined that Yeltsin did not promise to dismantle Russian warheads. He made a much less significant — mostly symbolic — pledge to no longer point weapons at countries on NATO soil.

"It is a confidence-building measure not to have these missiles targeted," White House press secretary Mike McCurry said.

Clinton's national security adviser, Sandy Berger, said Yeltsin promised to take further steps to build NATO's trust.

Russian Foreign Minister Yevgeny Primakov hinted at one step: "Talks will be conducted to remove the warheads from those missiles altogether."

Yeltsin's announcement is an extension of the January 1994 U.S.-Russian agreement to no longer aim their long-range nuclear missiles at each other.

At the time, experts said the agreement was largely symbolic because missiles could be re-targeted on U.S., British or Russian cities within minutes in a crisis.

U.S. officials did not know how many Russian missiles are targeted at NATO soil. Britain already has a no-targeting pact with Russia. France is expected to benefit the most because large numbers of Russian missiles are pointed its way, U.S. officials said.

Jamie Shea, spokesman for NATO, said Yeltsin's action "is truly in the spirit of the new relationship."

In Moscow, news agencies carried urgent reports of Yeltsin's remarks and a clarification from senior military officials.

"There was not a prior indication that President Yeltsin would make that announcement, but it was a welcome one," Berger said.

It was the type of outburst that White House aides had hoped to prevent with a tight ceremony schedule and a ban against U.S. reporters attending a Clinton-Yeltsin picture-taking session.

The NATO-Russia accord was a crowning moment for Clinton, who pushed for NATO expansion and Russian ties to the alliance. But the day was marred by news from home: The U.S. Supreme Court ruled that Paula Jones, a former Arkansas state employee when Clinton was governor, can pursue her sexual harassment claim against him while he's still in the White House.

Yeltsin, clowning for the crowd of diplomats and politicians, heaved a mock sigh and smiled wide as he signed the Russia-NATO accord. He pointed at a camera above his head and waved. And he sealed the deal with a kiss — planting a loud, wet one on the cheek of NATO Secretary-General Javier Solana.

Clinton and Yeltsin steered clear of their differences. The Russian leader has said NATO promised to keep nuclear weapons out of the new NATO territories; the U.S. says no such promise was made, although the alliance has no plans for such weapons or permanent combat troops in new NATO states.

With criticism heavy in Russia and the United States, Clinton said, "This new NATO will work with Russia — not against it."

Clinton predicted the agreement will help create a peaceful, undivided Europe that learns from "the 20th century's darkest moments."

REVIVE: Lawmakers seek to attach dead bills to other legislation enforcement officials from enforcing protective orders granted in other states to partners in same-sex marriages, ended up not being voted on.

Legislative ingenuity was the order of the day after Rep. Arlene Wohlgemuth, R-Burleson, used a technical point Monday to kill 52 Senate bills scheduled for initial debate in the House. She said her move was prompted by opponents' efforts to delay the abortion bill.

On Tuesday, Rep. Debra Danburg, D-Houston, used a similar technicality, called a point of order, to kill the abortion proposal.

"I think the rule is too important to take lightly," Ms. Danburg said when asked why she raised the technicality.

A required committee report attached to the abortion bill didn't indicate that two witnesses who spoke in favor of the bill represented an anti-abortion rights group.

Ms. Danburg acknowledged the bill would likely have passed the House without her technical point. She said supporters of the bill weren't willing to offer girls reasonable alternatives to notifying their parents.

Mrs. Wohlgemuth's point of order successfully argued that the bills scheduled for debate Monday were set during a meeting for which proper notice wasn't given.

The abortion bill would have required parents of girls under 18 to be notified their daughters were seeking abortions. The bill wouldn't have required parental consent, but would have delayed abortion procedures for 48 hours to notify the girls' parents.

Notification could have been waived by a judge or a physician who believed parental notice wasn't in a girl's best interest. The girl also would have had to have been found competent to make the decision to have an abortion. The exceptions had been expected to be stripped from the bill.

Mrs. Wohlgemuth said Tuesday her effort was worth the death of the other bills even though the abortion bill eventually died.

"We had a possibility of negotiations that we wouldn't have had without my point of order," she said, referring to discussions between abortion rights and anti-abortion activists that failed to result in a compromise.

Stunned by what one House member called "the Memorial Day Massacre," state lawmakers searched for ways to revive the 52 bills Mrs. Wohlgemuth killed.

Tuesday was the deadline for those measures.

Two of Gov. George W. Bush's priorities — faith-based welfare services and creating more charter schools — were among the initial casualties.

RULING: Lawyers say settlement without trial might be possible

(From 1A)

Clinton to respond to Jones' suit within the next two months. Soon afterwards, Wright said, she will file a scheduling order setting a trial date and imposing various pretrial deadlines.

Typically, such a case could go to trial in as little as 14 months, the judge noted. But she also said in a statement the trial date could be later, depending on extenuating circumstances.

Wright had ruled in 1994 that Jones' lawsuit should be delayed until Clinton left office although pre-trial fact-finding could begin. But the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals reversed, ruling in January 1996 that the case could go to trial during Clinton's presidency.

Wright, appointed to the bench by President Bush, also presided over the White House fight to quash a subpoena from Whitewater investigator Kenneth W. Starr. Prosecutors want White House lawyers to turn over notes from a meeting with Hillary Rodham Clinton. The Supreme Court has been asked to hear the case, too.

The president has denied Jones' allegation that he propositioned her in an Arkansas hotel room in 1991.

No sitting president has ever testified in open court, the justices noted.

"The high respect that is owed to the office of the chief executive, though not justifying a rule of categorical immunity, is a matter that should inform the conduct of the entire proceeding," Stevens said.

He said the court did not decide whether a judge could compel the president to appear in court at any specific time or place.

"We assume that the testimony of the president ... may be taken at the White House at a time that will accommodate his busy schedule and that, if a trial is held, there would be no necessity for the president to attend in person, though he could elect to do so," Stevens wrote.

Jones, who has been living in Los Angeles for about three years with her husband, was described by a friend as jubilant. "The two of us just screamed and yelled and cried," said Susan Carpenter-McMillan of San Marino, Calif. "In her cute little way, she said, 'Susie, can you believe it? Can you believe it?'"

Jones' lawyers, Gilbert Davis and Joseph Cammarata, called the ruling a resounding victory. It shows that "she was willing to stand up against privilege, power and position to redeem her reputation," Davis said.

A settlement of the case without trial might be possible, the two lawyers said. "Some kind of admission (by Clinton) ... and something that could be interpreted as an apology would certainly go a long way" toward reaching a settlement, Davis said.

Clinton's lawyers still can seek dismissal of Jones' claim on other grounds.

Jones says Clinton summoned her to a Little Rock hotel room in 1991, exposed himself to her and asked her to perform a sex act. He was governor of Arkansas at the time and she was a state worker.

She sued in 1994 and is seeking $700,000 in damages.

Clinton has denied ever having an encounter with Jones and has said he cannot recall whether they ever met.

Clinton defense may opt for quick resolution to Jones' lawsuit

By Neil Lewis
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Now that the Supreme Court has ruled President Clinton has no constitutional right to avoid a trial on sexual harassment charges while in office, his lawyers Tuesday set about preparing a new range of defenses to delay or defeat the lawsuit.

Clinton's personal lawyer, Robert Bennett, emphasized in a statement Tuesday that while the court rejected a presidential claim to immunity, it virtually ordered the trial judge to schedule proceedings so they did not interfere with Clinton's official duties.

But even before that, Bennett and the president's other lawyers can deploy a small but potent number of legal challenges before they have to engage Paula Jones by responding in court to her charges of what really happened in a Little Rock, Ark., hotel in 1991.

The first of these efforts will almost certainly be a motion to dismiss the lawsuit for failure to state a proper legal claim, which in lay terms means telling the court that even if what Jones alleges is true, there was no legal violation.

■ News analysis

Bennett said in an interview that while he will file appropriate motions with the court in Little Rock, "We're not going to try to delay the case for the sake of delay."

It is unlikely that having the court hear the motions would forestall the case until Clinton leaves the White House in January 2001. White House officials said Tuesday that if they cannot manage to put off the lawsuit until Clinton leaves office, they will have to decide if it is better to confront the issue sooner rather than later.

One official acknowledged that if Clinton had to defend himself against the seamy allegations lodged by Jones, it would constitute a horrible humiliation. But the official said that if that were inevitable, it might be better to have it occur before the last year of his final term when he would like to leave office on a graceful note.

The 9-0 ruling by the Supreme Court surprised if not stunned many in the legal community. Scores of law professors rushed to support Clinton's argument and many prominent constitutional scholars even submitted a brief arguing that Clinton had a constitutional right to avoid answering a civil lawsuit while in office.

Professor John Jeffries Jr. of the University of Virginia Law School who coordinated the brief said Tuesday he was greatly surprised by the ruling. Jeffries said he was especially taken aback by the fact that even the conservative members of the court who have traditionally been quick to recognize presidential authority ruled against Clinton this time.

AT&T, Bell company discuss reuniting in record merger

NEW YORK (AP) — Thirteen years after the breakup of Ma Bell, AT&T Corp. and a company formed by two of its Baby Bell offspring are talking about reuniting in a record $50 billion-plus merger, a source said Tuesday.

A combination of AT&T and SBC Communications Corp. would be the largest merger ever and would radically reshape the telecommunications landscape, which has seen a number of multi-billion-dollar deals this past year.

There was no indication a deal was imminent, said the source familiar with the negotiations, speaking on condition of anonymity.

A combined AT&T and SBC would have 60 percent of the $80 billion long-distance market and dominate local phone and wireless services throughout the Southwest and California.

That means any deal would face numerous obstacles from regulators and competitors.

Stock in both companies rose on the news, which was first disclosed Tuesday by The Wall Street Journal. AT&T stock was up $1.12 1/2 per share to $37.25 in afternoon trading on the New York Stock Exchange. SBC climbed $1 to $57.87 1/2.

SBC owns Southwestern Bell and Pacific Telesis, operating in California, Nevada, Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas, Missouri and Arkansas. AT&T has been struggling to expand beyond its sluggish long-distance business, but thus far has been slowly entering markets for local phone service.

A combination would be the first joining of AT&T and any regional Bell phone company since they were formed in the 1984 split-up of AT&T.

AT&T spokeswoman Ruthlyn Newell would not comment. Nor would SBC spokesman Larry Solomon in San Antonio.

A combined AT&T and SBC would have $80 billion a year in revenue and 230,000 workers.

A key regulatory issue would be whether a merger stifles competition in AT&T's and SBC's main markets and threatens to drive up prices. Since their businesses overlap in many markets, the two companies could be forced to divest some operations.

In addition, under federal telecommunications rules, SBC is barred from competing in the long-distance market until its own local market opens to rivals.

David Roddy, chief telecommunications economist at the Deloitte & Touche Consulting Group, said that AT&T and SBC will have to build a strong case they're not shutting out competitors.

A deal "can be done. But it won't be easy and will take some time," Roddy said.

AT&T also has made merger inquiries of other telecommunications companies, including GTE and two other Baby Bells, Bell South and Ameritech, the source said.

Its talks with SBC reached a more serious stage last week with discussions centering on ways of making a deal pass muster with regulators, the source said.

The Justice Department's antitrust division had no information about the deal beyond what was reported in the Journal. Its reviews do not start until a definitive deal has been signed.

Last month, the Justice Department cleared the $23 billion merger of Bell Atlantic and Nynex, concluding that the union of the two Baby Bells would not violate antitrust law. That merger would create the second-largest telephone company after AT&T, controlling roughly 24 percent of the nation's local telephone lines in 13 states and the District of Columbia.

trees during the appropriate seasons. Other temporary exceptions can be granted if city officials are convinced of a need.

Wayland and others with the city's Code Administration Division will continue to assess fines on those retail businesses that defy the ordinance.

Another city code discussed at the Tuesday meeting regarded the city's taxicab service.

Council members approved a request for Steve Louis Tippit to operate a taxi business under the name of A1 Taxi.

During this discussion, Mayor Bobby Burns and others related calls from their constituents who complained about dirty taxies serving the city.

"I've had significant complaints about cleanliness," Burns said.

Other council members echoed the sentiment and asked city officials to step up their inspection process to enforce the city code pertaining to taxi vehicles.

"I think that we can have something that we can be proud of," Burns said. "But right now we have something we are ashamed of."

Council members also voted to:

■ authorize the execution of a contract to build two new restrooms at Hogan Park;

■ advertise for bids on the construction of a fence and sidewalks at Grafa Neighborhood Park;

■ establish a document fee of $1 a page for non-certified Municipal Court document copies and $2 for certified copies;

■ file eminent domain proceedings to secure land for the extension of Green Tree Boulevard, which will be extended east for about a mile and will act as a watershed to take drainage from Midland Drive to the Midland Draw drainage canal;

■ approve funding for a Neighborhood Liaison Officer who will serve the community from the mobile police precinct and who will take complaints from residents and coordinate the actions of city staff;

■ approve on final reading an ordinance calling for the demolition of structures at 304 S. Clay St., 407 S. Clay St., 608 S. Clay St., 2306 College Ave., 2309 College Ave., 1200 E. Indiana Ave., 506 S. Jackson St., 701 S. Jackson St., 1104 East Industrial, 209 N. Carver St., 501 West Estes Ave., 410 N. Fort Worth St. and 1810 E. Texas Ave.;

■ approve a 20-mph speed limit on a portion of Garfield Street from Tennessee Avenue to Ohio Avenue; and

■ amend the city code to allow more than four barbers or beauticians in shops located in districts designated O-1, which are zoned as office districts.

STORMS: Tornadoes hit four Texas counties

owns a computer store near the Albertson's.

Columbia-St. David's Round Rock Hospital said it had received 14 tornado victims from Cedar Park. The injuries were mostly cuts and bruises.

Cedar Park Mayor Dorthey Duckett said she felt helpless as she watched the tornado rip through her town.

"It's very, very scary because you know what's happening to your friends and your neighbors and there's nothing you can do," she said.

Mike Cox said emergency shelters were set up at a school and a church in Cedar Park.

In Bell County, a tornado destroyed a marina and 80 boats at Morgan's Point Resort on Belton Lake, said police chief Michael Elmore. Three homes were damaged, but there were no injuries, he said.

WORLD IN BRIEF

■ Anthrax suspected in Ukraine

KIEV, Ukraine — With 29 people recovering from anthrax in a quarantined Ukrainian village, reports emerged Tuesday that a couple halfway across the country also contracted the disease.

A husband and wife in the southern town of Chervona Dolina were diagnosed with the cutaneous form of anthrax, which causes boils on the skin, news agencies reported.

It was unclear if their sickness was linked to an outbreak that hit a state farm in Privolnoye, 215 miles to the east.

Privolnoye has been quarantined since last week, but emergency officials said some contaminated meat might have been shipped out before the quarantine.

Anthrax is an animal disease that can infect humans through skin contact, ingestion and even inhaling contaminated spores. It is treated with penicillin.

Two people in Privolnoye died from anthrax, a local doctor told the ITAR-Tass news agency Tuesday.

■ Swazi chief bans condoms

MBABANE, Swaziland — Citing Biblical law, a traditional chief in this mountain kingdom has banned the use of condoms.

Health authorities were shocked by his action, which contradicted their efforts to encourage condom use to prevent the spread of the HIV virus and other sexually transmitted diseases.

Chief Jameson Ndznatabantfu Maseko, of the Ekhupeleni area in northern Swaziland, said using condoms wastes a man's reproductive fluid, the independent Times of Swaziland reported Monday.

Addressing hundreds of his subjects at his village, Chief Maseko said condom use violated God's laws as stated in the Old Testament. He was not opposed, however, to women using contraceptive pills.

Health Ministry principal secretary Myekani Vilakati said the health officials must start their AIDS prevention programs all over again — this time by educating the country's traditional leaders.

■ Australian woman scales Everest

KATMANDU, Nepal — An Australian climbed Mount Everest on Tuesday, becoming the first woman from her country to set foot atop the peak. A Sherpa guide was reported killed.

Brigitte Muir reached the mountain's 29,028-foot summit with two Nepalese guides at 10:30 a.m., her base camp team reported by radio.

They had climbed all night via South Col, the southern route pioneered by New Zealander Sir Edmund Hillary and Sherpa Tenzing Norgay during the first conquest of Mount Everest in 1953.

Muir is the 32nd woman to climb Everest since Junko Tabei of Japan first reached it in 1975.

Nepali guide Tenzing Norbu, 31, reached the summit on Sunday along with Wally Berg of Coppermine, Colo., but slipped to his death on the descent, climber Todd Burleson of Seattle said Tuesday.

Norbu was a good climber who had conquered Everest twice before, Burleson told The Associated Press.

Chirac appeals for support on national TV

N.Y. Times Service

PARIS — President Jacques Chirac took charge of his battered conservative coalition's election campaign Tuesday night, appealing on national television to voters in Sunday's elections not to impose a Socialist and Communist government on him while he was trying to get France ready for the 21st century.

"Do you want to put yesterday's Socialist ideas back in the saddle?" he asked earnestly, in a six-minute speech that was the most directly partisan appeal he has yet made in the legislative election campaign.

But the president gave no hint of whom the next prime minister would be if the conservatives did manage to win in the second and deciding round of voting, a runoff among the leading candidates from the first round.

Last Sunday barely 30 percent of the voters supported the government parties, leading the unpopular prime minister, Alain Juppe, to rule himself out for the job when his term expires next Monday.

"I heard your message very clearly," Chirac said Tuesday night, paying tribute to Juppe for the courage and the character he had shown during two years of deficit-cutting austerity policies pursued, despite the country's 12.8 percent unemployment rate, to qualify France for a common European currency starting in 1999.

Ignoring the political peril of asking voters to support the conservative government without telling them who would lead it, Chirac focused on what he said was France's need for "an economy of freedom and initiative" that would enable it to become "a great modern nation" in the increasingly competitive global economy.

"We have to reconcile freedom and solidarity, reconcile solidarity between generations and protection of the weak, and promote strong economic growth, which is today within our reach," he said, leaving French voters with the expectation that he would find somebody in the conservative camp to do all that if they won.

In a previously scheduled appearance on France 2 television after Chirac's short speech, Socialist leader Lionel Jospin declared that "change can come only from a new majority of the left." He promised that a new government of Socialists and Communists would stimulate economic growth and make jobs its first priority.

"The government is trying to divert attention to secondary questions like who the prime minister would be," said Jospin, whom Chirac would probably be forced to name prime minister if the left won on Sunday.

Among the conservatives, two leading contenders have emerged, all but openly running for Juppe's job — Parliament Speaker Philippe Seguin and Edouard Balladur, who as prime minister ran unsuccessfully against Chirac for the presidency two years ago.

Seguin was an opponent of the common currency plan, whose rigid anti-inflationary strictures, insisted upon by German politicians and bankers nervous about losing the powerful German mark, were the reason for Juppe's austerity policies.

An idea of Seguin's "tempered, corrected free-marketeerism," as he recently summed up his economic creed, can be gleaned from a book he wrote last year called "Waiting for Employment."

The French Ministry of Transport, he wrote, required French toll road companies in 1995 to stop replacing toll collectors with automatic toll booths, and he did not see why the same principle could not be applied more broadly.

"Where else — outside of border zones — would drivers go to fill up with gas if oil companies, public or private, were required to employ attendants at the pump?" he asked. The state, he argued, had plenty of ways to encourage private business to create more jobs, for example by shortening the number of hours in the work week.

This is one of the main planks in Jospin's Socialist platform, which would cut the work week from 39 to 35 hours without any reduction in pay, leaving it up to employers and employees to negotiate the details.

Women's Care Update

by Michael S. Phillips, M.D.
Diplomate, American Board Obstetrics & Gynecology

WEIGHT GAIN DURING PREGNANCY

For many years, the recommendations for weight gain during pregnancy varied widely. Then, in 1990, the Institute of Medicine issued guidelines that the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists and others in the medical community could agree upon. While the range varies for women who are under- or overweight when they conceive, the average pregnant woman carrying one fetus should put on between 25 and 35 pounds. It was also agreed that the timing of this weight gain is very important. As a University of California (S.F.) study indicates, the weight that women gain during their second trimesters contributes more to their babies' eventual birth weight than the weight gained during either the first or third trimesters.

The idea about "eating for two" during pregnancy is now all but discarded, but perhaps it isn't a bad idea -just don't eat for two in quantity: eat for two in quality. Follow your obstetrician's guidelines about weight gain and general nutrition; each time you eat, you should remember that your health and your baby's depend on your intake of the right nutrients. Your baby will get off to a better start, and you'll be in better shape to deal with the stresses of labor, birth, and motherhood. Bush should call special session

Gov. George W. Bush should call a special session of the Texas Legislature to begin a week after the current session ends Tuesday.

During the weeklong recess, legislators need to go back to their home districts to talk with constituents and get a clear vision of what needs to be done in Austin.

Although the need for a special session looked obvious following the pronouncement Saturday that Bush's property tax reform effort was dead, the icing on the cake came Monday night when Rep. Arlene Wohlgemuth, R-Burleson, raised an objection under House rules known as a "point of order" which effectively killed 52 bills that had been scheduled for debate on Monday and Tuesday.

While efforts are under way to revive some of those bills, Ms. Wohlgemuth, angered because of the apparent death of an abortion-related measure known as the parental notification bill, called the point of order because of her belief that the measure was extremely important. We agree. It was important.

However, although we understand the need for legislators to be committed to particular bills before the Legislature, we also recognize that without compromise legislative government is impossible.

There is even talk now in the state capital that the sharply partisan political atmosphere witnessed in Washington, D.C. during the past few years has now invaded Austin, which could translate into legislative gridlock at the state level. That would be tragic for all Texans.

If Bush does not call a special session of the Legislature, literally thousands of hours of legislative work will be lost as well as millions of dollars of taxpayer money.

Tough issues — many of them the same ones legislators grappled with this session — need to be included in the special session, but first and foremost is the need for a new tax system to fund the public school system. Nothing else should take precedence over it — and Bush should make that clear from the outset. Governors in past years have laid it on the line and made the Legislature perform as the Texas electorate expected.

Other important issues also need to be debated during the special session, including the parental notification measure that brought us where we are today. But legislators — Ms. Wohlgemuth included — must recognize that killing state government is not the way to settle differences of opinion over a legislative measure.

ANOTHER VIEW

Greenspan to test jobless rate's depth

Wall Street is supposed to react with horror when the Federal Reserve Board cowers from raising interest rates in the face of a raging economy. But on Tuesday (May 20), when the Fed announced it would keep interest rates steady, stocks soared and interest rates fell, a tribute to the market's faith in Chairman Alan Greenspan. Under Greenspan, the Fed has presided over nearly uninterrupted growth with steadily falling inflation. His record now gives him the leeway to sit back and let the economy grow without having to prove his anti-inflationary credentials by prematurely jacking up rates and slowing the economy down.

A year or so ago, economists debated whether the economy could operate at unemployment rates below 6 percent without driving up wages, then prices. Today unemployment hovers below 5 percent, while inflation stays below 3 percent. This good news puts the Fed in a policy predicament. It knows that its interest rate hikes take a year or more to cool off an economy. If it waits until inflation visibly rises, it risks having to throw the economy into a tailspin to wring out the inflationary momentum. But by stamping out inflation before it appears, the Fed would forgo learning whether the modern economy can operate at permanently lower unemployment rates than in the past.

The Fed has decided to see how good the economy can be, allowing the unemployment rate to drop to the lowest rate in 23 years, 4.9 percent. But it could not have done so had Greenspan not firmly established his credibility as an inflation fighter by pre-emptively raising interest rates in 1994 to ward off an inflationary burst that he feared but that had not yet appeared.

Had bond traders feared inflation, they would have greeted Tuesday's non-action by driving up long-term interest rates, which the Fed does not control. They did not. The economy now reaps the benefit of the Fed's record. At an unemployment rate of 5 rather than 6 percent, the economy is already operating with an extra 1 million jobs. The Fed has now said, in effect, that it is prepared to test how low the rate can go.

CIA Afghan operation rife with waste

The Central Intelligence Agency has skated on more scandals than it has been caught in.

Anderson

Every so often, Congress will chastise the agency over a covert operation gone awry. CIA officials usually confess their sins and promise not to repeat their mistakes. That's because, usually, agency officials are just grateful that Congress isn't looking in other closets.

When it comes to sheer waste of money, perhaps the largest profligacy in government occurs under the cloak of classification. And no classified boondoggle can compare with the bungling effort to help the Afghan mujaheddin who fought the Soviet army throughout the 1980s.

You won't find this report in any public record. Congress has let this enormous waste of money pass by without attention, which has the CIA breathing a sigh of relief. But our associate Dale Van Atta has been able to piece the story together from highly classified CIA documents. During the war, he also visited Pakistan and Afghanistan.

We have found that the CIA so badly mismanaged money appropriated by Congress since 1979 for the anti-communist Afghan guerrillas that it was unlikely those valiant fighters ever received even 40 percent of it.

Counting matching money from Saudi Arabia, we estimate the CIA spent a total of more than $3 billion on the program — at least $1.2 billion of which was skimmed by arms dealers around the world, CIA agents and public officials in Egypt, China and Pakistan.

If Congress had ever cared, it is likely that the scandal of the CIA's horrid management of the arms-supply line to the ill-equipped mujaheddin would have dwarfed the Iran-contra affair.

We have concluded that there was virtually no CIA accounting for the hundreds of millions of dollars spent on weapons, at least half of which never arrived in Peshawar, the Pakistani border town where the mujaheddin resistance was headquartered. In fact, the CIA had no official in Peshawar checking what was received — nor were CIA officials in Islamabad even allowed to ask the mujaheddin about it.

The only CIA contact with the mujaheddin that was not done through intermediaries (most of them Pakistani), were ex-Army men hired by the CIA to train the mujaheddin in Peshawar and at an air base near Islamabad on the use of American anti-aircraft Stinger missiles.

Pakistani sources insisted to us they would have allowed greater CIA contact with the mujaheddin — especially to check on the supply line — but the CIA never took them up on their offer.

From beginning to end, the CIA arms supply line was rife with graft, abuse and waste to a degree not seen since the agency ran secret programs in Vietnam during that war. This included, we were told, kickbacks Pakistanis made to CIA agents. The opportunity for abuse was overwhelming since it was the largest covert U.S. assistance program since Vietnam.

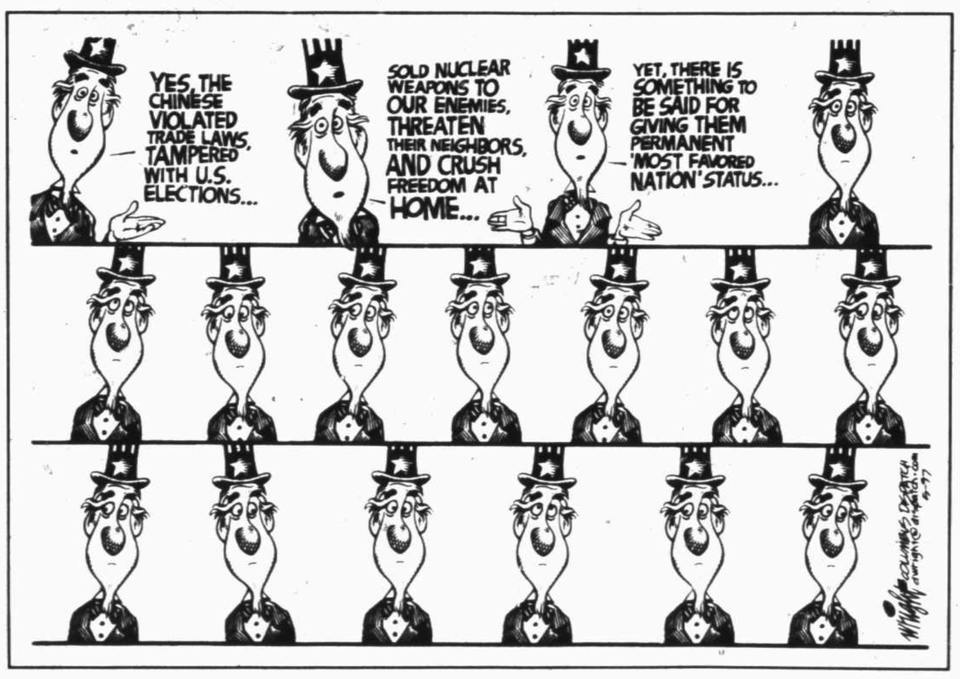

CIA and other intelligence sources intimate with the details of the secret program tell us that the CIA did, in fact, have monthly lists of what they purchased for the rebels from arms dealers in Europe, the Middle East and China. The chief purchasing was directed by the CIA station chiefs in Cairo, Islamabad and Beijing.

But the CIA had no list of any kind that tracked what the mujaheddin received in Peshawar. Yet at least two of the seven primary mujaheddin groups receiving the secret arms regularly put together manifests of what they had received.

"The CIA does not have the manifests because they don't want them," revealed one intelligence source who had access to the details of the CIA program. "So they never even asked for them. That's why the CIA had no idea of how much is getting through — they only have half the information: what they bought."

Of all the many places where the U.S. government hemorrhages money unchecked, the covert operations of the CIA and other intelligence agencies receive the least scrutiny. It may be time to take a close look at the Afghanistan debacle to determine what bad habits the CIA continues to have.

Hillary deserves apology over pilfered sound bite

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — Before rising to the defense of Hillary Clinton, let me do some scandal housekeeping.

Safire

On the investigation into espionage and bribery called the Asian Connection: A Justice Department source informs me that some "career professionals" in the criminal division have now joined FBI Director Louis Freeh in urging Attorney General Janet Reno to seek the appointment of independent counsel.

She still refuses to act. That poses a clear challenge to "GROC" — the Government Reform and Oversight Committee of the House — to call key members of the criminal division. The purpose should not be to solicit evidence that the committee should develop on its own but to determine whether the attorney general's refusal is still based, as she claims, on the professional opinion of career officials.

On another front in the same scandal, the House Rules Committee chairman, Gerald Solomon, has written President Clinton to ask federal help in finding and getting testimony from the U.S. citizen Yah Lin "Charlie" Trie, the Little Rock Clinton benefactor who is presumed to be in Beijing.

That raises a few questions: Has the suspected Beijing-Washington go-between already been deposed by the FBI? Is Trie's U.S. passport operative or is he a fugitive? Will the Chinese government cooperate in returning him to face, if not a grand jury, at least the U.S. Congress?

Now to the Whitewater abuses of power:

While professing "full cooperation" with investigators, the Clintons have been fighting a yearlong secret battle to keep from view notes taken by government lawyers. A federal appeals court found that lawyers paid by the public do not share the same confidential privilege as personal lawyers, and ordered the notes be given to the independent counsel. The Clintons, having already turned over such notes affecting staff aides, resist — appealing to the Supreme Court to protect the first lady.

Are they trying to hide a smoking gun? No; my guess is those notes contain some embarrassments, as well as clues to the administration-wide cover-up that will help prosecutors proceed under RICO, the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act. But Jane Sherburne is too experienced an attorney to jot down statements suggesting criminality, and she knows that all federal officials — even lawyers — must report to Justice any crime they learn about.

Then why claim lawyer-client privilege? Answer: It bought 18 months' delay, and delay is their best defense.

Although Mrs. Clinton has no unique "privilege" to protect her and her alone from criminal investigation, she does have the same rights to defense enjoyed by every U.S. citizen.

Recently a prosecutor was surreptitiously taped in a secret court session telling judges that Mrs. Clinton was among those who could be indicted. ABC's breathless broadcast of the tape was an editorial mistake.

As the momentum of prosecution picks up in coming months, and as executive stonewalling becomes more infuriating, reporters will be tempted to penetrate judicial walls and intrude on grand jury secrecy. We should resist that.

Sound unduly pious? Pundits can predict Hillary's indictment and animadvert on her tendency to lie, as I have, and her husband can wish aloud, as the president has, that he could respond by punching me in the nose — that's all free speech. Certain judicial proceedings, however, are held in secret for the purpose of protecting the constitutional rights of potential defendants, or of guarding the privacy of witnesses and jurors; eavesdropping on them undermines a genuine privilege, and broadcasting the tape abuses free speech.

What about the tip from within Justice about the changed opinion of career professionals that leads today's essay? That's legit because it advances the story by lighting a fire under the A.G. without jeopardizing anybody's rights at trial.

But using the pilfered sounds of a prosecutor discussing the possibility of any individual's indictment is not legit. Hillary Clinton, who should get what she deserves, in this instance deserves an apology.

Sixties fashions once again rear their ugly heads

At this point we should all take a deep breath and a long look at our high-school annuals.

Thumb through to the Who's Who section and study the students chosen to be Wittiest, or the ones with Best Personality. Note what those wits and personalities are wearing.

Then consider: If we didn't look good in those hideous clothes then, back when we were youthful and daring and thin, why should we now?

Just when you thought it was safe to go back in your closet — a closet filled with classic cuts, navy blazers, long skirts and neat, boring beiges — the styles of the '60s rear their bright, tacky, Flower Power heads.

I first noticed it earlier this spring while shopping with my niece, Chelsey. The pantsuit she picked out looked strange. Alarms should have sounded just because there was a pantsuit.

But clothes for young children are not big enough to be genuinely alarming, so it took a few minutes to figure out my disquiet. Then I noticed all the daisies. Daisies. The shirt was adorned with deadly daisies.

Boy, did those daisies take me back. Everything used to have daisies. Swimsuits, bathrobes, blouses. They didn't let it out of the store unless it was bordered with daisies. If you had a plain dress in your wardrobe, you fixed it right up with your big daisy pin.

Then I took a hard look at the pants half of Chelsey's pantsuit. They were bell-bottoms. Not just pants with a reasonable amount of flare so you could pull your socks on last. But big, blooming bell-bottoms, also covered in daisies. I almost cried.

My good friend Tom Fox describes the clothes of the 1960s this way: "One night everyone went to bed looking normal. The next day they got up and dressed like clowns."

And that from a bona fide boomer.

I blame this retro nonsense on the exercise craze. People in shape don't want to hide perfect bodies beneath yards of earth-toned cloth. They want to shine a portrait light on their masterpiece.

Never mind that over 30 percent of Americans are overweight and would just as soon hide under bulky sweaters and long skirts. The other 70 percent wants maximum exposure.

The bare midriff, for example, has been worming its way back into the mainstream for several years. First it started showing up on the pages of Vanity Fair, or at movie-star functions like the Academy Awards. Lately, however, the midriff is roaming the produce aisle of the grocery store, the deli, the bank. It's back.

The sad part is, youngsters don't even realize they're dressing like Granny used to, back when she was a hip chick. And I don't think they realize that such silly dress carries with it a responsibility. We didn't wear those clothes for the heck of it; we wore them to make a Statement. I can't remember my Statement, but it was attached to the clothes like the price tag to Minnie Pearl's hat.

So have your statement ready, or don't co-opt my youth.

If straight hair comes back, I'll move to another planet. I spent my youth ironing my own curls out, which requires a contortionist pose impossible to describe.

I suggest we get a grip before this trend kills us. Sonny Bono is in Congress, passing laws and holding press conferences. I can't bear to see him in striped bell-bottoms again.

Legendary East German spy chief gets suspended sentence

DUESSELDORF, Germany (AP) — He outwitted the West as East Germany's spymaster and says the CIA offered him a safe new life in California after the Cold War. Now, Markus Wolf has triumphed again, escaping jail for a second time.

A court convicted Wolf of four kidnappings Tuesday but gave him only a suspended two-year sentence, mainly because the crimes happened during the Cold War. Prosecutors had demanded Wolf be jailed for 3 1/2 years.

Wolf, who ran East Germany's foreign spy network for 33 years, was convicted of treason in 1993 but never served any jail time after Germany's highest court overturned the conviction.

Once one of the West's biggest foes, the 74-year-old Wolf had claimed charges against him are politically-motivated and courts have no legal right to pass judgment on events in the former East Germany.

"I've been sentenced for things I did while strictly following the constitution, laws and orders," Wolf told reporters surrounding him in the courthouse.

Tuesday's ruling against Wolf, known during his clandestine years as "the man without a face" for his elusiveness, means he is unlikely ever to go to jail.

About two dozen Wolf supporters clapped when he entered the packed courtroom. An elderly woman handed him a bouquet of red roses, which he declined with a smile.

Wolf's face turned stony as Presiding Judge Ina Obst-Oellers read the verdict finding him guilty on all counts, based largely on evidence from East German spy files and testimony by former Wolf aides.

The State Supreme Court convicted Wolf of deprivation of liberty in four kidnappings that were part of efforts by Wolf's agents to destabilize the West and embarrass its leaders.

He was also convicted on two counts each of causing bodily harm and coercion. And although the court suspended his sentence, it ordered Wolf to pay $30,000 to a children's charity.

Despite his trial, Wolf has recently upstaged German authorities with a flurry of publicity, causing a stir with memoirs that were excerpted last week in a German magazine and are due out in 13 countries on June 1.

In one excerpt of "Man Without a Face," Wolf writes that after his retirement in 1990, a top CIA official offered him a home in California and a new identity if he cooperated with the U.S. spy agency.

Although accepting the offer meant putting him out of the reach of German prosecutors, Wolf says he turned it down because he would never have betrayed his ex-agents.

Germany's highest court overturned Wolf's treason conviction in 1995, saying East German spy leaders who worked only in their homeland could not be tried for treason because they did not betray their country.

In Tuesday's verdict, Judge Obst-Oellers rejected claims that Wolf was tried as a "symbol of the Stasi," East Germany's spy network. Instead, she branded him an accomplice in "state-ordered crimes" against "helpless victims."

But she said Wolf deserved leniency because he was getting old, the crimes happened long ago, and he had demonstrated "some remorse."

As head of East Germany's international spy network from 1953 until his 1986 retirement, Wolf planted some 4,000 agents in the West during the Cold War, and managed to steal NATO secrets for the Soviet bloc that could have been decisive if war had broken out in Europe.

In 1974, West German Chancellor Willy Brandt was forced to resign after a top aide, Guenther Guillaume, was unmasked as a Wolf agent.

Wolf fled to Moscow in 1990, the year of German reunification, but surrendered to German authorities a year later when no other country gave him political asylum.

In Wolf's latest trial, prosecutors accused him of supervising the brutal abduction of an East German secret police defector and his girlfriend from Austria in 1962, and of ordering the 1959 detention of an East German in an effort to extort false statements labeling Brandt, then West Berlin mayor, a Nazi collaborator.

He was also charged with approving the 1955 abduction of a translator at the U.S. High Commissioner's office in West Berlin in a failed attempt to get her to spy for East Germany.

Japanese fear child's death linked with serial murders

Associated Press

TOKYO — It was a particularly shocking discovery for a nation unaccustomed to violent crime: On Tuesday, a janitor in a junior high school found the severed head of an 11-year-old retarded boy.

In the mouth, a nearly incomprensible note scrawled in red ink taunted police. "Can you stop me?" it asked, according to national media that have made the killing their top story.

That message, the mulitated body of Jun Hase, and the recent slaying of a schoolgirl in the same neighborhood have raised fears that a serial killer is preying on the western city of Kobe.

"This is really horrible. I don't understand how it could be done. We'll all have to pull together," said Atsuko Hashimoto, principle of the boy's elementary school in Kobe, which was devastated by a 1995 earthquake that killed 6,300 people.

Jun had been missing since Saturday, when he left his home alone to visit his grandfather in the neighborhood. Three days later, a custodian discovered the boy's head in a small courtyard in front of a Kobe school.

The sixth grader had died of strangulation or suffocation about two days earlier, said police spokesman Ryoji Kajiwara. Police have not released any information on whether the crime was sexual.

Later Tuesday, a body believed to be his was found near a drainage pond on a small hill 500 yards from where the head was found, said Takahiko Yoto, a spokesman for the Hyogo state police. He said the boy's father identified the head, but the body had yet to be confirmed as belonging to Jun.

Police were investigating whether Jun's death was linked to two assaults in March in his quiet residential neighborhood in Kobe, 270 miles west of Tokyo. One girl was killed and another seriously injured.

The girls attended a different elementary school than Jun, but all three victims were found in the same half-mile area. Kajiwara said police did not know if those attacks involved sexual assault.

Since the March attacks, adults in Kobe have been walking children to school in groups.

Another police spokesman, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Tuesday the brief note found in the boy's mouth included several obscure Japanese words, including "Onibara," which translates as "devil's rose."

Last year, a popular drama on the Fuji Television network featured a series of fictional slayings in which the bodies of several victims were found, each with a rose in its mouth. Police would not say whether they see that as a clue in the most recent case.

The head had been mutilated with a sharp object, including cuts on the lips. The police spokesman said no arrests have been made.

The recent killings were reminiscent of those committed by serial killer Tsutomu Miyazaki eight years ago.

Miyazaki was sentenced to death last month for killing and mutilating four girls ages 4-7 in 1988 and 1989. He burned the body of one 4-year-old and left her bones on her parents' doorstep. He also wrote letters to the media and to the victims' families taunting the police.

He was arrested in July 1989. Police later found thousands of pornographic videos and comic books — many extremely violent — in the room where he lived with his parents. Numerous videos and photos of the victims were also found.

Japan has a policy of not annoucing when executions are carried out, so it was not clear if Miyazaki was hanged yet.

FBI whistle-blower testifies lab contaminated

DENVER (AP) — An FBI whistle-blower testified Tuesday that the agency lab that analyzed Timothy McVeigh's shirts and pants after the Oklahoma City bombing was contaminated with explosives residue.

Under cross-examination, FBI scientist Frederic Whitehurst admitted, "I have no knowledge of any actual contamination of any evidence in this case." However, he was not involved in analyzing that evidence.

He also said he was told a top FBI official had rejected as unreliable a key piece of evidence, a truck shard embedded with crystals of ammonium nitrate — the key bomb component — because it was found by a civilian, not an investigator.

The prosecution used that evidence, and FBI chemist Ron Kelly testified earlier this month that he personally removed it from a parking lot across the street from the scene of the April 19, 1995, bombing.

Whitehurst included Kelly in his condemnation of a lab that Whitehurst has spent much of his career criticizing. Kelly, he said, was unqualified to be entrusted with handling important evidence in such a big case. The explosion at the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building killed 168 people.

"I don't think that at that time Mr. Kelly had the hands-on experience to understand the implications of what he was doing," Whitehurst said. "I think he could make mistakes without realizing it."

Under cross-examination, Whitehurst acknowledged praising Kelly's work in a deposition in December.

"Yes, I was very proud of him," he told prosecutor Beth Wilkinson.

Whitehurst's observations on the lab were backed up by defense expert John Ryan Ford Lloyd, a forensic scientist from Britain, who found many of the FBI's procedures as "unacceptable" and a "matter of concern."

Lloyd was particularly critical of the packaging of McVeigh's clothing together in a paper bag. He said that explosives residue could seep in or out of the bag. He suggested that a nylon-lined bag or metal paint can would have been better.

The two were called to the stand as McVeigh's lawyers mounted their most aggressive attack yet on the FBI lab.

McVeigh, 29, is charged with murder and conspiracy in the deadliest act of terrorism on U.S. soil. He could get the death penalty.

Whitehurst's testimony focused on one of the prosecution's most important pieces of evidence: a small piece of Ryder truck paneling embedded with crystals of the explosive fertilizer ammonium nitrate.

Although Kelly took credit for finding the evidence two days after the bombing, Whitehurst said he was told by FBI explosives unit examiner David Williams that "a civilian brought it in. We've got a problem with the chain of custody so we're not going to use it."

Williams, recommended for censure in the report, was not called to the stand by prosecutors. Called by the defense, he testified Tuesday that he didn't remember the conversation with Whitehurst.

Whitehurst also questioned how the delicate crystals, which can easily dissolve in water, could have survived the heavy rain that fell in Oklahoma City before the truck shard was collected.

Whitehurst said there was also "data missing" from the FBI analysis of the crystals. "I find it an enigma what I was looking at," he said.

As for the FBI lab itself, Whitehurst said an examination he led after the bombing evidence was tested showed contamination in the explosives section, where the material was inspected.

"There were some places that had four or five, maybe that had some organic explosives" contamination, he said.

Contamination was found in the evidence handling and storage areas, where explosives residue later was found on McVeigh's clothing, knife and earplugs, he said.

Prosecutors have said the contamination was found on a lab workbench that was not used in the bombing case.

The defense lost one of its witnesses Tuesday when Matsch ruled irrelevant the intended testimony of Carol Howe, a former government informant with ties to white supremacist groups. She was to be called to bolster the defense theory that the bombing was part of a larger conspiracy.

Pentagon sees little hope for Flinn appeal

WASHINGTON (P) — Air Force bomber pilot Kelly Flinn can appeal her general discharge but is unlikely to succeed, Pentagon spokesman Kenneth Bacon said Tuesday.

Flinn, who indicated through her attorney last week that she intended to challenge the discharge, can bring her case before an Air Force discharge review board. Air Force Secretary Sheila Widnall accepted Flinn's offer to take a general discharge instead of going before a court-martial for adultery, disobeying an order, lying and fraternization.

At a Pentagon briefing, Bacon said Flinn's chances of having the general discharge upgraded to honorable discharge are "quite slim."

In 1994, only 7.2 percent of Air Force personnel who appealed discharges had their petitions granted. A year earlier the figure was 7.9 percent, Bacon said.

The review board "looks for issues of equity and propriety. The burden of proof is on ... (the petitioner) to establish the discharge was inequitable or improper," according to an Air Force fact sheet.

Even if the review board upgrades Flinn's discharge, it could not reinstate her in the active-duty Air Force. The review process would require Flinn or her attorney to appear before the board. Cases are processed in six to 18 months.

Although Flinn offered to accept the general discharge, she did so only after the Air Force made it clear it would not grant her an honorable discharge. The only alternative for her at that point was court-martial, which could have resulted in a prison sentence of up to 9 1/2 years.

Flinn's attorney, Frank Spinner, indicated over the weekend that Flinn might have a better shot of having her discharge upgraded once Widnall leaves the top Air Force post to return to academia, as has been rumored. But neither Widnall nor a new Air Force secretary would have a role in overseeing the discharge review process, Bacon said.

Another factor working against Flinn is that the review board is made up entirely of uniformed Air Force officers. Interviews with officers in recent days have indicated overwhelming opposition within the ranks to her receiving an honorable discharge. Most cited not the adultery but her lying and disobeying orders.

If Flinn chooses to appeal the review board decision, she would take her case before the Air Force Board of Military Corrections, made up of civilians.

Cancer doctor acquitted of contempt

HOUSTON (AP) — A doctor accused of violating a federal court order against out-of-state shipments of his unproven cancer treatment was acquitted Tuesday of a contempt charge.

Dr. Stanislaw Burzynski, 54, smiled and shook hands with his attorneys after the verdict was read. Some of his supporters clapped and shouted with joy while a few wiped away tears.

The federal jury deliberated about three hours before returning the decision, which came less than three months after another jury deadlocked on 75 counts against the Polish-born physician.

The verdict ended a 14-year battle between Burzynski and federal authorities over his medicine.

"I never doubted that we were going to win," Burzynski said outside the courthouse. "It's a great day for us."

"Today my prayers have been answered," said a jubilant Mary Jo Siegel of Pacific Palisades, Calif., who credits Burzynski's treatment with putting her cancer into remission. "What (the verdict) means is medical freedom for all of us."

Burzynski said nearly 500 patients now are enrolled in U.S. Food and Drug Administration-approved clinical trials and thus can be shipped the drug, even outside Texas. He expects FDA approval of his drug within a year.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Mike Clark said the clinical trials, which were required by the court after Burzynski's 1995 indictment, will prove whether the drug is effective.

"The positive to come out of the prosecution is that it literally forced Burzynski into the system," Clark said. "It forced him, with the FDA, to get together and study this drug the way it's supposed to have been studied."

During the trial, prosecutors contended that Burzynski violated a 1983 federal court order against interstate shipments of a drug not approved by the FDA.

Testimony revealed that federal mail inspectors caught one of Burzynski's employees shipping the drug outside Texas in March 1995.

Defense attorneys argued the worker acted on his own and made a mistake. They said the court order did not bar Burzynski from prescribing antineoplastons in Texas.

In closing arguments earlier Tuesday, Clark argued that Burzynski deliberately avoided FDA scrutiny of the drug he developed 20 years ago. He said the doctor had treated hundreds of patients since opening his clinic in

You Can Soar! World Wide Flight '97 Update

Plane location: En route to Oakland, Calif.

Latitude: 37 degrees 48 minutes N

Longitude: 122 degrees 16 minutes W

Linda Finch climbed into her faithful Electra for the last leg of World Wide Flight 1997. Today's 2,000-nautical mile trip across the Pacific Ocean is the longest and the most dangerous flight so far. The Electra 1 OE, filled with enough fuel for the 15-16 hour flight, will weigh 17,000 pounds. On an average flight, the plane weighs about 12,500 pounds. "It is dangerous," she said. "We'll be pushing the parameters of the plane so outrageously. But as long as we manage it, well, ... we'll be fine." Link to www.mrt.com and click on the "You Can Soar!" icon for one- to five-minute updates of the flight map, Greenwich Mean Time clock, plane position coordinates and weather. E-mail can also be sent to Ms. Finch while she's en route.

Finch to finish flight tribute to Earhart today

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

If all fares well, Texas aviator Linda Finch today will complete her around-the-world flight to celebrate the life and achievements of American aviation pioneer Amelia Earhart, who disappeared over the Pacific Ocean in 1937 toward the end of her daring flight in a twin-engine Lockheed 10E Electra.

"It's amazing," Ms. Finch said in a telephone interview before her nighttime takeoff in completing her World Flight 1997 adventure. "We've had absolutely no problems with (the aircraft). It has run perfectly — no problems whatsoever. It hasn't missed a beat."

Ms. Finch's restored 1935-model Electra is powered by two nine-cylinder, 410-horsepower radial engines, which were manufactured by Pratt & Whitney, which also powered Ms. Earhart's Electra.

Major financing for Ms. Finch's "World Flight 1997" project was a $1.5 million grant from the Connecticut-based Pratt & Whitney.

Sixty years ago, Ms. Earhart and her navigator, Fred Noonan, mysteriously vanished in Ms. Earhart's Electra over the Pacific Ocean on their planned 2,224-nautical-mile flight from New Guinea to a landing field on Howland Island.

Her next leg would have been Hawaii to California.

In her flight to Honolulu, Ms. Finch dropped a wreath over Howland Island to commemorate Ms. Earhart and to celebrate her courage and sense of adventure. She did not speculate on Ms. Earhart's disappearance.

"Our project has really focused on Amelia's life and accomplishments and really stayed away from the mystery of her loss," said Ms. Finch, a 45-year-old San Antonio businesswoman and a pilot-colonel in the Confederate Air Force.

Of her planned 15-hour flight from Hawaii to the mainland in completing the 26,000-nautical-mile, or 30,000-statute-mile, flight, Ms. Finch said that, "for me," the flight is a "phenomenal" adventure "I would not give up at all."

Ms. Earhart learned to fly in 1921 in her mid-20s. In 1932 at age 35 she became the first female pilot to fly solo across the

Happy 100th

Doca May Bizzell, right, chats with Kim Parker, Manor Park activities director, at Bizzell's 100th birthday party.

Centenarian's frail appearance belies her inner strength

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

At less than 100 pounds and using a wheelchair, Doca Bizzell seems too small and frail to carry much of a burden.

But the long-time Midland resident, who turns 100 today, has carried a heavy load of responsibility for much of those 100 years.

She was born Doca May Early on May 28, 1897, in Cumby, Hopkins County, the oldest of four children. They were orphaned when both parents died within two months of each other; Doca was 8 years old.

Though the three girls and one boy moved in with their paternal grandparents and an aunt and uncle, Doca did much to raise her younger sisters and brother, according to her daughter-in-law, Elva Bizzell.

Sometime between 1907 and 1910, the family moved to Colorado City in a covered wagon.

It was there that the 16-year-old Doca married David Marzy Bizzell, a farmer and dairy man, on Dec. 24, 1913. The couple raised seven children — four girls and three boys — and cared for Bizzell's parents, who lived with them until their deaths in 1919 and 1928.

Her oldest son, David, fourth of her seven children, said his mother always had a sense of humor.

"She had a will. My dad was not educated, he could write his name and that was about all. He couldn't read; that was left up to my mother. She was self-educated though she didn't finish school."

Elva Bizzell said her mother-in-law "was strong stuff,

Neighborhood prevails in debate over apartment complex

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

The City Council sided with a Midland neighborhood that opposed a developer's plans to construct an apartment complex in an area south of Sinclair Avenue and west of Bates Street.

Developer Joe Basham Jr. had requested a zone change from 1F-1 (single-family dwellings) to PD (planned district for housing development) so that he could construct a 29-unit apartment complex catering to elderly renters.

The 2.3-acre site for this proposed complex lies adjacent to a number of homes, which were purchased with the knowledge that only single-family homes were to be constructed on the adjacent land, according to residents who spoke before the Midland City Council on Tuesday.

When more than 20 percent of home owners in the affected area are opposed to a zone change, six out of seven of the council members must vote in favor of the change for it to pass, according to state law.

In this case, more than 40 percent of the homeowners were adamantly opposed to the zone change, and the council voted 5 to 2 in favor of the residents, who maintained that if this apartment complex for the elderly is constructed there will be no restrictions keeping other apartments from being constructed in the area.

Furthermore, if this venture fails as an apartment complex for the elderly, there will be no way to keep the owners from allowing other residents into the facility, the homeowners argued.

Council member Dale Brown supported the zone change, maintaining that it is a move toward developing the area, which is a goal of the council and other city leaders.

Council member Berry Simpson, however, did not support the measure. "I'm going to vote against it, because of the almost unanimous opposition against it," Simpson said.

"I'm still struggling with it, but I'm inclined to support it," said Mayor Bobby Burns.

Council member Jose Cuevas also was struggling with the decision.

"I don't think I have found a harder issue than this in the last seven years," Cuevas said.

In the end, Burns, Pat chandler, Juluis Brooks, Lee Wood and Brown voted in favor of the zoning change.

However, Cuevas and Simpson voted to support the residents of the area, rather than the developer.

The 5-to-2 vote was not enough to override the "20 percent" rule, according to city staff. Therefore, the zoning stays as is and the apartment complex is denied at this location.

In a separate issue, the council voted to override the 20 percent rule and allow a 30-foot break in the fence behind a proposed business on the south side of Wadley Avenue about 160 feet west of Garfield Street.

Residents in this area had complained about the Taing Partnership plan to build a T&T Donuts shop there and leave an opening for delivery trucks to enter from the alley.

This would require a zoning change to allow a transition district between the adjacent commercial and residential districts that included the alley.

The council voted 6 to 1 to allow the zoning change, with Wood voting against the change.

Howard County clerk always on the job

By Johnnye Montgomery

BIG SPRING — Some wise-acre once wrote that to be a good county clerk, you have to work like a mule, think like a man and a smile like lady.

For Margaret Ray, county clerk of Howard County since 1974, all three come naturally, though she might be quick to add that "thinking like a woman," has served her quite nicely, thank you very much.

She has worked in the county clerk's office in Big Spring since 1953, when the late Pauline Petty hired her away from a Big Spring abstract company after watching her flawlessly type one abstract after another on a Royal manual typewriter. She was 18 at the time, newly married, fresh off the family's Borden County farm, but already experienced.

"I had worked in the county clerk's office in Gail during my junior and senior years in high school, so I knew quite a bit about the work," she said.

She began work in the old courthouse a block north of the present structure, and was immediately given an added responsibility new to her experience: the maintenance of the photostat machine.

"When I worked in the Gail office, we typed all the copies of the instruments, but when I came to Big Spring, they had the photostat machine. We had to mix the solution on Monday morning and pour it in, and we'd put the instruments in and then run them through the washer and then put them in the dryer. It took two people to do the job, and it was very messy. We wore rubber-coated aprons and rubber gloves. Every Friday, we had to empty out the solution and take the machine apart and clean it.

"Now, we have the Xerox machine, and if you need 12 copies, you push the button and they come out.

"But those black copies that photostat machines made will be here 200 years from now. People will still be able to read them. They'll still be accessible."

Accessibility is an issue Martha Ray thinks a lot about these days. The county clerk's office handles somewhere in the neighborhood of 48 different types of records for county citizens — the most commonly known being birth certificates, death certificates, marriage licenses, deeds of trust and probate records. To handle the ever-rising tide of vital information Ms. Ray has seven full-time deputies — up from four when she took office. One reason for the load of paperwork in the Howard County clerk's office is the state hospital located in Big Spring. One deputy spends all her time solely on state hospital records.

CLERK: Ray always on the job

Another cause for the voluminous increase is, quite simply, the increasing complexity of people's lives.

"People need more copies of documents than they once did," Ms. Ray said.

"You have to have it in writing, and often you have to have it certified and/or notarized."

Probably the most visible users of the county clerk's records and facilities are the people doing research on county deeds of trust — landmen, attorneys and abstracters, who spend day after day pouring over the records stored in the heavy red-and-gray-backed binders that line the shelves floor to ceiling and grow in size and number daily. The oldest are hand-written in elegant Spencerian script, the ink faded to near illegibility.

There are records on photostat, like those Ms. Ray made during her early days as deputy clerk, and lately, the crisp documents typed electronically. Copies are now preserved on microfilm, and many clerks have gone to electronic imaging of records — a step Ms. Ray is not yet ready to take.

"They haven't convinced me that discs or CD-ROMs will still be around years from now the way that paper will," she said. "Besides, we have a lot of people who come in here who need access to our records. Sometimes we have at least 12 men in here searching our records for oil and gas leases. They do stand-up titles. I don't see imaging to be as accessible as paper copies. We have these tables, and they have room to work. I don't think imaging would work that well."

Another reason for the floods of paperwork, Ms. Ray says, is state government. The office fax machine grinds out stacks of papers every day — much of it copies of pending legislation that will affect the way county clerks' offices do their business — all of which will affect, in one way or another, the way the office does its business.

A three-inch stack of papers sits on the side of her desk beside the telephone. "I got this much in the fax machine yesterday. I read through it and highlight what will affect us, and I'm always calling my representatives and senators to talk to them about one piece of pending legislation or another. This is where I spend a lot of my time."

While the official clerk's hours are 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Ms. Ray, who was named Outstanding County Clerk for the state of Texas for the 1985-86 fiscal year, is never off-duty. She has opened the office on Christmas Day, at midnight, on numerous Saturdays and Sundays, and when she's not in the office, she's still on the job.

"My husband does a lot of the grocery shopping, because when I go, people are always stopping me. To me, if you're a public servant, your duty is 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

"When I ran for this office the first time, I went door to door, asking for votes. I meant what I said when I promised I would work for them."

But she says her days as public servant are coming to an end.

"My husband retired last July, and we plan to travel. I won't quit in the middle of a term, because the voters put me in this office, and I want them to choose my replacement. But I won't run for another term."

Westwood Medical Center Auxiliary installs officers

From Staff Reports

Midlander Marlene Byrd has been installed as president of the Westwood Medical Center Auxiliary.

The new slate of officers was officially recognized at the group's recent annual luncheon.

Other officers are Evelyn Hadley, vice president; Pat Kirk, secretary; and Willadene Henderson, treasurer.

During the meeting, Michael Potter, the hospital's president, reported on several changes, including the expansion of the cardiac care unit, new equipment and training of personnel for neuro-surgery procedures, and the expansion in the prompt-care section from five to at least 10 stations.

In addition, Potter explained Westwood's expansion into the Stanton and Andrews communities, providing new services or assuring existing medical services would be continued.

He added that a "chronic wound" unit will be opening in July. It will be a specialized group of doctors treating difficult and slow-to-heal conditions.

1983 but enrolled just six in FDA-approved programs by mid-1995.

Defense attorneys blamed red tape and bureaucratic delays.

"Hopefully, (the verdict) is going to be the end of government harassment of Dr. Burzynski," said defense attorney Richard Jaffe, who said the case boiled down to patient choice.

Prosecutors claimed that having out-of-state patients come to Burzynski's Houston-area clinic before they were in clinical trials violated the court order.

But juror Stephenie Shapiro, an attorney herself, said the court order was unclear. She said prosecutors should have dropped the case.

"We felt that Dr. Burzynski had done everything he could," she said. "He was trying to comply."

Burzynski says antineoplastons "turn off" cancer genes by interrupting signals for cells to multiply. He discovered antineoplastons in human urine and now makes the drug synthetically.

Prosecutors' first attempt to convict Burzynski and the Burzynski Research Institute resulted in a hung jury in March. Jurors deadlocked on charges of contempt, violation of FDA rules against introducing an unproven drug into interstate commerce and mail fraud in billing patients.

After the first trial, U.S. District Judge Sim Lake dismissed the 34 mail fraud counts. He granted a prosecution request last week to drop all but the contempt charge against the doctor.

BIRTHDAY: Six of 100-year-old Doca Bizzell's children have retired to have lost her parents at the age of 8 ..."

This strength was also evident when she helped provide for her family during the Great Depression.

Doca, her husband and oldest daughter Nora lived in Pateau, Okla., between 1917 and 1919, when Edith was born. Between 1920 and 1925 the family lived in San Angelo, where Sybil, David and Daisy were born. In 1925 the Bizzells moved to Midland County, where Dale and Dan were born.

Six of the children are now retired. Nora, 82, is supervisor of the First Baptist Church nursery.

Mrs. Bizzell has 15 grandchildren, 25 great-grandchildren and 19 great-great grandchildren.

Her hobbies have included crafts such as crochet, needlepoint and quilting and she made quilts for each grandchild as high school graduation gifts.

Mrs. Bizzell was a decorator and made draperies for a number of Midland homes and businesses, including the old First National Bank when it opened at Colorado and Wall streets.

Mrs. Bizzell, who retired in 1969, maintained her own home after her husband's death in 1965. She moved to Manor Park in 1995.

The Bizzell family roots go deep in American history. Mrs. Bizzell's father-in-law, Francis, was a Confederate soldier during the Civil War and his great-great grandfather, Enos, was killed in the American Revolution in 1783.

Mrs. Bizzell is the last surviving member of her family. Her youngest sister died May 16, two months before her 92nd birthday.

FLIGHT: Finch set to complete last leg of around-the-world flight today

(From 1B)

Atlantic Ocean in her single-engine Lockheed Vega. Her feat was inspired by Charles A. Lindbergh who, at age 25 in 1927 piloted his "Spirit of St. Louis" on a solo, nonstop transatlantic flight from New York to Paris.

Rather than setting any aviation records, Ms. Finch's quest was to pay tribute to Ms. Earhart's "vision and spirit" during the Golden Age of Aviation in the 1920s and 1930s.

"Amelia believed that limits were often more perceived than real, and those imposed by society, friends, and fears can be overcome," Ms. Finch said last year in Midland to promote her World Flight 1997.

"She thought that if you have faith in yourself, anything is possible, and you can accomplish your dreams," Ms. Finch said.

Had Ms. Earhart survived the 1937 flight and lived on, she would have been 100 years old this year.

In launching the final leg of her flight, the Electra "will be 100 percent full of fuel, which puts us at about 17,000 pounds (total weight). The airplane was designed to fly 10,500 pounds. So, we are several tons over the designed weight of the aircraft.

"It will be a very critical takeoff. The gear is not designed to carry that kind of weight," Ms. Finch said. "So, we just have to do everything perfectly."

After the takeoff, "the last leg leaves us only about a few-hours margin on fuel on zero wind condition."

In reflecting on her flight, Ms. Finch said, "I know it makes the flight a little bit boring, but the engines have been perfect at all times. The only thing we had break at all was ... the tachometer, tach drive. We replaced that. The airplanes and the engines performed perfectly throughout the trip," which is being aided by a satellite-triggered Global Positioning Satellite System that can pinpoint an aircraft's location anywhere in the world.

"Sunshine absolutely followed us around the world," Ms. Finch said. "We did not have one instrument landing yet. The weather has been lovely. Around the equator, there are a lot of thunderstorms, but they are small, isolated thunderstorms that we have been able to avoid."

Of Ms. Earhart being so near finishing her global fight, "she had to feel so elated to have gotten that far (New Guinea)," Ms. Finch said. "And she had only three more legs to go before she was home ... three to five days. She was so close to home and then not to have made it."

'Fast track' looming, NAFTA will be revisited

WASHINGTON (AP) — Now that the White House has signaled its intent to ask Congress for the authority to negotiate new trade agreements, NAFTA's impact on the U.S. economy is in for a heightened round of scrutiny.

Before the Clinton administration can begin negotiations to expand NAFTA to Latin America — or start talks on other trade alliances — it requires permission from Congress.

Restless lawmakers from both political parties had been assailing the White House in recent weeks for failing to ask Congress for the so-called "fast-track" authority.

Under fast track, lawmakers agree not to rewrite trade agreements, limiting themselves to an up-or-down vote. Without fast track, the administration essentially is powerless to engage in talks with other countries because any commitment made at the bargaining table could be undone by Congress.

After months of inaction, the White House announced last week that it would submit fast-track legislation to Congress in September.

The congressional battle promises to be a reprise of the bruising fight in 1993 to ratify NAFTA. The alliance of labor unions, environmental groups and liberal Democrats that fought NAFTA's passage already is gearing up to block fast track.

"It's going to be a really ugly debate," said Lori Wallach, head of Public Citizen's Global Trade Watch, which worked vigorously to derail NAFTA and opposes its expansion.

That in mind, administration officials are seeking to distance fast track from NAFTA. "I believe that fast track and NAFTA ought to be de-linked because fast track is about considerably more," Ira Shapiro, senior counsel for the U.S. Trade Representative's office, told the Congressional Border Caucus last week.

"The question of our global trade policy goes beyond Mexico," he said.

But NAFTA's first 40 months loom over the debate of expanded trade, with both sides claiming widely divergent results.

Boosters say NAFTA has prompted major increases in U.S. exports to Canada and Mexico, stimulated domestic industrial production, and helped cushion the blow of Mexico's 1995 economic collapse.

Critics contend NAFTA has caused huge U.S. trade deficits with Mexico and Canada, hundreds of thousands of lost American jobs, depressed wages, and a flight of industry and investment capital to Mexico.

Pain may be eliminated for millions
(SPECIAL) A drug that is exciting researchers in the treatment of pain has been formulated into a new product known as "Arthur Itis," and is being called a "Medical Miracle" by some, in the treatment of debilitating conditions such as arthritis, bursitis, rheumatism, painful muscle aches, joint aches, simple backache, bruises, and more. Although the mechanism of action is unclear, experiments indicate that Arthur Itis, relieves pain by first selectively attracting and then destroying the messenger chemical which carries pain sensations to the brain, thus eliminating pain in the affected area. Arthur Itis® is available immediately without a prescription in an odorless, greaseless, non-staining cream or new easy applicator liquid form. Arthur Itis® is guaranteed to work or your money back. FCC chairman Reed Hundt to step down

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reed Hundt is leaving the Federal Communications Commission after a tumultuous 3½-year chairmanship that helped shape the way Americans receive telephone, TV and other rapidly changing communications services.

With all the mergers and modernizing, he said his biggest achievement was putting in place a system that will allow schools and libraries to connect to the Internet at discounted rates.

"It's going to put knowledge in the fingertips of every child and every teacher," he said in an interview.

Hundt said Tuesday he had asked President Clinton to begin looking for a replacement and would step down as soon as one is found. He said he wanted to spend more time with his wife and three children.

Contenders for the job as the nation's chief telecommunications regulator include Kathy Wallman, the FCC's former top telephone regulator and now Clinton's deputy assistant for economic policy; William Kennard, the FCC's general counsel and a nominee to be a FCC commissioner, and FCC Commissioner Susan Ness.

Hundt said he will continue to vote on all matters that come before the agency. They include consideration of massive mergers such as British Telecom's takeover of MCI and Bell Atlantic's union with Nynex; proposed loosening local TV ownership rules, and local Bell telephone requests to provide long-distance service to their own customers.

'My kids are growing up and they are not waiting for me to get back into the family. I've got to do that on my own.'

— Reed Hundt, FCC chairman

In an interview, he recalled with a laugh some of the glamour and pitfalls of his job: "I have had lunch and dinner with two Miss Americas, been lobbied by Clint Eastwood, had my car stolen from the parking lot, been on 'Car Talk,' been in Ann Landers. ... How can you beat that?"

His first major task when he took his job in December 1993 was toughening cable rate regulation. He ended up ordering cable companies to give customers another, deeper rate cut.

Since then, Hundt has steered the nation's telecommunications policy through seismic legal, technological and business changes.

He was largely responsible for implementing Congress' 1996 overhaul of telecommunications law, freeing cable, local and long-distance companies to get into each other's businesses, deregulating cable rates and making it easier for media companies to own more outlets.

During his term, Hundt helped unleash the use of new wireless technologies that allow companies to offer all-digital, more sophisticated mobile phone services, two-way paging and messaging and Internet access.

Using new congressional authority, Hundt auctioned these personal communications services, or PCS, licenses as well as other communications licenses that previously had been given away. The airwaves auctions, which began in 1994, generated winning bids of more than $23 billion.

Hundt also was instrumental in clearing the way for broadcasters to offer cinema-quality digital TV, in forcing TV stations to air at least three hours of educational shows for children each week and in persuading the TV industry to rate their shows for sex and violence.

He has been pushing — thus far unsuccessfully — for broadcasters to devote free air time to political candidates and to craft a code aimed at keeping ads for tequila, whiskey and other liquor products off TV and radio.

Just last month, Hundt ordered one of the nation's biggest overhauls in telephone pricing with the aim of reducing bills.

A former antitrust litigator, Hundt would sometimes stake out extreme positions at the FCC, forcing opponents to negotiate a middle ground after he waged an intense public and political campaign with the help of allies such as Vice President Al Gore, a friend since boyhood.

That was the case with the three-hour educational programing requirements and digital television rules. And, it's the strategy Hundt is using in his more recent push to get broadcasters to air more public-service ads.

Clinton said Hundt has been a "strong and visionary leader of the FCC." And Gore said, "His influence at the FCC will be felt for a very long time."

After he leaves, Hundt said he wants to finish a book of fiction that he started years ago called "Elm City Dinners." And he plans to write a non-fiction book, drawing upon his FCC experiences, called: "You Say You Want a Revolution: How Communications Can Change the World."

And he wants to spend more time at home.

"My kids are growing up and they are not waiting for me to get back into the family. I've got to do that on my own," Hundt said in the interview. "You can't get those years back."

Accusations threaten Kennedy careers

BOSTON (AP) — Ordinarily, Rep. Joseph P. Kennedy would be a sure bet for governor in a state where his family has gone 18-for-18 in general elections over the last 50 years.

But now the political future of the Massachusetts Democrat is in doubt because of another family streak: its record with women.

Michael Kennedy, another son of the late Robert F. Kennedy, is under investigation for allegedly having an affair with his teen-age baby sitter. He had been expected to run his brother's gubernatorial campaign.

And Joe Kennedy's ex-wife, Sheila Rauch Kennedy, has broken a family tradition and spoken out against a Kennedy, writing a book criticizing her former husband for his efforts to annul their marriage.

The twin disclosures have damaged Joe Kennedy's political standing, with a recent poll showing that one in four people is now less likely to vote for him.

"It's one thing to be talking about the Kennedys and women. It's a whole different thing to be talking about the Kennedys and children," said Lou DiNitale, a Democratic political consultant who also teaches at the University of Massachusetts at Boston.

Attorney General Scott Harshbarger, once viewed as a sure loser against Kennedy in the Democratic gubernatorial primary, now leads him in some polls. And the two likely Republican candidates, Lt. Gov. Paul Cellucci and Treasurer Joe Malone, see an opportunity.

Political history is full of tales of the Kennedy men and their libidos.

Joe Kennedy, 44, was elected to Congress despite a 1973 accident in which he rolled over a Jeep, permanently paralyzing the woman riding with him.

His uncle Sen. Edward M. Kennedy has been elected and re-elected over the years despite Chappaquiddick — in which he drove a car off a Martha's Vineyard bridge in 1969, drowning a female campaign worker — and the William Kennedy Smith rape case, in which it was learned that the senator was out carousing with his nephew the night of the alleged attack in 1991. Smith was acquitted.

John F. Kennedy and Robert F. Kennedy were said to have had dalliances with Marilyn Monroe and others. The family patriarch, Joseph Kennedy, had an affair with actress Gloria Swanson.

While Joe Kennedy has not been implicated in the baby sitter case, he has suffered politically after offering shifting explanations about what he knew about the alleged affair and when.

"I'm convinced if the story continues to escalate, he'll drop out of the governor's race and go back to what the Kennedys consider private life: a seat in Congress," said GOP consultant Kevin Sowyrda.

Kennedy, the eldest son of Robert F. Kennedy, was planning to kick off his campaign for governor next month. Now those plans have been scotched until September at the earliest.

The annulment story was embarrassing to Kennedy because his ex-wife wrote that he called her a "nobody" during their 12-year marriage and that he referred to the annulment process as "Catholic gobbledygook."

Michael Kennedy, head of a company that helps the poor heat their homes, is under investigation for allegedly having an affair with his family's baby sitter that began when she was 14. He could face statutory rape charges.

The baby sitter, now a 19-year-old college student, met with prosecutors last week.

"There are little stops along the way and this one might not be such a little for everybody, but you know, I'm proud of my family," Joe Kennedy told reporters on April 28.

"It's just, life sometimes is a bit of a struggle for everybody and our family's no different than any other. It just gets a little bit more attention, I guess."

Cousin starts new line of JFK clothing

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla. (AP) — What's the well-dressed sailor to wear while yachting off Hyannis or reliving war exploits in the South Pacific? Don some JFK PT Wear.

President John F. Kennedy and his love of the sea are being marketed in a line of nautical clothing by a second cousin, Kerry McCarthy, who shrugs off suggestions that she is trading on the family name.

"I think it has been commercialized for years and years and years. I think every book that comes out about Kennedy ... is a commercialization," she said Tuesday.

Ms. McCarthy, whose mother, Marylou, was a niece of Kennedy's parents, is kicking off her line on Thursday — the 80th anniversary of Kennedy's birth. Prices range from $19.95 for a hat to $119.95 for a jacket.

The PT part of the name refers to Kennedy's command of a patrol-torpedo boat, PT-109, during World War II. He rescued part of his crew after the craft was sunk by the Japanese.

Ms. McCarthy, 44, a former political consultant who runs a television production company, said her project is supported by her mother, who has kept one of Kennedy's PT uniform insignias that is reproduced on the clothing.

Ms. McCarthy said she hopes the rest of the family is not angry with her, "because I can't do a thing about it if they are."

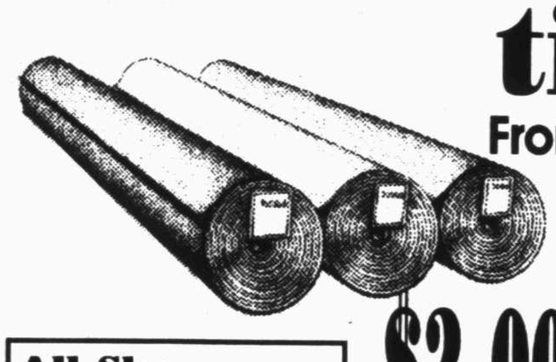

Part of the proceeds will go to the Kennedy Library, she said.

John F. Kennedy Jr. declined to comment, said RoseMarie Terenzio, his personal assistant in New York.

His sister, Caroline Kennedy Schlossberg, couldn't be reached, said her literary agent, Esther Newberg.

As governments play politics, North Korean citizens go hungry

By George Gedda
Associated Press

■ News analysis

WASHINGTON — "A hungry child knows no politics," Ronald Reagan once said. But politics can go a long way toward explaining why so many North Korean children are starving these days.

Contributions from the European Union and the South Korean Red Cross in recent days have brightened the picture for the North Koreans. But politics, both inside and outside North Korea, have conspired to delay donations and keep them at modest levels. While they await help, many famished North Koreans have been reduced to eating tree bark, wild plants, seaweed and corn stalks.

Donor governments look to the United Nations' World Food Program for guidance, and the agency has issued two appeals this year for assistance, both calling for minimal amounts. The WFP doesn't dare ask for large quantities because North Korea, wary of outsiders, refuses to allow the agency more than a dozen or so monitors in the country to ensure the food gets to those who need it.

"We will not ask donors to provide more food than we are confident we can monitor," says the WFP's Mike Ross.

The 200,000 tons of food the WFP has asked for may seem like a lot, but World Vision, a U.S. relief organization, says that amount would last North Korea's 24 million people only 17 days.

The United States is providing about 72,000 tons — a mere week's supply, according to World Vision. The agency says the American people are prepared to do much more, citing a poll showing that 64.6 percent believe the United States should head off famine in North Korea.

But others say the United States has no business strengthening a country that has threatened to annihilate the 37,000 American soldiers protecting South Korea.

The House International Relations Committee has approved amendments proposed by Rep. Doug Bereuter, R-Neb., to impose conditions on future food aid to North Korea.

The South Korean Red Cross, after talks with their North Korean counterparts in recent days, agreed to provide 40,000 tons of food. Earlier, the South Korean government had pledged just under 60,000 tons. The North wants more, but Seoul insists that Pyongyang take part in talks to end the state of belligerency between the two countries.

Politics appeared to be working in the North's favor last week when the European Union promised 155,000 tons of assistance valued at over $30 million. The EU said the contribution, while driven by humanitarian considerations, should help to avert a possible deterioration in the security situation on the peninsula.

But politics clearly is inhibiting Japanese generosity. The Japanese government has limited room to maneuver because of public anger over the alleged North Korean role in kidnaping Japanese citizens a generation ago.

North Korea could help itself by giving the international media access to the country, but it has been reluctant. Its suspicions about foreign reporters were reinforced not long ago when a BBC crew was invited to visit the country. Instead of being allowed to film starving North Koreans in the provinces, the crew was confined to Pyongyang and ended up infuriating the North Koreans by doing a feature on political issues.

Meanwhile, hungry North Koreans can only hope that promised food aid arrives soon because the next harvest is still four months away.

Study: Children can unlearn violence quickly

CHICAGO (AP) — Children can unlearn violent behavior in less than six months, according to a study of the effectiveness of an antiviolence program widely used in U.S. and Canadian schools.

The findings in Wednesday's Journal of the American Medical Association help dispel the fatalistic notion that nothing can be done about rising violence among the nation's young people, government experts say.

Violence is a leading cause of death for Americans between the ages of 15 and 24.

The study involved 790 second- and third-graders at 12 schools in Washington state. About half were taught the Second Step violence prevention curriculum over a 16- to 20-week period, and their behavior at school was compared with that of students who did not take the course.

Students were evaluated before the program began, two weeks after it ended and six months later.

At the final evaluation, those who had taken the course exhibited about 30 fewer acts of aggressive behavior every day than children who didn't take the course. The participants also exhibited more than 800 more neutral or positive acts per class every day than children who didn't take the course.

Aggressive behavior — including hitting, kicking and shoving — increased in students who did not take the course.

The researchers were led by Dr. David C. Grossman at the University of Washington in Seattle.

Grossman, a pediatrician and co-director of the university's Harborview Injury Prevention and Research Center, called the results encouraging but cautioned, "It's premature to say that we've reached the solution."

Programs like Second Step need to be followed longer to see whether they reduce violent behavior in other settings later in life, Grossman said.

The program, developed in 1986 by a Seattle educator, involves 35-minute weekly or twice-weekly sessions designed to teach empathy, problem-solving and anger management to children from preschool through ninth grade.

For example, youngsters might be shown a photograph of a frowning child and asked to describe how that child is feeling. Or they're shown a picture of two boys fighting over a ball, then are asked to identify the problem and come up with solutions.

Noting that Second Step is one of many programs aimed at curbing youth violence, the editorial said the findings should be viewed as evidence that other such efforts can work, too.

The authors may have understated their results by calling the changes "modest," Rosenberg and colleagues wrote in the editorial. "Teachers across the country would welcome such 'modest' changes," they said.

Albert booked on sex charges; to plead innocent

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP) — Marv Albert was booked, fingerprinted and photographed on sex charges Tuesday after marching into court, where his lawyer made a point of telling a judge the sportscaster will plead innocent.

Judge Benjamin Kendrick set a Sept. 22 trial date for Albert, who was indicted last week on charges of biting a woman repeatedly and forcing her to perform oral sex in his hotel room in February. Albert arranged his surrender through his lawyer.

The judge released Albert on his own recognizance.

NBC's No. 1 basketball announcer said nothing in court or as he, fiancee Heather Faulkiner and his four adult children pushed past a throng of reporters and cameras outside the Arlington County courthouse.

Albert did not formally enter a plea. The judge said he prefers to adhere to the local custom of accepting pleas immediately before trial.

However, defense attorney Gerard Treanor asked the judge during the five-minute hearing to acknowledge that his client intends to plead innocent to the assault and forcible sodomy charges.

"We look forward to that trial and we look forward to his vindication," Treanor said after the hearing.

Neither Treanor nor prosecutor Richard Trodden would elaborate on the evidence or say whether tests of Albert's teeth will be performed.

Albert, 53, could get up to life in prison.

Albert's mugshots, which will be released Wednesday, show the sportscaster wearing his toupee, said Chief Sheriff's Deputy Mike Raffo.

"If he has one, he never removed it," Raffo said. "Ordinarily we like to photograph people the way they ordinarily appear, and to the best of my knowledge, he ordinarily appears just the way he did today."

Albert's accuser — a 41-year-old woman who said she has been a friend of his for 10 years — faces criminal charges herself. She is accused of threatening to kill a former boyfriend in March. A female co-worker at the Washington Hilton hotel also filed a discrimination complaint accusing the woman of harassing her.

Albert, who has worked for NBC since 1977, also covers football and boxing for the network. He is known for hailing fine plays with a hearty "Yesss!" He also does play-by-play for the NBA's New York Knicks.

Albert, who lives in New York, was divorced five years ago.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 28, 1997

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Wednesday, May 28, 1997:
Be aware of your professional and public presence. You have unusual insight into work and bosses this year. Focus on what you want; you are likely to make it happen. Travel and writing play a big role in the next 12 months. Others admire your precision and direction. If you are single, someone very different could enter your life. A change is likely on the home front. If attached, your relationship benefits from frequent trips together. A change of pace helps you relate more deeply. A domestic move is likely. PISCES is important to your image.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★ You become more out of sorts as the day progresses. Pull back, and think or, perhaps, take off. Otherwise, you are likely to fall into a power play. You are better off rising above the situation and getting a different perspective. Tonight: Get a good night's sleep.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★ You are on overload. Consider options in a friendship. Passions run high. It might be tempting to mix pleasure and business, but it could cause a problem. A partnership is difficult. A significant other creates an uproar; he wants attention. Tonight: Party away stress!
GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★ New perspective takes you in a different direction. Reach out for another, and get key information. Your knowledge will prove helpful later. A boss takes a stand with an associate. You don't need to play into this high-pressure situation. Tonight: Burn the midnight oil.
CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★ Determination pays off financially. If you don't like the way the cards stack, seek out information and answers. You feel unusually vulnerable, which could cause a fight. Give yourself time to figure it out. Tonight: Buy music on the way home.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ Defer to others, and don't get in the middle of a stressful tangle. You want to air your own gripes, but do it privately. Be aware of sexual energy or jealousy with another. Pressure is high with a loved one, who demands to have things his way. Tonight: Make midweek plans.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ You are personality-plus. Others respond to your energy, but another wants to control you. Someone could be threatened by your happy ways. Learn to express your opinions in a way that doesn't cause someone else to get defensive. Tonight: Live life fully.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★ Your playful side comes out with a loved one, who likes your spirit and naughtiness. However, work does call. Deal with anger, and explain to another what is going on with you. Take a walk at lunchtime to work through stress. Tonight: Work late.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ You are more focused than you have been in a while. You come up with solutions to all problems. Learn to juggle financial concerns with friendship. You might be uncomfortable, but you need to be clear. Determine your monetary limitations. Tonight: Find your friends.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★ You might snap; the pressure is enormous. If you can, take the day off. Someone else is off base, and you could end up telling him off. It is best to lay low. Look at the big picture. Be more concerned with domestic matters. Tonight: Play ostrich.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★ Reach out for another. Examine what is happening with a coworker. Rearrange your schedule to compensate someone else. Instincts could be way off. Inquire, and do additional research. Make calls and needed adjustments. You might be overreacting. Tonight: Dine out.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★ Use the morning to make the most of the moment. Think through a decision with care. There might be a change in a money situation. A loved one and a child pressure you; however, they have different agendas. Look carefully at what you want. Tonight: Pay bills.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ You have strong instincts this morning. How you view a boss could change, as he seems to be out of control. Associates ask for support. Be clear about what you expect. Use your energy, personality and wisdom to work through a problem. Tonight: As you like it.

The bidding:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
1♠	Pass	4♠	Pass
6♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ◇

If trumps are no worse than 3-1 and and clubs 3-2, 12 tricks are there for the taking, if you concede the 'right' trick. Can you tell us which trick South must lose?

Since North's leap to four spades strongly suggested at least four trumps, a singleton and some high cards, South decided that the spade slam should be no worse than on a finesse. West led the king of diamonds. How would you proceed?

You probably need clubs 3-2, if you are to succeed. A possible approach is to cash all your side-suit winners and try for nine tricks on a crossruff, but that would fail if either defender can score an overruff. The better chance is to execute a dummy reversal.

Win the ace of diamonds and cash the ace of spades to make sure that trumps are not 4-0. When both defenders follow, cross to the ace of clubs (you don't need the finesse) and ruff a club with the queen of trumps! After both defenders produce a second club, the contract is assured. Now lead a low trump toward the eight in dummy.

It makes no difference whether West rises with the jack or allows dummy to win the trick. Suppose West takes the jack and forces dummy with a diamond. Ruff, and trump another club high to establish the suit, then enter dummy by leading a spade to the ten, extracting the remaining enemy fang in the process, and run your winners.

Should West duck the second trump, continue along the same lines. No matter what, the only trick you really need to lose is a trump to the jack!

Madonna, father of 7-month-old child no longer live together, paper reports

LOS ANGELES — The father of Madonna's child seems to be out of the picture these days.

Friends say the pop star and Carlos Leon no longer live together, the New York Daily News reported Tuesday. Their daughter, Lourdes, is 7 months old.

Madonna wants Leon to remain active in their child's upbringing, no matter what happens between them, the newspaper reported.

The father of Madonna's child seems to be out of the picture these days.

Madonna has been angered in the past by criticism of her decision not to marry Leon, a regular on TV's "Nash Bridges." She once said, "I'm perfectly happy with the way things are."

Liz Rosenberg, Madonna's spokeswoman, did not immediately return calls to her New York office.

LOS ANGELES — A movie company Tuesday lost a $5 million lawsuit accusing Pamela Anderson Lee of backing out of a steamy production.

Superior Court Judge David Horowitz ruled that The Private Movie Co. never had a valid contract with Lee to perform in the movie, "Hello, She Lied," and was not entitled to any damages for her failure to perform.

Horowitz said it was clear that the "Baywatch" star objected from the very beginning to the nudity and the simulated sex in the script submitted to her.

The judge also found that Lee's former attorney, Michael Blaha, and her business manager had no authority to make the commitment for her to do the movie.

NEW YORK — Mary-Louise Parker would flock to a stage over a movie set any day.

"Every time my agent says he's sending me a new play, I practically go and sit by my doorman," the actress said in Tuesday's New York Post. "But I'll let a movie script hang around for weeks, not that movie scripts are constantly pouring in."

She currently stars off-Broadway in "How I Learned to Drive," about a young woman who has a sexual relationship with her uncle. Her stage debut was "Prelude to a Kiss."

On film, she has been in "Boys on the Side," "Fried Green Tomatoes" and "Bullets Over Broadway."

STOCKHOLM, Sweden — Judging from the Swedish press in recent days, there are two kings named Carl — Carl XVI Gustaf and Carl Lewis.

The first is the country's real monarch, but Lewis has been given the moniker too by newspapers delighted at his support for Stockholm's bid for the 2004 Olympics.

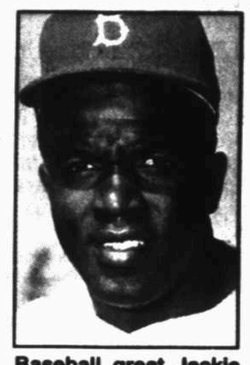

Lewis, the track star with nine Olympic gold medals, is the highest-profile figure to speak up for the Swedish capital — one of five cities vying for the games.

"I'll do my best and I promise to do as much as possible" to help bring the games to Stockholm, Lewis told the newspaper Aftonbladet in an interview published Monday.

NEW YORK — Baseball great Jackie Robinson is being remembered in the classroom, too.

A three-part video, "The Brooklyn Dodgers: A Team That Changed America," is being distributed among secondary schools in New York City. It includes a profile of Robinson, the first black player in the major leagues.

Baseball great Jackie Robinson is being remembered in the classroom, too.

The video, with host Malcolm-Jamal Warner, uses interviews with old teammates such as Pee Wee Reese, Don Newcombe and Carl Erskine to explain what Robinson went through. Robinson died in 1972.

Last month, Robinson was honored on the 50th anniversary of his major league debut, and No. 42, his uniform number, was permanently retired.

NEW HAVEN, Conn. — Jodie Foster will have to make space between her Oscars on the mantle for her latest award — an honorary doctorate in fine arts.

Yale President Richard Levin honored the actress Monday for breaking new ground for women in film through her choice of roles and her success as a director and producer.

"In your acting and directing, you reveal yourself as a deep moral intelligence, exploring the outer bounds of life, helping us to understand what we can and cannot tolerate," Levin said.

It was the second degree from Yale for Foster, 34, who graduated magna cum laude from the university in 1985 with a bachelor's degree in literature.

New Mexico is latest state to sue cigarette makers for Medicaid funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tobacco talks take on new urgency this week: Not only do attorneys have just 40 days before the first state lawsuit against cigarette makers goes to court, they'll find out Wednesday if public health experts — considered key for any deal to pass Congress — are on board.

Even supporters of a deal say the talks remained tenuous. But pressure mounted on cigarette makers Tuesday as New Mexico became the 30th state to sue the industry and the attorney general of tobacco-friendly North Carolina said he also might consider suing and asked state lawmakers to repeal a law that would block such a move.

Skepticism about the proposed deal, however, is mounting. Tobacco foes say a proposal that generated excitement last week — for the industry to pay up to $1.5 billion a year in fines if they can't cut teen smoking — really equals just a 4-cents-a-pack fine. And the deal as drafted would severely curb sick smokers' right to sue for damages, critics say.

The American Lung Association is lobbying anti-tobacco activists to condemn "a bailout for the tobacco industry" at a meeting in Chicago on Wednesday — a meeting so pivotal for the negotiators to win public health support that they compiled a list of over 30 tobacco industry concessions that the attorneys hope will quiet the critics.

Among the latest agreements: A ban on virtually all public and workplace smoking, with exemptions for bars and restaurants, and a requirement that industry pay for smoking cessation programs for poor smokers.

"What's on the table now goes beyond what any single legal victory could achieve," said Massachusetts Attorney General Scott Harshbarger. "If every state won their lawsuits tomorrow, we could not have the historic impact on children and on the public health that appears possible through these discussions."

Retorts American Lung Association chief executive John Garrison: "The tobacco industry has never demonstrated an ability to negotiate in good faith or live up to its promises. ... The health community should bring all its pressure to bear against a deal."

More than 100 anti-tobacco activists will be at the meeting, called by the American Medical Association to quell growing fears about the secret deal-making. The AMA originally opened the meeting to the public, declaring "we believe in openness," but on Tuesday declared the session closed as a clash appeared imminent.

But even attorneys considering signing a settlement are anguishing over two questions that could kill any deal: Is it fair to restrict sick smokers' right to sue cigarette makers in return for tobacco limits once considered unthinkable — even though those same smokers have lost in the courts over and over for 30 years? And how can the government fashion an agreement letting cigarette makers sell addictive, dangerous nicotine for 25 more years?

"The nicotine issue is truly a deal-breaker," said Connecticut Attorney General Richard Blumenthal, a participant in the talks.

"We have to make sure to recognize how much we can do to save a generation from the disease and addiction that ... our courts have never been able to remedy," he added Tuesday, although he noted he is still skeptical. But "time is running out."

New Mexico on Tuesday became the 30th state to sue cigarette makers to recover Medicaid funds spent treating sick smokers. The first case, Mississippi's, goes to trial on July 7, and Mississippi Attorney General Michael Moore began his third week of closed-door settlement talks at tobacco law firms in New York on Tuesday.

Cigarette makers have agreed to pay more than $300 billion, submit to some Food and Drug Administration advertising curbs — including no more Joe Camel or NASCAR sponsorships, and to label cigarettes with harsh warnings that smoking kills.

In return, negotiators are nearing agreement on provisions that would make it harder, maybe even impossible, for smokers to sue in the future. They include a ban on the class-action suits — the pooling that is the only way many Americans can afford to sue — and punitive damages, and severe curbs on the right of anyone to sue if they started smoking after seeing the new cigarette warnings.

Billboard ban fosters others

BALTIMORE (AP) — The day after the Supreme Court let stand Baltimore's ban on tobacco billboard advertising, Los Angeles City Councilman Michael Feuer introduced a similar ordinance.

Soon after, Harrisburg, Pa., Councilman Zane Phoenix did the same.

The Supreme Court's decision last month not to hear a challenge of Baltimore's billboard ordinance has been seen by cities around the country as a legal green light.

"Baltimore was an inspiration to other cities to take the initiative," said Jim Fouts, president of the Warren, Mich., City Council who has put forward a billboard ban.

In New York, for example, City Council Speaker Peter F. Vallone introduced legislation to ban cigarette billboards around schools, day care centers and other places where youngsters congregate.

Baltimore's ban, which has been in the courts for three years and only took effect with the Supreme Court action, applies to most outdoor advertising for tobacco products except in industrial and business zones and on buses.

It arose from an effort by a coalition of community groups that argued the ads target the young in poor and mostly black neighborhoods.

Penn Advertising, which owned most of Baltimore's billboards, had challenged the ban, claiming it violated the First Amendment guarantee of freedom of speech.

The 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va., rejected that argument, stating: "Baltimore's interest is to protect children who are not yet independently able to assess the value of the message presented." The Supreme Court let the decision stand without hearing the case.

"Across the country, cities now are looking at (the Baltimore ban) as a model of what they're free to do, in terms of how to craft a billboard ordinance that would withstand a court challenge," said Kevin Goebel, a member of the Berkeley, Calif.-based Americans for Nonsmokers' Rights.

The 4th Circuit decision applies only to Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and the Carolinas. The constitutionality of such bans remains an open question until the Supreme Court rules definitively.

"We anticipate defending our right under the First Amendment to communicate to our customers," said Tom Lauria of the Tobacco Institute.

Sergeant's trial begins; rape charge dropped

ABERDEEN, Md. (AP) — Prosecutors dropped the last remaining rape charge in the Aberdeen sex scandal Tuesday, leaving an Army drill sergeant facing 20 counts involving sexual misconduct and related charges.

The Army gave no explanation for dismissing the charge against Staff Sgt. Vernell Robinson Jr., citing an order by the judge, Col. Paul Johnston, prohibiting both sides from discussing the case.

Robinson, 32, who could have faced life in prison on the rape charge, was one of 12 Aberdeen staff members facing charges. He was one of four charged with rape.

Staff Sgt. Delmar Simpson, the only one convicted of rape, was sentenced to 25 years. The Army dropped or plea-bargained the charges away in the other three cases.

Robinson, who is married, has pleaded innocent to having sex with female trainees, obstructing justice, and numerous other charges and faces up to 65½ years in prison.

The offenses allegedly occurred from April to September 1996, when Robinson was a drill sergeant at Aberdeen Proving Ground, a training and weapons testing center 30 miles northeast of Baltimore.

Angels rained out

SAN ANTONIO — The thunderstorms which battered Central Texas Tuesday literally put out the lights on the Midland Angels.

The Angels and San Antonio Missions couldn't even complete an inning as rain and wind made conditions nearly unplayable before lightning knocked out the stadium lights with two outs in the bottom of the first, forcing the postponement of the game.

If there was any good news for the Angels, it was that San Antonio's 9-0 lead against them won't go into the record books. The Missions, who lead the Texas League's Western Division ahead of Midland, had their 13th batter at the plate in the first when the game was called. The nine runs won't count against Midland starter Kurt Knudsen.

A doubleheader is scheduled for 6:05 p.m. tonight, provided the field is playable. Tuesday's rainout is scheduled to be made up in a Friday doubleheader.

Pitino picks GM

BOSTON — Rick Pitino says Chris Wallace is the man to talk to if you want to talk to the Boston Celtics. Wallace is just as clear about his position in the franchise's chain of command.

"I'm working for him," Wallace said Tuesday after Pitino made him the Celtics' general manager.

"The coach who is a president can't do the day-to-day (functions). It just diminishes his energy for basketball," Wallace said. "Today a coach can be president and he can coach, but he needs people ... laying the menu in front of him."

Wallace was hired away from the Miami Heat, where he was director of player personnel. The Celtics had to give Miami the 30th overall pick in the upcoming draft and in return got the Heat's 55th pick.

"I think he's worth a couple of first-round picks," Pitino said, adding that he didn't expect to get much with the pick anyway. "He promises me he'll have an incredible guy at 55."

The Celtics will need it as they try to rebuild after the worst season in franchise history. The team cleaned house, bringing Pitino in as coach and president, firing longtime general manager Jan Volk and bumping patriarch Red Auerbach upstairs.

While making it clear that a lack of talent was the main cause of last year's 15-67 record, Pitino said the team also suffered from confused roles in the front office.

That was supposed to be clarified when he took over as coach and president. Now Pitino says Wallace will be in charge of trades and other negotiations.

"I wanted a general manager that could wear a number of different hats," Pitino said, including among them salary cap-ology, player evaluation and scouting in Europe, the CBA and high schools.

The latter is a specialty for Wallace, who got his start in basketball by starting the "Blue Ribbon Yearbook," which evaluated young players.

Utah grabs 3-2 edge in series

By Chris Sheridan
AP Basketball Writer

SALT LAKE CITY — The MVP finally had the kind of game everyone was waiting for.

Karl Malone had his highest-scoring game of the Western Conference finals with 29 points and shut down Charles Barkley defensively Tuesday night as the Utah Jazz moved within one victory of the NBA Finals with a 96-91 win over the Houston Rockets.

Malone, who had been saying "I'm due" for the better part of a week, made 11 of 22 shots and grabbed 14 rebounds. Several of his shots were rally-killers in the second half against the Rockets, who fell behind for good in the second quarter but refused to go down easily.

Malone, who averaged 27.4 points on 55 percent shooting this season but just 22 points on 43 percent this series, finally locked up the victory with two free throws with 13 seconds left that gave Utah a 96-89 lead.

"Sometimes you forget what Karl Malone can do for your team, but when the game's all done you notice. He came up with a heck of a game tonight," Jazz guard John Stockton said.

"I knew Karl was going to come back ready to play. You can't ever guarantee you're going to shoot the ball well or not turn it over or all those things but I knew Karl was going to come ready to play and he certainly did."

It was the 22nd straight home victory for the Jazz, who haven't lost at the Delta Center since Feb. 23. They will look to wrap up the series Thursday night in Houston, but they'll have to become the first team to win a road game in this series.

Six Utah players scored in double figures. Stockton had another strong game with 17 points, Bryon Russell

Arie Luyendyk celebrates by spraying champagne after winning the Indy 500 for the second time Tuesday at Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

Luyendyk rises above nobodies

By Mike Harris
AP Motorsports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS — The Indianapolis 500 got a familiar face at the finish, after all. So much for all those new guys.

Arie Luyendyk outlasted rival Tony Stewart and outmaneuvered teammate Scott Goodyear on a confusing last-lap restart to win his second Indy. And, he came out of a field in which two-thirds of the drivers haven't even raced here more than twice.

Just goes to show there's no substitute for a guy who knows his way around this track.

"I'm probably more excited than I was in 1990," Luyendyk said after climbing out of his car in Victory Lane. "I had to work a lot harder. ... I had to fight for it pretty hard today."

Luyendyk, an obscure name himself not so long ago, was the wizened veteran in this crowd; he was one of only two former winners in this year's field, and the other was defending champion Buddy Lazier.

His first win came in the fastest Indy ever. This time, he had to get through two frustrating days of rainouts and survive a race in which all 35 starters were in new cars powered by engines that had never run a 500-mile event.

And this field was considerably less experienced with 13 rookies and 10 second-year drivers — many of them unfamiliar names and faces to anybody but the most fanatical fans.

The Flying Dutchman was indeed the man to beat all month. He led every practice session in which he ran, won the pole and ran at or near the front for all 200 laps Tuesday.

In fact, he led six times for 61 laps, taking the lead for the final time when he drove past Goodyear on the first turn of a restart on lap 194.

Stewart, who started alongside Luyendyk on the front row and battled him through most of the day, faded at the end. But it was his miscue that set up another controversial Indy ending.

Stewart, at 26 the youngest driver in the lineup, banged off the fourth turn wall as he tried to catch the leaders three laps from the end.

That brought out the 11th caution flag and moved Goodyear right behind Luyendyk in the battle of Aurora-powered G Force cars. Both thought the race was over.

Then it got confusing.

As the leaders approached the flagstand, the starter waved a green flag and a white flag, indicating one lap to go. But the lights mounted on the track wall remained yellow.

"I saw them throw the white and the green (flags) together, so then I gassed it. But when I went into turn one, the yellow light was on," the 43-year-old winner said.

"I just kept going. I said, 'What the hell, they better know what they're doing. I better just keep doing what I've been doing.' "

Luyendyk got up to speed the best he could and stayed well ahead of Goodyear, beating him to the finish line by a half second — about four car lengths. He averaged just 201.898 mph on the final trip around the 2 1/2-mile oval.

Earlier in the race, he ran laps at better than 215 and was consistently running close to 210, although yellow flags cut his race average to 145.827 mph.

Goodyear was second to Al Unser Jr. in 1992 in the closest finish in Indy history — .043 second — and also lost a chance to

Green flag surprises leaders, may have cost Goodyear win

By Paul Newberry
AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS — Two years ago, Scott Goodyear blew by the pace car and wound up costing himself a victory in the Indianapolis 500.

This time, he could blame someone else for costing him a chance to lift his Indy curse.

In a decision that startled nearly every driver — even winner Arie Luyendyk — the flagman waved green for a final-lap duel at the Indy 500. There was only one problem: yellow lights were still blinking all along the 2 1/2-mile oval.

"I guess I'm still in disbelief," said Goodyear, who finished 0.570 seconds behind Luyendyk in the third-closest finish in Indy history. "It's hard to feel emotion when you're pissed off."

Goodyear, thinking the race was going to finish under yellow because of the lights, still had his fuel gauge and gearbox set to a caution-period mode, trying to make sure he had enough gas for a second-place finish. He was weaving back and forth in his Aurora G-force to keep the tires warm.

Suddenly, as Goodyear followed Luyendyk down the front stretch, the green waved from the flagstand at the start-finish line. The Dutchman stepped on his pedal and quickly accelerated back up to speed. Goodyear, perhaps mindful of his experience in 1995, got away much slower.

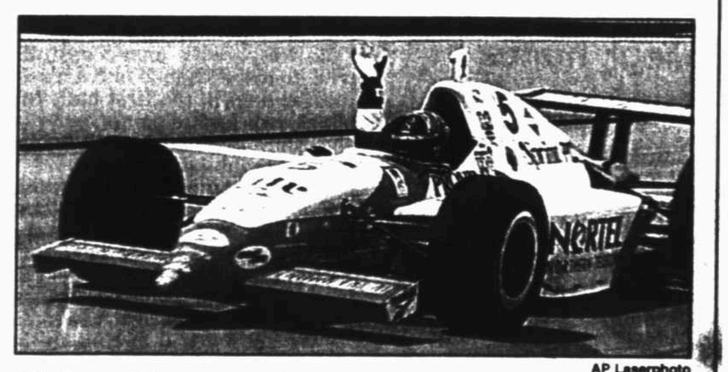

"When I saw the green flag, I just gassed it," Luyendyk said.

The race was over. Goodyear, who also finished second in 1992, never had a chance to catch his teammate over the final lap as Luyendyk cruised to his second Indy 500 victory.

"I don't know if I would have caught him," Goodyear said. "To have a chance to make the run I needed, I had to get a draft on him. Maybe then I could have dived into him (and attempted a pass) on turn three."

Lights attached to the outside fence around the oval remained on yellow while Luyendyk pulled away through turns one and two. They continued to flash as he led the Canadian into the backstretch. Finally, as the two cars approached turn three, the track-side lights

Jim Courier reacts to missing a shot during a match against Magnus Larsson Tuesday at the French Open. Courier, a two-time champion of the tounament, lost, 6-1, 6-2, 4-6, 1-6, 6-4.

Courier, Ivanisevic find exits

■ Two-time champ Courier ousted early by Larsson.

By Stephen Wilson
AP Sports Writer

PARIS — It was a shot Jim Courier normally could make with his eyes closed: a high-bouncing sitter near the net, just begging to be smashed into the open court for an easy winner.

But, on a day when virtually nothing went right for the former two-time French Open champion, Courier hacked the ball into the net. As the crowd gasped, he could only laugh and hold up his arms in mock apology.

The point summed up Courier's misery Tuesday as he slumped to a 6-1, 6-2, 4-6, 1-6, 6-4 defeat to Sweden's Magnus Larsson. The first-round loss was the American's earliest exit from his favorite tournament and confirmed the steady decline of a player once ranked No. 1.

"I was surprised how pathetic I was out there," said Courier, a winner in Paris in 1991 and 1992 and runner-up in 1993. "Today I felt like an alien out there. It was like I was out of my skin. I haven't felt like that in a long time in a big tournament."

Courier, who has slipped to No. 22 in the rankings, wasn't the only big name knocked out Tuesday by a big-hitting Swede.

No. 4 seed Goran Ivanisevic, never a clay-court master, lost 4-6, 6-3, 7-6 (7-3), 6-3 to Magnus Gustafsson in his latest Grand Slam failure. Ivanisevic converted only two of 18 break points and committed 76 unforced errors.

"When you have so many break-points, so many opportunities and you cannot win a game, something is wrong there," he said.

There was nothing wrong with No. 2 seed Michael Chang, who cruised to a 6-2, 6-3, 6-2 win over Rodolphe Gilbert.

On the women's side, favorites Martina Hingis and Steffi Graf were back in their element.

The top-seeded Hingis, playing her first match in seven weeks after injuring her knee falling off a horse, routed Henrieta Nagyova 6-0, 6-2.

"I would say I played almost perfect," the 16-year-old Swiss star said. "I was really motivated and excited. It was a very nice feeling to step on the court again. I was really missing it."

Graf, the No. 2 seed playing her third event after a three-month layoff with a knee injury, downed Paola Suarez 6-1, 6-4 as she opened her bid for her second straight and sixth French Open title.

Graf lost her way briefly after leading 5-1 in the second set, dropping three straight games. But she was never really in danger and showed no visible effects from her injury.

Heat think they can pull off miracle comeback vs. Bulls

By John Pacenti
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI — Beat Michael Jordan and the Chicago Bulls four straight times in the playoffs? Might as well ask the Miami Heat to walk on water, right?

The Heat believe they can perform the NBA equivalent of a miracle even if no one else does.

Miami, down 3-1 to the Bulls in the best-of-7 Eastern Conference finals, are 5-0 in elimination games this postseason following the 87-80 victory on Monday.

Game 5 is Wednesday night in Chicago, where the Heat nearly upset the Bulls in Games 1 and 2.

"The pressure is still on us," guard Voshon Lenard said after Tuesday's practice. "They have a comfort zone and we are going back to Chicago, and I'm sure they are still relaxed right now. But we are going to have to go there and make them unrelaxed."

Chicago has not lost four straight games since Jordan returned to basketball from his pro baseball experiment in March 1995. The Heat continue to draw on the previous series against the New York Knicks when they dug out of a 3-1 hole.

"It will be very interesting if we were to win the next game, then the whole series changes," forward P.J. Brown said.

After being embarrassed 98-74 in Game 3, Miami feels it may have somewhat solved Chicago's defense by catching the Bulls in transition.

"We've got to get up and down the court, let's get some easy shots, let's get some easy layups," point guard Tim Hardaway said. "In the half-court situation, they know all our stuff. They know what we are doing."

Another development is the offensive output of Jamal Mashburn and Isaac Austin. They combined for 29 points Monday and gave the Heat an additional inside threat besides Alonzo Mourning, who was busy battling Dennis Rodman.

"They are both very skilled players," coach Pat Riley said. "Ike has had a very timely impact. He has made some tough shots. Jamal had one of the best games he's had since he's been here."

The Bulls, as expected, are unconcerned.

"Even though they got a win, they know it's going to be as difficult as ever," Bulls center Brian Williams said. "We're never going to just roll over and quit — it's not this team's persona."

The Heat say that's not in their repertoire either. Just ask Orlando or New York. Both teams just needed one win against Miami to move on in the playoffs only to have the Heat end their season.

"I feel when our back's against the wall that's when this team plays its best basketball," Brown said.

Miami says it has showed it can play with the Bulls and could have easily won each of the first two games of the series. Miami led in both, but lost Game 1 84-77 and Game 2 75-68.

"We feel we can go up there and beat them if we don't turn the ball over and make shots," Hardaway said. "In the first game, we didn't make free throws. In the second game, we turned the ball over late in the game."

Riley, as usual, has his team believing in the seemingly impossible. He says, discounting Game 4, the Heat have limited the Bulls to 35 percent shooting and 84 points per game.

"I think we feel this is like the turn of the key," Riley said. "If we can play well and get a game up there, then we might be able to change their mindset."

finally switched to green.

"The people here have got to shake the cobwebs," Goodyear said, shaking his head in frustration. "It's the biggest race in the world and they can't get it right."

Chief steward Keith Ward took the blame for the confusion.

When Tony Stewart clipped the wall in turn four near the end of lap 198, the yellow flag was waved. But Ward was intent on running the final lap under green.

"In the hustle and bustle of things, the flagman put the green out, but the guy sitting to my left (in the control tower) who operates the lights didn't hear me," Ward said. "He left the yellow lights on. It was a mistake that shouldn't have been made."

Chief observer Claude Fisher was the man who didn't hear Ward's call to go back to green.

"It's just one of those things that happens," Ward said. "He didn't get the communication. Maybe it was as much my fault as it was his."

Coffey won't talk about Bowman

By John F. Bonfatti

PHILADELPHIA — Paul Coffey calmly talked about getting a chance to win his fifth Stanley Cup — until Detroit Red Wings coach Scotty Bowman was mentioned.

"I don't want to talk about any of that stuff," the defenseman said Tuesday after the Philadelphia Flyers finished their first day of preparation for the Stanley Cup finals, which start Saturday night against Detroit.

Coffey, the NHL's career leading scorer among defensemen, was clearly following that old piece of advice: if you can't say something nice about somebody, don't say anything at all.

Bowman was Coffey's coach at the start of the season before a bitter squabble ended with Coffey being traded, very much against his will, to the Hartford Whalers on Oct. 9.

Coffey worked furiously to get traded from the Whalers to a playoff contender, and his efforts paid off when the Whalers traded him to the Flyers in December.

Not long after that, Bowman wasn't very complimentary as he talked about the three-time winner of the Norris Trophy, which goes to the NHL's best defenseman.

"He's not one of my favorites," said Bowman, referring to Coffey as "a role player."

"A guy that can skate like he can, has all that talent, why can't he play defense?" Bowman asked. "He's not as good on the power play as people think. The main thing he can do is carry the puck up the ice, but his work at the point isn't that great."

Bowman also said Coffey, who won three Stanley Cups with Edmonton and a fourth with Pittsburgh, had little impact on the Penguins' championship team.

"He didn't win the Cup in Pittsburgh, Mario Lemieux won the Cup in Pittsburgh — Mario and (then-coach) Bob Johnson," said Bowman, who was Pittsburgh's director of player development then.

Earlier in the season, after his trade to Philadelphia, Coffey used an expletive to describe Bowman. But Tuesday, Coffey refused to get into a war of words with his former coach.

"I'm not going against Scotty," he said. "It's Philadelphia against Detroit, plain and simple."

Asked what makes Bowman, who has led teams to six Stanley Cups, a good coach, Coffey said flatly, "I don't know."

While Bowman was glad to be rid of Coffey, the Flyers are glad to have him. During the regular season, he had 26 points in 37 games for Philadelphia.

INDY: Luyendyk claims second title

win in 1995 when he was penalized late in the race for passing the pace car on a restart.

Luyendyk, who slipped back to fourth following his final pit stop, had his only close call with 15 laps to go.

He was chasing Stewart for third place on lap 185 when the two drove out of turn two onto the straightaway. Luyendyk moved left. So did Stewart. That left Luyendyk with nowhere else to go but the grass.

"I never drove through the grass at 220 mph, but Tony put me there, which I didn't really appreciate," he said. "But it worked out well for me."

For a while it appeared rookie Jeff Ward was going to run away to victory. He moved out to leads of more than 13 seconds in the late going before pitting for fuel, along with Stewart, during a caution period on lap 192.

That gave the lead to Goodyear, who had been running second. But it also moved Luyendyk to the runner-up spot. And he took advantage of that position to grab the lead moments after the green flag came out again.

Ward, who later won rookie of the year, wound up third, followed by Lazier, who fell off the pace late in the race with an engine problem, and Stewart, the last driver on the lead lap.

Though the official purse of more than $8 million won't be announced until Wednesday, Luyendyk and the Treadway Racing team are expected to collect more than $1 million of it.

This was the second Indy run as part of the fledgling Indy Racing League, the brainchild of speedway president Tony George. His battle with the rival Championship Auto Racing Teams has kept the biggest names and teams of the Indy-car sport away from this race since last year.

It was a change in the IRL's technical rules that made this year's race so uncertain with the all-new chassis and engines. But, despite questions about the reliability of the new nonturbocharged motors, 13 cars were still running at the end.

After a rainout on Sunday, the day it was supposed to be run, the race got started on Monday only to be stopped after 15 laps — again by rain.

Tuesday's weather was just fine, and everything went off on schedule, but only about 100,000 spectators filled the track's 320,000 seats.

After three cars crashed and three went out with engine problems Monday, the remaining 29 cars were started single file with two laps under the caution flag.

Stewart, who wound up leading a race-high 64 laps, was in front with Luyendyk right behind.

Robby Gordon, who was fourth on the restart, drove past Robbie Buhl to take third in the first turn and was passing Luyendyk on the back straightaway when he suddenly slowed and pulled off onto the warmup lane.

Gordon, a former CART regular and now a full-time NASCAR Winston Cup racer, found himself engulfed in flames from a fuel fire. He threw his steering wheel out of the car, scrambled out of the cockpit and began rolling in the grass.

"I was coming by Luyendyk on the backstretch," Gordon said. "I felt all this heat. I realized I was on fire. ... It's very difficult. Our car was so good."

Gordon had minor burns on his right hand and wrist, left wrist and right thigh. He was treated and released at the infield hospital.

Officials tried for a restart on lap 23, but this time sprint car king and Indy rookie Steve Kinser slammed into the rear of the slower car driven by Eliseo Salazar. That set off a chain reaction that took out Mark Dismore and two-time Indy runner-up Roberto Guerrero.

"Guerrero must not have been looking ahead," Dismore said. "He hit me, probably 50 mph faster. It tore the back of the car up. We had a hell of a chance here and I cannot believe guys are not looking way up ahead. I mean, on a restart 20 laps into the race — I can't believe this."

Finally, the green flag came out for lap 29 and the remaining cars managed to get in some racing between incidents.

The next big incident came on lap 114 when the cars driven by rookie Billy Roe and Paul Durant touched wheels in the third turn, sending both hurtling into the outside wall.

"I didn't even see Paul," Roe said. "I wasn't worried about him because I'd already passed him."

Roe was able to climb out of his battered car, but Durant, who was briefly unconscious, was in good condition at Methodist Hospital with a broken pelvis.

There was another two-car incident on lap 136 when rookie Jack Miller spun into the turn-two wall after a rear suspension part apparently broke as he went into the corner. Mike Groff, the IRL season point leader coming into the race, spun to avoid Miller. Groff didn't hit anything, but he did flatten all four tires. Officials made him get out of the car while it was towed to the pits, but he was allowed to continue.

Kinser was also part of another crash when he spun after brushing the slower-moving car of Buzz Calkins and hit the wall. Lyn St. James, the only woman in the race, barely missed Kinser's car and also tagged the wall.

Daly returns with new resolve

By Ron Sirak
AP Golf Writer

DUBLIN, Ohio — John Daly knows what he needs to do. Whenever he feels he is about to fall off the wagon all he has to do is remember the night he hit rock bottom.

"I want to remember that night the rest of my life, how bad it really was," Daly said Tuesday at Muirfield Village Golf Club, site of this week's Memorial Tournament. "If I could do that, it's going to get me through a tough day."

Daly is preparing for his first tournament since he withdrew from the Players Championship on March 28 following a drunken spree in which he smashed up a hotel room.

"When I woke up," he said of that outburst, "I mean my agents were there, my caddie was there and Donnie (his best friend) was there, and I saw the sadness in their eyes."

Two days later, Daly and Donnie Crabtree drove straight through from Memphis, Tenn., to Palm Springs, Calif., and the Betty Ford Center.

In rapid fashion, his wife, Paulette, filed for divorce and Wilson ended its lucrative contract with him.

Now — eight weeks later, 32 pounds lighter and with a new equipment company backing him — Daly is ready to return to competitive golf. He's been down this road before, returning to the tour in 1993 after alcohol rehabilitation.

That stint of sobriety ended late last summer with experiments at social drinking that soon lapsed into alcoholism.

This time, he says, it will be different.

"This time I learned an awful lot," Daly said. "I actually read books. I surround myself with people that love me for the problem that I have."

The key change, Daly said, is his commitment to aftercare. Daly's contract with Callaway requires that he participate in such a program.

Guerrero crashes again at Indy

By Hank Lowenkron
AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS — Another Indy 500, another crash for Roberto Guerrero.

Guerrero was involved in his ninth crash at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway since he was critically injured in a wreck during tire testing in 1987.

The crash on Tuesday wasn't as serious. His crew was able to repair his car and send him back into the race before a steering problem finally ended his run after 95 laps.

Guerrero, driving in his 13th Indy 500, finished 25th.

The crash, during a caution period on the 23rd lap, also involved Eliseo Salazar, Mark Dismore and Steve Kinser.

DOUBLE WHAMMY: Eliseo Salazar was involved in two accidents Tuesday, but neither kept him from the race. United States Auto Club officials did.

Salazar was in the pits for 20 minutes after a four-driver crash in the 23rd lap. He returned only to tangle with Steve Kinser in the 94th lap.

Salazar's crew wrongly thought his car could be taken to the garage for repairs and then returned to the track.

"They wouldn't let us through the gate," Salazar said.

USAC officials rejected the team's appeal of the ruling.

ANOTHER TRADITION FALLS: Two days of rain forced Katie Guerrero to give up her traditional race-day spot at Indy 500.

For the first time in 13 races, she wasn't in the pits to root for husband Roberto because their baby-sitter had to return to her regular job Tuesday. Rain delayed the race Sunday and Monday.

Mrs. Guerrero flew home to San Juan Capistrano, Calif., Monday night to be with the couple's three children, Marco, Evan Michael and Haley.

TV NUMBERS: Nielsen TV ratings from Sunday and Monday must have cheered up Indy 500 officials.

Rain postponed Sunday's race and halted the race after 15 laps on Monday.

But Sunday ratings ranged from a healthy 3.6 for the pre-race program to 4.3 for the afternoon telecast, which included interviews, features and highlights of past races.

Monday ratings were 5.1 for the pre-race segment and 7.3 for the 12 p.m.-1:45 p.m. EDT slot, which included the first 15 laps.

Each ratings point represents 970,000 households, meaning, for example, more than 3 million households tuned into Sunday's pre-race program.

"That shows how strongly our audience feels about this event even with only 15 laps of race action over seven hours and 15 minutes of air time," said Bill Donaldson, Indianapolis Motor Speedway executive vice president.

The numbers for NASCAR Winston Cup events have ranged from 4.0 to 4.6 this year while the two Indy-car series, Championship Auto Racing Teams and Indy Racing League, have had ratings of 1.0 to 1.2.

WATSON'S BACK: A.J. Watson, the Indianapolis Motor Speedway's Hall of Fame car builder, manager and mechanic from the 1960s, was back on pit road for the 50th time.

Watson's shop near suburban Clermont was used this month by PDM Racing and its drivers, Tyce Carlson and Mark Dismore. Watson accompanied the team to the 81st Indy 500.

Watson was involved with eight winning cars at Indy in some capacity: 1955 (Bob Sweikert), 1956 (Pat Flaherty), 1959 (Rodger Ward), 1960 (Jim Rathman), 1961 (A.J. Foyt), 1962 (Ward), 1963 (Parnelli Jones) and 1964 (Foyt).

HELPING HAND: Jim Guthrie made Tuesday's restart of the Indy 500 by borrowing a water pump from rival Robby Gordon, but it really wasn't worth the effort. More mechanical problems forced Guthrie out after 43 laps.

Guthrie's Aurora G Force was spewing water in the pits when the race was halted Monday. His Blueprint Racing team managed to fix a broken clamp and later discovered the water pump had been damaged.

With help from Gordon's team, Guthrie started Tuesday seven laps down. But the engine blew and he finished 26th.

Guthrie's three-car team, which also includes Claude Bourbonnais and Sam Schmidt, had engine problems all month.

All three cars received rebuilt motors over the weekend just so they could start the race. But engine problems forced Bourbonnais and Schmidt out Monday.

RACE RESTART: Because of the rain delay, the familiar command at the beginning of the Indy 500 on Tuesday had a slightly unfamiliar ring.

Mari Hulman George, daughter of late speedway owner Tony Hulman, told the drivers: "Lady and gentlemen, restart your engines."

She had told them to start their engines on Monday, but rain interrupted the race after 15 laps.

Her 92-year-old mother, Mary Fendrich Hulman, had given the command in recent years but was unable to attend. She is in an Indianapolis nursing home.

EQUIPMENT NOTES: Firestone, which returned to Indy-car racing in 1995 after a 21-year absence, got its 50th Indy 500 victory Tuesday. In addition to winner Arie Luyendyk, Firestone had its radial racing tires on three other top-five finishers. Aurora engines took the top 11 spots, including the first three finishers for the Aurora G Force.

Jacks sign two college mates

The Odessa Jackalopes, a Western Professional Hockey League expansion franchise, have signed Dan Lavergne and Nick Lamia, a pair of teammates who starred together at Colby (Maine) College.

Lavergne, 22 and Lamia, 23, played side-by-side on the same line at Colby, leading the Division II school to the East Coast Athletic Conference championship. They rank second and fourth respectively on the school's all-time scoring list.

This past season, Lavergne was the nation's seventh-leading scorer while Lamia was 13th. Lamia was the MVP of the NCAA Division II Senior All-Star Game.

The Jackalopes will add several more players on June 2 with the WPHL expansion draft.

UTAH: Jazz leads Rockets, 3-2

scored 13 and Jeff Hornacek 11.

Barkley, who unsuccessfully tried to draw Malone into a trash-talking duel in the first half, finished with just 10 points on 3-of-6 shooting. And he did almost nothing after making two 3-pointers in the first 3 1/2 minutes of the game.

Part of the reason was Malone, who held his ground against Barkley in one-on-one isolations better than he did last weekend when the Rockets won two straight games to tie the series.

"We got the ball to Karl in the same places we got it to him Sunday," Utah coach Jerry Sloan said. "He seemed to be a little rushed Sunday because Olajuwon's so quick to the ball. Tonight he got the ball a few more times where he likes it. We set good screens for him and he had a solid game."

Utah took the lead for good on a jumper off the fast break by Stockton with 6:36 left in the second quarter that made it 37-36. The lead fluctuated between one and nine points the rest of the way, and Houston still had a chance to catch up late in the fourth quarter.

Barkley made the second of two foul shots with 2:27 left to pull the Rockets to 92-87, but Hornacek answered with an high-arcing layup over Olajuwon.

Olajuwon made two foul shots with 1:38 left to make it 94-89, and Stockton threw the ball away on Utah's next possession.

But with a chance to pull within three, Olajuwon missed a jumper from the lane — the same shot he has been killing the Jazz with throughout the series.

Barkley then blocked Malone's jumper and forced a jump ball, but Malone — with the crowd chanting "M-V-P, M-V-P" for the first time all night — won the jump ball.

Malone was fouled with 13 seconds left and made both free throws.

FRENCH: Ivanisevic going back home

(From 1C)

"I felt really good out there," Graf said. "In general, I thought it was a good first round."

Germany's Anke Huber, No. 8, became the first women's seed eliminated when she was beaten 6-3, 4-6, 6-3 by Kimberly Po. Po of Rolling Hills, Calif., is ranked 16th and just missed out being seeded last week.

Courier made 35 unforced errors in a wild and erratic match against Larsson — a French Open semifinalist in 1994 who is now ranked No. 39.

"The way I played was pretty sad actually," Courier said. "If I was happy after this match, maybe I would look in the mirror and be a little bit worried, actually."

After dropping only three games in the first two sets and going up a break at 4-2 in the third, Larsson's game fell apart and the match turned around completely. Courier ran off 11 of the next 12 games to lead 1-0 in the fifth.

"Instead of making balls, he started missing them," Courier said. "He couldn't hit a ball for a while. That was like me in the first couple of sets."

But Larsson recovered in the fifth set, breaking Courier in the third game. That lead stood up the rest of the way, with Larsson serving out the match at love in the 10th game.

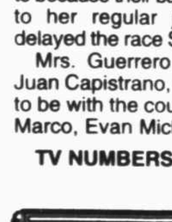

"I've been in some pretty weird matches, but this was as weird as they come," Courier said.

As philosophical as ever, Courier said he would fly home to prepare for Wimbledon and put the clay-court season behind him.

"It's one bad match," he said. "The sun is going to rise again tomorrow for sure. I'll be on a plane following it."

In a minor upset, No. 14 Tim Henman of Britain was eliminated 6-2, 2-6, 1-6, 6-2, 6-4 by France's Olivier Delaitre.

An impressive winner was unseeded Mark Philippoussis of Australia, who served 29 aces in a five-set victory over Nicklas Kulti and established himself as a dangerous floater.

Rangers drub Jays with Cedeno's bat

Associated Press

TORONTO — John Burkett pitched seven strong innings and Domingo Cedeno had three hits and three RBIs as the Texas Rangers routed the Toronto Blue Jays 15-5 Tuesday night.

Burkett (4-3), who had allowed 18 hits, 12 runs and four homers in his two previous starts, gave up only two runs on seven hits. He struck out six and didn't walk a batter in his first complete game of the season.

Texas used six straight singles, including RBI hits by Will Clark, Dean Palmer, Lee Stevens and Cedeno, to take a 15-2 lead in the eighth.

Robert Person (0-3), who came off the disabled list earlier in the day, gave up seven runs on five hits in 3 2-3 innings. He struck out three and walked three in his first start since May 7.

After Ivan Rodriguez doubled to score Damon Buford in the Rangers first, Rusty Greer broke an 0-for-12 slump with an RBI double for a 2-0 lead.

Texas took a 7-1 lead with five runs in the fourth. Buford had an RBI double, Bill Ripken scored on a wild pitch, Greer had a run-scoring single and Juan Gonzalez chased Person with a two-run double.

Ripken added a sacrifice fly in the fifth, and Cedeno had a two-run triple in the seventh to make it 11-2.

Carlos Delgado hit a two-run homer for Toronto. The Blue Jays also scored on Charlie O'Brien's RBI single and Orlando Merced's RBI double.

Tigers 6, Angels 2

DETROIT — Justin Thompson pitched seven shutout innings of two-hit ball to lead Detroit.

Travis Fryman homered for the Tigers, who won for the fourth time in five games and ruined Anaheim left-hander Matt Perisho's major-league debut. Perisho was called up from Double-A Midland after compiling a 5-2 record.

The Angels have lost three straight following a five-game winning streak.

Thompson (5-3) allowed two hits — singles by Craig Grebeck and Dave Hollins — with six strikeouts and three walks.

Anaheim hadn't scored since the ninth inning of a 4-3 loss to Toronto on Sunday when Jim Leyritz connected for a two-run homer, his seventh, in the ninth inning off Doug Brocail.

Perisho (0-1) gave up five runs and six hits in five-plus innings. The 21-year-old struck out six and walked four.

■ AL Roundup

Red Sox 7, Brewers 6

BOSTON — Pinch-hitter Mike Stanley's RBI single broke a seventh-inning tie, giving Boston a victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

The Red Sox trailed 6-4 in the sixth before Mo Vaughn doubled and Reggie Jefferson hit his seventh home run to tie it. But with two men on and two out in the seventh, manager Jimy Williams replaced Jefferson with Stanley.

White Sox 8, Indians 2

CHICAGO — Albert Belle hit a grand slam against his former team and extended his hitting streak to a career-high 22 games.

Doug Drabek (4-3) pitched seven strong innings as the White Sox gained a split of the two-game series.

Belle had dropped a fly ball for an error and was 0-for-2 with a strikeout when he came to the plate in the fourth with Chicago leading 4-0. Albie Lopez (2-3) walked Frank Thomas intentionally to load the bases and Belle then lined his 10th homer of the season over the fence in right.

Athletics 8, Royals 6, 10 innings

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Jose Canseco and Scott Spiezio had two RBIs apiece when Oakland batted around in the 10th and the A's held on for a wild win.

Kansas City took a 2-0 lead into the ninth before the A's — held to one hit for eight-plus innings by Jose Rosado — got a two-run homer by Mark McGwire and a solo shot from Scott Spiezio to take the lead.

Twins 11, Mariners 10

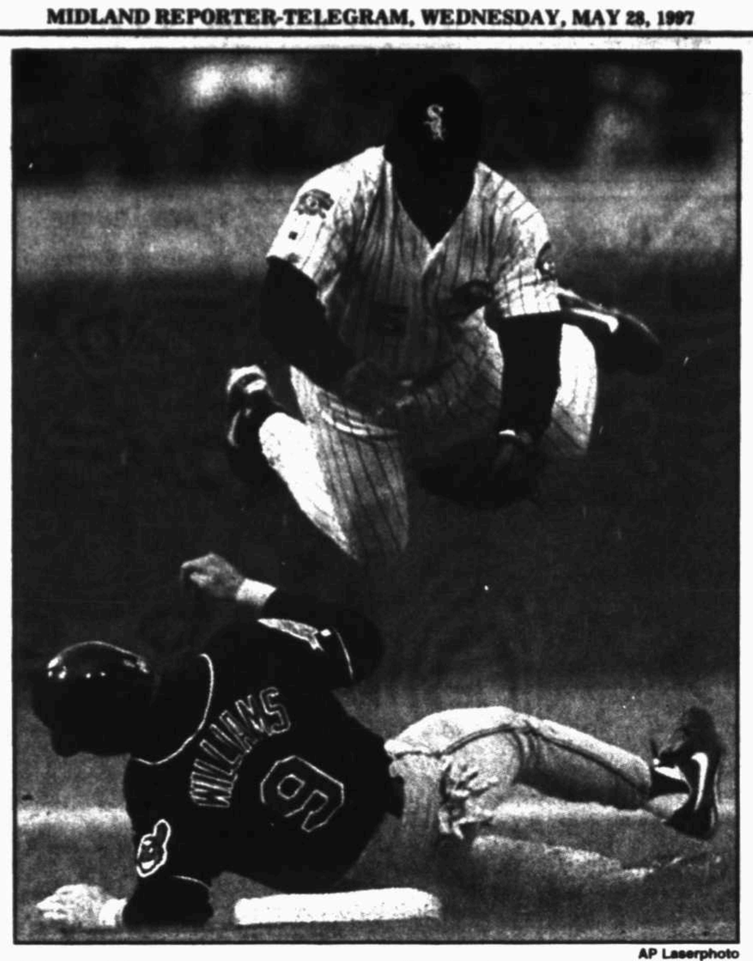

MINNEAPOLIS — Norm Charlton walked Chuck Knoblauch with the bases loaded, capping a six-run ninth-inning rally for Minnesota.

Seattle's ninth-inning collapse spoiled a game in which Ken Griffey Jr. and Joey Cora each set records. Griffey hit his 23rd homer, breaking his own major league mark for homers through May. Cora went 4-for-6 to extend his hitting streak to a team-record 22 games, which also tied the AL mark for switch hitters.

Orioles 10, Yankees 6

NEW YORK — Pete Incaviglia drove in four runs and Jeffrey Hammonds hit a three-run homer as the Baltimore Orioles routed the New York Yankees for their eighth win in 10 games.

Kenny Rogers (3-3), who has just one win in six starts since April 23, was pounded for nine runs — six earned — and six hits in 4 1-3 innings.

Homer haunts Hurricanes

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Shortstop Alex Cora crumpled to the ground. Second baseman Rudy Gomez stood stunned.

Warren Morris' drive had just cleared the right-field fence for a two-out homer in the bottom of the ninth, giving LSU a 9-8 victory over Miami and seizing the 1996 College World Series championship from the Hurricanes.

"There's no question it's the most traumatic thing I've ever gone through as a coach," Hurricanes coach Jim Morris said. "It took a little time to get over that."

It also pushed the Hurricanes to return to Omaha with another chance in this year's series, which begins Friday. Miami plays UCLA Saturday.

"I guess it is a motivating thing, and I think it is in the back of everybody's mind," Morris said.

It was another dramatic homer that gave the Hurricanes their shot to return to Omaha a 16th time. Jason Michaels hit a two-out, ninth-inning grand slam to beat Arizona State 7-6 Sunday. It forced a second Atlantic Regional final that Miami also won 6-5.

"It's kind of reverse of what happened to us up in Omaha," Morris said. "I really feel for (Arizona State coach) Pat Murphy and his club because I know how much that hurts when something like that happens. Arizona State's got a great club and we were fortunate enough to get out of the regional."

Three of the Hurricane players who played in last year's shocker are back this year, including relief ace Robbie Morrison, who threw that fateful pitch to LSU's Morris.

"We need to get our bats going," the Miami coach said. "We've won with a combination of everything, but our bullpen has been the stable part of our game here at the regional."

The Hurricanes also have something else going for them — incentive. They want to forget, as quickly as possible, that home run sailing over the right-field fence.

Giants beat Astros in last at bat again

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Stan Javier's single off the glove of shortstop Ricky Gutierrez drove in the winning run with one out in the 10th inning as the San Francisco Giants defeated the Houston Astros 5-4 Tuesday.

Barry Bonds, who ended Monday's 4-3 San Francisco win over Houston by leading off the ninth inning with a homer, doubled to open the 10th. One out later, Mark Lewis was hit by a pitch from Billy Wagner (2-2).

Javier followed with a grounder that Gutierrez dove for and knocked into shallow left field, allowing Bonds to score standing up. It was Javier's third RBI of the game.

The Giants have won nine games this season in their final at-bat.

Rod Beck (3-2) pitched one inning for the win.

Jeff Kent led off the fifth with his 11th homer of the season for the Giants. Javier had a bases-loaded walk in the first and an RBI double in a two-run fourth that included a run-scoring single by pitcher Mark Gardner.

Gutierrez had a pair of RBI singles among his three hits for Houston.

The Astros got three runs in the fourth on an RBI double by Luis Gonzalez, an RBI single by Gutierrez and a throwing error by second baseman Kent.

Gutierrez tied the game 4-4 in the sixth with another run-scoring single, but the Astros left the bases loaded against reliever Rene Arocha.

Cardinals 8, Rockies 6

DENVER — Alan Benes overcame an ugly fourth inning and helped his cause with a career-high three hits to lead St. Louis.

Benes (4-4), winning for the first time since April 30, went six innings, allowing 11 hits and five runs. He was more effective at the plate, going 3-for-3 with two RBIs.

The Cardinals, snapping a seven-game losing streak at Coors Field, roughed up John Thomson (0-4) for six runs over the first four innings, taking a 6-0 lead that was identical to the one they squandered in Monday's 9-7 loss.

Colorado rallied within 6-5, but the Cardinals got run-scoring singles from John Mabry and Gary Gaetti in the seventh.

Dennis Eckersley pitched the ninth for his ninth save.

Colorado's Larry Walker went 3-for-4 to raise his major league-leading average to .409.

■ NL Roundup

Cubs 8, Pirates 7

PITTSBURGH — Brant Brown, who had only eight hits all season, hit a three-run homer and Brian McRae, pinch-hitting for Brown, had a two-run single to lead Chicago past Pittsburgh.

Jeremi Gonzalez (1-0) won his major-league debut for the Cubs despite constantly pitching in trouble during his 5 1-3 innings. He allowed six hits, including Kevin Young's solo homer, and three runs.

Phillies 2, Reds 1

CINCINNATI — Curt Schilling stopped Barry Larkin's streak of reaching base at 13 — one shy of the NL record — and pitched a complete game as Philadelphia beat Cincinnati.

Rob Butler had an RBI single and Rico Brogna homered off rookie Brett Tomko (0-1) as the Phillies ended Cincinnati's longest winning streak of the season at four games. Cincinnati came away with the worst record in the major leagues (18-32), one game worse than Philadelphia.

Expos 5, Mets 4

MONTREAL — Darrin Fletcher homered and pinch-hitter F.P. Santangelo hit a tiebreaking sacrifice fly in the fifth inning as Montreal rallied to beat the New York Mets.

With the Expos trailing 4-2 in the fifth, Fletcher led off with a homer off Mets starter Mark Clark (5-3). Henry Rodriguez walked, Joe Orsulak doubled one out later and Doug Strange then tied it with an RBI single.

Rangers-Mariners rivalry turning into one of baseball's recent best

By Ken Daley
The Dallas Morning News

ARLINGTON — Baseball's greatest rivalries are those steeped in tradition. The Dodgers and the Giants. The Yankees and the Red Sox. Matchups such as these evoke images of the game's most memorable battles and dramatic pennant races.

The best rivalries require more than two competitive clubs skirmishing in the same division. History, geography, fan interest, respect and a dash of bad blood between opponents also are required to give a rivalry life. And with two powerhouse teams arriving to prominence together the past two years, the Rangers and Seattle Mariners could be in the early stages of a special rivalry themselves.

"It seems like the last few series with those guys have meant a lot. And whenever the top two teams in the division are playing — whether it's early in the season, in the middle or late — it's going to mean a lot."

Round One of this year's bout between the American League West heavyweights will begin Wednesday in Seattle, with the start of a two-game series in the Kingdome. The Mariners will make their first visit to Arlington for a four-game series starting June 19.

"To me, rivalries happen over a period of time," Rangers manager Johnny Oates said. "Our two teams haven't won enough yet. And we're so far away from each other geographically, it's tough. But you can get a lot of anticipation and excitement about facing a certain team, like we have right now.

"It has the possibility of becoming a real rivalry."

Despite the one-game-at-a-time company lines, it's safe to say both teams have been aware of the dates for some time. And the budding rivalry has both franchises enjoying a sensation previously reserved for other cities.

"For a while, we were both the laughing stocks as far as our division looked," Seattle outfielder Jay Buhner said. "I'll put our division up against anybody's now."

The Mariners — who began play in 1977 — won their first division title in 1995, beating the California Angels in a one-game playoff and finishing 4 1/2 games ahead of the third-place Rangers. Last year, Texas turned the tables, winning its first championship by 4 1/2 games over the second-place Mariners. The Rangers did it despite losing 10 of 13 games to Seattle for the second year in a row.

"They pretty much spanked us last year," Palmer said, "But we still went out and did our job and won the division."

The Rangers would prefer setting a different tone against the Mariners early this season. Over the past three seasons, Seattle has won 29 of the last 36 meetings, including 14 of 19 at The Ballpark in Arlington. The Mariners have won 19 of the last 22 at the Kingdome.

"I haven't heard anyone in this clubhouse talking about that," Mariners closer Norm Charlton said of his club's recent dominance. "If we worry about the Rangers and not us, they're going to kick (us) ... We know the Rangers are going to be tough competition. That's no secret. But I think we've got enough to worry about with our own team right now, and I don't think Will Clark is worried about me."

Clark and Buhner exchanged jabs in print during the spring. Buhner said the Mariners' 4 1/2-game deficit last year would not have existed had Seattle pitching ace Randy Johnson not been limited by back problems to eight starts. Clark pointed out the Rangers won despite playing 28 games without injured AL Most Valuable Player Juan Gonzalez, and added the Rangers didn't complain about their injuries.

The Mariners were further hurt by the absence of star outfielder Ken Griffey Jr., fourth in MVP voting, for 22 games due to a collection of injuries.

"I think it's only common sense that, had we had Randy, the scenario would have been different last year," Buhner said. "That's a no-brainer. And having Randy back is going to pay big dividends for us."

Seattle's Jeff Fassero, whose addition last winter beefed up the Seattle rotation, said, "This team, last year, finished just short of Texas, and they had lost their top starting pitcher. I think, going head-to-head with them, I like this lineup better than theirs." Johnson, scheduled to pitch Wednesday's series opener, has not missed a turn this season and is 6-1 with a 3.36 earned run average and 81 strikeouts in 67 innings. His presence is a key to this year's race. But the fact the Rangers stayed within one game of Seattle during Gonzalez's April absence with a thumb injury could be, too.

"I think everybody's pretty happy to have overcome the things we have," Palmer said. "You'd want to win these games against them, but it is early in the season and we can't take it like it's life or death. I think it's going to come down to the end."

Both teams have traded grips on first place early this season, despite a rash of injuries and pitching disarray. The Rangers played April without Gonzalez (torn thumb ligament) and lost starting pitchers Ken Hill (shoulder) and Roger Pavlik (elbow) for much of May. Second baseman Mark McLemore also remains out with a hand injury and will not be available for this series.

Seattle also has struggled with 40 percent of its rotation. Top-three starters Johnson, Fassero and Jamie Moyer have been solid, but Scott Sanders, Dennis Martinez and Bob Wolcott have been disappointing in the fourth and fifth spots. The Mariners also benched starting third baseman Russ Davis because he was on a 50-error pace, briefly sat the slumping Buhner, and last week were dismayed to see Charlton blow two consecutive save chances to cost Seattle victories.

Both teams have had their problems, but each bringing a fresh division championship to the table should make this year's rivalry more combustible than ever.

"They got to taste what the champagne tastes like last year," Charlton said. "Once you get a taste of that, you don't forget that and you want more. And guys who taste it don't want to be watching someone else play in October."

Seattle manager Lou Piniella had to watch the Rangers play last October. He knows to reverse roles this year, continuing to beat up on the Rangers could provide an important psychological edge.

"We're looking forward to a battle with Texas," Piniella said. "Both are good, solid teams. I have a lot of respect for their manager. It's going to be fun. I think this has turned into a good, healthy race, for the division and for baseball."

Prices retreat

NEW YORK — Crude oil prices fell Tuesday on technical and seasonal concerns as traders returned from the extended Memorial Day weekend.

Crude oil for delivery in July settled at $20.79 per barrel, down 84 cents at the New York Mercantile Exchange. Unleaded gasoline for June delivery settled at 65.38 cents a gallon, down 1.54 cents.

Peter Beutel, an oil industry analyst at Cameron Hanover Inc., said technical factors as well as the fact that gasoline prices usually peak before the start of the busiest driving season hurt prices.

Home heating oil for delivery in June settled at 55.27 cents a gallon, down 2.25 cents. Natural gas prices were higher, with contracts for delivery in June settling at $2.363 per 1,000 cubic feet, up 7.8 cents.

Dollar rises

NEW YORK — The dollar rose broadly Tuesday on a mix of healthy U.S. economic data, heightened prospects for a weak single European currency and remarks by Switzerland's top banker that caused a selloff in the Swiss franc.

In New York, the dollar cost 116.68 yen, up from 115.66 Friday and 116.43 Monday in Europe. U.S. markets were closed Monday in observance of Memorial Day. The dollar cost 1.7055 marks in New York, up from 1.6935 Friday and 1.6901 Monday in Europe. The pound cost $1.6316 in New York, down from $1.6345 Friday and $1.6405 Monday in Europe.

The dollar rose to 1.4212 Swiss francs in New York trading, up from 1.4032 Friday and 1.4008 Monday in Europe.

Other late-dollar rates in New York compared with Friday: 5.7635 French francs, up from 5.7040; 1,680.00 Italian lire, up from 1,666.00; 1.3840 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3743.

Record Dow

NEW YORK — Big-name technology shares drove leading stock averages to new highs Tuesday, but the broad market struggled as interest rates jumped back above a troubling threshold in bond trading.

The Dow Jones industrial average erased an early 43-point skid and then flirted with the 7,400-mark, rising 37.50 to 7,383.41 for its second straight record close.

The technology-heavy Nasdaq composite index, which returned to record territory on Friday after a four-month drought, broke above 1,400 for the first time.

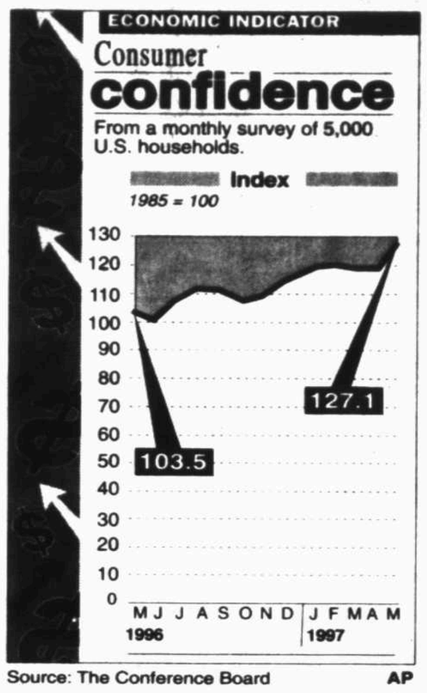

Several other broad-market indexes also closed at record highs for the second straight session, but analysts found the advance unimpressive, noting there were more declining issues than advancers on the New York Stock Exchange.

Declining issues outnumbered advancers by a narrow margin on the New York Stock Exchange, where volume was totaled just 435.93 million shares.

The Standard & Poor's 500-stock list rose 2.68 to 849.71, and the NYSE's composite index rose 0.39 to 440.67. Both big-company measures closed at record highs Friday.

The American Stock Exchange composite index rose 0.50 to 598.44. The Nasdaq composite index rose 19.49 to 1,409.21, led by Intel, up 6 1/8 to 169 5/16; Microsoft, up 3 3/4 to 126 5/8; and Dell Computer, up 6 to 113 1/4.

■ Sharp jump in consumer confidence exceeds economists' expectations.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Americans' confidence in the economy climbed in May to its highest level since 1969, when Richard Nixon was in the White House and the Vietnam War was raging.

With employment high and inflation low, the Conference Board reported Tuesday that its consumer confidence index rose from a revised 118.5 in April to 127.1 in May.

The jump surpassed Wall Street economists' predictions for a slight gain in May.

"For years, consumers have been plagued by job insecurity," said Dan Seto, an economist at Nikko Securities International Co. "But we are seeing very strong employment conditions today, and that's creating a very favorable environment for consumers."

Consumer confidence hasn't been this high since August 1969, when the index hit 131.7. With American industry supreme around the world, the United States was undergoing nearly nine years of uninterrupted growth, the longest expansion in U.S. history.

The consumer confidence index, calculated from a 1985 base of 100, is derived from responses to questions sent to 5,000 households nationwide by the Conference Board, a private research organization. The survey asks people about such matters as job availability and home-buying plans.

Consumer sentiment is important because consumer spending accounts for two-thirds of the nation's economic activity.

The economy has been expanding for more than six years now. In March, the Federal Reserve raised interest rates as a pre-emptive strike against inflation.

Anthony Chan, vice president and chief economist at Banc One Investment Advisors in Columbus, Ohio, said the strong economy increases the chances the Fed will raise interest rates again this year.

Separately Tuesday, a poll of 243 economists by the National Association of Business Economists reported 84 percent expect some increase in interest rates — a quarter or a half of a percentage point — over the next six months.

But another poll by the trade group — this of 37 forecasters — predicted slowing consumer consumption will reduce economic growth through the end of 1998. That should keep a lid on inflation but boost consumer prices by about 2.8 percent this year and next.

The survey of forecasters also said the nation's unemployment rate, which dipped to a 23-year low of 4.9 percent in April, should average 5.2 percent this year and 5.4 percent in 1998.

NAFTA programs to be reviewed

■ Request for fast track status brings NAFTA under heightened scrutiny by Congress.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Now that the White House has signaled its intent to ask Congress for the authority to negotiate new trade agreements, NAFTA's impact on the U.S. economy is in for a heightened round of scrutiny.

Before the Clinton administration can begin negotiations to expand NAFTA to Latin America — or start talks on other trade alliances — it requires permission from Congress.

Restless lawmakers from both political parties had been assailing the White House in recent weeks for failing to ask Congress for the so-called "fast-track" authority.

Under fast track, lawmakers agree not to rewrite trade agreements, limiting themselves to an up-or-down vote. Without fast track, the administration essentially is powerless to engage in talks with other countries because any commitment made at the bargaining table could be undone by Congress.

After months of inaction, the White House announced last week that it would submit fast-track legislation to Congress in September.

The congressional battle promises to be a reprise of the bruising fight in 1993 to ratify NAFTA. The alliance of labor unions, environmental groups and liberal Democrats that fought NAFTA's passage already is gearing up to block fast track.

"It's going to be a really ugly debate," said Lori Wallach, head of Public Citizen's Global Trade Watch, which worked vigorously to derail NAFTA and opposes its expansion.

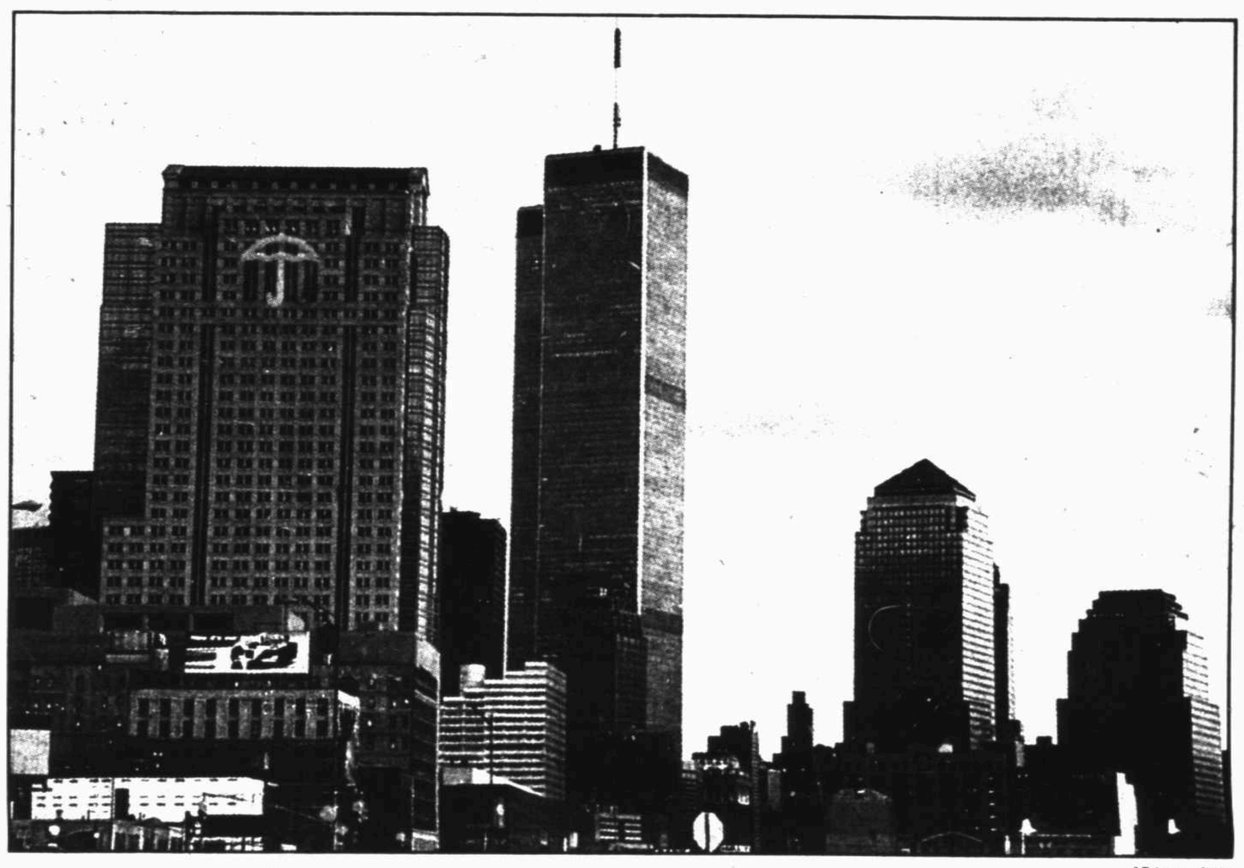

That in mind, administration officials are seeking to distance fast track from NAFTA. "I believe that fast track and NAFTA ought to be de-linked because fast track is about considerably more," Ira Shapiro, senior counsel for the U.S. Trade Representative's office, told the Congressional Border Caucus last week.

"The question of our global trade policy goes beyond Mexico," he said.

But NAFTA's first 40 months loom over the debate of expanded trade, with both sides claiming widely divergent results.

Boosters say NAFTA has prompted major increases in U.S. exports to Canada and Mexico, stimulated domestic industrial production, and helped cushion the blow of Mexico's 1995 economic collapse.

Critics contend NAFTA has caused huge U.S. trade deficits with Mexico and Canada, hundreds of thousands of lost American jobs, depressed wages, and a flight of industry and investment capital to Mexico.

News Corp. to buy stake in Primestar

■ Agreement comes just weeks after deal with EchoStar collapses.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Rupert Murdoch appears to be back in orbit.

Just weeks after his satellite TV venture with EchoStar collapsed, Murdoch has apparently found a new partner to help satisfy his U.S. satellite ambitions: Primestar, owned by the nation's big cable companies.

Murdoch's News Corp. reached a tentative agreement over the weekend to receive a minority, nonvoting stake in Primestar in return for its still-unfinished satellites and the orbital slots it owns with partner MCI, according to a source familiar with the deal.

No agreement has yet been signed, but papers have been circulated to all parties involved, the source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said.

News Corp. declined to comment on the deal, reported also in Tuesday's editions of The Wall Street Journal and USA Today.

A stake in an established satellite service would help fill out Murdoch's orbital empire in Asia, Europe and Latin America. In the United States, he has yet to launch any satellites or sign up subscribers.

Direct satellite television uses dishes as small as pizzas to bring TV signals to consumers. Satellite TV is a competitor to cable, and generally offers more channels and crystal-clear digital quality. Cable operators are working to upgrade their own services to digital.

In order to compete well with cable, though, industry analysts feel the satellite players need to be bigger and have greater resources.

Primestar is the No. 2 company in the direct broadcast satellite business, following DirecTV, with which Murdoch also held talks. The young industry has only about 5 million subscribers, compared with about 65 million for cable. Still, it is growing fast.

The deal with Murdoch apparently does not include a requirement that the current Primestar partners carry some of Murdoch's cable networks on their own systems. The partners include cable operator Time Warner Inc. and TCI Satellite Entertainment, whose biggest shareholder is John Malone, chairman of cable operator Tele-Communications Inc.

Such as requirement, which Murdoch was said to have been seeking, might have caused problems since Time Warner is publicly feuding with Murdoch over its decision not to carry Murdoch's Fox News Channel on cable systems in New York. That case is currently in court.

"We continue negotiations and have yet to have a signed agreement," said LaRae Marsik, a spokeswoman for TCI Satellite Entertainment. Time Warner declined to comment.

The deal with EchoStar would also have brought Murdoch the established satellite operations he needs to quickly become a force in the business. Some had even dubbed the planned 500-channel service "Death Star."

Announced in late February, it unraveled earlier this month with some acrimony. EchoStar has sued News Corp. for $5 billion for breach of contract. News Corp. responded the claim was meritless and has vowed to fight it.

Drug Screen Compliance expands to larger quarters

By Mella McEwen

On the move and expanding is DRUG SCREEN COMPLIANCE & CONSORTIUM OF THE SOUTHWEST, a subsidiary of Lou's Clinical Laboratories of Odessa.

McEwen

Drug Screen Compliance has relocated from 1115 Andrews Highway to a larger building at 1305 N. Big Spring St.

Len Martin, manager of the Midland office and sales and service representative, said that the business had rented space on Andrews Highway but had purchased the building on Big Spring Street.

"Our business has grown so much and so well in Midland we had to have a bigger location," he said. The larger space allows for more private collection rooms, an office to conduct supervisor awareness training and sales offices.

Drug Screen Compliance conducts urine analysis and drug screen collections for business such as H-E-B, Albertson's, Lowe's, Chevron, Anadarko and Parker & Parsley. Analysis can be done at Lou's Clinical Lab in Odessa or the business collects samples that are shipped to the client's laboratories. Supervisor awareness and breath alcohol training are also conducted and safety training of all kinds is also offered.

The business has been in Midland three years; Lou's has been in Odessa 30 years. In addition to Midland and Odessa, the company has locations in Big Spring and San Angelo and hopes to open an office in Lubbock in July.

Under new ownership is HOUSE OF BEAUTY, located at 2308 W. Michigan Ave. next to Luskey's Western Wear.

New owner Diane Rife purchased the full-service beauty salon from the widower of the woman who founded the salon in 1963.

House of Beauty not only offers complete hair care but manicures, pedicures and full sets of nail extensions. There are seven hair stations, and Ms. Rife said she is looking for additional full-time hairdressers. Each hairdresser is an independent contractor who pay monthly rent and operates their own hours.

Since she acquired the business, Ms. Rife said she has made improvements such as a lattice over the awning, a flower box out front and inside improvements. She said she is planning to have a mural painted on an interior wall, perhaps with a '60s theme because she wants to give the salon a 1960's feel.

A graduate of Aladdin Beauty School in Midland, Ms. Rife has been doing hair and nails since 1991. This is her first time to own a salon, she said.

Hours are 8:30 a.m. to around 8 p.m.; walk-ins are welcome and appointments are available.

FAMILY MAYTAG, Cornerstone Shopping Center at Loop 250 and Midland Drive, has expanded its line of appliances.

In addition to a complete line of Maytag appliances, the store now carries full lines of Jen-Air and Magic Chef appliances.

Also available is service on the three lines and all other major brands, according to Sharon Hale, whose family owns the store.

She said the store is also taking reservations for the Neptune, a new washing machine from Maytag that is designed to do larger loads with less water because it uses a horizontal axis. It is designed to save $100 a year in operating costs. The new machine will be available in the last quarter of the year and Ms. Hale said the only way to get one right now is to reserve one.

Hours are 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

HOW TO READ THE MARKET IN REVIEW

Here are the 1,675 most active stocks on the New York Stock Exchange, 925 most active on the Nasdaq National Market and 405 most active on the American Stock Exchange. Stocks in bold are worth at least $5 and changed 5 percent or more in price. Underlining for 50 most active on NYSE and Nasdaq and 25 most active on Amex. Tables show name, price and net change, and one to two additional fields rotated through the week, as follows:

Name: Stocks appear alphabetically by the company's full name (not its abbreviation). Names consisting of initials appear at the beginning of each letter's list.
Last: Price stock was trading at when exchange closed for the day.
Chg: Loss or gain for the day. No change indicated by ...
PE: Price-earnings ratio. Derived by dividing closing price by company's earnings per share for the most recent four quarters.
PPE: Projected price-earnings ratio. Derived by dividing closing price by company's projected earnings per share for upcoming 12 months. PPE supplied by I/B/E/S, Institutional Brokers' Estimate System. Is a consensus forecast of all analysts following the company. Only companies with three or more analysts following them have a PPE.
How to use: In general, if PPE is lower than PE, analysts believe earnings will be going up. If PPE is higher, they expect earnings to fall. The numbers can be helpful in following stocks but as with all financial data are only one of many factors to judge a company by. Consult your financial advisor before making any investment decision.

CONSUMING INTERESTS

Baked snack chips appeal to adults

By Linda Anderson

OK, I admit it: I can't resist trying new flavors of snack chips. From pizza-flavored to my favorite salt-and-vinegar (I know, I know, not everybody loves them like I do), I try them all.

Anderson

The newest flavored chip I just had to try is Baked Tostitos (see, sometimes I go for the healthier ones) Salsa and Cream Cheese tortilla chips. Advertised as having "Only 3 Grams of Fat Per Serving!" on the label, the chips are the latest in the line of baked-not-fried tortilla chips.

An 8-ounce bag of the chips cost $1.97, which is about what you'd expect for that size bag of snack tortilla chips, with or without fat.

Label advertising claims the "New!" chips are just about irresistible: "You already love the Crispy, Crunchy, Hearty corn taste of Baked Tostitos brand Tortilla Chips right? So what if we took those delicious chips and covered them with the flavor of Smooth, Cool, Cream Cheese blended with spicy tomato and pepper salsa! Sound too good to be true? Not anymore. Introducing new Salsa & Cream Cheese Baked Tostitos brand Tortilla Chips! All the familiar flavor of your favorite party dip Oven-Baked into every mouth-watering bite! And at just three grams of fat per serving, go ahead an Enjoy Yourself! After all, who says eating less fat has to be boring."

Sure enough, nutrition label shows that one serving (one-eighth of the bag) is supposed to have 120 calories with 25 of them from fat.

Of course advertising claims are one thing; tasting the food yourself is another. And that's what a taste-test is for, after all.

I bought a bag of these chips and took them home to some very opinionated munchers — my teen-age taster and some of her friends — then took what was left to the office to give those opinionated tasters a shot at it.

At home, my own personal taste-tester took one bite, made a horrible face and carefully placed the remainder of her chip on the table — where it sat, until I finished it for her. One of her friends just ate one, nodded and refused to sample a second. Another of her friends took a bite and said, "Needs more fat."

The adult tasters at the office seemed to appreciate the chips more than the younger tasters at home did, but then adults tend to feel less guilty — and therefore more positive — about low-fat foods anyway.

Personally speaking, I agreed with the taster who said the chips needed something — baked chips are kind of bland — but the salsa and cream cheese flavor is pleasant. Not spicy enough, but pleasant.

All in all, I think the Baked Tostitos Salsa and Cream Cheese tortilla chips are worth buying again. And I probably will.

MILK: White upper lip wins prize

(From 1D)

Academy Class in Ankeny, Iowa, in the group category; and 3-year-old Joseph Feskanin of Morgan Hill, Calif., in the child category.

Miss Covington, 18, the daughter of Pam Covington and Gary Covington, appears in the advertisement in her ballet costume. "She loves ballet and has taken ballet since age 4," her mother said.

"She most recently has been studying under Judy Coleman." Ms. Covington saw the milk ads and suggested her daughter put on her tutu and enter the contest.

Reluctantly taking her mother up on the idea, Miss Covington went to Fast Photo to have her picture made by photographer and owner Gary Gibson.

When it came to keeping milk on her upper lip, however, Miss Covington found sour cream stayed on better.

"It was a very last minute decision and Gary Gibson worked extra to get the photo sent off in time," Ms. Covington said, noting her daughter (who was unavailable Tuesday) was tickled to win."

Ms. Covington said her family has already seen the milk ad in the June issue of McCall's. "We're pretty proud of Darcy," she said. The recent LHS graduate was a National Merit Commended Scholar, Texas Scholar and member of the National Honor Society and German Honor Society. She plans to study ballet at Butler University in Indianapolis. Her goal is to dance with a professional ballet company.

As one of the grand prize winners, Miss Covington also received a Fujifilm Endeavor 300ix camera with some film and processing included.

Celebrities who have appeared in the milk mustache ads have included supermodel Tyra Banks, film director Spike Lee and Olympic swimmer Amy Van Dyken.

The largest public park in the United States is Wrangell-St. Elias National Park and Preserve in Alaska.

Of a total 13.2 million acres, the National Park section covers 8.33 million acres and the Preserve 4.88 million acres.

It has the greatest concentration of high peaks on the continent, among them is Mount Elias at 18,008 feet.

DEAR ABBY

Wife's mission of mercy not soley for mother's benefit

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: We have been happily married for 17 years. I am 41 and and my wife is 36. We have three fine children, ages 12, 10 and 6. I do well financially.

Van Buren

My wife never went to college and regretted it. I supported her effort in going back to school, so she enrolled. Then her mother, who lives 400 miles away, became seriously ill with lung cancer.

Seven months ago, my wife quit school and went to stay with her mother. She is the only child in the family who was able to spend this kind of time with her mother. She keeps in touch and comes home when she can. It has been hard for her and hard for us.

In recent weeks, her mother has improved enough to come here with my wife to visit. Her mother also has home health care, so my wife could come home and proceed with her own life.

However, she is having a hard time leaving her mother now. I would like to tell my wife that she has helped her mother as much as she can, but we also need her.

My wife tells me she has been spending a lot of time going out to bars, dancing and partying with friends she has made in that town. She is very open with me and has told me some men are obviously attracted to her and have sent her flowers. She accepted the flowers and the attention, but said she would go no further.

Our sex life has not been very good in recent years, but she says she loves me and respects me more than anyone she has ever known. This barhopping bothers me because I love her very much and I'm afraid that something will happen sooner or later. She stays out until 2 a.m. and has never told these men she doesn't want any further relationship, so it seems to me that she is leading them on.

Do you have any thoughts about her relationship with her mother? And what do you think about these nights out with her friends? — FRUSTRATED IN KENTUCKY

DEAR FRUSTRATED: You and your children are to be commended for your patience during your wife's seven-month absence.

You have every right to lay down the law and demand that she come home. Your mother-in-law seems to be well cared for without her daughter's presence.

Hanging out in bars and accepting flowers from admirers is inexcusable behavior for a married woman. Give your wife an ultimatum. Tell her that you expect her home by a specific date.

Then make an appointment with a marriage counselor. If your wife ignores your request, you will know where her loyalties lie.

DEAR ABBY: I recently took a date, her daughter and her daughter's friend to a bingo hall.

Well, with all the cards, markers, food, drink, etc., I was out about $90. On the very last game, my date won $500. I thought, "Great — a free evening for me and she will still have $400!" Wrong! She said that it was her money, and she didn't give me a dime. All my male friends said she should have split it with me, but my female friends said she was right to keep it all to herself.

Abby, what do you think was right? — NO MORE BINGO DATES IN TEXAS

DEAR NO MORE BINGO DATES: A single mother who is raising a child might find it difficult to part with half of her unexpected windfall as your male friends suggested.

However, she would have been gracious to have reimbursed you the $90 you spent for the evening.

GRAPES: Featured in salsa with chopped jalapenos

(From 1D)

In nonstick skillet, stir-fry green beans in oil until crisp-tender; season with 1/2 teaspoon of the salt. Remove from skillet.

Stir-fry beef in same skillet to desired doneness. Return beans to pan; add chilies and grapes. Stir-fry until grapes are barely heated. Add radishes, lime juice, remaining salt and sesame oil. Cool to room temperature or refrigerate until served. When ready to serve, mix well and sprinkle with sesame seeds. Serve on bed of lettuce or cabbage; garnish with grape clusters, if desired. Makes 4 servings. Serve the salad cold or at room temperature.

Recipe from California Table Grape Commission

Raspberry Shrimp Salad is served with raspberry dressing. The dressing can be served over almost any salad, or as a topping for fish, chicken or a fruit plate. The recipe was developed by chef Leslie Revsin of Driscoll Strawberry Associates.

RASPBERRY SHRIMP SALAD

1 cup diced, cleaned, cooked tiny shrimp
1/4 cup finely chopped mango
1 3/4 tablespoons finely chopped celery
1 1/4 tablespoons finely chopped red onion
Salt and freshly ground pepper
Raspberry Dressing (recipe below)
6-ounce package raspberries (measure 1/3 cup for dressing, remainder for salad)
2 ripe avocados, halved, seed removed

Prepare Raspberry Dressing; set aside.

In medium mixing bowl combine shrimp, mango, celery and onion. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Toss with 1 tablespoon Raspberry Dressing. Gently fold in the raspberries.

Center each avocado half on a chilled salad plate. Divide raspberry shrimp mixture among avocado halves, filling to overflowing. Serve extra dressing on the side. Makes 4 servings.

RASPBERRY DRESSING

1/3 cup reserved raspberries
1 tablespoon balsamic vinegar
1 1/2 teaspoons honey
1 1/4 teaspoons Dijon mustard
1/4 cup olive oil
Salt and freshly ground pepper, to taste

In blender or food processor combine raspberries, vinegar, honey and mustard; blend until smooth. Gradually blend in oil until smooth. Season to taste. Refrigerate any remaining dressing.

Note: Extra-virgin olive oil is too strongly flavored for this use.

FRESH GRAPE SALSA

3/4 cup each red and green seedless grapes, coarsely chopped
1/2 cup chopped sweet red peppers
1/4 cup chopped green onions
2 tablespoons chopped cilantro (or 1/4 cup chopped fresh basil)
1 tablespoon each olive oil and lime juice
2 teaspoons finely chopped jalapeno pepper
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon bottled hop pepper sauce
Tortilla chips or bagel chips

Combine all ingredients except chips. Mix well. Refrigerate for at least 1 hour to allow flavors to blend. Drain well before serving with chips. Makes about 1 1/2 cups.

For the following American adaptation of Italy's bread salad, use a gutsy, hearty country bread, not supermarket-style white. The right crusty bread will soak up flavors without getting soggy.

INSALATA DI PANE CON UVA

4 cups cubed (in one-inch pieces) day-old Italian bread, half of crust removed.
1/4 cup olive oil
1/4 cup balsamic vinegar
4 cloves garlic, crushed
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon coarsely ground pepper
2 cups seedless grapes
1 cup each sliced sweet red and yellow peppers
1 cup thinly sliced sweet onion
1/2 cup thinly sliced fresh basil
6 kalamata or ripe olives, sliced
2 tablespoons shredded Parmesan cheese

Place cubed bread in large bowl. Let stand, uncovered, about 30 minutes or until slightly dry. Combine oil, vinegar, garlic, salt and ground pepper; mix well. Drizzle oil and vinegar mixture over bread and toss until all liquid is absorbed. Combine grapes, peppers, onion, basil and olives. Alternately layer soaked bread and grape mixture in salad bowl, beginning with bread and ending with grape mixture. Let stand at room temperature before serving. Toss and sprinkle with Parmesan cheese. Serve.

Makes 6 servings.

This fruit salad gets a little extra zing from freshly grated ginger root.

TROPICAL FRUIT SALAD

2 Cups seedless grapes
1 medium banana, peeled and sliced
1 mango, peeled and cubed
1/2 cup lowfat tropical-flavored yogurt
1 teaspoon grated fresh ginger
4 mint sprigs

Combine grapes, banana and mango; toss mix. Stir ginger into yogurt. Spoon dressing over mixed fruits or add to fruits and mix to combine. Portion into individual glass bowls. Garnish with mint.

Makes 4 servings.

STRAWBERRIES WITH ORANGE-GINGER CUSTARD SAUCE

Custard:
1/2 cup milk
2 tablespoons heavy cream
1 teaspoon vanilla
1/2 teaspoon grated orange peel
1/4 teaspoon ground ginger
2 egg yolks
3 tablespoons sugar
1 teaspoon cornstarch
1 pound package of blueberries or three 6-ounce packages of blueberries and strawberries
8 thin chocolate wafers

In small saucepan or microwave bowl stir together milk, cream, vanilla and orange zest. Heat over medium-low heat or microwave about 1 minute, until steaming but not boiling. Cover pan with lid or bowl with plastic wrap and set aside.

In medium mixing bowl blend sugar and cornstarch. Add egg yolks and stir or whisk until well combined and lemon-colored. Gradually stir or whisk in the hot milk mixture. Cook, stirring constantly, over medium heat, until mixture thickens, about 5 minutes. Do not boil.

Remove from heat and stir or whisk until smooth. Turn out into a small bowl and cover with plastic wrap, pressing wrap onto surface of custard to prevent skin from forming. Chill until completely cold. (This can be 1 or 2 days in advance.)

To use immediately, turn custard out into metal bowl and place bowl in a larger bowl filled with ice water. Stir every few minutes until cold.

While custard is chilling, rinse the berries. Reserve 4 whole strawberries for garnish. Let dry on paper towels. Hull and halve or quarter the rest of the strawberries — depending on size — into a medium or large mixing bowl. Break 4 of the chocolate wafers into bite-sized pieces and add to berries. Pour custard over and fold to coat berries completely. Divide berry-custard over and fold to coat berries completely. Divide berry-custard mixture among 4 serving bowls or stemmed glasses.

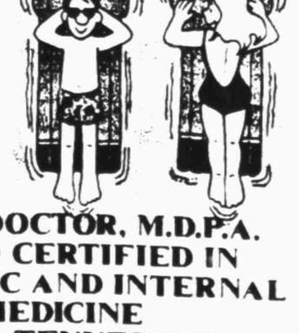

Garnish top of each serving with one of the reserved strawberries and one of the chocolate wafers.

Dear Abby/8C

Grapes in season taste good right off of the vine, left, or as part of Tropical Fruit Salad, above. The fruit salad gets zing from fresh grated ginger root combined with tropical fruit-flavored yogurt. The fresh fruit salad can top off a summer social gathering and is the perfect compliment to any barbecue or picnic. Taking a cue from bread salads, long a staple in Italy, the insalata Di Pane Con Uva, right, is made with crusty bread cubes and tossed with a balsamic vinegar dressing.

In a surprising combination, raspberries spill out of an avocado half, above. The Raspberry Shrimp Salad in Avocado Halves is topped with a raspberry dressing. It has enough panache to serve at a garden party.

Grape Expectations:
A berry good tale of mixed fruit

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Lifestyle Editor

With an abundance of grapes and berries filling the supermarkets, it's time to change your expectations about the fruits of summer. Fruit producers are providing recipes with panache. Consider grape salsa, pita bowl salads and even combing grapes with red chilies and lime juice for a Pacific Rim Salad.

Fruit growers are offering recipes combining berries and grapes with unusual ingredients, such as avocados and shrimp. For example, the classic shrimp and avocado salad has a new flavor partner — raspberries.

Another example of eclectic cooking is in adding grapes to stir-fried ingredients in the Spicy Pacific Rim Salad. The islands, peninsulas and continents bordering the Pacific Ocean are called the "Rim of Fire" because of their fiery volcanic activity. According to the California Table Grape Commission, the Pacific Rim style of cooking, billed "fusion cuisine" is also an activity which packs heat. The "fusion" takes place by combining fiery chili peppers with refined French culinary traditions. Together these elements marry with the stir-fry techniques of China and Indonesia to produce dishes with intriguing flavors and textures.

Fresh grape salsas combine chopped grapes and chopped jalapenos. For the less adventurous there are traditional fruit salads (given a little extra zing from freshly grated ginger and tropical fruit-flavored yogurt), or the timeless treat of simply eating freshly washed grapes and berries from a bowl.

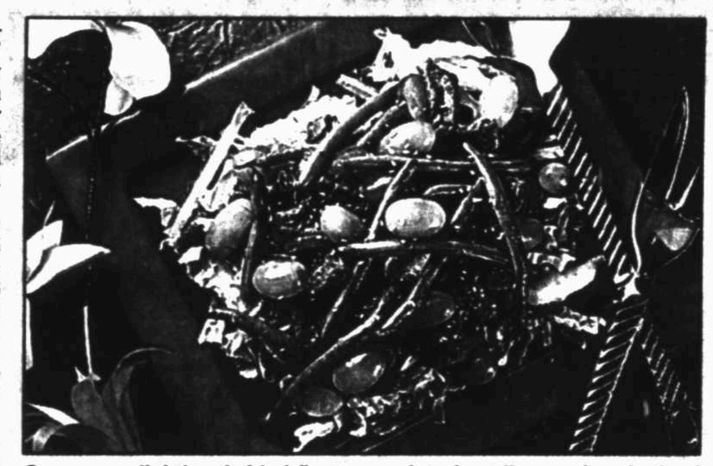

New recipes from Driscoll Strawberry Associates and the California Table Grape Commission follow.

SPICY PACIFIC RIM SALAD

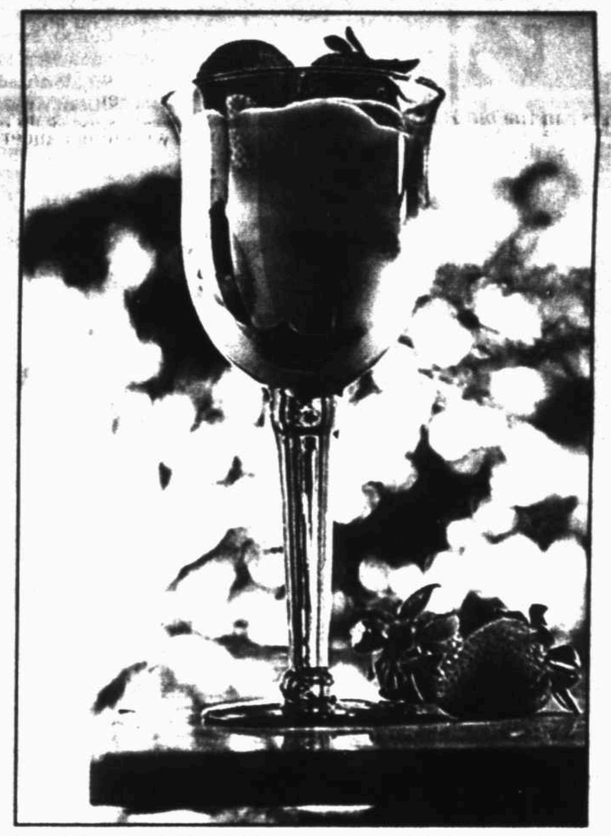

1/2 pound boneless beef sirloin, sliced 2-inches by 1/2 x 1/4-inch
Stir-Fry Seasoning (recipe below)
12 ounces fresh green beans
2 teaspoons vegetable oil
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon crushed red chilies
1 1/2 cups seedless grapes
1/2 cup thinly sliced radishes
1 tablespoon lime juice
1/2 teaspoon sesame oil
1 tablespoon toasted sesame seeds, optional
1 quart cut hearts of romaine lettuce, shredded Napa or regular cabbage
4 small seedless grape clusters, optional

Place beef in a small bowl; add Stir-Fry Seasoning and mix well.

Grapes are lightly stir-fried (just enough to heat them up) and mixed with green beans and red chilies in Spicy Pacific Rim Salad.

Sumptuous Strawberries with Orange-Ginger Custard includes blueberries for a flavorful cold summer dessert.

Got an old crank in your house?
Ice cream company offers prizes for churns

Staff Reports

OAKLAND, Calif. — Mom churned and you yearned. Just one look at a hand-cranked ice cream churn brings back memories of family gatherings and picnics of days gone by. Now owners of ice cream churns can win a trip for two to Houston to tour Dreyer's Grand Ice Cream Factory.

In celebration of the 150th anniversary of the homemade ice cream churn, Dreyer's is searching for the old-fashioned appliance in the following categories: most appreci. ted, crankiest, cutest, homeliest and oldest. Churns can be new, with or without hand cranks.

To enter, send a picture of your churn with a short description (250 words or less) of your appliance's "qualifications."

The first-place winner in each category will receive the Houston trip for two.

The trip package includes airfare, hotel accommodations for three nights, and tickets to Six Flags of Houston theme park.

Second place winners in each category will receive 150 weeks of free ice cream.

According to Dreyer's Official Taster John Harrison, housewife Nancy Johnson invented a hand-cranked ice cream churn in 1943. She sold the patent for $200 to a Philadelphia kitchen wholesaler.

Contest entries must be postmarked by Aug. 31 and should be mailed to: Churn Challenge, Dreyer's Grand Ice Cream, 5929 College Ave., Oakland, Calif., 94618. Contestants should include their name, age, address and telephone number. Only one entry per person is allowed. Winners will be announced by Sept. 15.

First place winners will visit Houston Oct. 16-19.

Midlander's milk mustache wins contest

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Lifestyle Editor

She just graduated from Lee High School on Saturday and already Darcy Covington has landed another milestone — she will be seen in national magazines across the country.

The Midland teen-ager proved she could mug with the best of celebrities when her photo was a grand prize winner in the recent "Milk: Where's Your Mustache?" competition.

Covington

Pictured in a ballet costume, Miss Covington will appear in milk ads in the June issues of Life, McCall's, Parents, Family Fun and Child magazines. Thousands of entrants "stepped up to the milk glass" to increase their star quality, according to the National Fluid Milk Processor Promotion Board.

OF INTENT

Notice is hereby given to all interested parties and owners of mineral interest in and under lands and leases in the SE/4 of Section 5, the S/2 of Section 6, all of Section 7, the W/2 and SE/4 of Section 8, and the W/2 and NE/4 of Section 18 of Block 32 TWP-4-S and the E/2 of Section 12, the E/2 of Section 13, and the NE/4 of Section 24 of Block 33 TWP-4-S T&P RR Survey, Glasscock County, Texas, that Mineral Technologies Inc. (MTI), the operator of the aforementioned properties and wells, formerly known as the Apple Creek Fussselman Unit, intends to re-establish production on said leases from existing shut-in wells. Due to the marginal economic risk of this proposed project, MTI is requesting a surface commingling permit from the Texas Railroad Commission and MTI proposes to allocate production on the basis of Railroad Commission approved well testing methods. Any mineral interest or royalty owner under the above lands wishing to file a protest of this request should submit their protest in writing within fifteen (15) days of publication, to MTI at the following address:
