Chevron announces deal

Pennzoil to get 266 fields in stock swap

■ Trade is expected to nearly double Pennzoil's U.S. holdings.

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil editor

One of the biggest oil deals in recent years is expected to have a major impact on the Permian Basin.

In a transaction valued at approximately $1.2 billion, Chevron Corp. announced Wednesday that Pennzoil would swap 266 oil and gas fields owned by Chevron in exchange for 15,750,000 shares of Chevron stock owned by Pennzoil.

The trade is expected to nearly double Pennzoil holdings in the United States, and will reduce Pennzoil's holdings in Chevron from 9.7 percent of outstanding shares to 5.3 perecent of the remaining 17.2 million shares. Pennzoil acquired the Chevron stock in 1989, following its lawsuit against Texaco in which it was awarded a $3 billion settlement for buying Getty Oil Co. out from under Pennzoil.

One condition of the deal is that neither company will purchase additional shares of the other's outstanding stock for five years and both parties will drop legal claims involving Pennzoil's 1989 purchase of Chevron stock.

About half of the properties — 120 fields — are in West Texas and will give Pennzoil a major presence in the Permian Basin. Included are such large fields as the Sacroc, University Waddell, Slaughter, Welsh, Keystone, MiVida, Penwell and Dune, according to Chevron. The largest of the fields is Sacroc — Scurry Area Canyon Reef Operators Committee — which was the first field in the nation to be flooded with carbon dioxide and which now produces 17,000 barrels daily for Chevron and its partners.

Other properties are scattered throughout the Gulf of Mexico and Gulf Coast.

David Berlin, Chevron district manager in charge of the transition properties, said a substantial number of the 95 employees and contract employees now manning the properties could be hired by Pennzoil, which has already requested and received files on employees associated with the properties. He said meetings with Pennzoil have been scheduled for as early as next week for field reviews.

Ron Wise, president of PLS Inc., a Midland-based firm specializing in oil and gas acquisitions, noted that the trade had been rumored for more than a month

Candidates' envoys agree to continue debate talks

Associated Press

President Bush and Bill Clinton exchanged barbs over campaign debates Wednesday as the two camps sought in vain to reach an agreement on a series of climactic face-to-face encounters.

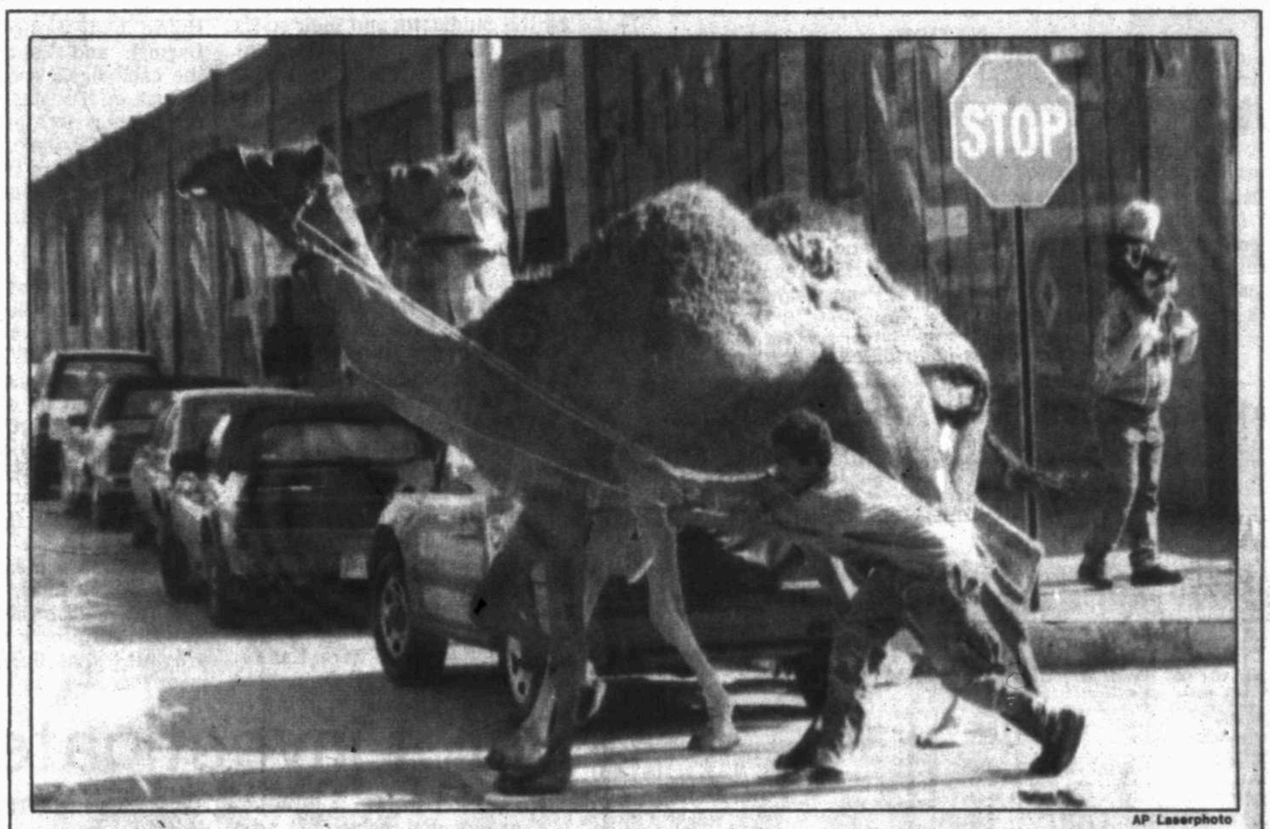

Aides to the two presidential nominees met for nearly four hours Wednesday night at the Washington law office of Clinton campaign chairman Mickey Kantor, with agreement only to resume negotiations this morning.

Kantor and Bush campaign chairman Robert Teeter declined to discuss their talks or to say whether they were any closer to staging a face-to-face debate between their candidates.

The announcement that the two sides seemed to greatly increase the likelihood there will be debates this fall — with or without independent Ross Perot — and the campaign itself seemed instantly frozen in place. Clinton commands a double-digit lead in most polls, but the potential for an overpowering performance — or an unforgettable gaffe — by either candidate, means the House sustains leave bill veto

By William M. Welch
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House on Wednesday easily sustained President Bush's veto of a bill requiring many businesses to give their workers time off in family emergencies. Democrats pledged to redouble efforts to make "family leave" a major issue in the campaign for the White House.

The vote on the politically charged bill was 258-169, well short of the two-thirds majority needed to override Bush. It was the 33rd consecutive time Bush has made his veto stick.

'Queen Isabella' performs for MISD teachers

■ La Porte teacher brings history to life for MISD teachers.

By Myra Lee Salcedo

The thought of "countless Asians who might be won over to Christianity" was the motivating factor behind Queen Isabella's agreeing to support Christopher Columbus' voyage in 1492.

"This appealed to me most," said Queen Isabella, as she regally swept across the stage of Houston Elementary School Wednesday, announcing that "The blood of conquerors and kings flows through my veins. I am Isabella, the Queen of Castile."

Beatrice "Bea" Ramirez Svambera, an award-winning junior high school teacher from La Porte, took on the guise of King Ferdinand's wife, and performed a dramatic monologue for about more than 300 teachers at the "Columbian Quincentenary" in-service.

Odessa teen uses bat mitzvah money to help food bank

By Ed Todd

ODESSA — When Deborah Elizabeth Glast came of age on her 13th birthday, she decided to give to others from what she had received — money.

So, Deborah sought to convert the $250 she received for her bat mitzvah into canned food for the Permian Basin Food Bank.

The food bank provides food for West Texans who are threatened with hunger in today's economically depressed times.

"They were in need of cans and not many people were donating (canned goods to the Food Bank)," Deborah said on Wednesday at

MCHD is in the black for '92, official says

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

The Midland County Hospital District is winding up paperwork for fiscal 1992, which is remaining in the black for the first time in recent years.

The district, which cares for Midland County's indigent patients, has operated this year without a shortfall, which must be absorbed by Memorial Hospital and Medical Center's paying patients and insurance carriers, according to Jim Kendrick, the hospital's senior vice president and chief financial officer.

That good news "speaks very well" for the process of medical care and money management that kept the district out of a deficit, he said.

More than $6 million in tax funds are used to pay for medical care for indigent patients and represent about 5 percent of the hospital's $140 million total budget.

Tax revenue in fiscal year 1993 will be funded by

Rig blows

NEW ORLEANS — An offshore oil rig blew wild in the Gulf of Mexico and a five-mile slick reached the mangrove beaches of a Louisiana barrier island on Wednesday, the Coast Guard said. The well blew out Tuesday and was spewing 42 gallons of crude a minute, threatening sea birds on the island, said Coast Guard spokesman Joe Gibson. There was no fire, but well fighters told the Coast Guard it would be Friday morning before they could cap the flow. By Wednesday afternoon, a 60-yard-wide slick had made it to East Timbalier Island, one of the fragile chain on narrow islands about 47 miles south of Houma. Gibson said there was no word on environmental damage. Gibson said the Boots & Coots wild well fighting team from Houston had been called to cap the well, owned by Greenhill Petroleum of Metairie.

Bunton sets trial

SAN ANTONIO — Chief U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton has set a November trial date in Midland for a lawsuit over Edwards Aquifer pumping limits. The move is a setback for the Texas Water Commission, which has been seeking to avoid federal intervention by working with regional water users on a plan. The commission also wanted state legislators to have time to act on the issue before the courts did. Bunton on Tuesday denied a fourth delay in the controversial lawsuit filed by the Sierra Club and ordered the case to be tried beginning Nov. 16 in his court.

Today's high to be in 80s

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies with a high in the mid-80s and south winds at 5-15 mph. Tonight should be clear with a low near 50, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Friday should be clear with a high in the mid-80s.

After an overnight low of 49, Wednesday's high reached 86, compared to the record high for that date of 104 set in 1977. The record low was 42 set in 1966.

STATE

Skies remained clear across most of Texas Wednesday as high pressure kept cool, dry air over much of the country.

In West Texas, temperatures ranged from 77 degrees at Marfa and the Guadalupe Pass to a state-high 88 degrees in Lubbock.

Midafternoon temperatures in North Texas ranged from the 70s to 80s, with Abilene, Waco and Killeen recording the highs of just 81.

In South Texas, highs were generally in the 80s with Del Rio recording the hot spot of 85 degrees and Galveston the coolest high of 76.

Forecasters said conditions should remain mostly clear and cool through Friday. Morning lows in North Texas should be in the upper 40s to lower 50s with afternoon highs in the upper 70s to lower 80s.

NATION

A chill settled Wednesday on the Northeast, and scattered clouds covered much of the northern tier of the nation.

Clear skies and mild to hot temperatures were across the Plains and the West.

By morning, the only rain around the nation was widely scattered showers over the northern Florida Peninsula.

Skies were cloudy over parts of the Southeast, the Pacific Northwest, and from the Ohio Valley and Great Lakes region to New England.

Temperatures were generally in the 60s and 70s east of the Rockies. Readings in the 80s were over parts of Florida, Texas and the Plains.

Readings dipped into the 40s in parts of Pennsylvania and across New York state to New England.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

OIL: Pennzoil may hire Chevron employees and came as little surprise to many in the oil industry.

"Some analysts may say that Pennzoil paid too much for the properties, but there are obviously intrinsic benefits to this type of transaction."

He said Pennzoil was most advantageously positioned to acquire the properties, because billion dollar packages are not easy to sell. "Not everyone has a billion dollars, but Pennzoil was fortunate in that it had stock to trade." Chevron said it would not reissue the stocks acquired from Pennzoil, and that the move would reduce outstanding Chevron shares by about 4.6 percent.

Ken Derr, chairman of Chevron Corp., said the move should have a positive effect on Chevron's per-share earnings and cash flow. He also noted that the deal was excellent for Chevron because it allowed the company dispose of non-core properties and concentrate on the 400 fields it considers core properties.

The trade which is expected to be completed in the fourth quarter is expected to bring a profit of $375 millon to Chevron's bottom line.

Mike Libbey, a spokesman for Chevron Corp. in San Francisco said the transaction involves only 10 percent of the company's reserves. The properties involved in the exchange produce 33,000 barrels of oil and natural gas liquids and 310 million cubic feet daily of natural gas. Reserves involved include 90 million barrels of proven oil reserves and 690 billion cubic feet of natural gas.

Wise said the $5.35 per barrel equivalent paid for the properties is about par with industry prices paid for reserves.

Wise, who is currently assisting Apache Corp. in selling some of the $500 million in properties it purchased from Adobe Corp., said the Pennzoil acquisition could trigger a new round of oil property sales in Texas.

"I will be on Pennzoil's step (Thursday) morning, because one of the first things an oil company does when it makes a major purchase is look to see what they want to sell and what they want to keep."

Pennzoil's purchase of the Chevron properties comes only days following a press announcement that the company had hired a new international manager and was expanding it focus overseas.

MONEY: Teen buys beans, corn for food bank

It was there her $250 bought 50 cases — 1,200 cans — of No. 303 cans of beans and corn at $5 for a 24-can case. The price was well below wholesale cost and was about a third of the retail price of 59 cents per 16-ounce can.

Deborah said that she was inspired to make the donation to the Food Bank after she had worked with others on a Habitat for Humanity project last summer in Waco building affordable housing for low-income families. Later, she toured the food bank in Odessa and noticed the shortage of canned goods.

And in the bat mitzvah celebration to acknowledge her passage into adulthood and in practising religious rituals, Deborah wanted money not to be spent on elaborate celebration flowers but on food for the poor and hungry.

"I'm proud of you, Deborah," said Fred George, a food bank board member. "It's a great thing to do."

Deborah, who is a student in Trinity School in Midland and who is daughter of Robert and Picce Glast of Odessa, turned 13 on Sept. 19.

"I like helping people," Deborah said.

Her mother noted that one of Judaism's precepts is "tzedakah," which is "charity in helping those who are unable to help themselves."

The 50 cases of corn and green beans were transported across town in a five-ton 1993 International truck, which the food bank recently purchased for nearly $60,000 with a grant from the Midland-based Abell-Hanger Foundation.

In 1991, the food bank issued food to 45,000 families through 194 West Texas charities — from Big Spring to Alpine but mostly in the Midland-Odessa area. The food represents about 2 million meals, according to Dolly Neff, the food bank's executive director.

This year, the demand for food has increased by 27 percent, Ms. Neff said. Already this year, more than 1.35 million pounds of food have been given to the poor and hungry in West Texas.

"Right now, a lot of people are hurting (financially) and can't give" food or money to the Food Bank to help those less fortunate, Ms. Neff said. "And that puts more pressure on those who can help."

TALKS: Aides to continue debate negotiations

debates could completely remake the race.

The talks — the political equivalent of arms control negotiations — came after a day of jockeying by the candidates and their staffs.

"I'm ready to go, Sunday night, Larry King," said Clinton, noting that Bush was booked for an appearance on the call-in show. Earlier, he said, "Let's not delay it for two weeks, let's start Sunday," in reply to Bush's call for four Sunday-night debates beginning Oct. 11.

Bush countered that when it came to his debate offer, Clinton was behaving "the same way he's responded to issues like free trade, fuel efficiency standards, and middle-class taxes. He waffles."

Bush had been on the defensive on the issue, forcing a bipartisan commission to cancel three proposed debates when he rejected their single-moderator format.

While the aides talked, the role of the bipartisan Commission on Presidential Debates seemed up in the air. No members from the commission attended Wednesday night's meeting.

Attending instead were: Kantor, Democratic National Committee Chairman Ron Brown, Democratic strategists Tom Donilon and Jack Quinn and Beverly Lindsey, a Clinton campaign aide. On the Republican side were Bush campaign chairman Bob Teeter, campaign manager Fred Malek, White House budget director Richard Darman and Bobby Burchfield, the campaign's general counsel.

Bush on Tuesday proposed two presidential debates with a single moderator, as the commission and Clinton want, and two others with a panel of three journalists asking questions, the format the president prefers. The debates would run weekly on Sunday nights from Oct. 11 through Nov. 1, two days before the election.

Clinton spokeswoman Dee Dee Myers said Bush's proposal for four debates was acceptable to the Democrat, but he wants to begin with Oct. 4 and Oct. 15, two dates earlier selected by the bipartisan commission.

There was no word on vice presidential debates. Bush proposed two.

There was maneuvering in advance of the talks:

■ Teeter dispatched a note to Kantor, Clinton's co-chairman, proposing that the two of them meet "as soon as possible," but making no mention of the commission.

■ Kantor proposed a meeting by evening with commission leaders and Bush aides.

■ To that, Teeter tartly replied in a second letter renewing the demand for campaign-to-campaign talks and saying, "Gov. Clinton is running for president of the United States. After all, you can't negotiate for the United States by referring everything to a commission."

■ Clinton then dispatched Kantor to meet with debate officials, then said to go ahead and deal directly with Bush aides.

The two sides circled warily as Perot pondered his possible late entry into the race. As is often the case, he sent conflicting signals in an interview on CBS-TV's "This Morning."

"It would be fine with me" if his supporters disband, Perot said in one sentence. But in another, he said he stands ready to plunge into the race if supporters say, "It's a dirty job but you've got to do it."

Whatever his decision, there was ample evidence that Perot had long been preparing for a formal entry.

Campaign finance reports filed with the government show he continued to spend millions after he dropped from the presidential race in July, maintaining a 50-state organization and quietly preparing campaign advertising.

Debates aside, Bush, Clinton and their running mates continued their energetic campaign travel.

In Clinton, Md., Clinton accused Bush of ignoring the needs of small businesses, and called for fresh tax incentives to aid in their success. Clinton said he favors a new tax break for anyone who makes a profit in a new business they own for five years or more.

Bush campaigned in Wisconsin, where he pocketed endorsements from several state and local law enforcement groups and criticized Clinton's anti-crime record as governor of Arkansas.

The debate debate spilled over to the campaign trail.

A professionally prepared sign was hung at the site of a Bush rally in Fond du Lac, Wis., taunting Clinton. "Who's chicken now, Bill," it read.

That was a reference to the Clinton supporters in chicken costumes who had been dogging Bush as a means of drawing attention to his refusal to accept the debate commission's proposal.

Perot investigates volunteers, papers say

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ross Perot's presidential campaign used private detectives to investigate the personal backgrounds of volunteer leaders, according to published reports.

A San Francisco security firm, Callahan & Gibbons Group, hired to protect state Perot campaign offices, also investigated the backgrounds of several volunteer leaders, according to reports in Thursday editions of The New York Times and The Washington Post.

The former head of Perot's New Jersey effort, meanwhile, told The Associated Press that Perot campaign operatives confronted him with a false allegation about his conduct last spring but refused to identify the source of their information.

Tom O'Neil of Lawrenceville, N.J., said in an interview Wednesday night that he believed his eventual replacement as head of the New Jersey campaign was the result of the false allegation, which he refused to describe.

O'Neil said he was interviewed in person by two so-called "roving rangers" from the Perot campaign about the allegation. A high-ranking campaign aide from the Dallas headquarters also telephoned him about the allegation, he said.

The newspapers quoted Clayton Mulford, general counsel to the Perot campaign, as acknowledging that some of the $76,000 paid to the San Francisco firm was used to conduct investigations of allegations that campaign money was being misappropriated.

"There were constant complaints from volunteers about his person doing this, this person doing that, this person stealing money," Mulford told The Times.

Billionaire spent millions after dropping out

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ross Perot continued to spend millions after he dropped from the presidential race in July, maintaining a 50-state organization and quietly preparing campaign advertising.

Those expenditures — $4 million in August alone — have put Perot in position for an "October surprise" return if he chooses to make that move today.

But they also underline a stark contrast between what the Texas billionaire has said publicly and what he has done privately since ending his independent bid for the White House.

At the same time he was spending the money, Perot was declaring that he wouldn't play a spoiler's role, that the chances of his returning were comparable to the likelihood that "a hurricane will go straight up in the air today" or "lightning going to strike here in two seconds."

"It smacks of double dealing," said Stephen Hess, a political analyst with the Brookings Institution.

"He said he was leaving the race, not 'I'm leaving the race but I'm going to be creating some 30 ads and getting my name on ballots just in case I decide to come back,'" Hess said.

But Murphy Martin, a close Perot associate who has helped in recent weeks to prepare ads, disagreed. "We've been saying all along we wanted to keep our options open," Martin said.

Campaign finance reports filed with the government show Perot has spent $18.5 million — $16.1 million of it his own money — since first mentioning the possibility of an independent campaign in March.

More than half that total has been spent since he withdrew: $6.6 million in July and $4 million in August.

Much of the $4 million Perot spent in August went to pay bills he accrued before he dropped out.

MISD: Teacher brings Queen Isabella and history to life

(From 1A)

"We brought her here to set the whole tone of the afternoon for teachers to learn about the different perspectives of history," said Patty Smith, social studies coordinator for Midland Independent School District.

While Midland public school students were dismissed early, hundreds of their instructors were immersing themselves in a staff development program intended to expand their perspectives on Columbus' arrival to the Americas.

Ms. Svambera presented several perspectives of the Spaniards and Mestizos. No stranger to Midland, the teacher who has college degrees in speech and drama, has been to the Tall City on several occasions to participate in debates and drama competitions.

The La Porte teacher has gained notoriety and a classroom visit from Texas Education Commissioner Skip Meno. The Daughters of the Republic of Texas selected Ms. Svambera as the Outstanding Texas History Teacher for her hands-on teaching activities and her classroom museum.

The teacher — who brings historical characters to life — has also garnered best actress awards at various Texas festivals.

"Watching videos and films gets old for students. Acting gets their attention," she said, "and characters can teach the many facets of history. Students can hear the various facets and make up their own minds. Even with all the research and knowledge we have about history, there are still some things we just don't know."

Other than hearing Queen Isabella's perspective on sending Columbus out to claim "new worlds" for Spain, MISD teachers also attended Columbian Quincentenary sessions on "Myths and Truths," "Cartography: Then and Now," "The Meeting of Two Old Worlds," "Cultural Exchange," and the "Continuation of Cultural Exchange into the 21st Century."

VETO: House defeats family leave bill

(From 1A)

In defeating the family-leave bill, supporters said the veto would reverberate in next month's presidential election. Democrat Bill Clinton supports the measure; Bush has promoted "family values" as a campaign theme.

"This issue frames this campaign," said Rep. Patricia Schroeder. "Yes, it really is about who is for families."

Despite the partisan split, 42 Democrats deserted their party and voted to sustain Bush's veto. Thirty-eight Republicans voted to override their president.

The measure was strongly opposed by lobbyists for small business. Oppponents pointed to Bush's eleventh-hour alternative, $500 million in tax credits for businesses that grant the unpaid leave to workers.

"There's a better, more effective way," said House Minority Leader Bob Michel, R-Ill.

The action is the second time Bush has vetoed a family leave bill and made it stick. Although he voiced support for the concept during his 1988 election campaign, Bush vetoed a similar measure in 1990.

The action followed an emotional debate in which supporters of the bill both condemned Bush's veto as uncaring and vowed that if Clinton is elected, a tougher family leave law will be enacted next year.

Despite the rhetoric, Bush's veto was sustained with room to spare. To reach the two-thirds majority needed to override, supporters would have needed to switch the votes of 27 opponents.

The family leave bill would have required businesses with 50 or more employees to give workers up to 12 weeks of unpaid, job-protected leave, with full health benefits, to care for a sick family member or for the birth or adoption of a child.

Bush vetoed a similar bill in 1990 and the latest bill in September. He contended the measure would have been costly to business and proposed instead giving a tax credit to businesses that allow workers time off.

The Senate voted 68-31 last week to override Bush. He so far has a perfect record of making his vetoes stick. But the Senate vote marked the first time in his presidency that body has voted to override.

Democrats had planned for the override vote for a year or more, and presidential nominee Clinton has hammered at Bush on the issue.

But even so, it appeared that Democratic House leaders had not worked as strongly or effectively as they might have to gain the votes of their own members. House Speaker Thomas Foley urged an override but acknowledged that even some Democratic committee and subcommittee chairmen, and some deputy Democratic whips, were voting to sustain the president.

Foley called Bush's veto "a very bad mistake" but already was looking ahead to the bill's prospects if Clinton, a supporter of the bill, is elected president.

"It is one of the things that will change in a new administration," Foley said. "It is one of the things that the Clinton campaign is committed to change and that the Congress in great majority is committed to support."

Democrats had delayed final action on the bill for nearly a year, in hopes that timing the battle just before the election would pressure Bush and prompt wavering lawmakers to drop opposition.

Jury finds Pig guilty of 'poaching'

VICTORIA (AP) — The Pig did it.

According to a jury of fourth-graders, the third Pig of storybook legend intentionally tried to cook the Big Bad Wolf. The O'Connor Elementary School students found Pig guilty of attempted wolf "poaching" Tuesday, and sentenced him to perform 100 hours of community service.

Pig began immediately by sweeping up the school sidewalks. His punishment was relatively light compared to the possible sentence of "becoming ham hocks."

Pig had maintained during the mock trial that the scalding incident was an accident.

Staff at the campus dressed as pigs, wolves, judges and attorneys to put on the play for students studying fairy tales.

Pig, played by school counselor Christina McNeill, told the young jurors that Wolf was scalded while illegally breaking into his house. Pig said Wolf was burned when he dropped down the chimney into a pot of boiling water.

Wolf, played by fourth-grade teacher Sylvia Mathis, said he was simply visiting his "old friend Curley." Wolf said he entered through the chimney because Pig was asleep.

Magic Johnson gives hope to those with AIDS virus

By Leslie Dreyfous
Associated Press writer

Magic Johnson has come full circle.

With him on his journey, the NBA star has brought millions to a better understanding of AIDS. He has put a human face and a hero's stature to work, whether addressing the president or folks tuned in to Arsenio Hall.

Even in announcing Tuesday that he would return to playing his beloved basketball for the Los Angeles Lakers, Johnson added a new dimension to the disease: one of hope, the promise of living a relatively healthy life.

And yet, for all his commitment and impact, the AIDS virus has continued to spread among the teen-age and heterosexual population that activists most ferverently want Johnson to reach.

It's not that his warnings haven't been heard. Even the toughest kids on inner-city courts dropped the bravado and shed a few tears when this star they call "Magic" unexpectedly retired last November.

"Up 'til then, a lot of people saw him as untouchable. It was his stand that made a lot of us finally realize that everyone is mortal," Greg Allen, a 28-year-old New Yorker, said Wednesday.

"He made all kinds of people — but the black community especially — wake up and see that it's not only prostitutes and gays and drug-users who get AIDS," said Allen's friend Elizabeth Middleton, 22.

No question that people listened. No question that Johnson has promoted safe sex and helped destigmatize AIDS through his public appearances, video and book, and through his play with the U.S. Olympic "Dream Team" and work on the presidential AIDS commission from which he resigned in protest last week.

But attention spans are short, and patterns of sexual behavior hard to change. "Especially when you're talking teen-agers," said Ronald Colby, an Indiana principal who has worked closely with AIDS education since the days when Ryan White was among his students.

"When the announcement first came out, that made an immediate impact. My gosh, here we have one of our heroes struck with this no-win disease," Colby said. "My problem in working with young people is that the impacts don't seem to stick around very long."

While the rate of increase for AIDS has steadily slowed among homosexuals and drug-abusers, it has continued upward among teen-agers and adult heterosexuals, according to the U.S. Centers for Disease Control.

Because of the virus's incubation period, which may be 10 years, the impact of Johnson's efforts may not be felt for years. But the early result aren't particularly encouraging: Over the 12 months ended in June 1992, the most recent period for which statistics are available, the number of cases reported among heterosexual adolescents and adults rose to 3,855, from 3,085 the previous year.

"It's hard to make kids really change their lifestyles. And in a strange way, Magic Johnson is a bit of a double-edged sword," said Colby, whose AIDS education curriculum was among the earliest.

"I had one young boy say to me, 'If AIDS is so bad, then why is Magic still looking so good. Is this thing really as bad as you're telling me?' And all I can say is that there is no cure, and hope that he's listening."

"He's made the disease accessible without watering it down," Batts said. "He's presented AIDS as it really is."

Ultimately, it would be silly to think that one man — no matter how well known or respected — can alter America's behavior by his example alone.

Campaigns turn off Texas voters, league study shows

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas voters are turned off by political campaigns, the influence of lobbyists and pressure groups, and the power of incumbents, according to a League of Women Voters study released Wednesday.

"We have discovered that almost all Texans have opinions about the campaign process, and the opinions are highly critical," said Evelyn Bonavita, chair of the League's Texas Education Fund.

The eight-page report entitled "See How They Run: The Political Campaign Process in Texas," is based on interviews and poll results that show many voters are frustrated and angry about the current political system.

The report also describes "model laws" touted by reformists as a way to get politicians back in touch with the electorate.

The study showed that most Texans believe that campaigns are too long, expensive, negative and confusing.

Most also believe that campaign expenditures should be limited, but disagree that campaigns should be financed with public funds.

One former state office candidate said that negative campaigning lessens respect for the office, and leaves the winner no clear mandate because issues were not debated during the campaign, according to the report.

The study found that many believe that campaigns are being dominated by political advertising rather than debates.

The high cost of these packaged campaigns make the candidate more dependent on special-interest contributions and less available to the public for an examination of his or her political beliefs, the report said.

Campaign expense reports are available for public scrutiny at the Texas Ethics Commission, but the League says "there is not currently a user-friendly data base that enables researchers to pinpoint readily specific information ..." on how contributions are raised and spent.

The League notes that in Texas there are no limits on the total amount of contributions that a candidate can receive.

MCHD: Hospital operates without shortfall in '92

a 17.69-cent property tax per $100 valuation on a $3.6 billion tax base. Additional funding for indigent care, which runs about $8 million annually in Midland County, comes through other sources, including the federal Medicaid program.

Fiscal year 1993 begins today. A final report on fiscal year 1992 will not be available for about a month.

In fiscal 1991, indigent-care costs exceeded available funds by $2.9 million, Kendrick noted at Wednesday's hospital district board meeting.

MCHD director Charles Coffman noted that more effective controls over in-patient and out-patient ratios and cost-cutting measures, such as the opening of the Community Health Care Center out-patient clinic for indigent pediatric and obstetric patients, have helped lower indigent care costs.

As a result, the 1992 tax rate dropped slightly to 17.69 cents from 17.74 cents per $100 valuation.

"I think they (hospital administrators and medical staff) have done a significant job in helping us curtail costs — not only in indigent patients' (costs) but in other patients' (costs) as well," Coffman said.

"Their total concept was to reduce some of those costs in all areas. And the (taxing) district benefits significantly when that happens."

Black voters undecided on Clinton or Bush ticket

BALTIMORE (AP) — Kwabena Hardy, like many black voters, doesn't feel much enthusiasm for Democrat Bill Clinton and running mate Al Gore.

He's undecided about how to cast his first presidential ballot, but allows that he'll probably vote Democratic.

"It's going to be hard, but I have to," says the 19-year-old student at Morgan State University, who turned out to hear Gore speak at a recent rally in Baltimore.

Politicians in both parties "use their pulpits to say things to our people that will butter them up and get us to vote for them, but in the long run they turn around and stab us in the back," Hardy laments.

His ambivalence is not unusual. Clinton's effort to win over working-class whites who deserted the Democratic Party 12 years ago has left many black voters feeling ignored.

At the same time, however, many blacks "feel that they've had Reagan and Bush in office for 12 years and any change would be better," says David Bositis of the Washington-based Joint Center for Political and Economic Studies.

A nationwide poll taken for the bipartisan center and Home Box Office in June showed that 77 percent of blacks disapproved of the job Bush was doing.

Clinton's challenge will be to lure those blacks out to polling places on Election Day.

The Democrats are walking a political tightrope with Clinton's decision to craft a single message for black and working-class white voters, who have followed divergent political paths the last 12 years.

Clinton has pleaded for racial harmony, promised assistance to decaying cities and proposed revisions in welfare programs — messages aimed at black voters.

The broader theme of his campaign has been revving up the nation's stalling economy, an issue that plays well among the so-called Reagan Democrats.

Those relatively conservative, working-class white voters abandoned the Democrats in 1980 and 1984 to back Ronald Reagan. A majority of them voted for Bush four years ago.

Clinton spokesman George Stephanopoulos said he believes the campaign's message "bridges the gap" between blacks and whites.

But some black voters are getting a different signal from Clinton's campaign.

"They're catering to the middle-class whites," Albro Alexander of Greensboro, N.C., said of the Democrats.

"They all do, so what can we do?" added his wife, Danielle, who said the couple would nevertheless support Clinton and Gore.

Albro Alexander said that while he's bothered by Clinton's focus on middle- and working-class whites, "Bush has just forgotten about us."

Alice Harden, a black state senator from Mississippi, said Clinton was "delivering a universal message that speaks to the needs of all people" and she predicted blacks would respond.

"When you talk about jobs, you talk about something that has an impact in the black community. When you talk about education, you talk about something that speaks to the upward mobility of blacks," she said.

Howard University political scientist Ron Walters was skeptical that Clinton could "craft a message that has appeal to both white middle-class voters and black voters."

"None of the candidates have presented a reason for blacks to be enthusiastic and turn out," he said. And if they don't, "we could have a disaster for the Democratic nominee."

An estimated 51.5 percent of voting-age blacks cast ballots in 1988, 90 percent of whom voted for Democrat Michael Dukakis. Overall, 57.4 percent of the voting-age population cast ballots in 1988, with 53.4 percent of the electorate supporting Bush.

Bositis said the black vote "has only to do with Clinton" because "there is nothing (Bush) can do to get it.

"So the question becomes the magnitude," he said. "If there was a substantial dropoff in black votes in a number of states, it would substantially hurt Bill Clinton."

Clinton's strength in the black community could be the number of blacks running for Congress, state legislatures and local offices around the country.

More than 40 states are holding legislative elections, and blacks conceivably could end up with as many as 40 congressional seats, up from the current 26.

U.S. Senate alone should impeach

Who says nobody can tell the U.S. Senate what to do? Judge Stanley Sporkin of the U.S. District Court in Washington has just instructed the legislators to hold a new impeachment trial for another federal judge. He would require the entire Senate to hear all the evidence instead of leaving that task to a committee.

Sporkin's ruling would disrupt the Senate's ability to conduct its other business — and is almost certainly judicial overreach. Federal judges have no more power than anyone else to tell Congress how to handle impeachments.

The Constitution is explicit. The House votes to bring charges of impeachment against a president or a judge, and the Senate "shall have the sole power to try all impeachments."

Lately the Senate, rather than tie up all 100 members, has appointed special committees to hear witnesses and sift evidence, saving floor time for special evidence and arguments on each side.

However, Judge Sporkin ruled that the removal of Alcee Hastings from a Florida judgeship "must be overturned and remanded to the Senate for a trial that comports with constitutional requirements." Due process of law, he said, requires that all senators who vote on the impeachment be present to hear all the evidence.

Hastings was indicted on bribery charges but acquitted in a criminal trial. Later the Senate, impeaching him for misconduct, found that he took the bribe and falsified his defense at the trial. The law is settled that separate criminal trials and impeachment proceedings do not expose an official to double jeopardy.

The Senate's use of committees, and the ability of courts to review that use, is before the Supreme Court in the separate case of former Judge Walter Nixon of Mississippi. Lower courts already have ruled out review for an official like Judge Nixon who was convicted of the crimes for which he was removed.

But Sporkin argues that without a prior guilty verdict the crucial evidence against Judge Hastings involved live witnesses whose credibility each senator must evaluate in person. A good argument — for the Senate, not the courts.

Under the Constitution, impeachment and removal are classic political actions not designed for further litigation. Taking its burden seriously, the Senate has conducted its own version of a trial with its own definition of fairness. Wise judges will recognize that they have no special competence or constitutional authority to judge the Senate.

Oppression in East Timor deserves immediate action

Indonesia for the first time seems genuinely flustered by the world's protests over its invasion and long-term oppression of East Timor, a former Portuguese colony. But not enough to do anything about it.

Jakarta's 1975 conquest of 750,000 Timorese was just as heinous as the more recent and more highly publicized territorial grabs by Iraq and Serbia. And the evil continues. Last November, foreign witnesses were present as Indonesian troops massacred from 50 to 100 non-violent demonstrators who had gathered at a cemetery in Dili, East Timor's capital.

Yet there was no hint of contrition in Thursday's U.N. speech by President Suharto of Indonesia, leader of the 108-nation Non-Aligned Movement. He castigated "policies of hegemony and domination" and gave unflinching support to the "inalienable right to self-determination, independence, and sovereign statehood" — for Palestinians. But there was nary a peep about East Timor, or what his officials term "the Nov. 12 incident."

Indonesia does not dispute that its troops ran amok (an Indonesian word) at that cemetery. Ten members of the security forces have been prosecuted for their role in the killings, and two generals have been removed from their jobs. But Jakarta continues to keep East Timor off limits to the foreign press, so that the world's attention will not focus on the punitive sentences (nine years to life) handed down against demonstrators at the November "incident."

Indonesia is a proud and important regional power; its 180 million people make it the world's largest Muslim nation. Yet with respect to tiny East Timor, Jakarta behaves more like a banana republic. It has rejected Portugal's proposal for a referendum in the former colony, and has stonewalled efforts to permit a U.N. presence in East Timor. All this while Suharto ostentatiously demands the withdrawal of foreign troops from occupied territory — along the River Jordan.

Today in History

Today is Thursday, Oct. 1, the 275th day of 1992. There are 91 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

Thirty years ago, on Oct. 1, 1962, Johnny Carson succeeded Jack Paar as regular host of NBC's "Tonight" show, beginning a 29-year reign on late-night television that ended last May. Carson received an on-air introduction from Groucho Marx; the guests on his first show were Joan Crawford, Rudy Vallee, Tony Bennett, Mel Brooks and The Phoenix Singers. (Only an audio recording remains of this broadcast, NBC having disposed of the videotape years ago.)

On this date:

In 1800, Spain ceded Louisiana to France in a secret treaty.

In 1885, special delivery mail service began in the United States.

In 1908, Henry Ford introduced the Model T automobile to the market; each car cost $825.

In 1936, Gen. Francisco Franco was proclaimed the head of an insurgent Spanish state.

In 1943, Allied forces captured Naples, Italy, during World War II.

Term limits promise radical change

WASHINGTON — As the two candidates pursue each other over hedge and ditch, remember this: The presidential election is only the 15th most important contest this November. More potentially productive of significant and lasting change are the 14 state initiatives by which voters can impose term limits on their states' members of the U.S. House and Senate.

Will

Because never before has one subject been simultaneously on so many ballots, The Wall Street Journal says this will be the closest America has come to a national referendum.

Although polls show that sizeable majorities (in all regions and both parties) favor term limits, Congress will not even allow a floor vote on a constitutional amendment setting limits. If it did, we could have limits beginning with the 1994 elections.

Opponents of term limits hope to get the Supreme Court to declare unconstitutional all state-imposed term limits on Congress. Their position is not frivolous but is answered by Neil Gorsuch and Michael Guzman, two recent Harvard Law graduates, in an essay published by the Cato Institute, a libertarian think tank in Washington.

The Constitution's "qualifications" clauses stipulate that House and Senate members must be 25 and 30 years old respectively, must have been citizens for seven and nine years respectively, and must be inhabitants of the states from which they are elected. Another clause assigns to states the right to regulate "the times, places and manner" of holding elections, subject to congressional override.

Opponents of term limits say limits impose a fourth "qualification" — a candidate cannot be a long-term incumbent. The Supreme Court has held that supplementing the three enumerated qualifications (age, citizenship, inhabitancy) would require a constitutional amendment. However, Gorsuch and Guzman argue that term limits are better understood as regulations affecting the "manner" of elections by enhancing the competitive nature of the process. The Supreme Court has, for example, upheld as a "manner" regulation a state requirement that candidates have party affiliation.

This is an unsettled area of the law. But proponents of term limits are not obligated to assume that there someday will be a Supreme Court judgment adverse to their position. Furthermore, given the scarlet fact that Congress will allow no vote on a term-limitation amendment, state votes in favor of term limits — the only recourse the public has — serve to underscore Congress' extremism in defense of careerism.

Bill Clinton favors "change" but opposes term limits not only because he is the prototypical political careerist but also because term limits promise radical change abhorrent to all the interest groups to which he is beholden. Term limits, ferociously fought by lobbyists everywhere, would disrupt the relationships lobbyists have with tamed, wired, rented legislative careerists whose campaigns the interest groups finance.

Today's strongest political passion is taxaphobia. It reflects the electorate's judgment that the political class as currently constituted cannot be trusted to exercise sensible discretion over revenues. That judgment is reasonable. Legislative careerists of both parties love the deficit equally. It is a huge transfer payment, transferring wealth from the future to the present, enabling the political class to charge just 75 cents for a dollar's worth of government.

This is one reason why it does not matter much which candidate winds up atop the executive branch. Until term limitation changes the motives for entering Congress, and the incentive for behaving responsibly while there, the deficit will remain untamed and government paralysis will remain unchanged.

Americans who want serious change should understand the futility of changing presidents while leaving in place a Congress free to continue using modern government, with its myriad subsidizing and regulating activities, to serve careerism.

Let's give Clinton, Quayle final test

There is a simple solution to the controversy over the war records of Bill Clinton and Dan Quayle. The two are accused of having used political influence to stay out of the hostilities in Indochina.

Buchwald

The way to solve it is that instead of debating the issue over and over again in some clammy network studio, both Clinton and Quayle should go to Vietnam, in full uniform, and show the American public if they really have the right stuff.

The plan would be to take the two men into the mountains around Khe San and assign each one a hill to capture. They would do this alone without aid from the Green Berets or the 82nd Airborne.

To make sure the public witnessed the action CNN would cover it live.

Before going into battle each man would have a half-hour on the Larry King show to profess his patriotism for the United States and his love of the military.

I know some people are saying, "Isn't it a little late to go to Vietnam?" The answer is obvious to anyone running for public office: "Better late than never."

To make sure that the idea was viable I made some telephone calls.

The first one was to Hanoi asking if they had any objection to Clinton and Quayle coming over and taking a few hills to help them in the presidential campaign.

The official wanted to know if I was out of my blinkin' mind. He said, "If they were chicken then, we don't want them now."

I told him, "Our election depends on it. You must allow them in."

"Why?"

"Because you owe us. You have a lot of hills. All we're asking is that you let Quayle and Clinton take two of them."

"OK, but we don't want you to start making a habit of this every time you hold an election."

I then called Gov. Clinton's top aide. "Good news. I've fixed it so that the governor can still go to Vietnam."

"Gov. Clinton doesn't believe in the war."

"Nobody does, but it has become a campaign issue and the only way you can deal with it is to have him go over and hang a coonskin on the wall."

"Has Quayle agreed to this?" Clinton's man asked.

"I've got a call into him right now. Anyone who won his battle stars in Indianapolis should be dying to visit Saigon."

"If he goes, then our man will go."

I called the Quayle brain trust. "Is Quayle willing to go to Vietnam and take a hill to prove that he's not a coward?"

"That's a hypothetical question."

"It's not hypothetical. It's all laid on. The Vietnamese say that it's OK with them, providing that Clinton and Quayle leave the hills the way they found them."

"Will there be any Vietnamese opposition?"

"Not much. Just enough to prove that both candidates are willing to fight for their country."

The Quayle staffer said, "You know, the Vice President was in public relations in the National Guard. He doesn't know too much about taking hills."

I responded, "America will match one National Guard PR man against 10 Viet Cong any day of the week."

Lewis Grizzard

Son pays dues to father's best friend

Several years ago, I wrote a book about my father, a veteran of World War II and Korea, who died in 1970.

Capt. Lewis M. Grizzard, Sr. was a highly decorated soldier, but after he returned from Korea, where he had survived a bloody rout of his company by the Chinese and had survived only because a young Chinese soldier, attempting to surrender to the Americans, had hidden him from the enemy in a cave for six weeks. He was a changed man.

Grizzard

He began to drink heavily. He couldn't handle the family finances and borrowed large sums of money. He eventually left the Army or the Army left him.

My mother could no longer cope with my father's problems and had a 6-year-old on her hands. She moved us to her parents' home and eventually divorced my father.

I wasn't certain I could write the book. I didn't know if there was enough there. And there was so much about my father I didn't know.

He roamed the country from 1954 until his death. He taught school, sold shirts, ran restaurants — and the drinking just got worse. It was a stroke that killed him.

In order to write the book I felt I needed to know more about Korea, the forgotten war. So I bought an oral history of Korea as told by those Americans who were there.

It was a huge volume. I took it off a shelf at the bookstore and opened it to the middle.

The first name I saw was that of Sgt. Robert Dews. Bobby Dews had been my father's first sergeant when he returned from Korea and was stationed at Fort Benning.

My dad's new assignment after Korea had been to run the athletic program at Benning. Bobby Dews also played baseball for him.

I would hear Daddy speak of his talent and friendship on many occasions.

The sergeant noticed a byline of mine when I was with the Atlanta Journal sports department 20 years ago. I went by Lewis Grizzard Jr. back then. He wrote me a letter. He told me of his connection to Daddy and that he knew of his recent death.

He also wrote, "No matter what happened to the captain after Korea, never judge him too harshly. He had been through two wars and had seen so much blood, gore and death. It haunted him and the only way he could forget for a time, was by drinking.

"I sat by him at his desk at Benning and saw his hands shake. Many times, I'd say, 'Captain, let's go for a ride and get you out of here.'

"But he'd always go back to the bottle. I wish I could have done more for him."

I knew there was something providential about opening that huge book to a page where Sgt. Dews name appeared, so I began my own book.

During the writing I said a lot of things and felt a lot of things I needed to say and feel.

They buried Robert P. Dews, Sr. the other day. He was 77.

He had a minor league baseball career after he left the Army. His son, Bobby Jr., followed. He currently is the Braves' minor league field coordinator.

I learned of the sergeant's death too late to make the funeral. But I did want to write something in his honor. Something that could never square my father's debt to him. Something that would say a little boy who used to sit on the bench next to his daddy during Ft. Benning baseball games is thankful for what he tried to do for his daddy.

I guess Sgt. Dews was Capt. Grizzard's best friend. The preachers say we'll all be reunited.

Oh, let it be so.

Collor to step down Monday

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — Facing runaway inflation, unemployment and other problems that were put on hold during the investigation of President Fernando Collor de Mello, Brazilians on Wednesday prepared anxiously for his successor to take office.

Sen. Mauro Benevides, the Senate president, said Collor will step down Monday and be replaced by Vice President Itamar Franco.

The Chamber of Deputies voted overwhelmingly to remove Collor from office Tuesday. Franco will be acting president for at least six months while the Senate considers corruption charges against Collor and decides whether to impeach him.

"We will send the president all the documentation available to instruct him how to defend himself," said Benevides.

Some senators had wanted Collor to step down Thursday, but Franco requested the delay, saying he needed time to put together a new Cabinet, according to Senator Paulo Bisol of the Brazilian Socialist Party.

For most Brazilians, the big unknown was whether Franco can succeed in dealing with problems that Collor failed to resolve.

"An illusion was created that all we needed to be happy was Collor's impeachment," political colomnist Gilberto Dimenstein wrote Wednesday in the Folha de Sao Paulo newspaper, Brazil's largest daily.

"Inflation, unemployment and urban violence were ignored in the euphoria that accompanied the impeachment process," he said. "Now they are back."

Inflation, which Collor promised to "kill with one shot" when he took office in 1989, is 24 percent a month and rising. Brazil's $119 billion foreign debt is the Third World's largest, and millions of people have lost their jobs in the last two years.

Franco, 62, kept a low profile during the scandal. What little is known of his ideas has caused unease among businessmen and foreign investors.

A fervent nationalist, Franco had criticized Collor's plan to sell off state companies, including the profitable ones. Many businessmen feared he would retreat from Collor's moves to lower trade barriers and throw open the Brazilian economy.

Franco recently countered that he was not the blind economic nationalist portrayed by his critics.

"The world has changed, and so have I," he told reporters.

Franco's unquestioned honesty during his years as a senator and as mayor of Juiz de Fora, a southeastern city of 400,000 people, was seen as his strongest credential.

"They say he is honest and that's enough," said Helenice Pereira, a 25-year-old secretary. "Anyway, after what happened to Collor, he won't dare be corrupt."

The Senate appointed a 21-member committee to authorize putting Collor on trial for lack of decorum. However, their vote is a formality, and once notified, Collor will be suspended for 180 days.

If he is found guilty, Collor will be removed from the presidency and barred from holding public office for eight years.

Human error causes nuclear plant shutdown

TOKYO (AP) — A mistaken flip of a switch by a nuclear power plant worker caused a reactor's cooling pumps to fail, a government official said Wednesday, but an emergency system took over and prevented a nuclear meltdown.

The automatic activation of the emergency cooling system prevented radiation from being released by the plant in Fukushima prefecture, 70 miles northeast of Tokyo.

Local officials sharply criticized the Tokyo Electric Power Co., the plant's owner, for not notifying residents for hours about the emergency shutdown of the 18-year-old reactor.

"The case is very serious because it triggered (the emergency core cooling system)," said Jinzaburo Takagi, a physicist who heads the Citizens' Nuclear Information Center, an anti-nuclear group.

It was the first shutdown using the emergency system since Japan's worst nuclear accident, at Mihama in western Japan in February 1991, when a small amount of radioactivity was released into the atmosphere.

Tuesday's accident, at the number 2 reactor of Fukushima Nuclear Plant No. 1, involved a 784-megawatt lightwater reactor, the most widely used reactor design in the world. It uses ordinary water for cooling and to moderate the flow of neutrons that split the atoms that produce nuclear reactions.

The emergency system that went into effect at the plant is the last reliable defense against a core meltdown. The system pours cooling water onto a reactor's nuclear fuel rods to prevent them from reaching dangerously high temperatures.

A meltdown could occur if a reactor's rods heat to the point where their uranium fuel starts to melt and collects in a puddle on the reactor floor. A partial meltdown occured during the nuclear accident at Three Mile Island in Middletown, Pa., on March 28, 1979, the worst commercial accident in U.S. history.

The world's worst nuclear accident occurred on April 26, 1986, at the Chernobyl nuclear plant in Soviet Ukraine. It involved an explosion at a graphite-block moderated reactor.

Tuesday's accident was caused when a plant operator mistakenly flipped a switch. That informed the control computer that a backup water pump was operating when it actually was not, said Ryuko Fujii, chief of the Ministry of International Trade and Industry's nuclear safety division.

The computer then automatically shut off another pump, leaving only one primary pump supplying water to the reactor's cooling system.

The insufficient supply of water to cool the reactor caused another group of backup pumps to fail, Fujii said. He said plant operators corrected their mistake within a minute, but it was too late to keep the water level from dropping dramatically.

The cooling water initially fell three feet, triggering an emergency shutdown system, a Tokyo Electric official said. However, the water continued to fall and the emergency cooling system kicked in, pouring water into the reactor to cool the fuel rods.

In all, the water level fell to about 7.2 feet above the fuel rods, but they were never exposed during the incident, said the company official, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The fact that the fuel rods were not exposed meant that the water could continue to cool them and prevent them from reaching dangerously high temperatures.

"There was no fuel uncovered, which is major thing you worry about with those reactors," said Scott Peters, a spokesman for the U.S. Council for Energy Awareness, a Washington, D.C., group that promotes nuclear and coal energy. "There was no radiation release from the plant. ... The system worked as it was designed to work."

Takagi said the flood of water from the emergency cooling system could have damaged the fuel rods, because of the sudden drop in temperature. Fujii said such damage was unlikely, but a thorough inspection would be carried out.

Local officials demanded to know why it took the plant 2½ hours to notify them that the emergency system had been triggered.

United States issues new ultimatumin in trade war

GENEVA (AP) — The United States on Wednesday issued a new ultimatum in its trans-Atlantic war of words over farm subsidies, demanding the European Community pay compensation in a bitter dispute over cooking oil subsidies.

The Bush administration estimates that European subsidies for producers of seed oils cost other countries $2 billion in lost export earnings, half of which is born by American soybean farmers. The EC says its subsidies cause $400 million in foreign losses.

If the United States retaliates over the subsidies, it could unleash a potentially devastating tit for tat, given that Brussels has served notice it will counter-strike.

"One of our problems is that this dispute is now mixed up in an electoral timetable," said the EC delegate, John Beck. "It makes our life that much more complicated."

Frustrated at community wheat subsidies that often are worth as much as the wheat itself, President Bush announced plans this month to increase subsidies to U.S. wheat exporters by about $1 billion, a bid to win domestic support.

Russians eager to sell privatization vouchers

MOSCOW (AP) — Russians jammed telephone lines to brokers Wednesday, eagerly seeking to sell their shares in Russian businesses and financial markets even before the government distributed them in its most ambitious economic reform.

The "privatization vouchers" will allow people to buy state-owned property at auctions or buy shares in mutual funds that invest in a variety of enterprises.

President Boris N. Yeltsin's privatization program puts Russia in the forefront of former Eastern bloc nations trying to undo the legacy of centralized planning and form a market economy.

Millions of the cream-colored vouchers, bearing a picture of the Russian parliament, or White House, sat stacked inside bank safes in preparation for the start of the program Thursday.

Distributed along with them will be a government memo offering investment tips and a warning against swindlers. Recipients will be urged not to sell them immediately, but to hold onto them and become shareholders in Russian industry.

Many Russians were ignoring the government's advice, however. Phones broke down at a key commodities exchange in Moscow after it was flooded with calls from people eager to unload them.

Problems mounted even before the first voucher was handed out:

■ Millions of people will have to wait because the government is still printing the certificates. There were only 1.7 million vouchers in Moscow, a city of 9 million.

■ Many state-owned factories and shops are still deciding how they should be privatized. Many large enterprises have been spared for now, and others were taken private before the vouchers were issued.

■ Distribution could prove difficult in a country that has been unable to print and distribute enough cash to pay its workers for months in many remote regions. It appeared the government was concentrating on sending many vouchers initially to Siberia and the Far East while weather was favorable.

■ Government opponents made the program the focus of their efforts to attack Yeltsin's free-market reforms.

The government hopes people will pool their vouchers with others to purchase small stores or buy into investment funds to purchase shares in large businesses.The vouchers are valid for one year, from Dec. 1, 1992, to Dec. 31, 1993.

Russia's most valuable assets, however, remain off-limits to fledgling investors for now. The privatization plan excludes municipal property, as well as nuclear power stations, defense facilities, pipelines, and vast mineral resources and forests, which will remain under state control.

The vouchers will be given to all 148 million Russians, including prisoners, the homeless and children born before Sept. 1. They carry a face value of 10,000 rubles, or $40 — about twice the average monthly wage — but their actual value is unclear.

Opposition leaders said they would plummet in value, but a top government official said the vouchers already are worth 20 times more than their face value in some places.

Yeltsin created the plan with a presidential decree, and many lawmakers have complained that they should have been consulted.

"It is an anti-people privatization! It is robbing the people! It will help launder mafia money!" hard-line lawmaker Mikhail Chelnokov, a leader of the Civic Union legislative faction, said during a recent debate.

Yugoslavia agrees to pull some troops in Croatia

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Serbia-dominated Yugoslavia agreed Wednesday to pull its army from a strategic peninsula in Croatia by Oct. 20 and said it would enter talks on recognizing Croatia, a former Yugoslav republic.

Britain's Lord Owen said the agreement reached in Geneva between presidents Dobrica Cosic of Yugoslavia and Franjo Tudjman of Croatia, represented a significant step along the hard road to peace.

Diplomats trying to end ethnic fighting in former Yugoslav republics said earlier that relief flights to Sarajevo, the besieged capital of Bosnia-Herzegovina, could resume by the weekend.

Serb gunners ringing Sarajevo held back artillery barrages early Wednesday in one of the quietest nights of the 6-month-old siege. But Bosnian officials reported 24 people killed and 165 wounded in Bosnia in the 24-hour period ending at 1 p.m. Wednesday, including seven dead and 54 wounded in Sarajevo.

Tudjman and Cosic, meeting for the first time, agreed to a timetable for the withdrawal of Yugoslav troops from the southern Prevlaka peninsula, and said they would set up a committee to discuss normalizing diplomatic relations between Belgrade and Zagreb. Serb hardliners oppose such a move.

The narrow, three-mile-long Prevlaka peninsula 27 miles southeast of Dubrovnik, juts from Croatia's Adriatic coast near Montenegro. It controls the entrance to Kotor Bay, the sole remaining Yugoslav navy base.

The agreement would lift the Yugoslav blockade of Dubrovnik, the historic port that was pummeled during the six-month war in Croatia last year. But the troop pullout would leave Yugoslav army units on Croatian soil near Plat, seven miles south of the city.

Owen said the agreement — which apparently removes the last obstacle to a permanent settlement of the war that broke out last June over Croatia's secession from federal Yugoslavia — was "a great deal better than ... we might have hoped even a few days ago."

But he cautioned reporters: "Don't anyone write this up as imminent peace and as if we have solved all the problems."

Tujman and Cosic said Wednesday that they hoped Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic would join them at future meetings.

Bosnia is now the focus of fighting among Serbs, Croats and Muslims. U.N. relief officials on Tuesday warned that up to 400,000 people in Bosnia could die from exposure and lack of food this winter.

Yugoslavia, now consisting only of Serbia and Montenegro, appealed to the Security Council on Wednesday to relax economic sanctions against the country so it can import heating oil for the coming winter.

"It is necessary to consider the very tragic situation for the children, the ill and old people," Premier Milan Panic wrote to the Security Council.

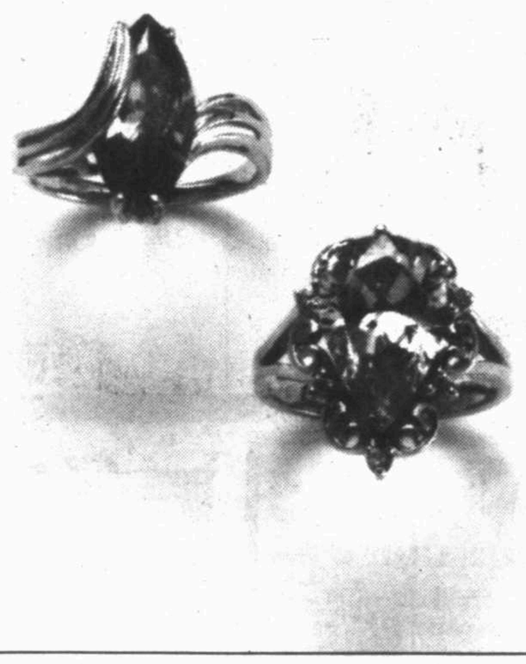

The United States, responding to warnings of a severe winter, said Wednesday it was ready to resume flights of food and medicine to Bosnia and will consider Belgrade's appeal for delivery of home heating oil.

Humanitarian flights to Sarajevo were suspended Sept. 3 after an Italian relief plane was shot down by a missile. State Department spokesman Richard A. Boucher said U.S. military planners had concluded it was safe to resume flights.

Croatian officials meanwhile on Wednesday blocked about 3,000 refugees who tried to return to their homes in eastern Croatia, ignoring U.N. warnings that Serb militias had made their return unsafe.

A report by U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali, released in New York Wednesday, complained of pressure from the Croatian government to allow the refugees to return to the area, which is nominally under U.N. protection, and pressure from the Serbs to keep them out.

During a stopover in Zagreb, the Croatian capital, on his way home from Geneva on Tuesday, Izetbegovic met with Tudjman, and the two announced agreement on a proposal for a political solution in Bosnia. They gave no details.

A Midland woman testified that she was sexually assaulted and threatened with a knife in her home in January 1991. The accused man, arrested after being awakened from a couch in the woman's home, chose not to testify in his defense.

There was no concrete physical evidence presented to jurors — no sign of a break-in, or semen or DNA samples.

Before falling asleep on the couch, the man went to a nearby 7-Eleven with the woman. The clerk testified that the woman made no attempt to seek help. The woman testified she feared for her life.

After being arrested and a bond set, the man reportedly implied that he had committed the crime to a detective.

"He said 'I really screwed up. I can't believe I did this. It would have been one thing if I had done some stupid kid thing like steal gas. I can't believe I did this. I shouldn't have done it," Detective Theresa Fine told a jury on Wednesday. Ms. Fine wrote the statement down shortly after it was made, she said.

Today, the 10-woman, two-man jury will determine the fate of Blakely Lynn Ford, 27, on trial for the aggravated sexual assault of a 35-year-old hairdresser.

Testimony, which began Tuesday, concluded Wednesday in Judge Pat Baskin's 142nd District Court.

The woman testified that she woke up while sleeping on her couch about 2:30 a.m., Jan. 9, 1991, at her southwest Midland home. Ford was standing over her, she said.

She told jurors that the man attempted oral sex and intercourse but was unable to complete the acts.

"He was saying that he loved me and wanted to have a relationship with me and just a lot of stuff like that," the woman testified.

But most of the talking came from her, she said.

"I kept talking during the whole thing" to get the man to stop, she testified.

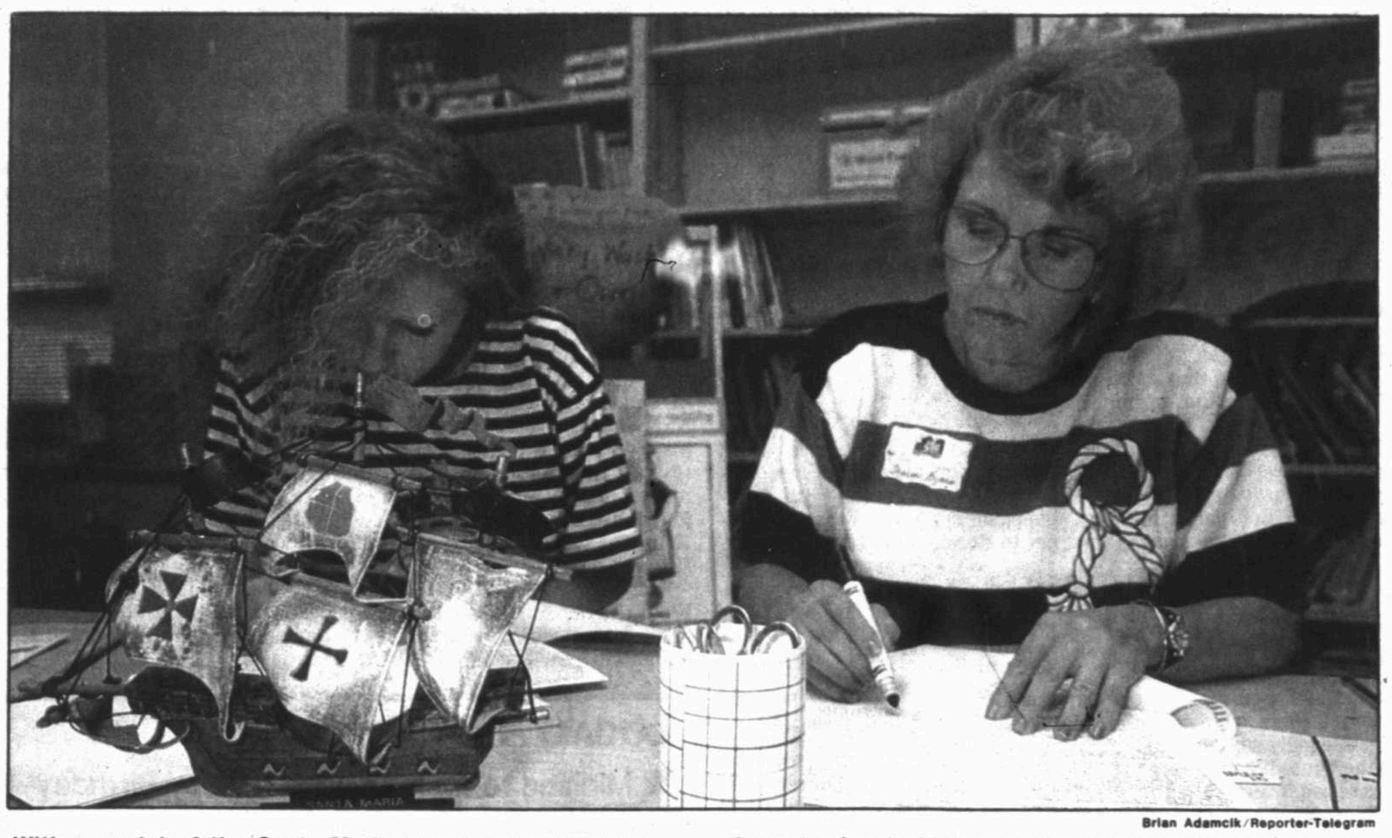

"I was telling him that what he was doing was wrong," she said.

The man also slapped her, choked her and threatened her with a knife, she testified.

Later, she persuaded the man to go to a nearby 7-Eleven with her.

The woman testified that she wanted to make a break while at the store but was too scared because Ford had a knife and

They were around long before the 1992 Olympics, and they don't have anything to do with celebrity basketball players or the movie of the same name. Instead, the local "Dream Team" is a group of language arts/social studies teachers who all have a common vision of teaching a stellar curriculum.

"In order to begin this quest, we needed to share a vision and to be committed to this dream to have the very best of staff development," said Lucinda Windsor, language arts coordinator for Midland Independent School District.

Ms. Windsor "co-produced" the vision of a dream team with MISD social studies coordinator Patty Smith. Together they trained a core of teachers who serve as campus leaders in the fields of social studies and language arts, two subjects which the coordinators say can be integrated in the classroom "in a perfect marriage."

The 75 instructors who comprise the Dream Team "are the ones who are really committed to being the staff development leaders on their campuses," Ms. Windsor said.

On Wednesday afternoon, Dream Team members lead teacher inservice sessions on the "Columbian Quincentenary." On Oct. 15, the Dream Team will participate in "A World of Difference" staff development which will explore understanding cultural diversities.

A nationally known storyteller, Donald Davis of North Carolina will facilitate "Storytelling Artistry" for the teacher team in January.

Animal lovers protest using cats in research

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff writer

Animal lovers in Midland are crying foul this week after learning six cats were used as models for a Pediatric Intubation Training, which simulates life support methods for newborns.

The cats had been waiting to be adopted at the Midland Animal Control Center when officials "loaned" them to Memorial Hospital and Medical Center. The actual training class was held at the Texas Tech Health Science Center in Odessa.

The endotracheal intubation process in this case involved placing a tube down the cat's throat for purposes of teaching how to administer anesthesia, maintain open airways and ventilate the lungs.

The cats were anesthetized for the process.

"We oppose animal intubation on both ethical and practical grounds," said Debbie Hill, executive director of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. "They're using cats to teach this training on infant humans. There are so many differences between cats and babies that I question whether this is educationally sound — among other things."

Ms. Hill said the cats, because they are placed on their backs for the procedure, are susceptible to laryngospasms — closing off the throat and making intubation impossible. If it is attempted, sensitive tissues of the larnyx and pharnyx can be bruised, bloodied and scarred.

Following the three-hour class last week, the cats were returned to the Animal Control Center and the unadopted animals were put to death several days later.

"We held the cats a couple of days," said Coy Willis, director of Animal Control. "We had hoped that people participating in the program would adopt one, but that wasn't the case."

Ms. Hill believes the issue is not one of human life versus animal life.

"We know the intubation training is necessary and valuable as a life-saving skill. But modern non-animal training methods are currently used elsewhere, making animal models unnecessary," she said.

Laurie Johnson, director of public relations at Memorial Hospital and Medical Center, said the course is required by the American Heart Association on both the state and national level.

"Cats have the closest respiratory tract to a baby's," she said. "It is excellent training for advanced life support system for pediatrics."

The course is typically held in Lubbock, she said, and is taken by pediatricians and nursing students who need the training.

Ms. Johnson said the hospital is unsure whether the training will be held in Odessa again.

Ms. Hill said she confronted Dr. Harold Rubin, chief executive officer of the hospital, after receiving several calls informing her of the intubation training.

"On Sept. 18, I asked him who supplies the animals, how many times are they intubated and what happens to the cats. We asked them to cancel the course set for the next day — or at least postpone it until we could fully present our views to the hospital," Ms. Hill said. "He assured us that he would not use the animals for training or anything else."

But the training was held the following two days without an explanation from hospital officials, she said.

Ex-students return to hometown to share life-experiences

IOWA PARK — Once they were young. Now they are old.

Actually, it is really "younger" and "older." So are we all.

Nothing changes much. Just time and circumstances and situations.

Todd

Personalities are pretty much the same. Mean and green. Charming and debonair. Coy and shy. Coquettish and maneuvering. Manipulative and domineering. Ambitious and aggressive. Lackadaisical and dreamy. Shaking and moving.

Ex-students had returned to their old hometown.

I don't actually know many of them, though I am sure I had seen many of them on the school grounds and in town some years back, say 30 or 40. Just a mere blink in time. That's what it seems like.

The setting was the Iowa Park High School Reunion, where the hometown alumni had decided especially to recognize all the graduating classes from 1902 to '92.

The reunion, which was in the new high-school cafeteria, looked like a roomful of senior citizens. And, overall, I suppose they were.

Of course, there were none at the Saturday night banquet from turn of the century, though there were some graduates from classes in the '20s. None from the '90s showed up. Maybe there were a couple from the decades of '70s and '80s. There were more from the classes of the '60s, but not many. My kid brother, Gene, class of '64, was pretty well socked in Louisiana and didn't drive in.

I was the lone soul from the class of '56, which graduated 30-odd seniors.

There were a bunch from the '50s, particularly from the class of '52 — a solid 40 years ago. My older brother, Delbert, was in that lot and still is in town. He left the community for several years to get his military service and college education, returned, taught school, retired, and is busy dabbling in railroading — his childhood fascination.

There were a slew of folks from the class of '42. That class from 50 years ago was put on the line-up, and each one offered an endearing comment about the other.

About the most memorable comment came from Norman Beaver, class of '42 graduate, who went into preaching and then, in what some term "retirement years," took up accounting.

Mr. Beaver honored those who had passed on, those who had died in World War II in their tender years, which were quickly hardened by war, and those who had just grown older.

"We remember them not because they died but because they lived," Beaver said.

In the main, there was laughter, no talk about who was more worldly "successful" than others.

There was a bit of wisdom and truth: "Wherever you go, there you are."

In their mind's-eye, they were teen-agers who, suddenly, it seemed, had grown older.

One fellow, a tall, gentle man, got around with the aid of a mechanical walker but was just as alive as those rushing around before and after supper, which was prepared by the Iowa Park Mule Skinners.

Another fellow, Charles Agee from the class of '39, who was blessed with a melodious voice, led the Iowa Park-exes in singing "God Bless America" and proudly and humbly announced: "I do love America and my wife."

Of course, there was fond talk about the teachers and Mr. Bradford, the superintendent "back when," and the marching band and the football team — the "mean green" Iowa Park Hawks.

"This is the dude that made them mean," one ex-student said of another.

And there was the sentimental lady who talked about all of her classmate-friends, whom she called her brotherly and sisterly "lovers."

Going to the reunion was enlightening.

Quickly, you learn how brief is this earthly existence, how fleeting time is, and that we are just one among many.

And you don't have to be a veteran of life to know that.

Those high-schoolers know that. Just ask any ex-student who braved those adventuresome teenage years where there is more wisdom gained than is readily apparent.

A bit of artwork, graced with one of life's poignant observations and high on the cafeteria wall, said as much:

"All we are is dust in the wind. Same old song. Just a drop."

Abilene Boy's river journey adventures to premiere in Austin

By David Matustik
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — Their tale is one of Prudence and perseverance, the river and the human spirit.

A year after the Abilene Boys canoed the Colorado, capturing the curiosity of thousands of would-be adventurers, they'll once again have their day in the Texas sun.

The 1991 reunion of the men and the river is captured in a film entitled "Run Unto the River, The Adventures of the Abilene Boys," to premiere in Austin on Oct. 8, then be shown on the Public Broadcasting System in upcoming months.

The film tells the story of Harry Caldwell, Winfield James and Jim Pickard, all in their 70s, who set off in their canoe dubbed Prudence and retraced the route they took 54 years earlier as teen-agers.

While Caldwell dropped out for health reasons after a few days, James and Pickard completed the 28-day, 660-mile trek from Ballinger to Matagorda Bay.

"We thought we'd just have more or less a leisurely, obscure paddle down the river," Pickard said last week. "It got more notoriety than we ever expected."

To their surprise, they found fans and fanfare as they were adopted by small towns, civic clubs and residents all along the river.

The group got some publicity in 1937 when an Associated Press correspondent nicknamed them the Abilene Boys and wrote of their adventure.

'This documentary is significant not only because it tells the story of three strong-willed men with real pioneer spirit, it chronicles through their eyes an important piece of the river's history.'

— LCRA general manager Mark Rose

"One of the things that caught people's fancy was that we were not young and were repeating the trip," said James, former publisher of the New York Daily News.

In the last year, James, now 73, has continued his adventures by going on a safari in Kenya and moving from Larchmont, N.Y., to the shore of Rhode Island Sound.

Pickard, 73, a former atomic energy consultant, said he's been somewhat less adventurous, dealing with real estate and business interests from his home in Chevy Chase, Md. He spends weekends canoeing or sailing in Chesapeake Bay.

Their Colorado River experience has brought the two closer together after years of more distant friendship.

"I think this trip really renewed the bond and we've been in almost constant contact," James said. The two went fishing in the Bahamas earlier this year.

Both said they keep in touch with about a half-dozen people they met on their Texas journey. Each wrote about 40 thank-you notes to various people for their generosity during the trip.

Caldwell, 74, has Alzheimer's disease and lives with a daughter in Abilene. The trip "was kind of his last fling, his last hurrah," said Jan Oates, a daughter from Waco.

Prudence, which received its moniker from doctors' advice to the trio to be prudent on their trip, is in an Lower Colorado River Authority storage facility and will be displayed during the film at the Paramount Theatre.

"This documentary is significant not only because it tells the story of three strong-willed men with real pioneer spirit, it chronicles through their eyes an important piece of the river's history," said LCRA general manager Mark Rose.

Pickard said their next adventure will likely be a lower-key fishing trip rather than another canoe voyage.

But neither he nor James would trade the experience of the Colorado.

Pickard said the trip provided more than mementos and memories.

"It wasn't the average adventure," he said. "Sure, it's given me a perspective, particularly on events concerning people and nature."

Panel pushes for child, pregnancy coverage

■ Texas Health Policy Task Force approves report to provide health care to children, pregnant women in addition to other reforms.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — A task force Wednesday proposed providing health care to all children and pregnant women in Texas, in addition to numerous reforms aimed at developing a system in the future to cover all residents.

The report was approved overwhelmingly by the Texas Health Policy Task Force and will be forwarded to the Legislature for consideration during the regular session that starts in January.

Task Force Chairwoman Shirley Chater said health care reform was needed but that she did not know how the plan would fare before lawmakers.

"There will probably be a need for extra state dollars and it will be a question of priorities," she said.

"I can't anticipate what the Legislature might do because I am very very cognizant of the economic difficulties that the state faces."

But, she added that the report "says loudly and clearly that we need reform of the health care system in the state of Texas."

Health care costs in Texas have skyrocketed in recent years from $30 billion in 1988 to $44 billion in 1992, according to the task force.

Meanwhile, more employers and individuals are dropping coverage. About 4 million Texans, including more than 1 million children, are uninsured, the task force said.

The cost of extending health care coverage to all children under 18-years-old and pregnant women would be about $4.2 billion more than the current Medicaid coverage, the report said.

That would require $1.5 billion in state dollars, about double the current state portion of health care. Ms. Chater said that some of that extra money could be found in cost-savings from other task force recommendations, including negotiated rates on health care services, and private insurance.

In August, the panel initially recommended that lawmakers implement a health care system in which all Texans would be covered under a plan administered by a single insurer.

Private insurance companies and businesses immediately attacked the proposal as "socialized medicine."

In the face of the criticism, the task force instead suggested that the single insurer proposal be adopted for children and pregnant women.

But coverage for all Texans should remain a goal, the task force said.

"There is nothing socialized about this," said Ms. Chater.

Included in the task force report is a proposal to compare the costs of the current system with a single-payor system and then ask voters to decide which one it wants.

DEATHS

Euless O. Taylor

Services for Euless O. Taylor, 77, of Midland are set for 10:30 a.m. Friday at Edwards Funeral Home Chapel in Ranger with Jim Hall, minister of Rusk Church of Christ, officiating. Burial will follow in Oakdale Cemetery in Gorman under the direction of Edwards Funeral Home. Local arrangements are under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Taylor died Tuesday at a Midland care center.

He was born on Oct. 14, 1914, in Eastland County.

He married Elaine Hale in 1936 in Caddo. He served in the U.S. Navy during World War II. After his discharge in 1946, he returned to Eastland County. In 1949, he moved to Midland and worked at Midland Cleaners for 25 years, retiring in 1978. Taylor enjoyed fishing.

Survivors include his wife, Elaine Taylor of Midland; one son, Mickey E. Taylor of Midland; one daughter, Charlene Boyce of Midland; one brother, Earl Taylor of De Leon; five sisters, Thelma William, Merle Boyce and Maudell Poyner, all of Gorman, and Marjorie Williams and Jolene Bennett, both of Big Spring; six grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren.

Memorials may be made to the Alzheimer's Association of the Permian Basin or Rockwood Manor Nursing Home.

Fred Coonce

Services for Fred Coonce of Midland will be at 1 p.m. Friday at Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. Bob Porterfield, pastor of West Kentucky Baptist Church, officiating. Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Coonce died Tuesday in an Odessa hospital.

Pallbearers will be Roger Gilbert, Gary Gilbert, Randy Gilbert, David Pryor, Don Robert and Matt Santiago.

Alleged drug kingpins face trial in Mexico

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — U.S. Attorney Ronald Ederer says he is satisfied two alleged drug kingpins will be brought to justice in Mexico in a case he described as unprecedented for its close cooperation between the two nations.

Rafael Munoz-Talavera and his brother Eduardo Munoz-Talavera, alleged leaders of a major cocaine smuggling ring, were arrested Sept. 20 as they crossed the Mexican border from San Diego to Tijuana.

Ederer and Mexican Deputy Attorney General Antonio Garcia-Torres said in a news conference Wednesday a Mexican judge in Hermosillo, Sonora, has agreed to detain the two men and try them.

They face Mexican federal charges of possession, trafficking and exportation of 200 metric tons of Colombian cocaine from Mexico into the United States between 1988-89, the prosecutors said.

The Munoz-Talavera brothers have been indicted in the United States as leaders of a Juarez, Mexico-based ring that allegedly smuggled Colombian cocaine into the United States from 1988-89, including 21 tons seized in 1989 at a Los Angeles warehouse. That seizure also netted $12 million in cash.

It is the largest cocaine smuggling case ever prosecuted in the United States.

Ederer said U.S.-Mexican cooperation in the case began in February during an international drug summit in San Antonio.

"Our files were virtually opened up to the Mexican federal prosecutors — that was a first," Ederer said.

Garcia-Torres said his office probably will seek 25 to 30 years in prison for the Munoz-Talavera brothers. Ederer said in the United States the men could face up to life in prison for the alleged crimes.

The men are Mexican and American citizens, officials said.

"The Mexicans have arrested them, and the Mexicans are prosecuting them," Ederer said. "These are Mexican citizens."

A U.S. indictment unsealed in March in El Paso alleges the two men conspired with at least 18 co-defendants to import and distribute cocaine.

Seven defendants have been arrested and prosecuted in the United States and are awaiting sentencing, Ederer said.

Six people allegedly connected with the Juarez cartel are in custody in Mexico, said Garcia-Torres, adding that arrest warrants have been requested for up to 40 people believed to comprise the cartel.

warned her earlier.

Upon returning to the house, Ford put a screen on a window that had no lock, the woman said.

After returning to the woman's rented house, she gave Ford — who had smelled of alcohol — four tablespoons of cough medicine, she told jurors. Ford fell asleep on the couch and the woman fled to the 7-Eleven and called police.

Ford had to be awakened by police, an officer testified.

No fingerprints or signs of entry through the window were found, testimony indicated.

The woman did not use a rape kit after the incident, she testified.

Defense attorney Allen McFall questioned why not. Testimony revealed that a former husband of the woman's plead guilty to sexually assaulting her about 2½ years ago and was sentenced to 10 years in prison. In addition, the woman was aware of television shows depicting rape victims not cleaning themselves in order to preserve evidence, testimony showed.

The woman said she was not instructed to use a rape kit and because she had excreted after fleeing her home, she cleaned herself.

McFall also questioned why the woman did not just sit down in the 7-Eleven and scream for help.

"I was afraid I would be in danger" because Ford had a knife, she testified.

The 7-Eleven clerk, a woman, testified that the woman did not seem fearful or upset.

Although Ford declined to testify, McFall implied, through questioning, that Ford may have been invited into the home.

The woman testified that she had never seen Ford before but that he told her he had been watching her on various occasions.

McFall questioned why none of the unmarried woman's children were not at home that night. She testified that they stayed at a baby sitter, as they had on several occasions when she worked late.

If convicted of aggravated sexual assault and burglary (for entering the home illegally), Ford faces five to 99 years or life in prison.

Since his arrest, Ford has remained free on a $20,000 bond.

COMEDY: LHS to present 'Life With Father'

(From 1B)

Kristen Kirby as Annie, Ya Tu Tang as Delia, Kyndall Esslinger as Nora and Sonja Widman as Maggie.

Director is LHS drama teacher Horace Griffin. Sarah Nattrass is stage manager and Elizabeth Brinstool is costume chair. Lydia Stevens will operate lights, and Jeff Marcum, sound.

"Life With Father" is being presented as the first of four shows by Lee Theatre Arts dealing with family life and issues.

The students will present "I Remember Mama" in December and "The Long Christmas Dinner" in March. The final show of the year will be a joint LHS theatre/choir musical production in May.

Tickets are $5 for all performances, with the exception of the musical. Tickets to the musical will be $5 for students and $10 for adults. Season tickets are $25 for eight tickets (eight admissions with a limit of four to be used for the spring musical).

TEACH: Dream Team uses stellar curriculum

(From 1B)

Ms. Windsor said, "not just the leaders. The storytelling explores looking at our own family experiences and writing our own stories and performing them."

Later in the year, teachers will learn about the "Multiple Ability Classroom," a new way of recognizing the various talents of individual students.

"It takes into account that students come from all factors of life. They all have different abilities and different types of learning styles," Ms. Windsor said. She said the multiple abilities theory appeals to a child's intellect via other talents.

"A musically intelligent child can be taught through song. He or she could take material to be learned and compose a song, for example," Ms. Windsor said.

The final phase of the Dream Team staff development — of the program which began in the spring — will train teachers how to use museums to breathe life into history lessons.

"It's all about getting students involved in learning about history, social studies and language arts. It's no longer about pushing papers, pencils and dittos," Ms. Smith said. "There is more to intelligence then just logical thinking. Kids need to be recognized for other talents. There are gifts of all sorts."

"And teachers in the Dream Team need to be recognized for their dedication to go through all this training," Ms. Windsor said. "They are shifting their thinking about instructing from being a sage on the stage to a guide on the side."

CATS: Some express anger with research

(From 1B)

Ms. Hill now plans to eventually take her complaints to the Texas Legislature and ask them to change the law allowing animals to be used for medical education and research.

"Many states have already banned using animals as research models," she said. "I think something can be done if we speak out."

Ms. Hill also hopes to persuade the city to vote against allowing the Animal Control Center to donate or loan animals for research.

Authorities release one of Texas' most notorious killers

By Michael Graczyk
Associated Press Writer

HUNTSVILLE — James C. Cross, convicted in the 1965 rape-strangulation of a University of Texas student, walked out of prison a free man Wednesday after serving more than 26 years behind bars.

Cross, who confessed to two slayings but was only tried in one, had served enough "good time" on his 80-year sentence to be discharged from prison with no parole restrictions. He had been denied parole 20 times.

"He's completed his sentence," prison spokesman Charles Brown said. "Once he's completed his sentence he's free.'"

The gray-haired Cross, now 50, walked down the steps of the Walls Unit about 8 a.m. Wednesday.

Without responding to reporters' questions, he jumped into the back seat of his attorney's blue Cadillac, putting his arm around the women he had married several years ago while out of prison for a second trial. The car then sped away.

Although the slayings of the two students stunned the state, Cross has led a seemingly quiet life in prison, earning several college degrees.

His attorney, David Botsford, read a brief statement Wednesday in which he promised Cross would be a productive member of society and posed no threat to the public.

"Prison guards, wardens, psychiatrists, psychologists and friends that have known Jim Cross, lived with Jim Cross, seen him on a day-to-day basis over the past 27 years, unanimously say he will not be a danger, he will not be a threat," Botsford said.

Brown said Cross "has been pretty industrious" while in prison. "As far as model prisoner, I don't use that term."

But during a press conference Wednesday in Austin, his release was criticized by crime victims' advocates. They called for tougher sentencing standards and prompt enforcement of the death penalty.

"Where is justice? Where is common sense?" asked Matt Harnest of the Coalition for a Safer Society. "The punishment needs to fit the crime."

Cross was sentenced for the July 18, 1965, slaying of Susan Rigsby, 21, of Dallas. Miss Rigsby and her Chi Omega sorority sister, 21-year-old Shirley Stark, who had dated Cross, stopped at Cross' apartment on their way to register for school.

Both women were strangled. Their bodies were found 12 days later in an Austin field.

Cross initially helped console the victims' families and offered police phony clues in the search for the two women, but he confessed two weeks after the slayings.

Cross, then a 22-year-old English major at UT, told police he put the two bodies in his closet, covered them with clothes and went to visit friends. He brought a date to the apartment later that night and had sex with her a few feet from where the bodies were stashed.

Travis County jurors found Cross guilty of Miss Rigsby's capital murder in 1966, sentencing him to life in prison.

In the 1970s, the murder case against him involving Miss Stark was dismissed, with prosecutors saying the facts and circumstances already had been presented during Miss Rigsby's trial and that a key witness had since died.

Cross won a second trial in Miss Rigsby's murder after a U.S. Supreme Court ruling about determining whether a defendant is competent to stand trial became state law and retroactive.

Jurors in the second trial convicted Cross of murder with malice and sentenced him to 80 years.

Jury divides tequila death responsibility

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — A jury made a "landmark finding" in ruling that a tequila maker was partly responsible in the alcohol-related death of a Texas A&I University student, an attorney says.

The Nueces County jury ruled Tuesday that Marie Brinkmeyer was two-thirds responsible for her death from drinking at least 20 shots of Pepe Lopez tequila.

But jurors, who deliberated five days in the case against Brown-Forman Co. of Louisville, Ky., also awarded $1.5 million to Ms. Brinkmeyer's mother, Joyce Brune.

"The mere fact that they found the alcohol was defective as marketed and that (the defect) was a contributing cause to her death was a major landmark finding and we are real happy about it," said Jim Ragan, Ms. Brune's attorney.

Brown-Forman officials issued a statement Wednesday that said they disagreed with the jury's verdict and plan to appeal. "This case involves a tragic accident, but we believe the young woman herself was responsible for it," the statement said.

Ms. Brinkmeyer, 18, was found dead in her dorm room at Kingsville on Nov. 14, 1983. According to trial testimony, she drank at least 20 straight shots of tequila at a dorm drinking party the previous night.

John F. Banzhaf III, a law professor specializing in product liability law at George Washington University National Law Center in Washington, D.C., said the case could make manufacturers more liable for injuries caused by their products.

But University of Texas law professor Bill Powers, a product-liability authority, said the verdict may be viewed as a fluke by liquor companies.

The suit, filed in 1985, contended Brown-Forman was negligent because it failed to warn consumers that drinking too much alcohol too quickly could be fatal.

Jurors said it was a difficult case to decide.

"There were extremes on either side of the issue," said presiding juror Bruce Easter. "That didn't help matters. I think a problem that some of the jurors had was separating their personal feelings and personal experiences with alcohol from the facts of the case."

"For us, the company did not do all that we would have expected a prudent company to do as to the proper use of its product," said juror Steven Skidmore.

Ms. Brune said she was pleased with the decision.

"I think the message will be to put warning labels on their product so people will know that alcohol is lethal and to educate and advertise about their product, that it is lethal," she said.

Ms. Brune said she intends to use some of the award money to set up a scholarship fund and improve educational facilities in her hometown of Orange Grove.

Ragan said he expects Ms. Brune to end up with about $500,000.

"Because the liquor company is 35 percent at fault, they will have to pay 35 percent of the award," Ragan said.

Man rapes clerk at religious bookstore

EL PASO (AP) — A man charged with raping a woman in a religious bookstore was tracked down with the help of bystanders who pointed him out to police.

Raul Mendoza, 40, remained jailed Wednesday in lieu of $15,000 bail on a charge of sexual assault.

"He came in and started asking the lady for reading materials, and when the other customers left he attacked her," Officer Robert de la Rosa said.

Witnesses told police the attacker walked into the New Life Christian Bookstore at 12:30 p.m. Tuesday and began thumbing through religious literature and asking the clerk questions about her stock of books.

Women file lawsuit against UT admissions

AUSTIN (AP) — Admission policies at the University of Texas law school are under challenge by two women who contend they were denied admission because they are white.

In a lawsuit filed in U.S. District Court, Cheryl J. Hopwood of Universal City and Stephanie C. Haynes of Austin said they are victims of reverse discrimination.

The women said they met requirements and would have been admitted to the UT law school this fall were it not for preferential admission policies that give special treatment to blacks and Hispanics.

Their suit was filed Tuesday, one day after the federal officials announced they had found that the minority admissions program of the law school at the University of California at Berkeley violated civil rights laws. The government said that program improperly shielded minorities from competition with other applicants.

Austin lawyer Steven W. Smith, who represents Ms. Hopwood and Ms. Haynes, said it was no accident that the suit against UT was filed after the Berkeley announcement.

"Our claim is similar to the one made in the Berkeley case. We're saying that anyone who gets federal funds can't discriminate on the basis of race," Smith said.

UT officials defended their admissions policies, saying they are in compliance with federal laws. They also said UT was different from Berkeley.

"We're in conformity with the Office of Civil Rights. We're very proud of this program. We have a significant number of minorities," said UT law school dean Mark Yudof.

"In a state as diverse as Texas, it is very important that minorities have access to the legal profession," he said.

Law school figures show about 22 percent of the 512 students admitted to UT's law school this fall are minorities. Of those, 41 are black, 55 Hispanic and 16 Asian.

The lawsuit names the state of Texas and the UT system as defendants. It asks that the court declare UT's affirmative action policies unconstitutional.

The two women also are seeking to be admitted to next fall's law school freshman class and are asking for monetary damages that include attorney fees.

To remedy past discrimination, UT entered into an agreement with the U.S. Department of Education in 1982 to increase the numbers of minorities in undergraduate and graduate programs, including the law school, university officials said.

Woman dies after release from Mexican prison

EDINBURG (AP) — A young Austin woman who spent almost a year in a Mexican prison, accused of purchasing illegal amounts of valium, died Wednesday morning, just hours after being released by authorities.

Jennifer Whitt, 24, who was released Tuesday night from the prison in Reynosa, Mexico, was taken to the emergency room at Edinburg Hospital about 2:20 a.m., said spokeswoman Cynthia Garza. She died about 30 minutes later.

Ms. Garza said she could not give out any details until an autopsy was performed. Justice of the Peace Rene Torres, who ordered the autopsy, said a report wouldn't be ready for at least four weeks.

A story broadcast by KGBT-TV showed that Ms. Whitt appeared be in good physical condition at her release. Her father playfully threw her over his shoulder as they crossed the international bridge into Hidalgo, Texas.

"Before this happened I took a lot of freedom for granted. I took a lot of my family for granted," Ms. Whitt told KGBT. "Now I appreciate them more. Freedom is beautiful."

A family friend, Willie Garcia, said the family left the bridge to have dinner.

He said the Whitts called him about 1:30 a.m. Wednesday to say their daughter was having an asthma attack and that she had to be rushed to the hospital.

Ms. Whitt's parents, who were in Edinburg making funeral preparations Wednesday, were not immediately available for comment.

"They're just really, really devastated with this right now," Garcia said.

"It was a long nine and half months to get her out and they had her for two hours," he said.

Ms. Whitt had been ill during her imprisonment, complaining of back problems, and at one point spent several days in the prison clinic after an apparent asthma attack, said U.S. Consul Janice L. Jacobs.

"When we were there, if she had any kind of medical problems we would make sure that she got to the clinic, that she got to see a nurse or a doctor and that she got the medication that she needed," Ms. Jacobs said.

Ms. Jacobs said the U.S. Consul's office no longer had jurisdiction in the case because Ms. Whitt died in Texas.

Bush proposes steps to get tough on child-support slackers

FOND DU LAC, Wis. (AP) — Reaching out to women voters, President Bush on Wednesday proposed measures to get tough on "deadbeat dads" who fail to pay child support.

In a new proposal just 34 days before the election, Bush called for penalties ranging from revoking driver's licenses to putting parents in prison in some cases for being delinquent in their child support. "Each year, $5 billion in court-ordered child support — $5 billion — fails to reach families and kids who desperately need it," Bush said.

The president, trailing in the polls, also taunted Democrat Bill Clinton for not accepting his challenge for four debates.

"He waffles. I can't find him. He's lost. He's missing in action. He refuses on this issue to take a position one way or the other, just like on all these other issues," said Bush, who for weeks took political heat for refusing to consent to debates proposed by a bipartisan commission. Clinton's position is that Bush should show up for the two debates still scheduled by the commission.

Campaigning in Wisconsin and New Jersey, Bush tried to close the "gender gap" in which women are far more hesitant than men to support the president. In Newark, the president also renewed his attack on Clinton as an advocate of higher taxes and bigger government. Brushing aside Clinton's criticism of his record, Bush said the election isn't about the past "but what we're going to do in the future and our hopes for the future."

"We have to change the American system of child support, and the statistics there are not pretty," the president said. He said that in 1989, fathers were absent from 10 million families, and only a little more than half of absent parents have been ordered to pay child support.

"And those required to pay, only half due on time and in full. And only one in five absent parents pay for children's health care."

Bush said his plan would require all states to recognize and enforce other states' child support orders.

And, he said, "We will require organizations who receive support from the Legal Services Corp. to devote 10 percent of their federal funds to helping mothers who need legal help track down a deadbeat dad.

"And we will say to deadbeat parents who owe and haven't paid, then you're going to pay a price. You'll get no passport, no professional licenses, no housing or student loans or any other help from the federal government until you do right by your children."

Aides said Bush's proposal, consisting mainly of suggestions from a bipartisan study group, would be sent to Congress before lawmakers reconvene in January.

Among other things, it would require employers to withhold money from the paychecks of employees under court order to pay child support unless the parents have other arrangements. The money would be paid directly to the parent with custody.

It also would enable the Internal Revenue Service to collect overdue child-support payments as if they were federal tax liabilities.

States would be required to revoke driver's and other licenses, of parents more than $10,000 in arrears.

Clinton has called for blocking deadbeat dads from borrowing money by reporting them to credit agencies, using the IRS to collect payments, starting a national databank to help police track down the delinquents and making it a felony to cross state lines to avoid paying child support.

Bush said that when it comes to protecting women, Clinton has a poor record. "Since Bill Clinton was elected governor, Arkansas' welfare rolls have increased by 19 percent, 13 percent faster than the rest of the nation," Bush said.

In Oshkosh, Bush accepted the endorsement of an array of Wisconsin law enforcement groups.

Later, Bush accepted the endorsement of New Jersey law enforcement agencies and a construction laborers union local.

Fire rages out of control west of Lake Tahoe

KYBURZ, Calif. (NYT) — Fed by gusting winds and tinder-dry pines, a fast-moving fire in the El Dorado National Forest nearly doubled in size, spreading beyond the American River Canyon, jumping rivers, roads and fire breaks, and exploding canyons and ridges into sheets of flame.

The fire along U.S. Highway 50 southwest of Lake Tahoe had consumed more than 16,300 acres and dozens of vacation homes by mid-afternoon Wednesday and was spreading rapidly by the hour.

Firefighters had no estimated time for containment or control. "Conditions are beyond critical," said Linda Szczepanak, U.S. Forest Service night operations chief.

After burning the communities of White Hall and Riverton on Tuesday, the fire jumped Highway 50, sending one arm north and another south.

"There's just no way of telling what it's going to do, the way the winds are blowing," said Sharon Torrance, a fire information officer at the state Department of Forestry command post in Placerville.

"There's a plume of smoke out my window that looks like an atom bomb, and people can see it from South Shore and Tahoe City, 30 miles away."

As the blaze spread, falling trees injured two firefighters, neither of them seriously.

More than 150 people fled the tiny summer-home communities of White Hall, Silver Fork, Riverton and Kyburz, which are strung along wooded Highway 50 and the winding canyon formed by the South Fork of the American River.

A pall of white smoke hung over the canyon. Highway 50, usually crowded with cars traveling to and from the Tahoe basin, was eerily empty, patrolled only by fire and utility trucks.

More than 2,000 firefighters, using bulldozers, hoses, shovels and helicopters, desperately struggled to create firebreaks. But often they found they simply had to get out of the way.

Woman testifies dentists traded sex for drugs

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A former patient of twin dentists testified Wednesday that the brothers traded prescription drugs for sex with her in an arrangement that was never spelled out but was implicitly understood by all.

Kenya Wimpey testified during the third day of hearings to determine whether Brent and Kent Hansen, 54, will keep their dental licenses.

"I knew that if I had sex with (Kent), I could get drugs," Wimpey testified. "He knew I liked the nitrous oxide and he knew I liked the drugs and I knew he liked the sex."

State attorneys claim the brothers accepted the woman's sexual favors in a trade for the painkiller Demerol, then photographed some encounters. The brothers are also accused of inappropriate sexual contact with five other patients, over-prescribing drugs to 13 people and multiple instances of fraudulent billing, changing medical records and incompetent treatment.

No criminal charges have been filed against the two, described by a defense attorney as devout Mormons and family men. They have a joint practice in Spanish Forks, about 50 miles south of Salt Lake City.

Study doesn't find link between cancer, caffeine

By Jean Carper

Here is some good news for women who drink coffee and fear breast cancer. It has been widely speculated that beverages containing methylxanthines, which includes caffeine, may boost the risk of breast cancer. But a major new study finds no connection.

Carper

Researchers at the New York State Department of Health studied 3,234 women between the ages of 19 and 79. They concluded there was no link between breast cancer at any age and drinking regular coffee, decaf coffee, tea or colas with caffeine.

Eating theobromine found in chocolate candy and chocolate drinks was tied to a rise in breast cancer risk in postmenopausal women, but not enough to be of concern, researchers said.

Another study at the State University of New York found that women who ate more fruits and vegetables were less likely to develop breast cancer.

And you can now add beans to potential anti-breast-cancer fare. New research reported in the Medical Tribune showed that Hispanic women who ate high amounts of beans cut their risk of breast cancer. A possible reason: Beans are rich in phytoestrogens known to help block pro-cancer hormone activity.

Fertility foods

Attention, men: If you are not eating seafood, you may be deficient in selenium and zinc. And that could mean low blood levels of the male hormone testosterone, less semen and low sperm counts, promoting infertility, according to two new studies.

U.S. Department of Agriculture researchers had 11 young men go on a very low zinc diet, devoid of zinc-rich seafood, meat, dairy products, whole-grain or fortified cereals, for a month. On the mineral-deficient diet, their semen output during ejaculation dropped about one-third and their blood testosterone levels fell about 20 percent. Less semen, hence less sperm, can impair fertility, and low testosterone can decrease sex drive, other research has found.

Another study from Croatia, site of a major international conference on trace minerals, found that men who had a selenium deficiency had significantly lower sperm counts.

To get more zinc, eat shellfish. Oysters are super sources. Salmon, swordfish and tuna are high in selenium. One surprising food rich in both selenium and zinc is the Brazil nut. Also high in zinc: whole-grain cereals, beans, lentils and pumpkin seeds.

Tourista advice

Taking a trip to a foreign country where you may come down with diarrhea? Here is some advice from David A. Sack, M.D., associate professor of international health at Johns Hopkins University School of Public Health.

If you drink water, make it bottled carbonated water. Carbonated water is better than plain bottled water, because carbonation makes water acidic and more deadly to bacteria that cause diarrhea.

If you eat dairy products, make it yogurt, for the same reason. Yogurt, being acidic, is safe because diarrhea-causing bacteria cannot survive in it. The "jury is out" on whether yogurt also helps cure diarrhea, once it occurs, says Dr. Sack.

If you get "traveler's diarrhea," drink lots of liquids, such as fruit juices and starchy soups, for example, made with rice, potatoes or noodles. One of the best is "good old chicken-noodle soup," says Dr. Sack, if you also drink lots of water to dilute the saltiness. Gatorade is OK, but soft drinks like Coca-Cola and 7-Up are too high in sugar and too low in sodium and needed electrolytes to do any good, he says. Diet sodas are worse, having no nutritive value.

Oyster antidote

Eating raw or lightly cooked oysters can make you seriously ill. But your chances of getting liver-damaging hepatitis from contaminated raw oysters are dramatically less if you wash them down with an alcoholic drink, suggests a new study from the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.

The study found that the alcohol in a single glass of wine, a cocktail or a shot of whiskey or vodka reduced the risk of getting hepatitis A from raw oysters by 90 percent. Beer does not contain enough alcohol to suppress the viral disease, said co-author Karl C. Klontz, M.D., now at the Food and Drug Administration.

Drinking a high-alcohol beverage along with the oysters seemed to prevent hepatitis, regardless of how many oysters were eaten, the study showed.

Dr. Klontz speculates that the alcohol somewhat blocks absorption of the hepatitis virus into the bloodstream.

Nevertheless, this does not make raw oysters safe to eat, warns Dr. Klontz. For one thing, he points out, raw oysters also may contain the deadly Vibrio vulnificus and other organisms, not known to be destroyed by alcohol.

Cholesterol question

If you eat high-cholesterol foods like eggs, will your blood cholesterol go up, promoting heart disease? Some studies say no. Other studies say yes.

To find out who is right, Paul N. Hopkins, a cardiologist at the University of Utah in Salt Lake City, did a "meta-analysis" of 27 studies on the problem.

Here's are his conclusions:

It depends on how high your blood cholesterol is and how much dietary cholesterol you are eating in the first place. The higher these are, the less likely adding more cholesterol will push blood cholesterol up further.

If your blood cholesterol is low and you usually eat very little dietary cholesterol, piling on the eggs and other cholesterol-rich foods will probably send it up higher.

For most Americans eating another egg or two a day would produce little change in blood cholesterol.

Eating saturated animal fat is much more apt to raise cholesterol in your blood than eating more cholesterol.

Genetic makeup accounts for about 50 percent of variability in blood cholesterol levels; saturated fat, 30 percent; and dietary cholesterol, 20 percent.

Young bones, old bones

The adage that milk and/or calcium makes strong bones is true, according to new studies. And this holds true whether your bones are old or young. Bones are less likely to fracture if you get more calcium.

Kids who ate more calcium before puberty had denser, stronger bones, Indiana University researchers found in a test of identical twins. Half the kids got a supplement, giving them double the recommended dietary allowance (RDA) for calcium for three years. Their bones were up to 5 percent more dense than those of their twins who merely ate a diet containing the RDA for calcium.

Researchers said the kids with stronger bones should have up to a 40 percent lower risk of fractures. The calcium supplement did not strenghten bones in children past puberty.

Other research shows adequate calcium in the elderly, even in those with bone-crippling osteoporosis, can help ward off fractures.

Tips: Calcium from food, notably milk, is best utilized by the body, especially by the elderly, who may lack stomach acid needed to dissolve pills. Of supplements, calcium citrate is more soluble, thus better absorbed, than calcium carbonate.

Most children have 6 to 8 colds a year, doctors say

Associated Press

School is here and the phones at pediatricians' offices are ringing, as concerned parents wonder whether their little one is too sick for school.

Following is information from Better Homes and Gardens magazine on the most common illnesses schoolchildren get, along with advice from doctors on what parents can do to prevent some ailments:

■ Colds. School-aged youths have six to eight colds per year, says Dr. Howard Taras, professor of pediatrics at the University of California, San Diego. Caused by viruses, not damp weather, colds spread through the air (via cough and sneeze droplets) and by direct contact (touching people and contaminated objects, such as doorknobs and telephone receivers). From an infection-control standpoint, there isn't much reason to keep your child out of school, says Dr. Taras. Youngsters are contagious a day or two before the onset of symptoms, so by the time your child has a runny nose other children probably have been exposed, he notes.

"The critical thing is how a child feels," says Dr. Bradley Bradford, pediatrics chairperson at Pittsburgh's Mercy Hospital. Kids who feel miserable can't concentrate or learn, he says. Use your best judgment.

Antibiotics won't help a cold, but they can be useful if sinusitis or another secondary infection develops. Check with your doctor if symptoms persist for more than 10 days.

Treatment: Lots of rest, warmth, fluids — and a little chicken soup, too. If you must get help from the pharmacy shelf, stick to one-drug, one-symptom remedies, advises Dr. Taras.

Try a decongestant to unclog nasal stuffiness. Acetaminophen reduces fever and achiness. Don't give kids aspirin. It's linked to a deadly illness called Reye's syndrome.

Prevention: Dr. Taras says that frequent washing of hands may help prevent colds. Use disposable tissues, not cloth handkerchiefs. Avoid sharing food, utensils, and towels.

■ Flu. A viral infection, influenza (flu) has symptoms similar to the common cold, but usually they are more severe and potentially more dangerous. Flu can lead to pneumonia, the fifth leading cause of death in the United States (though rarely in children).

Treatment: Unlike a cold, which comes on slowly, flu typically arrives like a freight train. In a few hours your child can be bedded by high fever, chills, headache, severe cough, weak muscles, and overall achiness. Treat flu symptoms as you would a cold's.

Prevention: Flu vaccine, which is safe and has few side effects, offers immunity for a year. However, it is tailored for particular strains and sometimes different flu varieties circulate. Health experts recommend reserving the vaccine for children who are chronically ill, such as those suffering from heart and lung disorders, says Dr. Susan Aronson, a Hahnemann University pediatrics professor.

■ Strep Throat. Most sore throats are part of a cold and clear up without complications, but one variety is a troublemaker. About 10 percent of sore throats are caused by streptococcus bacteria, which if left untreated can damage the heart (rheumatic fever) and kidneys (nephritis).

Symptoms include high fever, swollen neck glands, and pus on tonsils. But it can be milder. Only a throat culture at your doctor's office can diagnose it for sure, says Dr. Martin Sklaire, associate clinical professor of pediatrics at Yale Medical School.

Treatment: Confirmed cases of strep are treated with antibiotics. A child can return to school after 24 hours of treatment. To avoid rebound infection, have your child take the medicine for a full 10 days.

Prevention: There's little you can do to counter the spread of strep infections. Instead, watch for symptoms and get treatment immediately to avoid dangerous complications.

■ Chicken pox. This is highly contagious. Almost half of the children entering school have already had the disease and are immune to it.

The virus spreads by direct contact and by coughs and sneezes. First sign: a rash of small red spots that erupt into cloudy, fluid-filled blisters. These break open, then crust over in a few days.

Children can get 400 to 500 chicken pox sores, which crop up daily over the course of four or five days. When they appear on the scalp, mouth or eyelids, the pox can be nettlesome.

Most schools will not admit children until scabs are crusted over, about seven to 10 days.

Usually, chicken pox doesn't call for a visit to the doctor. The majority of cases resolve themselves without long confinements or consequences, but pneumonia, encephalitis, and other serious complications do occur rarely. Call for advice if your child runs a temperature above 102 degrees or has vomiting, extreme lethargy, or a stiff neck.

Treatment: Until recently, normal childhood chicken pox had no treatment, but recent studies suggest the drug acyclovir hastens healing and reduces fever and itching.

The drug is safe, but it costs about $70 per child and must be given within 24 hours of the appearance of the rash, says Dr. Janet Gilsdorf, associate professor of pediatrics at the University of Michigan Medical Center. Also, the gain in healing time is only about a day.

Several home remedies help children feel better. Cool baths (with soap) lessen chances of infection. Warm baths with a half cup of uncooked oatmeal ease itching. You also can apply calamine lotion or Benedryl, a non-prescription antihistamine, to reduce discomfort. Do not give your child aspirin. Trim your child's fingernails to prevent scars caused by scratching the sores.

Prevention: Until a chicken pox vaccine is approved, the best prevention is simply to avoid anyone who is contagious.

Brooks, Gill, Carpenter win major country awards

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Garth Brooks was voted entertainer of the year and Vince Gill won two honors Wednesday night at the 26th annual Country Music Association Awards Show.

Brooks' 9 million selling "Ropin' the Wind," which has been No. 1 on both the pop and country charts, also won best album to give him two major awards during the nationally televised presentations at the Grand Ole Opry House.

"One thing I have learned from this past year is music and artists are going to come and go, but it's family. That's what it's all about," said Brooks, winning top entertainer for the second straight year. Brooks' wife, Sandy, gave birth to their first child, a daughter, over the summer.

Gill, who decided to pursue a singing career instead of playing pro golf, was voted top male vocalist for the second straight year. He also won a songwriter's award for co-writing his hit "Look at Us" with Max D. Barnes.

"Now I know how Michael Jordan feels to repeat," Gill said in accepting the award as best male vocalist, referring to the Chicago Bulls' basketball star who led his team to two straight NBA titles.

Mary-Chapin Carpenter won female vocalist of the year, her first CMA award, but said her voice has never impressed her.

"I've never been that fond of my singing. It's the others that inspired me," said Carpenter, who won a Grammy Award earlier this year.

Billy Ray Cyrus' bouncy "Achy Breaky Heart," which inspired a new dance and launched Cyrus from an unknown to star status, won single of the year.

"I believed in the song the first time I heard it," Cyrus said backstage after receiving a bullet-shaped trophy. "It hit me like a hit record should."

The new honky-tonk duet Brooks & Dunn were voted duo of the year, breaking a four-year hold on the award by the mother-daughter act the Judds, who are no longer performing together.

Fiddler Mark O'Connor won best musician and Diamond Rio was chosen best group.

Scientists map two chromosomes

NEW YORK (AP) — Scientists have created the most complete maps yet of individual human chromosomes, an important step in the effort to uncover all the genes that create humans.

The maps cover the most significant portion of the Y chromosome, which makes fetuses develop as males, and of chromosome number 21, linked to such diseases as Down syndome and some cases of Alzheimer's disease.

Such maps help scientists isolate new genes for further study, and specialists said the significance of new work goes beyond the two chromosomes.

The two new reports are "very important" because they show that "useful detailed maps can be generated rather quickly," said Mark Guyer, assistant director for program coordination at the National Center for Human Genome Research, part of the National Institutes of Health.

Mapping all the human chromosomes is an interim goal of the Human Genome Project, which seeks eventually to reveal the details of all human genes.

Chromosomes are microscopic rod-shaped structures that contain long strings of deoxyribonucleic acid (DNA). Parts of this DNA make up genes.

The maps consist of overlapping fragments of DNA that, taken together, span the most scientifically interesting region of each chromosome. They also provide landmarks along the length of this span.

The chromosome 21 map is reported in Thursday's issue of the journal Nature by Daniel Cohen of the Center for the Study of Human Polymorphisms in Paris and by scientists from Genethon, a genetic mapping research center in Evry, France.

The Y chromosome map will be reported in Friday's issue of the journal Science by David Page and colleagues at the Whitehead Institute for Biomedical Research and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in Cambridge, Mass.

"These maps are both more complete than anything we've had before" in human chromosomes, said Charles Cantor, director of the Center for Advanced Research in Biotechnology at Boston University.

He called them an important step in the effort to discover details of the estimated 100,000 or more human genes, but he emphasized that the maps covered only a small fraction of the genetic material people have.

The two chromosomes are among the smallest human ones. Everybody has 22 types, plus the X chromosome in women and the X and the Y chromosomes in men.

The Y chromosome map was constructed by analyzing DNA from a man who had four Y chromosomes instead of one. The extra chromosomes provided more material for analysis.

Public Notice

Southwestern Bell Telephone Company has asked the Public Utility Commission of Texas (PUC) for approval to offer new optional call management services called Caller Identification Service (Caller ID) and Anonymous Call Rejection (ACR).

Caller ID is a new optional phone service which allows subscribers to see the phone number and/or name of most local calls before they answer the phone. Caller ID also allows the recording of the date, time, name and/or phone number of calls. Currently, Caller ID would work only on most local calls, not long distance calls. It would also require that a separate display unit be connected to the telephone. These units that attach to the telephone will be available from various retail vendors, including Southwestern Bell, at a cost starting at approximately $50.

Southwestern Bell is also proposing that all customers be able to "block," or stop their name/number from being transmitted and displayed on a Caller ID device, free of charge. You would have this option of "blocking" your name/number on each call free of charge. There would be no need to subscribe to this service. All customers would have this capability when Caller ID is introduced in their area.

If you want to block your name or number, you need only press *67 on your touch-tone pad (or dial 1167 from a rotary phone) before dialing the telephone number. The person you're calling would see displayed a message such as "private" or "anonymous" on their Caller ID display unit.

Southwestern Bell also proposes that qualified domestic violence and law enforcement groups have the option of free per-line blocking, or free per-call blocking.

Anonymous Call Rejection (ACR or "block the blocker") allows subscribers to automatically reject all calls that have been marked anonymous, or "blocked" by the person calling. It is not necessary to subscribe to Caller ID Name/Number to subscribe to ACR. With ACR, your telephone will not ring if the person calling you has "blocked" his/her name or number. The person calling whose identification is blocked will receive a message to hangup and call back with caller identification unblocked. Following are the proposed monthly rates for Caller ID and ACR.

Proposed Rates (monthly)*	Residence	Business
Calling Number only	$6.50	$ 8.50
Calling Name only	$6.50	$ 8.50
Calling Name & Number	$8.00	$12.00
Anonymous Call Rejection	$3/$1	$3/$1

* These rates are in addition to the initial installation charges and monthly basic service rate. For residence customers, installation charges are $2.70 per feature, with a maximum charge of $5.40. For business customers, the charges are $5.40 per feature, with a maximum charge of $10.75.

 Anonymous Call Rejection is $3 per month if purchased without Caller ID and is $1 per month when purchased with Caller ID Name or Number.

This proceeding has been designated Docket No. 11362, and a hearing on the merits has been scheduled for November 16, 1992. The PUC has jurisdiction to consider this matter pursuant to Sections 16, 18, 37 and 38 of the Public Utility Regulatory Act (PURA). This application was filed pursuant to the provisions of the PUC's Substantive Rule 23.24. Among the issues that will be addressed in this proceeding is the legality of the Caller ID device and service under Texas wiretap laws.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the PUC as soon as possible. The deadline to intervene is October 26, 1992. A request to intervene, participate, or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information may also be obtained by calling the PUC Public Information Office at (512) 458-0256 or (512) 458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf.

Congress votes to release assassination files on JFK

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress sent President Bush legislation Wednesday to release to the public virtually all of the government's classified files on the assassination of President Kennedy.

The secret material — held by Congress, federal agencies, libraries and archives — contains everything from autopsy photographs and top secret intelligence reports to newspaper clippings and tax returns.

On a voice vote, the House yielded to the Senate version of the legislation and gave up its demand for a court-appointed commission to review documents that officials insist on keeping secret.

Both the Senate and the Bush administration demanded that the five commission members be picked by the president with the approval of the Senate, rather than through the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia.

House Judiciary Chairman Jack Brooks, D-Texas, complained that "the same appointment procedures that unleashed critics" of past investigations of the Nov. 22, 1963, assassination in Dallas are being employed again.

But, he added, winning a turf fight over the issue was not worth risking the loss of a chance to get the files opened.

The legislation responds to renewed public interest in the assassination created by Oliver Stone's 1991 film "JFK," which portrayed an elaborate conspiracy surrounding the shooting. Stone was one of the chief lobbying forces behind the bill.

A presidentially appointed commission chaired by the late Supreme Court Chief Justice Earl Warren concluded in 1964 that the killing was the act of lone gunman Lee Harvey Oswald.

Files previously unavailable to the public that would be opened include those of the Warren Commission, the FBI, the CIA, the House Assassination Committee and a Senate committee chaired by the late Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho.

Also unsealed would be documents in the presidential libraries of Kennedy, Lyndon B. Johnson and Gerald R. Ford and the records of a commission chaired by the late Vice President Nelson Rockefeller that investigated links between the CIA, Oswald and Jack Ruby.

Disputes over whether to keep some secret because their disclosure might endanger national security or violate a person's privacy would be resolved by the five-member commission. But all documents would have to be released after 25 years.

No triple crown

HOUSTON — Gary Sheffield of the San Diego Padres will miss the rest of the season with a fractured right index finger, ending his chance to win the National League's triple crown.
X-rays taken Wednesday night in Houston revealed the fracture.
Sheffield, who was injured in Tuesday night's game against the Houston Astros, does not know how the injury occurred.
"All off a sudden it just swelled up and I couldn't hold the bat or the ball," he said
The finger started to swell up after the third or fourth inning.
"I felt it after the first at-bat," Sheffield said. "I told him (Padres manager Jim Riggleman) at the end of the game that it was really bothering me."
Sheffield leads the NL in hitting with a .330 average, .003 in front of second-place Andy Van Slyke of Pittsburgh. He has 33 homers, one behind teammate Fred McGriff's league-leading total, and is fourth in RBIs with 100, eight behind leader Darren Daulton of Philadelphia.

Brett gets 3,000

ANAHEIM, Calif. — George Brett, who fought through an injury-filled career to become one of the most prolific hitters ever, singled off Tim Fortugno in the seventh inning Wednesday night to follow Robin Yount of Milwaukee into 3,000-hit club.
Brett became the 18th player to get 3,000 hits in the major leagues, adding his name to list that began this season with Pete Rose at the top and Roberto Clemente at the bottom. And he did it with the 59th game of his career in which he had four or more hits.
Brett remained in the game after an ovation that lasted about five minutes.
Brett, who returned to the lineup after sitting out two days with a sore shoulder, had a slicing double in the first inning off Julio Valera, a drive to left that rookie Rob Ducey misplayed.
In the second, Brett followed Wally Joyner's leadoff single with a ground single through the right side of the infield.
After singling on 1-1 pitches his first two times up, Brett swung at a 1-0 pitch leading off the fifth.

3-4A kicks off league play

By Joe Wyatt
Staff writer

Area Football

The Big Spring Steers marched into Monahans for the 1991 regular season finale needing only a win to claim a berth in the state playoffs.

It's a win they still seek as they prepare to enter Loboes' country again, this time Friday at 8 p.m., for the start of another District 3-4A campaign.

Thanks to a 20-19 upset win over the Steers a year ago, Monahans kept Big Spring out of postseason play for the first time in four seasons. And while the revenge factor between these two teams always seems to be lurking close at hand — the last three games between them have been decided by one point — Big Spring coach Dwight Butler is hoping his charges will look beyond retribution.

"Once you start getting into the revenge mode things can go good or they can backfire," said Butler, whose Steers are 2-2 after a 14-6 loss last week to Snyder.

"You can get too hyped up over revenge and it can cost you a game. We're looking at this game like it's just starting the season over again."

Monahans is 3-1 following a narrow 21-17 defeat at the hands of Lubbock Monterey and figures to have a solid say about which teams will get out of 3-4A for the postseason.

And so figures Andrews, which has flexed its offensive muscles for an average of 433 yards a game, third among the state's Class 4A teams. The 4-0 Mustangs, who survived a scare from 0-4 Levelland last week on Jonathan McDonald's late fourth-quarter touchdown run, begin their 3-4A march against visiting Lake View. OSU's Smith still bristles at critics

■ Prodigal Buckeye tailback is part of reason for team's 3-0 start.

By Rusty Miller
AP Sports Writer

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Inside that prototype, 6-foot-2, 195-pound tailback's frame, Robert Smith carries a sizable stack of IOUs.

When he abruptly quit the Ohio State football team 13 months ago, charging that he had been told to skip classes by a coach, Smith was viewed as a prima donna by some fans, as a reluctant but courageous labor leader by others.

Now he has returned to the Buckeyes and is a large reason why they find themselves 3-0 and ranked 12th in the nation. But Smith hasn't forgotten the things that were said about him when he jumped ship.

"You never forget what happened," Smith says while munching on a sandwich before a recent practice, "but I think it's best to just move ahead and see what you can do in the future, rather than worry about what you did in the past."

But Smith still bristles when he discusses his critics. He stresses that his departure isn't worthy of discussion. But when the topic revolves back to those who questioned his commitment to academics or to football, his voice rises and the words come faster.

"There were some (in the media) that wanted to see me as a spoiled brat and created stories that I was scared about not starting or something like that," he says. "That's why I'm so glad things are going well this year. It at least silences some of the fools."

After gaining 1,126 yards to break Ohio State's freshman rushing record — overshadowing no less an Ohio icon than Archie Griffin — Smith was expected in due time to become the Buckeyes' sixth Heisman Trophy winner.

But just before the start of the 1991 season, he announced he was quitting the team. He blasted Cooper and assistant head coach Elliot Uzelac, charging the coaches had little regard for players' academics or health and calling for their dismissal. Both coaches denied the charges.

His decision created an uproar. The football team went 8-4, losing to rival Michigan for the fourth year in a row and then losing its third straight bowl game.

Meanwhile, Smith's scholarship was transferred to track

Maddux hurls 20th victory

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Greg Maddux no longer has to wonder what it would feel like to be a 20-game winner.

Maddux, who had come close twice before, finally did it Wednesday by scattering seven hits to lead the Chicago Cubs to a 6-0 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

"That question was getting old, and now I don't have to think about it anymore," Maddux said. "It was a good day.

NL Roundup

We needed the win badly. Wilkie (Rick Wilkins) called a good game. The defense was super and we scored some runs. Now, all I'm going to do is go out and celebrate."

Maddux turned down a $27.5 million, five-year offer from the Cubs at the All-Star break and is eligible for free agency following the season.

"I haven't made up my mind on free agency," he said. "I'm not closing any doors by any means."

Chicago stopped a season-worst, eight-game losing streak and also ended a six-game winning streak by the Pirates, who clinched their third straight NL East title on Sunday.

Maddux (20-11) pitched his fourth shutout and ninth complete game, joining Atlanta's Tom Glavine as the only 20-game winners in the NL. Maddux, who struck out nine and walked two, became a 20-game winner for the first time. He won 19 games in 1989 and 18 in 1988.

Ryne Sandberg had four singles and scored three runs for the Cubs. Randy Tomlin (14-9) gave up five runs and seven hits in five-plus innings.

"Nobody wants to go out and get beat," Pirates manager Jim Leyland said, "but you have to admire the way he did

Cowboys seek way to defeat Eagle QB

Associated Press

IRVING — It's a brain-twister the Dallas Cowboys have never solved: How do you beat Randall Cunningham?

The search is on at Valley Ranch for a solution. In five days the Cowboys have to find an answer for the Philadelphia Eagles perplexing and canny Cunningham who is 7-0 against the Cowboys.

The Cowboys have tried a "spy" with someone shadowing Cunningham's every move. They've blitzed linebackers. They've tried a three-man rush. Nothing has worked for long.

Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson said on Wednesday that the addition of Herschel Walker at running back has made Cunningham even more dan-

Life in the Friday Night Twilight Zone

Serling — "Imagine, if you will, a place on the other side where high school athletes play for the pure sake of having fun, a place where parents, school boards and lawsuits have nothing to do with the game at hand. A place called the Friday Night Twilight Zone."

Price

(A familiar theme song blares from the sound track, as Serling turns right to face the lights coming up on a scene we all have witnessed).

Serling — "Johnny, a high school senior, has just returned from practice. Not only has he put up with the jeers from classmates, he still hasn't mastered the new offense and he has a calculus exam first thing in the morning. When his mother enters the room, we realize, though, that, so far, all is right with the world."

Johnny — "Mom, it's embarrassing enough that you kicked the coach on the sidelines in our last game. Will you pleeeease stop calling the paper about my stats?"

Mom — "Oh, Honey, it's all for your own good. You'll see. When this suit is over with and we get that fast running back from the cross-town rival we can win state. You know you and those friends of yours can't win a ball game on your own. Anyway, those stats have to be right for your scrapbook."

Johnny — "OK Mom, but will you at least ask Dad to quit spying on the other team with binoculars from the alley? People are starting to talk. Anyway, I have a test to study for."

Serling — "Just as Johnny cracks his text book, however, an eerie breeze comes through the window, and with zombie-like eyes, Mom begins a most frightening dissertation."

Mom — "Dear, never you mind about little things like ball games. In the big picture, they are irrelevant. You study for that test and I'll bring you up some supper. We know that other team emphasizes winning far too much and we prefer the way we do things. If some people want to play for that other team so badly, let them. We can succeed without them."

Serling — "Wide-eyed, Johnny can't believe what he hears. Then, just as the mention of 'academic scholarship' reaches his auditory canal, the realization sinks in that he is inexorably stuck in the Friday Night Twilight Zone, never to be heard from again until he has his MBA safely hanging on a wall in the den."

(Fade to black).

In his slightly demented, Pollyanna way, the author of the preceding was well intentioned. The thing is, he feels his absurd quest for perspective is worth sharing with the general public. Alas, we think it may fall on deaf ears.

Viola slows Blue Jays with one-hitter

Associated Press

AL

TORONTO — Frank Viola took a no-hitter into the ninth inning before allowing a single to Devon White, and the Boston Red Sox slowed the Toronto Blue Jays' pennant drive with a 1-0 victory Wednesday night.

Viola (13-12) was pitching by his own request with only three days' rest against David Cone and the division-leading Blue Jays, who began the night with a 2½-game lead over Milwaukee in the AL East.

The Brewers, who had five games left, played later at Seattle, and Toronto's magic number for its second straight division title remained at three.

Tigers 4, Orioles 2

DETROIT — Detroit got six doubles and the Tigers turned four double plays in a victory over Baltimore.

Dan Gladden, who was 3 for 4, had two of the doubles and drove in a run during the Tigers' final home game of the season.

Detroit starter John Doherty (7-4) gave up two runs on nine hits in the six innings he worked. Doherty walked one and struck out two. Mark Leiter followed with two perfect innings and Mike Henneman worked the ninth for his 24th save.

Baltimore's Bob Milacki (6-8) was tagged for four runs on seven hits, six of them doubles, in his six innings.

Yankees 4, Indians 2

CLEVELAND — Melido Perez allowed three hits in eight innings and Danny Tartabull homered as New York stopped a three-game losing streak.

Cleveland was trying for its first three-game sweep of the Yankees since April 1989.

Perez (13-16) matched his career high in victories, set in 1990, by holding the Indians hitless and scoreless in all but the fourth inning. He walked three and struck out six. Steve Farr pitched the ninth for his 29th save.

White Sox 4, Twins 3

MINNEAPOLIS — Robin Ventura continued his domination of the Twins with a tie-breaking home run to lead off the eighth inning.

Ventura also doubled and scored in the sixth to raise his average to .395 with three homers against the Twins this year. Mike Dunne (2-0) allowed the game-tying run in his only inning but gained the victory, and Roberto Hernandez pitched two innings for his 12th save.

Mariners 7, Brewers 4

SEATTLE — The Milwaukee Brewers failed to take advantage of Toronto's loss to Boston, losing to Seattle and ending a seven-game winning streak.

The Brewers remained 2½ games behind the Blue Jays in the AL East, leaving Toronto with a magic number of two to clinch its second straight division title and third in four years. Milwaukee has four games left; Toronto has three.

Ken Griffey Jr., Tino Martinez and Bret Boone homered for Seattle, which ended Chris Bosio's club-record 10-game winning streak.

QB: Cunningham has 7-0 mark vs. Cowboys gerous in Monday Night Football's showdown of undefeated NFC East clubs at Veterans Stadium.

(From 1C)

But he quickly added "the real key to the team is Cunningham. Walker gives the Eagles a consistent running game. Yet, Randall Cunningham is still the focal point. In fact, Herschel helps their offensive line because the defense can't tee off on Randall expecting him to throw."

Johnson, naturally, wouldn't disclose the Cowboys defensive scheme but it will be an intricate one because the team has had two weeks to figure out a way to contain Cunningham. The Cowboys will try a defensive chess game on Cunningham.

"His scrambling can really get to a defense," Johnson said. "You have him stopped then he gets away."

Asked if he would try the "spy" route Johnson said "we've got to keep changing our defense up. We can't use any one thing and be totally effective against a great player like Cunningham. We'll try a bunch of different looks to keep him off balance."

The Dallas players are worried about Cunningham's improvisations.

"He can mess up a lot of really good game plans and preparations," said defensive back Issiac Holt. "I've seen him do it to us."

"He's the quickest thing I've ever seen," said Dallas defensive tackle Russell Maryland. "He's like tackling quick silver."

Johnson also said it was a "very unhappy" day for him when Walker went to Philadelphia as a free agent.

"I was not a happy coach when he signed with the Eagles," Johnson said. "I had hoped he would go to the AFC. He helps their football team. Philadelphia was already a top team in the division and now they are better."

Johnson said he didn't dread going into Philadelphia despite the rowdy Eagles fans.

"I've been hit in the head with a battery, beer and snowballs," he said. "But it (Veterans Stadium) is one of my favorite spots. It's exciting. It's why I'm in the coaching profession. I do worry about the crowd noise being a factor."

The Cowboys defeated the Eagles 25-13 in the Vet last year when Kelvin Martin's 85-yard punt return for a touchdown ignited a 17-point Cowboys charge in the fourth period.

it. That was vintage Maddux. He was fantastic. He makes the plays he has to make."

Mark Grace's RBI single put the Cubs ahead in the first, and Chicago chased Tomlin with four runs in the sixth. Grace doubled in a run, Luis Salazer hit a two-run triple and Rick Wilkins singled in a run off Bob Walk.

Andre Dawson's RBI groundout increased the lead to six runs in the seventh.

Mets 6, Phillies 2

NEW YORK — Chico Walker drove in three runs and five Philadelphia errors led to three unearned runs as New York snapped a seven-game losing streak.

Sid Fernandez (14-11), pitching his fifth complete game of the season, scattered eight hits, striking out five and walking one.

Giants 1, Braves 0

ATLANTA — Jeff Brantley blanked Atlanta over 5⅓ innings to run his scoreless streak to 20⅓ innings.

The Giants snapped a two-game losing streak and ended Atlanta's three-game winning streak, one night after the Braves clinched the NL West title.

Brantley (7-7), making only his fourth start after 52 relief appearances, allowed three hits, walked two and struck out eight. He beat Atlanta in his last start on Sept. 24 and is 3-0 as a starter.

Rod Beck pitched the final two innings for his 16th save.

Reds 3, Dodgers 1

CINCINNATI — Tim Belcher pitched seven strong innings for his fourth straight victory and Willie Greene drove in runs with a double and a single.

Belcher (15-14) matched his career high in victories by beating his former teammates for the second time in four starts this season.

Astros 5, Padres 4

HOUSTON — Eric Anthony hit a pair of two-run homers as Houston beat San Diego in its final at-bat for the second consecutive game.

Anthony, who leads the Astros with 19 homers, cut San Diego's lead to 4-2 with a homer in the fourth and added the game-winner in the eighth.

Cardinals 3, Expos 2

ST. LOUIS — Ray Lankford singled in the winning run with one out in the 11th innings as St. Louis beat Montreal to complete a three-game sweep.

It was the second straight extra-inning game for the Cardinals and their 26th of the season.

Hall/VDS picks V8-C

Staff report

The Pennzoil Hall/VDS racing team has chosen sides in the escalating engine war on the IndyCar circuit for 1993.

The selection is Chevrolet over Ford as the Midland-based team will race a car powered by the yet-to-be released Chevrolet V8-C engine.

The engine has been described as the "most technologically advanced Indy engine to date" and "the next generation" of the Chevrolet racing engine that has dominated the sport for seven years. Those comments were made by Frank Ellis, marketing manager for the Chevrolet RaceShop in Warren, Mich.

While technical specifications are being withheld by Chevrolet, the new engine is said to be smaller, lighter and more powerful than either the Chevrolet V8-A currently used by the Midland team or the Chevrolet V8-B, which has powered Penske team cars exclusively in 1992.

Advanced engineering features that have gone into the V8-C engine include a new engine management system developed by General Motors and Delco Electronics, according to Ellis. The control module and its software are ongoing developments of the Chevrolet racing engine design program.

Built in Brixworth, England, by Ilmor Engineering, the V8-C engine will be assembled and maintained for the Pennzoil Hall/VDS team by VDS Engines, also located in Midland.

AREA: Stanton, McCamey clash in meeting of District 6-2A teams

this week, while Pecos and Fort Stockton meet in 3-4A's other game.

Other Friday games involving area teams include a six-man collision between Midland Christian (4-) and Christoval (3-1). That matchup, at 7:30 p.m., pits the TAPPS state champion MC Mustangs vs. the UIL state runners-up Christoval Cougars.

Stanton visits McCamey, where both teams will be looking for their first District 6-2A victory of the season.

Garden City and Greenwood each have non-district homecoming games on tap, with the Bearkats hosting Sterling City and the Rangers playing host to Lubbock Cooper.

And Lamesa puts its early 3-1 record on the line against visiting Littlefield in a final non-district conflict.

The Rankin Red Devils (3-1) enjoy an open date.

Monahans and Big Spring each boast big-play offenses. The Steers average 381 yards a game, 10th in the state. And the Loboes are close behind at 14th, with a 365-yards-per-game average.

"Monahans does a great job with the athletes over there," Butler said of the Loboes, who are 54-17 under seventh-year coach Bren Holland.

"They have great running backs, who are big and have speed. They can power you and they can run away from you, too."

One of those backs is Bruce Ramsey, who broke loose for a 43-yard TD jaunt against Monterey.

But the Steers have offensive firepower of their own, including tight end Oscar Cervantes, whose 16 catches for 310 yards ranks seventh in Class 4A.

ANDREWS ALSO HAS weapons. McDonald's 56 points in four games ranks fourth among 4A runners. Lake View last defeated Andrews in 1983 and has lost 10-of-12 encounters since 1980. Coach W.T. Stapler will ask his Mustangs not to look past Lake View to next Friday's trip to Big Spring.

MIDLAND CHRISTIAN finds itself at home against Christoval, which fell 64-14 to Fort Hancock in last season's UIL six-man title game. The Cougars are coming off their only defeat of the season, last Saturday against Lazbuddie.

STANTON DREW first blood last week against Iraan, but dropped the 6-2A opener 37-14. McCamey was shutout last week by Wall. The Badgers are 5-3 against the Buffs in their last eight meetings, but only one team will emerge 1-1 in loop play.

GREENWOOD HAS never played Lubbock Cooper, but will be looking to make the Pirates their second 1992 victim. The Rangers (1-3) took a 21-12 loss from Alpine on Friday. It was their second defeat in a row at the hands of a team that has yet to lose. Denver City, which beat Lubbock Cooper 27-7 on Friday, is the other undefeated team that got by the Rangers.

GARDEN CITY rebounded from its first loss with a late rally that beat Robert Lee, 20-14 when Brent Seidenberger found David Blalock for a TD pass with four seconds to play. Sterling City is also 3-1 on the season and represents the final non-district test for coach Dennis Bryant's Bearkats.

LAMESA PUT A STOP to Canyon Randall's win streak with a 28-20 win over the Raiders last week. Cole Adams ran for a pair of TDs and added a field goal late in the game as the Tors improved to 3-1. Littlefield and Lamesa have not met since the 1960s.

Nagle keeps job

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. (AP) — Not only is Bruce Coslet not thinking about replacing a healthy Browning Nagle at quarterback, the New York Jets coach is convinced Nagle's quick ascension was not premature.

"I don't think we've taken a step back, I think we've taken a step forward, starting Browning Nagle ... " Coslet said Wednesday.

National title could be on line in Florida

By Rick Warner
AP Football Writer

Four times in the last five years, Miami has spoiled Florida State's chances of winning the national championship. The Seminoles would love to return the favor Saturday.

Once again, a national title could be at stake when the No. 2 Hurricanes meet the No. 3 Seminoles at the Orange Bowl.

The winner will become the leading challenger to top-ranked Washington, while the loser will probably be eliminated from the title chase.

"Whoever wins it has a chance to win the No. 1 prize," Florida State coach Bobby Bowden says. "The one that doesn't win, I don't think has a chance."

Losses to Miami in 1987, 1988, 1990 and last year probably cost Florida State national championships. But the Seminoles' only victory during the period — 24-10 at Tallahassee in 1989 — didn't stop the Hurricanes from winning the championship that season.

In fact, half of Florida State's eight defeats since the start of the 1987 season have come at the hands of Miami. Maybe the most painful was last year's 17-16 loss, when the Seminoles' Gerry Thomas missed a 34-yard field goal by inches in the closing seconds.

But this year looks like payback time for Florida State, a 3-point underdog.

While the Seminoles have gotten better each week, Miami took a giant step backward in last week's 8-7 squeaker over Arizona. The Hurricanes gained only 2 yards rushing, lost star defensive end Rusty Medearis for the season with a knee injury, and barely kept alive their 47-game home winning streak when Arizona missed a 51-yard field goal on the final play.

Miami's running game has ground to a halt because of an inexperienced offensive line and fullback Stephen McGuire's slow recovery from knee surgery. McGuire has killed Florida State the past two years, gaining a career-high 176 yards in 1990 and rushing for 142 yards last season. But he's only carried 15 times for 39 yards this season.

Miami's one edge could be at quarterback, where senior Gino Torretta has a lot more experience than Florida State's first-year starter, Charlie Ward. Torretta figures to be steadier, but Ward has shown bursts of brilliance in his first four games.

After last year's heartbreaking loss, Bowden joked that they would chisel "But he played Miami" on his tombstone. This year, there will be no need for gallows humor. ... FLORIDA ST. 24-17.

SMITH: OSU back gained 1,126 yards as freshman

where he helped the Buckeyes win their first Big Ten track title since 1948.

He made visits to Stanford and Southern Cal while he considered a transfer to play football.

Then, almost as abruptly as he quit, he rejoined the team in March. Coincidentally or not, his return came soon after Uzelac was asked to resign by Ohio State.

Smith says he and Cooper have agreed to not discuss the circumstances of his quitting. He says that a "lack of communication" was a major factor, but also blames "variables that coach Cooper and myself didn't have control over."

For his part, Cooper has welcomed Smith with open arms. So far, he has been rewarded. Smith, who leads the Buckeyes in rushing, gained 82 yards on 14 carries and scored the clinching touchdown in a 35-12 upset of then-No.8 Syracuse on Sept. 19. A painful cracked rib limited his playing time and kept him out of the starting lineup.

When it became evident Ohio State had the game in hand, Cooper became caught up in the moment.

"I grabbed him on the sideline and I hugged him. You should've seen him flinch and jump back from me because of the pain he had," Cooper said.

"Yeah, I remember him slapping me on the side, too," Smith said with a laugh. "He got real excited. It was probably the hardest hit I took all night."

Cooper adds, "I'm impressed with him in every way: in his work ethic, his intelligence, the way he performs in practice and the way he plays in games. He does what he's supposed to do."

Smith has also been accepted back by Ohio State's fans. He was greeted with polite applause in the season-opener, but has received more support with each yard he has gained.

Public Notice

Southwestern Bell Telephone Company, in accordance with the rules of the Public Utility Commission of Texas (PUC), hereby gives notice of the Company's intent to implement a new schedule of telephone rates in Texas for optional Custom Calling Services and Touch-tone service, effective March 15, 1993, unless otherwise determined by the PUC.

These proposed rates will not increase or decrease the Company's overall revenues; the net effect will be neutral to the Company's annual revenues.

The Company proposes to decrease the rates for Touch-tone service for residential customers from $1.00 to 68 cents, and also to reduce the Touch-tone rates for business customers from $1.75 to $1.70. In addition, the Touch-tone rates for business PBX trunks will be reduced from $3.15 to $2.18.

This proposal to decrease the rates for Touch-tone service does not change the commitment that the Company made in the Docket No. 8585 Stipulation to reduce the rates for Touch-tone service in 1993.

The Custom Calling Services affected by the Company's application are optional telephone service arrangements that provide the following features: Call Waiting, Call Forwarding, Three Way Calling, Speed Calling-8 and Speed Calling-30. Following are the feature combinations and their current and proposed rates.

	Residence		Business
	Current Rate	Proposed Rate	Current Rate	Proposed Rate
One Feature per line
Call Waiting	$2.10	$2.85	$2.65	$3.25
Call Forwarding	2.10	2.10	2.65	3.50
3-Way Calling	2.10	2.10	2.65	2.50
Speed Call-8	2.10	2.10	2.65	2.50
Two Features per line
Call Waiting, Call Forwarding	3.75	4.25	4.75	6.00
Call Waiting, 3-Way Calling	3.70	4.25	4.75	4.75
Call Waiting, Speed Calling-8	3.70	4.25	4.75	4.75
Call Forwarding, 3-Way Calling	3.70	3.50	4.80	5.00
Call Forwarding, Speed Calling-8	3.70	3.50	4.75	5.00
3-Way Calling, Speed Calling-8	3.70	3.50	4.75	4.00
Three Features per line
Call Waiting, Call Forwarding and 3-Way Calling	5.30	5.65	6.90	7.50
Call Waiting, Call Forwarding and Speed Calling-8	5.30	5.65	6.90	7.50
Call Waiting, 3-Way Calling and Speed Calling-8	5.30	5.65	6.90	6.25
Call Forwarding, 3-Way Calling and Speed Calling-8	5.30	4.90	6.90	6.50
Four Features per line
Call Waiting, Call Forwarding, 3-Way Calling, Speed Calling-8	6.90	7.05	9.00	9.00
Speed Calling - 30 code capacity	3.20	3.20	4.25	3.20

Most of the Company's residence and business customers who subscribe to Custom Calling Features and Touch-tone service will be affected by the proposed rate restructuring.

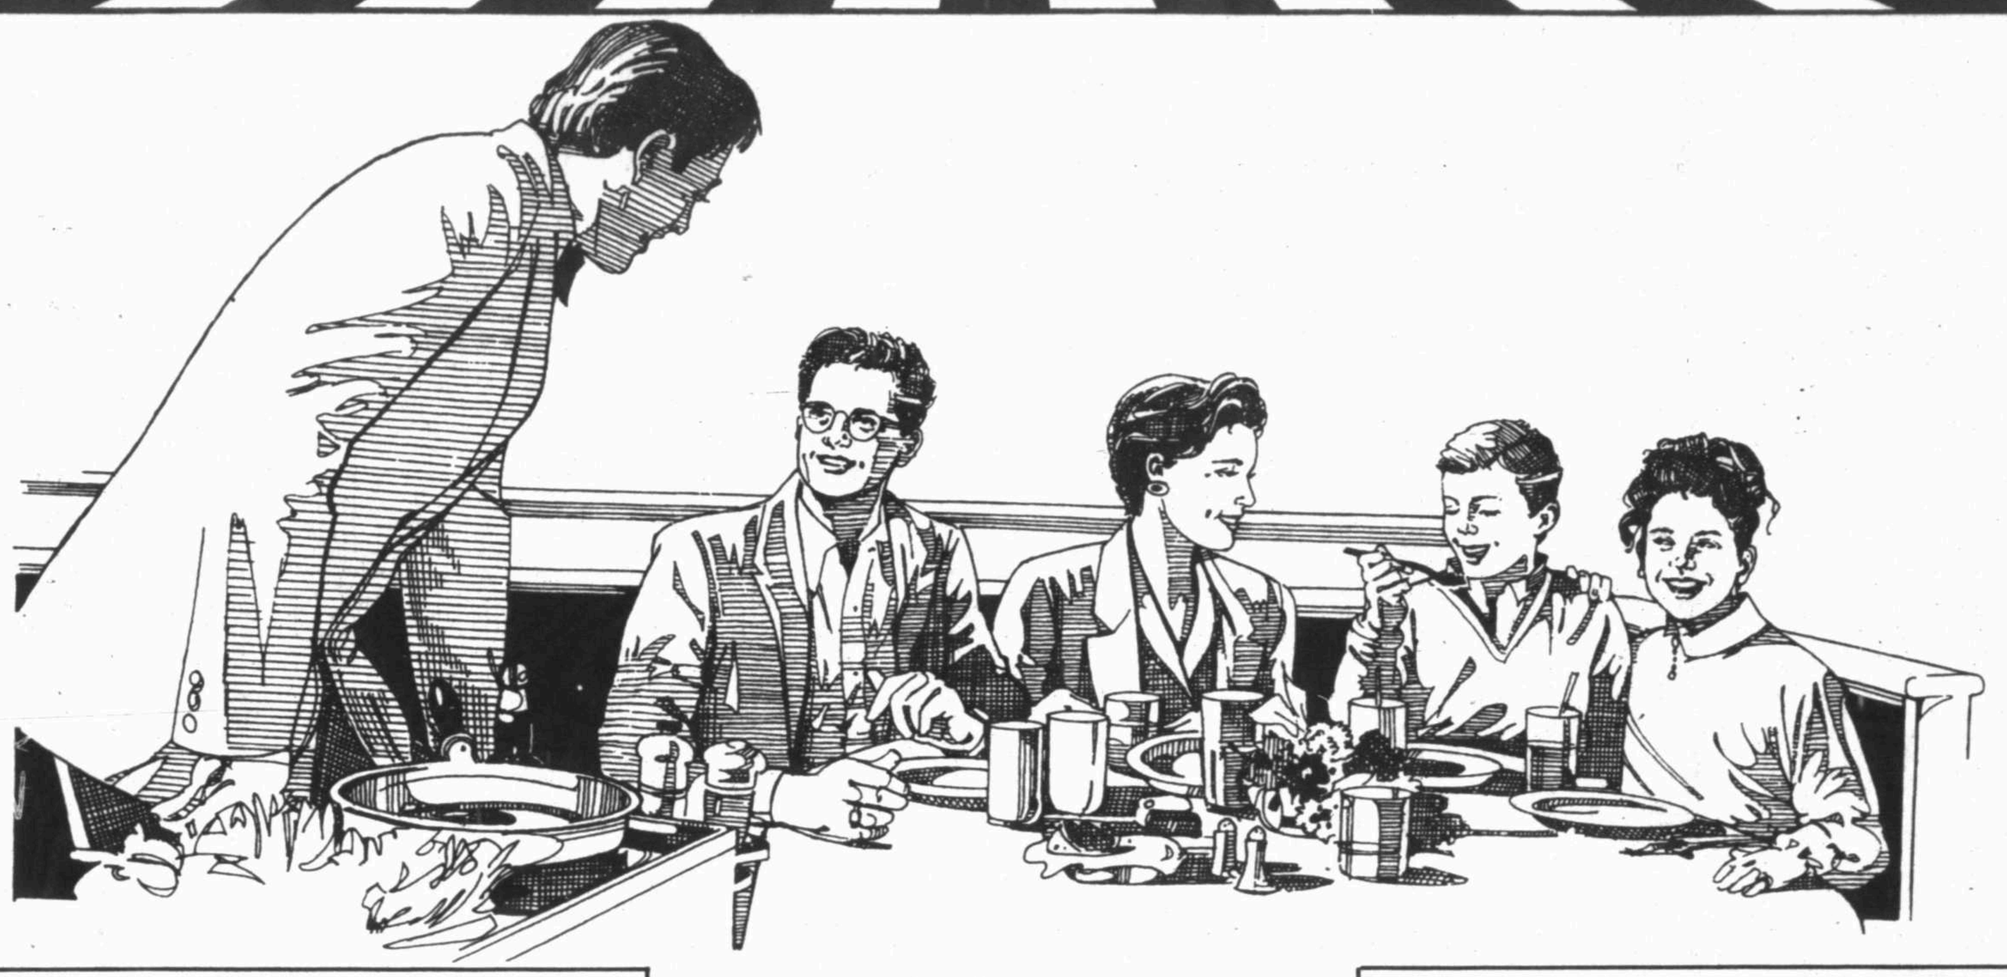

It is expected that the restructuring of Custom Calling Features will result in a rate increase for approximately 2.9 million residence customers and 280,000 business customers. The reduction in rates for certain Custom Calling Services and Touch-tone Service will affect approximately 4.3 million residence customers and 1.7 million business customers.

This rate restructuring is expected to have a "revenue-neutral" effect on the Company's annual revenues. The proposed rate restructuring of Custom Calling Services will increase the Company's annual revenues by $19.8 million; while the reduction in Touch-tone rates will decrease the Company's annual revenues by $19.8 million.

This proceeding has been designated Docket No. 11382. Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in this proceeding should notify the PUC as soon as possible. The deadline to intervene is October 30, 1992. A request to intervene, participate or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information may also be obtained by calling the PUC Public Information Office at (512) 458-0256 or (512) 458-0221, teletypewriter for the deaf.

STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE

WHAT IS STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE?

Stockquote Hotline gives you the latest stock prices direct from the wires of the Associated Press. Over 9,000 stocks are listed from NYSE, AmEx, and OTC sources; all available 24 hours a day. You can receive up to 10 quotes with one easy phone call.

HOW TO USE STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE:

1) Call the Stockquote Hotline at 560-2400; enter the category number which is 9988.

2) You will be asked to enter your stock ticker symbol. These are based on industry-standard symbols, which can be found in a Standard & Poor's Ticker guide, or by calling your local stock broker.

3) Once you've entered the numerical code for the ticker symbol, press the Star Key (*) and you will hear the current price and net change from the last Associated Press update; which is a few minutes behind market activity.

4) After the stock is quoted, you will be asked to enter another ticker symbol. You now have 2 options:
- You may request a quote for another stock by repeating steps 2 & 3.
- You may request additional information on the stock just quoted by once more pressing the Star Key (*).

Now the volume, high and low will be given, and then you will be asked to enter another ticker code.
- You may enter up to 10 ticker symbols per call.

5) To exit Stockquote Hotline, simply hang up the phone.

Prices rise

NEW YORK — Heating oil and unleaded gasoline prices for delivery next month rose Wednesday on buying from investors who had earlier sold borrowed commodities.

The so-called short covering came on the last day of trading for the October delivery contract for heating oil and gasoline on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

As the contract expired, the short sellers had to buy heating oil and gasoline to repay the loans.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in November settled at $21.71 per barrel, up 4 cents.

Natural gas prices were mixed, with contracts for delivery in November settling at $2.515 per 1,000 cubic feet, up 0.2 cent.

Workshop set

"Government Contracting Procedures," a workshop co-sponsored by the Small Business Development Center of the University of Texas of the Permian Basin will meet Oct. 7 from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. The seminar will be held at the Center for Energy and Economic Diversification, Highway 191 and FM 1788.

The workshop is designed to give participants an understanding of federal and state contracting procedures, according to Karl Painter, S.B.D.C. director.

Other co-sponsors include the Better Business Bureau, Midland College, Odessa College, Howard College, and the Chambers of Commerce for Midland, Odessa and Big Spring.

Cost is $15. Reservations can be made by calling the S.B.D.C. at 563-0400.

NEW YORK — The dollar was mixed Wednesday in light trading as the market awaited further indications on the direction of the U.S. economy.

In New York, the dollar was trading at 119.85 yen at late afternoon, up from 119.25 late Tuesday.

In New York, one dollar bought 1.4100 German marks, down from 1.4110.

Stocks gain

NEW YORK — Stock prices closed out a sluggish third quarter of 1992 with a small gain Wednesday as investors awaited a new set of data on employment.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials edged up 4.86 points to 3,271.66.

Businessmen support NAFTA

■ Chairmen of four energy companies tell Senate panel trade pact would boost Texas' economy.

Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON The chairmen of four Texas energy companies told members of the Senate Finance Committee on Wednesday the proposed North American Free Trade Agreement would give a long-term boost to the state's sluggish economy and bring jobs back to the region.

In the last of the Senate panel's hearings on the trade plan, which awaits legislative approval in the U.S., Canada and Mexico, the executives said NAFTA would lift some of Mexico's limits on energy trade with the United States.

"Mexico is a promising market for natural gas at a time when the industry is flat on its back," said T. Boone Pickens, the CEO of Dallas-based Mesa Inc. Pickens said his firm has lost $200 million in the last three years due to sluggish sales.

"NAFTA would make it easier for U.S. companies to sell natural gas in Mexico" and give American natural gas producers "an unprecedented sales opportunity," Pickens said.

"In the near term, the bulk of natural gas necessary to meet the growing transportation market in Mexico must be met by U.S. producers," Pickens said. "That will lead to more drilling, and we know this: increased drilling means increased jobs.'

Pickens expressed confidence in the new political leadership of Mexico, saying it has given him "firm assurances" that it would honor the terms of any business contract forged, even in the event of any future political or economic instability.

Pickens' MESA subsidiary, MESA Environmental, is working with Mexico City authorities on a proposed $2.5 billion, five-year contract that would enbale gasoline-powered vehicles to run on natural gas.

Bill Greehey, chairman and CEO of San Antonio-based Valero Energy Corp., with facilities near the Mexican border, predicted that Mexican imports of natural gas would grow rapidly under the pact and could exceed one billion cubic feet a day over three years.

While Mexico's constitution prevents foreign ownership of oil and gas reserves in Mexico, Greehey predicted NAFTA would encourage Mexican officials to be flexible in allowing foreign business investments in some areas.

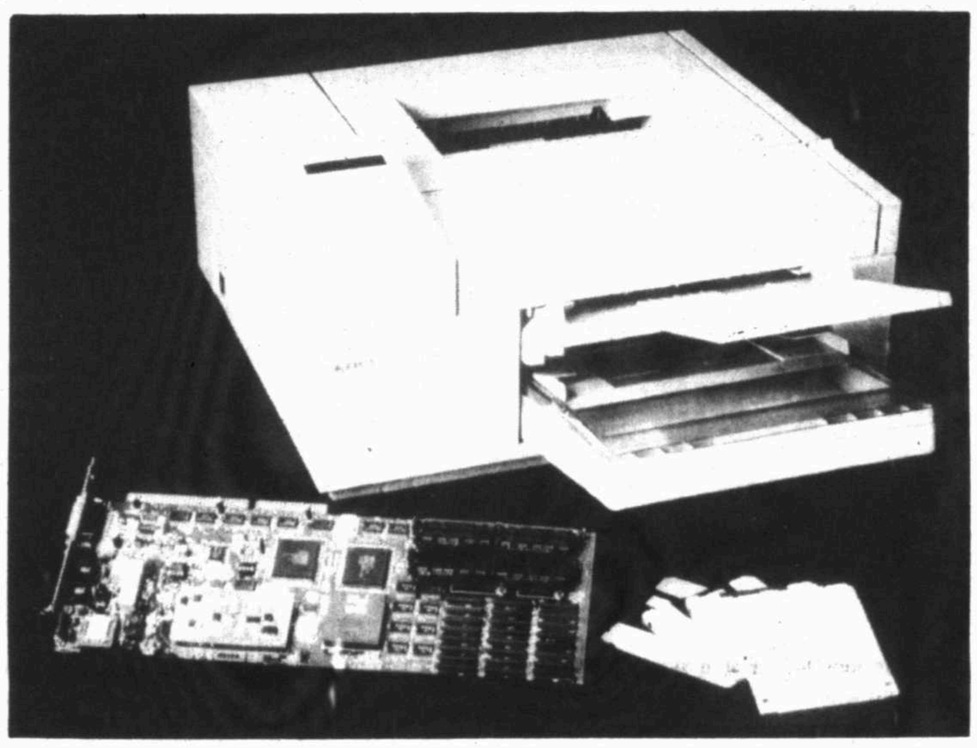

Russell E. Ginn, CEO of Tom Wheatly Valve Co. and Director of the Petroleum Equipment Suppliers Association in Houston, said NAFTA would help his members compensate for the decline in U.S. drilling activity.

Ginn said Mexico's push to modernize its energy industry will translate into a minimum $20 billion in new investments over the next five years, much of which could be involve the purchase of equipment and services from U.S. suppliers.

Eugene Ames, chairman of the Independent Petroleum Association of America and president of San Antonio-based Venus Oil Company, was more cautious about the proposed agreement, saying it doesn't go far enough to lift Mexico's protectionist limits on foreign energy trade.

Ames, however, said NAFTA would be "'marginally positive" and "a clear step in the right direction" toward further efforts to encourage more open trade with Mexico.

"While (NAFTA) would not establish anything approaching the free trade in energy which would represent true reciprocity of opportunity for Americans, Canadians and Mexican nationals throughout the northern hemisphere, it opens some new opportunities and certainly doesn't make anything worse," he said.

Government: New home sales take steep plunge

WASHINGTON (AP) — New home sales took their steepest plunge in five months in August, the government said Wednesday, surprising most analysts who had expected the lowest mortgage rates in nearly two decades to boost the housing market.

Most analysts agreed the housing recovery, like the economy in general, continues to be weaker than normal. But many also said they expected the department later to revise upward its initial report on August sales, as it has done to every monthly estimate so far this year.

"If you look at every month's sales for the last year, all have been revised upward from the original estimate," said economist David Berson of the Federal National Mortgage Association.

Daryl Delano, a housing analyst for Cahners Economics in Newton, Mass., agreed. "So I would like to believe, and really expect, that the August number will be revised up, at least slightly," he said.

According to the departments of Commerce and Housing and Urban Development, sales in August fell 6.1 percent to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 570,000. Sales were reported down in both the South and West, although they rose elsewhere.

But at the same time, the departments sharply revised upward, to a 607,000 rate, their initial estimate of July sales. They first reported last month that July sales had fallen 2.6 percent to 563,000, but the revised figure shows sales actually rose 4.5 percent.

FDIC drops lawmaker from thrift lawsuit

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A state lawmaker and 13 others have been dismissed as defendants in a federal lawsuit over the collapse of Union Savings Association, formerly Goliad Savings and Loan Association.

The 14, who were among 16 defendants sued last year by Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., were dropped in a motion filed by lawyers for the federal agency, according to court records.

A motion to dismiss a fifteenth defendant is awaiting a judge's signature. The status of the last defendant is uncertain because he is deceased, Harvey Simon of Dallas, an attorney representing the FDIC, said Tuesday.

The FDIC sued the Austin law firm of Davis & Davis, four of its attorneys and 11 other people after Union Savings Association of San Antonio went into receivership Dec. 28, 1988.

Total losses to the FDIC were estimated at $20 million.

Among the defendants was state Rep. Tim Von Dohlen, D-Goliad. The defendants were identified as having been officers, directors or shareholders of the thrift.

Von Dohlen, who was an attorney for the thrift, said Tuesday the lawsuit settlement prevents him from disclosing its terms. He denied any wrongdoing.

His dismissal from the lawsuit has become an issue in his race for Texas House District 30 seat. He and another incumbent, state Rep. Steve Holzheauser, R-Inez, ended up in the district because of legislative redistricting.

The district covers Goliad, Victoria, Jackson and Lavaca counties.

Holzheauser is demanding Von Dohlen disclose details of "a plea bargain" with the FDIC to get the suit dismissed.

"I want the public to know if a cash settlement was made or other agreement," Holzheauser said Monday in Victoria.

Southland to close three food distribution centers

DALLAS (AP) — Southland Corp., parent of 7-Eleven stores, announced Wednesday it will close three distribution and food centers idling about 1,100 workers.

Southland said the closures, along with a sale of distribution and food center assets, are part of a move to leave the distribution business.

The company said it will sell two of its five distribution facilities and three of its six food centers to McLane Co. Inc.

The Dallas-based Southland said the Tyler distribution and food center, which employs 470 people, and the Orlando, Fla. center, with 390 workers, would close Nov. 30, when the sale is expected to be completed.

A third center in Champaign, Ill., which employs 285 people would stay in operation for up to five months longer, until a new facility by McLane is in operation there, said Markeeta McNatt, Southland spokeswoman.

She said the sales were outlined last month.

"We need a much larger distribution network to service our stores," she said.

When the deal is completed in November, McLane will provide wholesale distribution services to 6,000 7-Eleven stores across the country.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Treasury bond price varies on open market

By Bill Doyle

Q: During the life of a U.S. Treasury bond, its sale price fluctuates, much influenced by interest rates. Correct?

The interest paid on the bond, however, is constant. Correct?

Doyle

A: You're right on both points. Let's take them one at a time and explain why.

The prices at which previously issued Treasury bonds can be bought and sold in the open market do change — going up when interest rates in general come down and falling when interest rates rise.

That should be easy to understand. The federal government borrows money by selling Treasury securities and, like all borrowers, has to pay the going rate of interest at the time it sells the securities. Our government issues high-interest Treasury bonds when interest rates in general are high and low-interest Treasury bonds when interest rates are low.

The 10 percent Treasury bond due to mature in May 2010 now trades at about $1,260 per $1,000 face value. That's because, with interest rates on new Treasury bonds much lower, investors are willing to pay that high price for 10 percent bonds.

Conversely, if interest rates go up, the most recently issued long-term Treasury bond, due to mature in August 2022 and paying 7.25 percent interest, will fetch less than face value in the marketplace.

All this goes hand-in-glove with your second point. Along with all fixed-income debt securities, the interest rate on a Treasury bond is set at the time the particular bond is issued. It does not change.

If you had purchased $10,000 face value of that 7.25 percent Treasury bond, you could be sure of receiving $725 interest annually for 30 years. Also, you can be secure in the knowledge you will get $10,000 when the bond matures.

Q: Is it true that long-term bonds usually yield higher interest than short-term bonds?

A: Sure. After all, investors naturally want a higher rate of interest when they lend money for longer periods of time. A bond is a debt security. When you buy a Treasury bond, you become a creditor of our federal government.

It's just as well you chose the word "usually." There have been times when short-term debt securities paid higher interest than long-term bonds. That's called an inverted yield curve, which is a rare occurrence.

A yield curve is plotted on graph paper, with interest rates on the vertical line and maturities on the horizontal line.

Q: I plan to invest in a mutual fund holding long-term Treasury bonds and have no intention of ever redeeming the fund's shares. Am I right I should not worry about the fund's share price, as there is little risk of any loss of principal?

A: No. The value of a mutual fund's shares rises and falls in line with the market values of the securities the fund holds in its investment portfolio.

Because the market values of Treasury securities, including long-term bonds, can and do rise and fall between the time those securities are issued and their maturity dates, the share value of that mutual fund will also go up and down.

As a result, the value of your investment in the fund might fall. Even if you don't cash out by redeeming fund shares, a drop in fund share value will result in reducing your principal.

Q: If I retire, start making withdrawals from my individual retirement account and occasionally work for earned income, can I continue to contribute to my IRA?

A: Nope. Once you begin making withdrawals from an IRA, you no longer can make annual IRA contributions. If you are self-employed and have a Keogh retirement plan, however, you can keep making Keogh contributions.

Also, you can't make IRA contributions after you turn 701/2, at which age you are required to make IRA withdrawals based on your life expectancy or the joint life expectancy of you and your IRA beneficiary. You can continue making Keogh contributions no matter your age, even though you must begin withdrawals at 701/2.

Platforms make subtle step back

By Kelly DeGarmo
N.Y. Times News Service

For women who want to step out in a fashion-forward direction this fall, platforms are the footwear of choice.

Not since the early '70s have fashion runways and store shelves been so heavily pounded by this stacked blast from the past. Everybody who's anybody in the shoe biz is making them — from Nina to Stuart Weitzman to Charles Jourdan.

Now, before cringing your toes at the thought of jumbo platforms again, relax.

The new styles are subtle (note: walkable), with the platforms extending no higher than one-half-inch on the vamp portion of the shoe. So modest, in fact, they've been dubbed "semi-platforms." Of course there are exceptions, such as the black suede sandals by Mia with 3-inch wedge heels.

No style is immune from the platform sole, which appears this fall on pumps, oxfords, slides and slingbacks. Anne Klein even gives the black suede ankle boot a lift by adding a one-half-inch platform sole.

To balance the thicker platform soles, heels are substantial — thick and blocky on oxfords and slip-ons, sturdy and sculpted on pumps and slides. Though heels may rise to a height of 2 inches or more, the addition of the platform sole makes the heel seem less high — a bonus.

Naturally, the predominant hue is black, but there are other basic options for women who want to give their wardrobe a shot of energy, including purple and red leather styles by Nina, brown suede slings by Mia and multicolor suede pumps by Proxy. For the really daring, Mootsie Tootsie makes a pair of outrageous leopard-print platform pumps.

The '90s versions may not be as extreme as their cartoonish '70s and vintage '40s counterparts, but then who really would wear those 6-inch monstrosities like Karl Lagerfeld showed in Paris last spring? (Even the runway models tripped on them.)

"That's whimsy. That's not everyday wardrobe dressing," says Pam Smith, a Fort Worth, Texas, retail consultant. "We have come too far in what we'll tolerate. I think the subtle (shoe) will do fine in Fort Worth and Dallas."

Indeed, the modest platform is being very well received.

Perhaps one reason the shoes are selling so well is that they look great with the new pantsuits and long, slim skirts. Where classic high-heeled shoes appear too dainty and delicate with pants, the chunkier platforms are substantial enough to provide the right footing.

"It's really a sensational shoe for pants," Smith says. "The shoe grounds it and makes it really look right."

Platforms also gracefully accentuate the new longer slim skirts, especially when worn with dark, opaque tights.

"It's what really makes the new long skirt work," says Joan Kaner, senior vice president and fashion director for Neiman Marcus stores. "You need to have a shoe with a lot of heft ... to balance the long, slim skirts. It really pulls it all together. I think they are the important shoe of the fall season."

As with any other high-heeled shoe, women need to be careful not to overwhelm themselves with styles that are too towering. Petite women who turn to high-heeled platforms for extra height should use particular caution.

"It's all about proportion. The heel and shoe shouldn't tip her out of balance," Smith advises. Tall women, who can wear virtually everything, aren't exempt from becoming fashion victims either. They too need to consider proportion and how the shoe looks with the other components of the outfit.

The good news is that since the new platforms are fairly thin, they shouldn't be any harder to walk in than ordinary heels.

Still, it wouldn't hurt to practice if there's any doubt.

Platforms shoes are making a strong but subtle come back into vogue. Here, a model wears platform shoes with a red suit featuring a calf-length skirt at a presentation of Betsey Johnson's Fall 1992 collection.

Fall shoes must balance length of new skirts

By Carrie Donovan
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — It's fun to slink around in a longer skirt, but first you have to solve the shoe problem. The success of the new silhouette hangs not on the hem length, but on the shoes that balance it.

Women who wear high heels are all set. They can put on any of the new platform-sole shoes and look great. But what about those who can't make it through a whole day on towering heels? It takes some searching; take your new long skirt with you.

The answer is to find a pump with the necessary platform but a tapered toe. The heel can be thick or thin; it's the narrowing of the toe that creates the elegant look. One example is at Ritz, at 505 Park Avenue (59th Street). By Petra, in matte leather or suede, $179.

Of course there are exceptions. Nothing looks more dashing than cowboy boots under a long skirt fluttering with pleats. And in the evening, delicate Manolo Blahnik-like Cinderella slippers look perfect with a longer skirt. These run from $300 to $400.

When cooking with alcohol, the proof is in the pudding

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I baked a Southern Comfort Cake that contained ½ cup of Southern Comfort (80 percent proof alcohol) in the mix and ¼ cup in the glaze. My husband would not let our 8-year-old have any. I was told by the person who gave me the recipe that when you cook alcohol, the alcohol evaporates, leaving the flavor. This has caused much confusion in my family. Would you please tell me if this is the truth or a myth about cooking with alcohol. — COOKING WITH ALCOHOL

Van Buren

DEAR COOKING: I can understand your confusion. For many years, it was assumed that alcohol "burned off" when heat was applied. However, a University of Idaho study done for the federal government's Human Nutrition Information Service concluded that a percentage of alcohol does remain in cooking, depending on the type of wine or spirits used and the amount of heat applied. As a precaution, your husband was wise to forbid your child to eat the cake and glaze laced with whiskey.

Of course, recovering alcoholics, people with certain allergies or people on certain medications should avoid any product "flavored" with alcohol — and that includes over-the-counter cough syrup or sherry flavoring, which might trigger a desire for alcohol. Read labels carefully because many more products contain alcohol than people are aware.

DEAR ABBY: Please tell "Inhibited and Embarrassed" not to feel either way because of her mastectomy scars. Rather than being apprehensive, all she need do is to tell the truth to any man in whom she is seriously interested. Hours, days or even weeks before any intimacy, she should tell him about the surgery she survived, and if he's the right kind of man, it won't make any difference.

This happened in my life. My sweetheart, a truly wonderful woman, had two major operations. The first one left a jagged scar across her belly.

The first night we were intimate, I kissed her scar tenderly and lovingly. She never undressed in the dark again! — SAN ANTONIO BOB

DEAR ABBY: Congratulations to "Unplanned Parent in Iowa" who wrote to you recently about Planned Parenthood and the valuable services it provides.

I, too, am a success story because of the contraceptive counseling I received from the people at Planned Parenthood in college just before my wedding. They gave me the information I needed to plan a family — something my parents could not bring themselves to talk about, and something I could not afford to pay for from a private doctor at the time.

My husband and I now have three children BY CHOICE, and I owe much to the caring staff at that Planned Parenthood clinic. In the past, I volunteered some time at our local Planned Parenthood clinic, hoping to give something in return.

Working behind the scenes, I can also attest that the staff genuinely cares about women's health, and that they do provide option counseling when a woman comes to them with a crisis pregnancy.

I'm glad that they would have been there for me, had I ever been faced with a crisis pregnancy. They serve a vital role in our society. — VAL TOMSIC, PLANNED AND PRO-CHOICE PARENT, NAPLES, FLA.

Company introduces comfortable dress shoe for men

By Barbara Lloyd
N.Y. Times News Service

For the man who likes the feel of running shoes while jogging but goes to work in dress shoes, formal footwear with some of the running shoes' comforts will be on the market by the end of the year.

New Balance Athletic Shoe of Boston recently introduced a wingtip-style dress shoe with some of the features of the company's leading running shoe, the M997.

The new shoe, the MK907, looks like a traditional dress shoe, with its upper part made of leather. But the shoe's interior is built with New Balance's Encap II System, which includes a heel cushion made of Abzorb, a new synthetic material designed to absorb shock.

"It is a dress shoe with a lot of running-shoe technology," Hank Magner, an associate product manager for New Balance, said recently. "It is for the fellow who wears our running shoe and wants the same feeling when he goes to work."

Most conventional wingtip shoes are made with a double layer of leather and sometimes weigh as much as 16 ounces, Magner said, compared with the 11.3 ounces of a New Balance MK907 dress shoe. The company's M997 running shoe weighs 12.2 ounces. The sole is heavier in the running shoe to accommodate added stress when a person jogs.

The new New Balance shoe is made to be lightweight and flexible, but the company does not suggest that buyers wear it for running.

"The exterior of the dress shoe is designed differently from our running shoe, which has a lot of mesh instead of leather," Magner said. "Even though leather breathes, it would be much warmer than mesh."

Manufacturers of athletic shoes for walking, like the Rockport Co. of Marlboro, Mass., also offer lightweight dress shoes. But New Balance claims to be the first company to adapt running-shoe technology for street wear.

The New Balance shoe, made in Maine, will be available in early December in limited quantities at shoe and department stores for about $110 a pair. It is expected to be in greater supply by January.

The shoe is available in black, burgundy or nubuck, a brown suede. It comes in men's sizes 9 to 16 in widths AA to B, and in sizes 7 to 16 in widths D to EEEE.

Although the company makes shoes for women — for running, walking, court play and work — it has no dress shoe comparable with the men's shoe.

For information on where to buy the men's MK907, call New Balance at (800) 253-7463.

These shoes aren't made for walking

N.Y. Times News Service

Some shoes are made for walking, some for dancing, and some just for looking fabulous. Bernard Figueroa's shoes fit into the fabulous category. His evening sandals with delicate ties are perched on spindly 4-inch-high sculptured metal heels that are suggestive of chicken bones.

Figueroa, a 31-year-old Frenchman living in New York, said his imagination was spurred by the legendary shoe designer Roger Vivier. He has come up with four styles, made to order in limited editions, at $1,200 a pair.

That price includes handmade satin shoe bags and handmade boxes covered with black satin and crepe. Oh, and the wearer's name is inscribed on the insole.

The designer meets with customers by appointment (212974-0481) to view samples and to select color and fabric.

He warns that the heels are not sturdy enough for discoing. But they sure would be noticed at a cocktail party.

AT WIT'S END

Space endeavors are amusing

By Erma Bombeck

All aboard, kiddies, for Cape Canaveral's annual celestial science fair. We have just witnessed another scientific adventure to find out what happens when Earth meets outer space. In previous space experiments, we've had weightless bees trying to reproduce and tomato seeds hot to germinate.

Bombeck

Overlooking such burning questions as can popcorn pop in a spaceship or will a piano stay tuned when it is spinning in orbit, the current space shuttle, Endeavor, went for the big question: Will yeast bread rise in the weightlessness of space?

Specifically, that means an astronaut with a million dollars worth of engineering and training skills activated two bread-making chambers in a cargo-bay canister by throwing a switch. Water was heated by a battery to 104 degrees and injected into the flour and yeast mixture. Then it was cranked up to 302 degrees. An hour later, two loaves of bread, each measuring 3.75 inches long and 1.5 inches in diameter, which contained no salt, no sugar, no crust and no taste, were born.

I don't remember Captain Kirk ever baking bread on the Enterprise. I know these are things inquiring minds want to know, and a lot of good comes out of space experiments, but before we start tinkering with croissants and pita bread, my first priority would be to get a space toilet that works. That sort of thing could ruin a whole trip. You can bring a loaf of bread from home, but you can't say to passengers who need to use the bathroom, "You should have gone before you left home."

How to cure nausea would be my second choice for research. How can you sell people on planet exploration when they're sick as dogs when they get there?

A lot of attention was focused on sex in outer space, since this was the first flight where a man and his wife were crew members. I've seen the inside of a shuttle. It's about as big as a dinner table in a Las Vegas showroom. And with five other members packed in there, what were the odds of this happening?

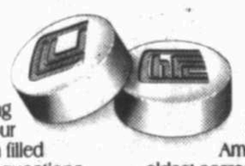

The space program welcomes suggestions of experiments from everyone, including civilians and school children. We all know that cockroaches can live on planets with no food, no water and no air. Now, let's get on with the important stuff.

Who does the windows outside the capsule? What weight does an astronaut list on his or her driver's license? Inside or outside the capsule? Can your mother call you from Earth collect?

Man does not live by bread alone.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 1, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Straighten out your financial affairs and take responsibility for your own mistakes. Good fortune is about to smile on you again. Steady determination is a better recipe for success than pushing too hard. A sense of rebellion could make it difficult for you to establish a lasting romantic relationship early in 1993. Be patient. You have the power to change the way others view you. A business boom is likely next summer. Be careful not to hire too much staff too soon.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actors Walter Matthau and George Peppard, actresses Julie Andrews and Stella Stevens.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Do your own research. You need to have all the facts and figures before making an important decision. Increase your income by recycling an idea or project.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Trust your intuition; it is right on target! Outsiders may try to intrude into your inner circle. Stand your ground. A financial problem that once seemed insurmountable can now be solved.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): What seemed so sweet could turn sour. You want "to hold the fort" at home and work. Whatever comes up, stay calm. Keep higher-ups happy while working behind the scenes to change things.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Be alert for hidden tensions at work — a difficult situation could blow at any time. Go quietly about your affairs. Build bridges of friendship with associates.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Go the extra mile to be a star, even if facing highly difficult tasks. Sidestep office gossip; you have important business to conduct. Put any flamboyant plans into the deep freeze for now.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Friendships and partnerships can be filled with deeper understanding today. Confide in one another and act in concert. Joint efforts promise much larger rewards than solo endeavors.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A bright idea or pet project gets the green light today. Top brass show new appreciation for the work force. You can talk and travel your way to success. Dress your best.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A philosophical disagreement could put you between a rock and a hard place with loved one. Get together with those who share your athletic or literary interests.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Stay emotionally centered and you will have little to worry about today. Leave business at the office when you go home this evening. A period of quiet meditation will work wonders.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Rely on those you have worked with for a long time. Daydreaming could interfere with your productivity. Focus on the task at hand. Getting better organized will give you more free time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Doing something unusual could lift your spirits and put you on the road to success again. Go after what you want! Romance needs more time to blossom. Save money for a rainy day.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): New romantic heights are within your grasp. Your gift for gab helps you build a relationship. Take stock of your assets and debts, then act in a responsible way.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are both endearingly good-natured and very determined. Anyone who thinks these easygoing Libras are lazy is in for a real surprise! Supreme strategists, they take their time putting their agenda into operation. Their keen minds are always searching, analyzing and tossing around ideas. The bidding:

Opening lead: Six of ♠

At the Second World Bridge Olympiad in 1964, a fresh-faced young man just out of college made a great impact on the world bridge scene. Now 28 years later at the recently completed Ninth World Olympiad in Salsomaggiore, Italy, Bob Hamman is still showing the form that makes him the top-ranked American in the World Bridge Federation standings.

The one-club opening bid was artificial, showing a hand of at least 17 points. North's double confirmed some values and South's rebid described a balanced 17 to 20 points. North then boldly jumped to game in the expectation that his diamond suit and two entries (the king of spades was marked with West) would produce enough tricks for game.

Sure that his opponents had spades well guarded, West elected to lead a low club. Hamman soon proved that to be a fatal choice. The opening lead made it likely that West was 5-5 in the black suits, so declarer knew that the diamonds were not breaking.

After winning the first trick cheaply, declarer led a low spade. West shot up with the king to lead a heart, but it was too late. Declarer played low from dummy, East won the jack and reverted to a club, taken with the king. On a low spade lead West was forced to split his honors, the queen winning. Next came the key concession of another heart.

East won and returned a club to South's ace. Hamman cashed the ace of hearts and the two high diamonds, forcing West to come down to J 5 of spades and the queen of clubs. To complete a brilliant exhibition, Hamman threw West in with a club, discarding the nine of spades from the table. Now West was forced to lead away from the jack of spades into declarer's A 7 tenace. Hamman scored three spade tricks, one heart, two diamonds and three clubs in a bravura performance.

Douglas jabs at 'values' in Brown, Quayle argument

Douglas

"First, Dan Quayle attacks Murphy Brown as if a television character were a real person. Then, of course, Murphy Brown attacked Dan Quayle as if he were a real person," Douglas said during an appearance Tuesday at a movie theater.

Douglas is on a 10-city tour to promote his third book, "The Gift."

LOS ANGELES — Former police chief Daryl F. Gates has taken over as host of a radio talk show.

Gates

"They asked me if I would come back and I said yes," Gates said Tuesday.

Gates, 65, who retired in June in a storm of criticism over his leadership during the Los Angeles riots, was a guest host on KFI for three days in early August.

"I've been in public life for 43 years, and I'm really enjoying this opportunity to speak out," Gates said.

LOS ANGELES — A hundred school children serenaded singing cowboy Gene Autry on his 85th birthday.

The children sang "Happy Birthday" to Autry at his Western Heritage Museum on Tuesday. A huge cake featured a cowboy atop a galloping horse.

Autry starred in film, radio and television and owns the California Angels baseball team.

TEL AVIV, Israel — Countering complaints that his Tel Aviv concert is overpriced, tenor Luciano Pavarotti will broadcast his performance live to Israelis in the city's main square tonight.

The Italian maestro is in Israel for a single concert conducted by Zubn Mehta and the Israel Philharmonic Orchestra in an 8,000-seat Tel Aviv basketball stadium.

Some Israeli music lovers complained that the price of good seats, advertised at $90 to $145, is at odds with Pavarotti's campaign to bring his music to the masses.

At a news conference Wednesday, producer Tibor Rudas announced that the performance would be relayed to a giant screen at Kings of Israel Square, which can hold more than 200,000 people.

George Burns' 100th falls on Jan. 20, 1996, and the comedian said from Los Angeles Tuesday: "I'm booked to play the Palladium in London when I'm 100, and I hope the Palladium is still there. I know I will be."

He couldn't talk long; he was preparing for a trip today to Livonia, Mich., a Detroit suburb, where the 1,400-seat Mai Kai Theater will be renamed the George Burns Theater for the Performing Arts Thursday.

"The first time I played Detroit was in 1917, and I like to play there every 75 years," Burns said. He and Florence Henderson will perform there on Friday and Saturday.

"I never had a theater with my name before, although I do have a street in Los Angeles," he said. As part of the festivities, the streets on which the theater is located will be renamed George Burns Boulevard and Gracie Allen Road for a week. "So now I'll be able to say, 'I'll meet you at Burns and Allen Streets,'" he said happily.

How do you go about planning the celebration of a 250th birthday? To start with, "You must have a lot of candles," Daniel P. Jordan, the executive director of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Foundation, said Tuesday. Jordan is in the throes of mapping out the logistics for an 18-month-long commemoration of Jefferson's birth on April 13, 1743.

Wednesday night, he will discuss the plans in New York at a reception for 100 guests. The party, which is to have a menu featuring some of Jefferson's favorite dishes, will be at the Morris-Jumel Mansion in Washington Heights.

"We will have some 40 programs in all," Jordan said, ticking off a list of exhibits, lectures, films and oral-history projects that will begin on the birthday, April 13. "We are having a major loan exhibit with 150 Jefferson objects returned to exactly where they were in Monticello.

"The Smithsonian is loaning us the lap desk on which he wrote the Declaration of Independence. The American Philosophical Society is loaning us a special chair that Jefferson designed and sat in when he wrote the Declaration of Independence. A descendant is loaning us the sofa on which Jefferson liked to prop his feet when he sat in that chair and used the lap desk."

The commemoration is much more than a birthday party. "If you were a ballplayer," he said, "it would be like being in a World Series that lasted 18 months."
