Oil groups quick to oppose tax increases

Roads, schools focus of speech

By JACK KEEVER
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — Gov. Mark White's quest for the best roads and brightest minds has been greeted with teacher applause and a legislative mix of caution and support.

White in a Monday speech to the special legislative session focused on highways, public education reform and the inescapable conclusion that it will take additional taxes to cover the cost.

"It was superb," Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said of the speech. "Everything he said was right to the point, and it was well said."

There has been speculation that the Legislature might enact widespread educational reforms but leave new taxes to the 1985 Legislature, and Sen. Grant Jones, D-Abilene and chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said:

"I do think we should take care of the education and highway matters at this session and then take up new revenues in 1985. To try to look three years in advance is more vision than most of us have."

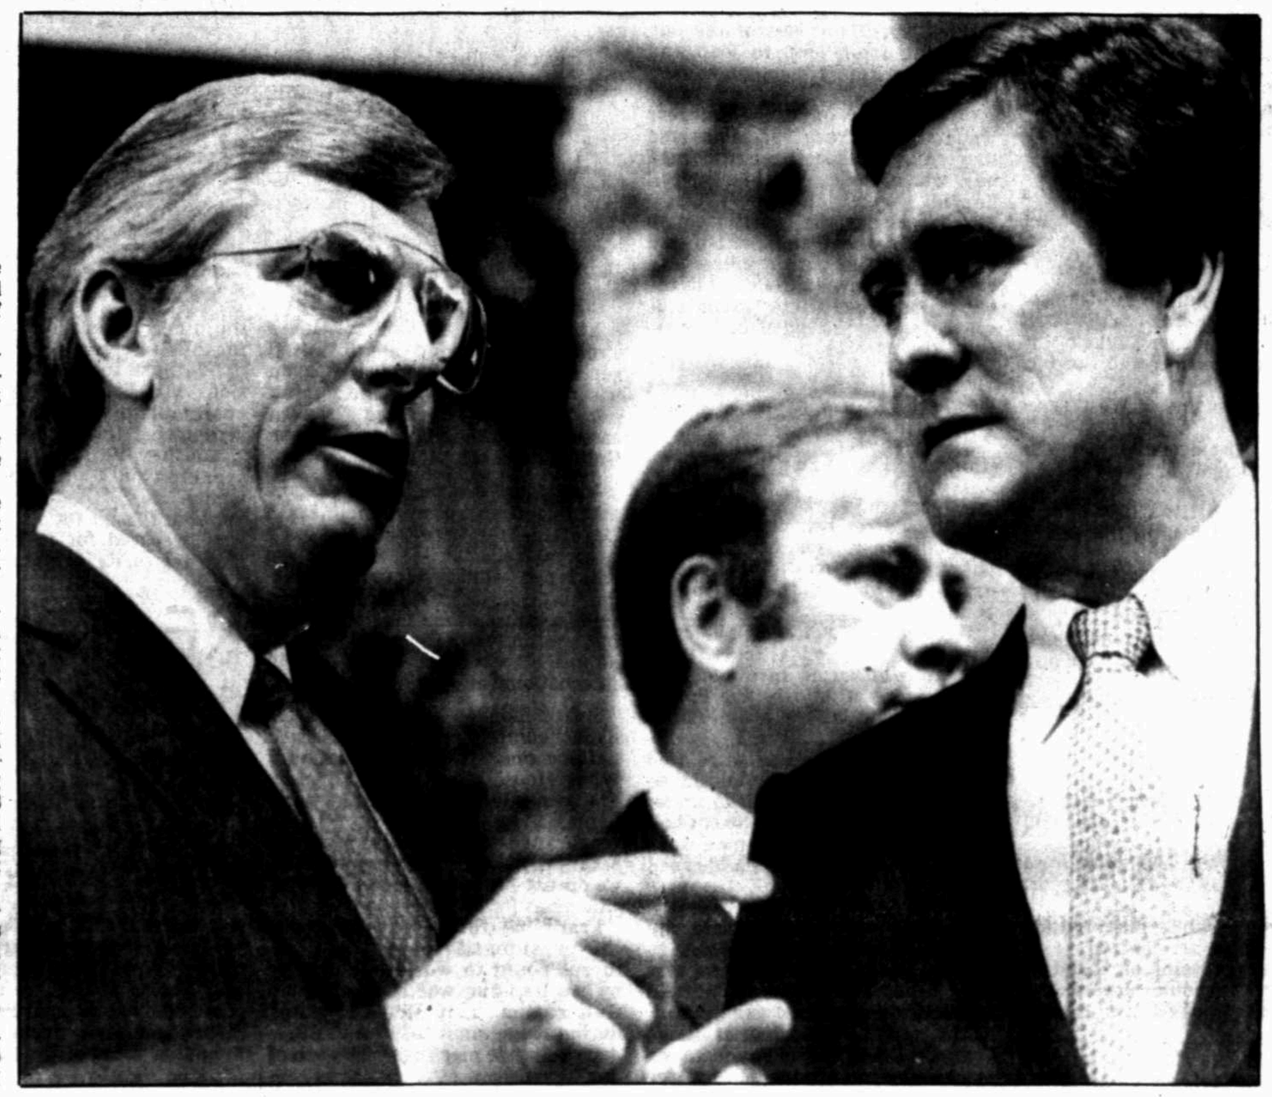

Asked if he thought the Legislature could enact a tax bill in the 30-day session, Hobby said, "I'm very optimistic. I certainly hope so."

White has proposed a tax increase, including an extra penny sales tax, that would raise $4.8 billion over the next three years, and he said Thursday, "You can be assured of my strong commitment to avoid additional taxes in the next session."

House Speaker Gib Lewis said, "I think the attitude of most of the members I have talked with is they want meaningful (educational) reform, and if they get that they are ready to bite the bullet and pass a tax bill."

Rep. Stan Schlueter, D-Killeen and chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee, said, "I was very happy to hear him (White) say he would not ask for a tax bill in 1985, but I need something more definite than that."

"The bottom line is that we have to spend more money this summer, or we will go home empty-handed," said Rep. Bob Bush, D-Paris and chairman of the House Democratic Caucus.

House committee hears testimony

By GARTH JONES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — The House Ways and Means Committee got a quick answer when they asked the oil and gas industry about the possibility of increasing their taxes.

"The oil and gas industry is already overtaxed by both state and local governments," said L.D. Burns, Wichita Falls, representing the North Texas Oil and Gas Association. "To add more taxes now makes no sense."

"To raise oil and gas severance taxes now to make up any deficit (in state revenues) is the worst choice you could make," Russell Taylor, president of the West Central Texas Oil and Gas Association.

Testimony began Monday before the committee that will first consider any tax bill introduced in the Legislature.

Hearings on other possible taxes, including those used in other states but not levied in Texas, will continue throughout the week, said committee chairman Rep. Stan Schleuter, D-Killeen.

Schleuter also invited any lawmakers with ideas of how the current state budget could be cut to appear.

The first action of the committee on the opening day of the special session was to send Gov. Mark White a letter urging him to let lawmaker discuss ways of trimming the current budget that was approved by the 1983 Legislature.

A special session can consider only those subjects submitted by the governor.

White's call for the session was only for public education and highway improvements.

The committee was told Monday that some taxes used in other states, but not in Texas, included levies on lignite and uranium, refinery taxes, and taxes on hazardous wastes.

Billy Hamilton of the state comptrollers office estimated a tax on lignite might produce as much as $70 million. He said a tax on hazardous wastes, which 40 states have, would produce $50 million to $60 million. And a tax on both the input and output of petroleum refineries might produce $5 billion.

Campaigning concentrated as primaries near close

The Associated Press

Democratic presidential rivals are campaigning to the last possible moment in a five-state wrap-up to their grueling primary season, with Walter F. Mondale straining to grasp the elusive nomination that Gary Hart and Jesse Jackson seek to deny him.

Mondale and Hart each predicted victory in California and New Jersey, the biggest of the states holding primaries today with 486 delegates at stake. Jackson had scant hopes of winning any of the five, but pushed hardest in California to increase his delegate strength at the Democratic National Convention in July.

"Let's put it away tomorrow," the front-running Mondale exhorted supporters in West Virginia on Monday on a 5,620-mile coast-to-coast campaign odyssey that also included stops in New Jersey, New Mexico and California.

Mondale's polls showed him ahead in New Jersey, and a late California survey had him leading there, as well. The fifth state, South Dakota, drew scant attention from Hart and none at all from Mondale.

Hart countered that both big states were going to be replays of the New Hampshire primary that he won.

"We're going to win in New Jersey and we're going to win in California," he said. But he added that no matter what the outcome, "This contest is going to the convention."

Hart brushed aside suggestions by some that his continuing candidacy is hurting the Democrats and helping President Reagan.

"Those are the same experts who said I had no chance to become a serious candidate, that my candidacy was over in March," he retorted.

Hart's campaign manager has said the Colorado senator must win either New Jersey or California to keep his longshot hopes alive. Other aides have said privately that he must win both.

Jackson began airing his first television and radio commercials of a low-budget campaign. He viewed them himself in California, and quipped, "I'm going to vote for the guy."

All three men arranged primary day campaign stops today, even as the voters cast their ballots.

Mondale was in California for a morning appearance before heading for his home state of Minnesota to await the results.

Hart was in New Jersey, with stops also set in California, while Jackson decided to spend the day in California.

After converting 45 delegates from the uncommitted ranks Monday, Mondale had 1,736.05 delegates in the Associated Press count, compared with 983.75 for Hart and 332.2 for Jackson.

It takes 1,967 delegates to win the nomination. Under new party rules, none of the delegates is required to vote for the candidate he was elected to support. That will force Mondale — whether or not he attains a majority of the delegates this week — to work to keep his people in line until the convention.

President lunches with queen, prepares for economic talks

By SALLY JACOBSEN
AP Economics Writer

LONDON — President Reagan, at the midpoint of his 10-day European trip, lunched with Queen Elizabeth II at Buckingham Palace today as he settled in for a round of talks with other world leaders gathering here for an economic summit later in the week.

The queen's husband, Prince Philip, greeted the president and Mrs. Reagan under a glassed-in portico in an inner courtyard of the palace and escorted them inside, where the queen was waiting out of sight of the clutch of reporters traveling in the presidential motorcade.

A small crowd of tourists outside the palace gate waved and applauded as the Reagans passed by, and trumpeters from the palace guard played a fanfare.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said only Reagan, his wife Nancy, the queen and Prince Philip attended the private luncheon.

Reagan, who departed Ireland on Monday despite "such a tug" to stay, was following his palace visit with a working dinner at the No. 10 Downing Street residence of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.

Reagan and Mrs. Thatcher, who are kindred spirits on economics and a number of other policies, renewed their acquaintance Monday when the president arrived from Dublin.

Mrs. Thatcher greeted the president at the Orangery on the grounds of Kensington Palace where Prince Charles and Princess Diana live. He was the first of six world leaders she will meet this week for the seven-nation economic summit.

Discussions between Reagan and Mrs. Thatcher at her Downing Street residence tonight were likely to focus not only on the upcoming economic talks but on East-West relations and the Persian Gulf crisis.

Publisher, priest still recall night before D-Day invasion

By JOHN M. DOYLE
Associated Press Writer

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — On the night of June 5, 1944, Bernard Marie spent his fifth birthday huddled in a cellar 12 miles from Omaha Beach. Monsignor Francis L. Sampson flew through German anti-aircraft fire over Normandy, convinced he was going to die.

It was the night before D-Day, the Allied invasion of Europe and the beginning of the end for Hitler's Nazi Germany.

Forty years later, Marie, publisher of Indiana Business Magazine, has offered a free lunch today to anyone who can prove he's "a D-Day guy." And Sampson, 72, a Roman Catholic priest, works as liaison between the president of the University of Notre Dame and the school's ROTC contingent.

Like thousands of other World War II veterans, Sampson, a former Army chaplain, carries distinct memories of the invasion of Normandy.

He was assigned to the 101st Airborne Division, which jumped into occupied France just after midnight to secure key roads and bridges before the invasion force landed at dawn on June 6.

The plane carrying Sampson and 21 other members of the 501st Parachute Regiment was buffeted by anti-aircraft fire, he recalled.

Many of the paratroopers, loaded down with 100 pounds of equipment, landed in fields flooded by the Germans and drowned. Others were shot as they descended or were scattered over the dark Norman countryside.

Sampson landed in 5 feet of water and cut himself free from his chute. In the murky waters, he lost his kit for saying Mass and had to dive under several times to retrieve it.

A man of God in an ungodly place, he survived the drop. But later German troops overran the farmhouse where he and a medic tended a dozen wounded soldiers.

Chance for thunderstorms again in Basin forecast

From Staff and Wire Reports

Midland again may be blessed with heavenly rain today if the weatherman's odds for thunderstorms pay off.

The weatherman at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport is calling for a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms tonight. The low is be in the upper 60s. Winds are to be southerly at 10 to 15 mph.

For Wednesday, he's forecasting more partly cloudy skies, a high in the lower 90s and southerly winds at 15 to 20 mph.

Monday's high temperature was 83 degrees, and the record high for a June 4 is 100 degrees in 1933. The overnight low was 65 degrees, while the record low for a June 5 is 54 degrees in 1954.

STATE

The drought is over for parts of parched West Texas, but several areas of the state are still aching for moisture, the National Weather Service says.

Heavy thunderstorms dumped almost 2 inches of rain on Midland and Odessa Monday, spawning a few unusual morning tornadoes and flooding some city streets.

More rain was expected Monday night in the mountains of West Texas and over parts of North and South Texas.

In Midland, a happy weather service meteorologist declared that "the drought is over. We're running a little bit above normal" in terms of total rainfall since the start of the year.

The 1.83 inches recorded there pushed that oil-rich city's 1984 rainfall total to 5.84 inches — the amount usually not recorded until the end of June.

But the clouds so far have skipped the Big Bend and High Plains areas of West Texas, which have faced disaster conditions since last year. The drought has also extended this year through South Central Texas.

Two-thirds of Texas — 166 counties — is already eligible for emergency drought assistance, and state officials have estimated the drought gripping West Texas has caused $7 billion in damages.

The dry heat has devastated cotton crops and forced many cattle ranchers to sell their thirsty herds early.

NATION

Scattered thunderstorms that spawned about a dozen tornadoes hammered away today from the northern Plains to the upper Great Lakes and as far south as the Mississippi Delta.

Twisters touched down Monday night in parts of Nebraska, Minnesota and the Dakotas, damaging a ball park at Ellendale, N.D., and buildings in Ellsworth, Minn., the National Weather Service said.

More than an inch of rain drenched Minneapolis while gusty winds knocked over trees and downed power lines, the weather service said.

Severe thunderstorms also smashed the southern Plains on Monday, damaging roofs and knocking down power lines in Oklahoma. More than 3 inches of rain fell at Burnet, Texas, while 2 inches washed over Hondo, Texas.

D-DAY

"I was resigned I was going to die. I was never as serene as I was then," Sampson, a retired major general, said in an interview at his office in South Bend.

The Germans, satisfied that Sampson and his men were non-combatants, fled a few hours later during an American counter-attack.

Unlike most men turning 45 today, Marie, who lived with his family in the tiny fishing village of Luc-sur-Mere, can say, "I was there."

"Between 9 p.m. and 10 p.m. on the night of June 5th, they started the bombing and the shelling," Marie said by telephone from his office in Indianapolis.

Marie's father was away, fighting with the French Resistance. His mother, grandmother and two aunts ran to the cellar with the boy as Allied ships and planes bombarded the landing area through the night.

At about 5 a.m., several U.S. paratroopers spotted two German trucks parked in front of Marie's home and stormed inside, he recalled.

Their curses sounded like German to the women in the cellar below, Marie said.

When his grandmother peeked upstairs, she exclaimed, "My God, the Germans have changed their uniforms," but when the women saw the U.S. flag shoulder patches, "they jumped on their necks hugging and kissing the Americans.... You cannot imagine how crazy it was after four years of German occupation," he said.

Marie spent the rest of the day "jumping from jeep to jeep and swallowing I don't know how much chewing gum.

"My mother gave the soldiers tomatoes and fresh vegetables and they gave us chocolate and corned beef which, for us, was like caviar," he said.

The next day the family went to the beach where the British had built an artificial port.

"When we saw all the ships in the sea, it was unbelievable!" said Marie, still revealing the small boy's wonder.

RAPE

Payne, who works as a bondsman for the Walker bail bond company of Midland, remained in the city jail this morning awaiting formal arraignment and the setting of bond.

According to police, he is charged with the rape of a 25-year-old woman who came into a convenience store at 2210 N. Big Spring Street shortly before 4 a.m. Saturday.

The woman's hands were tied behind her back and she told investigators she had been asleep under the bridge at Big Spring Street and Scharbauer Drive when a man woke her up, tied her with wire and raped her.

The woman, who gave police a general delivery address, said she knew her assailant and was able to identify him. An arrest warrant was later issued and Payne is charged with aggravated sexual assault.

On May 21, State District Judge Vann Culp sentenced Payne to six years in prison — probated for three years — after a six-man, six-woman jury found him guilty of using excessive force in the February 1983 shoplifting arrest of Odessan George Benavides, 21, at the M System food store on Scharbauer Drive and A Street.

Payne was off-duty and working as a part-time security officer for the store at the time. He was fired from the police force after his indictment in the case.

Payne's three-year probated sentence means if he violates probation he must serve six years in the penitentiary. He could have been sentenced to a maximum of 10 years and fined $5,000 for the second degree felony civil rights violation.

Bond in the rape case is expected to be set sometime today.

Administration denies president carrying plan for action in Gulf

LONDON (AP) — A White House spokesman denied a published report today that President Reagan is carrying to the economic summit here a U.S. plan for allied action in case of a major disruption of Persian Gulf oil supplies.

The New York Times, in a report attributed to an unnamed State Department source, said Reagan's proposal calls for Western Europe and Japan, which are heavily dependant on Gulf oil, to quickly draw on their existing crude oil stocks without waiting for a 7-percent drop in supplies to trigger a 10-year-old international oil-sharing agreement.

But in London, where the seven-nation conference of industrialized nations opens Thursday, assistant White House press secretary Anson Franklin said, "We have been working with our allies for months on cooperative actions in case of a temporary disruption of oil supplies. But we do not bring to London any specific plans for consideration."

Franklin, who is traveling with the presidential party, said the threat posed to world oil supplies by the Iran-Iraq war in the Persian Gulf region "may well come up" during the summit talks and in Reagan's separate meetings with each of the other national leaders arriving for the conference.

"We hope to continue the discussions with the allies, but we don't contemplate any specific plan or agreement," the spokesman said.

Another White House official, speaking on condition he not be named, said: "Obviously, this is an important issue for us, and we are well prepared for it, but we don't have any reason to bring it up."

The official said recent planning has focused on a review of oil stocks and noted, the United States has "a sizable petroleum reserve. Some of the other countries don't. What we mainly have done is consider what steps we would take, but we prefer not to be precise about that."

He said the United States was prepared to use its oil reserves if it must but that officials do not expect that to be necessary.

REAGAN

Meanwhile, Secretary of State George P. Shultz met for about 90 minutes this morning with Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Arens for what an American spokesman described as a "frank and cordial" discussion of Middle East issues.

White House spokesman Speakes said the subjects covered included "discussion of the issues that you would think were likely to come up," but he refused to be specific, other than to tell reporters he would steer them away from suggesting the major focus of the talks was the U.S. sale of Stinger antiaircraft missiles to Saudi Arabia. Israel has opposed that sale, saying some of the shoulder-fired weapons could fall into the hands of anti-Israel terrorists.

Arens was in Washington last week and met with Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, but he didn't see Shultz. Speakes said that was because the secretary of state was tied up with the NATO foreign ministerial meeting, so "the two agreed to meet here in lieu of a meeting in Washington. The two have agreed to meet whenever they can, and this was one of those frequent meetings they have."

Carrier America en route to Indian Ocean

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. aircraft carrier America is heading for the Indian Ocean to take over for the carrier Kitty Hawk, which has been patrolling approaches to the Persian Gulf, Defense Department sources say.

Both carriers and escorting warships probably will be in the north Arabian Sea at the same time for several days within two weeks, the source said Monday, speaking on condition that they would not be identified.

While there is no plan to keep the doubled U.S. force on hand for long, the Pentagon officials said, that could be changed by a serious deterioration in the Persian Gulf, where oil tankers have been attacked in a spillover from the Iran-Iraq war.

The America and four other Navy ships are passing through the Suez Canal and will travel through the Red Sea to the Indian Ocean, the sources said.

Meanwhile, Pentagon sources confirmed that oil tankers chartered to haul fuel for the Navy are being escorted by Navy frigates and destroyers after they enter the Persian Gulf.

The sources said, however, that the Pentagon has not established a new policy of escorting tankers operating in the gulf. Navy warships permanently assigned to patrol the southern gulf monitor the movements of the chartered tankers, the officials said.

The tankers do not operate near the combat zone of the Iran-Iraq war, where planes of the two warring nations have attacked commercial ships, the officials said.

The chartered tankers, the officials said, deliver oil from the gulf port of Bahrain to the U.S. carrier battle group in the Arabian Sea and Navy bases in the Philippines, the Indian Ocean and Japan.

Suspect sought in Costa Rican bombing

The Associated Press

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica — An international arrest warrant has been issued for a man who entered Costa Rica on a stolen passport, claimed he was a Danish journalist and went to a Nicaraguan rebel news conference where a bomb exploded.

Francisco Ruiz, spokesman for the Judiciary Investigations Office, said late Monday a man who used a passport issued to Per Anker Hansen was a suspect in the case. He said an arrest warrant "has been issued worldwide," but gave no further details.

The bomb exploded during a news conference Wednesday by Nicaraguan rebel leader Eden Pastora of the Revolutionary Democratic Alliance at La Penca, Nicaragua, just across the San Juan River from Costa Rica.

The blast killed American journalist Linda Frazier of Portland, Ore., a reporter for the English-language Tico Times in San Jose; cameraman Oscar Quiroz of television channel 6 in San Jose, and a woman rebel.

Earlier, sources in the alliance, known as ARDE, said three other rebels also were killed, but ARDE spokesman Orion Pastora said Monday the total number of deaths was three.

The man who identified himself as Hansen was last seen Thursday as he prepared to leave the Gran Via Hotel in San Jose.

Danish Consul Palle Paaby said the man was using a stolen passport belonging to a Per Anker Hansen who lives in Copenhagen and lost the document in 1980.

"It is absolutely certain the man here was traveling on a stolen passort from a person who had the name he (the man) was using here," Paaby said. "We do not know who he is."

"I found out that this passport was stolen, so we do not even know if he is a Danish citizen," he said.

Swedish Television correspondent Peter Torbjoernsson said the man, whom he met at a hotel, identified himself as a photographer for an agency called Europe Seven in Paris. But in Paris, the agency was not known.

"We met at the registration desk and he introduced himself. He was a trained photographer, apparently," Torbjoernsson said. "He was a nice chap."

Torbjoernsson said the man expressed an interest in the rebels and in meeting Eden Pastora.

"He was supposedly Danish, but he spoke very bad Danish," Torbjoernsson said. "He spoke good Spanish."

Torbjoernsson recalled that on the day of the news conference, the man went along with a camera around his neck and an aluminum case commonly used by photographers to carry their equipment.

He said he last saw the man Thursday at the hotel, where Torbjoernsson, who was injured in the blast, had returned before going to a hospital.

"He seemed very much in a hurry," he said. "He did not seem very concerned about my injuries. He gave me the impression that he was heading for the airport and I got the idea that he was going to Miami."

Visit calls support into question

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chances to muster Capitol Hill support for CIA financing of Nicaraguan rebels may fade because of the surprise visit to the Central American nation by Secretary of State George P. Shultz, a top House Democrat says.

One Senate Republican, however, said Monday that the visit by Shultz with Nicaraguan leader Daniel Ortega on Friday might enlarge congressional support for the $21 million sought by the Reagan administration to assist rebels fighting Ortega's Sandinista government.

House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Tex., an opponent of the aid, told reporters he doubted that the Shultz visit "would make the Congress willing to spend more money to overthrow the government when the secretary of state has been down there talking to them."

Shultz met with Ortega following a visit to El Salvador to attend the inauguration of President Jose Napoleon Duarte.

Administration officials said Shultz urged the Nicaraguans to halt arms shipments to leftist guerrillas in El Salvador and loosen ties with Cuba and the Soviet Union.

The Nicaraguans, in turn, asked Shultz for an end to U.S. support for so-called Contra rebels in their country. The Senate already has approved the $21 million for the anti-Sandinista forces.

A Senate Republican, speaking on the condition that he would not be named, said the administration is pressing forward with efforts to build support in the House where majority Democrats have balked at support for the Contras.

The impasse between the House and Senate over aid to the Nicaraguan rebels has tied up $62 million in military aid for El Salvador in the same package.

Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker, R-Tenn., has set no date for new consideration of the Central American package, and the talk on Capitol Hill was that he would probably wait to give the administration time to work on the House Democrats.

Gramm: Campaign will be free of 'mudslinging'

Phil Gramm

HARLINGEN (AP) — U.S. Rep. Phil Gramm says he will run a campaign free of the "mudslinging" that characterized the Democratic Party runoff race between state Sen. Lloyd Doggett and U.S. Rep Kent Hance.

Gramm, R-College Station, making a stop in Harlingen Monday during a swing through South Texas, challenged his Democratic Party opponent "whoever he may be, to campaign on the issues" in the U.S. Senate race.

Of the Democratic Party runoff, which showed Doggett leading Hance by 467 votes and prompted a call for a recount from Hance, Gramm quipped: "I thought I'd at least know who my opponent is by this time."

Gramm said he intends to run the same kind of campaign whether Doggett, an Austin liberal, or Hance, a Lubbock conservative, emerges as victor. The eventual Democratic winner will face Gramm in an election to choose the person to fill the seat held by Republican U.S. Sen. John Tower, who has held the seat for 23 years.

"I hope we can run this campaign on the basis of issues," Gramm said. "What we owe to the people of Texas is not a campaign of name calling, not a campaign of mudslinging, but a campaign where we talk about the issues."

"I want to run on my record, on what I have to offer," he said. "We have enough national problems and regional problems to talk about and differences in philosophy and approach, and I think that ought to be the key to the campaign."

He said, "I think people don't care what politicians think about each other. What they do care about is what we think about the issues and what we have to offer."

Gramm said he thinks the turnout in the Doggett-Hance runoff was low because the campaign turned into a mudslinging and name calling contest. "I don't think that serves the democratic process well," he said.

Gramm said campaigning on the issues without attacking the other candidates helped him take 73 percent of the Republican vote in five-man primary scramble when Tower announced his retirement.

Hance topped Doggett by 273 votes in a five-candidate Democratic Party primary race. But Doggett inched ahead of Hance by 509 votes in last Saturday's runoff election.

But in seeking a recount, Hance noted that the secretary of state's office had verified its results Monday and found discrepancies that narrowed the gap by 42 votes.

Gramm said his latest poll shows him with an 11 percent lead over Doggett and a 9 percent edge over Hance in the November election.

He said the biggest issue in the election is controlling the federal deficit and maintaining the economic recovery. Gramm credited President Reagan with creating 6 million new jobs, including putting 700,000 Texans to work.

"I want to deal with that deficit by dealing with the source of the problem, by controlling government spending." Gramm said. "Doggett wants to deal with it by raising taxes."

He said Doggett opposes the balanced budget amendment which would force the federal government to "live within a budget just like you and I have to." Gramm said he favors a strong defense, but said Doggett is against most of the "major components of our effort to strengthen defense."

Man police shot had empty shotgun

FORT WORTH (AP) — A 22-year-old man who was shot and killed by police Saturday was carrying an unloaded shotgun, authorities say.

Two patrolmen killed Ricky Don Cox early Saturday after he pointed the gun at them. They were answering a call from neighbors who said Cox was drunk and firing a shotgun in the street.

When the two — officers R.W. Reed, 38, and B.S. Keefer, 23 — approached Cox's door, police said Cox pointed the gun at both men.

As Keefer backed away from the door, he tripped and fell while pulling his own gun's trigger, said police spokesman Doug Clarke. Reed thought Cox had shot Keefer and opened fire, he said.

Tarrant County authorities said Monday Cox was shot three times in the back and once in the neck.

"The fact that the gun was unloaded is a mitigating circumstance," Clarke said. But "he had been shooting in the streets, then he opened the door and stuck the gun in the officer's face.

Baptist group president to step down

Rev. J.T. Draper

EULESS (AP) — Some worry his departure will mean an end to the storm's lull, but the Rev. James T. Draper is saying that "enough is enough."

Draper, 48, is stepping down from the Southern Baptist Convention's presidency after two years of relative calm in the once-turbulent organization of 14 million members.

The first president re-elected by acclamation, Draper says he's more than ready to return home to the First Baptist Church of Euless. Like his father and grandfather before him, he just wants to be a full-time pastor again.

Draper says he traveled more than 300,000 miles to church suppers all over the country during his tenure.

"It's the kind of thing that you're glad you do," Draper explains. "But enough is enough."

But his exit — scheduled for June 12 —could precipitate another storm when the Southern Baptist Convention meets next week in Kansas City to tap his successor, church officials say.

Draper built a reputation for caution and conciliation during his two terms in a group once torn by distrust, internal politics and the controversial statements of his predecessor, the Rev. Bailey Smith of Del City, Okla.

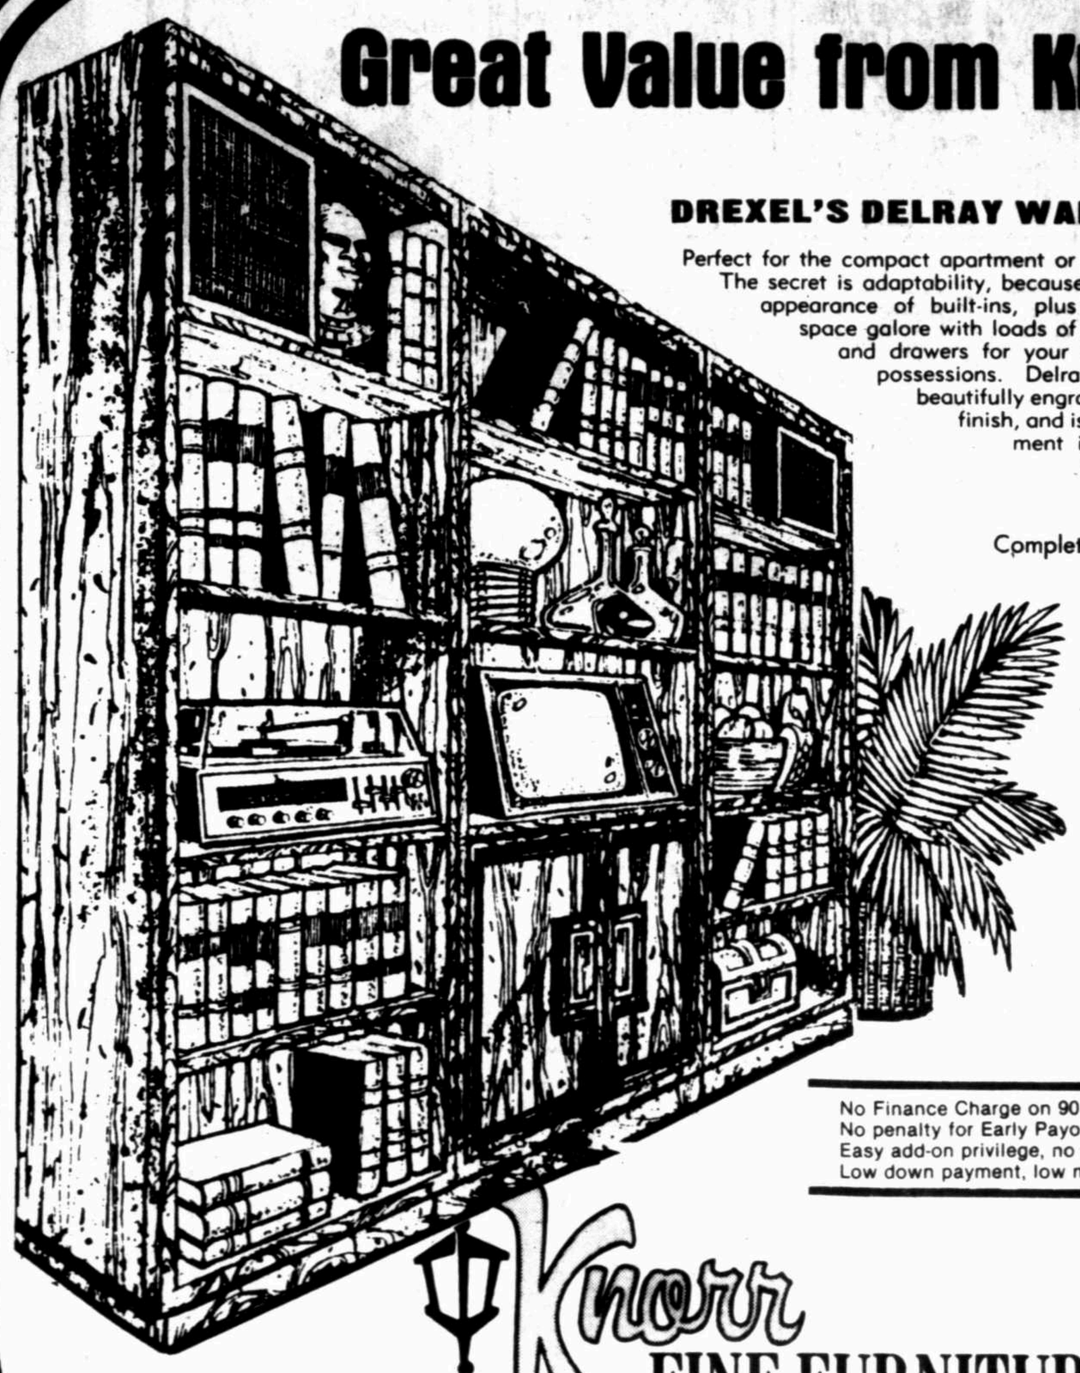

And the Dallas Times Herald says many Baptists worry that a divisive convention could revive tension that escalated under Smith, who served from 1980 to 1982 and raised a storm of protest when he said he believed God does not hear the prayers of Jews.

Draper — identified with the "inerrancy" faction that contends the Bible is completely accurate — has won praise from the denomination's moderates.

One of them, the Rev. Bruce McIver of Wilshire Baptist Church in Dallas, said he thinks "Jimmy's done a good job in attempting to bring us together. He's a very strong leader, and I think he has tried very, very hard."

On the whole, Draper says he's satisfied with the way he has handled the presidency.

'Mikado' to air on PBS

By MIKE SILVERMAN

NEW YORK (AP) — One hundred years ago, legend has it, playwright William S. Gilbert was pacing his study floor, unable to think of a plot for a new operetta, when a Japanese executioner's sword fell from the wall.

As fast as you can say "The Flowers That Bloom in the Spring," Gilbert had his inspiration — a Japanese setting for a comic tale of a reluctant executioner, his pretty young ward, and her minstrel-suitor, who just happens to be the emperor's son in disguise.

Set to some of Sir Arthur Sullivan's most tuneful and bubbling music, "The Mikado" opened in London in 1885 to rave reviews, ran two years, and has become the team's most enduring work.

You'll see why, if you watch the production that's coming to public television Wednesday night as part of Britain's "Compleat Gilbert and Sullivan" series.

It's a straightforward, no-nonsense production that transports the viewer to a whimsical world where the executioner maintains "a little list" of candidates for beheading and the emperor diligently seeks "to make the punishment fit the crime."

That world has little to do with the real Japan, but it has a lot to do with Gilbert's gift for gently poking fun at bureaucracy and ideals of justice.

Perhaps its universal appeal explains why "The Mikado" has so often been adapted, updated and generally messed with. There has been a jazz "Mikado," a swing "Mikado" and the late producer Mike Todd's "Hot Mikado."

The TV production is, wisely, a traditional one. And the cast is excellent — especially Clive Revill, the British comedian who plays Ko-Ko, the Lord High Executioner.

Revill captures just the right mix of sweetness and pomposity to win our sympathy at the same time we're glad he loses the fair Yum-Yum to the handsome Nanki-Poo.

Nearly his match is Anne Collins as Katisha, the emperor's Daughter-in-Law-Elect, one of those bossy, middle-aged spinsters who always cause trouble in G&S operettas.

Kate Flowers and John Stewart make an attractive pair of young lovers, and Stafford Dean, a noted bass on the English opera stage, is properly supercilious as Pooh-Bah, the Lord High Everything Else.

The one disappointment is "guest star" William Conrad, the corpulent actor known to TV audiences as the detectives Cannon and Nero Wolfe, who is making his Gilbert and Sullivan debut as the title character.

SWAP A LOSER

Some tricks you simply have to lose. But on occasion you can determine when to lose them — to your profit.

We like the way North handled the bidding. Since he had shown slam interest with his four spade cue-bid, there was no need for him to do more than confirm diamond support at the five-level. With a dead minimum opening, South was not inclined to venture further.

Both vulnerable. South deals.

♡ K 8 3
◇ Q 7 5

WEST
♠ 6 4 3
♡ Q J 7 6 4

EAST
♠ K J 10 9 7 5 2
♡ A 10 2
◇ 3
♣ 9 4

SOUTH
♠ Q
♡ 9 5
◇ A K J 10 6 4 2
♣ K 7 3

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	2 ♠	3 ♠
4 ◇	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
5 ♣	Pass	5 ◇	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Six of ♠.

West led his top spade, and declarer was not all that thrilled with his contract. East surely had the ace of hearts for his vulnerable three-level bid, so there was a distinct danger of losing two heart tricks and a club.

If East held three clubs, he could be end played in that suit and forced to lead a heart from the ace. But since he held the long spades, it was more likely that West would have any club length. However, there were two roads to success. Can you spot them?

The straightforward way is to duck the opening lead. East wins the king, but he can do no damage. Assume he returns a spade. Declarer discards a club, draws trumps, cashes the king-ace of clubs and establishes the suit with a ruff. He can get back to dummy with a trump to discard his losing hearts on the long clubs. To prevent an overtrick, East must cash the ace of hearts at trick two.

Declarer traveled another path. He won the ace of spades, drew trumps and cashed the king-ace of clubs. Now he led the eight of spades off the board and, when East covered with the nine, declarer discarded his losing club. East was straddled with the lead and had a choice of losing exits. A spade would present declarer with a ruff-sluff and a heart would set up the table's king as the fulfilling trick.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Democratic blues

For each of the three remaining Democratic presidential hopefuls, all the former candidates who long past accepted defeat, all the campaign workers who have labored long and hard for their respective candidates and, last but certainly not least, the American voters who by now probably are tiring of the presidential campaign trail, the primary election season draws to a close today.

Don't get your hopes up to find out who the nominee is anytime soon because although presidential primary elections are held in California, Mississippi, Montana, New Jersey, New Mexico, South Dakota and West Virginia today, the delegate selection process won't be completed until the Democratic convention is held in San Francisco July 16.

In fact, more than 400 delegates will be chosen after today's primaries. In addition to that factor is another — even more risky — one: Sen. Gary Hart has charged that about 600 delegates committed to Walter F. Mondale are "tainted" because they were chosen early in the primary season with the help of special committees that operated outside the scope of the federal public financing system. Meanwhile, Mondale disbanded the committees in late April and has established a $400,000 escrow account to repay the money they raised should that move become necessary.

Still, the prospect of a floor fight at the convention over credentials should be sending shudders through Democratic officials. They undoubtedly recall the 1968 convention when the credentials committee considered an unprecedented number of challenges involving delegates from 15 states. In a historic move, the convention by voice vote seated a new loyalist faction from Mississippi and ousted the delegation of the traditionally segregationist, conservative regular party.

That battle has been credited with having helped Richard M. Nixon reclaim the White House for the Republicans.

Of course that wasn't the only credentials dispute in American political history. And such disputes aren't reserved for the Democrats. Going back to the 1912 GOP convention, former President Theodore Roosevelt made a number of credentials challenges in his attempt to capture the nomination from incumbent President William H. Taft.

Roosevelt's attempts failed, but he went on to form the Progressive (Bull Moose) Party, a move that gave the Democrats the opportunity to win their first presidential election in 20 years.

Party leaders attempt to head off floor fights over credentials or platform planks because they tend to convey an image of disunity and weakness to potential voters. That likely will be the rule of thumb this year as Mondale, Hart and the Rev. Jesse Jackson's forces move toward San Francisco and televised floor proceedings.

What party officials probably will be telling the three Democratic hopefuls is that floor fights only help one person: Ronald Reagan. One can bet President Reagan will be watching the convention with keen interest.

Closing mob laundry

The president's Commission on Organized Crime is investigating how the mob launders dirty money in offshore banks and brings it back without a scent.

How, for example, did the mob use a respectable foreign exchange firm, Deak-Perera, to transfer $65 million of drug money abroad? The commission wanted to ask the firm's chief, Nicholas Deak that question but couldn't because he declined to testify.

There is no suggestion of criminal wrongdoing by Deak, but the commission is charged with finding out how such transactions occur. It needs the power to subpoena its witnesses.

The House of Representatives has voted to give the commission that power. The Senate should follow suit.

With this investigatory power in its hands, the commission should be aggressive in its search into the complex financial mechanisms that prevent billions of dollars from being detected.

The objective is to shut down the dirty money laundries.

Another View:

Dialing for kicks

Remember the widespread parental rage over a dial-a-porn message being delivered by some New York City firm? Youngsters all across the country had heard about the message, and the phone number to be called, and were running up long-distance charges like mad.

Well, it seems the kids aren't the only ones who like to be titillated by the suggestive remarks of heavy-breathing females. There are a lot of immature ding-a-lings working for the government.

Pentagon auditors estimated that in 1985 calls from employees of the Defense Department to dial-a-porn services will cost taxpayers about $300,000.

The porn fling, according to a report by the House Armed Services Committee, is just one juicy bit of evidence that improper employee use of government phones has gotten out of hand.

Investigations prove that control over telephone usage is "lax or non-existent," the committee said. That's an understatement at best when federal workers can waste more than a quarter of a million in tax funds just for kicks. Many taxpayers would call that kind of nonsense an obscenity.

Corruption story stirs protest

WASHINGTON — My recent reports on corruption in Mexico stirred a hornet's nest south of the border. The Mexican government lodged a formal diplomatic protest, which led the State Department to issue a delicately worded quasi-apology.

Jack Anderson

Rep. Henry Gonzales, D-Tex., was even moved to suggest that my reports were the result of deliberate leaks from elements in the Reagan administration trying to discredit President Miguel de la Madrid during his state visit to Washington last month.

All this is preposterous. My associate Dale Van Atta had been digging up the facts on Mexican presidents' self-enrichment for months. I had the essential information late last year and spent the ensuing months confirming it. De la Madrid's visit was simply a convenient news peg for the stories.

The particular hornet that stung de la Madrid was my report from secret sources that the Mexican president had squirreled away some $162 million since he took office in 1982. I noted that this was a modest sum compared to the $1 billion to $3 billion stashed away by his predecessor and mentor, Jose Lopez Portillo, during his six-year term.

Interestingly, the first word most Mexicans had of the alleged self-enrichment of their president came when his denial was issued. Except for a few courageous editors, the story was studiously ignored by the Mexican press. So when the formal protest was lodged, most newspapers were in the awkward position of having to explain what their president was protesting.

The protest presented a special problem for the State Department. This is spelled out in a secret department report which explained:

"Our problems with Mexico differ in nature and scale from those with any other country. Other nations' problems affect us. Mexican problems involve us. ... Mexico joins the short list of countries needing special treatment. Because it is large, poor, very close and separated by a permeable border, and because its population already exceeds its resources and is growing too fast, Mexico's problems will increasingly be ours."

So the State Department's response to de la Madrid's protest was a carefully worded peace offering. It said:

"The United States government applauds President de la Madrid's commitment to addressing the issue of honesty in government. Information available to all U.S. government agencies leads us to the firm conclusion that President de la Madrid has set both a high personal and official standard in keeping with this commitment."

This is clearly not a denial of the facts I had presented, though the Mexican press treated it as such.

Since my columns appeared, much has been written about de la Madrid's anti-corruption campaign. As I pointed out, it has become a Mexican tradition for each incoming administration to investigate the corruption of the outgoing administration, with an accompanying hullabaloo about reforms.

These investigations invariably stop short of the retired president. There seems to be a special immunity for ex-presidents, an unspoken understanding that the current president will treat his predecessors as he would like one day to be treated. One reason for this may be that the new president almost always was a close ally of the last president.

For example, no one bothers to pretend any longer that corruption was not rampant under ex-President Lopez Portillo. But as usual, Lopez Portillo and de la Madrid have escaped the national scourging that has been applied to lesser lights. The Mexican press has neglected to remind the Mexican people that Lopez Portillo's budget director — the man who knew as much as anyone where the money was going — was none other than de la Madrid.

Significantly, one of the scapegoats is Arturo Durazo Moreno, the former Mexico City police chief who is now a fugitive from justice after being charged with staggering corruption. On an official salary of $65 a week, Durazo Moreno acquired multimillion-dollar estates — including one palatial spread nicknamed "The Parthenon" because of its marble furnishings and 42 Greek columns.

On July 24, 1979, I was the first to report on the police chief's notorious corruption. I was pilloried in the Mexican press as "anti-Mexican." This is the same thing the press has been saying about me since I broke the story about presidential corruption in Mexico.

Footnote: Independent Mexican journalists and competent government sources tell me that the political party that has run Mexico since 1929 slips payments under the table to reporters and editors. The Mexicans even have words for the practice — "igualas" for covert payments to reporters, "gacetilla" for payments to editors.

Jackson polarizing Democrats

LOS ANGELES — City Councilman Zev Yaroslavsky's home telephone began ringing with complaints at 8:30 in the morning, signaling a problem for Sen. Gary Hart in the California primary Tuesday but much bigger trouble for the Democratic Party in November and the years ahead.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

The callers were constituents from Yaroslavsky's heavily Jewish West Side district griping that their councilman's choice for president, Sen. Gary Hart, had been quoted as considering the Rev. Jesse Jackson for vice president. Actually, in the big Los Angeles Jewish community there is not much conversation about either Walter F. Mondale or Hart but lots of talk about Jackson — all of it bad.

Jewish anxiety created by Jackson is not the only contributor to unease pervading Democrats in the nation's largest state. Hart's victory in the primary and Mondale's subsequent nomination in San Francisco are widely expected, but pessimism hangs heavy over the future.

The Mondale-Hart showdown, far from generating the passions of Kennedy-McCarthy in 1968 or McGovern-Humphrey in 1972, does not even match the excitement of this year's races for district attorney and county supervisor. What worries insightful Democrats even more is the leftward reach of the presidential campaign. "Nothing is being said here that helps us beat Ronald Reagan," one prominent party leader told us.

Typical was Thursday night's fund-raiser at the Beverly Hills mansion of leftish millionaire Stanley Sheinbaum, held to retire George McGovern's campaign debt. McGovern may still be a fringe ideologue to the nation but has become an elder statesman in his party's mainstream. Mondale and Hart sheathed swords long enough to attend the fund-raiser.

But not Jesse Jackson. His absence was the big news of the Sheinbaum affair, underlining concern about how to deal with him. He poses a special problem here for Mondale, whose substantial black support is wiped out by Jackson in California's election of delegates in winner-take-all congressional districts.

Mondale will get no delegates from the Watts section of Los Angeles. However, perhaps looking to the general election, he went to Watts Thursday for a rally at Martin Luther King Jr. Hospital. Mayor Tom Bradley and Rep. Mervyn Dymally were on the platform, but the audience was sparse and undemonstrative. "I'm voting for Jesse Jackson because he's black," shouted a black nurse leaving her shift to go home instead of to the rally.

The closest Mondale came to protesting such racial voting was his plaintive statement: "All my life I have fought for justice." While unsparing in flailing Hart for inconsistencies real and imagined, he has yet to voice serious criticism of Jackson. Nor has Hart, equally wary about turning off black voters in November.

Instead, Hart's mistake-prone candidacy invited Jewish ire by talking about Jackson for vice president. Asked about that at a Los Angeles synagogue service, Hart said he would not pick a vice president who did not share his views on Israel. Members of the congregation turned to each other, asking: But what are Hart's views? Perhaps benumbed by jet lag, he had not really said.

The Jackson fires barely subsided when Pudge Henkel, Hart's neophyte national campaign chairman, re-ignited them by putting out a story of Hart-Jackson collaboration against Mondale at the convention. The Waxman-Berman political organization's hope of electing Hart delegates on the West Side is that voters will simply take the word of such trusted party elders as Rep. Henry Waxman, Rep. Howard Berman and Councilman Yaroslavsky.

Jackson's failure to rebuke a supporter's anti-Semitism was condemned more vigorously by Vice President George Bush than either Mondale or Hart, a fact duly noted on the West Side. Whatever happens June 5, serious Jewish politicians here believe Reagan can consolidate his 1980 gains in their constituencies. Worse yet, they see a future Democratic Party dominated by blacks and Hispanics and increasingly unsuccessful in statewide elections.

It is hardly a Jewish problem. Jackson deeply worries non-Jewish whites in the San Fernando Valley, registered Democrats grown disaffected from their party. Party leaders grumble that ordinary Americans hear little from Mondale or Hart about workaday problems like high interest rates. They may vote for Hart Tuesday, then back Reagan Nov. 6.

A non-pessimist is Mickey Kantor, Mondale's state chairman and a proven winner in California politics. He sees polarization as the way Mondale beats Ronald Reagan. Other Democrats here differ, fearing Jackson and polarization could become the seedbed of a permanent Democratic minority.

LETTERS

Preserve memories!

Last week the president of the board of the Museum of the Southwest mailed out the official notification which substantiated rumors as fact that the Lancaster House and its attendant structures are to be demolished. As was stated in the letter which museum members received, "realistically and pragmatically, the buildings do not lend themselves to cost-effective Museum support."

My contention is that the board, through a policy of neglect and general non-management of county properties, has allowed a landmark symbol of Midland's heritage to fall victim to the rubber stamp of frustrated expediency.

Some architects say the house is not a good example of such-and-such a style of building. Consultant firms quote astronomical fees for renovation. Pragmatic opinions of one level or another abound, but I question whether the truly creative possibilities of building use were explored and exhausted before the decision was made.

There are issues involved aside form the cost-effective viewpoint which should garnish considerable weight in a community whose historical and political nature has traditionally been conservative. Soon we can truthfully ask, "what's left to conserve?" Already the small pocket of older homes on Wall, Texas, Illinois and Missouri streets are falling prey to zoning decisions which were indeed questionable.

A cursory drive down any of these streets will show that these decisions, in general, have created an abundance of deserted and unkept homes and yards and a proliferation of "modern" facelifting jobs whose efforts have yielded over-night plastered facades sporting the elegance and charm of encrusted Kleenex boxes. The Hill House is gone. A parking lot graces the Petroleum Club's previous site. There are too few remaining examples of our architectural heritage not to do everything creatively possible to hold onto them! That is also reality.

The bricks have not tumbled yet. I maintain that we can have an excitement and fascination for the present while simultaneously balancing our reverence for the past. 1984 is here and, as George Orwell said, "They are destroying our memories." A special meeting will be held concerning the Museum's building plans on June 8 at 11:30 a.m. at the Marian Blakemore Planetarium. Please bring your ideas and opinions.

Support hangs in jeopardy

On my desk is a letter from the Museum of the Southwest announcing changes approved by the board of trustees. The stationery on which the letter is written proudly states the facilities encompassed by the museum. They include the Turner Galleries, Thomas Gallery, Lancaster House and the Marion Blakemore Planetarium.

In addition to expansion and construction plans, the letter ironically advises removal of the Lancaster House because it is not cost-effective and is a continual drain on resources.

I find it unbelieveable that an institution dedicated to the preservation of our heritage chose to destroy a beautiful, unique landmark and symbol of Midland's growth, prosperity and generosity because it couldn't handle the responsibility.

I feel the Lancaster name and intention as been violated has well as the public trust.

If this sickening and embarrassing situation is not reversed, the repercussions and damage to museum support may be immeasurable.

Shoppers, workers aid elderly mugging victim

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — When supermarket workers saw an elderly woman knocked to the ground outside by a purse-snatcher, they got on the loudspeaker. Clerks joined shoppers, and before it was over a a dozen citizens chased down and captured two suspects, police said.

Marjorie McCarty, who is in her 70s, was grateful for the crowd's help.

"They were fantastic," she said.

"Unbelievable," added her husband, H.M. McCarty.

"When the suspects started to flee, there was a chase and, apparently, everybody and their brother got into it," said Sgt. Thomas A. Gavin of the Sunday incident.

Mrs. McCarty was taken to a hospital, treated for scrapes and bruises, then released.

Two persons held captive by the crowd were arrested and charged with strong-armed robbery. Lester James Mathis, 18, was being held in the Pinellas County Jail under $5,000 bond. The second suspect, a juvenile, was taken to a juvenile detention center.

Mrs. McCarty said she paused at the entrance to Albertsons supermarket to stand clear of a man she thought was jogging. Instead, she said, the "jogger" pushed himself against her, knocked her down, grabbed her white purse and fled.

"That guy came out of nowhere," said her husband, who was getting out of the driver's side of their car when he saw his wife sprawled on the pavement and a man running with her purse. "I took a few steps after him, but then I said, 'The heck with the purse, I better see how she is.'"

Witnesses said the man who took the handbag climbed into the passenger side of a blue Fiat, driven by another man.

Michael Mott, who used to work as a stockboy, and others chased the car to a dead-end street.

Escapee makes quick stop for food

OXFORD, N.C. (AP) — A "hungry" prison escapee, one of four fugitive killers, confronted a convenience store clerk to demand food, and officers were rushed to this Granville County town to help in the search today, authorities said.

The unidentified clerk said Linwood Briley entered the Snack Shack at about 9:30 p.m. Monday and told her "not to use the phone, that he was hungry and that he wanted some food," said Russ Edmonston, a spokesman for the state Department of Crime Control and Public Safety.

"He got two cans of pork and beans (and) left the store," Edmonston said.

The man then tried to get into a car "occupied by a male and female" but could not, and left the store on foot, Edmonston said. He did not know why the suspect did not get into the car.

Edmonston said the woman gave a "positive identification" of Briley from mug shots.

"We haven't had that so far," he added when asked if the lead appeared promising.

He said a "more than a dozen" law enforcement officers had been sent to Oxford to aid in the search.

The manhunt for the other three fugitives remained focused in Warren County, despite reports of one or more of the killers over a 40-mile stretch on both sides of the Virginia-North Carolina line.

The men escaped Thursday night from the Mecklenburg Correctional Center in rural southern Virginia.

"They could be anywhere," said Robert Pence, FBI agent in charge of North Carolina. "Anywhere at all."

Search efforts have been focused in the Warrenton area since two of the six inmates — Derick Lynn Peterson and Earl Clanton Jr. — were captured on Friday in a downtown coin laundry, sipping wine and eating cheese.

"That's the only known lead we have right now, that two of them were apprehended in the middle of Warrenton," Pence said. "We'll be in Warrenton until we have some conclusive indication that the others are somewhere else."

Still at large were James and Linwood Briley, Lem Tuggle Jr. and Willie Leroy Jones.

Frustrated authorities have chased down numerous reports that have failed to yield the convicts, who escaped Thursday after overpowering guards, donning their uniforms and choreographing a bomb scare to drive off in a prison van.

Suspected sightings of the four remaining fugitives have come from as far as Rowan County, 160 miles west, and Portsmouth, Va., 100 miles to the northeast.

An 11-year-old girl identified escapee Lem Tuggle Jr. as the man she saw trying to break into a neighbor's trailer on Monday afternoon in Roanoke Rapids at the eastern end of Lake Gaston, about 30 miles east of Warrenton.

"He was trying to open the window," said Sharon Williams, who identified Tuggle from police photographs. "He had a knife. He looked at me and I ran around the house. I thought he was going to threaten me. I started running down the street and looked back and saw him running into the woods."

But 75 searchers found no trace of the escapees, said Russ Edmonston, a spokesman for the state Department of Crime Control and Public Safety.

"Sometimes it takes weeks," he said. "It depends on individuals, their abilities, their determination to stay gone."

Earlier Monday, dozens of officers rushed to a lake campground near Bracey, Va., after a woman said she saw two men resembling the Briley brothers.

Service set for reporter killed in blast

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A memorial service will be held here Friday for Linda Frazier, one of four people killed last week in a bomb attack on Nicaraguan rebel leader Eden Pastora.

The service for Mrs. Frazier, a former Portland resident has been set for 8 p.m. at The Old Church.

Mrs. Frazier, 38, worked for the English-language Tico Times weekly newspaper and was the wife of Joseph Frazier, Central American correspondent for The Associated Press.

She was killed by the blast Wednesday night in La Pence, Nicaragua, during a news conference called by Pastora, who was wounded.

Mrs. Frazier is survived by her husband, her son, Christopher, and her mother, Lillian White of Portland.

Chernenko: Missiles block negotiations

MOSCOW (AP) — President Konstantin U. Chernenko says Soviet negotiators will not return to arms control talks with the United States as long as NATO continues to deploy U.S. cruise and Pershing 2 missiles in Western Europe.

Chernenko reiterated the Soviet position Monday at a Kremlin dinner, and did not mention President Reagan's offer earlier in the day to "stop or even reverse" the deployment of 572 nuclear-tipped missiles by NATO as part of an arms control pact with Moscow.

Reagan, in a speech in Dublin, Ireland, declared that "America is prepared for peace." He said he would consider a recent Soviet proposal to renounce the use of force in Europe if Moscow would consider Western plans to reduce the chance of war on the continent.

A commentator for the Soviet news agency Novosti dismissed the Reagan speech as merely repeating positions already rejected by Moscow. The commentary was distributed to Western reporters in the Soviet capital.

The official Soviet news agency Tass also announced Monday that President Francois Mitterand of France will visit the Soviet Union during the second half of June. In Paris, the presidential palace confirmed the visit, but neither the French nor Soviet governments gave a specific date.

France is not militarily part of NATO. But Mitterand has been a strong supporter of the development of new U.S. missiles in Western Europe and the topic is almost certain to be discussed.

During his speech at the dinner for visiting Romanian leader Nicolae Ceausescu, Chernenko made clear that the Kremlin is unwilling to return unconditionally to the talks on limiting nuclear arms in Europe.

Survivors relate sinking of British square-rigger

HAMILTON, Bermuda (AP) — On his first time as a crewman at sea, Bill Barnhardt had just come on deck for the 4 a.m.-to 8 a.m. watch aboard the three-masted Marques when suddenly the rain stopped and the sky cleared.

For about three minutes, Barnhardt, a 24-year-old sailing trainee, watched the stars emerge. The Marques, a 117-foot British square-rigger, was sailing comfortably in 28 mph winds along the course of an 800-mile Bermuda-to-Nova Scotia race for tall ships.

Then, from nowhere, a freak gust of wind slammed the ship onto its side, and cascading water drove the vessel beneath the waves within 45 seconds.

Of the 28 crew and passengers, nine people were rescued and one body was recovered within four hours of the sinking early Sunday. The survivors who were brought back to Bermuda said they doubted any of 18 others would be found alive.

"The squall that hit us totally unexpectedly was incredible in its velocity," Philip Sefton, 20, a professional sailor from Britain, said Monday at a news conference by some survivors of the ship's sinking.

Criss-crossing some 360 square miles of the Atlantic, about 18 ships, helicopters and planes searched today for the missing people, said U.S. Coast Guard Petty Officer Jerry Snyder. The search began early Sunday and will continue "at least through midday when they'll make a decision whether to carry on," Snyder said today.

The Marques went down about 80 miles northeast of Bermuda. The site is just outside the top of the mysterious Bermuda Triangle.

At the news conference, held at a British naval station on the west end of Bermuda, Sefton said he was at the helm when someone shouted, "All hands on deck!" Muscled like a weightlifter and more than six feet tall, he tried to spin the wheel to keep the ship upright but couldn't hold it. Water poured across the deck.

Clifton McMillan, 16, of Fairfield, Conn., another trainee who had just gone off the midnight to 4 a.m. watch, was already in his nightclothes when he heard the shout and scrambled up on deck.

"I was basically swept away," he said. On his way overboard, he grabbed a life raft that was being washed off too.

Sefton, meanwhile, climbed onto the now-sideways box encasing the wheel in a vain attempt to keep his head above water. He grabbed a rail and flung himself overboard as the deck of the ship plunged beneath the water.

"From the moment the squall started to blow to the moment the ship was on its side was 10 seconds," he told reporters. Sailors at the news conference gasped. He said the ship started to sink in another 30 seconds and was gone 45 seconds after that.

Sikhs battle troops in India

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Sikhs in the heavily fortified Golden Temple in Amritsar exchanged gunfire with government forces again today, a day after a five-hour gunbattle in which at least 16 of the militants inside reportedly were killed.

Sources in Punjab state, who asked not to be identified, said by telephone that the latest firing began just before dawn near the shrine.

Washington Post reporter William Claiborne, who was expelled from Amritsar later in the day, said he heard mortar fire in the area.

Police in Punjab said at least 16 Sikhs were killed in Monday's shootout; other official sources said the death toll was 36.

In New Delhi, 250 miles to the south, Home Secretary M.M.K. Wali denied that there were heavy Sikh casualties Monday. But he acknowledged that suspected Sikh terrorists had killed four or five people Monday night in villages elsewhere in Punjab.

Wali said there could not have been many casualties Monday because the 17th century temple has been heavily fortified and the militant Sikhs were not in exposed positions.

The government sent tens of thousands of army troops into Punjab over the weekend, sealed the northern state's borders and imposed a curfew in an attempt to control violence by Sikhs agitating for religious and economic concessions for the state.

Green Tree plans Pro-Am

Second Invitational set Oct 1

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

Green Tree Country Club PGA touring professional Tom Kite and head golf pro Warren Chancellor announced Monday that GTCC will be hosting its second annual Invitational Pro-Am here October 1.

Chancellor said that seven golfers have already given committments to participate in the Invitational, which this year will benefit the Midland Association for Retarded Citizens (MARC). Besides Kite, golfers Tom Purtzer, Barry Jaeckel, Mark Brooks, Mark Pfeil and Midlander John Adams are slated to attend. Last year's Invitational champ, Dr. Gil Morgan, has an opportunity to remain the only winner in the event's brief history.

Last year, 25 pro golfers got the initial Invitational off to a flying start. That success in a new venture coupled with Kite and Chancellor's contacts in pro golf and an increased purse of $50,000 prompted this year's expanded Invitational.

"We are committed to the Invitational," said Chancellor. "We hope this is now one of the major sporting events in the Permian Basin. If it isn't we hope it will soon become that."

GTCC organized the first Invitational last year on Chancellor's suggestion, andfrom humble origins the tourney took a life of its own. Consequently, the project has encountered growth and Chancellor noted the improvements. "The biggest difference is that this year we are affiliated with a charitable organization. We've also expanded the field to 32 pros. There will be no split tee times. All the players get to tee off from number one at 8 a.m. It should give people a little more flexibility. These are some of the finest players in the world."

CHANCELLOR got the first committments for the '84 Invitational while at the Colonial in Fort Worth two weeks ago. Others will be forthcoming as the date nears, which is sandwiched between Texas Tour events in Abilene (the LaJet Classic) and in San Antonio. Last year, the Pro-Am came the day after the Las Vegas tournament and preceding the LaJet.

Chancellor felt that one way or another, the logistics hurt the Invitational. "Last year's tournament gave us a lot of insights on what not to do," he said. "One of the foremost was the date change. By the time we got all the players in from Vegas it was 2:30 a.m. It was tough on them. So we wanted to make things more convenient and enjoyable for the pros."

Other changes Chancellor announced include scrapping last year's two-man, best ball in favor of the more accepted single best ball.

As for Kite, the even-keeled veteran displayed his traditional optimism. "I'm excited about it," said Kite of the Pro-Am, where he finished with a three-under par 68. "I was really pleased with the turnout last year. I did suggest to Warren that we get a charity involved. It helps supply manpower and it gets the community involved. Warren's done most of the work. I can't take credit."

THE FIELD has every chance to be as competitive as last years, which featured Lon Hinkle, Payne Stewart, Charles Coody and Rex Caldwell. Kite, pro golf's seventh leading all-time moneywinner with over $2 million in earnings, has been one of the game's most consistent players ever and has six Tour victories.

Morgan, Hinkle and Keith Fergus all carded 66's in last year's Invitational, but Morgan's team had the lowest score and Morgan claimed the first prize. This year, the ante has been upped to $2,000 for the afternoon's best round.

Dr. Morgan, an optometrist, has been dynamite the past two years on the PGA circuit. With over $1.6 million in career earnings, he ranks 15th all-time on the money list. Morgan has already cashed in over $200,000 in 1984 winnings, having an even better year than Kite at this point. In 1978, Morgan won half of his six Tour victories with wins in the Los Angeles Open, The World Series of Golf and the Tucson Open. Morgan finished in the money all but twice in 25 tournaments in 1983.

ADAMS CALLS Midland home when not pursuing the rigors of the pro Tour. The sixth-year pro has yet to win a Tour event, but earned $53,000 last year for his best seasonal showing. Adams entered a straining 34 tourneys last season and finished in the money in exactly half of them. He owns the Green Tree course record of 62, but shot a 70 in the '83 Invitational.

Pfeil's only Tour victory came in 1980 at the Tallahassee Open, but he has plugged along well enough to already earn $38,000 in 1984. Brooks is a rookie this year out of the University of Texas, Kite and Chancellor's alma mater.

Jaeckel, son of screen star Richard Jaeckel, won the Tallahassee in 1978.

Purtzer won the 1977 Glen Campbell-L.A. Open, his only Tour title. Yet the Arizona State graduate ranks 56th all-time on the money list with earnings nearing $900,000.

MARC, which will benefit from the Invitational's proceeds, serves some 250 families in Midland, according to MARC representative Dee Carter. "We're glad to be a part of this," said Carter. "We'de like to express our sincere appreciation to Green Tree Country Club and to the members of the PGA for allowing us to be a part of this event."

M-Cubs hang on to beat Beaumont, 9-7

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Midland's beleaguered Cubs added some aches to an already bountiful list of pains at Cubs Stadium Monday night, but for a brief moment, at least, Midland put its troubles behind with a 9-7 victory over the Beaumont Gators.

After a rash of doubleheaders in Tulsa last week, the Cub pitching staff is bonebare at the moment and matters weren't corrected Monday as Cub manager George Enright had to use five pitchers to seal the victory. In addition, starter Darryl Banks had to leave the game in the fourth when the Gators' Jimmy Thomas lined a single off the right knee of the hard luck hurler. Banks had given up only two hits and two unearned runs at that point.

An already tired staff worked hard to seal the win, but Beaumont did cut an 8-2 Cubs' lead to the final 9-7 margin with a two-run single by pinch hitter Pat Casey in the ninth. Fortunately for the Cubs, Joe Housey got Mark Parent to hit into a game ending double play to escape further damage.

BUT IT was a night that the Cub bats came alive, producing 16 hits, five of which went for extra bases. That pleased an enthusiastic Pack The Park night crowd of 1,660 fans. The Chamber of Commerce will try Pack The Park again tonight with Baseball Bingo as the attraction.

When Enright was asked how it felt to see 16 hits in a game, he replied, "It was nice, but the best thing to see was that Midland had more runs than the other team. That's what looked good."

But Enright had to come back to earth quickly when asked about his pitching for today's game.

"We're depleted. I've got Ray Soff to start Tuesday and Larry Hrynko in the pen. That's it. Everyone else has pitched three games in a row except (Doug) Potestio and he has to start Wednesday."

Banks was sent to the hospital for X-rays on his knee, according to pitching coach Goose Gregson.

"He got hit on the side of the (right) knee and we sent him for X-rays to see if there was any damage. He walked off the field, but he is one of the toughest guys I know. There are a lot of guys who couldn't have gotten up after being hit like that. Thomas hit a real shot."

Beaumont held a brief lead when they took advantage of two Cub errors and a wild pitch to score two runs in the second without a base hit, but the Cubs came back with three runs in the bottom of the inning to take a lead they never relinquished.

It was Cubs' type of baseball — the kind they must play to win. The Cubs stole three runs and came through with key base hits when needed. Mike Brumley and Jeff Jones both stole second base and both times it prouduced runs with two outs. Shawon Dunston tripled in the eighth and stole another run with a great break off a slow grounder by Joe Henderson. Base running is a big key for the Cubs.

"You can do a lot of things when you lead by three or more runs, but when you are down by three or four, you have to count your outs. The steal by Jones in the sixth was a key for us and Dunston had the best break from third in the eighth that I've seen in a long time," said Enright.

EVEN THOUGH Enright says Jones' sixth inning theft was a key, it was an inning earlier when Jones lifted the big crowd out of its collective seat. He smashed an Ed Vosberg 2-0 pitch over the scoreboard in left for his eighth homer of the year.

"I got a low fastball down low and I like that pitch," said Jones, the Cubs' player of the month in May. "Winning felt better though. Everyone hit and that helps the team. Our pitchers may be a little tired right now and it's good when you can help them out with a few runs. Now if we could just string a few together."

CUB PAWS: Despite two errors early, the Cubs played brillant defense. Second baseman Gary Varsho at one stretch was in on six consecutive outs with some great play in the outfield. He also held a runner at third with a relay throw to home...Darrin Jackson also nailed a runner at the plate with a perfect throw from right field...The Chamber has plenty of free tickets for tonight's game...Dan Norman and Jones were named the top players in the months of April and May in pregame ceremonies Monday...Shortstop Dunston is still favoring a sore leg. "His legs aren't 100 percent, but he's hitting the ball well and still using his great speed," said Enright. Dunston had a single, double and triple Monday, but he was noticeably limping...

Coombs' 69 takes honors

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

The 49th annual Women's West Texas Golf Association Tournament got under way Monday at Green Tree Country Club with a qualifying round to determine flight pairings and three other titles.

Nearly 150 women from around West Texas are competing for titles in the championship and eight other flights.

Women's WT

Ann Coombs recorded the qualifying round's best score with a course-record 69. Coombs was a member of Midland College's national golf champions in the mid-70's and won Medalist honors with her round.

Coombs teamed with Mary Robinson for a combined score of 150 to earn the Founder's Team Trophy. Coombs and Robinson represent another Midland country club, Ranchland Hills.

Amarillo's Juanita Jones fired the day's second best round of 76, landing her in second place overall and a berth in the Championship Flight. Her score also nailed down the top spot among senior competitors, so Jones was the senior medalist.

Coombs' record-shattering performance was doubly incredible considering the area's battle with brief but heavy Monday morning rains. Soggy conditions delayed the tournament start by some 30 minutes.

With the first round of the 72-hole match play event starting today, Coombs' great qualifying round and all other scores will not count in the final analysis. Thus, even though defending WWT champ Carol Snider of Farwell scored an unspectacular 82, she is still in the running for a repeat victory.

Snider would like to make a strong showing at the 1984 WWT. The 25-year old hopes to make the tourney a farewell event for her amateur career. Snider, who played collegiately at Temple Junior College and Sam Houston State, is planning a trip to Wichita, Ks. in August for a regional qualifying for the LPGA Tour.

Play concludes Friday.

TED BATTLES

Speed on bases

Don Hyman spent the winter in Midland, working out to build up his upper body strength for the long season ahead.

One of the benefits the Midland Cubs catcher hoped for was stamina, something to stand him in good stead for those strength-sapping dog days of July and August when crouching behind the plate gets old and painful.

Last year, the former University of Arizona catcher was batting .306 in mid June. He was still a healthy .284 going into July, but by the season's end he was hitting .251.

Donning the tools of ignorance day-after-day had taken their toll.

ONLY BY looking back at the season's end will Don be able to determine the full benefits of his off season labors, but the long hours on the Nautilus, in the swimming pool and running up the mountains, against the wind, just outside of Midland have paid off in increased speed.

When it was pointed out to Hyman that he already was well ahead of last year's pace for stolen bases, he nodded knowingly, "And I had another one stolen up in Tulsa, only the batter fouled off the pitch."

"You wouldn't believe the jump I had on the pitcher. There wasn't any way that they could have caught me."

AN EXPLANATION for his increase in speed? After all, that crouch position doesn't make for fleet-footed catchers...Webfooted, maybe....

"This year George (Manager George Enright) is letting me run. Last year Tom (Manager Tom Harmon) wouldn't let me run. He never gave me the sign." Hyman made this statement with a straight face, in fact, his face displayed evidence of pain over the sleight.

STILL, you've go to admit Hyman's base-running feats this year are truly remarkable. He has doubled his productivity of a year ago at this time. He appears almost certain to eclipse last year's total without really extending himself. He might even double his 1983 SB total.

It's one of the few bright spots for the Cubs this year and if Enright continues to take advantage of Hyman's swiftness, it could get the Cubs off to a flying start in the second half.

In fact, it might be a good idea, if Don keeps up his present space, if Enright considered moving Hyman to third base or the outfield, where there would be less likelihood of his legs cramping up.

Still, not convinced that catchers can run?

The facts speak for themselves.

Just take a look at Hyman's SB statistics. Last year he didn't steal his first base until June 21. And he didn't get his second until the season's final day. This year, it's only June 5 and Hyman already has two steals.

Cook's 'ear hit' beats Fullerton for Longhorns

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Dennis Cook hit with his ears much to the dismay of Cal State-Fullerton.

Texas' junior right fielder, who was hitless in his first six College World Series at bats, belted a two-out, two-run double in the bottom of the eighth inning Monday to break a 4-4 tie and help the Longhorns beat Titans 6-4.

Cal State Coach Augie Garrido provided an unintentional tip to help Cook end his slump.

"I was looking for something in," Cook said. "I heard their coach say 'Keep it in.' The biggest hit of my life? It sure was."

The blow, against Cal State standout Todd Simmons, 14-3, also was one of the biggest hits of the Longhorns' season. Texas, 59-12, which has won 14 straight NCAA Tournament games, remains in the winners bracket of the double-elimination tourney. But Coach Cliff Gustafson was not ready to predict a second straight World Series title for his team.

"It's too early to plan on carrying the trophy away," he said.

The Longhorns looked like national champs in the opening inning when their first three batters scored. But Simmons then settled down, and he didn't allow another run until Darren Loy's two-out double in the sixth tied the game.

Palmer fails in U.S. Open bid

By The Associated Press

Just when he thought he had it made, Arnold Palmer lost his touch.

Palmer, attempting to qualify for the U.S. Open, was 1 under par after 27 holes, but a three-putt on the next hole turned his luck. He ended up with a 2-over-par 146 at the Sharon Golf Club in Ohio and missed the cutoff by two strokes.

"I was never really concerned about my position until I three-putted the 12th green," said Palmer, who won the Open in 1960. "I knew I had to play well from there in."

But the 54-year-old hit an iron into the sand on the next hole en route to a double bogey and never recovered.

"It bothers me, only because I played good enough for 27 holes to make it," he said. "I obviously shouldn't be playing in the Open. I didn't qualify.

"I'm still of the feeling if you can't play you shouldn't play. I don't know. This may be the end of my pursuing that part of it (the Open). I won't say it is. I'll say it might be."

When Larry Nelson begins the defense of his Open title at the Winged Foot Country Club in Mamaroneck, N.Y., next week, Palmer will not be in the field for the first time since 1952, breaking a string of playing in 31 straight Opens — a record he shares with Gene Sarazen.

South Africa's Gary Player led the list of qualifiers Monday. Player, who like Palmer had lost his automatic qualification, shot a 69-72—141 at Cincinnati's Clovernook Country Club.

"You have to think about it," said Player. "Someone who has won 127 championships, nine majors, more than any current tour player except (Jack) Nicklaus, could come out and not qualify. That's something."

George Burns, Morris Hatalsky, Peter Oosterhuis and John Mahaffey were among 26 players who qualified at the Manor Country Club in Rockville, Md. Scott Hoch withdrew, and Lee Elder and Bobby Clampett failed to make the cut.

Rocco Mediate, a senior at Florida Southern University, won the Sharon sectional with a 68-72—140, 4 under par.Also qualifying were Steve Brady of Bay City, Mich., Mark Balen of Detroit, Robert Friend of Oakmont, Pa., Mark Puskarich of Beallsville, Pa., and Harry Toscano of Pulaski, Pa.

At Cincinnati, Bob Mann of Greenwood, Ind., finished second, amateur Denny Gallagher was third, andGreg Hickman won the fourth spot.

Blaine McCallister of Texarkana, Texas, led a group of seven qualifiers at the Champions Golf Club in Houston. Bruce Devlin, a former member of the tour, shot a 77 in the first round and then withdrew.

Gene Sauers of Savannah, Ga., at 21 the youngest player on the PGA Tour, shot a 137 at the Horseshoe Bend Country Club in Georgia to head a list of eight qualifiers there.

Pat Fitzsimons of Battle Ground, Wash., qualified for his seventh U.S. Open at the rain-soaked Waverley Country Club in Portland, Ore., and Norm Jarvis of Vancouver, British Columiba, nailed down the other spot after winning a one-hole playoff.

Mets go for youth

From Wire Reports

NEW YORK— The New York Mets selected Shawn Abner, a 17-year-old outfielder from Mechanicsburg (Pa.) High School, as the first selection in the regular phase of baseball's free agent amateur draft.

Abner, a 6-foot-1, 190-pounder, is currently batting .580, and has signed a letter of intent to play quarterback at Georgia.

The Seattle Mariners chose right-handed pitcher Billy Swift from the University of Maine, one of the 30 members of the U.S. Olympic team as the second selection and the Chicago Cubs followed by taking Drew Hall, a left-handed pitcher, from Morehead State.

Tolley two back

SOUTHPORT, England — David Tolley of Roanoke, Va. shot a 2-under-par 71 to finish one shot off the pace set by defending champion Philip Parkin and two-time runnerup Peter McEvoy after the opening round of the British Amateur Golf Championship.

Cougars in sweep

DALLAS — The University of Houston swept the first-ever SWC athlete-of-the-year awards, with basketball center Akeem Abdul Olajuwon and track star Carol Lewis winning top honors.

Each of the nine SWC schools nominated one male and one female athlete for the awards, which were determined by a panel of sportswriters and broadcasters from Texas and Arkansas.

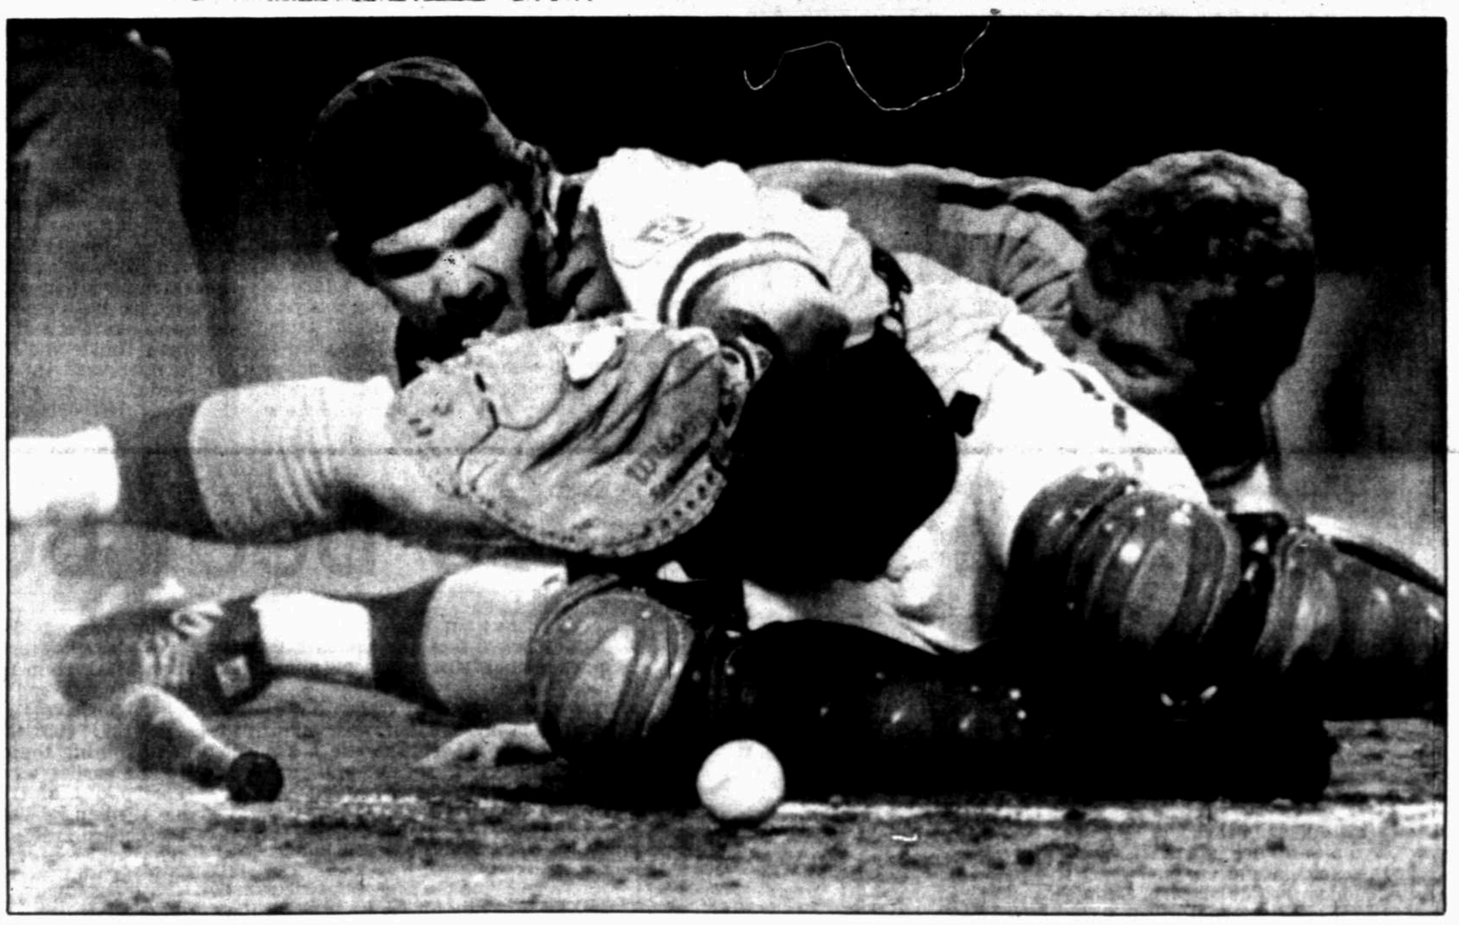

Texas Tech basketball player Carolyn Thompson was the runner-up among the women with four first-place votes, while Arkansas' Amanda Holley received one first-place vote.

NL honors Durham

CHICAGO — Chicago Cubs first baseman Leon Durham was named National League Player of the Month for May. In 27 games, Durham went 34 for 97 for a batting average of .351. He had 34 RBI, 24 runs and seven stolen bases.

Kemp AL winner

NEW YORK — New York Yankee Outfielder Steve Kemp, who batted .591 for the week, was named American League Player of the Week, going 13-for-22 with three doubles, a home run, 19 total bases, 10 runs batted in and five runs scored. His on-base percentage was .609 and his slugging percentage was .864.

McEnroe, photographers agree to uneasy truce

PARIS (AP) — Hana Mandlikova became the first player to reach the semifinals of the French Open tennis championships with a 6-1, 6-4 victory today over 16-year-old American amateur Melissa Brown.

Mandlikova, who won the championship in 1981, trailed 2-3 in the second set when play was abandoned Monday because of rain.

But she took only 20 minutes to wrap up the victory when the match resumed, breaking Brown for a 5-4 lead and then holding serve.

On Monday, John McEnroe won a little, and so did the photographers. But the big losers were the fans as most matches were rained out for a second day.

Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia, American Jimmy Connors and Spain's Andres Gomez — seeded second, third and seventh, respectively — all managed to get past their fourth-round foes Monday before thunderclouds rolled over Paris' Roland Garros stadium and the ground crews rolled the tarp over the soft red clay.

The top-seeded woman, Martina Navratilova, who is seeking her fourth consecutive title in a Grand Slam tournament, also had her game washed out.

Also today, tournament favorite McEnroe took on fifth-seeded Jimmy Arias, America's top clay courter, in the men's quarterfinals.

But probably the most interesting confrontation of Monday took place off the court, and the main instigator was not even present.

McEnroe, who has complained bitterly all tournament long about noise from photographers in the "pits" behind the courts, managed, for a time, to convince tournament organizers to have those areas closed down.

McEnroe, who did not play Monday, had said the whirring noise of the motor-driven shutters was playing havoc with his concentration on serves.

The photographers, many of whom angrily threatened to boycott the rest of the tournament if McEnroe had his way, demanded and got an emergency meeting with tournament director Christian Duxin.

Oklahoma State coach tempted by Hurricane

DALLAS (AP) — Jimmy Johnson, the architect of Oklahoma State University's football resurgence, was expected in Miami and appeared on the verge of accepting the job as head football coach at the University of Miami, which won the 1983 national championship.

"I'm going to look it over. I'm definitely a candidate," Johnson told the Associated Press by phone Monday night from his home in Stillwater, Okla.

He was scheduled to meet today with Dr. Edward Foote, president of the university, and athletic director Sam Jankovich, to discuss the position as successor to Howard Schnellenberger.

Meanwhile, in today's editions, the Orlando Sentinel quoted an unnamed member of the Oklahoma State athletic department as saying:

"Myron Roderick emerged from a meeting with Coach Johnson and said: 'I don't think we can talk him out of it. His mind is made up. He's gone.' "

Roderick later denied having said that.

Johnson told the AP that he has not signed a contract with Miami.

Tigers' Bergman delivers in 10th

By The Associated Press

Dave Bergman belted a three-run homer with two out in the 10th inning to lift the Detroit Tigers to a 6-3 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays in the first game of an important four-game series Monday night.

The victory improved the Tigers' major league-leading record to 39-11 and increased their lead over the second-place Blue Jays to 5½ games in the American League East.

Lance Parrish started the Tiger 10th with a single off Jimmy Key, 2-3. Parrish took second on a sacrifice bunt by Darrell Evans and relief ace Roy Lee Jackson came on for Toronto. Jackson got Rusty Kuntz on a grounder to the mound and walked Chet Lemon before Bergman blasted his game-winning homer at Tiger Stadium.

Bergman's blast made a winner of Aurielo Lopez, 5-0, the third Tiger pitcher.

Willie Upshaw's solo homer in the second and George Bell's two-run shot in the sixth gave the Blue Jays a 3-0 lead. But the Tigers came back to tie it in the seventh on Howard Johnson's three-run homer.

In other AL action, Bruce Bochte doubled and homered and Carney Lansford rapped three singles to spark the Oakland Athletics to a 7-3 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

Cal Ripken Jr. and Eddie Murray hit consecutive home runs in the second inning and Mike Boddicker pitched a four-hitter as the Baltimore Orioles cruised to a 6-2 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

"The weather is warmer and my control is a lot better," said Boddicker. "That's about the only difference between now and April."

"Tonight I was just trying to hit the spots," said the 26-year-old right-hander, who lost his shutout when Cecil Cooper smacked a two-run homer with two outs in the ninth inning.

Don Baylor smashed the first inside-the-park homer of his 13 year-career and broke a 3-3 tie in the seventh inning with a two-run single as the New York Yankees defeated Boston 8-3, snapping a five-game winning streak for the Red Sox.

Rudy Law rapped three hits, including a two-run homer, and Ron Kittle hit a solo homer to lead the Chicago White Sox to a 6-4 victory over the California Angels.

Mark Langston pitched a five-hitter for his first victory in more than a month and the Seattle Mariners took advantage of a shoddy Kansas City defense to whip the Royals 7-1.

John Butcher allowed eight hits over 6 2-3 innings and Randy Bush slugged a three-run homer as the Minnesota Twins scored a 6-2 victory over the Texas Rangers.

In the National League, Darryl Strawberry had three hits, knocked in three runs with a home run and single and scored twice as the New York Mets defeated the Pittsburgh Pirates 4-2.

Dave Parker broke a 1-1 tie with a single in the eighth inning, and Frank Pastore combined with two relievers on a three-hitter as Cincinnati stopped a five-game losing streak by defeating the Los Angeles Dodgers 3-1.

Ken Oberkfell hit a one-out single to center in the 11th inning, scoring Andy Van Slyke from second base to give St. Louis a 4-3 victory over the Philladelphia Phillies.

Steve Garvey stretched his hitting streak to 11 games with three hits, while Ed Whitson and Dave Dravecky combined on a four-hitter as the San Diego Padres downed the Houston Astros 3-0.

Cubs rally to '65 Roses' drive

Kickoff scheduled Thursday

From Staff Reports

The Midland Cubs will kick off the "65 Roses" Sports Club to benefit the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation at a luncheon for club members and invited guests Thursday.

The Cubs, management and fans joined forces to form the club which will be part of a nationwide fund-raising effort to fight cystic fibrosis, the nation's No. 1 genetic killer of children and adolescents.

CF is an inherited disease which attacks the repiratory and digestive systems. Only half the children born with CF now are expected to live to be 21. For a CF child, each day of life requires constant medication and therapy.

Contributions made by the Cubs 65 Roses Club are tax deductible and will go for research, education and treatment programs.

Club members will receive tickets to selected home games when 65 Roses parties are planned. They will meet players, management and media personalities before the games.

Cost of membership is $65 annually. The "65 Roses" name chosen for the club was the result of a young patient's mispronunciation of his disease. In addition, club members pledge $5 per home run hit by Cub players in 1984, up to 100 homers, and $1 for each homer over 100.

Some 300 guests are expected at Thursday's CF Foundation-Midland Cubs hosted luncheon. Committee chairman is Bobby Burns, Midland, whose two-year-old son, Tyler, has CF. Committee members include Bill Schammel, former Cubs general manager; Don Hyman, Midland Cubs player representative; Alice Bullard; Dr. Jerry Cochran; Lynn Durham; Jack Huff; John Hutnyak; K.M.Jastro; Don Landers; Kyle Lawson; Mona Tindall; and Bob Elder, national sports program director for the CF foundation.

Inquiries should be addressed to the Midland Cubs 65 Roses Sports Club, P.O. Box 80302, Midland, or 699 4484 or 684 5203.

Dodgers beat Diablos

By The Associated Press

San Antonio defeated El Paso 10-4, Jackson beat Tulsa 6-2, and Arkansas and Shreveport split a doubleheader in Texas League action Monday. Arkansas won the first game 6-2, with Shreveport taking the nightcap 5-1.

Randy Milligan slammed a three-run homer in the bottom of the second to help lift Jackson to its victory over Tulsa.

Jackson started the scoring in the first when Billy Beane doubled and scored on a fielder's choice. But the big inning for the Mets was the second, when five runs came home.

Steve Springer hit a solo homerun. Al Pedrique scored on a double by Mark Carreon, and both Beane and Carreon scored on Milligan's eighth homer.

Braves Horner out for season

From wire reports

BASEBALL—Atlanta third baseman Bob Horner refractured his right wrist and probably will miss the rest of the baseball season. Dr. Robert Wells, team physician, examined Horner on Monday and said the navicular bone in Horner's right wrist had been fractured again. X-rays showed a break in virtually the same place the bone was broken last Aug. 15...

Texas' Bill Bates, Michigan's Barry Larkin, Arizona State's Oddibe McDowell, Oklahoma State's Pete Incaviglia and Cal State-Fullerton's Todd Simmons made the Converse All-America. Bates (.275 batting average) was named at second, Larkin (.366) at shortstop and McDowell (.399) in the outfield. Incaviglia - with 28 homers, a nation-leading 95 rbi and a .352 average - was the DH and Simmons, 14-2 with a 3.18 ERA. Also named to the first team were Southern California first baseman Mark McGwire (.387 with 32 homers and 80 RBI), Columbia third baseman Gene Larkin (.429, 19 homers and 62 RBI), North Carolina catcher B.J. Surhoff (.400, 11 homers, 51 RBI) and utility player Cory Snyder of Brigham Young (.450, 27 homers, 85 RBI). In the outfield with McDowell (22 homers and 69 RBI) were Mississippi State's Rafael Palmeiro (.415, 29 homers, 94 RBI), UCLA's Shane Mack (.352, 16 homers, 53 RBI) and San Diego State's Chris Gwynn (.374, 16 homers, 85 RBI).

North Carolina's 11-0 pitcher Scott Bankhead (1.50 ERA) and Fresno State's 18-3 John Hoover (2.09 ERA) joined Simmons on the three-man pitching staff...

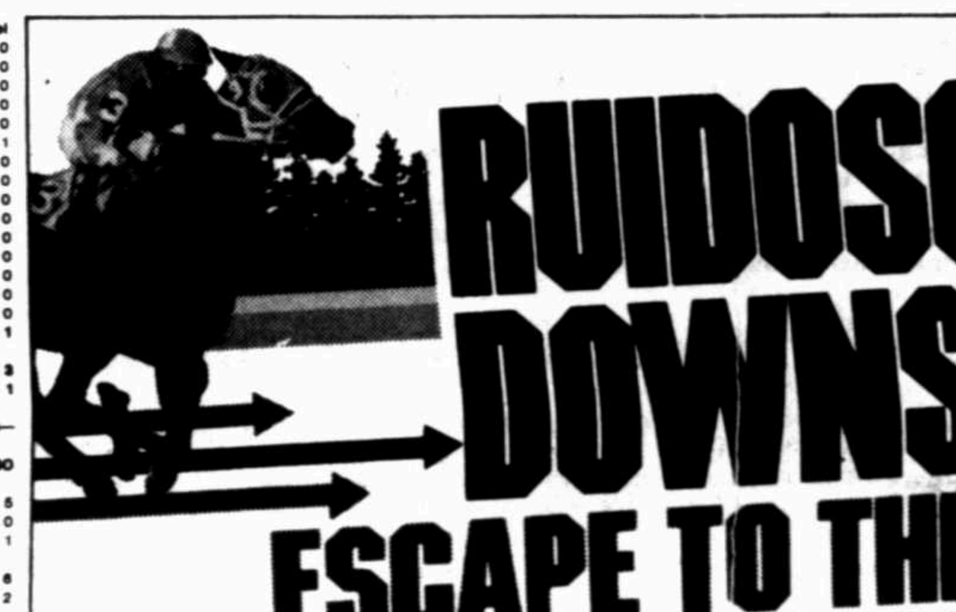

The Kansas City Royals extended the contract of Manager Dick Howser for two more seasons. Howser, 48, signed a three-year pact in August, 1981 replacing Jim Frey. Despite numerous injuries to key players and the difficulties off last fall's drug scandal, the Royals under Howser have gone 212-194. ...

The Hanshin Tigers defeated the Taiyo Whales, 4-2, in 10 innings in Japanese League Monday as Randy Bass blasted his 12th homer for the Tigers...

TENNIS—Nine collegiate men players have been selected to the 1984 USTA Junior Davis Cup team, the USLTA. They were Dan Cassidy, Hollywood, Fla.; Lawson Duncan, Asheville, N.C.; Ted Farnsworth, Englewood, N.J.; Danny Goldie, McLean, Va.; Jeff Klaparda, Los Angeles; Michael Kures, Willow Springs, Ill.; Rich Leach, Laguna Beach, Calif.; John Ross, Gainesville, Fla., and Todd Witsken, Carmel, Ind...

BASKETBALL—A seven-year-old battle between University of Nevada-Las Vegas coach Jerry Tarkanian and the NCAA is scheduled to resume in a Las Vegas courtroom June 11. The case stems from a lawsuit Tarkanian filed against UNLV after the NCAA ordered the university to suspend him for two years for 37 alleged recruiting violations at the Las Vegas school from 1971 through 1975. Tarkanian came to UNLV in 1973. After the suspension was ordered, Tarkanian went to court to block the university's suspension, saying he had not been afforded due process by the NCAA. Clark County District Court Judge James Brennan ruled in favor of Tarkanian, saying there was no due process when the coach went before the NCAA Investigative Committee. The judge ruled the NCAA followed unfair procedures and failed to properly prove any of the allegations...

HOCKEY—Bob Berry, fired previously by the Montreal Canadiens and Los Angeles Kings, was named coach of the Pittsburgh Penguins.

Trader enthusiasm extends market rally

By The Associated Press

Trader enthusiasm stemming largely from the belief that interest rates have ended their year-long climb extended the stock market rally into a second day of trading.

The traders' optimism that interest rates had peaked was based on evidence that the pace of economic expansion was slowing, leading to an easing of business borrowing, analysts said.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 7.22 points to 1,131.57 on Monday after jumping 19.50 on Friday for its best gain in more than seven weeks.

Among the evidence was the National Association of Purchasing Management's report Sunday that its Composite Index of industrial activity fell to 58.7 percent in May from 61.4 percent in April and a post-recession high of 70.6 percent in December 1983.

A year ago, the index stood at 56.0 percent.

Any reading above 50 percent in the seasonally adjusted index indicates the economy is expanding.

"After recent rapid increases in the rate of improvement, it appears the economy is taking a breather at a relatively high level," said Robert Bretz, director of purchasing for Continental Forest Industries Inc. and chairman of the business survey committee of the purchasing agents' association.

Other evidence was the Conference Board's report Sunday that its Consumer Confidence Index fell to 95.2 in May from 97.9 in April. The index, which is based on 100 for the 1969-70 period and which stood as high as 98.4 last January, was still above the 84.0 reading of May 1983.

"While softening consumer confidence indicates that the U.S. economy is growing more slowly now, it still remains quite strong," said Fabian Linden, executive director of the consumer research center for the business-financed study group.

And the Conference Board reported Monday that a composite barometer of future economic growth in the world's seven major industrial nations has slipped from three months ago, but continues at a relatively strong level.

The board said its latest composite leading business cycle index for the seven countries registered an annual growth rate of 11 percent, down from 12 percent three months ago.

In other economic developments Monday:

—The government sold $12.8 billion in new securities — half in three-month treasury bills at an average discount rate of 9.90 percent, up from 9.83 percent, and half in six-month bills at an average discount rate of 10.57 percent, down from 10.62 percent.

Ortloff to modify Snyder plant

Roy E. Campbell, president of Elcor Corp. has announced that its subsidiary, The Ortloff Corp., has recently been awarded over $17 million in contracts and patent licensing agreements.

Ortloff's subsidiary, the Pro-Quip Corp. (TPQ) of Tulsa, Okla., received a $6 million contract from Sun Exploration and Production Co. to modify a Snyder natural gas processing plant to recover natural gas liquids. In addition, TPQ has received two contracts totaling over $10 million from a major oil company for engineering and constructing gas processing plants. All of these contracts should be completed within the next year.

Exxon opening new convenience stores

HOUSTON — Exxon Co., U.S.A. is implementing a marketing program involving the sale of convenience food products at selected, new-design motor fuel facilities.

The first of the new units has been opened in Tuscaloosa, Ala. Two others are under construction in San Antonio and Princeton, W.Va., with additional locations planned later this year and next. The first convenience products stores will be dispersed throughout the Eastern and Southwestern United States.

Gasoline facilities will be self-serve, with a cashier located in the convenience shop to assist customers. The convenience products area is centered among three or four motor fuel islands, all of which are covered by a single canopy.

Products available in the 600- to 800-square-foot shops include snack foods, sandwiches, beverages, cigarettes, bread and dairy items.

All of the motor fuel-convenience store facilities will be newly constructed, utilizing the company's new award-winning contemporary design.

"The new test facilities are designed to meet motorists' growing expectations for convenience product availability when they make a motor fuel purchase," said Stuart Pearman, Exxon Co., U.S.A. Retail Business Manager.

UT professor chosen AAPG president-elect

AUSTIN — William L. Fisher, Ph.D., director of the Bureau of Economic Geology at The University of Texas, has been chosen president-elect of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists.

Fisher will begin serving as the 1984-85 president-elect on July 1. Next year he will assume the 1985-86 presidency of AAPG, the world's largest professional geoscience association with members in 93 countries. The organization has 42,000 members.

In addition to his duties as director of the burear, Fisher is the Morgan J. Davis Centennial Professor in Petroleum geology at UT Austin, where he has taught since 1969. He will become chairman of the UT Department of Geological Sciences in September.

Fisher joined the Bureau of Economic Geology in 1960 and served as research scientist and associate director before becoming director in 1970.

He served as assistant secretary for energy for the U.S. Interior Department during the Ford Administration from 1975 to early 1977, when he returned to the director's post at the UT bureau.

Fisher has served on numerous boards and councils, including the White House Energy Resource Council. He has been president of the Austin Geological Society and has been a member of committees for the Interstate oil Compact Commission, the Texas 2000 Commission, the Texas Energy and Natural Resources Advisory Council and the Texas Railroad Commission. He also is vice chairman of the Texas Low-Level Radioactive Waste Authority.

William L. Fisher

Fisher said a significant task of the AAPG presidency is maintenance of the various divisions within the organization, which has grown in recent years. The AAPG now includes a division concerned with non-petroleum energy sources, such as coal and geothermal energy.

The organization also includes a division of public affairs and ethics. In addition, the association issues papers on energy issues and offers consultation on policy matters to the executive branch and to Congress.

"Focus on Oil '84", featuring the winning and best entries in the Petroleum Museum's annual photography competition is now on display at the museum's temporary exhibit area. The photos represent all aspects of petroleum exploration, drilling, production, and refining.

"Best of Show" was awarded to Chuck Frazier, Emporia, Kan., for his color shot of a refinery at sunset entitled, "Thirty Five Million Dollar Capital Investment." Frazier also won third place in the professional color category for "Roughnecking for Glacier Oil Co."

Taking first in the professional color area was Ed Broussard, Lafayette, La., for his "Early Sunrise", an unusual drill bit's eye view of an offshore oil rig. Another Lafayette resident, Ron Coulter, captured second place in this category for "Board Road to Nowhere", a haunting photo of an access road in a drilling area.

Sharon Newsom, Monahans, took first place honors in the amateur color competition for her untitled scene of a pumpjack at dusk. Odessa resident Arthur Molina's "Foggy Morning" won second while Danny Biehler, Wichita, Kan., won third with his "Evening Drill Floor."

In the black and white competition all the winners were from the Midland/Odessa area. First place was won by Michael Banschbach, Midland, for "Process Piping", a scene depicting a maze of insulated piping at a refinery. Cindy Sims, Odessa, was second with her "Making Connection"; while fellow Odessan, Jean Henry, finished third with "Flanged Tank."

Shiftwork can be hazardous to your health

EDITOR'S NOTE: The writer recently completed a two-month stint on an overnight shift.

By COTTEN TIMBERLAKE
AP Business Writer

Shiftwork can be hazardous to your health, researchers say.

The foremost peril from working nights or rotating between days and nights seems to be disruption of sleep.

Other possible dangers include weight gain, gastrointestinal disorders, higher incidence of injury, moodiness, marital problems.

And then there are the practical hurdles of shiftwork, such as the difficulty of getting public transportation to work at odd hours.

"Numerous studies have associated shiftwork with sleep problems," said Donald I. Tepas, who directs a sleep laboratory at the Illinois Institute of Technology in Chicago, where he is a professor of pyschology. "Most of these people have trouble getting enough sleep."

According to the "chronobiological" theory, shiftworkers have problems sleeping because they attempt to sleep at the wrong time of the day.

Other scientists believe shiftworkers sleep less because of social pressures, Tepas says.

"There's considerable reason for that night worker to get up early. A lot of things start happening in the house in the afternoon. Kids come home from school, dinner is served, the news comes on television," Tepas said.

"Since sleep is more of a solitary act than most other behaviors, it is the first to be reduced and reaches some minimal level almost instantly, given the social time demands of some shift schedules," he said.

But the result may not be a disturbed sleep but a more efficient sleep period, he adds.

Studies show that night shiftworkers sleep the least, and afternoon-evening workers sleep the most, Tepas says. This is true for both permanent and rotating workers. Rotators on the night shift sleep less than permanent night workers, he says.

However, acute sleep loss leads to chronic sleep deprivation, then to "microsleeps," or drowsiness, then to lapses — "periods during which responses aren't made" — which leads to impaired performance, Tepas says.

Tepas says impairment is most evident when the workers' tasks are not self-paced, such as assembly lines, and says that workers lose the ability to assess their own performance and the extent of their fatigue.

"Continued chronic sleep deprivation may very well lead to a variety of health problems ... and result in a general decrease in life expectancy," Tepas said.

Michael J. Colligan, a research psychologist with the National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health in Cincinnati, surveyed 1,219 nurses on permanent day, afternoon and night shifts and on rotating schedules to assess the effects of the shift worked on sick leave and frequency of worksite clinic visits.

He found that compared to nurses on permanent shifts, rotators exhibited a significantly higher rate of clinic visits and took more sick days for serious illnesses.

Charles Ehret, a chronobiologist at the Argonne National Laboratory in Illinois and a private consultant, said: "Shiftwork fatigue is not simple tiredenss or simple fatigue of the sort that most workers experience. Shiftwork fatigue is in fact a transient condition of mental dysfunction.

"When you reset your body clock from one time to another time, until the body clock is completely reset, it experiences multiple problems."

He said workers' biological functions are desynchronized, and if they do not resynchronize, that can lead to neuroses such as depression and manic depression.

Experts offer suggestions to improve health, spirits

By the Associated Press

Feeling lousy from working nights or rotating shifts? Here are some suggestions from experts on how shiftworkers can improve their health and spirits:

— Monitor your sleep in a log before you begin shiftwork to determine how much sleep you need. Once you are on shiftwork, "Think before you set the alarm," and do not set it too early.

— Make sure you have quiet and dark sleeping quarters.

— Unplug the phone.

— Make sure you family understands the demands of shiftwork and the need to sleep at a different time from the rest of the family.

— Avoid napping and try to get all your sleep at one time.

— Try to sleep at the most favorable time of day, but maintain the same sleep-work-leisure time sequence no matter what shift is worked.

— Do not drink coffee, smoke cigarettes or consume alcohol because they disrupt your natural sleeping habits.

— Avoid overeating; it has been suggested that night workers tend to snack more than people on other shifts.

— Try to maintain an eating schedule of a breakfast meal before going to work, lunch at work and supper when you get off.

Cherry Canyon wildcat may stimulate play

Conoco Inc, Midland, has completed a Cherry Canyon wildcat in Reeves County that could touch off a new flurry of drilling activity along a probable Cherry Canyon trend.

The well is the No.1 Tunstill, which flowed 150 bopd 39.8 API and 104 Mcfd with 230 bwpd on a 16/64 in. choke through perforations at 4,375-4,444 ft. from the Cherry Canyon, following fracturing with 14,000 gal. gel of 2 percent KCl and 16,500 lb. 20/40 sand.

It was drilled to 5,000 ft. and plugged back to 4,926 ft.

It is located 660 ft. from north and 2,055 from west lines of Section 6, Block 56, T&P survey, four miles north of Orla.

Activity Analysis

The well is significant in that it is on trend with Cherry Canyon production in the Tanstill field three miles to the east and the Jess Burner field five miles to the west. It is also about three miles southeast of the small Jeanita field, a four well Cherry Canyon field.

Operators in the Delaware Basin Cherry Canyon play are confident that Cherry Canyon exploration is in the same phase as development of the upper Delaware pays were in the late fourties, and feels that the Cherry Canyon play may become one of the more significant plays in the Permian Basin, especially in light of discoveries such as the No.1 Tanstill.

According to Ed Kennedy, consulting geologist who has worked the Cherry Canyon extensively for Orla Petco, the Delaware Mountain Group breaks down into about 1,000 ft. of Bell Canyon at the top, another 1,000 ft. of Cherry Canyon in the middle, followed by 1,000 ft. of Brushy Canyon at the bottom.

In the Cherry Canyon alone there are 15 to 20 sand stringers in which production is found. These stringers are thin, (sometimes only 8 to 14 feet) delicate and hard to map. "The Cherry Canyon is stratigraphic, not structual like the Rhoda Walker or Worsham fields," says Kennedy.

The productive stringers are also frequently separated by water zones which formerly made completion a delicate proposition.

However, new electromagnetic logs have dramatically reduced the difficulty in locating the zones, and improved cementing techniques have been introduced to isolate the water zones from the production zones.

Economics of the Cherry Canyon make it a suitable play for independents. And, it has proven to be just that to date. Average cost for a Cherry Canyon well is in the neighborhood of $220,000 completed, and about 10,000 barrels at a net price of $18 are needed to make it economical.

One of the factors affecting economics in the play is water. A great deal of it must be moved, either by truck or pipeline to an injection well.

The Cherry Canyon is becoming an intense area of wildcatting and most of the wildcatting has been done by independents, although Exxon and Conoco have done a fair amount of exploration drilling. One operator in the Cherry Canyon characterized it as an independents delight: "The majors are not that excited about it because of the overhead involved," he informed.

For all accounts the Cherry Canyon is being billed as an extensive play that will be going on for a long time as the elusive, productive sand stringers are sought from the Ward and Winkler county lines to the Culberson County line, and as far north as New Mexico.

The Burton Ranch field,a relatively new play northeast of Carlsbad in which Mesa and Exxon are active, is Cherry Canyon even though it is listed as upper Delaware. The Ford West (4100) field drilled in 1981-82 is Cherry Canyon as is the Geraldine (3800) field in Culberson County. Current areas of activity also center around the Dimmit field six miles northeast of Mentone in Loving County. The Cognac field, on the Pecos River, and the Jess Burner field west of the No. l Tunstill.

What explorers are hoping to find is another Rhoda Walker field, they confess. Some are confident that perhaps several Rhoda Walkers are still to be found somewhere in the Delaware Basin in the Cherry Canyon play. But, if not they will continue looking as long as the economics permit.

Scurry County wildcat completes for 131 bopd

Kejo Resources Inc., Conroe, has completed its No.2 Feldman pumping 131 bopd of 27.4 API, 131 Mcfd and 33 bwpd on a 24 hour test. Drilled to a TD of 6,350 and plugged back to 5,715 it was completed in perforations from 5,539 to 5,569 ft. in the Canyon Sand.

Located 853 ft. from north and 1,980 ft. from west lines of Section 137, Block 2, H&TC survey, four miles north of Camp Springs the well is a one location to the northeast offset of its No.1 Feldman which was low and wet in the Strawn, and produced only 10 bopd with much water.

The operator encountered no completion problems in the discovery well which was treated with 500 gal. acid and fraced with 20,000 gal. fluid and 28,500 lb. sand.

Formation tops were established at Noodle Creek 4,204, Wolfcamp shale 4,780 and Canyon Sand 5,559.

Nearest Canyon Sand production is the H.C. Hood No.l which was a short term producer and was plugged in 1962. It is located four miles from the discovery well in Section 95.

The operator will not drill a confirmation well until production has had a chance to stabilize on the No.2 Feldman.

C.F. Qualia, Midland, has completed the No.1-6 Ralph McWhorter pumping 39 bopd of 38 API and 43.3 Mcfd with 22 bwpd. The 8,606 ft. test was plugged back to 7,572 and completed in the Wichita Albany through perforations at 7,048 to 7,443 ft. The well is located 660 ft. from east and south lines of Section 6, Block A-3, PSL survey, 12 miles northwest of Frankel City.

Winkler wildcat finaled

Gulf Oil Corp., Midland, has completed its 213 Keystone Cattle Co. for 99 bopd 38.3 API, 90 Mcfd, and 285 bwpd pumping on a 24 hour test.

The well was drilled to 11,777 ft., plugged back to 10,278 ft. and completed in perforations at 10,226-10,270 in the Fusselman, following stimulation with 14,500 gal. acid and fracture using 15,000 gal. fluid and 20,000 lb. sand. The well is located 3,300 ft. from north and east lines of Section 24, Block A-57, DSL survey, 14 miles northeast of Kermit.

Trader enthusiasm extends market rally

By The Associated Press

Trader enthusiasm stemming largely from the belief that interest rates have ended their year-long climb extended the stock market rally into a second day of trading.

The traders' optimism that interest rates had peaked was based on evidence that the pace of economic expansion was slowing, leading to an easing of business borrowing, analysts said.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 7.22 points to 1,131.57 on Monday after jumping 19.50 on Friday for its best gain in more than seven weeks.

Among the evidence was the National Association of Purchasing Management's report Sunday that its Composite Index of industrial activity fell to 58.7 percent in May from 61.4 percent in April and a post-recession high of 70.6 percent in December 1983.

A year ago, the index stood at 56.0 percent.

Any reading above 50 percent in the seasonally adjusted index indicates the economy is expanding.

"After recent rapid increases in the rate of improvement, it appears the economy is taking a breather at a relatively high level," said Robert Bretz, director of purchasing for Continental Forest Industries Inc. and chairman of the business survey committee of the purchasing agents' association.

Other evidence was the Conference Board's report Sunday that its Consumer Confidence Index fell to 95.2 in May from 97.9 in April. The index, which is based on 100 for the 1969-70 period and which stood as high as 98.4 last January, was still above the 84.0 reading of May 1983.

"While softening consumer confidence indicates that the U.S. economy is growing more slowly now, it still remains quite strong," said Fabian Linden, executive director of the consumer research center for the business-financed study group.

And the Conference Board reported Monday that a composite barometer of future economic growth in the world's seven major industrial nations has slipped from three months ago, but continues at a relatively strong level.

The board said its latest composite leading business cycle index for the seven countries registered an annual growth rate of 11 percent, down from 12 percent three months ago.

In other economic developments Monday:

—The government sold $12.8 billion in new securities — half in three-month treasury bills at an average discount rate of 9.90 percent, up from 9.83 percent, and half in six-month bills at an average discount rate of 10.57 percent, down from 10.62 percent.

In addition, TPQ has received two contracts totaling over $10 million from a major oil company for engineering and constructing gas processing plants. All of these contracts should be completed within the next year.

Exxon opening new convenience stores

HOUSTON — Exxon Co., U.S.A. is implementing a marketing program involving the sale of convenience food products at selected, new-design motor fuel facilities.

The first of the new units has been opened in Tuscaloosa, Ala. Two others are under construction in San Antonio and Princeton, W.Va., with additional locations planned later this year and next. The first convenience products stores will be dispersed throughout the Eastern and Southwestern United States.

Gasoline facilities will be self-serve, with a cashier located in the convenience shop to assist customers. The convenience products area is centered among three or four motor fuel islands, all of which are covered by a single canopy.

Products available in the 600- to 800-square-foot shops include snack foods, sandwiches, beverages, cigarettes, bread and dairy items.

All of the motor fuel-convenience store facilities will be newly constructed, utilizing the company's new award-winning contemporary design.

"The new test facilities are designed to meet motorists' growing expectations for convenience product availability when they make a motor fuel purchase," said Stuart Pearman, Exxon Co., U.S.A. Retail Business Manager.

UT professor chosen AAPG president-elect

AUSTIN — William L. Fisher, Ph.D., director of the Bureau of Economic Geology at The University of Texas, has been chosen president-elect of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists.

Fisher will begin serving as the 1984-85 president-elect on July 1. Next year he will assume the 1985-86 presidency of AAPG, the world's largest professional geoscience association with members in 93 countries. The organization has 42,000 members.

In addition to his duties as director of the burear, Fisher is the Morgan J. Davis Centennial Professor in Petroleum geology at UT Austin, where he has taught since 1969. He will become chairman of the UT Department of Geological Sciences in September.

Fisher joined the Bureau of Economic Geology in 1960 and served as research scientist and associate director before becoming director in 1970.

He served as assistant secretary for energy for the U.S. Interior Department during the Ford Administration from 1975 to early 1977, when he returned to the director's post at the UT bureau.

Fisher has served on numerous boards and councils, including the White House Energy Resource Council. He has been president of the Austin Geological Society and has been a member of committees for the Interstate oil Compact Commission, the Texas 2000 Commission, the Texas Energy and Natural Resources Advisory Council and the Texas Railroad Commission. He also is vice chairman of the Texas Low-Level Radioactive Waste Authority.

William L. Fisher

Fisher said a significant task of the AAPG presidency is maintenance of the various divisions within the organization, which has grown in recent years. The AAPG now includes a division concerned with non-petroleum energy sources, such as coal and geothermal energy.

The organization also includes a division of public affairs and ethics. In addition, the association issues papers on energy issues and offers consultation on policy matters to the executive branch and to Congress.

"Focus on Oil '84", featuring the winning and best entries in the Petroleum Museum's annual photography competition is now on display at the museum's temporary exhibit area. The photos represent all aspects of petroleum exploration, drilling, production, and refining.

"Best of Show" was awarded to Chuck Frazier, Emporia, Kan., for his color shot of a refinery at sunset entitled, "Thirty Five Million Dollar Capital Investment." Frazier also won third place in the professional color category for "Roughnecking for Glacier Oil Co."

Taking first in the professional color area was Ed Broussard, Lafayette, La., for his "Early Sunrise", an unusual drill bit's eye view of an offshore oil rig. Another Lafayette resident, Ron Coulter, captured second place in this category for "Board Road to Nowhere", a haunting photo of an access road in a drilling area.

Sharon Newsom, Monahans, took first place honors in the amateur color competition for her untitled scene of a pumpjack at dusk. Odessa resident Arthur Molina's "Foggy Morning" won second while Danny Biehler, Wichita, Kan., won third with his "Evening Drill Floor."

In the black and white competition all the winners were from the Midland/Odessa area. First place was won by Michael Banschbach, Midland, for "Process Piping", a scene depicting a maze of insulated piping at a refinery. Cindy Sims, Odessa, was second with her "Making Connection"; while fellow Odessan, Jean Henry, finished third with "Flanged Tank."

Shiftwork can be hazardous to your health

EDITOR'S NOTE: The writer recently completed a two-month stint on an overnight shift.

By COTTEN TIMBERLAKE
AP Business Writer

Shiftwork can be hazardous to your health, researchers say.

The foremost peril from working nights or rotating between days and nights seems to be disruption of sleep.

Other possible dangers include weight gain, gastrointestinal disorders, higher incidence of injury, moodiness, marital problems.

And then there are the practical hurdles of shiftwork, such as the difficulty of getting public transportation to work at odd hours.

"Numerous studies have associated shiftwork with sleep problems," said Donald I. Tepas, who directs a sleep laboratory at the Illinois Institute of Technology in Chicago, where he is a professor of pyschology. "Most of these people have trouble getting enough sleep."

According to the "chronobiological" theory, shiftworkers have problems sleeping because they attempt to sleep at the wrong time of the day.

Other scientists believe shiftworkers sleep less because of social pressures, Tepas says.

"There's considerable reason for that night worker to get up early. A lot of things start happening in the house in the afternoon. Kids come home from school, dinner is served, the news comes on television," Tepas said.

"Since sleep is more of a solitary act than most other behaviors, it is the first to be reduced and reaches some minimal level almost instantly, given the social time demands of some shift schedules," he said.

But the result may not be a disturbed sleep but a more efficient sleep period, he adds.

Studies show that night shiftworkers sleep the least, and afternoon-evening workers sleep the most, Tepas says. This is true for both permanent and rotating workers. Rotators on the night shift sleep less than permanent night workers, he says.

However, acute sleep loss leads to chronic sleep deprivation, then to "microsleeps," or drowsiness, then to lapses — "periods during which responses aren't made" — which leads to impaired performance, Tepas says.

Tepas says impairment is most evident when the workers' tasks are not self-paced, such as assembly lines, and says that workers lose the ability to assess their own performance and the extent of their fatigue.

"Continued chronic sleep deprivation may very well lead to a variety of health problems ... and result in a general decrease in life expectancy," Tepas said.

Michael J. Colligan, a research psychologist with the National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health in Cincinnati, surveyed 1,219 nurses on permanent day, afternoon and night shifts and on rotating schedules to assess the effects of the shift worked on sick leave and frequency of worksite clinic visits.

He found that compared to nurses on permanent shifts, rotators exhibited a significantly higher rate of clinic visits and took more sick days for serious illnesses.

Charles Ehret, a chronobiologist at the Argonne National Laboratory in Illinois and a private consultant, said: "Shiftwork fatigue is not simple tiredenss or simple fatigue of the sort that most workers experience. Shiftwork fatigue is in fact a transient condition of mental dysfunction.

"When you reset your body clock from one time to another time, until the body clock is completely reset, it experiences multiple problems."

He said workers' biological functions are desynchronized, and if they do not resynchronize, that can lead to neuroses such as depression and manic depression.

Experts offer suggestions to improve health, spirits

By the Associated Press

Feeling lousy from working nights or rotating shifts? Here are some suggestions from experts on how shiftworkers can improve their health and spirits:

— Monitor your sleep in a log before you begin shiftwork to determine how much sleep you need. Once you are on shiftwork, "Think before you set the alarm," and do not set it too early.

— Make sure you have quiet and dark sleeping quarters.

— Unplug the phone.

— Make sure you family understands the demands of shiftwork and the need to sleep at a different time from the rest of the family.

— Avoid napping and try to get all your sleep at one time.

— Try to sleep at the most favorable time of day, but maintain the same sleep-work-leisure time sequence no matter what shift is worked.

— Do not drink coffee, smoke cigarettes or consume alcohol because they disrupt your natural sleeping habits.

— Avoid overeating; it has been suggested that night workers tend to snack more than people on other shifts.

— Try to maintain an eating schedule of a breakfast meal before going to work, lunch at work and supper when you get off.

T-Bills show mixed yield

WASHINGTON (AP) — Yields on short-term Treasury securities are mixed this week, with rates rising for three-month bills and declining for six-month bills.

At Monday's auctions, the government sold $12.8 billion in new securities — half in three-month bills at an average discount rate of 9.90 percent, up from 9.83 percent, and half in six-month bills at an average discount rate of 10.57 percent, down from 10.62 percent.

The three-month yield was the highest since the May 21 level of 9.95 percent while the six-month rate was the lowest since 10.38 percent, also on May 21.

Cherry Canyon wildcat may stimulate play

Conoco Inc, Midland, has completed a Cherry Canyon wildcat in Reeves County that could touch off a new flurry of drilling activity along a probable Cherry Canyon trend.

The well is the No.1 Tunstill, which flowed 150 bopd 39.8 API and 104 Mcfd with 230 bwpd on a 16/64 in. choke through perforations at 4,375-4,444 ft. from the Cherry Canyon, following fracturing with 14,000 gal. gel of 2 percent KCl and 16,500 lb. 20/40 sand.

It was drilled to 5,000 ft. and plugged back to 4,926 ft.

It is located 660 ft. from north and 2,055 from west lines of Section 6, Block 56, T&P survey, four miles north of Orla.

Activity Analysis

The well is significant in that it is on trend with Cherry Canyon production in the Tanstill field three miles to the east and the Jess Burner field five miles to the west. It is also about three miles southeast of the small Jeanita field, a four well Cherry Canyon field.

Operators in the Delaware Basin Cherry Canyon play are confident that Cherry Canyon exploration is in the same phase as development of the upper Delaware pays were in the late fourties, and feels that the Cherry Canyon play may become one of the more significant plays in the Permian Basin, especially in light of discoveries such as the No.1 Tanstill.

According to Ed Kennedy, consulting geologist who has worked the Cherry Canyon extensively for Orla Petco, the Delaware Mountain Group breaks down into about 1,000 ft. of Bell Canyon at the top, another 1,000 ft. of Cherry Canyon in the middle, followed by 1,000 ft. of Brushy Canyon at the bottom.

In the Cherry Canyon alone there are 15 to 20 sand stringers in which production is found. These stringers are thin, (sometimes only 8 to 14 feet) delicate and hard to map. "The Cherry Canyon is stratigraphic, not structual like the Rhoda Walker or Worsham fields," says Kennedy.

The productive stringers are also frequently separated by water zones which formerly made completion a delicate proposition.

However, new electromagnetic logs have dramatically reduced the difficulty in locating the zones, and improved cementing techniques have been introduced to isolate the water zones from the production zones.

Economics of the Cherry Canyon make it a suitable play for independents. And, it has proven to be just that to date. Average cost for a Cherry Canyon well is in the neighborhood of $220,000 completed, and about 10,000 barrels at a net price of $18 are needed to make it economical.

One of the factors affecting economics in the play is water. A great deal of it must be moved, either by truck or pipeline to an injection well.

The Cherry Canyon is becoming an intense area of wildcatting and most of the wildcatting has been done by independents, although Exxon and Conoco have done a fair amount of exploration drilling. One operator in the Cherry Canyon characterized it as an independents delight: "The majors are not that excited about it because of the overhead involved," he informed.

For all accounts the Cherry Canyon is being billed as an extensive play that will be going on for a long time as the elusive, productive sand stringers are sought from the Ward and Winkler county lines to the Culberson County line, and as far north as New Mexico.

The Burton Ranch field,a relatively new play northeast of Carlsbad in which Mesa and Exxon are active, is Cherry Canyon even though it is listed as upper Delaware. The Ford West (4100) field drilled in 1981-82 is Cherry Canyon as is the Geraldine (3800) field in Culberson County. Current areas of activity also center around the Dimmit field six miles northeast of Mentone in Loving County. The Cognac field, on the Pecos River, and the Jess Burner field west of the No. 1 Tunstill.

What explorers are hoping to find is another Rhoda Walker field, they confess. Some are confident that perhaps several Rhoda Walkers are still to be found somewhere in the Delaware Basin in the Cherry Canyon play. But, if not they will continue looking as long as the economics permit.

Scurry County wildcat completes for 131 bopd

Kejo Resources Inc., Conroe, has completed its No.2 Feldman pumping 131 bopd of 27.4 API, 131 Mcfd and 33 bwpd on a 24 hour test. Drilled to a TD of 6,350 and plugged back to 5,715 it was completed in perforations from 5,539 to 5,569 ft. in the Canyon Sand.

Located 853 ft. from north and 1,980 ft. from west lines of Section 137, Block 2, H&TC survey, four miles north of Camp Springs the well is a one location to the northeast offset of its No.1 Feldman which was low and wet in the Strawn, and produced only 10 bopd with much water.

The operator encountered no completion problems in the discovery well which was treated with 500 gal. acid and fraced with 20,000 gal. fluid and 28,500 lb. sand.

Formation tops were established at Noodle Creek 4,204, Wolfcamp shale 4,780 and Canyon Sand 5,559.

Nearest Canyon Sand production is the H.C. Hood No.1 which was a short term producer and was plugged in 1962. It is located four miles from the discovery well in Section 95.

The operator will not drill a confirmation well until production has had a chance to stabilize on the No.2 Feldman.

Andrew wildcat finaled

C.F. Qualia, Midland, has completed the No.1-6 Ralph McWhorter pumping 39 bopd of 38 API and 43.3 Mcfd with 22 bwpd. The 8,606 ft. test was plugged back to 7,572 and completed in the Wichita Albany through perforations at 7,048 to 7,443 ft. The well is located 660 ft. from east and south lines of Section 6, Block A-3, PSL survey, 12 miles northwest of Frankel City.

Winkler wildcat finaled

Gulf Oil Corp., Midland, has completed its 213 Keystone Cattle Co. for 99 bopd 38.3 API, 90 Mcfd, and 285 bwpd pumping on a 24 hour test.

The well was drilled to 11,777 ft., plugged back to 10,278 ft. and completed in perforations at 10,226-10,270 in the Fusselman, following stimulation with 14,500 gal. acid and fracture using 15,000 gal. fluid and 20,000 lb. sand. The well is located 3,300 ft. from north and east lines of Section 24, Block A-57, DSL survey, 14 miles northeast of Kermit.

Nation's small businesses still aren't political force

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — When you consider their numbers, the jobs and the products they create, and the very kinetic power of their economic activities, you can wonder why small business hasn't become a greater political force.

Don Gevirtz might wonder too.

He feels that Ronald Reagan betrayed the entrepreneur through the impact of his $200 billion budget deficits. "There is no enemy greater to the entrepreneur than that budget deficit," he says.

Gevirtz, a big lender to small businesses, says he wrote Jimmy Carter's position papers on small business tax incentives after the 1976 election, but Carter never built a special reputation as a friend of small business.

He held a brain-storming session for Walter Mondale on the subject but, he says, his suggestions have never appeared as part of Mondale's official position.

His advice on high technology appears in "A New Democracy" by Sen. Gary Hart, Mondale's chief opponent for the Democratic Party nomination. But on the stump, Hart says relatively little about small business as an entity.

But small business represents a great constituency, says Gevirtz, chief executive of The Foothill Group Inc. of Los Angeles, one of the biggest independent lenders to businesses, many of them small.

There are 15 million small companies, he points out in his book, "Business Plan For America," subtitled "An Entrepreneur's Manifesto." If each employs just six people, he muses, think of the potential impact on politics.

In an economic sense, that impact is felt but not always appreciated by Americans.

According to Gevirtz, entrepreneurially oriented small companies now create most of America's jobs, produce most of the innovation in the marketplace and provide product diversity for customers and competition for old-line firms.

Small companies, says Gevirtz, offer the refreshing prospect of change and accommodation to the modern world. They provide excitement and a sense of freedom, and a reaffirmation of the good old American free-enterprise spirit.

Nevertheless, he says, small businesses often find themselves at war with their own government.

The explanation offered most often for this has been that those engaged in Small Business were, by their nature, inclined toward independent rather than group activity, thus dissipating their potential power.

Big Business, in contrast, is far more likely to act through groups. It understands organization. It understands power, and it knows how to acquire it, keep it and utilize it. It is far more likely to speak with one voice.

While small business has learned a great deal in the past decade about using power, especially against the Washington pressure points, it still has a long way to go.

It still finds government contracts and regulations, for example, written for larger businesses.

Gevirtz believes a drastic revision of the tax code is needed to create a profitable climate for small- and medium-size businesses. He wants more equitable treatment for entrepreneurs in dealing with banks. He wants less protectionism for big business. He seeks more help for entrepreneurs in expanding exports.

Gradually, but perhaps not significantly, small business has been getting more of a hearing on these matters from members of Congress, regulators and bureaucrats in general.

But it still seems unable to win attention from those who seek the nation's highest office and hope to achieve that pinnacle with "new ideas."

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

T bills 'good move'

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I am a retired male in my middle 80s and in fairly good health, with annual income, including Social Security, of about $30,000. My standard of living consumes half of my income. My heirs are all financially well off.

I have just sold all my stocks, which constituted about half of my net worth. I put the proceeds into 13-week and 26-week U.S. Treasury bills. The rest of my money is in U.S. Treasury notes, with maturities of up to four years. Was this a good move?

A. Sure. Your finances were in good shape before you sold the stocks and put everything you have in Treasury securities. Unless you change your way of living and start spending much more than you have in the past, you have absolutely nothing to worry about.

• • •

Q. I have quite a bit invested in U.S. Treasury bills, notes and bonds. Is there any danger of not collecting my money when these securities mature?

A. Short of the U.S. government being overthrown, there is absolutely no risk. Those securities will be paid off at face value when they come due. And, until maturity, the stated interest will be paid. U.S. Treasury securities are counted as the most secure investments in the world.

This doesn't mean you will get the face value of those Treasuries if you sell them before maturity. When interest rates go up, the market values of Treasuries and other fixed-income securities go down.

• • •

Q. It has always been my understanding that all preferred stocks pay the same dividend year in and year out. Now, I'm told dividends on some preferred can vary from one year to the next. What kind of preferreds are those?

A. They can be one of two kinds.

The first, which has been around for many years, is participating preferred. That type is entitled to its stated dividend and, also, to additional dividends based on dividends paid on common stock of the same company.

The second, a relatively new development, is variable rate preferred. The dividend on that type can be raised or lowered according to predetermined formulas — usually the ups and downs of interest rates in the marketplace.

• • •

Q. What is the difference between preference stock and preferred stock?

A. There's no real difference. The two words mean the same thing — that the company issuing those stocks must pay dividends on its preference or preferred stock before it can pay any dividends on its common stock.

Also, if a company liquidates, preference and preferred stock must be paid off before owners of common stock get anything.

• • •

Q. I thought all preferred stocks had stated par values. But the certificate for 100 shares of preferred I just bought says it has "no par" value. Should I be worried?

A. Not at all. When a preferred stock has a stated par value, the annual dividend usually is a percent of that par value. For instance, a 12 percent, $100 par preferred stock pays $12 a year dividends.

When a preferred stock has no par value, the annual dividend will be spelled out a in dollar amount, rather than as a percentage of par. A $12 dividend no par preferred will pay $12 a year.

Low-cost government housing plan criticized for ommission of big cities

WASHINGTON (AP) — A government plan to aid construction of low-cost housing in 587 communities — many of them small and rural — is being criticized in Congress because it excludes several big cities.

Sen. Donald Riegle, D-Mich., contends the Department of Housing and Urban Development and others in the Reagan administration are out to make "as meaningless as possible" the program that Democrats pushed through Congress last year to stimulate new rental housing construction.

"It's a fact that they don't believe in this kind of thing, don't think it's necessary and really don't want to do it," Riegle said. He said the list of communities seems designed to exclude those the program was supposed to reach.

Congressional officials are negotiating with HUD to change the eligibility rules for the funds. While talks are under way, Riegle has put a legislative "hold" on a $2.5 billion supplemental appropriations bill for the department.

On the House side, Rep. Fernand St Germain, D-R.I., chairman of the Banking Committee, is trying to get the administration's attention on the housing issue by delaying action on a World Bank financing bill.

The supplemental spending bill Riegle has held up includes two Republican housing initiatives and $315 million for the Democrats' housing plan. Cities eligible to compete for the Democratic program were selected by HUD based on congressional dictates to consider rates of poverty, overcrowding, vacancies and substandard housing.

Of the list's 41 cities with 50,000 or more people, 14 are in California and 11 are in New Jersey. None of the large cities are in Michigan, and Boston, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Buffalo, San Francisco, and Washington, D.C., also are omitted.

Stu Davis, executive assistant to HUD's assistant secretary for housing, defended the list, saying it was the logical byproduct of the instructions the department received from Congress.

"We took the eligibility factors which were laid out in the statute .... The big sticking point I don't think is how we came up with the list but how many cities we put on the list," Davis said.

A Riegle aide speculates, however, that the list is politically motivated and partial to communities in the Sun Belt.

"This particular short list was selected because it was skewed to the West and South, and some within the administration felt that that would fit into some part of the campaign strategy this year," said Riegle aide Don Campbell.

St Germain's office declined to characterize it as regional problem but said there were doubts about whether HUD "shares the spirit" in which Congress passed the program.

Dollar trade mixed

LONDON (AP) — The dollar was mixed, but mainly lower, against other major currencies in early trading on European markets today. Gold prices rose.

Dealers said despite the losses the dollar was steady after Monday's falls, attributed partly to uneasiness about the effect on U.S. banks of delayed Latin American debt payments.

Gold prices moved up amid continuing fears about Ecuador's debt repayments and anxieties about the Iran-Iraq war. Gold is a traditional haven in times of political or financial uncertaintly.

Answer to today's Crossword Puzzle

Phone secretaries do more than answer phone

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

"Most people still think of an answering service as Lily Tomlin sitting in front of a switchboard that has cords going everywhere," commented Gary Johnson, operations manager for Communications Plus.

"We're trying to change the image that people have gotten of answering services," supervisor Mona Bethany added. "We're trying to become telephone secretaries." The difference, she explained, is that a secretary does more than simply take messages. He or she tries to answer questions, determine what is an emergency and, if appropriate, contact the necessary person.

"I fired a girl one time because I couldn't break her of the habit of saying, 'I'm just the answering service,'" owner LaVerne Saunders said.

One might think the advent of answering machines would have put a big dent in the answering service business. Not so, Johnson asserted.

"Answering machines get about 30 percent of the messages because they (callers) don't like to talk to a machine. Answering services get about 80 percent of the messages."

Other advantages, he said, are that answering services can usually give a caller some idea of how soon the message will get picked up or reach the client in an emergency.

Actually, automation and computerization have allowed operations to expand. Johnson said Communications Plus — with about 550 clients the largest answering service in Midland — during the day takes an average of 450 messages per hour on 29 telephone lines.

The computer counts the rings and at the appropriate time forwards an incoming call to an operator. The computer terminal displays the name of the office being called, the correct way to greet the caller and information about the company, such as office hours, who to contact for what situations and how they can be reached, special instructions or messages, etc.

"Nine times out of ten, they don't realize they're talking to an answering service," Ms. Bethany said. "We treat the calls for the customer as if we're in the office. Most of the time, unless they ask, they think they're talking to a receptionist."

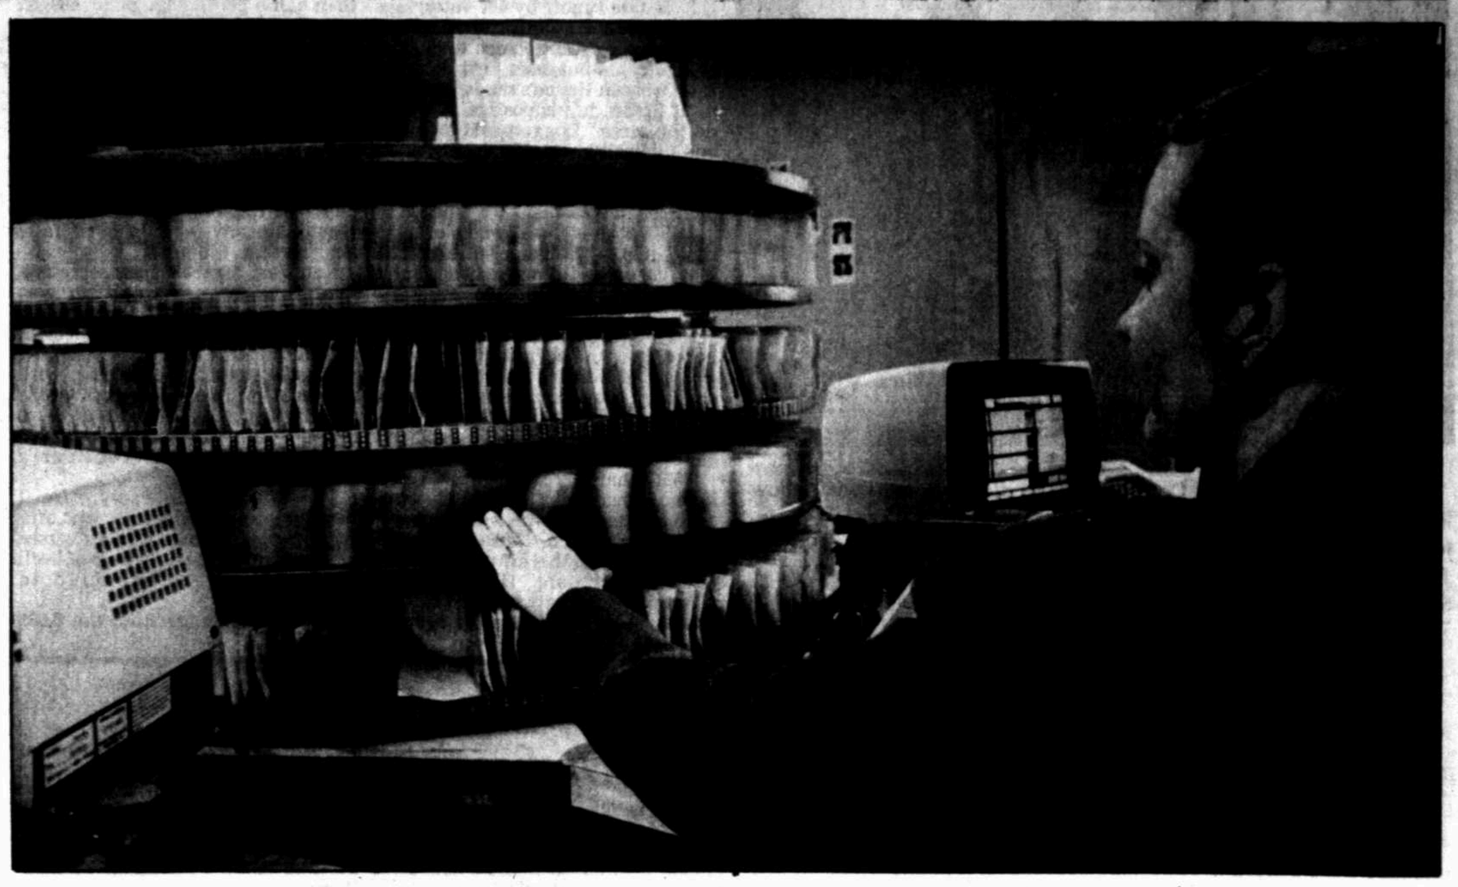

The pace is pretty hectic until about 6 p.m., according to telephone secretary Joe Mering. "You don't get bored around here." Even evenings are active — about half the clients are in oil-related business and many require 24-hour service. Operators also monitor burglar alarms.

"It's interesting because you're dealing with a very diverse group of people. I could spend 20 minutes telling you all the kinds of calls we get."

"You've got to be quick on your feet," continued Mering, who works from 3 p.m. to midnight. Among other clients, Communications Plus serves a suicide hotline. "It can get a little hairy. We have to stay calm and keep them talking until we can reach the person on call."

"We're sort of like detectives sometimes, trying to get hold of the person on call," Johnson said. "We keep digging until we get these messages delivered. People put a lot of trust in answering services."

Please see PHONE, Page 2C

Messages for clients of Communications Plus answering service, above, are stored in a four-tiered carousel until they can be relayed. Answering services have begun to utilize computerization, as a terminal, left, automatically displays information about the office being called. At a glance, an operator knows how to answer the call, the type of business, its office hours, who to contact and how they can be reached in case of emergency and special instructions.

System calls up medical data in minutes

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

A system that could enable one's complete medical history, including EKGs and the names and phone numbers of personal physicians or specialists, to be obtained by emergency personnel in minutes has made it to Midland.

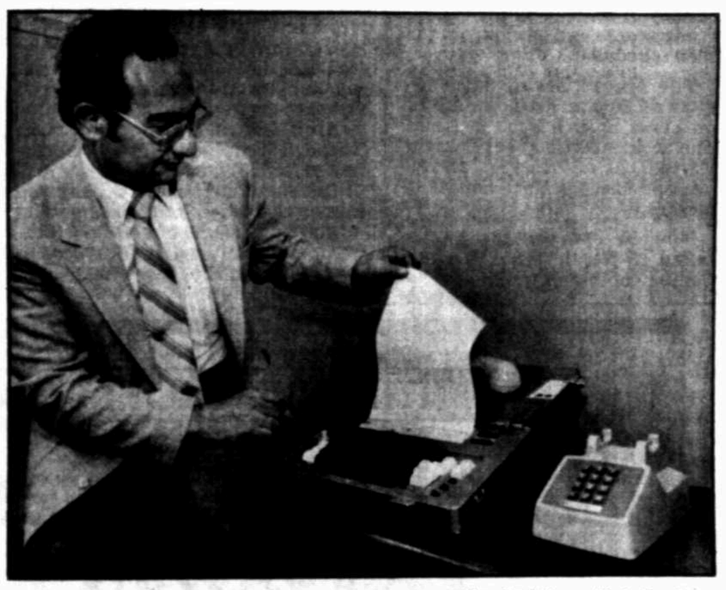

The Medical Data Bureau Emergency Information Systems Inc., a 10-year-old company based in Mesa, Ariz., already has clients in virtually every state, according to Bernard M. Domsky, president.

The system, available to Midlanders for an annual $25 fee for individuals and $49 for families, includes a wallet-size laminated identification card with the client's code number, phone number, address, blood type, social security number and allergies. Senior citizens subscribing to the service pay the same prices for lifetime memberships but all information still is required to be updated annually.

The card also contains two microfilm chips with the person's complete medical records, employer and hospital insurance policy information and the most recent EKG, which may be read under a microfilm reader. If no reader is available at the emergency clinic or hospital, a 24-hour phone number listed on the card may be called collect for a complete medical history.

Following studies and discussions with emergency personnel throughout the country, Domsky said "they say the card in the microfilm reader is great but in order for it to be valuable, someone has to sit down and copy down all sorts of material."

With a recently developed computer phone hookup costing about $500, however, a phone call to the central system can produce a hard copy of the client's medical history in a minute or less, he said.

Bernard Domsky, President of Medical Data Bureau, Inc., demonstrates a computerized phone hookup that produces a hard copy of an emergency patient's complete medical history in a minute or less.

In the area last week to talk with emergency physicians and personnel, Domsky said many have indicated they would consider purchasing the machine, which resembles a typewriter, if there is a local demand for the system.

"There's no limit to what can be put on the cards," he said, referring to Medic Alert bracelets and necklaces, which can be pulled off and lost in some accidents. "But it has no value unless emergency people know how to use it and what to look for."

Optional authorization for emergency treatment, surgery if two attending physicians judge necessary and donating organs in case the client is unable to communicate with personnel also may be signed, witnessed and listed on the microfilm chips.

For children, the pre-signed parental consent can be especially beneficial for those needing immediate treatment or surgery, Domsky said. Unless it is a life-threatening situation, a child may not be treated until his or her parents or legal guardians are located and authorize such action.

Additional cards will be available to keep on file at day care centers and schools at no additional charge, according to Micki and Bob Millersmith, Medical Data Bureau assistants who have an office in the Western Building in Midland.

"In the past year, the very impressive computer access system allows the emergency room personnel to have a complete printout in a minute or less that they can carry and go right into the treatment area," Domsky said. "It lists personal information, who to contact, whether it's family members or personal physicians, and conditions such as diabetes, allergies, anesthesia and life-sustaining medication.

"It can be updated as often as a person's medical records change but we demand that it be updated every year."

He emphasized the system and card are not just for those with conditions such as hemophilia, epilepsy, heart problems, or those requiring kidney dialysis: "Healthy people have emergencies, too."

"The worst situation at all is when someone comes in unconscious, delirious or in shock and is not able to communicate at all," he said. "Even under the best of circumstances, it is best to go through the information gathering process. And accuracy leaves something to be desired sometimes."

YMCA to tee off new golf program

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

A golf program for the Midland YMCAs has swung into place with the appointment of Scott Hauser to develop that program and others.

Hauser, 21, is completing a 15-week internship at the Midland YMCAs before receiving his degree next June in recreation education from the University of Iowa.

Besides teeing off the new golf program, which includes plans for the First Annual YMCA Golf Tournament, Hauser also will be taking a swing at organizing programs for Midland youth.

His job description includes being a counselor, instructor and clinician for summer recreation programs and being a developer of special programs.

He plans to help with the flag football league, which involves 300 youth ages 6-12, as well as the adult basketball and volleyball programs out of the Alamo YMCA.

"The big thing we're going to try to do, based out of Central, is start a teen-ager program because we don't really have anything geared specifically for them," he said.

With the help of an already established YMCA Teen Board, "we're going to research the community and find out what there really is to do. They're going to talk to other teen-agers about activities and then we'll go from there."

Scott Hauser

A native of Marshalltown, Iowa, located about 90 miles north of Iowa City, Hauser said he began playing golf at the age of 15.

After reluctantly being talked into going out for a 18-hole round with a buddy as a sophomore in high school, Hauser said he used his friend's clubs to shoot an 81 on the par-70 course.

MARK LEWIS

Is getting tan worth all the boredom, sweat?

Sundays are usually set aside for religious activities, so when I felt the call one recent Sunday afternoon, it seemed only natural to put on my shorts, grab a book and a towel and head out to join the congregation of sun-worshipers at poolside.

The high priestess of this particular sect was a very attractive dark-haired young woman in a sky-blue bikini, so I slyly settled into an adjacent lounge chair and pretended to read my book while waiting for the opportunity to open a conversation.

But she just lay there, inert, a serenely passive sponge soaking up ultra-violet rays by the million. When, after five minutes, she hadn't moved or even opened her eyes, I put down the book and settled back to do some serious tanning.

For a few minutes, I felt wonderful. Then I got incredibly bored. I turned over to read my book, and that kept me going for another ten minutes. But by then it was over 95 degrees, and the little drops of perspiration on my forehead had multiplied into a river of sweat which dripped off the end of my nose onto the pages.

At the same time, I became uncomfortably aware that my lounge chair was covered with the residue of the previous occupant's suntan lotion, which had mixed with my sweat to create a pattern of muddy stripes all over my skin. This unpleasant discovery led me to seriously reconsider my afternoon plans, and my committment to tanning in general.

What is a tan, after all, but visible evidence of skin damage? Is it rational, I asked myself, to deliberately burn my epidermis to conform to the cosmetic expectations of a sun-crazed society? Considering the risk of sun poisoning and skin cancer, should I sacrifice my health just to look healthy?

And what is time spent basking in the sun like a snake on a rock, but time which could be spent more productively, more actively, or at least more comfortably?

Having convinced myself that I was wasting my time and risking my health for no good reason, I got up to leave. Then I saw the woman in the blue bikini and sat back down again.

She didn't look bored or uncomfortable, and she certainly didn't look unhealthy. She didn't even sweat; she just sort of glistened in the sun like a highly polished bronze idol. I had to admire the zen-like concentration she brought to her task — she seemed to have achieved a kind of exalted vegetable state, like a flower unfolding itself toward the sun. A true pagan goddess if ever I saw one.

Well, OK, maybe I was being a bit hasty. After all, getting a tan is a cultural necessity these days; could I really afford to give up the one status symbol that you don't have to buy?

A tan is a great social equalizer, because nobody knows where you got it; you might have picked it up in Cancun or Jamaica, or better yet, on the Riviera. It implies that you're a person of leisure, with plenty of time to waste lying around in the sun. This is a relatively recent phenomenon, because before the 20th century, a tan was a sign of low class, of people who had to work out in the fields. Pale complexions were prized for the delicacy and sheltered life they implied.

But today, delicacy is for wimps. People are interested in rugged good health, or, more precisely, in the appearance of rugged good health. And the only way to acquire that wholesome, healthy look without actually living a wholesome, healthy life is to get a tan.

So I gave it another try. An hour passed; then two. I twisted and turned on my poolside rotisserie, but I just couldn't convince myself I was really having a good time. Meanwhile, my neighbor still hadn't moved, not even to turn over. (She must have done her other side the day before.)

As long as she remained oblivious to the pain I was suffering on her behalf, there was no point in continuing my ordeal by fire. Life was too short for this kind of self-abuse; I had bigger fish to fry than myself. I gathered my book and towel and retreated, with quiet dignity, to the shade.

But on the next sunny weekend, when the congregation reassembles at the pool, I'll probably be out there with them. In a society where a person's beauty is only as deep as his well-tanned skin, I can't afford to be left beyond the pale.

Doggett doesn't expect recount to change results

AUSTIN (AP) — State Sen. Lloyd Doggett, who won the Democratic U.S. Senate runoff by 467 votes, says he doesn't expect the recount requested by Kent Hance to change the outcome but adds he'd do same if he were in Hance's shoes.

"If I were in his position, I would do the same," Doggett said Monday, adding that his staff checked with county election officials and found little to indicate the recount would have much effect.

"We've yet to see much of anything that will change. The results may go up and down a little, but I don't expect the outcome to be any different," Doggett said.

In seeking the recount, Hance noted that the secretary of state's office had verified its results Monday and found discrepancies that narrowed the gap by 42 votes. Doggett on Sunday had been reported ahead by 509 votes.

"With that narrow a margin, I owe it to the voters of Texas, my supporters, everyone who worked many long hours and to those who have given money to this effort to call for a statewide recount," Hance said.

Assistant Secretary of State Ed Davis said verification of results reported from Saturday's election showed that Doggett won by less than half a percentage point, 489,927 votes to 489,460. The margin was 50.02 percent to 49.98 percent.

Davis said the secretary of state's verification gave both candidates a few more votes, with Hance gaining a net increase of 42.

Davis emphasized that the verification only confirmed results reported by each county on Saturday. "This does not constitute a recount in any way, form or fashion," he said.

Ken Vest, Hance's press secretary, said the recount decision was reached Monday after Hance workers checked the results with election officials in all 254 counties.

"Just statistically speaking, with almost a million votes cast and a margin that small, the odds of there being some mistakes are great enough to seriously consider a recount," Vest said.

State Democratic Party official Camille Burger said Democratic officials in each county would oversee the recount. Representatives of both candidates were expected to observe.

She said recounts from the 6,063 precincts should be completed by June 12.

Ms. Burger said Hance deposited nearly $30,000 with the party for the recount. Hance aides said the costs might total $50,000 to $70,000, but Hance said that for his supporters "the only way to remove any doubts is to proceed with a recount."

Hance spent most of Monday meeting with aides and telephoning supporters.

Doggett took his seat in the state Senate as a special session of the Legislature convened and joked with legislative colleagues about his slim victory margin.

The close runoff followed a six-way primary on May 5 which Hance won by 273 votes over Doggett out of nearly 1.5 million cast. Each man spent more than $2 million on his race — $1 million each in the four-week runoff campaign alone.

Hance, a Lubbock conservative, won most of the rural areas. Doggett, an Austin liberal, won the big cities and much of the Hispanic vote in South Texas.

They have to, he continued. Confidentiality, for both professional and personal reasons, is another consideration. "We've got doctors as customers, as well as oil companies that are in direct competition with each other. What comes in here has to stay with that particular customer."

Operators sometimes have to deal with angry or rude callers. "When you're talking to a few hundred people every night you're bound to get one or two who are not in the best mood," Mering said.

"We try every means possible to help. If he becomes too irate we simply disconnect him. An answering service isn't paid enough to take abuse," Johnson added.

"We don't have a lot of problem with that," Ms. Bethany said. "Normally, it's just someone who's having a tough day."

"Sometimes we just have to sit there and take it and try to keep a smile on our faces," Mering said.

Prosecutors say Cauble squandering fortune

TYLER (AP) — Federal prosecutors have complained that convicted drug racketeer Rex Cauble is deliberately squandering his fortune before it can be seized by the government.

Cauble recently bought an unneeded jet airplane and has "virtually ignored" an agreement that he limit his monthly expenses to $5,000, they said.

U.S. District Judge William Steger has scheduled a hearing for Friday to consider the request, contained in a May 29 motion, that he name a court-appointed receiver to take control immediately of the millionaire's assets.

Cauble, 70, was convicted in January 1982 of masterminding the so-called "Cowboy Mafia," described as the largest marijuana smuggling ring in Texas history. He exhausted appeals last month, and Steger ordered him to report to prison on May 22.

Days before the sentence was to begin, however, Steger granted Cauble another month's freedom to allow him more time to transfer his assets to the government.

Since then, attorneys for Cauble have filed a motion saying he is too sick to go to prison and should have his sentence reduced. Under guidelines of the federal parole commission, Cauble must serve at least 40 months of his 5-year prison term.

The Dallas Times Herald said Cauble "looked trim and robust" when he appeared in court last month and that friends and business associates reported he lifts weights, walks three miles a day and occasionally rides horses.

His lawyers said a lengthy prison term would be "life threatening."

Cauble's request for a reduced sentence, filed May 25, was accompanied by a statement from his doctor, Boots Cooper of Denton, that said he suffers "chronic illnesses" requiring a salt-free, sugar-free diet, regular exercise and medication for hypertension and phlebitis.

In addition, those subscribing to the service who are planning trips abroad may send in their itineraries and receive the names, addresses and phone numbers of English speaking physicians in cities and countries around the world at no cost, he said.

While the recently-developed computerized phone hookup already has been installed in five Arizona hospitals and one major hospital in New Orleans, Domsky said "we have memberships in just about every state. But we're just starting in on an active marketing program. We're just getting going and spreading through West Texas."

Fire chief charged with contempt

McKINNEY (AP) — The city fire chief and two paramedics were charged with contempt of court charges because a justice of the peace said they wouldn't remove two dead victims of a weekend car accident.

Fire Chief Tinker Taylor and paramedics Johnny Wallace and Milton Cowart were arrested Saturday night after John "Buddy" Newton charged them with contempt.

Newton, a Wylie justice of the peace, said the men ignored his orders to take the bodies to a hospital for blood tests. He accused them of leaving the bodies on a roadside for three hours while arguing where to take them.

Taylor said that he told the paramedics to disobey Newton's orders because the hospital doesn't accept patients already declared dead.

He said he was trying to convince Newton to order a different destination when he was arrested.

The three men were jailed in Collin County but released early Sunday. A hearing on the Class C misdemeanor charges has not yet been scheduled.

The fracas began Saturday after a 7:30 p.m. head-on collision on Lucas Branch Road in Lucas. The accident killed Joey Dwayne Hartsell, 20, of Princeton, and 39-year-old Bridget Mary Sappas of McKinney.

Newton ordered the bodies taken to North Texas Medical Center for blood tests.

Symposium to deal with water

LUBBOCK (AP) — Up-to-date reports on studies pertaining to underground water resources were to be presented today to researchers from across the United States.

Gene Hinds of Amarillo, the regional director of the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation, is the featured speaker at the Ogallala Symposium, which began today and runs through Wednesday. His talk is scheduled for 6:30 p.m. today.

Researchers from across the nation registered for the symposium at the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center. The first Ogallala Symposium was here, on the Texas Tech campus, in 1970.

Raymond Cook, a veterinarian and humorist from College Station, Texas, was the speaker for today's luncheon. Featured luncheon speaker Tuesday will be Dr. Samuel E. Curl, dean of the Texas Tech College of Agricultural Sciences.

More than 50 scientists, economists and water professionals will deliver papers on topics related to the Ogallala aquifer.

GOLF

"Golf is something that came pretty naturally for me," he said, adding the YMCA program will be geared toward teen-agers.

When he finished his first round that day, Hauser and his friend stepped into the clubhouse just as it started pouring rain. The golf pro was saying he needed to find someone to rake sandtraps and Hauser volunteered.

He began his seven year career the next morning, working up to greenskeeper.

"They let me play for free so it got to the point where I was playing at least 18 holes a day," he said.

The practice paid off when Hauser was named the first of three walk-ons that made it on the University of Iowa Golf Team. Thirty-seven people tried to walk on to the team which had nine scholarship positions filled.

Working his way up from No. 10 to No. 7, Hauser injured his hand during a tournament this year by cutting it on a chipped iron. The accident happened on the second hole with Hauser finishing up the final 34 by going through bandages, two towels and a lot of pain.

"Then I more or less started worrying about grades — 'cause it was getting that time of the year — and less about golf," he said.

"I like the climate a lot better here," he said, explaining golfing was limited to about four months a year. "They've got a lot better teams here than in the North because there you don't have that long to play."

Woman says she was robbed while making bank deposit

From Staff Reports

Police Round-up

A Taylor Street woman reported to police that she was robbed while making a deposit in the after-hours depository at Texas American Bank about 9:30 p.m. Monday.

The 55-year-old woman said she was attempting to make a deposit for her employer when a white man wearing a hooded jogging suit came up from behind and hit her with his open hand, knocking her against her car.

The man then grabbed the deposit bag and fled on foot. He was further described as about 5-feet, 9-inches tall. The bag contained an undetermined amount of cash and checks, according to police.

In burglary complaints filed during the past 24 hours, Sandra Miller Krause of Star Route A. Midland, said a $200 toy poodle was taken from her car while it was parked at Midland Park Mall about 3 p.m. Monday.

Sonya Langley of the Peppertree Apts., 2700 N. Midland Drive, told officers a $100 gold ring and $260 in cash were taken in a break-in of her apartment sometime Sunday night. The front door knob appeared to have been tampered with, according to police.

And D.A. Bodiford of 1003 S. Midkiff Road said a $5,000 antique necklace and some personal papers were missing from his residence. The items were taken sometime in the past week. There was no sign of forced entry, police said.

Crime Stoppers needs financial aid

From Staff Reports

Despite recent donations totaling $1,500 — including a $900 check from the Midland Crime Prevention Commission — the Crime Stoppers Program is in need of financial aid.

Since its inception in late January, Crime Stoppers has received $2,046 in donations and paid out more than $2,000 in rewards, according to Sgt. David Cobos, who heads up the program for the sheriff's department.

To date, Crime Stoppers has logged 25 arrests, cleared 18 cases and recovered more than $15,000 in narcotics and stolen property as a result of paying cash rewards to people who provide the program with information that leads to the arrest of wanted persons or the clearing of felony cases.

To make a donation or obtain further information about the program, call 694-TIPS.

Midlander jailed for sexual assault

From Staff Reports

Midland's alleged "Naked Rapist" is behind bars, charged with the early morning sexual assault of a northeast side woman late last month.

Donald Lee Lampkin, 25, of 1907 N. Tyler remains in the city jail under $25,000 bond set by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine.

The northeast side woman, in her 20s, told police she was awakened about 4:45 a.m. on May 25 by a man wearing nothing but a cap on his head and sock on his arm. The man put a pillow over her head and raped her, the woman said.

The man apparently entered her home through a window, according to police, who said Lampkin is under investigation for nine or 10 other reported rapes by a man answering his general description and method of operation. The rapes began last September and occurred on the south and east sides.

Italy's designers: Texans determine what shoes sell

According to Italy's foremost shoe designers, here's a sampling of what's hot in footwear: the thonged Bavarian sandals ladder their way up the calves, left, and pastel open-toed-and-heeled boot, upper left, are both by El Vaquero; the most conventional — a lizard and snake skin "boot," lower left, is by Pfister; and the gold ring-a-ding heeled slipper, right, is by Enzo of Roma.

Hearst Feature Service

Texas, not New York or Los Angeles, is the barometer of what will sell to fashion-conscious Americans, or so say Italy's shoe designers, whose sumptuous and varied autumn wares went on display recently at Milan's annual shoe fair.

Shoes are Italy's biggest single export, according to an article in Connoisseur's, and Americans buy some 60 million pairs of them each year. That may seem like a lot of shoes, but West Germans buy even more, and many of the most exotic and innovative Italian styles never show up in American stores. The Italian shoe industry hopes to remedy that this year.

If last September's Bologna show was any measure, the Milan show promises to be spectacular. Bologna displayed the most exciting and diverse collection of shoes to be seen anywhere: wide-strapped lizard and snake skin, pastel summer boots, thonged "barbarian" sandals that ladder their way up the calves, the popular "sportivo" look and a tattered style that is lugubriously called "post-atomic." Even this futuristic look is rooted in an ancient tradition: men and women in Italian Renaissance paintings wear shoes and sandals remarkably similar to the most daring Italian styles of today.

This should not be a surpirse. The Guild of Italian Shoemakers was founded more than six centuries ago, and the industry's unique system of stilista apprenticeship is calculated to ensure that the Italian tradition of fine creative shoemaking will continue. Promising young workers are spotted in factories, then carefully trained at industry expense until they are ready to join the elite corps of professional designers. They are so elite, in fact, that some manufacturers from other countries are interested in buying their designs directly, a circumstance that adds to the cloak-and-dagger air of Italian shoe exhibitions. Buyers come from everywhere to purchase new designs — and to steal them. The result is rampant paranoia: for all but a trusted few, reports Connoisseur, entrance at some pavilions in Milan will be more restricted than private audiences with the pope.

Fashion apparel, home furnishings blend together

The Associated Press

Are the worlds of fashion apparel and home furnishings coming closer together? According to designers and marketing executives with a foot in both camps, they are.

They say home furnishings collections by some of fashion's hottest names — Ralph Lauren, Perry Ellis, Gloria Vanderbilt and Issy Miyaki, for example — are selling well across the country.

Furthermore, says Joan Karron, corporate fashion director for J. P. Stevens, which mounted two fashion-designer home furnishings collections recently, there is a parallel between what a consumer wears and wants to live with.

Today's buyers are more integrated in their perspective. They know how to mix and match in home furnishings, since they have already learned how to put a number of pieces together from sportswear dressing, she said at a National Home Fashions League meeting. A casualty of this new consumer trend has been the matched suite of furniture which "has gone by the wayside," she added.

A one-way influence from fashion to home furnishings has been mentioned recently by a number of observers. But at least one fashion designer admits he is directly influenced by what is happening on the home front.

Bill Tice, known for the at-home lounge clothes he designs, says he chooses colors and styles for lounge wear which will coordinate with those colors currently popular in home furnishings.

"Today's savvy hostess wants to create an ambience which combines the way her home looks, the food she serves and what she wears when entertaining," he said.

As one who has traveled extensively across the country to promote his clothing, Tice has found that in affluent suburbs there is considerable interest in and time devoted to creating such a pattern. Even those hostesses who do not consciously set out to achieve a unified presentation are engaging in the practice without necessarily realizing it, he added.

Both Tice and Ms. Karron pointed out that color is the fashion attribute being stressed most by manufacturers and retailers in their merchandise presentations, paarticularly since they have found that customers respond most to color.

"The retail shopping experience of the 1980s is primarily concerned with choosing and manipulating different colors," said Ms. Karron, adding that many designers active in both the home and apparel spheres now offer the same themes in both.

Ethnic apparel inspires designers

Hearst Feature Service

Ethnic fashions came into their own in the 1960s. Inspirations ranged from the flower children to an increasing number of talents from lands not hitherto involved in the international clothing market — India, with glamorous gowns by the Saz sisters; Africa, with the introduction of colorful dashikis; caftans from the Middle East that were swiftly adapted by such Big Names as Halston.

No more were ethnics the kinds of clothes worn only by bohemian types. They went to the toniest events, including opera openings, and even entered the workplace.

Then, after so many seasons, the costume party seemed over. Too much became too much. Elegant simplicity was the newest thing, and classic American sportswear. But the ethnics never really went away. Yves St. Laurent, whose "rich peasant" was a sensation of the '60s, hasn't abandoned those brilliant silks and satins, although the beruffled carioca dancer is now sharing honors with the gypsies.

The Japanese New Wave fashions, top news from Paris last year and still taking the play away from haute couture, have their roots in the '60s, when Kenzo Takada, a young Tokyo talent, came to the French capital and made instant waves. His "radical" ideas now seem mild — kimono-sleeved sweaters, long samurai wrap skirts with hip-slung belts. Then came Kansai Yamamoto, who drew raves as an innovator, with clothes that would have been familiar to folks back home in Japan: Belted jackets with dragons and samurai figures emblazoned on the backs.

Both those designers are practically part of the Paris Establishment now. Kansai Yamamoto's jackets are featured in a money-making chain of namesake boutiques. Kenzo still refects his roots, but also wanders all over the globe for ideas, most recently choosing Bedouin "desert chic" and introducing brilliant Creole prints.

Their "young upstart" places have been taken by such as Rai Kawakuba, most radical of them all; Isseye Miyake, whose collections now blend the Japanesa peasant and fisherman looks with comparatively conservative separates; Hiroko Koshino, who blends various ethnic influences, and half a dozen more.

Together, they were the talk of the Fashion Pack when they first presented their fashions, which many laughingly dubbed "bag lady looks." Now, just a few seasons later, they've received that ultimate compliment — knockoffs by American fashion houses, with much more moderate price tags.

Day-Glo colors make comeback

Hearst Feature Service

Day-Glo colors have made a comeback. Those almost blinding neon-brights have turned into this season's fashion surprise. And from the look of some of the designer collections shown in New York, Day-Glo red, chartreuse, yellow, orange and fuchsia will liven things up for fall.

Day-Glo first surfaced in Swinging London back in the '60s. Then the hippies seized the psychedelic colors as part of their anti-fashion statement in T-shirts, oversize tops and long loose-fitting dresses.

This time around, the style once again originated with London's youth, whose punk fashions are a form of self-expression that distinguish them from the older generation. Young English designers were quick to cash in on the craze, which then made its way across the Atlantic.

Much of the credit for bringing Day-Glo into the mainstream goes to Stephen Sprouse, a 30-year-old designer from Indiana who's become the toast of the town in New York. In just one year, his Day-Glo wool cardigans, minidresses, bodysuits, tuxedo coats and stockings have appeared in or on the covers of every major national and international fashion magazine.

At his showing for some 1,700 retail buyers and fashion writers in the Ritz nightclub in New York, he presented an array of Day-Glo designs. Often, the clothes were accessorized with flashy pantyhose in matching colors. Regina Kravitz and former Coty Award winner Adrienne Vittadini borrowed the idea and went for loud legs with their designs.

Surprisingly, Sprouse's creations don't come cheap. Some of the minis are about $900. Less expensive knockoffs already have hit the market.

No matter what the price, Day-Glo is not for everyone. Nor is it likely to become a wardrobe staple. Some of the colors — particularly green and yellow — do absolutely nothing for the complexion. In small doses, though, Day-Glo can be pleasing to the eye — a pair of earrings, a necklace, a pair of sneakers, perhaps a top. And the colors are certainly a welcome change from this season's pastels and white.

And there is another up side to the electric colors. Explained a 16-year-old whose Day-Glo pink-streaked hair matched the crinolin peeking from beneath her skirt: "With Day-Glo, you glow in the dark."

Garments should last

Copley News Service

Many garments are bought on a whim. And when fashions change the following season, the whim catches up with you and you have nothing to wear.

The International Fabricare Institute offers the following good bets for clothes that can be worn for at least 10 years.

— An antique white lace blouse.

— A plain, tailored tweed or corduroy jacket will almost always be in style.

— A trench coat — in style 50 years.

— Good blue jeans.

— Pleated, straight-legged flannel slacks in classic colors like gray, navy and black.

— A hand-knit fisherman's sweater — anything made to go to sea is made to last.

DEAR ABBY

Landscaper's wife thinks he should trim talk

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a landscaper, and right now he's working on a job that has a lot of apartments. I always ask him what his day was like, and he always has some interesting stories to tell me.

For the last two weeks he's been talking about this nice-looking red-haired lady who tells him what a great tree trimmer he is. Yesterday he told me that she came out with her flatiron in one hand, a roll of electrical tape in the other and helplessly asked, "Is this what you call electrical tape?" Of course he fixed her iron during his break, and she gave him a cold beer for his help.

He said the men at work asked him if he had something going with the redhead. (Then he laughed.) He failed to tell me whether he fixed her iron inside her apartment or out.

Maybe I'm too touchy, but I don't feel comfortable when my husband's co-workers ask him if he has something going. Should I worry? — STAY-AT-HOME WIFE

DEAR WIFE: No. Your husband sounds like an accommodating fellow who makes friends easily. Don't worry. It's the husband who comes home with no stories to tell, never meets anybody and nothing ever happens to that I'd worry about.

DEAR ABBY: I have a serious problem. I am a 20-year-old woman who is in love with two men — a father and his son.

I met them both at the same time and was immediately attracted to the father. He is 40. He was attracted to me, too, and we had sex together the very first night I met him. He told me he was living with a lady, so if we were to be lovers he would have to be very careful. We would arrange to meet for a few hours at his son's apartment. The son is 21 and goes to college.

Well, one afternoon while waiting for the father (who never did show up), I became involved (sex) with the son, who had more to offer (sexwise) than his father, so that's how I became confused between the two of them.

The son says he loves me, and so does the father. I love them both. What should I do? — CONFUSED

DEAR CONFUSED: The "confusion" you feel is a valuable warning signal. You need counseling to learn the difference between sex and love.

It appears that not only are you using the father and son, they are also using you. Forget them both. They are double trouble.

Tiny businesses show spirit

By ERMA BOMBECK

Every time I go through a small town in Arizona, I think of the old Henny Youngman joke, "My brother-in-law is a real loser. He opened up a tall man's shop in Tokyo."

The reason this joke comes to mind is that this is the smallest town I have ever seen in my entire life. How small is it? It's too small for a REDUCE SPEED sign. It has to rent a town drunk. You could carpet the downtown area for $29.95. It has two buildings. One is a gas station-general store. The other is — brace yourself — a Doggie Boutique.

I swear it.

There are never any cars parked in front of it, but the window is always attractive with plush canine beds, jeweled collars, little sweaters and one Christmas on the door there was a wreath decorated with dog bones.

As I drive through the countryside dotted with ranches, pickup trucks and open range, I somehow don't see this as the Rodeo Drive for dogs.

It's not the first time I have been consumed with curiosity over how a small business opened in a small town in the first place. How many people in a community of 500 could support a shop called "Trashy Underwear"? Why is there a long stretch of dirt road in a rural community with a small sign that says, "Computer Center: 500 Yards"?

We lived in a town once where you had to drive 18 miles to get a quart of milk, get your laundry done or a prescription filled, but if you wanted a karate school, you could walk there.

These small storefronts seem as ludicrous as opening up a birth control center in a retirement community. Yet, they're the stuff that keeps Charles Kuralt in oil for his gas guzzler.

Are these shops the ultimate dream of a woman whose children are grown and who for the first time has a chance to open a bath shop with designer seats? Are they the compromise of a man who dreamed of fishing four days a week and cleaning jewelry on the other three? Or is it a stubborn desire to challenge those who would beat a path to a better mousetrap?

I can't help but admire the pioneer spirit that converts a feed store into an aerobics studio or leases a space in a bar for a health food store.

Books help cure disregard for colors

By RON SEBRING
Copley News Service

My dad was color-blind. When he drove to an intersection, he could tell the red light from the green light only by their positions — red on top, green on bottom. That worked fine except on vacation where we drove through states where the positions were reversed.

Though I am not color-blind, I have inherited my father's disregard for colors. As long as my mother guided my path through tints and shades in childhood, girlfriends led me through the haze of adolescence, and my wife through the maze of matches and mismatches in my adult life, things were fine.

However, when my wife and I divorced and I entered the single's world, I discovered I was helpless so far as picking and matching clothing was concerned. This handicap provided many occasions for humor and I will be eternally grateful to those friends who loved me enough to put an arm around my shoulder and say, "Hey, you've got a problem."

Three things have helped me. First, I did some reading in the area of "Dressing for Success." I was surprised to discover there is a marked difference between colors that are aesthetically pleasing and those that are psychologically influential.

Second, I was introduced to "Color Analysis." Certain tans that I had admired I found brought out the yellow in my complexion. And, though having a "pink" undertone is a little disconcerting to a weathered male ego, it does make a difference.

Finally, as was mentioned earlier, the biggest help came from caring friends. Sometimes the tougher the news, the greater the friend it takes to share it.

Stylist: Lighter often better when older

Copley News Service

When a woman gets older it may be more flattering for her to lighten rather than darken her hair, says Hollywood stylist Mike Michaels.

Dark-color hair gives a sharp contrast with skin color and "the harsher the contrast around a woman's face, the more her wrinkles will be emphasized," he said.

"On the other hand, with lighter hair framing the face, the look is generally softer and younger."

If your hair is more than 25 percent gray, you may want to try a temporary color rinse in a pale ash blonde or light ash brown shade.

Germans invent ready-to-wear

Copley News Service

Women's ready-to-wear clothes are believed to have originated in Germany about 1850. Some shopkeepers had cloaks made up in stock sizes to use up the surplus of the textile mills, which were then beginning to thrive.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've been watching these weightlifters on television and I've begun to wonder how healthy they really are. I know that they must be strong and I wouldn't want any of them mad at me, but a lot of them seem to be overweight if not actually fat. What I want to ask you about, however, is their blood pressure. Doesn't a person's blood pressure go up when he strains to lift heavy weights the way people do in competition? — Mickey, Bellingham, Wash.

Dear Mickey: A Canadian study has shown very significant increases in blood pressure during weight lifing exercises, but the increases were found to be temporary. One person's pressure was recorded at 450/310.

Dr. Duncan MacDougall, of McMaster University in Hamilton, Ontario, who conducted the study, warns against weightlifting exercises for individuals with high blood pressure. Instead, he recommends aerobic exercises such as walking and swimming, during which blood pressure remains low.

Dear Dr. Solomon: In some cases when a person swallows some poison, either accidentally or on purpose, there is an effort made to get him to vomit so that the poison will leave his system. At least that's the way I've seen it in the movies. Wouldn't it be better and safer if the person was given a drug that would cancel out the effects of the poison? It may not be as exciting for the movie, but I think it would actually work better. — Alvin, Cincinnati, Ohio

Dear Alvin: There is a certain logic to what you say. The drawback is that there are few drugs that can be used in the manner you suggest.

If an antidote for a poison is available, it can prove extremely helpful. One example is the use of glucose in the treatment of patients with hyperinsulinemia (too much insulin in the blood). In general, however, effective antidotes to poisons are relatively rare.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I believe you once had an item in your column about how burns to children can be prevented by adjusting the water heater to a lower temperature. Would you please repeat it? — Mrs. W.L., Bryan, Texas

Dear Mrs. L.: One recommendation is for water heaters to be set at between 120-130 degrees Fahrenheit. Water this hot is sufficient for all household requirements, yet reduces the risk of scalding should a child accidentally come into contact with very hot water.

For Rebecca, Coatesville, Penna.: Many of my patients who are allergic to one member of a family of foods may very well be allergic to other foods within that same family. Someone who is allergic to peanuts, for example, may also be allergic to green peas or beans. And someone who is allergic to brussel sprouts may also be allergic to radishes and cauliflower.

As for fruits, it is well to remember that pears and apples are members of the same family, as are peaches and cherries.

Neil Solomon, M.D., is a columnist for Los Angeles Times Syndicate. If you have a medical question, write Dr. Solomon at 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon will not give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.

Dog's death frees money for school

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — The death of Musketeer, the last of 150 stray dogs who shared a multimillion-dollar inheritance from the estate of a Quaker Oil heiress, frees a $12 million fortune for Auburn University's veterinary school, college officials said.

The dog, believed to have been 18 to 20 years old, died over the weekend in a Jupiter, Fla., kennel. It was the last of 150 pets owned by Eleanor Ritchey at the time of her death in 1968.

She willed her estate to Auburn's Veterinary School, but stipulated that the fortune first be used to care for her pets for 20 years or until their deaths, whichever came first.

Miss Ritchey developed an interest in Auburn through her veterinarian, Dr. Ivan Fredrickson, whose son went to the school.

Frederickson said Monday that he last saw Musketeer, a black mixed-breed, about 10 days ago.

"He looked like he might go at anytime," he said.

University trustees learned Monday that Musketeer had died of old age.

"We ought to declare a school holiday," said R.C. "Red" Bamberg, the trustees' vice chairman.

Miss Ritchey's original endowment of $4.3 million has grown to $12 million since her death and accumulated an estimated $900,000 in interest in 1983 alone.

Auburn has been receiving interest on the money since a 1973 court settlement with relatives who had challeged the will.

The interest has been used to build the Scott-Ritchey Research Center at the university, according to Frank Hoerlien, head of the veterinary school. The first two phases of the complex cost $3.3 million and are to be completed this year.

The center will specialize in finding cures for diseases in pets, primarily dogs, and is one of only two facilities "of this magnitude" in the nation, Hoerlien said. The other is at Cornell University in New York.

The school will continue to use only the interest on the $12 million principal, Hoerlien said.

"This (the dog's death) won't change anything except that we'll be getting a little bit more money," Hoerlien said. "It would be foolish to use the principal when we have an ongoing program."

Miss Ritchey's dogs lived on the family ranch in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., until 1981 when the land was sold for a golf course. The nine dogs surviving at that time were moved to the Jupiter kennel.

Arena may not be ready for Michael

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Superstar Michael Jackson and his brothers have waited so long to sign a contract for Rupp Arena that a planned June 22 concert kicking off their summer tour is probably impossible, an arena official says.

Jackson

Time has just about run out for arranging mail-order ticket sales and advertising for June 22, said Bill Pickett, an official with Lexington Center, where the arena is located. "The following weekend is still possible," he added.

Jackson's mother, Katherine, announced two weeks ago that the six brothers would open their tour June 22 in Lexington. But Rupp Arena operations director Bill Humphrey said the arena still had no contract Monday afternoon.

BALTIMORE (AP) — Plans are afoot to revive the "Saturday Night Club," H.L. Mencken's impromptu beer and musical entertainment sessions, when the rowhouse where the writer spent most of his life opens to the public.

The three-story west Baltimore house is scheduled to open June 15 as a museum and entertainment and reception center.

Mencken is "probably getting a good chuckle in his grave" over the plans, said Jeanne Fetting, who directed the project.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jane Goodall, one of the world's leading authorities on chimpanzees, has won the $50,000 J. Paul Getty Wildlife Conservation Prize for helping "millions of people understand the importance of wildlife conservation to life on this planet," says the president of the World Wildlife Fund-U.S.

Goodall

Dr. Goodall is best known for her pioneering research on chimpanzees in Africa. She has written several books on chimpanzees, and her work has been featured in films by the National Geographic Society.

"She is indeed...one to whom we look for continued guidance in preserving and protecting our natural environment," Russell Train, the fund president, said Monday.

Born in England, Dr. Goodall has spent her career researching primates throughout Africa. She makes her home in Tanzania, where she is based at the Gombe Stream Research Center.

LONDON (AP) — With a farewell sung in Italian to an audience that included Prince Charles, British opera star Sir Geraint Evans ended his 36-year career.

The Welsh miner's son stood Monday night as the Royal Opera House chorus sang the Welsh national anthem, with Charles, Prince of Wales, leading those who joined in from the audience.

Statler Brothers take four music awards

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Statler Brothers, country music veterans, say they found no special satisfaction in upstaging younger rival Alabama by taking home four Music City News awards.

"We don't look at it as competition," said Don Reid of the Statler Brothers. "We've been fortunate enough to be around a while, and we're proud of Alabama. But we don't look for competition."

The Statlers, a quartet which has been together for more than 20 years, were honored Monday night for best comedy act, top vocal group, single of the year for "Elizabeth" and No. 1 television special for "Another Evening With The Statler Brothers — Heroes, Legends and Friends."

Alabama, a four-piece pop-country band which has dominated country music awards for three years, won two awards: band of the year and album of the year for the million-selling "The Closer You Get."

"There was a time when we won a whole lot less than the Statlers. I'm proud for them," said Alabama guitarist-fiddler Jeff Cook.

The winners were chosen by subscribers to The Music City News, a monthly country music publication in Nashville. The 18th annual awards presentation was broadcast live from the Grand Ole Opry House on syndicated television to half the country and will be shown later on other stations.

The Statlers, who have won more than 300 awards during their career, were hosts of the show along with Larry Gatlin and Sylvia.

Janie Fricke was voted top female vocalist over veterans Barbara Mandrell and Loretta Lynn and rising stars Reba McEntire and Charly McClain.

Lee Greenwood was named male vocalist of the year over George Jones, Conway Twitty, Ricky Skaggs and Don Williams.

"A whole lot of dreams have come true for me," Miss Fricke said in her acceptance speech. "With a lot of hard work and believing in yourself, just about any dream can come true."

"It's funny how your eyes get real bright when you got tears in them," said Greenwood, who dedicated the award to his grandmother, who encouraged him to choose music over baseball.

Ernest Tubb, the 70-year-old "Texas Troubadour," won the "Living Legend Award" for contributions to country music for at least 25 years. Tubb, who has emphysema, is credited with popularizing the honky-tonk style of country music that developed in Texas in the 1940s.

The award was accepted by his daughter, Karen.

"Hee Haw," which has been on the air for 15 years, won awards as top country music television show and No. 1 gospel act for its quartet of Roy Clark, Buck Owens, Grandpa Jones and Kenny Price.

Bathhouse being sold

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The hot tub has been drained and pillows, towels and turn-of-the century erotic photos are being sold as the lavish Sutro Baths bathhouse closes, a victim of the AIDS scare.

At a last party, towel-clad patrons burned AIDS prevention brochures and scorned anti-bathhouse politicians. The owner, Bill Jones, blamed the closing on declining attendance due to fears of catching acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

"It's ghostly in here," Jones said. "I see ghosts all over here — except they're ghosts in towels, not white sheets."

DEAR ABBY

Landscaper's wife thinks he should trim talk

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a landscaper, and right now he's working on a job that has a lot of apartments. I always ask him what his day was like, and he always has some interesting stories to tell me.

For the last two weeks he's been talking about this nice-looking red-haired lady who tells him what a great tree trimmer he is. Yesterday he told me that she came out with her flatiron in one hand, a roll of electrical tape in the other and helplessly asked, "Is this what you call electrical tape?" Of course he fixed her iron during his break, and she gave him a cold beer for his help.

He said the men at work asked him if he had something going with the redhead. (Then he laughed.) He failed to tell me whether he fixed her iron inside her apartment or out.

Maybe I'm too touchy, but I don't feel comfortable when my husband's co-workers ask him if he has something going. Should I worry? — STAY-AT-HOME WIFE

DEAR WIFE: No. Your husband sounds like an accommodating fellow who makes friends easily. Don't worry. It's the husband who comes home with no stories to tell, never meets anybody and nothing ever happens to that I'd worry about.

DEAR ABBY: I have a serious problem. I am a 20-year-old woman who is in love with two men — a father and his son.

I met them both at the same time and was immediately attracted to the father. He is 40. He was attracted to me, too, and we had sex together the very first night I met him. He told me he was living with a lady, so if we were to be lovers he would have to be very careful. We would arrange to meet for a few hours at his son's apartment. The son is 21 and goes to college.

Well, one afternoon while waiting for the father (who never did show up), I became involved (sex) with the son, who had more to offer (sexwise) than his father, so that's how I became confused between the two of them.

The son says he loves me, and so does the father. I love them both. What should I do? — CONFUSED

DEAR CONFUSED: The "confusion" you feel is a valuable warning signal. You need counseling to learn the difference between sex and love.

It appears that not only are you using the father and son, they are also using you. Forget them both. They are double trouble.

Projects honored

Mrs. Joseph Oei, outgoing president of Midland County Medical Society Auxiliary, recently received a State Certificate of Achievement for the group's projects this year, which included child abuse education for physicians, dentists and community programs; continuation of the drug and alcohol abuse program for city schools; three "living dolls" dressed for the Salvation Army; three scholarships for Midland students to study health-related fields; sponsorship of Doctor's Day honoring local physicians.

Mrs. Oei was honored at a luncheon and installation of new officers. Other outgoing officers honored were Mrs. Shelton Viney, president-elect; Mrs. Thurston Dean, first vice-president; Mrs. William Hibbitts, second vice-president; Mrs. Kirby Tarry, secretary; and Mrs. Jay Mendez, treasurer.

Weight lifting raises blood pressure

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've been watching these weightlifters on television and I've begun to wonder how healthy they really are. I know that they must be strong and I wouldn't want any of them mad at me, but a lot of them seem to be overweight if not actually fat. What I want to ask you about, however, is their blood pressure. Doesn't a person's blood pressure go up when he strains to lift heavy weights the way people do in competition? — Mickey, Bellingham, Wash.

Dear Mickey: A Canadian study has shown very significant increases in blood pressure during weight lifting exercises, but the increases were found to be temporary. One person's pressure was recorded at 450/310.

Dr. Duncan MacDougall, of McMaster University in Hamilton, Ontario, who conducted the study, warns against weightlifting exercises for individuals with high blood pressure. Instead, he recommends aerobic exercises such as walking and swimming, during which blood pressure remains low.

Dear Dr. Solomon: In some cases when a person swallows some poison, either accidentally or on purpose, there is an effort made to get him to vomit so that the poison will leave his system. At least that's the way I've seen it in the movies. Wouldn't it be better and safer if the person was given a drug that would cancel out the effects of the poison? It may not be as exciting for the movie, but I think it would actually work better. — Alvin, Cincinnati, Ohio

Dear Alvin: There is a certain logic to what you say. The drawback is that there are few drugs that can be used in the manner you suggest.

If an antidote for a poison is available, it can prove extremely helpful. One example is the use of glucose in the treatment of patients with hyperinsulinemia (too much insulin in the blood). In general, however, effective antidotes to poisons are relatively rare.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I believe you once had an item in your column about how burns to children can be prevented by adjusting the water heater to a lower temperature. Would you please repeat it? — Mrs. W.L., Bryan, Texas

Dear Mrs. L.: One recommendation is for water heaters to be set at between 120-130 degrees Fahrenheit. Water this hot is sufficient for all household requirements, yet reduces the risk of scalding should a child accidentally come into contact with very hot water.

For Rebecca, Coatesville, Penna.: Many of my patients who are allergic to one member of a family of foods may very well be allergic to other foods within that same family. Someone who is allergic to peanuts, for example, may also be allergic to green peas or beans. And someone who is allergic to brussel sprouts may also be allergic to radishes and cauliflower.

As for fruits, it is well to remember that pears and apples are members of the same family, as are peaches and cherries.

Neil Solomon, M.D., is a columnist for Los Angeles Times Syndicate. If you have a medical question, write Dr. Solomon at 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon will not give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.

Dog's death frees money for school

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — The death of Musketeer, the last of 150 stray dogs who shared a multimillion-dollar inheritance from the estate of a Quaker Oil heiress, frees a $12 million fortune for Auburn University's veterinary school, college officials said.

The dog, believed to have been 18 to 20 years old, died over the weekend in a Jupiter, Fla., kennel. It was the last of 150 pets owned by Eleanor Ritchey at the time of her death in 1968.

She willed her estate to Auburn's Veterinary School, but stipulated that the fortune first be used to care for her pets for 20 years or until their deaths, whichever came first.

Miss Ritchey developed an interest in Auburn through her veterinarian, Dr. Ivan Fredrickson, whose son went to the school.

Frederickson said Monday that he last saw Musketeer, a black mixed-breed, about 10 days ago.

"He looked like he might go at anytime," he said.

University trustees learned Monday that Musketeer had died of old age.

"We ought to declare a school holiday," said R.C. "Red" Bamberg, the trustees' vice chairman.

Miss Ritchey's original endowment of $4.3 million has grown to $12 million since her death and accumulated an estimated $900,000 in interest in 1983 alone.

Auburn has been receiving interest on the money since a 1973 court settlement with relatives who had challeged the will.

The interest has been used to build the Scott-Ritchey Research Center at the university, according to Frank Hoerlien, head of the veterinary school. The first two phases of the complex cost $3.3 million and are to be completed this year.

The center will specialize in finding cures for diseases in pets, primarily dogs, and is one of only two facilities "of this magnitude" in the nation, Hoerlien said. The other is at Cornell University in New York.

The school will continue to use only the interest on the $12 million principal, Hoerlien said.

"This (the dog's death) won't change anything except that we'll be getting a little bit more money," Hoerlien said. "It would be foolish to use the principal when we have an ongoing program."

Miss Ritchey's dogs lived on the family ranch in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., until 1981 when the land was sold for a golf course. The nine dogs surviving at that time were moved to the Jupiter kennel.

Arena may not be ready for Michael

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Superstar Michael Jackson and his brothers have waited so long to sign a contract for Rupp Arena that a planned June 22 concert kicking off their summer tour is probably impossible, an arena official says.

Jackson

Time has just about run out for arranging mail-order ticket sales and advertising for June 22, said Bill Pickett, an official with Lexington Center, where the arena is located. "The following weekend is still possible," he added.

Jackson's mother, Katherine, announced two weeks ago that the six brothers would open their tour June 22 in Lexington. But Rupp Arena operations director Bill Humphrey said the arena still had no contract Monday afternoon.

BALTIMORE (AP) — Plans are afoot to revive the "Saturday Night Club," H.L. Mencken's impromptu beer and musical entertainment sessions, when the rowhouse where the writer spent most of his life opens to the public.

The three-story west Baltimore house is scheduled to open June 15 as a museum and entertainment and reception center.

Mencken is "probably getting a good chuckle in his grave" over the plans, said Jeanne Fetting, who directed the project.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jane Goodall, one of the world's leading authorities on chimpanzees, has won the $50,000 J. Paul Getty Wildlife Conservation Prize for helping "millions of people understand the importance of wildlife conservation to life on this planet," says the president of the World Wildlife Fund-U.S.

Goodall

Dr. Goodall is best known for her pioneering research on chimpanzees in Africa. She has written several books on chimpanzees, and her work has been featured in films by the National Geographic Society.

"She is indeed...one to whom we look for continued guidance in preserving and protecting our natural environment," Russell Train, the fund president, said Monday.

Born in England, Dr. Goodall has spent her career researching primates throughout Africa. She makes her home in Tanzania, where she is based at the Gombe Stream Research Center.

LONDON (AP) — With a farewell sung in Italian to an audience that included Prince Charles, British opera star Sir Geraint Evans ended his 36-year career.

The Welsh miner's son stood Monday night as the Royal Opera House chorus sang the Welsh national anthem, with Charles, Prince of Wales, leading those who joined in from the audience.

Statler Brothers take four music awards

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Statler Brothers, country music veterans, say they found no special satisfaction in upstaging younger rival Alabama by taking home four Music City News awards.

"We don't look at it as competition," said Don Reid of the Statler Brothers. "We've been fortunate enough to be around a while, and we're proud of Alabama. But we don't look for competition."

The Statlers, a quartet which has been together for more than 20 years, were honored Monday night for best comedy act, top vocal group, single of the year for "Elizabeth" and No. 1 television special for "Another Evening With The Statler Brothers — Heroes, Legends and Friends."

Alabama, a four-piece pop-country band which has dominated country music awards for three years, won two awards: band of the year and album of the year for the million-selling "The Closer You Get."

"There was a time when we won a whole lot less than the Statlers. I'm proud for them," said Alabama guitarist-fiddler Jeff Cook.

The winners were chosen by subscribers to The Music City News, a monthly country music publication in Nashville. The 18th annual awards presentation was broadcast live from the Grand Ole Opry House on syndicated television to half the country and will be shown later on other stations.

The Statlers, who have won more than 300 awards during their career, were hosts of the show along with Larry Gatlin and Sylvia.

Janie Fricke was voted top female vocalist over veterans Barbara Mandrell and Loretta Lynn and rising stars Reba McEntire and Charly McClain.

Lee Greenwood was named male vocalist of the year over George Jones, Conway Twitty, Ricky Skaggs and Don Williams.

"A whole lot of dreams have come true for me," Miss Fricke said in her acceptance speech. "With a lot of hard work and believing in yourself, just about any dream can come true."

"It's funny how your eyes get real bright when you got tears in them," said Greenwood, who dedicated the award to his grandmother, who encouraged him to choose music over baseball.

Ernest Tubb, the 70-year-old "Texas Troubadour," won the "Living Legend Award" for contributions to country music for at least 25 years. Tubb, who has emphysema, is credited with popularizing the honky-tonk style of country music that developed in Texas in the 1940s.

The award was accepted by his daughter, Karen.

"Hee Haw," which has been on the air for 15 years, won awards as top country music television show and No. 1 gospel act for its quartet of Roy Clark, Buck Owens, Grandpa Jones and Kenny Price.

Bathhouse being sold

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The hot tub has been drained and pillows, towels and turn-of-the century erotic photos are being sold as the lavish Sutro Baths bathhouse closes, a victim of the AIDS scare.

At a last party, towel-clad patrons burned AIDS prevention brochures and scorned anti-bathhouse politicians. The owner, Bill Jones, blamed the closing on declining attendance due to fears of catching acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

"It's ghostly in here," Jones said. "I see ghosts all over here — except they're ghosts in towels, not white sheets."

Unique Windshield Repair will come to you to serve you better

Is your windshield cracked, chipped or knicked? Does that break bother you while driving? If it does you have probably thought about having the windshield replaced. Well, replacement may not be neccessary. Unique Windshield Repair can repair any crack up to six inches.

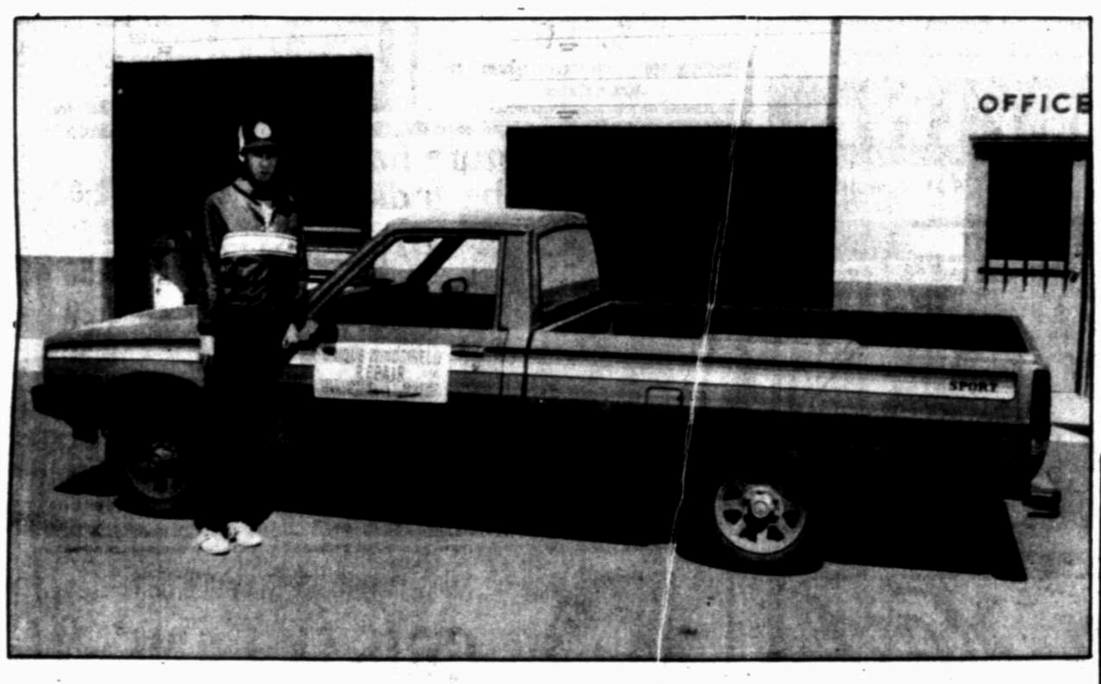

Bill Connor, owner of Unique Windshield Repair, works from his mobile unit. So you do not have to worry about how to get your car to the repair shop and then on to work. All you need to do is give Bill a call at 685-1967 and he will come to you.

You may be wondering what exactly it is that he does to repair the window. To understand that you must first know that a crack occurs when the outer layer of glass, which is bonded to a plastic like layer of material, begins to pull away. To eliminate this separation, Bill injects a resin into the crack with extreme pressure. The resin then acts like a glue and bonds the layers back together. This entire process only takes approximately 15 minutes.

Once Unique Windshield has repaired your window it will be back to normal and looking great. They also garrantee their work not to run.

The charge for this service seems so minimal when compared to the cost of a new windshield. The base price is $20.00 and then it goes up from there depending on the number of chips and their severity.

If you windshield needs repair, call Bill at 685-1967 today

Bill Conner, owner of Unique Windshield Repair, can repair your cracked windshield before it becomes to big of a problem. If you would like more information, call Bill at 685-1967.

California voting closes out primary campaign

By DOUG WILLIS
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — California Democrats have the final word in the marathon Democratic presidential primary struggle, as the Golden State prepares to weigh in with its largest-in-the-nation bloc of 306 delegates.

Four other states also hold primaries today, but Walter Mondale, Gary Hart and the Rev. Jesse Jackson planned to end their campaigning in California and then settle in for a long night. California polls close at 8 p.m. PDT, three hours after primary voting ends in New Jersey.

Republicans have a presidential primary today, but nobody was paying much attention since President Reagan already has the delegates for renomination and is unopposed on his home state ballot.

There were few races below the presidential contest to spark voter interest in most of California's 23,398 precincts.

Nearly 80 percent of the 141 incumbent state legislators and members of Congress seeking re-election this year have no primary opposition. Nine statewide ballot propositions, including $1 billion in jail, prison and park bonds, generated little controversy, and there were no other statewide races.

As Mondale inched closer toward the Democratic nomination, a California poll released Monday reported the former vice president pulling ahead of Hart 41 percent to 34 percent, with Jackson trailing at 15 percent. Earlier polls showed Hart and Mondale neck and neck.

"There seems to be a barely perceptible shift - glacier-like -toward Mondale," pollster Mervin Field said.

There's an extra element of uncertainty in polls this year because the surveys measure popular support, but there is no popular vote on the presidential ballot.

Instead, Democrats are voting directly for individual delegates. Altogether, there are 1,589 candidates running in 45 congressional district races for 209 seats.

Another 97 delegates, to be named later, will be divided among candidates who win in 42 or more congressional district delegate races in proportion to the number of delegates elected Tuesday.

The primary rules — nicknamed "winner take more" by their authors — were drafted to entice Democratic candidates for president to spend more time campaigning here by giving them the opportunity to win most or even all of the state's delegates with a small majority in popular support.

Mondale: Primaries built strength

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — After a final round of handshaking in California, Walter F. Mondale is heading back to Minnesota to await the results of the last five primaries in the "long, arduous process" leading to the Democratic presidential nomination.

"I feel very good about these primaries," Mondale told reporters Monday in Albuquerque, N.M.

Mondale has predicted he would have the 1,967 delegates needed for a convention majority by 11:59 a.m. CDT on Wednesday.

Mondale aides claimed the former vice president's delegate total was climbing steadily and had reached 1,750 by mid-day Monday after previously uncommitted delegates moved to his column.

"We are extremely encouraged by the substantial movement of uncommitted and unpledged delegates to the Mondale cause," Mondale campaign manager James A. Johnson said Monday.

A total of 486 delegates were at stake today in primaries in California, New Jersey, New Mexico, South Dakota and West Virginia.

In a campaign swing that began in New Jersey at 7 a.m. EDT on Monday and ended at nearly 10 p.m. PDT, Mondale campaigned in four of the five primary states, missing only South Dakota.

Upon his return to California, Mondale met supporters at the Burbank Airport and then flew to San Francisco for a rally at the Fairmont Hotel.

In California, Mondale renewed his criticism of Sen. Gary Hart for being late in declaring his support for the nuclear freeze, a proposal that Mondale called "a California idea" fostered by Sen. Alan Cranston, once one of Mondale's rivals for the presidential nomination.

He told supporters at the Albuquerque airport that he had flown 5,620 miles in 24 hours.
