

Second Reading of Resolution To Drop CAB Due at Council Meeting

The second reading of the joint resolution, proposed by City Councilwoman Carolyn Jordan, in which the city of Lubbock and Lubbock Independent School District "withdrew their active participation from the Community Action Board", will be read Thursday, December 12th.

The resolution stated: "Whereas, the City and County of Lubbock, by Joint Resolution, created the Community Action Board; and

Whereas, the City, County and School District recognize that the programs currently sponsored by the Community Action Board have been beneficial to the citizens of the City and County; and

Whereas, the County has withdrawn from active participation on the Community Action Board; and

Whereas, there has been uncertainty of adequate funding for the Community Action

Agency by the Federal government and there has been low attendance at Board meetings, and these factors in turn have contributed to inefficiencies and ineffectiveness in the operation of the agency; and

Whereas, the City and School District would like to insure to the best of their abilities that these worthwhile programs continue for the benefit of the citizens of our community; Now Therefore:

Be it resolved by the City Council of the City of Lubbock and the Board of Trustees of the Lubbock Independent School District;

That the City of Lubbock and the Lubbock Independent School District hereby withdraw their active participation from the Community Action Board;

That the Lubbock Independent School District hereby expresses a desire to be responsible for the sponsorship and administration of the Neighborhood Youth Corps Program and the In-School Head

Start Program which it presently operates; and

That the Lubbock Independent School District hereby expresses that it is willing to sponsor the Day-Care Center Program under Head Start in the event the Head Start Policy Board is unable to do so, but in any event it desires the Head Start Policy Board to continue administration of the Day Care Program; and

That the City of Lubbock provide through existing City departments, facilities and programs, programs for Outreach, Planning, Equal Opportunity, Planned Parenthood (if available), and any other new programs without being limited, but such as Senior Citizens Activities, Health and Medical Care and Youth Activities; and

That appropriate State and Federal agencies be notified of this resolution showing the intention of the parties to insure the continuance of these worthwhile programs for the benefit of the community."

Longest Living Heart Transplant Recipient Dies After 6 Years

Indianapolis — (NBNS) — Louis B. Russell, the world's longest living heart recipient, is dead of a heart attack. He was 49, and was given a new heart Aug. 24, 1968. He lived with it for six years, three months and two days.

"He did very well up until the end. Then he deteriorated very rapidly," said Dr. V. Eric Kemp, Russell's cardiologist.

Russell stole the heart of America after he received his new heart—he made speeches across the country, urging heart disease patients to persevere and not give up hope.

Special guest singers will be the Brown Sisters and Mrs. Lucie Toines.

The concert will be something to see as well as to hear. The public is cordially invited to come out and be a part of this annual program.

There will be a reception in fellowship hall immediately after the concert.

teacher, hailed from Indianapolis. He lived an extremely active life and even continued to smoke after getting his new heart.

He had a reasoned mind and he accepted the reality of his position. "I'm not worried," he said when he returned to the Medical College Hospital of Virginia in Richmond on Oct. 17. "My philosophy is that I lived yesterday, I lived today, and I've made plans to live tomorrow. What happens happens."

"The man upstairs decided for all of us, and when he decides, no doctor nor anyone else can prevent this," Russell said.

Russell was the 34th person to receive a heart transplant. His was necessary because of a 17 year old gunshot wound.

From that point, Russell celebrated three birthdays—his own, the anniversary of the transplant and the birthday of the donor of his new heart.

Russell's death now leaves Bette Anick, who received a new heart Oct. 21, 1968, as the longest surviving heart transplant victim. Russell is black, Ms. Anick is white.

Russell never improved after he was taken to the Richmond Hospital back in October. His condition, worsened and he suffered "a serious disturbance of heart rhythm." He was then placed on the critical list and died Nov. 27.

It appeared that Russell had died of "conventional coronary

Maddox Hangs Up Pickhandles

Atlanta — (NBNS) — After 10 years, Lester Maddox has hung up the pickhandles he once used to chase blacks from his restaurant and instead is urging everybody to stay for dinner.

Maddox, the one time, die-hard segregationist who put in four years as governor of Georgia and another four as lieutenant governor, was on hand himself to welcome one and all to the new Pickrick Restaurant in Underground Atlanta. So named because it is among the series of shops and restaurants dug out of what once was street level before the North burned the city to the ground during the Civil War.

"I might just set up a special room for segregationists and another room for those that want integration," Maddox said, making a stab at telling a joke while punching the cash register at his

Vilifying WASPS

Since the majority in America is the white Protestant—the WASP as those prejudiced against them refer to them—he is the target of every minority gripe and racial complaint.

That's inevitable in part, and to be expected and accepted by the majority up to a point. But the WASPS of America are being vilified at an accelerating pace, with more and more venom and misrepresentation thrown into the effort.

We see, for example, a new flood of films depicting the Spanish and Mexicans as always - honorable, always exploited by the evil white American westerner, usually an uncouth hoodlum type—in contrast to the gentle, educated, well bred Mexican! It's not a true picture. (Some of these films, such as a recent Burt Lancaster vehicle, are made in Italy or Spain.)

It has become fashionable in some metropolitan areas (or cesspools) to describe all WASPS in derogatory, hateful terms. Few of the bigots spreading such poison realize the irony of the effort—race baiters accusing others of what they do!

Every citizen of every minority race in America, including the recently arrived Puerto Ricans, Chicanos, Cubans, who most often forget it, should keep in mind that the WASPS they vilify largely built this democracy with its guarantees for every citizen and minority.

American governments run primarily by WASPS passed the laws which let them into America, which allow them freedoms they didn't have where they came from in most cases. American governments largely run by WASPS created our free enterprise economy, which with its faults and failings, offers the new arrival a better chance than he can find anywhere else in the world.

These good things the WASPS did. Television producers who repeatedly vilify the WASP in America, who always make him the hated criminal, crook or exploiter, the "establishment" individual, these producers—most of them of a minority—should think twice about what they are doing to the nation, in creating dissension, disunity and criminal behavior motivated by hatred and bigotry.

The Great Films

In recent months Americans have been offered new versions of many classic stories and films. Some have been made for television, and as would be expected, they are the least attractive.

We have seen "Great Expectations", and before that "Treasure Island". A new version of "Robinson Crusoe" was recently shown.

None of the later versions approached in quality earlier film masterpieces, with masterful character performances, of the same great stories. The all time great films are available, could be shown in black and white.

Yet show - biz types, to make a new buck, themselves, undertake to produce new versions. At today's costs, they cannot match the scenes of grandeur and adventure in many of the old greats. The acting is inferior in almost every case. (U.S. commercial television has never captured the genuine feel of the average American, nor the sensitivity of fine character acting.)

The great films of all time can seldom be improved upon by modern day producers, especially aiming at television or influenced by U.S. commercial television. Out with the moth-eaten, half-baked characters of new versions of the classics! Down with producers so ego-inflated they presume to improve on yesterday's masterpiece productions and performances! Who needs them?

As I See It

by T.J. Patterson

There are so many problems in our community, that, if you are a weak person, you'll believe there's no hope in the black community. One comes to mind, as just last week a young sister confronted me with the fact that she had been fired from her job at a local eating establishment. What bothered me was that she was apparently fired for what she believed in.

It bothered me because the young sister was defending

...DOWN TO BUSINESS

DR. BERKELEY G. BURRELL
President, National Business League

Unity For Economic Survival

Black Muslim Minister Louis Farrakhan urged Black businessmen at the Annual NBL Convention to seriously consider ways to work cooperatively for the economic survival of Black America.

Speaking at the Minority Enterprise Luncheon held during the Atlanta convention, October 23 -26, Minister Farrakhan electrified the audience with his message on the convention theme, "The Power Of Unity."

"If just this room alone could unite this afternoon," Farrakhan told the group representing the bulk of the Black economic power in this country, "this room alone possesses the power to lift 30 million Black people in America up from the mud, up from poverty and want and nakedness and squalor. But these that are here must learn the power of unity, and then adopt those principles that will cause us to achieve it."

In what many consider to be the highlight of the four day conference of seminars and workshops on business, government and communications, Minister Farrakhan, the national representative of the Honorable Elijah Muhammad, excited the audience by both praising them and exhorting them to action.

"Yes, you have individual knowledge and individual expertise. You have individual accomplishment, and you her right to free speech. What she didn't realize was, that in Lubbock, residents of the black community don't have free speech when it comes to expressing one's opinion.

Here is the way she explained the story to me. "Me Patterson", she said, "the manager fired me because he placed your order at the bottom of the stack, and I told the girl working on the order that he could easily fill your order because yours was not that difficult to fill and we had to wait for the others."

She continued, "He told me to shut up. I told him I had the right to free speech. This apparently made him angry and he fired me on the spot."

The young sister left the establishment shocked at what had happened. She related her experience to me with tears in her eyes. "I thought one could express ones self when you knew that you were right", she said.

Since I was indirectly involved in the matter, I felt as though I should do something about it. I called the manager, and he told me he fired the sister because "she wouldn't keep her mouth shut". I asked him if he understood what management was all about and if he was aware of the fact that he overreacted in the matter.

In talking with the man, by telephone, he advised me have a degree in this and in that. But until we learn the value of pooling those resources intellectually as well as financially, until we learn that unless all of us make it, no one of us makes it. . . . "And unless we learn that, this will only be another one of 74 conventions where you meet together and drink and socialize and party and hang out and talk trash, and talk about how much money you got last year, how you did that one in, and wangled this money out of the government, begged for that, crawled for this, and stole that," Farrakhan preached as the audience roared its acknowledgement.

"Pardon my frankness," he chuckled, "but you should never have invited a Muslim, if you didn't want to hear the truth."

Graciously commending NBL President Dr. Berkeley G. Burrell for selecting such a powerful theme as "The Power of Unity," Minister Farrakhan constantly sought to emphasize its meaning.

"Unless we give up the pettiness of the white American decadent philosophy of 'rugged individualism' that has brought America now to the brink of ruin, unless we can see the value of our cooperative working together for a common end, then we might as well say this is nothing more than another party on the social calendar of Who's Who in Black business in America," he declared.

Frequently reminding the audience that he was speaking on behalf of the Honorable Elijah Muhammad, Minister Farrakhan admonished them to think about the future survival of the Black masses.

"White America is in trouble herself," he explained. "She cannot employ her own unemployed, how is she going to look after 30 million Black people? She is finding it increasingly difficult to feed her own, how can she continue to give handouts to 30 million? If she has always looked out for herself first, which is not wrong, then we in the economic sector of Black America, have got to consider how are we going to survive if their economy falls apart."

Minister Farrakhan captivated the audience with his masterful oratorical style, using his hands, changing his voice, and telling stories to convey a message of the need for Black unity. He was interrupted several times by applause and joyful shouts from what appeared to have been a relatively conservative group.

In keeping with the theme of the convention, Minister Farrakhan crystallized the essence of its meaning when he said, "Unity is not a word, but a principle of action. You can't have unity unless you give up something, and you got to give up those things that offend the very principle of unity."

This effort, perhaps more than any other proved that we as a people are ready to get down to business.

JACK ANDERSON'S WEEKLY SPECIAL

SINO-AMERICAN RELATIONS

by Jack Anderson

(From United Feature Syndicate, Inc.)

Washington—The year 1975 could bring full diplomatic relations between the United States and the People's Republic of China, according to our sources.

The reason for the optimism is the dramatic announcement, during Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's recent five day trip to Peking, that President Ford will visit China next year. In the wake of Richard Nixon's successes in China, our sources reason, Ford would not lay his prestige on the line without some assurance of a substantial breakthrough.

Then there is Kissinger's reception in Peking. True, he did not gain an audience with party chairman Mao Tsetung. But he was extended an unprecedented courtesy: Everywhere Kissinger went, even on sightseeing tours, he was escorted by the new Chinese Foreign Minister, Chiao Kuan-hua.

Only one major problem now stands between Washington and Peking. As long as we officially recognize the Nationalist Chinese government of Chiang Kai-shek, Peking will hear nothing about establishing full relations.

There is speculation, however, that a solution to even this thorny problem is in the works. It could eventually be settled in a manner first proposed by Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash. The Jackson plan calls for maintaining just a diplomatic "mission" in Taiwan and a full scale embassy in Peking. There are signs, say some experts, that the mainland Chinese might buy such a scheme.

The State Department, meanwhile, is discouraging all talk of diplomatic recognition between Washington and Peking. President Ford's visit, they say, is simply another step in the long road to "normalization" of Sino-American relations.

Economic Survey: We have been conducting our own economic survey across America. We have looked not for economic trends, measured in dull statistics, but for the human side of the story. For the economic pinch is a story best told in human terms.

Everywhere, we have found Americans tightening their belts. In Seattle's affluent Bellevue community, housewives are buying chicken and cheaper meat cuts. One Boeing engineer told us that inflation had cut his purchasing power 25 per cent. His wife is now looking for work so they can maintain their living standards.

In the mountains 100 miles away, lumber workers can't find jobs. One lumberjack was thrown into the air by a timber rig. He landed on his back, causing injuries that sent him to the hospital. Witnesses said the accident was the company's fault. Yet the company refused even to hold his job for him.

In Houston, oil millionaires are piling up record profits while they take hundreds of thousands from the government in tax benefits. In Carrizo Springs, a smaller Texas town, the mother of seven children is also collecting from the government—$54 a month. She used her first welfare payment to buy sheets for her children's crowded, broken-down beds.

Power Problems: The once rosy future of atomic energy is slowly turning black.

Not too long ago, American planners were predicting that by the turn of the century, the nation would be running on nuclear power. Billions have been poured into research and construction. Now, however, the nuclear energy program is in deep trouble.

First, there is the problem of safety. Nuclear plants would produce enough radioactive plutonium to poison the entire world. The simplest accident could result in a disaster of major proportions.

With atomic power plants spread across America, moreover, terrorist groups would have easy access to nuclear materials from which they could conceivably construct nuclear weapons.

Citizen groups living near operating reactors have taken up the fight against them. Besides the safety considerations, they point out, atomic reactor construction has helped push up utility bills all across the nation.

The Atomic Energy Commission, of course, downplays the dangers of nuclear reactors. But from their own files, we have obtained evidence that throws a shadow across the future of nuclear energy.

The internal documents bluntly warn that the nation may run out of the necessary uranium supply before technical problems are overcome. Already, technical difficulties have forced several nuclear processing plants to shut down.

Voodoo Coup? The voodoo drums have been resounding the past few weeks in Haiti and Haitian exile communities around the world. The reason: "Mama Doc" Duvalier, widow of the late dictator "Papa Doc", refused permission for a prominent exile to return to Haiti for the funeral of his father. In voodoo circles, that's a no-no.

The exile is Colonel Max Dominique, Mama Doc's imposing, six-foot eight-inch son-in-law. According to insiders, she feared that Dominique might stir rebellious thoughts among the citizens of Haiti.

Now, say our sources, Dominique may be mad enough to try.

The titular ruler of Haiti, of course, is Jean-Claude "Baby Doc" Duvalier, who spends much of his day playing the guitar and riding his motorbike around the palace grounds in Port-Au-Prince. He still runs the country, say

HUMAN RIGHTS ACTIVIST

"MAN'S QUEST FOR TRUTH"

One of the major occurrences in the youth cultures in the United States, Canada, much of Europe and in parts of Asia, particularly Japan and India, has been a dramatic turning away from conventional religion. Many see this as unusual and find themselves troubled as old values are forsaken and as strange new experiments replace the rituals inherited from the past.

We should be grateful to our youth for reminding us—in the new search of answers to their unanswered questions—that neither religion nor science serve best, when the search for truth is shrouded by outworn dogmas inherited from the past.

Religion, like science, represents at heart man's continuing search for truth. Both science and religion are alive and generate enthusiastic loyalties when seen as a quest or journey rather than as the reporting of how one or many may have arrived at some assumed to be final destination.

Within religion and within science there has always been a continuing tension between those who claim to seek and those who claim to fully know. What we tend to forget, all too readily is that science, as we know it today, is relatively new. The novel ingredient in man's quest for truth has been the claim by modern science (which is, in reality, an infant discipline of scarcely more than a 300 year past) that its tenets or principles are more true than the truths or experiences which are encountered in religion.

Even religionists have gone along with this latter notion. Hence modern religion has for the past several hundred years tended to accept a second place in relation to what we speak of traditionally as physical science. It is true that the religion of some 300 to 400 years ago contained many notions which we would see today as superstition. Still the main problem of religion just after the Reformation (as well as during and before it) was its static nature. It tended to see and concern itself with a destination at which it assumed that it had arrived.

It was into this set of static or seemingly settled circumstances that modern science stepped and began to make its present ascendancy over religion.

The ascendancy of science was relatively slow. Modern day Protestants often recall with a sense of benign condescension the reluctance of the 15th to 18th century popes to accept the then-amazing scientific discoveries, first, that the world was not flat but round and, later, that the earth revolved around the sun and not vice versa. We tend to forget the heated legal and moral controversy which raged in this country as late as the 1920's with the national spotlight focussed on a teacher in Tennessee who was fired for challenging in his classroom the Genesis version of man's creation.

What is happening with our young people today is the logical end result of a trend which began several hundred years ago. When religion presented itself as the process of explaining the end of man's quest for truth, and was tripped up in so doing, the scientists claimed that they could do the same job better.

For several hundred years, science looked down upon religion as so much superstition and it largely convinced the world that it had a corner on practically all that man needed to know. Well, our young people today are saying in effect to both modern science and modern religion that there are still many things that neither does not know.

When we see young people turning to ancient cults and inventing new ones, what they are saying, to all of us is that life has—and doubtless always will have—many mysteries. They want no dogmatic religion to tell them that all life's mysteries are already solved. Neither do they want science to do the same job of making a pretense at omniscience.

In the Hebrew religion, there are no strict dogmatists. The rabbi ideally is a teacher who does things. He relates the inherited experience of the Jewish community as it has sought, in countless ways, for truth.

Secondarily, the rabbi spurs the faithful on to continue the journey toward truth or ultimate reality which for all mankind must never end. We need to recapture this spirit, perhaps best (as at least theoretically, with the Jewish people) within the inherited traditions. Our young people have been misled by both dogmatic religion and dogmatic science. St. Paul wrote aptly that we now see as through a glass darkly. Only at the journey's end may we know fully and not in part. This was the spirit of such great religious teachers as a William Ellery Channing, a Phillips Brooks, a Harry Emerson Fosdick, a John XXIII, and a Theodore Parker Ferris. It has been true also of the many Einsteins of the world. May their kind of tribe become legion.

Let's not let the mystery get out of life by either mysterious "mumbo-jumbo" (whether religious or scientific) or by our forgetting that to be ripe is also to be rotten. We should be grateful that our youth today are reminding us in their own peculiar way, that to travel is life and that our first journey's end is never reached until we, one by one, have passed beyond the oneway gate called death.

that she could pick up her check at the office or she could wait until it was regular pay day. It has been my understanding, that when a person is fired on the spot, the employer has to have the check in hand. Apparently this didn't happen at this establishment, who serve their products to many blacks each week.

Anyway, it was an interesting thing to happen in Lubbock, and it makes it rather difficult for our young black people. True, I don't know the complete story because I wasn't inside the kitchen of this business. It is a strange thing. I only hope that black people in Lubbock will learn how to deal with this type of problem.

As I See It, the image of this establishment has changed in my eyesight. This manager needs a course in management in order to prevent this type of situation happening in the future. What this young manager didn't realize was that many people from the black community will take note of what is happening. In communities where the black community is really together, he would have problems.

The Lubbock Urban Transportation Study is a really big our State Department sources. But he's only 22 years old and has a number of less burdensome interests.

Speak Up: The Russian embassy in Washington is located on a main thoroughfare, next door to a building which houses a private club. Atop the embassy are several large antennas. We recently asked an intelligence expert if the Soviets could actually hear messages transmitted from Moscow. "Well," said the intelligence analyst with a twinkle in his eye, "I don't know about the reception in the embassy. But we can hear pretty well in the club next door."

Diplomatic Pouch: One reason Henry Kissinger gets along so well with the mainland Chinese, say our diplomatic sources, could be his unqualified love for their food. "He glories in their cuisine," one insider told us. "He just wolfs it down." Every time Henry goes to Peking, we were told, he gains about five pounds and has to diet for weeks thereafter.

thing in the City of Lubbock. At a recent meeting last week in the council chambers at City Hall, there was no representation from the eastern part of the city. It would appear to me that input from residents of east Lubbock would have been seen from those persons running the show.

This study, without any doubt, involves the transportation plan of all citizens of our community. Of most importance is the construction of Interstate 27, a most vital artery coming to our community. From what I've found out, this large project is apparently coming through the eastern part of the city. Why was there no input from residents of this community? If governmental funds will be used to construct and pay relocation assistance, there should have been some input from the residents of that area.

As I See It, the policy advisory committee, with Alton Brazell as chairman, should have requested this type of input. On the other hand, those persons who serve on the steering committee should realize the importance of input of all residents involved.

It is time for those elected officials to realize that all citizens are concerned about participating in projects which will affect their lives as well as the future of our community. The way I see it, the Lubbock Urban Transportation Study needs to be looked into before decisions, which were made last week at city hall, becomes a reality.

It would be a wonderful thing if the members of the South Plains Association of Governments (SPAG) would consider revamping their board of directors so some of that Economic Development Administration (EDA) money could be utilized to develop our community in Lubbock and West Texas. It would make a lot of sense for those members to consider this type of move.

City Councilman Bryce Campbell, for your information, you still haven't showed how representation by the six districts would be a disadvantage to the city of Lubbock. Don't you think it would be a healthy thing to reconsider your position on the recent council's decision?

Police Beat

Assault

Emma Bradley, 1720 East 2nd Place, reported to Lubbock police that a man whom she knew entered her house when her daughter let him in. According to the police report, she said the man "did commence to strike and beat on her for no reason."

She told Lubbock police that she hadn't seen him in two years. She also made known that the man had apparently been doped up.

She told police that she would file charges this week.

Burglary

Robert Scales, 2715 East 10th Street, reported that someone unknown gained entry to his house by breaking a glass and unlatching the door to gain entry.

In gaining entry, the person caused approximately $10 worth of damage to the house.

It was learned that a combination turntable and tape player, two tapes and three coats were taken. Items were valued at $357.

Assault

An eighteen year old woman reported to Lubbock police that persons unknown entered her residence one night last week and assaulted her. She told police one of the men hit her in the left eye with his fist and kicked her in the groin.

She told police that she was not going to the hospital for treatment.

House Burglary

Percy Hines, Jr., 2014 Birch Avenue, reported to Lubbock police that persons broke into his house through the back door of his residence one day last week. He said the unknown persons apparently came through a storm door glass to one door and pushed the glass out of the way to get into the house.

Taken from the house were three watches from his bedroom. They were valued at approximately $200. There was approximately $25 worth of damage done to the door.

House Burglary

Thelma Harvey, 3021 East 19th Street, reported that persons unknown broke into her house while she was away. At first, the unknown burglars apparently tried to break in through the window in the kitchen, but could not.

Entry was, however, gained by destroying a window to the bathroom. There was $25 worth of damage done to the window.

Taken was $4.00 worth of pennies, a shotgun, and ten ice cold beers. Total amount of items taken was $830.

Criminal Mischief, Burglary

Milton Crittenden, 2616 Weber Drive, Apt. D, reported to Lubbock police that he received a phone call from a woman who said: "I am going to strike again if you leave home."

Not paying the lady any attention, he left home and returned to find his apartment in bad condition. It had been hit by a burglar.

The window to the house had been broken with a bottle. The only thing taken, according to Crittenden, was a picture poster which was valued at $7.50. There was, however, $30 worth of damage done to his apartment.

He said he would file charges against the woman caller.

ringing the bell

with Bob Tieuel

The Black Experience: Two American black men, one an apostle of integration and nonviolence, the other a dynamic disciple of racial separatism, have trod the sacrificial road to classic martyrdom. Both men came from deeply religious backgrounds, the Black Baptist Church; both men sat in the pews as their fathers preached, both men went on to enrapture hundreds of thousands as they themselves preached. Both men deeply disturbed the American Establishment, both men caused irreparable divisions among the very people they dedicated their lives to reclaim.

Toward the end of their lives they both led diminishing crowds as gathering clouds of public doubt formed over their heads, doubt about the essential correctness of the goals they had named and the methods they employed. Both men died from assassin's bullets as they stood in places they had been warned not to go; both had replied that they were ready to die if death was the price, the only price, they must pay for what they believed and were almost pathologically determined to accomplish.

They were so much alike, these two black martyrs, yet no two men could have been more disparate. And their dissimilarities were epitomized by the nature of their deaths. One of them, Malcolm X, died at the hands of black men he loved and labored to save; the other, Martin Luther King, Jr., died at the hands of a white man whom Dr. King non-violently embraced despite Malcolm's warnings that white man are amoral, endemic serpents and beasts.

These two assassinations are more, much more, according to Louis E. Lomax in his book: "To Kill A Black Man", than the evelation of two black men to martyrdom through violence; they lay bare the essential issues and practices that have rent the republic assunder in past years.

Lomas is a well known author, reporter and TV host-commentator, and no man is better qualified to deal with the lives and ideas of these two remarkable black men in American life.

Whether they admit it or not, the future plans of Black Leaders in America believes Lomax, must be built on the foundations laid by these two men who founded or encouraged many of the civil rights-oriented organizations that are active today. He concludes: "In death, now, they are one; either they are one in the nothingness that is nonlife or they are one in the common immortality of men who struggle and die for a cause."

To Mrs. G.N. of Odessa: Yes, it is true. The Church of God in Christ is one of the fastest growing black denominations in the United States. Black Baptist bodies continue to lead in growth in numbers but the gap is slowly being bridged by this Pentacostal group, according to reports. C.O.G.I.C. owns and operates Saints College in Lexington, Miss., and plans a Urban campus in Memphis, Tennessee, according to Bishop J.O. Patterson, national leader. The church also operates the Charles Harrison Mason Theological Seminary (I.T.C.) in Atlanta and thirty-three Bible colleges in various states. Saints College is seeking candidate status with the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools (to meet in Dallas in December), it is reported.

Oklahoma sources report that the all black town of Taft, Oklahoma, will be the recipient of complex gymnastic building and swimming pool that will make the town the talk of the southwest. We will be in Taft soon and will report on the appointment of Redd Fox of TV fame as chief of police. You be here.

Now will some great Black Father come to Boley, Oklahoma, and put it in the swim of things to come? One never knows. A report from Mayor McCormick of all black Boley, Oklahoma, soon.

In Shropshire England, it is said that a piece of hawthorn cut on Holy Thursday will protect both house and person from being struck by lightning.

The Angelic Choir of Mt. Gilead Baptist Church will present their annual concert Sunday, December 15th at 7:30 p.m. in the church auditorium, 2512 Fir Avenue.

Laymen League of Bethel A.M.E. Church Stage Successful Program

"We had a wonderful time last Sunday afternoon serving the Lord in words and songs," said Brother Edwin Scott, master of ceremonies, of the Pre-Christmas program presented last Sunday afternoon at Bethel A.M.E. Church by members of the Laymen League.

Special guest on the program were Mrs. Myrtle Smith of Slaton, a sister of Mr. Scott; Brother Michael Matthews and Brother Willie Turner. Each did a wonderful job in singing a solo.

Senior Choir Number Two, who always does its part on programs, sang several songs for the program.

Rev. Jack Robinson, assistant pastor, gave the occasion. In his short presentation, he made it known that the Laymen League has a great work to do for the local church. "I hope you Brethren will continue to do your job so we all can be proud of our Bethel," he said.

New Hope Baptist Church Has Successful Bazaar Last Saturday

The Board of Christian Education of the New Hope Baptist Church sponsored a mammoth Christmas Bazaar in the fellowship hall, and was a huge success, regardless of having to close two hours for a funeral service held Saturday afternoon in respect and love for one of their members.

This is a project that has been sponsored annually for several years to reach their financial goal. Mrs. Willie Cox, president, is elated about the net profit this year, which she said could not have been reached without the cooperation of the faithful members of the board and participation of the faithful members of the church.

Mrs. Cox expresses her sincere

Brother W.H. Stephens, who recently had an accident and was present, said: "I was unable to be present and work as I would have liked to, but Brother Scott has done a wonderful job in seeing that our program was a success."

Rev. A.W. Wilson, pastor, expressed his sincere appreciation for a job well done by the brothers of Bethel. "We hope in the near future that Bethel will have a Men's Chorus," said Rev. Wilson.

Brother C.H. Sanders and Brother Alexander Johns was responsible for the offering. Rev. and Mrs. C.C. Peoples, pastor and wife of Mount Olive Baptist Church of Slaton, were present as well as some of their members.

"We would like to thank everyone for a job well done for our first effort," said Brother Scott.

Brother J.H. Wilson gave prayer and Brother Richard Rollison read the scripture. Mrs. A.W. Wilson also expressed her appreciation for such a marvelous program by the men of the church.

thanks and appreciation to each one who assisted in any way to make this effort a success. She wishes to give special thanks to Maunita Terrell for her voluntary offer to assist with some articles for sale. Neither space nor time will allow her to name all the members who worked so faithfully for fear she would omit someone's name. She says: "Knowing the group with whom I have worked with through the years, they are not expecting a name calling."

The board was happy to share and rejoice with Mrs. Cox that the net profit for their work was $1,059.82. The first Saturday in December has been the annual date. Although we may resort to a different procedure come 1975, to all of you "a great big thank you."

Phillis Wheatley
Poet

by Angela Perkins
Grade 6, Room 105

Ella Iles Elementary School

Born in Senegal (c.1753), Phillis Wheatley was brought to the United States as a slave, and received her name from Mrs. Susannah Wheatley, the wife of the Boston tailor who had bought Phillis.

Miss Wheatley received her early education in the household of her master. Her interest in writing stemmed from her reading of the Bible and the classics under the guidance of the Wheatleys' daughter, Mary.

In 1770, her first poem was printed under the title A Poem by Phillis, A Negro Girl on the Death of Reverend George Whitefield. After a trip to England for health reasons, she returned to the United States and was married. She published Liberty and Peace in 1794, shortly before her death.

Although George Washington was among her admirers (she had once sent him a tributary poem which he graciously acknowledged), her poetry is considered important today largely because of its historical role in the growth of American Negro Literature.

Gloria Jean Manhana Employed as Asst. Manager at Rich's Fried Chicken Here

"I enjoy working with the family team at Rich's Fried Chicken," admits Gloria Jean Manhanan, assistant manager of the well known chicken establishment at 1212 Quirt Avenue.

"It's a good business to be involved with and able to utilize your ideas to make it go," says the young native of Lubbock. "It gives me an opportunity to make a comfortable living as well as be able to share with others," she continued.

Ms. Manhanan has been employed with Rich's since July, 1973, and is an example that one can move up the ladder in private enterprise if he or she puts their mind to do so.

A 1969 graduate of Dunbar High School, she is a member of the New Jerusalem Baptist Church. She is also active with the Gaylark Spiritual Group which has traveled throughout the southwest. A member of this singing organization for six years, she says: "It's good to be able to express yourself in singing God's praises."

"At Rich's Fried Chicken, we want to always have something going for our customers," says Ms. Manhanan. She is absolutely right, for Rich's offers a catering service at the present time. "Our catering service includes decorating as well as serving our delicious chicken," she continued. "We only cater in the Lubbock market," she made known.

The mother of a daughter, Misha Nacole, age 5, she invites all her friends to come by and visit her at Rich's Fried Chicken. "We are always looking for people who are interested in joining our team", she concluded.

Why not stop and chat with Sister Gloria Jean Manhanan. You'll be glad to know a young lady like Sister Manhanan who is willing to work for something and at the same time, be willing to help other brothers and sisters.

Unity

by Bro. Min. Roosevelt X Smith
Temple of Islam, Lubbock, Texas

The greeting of Islam and the unity of Islam as taught to us by our Leader and Teacher, the Most Honorable Elijah Muhammad, replaces Miss, Mrs., and Mr. with brothers and sisters. If we would only use brother and sister in our approach to each other instead of Miss, Mrs., and Mr., this alone would help unify us, because in the words, brother and sister, unity is conveyed to us, bringing us closer.

We are one as taught by Messenger Muhammad. We are of the same family. We are brothers and sisters. This keeps us from wanting to mistreat our brothers and sisters, Miss, Mrs., and Mr. does not give us the spirit of brothers and sisters. They are alien to true brotherhood and sisterhood, and fail to inspire us with the spirit of love of brotherhood and sisterhood.

The words "unite" and "unity" appear on the front pages of many issues of Muhammad Speaks newspaper. The call for solidarity is inherent in such expressions of the Messenger as "Accept your own", in a state or territory of our own and "Join onto your own kind."

It is time that the so-called Negro put aside the mental chains of bondage that has held us for over a hundred years of so-called freedom, still servants to another people.

It is time for us in a word to unite for the improvement of ourselves. We are foolish to demand that another people accept us as their own and that they should provide all the necessities of life for us.

There are those of you, who would say that you are a servant no longer and point to your degrees, your homes, and your cars. To that person I would say, show me your business, hospital, your farms and your factories. What have you done to help your people, the Black people of America.

Messenger Muhammad teaches us that we should pool our resources, education and qualifications for independence. Stop forcing yourselves into places where you are not wanted. Make your own neighborhood a decent place to live. Rid yourselves of the lust of wine and drink and learn to love self and kind before loving others. The so-called Negro has been taught to hate blackness, to be ashamed of our very existence. That is why there is so little unity among us, because we are self-haters.

We are by nature a people of goodness and yet for over four hundred years we have been the suffers of all abuses. We could not understand why. We wondered what was wrong with us. There is nothing wrong with us, the fact is that the people that we have been dealing with are by nature evil, they have no love in their hearts for us. Let us not continue to use their opinion of us as our own. It is time that we came into the knowledge of ourselves.

Black woman conduct yourself with honor and self-respect, help and encourage your husband to improve himself and benefit our people. There is no limit to what your Blackman can do if he knows that he can trust and depend on you. This is when he has the knowledge of himself.

As Messenger Muhammad teaches us "We of the Black Nation in this serious time of trouble and disagreement between the people and nations of the earth must unite to defend ourselves and our just rights."

Messenger Muhammad says that we should realize that we can best serve our nation by serving ourselves first and foremost here in America. And not by foolishly and ignorantly intermingling with our open enemies who have already destroyed us in such a way that we are not recognized as being fit for membership in a decent nation's society.

How can we of the Black nation be the brothers of the white race, when by nature we are made different, being made from the God of truth, justice and righteousness; and the white race is from the God of evilness. These are direct words from our Leader and Teacher, the Most Honorable Elijah Muhammad.

As Messenger Muhammad teaches us, Islam is the very nature of the Blackman, and we must unite and show the world that we love our own Black Nation and that we intend to preserve it.

Sports of The Times

by Joe Kelly

An end run on the football field can be a thing of beauty. The far guard generally pulls out to join two halfbacks in leading interference, the end blocks down and the whole thing winds up in a power sweep that can be hard to stop.

In the athletic offices, it can be a ruinous type of ploy. And, unfortunately, that is what we may be seeing at Texas Tech at the present time. It could blow the lid on Raider athletics.

Here's the situation. South Carolina's coach, Paul Dietzel, resigned to become athletic director. The Gamecocks then began to search for a head coach. Jim Carlen, whether by SC's invitation or his own initiative, entered the picture.

No one has been pinned down as to what the situation is, but enough has been said to indicate that Carlen might get the post. That, naturally, is disturbing to the administration at Tech, the athletic department and thousands of friends.

As one coach told me last week, "I don't really have any love for the guy, but he's done a good job and things are in pretty good shape, if he'll get a good offense. But I don't want to go through the trauma of another change again. We've had enough of that."

Players, fans and everyone loyal to Tech would be affected. The feeling is that, over all, Tech athletics are on pretty sound footing at the present time, so let's not rock the boat.

Along about that time, Carlen is quoted as saying that he will consider SC if he also is made the AD. At first glance, this seems effrontery. Dietzel, after all, just recently became the AD and this seems to be telling SC, "Hey! If you want me, you'll have to make other arrangements for Dietzel."

This might be valid. On the other hand, it might be an indirect way of telling the Tech administration, "Hey! If you want me to stay, make me AD at Tech."

This brings up interesting possibilities. J.T. King has tenure. So does Polk Robison. A few years ago Morley Jennings was AD and had tenure. He wound up tutoring PE golf when DeWitt Weaver arrived here.

If Tech is concerned enough about the possibility of Carlen leaving, it puts pressure on the athletic council, president, and regents. King and Robison could be assigned to PE, with Carlen replacing King and appointing an administrative assistant to take over Polk's role.

In other words, if this is the true picture—and it is, after all, only conjecture—there's a power struggle going on. And power struggles tend to tear apart schools, departments and supporters, while hurting squads and affecting recruiting.

If a power struggle has started, Tech's administration had best act fast to quell it, or else it will cause untold trouble. Despite a winning season, somewhat tarnished in the last half of the campaign, a power struggle now might undo all the progress that has been made in five years under Carlen, King and Company.

One man Saturday night asserted strongly that Carlen would go to South Carolina and that Grant Teaff, the highly successful miracle man at Baylor would love the job here. I can't buy that, although the time for a man to leave is when he's on top.

Grant was at Tech. Grant was passed over in the search for a head coach. Grant has a new five-year contract at Baylor. It is highly improbable that he would leave Waco now.

I've told this story before, but it might be interesting to repeat. I was talking with Grant one day and noticed that all of his children's first names began with a "T".

"Is that coincidence, or what?" I asked.

"That's no coincidence," Grant replied. "The Double T was on purpose. I've always wanted to coach at Texas Tech. That was my dream."

Was the dream fully realized?

It appears that maybe Tech's basketball squad is falling into the pattern of other Raider teams, win at home, lose on the road. It's no disgrace to lose to Kansas State, either in Manhattan or Lubbock. Instead, it was the way the team played.

The defense fell down, the big men failed to produce, the rebounding was horrible. And right there you have the makings for defeat, anywhere.

After Tech got the bugs out against Adams State, the Raiders looked strong. True, the opposition wasn't first line, but it wasn't a bad college team. And, in that last half, the Raiders really seemed to put it together.

Against K State they were never really in the game. Quickness, which is one of the things separating the SWC from other better basketball oriented programs, helped beat them. Vanderbilt probably added the Raiders to their list Monday night.

Cheer up, fans, this is the learning period. The Raiders do have a good team and they should be in the thick of the conference fight. These games, as painful as they may be, will help the squad down the stretch, and that's what really counts.

Off early performances, SMU may have been under rated, with Arkansas overrated. But don't bet on anything. When conference play starts, anything can happen and probably will.

Dunbar High School News Briefs

A special assembly program will involve the Stewart Elementary School's sixth grade at 10:00 a.m. Friday, December 13th. These young people will provide patriotic choral readings.

Although Friday the 13th is bad luck to some people, it won't bother our Panthers when they travel to Andrews, Texas, to participate in a basketball tournament. Good Luck, fellows!

Our mighty Panthers will take on Coronado High School on Tuesday evening, December 17th in the Panther Gym at 7:30 p.m.

Our high school choir will present a special assembly program on Thursday morning, December 19th at 8:20 a.m. in the school auditorium. The Drama Department will present a short play during the same hour.

The fireworks will begin in 3 - AAA competition when our Panthers host the Estacado Matadors in Panther Gym Thursday evening, December 19, at 7:30 p.m. This will prove to be a most interesting contest since both squads are always "up" to play each other.

Civil Rights Leader, Bishop Stephen Gill Spottswood, Dies Recently

Washington—(NBNS)—Bishop Stephen Gill Spottswood, civil rights leader, chairman of the NAACP for the past 13 years, a retired bishop of the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, is dead at the age of 77. Cancer claimed him.

Bishop Spottswood was a man who stood in the forefront of the civil rights struggle in this country. He was the veteran observer whose guidance resulted in great gains for blacks and other minorities.

He led the fight for the passage of the 1964 Civil Rights bill in meetings with Presidents Kennedy and Johnson.

He was determined, but his determination was tempered with caution. He knew how to get what he was after.

At a July 1965 national meeting of the NAACP, Bishop Spottswood had to battle to regain chairmanship of the organization. And after the victory, he told the meeting:

"I am just as impatient as those younger guys. But I have sense enough to know that expressing my anger is not going to get the rights I want."

He was the master of strategy. But he also could get angry. And he did. It was at the June 30, 1969, annual meeting of the NAACP. He blasted the first Nixon Administration. He was blunt.

"The clear message from Washington is if you are black, stay back," he said. "With many words, carefully selected by many men, over many weeks, the news has finally broken to us that delays and tokenism in public school desegregation are to be made easier."

Repeating his 1969 charge that the Nixon Administration was "anti-Negro", Bishop Spottswood further charged that "Killing Black Americans promiscuously has been the 20th century pastime of our police." He asked why white police "managed to find some issues other than race which they give their priority attention; the latest of which is pollution and ecology."

He was married to the former Viola Estelle Booker in 1919 and they had five children. She died in 1953.

He is survived by his widow, Mattie Brownite Johnson Spottswood, of Washington, and his five children, all of Washington.

cafeteria style eatery.

Now 69, Maddox is remembered for closing rather than serving blacks at his old Pickrick restaurant when federal officials sought to enforce the public accommodations section of the 1964 Civil Rights Act.

All this is not to be confused with repentance, however.

"If I had it to do over again, I believe I'd push even harder," said Maddox, while his wife, Virginia, helped push the fried chicken with red-eye gravy.

Maddox lost a bid this year to serve another four years as Georgia's governor. The citizens of Atlanta in recent years have sent Andy Young, a former aide to the late Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., to Congress and made Maynard Jackson their mayor.

And sent Lester Maddox out to pasture.

First Progressive Baptist Church

Praise the Lord for Bro. Joe Ross, for he brought a wonderful lesson Sunday morning. Topic "Lord, if you need somebody send me". Truly the lesson was a heartwarming one for the young as well as the old.

The Lord's sacrament was given at the beginning of the 11 o'clock service. Then Rev. Shephard brought a truly fine lesson from the book of St. Luke. His topic was "Doing It To Death". A lesson that could have inspired any child of God.

Congratulations to Bro. Samuel Judie, a young man seeking Christ. This young man brought his first lesson November 24th, on the youth program. Bro. Judie has always been active in doing works for the Lord. Also congratulations goes to Bro. Joe Ross, another young man that has found Christ and Bro. Ross is letting Christ be his waymaker. Bro. Ross is the Supt. of Sunday School, and he will be bringing his very first lesson January 6th. The church is very proud of Bro. Ross, for he has come a long way. Please make plans to come out and hear this young man. Perhaps he may be able to help you get closet to Christ by his testimony.

Keep praying for the sick and shutins. Let us let them know that we miss them. Sister Sims, Sister Ruby Thomas, Sister Willie Mae Thomas, are on the sick list.

Sgt. and Mrs. Clemmie C. Giddens Visiting in Hub City During Week

For the past ten days or more, Sgt. and Mrs. Clemmie C. Giddens and two sons have been guest of Mrs. Giddens' (nee Frankie Jackson) mother, Mrs. Margaret Hereford Jackson, while enroute from San Antonio where he has been stationed. Sgt. Giddens has been transferred to an Air Force Base in Hawaii.

Mrs. Jackson is already making plans to visit Hawaii come this summer.

Racism at Root of Boston Busing Violence According to Coretta King

Boston — (NBNS) — Racism, not opposition to busing, is at the root of the campaign against school desegregation in Boston. And the outbreaks of violence would have made her husband weep, Mrs. Coretta Scott King told a rally of 5,000 people.

"Can anyone believe that people using or condoning violence as well as vulgar racial epithets are making a democratic protest against busing?" asked the widow of the late Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King.

"No. They are making an undemocratic assault on equality," she said.

Mrs. King's remarks were greeted with applause by the crowd of 5,000, most of them white, who gathered in front of a statue commemorating black Civil War enlistees after marching three blocks from the State Capitol to City Hall.

It was a counter march to those who have been demonstrating, sometimes violently, against a federal order to bus 18,000 students to desegregate the city's schools. The march was called a "march for quality integrated

"This issue in my view is not really busing," said Mrs. King. "The conduct of certain opponents of busing has made the issue one of racism in its broadest aspects. Thomas I. Atkins, president of the
