Destruction of Central School marks close to period in Hereford history

Schools of the past

Central School was built on the site of the first Hereford school and opened in 1910. This photo, borrowed from Deaf Smith County Museum, was taken while Central was under construction, at right, and the frame building, erected in 1900, was still in use.

Demos assail Gingrich use of Capitol Police during tour

By MARCY GORDON

Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - Plainclothes U.S. Capitol Police are protecting House Speaker Newt Gingrich at taxpayers' expense as he tours the country promoting his book that could earn him an estimated $2.3 million.

A private security detail hired by Gingrich's publisher is handling other security duties on the 25-city tour, during which the speaker has been met by hundreds of fans and boisterous protesters at every stop.

A Gingrich spokeswoman, Lauren Sims, on Friday defended the use of government police officers on the tour, calling a Democratic lawmaker's criticism "a lot of ankle-biting."

Capitol Police Sgt. Dan Nichols said the security provided for Gingrich while he promotes his best-selling "To Renew America" continues the protection normally given to the House speaker. The speaker is second in line, after Vice President Al Gore, to assume the presidency.

"We provide that at all times it's necessary... anywhere in the United States, no matter what activity," Nichols said.

Gingrich, at Boston's Copley Place on Friday evening to sign books, refused to comment on his security, and he praised 300 protesters, including eight arrested for trespassing. The Georgia Republican said he found their passion refreshing, and he thought the protest would boost book sales.

"If you want some kind of peaceful, easy clout over things, get a dictatorship," he said. "But if you want a free society, then people have a lot of opinions, and it is wonderful to be in a free society."

Gingrich's predecessors as speaker, former Reps. Tom Foley, D-Wash., Jim Wright, D-Texas, and Tip O'Neill, D-Mass., each had one Capitol Police officer assigned to them, according to a report by the clerk of the House cited in The Hill, a newspaper covering Congress. A Foley aide told the paper no officers accompanied him on trips to his home district.

Texans approve of Gov. Bush, senators, but comment 2-to-1 against president AUSTIN (AP) - More Texans are satisfied with Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison's performance than Republican Senate colleague and presidential contender Phil Gramm, according to the latest Texas Poll released Saturday.

About 53 percent of those polled think Mrs. Hutchison, R-Texas, is doing either a good or excellent job. About 46 percent of those polled had the same favorable impression of Gramm, R-Texas.

Conversely, 33 percent rated Mrs. Hutchison's performance as either fair or poor, compared to 40 percent having negative feelings about Gramm's work.

The Texas Poll, conducted by the University of Texas' Office of Survey Research for Harte-Hanks Communications Inc., interviewed 1,001 adult Texans over the telephone from Aug. 3 to Aug. 11. The poll's margin of error is plus or minus 3 percent.

The poll also shows Gov. George W. Bush, another Republican, with a 58 percent approval and a 31 percent disapproval rating.

President Clinton drew a 65 percent negative response to a 31 percent positive.

Larry Neal, Gramm's press secretary, said Friday that Mrs. Hutchison and Bush have high marks because they are doing a good job. But Gramm, as a presidential candidate and a Senate leader on several highly charged issues, faces tougher scrutiny, he said.

"The difference is that Phil Gramm is in an arena where the spotlight is blinding and some get third-degree burns," Neal said. "The president is in the same arena and he's singed around the edges. In fact, there is smoke coming from the White House."

Mrs. Hutchison and Bush have taken more moderate positions on welfare reform than Gramm. But Mrs. Hutchison said she did not think the Texas Poll illustrated Texans' desire for more moderate leadership.

"I consider myself a conservative. I consider George Bush a conservative; and I consider Phil a conservative," she said. "I just think on any given day those kinds of numbers can change."

Ed Martin, executive director of the Texas Democratic Party, said Clinton's popularity in Texas will climb once Texans see the difference between him and the Republican-dominated Congress.

Standing lonely and silent these days, stripped of many of the accoutrements that make a building, the future of a structure that served hundreds, if not thousands, of Hereford school children is sealed.

"Old" Central School will be torn down.

If the walls could talk, what kind of stories would they tell, about children who lost their homework or who skipped school for a day?

Walls and floors are intact in the building now but much of the remainder of the building has been pulled out, in the cause of abatement of hazardous materials.

When Central was built, and remodeled through the years, no one knew that asbestos could present a hazard to human beings. And, word came that lead paint is harmful.

Hereford Independent School District contracted for abatement of the materials, which meant removal of all windows as well as doors and frames covered with lead paint and any asbestos in the building.

Now, HISD has asked for bids on demolition of the building.

Central has a proud history. The first brick school built in Hereford served its purpose for 65 years.

The building is on the site where the first school in Hereford was constructed in 1900.

A two-story wood frame building was erected in 1900 and an addition in 1901 gave the school two more rooms.

All grades went to classes in this six-room school until 1906 when a primary building was put up. Citizens contributed $2,000 for the addition.

Located on the campus was a water well, put down in about 1903, that was the school's drinking fountain. Four cups were chained to the hand pump. Never mind sanitary conditions.

Then, in 1908, the independent school district was created and in 1909 citizens asked trustees to call a bond election for construction of a permanent home for the school.

Support was overwhelming as 111 men cast ballots in favor of the $25,000 bond issue and only 33 were against it. Remember women hadn't been granted the vote at that time.

A brief history of Hereford schools, filed in the Deaf Smith County Museum, tells that the new brick building was opened in 1910.

For the next 16 years, Central School was the educational environment for all Hereford students, from first grade through 11th (Texas had not bumped public education up to 12 years).

Not long after the new building was completed, the school board directed that "outside closets and obstructions be removed from the school grounds and the material used for walls for the protection of horses of the country children."

A Hereford resident, Mary Fraser, who started school at Central, remembers when the high school was moved to another location.

"We went to high school in the old Hereford Christian College building," she remembered. "Then, the fall after I graduated in 1926, the new high school was opened."

That building is the one that later became Stanton Junior High.

Mrs. Fraser went to college for two years but could not teach in Hereford.

"They took only college graduates so I went to a one-room school 30 miles west of town," she said. "I never got to teach in Hereford."

Another former student at Central, Ruth Allison, started her education at the school and went back there to teach after finishing college.

Mrs. Allison was a couple of years behind Mrs. Fraser in high school, though, and she clearly remembers graduating from the "new" Hereford High School in 1928.

And, when she finished college and came back to Hereford, she took a first grade teaching job at Central.

Mrs. Allison recalls that her father was on the school board and said he would resign so she could be hired.

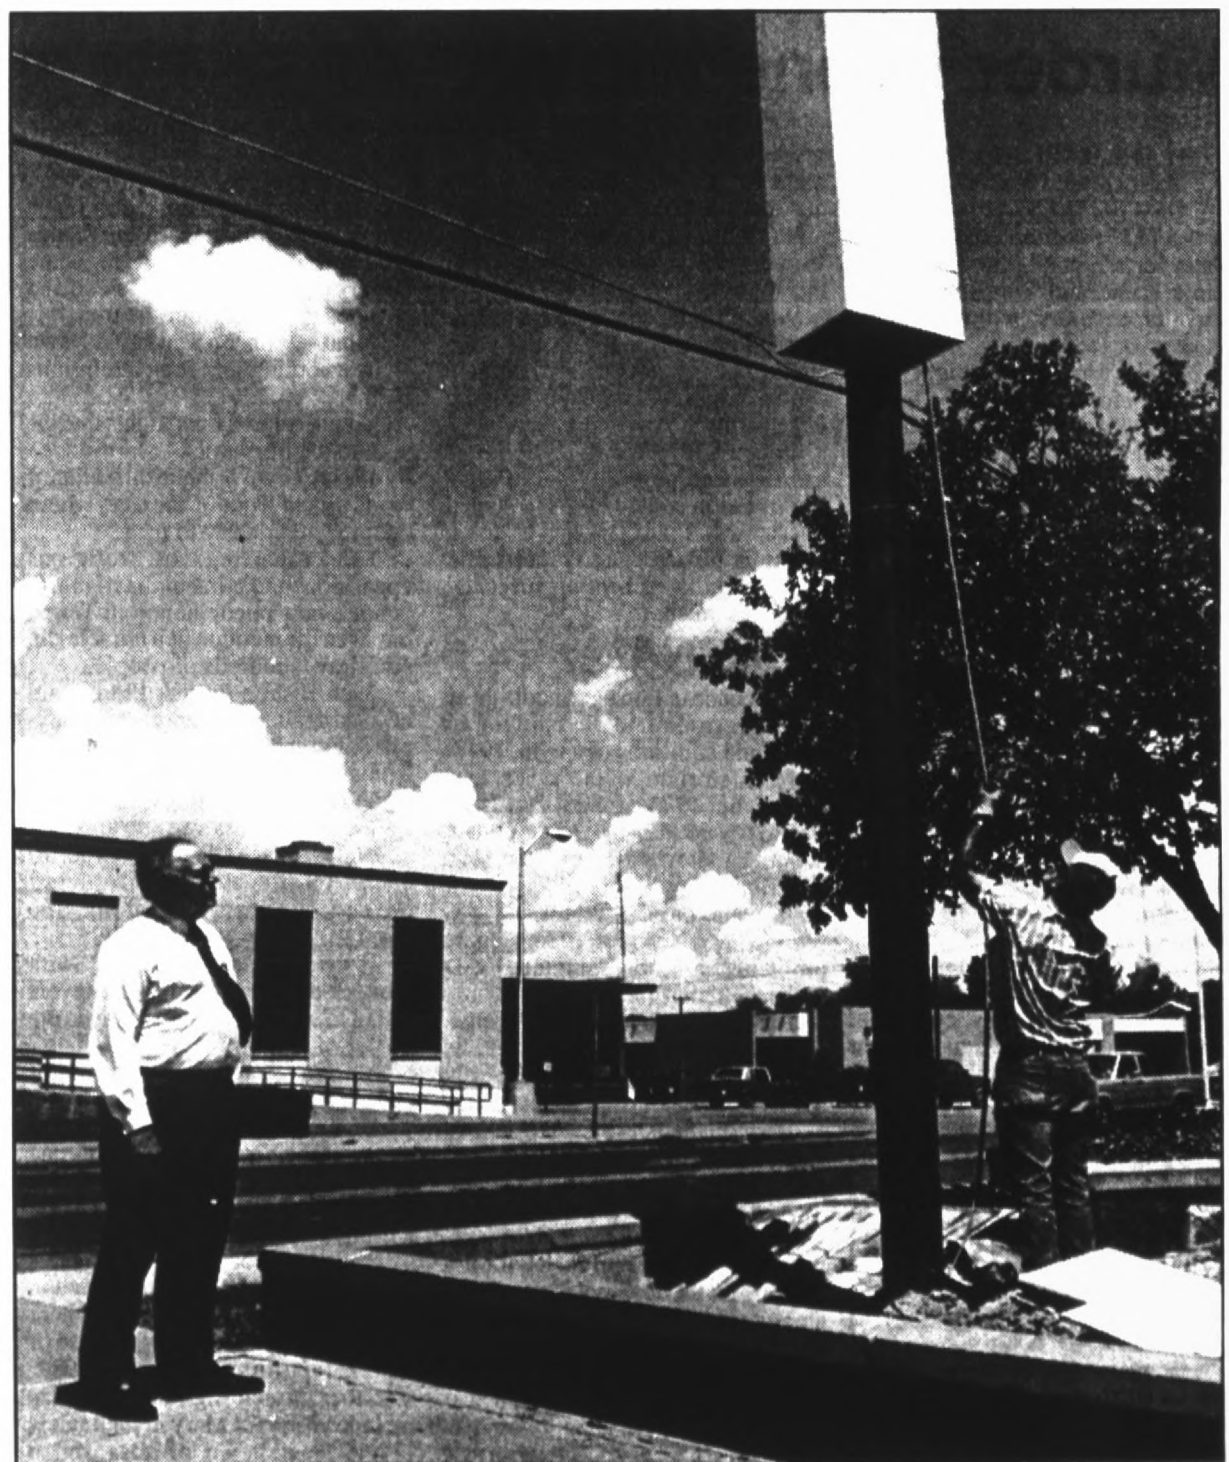

"The superintendent said he'd rather have my father on the board than me teaching," laughed Mrs. Allison. She was on the faculty from 1933 to 1937.

From the best memories and records of the time, there is little doubt that for a time, at least until the high school moved to the former college building, all students were educated on the Central campus. It was a number of years before additional elementary schools were constructed.

In 1911, the first football team was fielded from Central. There were 11 teachers and 549 students.

Enrollment held pretty steady -- 526 in 1912, 486 in 1913, 507 in 1914 and 519 in 1915.

New signs go up for bank name change

Don Graham, president of First National Bank, watches as workmen install a new sign at the bank, which officially becomes FirstBank Southwest in merger ceremonies here Thursday at 2 p.m. The bank will conduct a special tree planting ceremony, serve refreshments and give live tree seedlings to all in attendance. Plans for the merger have been in progress since early July.

Woman says leg may be from missing son

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) - A leg found in the rubble of the bombed-out federal building may be the remains of a man who was dropped off there the morning of the blast, the man's mother said.

Sidney Aaron McCallum has not been seen since he went to the building's Social Security office the morning of April 19, Roberta Bennett told KWTU in Oklahoma City on Friday.

The leg, which belonged to a man about 30, had a military-style boot, according to Fred Jordan, the state medical examiner. Ms. Bennett said her 29-year-old son was known to wear military boots.

Ms. Bennett, who did not go to police, said at first she just assumed her son had gone off without telling anybody because he has done that before, the station reported.

DNA tests on the leg at an FBI laboratory in Washington are expected to be completed within a few days. If testing fails to turn up a match to any of the known victims, then there is little hope of identifying the leg, Jordan said.

A spokesman for Jordan said the office will ask police to look into Ms. Bennett's report. It was not immediately clear whether she would be asked to provide any samples that could help in the DNA tests.

The death count will probably be raised to 169 if the tests fail to turn up a match, Jordan said.

The lawyer for bombing suspect Timothy McVeigh has suggested that the leg may belong to the "real" bomber.

City Commission posts agenda

The Hereford City Commission has a short agenda for the regular meeting Monday, beginning at 7:30 p.m., in City Hall. A request for extension of water and sewer service in the 1000 block of S. Lee and S. Miles will be considered and an executive session is listed to consider appointment to the building code board of adjustments. The commission also will consider cancellation of the meeting that ordinarily would be held on Labor Day, Sept. 4.

Hospital board meets Tuesday

The board of directors of Deaf Smith County Hospital District will hold a regular meeting Tuesday, beginning at 6:30 p.m. in the board room at Hereford Regional Medical Center. Items on the agenda include: Establish a tax rate, discuss budget process; discuss longrange planning; report on intergovernmental initiatives; financial and operational reports and other usual reports.

School board sets hearing, meeting

A public hearing on proposed tax revenue increases will be held Thursday when the Hereford School Board meets at 6 p.m. in the administration building. Agenda items for the regular meeting include action on a gym request, bids for the track resurfacing and work at Old Central; and discussion of the accreditation rating, tennis facility, local transfers, neighborhood schools, and administrators' contracts.

Correction

A photo that appeared in Friday's Hereford Brand incorrectly identified Dustin Brown's Boy Scout troop affiliation. Brown is a member of Boy Scout Troop 50, sponsored by the Hereford Lions Club. Also, an article in the Aug. 10 Brand incorrectly noted the troop that would raise the flags at the Aquatic Center grand opening. That troop was Troop 50 as well. The Brand regrets the errors.

Murder scene trip off

By MICHAEL FLEEMAN

Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) - The judge in the O.J. Simpson trial canceled plans for a second jury visit to the crime scene and Simpson's house after prosecutors withdrew their request for the tour.

The decision Friday night came hours before more of former Detective Mark Fuhrman's comments to a screenwriter surfaced, with the New York Daily News quoting transcripts of him saying all blacks in city government "should be lined up and shot."

The jury's planned Sunday night visit came was called off after an entourage of about 20 people involved with the case visited the Brentwood scene where the slashed bodies of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman were found.

Members of the group Friday night included Superior Court Judge Lance Ito, prosecutors, defense attorneys and police officers.

Some members of the group were seen from a distance, in the dark, pointing flashlights toward the area where the bodies were found outside Ms. Simpson's condominium. Prosecutors found they could not replicate the lighting and weather conditions of the night of June 12, 1994.

The jury visited the condominium in daylight last February, but the prosecution wanted a second tour at night for jurors. Defense attorneys had opposed the planned Sunday night tour, saying the conditions would not be identical to the night of the murders.

Also Friday, another judge ruled that Ito could remain on the case, ending one part of the Mark Fuhrman controversy as another erupted throughout the case and beyond.

Police Chief Willie L. Williams and the head of the civilian Police Commission sought copies of taped interviews Fuhrman gave to a screenwriter after news reports said Fuhrman talks of beating suspects' faces to "mush."

forced construction of an addition of eight classrooms to the building in 1935, and additions of a gym, 1948, and a cafeteria, in the 1950s.

But by 1975, school needs in Hereford were changing and the Central School building was abandoned as an educational institution.

At some point, the building was "condemned" because of some problems, said Don Cumpston, HISD assistant superintendent.

But Central proved to be a Phoenix, rising from the figurative ashes. Its days of usefulness were not completely over.

Hereford Senior Citizens occupied some of the building from 1976 until a new home was built in 1985.

And, Deaf Smith County Appraisal District used space for offices.

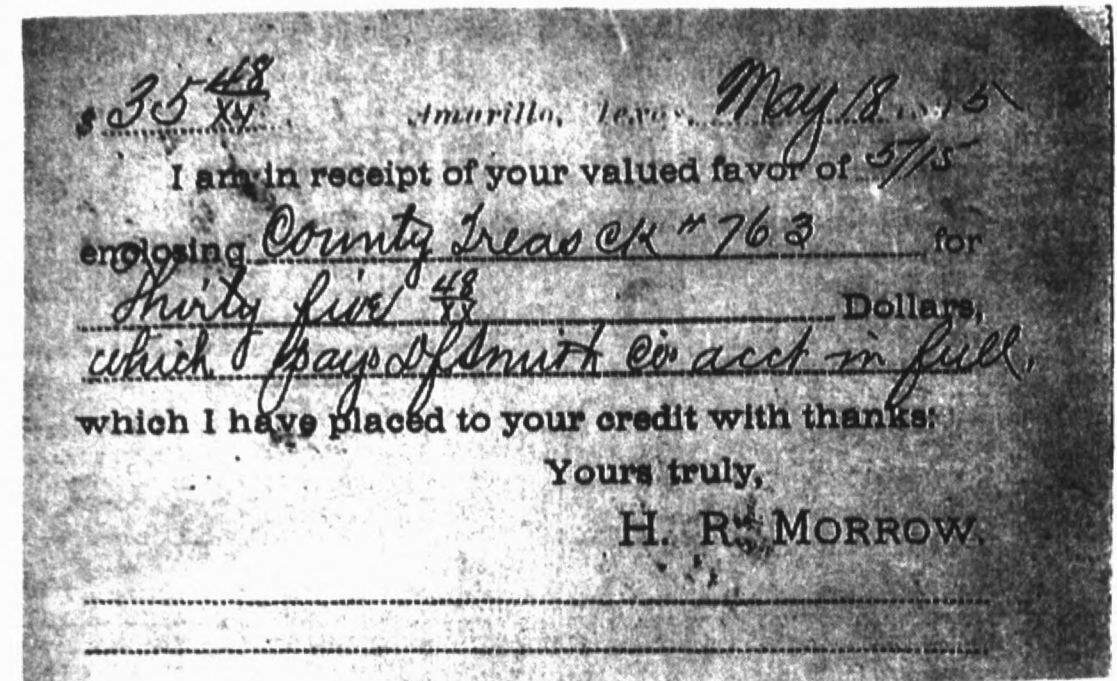

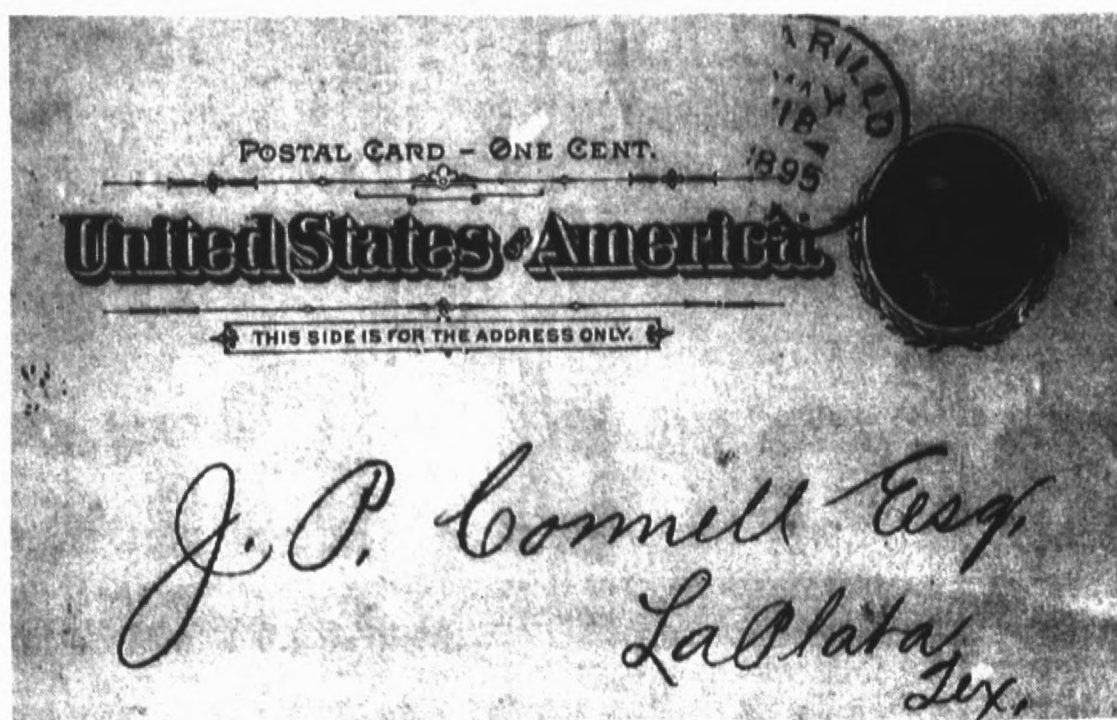

"They built a building within a building for the appraisal district," said Cumpston, "because of the office's needs, especially electrical."

When the appraisal district offices were moved in late 1991, all that was left were HISD maintenance offices. When the school district bought a new administration building, maintenance was moved out of Central to the new location.

Where once there were the sound of children laughing and the murmuring of students at their lessons, there now is only the cooing of pigeons.

The only occupants of Central are pigeons, said Cumpston.

"There must be hundreds," he said.

100-year-old post card

A penny post card, dated May 18, 1895, was found by Jack Nunley recently when he unpacked some boxes in his attic. The card, as reproduced above, shows an Amarillo postmark, and it was addressed to County Judge J.P. Connell at the county seat of La Plata. The reverse side indicates that H.R. Morrow acknowledged a payment of $35.48 was received from Deaf Smith County.

Faithful head to Dallas tree to see image of Virgin Mary

By CHRIS NEWTON

Associated Press Writer
DALLAS (AP) - Some come searching for proof that God exists. Others come hoping to see a modern-day miracle.

Whatever the reason, dozens of people arrive daily at a small home in a poor neighborhood on the south side of Dallas to see the Mary Tree, where some people swear they've seen the mystical image of the Virgin Mary.

To a casual observer, the tree may seem to be nothing more than a vague shape of a woman with her hands clasped in prayer. But to some believers, the image has glowed and at times emerged from the tree.

What was once a weed-filled lawn is now nothing less than a religious shrine.

Bright-colored flood lights line the path to the tree which is surrounded by a brick cove. A makeshift altar of wood sits in front of the tree, where people gather daily to pray.

The reporting of religious apparitions and miraculous sightings is not a new phenomenon in Texas, but even the mention of a miracle can still draw hundreds of people.

Arch Bishop Patrick Flores said he has dealt with reports of unexplainable phenomena, saying the Roman Catholic Church investigates some reported sightings.

"The church never declares any absolutes as far as these things go. To completely rule these things out just because they sound unusual would be wrong," Flores said.

Texas is literally dotted with modern-day meccas where believers travel to witness what they say is the power of God.

In San Antonio, hundreds of people flocked to a Catholic church when a janitor reported seeing a statue of the Virgin Mary cry in June of 1992. Hundreds of pilgrims still crowd the altars of the church to get a glimpse of the statue.

Perhaps one of the largest religious meccas in Texas is St. John Neumann Catholic Church in Lubbock, where people still come to pray because of reported apparition sightings in 1989.

Other miracle sightings in Texas include visions of Mary in car fenders in the small town of Elsa and a portrait of Jesus at San Jose Catholic Church in Austin that was reported to bleed in 1991.

The story of the tree in Dallas is entwined with the story of Maria Anita Reyna.

"I've given up all privacy," said Ms. Reyna, who owns the tree. "Not a day goes by when at least a dozen people don't show up."

Nine years ago, Ms. Reyna said she should have died of a heart attack but the Virgin Mary led her spirit back to her body, leaving an afterimage in the base of an oak tree in her front yard.

Ms. Reyna's life hasn't been the same since word got out about her oak tree.

Hundreds of necklaces, watches, pendants and jewels hang on the large branches--trinkets left by visitors. In 1987, vandals doused the tree in wallpaper paste. It was easily removed with water, but the incident upset Ms. Reyna.

"It was the work of the devil, but Mary is still there," she said.

Anthropologist Mark Glazer, a professor at the University of Texas-Pan American, said sightings of the Virgin Mary and other miraculous phenomenon seem more frequent in Texas.

"There are a lot of Catholics in Texas with a very Mexican-American influence," Glazer said. "Part of their heritage involves a greater emphasis on seeing things involving their faith."

Officials estimated that over 20,000 people journeyed to Lubbock in 1988 from across the country after claims were made that the Virgin Mary was going to appear to believers at a rosary service.

On a grassy hill, the pilgrims watched for the predicted miracle. Believers say they saw sights ranging from images of Jesus and Mary in the clouds to visions of angels dancing. Skeptics say they saw nothing extraordinary.

Joe Nickell, a writer for the Skeptical Inquirer, said that most "miracles" are easily explained by science or are fraudulent.

"We are not on a mandate to attack religion," Nickell said. "But when it's not just faith, when there are actual physical claims being made, we should investigate them."

Ms. Reyna, who said she was a skeptic before her experience, believes the answer to the mystery of the miracles is easily explained.

The Chamber and You

By F. MICHAEL CARR

Executive Vice-President
The Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce would like to express our thanks to the many organizations and individuals who helped make this year's Town and Country Jubilee the success that it was.

Each and every activity played an important part in the overall outcome of the Jubilee.

It was great to have the opening of the new Hereford Aquatic Center help kick off the Jubilee along with the Fajita Cook-off in Dameron Park. The Cattlewomen did a super job.

Other groups and activities that residents enjoyed included the Fall Style Show, hosted by the Chamber's Women's Division; the Jubilee Cowboy Rodeo and the Crowning of the Queen, Arion Decker, by the Hereford Riders Club; the Greg Black Memorial 10K hosted by the YMCA; and a new event, the Cowboy and Cowgirl Camp meeting in Dameron Park by the First Baptist Church.

Those in attendance also enjoyed the new Bungee Jump; the 3-on-3 Basketball Tournament; the Jubilee Arts and Crafts Bazaar; and of course, Jubilee Junction which provided food booths, games and a full day of entertainment for everyone.

We appreciate the hard work of Connie Walker, the Walker Sisters, and all of the folks at the Country Opry for a fine job with the entertainment -- The Country Opry on West Highway 60 is held the fourth Saturday of each month and is worth your time, so plan to attend in the future.

Hats off to others for their hard work. Some of these folks include Chairperson Elaine McNutt, Jubilee Junction Chairman Gene King, new committee member Ken Varner, KPAN Radio, The Hereford Brand and Mauri Montgomery.

We also want to thank Newton Trucking for their help and long-time support. The Whiteface Kiwanis Club is to be commended for their 15th year of chairing the Jubilee Parade. Overall, the Jubilee required the help of well over 200 volunteers and we want to say a sincere thank-you to each and every one who helped on this year's Jubilee.

This event continues to grow with great attendance and more class reunions each year.

We are always so glad to welcome these folks back to Hereford. We look forward to 1996 and invite your help and your ideas to make the T&C Jubilee bigger and better. Thanks again to each of you.

Rodeo often called 'last identification with Old West'

Performers nowadays are weekend cowboys, cowgirls traveling circuit

By DIANE JENNINGS
The Dallas Morning News
BANDERA, Texas - A handful of players is shagging balls at the baseball diamond as dusk falls over Mansfield Park.

At the adjacent rodeo arena, a hundred cowboys and cowgirls are unloading horses, strapping on chaps and scouting bulls.

This small Hill Country town bills itself as the Cowboy Capital of the World. At the county courthouse, a monument to rodeo champions stands near memorials to war heroes. Bumper stickers proclaim, "Keep Bandera Western," and the bawling of calves and the pungent odor of sweat, manure and freshly churned dirt are as familiar as the cry of an umpire or the scent of newly mowed grass.

"Rodeo is to Bandera what baseball is to the rest of the country," said Patricia Moore, office manager of the Bandera County Convention and Visitors Bureau.

"This is not just a sport," said rodeo clown Damon Rogers, perched on a fence recently after the regular Tuesday night rodeo, one of four nights of rodeo-related competition in the area each week. "It's a part of history. Ranching is where Texas started."

On the verge of the 21st century, when only about 1 percent of Texans live on farms and ranches, a sport rooted in ranching skills from the 1800s might be seen as a quaint anachronism. Instead, rodeo is riding high in Texas - not just in Bandera but statewide. For instance:

- Texas will host more professional rodeos - 97 - than any other state this year. California is a distant second with 55.

- More than 19 percent of the 9,896 members of the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association hail from Texas.

- Three of the top 10 rodeos in the country are held in major Texas cities - Houston, San Antonio and Fort Worth. Even the Dallas metro area, which sometimes shies away from the state's Western image like a skittish colt, boasts the weekly Mesquite Championship Rodeo.

- The small West Texas town of Pecos hosts one of the oldest rodeos in the country, on the Fourth of July. Numerous other small towns also celebrate the holiday with rodeos, so that the Independence Day weekend has become known as Cowboy Christmas.

- Rodeo circuits include competitions for little kids, senior citizens, high school and college students, women, gays, black cowboys, Mexican cowboys and American Indians - in which Indians dress up like cowboys. There are even "ranch rodeos" featuring working cowboys.

The reason rodeo hasn't been relegated to Texas history books, observers say, is that Texans and other Americans share a nostalgia for simpler times.

"This is the last identification with the Old West," said calf roper and automobile company executive Cleo Hearn of Lancaster. "Most people at one time in their life, for just a moment, would love to ride a horse, love to rope a cow."

"This is what America was formed on."

Historians might argue that America was created by Pilgrims or Minutemen. But few people today want to clomp around in buckled shoes or tricorne hats.

The cowboy image, however, keeps a tight rein on America's heart.

"It's the loner quality, the man with clear sort of morals, what's right's right, wrong's wrong," said Sybil Broyles, a former journalist who now runs a dude ranch in Pipe Creek, a small community outside San Antonio.

Guests at the ranch, which includes an arena for roping competition, "are envious," she said. "They wish they'd learn to rope and ride, because that defines them. None of these (rodeo) guys, none of these men, are going to therapy."

Cowboy wannabes might be surprised to learn that few rodeo cowboys ride the range, or even the arena, for a living.

Most are like Kelly Holt of Eustace, Texas.

In his chaps, boots, hat, spurs and scar, Holt looks as if he could mosey right out the front door of the Ponderosa.

Sounds like it, too.

"Caught his horn on my bottom teeth and just kind of ripped it out," the 27-year-old bull rider said, explaining the thin purple line crossing his chin. The resulting broken jaw sidelined him for six weeks but didn't dim his enthusiasm for the cowboy sport.

Despite appearances, and his Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association card,

Holt rides herd on inmates as a

"This is not just a sport. It's a part of history. Ranching is where Texas started." - Rodeo clown prison guard in Palestine during the week and plays cowboy on weekends.

Being a professional rodeo cowboy simply means he once earned $1,000 in prize money in a year. Professional status notwithstanding, most rodeo cowboys are weekend warriors. Of the almost 10,000 members of the PRCA, only about 500 compete full time, estimates T.J. Walter, director of rodeo administration. The rest toil at everything from surgery to sales, and compete in their spare time.

Relatively few work cattle or even want to. "That's hard work, every day," Holt said, calling ranch hands "the only real cowboys left."

Ask rodeo cowboys why they want to rope and ride when such skills are rarely needed, and they look puzzled by the question.

"I just always wanted to rodeo since I was a little kid," said Jimmy Morris, a 23-year-old bull rider from Duncan, Okla., who competed at Mesquite recently. "Once you start, it's kind of like a drug. It's addictive."

"Whenever you can conquer anything three or four times your size, I guess it's an ego trip," he said.

For most participants, the satisfaction derived from rodeo is worth the tremendous amount of time and money required by the sport.

"I do this because it's in my blood," said Buffie McCullough of Dayton, Texas, during the recent Texas Black Invitational Rodeo at Dallas' Fair Park.

Ms. McCullough, 32, is a barrel racer. Her husband wrestles steers and ropes calves. Their 4-year-old daughter, Taylor, clad in a tiny hat and boots, rides in barrel-racing exhibitions.

During the week, Ms. McCullough works as a legal secretary in Houston. On Fridays her family loads their horses and hits the rodeo trail.

"Last night we were at one rodeo, tonight we're here, and tomorrow we'll be at another one," she said.

She's been traveling at that pace for 14 years. She and her husband spent their honeymoon at a rodeo.

"We would like to do this full time," Ms. McCullough said wistfully. "But we don't have the money."

Few do. Even those who rodeo for a living don't earn bucketfuls of cash, particularly by professional athletic standards. In 1994 for instance, the top all-around cowboy in the world, Ty Murray of Stephenville, earned $246,170 for competing in three events year-round. The average major-league baseball player's salary is $1.07 million this season.

Unlike most pro athletes, rodeo cowboys generally must pay to play, forking out entry fees and travel expenses.

That commitment to competing is part of what keeps longtime fan John Wroten returning to Mesquite every week. Rodeo cowboys are "the true entrepreneur," said Wroten, a vice president at EDS in Dallas. "I mean in the truest definition of American entrepreneurship - they put up their own money."

The money they put up is more than a few dimes dug out of a jeans pocket. Joe Beaver of Huntsville, last year's No. 2-ranked all-around cowboy, estimates that he spends as much as $60,000 a year in entry fees and travel expenses in 250 days on the road, according to the PRCA. Equipment such as horses, ropes, saddles and custom-made chaps is extra.

Society of the United States has called for a ban on rodeos, contending that they are cruel.

Rick Evans, a humane society investigator from Corpus Christi, said outlawing rodeos in Texas is "a hopeless cause," because of the sport's popularity, but "there could be a lot of cleaning up."

He is particularly bothered by the use of electric prods on horses and cattle and by the calf-roping competition, in which a 250-pound calf is yanked back by a rope around its neck, then slammed to the ground.

Rodeo officials deny that the sport is cruel, stressing that the animals work only a few seconds a week and use of electric prods is limited. According to a 1993-94 survey conducted by veterinarians at 28 PRCA rodeos, the injury rate of animals is less than five-hundredths of 1 percent.

"These animals are a lot better taken care of than the saddle horses at a riding stable," said Neal Gay, managing director of the Mesquite Championship Rodeo, driving through lush pastures on the ranch near Terrell, where he keeps hundreds of rodeo horses and cattle.

Livestock economics dictates that they are well taken care of, he added.

"Even if you hated 'em intensive-ly ... hey, you're not going to give $7,000 for a horse ... then mistreat it," he said.

For most cowboys, the costs of rodeoing are offset by an intangible that more affluent athletes can't buy: freedom.

No coaches oversee practice, no trainers tape injuries, no manager makes travel arrangements from Yoakum to Gladewater.

"We go where we want, when we want, and if we don't want to, we don't go," said the PRCA's T.J. Walter, who said he traveled 85,000 miles a year while living and rodeoing in Texas.

The self-reliance fostered by rodeo is invaluable, said Damon Rogers, the Bandera rodeo clown. Despite their comic appearance, clowns are also called bullfighters because their job is to distract the bull so the cowboy can escape to safety.

Rogers, who works at a San Antonio-area golf course during the day and clowns at night, said rodeo taught him "to be a survivor. It showed me no matter what, just cowboy up a little harder and you're going to make it. Just cowboy up."

"Cowboy up," which means "try harder against adversity," is a phrase heard frequently around rodeo chutes.

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says wise men talk because they have something to say; fools talk because they have to say something.

A couple of farmers decided to play one of those resort golf courses, according to Gene Dow in the Seminole Sentinel.

Upon arrival, the two West Texans were told they couldn't play since no caddies were available.

"Well, heck," said one, "We don't care; we'll take a Buick."

We started getting excited about the coming football season this week. Coach Danny Haney and three of his assistants presented a program at Lions Club and their enthusiasm for the upcoming season was very evident.

They praised the attitude and dedication of the Herd gridders, and the three aides were excited about some changes being made in coaching assignments and in offensive and defensive philosophies.

A Hereford teacher called this week to challenge the article we published Aug. 4 about teacher pay raises, saying the facts were all wrong. However, we checked with Supt. Charles Greenawalt and the facts were correct. The article did not spell out the formula by which teacher salaries are determined, which may be what the teacher had in mind.

The article reported that all teachers will be raised to $1,000 above the state minimum for a bachelor's degree or $1,500 above the minimum for a master's degree. Other professionals will receive a $500 raise.

Because of determining factors, all teachers did not actually receive a net $1,000 or $1,500 raise. The actual raise for each teacher could be more than $1,500 or as little as $500--depending on those other factors. The state raised minimum teacher salaries, from $17,000 to $18,500 for beginners, and from $28,400 to $32,080 for those with master's degrees and 20 years experience.

A number of class reunions were held here during the Town & Country Jubilee and that reminds us of a story about the gal who showed up at class reunions every other year with a new husband.

Her first husband had money--lots of it--and she lived the good life in luxury. She had everything she wanted, until he died of a stroke. Her second husband was an actor in Hollywood and she lived the life of the glamorous, mixing with the rich and famous, until he died of cancer.

Her third husband was different. He was a minister and her lifestyle changed drastically. The neckline of her dresses went up, the makeup was muted, as was her demeanor. She lived the life of the pious, until he died of a heart attack.

Her fourth husband was a mortician and as a dutiful wife, she assisted him in every way possible in preparing for funeral services. Then she died.

She was buried in her hometown and at the class reunion the following year, her classmates voted to install a headstone that pertained to her four husbands and read:

"One for the money,
Two for the show,
Three to make ready
And four to go."

Cockleburrs and Devil's Claws

By Georgia Tyler

Growing up in a dusty West Texas town in the '30s doesn't exactly prepare one for life in the big, wide world. Culturally speaking, that kind of childhood was stifling, if not retarding.

In a community such as mine, there were the usual Protestant churches -- Baptist, Methodist, Church of Christ -- and a Catholic church.

Notice, there were no synagogues. Until I was grown, the only place I'd ever seen the word probably was in the Bible.

Then I went out into the big, wide wonderful world and learned that the people who go to synagogues are no different from the rest of us and certainly have a wider choice of food.

All of this is by way of saying that I became addicted to food from Jewish delicatessens and bakeries while living in New York.

And, my all-time favorite is the bagel, in whatever flavor, as long as it's not full of raisins.

A friend in the Big Apple introduced me to the bagel. I had often heard the phrase "lox and bagels" and had no more idea than a goose what kind of food either was.

Never one to admit to ignorance, I feigned a knowledgeable ability I didn't have when I first was asked if I liked bagels. Yes and no, I muttered. To my great surprise, she put a pumpernickel and onion bagel, fresh from a nearby bakery, in front of me, along with a block of cream cheese.

Gingerly, I smeared a little cheese on part of the bagel and bit off a very small piece. As I chewed, I thought it tasted pretty good, and by the time I finished half the bagel, I was hooked. Although bagels come in all sorts of flavors now, my favorites still are the plain and the pumpernickel-onion.

Before moving to New York, I had very little experience with delis. The genre was big in New York. It seemed there was one on every corner. A famous eatery at one time (maybe still) was the Sixth Avenue Delicatessen in midtown Manhattan. Heaven knows the goodies that came out of that place.

Corned beef, pastrami, roast beef were high on the meat list. Of course, there was no ham, but who needs it when there are all these other tasty treats.

Not a sandwich anywhere could compete with one of those wonders with its thinly sliced meat piled high on a roll that often was the crunchy hard variety. On the side, that Kosher dill pickle was just tart enough.

To finish off a snack, the deli often featured just-baked dessert treats. But again, a simple coconut macaroon couldn't be beat.

While learning the virtues of a kind of cookery totally foreign to my upbringing, I discovered much about the culture that spawned it. On one occasion I was surprised when a neighbor in my apartment building mentioned that she and her family had to be in Brooklyn before sundown. A quiet question to another brought an answer -- Passover would begin that evening.

Then, I realized why so many food items, from soft drinks to meats, bore special labels, "Kosher for Passover."

Across the parkway from the apartment building where we lived was a synagogue. My girls were confused about its members going to worship on Saturday.

The older one made a move toward ecumenical spirit when she asked why we didn't go with them on Saturday and to our Presbyterian church next door on Sunday. What's the answer? I don't know.

Then, when she started school there was a new trauma. Certain Jewish holidays were school holidays. So, coupled with Christian holidays, there were a number of days off.

During December, the cultural difference struck again.

My daughter came home singing a song about the Maccabees, identifying it as a Hannukah song.

Do you sing any Christmas songs, I asked.

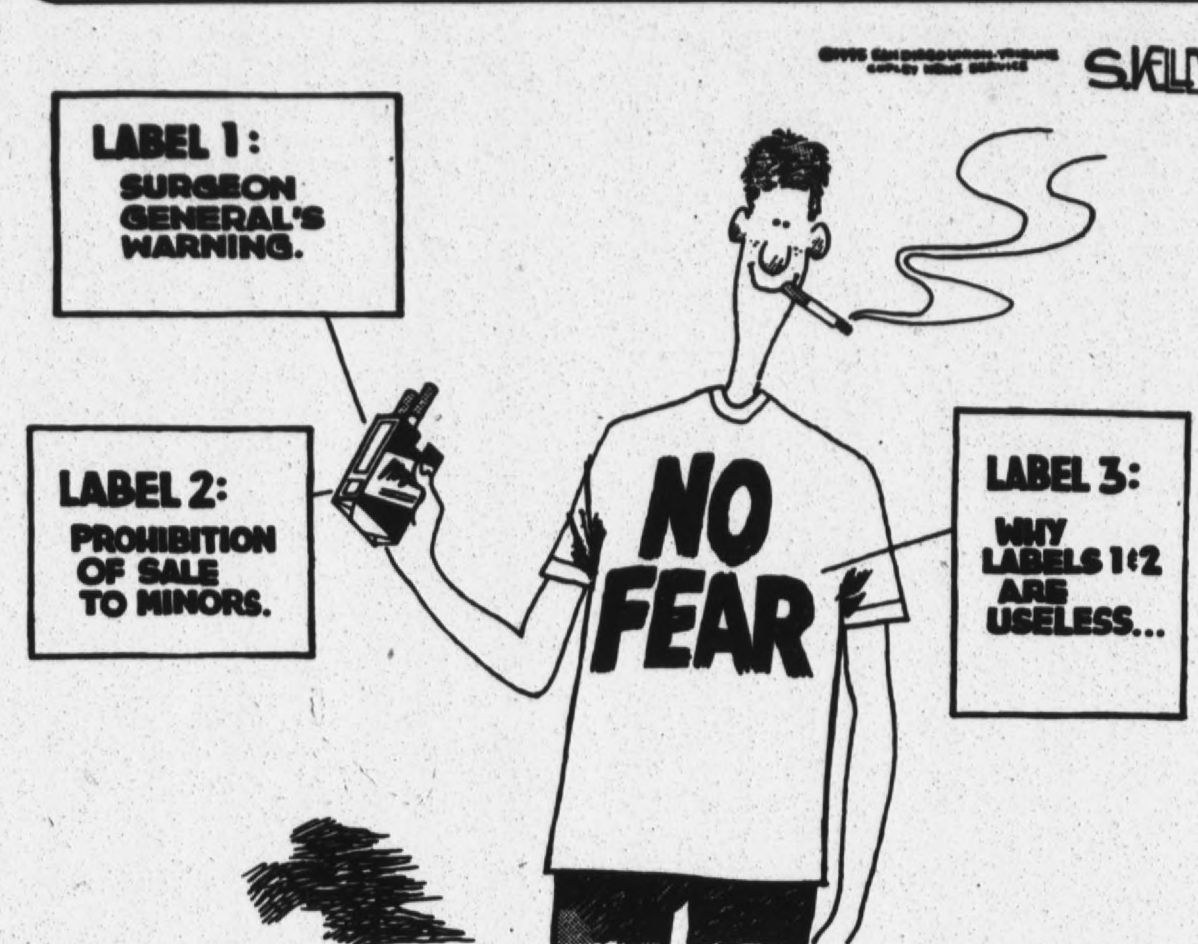

Well, we sing "Jingle Bells," she reported.

It mattered not to a five-year-old. Nor to her family.

Now, back to "lox and bagels." Turns out lox is a kind of smoked salmon.

The two go together very well, I can testify.

Some people will do anything to make a point!

You know, we get the strangest stuff through our offices here. One recent Monday I was working at my desk when a large box was placed on my desk. It had been shipped Federal Express Priority Overnight delivery from Manassas, Va., and was addressed to me.

I opened it, not knowing quite what to expect.

What I got was completely unexpected. Inside the paper packaging was a sealed Monopoly game with a blue paper attached.

The "news release," if that's what it could be called, admonished me to "Stop the Monopoly Bill: Telecom Reform is not a Game."

It told me that there is a bill moving through the U.S. House that threatens life as we know it because of competition in the telecommunications field.

The only indication of who sent this is the name at the bottom of the news release -- the Competitive Long Distance Coalition.

Out of the Blue

I don't know who they are or anything else.

The packing label did list a telephone number with a 202 area code, which indicates it was mailed from Washington D.C.

Now I don't know much about telecommunications reform (or lack thereof) and I don't really know how much this would (or would not) impact us living here in Hereford, Texas, so I am not likely to be very opinionated on the subject.

What is interesting, however, is to figure how much this organization (probably a Political Action Committee or the like) spent to send Monopoly games to newspapers.

After all, as much as the Brand is an important part of life in Hereford, I doubt it tops the lobbyists' list of places to send hard-hitting news releases.

Now just suppose they sent these games to the top 10,000 papers in the country.

With a retail price of about $20, they probably bought them for $10 each.

Add about $20 each for priority Federal Express mailing and they've now spend $30 per newspaper times 10,000 newspapers, or $300,000 to get their message out.

I would guess many of the newspapers probably wouldn't write editorials on the subject because they got a game in the mail. But even if only 10 percent did, that would be 1,000 newspapers writing columns about telecommunications reform.

If 10 percent of those editorials swayed the votes of members of Congress, then 100 votes would be changed.

That, depending on how much support it has, could very well change the outcome of the measure entirely. So I guess the $300,000 could have been well spent.

If nothing else, I got something out of it all -- a Monopoly game. I think I'll run home and buy Boardwalk!

Ex-student writes about HHS reunion

BY LYNN BRISENDINE
Brownfield News

Reunion, a word that can send chills up the back of the bravest folks. It is an ordeal to be endured; it is a spiritual festival to be cherished.

Meeting with old classmates, people we shared life's formative years with so long ago, is a two-sided event. We shared the challenges of becoming who we are, growing up and using those people to mold our beings. At the time, of course, we had no way of knowing that is what we were doing.

A reunion recalls so many things. It brings out the old stories of school, of good times, and not so fond memories. But it also brings out the many stories of years full of struggle and triumphs, from that time to the present we all have arrived at in so many ways.

It is a weekend to share the best times of life. Those shining times which seem to flow like golden honey, pure and smooth, sweet to the taste and pleasant to recall. It is also a time to share the other memories. Those moments in life that are like pulling a rusty nail from an old oak board, with a too-small claw hammer. But finally, even the most stubborn nail, like the worst of times, falls free.

A reunion is one of life's affirmations. A time to meet the truest peers we have in life--the people who we grew to adulthood with, knowing, liking, loving, hating, ignoring...but always there in those years of learning about life.

In a strange way, it takes courage to go back and face those memories. Fortitude is required to walk into a group of life's judges and see their reaction to thinning hair, pot bellies and the many other vagaries of life which Father Time has visited on each of us.

Some don't have the courage. They remain at home, not wanting to face the anguish, not wanting to confront...what...the passage of years?

Well, the good thing is we have all faced the currents of time. And surprisingly enough, we not only have done pretty well with the extra years, but their ravages don't seem to count for a great deal. The workings of the event seem to mollify those conditions of nature. No one cared about hair and pounds.

One fellow said, "Well, I suppose we have become a lot wiser since the spring of '65." I sat and thought about for a moment and decided that wiser probably wasn't the proper term. Experienced was more fitting. We had all become more experienced, more forgiving, more tolerant and, dare I say it, more loving toward one another.

My class of '65 is probably no different than most other classes. We became lawyers, professors, nurses, professional people, farmers and a couple of cowboys, secretaries, housewives, preachers, and one newspaper fellow.

Some folks wrote of their careers. Some simply penned their names and addresses. The dominate theme throughout the pages of typewritten information were the important items in life. The mention of children and grandchildren were the most enduring terms of news shared.

Poignant messages abounded. A widow, now remarried, recalled her three decades with the line: "I've had two lives on this earth at this time."

Reunion is affirmation.

The Dallas Morning News on social security and politics: 1996 presidential hopefuls, take note. Gather your strategists and consider who happened at the Dallas Convention Center Friday.

A New York investment banker wowed a United We Stand America about a subject normally banished from American politics: redoing the Social Security system. A standing ovation, in fact, rose from the crowd as banker Pete Peterson told United We Stand followers that Americans must come together to reform Social Security. Otherwise, the system will be bankrupt within 20 years.

Huh? Someone with the courage to talk specifically about reforming Social Security, which consumes more than 20 percent of the federal budget? And drawing applause?

Yes, strange things were happening in the Dallas Convention Center Friday. There were delays and schedule changes, but there were plenty of issues put on the table, as promised.

Concord Coalition Chairman Pete Peterson was not the only person to talk plainly. The Rev. Jesse Jackson preached deficit reduction, bringing ministers together to reclaim juveniles, and the plight of those left behind in American society. The audience was largely white and middle class, but Mr. Jackson drew solid applause as he challenged America to "reorder its priorities."

Indeed, a desire to reorder American priorities largely has fueled United We Stand's growth. Random interviews with participants Friday revealed that balancing the federal budget still is their top concern. Cleaning up Washington's lobby culture is a top priority, too.

But Mr. Peterson's address sticks in the mind. The swell of the baby boom generation will mean that by the 2020s, the number of Americans over 65 will have doubled, he said. We will have become "a nation of Floridas," he warned.

Mr. Peterson went on to dish out more hard truths: that retirees actually get back far more in benefits than they pay in Social Security taxes and that taxes would have to be raised from 11 percent to as much as 22 percent to meet future demand. Without reforms, he warned, the only way future retirees "can stay above water is by pulling under their own kids."

He also set forth concrete alternatives to reform Social Security: Raise the retirement age over the next 20 years; create an affluence tax, where retirees above the median income have some benefits withheld; and create a portable savings plan, where a percentage of payroll taxes are diverted into a savings plan.

These things we must do, Mr. Peterson said, if we are to save Social Security from economic ruin. Comparing the challenge to the courage it took to win World War II, he concluded, "We're not talking about taking some island or beach, we're talking about saving our country." Fortunately, the crowd cheered. Politicians, take note.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:
There seems to be some shortages today that we didn't have years ago. The shortage I am talking about is love.

Oh, I receive plenty of love and loving attention at home but looking at the newspaper, there is way, way too much violence in homes, schools or public places.

God did not create us to be violent. He created us to be loving persons, just as God is Love. If parents are loving toward each other, then it should show up in the children. As the children go to school, this should rub off on other students. If there is violence in the home, there will be violence at school and everywhere else.

As another school year starts, let's try to show more love and respect to the teachers, principals and other people in charge. If you don't know how to pray...learn, then you'll have a good school year with little or no violence.

As I said earlier, God is Love, and we are made in his image. Children and adults both are hurt mentally, emotionally and sometimes physically, by violence. Learn how to (1)pray; (2)talk it over; (3)or walk away, whether it be at home, school or work.

Audience gags on putrid puns

OCEAN CITY, N.J. (AP) - How did the 11-year-old boy take top honors at a joke contest? He was very punny.

Conshohocken, Pa., resident William Ryan won the putrid puns contest during "Weird Contest Week" with this gem: "What do you call the contract for a lawyer who works for the sanitation department? A sani-clause!"

It got worse. Only seven people entered Friday and their puns were so awful the sun-drenched crowd of 80 barely managed a moan.

"I guess I lost another pupil," the professor said, as his glass eye slid down the drain," said James Szczepaniak-Gillece, 11, of Ocean City.

Next up was his sister, Juliette Szczepaniak-Gillece, 7. "Have you heard about the stick of butter? Oh, I don't want to spread it around."

The most imaginative entry came from 8-year-old Jesse Levy of Fairlawn. But it took a minute to figure out. Levy got up on stage wearing a baseball cap that had playing cards arranged on top, in the manner of a dorsal fin.

He walked around on the stage saying, "Doo-doo. Doo-Doo. Doo-Doo," trying to sound like the theme from "Jaws."

The crowd was puzzled. Contest organizer Mark Soifer approached Levy and asked him what he was doing.

"I'm a card shark," he said.

Closing arguments Monday in Reynolds sex abuse trial

CHICAGO (AP) - Both sides rested their cases, and closing arguments were set for Monday in the sex-abuse trial of Rep. Mel Reynolds. Reynolds, 43, is charged with having sex with a campaign worker when she was 16 and 17. He says he is the innocent victim of racial bias by a white prosecutor.

The jury heard from three witnesses - all Chicago police officers - before they were sent home for the weekend.

All three have testified before, but were brought back by prosecutors to contradict Thursday's testimony by Sophia Green, a volunteer and friend for the two-term Democrat. Reynolds' accuser, Beverly Heard, 19, testified that she had three-way sex with Green and Reynolds when she was underage.

Green was called by the defense to deny the allegations.

Rodeo

Even more than other sports, rodeo has a culture of its own, evidenced in everything from language to dress to etiquette.

The PRCA dress code, generally followed by other rodeo groups, requires long-sleeved shirts, jeans, cowboy hats and boots. Paying homage to the sport's Western heritage is so important that contestants are fined for not complying.

No one seems to mind, even though other attire might be more comfortable.

"The Western heritage is what we still want," said Hearn, the Lancaster calf roper. "I believe that when my grandkids are doing it, they to still want to look like a cowboy."

The sportsmanship ethos of rodeo is less structured than the dress code but no less prevalent.

Cowboys, many of whom travel together to save money, develop a strong camaraderie. Booing and catcalls are heard rarely at rodeos, and competing cowboys routinely help each other in the chute and root for each other in the arena.

"That's something about rodeo - it's always been there - that you help your fellow competitor," said Walter of the PRCA. "There isn't any written reason why."

Other unwritten rules include a remarkable politeness. The rodeo arena is a world of "yes ma'ams" and "no sirs," where hats are doffed automatically when the American flag passes by, and public and private prayer is commonplace.

Almost every rodeo opens with an invocation such as the cowboy prayer recited recently at the Texas Black Invitational Rodeo: "We don't ask that we never break the barrier or draw the steer that won't lay or draw around a chute fighting a horse or bull that is impossible to ride. Help us to compete in life's arena ... so that when we make that last inevitable ride ... as our final judge you will tell us that our entry fees are paid."

Drug use is not unknown in rodeo, but cowboys are more likely to dip snuff, chew tobacco and drink. Neither drug nor alcohol abuse is as widespread as in other sports, Dr. Evans said.

Finally, cowboys dance in honky-tonks but not in the arena. Hot-dogging - celebratory rituals after a good showing - may be accepted at Texas Stadium, but not at the rodeo arena.

"It's just the way people were raised," Walter said of cowboy courtesy. "They weren't raised around that kind of thing."

Rodeo's old-fashioned, flag-waving, Bible-believing flavor normally is associated with rural America. But while rodeo started in small towns, urban cowboys are keeping it alive in '95.

"I have people who literally can't ride in a pickup with both doors closed but show up at every rodeo," said Hearn.

A 1991 survey conducted for the PRCA showed that only 15 percent of rodeo audiences hold ranch or farm

"There's something about rodeo - it's always been there - that you help your fellow competitor." - PRCA cowboy jobs. The largest segment - 30 percent - work as professionals or managers.

At many rodeos, spectators are heavily sprinkled with tourists on a quest for the West.

"Everybody (who) comes to Texas wants to see a cowboy and see a rodeo," said John Singleton, producer of Bandera's semiprofessional Tuesday night rodeo. "That's the first thing they want to do."

That's what Robert Burnett wanted when he came to Texas recently. A weekly rodeo is held in his home state of New Jersey, but he's never attended. Instead he wanted to see cowboys in Texas.

"Texas is the West, is it not?" he asked.

So he donned a bolo tie and visited Mesquite, where he was particularly fascinated by the bull riding.

Bull riding is a crowd pleaser everywhere, but particularly in Texas, where the event was introduced in Fort Worth in 1920. Bronc riders tend to come from Northwestern states, rodeo folk say, while Texas breeds bull riders and calf ropers. The all-time bull-riding champion, Don Gay, Neal Gay's son, is a Texan who holds eight titles.

Singleton doesn't include saddle bronc or bareback riding competition in the semiprofessional rodeos he produces in Bandera because not enough local cowboys are interested. But he has plenty of bull riders.

"Everybody in Texas likes bulls," he said.

Bull riding's popularity is based on its high danger quotient, according to both laymen and experts.

"Everybody wants to see somebody get hurt," said bull rider Kelly Holt.

Dr. Don Beck, sports psychologist, and director of the National Values Center in Denton, said spectators just want "the thrill of the moment, of the potential of someone getting hurt."

"If there's no risk, there's no excitement," he said.

The risk is definitely high: 43 percent of rodeo injuries occur during bull-riding competition, according to the PRCA.

The greatest peril comes not during the ride but after the fall.

Unlike horses, which flee when the rider is bucked off, bulls hunt the rider. A cowboy scurrying for the fence may be trampled by wickedly slashing hooves or hooked by horns. The horns must be clipped so the tips are no smaller than a half dollar, but they still can prove fatal.

During the 1994 National Finals Rodeo in Las Vegas, 25-year-old Brent Thurman of Austin died after a bull stepped on his head and neck. In May, another cowboy, Fidel Rodriguez, 30, of Eagle Pass, was killed at a rodeo in Comfort, Texas.

Tara Mathias, Thurman's

girlfriend, said she generally has no regrets about his professional choice.

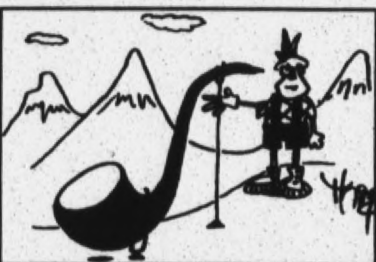

"You see so many people that die in car wrecks going to a job they can't stand," she said. "He died doing what he loved to do. We should all be so lucky."

Many bull riders have begun wearing protective vests, which is helping lessen injuries, Dr. Evans said. Some cowboys also wear mouthpieces, but they show little interest in helmets.

Marty Gavranovic of Wharton, Texas, said "the whole left side of my face is plastic," but he shakes his head at the idea of wearing a helmet.

The 23-year-old said he got "hit by a horn" two years ago, requiring facial reconstruction. Now he's easing back into competition, but without a helmet, because it throws him off balance.

Gavranovic's attitude is typical - causing some to question the sanity of bull riders.

Herd faces '95 with new strategies, old TB

By JAY PEDEN
Sports Editor

With a new approach, a new defense and the same old tailback, coach Danny Haney hopes to get the Hereford football team back in the playoffs for the first time since 1992.

The newly-installed 5-2 defense and tailback Marquise Brown have been the stars of both intrasquad scrimmages, the second of which was played Friday evening.

In the first two simulated quarters Friday, the offense - without Brown - did almost nothing against the aggressive first-team defense, which included Brown at safety. It was the same way in the first intrasquad scrimmage Monday, but it was even better Friday, Haney said.

"We really improved on defense," he said. "The defense got more aggressive. We couldn't move the ball. We had a few big plays (later in the scrimmage) but the defense really shut the offense down."

When Brown came in to run at tailback in the third quarter, he sparked. He ran for three touchdowns, including dashes of 50 and 71 yards. His first TD, a one-yarder, was set up by a spectacular run. He was sandwiched by defenders near the line of scrimmage, but he kept his knees pumping high, emerged from the pile and raced another 30 yards.

Brown's combination of speed and surprising power has led him to 1,959 rushing yards in two seasons as the Herd's tailback. He ran for 1,129 yards as a sophomore in 1993, then went for 830 last season despite missing essentially two games after spraining his ankle on the first play of the season opener.

With Brown, Haney feels that the running game will be a strength of the team. He also said he feels good about the controlled passing attack which will likely be directed by either Todd Dudley or Joseph Artho.

Dudley saw limited action on varsity last year, hitting 4-of-7 for 55 yards and one touchdown. He backed up Michael Brown, who has gone on to Eastern New Mexico University.

Artho was successful quarterbacking the Herd junior varsity last season.

Haney seems really excited about the new defense.

"It's a forcing defense," he said. "The down men cancel gaps and force the offense to run outside. It allows the linebackers and secondary to take care of those situations."

It's patterned after the scheme used by the University of Arizona, whose defenders are so tough and aggressive they earned the nickname "Desert Swarm."

The new Herd defense also draws from traits of the "46" defense used successfully by Buddy Ryan in the NFL for Chicago, Philadelphia, Houston and now Arizona.

The Herd will need the kind of success those defenses have had to handle the attacks it'll see this season.

Borger, in District 1-4A with Hereford, features several returning stars: running back Cornell Jones, quarterback Toby Guest and wideout Tim Baker. The Bulldogs are picked by Texas Football Magazine to win the district title. They'll start the season ranked No. 10 in Class 4A by the Associated Press.

Borger will have only one of the good running attacks Hereford will (Tail)back for another year

Hereford tailback Marquise Brown (2) returns for his third year as the Herd's featured runner. Brown, now a senior, ran for 1,129 yards in 1993 and gained 830 last season despite an ankle injury in the first game of the season. His total of 1,959 leaves him less than a thousand yards from Matt Bromlow's career Herd rushing record of 2,913, set in 1990.

Herd coaching staff features new look

Hereford football coach Danny Haney's staff underwent its biggest shakeup in years this off-season.

After four years as the Herd's offensive coordinator, Craig Yenzler will serve as defensive coordinator this season.

Moving up to offensive coordinator after only one year in Hereford is J.R. Compton. He was a standout running back for West Texas State and even played briefly for the NFL's New York Giants.

The one outside addition to the Hereford staff is another former WT running back, Tim Anuszkiewicz (pronounced an-uh-SKA-vitch, nicknamed "A-to-Z"). The Canyon product coached at Friona last year.

This year, like all coaches except the coordinators, he'll coach a position on offense and defense. The line-up:

--Anuszkiewicz: defensive backs and receivers.

--Ron Young: defensive ends and tight ends.

--Joe Cabezuela: defensive ends and receivers.

--Bill Bridge: defensive tackles/nose tackles and offensive linemen.

--Chris Christopher (moving up from sophomore coach): defensive tackles and tight ends.

--Haney: defensive backs and offensive linemen.

Not only does each coach have two positions, each position has two coaches.

"With two coaches at each position," Haney said, "it allows us to divide up and give the athletes more repetition at each position."

The sophomore coaches are Britt Narrell and Charlie Garza.

Longtime varsity assistants Mike Purcell and Stan Carter both resigned last spring. Purcell, the defensive coordinator last year, came back to the Hereford program several months after resigning to take a coaching position at Hereford Junior High.

Bengals' Carter to miss season

CINCINNATI (AP) - Everyone wondered how long Ki-Jana Carter would last behind the Cincinnati Bengals' woeful offensive line.

The answer came on the third carry of his career.

The top pick in the NFL draft is out for the season with a torn anterior cruciate ligament in his left knee. Carter most likely will need reconstructive surgery - one of the most dreaded operations for a running back.

The Bengals gave their fans reason to hope when they drafted Carter and then signed him to a seven-year contract that included a rookie-record $7.1 million bonus. The hope vanished before hometown fans got to see him play a down.

Carter sat out the first two preseason games with a strained Achilles tendon. He was hurt on his third carry in a 20-13 loss Thursday night to Detroit at the Silverdome.

"I'm deeply sorry," a subdued Carter said Friday after leaving a hospital. "It's just a freak thing that happened. I'm sorry that I haven't played at Riverfront yet. They haven't seen me. I promise them that when I come back, they will see a good running back and I'll be fine. When I get back, they'll be very excited."

The Bengals also lost backup quarterback David Klingler to injury. X-rays found that he broke his jaw when he was hit while trying to pass Thursday night. Klingler will be out for eight to 10 weeks.

The injuries left a palpable gloom around the team's Spinney Field workout facility Friday. Coach Dave Shula, usually even-tempered under the most trying circumstances, was terse with the media. General manager Mike Brown appeared to be lost in thought as he walked through the building.

Everyone around Carter appeared shocked by an injury that seemed almost inevitable given the woeful state of the offensive line.

Brown let an already weak line deteriorate in the offseason. Guard Dave Cadigan retired, leaving a huge hole in a line that already was inadequate. The backups have little NFL game experience.

Signing Carter was akin to buying a priceless vase, then setting it on a table missing a leg. Even by the most optimistic assessment, it was a huge gamble.

"We put our money down and we made the bet," Brown said. "Sometimes you win and sometimes you don't. At least for this year, this is one we won't win. It doesn't mean it won't come around in the future."

There's no way of telling how long Carter will be sidelined or whether he'll regain all of the speed and explosiveness that made him a No. 1 draft pick.

Carter will visit Dr. James Andrews in Birmingham, Ala., for a second opinion. Surgery is probable, trainer Paul Sparling said.

Spikers win 3-of-4 scrimmage games

The Lady Whitefaces volleyball team started the 1995 season not with a match against Tascosa but with a scrimmage against Tascosa - the result of a last-minute decision.

Call it a win, unofficially.

Hereford beat Tascosa in three out of the four games played Friday night in Whiteface Gym. The Herd won the first game 15-7, lost the second 15-8, then came back with a 15-2 win. Hereford even won the fourth bonus game, 15-10.

"For the first time out, I'm very pleased," Hereford coach Brenda Reeh said. "We didn't play error-free, but we certainly played very well for this time of the year."

"There were times when our focus kind of slipped little bit, but I was pleased we were able to gather ourselves and come back and win the match," Reeh said. "We've really been trying to teach these kids to concentrate. At times (Friday) we focused very well. We played points that in past seasons have gone down at this time of the year."

Hereford was to play Amarillo High Saturday morning in Amarillo. That became the official season-opener for Hereford when Reeh and Tascosa coach Carrie Slechta decided Thursday night to call their match a scrimmage.

Despite missing out on the chance to start off in the win column, Reeh was glad of the decision.

"I think our kids as well as myself enjoyed the scrimmage atmosphere," she said. "We've been used to having scrimmages, and it helps us get over our jitters. Between Tascosa and Amarillo High in less than 24 hours, it'd be easy to give into nervousness, because they are two very good teams."

have to stop.

"What's been a priority for us is getting after the run," Haney said. "You've got to be able to stop the run in high school football."

"Our defense gives the linebackers responsibility outside; they have no responsibility inside," he said. "Where (Borger) could fake inside, or (Jones) could bounce it outside, we've been fooled that way before."

"We want to force people either to run the option against us or throw," Haney continued. "That puts pressure on our corners to cover the pass, but that's the only responsibility they have."

Hereford returns five full-time starters on defense: end David Hicks, tackle Michael Kriegshauser, corner Tanner Murphey and linebackers Armando Zambrano and Martin Martinez.

Another new approach Haney is trying is having each player learn a position on defense and on offense. This may lead to some players going both ways in games, but who and how much remains to be seen.

"We've changed our philosophy as far as platooning," Haney said. "All of our coaches coach both sides of the football, and all our players play both sides of the football. We're going to ask some of our players to play both ways."

The one player who played the most on both sides of the ball last year was Zambrano. He never gave up his starting linebacker spot, but when Brown went down on the first play of the opener against Tascosa, Zambrano stepped in.

He stepped up, with 101 yards in that game and 161 the next week against Palo Duro. When Brown returned in the third week, Zambrano was still a big part of the offense, finishing with 466 yards.

Zambrano will stay at linebacker on defense, but he's moving to tight end on offense. The candidates to back up Brown include Dwayne Thomas, Freddie Jimenez, Stephen Cloud and T.J. Robbins.

(Robbins was moved to tailback "for depth," Haney said on Thursday, but he scored on a 70-yard run and a 60-yard screen pass in Friday's scrimmage. Now that's depth.)

Brown is one of two full-time starters returning for the offense. The other is fullback Josh Urbanczyk, who ran for 207 yards on 45 carries - that's an un-fall-back-ish average of 4.6 yards.

Raymond Gonzales started one game at tight end last year - he had three catches for 96 yards for the season - but he moves to wide receiver for this year. He joins a group of three who started at least one game last year: Ronald Torres, Stephen Wright and Jeb Skiles.

Torres had 10 catches for 154 yards, including the "Hail Mary" game-winner against Coronado. Skiles caught two for 29 yards. Wright's only catch, a 25-yarder, was also Dudley's lone touchdown pass.

"We've tried to develop more of a tight end offense," Haney said. "We've changed the blocking schemes up to give the running back more room. You've got to be able to run the football."

"In conjunction with that, over the off-season and through two-a-days, we've developed a play action passing game that really complements what we're trying to do running."

On the offensive line, the Herd returns three men who started at least one game and one who would have started. Bric Wall, who obviously should be a lineman, broke his ankle in two-a-days, then broke it again right before he came back. That cost him the season.

The three part-time starters were Samuel Berryman, Joseph Martinez (260 pounds) and Lorenzo Martinez (265 pounds).

The Herd also returns punter Brian Betzen, whose work last year Haney praised. A placekicker must be found to replace graduated Terance High; candidates include Zambrano, Martin Martinez, John Marty Galan and Adan Tarin.

Haney expects a dogfight for the District 1-4A championship. Borger looks great on paper, but so do Pampa and Hereford. Randall lost a lot of seniors, but they're certainly not excluded from the mix.

Hereford will play all three of the other top contenders on the road this season. To prepare for the tough district schedule, Hereford hosts two Class 5A schools, Tascosa (in the Sept. 8 opener) and Palo Duro, then goes on the road to face Lubbock Coronado and Frenship.

Hereford opens district play at Randall Oct. 6, then hosts Dumas the next week. The open date on the schedule is Oct. 20, after which the Herd goes to Borger.

Borger is picked in District 1-4A because it returns the three all-state candidates at the skill positions, Haney said, and because the Bulldogs will be big on the line.

Still, he's not conceding the district title to Borger.

"I understand why they pick (Borger), but I don't know how anybody can pick in this district," Haney said. "We've got 16 players coming back; Pampa's got the most in the district with 21; Borger's got 14 coming back; and Randall's coming off a three year playoff run."

Canyon performed well last year in its first season in Class 4A, Haney said, and Dumas and Caprock are improving. Hereford will play those three teams at Whiteface Stadium.

"I think the season is going to come down to who's playing the best at the right time," he said. Then decides to restate it:

"It's whoever is the best team. It doesn't matter how many starters you have back. It's how you play as a team that's going to make the difference for you in a playoff run."

Later, asked what will be the strength of the 1995 Herd, Haney skips over the new approach, the new defense and the experienced tailback. He cites an observation he's made in the past few days:

"We're coming together as a team. We're functioning as a team. We're working with each other and for each other."

to replace graduated Terance High; candidates include Zambrano, Martin Martinez, John Marty Galan and Adan Tarin.

Reds out-hustle, out-slug Astros

By TERRY KINNEY
Associated Press Writer
CINCINNATI (AP) - Jerome Walton left the game after crashing the centerfield wall trying to take a home run from Mike Simms. Reggie Sanders had a sore jaw from trying to make a diving catch on Derrick May's double.

What's with these guys?

"A pitcher on this team knows he has a great defense and he can get away with pitches and isn't afraid to challenge hitters," said David Wells (2-1) after the Cincinnati Reds beat the Houston Astros 8-3 Friday night.

"I mean, these guys go get 'em and aren't afraid to hurt themselves against a wall trying to make a catch. It makes the game a lot easier knowing those guys are going to make those plays."

Their play contradicted Houston manager Terry Collins' assessment that the Astros wanted this three-game series more than Cincinnati.

"This is a big series for us - a bigger series for us than them," Collins said. "We have to make a statement that we can play with them, and we haven't done it yet."

The Reds are 8-0 against Houston, which accounts for their eight-game margin over the second-place Astros in the NL Central. Manager Davey Johnson said his team seems to delight in beating Houston.

"We've gotten up for every series, every game we've played against them," Johnson said. "We weren't playing very well and they were playing very well when we went there in June and swept them four straight. That was the biggest series of the year for me. They put a lot of pressure on themselves by saying it was a big, big series and we took all four."

Both teams had been drifting lately. Cincinnati has won just five of its past 11 games, but the Astros have won only three of 11.

"They stack up well with us," said Reds slugger Ron Gant. "But I think we've got an edge speedwise and a little more power."

Gant drove in two runs with a homer, his 25th, and singled in a run.

"I needed something like that real bad," Gant said. "I was starting to worry a little bit. My confidence wasn't like it was earlier in the year. But when you hit a ball like that, you feel better about yourself and hope it's a sign of better things to come."

Simms accounted for two Houston runs with a sixth-inning homer, his fourth, off Wells who pitched six innings for his second win since being acquired from Detroit on July 31.

In other National League games, Chicago clobbered Colorado 26-7, St. Louis stopped Atlanta 4-3, Philadelphia outslugged San Francisco 16-8, New York downed Los Angeles 3-2, Montreal beat San Diego 7-3 and Pittsburgh swept a doubleheader from Florida, 13-7 and 7-6 in 13 innings.

Chicago 26, Colorado 7

The Cubs matched their post-1900 record for most runs in a game and came within three of the major league record, routing the Colorado Rockies

26-7 behind Luis Gonzalez's six RBIs.

"They could have thrown Bob Feller tonight and we were going to hit him. It was our night," Mark Grace said.

Bret Saberhagen was tagged for seven runs in only one-third of an inning, the shortest of his 304 starts in the majors. The Cubs led 9-1 when the game at Coors Field was delayed by rain for 2 hours and 45 minutes in the fourth, and when it resumed, so did the hits.

Gonzalez homered, doubled and singled. Sammy Sosa, who drove in four runs, and Todd Zeile, who drove in three, each had four hits with a home run.

Brian McRae led off the game with a bunt single, and Gonzalez hit a three-run homer off Saberhagen.

Mets 3, Dodgers 2

Brett Butler made an immediate impression in his return to the Dodgers, hitting a double and a tying, two-run triple in the seventh inning. But the Mets, who traded Butler back to Los Angeles for two minor leaguers a few hours before the game, won in the ninth at Shea Stadium on pinch-hitter Bill Spiers' suicide squeeze.

White Sox nip Rangers

CHICAGO (AP) - Tim Raines and Lance Johnson each had three hits, scored a run and drove in a run to lead the Chicago White Sox to a 3-1 victory over the Texas Rangers on Friday night.

The loss was just the third in the last 10 games for the Rangers, who currently hold the wild card spot.

Wilson Alvarez (5-7) pitched 5 2-3 innings, allowing one run on six hits and two walks with four strikeouts. Jose DeLeon pitched 2 1-3 innings of hitless relief and Roberto Hernandez got his 21st save.

Bobby Witt (1-1) went 7 2-3 innings for Texas in his second start since being acquired from Florida on Aug. 8. He allowed three runs on nine hits, walked five and struck out three.

Chicago took a 1-0 lead in the second when Ray Durham led off with a double, moved to third on Ron Karkovics' sacrifice and scored on Johnson's single.

The White Sox loaded the bases with no outs in the third on back-to-back singles by Raines and Frank Thomas and a walk to Robin Ventura. Mike Devereaux's sacrifice fly scored Raines for a 2-0 lead.

Chicago made it 3-0 in the fourth when Johnson singled, stole second, moved to third on an infield out and scored on Raines' third single of the game.

Lou Frazier opened the sixth with a single for Texas, and two outs later Mickey Tettleton walked. Rusty Greer followed with a single that scored Frazier and knocked out Alvarez. DeLeon relieved and got Craig Worthington on an infield grounder.

In other American League games, Seattle clubbed Boston 9-3, New York defeated California 7-3, Cleveland beat Milwaukee 7-5, Baltimore downed Oakland 8-4, Kansas City drubbed Toronto 10-3 and Detroit defeated Minnesota 3-1.

LaMarque, Stephenville sit atop Class 4A polls

By JAIME ARON
AP Sports Writer
DALLAS (AP) - It was inevitable. Linked by the last two championship games and an expected rematch in December, Stephenville and La Marque are tied for No. 1 atop Class 4A in The Associated Press preseason high school football poll.

Both received 295 points from a panel of 36 sportswriters and broadcasters, although two-time defending champion Stephenville received 14 first-place votes, compared to five for La Marque.

"It's very ironic," said Stephenville coach Art Briles, whose team's 32-game winning streak is currently the state's best. "There's nothing I'd like better than to meet them for the state title again. We're planning on it at this end, and I'm sure they are, too."

Agreed, said La Marque coach Alan Weddell.

"I hope we get another chance," said Weddell, who reminded that his Cougars have won 37 straight regular-season games, which he believes to be the longest current streak.

Champion-fever helped three other teams atop their classes in the preseason rankings. Only 2A's winner is not sitting at No. 1 heading into the opening weekend of Sept. 7-9.

In addition to having two No. 1 teams in 4A, fans also should follow the class to see which school will be the last to emerge as its unified champion.

Beginning in 1996, the 4A playoffs are being expanded a-la-5A to allow the three teams from each district into the postseason. The largest of the three will go into Division I and the other two go into Division II, eventually producing two separate but equal winners.

"I think that makes it more special to win this year because you'll be able to look back and see that it was the last (unified) one," Weddell said.

Although neither Stephenville nor La Marque will return many starters, both have systems that churn out quality players.

Stephenville's junior varsity hasn't lost the last few years and La Marque's freshmen have won the last two district titles.

Briles admits this year's team will not be as big or as deep as the last two, but he says they'll make up for it by being "scrappier and quicker than the last couple."

"We're going to double defend our title with everything we have," he said. "We really have some outstanding players that I think are going to blend in well with our schemes. Our players also have a tremendous amount of confidence."

Weddell said his team was voted No. 1 on reputation because his defense is full of question marks.

"We lost our entire defensive line, three of our four starting linebackers and two-thirds of our secondary," Weddell said.

But, he added, there is one major bright spot. For the first time in his six years at La Marque, he's returning his starting quarterback, Kwasi Cockrell.

There's even better news for the offense: another year of running back Derrick Foster, a 6-foot-1, 195-pound bruiser who also runs the 40 in 4.3 seconds.

As good as those two teams sound, voters had a hard time separating them from the pack. Corsicana came in a close third and even received 10 first-place votes.

The Tigers return 13 starters from an 11-4 team that was derailed 28-6 by Stephenville in the semifinals.

People are excited about Corsicana because of running back Ketric Sanford, who ran for a 4A-record 2,761 yards on a national-record 475 carries as a junior, and defensive back Malik Ledbetter, who had 107 tackles and 12 interceptions last season.

The rest of the preseason 4A top 10 includes Denison, Corpus Christi Calallen, Sulphur Springs, Southlake Carroll, Waxahachie, Jasper and Borger.

The recurring image of last year's 5A season was the thrilling final minutes of Tyler John Tyler's victory over Plano East in a Division II regional final.

The John Tyler Lions went on to win Division II and Plano won Division I its seventh state title to tie Brownwood for the state record.

The Lions were the runaway favorites in the class with 22 first-place votes. Plano was seventh.

Some familiar names bridge the six spots between last year's champions.

Odessa Permian is second, followed by Dallas Carter, Austin Westlake, Converse Judson and Aldine Eisenhower.

Eisenhower's district rival Aldine MacArthur came in eighth, then there was a big dip in voting until No. 9 Plano East and No. 10 Deer Park.

Sealy's undefeated rumble to the 3A title last year was so impressive that the Tigers are picked to do it again.

With Sealy returning quarterback Brad Burttschell and six other starters on offense plus nine more coming back on defense, it's no surprise the closer race is for second place. Cuero slipped in ahead of Tatum.

Springtown is fourth, followed by Commerce, Forney, Newton, Columbus, Port Isabel and Childress. Of the entire 3A top 10, only Sealy and Cuero were ranked when last season ended.

In 2A, whither Goldthwaite, winner of the last two state titles and a finalist the past three years.

The Eagles lost six two-way starters and have fallen to eighth. They didn't even get a first-place vote, as the seven teams ahead of them did.

Celina leads the class with 15 first-place votes and a milestone in the making. Coach G.A. Moore is nine victories from No. 300 and his youngest son, Gary Don, will be the quarterback trying to win it for him.

Schulenburg, last year's seasonlong No. 1, is ranked second, followed by a tie for third between Alto and Pilot Point. Refugio is sixth, then there's another tie between Riesel and Winters.

Groveton is ninth and Grand Saline is No. 10.

The 1A story again is expected to be Thorndale. Thirteen starters return from last year's scoring machine, good enough to convince 31 of the 36 voters that the Bulldogs are again No. 1.

There will plenty of challengers to Thorndale's attempt to become the first consecutive champ of the state's smallest 11-man class since Big Sandy won three straight in 1973-75.

Sudan is always tough and it's ranked second. Overton is third and Thorndale's arch-rival Bartlett is fourth. Robert Lee is fifth, followed by Wink, Iola, Wheeler, Roscoe, and Crawford.

The top teams don't change much in 1A. Of last season's final 10, eight are back in the preseason ranking.

Stephenville aims for another title

By MARK BABINECK
Associated Press Writer
STEPHENVILLE, Texas (AP) - Two state championships and 32 straight wins later, the Stephenville Yellow Jackets are ready to rebuild. Or is that reload?

"We're going to rebuild every year. That's the way our program's set up," said coach Art Briles of his two-time defending Class 4A champions. "We're going to be a senior-dominated ballclub. It's not a rebuilding process to us - it's just fill in the gaps and go on again."

Stephenville enters the season atop The Associated Press preseason high school football poll tied with La Marque, the team it's beaten in the last two finals.

If Briles sounds like the coach of a longtime perennial power, don't be fooled. Stephenville won its titles by leading the nation in scoring and yardage both times, but the Yellow Jackets hadn't had much of a sting before Briles arrived in 1988.

When Stephenville won a district title in 1989, it was the first league championship since 1952 for the town located an hour's drive southwest of Fort Worth.

Briles, a native of the Abilene area, says there's no secret to his success.

"We just came here with an attitude that we'd work hard and make ourselves the best we can be," said the 39-year-old former University of Houston receiver. "Once we got a taste of it we figured out we liked it."

Within a decade, the squad has leapt from mediocrity to the history books as one of the most dominating programs ever in Texas football. The potency of last year's offense was second only to the days of Kenneth Hall at Sugar Land.

More history could be in store. The Jackets are just 13 shy of breaking Cuero's 4A record of 44 consecutive wins in the mid-eighties.

At the heart of Stephenville's dominance is the offense. Quarterback Glenn Odell picked up last year where Brannon Stewart left off in 1993 by leading the Jackets to 37.3 points per game.

The returning players are basking in the glow of their second title, something they didn't have a chance to do a year ago. A former basketball coach's allegations of rampant steroid use and violations of University Interscholastic League codes sent Stephenville into the season under a dark cloud.

After the UIL called for a formal presentation of evidence against the program and received none, the matter was closed.

"We dealt with it - we're not naive enough to think everyone wants us to be successful," Briles said. "All that did was build our fire."

This season, concerns turn from a highly publicized controversy to something more tangible - a loss of size. Stephenville will be smaller, but fullback Brandon Duckett said that doesn't mean they'll be any less potent.

"There's this talk that we've lost size, but we'll be quick," said Duckett, whose nickname of "Life" stems from his hard-hitting linebacker twin brother, Brad "Death" Duckett. "We've all worked too hard not to (win a title) again."

As for that three-peat, Briles said he and the team don't feel undue pressure because of their recent accomplishments. He admitted that if they do make it to the finals again, he's got a feeling whom they might face.

"We knew La Marque was going to get there last year," said Briles of the back-to-back meeting of the teams, the first such instance since 1954. "We'd gladly play them again in the state finals, because we'll play it up here (in Fort Worth)."

Stephenville had to travel to Briles' old home field of the Astrodome last season thanks to a lost coin flip. Standout linebacker Cord Wood said he'd like to end his high school career in a game pitting two of the hottest cross-state rivals.

"I'd like to beat La Marque three years in a row," Wood said.

MacArthur wants return to playoffs

By MARK BABINECK
Associated Press Writer
HOUSTON (AP) - This year, it's personal.

Two years removed from a devastating last-minute, Class 5A finals loss to Lewisville and just a year after a series of events on the last day of the season killed a shot at the playoffs, Aldine MacArthur wants redemption.

And no one wants it more than quarterback Odell James.

"We want to get back," said James, referring to the state championship game his Generals made in an improbable 1993 run. A spate of personnel losses to grade ineligibility didn't stop them from reaching the title game against Lewisville, which beat MacArthur 43-37 in the waning moments.

MacArthur's return was thwarted last season when rival Aldine Westfield was stripped of its victories because of University Interscholastic League eligibility violations. That meant what had been a meaningless game against Aldine Eisenhower on the last Friday of the season became a must-win for MacArthur at 2:30 p.m. on gameday.

They didn't. Three other District 21-5A teams went to the postseason, and all three - Humble, Kingwood and Eisenhower - lost their first-round games.

"God punished them," joked coach Bob Alpert about a situation that will provide plenty of motivation for a team with serious intentions of placing a 1995 championship trophy in the school's spanking new athletic wing.

A defense that returns seven starters, one of the largest offensive lines in school history and experience at offensive skill positions across the board will be important elements for MacArthur, ranked No. 8 in The Associated Press preseason poll. But James, the 6-5, 215-pound senior with blazing speed, a linebacker's build and a cannon arm, is the key.

He sheepishly admits he can fling a football 75 yards, but he's much more comfortable talking about his quick receivers, his defense and part of his wrecking crew of a backfield.

Junior high was when James got his first taste of taking snaps, and he adjusted quickly. By the time he got to MacArthur he was their quarterback of the not-so-distant future.

"When I got up here, I started working on my quarterbacking skills and I just starting getting good," he said. "I worked really hard and started listening to the coaches."

James can do his talking on the field. In two seasons at the Generals' helm, he's racked up 2,646 rushing yards and 1,944 in the air. With fullback Satish Hodge, receiver David Patterson and running back Robert Walker all back for more, opposing defenses are going to have to pick their poison.

He points to Joe Montana's mental skills, Dan Marino's rifle release and Randall Cunningham's mobility as the things he wants to emulate.

Despite an onslaught of attention from college recruiters, James says he's concentrating on the task at hand.

"I'm not thinking about myself, I'm thinking about my team," said James, who added he won't focus on picking a college until after the season. "Anything my team needs me to do for them, I'll do it."

Beating teams James and Alpert think they should have whipped last season - Humble and Spring, whom they tied in a 7-1-2 campaign - are the first priority. Westfield, whose last season took the Generals with it, is another opponent circled on the MacArthur calendar.

"Like Coach Alpert said, everything's personal this year," James said. "We've just got to come out every week and take care of things."

Black House is site of evening wedding

MRS. MICHAEL RAY THOMAS
...nee Traci Ann Deckard

Traci Ann Deckard became the bride of Michael Ray Thomas on August 12, in an evening wedding ceremony at the E.B. Black House.

The bride is the daughter of Jerry and Betty Deckard of Hereford and the groom is the son of Tristen Thomas of Wellington and Martha Thomas of Hewitt.

Dr. Ed Williamson, pastor of the First United Methodist Church of Hereford, officiated.

The gardens surrounding the house provided the decor while the couple repeated their wedding vows on the E.B. Black House porch.

The porch was adorned with wheat colored raffia bows, stargazer lilies, ferns and a large backdrop bouquet of dusty rose stargazer lilies, gladioli, and white roses.

Serving her sister as matron of honor was Tonya Long and Barry Loving was best man.

Kim Wilcox served as bridal attendant while Steve Oliss served as groomsmen.

Ushering guests were Charles Deckard, uncle of the groom, Keith Holman, brother of the groom, and Rodney Sharp.

Brittney Wilcox, daughter of Tony and Kim Wilcox, was flower girl.

Ring bearer was Josh Weatherly, son of Quincy and Cindy Weatherly.

Favorite country selections of the bride and groom were recorded by Corky and Alice Lockmiller and were played before the ceremony and during the reception which was held in the E.B. Black House.

The traditional wedding march and wedding recessional were played.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an elegant sheath dress of white Italian satin.

It was fashioned with a Basque bodice appliqued with Schiffli lace. The bodice, as well as the scalloped lace portrait neckline and short sleeves, were embroidered with seed pearls and crystal sequins.

A double layer hip-length veil of lettuce edged white illusion was gathered on an elegant white satin band.

The bride's jewelry consisted of a heart-shaped pendant necklace of opals and diamonds given to her by the groom as a wedding gift.

The bride carried a large traditional bouquet of dusty rose and white roses, light teal blossoms and English ivy, tied with dusty rose and white satin ribbons.

Hanging from one satin ribbon was a gold charm engraved with the couple's names and wedding date. The traditional garter was trimmed with white pearls and western lace appliques.

Bridal attendants wore ballerina-length dresses were made of light teal cotton with a rose and white floral pattern. They had a princess bodice over a shaped waistline and full gathered skirts. Shirred short sleeves and a v-back completed the dress.

The attendants carried teardrop bouquets of light teal, dusty rose, and white roses tied with satin ribbon.

The flower girl wore a similar dress of the same fabric featuring a white Batenburg lace shawl collar, matching hair bow and large fabric sash at the princess waistline.

The reception, held in the E.B. Black House, was decorated in the brides colors of light teal and dusty rose.

The mantelpiece in the foyer held framed pictures of the bride and groom surrounding the engagement portrait.

Bouquets of roses and stargazer lilies were placed throughout the house.

Serving wedding cake to the guests was aunt of the bride, Connie Deckard.

The cake was served from a table covered with white lace over layers of teal and dusty rose, and set with sterling silver appointments.

The table was centered by a candlelight bouquet of dusty rose stargazer lilies.

The four-tiered white on white cake was decorated with clusters of white roses, wheat, and black cowboy hats. The top layer held a western bride and groom against a backdrop of a wooden heart cut-out, white roses, wheat, and a miniature lariat.

Miniature black cowboy hats containing nuts and mints were served from silver trays.

Barbara Deckard, aunt of the bride, served punch and Kim Henderson, cousin of the bride, invited guests to register.

After a wedding trip to Eagle Nest, N.M. the couple will be home in Amarillo.

The bride is a 1993 graduate of Hereford High School and received her certificate in early childhood development from Amarillo College. She is presently employed by Builders Square in Amarillo.

The groom is a 1990 graduate of Boys Ranch High School and attended Hills Junior College in Hillsboro. He currently is employed by Rick Kelly Construction in Amarillo.

Out of town guests represented Bloomfield, Clovis, Farmington and Portales, Amarillo, Abilene, Midland, Petersburg, Plano, Hewitt and Wellington.

"Bzzz." The alarm goes off and you "hit the ground running." Every morning seems to be a battle with the clock as you get yourself and your family out the door. Except the clock seems to be winning the battle and you end up late or leaving things undone.

Your morning routine can be made easier with a little planning.

*If possible, allow yourself enough time to get ready without having to get a child ready at the same time.

*Be sure to eat a quick, but nutritious breakfast. Bagels, fruit, yogurt, frozen waffles, juice and cereal are good choices.

*Have a morning routine. Children feel a sense of control when they know what to expect each morning.

*Allow extra "wake-up time" for the slow to wake-up child. Giving them the extra few minutes they need can reduce everyone's stress level.

*Reduce distractions. Set rules about when television can be on and when it's O.K. to play with toys.

*Designate a place for coats, keys, school work, lunches, etc. so there is only one place to check before going out the door.

*Be sure to have an extra set of keys in a convenient place (Just in case you can't find yours).

*Allow children to do what they are able to do. Teach preschoolers how to dress themselves. Let them help "make breakfast" by keeping utensils and cereal at a level where they can reach them.

visible? There are millions of gay physicians, lawyers, teachers, truck drivers, congressmen, musicians, actors, actresses and business executives. Many are in committed relationships and have families. The way people express their sexuality has nothing to do with their worth as humans or their ability to contribute to society.

So, dear readers, this is Ann talking. The people have spoken, and as usual, they are right. My advice to "leave the decision to Jason" was gutless. I should have said, "Tell your son if your life companion is not welcome, you won't be there. He needs educating, and this could be an important first step."

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Our handsome, smart, 6-foot-2, 20-year-old son is dating a homely, short, dumpy, 22-year-old idiot who flunked out of secretarial school and is now a waitress. I gave her a silk scarf for her birthday, and her thank-you letter had five misspelled words in it.

We invited her to dinner several times, and now I wonder if all that hospitality was interpreted as "acceptance." If he marries her, I will just die. Please advise soonest. -- Strictly Anonymous

DEAR STRICTLY: You are doing the right thing, but please don't call her an "idiot" in your son's presence. (P.S.: At least she wrote a thank-you note.)

Gem of the Day: Middle age can best be defined as the time of life when the narrow waist and the broad mind begin to change places.

Do you have questions about sex, but no one to talk to? Ann Landers' booklet, "Sex and the Teen-Ager," is frank and to the point. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.75 (this includes postage and handling) to: Teens, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

Ann Landers

DEAR FRIENDS: I haven't had so much angry mail since I sided with the readers who insisted that the toilet paper should be hung so it goes behind the roll and falls close to the wall.

The issue that created the recent commotion is whether or not the gay father in Virginia should attend his son's wedding without "Jason," his companion of 12 years.

My advice was to leave the decision up to Jason. I said, "If he's a first-rate fellow, he will encourage you to attend the wedding without him." The negative responses have been so heavy, my mailman has developed a hernia. Here are some samples of what I've been getting:

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You sure wimped out in your advice to the gay father whose son didn't want his dad's partner of many years, "Jason," to show up at his wedding. The son made it plain that some of his friends weren't as "liberal" as he was and he didn't want anyone to be embarrassed. The father's ex-wife and her boyfriend were going to be present, and the man's daughters had urged him not to attend the wedding if Jason wasn't welcome.

Why didn't you tell Dad to reply in your usual up-front, no-nonsense way, "Too damned bad about your prejudiced friends. If my life partner isn't welcome, I won't be there." Your lack of guts was a disappointment. -- High Point, N.C.

And from Beaumont, Texas: Your advice to the gay father stank. Would you have given the same response if his life companion had been Jewish or black?

Toronto: People look to you for guidance on a variety of issues -- moral, social and spiritual. You really bombed out when you implied that your gay correspondent should accept his son's suggestion to attend the wedding without his same-sex companion. Apparently, you are not aware that a new day is dawning.

Tokyo: Wake up, Ann. Don't you know gays are no longer willing to be hidden? And why shouldn't they be

—YOUR EYES—

ASTIGMATISM

The science of optics has taught us how a perfect lens will focus light and how an imperfectly shaped one will misfocus an image. When the imperfection is in the shape of the lens or the cornea of the human eye, preventing light rays for meeting exactly as they should in front of the retina, the result is called astigmatism. It may co-exist with other eye conditions like myopia or hyperopia.

Almost everyone has a little bit of astigmatism, which often is the cause of eye strain, fatigue or headache after reading or doing close work. Higher degrees of astigmatism can cause higher degrees of discomfort, often blurred or distorted vision.

On the plus side, astigmatism is common enough that science has managed to do something about it. Your optometrist can prescribe glasses or contact lenses to compensate for the distortion and restore eye comfort and efficiency.

There is a little over a month left in our fiscal year and no more money in our book budget.

As I reflect on the past year I can see where the growth has occurred in our collection and other changes have been made. The children's nonfiction collection has been the center of attention and the work there is still not finished.

All of the science books from the 30s-50s, and older career books were pulled and replaced with the latest update possible. I was embarrassed to see the career books on dairy farming that showed how the fresh milk was delivered to your door step by horse drawn wagons. We haven't been able to find an update on dairy farming yet, but we are still looking.

The large print collection had outgrown its shelving and with a little furniture rearranging that problem has been solved.

The Genealogy collection had outgrown its space and with a little reorganization we were able to gain enough room to shelve all of their new books. Most of the books removed from the shelves were those that had not circulated since we automated in 1986.

So if you have a favorite book that you want the library to keep, be sure to recommend it to a friend or come in and check it out again. If you have a fondness for old books remember to come to the Friends of the Library book sale in October. You may find some real gems.

For the past four months we have had a free demonstration of Info Track which is a CD-Rom index to magazines. With this product you can look up a subject and get a list of articles on that subject. Some of the articles will be full text and will be an abstract or heading. The wonderful product cuts your search time in half. However, because of its yearly subscription cost of $2,400 we are having to return the equipment and software. Maybe someday it will become more affordable.

Even though the '95 budget is spent we still have a few new books for you this week beginning with Lightning by Danielle Steele.

Alexandra Parker is a partner in one of New York's most prestigious law firms. Alex has a sharp eye for the opponents fatal weakness and is merciless and brilliant once she has found it. She is the firm's first choice when the fight is going to be hard and dirty. She knows her stuff, thrives on hard work and is respected by all.

Sam Parker, Alex's husband, is just as hard working as a venture capitalist in one of New York's growing young firms. Everyone on Wall Street agreed, Sam Parker knows what he is doing. Sam is a person of integrity, style, brains and courage, he is afraid of nothing.

When Annabelle is born Alex and Sam felt their life was complete except that they knew they wanted more children and they wanted them quickly. Alex is already 40. Then lightning strikes.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

HOME BASED and HAPPY

"Fifteen years ago, going to work meant heading off to the plant, store or office every morning. Today, experts estimate that more than 12 million Americans are operating home-based business. Some suggest that early in the next century more than 20 percent of this nation's work force may be working at home.

Breakthroughs in technology have allowed a good portion of this growth to take place. The new technology offers us some real advantages. We can send and receive business proposals, hold multi-location conferences, copy documents and receive electronic mail via our telephone line.

Other benefits that aren't driven by technology include short commutes, low start-up costs and reduced operating expenses. The idea that only the poor work at home is becoming obsolete. The new idea is home is where it's happening.

Some businesses are easy to start at home, others require more effort. However, aspiring entrepreneurs start all kinds. Manufacturing, wholesaling, construction, medical services, accounting and even retailing are examples.

Happy campers

Through the years, I've met a number of very successful home-based businessmen and women. I've watched their businesses and careers develop and grow. Many of these happy campers are still home based and happy about it.

Nancy Brandwein is a New York City-based book editor and publishing consultant. For her, being home based means a commute into the spare bedroom of her sixth-floor apartment. From her office she can view the hustle and bustle of the city without being a part of it.

Brandwein feels that work schedule flexibility and hassle-free commuting are valuable benefits of working at home. "I am completely in charge of my schedule. It's much more flexible working here," she said.

On the downside Brandwein feels somewhat isolated at times. "I get less feedback on projects I'm working on," she said. "You could get lonely if you don't stay active in trade associations and peer groups."

Nearly 2,000 miles west in a totally different environment, another entrepreneur has something in common with Brandwein. Steve Gossett's farm and ranch management company is also home based. His clients are out-of-town and overseas landowners who hire him to manage their Texas properties.

Gossett started his business at home to keep his start-up costs and operating expenses low. Though the business has grown and is successful, Gossett sees no reason to open an office. "I like being at home. My clients find it easier to catch me, I enjoy the extra time with my family and the commute is great," he said.

According to Gossett, the disadvantages are a copy machine in the living room, a garage full of filing cabinets and occasional confrontations with his 11-year-old daughter over the television volume.

Learning opportunity

If you've been thinking of working at home, you can learn more about the process by joining me for an all-day workshop. I'll be accompanied by a number of small-business pros who will cover all the basics of starting and operating a home-based business.

The program is called "There's No Business Like Home Business." This workshop will be held in Amarillo on Wednesday, Aug. 30, 1995, from 8:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. The cost is just $25 (including lunch) if you register by Aug. 25th.

You'll learn all about planning, legal structures, accounting and record keeping, taxes, marketing and promotion. You'll hear start-up shortcuts and get tips on finding money and resources.

Don't miss out on this practical training opportunity. Call 373-0713 to register, or 372-5151 for more details. I hope to see you at the workshop.

You may write to Don Taylor in care of "Minding Your Own Business," Box 67, Amarillo, Texas 79105.

HJH Roundup

By CAROLYN WATERS

One of the painful realities of being a parent is that you're going to be a terrible embarrassment to your children. The Eleventh Commandment, "Thou shalt not embarrass me," (Charlotte Johnstone), is usually broken about the time your child enters junior high.

But seriously, parents, we'll help you out in this area, especially when visiting with your child's teachers. We don't always "tell" when parents come to HJH to have a conference with their student's team of teachers. We welcome these visits and if necessary, we "keep it quiet" and don't break that commandment!

The Junior High Orientation was well-attended and was successful in that so many students and parents were able to become better acquainted with the HJH campus, to meet teachers and to learn about expectations for junior high students.

As classes begin for this new school year, one of the main adjustments to be made by teachers and students will be the eight periods day. This schedule was developed to enable students to have more electives and to offer extra reading and math opportunities for those students who need help in strengthening their skills in those areas.

The HJH staff joined at least 1600 other teachers at an "At-Risk" Conference in Amarillo on Wednesday. This exciting and informative conference afforded many ideas for better serving our youth on a daily basis.

Oligodendroglioma is a word added to our vocabulary this week. We learned it the hard way -- it is the type of tumor my husband, Don, had successfully removed on Wednesday. Thanks to all of you who express concern and included us in your thoughts and prayers. Thanks, readers, for allowing us to share this victory with you!

Classes begin at 8 a.m. Monday. We look forward to seeing each seventh and eighth grader then.

Even though there may be times that we may embarrass our children, the best experience that children can receive is to observe their parents taking excellent care of themselves -- in body, spirit and mind. Since children are such great mimics, they will automatically and naturally model their parents behavior.

Farm and Ranch

Couple gets more out of 'truck' farm than profit

By SHELLY SCHILLING
Staff Writer

A 'truck' farm is what most farmers call a small acreage of land where specialty crops are planted. City folks just call it 'a big garden'.

Whatever it is called, Ronnie and Denise Andrews, of Andrews Produce, have one. They specialize in vegetables.

Their truck farm is on a 15 acre portion of their farm located south of Hereford.

The vegetable garden was started by his father W.H. Andrews, when Ronnie and his brother and sister were still at home.

Ronnie started it back up when his children were in their early teens. About 13 years ago.

The pair sell their wares directly to customers straight from the garden, at the Hereford Farmer's Market, or at the Amarillo Farmer's Market.

Most truck farms are known to be more profitable than conventional planted farms, and some farmers set aside a small portion of their farmland for the financial benefit that it can bring. No middle man is required.

However, other benefits may well outweigh the monetary gains.

That is what Andrews thinks.

When he began his vegetable enterprise, he thought he would help his children gain financially, but found that they benefited more from the work and responsibilities that they were given.

When they started the garden, Kyle and Jim Eric kept the profit for themselves to use for school, clothes, and extra things.

When they were older they helped Andrews more with the farming.

"I'm sure I never paid them what they were worth to me, but I think they came away with much more than what money could buy," Andrews said. "I think it helped in later years when they were working for other people. I've heard more employers say they would hire a farm boy over anyone else because they knew they weren't afraid to work."

The Andrews have four children. Kyle, who lives in McCamey where he and his wife teach school; Jim Eric who lives in Amarillo and works for the transportation department at the Clements Unit; Crystal Kelly, who will attend Wayland Baptist University in the fall where she will be a member of the volleyball team; and Amy who will attend Hereford High School as a senior this year.

The garden, which is row watered, is situated on their 600 acre farm -- the same farm where Ronnie was reared.

The 15 acre garden produces sweet corn, squash, Blue Lake green beans, squash, black eyed peas, okra, cucumbers, and a few melons.

Next year Andrews said he wants to try his hand at peppers and tomatoes.

A typical Tuesday and Thursday for Denise, who works as a teacher's assistant at Aikman primary school, begins at 5:30 a.m. when she sets out for the Amarillo market.

"I get up and leave the house and get on the road at 5:30 and on Saturdays I get up at 3:30 to be in Amarillo in time to get set up before the market opens," Denise said.

"Corn sells the best," said Denise. "Sometime, I sell out of corn faster than I can get it put out."

After the Amarillo market closes she is back on her way to Hereford to re-stock and make it to the Hereford Farmer's Market which is set up at the Gibson's parking lot.

"I was glad to see school starting again," said Denise. "I'm ready to slow down a little."

The Andrews' hire from three to four teenagers a summer to help with the picking and Denise takes care of the marketing.

This year's crop has been good with insect problems being average. Andrews said he plants at two different times to ensure that the vegetables will continue to produce until fall.

"I plant the first time at around April 10th and then again around July 5th," Andrews said. The only problem was the late freeze and the lack of sufficient rain to help out with the irrigation.

"We had to wait on planting because it was just too cold to plant because of the late freeze," Andrews said. "We also had to irrigate more than usual because it was so dry this summer."

Even with the possibility of adverse conditions, Andrews said he will probably expand the garden next year.

"We are running out of kids to help, but we still love to have the garden," he said.

Although they sell more produce at markets, the pair give customers the opportunity to come and pick their own vegetables straight from the field.

"We have had people come from Amarillo and the surrounding area, just to pick their own," Andrews said. "I think some just like being in the garden."

Ronnie is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. W.H. Andrews who farmed and raised registered Angus cattle.

Denise is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Earl Poarch, of Poarch Brothers Inc., fame.

"I lived in town and didn't know a lot about farming or gardening but I knew how to work," Denise said. "Dad always had me and my brothers doing something."

Even though Denise wasn't raised in the country she finds that she enjoys the quite country life that she and Ronnie share.

Picking corn

Denise and Ronnie Andrews pick their 'best seller' to take to the Farmer's market. The Andrews' own and operate Andrews Produce, south of town. The couple grow a variety of vegetables for sale at The Hereford Farmer's Market, Amarillo Farmer's Market, or on site.

Armyworm responsible for Concho Valley cotton disaster

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP)—A rampaging insect infestation has devoured over half of the Concho Valley cotton crop, a disaster that could cost farmers $50 million, state agriculture officials say.

The beet armyworm is responsible for the destruction of cotton crops in Tom Green, Runnels, Schleicher and Concho counties over the past 10 days, said state entomologist Dr. Tom Fuchs.

Fuchs, who works for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, called the infestation the worst beet armyworm outbreak he's seen in his 16 years in the area.

The armyworm is not considered to be a threat to cotton and is common in Texas.

The possibility that the insect could migrate north to the South Plains cotton country around Lubbock, which is responsible for one-fifth of the plant's production in the United States, has agriculture officials worried.

"(The outbreak in the Concho Valley) doesn't necessarily mean it will continue to spread," said Dr. John Jackman, an extension entomologist in College Station. "But it's certainly a possibility, and as you see more and more as you go north, it raises concerns."

The western portion of the cotton-growing region, such as fields in Glasscock County, appear have been spared by the tiny caterpillars.

Although The Environmental Protection Agency has authorized the use of Pirate, a chemical that kills armyworms, its manufacturer, American Cyanamid, said it couldn't get the product shipped to Texas until next week.

Armyworms are already so entrenched in the Concho Valley that fighting it now would be a waste, meaning farmers can only watch as what looked like the best crop in six years is eaten, said Tom Green County Farm Services Agency director Michael Sturm.

Officials hope to save 15 percent of the 99,000 acres of cotton in Tom Green County.

"It's pretty discouraging," Sturm said of the county's top cash crop. "The bad part is, everybody's hopes were so high because it was an excellent crop."

Fuchs said that the armyworms spread might be the result of an ecological imbalance caused by the battle waged against the boll weevil, another nemesis of cotton plants.

A chemical used to fight the boll weevil might have destroyed other insects that eat armyworms.

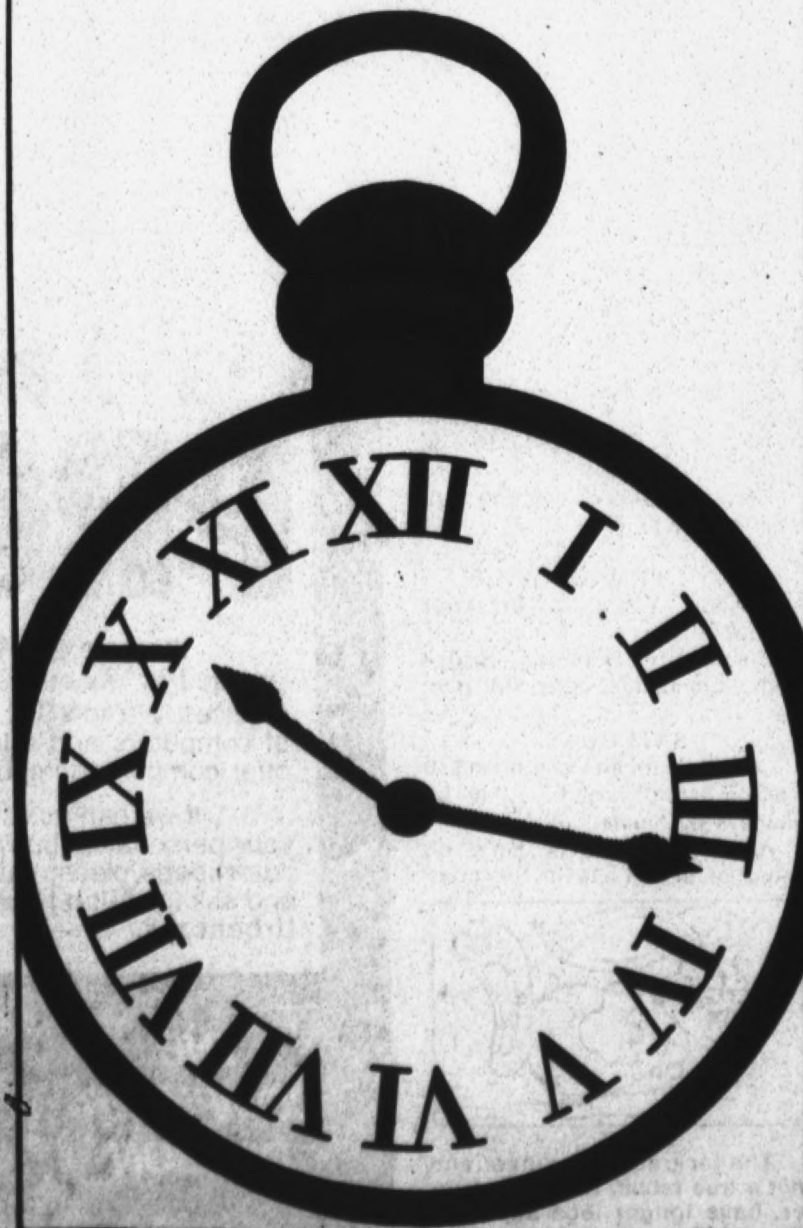

Area officials plan to request that Gov. George W. Bush ask the federal government to declare a disaster area. Bush already has requested the designation from the Department of Agriculture for crops in South Texas, which were hit by the beet armyworm earlier this summer.

Life is the art of drawing sufficient conclusions from insufficient premises.

Extension Agent's Notes

By DENNIS NEWTON
County Extension Agent - Ag.

The rainfall received this past week was a big help to all our farmers trying to keep up with irrigation schedules and especially for those dryland producers that have sorghum and forages in the field.

The moisture although scattered and varying greatly in the amounts received, should help us with our winter wheat crop. Most producers had their wheat ground prepared or were in the process of preparing for winter wheat by applying fertilizer, plowing and generally getting ready for planting.

While on the subject of planting wheat, one of the topics most debated by producers is when to plant winter wheat in our area. Many say plant as early as possible to get the most from fall grazing, while others say no wait and plant later to avoid problems with insects, diseases, etc.

Leon New, Agricultural Engineer with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service in Amarillo, just passed on some information that I found most interesting concerning water usage in wheat.

In research conducted at the North Plains Research Field at Etter comparing the total water usage for wheat planted on August 15 to wheat planted on September 10 for the years 1991 and 1992, the early planted wheat used almost 9 inches of water more than the planted wheat.

In comparing the August planting with an October 1 planting, the average water usage in the early planted wheat was approximately 12 inches greater than the later planted wheat. In irrigated situations, this would equal approximately two to three applications in furrow irrigated conditions.

It would take a lot of increased forage production to offset the cost of these applications. This is a factor that producers need to consider when deciding on a planting date.

Dr. Carl Patrick, Area Extension Entomologist, has reported fall armyworm infestations in sorghum are running higher than he has seen it in years in some areas of the Panhandle. He reported that infestation levels of 100 percent have been found and that levels of 25-50 percent are quite common.

Producers are encouraged to watch their field closely for this pest. It can do tremendous damage in a short period of time. Some research has shown that two fall armyworms infesting the late vegetative stage of sorghum, which is the 6 leaf to boot stage, has caused a 10 percent reduction in yield.

Producers are reminded of the Summer Crops Field Day at the Bushland Research Center on Wednesday, August 23. Registration will begin at 9 a.m. with tours at 9:30 a.m. and 1:30 p.m.

There will be a lunch and program following the morning tour. Featured will be research in short season corn, irrigation, and weed control. The event should provide producer with some new and useful information that they can apply to their individual operations.

I hope that you can make this event. For more information, call the Deaf Smith County office of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service at 364-3573. Have a good week!

Agriculture Briefs

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Agriculture Department's August report on soybean production forecasts a national average yield that is on par with other years, despite weather problems in some parts of the country.

The report indicates a yield of 36.4 bushels per acre, but a more reliable number is expected with next month's production report when a better pod count can be taken in states where the crop developed late because of the weather.

In the Midwest, high temperatures in July stressed soybean crops, but rains in late July and early this month improved crop conditions, USDA's Economic Research Service said in the report.

Late-planted soybeans in Illinois, Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska and Indiana were stunted by the hot weather and are behind their growing schedule. And short plants are more difficult to harvest, "which could result in higher field losses this fall," the report said.

Conditions in Minnesota and Iowa are generally better than in the central Midwest states, the report said.

WASHINGTON (AP)—Efforts to control the livestock disease brucellosis are continuing to show results: The number of U.S. herds quarantined for the disease fell to a record low of 93 as of June 30.

While Agriculture Department officials said they are encouraged by the low number, they noted that 240 newly affected herds were found in the last year. Most of the herds have been culled of infected animals, but it shows that "brucellosis is still a pervasive animal health threat in certain parts of the country," USDA said.

USDA wants to eradicate the disease by 1998.

Thirty-four states, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands are free of the disease. Free status means no cattle or domestic bison have been found with the disease for 12 consecutive months. The 16 remaining states have infection rates below 0.25 percent.

"It's always been a real challenge to find brucellosis-infected herds because the disease can be chronic and insidious," said Claude Barton, brucellosis program director for veterinary services in USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service.

"Now that the United States has a lower level of infected herds, it will take even more effort to root out the remaining infection to achieve eradication," Barton said.

In the 1950s, nearly 124,000 cattle herds were under quarantine for brucellosis, USDA said. By 1990, the number had dropped to fewer than 1,000.

Crops field day is set for Wednesday at Bushland

A Summer Crops Field Day has been set for Wednesday, August 23 by scientist with the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station and the USDA Agricultural Research Service Bushland.

The program has been designed to show how the right cultural practices can yield positive results for corn and grain sorghum.

The program will highlight sprinkler irrigation systems, irrigation scheduling, drip irrigation and short-season hybrids.

Registration will begin at 9 a.m. with exhibits and refreshments at the Bushland research laboratories of the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station and USDA - Agricultural Research Service.

The Station is located 0.75 miles west of Bushland on the I-40 access road.

For more information, contact Dr. Brent Bean, Extension agronomist at the Texas A&M Research and Extension Center in Amarillo, or Dr. Nolan Clark, USDA-ARS lab director at Bushland and your local county Extension agent.

WASHINGTON (AP)—Five projects have been selected for funding by a national, nonprofit foundation that promotes crop-insect control in ways that minimize harm to health and the environment.

The projects involve research, education and training for producing corn, apples, potatoes, pears and tomatoes with "integrated pest management," which aims to reduce use of pesticides.

office.

Recent changes in the crop insurance program allow producers with prevented-planted wheat acres who had already planted an alternate crop to claim their insurance indemnity payment. But, producers must request those payments as soon as possible.

The changes were brought about when the National Grain Sorghum Producers, the Texas Grain Sorghum Association and the Texas Wheat Producers Association, working in conjunction with the Texas CFSA office, pushed for the rule changes.

The groups have been persistent in their claim that producers in the Southwest who were unable to plant their insured winter wheat crop because of adverse weather have been treated unfairly.

Under the old rule, producers had been told that they could not participate in farm program options if they collected the crop insurance prevented-planting payment they were entitled to.

Most of the producers with unplanted winter wheat were forced to forget the insurance payment and plant another crop, since they could not afford to leave the fields unplanted.

PRAYER TO THE HOLY SPIRIT

Holy Spirit, You who make me see everything and who show me the way to reach my idea. You who give me the Divine Gift to forgive and forget the wrong that is done to me, and you who are in all instances of my life with me. I, in this short dialogue want to thank you for everything and confirm once more that I never want to be separated from You, no matter how great the material desires may be. I want to be with You and my loved ones in Your perpetual glory. Amen, Thank You for Your love towards me and my loved ones. (Grace obtained).

Dormers, twin bay windows and a country porch add to the country charm of this home. The foyer is wide and flows into the oversized great room with vaulted ceiling and a large fireplace. Doors are provided here for access to the enormous sun deck which extends almost the entire width of the home, and includes 602 square feet. Neighboring the sun deck and great room is a secluded sun room.

A large dining room adjacent to the great room is shown with a tray ceiling. An open kitchen breakfast room with generous proportions and bountiful amenities is nearby. The center island in the kitchen contains the surface unit and a large peninsula cabinet separates the breakfast area. A bay window and a built-in desk area are included in the breakfast area.

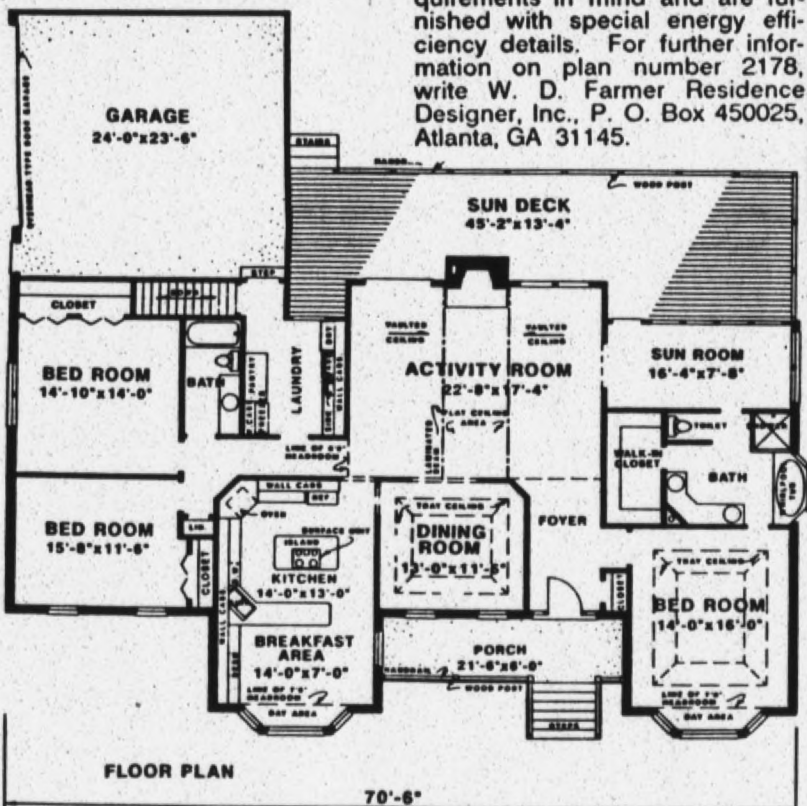

The large laundry room provides access to the garage and basement stairs, and includes space for a sink, freezer and pantry.

Two of the bedrooms are isolated to this side of the house and each room is enormous, with plenty of closet space. A large hall bath is convenient for both of the bedrooms as well as for day-time use.

The master suite on the opposite side of the home provides a peaceful retreat from the noise and pace of the day. The bedroom includes a tray ceiling and a bay window as focal points. The garden bath features a double vanity with a unique angular design, garden tub, shower stall and a grand walk-in closet. Private access to the sun room is from this area.

The exterior of the home is constructed of brick veneer, and features twin gables to the front, housing the bay windows. Dormer windows top the country porch for added country appeal.

The plan includes 2,180 square feet of heated living space plus 136 square feet of sun room space. A basement foundation is indicated. All W. D. Farmer plans are drawn with FHA and VA requirements in mind and are furnished with special energy efficiency details. For further information on plan number 2178, write W. D. TV Nation moves innovative social satire to Fox

Michael Moore takes his critically acclaimed satiric newsmagazine TV Nation to Fridays on Fox. The inspired lunacy includes an ex-convict's campaign to be president of the United States, a trip to Mississippi to buy slaves and Crackers, a corporate-crime fighter in a chicken suit.

BY PETE BUCCI

Michael Moore is still on the warpath with his offbeat, satiric newsmagazine TV Nation. After a critically acclaimed first season on NBC, the series has moved to Fridays on Fox.

For Moore, the move is an opportunity to continue his mission of highlighting serious social issues.

"I look at this as something I can do to pay some attention to what's going on in our society and our country — maybe get people to think about it a little bit, laugh a little bit," Moore says.

The first season offered many memorable moments, such as both award-winning black actor Yaphet Kotto and white ex-con Louis Bruno trying to hail cabs in New York City. Of course, Bruno got most of the cabs.

Bruno is back with the Fox series, but this time he is making a bid for the U.S. Presidency. "Bruno '96: His Record Speaks for Itself" reads a sign.

Another ongoing segment is "Pay Back Night," a side-splitting revenge-fest which Moore begins in street interviews, asking "What bugs you?"

A response of "Musak" moves the scene to the home of the Musak company president in early morning. A truck towing a flatbed pulls up. Towering speakers begin blaring an anesthetized "Getting to Know You."

Crackers, a corporate-crime fighter in a chicken suit, also introduces humor into serious issues. Trying to get a company representative to explain why his firm took a tax break for agreeing not to cut positions and then did just that, Moore is told that Crackers is persona non grata at the company's headquarters.

"Wouldn't that be chicken non grata," he asks.

Director Rusty Cundieff (Fear of a Black Hat), former MTV VJ Karen

Duffy, Louis Theroux and comic Steven Wright are returning as correspondents. They are joined by Janeane Garofalo (The Larry Sanders Show) and comic Jeff Stilson.

The new series maintains the innovative nature of its predecessor, but Moore has sped up the pacing of the show, creating a very enlightening and entertaining series.

Moore is best known for his widely acclaimed 1989 documentary Roger and Me, a hilarious chronicle of his quest to persuade General Motors Chairman Roger B. Smith to come to Flint, Mich., and witness first-hand the ruin wrought by GM's plant closings.

Moore says he came up with the idea for TV Nation while in Los Angeles trying to raise money for Roger & Me.

"It happened on a drive from West Hollywood over to Burbank," he says. "I got a call from NBC. They said, 'Do you have any ideas for television?' Of course you always say 'yea, ah ... yea.'"

"On the drive over there with the rock 'n' roll blasting out of the radio, I came up with the idea and walked in and told them my idea — gave them the pitch."

Moore, who lives in New York City with his wife and daughter, divides his time between television, film and print. His first fictional film, Canadian Bacon, is scheduled for release this September and he is working on another screenplay, a new television series and a book.

Moore thinks of himself as a filmmaker, but likes television because it reaches a mass audience.

"In one night —, even on Fox, the fourth-rated network — we have a potential to reach 10 million people," he says.

TV PIPELINE

BY TAYLOR MICHAELS

Q: Please tell me about Jennifer Aniston (Friends). Where can I write to her? -J.T., Mason, W.Va.

The daughter of actor John Aniston (Days of Our Lives), the lovely actress was born of Greek descent in Sherman Oaks, Calif., but graduated from New York's High School of the Performing Arts.

Following a series of off-Broadway roles, she landed her first TV job as a series regular on Molloy. Other credits include The Edge, Ferris Bueller, Herman's Head and guest appearances on Quantum Leap and Burke's Law.

Aniston, whose godfather was the late Telly Savalas, currently lives in Los Angeles, where she spends a lot of time on art projects.

Write to any NBC stars c/o their show at NBC Television Network, 3000 W. Alameda Ave., Burbank, Calif. 91523.

Q: Please help prevent mayhem. My husband insists the actor who plays Newman on Seinfeld and was in Jurassic Park also played one of the interns on St. Elsewhere. I say the only thing they have in common is being overweight, with curly hair and glasses. Who is right? -Dee Peard, South Lake Tahoe, Calif.

A: You are. That's Wayne Knight in Seinfeld and Jurassic Park. I am guessing your spousal unit is remembering Stephen Furst, who played chubby Dr. Elliot Axelrod on St. Elsewhere (1983-88).

Q: Did Kate Vernon play the second blond roommate on Three's Company? -Niki Bailey, Lufkin, Texas.

A: No. Jenilee Harrison joined the cast after Suzanne Somers left, but you may be thinking of blond roomie No. 3, Priscilla Barnes, who somewhat resembles Vernon.

Q: Are Paul Gross (Due South)

Jennifer Aniston

and Michael Gross (Family Ties) related? How old is John Schneider? -A reader in Flint, Mich.

A: The Grosses are not related in any meaningful way. Schneider is 41.

Q: Is the Joan Fontaine movie called Frenchman's Creek available on video? -Mrs. L.R. Carev, Cobble Hill, British Columbia, Canada.

A: Sorry, no.

Q: Is foreign news correspondent David Martin the son of Dean Martin? -Hester Maloney, Cushing, Maine.

A: No.

Q: I heard Ray Combs, ex-host of Family Feud, had been paralyzed in a car wreck. True? -Nancy Hempfling, Enid, Okla.

A: False. After Combs' Feud contract was not renewed due to falling ratings, he was badly injured in a car accident, but has been fully recovered for several months. His publicist says he is mulling other offers at present.

FAMILY VIEWING

TV time as quality time: 5 ideas for family viewing

Spotted on a bumper sticker: Fight Prime Time. Read a Book.

What a snotty, self-righteous sentiment. Sure, books are cool and libraries are awesome. But the 98.3 percent of U.S. homes with TVs can't all be wrong.

TV is kind of like milk - it's good, and good for you. Well, OK. Maybe TV isn't that good. TV can't beat reading a book aloud with a child.

But it can bring families together to interact while reacting to the broadcast buffet. It can inspire discussion of traditional values or touch subjects that make parents squirm.

Daytime or prime time, there are lots of better things for families to do during summer vacation than watch TV. But rainy days can put a damper on the fun. If it's wet outside one way to stay dry inside is by making family TV time quality time.

Home Improvement (ABC) - Unlike the gritty Conner family of ABC's Roseanne, the Taylors of Home Improvement live in a kinder, gentler world where mom (Patricia Richardson) is rock-steady and dad (Tim Allen) is a fool for tools.

The couple fights, but they always work things out. Their three sons battle but basically get along. And, when the wise-cracking boys perform their "no respect for dumb dad" act, it's a good example of how a father should not be treated.

Lassie (Nickelodeon) - This doggy drama is the cat's meow.

Lassie was produced for TV for 140 doggy years. Now Nick is on the stick and Lassie is still chasing it with warm and fuzzy tales. Dogs love children, children love dogs, and parents love children and dogs. Lassie has come home to stay.

Blossom (Syndicated; check local listings) - Blossom ended a five-year run on NBC in May, but its memory lives on in syndication.

Blossom's brother (Joey

Patricia Richardson

Lawrence) is dopey and annoying.

But Mayim Bialik shines in the title role. She's a smart, sensitive teen coping with all of the trials and tribulations that make parents shudder. It's TV teen angst with a light touch.

Rescue 911 (CBS & Syndicated; check local listings) - Children don't give a hoot about William Shatner (Star Trek), host of this reality-based show. They stampede to watch heroes, including lots of children, react to disasters.

Rescue 911 provides practical messages about all kinds of safety.

Plus, a child's knowledge of that emergency phone number could come in handy, if dad's hand gets wedged in the fridge while grabbing a drink.

Maybe reaching for a book to read with junior would safer after all.

National Geographic Explorer (TBS) - Children as well as older members of the family can watch with anticipation of what's to happen next; whether they find the lost submarine, or if the lion cub survives alone out in the wild.

Explorer provides many different types of learning, or maybe a refreshing what you may have learned back in High School.

From wild animals to lost treasures, from archaeology and ancient cities to bungee jumping and hot air ballooning, National Geographic Explorer has it all!

SOAP TALK

Diaper duty on Guiding Light

BY CANDACE HAVENS

There are some very proud papas on the set of Guiding Light. Rick Hearst (Alan-Michael Spaulding) and David Wolos-Fonteno (Dr. Charles Grant) both received new additions to their families recently.

Hearst and wife Donna welcomed their second son, Cameron James, on July 16. Big brother Nicky is 4. Says Hearst, "It sort of lifted every worry I may have had in my life. It came down to one moment of watching my child being born. It's true that babies really do bring magic into your life, and we really are blessed." Cameron weighed in at 7 pounds, 10 ounces.

Wolos-Fonteno and wife, Mary, celebrated the birth of their first child, a girl, Cesca Grace on July 15. Cesca weighed in at 12 pounds, 6 ounces. Yes, that's right! She was a big one. "She is an angel," says Wolos-Fonteno. "I can't stop looking at the two women in my life."

Dear Candace: I remember Barbara Crampton from her stint on The Young and the Restless, and I'm very glad she is on The Bold and the Beautiful. She is one of my favorites.

Could you please tell me if Luan (Elizabeth Sung) is going to die on Y&R? Also, will Danny and Cricket ever get back together? I would also like to see Nikki and Victor have one more child. — Mrs. P. Levinson-King, Queens, N.Y.

Dear Reader: There has been no confirmation that Luan may die in the near future. But it certainly looks like something dreadful is going to happen, with all the depressing conversations she has with her doctor. If the actress's contract is up any time soon, it could happen.

Danny and Cricket may find their way back to one another, but it will be a while. Cricket and Paul are going to take a trip to Hawaii in September. Something might happen during that time.

Victor and Nikki will always be connected in some way. But whether or not they will ever have a child no one knows.

Tuskegee Airmen tells story of first black fighter pilots

BY JOHN CROOK

Oscar nominee Laurence Fishburne (What's Love Got to Do With It) heads a powerful cast in The Tuskegee Airmen, an HBO original movie premiering Saturday, Aug. 26, on the premium channel.

Malcolm-Jamal Warner (The Cosby Show), Andre Braugher (Homicide: Life on the Street) and two-time Oscar nominee John Lithgow join Fishburne in the film, which relates the experiences of the U.S. Army Air Corps' first black combat pilots in World War II.

The story, by real-life Tuskegee Airman Robert Williams, examines the emotional plight of the "Fighting 99th," a squadron facing prejudice on the home front even while its members were being trained to fight the Axis powers abroad.

The HBO film marks a remarkable struggle of more than 40 years on Williams' part to tell the story of the airmen. He first heard 20th Century Fox was interested in the project while he was working with Ebony magazine in 1952. Williams proceeded to labor over a script draft, only to be told at its completion the studio believed audience interest in World War II movies had peaked.

"I refused to give up on the concept that it was an extremely important picture to be made," Williams says. "It was an extremely important piece of black American history."

The writer spent the next decades pitching the project to largely unreceptive listeners, including a number of important black filmmakers.

"That was very disappointing to me," he admits. "Yes, I did approach every one of the big names that you can imagine — and I have rejection letters from each one."

More than a decade ago, black actor Ivan Dixon (Hogan's Heroes) introduced Williams to Frank Price, who proved receptive to the project and gave it a green light at Universal Pictures. That deal soured, but Price, who is now executive producer for the HBO film, never gave up.

"Frank has been with me for 10 or 11 years," Williams says. "Without him, this picture would not have evolved."
