In Brief

McDuff

WACO, Texas (AP) — Kenneth Allen McDuff's brief reprieve from several months in isolation has ended, McLennan County Jail officials say.

McDuff, 46, charged with capital murder in the deaths of two women in McLennan County, was held in an isolation cell for several months after his return to Waco last spring from Kansas City, Mo., and an intense manhunt.

Jail officials said they had moved the paroled murderer to the county jail's general population floors about two weeks ago because McDuff had been a "model prisoner" and the separation cells were needed for more troublesome inmates, according to sources.

Woman hurt

CLEVELAND, Texas (AP) — A woman who repaired a pipe bomb that had earlier failed to go off was injured slightly when the device finally exploded, but authorities said the explosive was from a package addressed to her husband.

Anna Swan received only minor injuries to her fingers and experienced a ringing in her ears late Monday, said a detective with the Montgomery County Sheriff's Department.

Agents of the U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms Tuesday night were investigating the blast.

Hardegree selected SNB vice president

Sid Hardegree, a vice president with Texas Production Credit Association, has been named vice president and loan officer with Snyder National Bank.

SID HARDEGREE

The announcement was made today by Joe Jackson, Snyder National Bank president and chief executive officer.

Hardegree, a native of Colorado City, will specialize in agriculture-related loans, Jackson said.

"We are looking forward to Sid coming aboard," Jackson added. "I believe his experience and background will be a good addition to our already strong lending department."

A 1974 graduate of Texas Tech University, Hardegree has a bachelor of science degree in agriculture education. He was president of the Texas Tech Future Farmers of America chapter and a member of the Texas Tech Block and Bridle Club.

Hardgree has served as vice president, loan officer and field office manager for PCA, beginning work in 1977 in Roby. In the fall of 1980, he transferred to the Sweetwater office.

Hardegee moved to the Snyder office in 1988 and became office manager in 1989.

Following graduation from college, Hardegree worked as a salesman in Clovis, N.M., for Anderson-Clayton and Co.

His wife, Jo Beth, is a registered nurse at Cogdell Memorial Hospital.

Centralized system...

County discusses computers; asks for more in-depth study

Scurry County commissioners spoke with department heads concerning computer needs for county offices during a special workshop session this morning.

County Judge Bob Doolittle questioned several department heads about their individual needs, saying the court needed to "touch base, brainstorm and see where they are heading."

"We are in a computer age," said the judge. "We need to see what our money and efficiency savings will be."

Sheriff Keith Collier told commissioners that he feels putting the county on a centralized system should save the addition of employees and make things run more smoothly. "I think it is a way to cut down on stress and not spend too much money," he said.

Other department heads commented that the system would be an improvement, with the county and district clerk's offices pointing out that most of their record keeping is still done by hand.

Keith Nixon of Software, Inc. of Plano discussed the system with the court, telling commissioners that the system his company proposed included a single data base that would make updating records and communication between offices more efficient.

The county tax collector's office currently has a system leased from Software, Inc. at a cost of approximately $15,500 per year. The total cost for the county to purchase the system would be approximatley $70,000.

In a cost comparison, Nixon pointed out that the tax collector's portion of the purchase would amount to approximately $8,700 over a five year period rather than over $70,000 that would be paid on the lease agreement in the same amount of time.

No action was taken on the bid proposals, which were received from Software, Inc. and from United System Technologies, Inc. of Irving.

The court asked Nixon to find out if the cost of transferring information from the current system to the new system was included in the bid proposal. The court set no meeting to discuss the information requested.

"We have to make sure of all the costs involved in this," said Doolittle. "We can't afford to make a mistake."

Present at the meeting were Doolittle and commissioners Roy Idom, C.D. Gray Jr., Jerry Morgan and Jerry Gannaway.

Boys Club plans to reorganize

Reorganization of the local Boys Club board of directors was discussed during a noon meeting Tuesday at The Shack, with Joel Mabrey, regional service director of Boys & Girls Clubs of America in attendance.

Discussion centered around possible grants available to the club after reorganization.

Mabrey said the club has been a success in the past, and, now, in tough economic times, needs to "look to the future."

Board President James Vincent cited a need for some new, aggressive members on the board. Those present at the meeting commented that the experience of current board members is also necessary.

While no formal date has been set for the next meeting, Vincent and club Supervisor Jack McGlaun pledged to move quickly in reorganizing the board.

Board members present were Vincent, Dave Harlin, Jackie Murray and R.C. Patton. Also present were County Judge Bob Doolittle, Commissioner C.D. Gray, McGlaun, Mabrey and representatives of the media.

Ira board approves dress code revision

Ira public schools trustees approved attendance committee members and a change in the student dress code during their September meeting Tuesday.

Named to the attendance committee were Debbie Cook, Gale Northcott, Lillie Sullivan and Jane Matlock, principal. The committee reviews excessive student absences.

The board approved a revision of the student dress code to allow secondary students to wear shorts "in good taste." The revision was recommended by the Student Advisory Council, made up of class presidents, president of the honor society and student council members.

Trustees also signed an interlocal agreement with the HOBBS alternative school and approved the limited English proficient student report.

Payment of bills and approval of past minutes were the only other items on the agenda.

Trustees present were Sid Wall, Gwen Cumbie, Keith Clements, Kirby Sterling, Ray Sorrells and Darryl Calley. Doug White was absent.

Some public officials may have a point in claiming that it is getting impossible to satisfy a diverse constituency. "What have you done for me lately," is said to be heard more often than an actual evaluation of one's total record of public service.

It reminds you of the drifter who showed up at the back door of a gourmet sandwich shop, seeking a handout. The owner obliged, fixing him a nice, fresh sandwich.

When the drifter offered to work to pay for the sandwich, the owner said that it would not be necessary. "I have the work ethic," the drifter insisted, and so she handed him a broom and said he might sweep the parking lot.

In a couple of minutes, the man was back at the door. The owner expressed amazement at his fast work to which the drifter responded, "What do you expect for one lousy sandwich."

Speaking of restaurants, did you hear bout the Tex-Mex place that is featuring a Perot Taco.

DA says he wants appeals court to reconsider decision

HOUSTON (AP) — Harris County District Attorney Johnny B. Holmes says he wants a state appeals court to reconsider its decision to overturn the conviction of a former police officer who killed a woman in a highway shootout.

The 1st Court of Appeals on Tuesday threw out the voluntary manslaughter conviction of former Houston officer Alex Gonzales in the Oct. 31, 1989, shooting death of Ida Lee Delaney, 50.

Gonzales, 27, was convicted in April 1990 and sentenced to seven years in prison, but he has been free on bond, pending his appeal.

In a 41-page opinion issued, the appeals court ordered a new trial, saying some evidence had been excluded during the 1990 trial.

"We have a period of time to ask the appeals court to reconsider it," Holmes said. If the conviction is not upheld, he said the case will be appealed to the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals. He said it could be another year before the case works its way through those courts.

"We would not want to retry (Gonzales) unless it was absolutely necessary," Holmes said, but added he was prepared to retry the case if necessary.

Gonzales' "primary defense was that Ida Lee Delaney was, in fact, the aggressor earlier in the evening," defense attorney George "Mac" Secrest said.

Defense attorneys contended Ms. Delaney had a violent history, including a past conviction for assaulting a police officer and a shooting incident involving her ex-husband.

"The defense should have been able to offer testimony about her background," defense attorney Mike Hinton said, adding that the judge allowed only a general discussion of her past.

But Holmes said he did not believe "the specific acts of misconduct that the deceased committed 20 years previously" was germane to the case against Gonzales.

The shooting sparked outrage among blacks in Houston and the formation of a community civil rights group. Ms. Delaney was black, while Gonzales and the two other officers involved in the highway chase are Hispanic.

"I don't know how much more our community can stand, to be honest with you," said Ada Edwards, who helped found the civil rights group.

The decision "adds to my distrust, disbelief and no confidence in the justice system, or I should say the' injustice system' because that's how I sum it up," said DeLoyd Parker, another group activist.

"I hope that the people who were agitated by the incident and sort of spoke out against former officer Gonzales and his two colleagues will respect the fact that this opinion is part of our system of justice and let the system of justice continue to work," Hinton said.

But Parker said, "We cannot be held accountable for those people who are out there who do not have any other way to respond but in the way that they know how."

Under public pressure shortly after the shootings, then-Police Chief Lee Brown fired all three officers. Gonzales, who did not comment on the case Tuesday on the advise of his attorneys, has since gone back to school and plans a career as a paralegal.

Ms. Delaney was on her way to work as a janitor at The Houston Post about 5:30 on the morning of Oct. 31 when she was chased for 12 miles along Houston freeways by the three officers.

The officers, who were off-duty at the time, had been attending a birthday party for a colleague and had been drinking for several hours before they confronted Ms. Delaney.

She eventually pulled up to a Texas Highway Department road crew on the side of the road, seeking help. She and Gonzales exchanged gunfire.

Hospital blood tests showed Gonzales had a blood-alcohol level of .19, nearly twice the amount considered legally drunk in Texas.

Gonzales was found guilty during a trial that had been moved to Dallas because of publicity about the case in Houston.

Motorist arrested

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — A handcuffed motorist was wounded Tuesday by a state trooper who contended the suspect tried to run over him and another man with the officer's patrol car.

The unidentified motorist was in good condition late Tuesday at John Sealy Hospital in Galveston with a bullet wound to his right elbow, said a spokeswoman.

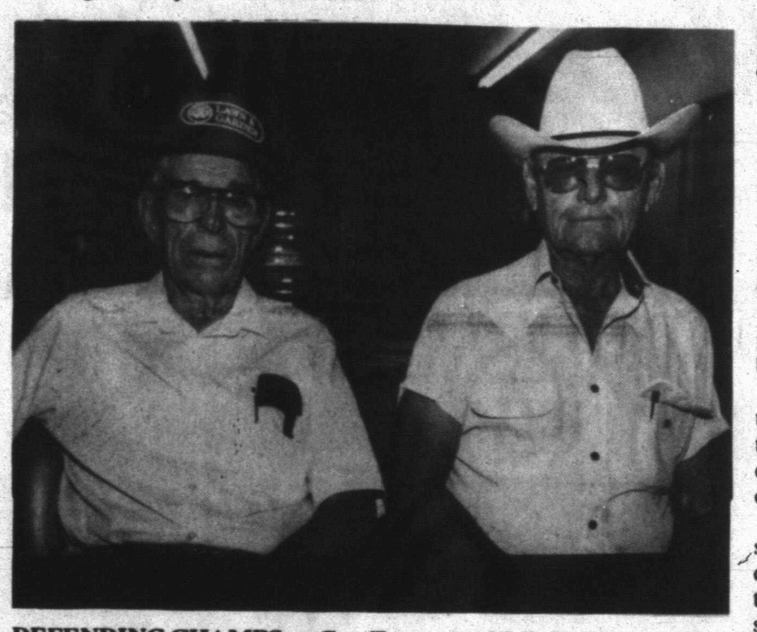

Texas Rangers who were investigating the shooting planned to refer the case to the Texas Department of Public Safety in Austin if they question whether it was justified, said DPS spokesman James Kirksey.

Trooper Pete Maskunas said he stopped two men on U.S. 69 near Interstate 10 at 2:15 a.m. Tuesday. Maskunas suspected the driver was drunk and arrested him on an accusation of driving while intoxicated.

Kirksey said Maskunas cuffed the man's hands behind his back, placed him inside the patrol car and fastened the seat belt.

Collider supporters already getting ready for next year

WASHINGTON (AP) — Super collider backers don't plan to rest on their laurels, now that Congress has all but assured the future of the giant atom smasher.

House and Senate conferees Tuesday earmarked $517 million for the Texas-based collider next year in a remarkable turnaround for a project that was in danger of being scrapped.

All that's left for Congress to do this session is give final approval to the $22 billion energy and water development package that includes the collider money.

Although the $517 million falls short of the $650 million requested by the Bush administration, it's a far cry from the House's stunning vote in June to kill the project.

The controversial $8.25 billion collider appears safe for another year, but supporters don't plan to abandon their push.

"I am hoping that this is the turning point, but I'm not relaxing," said Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, agreed that the $517 million is helpful going into next year's funding battle.

"It's a good victory to have in our pocket," he said.

The collider enthusiasts are keenly aware that well over 100 new House members will take office next year — lawmakers who aren't beholden one way or the other, who aren't familiar with the collider and may be more deficit-conscious than their predecessors.

"Next year will be as crucial (as this year), with probably a new administration and a guaranteed 130 to 150 new members of Congress," said Rep. Jim Chapman, D-Sulphur Springs, the only Texan on the conference committee.

"What's their mentality going to be? How are they going to feel about big-ticket spending priorities?" Chapman asked. "My sense would be the crowd that's coming in January is going to be more fiscally conservative."

In hopes of learning the answers, collider backers plan on inviting new members of Congress to the Dallas area to get a firsthand look at the collider construction site.

"The idea will be to spend a lot of time early educating these new members," Chapman said Tuesday. "We need to be able to frame the debate in the best possible light."

Rep. Joe Barton, whose district spans the collider site, has high hopes for the new members. "We ought to be able to get well over half of those votes if we do our job right," said Barton, R-Ennis.

While pleased with the conferees' action, both Chapman and Barton predicted that the lessened funding will swell the eventual price tag and push back the completion date.

"I think this eliminates any reasonable hope to build the project for $8.2 billion," said Barton, predicting the project would come in under $9 billion.

Bush and Clinton shadow each other

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Campaign appearances by both President Bush and Democratic rival Bill Clinton are being influenced more and more by the moves of the other. The hopscotch strategy comes as each side maneuvers to get the upper hand.

Both camps are moving into a phase in which their schedules are being determined at the last minute for largely tactical reasons.

A case in point: Clinton's last-minute decision to go to Salt Lake City on Tuesday to speak to the same military group that Bush was addressing.

"We're trying to be very flexible and fast on our feet," Clinton campaign adviser Paul Begala said.

Clinton aides said the decision for Clinton to address the National Guard Association came only after a story appeared Monday in The New York Times suggesting Bush might use his speech to hammer Clinton on his draft status during the Vietnam War.

In some ways, the Clinton campaign is giving the Bush campaign a dose of its own medicine. In 1988, when Bush was leading Democrat Michael Dukakis, he wound up essentially chasing Dukakis across the country in the final weeks of the campaign.

Bush made sure he got into the same media markets at the same time as his rival, helping to check a Dukakis comeback.

While such constant man-on-man coverage has not grown to such intensity, there still are early signs of its use by both camps.

Clinton's Labor Day weekend visit to the Darlington 500 stock car race in South Carolina — a state presumed to be for Bush — clearly was a factor in producing visits the same weekend to the state by both Bush and Vice President Dan Quayle.

Clinton was in southern California today, visiting a community center in South Central Los Angeles, a Mexican celebration and a celebrity fund-raiser in Beverly Hills.

The Democrat was supposed to have arrived in California a day earlier. But the Bush speech to the military group caused the detour.

"We wanted to come and see what he had to say and to be able to respond to all charges that might have been made," said Bruce Lindsey, Clinton campaign director.

The Clinton move guaranteed that Bush would not get a free ride on the issue and that news accounts also would include Clinton's response before the very same audience.

Of course, such a strategy can back fire.

Bush didn't make a direct attack on Clinton during his speech.

Furthermore, Bush was able to keep Clinton on the defensive, forcing him away from California — a must-win state for the Arkansas governor — and into Utah, a state he otherwise most likely would have skipped.

Utah is the only state that "no poll has ever showed us ahead in," noted one Clinton strategist, speaking on the condition of anonymity.

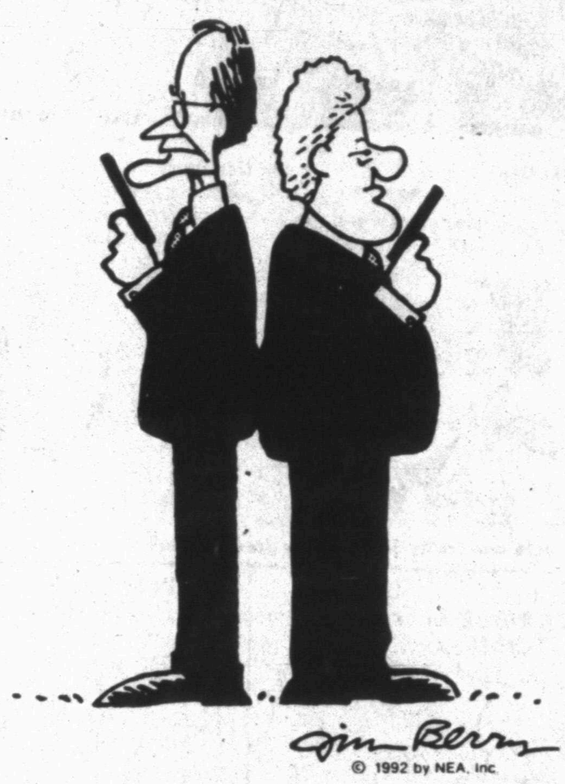

In fact, a hastily arranged event billed as Clinton "Greets the People of Salt Lake City" turned out to be a modestly attended Democratic airport rally.

By contrast, Clinton is ahead in California, whose 54 electoral votes make it the biggest electoral plum of the election.

Clinton aides concede their candidate could appear to be over-reacting if he used the technique too often.

Still, Lindsey said, "I think we accomplished what we felt we wanted to" by sending Clinton to Salt Lake City. "We always have to maintain our flexibility. We always have to be prepared to respond," he said.

Caution is important

By Phillip Alder

Samuel Johnson once said to someone: "You must have taken great pains, sir; you could not naturally have been so very stupid." At least we know that he couldn't have been talking to a bridge player. Players of our great game need to have good brains in their heads. But even so, occasionally these well-oiled intellects blow a neuron. Take today's deal as an example.

North's jump to five spades showed slam interest, with useful cards in spades and diamonds, but no heart or club control. South was happy to raise to the slam.

West led the spade two, the normal lead of low from a doubleton in trumps. Finding himself in the dummy, South was lured over the precipice, immediately finessing his heart jack. However, when West won with the king and returned his second trump, South suddenly found that he had only 11 tricks. There was no way to avoid a club loser.

South had stopped to count his tricks and found 12: seven spades, two hearts, one diamond and two clubs. But he hadn't considered the entry situation. When the heart finesse lost, he didn't have the communications to collect the second heart trick. However, if South had just led a heart to his ace at trick two and returned the heart jack, he would have been in fine shape.

West wins with the heart king and returns a trump. But now declarer can discard his two club losers, one on the heart queen and the other on the diamond ace.

Only take a finesse if its success will generate an extra trick or its loss won't cost you an additional trick.

Food Lion won't build store

HOUSTON (AP) — Residents of Deerfield Village have won their battle to keep Food Lion from building a low-cost grocery store that they believed would lower their property values and cause security problems.

Food Lion now says it will sell the land it bought for the store to the Deerfield Village Community Association, an association official said Tuesday.

James E. Martin, owner of JEM Development, which handles real estate acquisitions on behalf of Salisbury, N.C.-based Food Lion, notified the Deerfield Village Community Association in a Sept. 8 letter that he has been authorized to allow the association to buy the land for $817,402.40.

The 3.9618-acre tract is at the northeast corner of Clay Road and Barker-Cypress roads.

But officials say the price tag is too steep.

"The price is way above market value," said Ann Roberts, who is on the association's external development committee. "We've had a market analysis done, and according to that the price is more than double what's its worth."

Committee Chairman Donald J. Brown said brokers estimated a more reasonable price at $1.50 a foot.

Neither Martin nor Food Lion spokesman Mike Mozingo returned telephone calls Tuesday, the Houston Post reported today.

"We just hope that they're being sincere and this isn't just a political move," Ms. Roberts said.

About 650 residents of Deerfield Village protested Food Lion's plans to build one of its stores in their neighborhood, signing petitions, staging a rally and warning company officials they'd boycott the store if it opened there.

SHS coaches issue week's grid honors

Behind every cloud there is a silver lining.

That seems to be the theme of this week's coaches' awards, presented to members of the Snyder Tigers football team for outstanding performances in last Friday's 18-0 loss to Monahans.

The awards, helmet decals, were given at the team's Tuesday meeting.

This week's top award winners include senior two-way tackle Todd Iglehart and guard-linebacker Charles Richardson.

Iglehart, the Tigers' leading tackler against the Loboes with 8½ takedowns, won defensive awards for two tackles behind the line of scrimmage and recovering a fumble.

The SHS senior also earned recognition for his 11 knockdowns on the offensive side of the ball.

Richardson's awards came for his tackle of a Monahans ball carrier for a loss on defense, and for 11 knockdowns as a blocker on the offensive line.

Also earning defensive honors were Zach Findley and Gilbert Orosco for tackles behind the line of scrimmage, and Bradley Williams and Findley for causing fumbles.

For claiming turnovers for the Tigers, Jason Greene earned an award for a fumble recovery and Jason McAden took honors for his interception of a Rusty Ratliff pass.

The SHS coaching staff also cited Jeff Armstrong for one hurry, putting enough pressure on an opposing quarterback to cause a bad throw.

To earn a knockdown award, linemen must get 10 in a game. Besides Iglehart's and Richardson's 11 each, Jimmy Henry turned in a team-high 17 and Brian Lickey and Williams notched 11 apiece.

In addition, guard Brad Hart earned an award for two pins, that is, knocking down an opposing tackler and pinning him to the ground, and Tony Hernandez won the week's Great Fake Award.

Special teams honors belonged to Ben Wilson this week for stopping a Monahans PAT kick and for exceptional blocking on punt and kick returns.

Non-district volleyball...

Lady Tigers trip Sweetwater

SWEETWATER — Snyder's Lady Tigers eased back to the .500 mark on the non-district volleyball season Tuesday with a 15-8, 15-5 win over Sweetwater.

"We needed this win to get back on track," said Snyder coach Patty Grimmett. "We played, probably, one of our better matches.

"I've been working on different lineups and last night I put Melanie Duncan and Joelien King in at middle blockers and they did a good job.

"What we've been trying to do is work on our consistency," Grimmett continued. "Against Sweetwater, we looked good on offense and our defense played well. Our transition game looked great.

"We really played well as a team," coach Grimmett reported. "I was really pleased with the girls. Our teamwork finally gelled."

A total of six Lady Tigers had scoring serves in Tuesday's victory including Lynette Sears and Karri Blackledge with seven each.

King punched six, Duncan had five, Melody Sargent nailed three and Stephanie Fambro added a pair.

The win was the third over Sweetwater this season for SHS. The Lady Tigers posted wins over the Lady Mustangs in the season-opening Monahans Tournament, then in the consolation semifinals of the Denver City Tournament.

Snyder's next opponent will be Andrews, in the AHS gym Saturday.

The Lady Mustangs knocked off Snyder in an early-season tournament meeting in Denver City, 15-13, 9-15, 2-15.

Freshmen action begins competition with the B contest set for noon, followed at 1 p.m. by the A match.

The junior varsity tilt is scheduled to begin at approximately 2 p.m. followed by the varsity battle.

Snyder will return home for a Tuesday non-district match with San Angelo Lake View, before taking to the road again with a three-way match in Seminole against the Maidens and the Monahans Lady Loboes Sept. 26.

District 2-4A play begins Oct. 10 when the Lady Tigers host Levelland.

Rangers beat Detroit...

Whiteside saves 6-5 victory

DETROIT (AP) — The results are always the same. Only the uniform changes for Matt Whiteside.

Matt who?

Whiteside went 1 2-3 innings to earn his first major league save Tuesday night, helping the Texas Rangers preserve a 6-5 win over the Detroit Tigers. It's one of those nice stories that frequently come to light late in the season, after a team is out of contention.

After graduating from Arkansas State, Whiteside wasn't selected until the 25th round of the 1990 draft. It proves that scouting isn't an exact science.

Whiteside, 25, who was purchased on Aug. 5 from the Rangers' Triple-A farm club at Oklahoma City, hasn't blown a save all season.

After posting 29 saves at Gastonia, N.C., in 1991, Whiteside started this season at Double-A Tulsa, where he was perfect in 21 save situations. Then he converted all eight opportunities at Oklahoma City before his callup.

"I've really been pitching pretty well," Whiteside said. "It's been quite a year. I didn't know if I'd get the chance up here. This is different. When you finally get to the big leagues, you just want to do whatever the club asks you to do."

Rangers manager Toby Harrah, well aware of Whiteside's perfect minor league record, didn't want to rush him into a save situation in the majors.

"I've had that in the back of my mind, to give him an opportunity to save a game up here," Texas manager Toby Harrah said. "He was pretty excited about it. Here's a kid that goes 21-for-21 in Double-A and 8-for-8 in Triple-A. He deserved a chance up here to see what he can do.

"He did a pretty good job. This isn't an easy lineup to close out. The Tigers have got some pretty good hitters over there."

It wasn't pretty. Whiteside gave up an RBI single to Travis Fryman in the ninth, and the Tigers had runners at first and third with two outs when Cecil Fielder hit a towering fly ball to left field.

What was left of the partisan crowd of 10,756 roared. But the ball was caught on the warning track by Juan Gonzalez to end the game.

"You sure don't want to fool with Cecil Fielder," Whiteside said. "When he hit it, I knew it had a chance to be a home run. Lucky for me, he got under it a little too much."

Jose Canseco homered onto the left-field roof and Rafael Palmeiro and Dean Palmer also connected for the Rangers.

Canseco led off the ninth with a drive that was measured at 434 feet. It was his 26th home run of the season and fourth in 11 games for Texas.

"When he's healthy, he's just like Cecil," Tony Phillips said. "That's all they want him to do. Jose, Cecil and Mark McGwire are in a league of their own."

"I've always considered this ballpark a good hitters' ballpark," Canseco said. "For one thing, it's not too deep.

Fryman hit his 20th homer, off reliever Todd Burns, in the Detroit eighth.

Texas starter Jose Guzman (14-11) allowed five hits in seven innings. He struck out six and walked three. Detroit right-hander Bill Gullickson, who has only one win in his last seven starts, gave up four runs on eight hits in 6 2-3 innings. He walked three and struck out five.

Bagwell homer takes Houston past Giants

HOUSTON (AP) — Jeff Bagwell's big game for the Houston Astros had San Francisco Giants manager Roger Craig wondering if he had made a poor career choice.

Bagwell had a three-run homer in the bottom of the 11th inning Tuesday night to give the Astros a 9-6 victory over the Giants.

"This is the best game I've ever had," said Bagwell, who went 5 for 6 and became the first Houston player with five hits in a single game since Billy Hatcher on May 20, 1988 against St. Louis. "I haven't done that much this year, and I know I'm a better hitter than I've shown."

"Why couldn't I be a sportswriter instead of a manager?" Craig asked after watching his San Francisco Giants blow leads of 5-0 and 6-5 before losing 9-6. "We had this one won twice and still blew it."

"We had a five-run lead and blew it. We had a one-run lead with one out and nobody on in the ninth and blew it," Craig said. "I've had some tough games as a manager, but I don't know if I've ever had one tougher than this one. I'll be re-living this one in my mind probably 100 times tonight."

Bagwell homered off Jeff Reed after Dave Righetti (1-7) had allowed two-out base hits to Steve Finley and Luis Gonzalez.

JV spikers top S'water

SWEETWATER — Snyder had three servers in double figures Tuesday night as the Lady Tigers JV dropped Sweetwater, 15-11, 12-15, 15-8 in non-district volleyball action.

Angela Cox, Bianca Rocha and Brandy Robertson each slammed 10 points for Snyder. Rocha had a pair of aces and Cox contributed one.

"We had a little setback in the second game," said Snyder JV coach Matt Garrett, "but we came on in the third game and won."

The Lady Tigers carry their 12-4 season mark into Saturday's road meeting with Andrews.

Players of the week...

Kiely, Hill earn SWC honors

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — University of North Texas coach Dennis Parker watched the play and still couldn't believe it.

With his team driving for a tying touchdown against Southern Methodist and facing fourth-and-1 on SMU's 11, the play was practically a shoo-in.

Instead, SMU senior linebacker Bill Kiely shot through a gap in the offensive line and stuffed Terrance Brown for no gain.

SMU then drove 89 yards for the game's final touchdown in a 28-14 victory.

"We had worked on that play all week," said North Texas coach Dennis Parker. "I don't remember in all my coaching one particular play that had as much an impact on a game as that one."

Kiely, who has started for the Mustangs ever since SMU's football program was reinstated in 1989 following NCAA sanctions, had 16 tackles, 11 of them solo, in SMU's first win of the season against North Texas.

For his effort, Kiely earned Southwest Conference defensive player of the week honors from The Associated Press.

Texas Tech wide receiver Lloyd Hill won AP's SWC offensive player of the week after catching a school record-tying 12 passes for 222 yards and a touchdown in Tech's 49-32 victory against Wyoming.

A 40-yard catch by Hill on second-and-21 late in the fourth quarter set up the Red Raiders' decisive score.

Hill is second in the nation among NCAA Division I-A schools in passes caught per game with 8.5. He downplays his performance, giving much of the credit to Tech quarterback Robert Hall, the offensive line and receivers coach Ivy Williams.

Hill said Williams, a stocky drill sergeant-type who scrutinizes his receivers' every move, provides unique inspiration not to drop any balls.

"He yells a lot and that is kind of the reason we catch all of our passes," Hill says with a laugh. "He makes you kind of scared to drop it."

"Lloyd loses that concentration every once in a while and I have to yell to keep him concentrating," Williams said, fighting back a smile.

"But you would think a guy who catches 12 balls for 222 yards thinks he doesn't have any problems. But not Lloyd; he will be in practice this week working hard to improve," he said.

The question was never if Hill would be a success on the football field. It was just a matter of picking a position.

As a high school freshman at powerful Odessa Permian, Hill was a star running back.

Gary Gaines, Permian's varsity coach, moved him to wide receiver as a sophomore.

But several colleges thought of Hill as a defensive back after he earned all-state honors as a safety.

What to do?

Gaines put it best. He says just watch Hill shake a cornerback and grab a pass over the middle of the defense and the question will be answered.

"It doesn't take an Einstein to know you have to get the ball to him," said Gaines, who joined Hill at Texas Tech three years ago as a defensive coach. "Lloyd would be good at a lot of positions, but wide receiver is his natural spot."

"I would like to thank coach Gaines for making the switch for me to go from running back to wide receiver," Hill said.

Browns' Kosar out with fracture

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cleveland Browns quarterback Bernie Kosar will be out at least six weeks with a hairline fracture of his right ankle, suffered in the first half of Monday night's 27-23 loss to the Miami Dolphins.

Kosar, the Browns quarterback since 1985, was hit hard several times in the game, but wasn't sure when the injury occurred.

With the Browns trailing 20-3 early in the fourth quarter, Kosar threw touchdown passes of 6 yards to Michael Jackson and 3 yards to Mark Bavaro, sandwiched around David Brandon's 32-yard fumble return, rallying Cleveland to a 23-20 lead.

The Browns backup quarterback is Todd Philcox, who completed 20 of 49 passes for 317 yards with two touchdowns and two interceptions during the preseason. He appeared only briefly in four games last year.

Kosar led the Browns to four division titles in seven seasons, and set an NFL record last year by throwing 308 consecutive passes without an interception.

Junior college cancels grid season

SUPERIOR, Wis. (AP) — Wisconsin-Superior canceled its football season because of injuries and shortage of players.

Athletic director Pat Dolan said a meeting decided to halt play before the beginning of the Wisconsin State University Conference season.

The number of players with injuries serious enough to be sidelined for extended periods reached six when Ronnie Reed, the leading rusher in a 31-3 loss to Augsburg, sustained a head injury.

The roster was down to 28 players, several of them doubtful for next weekend's conference opener against Wisconsin-Stout.

By canceling play before the season is three games old, "we are anticipating" players won't lose a season's eligibility.

Former University of Texas running back Butch Hadnot, after being declared academically ineligible at UT transferred to Wisconson-Superior just before the start of the season.

On The Issues

The issue: school choice

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Associated Press asks the Bush and Clinton campaigns for their stands on an issue each weekday and assembles their responses.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here are the views of the presidential nominees on the questions: Should parents be able to decide which public schools their children attend? Should they be able to send their children to private school at public expense?

Bush: "I firmly believe that parents, not government, should make the important decisions in their children's lives. That's why my state and local G.I. Bill for children gives low-and middle-income families $1,000 scholarships to help send their children to the schools of their choice — private, public or religious. My approach permits the same choice we now give our college students, an approach that has strengthened all our universities — public, private and religious."

Clinton: "As president I would work with states to develop public school choice programs like the one I created in Arkansas. I do not, however, support using our limited public resources to pay for private education."

Candidates compete to explain away their own Achilles' heels

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some issues refuse to die, no matter how many times a presidential candidate offers a "definitive" explanation or clarification or plan.

For Bill Clinton, it's his draft record; for George Bush, it's his economic record. But both are millstones, destined to weigh them down the next seven weeks.

The draft issue serves as shorthand for a whole range of character questions that have dogged Clinton all year. The recession underscores Bush's domestic shortcomings and hits people at the most basic level.

It's the usual choice between two flawed candidates, with even some of the president's backers acknowledging he is not an ideal standard-bearer.

"You're not striving for religious perfection. You're just trying to say George Bush is a better choice than Bill Clinton," said Republican pollster Bill McInturff.

"The cornerstone of the campaign has to be creating an enormous amount of doubt about Clinton's character," said GOP consultant Larry McCarthy. "I don't think Bush is going to win it on the strength of any new economic program ... or pledges never, never to raise taxes again."

Bush talks often these days of principles and trust, warns ominously about risk and the wrong kind of change. And he hits, sometimes hard and sometimes gently, on what his campaign views as the key to Clinton's vulnerability on character: the Arkansas governor's ever-evolving explanations of how he avoided the Vietnam draft.

At the National Guard Association convention Tuesday, for example, Bush referred to "controversies swirling" around Clinton's military record. He also made a pointed reference to Dan Quayle's explosive national debut in 1988 when it was learned he had joined the National Guard during the Vietnam War.

"No candidate has ever been attacked more unmercifully than Vice President Quayle, but he stood his ground and he answered every question calmly and with candor, and he told the truth," Bush said. He didn't need to say more.

But Clinton, trying to inoculate himself against the GOP insinuations, also talks about trust and change. He warns audiences that Bush "will say you cannot trust the other side," exhorts them to have "the courage to change."

Clinton thinks Bush's fatal flaw is the economy, and he zings him on it incessantly. He was hesitant and seemed nervous in the military portion of his speech Tuesday to the National Guard convention in Salt Lake City, but he made a concluding economic pitch with confidence and verve.

At rallies this week Clinton has heaped mountains of scorn on Bush's belated introduction of a cohesive economic agenda last Thursday in Detroit. "After four years of inaction on the economy," Clinton told one group, "all of the sudden they are agreeing — to use their words — to target America. Thanks a lot."

National polls show Clinton far ahead of Bush, even as the draft saga continues to unfold. Fully one-quarter of those interviewed in a CBS-New York Times poll released Tuesday said they did not believe Clinton had told the truth about his draft record. Yet overall, the poll showed Clinton ahead of Bush 52-40 percent among registered voters.

Fight over abortion rights could move to Spain next

MADRID, Spain (AP) — A government-backed proposal to ease abortion restrictions threatens to make Spain the next battleground in Europe's growing conflict between secularist politicians and the pulpit.

Like other mostly Roman Catholic nations locked in abortion rights disputes — notably Poland and Ireland — the battle lines in Spain are clear: reform-minded officials versus clergy demanding adherence to church teachings.

The controversy also shows signs of becoming as divisive as elsewhere.

In a rare — and possibly unprecedented — political statement, Spanish clergy have appealed for the ouster of pro-abortion rights lawmakers.

"As Spanish citizens, Catholics have the moral obligation to use all means at their disposal to prevent this attack on human life from becoming a reality," said a statement from the Bishops' Committee for the Defense of Life after the proposals were announced earlier this month.

The Socialist government, led by Health Minister Jose Antonio Grinan, contends the proposed reforms answer demands by most Spanish women.

"What is fundamentally important is the woman's opinion since she's the one who undergoes the anguish and suffering, and, in any case, would have to go to jail for having an abortion," Grinan told reporters recently.

The government plan would allow an abortion in the first 12 weeks of pregnancy if a doctor considers it is causing psychological stress and the woman proves she has sought information on alternatives.

Since 1985, abortions have been allowed only in cases of rape, incest, fetal deformation or a threat to the life of the mother. Before 1985, abortions were outlawed.

Because Socialists control a majority in both houses of parliament, the reform seems likely to pass despite the church opposition.

Conversely, Poland and Ireland have so far rebuffed attempts to liberalize laws on abortion, which is legal with few restrictions throughout most of western Europe.

Polish lawmakers gave initial approval in July to a law that would ban abortion and provide two-year jail sentences for doctors who perform the procedure. It still must win final approval in parliament and be signed by President Lech Walesa. Free abortion had been available virtually on demand under Communist rule from 1956 to 1990.

In Ireland, the Supreme Court in March permitted a 14-year-old who said she was raped to travel to Britain to have an abortion.

LAJUANA JOHNSON

1992 SHS grad enlists in Army

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — Lajuana M. Johnson, daughter of Elvin M. Loper of Sunset, recently enlisted in the U.S. Army's Delayed Entry Program (DEP), and will report for active duty Sept. 30.

The 1992 Snyder High School graduate will take basic training at Fort Jackson, S.C., and advanced individual training at Fort Lee, Va. She has chosen the position of petroleum supply specialist as her military occupational specialty, and has volunteered to serve a four-year tour of duty.

Johnson also qualified to receive the Army College Fund by scoring high on the military entrance test and chosing a critical job skill. After an initial soldier contriburion of $1,200, she will receive $25,200 for higher education upon completion of her enlistment.

Perot's supporters might ok Clinton LA Times reports

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ross Perot, seeking to steer the election debate and force President Bush and Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton to address federal budget deficits, hinted he might re-enter the presidential race, it was reported.

In an interview published in Wednesday's Los Angeles Times, Perot held out the possibility that his political organization — United We Stand, America — might endorse Clinton if the Democratic presidential nominee confronts the deficit issue.

Bush and Clinton both have sidestepped detailed discussions of the deficit.

Perot says considering the huge swing vote his followers represent, Bush and Clinton would be "unrealistic" to continue to ignore the deficit issue.

To decide on running, Perot said, he would require a meeting involving all 50 state coordinators of his organization.

"If they said 'yes, go to it,' then we'd do it," Perot said in the Times account.

Senate, House seek compromise on bill for hurricane relief

WASHINGTON (AP) — House-Senate bargainers say they could rush a multibillion-dollar relief package to President Bush as early as this week for people digging out from Hurricanes Iniki and Andrew.

With Americans from the Atlantic to the mid-Pacific still homeless and dazed from the two super-storms, negotiators from Congress' two chambers prepared today to try to fashion the final bill.

On Tuesday, the Senate approved its own $10.5 billion measure on an 84-10 vote. The legislation would provide loans, grants and other payments to residents of Hawaii, where Iniki struck Friday, and Florida and Louisiana, which Andrew pummeled on Aug. 24.

The House version calls for $8.8 billion in relief, including $520 million for farmers whose crops were destroyed by Andrew and $400 million for food stamps for people battered by the storm.

"We owe it to the people who suffered devastating loses of homes and schools and businesses to get this bill through Congress and onto the president's desk as expeditiously as possible," said Senate Appropriations Committee Chairman Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., the Senate bill's chief sponsor.

Bush late Tuesday amended his weekend disaster declaration for Hawaii to permit the federal government to assume 100 percent of the costs of certain recovery programs, waiving usual state and local cost-sharing requirements. He had taken the same action for Florida and Louisiana earlier.

The Senate bill contains $92 million to rebuild limited facilities at Homestead Air Force Base, the south Florida airfield that the president pledged to rebuild during a campaign-style trip there last month.

That was far less than the $480 million Bush sought to begin reconstructing a base that was a major employer in a state he wants dearly to carry on Election Day.

Defendant wants to tell his story

MORRISTOWN, N.J. (AP) — The former Exxon Co. security guard who pleaded guilty in the kidnapping-death of company executive Sidney Reso wants to tell his story on television, according to his attorneys.

Arthur Seale, a 45-year-old former Hillside police officer, faces up to 140 years in federal and state prisons for the brutal abduction and death of the 57-year-old Reso.

But defense attorneys said Tuesday after Seale pleaded guilty to state murder and kidnapping charges that he "wants to show the world he is not a monster."

"He wants to tell his story very badly because no one knows about it. They only know the prosecutors' side," said Rudy Westmoreland, attorney for Seale in civil matters. "He's going to tell about it from his point of view, and hopefully, people will understand it ... It will be widely disseminated, first on television."

Joseph O'Neill, Seale's criminal defense attorney, said that Seale wants to show that he and his wife, Irene, did not intend to kill Reso.

"He wants the world to know that he never intended for Mr. Reso to expire," O'Neill said. "They took measures to preserve his life and fully intended to set him free, whether or not the ransom was paid ... There was no indication he was not all right until the day he expired."

Reso was abducted from outside his home on April 29 and died four days later.

Girl, 8, treated, released from ER

An eight-year-old Snyder girl was treated at Cogdell Memorial Hospital emergency room after the bicycle she was riding collided with a vehicle early Tuesday evening.

Chastity Michelle Peralez of 602 N. Ave. T complained of chest pains after the accident, which occurred a little before 7 p.m. She was treated and released at the hospital.

According to police reports, the bicycle was traveling south on Avenue T when it collided with a 1985 Pontiac driven by 20-year-old Ricky Len Hammit of Rt. 3. Police said the Pontiac had the right of way.

Hammit, however, was arrested for felony driving while intoxicated and on a misdemeanor charge of driving with a suspended license. He was transported to Scurry County Jail.

Police also cleared a burglary case Tuesday with the identification of two juvenile suspects.

The two 14-year-old boys have been charged with the Sept. 14 burglary of a vehicle owned by Harold Britton. The case and report have been forwarded to juvenile court.

One of the boys, who turned 14 today, was transported to the police department and later released to his parents. The other boy was transported to the Lubbock Youth Detention Center.

EXXON DONATION — Retired Exxon senior vice president Roy Baze, right, recently presented a $1,000 donation to the Cogdell Memorial Hospital Cardiac Rehab and Fitness Center. Accepting the donation is hospital board member Sue Mize and fitness center coordinator Matt Cross. The donation will be used toward the purchase of a NordiTrac cross-country ski machine for the facility. Exxon makes grants available as part of its Volunteer Involvement Fund Program, which encourages volunteerism by employees. (SDN Staff Photo)

Shuttle crew gets an extra day in space for experiments

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — NASA today added an extra day to Endeavour's flight, giving the space shuttle astronauts more time to do experiments and enjoy what one described as "an awesome place."

The crew spent the morning talking with Japanese children and tested a sack that sucks fluids into the legs in an attempt to counteract the dizzying effects of space flight.

Scientists involved in the joint U.S.-Japanese laboratory research mission, most of them Japanese, took part in the decision to extend the flight from seven to eight days so more experiments could be performed.

While NASA was still weighing whether to lengthen the flight, pilot Curtis Brown Jr. had said he'd love the idea. "You could probably break both my legs and I'd still stay up here,' he said. "It's an awesome place."

"Gee, Sam, everybody's frowning," joked shuttle commander Robert "Hoot" Gibson, when Mission Control's Sam Gemar broke the news. Endeavour now is scheduled to land at Kennedy Space Center on Sunday.

Today, Mamoru Mohri, the first professional Japanese astronaut, spoke with several dozen school children gathered at a television studio in Tokyo and at Kurokawa Elementary School — Mohri's alma mater — in Yoichi, on the island of Hokkaido.

Astronauts Mark Lee, Mae Jemison and Jan Davis also briefly joined in the half-hour conversation in Japanese with the students, age about 10-15 years old.

Some of the children sang for Mohri. The nuclear scientist, in turn, sailed a model airplane, twirled an apple on a string, balanced Brown on one finger and was spun in somersaults by Lee and Brown.

Earlier, Davis squeezed inside a waist-high negative pressure cocoon for a four-hour stay.

The device has been used on other shuttle missions.

Ex-worker wants to sue company

GRAND PRAIRIE, Texas (AP) — An attorney for Boardwalk Amusement Park, which shut down a roller coaster ride after an 11-year-old girl was critically injured, has harsh criticism for an ex-employee who is threatening to sue because he was hurt on the same ride last spring.

"You're seeing someone here who's trying to use the system for his own gain. I think it's just atrocious," Boardwalk attorney James Juneau said Tuesday.

"It's misleading to use his incident as a comparison of what happened to little Rachel Morrison," Juneau said.

Rachel, who lives in Hewitt, near Waco, was thrown from the roller coaster on Labor Day. She hit her head on a rail and has been in a coma since the accident. She remains in critical condition on a respirator at Methodist Medical Center in Dallas.

Russell Moore, a former maintenance worker at the park, was hurt on April 30 in the same spot on the ride. He said he suffered a broken arm and shattered bones in his wrist, ankle and foot on the roller coaster, called the Pipeline Express.

Juneau challenged Moore's version of the accident and said the two accidents "are in no way related."

Juneau said Moore, who was off duty on April 30, knew the ride was still under construction when he and a co-worker decided to take a ride without permission.

Moore has threatened to sue Boardwalk for damages because park officials have refused to offer him a damage settlement.

"I am in no way using the little girl to further my gain," Moore said.

U.S. Marines sent to help U.N. effort

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — The United States is sending some 2,400 Marines to Somalia to provide more support for U.N. troops guarding relief supplies.

The Pentagon announced Tuesday night that a U.S. amphibious group carrying the Marines is heading for Somalia.

The United States is providing logistical support for the armed U.N. force that began arriving this week to protect the aid airlift, but no American troops have been based in Mogadishu because of the lack of security.

Dozens of people die daily in the Somali capital, which has been reduced to anarchy by a civil war. Ten days ago, a Somali relief worker was shot to death at the airport.

The U.S. task force, led by the amphibious assault ship USS Tarawa, will provide seaborne command, control and communications support for U.S. Air Force planes transporting Pakistani peacekeepers to Mogadishu.

Study reveals Hispanics have the highest total of dropouts

WASHINGTON (AP) — High school dropout rates are declining for blacks and whites but not for Hispanics, the Education Department said today.

The department's fourth annual dropout report to Congress showed that nationally, the percentage of students ages 15 through 24 in grades 10 through 12 who quit in a single year without completing high school declined about 34 percent, from a 6.1 percent rate in 1980 to 4 percent in 1991. That means about 348,000 students left school without graduating in 1991.

Using a slightly different age sampling, the department calculated that 12.5 percent of the 16-24 age group, or 3.9 million people, was not enrolled and had not completed high school in 1991, down from 14.1 percent in 1980. That rate reflects the cumulative effects of annual dropouts over a number of years.

Hispanic dropout rates have remained high during the last 20 years, while the dropout rates for whites and blacks declined between 1980 and 1991.

The report by the National Center for Education Statistics measures the dropout rate in three ways. Officials track those who leave high school each year; the proportion of the population who have not completed high school, regardless of when they dropped out; and a single group of students over a period of time.

From 1972 to 1991, the report showed, the dropout rates for 16-through 24-year-old blacks went from 21.3 percent to 13.6 percent. For whites in that age group, the rates dropped from 12.3 percent in 1972 to 8.9 percent in 1991. The rates are for those who have not completed high school, regardless of when they dropped out.

According to the report, the Hispanic dropout rate was 35.3 percent in 1991 for ages 16 through 24. In 1972, that rate was 34.3 percent.

Most of the eighth-grade students who were tracked over a period of time listed school-related reasons for leaving, such as "did not like school," had failing grades or "could not get along with teachers." However, 31 percent of the female dropouts were pregnant.

Twenty-three of the nation's largest cities have nearly twice the number of dropouts as the national rate, when measured by the percentage of Americans from ages 16 through 19 who had not completed high school and were not currently enrolled in school. The report said 1.6 million Americans, or 11.2 percent, fall in that category.

The dropout rate among this age group soared in several California cities. Santa Ana reported a rate of 36.7 percent, followed by 27.8 in El Monte, 26.3 in Ontario, 24.9 in Pomona and 24 in Compton.

Overall, the dropout rate was above 20 percent in 23 of the 250 largest cities in the United States, above 20 percent in 133 counties and above 30 percent in 17 counties.

When the dropout rate is computed for the 16- through 19-year age group for each state, the District of Columbia had the highest rate with 19.1 percent, followed by 14.9 percent in Nevada, 14.3 in Arizona and in California, 14.2 in Florida and 14.1 in Georgia. North Dakota had the lowest dropout rate at 4.3 percent.

Medicine helps control fibrillation

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My husband has been diagnosed with atrial fibrillation. Would you discuss this heart problem and indicate how it is treated?

DEAR READER: The healthy heart beats rhythmically because of tiny electrical impulses that begin in the sino-atrial node (the natural pacemaker), spread through the muscles of the low-pressure chambers (atria), then sweep in a wave through the muscles of the high-pressure chambers (ventricles). The entire chain of events is wonderfully coordinated and leads to muscle contractions (first the atria, then the ventricles) that pump blood into the circulation. This cycle is repeated billions of times during a person's life.

Any electrical system can develop problems, and the heart's conduction is no exception. One of these malfunctions is called atrial fibrillation. In this affliction, multiple electrical impulses are generated within the muscles of the atria. These minute charges compete with the normal pacemaker and eventually over-ride it, causing an irregular, often rapid pulse rate.

Atrial fibrillation is not, by itself, a particularly hazardous condition; however, the efficiency of the heartbeat is compromised. Therefore, people with this irregularity may have more trouble exercising. Also, this problem is confined almost exclusively to older adults because it usually reflects either arteriosclerotic heart disease or valve damage, as may occur from rheumatic fever.

The purpose of therapy is either to slow the pulse or to change the fibrillation back to the normal rhythm. Older, sedentary individuals with long-standing fibrillation usually fare better with simple pulse-rate control, using digitalis and other drugs. Other patients can be given treatment with medicine or electric shocks to return the heart to normal rhythm. This is called cardioversion.

In the presence of atrial fibrillation, blood clots can form in the atrial chambers. In this circumstance, pieces of a clot may break off and be carried to the brain, causing stroke. For this reason, cardiologists view any person with recent-onset atrial fibrillation as a candidate for chemical or electrical cardioversion. If the normal rhythm cannot be established (or maintained), doctors often recommend an anticoagulant, such as aspirin.

There are other types of atrial heart irregularity. I'll discuss one called supraventricular tachycardia in a day or so. Watch for the column in this paper.

To give you more information, I am sending you a copy of my newest Health Report titled "Heart Disease." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

Men See Woman's Scars As Just Part of the Whole

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1992 Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Please tell "Inhibited and Embarrassed" not to worry about her mastectomy scars. Her potential lover might have a few problems of his own. She'd be lucky to find anybody in even near mint condition. Many of us, both male and female, in the fifty-something age range have had organs lopped off, bypassed, reamed out, and otherwise rearranged.

Any man who would reject a woman because of her scars or an absent breast is a man from whom she should be fleeing as fast as she can.

If I were a widower, I'd consider myself lucky to meet a gem of a lady who had a record of a successful, loving marriage, had won a battle against cancer, had endured the trials of widowhood and who now has the spunk to remarry. A great big hug to her and congratulations to the lucky man who finds her.

S.G.B. IN CALIFORNIA

* * *

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I have been married for 45 years. She lost her left breast to cancer 30 years ago.

Last March, she lost her right breast. Did it make any difference to me? Not a bit! I thank God every day for her life. I love her for what she is, not for what she looks like. Besides, we have known each other since we were 13 — and she didn't have any then, and it didn't make any difference.

BOB LONG, SACRAMENTO

* * *

DEAR ABBY: First of all, let me tell you that I am a male and a nudist, and I have seen women of all shapes and sizes — some have had mastectomies. There is one thing I learned from being a nudist, and that is to respect people for what they are, not for what they have, or what they look like. People who carry scars from surgery shouldn't feel embarrassed — they are "badges of honor" awarded to survivors of a life-and-death battle.

NASHVILLE, TENN.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: Some years ago, I met a woman I found attractive. She was hesitant to get involved, and finally confessed that she thought I might be turned off by the scars she carried following her mastectomy. I told her I had a few scars of my own across my back and across my chest from a VC grenade ambush I earned along with a Purple Heart and a Bronze Star. I confessed that while recovering in a VA hospital, I worried that my scars would turn women off. I worried in vain. We accepted each other for what we were — not how we looked. This is the second marriage for both of us, and we couldn't be happier.

AN OFFICER AND A GENTLEMAN

* * *

DEAR INHIBITED AND EMBARRASSED: Your body is not disfigured — it carries a badge of courage and triumph over disease.

Your husband had the sense to realize this, and you should not settle for less now that he is gone. Physical attraction is mental and emotional. If someone loves you with his whole heart, mind and body, it will not matter that you are missing a breast, an arm, a leg or any other part.

You have nothing to be ashamed of. I am a 53-year-old man, and if I were not already "involved" with someone I love very much, I would be delighted to meet you!

JIM MACOMBER, TACOMA

DEAR READERS: "Homefront," my favorite TV series, begins its fall season tomorrow night, Sept. 17, at 8:00 p.m. Central/Mountain Time, 9:00 p.m. Eastern/Pacific Time, on ABC. Try it; you'll like it!

Burr makes video

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Raymond Burr, television's "Perry Mason," has made a video for prospective jurors about the ins and outs of the justice system.

On Monday, about 100 prospective jurors watched the video, which takes viewers through a history of jury trial tradition.

"I thought the video was cute," said Lori Newman, a pharmacist.

The video was on loan from the National Center for State Courts.

Astrograph

By Bernice Bede Osol

Your Birthday

Sept. 16, 1992

You could be rather fortunate in the year ahead in the way of business favors that may be granted to you by those you know socially. Keep on the best of terms with everyone in your club, church or bowling league.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Try not to introduce volatile issues today into casual conversations with friends. A heated debate could result with very little provocation. Virgo, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for Virgo's Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) An ineffective counselor could give you confusing financial advice today, so don't look to individuals who have trouble balancing their own books.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) In order to sustain your independence today, you might unwisely reject the support of associates who only want to be helpful. This would be counterproductive.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Business or financial decisions you make today could be overly influenced by your negative perspective, thus causing you to limit your possibilities.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Someone you're quite friendly with is not looked upon as favorably today by another of your close pals. Don't arrange anything today that forces one upon the other.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If you fail to lay all your cards on the table today, someone you'll be dealing with is apt to hold back critical information from you.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) If you don't have something good to say about a friend who isn't present today, it's best not to say anything at all. Your comments will be reported in detail to this individual at a later date.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Only nominal achievements are likely today, yet this won't be due to a lack of initiative. You'll have the industrious inclinations, but your methods could be self-defeating.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If you're not careful, poor judgment on behalf of someone you're closely associated with could cause complications for you today. Keep a tight reign on your ally.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) If someone you know casually heaps unwarranted praise on you today, be aware that this individual may have ulterior motives. Don't succumb to flattery.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If you're hoping to do something rather sticky without offending friends today, social matters must be negotiated with skill and understanding.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Two important career objectives can be achieved today — if you handle them methodically. Be careful, however, you don't let go of what you own.

Mayor says artifical spring supply study is necessary

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A supplementation plan for Texas' largest spring during dry spells should be studied by the San Antonio Water System, the city's mayor says.

Comal Springs is supplied by the Edwards Aquifer, which is the sole source of San Antonio's drinking water. The aquifer has been threatened by drought in recent years and is the target of a management plan by the Texas Water Commission.

Mayor Nelson Wolff Tuesday criticized the Edwards Underground Water District for not moving fast enough on the idea. It would keep the springs in New Braunfels flowing — even when the aquifer level drops too low to supply it.

"There's been too much running around it," said Wolff. "It seems to me we should grab this issue and go with it."

The water commission, attempting to manage the aquifer in the face of a federal lawsuit, had enacted pumping limits for municipal, industrial and irrigation well owners.

But a state district judge in Austin ruled last week that the aquifer is not an underground river and thus not subject to the water commission's control. A state lawmaker now plans legislation to protect the aquifer.
