The Marines have landed

Royal Marine Commandos use an assault boat to practice landings during training at Ascension Island in the Atlantic Ocean. According to the Ministry of Defense in London Friday, British troops, including Marines and paratroopers, mounted a number of landings on the Argentine-held Falkland Islands. This photowas made available in London Friday.

British troops try to regain Falklands

By The Associated Press

British marines and paratroopers stormed the Falkland Islands Friday during a fierce air-sea battle and launched a ground offensive to regain the wind-swept South Atlantic islands seized by Argentine on April 2.

Britain announced that its assault forces had established "a firm bridgehead" as Argentine aircraft engaged British jets and warships, damaging five frigates.

An Argentine communique issued late Monday claimed eight British frigates were hit, with four suffering damages "of great magnitude" and two "probably having sunk." It said "approximately 70 percent" of the British forces involved in the landings were put "out of action" and Argentine units were continuing to attack the invaders.

The British Defense Ministry gave few details, but government sources in London said 2,500 commandos had secured a landing zone at Port San Carlos on the northwestern side of East Falkland Island and 40 miles west of the capital of Stanley. They said the initial dawn assaults were carried out by 1,000 troopers on four beaches and they were reinforced during the day. Equipment sent ashore included light tanks and anti-aircraft weapons.

A photograph released by the ministry showed three Royal Marines hoisting a British flag.

Defense Secretary John Nott confirmed Argentine reports of successful attacks on British warships, saying "five have been damaged, two seriously." The ministry said one of Britain's carrier-based Harrier jets was missing and claimed Harriers and missiles shot down 17 Argentine Mirage, Skyhawk and Pucara warplanes. It said three Argentine helicopters were destroyed on the ground.

"Seven weeks after the Argentine aggression, British forces are tonight firmly established back on the Falkland Islands," Nott said in a statement reporting the biggest battle action so far in the undeclared war.

He said invasion troops of the Royal Marines and Parachute Regiment "are now ashore in substantial numbers" and the landings were unopposed by ground forces. But he said that in addition to the damaged British ships and the missing Harrier, the British attackers lost "two of our small helicopters" and 21 men perished when a helicopter plunged into the stormy Atlantic during pre-invasion troop transfers.

Argentina, in an earlier report, had said its forces damaged five British frigates, leaving one with as many as 177 seamen aboard sinking in flames, and shot down a Harrier and a helicopter.

That communique acknowledged the loss of three Argentine warplanes and said three helicopters were damaged.

Nott said both sides suffered casualties and some Argentine prisoners had been taken.

An estimated 4,500 British troopers with the war fleet face about 9,000 Argentine soldiers dug in on the islands. Another 3,000 British soldiers are aboard the requisitioned luxury liner Queen Elizabeth 2, which has not yet reached the combat zone.

British correspondent Michael Nicholson of Independent Television News was aboard one of the invasion-support vessels. He wrote that troopers "in their thousands" went ashore and at one landing site he could see the men supported by light tanks establish a beachhead following a naval bombardment.

His dispatch, subject to censorship, gave no location but said at that landing point near a cluster of white stone buildings "troops found 31 Falklanders in their own kind of makeshift shelter, including 14 children there. They're all safe and they are all uninjured."

He said the commandos began boarding landing craft from a troop ship at 6:30 a.m. and the entire operation was over in four hours of "cold, crisp and clear weather."

Nicholson's report said the British fleet had about 20 ships in the narrow Falkland Sound that divides the main West and East Falkland islands.

Argentine warplanes launched an attack at 10 a.m., Nicholson wrote, and the warships fired back. He described Argentine pilots as maneuvering "wildly" to evade the anti-aircraft missiles and said "two have been shot down in front of us."

Correspondents with the British fleet said the frigates that were hit were in the Falkland Sound while shelling Argentine positions.

Southwest to add flights

By LESLIE HAINES
Business & Oil Writer

In spite of tales of woe about Midland's air service, at least one air carrier reports being happy and healthy, with a strong first quarter financial report and plans to add more flights between Midland and Dallas within the next few weeks.

That airline is Southwest Airlines.

Southwest soon will be adding three more round trip flights daily between Midland and Dallas.

"We have three new aircraft (Boeing 737-200s) coming in within the next 30 days," said Herbert D. Kelleher, Southwest's president and chairman of the board, in an interview Friday at Midland Regional Airport.

"With those (aircraft), we are going to increase our service to Midland-Odessa from seven to 10 round trips per day, into Dallas and beyond to Houston. One of those will be through plane service to New Orleans," Kelleher said.

He was in Midland Friday to celebrate the fifth anniversary of Southwest's service to Midland.

He did not specify when the additional flights would be added.

Herbert D. Kelleher

Kelleher said the expansion was not a response to the emergency situation created by the bankruptcy of Braniff International Airlines, an event which "saddened" Southwest employees.

Southwest has honored all Braniff tickets in the past seven days, Kelleher added.

Adding more flights to Midland is something Southwest had planned long ago, "almost since the commencement of the PATCO strike," as part of its normal expansion in the short-haul market in Texas and adjoining states, Kelleher said.

"Midland-Odessa is one of our very strongest markets," Kelleher said. "During the five years that we've been here, we've flown 2,669,000 passengers in, out, and through Midland-Odessa, at a fare savings to the people here of $71 million."

Southwest, which specializes in the short-haul market and low fares, has not had a fare increase since January 1981.

The airline is increasing its route structure, however. Since January 1, 1982, Southwest has taken delivery on four new Boeing 737 aircraft and added four cities to its schedule: San Diego, Las Vegas, Phoenix and Kansas City.

Kelleher called this expansion "an

Clements drills into prisons

By LANA CUNNINGHAM

ANDREWS — Texas Gov. Bill Clements drilled into the Texas prison system, the federal government and his Democratic opponent in the November general election and struck a gusher of applause form the 500-plus area residents here to watch the unveiling of a plaque which recognized the county's main industry — oil.

The occasion was recognition of Andrews County's two billionth barrel of oil with Clements as the guest of honor for the barbecue luncheon held in the Civic Center here. Serving as emcee was James Roberts.

Clements this week ordered the Texas Department of Corrections to open up the prison system, after it had been closed to more inmates the previous week. Bartel Zachary has been hired to evaluate the statewide prison system and recommend what should be done to alleviate the overcrowding problems, the governor reported during a news conference at the county airport shortly after he arrived.

These recommendations will be reviewed by Clements, Lieutenant Gov. Bill Hobby and Speaker of the House Billy Clayton.

"WE'LL MAKE AN evaluation of what we can do and look at construction in several forms," the Republican governor said after being greeted by Andrews Chamber representatives while the high school band played.

"We need to take a hard look at how we're handling the prison system," he said before verbally attacking the federal judge which ruled that the system must be closed to more inmates.

The judge's ruling indicated the state's prison system is in a dilemma, and Clements refused to accept that judgment.

"We won't let the criminal justice system in Texas break down because of the judge."

He attributed the reasons for the overcrowding to a combination of the

After unveiling the plaque which denotes Andrews County's two billionth barrel of oil, Gov. Bill Clements recalls his early days in the oil industry in the Permian Basin. In the background is James Roberts, who emceed the Friday luncheon at Andrews Civic Center.

Senate approves budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Republican-controlled Senate voted its approval Friday for a White House-endorsed budget forcing sharp new cuts in social programs and $107 billion in tax increases over three years. Still, it contains a record $116 billion deficit for 1983.

The final vote was 49-43 for the overall plan, which Republicans said would produce lower deficits in the future and thus help reduce interest rates.

But many Democrats complained it was a case of President Reagan recommending another dose of the wrong economic medicine, and Republicans going along. "It prescribes ever deeper cuts in programs for the elderly, the sick, the needy, and families trying to educate their children," complained Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.

Democrats fought to the end to restore spending in programs ranging from unemployment benefits to environmental cleanup to veterans' benefits, but GOP leaders denounced such amendments as budget busters "designed for the November elections" and sent most down to defeat.

In the end, only three Democrats supported the blueprint — Howell Heflin of Alabama; John Stennis of Mississippi and Edward Zorinsky of Nebraska. Two Republicans defected — conservative Jesse Helms of North Carolina and liberal Lowell Weicker of Connecticut.

The most dramatic vote before final passage came on a proposal by conservative Democrats to replace the GOP deficit-ridden plan with a balanced budget in 1985 — a blueprint hinging on tax increases of $146 billion and reductions in planned Social Security cost-of-living increases.

With obvious reluctance, the Republican leadership led the move to table, and thus kill the plan, 70-21.

The balanced budget plan, offered by Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., was unlike every other move by minority Democrats who spent most of a week-long debate trying to increase spending on social programs.

In their one breakthrough, Democrats succeeded, 57-40, in overturning a proposed one-year freeze in benefits for railroad retirees. The move, led by Sen. James Sasser, D-Tenn., calls for a full 7.4 percent hike on July 1.

Occidental Petroleum may shed some of its subsidiaries

Officials of the Occidental Petroleum Co., parent company of The Permian Corp. of Midland, have announced that subsidiaries which don't meet the company's profit demands may be shed from its corporate body.

"We must pick and choose among our businesses and products and eliminate operations that don't meet cash flow and profit requirements," Occidental President and Chief Operating Officer A. Robert Abboud told the annual meeting of the company's stockholders in Los Angeles Friday, according to the Dow Jones financial wire.

Abboud also referred to a "painful" reorganization program the company is undertaking that includes a 20 percent reduction in capital spending plans and said after the meeting the cuts would be applied "across the board."

In addition, Abboud said Occidental is reducing its payroll and overhead expenses. He didn't specify how many people would lose their jobs, according to Dow, but did say: "They'll be sizable."

Permian Corp. officials in Midland and Houston could not be reached for comment by press time.

Sirhan parole date rescinded

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — California's parole board on Friday canceled the scheduled 1984 parole date of Sirhan Sirhan, the convicted assassin of Robert F. Kennedy.

The Board of Prison Terms, denying hat it was yielding to public outcry, said evidence presented at extraordinary hearings showed Sirhan has made continuing threats of violence and murder, and probably was scheduled for parole by mistake in the first place.

The prosecutor who fought to keep Sirhan in prison said the nation "could breathe a sigh of relief that Sirhan will remain in prison."

Sirhan's attorney, who broke the news to the convict by a telephone call to Soledad Prison, said the 38-year-old Jordanian immigrant was "despondent," but that he had expected the decision.

"Let's face it, " said attorney Luke McKissack, "he's a despised person."

M.T. Mehdi, president of the American-Arab Relations Committee who has supported Sirhan's parole, said in New York he was "shocked and exceptionally disappointed...Sirhan now is a completely different person than the Sirhan of 1968."

Under the glare of television lights in the state Capitol, board Chairman Ray Brown read a statement announcing: "The Sept. 1, 1984, parole date of Sirhan Sirhan is hereby rescinded for good cause."

Brown said the board would hold another hearing in six months to consider setting a new date for Sirhan's release.

The board had been under strong public pressure to rescind the parole date, which was set by an earlier board in 1975. But board members specifically denied that public opposition was the chief influence on their decision, which had been requested by Los Angeles County District Attorney John Van de Kamp.

'Downtown destruction derby,' geological theory explored

Thompson

Wright

In this Sunday's "SPEAKING OUT" column, Ed Thompson, executive vice-president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association, looks at two aspects of modern-day Midland — The Reporter-Telegram and the "downtown destruction derby" on city streets. He offers his views on both topics.

Readers may also "Focus" on Midland geologist Billy J. Wright, who from head to toe, is a talented man. Geologists have come from miles around to learn about his unique, published theory on carbonate environments analyzed through well cuttings.

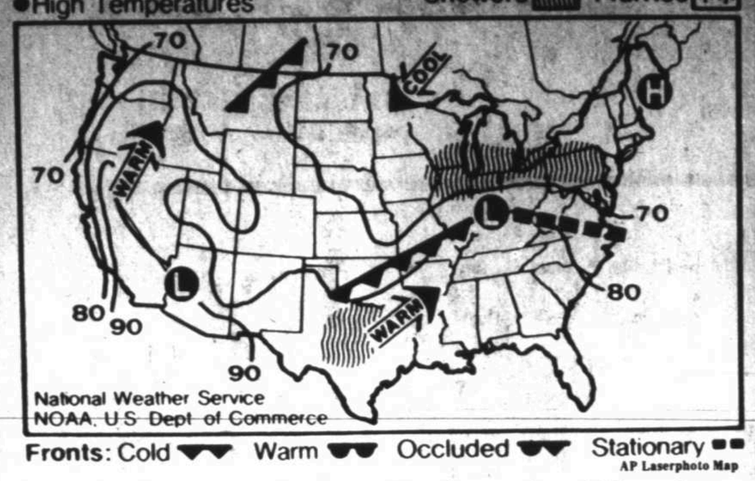

"SPEAKING OUT" appears each Sunday on the Viewpoint Page, opposite the Editorial Page and "FOCUS" is a regular feature of the Sunday Energy/Business Section. Look for both in Sunday's edition of Shaking hands with Andrews Chamber member Gerald McCaskill after getting off a private plane, Gov. Bill Clements carries his coat and tie to prepare for his talk before 500-plus Andrews area residents.

Clements drills into Texas prison system

State Legislature's passing of a "tough" anti-crime package and the state's rapid growth in population.

Noting that Texas' growth in the last decade has been "spectacular," it also has meant that "a certain number of criminal elements have come into the state. We've passed tough anti-crime laws, we've created more courts and juries are getting tougher."

SOLVING THE OVERCROWDING problems won't be accomplished quickly, Clements warned. "It's not just a question of building more and more maximum security prisons. We need more expanded probation, more halfway houses, more work units and more moderate types of security."

Noting that some of the inmates are sleeping in tents at the prisons, Clements added, "If tents are good enough for our servicemen, they are good enough for those prisoners."

He contended that the Texas Department of Corrections has become a political football and it is one department in which there is "no place for political demagoguery."

Questioned about the upcoming general election and his opponent, Democrat Mark White who now holds the [illegible] state attorney general, Clements said he will talk of the issues and his record as governor for the past 3½ years. However, the governor said, he also will speak of the "competency of the attorney general's office and the way it's been run and the inadequacies of his (White's) responses to the prison system problems."

He denied that a plan to get drunk drivers off the highways had been finalized, saying that a task force was studying the issue of drunk drivers as part of the anti-crime legislation that will be submitted to the 1983 session of the State Legislature.

While unveiling the plaque denoting Andrews record oil production which marked it as the third county in the state to achieve the two billion mark, Clements recalled his beginnings in the oil industry. Founder of Sedco, Inc., he remembered back in 1947 when he had 16 rigs operating in the Permian Basin, which employed several workers from Andrews.

"I FEEL VERY much a part of this," he said.

The plaque — a black slate with silver words and frame — reported the two billionth barrel came on Aug. 21, 1981, which was 16 years and 96 days after the first billionth barrel. "Almost [illegible] oil and gas production which marked it as the third county in the state to achieve the two billion mark, Clements recalled his beginnings in the oil industry. Founder of Sedco, Inc., he remembered back in 1947 when he had 16 rigs operating in the Permian Basin, which employed several workers from Andrews.

[illegible] one billion dollars of petroleum products were sold from beneath Andrews land in 1981 and fueled a fast-paced economic upturn in the community."

Andrews is the third county in Texas to have achieved such status; the other two are Ector and Gregg.

Pointing to the importance of the petroleum industry on the state's economy, Clements said that oil and gas revenues account for 28 percent of all the state taxes. However, a recent decline in oil and gas production is causing concern because it also means a loss of revenues.

Although the occasion was cited strictly as one of the governor's regular duties, Clements injected campaign rhetoric into his speech.

He cited what he called a list of accomplishments before adding, "This is only the beginning; there is much yet to be done. My philosophy is unchanged. I believe that the government which is closest to the people is the best government, and I further believe that the government which governs least governs best."

Looking at the wiretapping law that was instituted this year, Clements said it was responsible for leading to the arrest of three men in Amarillo on charges of aggravated delivery of drugs.

"I DON'T WANT these drug pushers in Texas; I don't want them peddling their junk here," he told the applauding audience.

Other accomplishments of his first term included requiring triplicate prescription forms, establishing the Texas 2000 Commission to set goals for the rest of the decade, reducing the number of state employees by more than 2,000, instituting competency tests for public school teachers, increasing funds for public education and for teachers' salaries and allowing oral confessions in criminal trials.

Clements had both praise and criticism for President Reagan's new federalism concept. While he is convinced that "Texas can deliver higher quality services at lower cost than the federal government," Clements added that he won't tolerate Congress' plan to subsidize mismanagement and wasteful spending in other states. "We in Texas don't want a 'foreign aid' program from Michigan, Pennsylvania or New York."

In concluding, Clements said, "Texas is a land to grow in, a land to raise our children in. It's a land where we can realize our aspirations, meet our goals and fulfill our dreams."

Severe weather warnings left little precipitation in area

The warnings ranged from flash flood to severe thunderstorm to tornado warning, but the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport recorded only 0.05 of an inch of rain Friday afternoon.

However, the Permian Basin area may be in for more of the same this weekend as the NWS is calling for chances of thunderstorms ranging from 30 to 40 percent.

Starting at 3:50 p.m. Friday, the NWS received a call from the Department of Public Safety that a funnel cloud had been sighted north-northwest of Midland. Another call from the DPS at 4:15 p.m. reported a tornado had touched down about three miles northwest of County Road 60-West and Texas 158.

At 4:30 p.m. the DPS reported moderate to heavy hail five miles south of Interstate 20 at FM 1788. Then came a call at 5:50 p.m. that two inches of marble-sized hail had fallen five miles south of Odessa.

The last call to the NWS reported golfball-sized hail at Monahans at 8:05 p.m.

The weatherman said most of West Texas was put under a tornado watch until 11 p.m.

Skies today should be partly cloudy with a 30 percent chance of thunderstorms hovering in the forecast. High should be in the middle 80s with the winds blowing easterly to southeasterly at 10 to 15 mph.

Chance for thunderstorms tonight should increase to 40 percent while the mercury drops to near 60.

Sunday's forecast is similar to today's with the mercury reaching into the middle 80s.

High on Friday was 90 degrees, still below the record 105 set in 1953. Overnight low was 61, a sizzler compared to the record low of 48 set in 1931.

Rainfall for the month edged up to 1.64 inches while the total for the year increased to 3.31 inches.

Jury awards Midland building contractor $25,000

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Midland building contractor Clyde C. White, who claimed that Citizens Savings & Loan Association had refused to pay him a $25,000 fee for supervising construction and repair of former Leo Proctor homes which the association had purchased through a federal bankruptcy court, won a $25,000 judgment in a recent 238th State District Court jury trial.

White alleged that the association declined to honor his final bill, which covered the Aug. 1, 1979-June 11, 1981, period and which he submitted to the association on June 11.

"...(Citizens Savings) president (then, Ray Moudy)...acknowledged that the debt was owed, but further stated that it (Citizens Savings) would not pay...." White had asserted in his petition. White also accused Moudy of fraud by engineering a "scheme" by which White would provide the services, but Citizens Savings would "not...pay for them." For that aspect, White had asked the jury to award him "at least" an additional $50,000 in punitive damages. But the jury found no fraud.

In response to White's claims, Citizens Savings said that it did promptly pay itemized invoices submitted by White as the work on the houses progressed.

"Mr. White's invoices were timely paid, as they were submitted during the progress of the work," defendant Citizens Savings maintained in a pretrial interrogatory prepared by defense attorney Harper Estes.

"The document attached to Mr. White's petition, purporting to be an invoice, gives no [illegible] performed, the date the work was performed or charges for each item of work." Citizens Savings contended that White was "fairly compensated by prompt payment of each invoice submitted during the time the work was performed."

A copy of White's invoice, which was made a part of the court record, simply noted: "Supervision to complete work on homes bought by Citizens Savings from bankruptcy) court."

"Citizens Savings & Loan Association does not know what work Mr. White did between 1979 and 1981," the defendant's court records reflect, "but Mr. White should be aware of the work he did, if any."

In his oral deposition taken last Jan. 27, White, who has been in the construction business in Midland since the mid-1950s, admitted that the $25,000 bill represented his profit on the Proctor projects. "...That's profits and for whatever my time's worth." White said the fee was for "strictly supervision,...Whenever I say supervision,...it's a fixed fee for taking care of the job."

White said no written contract on the project was ever made; he said that he and Moudy were "on real good relationships."

Court records indicated that Citizens Savings had sold the houses prior to White's billing for his $25,000 fee.

Citizens Savings initially purchased the houses in the late 1970s after Proctor, a building contractor, and his ex-wife Juanita, who is White's daughter, had filed for bankruptcy.

White's attorney in the case, which was tried in Judge Vann Culp's court, was Jim Boldrick, who won $7,500 in attorney's fees. The jury was unanimous in its verdict.

Oil company executive dies accidentally during dialysis

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — An oil company executive suffered "death by error" because a lethal dose of air was pumped into his veins by mistake during a routine dialysis treatment at Medical Center Hospital, a medical examiner has ruled.

Bexar County Medical Examiner Dr. Vincent DiMaio said he examined the hospital records of Don Van Trease, 41, after his body had been embalmed and sent home to Fort Worth.

Van Trease, general manager of the Pioneer Oil Co., suffered from a heart condition and had a transplanted kidney. He died Monday at the hospital formerly known as Bexar County Hospital.

A hospital death certificate listed "cardiac pulmonary arrest" as cause of death, but DiMaio said that his official verdict was that Van Trease suffered renal (kidney) failure, with "death due to air embolus during dialysis by accident."

A licensed vocational nurse who was working in the renal dialysis unit Monday resigned the same night and a hospital spokesman said the circumstances of the incident were being investigated, The San Antonio Light reported Friday.

Van Trease had suffered a heart attack during a business trip to San Antonio on May I and was admitted to Medical Center Hospital.

The spokesman said he was treated for the heart condition and also received regular blood cleansing treatments for his kidney problem in the center's hemodialysis unit.

By Monday, his heart condition improved, Van Trease was planning to be released the next day for transfer by ambulance to a Fort Worth hospital, relatives reported. But at 9:25 p.m., he died.

His wife, Jean, said a hospital physician told her by telephone the death was due to "an error in dialysis" which "shouldn't have happened."

Funeral services for Van Trease were conducted Thursday at the Birchman Avenue Baptist Church in Fort Worth. He is survived by his wife and three daughters.

DiMaio said his office received a report Tuesday of "a suspected air embolus" in Van Trease's death, although the hospital death certificate listed cause of death as cardiac pulmonary arrest.

Suit alleges MoPac negligence

Odessan William Kit Bowhay, who claims he was severely injured when his sports car was struck by a Missouri Pacific Railroad train on the night of Jan. 6, 1981, has filed a $1.5 million negligence suit in federal court in Midland against MoPac.

Bowhay alleges that the railroad was at fault by not providing a flagman to warn motorists of the approaching train at MoPac's South Pool Road spur crossing in Odessa, by not providing "proper flares" to warn motorists of the crossing train and for "failing to keep a proper outlook for plaintiff's safety."

Bowhay says he suffered "severe and permanent injuries to his head and general bodily injuries" and that his earning capacity has been "totally and permanently destroyed."

He was driving a 1973 MG-B sports car at time of the mishap.

Representing Bowhay in the case are Odessa lawyers Warren Heagy and Walter Wilson.

Southwest to add three flights to Dallas extraordinary expense, (from) which you don't realize the compensating revenues until further down the line."

In a recent meeting with stockholders, Kelleher described the air carrier's First Quarter 1982 financial results as "a financial rose blooming in a desert wasteland."

In fact, so far, Southwest and Frontier Airlines are the only two airlines worldwide to have announced operating profits and net earnings in the first quarter of 1982, he added.

The outlook for the next three months is equally good, he said, as the second quarter is traditionally better for air carriers because school is out and vacation flights increase. Revenues from the four cities recently added to the flight schedule also will begin to increase.

Unlike the problems that plagued Braniff Airlines, Southwest is in good shape with regard to its long-term debts for several reasons, Kelleher said.

Just this week, the company sold $35 million in subordinated, convertible debentures, at 10 percent interest, as a means of raising capital to make delivery payments on the three aircraft that will arrive in the next 30 days.

The debentures sold out in one day, Kelleher noted. "We're pleased with the reception of the financial community to it," he said.

In 1978, the airline started looking at its debts and financing and took measures to place itself in a better position. In the next few years, the company twice sold additional shares of its stock and $70 million worth of long-term equipment trust certificates.

Recently, as a supplemental measure, Southwest also acquired a two-year credit line at a European bank which offers lower rates than domestic banks.

"We put ourselves in a very strong financial position," said Kelleher. "My belief is it's easier to keep the ox out of the ditch than it is to lift him out once he gets in."

As of Thursday, Kelleher had not yet heard what the Federal Aviation Administration was planning to do about distributing the landing slots originally held by Braniff.

Normally, slots are distributed by a lottery system at a bi-monthly meeting in Washington, D.C., Kelleher said.

Philippine airplane hijacker seized

CEBU, Philippines (AP) — Troopers and airline officials on Friday overpowered a hijacker who had seized a Philippine Airlines plane with 114 people aboard. The hijacker and one of his captors were slightly injured.

Juan Cleano, 57, commandeered the plane Thursday night on a 30-minute flight from nearby Bacolod to this port city 350 miles south of Manila. Cleano, armed with a hand grenade and demanding money and press freedom in the Philippines, held the BAC-111 jetliner for eight hours outside Cebu, the country's second-largest city.

Troopers and airline officials overpowered the hijacker in a scuffle in the plane's kitchen and one trooper hit Cleano in the head with a gun, airlines spokesman Enrique Santos said.

No injuries were reported among the plane's 109 passengers and five crewmen. Just before the scuffle broke out, 40 passengers were able to jump out of the plane. Earlier, the hijacker released 31 other passengers, mostly women and children.

Museum has $1 billion to spend

MALIBU, Calif. (AP) — The J. Paul Getty Museum has a problem that most other art museums would love to have — how to use best the $1 billion endowment it received from the estate of the late oil financier. What its trustees decide could have a profound effect on the international art scene.

Getty, who died in 1976 without ever seeing the museum, turned it into the richest in the nation and probably the world with a bequest of 4 million shares of Getty Oil Co. stock and other securities worth well over $1 billion.

The windfall has stirred concern in the art world because it immediately put the Getty ahead of any other museum in the country in terms of money it must — not just can — spend.

Federal tax laws require that the Getty distribute 4.5 percent of the bequest in three out of every four years. That means at least $50 million and probably more will be spent almost every year. By contrast, New York's much larger Metropolitan Museum of Art operates on about $27 million annually.

"They have a tremendous ability to dominate the market," said Los Angeles gallery owner Michael Schwartz. "With the kind of funds they have, there really isn't much competition. If they decide to go after a particular piece, there's really nothing to stop them from getting it and if they were to concentrate on any particular area, they could drastically affect the marketplace."

GETTY WAS primarily interested in classical antiquities, French decorative arts and Baroque and Renaissance paintings. And while his interests will continue to be reflected, Getty Museum President Harold Williams says funds will be directed into other areas.

"We will be expanding the collection and probably expanding the scope of the collection beyond what it is today. Second, we are now exploring various ways apart from building the museum (collection) where we can make a contribution to the field of the arts locally and nationally," said Williams, who was chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission before joining the museum.

"Third, a very substantial part of the endowment will be reinvested to maintain the value of the endowment so that we will be able over time to continue to fund the collection."

There are some indications that the Getty may share its wealth. The museum purchased Poussin's "Holy Family" jointly with the Norton Simon Museum in Pasadena last year and the two institutions will take turns displaying it. Schwartz and others say more collaborative efforts are in the works, although Williams declined to confirm this.

"We've all been aware of the Getty's situation for some years," said John Ross of the Metropolitan in New York. "And I don't know what (comment) we could add."

Philippe de Montebello, the Met's director, told the Los Angeles Times earlier this year, "I think they (the Getty) will be very prudent and not want to be the ones running up the art market, but obviously if they want something bad enough they have the resources to buy it."

IAN KENNEDY, a spokesman in the New York office of Christie's, the art auction house, said he doubted if the Getty would flex its new financial muscles publicly.

"I think it will affect prices, but only for the best things because that's all they'll be buying," Kennedy swid. "I don't know what effect it will have on the auction market. Getty won't want to be seen buying publicly, and of course, they're very aware that if they pour money into the market, it will push up prices and be self-defeating."

If the Getty does begin to acquire new works in any volume, it will probably need another facility for storage and display because space at its Malibu site is limited.

Built at a cost of about $17 million near Getty's ranch house on a bluff overlooking the Pacific, the museum is a stunning recreation of the classical Villa del Papiri, a Roman villa found at Herculaneum.

About 2.5 million people have toured the museum since its 1974 opening. Parking is limited but admission is free, and the precise Getty once figured its operating expenses were costing him about $3, after-tax, per visitor.

Some of the new funds may go for expanded fellowships. The Getty already has interns from several colleges and has sent questionnaires to about 80 southern California colleges inquiring about their fine arts programs and facilities. The staff is expanding, with Getty director Stephen Garrett estimating that another 20 people will be hired this year for a total of 130 employees.

THE GETTY may also expand into new areas technologically. The museum has acquired a Massachusetts archival company called RILA which puts out abstracts of art and architectural publications.

Labor board splurges on fancy furnishings

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional investigators say that despite a White House ban on fancy furnishings, the Federal Labor Relations Authority spent $266,350 to outfit its offices while it was firing employees to cut costs.

Robert M. Gilroy of the General Accounting Office, Congress' investigating arm, said Thursday that the improper spending included $159,000 in furnishings for the agency's top three members, $23,000 for the general counsel and about $74,000 for other offices.

About $10,000 worth of furniture — including a $2,492 patio set that could not be used because the agency later found out it was not allowed to use the patio — was in storage, according to Gilroy.

The furniture, carpets and wallpaper were purchased in 1981 by the relatively new three-member board established to resolve labor disputes involving federal workers.

The furniture included two "Barcelona chairs" for authority chairman Ronald Haughton, at $1,712 each; two $2,047 elm-burl credenzas with a matching $3,785 conference table for Haughton; a $1,792 mahogany office table for member Henry Frazier; and $7,453 in "leaves of grass" wallpaper for the office of member Leon Applewhaite.

Sen. John Danforth, chairman of the Senate Governmental Affairs subcommittee on federal expenditures, called the purchases "truly outrageous."

He told an oversight hearing at the agency's offices he would push for legislation requiring federal employees who violate purchasing procedures to pay for such items out of their own pockets.

"You cannot remember who pays the bills around here and then go out and spend $7,400 on wallpaper," Danforth said.

Gilroy testified that thousands of dollars worth of "serviceable" furniture was either in storage or let go as surplus at the time of the purchases. A White House ban on extravagance had been in effect for months, he said.

Haughton told the subcommittee that the authority now requires all purchases of more than $1,000 to be cleared by him. He said he was unaware of the 1981 order until the furniture was delivered. He said he was told by his staff that it could not be returned.

Blacks who desegregated Arkansas school reunite

NEW YORK (AP) — The first black students to desegregate an Arkansas high school did not realize the danger they were in in the fall of 1957, one of them says now.

Seven of the "Little Rock Nine," the first black students at Little Rock's Central High School, were reunited Thursday at New York's Hilton Hotel, 25 years and 1,300 miles from the ugly fall in Arkansas when militiamen barred their way and whites spit at them and yelled abuses.

"Good memories is the fact that we all made it through it alive," said Carlotta Walls LaNier. "Looking back now, well, we knew it was dangerous, but not as dangerous as we know now."

The reunion, organized by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People Legal Defense & Educational Fund, was a chance to laugh and talk, but it was also a chance to recall the ugliness.

"I had high hopes and aspirations. I thought we would just go in and be accepted...," recalled Thelma Jean Mothershead Wair. "Bad? No, it was — ugly is a better word. It was an ugly time."

For three weeks in 1957, National Guardsmen acting under orders from Gov. Orval Faubus blocked the black youths from entering the high school. When the guardsmen were called off, white crowds surged forward, hurling abuse at the youngsters.

Finally, President Dwight D. Eisenhower ordered an end to the obstruction, and sent the U.S. Army's 101st Airborne Division to Little Rock to make sure that Central desegregated peacefully.

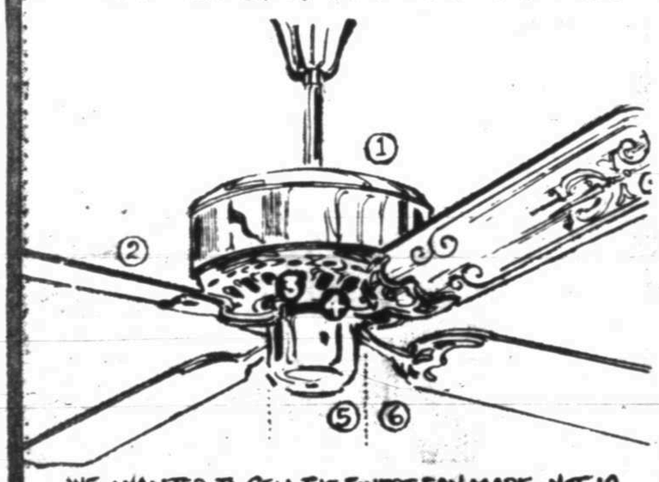

All seven have become successful. Among them are a real estate broker, a psychologist, a guidance counselor and business managers.

"We were taught to excel and succeed," said Terrence D. Roberts, now director of mental health and social services at a hospital in Deer Park, Calif.

Two of the Nine — Melba Patillo Beals and Elizabeth Eckford — did not attend.

Amazing Diet Breakthrough:
CUT CALORIES
BUT NOT CONSUMPTION

At last, medical science has discovered a way to lose weight without reducing caloric intake. No more strict regimentation, fad diets, or gnawing hunger pains! Eat regular, nutritious, well-balanced meals and still lose weight.

Eleven years of scientific research

A noted Biochemist directed twenty-five other scientists in an eleven-year research study that discovered an incredibly effective diet aid.

The scientific team noted that when laboratory animals were fed uncooked kidney beans, undigested starch was found in their digestive systems. Evidence suggested that some substance in the raw beans prevented the digestion of starch. After years of painstaking research, the scientists isolated the substance and named it Special Legume Protein Concentrate (SLPC).

Caloric absorption blocked

SLPC performs it's magic by prohibiting the carbohydrate-digesting enzyme, alpha-amylase, from digesting carbohydrates in the digestive tract. When SLPC is ingested prior to eating a meal containing starchy foods such as potatoes, rice, breads and pasta the SLPC inhibits the alpha-amylase from working. Undigested starch passes through the digestive tract and is eliminated--calories and all.

Convienient tablet formulation

Until now, SLPC has been restricted to use by physicians. But because SLPC is not a drug and is harmless when taken in combination with a variety of healthy foods, Nutrion Corporation has made this miraculous dietary breakthrough available to the public in tablet form, STARCH-LITE.

One STARCH-LITE tablet, taken at the beginning of each meal or snack, inhibits the ingestion of 400 starch calories--the amount of starch found in four baked potatoes, four slices of bread, two cups of rice, or two cups of pasta. While it is unlikely to consume such quantities of any one food in one meal, many fruits and vegetables also contain large amounts of starch, and thus each STARCH-LITE tablet is formulated to block the average starch content of one meal.

Food	Total calories	Starch calories blocked by STARCH-LITE	Calories remaining
Bread, one slice	110	100	10
Rice, 1 cup cooked	200	180	20
Macaroni, 1 cup cooked	210	168	42
Corn, 1 cup	174	160	14
Potato, 1 medium baked	120	100	20
Banana	120	104	16

The STARCH-LITE difference

Unlike most starch blockers on the market, STARCH-LITE is more than just granulated beans. The STARCH-LITE formulation includes a highly concentrated portion of the effective SLPC ingredient.

In addition to inhibiting carbohydrate absorption, STARCH-LITE tablets have been formulated with a bulking agent which serves as an appetite suppressant. In the stomach, each STARCH-LITE tablet expands to fifty times it's original size, creating a full, satisfied feeling which naturally reduces your desire for food.

Safe and stable weight loss

One STARCH-LITE tablet taken with every meal results in pound after pound of excessive weight loss. You'll realize losses of five to ten pounds almost immediately. But most importantly, your weight will come off and stay off. With the continued use of STARCH-LITE, you'll never again have to suffer the frustrations of dieting.

A time to begin

Antithesis to Southern belles obsessed with getting ERA passed

By GRACE-MARIE ARNETT
Copley News Service

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — Frantic last-minute searches are not that unusual on Christmas Eve. But there was something very different about Mary Ann Fowler's quest in rural southwest Virginia last Christmas Eve.

Fowler, 38, was not searching for last-minute gifts as she drove her rusting brown Ford from one phone booth to another until she finally found what she was looking for outside a small country store.

Inside the booth was a Craig County, Va., directory, a book she hoped would be the latest cog in the political machinery designed to move the Equal Rights Amendment one crucial step closer to ratification.

With the assistance of the store owner, Fowler took that directory, completing her collection and giving her the tools she and her mother would need on Christmas Day to compile a badly needed voter survey list for the ERA campaign.

After a turbulent decade in which she has been arrested, dragged down the Capitol steps, stranded in blizzards, fired from her job, castigated, discouraged, purged and disappointed, Fowler is not the type to be deterred easily.

RATHER, SHE is the type of woman who, although she is braced for possible defeat in the current round of the ERA war, already is planning for the next battle.

Beyond Virginia, her name is little known. Virginia was considered the key in getting the needed three more states to ratify ERA by June 30. The state Senate came within one vote of approval, but the Legislature adjourned in March without ratifying the amendment.

Fowler's life story since the early '70's parallels the evolution of the women's movement. From a soft-spoken Southerner working as a secretary on a university campus who "expected to get married and have babies," Fowler evolved into a tough political fighter who gained the respect, if not the votes, of legislators who now seek her advice on political strategy.

Fowler has lived on a shoestring since she decided to devote full time to ERA ratification in 1976. She works as a telephone switchboard operator, a part-time typist and does other odd jobs to pay the rent.

A decade ago, Fowler said she never would have believed there would be a controversy over giving equal rights to women.

The concept never crossed her mind when she was in college, she said. She went to the University of Tennessee where she belonged to Angel Flight or "The sweethearts of the Air Force ROTC," and to Kappa Delta sorority.

THE FIRST clue she wouldn't fit into the Southern belle mold came when two black women were given rooms on her college dormitory floor. The effort at desegration in 1966 caused bitterness and anger. Two white women refused to share a suite — and a bathroom — with them and moved out. Fowler was one of the few to befriend the blacks.

Fowler dropped out of her sorority, quit Angel Flight as a protest to the Vietnam war, and decided to get involved in politics "in an idealistic effort to change the system," she said.

Fowler ran for the Democratic committee in Alexandria, a Washington suburb, and was elected, she says now, because some of the men thought her red mini-skirt was "cute."

Congress approved the Equal Rights Amendment in 1972, and Fowler urged her local Democratic party to take a stand. She was in Richmond for the first hearing on the ERA.

"All of the arguments we had presented were sound and reasonable, dealing with equality and democracy," she said. "I was shocked when the vote was 13 to 2 against us."

"I felt Virginia was a tough state, but that enough other states would ratify to get it approved," Fowler said. "By 1975, I realized the amendment was in serious trouble. We were going to have to work very hard in Virginia to get it approved."

SHE ORGANIZED Virginians for the Equal Rights Amendment designed to defeat key legislators Fowler felt were thwarting ratification.

"That's when I found out that nearly everthing we needed for electioneering required either money or establishment power," she said. "We had neither, so we cheated some, we worked very hard, and sometimes we became thieves," as with the Craig County phone book.

The key legislator she had targeted for defeat in 1975 was State Rep. Jim Thomson, a Democrat from Alexandria, but her initial effort to oust him failed.

"He patted me on the head that election night and said, 'Mary Ann, every year you run a little bit faster, and I run a little bit slower. One of these days, you're going to catch me.'"

The electioneering had another cost for Fowler. Her boss at American University objected to her activism. "He called us 'castrating women,'" Fowler said. After several battles with him, Fowler prepared to file a grievance, but was fired 24 hours later after eight years with the university.

Instead of looking for another job, Fowler decided to devote full time to ERA. Before the ratification deadline was extended in 1978, supporters felt time was running out.

IN 1977, ERA supporters organized a statewide caravan to get support for their cause and that year defeated Thomson by big margins, carrying 27 of his 31 precincts for his opponent.

"I reminded him he said he knew we'd catch him," Fowler said. "After we beat him, I told him, 'I'm sorry that this year is that year and that tonight is that night, but you left us no choice.'"

Someone's head had to roll for the defeat of the powerful Thomson, and the Alexandria Democratic party decided it should be Fowler's. She was stripped of her office as local party treasurer and purged from the party leadership.

As her commitment to the cause grew, Fowler said she became less tolerant of men trying to force her into old molds. One was her fiance, who she said didn't accept her ideas. The engagement was broken.

Purged from the Democratic party office, fired from her job and with her wedding canceled, Fowler set her course even firmer on ratification.

"We told legislators to use Thomson as an example. There was going to be a price to pay if ERA didn't pass."

FOWLER GAINED brief national attention in 1978 when she was arrested on the stops of the Virignia Capitol following a skirmish with police. She went to court on Susan B. Anthony's birthday, and charges eventually were dropped. But by this time, Fowler says even some fellow ERA supporters were becoming hostile to her.

"They opposed political involvement in the beginning, telling us we could catch more flies with honey than with vinegar.

"I told them we'd tried being sweet for five years, and it got us nowhere. Our only choice was to defeat our opponents at the polls and build ourselves into a third force in Virginia politics."

Police seek Daniel the Dragon-napper

MOSCOW, Idaho (AP) — Local police fear a missing 300-pound metallic "creature" with lime-green skin and red eyes may have met with foul play.

An all-points bulletin issued alerted authorities in Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana to be on the lookout for Daniel the Dragon, missing since last weekend.

The police are scouring the area for the 3-foot-tall, 14-foot-long dragon, valued at $2,000, who has a trap door in his belly, a spark plug in his mouth and a push button between his ears. He has red lights for eyes and used to belch fire — but his flame thrower had been removed.

Daniel was owned by Mark Soloman of Idaho Forge and Fabrication. The dragon stood beside the highway attracting attention and an occasional customer.

"A lot of people don't understand the seriousness of this crime," said police Sgt. Sheldon Russell. "Some people have the Loch Ness monster, some people have the Abominable Snowman. But in Moscow here we have Daniel the Dragon and Daniel is now missing."

The dragon had been secured to a stake with a 6-foot-long chain, but someone pulled it up, police said.

Astronauts: Space is freeway to future

By PAUL RECER

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — America's space shuttle will become "a freeway into the future" but much of the cargo it carries will be the machines of national defense, the crew for the next flight of the spaceship Columbia said at a news conference Friday.

Astronauts Thomas K. Mattingly II and Henry W. Hartsfield Jr. said the military uses of the space shuttle are expected in the future as space becomes "another arena" for routine human activity.

Mattingly and Hartsfield, the crew for the fourth flight of Columbia, will become the first National Aeronautics and Space Administration astronauts to operate a Department of Defense payload in orbit.

They will not be the last, spacemen indicated.

"It's the proper thing to do," said Hartsfield, a retired Air Force lieutenant colonel. "The shuttle is a national asset. The military can derive a great benefit from it."

He added that he would hate to see space "become a battlefield" but "the national defense has its place there."

The astronauts declined to discuss the military hardware that will be carried with them into space aboard Columbia, but from other sources, including congressional testimony, the payload has been identified as a super cooled infrared telescope that will test methods of detecting enemy missiles and aircraft from space.

Space already is being used by the military with satellites for surveillance, communication and navigation. Manifest for future flights of Columbia and three other space shuttle orbiters now being built show that more than 40 percent of the cargo will be military devices.

Mattingly, a U.S. Navy captain, said space flight in the future will become very commonplace and just another arena for mankind's activity, including military.

"It seems to me that the Russians have every intention of using space to the fullest — all of the possible applications," said Mattingly, the commander of the next space flight.

Mattingly and Hartsfield are scheduled to be launched aboard Columbia from the Kennedy Space Center in Florida on June 27 for a seven-day mission. They will land the reusable spacecraft at Edwards Air Force Base in California on July 4.

Sailor dies

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — A 23-year-old sailor, injured in a San Juan bar a week ago, died early Friday at the Veterans Administration hospital in Puerto Rico, the U.S. Navy said.

Fireman Timothy Jones of Amarillo, Texas, suffered a head injury May 14 at a watefront nightclub while on shore leave from the USS Guadalcanal, according Lt. Drew Malcomb, a Navy spokesman.

Malcomb said Jones was with a group of shipmates.

Wrong man sent to mental hospital

PEMBROKE PINES, Fla. (AP) — A drifter who was arrested for murder and spent nearly four years in a ward for the criminally insane probably isn't the same Johnny Johnson police were looking for in the murder of his girlfriend, authorities say.

"This is probably the most shocking thing I've ever run into," public defender Don Tenbrook said about the man he was appointed to represent, 31-year-old Johhny Johnson.

"It boggles the mind to think that everyone, down the line, has just assumed this was their man," Tenbrook said.

Tenbrook filed a motion in Broward Circuit Court on Thursday to release his client.

Johnson didn't say much when police officers from Dundee stopped him 35 miles south of Orlando on Sept. 29, 1978. He was arrested for allegedly gunning down his girlfriend in a Pompano Beach bar.

He was declared incompetent to stand trial and was sent to the state hospital in Chattahoochee. The investigation into his case ceased.

In July 1981, Johnson was found still incompetent to stand trial, but was moved to the South Florida State Hospital in Pembroke Pines and put in the psychiatric ward.

In February, he was declared competent to stand trial and Tenbrook was assigned to represent him.

Prosecutors now concede the Johnny Johnson that Polk County police arrested probably is not the same Johnny Johnson they were looking for, a man who was indicted for first-degree murder in Broward County in July 1978.

Johnson the drifter is 5-foot-8-inches tall. The other Johnson stands 5-foot-3. Their fingerprints are not the same. Drifter Johnson has only a shoplifting record; the other has a half-dozen felony charges and spent time in state prisons for burglary, authorities say.

Drifter Johnson was arrested when police fed his name into a computer and it produced a "hit." A Johnny Johnson from Pompano Beach had been indicted for shooting his girlfriend, Julette Spicy, in a bar. Somehow, the felon's information got onto the drifter's booking records.

"I concede we may have the wrong man," said Assistant State Attorney Kelly Hancock, who presented the murder case to the grand jury.

"If we did, we should have found out long ago," Hancock said. "But if a defendant won't talk to the lawyers who are supposed to help him, what can you do?"

His old court-appointed lawyer, H. Dohn Williams, recalled that in their meetings, Johnson "stared up where the walls and ceilings meet and wouldn't say one word. If there was ever anyone incompetent to stand trial, this was the guy."

His new lawyer says drifter Johnson wasn't soured about the years under medication and in custody.

"He's not bitter or vindictive," Tenbrook said. "He wants to go back to south Florida for treatment — but with the general population."

Refinery wreckage investigated

COTTON VALLEY, La. (AP) — A team of experts began poking through twisted steel wreckage at a refinery Friday, trying to determine the cause and assess the cost of a fire that had storage tanks exploding "like a pack of firecrackers."

Four men were injured — two seriously — and the 3,000 residents of this northwest Louisiana town were chased from their homes when the first of six tanks exploded Thursday afternoon.

Donna McFarland, a spokeswoman for refinery owners Kerr-McGee Corp., said on Friday that it probably would be several days before experts could put a dollar value on the loss. "Of course, it will be some time before we put that plant back in operation," she said.

Cotton Valley Mayor Alfred Jones speculated that a pipeline ruptured near a cracking unit, starting a fire that caused the explosions.

"It blew up a tank ... It scattered metal and ladders for about a quarter of a mile all around," Jones said. "You didn't have to tell those people to evacuate.

"When that stuff started coming down in their yards, they took off."

Ms. McFarland said there were about 50 people working at the refinery when the explosions started. 30 of them Kerr-McGee employees and the rest working for subcontractors.

Bryant Walker, 21, of Cullen, said he was working in a ditch not far from the refinery when he heard an initial blast.

"Everything was blowing up," he recounted. "Man, that place was going up like a pack of firecrackers."

He said he saw a man sprint across an open field in flames.

"I saw him when he was running across. His clothes were smoking," Bryant said. "Man, that dude was burning up."

He said another worker tackled the man, tore off his burning clothes and placed him in a nearby pond of water.

Howard Seamster, 41, was in stable condition at the Louisiana State University Medical Center at Shreveport Friday, and Jimmy Thomas, 47, was in critical-to-serious condition, said Dr. Edwin Deitch, director of the burn unit at the center.

A Kerr-McGee spokesman identified both men as painters for a sub-contractor at the plant.

Two others were treated for less serious injuries and released from Springhill Medical Center, a spokesman there said.

Jones, who was either at the scene or at his City Hall office throughout, said it could have been worse, had a handful of firefighters not refused to retreat.

"At about 2 o'clock this morning, it looked real serious. Fire got under about 10 tanks down there, and most of the firemen pulled out' — except one or two. A couple of them stayed in there and kept fighting," Jones said in a telephone interview.

"At about 3:30, the rest of them came back in and started after it again. At about 4 o'clock, they started getting it under control. They got it under control at about 5 o'clock, and it looks real good now."

Woman dies in bathtub

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A 4-year-old girl lived for several days on jelly sandwiches, telling visitors that her mother was asleep although the woman lay dead in a bathtub, authorities said.

An autopsy disclosed Friday that 25-year-old Ceceilia McCoy, who was eight months pregnant, died of natural causes. Police had earlier feared she had been murdered.

"There is nothing out of the ordinary to make us think otherwise," Detective Joseph Burgoon said Friday. "There will be no charges filed in the case."

Police found the body of Ms. McCoy in the bathtub of her apartment Thursday night. Officers said the only visible injury was a minor bump on her head that could have resulted from a fall.

Tonda, the woman's 4-year-old daughter, was reported in good condition and playing with her grandmother Friday.

Police had earlier booked Edward Stone, 27, who said he was Tonda's father, on suspicion of murder in the case. He was released after the autopsy without being formally charged.

U.S. sends aerial tankers to NATO

By JAMES GERSTENZANG

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is sending aerial tankers to NATO to allow the British to withdraw aircraft from the alliance and use the equipment in the Falkland Islands conflict with Argentina, an administration source said Friday.

Pentagon officials said the U.S. Air Force normally maintains a number of KC-135 aerial tankers at bases in Britain, as it does in other parts of the world, and that the aircraft in Britain are available for use in helping the British as needed.

President Reagan was told during his routine national security briefing Friday morning about British raids on Argentine positions on the disputed South Atlantic islands, said spokesman Larry Speakes. He declined to characterize the president's reaction.

In London, British Defense Minister John Nott said British forces landed on the Falkland Islands Friday, seeking to regain the territory seized by Argentina on April 2, and destroyed 16 Argentine aircraft. He said Argentina damaged five British ships, two of them severely, and downed two British helicopters.

He said in a prepared statement that the attack was continuing, and that the British ships came under "heavy attack." An earlier British announcement said 21 men were lost when another helicopter crashed at sea as the craft shuttled troops between British ships.

Intelligence sources here said high winds were believed responsible for the helicopter crash. These sources, who declined to be identified, said winds in the area were ranging from 30 to 40 knots and that U.S. helicopter specialists considered such winds dangerous for such helicopter operations.

Speakes, the chief deputy White House press secretary, said that "every step, every action of the president and the United States government shall be taken with one thought in mind: a peaceful solution. We stand ready to assist in any way we can."

"Let me emphasize there will be no involvement whatsoever of U.S. military personnel in the conflict in the South Atlantic," he said. But, reciting a lengthy statement that refrained from any criticism of the British in the wake of escalating fighting, he said, "We will meet our commitments to Great Britain."

Speakes, asked specifically about the possible use of U.S. military forces outside of the South Atlantic, said, "I would not lead you to believe there are any U.S. personnel involved directly."

He stressed the word "directly" and also stressed that his statement applied to the South Atlantic, leading to speculation that U.S. personnel could be used in another capacity. He offered no details when pressed.

Any requests for assistance "will be carefully evaluated on a case-by-case basis," Speakes said, refusing to outline what commitments the United States has made to Britain.

When asked why he would not discuss this, he said, "We prefer not to give a reason." Nor would he say whether the United States or Britain was paying for any aid if it were being given.

"What we are doing ... we judge to be in the best interests of peace," he said.

The White House spokesman said Reagan had not spoken recently with British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, Argentine President Leopold Galtieri or Javier Perez de Cuellar, the secretary general of the United Nations.

Speakes said he could not confirm the assignment of the U.S. aerial tankers to NATO. He also said the United States had no independent confirmation of the military action in the South Atlantic, beyond news reports and British and Argentine statements.

The administration source who disclosed the dispatch of the tankers, described Friday's action in the South Atlantic as "not the invasion. It's hit-and-run."

The source, who requested anonymity, also said the United States was providing satellite intelligence assistance to the British.

Reagan, who was not awakened earlier than usual to receive reports of the fighting, was briefed by William P. Clark, his national security adviser, at about 9 a.m. The president then attended a previously scheduled National Security Council meeting.

At the State Department, spokesman Dean Fischer said Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. conferred Friday with Sir Nicholas Henderson, the British ambassador. Argentine Ambassador Esteban I. Takacs also visited the department and met with Assistant Secretary of State Thomas Enders.

Fischer said Haig "stands ready at any time to be of assistance," but he declined to say whether the secretary was doing anything to assist in the negotiations.

The State Department spokesman also declined to comment on what, if any, help Britain had requested. "We are not going to be discussing any details of any British requests for assistance or whether or how we are responding," he said.

Ireland proposes new mandate for Perez de Cuellar

By OTTO C. DOELLING

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Ireland urged the Security Council on Friday to give Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar a new and strengthened mandate to revive his peace efforts in the Falklands conflict.

"Someone must shout stop before the present conflict becomes uncontrollable," Irish Ambassador Noel Dorr said.

He suggested that the peacekeeping body ask Perez de Cuellar "formally to renew his efforts — this time with the added strength which a formal mandate from this council would give him."

Japan, another member of the 15-nation council, told the meeting it supported such a proposal.

Well-placed council sources said they expected a resolution to be drafted along the lines of the Irish proposal.

DORR, WHO had requested the council meeting said, "The challenge to us here is to find a way of calling a halt to the present fighting and allowing negotiation to continue..."

Perez de Cuellar formally abandoned his mediation efforts Thursday night after failing to get Britain and Argentina to agree on interim peace terms. Britain launched a large-scale assault on the disputed South Atlantic islands Friday.

The opening debate on the stepped-up conflict lasted 2 hours and 46 minutes. The council will reconvene today at 3 p.m., when the foreign ministers of Argentina, Panama, Peru and Venezuela are expected to have arrived.

The secretary-general told the emergency council session earlier that, faced with the prospect of a destructive war over the Falkland Islands, "efforts must continue to find the means of avoiding this and restoring peace."

"There is no other course," he said as he reported to the council on the breakdown of his two-week-long peace initiative.

The secretary-general did not apportion blame for the breakdown, and said he believed a basis for agreement had been achieved during indirect peace talks here.

HOWEVER, HE said the final peace terms presented this week by Argentina and Britain "did not reflect the progress which had, in my view, been achieved in the previous exchanges and...the differences on...four points remained.

These concerned the role of the Falkland islanders' self-governing council during a proposed U.N. interim administration, the time-frame for ending follow-up negotiations on the future of the Falklands, the distance of withdrawal of forces and whether the South Georgia and South Sandwich Islands were part of the Falklands sovereignty dispute.

"I would reiterate my personal commitment to be of assistance in every way toward the lasting resolution of the problem," Perez de Cuellar told the council.

"The prospect which faces us is one of destruction, continuing conflict and, above all, the loss of many, many young lives. Efforts must continue to find the means of avoiding this and restoring peace," he declared.

Prior to the council meeting, the secretary-general told reporters, "I hope the Security Council will produce a real helpful resolution.".

Asked how he expected an ideologically and regionally divided council to succeed where he had failed, the secretary-general replied, "They are not going to negotiate. They are going to produce some ideas, in order to perhaps start a new negotiating process."

THE COUNCIL decided at closed-door consultations to hold a public meeting Friday afternoon after Argentina rejected a U.S. suggestion that the council meet in private with both Britain and Argentina present. Britain is a member of the council, Argentina is not.

U.S. Ambassador Jeane J. Kirkpatrick, on emerging from consultations, denied that the United States opposed a public debate of the conflict on the ground that it would be acrimonious.

"I had a question whether there might be more effective fact-finding in a preliminary meeting at which both parties would be present but (with) less formal procedure. But Argentina rejected it," she said.

Ireland and Panama pressed for council action after the indirect peace talks broke down. The council had been staying in the background so as not to interfere with the secretary-general's initiative.

Salvadoran assistance-agency director kidnapped

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The president of the Salvadoran Green Cross, his nephew and a servant were kidnapped from their home in a late night raid by armed men, the relief agency and relatives reported Friday.

The abduction of the three, at midnight Thursday, came seven weeks after a paramedic for the Red Cross-like agency was shot and killed by unidentified gunmen.

The missing Green Cross president, 27-year-old Juan Francisco Zamora, had held the post for 18 months. "The Green Cross was everything to him," said Zamora's sister, Leticia Zamora.

Neighbors said the kidnappers arrived in an "armored Cherokee Chief station wagon," a vehicle people in El Salvador identify with rightist death squads accused of killing and torturing non-combatants suspected of aiding leftists or sympathizing with them.

In December, Zamora went to Miami and Houston to solicit funds for the Green Cross, his sister said. She added that as a result of his efforts, the organization was able to buy additional ambulances.

Zamora and at least one of the agency directors had left the country temporarily in recent months after receiving death threats, said Jose Eliseo Franco, one of the agency directors.

Zamora was kidnapped along with his nephew Julio Nelson Estrada, 30, by men dressed in civilian clothes, Miss Zamora said. She said the gunmen ransacked the house, which is just a few blocks from the U.S. Embassy, and that they seized business papers.

Tomas Martinez, a Green Cross director, said Zamora's 14-year-old houseboy was also taken in the raid. He said gunmen in civilian clothes also had been looking for Green Cross treasurer Delmy Aurora Rivas at her home for the past two days. She was said to be elsewhere.

Zamora was seized after returning home late from his work at Green Cross headquarters.

After reporting his disappearence to the police and inquiring at military installations without results, colleagues met Friday to draft a public appeal urging Zamora's abductors "to respect his life and moral integrity...as well as that of other (Green Cross) volunteers."

Despite the frequent death threats they have received by telephone or letter, Zamora's colleagues were shocked by his dissappearance.

"Sure, we all get threats, but they never kidnapped any of the directors before," Martinez said. "We never expected this. It's quite disconcerting".

The Salvadoran Green Cross has nearly 1,700 volunteers, mostly young men and women. The private, non-sectarian agency was founded in France during World War II and established in El Salvador in the early 1970s.

Agency officials say six volunteers have been killed and 15 arrested during the 31-month conflict between leftist guerrillas and the U.S.-backed government.

The Green Cross cares for about 30,000 war refugees, about one tenth of the total in El Salvador. Its volunteers often drive into combat areas to carry food to isolated villages or remove the wounded.

The agency's attempt to remain neutral in the conflict has drawn suspicion from both sides, but its directors say there have been more threats from government and right-wing groups than from guerrillas.

In February, Green Cross officials said in an interview that the government was withholding permits needed for it to take delivery of antibiotics, vitamins, surgical supplies and ambulances.

Rural Solidarity leader says he cooperated to gain release

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The leader of Rural Solidarity was quoted Friday as denying he cooperated with martial law authorities in order to gain release from internment.

Jan Kulaj, the 24-year-old leader of the farmers' counterpart to the independent trade union Solidarity, was released on April 28 along with 1,000 other internees rounded up after the military crackdown Dec. 13.

Solidarity's national chairman, Lech Walesa, is among those still held. Walesa has been described by martial law officials as stubborn, arrogant and impossible to reason with.

Kulaj, on Polish TV at the time of his release, said he would welcome the chance to work with the Communist-allied United Peasants Party.

A Krakow newspaper, Dziennik Polski, quoted him as saying he would not join the "top authorities" of the party.

Kulaj was asked if he had held talks with United Peasants Party chief Roman Malinowski prior to his release and if he had agreed to join the party leadership.

"There were no talks with the representatives of the authorities prior to my release," he said in the interview reprinted by the Warsaw daily Zyciew Warszawy on Friday. "Some people would like to believe it...but I am not going to work for the top authorities of the party."

Kulaj, a farmer from southeastern Poland, was quoted as saying he "perhaps ... believed people too much and our union discipline was too lax.

Gandhi's party losing ground in election

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's Congress Party lost ground Friday in returns from four state assembly elections regarded as a measure of the 64-year-old leader's midterm popularity.

Results trickling in from Wednesday's balloting showed the Congress Party defeated by the ruling Communist-led coalition in West Bengal state, and trailing in two northern states Congress had held prior to the election.

But a Congress-led coalition won a clear victory in Kerala, capturing 77 seats to 63 for the coalition of communist and leftist parties that has ruled the southern state off and on since 1956.

In the Marxist stronghold of West Bengal, the 5-year-old coalition returned to power with an absolute majority over an alliance of non-Communist rivals headed by the Congress Party.

The Marxist Communist Party and its allies so far have captured 160 of 205 contests for the 294-member West Bengal state legislature.

But the Gandhi camp substantially improved its position in West Bengal, electing 35 members so far — a gain of 11 seats.

Board games older than Boardwalk, Park Place

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — "The game is done! I've won, I've won!" — Coleridge, Rime of the Ancient Mariner

Anyone who's ever suffered the cruel fate of being sent directly to jail, without passing "Go," without collecting a pre-inflationary $200, without even hope for reprieve except through a lucky roll of the dice, knows that board games can be a serious business indeed.

How serious? Industry experts estimate that Americans spent more than $1 billion last year on games and puzzles, including everything from age-old standbys such as chess and checkers to modern fantasies such as home-video board games of the electronic age.

Such tremendous popularity didn't come about overnight, according to researchers for Odyssey 2's home-video games, with headquarters in Knoxville.

In fact, long before all the big spenders began buying property on Boardwalk and Park Place, players from all countries were testing their skill and tempting fate on a wide variety of "playing fields for the imagination."

Square one, as far as board games are concerned, goes back nearly 5,000 years to Mesopotamia. There, the ancient Sumerians played their version of today's board games.

Like today's popular children's games, the Sumerian game was a basic "path" or "chase" game. The standard feature of this type of game is the "zap," in which players lose ground by landing on the "wrong" squares, or by their opponents landing on the "right" ones.

Even in olden times, losers had to suffer silently the slings and arrows of boorish winners. An engraving from the second or third century B.C. shows a young Roman couple playing a board game and the inscription reads, "I believe I have beaten you."

And in the game of Hyena, still played by the Arabs of the Sudan, the player whose marker, representing his mother, is eaten by the hyena is ribbed unmercifully by his opponents.

As societies became more complex, so did their board games, according to the researchers. In India around 500 A.D., a new game gave the common folk a chance to pretend to be rajahs, complete with armies of infantry, cavalry, elephants and boatmen. This game, Shaturanga, gradually became more sophisticated and abstract, spread to Europe through the Crusades, and eventually made Bobby Fischer famous. Today, this game of skill now known as chess is played by millions of people throughout the world.

The counterpart of chess in the Orient was a strategic game of encirclement originating in China but achieving its greatest popularity in Japan. Called "Go," it quickly became Japan's national game and by the 16th century was so popular that a state academy was established for its advancement. In fact, the game was so important to the Japanese that the director of the academy received 1,400 square yards of land and an annual salary of 1,000 buckets of rice!

Closer to home, dire consequences, not rich rewards, faced those players who couldn't avoid the pitfalls of "The Checkered Game of Life," the first board game to achieve broad popularity in this country. Introduced in 1860, it featured a board of 84 squares along which pieces moved at the dictates of a spinner. The object was to reach the goal of "Happy Old Age" and avoid squares labeled "Disgrace," "Crime" and, worst of all, "Ruin."

This and other realistic games which followed it reflected prevailing attitudes (thrift is rewarded, waste punished) and helped pave the way for the most successful board game of all time, Monopoly. This game of buying and selling properties became a national phenomenon during the hard times of the Great Depression, when "play" money was the only money most people could get their hands on.

During the early days of television, board games often took a backseat to those electronic curiosities around which people would sit spellbound for hours.

Television, however, could never replace the simple pleasures of participation board games afforded. Today, these two popular pastimes not only co-exist but are combined to form the latest innovation in games, video board games in which the strategy is determined by board situations and the action takes place on the television screen.

Retiring teacher honored

Ethey Fay Ford, a teacher at Crockett Elementary School since 1970, was honored at a party in the school library Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. Ford, who will retire at the end of the school year, has served in the Midland Independent School District for 23 years and in the Hamlin Independent School District for nine years. She received a corsage, plant and silver plate for her service at Crockett Thursday and an Outstanding Citizenship award for loyalty of dedication to church, school and community at the Oakgrove Baptist Church in Hamlin Sunday.

A graduate of Texas College in 1950, she received a bachelor of science degree in home economics with a minor in elementary education. She received her master's degree in elementary education, with a minor in art, from North Texas State University in 1967.

She is a member of the Theta Delta Omega chapter of Alpha Kappa Alpha sorority. She has been the organizer of the Community Gospel Singers Sunday radio program since 1971 and a member of the Macedonia Baptist Church since 1959. She also is an amateur actor, appearing in several Midland Community Theatre productions.

Mrs. Ford plans to move to Fort Worth.

King decides to sue wife's former lover

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Larry King has filed a $57.5 million malicious prosecution lawsuit over the court fight initiated by the former lesbian lover of his wife, tennis star Billie Jean King.

King

King sued Marilyn Barnett and her attorneys, contending she wrongly accused the Kings of repudiating an agreement to allow Ms. Barnett to live in their Malibu house and support her for life.

The lawsuit, filed Thursday in Los Angeles Superior Court, also charges that Ms. Barnett and her lawyers were aware no agreements existed.

Superior Court Judge Julius M. Title ruled last December that no contract existed, and ordered Ms. Barnett to leave the house. He described Ms. Barnett's actions as coming close to "attempted extortion."

Previn

LONDON (AP) — Pop singer Lovely Previn, the 25-year-old daughter of conductor Andre Previn and his first wife, Betty Bennett, pleaded guilty to marijuana possession Friday.

After appearing at Woolwich Magistrates Court in southeast London, she was discharged on the condition that she does not repeat the offense.

Police said they found a small amount of marijuana in the singer's pocket as she left a friend's apartment. Her attorney, referring to Miss Previn as "a struggling young artiste," put the value of the drug at "under one pound," the equivalent of about $1.80.

Miss Previn, who lives in Hither Green, south London, said later: "It was such a small amount. In America they give you the equivalent of a parking ticket for it. I just don't know the laws here."

Osbourne

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The City Council has banned performances in city facilities by rock star Ozzy Osbourne, citing an incident when he urinated at the Alamo.

"He comes into town and gets maybe $100,000 or $200,000. Then he goes (urinates) on the Alamo and gets fined about $120," Councilman Van Henry Archer said Thursday. The council vote was unanimous.

Osbourne posted a $50 bond on the Feb. 19 charge of misdemeanor public intoxication for urinating in front of the Alamo. Court officials said he failed to appear at a Feb. 26 trial and forfeited the bond.

The rock star went to the Alamo before his sellout appearance at the HemisFair Arena.

Stockholders give GM executives bonus

DETROIT (AP) — Stockholders overwhelmingly approved a new executive bonus plan for General Motors Corp.'s top officials Friday, and the chairman announced that GM is considering wage and benefit increases for its white-collar workers.

The bonus plan, approved by 89 percent of the shares cast during the automaker's annual meeting, will lower the level of profits necessary to trigger bonus payments.

The plan is to go in effect after the Sept. 14, 1984 expiration of GM's concessions contract reached with United Auto Workers union blue-collar workers.

The bonus plan had been announced in GM's proxy statement of April 16, the day GM and the UAW signed the concessions contract. When union leaders lambasted the plan, Chairman Roger B. Smith retreated by promising that if approved it would not be implemented until after the UAW pact expired.

Smith, at a news conference after the meeting, said the company is considering wage and benefit increases for white-collar, salaried workers. He said salaried workers during the current 3-year-long industry sales slump took a 5 percent wage cut.

Some of those workers, at plants in Michigan and Ohio, recently have been holding organizational meetings with the UAW and have complained about cutbacks in their ranks. Smith said the workers have "the freedom of choice" on whether to unionize.

A month ago, GM and the UAW signed a contract containing $2.5 billion in concessions from hourly employees, including elimination of a 3 percent annual wage boost.

Smith told the more than 1,000 shareholders that the company plans no further wholesale cuts in salaried personnel and will bring back 13,400 hourly workers in June.

Currently, GM has 141,000 autoworkers on indefinite layoff. Figures in the past month show GM sales pushing ahead of year-ago levels.

"We have reduced salaried employment 27,000 over the last three years; so that's behind us," he told the shareholders at GM headquarters.

"Most of the costs of gearing up for our current new products...are behind us as well. (And) new national labor agreements have been negotiated."

GM, the only U.S.-based automaker to make a profit last year at a modest $333 million, lost $762 million in 1980. GM's domestic car sales this year remain 13.2 percent off from 1981.

Several shareholders criticized GM's $500 million plant in an ethnic Detroit neighborhood known as Poletown. The plant gained national attention the past two years because of protests from residents who were evicted from their homes to make way for the facility.

One stockholder was granted a minute of silence for the Rev. Joseph Karasiewicz, the Roman Catholic parish priest in Poletown and a leader of the protest. He died late last year of a heart attack.

On other topics, Smith said "it would not be unreasonable to have some kind of decision by the fall" on the possibility of joint small-car production in the U.S. between GM and Toyota Motor Co., Japan's largest automaker.

This year's annual meeting, GM's 74th, was divided into two parts — a morning session for business transactions and an afternoon session for additional stockholder questions. Smith presided in the morning and President F. James McDonald took over in the afternoon.

The approximately 1,000 shareholders present elected a slate of 25 incumbent directors by a 98 percent margin.

Michigan grads to celebrate without booze

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — Graduating seniors at a suburban high school will party all night June 3 and their parents will pick up the $4,500 tab to make sure there is no drinking and no driving.

"They'll just kiss their wheels goodbye at about 11 p.m. and won't see them again until about 7 a.m. the next day," said Daniel Robertson, chairman of a parents' group that raised money for the bash.

Forest Hills Central High School graduates will park their cars at the school and ride in buses to the party. A rock band will play and the party will last until dawn, but refreshments will not consist of the beer, wine and liquor that shows up at many gatherings of graduating students.

"This year, parents decided there must be a better way," said Leslie Louisell, director of prevention services for Project Rehab, a Grand Rapids alcohol and drug abuse prevention and treatment program.

Robertson said parents of Forest Hills students decided about six months ago to throw the party. They set up a tax-free fund and began collecting donations. The school provided buses and school bus drivers will donate their services as chauffeurs.

"Most importantly, we have the support of the kids," said Robertson, whose son will be among the graduates. "There are 250-some kids. We're positive we'll have over 200 attending this thing. We're doing everything in our power to make sure they won't be disappointed."

A study by Project Rehab and Grand Valley State Colleges found West Michigan teen-agers are familiar with alcohol. Of 1,223 10th, 11th and 12th graders surveyed, 74 percent said they had used liquor and 22 percent said they drink at least once or twice a week.

"Kids, just like adults, celebrate with alcohol," Ms. Louisell said. "It's crossing all lines. Honor students drink. Athletes drink. Average students drink. Poor students drink."

Traffic accidents are the No. 1 cause of death among teen-agers, and most of them involve alcohol, according to statistics cited by the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism.

Four high school seniors from Grandville died during the 1981 Memorial Day weekend when their speeding car struck a tree in Newaygo County. State police said they found open beer and whiskey containers in the wreckage.

Sociology students to see Village after all

WEST SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — When some high school sociology students first asked to visit New York's Greenwich Village, they were spurned by school board members who feared they might encounter "depravation" and "raw lifestyles."

But after a personal invitation from the president of New York University, a modified version of the trip is on.

"It's narrow-minded. If we're old enough to go to war, I think we're old enough to go to Greenwich Village," said Paul Tesini, a 17-year-old junior who is scheduled to go on the field trip.

Board members on Tuesday voted down the Village tour as part of the students' planned trip to New York City. But later they had second thoughts after an invitation arrived from NYU President John Brademas for lunch and a tour of the university, which is located off Washington Square Park in the heart of the Village.

The Village, a traditional enclave of Bohemian lifestyles, includes a large homosexual community, artists, students, working people, retirees, and a vibrant nightlife within its borders.

"I know they will find this a highlight of their visit to New York City," said Brademas, a former congressman from Indiana.

Mary Thomas, 25, smothers her 2-year-old son, Altoine, with hugs and kisses earlier this week at the Albuquerque International Airport after being reunited with him. Altoine, who allegedly was abducted more than a moth ago by his baby sitter, was found safe in Tampa, Fla.

N.G. Slater buttons up the business

By ERIC FREEDMAN
Hearst Feature Service

NEW YORK — N.G. Slater Corp. makes buttons — more buttons perhaps than there are American chests to pin them on.

Buttons for Ronald Reagan. Buttons for Jimmy Carter.

And buttons for a host of Democrats and Republicans, Conservatives and Liberals, Socialist Workers and Communists, all hoping to parlay the little round give-aways into votes.

"We don't take sides," explains Robert Slater, marketing manager of the family-owned button business that his father founded a half-century ago.

Since then, Slater Corp. has become the largest manufacturer of buttons in the country. A good week sees the machinery punching out about a million of them, with some of the firm's 65 employees inserting the pins by hand.

It's all done in a dingy, noisy industrial building on Manhattan's lower West Side, far from the offices of powerful politicians.

Political paraphernalia, including bumper stickers, T-shirts and "low-end" or inexpensive giveaways such as shopping bags and pencils, are just part of N.G. Slater Corp.'s business.

The steady business is in advertising campaigns for corporations and ad agencies and in jobs for organizations involved in controversial issues or fund raising, Slater says.

"We're very busy in the anti-nuclear area," he points out.

The anti-nuclear movement is the biggest social issue — at least button-wise — since the Vietnam War, according to Slater.

"Whenever there's a controversy, there's two sides to it. We seem to get both sides," he says, noting, for example, orders for both pro-abortion and anti-abortion buttons.

During the heyday of public protests over the war in Southeast Asia, the company dealt with 200 to 250 anti-war organizations "as well as a few that were for the war," Slater recalls.

He adds, "there's nothing political we could turn down, but we would refuse to print an 'off-color' or pornographic button."

That didn't prevent the production of "- - - - Iran" buttons during the hostage crisis because "we agreed with the sentiment," Slater says.

When the New York State Museum wanted a button honoring the Coelophysis — the only dinosaur which has been directly proven to have lived in what is now New York — it turned to N.G. Slater.

There may be disagreement over the importance of buttons in political life and voter influence, but Slater says he hasn't seen any drop in button sales.

While campaign buttons may be big business for a small business, "the main dollars are spent in the media," Slater observed. The firm charges 10 to 20 cents per button.

And because politicians, especially losers, aren't considered great credit risks, the company insists on cash on delivery from them.

As a result of that policy, the 1980 Carter campaign got credit because it dealt through an established advertising agency. At the same time, the Reagan campaign paid cash because it didn't use an agency which deals regularly with N.G. Slater.

Involvement in White House campaigns is nothing new, he said. N.G. Slater churned out buttons for Franklin Delano Roosevelt during the Depression.

The company also gets into commercial moneymakers. Remember those yellow-and-black smile buttons with two eyes, no nose and a vacuous grin?

If you liked them, thank N.G. Slater.

If you hated them, blame N.G. Slater.

The company came up with the design "as a goof" and produced 25 million of them, Slater says. The "goof" paid off as its largest-ever item.

For Slater personally, the job is making buttons — not wearing them. The only button Slater has worn this year is one with Woody Allen's face on it.

Aladdin House is Proud to Present This Show And Sale!

Invest In Oriental Beauty

Jewel Rich Imported Oriental Rugs In A Variety Of Sizes. A Feast For The Eyes!

Aladdin House FURNITURE
1504 W. WALL
694-6649

A large selection of handmade Oriental and Persian Rugs (new dnd old). Kerman-Kashan-Tabriz-Ardebil-Suk-Saruk.

'Oriental rugs and carpets have been produced for centuries and the rugs and carpets produced today are the same in almost every respect as the those produced 500 years ago. The best known and most beautiful rugs come from Persia but there are also excellent pieces that come from China, Afghanistan, Turkey, Pakistan, India and Romania. There are other countries in Asia and Africa who produce hand made rugs, but we do not have enough space here to enumerate all of them. All these rugs are made of wool. There are exceptions such as some of the Persian Qum that are made of pure silk.

One may ask why is a hand made oriental rug carpet the most prized and sought after of all floor coverings? The main reasons are:

1). An oriental rug, being entirely hand made, has a guaranteed durability. Even accidental damage can be repaired without decreasing the rug's value. This cannot be siad of a machine made rug which, once damaged, loses it value.

2). The decorative value of an oriental rug in undeniable. It greatly enhances a room and creates on an immediate impression of friendly warmth on entering it.

3). Provided it is used with care, the value of an oriental rug increases year by year. It is a safe investment and can be turned into ready cash at any time.

It is sometimes believed that oriental rugs and carpets are very expensive items. This is not so. We have many fine pieces that sell at under $500.00.

A Brief summary of our rugs and carpets, and their characteristics. is as follows:

Persian: The finest peices come from the towns such as Isfahan, Qum, Kashan, Tobriz and Kerman. In addition there are the nomadic rugs of coarser weave such as Humadan, Shiraz, Abadeh, Afshan and Belouch. We also have Kalims which have no pile, which come in colorful, geometric designs.

Chinese: The thickest pile of all carpets and rugs. They are very luxurious and come in embossed Aubusson, Floral and Peking designs.

Pakistan: Specialises in Bokhara and Afghan designs and in excellent copies of Persian design considerably less expensive than Persian rugs.

Afghan: In well known elephant foot designs in red and gold. Useful for offices and hallway. Other designs are also produced.

India: Mainly heavy pile Produced with beautiful pastel paste backgrounds in Floral, Aubusson or Chinese Peking designs.

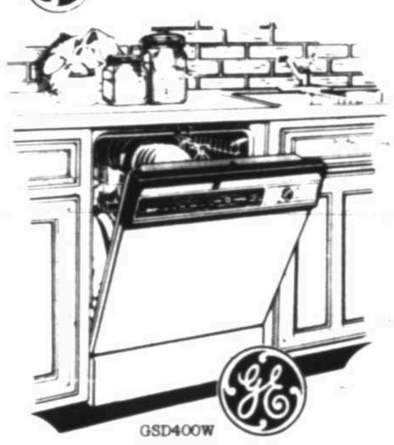

Turkish: Made of wool, silk and artificial silk. Some rugs rival those of Persia in quality and design. rReasonably priced.

Romanian: Mainly copies of Persian designs , but we also have large carpets with the Aubusson design made in wool supplied from England. Extremely good value & very low prices.

Sweden campaigns against liquor

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — A drink can cost the equivalent of $8 in a Swedish bar. The government purposely inflates the price as part of a campaign to get Swedes to cut down on alcohol.

State-owned liquor stores are campaigning against their own goods. Pop stars and athletes are recruited for beat-the-bottle campaigns. Dignitaries visiting the Foreign Ministry no longer sip brandy with their coffee.

Not since a state referendum on prohibition in 1922 has the use of alcohol been in such disfavor among Swedish politicians, officials and researchers.

Sweden ranks a modest 21st in world statistics on per-capita alcohol consumption. The average Swede above age 14 drinks nine quarts of hard liquor a year and 12 quarts of wine.

That's about the same amount of liquor as an American consumes and half that of the average Pole. It's less wine than a Frenchman drinks in a month.

"ALCOHOL CONSUMPTION in Sweden may not sound that high when compared with other countries," said Hans Agneus, spokesman for the government's Social Welfare Board, "but if you look at the effects and dangers it is a considerable problem."

He points to alcohol's cost to Swedish society — especially its socialized-medicine system — but admits there is no valid way to tabulate it.

"If someone breaks a leg because he's intoxicated, it won't show in the statistics," he said.

Such concerns were spurred by the appointment two years ago of a fierce opponent of drinking, Karin Soder, as minister of social welfare. The concerns have been nurtured by recent press campaigns on Swedish abuse of all addictive drugs, including alcohol.

Anti-drinking got a willing ear in the Riksdag, Sweden's parliament, where one member in five is a professed teetotaller, and the Riksdag responded by directing that consumption be lowered.

The decree gave the state monopoly for alcoholic beverages, Systembolaget, a peculiar dual role. While marketing alcohol, it must campaign actively against it.

"SINCE WE have no interest in profit, there is no conflict involved," said Bjorn Reimers of the Systembolaget marketing department.

Systembolaget's director general, Gabriel Romanus, a former health and social welfare minister, says he doesn't touch hard liquor and drinks only an occasional glass of wine.

Sales staffers wear T-shirts with the slogan "Buck the Booze." Many of them are hired through help-wanted ads seeking people with a "social interest" as well as selling experience. Advertisements suggesting alternative non-alcoholic beverages adorn liquor-store windows.

The popular music group Abba appeared on Systembolaget posters with the caption: "We are dreaming of a white Christmas" — white is Swedish slang for liquor-free — and top athletes have endorsed the campaign.

In addition, the government has used other than propaganda methods for dissuading Swedes from drinking.

—Wine and liquor advertisements of all kinds were banned in 1979.

—FOR THREE months last summer, liquor stores were closed on Saturdays to reduce weekend drinking. Reimers said the effect on sales was negligible, but police reported fewer assaults and incidents of disorderly conduct.

—Increasingly, restaurants are having difficulty keeping liquor licenses or obtaining new ones. Bars as such almost never are accepted due to a requirement that forbids liquor licenses to bars that are not connected with eating establishments.

State-owned liquor stores are campaigning against their own goods. Pop stars and athletes are recruited for beat-the-bottle campaigns. Dignitaries visiting the Foreign Ministry no longer sip brandy with their coffee.

Then there are liquor prices, which Reimers credited more than anything else in a decline since 1980 in overall alcohol sales.

Taxes push the price of a bottle of the cheapest whiskey to more than $15. Prices go up twice a year to keep pace with other consumer goods and are boosted periodically when another tax is added. Next year, four increases already are scheduled.

Alcoholic beverages in bars or restaurants usually cost three times the retail price, with a drink based on hard liquor costing $6 to $8 and a pint of beer $3.

One problem resulting from the high-price policy on alcohol is moonshining.

A POLL by the Swedish Institute of Public Opinion Research, quoted by the government in a recent alcohol consumption study, showed that 21 percent of respondents had drunk illegal liquor at least once.

But the poll was taken 10 years ago, and experts say the present price level would most certainly make the current figure much higher.

They add that proof of the extent of moonshine operations can be seen in sales of yeast. Official statistics show there are 1,000 tons of more yeast sold every year than can be used for bread, judging from flour sales.

That's enough to produce 10 million quarts of home brew a year in a country of 8.3 million people.

Students to stop singing school song

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal judge says he will order a suburban high school to stop singing its school song at pep rallies, football games and other events because the lyrics petition God.

U.S. District Judge John Singleton told officials of the Aldine Independent School District it is unconstitutional to organize singing of the song at public events. The song was written by a student in 1951 and was called the "school prayer" until recently.

"If a parent wants to stand up at a football game and sing it, that's another ball game," Singleton said.

The judge also ordered that the words to the song, posted in three-inch letters over the entrance of an auditorium, be taken down.

The lyrics of the song are: "Dear God, Please bless our school and all it stands for. Keep us free from sin, honest and true. Give us courage and faith to help make our school the victor."

The song is the subject of a 1980 American Civil Liberties Union lawsuit filed on behalf of an unidentified student and his mother.

Oriental Rugs By Overheu

Fine Oriental Rugs are not for everyone.

Most people can't afford them.

Oriental Rugs do make a statement for those who are successful and care about having the very best. It's very logical really...those who work hardest and succeed deserve the best They wear the best clothes, drive the best cars, have the best homes, wear the best jewelry and live in the best city in the best state in the best country.

Sure, the best Persian Rugs may cost more than the best cars. They should because they last longer, take longer to make and are better investments.

Anyone who has seen our collection says it is the best.

LHS student top winner in National Latin Exam

The results of the 1982 National Latin Exam, including the names of 15 winning students from Lee High School, were released recently to Dr. Joe Smith, LHS principal. About 50 students from LHS, under the direction of Latin and etymology instructor Ben Cason, participated in the national exam, which drew 36,000 participants from across the nation.

Taking top honors with a maxima cum laude award in the Level II division was Chris King, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles King. King, a second year Latin student, received a silver medal in addition to his certificate award.

Students from Lee receiving magna cum laude awards in Level I competition were Stace Bradshaw, Mark Kollar and Dana Tompkins. Magna cum laude award winners in Level II included Barry Friemel, Tami Sutton, Toni Sutton, Janet Little and Sharon Specht.

Winners of cum laude awards in Level I division were Christine Cooper, Dee Ann Jones, James Thompson, Andrea Neisig, David Durfee and Laura Hill.

Administration wants repeal of efficiency standards law

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration asked Congress Friday to repeal the federal law authorizing the Energy Department to set energy efficiency standards for household appliances.

R. Tenney Johnson, general counsel of the Energy Department, told a House subcommittee the efficiency standards "would place unnecessary restraints on appliance manufacturers and, in fact, would hamper the development of truly efficient products" by restricting innovation.

The department already has announced it does not intend to set such standards, arguing that rising energy costs will force consumers to buy efficient appliances without government intervention.

It said in April it planned to issue a formal ruling that standards are not required for eight appliances — refrigerators, freezers, clothes dryers, water heaters, room air conditioners, kitchen ranges, central air conditioners and furnaces.

Such a ruling technically would comply with the law while at the same time effectively junking efficiency standards proposed during the Carter administration, standards the congressional General Accounting Office estimated could save the equivalent of 728,000 barrels of oil a day by the year 2000.

The department by itself cannot repeal the law authorizing efficiency standards.

The department's earlier announcement drew harsh criticism from Rep. Richard Ottinger, D-N.Y., chairman of the House Energy and Commerce subcommittee on energy conservation, who conducted Friday's meeting.

"This administration is determined not to be persuaded by the facts," charged Ottinger. "These standards, under the guise of regulatory reform, were targeted for extinction by the administration long before the manipulated analysis justifying the desired, unsupported conclusion was completed.

"There is hardly a more distorted example of voodoo economics undercutting sound energy policy, with energy consumers as the victims," he said.

Ottinger has introduced legislation that would repeal one section of the law, allowing the federal standards to pre-empt state actions on energy efficiency.

Battlefield-use radar system being tested in Maryland

ABERDEEN, Md. (AP) — A portable radar system developed in Israel is being tested at the Aberdeen Proving Ground for use on battlefields beside anti-aircraft missiles and guns.

The Human Engineering Laboratory at the proving ground conducted a limited, week-long test of the system in February at Fort Lewis, Wash. said spokesman David Davison, and more tests are planned here.

Jon Fallesen, an engineering psychologist, said researchers are exploring whether the ELM-2106 Tactical Defense Alert Radar System can be used as an extension of major radar systems and to fill gaps in coverage.

Lear Siegler Inc., of Santa Monica, Calif., which is marketing the Israeli system, claims the system can also provide early target detection for anti-aircraft guns in a controlled airspace and detection of low-flying aircraft.

The system, which weighs 40 pounds and can be easily assembled on the field, has remote control capabilities of up to 100 meters, officials said.

"During testing, two relatively untrained soldiers were able to set up the system in about seven minutes," Fallesen said.

Clarence A. Fry, chief of HEL's Aviation and Air and Defense Directorate, said the system can operate on power sources available in the field — such as jeep batteries. With its 24-volt electrical system it can run for about eight hours when fully charged, he said.

"It's a unique concept, putting radar out with the guns," Fallesen said.

Coach gets award

WASHINGTON (AP) — First Lady Nancy Reagan presented the American Cancer Society's annual Courage Award Friday to Head Coach Forrest Gregg of the Cincinnati Bengals.

Gregg was honored for his successful fight against melanoma, which the cancer society calls the most serious form of skin cancer.

Actor Kirk Douglas, chairman of this year's national cancer crusade, was among those at the White House for the ceremony, the cancer society reported.

A decade later, ERA still in arena filled with defeats

By GRACE-MARIE ARNETT
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — A decade ago, it seemed the victory would be easy as state after state lined up to ratify the constitutional amendment guaranteeing equality to women.

Those early hopes have been battered by a string of bitter defeats. No state has ratified in five years, and the Equal Rights Amendment will expire in 38 days unless three more states vote for it. ERA strategists talk bravely about the possibilities of victory while privately plotting fall-back strategies for the defeat they anticipate.

Six weeks before the June 30 deadline imposed by Congress, backers of the ERA still are gallantly ringing doorbells, planning rallies, spending millions on advertising and mounting a frenzied effort to somehow persuade a handful of legislators in three more states to vote yes.

ELEANOR SMEAL, president of the National Organization for Women and perhaps the most publicly optimistic of the ERA generals, contends the deadline that threatens ERA may hold the seeds of victory.

"I think it takes a deadline to get this done," Smeal said. "The odds are growing in our favor, but they're still against us."

Such public talk has not stopped the planning for defeat in Washington. And it certainly has not dimmed the already-begun celebrating in East Alton, Ill., for Phyllis Schlafly, the best-known leader of the anti-ERA forces.

"There's been no activity for ERA in five years, and I don't see any danger of it now," she said in an interview.

Even Smeal says the rest of this year will be spent working to elect pro-ERA candidates and defeat those against the amendment.

"We'd like to have it passed by June 30," said Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., another prominent ERA supporter. "If not, our immediate strategy is to reintroduce the amendment exactly as it is with as many co-sponsors as possible."

WHILE SCHROEDER says the amendment may clear the Democratic House this year, she is doubtful the Republican Senate would send the amendment out again.

"We're going to make it into a big campaign issue this fall," Schroeder said. "We're going to find those members of Congress in vulnerable districts and make them promise they'll vote for ERA next year."

She predicts the amendment will be sent to the states for another shot at ratification sometime next year. No one expects that battle to be any easier than the last one.

"If there is even a possibility we can get it through in these last six weeks, we have do to everything we can to help," said Kathy Wilson, chairwoman of the National Women's Political Caucus. "It may seem like we're paying a lot now, but we'll pay a lot more if we don't ratify it."

She says it took 72 years for women to gain suffrage. "We're not giving up now." Gayle Melich, executive director of the National Women's Political Caucus, said the ERA battle has given women a strong issue to coalesce around. "If the amendment had been ratified quietly without a fight, we never would have had the incentive to develop the first-rate women's organizations we have today.

"Working with the legislators in those unratified states has taught us how to win political campaigns and how to get bills passed for women," Melich said. "If you have to look for a silver lining, it is the growth and depth of the women's movement that has developed over the last decade."

ALTHOUGH THE ERA has been stalled since Indiana voted to ratify in 1977, a recently released Louis Harris poll shows a marked increase in public support for the amendment. Harris said approval has soared 13 percent nationally over the last five months. In January, only a 50-46 percent plurality favored passage of the amendment. In early May, support had grown to 63-34 percent nationwide, Harris reported.

ERA opponent Schlafly says the poll was biased. "The poll was dishonest," she said in a telephone interview from her home.

"The questions were so obviously loaded, I'm surprised Harris didn't get a 99 percent in favor."

Schlafly said ERA is dead. "The defeat is a tremendous victory for women, for families, for the effectiveness of our armed forces and for the authority of state and local governments over their citizens," she said.

While Smeal continues to lead the effort to win ratification by Florida, Illinois, North Carolina and Oklahoma, others in the women's movement are trying to analyze what happened.

"Just because you are just and right and well-prepared doesn't mean you are going to win," Schroeder said. "The media coverage of ERA never has helped.

"We've always been portrayed as two fighting cats and the debate functioned to polarize people instead of educate them."

SMEAL SAID MORE and more men are beginning to understand their investment in equal rights for women.

"I was speaking in Fayetteville, (N.C.) and a man came up to me and said he had never understood this issue so he decided to come hear me speak.

"He said his wife couldn't come that night because she had to work, had to work at two jobs, in fact, just to help the family pay its bills.

"The man said he had never seen discrimination so clearly before his wife had to start working. 'Her two jobs aren't worth one of mine,' the man told me."

Smeal says the growing number of working women and the recessionary economy may be the forces that send ERA over the top by June 30.

Wilson said lack of sensitivity to women's feelings has worked against ERA ratification. "A number of women began to see ratification of the amendment as a hostile repudiation of their lifestyles. They thought we were telling homemakers to go out and get a career and let others raise your children. 'That was very threatening. And we didn't do a good enough job of assuring homemakers they have a right to choose to stay home but they still have a stake in equality."

WILSON ALSO BELIEVES the growth of the New Right and the fundamentalist religious movement emerged in the mid-'70's, further thwarting ERA ratification campaigns.

"ERA became a symbol for them. If you were for it, you were bad, if you were against it, you were okay."

"If we had fought this battle on intellectual grounds, there's no doubt we would have won easily," Schroeder said. "But it became emotional and suddenly got way out of control."

Schroeder said the possible defeat "makes me sick. But it strengthens our resolve to get it through. Anybody who thinks that this issue is going away is underestimating our will."

Ironically, the women's movement has become an organized political force in the last five years. Yet over that time not a single state has ratified the amendment.

"I wish we had been big enough four years ago to do what we're doing today," Smeal said. "But that's like cursing the darkness. We have done everything we were capable of doing every single day. That's all you can ask."

THE NATIONAL Women's Political Caucus which works to elect feminist candidates says there were fewer than 6,000 women officials in 1975, but by 1981 there were 16,000 women mayors, municipal councillors, county commissioners and state legislators.

Even though no state has ratified ERA in five years, an official of the ERA Countdown Campaign says the amendment is within 12 votes of ratification.

"We are very, very close in three or four states," Kathy Bonk said in an interview. "If about 12 legislators in a few key states would switch their votes, we'd win."

— In Illinois, ERA backers are campaigning for a simple majority rule instead of the current three-fifths majority needed for ratification. "It has become a viable issue in the gubernatorial campaign," Smeal said. "Women are definitely having an impact."

— North Carolina. The legislature convenes June 2 for its regular session. Gov. James Hunt has assigned a full-time lobbyist to work for ERA ratification and has pledged to do all he can to see it come for a vote.

— Florida. The state Supreme Court recently ruled all members of the Senate must run for re-election this year, forcing many anti-ERA members to reconsider their positions "if they don't want us to go after them in November," Smeal said.

— Oklahoma. If another state were to ratifiy ERA, the governor has told ERA advocates he would call a special session of the Legislature for a vote.

The White House is not involved in the ERA battle since President Reagan has said he doesn't believe the amendment is the best route to women's equality.

Linda McCann, who works with the presidentially appointed Task Force on Legal Equality for Women, said the group is proceeding with its work to weed out federal laws that discriminate against women.

"We also have a 50 states project in which the White House has asked the states to review their own laws and eliminate those that discriminate, but of course that must be done at the pace of the respective governors," McCann said.

When it comes to whoppers, this 70-pound, 67-inch sturgeon takes the cake — a big, big cake. Jeff Anderson, right, caught the super fish in the Lower Portage Entry, where the Portage waterway meets Keweenaw Bay, using smelt as bait. Anton Pinter helped him land it. Any sturgeon over 70 pounds qualifies for a Master Angler patch from the Michigan Department of Natural Resources.

He spins yarns for living

By MARIANNE McQUIDDY

ALAMOGORDO, N.M. (AP) — One minute, he's a little bitty ant, asking a passing traveler to "blow the dirt off my feet and then I won't track up your tortilla."

The next instant, he's a big black beetle, and then he's a mouse, or maybe a frog digging a hole with his "little frog shovel."

The change between characters is instantaneous and total, and the audience sits transfixed waiting for the next move.

It's all in a day's work for Joe Hayes.

Hayes, of Santa Fe, N.M., is one of a rare breed. He's a professional storyteller, traveling the area sharing his repertoire of tales with people, and is one of only 200 who do it full time.

He was in Alamogordo recently as part of the annual "Writers' Connection" sponsored by the International Reading Association of Otero County.

"I've been telling stories for six years," he said, "and have been making a living at it for the past two years."

Hayes said he had always been fascinated by stories, and had collected the sagas as a hobby. "I started fantasizing about doing it for a living, and, you know what, it worked!

"I tell stories to children, adults, anyone who is interested."

He says he has no favorite story because he likes every one he tells. "Any one I remember I like."

Hayes says that many people like scary stories, and always ask him for those.

He explains that he has no set program. "I vary what stories I tell with the type of group. I generally decide the second story I am going to do after I've started the first one."

What makes a good storyteller?

You must communicate well with your audience, "but it has to be real. You cannot put it on. You've got to believe and feel what you are doing."

Also, a good storyteller is one who has the guts to know himself.

"There's got to be a strong child living inside of you — someone who is not afraid to wonder and react to the tale. You need to have a good sense of humor."

Hayes generally will pick a story that everyone in the audience can understand and relate to.

"You want to make sure it doesn't go over the head of the little ones. They cannot get the more subtle humor," he said.

At the performance here, he started with the Spanish saga of a young shepherd who goes to Madrid to see the king's daughter dance and to guess what the skin of the tambourine is.

Along the way, he picks up an ant, a beetle and a mouse. It is the ant who eventually whispers the correct answer to him.

The listener sees and hears it all.

"It really never gets dull," said Hayes. "Well, maybe sometimes, but it's like singing or dancing or anything else you do professionally. There's always another story."

MC hosts business seminar

Midland College will host a half-day seminar on "Effective Advertising for Small Businesses" in the Roadrunner Room in the Administration Building June 9 from 12:45 to 5:30 p.m.

The seminar is open to any person in the area who operates a small business, or is planning to open a small business. Registration fee is $15 and should be sent to Dr. Wayne Holcomb, Midland College, 3600 N. Garfield, Midland 79701 no later than June 7, along with name, address, phone and business name.

An overview of advertising media, techniques and expected results will be presented by Ralph Sellmeyer, Allison Professor of Jounralism at Midland College. Others on the program and their topics include "Television Advertising," Betty King, account executive at KMID-TV; "Newspaper Advertising," Gary Grant, retail advertising manager at the Midland Reporter-Telegram; "Radio Advertising," Bob Hicks, owner of KWEL and KBAT; and "Printed Materials and Sales Promotions," Joe Dominey, vice president and account executive for Womack Claypoole Griffin Advertising, Inc.

"We feel this seminar will assist the owners and managers of small businesses to understand more about various methods of advertising, their strengths and weaknesses and how to make the most of what might be limited advertising budgets," Holcomb pointed out.

The seminar is one in a series of workshops designed to provide assistance for small businesses in the area.

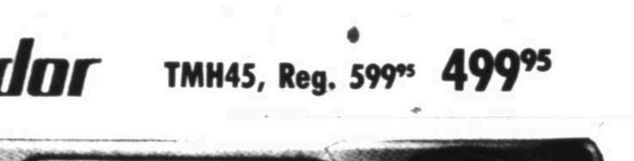

Serving as sponsors for the seminar will be Commercial Bank & Trust, First National Bank of Midland, Midland National Bank, the Small Business Administration and the Midland College management department.

Information regarding the seminar may be obtained by calling 684-7851, extension 184.

Danish magazine is dead issue

By WILLIAM C. MANN

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — Kate Fleron has resigned herself to the death of the feisty little political journal that took her through 40 years of fighting Nazis, Americans, Common Marketeers, NATO and bureaucrats she felt were chipping away at Danish freedom.

Nevertheless, says the white-haired Danish grandmother, the world is in such a mess that her work is far from over.

"In the 1950s it would have been terrible if we had had to stop, because there was a desert around us," she said. "Now we are scared to death about the dangers around us, but we're not sleeping as we were then."

Miss Fleron, a sprightly 72, took a break from editing the 56-page final issue of Frit Danmark to discuss her ideas in her cubbyhole downtown office. The magazine, whose name means "Free Denmark," came out for the last time on May 4. That was the 37th anniversary of Denmark's liberation from the Nazis, the first adversary the magazine took on.

On her office's yellow wall is a dark, morbid line drawing depicting a queue of prisoners beneath a spotlighted guard tower. It was drawn, she said, by a fellow inmate of the Nazi prison camp where she spent eight months, the only period since December 1942 that she was not editing Frit Danmark.

With a staff consisting of Miss Fleron and a secretary, the magazine occupies two rooms in a walk-up downtown building, overlooking a plaza favored by local leftists for demonstrations, in which she often participates.

"I want to be active as long as I can," she told an interviewer. "I will not give up. It is not so terrible for me if I am going to die in an atomic war, but it will be terrible for the world."

As dangerous as she considers the modern world, Miss Fleron is not without hope, recalling the bleak early days of the five-year Nazi occupation as proof that no situation is hopeless.

"We know, and we are trying to resist, what is threatening us," she said. "I mean first of all war, but also atomic power, pollution. We know what we are afraid of and why, but we don't know if we can change it."

Miss Fleron was a staunchly conservative nationalist when she began editing Frit Danmark nine months after it was born and 2½ years after Germany invaded and occupied its tiny northern neighbor. Most other conservatives who helped publish it in the World War II underground quit because the magazine, reflecting her by-then leftist views, refused to condemn in 1948 the takeover of Czechoslovakia's government by pro-Moscow communists.

The split turned the magazine from a right-to-left political forum into a left-wing, non-party, strongly nationalistic organ.

The magazine had become the largest publication of Denmark's anti-Nazi underground, and its first postwar edition had a press run of 140,000 copies. For the last few years, however, its circulation has been stable at about 2,000, and as the circulation dropped financial problems grew until rising costs forced the closure.

Miss Fleron's room is lined with books — authors include Nikolai Lenin, Kim Il-Sung and Hans Christian Andersen — and on its walls are memorabilia of postwar travels to North Korea, North Vietnam and elsewhere.

Her wartime underground work with Danish communists, her postwar travels and the opinions expressed in Frit Danmark led many of her fellow Danes to vilify her as a communist.

Not true, she insists. "I worked with them when I thought they were right, and I worked against them when I thought they were wrong," she said.

Nevertheless, she does not try to hide her journal's antipathy to the United States, or to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, or to the European Economic Community.

What she wants, she said, is "human socialism. I want real democracy."

She contends that such a system does not exist now, and occasionally she lets slip evidence she's tired of her four decades of battles.

"I have a daughter and two grandchildren, and I spend a lot of time with them," she said. "I want to warn them, but I can't do it all the time."

Disabled cable cars disappoint tourists

By JOHN RICE

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Engineers are trying to patch up the city's crippled cable car system to keep summer tourists happy, but they say any quick fixes will only be temporary.

The cable cars were shut down earlier this week when a huge drive shaft broke, disabling the entire 109-year-old system, a favorite with San Francisco's tourists.

"Six people back home asked us to take a ride for them," said Virginia Crowson of Oklahoma City. "I'll just have to go back home and tell all six that we couldn't go because the cars were broken."

Disappointed travelers wandered over the city's steep hills on foot or by bus.

"We came just to ride the cable cars," said Buellah Prill of Victoria, British Columbia. "We just got here last night. My husband turned the television on and they said the cable cars were out."

Municipal Railway workers dismantled the huge gear and cable mechanism in the central cable car barn looking for ways to keep the cars running until Sept. 22, when a 20-month, $59 million overhaul is scheduled.

"It's like a sunken submarine," said Ron Mathiason, a member of the railway maintenance crew, which was working early Thursday on the system. "First we have to figure out how to get to it, and then what to do about it."

Anne Milner, spokeswoman for the system, said crews were working around the clock looking for a solution, but no decision was expected before later today.

"If they can repair it, it could take a couple of days or weeks or longer," she said.

The rickety cable cars were halted from Memorial Day weekend until July 4 in 1979, when a similar shaft broke.

The broken 4½-ton shaft — 18 feet long — carries power from a 14-foot-diameter gear to the winding sheaves that grip and pull thick cables.

A single, 750-horsepower engine pulls the cables at 9½ mph for the entire system. The cars hitch rides up the streets with a mechanism that grabs the cable through a thin slot in the paving.

The broken shaft runs in tandem with a second gear-shaft-sheave set that acts as an idler. Ed Pearson, acting deputy general manager for the city Public Utilities Commisson, said municipal engineers are considering using that second gear-shaft-sheave to power the system this summer.

"It's not a solution that would be viable for a long term" because it would add extra stress to the mechanism, Pearson said, although it might carry the system through the summer.

"We are going to do everything possible to get the system working again," Mayor Dianne Feinstein pledged.

The cable-car system was devised in 1873 by Andrew Hallidie, who sought a way to pull passengers and cargo up the city's steep hills. By 1890, eight companies operated 600 cars over 110 miles of track.

No one wants to beaten by underdog

CUMBERLAND, Md. (AP) — A shaggy-haired candidate who literally ran as an underdog was awaiting the tally of write-in votes to learn his fate in the mayor's race.

Scott, a 15-year-old dog of indeterminate breed, had waged a vigorous write-in campaign in this western Maryland city, helped by lawyer Armand Pannone, his owner, spokesman and campaign manager.

Pannone said earlier that Scott's candidacy, which attracted national attention, began as a joke.

"The purpose of all this has been to get people aware of the election, get them interested in it, and get them out to vote," he said.

Pannone also suggested the animal's candidacy would keep the two human candidates "on their toes, because nobody wants to be beaten by a dog."

In his campaign platform, Scott pledged not to spend money he didn't have or make promises he couldn't keep. If elected, the dog probably would be a "do-nothing mayor," said Pannone.

The old wagon wheel in the picture, leaning against the side wall of the old log shop, is fast becoming a relic of a departed era.

Time was when the blacksmith and wheelwright did a thriving business and the rumble of carts and wagons was a familiar sound in every community. Some of these old vehicles survive on the farms but they are fast disappearing.

The truck, trailer and tractor today are doing the farm work and hauling the farmer's produce to market. These have ushered in a new era in transportation.

The conditions of human life are thus constantly changing under the impetus of man's inventive genius. Age follows age in rapid succession and change is the order of the world. The only enduring things are the things of the mind and spirit. Love and hope and faith are eternal.

The Church ministers to the spiritual needs of man. It seeks to impart the principles of right living and teach men to love and honor God. These are the changeless and eternal things in a world of constant change and they are as necessary today for wholesome living as in ages past.

'Friend Day' set at Kelview Heights

The Rev. Frank Johnson will be honored Sunday on his 21st anniversary as pastor of Kelview Heights Baptist Church, 407 W. Alta Ave., by the church's congregation. The service will include a concert featuring soloist Robbie Hiner, seen regularly on Jerry Falwell's "The Old Time Gospel Hour."

The congregation will be looking back over 21 years of growth, dating back to 1961 when the congregation occupied a one-room cinder block building. The congregation now includes more than 4,000 members.

Johnson is assisted by five full-time staff ministers and a part-time minister. Kelview was the first to organize a bus ministry in Midland. It now operates 12 buses each Sunday. The church's other ministries now include a radio ministry, an outreach to Midland nursing homes and a class for special children.

Sunday's anniversary observance, slated for 10:30 a.m., is designated "Friend Day" at Kelview. The public is invited to attend.

ACU spokesman to visit churches

Representatives from Abilene Christian University will be speaking at several Midland congregations of the Churches of Christ during their morning worship services Sunday.

Dr. Gary McCaleb will speak at the North A and Tennessee Street church; Garvin Beauchamp will speak at the Fort Worth and Jax streets church; L.D. "Bill" Hilton will speak at the Golf Course Road church; Dan Garrett will be the representative at the Midland Church of Christ; and Dr. John Willis will speak at the Westside Church of Christ. The public is invited to attend.

Following the morning worship services, a luncheon will be held at the Family Center at Golf Course Road Church of Christ. At this time, McCaleb will talk briefly about ACU. All alumni and friends of the school are invited to attend.

'Raised from Ruins' to be topic

Hyde

Fred Hyde, ex-Bourbon Street entertainer from New Orleans, will speak at the First United Pentecostal Church, 5110 W. Illinois Ave., today at 7:30 p.m. and Sunday at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m.

His topic will be "Raised from the Ruins," which tells of his personal battle against alcoholism and his 23 years of non-drinking. The talk will include the progressive symptoms of this disease as well as current statistics on alcoholism.

The public is invited to attend.

Healing service slated Sunday

Peoples Bible Missionary Church, 1201 E. Spruce St., is holding a healing service at 2:30 p.m. Sunday. The Rev. L.L. Martin invites the public to attend.

Lutherans favor 'interim sharing'

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — With action by the American Lutheran Church, governing boards of three Lutheran denominations have now endorsed "interim sharing" of Holy Communion with the Episcopal Church.

The plan now goes before conventions later this year of the American Lutheran Church, the Lutheran Church in America, the Evangelical Association of Lutheran Churches and also of the Episcopal Church.

Three seek PCUS moderatorship

ATLANTA (AP) — Three candidates are running for moderator of the Presbyterian Church U.S. (Southern), which holds its general assembly June 11-17 in Columbus, Ga.

They are the Rev. John Franklin Anderson, a Dallas pastor; the Rev. William B. Oglesby, a seminary professor in Richmond, Va., and the Rev. James Eugene Fogartie, a Spartanburg, S.C., pastor.

Hoover's record will soon fall

NOTRE DAME, Ind. (AP) — According to the Guinness Book of Records, the current record holder for the number of honorary college degrees is Herbert Hoover, who got 89 of them. But the record soon is to be surpassed when the Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, president of Notre Dame University, gets his 90th honorary degree June 12 from Kalamazoo College in Michigan.

Jewish chaplain authorized

NEW YORK (AP) — Argentina's military leaders for the first time have authorized a Jewish chaplain in their armed forces as they begin conscription in the face of the Falkands crisis, reports a U.S. leader of Conservative Judaism.

Rabbi Wolfe Kelman, executive of the Rabbinical Assembly, says it learned that the head of the Conservative Jewish seminary in Buenos Aires persuaded the army, which previously has had only Roman Catholic chaplains, to name its first Jewish chaplain, Rabbi Baruch Plavnick.

Center using 'road to Jesus' game

MISSISSAUGA, Ont. (AP) — A video car-race game along the "road to Jesus" is being used by the Mississauga Ecumenical Center to attract young people.

The game asks the question, "Do you know that Jesus is the Way?" and then goes on to instruct drivers to "keep centered" on the twisting roadway to avoid crashing into the barriers.

"We try to take principles from the Bible and transmit them to children using computer video games with a message," says computer engineer Frank Veneia. "The computer is a very powerful tool with teenagers."

UBS offers another translation

NEW YORK (AP) — If the rest of the language is as tough as its name, the translating job must have been complicated. But in any case, the United Bible Societies says that for the first time a book of the Bible has now been produced for a tribe of Australian aborigines in their language, which is called "Djambarrpuyngu."

Bishop recommends 'honeymoon'

WESTON, Mass. (AP) — Roman Catholic and Lutheran congregations need a "honeymoon" period before moving on toward "marriage," New England Lutheran Bishop Eugene Brodeen told a joint dialogue committee.

He urged that pairs of individual parishes of the two churches enter into "covenant" relationships of mutual study and work, a process also encouraged by Roman Catholic Bishop Bernard Flanagan of Worcester, where several Catholic and Episcopal parishes already are paired in such covenants.

Performing the great acclamation during St. Ann's Super Sunday held recently at Chaparral Center are, from left, the Rev. Cliff Blackburn of St. Ann's Catholic Church, the Bishop Joseph A. Fiorenza of San Angelo and the Rev. Frank Beasley, also of St. Ann's. Following Mass, church members held a picnic on the grounds. Special awards for service to the church were given to Mary Reidy, Max Schumann and Frances Terry.

Methodists consider church trial

RELIGION

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A United Methodist investigating committee is debating whether a church trial is warranted for a Denver bishop who refuses to condemn homosexuality, terming it "a mysterious gift of God's grace."

Bishop Melvin Wheatley Jr., 67, defended himself Thursday before the seven ministers and lay people who will decide whether he undermined church doctrine.

Three churches in Georgia, one in Dallas and another in Boulder, Colo., charge that Wheatley disseminated doctrines contrary to the church and disobeyed the Order and Discipline of the church.

The Methodist Book of Discipline says, "We consider the practice of homosexuality is contrary to Christian teaching."

Testimony concluded Thursday night. The panel immediately began closed deliberations before recessing until Friday, said Martha Man, director of news services for the church.

Wheatley said he doesn't view homosexuality as an academic subject because three close friends and a family member are homosexuals.

He asked the committee to consider whether "God (supplies) sexuality of all kinds, and if not, from what source comes the other kind of sexuality?"

Wheatley noted that United Methodists' theories of what constitutes sin are constantly changing, referring to past prohibitions against ballroom dancing, sewing on Sunday and reading the Sunday newspaper.

His grandparents would be shocked, he said, to learn that "abortion and divorce are no longer viewed as sins" by the United Methodist General Conference.

Wheatley also insisted he hadn't lost the right to express personal opinions when he was ordained bishop in 1972. One letter he wrote on the homosexual issue was to explain his actions to colleagues, he said.

The First United Methodist Church in Boulder brought charges against Wheatley for his appointment of Julian Rush, an admittted homosexual, as an associate pastor at St. Paul's United Methodist Church in Denver.

Rush had been an associate pastor at the Boulder church until he divulged his sexual preference.

The Rev. David Hendrix of the 89-member Waverly Hall Methodist Church in Georgia charged that Wheatley's statements embarrassed the entire 10 million-member church. Hendrix gave the commmittee newspaper clippings and letters Wheatley had sent explaining his views.

Hendrix also spoke for churches in Ellerslie and Shiloh, Ga. The committee said it is considering identical objections from the Tyler Street United Methodist Church in Dallas.

"BIG" JOHN HALL

At first glance you may think "Big" John Hall is a pro-football player. At 6'4" his stature is only the beginning of his bigness. He has a rich rich bass-baritone voice with unbelievable range and power. Yet, "Big" John considers his voice secondary to his ministry. Sharing Christ and leading a congregation in worship is first in "Big" John's life.

Across America and much of the world, John is considered, by many, the foremost soloist of the Evangelical and Charismatic realm.

John Hall is a frequent guest of the PTL Club with Jim Bakker, the 700 Club with Pat Robertson, TBN Network with Paul Crouch, and "100 Huntley Street" Davis Mainse across Canada.

John Hall has been the featured soloist at many great conferences and recently a featured soloist for the Americasn Festival on Evangelism.

Many records and tapes of "Big" John may be found in bookstores in the United States as well as other countries. The latest recording, "THE LORD LIVETH" is a beautiful expression of worship and praise unto the Father.

A concert with "Big" John Hall is a "Celebration of Praise" - Celebrating the life-changing power of Jesus!

THE KINGDOM THAT WILL NEVER END!

"All living things shall thank you, Lord, and your people will bless you. They will talk together about the glory of your kingdom and mention examples of your power. They will tell about your miracles and about the majesty and glory of your reign. For your kingdom never ends. You rule generation after generation." (Psalm 145:10-13)

"Next I saw the arrival of a Man - or so he seemed to be - brought there on clouds from heaven; he approached the Ancient of Days and was presented to him. He was given the ruling power and glory over all the nations of the world, so that all people of every language must obey him. His power is eternal, it will never end; his government shall never fail." (Daniel 7:13-14)

"Then every nation under heaven, and all their power shall be given to the people of God; they shall rule all things forever, and all rulers shall serve and obey them." (Daniel 7:27)

"For unto us a Child is born, unto us a Son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulder. These will be his royal titles: "Wonderful", "Counselor", "The Mighty God", "The Everlasting Father", "The Prince of Peace". His ever-expanding, peaceful government will never end. He will rule with perfect fairness and justice from the throne of his father David. He will bring true justice and peace to all nations of the world. This is going to happen because the Lord of heaven's armies has dedicated himself to do it!" (Isaiah 9:6-7)

Book considers 'All Things Considered'

By DON FREEMAN
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — "Day in and day out, 'All Things Considered' is the most interesting program on the air. Notice I didn't say on the radio. 'All Things Considered' beats anything else on radio, television, shortwave, CB, or ship-to-shore."

With those laudatory — and not altogether excessive — words, Charles Kuralt begins his introduction to a new volume entitled "Every Night at Five — Susan Stamberg's 'All Things Considered' Book" (Pantheon), which is, more or less, a compilation of 10 years of essays, interviews, reports from that extraordinary PBS radio program.

"All Things Considered" has won a fistful of awards, including the coveted Peabody, and Susan Stamberg has been its anchor woman from the outset. And she had wondered, stitching the book together, if good old Charlie Kuralt would write a foreword.

"Now I had heard it said about Charles Kuralt," Susan Stamberg was saying at lunch, as she laid waste to an order of broiled shark, "that he had said he wanted his 'CBS Sunday' program to be the 'All Things Considered' of television. Still, I was hesitant. I wrote to him in cautious double negatives — 'Dear Mr. Kuralt, I understand you are not unimpressed with our show and what you have heard has not displeased you' — and he said yes he'd be pleased to write the foreword."

It's a lovely piece of work, Kuralt's essay, recalling how he and his "On the Road" crew stopped once to get some cheese and apples in the hills of Virginia to accompany their listening to "All Things Considered." Kuralt finished his piece with this accolade to the show: "It has demonstrated that news programs don't have to be short and shallow. They can be long and deep, and as nourishing as apples and cheese."

Susan Stamberg's eyes are alight as she recalls those words. "As a thank-you for Charles Kuralt," she says, "I sent him two wheels of Vermont cheddar and a jar of apple butter."

Typically Stamberg, that gesture. Susan is warm, bright, funny, engaging, uncommonly well-informed, a shining light of public broadcasting. She is a trim 5 feet 9, an elevation that surprises people because on the air she doesn't sound tall.

She seems to be the kind of woman who isn't terribly preoccupied with fashion but she looked swell in her purple kurta, which is some kind of big shirt from India. She wore a cluster of fuchsias in her thickish forest of brown hair. She smokes a lot and probably wishes she didn't. She laughs easily and with great zest.

"My ambitions were always kind of varied," she is saying now. "I wanted to be Sarah Vaughan. Or maybe Jane Austen."

She plays jazz piano. "I can play five variations of 'Lullaby of Birdland,'" she says with pride. She majored in art in high school and English literature at Barnard College, but music always has been central to her life.

"I have this theory," she says, "that many of the first-class broadcasters must have had music in their backgrounds. You can feel it in their voice modulation, their timing, their rhythm."

In television, it is valuable; in radio, it is imperative, this sense of musicality. And Susan Stamberg assuredly is in possession of it in her interviews. Most of her interviews are conducted on the telephone. She prefers it that way.

"On the phone," she says, "I don't get distracted by someone's looks or by hair combed funnily. I can focus better on what's being said. People say that using the phone I miss the body language, the eye connection. Maybe they're right. But I can hear so much in people's voices. You can listen totally — really listen. But I do know that one thing is lacking in a phone interview."

"What's that?"

"You can't tell if you like the people," she said. "I'll interview someone like Isaac Asimov, the writer, and I'll know that I liked the interview. But I won't know if I liked him. For that the voice on the phone isn't enough."

ENTERTAINMENT

Just before "All Things Considered" goes on the air, Susan Stamberg puts on lipstick. It seems a curious thing to do, putting on lipstick for the unseeing radio audience. "Feminists know about this ritual of mine," she says, "and they have given me grief on it. They say makeup is a political statement. In my heart, yes, all right, I believe it, that if you've got honest wrinkles you don't hide them.

"But I remember a J.D. Salinger story and there's a kid in it who works on a radio show and his rule was, before going on the air he would always shine his shoes. Why? It's true that nobody can see you on radio but it's still like dressing up for company."

Dressing up for company. "It's what I did as a kid," Susan says. "I was an only child, a dreamy, fanciful child — and my companionship came mostly from books. And from the radio. I'd sit by the radio, listening, and I'd draw and draw and draw."

She said: "I still love to draw. On vacations, I don't take a camera. I take a sketch pad to the beach and I draw my husband always sitting there reading the paper and our son, Joshua, who's 12, lying on his stomach in the sand."

Susan smiled and said: "I'm 43. I'm having a marvelous time doing what I love to do and I never had any goals in my life. I just always did what I loved to do. I never had any models — if I have a model now it would be Studs Terkel, who has that magic, a quality of humanity that shines."

As interviewers, they do have much in common, Studs from Chicago, Susan from New York — they listen creatively. She has broadcast about 7,000 interviews in 10 years.

Jane Fonda shares her own recipe for 'pie of success'

By BARBARA HUSTON
Hearst Feature Service

SEATTLE — Jane Fonda passed through here the other day, leaving some thoughts in her wake.

She told her listeners at a seminar for women that rather than getting a piece of the pie of success, they should "rebake it" with a better recipe.

They gave her standing ovations before and after her speech and questioned her as though she were their personal friend.

"I loved you in 'On Golden Pond' and now I feel I have a new friend in you," one said. "But I was afraid to tell my mother I was coming here because she thinks you're a communist. Are you?"

The slim, vibrant Fonda laughed.

"To someone who had not seen the Vietnam War as a grotesque, immoral blemish on this nation, I can see that I would look commie," she answered.

THE AUDIENCE of well-dressed women, mostly under 35 and mostly professional, cheered.

Someone asked what it was like, working with Katharine Hepburn.

"Awesome."

She said she is overjoyed about the new anti-nuclear movement and believes, as did the late Albert Einstein, that the issue of atomic energy will be solved in the village squares.

Her 13-year-old daughter and 8-year-old son are the biggest successes of her life, she said.

THE WEALTHY 45-year-old daughter of Henry Fonda says she sits by her ailing father's bed a lot now and asks herself what success really is.

"Most people say success is fame and money," Fonda said. "But I grew up with that and I know, first-hand, that's not it. The American Dream brings alienation, no matter how wealthy you are.

"Women are told real success is doing what men do. But more and more important men are questioning the psychic, spiritual and emotional sacrifices they made to succeed.

"I have women friends way up there in the American male world. I'm afraid it may be shriveling their womanness. They can't change the terms when they're seeking a piece of the pie.

"But many men are finding the pie has hurt them. Maybe it should be changed. In 'The Conflict of Change,' Louis Harris says women have always led pacifist, civil liberties and other humane movements.

"Our goal can be to rebake the pie. We have a better recipe."

THOUGH THE women cheered, Fonda said women sometimes feel she's separated from them because she's Jane Fonda and she's had lots of privileges. But she doesn't feel different, she said.

She grew up never having fun at parties, never being able to make small talk in the 1950s, when engagement rings and Bride magazine were college majors and the only thing women were supposed to change was diapers and place-settings. She was a misfit.

Then Lee Strasberg told her she could act. She had spent 10 misfit years wearing false eyelashes, falsies and blonde hair in "stupid" movies before she ran away to Europe and married Roger Vadim.

"You're not like a woman," Vadim's friends told her when she never got mad at his escapades. "At 30 I was a 'raisin of wrath,' feeling 50 years old, angry, bored, half asleep, while symbolizing The American Dress in 'Barbarella.'"

THE SECOND turning point in her life belatedly came with admiration of risk-taking Vietnam War protesters and becoming involved in the movement.

She discovered one can't do anything important working alone. She discovered something beyond herself, something bigger than self-centeredness.

"I was superficial when I was doing superficial things," Fonda said. "Later I deepened, doing work I love. That's why work is important. That's why my movies focus on work."

Weekend's movies reflect diverse attitudes

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A man with dreams is spiritually free, even in a Soviet prison camp in Siberia. But a 17-year-old New Yorker with limited vision and aspirations can be his own jailer.

These are different outlooks from two upcoming movies.

One, CBS' "Coming Out of the Ice" Sunday night, dramatizes the true story of Victor Herman, an American whose dream of returning to his homeland sustains him through nearly two decades of torture, starvation and imprisonment in the Soviet Union during Stalin's purges.

The other, tonight's "Dreams Don't Die" on ABC, looks at an inner-city kid whose perception of the world causes him to lower his sights and restrict his immense artistic talent to subway graffiti.

Ike Eisenmann plays Danny Baker, who gets his kicks and self-worth from being the best subway scribbler in Brooklyn. His young girl friend, Teresa (Trini Alvarado of "Rich Kids" and "Times Square") wants more for both of them.

For that reason, she is vulnerable to the material handouts from a creepy 15-year-old drug pusher. Capt. Kirk (Israel Juarbe) has a chauffeured limousine and a vile arrogance because he's immune from the law until he's 16. The young Teresa is his hedge against bittersweet 16.

Danny's cartoon world is jarred when a cop catches him defacing a subway. Charlie Banks (Paul Winfield) is looking for drug dealers, so he just warns Danny and suggests he go to art school. But Danny considers art institutions "just another version of the law. Graffiti is pure; it's lawless," he says.

Banks takes Danny and Teresa to the Guggenheim Museum and their first visit to Manhattan, which Banks describes as the "land of surprises." Danny realizes that there could be conventional outlets for his gifts, gaining inspiration from the French graffiti artist, Jean Dubuffet.

But from this point, the movie takes an unreal turn, with Danny and Teresa hatching a plot to nail Capt. Kirk. When the focus was on Danny and the backdrop the cruel inner city, there was a simple, attractive story to tell, with the spirited young actors and stark New York locations moving it along.

When Danny and Teresa turn into superheroes and drugs dominate the plot, "Dreams Don't Die" becomes cliche-filled and tackles more than it can handle.

In a sense, "Coming Out of the Ice" doesn't try enough. Victor Herman's will to live is depicted graphically through torture scenes, his survival on rats and his imprisonment in underground cages. During a brief period of freedom, he shaves a full beard and is shocked because he thought he was younger.

But, dramatically, we're robbed of the legitimate Hollywood ending: his return home. After he's survived 20 years of prison and exile in 1955, the film abruptly ends. An unfulfilling postscript explains that Herman battled Soviet bureaucracy and finally returned to the United States in 1976.

"Coming Out of the Ice" begins with Herman, age 16, arriving in Russia in 1931 with a group of American automobile workers. He's a great athlete who gains attention by breaking the world's parachute jump record in 1934.

But he won't sign Soviet citizenship papers, an apparent affront to Stalin, and is later arrested for alleged "counterrevolutionary activities." Thus begins the account of man's inhumanity to one man.

John Savage ("Hair," "Inside Moves") is a strong, stoic victim. Country-and-western star Willie Nelson is quite natural as Herman's philosophizing friend and the symbolic "good man."

Joblessness 'all the rage' in Hollywood

By PAUL WILNER
Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES — The dream factory turns out only nightmares nowadays for Spencer Deverill, a prominent art director — he's worked on "Heaven's Gate," "Hello, Dolly" and "The Sand Pebbles" — who's joined the growing ranks of the jobless in Hollywood.

Between 11,000 and 12,000 members of the International Alliance of Theater and Stage Employees' 23,000 members are now out of work, and the immediate future does not look any better, according to IATSE spokeman Mac St. Johns.

"As far as we can determine, unemployment in Hollywood today is the worst it's been in 25 years, with the possible exception of the actors strike," St. Johns said gloomily. "Unemployment within the industry has been high for nearly two years. Now it's increasing — it's not getting better, I can tell you that."

Union officials attribute the joblessness to the faltering economy, high interest rates that discourage investors from making films, the lower costs of "runaway productions" in foreign countries and the uncertainties of cable television.

Whatever the reasons, the impact is staggering: unemployment rates of 85 to 90 percent in the 1,000 member electricians' union, 50 percent in the set designers' local and an overall malaise that has left many frustrated and pursuing other job options.

The problem ranges from the top of the industry, where well-known names vie for prestigious, lucrative assignments, to trade unions, whose membership performs uncelebrated tasks — electrician, grip, gaffer — which also are essential to complete the products ultimately seen on the silver screen.

Deverill, a white-haired, aristocratic-sounding man who worked his way up from set designer to art director, takes a philosophical line about the industry's problems, blaming them on the lack of "quality" productions, such as British television's "Brideshead Revisited" and "I, Claudius."

"Is unemployment related to high interest rates?" he asked. "Or is it just that we don't make good movies anymore?"

Elizabeth Morgan, manager of the Hollywood state unemployment office, said April's volume of initial claims filed was "the largest we've had in recent years.

"Last month about 6,800 initial claims were filed, compared to 4,500 during the same month in 1981 and 5,000 for April 1980," Morgan said. Between 40 and 50 percent of the claims filed in her office come from the entertainment industry.

A spot-check of the lines in front of her office was like a visit to the William Morris Agency.

Among those on line was Gary Schwartz, a young actor whose last role was as Ruka, the fire carrier in "Quest for Fire," last June, said he's been barely scraping by ever since.

Celts poised for 2nd miracle

Fourth quarter rally evens series at 3 games

By RALPH BERNSTEIN
AP Sports Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Larry Bird and Robert Parish triggered a 12-point rally in the fourth-quarter and the Boston defense allowed only 27 points in the second half as the Celtics defeated the Philadelphia 76ers 88-75 Friday night and sent the National Basketball Association's Eastern Conference championship series to a deciding seventh game.

THE CELTICS, in regaining the homecourt advantage they lost in the second game of the series, now have a chance to produce a "miracle" comeback against Philadelphia for the second straight year.

In last season's Eastern final, Boston trailed 3-1 in the best-of-seven series and won the next three games to eliminate the stunned 76ers. They can do it again Sunday in Boston.

Only four teams in NBA history have come back to win a seven-game playoff series after trailing 3-1.

Kevin McHale, the Celtics 6-foot-10 second-year man from Minnesota, led Boston with 17 points, while Bird and Parish each had 14 and Gerald Henderson 13.

Julius Erving's 24 points led the 76ers, who in the first period had a 15-point lead and led until Parish hit the first of two consecutive turnaround jumpers that sent Boston ahead 69-67 with 7:58 left.

The 76ers led 67-61 with 9:46 left when McHale collected a pair of free throws to start Boston's 12-point winning rally.

BIRD THEN scored a field goal followed by a pair of free throws by Henderson that tied the score. Then came Parish's two jumpers and the Celtics never trailed again.

Philadelphia didn't score a field goal, with the exception of two goaltending calls, in the final 17 minutes. The 76ers had 11 points in the final quarter, nine of them on free throws.

Despite its inability to put the ball in the hoop, Philadelphia came within a point, 74-73, on a pair of free throws by Erving with 4:23 left. But Boston outscored the 76ers 14-2 until the final buzzer to send a unbelieving sellout crowd of 18,364 home wondering if the 76ers were about to choke.

The 76ers, with Erving and Bobby Jones each scoring eight points, led 26-20 after one period.

Philadelphia built a 25-10 lead with 3:42 left, but Boston rallied with a 10-1 spurt to slash its deficit to six.

Bird, with a field goal and a pair of free throws, collected the last four Celtics' points, his only scoring of the period.

The Celtics, as they did in Wednesday's 29-point, fifth-game blowout in Boston, used Parish in the high post, and he led the Celtics with eight points in the first quarter.

THE 76ers scored eight of the first 10 second-quarter points for a 34-22 lead with 9:14 left.

In a game of scoring spurts, the Celtics came back with 10 straight and 12-of-14 to come within 36-34 with 5:20 remaining.

Then, the 76ers pulled away again on a 10-0 spurt. When Maurice Cheeks scored at 3:05, Philadelphia led 46-34.

But Boston outscored the Sixers 8-2 in the final 2:49 to trail 48-42 at halftime.

Cheeks with eight and Erving's six were second-quarter highs for Philadelphia, while substitute Chris Ford collected eight points for Boston.

AP Laserphoto

Boston Celtics Danny Ainge tries in vain to save the ball from Philadelphia's Andrew Toney Friday in a playoff game in Philadelphia. The Celtics dumped the 76ers 88-75 to knot the best-of-seven series at three games each. The seventh and deciding game will be played Sunday in Philadelphia.

Rains wash out much of Indy practice

By STEVE HERMAN
AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Rain pelted the Indianapolis Motor Speedway on Friday, washing out much of the final full day of practice for the May 30 Indy 500 and sending crews inside their Gasoline Alley garages for last-minute tuneups before Saturday's qualifications.

The track did not open for practice until late in the afternoon, then the two-hour session was interrupted by a fourth-turn crash by Greg Leffler. He was not injured, but his race car suffered moderate damage to the right side.

LEFFLER, WHO had earlier turned a lap at more than 193 mph, spun 460 feet into the fourth-turn wall. The car slid 100 feet along the wall, then spun 280 feet into the infield. He was checked out at the Speedway hospital and released.

In all, 38 cars took practice laps on Friday, including seven that already had qualified.

The top lap speeds during the limited practice session were by second-year drivers Mike Chandler, who pushed his Chevy-powered Eagle to 197.238 mph, and Tony Bettenhausen, who reached 197.152 in his March-Cosworth.

Jerry Sneva practiced at better than 196 mph, and former winner Mario Andretti — who qualified last week — took his backup car out for a lap at 194.384.

Led by pole-position winner Rick Mears' track record four-lap average of 207.004 mph, 22 of the 33 starting spots were filled during the first two days of time trials last weekend.

A brief practice period is scheduled Saturday morning, followed by the noon EDT start of qualifications for the final 11 spots. The final session of qualifications is set for Sunday. Once all 33 spots are filled, the process of "bumping" slower cars one-by-one from the lineup by faster machines will begin.

So far, a record eight qualifiers have topped 200 mph and the slowest among the 22 already qualified is just under 194.

EXCEPT FOR defending champion Bobby Unser, who announced Friday morning that he would pass up Indy after 19 consecutive starts in order to devote all his energy as team manager for Josele Garza, all of the 500's former winners who are still active in racing have already qualified.

Besides Mears, the 1979 winner, four-time champion A.J. Foyt qualified last week on the outside of the front row; Andretti and Gordon Johncock earned second-row starts; three-time winner Johnny Rutherford qualified in the fourth row; and three-time champ Al Unser, Bobby's younger brother, qualified in the sixth row.

Garza pushed his best practice lap to 194.510 mph on Friday.

The first driver scheduled to make a qualification attempt on Saturday is 22-year-old Dale Whittington, the youngest entrant for this year's race and the third of a trio of brothers who appear sure to make Speedway history.

Whittington's two older brothers, Don, 36, and Bill, 32, qualified last week. If Dale qualifies — and it's a pretty good bet he will, based on Thursday's practice speed at nearly 199 mph — the Whittingtons would become the first brother trio ever in the same Indy race.

The speed to beat, the slowest among the first 22 qualifiers, is 193.819 mph, recorded last week by rookie Chip Mead. Through this past week's practice, however, only five other drivers whose cars are still un-qualified had topped that speed.

Following Dale Whittington's 198.807 were practice laps of 195.397 by rookie Jim Hickman, 195.312 by Pete Halsmer, 194.552 by Leffler and 194.258 by Chet Fillip.

AMONG OTHER drivers seeking starting spots are veterans Jim McElreath, 54, the oldest driver ever to compete at Indy; Gary Bettenhausen and Bill Vukovich, both of whose fathers were killed at the Speedway

Mother Nature 3, Midland 0

Just mention the Midland Cubs and the crops get a drink — in Tulsa, in Little Rock, in Midland...

"The farmers just have to love this team," said Midland pitcher Jon Perlman after the Cubs were rained out for the third consecutive night — two in Arkansas and the one scheduled for Cubs Stadium Friday.

THE CUBS lost two games in Arkansas Tuesday and Wednesday due to the rain and had a travel day Thursday and more rain in Midland Friday. The Cubs also brought rain in Tulsa last week, but were able to get all five games of that series in.

So if the Cubs can shake off the rain drops long enough, they will host the Tulsa Drillers in a twinbill today at 6 p.m.

The weatherman said it was supposed to be a beautiful weekend, but someone forgot to tell him that the Cubs were scheduled to be home this week. The Cubs have brought rain in every homestand this year.

"At least we are getting a chance to check out the night life," said Cub first baseman Carmelo Martinez.

Perlman, who captured a victory the last time the Cubs played last Monday against Arkansas, and Martinez are taking the rainouts in stride, but it is driving Cub manager Brian Murphy batty.

"I would really liked to have played a game tonight. We got less than two innings in against Arkansas Tuesday and about the same on Wednesday. This is getting a little old, but we felt like we would be banging our heads against the wall to try to start this one."

MIDLAND AND Arkansas were tied at 0-0 Tuesday when the rain came and Arkansas held a 3-2 lead when the rain came on Wednesday.

The Cubs will be loaded with double dips this homestand. Two twinbills are already scheduled against Arkansas, the team that follows Tulsa to Midland. The Arkansas-Midland series will be a seven-game set since Midland does not go back to Arkansas this year.

If the Cubs win the second game of tonight's doubleheader, Taco Bell will issue certificates for a free burrito and 32 ounce soft drink to the fans leaving the stadium.

MURPHY WILL send Doug Welenc and Mike King against the Drillers tonight while Tulsa manager Tom Burgess will go with Jim Gideon and Al Lachowicz. Welenc is 3-3 on the year with a superb 2.92 ERA while King is 1-4. Gideon, who has been out of baseball for three years after being a No. 1 draft pick by the Texas Rangers, is trying to make a comeback in the Ranger system, but is 0-3 with an ERA of over eight. Lachowicz is 3-3 for the season.

The Cubs won three of five games against the Drillers on the recent road trip, but Tulsa won only one of five games against El Paso this week. Midland would like to get fat on Tulsa and Arkansas in this homestand. Both of the opponents are in the lower part of the Texas League East standings.

But win or lose, the Cubs would like to see at least one rainbow before webs take over the fingers and toes.

Sylvia Lewis and Roger Gose work on their karate techniques in preperation for the United States Midwest Karate Championships at Midland College starting today.

Karate championships kick off today at MC

If you'd like to see somebody else kicked in the head, try the United States Midwest Karate championships as a spectator, not a contestant. Of course, if you like to experience it first hand as a contestant, the entry fee is only $20.

The third annual tourney, drawing contestants from Colorado, Louisiana, New Mexico and nexas, begins "breaking bricks" with the hands with eliminations at noon Saturday at the Midland College gym. The tournament director is James Bramlett, MC's director of Community Services.

Finals and Masters demonstrations begin at 7 p.m.

The open karate competition will have Black Belt division, light and heavy; Red/Brown, Blue, Green and Orange/Yellow division. Also Women advanced, women beginners, juniors (13-16 advanced and beginners), Pee Wee (6-12 advanced and beginners).

A grand champion also will be crowned.

MC has offered karate classes for several years. They are taught by Lee Yo Sun, black belt master instructor. He is a native of Korea and has operated Tae Kwon Do karate schools in Midland and Odessa for five years. He also has taught in Korea and Europe.

"This tournament should bring together some of the finest karate specialists in the Southwest, as well as anumber of young students of the artial arts," Bramlett said.

Contestants will receive one point for a kick or punch to body and two points for a controlled kick. Contestants also will receive minus one point and risk diqualification for: 1. Bad attitude. 2. Stalling. 3. Three Warnings. 4. Face Punch. 5. Groin Kick. 6. Grabbing.

Little takes opening-day lead at Chrysler Classic

NEW ROCHELLE, N.Y. (AP) — South African Sally Little shot a 4-under-par 68 Friday for the opening-day lead in the Ladies Professional Golf Association $150,000 Chrysler-Plymouth Classic at the Wykagyl Country Club.

The 30-year-old golfer, winner of three events this year, started with a modest 1-under-par 35 on the front nine, then charged home with a 33 on the strength of four birdies. Little bogied the 17th hole when she hit a tree.

Amy Alcott, who had one tournament victory earlier this campaign and is No.3 on this year's money list with $85,593, is one stroke off the pace with a 69.

Donna Caponi, one of the LPGA's three millionaires, and Cathy Morse, only 50th on this year's money list, shared third place with 70s. Kathy Hite and Vicki Tabor follow with 71s.

Kathy Whitworth, who set an LPGA record with her 83rd career victory last week, is at 1-over-par 73. Nancy Lopez, back on the tour after a three-week absence to settle marital problems with Tim Melton, was at 75.

Little, who joined the tour in 1971 and now resides in Florida, said her improved game is partly due to a new contentment with life.

"I'm a lot happier with myself," explained Little. "Now, I have a chance to win every week as opposed to 2½ years ago when I was scared every time I went out on the course."

Nelson feels good in Atlanta golf tournament

ATLANTA (AP) — Larry Nelson had his goal in mind, and was pretty much on target halfway through the $300,000 Georgia-Pacific Atlanta Golf Classic.

"I told Jeff Thomsen what I had in mind was 24-under," Nelson said Friday after firing a 67 for an 11-under-par 133 total and a 1 shot edge over Scott Hoch.

"It would be a new tournament record," Nelson said, "and I figured it would win."

Nelson, the reigning PGA champion, said he feels good about his chances.

"It's kind of like you're waiting for something to happen," he said. "I didn't play very well today and shot 67. I hope that's an indication of things to come the next two days."

Hoch, currently No.6 on the PGA money list for this season, had posted his 67-134 before Nelson began his round on the 7,007-yard, par-72 Atlanta Country Club course.

Nelson said that being 4 down when he started could have a negative effect on a player "if you try to get it back in four holes.

"But I felt if I shot even par I'd be only 4 shots back," he said. "It was kind of a relaxing day."

Nelson moved into a house adjacent to the 18th fairway on this course three weeks ago.

"I'm a member, but I don't have a handicap yet," he said.

Nelson said one of the reasons he bought a home at ACC was because of this tournament. He said, however, he had been able to play only two rounds here before the start of the tournament.

Nelson appeared to be in position to turn it into a route when, while playing the back side first, he went to the 18th hole with a 10-under-par total.

But, he duckhooked his tee shot and took a bogey 6 and regained that shot on the first hole when he birdied from 20 feet. He took the lead by sinking a 7-footer on No.7.

Nelson's front side was an experience. He had two 1-foot birdies and also scored from 12, 35 and 10 feet. He bogeyed the 13th when he 3-putted from 45 feet and saved par from a bunker at No. 10.

"Everything happened on the back side," he said. "When I made the turn everybody left, and my game left, too."

Lanny Wadkins had a torrid 64 despite bogeying his first hole and was alone in third place at 136.

Three players were tied at 137 — Peter Jacobsen 69, Wayne Levi 68 and Roger Maltbie, who capped a 67 with an eagle 3 on the final hole.

Defending champion Tom Watson had a 70 and headed a quartet at 70 that also included first round co-leader Keith Fergus, who had a 72. Gibby Gilbert was in the group with a 69 and 1981 Canadian Open champion Peter Oosterhuis of Britain got there with a 71.

Big Spring dreams die with double loss

DENTON — Todd Carlisle's two-run homer in the fifth inning snapped a 1-1 deadlock and helped lift the Denton Broncos to a 4-1 victory over Big Spring in the first game of a doubleheader here Friday.

To remain alive in the Bi-District playoffs, Big Spring needed to win only one of the two games after posting a 6-0 win in the series opener in Big Spring Tuesday. But it wasn't to be as the Bronco pitcher Kevin Hooper threw a two-hit shutout at the Steers enroute to a 4-0 victory and a berth in the Regional playoffs.

THE STEERS only run of the game came from Tom Cudd who hit a solo home run in the second inning for a 1-0 lead. Denton tied the game in the fourth and used Carlisle's home run to lead the way to a three-run fifth inning.

Denton produced solo runs in the first and third innings of the second game but did the biggest damage in the second when the Broncos scored one run on a throwing error and got a second tally when Carlisle hit an RBI double.

With the two victories and the Bi-District title wrapped up, Denton increased its record to 18-6 on the season while District 5-5A champion Big Spring concluded its season with a 24-11 mark.

Denton will host Southwest High (Ft. Worth) when Regionals get underway on Tuesday and will conclude play with games in Ft. Worth on Thursday and Friday.

On the 5-5A All-District list, Big Spring dominated the picks with six receiving top honors. Blake Rosson was a double winner as he was selected for Most Valuable Player and First Team shortstop while Steers' coach Frank Ibarra was named Coach of the Year. Other Steers on the first team were pitcher Rubio, second baseman Marcus Arminderiz and outfielder James Walker.

MIDLAND HIGH placed the only local boy on the first team list with Tim Davis named Utility Infielder. MHS outfielder Hipolito Zarate was tagged for second team honors and Bulldog hurler Billy Miles and Midland Lee shortstop Barry Blackwell were picked for honorable mention.

Others selected for 5-5A first team honors are: Odessa High's Boyd Cowan for Sophomore of the Year; San Angelo's Zeke Barron, pitcher and Scott Duda first base; Abilene High's Scott Hamilton, first base; Chance Hall, third base; George Shannon, outfield; and Rick Womble, Utility Outfielder; and Abilene Cooper's Chuck Cathey, catcher; Billy Mitchell, outfielder; and Kurt Parker, designated hitter.

The Midland College tennis team will begin play in the National Junior College tennis tournament Tuesday in Ocala, Fla. Playing for the Chaparrals are: (front row) Tony Macken, Coach Leon Dulin and Barry King. (Back row) Luis Zavala, Andre Peters, Norm Weber and Monty Saul.

MC aims for national title

Midland College winds up its 1981-82 athletic season in Ocala, Fla., when the Chaparral men's tennis team makes its bid for the NJCAA team title starting Tuesday.

Coach Leon Dulin is sending a strong team into the tournament, a title they won back in 1978.

Tony Macken, Vancouver, who won the Region V No. 1 singles leads the Chaps' bid. Last year Macken won the No. 5 WJCC title and Macken then teamed up with his brother to win the 1981 Canada Games gold medal in doubles.

Barry King, a sophomore letterman from Rockford, Ill., plays No. 2 singles and won the WJCC and Region V titles this year after winning the No. 3 regional title last year.

Luis Zavala of Leon, Guanajuato, Mexico, plays No. 3 singles and teamed with Macken to win the No. 1 doubles in WJCC. Last year he won the No. 2 WJCC doubles.

Monty Saul from Austin Lyndon B. Johnson High is the No. 4 singles and combined with Saul to claim the conference and regional No. 2 doubles this spring.

Andre Peters, a transfer from Grayson County Community College, is the No. 5 singles player. He played for Plano High and now lives in Richardson. Norm Weber, freshman from Toronto, is the No. 6 singles player and plays No. 3 doubles with Peters.

"We know there's going to be a lot of competition at nationals this year," said Dulub, "New Mexico Military Institute finished ahead of us in both conference and regional standings and that's tough to deal with. But there are some good teams from Tyler, Texas, and Indian River and Miami-Dade of Florida.

"But we've prepared well and the players have had a week to concentrate on tennis since classes are now out. Certainly all of our players are capble of winning in their flights in singles and all three of our doubles teams can be tough."

The national championships are played in flights with six brackets of singles and three of doubles.

Als alive in CFL

TORONTO (AP) — The new Montreal football club can now proceed with the business of running the club operation, following a decision Friday by Justice Reeve of the Quebec Superior Court, the Canadian Football League announced.

Reeve maintained a motion presented by the CFL to permit the release of the seizure before judgment of the membership of Nelson Skalbania.

"The remaining legal impediments have now been removed, and the Canadian Football League has confirmed the membership of the Montreal Football Club and Company, Limited as a new member in the CFL," said CFL commissioner Jake Gaudaur. "It has also assigned to the new member all player contracts of players who were on the roster of the Montreal Alouette Football Club on May 14, 1982 except the contract of Vince Ferragamo."

Steinbrenner after Rockies

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner would neither confirm nor deny Friday he is interested in buying the financially troubled Colorado Rockies of the National Hockey League.

Meanwhile, Winnipeg Jets general manager John Ferguson said a $5 million payoff might persuade his NHL club to join the Smythe Division, a move that may clear the way for the Rockies to relocate at the new Meadowlands Arena in East Rutherford, N.J.

BUT FERGUSON said he doubted the Jets would be offered such a sum.

"Something like $5 million would change a lot of people's minds," he said. "It's not going to happen, I'm sure. But we fought long and hard to put ourselves in the Norris Division. If we move, we would have to be compensated first."

If the Rockies moved to New Jersey, the Smythe Division would be left with only four teams --Los Angeles Kings, Vancouver Canucks, Edmonton Oilers and Calgary Flames.

The Jets are against the move because extra travel would be involved. A realignment would have to be agreed upon before the Rockies could obtain approval for the move.

Yankees spokesman Irv Kaye said Steinbrenner was familiar with published reports that he is trying to purchase the Rockies. But Kaye said the Yankee owner specifically instructed his aides not to discuss the NHL situation.

TELEPHONE MESSAGES to Steinbrenner's offices in Florida were not returned.

"He has no comment," Kaye said.

Newsday, in a copyright story, said Steinbrenner's interest in buying the team may be delaying the league's efforts to solve the Rockies' problems.

The league's governors met for 19 hours earlier this week and appeared ready to approve the bid of Houston Astros owner John McMullen, a Steinbrenner business associate, to buy the team from owner Peter Gilbert.

Gilbert also refused to comment when asked if Steinbrenner was attempting to buy the team.

Steinbrenner met privately with Gilbert on Wednesday after the league meeting was adjourned, the published report said. The newspaper quoted Lou Nanne, general manager of the Minnesota North Stars as saying he "heard George's name mentioned so often while I was in New York."

THE DELAY of the sale to McMullen reportedly was fostered partly by Chicago Black Hawks president William Wirtz, the report said. Steinbrenner and Wirtz' father, Arthur, are directors of the Chicago Bulls of the National Basketball Association.

McMullen is a former director of the American Shipbuilding Co., of which Steinbrenner is president. He reportedly holds more shares in the company than Steinbrenner himself.

McMullen once owned six percent of the Yankees, but sold his shares before buying the Astros.

"There is nothing so limited as being a limited partner of George's," said McMullen, who lives minutes from the Meadowlands in Montclair, N.J.

Same old story; Rangers fall again

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Dennis Leonard and Dan Quisenberry combined on a four-hit shutout, and Amos Otis drove in a pair of runs as the Kansas City Royals handed the slumping Texas Rangers their 20th loss in 24 games Friday night, 3-0.

Leonard, 5-3, set down 19 of the 21 batters he faced but left the game with an injury after triggering an unusual double play in the seventh inning.

Mike Richardt opened the inning with a double, and Buddy Bell followed with a line smash off Leonard's pitching hand. The ball caromed in the air to second baseman Frank White for one out, but White, apparently unsure whether the ball had hit the ground, threw to first.

Kansas City first baseman Willie Aikens threw the ball back to second to double off Richardt, who had gone to third.

The Royals said Leonard was hit on the middle and index fingers of his right hand and was taken to a Kansas City hospital for X-rays.

The Royals got the only run they needed in the first off loser Frank Tanana, 1-6. George Brett drew a two-out walk and scored when Otis doubled to left.

White doubled with one out in the second and scored on Willie Wilson's single, and Otis drove in an eighth-inning run with a sacrifice fly.

Before the seventh, the only hit off Leonard was a fourth-inning single by George Wright. The Kansas City right-hander struck out two and walked none. Quisenberry pitched the final 21-3 innings for his 10th save.

Angels stop Tigers 9-7

DETROIT (AP) — Bobby Grich and Bob Boone each slugged two-run homers to lead the California Angels to a 9-7 victory over Detroit Friday night, ending the Tigers' winning streak at eight games.

Grich belted a 1-0 pitch from Detroit starter Pat Underwood, 2-2, into the lower right-field seats with Rod Carew aboard in the third inning. It was his fourth homer of the year. Boone's shot, his first of the season, came in the fourth after Tim Foli singled.

The Angels also got two in the first inning when Don Baylor doubled home Brian Downing and Carew, and they added three more in the fifth inning.

Chicago nips Tribe

CHICAGO (AP) — Bill Almon's tie-breaking double in the seventh inning Friday night gave the Chicago White Sox a 3-2 victory over the Cleveland Indians in a game cut short by heavy rain.

With one out in the seventh, Harold Baines drew a walk off reliever Dan Spillner and went to second on a wild pitch. After Jim Morrison flied out, Almon doubled down the right field line to score Baines moments before a downpour halted play.

Brewers pin Seattle

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Robin Yount singled in the go-ahead run, and Ted Simmons, hitless in his previous 21 at-bats, lined a two-run double in a three-run Milwaukee sixth inning as the Brewers defeated the Seattle Mariners 4-1 Friday night.

Rollie Fingers earned his ninth save by retiring the last seven batters in a row in relief of winner Bob McClure, 2-1, in a game delayed 1 hour, 36 minutes at the start because of rain. Fingers struck out five.

Orioles blank Blue Jays

TORONTO (AP) — Mike Flanagan combined with two relievers on a seven-hit shutout, and John Lowenstein homered to pace the Baltimore Orioles to a 3-0 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays Friday night.

Flanagan, 2-4, spaced five hits over seven innings and lifted his lifetime mark against the Blue Jays to 13-4 as Baltimore put together its first three-game winning streak of the season.

Flanagan gave up just one extra-base hit, a double by Garth Iorg in the sixth, and did not walk a batter before he was relieved by Tim Stoddard. Stoddard gave up a pair of hits before yielding to Tippy Martinez with one out in the ninth, and Martinez earned his third save.

Lowenstein drove in two of the Orioles' runs. In the third inning, he gave Baltimore a 2-0 lead with a solo home run off Jim Gott, 0-1. He tagged a 3-2 Gott fastball for a his eighth homer of the season.

Murcer's shot lifts Yanks

NEW YORK (AP) — Bobby Murcer's three-run pinch homer sparked a six-run sixth inning, and Oscar Gamble ripped a two-run shot in the second inning as the New York Yankees routed the Minnesota Twins 12-1 Friday night for their third straight victory.

Rookie Mike Patterson, called up from Columbus earlier in the day, homered on the first major-league pitch to him this season to give the Yankees their 12th run on 11 hits.

Rudy May, 1-2, scattered eight hits over seven innings for the win.

New York took a 3-0 lead in the first inning. Willie Randolph led off with a walk against Brad Havens, 1-2, and advanced to third on Dave Collins' single. Lou Piniella tripled into the right-field corner and continued home when first baseman Jesus Vega's relay to third was wild.

The Yankees made it 5-0 in the second on Gamble's third homer of the season after Butch Wynegar opened with a walk.

Homers highlight BoSox 8-7 win

BOSTON (AP) — Home runs by Jim Rice, Dwight Evans, and Carl Yastrzemski highlighted a 18-hit attack that boosted the Boston Red Sox to an 8-7 victory Friday night over the Oakland A's, who lost their fourth straight.

Boston, which has won three in a row, rallied from a 4-1 deficit and took the lead for good on Jerry Remy's single in the fourth inning.

Remy's hit drove in Glenn Hoffman and made the score 6-5. Hoffman had tripled in the tying run.

Tom Burgmeier, 2-0, picked up the win by pitching 31-3 innings in relief of starter Mike Torrez, and Mark Clear got his eighth save. Rick Langford, 3-6, gave up 14 hits and seven runs in 5 1-3 innings for the loss.

The A's went ahead in the first inning on Cliff Johnson's solo homer, his fourth, but Rice smacked his seventh homer to tie the score in the bottom of the inning.

Oakland struck for three runs in the second. Danny Goodwin singled and went to second on Davey Lopes' single. The runners advanced on a groundout and scored on Tony Phillip's single. Phillips scored on a double by Rickey Henderson.

Boston tied the score in the third on Evans' first homer of the season and Yastrzemski's seventh homer, a two-run shot.

In the fourth, Phillips singled in Heath, who had doubled, before Boston struck for the tying and go-ahead runs in the bottom of the inning.

Rich Gedman singled in a run to give Boston a 7-5 lead in the fifth before Heath cracked an RBI double in the sixth. Carney Lansford's sacrifice fly in the seventh restored Boston's two-run lead, but Heath drove in a run with a sacrifice fly in the eighth.

Bobby Unser sorry he's not racing Indy

By MIKE HARRIS
AP Motorsports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Defending champion Bobby Unser said Friday he will skip this year's Indianapolis 500 to fulfill an obligation he now wishes he hadn't made to be team manager for driver Josele Garza.

"It's the toughest thing I've done in 33 years of racing," said Unser, the first Indy winner in 24 years to miss the next year's race.

Unser, whose 19 Indy starts are second only to 25-year veteran A.J. Foyt, said he had joined the Garza team in disillusionment over the furor following his third Indy victory a year ago.

THE 48-year-old Unser appeared to choke back his emotions several times during a hastily assembled news conference at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway the day before the final weekend of qualifications for the May 30 race.

"There is a lot of sadness in Bobby Unser. I've waited too long," he said. "It's not fair to a car owner at this point to wait any longer for my decision. I'm just not going to run (here) this year."

Speculation had run high all month that Unser would jump into one of several backup cars available to him to make a qualifying attempt after the 23-year-old Garza was safely in the race. But Garza, last year's top Indy rookie, crashed during a practice session prior to last weekend's time trials and Unser spent most of this week testing the car.

"That put us a long way behind," Unser said. "Maybe that messed up any idea I had of driving right there. But I wasn't sure of it at that time.

"This does not mean I'm retired," he added. "It's just that I feel an obligation to the Garza team. I don't feel now that I'm ready to stop driving, but I have a commitment to Josele. I really have an open deal with them. I can do anything I want to, but I feel I have an obligation to run the team."

UNSER INDICATED he will drive in other championship car races this season after the Garza team is running smoothly.

"There's not any doubt about that," he said.

Unser said he had left the highly successful Penske Racing Team to take over the Garza operation because of the uproar over last year's race. If he had to do over again, he said Friday, he would make a different decision.

Unser beat Mario Andretti across the finish line last year only to be dropped to second the next day for passing cars illegally while returning to the track after a pit stop during a caution period.

Penske and Unser appealed the decision and a special U.S. Auto Club panel later ruled the penalty had been applied improperly. They restored Unser's victory and fined him $40,000 instead.

"If I had to make the decision (to become a team manager) today, it wouldn't be the same," Unser said. "Last year was a trying year for me, more trying than a lot of people realize. I was looking for something else. I started making decisions that weren't good ones."

"I'm a very strong person. But by the same token, it (the uproar over last year's race) wore down on me pretty hard. I never had any intention of retiring. ... I was a victim. Mario and I both were."

Penske replaced Unser with Kevin Cogan, and Rick Mears moved up to the No.1 spot on the team. Those two drivers put the new Penske PC-10 cars side-by-side on the front row for the 66th Indy race. Mears set a four-lap qualifying record of 207.004 mph.

"I'm just extremely sad I'm not driving," Unser said. "Penske came up with the best car he ever had in auto racing. If anyone has ever had salt rubbed in their wounds, I have.

"I'm gonna miss it (Indy) more than I thought I would. I've already missed it more than I thought I would."

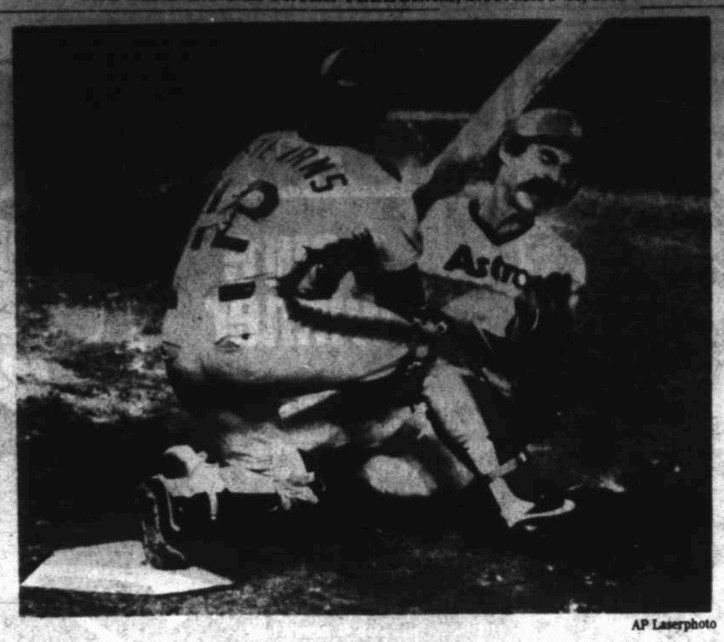

HE SAID Garza came to him after his accident and said, "Bobby, we're in trouble here. If you want to go run, you just go right ahead. It's OK with me. I know what you're going through."

Unser said, "I thought that showed an awful lot of class on his part. ... It showed me he is becoming a man. It was very touching and probably had a lot to do with making my decision."

Cubs effect hits Twin Cities Speedway

Twin Cities Speedway suffered from the Midland Cubs effect Friday night as rain forced the postponement of all races until Sunday at 2 p.m.

The track is located five miles east of Odessa on highway 80.

Braves clip Phils on error

ATLANTA (AP) — Chris Chambliss drove in the tying run then scored the game-winner on third baseman Mike Schmidt's error in the seventh inning to lead the Atlanta Braves past the Philadelphia Phillies 7-6 Friday night.

After trailing early by five runs, the Braves rallied for four runs in the fifth inning and another in the sixth before Claudell Washington led off the seventh with a single. He was sacrificed to second and scored on Chambliss' single to tie the game 6-6.

Sutton wins 7th game

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston's Don Sutton scattered six New York hits in eight innings and became the first National League pitcher to win seven games this year in a 5-1 victory over the Mets Friday night.

Sutton, 7-1, struck out seven and walked three in posting his fifth straight victory against New York. Frank LaCorte pitched the ninth inning for the Astros.

Danny Heep and Phil Garner hit consecutive doubles off loser Mike Scott, 3-3, to give Houston a 1-0 lead in the second inning.

Attempting to sell exams gets 2 CU gridders booted

University of Colorado football players Mark Morgan and Lee Dudick have been permanently expelled from the school for allegedly attempting to sell copies of final exams. Attorneys for the two have said they plan to appeal the decision...

The Cleveland Browns said Friday they have traded starting outside linebacker Don Goode to the Oakland Raiders for future draft considerations. Chip Banks, the Browns' first-round draft choice in the recent college draft, will inherit the starting role, according to a team spokesman...

The Kansas City Cheifs signed 1982 draft choices Del Thompson, Texas-El Paso; Durwood Roquemore, Texas A&I and Greg Smith, Kansas...

Champion powerboat racer David Albert and his throttleman were killed here when their 38-foot experimental racing boat flipped during a high-speed practice run on the St. Lucie River, officials said Friday...

Sun Belt Conference faculty representatives Friday agreed with the league's athletic directors that the conference should adopt a 19-foot three-point field goal for the 1982-83 basketball season. The faculty representatives also agreed to continue use of the 45-second shot clock, a fixture for Sun Belt teams for the last four seasons...

IS IT BUNK...

That newspaper readers are Something Special?

NOT AT ALL!

But don't take

Our word for it...

TAKE THE WORD OF

Dr. S.S. Talbert, Chairman, Journalism Department, University of Mississipi.

Here are his findings after considerable research:

WHO IS THE READER OF NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING?

- He is likely to be more intelligent and more literate than people who respond to other advertising.
- He is likely to have more money to spend than other people.
- She is over 80% of the women about to go grocery shopping.
- He is nearly every man considering the purchase of any major appliance.
- If she is older she looks for advice on foods, sewing and parties.
- If she is a teenager, she sets the pace in clothing attire.
- The newspaper reader is someone looking for a house to rent, or someone trying to find renters for his house.
- He or she is the whole community with unsatisfied wants and needs.

BECAUSE NEWSPAPER READERS

ARE BETTER SALES PROSPECTS

Yes, Newspaper Advertising

U.S. SAVINGS BONDS

a sure winner

For every gambler who gets rich on the horses, there are thousands who end up with nothing. That's why so many people look for something safe, like U.S. Savings Bonds.

Issued by the Government, nothing's safer than Bonds.

You'll never make a fortune. But you'll never lose one, either.

PATIO SALE

Check your attic, basement, garage and closets for good, but no-longer-used items — furniture, tools, ... the list goes on and on. Every item should be priced, of course. You may want to combine your sale with a friend or neighbor. Choose your days, get your signs ready and place your ad in the Classified section. Your ad should list a few key items, give the date, time, and good directions.

A friendly Classified Ad-Visor will help you word your Garage Sale ad for maximum results.
