Pampa Automobile Show Is Enjoyed by Thousands

DEALERS WELL PLEASED WITH INITIAL EVENT

Sharp Building Filled From Opening to Close

SAM ANDERSON IS BEST FIDDLER

Entertainment Is enjoyed by People of Wide District

Delighted over the remarkable success of the two-day event, Pampa automobile dealers late last night congratulated themselves that their first auto show had been one of the best ever held in this section. Thousands attended, and interest was high throughout.

Visitors from other cities declared the show without a superior in the Panhandle. Entertainment added to the enjoyment of the occasion.

Borgers dealers and the Borgers Herald will open a similar event tomorrow. It will last through Tuesday.

Automobile dealers and representatives of the Pampa Daily News held a get-together meeting in the Schneider hotel December 30 and decided to hold an automobile show in January. A temporary Automobile Dealers association was organized, with T. F. Smalling as president and T. K. Underwood as secretary.

Sharp Offered Building Committees were appointed to make arrangements for the first automobile show to be held in Pampa. Chas. H. Sharp, well-known local contractor, attended the first meeting and offered the local dealers the use of his large new building on North Somerville street. His offer was accepted and arrangements were made to hold the big affair.

As arrangements progressed, local accessory men were asked to take part in the show, while the entertainment committee with Henry Thut as chairman was active in arranging entertainment for the association guests.

Working harmoniously, the dealers and the Daily News advertised the show and sent a caravan of new automobiles on a 200-mile trip through neighboring towns.

Fiddlers Interested All the oldtime fiddlers in the community were notified that a fiddlers contest would be held on the opening night and interest was keen. The program committee also arranged to have an orchestra in attendance and to have special attractions.

The ladies of the Methodist church took a booth in the building to serve lunches of sandwiches, cake and coffee. The G. C. Malone Furniture company equipped a rest room in one corner of the large building. The Black Aces, a local orchestra, was hired to furnish music during the entire show.

Mr. Sharp had his building ready Thursday morning before the show, and an army of decorators and cleaners was on the job until the grand opening Friday at 1 p. m.

Gwin Makes Speech Pampa's first automobile show was officially opened by T. M. Smalling, president of the Automobile Dealers association, who in a few words welcomed the public to the show. In the absence of Mayor T. D. Hobart, City Manager F. M. Gwin responded on behalf of the residents of Pampa Gray county and all who attended the show.

Ten local automobile dealers and several local accessory men had their booths beautifully decorated and

NIAGARA FALLS FROZEN OVER

Roar Is Stilled by Zero Weather of Cold Wave

(By Associated Press) CHICAGO, Jan. 28.—A cub-zero cold snap which descended on Chicago today was blamed for the deaths of three men and one woman, while three other persons were taken to hospitals suffering from the cold.

The official weather reading here was 2 degrees below zero, but unofficial readings showed 10 degrees below in the suburbs.

NIAGARA FALLS, Jan. 28.—With ice piling up in Niagara river above the falls and blocking off the flow of water, indications point to complete freezing over of the cataracts if the present cold weather continues.

The great mass of rushing waters plunging over the brink have already been reduced to small, indifferent streams, almost entirely silencing the usual deep roar of the falls.

Texas Woman Held on Her Resemblance to Frances Smith

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Jan. 28.—A young woman who gave her name as Mrs. Florence Gellott was released today to continue her journey to visit her parents in Cisco. Officers detained her yesterday because of her remarkable resemblance to Miss Frances Smith, St. John, Northampton, Mass., college student for whom a reward of $10,000 has been offered.

Poll Tax Mass Meeting Called for Monday; An Election Expected Soon

With indications pointing to the immediate calling of a county seat election, local people will renew their efforts tomorrow for a whirlwind close of the "Pay Your Poll Tax" campaign.

A final mass meeting will be held at 7:45 p. m., tomorrow in the Chamber of Commerce auditorium, and plans laid for intensive work during the two remaining days of the tax-paying period. Everyone is invited to attend.

Five hundred more poll taxes must be paid in the Pampa community to assure the removal of the county seat to this city, and with only two days to go, the crucial period has arrived. Heavy canvassing already has been done, and the delinquent and elusive prospective voters must be sought out by a very large number of workers.

All over the county the proponents and opponents of the county seat removal issue are at work, and it is likely that the matter will be settled in an election to be held within the next 40 days.

The records show that McLean started the removal question in 1905. Now Pampa wishes the county seat moved out of its present isolated location, and McLean is expected to oppose removal with every resource.

Gray County State Bank Increases Its Stock to $50,000

Increasing of the capital stock of the Gray County State bank from $25,000 to $50,000 was announced yesterday.

This expansion of the business is in keeping with its very rapid growth, and will enable it to serve its patrons better. There also is a $7,000 surplus of undivided profits at this time. The bank's total assets are the largest in its history, and for more than a year no official statement has failed to show a substantial increase.

Poll Tax Drive Outlined at Mass Meeting at McLean

(Special to the News) McLEAN, Jan. 28.—Nine visitors from LeFors joined a number of local men here Thursday in a mass meeting held to discuss poll taxes and the county seat election expected to be held soon.

President W. E. Bogan of the Chamber of Commerce called the meeting to order, and after a lengthy discussion he appointed seven team captains to work in a poll tax campaign.

It was brought out that the amendment making an election possible every two years was secured with the help of Representative Dewey Young.

Boggs Won't Run for Governor, San Angelo Club Dies

(By Associated Press) SAN ANGELO, Jan. 28.—A Boggs for Governor club organized here two weeks ago was advised today by Joe Boggs, the man it was boosting, that he was not a candidate at this time. However, the door was left open for him to become a candidate later. Boggs is said to have decided to withhold his announcement since the entrance of Judge L. J. Wardlow into the campaign.

Conquest Drives Organized Here at Rally Friday

More than 200 persons enjoyed the messages brought Friday in the Conquest campaign rally at the First Baptist church. Many delegates came from other Baptist congregations of this section.

Dr. F. S. Groner of Dallas and the Rev. G. L. Yates of Amarillo were the prominent speakers in the morning session. Dr. Groner was in charge of organizing the drives in the various communities.

During the afternoon, Mrs. J. H. Weatherby of Hubbard City addressed the B. Y. P. U. and the Sunday School teachers, while Prof. L. A. Myers of Fort Worth addressed the business meeting. The Rev. W. H. Harrison, pastor of the Baptist church at Canadian, was chosen as association organizer.

The drive, which commences today, is to last until March 15. The state objective is $2,000,000, of which the local district is to raise a quota.

Friday evening the Rev. E. G. Pennington of Miami addressed a large gathering at the church, and Dr. J. E. Nunn of Amarillo told of the activities and needs of Wayland college, of Plainview.

The fund, which the Texas Baptists are endeavoring to secure, is for the school and college debts which amount to $2,000,000.

Delegates were present from Shamrock, McLean, Miami, Canadian, Higgins, White Deer, Perryton, and Amarillo.

McCamey Fire Leaves One Dead; Damage $100,000

(By Associated Press) McCAMEY, Jan. 28.—Subsiding within a few hours after it flared up, one of the most spectacular fires in the history of Texas oil fields had passed today, leaving a record of one dead and five slightly injured and damages estimated at approximately $100,000.

Starting with a terrific explosion heard for miles when a spark presumably ignited gas in the 3,000-barrel tank which Fred Hendricks, a chemist, was inspecting, the fire yesterday destroyed the contents of twelve tanks. These were filled for the most part with gasoline on the property of the Humble Oil company, and for a time the flames threatened to sweep the entire refinery.

Hendricks' body was seen hurling through the air as the explosion sounded, and hours afterward had not been recovered. Five McCamey residents, including R. X. Cook, superintendent of the refinery, sustained slight injuries in fighting the flames.

Mrs. Chas. C. Cook is visiting in Dallas this week.

Miss Ruby Williams of Panhandle visited friends here yesterday.

Mrs. Sunday, Jr.

Mrs. Billy Sunday, Jr., former wife of the evangelist's son, is named by Mrs. Olive Day in a divorce petition as being too friendly with her husband, George Day, Los Angeles policeman. Mrs. Sunday, who denies it, is shown above.

Cotton Prices Off as Liverpool Slump Affects the Prices

(By Associated Press) NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 28.—Cotton prices made new lows for the present movement and for the season on the local exchange today under pressure of liquidation and selling inspired by a slump in Liverpool.

At the lowest, prices showed losses of nearly $2.50 a bale, or approximately $4.50 a bale below Thursday's close.

GUSHERS BRING TOTAL TOWARD OLD HIGH PEAK

Daily Average Is Up to 17,455 Barrels This Week

GUERNSEY TEST SHOT SATURDAY

Responds With Flow But Bridges—No. 2 Drilling

Under the impulse given by two new Bowers pool gushers—the Texas No. 1 Bowers and the Gulf No. 2 Bowers—Gray county production this week gained 2,020 barrels daily to reach the total of 17,455 barrels.

The newest gusher, the Danziger No. 5 Jackson, is flowing 3,500 barrels daily, but it came in too late to be included in this week's totals. M. O. Danziger expects to drill in No. 8 Jackson, section 88, Monday and this well added to the No. 5 should increase still more the total for next week.

Production of other counties: Carson, 7,530 barrels daily, gain of 195 barrels.

Hutchinson, 49,415 barrels daily, loss of 2,325 barrels.

Moore, no production.

Potter, 30 barrels.

Wheeler, 1,275 barrels daily, gain of 45 barrels.

A 300-quart shot was used Saturday in the Guernsey Oil company's No. 1 McKinney in section 163, block 3, about four miles west of Pampa. After the shot the oil commenced to flow, but the hole bridged and now is being cleaned out.

The shot was placed from 3,170 to 3,300 feet and went off at 1:45 p. m. Oil is still spraying through the bridge.

The Guernsey Oil company's No. 2, McKinney in section 163, block 3, is drilling ahead at 2,225 feet after running the 8-inch casing. Up to this time the well has been drilled at record speed.

THE STORY THUS FAR

A scream had come from Margaret Odell's apartment. The man who had just left rushed back to her room and knocked. "She answered," said Jessup, "and told him everything was all right and to go home." Earlier in the evening, said Spively, another man had called for the "Canary," but had been told she was out. He satisfied himself by knocking at her door and then leaving. The next morning the strangled body of Margaret Odell was found in her apartment. The side door to the alley was bolted on the inside; the murderer must have left the front way. Both phone operators said no one other than the men they mentioned had called. "But a man's voice answered from her apartment when someone phoned about a quarter to twelve," said Jessup.

CHAPTER XI

Markham, clearly annoyed at the interruption, cut in sharply with a demand for the operator to proceed with his description.

"He wore his hair smoothed down," Spively continued, "and you could see it was kind of long; but it was cut in the latest style. And he had a small waxed mustache; and there was a big carnation in the lapel of his coat, and he had on chambray gloves."

"My word!" murmured Vance.

"A gigolo!" Markham, with the incubus of the night clubs riding him heavily, frowned and took a deep breath. Vance's observation evidently had launched him on an unpleasant train of thought.

"Was this man short or tall?" he asked next.

"He wasn't so tall—about my height," Spively explained. "And he was sort of thin."

There was an easily recognizable undercurrent of admiration in his tone, and I felt that this youthful telephone operator had seen in Miss Odell's caller a certain physical and sartorial ideal.

This palpable admiration, coupled with the somewhat outre clothes affected by the youth, permitted us to read between the lines of his remarks a fairly accurate description of the man who had unsuccessfully rung the dead girl's bell at half past nine the night before.

When Spively had been dismissed, Markham rose and strode about the room, his head enveloped in a cloud of cigar smoke, while Heath sat stolidly watching him, his brows knit.

Vance stood up and stretched himself.

"The absorbin' problem, it would seem, remains in statu quo," he remarked airily. "How, oh how, did the fair Margaret's executioner get it?" "You know, Mr. Markham," rumbled Heath sententiously, "I've been thinking that the fellow may have come here earlier in the afternoon—say, before that side door was locked. Odell herself may have let him in and hidden him when the other men came to take her to dinner."

"It looks that way," Markham admitted. "Bring the maid in here again, and we'll see what we can find out."

When the woman had been brought in, Markham questioned her as to her actions during the afternoon, and learned that she had gone out at about four to do some shopping, and had returned about half past five.

"Did Miss Odell have any visitor with her when you got back?" "No, sir," was the prompt answer. "She was alone."

"Did she mention that anyone had called?"

"No, sir," continued Markham, "could anyone have been hidden in this apartment when you went home at seven?"

The maid was frankly astonished, and even a little horrified.

"Where could anyone hide?" she asked, looking round the apartment.

"There are several possible places," Markham suggested: "in the bathroom, in one of the clothes-closets, under the bed, behind the window draperies."

The woman shook her head dein that closet before I left."

"And you are absolutely certain," reiterated Markham, "that no one could have hidden anywhere in these rooms at the time you went home?"

"Absolutely, sir."

"Do you happen to remember if the key of this clothes closet was on the inside or the outside of the lock when you opened the door to get your hat?"

The woman paused and looked

"Are you absolutely certain that no one could have been hidden in these rooms at the time you went home?"

Spively. "No one could have hidden," she declared. "I was in the bathroom half a dozen times, and I got Miss Odell's gown out of the clothes-closet in the bedroom. As soon as it began to get dark I drew all the window shades myself. And as for the bed, it's built almost down to the floor; no one could squeeze under it."

(I glanced closely at the bed and realized that this statement was quite true.)

"What about the clothes closet in this room?" Markham put the question hopefully, but again the maid shook her head.

"Nobody was in there. That's where I keep my own hat and coat, and I took them out myself when I was getting ready to go. I even put away one of Miss Odell's old dresses thoughtfully at the closet door.

"It was on the outside, where it always was," she announced, after several moments' reflection. "I remember because it caught in the chignon of the old dress I put away."

Markham frowned and then resumed his questioning.

"You say you don't know the name of Miss Odell's dinner companion last night. Can you tell us the names of any men she was in the habit of going out with?"

"Miss Odell never mentioned any names to me," the woman said. "She was very careful about it, too—secretive, you might say. You see, I'm only here in the daytime, and the gentlemen she knew generally came in the evening."

"And you never heard her speak ful," retorted Markham. "I'd say it added materially to the complications of the situation."

"It would appear that way, wouldn't it, now? But, then—who knows?—it may prove to be your brightest and most comfortin' clue."

Furthermore, we learned that someone evidently locked himself in that clothes-press, as witness the shifting of the key, and that, moreover, this occlusion did not occur until the abigail had gone, or, let us say, after seven o'clock."

"Sure," said Heath with sour facetiousness: "when the side door was bolted and an operator was sitting in the front hall, who swears nobody came in that way."

"It is a bit mystifyin'," Vance conceded sadly.

"Mystifying? It's impossible!" grumbled Markham.

Heath, who was now staring with meditative pugnacity into the closet, shook his head helplessly.

"What I don't understand," he ruminated, "is why, if the fellow was hiding in the closet, he didn't ransack it when he came out, like he did all the rest of the apartment."

"Sergeant," said Vance, "you've put your finger on the crux of the matter. . . . Y' know, the neat, undisturbed aspect of that closet rather suggests that the crude person who rifled these charming rooms omitted to give it his attention because it was locked on the inside and he couldn't open it."

"Come, come!" protested Markham. "That theory implies that there were two unknown persons in here last night."

Vance sighed. "Harrow and alas! I know it. And we can't introduce even one into this apartment logically. . . . Distressin', ain't it?"

PAMPA, TEXAS

"Iron Mike" Joins Staff of Pampa Daily News

Here is that much discussed gentleman, "Iron Mike," alleged to be the smartest "man" in the Daily News office, who has arrived to join the staff of Pampa's own daily.

Mike is twins, so that if one hand gets tired the other automatically starts working. Briefly, Mike's duty is to deliver 18,000 words of "hot" news daily. So far, the only objection is that he rises too early, starting at 7 a. m., and grinding away until 4 p. m., without attention and without taking an hour off for lunch.

Sending of Death Threat in Texas Is Only Misdemeanor

SAN ANTONIO, Jan. 28.—When District Attorney Lamar Seeligson attempted to prosecute the sender of a death threat in court here recently he discovered that a misdemeanor was the worst crime he could hang upon the defendant and announced that he would draft a bill for the next legislature making such action a felony.

Ed Taylor, 21-year-old defendant in the case, confessed to sending a letter to Ira J. Kercheville, an attorney, demanding $50 and threatening the life of the attorney and his young daughter if the money was not forthcoming.

Taylor was fined $500 and sentenced to a year in the county jail. Investigation of the case convinced Seeligson that Taylor had no intention of carrying out his threat, but in many cases he believes desperate criminals might escape with jail sentences when they actually plotted to take the life of their victim. The bill which Seeligson is preparing will provide a penitentiary sentence for such offenses.

Rabbits Save Wolves by Stepping in Traps

SAN ANGELO, Tex.—Rabbits of the range unwittingly save the lives of wolves and bobcats by sacrificing their own. They get into the traps set for the predatory animals.

The rabbits are numerous, and upset the hopes of trappers too frequently on that account. Some step into the steel traps as they hop about in search of green grass, and others put their noses into danger because they are attracted by the scented bait.

MOODY ENDORSES UNION PROJECT AT UNIVERSITY

AUSTIN, Jan. 28.—Governor Dan Moody has led some three hundred prominent Texans in endorsing and offering their support to the University Union project being sponsored by Hon. T. W. Gregory and the Ex-

Students' association of the University of Texas. It was announced today.

"I want you to call upon me for any aid which I can render in this worthy undertaking," the Governor wrote Mr. Gregory in accepting a place on a statewide union campaign committee.

More than a hundred persons in Texas and other states followed the lead of the Governor in volunteering their services in any way the campaign director saw fit to use them.

The campaign by Mr. Gregory contemplates the erection of three buildings on the campus of the University of Texas to serve, as he says, "as a nerve center for University life."

DISCOVERED—At last a statistical investigator has discovered the New Pampa. The Texas Almanac, published by the Dallas News, has achieved this distinction.

The following mention is made of Gray county and of Pampa:

"GRAY—Created, 1876; organized, 1902; area, 899 sq. mi.; Pop., 1920, 4,663; 1927, 18,000; alt., 3,200 feet; rainfall, 23 in.; Panhandle Plains.

"The surface is the level high plains with the exception of the southeastern part, which is rolling. Silty and black loams are the predominating soils on the level lands, while sandy and sandy loams predominate in the rolling sections. This is one of the principal wheat growing counties of Texas, and there is also a large production of grain sorghums and other feed crops, and during the last few years there has been a production of about 6,000 bales of cotton annually. Watermelons and other truck crops are grown for market in the southern part of the county. There is a large beef cattle industry with increasing attention to dairying.

"PAMPA is the principal town, having a population of about 9,000. In 1920 it had 987, but it has grown rapidly since, first due to rapid development of agricultural lands and secondly because of the discovery of great oil and gas fields in Gray and adjacent counties. McLean and Alanreed are thriving towns in the southern part of the county. LeFors, the county seat, is a small inland community."

Determined not to overlook any oil town, the Almanac is generous with Panhandle and White Deer, giving them 7,500 and 4,500 population, respectively.

Besides being a compendium of thousands of Texas facts and having chapters on nearly every class of state assets, the Texas Almanac has much other general information which makes it of value. Its greatest service, however, is in giving later facts than most other sources provide.

OUR TOAST—If the time and place now afforded, we would offer a toast something like this: "To the A. P. man we never had."

In almost every daily newspaper in the country, the telegraph operator who takes the news is the good fellow of the staff—the patient, efficient human machine who hour after hour takes down such illuminating (to him) lines as this: "TXX 5 POTUS SN WI ISU A PMN OPG CRN IAN LANS TO SXM."

Queer signs those, but decoded by the Associated Press operator and neatly typed for the editor they mean that "It is expected that the President of the United States soon will issue a proclamation opening certain Indian lands to settlement." Out of such hodgepodes as the above the A. P. men have been handling thousands of words of alive news daily for years. They were the back bone of every daily newspaper.

Rapidly now, however, are these faithful A. P. men turning to other pursuits. "Iron Mike," the electric, automatic telegraph instruments are taking their places, and turning out more copy than human hands can muster. Many said a few years ago that it could not be done, but it is being done and tomorrow, instead of an A. P. man to operate the full leased wire which will serve The News in the future, Iron Mike will get the job. During the last year the Western Union has served The News well with a part-time service.

Pampa's own daily is growing. Rarely do cities of this size have a leased-wire newspaper. A few years ago our heritage would have been another personality in the office, but this is a rapidly developing age and The News must be as modern as the time in which we live.

It is not without some regret, however, that we look at Iron Mike—cold, impersonal, but efficient—and think of the A. P. man "who might have been."

WASHINGTON—Assuming that the recent shouts of high prohibition enforcement officers against the methods of the Civil Service Commission in qualifying candidates for enforcement jobs have aroused certain interest in civil service, this is a good time to write something about the commission.

Your correspondent has the forty-fourth annual report of the Civil Service Commission at his elbow and all that's necessary is to plow through 115 pages and unearth the most interesting portions for public inspection.

Going outside the report for a moment, it ought to be said that the commission, which has the job of examining and certifying the vast majority of government employees, has done as good a job as anyone ever had a right to expect. It functions without regard to political consideration and has been able to withstand political pressure, perhaps not entirely as it claims—although that is a matter of argument—but certainly to an astonishing degree.

Civil service was instituted by Congress in self-defense. Not so very many years ago, the average member of Congress spent an enormous amount of his time filling the scores of jobs at his disposal from among hundreds of applicants for it. He still has patronage, but no more than he can handle, and he doesn't have to make so many enemies by refusing applicants for whom there aren't enough jobs to go around.

But to get back to Civil Service—this Commission, when it finds that politics is entering the business of selection of federal workers, is empowered to investigate and act as it deems justifiable.

In those jobs where the appointing officer and the politicians can pick one man out of a list of three eligibles certified, politics very often wins. But if the commission finds that prior to an examination for a postmastership or some such job under its control, the word has gone around that So-and-So has been picked by the politicians and that he is bound to be selected, no matter who gets a higher rating, it often sends out a representative to drum up trade, stirring up real competition which frequently becomes so hot that the politicians' man can't land among the first three.

The annual report shows there were 559,138 employees in the entire executive civil service at the close of the last fiscal year, which was a decrease of 1567 from 1926. Some 423,000 jobs are subject to competitive examination.

A majority of civil service workers are postal employees, more than 308,000, which added 2755 employees during the year, while other services were showing a decrease of 4322.

There were 60,000 civil service employees right here in Washington and th rest outside, but of course there are goodness knows how many thousands who are connected with the government here who aren't under civil service.

Poll Tax Appeal to the Voters of Texas

Republican State Headquarters of Texas, through V. E. v. Brunow, Chairman, Republican Executive Committee, requests publicity for the following non-partisan appeal:

"Popular government fails if the people do not rule, and they cannot rule unless they qualify to vote and do vote. In Texas, to qualify for voting, one must pay, in person, a poll tax on, or before, the closing time of the County Tax Collector January 31, only a few days away.

"Persons over 60 years of age, or crippled to certain degrees, or those who become 21 years old between January 31 and election, must, if they live in cities of over 10,000 population, secure certificate of exemption in lieu of paying poll taxes.

"Of approximately 2,700,000 Texans over 21 years of age, of whom 2,350,000 are white, literate citizens, only 1,300,000 have ever qualified to vote and only 815,000 have ever voted. This is minority government and a neglect of popular rule.

"All citizens, irrespective of party, should qualify for voting and good citizens of all parties should join to see that their families, friends, neighbors and business associates pay their poll taxes now."

Trees Add Much to Spacious Beauty of Panhandle Plains

Mrs. F. F. Collins of Amarillo, our seventh district president sends this message to club women:

The plains of our beloved part of Texas need trees. We would not mar the queenly beauty of the unbroken stretch of fertile lands, where the golden wheat heads sway to and fro, just as the billowy waves of the mighty ocean surge. The sight is compelling, it grips one with an awe inspiring appreciation of its bigness. But, we would adorn the towns and hamlets with trees—trees the home of birds, the playhouse for children, the silent friends of man. We would have parks and memorial groves with trees dedicated to the memory of those who have passed beyond, and whose services for community betterment still lives. We would border the driveways with trees, and in so doing, commend them unto the Master Gardener for life, for without his giving and care, our efforts are in vain.

"Grant then Your Blessing, Friend of Trees," we pray.

The Art of Ballyhoo

Anything to keep the customers talking is the fundamental principle of the art of ballyhoo and Tex Rickard holds the title as the greatest ballyhoo man in boxing.

He keeps the customers talking when there is nothing to talk about and when he gets a subject deserving of conversation he keeps it in a roar.

Since that fortunate day when he signed Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney for their first meeting in Philadelphia, he has succeeded in keeping the heavyweight championship situation as the ranking piece of chatter in the day's gossip and he has done it with very little trouble.

When Gene Tunney demanded two summer engagements Rickard had two willing opponents in Jack Dempsey and Jack Sharkey, but they could hardly be made hot without some kind of a warm up.

Sharkey made himself all cold when he stumbled through to a draw decision with Tom Heeney and Dempsey was in need of vindication to make the customers believe that he was not heading for a sure knockout if he met Tunney for the third time without another test.

Sharkey Challenges

Those tests are dangerous, Rickard knows, and either Sharkey or Dempsey might be knocked off if they exposed their faces in the ring before the big numbers.

Rickard, however, persuaded Sharkey to file a challenge against Tunney with the New York commission which will be acted upon when Tunney's six months of grace expires in March. It was the first challenge filed against a heavyweight champion since Harry Wills was slamming them at Dempsey.

That little act of filing the challenge will put the New York commissioners in a spot where they will have to notify Tunney that Sharkey is waiting first in line with him or name some other opponent in Sharkey's place.

The chances are good that the commission would make Sharkey an official challenger without forcing him to take any more chances even though he may appear in another bout in March.

If Sharkey should be set aside as the challenger, the commission would be forced to name Dempsey and in either event Rickard could tell his public—"I didn't pick the man. The commission says he's the fellow."

Others Coming Up

It is understood that Tunney, when the new contracts are drawn, will demand that Dempsey be prevented from appearing in any warm up contest. He doesn't want him to have two cuts of big money again this year and he doesn't want to give him the chance to get his machinery oiled up by an easy preliminary fight.

Rickard, however, might get John Donkes or Pete Nitney to stage a Dempsey-Palooka fight some place and tell Tunney he couldn't keep Dempsey from fighting for some other promoter.

The public has reasons to believe that every step taken by the leading heavyweight aspirants is led by Rickard and that every move is the old ballyhoo, but it makes good talk-

"HANSONS OF AUGSBURG" READY TO PLAY AS U. S. HOCKEY TEAM

Here is the most discussed Hanson family hockey team whose selection to represent this country in the winter Olympics in Switzerland next month has been very much on again, off again. They are, from left to right, Joe, Julius and Emil Hanson, "Moose" Swanson, goalie; Oscar and Louis Hanson. Julius the oldest, who serves as coach, is 28, and Oscar, the youngest, is 19. Inset is "Si" Melby, athletic director at Little Augsburg College (Minn.) which the team represents.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn.—Little Augsburg College with its 300 students including co-eds has been stirred by the all-important question of whether its hockey team consisting of the five Hanson brothers and a sixth man named Swanson shall be allowed to go to Switzerland to represent the United States in the Olympic games.

The tiny institution had just congratulated itself upon receiving a distinction that many a larger college would covet when the American Olympic Committee over-ruled the hockey committee's selection of the "Hansons of Augsburg" on the ground they were "not representatives."

A chance that the Hansons yet might earn the right to go by playing a test game against the University Club of Boston or some other prominent team found the brothers and their supporters confident they would prove worthy.

The Augsburg sextet is not merely a "trick" outfit. Although representing the smallest school in the Minnesota conference it has maintained an excellent record. The team has played as a unit in college for ing and good reading. Despite the recent happenings that might have been construed as bad breaks for the promoter, Rickard apparently is not really agitated about the summer program, because he remarked before he went south to do his business with Tunney:

"If that Loughran and Delaney keep on coming, they ought to be great shots for the heavyweight title next year."

two years.

All of the scoring is done by Hansons as the lone non-member of the family is employed in a defensive capacity as goal tender.

All of the credit for the showing of the team should go to the Hanson brothers, declares M. Skordalsvold, member of the college faculty, who manages the team. There is no coach. The team needs none. Anyway the college could not afford one. Julius Hanson, wing, and oldest of the brothers, directs the play in the capacity of captain. All sports at the school, however, are under direction of "Si" Melby, athletic director.

Joe, Emil, Oscar and Louis are the other Hansons, and "Moose" Swanson is the goal tender.

While other hockey teams often have as many as 10 or 15 reserves, the Augsburg team has only two and one is a substitute goal tender.

The Hansons have been playing hockey together ever since they were old enough to lift a stick.

They need no coach and they need no substitutes," says Skordalsvold. "They knew how to coordinate their style of play without the aid of an outsider. They are rugged and know how to conserve their energy and have never known what substitution

International Sunday School Lesson

BY DR. J. E. NUNN

International Sunday School Lesson

General topic, The Growing Fame of Jesus.

Scripture Lesson, Mark 3, 7-12; 6, 83-86.

Mark 3:7. And Jesus with his disciples withdrew to the sea; and a great multitude from Galilee followed; and from Judea.

8. And from Jerusalem, and from Idumea, and beyond the Jordan, and about Tyre, and Sidon, a great multitude, hearing what great things he did, came unto him.

9. And he spake to his disciples, that a little boat should wait on him because of the crowd, lest that should throng him:

10. For he had healed many; inasmuch that as many as "had" plagues pressed upon him that they might touch him.

11. And the unclean spirits, whenever they beheld him, fell down before him and cried, saying, Thou art the Son of God.

12. And he charged them much that they should not make him known.

Mark 6:33. And when they had crossed over, they came to the land unto Gennesaret, and moored to the shore.

54. And when they were come out of the boat, straightway the people know him.

55. And ran round about that whole region, and began to carry about on their beds those that were sick, where they heard he was.

56. And whosoever he entered, into villages, or into city or into the country, they laid the sick in the market places, and besought him that they might touch if it were but the border of his garment; and as many as touched him were made whole.

Time, A. D. 28, in the second year of Christ's ministry; the second passage, April, A. D. 29, in the third year of his ministry.

Place, The shore of the Sea of Galilee.

Golden Text. The common people heard him gladly. Mark 11:37.

Introduction

"Last week we watched the increasing hostility of the Pharisees, scribes and Herodians against Jesus, and saw one reason for it to be Christ's opposition to the foolish and burdensome ceremonial rules which these people had loaded upon the laws of Moses. Another reason, which was not brought out in last week's lesson, was Christ's rapidly growing popularity with the common people, and this we are to study in today's lesson, discovering the reasons for that popularity. In the course of the lesson we shall learn why the world today, in spite of its selfishness, carelessness, still admires, loves, and reverences Jesus Christ far above any person who has ever lived.

Jesus Seeks Retirement
 "And Jesus with his disciples withdrew to the sea." V. 7. The Sea of Galilee. It is a lovely body of water in Palestine. It is about twelve and a half miles long, and eight miles broad in the widest part. It is about 150 feet deep, and lies about 600 feet below the level of the Mediterranean. It is a lovely body of water, and has been compared to the Lake of Lucerne, the Lake of Geneva, and Lake Lamond. Matt. 12:15 states that Christ's withdrawal was on account of the plotting of his enemies.

"And a great multitude from Galilee followed and from Judea." Very likely they camped upon the beach. It must indeed have been a large crowd, including contingents from regions so widely separated. Galilee was the northern division, lying between the Samaritans were not welcome among the Jews and did not mingle freely with them; if any of them were in this company, they were not thought worth mentioning.

The Thronging Multitude
Vs. 7, 10

"A great multitude, hearing what great things he did, came unto him." "It is a very external and vulgar kind of sensation that the evangelist describes the people flock together, not because of Jesus' teaching reached their conscience, but because they have heard of his works.

"For he had healed many." Few value health while they have it, but as soon as they lose it, it is seen at once to be one of the main foundations of happiness and prosperity. Pain is a most efficient teacher, and its lessons are sure to be heeded. Even the charlatans, whose claims of healing powers are so silly that one would think they could fool nobody, will draw great crowds of sufferers around them; how much more the Divine Healer whose mere work could make a leper whole in an instant, open blind eyes, and even bring back the dead to life?

Unclean Spirits Cast Out V-11

"And he unclean spirits whenever they beheld him, fell down before him." It is worthy of notice that the afflicted people fell upon him, but the unclean spirits fell down before him, and this not out of love or devotion, but out of abject fear, dreading lest he should drive them out of the 'possessed,' and send them before their time to their destined torment. It is just possible that this homage paid to our Lord may have been an act of cunning—a ruse, as it were, to lead the people to suppose that our Lord was in league with evil spirits. "And cried, saying, Thou art the Son of God." The Messiah, the earthly incarnation of Deity. The evil spirits, being of the invisible world, seem to have had earlier knowledge than any man of Christ's nature and mission; that is, earlier than any man who did not learn of it through an angel.

"And he charged them much that they should not make him known." Christ was not ready to declare his deity. He knew that to do so would rouse against him an array of enemies strong enough to kill him. He had first to win and train a body of disciples numerous enough to continue the work he had begun. And even if he were ready for the proclamation of his Messiahship, he would not have it made by demons.

Busy Life of Jesus

Between the extract just considered and this passage stretched a portion of Mark's Gospel which is crowded with events. Our Lord had definitely chosen his other parables and teachings. He had sent them forth on their first missionary journey and had received their report on their return. He had worked many marvelous miracles and had unfolded their teachings to the disciples. He had just fed five thousand men with five barley cakes and two small fishes. This was on the northeastern shore of the Sea of Galilee, and after the miracle he had withdrawn to a solitary place for prayer, sending the disciples across the lake in a boat. A storm came up and the boat was in a terrible plight when Jesus came to them walking on the sea, and Peter made his attempt to go to Jesus on the water, but failed. On Christ's arrival the storm suddenly ceased and the amazed disciples speedily reached the shore. It was all a wonderful revelation of the disciples' faith.

"And when they had crossed over, they came to the land unto Gennesaret, and moored to the shore." The land of Gennesaret is only mentioned here and in Matt. 14:34. It is a fertile crescent-shaped plain on the northwestern shore of the Lake of Gennesaret, about 3 miles in length and one in width. From its sheltered situation, and especially from its depression of more than 500 feet below the level of the ocean, its climate is of an almost tropical character. Josephus speaks of it as if it were an earthly paradise, in which every kind of useful plant grew and flourished. The Sea of Galilee is sometimes called the Lake of Gennesaret from this region.

Sick Brought to Jesus

"And began to carry about on their beds those that were sick, where they heard he was." The beds were thin mattresses or pallets, serving here as stretchers. Our Lord seems to have moved freely about the whole region, and the determined sick folks who could not get about on their own legs, or as hire carriers, followed him about a rumor reported his movements, keeping up the pursuit till they found him—a vivid description of a desperate search. The people seized the opportunity of Christ's presence to secure the blessings which they most desired. If men were so anxious promptly to seize a physical advantage, how intense should be their urgency in seeking the higher blessings of moral and intellectual redemption and sanctification.

Special Lesson

"Little faith will get very great mercies, but great faith still greater."—C. H. Spurgeon.

"When trials come we should say, 'My Heavenly Father puts this cup of trial into my hands, that I may have something sweet afterwards.' Trial is the food of faith."—George Muller.

AUTO SHOW---

ready to display their cars and accessories when the doors were officially opened at 1:30 p. m.

Visitors from all parts of the county as well as from Miami, Canadian, Wheeler, Mobeetle, Panhandle and Amarillo attended the show in the afternoon to inspect the various makes and models on display.

Thousands See Models

From 6 o'clock Friday evening until the doors closed at midnight the large building was so crowded that it was estimated that more than 4,000 persons viewed the models and enjoyed the old time fiddlers' contest.

Ten oldtimers from different parts of the Panhandle entered the contest, while others played for the enjoyment of the crowd. The judges took until yesterday morning before naming the winner of the contest as all the entrants were masters of the bow. After careful consideration Sam Anderson, better known throughout the Panhandle as "Uncle Sam," was awarded first prize. Second prize was awarded to Jake Pool, and Tom Wright, from away up on the Canadian, was awarded the third prize.

Other entrants in the contest were Van Dodson, Cal Mackie, Milo Bledgett, M. Mumsey, Mel Rogers, J. Ross and R. Blackie.

Square Dance Enjoyed

Following the fiddlers contest and as soon as space could be cleared in the center of the floor Mel Rogers' string band commenced the music for the square dance which was the cause of much enjoyment for both old and young. Cowboys who rode the range 50 years ago could not resist the strains of music and took the floor to complete squares for the oldtime dance.

Crowds continued to throng the show room yesterday morning, while the afternoon was a repetition of the previous day.

The Black Aces furnished music until 4 o'clock, when the vaudeville troupe from the Rex theatre, through the kindness of Manager Roy Snor gave an hour's entertainment.

Last night saw as large a crowd as the opening night in attendance and the dance which closed the successful show was enjoyed by both old and young.

Association Permanent

The local automobile dealers have decided to make the Pampa Automobile Dealers association a permanent organization are enthusiastic about the show and declare that next year will see Pampa with the greatest automobile show in the Panhandle.

Local dealers who participated in the show are Biggs Horn, Nash, Rose Motor company, Ford, Bonale

Sunday School---

"Faith means a conscious and deliberate grasping of the outstretched hand of God. Faith means an absolute confidence in Christ, that he is what he says he is, and will do what he says he will do. Faith brings heaven down to earth. To faith God is the greatest reality in all the world. Faith is my response to his seeking love."—Canon Edward S. Woods.

"I do not want to be rid of the problems, perplexities, and responsibilities of existence, for life would be meaningless and colorless without them; what I need is to know how to meet my difficulties and triumph over them."—Dr. Frank Crane.

Few films produced this year can boast of a better cast or more, perfect acting than "Judgment of the Hills," the F. B. O. Gold Bond showing at the Crescent theatre, today and Monday. The acting throughout is splendid, every member of the cast filling their role to perfection, and acting as if they really meant their roles.

Little Frankie Darro is superb as the kid brother and manages through his appealing manner to invest a difficult role and series of situations with a heart interest in would not have had without his excellent performance. Virginia Valli gives, what is undoubtedly one of her finest performances, as the school teacher who Tad loves, and who eventually manages to infuse some self-respect into a brother. The brother Brant Denison, is played by Orville Caldwell, who was the knight in "The Passion Play," and this superb actor excels himself in all of his scenes. Caldwell's was a hard role to fill and the actor deserves a world of credit for his clever and sympathetic performance.

The director also deserves no little praise for his skillful work. "Judgment of the Hills" takes place with "Mother," "The Magic Garden," "Laddie" and the rest of the J. Leo Meehan productions, among which there is not one picture that is not entertainment to the last foot.
