Castro calls meeting 'family-like'

Gorbachev to address Cuban assembly

HAVANA (AP) — After talks with Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev, a cheerful President Fidel Castro seemed pleased but was non-committal about their discussions on issues that often have left them deeply divided.

"Family-like," was how Castro described the talks after bidding Gorbachev good night Monday on the steps of the presidential palace.

When reporters pressed him for details, Castro had ready a two-word linguistic hybrid: "glasnost manana."

That was Castro's way of saying more on the discussions will be known when Gorbachev addresses the National Assembly late this afternoon, the last major scheduled event during his 63-hour stay in Cuba.

The official Soviet news agency Tass reported today that Gorbachev said improving the international climate is central to his discussions with Castro.

"It is generally felt that there is mounting aspiration in the world for better relations, and I think that the Soviet Union and Cuba understand their responsibility," Gorbachev said.

The report made no mention of differences between the two leaders.

Moments before Castro said good night Monday, Gorbachev descended the steps of the ornate pre-revolutionary palace with his wife, Raisa, at his side. They received applause from the diplomats and officials who had joined them for a glittering reception.

Aside from visits to two monuments and an exhibit highlighting the achievements of the revolution, Gorbachev spent Monday with Castro in talks.

Speculation swirled all day about a possible Gorbachev announcement forgiving Cuba its debt to the Soviet Union, estimated at between $8 billion and $20 billion, but Castro said that issue never came up.

Debt, he said, is not a problem for Cuba but for other Latin American countries. His answer did not appear to rule out a Gorbachev announcement that he will give Cuba a break on debt repayments.

Combined with the estimated $6 billion Cuba owes Western countries, the island is one of the most heavily indebted countries in the world in per capital terms.

Diplomats in Havana and in Moscow, speaking on condition of anonymity, have said the Soviets already appear to have reduced the subsidies they pay by buying Cuban sugar at higher-than-world-market prices. And some said they expected Gorbachev to tell Castro bluntly — but in private — that Cuba must put its economic house in order.

Ricardo Alarcon, Cuban vice foreign minister, said today that a difference in views on economic policy "doesn't necessarily mean that you should have a confrontation or difference of other sort."

In an interview with ABC's "Good Morning America," Alarcon also characterized Monday's talks as "warm and friendly."

Gennady I. Gerasimov, Gorbachev's spokesman, said the morning portion of the talks stressed Latin American debt and drug trafficking.

Two-car accident

Midland Fire Department Capt. Larry Cappell checks the scene of a two-vehicle accident which injured a 30-year-old Midland woman Monday. According to investigators, a 1988 Ford Bronco driven by Becky Lewis was traveling north on Midkiff Road near the intersection of Haynes Avenue about 3 p.m. when it crossed into the southbound lanes, striking a 1977 Datsun driven by Thomas Lee St. Peters, 45, of Midland. Police said Ms. Lewis was treated at Midland Memorial Hospital and released.

Class action suit on prices filed in Exxon oil spill

By TIMOTHY CARLSON
Hearst News Service

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. — An attorney and several associates here say they aren't satisfied with the Exxon Corporation's public apology for the Valdez, Alaska, oil spill. They want the oil giant to repay consumers for gas prices which have risen 10 to 15 cents a gallon since the 10 million gallon Alaskan oil spill on March 24.

So attorney Peter Seidenberg has filed a multimillion dollar class action lawsuit in federal court in Santa Ana, charging that "gross negligent conduct" of the skipper of the Exxon Valdez caused a rapid price increase in gas pump prices here.

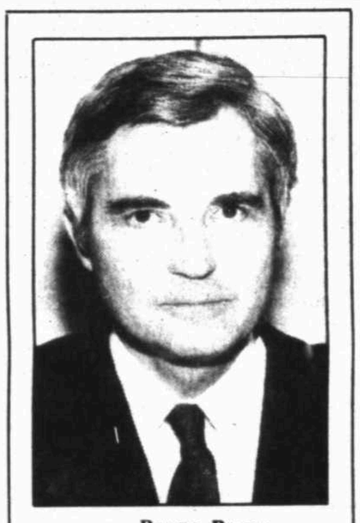

The suit asks for determination of damages against the Exxon Corp. and the Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. on behalf of everyone who buys gas in Southern California.

"We're mad and we are disgusted by what Exxon did to the Alaskan environment," Seidenberg said, "People should understand they have many ways to express their displeasure for acts of corporate negligence."

Seidenberg said the Exxon spill caused "a crippling of the transport of all oil supplies from Alaska to California."

Shipments of crude oil from Valdez, the southern end of the Trans-Alaska pipeline, have been sharply curtailed since the Exxon Valdez spilled 240,000 barrels of crude oil into Prince William Sound.

Businesses take look at investment

By JULIE HILLRICHS

A day-long conference on foreign trade Monday gave Permian Basin businessmen ample opportunity to make a hefty sales pitch to foreign investors interested in doing business in the Lone Star State.

About 25 businessman registered for the conference hosted by the Permian Basin Export Assistance Center and Tucson TransAtlantic Trade.

Co-sponsors of the The Permian Basin Export Assistance Center's Reverse Trade Mission, held at Odessa's Holiday Inn Center, were Midland College, Odessa College and the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

At the conference, local businessmen received over 100 joint venture proposals from Western Europe, Australia and Canada.

Bruno Remy, the Texas Department of Commerce's associate director of International Business Development and keynote speaker at Monday's event, said Texas must do more to attract foreign investors in light of its drop in the U.S. foreign direct investment rankings.

U.S. Department of Commerce figures in 1986 showed Texas as the state with the greatest cumulative value in foreign direct investments, with $41.6 billion invested followed by California with $38 billion.

In 1987, the Lone Star State slipped to second place with $42 billion behind California's $43 billion. Remy predicted that Texas will fall to third place behind California and New York by 1990.

Direct foreign investment — retail and wholesale trade and services — is one of the many tools used by the commerce department in most medium-sized communities to promote economic growth in Texas.

Teen charged in Rio Grande shooting incident

By BRIAN PEARSON
Staff Writer

A 15-year-old youth has been charged with attempted murder and robbery in connection with a Rio Grande shooting incident involving three American rafters, a Mexican prosecutor said this morning.

Santos Sanchez Ramos of Piedritas, Coahuila, is expected to face trial on the charges filed Monday at 5 p.m. this afternoon, District Attorney Arturo Hernandez Aldate of Ciudad Acuna said through an interpreter in a telephone conversation.

If convicted, Ramos could face being sentenced to a youth correctional facility for a time to be determined by the judge, Aldate said.

After being tracked by a posse of Mexican police, the boy was arrested Thursday in connection with the March 22 shooting incident, where three American rafters were fired on as they floated down the Rio Grande near San Vicente across from Big Bend National Park.

Aldate said the boy not only confessed to firing on the men but also said he took the men's raft, a cooler and luggage after they abandoned the boat on the American side of the river.

Ramos, however, still contends that the men fired on him first as he waved to them from atop the Mexican cliffs, Aldate said. There are no other suspects in the incident, he said.

U.S. Border Patrol agents from Del Rio on Saturday took Jose Munoz-Quintero, police chief in Ciudad Acuna, and Ramos by helicopter to the area of the shooting incident, where a .22-caliber rifle was recovered, patrol officials said.

The rifle had been wrapped in plastic and hidden in a crack in the rocks, officials said, adding that the weapon reportedly was used in the shooting.

MISD parents get graphic look at Child Lures material

By BRIAN PEARSON
Staff Writer

Some Midland parents got a splash of cold-water, in-your-face reality Monday about the potential exploitation and crimes awaiting their unsuspecting children — even in a small community.

The Child Lures program, developed by Kenneth Wooden, a former reporter for "60 minutes," "20/20" and "NBC News," gave about 300 Midlanders gathered in Lee High School's auditorium a shocking version of what will be presented to their junior high and elementary school children throughout April.

Armed with 25 years of research, Jeff McKissack, who conducted the presentation, addressed concerns such as abduction and murder, molestation and incest, child pornography and prostitution, and satanic cults.

McKissack said research on child abduction and murder included seven years of questioning of those who had committed such crimes, such as mass murderers Ted Bundy and Henry Lee Lucas.

Today's criminals, he said, don't resemble Jason of the "Friday the 13th" movie series or other heinous child-killers, whom children picture when asked to draw a stranger bent on hurting them. Most children believe the stranger never smiles, McKissack said.

"Believe me, the tricks are slick," he said. "We've come a long way from 'Don't take candy from a stranger.' Children do not know what a stanger is."

McKissack spoke of the sophisticated methods used by the killers, such as posing as a police officer or a modeling agent, who use the ploys to draw the children into their cars.

"Sophistication: that's what child molesters are using nowadays," he said. "Once the victim gets in the car, they will be murdered."

Can state curb bumper stickers?

By T. GREGORY GILLAN
Hearst News Service

AUSTIN — !&&!

"It" happens.

But if Rep. Senfronia Thompson, D-Houston, has her way, "it" won't be happening on your vehicle bumper.

Ms. Thompson Monday urged her colleagues to support a bill that would require obscenities printed on bumper stickers to be printed in letters no more than one-eighth inch tall.

And if you can read that, she says, you're too darned close.

The House Criminal Jurisprudence Committee heard testimony on the proposal and referred the bill to a subcommittee that will evaluate its constitutionality.

Ms. Thompson said the bill, which would strengthen the state's indecency statutes to include obscene bumper stickers, is meant "to remove obscene words, language, et-cetera out of the community."

Under the measure, driving with an obscene bumper sticker containing illegal words would be a Class C misdemeanor.

"I don't think that this is the kind of language that you'd want your 6-year-old,' your 5-year-old learning their 'four-letter words with," Ms. Thompson said, as she displayed several of the offending labels to committee members and the audience.

"I don't think that you are interested in seeing this kind of display up and down the road," she said. "We're not trying to wipe out the bumper stickers totally, we just want to reduce the size of the type."

But Richard Avena, executive director of the Texas Civil Liberties Union, said such a law would be unconstitutional.

"As a father, I agree that these are terrible words," Avena said. "But for the government to intervene and tell somebody what they can and cannot see in the long run would be historically more embarrassing to our heritage."

WEATHER SUMMARY

Cooler temperatures in store

From Staff and Wire Reports

The forecast for tonight calls for clear skies and cooler temperatures, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport. The low will be in the mid-40s and winds will be northeasterly at 10-15 mph in the early evening becoming easterly 5-10 mph by early morning.

Wednesday is expected to be sunny with the high reaching only into the mid-70s. Winds will be easterly 5-10 mph in the early morning, becoming southeasterly 10-15 mph by midday.

Monday's high of 89 was five degrees cooler than the record high temperature of 94 set on April 3, 1946. The overnight low of 51 was 23 degrees warmer than the record low of 28 set for this date in 1945.

STATE

At least two tornado funnels plunged earthward from a series of fierce thunderstorms that roared across Northeast Texas, packing winds of 50-70 mph, large hail and some heavy rainfall.

A tornado touched down near Grand Saline and a funnel cloud was sighted northwest of Linden late Monday. There were no reports of injuries or significant damage from the twisters.

Hail the size of golf balls was widespread across Northeast Texas Monday night and early today. Some of the largest hail was in Bowie County where winds uprooted several trees near Beaver Dam and caused power outages at New Boston.

Large hail was also reported in Hopkins and Hunt counties. Winds gusted to 60 mph at Sulphur Springs Airport in Hopkins County.

Maud had 1.60 inches of rainfall as the thunderstorms passed through the area.

Moist, unstable air, a cold front and an upper level disturbance caused the intense thunderstorms to develop.

A tornado watch was in effect over portions of North Central Texas and Northeast Texas until 2 a.m. today.

All of the thunderstorms had either dissipated or moved out of Texas before dawn today.

At dawn today, the cold front was located along a line from near Texarkana to San Angelo to Midland.

Forecasts called for the possiblity of some scattered shwoers over East Texas and Southeast Texas tonight and for scattered showers and thunderstorms along the upper Texas coast tonight.

NATION

Severe thunderstorms moved through the central part of the country today, with tornadoes touching down in Arkansas and Texas.

Thunderstorms developing along and ahead of a cold front moved through the Ohio Valley, the Tennessee Valley and the lower Mississippi Valley early this morning, with strong thunderstorms extending from western Kentucky to northeastern Texas.

In Arkansas, thunderstorms spawned tornadoes Monday evening near Amagon, Mount Ida, Jonesboro and Crystal Springs and golf ball-size hail elsewhere. Strong winds downed trees and power lines in southern Jefferson County.

In Texas, thunderstorms generated a tornado northwest of Grand Saline, hail 3⅛ inches in diameter near Quinlan and winds gusting up to 70 mph.

Heavier rainfall for the six-hour period ending at 2 a.m. EDT included 2½ inches at Louisville, Ky., 1¾ inches at Evansville, Ind., and nearly 1⅛ inches at Fort Campbell, Ky.

Elsewhere, light rain was falling over northern Oklahoma, southern Kansas and southeastern Colorado. Scattered showers were over the upper Great Lakes and the upper Mississippi Valley, with snow near Lake Superior.

Scattered rain also fell over the northwestern part of the country, while much of the Southwest enjoyed fair skies.

Captain of tanker expected to surrender

VALDEZ, Alaska (AP) — The fired Exxon Valdez captain today made plans to surrender in New York, police said. A continent away, officials closed a $12 million fishery and struggled to save others from the nation's worst oil spill.

Joseph Hazelwood, 40, is accused of misdemeanor charges of operating the ship while under the influence of alcohol, reckless endangerment and negligent discharge of oil.

He was expected to surrender today near his hometown of Huntington, N.Y, said New York State Trooper Craig Rubio.

On Monday, the spill forced officials to close the $12 million herring fishery for the season.

The fishery is where fishermen go after herring just as the fish are about to spawn at the start of the Prince William Sound fishing season. More than half the herrings' spawning habitat was polluted.

"It means they don't have a fishery, and it means they have to come up with another means of making a living," said Jack Lamb, president of the Cordova District Fishermen United. The fishermen will be eligible for compensation from Exxon.

Other fishermen, meanwhile, worried that the spreading slick will shut down even more lucrative salmon fishing this summer. The region's fishing industry is worth $150 million a year.

The ship has leaked oil since the Good Friday accident, when the vessel crashed into Bligh Reef and spilled more than 10 million gallons of oil.

Exxon said the ship should be emptied of remaining crude oil today, and salvage crews will try Wednesday to free the tanker from the reef.

Fishermen have formed the backbone of the cleanup, using their boats to pull containment booms across bays near salmon streams and sensitive fish hatcheries.

At Sawmill Bay, the hardest-hit hatchery in the sound and home to 2 million salmon, currents pushed oil against the booms. A light sheen made its way past barriers.

The hatchery holds more than 2 million salmon fry, which can be poisoned by small amounts of oil. Hatchery manager Eric Prestegard said they may have to airlift the fish fry to clean water, a double whammy to fishermen who fund the hatcheries through surcharges on their catch.

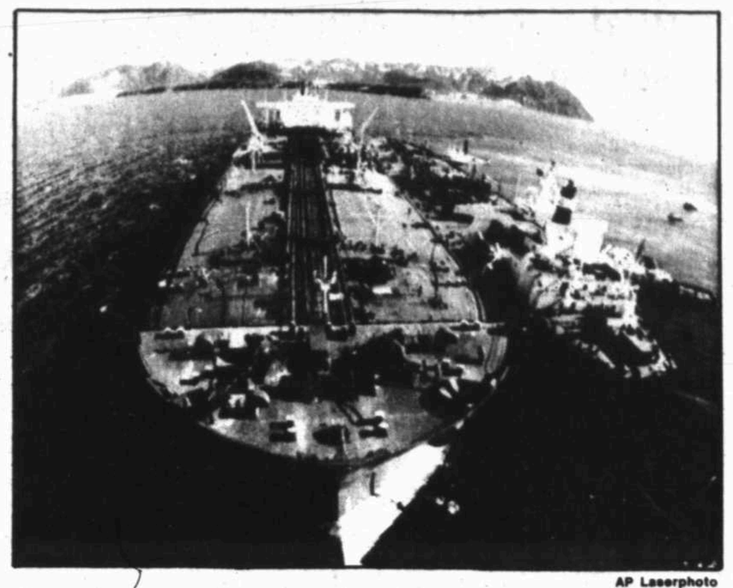

More than 1,000 seabirds and at least 30 sea otters caught in the oil have died. Some were found covered with asphalt-hard oil. Officials said the death toll is probably much higher, but they have had time to survey only a small portion of the sound's 2,500 miles of coastline.

"Every day, it's getting a little worse," otter rescue specialist Chris Donohoe said as he squatted by a dead duck. "You clean a beach up, the tide changes, and the oil comes right back."

Department of Fish and Game spokesman Jon Lyman said a deer found dead on Naked Island about 25 miles southwest of Bligh Reef apparently had eaten contaminated food, an indication of how rapidly the spill was spreading.

"That's bad news. That's the top of the food chain," Lyman said.

On nearby Green Island, hundreds of birds lay along the beach, as black and lifeless as the oil-smeared rocks around them.

The grounded tanker Exxon Valdez, left, unloads oil onto a smaller ship, the San Francisco, as efforts to refloat the damaged vessel continue. The Valdez ran aground near Valdez, Alaska, on March 24, spilling an estimated 10 million gallons of oil into Prince William Sound.

In other developments:

—Flow through the pipeline was increased, but remained below normal levels. The accident forced restrictions on tankers in Valdez harbor, the only port for the Trans-Alaska pipeline, which carries nearly one-quarter of the United States' domestic supply of crude oil.

—In an interview in New York, Exxon President Lee R. Raymond said he hopes the "emotional type of atmosphere" generated by the spill does not prompt Congress to reject the oil industry's request to drill in protected wildlife areas.

That's exactly what could happen, U.S. Interior Secretary Manuel Lujan suggested in Washington.

McKissack also talked about how parents can prevent dangerous situations involving children, including child pornography and incest.

Pointing out the eight international pedophile organizations, McKissack said the molesters are using everything from X-rated coloring books to computer link-ups around the nation to lure and sexually abuse children.

Parents viewed part of a pornographic version of "Little Red Riding Hood" and graphic slides that molesters use to make children think sex at an early age is OK.

One pedophile organization's slogan, he said, is "Sex by year eight, or it's too late."

McKissack also said parents should be aware of the lures of satanic organizations, which sometimes children turn to when their parents do not give them proper support.

Scaled down versions of Monday's program will be presented to all MISD elementary and junior high schools this month. The earlier the grade, the more simplistic the program.

Midland City Council PTA and Midland Independent School District representatives, who are sponsoring the program, have previewed and approved the material.

The children will not be seeing the nude Riding Hood or graphic slides of sexually abused youths.

Betty Bennett, mother of two elementary school pupils, said the program should have a positive impact.

"I think it's an extremely good program," Mrs. Bennett said. "It seems to be well put together and gave us a lot of good information.

"It really opened my eyes to what could go on and what does go on."

Diana Chatagnier, who has three children 10 years old or under, said that although shocking, the scaled-program should be suitable for children.

"I thought it was an excellent program," Ms. Chatagnier said. "They should have this all over the country."

A Soviet official said Monday evening that Gorbachev might have an announcement this afternoon relating to a Latin American issue, but refused to be more specific.

Gorbachev told the United Nations in December the Soviet Union was prepared to offer the least-developed countries a moratorium on debt service and "in quite a few cases to write off the debt altogether."

Castro has campaigned for years for cancellation of Latin America's $420 billion foreign debt, declaring it is unpayable and has contributed to economic decline throughout the hemisphere.

The Cuban revolutionary leader seemed ebullient after Monday's marathon talks, leaving no hint that any of the widely publicized ideological problems with Gorbachev were impairing their relationship.

A Soviet official, insisting on anonymity, said Western reports had been making too much of Soviet-Cuban differences.

He said the Soviet goal is to deemphasize ideology. But Castro himself has been a stalwart supporter of maintaining communist orthodoxy, criticizing Gorbachev for straying far afield with his campaign for greater openness and a restructuring of the Soviet economy.

Gerasimov said Gorbachev explained to Castro the details of last week's nationwide parliamentary elections, one of the most dramatic symbols of the Soviet leader's reform program because they were the country's first contested elections in seven decades.

Gorbachev was to speak to the assembly today after visits to local health and construction projects and a final meeting with Castro in early afternoon.

He is to leave for London on Wednesday morning.

The 15-year-old also said he had crossed the Rio Grande and entered the United States illegally on March 22, correlating with the three rafters' story that the sniper followed them after they beached the raft on the U.S. side of the river, authorities said.

Mexican police last Thursday, following Ramos' cousin, were led to the boy's uncle's home in Melchor Muzquiz, about 125 miles southeast of where the shooting incident occurred.

The hunt for the boy began March 27 when a five-man search team combed the area around the towns of Solis and San Vicente, just south of the shooting site, Quintero said.

Park spokesman Robert Rothe said this morning from Big Bend National Park headquarters that federal misdemeanor charges of possession of firearms could be filed on the three rafters.

"We expect that when the investigation is completed, we'll take the appropriate action," Rothe said.

The rafters — Reuben Saage II of Alpine, James Gentry of Houston and Russ Alexander of Riesel — were toting .45-caliber and 9mm pistols and reportedly fired at least five rounds into the air, park officials have said.

None of the men were injured when someone wearing an orange baseball cap fired possibly 30 times at them from the Mexican cliffs. Their weapons were confiscated by park officials.

Carrying weapons in a national park is prohibited by law. Conviction on a federal firearm possession charge carries a maximum penalty of a year in jail and a $500 fine.

Aldate said the boy said he fired his rifle only five times.

In addition to Exxon, the Atlantic Richfield Company and British Petroleum BP America Inc. have temporarily halted shipments of Alaskan crude.

Oil companies have had to fill the gap by bidding on the open market for so-called "spot oil" from other sources.

Joel Beck, an oil industry analyst from New York, said that the cartel of 13 OPEC countries cut their monthly output in hopes of causing prices to rise. From a low of $12.60 a barrel last October, crude has reached a high of about $21.50 recently.

Chevron Corp. spokesman Mike Libbey estimated that the effect of the Valdez catastrophe would peak at a few cents per gallon and disappear in a few weeks.

"The question that will be settled in court (is), 'Is the spill the proximate cause of gas prices rising?'" Seidenberg said. "We believe it is. Approximately 40 percent of California oil is received from the Port of Valdez."

TRADE

In 1987, the U.S. Commerce Department reported that foreign direct investments amounted to about half of all foreign investment transactions and 60 percent in terms of the value of those transactions.

Moreover, foreign direct investments make up for about 5 percent of all U.S. corporate assets and help finance the huge U.S. trade and budget deficits.

Among the top foreign investors in the United States are: the United Kingdom, followed by Japan, the Netherlands, West Germany, Italy, Australia, Switzerland, Canada, France and Sweden.

According to Remy, Texas lags behind its competitors in the northeastern, southeastern, midwestern and western states in terms of the number foreign direct investment transactions and the value of those investments.

Easy access to other domestic markets are partly to blame for Texas' poor relative performance because populations elsewhere in the country are viewed by foreign investors as one single, giant market, he added.

The commerce department spokesman based his prediction of Texas falling to third in the national ranking on the 626 manufacturing transactions in 1987 — in the form of acquisitions, mergers, new plants, plant expansions and joint ventures. Of those, Texas shared only 20, 3 percent of the total.

Prior to 1987, Texas' number one ranking in foreign direct investments was due to the heavy foreign investment in the petroleum refining sector.

As that sector sees less investment and more monies are poured into new high-tech industries, Texas' ranking in the future will depend on how well it attracts foreign direct investments to the industrial sector, Remy said.

Correction

NEW YORK (AP) — The Associated Press erroneously reported last week that NBC had tied CBS' record of 40 weeks atop the A.C. Nielsen Co. television ratings in 1962-63.

According to CBS, it won 46 weeks in a row in 1962-63. NBC acknowledged it erroneously computed data from Nielsen and miscalculated CBS' streak as 40 weeks in a row.

The Reporter-Telegram regrets the error.

BUMPER

Rep. Tony Polumbo, D-Houston, challenged Avena.

"Do you not believe that community standards ought to be out there, that we don't have to live in a sewer pipe just because some person out there wants to carry some filth on the back of their car?" asked Polumbo.

"I'm not in favor of the bumper stickers," Avena answered. 'I'm in favor of the First Amendment right.

"The (obscene) words themselves are provocative," said Haltom City Mayor Jack O. Lewis, who spoke in favor of Thompson's bill. "They have no place, in my opinion, in this (English) language."

Bills could change what juries are told

AUSTIN (AP) — Two proposals that would allow trial judges to pass on to juries the effect of parole and prison "good time" on a defendant's sentence were approved by the Senate on 26-5 votes Monday.

Brown

Sponsoring Sen. J.E. "Buster" Brown said his proposed constitutional amendment would leave no question that the Legislature "has the authority under our constitution" to inform juries about parole law and good time.

The amendment was sent to the House, after two senators pleaded unsuccessfully with their colleagues to take a closer look at it.

A bill spelling out how the law would be changed if the amendment is approved by the Legislature and voters also cleared the Senate 26-5.

Opponents argued that the proposal would result in longer prison sentences, which would require more beds for a prison system that is about to burst at the seams.

Sen. Craig Washington, D-Houston, called the measure "another bazooka in the prosecutor's arsenal."

Sen. Bob Glasgow, D-Stephenville, said it was an absolute mess" that is "fraught with error" and would "further confuse the jury."

"You're creating a monster" that district judges have told us they can't comply with, Glasgow said.

The 1985 Legislature amended the Code of Criminal Procedure to allow judges to charge juries on parole law and how juries could consider it in determining sentences. That provision, however, was declared unconstitutional in 1987 by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals.

Brown's proposals reinstating that practice are aimed at convicted felons.

Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, asked Brown if he would accept an amendment "to change the name of this act to the Mandatory Prison Overcrowding Act."

"The intent, of course, is not to increase sentences but to provide for a better informed juror," said Brown, R-Lake Jackson.

He added that the proposal — because so few felonies go to trial and even fewer result in convictions — would have a "minimum impact" on the state prison population.

In other action Monday, the Senate approved and sent to the House measures that would:

■ Eliminate the November deadline for issuing $200 million in Texas agricultural water conservation bonds.

■ Authorize the Texas Employment Commission to obtain criminal background information on persons applying for jobs considered "security sensitive."

■ Allow Texas Department of Correction employees, under certain conditions, to carry forward accumulated leave time.

Mauro angered at Manges' bid to reopen suit

AUSTIN (AP) — Land Commissioner Garry Mauro says South Texas rancher Clinton Manges "wants to pick the pockets of Texas school children" by reopening a long-closed legal case over oil revenues from Permanent School Fund lands.

Likening Manges to a rattlesnake, Mauro urged the Legislature not to grant Manges the opportunity to sue the state over a settlement the rancher agreed to in 1982.

"I'm angry. I'm furious. I'm outraged," Mauro said Monday. "I am outraged that a man who got a fair settlement, a settlement he wanted and agreed to, would go back on his word. And I am appalled that anyone would stoop so low as to attempt to steal money from the Permanent School Fund."

Mauro said that Manges, his wife and his children all signed the 1984 pact dividing the land in Duval County. But Sen. Hector Uribe, D-Brownsville, recently introduced a resolution to give Manges permission to sue the state over that agreement.

"You know, some people say that Clinton Manges never signed a contract he wouldn't break. And I'll tell you something. From where I stand, those people are right," Mauro said.

Manges was not available to comment, said his Duval County Ranch Co. office in Freer. He did not immediately return phone calls from The Associated Press.

At issue is an agreement Manges and his family signed in 1984 that settled a 1982 lawsuit the rancher brought against Mobil Oil Co. The state had joined in that action.

Under the agreement, Manges received nearly 50,000 acres of private land and, Mauro said, "agreed to waive all rights to receive any proceeds" over the one-sixteenth royalty he had retained with regard to 14,720 acres of Permanent School Fund land.

Income from oil production on those school fund lands goes to finance public education in Texas.

According to Uribe's resolution to allow Manges to sue the state, Manges now seeks half the $3 million earned from those 14,720 acres and half of any future earnings.

Voicing confidence the state would win if the case were reopened, Mauro said he was reminded of a story about a rattlesnake taken in by an elderly woman on a winter day. The snake later bites the woman and explains it by saying, "But you knew I was a snake before you took me in."

"I urge the Legislature to kill this," Mauro said. "It should never have seen the light of day."

Uribe, a lawyer who said he has done unrelated legal work for Manges, said he introduced the lawsuit proposal because it is a citizen's right to sue the state over such disputes.

"It's been a time-honored tradition that when someone feels that they have a cause of action against the state, that a resolution is presented to the Legislature. This is really nothing out of the ordinary," Uribe said.

"I want to give Mr. Manges the opportunity to have his day in court. That's all the resolution would do. It would not in any way adjudicate the issues," the senator said.

Firefighters fail to find 2 bodies in blaze

DALLAS (AP) — Firefigthers failed to find two people who were trapped in a two-alarm blaze late Saturday at a vacant apartment complex and did not find their bodies when they returned for a second outbreak of fire several hours later, authorities say.

The bodies of Jimmy Cornelius, 34, and his girlfriend, Julia Cornish, were discovered in separate bedrooms early Monday when some people were checking the damage at the vacant complex.

Cornelius had been hired by the building owner to live at the property and watch over it after a drug-related fireboming last month, arson investigators said. Saturday's fire appared to be accidental, they said.

Deputy chief Tom Oney of the department's arson investigation squad said the couple's pajama-clad bodies were partially visible through the debris and both were next to boarded over windows, suggesting they were trying to escape the original fire.

"The most probable thing is that they were there at the time of the first fire, so I don't know why they were not found," Oney said. "But whatever happened, it is a problem that they were still there today."

Department officials are conducting a two-part investigation to determine the cause of the fire and why departmental search-and-rescue procedures failed, according to Assistant Fire Chief Jack Hickey.

More than 50 firefighters who answered the first call Saturday night will be questioned, Hickey said.

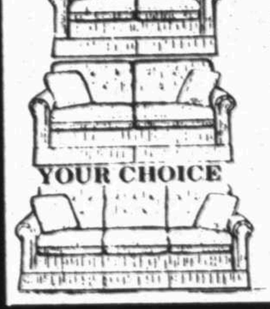

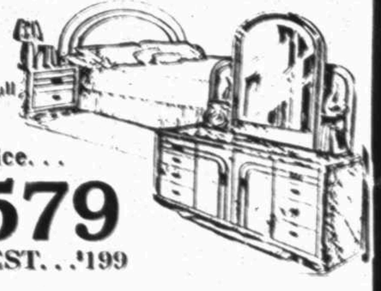

"We'll want to know who entered from where, how they attacked the fire and conducted their searches," Oney said.

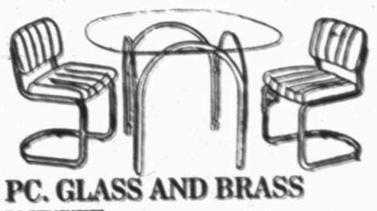

The results of the investigation will be sent to Hickey for review and possible disciplinary action, Oney added.

Mubarak defends Egypt's economic reforms, asks for continued assistance

WASHINGTON (AP) — Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak defended the scope and pace of his nation's economic reforms today and told members of Congress that Egypt needs continued high levels of U.S. economic assistance.

Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell of Maine described the 90-minute private meeting between Mubarak and 15 senators as "very beneficial and fruitful" but said commitments on the aid issue were neither sought nor given.

Both Mitchell and Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole of Kansas said senators told the Egyptian president that the United States must keep the large U.S. budget deficit in mind in dealing with all requests for economic and military assistance.

Mitchell said senators appeared favorably impressed with Mubarak's description of Egypt's economic reform program, including the reduction of subsidies on a number of consumer products and revisions in the country's tax structure.

Mitchell was asked if senators were satisfied at the pace of the Mubarak program.

"Obviously every national leader confronts the same general problem of the pace of economic reform," he replied. "We confront a similar problem in dealing with our budget deficit."

"The president argued that the pace he is pursuing is the one most appropriate to their circumstances and the one most likely to bring success," Mitchell said.

On another subject, Dole said Mubarak flatly denied reports that Egypt intends to acquire chemical weapons and said he was "quite angry about being lumped in" with such nations as Libya, which is widely believed to be ready to produce such weapons.

Israeli leader arrives, planning to oppose Bush's newest stance

NEW YORK (AP) — Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir arrived today on the start of a 10-day U.S. visit during which he plans to tell President Bush he opposes an international peace conference to end the Palestinian uprising.

Shamir arrived at Kennedy International Airport at about 6:45 a.m. and left quickly by car, said Officer Philip Montuori of the Port Authority police at the airport.

Deputy Foreign Minister Benjamin Netanyahu told a few reporters and about 70 supporters of Israel who gathered in front of the El Al terminal that Shamir could not appear because "he was whisked away by security." Netanyahu did not say where Shamir was headed.

Shamir was scheduled to speak this evening to a gathering of the Conference of Presidents of Major American Jewish Organizations. He was to depart for Washington Wednesday and return to New York next Tuesday.

Before leaving Jerusalem, Shamir indicated he would state his opposition to Bush's call for an end to Israeli occupation in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, where Palestinians have been in revolt for 16 months. He also said he would tell Bush he opposes an international peace conference.

"My position on all these issues is known. I'll have something to discuss with the leaders of the United States," Shamir said in reference to his rejection of the international conference idea and the U.S. "land for peace" formula.

Shamir, speaking shortly before leaving for the United States, expressed hope that Washington would find an interest in peace proposals he brings.

NATION

■ Related story — 1D

The 73-year-old premier refused to disclose his proposals, but said elections in the occupied territories "is one of the options we're thinking about.

"The aim of the talks in the United States is to exchange ideas and opinions with the administration and to estimate together the chances for opening peace negotiations...a joint effort to advance the process of negotiations," he said.

Bush, speaking Monday after meeting in Washington with Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, called for a "properly structured" Middle East peace conference — a concept which Shamir opposes.

"Egypt and the United States share the goals of security for Israel, end of the occupation and achievement of Palestinian political rights," Bush said.

News of the statement dominated Israeli media, which interpreted it as a sign of a growing American pressure on Israel.

Hours before Shamir's departure, about 500 activists of the Peace Now movement marched through Jerusalem to Shamir's residence with burning torches.

They shouted slogans such as "talk with the PLO" and "two states for two peoples." The Israeli government refuses to talk to the Palestine Liberation Organization, which it considers a terrorist group.

Shamir says an international conference would lead to other countries ganging up on Israel and forcing the yielding of land which Shamir's right-wing Likud Bloc maintains is an inextricable part of Israel.

Shamir's rival in the coalition government, Finance Minister Shimon Peres of the Labor Party, supports the conference and land concessions. He said Israel must take the lead in peacemaking or suffer a further loss of support in the United States.

"It's clear we have real losses in U.S. public opinion, and the American public opinion is one of our most important political assets," he said.

Foreign Minister Moshe Arens said in a radio interview that he did not expect American pressure on Shamir to change his opposition to talking to the PLO or accepting a Palestinian state demanded by the Arabs.

Costa Rican president pleased with U.S. compromise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Costa Rican President Oscar Arias Sanchez said today it's time to "change bullets for ballots" in Central America, but that cannot be done without the support of Cuba and the Soviet Union.

Following a meeting in the Oval Office with President Bush, Arias praised the United States for finding a joint executive-legislative compromise on a program of almost $50 million in aid for the Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

"Now people here can talk with one single voice," he told reporters gathered in the White House driveway following his nearly hour-long meeting with Bush. "I think, this time, they are, indeed, in good faith trying to support the efforts of the five Central American presidents to reach democracy and peace at the negotiating table."

Arias said that Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, who is visiting President Fidel Castro in Cuba, must persuade Castro not to support guerrillas in El Salvador if "he supports sincerely the Central American peace plan."

"War has taught us...that violence is not the solution," he said. "I think we have learned that we must change bullets for ballots, and we cannot do this without the support of Cuba and the Soviet Union."

Bush paused amidst a series of meetings with Mideast leaders to get an update on the Central American situation from Arias, who won the Nobel Peace prize two years ago for his mediation efforts in the region.

The talks with Arias come more than two weeks after Bush and bipartisan congressional leaders announced agreement on the new humanitarian aid plan.

Taking reporters' questions at the conclusion of his White House meeting, Arias said it was crucial that the repatriation of the counter-revolutionaries occur simultaneously with the institution of democratic reforms by the Sandinista government headed by President Daniel Ortega.

Otherwise, he said, "you cannot persuade the Contras to go back to Nicaragua...if you have nothing for them there. You need a big carrot."

Arias noted that there long had been arguments about whether the Contras should lay down their arms following democratization moves by the Sandinistas, or whether they should be dismantled as a fighting force before such steps are undertaken.

"I think this should be simultaneous," he said. "With repatriation there should be a democratic climate in Nicaragua or there is no reason for them to go back."

Arias, however, said he told Bush he was concerned about how free elections could be achieved in Nicaragua, noting there had been no such elections there in some 50 years.

"I am really worried as a Costa Rican about the organization of the next elections," he said.

Teachers ask for $10 billion for disadvantaged education

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's largest teachers union today called for $10 billion in new federal spending to counter "a shocking erosion" in education programs for the disadvantaged and handicapped.

"These programs reach only a fraction of the young people they were meant to serve," Mary Futrell, president of the National Education Association, said in issuing a report called "Federal Education Funding: Present Realities and Future Needs."

"In state after state, the numbers in our new report clearly demonstrate a shocking erosion of federal support for these essential programs," Futrell said in a statement. "Nothing could be more impractical for our nation than continuing this systematic underfunding."

Futrell said the NEA report contains the first estimates of what it would cost to serve all students currently eligible for help under four of the most important federal education programs.

NEA has more than 1.9 million members across the country. Its report comes as Congress prepares to tackle the fiscal 1990 budget.

The report looks specifically at Chapter 1, grants to bolster basic skills among disadvantaged youngsters; the Education for All Handicapped Act, which helps states educate disabled youngsters; bilingual education, grants to make sure students with native languages other than English succeed in school; and Pell grants for college students from low-income families.

The most serious erosion appears to have occurred in Chapter 1. The NEA report said the number of students served dropped from 7 million in 1980-81 to 5.7 million in 1988-89. At the same time the number of children in poverty swelled, so while the program reached 65 percent of eligible students in 1980-81, it reached only 40 percent by 1986.

For fiscal 1989, the group said, Congress provided $4.6 billion for Chapter 1 — enough to serve 47 percent of eligible students. To serve the estimated 8.5 million who will qualify next year, would cost about $6.9 billion — a $2.3 billion increase over current levels.

The authors of the 1974 handicapped act intended that the federal government would ultimately pay 40 percent of its cost to local school districts. But the federal share started at 12 percent and stayed there until 1980, and by fiscal 1989 had dropped to 7 percent, NEA said.

To reach the 40 percent target would cost $8.4 billion, a $6.5 billion hike over current levels, the report said. And though funding has doubled since 1980, merely restoring the federal share to 12 percent would cost an extra $700 million.

The bilingual education program currently serves one in 18 of students who need help in English language skills, NEA said. An increase of more than $1 billion would be needed to serve the 1.6 million students states report as eligible, the group said.

While funds for Pell grants have increased slightly when adjusted for inflation, the increases have not come near matching the soaring costs of postsecondary education, NEA said. It also said Congress has "fallen far short" of meeting its own authorized funding level for the individual grants. Another $600 million would be needed to fully fund the maximum $2,900 Pell grants permitted in fiscal 1990, the teacher union said.

Higher academic standards and a greater emphasis on analysis and problem-solving are "doomed to failure unless schools and communities can maintain programs to help all students meet those standards," the report said. It says the solution, given state and local economic constraints, is to fully restore the federal share of support for public education.

The NEA report was based on charts provided by Federal Planning Services Inc. of Washington D.C., an independent statistical analysis firm.

Greek immigrant named national teacher of year

HAMPTON, Va. (AP) — A Greek immigrant who teaches American government and international relations at Bethel High School today was named the National Teacher of the Year.

Mary V. Bicouvaris was to be introduced at a news conference at the National Press Club in Washington.

On Wednesday, she will receive a crystal apple from President George Bush at the White House, said Jay P. Goldman, a spokesman for the Council of Chief State School Officers. The council sponsors the award along with Encyclopaedia Britannica Inc. and Good Housekeeping magazine.

Mrs. Bicouvaris, 49, was selected over three other finalists, from Maryland, Louisiana and California.

Mrs. Bicouvaris is the first teacher from Virginia to receive the honor in the 38 years it has been given. She will spend the next year traveling around the country, speaking to civic groups and other organizations.

"She is representative of all that is good in education today and has earned for herself and her peers the nation's highest recognition for excellence in teaching," Dr. S. John Davis, state superintendent of public instruction, said in a statement.

Mrs. Bicouvaris, who is known by her students as "Mrs. Bic," said in a recent interview that surviving oppression in her Greek homeland has given her a perspective on American government that most teachers don't have.

"I have been fortunate to have been in two worlds," she said. "I have seen how things have been when there is war, when there is oppression. It has given me a further appreciation, I believe, for freedom. It has given me a further appreciation for opportunity for all."

When she was 5, her father was killed by the Nazis occupying Greece. Her uncle was rounded up with 39 other people and shot to death in retaliation for the death of a German.

Mrs. Bicouvaris came to this country when she was 20 to study at Ohio State University. She met and married Jim Bicouvaris and moved to his hometown of Newport News.

Along the way, Mrs. Bicouvaris also decided to do more than teach about democracy. In 1968, she became an American citizen.

Communist voters welcome choice

Considering the historical lack of choice — and concurrent heavy-handed rule of Communist stalwarts — the results of the recent elections in the Soviet Union shouldn't surprise Americans. In fact, it should have been a foregone conclusion that voters would reject traditional Communist Party candidates at the polls.

Not since 1917 have Soviet voters been permitted the luxury of choice in selecting their elected representatives. Seven decades of pent-up energy burst forth to defeat the mayor of Moscow, the Communist Party leader in Leningrad, the president and premier of Lithuania, the Estonian KGB chief, the commander of the Northern Fleet, the commander of Soviet troops in East Germany and other prominent party officials nationwide vying for seats in the new Congress of People's Deputies.

Beyond that predictable response, though, the greatest surprise is that the elections were held at all. They wouldn't have been had it not been for Mikhail Gorbachev's new approach to internal as well as international affairs.

Although the election returns are not yet complete, it's increasingly clear that the biggest loser was the Communist Party's Old Guard. The biggest winner, by most accounts, was Boris Yeltsin.

Yeltsin, who resigned from the ruling Politburo in 1987 and was subsequently removed from the Moscow party leadership, ran a populist campaign that would have put to shame the late U.S. Sen. and Louisiana Gov. Huey Long, popularly known as the "Kingfish."

Assailing the privileges of the ruling class, party insider Yeltsin won an astounding 89.4 percent of the Muscovite vote. As the most visible symbol of popular discontent with party hacks, Yeltsin will almost certainly be elected to the 542-member Supreme Soviet, a new full-time legislature. In fact, he says he wants to form a coalition of like-minded representatives, who will press for more extensive political and economic reforms.

Yeltsin's dramatic political resurrection is viewed by many observers as a threat to Gorbachev. But on the contrary, the canny Soviet leader will in all likelihood use his former friend as a political foil on the left. Consequently, the Gorbachev reform program, which until this point has been denounced by some party hard-liners as too radical, could appear moderate by comparison to the Yeltsin agenda.

The election results should strengthen Gorbachev's hand in other respects as well. For example, the Supreme Soviet will almost certainly include a significant bloc of Gorbachev loyalists. The clash of competing ideas within the new congress also will enable the Soviet leader to flush his opponents out into the open.

That doesn't mean Gorbachev's new agenda for the Soviet Union has passed its final test, but it has made a surprisingly strong start.

Next step in Kabul

For nine years, Washington's aims in Afghanistan were not difficult to grasp or support. The Soviet Union had invaded a nonaligned neighbor to impose an unwanted regime on a fiercely independent people. Arming an indigenous resistance made moral and political sense even at the cost of letting Pakistan's armed forces channel weapons to favored guerrilla leaders.

But should a new U.S. administration stick to the same policy, and the same channels, now that Soviet forces have been withdrawn? If so, President Bush needs to show that such a course serves peace and justice, not just Pakistani desires.

Washington originally pledged to stop arming the resistance the moment Moscow withdrew its 140,000 troops. But when Mikhail Gorbachev agreed to do just that, the Reagan administration shifted ground, saying the president hadn't understood the declared policy and that the U.S. would keep arming its allies as long as the Soviets did the same.

In principle, this made a kind of symmetrical sense — either mutual abstention or mutual intrusion. The problem is that Pakistan's military intelligence has for years used U.S. aid to bolster the most anti-Western Islamic fundamentalist among resistance leaders, Gulbuddin Hekmatyar. Pakistan's view was frankly explained by its late military ruler, Gen. Mohammad Zia ul-Haq, in an interview with a U.S. scholar, Selig Harrison:

"We have earned the right to have a very friendly regime in Kabul. We won't permit it to be like it was before, with Indian and Soviet influence there and claims on our territory. It will be a real Islamic state, part of a pan-Islam revival, that will one day win over the Moslems in the Soviet Union, you will see."

Is this still the goal of Pakistan's military under Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto?

It's hard to see what American interests would be served by a fundamentalist triumph in Afghanistan. The policy of letting Pakistan decide which factions to back is hard to reconcile with Washington's high-minded pleas for peace, reconciliation and reconstruction. A special problem is posed by American-donated Stingers, the hand-held rockets capable of downing airliners. Some of these have evidently been passed or sold to Iranians.

Though Pakistani experts long claimed that the Kabul regime would instantly crumble without Soviet troops, that hasn't happened. A fragmented resistance has not yet managed to take Jalalabad and proclaim a provisional capital. Kabul would now exploit these divisions by dealing directly with local guerrilla commanders. Given these rivalries, the civil war could continue, leaving Afghanistan split into Soviet, Pakistani, Iranian, Chinese and Indian zones of influence.

After the Soviet pullout Washington needs to move beyond a policy of open-ended, eyes-closed military aid to the Afghan resistance. Events have reached a new stage, but policy has not kept pace. It wouldn't hurt, for example, if the Bush administration were to sound out Moscow on the feasibility of a mutual arms cutoff, aimed at encouraging a broad-based regime in Kabul open to all save Marxist and Islamic radicals.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, April 4, the 94th day of 1989. There are 271 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On April 4, 1968, civil rights leader Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. was shot to death in Memphis, Tenn., where he had gone to support a strike by sanitation workers. He was 39.

On this date:

In 1818, Congress decided the flag of the United States should consist of 13 red and white stripes and 20 stars, with a new star to be added for every new state of the Union.

In 1841, one month after his inaugural, President William Henry Harrison succumbed to pneumonia, becoming the first U.S. chief executive to die while in office.

In 1850, the city of Los Angeles was incorporated.

In 1887, Susanna Medora Salter became the first woman to be elected mayor of an American community, Argonia, Kan.

Meat inspection falls to trade pact

WASHINGTON — The Free Trade Agreement between the United States and Canada has prompted both nations to be freer with the traded meat than may be palatable to U.S. consumers.

Jack Anderson

Before the Free Trade Agreement, every truckload of Canadian meat entering the United States was supposed to be inspected to make sure it was up to U.S. Agriculture Department standards and could carry the USDA seal of approval.

Under the new system, a computer in Washington, D.C., randomly chooses trucks of meat, still in Canada, that will be inspected at the border. A Canadian inspector then picks a sample from that load and sets it aside on the truck bound for the United States. U.S. inspectors at the border will look at that sample and nothing else.

That means a load of meat — contaminated with feces, abscesses, hair, grease and blood clots — could cross the border undetected because it was not on the truck with the sample picked by the computer for inspection. Inspectors and others in the meat import business told our reporter Jill Schmidt that about one in 12 trucks has been inspected since Jan. 1. If the sample on the 12th truck is found to be contaminated, the meat is not allowed into the country. But what of the other 11?

Reports of the USDA Food Safety and Inspection Service show that in the first two months of the new program, only 16 loads of Canadian meat were rejected at the border. In the last two months of 1988, under the old program, 31 loads of Canadian meat were rejected. Meat can be rejected for minor, major or critical amounts of things the USDA considers unacceptable for the American palate — bone, feces, abscesses or other filth.

Inspectors say that even some of the trucks carrying an inspection sample have crossed the border without inspection because the border guards didn't know those trucks had been earmarked for inspection. Some of those trucks were called back. But inspectors fear that some trucks slated for inspection get by without being discovered.

It is obvious that the United States has lost control over Canadian meat imports. The U.S. Customs Service directs the import traffic at the borders, but Customs agents do not routinely open the trucks. Instead, they look at the paperwork. If the papers say the truck is supposed to be inspected, it is sent to an inspection station. If not, the truck is waived through.

Many U.S. inspectors are not happy with the new system, even though the meat comes from an industrialized nation with high meat inspection standards of its own. After Australia, Canada is the second largest exporter of meat to the United States. Canada led the way in meat rejected by U.S. inspectors last year.

Perhaps the most disconcerting loophole in the new system is the fact that the randomly selected samples are handled by Canadian meat inspectors. When the computer in Washington selects a load of meat, the inspector in Canada pulls out a sample from that load. The new system trusts that the inspector won't clean up that sample.

On the grocery shelf, the Canadian meat does not carry the USDA stamp of approval. Instead, it is labeled with a Canadian inspection seal.

Jackson's 'rainbow' loses its Chicago luster

CHICAGO — On a rainy afternoon in the dreary Stateway Gardens public housing project a few days before the election for mayor, the Rev. Jesse Jackson faced a dilemma: how to mobilize desperately needed black voters here without undermining his credibility as a national political leader?

Jackson, independent mayoral candidate Tim Evans, Rep. John Conyers of Michigan and other black leaders, at a rally in the Stateway gym, launched a late drive to get black public housing residents to the polls today. Only that can prevent the return of a white man, Cook County State's Attorney Richard M. Daley, to the mayor's office. Failure would mean humiliation for Jackson in his adopted city.

But nationally, Jackson cannot run the risk of seeming to play racial politics here. "This campaign has nothing to do with race. This is a battle for the soul of the Democratic Party," he told us, blaming journalistic distortions for the wide perception that this election is black vs. white.

That is a tough sell for the twice and future presidential aspirant. The alliance with liberal Jewish voters built by the late Harold Washington, the first black mayor, is in ruins. With Hispanic voters backing Daley, Evans has only blacks to rely on. Embarrassingly, Jackson's Rainbow Coalition in his hometown is down to a single color.

Rowland Evans and Robert Novak

That is clear in the 11th-hour effort by the money-starved Evans campaign to energize Chicago's black masses, dulled by division among black leaders ever since Washington's death following his 1987 re-election. There is not enough of the fervor displayed by Tommy Robertson, a 19-year-old bookbinder, when he told us blacks must not lose the power they won in 1983. "We can't be stopped now, 'cause we've already tasted the honey," he said.

To similarly energize more blacks, fear-generating rhetoric is the mirror image of what desperate white politicians were saying six years ago. Noting that Daley's south-side home is only six blocks away, State Rep. Lovana Jones told the rally that "you or I cannot walk safely in his area after dark" — a reverse of whites fearing to walk black streets.

Bluntly racial appeals represent a step backward from Jackson's 1988 progress as a non-racial national leader of the Left. Consequently, he insists this contest is not about race or party loyalty but an ideological contest between two Democrats.

He easily quashes the indictment against him, handed down by Reps. Bill Lipinski and Marty Russo, as a renegade opposing the party's nominee. Jackson passes out 1987 mass mailings signed by the two congressmen urging support for a white independent candidate against Democratic nominee Washington. Even Daley strategists stipulate Jackson's point.

But he is on shakier ground contending that nearly 50 Democratic office holders endorsing Evans prove this is Democratic civil war, not heresy. On his list, only three city aldermen and one state representative are white. As for contesting the soul of the party, the main issue cited by Jackson carries the race label: a disproportionately high percentage of white lawyers in the state's attorney's office, discriminating against blacks. "Rich doesn't pick his prosecutors by racial quota," says a Daley intimate.

In fact, Daley is no Frank Rizzo or even a Richard J. Daley. Abandoning the strait-laced social conservatism of his father, he wooed and won homosexual political leaders. He also has captured some of the elder Daley's foes, notably ex-Alderman William Singer, who brought Jackson into politics in 1972 in the drive to unseat Mayor Daley's Democratic convention delegation. Singer has performed crucial behind-the-scenes chores for his old enemy's son.

Daley may be supported by marginally more black politicians than Evans is by whites, starting with the Democratic National Chairman Ron Brown, an ex-Jackson lieutenant making his second visit to campaign for Daley this week. City Treasurer Cecil Partee backs Daley (whom he would like to succeed as state's attorney). Outgoing Mayor Eugene Sawyer, defeated by Daley for the Democratic nomination, is publicly neutral but cannot forgive Evans for non-support in the primary. Behind the scenes, Sawyer's operatives back Daley.

That is the final Chicago indignity for Jesse Jackson. While his Rainbow is a monochrome, he has also failed to motivate black leaders.

Can Sununu's different template help Bush?

WASHINGTON — A joke is told in politico-economic circles, attributed to Robert Strauss, about the unhurried deliberation — or lack of necessary urgency — that characterizes the Bush administration.

William Safire

The president is awakened by the sound of puppies crying in the night and goes down to the White House kitchen for a snack of pork rinds and a glass of milk. Unfamiliar with the surroundings in the dark, he bonks his head on the refrigerator and is out cold for three and a half years.

When he opens his eyes in 1992, refreshed after his long rest, he sees the face of White House chief of staff John Sununu peering down at him. Bush's first words are "How fares the nation?"

"Everything is in great shape," Sununu reports. "Peace, prosperity without inflation, the kinder-gentler thing doing fine. One of Millie's grandpuppies just had her first litter, and the Post Office is delivering the announcement cards."

The president warily asks for specifics: "How much does it cost to mail a letter from Washington to California?"

"Same as last year," shrugs Sununu, "300 yen."

To discover if such complacency is rampant at the center of power, and to track down the source of a troubling new phrase, I visited Sununu in his West Wing office.

He is, as they say, sharp. When I recalled hours spent in that corner office with a previous occupant, and added wistfully, "Say what you like about Haldeman, nobody ever ran into his motorcades," Sununu smiled and replied, "I'll mention that to Cheney."

He had caught the obscure allusion to inept presidential motorcading during the Ford administration when Dick Cheney was chief of staff.

On the other hand, he is still insecure and wet behind his White House ears. In our interview, which was on foreground, he had his deputy sit in to take notes, sign of a player new to the big leagues and fearful of being misquoted.

He had his secretary rush in with a message about being late for a meeting with the president, which he waved off to flatter his visitor but also to impress him with the value of the time being taken up. That hoary heave-ho technique is known to Oval Officiators as "the 10-minute bounce."

Asked about the perception of leisureliness in governance, the near-palindromic aide offered a fresh metaphor to explain the failure to understand the Bush approach: "Ours is a different template."

Translation: You can no longer use the Reagan template on the keyboard of power. (A template in this sense is a plastic instruction sheet cut out to overlay the computer's keys.) The Bush template reflects a different processing system: if you hold down Alt and push F9, you will now get conciliation where you used to get confrontation.

I take this to mean, for example, that the deal made with Speaker Wright to keep the Contras fed while giving a policy veto on Nicaragua to Congress would be an unprincipled cave-in on the Reagan template, but is a net pragmatic gain on the Bush template.

The chief of staff "had a little chat with" Boyden Gray about the way the president's counsel, shut out of that Baker-Sununu-Scowcroft project, objected publicly. I think Gray was right in trying to stop an evisceration of presidential power, but Sununu disagrees.

He was not trapped by what was artfully presented as a linguistic question. The phrase enhanced rescission is being whispered in the corridors of power. Sounds like a tricky euphemism; what does it mean?

"It's an alternative to the line-item veto," he said, suggesting Bob Dole as the best source about that, I presume to avoid letting it appear to be an executive initiative.

The power to impound — to not spend — funds appropriated by Congress was taken away from a weakened president in 1974; Reagan's counterattack, the line-item veto, never had a chance of passage.

That leaves a middle ground of "rescission," or getting Congress to agree to rescind parts of appropriations, to be "enhanced" by making unnecessary the current affirmative legislative action.

The upshot would be a substantial giveback of executive authority, as evidence that the Tower appointment precedent and the Contra-veto usurpation were not waves of the future. It would show, too, that the Bush White House was effectively at work behind the scenes, progressing without grandstanding.

Will Sununu and budgeteer Dick Darman win this for President Bush? I don't see how, if their standard becomes a white feather on a flapping doormat, but for my different template, I am willing to plunk down about 300 yen.

Daley favored to win Chicago mayoral race

CHICAGO (AP) — Voters turned out in heavy numbers early today to decide whether Richard M. Daley should capture his father's political mantle and end black control of the mayor's office.

The first two hours of voting indicated that 70 percent of the city's 1.56 million registered voters would go to the polls, said Tom Leach, spokesman for the Chicago Board of Elections.

"That's a pretty good vote, third highest in history for a municipal election," he said.

The Democratic nominee, whose father ruled Chicago for 21 years until his death in 1976, has enjoyed double-digit leads in the polls but warned of complacency on the eve of the ballot.

"It's a problem when these polls come out and they tell you you are so far ahead," Daley said Monday night. "I think it's going to be a close election."

The Cook County prosecutor's chief rival, Alderman Timothy Evans, campaigned with Jesse Jackson and appealed to blacks by invoking the memory of Martin Luther King Jr., who was slain 21 years ago today.

"Help me to carry out Dr. King's dream. The movement lives," Evans said at a service for King.

Evans, who is black, is running on a third-party ticket against Daley and Republican Edward Vrdolyak. All three worked neighborhoods and faced cameras in last-minute pleas for votes.

A telephone poll released Monday by The Daily Chicago Southtown Economist and WBBM-TV gave Daley 51 percent to 35 percent for Evans and 3 percent for Vrdolyak. The poll had a margin of error of plus or minus 3 points.

The election was the most closely watched of several races around the country. Voters today were choosing mayors in several Midwestern cities, filling a vacant Alabama congressional seat and voting on a handgun ban in a Chicago suburb.

The winner of Chicago's court-ordered election will serve the final two years of the term won by Harold Washington, the city's first black mayor who died in November 1987.

Eugene Sawyer, a black alderman, was appointed acting mayor but lost by 100,000 votes to the 46-year-old Daley in Feb. 28's Democratic primary.

A Daley victory would make Chicago by far the biggest city in the nation to replace black control of City Hall with white. The city's voting population is 48 percent white, 42 percent black and 7 percent Hispanic.

"I've run a good campaign," Daley said. "I've had a campaign away from the name-calling and the yelling. People are sick and tired of (that)."

Daley said he and his wife, Maggie, planned to visit his father's grave today "to put everything in perspective." It has been his election day tradition to visit the graves of his father and his son, Kevin, who died in 1981 at age 2.

Richard J. Daley ran a patronage army during his reign as mayor. Despite later court rulings limiting city hiring and firing for political reasons, Evans has often invoked the name of the late political boss in warning that his son would bring back "machine politics" to serve only the well-connected.

Jackson stumped for Evans as he has done for five weeks. He called the election a "struggle for dignity" and "open government" and alluded to King.

Sawyer didn't get Evans' endorsement in the primary, a factor many say contributed to the acting mayor's defeat. Sawyer, in turn, declined to support Evans, 45, who ran on a ticket named after Washington.

Vrdolyak, 51, a former alderman and former chairman of the local Democratic Party, hasn't won an election since switching parties in 1987.

He said he would become mayor "if people look at qualifications, instead of white people saying they want a white mayor and black people saying they want a black mayor."

The city elections board estimated 70 percent of Chicago's 1.56 million registered voters would go to the polls.

Family and friends of victims of last year's bombed Pan Am Flight 103 lay flowers during a rally in Lafayette Park, across the street from the White House on Monday in Washington. The explosion of a Boeing 747 over Lockerbie, Scotland, killed 270 people.

Families of Flight 103 victims say government 'insensitive'

By MATTHEW C. QUINN
Hearst Washington Bureau

The White House later issued a statement saying Bush had "expressed his sorrow and deep concern with respect" to the relatives.

WASHINGTON — Relatives of Americans killed in the December sabotage bombing of Pan Am Flight 103 over Scotland complained to President Bush Monday of the "incompetent" and "insensitive" treatment they got from their own government in the aftermath of the tragedy.

"I think he was shocked," Paul Hudson, an Albany, N.Y., lawyer said of the president after a 65-minute meeting in the Oval Office. Bush promised "corrective action" and said he would open lines of communication with the relatives, the lawyer added.

Hudson's 16-year-old daughter Melina was one of 270 people killed when the Pan Am Boeing 747 jumbo jet exploded over Lockerbie, Scotland, Dec. 21. Eleven of the 270 were killed on the ground.

Hudson, a spokesman for a family network set up by victims' relatives following the crash, was one of five such relatives to meet Bush Monday and to speak with reporters in the White House driveway afterward. Also attending the meeting were Transportation Secretary Samuel Skinner, White House Chief of Staff John Sununu and presidential national security adviser Brent Scowcroft.

The White House later issued a statement saying Bush had "expressed his sorrow and deep concern with respect" to the relatives and had asked Skinner to keep in touch with the group. "The meeting was sensitive, solemn and productive," it said.

A short time after the relatives left the White House for an afternoon vigil in Lafayette Square across the street from the White House, Skinner announced new security measures.

He said airlines will be required to acknowledge all Federal Aviation Administration security bulletins within 24 hours and to install equipment to detect plastic explosives in all high-risk airports worldwide.

The U.S. government has been criticized for warning diplomats and soldiers — but not the general public — of threats against flights from Frankfurt, West Germany, to the United States in advance of the crash. Flight 103 was bound from Frankfurt to New York with a stop in London.

Investigators have said plastic explosives concealed inside a radio-cassette player were responsible for the explosion on the jumbo jet but have not said who was responsible.

Hudson told reporters there had been "a complete breakdown and lack of services by the State Department" following the crash in its dealings with relatives of victims.

"It was insensitive. It was incompetent and it was embarrassing for us as Americans to be represented by such an agency because their incompetence showed in front of nationals of other governments and as an American we were embarrassed," said Hudson, who is also general counsel of the New York State Crime Victims Board.

He complained that the State Department offered scant assistance to the families when they were dealing with the British and West German governments.

"We had to deal with foreign governments as an organization individually, virtualy alone. We have heard from other victims of terrorist actions and we are not the first to have experienced this," Hudson said. "The president assured us that this sort of thing would be corrected."

Hudson also said that he has yet to recover his daughter's belongings. "She had four suitcases. Everything she owned is in a warehouse in Lockerbie, Scotland. I can't even get the identification forms out of the State Department," he said.

In meetings with Bush and members of Congress later, the relatives pressed for an independent congressional investigation of the government's handling of the incident. They also pressed for tightened security procedures to help thwart another terrorist bombing.

Hudson said his group wants an investigation into how the government handled advance warnings.

"We're looking at why the security system was so ineffective and why even after the bombing, it was still not really tightened in a significant way," he said.

Supreme Court upholds use of drug courier 'profiles'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Law enforcement officials are armed with new support from the Supreme Court to fight drug smuggling by air travelers.

The justices on Monday made it easier for authorities to stop, question and search airline passengers who fit so-called "profiles" of possible drug couriers.

By a 7-2 vote, the court ordered the reinstatement of a drug possession conviction of a man carrying 1,000 grams of cocaine when he was stopped by authorities at the Honolulu airport.

"We're pleased and happy that we've been upheld by the Supreme Court," said Cornelius Dougherty, spokesman for the Drug Enforcement Administration.

The justices upheld the DEA's case against Andrew Sokolow, who was stopped because his behavior and dress matched a "profile" the agency uses to identify suspected drug couriers.

Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist, writing for the court, said there were sufficient factors to lead agents to reasonably suspect Sokolow was engaged in criminal activity.

"The fact that these factors may be set forth in a 'profile' does not somehow detract from their evidentiary significance as seen by a trained agent," Rehnquist said.

In a dissenting opinion, Justice Thurgood Marshall said the ruling likely will lead to questioning and detaining innocent people.

"Reflexive reliance on a profile of drug courier characteristics runs a far greater risk than does ordinary, case-by-case police work of subjecting innocent individuals to unawarranted police harassment and detention," he said.

Marshall was joined by Justice William J. Brennan.

Attorney General Dick Thornburgh hailed the ruling, saying it "validates an effective practice...to crack down on drug trafficking."

"Without this tool, our anti-drug effort could be significantly hampered," Thornburgh said in a statement. "By upholding the 'profile' practice, the Supreme Court has struck a strong blow in support of law enforcement's war on drugs."

Sokolow was stopped by DEA agents on July 25, 1984, as he returned to Hawaii from a trip to Miami.

Authorities said he aroused their suspicions three days earlier when he and a female companion departed from Honolulu airport for Miami.

They said Sokolow, who appeared to be in his mid-20s, bought his plane tickets with $2,100 in cash taken from a roll of money that appeared to contain more than $4,000. He was wearing a black jumpsuit and a great deal of gold jewelry, appeared nervous, and he and the woman with him carried four handbags on the plane without checking any luggage.

The agents also suspected he was using an alias because the name he gave the ticket agent was not the same as the name listed for the telephone number he gave the agent.

Such behavior, dress and demeanor fit the profile of a drug courier, narcotics agents said.

Sokolow pleaded guilty to possession of cocaine with intent to distribute and was sentenced to five years in prison. He appealed the conviction on grounds the cocaine should have been suppressed as evidence because authorities violated his constitutional rights against unlawful search and seizure when they stopped him in Honolulu.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals threw out the conviction, ruling that suspicion of a crime "cannot be intuited from a hodgepodge assembly of factors about individual character."

But the Supreme Court said the accumulated factors weighed by the agents were enough to permit them to question Sokolow and detain him. They subsequently obtained a search warrant after a police dog indicated a handbag contained narcotics.

"Any one of these factors is not by itself proof of any illegal conduct and is quite consistent with innocent travel," Rehnquist said. "But we think taken together they amount to reasonable suspicion."

For example, Rehnquist said, traveling from Hawaii to Miami may not be suspicious. But, he said, "Surely few residents of Honolulu travel from that city for 20 hours to spend 48 hours in Miami during the month of July."

The use of drug courier profiles has survived previous high court scrutiny. Monday's ruling may give authorities a freer hand to use them.

Customs steps up flight checks after drugs found on Americans

Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — Customs agents have stepped up preflight checks of U.S. military personnel and their families leaving Panama because drug traffickers there have been using the Americans to smuggle millions of dollars worth of cocaine into the United States.

At least 15 Americans, including two soldiers, have been intercepted by Army agents in the past 15 months and charged in federal court with trying to transport 136 pounds of cocaine worth an estimated $6.2 million, according to officials with the Army's Criminal Investigation Command (CIC).

In companion operations, the U.S. Customs Service has seized at least 236 pounds of cocaine from American military personnel arriving from Panama on commercial and military flights over the past 18 months.

In addition, federal agents have broken up smuggling operations that relied on six U.S. soldiers, a civilian aircraft mechanic and two Panamanians carrying forged U.S. military travel documents to gain access to American military flights.

To thwart additional smuggling, the Customs Service since last year has conducted a "100 percent" check of all baggage and passengers boarding military flights leaving Howard Air Force Base in Panama, officials said.

"The pre-departure inspection includes inspection of the cargo and baggage areas by trained drug dogs," according to a spokesman for the Military Airlift Command that operates 700 flights a month for Americans in and out of Panama.

Military officials admit they may be catching only a small percentage of the drug traffickers.

The threat of continued drug trafficking into the United States prompted Pentagon and Customs agents to meet here last month in an effort to improve cooperation and intelligence sharing, officials said.

"Our investigations (of smuggling) are continuing," said Lt. Col. Robert A. Flocke, spokesman for the CIC, the Army's worldwide criminal investigation operation. Additional arrests and seizures could come at any time.

"Smugglers are like the blockade runners during the Civil War," Flocke said. "They're still trying to make it through."

Michael Fleming, a spokesman for the Customs Service, admitted that the agency is not sure that it has shut down all drug running with military couriers. "I'd hate to say categorically that the route has been closed," he said.

The drug operations, run by Panamanian traffickers with ties to the multibillion dollar cartels based in adjacent Colombia, have relied on "pure greed" to lure into the world of drug-running a handful of the 12,000 American forces assigned to Panama, an official said.

Ambulance stolen because woman was late for work

MIAMI (AP) — A woman who said she was late for work stole an ambulance and struck another car before she was stopped, according to authorities.

"I couldn't believe it," said Eduardo Fabregas, who was left by the road Monday with two other paramedics and a patient who had complained of respiratory problems.

"The truck was rolling right away from us," Fabregas said. "I thought it was a joke. I thought it was some other fireman pulling a joke on us, taking it around the corner, or something."

The Miami Fire Department ambulance was parked with its motor running when 32-year-old Aurelia Small jumped in and took off, police said.

She sideswiped a station wagon before she was forced off the road by police about 30 blocks away.

Ms. Small then told authorities she had stolen the ambulance because she was in a rush to get to work on time, Miami fire spokeswoman Vicki Wade said.

Ms. Small was charged with auto theft, preventing and obstructing extinguishment of fires, and driving without a license.

NATION IN BRIEF

Third World debt plan wins approval

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States won a pledge of prompt action today on its Third World debt-reduction program from the two most powerful lending agencies, the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank.

On the final day of the two organizations' spring session, their steering committee said moving forward with the proposal was "a matter of urgency."

However, a key element of the plan authored by Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady was not endorsed by the steering committee. The finance ministers agreed only to examine further a proposal for reducing interest rate payments.

The Brady approach marks a major change in past administration policy by placing more emphasis on debt foregiveness.

The $1.3 trillion Third World debt burden has crippled the economies of the developing nations and sparked economic and political unrest in many emerging democracies in Latin America. Riots left at least 270 dead in Venezuela last month after the government announced a new austerity program to please the creditors that hold the nation's $33 billion debt.

Under the plan, commercial banks that have lent money to debtor nations would be encouraged to cancel voluntarily or reduce part of the loans, or cut the interest charges.

The financing for the plan would come from the two international organizations, and the Bush administration has projected $25 billion in total support from the two groups. But IMF managing director Michel Camdessus refused to state the exact amount they will offer.

Search for bodies continues

COVINGTON, Tenn. (AP) — For the couple standing vigil beside a collapsed highway bridge, the waiting was harder than knowing if their loved one was killed along with seven others when the 55-year-old span gave way.

"They brought up a piece of car that was the same color as his," Paul Hurst said Monday as searchers continued looking for victims in the rain-swollen Hatchie River.

Seven bodies have been pulled from river since the bridge collapsed Saturday night. But authorities continued their search today, operating under the belief at least one more car is still submerged.

Hurst said his half-brother, Adrain Jones, 26, has not been seen since shortly before a 90-foot section of the U.S. 51 bridge fell, sending cars and a tractor trailer rig plunging 25 feet into the water.

"He left the hospital and I went to Memphis the same time," said Hurst, who with his wife, Brenda, has been waiting beside the river since they first heard of the bridge collapse a few hours after the accident.

"He didn't make it. He was going back to Ripley because his daddy was sick and he was going to stay with him."

Duke's funds from all over

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Former Klansman David Duke received contributions from around the country in his successful race for a state House seat, campaign finance records show.

Duke's report filed Monday showed he collected $137,000 and spent $116,000. Fellow Republican John Treen's report showed he collected $198,900 and spent $189,000.

Most races for the 105-member House cost candidates less than $30,000.

Duke, 38, defeated Treen by 227 votes in the Feb. 18 special election to represent a nearly all-white district in Metairie, a New Orleans suburb.

The Republican National Committee donated $16,500 to Treen and shunned Duke, a former grand wizard of the Ku Klux Klan and founder of the National Association for the Advancement of White People.

Grandfather saves 5 kids

REMBERT, S.C. (AP) — With no telephone nearby and the fire department three miles away, a man watched helplessly as flames engulfed his mobile home and took the lives of six children, five of them his grandchildren.

"I woke up when the fire bug (alarm) went off and tried to get all the children out," Willie English, 57, said Monday.

Five other grandchildren who had been sleeping managed to escape with English after the fire broke out early Sunday. One of them suffered a burned hand, family members said.

"I heard the fire alarm and my cousins let the window up and pushed the screen out and all four of us got out the window," said Jacobia English, 11, who lost two brothers.

Club to appeal cup ruling

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The San Diego Yacht Club will appeal a judge's order forfeiting the America's Cup to New Zealand because the event "cannot survive under the vague rule of the court's decision," the club's commodore said.

"The decision was so wrong, I don't see how anyone could have accepted it. The historical footnote on our yacht club is unacceptable because the decision was wrong," Commodore Patrick Goddard said Monday.

Yacht club attorneys will file documents with the appellate division of the New York Supreme Court seeking a reversal of last week's decision by Judge Carmen Ciparick, which awarded the Cup to defeated New Zealand challenger Michael Fay.

Witness: Reagan told North to help Contras

WASHINGTON (AP) — A defense witness at Oliver North's trial says the late CIA director William Casey had made it known that President Reagan designated North to help keep the Contras alive.

Vincent Michael Cannistraro, who worked with North on the National Security Council staff, said Monday that Casey told a Contra leader in the spring of 1984 of North's pivotal role in the event Congress should cut off military aid to the rebels.

"Mr. Casey...said he had discussed this with the president of the United States...and this was how it should be handled," Cannistraro testified.

Cannistraro, one of the first witnesses called by North, is the first to state outright that Reagan had chosen North to work for the Contras.

Cannistraro was also one of the first witnesses called by North as the former White House aide began his defense Monday on charges of lying to Congress and White House officials about his role in assisting the Nicaraguan rebels.

At the meeting in Casey's office, the CIA director said North as an NSC staffer wouldn't be subject to a congressional prohibition on aiding the Contras, Cannistraro testified. Casey said North was to become the "principal point of reference," according to Cannistraro.

Congress banned U.S. intelligence agencies from assisting the Contras as of October 1984.

Former national security adviser Robert McFarlane has testified he was the one who directed North and an NSC colleague "to do everything they could" to keep the Contras functioning and their morale up.

Reagan told the Tower Commission, which investigated the Iran-Contra affair, on Jan. 26, 1987, that "he did not know that the NSC staff was engaged in helping the Contras."

Cannistraro also testified he expressed concern about North's safety to NSC superiors but that the government did nothing on North's behalf after a spokesman for terrorist Abu Nidal threatened to kill the NSC aide. The threat against North came after U.S. warplanes bombed Tripoli, Libya.

"He expressed concerns about his family's safety," Cannistraro said of North. "He did not express concern about his own safety."

Boston known as 'generalissimo' of capital flower beds

WASHINGTON (AP) — The capital is awash in laughing daffodils, a grand chorus of tulips is about to proclaim the arrival of spring, and Milton Boston already is worrying about planting thousands of geraniums, petunias and marigolds for the summer.

Boston is chief floral gardener for the National Park Service in downtown Washington, the generalissimo with rake and hoe who oversees the year-long planting of 170 flower beds from the Capitol to the Kennedy Center.

His job might seem staggering to backyard putterers. For a month in late fall, the efficient, unflappable Boston and his crew of eight gardeners were busy planting 186,150 tulips, 108,300 daffodils and 22,000 pansies, all of which bloom in the spring.

Those flowers are removed by early May. The soil is tilled, fumigated with weed and pest killers, conditioned with perlite and peat moss and planted with bright, hardy annuals for Washington's hot summer months. They are weeded and fertilized until they die in the first frost. They are replaced by about 3,000 crysanthemums. Then the beds are cleared and the cycle starts again in November.

Boston, a 26-year Park Service veteran, is especially proud of the "tulip library," a broad, looping cluster of 95 small beds of the proud clarions of spring that lies near the Tidal Basin south of the Washington Monument.

This elaborate garden contains 15,000 tulips, most of them imported from Holland. Each of the 95 beds containing a different variety, with names as dazzling as their colors — Queen of Night, Merry Widow, Apeldoorn, Oriental Splendor, Smiling Queen, Flaming Parrot, Estella Rijnveld.

It's so impressive that it won an admiring tribute from the Dutch Embassy.

Milton Boston, chief floral gardener for the National Park Service, sits in a flower bed in Washington Monday. He is responsible for the year-long planting of 170 flower beds from the Capitol to the Kennedy Center.

Boston says he gets "great satisfaction" from his handiwork, which delights more than 23 million tourists who visit Washington's national parks and monuments each year.

"This is always what I wanted to do," said Boston, 45, who grew up on his father's farm in eastern North Carolina and migrated to Washington after high school. "All my life I've been used to growing things."

His annual $330,000 budget includes the cost of plants and bulbs purchased wholesale from growers, many from neighboring Maryland and Virginia, on the basis of competitive bids and shipped into the capital by truck or van.

During plantings, Boston's crew begins work at 6 a.m. and can leave a flower bed blazing with color before the morning rush hour is over. He says he couldn't meet his grueling timetable for the passing seasons without his eight Park Service helpers.

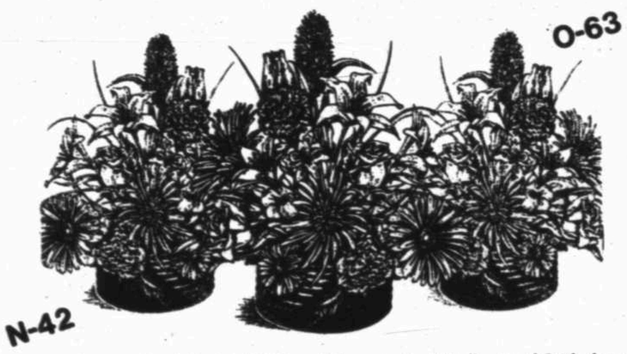

"They really work hard and do a good job," he said. "They're all gardeners, and they know what they're doing. They can plant 20,000 bulbs in one day."

Boston says he once had "the best-looking yard in the neighborhood" in suburban Capitol Heights, Md., where he lives with his wife and two children, "but in this job, I don't have the time any more to take care of it."

His loss is Washington's gain.

Soup kitchen plans benefit fajita dinner

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The Blessings-for-Obedience Soup Kitchen, which served more than 25,000 free meals in its first year of feeding the poor, the hungry and the downtrodden in Midland, is hoping to expand its services.

"There are a lot of needy people," said Kelly Coleman, co-founder of the Blessings-for-Obedience ministry. "For a lot of people, it (the soup kitchen) is the only chance they have of getting a meal everyday."

And a lot of Midlanders and out-of-towners passing through will have an opportunity to share in the Blessings-for-Obedience ministry and to get fed at the same time this Saturday in the downtown Midland Center.

The occasion is the Blessings' "A Fajita Dinner" in which beef and chicken fajitas will be served in a fund-raising venture to help finance expansion of the Soup Kitchen. Donations for the dinners are $15 each for adults and teen-agers and $7 each for children who are 12 and under. Donations are tax deductible, Coleman said.

"Anybody who wants to give a penny or a thousand dollars or anything in between...would be a real blessing," said Coleman, a 32-year-old Midland landman who is president of Blessings for Obedience. During the serving, musicians will be playing and singing spiritual and gospel music.

Money raised Saturday will be used to enlarge the Soup Kitchen at 1009 S. Terrell St. The present building is a salvaged portion of an old World War II U.S. Army barracks, which was remodeled into a kitchen and dining room as a Christmas-In-April project.

"We got Christmas-In-April to help refurbish it," Coleman said. "Volunteers from different churches came in and donated their time."

Daily meals are served at the Soup Kitchen from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. For six days a week, Monday through Saturday, Soup Kitchen co-directors Mario and Maria Rendon, who live next door to the Soup Kitchen, prepare and serve meals and organize helping crews.

On Sundays, volunteers prepare and serve meals.

"A different church in town will take a month of Sundays," said Coleman. "We have got it covered."

At each of the noon weekday meals, between 107 and 140 men, women and children are served. On weekends, the count drops to about 45 people per meal.

"We never know who is going to be eating there," said Coleman. "There are a lot of regulars."

Among those being fed are the "new poor" — those who have lost jobs and income due to the prolonged slow-down in the economy during the "bust," which followed the oil boom of the late 1970s and early 1980s.

"There are a lot of needy people. For a lot of people, it (the soup kitchen) is the only chance they have of getting a meal everyday... We never know who is going to be eating there. There are a lot of regulars."

— Kelly Coleman
of Blessings-for-Obedience

Food for the Soup Kitchen comes from various sources, primarily from the Permian Basin Food Bank. Additional food is donated by restaurants, such as Cattleman's Restaurant, The Sandwich Company and Grandy's, and pastry shops, including, Kick's Bakery, T&T Donuts and Happy Days-Daylight Donuts. Bottled water is donated by Wellspring Water.

"It's a full meal," said Rendon, and we give special treatment. "All they do is sit down, and we do the serving. We start it with a prayer and Scripture from the Bible."

"We do pray for people, too," said Coleman. "We are a Christian ministry. And we want to tell people about the Lord, so they can call on Him for help. We have prayer before and after (meals). We have different pastors that come in and might give a brief message."

Blessings for Obedience is a two-fold ministry, which operates the Soup Kitchen and carries out an international missionary outreach program.

"We have radio nets twice a week on three different ham-radio bands," Coleman said. "And we find out what missionaries need around the world and what's happening in the body of Christ in different areas of the world."

Blessings for Obedience seeks to help fulfill those needs with food and supplies, including medicine, and in manpower.

The outreach program was organized in 1987 by Coleman and Don Matthews, who now is a missionary in China. The following year, in March 1988, the Soup Kitchen was opened under the guidance of Coleman, Doug Wight, and the Rendons.

"Doug (Wight) was in our prayer group," Coleman recalled. "Doug had a burden for feeding the hungry and the homeless in Midland. And we just put it all under the umbrella of Blessings for Obedience.."

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

Mario Rendon, left, and Kelly Coleman will be among those preparing and serving fajitas Saturday in the downtown Midland Center to benefit the Blessings-for-Obedience Soup Kitchen.

TDC inmates hope their stories set students straight

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Twenty-year-old Marcus and Bert, 19, pay no rent and live in a roomy house on a green plain in Huntsville. They can see and hear the traffic that whirs nearby on Interstate 45 between Dallas and Houston.

The trouble is, they can't leave.

Marcus and Bert are both serving seven-year sentences for burglary at the Wynne Unit of the Texas Department of Corrections. The pair, who use only their first names when touring schools, are in Midland this week to tell their stories to school-age youngsters who are feeling the pressures to abuse marijuana, cocaine, and alcohol, the same pressures that they succumbed to and turned them into "cons."

Marcus, an inner-city Houston native with a choirboy face, today told seventh-graders at Alamo Junior High School he "started hanging around bad crowds...and got turned onto smoking pot." After his expulsion from eighth grade, "I started to steal. Then I graduated from smoking pot to snorting cocaine."

Soon, he needed $200 a day to support his habit, and became a burglar. But the law caught up with him.

"When you're constantly doing wrong, life is going to catch up with you one day," said Marcus, talking quickly. "It's too late for me, but it's not too late for you.

"Getting up in the middle of the night and looking through steel bars is very depressing."

Bert, a sandy-haired former high school football star from Pasadena, told the Alamo students he got into trouble with alcohol and cocaine.

"I went to school drunk, and started to get a lot of attention," he said. Then, he began using cocaine, and with some friends decided to burglarize an automobile electronics store. He was caught and sentenced to seven years probation.

"I lucked out," he said, but soon he was before a judge again.

"Son, have you ever done any time?" the judge asked.

"No," Bert replied defiantly.

"Well, you're fixing to," the judge said, revoking the probation and enforcing the seven-year sentence.

"All it takes is one bad decision," Bert said, recalling the sadness of family members that visit him regularly.

Both inmates are dressed in crisp white prison uniforms, with short hair and bright, alert eyes. They laugh easily, but when talk turns to their past, the smiles fade.

"We're sick and tired of seeing young people come to our department," said Garland Flakes, an assistant administrator at TDC who is traveling with the inmates. "It's not a pleasant place to be...cold water only, and bars for a front door."

Flakes told the students if they would like to share a cell the size of a pingpong table with another criminal, the state will make room for them.

Vehicle runs into rear of school bus

From Staff Reports

A bus load of Midland school students, ages 9-16, escaped serious injury Monday during a two-vehicle accident in the 3100 block of W. Front Street, police said.

According to police reports, 19 students were aboard the Midland Independent School District bus about 8 a.m. when the driver of a 1984 Pontiac ran into the rear of the vehicle which had stopped at a railroad crossing.

A school nurse was called to the accident scene to determine the extent of the students' injuries. Two pupils were treated for minor injuries, MISD Communications Coordinator Ted Miller said.

Wes Washam, coordinator of MISD Transportation Services, said most of the students on board were being transported from South Elementary School to Burnet Elementary School. Others were scheduled for stops at Scharbauer Elementary School and Lee High School.

The MISD bus driver, Larron S. Herring, 24, and the driver of the Pontiac, Kermit S. Forsdick Jr., 37, both of Midland, were not injured in the accident.

Forsdick was cited for following too closely, according to Cpl. Jim White, public information officer for the Midland Police Department.

Groups to pick Christmas in April projects

From Staff Reports

The 17th annual Christmas in April program will move one step closer to realization Thursday when church groups, civic clubs and businesses pick their projects for this year's work day.

Selection night will be at 7 p.m. Thursday in the fellowship hall of Alamo Heights Baptist Church, 1305 N. Midland Drive. The project work day will be April 29.

Project founder Bobby Trimble said there will be about 150 homes for groups to select from and that at least 80 groups are expected to pick their projects Thursday.

All former CIA groups and first-time participants are invited, Trimble said.

Houston man wins $1,000 for 'trashy' artwork

AUSTIN (SWN) — A symbolic giant black whale partially buried in the sand and made mostly from black plastic garbage sacks was the winner of the "Trash for Art's Sake" contest held Saturday in Galveston. The contest was part of Texas Adopt-A-Beach's semi-annual beach clean-up efforts.

Serious artists from across the state combed Texas beaches for debris ranging from hypodermic syringes to an incredible collection of abandoned shoes to form into trash sculptures. A juried show of 58 entries depicted themes from the serious to the whimsical as artists vied for a $1,000 first prize.

Houstonian Jeff Poss' gigantic "The Whale" was created from chicken wire stuffed with cans, bottles, shoes, and trash bags of all colors and varieties. Its head and flukes rose from the sand and the wide-open rope-lined mouth held even more plastic-based garbage inside.

Authors think learning history should be fun

By ROBERT CARTER

PLAINVIEW (AP) — Virginia Hulbert and Billie Matthews have a long line of family history intertwined with the Texas Revolution and Texas history, and they tell that history in a series of children's books, including their latest, "Davy's Dawg."

The sisters collaborated in writing the books, and they also give presentations to school children, including one earlier this spring at Wayland Baptist University here.

"Since we started writing books we've been in quite a few schools around the state," said Mrs. Matthews, adding that their schedule includes a Bluebonnet festival this month at Sam Houston State University in Huntsville.

"What we try to do is involve the children with books," Mrs. Hulbert said of the presentations. "Let the kids be a part of it."

...They don't realize how much Texas history they're learning because they're having...fun..."

— Billie Matthews

Mrs. Hulbert, of Longview, has a master's degree in elementary education and was a classroom teacher for many years in East Texas public schools. She is now an educational diagnostician.

"Let them (school children) learn good ole Texas history and have fun too. They don't realize how much Texas history they're learning because they're having so much fun doing it," said Mrs. Matthews, of Houston. She attended Houston Community College and has been active in fine arts groups in Southeast Texas.

Both are members of the Daughters of the Republic of Texas. Stephen and Sarah Cottle, the women's great-great-great-grandparents, were among the first Texas territory settlers in the early 1800s. Ancestor George Washington Cottle died at the Alamo.

"Davy's Dawg," originated from historical documents detailing the use of dogs by men at the Alamo.

"Those dogs posed a problem for attacking Mexican soldiers," said Mrs. Matthews. "'Davy's Dawg' is an account of the attack of the Alamo as seen through the eyes of Davy Crockett's dog, Rip."

The sisters' second book, "Where the Bluebonnets Grow," is about two young girls and their adventures at the time of the Texas Revolution. The setting is during the "Runaway Scrape" when many Texans were running from the Mexican Army.

In the co-authors' first book, "Clouds Over Texas," two young boys, one Anglo and the other Mexican, are involved in battles of the Texas Revolution.

"In 'Clouds,' we worked to bring the two cultures (Anglo and Mexican) together," Mrs. Hulbert said.

Her sister added, "We've taken the things that have really happened to our families and incorporated them in the book."

To bring humor to the children, Mrs. Matthews' son suggested the women write "Davy's Dawg" with several dogs speaking only English, several dogs speaking only Spanish and a few dogs being bilingual. Such an arrangement provides situation comedy, especially when Rip has a translator for his girlfriend.

Failed cable cuts power

An underground cable failure at an electrical substation on West Cuthbert Street left about 1,700 northwest Midland residential customers of TU Electric in the dark Monday night.

The power outage began at 9:11 p.m. according to Stan Garrison, western region customer service manager for TU in Midland.

Some customers in the affected area — bounded by Wadley Avenue on the north, Golf Course Road on the south, Garfield Street on the east and Midkiff Road on the west — were without service for up to an hour, while TU crews transferred the customers to other power feeds, Garrison said.

The cause of the cable failure had not been determined by midmorning today.

Western Region Manager Bill Griffin noted that the 1,700 residences affected were only "a small fraction," of the 45,000 TU Electric customers in the city, adding that any disruption of service is regrettable, as the company apologized for any inconvenience caused by the outage.

Robbery suspects sought

Midland County Sheriff's officers are searching for several men who were involved in a robbery and an attempted robbery at the same convenience store Monday evening.

According to reports, the men walked into the 7-Eleven store, 131920 West U.S. Highway 80, about 7:45 p.m., and one of the men picked up a carton of cigarettes. He approached the counter and told the clerk, 34, that "this is a holdup." He then pushed the clerk down and ran from the store, reports said.

The suspects reportedly drove west from the store in a 1973 Dodge with a white racing stripe.

At about 10 p.m., two men entered the store and tried to steal several cartons of cigarettes. No money was taken in either incident, and the clerk was uninjured, according to Sheriff Gary Painter.

Blood drive planned

Physicians and Surgeons Hospital will conduct a blood drive from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Wednesday at the hospital, 3201 Sage St.

United Blood Services, a non-profit corporation which supplies blood for the hospital, will be in charge of the drive.

Persons wanting to donate should go the the hopsital lobby. They must be at least 17-years-old and weigh at least 110 pounds.

Those who have had hepatitis, cancer within the last 10 years or diabetes requiring insulin are eliminated from consideration as donors as are former intravenous drug users, or those belonging to a high-risk group for contracting Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome.

For more information, contact Denise Kemp at the hospital, 683-2273.

Alcoholism to be discussed

James L. May, director of the Family Wellness Center, will present a program for St. Mark's United Methodist Men at 6:30 p.m. Thursday.

May

May's topic is "Adult Children of Alcoholics." About 30 million American adults grew up in an alcoholic environment, according to May. Most of them are unaware of the effect this had on their lives.

May is a doctoral candidate in marriage and family therapy at Texas Tech University. He holds degrees in industrial engineering from the University of Houston abnd the University of Pittsburgh.

St. Mark's Methodist Men is a fellowship open to all Midlanders. The group meets at the church, 1701 N. Main, the first Thursday of each month. Cost of the evening meal is $5.

Soldier sentenced to death

KILLEEN (AP) — An Army private convicted of robbing and shooting to death two cab drivers during a nightlong crime spree in December was sentenced to death by a court martial panel.

The eight-member panel returned the death sentence verdict for Pvt. Dwight J. Loving after about four hours of deliberation Monday.

"Private Loving, I hope God has mercy on you for what you did to these two people," Judge Stephen Saynisch told Loving after explaining the appeals process to him.

The court martial panel also ruled Loving must forfeit all pay and allowances and receive a dishonorable discharge, the Killeen Daily Herald reported.

He was convicted Friday of robbing and fatally shooting part-time cab driver Pvt. Christopher Fay, 20, of Fort Hood, and cab driver Bobby Sharbino, 44, a retired Fort Hood soldier.

The men were killed the night of Dec. 12 in the taxicabs they were driving.

Loving also was convicted of the robbery and attempted murder of a third cab driver, Howard Harrison, 28. Although he was was bitten on the head, hand and back while fighting with Loving in the cab, Harrison managed to escape and run to safety, officials said.

The Army private also was convicted of robbing two convenience stores in Killeen that night.

To assess a death penalty, the panel had to reach a unanimous verdict and find that "aggravating circumstances" existed beyond reasonable doubt.

After the verdict was reached Monday, Lou Sharbino, wife of Bobby Sharbino, praised prosecutors and the sentence.

"It gets one person who is very dangerous off of the streets," she said.

Presentencing testimony in the case was heard last week.

Pvt. Forrest Brown, once a prisoner at Fort Hood Installation Detention Facility where Loving has been held since his December arrest, said that in January Loving confessed to killing two Killeen cab drivers and shooting a third.

Brown told the court martial panel Saturday that Loving said he "did it the first time to see if he could get away with it and did it the second time because it was fun."

Students' tuberculosis test results not yet complete

EL PASO (AP) — Officials will know later this week how many students and staff at a middle school were exposed to the germ that causes tuberculosis while an infectious student attended classes for months, believing he had the flu.

At another school — Guillen Intermediate — 103 students and 12 staff members tested positive last week for exposure to tuberculosis after another student attended classes for several months, also believing she had the flu.

The El Paso City-County Health District began testing 1,275 students and staff Monday at Wiggs Middle School.

Health district director Laurance Nickey said his office ordered the tests last week after the two students were diagnosed to have tuberculosis. Both students were contagious while in school, and doctors apparently mistook the tuberculosis symptoms for the flu, Nickey said.

Those who test positive to exposure to the bacterium that causes tuberculosis will be treated to prevent the infection from developing into the full-blown disease, he said.

"We expect the vast majority will not get the disease," Nickey said. "Just because they have been infected with the tuberculosis germ doesn't necessarily mean they have disease."

Tuberculosis destroys the lungs. It is often spread by airborne bacteria.

The 115 at Guillen school who tested positive for exposure to the disease will receive chest X-rays to determine whether the tuberculosis bacteria have infected their lungs, principal Ray Peregrino said.

"There is no need for panic in the city (or) at Guillen," Nickey said. "Everyone is under constant review and we really won't know how severe the problem is until the X-ray" results are obtained.

About 1,100 people were tested at Guillen.

Nickey said students and staff at the schools who tested negative will be retested in May, just before school lets out for the summer.

Smoking, AIDS shows planned

From Staff Reports

Dimension Cable Service will preempt regularly scheduled programming for one hour tonight and next Tuesday on channel 4 to present timely health-oriented news specials.

"Smoking: Everything You and Your Family Need to Know," is scheduled for 7 p.m. tonight. The Home Box Office-produced special reveals facts and information about America's life-threatening addiction to tobacco.

"AIDS: Everything You and Your Family Need to Know...But Were Afraid to Ask," will be cablecast at 7 p.m. April 11.

Both documentaries will feature a "hot line" telephone number, flashing across the bottom of the screen throughout the programs. Viewers can receive additional information and pose questions to medical authorities at Midland Memorial Hospital by calling the number. MMH, along with KNFM Radio and the Reporter-Telegram, are co-sponsoring the Dimension Cable program.

"We believe that by raising the awareness of the health threats posed by cigarette smoking and AIDS, we will come that much closer to ending these serious health hazards," said Doug Smith, general manager of Dimension.

Both shows are hosted by U.S. Surgeon General Dr. C. Everett Koop. In the smoking special, Koop provides answers to commonly asked questions and presents new facts on the effects of passive smoke on children, spouses and co-workers, as well as the special health risks of smoking for women.

The AIDS program, based on the latest research from the U.S. Public Health Service, is a candid one-hour documentary designed to dispel misconceptions and unnecessary fears by providing answers to oft-asked questions.

The inmates, who are staying at the Midland city jail, have a busy week ahead. After spending the day at Alamo, they will appear at a public forum at 7 p.m. at the fine arts building of Midland College.

Bert and Marcus also will visit two more junior high schools, Midland Freshman High School, Culver Youth Home, Lee Freshman High School, a Lions' Club luncheon, the Greenwood schools, and a Rotary luncheon.

The inmates are visiting the city through the efforts of the Midland Crime Prevention Commission, Flakes said, and are supported by area law enforcement agencies.

"It is telling it like it is," Sheriff Gary Painter said. "It is telling these kids what it is going to be like. It is bringing reality to the classroom."

Bert said things may have been different if he had the opportunity the Alamo students were given today.

"I never saw this program when I was a kid," he complained, catching Painter's ear. "Would it have helped you if you did?" the sheriff asked.

"Yes," he said, looking down. "I think it would."

OPPORTUNITIES FOR VOLUNTEERS

This is National Volunteer Week and the Volunteer Center salutes the many individuals who daily reach out to others as community volunteers. Their time and effort are very much appreciated.

Check your calendars. Assistance is needed with a golf fundraiser scheduled for Friday, April 21. You can help with registration, measurements, witnessing par threes, and clean-up. A variety of two hours shifts are available.

Also, volunteers can expand the world in which a mentally retarded individual lives. As a local frequent caring visitor, you can provide friendly, support and companionship, share in activities and occasional outings. Ages of clients range from preteen to young adults.

Help youngsters whose parents are learning non-abusive parenting skills. Volunteers are needed to provide individual attention and positive role models to children in planned group activities. Training is provided and a commitment of two or four evenings per month is requested.

Here's an opportunity for youth to volunteer. Mow and edge the yard of an elderly, disabled person. You provide the equipment and schedule this much-needed service to fit your timetable.

School is still in session and tutors are still needed. Local agency tutoring programs need your special talents. Share a few hours a month listening to a child read, assist with simple math, or encourage youngsters at risk of dropping out. Times are flexible, locations are varied, and all kinds of children await your help.

For more information on how you can volunteer, please call the Volunteer Center at 697-8781.

"Plastics continue to be a significant problem on Texas beaches," says Land Commissioner Garry Mauro, chairman of the Texas Adopt-A-Beach Program.

"We are supporting legislation which would require manufacturers to encode products with symbols identifying the types of plastic resins used. Encoding would simplify the recycling process and make it profitable for collectors and manufacturers."

The plastics bill was passed unanimously by the Texas Senate and awaits hearings in the House.

Second prize was awarded to Karen Ezell of Galveston, for "Bed Bugs." Ezell collected an entire bed frame washed up on the beach, painted it white, and festooned it with stylized critters.

Third prize went to Ruthie DeFalco of Houston for "The Heart Break Madonna of West Beach," a shrine to the Ridley turtle. The shrine featured a bronze skull of a turtle imbedded in an auto wheel atop a tower of trash.

Ridley turtles are an endangered species. They are frequently found entangled in fishing nets or dead after they mistake plastics for food.

At least two entries included medical waste products such as hypodermic syringes and a plastic hospital bag. A double handful of syringes were stuck into segments of styrofoam on one large free-form sculpture.

"Medical wastes are only a small part of a larger trash problem we have on Texas beaches," said Mauro.

"But they are there and they are real. We've tested some of these syringes and usually find they contain insulin. That may mean diabetics on ocean-going ships are dumping their used needles in the garbage, and that garbage is going over the side."

Abandoned girl's father to seek custody

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz. (AP) — An Arlington, Texas, resident whose ex-wife abandoned the couple's 3-year-old daughter barefoot on an Arizona highway before embarking on a hit-and-run spree to Los Angeles will try to gain custody of the girl in a hearing today.

George Owuor, 29, seeks custody of his daughter, Elizabeth "Buffy" Owuor, who was left on a desert road Wednesday by her mother, Kimberly Mae Owuor, 30, who was arrested Saturday in Los Angeles after she had rammed several vehicles.

Arizona authorities said Buffy's guardianship could be transferred from her mother to her father in the Superior Court hearing because the alleged abandonment gave the state jurisdiction over the case.

Mrs. Owuor was awarded custody of the girl in a divorce a year ago.

"I definitely want to get her," her father, a native of Kenya, told The Dallas Morning News. "I've been buying her clothes and getting her bedroom ready, so I think everything is going to be just great."

Buffy, who was uninjured, has been in a shelter since Wednesday, when a motorist took her to authorities after he saw the barefoot girl beside Interstate 40 about 40 miles west of Flagstaff.

Buffy was identified Thursday by former neighbors of the divorced couple after KXAS-TV of Fort Worth broadcast her photograph.

Mrs. Owuor, of Topeka, Kan., was arrested Saturday after highway patrol officers spotted her Ford Grenada on the Pacific Coast Highway near Malibu. The car's right front tire was missing and she was driving on the rim, Williams said.

BEE SMART

The Reporter-Telegram will sponsor the 1989 Regional Spelling Bee April 15 at Midland College.

School spelling champions from Midland, Martin, Glasscock and Upton counties will compete for the top prize of an all-expenses-paid trip to the National Spelling Bee in Washington, D.C.

This daily column on words, their spellings, meanings and origins will be published through April 14. These words are typical of those used in bees but may not necessarily be used in competition.

wan'rit'

wainwright — (noun) Your great-grandparents probably were familiar with the work of a "wainwright" — a maker and repairer of wagons. It is a compound word. "Wain" is a wagon or cart and can be traced back to Old English, Germanic and Norse origins. In the early part of this century, factory-assembled automobiles and trucks were used for transportation and diminished the need for wainwrights.

Couple found dead in car after returning from bridal shower

CARROLLTON (AP) — Two Carrollton residents died after they apparently fell asleep in their idling car inside a garage after returning from a bridal shower, police said.

Lauren Hunter, 28, and Brian Houck, 32, who were to be married May 6th were found Monday afternoon in their car that was still loaded with gifts from the shower, according to police Sgt. Gary Anderson.

Anderson said it appeared the couple had fallen unconscious in the idling car after parking in their garage Sunday night. Carbon monoxide was believed to be the cause of death, he said.

Police went to the home after a co-worker of Ms. Hunter's said she had failred to report for work.

Anderson said the preliminary investigation indicates that Houck, who was employed at Garland Heating and Air, had fallen asleep in the passenger seat on the drive home.

"When they arrived home, the woman drove into the garage and closed the door," Anderson said. "...(W)e found them in the car with an empty gas tank and the garage door closed."

"The preliminary investigation indicates it was probably accidental," said Anderson, who added that alcohol may have been a factor in the accident.

Whales arrive at Sea-Arama

GALVESTON (AP) — Two young Pacific black whales once destined for Japanese dining tables were adapting to their new quarters Monday at Galveston's Sea-Arama Marineworld.

The whales made a 30-hour flight to their new home under a coating of zinc oxide to keep their skin moist. They completed their lengthy trip by truck and airplane Sunday morning, said chief trainer Ken Ramirez.

The other pair are at the Indianapolis Zoo.

Since being captured in December by commercial fishermen from Japan, the whales had been held in a small bay, sealed off from the ocean where they became adjusted to captivity.

The 13-foot female whales, which weigh about a ton each, will be named and displayed later this week, Ramirez said.

Training soon will become part of the whales' daily routine, Ramirez said. At first, they will be used to educate visitors on how training is accomplished.

Later, they will become part of the show, performing the jumps and spins that are part of their natural conduct.

Chopper makes forced landing

DECATUR (AP) — A U.S. Army Chinook helicopter made a forced landing in a North Texas field after its crew detected possible transmission trouble, authorities said.

The CH-47D twin-engine transport helicopter was flying from Fort Sill, Okla. It landed on private property shortly after 7 p.m. Monday about 10 miles east of Decatur and a half-mile north of U.S. Highway 380, according to Capt. Doug Whitehead of the Wise County Sheriff's Department.

"They got to make a good landing in an open area," said Whitehead.

Three people were on board the aircraft, Fort Sill officials said. No injuries or damage to the aircraft were reported.

Another smaller chopper following the Chinook picked up at least one crew member from the grounded helicopter and traveled on to Fort Worth, Whitehead said.

Long distance companies complain about SW Bell's access charges

AUSTIN (AP) — The amount Southwestern Bell charges long distance companies to use the local network causes calls between Texas cities cost too much and hurts the economy, a group of telephone companies said in a letter to lawmakers.

But a spokesman for Southwestern Bell said his company, which has proposed lowering the long distance access charge, has kept basic local service rates down by balancing those rates against long distance access charges.

"High intrastate long distance rates are a significant deterrent to economic development in Texas, and a burden to residential and business users alike," said the letter signed by representatives of ClayDesta, MCI, US Sprint, AT&T, Metromedia and ITT.

The companies, in the letter distributed Monday, said that it is "cheaper to call from Dallas to Honolulu than it is to call from Dallas to Waco. In fact, it's cheaper to call anywhere in the U.S. from Texas than it is to call practically any place within Texas."

More than half of a Texas carrier's costs of providing long-distance service is made up of the charges paid to the local telephone company for access to the local network, according to the letter.

The companies said Southwestern Bell's Texas access rates, set by the Public Utility Commission, are more than double the rates set by the Federal Communications Commission for interstate calls and at least 57 percent higher than rates the company charges in any other state.

AT&T spokesman Rick Morrison said the company pays 20.8 cents per minute in Texas for access to the Southwestern Bell network. That compares to 9.4 cents in Oklahoma, 10.4 cents in Kansas, 11.4 cents in Missouri and 11.8 cents in Arkansas, he said.

In Texas, access charges make up about 70 percent of AT&T's cost of handling a long-distance call, he said.

Southwestern Bell has proposed an economic development plan called "Texas First" that includes a freeze on local rates for five years and upgrading of the state network.

Part of the plan would lower charges to long-distance companies for use of the local network, and Southwestern Bell has said that reduction could allow long distance companies to lower rates.

But the long distance companies said the proposed reduction is "nominal" and would "have little impact on Texas long distance rates."

Morrison said the "Texas First" proposal includes "something less than a 5 percent reduction" in access charges, but Southwestern Bell spokesman Dave Lopez said the proposed decrease could be as high as 14 percent.

Lopez said Southwestern Bell must balance access charge rates against basic local service rates.

"The basic local service rates in Texas are 20 percent below the national average" for residential customers, with $9.71 the average monthly one-party rate, Lopez said. "The reason that those access charges have been high previously is to try to keep basic local service rates as low as they are."

Morrison said long distance companies sent the letter with an eye to the Senate confirmation hearings to begin Tuesday on PUC Chairman Marta Greytok and PUC member William Cassin. The two commissioners on the three-member PUC were appointed by Gov. Bill Clements.

"We think questions may come up, and we'd like for the legislators to be as well-versed on the subject as possible," Morrison said. "We think that there is a lot of concern on the part of lawmakers with respect to the telecommunications industry in the state."

Trucker confesses to setting fire that killed firefighter

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — A Texas truck driver pleaded guilty in federal court Monday to setting a fire that resulted in the death of a Flowood firefighter.

Dennis Ray Paden, 38, of Pinehurst, Texas, said Monday he used rags and highly flammable liquid to start the blaze in a Flowood stationery shop April 3, 1988.

Firefighter Tony Tadlock, 30, died when part of the burning building collapsed on top of him.

Paden is scheduled for sentencing June 5 before U.S. District Judge Tom S. Lee. He faces up to life in prison and a $250,000 fine.

Paden also faces a capital murder charge for Tadlock's death and is scheduled for trial July 10 in circuit court.

Paden's plea came three days after pleas in federal court by the owners of the shop, William "Buzz" Headrick and his wife, Pamela, who is Paden's cousin.

LIFESTYLE/Fashion

For popularity at school, preteen fashion totally important

By BARBARA DeWITT
Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — Skateboards and surfer shorts. Hello Kitty pencils and L.A. Gear sneakers. Can a preadolescent live without them?

"It's totally, I mean totally important," Summer, a fashion-savvy sixth-grader, says with a matter-of-fact tone. "I really don't think you can get by on just personality," she explains, "but I wish you could."

Summer, wearing a black-and-red cycle outfit, is serious about what it takes to be a trendy kid, because — good or bad — trendiness can be a steppingstone to popularity in elementary school.

Her friend Alisha, a preppy type with a stylish bob, adds that if an established friend suddenly couldn't dress trendy (because her parents were no longer in the money) she wouldn't drop her, but a new student in untrendy clothes couldn't make friends easily.

Ethan, who's wearing surfer shorts and matching shirt and mousse on his hair, jumps into the conversation and exclaims that if the new student looked at all friendly he'd just tell him to get new clothes.

Summer and Alisha look at each other, giggle and shout in unison, "Let's goooooo shopppping!" They giggle again, and Summer admits, "Shopping is our life." They summarize that if, after sizing up a girl, she had trend-setting potential, they'd take her shopping and help her pick out the social must-haves so she'd be in the in-crowd.

IS THIS good? Bad? Should parents buy into the philosophy — both figuratively and literally? How do they find the medium between raising a trendy clone and a lonely outsider?

Whatever the answer to these complex parental choices, today's kids, at an ever younger age, are aware of what's hot and what's not.

In the fourth, fifth and sixth grades, brand names roll off the tongue with ease.

Blond and blue-eyed Carey, a fifth-grader, says Guess? clothes are better than a new bike. She has a Guess? jacket, miniskirt, jeans and T-shirts, but she also likes the Body Glove look of tight cycle shorts and Esprit's polka dot ensembles.

Her brother, Casey, 9, has his own designer list, which includes Gotcha clothes and a Jimmy'Z backpack. He wears surfer-style shorts, even in winter, because it's cool.

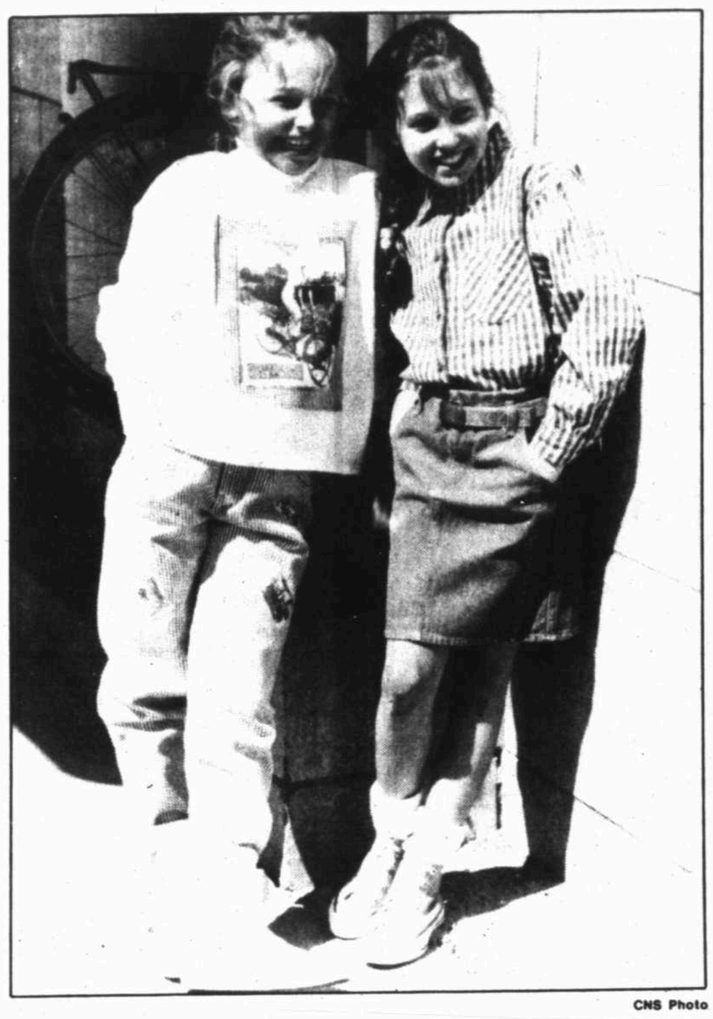

WHO DECIDES what's going to be popular? It begins on the first day of the school year, the preteens explain. You check each other out, see what you like, then buy it.

By this age level (9 to 12) shopping the malls and watching PG-rated movies and MTV are accessible avenues for spotting trends. Favorite places to shop include Guess? boutiques, major department stores and specialty shops.

There are numerous brand names with fashion clout, but universally held in esteem are clothes with the Guess?, Esprit and Jimmy'Z labels. Reeboks, L.A. Gear, and Nike Air Delta shoes are really rad. So are double-pierced ears for girls and a single pierced ear for boys. And girls have to have really long straight hair or have it cut in a fashionable style. Boys, also, are into styling their hair, and it must be moussed into spikes or cut in a surfer flat-top.

"Brand names are best, but getting the look together is what really counts," stresses Summer, who gets approval from Alisha and another girlfriend, Alma. A denim jacket and miniskirt, ripped jeans, cycle pants and anything black will do. And if it's pink and green or in a polka dot pattern, it's on the cutting edge of trendiness.

And trendy kids do trendy things. They ride in limousines to birthday parties at '50s diners to show off their '50s clothes, have sleep-overs, go to the movies together, scout the malls and munch on Mrs. Field's chocolate chip cookies, huge cinnamon rolls or Snickers candy bars.

CNS Photo

When preteens name the fashions that matter, demin skirts and jackets, jeans and anything black top the list.

These children live in a materialistic world, yet they've grown kinder to the handicaps of youth, such as braces and eye glasses.

But a bad haircut? That's unforgivable.

Youngsters 'in the know' list fashionable must-haves

By BARBARA DeWITT
Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — On a recent visit to elementary schools, we found fifth- and sixth-graders quite savvy to the trappings of the trendy.

Here's their checklist of what it takes to be a trendy kid in the fifth and sixth grade today. It's a considerable leap from the bell-bottoms of the '60s and Izod shirts of the '70s:

- Clothing: Guess?, Esprit, Jimmy'Z, Body Glove, Ocean Pacific, Town and Country, L.A. Gear, Italian Boys, Gotcha, Surf Fetish, Bugle Boys, US Boys, Gitano and Bongo.
- Shoes: Vans, Reeboks, L.A. Gear, Nike Air Delta, Airwalk and Esprit.
- Colors: Black, white, fluorescent pink and lime green in solids, florals and polka dots.
- Hairstyles: Boys: Flat-top or in casual spikes held in place with gel. Girls: Long and straight with side part, crimped, ponytail, short and shingled.
- Fashions: Girls: Double-pierced ears, peace-sign jewelry, Guess? or Swatch watches (worn with face on inside of wrist), watches with interchangeable bands, handwoven friendship bracelets, "Best Friend" necklaces, rings (any style), cycle pants under a miniskirt, jeans (tight, torn and lots of zippers), denim jackets, long, baggy T-shirt over knit pants, poodle skirts for '50s parties, leather high-topped shoes, plain white sneakers, tie-dye T-shirts, sweatshirts with slogans or brand name logos.
- Boys: One pierced ear, rings, Guess? watch, Swatch watch with transparent face, black plastic watch with gadgets and dials, surfer shorts and shirts in bright colors, torn, faded jeans, white leather high-tops, white sneakers, denim jackets.
- Trendy school items: Traditional backpack worn over one shoulder only, decorative pencils and erasers (Hello Kitty, Twinkle Star and Grip Stix), decorative boxes to store pencils and erasers, tiny scissors, pens with fruit scents and colors.
- Trendy foods: Snickers candy bars, Dreyer's Ice Cream (Chocolate Almond Amaretto and Chocolate Peanut Butter Fudge), chocolate chip cookies (from cookie stands), pepperoni pizza, New York Seltzer (cherry and raspberry flavors), sirloin steak, tacos, hamburgers, ribs.
- Trendy Toys: Mountain bikes, roller blade skates, skateboards, ghetto blasters, Nintendo games, Garfield the cat (stuffed toys, erasers, etc.), Sweet Valley Twins and Nancy Drew books.
- Trendy birthday parties: Having a limo or sports car take you and your friends: to a '50s party, to a trendy eatery, to a slumber party, to amusement parks.
- Trendy TV shows: "Out of This World," "Wonder Years," "Bill Cosby," "Growing Pains," "Alf," Garfield specials, Scooby-Doo cartoons, MTV.

AT WIT'S END

Brace yourself for dog dentistry

By ERMA BOMBECK

Bombeck

I was always better at raising kids than I was dogs. Actually, I was afraid of all of them, but the dogs had pointed teeth.

When my family lived on the farm, we had three canines. One was a large German shepherd who looked so intimidating you wanted to stay in your car in our driveway for the rest of your life. Aside from devouring a few squirrels, he had the cuddly personality of Willard Scott. The Irish setter used his choppers to eat through the sofa and occasionally raided my closet and chewed the toes out of my shoes.

But it was the cute little Yorkshire terrier that everyone reached out to who should have been owned by a law firm. He had a thigh wish, and few ever got past him without an imprint of his teeth in them. You'd put out your hand to him to sniff for acceptance, and he'd go for the arteries. My husband said he was sensitive about being short, but the truth is, the dog's teeth should have been registered as lethal weapons.

All three of the dogs died years ago and went to that big chair leg in the sky. What made me think about them was a story about a breakthrough in pet care: dentures for dogs.

That boggles my mind. I know animals need teeth to keep eating or they will starve. I know they don't brush after every meal so they need to have their teeth cleaned on a regular basis. I know they experience pain and have to have dental surgery.

But I know people, and they aren't going to be content to take care of dogs' teeth merely for practical reasons.

How long will it be before discerning dog owners want their dogs' teeth capped like Lassie's? Is the day far away when we'll see puppies wearing braces to obedience school? Are we entering a new era where dogs will do commercials bragging about how they can eat corn on the cob with their dentures?

I thought about my Yorkie, and somehow the idea of buying false teeth for a dog who never smiled anyway seemed ludicrous.

I know this: When I read about how difficult it is to get an imprint of a dog's mouth, I realize now that I had a dog who was a pioneer in restorative dentistry. My mother and father, all three kids, a washer repairman, five letter carriers, a lost storm-door salesman, a farrier, and two church people who wanted to come in one Saturday and pray with us — all have clear imprints of his teeth in the back of their legs.

I have a gut feeling that dogs will not be the same good sports in a dental chair that people are. We tend to believe dentists when they tell us, "You'll just experience a little discomfort here," and my personal favorite, "In a few minutes, you won't feel anything." Dogs are more likely to bite the hand that sedates them.

I fully anticipate a lot of mail on this column from animal lovers who will say I didn't train my dog right, and if he bit me, I deserved it. I can only say, my kids turned out well — and only one of them left teeth marks.

Athletic shoe maker utilizing air as cushioning device for ankles

By BARBARA LLOYD
New York Times News Service

A new basketball shoe can be pumped up with air.

Nike, a company based in Beaverton, Ore., introduced the inflatable basketball shoe in February at the Sporting Goods Manufacturers' Association trade show in Atlanta.

The shoe comes with a palm-sized plastic pump that is used to create air pressure around the ankle for a better fit.

Bruce Kilgore, a designer of the shoe, said recently that his idea was inspired by attempts of ski manufacturers to make ski boots with air cushioning.

The Nike shoe took three years to develop. "The valve was the hardest thing to work out," said Kilgore. "We wanted to make a valve that would hold the air in, but that would also be easy for the consumer to release."

The Nike air pump is open at two ends. It attaches to a valve opening at the upper part of the heel. Once the shoe is secure on the foot, a player uses the the air pump to close any gaps in the shoe around the ankle. The pump is made small and light.

Nike first started using air as a cushioning device in its athletic shoes nearly a decade ago. The basketball shoe is the company's first attempt to use air for improving fit in the upper portion of the shoe.

The shoe also comes with a modified air system in the sole.

The Nike air pressure basketball shoe is expected to be available in sporting goods stores by October. It will cost about $160.

DEAR ABBY

Roommate tired of picking up is ready to put her foot down

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: What can you do when you have a sloppy, inconsiderate roommate? I've been living with the same girl for a year and a half now and have kept hoping things would improve, but they haven't.

I'm not saying I am the world's best housekeeper, but for some reason, my roommate thinks I am the maid. We both agreed to share the responsibilities like taking out the trash and doing the dishes, but if her set of dishes sits there for five days, I'll do them. That's where the problem is — she knows if she lets something go long enough, I'll do it.

There are towels on the bathroom floor, blankets and pillows left on the living room floor, and peanut butter and jelly jars left open on the kitchen counter. I can't help feeling that she's taking advantage of me.

How can I let her know she's being a total pig without hurting her feelings? — NOT HER MAID IN ALTOONA, PA.

DEAR NOT: The key to your problem is right in the middle of your letter: "She knows if she lets something go long enough, I'll do it.'"

Don't permit her to let something go; when it's her turn to do it, point it out, and keep pointing it out until she does it. And insist that she do it before she goes to sleep. Be firm.

You may have to remind her five or six times — but keep after her. And if you permit her to procrastinate, she may be a total pig, but you're a jellyfish.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter has saddled me with an enormous job — writing names on the backs of pictures, or under them, in many, many albums. Over the years, no one thought to do this.

We have a cedar chest and several shoe boxes filled with snapshots. Some I inherited from my mother, and none of hers had names on them.

Abby, please tell your readers to start identifying pictures for posterity. Their progeny will surely appreciate it. There are many pictures of people I cannot name. — MRS. O.H. DODD, RAYMOND, WASH.

DEAR MRS. DODD: You must be a new reader. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: You suggested that "older people" should mark the backs of family pictures while they can still remember who's who, when the pictures were taken and the approximate dates. Why only "older people"? That's something everybody should do as soon as a snapshot is developed.

For years I was too busy (or lazy) to do it, and now that I'm retired and have plenty of time, I can't remember who half the people are. My parents can't help me because my father has been dead for 25 years and my mother is in a rest home, uanble to remember much of anything.

So here I sit with a big box of family pictures beating my brains out trying to recall names, dates and places. What a mess! Abby, please remind your readers often to label their pictures. Then their grandchildren won't have to go through what I'm going through now. — KICKING MYSELF IN ASBURY PARK

DEAR KICKING: Not only should family pictures be labeled, but accounts of historical events and newspaper clipping of births, graduations, marriages and deaths in your family should be dated and kept in a sturdy scrapbook. Fascinating family histories could be preserved if younger members interviewed older relatives at family gatherings. A tape recorder would be ideal for this purpose.

Succeeding generations will love it!

Mid-West Window Tinting cuts sun's damage to cars, homes

Keeping the sun's harsh glare and heat out of your car is a snap at Mid-West Window Tinting. Mid-West, located at 901 W. Washington, and next door to the Midland County Tax Office, specializes in quality auto, commercial and residential glass tinting.

Manager Tommy Melton has the training, experience and artistic talent it takes to do a professional window tinting job. In fact, much of his work is noticeable around town, at Midland International Airport, the Texas American Bank Building and the Gihls Tower Building.

Mid-West Window Tinting sells only legally approved films, and a sticker is provided to notify authorities that your new auto tinting meets all legal specifications.

Call 682-0323 for a free estimate. Autos receive same day service, and pick up and delivery is free.

Mid-West Window Tinting is factory authorized to use Sun-x film and Llumar Solar Control Window Film.

Window film turns ordinary driving into a joy ride because it goes the extra mile to keep you cool and comfortable. High performance films block out more heat and glare for a comfortable ride and screen out ultraviolet radiation to protect your carpet and upholstery from fading.

These high performance films block up to 50% more heat without darkening your windows.

These high performance films hold shattered glass in place (during an accident or vandalism) and protects your family from injury. Film affords privacy and revs up your vehicle with the appearance of expensive tinted glass.

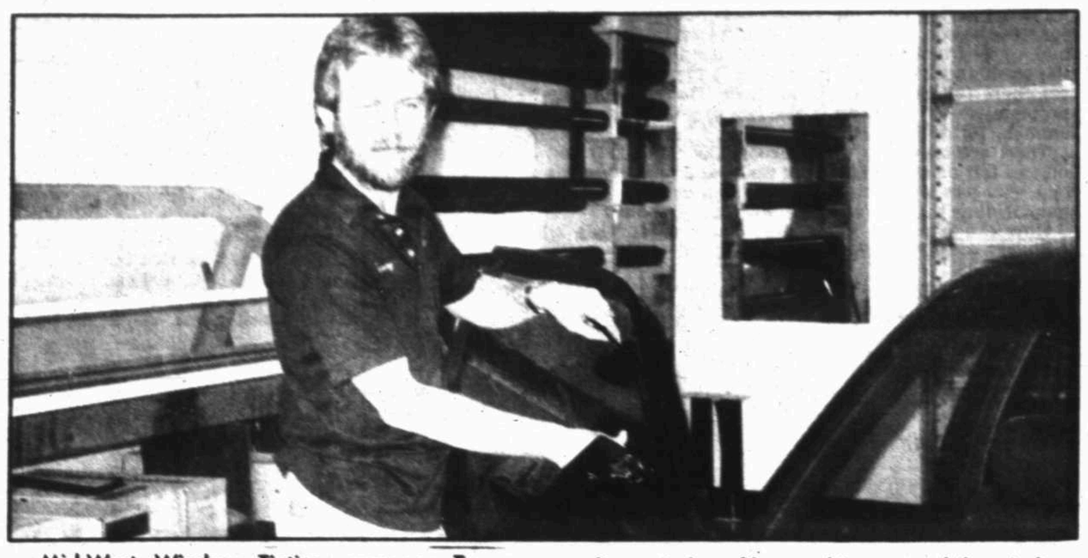

Additionally, many films also resist scratching for long-lasting beauty and easy care. Llumar and Sun-x films reduce the burden on your air conditioner to help save fuel and it cleans easily with a mild liquid cleanser.

Not only can your car benefit from cooling, protecting window film, but so can your bus, motor home, home or business. Consider the advantages:

- It adds beauty, protects your family from injury and keeps you comfortable year-round.
- Lets light in but keeps glare out
- Keeps you warmer in the winter and cooler in the summer.
- Cuts cooling bills substantially.
- Protects carpets, furniture and fabrics from the damaging sun.
- Protects people and property from the dangers of shattered glass in the aftermath of an accident, vandalism, explosion or violent weather.

All Llumar products come with warranties against peeling, cracking, demetalization and delamination. Sun-x film is warrantied for four years against fading–this is the longest warranty on the market. Auto tints are warrantied for two years and commerical/residential tints vary from five to seven years.

Mid-West Window Tinting hours are from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. Call now for a free estimate!

Mid-West Window Tinting manager Tommy Melton has the experience and talent to apply cooling window film to this automobile window and to yours. Call 682-0323 for a free estimate.

Lights, camera, action: Put your business message in the movies

How would you like to see your business in the movies? No, you don't have to visit Hollywood to be active in the latest innovative form of advertising media.

Locally-owned Video Air Time offers a breakthrough technique to expose your business to the public. Video Air Time is following the national trend of adding "video ads," or commercials to video cassette recorder movie rentals.

For the business owner, your commercial ads will be viewed at the convenience of your potential customer, whether it be 3:00 a.m. or 12:00 p.m. Your commercial will be featured in the top rated movies. You'll capture the viewer's attention because no other local businesses will have ads on the film.

While your message has the potential to reach virtually all age groups, the average age group of the audience is the age group of 18 to 48. This group overall has the largest purchasing power.

Video Air Time also gauges the audience response, at no additional charge.

Bottom line, your advertisement, when added to a home rental movie, breaks down to as little as nine cents per viewer!

Local businesses taking advantage of Video Air Time include M-System, Folger's, ARC Truck and Auto Body and The Hairworks.

The advantages of Video Air Time extend to the movie rental customer as well. Video Air Time has developed a promotional program to work in conjunction with its advertisers and viewers for cash prizes and merchandise, awarded monthly.

Audience comments are overwhelmingly positive about this novel advertising approach. The response to this form of local advertising is 98 percent positive, measured by returned customer comment forms.

In addition to positive responses from advertisers and customers, area movie rental firms are enthusiastic about working with Video Air Time.

"The overall promotions provided have aided considerably in getting people in my store," said Craig Lee, owner of Southwest Video. "and the cash and prizes have been very exciting for customers. Our patrons now request the tapes with advertisements. The program has been good for both the store and our customers. It seems to be a no loss situation."

Since 51 percent of homes have a VCR, according to a 1987 Nielsen Co. survey, it makes good sense to consider the newest form of advertising, Video Air Time.

For more information, please call 687-6990 today.

Martha Edwards of Video Air Time recently videotaped a commercial for Michael's Flowers and Gifts.

Zubiate's Furniture Restoration offers tips for good-looking wood

Richard Zubiate, of Zubiate's Furniture Restoration, is a meticulous worker who can restore your damaged furniture to its original beauty.

Hidden treasures found in that old attic need not stay hidden any longer. Bring that piece of history into Zubiate's and receive in return a piece of furniture any homeowner would be proud of.

"In restoration work what you should try to do is leave the work as much like the original as possible," Richard explained. "Then you only replace the parts that have been damaged or may cause problems later on."

There are also things you can do at home to keep your furniture looking its best. Richard Zubiate supplied these tips on how to keep your wood looking good:

"Stay away from silicone-based wax products," Richard advised. "Over time these products will dissolve the finish on your wood, leaving it sticky and unable to keep a shine."

Richard suggested using an emollient paste wax every three or four months, or as needed. "Most of the spray polishes have the silicone base," Richard said. "If you do use a spray, never apply it directly to the wood surface. Spray or pour polish onto a dust rag." The liquid tends to centralize in the spot sprayed, whereas when applied to a rag, the polish is spread more evenly over surface of the wood.

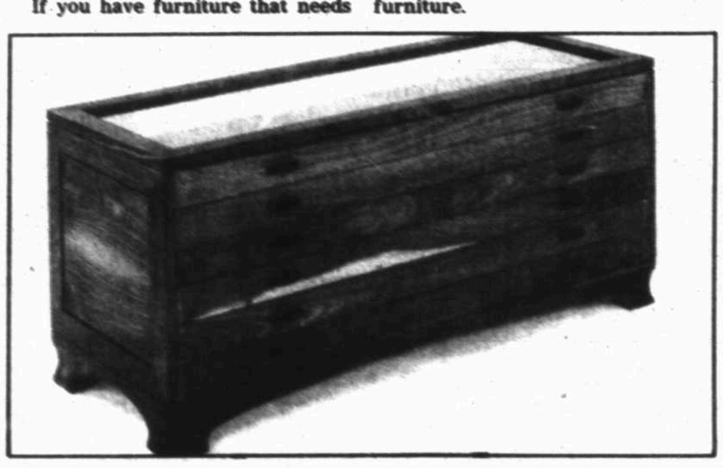

"The purpose of a polish or spray is to cut down on static, allowing you to pick up more dust," Richard pointed out. "The wood should never look oily - that's when the polish is eating through the finish to the wood."

A paste wax will give the wood a shine, while preserving the finish and wood from scratching, finger prints, water and soiling at the same time.

"Use an old t-shirt or bed linens for a dust rag," Richard suggested. "These materials are very soft, with nothing to scratch the wood. Keep the rag in a can and before storing spray a bit of polish inside, then put the cap on. When the rag becomes dirty throw it away."

Orioles do it right, this time

Associated Press

BALTIMORE — It took the Baltimore Orioles 11 innings to get their first victory of the season. Last year, it took them a record 22 games.

Losers of their first 21 games last year, the Orioles won their season opener Monday, beating the American League East champion Boston Red Sox 5-4 on rookie Craig Worthington's 11th-inning single.

President George Bush threw out the ceremonial first pitch but left in the seventh inning with the score tied 4-4. Boston ace Roger Clemens left one inning later.

Worthington, who grounded out with runners at first and third and one out in the ninth, came up in the same situation two innings later. This time, he singled off Mike Smithson after Bob Stanley walked Mickey Tettleton, who took third on Randy Milligan's hit-and-run single. Worthington flared a 1-0 pitch into left-center past center fielder Ellis Burks' dive, foiling a Boston defense of five infielders.

"I was jittery because I had the same opportunity before in I don't know what inning it was," Worthington said. "Smithson is the same kind of pitcher Stanley is — a sinker-slider pitcher. I was just looking for a pitch over the plate."

Brian Holton pitched 4 1-3 innings of scoreless relief for the victory. It was Boston's fourth straight defeat on Opening Day. Baltimore scored its first four runs against Clemens.

"It was fun to win the first one, especially after last year," Holton said. "I wasn't here, but I talked with some of the guys and I know they were relieved."

Baltimore's Cal Ripken hit a three-run homer in the sixth inning. Boston's Mike Greenwell hit a two-run homer off Dave Schmidt in the top of the sixth.

Blue Jays 4, Royals 3

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Jimmy Key won on Opening Day for the third straight year and Fred McGriff and Lloyd Moseby each had two hits. Key, who beat the Royals 5-3 in last season's opener, gave up two runs on six hits in six innings.

Loser Mark Gubicza, drawing his first Opening Day assignment after a 20-8 record, allowed four runs on nine hits in seven innings. Toronto relief ace Tom Henke got the save by retiring Kurt Stillwell on a popup, stranding a runner at third base.

Indians 2, Brewers 1

CLEVELAND — Oddibe McDowell, acquired from Texas in an off-season trade, doubled home two runs in his first game for Cleveland and Greg Swindell allowed five hits in 8 1-3 innings.

Swindell struck out six and did not walk a batter. Doug Jones finished for a save. Don August was the loser.

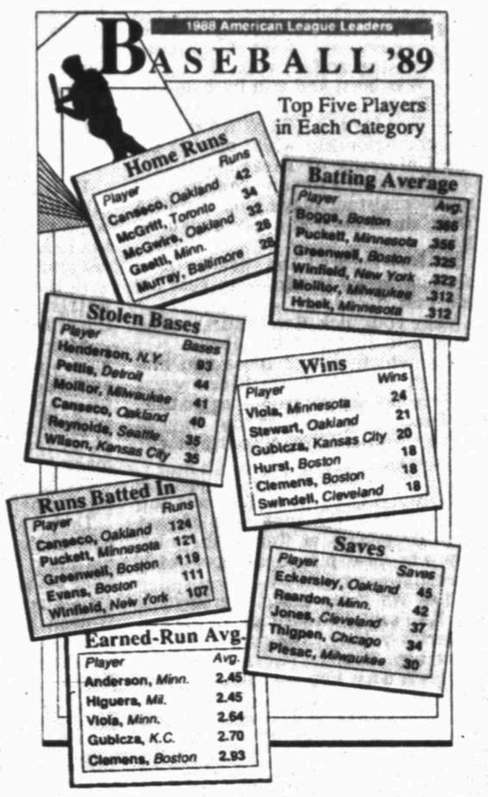

Athletics 3, Mariners 2

Mark McGwire drove in all of Oakland's runs with a two-run homer and sacrifice fly and Dave Stewart won his eighth game in a row over Seattle as the A's opened defense of their AL pennant.

Stewart, who scattered four hits and gave up one earned run in 5 1-3 innings in beating Mark Langston for the second straight opener, got relief help from Gene Nelson, Rick Honeycutt and Dennis Eckersley, who preserved eight of Stewart's victories last year en route to a club-record 45 saves.

Oakland's victory spoiled the managerial debut of Seattle's Jim Lefebvre, who was a coach with the Athletics a year ago.

McGwire drove in the game's first run with a sacrifice fly in the first inning and made it 3-0 with a towering two-run homer in the third after Carney Lansford reached on rookie shortstop Omar Vizquel's two-base throwing error.

Rose still hero to Cincy fans

From Wire Reports

CINCINNATI (AP) — Manager Pete Rose got a hero's welcome in his hometown and Paul O'Neill played the hero's role with a three-run homer Monday that carried the Cincinnati Reds over the World Series champion Los Angeles Dodgers 6-4 in the first game of the major league season.

Rose, under investigation by the commissioner's office, received a one-minute standing ovation and chants of "Pete! Pete!" from the crowd of 55,385 when he was introduced during pregame ceremonies.

Danny Jackson gave up four runs, two of them earned, in five innings for the victory. John Franco pitched two hitless innings for a save.

O'Neill went 4-for-4. He doubled to start a three-run rally in the second and hit a three-run homer in the third against Tim Belcher.

Kirk Gibson hit a solo home run and RBI single for the Dodgers.

Mets 8, Cardinals 4

NEW YORK — Howard Johnson homered and drove in three runs that led New York past the St. Louis Cardinals 8-4 as the Mets won their 11th straight home opener.

Overall, the Mets have won five consecutive season openers and 18 of their last 20 and have not lost an opening-day game at Shea Stadium since dropping an 11-10 decision to Montreal on April 8, 1969. The Mets, who joined the National League in 1962, lost their first eight season openers before winning in Pittsburgh in 1970.

Giants 5, Padres 3

Kevin Mitchell drove in four runs with a two-run homer in the first inning and a go-ahead two-run single in the seventh. With San Diego leading 3-2, starter Eric Show retired the first two batters in the seventh but then walked Brett Butler, Robby Thompson and Will Clark. Mitchell's single drove in the tying and lead runs and Candy Maldonado's RBI double chased Show.

"They were really all over me in left field," Mitchell, a native San Diegan and former Padre, said of the heckling fans. "I never had that feeling before, especially when I come home. I heard all kinds of stuff out there, but I didn't let it bother me. I just came to the plate and tried to take it out on the ball."

Michigan wins NCAA, 80-79

By WILLIAM C. RHODEN
N.Y. Times News Service

SEATTLE — Less than three weeks after losing its head coach, the University of Michigan ended a string of disappointments in the National Collegiate Athletic Association tournament by defeating Seton Hall for the national championship, 80-79, Monday night in overtime on two free throws by Rumeal Robinson with 3 seconds left.

The Wolverines, directed by Steve Fisher, became the first school to win a national championship with an interim coach. Fisher took over as the head coach on March 15, replacing Bill Frieder, who accepted the head-coaching job at Arizona State and then was banished by the school's athletic director, Bo Schembechler.

Michigan had been to the NCAA tournament from 1985-88 without even making the Final Four. This was the first national title for the Wolverines, who finished their season at 30-7.

The game was tied at 71-71 at the end of regulation. Seton Hall's John Morton hit a 3-pointer with 25 seconds left to tie the score. After a Michigan timeout, the Wolverines' Glen Rice missed a jumper just before the buzzer.

In the overtime, Robinson hit the winning foul shots after being fouled by Gerald Greene.

Morton had 35 points and Rice hit 31.

THE PREVIOUS championship game ending in overtime was in 1963, when Loyola of Illinois beat Cincinnati, 60-58.

Rice had 31 points tonight, giving him an NCAA tournament record of 184, breaking the 24-year-old record of 177, set by Bill Bradley of Princeton.

Michigan tore through the tournament averaging 92 points a game and added to its reputation for offense. Seton Hall, which had no reputation to speak of coming into the tournament, entered the championship game as the defense refrigerator.

Monday night's game figured to be a test of fire and ice, a clash between a seemingly irresistable force on offense and an immovable object on defense that had the potential for a bruising but sensational national championship game.

Michigan had scored 92, 91, 92 and 102 points to reach Seattle. On Saturday, the Wolverines had punctured Illinois's attacking defense and wound up winning, 83-81, on a last-second shot by Sean Higgins.

SETON HALL routed Indiana (78-65) and Nevada-Las Vegas (84-61) en route to Seattle. On Saturday, the Pirates came from 18 points down in the first half and wound up crushing Duke, 95-78.

In the first half, Michigan firepower prevailed. The Wolverines led by 37-32 at halftime. Surprisingly, many of their points had come on second and third shots.

Throughout the tournament, Seton Hall had established a reputation for solid defense, fundamentals and rebounding. But the Pirates were outrebounded in the first half, 20-15, while Michigan shot 50 percent in the half. Glen Rice, needing 25 points to break Bill Bradley's NCAA scoring record, got 13 of them in the first half.

The story of the first half was Seton Hall's effort to control Rice and put a clamp on Michigan's assortment of talent.

The Pirate players conceded that the Wolverines were the superior team when it came to playing above the rim and playing a wide open game, and Michigan proved why in the first half.

The Wolverines took an early 16-12 lead, then increased it to 20-14 on a nice drive down the lane by Rumeal Robinson. Much later, Robinson would make the same reverse layup move but finish it by reverse dunking over his head.

This time, perhaps not wishing to show too much too early, he laid it in.

BUT the Pirates made a 12-0 run and led 26-20 on a 3-pointer by John Morton.

Seton stood by and did nothing

By TOM CANAVAN

SEATTLE (AP) — One point. One foul. Two foul shots. Three seconds. Four empty possessions, including a one-and-one.

The NCAA basketball championship was there for the taking, thanks to John Morton, and Seton Hall failed to claim its greatest treasure.

Michigan stole college basketball's biggest prize in the final 2:40 of overtime and Seton Hall did nothing to stop them.

Sure Michigan played some good defense, but the Pirates helped. Seton Hall failed to score in the final 2:40, came up empty on four possessions and had Gerald Greene commit a disastrous blocking foul with :03 to play.

That sent Rumeal Robinson to the free throw line, and the one-time street child nailed both ends of the one-and-one for an 80-79 victory that gave Michigan its first national basketball title.

It easily could have gone to Seton Hall. The Pirates built a 79-76 lead when Morton nailed a 3-pointer from the top of the key with 2:41 to play. It was his 23rd, 24th and 25th points of the second half and 33rd, 34th and 35th points of the game — including 17 of the Pirates' final 20.

But that would be all for the Hall.

"We had a couple of chances to get leads bigger than three points and we didn't," Seton Hall coach P.J. Carlesimo said. "When you get into a game like this, someone steps up, and Rumeal did for them. He's a 60 percent free throw shooter and he hit nine of 10."

Those last two shots only became important because the Pirates failed to capitalize in the closing minutes.

After Morton gave Seton Hall its 79-76 lead, Sean Higgins of Michigan missed a 3-point shot and Morton grabbed the rebound. The Hall held the ball for almost the entire 45 seconds, isolated Morton and had his drive down the lane go in and out.

Wolverine forward Glen Rice came downcourt and launched a 3-pointer and missed, and Higgins grabbed the rebound and missed a baseline follow, with Greene grabbing the rebound and being fouled by Robinson with 1:17 to play.

Greene missed the one-and-one opportunity and Michigan drew within one point when Terry Mills hit a 10-foot turnaround with :56 to play.

Seton Hall again went to Morton, and his off-balance shot in the lane hit nothing.

"The last two shots we called baseline and that was to isolate me going one-on-one on the man defending me," said Morton, who hit 11 of 26 from the field, including a 3-pointer with 25 seconds left in regulation to tie the score at 71 and force the overtime.

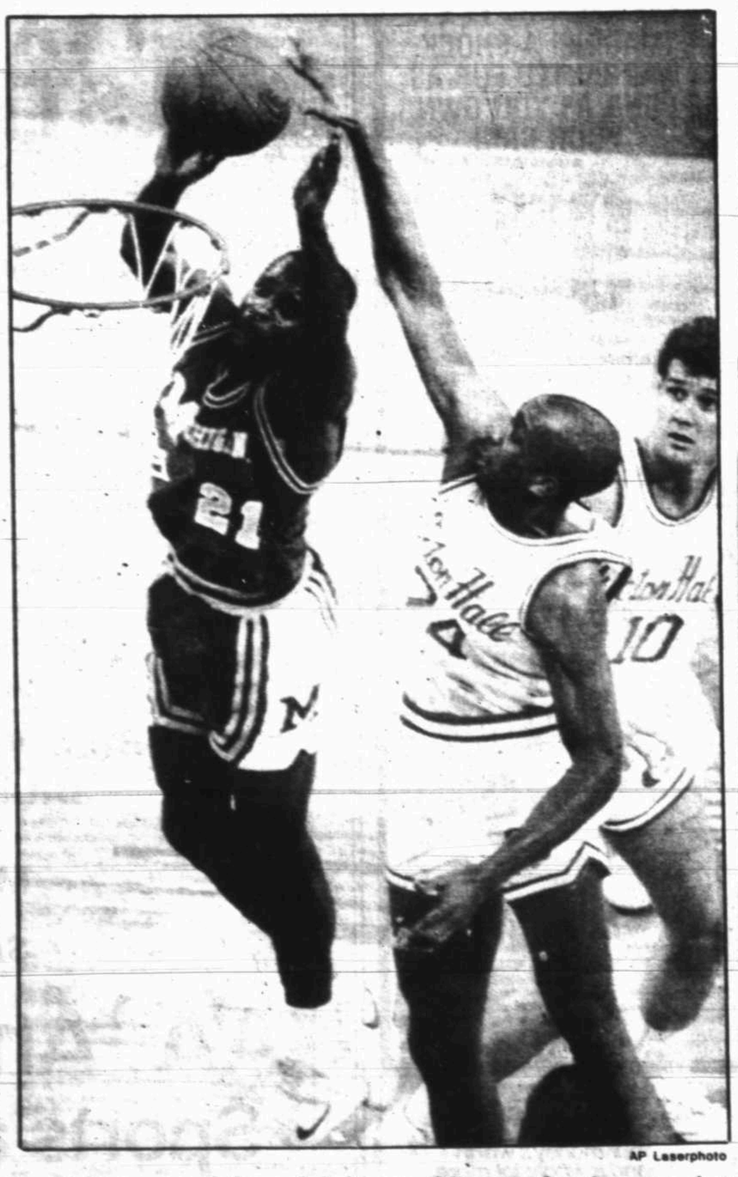

"I think my last two shots both fell short, but that comes with the game," Morton added. "It's a disappointing loss, but we have to keep our heads on straight, go on with our lives and be proud."

After Morton's miss, Robinson rushed the ball upcourt and was fouled in the lane by Greene, who was celebrating his 23rd birthday.

"The call could have gone either way," Greene said. "I figured the ref made the right decision whatever he did."

After Robinson put Michigan ahead, Seton Hall looked for a miracle on the inbounds play. Ramon Ramos threw a long pass downcourt that Greene and Daryll Walker caught simultaneously.

Walker eventually gained control and tossed up a 25-footer from a little left of the top of the key. It hit the backboard and bounded away.

He's from Austin and he's Masters threat this week

Can you name this golfer?

By GORDON S. WHITE Jr.
N.Y. Times News Service

Name the golfer who:
— Was born and still lives in Austin, Texas;
— Tied for the 1972 NCAA individual championship while playing for the University of Texas team;
— Amassed a fortune as one of the most consistent players on the PGA Tour since he was a pro rookie in 1973;
— Has entered the Masters as a definite threat to win every year for the past decade.

Take your pick. Ben Crenshaw and Tom Kite fit all of the above.

But which one of these two lifelong friends and world-renowned golfers has not yet won a major title, yet may soon become the biggest money winner in PGA Tour history?

It's Kite.

FOR A LONG time, Kite was the other Texan, the man who played with Crenshaw at Texas, the nice guy who also played on tour with Crenshaw.

"But it's great now," the 39-year-old Kite said. "To hear people in the galleries yelling, 'Get 'em Tom,' or 'Atta boy, Kite.'"

This is what happens when a player is in the hunt Sunday after Sunday as Kite has been so much of his career, particularly in the last six months.

He won consecutive tournaments last month in Florida and is one of the favorites in the 53rd Masters that begins in Augusta, Ga., on Thursday.

Back in 1984, as Crenshaw reached out to take the Masters green jacket he wanted so much, Kite was his closest rival.

Crenshaw began pulling away at the eighth hole with a birdie, then sank that lengthy putt at No. 10.

Kite, meanwhile, was playing right behind his fellow Texan, watching as Crenshaw made birdie after birdie.

Kite had to listen to a "Hook 'em Horns" chant that was not meant for him.

He faltered at the 12th when he double-bogeyed and wound up tied for sixth.

NO ONE other than Tom Weiskopf, who tied for second four times without ever winning, has been such a regular challenger at the Masters without coming through.

Kite has finished sixth or better in 8 of the last 13 Masters. He has been second twice.

Kite not only won consecutive events last month at the Nestle Invitational in Orlando and The Players Championship at Ponte Vedra, Fla.

He finished in the top eight in five of the first six tournaments he entered this year.

Even though he failed to win in 1988, ending his seven-year streak of at least one PGA Tour victory a year, Kite had three seconds and 10 top-10 finishes.

Two of those seconds came by losing in a playoff.

He has 12 tour victories in his career but not the elusive major.

FOR YEARS, Deane Beman, commissioner of the PGA Tour, and some players on tour have been trying to get The Players Championship recognized as a fifth major to go with the Masters, the U.S. Open, the British Open and the PGA Championship.

After Kite won The Players Championship on March 19, he laughed and said: "Everybody has sat here for years and said, 'Tom Kite's a pretty good player; he's done this and done that, but he hasn't won a major.'

"So you're going to have a hard time convincing me this isn't one."

That was the biggest payday for Kite as the $243,000 first prize was a big jump toward his current career total of $4,770,592.

Nicklaus has won $5,023,378 and Watson $5,022,327.

Maybe no golfer on tour has been misunderstood by fans as much as Kite.

He does not hit the ball nearly as far as Mark Calcavecchia or Greg Norman.

But his colleagues know Kite for being as tenacious a rival as any they face week in and week out.

WHEN Kite hit a 4-wood second shot into the green at the par-5 16th hole in the final round of The Players Championship, his ball nearly rolled over the green into water.

After the victory Kite was told by one person that it was surprising to see Kite going for the green instead of laying up to the par-5 hole.

"Are you saying that everybody thought I was a wimp?" Kite asked, laughing at what might have a grain of truth.

"I feel like I'm as aggressive a player as there is on tour. But when you only average 258 yards in driving distance you're not going to overpower the golf course.

"People think aggressiveness is always someone who hits far or people who hit farther than I do, and there are a bunch of guys out here who do.

"They're going to look a heck of a lot more aggressive than I do even though they may not be. You can't see inside a guy's mind to see how aggressive he is.

"Just because he hits the ball harder than I do doesn't mean he's an aggressive player.

"I've gone for a lot of par-5 holes given the opportunity, and I'll continue to.

"I've never been a big believer that I'm a conservative player."

NCAA dreams come true

By THOMAS GEORGE
N.Y. Times News Service

SEATTLE — Daryll Walker's desperation shot skidded hard off the backboard and into Glen Rice's hands, and moments later Rice was lugging more than just a basketball.

Rumeal Robinson, the crafty Michigan point guard, knew how to start the celebration.

He leaped into Rice's arms, and with their fists raised, both players chanted, "We're No. 1! We're the national champions!"

The Michigan Wolverines had finished third in the Big Ten Conference. They had entered the tournament with an interim coach and a reputation of losing early in the National Collegiate Athletic Association men's basketball tournament with powerful teams in the 1980's.

And now they were, indeed, No. 1.

Beating Seton Hall in overtime Monday night for the national title was the culmination of so many dreams for the Wolverines that they have stopped keeping count.

From Steve Fisher, the interim coach who replaced Bill Frieder after Frieder accepted the Arizona State coaching job just before the tournament, to Sean Higgins, the Los Angeles prep all-American who attended Michigan only after the NCAA intervened to void his forced signing with UCLA, to Robinson and Rice.

"Coach Fisher told us in the huddle between regulation and overtime," said Mark Hughes, the Michigan forward, "that a friend of his from San Francisco said we were going to win by 1 point in overtime and that I should be in the game at the end. I don't know if he was a psychic or what. But it turned our right, didn't it?"

That and the cool of Rice and Robinson.

Rice was brilliant, scoring 31 points, grabbing 11 rebounds and setting tournament marks for most points (184), most field goals (75) and most 3-point field goals (27). He was selected the outstanding player of the Final Four.

"I remember that year as a freshman and the way I played in the tournament," Rice said.

"I remember all the days of hard work, and now for this to happen. I always believed it could, but for it to actually happen, well, this is what people will remember the most about my Michigan career. That is very satisfying."

Robinson, who writes poetry in his spare time, scored 21 points and made 11 assists, a tournament record.

Most important, he sank two free throws with three seconds left in overtime to give Michigan the lead and the victory.

Fisher said late in the season that Robinson practiced shooting at least 100 free throws each day before practice, anticipating a moment like Monday night's.

"If you knew Rumeal and the kind of player and competitor he is," said Hughes, you knew he wasn't going to miss those free throws."

Robinson said that after hitting the first one, the second was much easier.

"I guess I'm the epitome like so many others on this team of what this championship means," Robinson said.

Pirates grateful for the ride

By MALCOLM MORAN
N.Y. Times News Service

SEATTLE — Not long after the sudden end to his college career, Gerald Greene sat before his stall in the Seton Hall dressing room and inspected the box he had received.

Inside was a small brown wood case. Inside the case was a silver ring with a black stone. On the stone were the letters NCAA.

The ring held the reminder that the Pirates carried with them in the moments following a near national championship.

After their 80-79 overtime loss to Michigan, when more than a few teams would have been tempted to dwell on how close they came, the Pirates preferred to think about how far they had come.

"A lot of people don't have anything like this," Greene said as he looked at his ring.

"This is something I'm going to remember. I've been here. I've played here. I'll be watching like I was watching last night — old NCAA basketball games. I'll have something that we have to remember. We were in the Final Four. We can watch that again."

The large dressing room held their perspective, but also a numbness that ranged from cheerful to merely polite.

"To come that far, to turn the program around like that and get to a national championship game, that's a person's goal, a person's dream," Greene said, and smiled.

John Morton's face was just blank. As teammates undressed, Morton remained in his uniform, his warm-up top buttoned all the way to the top and his collar turned up.

He had just scored 35 points, the most in his career.

Twenty-five of his points had come in the second half and overtime, including some of the most significant moments with a national championship waiting to be claimed.

Morton scored 17 of Seton Hall's final 20 points in regulation time, including the 3-point shot that tied the score at 71-71 with 25 seconds to play. His skills had persuaded P.J. Carlesimo, the Pirate coach, to direct the offense toward Morton with a 3-point lead in the final 100 seconds of overtime.

Does Morton remember the plays down the stretch that brought his team from behind? Or does he remember the two shots that missed when a championship was nearly within his team's grasp?

His second, an airball from 6 feet away with 9 seconds to go in the game, created the Michigan opportunity that led to Rumeal Robinson's championship-winning foul shots with 3 seconds to go.

Morton remembered in a quiet monotone. "When I pulled up, I thought it was a good release," he said of the final shot of his college career. "When it fell short, it was like, 'Oh, my God.' "

Haskins happy with inquiry

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Texas-El Paso basketball coach Don Haskins said he was satisfied no one received cash or the use of cars from boosters, following an inquiry of current and former players.

Haskins said he personally investigated allegations in a March 19 Newsday article that quoted two former basketball players as saying other members got illegal gifts.

"I've checked it thoroughly and I have no problems. I've found nothing wrong," Haskins said of the allegations published in the Long Island daily.

The newspaper quoted Jerry Jones and Sean Harris, both of whom left UTEP without notice during the 1987-88 season. They told Newsday that some "sugar families" gave players money and lent them cars.

Jones was quoted in the Newsday article as saying:

"My first year there I had a good sponsor, but something happened. One of the guys messed up their (the family's) car, and they (the family) didn't want anything more to do with it."

But Jones, who now plays for Southern Illinois, told a different story to another reporter last week.

"I was never offered any stuff at UTEP, and I never asked for anything," he told the Southern Illinoisian newspaper of Carbondale, Ill.

Haskins said he was told much the same thing in an ad hoc poll of current and former UTEP basketball players.

This Day In Baseball

April 4

1974 — The Cincinnati Reds defeated the Atlanta Braves 7-6 in 11 innings before a crowd of 52,000 at Riverfront Stadium. Vice President Gerald Ford threw out the first ball. In his first at bat, Henry Aaron hit a three-run homer off Jack Billingham. It was his 714th, tying Babe Ruth's career record. The Braves had considered keeping Aaron on the bench for the season-opening series in Cincinnati so that he could attempt to tie the record four days later in Atlanta. But Commissioner Bowie Kuhn would not allow it and ordered the Braves to put Aaron into the lineup for at least two of the three games.

1988 — George Bell became the first player ever to hit three home runs on opening day, leading the Toronto Blue Jays past the Kansas City Royals 5-3. Bell, bitter throughout spring training with his move to designated hitter, homered three times in that role off Bret Saberhagen.

Astros' Howe still optimistic

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ

HOUSTON (AP) — Art Howe's not upset that the Astros lost 14 of their last 16 exhibition games and were outscored 53-29 in their last seven.

"I think the hitting is there, especially the last four days," the new Houston manager said. "Even though we lost some of those games, I could see the hitting coming around."

Houston finished the spring with a .265 batting average. Opponents hit .289.

Howe said Bill Doran would open at second base, ending speculation Doran might not be recovered from shoulder and ankle surgery.

Doran has maintained since the start of spring training, he'd be ready for opening day. A T-shirt for Doran was being imprinted with "I'm Fine" across the chest.

Mike Scott, Houston's opening night starter, had a 1.54 earned-run average in 35 innings of exhibition games. He yielded six earned runs, struck out 21 and walked six. He believes the Astros are better than people say.

"We've been treated kind of rough in the local media but we can't worry about that," Scott said. "We think we have the team that can do better than fifth place."

Craig Biggio will start at catcher for the Astros after hitting .253 in the spring. Biggio batted .211 in 50 games last season.

"He earned a spot on the team with his play throughout the spring," Howe said. "When you are trying to win, you go with your best ball players. He proved he belongs with us."

Third baseman Ken Caminiti will be the new opening day face in the infield. He will be joined by first baseman Glenn Davis, Doran and shortstop Rafael Ramirez.

Zane Smith will pitch for the Braves, who were 17-12 this spring, third- best among National League teams.

Houston finished the exhibition with a 10-22 record, second worst in the majors behind the Chicago Cubs, 9-23.

Atlanta had a 17-12 spring record, third best among National League teams.

Second-best Caps could end up No. 1

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Hockey Writer

In past years, the Washington Capitals were like the slogan of a national car company: They always prided themselves on trying hard but always wound up second best.

All that's changed, however, with the first divisional championship in franchise history.

Now, the Capitals seem to be in good position with the home-ice advantage in their divisional Stanley Cup playoff games that open Wednesday night.

"It's definitely the best team we've ever had," defenseman Scott Stevens said, as the Capitals prepared to meet the Philadelphia Flyers in a Patrick Dvision opener at the Capital Centre, one of eight first-round games. "It's the most balanced team since I've been in Washington.

"We've got three lines that can score. We used to only have one line. And our defense is strong."

IN OTHER opening playoff action Wednesday night, it will be the New York Rangers at Pittsburgh in the other Patrick Division game; Hartford at Montreal and Buffalo at Boston in the Adams; Chicago at Detroit and Minnesota at St. Louis in the Norris, and Vancouver at Calgary and Edmonton at Los Angeles in the Smythe.

There are many who think the Capitals put the finishing touches on this season's team with the acquisition of forward Dino Ciccarelli and defenseman Bob Rouse. They were acquired late in the season in a deal which sent forward Mike Gartner and defenseman Larry Murphy to Minnesota.

CICCARELLI is a more creative shot-maker than Gartner, a longtime favorite in Washington.

"The team fits very well together at this point," Coach Bryan Murray said. "They have a great attitude — they work hard together, play well together and are good guys in the (locker)room.

"As they play more and more together, it will upgrade the team as a whole. Right now, I'm happy the way things are. I think we're a good club."

That's good news to Washington fans, who have followed the Capitals through some bad times and good, but always ending in disappointment in the Stanley Cup playoffs.

Their playoff failures continued to haunt them even in 1983-84, 1984-85 and 1985-86 when they won 48, 46 and 50 games, respectively, during the regular season.

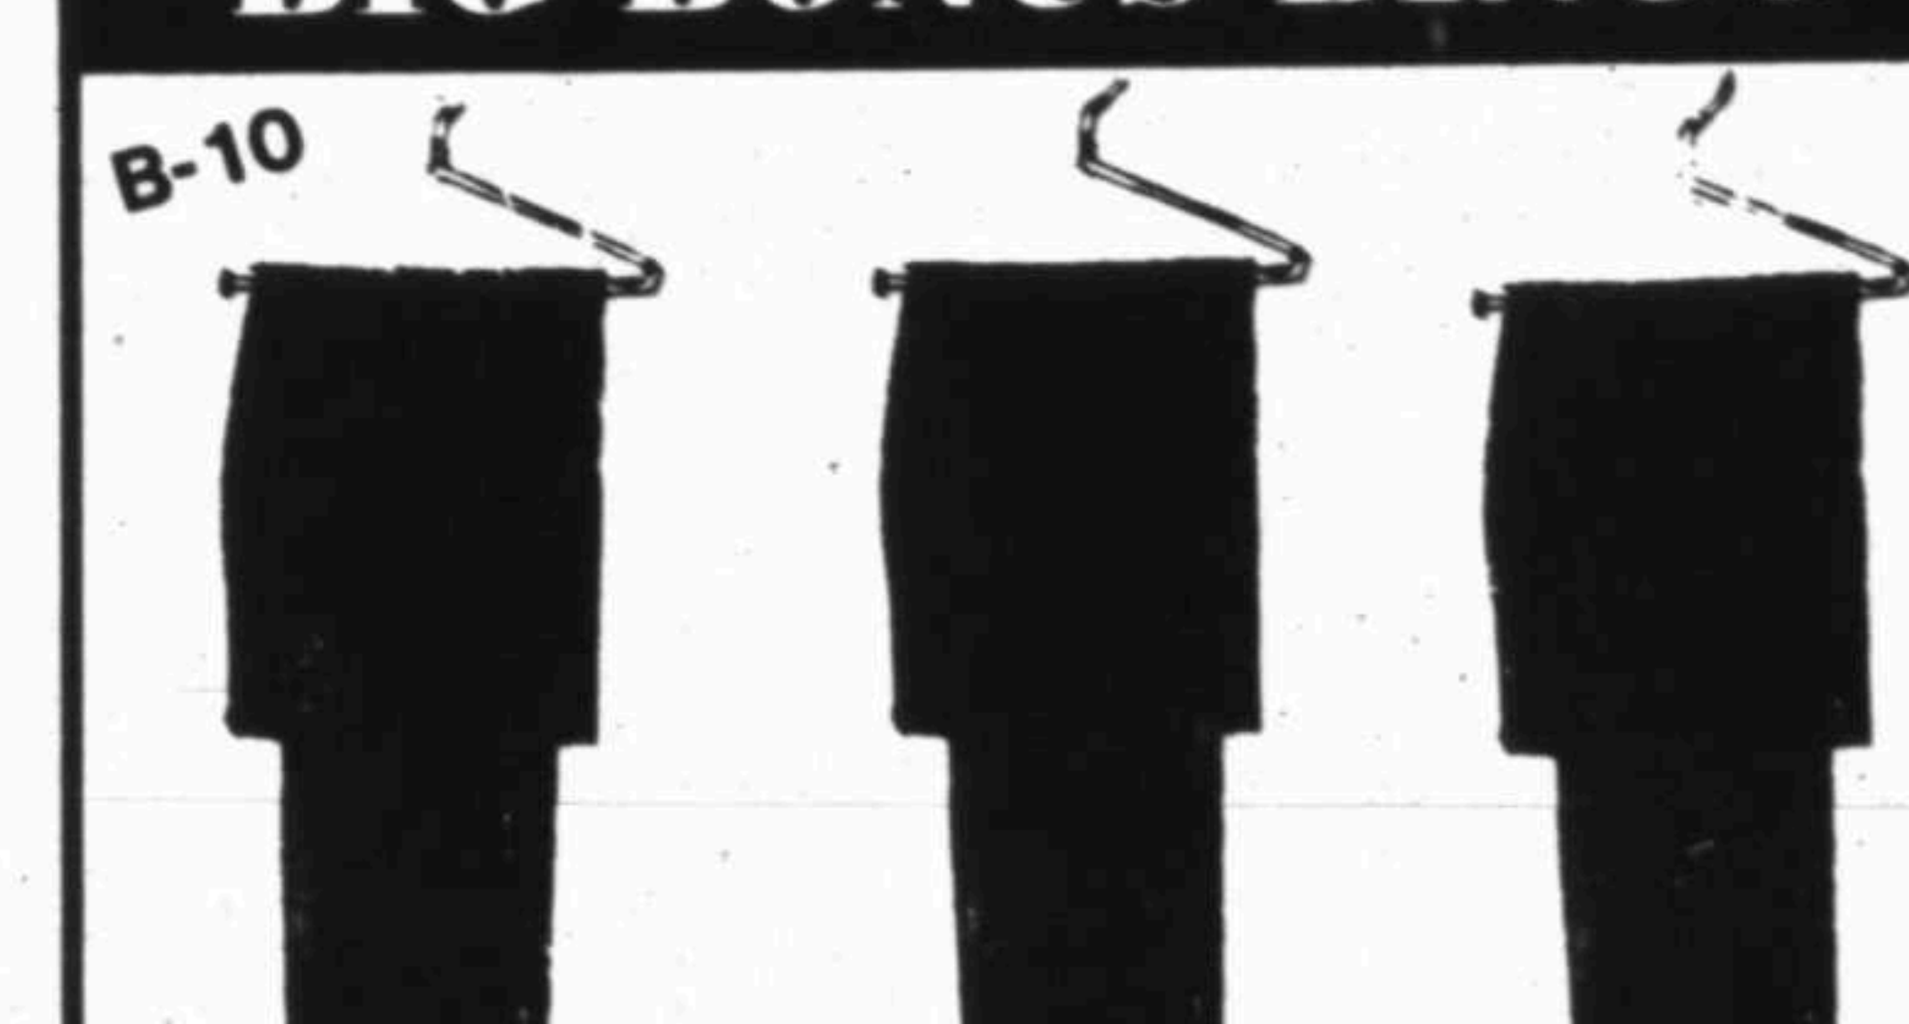

"We've played well for five, six years," Murray said. "We've been second for five, six years in a row. The one thing I prided my team on was effort, determination in every game."

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 5, 1989

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: A stormy romance needs to be brought under control. There is little to hold you back careerwise if you keep your eyes fixed on your objective. Do not change your plans just to please another. Pay attention to your intuition. Be realistic, but sell yourself! Continue your pursuit of a lofty ambition. You are more determined than ever to track a political matter. Cherish your allies and supporters.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Bette Davis, author Arthur Hailey, actor Gregory Peck, educator Booker T. Washington, actor Spencer Tracy.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You are ready to take the big plunge in business or romance. Tensions begin to disappear. Go out of your way to promote a special project or help someone in trouble.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be thrifty when making entertainment plans. Remember many of the best things in life are free. An out-of-town visitor stirs your interest in creative self-expression. Investigate marketing possibilities.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Take advantage of a chance to travel. A romantic imbalance could undermine your self-esteem. You complete projects on time, impressing higher-ups. Expect a nice bonus. Conscientious effort will be rewarded.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Letters written today will bring excellent results. A company needs your expertise more than you realize. Suppress an urge to tell the world about your plans. An envious co-worker could spill the beans.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Timing is the key to your career or financial success. You are able to complete large projects now. Ask yourself if a less profitable chore is more important. Be willing to compromise with a child.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Keep a record of your expenses or you could create a mess that leads to arguments. A good day to take tests and apply for jobs. You should do brilliantly!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You derive immense satisfaction from your work now. An offer will not be repeated; make hay while the sun shines. A surprise encounter with an old friend could lead to romance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Powerful relatives or friends may try to manipulate you. Your creativity is at a peak. The requirements for a job are altered in your favor.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A conservative attitude works to your advantage where joint interests are concerned. Guard your personal possessions. Share a financial burden later. Romance has its usual ups and downs.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan 19): You will surprise others with your strong opinions. Soften them somewhat if you want widespread support. Personal growth can cause discomfort in the beginning. Refuse to be goaded into making promises.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Buy or rent new tools and equipment. An unusual offer is made. Greet criticism with a smile and you will blunt it. A raise or special favor is granted after a second request is made.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Do not be shy. Changes in your personal appearance will make others sit up and take notice. Think twice before making a new investment. Stay with a healthful diet and exercise program.

AN EVEN MONEY BET

North–South vulnerable. North deals.

	NORTH ♠ J 8 4 2 ♡ 10 9 3 ◇ 9 3 ♣ 8 7 6 2
WEST ♠ K 10 6 3 ♡ J 7 ◇ K 8 7 5 ♣ A J 3		EAST ♠ A Q 9 5 ♡ 8 6 5 ◇ Q 6 ♣ 10 9 5 4
	SOUTH ♠ 7 ♡ A K Q 4 2 ◇ A J 10 4 2 ♣ K Q

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ♡	Dbl
Pass	1 ♠	2 ◇	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Three of ♠

Sometimes there is little to choose between two lines of play. That is when you should study the bidding to see if there are any clues available.

Note that South did not feel compelled to bid more than two diamonds at his second turn. Unless North could raise voluntarily to three diamonds, game in the minor was unlikely. Once North took a preference back to hearts, South decided he would take his chances on game.

East won the first trick with the ace of spades and shifted to the ten of clubs—a spade continuation, forcing declarer, would have been better. West topped South's king of clubs with the ace and continued the suit to declarer's queen. A low diamond to the nine lost to the queen, and declarer ruffed the spade return. South was at the crossroads.

He took a reasonable shot. He drew two rounds of trumps, cashed the ace of diamonds and then led the jack. When West produced a low diamond, declarer could no longer make the contract as the cards lay. If he ruffed, West would have a diamond trick; if he discarded, East would ruff for the setting trick.

The clue to the winning approach lay in West's double. Diamonds were likely to be 4–2, so the best chance was to hope that West also held the jack of trumps. After ruffing the spade, declarer should have cashed the ace of diamonds and ruffed a diamond with the nine of trumps. When East cannot overtrump, declarer returns to hand with a high trump and ruffs another diamond with the ten. A spade ruff puts him back in hand to draw the outstanding trumps, and his long diamond is the game-going trick.

WATCHES

Mr. Sears and Mr. Roebuck got together because of a classified ad!

In the late 1800's, Richard W. Sears had a pretty good business going selling watches and needed someone to handle his watch repairs. He placed a classified ad in the newspaper and Alvah C. Roebuck got the job. That's how the nation's biggest retailer got started... through a classified ad!

Cooley recalls 'desperation' of first use of artificial heart

HOUSTON (AP) — The world's first implant of a total artificial heart, completed 20 years ago today, was then described as an "act of desperation" on a dying patient by the doctor who performed the historic procedure.

On April 4, 1969, at St. Luke's Episcopal Hospital, Dr. Denton Cooley inserted the first total artificial heart into 47-year-old Haskell Karp of Skokie, Ill.

Karp lived for about 65 hours on the device and then received a human heart transplant. He died a little more than a day later.

Cooley's troubles, however, were just beginning.

The Harris County Medical Society censured him for "publicity," which meant violating the society's guidelines about having a physician's name appear in a newspaper in connection with the name of a patient.

Criticism came from a variety of sources, but so did praise for performing an innovative procedure.

Cooley resigned his faculty position at Baylor College of Medicine later that year because he said school officials would not allow him to continue his research on the artificial heart.

The famed heart surgeon went on to establish the Texas Heart Institute in Houston.

BALTIMORE (AP) — Sen. Albert Gore's 6-year-old son was struck by a car and seriously injured after leaving the Baltimore Orioles' season opener.

Albert Gore III suffered fractures of the thigh and ribs and a ruptured spleen, a bruised lung and a concussion, said Elaine Freeman, a spokeswoman for Johns Hopkins Hospital.

The boy was listed in serious but stable condition.

Witnesses said the son of the Tennessee Democrat and 1988 presidential hopeful was hit by the car Monday after he ran into the street near Memorial Stadium, according to police.

Gore administered cardio-pulmonary resuscitation until an ambulance arrived, WUSA-TV of Washington, D.C., reported.

Gore's chief of staff, Roy Neel, said the senator was spending the night at the hospital with his son.

AUSTIN (AP) — Cable News Network founder Ted Turner will be honored this week by the University of Texas College of Communication, which is giving him its DeWitt Carter Reddick Award.

The award, the highest honor the college bestows, will be presented Saturday during the college's honors day convocation.

Turner, who began his career in the advertising business and later bought an independent television station in Atlanta, launched CNN in 1980.

He also owns the Atlanta Braves baseball team, the Atlanta Hawks basketball team and was a successful defender of the America's Cup sailing trophy in 1977.

NEW YORK (AP) — Publisher Peter Price has left the New York Post just one year after joining a team that saved the morning tabloid from the threat of closure.

The paper's owner, real estate developer Peter Kalikow, said Monday he accepted the resignation "with regret" and was taking over the duties of publisher. A spokesman wouldn't say how long Kalikow planned to serve as publisher.

Price said he would be forming a partnership with Univisa, an international company that produces and distributes television and radio programming.

Kalikow named Price as publisher last year after buying the morning tabloid from Rupert Murdoch, saving the money-losing paper from closing.

Price said he was leaving the Post in good shape. The paper started a Sunday edition last month.

"The financial losses have been stemmed and the paper should be profitable by the end of 1989," Price said in a statement. "Daily circulation has increased by over 100,000 since the paper was acquired" and advertising linage is up.

Kalikow said Price "played a key role in taking a nearly defunct afternoon newspaper with a circulation that had dropped as low as 2 million a week and bringing it back to a strong newspaper with a Sunday edition and a weekly circulation of over 4 million."

Price joined Time Inc. in 1965 and rose to assistant to the publisher of Life magazine, circulation manager of Sports Illustrated and director of corporate development for Time Inc. He created the upscale Manhattan magazine Avenue in 1976.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former President Reagan credits the movie "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" as the one that most affected his life and led to his quest for the nation's highest office.

"I began to realize, through the power of that motion picture, that one man can make a difference," Reagan said.

Reagan made his statements as part of the all-star video gala to celebrate the opening of the Disney-MGM Studios Theme Park in Florida. The salute will be broadcast April 30 on NBC-TV's "Magical World of Disney."

World leaders, including British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and Polish Solidarity leader Lech Walesa, along with celebrities such as Jimmy Stewart and Mickey Rooney will be discussing the films that made deep impressions on them.

Stewart starred in "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," playing a man who fought corruption in the Senate. The 1939 film became one of the most beloved of director Frank Capra's optimistic fables.

Senate would water Bush bailout

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Banking Committee's proposal for solving the savings and loan crisis waters down key sections of President Bush's reform plan but also hands industry lobbyists several defeats, according to a committee document.

The proposal would make a number of changes sought by S&L executives regarding deposit insurance, regulatory structure and capital requirements.

However, other provisions, such as those restricting commercial real estate lending and strengthening the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., are less favorable to the industry than Bush's Feb. 6 proposal.

The document, obtained Monday by The Associated Press, was prepared for closed-door meetings of the Senate panel starting today. It outlines the recommendations of the staff of Sen. Donald W. Riegle Jr., D-Mich., the committee chairman.

The panel plans three private sessions this week in preparation for public bill-drafting sessions beginning April 13. Meanwhile, Democrats on the House Banking Committee plan a private strategy session Wednesday, before the first open meeting on Thursday.

Among the victories for the S&L industry in the Senate proposal are recommendations to:

—Equalize deposit insurance premiums for banks and S&Ls by the year 2000. The Bush proposal, after a series of changes, would charge S&Ls 18 cents per $100 for their insurance versus 15 cents per $100 for commercial banks.

—Give the Treasury Department less control over S&L regulators than proposed by the administration.

—Allow some weak S&Ls to grow modestly after the June 1991 deadline for meeting tougher capital standards. Bush would prohibit S&Ls from expanding if their owners did not meet stricter requirements on how much money they must put up to back their institutions' loans. The Senate proposal also would give S&Ls twice as long, 20 years versus 10 years, to meet tougher standards on a portion of capital known as goodwill.

—Prohibit the government from hurting regional real estate markets by selling repossessed property from failed S&Ls too quickly. It would add real estate expertise to the new government board overseeing S&L bailouts by expanding the board from three government officials to five members, including two private business persons.

As expected, the Senate proposal would count S&L rescue spending "on-budget," as opposed to the complex administration plan for keeping $50 billion in S&L spending out of the budget deficit.

Meanwhile, in a separate development, commercial banks sought guarantees that they would get refunds of deposit insurance premiums once the bank insurance fund regained its full strength of $1.25 in reserves for every $100 in deposits, up from a depleted 80 cents per $100 now.

The administration has said rebates could begin by the mid-1990s, but the Bush bill allows regulators to decide whether or not to offer them and FDIC Chairman L. William Seidman wants that flexibility until the insurance fund reaches a level of $1.65 per $100. Banking groups, led by the American Bankers Association, want to make rebates automatic after the fund reaches the $1.25 level.

Oil prices head higher

From Staff and Wire Reports

After dipping below $20 a barrel Monday, oil prices headed upward.

Contracts for May delivery of West Texas Intermediate gained 25 cents to stand at $20.20 at midmorning on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Prices had declined in nervous trading Monday after near-normal activities resumed at the Valdez, Alaska, port, which was partially blocked after a recent oil spill by an Exxon Corp. tanker.

WTI fell 24 cents to close at $19.95 after losing 62 cents Friday.

Wholesale home heating oil also declined, but unleaded gasoline gained almost a penny a gallon on what analysts called seasonal demands.

Crude prices started out stronger but fell by midday after news surfaced that the daily pipeline flow at Valdez had been increased to 1.3 million barrels.

"Crude had been overbought from the Valdez crisis," said James R. Steele, an energy analyst with Refco Inc. "The opening of the pipeline further relaxed the situation."

Dollar dives before stabilizing

LONDON (AP) — The dollar fell sharply in early European trading today but stabilized by late morning. Gold prices rose.

Foreign currency dealers said they thought the dollar had touched bottom for now and would probably fluctuate within narrow margins before testing news lows again later this week.

One trader in Rome said that Monday's central bank intervention, especially by the Bank of Japan, ven-buying by Japanese industries at the beginning of their fiscal year, and market rumors that West Germany may raise interest rates combined to push the dollar lower overnight.

In Tokyo, the dollar fell 1.21 yen to a closing 131.05. Later, in London, it was quoted at 131.03 yen.

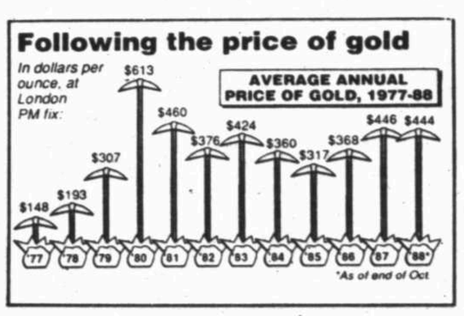

In London, one British pound cost $1.7030, more expensive for buyers than late Monday's $1.6855.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $387 dollars a troy ounce, up from $384.75 dollars bid late Monday. At midmorning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $386.60.

In Zurich, the bid price was $386.75, up from $385.25 bid late Monday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold rose $1.14 to close at a bid price of $388.42.

Silver was quoted in London at a bid price of $5.83 a troy ounce, up from Monday's $5.80.

Stock prices advance 11 points

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices staged a moderate advance Monday as the second quarter of the year opened to a barrage of takeover news and rumors.

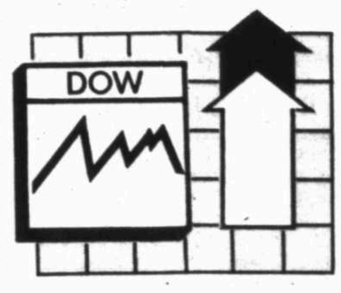

Analysts said the market benefited from a drop in open-market interest rates on fresh signs of a slowing economy.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 11.18 to 2,304.80.

Big Board volume totaled 164.66 million shares, against 170.96 million in the previous session.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 4 to 3 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 852 up, 622 down and 493 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 164.66 million shares, against 170.96 million in the previous session. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 198.59 million shares.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Nissan to expand plant at Smyrna

SMYRNA, Tenn. (AP) — Nissan Motor Manufacturing Corp. USA says it will spend $490 million to expand its auto plant into one of the biggest in the country and create 2,000 jobs.

A new model to be made at the plant will be a four-door, family-sized car pitched to the same market as the Nissan Stanza, the company said Monday.

The plant produces 240,000 Sentras and light trucks a year. The production of the new car will boost the total output to 440,000 vehicles by 1992.

Chrysler offering interest-free loans

HIGHLAND PARK, Mich. (AP) — Chrysler Corp. has begun offering interest-free, two-year loans on all of its cars and some light trucks, in an escalation of the latest round of buyer incentives from the automakers.

The move Monday came after Ford Motor Co. dropped its interest rate for 24-month loans to 2.9 percent last Wednesday. General Motors Corp. followed that lead a day later.

Construction spending flat in Feburary

WASHINGTON (AP) — Construction spending was nearly flat in February as a small increase in government projects was offset by slower work on housing and other non-government buildings, the Commerce Department says.

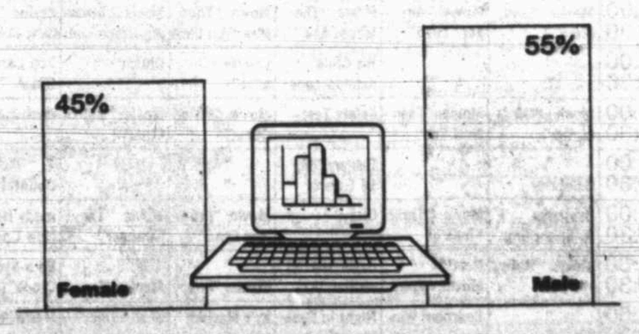

February's performance was the weakest since construction spending declined 0.2 percent last August, the department said Monday.

NATURAL GAS

Mauro CNG bill gets 10-1 approval

AUSTIN (SWN)–The Senate State Affairs Committee on Monday voted 10-1 in favor of two clean air bills which will help clean up the air Texans breathe and give the economy a boost by encouraging use of natural gas.

The two bills, S.B. 740 by Sen. Don Henderson, R-Houston, and S.B. 769 by Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan were developed in cooperation with Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro, who oversees production of 14,000 oil and gas wells for the Permanent School Fund.

"The strong support shown by the committee for this key environmental legislation is a solid sign of what all Texans are feeling–that something has to be done, and done quickly, to improve our environment," Mauro said.

"This is a winning decision all the way around," Mauro said. "Our children will have cleaner air to breathe, their parents will have a better chance at a job, and fleet operators will save money."

Senate Bill 740 will require use of compressed natural gas (CNG) or other alternative fuels in state-owned or operated fleets with more than 15 vehicles, school districts with more than 50 buses, and local transit authorities. Conversions would begin in 1991 with phased-in conversions scheduled through 1998.

Senate Bill 769 would require conversion in the 21 counties that fail to attain federal clean air standards. These areas include Dallas-Fort Worth, Houston, Beaumont-Port Arthur, and El Paso. The Texas Air Control Board would monitor the conversion of fleets in those areas. The bills anticipate private funding for the conversions and contain exemptions where such funding is not available.

The bill would also levy a surcharge for burning fuel oil in utility and industrial boilers in these 21 counties between April 15 and October 15–the period most prone to formation of health-threatening ground-level ozone.

Studies by the American Academy of Pediatrics have shown that ground-level ozone at concentrations found in cities such as Houston could seriously affect the function of children's lungs.

The American Lung Association reports that eight million Texans are at risk from air polluted by fossil fuels. Half of this pollution comes from vehicles.

Simmons: No takeover sights set on Lockheed

DALLAS (AP) — Billionaire Harold C. Simmons, who may have Lockheed Corp. in his takeover sights, doesn't mind being called a corporate raider. After all, buying other companies has propelled the son of two Texas public school educators to billionaire status.

"I think that's OK, because that's what I am," Simmons has said. "I think that term raider is very misleading because it implies that somebody is taking something by force without paying for it. Basically, corporate raiders are willing to pay a price for a stock higher that anyone else is willing to pay, or else they don't buy it."

Simmons, 57, last week upped his stake in Lockheed to 5.3 percent, but said in a letter to chairman Daniel M. Tellep: "We have no plans, or desire, to disrupt management. We expect to be a constructive, long-term shareholder."

Discussing why he sent the letter to Tellep, Simmons said Monday: "I think that many people would suspect I wanted to take the company over. I just wanted to reassure him that I didn't want to do that."

However, Simmons has made no secrets of his plans to get back into the acquisition game after he has "digested" his $1 billion purchase last year of NL Industries Inc.

"I'll be looking for an acquisition in the range of $2 billion and upwards," Simmons told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram last year. "My philosophy has always been that a big deal is as easy to do as a small deal, so you might as well do the biggest one you can do" — a philosophy he has repeated several times to various interviewers.

Petroleum Information Corp. will close its electric log facility at 500 N. Baird in Midland and relocate the operation to Denver, eliminating 34 jobs here, according to Jack Ekstrom, PI director of industry relations.

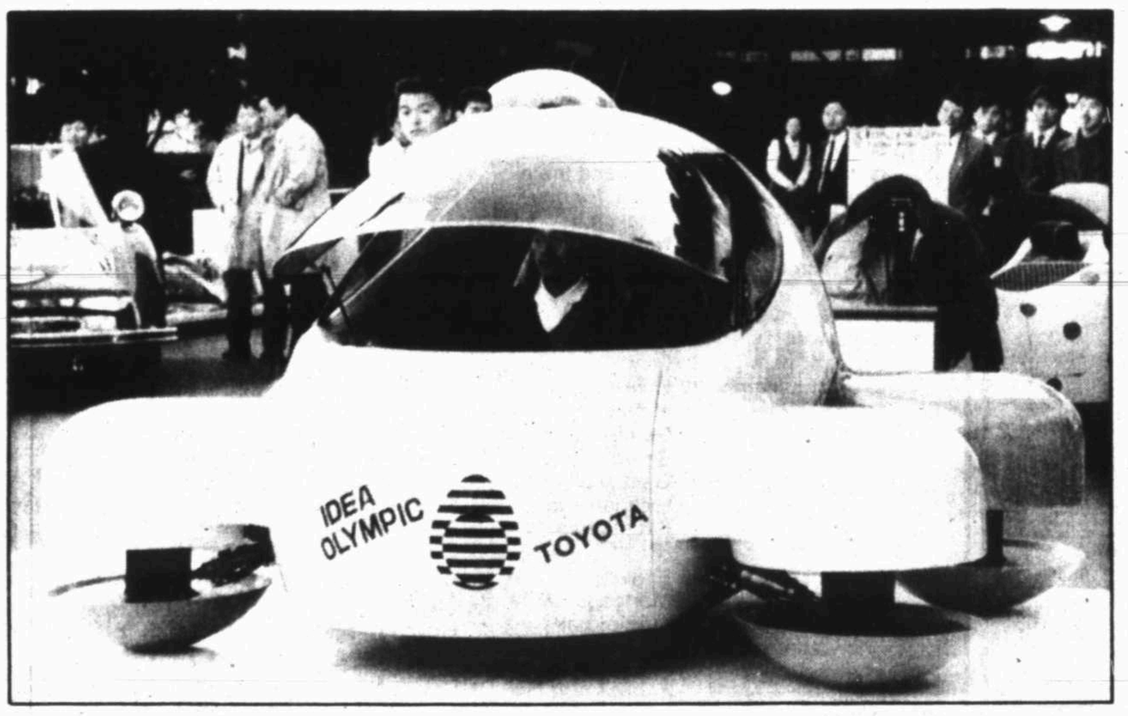

Ekstrom said PI would continue to employee about 25 employees in Midland in well-data services, sales and customer relations. Ten of the jobs remaining in Midland will be in log services. All the remaining employees will be housed at ClayDesta Plaza.

Employees were told today that 19 jobs would be available in Denver for those that choose to relocate. "We are hoping some of the Midland employees will choose to relocate, because of the experience they possess," said Ekstrom.

For the employees being terminated, free outplacement services, severence pay equal to one week for each year worked, and free job training will be provided. Also, all employee benefits will remain in place until about June 5 when the closing of the operation is complete.

Auto makers readying for next year

Designing vehicles for the future

Copley News Service

Although it may still seem early in the year to you, automobile manufacturers are busy getting ready to introduce the 1990 models early this fall and are preparing the next generation of vehicles to be introduced by the end of the decade.

Over the past few years the car industry has become more competitive, the result of which is that there have been an incredible number of new brands and models on the market. And a plethora of new model introductions will continue through the turn of the century.

But it's not just the number of new models that's astounding. Cars are becoming interesting again. They're fun to drive, comfortable, sporty, sleek, good-looking and powerful. The trend definitely is futuristic, of that there can be no doubt.

Just about every manufacturer has something new on the burner for 1990 or 1991. Whether your tastes run to a family sedan, sporty coupe or light truck, the coming model year will have something new and of interest. Here's a peek at a few of next year's cars and light trucks:

Acura — Scheduled for introduction sometime in 1990 is a sleek, mid-engine sport coupe currently code-named the NS-X. Powered by a 250-horsepower, 3.0-liter V-6, the futuristic two-seat sports coupe has rear-wheel drive, four-wheel independent suspension and definitely is priced up-market. Current plans call for a price tag somewhere between $50,000 and $60,000.

Alfa Romeo 164 — This four-door luxury sport sedan from the famed Italian automaker is scheduled to be sold through selected Chrysler dealers by the spring of next year. The car seats five, is powered by a 3.0-liter V-6 engine and has front-wheel drive — a first for Alfa — and a price tag at around $30,000.

Chevrolet Lumina — This new GM10 sedan probably will debut late this fall or early next spring. Engine choice will most likely be GM's V-6 engine. The car seats six adults, has clean lines and should be priced in the high teens.

Lamesa plans on schedule

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

City of Midland officials Keith Stretcher and Nancy Vickrey told members of the Midland Black Chamber of Entrepreneurs Monday that right-of-way acquisitions for the Lamesa Road Project were 99 percent complete.

Stretcher, assistant city manager, said all rights of ways would be acquired by the end of April. He said bids for the project would be opened in May with construction to begin in July.

Once construction began, Stretcher said, it would take about a year to complete phase one of the project, which is a five-lane road from De Zavala Elementary to Interstate 20, including a turn lane. Phase two is realigning Lamesa from Wadley St. to Loop 250, and phase three — which is under discussion — is adding a turn lane from De Zavala to Wadley.

Vickrey, Midland property code administrator, told members it was important to get the word out about the project, and that the State Highway Department was doing lots of contracting. She added that she and Stretcher would be willing to furnish contact names for companies interested in contracting on the project.

In other business, Norma Smith of the United Way's Project Blueprint, a project designed to foster minority involvement in United Way agencies, told members that there are approximately 38 minorities on the boards of United Way agencies, and the agency is planning a training session for these members and others interested in becoming board members.

She said the main thing is that the minority community knows about the United Way's services and has a say in the decisions the agencies make.

In other business, MBCE vice president James Fuller told members that the chamber officers plan to again seek funding from the City of Midland for funding for the Excel Youth project, and that a summer program is in the works.

CNG

By encouraging the use of clean-burning natural gas in vehicles, these bills would make a significant reduction in those emissions.

"Using CNG as a fleet fuel, we can cut carbon monoxide emissions in half, exhaust hydrocarbons by 40 percent and virtually eliminate evaporative hydrocarbons and particulate emissions," Mauro said.

The legislation also has the backing of a broad-based coalition of energy, environmental, labor and consumer groups known as Clean Air Texas. Mauro serves as president of the coalition.

Increased use of natural gas would have far-reaching economic benefits for Texas, as well.

Texas possesses 26 percent of the proven reserves in the lower 48 states. Economists with the state and with Southern Methodist University report that between 50,000 and 100,000 jobs would be created over five years through the increased use of just 1 trillion cubic feet of natural gas.

BAILOUT

In at least three respects, the Senate proposal would hand a defeat to S&L lobbyists:

—Although the Senate would allow the S&L regulatory agency, the Federal Home Loan Bank System, greater independence from the administration, it would transfer some of the bank system's most important powers, such as setting capital and accounting standards and supervising state-chartered S&Ls, to the FDIC.

—Current law and the administration plan permits S&Ls to invest as much as 40 percent of their assets in commercial real estate. Under the Senate proposal, all but the healthiest S&Ls would have stricter limits.

—Greater limits on activities would be permitted to state-chartered S&Ls, but forbidden to S&Ls with federal charters.

Other significant changes offered by the Senate include:

—Removal of a section of the administration bill that could undo many of the S&L rescues put together by regulators last year.

—Fixed terms for the chairman and members of the FDIC. The administration wants the president to have the power to dismiss the FDIC chairman.

—Removal of tougher accounting standards for credit unions. A dispute over the administration's proposal for that industry had threatened to delay the S&L package.

AUTO

Chevrolet Blazer S-10 — Although scheduled for a total restyling for around 1992, next year's S-10's big change will be the addition of a four-door model a la Jeep Cherokee.

Daihatsu Rocky — An all-new short wheelbase sport utility vehicle designed by Italian designer Bertone is designed to bolster Daihatsu's fledgling toehold in the U.S. market. The 4x4 Rocky has a no-nonsense look about it and is slated for release sometime next year.

Ford Bronco II — Like the S-10, the Bronco II will offer a four-door model for 1990.

Ford Probe SHO — The top-selling Probe gets some real power next year when the Super High Output model is introduced. Powered by the same Yamaha V-6 engine as the current Taurus SHO, the Probe SHO will be priced at about $24,000.

Eagle Talon/Plymouth Laser — These two new Chrysler sport coupes look similar to the Ford Probe, feature a choice of engines that range in horsepower from 105 to 200 and will be built by Diamond Star Motors, the Chrysler/Mitsubishi joint venture plant in Normal, Ill.

Hyundai Sonata — With the entry-level market firmly locked up by its Excel, this Korean manufacturer hopes to also make big strides in the midsize market. Sonata is an attractively styled front-wheel drive, four-door sedan powered by a 110-horsepower engine. Expect this car to be competitively priced when compared to Toyota Camry.

Isuzu Amigo — This small sport utility truck looks similar to the Suzuki Sidekick, features 4x4 traction, has a four-cylinder engine and is designed to appeal to younger, entry-level buyers.

Lexus — Toyota's new luxury flagship line will debut in the fall of '89 with two four-door sedans — one powered by a 32-valve, four-camshaft V-8, and base model equipped with a 24-valve, four-camshaft V-6. Prices for this pair of upscale twins are slated to start in the 20s.

Mitsubishi Eclipse — Built in concert with Chrysler at the Normal, Ill., Diamond Star Motors plant, the Eclipse is a high-value sport coupe that is available with a variety of power plants and turbocharging.

SIMMONS

Simmons, a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of the University of Texas with bachelor's and master's degrees in economic, worked for three years as an investigator for the U.S. Civil Service, and then a year as an examiner at the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.

Then in 1956, he moved to Republic National Bank, where he worked for four years before quitting, according to his official biography, because "my bosses and I disagreed on who was the smarter."

Simmons, then 29, put down $5,000 of his own money and borrowed $95,000 to buy a drug store located across from the Southern Methodist University campus.

"He has never worked for anyone else since," says his biography.

"He made hamburgers, washed dishes, stocked shelves, kept books and polished the floors," the bio says.

He also read financial statements; "I only know how to do one thing well, and that's read a financial statement," he said in an interview in the current issue of Fortune magazine.

In 1966 he began acquiring drug store chains, eventually owning 100 stores before selling them in 1973 to Jack Eckerd Corp. for $50 million.

Fortune estimates his current holdings in chemical, timber and sugar to be worth about $1.5 billion. He told the magazine, "I expect to be worth $5 billion to $10 billion before I die."

PI

The Petroleum Information log operation collects and duplicates electric logs from throughout the U.S. and makes them available to the oil industry for exploration purposes.

"A number of factors went into our decision to close the local operation," said Ekstrom. "First, there is a trend toward digitizing and all our digitizing facilities are in Denver with our map operations. Second, we have space in Denver that is not being utilized and our lease here is about to expire."

Ekstrom said PI regretted the moved, but the consolidation was necessary during a time of exploration downturn in which the demand for electric logs had decreased.

Israel's Shamir must deal with U.S. that's talking openly to PLO

By JONATHAN BRODER
Hearst News Service

An Analysis

JERUSALEM — When Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir begins high-level discussions in Washington Wednesday, he faces for the first time a U.S. administration that is talking openly with Israel's arch enemy, the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Aides here say Shamir will try to convince the administration to halt that dialogue, though U.S. officials have said they expect Shamir to bring fresh ideas and a flexible attitude to the Washington meetings.

Shamir's visit comes under the cloud of 16 months of Palestinian revolt in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip — a violent political drama that has eroded Israel's image in the eyes of many Americans, including American Jews.

Sen. Daniel Inouye, chairman of powerful Senate Appropriations Committee, on a visit here last week, warned that Israel is now perceived in the United States as "violent, passive and arrogant." If this perception is not improved with a viable peace plan, Inouye said it could eventually affect the $3 billion in foreign aid Israel receives annually from the United States.

Against this backdrop, one senior Israeli official described Shamir's visit to Washington as "the most serious test of his political life."

The trip is part of the Bush administration's first concerted effort at Middle East diplomacy. The talks with the Israeli leader follow a visit by Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak and will be followed by meetings with Jordan's King Hussein. Both pro-Western Arab rulers seek U.S. support for an international peace conference that would include the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Shamir, however, is expected to reject any form of dialogue with the PLO, which places him in opposition to Secretary of State James Baker who has said such talks may be inevitable.

"We will have no dealings with the PLO, direct or indirect," said Yossi Ben-Aharon, the director general of Shamir's office. "We have conveyed the message loud and clear to the American administration."

In the face of such antagonism, U.S. officials are pushing Israel and the Palestinians to adopt tactical measures — such as withdrawing Israeli troops from parts of the West Bank and Gaza Strip in return for a reduction in Palestinian violence — that could eventually generate the trust necessary to begin a meaningful Israeli-Palestinian dialogue.

Shamir is said to feel that some conciliatory gestures — the release of Palestinian prisoners and administrative detainees, reopening schools in the territories and troop reductions — are possible, but only in return for Palestinian concessions. Shamir is expected to play up his offer of limited elections in the occupied territories, provided the violence there ends.

Aides say Shamir will also propose that Egypt and Jordan assist Israel in appointing a non-PLO Palestinian delegation to peace talks that would lead to an autonomy agreement, as called for in the 1978 Camp David Accords.

As part of an autonomy agreement, aides said that Shamir is willing to compromise on land and water rights in the territories and to withdraw Israeli troops to specific locations. But such actions require negotiations, aides said, and no such steps will be taken as unilateral goodwill gestures.

Aides say Shamir will not depart from the Camp David formulation of a specific period of autonomy, followed by talks on the final status of the territories. He is expected to reject a U.S. proposal for a two-track negotiation, involving one set of talks to deal with an interim autonomy agreement and a second negotiation to shape the principles governing a final settlement.

Within this context, Shamir also rejects the principle of exchanging territories for peace, as called for in United Nations Security Council Resolution 242 and the Camp David accords. Though Israel says it accepts Resolution 242, Shamir argues that Israel fulfilled its obligations to that principle when it handed over the Sinai peninsula in return for its 1979 peace treaty with Egypt.

Declaring the peace-for-territory formula as "no longer relevant today," Shamir told Israel's state-run television last week: "Peace can be achieved without recourse to these formulas, whose sole purpose is to inhibit and spoil."

Shamir is traveling to Washington with strong public backing for his hardline positions.

Raisa Gorbachev pays tribute to Hemingway

By ANA PUGA
Hearst News Service

HAVANA, Cuba — The wives of Cuban and Soviet leaders Monday paid tribute to the only North American hero on this Caribbean communist stronghold — Ernest Hemingway.

"What cultured person today has not read Ernest Hemingway's works? For me, Hemingway is a great writer, a great humanist, a great citizen," Raisa Gorbachev, the wife of Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, said as she toured the elegant white villa outside of Havana where the late author lived for more than a decade.

Mrs. Gorbachev will be in Cuba until Wednesday, accompanying her husband on his first visit to Latin America. On Monday, Gorbachev and Cuban President Fidel Castro held private talks that touched on various subjects, including the Soviet Union's liberalization drive, Latin America's debt and the illegal drug trade.

Meanwhile, Vilma Espin, the wife of Castro's brother Raul, guided Mrs. Gorbachev through Hemingway's home, which the Cuban government has turned into a museum.

Cubans have adopted the American writer as part of their national folklore. Hemingway lived here on and off for a total of about 20 years before his suicide in 1961 at the age of 63. He wrote several of his major works in Cuba and left behind a legacy of "Hemingway was here" shrines. Today, some Cubans speak of Hemingway as a symbol of better times, before Cuba's relationship with the United States deteriorated into a chilly ideological standoff.

"Even though we have had so many problems with the North Americans, he (Hemingway) gave us his friendship and loyalty," said Pedro Herrera, a tourist guide. "Even young people here like him and speak as if they had known him."

Besides the Hemingway house, Cuban tributes to the author include a museum made from his room in the Hotel Ambos Mundos, a marina dedicated to his memory, plaques hung in his favorite bars in Havana, and even a sea-blue drink named after the title of his 1954 Nobel-prize winning novel, "The Old Man and the Sea."

U.N. says rebels infiltrated Namibia

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — A U.N. investigation of the fierce combat in Namibia found that nationalist guerrillas mounted a "major incursion" from Angola the day the territory began its transition to independence.

South Africa claimed the South-West Africa People's Organization fighters had violated the U.N. plan under which it is ending its 74-year rule of Namibia.

SWAPO leaders denied the guerrillas involved in the fighting near the Angolan border had crossed into Namibia and they lashed out at U.N. administrators for agreeing to let South African troops reinforce police battling the guerrillas.

"Our people are being butchered under the United Nations flag," said SWAPO Foreign Secretary Theo-Ben Gurirab, accusing the South Africa forces of initiating the fighting.

Namibian police say at least 129 rebels and 18 police have died in the fighting that began Saturday, when a formal cease-fire was to have begun. Incidents of fighting were reported in at least a half dozen locations Monday.

Under the U.N.-brokered independence accord, all guerrillas are to remain in Angola at least 100 miles north of Namibia's border until mid-May.

But diplomats said the SWAPO guerrillas apparently felt they were entitled under the accord to set up bases inside Namibia under U.N. supervision just as the South Africans, whom they have been fighting for 23 years, have done.

VISIT

Hemingway crafted much of that novel standing at his manual Royal typewriter in his Cuban residence, located about 5 miles east of Havana in the town of San Miguel del Padron. (Hemingway said he liked to stand when he wrote because it kept him alert.)

As Mrs. Gorbachev toured the spacious Spanish-style villa, she saw trophies everywhere of the macho sportsman's life that figured prominently in Hemingway's fiction. More than a dozen stuffed animal heads leap out from the walls, including deer, gazelles and a giant water buffalo. Paintings of fiery bulls and brave matadors grace the living room walls. A hunting rifle stands propped up on the bookcase in the study.

Cubans preserve the house so scrupulously that tourists and reporters are not allowed inside, but must peer in the windows from the outside. Mrs. Gorbachev, who was allowed in, coyly ignored a question thrown at her by a British reporter leaning in a window: "Don't you think Hemingway thought of women as lovers and wives?"

Hemingway, who married four times, carried his reputation as a womanizer and a heavy drinker to Cuba.

"He was a man who liked to talk and liked to drink. But there was always something sad about him," said Rafael Calles, a Cuban waiter who remembers the writer. When Calles was just starting out as a bus boy, Hemingway frequented the bar where Calles still waits tables, La Bodeguita, a bohemian hole-in-the-wall in the oldest section of Havana.

"My mojito in La Bodeguita," says a note written and signed by Hemingway that now hangs on the wall behind the bar, referring to a powerful concoction of rum, mint and soda water.

One mystery about Hemingway is whether he supported Castro's Marxist revolution. Apparently, he never expressed a strong opinion either way.

An obituary published in the Cuban newspaper El Mundo on July 4, 1961, two days after the writer shot himself to death, criticized Hemingway for the "negative, individualist attitude" that led to his suicide. But Castro told U.S. reporters in 1977 that Hemingway is his favorite novelist. The Cuban leader also turned Hemingway's home into a museum.

Colombian author Gabriel Garcia Marquez, in the prologue to a book by Norberto Fuentes called "Castro in Cuba," explained part of Hemingway's romance with the island.

"There were two Hemingways," he wrote, "one half-movie star, half adventurer. But there was another Hemingway in Havana, a Hemingway hidden from himself in an enormous house surrounded by trees, in which he accumulated over the years the trophies of the virile arts ... an insomniac artist who no one really knew."

WORLD IN BRIEF

Contras agree to cease-fire

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — Contra rebels have agreed to observe a cease-fire until February, when elections are scheduled in Nicaragua, but pledge to keep their forces combat-ready to pressure the Sandinista government.

A source in the rebel directorate, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Commander Enrique Bermudez told the rebels about the decision during visits Friday to Contra camps just across the border from Nicaragua.

Bermudez is the Contras chief military leader.

Radio Liberacion, the Contras' radio station, also broadcast a message Monday from Bermudez that said: "The rebels will not launch any attack against the Sandinistas until February 1990. We will not look for combat but will permanently be on the defensive."

The leftist Sandinista government has declared monthly unilateral cease-fires since the expiration of a temporary truce the two sides signed in March 1988. The truce was to lay the groundwork for a permanent peace but talks collapsed last September.

Marcos has embalming plans

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Imelda Marcos plans to embalm her husband when he dies and display his body in Hawaii until she can scatter his ashes over the Philippines to "fertilize his country," a newspaper reported today.

"Not only will it be a political statement: It will be a spectacle — an international spectacle to have Marcos (lie is state) here," she told Business-World in an interview at the Marcos home in Honolulu over the weekend.

President Ferdinand Marcos fled to Hawaii when he was ousted by a military-civilian uprising in February 1986 that swept Corazon Aquino to power.

Marcos, 71, has been hospitalized in Honolulu since Jan. 15 for treatment of heart and lung ailments. Hospital officials say he remains in guarded condition.

Writers warn of destruction

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A group of leading Latin American writers, artists and scholars has told President Jose Sarney of Brazil he will bear "historical responsibility" for continued destruction of the Amazon rain forest.

"We believe that the historical responsibility for destroying the Amazon jungle is very great, and future generations of Latin Americans will not forgive it if everything possible is not done to avoid it," the Group of 100 warned in a letter, which was released Monday.

Sarney has rejected international criticism of the deforestation of the Amazon basin as foreign interference in Brazilian affairs.

Haiti frees 3 who led failed coup attempt

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — The government said today it freed three military commanders who led a failed coup attempt. Mutinous soldiers surrendered control of the airport and returned to their barracks.

State television announced Lt. Col. Himmler Rebu, commander of the Leopards Battalion; Col. Phillipe Biamby, commander of the presidential guard; and Col. Leonce Qualo, an administrative officer at army headquarters, were given safe passage to the United States.

A government communique identified Rebu, Biamby and Qualo as leaders of what it called a "foolhardy" attempt Sunday to overthrow the government of Lt. Gen. Prosper Avril.

The president "magnanimously" decided to release the officers and they were escorted to the border of the Dominican Republic Monday night to get a flight to an undisclosed city in the United States, the communique said. Rebu was accompanied by his wife and four children.

The government did not explain why the three men were freed, but the move was clearly meant to defuse resistance within the Leopards Battalion. At least four mutinous soldiers in the battalion were killed Monday in skirmishes with troops loyal to Avril. The rebels were demanding Rebu's release.

Independent Radio Haiti-Inter said rebel units of the Leopards Battalion withdrew Monday night from the Port-au-Prince airport, but the airport remained closed. Schools also were closed for a second day.

Avril assumed power six months ago in a coup led by non-commissioned officers who said they were disgusted by official corruption and human rights abuses.

Monday night, presidential guardsmen in tanks battled Leopards commandos on a main thoroughfare between the airport and downtown Port-au-Prince.

Radio stations gave conflicting casualty reports, saying four to eight Leopards were killed and several wounded.

Nine members of an independent council appointed to organize and schedule presidential elections were to be sworn in today, but it was not clear if the ceremony would be held.

Avril said in February he was forming the council, an announcement many Haitians welcomed as a sign of democratic times to come.

The leader of this impoverished Caribbean nation has promised elections and pointed as proof he is keeping his pledge to the council, which is to include representatives of the Roman Catholic Church, labor unions, the military, human rights groups, the media and judiciary.
